

Eastern Leaders Meet In Washington

Blue-Ribbon Panel To Aid ECU Med School Drive

By ALVIN TAYLOR
Reflector Managing Editor

WASHINGTON, N. C. — A blue ribbon steering committee to work with ECU officials in the quest of a medical school was appointed following a meeting of eastern leaders here last night.

The group named by Dr. Edwin Monroe, director of health affairs, and Dr. Ernest Furguson of Plymouth, moderator of last night's meeting, will form the nucleus of a committee which will advise ECU officials.

Committee members appointed last night were: Charles Griffin, Bertie County, president of the N. C. Cotton Producers Association; Thomas Bennett, vice president of Wachovia Bank, Morehead City; Dr. Ed Beddingfield, practicing physician of Wilson and past president of the N. C. Medical Association; Dr. Owen Doyle, radiologist and president of the Moses Cone hospital staff in Greensboro; Dr. Lenox Baker, professor of orthopedic surgery at Duke University and Dr. Furguson.

The appointments were made after the approximately 250 people attending last night's dinner meeting heard Congressman Walter B. Jones; Dr. Leo Jenkins; Dr. Monroe and Dr. Wallace Woole, dean of the School of Medicine speak on the developments at ECU.

Rep. Jones, who received a standing ovation, reminded the group that he had been supporting the development of the medical school at ECU as far back as 1964.

He recalled that the opposition to the present efforts followed the same line as some objections that were heard to developing a four-year nursing school at ECU. He pointed out that since its establishment the school has graduated 204 nurses, with 60 percent of them being from the east. There were 238 students enrolled in nursing this fall, the largest enrollment in the field in any state-supported school of North Carolina.

As for the medical school, he said, "It is impossible for the critics and opponents to dispute the need. The need for more and better medical care exists all over our great First Congressional District and, in fact, across much of this state, especially in the small towns and rural areas."

"Also, the critics and opponents cannot dispute the fact that East Carolina has prepared carefully and well for the eventual establishing of a two-year medical school. We know the struggle this time will be successful. The cause is right, the need is there. The people themselves will let themselves be heard, and they will decide the issue."

Jenkins, who also received a standing ovation from the group, told of accomplishments on the ECU campus of recent years.

"I wish I could say all these things originated with our campus but they didn't — they originated with the people."

He said he found much support among the people, including those of the Piedmont.

"They know they are not going to come close to their potential unless we come along with them."

Jenkins lashed out at opposition newspapers and other opponents. "Every trick has been used," he stated. "We must fight back with the best weapon; that's the truth. We are going to keep feeding them the truth until it comes out their ears."

The ECU president offered the opinion that the East would remain low statistically "unless we can put a package together that includes good medical care."

He said critics had abandoned the "lack of a base" argument against the medical school at ECU and now argue that the state would not be able to afford it. "They are using the figure of $100 million," he said. "They know this is wrong."

"You the people of Eastern North Carolina deserve a lot better than you have been getting for the past few years," Jenkins continued.

"The opposition is now mounting a last ditch effort to

Jurors Vote Death For Manson, Three Women; Long Process Pending

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — One of the jurors who decreed the death penalty for Charles Manson and his three women codefendants in the Tate-LaBianca murders says, "I wanted to protect society." A prosecuting attorney says the verdict "reflects community feelings." A defense attorney says it doesn't help anything.

Their comments came late Monday after the jury's decision brought to an end the nine-month-long trial of Manson, 36; Patricia Krenwinkel, 23; Leslie Van Houten, 21, and Susan Atkins, 22.

The same seven-man, five-woman jury that convicted them of first degree murder and conspiracy last Jan. 25 chose the gas chamber penalty over the only alternative, life imprisonment.

Judge Charles Older has the power to reduce the death penalty to life imprisonment when he formally sentences the four April 19. Death sentences are automatically appealed to the state Supreme Court, and Deputy Dist. Atty. Vincent Bugliosi says he thinks the case will go to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Manson and the women were not in the courtroom to hear the jury's decision. The judge had banished them for shouting.

One woman juror later told newsmen she felt sorry for the defendants because of their backgrounds, and another, asked if jurors saw any reasons they should have spared the girls, said somberly: "We tried desperately to find some."

It was Manson, dark-eyed leader of a roving hippie-style "family," who scared jurors most, said juror Marie Mesmer. "He was the leader, the worst ... I think he's a dangerous influence on society, highly dangerous. In my verdict I wanted to protect society."

Defense attorneys who had made impassioned pleas for "the gift of life," appeared shaken by the verdicts. One wiped his eyes as the sentences were read; another quickly fled the Hall of Justice saying he was "sick at heart."

After the verdict, Bugliosi told newsmen he felt the decision "reflects community feelings," and was "unquestionably the right verdict."

"I feel this case will undoubtedly reach the U.S. Supreme Court," he said. "It was no more easy and pleasurable for this jury to return this verdict than it was for me to ask for it."

Funeral Wednesday For Dr. Robert Fox

Dr. Robert Eugene Fox, who served as director of the Community Health Division, State Board of Health, for 14 years, died Monday at his home in Albermarle.

Funeral services will be conducted Wednesday at 10 a.m. in Albermarle at Central Methodist Church. Burial will follow in Statesville.

The 71-year-old Orange County native served as health director in Stanly County for 14 years and for eight years in Pitt County.

A leader in promoting environmental health in the 1930's, Dr. Fox received his B.S. degree from Trinity College in 1924 and his M.D. degree from the University of Pennsylvania in 1926. He received his master's degree in public health from Harvard in 1934.

Rebels Claim A My Lai In Every Army 'Near' War, Says Calley

NEW DELHI (AP) — The East Pakistani rebel radio claimed today that a "liberation army" of Bengalis is now 10 miles from Dacca after a 140-mile march from the port city of Chittagong.

But the government of President Agha Mohammed Yahya Khan, broadcasting from West Pakistan, insisted that the "situation is under control" in the rebellious eastern half of Pakistan.

The rebel radio for the fourth straight day claimed that the forces of Sheikh Mujibur Rahman's Awami League were routing army units throughout the province.

Foreign newsmen are barred from East Pakistan, and all dispatches from West Pakistan are subject to strict censorship. The only sources of information are the radio broadcasts and reports brought by persons crossing the border between India and East Pakistan.

Maj. Zia Khan, self-proclaimed head of the provisional government of Bangla Desh, or the Bengali Nation, broadcast another appeal for recognition from other countries.

"The new democratic government is committed to a policy of nonalignment in international relations," he said. "It will seek friendship with all nations and strive for international peace."

Hopes Dwindle For 31 Crewmen Of Oil Tanker

PORTSMOUTH, Va. (AP) — A massive rescue team of 10 ships and five aircraft resumed searching the Atlantic today amid diminishing hopes for the survival of 31 crewmen still missing from the sunken tanker Texaco Oklahoma.

Five merchant vessels, four Coast Guard cutters one Navy ship, four Coast Guard planes and one Air Force plane were taking part in the wide-ranging hunt off Cape Hatteras, N.C.

Optimism for the men's fate quickened Monday when the Texaco Nebraska, a sister ship of the ill-fated tanker, picked up two dazed survivors who had floated in life jackets for a day and a half after the stern section of the Oklahoma went down Sunday morning.

That raised the number of rescued seamen to 13. But the searchers' spirits sagged Monday evening when the Coast Guard cutter Escanaba sighted three apparently lifeless bodies in the water. The ship was unable to recover them because of darkness and the slamming of 15-foot waves.

The Coast Guard said it was keeping close watch on the oil slick but that at this time it appeared to pose no pollution threat to the coast.

The Coast Guard said today's search would be coordinated over a 24,000-square mile area with a 65-mile long oil slick from the Oklahoma as the axis. The spot where the ship went down has been dubbed the "graveyard of the Atlantic" because of its frequent storms. But it is also in the Gulf Stream, where the water temperature was 75 degrees warm enough, the Coast Guard said, to keep a man alive several days.

Though the reason for the sinking remained a mystery, apparently it was one of the huge waves endemic to the Hatteras storm systems that snapped the ship in two.

Third Engineer Clyde M. Bandy of Falls Church, Va., one of the survivors from the 44-man crew, said "one wave apparently broke her clean in a matter of minutes" early Saturday.

After that, 31 men kept the stern section afloat until 5:30 a.m. when a 60-degree list forced them to abandon ship in life rafts fashioned from 55-gallon drums.

The stern section went down 40 minutes later. The bow, with 13 men aboard including the captain, disappeared about noon Saturday. The men rescued so far came from the stern.

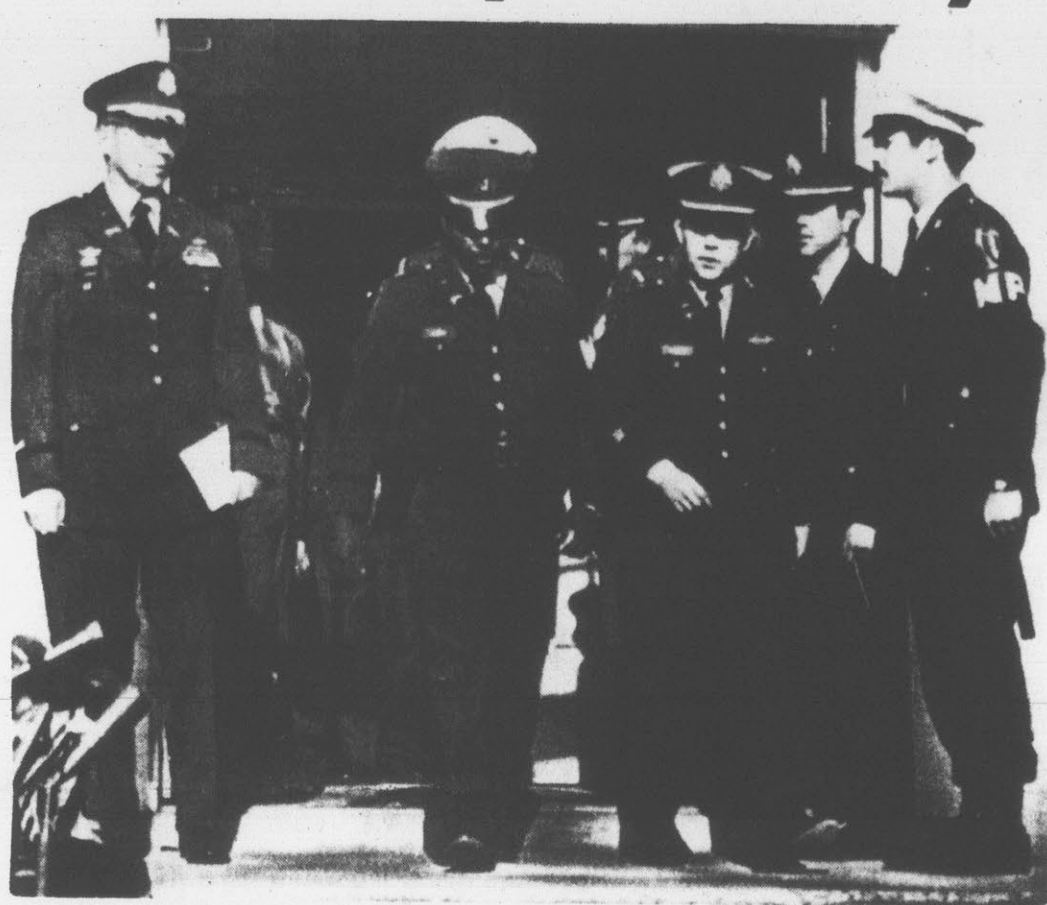

The two men found Monday were reported in good condition aboard the Nebraska, though one suffered from shock. The first 11 survivors had been picked up Sunday afternoon by the Liberian freighter Sasstown, which arrived in New York Monday night.

Walkout Due To Team Nickname

CHARLOTTE (AP) — About 150 black pupils walked out of classes at North Mecklenburg High School Monday morning in a protest over the nickname, "Rebels," used by the school's athletic teams.

Two pupils were arrested, one on a charge of assault and the other on a trespassing charge, by police from the nearby Huntersville community and Mecklenburg County officers.

Two whites and a black were treated by a doctor for minor injuries received in a series of fights.

LT. WILLIAM A. CALLEY, Jr., after being found guilty of (third from right), leaves the Post premeditated murder of Vietnamese civilians at My Lai. (AP Wirephoto)

By KATHRYN JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

FT. BENNING, Ga. (AP) — For 13 days, Rusty Calley sat by the telephone waiting to hear about a verdict that would be crucial to the rest of his life.

And he philosophized: "The thing that makes My Lai so unique, it was a small tragedy in a small place, but for once, man was able to see all the hells of war at once."

"I can't say I am proud of ever being in My Lai or ever participating in it. I would be extremely proud if My Lai shows the world what war is and that the world needs to do something about stopping wars."

When the telephone jangled Monday afternoon telling him the verdict was near, Lt. William L. Calley Jr., 27, reached for his Army uniform and said "I'm ready."

In the sunless, blue-draped small military courtroom where he sat throughout his four-month trial, the small rusty-haired lieutenant saluted Col. Clifford Ford, the jury president, and then stood at attention throughout the three-minute reading of the verdict.

When the first conviction on premeditated murder of Vietnamese civilians was read, his jaw tightened and his face flushed scarlet, but he displayed the same military discipline which taught him to remain rigid and stay alert during his court-martial, the longest in U.S. military history.

Ford pronounced that Calley was convicted of killing 20 persons at a drainage ditch in My Lai, one at a trail intersection, and of murdering a man dressed in the white garments of a monk. He was convicted also of assault with intent to kill a child.

He could face the death penalty or life imprisonment. The jury will deliberate again to determine the sentence.

It was a verdict Calley did not expect.

During the 13 days while the jury deliberated, Calley often joked with friends and newsmen about going to jail. But he also had planned a victory party after the verdict.

His attractive, red-haired, girl friend listened to the reading of the verdict over the public address system in the press room at the courthouse.

Then the girl, who works on the post, quickly left the courthouse, showing no visible emotion.

Soon afterward, Calley, white-faced but with a soldierly bearing, was escorted by two military policemen and an army captain from the courthouse to the stockade.

He made no comment to newsmen.

However, Calley said earlier, "I hope My Lai isn't a tragedy but an eye opener, even for people who say war is hell."

"My Lai has happened in every war. It's not an isolated incident, even in Vietnam."

His comments came in an interview granted with the understanding it would be released after the verdict.

Calley, an inexperienced second lieutenant, led his platoon on an infantry assault on the tiny hamlet of My Lai March 16, 1968, a mission which resulted in his court-martial, unprecedented in Army history. Never before had an American stood accused of murdering more than 100 persons.

"Many people say war is hell who have never experienced it, but it is more than hell for those people tied up in it," he said.

In the interview, Calley, first U.S. soldier formally accused in the killings at My Lai, said: "No one has yet tried to analyze the problems to my knowledge, that cause not only My Lai but the war in Vietnam itself. I am hopeful that My Lai will bring the meaning of war to the surface not only to our na-

Prepare Sentence

FT. BENNING, Ga. (AP) — Bright-eyed and cheerful after his first night in the stockade, Lt. William Calley Jr. returned to the courtroom today for a life-or-death sentence that can be tempered only by a long string of reviewing authorities.

He was escorted by six military policemen to the little one-story courthouse where a jury of six combat officers convicted him Monday of murdering at least 22 civilians in the blood bath of My Lai.

Attorneys were in court this morning to work with the military judge on instructions he'll give to the jury. The arguments on the sentence were to begin at 1 p.m. and were likely to be concluded today.

Some Students Able To Finish School Only With Food Stamp Aid

(Third of a Series)
By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

"We would never have been able to finish school had we not had the benefit of food stamps."

Mrs. Evelyn Heidenreich, supervisor of this county's Food Stamp Program, said she gets a letter with this or a similar sentence in it every once in a while.

"It's very gratifying to know that some kids are staying in school and graduating because of their participation in Food Stamp Program," she said. "The difference in their earnings with a college education as compared to what they would have made without one, no doubt, will mean many times in taxes what the cost of sustaining them with food stamps was during their college years."

"Most of the East Carolina

University students now receiving food stamps are married ones," Mrs. Heidenreich said. "If a student's husband or wife is not a full-time student, we insist that he or she have a job, that is unless there are young children in the home. We never penalize a wife for staying at home to care for her children, although we will consider child care a necessary expense just like shelter costs of she does choose to work."

"A student's school costs — tuition, books, library fees, registration fees, etc. — will be subtracted before the student's net income is figured for eligibility."

"We always send forms home to a student's parents and also to his or her in-laws if he or she is married. We simply ask if the parents are contributing to the student's support and, if so, how much.

Beginning this year, we will double check, making sure that no student who receives food stamps is taken as a dependent by solvent parents."

"We have received many an irate call from citizens who seem to resent students' receiving food stamps. If the caller names a particular situation, we are more than willing to go back and check to be sure that we have not been deceived about the person's circumstances."

Unrelated Households Ousted

A ruling of the 91st Congress, is causing some recipients to be rechecked. Under the 1970 amendments, non-related individuals under 60 years of age living together would no longer be eligible for food stamps.

The reasoning, according to a newsletter from the North Carolina Department of Social Services, is this: "Economically deprived," is a term used to describe the poor. It is descriptive of a condition over which the person has little or no control or means to alleviate and is usually not achieved through one's own volition. Household members in communal households can usually find fruitful occupation."

Mrs. Heidenreich said that many "families" related in no way by blood or marriage are now being removed from the food stamp rolls because of this new ruling.

When there are arguments by persons living in communal situations, food stamp counselors are advised to tell them of a recent court ruling the Department of Social Services deems germane to the Food Stamp Program. The ruling made in U.S. (Continued On Page 5)

"DECEMBER TRAVELERS" . . . a Center. The print is a tribute honoring Donald Sexauer print, is presented by those of the medical profession on Mrs. C. H. Rand, Jr. (left) to Mrs. March 30, the national Doctors' Day, Edith Walker at the Greenville Art

Doctors Honored Today With Art Center Gift

Today is the day the doctors of Greenville are being honored. In this annual observance, both the doctors living and those who have died are being remembered for services they render their communities.

The idea of a day to honor members of the medical profession originated in Georgia in 1933, when Mrs. C. B. Almond of Winder introduced a resolution setting aside March 30 of each year as Doctors' Day.

March 30 was chosen as it was on that date that Dr. Crawford W. Long first used ether anesthesia in surgery.

In Greenville, the primary method of marking this day for the past several years has been the giving by doctors' wives of some gift that will serve a public need, something that will be of lasting value to the community.

This year, in a simple ceremony held at the Greenville Art Center, Mrs. Edith Rand, wife of Dr. C. H. Rand, Jr., made a presentation of a framed print to the permanent collection of the Greenville Art Center. The print, an artists' proof, is Donald Sexauer's "December Travelers", a study in black and white of the heads of the three wise men.

Mrs. Rand said, "We are delighted to give this lovely print to the Art Center. It's one we like and one we think the public will enjoy seeing."

Mrs. Edith Walker, director of the Art Center, expressed her appreciation for the gift, noting this is the third different Sexauer print to come to the permanent collection from various contributors.

Last year, a gift of books were made to the Sheppard Library to mark Doctor's Day.

Art Center's Funds Building Up

For the first time a sizeable fund is being made available to the Greenville Art Center for the purchase of works of art for the center's permanent collection.

Marvin K. Blount, Sr., president of the Rachel Maxwell Moore Foundation, Monday announced that $5,000 has been authorized for immediate use to purchase art works.

"It is a pleasure to announce this amount for use by the Acquisition Committee," Blount commented following the announcement. He noted the decision was made at a meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Rachel Maxwell Moore Foundation.

"With the foundation becoming as well endowed as it is now," Blount continued, "we should be able to announce an annual purchase sum of $5,000 or even more." The money available for purchase fund represents the accumulated interest on the principal of the foundation fund.

Blount also touched on immediate plans to complete raising the matching funds from Greenville to meet the stipulation carried in the recent challenge grant of $50,000 from Grover and Jeff Maxwell of Augusta, Georgia, brothers of the late Mrs. Moore.

"I'm happy to report that already I have a couple of additional donors who have pledged $1,000 each," Blount revealed, "and several more near firm commitments from other donors for $1,000 each." Blount says he is optimistic that the amount needed from local donors to complete the challenge grant and raise the foundation fund to $100,000 will be forthcoming soon.

"It is such an excellent opportunity for the community," he said, "and I feel our citizens will meet the challenge as we have met other challenges successfully."

Blount said announcement of those contributing would be made at the earliest date possible.

"I am personally grateful to our good friend, the late Dr. Robert Lee Humber, for his deep concern and personal dedication in getting the foundation grant enlarged," Blount said.

Members of the Acquisition Committee who will be responsible for using the first $5,000 annual contingent of purchase funds to select art for the Art Center's permanent collection are Mrs. James S. Ficklen, Jr., Bob Pittman, Mrs. Charles Stevens, Dr. Donald H. Tucker, Mrs. Robert Van Veld, Dr. Alfred H. Yongue and Mrs. C. W. Walker.

Rate Hike Again Fights

RALEIGH (AP) — For the second time in six months, Atty. Gen. Robert Morgan is opposing a major North Carolina power company.

Morgan told the state Utilities Commission Monday that he is against a rate hike granted the Carolina Power and Light Co. in February.

In a recent case Morgan successfully opposed a rate rise requested by Duke Power Co.

The attorney general is expected to concentrate on a 4 per cent "emergency" rate boost granted CP&L last June. An increase in rates of 11.85 per cent was granted by the utilities commission in February.

CP&L had requested a larger increase, which was turned down by the commission. The company obtained a court order Thursday staying the commission's decision.

Lewis Family To Give Concert

WILLIAMSTON — The Lewis Family of Augusta, Ga., will present a gospel singing concert at the Williamston High School auditorium.

The program will be held Sunday afternoon, April 4, beginning at 2:30. The singing is being sponsored by the Cedar Grove Free Will Baptist Church. The public is invited to attend.

Clear Girl In Murders

TAVARES, Fla. (AP) — An 18-year-old North Carolina girl has been freed in connection with the brutal car trunk murders of a tourist and a real estate salesman.

Lake County Judge L. I. Huffstetler dismissed all charges against Hermina Theresa Braxton except that of accessory after the fact. Miss Braxton was first identified as Terri Robinson of Jacksonville, N.C.

Miss Braxton's parents testified Monday that she was at home Feb. 16 when the realtor and an elderly couple were jammed into a car trunk after stumbling upon persons attempting to open a safe. The assailants then opened fire at the car, killing the woman and the salesman.

Judge Huffstetler said there was enough evidence to hold one youth for murder and other charges. The case against another was not considered.

AmusementPark Move Planned

SALEM (AP) — The Lake-side Amusement Park will be in a different place in 1975.

Owner Beverly Roberts said Monday the Roanoke Valley landmark will move to an enlarged $5 million site off U. S. 220 south of Martinsville in 1974.

He said the new site will be closer to the park's North Carolina clientele and will feature camping, outdoor trails and cabins in addition to the amusements and rides now offered at the present location.

Evidence Ruled Insufficient

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Charges against a North Carolina woman and a man from Washington, D.C., were dropped in a Memphis court Monday because there was not enough evidence that they passed fake gold jewelry to a pawn broker.

General Sessions Judge Morgan Fowler said that a police request for warrants against the pair so a grand jury could get the case was based on insufficient evidence. The accused are Rose Marie Cassara, 39, of Rocky Mount, N.C., and John W. Whitney, 40, of Washington.

Again Urges One Agency

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Dr. Cameron West, director of the State Board of Higher Education, has repeated his call for "a single agency to plan and coordinate higher education" in North Carolina.

Such an agency, West said, would be empowered "to approve academic programs and to allocate functions, with authority to review budgets and to prepare a single budget request for higher education."

West's remarks were prepared for delivery this afternoon to the Charlotte Rotary Club.

Any new agency, West said, would have to have these powers.

West was apparently making his preference clear among five alternative plans being considered by the Governor's Committee on Restructuring of Higher Education.

Lindsay Warren Jr., chairman of the committee, said Monday that an announcement would probably be made as to recommendations within a week.

The alternatives being considered by the committee are:

—A board of regents to govern and coordinate every institution of higher learning.

—An overall coordinating agency which would control new programs, budgets and allocation of functions for the individual institution, each of which would have its own board.

—Three separate boards, one from institutions with university functions, another for senior colleges and third for community colleges.

—Strengthen the Board of Higher Education.

—Do nothing.

Wants Poor Whites Join

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The national treasurer of the NAACP says its future success depends upon "getting more poor whites on our side."

Alfred Baker Lewis spoke to a church group in Charlotte Monday.

He said, "The best way to stop political reaction is by a struggle uniting blacks and poor whites to end economic exploitation. The natural political alliance should be between the financially underprivileged and the racially underprivileged."

Lewis estimated that about five to 10 per cent of the NAACP's members are white, but added the organization doesn't keep records by race.

He said the moderate civil rights organization continues to gain both membership and finances despite the news made by more militant black groups in recent years.

That Rare Male Avis: A First-Grade Teacher

By NORMA SCHUELKE
JUPITER, Fla. (WNS)—A man teaching first grade?

At Jupiter Elementary School, yes.

Jim Sharrock, who taught fourth grade there for three years, chose this year to go into a first grade classroom and now wouldn't be elsewhere.

"I love it. This is where the action is," he says, surrounded by little chairs and tables, alphabet charts, Dr. Zeuss books — and the "raw material" in the shape of bright-eyed small fry.

Moving about his child-dominated domain, Jim touts a little fellow's hair, addresses him as "Tiger," and the child beams and tackles the job he's been given to do with confidence.

A little girl, more inclined to twist her dress and lower her eyes than answer a question, is called "honey" and then gently told how to proceed with her work.

Egos
"I try to boost their egos," explains their teacher, a good-looking young man who looks exactly like the ex-model he is.

"This is a nice class. The children take care of each other and try to help, and I like that. I want to keep them this way," he says, showing that to him teaching is a lot more than number drills and the alphabet.

When discussing why he likes his work he mentions cooperative colleagues, job security, helpful mothers, freedom to try new things, but what comes out most is that Jim Sharrock loves children.

"Youngsters at this age are so alive, so uninhibited and so truthful. They say what they think, and I like that."

Silly
There are times, he says, when he purposely gets silly to make the little ones take notice. When attention is drifting away while he's reading to his class, he may change his voice or drop a book. It works — better than a reprimand.

Jim wishes more men would go into teaching lower elementary, for the good of the children and because he thinks they would find it challenging and rewarding. He regrets that men are sometimes discouraged from teaching at the lower elementary level, and even refuse such assignments.

People react to his job with some surprise, and sometimes Jim has been asked, "How do you stand it?" But most people express approval, realizing that it is good for young children to have both men and women teachers and that some children lack a father image. He has taught children from fatherless homes and this, to Jim, is sad.

Hugs
"I get a lot of hugs," he remarks. This, he feels reflects the fact that some children do not experience enough affection at home. "You can tell which children have a lot of love at home," and he adds that when he and his wife, who now works, have children she will stay home. "There's no one who is going to love your child like you do," says Jim.

Sandra Sharrock, who majored in psychology at Florida Atlantic University (which is Jim's alma mater, too), now works with an optometrist in a perceptual development program. Her work is of great interest to

Son Should Tell About Divorce

By Abigail Van Buren

(© 1971 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: Our son, 23, spent two years in Viet Nam and came home in '68 with lots of medals. He has been a wonderful son in every way and has never given us any trouble.

He met a sweet girl a year later and they were married. The marriage lasted seven months, and a divorce was agreed upon.

Now he has met another girl [also very nice] whom he wants to marry as soon as his divorce is final, but he doesn't want to tell her he has been married before. I told my son that this is no way to start a marriage, and somewhere along the line she'll find out and be hurt. My son claims if he tells her, she won't want him.

He wasn't raised that way, Abby. I think this girl should know the truth, but if I tell her I may lose my son. What steps shall I take?

—WHERE TO TURN

DEAR WHERE: Start by trying to convince your son that he must tell his fiancée the truth, and if she won't have him because of his previous marriage, he's ahead to know it now. The very basis for a lasting marriage is the willingness of both parties to accept the other as he is! If your son is not mature enough to realize this and refuses to listen, he stands to be a two-time loser in short order.

DEAR ABBY: A boy [I'll call him Bertram] asked me to the St. Valentine's Day dance at school. He is 15, and so am I. My mother helped me to make a dress, and I was so excited the night before I could hardly sleep.

The morning of the dance, Bertram called, and in a very weak voice said he couldn't go because he had been in a bad motorcycle accident. I was surprised as I never knew Bertram even drove a motorcycle. I felt terrible about missing the dance, but told him to just get well fast and not to worry about me.

An hour later my mother called Bertram's mother to find out what hospital he was in so we could send him a plant. His mother said, "Hospital? He's not in any hospital. He looked feverish and his forehead felt hot so I took his temperature. It was 101, so I told him he couldn't go out."

Now when I see Bertram at school he avoids me, Abby, why did he make up that lie about the motorcycle? I would have understood if he had told me the truth. I'd like for him to know I don't hold anything against him, but how can I without running after him?

—LOST OUT

DEAR LOST: He made up that lie because he was too embarrassed to tell you the truth. Besides, a "motorcycle accident" sounds much more glamorous than a temperature of 101. He's avoiding you because he knows his mother tipped his mitt. Be patient. He'll come around.

DEAR ABBY: I just read your Confidential to M. C.: "You were right. I was wrong. Next time a long-haired hippie-type approaches me for a handout, I'll not refuse. I'll give him a dime on the chance that he wants to call his mother—collect."

Abby, I don't know what M. C. wrote, but please don't back down. I'm sure you must have cheered every working person in San Francisco with your first suggested reply to panhandlers, ["Nothing doing, Buddy. Earn your own bread"].

I work in downtown San Francisco, and it is impossible to go out for lunch without being approached two or three times for a handout. I don't object to blind people asking for donations, or even the street musicians who at least are giving something in return for the money they get, but I resent able-bodied young men and women who approach everyone wearing clean clothes, and ask for a handout.

Californians are paying such a staggering amount for welfare, anyway, this is the last straw.

Barbecued Spareribs Coming Up

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor
Once prepared mustard appeared chiefly at the dining table, but nowadays it does duty both in the dining room and in the kitchen as a recipe ingredient.

Today, for example, cooks are likely to use prepared mustard in barbecue sauces for spareribs. One of the newest of these sauces came our way recently and when we tried it, we found it a very good baste.

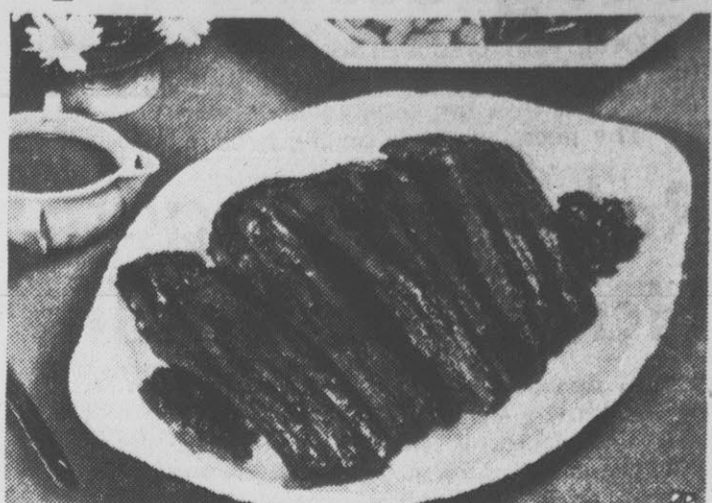

BARBECUED SPARERIBS
4 pounds fresh pork spareribs, cut into 1-rib portions

½ cup spicy brown prepared mustard
½ cup catchup

1 cup canned pineapple juice
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce

½ teaspoon garlic powder
On a rack in a large shallow roasting pan place spareribs, meaty side up. Bake, uncovered, in a preheated 350-degree oven for 1 hour.

gether the mustard, catchup, pineapple juice, Worcestershire sauce and garlic powder.

Remove ribs and rack; pour off fat in pan. Return ribs, meaty side up, to pan without rack. Spoon half the mustard mixture over them.

Return to 350-degree oven and bake, uncovered, for ½ hour. Shake pan and spoon remaining mustard mixture over ribs. Continue to bake, uncovered, in 350-degree oven until tender—about ½ hour longer; during this last half-hour shake pan and baste ribs every 10 minutes. Makes 6 servings.

Suburban Beauty Hints

What You Eat Is What You See!

Complexion care begins with what you put in your grocery basket. The skin is often referred to as the mirror of your body, therefore, you reflect what you eat.

As you stride down the aisle of your supermarket this week imagine yourself a composite of potato chips, soft drinks and cookies. It may make you think twice. Better still, it may reroute you toward the fresh fruits and vegetables section.

A wise rule to obey is to never grocery shop without having eaten first. You will be less tempted to purchase starches between meal snacks.

Another rule to follow is to keep fresh fruits in your home. Nibbling on grapes, for instance, is much healthier and even more enjoyable than nibbling on cookies and chips. The full satisfaction will come when you look into your mirror!

Robert Morgan Has Momentum

By BRYAN HAISLIP

RALEIGH — A photograph of Attorney General Robert Morgan on his backside in the snow hangs in the outer office of his second floor suite in the Justice Building.

It's an unaccustomed pose. However unskilled as a skier, as a state official and politician Morgan is on his feet moving.

Within the compass of a recent week he conferred with a group in Asheville on creation of a Better Business Bureau, listened to a woman's complaint that her weighing heavily on his mind. Contrary to the impression caused by speculation on his future, he would not regard it as a backing-off if he remained as attorney general.

"In the long run, this is the one office that can be really effective in promoting the cause of good government and protecting the interests of the people," he mused. "We are not hamstrung by a lot of bureaucracy and administrative problems. We can move around into those areas that need attention as we become aware of them. "It is challenging and it is the law. I love law," he added.

One of the challenges engaging his attention is expediting trial of criminal cases in the courts. "Today the most crying need we face is to do something to speed up the wheels of justice," he said.

Ideas From Abroad

For guidance to a solution Morgan has looked to European systems. On a trip last year to England and the Scandinavian countries, he was impressed with their procedures. "In England, cases are disposed of three to four weeks after arrest," he noted. "Seventy per cent of those in Swedish prisons are serving sentences of less than six months."

That justice be swift and sure is more effective as a deterrent to crime than severity of punishment, he said.

Plans are jelling for fellowships to send representatives from his department to study the English system. "Think how beneficial it would be for an SBI agent to spend time at Scotland Yard, and one of our attorneys to learn first-hand how their courts work," he said.

At 45, Morgan has a youthful look and a Boy Scout earnestness about the varieties. He sprawled in a desk chair that looked too big and talked of the need to give young people a role in public life.

"Youth today is oriented to public service rather than the money motive. I think JFK had something to do with that," he said.

His own career started early. He was a Wake Forest Law School student when he was elected Superior Court clerk in Harnett County. He came to the state Senate at 30 and served five terms.

He survived being on the losing side in the divisive Democratic gubernatorial campaign between Terry Sanford and I. Beverly Lake in 1960, and today his following crosses factional lines.

The secret? "There isn't one. I was never smart enough to plot. I do not make political moves on the basis of the next one it will lead to," he said.

As a result, he's never been outsmarted. Knowledgeable observers don't look for Morgan to take a pratfall until he gets on skis again.

most dramatic battles in recent years in Congress. It came on the heels of one of the most high-pressure lobbying campaigns by the White House in a congressional matter in recent memory.

Rejection of the proposal for further investment in development of the SST may be a blow to employment, costing an estimated 15,000 jobs. It may be a blow to the nation's future in the world aviation markets. Quite evidently, however, it was the most severe political blow dealt President Nixon and his administration since it came to power two years ago.

It would be folly for President Nixon to attempt now some other maneuver to get around the congressional decision and continue the expenditure of federal funds for development of the SST.

For our part, we still have serious question that the SST program was as bad from the standpoint of economics and from the standpoint of ecology as its opponents proclaimed. We have misgivings about what this decision means so far as the future supremacy of this nation in aviation is concerned.

Notwithstanding these, however, Congress has spoken clearly and decisively. There is no room for assertions that the lawmakers did not understand the issues or what was at stake. Few subjects have received fuller congressional attention or fuller congressional discussion than the SST question.

The role for the administration and the nation now should be to put the SST in its "closed" file and endure the consequences or enjoy the fruits of this Congressional decision.

Only time will tell which way the scales may tip.

Two Months In Which To Study Tax Proposal

Pitt County citizens will have two months to study the one percent sales tax proposal before voting on it again.

The local sales tax was voted down last year and a second election set for earlier this year was cancelled when the Supreme Court struck down the original local one percent sales tax bill.

Commissioners have indicated that the funds from the sales tax would be used to help pay off the $9 million bond issue for a new hospital and to provide county and municipal governments and schools with needed funds.

Citizens of the county have the power to determine how much service they want from local government and how taxes should be distributed to best pay for the services. On May 25 this taxing method will be decided and citizens owe it to themselves to study all the facts between now and then.

Mitchell Gets Campaign Job

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — To the immense relief of Republican politicians across the country, the decision has finally been made for John Mitchell to resign as Attorney General and manage President Nixon's campaign for reelection in 1972.

Mitchell has begun preliminary planning for 1972 and may leave the Justice Department as early as September. But the move is not an easy one. Mitchell has grown to love being Attorney General and has agreed ("kicking and screaming," says one associate) to leave only at Mr. Nixon's specific request.

The reason the choice finally boiled down to Mitchell is simple enough: nobody else has the confidence of both state party leaders and the President. Indeed, anybody as campaign chairman but Mitchell would have further "dampened the soggy morale of state politicians. They were apprehensive over reports that Presidential counselor Robert Finch, regarded by them as overly liberal and insufficiently decisive, has been doing advance campaign planning.

Strength For Today

A GREAT CONVERSION

Just about a hundred years ago Charles H. Spurgeon, prince of preachers, was born in England. To the end of his life he was to preach to the English people with an eloquence and power that has seldom been equalled and never surpassed. Twice every Sunday he spoke to a congregation numbering from five to six thousand, and he did this for more than thirty years.

He was converted when he was fifteen years of age. On his way to a place of worship one Sunday morning he was compelled by a snowstorm to turn into a little primitive Methodist Chapel in which about a dozen people were worshipping. A layman was in the pulpit expounding the text, "Look unto me, and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth." At one place in his sermon the preacher suddenly pointed his finger at the boy sitting under the gallery and said, "Young man, you look very miserable. And you always will be miserable — miserable in life and miserable in death — if you do not obey my text. But if you obey now, this moment you will be saved." Then he shouted at the top of his voice, "Young man, look to Jesus Christ."

At that moment something happened to young Spurgeon. He describes it by saying that the cloud was gone, the darkness rolled away and the sun had risen. He was converted. The power of that experience never abated during the whole of his distinguished life.

What It Is: Extortion

The House of Representatives last week completed congressional action on a constitutional amendment extending the vote to young men and women at age 18. Within hours, Minnesota, Delaware, Tennessee, Connecticut and Washington had ratified. The rush is on. It is an exercise in futility to voice dissent in the midst of a bandwagon's brassy roar; but such an exercise may be useful all the same. To extort, by definition, is to obtain some object "by force or undue or illegal power of ingenuity." What we are engaged in here, by the grace of Congress and the whim of Hugo Black, precisely fits that definition. What it is, is extortion.

This crime against the Constitution began last year, when Congress undertook by simple statute to extend the vote to 18-year-olds in all elections. Mr. Nixon, against his better judgment, signed the bill. A test case, challenging the act, went to the Supreme Court in October. In December, the Court split 5-4, in one of the most bizarre decisions in its history, holding the law valid in part and void in part.

Mr. Justice Black was the swing man. The aging Alabamian agreed with the Court's conservatives that Congress had no power to fix a minimum age for voting in elections to State offices; but he flopped to the liberals in ruling that Congress may exert its will as to national offices. His reasoning, if so it may be termed, went along these lines: Congress has power, under the Constitution, to make its own regulations or to alter State regulations prescribing "the manner of holding elections for Senators and Representatives." The word "manner," Black decided, embraces the minimum age of voters. And though the provision is limited explicitly to Senators and Representatives, Black ruled that the provision is just bound to apply to the election of Presidents also. Et voila! The deed was done.

The result was not only to rape the Constitution but also to create chaos for the States. Election officials in 47 States — all but Alaska, Georgia and Kentucky, which already have fixed a minimum age of 18 by their own action — face the expense of maintaining two sets of registration books, one for State elections, the other for national elections.

To eliminate this costly and confusing prospect, the

Saga Of An Actor

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — If he hadn't become one of filmdom's top 10 box-office stars, Clint Eastwood says he would enjoy being a criminal lawyer.

"An attorney for the defense, not a prosecutor," he added. "It sounds more noble."

As a youth the 6-foot-4-inch actor was something of a drifter and a loner—he worked as a lumberjack and a steel mill laborer—and today, despite a crinkly grin that makes him look disarmingly boyish, he still has an air of aloofness about him.

He gives the impression of a man in charge of his own destiny. His mind moves before his mouth does. Asked a question, he stares a while through green eyes that hold a muzzel quality, before answering it with words slow and few.

His saga is familiar. After appearing in a dozen or more films in which it was hard to tell him from the scenery, Clint starred for more than seven years in "Rawhide," a television series.

He then took his saddle sores to Italy, where he earned a fortune in three low-budgeted horse operas that made him an international star and whose profits won the awe of Hollywood.

How he has his own company, Malpasco Productions, which can pay him $1 million or more a picture. It is as much for his business acumen as for his acting ability that the industry envies him.

The progress which Greenville school children are making in the field of music was set forth in an interesting way in the rendition of an Easter Cantata, "The Thorn Crowned King," at the high school auditorium yesterday afternoon. One hundred children from the sixth and seventh grades of Greenville's city schools took part in the program and literally sang their way into the hearts of the listeners.

The first of a series of Eastern Cantatas to be given by various churches, was presented by the choir of the Eighth Street Church of Christ last night. Solo parts were sung by Mrs. J. Knott Proctor, Miss Carolyn Fullilove, J. H. Gaylor, J. T. Jolliff, C. B. Rowlett and Spruill Spain.

Senator M. K. Blount and Representative E. G. Flanagan were at home from Raleigh for the weekend.

Probably Dull If Fully Honest

By ELMER ROESSNER
Ralph Nader has proposed that the Federal Trade Commission require every advertiser to be able to prove every statement made in an advertisement. The FTC is seriously considering his idea.

If adopted, it could thoroughly revolutionize advertising in America. It could completely eliminate the zip, elan and colorful language of national advertising, whether in print or on the air. Advertising would be more factual and a lot less interesting.

Let's take a look at a typical magazine, say Newsweek dated today. "We shape your shoe the way God shaped your foot," headlines Wright Arch Preserve Shoes. Wright might have difficulty in providing that God shaped your foot, let alone that there is a God. Another headline: "Winston's Down Home Taste!" My home tasted and smelled of fried onions last night. So that's what a

Winston tastes like? Nore Examples
"The Ninety-Eight respects your wishes," says an Oldsmobile ad. Suppose you are wishing for a drink? "The Continental: the final step up," advertises Ford. If so, Richard Burton could have saved a bundle on that diamond he bought Liz.

ELMER ROESSNER

Seagram's Royal Crown is "the legendary Canadian." Never mind the booze, tell us the legend! If there is any. "Florsheim has everything you ever wanted," says a shoe ad. Loving shoes, I suppose.

B and B is the "smartest thing on the rocks." And how smart after four of them? "The rum martini. Don't knock it till you've tried it," urge the Rums of Puerto Rico. I've tried it. Knock, knock, knock.

"You've never needed The Salesman like you need him now," headlines a CBS Radio ad for Arthur Godfrey. He's a wonderful guy, but can CBS prove that you needed him less last fall? Who's Afraid?
"You'll lose all your fear of Europe when you visit Amsterdam first," advertises KLM. Not if you arrive for a hippie riot! Smirnoff leaves you breathless," says a vodka ad. Can it prove your wife can't sniff a drink on your breath at six feet?

And on page E6, which may not appear in all editions, there is an ad that says, "Stir up something . . . quote Newsweek." How about that! More seriously, American advertising is fanciful, touched with imagination, gaiety, exaggeration and fun. Of course, it may be argued that it would be more effective if it were less so. But that doesn't prove that anybody is always being fooled.

Except Ralph Nader. U. S. Is Against. And For Cigarettes
The United States has long been ambivalent about cigarettes. Congress requires cigarette manufacturers to remind smokers that they may blow a lung; the same Congress votes crop support for tobacco growers.

The government has warned people against smoking cigarettes, yet the government encourages their export to other nations. The Foreign Agriculture Service reports that cigarette exports last year set a new high mark in both number and dollar value. The total was 29 billion pieces, valued at $159 million.
Hong Kong was our best customer, taking 3.2 billion cigarettes and creating suspicion that some must have slipped across the border to Red China. Spain was second with 1.7 billion. Colombia third with a little over 1.4 billion, the Netherlands Antilles fourth with 1.4 billion. Much of the last was for re-export.

Govm't Food Inspectors Say Their Ranks Too Thin

By G.C. THELEN Jr.
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP)—Government food inspectors say there just aren't enough of them to go around so dangerous contamination continues to turn up occasionally in the nation's food supply.

Lubricating oil in soda pop, pesticide in cheese and noodles, metal fragments and coffee whitener and pieces of glass in cereal are among the more dramatic instances of additives showing up over the past six months in recalled products as reported by the Food and Drug Administration.

The vast majority of foods are, of course, free of such contaminants. But the recalled items illustrate the continuing sanitation problems in the processed food industry.

The regularity of contamination in portions of the industry, frozen onion rings, for example, have led to a selective stiffening of FDA enforcement.

As a result, an official said, the government is instituting industry-wide, voluntary guidelines that each producer must follow. The guidelines replace so-called voluntary compliance where each plant was responsible for setting and watching over its own sanitation standards.

The FDA says voluntary compliance is necessary because the government's 525 field inspectors are too few to check regularly the 64,000 interstate food processing plants subject to federal supervision.

The primary sources of food contamination in factories are rodent and insect infestation, unclean food handlers, mechanical breakage, and machinery breakdown.

Rodent or insect-caused recalls in the past six months include candy bars, popcorn, cornmeal and party dip. Ironically, one producer contaminated a batch of noodles with the pesticide it was using to control insects.

Food handlers are usually responsible for salmonella contamination that can cause intestinal infection. Salmonella recalls have included whipping cream, peacans, olives, and onion rings.

The breakage problem was illustrated recently when the Pillsbury company called back some boxes of Farina cereal contaminated with glass from a broken light fixture in its Springfield, Ill., plant.

And in Kansas City, Miss., a balky machine recently sprayed lubricating oil into soda along a bottling plant assembly line.

District Court distinguished the "voluntary family" from the "traditional family." The judge said, "There is a long-recognized value in the traditional family relationship which does not attach to the 'voluntary family.' Reinforced by biological and legal ties, the family (as we know it) plays a role in educating and nourishing the young; it has been a means, for unaccounted millenia, of satisfying the deepest emotional and physical needs of human beings." The judge also found that "communal living groups are voluntary with fluctuating membership who have no legal obligations of support or cohabitation." He concluded that communes "are legally indistinguishable from such traditional living groups as religious communities and residence clubs."

"We do not have a separate file on unrelated households," Mrs.

Heidenreich said. "But as they come up for reclassification, we are terminating them. And, of course, we are turning down any that inquire about applying. Hopefully by the end of May, this hurdle will be behind us."

John Byrnes of Wisconsin, chairman and senior Republican on the Ways and Means Committee. Once again, Tate's hard-sell probably did more harm than good.

Battling Bella
The terrible tongue of Rep. Bella Abzug, exceptional even in New York City's superheated Democratic reform politics, has now attacked the man second in line for succession to the Presidency: soft-spoken Speaker Carl Albert of Oklahoma.

Mrs. Abzug had planned an anti-war speech at a House Democratic caucus March 17. But the vote on an anti-war resolution was postponed the night before, and only 78 Democrats showed up. Declaring the lack of quorum, Caucus Chairman Olin Teague of Texas promptly gavelled adjournment—and sent Mrs. Abzug into a rage.

Ignoring the respect freshmen members traditionally show for the venerated office of Speaker, she tongue-lashed Albert for insensitivity to the war issue and muzzling war critics. The Speaker took it in silence.

A footnote: Less bellicose than Bella, other Democrats are unhappy with Albert over the surprise Social Security vote March 16 after House Majority Leader Hale Boggs of Louisiana had assured them there would be no vote. The result: some 43 Democratic Congressmen—including Boggs—were not recorded on the most politically popular vote of the session, a fact that will be drummed home by their opponents next year.

Laird's Empty House
Highly unusual mass absenteeism prevailed at the Senate Armed Services Committee's top-level briefing on Laos by Secretary of Defense Melvin Laird Wednesday, a sign of both disillusion with the Vietnam war and over-briefing by the Pentagon.

Accompanied by Adm. Thomas H. Moorer, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Laird arrived for the 10 o'clock closed-door session to find only three Senators present: Chairman John Stennis of Mississippi and two Republicans, William Saxbe of Ohio and Richard Schweiker of Pennsylvania. Stennis had a phone call put in to alert Democratic Sen. Lloyd Benton of Texas. He subsequently arrived, and half a dozen others drifted in and out of the hearing room.

Laird has been so punctilious about keeping Congress informed that he's having problems with overexposure on an issue most Congressmen now want to avoid.

Congress now has approved a proposed 26th Amendment to the Constitution. The resolution is clumsily worded, but the intent is plain:

"The right of citizens of the United States, who are 18 years of age or older, to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on account of age. The Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation."

That is the proposition set forth last week for ratification. If 38 States agree within a seven-year period, the amendment will become part of the Constitution.

Whatever the law may be, it is wrong—simply wrong—for the States to be put in this impossible position. The legislatures are not free to consider the proposal on its merits. They are being told to ratify or else—or else face the chaos and expense of two sets of books. Probably the States will cave in; but many of them, in doing so, will act against the expressed will of their own voters. The people of Connecticut, for one example, last November rejected a State proposal to lower the age to 18; but now Connecticut's General Assembly has ratified the amendment.

Connecticut's voters are not alone. The people of nine other States last year rejected lower-than-21 proposals. In all of them, the State legislatures face the uncomfortable prospect of approving a proposition their own people have specifically disapproved.

S.C. Hopes Withdrawal Only Temporary

By RICK SCOTT
Associated Press Writer

COLUMBIA (AP) — The University of South Carolina has announced it will pull out of the Atlantic Coast Conference effective late this summer, but officials at the school hope the separation will only be temporary.

"The University of South Carolina wants to continue participation in a conference," T.

Eston Marchant, chairman of the USC Board of Trustees, told the Associated Press Monday after the formal withdrawal announcement.

"We'd like to be in the ACC," he added. "But that isn't possible right now."

Marchant said the board decided that "under the present circumstances, and in the best interest of all concerned" the university would submit its resignation effective Aug. 15.

"Because USC has enjoyed and hopes to continue to enjoy its relationship with fellow conference members," Marchant said, "we hope that his separation will be of a temporary nature, and for a minimum amount of time."

The long-suspected pullout was the result of a continuing disagreement between USC and the ACC on recruiting standards for athletes. USC has favored the less rigid "1.6 grade rule" of the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA). ACC Commissioner Bob James, who met with the USC athletic subcommittee Monday morning, said he was convinced that "what South Carolina did today (Monday) was with great reluctance."

"I was impressed by the sincerity of the board of trustees," James said.

The ACC commissioner said there was no provision in the conference bylaws for withdrawal or resignation of a member institution "so we don't know yet what scheduling problems might arise.

"Long range scheduling in football represents a real problem," James said. "Other sports do not present such a problem."

The USC trustees said the university would fulfill all contractual agreements with member schools, both written and oral.

"It is our intention," the board said, "of continuing the long existing relationships with our old and valued opponents which presently comprise the membership of the ACC."

South Carolina and six other institutions became charter members of the ACC in 1952. North Carolina, North Carolina State, Wake Forest, Duke, Clemson and Maryland also joined them. Virginia later became a member of the conference.

Last October, the USC trustees authorized its athletic department to begin recruiting student athletes in accordance with the NCAA entrance standards. The ACC rule calls for a College Board score of 800 to be eligible for athletic participation while the NCAA rule requires a projected grade point average of 1.6 on a 4.0 system for entering athletes.

The athletic department was authorized to assure recruits qualifying under the NCAA standards that those standards would prevail at South Carolina in September, 1971, thereby assuring their eligibility.

"At the same time," Marchant said the board's statement, "we clearly indicated our desire to remain as a member institution in the ACC and that we would work diligently within the conference toward readjusting eligibility requirements of the ACC to the national standards. "The University of South Carolina is committed to conduct its intercollegiate program in conformity with the high standards established on the national level by an overwhelming majority of the major institutions in the United States," the statement said.

James said he would be busy talking to ACC faculty chairmen today and that he expects a conference meeting will have to be held before the regular scheduled May meeting. James said South Carolina could still attend the May meeting since they are officially members until Aug. 15. "I would hope that we can all approach this in an unemotional atmosphere."

University of South Carolina Athletic Director Paul Dietzel and Basketball Coach Frank McGuire said the USC board of trustees' statement was to be considered "ours also." They had no other comment.

Pro Drafting Wars Flare On All Fronts

By MIKE RECHT

Associated Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The pro basketball war within one league and between both of them heated up Monday as National Basketball Association teams finally found out for whom they are fighting.

The battle within the NBA for Spencer Haywood flamed anew as Buffalo this time challenged Seattle's right to the superstar after the SuperSonics signed him in defiance of NBA by-laws which prohibit the signing of a player whose college class has not graduated.

Buffalo's promised action came after Cleveland opened the NBA college draft with a choosing Notre Dame's Austin Carr. Portland followed by selecting Sidney Wicks of UCLA and Buffalo chose Elmore Smith of Kentucky State.

Haywood, the controversial 6-foot-8 forward whose class will not graduate until June, was picked by Buffalo on the second round despite an out of court settlement Friday in which the NBA allowed Seattle to keep Haywood and fined the club $200,000.

The Braves had asked U.S. district court judge Warren Ferguson in Los Angeles if the Braves could select him. The judge, who earlier had ruled that Seattle could keep Haywood, said he could not make such a decision and that was good enough for the Braves.

"We thought the judge's decision was favorable," said General Manager Eddie Donovan of the Braves. "He didn't say we couldn't sign him."

In Seattle, General Manager Bob Houbregs of the Sonics wasted little time answering a question if he would consider selling Haywood to Buffalo: "Not at all—no way."

Haywood, who signed with Denver of the rival American Basketball Association, two years ago after his sophomore year at Detroit University, jumped the ABA club in a contract dispute for Seattle in January.

While the Haywood situation became more muddled, the draft, conducted more than two months after the ABA draft, did fortify NBA teams the knowledge of which players they are trying to sign. In the past two months, the league has had to negotiate for them.

Cleveland, however, had immediate assurances that Carr would sign with the Cavaliers, who took the high scoring 6-foot-3 All-American instead of the expected big man such as Wicks.

Explaining the selection Coach Bill Fitch of the Cavaliers, who won only 15 games this season, called him "the best available player in the country. He stayed at the top of the guard list while the forwards and centers fluctuated over the season. We felt we had to save someone of superstar status."

Cleveland will battle Virginia of the ABA for Carr while Portland opposes Texas in the struggle for the 6-8 All-American Wicks and Buffalo battles Carolina for the 7-0 Smith, who helped Kentucky State to the NAIA title.

However, the ABA must have seen the handwriting on the wall during its draft when Wicks was left until the second round and Carr until the third round. Smith was a first round pick.

However, the same held true in reverse for the NBA, which waited until the 32nd pick before Seattle chose 7-0 All-American Jim McDaniels of Western Kentucky, already thought to be headed for the ABA.

The NBA also lost 7-2 Artis Gilmore of Jacksonville, who might well have been Cleveland's first pick had he been available, and Villanova's Howard Porter. Both have signed with the ABA, although Chicago chose Gilmore on the seventh round and Porter on the second round, just in case something should happen.

The NBA warned earlier by Kennedy, did forsake any sophomores or juniors according to league rules. The ABA had selected three underclassmen and signed sophomore Johnny Neumann of Mississippi, flaunting its own rules.

The 10 rounds of the NBA draft, which took one hour and 50 minutes was conducted via a telephone hookup with the 17 league cities and the NBA office here.

Ohio State May Challenge UCLA

By TED MEIER

Associated Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The Ohio State Buckeyes could become a team of destiny next season and end UCLA's long reign as national collegiate basketball champion.

The Buckeyes of the Big Ten pose a distinct threat to the Coach Johnny Wooden's Bruins, who won their fifth straight national title last Saturday.

UCLA beat Villanova 68-62 in the final of the NCAA tournament before 31,765 in the Astrodome at Houston. Wooden says the Bruins "will have a pretty decent club" in 1972 despite the loss of Sidney Wicks, Curtis Rowe and Steve Patterson.

Nevertheless, the manner in which the sophomore-laden Buckeyes came on strong late in the season to win the Big Ten and snap Marquette's 39-game winning streak 60-59 in the NCAA second round stamps them as a team that could go all the way.

Back for Coach Fred Taylor's Scarlet and Gray crew will be Alan Hornyak, Luke Witte, Mark Minor, Bob Siekmann and Dave Merchant, who gained vital experience in their upset of Marquette and near-upset of Western Kentucky in the NCAA quarter-finals.

The Hilltoppers had to come from behind to beat the Buckeyes 81-78 in overtime.

High scoring George McGinnis will be back for Indiana as will Henry Wilmore for Michigan, but the Hoosiers and Wolverines figure to again finish behind Ohio State in the Big Ten.

Adolph Rupp, the veteran Kentucky coach whose ambition is to win another NCAA title, likely will have another strong team in the Southeastern Conference with Tom Payne and Tom Parker available.

Other teams likely to be high in the 1972 rankings include North Carolina, which routed Georgia Tech 84-66 in the final of the National Invitation Tournament in New York, Hawaii, Penn, Southern California, Marquette and possibly Maryland with highly touted 6-foot-11 Tom McMillen up from the frosh team.

UCLA now has won the national title seven times in the last eight years, missing only in 1966 when the Bruins finished second to Oregon State in the Pacific-8.

During this span the Bruins compiled an amazing won-lost record of 221-15 for a percentage of .936. Of their last 154 games the Bruins have won 149 and lost a mere five, two to Southern Cal, for .968.

Citadel Has New Coach

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — The head basketball coach at the Coast Guard Academy, George Hill, will try to do at The Citadel what he accomplished at New London, Conn.

Hill was named New England college basketball coach of the year after two seasons at the academy, where his squads added to his over-all college coaching record of 91 victories against 58 losses. Hill succeeds Dick Campbell at the Southern Conference school.

Campbell resigned at the end of the current season, saying he couldn't effectively recruit for a military-oriented school. The Citadel is the South Carolina state military college.

The Citadel athletic director, Eddie Teague, announced Hill's hiring Monday. He said Hill renovated the basketball program at the Coast Guard Academy in his tenure there. Previously, the Illinois Wesleyan graduate was an assistant coach at Illinois, in high school, and Robert Morris Junior College in Carthage, Ill.

Stars, Cougars Battle Over Jim

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Utah Stars and Carolina Cougars of the American Basketball Association face a potential legal battle over who has rights to Western Kentucky standout Jim McDaniels, the Salt Lake Tribune reported today.

The Stars picked McDaniels during the opening round of the ABA player draft earlier this year, but later reports said they had traded their rights to seven-foot All American to the Cougars.

But the Tribune reported in today's editions that the Cougars obtained permission from ABA Commissioner Jack Dolph in advance of the player draft to negotiate with McDaniels in an attempt to sign him with the ABA.

The newspaper quoted an unnamed North Carolina source as saying Cougar officials felt it was important to get McDaniels into the league and that they were perhaps the only ABA team that could sign him.

The source was quoted as saying that the conflict between the two clubs was "about to reach a crisis."

Carolina General Manager Carl Sheer had negotiated with McDaniels "for Carolina on behalf of the ABA and the Stars have thrown a wrench into it," the source was quoted as saying.

The newspaper quoted Norman Blass, business agent for McDaniels, as saying that McDaniels "is anti-Utah and has told me on numerous occasions that he won't play professional basketball in Utah. If he's going to play in the ABA it will be with Carolina."

"If not with Carolina," Blass said, "then we'll begin negotiations with Seattle" of the National Basketball Association. Seattle picked McDaniels during the second round of the NBA player draft Monday.

Utah General Manager Vince Boryla was quoted as saying "McDaniels is still our property and he's going to stay that way."

"They (Carolina) apparently have been talking to him but we have the rights to him. There's been a lot of infighting and people telling us what's good for the league, but he's ours."

Boryla was quoted as saying the Stars have "a reasonably good chance" of signing McDaniels.

Despite Problems, Reds Still Pick

By DICK COUCH

Associated Press Sports Writer
TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — The Big Red Machine swings back into gear next week with one vital part missing and a couple of others in possible disrepair.

But anybody who thinks about consigning Cincinnati's National League pennant defenders to the 1971 scrap heap would be wise to consult the oddsmakers.

Despite the loss of sparkplug Bobby Tolan in a winter basketball mishap, the slow recovery of 20-game winner Jim Merritt from a lingering arm ailment and the salary disputes and injuries that slowed the Reds' spring training pace, they are favored to repeat as NL West Division champs.

With center fielder Tolan, who batted .316 and led the league with 57 stolen bases, out indefinitely following surgery to repair a severed Achilles tendon, versatile Pete Rose will switch from right to center.

Hal McRae and Bernie Carbo, two of the Reds' prize 1970 rookies, will flank Rose, who signed his second $100,000-plus contract after a stubborn, two-week holdout.

The remainder of last year's wrecking crew, led by matchless catcher Johnny Bench, third baseman Tony Perez and first baseman Lee May, is intact.

But the pitching staff, depleted by injuries late last season and shelved by Baltimore in the World Series, could continue to pose problems.

Merritt (popped elbow), rookie flash Wayne Simpson (torn shoulder muscle) and Jim McGlothlin (bruised toe), among other injuries were the 1970 casualties. And 18-game winner Gary Nolan, injury-free throughout the year, had a previous history of arm troubles.

Simpson, 14-3 with a 3.02 earned run average, went on the shelf July 31. McGlothlin, 14-10, hobbled through the second half after winning 11 of his first 15 starts. Merritt, 20-12, was winless after Aug. 26.

Fortunately for the Reds, veteran Tony Cloninger stepped into the breach to post seven of his nine victories after the All-Star break.

And the relief crops of Wayne Granger, 6-5 with a league-leading 35 saves, Clay Carroll, 9-4, 16 saves, and rookie fireballer Don Gullett, 5-2, 76 strikeouts in 78 innings, held firm.

Meanwhile, Pat Osburn and Ross Grimsley, a pair of 21-year-old left-handers who aren't on the 40-man roster, have impressed in exhibition play to the point that one or both could make the club.

No one expects the Reds' awesome attack to sputter, even if Bench can't top the 1970 figures that made him the league's Most Valuable Player—45 home runs, 148 runs batted in (both major league highs) and a .293 average.

Perez was close behind Bench last year with 40 homers, 129 RBIs and a .317 batting mark.

May cracked 34 homers, knocked in 94 runs and batted .253.

Rose, topping the 200-hit level for the fifth straight year, had a .316 average and 15 homers. Carbo hit .310 with 21 homers and McRae .248 with eight homers while platooning in left field.

Tommy Helms, the acrobatic little second baseman who describes himself as a "hub cap" in the Machine, figures to boost his .237 average.

Woody Woodward, .223, will start at shortstop. Dave Concepcion, .260, another 1970 rookie who shared short with Woodward and Darrel Cheyney, .232, has been out with a broken thumb.

Jimmy Stewart, Ty Cline, Angel Bravo and Pat Corralos are the returning shock troops and pinch-hit specialist Willie Smith has been added in a trade with the Chicago Cubs.

Has Porter Signed?

By D. BYRON YAKE

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Condors of the American Basketball Association say Howard Porter is under contract to them.

Porter's agent, Max Shapiro, says he is negotiating with the Chicago Bulls of the rival National Basketball Association for the Villanova star's services.

The 6-foot-8 Porter, voted the Most Valuable Player in the NCAA tournament, in which Villanova finished second, has not commented on the reports. The Condors don't know where he is.

Operations Director Mark Binstein of the Condors said Monday at a news conference that Porter's contract was acquired from the ABA. He would not say when it was signed.

Binstein said Porter will receive a multi-year pact calling for "far, far in excess of what any other" player ever got from the Pittsburgh franchise.

Binstein says Porter's contract is for less than $1 million. The signing of Porter has been tinged with mystery.

On Jan. 27, Bill Brill, sports editor of the Roanoke, Va., Times reported that he had seen a contract signed by Porter and ABA Commissioner Jack Dolph in Dolph's briefcase in Greensboro, N.C. The contract reportedly was dated Dec. 16, 1970.

Brill said the contract called for $350,000 for three years.

The announcement of Porter's signing Monday coincided with the NBA draft in which he was tabbed by the Bulls.

Porter, who scored 25 points in the NCAA championship game with UCLA, averaged 24.4 points a game and 15.1 rebounds for Villanova this season.

Carolínians Among Drafted

NEW YORK (AP) — Phoenix chose John Roche of South Carolina in the first round of the National Basketball Association draft Monday. Roche was the only Carolinian player to be picked before the third round.

Mike Gale of Elizabeth City State was picked by Chicago in the third round. Tom Owens of South Carolina went to San Diego in the fourth round, and Randy Denton of Duke was chosen by Boston, also in the fourth.

Others from the Carolinas: Lee Dedmon of North Carolina, by Los Angeles, fifth; Gil McGregor of Wake Forest, Cincinnati, sixth; Charlie Davis, Wake Forest, Cleveland, eighth; Rick Katherman, Duke, San Diego, eighth; John Ribbock, South Carolina, Boston, eighth; and Jackie Dinkins, Voorhees, Chicago, ninth.

Varied Comments From Rest Of ACC Schools

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Regret. Little surprise. Concern about what it may do to athletic schedules.

Those were the reactions of Atlantic Coast Conference sports figures to South Carolina's announcement Monday that it is withdrawing from the ACC Aug. 15 in a dispute over athletic eligibility requirements.

ACC Commissioner Bob James said that a special meeting to discuss problems of the conference probably would be called before the next regularly scheduled gathering in May.

R. R. Ritchie, formerly faculty chairman of athletics at Clemson, said, "Clemson should stay in the ACC and I hope we do. I see no reason why we should get out."

Bill McClellan, Clemson athletic director, said he had no comment.

Clemson, like South Carolina, has started to recruit on the basis of the NCAA requirement of a protected 1.6 of a 4.0 grade point average instead of the stiffer ACC requirement of the 1.6 plus 800 on the college board entrance tests. Clemson announced two weeks ago that it would not withdraw from the conference.

Willis R. Casey, athletic director at North Carolina State, said, "I'm sorry they're withdrawing from the conference." He refused to go into specifics of the dispute, saying only, "They (South Carolina) preferred that some things be done differently."

Eddie Cameron, Duke athletic director, said: "Naturally, I am sorry to see the conference broken up by any member withdrawing. We at Duke have no preconceived plan now that it has happened. We will discuss what we will do with the athletic council and the administration and make an announcement when a policy is formulated."

Homer Rice, North Carolina athletic director, said he knew things were brewing, but the announcement was still "a little bit of a shock." He said that although scheduling agreements for major athletic events are made far in advance, contracts are not usually signed until the year of the event. He said the status of scheduling arrangements will have to be decided at a league meeting.

Eugene F. Corrigan, Virginia athletic director: "I am not surprised. I don't think anybody is. But I think it's a shame that they have taken this course of action." He said he doubted Virginia would play South Carolina twice in a season in basketball if it is no longer in the ACC. Conference teams usually play a home-and-home series.

Dr. Jack Sawyer, faculty chairman of athletics at Wake Forest: "I hate to see one of the original schools pull out of the conference. Scheduling is something that will have to be kicked around quite a bit."

Lefty Driesell, Maryland basketball coach, said he "kind of suspected" South Carolina would withdraw, but said he felt the ACC would not be weaker now that it has come about.

Jim Kehoe, athletic director at Maryland, said: "It would seem more sensible to compete with teams 150 miles away than one 300 miles away, before audiences which relate to alumni and fan support."

Kehoe pointed out that Maryland is the most distant ACC school from South Carolina and indicated the school will have to assess the situation carefully. He added, "I'm sorry the matter couldn't be resolved. But realistically, South Carolina had gone too far down the road to remain in the conference."

Worry Clinic Prevention Is More Efficient

Arnold wonders about the influence of pornographic pictures on teen-agers. Plus the lurid sex movies from Denmark which depict sexual relations between nude men and women. Does "free speech" demand that such smut materials be allowed? Infidelity, rape and sexual perversions have reached an all-time high in America. Why?

By GEORGE W. CRANE
Ph. D., M.D.
Case Q-513: Arnold B., aged 20, is a college senior.

"Dr. Crane," he began, "does pornography actually increase the likelihood of illicit sexual behavior?"

"For example, the President's committee investigated the lewd pictures and salacious movies of raw sex."

"But some of the investigators seem to find no evidence of increased sexual desire by the viewers."

"Is that psychologically correct?"

Sex Propaganda
No, the present flood of pornography definitely increases the public's interest in sex.

And showing the lewd pictures, plus movies of actual sexual relations, stimulates an undue indulgence therein.

There is an old law of advertising psychology which we stress in our college courses on that subject. It says:

Repetition makes reputation!"

To bombard people with such provocative sexual movies and lurid magazines, just keeps up the constant "repetition" that sooner or later produces sex action, as rape and erotic perversions.

It is thus malarky to say that repeated exposure to the same type of visual sex copy does not produce acceptance and then erotic action.

All our department store ads in newspapers would be futile and a waste of money if people weren't thus stimulated to buy as a result of constant advertising!

In fact, the essential law in education is likewise repetition of the multiplication tables or new vocabulary and irregular verbs until the pupils adopt those new habits of thinking.

"Free speech" is the usual cry of those who want to continue selling lewd movies and magazines.

But our judges have ruled that "free speech" does not include the right of anybody to yell "Fire" in a theater just to cause panic and death in a resulting mad stampede for the exits.

Likewise, "free speech" does not entitle New York City smut firms to fire up the sexual passions of teenagers by Danish movies or actual sex orgies on the theater stage.

California smut firms are also mailing out lewd literature and offering movies of a similar nature, whose only justification is its attempt to make money for the smut purveyors.

"But, Dr. Crane," somebody may argue, "will not the pornographic peddlers ultimately cause a revulsion and thus immunize people against such vulgarity?"

That is partly true.

But letting smallpox or polio run rampant in worldwide epidemics will also produce immunity in the minority who survive.

But think of the terrific death rate meanwhile!
So we medics advocate early vaccination against such plagues to protect both children and adults.

Applied to pornography, it is also wise to stop the dissemination of this lurid sex virus at the source.

"Prevention is more efficient than later painful cure," is a medical axiom that applies to pornography.

Infidelity, rape and sexual perversions are more rampant nowadays than ever in American history. Why?

If you think pornography is not a contributing factor, you lack psychological experience with life!

Shows Legs To Prove A Point
KENT, Ohio (AP) — "Drop your pants," an Akron attorney told his client. The seven women on the jury gasped and Municipal Court Judge Robert Kent shuffled papers in embarrassment.

The defendant was on trial for driving while intoxicated. Streetsboro police had charged him after they said he was unable to walk a straight line to show he was sober.

Attorney Roger Dipaolo claimed his client could not walk a straight line at any time because of leg wounds suffered in World War II. The client dropped his pants and the jury saw the man's deformed legs. The case was dismissed.

Scott Opines Demo Governors Won A Bigger Role

By MELVIN LANG
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina Gov. Bob Scott says the first conference of Democratic governors in five years has left the state executives confident they'll have a stronger voice within their party and in the 1972 election campaign. "They've got the smell of victory coming, especially after being literally broken to pieces in 1968," Scott said in an interview. Scott served as chairman of a meeting in St. Louis Saturday and Sunday attended by 17 governors and representatives of three other state parties. The governors voted to meet quarterly, with the next session scheduled for Omaha, Neb., in late June. Under Scott's leadership, the governors voted—and were granted approval by Democratic National Chairman Lawrence O'Brien—to seek a strategy meeting with congressional leaders and Democratic mayors in Washington April 22, a governors' liaison position on the national committee staff, and more voice in the nominating convention.

Scott feels the demands by the governors result from Democratic gains in the 1970 elections—a feeling he characterized as "by golly, we did all right"—and a "new breed" of governors, youthful and aggressive, who "recognize that in today's scheme of things, both in legislation and in politics, that those who organize behind common interests are the ones that generally get things done."

O'Brien is serving as a catalyst for today's governors.

Scott said, in that "they respect him. He doesn't fit into anybody's ideological or philosophical pocket."

Scott compared the Democratic party after the GOP sweep in 1968 to "a picture puzzle having been dropped and the pieces scattered all over." "The essential elements of the Democratic party were still there," the governor said. "They weren't lost, or broken. They had simply been pulled apart, scattered. Larry O'Brien is the man who has got to go around and pick up the pieces."

Scott added, "I'm trying, too, to help put this bloc of governors together. One right good sized piece in this whole puzzle is the governors, and their unity will go a long way toward helping fill this in."

said, showed him that "most of the governors are willing to come together and work hard for the party, to sit down with their congressional delegations and stop feuding."

The proposed April meeting in Washington is a result of that attitude, he said. Its success apparently hinges on congressional acceptance, Scott said, of the realization "that we have an opportunity to put together a program as an alternative to the President's program and in addition to the President's program...to say this a Democratic program."

"So, let's get together and see if we can't come up with something that would be a meaningful program, that can be Democratically initiated, sponsored and enacted by the Congress and that would have the support of the Democratic governors."

As an example of their quest for more internal power, Scott said the governors were seeking membership on the rules and credentials committees of the national convention.

In the past, Scott said, "There's been the feeling that most of the policy and the running of the convention and all these things, anything relating to national party matters and policy, strategy, et cetera, have come from the Senate and the House in Washington...We now have the mechanism through the caucus to have understanding and rapport with the national committee."

Scott and O'Brien, prior to the St. Louis meeting, "had already been making moves, seeking our support, and he'd been doing it individually. He's trying to get us involved more."

The North Carolina governor interpreted his colleagues' concern about the national party as an indication of growing interest throughout the nation.

"I sense that here in our own state, enthusiasm among the Democrats. It wasn't apparent two years ago. My gosh, a couple of years ago it was just negative."

"You couldn't get anybody to offer a ray of hope about the possibilities of the Democratic party, and then the '70 elections made everybody come alive," Scott said. "Then, suddenly, we're not as bad off as we thought."

Schedule Shad Festival At Grifton On April 17

GRIFTON — A shad festival — the first for Grifton — will be held April 17, according to Ken Carter, general chairman of the event.

The festival will feature beauty queens, a parade, fish fry, afternoon games and contests, and a street dance.

Brochures with information on shad fishing and a map showing best fishing locations will be distributed, as will be recipes for cooking shad in various taste-tested ways.

A drawing for a creek boat will be held at intermission during the judging for the Shad Queen.

Tickets for the drawing may be obtained from any Grifton merchant or civic club member.

Contestants for the "Miss Shad" event must be between the ages of 16 and 25, should be Grifton area residents, and may be sponsored by any club or business. Approximately 20 candidates have been entered so far, according to Carter.

The festival is being sponsored by the Grifton Jaycees, with other organizations cooperating through the Grifton Resources Improvement Program.

The following organizations have agreed to participate in the planning of the festival: Jaycees — overall plans, hospitality, entertainment, including parade, games, Shad Queen contest and the street dance;

Lions Club and Shriners — fish fry; Rescue Squad — safety, sanitation and traffic control;

Grifton Garden Club — pre-festival town clean up; Grifton Extension Homemakers Club — shad recipes; Shad boat tickets Chamber of Commerce; GRIP — publicity, including brochures and bumper stickers.

RALEIGH (AP) — Legislation to increase North Carolina's minimum wage from $1.25 to $1.60 an hour is near enactment.

The Senate passed the administration-backed bill Monday night and sent it to the House for concurrence in an amendment by Sen. Zebulon Alley, D-Haywood.

Under Alley's amendment, the bill would not apply to part-time employees who work 16 hours or less a week in an establishment having less than three fulltime employees at one time.

Alley said this will help many students obtain part-time jobs in small stores. He estimated the bill would bring wage increases to 50,000 persons in North Carolina.

Sen. Hamilton Horton, R-Forsyth, cast the only dissenting vote.

The minimum wage would be increased to $1.45 an hour July 1 and to $1.60 an hour July 1 of next year. It would not affect farm laborers, domestic workers, educational, charitable and non-profit organization workers.

Sen. Jyles Coggins, D-Wake, told the Senate, "We're far behind time in granting this wage increase."

Meanwhile, the Senate passed and sent to the House a bill that would allow the containment of livestock running at large. It would give persons who contained the animals the right to damages from the rightful owner.

The Senate and House approved a resolution commending the North Carolina and Duke basketball teams and Wake Forest basketball star Charlie Davis.

Patrol and the Wildlife Resources Commission at $3,258.34 each.

Scott and the council said the elimination of discounts will result in "substantial additional costs to the taxpayers of this state."

The council also approved the purchase of 550 passenger vehicles at prices ranging from $2,625.99 to $2,888.21. State law requires the council to act on the purchase of all automobiles costing more than $2,500. The governor and the council approved the introduction of a bill in the General Assembly to raise from $2,500 to $3,500 the figure at which it must approve vehicle purchases.

State Purchasing Director R. D. McMillan said the state buys about 3,000 cars a year but will purchase less this year because it bought a number of cars at last year's lower prices in anticipation of the price hike.

In addition to the 550 passenger cars approved by the council, the state is buying 100 cars for which the price did not exceed $2,500, McMillan said.

Meanwhile, the governor and council approved the use of regular civilian license plates on 14 state-owned cars. This is the first list of cars approved since the General Assembly enacted a law dealing with the issue. The law permits the council to designate which state cars will be unmarked.

The 14 cars include two for the governor's mansion, one for the governor's office, one for the Good Neighbor Council, three for the Human Relations Division of the Department of Public Instruction, four by the Consumer Protection Division of the attorney general's office and three by the Central Motor Pool for use of state employees in emergencies.

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina is having to pay about $1,000 more for each new car it buys because auto manufacturers have eliminated discounts for large volume purchases.

Republican Forum Here On April 2

The "Republican Forum" for the First District area, being held in coordination with the Young Republicans of Pitt County, will take place Friday at 8:00 p.m. in Room 132 of New Austin Building, East Carolina University.

Rev. Billy R. Cuthrell, coordinator for the First District area, announced this is one of ten "Republican Forums" to be held across North Carolina during March, April and May.

The "Forum" consists of a panel which makes a short presentation on the various subjects to be discussed. This is followed by comments and suggestions from the floor.

All the sessions, under the sponsorship of the State Young Republican organization, are open to the general public, regardless of political persuasion, Cuthrell noted.

Areas for discussion will include: Fresh ideas for the legislative delegation; ideas for the State Republican platform which is to be adopted in the fall of 1971; a sounding board for the State and National Administrations; ideas on how to attract wider participation in the Republican Party; and discussions to give people across the state an opportunity to hear how the Republican Party operates and what it stands for.

City Educators At 2 Local Workshops

Two of the series of workshops being conducted during the school year by the Greenville City Schools are now underway with sessions held for three hour periods weekly.

Dr. Cleet C. Cleetwood, superintendent of the Greenville City Schools, reported that a "Drug Abuse Workshop" of 30 hours duration began March 10 and will continue for a ten week period.

Conducted between 4:00 and 7:00 p.m. in Room 142, Minges Coliseum at East Carolina University, the workshop is conducted under the leadership of Dr. Lionel Kendrick of the Health and Physical Education Department.

A total of 35 teachers and other staff members, such as guidance counselors, are regular attendees at this workshop. Of this total, 15 are from Rose High School, 11 from E. B. Aycock Junior High, two each from Eastern, Elmhurst, Sadie Sautler and South Greenville Elementary Schools, and one from Third Street School.

A second workshop now in progress on a continuing series basis is the one on "Behavioral Techniques: Modification and Reinforcement." This group meets each Wednesday, with the first meeting having begun on March 16. Hours are 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. in the mobile unit at Elmhurst School occupied by Mrs. Josephine Brookshire, a teacher at the school.

This workshop has 17 teachers and school personnel enrolled, from Agnes Fullilove Kindergarten School, Eastern, Elmhurst, Sadie Sautler, South Greenville and Third Street Elementary Schools.

Charles R. Ross, Director of Elementary Education and Gayner Mills, Autistic Teacher, are also participants.

This workshop is under the direction of Dr. Steve Tacker, Ph.D., a member of the Psychology Department at East Carolina University.

Seed Ban May See An Appeal

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A State Agriculture Department ruling which prohibits Green Brothers Seed Company from selling "all seed handled" at its Fuquay-Varina facility may be headed for an appeal to State Superior Court.

North Carolina State Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham ruled Monday that the company's outlet had misrepresented corn seed sold for 1971 planting. Graham's order prohibited the Green Brothers from selling any kind of seed at the Fuquay-Varina facility as of midnight Monday.

However, late Monday night Howard Manning, Green Brothers attorney, told the Associated Press that an appeal to State Superior Court was "under consideration."

Earlier this month a two-day hearing was held to determine whether seed corn had been misrepresented as high-yielding hybrid. Graham said Monday that he found that the misrepresentation did take place and that an employee of Green Brothers had mislabeled the corn after it was rebagged.

The company, which is based in Nashville, Tenn., has major operations in Tennessee, Idaho, Texas and North Carolina. It is one of the nation's primary suppliers of seed.

The Fuquay-Varina facility serves as Green Brothers supply point for North Carolina and part of South Carolina. Monday's order permits the company to ship seed into North Carolina for distribution through other agencies.

The hearing was prompted by a number of complaints from growers and dealers in eastern North Carolina who said they received second-generation corn after ordering hybrid.

Graham said: "I regret this action, but after carefully weighing the testimony of all witnesses at the hearing, I feel that this is the only course of action open to me under the North Carolina seed law."

During the March 5-6 hearing, company officials and employees denied all allegations. The company contended that the late Dock Graham of Goldsboro, who was identified by most of the farmers as the person who sold the seed, was not an employee of Green Brothers.

Both contentions were rejected by Commissioner Graham.

In the matter of salesman Jerry N. Watson of Raleigh and Green Brothers state manager William L. Jones of Raleigh, Graham found that both had "knowingly and repeatedly made false oral representations" about the disputed seed.

Moose Lodge Names Officers Next Week

Greenville. Moose were reminded last night that annual elections to the board of officers would be held next Monday night.

Seats to be filled include those of Governor, Junior Governor, Prelate, Treasurer and those of two Trustees.

Secretary Edwin M. Baldree reported the ritual team from Greenville attending the international competition of the Legion of the Moose in San Antonio, last weekend, placed twelfth in the field, the same ranking they won last year.

"The team's score was higher than in 1970," said Baldree, "but everybody else improved, too."

Attention was called to a Legion Ceremonial scheduled for late April honoring James Harris of Greenville. A Past-Governor of the Greenville Moose Lodge, Harris is currently serving as Grand North Moose of Enoch Legion, members of the fraternal lodges in North Carolina east of Raleigh holding the second degree of the Order.

Sixteen candidates were added to the rolls of the local lodge. New members inducted Monday night included: William L. Allen, James A. Baxter, A. L. Bobbitt Jr., James C. Clark, Elmer Gene Crisp, Robert Dorney, Van Frye, Kenneth Haddock.

Hugh T. Hardee Jr. served as Class Representative.

Stock And Market Reports

RALEIGH (AP) — (NCDA) — The North Carolina hog market today is mostly steady. Tops of 16.25-16.75 Rocky Mount; 15.50-16.50 Kinston, New Bern, Benson, Newton Grove, Albemarle, Lumberton; 16.00-16.25 Wilson; 15.50-16.00 Siler City, Denton, Bethel; 16.50 Salisbury, Mount Olive; 16.25 Greensboro.

RALEIGH (AP) — (NCDA) — On the North Carolina hen market today the trend is steady to slightly stronger on heavy types. Supplies are fully adequate for a fair demand. Too few light type sales reported to quote prices. Heavies at farm 11 1/2 to 12 cents per pound. FOB plants 13 1/2 to 14 cents, mostly 13 1/2.

NEW YORK (AP) — Trading bustled today, but stock market prices went almost nowhere slipping fractionally back and forth.

The 11 a.m. Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks dropped 0.23 to 903.25.

Advances led declines on the New York Stock Exchange by a modest margin.

Analysts attributed the market's indecision to investor hesitation. They said investors were concerned about upcoming first-quarter earnings reports and about the persistent sluggishness in the economy.

Big Board prices included Sony, off 1 1/2 at 23 3/4; Natomax, up 3/4 at 61; Allegheny Corp., up 1 1/2 at 16; Ethyl Corp. up 1 1/2 at 28 3/4; Bausch & Lomb, off 2 1/2 at 87 3/4; and Phelps Dodge, up 3/4 at 47.

Assign Patrolman To Process-Serving

If you live in Pitt or Edgecombe County and fail to respond voluntarily to letters from the Department of Motor Vehicles you may be meeting Highway Patrolman J. H. Withers Jr., sooner than you think.

Trooper Withers, a Harnett County native with 24 years service with the Highway Patrol has been transferred to Greenville, where he will act as a process server in the two-county District 5.

Troop A commander, Capt. R. F. Williamson, said Ptl. Withers is the first trooper in Troop A to be assigned exclusively to such duty, although similar positions have been established in some of the other six Patrol areas.

With one officer assigned to handle the processes, Capt. Williamson said, it should free regular patrolmen to spend more of their on-duty time patrolling the highways.

"Process serving," Ptl. Withers explained, includes serving auto and drivers license revocations. "We are averaging between 180 and 200 per month," in Pitt and Edgecombe Counties, the officer explained.

"People could make it easier on themselves and on the Patrol also," according to Withers, "if they would respond to letters the department (N.C. Department of Motor Vehicles) sends them."

The officer explained for example that auto licenses are picked up because of unsatisfied judgments or lapse or cancellation of liability insurance, while drivers licenses are taken for "numerous things," including unsatisfied judgments. An individual's auto license could be picked up if he fails to return a form sent by the Motor Vehicles Department if he cancels his auto liability insurance with one company and purchases a policy with another firm. Simply returning the MVD form would prevent this, Trooper Withers explained.

Before joining the Highway Patrol in 1947, Withers farmed and served as a staff-sergeant with the U.S. Army in Europe during World War II. He participated in the Battle of the Bulge and in the campaign which established the Remagen Bridgehead and was awarded a Purple Heart. The Patrolman's first duty station was in Fountain in Pitt County where he served until February 1948 when he was transferred to Rocky Mount. He was stationed in Rocky Mount until August 1957, when he was transferred to Columbia. He served there until his transfer to Greenville.

The Patrolman is married to the former Katherine Joyner of Nashville and they have three children: Katherine Ann, 20 a junior at N.C. State University; James Harvey, III, a freshman at N.C. State; and Kimberly Mae, 15.

Ptl. Withers is a member of the American Legion and the Episcopal Church.

The family lives at 202 Kirkland Dr.

Will Dedicate New Garden On Thursday

NEW BERN — A new garden in the complex of Tryon Palace is being dedicated in New Bern Thursday afternoon, April 1. Miss Gertrude Carraway, director of Tryon Palace, has announced that the Town and Parterre Gardens of the John Wright Stanly House will be dedicated.

Richard K. Weibel of Roslyn, New York, landscape architect, who designed the two gardens, will speak on the occasion. Mrs. J. Samuel Mitchener of Raleigh, chairman of the Tryon Palace Commission's garden committee, will be in charge of a program in the Maude Moore Latham Memorial Garden during the afternoon.

Also scheduled for April 1 is a dinner meeting for members and guests at Ramada Inn. Dr. Richard F. Gibbs, Executive Secretary of the North Carolina American Revolution Bicentennial Commission, will be chief speaker. Mrs. John A. Kellenberger, of Greensboro, commission chairman, will preside over the meeting.

Dr. Gibbs is expected to mention plans for future commemoration of events, to include the first provincial convention held in New Bern on August 25, 1774. This convention was the first anywhere in America to be called and held in defiance of British orders.

Commenting on the gardens, Miss Carraway noted that tulips are now at their peak in the Latham and Kellenberger gardens. "The tulips in the Stanly gardens apparently are delaying their peak of color until April 1, when they will be dedicated," she said.

Ford Recalls Its "Pintos"

DETROIT (AP) — About 165,000 American owners of Ford's new Pinto are affected by the automaker's announcement that virtually all the minicars are being recalled for an engine defect. For many of the motorists, it's the second time around.

A total of 204,000 cars in the United States are involved about 165,000 of them in customers' hands and the rest in dealers' lots or in transit, Ford said.

In addition, some 13,100 Canadian Pintos and 2,100 shipped overseas must be recalled, the nation's second largest automaker announced.

The recall Monday, due to a defect in antipollution equipment that could allow gasoline fumes to collect and explode under the hood, involves all Pintos built between their introduction last summer and March 13. Some 7,500 Pintos built after March 13 need not be recalled, Ford said.

Last October Ford recalled some 26,000 Pintos because of complaints about accelerator pedals sticking when the throttle was opened more than halfway.

The latest recall was by Ford officials after 90 to 100 explosive backfires were reported, with damage ranging from scorched air cleaners to major charring of the car's front end. Fires never reached the passenger compartment and no injuries were reported, a Ford spokesman said.

Ford declined to disclose the possible cost of the recall but said Pinto owners would have to spend about half an hour in a service garage. The spokesman termed it a "very minor, simple" procedure.

Arrested 15 In School Disorder

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — About 100 black and white pupils at Hillsborough High School hurled chairs and obscenities at each other in a lunchroom racial outbreak Monday that ended with several bruised and 15 arrested.

Police were called to break up the disturbance that climaxed a week of racial tension at the predominantly white school.

The fighting reportedly was triggered by the arrest of three black militants on trespassing charges at a restaurant near the school.

Shaw, Garrison Still Fighting

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Dist. Atty. Jim Garrison and Clay Shaw have filed briefs in U.S. District Court concerning Shaw's request that the district attorney be prevented from prosecuting him on perjury charges.

Judge Herbert W. Christenberry took the motions under advisement Monday. The judge has already issued a temporary injunction and is weighing the possibility of issuing a permanent one.

The perjury charge stems from Shaw's testimony at his 1969 trial in which he was acquitted of a charge of conspiring to assassinate President John F. Kennedy.

In his brief, Shaw reiterated his claim that Garrison is unjustly persecuting him. Garrison renewed his statement that he holds no personal malice toward Shaw.

Asked how he felt about the Army, Calley said, "I still feel strongly about the Army. This nation needs a strong Army. From what I've seen of the world and communism, we definitely need an Army."
