Son 'Felt Like Calley'

CLEVELAND (UPI) —The mother of a Cleveland Marine currently serving a prison sentence for murder in the shooting of 16 Vietnamese civilians in Da Nang in February, 1967, said Saturday her son told her he felt "just like" Lt. William L. Calley Jr. He said they both acted under orders.

Mrs. Roberta Green said her son, Pfc. Samuel G. Green Jr., called her after the announcement Calley had been found guilty of premeditated murder of unarmed Vietnamese civilians at My Lai in 1968.

"He said he felt just like Calley," Mrs. Green said. "He said they weren't out there doing this on their own. They were under orders. And this is what they get."

Green was convicted by a court-martial in connection with the Da Nang murders and was sentenced last Aug. 15 to five years in prison. He was sent to the Portsmouth, N.H., naval prison, but his sentence later was reduced to one year. He is scheduled to be released no later than June 3 this year.

Egypt Says Oil Found

CAIRO (UPI) —Egyptian scientists have made a major oil strike 50 miles south of El Alamein, an important battle area during World War II, the Middle East News Agency (MENA) said Saturday.

It quoted oil sources saying that the new oil reserve located near the Qattara depression west of Cairo was believed to be the biggest in Egypt and among the purest in the world.

The find was announced Saturday when President Anwar Sadat received Dr. Aziz Sidky, deputy premier for production and trade, and Abdalla Marzban, the minister of economy and foreign trade, MENA said.

It said Sidky presented Sadat with a specimen of the oil. The news agency said oil's 41.5 degree gravity was one of the highest figures anywhere.

The oil was tapped at a depth of 9,100 feet. Drilling will start Sunday in the oil-bearing layer to see how deep it is and to estimate its potential, MENA said.

Prepare For Leaving

SAIGON (UPI)—The 3rd Marine Amphibious Force Headquarters began a standown Saturday in preparation for departure to Okinawa, military spokesmen said. It once commanded the largest segment of American troops in South Vietnam.

Marine strength in Vietnam will be reduced by May 1 to one regimental landing team plus an air group under Phase 6 of President Nixon's troop withdrawal program, military sources said.

Peak Marine strength in Vietnam was 81,800 men. The 3rd Marine Division, however, was withdrawn from Vietnam late in 1969 and in March of 1970, control of U.S. troops in the five-province I Military Region was handed over to the U.S. Army's 24th Corps at Da Nang.

As of March 25 there were 19,500 Marines remaining in Vietnam. The number was expected to decline to fewer than 6,000 by mid-May, military sources said.

Dissident Author Ill

MOSCOW (UPI)—Dissident author Andrei Amalrik has contracted tubercular meningitis in the labor camps where he is serving three years for spreading anti-Soviet propaganda, friends of his family said Saturday.

The friends said Amalrik told his wife, Guysel, in a letter that he collapsed about a month ago while being transferred from one camp to another and was in a coma for 10 days.

Mrs. Amalrik, a painter, said she will write to the interior minister to ask for special reconsideration of her husband's case because of his illness.

Amalrik is the author of "Will the Soviet Union Survive Until 1984?," a book which has been published abroad but not in Russia. He was sentenced to the camps at a trial in the Siberian city of Sverdlovsk last May.

Education Came Late

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI)—William Fados, 105, says his education came 'better late than never.' He didn't learn his ABC's until a couple of years ago when he enrolled in the adult education program here.

Fados, the son of a Haitian banana boat worker and a Georgia peach worker, now tells elementary school children they "should be 'shamed if yah drop out."

"I never got an education 'cause the folks were poor'," he told the children who had showered him with a birthday card party Friday. "But you kids are mighty lucky 'cause you got free schoolin' and should be 'shamed if yah drop out."

"An uneducated man never made it," he said, explaining his experiences of "every place I go, the man say 'no schoolin' —no work'."

"What these kids need today is lovin', kindness and courtesy," he said. "Then we gonna have real good kids."

One of his biggest thrills he said was learning to write his name on checks.

"The man always had to hold my hand so I could put the 'X' on my checks," he said.

Personal Review Of Calley Case

Nixon Plans Final Judgment

By EUGENE V. RISHER

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (UPI)—President Nixon announced Saturday he would personally review the murder conviction of Lt. William L. Calley Jr. and make the final judgment on his sentence.

Nixon acted after an unprecedented outpouring of public sentiment in behalf of the 27-year-old infantry officer who was sentenced to life imprisonment last Wednesday for the murder of 22 Vietnamese civilians at My Lai.

John D. Ehrlichman, a top Nixon aide, told newsmen that due to "widespread public interest" the President felt that a "different quality of review— non-legal, non-technical— ought to be part of this process before any sentence becomes operative."

Heart Quality

Exactly what extra quality this Presidential review would bring to the controversial case — the longest in the history of military trials—is "in the heart of the man," Ehrlichman said.

Ehrlichman said the President was taking the action under his authority as Commander-in-Chief and the superior convening officer. Ordinarily the secretary of the Army would make the final review.

He said Nixon made his decision Friday night after lengthy study and conversations with several cabinet officers.

Ehrlichman said Nixon's decision should in no way reflect on the merits of the case.

"The significance of this announcement today is that before the sentence is put into operation the President will personally review the case and will make the final decision," Ehrlichman said.

"The President here is in effect evoking his inherent powers as Commander-in-Chief in a review process that is not technically legal. He intends to add that extra legal ingredient to the review process prior to the time the sentence goes into effect."

Presidential Order

On Thursday, the President ordered that Calley be removed from the stockade and confined to his quarters at Ft. Benning, Ga., until the review is completed.

The first step of the review would be for the convening authority, in this case Lt. Gen. Albert Connor, commander of the 3rd Army—to have his judge advocate examine the military court's findings on both the guilt or innocence of Calley and his sentence.

The case would then proceed through the Court of Military Review and the Court of Military Appeals. Then the case would go to the President instead of the secretary of the Army, the usual procedure. The sentence could be reduced but not raised at any step in the process.

Ehrlichman said he had no indication of how long it would be before the case reaches Nixon but estimated it would take 30 to 60 days to sufficiently prepare records of the lengthy trial so that the review process could begin.

Observers at Ft. Benning estimated it would be at least a year before the case reaches the Court of Military Appeals and that Nixon might have to have second term before he can take it up if he waits until appeals are completed.

Hanoi Offensive Launched Early?

Heavy Combat In Vietnam Highlands

By KENNETH BRADDICK

SAIGON (UPI)—Field reports Saturday said South Vietnamese defenders and U.S. air power have killed almost 1,200 North Vietnamese in four days of heavy combat around Fire Base 6 on South Vietnam's Central Highlands. Hanoi appeared to have launched its spring offensive early.

"The war is here," said Maj. Jerry Wagner, 31, of Stuart, Fla., commander of the U.S. 57th Assault Helicopter Company operating out of the main Central Highlands base at Pleiku and a veteran of the big Communist Tet offensive in 1968. "I used to talk a lot about Tet '68. I don't anymore. Charlie (the Communists) has got his stuff together."

Death Tolls

Field reports said 1,180 North Vietnamese had been killed at Fire Base 6. South Vietnamese losses were placed at 143 killed or wounded and two Americans were reported lost in the fight. Most of the Communist dead were apparently the result of U.S. air raids.

U.S. and South Vietnamese commanders had said the Allied offensives into Cambodia last year and Laos last month had wrecked Hanoi's supply lines and preempted any major spring offensive by North Vietnamese units. But the ferocity of the attack that began last Wednesday on Fire Base 6 indicated that some North Vietnamese were well equipped for a large assault on at least one important Allied position.

Fire Base 6 is situated 12 miles east of a point where the borders of Cambodia, South Vietnam and Laos meet, and it commands control of major supply lines. It defends the South Vietnamese base at Dak To where one of the big battles of the Vietnam War was fought in 1967.

Maj Gen. Ngo Dzu, commander of South Vietnamese troops on the highlands, said as many as 4,500 North Vietnamese troops were in the area of Fire Base 6 and that his men must hold the outpost along a ridgeline at all costs.

"If we lose the ridge, Dak To will be under siege," Dzu told UPI correspondent Robert Sullivan. "If they can take (Fire Base) 6 they can dominate Dak To."

Kremlin Stake

By United Press International

Haim Herzog, Israel's former chief of army intelligence, said Saturday that Soviet involvement in Egypt was now so massive that an Arab failure in the Middle East could topple the Kremlin leadership.

In Jordan, Palestinian guerrillas resumed their military offensive by blowing up bridges and railway tracks near the capital of Amman, a Jordanian Interior Ministry spokesman said.

Herzog, a retired army general and military commentator for the Voice of Israel radio, said in a broadcast from Jerusalem that Soviet penetration of Egypt "has been conducted with a single-mindedness as impressive as it is alarming."

He was commenting on a report by the Institute of Strategic Studies in London this week which said the Soviets had supplied Egypt with $2 billion worth of military hardware in the past year alone.

"There is no precedent in modern times, since the conclusion of World War II,

Suspended ECU Students Will Be Reinstated

Dean of Students at East Carolina University, James H. Tucker, Saturday announced that ECU students suspended in the wake of arrests made this past week were to be reinstated pending preliminary and formal hearings.

This action is based on the advice given university officials by two assistant attorneys general from the office of the Justice Department in Raleigh.

The two assistant attorneys general, Andrew Vanore and Lester Chalmers, spent three days in Greenville this week to study the situation.

Dean Tucker noted the two men had "advised university administrators this was a proper and legal procedure, and should be followed to protect the rights of students in every way."

"In consideration of academic progress and also in consideration of faculty and those students who will be conducting the hearings," Dean Tucker commented, "and the fact that spring break begins April 8, neither the faculty members or the students involved in the process would be available for another week."

Students have already been advised of the reinstatement in writing, according to Dean Tucker, and on Monday they will be called in individually and advised they are being reinstated on a probational basis pending the hearings.

Each student will also be advised of their privileges and rights, and it will be suggested to them they might want to advise their parents who in turn might want to get legal counsel for them.

Under this arrangement, the students can go to class without further interruption of their academic progress.

Dr. Jenkins, referring to the decision, said "it will take several days to determine each student's guilt or innocence.

"In order to protect those who may be innocent," the university head commented, "these students are being permitted to go to class on a probationary basis pending hearings."

He observed "we must work under the philosophy that a person is innocent until proven guilty. We strongly suspect there are one or two of these students who are completely innocent."

Both Dr. Jenkins and Dean Tucker deny that pressure from the Student Government Association or other groups had any bearing on the decision which was recommended by representatives from the State Justice Department.

It was also reported that ECU Business Manager Clifton Moore is in receipt of a letter from the State Auditor which states that funds of the Student Government Association cannot be transferred from the bank in which the funds are currently deposited to another bank. Action of this nature cannot be undertaken without the approval of the State Auditor, as these funds are considered state government money.

India Claims 'Atrocities' In E. Pakistan Civil War Conflict

NEW DELHI (UPI)—All-India Radio broadcast reports Saturday of Pakistani air firce bombing raids and atrocities against East Pakistani rebels. Soviet President Nikolai V. Podgorny appealed to Pakistan for an end to "the bloodshed, the repression."

Podgorny said in a message to Pakistan President Agha Mohammed Yahya Khan that the civil war in East Pakistan was viewed with "great alarm" in the Soviet Union, the Soviet Union, the Soviet news agency Tass said in a dispatch from Moscow.

All-India Radio said the Pakistani air force bombed Chuadanga town in Kushtia district less than 18 miles from the Indian border Saturday. The broadcast said atrocity reports continued to come in and a correspondent who returned from the rebel-held town of Jessore reported the hospital was jammed with bombing and shooting victims.

An authoritative Indian government source said India is trying to cut the Pakistan army's air link to embattled East Pakistan. Pakistan accused India of also interfering with its sea traffic by harassing a merchant ship.

The Indian government source said the government was trying to persuade Ceylon to refuse to allow Pakistani planes to refuel at Colombo airport.

The planes, forbidden to fly over Indian territory, now refuel at Colombo on the long trip around the southern tip of th subcontinent when returning from East Pakistan to West Pakistan. The east and west wings are divided by 1,000 miles of Indian territory.

Diplomatic sources in New Delhi said the situation in East Pakistan, where civil war broke out nine days ago, was still difficult to assess but that the Pakistan army seemed in control of the southern portion of the country.

Cox, Sutherland File For Council Reelection

Two of Greenville's incumbent City Councilmen, Percy Cox and Jerry Sutherland, have filed as candidates for reelection in the May 4 municipal elections. Both filed on Friday afternoon with City Clerk William Moore.

Cox, a native of the Shelmerdine area of Pitt County, has been a member of Greenville's City Council since 1964 when he was appointed to complete the unexpired term of Hartwell Campbell. He was elected on his own in 1965, 1967 and again in 1969.

In 1940 he established a business in Washington, D. C. This was followed by military service in World War II, with duty in the South Pacific and Japan.

After the war, Cox returned to Greenville and founded the Cox Armature Works and Cox Rebuilders, which he now heads.

PERCY COX

JERRY SUTHERLAND

He is a past governor of the Moose Lodge, a member of the American Legion, the Elks Lodge, the VFW, the Greenville Golf and Country Club, and is a Mason, with membership in Crown Point Lodge Number 708.

He is married to the former Janice Brown of New York City. They have five children, and presently live at 313 Longmeadow Road in Greenville. Cox is a member of the First Presbyterian Church of Greenville.

The second candidate to file for reelection, Jerry Sutherland, a native of Winnsboro in east Texas, has been a Greenville resident for ten years. He first came here with the company that constructed the Voice of American complex, and remained to establish his own construction business.

A graduate of Texas A and M with a degree in civil engineering, Sutherland is a member of St. James United Methodist Church and serves on the Board of Trustees, as a Sunday School teacher, and a lay preacher in the "Never An Empty Pulpit" program.

He is past president of the Pitt County Division of the American Cancer Society, and was for four years a member of the Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission.

He is a past director of the Kiwanis Club, and has been active in the Greenville Golf and Country Club, the Boys' Club of Greenville and in promotion of the East Carolina Summer Theater.

During his tenure as a city councilman for the past two years, Sutherland has been one of two representatives with the Student Advisory Committee of the Student Government Association of ECU.

He is married to the former Jane Allen Wilson of Greenville, Mississippi.

Regiment Wrecked

SAIGON (AP) — A South Vietnamese spokesman claimed Saturday that Saigon forces wrecked a veteran North Vietnamese regiment in three days of fierce fighting at a five base in the central highlands.

"We can say that the 28th North Vietnamese regiment has been put out of action," said Lt. Col. Le Trung Hien in announcing that the North Vietnamese were repulsed bloodily in a new attack Friday at Fire Base No. 6 near the border of Laos.

Hien asserted that 350 enemy were killed by South Vietnamese infantrymen at the base and 550 more died in air strikes and artillery fire in six hours of fighting that broke out at noon Friday. If true, that would be the most enemy slain in a single battle in recent months.

In three days, Hien claimed, the North Vietnamese had lost 1,180 killed out of the regiment's force of more than 2,000 men. The report was greeted with skepticism by some military quarters.

Lengthy Trial For Henderson

FT MEADE, Md. (UPI)—If the opening day was any indication the court-martial of Col. Oran K. Henderson, which resumes Tuesday. may drag into the summer.

Defense counsel for Henderson, 50, highest ranking officer still charged with My Lai crimes, indicated Friday during a preliminary hearing here that the pretrial phase itself may last until June.

Much of the pretrial time will be taken up by a procedure in which the defense writes out its motions and submits them to the prosecution for its answers in writing. The defense will make a written response to the government reply and argue the merits of the motion before the judge. The process could take several days for each motion.

The defense said it intends to "bombard the court with motions" and even call witnesses to testify on some of them in an attempt to gain dismissal of the charges.

Henderson was commander of the 11th Brigade of the Americal Division at the time of the March 16, 1968, My Lai MASSACRE. He is charged with covering up the incident and then lying about it to a Pentagon inquiry. Lt. William L. Calley Jr., a platoon leader, was found guilty of the murder of at least 22 civilians at My Lai.

Lt. Col. Frank J. Dorsey, chief military counsel for the defense, said after the opening session: "Almost everybody who was in the American Division is a prospective witness."

'Outstanding Young Layman' Named

Dick Ullom, executive director of the Greenville Boys Club, was honored Thursday night by the Greenville Jaycees as this year's "Outstanding Young Layman."

Ullom was selected from a slate of nominations by a panel of local ministers who were chosen by the OYL committee of the Jaycees.

The Boys Club director is the second recipient of the Layman Award, now an annual honor sponsored by the Jaycees. Last year, Dave Gordon received the award.

Requirements for qualifying as a nominee for the award basically stipulate that the person not only be active in church but also take an active part in community service.

The chaplain of the local chapter, the Rev. Graham Nahouse, pastor of the Lutheran Church of Our Redeemer, pointed out Thursday night that Ullom should be the winner of the "white hat award for good guys," having won the Distinguished Service Award earlier this year prior to being selected for the current honor.

In nominating Ullom for the honor, the Rev. Dana Hunt, pastor of the recipient's church (First Christian), noted that "his dedication to worthy causes is beyond question. I do not believe one could improve on him."

The Rev. Hunt added that Ullom's "work as director of the Boys Club... is well known. What is not so well known is his refusal to become discouraged when others would have given up. When it comes to helping a person, regardless of the race or religion or station in life, Dick asks only that he be allowed to try his best."

The minister said that "the term 'servant-minister' is an honored title not restricted to the clergy. Dick has that title."

Ullom, a native of Steubenville, Ohio, came to Greenville in 1968 and assumed duties as the first executive director of the Boys Club of Greenville Inc.

A graduate of Atlantic Christian College in Wilson, he currently serves as a Deacon at First Christian Church and as a Sunday School teacher, youth advisor and lay preacher. He serves on the World Outreach Committee and is a delegate to the General Assembly of the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) in North Carolina.

Professional Army Is Goal

HOUSTON (UPI) —Professionalism remains the overriding concern in the U.S. effort to produce a modern army—"not a mod Army"—through improved service life, Gen. W. C. Westmoreland said Saturday.

"We intend to improve service life and remove unnecessary irritants, but we will not lower our standards to do so," the Army chief of staff told the 12th annual convention of the Texas National Guard.

On many Army posts across the nation, personal hair styles, barracks redecoration and abolishment of reveille are in the experimental stages.

"The Army's leaders must be aware and sensitive to changes in our society and in the young men who come to serve from that society," Westmoreland said. "We can make service life more attractive without lowering our standards.

However, the former U.S. commander in Vietnam said the Army, like the other services "is experiencing one of the most crucial and turbulent periods in its history."

"It is a time when the Army must adjust to certain realities in the aftermath of the Vietnam War," he said.

Among the realities facing the Army are decreased budgets, rising manpower and material costs, greater need for advisory and material assistance to Allies and the prospect of establishing an all-volunteer force by July, 1973.

First Nun To Teach Here Will Be Visitor

Sister Mary Crescentia, who claims the honor of being the first Catholic sister to teach in Greenville, will be returning here for a visit with the Sisters at St. Raphael School during the Easter holidays.

From April 8 until April 14, Sister Crescentia will be in Greenville, which has many associations for her. It was here she came in response to a request from Monsignor Gable's for personnel for his new school.

Sister Mary Crescentia became the first principal of St. Raphael School, the first Catholic School to open in Greenville. That was in September 1946. The Sister had also taught religious classes at St. Gabriel's parish before their present school existed.

Valachi Dies Of Heart Attack

EL PASO, Tex. (UPI)— Joseph Valachi, who revealed the inner workings of the Cosa Nostra underworld, died Saturday of a heart attack at La Tuna Federal Prison. He was 66.

Valachi was serving a prison sentence in Atlanta when he agreed to reveal inside information about his underworld connections in return for government protection.

He was moved to La Tuna, a minimum security prison, in July, 1968, and was afforded maximum protection. He was serving a 20-year sentence for murder.

La Tuna authorities said Valachi died of a coronary. They gave no other details.

Monday Parade Permit Sought

A parade permit for Monday afternoon has been applied for by the East Carolina University Student Government Association.

The purpose of the parade, according to the permit, is "to gain support for grievances of the students." Set for 1:30 to 2:30 p. m., the parade will begin at a Fifth Street entrance of the ECU campus, continue up Fifth Street to Five Points where it will turn onto Evans and go to Second Street, turning east and continuing to Cotanche, then along Cotanche to Seventh Street. Some 300 to 500 persons will participate, the permit says.

The sun is 1.41 times as dense as water.

Cars Collide At Plaza Entrance

Two cars collided on the 264 Bypass at an entrance to the Pitt Plaza Shopping Center Saturday at 6:15 p. m.

Police identified the drivers as Mrs. Pamela Cannon Spain of 107 South Jarvis Street and Calvin Henry Gatlin of 1013 Ward Street. Damage was estimated at $140 to Mrs. Spain's car and none to Gatlin's. Gatlin was cited for failure to see safe movement and improper brakes.

Three Arrested On Marijuana Charges

Three Pitt County youths were arrested Friday on drug charges.

Sp4 Dennis M. Branch of Route 1, Winterville, was charged with smuggling narcotics into the United States.

His arrest at his home by the State Bureau of Investigation, in cooperation with the Pitt County Sheriff Department, stemmed from surveillance by the U. S. Customs and Postal Authority.

A recent returnee from a U. S. Army tour of duty in Korea, he reportedly received from Korea a package containing one pound, four and a half ounces of marijuana. His vehicle was confiscated and he was taken to Williamston to be arraigned before a U. S. Commissioner, a Sheriff Department spokesman said.

Arrested while riding in a van near Ayden were William Douglas Griffin, 19, and Miss Dorothy Lorraine Sullivan, 19, both of Greenville and both identified as Pitt Technical Institute students. Griffin was charged with illegal possession of marijuana and illegal use of a vehicle to transport drugs and was placed under $5,000 bond. Miss Sullivan, who faces charges of illegal possession of marijuana, had her bond set at $500.

Both were free, their bond having been met, Friday afternoon. Their hearing are set for April 19.

'Posse' Outfoxed In A Bull Chase

Police Chief William Fasulo cornered a wandering bull and a cow with a posse of "three pickups, one motorcycle, four cars, and 15 people."

"I got out of the police car ... When one of them lowered his head and snorted, I got back into the car quick," Fasulo said. "Man they were wild."

The critters bolted through the posse and headed into the sunset.

Ten Compete Tuesday For 'Miss Greenville' Crown

Ruby Rhonda Casey

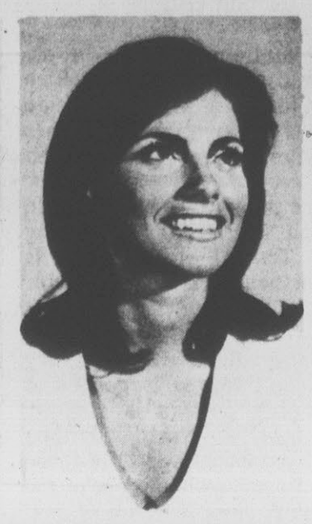

Dale Lee Emory

Alice Kay Hooks

Pamela Jean Kilpatrick

Mattie Moye King

Mary Elinor Rudroff

Ten young women from the Greenville area will compete here Tuesday night for the title of Miss Greenville and the chance to represent the area in the Miss North Carolina Pageant in Raleigh this summer.

The Greenville pageant, an affiliate of the Miss America event, is sponsored by the local Jaycee chapter and will be held at 8:15 p. m. in Wright Auditorium on the campus of East Carolina University.

In addition to the contestants, Miss North Carolina, Connie Lerner of Asheville will be present and will entertain during the evening. Helen Parker, the reigning Miss Greenville, will also participate.

This year's master of ceremonies is Dick Jones of WITN-TV in Washington and judges will be Ward Sutton of Rocky Mount, Cabell C. Ramsey of Kinston, Lee Kanipe of Washington, Bobbie Jeanne Collins of Tarboro, and Kay Currie of Washington.

Contestants will get a chance to meet informally with the five judges Tuesday afternoon during a tea at the home of Mrs. Norwood Whitehurst on Martinsborough Road.

All of the contestants currently live in Greenville with the exception of two who list rural Greenville adresses.

Miss Mattie Moye King, daughter of Howard Holton King of Greenville, has entered the local pageant. The 19 year old Fayetteville High School graduate is currently a student at Pitt Technical Institute in Commercial Art.

Miss Ruby Rhonda Casey is a student at East Carolina University with a major in Early Childhood Education. Daughter of Mrs. Mary E. Sampson of Deep Run, Miss Casey graduated from Hurricane High School there in 1968. The 21 year old contestant is a varsity cheerleader at ECU.

An ECU freshman majoring also in Early Childhood Education, Miss Carolyn Duval Leggett, 19, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Amos C. Leggett of Greenville. Miss Leggett graduated from J. H. Rose High School here in 1970.

A senior at North Pitt High School, 19 year old Miss Jerelene Weldon of Rt. 4, Greenville is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Lee Edwards. Miss Weldon plans to attend Elizabeth City State upon graduation from North Pitt.

Miss Dale Lee Emory, 22, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Linwood E. Emory of Richmond, Va., graduated from Huguenot High School in 1966. She is a student at East Carolina University majoring in art. Miss Emory is 22 years old.

The daughter of Dr. and Mrs. W. B. Winn of Greenville, Barbara Ann (Babs) Winn is also an East Carolina University student. Miss Winn is a 1969 graduate of J. H. Rose High School and is currently on the cheerleading squad at ECU. She is 19 years old.

A 1970 graduate of Broughton High School, Miss Cynthia Frances Erdahl is the daughter of Mrs. Gerald Erdahl of Raleigh. Miss Erdahl, 19, is a student at ECU.

Miss Pamela Jean Kilpatrick, 21, is the daughter of Col. P. E. Kilpatrick of Petersburg, Va., and is currently a Physical Education major at ECU. She graduated from Prince George High School in 1967.

Miss Mary Elinor Rudroff, also a student at ECU, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. G. Rudroff of Winston-Salem. Miss Rudroff, 21, graduated in 1967 from R. J. Reynolds High School.

Miss Alice Kay Catherine Hooks, 17, of Rt. 6, Greenville, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Barden Hooks. She is a senior at North Pitt High School and plans to continue her education at East Carolina University.

The Jaycees announced that advance tickets are available at the Book Barn, University Book Exchange, Harmony House South, Larry's Shoe Store, Big Value (downtown), NCNB, Shoemasters, Biggs, Ross' Camera Shop, and Hardee's (downtown).

Enthusiasm In The Campaign

An outstanding steering committee has been named to work with ECU officials in the medical school quest, following a highly enthusiastic meeting of eastern leaders in Washington Monday night.

The steering committee, which may be expanded, includes physicians who are leaders in medical organizations. They were appointed by Dr. Edwin Monroe, director of health affairs at ECU and by Dr. Ernest Furgurson of Plymouth, who has long been active in the fight for an ECU school of medicine.

The group which attended the meeting heard talks by Congressman Walter B. Jones, Pres. Leo Jenkins, Dr. Monroe and Wallace Wooles, dean of the School of Medicine.

It must have been a source of pride to these men to find such enthusiasim for ECU medical education as was exhibited by the leading citizens of many eastern communities.

There is little wonder that there should be enthusiasm in the east for the positive steps which have been proposed for alleviating the physician shortage. Several people there mentioned that they had steadily seen the doctors disappear from their areas.

Figures introduced bore this out. North Carolina ranks 44th in the nation in ratio to practicing physicians to population. The ratio for the state is 1:963; however, for the northeast it is 1:1,567 and for the southeast it is 1:1,759.

Such figures are very real to counties where no doctors now practice, or where there are only a very few. They also mean something to larger cities where the supply of family doctors is steadily dwindling. There are now 20 North Carolina counties with less than five doctors and 13 of these counties are in the east. Twenty-two percent of the rural doctors in the state are over 70 years of age.

With such figures in mind it is not surprising that the east has the highest death rates in the state for stroke, hypertension, lung cancer, malignant neoplasms and infant mortality.

Average infant mortality rate for the state in 1968 was 26.7 per 1,000 live births. In eight eastern counties it was 42 infant deaths per 1,000 live births.

There are those in the state who wonder why the drive for medical education in East Carolina University has not wilted under the onslaught of the fierce campaign which has been waged against it. Those who have followed the developments know why hopes are so high for establishment of the medical school. It is because it has the strong support of the people. At the grass roots they know there is a physician shortage because so many people have experienced it. Now there is hope of alleviating this shortage through what is happening at ECU and the people are firmly behind it.

ECU has made great strides in the medical field by building a nursing program to the point now where it has 238 students enrolled. A School of Allied Health and Social Professions offers work in medical technology, physical therapy, social work, medical record science and soon occupational therapy and dental hygiene.

With this base, a medical school will soon be built at ECU and when this is done the institution will have fulfilled its committment to do something about the inadequate state of medical care in North Carolina.

It Isn't Good Without Love

By RITA SIMPSON
Charlotte News

CHARLOTTE — "You can educate a man and teach him a trade. But if you don't show him some love, you haven't done much good."

That's the conclusion John Henry Tennant has reached after 15 years in prison. Through most of those years he was a bitter man ("I hated the guards, the authorities, my family, the other inmates, everybody"), and a lonely man ("I've learned one thing, that prison is a lonely life").

But his bitterness, he said, has given way to feelings of love and compassion in the past two years.

He talked about his life going back to a bleak boyhood in Manning, S.C., through his first arrest for highway robbery and a later conviction of first-degree murder, into the prisons of Raleigh and Columbia and Charlotte, and finally out on release to make speeches at churches and schools.

"I didn't think that first pass would come through," Tennant said, "because I was serving a life sentence, and that had been thrown in my face so many times."

The pass did come and through a new prison program called the Community Volunteer Program, Tennant made his first speech at a little church near Monroe. Several months later, in February, 1970, he came to Charlotte for a talk.

Tasting Freedom

"I remember walking down Trade Street and everything was so pretty after those steel doors I'd been behind. I had been told I was a mad dog and an animal so much I'd started to believe it. And here I was on a city street, with no guard, just my friend who had come to get me."

Tennant — sitting on the front edge of a sofa cushion, his hands clasped between his knees, his blue eyes riveted on the floor — said the change came when he accepted Christ. "I felt clean all over, and I didn't care who knew I belonged to the Lord."

Before had been the years of crime, the hard drinking, the pills which had taken their toll and left him weighing only 122 pounds, seeing green cockroaches when he closed his eyes.

Today, at 46, he weighs about 160 and is in good condition. His eyes are clear, his hair cropped short, and he is fresh-shaven.

He left home at 14. In Florence, S.C., he fell in with a group of boys stealing hubcaps. He drove a cab, got into more trouble, safe cracking, highway robbery and his first jail sentence. Ninety days after his release he was back in jail.

School for Crime

In prison, he said, "I didn't learn one thing constructive... There was no rehabilitation program and all I learned was how to gamble, rob, steal, heist people and make an easy buck. It was nothing but a school of crime."

Outside again, he married, and three sons blessed the union. He didn't look on the babies as blessings then, he said. He was drinking more than ever, "out of a fruit jar, first think in the morning and the last thing at night."

He moved to Charlotte. His wife packed up the boys and went home to South Carolina. He got sent up for 15 years for armed robbery. In 1960 he was convicted of first-degree murder. "He were robbing this house and a man came in . . . he got hurt."

In prison, Tennant said, "you could get most anything you wanted with money. Pills of your choice were a dollar apiece. And in order to pay the high prices you had to gamble. I learned to gamble crooked, marking my little cards, and I drank all I could get and I took all the pills I could get."

At Rope's End

Despair set in when his mother died and he went back home for her funeral, "handcuffed to a policeman... It embarrassed the family, and I asked him to carry me back.. I was a whippped man, and I didn't want to live no more."

A friend of his mother wrote that she'd like her preacher to visit him. "I'd heard the other inmates say a preacher would make you feel ashamed of yourself and make you think you were going to die and go to hell. But I wrote and told her a big fat lie. 'Yes ma'am, I'll be glad to see your preacher.

What the preacher said started him to thinking about a new life. The changes didn't come overnight, and there was backsliding. But through Alcoholics Anonymous and the prison Sunday School and prayer, Tennant said, he learned "to turn my life over to God."

Requests to speak on prison and alcoholism come often. His favorite assignments are the ones which take him to schools and contact with young people. Recently he has worked closely with Stacy Long, director of United Prison Ministries of North Carolina.

"I may still be locked up but I'm a free man inside. And that's about it," he said.

Sizzling Over A Petty Snub

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Big city mayors, despite having achieved their long-sought audience with President Nixon, left Washington last week disturbed and angry over an inexplicable White House snub to one of their colleagues — a situation that goes to the roots of a foremost Nixon political problem.

Even now, a week later, the preponderantly Democratic mayors are not talking about their agreement with the Republican President (and disagreement with national Democratic leaders) over revenue-sharing. Rather, they ponder this puzzle: for what earthly reason should Mr. Nixon bar Mayor Wesley C. Uhlman of Seattle from his meeting with the mayors? Congressmen have been pondering similar puzzles the past two years.

Involved here is the Nixon administration's failure to get credit for a constructive foreign policy and an increasingly innovative domestic program. The partial answer is found in pipsqueak politics of the kind that excluded Mayor Uhlman.

Indeed, the White House was playing pipsqueak politics in long ignoring the Dec. 29 request by the mayors to confer with the President. The reason: displeasure that the mayors were too critical and not sufficiently helpful. After months of stalling, the White House agreed to a March 23 meeting but complained about the proposed list of mayors to see the President: not enough Republicans, not enough small town mayors, too many mayors altogether.

After torturous negotiations, the White House finally agreed to a list of 25 mayors — with one exception: the mayor of Seattle. C. D. Ward, Vice President Agnew's aide handling liaison with the mayors, informed them, with apologies, that Uhlman, a 36-year-old first-term Democrat, was not invited. Why? Ward said he did not know.

Next followed efforts by mayors, including Republican Harry Haskell of Wilmington, Del., to get Uhlman invited. No success. Uhlman discouraged talk by fellow mayors of a boycott. But Mayor Kenneth Gibson of Newark, which desperately needs Federal help, did not attend. Gibson, a Negro, told colleagues he had been excluded irrationally too often to tolerate Uhlman's treatment.

Clearly, Uhlman told the mayors, this was caused by John Ehrlichman, Mr. Nixon's powerful domestic policy chief. As lawyers back in Seattle, Ehrlichman and Uhlman had been on amiable terms. But now Ehrlichman was hostile. Some mayors assumed this was tied to the possibility that Uhlman might run for Governor next year.

But what drives the White House frequently has no such practical grounding. Rather, Uhlman's exclusion stems from a visit paid his office in December, 1969, by U. S. Treasury agents who proposed a Seattle raid against the Black Panthers. Uhlman refused, arguing it would disrupt racial peace.

Shortly thereafter, during a

Strength For Today

NOT UP TO REQUIREMENTS

When St. Paul stood before King Agrippa and poured out the burden of his Christian message, the king smiled cynically and said, "Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian."

There have been millions of Agrippas in the world ever since, and there are millions of them still. They are "almost" Christians. They believe Jesus was a great and wise man. They maintain that the Golden Rule is the greatest combination of words ever put together. They assent to the statement that one must love his neighbor as himself. And on the whole they believe that the Ten Commandments are sound and reasonable, provided one does not become fanatical about them and try to carry them too far.

Paul's reply to Agrippa was, "I would to God, that not only thou, but also all that hear me this day, were both almost, and altogether such as I am, except these bonds (chains)."

There is a profound difference between the almost Christian and altogether Christian. It can be said with considerable assurance that God has no use for "almost" Christianity nor for "almost" Christians. That variety of "Christianity" will give no one peace of mind and triumph on earth nor will it get anyone into heaven.

Inside N.C. Politics

By JOHN KILGO

Gov. Bob Scott had some more to say about that proposed constitutional amendment which would allow a Tar Heel Governor to succeed himself. Scott put it this way:

"I might just send that bill in there and let the General Assembly handle it. As for myself, I probably won't decide until the fall what I am going to do."

Scott said "the right kind of national office" would appeal to him, and we asked him if he'd run for Governor again if the legislature gave him that right.

"Yes," Scott said, "I would feel that I'd need to run again, not in defense of my program, but out of the sincere conviction that I would know enough about the job to really be effective. I would like to serve again."

Gov. Scott said the Democratic Party in North Carolina has "a great reservoir of talent for the gubernatorial race, the likes of which it hasn't had in a long time. You have people saying the attorney general might run, the lieutenant governor, Sen. Skipper Bowles, Luther Hodges Jr. There won't be any shortage of candidates."

Two Scott appointees — State ABC Board member Harold Edwards and Highway Commissioner Charles Maxwell — have openly exchanged words. Edwards accused Maxwell of pressuring him to ease up on the enforcement policies at a controversial Charlotte night spot. Maxwell denied that charge.

We asked Gov. Scott if he plans to take any action in the controversy, and he answered this way:

"Naturally I've been interested in what has been written and said about it. I've talked to the two men individually. I think it's primarily a matter of personalities. No charges have been brought. Certainly none

Sunday Morning Notes

At the meeting of area leaders concerning the ECU medical School in Washington last week, Dr. Ernest Furgurson of Plymouth was the moderator.

"I'm a member of the 5-B Club," Dr. Furgurson told the group. "Baldness, bifocals, bulges, bridges and bunions.

"It's good to see so many of my fellow members of the 5-B Club here."

Congressman Walter Jones received an enthusiastic reception from the audience, including a rendition of "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" played on the organ.

When the applause had subsided, Jones said. "I told my wife she should come along and see all this, but she wouldn't do it."

Dr. Wallace Wooles, dean of the new school of medicine, followed Congressman Jones, Dr. Jenkins and Dr. Edwin Monroe as the final speaker on the program.

He said he asked some friends what he should talk about following such an illustrous group of speakers.

"If you're smart you'll talk about two minutes and shut up," Dr. Wooles said his friends told him.

A small boy made his way out of Tony's Sanitary Restaurant at Morehead last Sunday night. The little fellow walked across the street to the parking lot. Curiously I watched as he made his way to a station wagon parked in the lot. He went to the rear, inserted a key in the lock and ran down the back window. Then he crawled up on the bumper and disappeared over the top of the gate.

In a moment he re-emerged carrying a diet soft drink. He climbed back down on the bumper, ran the window up and raced off in the direction of Sanitary Restaurant.

No doubt the drink was somebody's concession to a diet.

We learn from a news letter which comes to our office that the Athens (Ga.) Banner-Herald prints the names of commissions and board members who attend and those who do not attend, following each story on meetings which the newspaper covers.

There was favorable response from the public, but cries of anguish from the officials after institution of the new policy.

Wonder how it would work here?

Other Editors Say Whom To Believe

(Henderson Dispatch)

So many self-styled experts in various fields are giving out data these days as to what is safe or helpful and what is otherwise that no one knows for sure who or what can or cannot be believed. Faults are being found with the preparation of food and sometimes even food itself before being processed.

In some instances, edibles that are packaged and sold to consumers are said to have been sealed in unsanitary fashion. Time was not so long ago that the public was urged to consume more milk. Then there was the charge that in excessive amounts it would clog the arteries and ultimately contribute to heart ailments. Now the appeal is urged for freer consumption of milk as being healthful.

Many can remember the old slogan, "Bread is your best friend; eat more of it." Of late there have been reports that claims of benefits deriving from bread are not all they are said to be and that government should investigate to determine the facts. Attacks have been made even on fish, a highly popular and supposedly nutritive meat. Pollution is said in some instances to be harmful through contamination.

Who, including government, can be believed implicitly? And is there propaganda for or against certain commodities?

Every one wants to have and to keep good health, but there are fears from some things that are heard from time to time. It is difficult to know for certain what is proper to eat and what not. What is polluted or contaminated, and what not?

Tobacco, for example, is definitely not a food, but crusades against it in late years have aimed at its destruction on the ground, not scientifically demonstrated, that it produces diseases in the human body. If some of the energy expended against tobacco were applied to establish facts as to what is wholesome in ordinary, everyday foods, the public would be better served. As it is, you don't know who or what can be believed.

40 Years Ago Today

By GWYN COGHILL
April 4, 1931

Tomorrow is Easter and everyone in Greenville is urged to attend the church of their choice.

George Gardner, chief of the Greenville Fire Department, will attend a school for firemen in Durham, the latter part of this month.

Little Misses Jane Rowlett, Bettie Fleischmann and Alice Lee Blow were selected last night at the Capitol Theatre to represent the people of Greenville as junior queens at the Eastern Carolina Exposition.

The public is invited to worship with the Eighth Street Christian Church congregation at all services tomorrow. The day begins with a sunrise service at 6:30 a.m.

Mrs. W. N. Poindexter left this afternoon for Fort Humphrey, Virginia and Washington, D.C.

Two Ads Launched Big Business

By ELMER ROESSNER

This year, the H & R Block organization may make out almost seven million income tax returns for clients. Last year, it made out 6.8 million, about 9 per cent of all returned to the Internal Revenue Service. It is the world's largest tax service.

It all started with two newspaper ads.

In 1946, Henry and Richard Block started the United Business Co. in Kansas City, providing accounting services for firms too small to hire a full-time accountant. As a favor, they also made out income tax reports for clients.

By 1955, they were making 170 returns a year, a burden for which they were not being paid. They decided to drop free tax work.

They told their decision to John White, an advertising salesman for the Kansas City Star. He said they might do better to drop their accounting practice and charge for tax services. He roughed out a $100 ad for the proposed tax service.

Risk $200

The brothers agreed to a

trial of the ad. "No," said White, "it will have to be two ads. You need more impact.". The Blocks were finally persuaded.

The day the ad ran, Henry, who told me the story, started out to see clients, leaving in the office a list of calls he would make. At the first stop, his office called. "Come back at once," he was urged. "We're swamped!"

So the brothers Bloch gave up accounting services and plunged into income tax assistance.

They changed the company name to H & R Block, Inc., to end confusion over the spelling of their family name.

The business prospered from the start. The next year, they opened two more offices in Kansas City and one in New York. Offices were located near Internal Revenue Service offices.

That resulted in a happy break. In that year, the IRS discontinued its practice of helping people fill out forms. (It will calculate taxes due today under certain circumstances.) People, turned away by the IRS, would see Block offices and walk in.

Adds Franchising

The brothers began opening other offices as fast as they could find locations and competent personnel.

This was a bit slow for their tastes and they began franchising other tax accounts to open Block offices, giving them the advantages of Block techniques and national advertising.

In 1969, net earnings were $3.5 million; last year, they jumped to $6.4 million.

Many competitors have sprung up. Last year, all of the other five publicly-owned tax-assistance corporations lost money. There are many privately-owned firms, too, some of which are making money, some of which are not. And there are many individuals, working out of law offices, homes, cigar stands and empty services, with varying success. Several store chains also offer tax services. Some are prospering, some are breaking even but enjoyed added traffic, some are losing money and some have given up because of losses.

Observations From Editorial Columns

HARD ROCK, 1984

At risk of appearing paranoid about censorship, freedom of the press and all that sort of thing, we would venture that the Federal Communication Commission's vague threat about the "drug-oriented" lyrics of certain popular songs is misguided.

In a six-to-one ruling the agency said that a broadcast station "cannot properly follow a policy of playing such records without" someone in a management level position at least knowing what's in them. "It raises serious questions as to whether continued operation of the station is in the public interest." The ruling was aimed at lyrics "tending to promote or glorify the use of illegal drugs."

We doubt that young people, skeptical as they are today, are apt to experiment with drugs because of some barely intelligible words in a catchy tune. And one doesn't have to be young to resent the FCC's paternalistic attitude and bureaucratic subterfuge in determining what is fit to hear. Of course stations are not obligated to play any or all records. But if the FCC is of a mind to ban records which it believes contain more-or-less poetic references to drugs, then let it draft legislation precisely defining what people should, or should not, hear. If that is what the people want. —Charlotte (N.C.) News

DEDUCTIBLE BRIBES

The Internal Revenue Service taxpayers' guide contains the information that bribes and kickbacks paid in nongovernmental transactions of a business nature are deductible unless the briber has been convicted of the charge, or has pleaded guilty or nolo contendere. It says so right there on page 146 of this year's "Blue Book."

Nevertheless, the regulation is going to raise a few eyebrows and some questions. For instance, is a bill discreetly conveyed to a maitre d' to be considered a bribe, or simply a tip? Is a round on the house, as rare as it is these days, a bribe, a kickback, pure lagniappe or what?

These and other heady questions may preoccupy the IRS in its effort to lend respectability, at least for tax purposes, to a darker side of mercantile morality. —Shreveport (La.) Journal

THE SUMMING UP

In the February issue of Redbook magazine, Jan Robinson tells what it's like to be black and female at prestigious Princeton University. A 21-year-old black student from Brooklyn, New York, she entered Princeton as a freshman in 1969.

Her conclusion in an epilogue is: "I fully realize that whatever I achieve and take back to my community will be the result of my own efforts and my own ability, not because I attended a prestigious school. 'Ivy League' doesn't mean a thing to many blacks — what I have to offer does."

Black or white, that sums it up. A prestigious university is no substitute for a student's own effort to take full advantage of opportunity. What an institution offers is important but more important still is the attitude by which a student approaches that offering. —Florence (S.C.) Morning News

DIDJA KNOW?

Did you know that it would take 27,794,920,902,600,000 snowflakes to cover the State of Tennessee? Well, it would. A group of mathematicians, using computers, has calculated that that would be the number of flakes necessary for a uniform 10-inch statewide blanket.

Oh yes, if anyone wants to challenge the figure the mathematicians arrived at, address your correspondence to the editors of National Review, 150 East 35th Street, New York, New York 10016. They've been snowing people for a long time. — Nashville (Tenn.) Banner

IF ONLY IT TASTES GOOD

Books of postage stamps that have been treated with a new adhesive are going on sale in 17 test cities across the nation. Because the adhesive is resistant to humidity, the need for putting separating tissue between the stamps has been eliminated. The U.S. Postal Service estimates this will mean an overall savings of $75,000 in reduced assembly costs and cost of the treated paper. No much, perhaps, compared with the total postal budget, but still nothing to stick your tongue out at. — Savannah (Ga.) Evening Press

AMEN TO THAT

From the It's Hard to Argue With That Department: Quote from the Federal Personnel Manual: "One measure of whether a particular position is expected under a generic exception such as 'expert,' 'attorney,' 'economist,' is whether the appointee is an 'expert,' an 'attorney,' an 'economist.' The position cannot be such a position unless the appointee is able to perform the required duties." —Huntsville (Ala.) Times

FOR THE UPPERDOG

A college president, Dr. Miller Upton of Beloit, stood up the other day and said he is tired of overreaction to the needs of the underdog. He is for the upperdog.

"I'm for the achiever — the one who sets out to do something and does it;" he said, "the one who recognizes the problems and opportunities at hand and endeavors to deal with them; the one who is successful in his immediate task because he is not worrying about someone else's failings; the one who doesn't consider it 'square' to be constantly looking for more to do. We will never create a good society, much less a great one, until individual excellence and achievement are not only respected but encouraged. That is why I am for the upperdog — the achiever, the succeeder."

He speaks the sentiment of a great many people. — Tuscaloosa (Ala.) News

COLD PROOF

Anthropologists digging in Africa turned up what they say are the remains of a five-million-year-old ancestor of modern man.

We might decline to claim kin — except that the relic consists of a jawbone. All ancient remains of man consist of jawbones. They are his one indestructible feature — his only proof of himself, as it were. But the jawbone has its drawbacks.

Our worry is that archaeologists of the distant future, turning up the bearded jawbones of today, will declare that a new race of apes took over the world in the late 20th century. —Dallas (Tex.) Morning News

A Political Fact Of Life: The Question Is Power

By J. J. KILPATRICK

One of these years, I keep telling myself, I will retire to the mountains, feed a last sheet of copy paper into this battered Underwood, and undertake to distill a lifetime of political observation into a single sentence of political truth. The sentence will read: The question is power.

That is what the game is all about. We are seeing it in a new form in Washington these days — actually a very old form — in the inchoate confrontation between Congress and the White House on this matter of the impoundment of appropriated funds. Senator Sam Ervin (D-N. C.) has been holding some mild hearings. The White House has dispatched a spokesman to make a mild response. There is not much drama thus far.

Yet the issue is important. One of the fundamental powers of the Congress is the power of the purse. It is the power to raise funds — to lay and collect taxes, to borrow money, to coin money. It is equally the power to say how the taxpayers' money shall be spent. "No money shall be drawn from the treasury," says the Constitution, "but in consequence of appropriations made by law."

It follows from that stricture that appropriations are in fact laws; and the Constitution also says, in defining the powers and duties of a Chief Executive, that the President "shall take care that the laws be faithfully executed."

A specific example may clarify the kind of impasse that develops. Consider, if you please, the Florida barge canal. Critics of the project see it as something more than a mere boondoggle; they see it as an absolute disaster, threatening the delicate ecology of the Everglades. Defenders of the project, such as the Jacksonville Chamber of Commerce, hold a different view; they see the canal as a significant economic benefit, and they regard the environmental arguments as vastly overblown.

Put the merits to one side. The point is that Congress has decided the issue explicitly in favor of the proponents. Congress repeatedly has made appropriations for building the canal. These appropriations are "laws" as surely as the laws appropriating funds to pay a President's salary; they are laws manifesting a specific congressional intent.

But on January 19, by executive order, Mr. Nixon simply nullified the laws appropriating money for the Florida barge canal. Acting on the recommendation of Dr. Russell Train, chairman of his Council on Environmental Quality, the President imposed an effective veto. Does the duty to execute the laws embrace a power to nullify the laws? If so, what dignity and purpose attach to congressional appropriations in the first place?

Consider a different hypothesis. Suppose it were President Proxmire in the White House; he is a steadfast opponent of Federal funding of a supersonic transport plane. Suppose the Congress had fought out the question of an SST, and the proponents had won. The fight is over. The appropriation has passed. But instead of vetoing the bill, President Proxmire impounds the money and refuses executive consent to its expenditure. What then? Impeach the President? Sue him? Such remedies have little substance of reality.

The law is unclear. In a major speech to the House on February 10, Florida's Charles E. Bennett cited precedents going back to Kendall v. United States in 1838 to support his conviction that specific appropriations cannot lawfully be impounded. The case involved a small claim of a man named Stokes for carrying mail, and may not be in point. Bennett also cited various law review articles criticizing a President's asserted power to impound.

Manifestly, a President must have some discretion. Existing law permits impoundment to avoid deficiencies, or to effect economies. Custom and common sense support a President's refusal to expend appropriations when circumstances have changed; after World War II, Mr. Truman reasonably nullified outlays for unneeded military hospitals.

None of these exceptions touches a case such as the Florida barge canal. Congress has said it shall be built. Mr. Nixon, without a formal veto, has said it shall not be built. Never mind who is right or wrong, for the question is not a question of wisdom or of folly. Again, in saecula saeculorum, the question is power.

East Is Underdeveloped In Many Fields, But It Has A Cultural Spring

Although in many ways the Eastern region of our state is severely underdeveloped, in at least one respect, the East is equal to more privileged areas. I am referring to the atmosphere of cultural creativity which, largely due to East Carolina University, surrounds us here "down East."

Tar Heel editor, literary critic and poet Sam Ragan recently remarked that he accepted only two invitations to poetry readings this spring, and that one of them was from the ECU Poetry Forum.

Mr. Ragan says that he senses at ECU an atmosphere that is charged with "sparks of creativity," a feeling that he rarely experiences on the more tradition-bound campuses.

And it is certainly true that the continual process of growth and change which East Carolina University has been undergoing helps to foster a general awareness of the variety and flux of life, a vital part of the creative nature.

We are, in a number of ways, the nucleus of this region's cultural and aesthetic activity. Many eastern North Carolinians have told us that the cultural offerings of ECU have greatly helped them to appreciate art, music and drama, and have thereby enhanced the life style in this region.

ECU sponsors four creative individuals all year round: Dr. Gregory Kosteck, composer-in-residence; Ovid Pierce, novelist-in-residence; and Francis Speight and Edward Reep, artists-in-residence. They are all distinguished in their respective fields, and have achieved national and international recognition for their works.

Concerts by choral and instrumental groups and solo recitals are offered regularly, each week, free of charge on our campus. Our art exhibitions, lectures and poetry readings are likewise free and open to the general public. And when distinguished musicians perform at ECU, a number of tickets are reserved for sale to the public.

The ECU Student Government Association annually sponsors a noteworthy series of visiting artists and lectures. Among those who are to visit us during the coming academic year are violinist Isaac Stern, movie producer Dennis Hopper, organist Virgil Fox and journalist-lecturer Heywood Hale Broun.

In the realm of drama, we offer excellent productions of plays by the ECU Playhouse and the East Carolina Summer Theatre. Hundreds of eastern North Carolina citizens have been among the audiences present at ECU's dramatic productions during the past decade.

And, the ECU School of Art continues to be one of our most outstanding creative resources. A very high percentage of ECU art students have gone on to graduate school and many of our faculty have shown their works in museums and exhibitions all over the United States.

Several pieces of sculpture, including a large piece of limestone being carved for ECU by graduate student Dean Leary of Manteo, await a permanent home in the $4 million School of Art building which has been requested of the General Assembly.

There are, of course, some major "lacks" in ECU's cultural offerings to this region. The most sorely needed of these is a university-operated FM radio station, which could broadcast regular programs of the finest music from recordings and from campus concert performances.

We have sought for several years to make this dream become a reality, and we hope that in the near future a "WECU-FM" will be on the air, bringing the best music into the thousands of homes in our area.

It is essential that the modern university never cease striving for knowledge through research in science, medicine and technology. These fields greatly improve the human condition in material ways.

But we must also continue to encourage the fine arts as well, for they provide a most valuable service to mankind, by inspiring and exalting the creativity in the human spirit.

At East Carolina University we fully intend to nurture the "sparks of creativity" so that the part of the world we serve may better know the warmth and light of the creative impulse.

confrontation with student militants, Uhlman disclosed he had blocked the Nixon administration from raiding Seattle's Panthers — a story that received widespread national attention.

The aftermath came weeks later in Washington when Uhlman was visiting a low-level White House official to discuss the District of Columbia police force. Without warning, an angry Ehrlichman barged in. "Wes, that was a cheap shot," stormed Ehrlichman. Referring to his Black Panther statement, Ehrlichman charged the mayor had saved his own hide by "attacking" Mr. Nixon. Uhlman was amazed so important a government figure had sought him out and was so personally exercised that long after the event.

Since then, Uhlman has criticized the Nixon administration, but no more so than other big city Democrats. His problem is that Ehrlichman had never forgiven him for the Black Panther incident. So, on March 23, Uhlman, turned away from White House doors, instead went up Capitol Hill to lobby for two Administration proposals: the supersonic transport (SST) and revenue-sharing.

The death of the SST and the difficulty of revenue-sharing are related to Uhlman's exclusion. Appreciable Congressional opposition arises from irritation over Ehrlichman and other White House staffers. John Ehrlichman, despite great capability and a keen mind, apparently still does not understand that acting out of petty animosity is bad politics. In fact, until Richard Nixon himself understands it, White House problems will continue.

have been proved. And I don't like to take action against a man unless someone can show me why it should be done."

One final thought about Scott's future plans. He was asked if he would rule himself out of any race for '72.

"Only politicians who are ready to retire rule themselves out of races, whether it's for Governor, lieutenant governor, or the legislature," Scott said. "The way I feel today, I'm not ready to quit."

Public Forum

(Letters submitted for public forum must be limited to 300 words)

To The Editor:

The proceedings and results of the Lt. William Calley trial caused me a great deal of consternation. Any American who does not take a close look at this court martial and its implications is failing in his duty as a citizen.

I feel that the American fighting man deserves credit for what he has done and is doing in a dirty little war. Sure Pres. Nixon decorates a few military men on occasion, but I'm referring to respect given by you the citizen. Ask your son, relative, or friend what it feels like to leave Greenville to enter the military. Ask one of those lucky enough to return safely from Vietnam how it feels to come back to Greenville.

Lt. Calley did not kill anyone for any reason other than he felt that the lives of his men, or selfishly perhaps his own life, were endangered by the presence of those "civilian" people. That they were South Vietnamese was not alarming, because in fact all Viet Cong are South Vietnamese. How do you sit and judge a man two to three years later for a battlefield mistake in judgement? Have you ever been under enemy fire? Seen a woman kill one of your men? Had to differentiate between a child and a 10-year-old soldier? Slept under the threat of attack from rockets, mortars, or a sharp knife at your throat? Had to send a letter along with or without a body explaining how a young man died in Vietnam? These are just a few of the things Lt. Calley had in the back of his mind on the morning of My Lai. He was convicted by peers in a military court, but he was in my opinion, convicted by the American news media when they reported his trial and that of Charles Manson in the same dramatic portrayal.

Lt. Calley made a mistake, pernaps; committed a crime, No! I fought what some have referred to as "the sanitized war from the air." If I killed anyone, you as an American citizen are just as guilty as Lt. Calley or I. Unless you the citizen give the military man his due respect there will be few young men willing to endure the sacrifice necessary to serve in the Armed Forces. I will not lose a moment's rest from my actions in Vietnam. My loss of sleep will be from my fear for the future of this country when you crucify your men in uniform. Cassius Clay is a free man today and Lt. Calley is behind bars!

It's Too Early To Write Off Nixon; Much Can Happen In A Year

By GEORGE BRYANT, JR.

It is both easy and popular these days to picture President Nixon in such bad trouble that his defeat at the polls in 1972 is a good odds-on bet.

There is no doubt that the President has miseries aplenty. A recent story in The Wall Street Journal swept a number of them together in this paragraph:

"His ratings in the polls are down. This country's South Vietnamese allies have come home from Laos in seeming disarray. Antiwar sentiment is reviving. Unemployment remains high. The hardhats are off the reservation. The SST seems dead. And Democrats in Congress show signs of ditching the rest of the President's program."

The flow of current events justifies such run-downs in the news. The adverse developments bring cheer to the President's critics, whether partisan politician or commentator. Hopes that Nixon will be dumped in 1972 soar.

Thus far, however, neither Nixon nor his close associates have shown signs of any great despair. There have been disappointments. Difficulties with the economy here at home and the slowness of the war to wind down are frustrating. But no one in the White House seems to be reaching for the panic button. It may be that the experience of other Presidents gives comfort.

The situation today is not without precedent. In fact, it is very similar to that of 24-years ago, some 18-months before the then President Harry Truman was to ask the voters to keep him in the White House for four more years. The voters did.

This reporter went back to the files to see what he was writing about at this season in 1947, months ahead of the big election upset of 1948. With editing and changing of names, a lot of that copy could be used today.

The nation was in a real mess. The government was divided — Democrats in the White House and Republicans running Congress. The labor unions were driving wage costs up. Inflation was a problem. Living costs were being pushed up. The President was trying jawbone restraint, but with no success. And there was the threat of recession. There was worry over unemployment. There were charges of corruption and communism in government and the crime rate was too high.

There was not shooting war just at that time. But there was worry of big war — war with Russia. Truman was making commitments to non-communist countries. He strengthened the Greeks and the Turks against red pressure. There was turmoil over the beginning of what became the policy to "contain" communism. Critics decried the policy of policing the world.

Truman looked like nothing so much as a goner, even at that early state of the political struggle which was settled nearly a year and a half later. He seemed to have nothing going for him. It was popular to call him the "lame duck" president — the care taker until the voters could pick his replacement in 1948.

What the critics and the commentators overlooked at that time was that a sitting president, barring such national calamities as the depression which defeated Herbert Hoover, has a tremendous advantage over a challenger. This advantage grows out of the fact that so many voters are influenced on election day by their own individual welfare and not what might be called the "big issues."

In 1948 there were many irritants. But, as analysts saw the vote later, the outcome was based largely on self interest. Times were relatively good. Employment was short of full. But most people who wanted to work had jobs. The income level was high, for that time. The profits of business were good. The voters simply didn't want to swap what they had under President Truman for what they might have under a new President.

Thus, it is far too early in the game to write Nixon out, whether you like him or not. And it is entirely probably that conditions of today will be changed in important ways before election day in November 1972.

Most business observers seem convinced that the stage is set for a new round of growth. If a rise develops in the coming months, there will be a good chance that the economy will be on an upswing during next year's political season.

As for the war, all indications are that it will continue to shrink so far as the involvement of U.S. troops is concerned. Nixon seems determined to keep to his withdrawal schedule.

In a way, Nixon's fortunes are riding two horses. If either wins, Nixon will likely hold the White House. And if both romp home, any Democratic challenger now in sight would face a problem, indeed.

Farm Labor Well Known To Nobel Prize-Winner

By SAUL PETT
AP Special Correspondent

CIUDAD OBREGON, Mexico (AP) — The night he returned to Cresco, Iowa, last fall to visit his parents, the cops stopped him on Main Street. They thought the license plates on his rented car somehow looked wrong and, when produced, his Mexican driver's license didn't help either.

He looked suspicious to the young police of his home town until a friend drove up and asked, "What the hell are you doing here, Norm?" The matter was soon straightened out, it being decided he was no threat to the peace of Cresco, Iowa, population 3,880.

A month later, back at work in the wheat fields of Mexico, Norman Borlaug was himself suspicious when the first word came of the award. "Must be some mistake," he said, and went back to work.

Even after the reporters came, he thought it best to wait for something official, and he kept working in the wheat fields until the brass came and dragooned him back into Mexico City, muddy hands and muddy clothes and all, and he went through two news conferences and he posed with the Minister of Agriculture and was interviewed live on television, still muddy, and finally they locked the doors of the foundation office and they broke out the champagne and slowly, somewhere toward the wee hours, after someone had dumped a glass of champagne over his graying head, like they do in the locker room for pennant winners, Norman Borlaug, 56, who used to play baseball Sundays after church in Ivor Natvig's pasture outside of Cresco, Iowa, slowly began to realize that it was indeed true: he had won the Nobel Peace Prize.

So he rented his first suit of tails and white tie, in which he knew in his bones he'd be miserable. His aged parents, in a nursing home, could not make the trip. But he took the rest of the family: his wife, Margaret, from Mexico City; his sister, Charlotte, and her husband, Leonard, from the farm near Cresco; his sister Palma, and her husband, Virgil, from Cedar Rapids; his daughter, Norma Jean, and her husband, Dick, from Stevens Point, Wis.; his son, Bill, and his wife, Barbara, from Phoenix, Ariz., and they all flew off to Norway, from which his grandparents had migrated, and there, Norman Borlaug, whose boyhood ambition was to be a high school science teacher and athletic coach, there he received from the king of Norway the gold medal and the check for $78,400 and all the honors attendant on the world's most prestigious award, all in all, as sweet a triumph as ever was for Middle America.

Norman Ernest Borlaug was being honored as the head of a team of agronomists which developed, over years of slow, patient cross-breeding, high-yield strains of wheat now feeding millions of people abroad who might otherwise be starving.

"We did not award the Peace Prize to the scientist, Dr. Borlaug," a member of the Nobel committee told him during the ceremonies. "We awarded it to the man, Dr. Borlaug, of whom the scientist is just one well integrated part ...

"You have made the fight against hunger your lifelong mission, your passionate calling, to which you have devoted your brains, the brains of a first-rate scientist, your hands, the hands of an Iowa farmer, and your open, broad, warm heart."

Also the cussedness of a bulldog.

And the strong back of a field hand, the contagious fire of a young teacher, the drive of a bulldozer, the patience of an always-pregnant mother, the intensity of a salesman, the zeal of a fund-raiser, the positiveness of a Norman Vincent Peale, the momentum of a head-knocker, a red-tape cutter, a Texas football coach tasting his first championship.

All this Borlaug has thrown into the "Green Revolution," which, according to at least one authority, is likely to affect more people in a short time than any other technological change in history. And, according to another, Borlaug has made a greater contribution toward the end of hunger in the world than any other living man.

His wheat and the new hybrid strains of high-yield rice subsequently developed by others have begun to transform large areas of the world. In some, hope has begun to replace despair and political chaos promises to yield to stability. While begetting new problems, the Green Revolution has bought man more time, experts agree, in the race between population explosion and man's ability to feed himself.

The results have been spectacular in the five short years since Borlaug's new wheat seeds began to go abroad from his experimental stations outside of Obregon and Mexico City. India has increased its yearly wheat production from 12 million tons to 21 million. West Pakistan has gone from importer to exporter of wheat and rice. The Philippines, which used to import one million tons of rice a year, is now self-sufficient and soon will be exporting.

In varying degrees, the Green Revolution also has been felt in Turkey, Malaysia, Burma, Indonesia, Afghanistan, Kenya, Tunisia, Morocco, Algeria, Libya, Brazil and Paraguay. The spread has been fast, nowhere near fast enough to suit Borlaug, but Asia, for example, in five years has gone from only 200 acres seeded in the new high-yield cereals to 40 million.

In 1965, India and Pakistan ordered 600 tons of Borlaug's seeds. At the last moment, when the shipment was ready to go, a snag developed; somebody discovered two words misspelled in the $100,000 letter of credit from Pakistan. Bank officials in Mexico said to hold up the ship. This was on a Friday and Borlaug roared, "Ship the damned seed, anyway. We'll fix everything Monday."

On Monday, war broke out between India and Pakistan and it took three weeks to straighten out the letter of credit. "I caught hell from everybody," Borlaug says, "but if the seed hadn't gone then it would have delayed planting a whole year." The next year, both countries, with Borlaug insinuating to each that the other was moving ahead agriculturally, vastly increased their seed orders and the Green Revolution was on in Asia.

More often than not, Borlaug went with it, training, teaching, arguing, pounding desks, pleading, threatening, cajoling, and frequently stepping on toes that only his more tactful employers, the Rockefeller Foundation, could soothe. He talked with farmers large and small, local scientists, bureaucrats, Cabinet members, prime ministers. In Pakistan, he was blocked by a hesitant government scientist who was afraid the new seed might fail and take his job with it. Borlaug went topside, to President Ayub Khan, and the thing was unstuck.

To senior or government scientists, he said, "You can't waste time chasing academic butterflies or enjoy the luxury of pursuing abstract details that have little to do with the production of bread for people's bellies. You can't wait for the perfect plant while people go hungry. Progress is made by using the best that is available right away while trying to improve it."

To others, he said, "I wouldn't give a nickel for a scientist with no social motivation."

Borlaug has a strong, no-nonsense face, blue eyes, graying sandy hair, stubborn chin and a powerful wiry body kept trim by long hours in the wheat fields of Mexico, where during spring harvest the heat ranges from 105 to 118. In his favorite outfit of baseball cap, zippered jacket, chino slacks and boots, he looks more than anything else like a coach, which he is, on several levels.

He was a college wrestler at the University of Minnesota and after coming to Mexico in 1944 introduced Little League, Pony and Colt League baseball to the country to provide his son with a chance to learn to compete. Borlaug himself coached 12 teams and won 11 league championships.

These days he has no time for baseball, but he is still a coach. Every year he and his staff train young agricultural students from abroad in the use of the new seeds and the slow arduous research methods that produced them.

Russia recently expressed an interest in the program. "I told them okay," Borlaug says, "if they send us agricultural students, not politicians."

His classroom here in northern Mexico is quite a sight. To the east, the brown humps of the Sierra Madre mountains and the mesquite and cactus and sand of semi-desert. In the foreground, the rich, well-irrigated wheat fields and there, under the big sky, in his baseball cap, speaking Spanish and English with lingering traces of Norwegian, surrounded by young foreign students in jeans and straw hats, some from friendly countries, some not, all listening intently to a simple non-doctrinaire man from Iowa whose simple gospel is, "Food is the moral right of all who are born into this world."

He tells them they will need to work hard in the mud and dust, the heat and the cold. He tells them their backs will ache as they learn to inoculate plants, one at a time, with disease to test their resistance, to observe closely the differing reactions to water, light, fertilizer and carbon dioxide. He tells them they must learn to live with the plants, "to learn to talk to them and they'll talk back to you if you're listening and not sitting in some damn office." He tells them the ever present purpose of all this is not to produce a scientific paper, but to increase the yield and feed more people, and food will raise the level of man everywhere. He tells them there will be difficulties when they return home, that they will have to man the line, that in this game, "the quarterback always has to scramble to throw the long bomb against hunger," and, if all that sounds corny, it has, nonetheless, proven good for wheat.

Borlaug lives simply—in Mexico City in a small apartment with his wife; in Obregon, where he spends several months a year, in a drab leaky motel, in a town where they named a street "Calle Dr. Norman Borlaug," where the farmers made rich by his wheat live in lavish, block-square houses.

He couldn't care less. He doesn't know his own salary and just "keeps writing checks until they bounce." Regarding money, about all he knows is that the entire wheat program has cost no more than one Phantom jet, that if he could get more for research he would intensify the development of treticalle, a wheat-rye cross that could give many hungry people abroad the protein they desperately need.

In Obregon, he has no office, secretary or phone of his own. At night he takes calls next to the cash register of the motel restaurant, calls from around the world, from governments, universities, scientists, and the United Nations. He loathes writing letters but when the Nobel award brought serious inquiries from around the world, he set out to answer them all, by hand, some two and three pages long. He got through 50 of them before he was persuaded to adopt a form response.

His work goes on, intensely, constantly in search of newer, stronger wheat plants because "mother nature gives very reluctantly and if you get complacent and start preening like a peacock she'll bash your head in with a new disease." His travels abroad go on, this year to include a visit with Prime Minister Indira Gandhi in the hope of persuading her that what was done with wheat in India can be done with rice, corn and sorghum.

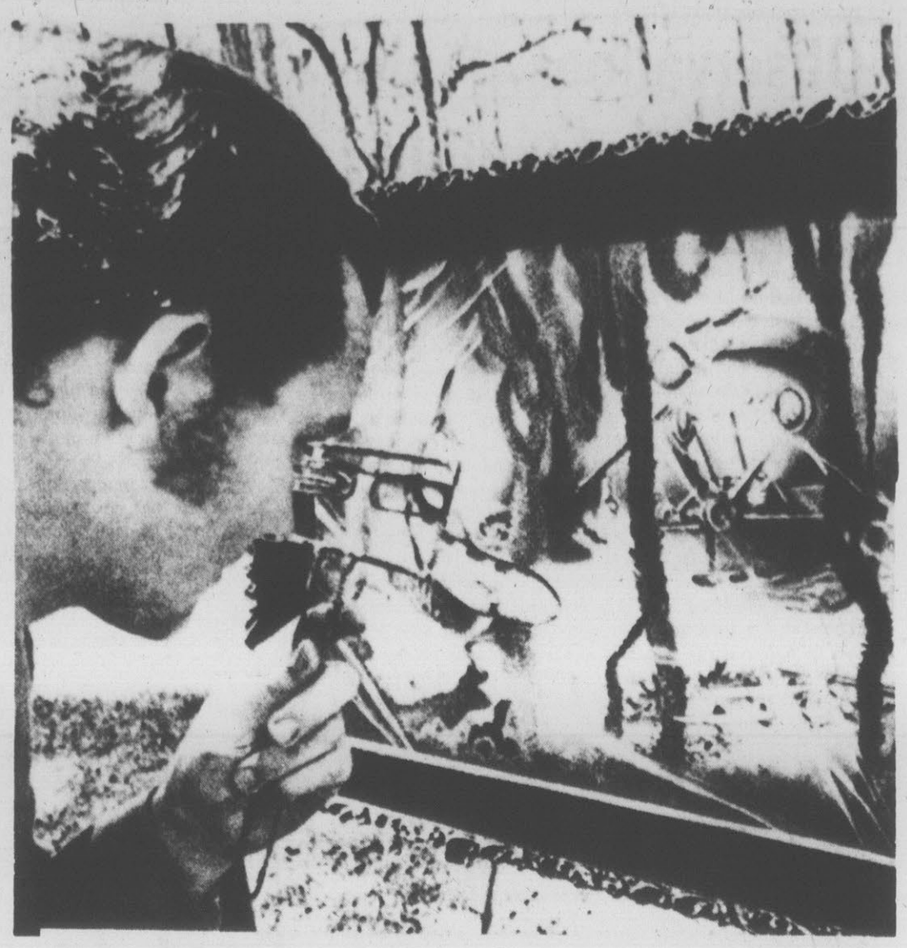

His preoccupations, day and night, are food and the population explosion which, "if we don't get smart we'll be the monster that will destroy us all." He knows that his own work and the Green Revolution have added to the population boom but asks, simply, "Do you control population by letting people starve?"

He points out that with the new high-yield grains the small farmer of Asia can begin to afford to replace his bullocks with simple threshing machines, his oxen with tractors and to improve the education of his children. In education, he says, lies the world's single hope of controlling its numbers.

In accepting the Nobel prize in Oslo, Norman Borlaug of Cresco, Iowa, stood up in his rented white tie and tails and pleaded with humanity to slow its own reproduction.

"If man is wise enough to make this decision," he said, "and if all nations abandon their idolatry of Ares, Mars and Thor, then mankind itself should be the recipient of a Nobel Peace Prize, which 'is to be awarded to the person who has done the most to promote brotherhood among nations.'

"Then, by developing and applying the scientific and technological skills of the 20th century for 'the well-being of mankind throughout the world,' he may still see Isaiah's prophesies come true ... 'And the desert shall rejoice, and blossom as the rose ... And the parched ground shall become a pool, and the thirsty land springs of water.'"

Tries Persuade Nixon Exercise

By ROBERT MUSEL

LONDON (UPI)—Bob Hoffman is convinced the United State needs a strong man in the White House.

And he is doing his best to turn President Nixon into one —talking about muscles, that is, not politics.

The biggest and oldest member of the President's Council on Physical Fitness flexed an arm the size of a Virginia ham in a hotel lobby and lamented the lack of biceps, pectorals and lattisimus doris on the frame of his political idol.

Nixon Fan

"I'm a great fan and supporter of President Nixon and have been since we first met in 1955, but I'll bet he doesn't use the dumbbells I sent him," Hoffman said, betting on a sure thing.

A towering 260-pounder, the 72-year-old Hoffman lists among his 600 trophies for athletic proness of one sort and another, the world's polka dancing championship which he snatched for the West one wild night in Poland. The other day he gave a floor shaking demonstration of terpsichore to other delegates to the International Health Foods Exhibition.

"That's a polka!" he said.

"That's a polka?" someone queried, well out of earshot.

No one is going to challenge a man who set a weight lifting record when he was 60 and ran a total of 50 miles the week in which he celebrated his 72nd birthday.

Hoffman said he lugged the dumbbells to the White House himself and tried to persuade the President to follow a regular routine of exercise. One of the exercises was jogging 300 steps a day but he says Nixon has confessed that some days he cheats and does only 100.

"The President says he hates and loathes exercise for its own sake although he loves sports and likes participating in sports," Hoffman said. "I told him that even if he loathed it, it would be a small price to pay for the way he would feel."

What would Hoffman prescribe as the ideal exercise routine for a President of the United States?"

Ideal Routine

'I'd like to see him running around the White House park," he said, a prospect bound to give the Secret Service sleepless nights. "I'd like to see him do six freehand and stretching exercises and six exercises for abdominal and general strength with dumbbells every day. It wouldn't cut into working time."

Although he says he has Mrs. Nixon's promise to see that her husband exercised regularly, Hoffman wishes he knew what was going on behind the historic facade in Washington. Yet not all presidents have been exercise-shy.

"I was a friend of John Kennedy, and he told me his ambition was to get big muscles but although he worked out he never built up muscle bulk."

A millionaire manufacturer of items including weight apparatus and health foods, Hoffman will as usual personally finance the U.S. Olympic weight lifting team to the Munich games of 1972.

He is married to a heroically proportioned lady named Alda Hoffman.

What is sacred, however, is the sense of sight.

We don't think you can haggle when it comes to protecting it. That's why we won't stint on quality of materials, equipment, or craftsmanship.

It may cost a little more, but isn't it worth it?

Scouts Of Ghetto Sparkle With Pride, Achievement

By JOHN RUTHERFORD

CHICAGO (UPI)—"We can't guarantee that a Chicago Boy Scout won't stick up a grocery store, shoot heroin or turn into a bum—but we'll give you odds," a Boy Scout advertisement reads.

Jesse White, a former Chicago teacher of the year, is trying to improve the odds for black kids in the ghetto.

White, 36, is the driving force behind the expansion of scouting at the Cabrini-Green Homes, a crime-infested highrise ghetto housing project on Chicago's Near North Side.

"I've lived in this neighborhood all my life," White said. "I know what these kids go through just to make it through the day. They deserve a lot of credit, and they deserve a lot of help. We'd only be hurting ourselves if we didn't try to work with them."

White began with five Boy Scouts a year and a half ago. Today, he is one of the leaders of over 330 cub scouts, boy scouts and explorer scouts in the Cabrini-Green project.

There are 33 scouting units with 950 scouts in Cabrini-Green, but White proudly referred to his as "the" Boy Scout troop in the housing project.

"We have the most well rounded troop in Chicago," he said. "We strive for the things that are going to help a boy later in life."

Athletics are a big part of the scouting program in White's troop. Scouts participate in every phase of athletics, from table tennis to advanced gymnastics. They have won nearly 30 team and individual trophies in athletics, including the YMCA physical fitness championships for Chicago.

"We try to keep the youngsters busy and involved," said White, who played triple-A baseball in the Pacific Coast League for eight years, and four years of basketball at Alabama State Teachers College.

"The Ghetto Gunners," White's Scout basketball team, represented Chicago in the National Explorer Olympics last summer at Fort Collings, Colo. Eighteen scouts earned $50 each working with the neighborhood youth corps to help pay for the trip.

Currently, the Scouts are getting in shape for the National Canoe and Kayak Racing Championships (Olympic style) this August near Rockford, Ill.

White takes his Scouts into other parts of Chicago as often as possible—the ghetto being the only place they knew before joining the Boys Scouts. Also into the country. Recently, 35 of his Scouts camped out in Wisconsin with 25 white Boy Scouts from another Chicago troop.

White takes his Scouts in shifts to Owasippe Scout Reservation in Michigan, which is owned by the Chicago Boy Scouts. And 150 Scouts have twice traveled to Echo Valley in Kalamazoo, Mich., for ice skating and tobogganing.

"We have something for everybody," White said, making the point that his troop is involved in more than athletics and Scout skills.

"We've even been able to get some of our kids involved in ballet," White said. Ed Parish, the owner of a Chicago dance studio, teaches ballet to five Scouts from Cabrini-Green free. Parish said they are "doing very well."

Two of the activities White's Scouts like the most are the troop's drill team and color guard. The units have performed at the Chicago Stadium twice and in many parades.

"Kids in the ghetto worship uniforms," White said. "They wear their uniforms proudly and they cherish them."

Uniform inspections are conducted at each weekly meetings. Personal hygiene—including hair cuts, clean fingernails and shoe shines—is stressed during the inspections.

White's concern for his Scouts goes beyond Scout activities.

"I take this thing personally. When a kid gets in trouble in school, he's in trouble with me," said White, who teaches at Schiller Grade School in Chicago.

He was named Chicago's Teacher of the Year in 1969. Along with the award, White received $500, which he spent on his Scout troop.

White's troop "exists on a shoestring" financially and depends upon donations to keep going. He told of two of the people who donated money to his troop.

Joe-Rosa, from the Chicago suburb of River Forest, Ill., gave $250 to White's troop and later spent $350 on Christmas presents for underprivileged kids. He signed the presents, "God Bless You From a Friend." A sergeant in Vietnam, Steven Rogge, heard about White's troop and donated $400. The money was spent on tents, flags, drums and Christmas presents.

At birth, opossums are so small that nearly 20 will fit into a teaspoon.

Narcotic-Fighters Turn To Churches For More Help To Avert Disaster

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the last year, arrests for drug smuggling rose 88 per cent. Seizures of marijuana tripled. They multiplied 15 times in the case of cocaine, more than doubled for hashish. Local arrests of dope pushers and users soared across the United States.

This is part of the picture of rising drug traffic outlined by government officials last week before an extraordinary White House gathering of top-level leaders of the nation's religious bodies.

"At most, we have 10 years to prevent a social catastrophe, if it is not too late already," said John Ingersoll, director of the Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs, which has 1,000 agents ferreting out suppliers.

Myles J. Ambrose, Bureau of Customs commissioner, said the drug "cancer in our society" has spread with "frightening speed and intensity" among the young, in colleges, in businesses and the military.

"We have an epidemic on our hands that can produce an American disaster," he said. "We've lost more Americans to heroin than there are victims of the war."

The gathering involved a day-long presentation of facts, figures, drama and films, depicting the scope of drug abuse, expanding efforts of the government to combat it and appeals to the church leaders for help.

President Nixon, saying the "heart of the problem" lay in the human spirit and motivation, told the churchmen: "If there is an answer, you have it."

It was the first time the Nixon administration had met with the country's religious leadership, including top officials both of mainline and smaller denominations, Christian and Jewish.

"It is clear that on this issue we all have a responsibility, and it's something we can move together on in various ways," commented the Rev. Dr. A. Dale Fiers, of Indianapolis, chief executive of the Christian Church (Disciples).

The Rev. Dr. J.H. Jackson, of Chicago, president of a 5.5-million-member predominantly black denomination, the Baptist Convention of the U.S.A., said after hearing the reports of increasing drug abuse and its ravages:

"We've come to a crisis and an impasse. The government has recognized it as a moral problem and also the dynamism of religion and its responsibility for renewal in our culture and for restoring the lost values of the nation."

John C. Broger, director of the Armed Forces Office of Information, linked drugs to the rock-music culture, citing evidence from song lyrics, the youth underground and rock festival scenes.

"My personal conviction is that we are facing the worst crisis in 1,000 years," he said.

Dr. Bertram S. Brown, director of the National Institute of Mental Health services, said part of the solution is finding "meaningful alternatives for turning people on to life rather than a chemically induced haze."

He described damaging effects of various addictive drugs. As for marijuana, he said two more years of research now in progress will be needed to determine the full effects, but it already is known that marijuana can "impair memory" and users of high-potency marijuana sometimes develop anxiety and panic.

In Saigon, Ambrose said, "you can buy marijuana as easily as toothpaste" and heroin almost as easily.

Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell and secretary of housing and urban development, George Romney, also stressed the spiritual nature of the problem, citing a vacuum in values, meaning and purpose, particularly among the young.

Egil Krog Jr., the President's deputy assistant for domestic affairs, said concern shown by the religious leaders indicated the value of another possible similar gathering in two months, with fuller chance for mutual discussion.

The White House is sending them a questionaire on their views about reconvening.

Brokers Suspect Technology Is Moving Into Growing Disfavor

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — "We're keeping all technology companies out of our portfolios," said the young stock broker, claiming that in so doing he was merely recognizing a developing trend.

"This country is fed up with technology," he said. "Look where it got us," he said, and he rattled off a long list of problems familiar now to almost everyone: pollution and malfunctioning machines and an obsession with material acquisitions.

"The reaction has set in," he said.

As he saw it, the rejection of further federal funds for development of the supersonic transport plane supplied conclusive evidence of the direction the nation was taking.

"Away from technology," he said.

He added more evidence: thousands of engineers and technicians without jobs, a droff in demand for Ph.D's, slumping sales at once glamour science firms on Boston's Route 128 and in Palo Alto, Calif., a restatement of "progress" by the nation's intellectuals to emphasize human values.

"Can you deny it?" he asked.

Brokers aren't the only ones talking that way today, but they are among the foremost with the antitechnology argument. One explanation is that many of the high technology stocks that rose like rockets died like them too.

But, as is sometimes the case, brokers can be wrong. Evidence also suggests that while technology might have gotten us into a mess technology also will have to get us out.

The problem really isn't the failure of technology, it appears, so much as it is the failure to contain and direct technology toward human goals.

The problem of urban erosion, it is argued, cannot be corrected by settling on the moon, nor can the conflict over usage of the nation's streams be resolved by banning humans for using them, nor the health problems of the aged by learning to live in space.

The solution to the transportation problems lay not in going faster and faster over great distances but in providing reliable transportation to and from and within cities and states and regions. That is the argument.

While it hardly can be disputed that technologists often were happy to devote their talents to the projects over which there is now much resistance, it should be noted also that they were among the first to object.

In a small way, partially as a result of their efforts, that redirection of technology already is taking place. Some corporations, it appears, are still mainly talking rather than acting on antipollution measures, but a great deal of talk is somehow a prerequisite.

Talk helps define the problems and the possible solutions, which now appear to be hung up on the notion that a corporation cannot spend its shareholders' money on such "nonprofit" goals as a wholesome environment.

Still, a survey by the Conference Board shows that 271 major manufacturers spent $487.2 million in 1970 for pollution-control facilities, 24 per cent more than the $394 million spent in 1969.

And more symbolic of the redirection of technological efforts is the recently announced terestrial goal of Boeing, whose engineering efforts were once almost solely devoted to aerospace and which was to produce the SST.

Even before the SST funding was defeated in Congress, Boeing had announced plans to shift one-third of its output from commercial and military aircraft to areas such as surface transportation and community development over the next 10 years.

If properly directed, it appears highly unlikely that technology will be rejected. It's potential for accomplishment, as proven in space, is too great to reject on earth.

Friction And Sniping Inside Supreme Court Is Mounting

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press s Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — About 90 years ago Chief Justice Melville W. Fuller decided a good way to keep Supreme Court tempers cool was to have the justices shake hands before they voted.

For all anyone knows, the tradition is still alive in the conference room behind the bench. But there's reason to wonder whether the 36 handshakes aren't an empty gesture.

Out in the open, in their opinions and on the bench, the Justices are taking potshots at each other. Those on the losing side of a decision are quick to suggest the winners really don't know how to read the Constitution.

That kind of sniping isn't new. But it seems to be growing more pointed. Attacks on social philosophies, complaints that settled law is being foolishly unsettled and even unjudicial sarcasm have become more common.

Less noticed but equally significant is the increasing division on more secondary matters, such as whether to stay a lower court's ruling while an appeal is readied.

The best explanation for the friction is internal stress within the court as the old liberal majority grudgingly yields to a growing conservative force grouped around Chief Justice Warren E. Burger.

And though Burger has the court going more his way, he too will thunder darkly when on the losing side.

This week Black and William J. Brennan Jr. took their turns in the spotlight. Both spoke against a backdrop of defeat, both with extra drama.

The target of Black's blast was a 6-3 ruling that reversed a Wyoming man's burglary conviction. The majority said police did not have enough evidence to justify the radio bulletin that led to the man's arrest.

Black, who headed up the dissenters, accused the majority of feeding public beliefs that "our court actually enjoys frustrating justice by unnecessarily turning professional criminals loose."

The decision, Black said, was "a gross and wholly indefensible miscarriage of justice."

The attack was clearly intentional. Black put his glasses on and read carefully from his opinion besides adlibbing during the 15-minute discourse.

Normally reserved and an accomplished mediator, the liberal justice took the gloves off in a dissent from a 5-4 ruling that the states can deny inheritances to illegitimate children.

"Today's decision," Brennan wrote, "cannot even pretend to be a principled decision."

DECATUR, Ill. (AP) — A Decatur physician and surgeon says South Vietnamese patients were very appreciative of his services.

Dr. Arthur L. Ennis recently returned from a two-month tour through a program of medical assistance of the American Medical Association, the Volunteer Physicians for Vietnam.

Ennis said he was stationed in a 267-bed hospital as a surgeon. He aided both Vietnamese and the Army physicians. Cases he treated included motorcycle accidents, fractures, some gunshot and shrapnel cases, burns, malaria, typhoid, hook worm, round worms and tape worms.

Banned Book Display Seen

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The San Francisco Public Library has on display a collection of Suppressed Books—volumes that have been banned at various times and places for moral, political, religious or racial reasons.

Some of the titles are surprising:

Hemingway's "The Sun Also Rises." Mark Twain's "Huckleberry Finn." Whitman's "Leaves of Grass" and Galileo's "Dialogue Concerning the Two Chief World Systems" (he claimed the earth revolved around the sun instead of the reverse).

The display also includes the library's own statement of opposition to book-banning, including a copy of the Library Bill of Rights which states that "censorship should be challenged by libraries."

The library says book-banning is not a relic of the Middle Ages and cites two examples:

You can't live on love forever.

Okay, you're young. You've got all the love in the world and you're doing your best to live on it. Retirement? That's for when you're old, right?

It's for when you're old if you can afford it.

The kind of retirement you're after isn't the typical rocking-away-on-the-front-porch variety. You probably picture yourself taking extended vacations, pursuing hobbies, or buying that forty acres and living off the land. Pipe dreams? Not if you prepare now.

There's an easy, painless way to make your retirement dreams a reality. Join the Payroll Savings Plan where you work. That way, an amount you specify will be set aside from each paycheck and used to buy U.S. Savings Bonds. It's an easy way to save.

And now there's a bonus interest rate on all U.S. Savings Bonds—for E Bonds, 5½% when held to maturity of 5 years, 10 months (4% the first year). That extra ½%, payable as a bonus at maturity, applies to all Bonds issued since June 1, 1970... with a comparable improvement for all older Bonds.

Now is the time to start saving. Money's a nice thing to have while you're living on love forever.

Bonds are safe. If lost, stolen, or destroyed, we replace them. When needed, they can be cashed at your bank. Tax may be deferred until redemption. And always remember, Bonds are a proud way to save.

Singing Star Marguerite Piazza Tells Cancer Fight

(EDITOR'S NOTE:
Opera and night club singing star Marguerite Piazza is chairman of the 1971 American Cancer Society Crusade. In this article she tells of her own experience as a victim of cancer.)

By MARGUERITE PIAZZA

NEW YORK (UPI)—No one will ever be able to call me a dropout. A dropout on life, that is. For you see, it is a miracle that I am alive today.

A very skilled surgeon removed a large part of the right side of my face three years ago in order to save my life from melanoma, a deadly form of cancer which spreads rapidly and kills quickly. The surgeon told me that in order to save my life he would have to mutilate me. Or, he said I could be very beautiful in a coffin.

Does that sound harsh and ugly? It was harsh, and to the point. I gave up all thought of my looks in favor of surviving in order to take care of my six children.

Today, after six plastic surgery operations, I not only have my life, but my looks have been restored. I not only have my six children to love, but a new husband as well. If you were to look at a picture of me, you would probably not even be able to detect my scar. Or better still, meet me as I travel throughout the nation as National Crusade Chairman of the American Cancer Society.

It was in Cincinnati, where in 1971 Crusade was launched last January, that my own story began 10 years ago. It was there that I had to endure hours of fear in a damp dressing room. I was afraid because my mother had finally told me that she had discovered a lump in her breast. She had ignored it and ignored it, and she waited too long. At the very end she refused pain-killing medication and would only take aspirin. When the day came for me to face cancer I guess I was not prepared for it either. I wasn't ready to drop out.

At first I was inclined to ignore the little pink spot on my cheek. A little bit of makeup and it was gone. Not quite. In 1965 the pinkness started to spread and I heard the diagnosis "cancer."

It couldn't be happening to me. Me, the girl who was so lucky in show business that she never had to ask a producer for a job. A singer so fortunate that she was discovered and signed by the Metropolitan Opera after a television appearance. A woman married to a wonderful, understanding man and blessed with six children. But it did happen to me.

I underwent an operation that lasted more than three hours and when it was over we thought the problem was over. But the spot never quite went away. Neither did trouble. By 1967 my husband was in the grip of a heart disease. It was so severe there was nothing to be done but cheer him at his bedside and weep in the hospital corridor.

Barely seven months after his death, in October of 1968, I had to undergo radical surgery. My pink spot had become melanoma. I was to lose my right cheek, the lymph glands on that side of my neck and much of the muscle in my right shoulder.

After the surgery, a comforting calm came over me. I never became hysterical again. Besides, it is very hard to cry when you want to live so much that self pity is only self defeating.

Four months after my operation I really showed my face to the world by singing at President Nixon's inaugural gala. Since then I have had plastic surgery six times.

I didn't want people to look at me after my operation. Wounded vanity can hurt. But I wasn't ready to drop out of the spotlight. My voice was undamaged. The plastic surgeons had done marvels.

One night, after I finished singing at Manhattan's posh St. Regis, an old friend brought a man named Harry Bergtholdt backstage. We went for dinner. We saw each other again in Memphis. Last November we were married.

Harry is from San Francisco and I'm from Memphis and the two of us are cross-country commuters. Harry doesn't want me to work, but two days before our marriage I took on a job that met his approval — 1971 National ACS Crusade Chairman. I've never worked harder even when it was for money! People have to be educated to take care of their bodies.

There are 1,500,000 Americans alive today who are cured of cancer. Do you know what that means? I do with every breath I take. Today, if the disease is detected early and treated promptly, we could cure one-in-two cancer patients. That's right —one-in-two — without waiting for a single new thing to be discovered.

Be aware of yourself —learn cancer's warning signals — that's what I try to tell people. As a woman I am furious that thousands of women are dying NEEDLESSLY each year of uterine cancer when there is a simple, painless, quick Pap test that can detect the disease before its symptoms develop. The conquest of uterine cancer is a special theme of the 1971 campaign.

Old Rebels Like Hippies

MOSCOW (UPI)—"According to popular opinion they were a band of fanatical young men and women ... who had determined to turn the world upside down and to introduce a new kind of social order ...

"As a first step toward the great tramsformation they reversed the traditional order of things in the matter of coifure. The males allowed their hair to grow long and the females cut their hair short, adding occasionally the badge of blue spectacles.

"Their unkempt appearance naturally shocked the aesthetic feelings of ordinary people but to this they were indifferent.

The Berkeley Barb? The East Village Other or any other underground American newspaper?

It is taken from Sir Donal Mackenzie Wallace's book, "Russia on the Eve of War and Revolution."

History appears to repeat itself and the Russians have a prima facie claim to having fathered the hippie and "New Left" movements.

Seminar On Fair Credit Reporting Slated Tuesday

A seminar on "Fair Credit Reporting Act" will be held Tuesday from 9:30 a.m. until 11:30 a.m. in the council room of City Hall.

Sponsored by the Greenville Chamber of Commerce and Merchants Association, the seminar is being held for the purpose of explaining the new law which goes into effect on April 25.

The "Fair Credit Reporting Act", recently passed by Congress, is a new law that guarantees certain consumer rights in the reporting of credit information about consumers to credit granters, and it applies to consumers, credit granters, and credit reporting agencies.

The seminar is free to chamber members. Non-members may send personnel at a cost of $5 per employee.

Counselor Will Attend Meet

Dr. Wilbert Ball of the East Carolina University Guidance and Counseling Center will attend a statewide conference in Raleigh April 5-6.

Sponsored by the N.C. Committee on Children and Youth and the N.C. Social Service Department, the conference is allied with the President's 1970 White House Conference on Children and Youth.

Dr. Ball was appointed to the Governor's Advisory Council for the state Committee for Children and Youth last year.

House Plan For Modern Comfort

WHERE LIVING IS EASY — The Alderney, designed by the Associated Architects, is a comfortable four-bedroom, two-story model that would be ideal for a modern, active family. It also has a large family room, living room, dining room, modern kitchen, two and a half baths, utility room, large garage and storage area. Plans do not call for a basement, although one could be provided.

By GERRY BISHOP

The Associated Architects followed this principle in designing the Alderney. They came up with a four-bedroom, center-hall two-story that offers a host of living conveniences.

This model would fit nicely into the everyday routine of a modern active family. It has all the amenities of a comfortable home, ranging from a large family room to two and a half baths.

The exterior is distinguished by a second-floor balcony and large, full-length windows in the two front rooms. Brick veneer and siding could be combined to enhance the front elevation.

By eliminating the basement, building costs are held down. However, it would be no problem to provide a cellar if one were desired.

With provision for the attached garage, the Alderney could be built on a 75-foot lot. Or it could be located on a narrower lot by putting the garage in the basement.

Good Traffic Pattern

The main entrance opens into a small hall. The living room is to the left, the family room to the right and the stairs to the second floor are straight ahead.

The large family room would be an ideal center of informal activities.

Both the family room and living room have dimensions of approximately 13 feet by 16 feet.

There's an openness to the first-floor layout that is delightful. One room seems to flow into another.

In this manner the living room is connected to the dining room, creating an illusion of spaciousness. Actually, the dining room has fine dimensions, too. It is approximately 12-feet square.

The furnace and water heater are closeted behind the powder room, with access to the outside.

Built-in appliances and cabinets make the kitchen a modern workshop. Since both sides of the dining bar can be used, there wouldn't be any problem with informal meals.

The utility room has space for a washer, dryer and storage area. It is located between the kitchen and garage and has access to the back yard.

There's another larger storage area behind the garage.

The master bedroom is located in the right rear corner of the house. It has a private bath with shower and built-in vanity. There's also a closet the width of one wall.

The two front bedrooms are larger than the master bedroom and each has a large closet.

The fourth bedroom would make a fine nursery or child's quarters. It also has a large closet.

There are 1,824 square feet of living area in the Alderney. The outside dimensions are approximately 53 feet by 29 feet.

Tax Reform Act Might Save Dollars If Move Made To New Job Site

By DOROTHEA M. BROOKS

NEW YORK (UPI)—If you moved to a new job location during 1970, the Tax Reform Act of 1969 could put extra dollars in your pocket.

If you meet certain qualifications, you may find you are allowed substantial income tax deductions under the act, which revised the rules regarding moving expenses.

He passes along the following to take the mystery out of IRS Form 3903, recommending also that taxpayers who feel they may be eligible for moving deducations study the instructions on the back of IRS Form 3903 and obtain a copy of Booklet 521 supplied at all IRS offices.

For a move to be deductible, Bradley said, the Internal Revenue sets these conditions:

—You must be moving to a new job location, for either a new or old employer.

—Your new job must be 50 miles farther from your old home than the former place of employment, figured on the shortest, most commonly used route.

—You must work in the general area at least 39 weeks in the 12-month period following your move. In this respect, the new ruling permits you to claim the deduction immediately, even if the 39 weeks have not elapsed at filing time. If you willingly leave the area of new employment before satisfying the 39-week requirement, and you have received credit for the deductiion on your tax return, you simply include the amount as income on the following year's tax return. In the case of death, disablement, or involuntary discharge the deduction remains valid.

Bradley said: "You do not have to work for the original employer the entire 39 weeks. Should you acquire a different job in the same general area, still working 39 weeks in that 12-month period, the move still may be deducted."

Once you have established eligibility under these conditions, he said, you can deduct:

—Moving expenses of household goods and personal effects. Includes packing, cartage, in-transit storage and insurance.

—Traveling expenses, increased this year to include three trips with the following stipulations: The individual will make two trips alone after obtaining employment (from the old residence to the new area to secure a home and back to the old residence.) He then may deduct traveling expenses for himself and family, including pets, from the old locale to the new home. Expenses include transportation, meals and lodging, as well as meals and temporary quarters for up to 30 consecutive days after obtaining employment. If traveling by car, out-of-pocket expenses such as gas, oil and repairs are deductible, or a flat rate of six-cents per mile. A $1,000 limitation is placed on travel expenses except those involving the actual move.

—Expenses attributable to change of residence are those involving the sublease of an apartment; meeting conditions of an unexpired lease; newspaper advertisements or realty fees necessary to sell a home; the cost of obtaining a mortgage on the new residence. The limitation on these deductions is $1,500.

Bradley cautioned people taking advantage of the revised law to be reasonable. "The IRS does not allow expenses involved with moving household help; cost of disconnecting or connecting utilities; mortgage penalties; temporary living expenses in the area of the old residence (in the event premises must be vacated prematurely because of sale or lease of property); refitting of drapery, carpeting, or other furnishings.

The Garden Clinic

N. S. State University Answers Timely Gardening Questions

Q. You were wrong when you said in a recent Garden Clinic column that cucumbers and watermelons would not cross. We planted some close together last year and the watermelons never got red or had any flavor. My gourds and cantaloupes also mixed. (Mrs. S. J., Statesville.)

A. Many people have reported vine crops (cucurbits) that have crossed with one another, but scientists have never found an incident where this actually occurred. If your gourds and cantaloupes mix this year, give me a call. You could make scientific history. (George Hughes, extension horticulturist)

Q. Please tell me the best time of year to separate and repot African Violets. (Mrs. E. V. Jr., Lincolnton)

A. There is hardly a "best" time of year to do this — since plants are divided whenever they become too crowded in the containers. However, many experienced African Violet growers do most of their repoting and dividing work in the early spring when their plants start into heavy new growth. (Henry J. Smith, extension horticulturist)

Q. Last year caterpillars made webs in ornamental apple and cherry trees in our yard. What should we do if they appear this year? (J. S., Clayton)

A. I am quite sure that the insects referred to are known as Eastern tent caterpillars. They overwinter in the egg stage on trees. About the time new growth starts the eggs hatch and the young larvae or caterpillars begin to make webs or "tents". The caterpillars can be controlled by spraying with carbaryl (Sevin), malathion or methoxychlor. Use according to label directions. Sometimes the removal of wild trees in the immediate vicinity is helpful. (H. Eldon Scott, extension entomologist)

Q. My peach trees are showing pink and will soon be in bloom. My wife just hasn't had time to prune them. Is it too late? (M. B., Hillsborough)

A. No. You can prune them at full bloom or at petal fall. You need new wood about the size of a lead pencil for good peaches. You get this by pruning and following other good cultural practices. (Mel Kolbe, extension horticulturist)

Avoid Those Cuts, Bruises; Cut Down On Kitchen Noises

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

If you have a habit of cutting yourself with sharp knives or if you are continually falling off the step-stool in the kitchen, it doesn't necessarily mean you are accident prone. It might be that your kitchen noise factor is too high, and in trying to escape, you injure yourself.

This is an idea that is leading to a new study of design principles which might be identified as the psycho-biology of design, says Professor Donald C. Hay of the University of Wisconsin. He is chairman of the Department of Environmental Design that has just made a study of "The Auditory Environment in the Home," under a grant provided by John Koss, who developed the concept of the stereo phone.

The home study may lead to other studies involving the effects of noise on animals in the home—dogs have a much higher frequency range—and on the elderly—whose joints may be affected by low vibrations. It might lead to further studies on the developmental problems of pre-adolescents where it might be shown that boys respond better to the voice of male teachers.

"In the study we were trying to correlate noise of products connected with tasks in the kitchen ... the extent to which startling effects may cause one suddenly to focus away from one's tasks. We have found kitchens are a deafening place for the housewife," Hay explained in an interview.

Knives are a great cause of accidents in the home. Ditto cooking ranges, ovens, pots, pans and minor appliances, he says. In addition to chugging, humming, whirring and whining noises, there are furnace sounds —the loud purring of a radiator or the bang, bang of baseboard hot water pipes. And then there are smaller noises such as electric shavers.

If you can escape noises above 60 decibels and close the door, great. Or you might try wearing ear muffs. You won't notice an airplane at 60 decibels if you are tuned to music.

Noises are decibel deceivers though. Whereas the earsplitting knife sharpener registers in at only 80 decibels, the seemingly less noisy blender and wall-exhaust fan are likely to give off at 90 decibels—noise factors that might cause the skin to pale, the pupils to dilate and the adrenalin to increase, impairing work efficiency. The range vent fan registers in at 85, the garbage disposal at 80 and the dishwasher at a mere 70. A comforting thought might be that everything can be run at the same time without the decibel rate going appreciably above the highest noisemaker. It might be the clue to solving kitchen problems—turn everything on for one big blast, and go outdoors.

The environmental course at Wisconsin is for graduate students who have completed design training in interiors, architecture, landscape or industrial design, providing them with information that should be useful in getting a clearer picture of the home in terms of the amount of noise or levels of sound, they explained.

Koss sponsored the university study on the auditory environment in the home to find out whether noise factors can be solved in future product design and whether home environment can begin to meet the needs of the family rather than the family adjusting to it.

"There have been all sorts of studies on the effects of jet noises and factory noises, but no one has gotten in to the home areas," he explained.

Other ideas have come out of this noise study, he says, He is thinking about radar-like devices that might be worn by blind people, and he is working on new devices for the hard of hearing.

Here's How To Do It

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q.—We bought an unfinished coffee table at our neighborhood lumber yard. At first we were going to finish it with varnish or lacquer, but wife has now decided she wants a laminated plastic top. Can it be put on right over the wooden top or must the wood be treated first?

A.—It can go on over the wood. However, since the top of the wood will be protected from air and moisture and the bottom will not, it might be a good idea to seal the bottom as well as any edges that won't be covered. A mixture of 50 per cent shellac and 50 per cent denatured alcohol will do the trick. This will prevent possible warpage. You can use the same sealer on the rest of the table unless you already have plans to finish it with something else.

Q.—I used varnish remover to get the old finish off a bureau. Everything came off all right except on the top, where there are still some streaks of what looks like stain. I am afraid to try to sand out these marks because the top has a thin layer of veneer on it and I might sand right through the veneer. What is the solution?

A.—You are correct in thinking about the possibility of taking off too much of the veneer, although you could try a very light sanding or steel wooling without risking a bad result. A safer way would be to bleach the top. I assume you plan to use a clear finish, because if you are going to paint the bureau or use a dark stain, it is not necessary to get out the streaks.

Q.—We want to put a small bathroom in our basement. Is this a difficult job and can I do it myself?

A.—Not knowing your capabilities, I can't answer that. But remember that some communities ban do-it-yourself plumbing when it involves cutting into a line. Since it is necessary to connect the bathroom fixtures to the soil pipe, a plumber is advised. The difficulties that are encountered in this type of installation are centered around the proximity of the new bathroom to the soil line which leads to the sewer, cesspool or septic tank. Sometimes, for instance, it is necessary to break into a concrete floor to make the connection.

Q—I am putting a subfloor in our attic, since I intend to make a couple of rooms there later in the year. I am using tongue-and-groove boards and nailing them diagonally to the joists. Is it necessary for me to cover the subfloor with anything before putting down the finish floor?

A—It depends on what you mean by "necessary." If nothing is placed between the sub floor and finish floor, there will be no loss of construction strength. But the placement of a layer of felt insulating paper will help make the floor dustproof, moistureproof, warmer and less likely to transmit sound.

Advice: Assume The Mortgage

NEW YORK (UPI)—Home buyers can save substantial amounts of money if they assume the existing mortgage on a house in view of today's comparatively high interest rates, according to Glen E. Jorgensen, president of Universal C.I.T. Credit Corporation. The company is active in the second mortgage money market.

Mortgages on homes purchased several years ago carry a lower interest rate than now prevails in the mortgage market. For homes bought 15 or 20 years ago, the difference is quite substantial.

Cite Drawbacks Inside A Home

NEW YORK (UPI)—Some of the interior environment pollutants identified by home furnishings experts include poor ventiliation, lack of natural light, lack of noise level control, ineffective traffic patterns, crowded claustrophobic conditions, disregard for color and its effects on individuals, and awkward and uncomfortable furnishings.

Fraternities Honor Dr. Best

Dr. Andrew Best, Greenville physician and an active member in civic and fraternity affairs, has been awarded a plaque for outstanding service with fraternities.

The plaque, awarded in Greensboro by the State Convention of Alpha fraternities, cites Dr. Best for his exceptional service. More than 50 different Alpha fraternities participated in the State convention which voted on making the award to the Greenville doctor.

Dr. Best, president of Zeta Eta Lambda, the graduate chapter of Alpha Phi Alpha in eastern North Carolina, was instrumental in developing plans for the establishment of Eta Nu Chapter of Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity at East Carolina University. This chapter is notable in that it is the first time in this area a predominantly black orgainzation has been formed on a campus that has student body that is predominantly white.

The new chapter was inaugurated on Saturday, March 20, with 11 charter members. John B. Clark of Greenville was named president of the chapter. Clark received the official charter Friday which recognizes the establishment of the new fraternity chapter at ECU.

Vast Area Kept For Training Marines

By DAN TEDRICK and JOHN PHILIP SOUSA
Associated Press Writers

CAMP PENDLETON, Calif. (AP) — Eighteen miles of sparkling beaches ... brooding peaks ... grassy valleys where cattle roam ... all warmed by a gentle sun, cooled by sea breezes.

Land developers lust for it. Beach and park officials in recreation-short California hunger for hunks of it.

But Uncle Sam says the "Not for Sale" sign is going to stay up on the 197 square miles of the Marine Corps' Camp Pendleton, the most magnificent piece of coastal land in the state's southern half still largely free of the taint of man.

Preserving it, the government says, is an environmental boon as well as a military necessity.

Pendleton, bounded on the north by the Western White House at San Clemente and on the south by the seaside community of Oceanside, is the largest sea-land military training base in the world.

Its shoreline is rimmed by dramatically vertical 100-foot cliffs, carved by the wind, notched by gullies, broken by occasional lagoons. Atop the cliff is a north-south freeway. Inland, the chapparal-coated Santa Margarita mountains, rising 3,000 feet and more, stretch beige and purple as far as the eye can see.

It has surprises. There are meadows where Leathernecks make like cowboys. There are stands of eucalyptus forest, and a 122-acre lake. Its lonely canyons meander endlessly, one looking much like another.

The Marines have won support from ecologists for their keep-the-land-unspoiled stand.

One, Dr. Malcolm Gordon of the University of California at Los Angeles, says: "Any chunk of reasonable countryside should be hung onto for dear life, because there's very little prospect that there'll be anything around that can be preserved. "Relatively undeveloped areas between population concentrations are important, so places like Camp Pendleton are important."

Since 1942, when President Franklin D. Roosevelt commissioned it, Camp Pendleton has been a buffer between Orange and San Diego counties, two of the boomingest areas of the nation's most populous state.

Raw land on the southern edge sells for $8,000 an acre. In the more built-up San Clemente area, President Nixon paid $340,000 for his 14-room vacation home and five acres. In valleys to the east land runs $3,000 to $8,000 per acre. Beachfront land anywhere in Southern California starts at $1,000 a front foot.

"There will be a megalopolis extending almost unbroken from Santa Barbara to the Mexican border" by the turn of the century, predicts the base logistics officer, Col. A.C. Bowen. "As far as the Marine Corps is concerned, Camp Pendleton then should be what it is today —an island of undeveloped real estate."

By the year 2,000, he says, the camp will be the only place in Southern California "where one can see land as it was in the state of nature."

There has been talk of turning the base into a national park or monument some day. Any such talk, the Marines say, should be related to military needs.

Do the Marines really need so much space? "We need our shoreline desperately for training because it encompasses every kind that Marines may be expected to assault some day," says a spokesman.

First white man to see the area was Gaspar de Portola, the Spanish explorer, in 1769. He named the Santa Margarita Valley for a martyred saint whose holy day it was.

Pio Pico, later Spanish governor in California, and his brother Andres controlled the land in the mid-1800s.

An Englishman, John Forester, married the Pico's sister Ysidora and bought the ranch. When Forester died in 1882, Richard O'Neil purchased the land for $250,000 but sold it soon for $450,000 to James Flood of San Francisco.

Heirs of O'Neil and Flood formed a corporation controlling the 181,000 acres, known as the Santa Margarita Ranch. The U.S. government paid $4.2 million for 120,000 acres when the need arose for a West Coast training base.

By the middle years of World War II, Camp Pendleton was crowded with young fighting men headed for battle in the Pacific.

Its manpower stands now at 32,000. A total of 170,000 sailors and Marines will have been trained at Camp Pendleton in 1970—from new recruits learning basic combat to veterans in advanced communication.

The air station at El Toro, 10 miles to the north, combines to form the Marines' major air-ground training operation for the Pacific.

The base is a khaki kaleidoscope of military training. Besides its use as a predeployment center for men headed for the western Pacific, it gives basic infantry training to new Marines and advanced training for regular infantrymen.

There are occasional large-scale sea-land assault operations with Navy ships, maneuvers involving planes from El Toro, field operations for artillery units, training the fleet Marine units, simulated combat in towns built to look like war zone villages in Asia and Europe.

And, there are problems.

Racial conflicts have made headlines. There have been half a dozen or more disturbances on the base, including near-riots in the crowded brig. Funds have been approved for new facilities and other steps taken to relieve tensions.

The FBI is investigating two incidents involving theft of weapons which some claim were earmarked for black militants.

The public is barred from most areas of the base.

Exceptions are visitors to a Southern California Edison nuclear power facility, beside the freeway at San Onofre, and the famed surfing beach at San Onofre where the waves rise high a quarter mile or more seaward.

Newcomers Are Not As Welcome

DAVIS, Calif. (UPI)—A new poll by University of California population experts indicates that millions of Californians want to cut off migration into the state to halt population growth.

About 50 per cent of white men and women spontaneously suggested in the poll that the state take steps to stop publicity that entices people to move to California and put restrictions on immigration to stop the burgeoning population.

About one-tenth of the U.S. population lives in California, most of them crowded into a narrow strip of land along the Pacific Coast because the vast interior is largely uninhabitable desert or mountains.

Dr. Judith Blake Davis, chairman of the Department of Demography at the Berkeley campus, reported the results of her survey taken with the cooperation of the California Poll at a symposium on population and environment.

She said her findings imply that population policy may be less of a taboo issue than politicians have traditionally feared.

Dr. Davis said that underlying the concerns spelled out in the survey is a conviction held by 80 per cent of the white citizens that population itself is a paramount factor in environmental problems.

She said her survey findings also disputed the notion that non-whites are indifferent to environmental problems.

In response to direct questions about environmental problems, she said, the percentage assigning "top priority" to the issue among non-whites is the same as for whites.

"However, what seems more important is that 77 per cent of the non-whites in the sample put the issue in first or second place in response to a direct question," Dr. Davis said.

"These data do not support the notion that non-whites generally view ecological concerns as a red herring to divert attention from racial problems."

The poll also indicated that many Californians do not have a clear picture of how many people are currently living in the state, in spite of their attitudes toward population growth.

Twenty per cent of the men and 32 per cent of the women thought they lived in a state with fewer than half the people who actually inhabit it —they thought the population was less than 10 million compared to the true figure of 20 million.

Policeman's Wife Doesn't Regret Or Relish Role

By DEE WEDEMEYER
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Every work day Rose Ann Guarnere straps her husband's gun on his uniform, kisses him goodbye and makes a ritual of saying, "God bless and I love you."

Then she spends the rest of the day hoping and worrying about his return.

She is a policeman's wife.

It is a role she neither relishes nor regrets. She just wishes someone could hear her side of the story.

She holds no grudges against the neighbor who shouts out, "A little payola, there, Joe?" when her husband carries in a package.

Nor does she mind the people who, in her presence, complain about high taxes when the police salaries are raised.

She does not mind the pickets she sees on news broadcasts carrying signs that refer to policemen as "pigs." That did bother her until someone told her P.I.G. stood for "Pride, Integrity and Guts."

But recently she saw something else on television and it bothered her to the core—a policeman's widow at her husband's funeral.

"I watched that woman on television. I thought it could have been me ... What would I tell my children that their father died for? Daddy was out there doing his job, doing right ... Who would take the place of Joe?"

Although Rose Ann has always worried about her husband, she had the security of knowing he worked in Roxborough, a predominantly middle class neighborhood, where teen-agers stealing cars for joy rides and house burglaries represent the main crimes.

Then one day Joe Kelly, the coworker of Joe's whose funeral Rose Ann watched on television, drove up a dimly-lit street and stopped a car being driven without lights.

The man, driving a stolen vehicle, shot him in the heart.

Joe Guarnere was one of the first on the scene.

"When I opened the car, I took one look at the blood and said, 'he's dead."

When Guarnere returned to the station he called Rose Ann and told her, "Joe Kelly got it."

All Rose Ann could think of was that normally Joe would have been in a car cruising, but that night he was in the police wagon, a two-man vehicle.

Later she learned another policeman had been killed that same day by a 15-year-old boy who said he wanted to avenge the shooting of a mentally retarded black man by two patrolman.

Both the dead policemen had been riding in one-man cars, a bone of contention among Philadelphia's 7,000 man police force.

The shootings sent the force into a two-week alert in which men worked 12-hour shifts so two men could ride in each car.

For the two weeks Rose Ann sent her husband to work at 6 p.m. He didn't return until the next morning at 6 a.m.

A neighbor told Rose Ann, "Think of the overtime."

"Everybody will forget in two weeks," she said sadly. "But there are two widows who have to make up for many tomorrows. Nothing could ever give me my husband. No scholarships. No funds. Nothing. They'll forget Joe Felly. But I feel like it should be a constant reminder of what society is turning out to be ... What kind of people are living in this city."

For Rose Ann and Joe there are poignant reminders. Joe has had to drive the same car Joe Kelly drove. The blood stains are still there, and there's a bullet hole in the automobile body. On his badge, Joe wears a strip of black elastic, a sign worn for 30 days when a policemen is killed in the line of duty.

It's the fifth time in 18 months he's had to wear it. In previous years the bands were made of paper, but recently the men have begun using more durable material. Joe always carries a spare band.

Normally, Joe's schedule rotates between 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., 4 p.m. to midnight or midnight to 8 a.m. Rose Ann tries to maintain a normal schedule. But there are irritations—she can't change the sheets because he's in the bed, and if he's five minutes late she finds herself pacing from the kitchen to the door.

Most of the day is spent cleaning their neat, South Philadelphia row house and fixing lunch for their two sons, Gene 5, and Joe, 9. Basically Rose Ann's life revolves around her husband.

"I really have changed since Joe has been on the force," says Rose Ann." "I tend to put everything in the background. Joe's No. 1. That shooting is fresh in my mind. It could happen to me too."

The Guarneres live a simple life. Occasionally they go out. They have discovered that mixing socially with non-police couples usually ends with their having to answer for the police force.

"If you're married to a policeman you really get it," says Rose. "They ask, 'Why this? Why do they have to do this?' A lot of time I say no comment. Usually a person already has his mind made up. In my heart I feel that Joe is doing the best he can. If he says he's right, he's right. That's how much trust and faith I have in him."

Joe's salary, about $10,000 yearly, does not allow for many luxuries but they do have a color television set and stay home to watch it.

His parents live nearby and visit often. At least twice a week his mother calls and asks hesitantly, "Is everything all right?" Rose Ann promised her mother-in-law that if anything happened to Joe she will call her first.

The Guarnere's children are young enough that they have not been affected by their father's job. Some policemen's children find themselves being looked on in school as narcotics agents. Others are faced with the dilemma of what to do when the kids start calling policemen "pigs."

Young Joe did come home from Mass one day and ask, "Why did the priest pray for the policemen?"

All things considered, Rose Ann still thinks the drawbacks are overcome by the fact that Joe is so happy with his work.

Guarnere joined the force in September 1969, after 10 years as a cover board cutter at a publishing house. Earlier he had been interested in becoming a policeman, but Rose Ann did not encourage him. The first time he took the police exam he failed. The second time he passed. She didn't have the heart to oppose his choice.

Rose Ann met Joe in 1959 when she was 19. He was 21 and fresh from the Marines Corps.

Joe derives strength from his Marine Corps service and insists that Rose Ann live up to the Marine image, too. When she is discouraged he tells her, "Be a Marine."

"I'm having babies by Caesarian and he says 'Be a Marine,'" she says with a laugh.

Rose Ann is not a politically active woman but she did recently join "Police Wives and Interested Citizens for Action," a group formed two years ago to lobby for policemen's rights and against citizen brutality.

At this organization's urging, Rose Ann and some 20 other women sent their children to babysitters and braved a snowstorm to attend a hearing for the two policemen who shot the mentally retarded man. Most wear their blue "Police Wives" ribbons. Some have miniature replicas of their husband's badge dangling around their neck.

For four hours they listen, as minor cases were brought up—a case was dismissed against a man arrested for selling New Jersey lottery tickets because the arresting policeman didn't actually witness the sale.

Finally the case against the policeman was called. Rose Ann sat on the edge of her seat.

The injured man's brother testified that he shouted at the policemen that his brother was retarded but they shot anyway. He said one stepped within three feet of his brother, already felled by one shot, and aimed before shooting.

Other testimony conflicted.

Finally the judge dismissed the case.

From the courtroom there were cries of "Ain't no justice in Philadelphia." "Pigs." "They'll get theirs." Television cameras recorded the scene as the spectators filed out. Across the street pickets held angrily worded posters.

"I'm glad I came," said Rose Ann. "If my Joe were in there I'd have wanted someone to support him ... "

She squared her shoulders and raised her head a little higher. Then she exited through the sea of angry faces.

Turning A Hill Into Large Hole

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — How do you turn a hill upside down? First, you cut it down to street level and haul away the unneeded dirt and rock, to be dumped into a depression where landfill is required. Then, you continue digging until you have a hole 30 feet deep.

That's what is happening to a section of Signboard Hill, a Kansas City landmark that is being eliminated to make way for a 750-room hotel in Crown Center, an urban redevelopment project in the midtown area. The hotel project alone required the removal of 375,000 cubic yards of earth.

ECU Grad Is Outstanding Young Educator

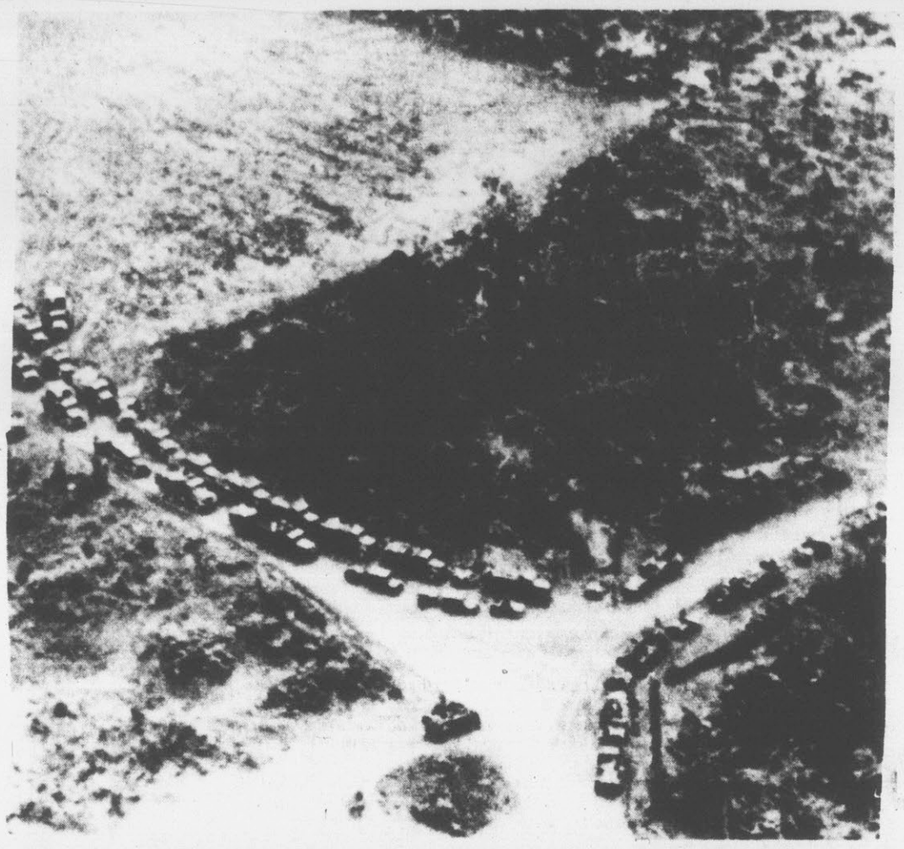

ROANOKE RAPIDS — Mrs. Beth Ward, an East Carolina University graduate, was named Outstanding Young Educator of the Year here recently.

The event was sponsored by the Roanoke Rapids Jaycees. Mrs. Ward was recognized as a reading specialist and an active member of the North Carolina Association of Educators. She has been associated with the Roanoke Rapids City Schools for eight years.

Mrs. Ward graduated from ECU with a B. S. degree in primary education and a minor in reading. She received her M. A. degree in primary education from ECU in 1966.

She is married to Charles Ward, principal of Akers School, and they have two children.

Snead Looking Forward To 1971 Season

Minnesota Vikings quarterback Norman Snead, right, talks with East Carolina University Coach Sonny Randle during a recent scrimmage session during the Bucs spring drills in Ficklen Stadium. For the past couple of weeks, the quarterbacking staff of the East Carolina University football team has had some expert help. That help is in the form of Minnesota Vikings quarterback Norman Snead.

Snead, a 1961 graduate of Wake Forest College, was drafted by the Washington Redskins, and played his first season as starting quarterback for them that fall. Several years later, he was traded to Philadelphia where he played until this winter.

Then, a few months ago, he was traded to the Vikings, and for Snead, it may be the start of something big.

Many observers feel that Snead has been handicapped in playing for two of the poorer teams in the league. But with the Vikings he's with a winner.

And how does it feel to be with a winner after all these years? "It feels good!" Snead said.

"I'll be going up later this month for a visit, then we'll have a quarterbacks meeting in May. I'll have to prove myself in camp, but I've been told I'll be given the opportunity to be the number one quarterback," he said. Cheif opposition for him will be last year's team leader Gary Cuozzo, long himself in the shadow of other quarterbacks. But Joe Kapp's leaving Minnesota opened the door for him. Snead now hopes to close it for him again.

Snead admits that the biggest thrill he's had over the past 10 seasons has been the building of many friendships with players and other people connected with the game. "And I guess being able to go out there and play has been a big thrill, too," he said.

There have been some changes during the time Snead has been with the pros. "The biggest differences are in the defenses. They used to use the standard 4-3 when I came up, with mostly man-to-man and some zone coverage. Now they've really gone to the zone more. They are doing on defense what we do on offense. They switch around a lot and run different things. This puts more pressure on the quarterback to make him adjust," he said.

But Snead feels that it is just as tough for an incoming quarterback to break in as it was 10 years ago for him.

Returning to the Minnesota job, Snead feels that the greatest odds against him is the unfamilarity he has with the Vikings. "I don't know their situation and their personnel too well. But I expect by the time I've been through training camp and the exhibition season, that will be taken care of."

Another problem could be his age. Snead will be 32 in July. Of course, George Blanda of the Oakland Raiders is 10 years older, and Johnny Unitas of the Colts just seems to go on forever, too.

"I guess how much longer I play depends on how healthy I stay. I'll play 'em day by day. I have two years to go on my present contract, and I certainly hope to play these out to assure myself financially," he said. "After I do finish, I guess I'll go into coaching, but I can't say what level it will be on. A lot depends on that."

Another problem he might run into will be the colder weather of Minnesota. "I really don't think it'll be a problem, however," he said. "The weather only gets to be a real problem later in the season, and I think I'll be adjusted by then. It's the people who come in for one game that are hurt by the weather. It's a lot harder to go into cold weather than it is to go into warm."

Turning to the East Carolina football camp, Snead is impressed by the facilities the university had. "They are quite good," he said.

"I think they have some good talent here too. The problem is that they don't have depth. I've been impressed by the attitude of the quarterbacks and how they are working with the staff," Snead said.

"I'm particularly impressed with (Carl) Summrell. He shows a great deal of potential. (Gary) Wann is doing what I'm going to have to do, make adjustments. He throws well, but it takes a little time. (John) Casazza is a real competitor, the veteran of the group. He adds stability to the team.

"It's really a perfect situation. You have a guy who has played here, one who's experienced but hasn't played here, and another young guy coming up. They compliment each other well."

Snead also said that he was impressed by the running backs and receivers.

For some time now there has been speculation about the future of East Carolina athletics. Many fans have hoped that the Pirates might point toward the ACC in the future. "Well, there's a vacancy now," Snead said.

"Really, I think a school has to decide on what rules it wants to abide by. Getting into a conference for prestige purposes when you can be hurt by the rules of that conference is not a good thing.

"An athletic program has to be sound. It is a part of the university program, and I don't think exceptions should be made for athletes when they are not made for other students."

Rose Takes Second From Robersonville

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

The Rose High School Rampants extended their winning string to five straight yesterday with a 4-1 victory over the Robersonville Golden Eagles. It was the second win over the Eagles in many days. (See story on page B-2)

Steve Arnaud had a perfect game going against Robersonville through the first four innings and had put down two in the fifth before the Eagles put together three straight hits and a walk to push over their only run.

Arnaud allowed one other walk in the sixth, and Kim Harbin set the side down in order in the seventh in releif.

Rose meanwhile had little trouble in getting men on base, but aside from the four runs did lettle scoring. Overall they left 12 men stranded, including ending three innings with the bases loaded.

Rose pushed over its first two runs in the first inning of play. Larry Hatton led off with a wlak, but was thrown out at second on Kim Harbin's grounder to third. With two out, Jimmy Paige walked and John Conway was hit by a pitch, loading the bases.

A wild pitch brought Harbin in with the first run, and Larry Dixon walked to reload the bases. J. C. Daniels hit a short single into right, bringing in Paige but the Rampants failed to bring another run around.

Rose came up with two more in the second. With one down, Hatton walked and Harbin followed with a single to left. Both stole up a base, and Bill Lee's grounder to short was not played, falling in for a hit, loading the bases again.

Conway dropped a single into left field, scoring both Hatton and Harbin for a 4-0 lead. Dixon walked for the second time, but again, with the bases loaded, the Rampants failed to score more.

In the third, Rose put runners at second and third as Arnaud reached on an error and Hatton singled off the short-stop's glove. Both advanced on a sacrificed but to no avail.

Again in the fifth, they threatened, but did not score. Daniels reached on an error, and Sugg singled, but a double play and a pop fly ended that threat.

Rose tried one more time, in the sixth. Again they loaded the bases as Lee walked, Jim McDermott reached on a fielder's choice and Derek Dunn walked. But Dixon grounded back to third and Lee was cut down at home, and a fly to the outfield ended the inning again leaving three on base.

The lone Robersonville run came in the fifth. With two outs, Ricky Brown singled to center and Sammey Mobley put one in the same place. Everett Jackson got a shot into right, but no one was able to score on that. Matt Wilson walked, however, forcing in Brown with the lone Eagle score.

The Rampants try to extend their streak to six Tuesday going on the road to meet Kinston's Vikings. The game is a non-conference affair, and is the last game before the Rampants open their Division II play.

Ron Funseth Fires 65 To Take Third Round Greensboro Lead

By BOB GREEN
Associated Press Golf Writer

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Soft-spoken veteran Rod Funseth charged out of the pack with a six-under-par 65 and took sole control of the top spot in the third round of the $190,000 Greater Greensboro Open Golf Tournament Saturday.

Funseth, playing on his 38th birthday had a 54-hole total of 204, nine-under-par on the damp, 7,034-yard Segefield Country Club golf course.

That put him two strokes ahead of a group of three tied for second at 206—veteran Miller Barber, rookie Brian Allin and Dave Eicheleberger. Allin and Eichelberger each carded 67s in the cool, cloudy weather while Barber had a 69.

Bob Charles, the New Zealand left-hander who had a 68, and Pete Black, 70, were tied at 207.

The playing conditions were near ideal, with practically no wind—a welcome relief from the rain and cold that marred Friday's second round. But the glamor names of the game couldn't make up much ground.

Lee Trevino had a 71 for 210, six strokes back. U.S. Open champion Tony Jacklin of England took a 72 for 211. Billy Casper tuned up for next week's defense of his Master's crown with a 67, but still was far back at 213. South African Gary Player, the defending champion here and winner of the last two tour events, had a 69 for 214.

Barber and Brown, one of the few blacks on the pro tour, shared the lead going into the day's play—and each ran into disaster.

Barber held the lead alone at one point, then took a triple bogey seven on the 13th hole. The second leading money winner of the year hit his tee shot into the woods, with the ball coming to rest against a root. He hit the root on his next shot and knocked it out of bounds.

Brown was within one stroke of the streaking Funseth when he came to the 18th—and promptly knocked his tee shot out of bounds and took a double bogey six.

Funseth, a 12-year tour veteran who now lives in San Jose, Calif., scored his lone victory in the 1965 Phoenix Open. He finished second in the Avco Classic last year and won almost $45,000.

He had a remarkable round, including eight birdies and a pair of bogeys.

Funseth started slowly, with pars on the first three holes and a three-putt bogey on the fourth. Then he made his run, rolling in a 25-foot putt on the fifth and scoring a two-putt birdie four on the sixth, which he reached with a three-wood.

He also two-putted the ninth, another par five, for a bird, laced a seven-iron within three feet on the 11th and knocked in a 12-footer for a deuce on the 12th.

He reached the par five 14th with a five-iron and two-putted and went nine under par with a 15-foot putt on the next hole.

Cunningham Leads 76er Victory

By RALPH BERNSTEIN
Associated Press Sports Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Billy Cunningham jumped and twisted for 33 points and 15 rebounds as the Philadelphia 76ers defeated the Baltimore Bullets 98-94 Saturday and sent their best of seven game series to Baltimore Sunday for the deciding game in the National Basketball Association Playoff.

Cunningham's jumper from the foul line with 2:50 remaining gave the 76ers a 91-90 lead and ignited a 9-4 rally that clinched the victory. It was the first playoff victory for the 76ers on their home court in nine games since they beat Boston in April, 1968. The 76ers had lost 10 of 11 playoff games on their home court.

The 76ers, who had trailed in this Eastern semifinal series 3-1, led by as much as 16 points in the first period and were ahead 55-40 at halftime. Baltimore came back in the third period with a 24-8 rally, including a spree of 12 straight points, that earned the Bullets a 68-67 lead.

Philadelphia rallied to lead at the end of three quarters, 75-74. The lead changed hands six times in the final period before Cunningham's jumper gave the 76ers a lead they never lost.

Archie Clark followed Cunningham's key basket with a one-hander from the top of the key, and Hal Greer drove for a field goal on the end of a steal by Clark for a 95-90 lead.

Baltimore countered with a pair of free throws by Loughery to cut the lead to three, but Cunningham and Jim Washington hit for free throws that boosted Philadelphia's lead to 98-93 with 1:08 on the clock.

Clark contributed 17 points to the 76ers, while Earl "The Pearl" Monroe led Baltimore with 30.

Philadelphia won the first game in the series and then lost the next three, including two at home. The 76ers came back to win by a point at Baltimore Thursday night and deadlocked the series with Saturday's triumph. The seventh and deciding game is at Baltimore Sunday starting at 2 p.m. EST.

Grifton Takes Win Over Dixon

DIXON — Grifton High School scored five runs in the middle of the game, then held off a final inning rally by Dixon to take a 5-3 victory yesterday.

The Bulldogs charged into the lead in the fourth, scoring their first run. Jimmy Herring slapped a triple, and then scored on a sacrifice fly by Billy Edwards.

Then, in the fifth, Grifton broke it wide open, scoring four more runs. Bob Antion led off the inning, reaching on a walk. Ricky Thorne followed with a single and Johnny Willis walked, loading the bases. Mike Coles bounced a single into center that was allowed to get by, and all four runners rounded the bases to score, giving the Bulldogs a 5-0 lead.

Things got shakey in the last inning, however, as Dixon rallied and closed to within two runs before Grifton could choke it off. All three came when Rick Knosky slammed a homer with two men on board.

Ricky Simmons led Dixon's hitting with two, while Herring had two for Dixon.

Buc Runners Capture Event

COLUMBIA, S. C. — The East Carolina University track team entered two relay events at the State-Record Relays in Columbia, Saturday, and wound up winning one and finishing second in the other.

The Bucs won the two-mile relay in a school record time of 7:37.2. Splits in the event were Rusty Carraway, 1:54.5; Joe Klas, 1:55.6; Lannie Davis, 1:53.9, and Ji Kidd, 1:53.2.

"This was the first time we've ever won a relay event in a large meet like this," Coach Bill Carson said. "We did an excellent job down here."

The Bucs were second in the spring medley in a time of 3:26.8. Phil Phillips had a time of :22.8, while Larry Nuckols was :21.6, Barry Johnson was :48.5; and Jim Kidd was 1:53.9.

Phillips was second in the 100-year dash in 9.7 seconds, while Lawrence Wilkerson was fourth in the triple jump with a leap of 46 feet, 8 inches.

Buc Golfers Finish 13th

GREENVILLE, S. C. — East Carolina Univeristy's golfers tied for 13th place in the team standings in the Furman Invitational Golf Tournament held Friday and Saturday.

Phil Wallace and Jim Brown were the low Pirate scorers with 154 totals. Wallace was 80-74 for the two rounds, while Brown was 79-75.

The winner of the tournament was Georgia Southern's Jimmy Ellis who carded a 73-73 — 146. Second place went to Furman's Tony Gaul who had a 76-71 — 147.

Other Pirate scores included Ron Pinner, 165; Ray Sharpe, 159; Eddie Pinnix, 157; and Carl Bell, 170.

The Bucs play host to Southern Connecticut on Wednesday at the Greenville Golf and Country Club.

Pirate Stickers Run Past Tech

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — East Carolina University's lacrosse team came up with five goals in the second period yesterday to down Virginia Tech, 11-5, in the second round of the William & Mary Lacrosse Tournament.

The Bucs had been beaten by Duke in the first round on Friday.

Eric Schandelmeier led the Pirates, scoring three goals and having two assists. Tom Christensen scored two and assisted on two others, while Dan McCorkle had three goals, Bob Geonie had two and Lindsay Overton had one.

The Pirates took the lead in the first period on a goal by Geonie with 13:30 left in the period. VPI came up with two after that for the lead, but Geonie and Overton each hit for the Bucs to put them back on top.

In the second period, Schandelmeier hit two in a row to put the Pirates into a 5-3 lead, and they never lost it. The Bucs outhit VPI in the period, 5-1, and held 8-4 at the half. They outhit Tech, 2-1, in the third period, and 1-0, in the final one to wrap up the victory.

It was the second Buc win in four matches.

East Carolina travels to VMI on April 13.

McDaniels, Gilmore Lead East Past West

By GEORGE STRODE
Associated Press Sports Writer

DAYTON, OHIO (AP) — Jim McDaniels of Western Kentucky and Artis Gilmore of Jacksonville, a pair of seven-foot All-Americans, led the East to a 106-104 overtime victory Saturday over the West in the Coaches All-Star basketball game.

McDaniels, who reportedly has signed a $3 million contract with the Carolina Cougars, poured in 29 points, hitting 12 of 17 floor shots and grabbing 10 rebounds.

Gilmore, who also will play in the American Basketball Association next season with the Kentucky Colonels, contributed 24 points and collected a game high 20 rebounds.

Rick Yunkus, Georgia Tech's 6-9 star, sparked the East in the overtime. He put the winners ahead to stay with a basket for a 99-98 lead with 3:06 to play.

Gilmore's tip-in put the East ahead by four points with 1:28 remaining.

Cliff Meely of Colorado hit a goal with 1:13 to play to cut the margin to two in the nationally televised game in the University of Dayton Arena.

Jim Cleamons of Ohio State stole a West pass with 10 seconds to go to clinch East's third straight victory in the series. The East leads 6-3.

While McDaniels and Gilmore were providing the East's one-two scoring punch, the West countered with a balanced attack. Mike Newlin of Utah led six double figure socrers for the losers with 18 points.

The game was tied 15 times. The West led by as many as eight points, 52-44 and was ahead 52-46 at half time.

Austin Carr, Notre Dame's 6-3 All-American, who averaged 37.5 points during the season, suffered a subppar performance. Carr missed his first eight shots and wound up making only two of 15 shots from the floor and three of six at the foul line.

McDaniels was voted the outstanding player trophy in the game sponsored by the National Association of Basketball Coaches.

Spiders 'Cats Split

DAVIDSON, N.C. (AP) — Davidson's Wildcats scored seven runs in the first inning and routed Richmond 11-3 Saturday in the opening game of a Southern Conference baseball doubleheader, but the Spiders came back to take the nightcap 8-4.

The Wildcats put together five hits, two errors, a sacrifice and a walk for their seven runs, the last two scoring on a homer by winning pitcher Rick Pipan. Lynn Wagner had three hits and Jack Willits a homer for the Wildcats, while Phil Rowland homered for the Spiders.

After Richmond took a 4-2 lead in the nightcap, Davidson relief pitcher Davis Beatson tied it with a two run homer in the fourth inning, but the Spiders went in front for good in the fifth on Tom Bondurant's double and Larry Pishioneri's single.

Bondurant, Reggie Dunnavant, Bill Daly and winning pitcher Bruce Wright all had two hits in the second game for Richmond, now 6-2 over-all and 2-2 in the conference. Davidson is 7-6 over-all and 3-1 in the league.

The San Francisco Giants, who moved from New York, are the winningest team in National League baseball history. They finished 1970 with a total of 6,004 victories.

Farmville Nips Panthers By 6-4

FARMVILLE — The Farmville Red Devils slipped past North Pitt High School, 6-4, here yesterday.

Farmville moved out into the lead in the first inning with a run. Cloyce Wilson slapped a triple and then scored on Glenn Dwyer's sacrifice fly.

Another Farmville run crossed in the second. Johnny Dickinson singled and moved to second on an error on the play. A passed ball advanced him to third, and he scored on Phil Lewis' single.

North Pitt rallied and came up with three runs in the fourth inning to take the lead. Moore singled and Fuchs reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Moore. Little walked and Tetterton reached on an error, allowing Fuchs to score. Abeyounis singled in Little with the third Panther run, giving North Pitt a 3-2 lead.

Farmville came back with a run in the fifth to tie it up. Dickerson singled and moved up on a ground out. Ed Wells brought him around with a hit.

North Pitt went back out on top in the sixth. Fuchs reached on an error that let him reach second. Little then tripled to drive him in for a 4-3 lead.

But Farmville came up with three in the bottom of the sixth to wrap it up. Chuck Finklea singled and Ronald Carraway got a hit. Bob Daniels singled in Finklea, and Dickinson got a hit, scoring Carraway and putting Daniels on third. The two runners worked the double steal with Daniels scoring the sixth Farmville run.

Ayden Defeats North Lenoir

AYDEN — The Ayden Tornadoes pushed over three runs in the first three innings and held North Lenoir without a run yesterday in winning their fourth game of the year, 3-0.

The Tornadoes now stand 4-1 for the year.

Ayden scored two of its three in the first inning. Mike Griffin singled to right and Laverne Loftin reached on an error. Both runners moved up on a wild pitch and came around to score when Mike Tripp slammed a double.

In the third, Ayden picked up its other run. Tripp was hit by a pitch and Tom Craft walked. Debro Blount reached on a fielder's choice that failed to get anyone. A passed ball then allowed Tripp to come over with the final Tornado run.

D. Tripp was the only hitter with more than one, getting two for North Lenoir.

Rampants Run Past Robersonville, 8-1

By WOODY PEELE

Rose High School's Jimmy Paige handcuffed Robersonville for all but the last two outs Friday as the Rampants rolled to their fourth straight win, 8-1.

Paige had a no-hitter going with one away in the seventh inning, but the next man reached on an error and two straight hits to the outfield followed, allowing the Golden Eagles to score their only run of the afternoon.

Greenville, meanwhile, took advantage of five Eagle errors and 10 hits of their own to push over eight runs and put the game out of reach before the Robersonville nine got their chance.

Only two men had reached base on Paige throughout the first six innings, both on walks. Oddly enough, Edward Warren, the leadoff batter for the Eagles, had drawn both of them.

He became a threat in the fourth, however, when he stole second and took third on a wild pitch with two away. But the next man hit a sharp liner to J. C. Daniels, who made a fine leaping catch to prevent the hit and the run.

At the time, Rose held only a slim 1-0 lead, having scored first in the bottom of the third. The Rampants went down in order in the first, and a threat was ended in the second by a pickoff play.

In the third, however, the Rampants finally struck. With one down, Jimmy Sugg singled to center and moved on to second when the ball was mishandled there. Kim Harbin then got a two-hit into left, scoring Sugg with the first Rampant run.

Rose came back in the fourth to score three more runs for a 4-0 lead. Paige led off with a single down the first base line. He went to second on a wild pitch and then John Conway walked. Conway was the second pickoff victim of Eagle hurler Doyle Farmer, but Paige moved to third on the play.

Larry Dixon slapped the ball into center to score Paige, and he moved on to third on J. C. Daniels' hit into right. The two worked the double steal, with Dixon scoring. An error on the play let Daniels go on to third base. Jim McDermott laid down a sacrifice bunt to bring in Daniels with the final run of the inning.

Rose added another in the fifth. With two away, Bill Lee slapped a triple into deep right. Paige walked, and took off for second, and Lee streaked in on the double steal with the fifth Rampant run.

Three more Rampants crossed in the sixth. Derek Dunn led off with a double to left and moved into third on an out. Johnny Barwick followed with another double, scoring Dunn. Barwick, trying to steal third, was called safe when the ball was dropped on the tag. McDermott followed with a triple to right, scoring Barwick. Jimmy Sugg finished things off with a sacrifice fly, scoring McDermott.

Robersonville then came up with its only run. Lang Hardison reached on an error with one away. Phil James followed with a double to center, moving Hardison to third. Ricky Brown then got a single into left, easily scoring Hardison with the lone Eagle run. James was caught coming home on the next play, an infield grounder, and the final batter struck out to end the third.

Overall, Paige struck out 14, and walked just two.

The Rampants travel to Kinston on Tuesday. The game does not count in the conference standings, however, since the two meet twice later in the year.

Baseballers Facing VMI

Coach Earl Smith's East Carolina University baseball team meets VMI today in a Southern Conference game in Lexington, Va.

The Pirates will be out to put a stop to a four-game losing streak there this afternoon.

ECU has won but two of seven games this season after winning the Southern Conference baseball championship a year ago.

The keydets are 0-4 in conference play and the Pirates have yet to play a conference game. Either righthander Ron Hastings or Hal Baird, a lefthander, will pitch for East Carolina.

The Pirates have been led this season by Graham Felton, a senior from Rocky Mount and the team's No. 1 singles player, and Bill VanMiddlesworth, a junior from West Long Branch, N. J., the team's No. 2 singles player.

New Philadelphia Home

Veterans Stadium in the foreground will be dedicated today as the new home for the Philadelphia Phillies baseball team and the Eagles Football team. The first game will be played in the stadium on April 10 between the Phills znd Expos. Behind the new stadium is the Spectrum, home of the NBA 76ers, and JFK Stadium, where the annual Army-Navy game is played. (AP Wirephoto)

MoreUndergrads Desert To Pros

By The Associated Press

The pro basketball war promises to heat up still more next week, as college basketball teams became engulfed in the flames with several more underclassmen starting to think like millionaires.

George McGinnis of Indiana and Julius Erving of Massachusets are the latest to reveal that they might forsake the remainder of their college career and take the money.

McGinnis, a sophomore at Indiana expected to lead the Hoosers back to greatness, came right out and said he will skip his last two years of college to sign a pro contract.

Erving, a junior last season, also disclosed he was considering an earlier-than-expected pro career while denying one rumor that he had signed a seven-year, $500,000 contract with Virginia of the ABA.

Without naming teams or leagues, it seemed clear that both would wind up in the new American Basketball Association which already had invaded the previously untapped source of talent. The National Basketball Association has stuck by its own rules by not drafting or signing undergradues thus far.

The ABA's Memphis team already has ruined Mississippi's hopes by signing sophomore scoring sensation Johnny Neumann to a $2 million pact for five years.

The battle of senior signings also is certain to pick up in the next seven days, while some of the confusion might be cleared up.

Commissioner Jack Dolph of the ABA hopes to bring some sense to the Jim McDaniels situation, in which Carolina of the ABA signed the Western Kentucky star for $3 million last week although he was drafted by Utah of the same league.

"I'll be meeting with some people next week on the McDaniels' case," Dolph said, presumably representatives of the two teams.

He also said he expected several more signings in the ABA in the next few days, including "one big one."

That "big one" apparently is not 7-foot Elmore Smith of NAIA champion Kentucky State, who is suppose to sign with Buffalo of the NBA Monday.

Smith, the Braves said, rejected a $2.2 million offer by Carolina of the ABA and will formally announce his pact with Buffalo, a multi-year deal.

The NBA might land another top choice in the coming week with Austin Carr, Cleveland's No. 1 pick, already having expressed a desire to play for the Cavaliers and to sign as soon as possible.

Two other top draft selections, Sidney Wicks and Ken Durrett, were signed at the end of last week by the NBA. Wicks, Portland's No. 1 pick, came to terms for a reported $1.5 million which the Trail Blazers said was mostly cash. The UCLA All-American turned down a reported $2.3 million offer by Texas of the ABA.

Durrett of La Salle signed a five-year pact with Cincinnati of the NBA for another astronimical, but undisclosed figure.

The ABA also has done well, getting the two top college giants in McDaniels and Artis Gilmore of Jacksonville, who went for $2 million-plus to Kentucky.

Pittsburgh signed Levi Wyatt, a second round choice from Alcorn A&M for $500,000 and claims to have signed Howard Porter of Villanova, which has started another brush fire. Porter, who led Villanova to second place in the NCAA tournament, denies that he has signed, while the NCAA is investigating reports that he signed last December, which would cost Villanova its fine season by having played with an ineligible player.

Adding to the confusion, there have been varying reports that several NBA stars, such as Walt Frazier of the New York Knicks and Earl Monroe of Baltimore, are being offered big money by the ABA to jump the NBA.

Even the Spencer Haywood case still remains up in the air, despite out of court settlements that awarded the controversial star to Seattle of the NBA after he jumped from the ABA. Buffalo of the NBA defied the NBA settlement by drafting Haywood, and now the case is in the hands of the Braves' lawyers.

Olivares Gets His Title Back

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mexico City's Ruben Olivares reigned as the recrowned bantamweight champion of the world today—but the 24-year-old puncher has a problem.

He has just about slugged himself out of opponents in the 118-pound division.

The kid who has been called the guy with the "happy face" regained the title in 15 rounds Friday night from his fellow countryman, Chucho Castillo, who dethroned him on a badly slashed eye last October in the 14th round of what was their second encounter.

There was no cut eye and no doubt about the decisiveness of Ruben's latest effort.

A crowd of 18,141 jammed the Forum in suburban Inglewood, as they had for the previous fights, and toward the end Ruben's Mexican followers united in the chant, "Ruben Olivares, Rubin Olivares!"

Referee John Thomas scored it 9-4, Judge Larry Rozadilla 12-4, and Judge Chuck Hassett 10-3. Ringside Boxing writers were not so generous. The Associated Press called it 12-1.

Scoring here is one to five points for the winner of a round, none to the loser and none for an even round.

Saturday's Baseball

Expos 8, Pirates 5

BRADENTON, Fla. (AP) — The Montreal Expos broke open a 5-5 tie with three runs in the top of the 10th inning to defeat the Pittsburgh Pirates 8-5 in an exhibition game Saturday.

The Pirates are now 17-7 for the spring and Montreal, 13-12.

Mets 4, Orioles 3

NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP) — Don Hahn provided the impetus Saturday as the New York Mets nipped the Baltimore Orioles 4-3 in an exhibition baseball game marked by eight double plays.

Hahn touched off a two-run first inning flurry with a single and delivered the second of two fourth inning runs with a force-play tap.

All four Met runs came off lefthander Dave McNally, who worked the first four innings.

Reds 2, Tigers 0

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Cincinnati left-hander Ross Grimsley held Detroit to one hit in seven innings Saturday as the Redlegs whipped the Tigers 2-0 in exhibition baseball.

Grimsley, who was assigned to Indianapolis two days ago, gave up only a double in the fourth inning to Tiger first baseman Bill Freehan.

The Reds scored in the first against Mickey Lolich on consecutive singles by Pete Rose, Tommie Helms and Tony Perez.

Orions 9, Giants 1

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Masaaki Koyama tossed a three-hitter and the Tokyo Orions bombed Steve Hamilton for eight runs in stopping the San Francisco Giants 9-1 Saturday in exhibition play.

The Giants snapped Koyama's shutout bid with two out in the ninth when George Foster doubled, scoring Frank Johnson, who had walked.

The Orions led 1-0 when Hamilton took over in the eighth for rookie righthander Steve Stone. The lefty was bombed for four runs in each of his two innings.

Sox 5, Yanks 1

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Sonny Siebert checked the New York Yankees on four hits and Duane Josephson slugged a home run and started a three-run rally in the sixth as Boston took a 5-1 exhibition baseball victory Saturday.

Josephson hammered a 420-foot shot off New York starter Mike Kekich, then singled to start the sixth-inning rally, which also featured singles by Billy Conigiliaro and Doug Griffin.

The Red Sox scored the three runs on Siebert's infield grounder with the bases loaded, a wild pitch by Kekich and Luis Aparacio's bunt.

The Yanks got their only run off Siebert in the second on a double by Danny Cater and a single by Jimmy Lyttle. After Lyttle's hit, Siebert set down 17 straight Yankees before another Lyttle single in the eighth.

Cubs 9, Sox 4

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Billie William's fourth spring home run and a pinch three-run homer by Hal Breeden sparked a six-run fifth as the Chicago Cubs defeated the Chicago White Sox 9-4 in exhibition baseball Saturday.

The Cubs batted around, getting six hits-four for extra bases-off loser Tommy John in the fifth.

The Cubs got to Don Eddy for three more runs in the seventh to avenge the American Leaguer's 9-2 Friday in Tucson.

Rookie outfielder Jose Ortiz put together his third consecutive game with three straight hits as he filled in for ailing Joe Pepitone in center.

Royals 6, Cards 5

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — An error by catcher Ted Simmons in the 11th inning enabled the Kansas City Royals to score a 6-5 exhibition baseball victory over the St. Louis Cardinals Saturday.

With the score tied 5-5, the Royals filled the bases off Frank Bertainia with hits by Bob Liver and Cookie Rojas and a walk to Paul Schaal with one out.

Jerry May then hit a dribbler down the third base line and Oliver scored when Simmons dropped the throw to the plate.

Jim Rooker pitched seven innings for the Royals and enjoyed a 4-3 lead on the strength of Joe Keough's two-run homer off former teammate Moe Drabowsky. Jose Cardenal's two-run double put the Cardinals ahead 5-4 in the top of the ninth but the Royals tied the score in their half on Dennis Paepke's run scoring single.

Indians 9, A's 6

MESA, Ariz. (AP) — Craig Nettles hit a three-run home run with one out in the top of the 11th inning Saturday, powering the Cleveland Indians over the Oakland Athletics 9-6 in an exhibition baseball game.

Nettles got four hits in six trips for the game and drove in four runs.

The victory went to Nate Colbert, who shut out the A's on two hits over the last five innings.

Losing pitcher Chuck Dobson was raked for eight runs and 12 hits in six innings of work.

Braves 6, Nats 2

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Hank Aaron and Orlando Cepeda belted solo home runs Saturday as the Atlanta Braves trimmed Washington 6-2 in an exhibition baseball game.

Aaron's homer came in the first and Cepedas in the fifth.

The Braves scored a pair of unearned runs in the third inning and added two more in the fourth on a walk, a double by Jim Nash and a triple by Sonny Jackson.

Brewers 10, Padres 3

ALBEQUERQUE, N. M. (AP) — Second baseman Ted Kubiak drove in four runs Saturday to lead Milwaukee to a 10-3 exhibition baseball victory over the San Diego Padres.

Kubiak hit a two-run home run in the third inning, singled home a run in the eighth, and climaxed a four-run rally in the ninth with a sacrifice fly.

The Brewers collected 12 hits off Steve Arlin, Al Severinsen and Gary Ross. Tommy Harper had three of the Milwaukee hits and drove in two runs.

Seventy per cent of the fans who attended St. Louis Cardinal games last season were under 40 years old, a St. Louis poll revealed. The returns were from 579 cities in 26 states.

Minnesota Picks New Cage Coach

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — When Adolph Rupp, his feet encased in bandages, stood in the lobby of a Houston hotel talking about Cal Luther, the University of Minnesota knew where to go for its new basketball coach.

"I don't know where he finishes every year," Rupp told Glen Reed, Minnesota's assistant athletic director, "but I know it's never below second in the Ohio Valley Conference."

The Gophers went to Murray State of Kentucky and picked Luther, 43, as their coach Friday.

"His feet were bandaged and he wouldn't let anyone else come near us," Reed said of his conversation with Rupp. "Mr. Rupp talked to me for more than an hour about Cal Luther. He (Rupp) had just had surgery and he couldn't even wear shoes. And he stood the whole time."

Reed went to Houston during the NCAA basketball finals to talk to 15 prospective candidates for the job left vacant by the resignation of George Hanson, 11-13 over-all and 5-9 in the Big Ten in his only season at Minnesota.

Rupp took time off from his duties as president of the National Association of Basketball Coaches to make his point about Luther, who will bring a career record of 246-158 to Minnesota.

Atlanta 500 Is Running Today

HAMPTON, Ga. (UPI)—Dick Brooks of Porterville, Calif., driving a 1970 Dodge, outpaced all qualifiers Saturday, the last day or qualifying to grab 31st spot for Sunday's Atlanta 500 race.

A. J. Foyt took the pole position Thursday by qualifying at 155.152 mph in a 1969 Mercury. There was only 2.1 seconds difference in a lap time between Foyt and John Sears of Ellerbe, N.C., who qualified Saturday for the 40th and last starting spot at 146.106 in a 1969 Dodge.

Paul Tyler, of Charlotte, N.C., will start in the race if any of the 40 starters should drop out or be disqualified before the race begins.

Maynard Troyer, who took 20 flips during the Daytona 500 in February, will start in 35th position, his first start since the Daytona accident.

Red Devils Squeeze Past Hobbton, 2-1

By BILLY EVANS

FARMVILLE — The Farmville Red Devils nipped the Wildcats of Hobbton Friday afternoon in extra innings, 2-1. Farmville used a bottom of the ninth rally to slip past the Hobbton team.

In the top of the first Hobbton threatened when after the first two men up to bat flyed out, Fletcher singled and he was followed by Williamson who drew a free pass to first. Farmville tightened up and forced the next batter to ground out.

Neither team could get anything going until the top of the fifth inning. The first batter for Hobbton flyed to deep right, Strickland singled and Wiggins grounded to third. The throw to third was wild getting past the first baseman and allowed Strickland to score and Wiggins advanced to third on the play. Hobbton was unable to score Wiggins and when Farmville came to bat in the bottom of the fifth they were down 1-0.

Farmville came charging back in their half of the fifth however to tie the ball game up, 1-1. Daniels started things off for the Red Devils by gaining a free trip to first. Dickinson reached first on a fielder's choice. Wells came up with two away and promptly slashed a double down the right field line scoring Dickinson with the tying run. The inning ended with Farmville unable to add to their total.

The game developed into a pitchers duel until the bottom of the ninth when Farmville loaded the bases and scored a run on a throwing error to score the winning run. Joyner singled to start the bottom of the ninth off for the Red Devils and he was followed by Dickinson who drew a walk. Joyner who had advnaced to second on the walk tried to steal third. The throw to third was wild and Joyner raced in for the winning run.

Grifton Inches Past Conley Nine

CHICOD — Grifton High School outlasted D.H. Conley, 11-10, Friday in a batting spree.

Both teams unleashed 12 hits along the way, but Grifton came up with one more run than did the Vikings, and that made the difference in the win.

Grifton opened it up with four in the top of the first, but Conley jumped right back with three runs. Grifton added another in the top of the second, but again the Vikings did the trick, coming up with two to knot it at 5-5.

The Vikings then took the lead in the third with a run, 6-5. But Grifton tied it up again in the fourth with another of their own, making it 6-6.

In the top of the sixth, Grifton came up with four more runs to rush out to a 10-6 lead. Johnny Willis singled and Mike Coles walked. Jimmy Herring got a hit, scoring Willis. Tony Koonce followed with a hit, scoring Coles, and Linwood Thomas got another hit, scoring both Herring and Koonce.

But Conley refused to die, quite yet. They came back with four of their own in the bottom of the frame. Lawrence Griffin walked and Clevie Averett doubled. Steve Worthington slammed a home run, scoring three runs. Jimmy Bryan singled and Prince Bunting reached on an error. Bobby Bryan singled to drive in Jimmy with the tieing run.

Grifton bounced right back, however, and scored what proved to be the winning run in the top of the seventh. Willis walked and stole second. An error on the attempted pickoff, allowed him to come the rest of the way with the winning run.

Herring led the Grifton hitting with three, while Willis, Coles and Thomas each had two. Bunting, Bobby Bryan and Averett each had three for Conley, while Jimmy Bryan had two.

Greene Central In Track Win

WHEAT SWAMP — Greene Central High School edged out South Lenoir Friday in a three-way track meet at North Lenoir.

The Rams captured 66½ points to just nip South Lenoir, which finished with 64½. North Lenoir was a distant third with 28 points.

Overall, Greene Centeal took first place in seven events, while South Lenoir won six. North Lenoir won the remaining two.

Ayden Slips By Vanceboro

VANCEBORO — Ayden and Vanceboro High School wrapped up in an eight inning pitching duel before the Tornadoes finally broke the ice for a 2-0 victory.

Lavern Loftin hurled the victory for the Tornadoes, allowing just two hits. He struck out eight and walked two.

But losing pitcher Roland Hooks stole the show. Although he allowed two more hits than Loftin, he struck out 16 and walked just one batter.

Neither team threatened until the eighth inning, when Ayden finally pushed over its two runs.

Tom Craft led off with a single to center, and followed that up by stealing second. Craft moved into third when Debro Blount reached on an error. The two then worked the double steal, with Blount moving to second and Craft coming home with the go-ahead run. An error on the play let Blount move on to third, and another allowed him to score. That gave Ayden an insurance run, but it turned out they didn't need it.

The win boosted the Ayden record to 3-1, with their only loss coming to Rose High of Greenville.

Home Run Action Is Routine For Friday

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

Ron Swoboda hit a home run Friday in a strange uniform and Paul Blair hit one from a strange side of the plate while Frank Howard hit another routine 460-footer.

Swoboda, the ex-New York Met, drilled his first circuit shot in his new Montreal getup, one of four Expo homers in an 18-5 rout of Pittsburgh's 'B' team. Rusty Staub hit two homers and John Boccabella the other as the Expos battered Bob Moose for nine runs in seven innings.

Swoboda also hit a 380-foot sacrifice fly that observers said would have been long gone in Montreal's Jarry Park

Meanwhile, Swoboda's ex-Met teammates were battered by the Baltimore Orioles 12-2. The Birds tagged relievers Jim McAndrew, Charlie Williams and Ron Taylor for 10 runs in the last three innings with Blair, now a switch hitter, getting his first as a left-handed batter, a three-run shot over the center field fence in the ninth. Merv Rettenmund homered off loser Tom Seaver and Clay Dalrymple also connected for Baltimore.

Howard, who hit two monstrous homers Thursday, unloaded over a 70-foot-high fence 380 feet from the plate but the Atlanta Braves outslugged Washington 10-6. Mike Epstein and Dick Billings also homered for the Senators while Sonny Jackson paced the Braves' 17-hit attack with four safeties.

Pittsburgh's main squad got five-hit pitching from Nelson Briles, Bob Veale and Jim Nelson and blanked the Cincinnati Reds 12-0. Richie Hebner hit a pair of homers and drove in six runs while Vic Davaliloo and Bob Robertson also homered.

The Chicago White Sox ripped Ferguson Jenkins of the crosstown Cubs for nine runs and 10 hits in six innings and snapped the Cubs' seven-game winning streak 9-2.

Rick Monday hit his first home run ever off Sam McDowell as the Oakland A's downed the Cleveland southpaw 5-2. The Philadelphia Phillies down their Eugene farm team 4-2 and the San Francisco Giants banged out 22 hits, including a homer, two doubles and single by Ken Henderson, and crushed the University of Santa Clara 12-4.

In a unique three-way round-robin in the Astrodome, the Houston Astros beat the New York Yankees 2-1, the Minnesota Twins bopped the Yanks 4-1 and the Astros shaded the Twins 5-3. That left the Astros plus three, the Twins plus one and the Yankees minus four-runs, that is.

Jim Spencer drove in two runs in the bottom of the 11th inning to give the California Angels a 4-3 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers. The Angels trailed 3-2 going into their half of the inning but Dodger pitcher Pete Mikkelsen walked one man and Ken McMullen singled with two out setting the scene for Spencer.

Aycock Gains Second Victory

E. B. Aycock Junior High School captured its second baseball victory Friday with a 1-0 win over A. G. Cox Junior High of Winterville.

The game was a scoreless deadlock until the seventh inning when Aycock pushed over the only run of the game.

Johnny Causey opened the bottom of the frame with a double and Mike Wallace walked. A passed ball allowed both runners to advance a base. Aycock then went for the suicide squeeze, and Jeff Daniels laid down a perfect bunt, scoring Causey with the game-ending run.

Daniels led the Aycock hitting, getting two of their four hits.

Cox pitcher Bob Parker struck out two and walked three while giving up four hits, while Aycock hurler Chris Manning allowed the same number of hits, but struck out six and walked five.

Pacers Win In Playoff Opener

By KEN RAPPOPORT
Associated Press Sports Writer

Agonies of a long season melt in the heat of the American Basketball Association playoffs.

"My knees were aching, but at playoff time you forget about that," says Roger Brown of the Indiana Pacers.

With the knee hurts gone, Brown proved to be a pain in the neck for the Memphis Pros Friday night—scoring 26 points, and collecting nine rebounds and seven assists as Indiana took a 114-98 first-round West Division opener.

Utah also took a 1-0 lead in their best-of-seven West Division series, walloping Texas 125-115. In the East Division openers, Virginia beat New York 113;-105 and Kentucky shaded the Floridians 116-112.

Indiana, the defending ABA champions, trailed by seven points during first-half play, but caught Memphis at the intermission at 55, then turned on a torrid second half behind Brown and Bob Netolicky. Netolicky, held scoreless in the first half, scored 13 in the second.

Utah, stung by Donnie Freeman's 24 first-half points, limited Texas' high scorer to only eight in the second stanza. The winners wasted leads of 15 points before putting on a 15-8 spurt at the end to wrap it up.

Philadelphia Remembers Past

By RALPH BERNSTEIN
Associated Press Sports Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Don't tell the Philadelphia 76ers you can't overcome a 3-1 deficit in a best-of-seven-game series. They know from bitter experience that it can be accomplished.

"I remember when we lost to Boston after we went up 3-1," recalled Billy Cunningham, the 76ers' all-star forward. "I had broken my wrist but I was traveling with the team and looking forward to sitting by the pool in Los Angeles. Before I knew it I was sitting home."

That was in the 1967-68 playoffs. The Boston Celtics with Bill Russell came back to eliminate the 76ers and went on to play the Los Angeles Lakers in the National Basketball Association championship round.

Cunningham remembered the great collapse last Tuesday after the Baltimore Bullets defeated the 76ers and took a 3-1 lead in their best-of-seven Eastern semifinal series.

"Anything can happen," Cunningham said. "Injuries, you never know. Who can know?"

Cunningham certainly was correct about injuries. He collided with Baltimore's Gus Johnson in Thursday night's fifth game, won by the 76ers 104-103, keeping them alive in the series. He suffered chest contusions, but they won't keep him from today's sixth game as the 76ers battle to deadlock the set and send it back to Baltimore Sunday for a seventh and deciding game.

The Philadelphia-Baltimore battle is the only Eastern Conference semifinal series left. The New York Knicks have already won their, 4-1, over the Atlanta Hawks. The Western Conference battles continue Sunday with Los Angeles playing Chicago and Milwaukee taking on San Francisco. Los Angeles leads the series, 3-2, and Milwaukee is leading, 3-1.

The 76ers could ill afford to lose Cunningham. He has everaged 21.5 points and 13 rebounds per game in this series. Thursday night he scored 32, including 14 for 27 from the field. He had 20 rebounds in his backboard battle with Johnson and Wes Unself. Trainer Al Domenico says if the chest area is bothersome before today's game he'll give Cunningham a shot of a pain killer.

Owner Irv Kosloff of the 76ers took time before Thursday night's game in Baltimore to dispell rumors that Coach Jack Ramsay would be fired if the team was eliminated from the playoffs in the first round for the third straight season. "I would only fire a coach if I thought he was incompetent," the owner said. "I'm saying that Jack is a good coach."

Swim Meeting Set Tuesday

A reorganizational meeting of the former Raynez Swimming Club will be held Tuesday at 8 p. m. in the Minges Natatorium in Minges Coliseum at East Carolina.

The purpose of the meeting is to reorganize the club, which is open to anyone. All interested persons are urged to attend.

Orioles, Reds Are Top Choices

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Baltimore's defending world champions and the power-packed Cincinnati Reds were picked today as repeat pennant winners in the annual Associated Press preseason baseball poll.

The Orioles and Minnesota Twins were the choices to win American League division titles again while the Reds and Chicago Cubs topped the National League division voting in a ballot of 274 sportswriters and sports casters across the country.

Baltimore received 233 first-place votes in the AL East balloting to just 20 for the runnerup New York Yankees. Minnesota was a razor-thin choice in the West, drawing 98 votes to 97 for the California Angels.

The panel picked the Orioles over the Twins for the pennant by a whopping 172-27 margin.

In the National League balloting, 146 selectors picked Cincinnati to take the West title again and 107 picked the Los Angeles Dodgers for first place. The Cubs were the picks in the East with 110 first-place votes to 95 for Pittsburgh's division defenders.

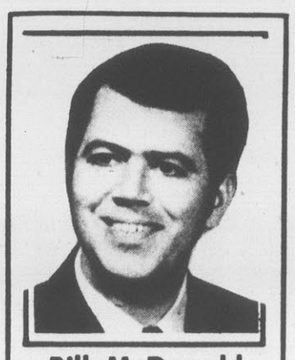

The Reds were the choice of 87 panelists to win the NL pennant. Los Angeles received 80 votes, the Cubs 41.

On a points basis, the NL East shaped up as the closest division race, with the Cubs, Pirates, New York Mets and St. Louis Cardinals all receiving solid support. Minnesota, California and Oakland were just 210 points apart in the AL West voting.

The Chicago White Sox, who finished in the AL West cellar last season with the worst won-lost record in the majors, were picked by eight voters to win the division title and by one to capture the pennant.

All 24 clubs received at least one first-place nomination in the division balloting. Philadelphia, Montreal, San Francisco, Houston and San Diego, in the National League, and Washington, Cleveland, Milwaukee and Kansas City in the American, were shut out in the pennant picks.

Wildlife Afield: Shad Could Be Top Sport Fish In Tar Heel State

By JIM DEAN

GRIFTON — I had already caught and released several hickory shad when it happened.

A shad grabbed my tiny jig, leaped, then raced upstream toward the boat. When he was nearly alongside, he suddenly darted under the boat, pulling four-pound test line from my protesting reel.

Then he jumped again, this time on the opposite side of the boat. His leap carried him a full three-feet out of the water, splattering me with icy drops.

When he fell, he landed smack in the middle of the boat in a sprawl of tackle — flopping and twisting and slinging shad darts and spoons all over the place. As he skittered back and forth, I was right behind him, stomping on the bottom of the aluminum boat trying to trap him with my boot. He finally got hung up between the net and the paddles. The boat was a shambles.

"Sounds like you got a one-man band over there," jibed an angler in a nearby boat.

I made some good-natured suggestion to him, but I forget what it was. It's probably just as well.

I released the fish — which was surprisingly none the worse for wear despite his brief visit with me — and resumed fishing.

During the next two hours, I caught and released somewhere in the neighborhood of 30 good hickory shad and lost one big white that stripped off at least 25 feet of line before the hook pulled out.

I don't need to tell you that this was good fishing. I saw some other boats — with two anglers fishing — which had 50 to 70 shad.

The scene of this madness was Pitch Kettle Creek in Craven County east of Grifton.

Shad are North Carolina's most neglected sporting fish. In my honest opinion, no fish offers the angler more action on the end of a line than a shad. The shad is a leaping, fighting fool that never knows when to quit. Though he is bony unless cooked correctly, he is excellent eating, and shad roe is a delicacy.

There are two species in North Carolina, the hickory shad which averages about a pound to a pound and a half, and his larger cousin, the white or American shad. White shad average closer to three pounds. Of the two, the white shad is stronger, but the hickory is more acrobatic.

Each spring, these fish climb coastal rivers to spawn, then return to the sea. While in fresh water, they may be caught on a small lead-head jig called shad dart, and also small spoons. Ultra-light spinning tackle is ideal for them particularly the hickories.

The Cape Fear and the Tar Rivers are the best white shad rivers in the state and anglers will catch them from March through April and on into May. As the season progresses, the run moves higher up the river, reaching as far inland as Rocky Mount, on the Tar River.

The Neuse River watershed is primarily hickory shad water, and the creeks around the town of Grifton are top spots. In addition to Pitch Kettle, where I fished, there is also Contentnea and Grindle Creeks.

Hickory shad fishing has grown so popular around Grifton that the town is sponsoring its first annual Shad Festival this spring on Saturday, April 17.

Experiences anglers tell me that the next two to three weeks — from late March until the Festival — should be tops in the Grifton area for hickories. Those who want to try it, but who have never fished for shad, would do well to stop at George Suggs' Sport Shop in Grifton for fishing information and the proper lures.

Despite the very good possibility of catching a boat full of shad, it is possible to fish during the peak of the run and get skunked. The day after I caught 30, I took only four.

One final word. Unless you plan to eat your fish, please release them. Many anglers keep everything they catch, then throw them away. "What difference does it make," say some anglers. "There are so many."

Once, we had a lot of Passenger Pigeons too. Not anymore. Think about that before you keep a washtub full of fish you don't need or want.

Mercury-Base Paints Get Long Look; Banned In Massachusetts

By JACK WOLISTON

NEW YORK (UPI)—Ecologists are taking a look at mercury-base antifouling paints and in at least one state—Massachusetts—they have been banned.

Paints containing mercury substances were introduced on the market a number of years ago after extensive tests indicated they provided greater resistance to fouling of hulls than copper-base paints, the mariner's standby for scores of years.

The Massachusetts Pesticide Board issued an emergency ban recently against mercury-base paints after studies showed up to 950 parts per million of mercury in mudflats near marinas along state waterways.

Dr. Ernest W. Cook, deputy public health commissioner, said the figure was far above safety guidelines for mercury content.

The emergency order bans applications of paints containing mercury substances on docks and wharves, plus all marine craft intended for use in Massachusetts waters. It also prohibits dropping into the water paints scraped from vessels.

New Outboard System

According to Cook, the studies of the mudflats showed contamination of shellfish there was due, in part at least, to the residue of marine antifouling paint.

Lobsters caught in the area containing a high count of mercury may have picked up the poisoning by eating sealife which was exposed to the contaminated mud, Cook said.

On a brighter note, Outboard Marine Corporation has announced a new system for outboard motors produced by its Evinrude and Johnson divisions that will eliminate any overboard spillage of fuel or oil.

OMC says the drain-free system will be standard equipment by midsummer on the full line of outboards produced by Evinrude and Johnson.

Howard F. Larson, OMC's vice president of environmental affairs, said the company had offered to producers of marine engines throughout the world royalty-free use of its knowhow and patents relating to the new fuel recirculating system for drainless engines.

New Boat Mechanism

"Our corporate concern for abating all forms of water pollution, regardless of how minimal, is reflected in our technical development of these drain-free engines ..." Larson said.

"We feel so strongly about this achievement, and the clean water benefits it will bring to boating, that we hereby extend to all outboard engine producers a royalty-free license to use any or all of OMC's patents."

Chrysler has announced it is introducing an advanced-design power trim mechanism for its outboard motors from 70 to 135 horsepower.

The device increases boat performance by adjusting the angle of the outboard. It enables the driver to change the trim of his boat, while it is under way, to compensate for varying water and load conditions.

The new accessory is controlled by a single toggle switch on the instrument panel and can be operated while the boat is moving at any speed.

Kegglers Enter Tourney

Two Greenville Ladies bowling teams have been entered in the Woman's International Bowling Congress Championships Tournament to be held in Atlanta, Ga.

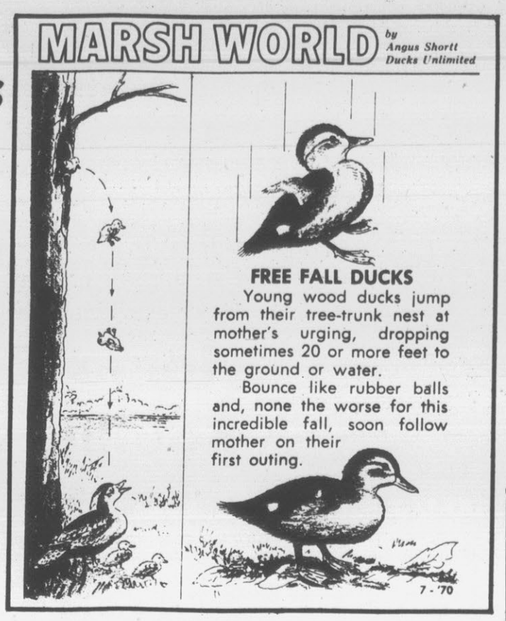

They will join a total of 4,926 other five-woman teams, in competition for the title. The tournament opens Thursday and continues through Sunday, May 23 in Atlanta's Brunswick Suburban Lanes in Decatur. Doubles and singles and the companion WIBC Queens Tournament will be held at the Atlanta Bowling Center.

Competition is held on a scratch bases in three average divisions, each with a separate prize fund.

The local teams entered are the Pizza Inn team, captained by Velma Cannon, and including Margaret Evans, Bessie Bryan, Eunice Curtis and Annie Ruth Joyner, and the Travelers, captained by Cassie Buck and including Peggy Sawyer, Carolyn Taylor, Joann Stokes and Kathy Baker.

The two will compete in team bowling on Monday, May 3, and in singles and doubles on Tuesday, May 4.

Bass Tourney Set For May

By JOEL ARRINGTON

On May 22nd and 23rd, a unique fishing tournament will be held in Roanoke Rapids—unique because it will be a contest for largemouth bass as well as striped bass.

The First Annual Northeastern North Carolina Rock and Bass Tournament will cover Lake Gaston, Roanoke Rapids Lake and the Roanoke River from the tailrace to Halifax. This allows competition between lake fishermen and anglers after river stripers during the spawning run.

The tournament is co-sponsored by the Roanoke Rapids Area Chamber of Commerce and the Roanoke Rapids Jaycees. The entry fee is $5.00 per fisherman, with proceeds going to charity. Prizes valued at over $7,000 will be awarded in two categories—striped bass and largemouth bass. First place winners in each category will receive a boat, motor and trailer. Additional prizes for second through fifth places are to be provided by major outdoor recreation manufacturers, principally tackle manufactureres.

There will be a total of six weigh stations. Three are to be on Lake Gaston. These are Eaton's Ferry Marina, Tom Tucker's Campground and Delbridge's Marina. One weigh station will be on Roakoke Rapids Lake at Sutton's Place and another will be at the Roanoke Rapids boat landing. Weldon Landing is the check-in point for Roanoke River.

Winners will be determined by weighing the five largest fish of each contestant in each category.

For further information, contact Joe Tucker, WCBT Radio, P.O. Box 70, Roanoke Rapids 27820, or the Roanoke Rapids Area Chamber of Commerce, P.O. Box 519, Roanoke Rapids 27870.

Wicks Signs With Portland

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Sidney Wicks of UCLA signed a five-year contract Friday with the Portland Trail Blazers of the National Basketball Association.

The terms of the contract were not disclosed but it was believed to be for $1.5 million.

"The Trail Blazers offered more money. That's why I came here," the 6-foot-9 Wicks told a news conference after the signing.

Was the difference strictly dollars?

"I would have to say yes," said the All-America who helped UCLA to its fifth consecutive NCAA basketball championship last weekend.

Harry Glickman, executive vice president of the Blazers, would say only that the contract would give Wicks financial security.

Wicks had been reported to be seeking between $1.5 million and $2 million.

The Blazers picked Wicks Monday in the NBA college draft. Wicks said he had given definite consideration to the Texas Chaparrals of the American Basketball Association, who also drafted him and offered him a $2.3 million contract.

The pact with Texas was said to have considerable annuities. The Blazers said their offer would be mostly cash.

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Duke beat East Carolina, 8-4, and William and Mary beat Virginia Tech, 11-4, in the first round of the William and Mary Invitational lacrosse tournament Friday.

DENVER (AP) — Former University of North Carolina basketball player Larry Brown, who has been with the American Basketball Association since its beginning, may have played his last season.

Brown said in Denver Friday that if he can't play for the Rockets, "Maybe the handwriting is on the wall."

Downtown Greenville— A Hub Of Activity in 1912

Text By Jerry Raynor

Photographs Reproduced By Tommy Forrest

EVANS STREET . . . looking toward the river. Pedestrians, a buggy, and a couple of mules and carts create what seems to be a traffic jam. This photograph was very likely taken on a Saturday afternoon.

THE OLD COURTHOUSE. . . burned a few years after this photograph was taken. A four story Masonic Temple behind the courthouse (the steeple shows in the picture), also burned. The temple included the Opera House and school offices.

Sixty years ago, 1912, is well within the lifespan of many living Greenville residents. That pre-World War I period is one older citizens remember—perhaps with nostalgia mixed with rememberances of how totally different living conditions and the town's environment was then in contrast with today's bustle of a steadily growing town.

As these photographs illustrate, Greenville in the early years of the century had landmarks still recognizable today, particularly in the downtown area.

The greatest difference, perhaps, lies in the changes wrought by the phenomenal advance of the horseless carriage in the past six decades. In 1912, businesses devoted to the buying, trading and selling of horses and mules played a prominent role in the town's economy. The automobile was here, but was a convenience just beginning to capture the popular fancy. Greenville streets in those years still carried many more mules and carts, wagons and buggies than cars.

All this meant of course that there were no traffic lights. At intersections, horse or mule drivers tightened the reins to slow the animals, ready to come to a creaking halt if another equippage was already in the right of way of the intersection—that is except for those occasions when an animal decided to engage in a runaway escapade. When this happened, according to comments of several older citizens, the children whooped in delight, the men ran out to assist the endangered driver, and the women hid their faces behind their aprons, fearful of what might ensue.

Streets were generally in an unpaved condition, which meant dust in dry weather, and mud in wet weather. Such conditions of course presented certain advantages not known in today's Greenville—children cannot play marbles on crowded asphalt streets, nor can chickens scratch hard pavement.

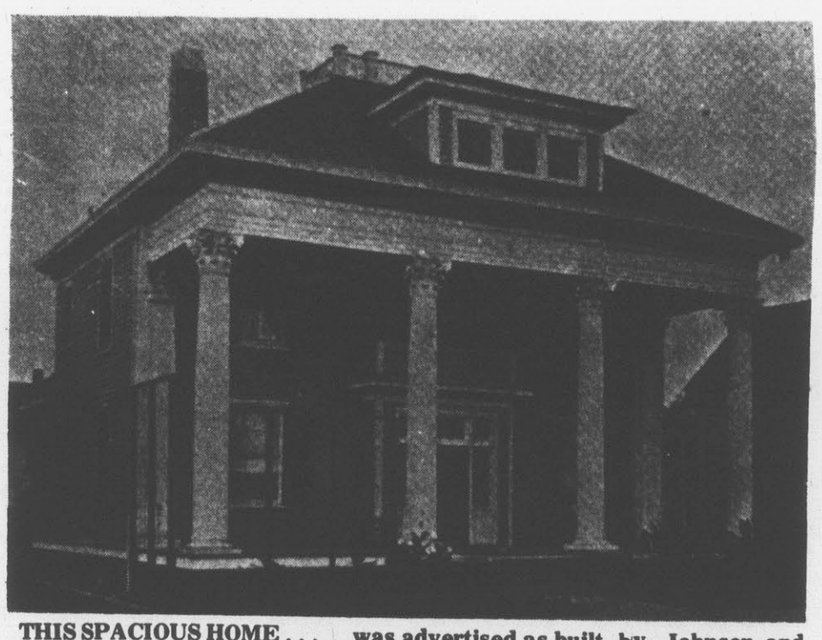

In 1912, surburbs was a term seldom, if ever heard in the sleepy college town. Shopping centers would not come until many years later. Life centered downtown, both for those within the town limits and farmers coming in for their shopping, the majority of them arriving on wagon from the countryside. It may have been a dusty—or a rainy trip, and in mid summer or mid winter, a very hot or a hand-biting cold jaunt; yet it was leisurely.

The photographs on this page are taken from a small paper back booklet, entitled "Descriptive, Pictorial and Advertisers' Guide: Pitt County." It covers not only Greenville, but best known sites in the villages of Ayden, Grifton, Winterville, Farmville and Bethel.

The owners of the booklet, David C. Moore of East Eighth Street, and his brother Thurman Moore, are two of Greenville's senior citizens who can recall those early 20th century days in Greenville.

They spoke of the fire which destroyed the old court house pictured on this page. In fact, Thurman Moore was during those years appointed to fill an unexpired term as Clerk of Court. He noted the appointment was made by Judge Harry W. Whedbee, father of Judge Charles Whedbee.

They noted that Greenville has come a long way in the years since 1912. Like many hundreds of Greenville's older citizens, they have been observers of remarkable changes in their lifetime.

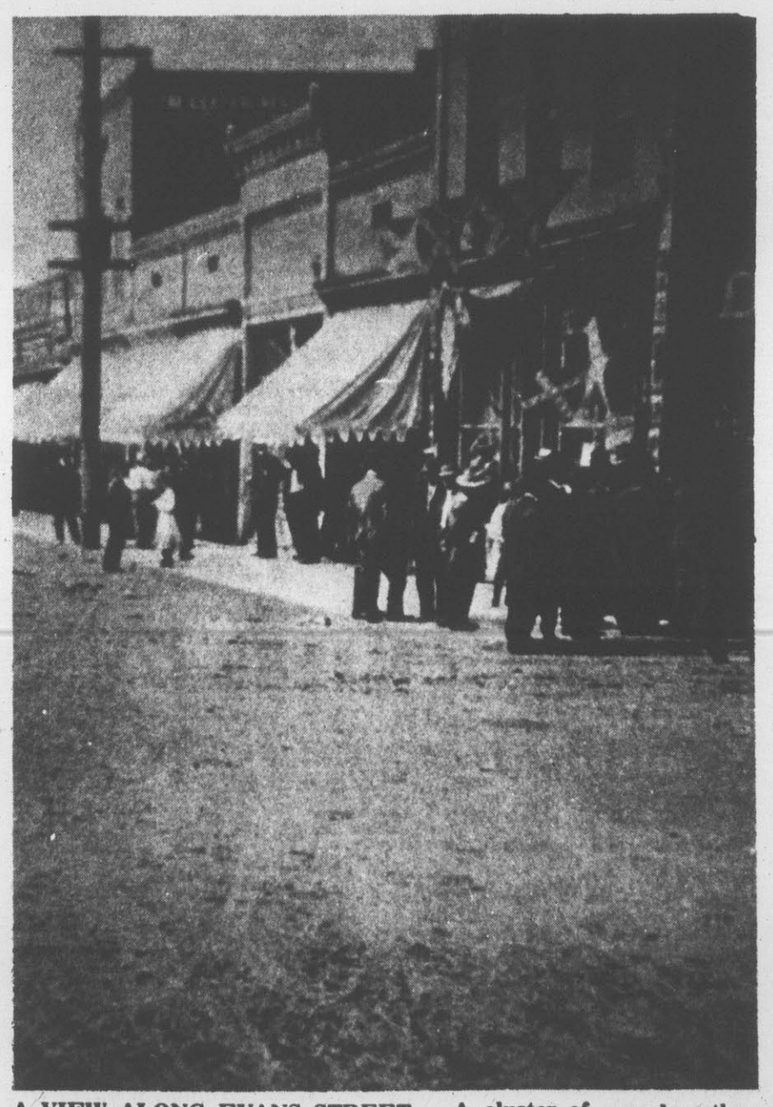

THIS SPACIOUS HOME . . . was advertised as built by Johnson and Stroud, contractors and builders. Their ad noted "estimates furnished on short notice." This house on the corner of Third and Greene Streets, later served as the Woman's Club and was demolished in 1970.

A Review

Dispassionate Story About Pearl Harbor

"Tora! Tora! Tora!" is simply the story of Pearl Harbor Day.

And rather than a day to remember, it should be one the United States would rather forget.

The movie opens with the titles telling the audience that all of the action in the picture is based on fact. If so, the United States has only great stupidity on its own part, and great luck on the part of the Japanese to blame for the disaster.

The movie traces the attack throughout the first half of the movie from the first inception of the idea. The latter half of the movie is the actual attack, a superb job of special effects that has received Oscar notice.

The movie, however, has one flaw which should not have happened.

For the sake of authenticity, the Japanese speak in their native language throughout the picture, and the audience has to suffer through subtitles. And the man who did the job should have seen the results of his handiwork.

The subtitles are all in white, and too many times, they completely fade away into the background, leaving the audience to guess what is being said. Still, the main thought is not lost, and comes over faily well if this is overlooked.

The picture makes no heroes of the Americans, not villians of the Japanese. It was made through joint effort of the two countries and treats the two peoples as simply what they are, people.

It does lay the blame for the high loss where it apparently belongs, at the feet of the military establishment that refused to work together, or to believe what was happening around them. The plan for the attack could only work with complete surprise, and although this was attained, it was only through the lact of effort in the chain of command that it was.

The movie, while it has some humor in it, both on the American and Japanese side, really does not entertain. It tells a story that once inflamed the American people, and tells it well.

Now it only leaves the thought: God help us if we are still as unprepared. — Woody Peele

"I've been in four television series but this is the first one that has brought me wide public recognition," says Peter Graves, star of "Mission: Impossible." "And don't let any actor tell you he doesn't get a kick out of being recognized in public."

TV Notes

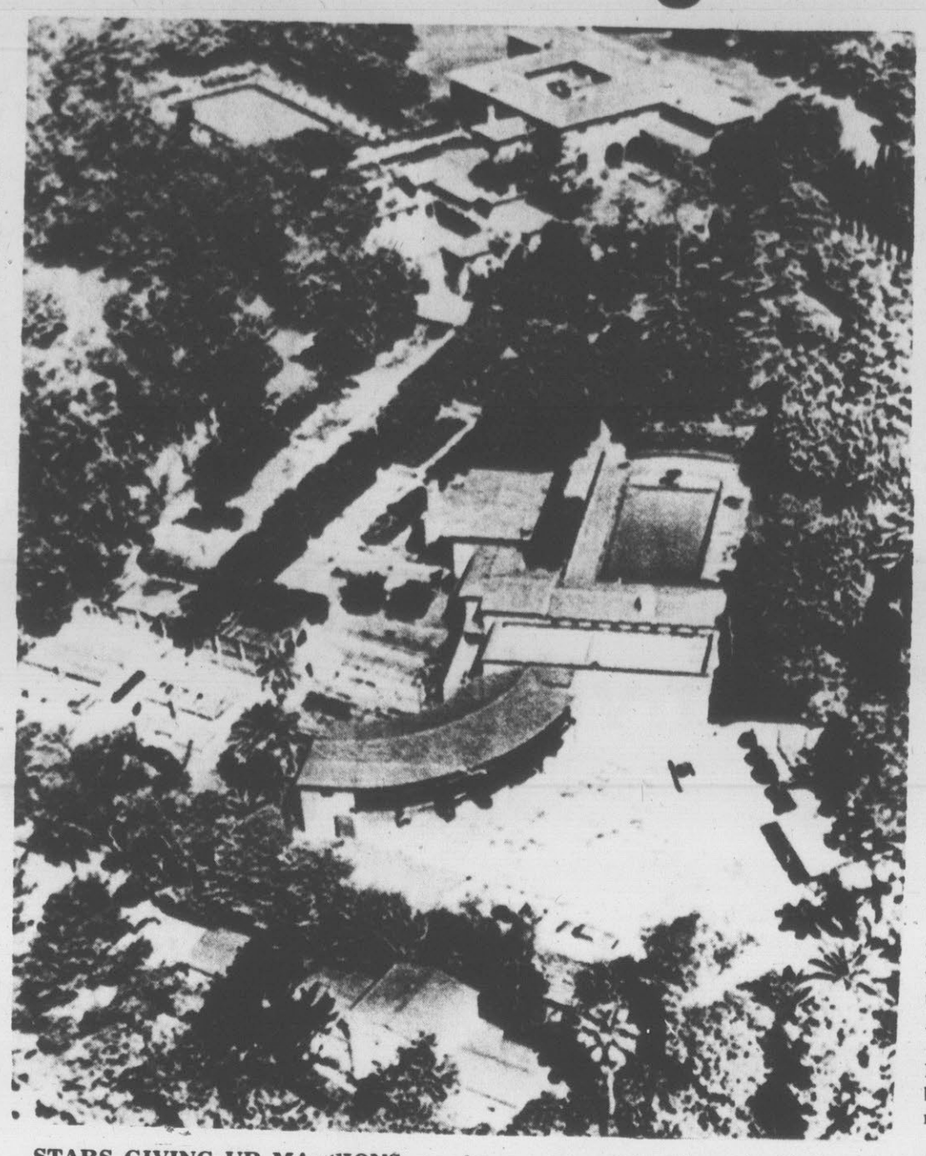

NEW YORK (UPI)—Two CBS daytime serials, "As the World Turns" and "The Edge of Night," began their 16th seasons in April The former still has four of the original cast members working. Walter Greaza has gone the distance for "The Edge of Night."

That cinematic perennial, "The Wizard of Oz," goes again for two hours on NBC at 6:30 p.m. April 18. No cast changes here. If you saw it in a movie house in its debut year of 1939—well, that makes you 32 years older. An evergreen memorial to the late Judy Garland.

ABC now has in production in Hollywood the new "Curiosity Shop" children's series that will become a network fixture in the fall, presumably on Saturday mornings. Animation, film, live action and music are blended.

Life-Style Of Stars Changing

Hollywood Shedding Manorial Homes

STARS GIVING UP MANSIONS — Baronial homes like that, above, of the late Harold Lloyd are being forsaken by many movie stars in favor of smaller, less expensive establishments. (AP Wirephoto)

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The donation by the late Harold Lloyd of his Beverly Hills mansion for public use will give Americans a chance to see the lavish style in which film figures have lived. It is a style that is fast disappearing.

Lloyd's place is a French Renaissance palace. In its heyday it was staffed by 30 servants. It is surrounded by 15 landscaped acres reflecting the comic's interests: nine-hole golf course, handball court, 100-foot waterfall, Olympic-size swimming pool and 900-foot canoe run.

Movie stars once vied with each other for grandness of living quarters. No More. With rare exceptions, today's film personalities are eschewing the manorial homes with platoons of servants. The life-style of the star has undergone a thorough change.

Burt Lancaster is an example.

"I'm a rich man—I could live very comfortably for the next 10 years without working," he says. "But in times like these when the film business is in such bad shape, you feel you should cut down on expenses.

"I realized I was living in a house, that required five servants and cost me 70,000 a year to maintain, including taxes. All that for two people!

"So I sold the house and now I'm renting a house at the beach. It's not cheap—$3,000 a month—but I can manage with only one servant."

Lancaster is not alone.

Kay Spreckels Gable, the widow of Clark Gable, has placed her estate up for sale. It is valuable property—seven acres amid expensive homes in Encino—and she hopes to find a buyer who will not subdivide it. Once the horse ranch of Clark Gable, the place is too big for her now, she says, explaining that only she and son John Clark Gable now occupy it.

Other stars have given up their local homes to live elsewhere. Dick Van Dyke sold his Encino estate and moved to a ranch near Phoenix, Ariz., where he will film his new television series.

Bill Cosby is disposing of his Beverly Hills home to move to Massachusetts, where he intends to pursue an education to become a teacher.

Merle Oberon recently sold her Beverly Hills mansion for $670,00. She had used it only infrequently. Spending most of her time in Acapulco, where she and her financier husband Bruno Pagliai own a large home.

"Some stars are selling their houses and buying apartments, such as the ones in the new addition to the Beverly Wilshire Hotel," says Beverly Hills realtor Mike Silverman. "Most of them travel a great deal, and they feel much more secure to be able to turn the key of an apartment and walk away. The hotel also solves the servant problem for them."

Mary Martin Happy In Her New Life In Brazil

By DENNIS REDMONT
Associated Press Writer

ANAPOLIS, Brazil (AP) — Mary Martin is alive, happy, and living in Anapolis.

The only sound of music in her life nowadays is the snipping of the scissors on clothes for her new boutique, and the whirr of the hairdryers in her beauty parlor.

Mary Martin, the world-famous musical star of "I Do, I Do," "South Pacific," and "Peter Pan," is busy fulfilling what she calls "my easiest two-year contract."

Installed on a sprawling farm deep in the interior of Brazil, about 200 miles southwest of the capital city of Brazilia, Miss Martin vowed to keep away from show business for at least two years after a serious illness. She called it quits in February 1969 when she took ill during a road performance of "I Do, I Do."

Miss Martin fled to Brazil, where her husband and manager, Richard Halliday, owns a ranch he carved out from the jungle 16 years ago—but never used.

"We have 7,000 hens and they lay like crazy, "she explains." We grow wheat, rice vegetables and every known fruit under the sun. We have 300 rosebushes so it takes two days to gather roses. We have no electricity or telephone, so what else do you want?"

Mary Martin wanted something else. After all, the city of Anapolis, population 100,000, did not have a beauty parlor, nor a boutique for that matter. And Miss Martin wanted to graduate from needlepoint—about which she recently wrote a book—to bigger and better things.

"So I asked Richard whether he would build a boutique for me," she adds nonchalantly." And he did."

The result, in downtown Anapolis, is a Japanese-like pagoda, with columns in bright red, white and black. Sliding doors open on "Nossa Loja," (our shop) a combination of haute coiffure and couture.

"For the beauty shop, I got together with a Japanese ironmonger and Brazilian sink maker, and I had them build an armchair you can tip back to wash your hair. It took three months but when it was finished, I felt like Edison.

"Then I sewed myself up a Mary Martin collection, and we had ourselves an opening day."

More than 1,000 persons—some even made the four-hour flight from Sao Paulo—attended the grand opening to the tune of a four-man combo composed of local Mormon missionaries.

Does the blissful life in the heart of the Brazilian jungle suit Mary Martin?

"I feel wonderful," she replies. "I'm not afraid to say I'm 57. I'm not anxious to do eight shows a week. I never saw anyone during those shows. Just people crowding around at the stage door. Now I've been here for the past year-and-a-half and I've never even been to Rio. I have lost a sense of time. I've never had so much fun in my life."

Does this mean she is through with the stage? "Well, any ham should never say he's going to retire because they never do. But I signed a two-year contract with Richard, that I would stay down here, to rest and to live, and I may be inclined to renew it."

Miss Martin's "contract" expires this spring and she has dozens of offers to return to Broadway.

Often dubbed "The First Lady of American Musical Theater," it was Miss Martin who approached Rogers and Hammerstein with the idea of bringing Maria von Trapp to the musical stage. After the musical was written, she never missed a performance during her two years on Broadway with "The Sound of Music."

Later, Miss Martin took "Hello Dolly" around the world including Japan, Vietnam, Okinawa and Korea, and concluding with a six-month triumph at London's Drury Lane.

Book News

From Sheppard Memorial Library

By BARBARA BOONE

A variety of books comes your way this month.

First on the list is ESP, SEERS, AND PSYCHICS by Milbourne Christopher. The book is filled with extraordinary revelation and first-hand reports on psychic experiences. The occult world of thought readers, astrologers, and fortune-tellers; of clairvoyance, mediumistic manifestations, tale tilting, living burials, and fire walking is documented in detail. You will read about the findings of Dr. Joseph B. Rhine of Durham, North Carolina and seeress, Jean Dixon whose prophecies affect many Americans and other, such as Irving Bishop, thought reader; Eusapia Palladino, table levitator; and Achille D'Angelo, famed for his "psychic thrusts."

Strange tales, strange deaths, strange experiments, and stranger-than-fiction accounts are reviewed and interpreted in this fascinating book.

This book, NEEDLEPOINT BY DESIGN by Maggis Lane, adds something new, fresh and extremely stylish to the needlepoint repertoire. It introduces the author's method of working directly from a charted design onto an unmarked canvas, and gives completely worked-out, large scale graphs for 24 Orientally inspired designs which, with clear directions, even an unexperienced needlepointer can easily follow. This is an informative book for anyone who likes needlepoint.

Another book, NEEDLEPOINT DESIGN by Louis J. Gartner, Jr., deals with designing your own needlepoint. It is comprehensive with complete information on canvases and wools and where to buy them; how to do the several forms of the needlepoint stitch if you are a beginner, and how to refine your way of stitching to become an expert; how to prepare a canvas, work your design, even block the finished product.

With this book to guide you in arriving at your own designs, you can do needlepoint that you could not buy anywhere at any price, one-of-a-kind designs as easy or as challenging as you wish.

The kitchen has often been called the best room in the house, and in KITCHENS AND DINING ROOMS the author, Mary Gilliatt, shows us many ways in which this is true. There is a marvelous collection of some of the most interesting and best-designed centers for the preparation and enjoyment of food. The illustrated history of the kitchen and the dining room contained in the introduction is followed by a dazzling array of rooms of great character.

The book's emphasis is on originality and ingenuity, and the reader will find in these pages a welcome host of ideas which will inspire him to make his own surroundings more interesting and attractive.

TOUCH THE SUN, by Kaye Klem, is the story of John Donahan who has come West seeking wealth in the silver mines of the Comstock Lode in Nevada in the 1870's. Years had passed and John's rewards were meager, but the abandoned Chinee mine brought dreams to John. They were soon thwarted by scheming financiers and a beautiful woman, Cassandra Price.

Disaster, on the brink of success, enables John to discover the proper relation between success and respect, pride and love, in this epic tale of men and women whose lives are dramatically intertwined with the violence, tragedy and rich rewards of the fabulous Comstock Lode.

"Crucible" Contest Winners Announced

WILSON — Seven winners in poetry and fiction have been announced by the editors of "Crucible," the literary and art magazine at Atlantic Christian College.

The winners are those judged to be tops in the two creative fields of Atlantic Christian's third annual literary contest, made possible by a grant from the North Carolina Arts Council.

This year contributors to the contest numbered 135 poets and writers from 43 different towns, cities and rural communities in North Carolina. Altogether, they submitted over 500 pieces to be considered for the contest, which each year is drawing wider attention and participation.

The winning pieces of writing will be published in the May 1971 issued of "Crucible."

In fiction, the top award went to a retired personnel counselor from Raleigh, Mike Mirman. Mirman has published short stories in "Windhover" and "The Long View Journal." The second prize for fiction was won by Pat Outlaw Cooper of Wilson. Currently at work on a novel, she has published stories in "The Rebel," "Corradi," and other publications. Sue Ellen Bridgers of Chapel Hill was third place winner. An alumni of East Carolina University, Mrs. Bridgers at one time worked on the staff of "The Rebel."

For poetry, Nanette Mize Rogers of Manteo took first place. A graduate of Atlantic Christian College, she is married to Henry Applewhite and is a 1970 graduate of UNC at Greensboro. A senior at St. Andrews Presbyterian College, Todd Steven Davis was second prize winner in poetry. The third prize was split between Ann Deagon and Becke Jenkins Roughton. Mrs. Deagon is a faculty member at Guilford College, and Mrs. Roughton lives in Southern Pines.

Two Day Print Sale At Center

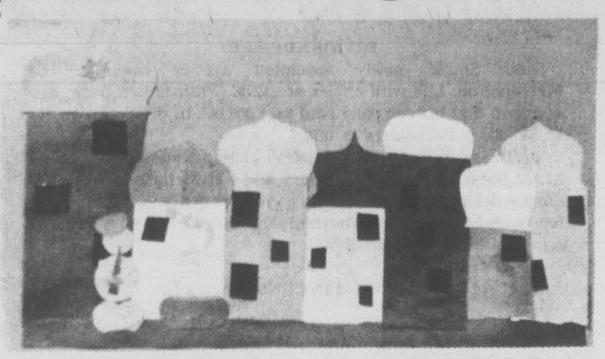

A two day exhibition and sale of original graphic prints of contemporary and old masters will be held at the Greenville Art Center on Friday and Saturday, April 16 and 17.

On Friday, hours of the exhibition will be from 11:00 a. m. to 5:00 p. m., and from 6:00 to 9:00 p. m. Hours on Saturday will be 10:00 a. m. to 5:00 p. m.

More than 1,000 original etching, lithographs, and woodcuts, by artists such as Picasso, Chagall, Miro, and others, both European and American, will be available for collectors.

The exhibition-sales is held periodically at the Art Center to give collectors a chance to choose original prints from a wide range of artists.

Teen-Agers Exhibit At Art Center

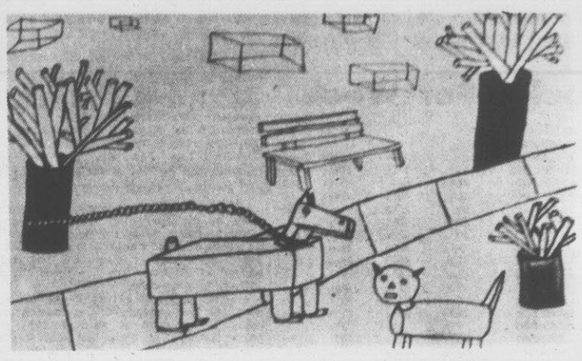

Following the recently closed show of art by children of the kindergarten and elementary schools of Greenville, the students of Greenville's junior and senior high schools now have their show on view.

At 3:00 p. m. today, a public reception at the Art Center, 802 South Evans Street, is being held to honor the young artists and their parents and teachers.

It is always interesting to have children's art in sequence — with the youngest displaying their creations which are almost wholly the result of an intuitive artistic feeling, then to have their work followed by older children who have acquired the first dictates of sophistication and application of thought in presenting their subject matter.

In a way, it is a little sad to see that the transformation results in the loss of that abandoned spontaneity that is inherent in work of young children — but art, like all else, must be subject to discipline; and there comes a time when those who create must "put aside childish things."

Nevertheless, artists in the teen age group still retain enough of that vital child-like enjoyment of color and joy of creation which more than compenstates for what may be lacking in technique and reasoning that is the guideline of a mature artist.

There are many enjoyable works on view, and art lovers will see much to please them in the current exhibit of art students from Aycock and Rose.

Reviews

BLUESCHILD BABY, by George Cain, McGraw-Hill Book Company, New York, 1970, 201 pp., $6.95.

"See me, all crouch and stealth, slipping softly toward a corner... all the while expecting the shouted 'Halt!' or fatal bullet from behind... Walking, one step, two, never turning, as if not seeing them will prevent their seeing me." Thus George Cain describes a black man's fear of the police in his first novel, Blueschild Baby. The man is the central figure of the book, and he is also named George Cain. A habitual dope user, he feels safe only in Harlem, "land of black people, dead people, my people." The story tells of his deep involvement in the inner city world of junkies and crime, but also of his final escape from that world through love and the self-respect it kindles. A memoir in the form of a novel, it shows sincerity and skill.

George Cain is the son of aspiring middle class parents who give him the education to escape into the outside world. So "to the entire neighborhood I became the chosen one and was watched and prayed over." But it is not enough. The outside world of private schools and polite society, even the black segment, has no use for a black boy who reflects his race and heritage. Once he "stood studying my face in the mirror, trying to rearrange the big lips and wide nose." The full price of his success was not to "think of myself as black or white, but marginal man." Finally, he must escape again, back to the world he knows and that knows him. And his believing parents, who had moved out to the suburbs of New Jersey, find themselves surrounded by hostile whites in the wake of the Newark riot, their other children in constant trouble, and give up their dream and also return.

As George explains, "it is the jungle, that is what they say, but it's warm, it made and protected you." From this point, home and yet still lost, it is only a small step for him into drug addiction and the desperate life of the hustler. He will have to move through his personal hell before he can climb out a final time. For, as he says, "The Man (white man) can't free me. I must free myself."

The language of the novel is often raw, as is the life it pictures, but it is never used cheaply or sensationally. The style of writing is simple and vivid. Much of the effect of the book comes from its being told through George Cain's eyes. As the narrator, he is always questioning, probing, valuing — his world as well as himself. To give one example, he observes that "from the jails shall come the revolution, where the oppressed, those who were hungry and stole, dared transgress the oppressor, sit in cells doing what they never had time to do in the big world, read, think, and most important, exchange ideas with their brothers." And throughout the book as he makes such comments he is growing and changing, so that his thoughts can never be taken as final. Through his novel, the author George Cain is searching for the truth of his own identity, and it is a journey well worth taking with him.

Help Needed For Sidewalk Art Show

A plea for assistance in mounting, managing and dismounting the annual Sidewalk Art Show is being sounded. Volunteers, lightly or heavily muscled, are urgently needed in various capacities for the show scheduled for Friday, April 30, and Saturday, May 1.

Anyone who can work before, during, or after the show is urged to call Betty Fore at 756-1952; the Art Center, 758-1946, or Jerry Raynor, 752-6166.

Music on Campus

Two recitals on Sunday initiate the week's offering of music on campus at East Carolina University.

SUNDAY — 3:15 p. m. Brass Quintet and chorale concert, Stephen Koch, conducting, with material prepared by Allan Cox. Musicians are Jim Cribbs, Ruth Rockefeller, Tom Secor, David Harris, with Louise Spain, pianist. In this annual spring presentation by the brass quintet and chorale, the program will consist of contemporary sacred music and Easter anthems performed by the chorale, and brass compositions of the 17th, 19th and 20th centuries. Recital Hall, Fletcher Building (School of Music Building).

SUNDAY — 8:15 p. m. — Dr. Peter Dundon, cellist, in a recital of sonatos for cello and piano. Dr. Gregory Kosteck accompanies. On the program are Prokofiev's "Cello Sonata, Opus 119 in C Major;" and "Cello Sonata in D Major, Opus 102, No. 2," by Beethoven. This recital will be on the second floor of the School of Music, in the Concert Studio.

MONDAY — 8:15 p. m. — Recital Hall. Joint senior recital, June McNair Brooks, piano; and Charles Sidney Jones, trombone. Miss Brooks will play six variations on "Salve tu Demine" by Mozart; Schubert's "Impromptu, Opus 90, No. 2;" Brahms' "Cappriccio, Opus 116, No. 3;" "Valse Oubliee" by Liszt; Ravel's minuet "Sur le nom d'Haydn;" and Toch's "Der Jongleur." Selections to be played by Jones are not available for listing.

WEDNESDAY — Faculty recital, Marian Harding, harp. Time, place and selections not available at this time. Presumably to be held at 8:15 p. m. in the Recital Hall.

All concerts and recitals listed are without charge and the public is invited to attend.

WHO IS THE PERFECT FOOL?

Although they say no one is perfect, we feel that at the first of April, our definition of a "perfect fool" is appropriate.

He is someone who does not believe in going to a doctor or dentist for a periodic check-up. Moreover he will always try to cure his own illness and yours too if you will listen to him. His medicine cabinet is filled with half-empty unlabeled bottles. He usually is the first one to try that new "gadget" or "elixir," and is an expert on all current health fads from dieting to exotic seeds. He is a menace to himself and to others.

YOU OR YOUR DOCTOR CAN PHONE US when you need a delivery. We will deliver promptly without extra charge. A great many people rely on us for their health needs. We welcome requests for delivery service and charge accounts.

HOLDING STEADY — The stock market held steady over the past week with the Dow Jones industrial average closing at 903.4 Friday, a dip of 0.44 from the week before. The Associated Press 60-stock average closed at 315.1, a fractional gain of 2.9 over the same period. Analysts said investors were adopted a wait-and-see attitude, pending release of firms' first quarter earning reports, or favorable economic news. (AP Wirephoto Chart)

Business Circles Talk Nixon Stabilization Plans

By CAROLE MARTIN
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — How much impact the Nixon administration's new plan to stabilize construction industry wages and prices will have on curbing inflation was a key topic of discussion in business circles this past week.

If labor and management looked upon the President's system on constraints on wages and prices as "a barrier to be circumvented, it will fail," said Labor Secretary J.D. Hodgson.

But he predicted that if the plan were viewed as "an opportunity to bring needed stability, sound growth, increased employment and a bright future to a troubled industry, then everyone will have gained immeasurably."

In announcing the plan Monday, Nixon warned that "disaster lies ahead" unless the inflationary trend in construction is countered." On the other hand, the President said he envisoned "a bright and prosperous future," if sensible restraint were practiced.

It will be some time, however, before it will be known whether the new system can, in fact, slow inflation in the building industry.

The plan would establish labor-management boards to review collective bargaining agreements in each of the construction crafts, with a committee representing labor, management and the public set up to review those boards' findings.

Under the administration's system, settlements would be acceptable if supported by productivity and cost-of-living trends, but only when they don't exceed average annual increases negotiated from 1961 through 1968, which was about 6 per cent per year.

But the system is a loose one, with the boards and the committee given considerable latitude in interpreting the criteria set forth in the President's order. Hodgson added that the 6 per cent figure wasn't "a hard and fast one."

Some observers noted that last year's settlements in construction average 15 per cent a year, so equity adjustment could wipe out the 6 per cent figure. Some crafts might demand more than 6 per cent this year in order to maintain their traditional lead over other crafts that settled for 15 per cent last year. Hodgson said some of last year's larger settlements might have to be disregarded in making equity adjustments this year.

Leaders of construction unions weren't happy about the President's executive order. They said they would "obey the law" but would fight the President's plan by all legal means available.

I.W. Abel, president of the United Steelworkers union, which faces industrywide negotiations with steel companies this summer, said his union would not accept any wage limit similar to that applied to construction bargaining.

The same day the President moved to curb the construction industray wage-price spiral, the Congressional Joint Economic Committee issued a report which concluded that the economy was not likely to attain the Nixon administration's growth goals this year.

The committee majority called for creation of a board to apply voluntary guidelines as a means of restraining wage and price increases. A minority favored a national network of "productivity councils" to achieve efficiency.

Both approaches have been advocated by Arthur F. Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, but the administration generally has been opposed to such plans.

On Wednesday, Burns told a Senate Banking subcommittee that the Federal Reserve Board unanimously opposed a proposal to let the board apply reserve requirements against various types of bank loans, instead of against only various classes of deposits.

In other developments this past week:

—Lockheed Aircraft Corp. and the British government reached agreement on use of Rolls-Royce Ltd. engines developed for Lockheed's three-jet airbus. Terms were not disclosed and the agreement would have to be approved by the airlines that ordered the 300-passenger L-1011 Tristar jetliner and by banks financing the sales.

—Ford Motor Co. recalled all 220,000 Pinto minicars built through March 19 for modifications to guard against flash fires in the air cleaners.

—The government's Wholesale Price Index showed that the rise in prices of wholesale food and industrial goods eased in March. The over-all result of price changes for a broad range of wholesale food and industrial goods was an increase of two-tenths of 1 per cent in the index, sharply lower than the steepest two-month hikes in 20 years of nine-tenths in February and seven-tenths in January.

Dilda, Parris Attended 2-Day PCA Conference

J. R. Dilda and Arnold B. Parris of Pitt-Greene Production Credit Association have returned from Columbia, South Carolina, where they attended a two-day Management Development Conference, according to F. L. Little, Jr., general manager of the association.

The conference was conducted for assistant general manager, branch office managers, and representatives of PCAs by the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Columbia, South Carolina, in cooperation with Cavett Robert, management consultant of Phoenix, Arizona.

The Bank provides leadership, supervision and agricultural loan funds for 60 PCAs which make agricultural loans through 190 complete service offices in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Florida. The PCAs serve over 52,000 farmers, growers and ranchers with more than $675 million of short and intermediate-term credit.

Subjects presented during the conference include: Your Role on the PCA Management Team; When Legal Advice is Needed; Loan Analysis; Farm Records; Management Leadership; Six Principles of Human Engineering and other current topics of interest.

Conference insturctors in addition to Robert included R. A. Darr, president; J. C. Moore, senior vice president; J. Fred Taylor, Jr., vice president; John L. Marshall, vice president and secretary; James E. Wilson, vice president; C. W. S. Horen, vice president and general counsel; and Tom D. Nolen, director Electronic Farm Records.

The farmer owned and operated Pitt-Greene PCA serves Pitt and Greene counties and is extending $11,000,000 to 1500 farmer-members in these counties for their needs for operating and capital investment credit on an intermediate term basis.

The association's home office is located in Greenville and another complete service office in Snow Hill, managed by Arnold B. Parris.

Benny Fox, Now 76, Still A 'Human Fly'

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — "If you make a mistake, it's your last," says 76-year-old Benny Fox, who bills himself as the last of the "human flies."

Now semiretired, his hair just turning white, Fox still dabbles in standing on his head on skyscraper ledges.

For six decades he toured the country with circuses and climbed the walls of towering city buildings, seemingly on suction-tipped toes and figers of steel.

"There's no one my age still in action," he declared. "There was 'Shipwreck' Kelly—you remember him—and Joe Powers. They're dead. Me, I'm the last one now."

Fox says he is looking to next Tuesday when he plans to mark the 60th anniversary of his daredevil feats by standing on his head atop a five-inch board extending eight feet out from the top of a 20-story skyscraper in nearby Orange.

He's certain he can do it. He recalled that at the age of 70 he dangled his daughter Betty from a perch atop the 400-foot Sheraton-Lincoln Hotel in Houston, Tex.

And, anyway, "I ain't made a mistake in 60 years."

Fox says his act Tuesday will be done without a net or other safety devices. In his career he rarely worked with a net.

"I ain't got nothing but 300 feet straight down," he says. He credits his longevity to a fine sense of balance—and watching where he steps.

"The astronauts can make mistakes," he says. "They've got safety devices to back them up. I don't."

Fox was born "in a truck" at Rochester, Ind., in 1895 to a circus family.

He became a "human fly" in 1911 after touring as an aerialist with his family. He says he performed at major metropolises and whistlestops throughout America and in the cities, towns and capitals of 29 foreign nations.

Wednesday — fried chicken, buttered rice, mixed greens, pineapple salad, rolls, milk;

Fear Of 'Pill' Increased Births

LONDON (AP) — Women frightened by a warning about contraceptive pills pushed the birth rate up in England and Wales during the last three months of 1970, the Family Planning Association says.

Births during that period totaled 191,000, an increase of 4 per cent over the last three months of 1969.

Nine months before a government committee said some brands of birth control could cause heart failure.

"There is no doubt that the major part of the increase in births is due to the pill scare," an association spokesman said.

INCREASE PENALTY

BEIRUT (AP) — Libya has raised the penalty for drug smuggling from five years to life imprisonment at hard labor, the official Libyan news agency reported.

Few Bother To Complain; Office Dies

By HOWARD FIELDS

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The federal government has discovered that while its citizens may complain about government, they apparently don't bother to tell about it even when given the chance.

One of President Nixon's 1968 campaign promises was to make government more responsive to the people.

To demonstrate this new openness, the administration sent Housing Secretary George W. Romney to Philadelphia Oct. 28, 1969, and with great fanfare opened the "President's Listening Post" on busy Broad Street.

The post was advertised as the answer to the problem of cutting through government red tape. The post, it was said, would enable the public to "go right to the top" with complaints or suggestions and would be the forerunner of a dozen more such posts.

Today, there are no listening posts. The one in Philadelphia lasted less than 15 months. The others never got off the ground.

The Philadelphia listening post received only about 250 communications during its short life span. And while it was set up to get answers "from the top," the post itself had trouble at times piercing the bureaucratic red tape.

The government had geared itself for a flurry of complaints and suggestions about the Vietnam War, but even those weren't forthcoming.

Richard Vawter, information director for the General Services Administration (GSA), whose duties included publicizing the listening post, said the project didn't receive enough publicity.

"It was difficult to keep it before the public," Vawter said.

He said a newspaper article on the post would produce "a big flurry" but over-all the post received an average of only one response every two days.

Irvin Kator, assistant director for the Civil Service Commission which devised the listening post, admitted "the response was not what we had expected. We opened the Philadelphia one experimentally and wanted to see whether there was any value or payoff there."

The Philadelphia Post was set up as an adjunct of the "Federal Information Centers" established by the previous administration.

The centers are still operating, use of them has been growing and the government plans to open many more and make the existing ones more sophisticated in order to reach more people.

Although the information centers will take complaints or suggestions, their primary task is to provide information sought by the public.

"We have expanded considerably and find them extremely valuable," Kator said. Vawter said each of the 26 centers now in operation handled from 5,000 to 20,000 inquiries a month.

The requests range from questions about Social Security, income taxes and the draft to passports, who to contact about college entrance and what the government is doing about air and water pollution.

The centers also get questions about local problems, such as "how can we get police and fire protection for our community?"

The government recently opened such a center at San Diego, Calif., which combines question-answering service on the federal, state and local levels from the same office. It is considering connecting information centers for the different levels at Denver by telephone.

The first information center was opened July 11, 1966, in Atlanta. Eight more —in Kansas City, Boston, Chicago, Denver, Fort Worth, San Francisco, New York and Los Angeles —were opened before the center-post combination in Philadelphia.

Since then centers have been opened in Albuquerque; Minneapolis; Pittsburgh; Baltimore; Portland, Ore.; Miami, New Orleans, Detroit, Newark, N.J.; Seattle and San Diego. Ten more are planned for the fiscal year beginning July 1.

Kator said, "We hope eventually to be able to provide serivce to 80 per cent of the population."

Most of the centers are located in the lobby of federal buildings and the requests are handled from behind a counter by three or four women in each center.

HOW TO SELL YOUR HOME

Are you planning to sell your home? Spring has now arrived and many people will begin to start looking for homes. The cold weather has kept them in, but as the weather warms up home buyers will be more interested.

Yards should be cleaned, flower beds should be spaded and easy-to-grow annual flowers should be planted to make your home more attractive. Arrange yard furniture attractively to suggest relaxing summer evenings.

The interior is most important. Needless to say the house should always be kept clean and orderly. To give a look of spaciousness open blinds, curtains, and windows. A vase of flowers can make a definite difference in the total appearance of a room.

John F. Kennedy Center Is Finally Near Complete

By ALICE ZARRILLO

WASHINGTON (UPI) —In the vast concert hall of the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, the only harmony to be heard these days comes from the banging of hammers as workmen install row upon row of red upholstered seats.

On the broad stage of the opera house, the only scenery is scaffolding erected by painters.

Within a few months, however —in September to be precise —the Capital's newest tourist attraction will come to life as a major world center for all the performing arts —from ballet to hard rock.

JFK Memorial

Erected as a memorial to the assassinated President, the center is a huge, box-like marble structure, spread over two city blocks on the east bank of the Potomac River. Aside from its cultural importance to the Capital and to all Americans, it is —viewed simply as a building —a most impressive structure, inside and out.

The facade consists of more than 3,500 tons of white Carrara marble, a gift of the Italian government. Sixty-six pillars, encased in gold-finished aluminum, accent the clean vertical lines. Windows six stories high overlook the Potomac. Its total cost is estimated at $68 million, with part coming from federal grants and part from private contributions.

The grand foyer on the first floor is overhung with 18 crystal chandeliers presented by the Swedish government. Off the grand foyer are the three main auditoriums —the concert hall, the opera house, and the Eisenhower Theater. A 500-seat movie theater on an upper level will be completed next year.

Altough it has a total seating-capacity of more than 6,500 seats, each auditorium was designed with acoustics and visibility in mind. No effort has been made to crowd in as many seats as possible. "We would rather have 10 less seats than a pole in someone's way," a spokesman said.

Each auditorium is equipped with a Presidential Box. All have been planned to accommodate live television coverage of events.

Some of the nation's prominent patrons of the arts will get a preview look at the center at a gala May 27. Mrs. Richard M. Nixon, honorary chairman of the centers board of trustees, is expected to attend with President Nixon.

New Major Work

The Japanese silk curtain on the Opera House stage will rise for the first time on Sept. 8 with what has been described as a "new major work" by composer-conductor Leonard Bernstein. The piece is based on the Catholic Mass and includes all the elements of the performing arts, including dance, and is said to encompass musical forms ranging from classical to rock.

Bernstein's eclectric composition is an appropriate symbol of the varied works which will be performed at the center once it is in full operation this fall.

Its resident companies include the American Ballet and the National Symphony Orchestra, but jazz and rock musicians and country and western singers also will be welcome.

Some of the initial performances will be donated to the center free of charge by internationally known artists ranging from Pablo Casals and Leopold Stokowski to folk singers Judy Collins and Pete Seeger and popular rock groups such as Chicago and Ghe Fifth Dimension.

Proceeds from their performances will be used to support a ticket subsidy program. Under this program, one quarter of the seats for each performance will be sold at a discount to elderly persons, poor people, and students. Officials at the center say the program is a means of opening the center to all Americans.

Jury Accepts No-Press Sheets

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — The Des Moines Ramada Inn has been found innocent of not ironing permanent press sheets used in its guest rooms as required by a 58-year-old Iowa law.

It contended that the tumbling action of drying made them smooth enough and the jury evidently agreed.

Receive Letter To A 'Big Ranch'

The Waggoner Ranch covers more than 500,000 acres in six counties.

It is believed to be Texas' largest spread operated as a single ranching unit.

The letter was from two 18-year-old girls who wanted to correspond with cowboys.

Claims Remedy For Hangovers

DUESSELDORF, Germany (AP) — A West German professor claims that plain mineral water is the best remedy for a hang-over. Prof. Hans Glatzel, formerly of the Max Planck Scientific Institute in nearby Dortmund, said that after a drinking spree, the human kidney must secrete more liquid than usual and with it too much salt. Natrium in mineral water replenishes the salt level, the professor said.

Looks For Rise In Suicide Rate

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The chairman of the local Suicide Prevention Center expects an increase in the country's suicide rate if there is an economic slump this year. Sam Bloomberg said "if there is a decline in our prosperity, it will lead to a general loss of hope and security—both causes of suicide—and this, coupled with the continuing decline of the stock exchange, will have an effect on the suicidal person and therefore we can expect more suicides.

Indian War Fought With Typewriter

HALIFAX, N.S. (UPI)—Chief Peter Perro is fighting an Indian war armed with a typewriter, research assistants and an academic specialist as adviser, Perro is trying to halt the erosion of the culture of his tribe, the 3,000 Micmacs of the Canadian Maritimes and the U.S. New England states.

Chief Perro has been working for the past three years to compile a 15,000-word dictionary for distribution to libraries and, on request, to Micmac families and individuals throughout New England as well as in the Canadian provinces of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island.

He already has published a "First Micmac Reader."

He says he has already compiled over 7,000 words and hopes the dictionary will be ready for printing in 1972. Assisting him is Cornell University Lingguist Paul Proulx of Ithaca, N.Y.

After 11 years of working and living in the United States, Chief Perro says when he returned to Canada in 1966 he toured Micmac reserves to find "the language was dying out, the people were losing their identity."

He hopes the dictionary, the grammar and another work under way, recounting the tales and legends of the Micmac people, will halt the cultural erosion. Visiting Micmac families throughout Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, the chief has already taped over 100 interviews.

He is just as interested in the Indians' contemporary situation.

"One of the things I'm trying to do," he said in an interview, "is to get together the stories of the people and find out what's happening now, what they've done, what their goals are."

Chief Perro is also assisting Tribes Inc. of Bar Harbour, Maine, an association of New England bands and tribes currently compiling a type of North American Indian "Esperanto," a combination of Micmac, Malicete, Penobscot and Passamaquoddy tongues. He notes, however, language differences will create some initial problems when the first published work in these amalgamated tongues appears.

The chief has had his problems, too. While the Micmac language contains only 13 letters, he found he had to arbitrarily add three more to obtain phonetic purity.

Crime Increased In West Berlin

BERLIN (AP) — More than 176,000 crimes were reported in West Berlin in 1970, 10.7 per cent more than in 1969, according to a city government official.

Thefts made up 64.5 per cent of the crimes as compared with 58.9 per cent in 1969.

Narcotics offenses also showed an alarming increase over the year, with 838 arrests for drug peddling, almost twice as many as in 1969, the official added.

BILINGUAL SCHOOL

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., (AP) — When the University of Texas branch opens here in 1973, it will offer a major innovation in college curriculum.

Most courses will be taught in both Spanish and English.

Dr. Arleigh Templeton, president, said it will be the first bicultural and bilingual university in the nation.

Jobs Have Brought Rewards Into Her Life

By ROSALIE TROTMAN
Reflector Woman's Editor

Several interesting jobs have added highlights, brought rewards and a near tragedy into the life of Miss Shaun White of Charlotte.

Presently she is a vocalist with a recently formed group, The Phoenix. In addition she has worked as a legal secretary, has trained porpoises and has groomed race horses.

"Although The Phoenix is classified as a rock group, we try to perform a variety of songs — contemporary and popular. We try to select songs we enjoy doing and that will appeal to the audience. Our arranger often chooses songs which have been out for a while, giving them a new slant or sound," said Miss White.

The members of the group live in different cities in North Carolina and commute into one area for rehearsal. The Phoenix was in Greenville last week where they performed four nights at The Music Factory.

The group has appeared in Atlanta, Ga., Richmond, Va. and Raleigh. Their name was selected from the Egyptian mythological bird, the phoenix, which grew out of its own ashes. In addition to Miss White, there are two other vocalists and four in the band.

"I first interviewed with another group which then included several members of The Phoenix. When our group was formed, they called me in New Jersey and asked me to sing with the group to see if we could work together.

"This is the first time I have ever done anything like this but I find it extremely interesting. There's a lot of hard work involved, but it's very rewarding," remarked Miss White.

She added, "I feel that being a member of The Phoenix is unique in that the fellows treat me with the utmost respect and are always concerned about my well-being. Their attitude is something like six older brothers would have for their kid sister."

Training Porpoises

While living in New Jersey, Miss White worked at the Steel Pier at Ocean Wonderworld training porpoises.

"I was first given some basic training ideas — having the animals go through a set schedule of tricks. I then set out to teach them new tricks. Training porpoises is similar to training other animals although their capacity for comprehending and learning is much higher than other animals, in my opinion.

"I have worked and trained horses and dogs and there is no comparison. For instance, simple tricks like jumping through a hoop or over a hurdle bar might take three-four hours to teach," she remarked.

"A gentleman with whom I worked in New Jersey taught a porpoise to come up out of the water and do a backward flip, which is completely against their natural instinct in only four days. The backward flip, in my opinion, is the hardest trick to teach a porpoise.

"You can talk to the porpoise verbally. They seem to be very sensitive — almost like children, they are so remarkable. When teaching a trick and it was not done right, I told them 'no.' They might stall around or play around before doing the trick over and over until they did it right," she recalled.

"Porpoises are very playful animals but they work hard. I had one named Kelly, that was sometimes moody. If I agitated him, he would swim to the bottom of the pool and stay for a while. I was often sprayed with water by a playful porpoise, therefore I dressed in rubber boots and a rain slicker," Miss White stated.

During her job, she did have a near tragedy. While on a high stand, 16-18 feet, holding fish for two porpoises to do a trick together, they came up out of the water to get the fish and got her hands instead. The accident sent her to the hospital for tetanus shots, X-rays and clamps for the healing process.

"It is now funny and I honestly think the animals were sorry that the accident happened from the way they acted before and afterwards. It took some time to get them to come up after the fish and do the trick following the accident," she said.

After attending college for almost two years, Miss White began learning the art of caring for horses. "Anybody can care for a horse, but to do it well, I would call an art. I had been around horses and really enjoyed them as long as I can remember. I believe for me, the freest feeling I have ever had is riding bareback covering unlimited ground. You are not limited to a road and you don't worry about car trouble, you're just free.

Grooming Horses

"After college, I went to Baltimore, Md., and worked at a racing stable where they only work with thoroughbred horses. We first started working on the proper way to brush a horse, as there is a right and wrong way to brush. My training included general grooming knowledge, proper feeds, bandaging, medicines and proper amounts of exercise," she added.

"A horse responds to the type of treatment he is given. In my opinion, there is no such thing as a mean horse unless made that way by human hands.

"After I became proficient in my grooming skills, I was given four horses that I had the complete responsibility for their welfare. Part of the enjoyment in caring for the horses was when it came time to go to the race, I was given the responsibility of taking them from the stable to the paddock area where they were saddled and the jockey mounted the horse and took him onto the tract to race," Miss White explained.

"You got to see your horse race and then return him to the stable. If he won, you took him to the winner's circle," she smiled.

Miss White made the trip to the winners circle six times in addition to having several horses that won second, third, fourth and fifth places.

She has an Appaloosa stallion which she has had since he was nine months old. His registered name is Mekan Sleipnir — nicknamed "Mike."

Leaving this job, she returned to college and then "embarked on a career of working as a legal secretary, deciding to settle down and see how the 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. people live."

She concluded, "I enjoyed the work and it was very interesting, but it did not give me time to spend with my horse and dog and being outdoors. I realized I was not a '9-5' person, to remain inside all day. This is why I am now singing with The Phoenix. I don't mind being inside at night, but during the day, the out-of-doors is for me!

Miss White is the daughter of Franc White, who is associated with the East Carolina University News Bureau.

Just One Of Surprises In News: TV-Jeebies Noted

By TRIXIE BELMONT

PARIS (WNS) — Mental disturbances among children caused by television are becoming dangerously frequent, according to a West Berlin child psychiatrist.

Prof. Helmut Selbach, 62, says: "Too many parents allow their children to watch too much television, and too much of the wrong kind of television. I mean crime series, violence, brutality and sex scenes that are far too explicit.

"Because children more often than not don't understand what they are watching they become anxious and disturbed."

At his Neurological Clinic in Berlin, Prof. Selback has started a department to help these children. Last year he treated 500 kids suffering from mental disturbances.

His therapy to cure an overdose of TV is short, limited periods of viewing under control accompanied by explainations of what is appearing on the screen. The children's questions are always answered as fully as possible.

And So To Bed

The staid leaders of the British Medical Association have published a book, "Getting Married." And it includes a chapter "And so to Bed." Their advice on this fundamental aspect of wedded bliss:

"If you can avoid it, and especially before the children begin to arrive, don't always leave love-making till the last thing at night. Too often it tends to become the last household chore of the day. Give it the importance it deserves.

"Instead of having an evening out, sometimes have a gala evening in, with love-making as the main attraction. Try as far as possible to make sure that your bedroom is warm and that the bed doesn't creak.

"Before there's nothing wrong with the sitting-room sofa for a change of scene!"

National Striptease

A national striptease competition for Italy's loveliest girls between 19 and 23 is being suggested by 40-year-old show producer Otello Ottaviani, who just happens to be a cousin of 80-year-old retired Cardinal Alfredo Ottaviani, the Vatican's former "moral watchdog."

Italy's tourist bureau is studying Otello's plans—based on complaints that Italian night clubs "spend all their money on girls traditionally from Paris, Hamburg and London."

Local beauty is ignored, says Otello, and that means financial and aesthetic loss.

"I want local, provincial and regional heats for a strip competition," he says. "Followed by a spectacular stripping final in Rome!"

Shoplifting Is Not Theft

A Rome magistrate has ruled that three women who took products in a self-service store and did not pay for them could not be convicted of theft.

Said Gaetano Dragotto: "The only crime committed by the women was "fraudulent insolvency," just as though they had omitted to pay a restaurant or hotel bill.

Freeing the women accused of stealing goods in a Rome department store the magistrate added that stealing is taking an object against the owner's wish, while customers are encouraged to help themselves in a self-service store.

What's New?

When a West German whispers "my little rat-tail" in his girl friend's ear and she answers "little red devil," they aren't fighting. It's just the language of love. Tasty Beast, Little Red Devil, Rat, Onion and Squirrel are among the names lovers use, a radio survey revealed.

Half the playboys of the Western World—and some points East—are quaking in their hand-made shoes. Princess Ira Von Furstenberg has just announced she's going to publish her memoirs.

Rather than strip, Juliet Mills, daughter of John, sister of Hayley, has turned down a big slice of the profits of the high-budget film, "Quigley."

The Last Word

"The only things I ask of my children are that they are punctual, that they behave, and that they respect their father." —Italian star Silvana Mangano.

"I try to feel my way into the roles I play. After all, I hardly ever play myself—if I were the women I play I'd be in a hell of a mess." —Glenda ("Women In Love") Jackson.

"Neither of us loved the other when we got married. We were simply intoxicated with the idea of love." —Britt Ekland on ex-husband Peter Sellers.

"All witches are pro-British." —Mrs. Pat Crowther, witch.

Greenville Native Tells Of Recent Trip To India

Greenville native, Mrs. Jerri Mills Sutton, says she is a captive and critic of the ways of India, although perhaps more the former than the latter, after a recent visit to the country.

Mrs. Sutton, who lives in Richmond, where she is supervisor of history, government, and geography service of the Virginia Department of Education, made an eight-week visit for her Department. Interviewed by the Richmond News Leader, she said, "I'm still unpacking a headful of ideas. India is a land still appreciative of the slow-but-steady elephant. Just being better today than yesterday is a progress report to them.

"This concept was brought into focus for me when we asked a villager about India's progress. 'Life is better today than it was yesterday,' was his answer. To them that's good, and it is. It's so hard to say that India's backward or non-progressive because you're using western standards.

"When we asked them about U.S. assistance, they said they became frustrated with the Americans' predetermined concepts of efficiency and progress, that management people sent over did not take into account their traditions, social organizations, and the way they feel about doing things."

"The decision-making powers the Indian government gives its people are going to determine its future," Mrs. Sutton said. "The present educational system is not training them to make decisions that would bring about change. That's its dilemma."

During the tour late last year Mrs. Sutton and some 24 other American educators visited the Himalayas, the area by the Arabian Sea, the South, New Delhi, Calcutta, Bombay, and Madras. They met with U.S. Ambassador Kenneth Keating and were entertained by Prime Minister Indira Gandhi. Meeting Mrs. Gandhi was the highlight of her trip, Mrs. Sutton said.

Near the end of her tour, she was joined by her husband and nine-year-old daughter, Allison Lynn, and the family visited Thailand, Malaysia, Hong Kong, Japan, and Hawaii on their own before returning home. They were in Tokyo for Christmas and at Waikiki New Year's Eve.

Mrs. Sutton attended the Greenville Schools and received her B.S. and M.A. degrees from East Carolina University. Her father, Jesse Mills was a member of the Greenville Police Department and was killed in the line of duty here in 1952.

Couple Speaks Vows Saturday

Immanuel Baptist Church was the scene of the wedding of Miss Mary Linda Alford and Gary Anthony Jewell on Saturday at 3:00 p.m.

The Rev. Irby B. Jackson officiated at the double ring ceremony. A program of wedding music was presented by Mr. Perry Walton, organist, and Mrs. Stephanie Louis, solist, who sang "One Hand, One Heart", "O Lord Most Holy" and "The Lord's Prayer."

In the center of the background of the church was a fifteen semi-circle candelabra flanked with two coronet candelabras and tall standards of greenery complimented with a floor basket filled with snapdragons, chrysanthemums and pom pons. Preceding to the altar in front of the choir and pulpit were coronet candelabra over-flowing with springeri ferns and snapdragons. At the altar was decorated prie-dieu garlanded with improved smilax where the bride and bridegroom took their wedding vows, exchanged rings and knelt for the closing prayer and benediction. Pews were marked with nosegays tied with satin bows with long streamers.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Lane Alford of Greenville, was given in marriage by her father. She wore a formal gown of bridal satin fashion with a colonial neckline and semi-empire waist. The long sleeves ending in ruffles and bows, closed with traditional bridal bottons. Appliques and motifs of French rosepoint lace interspersed with bridal pearls and crystals were featured on the gown. The back of the gown was accentuated by a detachable chapel length train which was designed with appliques and motifs of French rosepoint lace.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Elliot Jewell of Raleigh.

Miss Mary Ellen Edwards of Rich Square was maid of honor. She was dressed in a formal gown of orchid polyester organza with long puff sleeves and frosted with white lace embroidery. She carried a nosegay of a rainbow of colors consisting of baby's breath painted pink, yellow daisies, orchid wax flowers, miniature carnations and sweetheart roses tied with fuchsia clutz bows with long narrow streamers.

Bridesmaids were Miss Janie Marie Burns and Miss Wanda Kay English, both of Raleigh, Miss Margaret Rose O'Connor of Roanoke, Va., Miss Mary Elizabeth Norman, Miss Mary Lloyd Winslow and Mrs. Dwight Wade Matthews, all of Greenville.

Bridesmaids wore dresses identical to the honor attendant and carried flowers designed after the honor attendant.

Flower girl was Miss Suzanne Elizabeth Jewell, sister of the bridegroom. She wore a dress designed after that of the bridesmaids and carried a wicker basket filled with all color petals which she scattered down the isle of the church prior to the bride's entrance.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Usshers were George Timothy Jewell of Raleigh, brother of the bridegroom, Robert Bruce Plybon of Greensboro, Ellis Sherwood Banks of Trenton, Glen Louis Kershaw of Framingham, Mass., James Phillip Mather of Virginia Beach, Va., and Spencer Carlton Slate of Winston-Salem.

MRS. GARY ANTHONY JEWELL

The mother of the bride wore a pink dress and coat ensemble which was trimmed with matching lace and pearls. She wore matching accessories and a white cattleya orchid corsage.

The mother of the bridegroom selected a mint green long sleeve chiffon dress with a sleeveless lace coat. She wore matching accessories and a white cattleya orchid corsage.

Following a wedding trip to the mountains, the couple will reside in Greenville.

The bride is a graduate of East Carolina University, where she was a member of Kappa Delta sorority. The bridegroom is attending East Carolina University, where he is a member of Pi Kappa Phi fraternity.

Reception

The refreshment table was covered to floor length with a white satin cloth garland with improved smilax and nosegays of miniature carnations and orchids with flowers tied with narrow orchid bows with trailing streamers. A five branched candelabra graced the table with arrangements of white butterfly roses, baby's breath and snapdragons.

Guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Hartwell Campbell, Mr. and Mrs. Willie Hawley, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Hite and Mr. and Mrs. John Conway.

Pouring punch and serving wedding cake were Miss Janet Dupree and Mrs. Diane Sutton.

Good-byes were said to Mr. and Mrs. George Garrett.

The bride and her attendants were honored at a luncheon on Saturday at the home of Mrs. Marion Tribley. Hostesses were Mrs. Tribley, Mrs. George Garrett and Mrs. John Butts, Jr.

Tell The 'Old Bag' You Didn't Mean It

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am so ashamed. I am 14, and a boy. The other night I was at The Boys Club and I called my mother to ask her if I could stay an extra half hour. My older brother answered the phone and he went to get my mother. My best friend was standing by the phone with me, and just to play a joke on him I said right into the telephone, "Mom, you old bag, I'm staying out until 10 o'clock!"

To my surprise, my mother was on the other end and she heard me. When I got home she told me that since she was being called "an old bag," she was going to start acting like one, and I shouldn't expect any more favors, or money from her. Also that from now on she is giving ALL her love to my older brother.

Abby, I feel so sorry and downhearted. I love my mother a lot, and I didn't really mean what I said. How can I get her to want me back? —DIDN'T MEAN IT

DEAR DIDN'T: Some mothers in moments of anger also say things they don't really mean. Apologize to her, and tell her you were only showing off for your friend.

DEAR ABBY: I am a spinsterish 27 and my mother is constantly yakking that I'm too particular and I will be left behind, if I don't wake up.

So I yak back that I'd rather be left behind than have the crummy kind of marriage she and Dad have. And when I bring up the fact that we need some guests to get my father out of the spare bedroom, she shuts up. Then my father doesn't speak to me for a week. Any advice on what I should say? —RUTHY

DEAR RUTHY: You need advice on what NOT to say. And so does your mother.

DEAR ABBY: The letter signed "WELL KEPT—BUT UNLOVED," in which the husband stated that he must "earn" his loving, struck home with me. For years, women have been using sex as a weapon.

I've been married for 30 years and have raised two children. I never wanted my wife to work, and for 25 years she didn't. Then she said she wanted to go to work so she could be a "person" instead of just a housewife. I reluctantly agreed, with the understanding that she would not expect me to do any more around the house than I did before.

Well, do you know how long that understanding lasted? About a year. Then she started complaining about all the laundry and housework that piled up all week. I told her if it was too much for her, she should quit her job. She said, no, she wouldn't quit her job, she needed more help from me. All the while she was working she was too beat to provide me with any loving. She finally said if I helped her more around the house she would somehow "find" the strength to give me some loving. I was dumbfounded, but said nothing.

For a year and a half I haven't gone near her. We are Catholics, and when I point out that the church considers it a sin for a wife to deny her husband, she tells me the church is not going to run her life. I am not the type to look for other women. I'm stuck, and I know it. But it's done me lots of good to get this off my chest. —ALSO UNLOVED

DEAR ABBY: I am 18 and want to register to vote but my parents won't let me. They say THEY couldn't vote until they were 21, and I will have to wait until I am 21, too.

I feel it is now my privilege to vote and they don't have the right to deny me this privilege. Do they?

—DISAPPOINTED

DEAR DISAPPOINTED: No. You don't need parental consent to register.

On The Young Side

By MARGARET STEVENS

Looking forward to Easter vacation, Friday-Tuesday, Rose High students are also planning for next year with spring registration this week.

Spring registration forms must be returned to homeroom teachers by Thursday. Presented to students Wednesday, a new curriculum guide includes new courses in home occupations, food services, business exploration and employment preparation, and world cultures.

A new phase program, explained to juniors and sophomores in assemblies Wednesday, will be employed in all courses required for graduation and the special offering of world cultures. Students may choose to work in one of three phases of difficulty.

Girls trying out for cheerleading will practice April 14-28 after school in the gym. Buses will be available for transportation home at 4:30 p.m.

Junior varsity tryouts will be April 29 and varsity tryouts, April 30. Two black and two white judges will be chosen from outside the city schools systems.

To be eligible for cheerleading, girls must have a 77 per cent first semester average. Candidates will perform one group chant, one individual cheer, and one original cheer or chant.

Each squad will consist of 11 regular members, seven white and four black. One black and one white alternate will also be chosen for each squad.

Literary Magazine

To publish literary works of talented students, Miss Ann Nelson's advanced composition class is in the process of publishing Rose's first literary magazine in four years. "You," the 28-page pamphlet, will contain material submitted by English teachers and approved by the class.

Mary Pacenta heads up the magazine staff as editor-in-chief, while Elfreda Smith and Jean Pendered serve as associate editors.

Editorial assistants are John Barber, Cathy Clark, Janice Clay, Sharon Costner, Kevin Cunningham, Joan Harrison, Angelita Marable, Terri Miller, Angenette Taylor, and Milton West. Art work will be done by Michael Goins and his art classes.

Information concerning an April sales drive and price per copy will be disclosed in the near future.

Alec Allen, finalist along with Steve Worsley for the Morehead Scholarship, is also a finalist for the Angier B. Duke Scholarship.

To be interviewed Tuesday-Friday of this week, Alec is one of 80 finalists. Forty will be chosen to receive the $500-$3,700 scholarship, the largest offered by Duke University.

Chess Team

Rose's chess team boasts a record of four wins and one loss so far this year. The team submitted to Goldsboro's East Wayne, March 12, but defeated West Carteret and Kinston High Schools March 20 and March 28, respectively.

Leading contributors of the club are Chris O'Connell, John Daugman, Mike Wilson, and Jim Birchard.

Sophomore Lyle Barlow won $25 with his essay on "How I Can Help Prevent a Drug Problem in My School." Sponsored by Greenville Women's Business and Professional Club, the contest was open to all Pitt County students between grades 10 and 12.

"The Atomic World," a program designed to promote interest in nuclear science, was presented to the entire student body Thursday morning. Using a geiger counter and a Van de Graff generator, Ronald Leatherwood conducted experiments while representing the engineering school of N.C. State University.

Four Participants

Traveling to Chapel Hill to tour U.N.C.'s medical school and hospital Friday were 28 Health Careers Club members.

FAMILY SUPPER
Vegetable Soup
Beef Biscuits Salad Bowl Fruit Beverage BEEF BISCUITS

Save time by using prepared biscuit mix.

Peanut oil
¼ cup minced onion
1 pound ground round steak
½ cup fine dry bread crumbs
½ cup milk
1 egg, slightly beaten
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon nutmeg
¼ teaspoon pepper
1½ teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
2 cups buttermilk biscuit mix
½ cup cold water

Pour 2 tablespoons peanut oil into electric fry pan; set dial at 275 degrees; heat about 5 minutes. Add and cook until transparent; turn off fry pan. In large bowl combine sauteed onions, ground beef, bread crumbs, milk, egg, salt, nutmeg, pepper and Worcestershire; mix well. Shape into twelve 3-inch logs. Pour 2 tablespoons peanut oil into electric fry pan; set dial at 300 degrees; heat about 5 minutes. Add meat and brown on all sids; continue to cook until meat is done, about 5 minutes longer. Remove from fry pan; set aside. Pour 8 cups peanut oil into electric deep-fat fryer; set dial at 425 degrees; preheat 25 minutes. Combine biscuit mix and cold water in bowl; stir with a fork until blended. Turn out onto a lightly floured board. Form dough into a ball and knead 5 times. Roll out to ⅛-inch thickness; cut in twelve 4½-inch rounds. Place a meat log in center of each round. Gently bring edges together forming a half circle. Seal well. Using basket, immerse 4 biscuits at a time in hot oil. Fry until golden brown, about 3 minutes. Drain on paper towels; serve hot with Tomato Sauce.

Miss Mitzi Congleton Weds Saturday Afternoon

Sain James United Methodist Church was the scene of the wedding of Miss Mitzi Sue Congleton and Robert M. Woodside on Saturday at five o'clock.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Congleton of Greenville and Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Woodside of Stauton, Va.

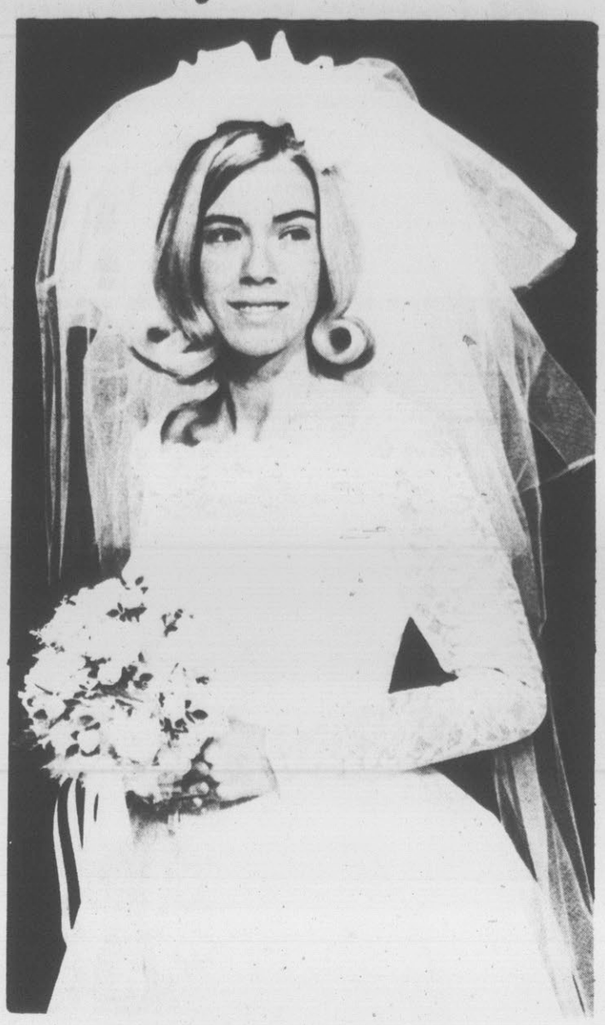

The Rev. Christian White and the Rev. Richard Gammon officiated at the double ring ceremony. A program of nuptial music was presented by Mrs. William Cain, organist.

The church was decorated in the traditional green and white. In the center of the background was a massive arrangement of white snapdragons, chrysanthemums and pom pons flanked on either side by single altar candles, tall standards of emerald greenery, and nine branched candelabra overflowing with bouquets of white snapdragons and pom pons. Pews were marked with satin ribbons.

The couple entered the church together. The bride wore a formal gown of peau de soie with silk Alencon lace overtrim which featured a fitted bodice and full skirt, scalloped square neckline and long lace sleeves. The front of the skirt was bordered with wide lace matching the neck and sleeves and the gown also had self covered buttons down the back to the waist.

Her full length train of silk illusion was attached to a bouffont of tiered illusion with peau de soie loop bows. The bride carried a cascade bouquet of phalaenopis orchids nestled in nylon tulle with pink sweetheart roses, sprays of English ivy tied with pink and white satin with long streamers.

Miss Babs Winn of Greenville was maid of honor. She wore a full length empire waistline gown of rosebud pink silk organza lined with satin. Her gown was styled with a flat, round collar and covered buttons. The bodice was trimmed with tiny pink and green flowers, and the full length sleeves were of pink organza. The maid of honor wore a shell pink silk organza picture hat with an open crown trimmed with green satin ribbon, accented with tiny bouquets of pastel flowers. She carried a wicker fireside basket filled with painted daisies, miniature carnations, baby's breath, and sweetheart roses with tips of Baker's fern tied with moss green and pink bows.

MRS. ROBERT M. WOODSIDE

Bridesmaids were Miss Norma Cameron, Miss Lala Steelman, Miss Terry Riddle, and Miss Susan Holt, all of Greenville. They wore gowns fashioned after that of the maid of honor and wore hats similar to hers trimmed with rosebud pink ribbons. Miss Kathy Lynn Ross of Greenville, niece of the bride, was flower girl. She wore a midi-length dress with a white organdy bodice and long Edwardian sleeves trimmed in lace. The empire waisted skirt was deep green velvet with a wide pink satin ribbon at the waist. The bridesmaids and flower girl carried baskets fashioned like that of the honor attendant.

Robert McCabe of Wayne, Pa., served his brother-in-law as best man. Ushers were Morton Congleton and Manly Congleton of Greenville, brothers of the bride, and Ledyard Ross and Benny Legget, brothers-in-law of the bride, both of Greenville.

The bride is a graduate of J.H. Rose High School and is presently a junior at East Carolina University. The bridegroom is a graduate of North Carolina State University with B.S. and M.S. degrees. He is a member of the East Carolina University faculty.

The couple is planning a future trip to the Pacific Northwest. They will make their home at 1206 Drexel Lane.

Following the rehearsal, the bridegroom's mother entertained the wedding party at a cake cutting in the fellowship hall of the church. The table was centered with an arrangement of yellow spring flowers and yellow candles. Margaret Leggett served the four-tiered wedding cake and Martiel Ross poured punch.

New Members Entertained At Spring Luncheon

The Junior Woman's Club of Greenville held its semi-annual membership luncheon at the Greenville Golf and Country Club Wednesday.

Mrs. Robert Dean, president, welcomed the guests. The new member induction ceremony was conducted by Mrs. Dean, Mrs. B. T. Moore and Mrs. William Fuqua. Each new member was presented a yellow rose by Mrs. Fuqua.

New members inducted were Mrs. Jacquelyn Coggins, Mrs. Lida Hyes Freuler, Mrs. Brenda Whichard, Mrs. Brenda Respess, Mrs. Loretta Vick and Mrs. Dawn Joines.

The Membership Committee was in charge of the arrangements for the luncheon. Committee members include: Mrs. Fuqua, chairman; Mrs. Lon Williford; Mrs. John Trotman; Mrs. Russell Taylor; Mrs. Howard Winslow; and Mrs. Weeden.

Mrs. Dink James, advisor, was a special guest. She told of the Fine Arts Luncheon which will be held on Saturday, April 24.

Crafts Are Alive, Well

By AP Newsfeatures

It may be the machine age, and the dawning of total technology, but some dropouts from the computer society are resisting in an intensely creative way.

These people are making things with their own hands: one of a kind desks, salad bowls, wall hangings, necklaces, chests of drawers, urns, boxes, drinking glasses, chairs and vases. Some are functional, others are for esthetics, but each is a personal statement.

In celebration of this event is Objects USA, a collection of 20th century crafts, assembled by Lee Nordness, whose gallery has hosted many craft exhibits, and Paul Smith of the Museum of Contemporary Crafts. The exhibit is sponsored by Johnson Wax Co., and now there is a book, "Objects USA," which shows many of the objects and gives biographies of their creators. The exhibit opened at the Smithsonian Museum in Washington, D.C. and will travel to museums and colleges across the country.

All the media—enamel, wood, fiber, glass, ceramics, plastic, mosaic and metal—are represented. And there is something for everyone.

By JERRY KLEIN

WASHINGTON (WNS) — When a pert, 40-year-old woman enters the outskirts of the national capital this weekend, she will be completing a trip begun in February in Massachusetts — walking all the way.

Mrs. Louise Bruyn, a Newton, Mass. housewife, stepped out of her nine-room home and said goodbye to her husband and two daughters last month. She adjusted the 14-pound knapsack on her back and put her best foot forward toward Washington, some 400 miles away. When she arrives, she hopes to see her U.S. Representative and Senators, for Mrs. Bruyn's walkathon is her own personal way of protesting the war in Vietnam.

Putting one foot after another for all those miles can develop a lot of calluses but the Massachusetts woman's walk will not come near to breaking any records. Mrs. Bruyn would have a long way to go to match the meanderings of, say, Barbara Moore.

Coast-To-Coast

This female physician took a stroll across the entire United States coast-to-coast a few years ago, partly to illustrate the energy-giving values of proper diet. Dr. Moore doted on fruits, vegetables, grass juice and fresh air, claiming that walking purified the blood and strengthens the constitution.

Walking can accomplish other good things, too. For example there was the California woman who tipped the scales at 265 the fateful day her husband said, "Honey, let's go out for a walk!"

She hit the trail from Fresno all the way to the Mexican border, where the man rediscovered the woman he'd married — she had shed 110 pounds along the way.

No doubt the champion woman walker of all time was a New Yorker, Lillian Alling, who in the 1920s set out to walk home to her native Russia and try to free her parents from a Siberian concentration camp. She walked across the United States, then up through Canada and Alaska.

Bering Strait

There Miss Alling was last seen by some Eskimos on the beach of Bering Strait separating Alaska from the Soviet Union. Whether she somehow succeeded in crossing the strait on her long-distance rescue walk, nobody knows for sure.

What may have been the longest walk of all time took place a generation ago when a teenaged Venezuelan boy left home on a four-mile jaunt. Young Julio Berrisbertia covered 20,000 miles and wore out 50 pairs of shoes as he trekked across South America, Central America, Mexico and 47 of the United States.

Neither sex nor age has been a barrier to long-distance walkers. George Howe was 92 years young when he covered 504 miles on a 60-day journey. Edward Weston was in his seventies when he did the 3,500-mile stretch from Los Angeles to New York in 77 days!

Even Mrs. Bruyn would agree that by comparison, her walk to Washington is like going to the corner for a bottle of milk.

Bad Pantyhose Leg Needn't Kill Other Leg

By AP Newsfeatures

A runner or snag in one leg of a pair of pantyhose doesn't spell doom for the total garment unit, at least not for the economy-minded woman who uses forethought in the selection of her pantyhose.

There's no reason to sacrifice a good leg for a bad leg simply because they both are attached to a single unit, according to the consumer research bureau of Lady Brevoni Pantyhose.

When a runner, snag or hole in the leg of one occurs, save the unit. Then when it happens to a second pair, get out the scissors and proceed with the operation.

The bad legs of two different pairs should be cut off from the rest of the unit just at the point where the panty portion ends and the stocking portion begins. The result is two one-legged units of pantyhose.

When a woman prepares to wear them, she simply puts one unit on, and then the other. If she winds up with two right legs, the situation is remedied simply by turning one unit inside-out.

Sorority Plans Easter Egg Hunt

An Easter egg hunt for the retarded children of Greenville was planned Thursday night when the Gamma Delta chapter of Epsilon Sigma Alpha met at the home of Mrs. Helen Sermons.

The egg hunt will be held next Thursday afternoon at Elm Street Park.

The group also planned two days of accepting donations to enable them to send at least three retarded children from this area to summer camp.

A committee to nominate a new slate of officers was selected and a program about involvement in local government was given by Mrs. Rubelle Goins. The meeting ended with the sorority's closing ritual.

Personal

Mrs. LaRue Haddock, Mrs. Connie Alcock, Mrs. Sue Farmer and Mrs. Virginia Johnson attended the International Beauty Show in New York City March 26-31.

PITT COUNTY FLORAL ASSOCIATION

On The Local Scene

by Rosalie Trotman

The month of May will indeed be a busy one for Fran DeCaro as she participates in May Court, college graduation and her wedding ceremony.

The bride-elect was a member of the May Court at Peace College, Raleigh, last year and is a member again this year. She will complete her studies at Peace on May 16 and will wed Randy Briley on May 29.

The couple will exchange their vows in the Presbyterian Church, Georgetown, S. C. They were introduced by a mutual friend, who happens to be Fran's roommate at Peace, Terry Flanagan of Greenville. The girls were on a weekend trip here.

Randy attended East Carolina University and plans to continue his education there beginning this summer. He is now working at Proctor's Ltd.

The First Presbyterian Church of Greenville will be the scene of the June 20 wedding of Linda Kay Avery and Richard Thurston.

The couple met on a blind date two years ago this month at UNC when the bride-elect was a junior and her fiance was a second year law student there.

They dated constantly the next month, but summer came and Richard went to England for the Summer to study law there and Linda went to Myrtle Beach to work. When school started back they dated regularly, but each continued to date others, each determined that they weren't ready to get serious about anyone. By Christmas they were dating only each other and constantly.

A big day in Dick's life was on Nov. 11 this year when he was officially made a member of the N.C. bar (introduced to the bar and courts of North Carolina officially). It was also on that day that he asked Linda to marry him.

In fact, the lawyer who introduced Dick to the judge and those present in the court day "jumped the gun" and introduced Linda as Dick's fiancee before he had officially asked her himself. Linda just overlooked the fact and thought the lawyer had mistakenly presumed the couple were engaged. Later on that night, Dick did make it official.

She is a junior majoring in primary education and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Pierce.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Joe S. Benfield, 2706 Barmettler St., Raleigh, a son, Chad Kirkland, on March 28, 1971. Mrs. Benfield is the former Betty Ann Hardy of Winterville.

An Old Story Repeated Again

TURIN, Italy (WNS) — Antonio Calazzo, 26, expected to become rich when he moved to the big city from the farm and promptly found an excellent factory job. Instead he went broke and lost his 22-year-old bride, Carmela. "She began dressing big-city style, and I neglected my job to keep a jealous eye on her," said Antonio. Now that Carmela has left him because of the jealous scenes, Calazzo has returned to work and is spending his salary on "please come back" ads in the newspapers.

FORCED PIANO-PLAYING

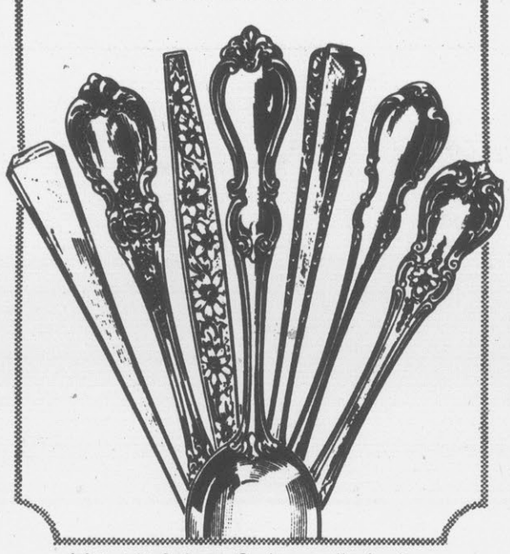

LINCOLNWOOD, Ill. (UPI) —Forcing a child to play the piano against his will is one of the surest ways to discourage his musical interest, says Constance Wagner, music education consultant.

"Be willing to compromise now and then," she says. "If your young virtuoso rebels against practicing at the usual after-school hour, for instance, propose a make-up session later in the evening or next morning before school. Give him the chance for bargaining power. He'll feel he's won the battle, but you'll have gained th long-range victory."

FAMILY GNOCCHI

A small size-recipe for one of our favorite Italian-style dishes.

2 tablespoons cornstarch
¼ teaspoon salt
2 cups milk
¼ cup butter
½ cup grated Parmesan cheese
1 large egg, beaten until thickened

In a 2-quart saucepan stir together the farina, cornstarch and salt; gradually stir in milk. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until mixture comes to a boil and boils 3 minutes. Remove from heat. Stir in the butter, Parmesan and egg, blending well after each addition. Spread evenly in buttered square cake pan (8 by 8 by 2 inches). Chill 1 hour or until firm—may be left, covered, overnight. Cut into 2-inch squares. Place squares about 1 inch apart on lightly buttered cookie sheet. Dot each square with extra butter and sprinkle with extra Parmesan. Bake in a preheated 400-degree over about 15 minutes. Makes 4 servings.

Berkeley Senior Citizens Almost Overshadowed

By MARTY THOMPSON
Associated Press Writer

BERKELEY, Calif (AP) — This city is known best for its youth culture, but in the shadow of that group is a large community at the other end of life's span—Berkeley's senior citizens.

The elderly men and women sit on bus benches or shuffle past long-haired students and "street people" on and near the University of California campus.

Outnumbered three-to-two by the young, the 20,000 people in Berkeley who are 65 and over must scratch for scarce cheap housing in competition with the young.

Once settled, the two cultures coexist on the streets and in the neighborhoods, impinging on each other mainly on economic grounds and in the reaction by some oldsters to what they view as youthful excesses.

"I picked Berkeley on account of the university in the first place, but I think I might move away now because of the university," said a retired woman whose apartment two blocks off campus has acquired as a new neighbor a nightspot with a sign offering "live rock, hard blues."

"They're loud," she says of its youthful customers. "They park in our lot. They don't care. We could call and have their cars towed, but they'd probably blow up our car or house.

"This place is getting to be too revolutionary," said the woman, who refused to give her name.

Many, like 87-year-old Charles Goldhaber, came here in retirement to live with their families. Goldhaber, an archeologist in Egypt for 40 years, has been in Berkeley the last 10 years. He frequently strolls the city's streets and plays billiards in the faculty club on campus.

"I picked Berkeley because my son is a professor here," says Goldhaber. The violence "was not very pleasant. I think the university is a wonderful university. I was wondering that such a thing could happen."

A woman, 82, walking along Shattuck Avenue just off campus, says, "I turn my eyes the other way and say a little prayer."

"We hear from the older folks after every rampage," says C.B. McCormack, assistant city manager. "They say 'do something.' We don't hear from the youngsters about the oldsters."

Most young residents seem to pay little attention to the oldsters, and not all the old folks seem to object even to disruptions which don't touch them personally.

"Some of our people attend the riots regularly," says Sally Shultz, director of a city-run activities center for senior citizens. "They feel the young people have something going, but wish they'd take a bath once in a while."

Ethan Lock, 19 a sophomore from Harrisburg, Pa., says he notices older people around campus, but "they don't seem too hostile to me or my friends. I really like the atmosphere.

"There is conflict," Lock says, "but most of the adults here are a lot cooler than at home; they've gotten used to it. I go back East with my long hair, and I get crucified."

Long-haired young people in blue jeans stroll past several boarded-up stores whose owners gave up after their windows were smashed and merchandise vanished during disorders that spread off the campus and down Telegraph Avenue in 1968.

Mixed in with the students and other youths are occasional white-haired senior citizens, their pace tuned to no particular schedule.

"I don't think there's any conflict except the ideological conflict," says Karen Uhlenbeck, 28, a mathematics lecturer at the UC. "The two groups have the same problems—housing and a limited income."

Because they compete for the same low-cost housing, senior citizens and youths often share the same neighborhoods.

"I love it, and I live in hippie territory," says an older woman who has lived in Berkeley seven years and audits classes at UC. "The atmosphere is very alive and the community is alert. There should be a closer relationship between the campus and the community."

Some of the young residents think the atmosphere is healthy.

"It gives the old people something to talk about, and they like to watch the hippies," says Mrs. Uhlenbeck. "Young people give the older generation something to talk about—the hair, the clothes—the older people think it's like going to the movies to walk down Telegraph Avenue."

Groups of old and young can be seen sitting on porches along some streets. "They watch each other," says Mrs. Uhlenbeck.

The nature of the city sharpens the conflict for housing.

Berkeley is a core city in an urban area with no room for new housing and land too costly to qualify for low income projects.

The average monthly income for an Alameda County resident on Social Security is $108. One in four people over 65 make less than $2,000 a year.

Besides the young, senior citizens must compete for affordable housing with members of minority groups that make up one-third of Berkeley's 114,000 residents.

Mrs. W. G. Wood, 76, who retired here after working for 23 years in nearby Oakland, says she, like many others, never has seen the "sometimes frightening" violent incidents, but has read about them.

"Nothing has been very close to me," she says. "We have very nice neighbors. You just live with it all."

Gossips Think Prince Charles Has Picked His Future Queen

By MARGARET SAVILLE

LONDON (UPI)—Now that the world's most eligible bachelor has become an air force cadet it is pretty sure he'll not be taking a bride for at least another three years.

But this hasn't stopped gossip that, from among the large number of eligible girls he's been dating, 22-year-old Prince Charles, heir to the British throne, already has decided on "the one."

Royal Favorites

If this is so, no one knows, or is saying, who "the one" is. But she's possibly among these young ladies, all of whom Charles has at one time or another been seen with:

Lady Leonora Grosvenor, 21, daughter of the wealthy Duke of Westminister at whose home the prince often has been a weekend guest; Bettina Lindsay, 20, daughter of the minister of state, Lord Balniel; Lady Charlotte Ponsonby, 20, half-American daughter of Earl Besborough; Sybilla Dorman, daughter of Sir Maurice Dorman, the governor of Malta.

Also: The two blonde Curzon sisters —Lady Mary, 24, and Lady Charlotte, 22, daughters of racing driver Earl Howe and both of them lovers of fast cars themselves; Lady Cecil Kerr, 20, daughter of the Marquis of Lothian; blonde Emma Soames, granddaughter of Sir Winston Churchill and daughter of Sir Christopher Soames, ambassador to Paris.

If, indeed, Prince Charles has decided on the girl he wants for his future queen, he may well have a "private understanding" with her, much as his mother and father, Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip, had for three years before they were married. Such quiet understandings are not unusual in royal circles.

Since he is taking a jet flying course at the Royal Air Force College at Cranwell till the summer, and then reporting for a three-year hitch at the Royal Naval College at Dartmouth, nothing immediate about Charles' intentions is expected.

The tall, young prince's departure has left a big gap in London's junior social life. He will not be undertaking any official or personal engagements this year. This allows for exceptions for state occasions when he will get special leave from Cranwell. The visit of Emperor Hirohito of Japan in the autumn may be one of these occasions.

Short Leaves Only

So the pretty girls the prince has been escorting during the past months won't see much of him in the future. He will get the short normal leaves allowed officer-cadets but he will be spending most of these at home with the queen and his family.

Charles will have a month's vacation between Cranwell and the time he reports to Dartmouth. Once enrolled there he will be —as he put it — "virtually a monk" —until his service ends. He will need all his time and energy for work ashore and at sea. Next year he will have to go on a overseas naval cruise which may well take him away from London for several months.

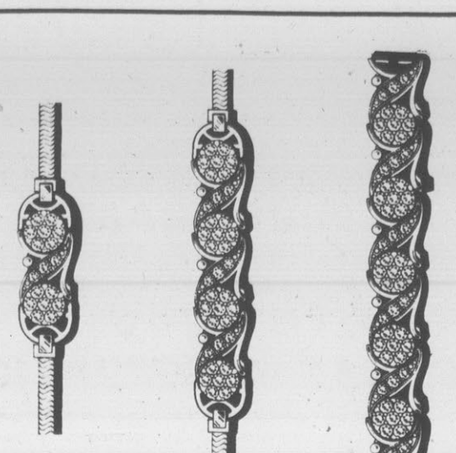

When Charles graduates at 25 he will take up full-scale royal duties. He intends then to move from Buckingham Palace into a household of his own and it is regarded as fairly certain that he then will announce who is going to share it with him.

Molasses Spills In Truck Wreck

GARDEN CITY, Kan. (AP) — Things got a little sticky when a molasses tank truck overturned about 10 miles west of Garden City on U.S. 83.

Highway patrol troopers said they were thankful that most of the molasses ran into a ditch rather than onto the highway.

The driver, Max D. Cochran, 33, suffered only minor injuries. He said he lost control of the truck when a tire blew out.

Ancient, Almost Extinct Mexican Dog Is Preserved

By J. PAUL WYATT

MEXICO CITY (UPI)—What animal suffers from acne, turns pale if it's away from the sun too long, and has such a high skin temperature that the Indians use them as hot water bottles?

Answer: The Xoloizcuintle (shoo-lo-ees-quin-tlay) dog, the oldest species in the Western Hemisphere. There are only about 100 of them registered in the whole world, 80 in Mexico. They are black, hairless and about the size of standard poodles.

Sold As Food

When Hernando Cortes entered the Aztec city of Tenochtitlan in 1519 he found Xoloizcuintles and turkeys in cages in the marketplaces being sold as food.

Through the centuries the dog began to disappear. They were killed at young age, usually about six months. Those that survived were employed as vicious and alert watchdogs.

During World War I the skin of the Xoloizcuintle was used in the making of gloves. Only 50 years ago the species was almost extinct.

In January of 1955 a group of dog fanciers, including Mrs. Lascelle de Premio Real, of the Mexico City Kennel Club, made a trip to the Balsas River area in western Guerrero State.

In one of the villages along the way, Mrs. Premio Real found some Xoloizcuintles. She bought a male and a female, brought them back to Mexico City and has been breeding them ever since.

"They are as intelligent as poodles, guard the house like German shepherds and play with the children like fox terriers," she said in an interview.

Since the dogs' skin is very delicate and prone to pimples, Mrs. Premio Real bathes the four she now has in a special bathtub and rubs them down with cold cream daily.

"I feed the dogs raw oatmeal, meat and milk, but they will eat anything," she said.

Fine Watchdogs

That might also include people, if the dogs are sufficiently provoked.

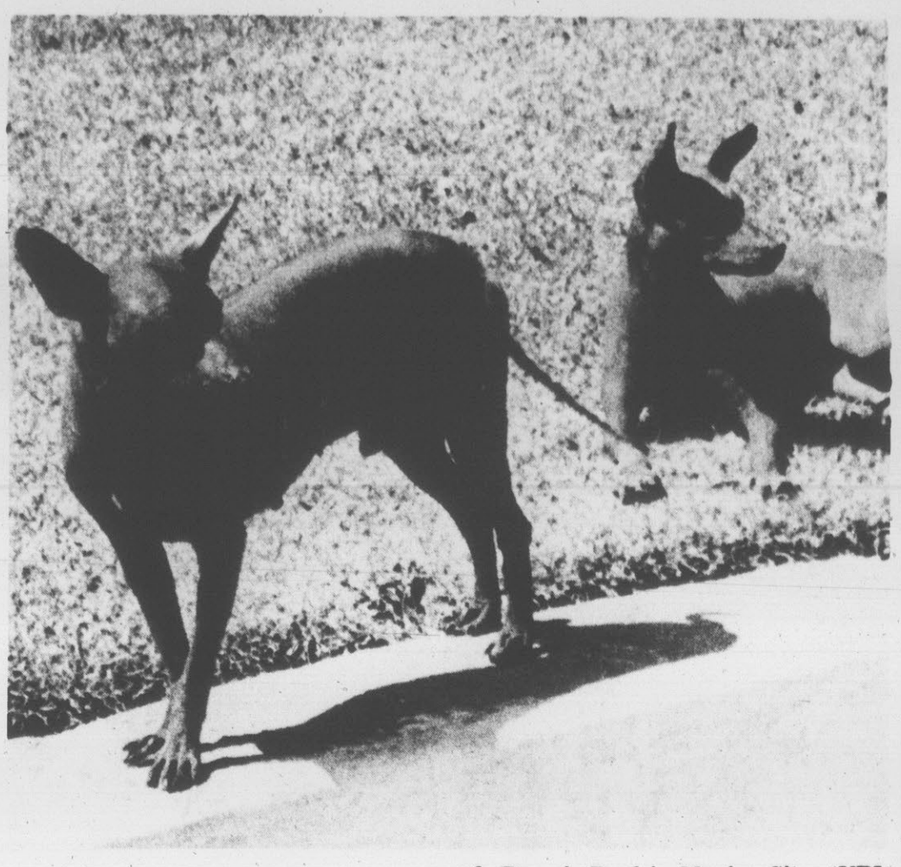

"No one can touch the wall around this house without one of them racing over and making a great racket," Mrs. Premio Real said.

Indians in remote villages suffering from rheumatism still tuck the dogs under the bedcovers at night against a sore muscle or joint. The dogs' skin is about three degrees warmer than any other dogs'.

In 1967, one of Mrs. Premio Real's dogs, "Quetzalcaotl," won the top prize at the International Dog Show in Paris. But the Black hotweather animal missed Mexico's sun and began to turn grey.

"We had to buy a sun lamp so that he wouldn't lose his color," she recalled.

She said that seven generations of the Xoloizcuintle have been registered in Mexico. There are also Xoloizcuintles in the United States, France, Argentina, Peru and Cuba.

Some Americans Turn To Other Sources When They Tire Of Tap Wayer

By WILLIAM CLAYTON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Americans who are tired of their tap water or think its sources are getting polluted can try something else.

Something from West Virginia, perhaps, with a bit of sulphur to the taste. Or a pleasant little draught from Shenandoah, a bit hard around the edges. Perhaps a European water, with some natural bubble and a slight tinge of salt or one of our West Coast waters, with its regional stamp. A deep-well water, with its tendency not to vary.

Bottled water has become a business for hundreds of U.S. concerns. Even through slow business years such as this, the men who pipel bottle, distribute or sell bottled water say they mostly are doing all right.

Dentists buy it for patients to rinse with. Offices for the office cooler. Pizza parlors, for the equipment —no harmful mineral deposits. And high-class bars, for a "bourbon and branch water" free of the pedestrian taste of the tap. Many people have it delivered to their homes. Some just like the taste. Doctors prescribe it.

The Commerce Department says bottled water is not yet a huge business, by corporate standards, but it seems to be growing. A spokesman in the "Beverages" section of Commerce, Ed Herbert, explains:

"We have little information on it —the volume is so small it is in a 'basket category,' that is, lumped together with other things. But we have been getting a number of phone calls on it."

One distributor with a high-class clientele is James Beard of Hyattsville, Md., a suburb of Washington. He says he counts the Senate and House among his customers.

GOOD WATER SCARCE

"More and more people are becoming aware that quality water is hard to come by," Beard said. "They drink bottled water for its good taste, or for health, or because they fear pollution."

Gloria Swanson orders some when she comes to town, he said. President Nixon has been known to take bottled water on trips.

Beard deals in a water from Arkansas and some "European waters," including a couple with their own natural carbonation.

Beard tells of the differences in water in phrases that make him sould like a vintner discussing burgundies or sauternes. There are waters with "no aftertaste," he says, and waters "with their own carbonation."

Bottled water either may be tapwater put through a purifying process or distilled water. It also can be mineral water — from surface springs, from shallow springs, or from deep springs.

MARYLAND WATER BOOM

"It has uniform good taste. Shallow spring water can be too changeable. It could be delicious, then undrinkable. Surface springs may be subject to pollution."

But James Kennedy, a distributor in suburban Virginia, said: "We are just holding on. It is very expensive to ship and deliver" and freight costs are high.

Keneedy's natural foods store handles about 200 gallons of bottled water a week.

In Maryland, there was a water sales boom for a while. Irving Miller of Montgomery Ice Co., where bottled water is a sideline, said the tapwater in his area acquired a bad taste for a few days and "people drove us crazy" with calls for bottled water. When the bad taste in local water subsided, so did his sales, although he kept some of his new customers.

GROWING SPORT

NEW YORK (AP) — Snowmobiling is one of the fastest growing winter sports in the country. Sales have increased 2500 per cent in the last eight years, according to Massey-Ferguson, Inc.

How to Survive When Life Deals Its Toughest Blows

Why Some People Have Accidents And Some Don't

Ask Them Yourself

FOR CLIFFORD HARDIN, Secretary of Agriculture

How can you permit the latest 30-percent fat content in hot dogs when doctors warn against animal fat to prevent heart attacks, hardening of arteries, etc. in adults, not to mention adding to teen-age acne?—Mrs. G. Hooker Young, Wellsboro, Pa.

● Effective in October of 1969 (against substantial opposition), the Consumer and Marketing Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture finally succeeded in putting a top limit on the fat content of hot dogs. The 30-percent limit is below the previous industry average. It also made many people aware of the fat content of hot dogs for the first time. Dietary needs differ. Hot dogs are a nutritious food for many people. Those for whom dietary fat is a problem should follow their doctor's advice.

FOR JOHN KENNETH GALBRAITH, economist

● Yes, in 1941, when I was Deputy Administrator of the Office of Price Administration, Mr. Nixon was employed by that department. So was Mrs. Nixon.

FOR ELIZABETH POST, etiquette expert

Recently I remarried, and I was wearing an engagement ring. The minister asked me, after the wedding ring was on, to wear it the way it was. That made the engagement ring closest to me. I would like to know what is the proper way to wear wedding rings? Most people change them after the wedding.—Mrs. Geraldine Jones, Gulfport, Miss.

● The wedding ring goes on the finger first and the engagement ring on the outside.

FOR BENNETT CERF, publisher

As a collector of puns, which is your favorite? —D. Deutsch, Jamaica, N.Y.

● My current favorite is: an eccentric old gentleman left everything he had to his favorite grandson. Unfortunately, all that he had was 347 clocks of every variety and description. Now the poor grandson has to spend his entire time winding up the estate!

FOR WARREN ORLICK, president of Professional Golfers Association

Has any pro golfer played in all PGA Tournaments sponsored in any one year? —Bill Hill, Langdon, N.D.

● Assuming you mean in recent years, no, because there are more than 40 tournaments scheduled each year. It becomes physically, mentally, and emotionally impossible for one player to compete in every scheduled event. Occasionally, two tournaments are held concurrently, and this adds to the impossibility of playing all tournaments.

FOR HOWARD PYLE, President, National Safety Council

A friend recently had a car crash when the vacuum created by a passing trailer truck threw his camping trailer out of control. Are such accidents common, and what can a motorist do when he sees a heavy vehicle about to pass him in such a spot?—Margaret E. Fish, Manchester, Conn.

● The National Safety Council in its 64-page "Travel Safety Guide and Road Atlas" states in its chapter, "The Tricks of Trailer Towing," what to do when a truck passes: "Being Passed—Air turbulence from a large truck or bus will push your trailer to the right. But the gust will move along the trailer immediately and tend to correct the sway. So don't brake."

FOR SEN. MARGARET CHASE SMITH, Maine

Is it true that you draw retirement pay from the Air Force?—Leo L. Smith, Chicago, Ill.

● I am a retired Air Force Reservist, but I do not draw any retirement pay for this status, never have, and never will.

FOR JOE KLAAS, author of "Amelia Earheart Lives"

To whom was Amelia Earheart married? Is he still living and what is he doing now?—Michael Barna, San Luis Obispo, Calif.

● Amelia Earhart was married to Publisher George Palmer Putnam when she disappeared on her round-the-world flight on July 2, 1937. Putnam inherited her considerable property after Superior Court at Los Angeles declared her legally dead on New Year's Day, 1939. Amelia Earhart was his second wife. Putnam remarried two more times before he died in January, 1950, in Trona, Calif. He was 63. Before he died, he was ghost writer of a movie, "Flight to Freedom," which portrayed his aviatrix wife having flown an espionage flight for the United States.

FOR GOV. WILLIAM A. EGAN, Alaska

Of all of Alaska's big game, which is the most sought after by hunters?—Viola Jaeb, Humbodlt, Saskatchewan, Canada

● The most sought after is the Dall or white sheep. It furnishes a beautiful trophy and provides a challenge to the hunter, who has to ascend mountains to hunt them.

FOR JIMMY DURANTE

Why did you, at age 78, go back to work after a three-month recuperation from a collapse attributed to exhaustion?—Mrs. John Cole, Detroit, Mich.

● What am I going to do if I don't work? Stay at home? I've been to Niagara Falls. I've been to Paris. So what is there left for me to see? I'm just happy I'm able to work. The people will tell me when to quit.

FOR DR. DONALD DUKELOW, Assistant Director, American Medical Association

What is hysterical blindness? — Rudolph More, Gary, Ind.

● Hysteria is an emotional factor in which certain nerves develop functional inadequacies in the absence of any indication of physical pathology. Often these are associated with emotional problems, even occasionally some forms of psychosis. The most common varieties have to do with paralysis of some of the motor or sensory nerves. In the same way, a hysterical blindness would be the inability to see in the presence of what appears to be a perfectly normal eye and nerve track in a person who is highly susceptible to suggestions or who, for some reason or other, is "benefited" by the inability to see.

FOR ELIZABETH MONTGOMERY, actress

Both my husband and I come from Salem, Mass. Although we left there many years ago, we were surprised that we don't recognise the Salem of our youth in the recent "Bewitched" episodes that were said to have been shot in Salem. Were they authentic shots of Salem?—Mary B. Galley, Maybrook, N.Y.

● The episodes that were listed as being shot in Salem, Mass., were indeed shot there. It probably has changed a good deal in the last decade.

FOR MELVIN LAIRD, Secretary of Defense

Are the servicemen in Vietnam the only ones allowed to have "R&R" (rest and recuperation), or can other men overseas be allowed this privilege? —Lois Rudisill, Boyce, La.

● The current Rest and Recuperation Program is applicable only to the personnel involved in Vietnam. No other overseas area today offers this privilege. Criteria utilized to ascertain eligibility for R&R privileges include exposure to a combat environment on a daily or recurring basis. For example, during the Korean conflict, we had an R&R program for our military personnel serving in that country.

How to Roll with the Punch

"A hazardous event can be conceived of as a threat, a loss or a challenge. But viewed as a challenge, it is more likely to be met with a mobilization of energy"

By T. K. Irwin

Nixon, Percy and Kennedy: all three successfully rebounded from personal losses.

Why can certain people take a disastrous experience in stride while others flounder, panic or fall apart?

At one time or another we are all faced with an unexpected crisis. The family breadwinner loses his job. A lovelorn young woman is jilted. A mother is told her child has an incurable disease. An able-bodied man is suddenly crippled. How can we best cope with a situation in which the props seem knocked out from under us?

I recall, some years ago, interviewing Sen. Edward M. Kennedy for a FAMILY WEEKLY article. After escaping death from a complex spinal fracture in a plane crash, he was strapped face down into an orthopedic frame at a hospital. There was a chance he would spend the rest of his life in a wheel chair. What sustained the Senator so that he could make a comeback?

"My brother Jack," he told me, "once wrote that 'each man must look into his soul.' I've seen a lot of people with more problems than I have, and I've learned to accept adversity as part of life. What helps me bear up is my family, friends and my spiritual faith. Joan and the children are like medicine for me."

Instinctively, people have their own, different devices to hold on until they can adjust. In my own experience, after the sudden death of my wife from a heart attack, I plunged into work, day and night. My son, then 17, tells me that whenever he felt low, he listened to country music or shot baskets in our back yard—instinctively turning to whatever he enjoyed. My son's girl friend, when faced with misfortune, loses herself in reading, becoming involved with fictional characters.

On the other hand, we all know individuals who succumb and turn their faces to the wall, unable to get their nerve back and snap out of a sense of doom. To learn why, let's look at our defense mechanisms. What happens to us when hard luck strikes?

A young mother is told she has given birth to a deformed baby or that her youngster has leukemia. After the stunning initial shock and confusion, she starts going from one doctor to another, hoping the verdict is false.

"At the moment of truth," says Dr. Louis Linn, a psychiatrist who deals with many cases of disability, "the pattern of coping depends on her personality structure. If she is emotionally mature, with a basic commitment to life, she often transcends the setback. This is the ideal. But many people are incapable of achieving a reaffirmation of life. They avoid reality."

A common reaction, whether it's to a disability, rejection by a loved one or another traumatic event, is retreat into oneself, sometimes into headaches, an ulcer or imaginary ailment. Some people respond by becoming angry and staging tantrums. Others, giving way to prolonged upset, expect friends to rescue them. Generally, there is loss of self-esteem; self-pity may set in.

Guilt feelings are not uncommon, as in a death in the family. The bereaved searches for evidence of failure to have done right by the lost one and accuses himself of negligence. Or feelings of hostility erupt, perhaps against a surgeon. With a divorce or job loss, hostility may be vented on others.

In contrast, reaction to adversity can be optimistic. Rolling with the punch, you hope for a cure or summon your resources to find a new mate or new career. A classic example was Franklin D. Roosevelt, who, after he was stricken with polio, made it the turning point of his life with his upwardly directed commitment to politics.

Other examples from politics include Richard Nixon and Sen. Charles Percy of Illinois. Nixon lost the Presidency in 1960 by relatively few votes, then suffered humiliating defeat in his race for Governor of California. As the world knows, he made a miraculous comeback and gained the White House. Percy received a devastating shock when his daughter was mysteriously murdered during his election campaign. He, too, bounced back. These men had something: they really knew their strength when they were tested.

Much, of course, depends on various factors. The young are more apt to snap out of a misfortune; the old are less flexible. Response is also affected by the severity and suddenness of the blow, whether you are hit where you are most vulnerable. To a violinist, for example, it makes a vast difference whether a leg or an arm is crippled.

"Your idea of the loss is the key," points out psychologist Alice Loomis, who is confined to a wheel chair. "Assess what you think you've lost. Determine if the setback is just a disappointment and not a loss of self-worth. How you meet it depends on how much you had at stake and your expectations in life."

In response to catastrophe, many people experience a sudden awakening of religious faith.

"Faith is the ultimate support, providing hope," says the Rev. Donald E. Smith, director of the American Foundation of Religion and Psychiatry. "Faith means to walk gaily into the darkness—and you need faith in yourself, in people and in God. Prayer helps put events in perspective, to give them meaning. It helps rebuild walls, maintain fences and strengthen the undergirding. And faith teaches us that this loss, whatever it may be, is not the final tragedy, does not diminish you as as a person."

Everyone, even the irreligious, has some kind of faith. It may be faith in a person, in astrology, even in an Oriental philosophy. In the darkest hours, the sense of being part of a Grand Scheme can make one's own trouble seem relatively insignificant.

A philosophical attitude can also prove reassuring. Like the ancient Romans, we can be stoical, taking a catastrophe with the courage of resignation. An editor I know, who has had multiple hard knocks recently, quotes Ralph Waldo Emerson, "Finish each day and be done with it. You have done what you could. . . . Tomorrow is a new day; begin it well and serenely."

Family and friends can be helpful not only for comforting but to provide motivation to try for a comeback. If someone close to you has undergone a loss, let it be known that you care. Be available. Try not to be overly sympathetic, but respect his disappointment or grief. Let him "cry," allowing him a chance to digest the loss and to get over it. "Give him time," advises Doctor Linn, "to pick up the pieces that still work and put them together again." Try to support his faith and courage, his ability to deal with his feelings.

As an example: when a man loses his job and his self-esteem has plummeted, his wife should avoid reproaching him or showing her worry too openly—which only further damages his morale. "Caring for a jobless man," says psychologist Mortimer R. Feinberg, "requires discipline and fortitude. He may need subtle flattery and quiet amusement. The wife should stay cool, discuss their problems unemotionally. Her whole being should be concentrated on giving—giving warmth, encouragement and ego reinforcement."

What most people don't realize is that an upsetting experience can have a positive outcome, enabling the stricken to mature. "A hazardous event is a call to new action," observes social scientist, Lydia Rapoport. "It can be conceived of as a threat, a loss or a challenge. Viewed as a challenge, it is more likely to be met with a mobilization of energy and purposeful action."

John F. Kennedy, as his "Profiles in Courage" revealed, grew as a human being during and after his long hospital siege for a back disability. Often adversity draws couples closer together. Many a widow, once passively dependent, grows to assume the added role of father with her children.

The key is the dual quality of crisis. When the Chinese write "crisis," they do it in two characters: one meaning "danger," the other "opportunity." The opportunity is to build new foundations. Studies at Harvard show that people who handle a crisis well are prone to strengthen their potentialities for a rewarding life. Thus it is possible to "profit" from misfortune.

Suffering and tragedy seem to have contributed to the greatness of such men as Abraham Lincoln. It was Lincoln who gave us this enduring precept: "When you come to the end of your rope, tie a knot in it and hang on." ◆

Keys to Coping

To deal constructively with adversity, the following steps are suggested by the Rev. Donald E. Smith, director of the American Foundation of Religion and Psychiatry:

● Face up to it. Get your deepest and darkest feelings out in the open. The biggest block to the healing process is an inability to confront gut-feelings honestly.

● Take the measure of the crisis realistically so that you know what you have to deal with. If a teen-ager is found to be on drugs, parents can try to talk to him about his real feelings. If a young woman's fiancé has left her, she should ask herself whether she is suffering from a loss of love or a loss of pride? Was he, after all, a bad choice as a partner?

● Focus your strength on solving the problem. Consider my friend, Bill M., an engineer. At 37, with a wife, three children and a mortgage, he recently was thrown out of work. At first he felt shattered, seeing himself as a loser. Knowing that millions of others are in the same fix was no comfort. After the shock wore off and he had a chance to size up his plight, Bill realized he had to get hold of himself. He concentrated all his energy on regaining his self-confidence. He composed a résumé of his experience and determinedly went after a new job. In this way, he assured himself of success.

● Finally, recognize that you may need professional help, an objective outsider. The deeply disturbed and depressed may have to see a clinical psychologist or psychiatrist. In the case of an agonizing separation or divorce, a marriage counselor or lawyer can provide the needed guidance.

Inherent in these four rules are other elements of the coping process.

● Generally, the more resources you have to draw upon at the time of the blow, the better you can contend with it. Dr. Louis Linn puts it this way, "The better you've done your homework as a human being—developed concern for others and the world about you, established a stable family life and kept open the channels for love and excitement—the more likely you are to meet the inevitable crises effectively."

● During and after the first reaction of self-pity, it is hard to think of the world outside yourself. When baseball star Roy Campanella became a paraplegic after a crushing auto accident, he was profoundly depressed, his career wrecked. Every effort to cheer him failed. One day, someone mentioned ham radio. It ignited the spark he needed. He bought equipment and began talking to people all over the globe. Thereafter his mental outlook improved remarkably. "Campy" had ceased to turn inward.

● You can't commit yourself to the next chapter until you have cleared away the previous unpleasant one. In many families, when the loss of a child is finally accepted, another child is adopted or the couple has another baby. "This," comments Doctor Linn, "is an affirmation of life."

● Ventilation, through anger, can be healthy, but it may also alienate good friends unless they understand it is your way of responding to adversity.

● Everyone has his own timing. Grieving over a death, you can go off alone "in your wilderness," turning your face to the wall. For some it takes a year to complete the work of mourning. But the loss should be kept within realistic boundaries. ◆

"Meet the Orioles," Says an Oriole Executive— "Meet Boog Powell"

By Phil Jackman

Who knows Boog Powell? On a world championship team called the Baltimore Orioles, the two hitters you keep hearing about are named Robinson. One is named Brooks and the other is named Frank, and they are both good, mighty good reasons why, on the eve of this new season, Baltimore is generally acknowledged to be the best team in baseball.

But who knows a guy named Boog? Enemy pitchers, that's who. And Ted Williams, manager of the Washington Senators and one of the greatest hitters in baseball history, knows Boog Powell. Says Williams: "Boog Powell is the guts of the Baltimore attack . . . as productive a batter as there is in the American league." Denny McLain calls Powell "one of the three best hitters in the league, along with Carl Yastrzemski and Frank Robinson."

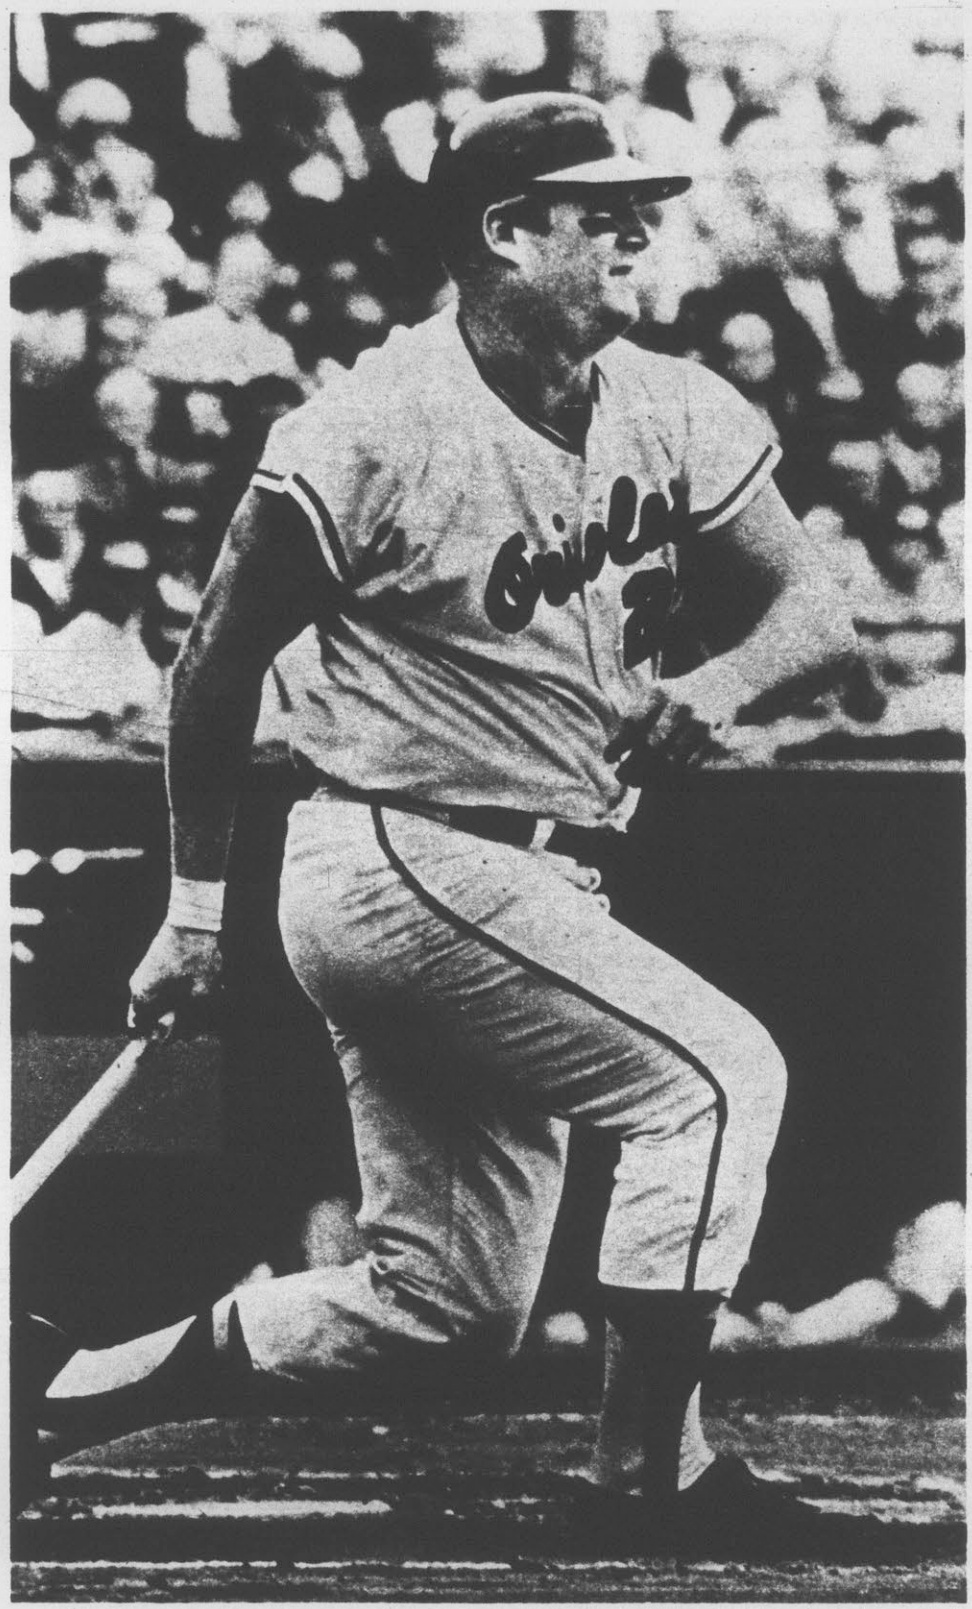

The people who put together the American League record books know Boog Powell, too. In the last five years, Boog Powell has averaged 35 homers and 115 runs batted-in, and has batted .300. During this period, he has helped lead the Orioles to three pennants and two World Series Championships.

But what else do we know about John "Boog" Powell other than the fact that he's very large, plays first base for baseball's defending champions and from his work last summer was named the most valuable player in his league?

"What else is there to know?" Powell asks back when the question is put to him. "I'd be better known if I got more publicity, naturally, but I'm not the outgoing type. "Besides, I'm on a team with great individual players like Frank and Brooks and all those 20-game winners" (Dave McNally, Jim Palmer and Mike Cueller). "I'm just not controversial, that's all."

When the people who watch Powell play every day start assessing his worth, he doesn't come up short. His manager, Earl Weaver, who isn't the type to put a yardstick alongside his stable of stars, doesn't mince words when it comes to discussing his cleanup hitter. Says Weaver, "When Boog's hot, we're a great team; otherwise, just good."

No wonder when Baltimore beat down the Cincinnati Reds last fall and made off with the world championship in five games, Harry Dalton, club vice president in charge of player personnel, went around introducing his first baseman as "the Orioles ball club."

What stories come to the Baltimore fans minds when the name Boog Powell is mentioned?

Well, first there's the one about his love for good food, especially strawberry shortcake, and his tendency to put on weight almost while you're watching.

"It used to bother me a little bit," he says now, talking about the days when his weight was a bigger conversation piece in Baltimore than the school budget. "But if you notice, there haven't been any shortcake stories the last few years. It's like I've been telling people right along, I've always been big."

Then there's the tale about how he lost a boodle of bonus money while playing in an amateur tournament the summer he graduated from high school. While the scouts were going around talking in the $50,000-to-$60,000 range, Boog slumped and tapped out one infield hit in 17 trips to the plate. "They were giving $100,000 here and $100,000 there in those days, says Boog. I wanted my $100,000, too. As it turned out, I was happy to get $25."

But there aren't as many Powell stories floating around Baltimore as one would think. For like the swallows that return to Capistrano, Boog makes a bee-line back to his south Florida home as soon as the season ends. "Basically, I'm a stay-at-home type," he admits. "Next to my family (wife Jan, son J. W. and daughter Jennifer), comes fishing, baseball and music. That's all."

Right now, happiness in the off-season is a nice home, a boat, fishing and about three week's worth of banquets. "This was my busiest winter traveling around," Boog says. "I missed being home; but being named the player of the year in Columbus, slugger of the year in Houston and outstanding Oriole and Oriole MV at two Baltimore dinners was worth it."

Although Powell won't be 30 until mid-August and he figures to have several more productive years, he's already thinking about retirement.

"I don't know what I'm going to do," he admits. "I get scared looking at other athletes and how they've been stung in business. What do I know about restaurants? But I'd love it if I could set up a fishing camp down in Florida."

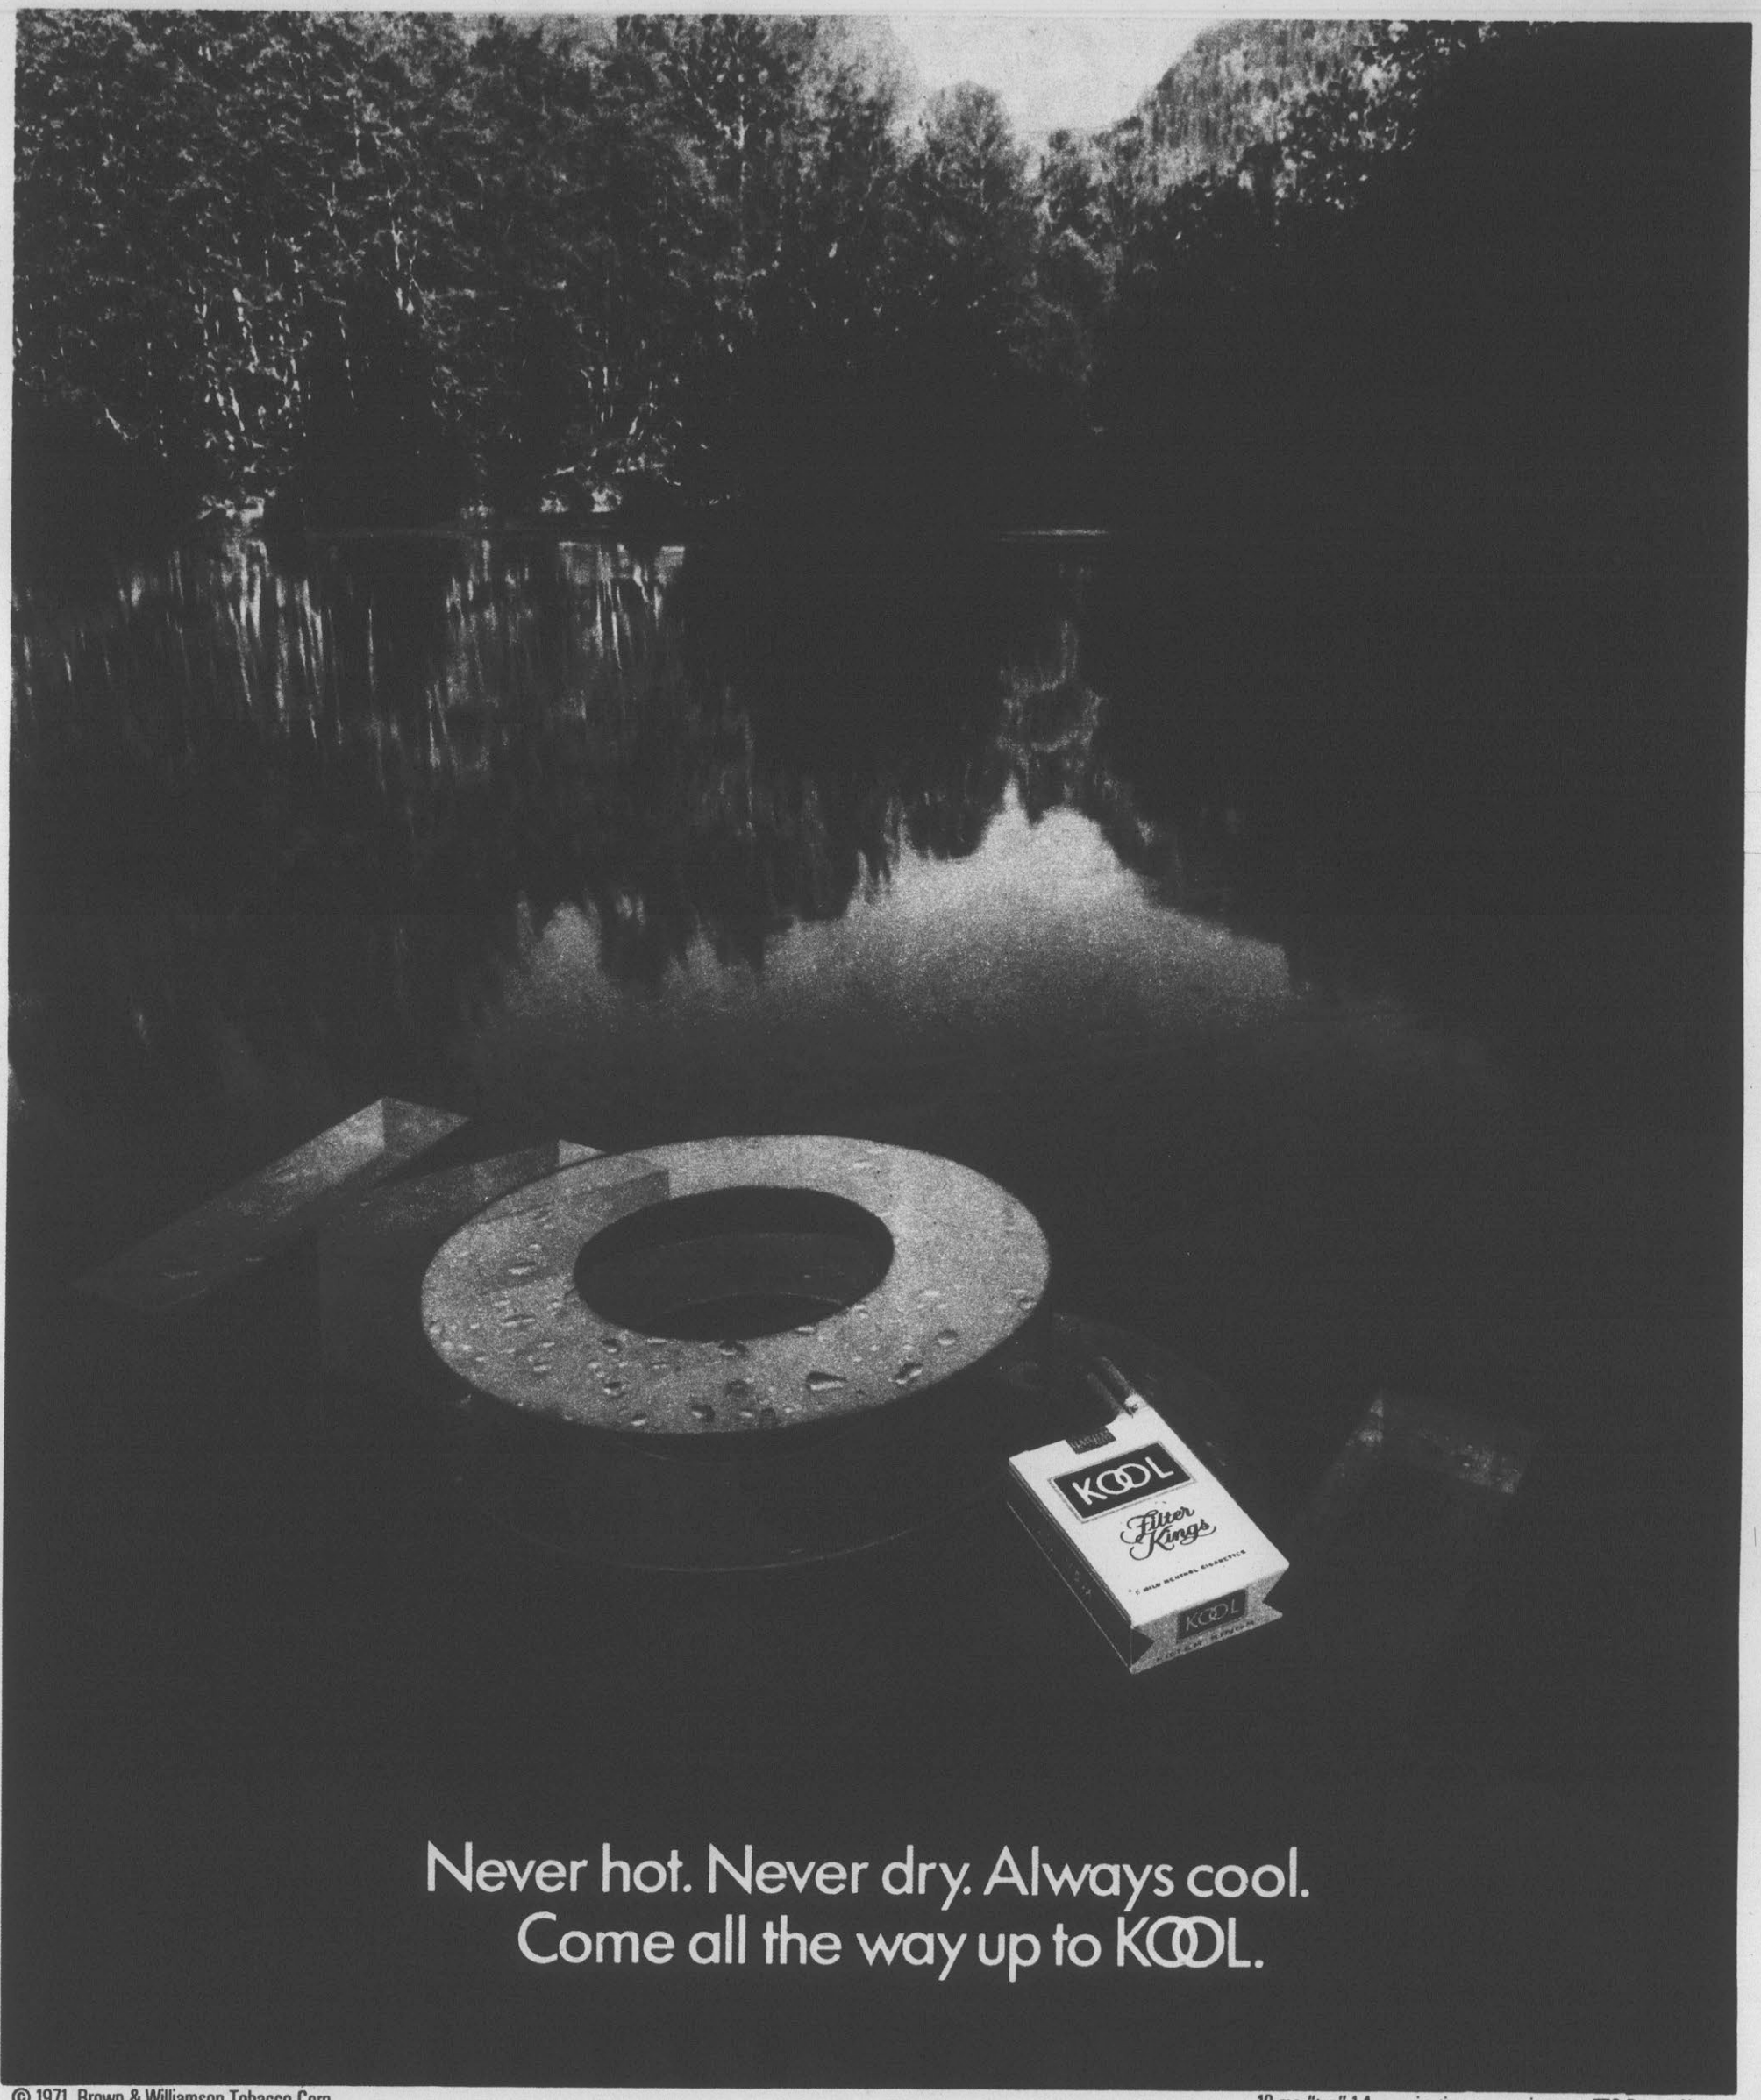

Boog lost his father immediately after the 1969 World Series, and therein lies a pair of stories on how the man performs under extreme mental anguish.

Just before the series against the Mets, Powell's dad was rushed to the hospital. He died there a short-time later. Unlike the rest of the Orioles (who lost in five games to New York), and in spite of his worrying, he had a good Series.

Last fall, the day before the league playoff was to open in Minnesota, Powell's three-year-old daughter was rushed to the hospital after having a stick jammed in her eye. "She blinked," Boog said, "and it saved her eye. As it was, the stick went through her eyelid and they had to take seven stitches."

With this in mind, he went 11-for-30 with three home runs and 11 runs-batted-in during the eight games of the playoff and Series.

Just about the time you get to thinking no one knows Boog, it dawns on you: baseball, fishing, music . . . red hair, freckles . . . uncomplicated, sensible, no hangups. Fact is, everybody knows Boog Powell. He's just about as well known as the proverbial boy-next-door. ◆

QUIZ/By John E. Gibson

What Makes An Accident Happen?

Accidents don't happen by themselves. Certain volatile ingredients are necessary. Often the key factor that triggers an accident is your own personality—as this true-or-false quiz will illustrate.

True or False: In an automobile accident, you're less likely to be hurt if you're young, tall and slender.
(See number 5)

1. Many accidents, resulting from fights, arguments and all kinds of assorted mishaps, are caused simply by the weather.

2. Regardless of his mood, a good driver is always a good driver and not likely to have an accident.

3. If you're an introvert, you're more likely to be involved in accidents than if you are an extrovert.

4. People who aren't feeling well physically have fewer accidents because they drive more slowly and are more cautious.

5. In an automobile accident, you're less likely to be hurt if you're young, tall and slender.

6. The peak danger period for accidents from electrical shock due to faulty extension cords or defective appliances sockets is in the winter, when more current is surging through the wires.

7. Many people go around encouraging accidents to happen.

ANSWERS

1. True. Studies on the influence of weather on human behavior show, for example, that "a sudden rise in temperature within a low-pressure area increases accidents and acts of violence in that it stimulates aggressive actions in people who would be incapable of them in favorable weather."

2. False. A psychiatric study, conducted at the University of Michigan Medical Center, of 96 drivers causing fatal accidents showed that in a substantial percentage of cases "the fatality drivers had acutely disturbing experiences, usually quarrels, within six hours of causing a fatal accident." This finding is fraught with chilling significance. But, as the psychiatrists who directed the investigation observe, "How is one to prevent a man who has just had a disturbing quarrel with his wife from driving off in a high dudgeon?"

3. False. Consensus of studies shows that extroverts are much more prone to various types of accidents than introverts. The extrovert is more apt to act on impulse without much thought about the consequences. The introvert is more conservative—he thinks before he acts.

4. False. Studies conducted jointly by the Veterans Administration and the University of California show that high accident involvement tends to go hand in hand with people who have physical disorders.

5. True. A five-year statistical study of injuries sustained in auto accidents, conducted at the University of California, showed that older people suffer more severe physical damage in accidents because their bones are more brittle. Drivers of shorter stature are likely to get severe head and facial injuries caused by their faces smashing into the steering wheel. Taller individuals, the study showed, tend to escape critical facial damage from the steering wheel since their heads usually clear it. And a person's weight was often found to be a matter of life and death in collision injuries because of the greater force with which a heavier person smashes against the car's interior.

6. False. A study of fatalities due to electric shock, conducted by a leading life-insurance company, shows that your chances of sustaining a lethal shock are much greater during the two hottest months (July and August) than at any other time in the year. One reason: during warm summer days "body resistance is often lowered by perspiration." Also moisture acts as a conductor, thus further heightening the danger.

7. True. Some people aren't happy unless they take chances. So they'll take risks while driving or cross intersections against traffic while walking. As one study shows, "the accident-prone driver (or pedestrian) voluntarily motivates himself to accept whatever chance will bring." He doesn't learn by close calls but rather seems to derive stimulation and enjoyment from them. ◆

I was a sneaky eater, before I lost 124 pounds.

By Jennie Marini—as told to Ruth L. McCarthy

At 240 pounds, you can see that I was far from being a beach beauty. No wonder that I put on those dark glasses and a hat.

THINK I'm talking about sneaking a few potato chips or a hunk of cake? Uh-uh. I'm talking about opening my mouth and stuffing it Italian-style. Lasagna, spaghetti, pepper and eggs, half a loaf of bread. When my family's back was turned, I was what you'd call a "disposal plant." Nothing could go to waste (unless you spell it w-a-i-s-t). So I wound up 240 pounds.

Now, don't misunderstand. I was never really a featherweight. My husband took himself a 175-pound bride. But being young then, I didn't look as fat as you would think. Anyway, Italian men like good, solid women, especially when they can cook. And what I couldn't make, my mother could. She lived with us.

Actually, I think you have to be raised with European parents to know how important the kitchen is to family life. I'll tell you, if there wasn't something delicious-smelling coming from my stove, it was unusual. Besides, I had two kids with good appetites. And with no place much to go except to and from the refrigerator, it's no wonder that I began to fill out my house dress more and more.

Sure, I tried to reduce, even though my husband never mentioned my weight. But the minute I would cut down a little, my mother would start saying: "What? Are you sick? Eat!" She thought that diets could mean the end of you. So instead of arguing, I'd eat. That's how the years rolled on. And the fat.

Eventually, my son and daughter married. And I got a job near where I live, in Raritan, New Jersey. I was out of the kitchen, at last, but unfortunately not far from food. I became an aide at Somerset Hospital and as much as I kept saying that I was going to reduce, I was always sneaking snacks. It never mattered that I ate enough at home. Come time for the free meal at the hospital, and Jennie loaded her plate.

Then one day the women I work with started talking about those reducing-plan candies, Ayds®. "You believe in them, Marini?" they asked. And I said: "No." But still I kept seeing the pictures of the slim women in the magazines and I kept wondering. So finally I went to the drugstore and bought a box of the chocolate fudge Ayds, though I could have had any one of the other flavors.

Right away the family started: "What kind of medicine is that?" But that much I had checked into. It wasn't medicine. I read everything in the direction folder and learned Ayds contains vitamins and minerals, but no drugs. So I began with the Ayds Plan, to see if it really works. And you know, I got to tell you, it works.

First of all, I cut out sneaking food. Instead, I took a couple of Ayds for snacks. They're only 26 calories each. Before meals, I took one or two with a hot drink, tea for me, and those Ayds really helped me eat less. Honest. It was sort of like starting off with dessert. Right away I was satisfied. Of course, I ate meat and greens, too. And I'm telling you, that Ayds Plan works.

When the weight started coming off, everybody in the hospital was talking about it. Even one of the doctors said: "Are you that fat lady that used to sit and rock on her porch?" For me, who now weighs 116 pounds, it was the best compliment of all.

My husband, he had to go and make a joke of it. Now that I am so slim he keeps saying to me: "I'm sleeping with a Sam!" But I notice that he gets very jealous if anybody looks my way. Real Italian-style, thanks to Ayds.

Here I am, at 116 pounds, showing off my new figure. And to think, I was one of those people who never believed it could be done.

Some Hopeful New Experiments In Teaching Kids

By Charles and Bonnie Remsberg

Educators in small towns and large across the country this year are turning to an increasing number of unusual techniques in a mounting drive to make learning exciting, to make schoolwork relevant and to stem the tide of dropping out that threatens America's school-age population.

The full list of educational experiments underway is a long one, ranging from the use of computers to supplemental teachers in Mississippi to the decision in Gary, Ind., to turn over the entire operation of the public schools to a private company in hopes that the techniques of private enterprise can boost achievement scores. Whatever the innovation, the experimenters say they are racing with time.

Explains John Bremer, director of a project taking place in Philadelphia (see below), "The public-school system is like the brontosaurus. That old dinosaur was a magnificent creature, but it couldn't cope with changes, so it died out. In our fast-changing world, we desperately need more experimentation if we are to find the new approaches that will save education."

Here are just a few of the experiments now underway:

Classes on Location. Some 500 high-school students in Philadelphia's Parkway program are going to "school" without a school. Instead of reporting to a given classroom building, these pupils travel throughout the city to classes held in places appropriate to the subjects they are taking.

An auto-mechanics course, for example, is taught at a car-repair shop; a journalism class is held at a newspaper office. A student interested in urban economics may spend a term observing the day-to-day struggles of the deputy director of the city budget. In all, some 250 "on-location" courses are offered. The institutions which volunteer their facilities also frequently provide staff members to serve as teachers, and the youngsters themselves help plan the curriculum.

"In traditional classrooms," explains John Bremer, "Students often are taught skills relating to a society that vanished 40 years ago. By using all the facilities of the city as their campus, our students learn about life as it is really lived."

Impartial observers say the system seems to be working quite well. The youngsters learn more, mature faster and present far fewer disciplinary problems. Also, costs are cut drastically. By eliminating the need for a traditional school building to serve 500 students, the city saves about $1,000,000 in building costs alone.

Already Philadelphia's success has sparked similar programs in Chicago, Boston, Washington and Pasadena. Many other cities are examining the program.

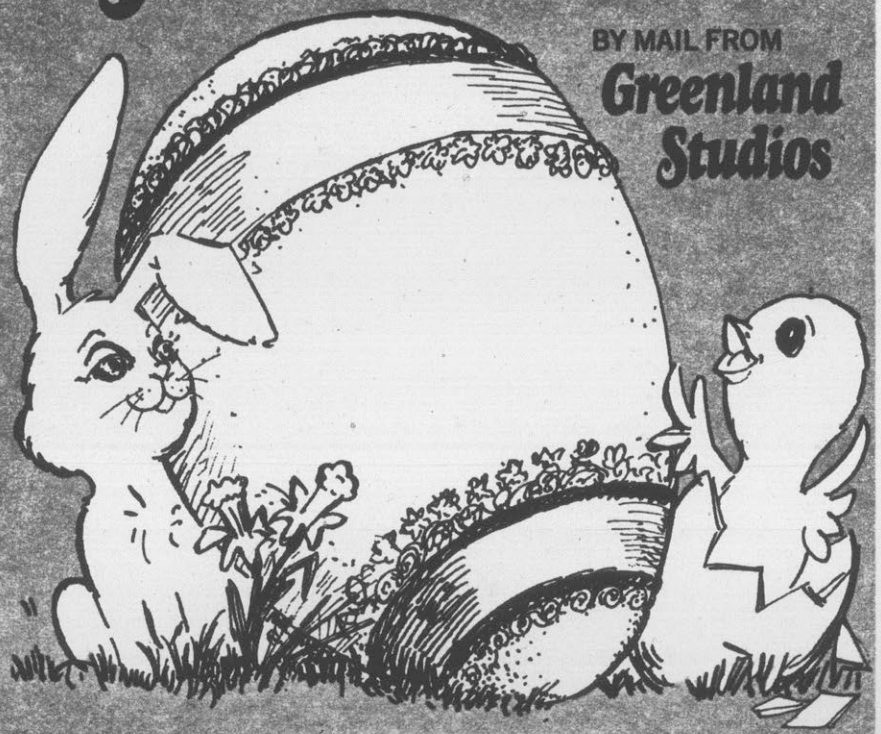

Cash-Incentives. Teachers at Harrison Elementary School in St. Louis have turned to cash rewards as a way to heighten student interest in classwork and academic achievement. The "cash" is play money, but the classroom economy works much like the real money system.

Students are paid varying amounts of paper dollars for regular attendance, accurate test answers, extra reading, good behavior, orderly desks and creative writing. With their earnings, they can "buy" brief intermissions from class work to watch movies or tv, sit in front-row seats at special events, have extra gymnasium playtime and a great variety of other privileges.

The theory behind the Harrison school experiment is that unresponsive pupils often can be motivated to learn by being offered instant recognition for good work. The reward reinforces their desire for success, making them more attentive and determined than they would be in traditional classes.

"The public-school system is like the dinosaur—a magnificent creature, but one that couldn't cope with change. We desperately need more experimentation if we are to find the new approaches that will save education."

Child-to-Child Tutoring·At a Los Angeles elementary school, the concept of who does the best teaching is undergoing some drastic changes. In fact, some remedial work formerly done by teachers is now being assigned to the children.

Youngsters at every grade level are trained to tutor either slower members of their own class or students in lower grades in art, writing, reading, math, science and other subjects. In some cases, the young tutors supervise small groups; in others, they work on a one-to-one basis with their "pupils."

Says Dr. Ralph Melaragno, a director of the project, "Since every individual in the school is both teacher and learner, the traditional barriers are being broken down. By tutoring, the children are able to experience new challenges. In being tutored by someone who really speaks their language, they are able to learn better and faster."

The results: kindergarteners at the Pacoima school who have been tutored by other students score significantly higher than their untutored peers at other Los Angeles schools in every category of learning, from writing their own names and retelling rhymes, to identifying geometric shapes and learning to count. Now other communities, such as Cambridge, Mass., and San Diego, are following Los Angeles' lead. The Institute for Social Research in Ann Arbor, Mich., is convinced that child-to-child tutoring is definitely "a coming thing." ◆

Constipated Today?

You wouldn't be if—

...you realized that as you get older your system naturally slows down and the laxative you have been taking may no longer be best for you. So, if you've been taking magnesia, salts, oils or harsh chemical laxatives once a week or more and you're still not satisfied—here's a better way to end constipation worries. Take medically proven Serutan. It's different!

Unlike other laxatives that may cause irritation or griping, Serutan, taken daily, forms a soft gel which moistens food wastes and shapes them into a well-formed stool. Serutan produces the proper amount of bulk needed to help bring peristaltic stimulation to your sluggish colon. This is utterly different from forcing your system with harsh chemical laxatives which may dry you out. You can take gentle Serutan every day because it is a pure, non-irritating vegetable hydrogel and contains no harsh roughage, no chemical laxatives. Take Serutan every day to get regular—and keep regular.

Delicious Fruit Flavor

Serutan now comes in a delicious fruit flavor. Get Serutan regular powder, fruit flavor or toasted granules today. When you read Serutan backwards, it spells "natures." And nature's way is best. Get Serutan today.

PIN-WORMS
CAN MAKE YOUR CHILD ITCHY, FIDGETY

Fidgeting, nose-picking, a tormenting rectal itch are often telltale signs of Pin-Worms, ugly parasites that medical experts say infest 1 out of every 3 persons examined. Entire families may be victims and not know it.

To get rid of Pin-Worms, they must be killed in the large intestine where they live and multiply. That's exactly what Jayne's P-W tablets do . . . and here's how they do it:

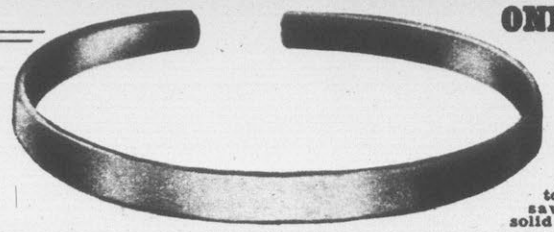

First—a scientific coating carries the tablets into the bowels before they dissolve. Then—Jayne's modern, medically-approved ingredient goes right to work—kills Pin-Worms quickly, easily. Ask your pharmacist.

Don't take chances with dangerous, highly contagious Pin-Worms which infect entire families. When one member is infected, health authorities strongly advise that the entire family be treated at the same time. Get Jayne's P-W Vermifuge . . . small, easy-to-take tablets . . . special sizes for children and adults.

Gene Barry: Handsome Idol Who Makes Marriage Work

Barry: five spats in 26 years

At first Gene Barry didn't even want to get into television. When Herb Gordon, ex-casting head at ZIV, suggested he play the title role in "Bat Masterson" in the late 1950s, Gene said, "No. Westerns are through!"

But Gordon persuaded him.

"What's so different about this one?"

"To start with, Bat wears a derby and carries a cane."

"That made me reconsider the project," Gene told me at lunch the other day. "It wasn't the cane and the hat in themselves that made Masterson unique but what they stood for and what they did for the character." And what that did for Gene.

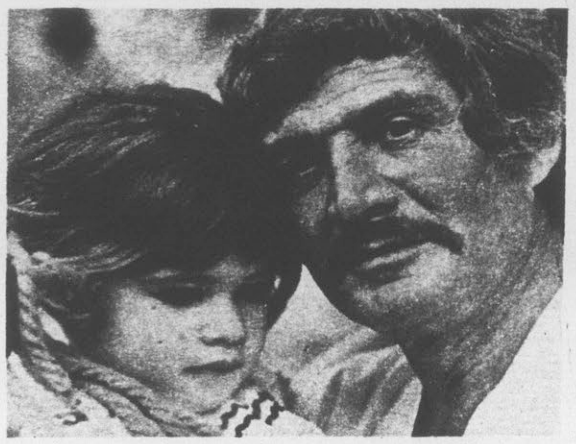

It was he who started the wide lapels, colored shirts and vests that years later became so popular with young people. "When I get through with the last segment of this series," he plaintively insisted, "I will grow a beard and be sloppy. After 20 years of imagery, it's now time for my career to take a whole new turn."

Yet I wondered whether his complaint was justified. Because Barry is one of the few "complete entertainers" in show business. He has been on stage, in movies and night clubs. He has done one-man shows and has even emceed at county fairs. His album, "Gene Barry Sings of Love and Things," sold well both here and abroad.

It is only now, when he's nearly 50 (June 14, 1971) that Gene is slowing down. In fact, in talking with him I got the distinct impression that he has become bored with life and even, perhaps, with himself.

Part of the lethargic impression he conveys is due to a slight frown that gives him a somewhat ferocious and preoccupied countenance. Until he looks at you, that is. Then his hazel eyes bore into you, and he's totally aware of you.

When we were lunching together, I saw the waitress nearly drop her tray when he gave her "The Look" and apologized for not having removed his napkin fast enough so she could put down his plate. It is his consideration, the small courtesies he displays so effortlessly, combined with his masculinity, that has endeared him to female viewers. He's every inch the suave hero, all six feet, one and a half inches of him, albeit a bit hunched, with a twinkle in his eye and a tug at the corner of his mouth that makes you think he's working on a polite—but secret—joke.

While Gene is sensitive, he is not sentimental. When he and Betty Kalb were married October 22, 1944, he left the selection of the hotel for their honeymoon up to Betty.

"Why me?" she wanted to know.

"Because I have to get back to work," he replied, and left.

Gene and Betty came together through a freak accident when they were both appearing in "Glad to See You." At the time, a lot of show people played baseball in Central Park every Sunday. Betty was hit on the head by a baseball and knocked out. "When I came to, Gene was picking me up. I thought I was dreaming. He looked so beautiful! We didn't see each other again until we both had lunch at Sardi's a few days later. He asked me for a date, and that night we decided to get married." She sighed. "I think he's better-looking now than he was when we got married. That's

After 20 years of being considered one of the best-dressed, most suave and courteous figures in show business, the hero of "Name of the Game" wonders if it isn't time for his career to take a whole new turn.

Until their first son Michael was born in 1946, Gene enjoyed New York. He was born there, studied to be a concert violinist until he broke his arm playing football in high school and turned to singing. This eventually took him into the musicals, "Rosalinda," "The Merry Widow" and "Glad to See You." They even had a nice Manhattan apartment on 56th St. and Seventh Ave., across the street from Carnegie Hall. "Then I began a run of bad luck in the theatre and could no longer afford a flat—any flat," Gene recalled. "We moved in with my parents."

By the end of 1949, however, Gene's career had regained its equilibrium. He began concentrating on acting and in 1951 signed a contract with Paramount that led to roles in such films as "Soldier of Fortune" with Clark Gable and "Thunder Road" with Robert Mitchum.

When I asked Gene how his marriage had managed to survive 26 years, he said, "I guess it has to do with a tremendous desire to make it work on both our parts and not let our egos or individual thoughts take over.

"I think the first few difficult years of adjustment helped tremendously because we realized how much we needed one another. You see, we didn't really know each other when we got married. In fact, we were total strangers. The first two years were the toughest of them all."

Said Betty, "I think a lot of it was luck. Besides, we had the same ambitions. I wanted him to be famous, and he wanted to be famous. Of course, we have a lot of other things in common, particularly our love for our children. If you are loved, you give love in return." Michael, now 25, is writing and directing his first motion picture. Fredrick is 18, a freshman at Colorado University. Liza, short for Elizabeth, is three and a half. Gene refers to her as "my little princess," and it is no secret that she can wind him around her little finger.

Betty insists she and Gene never fight in front of their children. "We always put up a united front. They've tried to get us on different sides, but it never worked. I think a lot of the insecurity kids feel today is due to an inner fear that someday their parents will break up—if they haven't already. Gene and I have yelled at each other maybe five times in all our 26 years of marriage.

She is very aware of what does and doesn't please Gene. For instance, I thought she looked very attractive in a gray sweater and black slacks, but she was worried that she'd received me without having had her hair done and her make-up on. "Gene wouldn't like it," she confessed. "He likes me all dolled up."

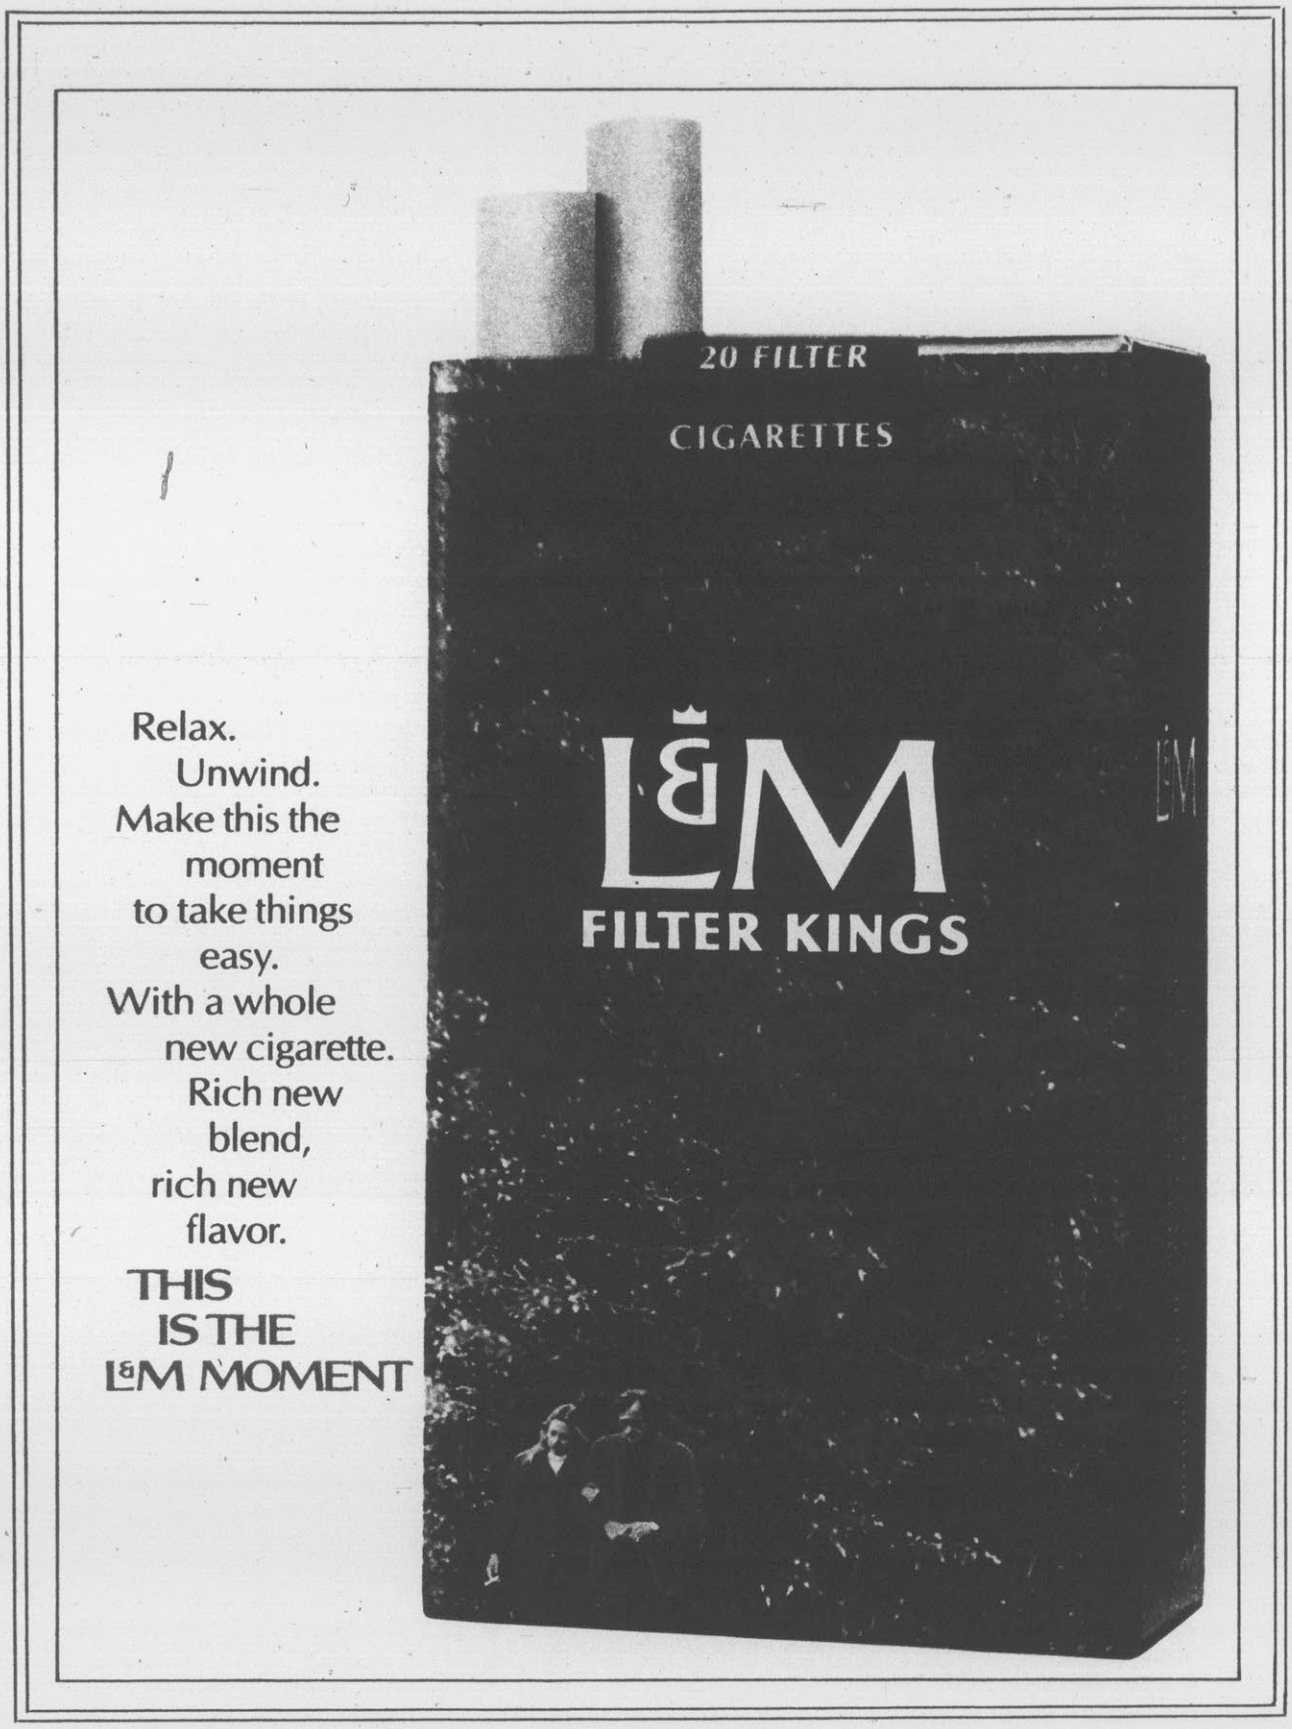

The Barrys now live in a new home in Beverly Hills which, says Betty, is smaller because their last house was too pretentious. The "smaller" one is still a mansion, even by Beverly Hills standards.

In spite of his being outspoken against the Vietnam war and runaway production in the moving picture industry (he's all for Government subsidization along the lines of England's subsidy for the arts), Gene is the quiet one in the family. Betty is gregarious. While Gene can appear completely lost in thought, Betty rarely takes time to catch her breath.

Gene is no longer the driving young man he was at the beginning of his Hollywood career. "My whole life was my work then," he explained, almost apologetically. "I hadn't realized that you only need so much money to live on. You don't scurry about so much later on. You want time with the family and time to do things you could never do before. Why shouldn't actors mature like everyone else? On the other hand, I am not all that settled or stable.

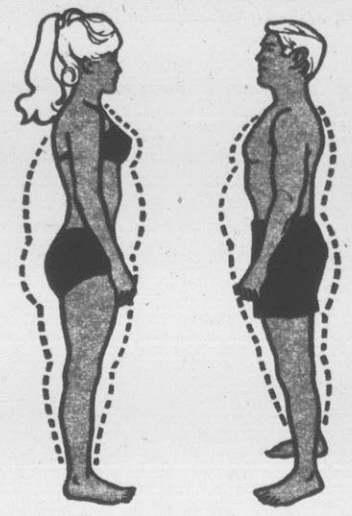

"I think I'd like to go back on the stage. I'd love to sweat again. I haven't for a long time. The only excitement in tv is making the pilot, seeing it get on the air and then waiting to find out whether it will succeed. If it does, then you're stuck in a hit show."

It would take a computer to count the actors who'd give their eyeteeth to get in that kind of a golden rut! ◆

NEW EUROPEAN REDUCING DISCOVERY SPREADS LIKE WILDFIRE OVER ENTIRE CONTINENT!
From England Comes News of the Greatest Breakthrough to End Overweight Forever!
YES NOW YOU CAN EAT ALL YOU WANT AND LOSE WEIGHT

"I lost 71 pounds of dangerous fat in only 60 days!"

My Story of How I Was Able to LOSE 71 Pounds in ONLY 2 SHORT MONTHS Even Amazes Me . . .
DON'T COUNT CALORIES . . . Eat 3 FULL MEALS A DAY . . . NO LOW CALORIE DIETS . . .
NEVER BE HUNGRY AGAIN . . . COMPLETELY SAFE FOR ANY MAN OR WOMEN IN NORMAL HEALTH.

In September of 1970 I was fortunate enough to come across a two page article in one of the leading women's publications in the United States. This article told about a NEW, QUICK, SURE and SATISFYING METHOD that started in England and is presently sweeping through France, Holland and ALL OF EUROPE. People who were overweight, who have tried just about everything to LOSE POUNDS and INCHES and were always unsuccessful . . . finally found the missing link as to why, no matter how or what they tried . . . would not work to any degree. These fortunate people Stopped Starving Themselves, Stopped Counting Calories and STILL witnessed an unbelievable weight loss almost immediately. As I read more and more of this Startling Article, I realize the MANY MISTAKES I HAD MADE IN TRYING TO REDUCE MY WEIGHT and the more I read the MORE CONVINCED I WAS THAT I WAS GOING TO TRY THE PLAN THIS ARTICLE RECOMMENDED.

I began to follow this simple method and was startled to see the weight disappear before my very eyes. IN ONLY 1 WEEK 15 POUNDS MELTED AWAY. My clothing started to hang. I actually looked like I was wearing someone else's clothing. This didn't bother me at all, for this Easy, Quick and Safe Way to lose weight was what I had been looking for my entire adult life. And amazingly enough I wasn't hungry even once. As the weight seemingly dripped off I became more and more confident and as people praised my new appearance, I was even more thrilled and inspired to keep going. Finally after a short while I couldn't wear any of my clothes any longer . . . but this certainly didn't bother me. I ATE and ATE as the FAT LITERALLY FELL OFF.

I then decided to give this amazing new concept to everyone willing to try something COMPLETELY NEW IN WEIGHT REDUCTION.

THE MORE FOOD CONSUMED AND THE FULLER YOU FEEL THE BETTER IT WORKS!

Yes! You actually can eat all the food you desire until you're full and the pounds and inches will melt away forever! You'll see a tremendous difference in ONLY 5 DAYS!

YOU MUST EAT 3 FULL MEALS A DAY EACH AND EVERY DAY

Believe it or not. Is this possible? Not only is it possible to eat all you want and still grow slim but you must not skip any meals, even breakfast. No More Hunger Pangs, Headaches from being hungry . . . No Short Tempers or that let-Down weak feeling in general. Yes, thanks to this miraculous method you lose the weight you desire without depriving yourself of the food and nourishment your body needs. And best of all you don't have to count those calories each time you sit down to a good filling meal. Could anything be easier or more simple than that? Of course not!

THIS AMAZING NEW METHOD IS SWEEPING THROUGH EUROPE AND SLIMMING DOWN THOUSANDS UPON THOUSANDS OF PEOPLE LIKE YOURSELF WITH 100% SATISFACTION AND WITH COMPLETE SAFETY!

Now—Developed by Over 1000 Arthritis Specialists a Needed & Medically-Approved Program to Overcome Arthritis!

Arthritis can be successfully treated. Let new 5-way practical plan of positive action help you to buoyant, pain-free living!

By William S. Kitay
Medical Science Reporter

If you've had Arthritis for years, have just had first twinges, are susceptible through heredity—or if you have a loved one who suffers from it, here's news.

Scientists have revised their viewpoint on Arthritis and what you can do about it. Science now knows that there is no universal sure-cure miracle pill for Arthritis—and probably never will be.

The plain scientific truth is that you can recover from Arthritis with simpler means. Techniques now available can calm the pain, the activity of Arthritis, even lessen the damage.

What Researchers Discovered

A simple home treatment can get you back on your feet, give you new independence and return you to useful living.

It stops pain, reduces inflammation and swelling, gives greater use of your joints. Simply, it prevents or minimizes the misery and crippling of Arthritis.

It is a 5-Way method developed by over 1000 Arthritis specialists and general practitioners working together. It's surprisingly effective in even severe, complicated cases. Often it stops short pain and disability as first symptoms begin.

Why Suffer Needlessly

How often have you done your work with arthritic pain stealing your energy and dulling your efforts? Or has it progressed even further, and you've looked with sinking heart at your hot, swollen joints and twisted fingers—actually brushed tears from your eyes.

To find the truth about—and OVERCOME ARTHRITIS—Over 1000 doctors and scientists joined in to investigate anything promising even alleviating relief, however, unorthodox.

ARTHRITIS DANGER QUIZ!

- Will the juice of one lemon in hot water before breakfast relieve Arthritis? Do special diets help? How does constipation affect Arthritis? Do laxatives help?
- How about Vitamin B-12, Vitamin C and orange juice, orange juice and cod liver oil, lemon juice and baking soda, honey, cream of tartar, multiple vitamins, vegetable juices, food supplements, mineral waters, and herb medicine? Does reducing help?
- Doctors and scientists have investigated virtually any remedy obtainable. You get a full report with the 5-Way plan.
- Will oils be absorbed by your skin and help lubricate a stiff joint? Does iodine help? Are dry skin or scalp or ear symptoms indications of Arthritis? When can a small pillow under your head help—and when HARM?
- Will climbing stairs strengthen knees, feet, hips affected—or harm them? Will sitting in one spot avoid using painful knee and save more pain and stiffness—or increase chance of deformity? Should you keep covers off feet? Each year countless people worsen their own Arthritis—unnecessarily. Many give themselves pain—some cripple themselves for life—simply because—they don't know or tragically believe they are helping their Arthritis.
- You get a blunt report in 5-Way plan described here. The misinformation, confusion, claims and counter claims and ignorance about Arthritis are cleared up. You get the truth about, and how to recognize and avoid, quack cures, "sure cures" and fake remedies.

The frauds, the fakes, the false hopes were shown up. Full facts on new medicine—side effects—disadvantages—withdrawal—effects in different situations were frankly faced. The work goes on—searching for the miracle not yet found.

But the quickest, surest, safest methods yet found—when again and again proven in different situations—have been included in the 5-Way plan to give you greater relief from aches and pain, greater use of joints, faster resumption of activities.

Feel the Improvement—and Say "Yes" to Life Again

See and feel at home your 5-Way plan. Start your body on the way to painfree, normal living. Feel tight joints rest, relax, free up. Feel muscles tied in knots become more supple. Feel body tension ease, aches and pains, soreness, muscle spasms be relieved. Feel muscle tendons soften and stretch. Feel your body's full breathing range permitted again. Feel strength of needed muscles increase.

As you return full motion and range to joints, you're preventing and reducing chance of crippling. You're saving corrective action later. Because you have found the full facts about Arthritis and what to do about it, you've been restoring motion, strength and power to stiffened, weakened joints, increasing the range of joints, helping prevent weakening and deterioration of essential muscles.

You've gained surprising independence from disabilities and you're feeling better than you have in years. You say "YES" to life again!

5-Way Plan In Book Form

The entire plan is now published in one easy-to-refer-to volume. You just use the information you need. What kind of Arthritis do you have? Rheumatoid to Osteo Arthritis—they're here (covering 95% of Arthritis cases) including Rheumatic Fever, Infective Arthritis, Gouty Arthritis, Shoulder and Hand Syndrome and Traumatic Arthritis—PLUS—the RELATED DISORDERS of Rheumatism, Bursitis, Tendonitis, Psychogenic Rheumatis—even Fibrositis, Fascitis, Tensosyvitis, and Myositis.

Get the facts about the Arthritis that strikes 10 men for each woman—and another kind that strikes 10 women for each man—the Arthritis most past 40 eventually get to some degree—the kind that attacks rugged outdoor men—and another kind that attacks thin, tense, intellectual types—the Arthritis that's the most common cause of heart disease under 40 and often affects children, and how best to minimize heart damage from it—Arthritis a vigorous cough makes painfully worse—a kind involving the upper spine arriving with headache, earache, sore throat, neuritis pains in arms, or stiffness in neck. The kind Antibiotics help prevent—and the kind former athletes often get—Arthritis passed on by mother to daughter—and the kind that often follows.

And more! The most ignored warning signals of Arthritis and what to do when you first spot them. Facts you should know about aspirin, gold salts, prednisone, cortisone, hydrocortisone.

Available To Anyone

Any doctor, any arthritis sufferer, anyone susceptible to Arthritis, any family member or friend may accept the amazing offer below.

It is not a 24-hour miracle cure. There is none. It's a way to help yourself and your doctor to overcome Arthritis, stop Arthritis, relieve pain and misery, restore action to crippled limbs, and give back normal, pain-free living.

Only if after looking over the book and 5-Way plan for 10 full days, you're convinced you can be helped, is there any cost. Otherwise, simply return within the ten days for no cost. And if you keep the book for its low cost—if at any time within six months thereafter you—or your doctor—have any doubts of what it has done for you, simply return for full refund. Could anything be fairer?

A Leg of Lamb With Wine Sauce

By Melanie De Proft
Food Editor

■ Serving lamb for Easter dinner may be a tradition in many homes. For a pleasant change in that menu, prepare a leg of lamb as suggested and accompany it with the sauce au claret. At suppertime or for a late evening buffet, serve the colorful "bonnet salad" with hot crusty bread, cake and fragrant hot coffee.

Roast Lamb with Sour Cream Sauce au Claret

- 4 medium onions, chopped
- 4 medium carrots, pared and sliced
- 2 cups sliced celery
- 3 bay leaves, crumbled
- 1 cup water
- 1 leg of lamb (6 to 7 lbs.)
- 2 teaspoons salt
- ½ teaspoon seasoned pepper
- ½ teaspoon Accent
- Sour Cream Sauce au Claret (see recipe)

1. Toss the onion, carrot, celery and crumbled bay leaf together in a shallow roasting pan. Pour water over vegetables and set lamb, rounded side down, on vegetable mixture.

2. Set in a 500°F. oven for 25 min. Remove from oven and set oven control at 300°F. Turn meat rounded side up; sprinkle with a mixture of the salt, pepper and Accent. Insert a meat thermometer in roast so tip is slightly beyond center of thickest part of meat.

3. Return to oven and continue cooking until thermometer registers 175°-180°F., about 3 hrs. Remove thermometer.

4. Transfer roast to a heated platter and keep it warm. Strain liquid from roasting pan and use about 1 cup for making Sour Cream Sauce au Claret. Garnish platter with spiced crab apples, small bunches of green grapes, and parsley. Accompany with a gravy boat of the sauce.

About 8 servings

Sour Cream Sauce au Claret

- 1½ cups red currant jelly, melted
- 6 tablespoons butter or margarine
- ½ cup all-purpose flour
- 1 cup liquid (pan drippings from roast lamb and vegetables)
- 1½ cups claret
- Dairy sour cream (1 to 1½ cups)

1. Heat butter or margarine in a saucepan. Blend in the flour. Adding gradually, stir in the 1 cup liquid until well blended. Bring to boiling, stirring constantly; cook 1 to 2 min.

2. Remove from heat and blend in the melted jelly. Add wine gradually, stirring constantly until gravy is blended.

3. Using as many cups of the gravy as desired (remainder may be chilled and stored in the refrigerator for future use), return the measured amount to heat. Adding in small amounts, and stirring vigorously after each addition, mix in sour cream to taste (about ½ cup to 1 cup gravy). Heat thoroughly (do not boil), stirring occasionally.

About 3 cups sauce

Note: If the gravy is refrigerated and stored for future use, add sour cream as directed just before serving. The Sour Cream Sauce au Claret is equally delicious with poultry as with meat.

A handsome roast leg of lamb garnished with parsley sprigs, onion and carrot slices is ready for carving and saucing.

Easter "Bonnet" Salad Buffet

Chicken in Lemon Aspic
12 ham slices, cut in half
6 Lettuce "Saucer" Salads
Stuffed celery, cut diagonally in 3-in. lengths
Radish roses

1. Unmold Chicken in Lemon Aspic onto a large round plate for the "bonnet crown"; fill center with watercress and top with a few carrot curls.

2. At equal intervals on the shoulder of the plate around the mold (from the base of mold toward edge of plate), place 4 overlapping half-slices of ham.

3. Alternate the 6 Lettuce Saucer Salads with the overlapped ham slices around the plate.

4. Fill any space between salad and ham at edge of plate, tucking in the stuffed celery lengths. Fill any space at the base of salad mold with radish roses and sprigs of watercress.

6 servings

Chicken in Lemon Aspic

2 pkgs. (3 oz. each) lemon-flavored gelatin
2 cups hot chicken broth
2¼ cups cold chicken broth
2 teaspoons prepared horseradish
1 teaspoon minced onion
Pitted ripe olives, quartered lengthwise
Green pepper, cut in diamond shapes (same length as olive quarters)
Cooked white meat of chicken, cut in pieces (about 3 cups)
½ cup finely chopped celery
½ cup finely chopped green pepper

1. Empty gelatin into a bowl. Pour in hot chicken broth and stir until dissolved. Stir in cold chicken broth; chill until slightly thickened, stirring occasionally. Blend in horseradish and onion.

2. In bottom of a 2-qt. ring mold, make a design alternating olive quarters, shiny side down, and green pepper diamonds, waxy side down. Spoon some of the slightly thickened gelatin over the design.

3. Immediately mix chicken, celery and green pepper into the remaining slightly thickened gelatin. Carefully spoon into mold over the decorative layer. Chill until firm. 6 servings

Lettuce "Saucer" Salads

Sprinkle paprika in a saucer and dip edges of romaine or Boston lettuce into the paprika for color; arrange the salad greens saucer-fashion into 6 individual servings. Place a thick slice of tomato onto each lettuce "saucer." Top with a small bundle of cooked marinated asparagus tips, a notched cucumber slice, slices of hard-cooked egg, and an avocado wedge. Set in place around salad mold and drizzle with an Italian-style salad dressing.

Over 1,000 Dreams Interpreted in this Fascinating Book!

THE MEANING OF YOUR DREAMS

by Franklin D. Martini

What does it mean to dream of Love? . . . Diamonds? . . . Pregnancy? . . . Divorce? . . . Romance? . . . Thorns? . . . Weddings?

What does it mean to dream of finding yourself in a strange city? Of being caught in a storm? Of finding a Fortune? Of meeting an attractive stranger?

This extraordinary book instantly gives you the meaning of these and over 1,000 more dreams! The author is Franklin D. Martini, famed astrologer and interpreter of dreams. You'll be captivated by his authoritative, detailed explanations of your dreams and of what they reveal about you . . . your personality . . . your future!

Contents arranged alphabetically, just like a dictionary. If, for example, you dream of dancing, simply look up the word "dancing," and there's the fascinating explanation! The book is so intriguing, so full of rewarding insights on every page, you'll thrill to reading it from cover to cover!

THE MEANING OF YOUR DREAMS not only explains your own dreams to you — it also makes you the "dream expert" of your family and friends! Mail coupon at right today! Claim your copy of this handsome, cloth-bound book on our No-Risk Money-Back Guarantee!

even for thousands who perspire heavily

A different formula has been found to keep underarms absolutely dry —even for thousands who perspire heavily. A formula so different it has far more anti-wetness agent than it is possible to put in any aerosol can. By anybody. After decades of common "deodorants," it took a chemical invention to make this truly effective protection possible — with the same safety to clothing—the same skin mildness as popular "deodorants." Called Mitchum Anti-Perspirant, it is the product of a trustworthy 57-year-old laboratory and guaranteed by Good Housekeeping. By the thousands, women with problem perspiration are finding the protection they need—and never could find before. And fully effective as a deodorant, too, of course. If you perspire more than average—even heavily — get the positive protection of Mitchum Anti-Perspirant. Your choice, liquid or cream. Ninety-day supply, each $3.00. Available at your favorite drug or toiletry counter.

ANTI-PERSPIRANT

Sleep Away Dry Skin

If hands and knuckles get so dry and cracked that nothing seems to help, try this simple treatment. Each night at bedtime, massage a dab of Cuticura Ointment into the skin. Next morning, wash thoroughly with Cuticura medicated soap. You'll be amazed how quickly your skin becomes soft and smooth.

Cuticura OINTMENT

FALSE TEETH
KLUTCH holds them tighter

KLUTCH forms a comfort cushion; holds dental plates so much firmer and snugger that you can eat and talk with greater comfort and security; in many cases almost as well as with natural teeth. Klutch lessens the constant fear of a dropping, rocking, chafing plate . . . If your druggist doesn't have Klutch, don't waste money on substitutes, but send us 10¢ and we will mail you a generous trial box.

Weird New Sonic Lure Caught Fish Like Crazy!

New vibrating lure gives loud gurgling, splashing, bubbling sounds as you skitter it along the surface of the water! Sends out up to 200 vibrations every minute underneath that water! Looks completely unlike anything that a fresh water fish has seen before.

This weird sight and weird sound and weird sonic vibrations—in one of its very first Summer trials—lured fish into attacking so savagely that they actually knocked it out of the water Hauled in trout, bass, muskie, walleye, and pike, even when other lures had caught little or no fish right next to it! Here's why—

CAUGHT! 120 FISH IN ONE HOUR!

At Cattail Lake, Illinois. A hot summer day! A beautiful stream-fed pond—90 by 60 feet wide! Fishermen trying lures, flies, natural bait! But there is only an occasional strike. It looks like a wasted day!

Then, three die-hard friends try their luck with me! We cast from the edge of the water. At the end of our lines is an entirely different lure—a weird little metal monster that casts like a bullet and flutters back through the water like a drowning bat!

FISHERMEN SURPRISED

Almost at once that quiet water explodes into action! The first strike causes a shout of excitement! And then a second strike! A third, fourth, sixth, seventh, eighth! Beautiful rainbows and browns still shimmering from the water —being pulled in at the rate of more than one every minute!

Now the water almost explodes with fish striking! Sometimes four and five trout savagely attack one lure at the same time! Fifty—seventy—ninety fish are caught and released! People along the shore stop to watch!

In one short hour, we have caught and released 120 fish! Why did this bat-shaped lure catch fish by the stringer-full—even after ordinary lures, and natural bait have caught little or nothing?

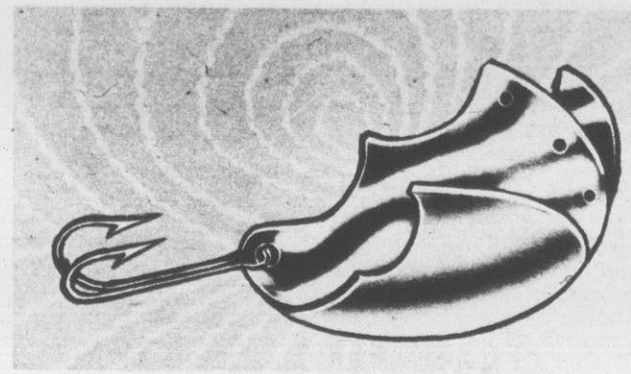

Because this lure gives off unique gurgling, bubbling, splashing surface noises—plus up to 200 sonic vibrations every minute underneath that water—that fish find irresistible!

Navy Fish Biologist report about the sounds fish make between themselves in the water. Fish follow the propellers of a boat as though they were hypnotized by the sound.

Those gurgling, bubbling, splashing surface sounds and underneath vibrations—actually seem to call fish to them. Research showed me that lures, like fish, create Sonic Vibrations in the water by their movements! So I designed a lure that flutters through the water up to 200 times a minute! Wing-shaped—bat-like—jerking and fluttering madly through that water—sending out irresistible sonic waves—gurgling, splashing, bubbling surface sounds that travel through water in every direction at the rate of 4,760 feet every second, the actual speed of sound under water!

FANTASTIC CATCHES

"VIBRA-BAT" lure caught a 10 pound 7½ ounce Northern on one of its first tests—only moments after it hit the water—hauled in six bass in sixty minutes in another test, all 2½ pounds or larger—pulled in perch by the dozens in a third test at Belmont Harbor, Illinois, even after live bait and lures had scarcely a strike, and continued to land so many fish, so quickly, that fishermen watched in amazement!

ARTIST'S CONCEPTION OF THE VIBRA-BAT LURE AND ITS SONIC EFFECT UNDER WATER! Try it at our risk!

Tests show this revolutionary new lure hauls in trout, bass, muskie, walleye, pike, salmon and other fresh water fish even in hard fished waters—produces strikes even when other fishermen alongside it are going almost unrewarded!

AMAZING 6-MONTHS TRIAL OFFER

You simply cannot believe the fish-catching power of this amazing lure until you try it yourself. For 6 full months entirely at our risk! We guarantee that VIBRA-BAT LURES will catch more fish for you . . . or simply return them anytime within six full months for every cent of your purchase price back! You have nothing to lose! Send in the Six Month Trial Coupon TODAY!

Amazing Catching Fish Discovery

Produced Huge Catches For Lures That Failed Before!

LURE GLOW makes any lure or live bait LIGHT UP the instant it hits the water . . . with a GLOW so BRIGHT fish can't resist it. Jumps catches amazingly. Test proven by holder of 26 World records.

LURE GLOW works on any lure or live bait, on virtually any fresh or salt water sight feeding fish, perch, musky, pike, redfish, bass, grouper, trout, lady fish, walleye, bream, crappie, many others.

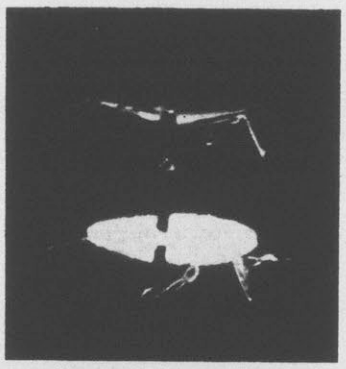

Light attracts fish so effectively that some states even outlaw use of any kind of light.

See how LURE GLOW can help you make record catches. A single container can treat lures or baits up to 300 or 400 times. No cost unless your baits and lures catch more fish.

WORKS ON ANY LURE OR LIVE BAIT

These photos show two identical worms — and two identical lures — but in each case, those treated with Lure Glow glow brightly in dark water! This fantastic scientific discovery now makes any lure, plug, spinner or live bait many times more effective when you use LURE GLOW

WORLD'S MOST ACCURATE LURE CASTER!

What in the World!

DAVID HARTMAN
"Don't threaten; just expect"

David Hartman (Dr. Paul Hunter on NBC-tv's, "The Bold Ones") learned a lot about independence from his father, who left the ministry to become a top advertising executive. David developed a Hartman-special way of handling jobs. He says it will work for anyone: "There are just three steps to accomplish what you need with a minimum of fuss. One, think the problem through and decide what you want to achieve, if you really want it and how much you're willing to sacrifice to get it. Two, don't threaten. Say quietly, firmly, that you expect to get the improvement—bad-taste lines of script deleted, a raise, an assistant or whatever—by a certain date. Say nothing further. Three, on the morning of that date, get your things together, ready to move. Announce calmly that you will walk out if you don't get it by three o'clock." And does David Hartman get what he wants? "Always."

The professional shoplifter is rapidly being replaced by the amateur, four to one. Who are these shoplifters? Half are teen-agers, according to crime reporter Alan Hynd, and three out of four are girls. Half of the perpetrators are from better neighborhoods, and women outnumber men, two to one. Many exclusive stores, in the past, hesitated to upset their prosperous patronage and so did little to prosecute. But now that pilfering is averaging $40 million a week (and it's expected to double in five years), a trend is developing for stores to "go the limit of the law." Warning to the curious: it's a fallacy that a store detective cannot make an arrest until the shoplifter has left the premises with the stolen goods. Anyone spotted can be held for questioning as soon as he heads for the door without paying.

MINK TEDDY
Crowd-Pleaser

Yes, there is such a thing as a mink Teddy Bear. Price-tagged at $360, it is exhibited at the International Toy Fair, Brighton, England. The Fair's emphasis this year was on the sophisticated toys of the space age. The Teddy Bear display drew the largest crowds. But the prevailing sophistication proved to be too much for the parents of one little girl. They told her she wasn't old enough for mink.

Boy with a Tricycle

Though sun shines warmly, is my tot
Inclined to ride his trike? He's not!
But let the rains descend, and then
He wants to go outdoors again.
And I'm resigned. They go together:
His urge to ride and rainy weather.
—Betty Isler

Bad apples are never put in jam. And yet, everytime a kid gets in a jam, he's called a bad apple.
—James E. Harrison

A young man drew aside his girl's little brother. "You know I'm stuck on Stella," he said. "I'd like very much to get a lock of her hair. Do you think you can get it for me? I'll give you a quarter."

There was a moment of silence. Then the boy said, "Tell you what. For a dollar, I'll get you the whole wig."
—Harold Helfer

The man next door reports that his wife learned to drive in two-and-a-half cars. —Anna Herbert

The matron was complaining bitterly to her husband about the amount of time he spent weekends watching sports on tv.

"You never pay any attention to me any more," she wailed.

"Okay," the husband replied, "from now on I'm giving you every commercial." —Bert Kruse

At least the alarm clock is consistent: it always rings before you're ready for it. —Bill Copeland

The carpeting was new in the hospital's pediatric sunroom. It still had enough lint so that nurses and aides were continually stopping to pick up lint as they walked through.

When a little boy's parents came to visit him from the country, they commented on the lovely carpeting and how clean it looked.

"It ought to," the young patient informed them. "They keep weeding it all the time." —Dorothea Kent

A couple we know told the local travel bureau they wanted to go any place "to get away from it all"—as long as it was close to a shopping center.
—Herm Albright

In the glass department of a Beverly Hills department store, a young couple was trying to complete the birthday shopping for the wife's grandmother. The clerk showed them several attractive items in the price range they had mentioned, then stood back to give them a chance to talk things over.

"Darling," the husband said, "let's get your grandmother this ashtray."

"But honey," the pretty wife replied, "we can't give Grandmother an ashtray. Great-grandmother doesn't even know she smokes!' —Dan Bennett

LITTLE EMILY

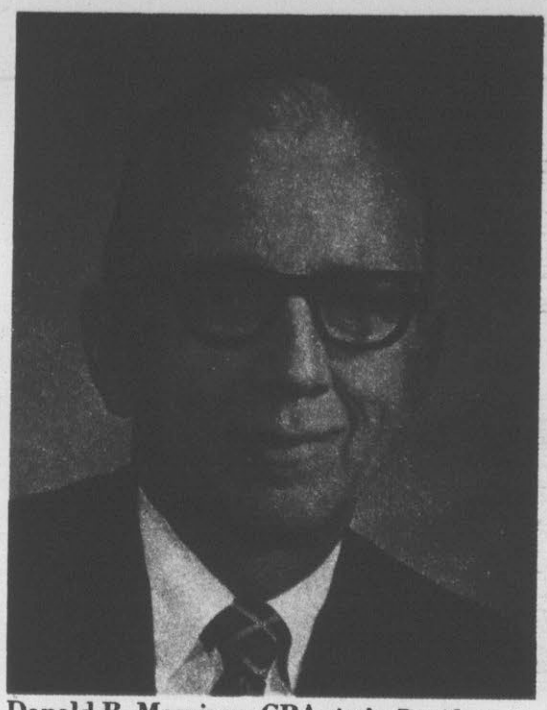

"You had to have pheasant under glass. Chicken over a piece of toast wasn't good enough!"

"We want to test your aptitude for accounting"

The International Accountants Society, Inc., invites you to take this free test which tells if you can work with numbers—as accountants do. It could start you on the road to a prestige career in one of the most exciting areas of today's business world.

by Donald R. Morrison

Donald R. Morrison, CPA, is the President of the International Accountants Society, Inc. His experience covers both public and private accounting and includes government work as a comptroller for the U.S. Army. He has also taught accounting subjects at Ohio Wesleyan University.

HERE IS YOUR OPPORTUNITY to discover whether you have aptitude in one of the world's best-paid professions—accounting. All you need do is take our free Accounting Aptitude Test at home, in your spare time. We'll tell you if you can be trained in this rewarding field.

No reputable school can promise success, but thousands of people who have taken this test, and developed their skill through our training, have gone on to successful careers as accountants, office managers, auditors, controllers and business executives.

It makes no difference what kind of job you have now. If you have a high school diploma or equivalent—if you like working with figures—then one of the world's best-paid careers may be open to you. And you can go as high in the business world as your ability will take you. Accounting training opens the door to every business—to executive positions right up to top m —because accounting is such a vital part of every business today.

Accountants wooed and rewarded

The ever-growing needs of American industry have created an almost constant demand for more trained accountants. Today, and for years to come, accounting offers a real incentive for ambitious men and women who are in humdrum, dead-end jobs. It may offer you the opportunity to say goodbye forever to scrape-along salaries. And once you learn accounting you'll have a valuable skill no one can take away from you for the rest of your life. In good times or bad, accountants are almost always in demand.

How you learn the skills of accounting

Since 1903, the International Accountants Society, Inc., has trained many thousands of men and women to become accountants. It is the largest and oldest home-study school devoted exclusively to the teaching of accounting and allied subjects.

One key to the school's success is its practical technique of teaching: you learn by doing. You do the kind of things accountants do—face similar problems—just as though you were learning on the job. This is not only a more effective way to learn, it is highly enjoyable. You see your skills grow, lesson by lesson. And every step of the way, you are guided through the mail by faculty members who are all Certified Public Accountants.

Here's what students say

This personalized training has helped men and women all over the country find prestige jobs in accounting. Here is what some of them say:

"In the last five years my earnings have more than doubled as a result of my studies with IAS."—Mrs. Louise J. Moore, Olympia, Washington

"My first IAS assignment made accounting even more interesting than I could ever imagine it would be. Between the time I started your course and completed it, I received raises totaling $65.00 weekly."—Arthur E. Rose, Fairfield, New Jersey

"My thanks to International Accountants Society which I sincerely believe is in a very large part responsible for the success I have enjoyed in the business world. . . . I feel that my small investment of time and money in the IAS course could increase my potential lifetime earnings by a very substantial amount."—John J. Keepers, Waupun, Wisconsin

"Your home study course has enabled me to obtain my present position, which has resulted in a very substantial increase in earnings."—Thomas E. Cook, Phoenix, Arizona

Major firms use our training

Companies like National Cash Register, General Mills, Standard Brands, Campbell's Soup, Westinghouse and many others use the International Accountants Society to train their own employees in accounting procedures. Many former students hold top positions with leading corporations and the government.

How I.A.S. training in accounting has helped men and women everywhere find success

"Your accounting course has proven its value by giving me a 50% increase in wages . . . IAS has helped me find challenges and satisfaction which money could not buy."—Bill Hanson, Viroqua, Wisconsin

"I was interviewed for a job and when I showed the company my I.A.S. Diploma, I was hired on the spot. Incidentally, my salary is just great!"—Joann Levens, Tampa, Florida

"IAS 'bailed' me out of a problem 19 years ago. Today I'm President of one company and officer in four other industrial corporations."—Robert G. Chapman, Whittier, California.

"I cannot express strongly enough my satisfaction with IAS training and my gratitude for the help it has given me. I am now Chief Accountant of a large insurance company."—Mrs. C. M. Buckles, Seattle, Wash.

M-M-M-M-M-M-M-M!

BROTHER, WAKE UP! THERE'S A STRANGE NOISE OUTSIDE!

MY STARS, LOOK!

A FLYING SAUCER IN OUR BACK YARD!

HELLO, THERE! REMEMBER ME?

WHY, IT'S THE LITTLE GREEN MAN FROM MARS!

HELLO, MR. GREEN. NICE TO SEE YOU AGAIN. COME RIGHT IN.

HOW'S THE FLYING-SAUCER BUSINESS?

OF MISS WHO?

IT STANDS FOR MARS INTERSTELLAR SPACE SAUCERS. YOUR PRIMITIVE ROCKET FLIGHTS HAVE GIVEN US AN IDEA.

WE BELIEVE TOURISTS BY THE MILLIONS WOULD GO SIGHT-SEEING TO THE MOON IF THEY COULD DO SO IN COMFORT AND SAFETY.

YOU BET THEY WOULD.

WELL, THEY CAN! MARS IS TWO CENTURIES AHEAD OF EARTH IN SPACE TRAVEL!

WE CAN BEGIN WITH A DOZEN SAUCER EXCURSIONS DAILY. ONLY ONE PROBLEM STANDS IN OUR WAY. YOU EARTH PEOPLE SEEM AFRAID OF US.

I ASK YOUR HELP, MR. SWEENEY. HELP US GAIN THEIR CONFIDENCE AND YOU SHALL BE OUR SUPREME EARTH CAPTAIN AND PASSENGER AGENT.

TERRY AND THE PIRATES

by GEORGE WUNDER

CABALLO AND HIS GUERRILLAS ARE ROUNDED UP BY THE PRESIDENT'S RESCUE PARTY.

LEE, YOU LOOK A BIT DAZED. IT'S REALLY QUITE LOGICAL. YOU GOT TO BREAK UP AN ATTEMPTED COUP D'ETAT BECAUSE MRS. DEEPSIX SUSPECTED CABALLO OF MISUSING TAXPAYERS' AVIATION FUEL TO CHASE GIRLS.

NO MALE CHAUVINISM, MR. POOL... THE RECORD I RAN ACROSS SHOWED HE WAS USING TOO MUCH. TERRY KNOWS ABOUT AIRPLANES, SO I WROTE HIM TO COME DOWN.

NOW, OF COURSE, IT'S OBVIOUS HE WAS FLYING OVER TO CUBA TO BREW HIS TREASON... I DO FEEL BETTER, NOW THAT IT'S SETTLED.

A FORMIDABLE LADY, EH, COLONEL? SHE SUSPECTS A MINOR SIN—AND MY REGIME IS SAVED! AND HOW MANY FIGHTER PILOTS DESTROY AN ENTIRE AIR FORCE?

NOT IN MEDALS FOR THAT CHEAP SHOT, OKAY, SIR?... I AM SORRY ABOUT THOSE BUSTED AIRPLANES THOUGH.

IT WAS OBVIOUSLY NOT MUCH OF AN AIR FORCE AND I SUSPECT CABALLO WILL REGRET MOST OF ALL THAT HE WILL NO LONGER LEAD IT IN FLYOVERS ON NATIONAL HOLIDAYS.

THEN...

THANKS.

TERRY, STAY A MINUTE, WILL YOU, PLEASE?

FUNNY, LADDY-BUCK! BOTH THE PRESIDENT AND THE AMBASSADOR SEEMED TO THINK THERE WAS SOMETHING FEMALE ABOUT MY REASONING.

SOMETIMES I EVEN REMEMBER THAT I'M A WOMAN MYSELF.

I NOTICE THAT EVERY TIME I LOOK AT YOU, MADAM CONGRESSMAN.

HMMM... YOU DID STORM CABALLO'S HACIENDA WITH ENTHUSIASM. ANY CONNECTION?

WELL, IF YOU HAD A THREE-DAY BEARD AND SMOKED CIGARS, I'D PROBABLY RECONSIDER MY WHOLE ATTITUDE.

NEXT DAY.

MORNING, DOLORES, LEE. GOT YOU BOTH ON THE NEXT PLANE THROUGH TO WASHINGTON. NOT A BAD FLIGHT. ONE STOP, AT "TWELVE OAR BAY."

"TWELVE OAR BAY"? NEVER HEARD OF IT, MR. POOL.

A NEW CARIBBEAN RESORT ISLAND, LEE. VERY PLUSH, GAMBLING CASINO, THAT SORT OF THING. YOU'RE ONLY ON THE GROUND FOR AN HOUR.

AND SOME HOURS LATER...

DID YOU CHECK WHETHER THE DEEPSIX BROAD WAS ABOARD?

Prince Valiant®

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

BY HAL FOSTER

Our Story: THE VIKING DRAGONSHIPS CIRCLE SIR LAUNCELOT'S BIREME. ABOVE THE DIN OF VIKING WEAPONS CRASHING ON SHIELDS AND THE WAR CHANTS, RISES ONE GREAT VOICE GIVING COMMANDS.

SIR LAUNCELOT ORDERS THE SAIL FURLED AND THE ROWERS TO COME ON DECK AND TAKE UP THEIR ARMS, LEAVING ONLY ENOUGH BELOW TO MANEUVER THE SHIP.

PRINCE VALIANT LOOKS OVER THE BULWARK. THAT VOICE! ONLY ONE PERSON CAN ROAR LIKE THAT. HE SENDS A SAILOR TO FETCH A FISH FROM THE GALLEY.

A MISSILE IS HURLED AT THE VIKING LEADER. HE RAISES HIS SHIELD, A DEAD FISH SPLATTERS AGAINST IT..... AN INSULT! GLANCING UP HE RECOGNIZES HIS ASSAILANT. "PRINCE VALIANT," HE BELLOWS, "WHY YOU....."

"SO, IT IS YOU, BOLTAR!" CRIES VAL. "I THOUGHT IT WAS A BULL WALRUS CALLING FOR ITS MATE. COME ABOARD AND HAVE A DRINK WITH US, BUT LEAVE YOUR TOO-READY AXE BEHIND."
"DOES THE GREAT PRINCE VALIANT FEAR THE AXE OF BOLTAR?" "NO," ANSWERS VAL PLEASANTLY, "ONLY YOUR PETULANT TEMPER AND POOR JUDGMENT."

BOLTAR COMES ABOARD AND ORDERS HIS SHIPS TO STAND OFF..... THEN, WITH A DELIGHTED ROAR, GREETS HIS OLD FRIEND AND PARTNER IN MANY AN ADVENTURE.

"YOU, LAUNCELOT, ONCE INSULTED ME. WHEN I WAS DOING SOME, AHEM, BUSINESS ALONG YOUR COAST YOU PUT A PRICE ON MY HEAD. SO SMALL A PRICE THAT IT WAS AN INSULT TO MY IMPORTANCE."
"I APOLOGIZE," ANSWERS LAUNCELOT, "BUT YOU MUST REMEMBER IT WAS ONLY FOR YOUR HEAD."

BOLTAR SEATS HIMSELF COMFORTABLY AND ORDERS A CASK OF MEAD. "NOW, LAUNCELOT, HERE I AM DELIVERED IN PERSON; PAY ME THAT REWARD."

ALL KNEEL IN HOMAGE TO THE MIGHTY... THE AWESOME... THE IMMORTAL EROG!!

"I NEVER WONDER TO SEE MEN WICKED, BUT I OFTEN WONDER TO SEE THEM NOT ASHAMED"
–JONATHAN SWIFT

TO PROVE HE IS "IMMORTAL EROG" PUNJAB HAS TAKEN CAP'N AHAB'S HARPOON WITHOUT A SOUND, EXTRACTED IT AND FACES HIS "SUBJECTS" AS THEIR TRUE GOD....

HIT THE DECK, YER BLARSTED CORPSE!!

THAT HARPOON WENT DEEP, PUNJAB... I COULD TELL! WE GOTTA TEND T' IT PRETTY QUICK!

FEAR NOT, PRINCESS... IT WAS MERELY A SCRATCH...

BESIDES, IF THESE CREATURES WERE TO SUSPECT THAT I AM WOUNDED, THEY WOULD DESCEND UPON US LIKE A PACK OF SAVAGE DOGS!

© 1971 New York News Inc. World Rights Reserved

SPEAK... AND WE DO YOUR BIDDING, OH MIGHTY EROG!

I KNOWS WHEN I'M BEAT, FOLKS!! BUT LET BYGONES BE BYGONES! THERE'S ENOUGH LOOT HERE IN EL DORADO T' PUT US ALL ON EASY STREET!!

SHARE AN' SHARE ALIKE... I ALWAYS SAY!! FRIENDS WE STARTED THIS VOYAGE AND FRIENDS WE'LL BE, SKIPPIN' A FEW LEETLE UNPLEASANT DETAILS HERE AN' THERE...

LIKE YOU TRYIN' T' KNOCK OFF GOLDSWINGER AN' HIS MINIMEN ...NOT T' MENTION...

...PUNJAB AN' SANDY AN' ME!! YOU SURE GOT A SHORT FUSE ON Y' THINKIN' BOX IF THAT'S WHAT Y' FIGGERS GONNA HAPPEN!

I ADMITS I GOT CARRIED AWAY WITH THE NOTION THAT ALL THE GOLD HERE BELONGS TER ME, 'CAUSE I'M THE ONE WHAT LOCATED IT... BUT I GOT A HEART AS BIG AS THE WHOLE SEVEN SEAS, FOLKS...

...AN' FRIENDS IS FRIENDS WHEN THEY SHARES THE WEALTH! NO BALM IN CREATION FOR SOOTHIN' RUFFLED FEELIN'S LIKE GOLD, MATEYS... AN' THERE'S ENOUGH O' THE YELLER STUFF HERE T' DAM UP AN OCEAN...

WHAT'S STRIKIN' YA SO FUNNY, GOLDSWINGER?
