GRIFTON — Twenty-three beauty contestants, Congressman Walter B. Jones, ECU Athletic Director, Clarence Stasavich and News and Observer Managing Editor Woodrow Price were featured guests here Saturday at Grifton's First Annual Shad Festival.

A variety of activities throughout the day featured the crowning of Miss Angela Thaxton, 18, as Shad Queen.

The new queen is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Thaxton of Grifton and a senior at Grifton High School.

First runner-up and Miss Congeniality was Jan Paget and second runner-up in the event was Meanette Huggett.

Other contestants were: Jennifer Butler, Sharon

Thompson, Debbie Branscome, Louise Braxton, Diane Taylor, Cheryl Barnes, Paula Bradley, Connie Barwick, Nancy Sugg, Brenda Smith, Wanda West, Jo Ann Smith, Patti Cartwright, Vivian Ward, Debra Leonard, Madeline Baker, Deborah Harris, Barbara Holton, Shirley Murphy and Tanya Haddock.

Judged on points of beauty, poise, intelligence, wit and imagination, the queen was chosen from 23 contestants, all Grifton area residents and students at Grifton High School or North Lenoir High School.

Sponsored by the Grifton Jaycees, the Shad Festival, attended by several thousand people featured a fish fry at noon in the center of town with fried herring and shad stew.

Other activities for the day included: a morning parade at 10 a.m. with four floats, the Shriner's calliope, North Lenoir and Savannah bands, the Marine Corps band, the beauty contestants, color guard and several other units; roster of speakers at 11 a.m.; games and contests at the school field from 2-4 p.m.; judging for the Shad Queen at the school auditorium from 6-8 p.m. and a street dance from 8 p.m. to midnight.

A flea market, and a boat and camper show was also held.

Contest winners of a 12-foot Carolina "Shad" boat and other fishing equipment were announced during intermission of the Shad Queen Contest.

All events in the festival, except the fish fry, were free.

Israel Favors Suez Opening

By United Press International Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban said Saturday Israel favored reopening the Suez Canal but Egyptian President Anwar Sadat would have to adopt a "more realistic" position on Israeli troop withdrawal to make it a reality.

Eban spoke on the eve of a crucial meeting of Prime Minister Golda Meir's cabinet to complete details of its counter-proposals to Egypt's plans for reopening the canal, blocked since the 1967 war. Reports in Jerusalem said the United States had urged Israel to make its reply by Sunday.

In Libya, the leaders of Egypt, Syria and Libya signed an agreement creating a "Federation of Arab Republics" aligned against Israel. The federation embraces nearly half of the estimated 90 million population of the Arab world.

During the talks which began in Cairo and then moved to Benghazi, a fourth potential member, Sudan, dropped out and its head of state, Maj. Gen. Jaafar Numeiry, flew to Moscow for secret consultations with Soviet leaders. Arab political sources said Numeiry held back because of domestic problems but it was expected Sudan would join the federation in the near future.

Gromyko. Riad arrived in Moscow Thursday for what diplomatic sources said was an effort to obtain more financial and military backing in the struggle against Israel.

Eban, in his third interview this week, came out in favor of reopening the Suez Canal, with an Israeli troop withdrawal to make it possible. Reliable sources spoke of a pullback of about 10 miles.

Haim Herzog, former Israeli intelligence chief, said that Israel would be committing military suicide if it withdrew without ironclad guarantees against Egyptian troops crossing the canal. He said Israel could not afford to withdraw more than 5 to 10 miles no matter what guarantees it did get.

The Israeli cabinet skipped its regular session last Sunday because of the Passover holidays. But in interviews during the week Mrs. Meir and other Israeli government officials prepared the nation for some major move on the canal.

"We are living through crucial hours which will decide the chances for an interim agreement between Israel and Egypt," Eban said in a radio interview in Jerusalem. "We cannot be sure that a separate agreement will be reached on the opening of the canal, but the chances are not negligible."

He said that if there was to be an agreement, then the Egyptians would have to give a little too.

New Drive Begun In South Vietnam

By ROBERT SULLIVAN SAIGON (UPI) — Gen. Creighton W. Abrams, the U.S. commander in Vietnam, said Saturday American ground troops would join the South Vietnamese offensive now under way through the A Shau Valley near the Laotian border.

Abrams said the campaign could be broadened with South Vietnamese units actually crossing into Laotian territory to attack Communist bases along the Ho Chi Minh Trail. President Nixon has barred American foot soldiers from Laos but okayed U.S. air and artillery support for such incursions.

U.S. B52 Stratofortresses flew two missions near the A Shau Valley Saturday, and American spokesmen in Phu Bai, 35 miles east of the valley, said "American forces have been committed to the support" of the South Vietnamese offensive. That statement apparently applied to air and artillery support. U.S. headquarters in Saigon said there were no American troops in the A Shau Valley as of Saturday night.

Surprise Statement Creighton's statement that U.S. ground units would be committed came as a surprise. U.S. commanders have been trying to reduce American participation in South Vietnamese offensives to a minimum under the program to Vietnamize the war and send more Americans home.

Abrams spoke with reporters at the old imperial capital of Hue, near the A Shau Valley, where President Nguyen Van Thieu renewed his threat to send South Vietnamese troops against North Vietnamese forces in North Vietnam itself and said that Hanoi "really fears" such a move. He said the Communists were losing the war and that South Vietnamese troops intended to keep the pressure on the enemy in both Laos and Cambodia.

South Vietnam's new offensive through the A Shau Valley began last Wednesday and Saigon headquarters shrouded details of the campaign, named Lam Son 720. Asked about its size and purposes, the official spokesman for South Vietnam headquarters said: "We have nothing further to say about this operation because there has been no contact." The new drive followed Lam Son 719, the 45-day South Vietnamese offensive into Laos which ended April 8 and reportedly inflicted heavy damage on Communist supply areas.

Two Charged In Woods Fires

Two Pitt County residents were taken into custody by the Pitt County Sheriff's Department and charged with illegally burning woodland here yesterday following investigation of more than a dozen woods fires in the county.

Pitt County Sheriff Ralph Tyson said the two, Thomas Earl Hardee, 18, Grimesland, and Howard James Tripp, 17, Rt. 3, Greenville, were taken into custody one-half mile off NC 43 near Cox Crossroads about 6:30 p.m. by Deputy Sheriff Tommy Burney. Both were charged with 10 counts of illegally burning woodland in connection with the series of fires.

About 300 acres of woodland was burned, according to Tyson, all in the Stokestown area, and off the Gum Swamp Road between Black Jack and Grimesland.

Fires were reported according to Pitt County Fire Marshall Bobby Joyner beginning at 12:48 p.m., with the last at 6:05 p.m.

Investigation of other fires is continuing in connection with the case.

Nixon Faces Newsmen At Friday Night Meet

By FRANK CORMIER ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon says some American ground and air forces will remain in Vietnam indefinitely—until the enemy releases U.S. prisoners and Saigon has a fighting chance for survival.

If the other side balks on the prisoner issue, Nixon told a nationwide radio audience Friday night, "We have some cards to play, too, and we are going to play them right to the hilt."

Interviewed by six publishers, editors and reporters at the annual banquet of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, Nixon engaged in one of the most free-wheeling question-and-answer sessions of his administration.

Unlike his White House news conference, Nixon's replies drew frequent applause from his audience, which included government officials as well as journalists.

Among Nixon's responses to wide-ranging questions were these:

—The United States is prepared for broadened trade and travel with Communist China but he isn't ready to discuss diplomatic recognition of the Peking regime or its admission to the United Nations.

—Nixon defended his pledge to make a final administrative review of the My Lai murder verdict against Lt. William L. Calley Jr. The President argued he wanted to calm public reaction in a fashion that, in his view, did nothing to compromise the integrity of the military system of justice.

—Heaping praise on Director J. Edgar Hoover of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Nixon termed some recent criticisms of Hoover and his agency as "unfair and malicious." Rather than speeding Hoover's retirement, he suggested, the result would be "to have him dig in." He said neither he nor the FBI chief had ever talked about Hoover's retirement plans and declined to pledge that Hoover will be retained.

—The President conceded the Gross National Product growth during the first quarter fell short of administration expectations, but said it was above predictions of some other economists. He forecast a good year for the economy in 1971 and a very good year in 1972.

Nixon declined to speculate about the date when total Vietnam withdrawal would be accomplished, saying that would serve only the enemy.

Asked whether the Jan. 1, 1973, date mentioned by Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott is a practicable goal, Nixon said:

"The date, let me say, cannot and must not be related to an election in the United States."

He said any such date will depend upon South Vietnamese military ability, enemy activity, and negotiations, particularly in regard to prisoners.

The threat of U.S. bombing of North Vietnam "will be a great incentive when the time comes that they have to make the decision as to whether they are going to retain prisoners..." Nixon declared.

American air strikes will continue if North Vietnam attempts to use POWs as hostages to force a quicker U.S. withdrawal, he added.

Asked by Otis Chandler, publisher of the Los Angeles Times, whether U.S. troops and airpower will have to be maintained in Vietnam until the Paris peace talks reach agreement on the prisoner issue, Nixon said:

"We haven't given up on the Paris talks. I would suggest that the moment of truth is arriving with regard to the Paris talks because time will soon run out.

"We have the responsibility, as long as there is one American being held prisoner by North Vietnam, to have some incentive on our side to get that man released, and that is why we are going to retain that force until we get it, and I think it will work in the end."

Poetry ?

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — A University of North Carolina English instructor recently introduced to his class what he termed "one of the finest, most elegant lines of poetry in the English language."

The line being very short, he said he had duly recorded it in all of his notebooks as a constant reminder of his beauty.

"Walk with light!" he quoted, and then repeated softly and blissfully to himself, "Walk with light...now isn't that a wonderful thing to say to someone?"

The class agreed, of course, and wished to know the author of this bit of poetry. "I suppose it's anonymous," said the instructor. "It's written on a sign at an intersection of Franklin Street."

Tennis Team On Their Way Home After Successful China Visit

By ALBERT E. KAFF TOKYO (UPI)—Members of the U.S. table tennis team arrived in Tokyo Saturday night en route home from an historic visit to Communist China that left them convinced their "ping pong diplomacy" had opened the way toward friendlier U.S.-Chinese relations.

The 15 Americans returned to Hong Kong earlier Saturday, wearing Mao badges and laden with souvenirs of their one-week visit to Peking, Shanghai and Canton. They said they found a "genuine friendship" in China for the American people, and said the Chinese had been gracious and hospitable.

Ends Freeze "It's the beginning step toward the direction of friendship between China and the United States," said the team coach, Jack Howard of Seattle, Wash., of the tour that ended a 22-year deep freeze in Sino-American relations.

An American table tennis official, Ralph Harrison, of Wilmington, Del., said he had invited the Chinese team to play in the United States, and they "reacted favorably."

In Tokyo, Graham B. Steenhoven, president of the U.S. Table Tennis Association, told newsmen: "I want a Chinese team to come to the United States. We asked them in many ways and times. If the Chinese accept, the U.S. Table Tennis Association will host them as they did us."

Steenhoven, of Detroit, Mich., said the Chinese wanted the Americans to stay longer. "They regretted our leaving so early," he said. "They said this was too short. But we had a schedule and we followed it."

Steenhoven said he and a first group of team members would leave Tokyo Sunday morning (Japan Air Line Flight 52) and were scheduled to arrive at Los Angeles at 11:50 a.m. EST Sunday. Some other members will leave on a second flight (JAL2) due in New York at 6:50 p.m. EST Monday.

But individual reactions to life in China ranged from enthusiasm to a feeling of depression. One player liked it so much he asked to stay on, but was turned down by the Chinese. Another said it was a good place to visit, but he wouldn't want to live there.

One woman member was dismayed at the drabness of life under Communist rule. Another noted that men and women were rarely seen together. And another was in tears as she crossed the border into Hong Kong. But all agreed it was an unforgettable experience. "It's like a dramatic movie," wrote Mrs. Geraldine Resek of New York City in a diary she kept of the trip.

After lunch in Hong Kong the Americans flew to Tokyo on two airliners for an overnight stop before flying on to the United States Sunday.

Two Flights An Air France jetliner with eight of the 15 Americans arrived at Tokyo International airport shortly before midnight Saturday. A Japan Airlines flight with the other seven Americans landed a few hours later.

The U.S. table tennis officials, players and wives spent the night in Tokyo's famed Imperial Hotel before their flight home from the trip that saw Chinese Premier Chou Enlai say a "new page" had been turned in relations between the United States and China.

They were the first group visit to Red China since the Communists drove Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek from the mainland in 1949. The Peking regime also allowed a small group of newsmen into China to report the visit. They remained in the country to cover the Canton trade fair.

President Nixon, who announced an easing of some of the longstanding restrictions on trade with China during the team's visit, said in Washington Friday night he hoped to be able to visit China some day but said formal diplomatic relations with Peking were still a long way off.

The Americans arrived in Hong Kong by train from Canton, where they had spent a final hectic night that included attendance at a ballet staged and directed by Chiang Ching, wife of Communist party chairman Mao Tse-tung.

Enchanted By Trip "Everybody was enchanted by this trip," said Errol Resek. Olga Soltesez, 16, Orlando, Fla., said the visit was a real eye-opener and it might do other American young people good to go there and see how good they have it at home.

"I was a little depressed," Miss Soltesez said. "The countryside was really desolate. They have had poverty problems."

John Tannehill, 19, Middletown, Ohio, had nothing but good to say about Communist China. "China is great—it is all Mao thought," he said.

Glenn Cowan, a 19-year-old Santa Monica College student, whose shoulder length "hippie" style hair created a sensation among Chinese, described the experience as "new, different."

Observers note that recent smiles cast at the U.S. by Red China's leaders may be carrying a message to the effect that diplomatic relations between the two nations need not always be so grim. ECU Students Set High Goal For Visit Of Bloodmobile

East Carolina University students are once more setting a high goal for the collection of units of blood to help boost the Pitt County American Red Cross Bloodmobile drive, which has lagged in recent collections throughout Greenville and the county.

AFROTC Cadet Lieutenant Randy Gladden, publicity chairman for the two day collection drive scheduled for Wednesday and Thursday, April 21 and 22, explained the goal that has been set. Cadet Lt. Hal Reinmiller, chairman of the ECU Bloodmobile campaign, is heading the overall drive.

"We are attempting to collect 500 units," Gladden explained. "If we can do this it will be a big help in making possible bringing Pitt County's goal back up to its quota."

Gladden said that as in the past, members of the Angel Flight will be assisting the AFROTC cadets and other ECU groups in making arrangements to handle donors.

The two day drive will be held at the South Cafeteria Dining Room on campus. On Wednesday, the hours of operation will be from 11:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. The hours for Thursday will be from 10:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m.

"We are asking townspeople who want to join in the ECU blood collection to come on to the university and give here," Gladden commented.

Douglas Morgan, chairman of the American Red Cross Bloodmobile for Pitt County, said "The 500 units the ECU students have set is 220 units over their normal quota of 280 for the two day collection effort. ECU students have always generously responded to help pick up the slack in our quota."

Morgan remarked "We have always been sincerely appreciative of the AFROTC and all the other organizations at ECU, as well as the student and faculty body, who respond to our needs so enthusiastically."

Last December, collections on a two day drive at ECU netted a total of 396 units, which was 116 units in excess of their assigned quota.

One of the things Morgan feels is in favor of the ECU drive is the recent ruling that 18 years olds in North Carolina can now donate blood without parental consent. "I'm sure this will result in many of the younger students contributing," Morgan commented. "These young people are really fine about helping out in good causes."

Privileges Cut Due To Union

SHELBY, N.C. (AP) — The firemen in this Cleveland County town found out Friday how the fire chief felt about unions when he cutback the firemen's privileges.

Just one week after the firemen announced formation of a local chapter of the International Association of Firefighters, chief Al Miller said the men must now work from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. on their 24 hours shifts.

The firemen previously just had to be on hand at the fire station and didn't work eight hours during the day.

And the firemen can't watch television during working hours any more, except on Sundays and holidays, Miller said.

Further, the firemen can no longer receive personal telephone calls at work and cannot make personal telephone calls except in emergencies.

Firemen will be required to stay at the fire station during the 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. working schedule. Previously they could make trips downtown. Also suspended is the firemen's privilege to wear their uniforms to and from work instead of having to change at the station.

Letter Urged Narrowing Race

Two of the candidates for mayor in Greenville's May election have received a letter signed "Concerned Citizens For A White Mayor" urging that they "consider narrowing the race for mayor."

The letter was addressed to Frank M. Wooten Jr., S. Eugene West, and Kenneth Barnes — three of the four candidates seeking the seat of mayor of Greenville, and all of them white. The fourth candidate for the office, Donovan Phillips Jr., is a Negro.

Barnes and Wooten yesterday both said they had received the typed letters suggesting that they "get together and seriously consider narrowing the race for Mayor." West could not be contacted.

The letter noted: "With three white candidates running, we may be unable to elect either of you."

Barnes, who brought the note to the attention of newsmen, commented, "What can you say. I just don't want any part in it. I think it's the system's fault..."

He continued: "If the past (city) administrations had seen fit to put control of the city government in the hands of the people through a majority voting system for the mayor and through a district system for city council, this kind of thing would never exist."

Wooten, currently serving as mayor, said, "We have a democracy. We must abide by the choice of the voters. That is the purpose of an election."

West last night said he had not received a copy of the letter.

Although saying, "I'd like to study it before making any comment, West noted, "I doubt that this would be a wise solution. I doubt that anything like that could be arranged. I don't think anything like this should be worked out."

Transportation Plan

DURHAM (AP) — Gov. Bob Scott called Friday night for North Carolina to develop a total transportation plan.

"The future demands it," Scott said in a talk to the quarterly meeting of the State Board of Conservation and Development.

To work out this plan, the governor called for a study of the state's transportation needs, including the advantages of a rapid transit system.

Scott said a 20 per cent population growth in the Piedmont area in the last decade has resulted in cities fusing together.

Now, he said, "travel has come to mean cussing the driver behind you and honking at the one ahead of you.

"On an average day the I-85 bypass at Charlotte carries up to 36,000 vehicles, the I-40 expressway at Winston-Salem up to 55,000, and the Downtown Boulevard in Raleigh, up to 55,000," Scott said.

The governor noted that projections point to four million cars and trucks in North Carolina by 1990 compared to about three million now.

"Can enough asphalt and concrete be poured to handle the projected traffic loads of the future?" he asked, "We should develop a total transportation plan, a total North Carolina transportation plan."

Nixon Defends FBI Director

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Embattled FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover has won a strong defense and a glowing tribute from President Nixon but not a firm commitment he will be kept on the job.

he had it "on high authority" that FBI agents were present at no more than four Earth Day rallies.

Speaking of attacks on the FBI, Griffin said: "Now if that isn't 'McCarthyism' or 'McCarthyism' in reverse, I don't know what it is."

Labeling many of the criticisms of Hoover as "unfair and malicious," the President said at a news conference Friday night: "He's taking a bad rap on a lot of things and he doesn't deserve it."

Nixon followed up. "Despite all of the talk about surveillance and bugging and the rest," he declared, "let me say I have been in police states and the idea that this is a police state is just pure nonsense."

But invited by a questioning newsman to pledge to retain Hoover as head of the FBI, Nixon said: "I'm not going to discuss the situation with regard to Mr. Hoover's tenure in office when the matter has not been raised by him or by me."

In any event, Nixon said, "It would be most unfortunate to allow a man after 50 years service to go out under a cloud, maligned."

While defending Hoover against attack, the President also defended his own intervention into the case of Lt. William L. Calley Jr., Vice President Spiro T. Agnew, and the administration's "game plan" for the economy.

Nixon said he ordered Calley released from confinement and promised to pass final judgment on the convicted slayer of 22 Vietnamese civilians in order to quiet fears of stirred-up Americans.

"Since that action," he said, "we have seen the fears with regard to the Calley case subside because they know that he is going to get a fair review and a final review by the President of the United States."

"I will not pass the buck to a commission or to the secretary of the Army."

While praising Agnew, Nixon shied away from sharing in the vice president's broad-scale attack on the news media.

"Some of his criticisms in terms of some network coverage, some press coverage, you cannot quarrel with them," Nixon told the questioners at a convention of the American Society of Newspaper Editors.

As for the administration's economic policies, Nixon cited improvements in production and rising sales and stock prices as indications of a rebound.

"I think there will be a strong 1971, in the second half particularly, and a very strong 1972," he said.

Reinforcing earlier White House statements that no drastic new stimulating moves, such as a tax cut, are necessary, the President said: "I do not think we should change the plan now."

Hoover's status and some congressional criticism of FBI tactics commanded considerable attention at the news conference. Earlier in the day Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, a potential Democratic presidential candidate, renewed his charge that the FBI spied on antipollution rallies and said the activities "smacked of political surveillance."

Traveling in New Hampshire, Muskie demanded the administration make public the FBI's report on 40 to 60 Earth Day rallies last year.

New Park Site Bought

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer
Nearly three years after city funds were reserved for purchasing a tract of recreation land in east Greenville adjacent to Eastern Elementary School, the final transaction was carried out Friday afternoon in the office of City Attorney David Reid.

It was on July 29, 1968 that the City Council approved a reserve fund of $17,397.80 for purchase of land owned by Mr. and Mrs. Robert B. Starling. The reserve fund represented one half the land price for the property. In land purchases of this type, the federal government matches city funds on a 50-50 basis of actual land cost.

In subsequent developments, plans for amount of land to purchase at this site evolved to five acres, the amount purchased in the Friday transfer.

As the City Council's representative on the Recreation Commission, councilman Johnnie Edwards presented Mr. and Mrs. Starling a check for $25,000 for the five acres. Now that the purchase is culminated, an immediate application to the federal government will be made for its share of $12,500.

"We're fortunate to be able to acquire five acres of land on this side of town," Edwards commented. "As the land joins the school grounds of Eastern Elementary School, we can work in conjunction with the city schools. They can use our property and we can use theirs."

Edwards expressed appreciation to Mr. and Mrs. Starling for their giving the city the first opportunity to purchase the land. "As the councilman on the Recreation Commission, I want to say your thoughtfulness in this matter is appreciated."

"I'm delighted we had the land and that it will help the children and citizens of Greenville have another recreation area," Mrs. Starling said. The Starlings both mentioned their past connections with recreation programs; he as a worker with baseball teams, and she as a teacher in Physical Education in the Durham (N.C.) schools.

Mayor Frank M. Wooten Jr. noted, "This land is needed in the continued successful plans for the growth of Greenville. This is all part of the past 10 years expansion plan. This will be a nice area."

"We still need more land for recreation," Mrs. Clay Burnette, Chairman of the Greenville Recreation Commission commented. "But I'm glad means to pay for this land were provided."

The director of the Greenville Recreation Department, Boyd Lee, observed, "This makes 30 acres of land acquired this year, which I think shows our city officials feel recreation is a necessity instead of a luxury."

Lee said plans for the five acre tract are being worked on, and that they will continue to be formulated until the most suitable one was devised. "It will be a neighborhood type park," Lee added.

City Manager Harry Hagerty said the placing of money in a reserve fund in 1968 showed foresight. "Having the money in the fund for this day has really been a good thing," he said. Hagerty said he hoped city officials "can go for some more recreation land soon. Now all we have to do is to develop the land."

Fire Smoke Causes Problem For Florida

By NICK TATRO
Associated Press Writer
MIAMI (AP) — Smoke pouring from fires in the drought-parched Florida Everglades has doubled air pollution counts and is creating a health hazard over South Florida's highly populated Gold Coast region, a state pollution official has warned.

Frank Kleeman, regional director of the Florida Air and Water Pollution Control Board, said Friday that air samplings in the last three months reveal pollution counts above standards "to avoid adverse human health effects."

"I would suspect this has already had adverse effects on those with respiratory diseases and caused considerable discomfort to those affected," Kleeman said.

Dr. Milton Saslaw, director of the Dade County Public Health Department, said increases have been reported by hospitals in the number of respiratory cases being cared for.

"It's my understanding that we're well below danger levels reported in Los Angeles and some of the larger cities, but there is irritation from smoke."

More than 6,000 fires have scorched 400,000 acres of grasslands in the Everglades so far this year. The drought, described as the worst in 25 years, began in October.

A 50,000-acre blaze continued to rage in northern Dade County Friday, fought by 50 fire fighters including troops from Homestead Air Force Base. Meanwhile, a 12,000-acre timberland blaze crept into the northwest corner of Florida Everglades National Park and went unattended because there weren't enough crews to fight it, a park spokesman said.

IN EVERGLADES . . . Charred sawgrass stubble and leafless scrub trees are all that is left after fires. Smoke from fires drifts over Miami, causing pollution problems. Friday smoke caused closing of a major expressway for a short period. (AP Wirephoto)

All Depends On The Citizenry

If there is one thing crystal clear in Gov. Scott's far-reaching environmental proposals, it is the fact that implementation of these proposals will mean a change in the way of doing many things will affect every citizen of the state.

The proposals will directly affect the operations of businesses, industries, farmers. They will affect

Mathematics Of Heartbreak

By BRYAN HAISLIP
RALEIGH — Take the agony of a family with a child trapped in the severe communications and learning disorder of autism.

Multiply by 2,000. That's the mathematics of heartbreak in North Carolina for parents who know something is wrong with their child, but too often find no help short of hopeless commitment to an institution.

To translate the problem from emotional to financial terms, consider the cost of custodial care in one of the state's mental institutions: $3,000 per child, per year, continuing as long as the child lives.

Balanced with that burdensome prospect for taxpayers, there is shrewd economy in a program offering identification and early training which can keep the child at home with some promise of reaching a functioning level within the community.

Such is the reasoning which prompted Senator Charles H. Larkins, Jr., of Lenoir to introduce Senate Bill 383. It would provide $1,147,760 to establish a special education program for children with severe learning, communication and behavior disorders.

Invitation Through TV
Larkins first heard of autism on the TV drama, "Marcus Welby, M.D." That fictional encounter was followed by a telephone call from Frank Warren, president of the North Carolina Society for Autistic Children, who acquainted him with the real life situation.

"That's how I became involved," said Larkins, whose bill would make this state the first to embark on a funded program for children who are victims of autism.

"If North Carolina passes this bill you will be offering important leadership to other states," wrote Dr. Leo Kanner, the man who discovered the condition of autism more than 25 years ago. He is professor emeritus of child psychiatry at The Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Md., and editor of the Journal of Autism and Childhood Schizophrenia.

Dr. Kanner said he was aware of the Child Research Project at Chapel Hill, the educational model for the legislation, and the work of its co-directors, Dr. Robert J. Reichler and Dr. Eric Schopler. "I feel that they have a basic understanding of the condition, and that their educational approach including parents, offers the best treatment available for these children to date," Dr. Kanner said.

Granted the difficulty in securing new money at this session, Larkins feels confident lawmakers will buy the concept of spending funds for training in order to save on budgets for institutional care.

More Than Money
The difference isn't only dollars, Warren, speaking for the organization of parents of autistic children, made that clear this week at a public hearing before the Senate Mental Health Committee. For the children involved, he said, "it is the difference between life and existence as a vegetable." For most if not all parents, he added, it offers the only hope. "The alternatives are practically non-existent."

Warren and his wife spent five years bumping around in the dark after they recognized that George, their youngest, did not respond to them or his environment. Doctors found nothing wrong, suggested they take the husky, active 18-month boy home and love him. Tests for deafness were negative. Still, George did not talk or learn.

About a year ago they heard of the Child Research Project, a federally funded study involving the Department of Psychiatry and the Child Developmental Institute of the University of North Carolina School of Medicine at Chapel Hill. Twice weekly they made the trip from Kinston.

Hope Springs Anew
George responded. He learned to talk. Hope stirred for the Warren family.

The autistic child, Warren noted, resists learning because it is difficult for him. "Without firm, constant training he may never learn to speak or channel his energies in a constructive manner. With training, his abilities begin to develop and he gradually grows toward normality," he explained.

"If training begins early enough the child may overcome his handicap completely."

The State Department of Public Instruction, the State Board of Health, the Mental Health Department, and other state and private agencies have cooperative roles in serving the autistic child. Last fall, the State Department of Public Instruction joined with the Child Research Project, the Greenville-Pitt County schools and the Developmental Evaluation Clinic on the East Carolina University campus for a pilot classroom program. Three months later, a similar agreement was made with Greensboro schools for one teacher position.

The Larkins bill would set up three centers to serve the east, central and western areas. Through the centers, parents would receive guidance in training for their children, and classroom programs in public schools would be initiated. Training for teachers would be an important aspect of the program.

the use of lakes, streams, rivers, pleasure boats, coastal resorts, mountain retreats and midland recreation areas. They will bear directly on operations of land developers, property owners, utility companies, and municipalities.

No citizen of the state will escape indefinitely the impact the proposals would have on his pocketbook, for it will require money to carry out the program.

With it all, however, Gov. Scott has outlined a realistic and challenging program for North Carolina and its people. If, as he says, the state is to discharge its "responsibility to this generation and to those unborn" its people must lend their support to the program despite the inconveniences they will be caused.

It is folly to even think the program can succeed without solid support from the citizenry. It is folly for the individual to think the goals can be accomplished without some personal sacrifice on his part. The proposals are that far-reaching. There is not a person in the state who will not feel the pinch of changing his way of doing things if the program is enacted.

The question is whether 5.5 million North Carolinians are willing to sacrifice some of their individual interests in the interest of protecting the environment which will enhance the life of all now and in the future.

Will they extract themselves from their own narrow, personal view to see the broad future alternatives if the program is adopted or rejected?

If most citizens choose to oppose the total program because there is some part to which they object, the vast majority of citizens will find themselves in opposition. The program will fail. It could be killed simply by farmers opposing restrictions made on their operations while agreeing that industries should be made to meet requirements set for them. Or for developers to oppose restrictions on their operations while agreeing that something needs to be done about environmental abuse by cities and towns, beach litterers and boaters, junk dealers and pesticide users.

There is a provision which pinches every group. But if the environment is to be preserved the total package must be adopted. One loophole here and another there will simply mean nothing much will be done in the long haul to protect and improve the environment of the state.

The Ping Pong Political Plan

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — An English-language broadcast from Peking, privately monitored on Sunday somewhere south of the border of Red China, only gently rapped the knuckles of the U.S. State Department for "poking its nose" into the Pakistan civil war, then viciously attacked Moscow for its "outrageous and blatant" interference. The balance of the half-hour broadcast was spent extending a "warm welcome" to the American ping-pong team that had just been invited to play in Communist China.

Sent to the White House through non-diplomatic channels, this symbolized the first success of President Nixon's very private diplomatic effort to ease the cold war between Washington and Peking. That effort started in early summer 1969 with Mr. Nixon's quick acceptance of an invitation to visit Rumanian President Nicolae Ceausescu, Red China's best friend in the Soviet Eastern European bloc.

Quite apart from demonstrating his hope for a special relationship with Rumania, which conducts its own foreign policy remarkably independent of the Soviet Union, the President's visit there was an intentional signal that the U.S. wanted a new relationship with Communist China. It was taken with full awareness that, although Moscow would openly resent the U.S. intrusion into Eastern European politics (Moscow's special preserve under the "Breshnev doctrine"), the real Soviet resentment would be over the implications of the President's visit on the bitter Soviet-Chinese doctrinal and territorial struggle.

The Cambodian intervention in April 1970 set back the Nixon approach to Peking when the Chinese abruptly cancelled a meeting between U.S. and Chinese ambassadors in Warsaw, set for May 20. As a result, the U.S. began to establish alternative and highly secret contacts with Peking through other channels, one of them in Japan. It was that line of communication that led to the sudden ping-pong invitation last week.

Actually, the Nixon administration had received several recent hints that just such a gesture could be expected from Peking. There was evidence, in the words of one official, that Peking was "intensely interested" in responding to the Nixon initiative, but it was expected this summer, not in April.

That speculation was heightened during the Hanoi visit last month of Chinese Premier Chou En-lai. Coming at the climax of the South Vietnamese incursions against the Ho Chi Minh Trail, Chou En-lai's visit was given top billing in Hanoi as a signal that China might intervene in the Indochina war. The hint of Chinese in-

Canada Sitting Pretty

By ROBERT D. BOTT
OTTAWA (UPI)—The Canadian economy is "sitting pretty," an example to the world; the Canadian economy is a disaster.

Pick one. It just depends who you ask. And how far away they are.

Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau's government is in the ironic position of being admired from abroad for the economic policy that is bitterly attacked at home.

Outsiders hail Canadian success at controlling inflation. Canadians are appalled at the price—a depressed economy with more and more people out of work.

Canada's Record Envied
Most Western countries envy Canada's record in beating runaway inflation, its all-time record trade surplus, and the strength of the Canadian dollar. And Canada appears to have begun an economic upturn while the United States is still at the bottom of a slump.

To foreign finance ministers and treasury secretaries, Canada looks like the land of dreams fulfilled.

So it was not surprising when Finance Minister Edgar Benson cited praise from a U.S. business magazine (Business Week) — ("Compared to its neighbor to the south, Canada is sitting pretty")—as evidence of the success of his economic policies. He would have had a harder time finding praise at home.

In Canada, attention is being paid to high unemployment, rising costs of education and health care, and the prospect that a new wave of inflation may be around the corner. Opposition political parties seized on rising discontent and made economic policy the main target in attacks on the Trudeau government, stepping up pressure for an early election—possibly even later this year.

Public Forum

(Letters submitted for public forum must be limited to 300 words)

To the Editor:

There is much about the 'Dump Cleetwood' movement we don't understand. The Board of Education says it is time for a change. How do they decide that four years' service for one man is enough, compared with 50 years for the previous superintendent?

The Board offers only one other complaint. They say he has 'poor community relations.' This needs to be clarified. In only four years, Dr. Cleetwood can claim the following accomplishments: 1) construction of Aycock Junior High and Eastern Elementary Schools 2) a new two-story wing plus library and cafeteria expansion at Rose High, along with replacement of temporary facilities by permanent ones 3) an additional wing (classroom and library) at South Greenville Elementary School 4) purchase of 18 acres for the new Wahl-Coates School, to be completed this year, and 12 acres for an elementary school in Lyndale 5) an addition to the maintenance warehouse 6) improved food services (All schools now have kitchen and dining areas and the volume of lunches served is up 30 per cent over the past five years) 7) elimination of dual school system (As a result, we were again eligible for government funds so vitally needed when the community failed to support last spring's referendum.)

Do these seven items amount to 'poor community relations'? Impossible.

Recently Dr. Cleetwood was evaluated by a dozen principals and staff in 15 different job-related areas on a scale of 1 (unsatisfactory) to 5 (excellent). His grades were as follows: school administration and management — 11 5's and one 4; leadership and personnel relations — 7 5's and 5 4's; communications — 8 5's; initiative and dependability — 12 5's; resourcefulness — 11 5's. His single grade of 1 was in maintenance of school plant. The evaluators listed among his areas of greatest strength: "organization, drive, enthusiasm, dependability, aggressive leadership, knowledge of school affairs, sincere interest in good schools, and ability to stand firm in face of adversity."

Does this evaluation by professional colleagues sound like 'poor community relations'? If so, we just don't understand. We challenge the School Board to explain to the public why they are asking for the resignation of such a competent man.

THE FUTURE?

We are confronting a money crisis today. We had a money crisis in 1929, and the end was a tragic depression. Something is going to happen to us all, and very soon. We have broken economic laws, and the future is probably going to be pretty rough on us.

Recessions and depressions come because people do not own the things they believe they own. In 1929 people thought they owned stock which they held on margin. Today people believe they own homes which they do not own — the banks own them. The banks also own the automobiles many people drive. Both young people and adults cry out about the expenses of education. Or the expenses of medical care. We just don't own certain things, but we use them as if we did. Then some day the crisis becomes a demand, not that the piper be paid, but that the banks be paid.

The great George Washington was a wealthy man, but the day after the notification reached him that he had been elected first President of the United States, he had to ride into Alexandria, Virginia, and borrow ten thousand dollars to pay his current debts. He always had wealth, but he seldom had money enough on hand to keep him from being roughly handled by his creditors. He was indeed The Father of His Country.

Money. Money. Money. It has always been important and still is. But money is not something to be played with but to be used, and panics, recessions and depressions come when we give ourselves over to playing with money instead of using it.

Can't Stall Firing? Then Relax

By ELMER ROESSNER

Current unemployment is unusual in that it hits the high as well as the low. In past recessions it has struck the unskilled. I don't remember many Ph.D.s selling apples in 1933.

Most of the unemployed today are unskilled, but mingled with them more than ever before are corporate executives, analysts and engineers. Unemployment in the aerospace industry is at an all-time high.

Collage, a little publication by the Motorola Government Electronics Division and edited by Darrell Thorpe, addresses itself in the latest issue to those in the industry.

To those who have jobs, it suggested these steps for staying employed:
"If your company is going through a bloodbath period, if your friends and colleagues are being axed, the main thing to do is to avoid direct contact with your superior.

Don't give him a chance to realize how expendable you are.

Yell "Fire!" Which Is Correct

"If he comes up to you and begins to say, 'I don't know how to tell you this, ... you should scream 'Fire!' and jump out the window. By the time the panic dies down, he may have forgotten what was on his mind. Better yet, he may have been trampled to death.

"Another ploy is to induce your wife or daughter to have an affair with the boss... Or maybe have an affair with his wife and threaten to expose him as a cuckold...
"Worm your way into the good graces of your boss's boss and make him believe that you're doing all the things your boss gets credit for...

"Buy a share or two of company stock. Then go around saying idiotic things like, 'Boy, if I had the megabucks I'd buy another thousand shares.' A man who talks like that cannot possibly be fired."

How To Enjoy Unemployment

Another section tells how to find happiness though unemployed. It suggests you may meet so many interesting people today at the unemployment office, and that you can get to know your family again.

In seeking a job, it recommends having a couple of hundred cards printed with the word "consultant" upon them. When a personnel man asks you why you want to give up $30,000 a year as a consultant, answer that consulting involves too much travel.

And, "When taking intelligence tests, try to answer every question wrong... This shows your disdain for a personnel guy's need to rely on anything but his own intuition to evaluate applicants..."

"The important thing when out of work is not to panic. No one starves these days. Your wife might enjoy working again and you might enjoy daytime TV. Be sure to look into government food stamps."

The article ends on this note:

"If you are a senior engineer specializing in RF circuit design or microwave circuit design we'd like to talk to you, even if you're out of work. We have a few openings. We welcome you to lie about your previous salary and we'll lie to you about the joys of sandstorms." The division is at Scottsdale, Ariz.

Observations From Editorial Columns

DECLINING ILLITERACY

Significant further inroads against illiteracy in the United States have been found, not unexpectedly, in the 1970 census. Of persons 14 years of age and older, only one in 100 could not read and write in any language, compared to 2.4 in 1960.

The rate has been more than halved for both white and blacks. Whites dropped from 1.6 per 100 to .7, and blacks from 7.5 to 3.6 in the past decade.

The decline in illiteracy has been persistent over the years. One hundred years ago 80 of every 100 nonwhites (aged 10 and over in that census) were illiterate, and 11.5 of every 100 whites.

Achieving literacy is a minimal educational step, but an important one. And the greater the number who achieve it, the sounder the democracy. —Shreveport (La.) Journal

YOUNG ADULTS AND THEIR CREDIT

Young people of today, with their exposure in school to the knowledge explosion, are considered to be smarter than those of preceding generations at corresponding ages. There are also indications that older teenagers are ready for adult responsibility earlier than their parents.

Despite accelerated opportunities for learning and signs of earlier maturity, young people need and want help with their personal finances.

The widespread use of credit cards by teen-agers has brought about studies of consumer credit among college and older high school students. An Economic Intelligence Quotient Test, developed at Georgia State College, measures how adequately prepared high school seniors are to live in our economic society.

A surprising finding, through the testing of 21,000 students, is the statistic that two-thirds were unable to work simple problems involving carrying charges department stores levy on installment credit accounts. Only 10 per cent were able to determine the least expensive repayment schedule for a short-term account.

Remedies are on their way. High school home economics programs, for example, have recently included classes for both boys and girls in consumer education and credit is covered extensively in such courses.

Today's youths have seen the problems that plagued their parents through the overuse or unwise use of consumer credit. With the new emphasis on education in financial matters, teenagers have the opportunity to write a more impressive financial and credit record than their parents.

INFRINGING PRESS FREEDOM

Government can infringe on freedom of the press through either direct intervention in the contents of publication or through confiscatory charges on distribution.

Proposed second-class mail rates set by the Postal Service in effect would curtail newspaper distribution to thousands of readers.

If the rates are approved by the Postal Rate Commission, newspaper management could see subscription costs increase 142 per cent in the next five years.

Squeezed by higher costs on all sides, newspaper patrons may find the forced rate increases prohibitive. Newspapers and other publications, therefore, would become beyond the financial reach of many Americans.

Particularly hard hit will be small weekly papers, which depend almost exclusively on the mail for distribution.

The new rates are based on 199 per cent of attributable, or actual, costs of handling the mail. Postal officials say that the extra charge is necessary to cover overhead beyond actual handling costs.

We appreciate the fact that the Postal Service is attempting to operate on a business-like basis. But when rates clearly prohibit many Americans from access to varied publications, freedom of the press, guarded by the U.S. Constitution, is endangered. Reassessment of the proposed rate structure is in order. —Dallas (Tex.) Morning News.

A Conservative View Spring Found The Blue Ridge On Easter Sunday

By J. J. KILPATRICK

SCRABBLE, Va. — Spring tiptoed across our Blue Ridge Mountains on Palm Sunday, April 4, but such is the temper of Virginia's weather that no one thought it odd when the heavens opened the following Tuesday and dumped a foot of snow on Front Royal. The snow was gone by Good Friday, and by Easter Sunday no doubt remained. Now, at last, it is spring.

This is not a matter to be fixed by calendar or thermometer, or even by the first crocus in the woods. Spring is a softness in the air, a warmth in the earth, a comprehension in the heart. I have lived long enough in cities to know how spring can lift the urban spirit, but I wonder all the same if countrymen, by the nature of their lives, do not draw a deeper meaning out of April.

This is not intended as a sermon. I am no religious man — not in any ordinary meaning of the word — and profess no understanding in these fields. But most of us, at one time or another, have heard that simple and mysterious declaration: "I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth in me shall never die." Suddenly, this spring, it holds a meaning.

Back in the autumn, when the leaves began to fall, we invested in a device known to the garden catalogues as a "compost shredder." It is a noisy little monster, squat as an Oriental idol, capable of devouring great heaps of leaves, twigs and branches and reducing them all to mulch. Over the winter, the gloopity-glop machine sat sullenly in the tool house but last week we brought it roaring back to action.

And on a spring morning, a few days ago, we fed it summer, fall and winter — dead grass, weeds white as bone, dry flowers of the year before. Down its red throat went rotten branches, brittle sticks, the maple leaves that formed October's golden fire. The top leaves were dry; those farther down were silvered black with mold; and beneath the mold the pungent earth gave back the smell of — of what? Of spring? It was, I think, the smell of resurrection and of life.

In the midst of the raking there came a small explosion. Five tiny rabbits, newborn, burst from a burrow by a dead persimmon tree. The task of making mulch had to be suspended until they could be caught, trembling with terror, and put back down the hole. It was folly, in a way, for rabbits grow to be a nuisance; in season we shoot them for the table. But this was tender folly, and we moved away and let the babies be.

This was the mornig of discovery, of fat worms stretching, of birds nesting, of bloodroot and jonquil bright as jewels. We planted half a dozen trees that day, marveling at their tangled beards of roots, crumbling the moist earth; we spread mulch, got lettuce in the ground, marked the return of a sparrow known as Charlie. And the spring wind, born weeks ago in New Orleans, Mobile, Savannah, Columbia, Charleston, Chattanooga — a bayou wind, soft as camellias — came up from the South and blew like a woman's hair across the greening land.

I went for a long walk that afternoon, down the crooked road to Burke's Store, doing a last chore before calling it a day. This is the Beer Can Minuet, performed with the collie Lorenzo, by which we weave from side to side while I put litter into plastic bags. Rappahannock County has great people; it has trashy people, too, and usually Lorenzo hears a good deal of editorial comment on the iniquities of those who defile a lovely lane.

This afternoon was different. Somewhere in the softness, down among the beer cans, a profound and elusive truth was hiding. A month ago the road was dead, the grass inert, the ditches frozen. Now, quite simply, life; the willows pale chartreuse, the insects humming, a woodpecker chattering for grubs. I cannot explicate this truth. It came and went, appeared, then vanished. This, it seemed, is what eternity is all about, the eternal renewing, the waiting seed. Just outside the cottage, where we had been raking, Lorenzo suddenly paused, turned back, put a paw on a tiny object and then brought it to me. It was one of the baby rabbits, dead of shock. I buried him in the herb garden, between the lettuce rows, patted the earth down; drowsy and saw on my knees a glimpse of endless summers breathing warm and drowsy from the grave.

intervention was spelled out in public statements by North Vietnamese officials.

But the Chinese premier refused to play that game. Instead of agreeing with the North Vietnamese line (strongly reflected at the Paris peace talks) that the Laos intervention was a direct threat against China, Chou En-lai kept insisting that Hanoi alone could handle the invasion of Laos. He carefully spelled out differences between North Vietnam, Laos, and Cambodia on one hand and China on the other, a clear signal that the Laos invasion was no direct threat to China.

Chou's reluctance to threaten Chinese intervention as a result of the Laos invasion was obvious: incendiary statements in Hanoi could have upset delicate negotiations on establishing contact with the Americans.

But the eventual outcome of Mr. Nixon's personal diplomacy in unlocking one small door to Red China is murky and uncertain, with its impact on U.S. - Soviet relations the riskiest component of all. For example, if the Russians decided that President Nixon is moving toward eventual alliance with China at the expense of the Soviet Union, the U.S. - Soviet arms control talks, now in their 17th month of stalemate, might never get off the ground.

On the other hand, some Presidential advisers are now hoping for the opposite: that the merest suggestion of a new deal between Peking and Washington will push Moscow into moving faster on the arms talks. In the fascinating game of triangular big-power politics between Moscow, Peking, and Washington, hatred between the Russians and the Chinese could make Washington the fulcrum if Mr. Nixon doesn't overplay his hand.

That's for the future. For

Other Editors Say: End Of A Bill

(Greensboro Daily News)

The case for a more permissive abortion law in North Carolina is compelling in some respects, but we confess we were not particularly sorry to see it defeated Tuesday in the North Carolina Senate.

The legal questions are less troublesome, we believe, than the moral and medical questions. Legally speaking, there is no satisfactory reply to the argument that it ought to be a woman's right, given the consent of her husband if she is married, to decide whether to bear a child.

Yet the moral and medical sides of the issue are cloudy. Morally speaking, it seems to us that Sen. Edmund Muskie asked the right questions in a recent television interview. "I'm concerned," he said, "about diluting in any way the concept of the sanctity of life. First of all, we're not entirely sure of the psychological impact upon mothers themselves who become free or indiscriminate in the use of this way of avoiding the consequences of sexual relations. A life has been taken away from them, and it's the nature of motherhood to shield and protect life."

The latter aspect of the issue — that of what Senator Muskie calls "psychological impact" — is not prominently mentioned in legislative debate. But those who have counseled women about abortion know that it is not negligible.

As for the "dilution of the sanctity of life," we know from all the correspondence on the abortion issue that the question of whether, or at what stage, an embryo may genuinely be said to have "life" stirs great anger, on both sides.

Perhaps the conclusive element in the recent General Assembly debate was psychological, however. The truth is that the more confident, not to say dogmatic, advocates of permissive abortion move from one advanced position to the next with baffling speed. Two sessions ago, we were told that a new abortion law then passed with little opposition was a model statute, designed to bring North Carolina well abreast of the latest and most responsible medical and legal thinking.

But the ink was hardly dry in the statute books before these same advocates were saying that the new law was out of date, as if it were a relic from past centuries. No doubt this has much to do with growing public alarm about the consequences of uncontrolled population, but we think the state of North Carolina ought to think very carefully before it compromises life in any form under the pressure of population-control advocates.

Bowles Looking Ahead To Mid-Summer And A Campaign For Governor

By JOHN KILGO

RALEIGH — State Sen. Skipper Bowles of Greensboro is working overtime these days.

In dealing with legislative business, Bowles is answering about 35 or 40 letters a day from his Raleigh office and is farming out about 60 letters daily to his Greensboro office.

Bowles, of course, is looking beyond this session of the legislature to mid-summer, when he will start a relentless campaign that he hopes will put him in the Governor's mansion in 1972. Bowles seems pleased with the progress his unannounced gubernatorial campaign has made since the legislature opened — but his biggest weakness at this time is in the Western part of the state. Lt. Gov. Pat Taylor is strong there and Bowles is trying hard to pick up support in the mountain area.

The Guilford senator is now lining up people to help him in his campaign and he has told friends that he is in the race to stay, no matter who offers the opposition.

Jim Martin is a young, handsome, articulate Davidson College chemistry professor. He's also chairman of the Mecklenburg County Commission and a Republican. Many GOP leaders are trying to encourage Martin to run for Congress or for Governor in '72. He is politically ambitious.

Don't lose your head if one day you learn that Gov. Bob Scott is interested in running for State Treasurer in '72. He's talked to some people about it.

Raising money for political campaigns has always been tough — but now it's getting more difficult than ever. One man who hopes to run for Governor told me: "Trying to get people to pledge money this year is like pulling eye teeth. I've never seen anything like it."

Ninth District Congressman Charles Jonas, a Republican, is telling associates that he is serving his last term. Attorney General Bob Morgan's biggest problem in trying to make '72 plans is raising money. In his drive for consumer protection, Morgan has angered some of the big money people.

Public Forum

(Letters submitted for public forum must be limited to 300 words)

To the Editor:

The time when an appointed board in Public Education can ask an administrator to resign because of supposedly "poor public relations" is somewhat archaic. Rumors are that Dr. Cleetwood's contract may or may not be renewed. When one asks why, repeatedly the only response is "poor public relations." I cannot see how Dr. Cleetwood can deal with the vast complexities of his administration and make everyone happy. Human nature being what it is makes his task of appeasing or finding agreeable solutions for everyone or every faction impossible. I think one should not that he is an INSTRUMENT of the Board of Education — they make the decisions — he has the task and authority to carry them out. Perhaps they too should share any just or unjust criticisms.

The present administration inherited the most awesome and difficult problems that educators in the South have ever faced. Never before has an administration had to deal with the problems of schooling blacks and whites under the same roof and simultaneously cope with consolidation. Since the previous administration pursued the "separate but equal" philosophy, some people equate integration as Dr. Cleetwood's own personal philosophy and actually think a change in administrators would bring back a segregated situation. This is a fallacy, of course, since integration is the "law of the land" as handed down by the Supreme Court.

Let's hope the board will judge on job efficiency — not personality. The present school administration is moving. When one reads of other towns and their problems, we can see we are slowly emerging with progress for both races. I personally shudder to think of a new man who would lean toward the segregationist theory or be a staunch integrationist. Dr. Cleetwood appears to be a middle-of-the-road man, and this is what we need.

Many times the only vocal groups are the dissatisfied. We who are satisfied tend to sit back and reassure ourselves everything will work out for the best. Let's become vocal to our school board to maintain the present superintendent. Remember — a good school administrator is more vital to our children's welfare than a good "public relations man" or a "politician."

You, The Consumer, And The Coming Increase In Utility Rates

By GEORGE BRYANT, JR.

We ambled over to the offices of the Greenville Utilities Commission the other day to get some light on what this coming increase in power rates is going to mean to the consumer — the customer.

What we had in mind, actually, was to find out what it would do to us. Stories had been printed recently about how the local Utility would have to pay 9.24 percent more for the power it buys at wholesale. That's a good big number, even for today; and knowing something about how wholesale price boosts get increased at retail, we feared the worst.

Charles Horne, general Director of the Utilities Commission, had it all figured out for us. He had a run-down of our bills for last year, January through December, showing consumption for each month, along with the charges under the proposed new rates and the present rates.

The result was revealing and, you might say, something of a relief. Had the proposed rate schedule been in effect last year, the extra on our bills would have figured 3.6 percent.

That was something of a relief. Actually when you think about how the prices of just about everything else have been reaching for the sky during the past few years, the 3.6 percent increase seemed on the modest side.

Horne was quick to caution against drawing too long a bow on the basis of that figure. He noted that our bill may not be typical at all and the increase certainly would not indicate an average. What's more, he said, if all bills were figured the same way and an average struck, it probably would be highly misleading.

The difficulty, Horne said, is that the amount of a bill isn't determined just by the power consumed during the month. The result is that a user can pay more during the hot months than during the November-June period for the same amount of power.

As for the range of increase, Horne gave a spread of from nearly nothing to around 20 percent, depending on individual use. The new rates will have the greatest impact at the lower end of the use scale. In fact, the minimum monthly charge will jump from $1.50 to $3. Horne justifies this on the basis of the costs of simply providing service, regardless of the use.

On the other end of the use scale, some homes may get no increase at all on a yearly basis. They might even get a cut below present rates. But this would occur only in cases where large amounts of power are used in the cold months, say for heating.

The cause for the coming rate increase is the inflation which has swept the land for the past several years. Only a few years back, the trend in power rates was down. This has been reversed by the huge rises in costs of fuels used for power generation, along with the rising cost of power equipment and labor.

The last rate increase for customers of the Greenville Utilities Commission was about 20-years back. Horne recalled, wistfully, that the rate schedule was redrawn a decade ago to provide a cut in rates.

Horne expects the new rate schedules to go into effect within the next 60-days or so. The time depends on when the regulatory agencies approve the new rate increases proposed by Virginia Electric and Power Company, which supplies all power to the local utility system.

The local rates will be identical to the rates VEPCO charges its customers — residential, commercial and industrial. Horne said this was done for a number of reasons, including the fact that there is a close similarity between VEPCO's load distribution by months as well as types of customers.

For one thing, he said, the VEPCO schedule will provide a better balance between the peak season — the hot months — and the off season. System costs, overall are determined largely by provisions made to care for peak demand.

Also, there will be a more realistic relationship between rates charged residential users and those charged other consumers. The present rate schedule favors the non-residential user.

On the revenue side, the VEPCO schedule will swell local receipts beyond the amount needed to merely offset the 9.24 percent increase in the wholesale power cost. However, Horne doesn't see this as producing any important increase in profits. It will be offset, he said, by the higher equipment and labor costs hitting the system.

Then, Horne chuckled, it will settle the question of whether we charge our residential users more than VEPCO.

Hitchhiker's Tips For Young People On The Road

EDITOR'S NOTE: Most authorities—and practically all parents—issue stern warnings against hitchhiking and its perils. But the warnings haven't stopped thousands of young people, hippie types and otherwise, from taking to the nation's highways as a mode of cheap travel. Spring and summer bring them out in great droves.

This article is published for those who, despite warnings, are now on the road, or planning to be in coming weeks or months. The writer is himself a veteran of the road and speaks from experience. He is 28 years old, a Navy veteran, has had two years of college and, as he puts it himself, sports "fairly long hair." Having long hair, as he notes in his article, can of itself be one of the perils a hitchhiker faces.

By DALE R. ARCHIBALD
Written for United Press International
It's spring, and the travel bug that has been hibernating all winter in the soles of your feet starts tickling like mad.
You're short on money, but you'll hitch. After all, you've never been hassled. Besides, you're cool enough to handle anything that comes up, right? That's a decision more and more young people are making every year, despite all the warnings. The warnings are valid. You probably know that. But it's a cheap way to travel, there's excitement in being on your own—and who pays attention to the 'establishment' anyhow?

Well, if I can't persuade you not to try it, I can perhaps give some tips that I hope may make it easier (and safer) for you.
Most important: Never travel alone. Have a good partner along, one who isn't a complainer, who's self-sufficient. And always work as a team.

Money Tips
Start out with some money, and carry most of it in traveler's checks. A personal or business check is often impossible to cash, and if you need the music on a weekend, when banks aren't open, or you come into a small town, broke, after the banks close... you have a problem. Also, leave some money at home, and if needed, have it wired via Western Union. Sometimes the local traveler's aid will even give you a dollar or two (but don't count on it).

The more identification you have, the better. A driver's license, draft card, Social Security card, letter from your parents, etc. Here again, traveler's aid will sometimes give you and I.D. of some kind.
Carry some kind of back pack, rather than a suitcase. You won't need to be too conscious of weight, unless you plan to camp out or walk a lot. In towns, you can rent lockers at bus terminals, or the Y, and leave most of it there.
Army surplus ponchos are worth their weight in gold. Singly, they give you protection against rain or snow, or they can be used as a groundcloth. Two of them, snapped together, can be set up as a tent (although it's a good idea to carry some light nylon line to be used with the ponchos).
Another item that's worthwhile carrying is some emergency food. One good one is a combination of peanuts and raisins. It's cheap, nutritious, and very filling.
Wear good, heavy shoes or boots, with a lighter pair in your pack.
Marketable Talent
If you have any kind of marketable talent, such as painting, drawing, or carving, you may be able to sell some of your work to keep going. It's better than panhandling.

So, you're ready to start. Try to plan your trip so that you have plenty of time. Try to get into cities early, so that by checking at the colleges and universities, or at the switchboards and head shops, you can find a free place to sleep (and often eat). Sororities and fraternities, churches, missions, convents, jails; all are a pretty fair bet. Don't travel at night unless you absolutely must, but never on Friday or Saturday nights, late, when people are boozed up.
Stay out of strange bars, and bad areas of town. If you ask, often a driver will go out of his way to drop you in a safer place. However, if you get stranded in a bad area, late, be friendly, but cool, and get out fast.
Some other tips are: Always be friendly; always turn the other cheek; keep your sense of humor; always be properly grateful, and nevery pushy.
Stay on the main roads. Interstates are the best bets for distance, but stay on the on-ramps. You'll get arrested if you venture onto the interstate yourself. Let whoever's the better talker sit in front (the conversation's your payment for the ride); don't argue with the driver about anything; don't get into a car if you're at all suspicious, as when it comes back a second time, or the driver acts strange or drunk; VW drivers have a reputation among young hikers as being the most stable drivers (not, though, necessarily the best drivers); have a sign, if possible; never travel in more than twos.

Personal Tips
The following is from rumor and observation, but here it is, for what it's worth:
The West: Pretty safe. At least the majority of people aren't overtly hostile. Don't go on the freeways in California.
The Midwest: There's a rumor that a longhair got badly cut up in a bar in Rapid City, S.D.; that bars in Wyoming give free drinks for a longhair's scalp, and that Kansas City, Mo., is definitely a city not to be caught grubbing in.
Mountain states: There is no hitchhiking in Colorado. You could get 10 days for the first offense. Also, if a driver stops for you, he can be fined.
The Southwest: There is a rumor that Flagstaff, Ariz.,

Pennsylvania Job Is Taxable

happen, you might be able to handle it. Keep your eyes and your mind open. You'll meet some nice people, and see some sights from a different angle. As, for instance, Mason City, Iowa's Greek-columned bath-rooms in their downtown park. They double as fall-out shelters.
You'll meet 40-year-old hippies, salesmen, artists, freaks and straight people. The majority of them will be nice, friendly people, but not all of them—and it's the unfriendly ones you've got to look out for.

Work Clothes Make The Scene

NEW YORK (UPI)—Work clothes are "making the youth scene" in a big way with boys and girls. By far the biggest sellers are the ever-present blue jeans, once the uniform of the working man and the cowboy. Jeans now come in a variety of stripes and patterns. Blue denim jackets and bib overalls also are "in" items with youth.
Corduroy and twill, two other materials long associated with the working man, are enjoying a resurgence of popularity among the younger set, says Meinhard-Commercial Corporation, a factoring and financing firm. Tough-looking, heavy-soled work shoes also are popular.

Message Of Masada Runs Deep In Israel's Soldiers

By THOMAS CHEATHAM MASADA, Israel (UPI)—On this rock mountain fortress nearly 1900 years ago, 960 Jewish zealots are said to have committed mass suicide rather than surrender to a besieging enemy army—the Roman 10th Legion.

The year was 73 A.D. but the symbolism of Masada still runs deep in Israel today.

Trainees for the Israeli army's armored corps climb 1,000 feet to the top, above the jagged mountains and arid plains of the Judean desert, to take their induction oath under banners proclaiming: "Masada shall not fall again!"

Modern Zealots
They are the latter day zealots, these young men, and the pennants they unfurl carry not only their pledge but also that of a nation carved out of desert by soldiers and farmers alike.

So deeply does the idea run in the collective Israeli mind that, in 1942, as the Nazis approached what was then Palestine, the Jewish leadership came up with a plan, never needed, for a retreat to the Mediterranean coast near Haifa for a Masada-like fight to the end.

Israel has an abundance of military secrets and a plan for a modern day last stand is one of them.

"Masada serves as a reminder to the Israelis of today of what their predecessors 2,000 years ago were," a tour guide says. "It is a symbol to the Jewish people of what they were and what they weren't 25 years ago" in Europe.

The 600-yard by 300-yard plateau, with grand canyon-like cliffs dropping away on all sides, holds the remnants of a spectacular fortress King Herod built in 40 B.C., including baths floored with deep blue, green and yellow mosaics intact even now.

"After you get up here, you need a bath," remarks a tourist lady from the United States ascending to the top in a just-completed cable car. The mercury hits 120 in the summer sun; a cool bath would be just the thing.

Two Dangers
Historical accounts report Herod fled to Masada to prepare his fortress as a refuge in time of need against two dangers—one, that the Jewish people might depose him and, more important to Herod, Queen Cleopatra of Egypt.

A wall was built around the plateau, approachable only by three winding paths up the mountainside, and 37 watchtowers of stone afforded lookouts a commanding view of the Dead Sea and the desert. No army could approach unseen.

Herod carved a palace retreat into the northern precipice and had his swimming pools, cool underground shelters and cisterns the size of 30-foot-high basketball courts to hold water brought up following flash floods on the desert floor.

Much of this fortress—the pools, the palace, the store-rooms, the villas, the quarry that yielded the rock for the walls, the baths—has been unearthed by a team of archaeologists headed by Yigal Yadin, a former chief of staff of the Israeli army.

The same dry air that helped keep the ruins intact served also to preserve some of the food Herod left behind, so that in 70 A.D., when the zealots arrived from Jerusalem in flight from Titus' Roman armies, they are said to have used his stores to feed themselves.

Scornful of Herod's luxuries, the zealots built ramshackle hovels of stone for themselves, some of them covering the mosaic floors, and set up primitive housekeeping in rooms whose ruins measure no more than six feet by six.

Final End

Two years after Titus had captured Jerusalem and destroyed the second temple, he dispatched his procurator, Silva, and the 10th Roman Legion to finish off the zealots and put a final end to the Jewish revolt.

With 10,000 soldiers and another 15,000 Jews for slave labor, Silva built a stone wall around the base of Masada interlocking his eight camps—you can see the remnants from the top today—and began building a dam-like earthen approach to the top from a nearby hill.

For months after the completion of what is now described as the "Roman ramp" the besieging army tried in vain to breach the walls.

Then the defenses began to weaken. With battering rams, the Romans punctured the stone wall only to find a second wall, improvised of wood, cloth, anything the zealots could find. The Romans set it afire and retreated down the mountainside, resolved to take Masada the next day.

Mass Suicide

Josephus Flavius writes that during the night the zealots—men, women and children—decided to commit mass suicide rather than submit to the Romans. The zealot leader, Eliezer Ben Yair, is said to have told his men:

"Let our wives die unabused, our children without knowledge of slavery. After that, let us do each other an ungrudging kindness, preserving our freedom as a glorious winding-sheet."

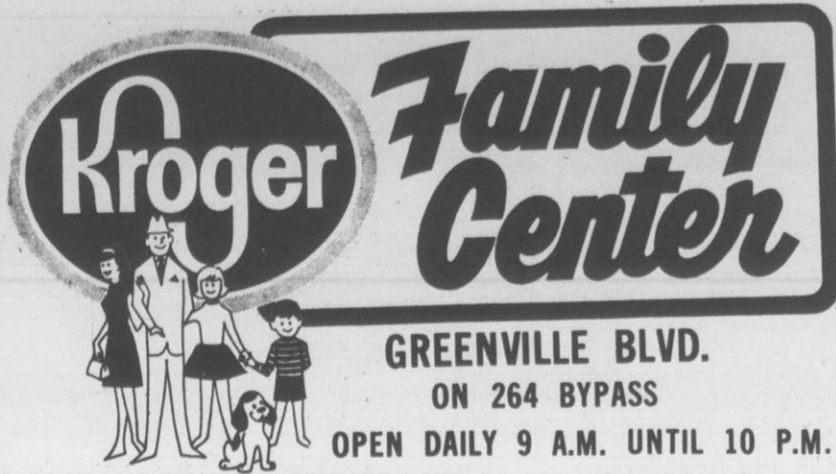

It was done. The zealots burned all their belongings but left the food behind to show they died not of want but had chosen death over slavery.

In the morning the Romans approached and gave the call, traditional at the time, for the beginning of the day's hostilities. Only silence greeted them. Then they found the bodies.

Two women and three children who had hidden in caves to escape death related what had happened.

Modern excavators have uncovered three skeletons at Masada, of a man, woman and child. They are buried today at the foot of the cliff under a marker reading, "Here lie the soldiers who defended Masada."

Plan Annual Exhibit Here

The Third Annual Business and Industrial Exhibit, sponsored by the Pitt County Schools Job Placement Service, will be held April 27-29 at the Greenville Moose Lodge. Businesses and industries in the area will participate to promote occupational "awareness" for the high school students of Pitt County and Greenville City Schools.

Approximately 25 companies will provide visual displays on the job opportunities in their organizations for the 2,000 students expected to attend. Hours for the exhibit are from 9 a. m. until noon and 1 p. m. to 3 p. m. with displays slated for noon to 3 p. m. on April 27.

Organizations interested in participating may contact Carl Toot of Greenville.

Writers' Club Meets Tuesday

The second April meeting of the Greenville Writers Club is being held at the home of Mrs. John (Betty) Casey, 204 Lewis Street, Greenville on Tuesday night beginning at 8:00 p.m.

The informal group, formed a year ago, is open to anyone interested in writing—whether articles, plays, novels, short stories or other forms of creative writing. Would-be writers are also invited to attend and to listen to the discussion and criticism of works written by members. No fees are involved.

Several writers attending the meetings have had works published following their original reading at these meetings.

Women's Lib Is Priced Out

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (UPI)—The Grant Grill, an exclusive restaurant at the U.S. Grant Hotel, but for men only until 3 p.m., has withstood the Women's Lib movement with little trouble.

On several occasions small groups of Lib members have attempted to enter for lunch. They were admitted.

Most didn't return. Apparently the majority of women having lunch in downtown San Diego don't think too highly of paying $2.20 for a hamburger or 50 cents for a cup of coffee.

Hemophilia Has Made Gordon A Fighter

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer
FARMVILLE — The difficult decisions that confront any high school senior are complicated and made vastly more important for Gordon Edwards because he is a hemophiliac. The 17-year-old Farmville High School student is bothered by frequent bouts with bleeding in his joints. And he and those who love him must live with the knowledge that any accident could mean his death by loss of blood. Hemophilia is a hereditary condition characterized by reduced ability of the blood to clot and consequent difficulty in controlling hemorrhage.

"His father and I have tried to impress on Gordon all his life," said his mother, Mrs. Noah Edwards of Route 1, Greenville. "that he has to get a good education. He will always have a tremendous handicap to overcome, but he is blessed with a powerful mind and a good disposition that makes overcoming it possible."

"This has been an extremely bad year for him, though. September 30 he fell down some steps at school and his knee has been hemorrhaging ever since. He said his knee, which had been fairly stiff for some time, just gave way in the middle of a flight of stairs."

Gordon transferred to Farmville High School only this year from Winterville after school redistricting took place in Pitt County. He excels in math and science, but does well in his other subjects, too.

"I admire this boy so much," said his physics teacher, Mrs. Lurline Wheless. "Adjusting to a new school is always difficult, especially for a senior, but Gordon became part of the crowd here right away. He is a superior student. If he could come to school regularly, he'd make all A's with ease, I think. He does well even though he has to be absent for days and sometimes weeks at a time when he's hemorrhaging. I have the feeling he's soaking in every word that he hears on class and he undoubtedly has good study habits, also.

"But what I admire most about him is his spirit," Mrs. Wheless continued. "When he comes back to school after days of struggle with excruciating pain, you'd think he'd just been out with a bad cold. He may be bruised and crippled, but he's laughing and joking and as mischievous as his friends. And he doesn't allow anyone to coddle him. He's a credit to himself and to his parents. I've never met them, but they obviously have not spoiled and overprotected him as would be the natural tendency of any parent of a child with such a serious health problem as hemophilia."

A Battle With Selves

"Yes," Mrs. Edwards said, "Gordon's father and I have had to struggle with ourselves to keep from overprotecting him. From the time we brought him home from the hospital, we realized that he bruised at the slightest touch. Of course, while he was an infant, we tried to shield him. But as he started walking, he got some bumps and every one caused him to hemorrhage under the skin. By this time his condition had been diagnosed at Duke, but the only treatment then was the giving of normal whole blood until enough of the clotting element was built up to make the bleeding subside."

"It was when Gordon was about three that I really had to come to grips with myself and realize that if I attempted to shield him from every possible accident that he could not grow up as a normal boy. Our getting him a tricycle was a turning point for us."

"Of course, we had to tell him early the danger he faced daily. I could not help but say, 'Son, you know what would happen if you fell,' when I saw him climbing onto the top of a woodshed here on the place. 'I'm not going to fall, Mom,' he said, but he relieved me by coming down."

"We have really been fortunate that he has not had any more breaks in the skin than he has, though. Two that meant weeks of bleeding were when he fell from the kitchen table and cut his lip when he was a toddler and when, as a first grader, he fell from monkey bars at school, cutting a gash in the back of his head."

Must Have Plasma

The pain Gordon experiences when is hemorrhaging is caused by pressure which builds up due to the volume of blood that seeps into his joints. At the beginning of each bleeding session, he goes to Pitt Memorial Hospital, where he is given plasma. The clotting agent of normal blood is contained in the plasma. It is this anti-hemophiliac factor that Gordon's blood lacks.

It was only three years ago that he started getting plasma. Prior to this he was given whole blood. The giving of the plasma has lessened the pain caused by pressure and shortened the length of his hemorrhaging sessions somewhat, since it obviously takes fewer units of plasma to build up enough AHF (anti-hemophiliac factor) to stop bleeding than it did with the whole blood.

Several times during his life, Gordon has had to be a patient at N. C. Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill. Once was when he had to have a tooth pulled, a major operation for a hemophiliac since bleeding is a part of any extraction. His dentist there was Dr. William Webster, a member of the medical advisory council of the National Hemophiliac Association and president of the North Carolina chapter. "Gordon is one of about 400 hemophiliacs in North Carolina," he said. Persons having the condition are not so unusual as they used to be, probably because many more than ever before are living to get grown and have families."

"Yes," said Gordon's mother, "we learned when Gordon was a baby that the life expectancy of a hemophiliac was seven years. If you don't think that bit of information hurt..."

Mrs. Edwards said, "The strange thing about Gordon's case and the fact that made it difficult for us to believe that he had the condition was that no one in my family has ever been known to have it. We had always heard that hemophilia was an inherited condition experienced by males, but transmitted from generation to generation by females. Experts from Chapel Hill have searched my family tree and have found no instance of the condition. And I am one of seven sisters and among us, we have 18 boys, yet neither Gordon's brother nor any of his cousins have the condition."

A Probable Mutation

"The cropping up of this condition in Gordon is almost certainly a mutation," Dr. Webster said. "However, such a mutation is not so rare. It is now estimated that about 20 per cent of all cases of true hemophilia are mutations. Over the years there would have had to be a high degree of mutation-caused hemophilia or the condition probably would no longer exist, since most of the boys who had it up until just the past few years did not live long enough to father children."

"Whether the mutation is in the genes of the mother or the son may not be known, but it can be passed on down from then on. Several of Queen Victoria's sons and grandsons had hemophilia. The mutation was believed to be in her.

"The present and the future for hemophiliacs is not nearly so bleak as the past has been, however," he commented. "There have been many new developments for them just lately. Two now being administered at Memorial Hospital are Cryoprecipitate, a synthetic concentrated clotting element, and Hemofil, a concentrate for the same purpose developed from normal blood. These and other blood coagulation developments being worked on now should mean extended life and greater freedom from pain for Gordon and other hemophiliacs."

As for Gordon's immediate future — he is preparing to enter college next year if he has no more setbacks that would keep him from graduating this year. He has already been approved for assistance from the North Carolina Division of Vocational Rehabilitation.

"We are grateful for this help," Mrs. Edwards said. "Gordon wants to go to college and he should in order to use his ability and prepare himself for the future. But it would be difficult for his daddy and me to send him. Since there's no such thing as getting medical insurance coverage for a hemophiliac, our medical expenses for him have kept us from accumulating much, even for our children's educations."

"We are thankful for our blessings though — thankful that Gordon is living at a time when hemophilia is being conquered and thankful that our four-year-old son, Chris, has no sign of the condition."

She'll Be The First Woman To Conquer Everest

By ANN GREGORY
GENEVA (WNS) — Yvette Vaucher, Switzerland's most indomitable female mountain climber, is headed for base camp for the ascent of Mount Everest, along with 27 other climbers, all men, and 400 porters carrying 30 tons of supplies. She is determined to be the first woman ever to reach the top of the world's highest mountain.

In an interview before her departure, elegantly mid-skirted and booted while pouring tea in her apartment, this tall, slender woman didn't look like the stuff mountain climbers are made of. But both she and husband Michel, who is also in this first international team to attack Mount Everest, are well-known in Alpine circles.

The year she met Michel at an alpine club banquet, in 1962, Yvette joined him on a perilous jaunt up the north face of the Eiger. Though bad weather turned them back just 200 meters from the summit, they were still the first to return alive from that height on the peak which Swiss guides — with all too many reasons — call "The Killer."

They tackled the north face of the Matterhorn in 1965 and scaled the Sahara's Mount Hoggar in 1966.

But this biggest of the climbs has long held a particular fascination for Madame Vaucher. Michel climbed one of the Himalayan peaks, the Dhaulagiri, in 1960 — "before he met me or I would have been there," says his wife — and his souvenir Nepalese masks adorn the walls of the Vaucher living room.

The current expedition of 12 nationalities — American, English, French, Italian, Polish, Indian, Nepalese, German, Austrian, Japanese, Norwegian and Swiss — is making the overland 200-mile, 4-week trek from the rendezvous in Katmandu to the lower based camp at 17,500 feet, a "leisurely" walk which is supposed to acclimatize the group for the real perils, which begin as they leave "advance" base at 21,000 feet. Here they will split into two teams to attack the most difficult of the routes to the summit of summits, the Direct Route and the West Ridge Route, each group descending by the other's climbing route.

The easiest and least dangerous route runs through Red Chinese-ruled Tibet, so there wasn't much chance of this international group taking the easy way up even had they wanted to.

But the danger begins even before the difficult climbing

The way from lower base to advance base camp takes them through the Khumbu Ice Fall, a rock-laden glacier always on the move, which has flung its killer ice walls and rocks onto many a mountain climber. For this kind of danger, climbing skill is useless; it's all pure chance.

What's a woman doing in this game? Isn't Yvette a bit skittish? "But no; everyone asks that and I don't understand them. One can't be afraid of something one doesn't know. You can have other emotions — you can be excited, eager, filled with curiosity (which I am) but how can you fear something you have never known or someplace you have never been?"

There are those of us who do indeed have a certain fear of the unknown and one suspects that the reason Yvette isn't afraid is that she does know and love the mountains and this is just the biggest — and therefore the most wondrous — of them all.

At any rate, she is most articulate about the "why" of mountain climbing, which most men seem not to be.

Away From Humdrum

"Why do I climb? What do I love about it? It's that exhilarating feeling of being far away from it all — away from all the petty annoyances of everyday life. They just don't exist up there."

For Yvette Vaucher there are many reasons for going higher and higher. "One relearns about things one has learned and appreciates them anew in a wonderful way — hot water and fire after the bitter cold, food and drink when you are really hungry and thirsty, rest when you are physically exhausted, the heavy richness of natural beauty, and the intense satisfaction of making a great physical effort. All this — and the silence."

"Next best" things to mountain climbing are skiing and parachute jumping, according to the intrepid Yvette, who has skied ever since she can remember and who has 104 jumps on her record. "But that wonderful feeling of being far from the everyday world and that wonderful silence are only momentary in jumping," she says. So when she married and settled down in Geneva, she returned to climbing.

Geneva's mountain, the Saleve, just across the border in French territory, is one of Europe's most famous training grounds for climbers. It is said to have all the physical situations a climber must cope with — except glaciers. And here the Vauchers can go for just a half-day climb if they like, and only ten minutes from the city.

Gallantry

How do the men of the mountains treat you when you are the only woman in their midst — like a woman, or simply like a person? Yvette's retort was quick: "Well, I certainly wouldn't want to be treated like a man!"

She carries her pack and she shares the work, but there are gallant little gestures from her male companions which are accepted with very feminine appreciation — such "little things" as heating the coffee water and making breakfast while she gets a few extra winks or a couple of minutes to apply "at least lipstick and eye makeup — they're essentials even at the summit."

On the other hand, Yvette considers herself responsible for such womanly tasks as sewing loose buttons on shirts — and she doesn't have to be asked twice to do her chores, she says.

But, she says, it's nice to know that the leader of the Everest expedition, Norman Dyhrenfurth, is a good cook. For the Swiss-American organizer from Aspen, Colorado, this is a second go at Everest. It is said he gets his love of the mountains from his Swiss heritage and his fund-raising abilities from his Americanization. He put the latter to good use for the Everest expedition which is costing a cool $215,000.

All in all, over 3,000 different items of climbing, camping and scientific equipment — from safety pins to TV cameras — were either purchased or donated.

Special equipment for the entire team includes such items as shoes with two thicknesses of felt lining made to order for each climber, huge umbrellas for protection against the enormous leeches which fall from the sub-tropical forest growth along the approach route to the lowerbase camp, and 85 feet of rubber tubing for the oxygen masks which all climbers will wear while sleeping after they pass 24,000 feet altitude.

If women make as good climbers as men — and Michel agrees with his favorite climbing companion that they do — their presence does change a few things on an expedition such as this one. As Yvette points out with a trace of amusement, the 27 men are required to wear swimming trunks when they

Girl Defends Long Hair

By Abigail Van Buren

(© 1971 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: You recently wrote that there is more fighting going on in the average American home because of hair than anything else.

I am a girl, 19, and I want to know why adults are so quick to judge a person by his outward appearance? If a boy has long hair he is taken for a hippie, radical, pot smoker, homosexual or freak. Why?

It makes me sad that outward appearances mean everything to adults. They don't bother to look at a person and see beyond his hair or his dress. They don't care what's on the inside.

Why can't adults forget what a person looks like, Abby, and judge him for what he is? They'd get to know a lot more beautiful people they now pass up because they look like trash.

SPEAKING FOR MANY

DEAR SPEAKING: I agree, it's what a person is on the inside that's important. But we can't go around with X-ray eyes, bypassing appearances in order to look into a person's heart, soul and motivations. So, I ask you, why would a respectable girl want to get herself dressed up to look like a streetwalker? And why would a decent, productive young man want to look like a shiftless, unwashed, bushy-headed bum?

Long hair, if it's clean and cared for, doesn't offend me. But long, greasy, neglected hair on men or women—young or old—does.

A person may be immaculately clean, but if he looks dirty, I don't want him serving me in a restaurant. And I haven't the time to give him a physical.

True, perhaps we are missing out on meeting a lot of beautiful people because they look like trash. But who wants to pick thru what looks like trash in order to meet beautiful people?

Somewhere there should be a happy medium. And the I respect a person's right to comb his hair and dress the way he wishes, if he gets himself dressed up to look like he's going to a costume party, he shouldn't feel that society is picking on him if somebody laughs.

DEAR ABBY: Many pregnant, unmarried girls have never heard of Florence Crittenton Services. We offer girls a place to live with other girls who share the same problems. We give them good medical care, an opportunity to continue their education, plus other services the expectant mother may need. We charge according to how much the girl and her family can pay.

The girl may either live in one of our 48 homes around the country, or she may decide to live in her own home, but accept some of the services we offer. She may keep her baby or give it up. The decision is hers and there is no pressure.

Please, Abby, tell girls who need our help to look for Florence Crittenton Services in the white pages of their phone books, or write to our home office at 608 S. Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill. 60605.

MARY W. PALMER

DEAR MARY: I have long been acquainted with your fine services and have recommended Florence Crittenton to hundreds of girls without hesitation, but another boost won't hurt.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the woman who said her husband never gives her children compliments, only criticism, prompts this letter.

My father is the same way. But we know he loves us. His idea of a compliment is, "Well, it's about time you did something right, dummy!"

A father shows his love just by feeding and clothing his family and working hard to give them the best. My father came from a strict European family who never said much and never showed much affection. I know it's hard for dad to say, "I love you." He has only said it twice to me. Once when he whipped me for something and found out later I didn't do it. And the other time was on the telephone when I was 2,000 miles away, and homesick, and I said, "I love you," first.

No matter what my father says, or doesn't say, I know he loves me.

There are special considerations — Yvette doesn't think of them as "problems" — which a woman must make for such a trip. But then, too, there were those who donated things especially for her. A Swiss cosmetics firm provided her with a good supply of facial creams to fight 95-mile-an-hour high-altitude winds blowing at temperatures 50 to 60 degrees (F.) below zero. And one thoughtful donor provided several hundred pairs of throwaway undies — to be strewn along the trail half-way to heaven?

Each climber is allowed to take along something special, some personal possession, as a good luck amulet. For Yvette this a very special piton — "pick" to the uninitiated — which was custom-made for her and has a colorful, carved handle. Hopefully, it will become a cherished souvenir of the first woman to conquer the mightiest of mountains.

No Religious Animositities In Irish Republic

Pat Thomas

HARMONY — In the Irish Republic, Protestants and Catholics live in harmony. At top is the Protestant Darwell family in Dublin; below, a couple of miles away in a residential area of Churchtown, the Catholic Byrne family. (UPI Telephoto)

By DONAL O'HIGGINS
DUBLIN (UPI)—In Northern Ireland, hatred between Protestants and Catholics has made the streets run with blood. Here in the Irish Republic—"The South"—Protestants and Catholics live together in harmony. In the North, the Catholics are the minority, seeking equalities they claim are denied them by the majority Protestants. In the Irish Republic it is the Protestants who are vastly outnumbered—they totaled less than five per cent of the population in the last census, about 130,000.

Here in the Republic, Protestant and Roman Catholic housewives shop in the same markets, their husbands drink in the same bars, their kids play in the same parks—and they babysit for each other at church time.

"We never think about our neighbors as being any different from ourselves," said Mrs. Phyllis Deverell, a Protestant housewife who lives with her husband, Bill, and their three children in the Dublin suburb of Rathgar.

Two Groups Friendly
"They treat us exactly as they treat each other," said Mrs. Deverell, who is the only Protestant housewife on their road. "They could not be nicer to us."

She said her three sons—William, 9, David, 7, and Morris, 3,—were never conscious of being in any way different from the neighbor kids playing street football outside their door.

"Our children never knew there was any such thing as two religions until they heard about the trouble in Northern Ireland on the radio," Mrs. Deverell said. "They still don't really know about it because we don't talk about it at home."

The Deverells live in a neat, two-story red brick house at 10 Brighton Square, about ten minutes by bus from the city center.

Sitting in his small, comfortably furnished front parlor, with its soft rocking-chairs and well-polished piano, Bill Deverell described himself as a "typical middle-class Irishman."

Outside the door was his 8 H.P. Morris Minor in which he drives to his job with a building supplies firm in the city.

"For many years I have lived with and worked with Catholics," he said. "And not alone are they my best friends, but I trust them. I have had the greatest comfort living amongst them."

The Deverells don't have a television set—"we prefer to listen to the radio, or to read or just to sit and talk"—but when there is something special on, they slip next door to their Catholic neighbors to watch it.

"On Sundays when they're going to Mass they sometimes leave the little ones with us," Mrs. Deverell said, "and when we go to church they will stay with Morris."

The Deverells don't identify themselves with the two-thirds

Protestants Unified
"They have a district of the Republic and of everyone who lives here," Mrs. Deverell said.

"I went to school in Belfast, but because I was from the Republic and although I was of the same religion, I just was not one of them."

The two older Deverell boys go to a Protestant school in the neighborhood. When they have finished their primary course they probably will go to one of the 44 Protestant secondary schools in the Republic.

"After school they play around with the other kids here and no one seems to notice anything different," Deverell said.

Deverell said separate schools and the church with its social connections and organized functions, did tend to keep the Protestant community together as a unit.

"This is not deliberate," he said. "It is just an inevitable consequence of different faiths. If it were allowed to set the pattern of our lives we would feel isolated, but that is not the way it is."

"It is no bar to friendship and trust—something we have with our Catholic neighbors."

The Deverells, both in their 30s, saw one area of community relations which presented difficulties.

"The question of mixed marriages has always been a problem," they said. "Parents on either side are not keen to see their children strike up a relationship that might lead to marriage — something both churches frown upon."

"It is a pity," Mrs. Deverell said, "but I don't see any answer to the problem yet."

"If one does not consider himself different from the rest of the community, I don't see why this should worry him," Deverell said. "As far as I am concerned we are all Irishmen."

Protestant Group Small
They see no easy solution for the troubles in Northern Ireland. "Differences are deep-rooted. Hatred has become a way of life. We can thank God such feelings don't exist down here," Deverell said.

Do Protestants in the Republic fear sectarian strife in Northern Ireland may some day spill across the border?

"Good heavens, no," the Deverells said. "It could never happen here."

The words of the Deverells found an echo in Churchtown, a middle-class residential area a couple of miles away, where Joe Byrne, a Roman Catholic electrician, and his family live.

"Oh, no," Byrne said. "Things are utterly different in the South. Firstly, the Protestant minority is too small, too scattered, and, secondly, our relationship with them has always been too friendly to permit sectarian strife."

Good Neighbors
Byrne, in his early 50s, lives in a two-story, terraced house with his wife, Marian, and two daughters—Pauline, 18, and Siobhain, 14. Two other daughters, Patricia, 21, and Maura,

Singapore Trims The Longhairs

SINGAPORE (UPI)—The Singapore armed forces frown on longhairs. They have launched "Operation Snip" to force servicemen to trim long and unkempt hair.

About 160 youths were detained by military police for "unbecoming appearance and behavior" in public buses. Most of them agreed to have their hair cut.

23, are working away from home.

His home is similar to, but slightly smaller than, the Deverells', but equally well equipped with electrical gadgets and labor-saving devices.

When he moved in 12 years ago, Byrne's house cost about $7,000, about the same figure as the Deverells' paid. Both could expect around $14,000, if they put them on the market now.

Byrne's next door neighbor is a Protestant, one of a cluster that has settled in around the Churchtown area.

"We have always been very friendly," Byrne said. "We treat them no differently to our Catholic neighbors on the other side."

Byrne agreed that the Protestant community was not completely integrated with the Catholic community in the Republic, and like the Deverells said the main reason was the animosity of intermarriage. Other reasons were the existence of separate schools and a social life centered around their own church.

His daughter, 18-year-old Pauline, blamed "old-fashioned" Protestant parents for keeping a marriage barrier between the communities.

"I pal around with Protestants just like I would pal around with anyone else," she said. "But their parents don't like their children going out with Catholics. My Protestant girlfriends never bring their Catholic boyfriends home—they know their parents would not stand for it."

"It would be just the same for me or any other Catholic, our parents would not like it, because of the fear of eventual marriage. That is the great barrier."

Despite parental frowns, the younger generation seem to be breaking down taboos, Siobhain, at 14, is a girl guide in an inter-denominational organization. Pauline used to be one.

Byrne works for the semi-state Electricity Supply Board (ESB) and drives a small Ford automobile. Before he was married he used to work in Northern Ireland. He spent two years in Londonderry during the last war working at the American naval base.

Differences Fading
"Even then," he said, "there were political stirrings among the Catholics." When he moved to Belfast, Byrne lived with a Protestant family off Sandy Row—one of the city's most militant areas.

"They used to roust me out of bed every Sunday morning and pack me off to early Mass," Byrne recalled. "I never heard a word of bitterness while I lived with them but, I guess, it must have been there."

Byrne believes Protestants and Catholics in the Republic are growing closer with the years.

"A lot of the old consciousness of differences is disappearing," he said. "This is especially true of the Catholic side. The changes flowing from the Vatican Council are having an effect."

Byrne noted that the township of Dundrum, a short distance from his house, has one of the largest Protestant communities in the city.

"But you will see no evidence of friction around there," he said. "Many of the shops are owned by Protestants, and that is where the Catholics shop. On the streets the boys kicking football are likely to be a mixer of both. None is likely to wonder which is which—least of all the kids themselves."

Running Backs Making Randle Smile

When runners like Billy Wallace and Les Strayhorn are in the same offensive backfield, an opposing coach knows immediately that he's got problems — big problems.

And big problems are not often easy to solve. Many coaches found that out last season when the two combined their talents and made up the offensive backfield for East Carolina University.

Well, the two had so much fun together wrecking opponent defenses last season they've decided to try again this spring.

That happens here Saturday, April 24, when the two team up for ECU's annual Purple-Gold football game in Ficklen Stadium. Game time is 2 p.m.

That game winds up spring drills for the Pirates and both Wallace and Strayhorn would like nothing better than giving Pirate fans enough excitement to last them until September 11, when ECU opens its 1971 football season against Toledo.

For the second straight year a new head coach will make his debut in the Purple-Gold game. This year Sonny Randle will be on the field for this first time as a head coach.

And, he will probably enjoy watching two runners like Wallace and Strayhorn display their talents.

Wallace, a senior, is the more experienced of the two. He was the team's leading rusher in 1970 and was second in Southern Conference statistics. He gained 902 yards on 210 carries, averaging 4.3 yards a carry.

Strayhorn, a junior, had a promising sophomore season despite playing only half the time because of an ankle injury. He carried the ball 120 times when he was healthy, gained 588 yards, and averaged almost five yards a carry.

Wallace is the stronger of the two while Strayhorn is the faster, but either could start in nearly any backfield in the country.

A 6-0, 195-pounder, Wallace has slimmed down 10 pounds from last season to help his speed and agility. The Edenton native already had good speed but he felt the loss of weight would help his speed in the 100. He runs it in 10.0.

Last season Wallace led the team in scoring with 54 points — eight touchdowns rushing and one receiving. He caught 12 passes on the year for 141 yards.

Strayhorn, at 5-10, 195, doubles as a trackman when not in a football uniform. His speed in the 100 is exceptional — 9.7 — and many opposing coaches felt he was every bit as fast in a football uniform.

The native of Trenton, seemed to have more fun against the supposedly tougher teams. In his first varsity appearance against Toledo last season, he carried the ball 17 times and covered 110 yards. Toledo led the nation in total defense the year before and had allowed only 83.8 yards and a game rushing. Despite Strayhorn's performance, Toledo led the nation again last season in total defense and allowed only 108 yards per game rushing.

If the two take up Saturday where they left off against Davidson — ECU's final game of 1970, then Randle would be wise to call in General Patton to stop the ground attack.

Against the Wildcats, Wallace had 166 yards on 26 carries while Strayhorn carried 24 times for 146 yards.

And, they were doing what they like to do best — destroy defenses.

It's no wonder opposing coaches hate big problems — especially when they're named Billy Wallace and Les Strayhorn.

Horton Powers Tigers To Win

DETROIT (AP) — Willie Horton, who earlier drove in five runs with a grand slam home run and solo shot, delivered the winning run in the 10th inning with a bases-loaded single as Detroit pulled out a wild and woolly 10-9 decision over Boston Saturday.

Horton's line drive to left field scored Tom Timmerman, who had walked to open the frame and went to third on an infield error. Ken Tatum then issued intentional walks to Al Kaline and Jim Northrup to set up Horton's two-out hit.

Run scoring singles by Carl Yastrzemski and George Scott highlighted a three-run outburst and Boston scored four more in the second on run scoring hits by Yastrzemski, Scott, Rico Petrocelli and Luis Aparacio to chase Detroit starter Mickey Lolich and take a 7-1 lead.

But the Tigers came back with five in the third as off Ray Culp Horton capped the rally with the fifth grand slam of his career.

After the Red Sox pulled into a 9-6 advantage with single runs in the fourth and sixth innings, Detroit came back to tie it in the seventh on consecutive homers by Jim Northrup, Norm Cash and Horton, who was batting only .158 at game time.

A Grand Slam For Horton

Willie Horton slammed a grand slam home run over the left field fence in the third inning of yesterday game with Boston, to help spark a rally that eventually gave the Tigers a 10-9 victory. Waiting to greet Horton are the three whom he drove in, Al Kaline, Norm Cash and Jim Northrup, along with umpire Larry McCoy. (AP Wirephoto)

Angels Ease By Minnesota, 4-3

By PAT THOMPSON Associated Press Sports Writer ST. PAUL-MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Gerry Moses slammed two home runs and Tony Conigliaro a third Saturday to power the California Angels over slumping Minnesota 4-3 and to their sixth straight victory.

The barrage by the former Boston players obtained in the off-season matched California's homer output in their previous 10 games and broke Twins' right-hander Bert Blyleven's streak of two shutout games.

Moses connected with a two-run homer in the second and a bases-empty clout in the seventh. Conigliaro sailed a Blyleven pitch just over the left field fence to lead off the fourth.

The Twins came back for single runs in the second on Leo Cardenas' sacrifice fly, in the fifth when Andy Messersmith walked four straight batters after two were out and on Harmon Killebrew's seventh inning fielder's choice.

The Twins, defending West Division champions, fell to their fifth straight loss.

Mays Helps Perry To Third Victory Of Year

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Willie Mays drove in three runs with a double and his fifth homer of the season Saturday, leading the San Francisco Giants past the Chicago Cubs 5-3 for their sixth straight victory.

A Bat Day crowd of 32,896 saw the Giants extend the winning string—their longest since August, 1969—as right-hander Gaylord Perry struggled to his third victory without a loss.

Rookie Chris Speier's single and Mays' 63rd career homer staked Perry to a 2-0 first inning lead.

The Cubs tied it on a two-run homer by J.C. Martin in the fifth, but Bobby Bonds' double and a run-scoring single by Speier sent the Giants ahead to stay in the bottom half, chasing left-hander Ken Holtzman, 0-3.

Doubles by Bonds and Mays gave the Giants another run in the seventh before the Cubs countered in the eighth on a triple by Don Kessinger and Glenn Beckert's sacrifice fly.

Perry's ground out in the last of the eighth delivered an insurance run for the Giants.

NEW YORK (AP) — Steve Blass pitched a five-hitter and Willie Stargell blasted his sixth home run of the young season as the Pittsburgh Pirates defeated the New York Mets 2-0 Saturday.

Blass struck out nine and worked out of several jams to earn his first victory of the season in a duel with Mets' left-hander Jerry Koosman, who gave up five hits before leaving for a pinch hitter in the eighth inning.

Stargell homered over the right field fence in the seventh for the Pirates' second run. They had taken a 1-0 lead in the fourth on Dave Cash's double, an infield hit by Gene Clines and a run-scoring single by Manny Sanguillen.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Orlando Cepeda, Hal King and rookie Earl Williams smacked seventh-inning home runs Saturday and Williams homered again in the ninth, carrying the Atlanta Braves to a 6-2 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Phils' starter Barry Lersch was working on a five-hitter and leading 1-0 when the Braves struck with their home run barrage in the seventh. Cepeda led off the inning with his third homer of the season and King followed with his first, giving the Braves the lead. One out later, Williams lashed his first major league homer.

Moore Second In Duke-Durham

DURHAM — Rose High School's Calvin Moore was the only area athlete to place in the Duke-Durham Relays here yesterday. Moore took second place in the long jump, leaping 22 feet, 9 1/2 inches. No other members of the Rose team placed in the meet.

By BOB GREEN Associated Press Golf Writer PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — Lanky Al Geiberger and Mason Rudolph, a pair of tour-tested veterans, moved past a faltering newcomer and into a share of the third-round lead in the $150,000 Monsanto Open Golf Tournament Saturday.

The pencil-slim Geiberger, a 12-year tour veteran and former PGA champion, had a four-under-par 67 and the paunchy Rudolph took a 69 to tie at 208.

That put them five under on the 6,679-yard Pensacola Country Club course and gave them a one-stroke lead over Larry Wood, who led or shared the lead for the first two days.

Wood, who joined the tour on a full-time basis only last year, three-putted from four feet on the 17th green for a bogey that dropped him back. He finished with a 73, two over par, for 209.

He was tied at that figure with defending champion Dick Lotz, Veteran Billy Maxwell, Gene Littler and former Masters champ George Archer.

Archer had a 68, Maxwell a 69 and Littler took a 71 in the warm, breezy weather.

Bob Murphy, 70, Homero Blancas, 71, and big Chris Blocker, 72, followed at 210.

Deane Beman, just five strokes away from the lead starting the third round, withdrew because of the death of his brother.

Two of the top names in the game continued to have their troubles on the tight, tree-lined layout by the Gulf of Mexico.

Billy Casper could manage only a par 71 for 217 while Lee Trevino, the 1970 leading money winner, took a 74 for 220. He had 40 on his back nine.

Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus, Gary Player, Masters champ Charles Coody and U.S. Open titleholder Tony Jacklin are not competing in this event sandwiched in between the Masters and the Tournament of Champions.

"It was just one of those things," said Wood, a longtime club pro. "I thought I made that first putt," he said of the bogey on 17, "then I missed the second one, strange things happen sometimes."

The paunchy, 36-year-old Rudolph, who snapped a lengthy slump with a victory in the Green Island Open late last year, had a chance to take the lead alone, but three-putted for a bogey on the final hole.

"Man, I just don't know," the Tennessean drawled. "That's three days in a row I've bogeyed that hole."

"But I'm playing well, hitting my irons well. And that's what you've got to do on this course."

He three-putted for both his bogeys, made birdie putts of 15 and 20 feet, hit a five iron less than half a foot from the flag on the 12th and stroked an eight iron to within five feet on another.

"Sixty-nine with 33 putts," he recounted. "That's pretty strong."

Geiberger hasn't won since his victory in the 1966 PGA Championship, but he too, said his play has improved greatly in recent months.

"I played pretty good in the PGA Championship," he said. "I didn't score too well, but I played well."

He birdied the second from 15 feet, knocked in short putts for consecutive birds on the fifth and sixth, wedged to one foot on the 10th and holes a 40-foot monster on the 16th.

His only bogey came on the 11th, where he missed on the green.

Expos Rally To Defeat Cincy

MONTREAL (AP) — Jim Fahey's two-run double in the sixth inning capped a three-run rally and gave the Montreal Expos a 3-2 victory over the Cincinnati Reds Saturday.

The Expos, held hitless for four innings by Gary Nolan, got their first two hits of the game in the fifth, then reached the right-hander for three runs in the sixth on singles by Ron Hunt and Rusty Staub, Bob Bailey's run-scoring ground out and Fahey's double.

The Reds took a 1-0 lead in the top of the third inning on a lead-off double by Pete Rose and Ernie Carbo's run-producing Winning pitcher Carl Morton, 1-2, sailed through eight innings with a seven-hit, no-walk performance until running into ninth inning trouble.

Mike Marshall came in to nip the Cincinnati rally after a single by Hal McRae, an infield out and another single by Woody Woodward produced the Reds' second run.

With men on first and second and one out, Marshall got Rose to hit into a double play.

Nolan lost his first decision of the year.

Ryun Wins Mile In Kansas Relays

By ROBERT L. MOORE Associated Press Sports Writer LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Record holder Jim Ryun, running the fastest mile in the world this year, won the Glenn Cunningham mile in the Kansas Relays Saturday in 3:55.8, a shade off the record of 3:54.7 he set in the event in 1967. Ryun, last in the early going, burst ahead of Nebraska's Greg Carberg after three-eighths of the distance and was never seriously threatened.

He finished about five yards ahead of Tom Van Ruden of the Pacific Coast Club, who was timed in 3:57.2.

Defending champion John Mason, also of the Pacific Coast Club, was third in 3:57.9. Then came John Lawson of the Pacific Coast Club at 4:01.2 and Carberg in 4:02.2.

Ryun, representing the Oregon Track Club, made a desperate bid to break his Cunningham record, blazing the last lap in 55.3. His earlier quarters were 61.2, 60.1 and 59.2.

Except for the first few yards, Carberg set the pace until he was overhauled by Ryun, former University of Kansas star who had won the Cunningham mile on three previous occasions.

North Pitt In Win Over Devils

BETHEL — North Pitt High School slipped past Farmville yesterday, 5-4.

The Panthers rallied from a 3-0 deficit to take the victory, their fourth in 10 starts this year.

Farmville started the scoring off in the second inning, pushing over three runs. Ben Joyner singled and Bobby Daniels got a hit. An error on the play allowed both runners to speed around and score, giving the Red Devils a 2-0 edge. Ed Wells then doubled, coming in with the third run on Cobb's single.

North Pitt began to rally in the bottom of the second scoring two runs. Steve Fuchs reached on an error and William Little walked. Teddy Abeyounis brought in both runners with a double. That cut the Farmville lead to 3-2.

But the Red Devils got one of them right back in the third inning. That came on a home run by Ronald Carraway, making it 4-2.

North Pitt shut the Red Devils off after that, and went to work themselves, scoring three to dart ahead in the fourth inning.

Fuchs, who hurled the win, helped his own cause with a leadoff homer to close the gap to 4-3. Little then doubled and Abeyounis got a hit. Charles Young singled, scoring Little with the tying run. Abeyounis, however, was cut down trying to put the Panthers into the lead. Linwood Brown solved things, however, getting a run-scoring single to bring Ryun around with the go-ahead run.

Abeyounis led the North Pitt hitting with two, while Cobb and Wells had two each for Farmville.

Maryland Rips Buc Stickmen

The Maryland Teraps, one of the top ranked lacrosse teams in the country, spanked the East Carolina University stickmen yesterday, rolling to a 22-2 victory.

The Buc had little change against the impressive Terps, who currently hold down fourth place in the nation in the lacrosse standings.

The lone Pirate goals came in the first half, as they scored once in each quarter. Bob Thornton put in the first, with an assist by Eric Schandemeier. The other came on a shot by Don McCorkle, assisted by Steve Barrow.

Maryland's scoring was led by Bob Cleaver with six goals and one assist, while Bill Demassey had five goals and one assist. The other scoring was spread out among a number of Terps.

East Carolina goalie Jim Frank was given a workout during the afternoon, and was credited with an incredible 26 goals. Coach John Lovstedt, awed by the Maryland power, said, "If he hadn't done so well, they really would have put it to us."

The Pirates host Randolph-Macon next Saturday.

Final score for Maryland vs East Carolina lacrosse game: Maryland 58 4 5-22, East Carolina 1 1 0 0-2.

Homers Lift KC Past Milwaukee

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Home runs by Ed Kirkpatrick and Amos Otis helped the Kansas City Royals build a four-run lead Saturday and they held off the Milwaukee Brewers 5-3.

Kirkpatrick sent the Royals ahead to stay with a bases-empty homer in the second inning and Otis homered in the ninth, giving them a 5-1 margin.

Dick Drago took a four-hitter into the bottom of the ninth, when Tommy Harper slapped a leadoff single, breaking out of an 0-for-19 slump at home. Mike Hegan followed with a triple and Dave May delivered a sacrifice fly.

When Danny Walton singled, Ted Abernathy replaced Drago and got the last two outs.

Fred Patek singled home one run and scored on Joe Keough's double in the Kansas City fifth. The Royals chased Milwaukee starter Marty Pattin in the eighth, scoring once on a bases-loaded single by Drago.

White Sox Snap Losing String

CHICAGO (AP) — Tom Bradley pitched a four-hitter and knocked in a run and battery-mate Ed Herrmann delivered a two-run double as the Chicago White Sox broke a seven-game losing streak with a 4-0 victory over Oakland Saturday.

The White Sox scored all the runs they needed in the second inning on Herrmann's two-out double and Bradley's pop single down the left field line.

Chicago added another run in the fifth when Lee Richard singled off the glove of losing pitcher Roland Fingers, 1-2, moved to second on a sacrifice, then scored when second baseman Dick Green caught Carlos May's line drive but threw into left field in an attempt to double up Richard.

Bradley 1-0 struck out 10. The only hit he gave up before Reggie Jackson shot a single to right with two out in the sixth was an infield single by Sal Bando in the second inning.

The loss snapped Oakland's five-game winning streak.

Senators Nip Indians By 5-3

CLEVELAND (AP) — Run-scoring singles by Tim Cullen and Curt Flood highlighted a four-run seventh inning that carried the Washington Senators to a 5-3 victory over the Cleveland Indians Saturday.

The rally wiped out a 2-1 Cleveland lead built on Ken Harrelson's two-run single in the fourth.

Sluggo Frank Howard opened the Senators' big inning with a safe bunt. Tom McCraw followed with a single. After an infield out, Cullen drove in Howard with a single.

Bernie Allen followed an infield error with a bases-loaded walk, forcing in the third run of the inning and Flood's infield single brought in Cullen.

Darold Knowles pitched the last three innings for the Senators, preserving starter Dick Bosman's second victory in three decisions.

Knicks, ABC-TV Get Into Feud

By MIKE RECHT Associated Press Sports Writer NEW YORK (AP) — A feud over interviews erupted Saturday with ABC-TV on one side and the New York Knicks and newspapermen on the other, and the television network apparently has lost both battles.

First, the Knicks refused to allow any of their players to appear on the network's post game show following New York's victory over Baltimore in New York Friday night in their National Basketball Association playoff series.

Then newspaper men formally protested television player interviews held during the contest by sportscaster Jack Twyman on the Baltimore bench, and NBA commissioner Walter Kennedy informed ABC Saturday that no unauthorized personnel, including sportscasters, were allowed on a team's bench.

Millions of viewers of the nationally televised game saw Twyman interview Baltimore's injured Gus Johnson during a timeout in the first quarter, and then heard Twyman explain several times after the game that the Knicks would not let their players appear. Instead, Twyman, a former NBA star at Cincinnati, talked to several Baltimore players and injured Los Angeles star Jerry West, who helped Twyman do the telecasts.

"I made the decision," said Frank Blauschild, the assistant general manager and director of public relations for the Knicks. "I've got a responsibility to all the media. There were a lot of newspapermen standing on deadlines after the game."

"If it was a reasonable request ... one guy for 2-3 minutes ... I would have said okay. But someone said they had close to 20 minutes to fill and I knew the newspapermen were waiting."

The network had asked that the Knicks' Dave DeBusschere and Walt Frazier to appear, but both remained in the dressing room after the game.

"After I turned them down, they asked DeBusschere to appear," Blauschild said. "He was going over to the interview from the locker room as I was coming in, and I told him to stay in the dressing room."

Seaver Getting Off To Great Start For Mets

By HERSCHEL NISSENEN Associated Press Sports Writer NEW YORK (AP) — If Tom Seaver and his fast ball are here can the New York Mets be far behind?

The answer will come as the season progresses, but for the time being Seaver and the Mets are atop the National League East following Friday's three-hit, 14-strikeout 1-0 victory over the defending champion Pittsburgh Pirates.

"I can't pitch a much better game than that," Seaver said, "especially against a team that hits as well as the Pirates do." He threw 115 pitches—"about 10 below my average"—and of his 81 strikes, 59 came on fast balls, 14 on curves, seven on sliders and one on a change-up.

The fast ball, missing since last August when the Mets began their slide toward a third-place finish, mysteriously returned last Sunday when Seaver fanned 10 while hurling nine scoreless innings against Cincinnati. Not a bad week's work against the NL's two power clubs and 1970's divisional champs.

Although Seaver had an 18-12 record last year and led the NL in earned run average, it was a comedown from the world championship season of 1969, when he won 25 games and lost only seven. Now, Seaver is back where he was ... perhaps even better.

"I throw harder now, I have better control and I have a much better breaking ball than 1969," he said after running his record to 2-0 and extending his string of scoreless innings to 20. He's also fanned 27 batters in 23 innings.

"I don't think you can expect me to pitch like that every time," Seaver said. "But that's the type of game Tom Seaver can pitch and the type of game I watch to pitch. I'm consciously trying to make a good pitch every time I throw the ball."

Seaver's troubles began when he pitched twice with only three days rest instead of his accustomed four last August.

Because of scheduled off-days, Manager Gil Hodges gave him a choice of taking three days or five between starts. Seaver chose three, but it probably won't happen again. If it does, it will be a one-shot deal, compared to the nine times he did it last season.

"Tom Seaver is going to be Tom Seaver ... period," said Hodges. "Anytime he goes out

Yarbrough Joins USAC Drivers

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — LeRoy Yarbrough has become the second big name stock car driver to switch to the United States Auto Club's $4 million series for rear-engine championship cars.

Yarbrough, 34, winner of $407,689 in 10 years on NASCAR's Grand National circuit, signed Friday to drive for Dan Gurney's All-American Racers team in the remaining 11 events on the championship trial.

He replaces Swede Savage, a 23-year-old Californian who was severely injured in a wreck during the Questor Grand Prix at Ontario, Calif., three weeks ago.

Savage, who had compiled a second and third place finish in two championship races this year, was said to be recovering from his injuries but was declared out for the season.

Yarbrough, who ranks fifth among NASCAR's all-time money winners, will make his first start for Gurney in a 150-miler at Trenton, N. J., a week from Sunday.

Bobby Unser, the 1968 Indianapolis winner, is Gurney's other driver in the two-car team.

A native of Jacksonville, Fla., and a resident of Columbia, S. C., Yarbrough was among the top drivers on the Ford Motor Co. stock car team in 1968, 1969 and 1970. He won a record seven big speedway events in 1969, claiming just over $200,000 in prize money and two major driver of the year awards.

Ford withdrew its support for stock car racing at the end of last year, leaving Yarbrough and four other top drivers without competitive cars for 1971.

One of the ex-Ford pilots was Cale Yarbrough, who early in year switched to USAC as co-driver with the veteran Lloyd Ruby in two Mongoose cars owned by Atlanta tire distributor Gene White.

Yarbrough had won $449,000 in NASCAR purses before switching and ranks fourth in the money list.

Gurney said Yarbrough will be available to drive stock cars in events that do not conflict with the USAC big car schedule. Presumably, these would be limited to FIA-sanctioned events and Yarbrough would have to give up his license in NASCAR.

Isaac Captures Stanley Pole

NORTH WILKESBORO, N. C. (AP) — Bobby Isaac, who is off to another good season in stock car racing, has won his fifth straight pole position for a race at North Wilkesboro Speedway.

Isaac, who won the 1970 NASCAR Grand National driving title after a $200,000 season, powered his Dodge around the 5-8ths of a mile oval at 106.217 miles per hour Friday to best David Pearson and Richard Petty in first day time trials.

The 33-year-old driver from Catawba, N.C. will be at the head of a 30-car field for the 2 p.m. start of Sunday's $23,350 Gwyn Staley 400 Memorial Race, 400 laps or 250 miles.

to pitch, I figure our chances are better than average to win. I didn't feel like that at the end of last year."

The only run of the game came on Donn Clendenon's booming fourth-inning home run off Dock Ellis, 1-2, his first hit in 11 at-bats.

By WOODY PEELE Reflector Sports Editor

Just about the time Rose High School was wrapping up its second straight Division II win and its seventh in a row, Wilson's Fike High School had second thoughts.

And before Rose had time to put their bats away, Wilson had come through with a five-run rally to steal a 7-3 victory over the Rampants.

It was the first loss of the year for the Rampants, who fell off to a 1-1 conference record and are 6-1 overall.

Wilson by winning, upped its conference mark to a similar 1-1.

The game was a close one until the top of the seventh, when Wilson exploded for its five runs. The Titans had led on two occasions, scoring single runs in the first and fifth for 1-0 and 2-1 leads.

But each time, Rose came back in the bottom of the innings to tie it up, and then captured the lead at 3-2 in the sixth.

But the fates were not on the side of the Rampants in the game. That became obvious from the start.

Leadoff batter A. J. Pittman hit what appeared to be a routine fly to deep center. But Rose's Jimmy, Paige didn't get the jump on the ball and it just fell beyond him, as Pittman pulled up with a triple. Dennis Wilkerson then reached on an error, scoring Pittman for a 1-0 Titan lead.

J. C. Daniels came up with an excellent double play to get Rose out of the inning, however. A fielder a grounder to second, tagged Wilkerson, then three off-bats to first to complete the twin-killing.

Rose came back with the tieing run in the bottom of the first. Larry Hatton opened that part of the frame with a single to left. Bill Lee sacrificed him to second, and Jimmy Paige singled into right, scoring Hatton. Paige moved on to third when the ball got away from the outfielder, but was unable to score.

Rose got another fine defensive inning in the second, with one man thrown out on an attempted sacrifice, and the hitter getting nailed in a double play a minute later.

Neither team offered another threat until the fifth, however, when both scored again.

Wilson's leadoff man, Wally Howard, singled to center. Philip Windham walked, and Greg Fulghum singled to left on another play that saw the fielder take a couple of steps in the wrong direction before just missing the ball as he went for it. That hit brought in Howard with the second Titan run.

Rose came right back with one, but they had to struggle to get it. Larry Dixon led off with a single to center, and J.C. Daniels followed with a blooper to center that appeared to be a hit. But Dixon played it too safe, and was thrown out going to second by the centerfielder. Jimmy Sugg reached on an error, moving Daniels to third and Robbie Cox was hit by a pitch, loading the bases. Hatton hit a sacrifice fly to score Daniels with the tieing run, but the chance for a big rally was gone.

Marichal Nearly Had No-Hitter

By DICK COUCH Associated Press Sports Writer

Juan Marichal was slinging merrily in the rain until he hung a ninth inning screwball out to dry.

Ken Rudolph, the Chicago Cubs' second-string catcher, dribbled the two-strike pitch into left field Friday night and a Marichal no-hitter evaporated in the San Francisco mist.

Marichal, the Giants' resurgent right-hander, held the Cubs hitless until Rudolph's leadoff single in the ninth, gave up another single by pinch hitter Jim Hickman and then wrapped up a 9-0 victory in a game delayed twice by rain in the early innings.

Chicago's first hit was the first for Rudolph in 18 trips to the plate this season.

In other National League games, St. Louis drubbed San Diego 7-1 behind Bob Gibson, the New York Mets nipped Pittsburgh 1-0 on Tom Seaver's three-hitter, Los Angeles edged Houston 6-5 in 10 innings and Atlanta held off Philadelphia 8-7. Cincinnati's scheduled game at Montreal was snowed out.

Marichal, bouncing back to his old form after a disappointing 12-10 windup last season, when he was plagued by injuries, issued a single walk in hand-cuffing the Cubs for eight innings.

After the hits by Rudolph and Hickman, a double play helped the 32-year-old Dominican ace seal his third 1971 victory without a loss.

The blank job was his second of the year and the 48th of his 11-year career—tops among active and took second on the relay from the outfield. Daniels was intentionally walked, loading the bases. Sugg then hit a chopper that hit the base umpire for an automatic hit, scoring Lee with the go-ahead run.

Then, with one out in the top of the seventh, the roof fell in on the Rampants.

Windham was hit by a pitch. Fulghum grounded to second for what looked like the start of a possible double play. But Windham knocked the ball loose from the tag, and both runners were safe on the error. John Harris dumped a single into center, loading the bases, and a wild pitch by reliever Kim Harbin sent Windham in with the tieing run.

Billy Rogers walked, loading the bases again, and Dennis Wilkerson beat out a hit dumped in front of the plate, scoring Fulghum with the go-ahead Titan run.

Tommy Davis followed with a single to right that scored two more runs and Harris and Rogers came over. Lindsay Etheridge finished things off with a single to left-center, scoring Wilkerson with the final Wilson run.

Rose managed to get two runners on during the bottom of the seventh, but couldn't push over a run to get a rally started.

The Rampants seek to get back on the winning track Tuesday when they travel to Goldsboro.

Death Claims William Eckert

CLEARWATER, Fla. (AP) — William Dole Eckert, former commissioner of major league baseball died Friday of a heart attack. He was 62 years old.

Eckert was stricken while playing tennis at the Lucayan Towers in Freeport in the Bahamas. His widow, Catherine, said in Clearwater he arrived in the Bahamas Friday for a short vacation.

He served as commissioner of baseball from November 1965 to November 1968. He retired from the U.S. Air Force in 1961 with the rank of lieutenant general. Eckert graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point in 1930. He entered the Army Air Corps and graduated from flight school in 1931. During World War II he was the commander of a bomber group and chief of flight maintenance for the Ninth Air Force in Europe. Eckert became baseball's fourth commissioner, succeeding Ford Frick, despite his inexperience in the sports world. Chosen to assist him in the arduous duties of major league lord was Lee MacPhail, an old hand who would supply the baseball savvy.

Eckert signed a seven-year contract at $65,000 per year—said he was delighted to have MacPhail "take this key post." He pledged his office would not become a puppet to the owners. Baseball's new "Sergeant Spike"—the nickname Eckert earned while a plebe at West Point because of his early interest in sports, showed a sense of humor at the start of his three-year reign.

He said he preferred to be called "general" sometimes and "commissioner" at others—"but if you're having a drink with me, call me Private Spike."

He had a hot potato on his hands soon after he took office—a delicate situation in Milwaukee, where the Braves had left a crying populace and headed for greener grass in Atlanta.

Eckert said he could foresee no expansion compromise in time to forestall the state of Wisconsin's antitrust suit against the Braves. And he was right.

The trial came off in Milwaukee, and the result was a red carpet for the Braves to depart for the untapped southeast goldmine.

This stormy episode prodded Eckert to public relations work. "Baseball has to do some public relations spade work to maintain its image," he said and named Joe Reichler, a former Associated Press sports writer, as the public relations man.

Eckert hooked up with players' representative Marvin Miller as the Major League Players' Association threatened to stir up a storm of protest if it didn't receive certain financial arrangements. In December, of 1966, the major league owners finally agreed to a two-year, $8.2 million pension plan and checkoff for players' dues to the association.

He later helped solve a dispute between owner Charles O. Finley and the Kansas City Athletics, who was charged with unfair labor practices by the players. The controversial Finley soon thereafter moved his team to Oakland.

Eckert also understood during his tenure that baseball would soon again be breaking out in another expansion move, but wasn't around when it happened in 1969.

Bucks, Knicks Within One Win

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
It's clear the decks for the much-anticipated clash between the New York Knicks and the Milwaukee Bucks in the championship final playoff for the National Basketball Association title.

The signal to get ready followed the Knicks' 89-84 victory over the Baltimore Bullets and the Bucks' 117-94 trouncing of Los Angeles Friday night.

There are no tomorrows left now for either the Bullets or the Lakers in the best-of-7 series to decide the Eastern and Western Conference crowns.

Each must win all the remaining games in the series to avoid elimination, which may come Sunday for both.

The Knicks lead 3-2 over the Bullets and can wrap up the series by winning at Baltimore Sunday. The Bucks have an even greater margin over the Lakers 3-1 and can end the series by winning the fifth game Sunday at Milwaukee.

Behind by 12 points at 84-72, Jack Marin sparked a Bullet rally that cut the edge to two at 86-84 with 50 seconds left at Madison Square Garden.

Baltimore's rally talled there and Walt Frazier's jumper from the side with 28 seconds to go insured the Knicks victory.

"The big difference between the last two games and this one was our poor shooting," said Gene Shue, Baltimore coach.

As far as Frazier, who scored 28 points, was concerned "the difference was that we were much more aggressive on defense." Marin finished with 25 points.

Lawrence Alcindor celebrated his 24th birthday by scoring 31 points as the Bucks whacked the Lakers at the Forum in Los Angeles.

Larry Costello, Milwaukee coach, commented "We ran at them instead of letting them run at us." He added that Oscar Robertson "played a great game for us." Gail Goodrich's 26 points topped the Lakers. The playoffs in the American Basketball Association resume tonight with Kentucky vs. Virginia at Norfolk and Indiana vs. Utah at Salt Lake City.

Kentucky leads the Squires 1-0 in the series for the East Division ABA title. Indiana and Utah are tied 1-1 for the West crown.

Reggie Sees Ball Too Well

By KEN RAPPOPORT
Associated Press Sports Writer

A visit to Tiger Stadium really opens your eyes. Look what it's done for Reggie Smith.

"I see the ball well here," says the Boston Red Sox outfielder, "I just like hitting in this ballpark."

Boston's young man and the "see" had a look at the Detroit pitching again Friday, liked what he saw, and drove in two runs with a home run and sacrifice fly in the Red Sox' 5-3 triumph.

"Tiger Stadium has a good background," said Smith, "and I know there are certain pitches I can get in the air for a home run. Those kind of things psych me up, I guess."

The statistics back up Smith's tigerish penchant. Last year, he topped the Red Sox hitters against Detroit with a .375 average, 24-for-64, with four home runs and 12 RBI.

California stopped Minnesota 4-1 for the Angels' fifth straight victory; Oakland also won its fifth in a row while handing Chicago its seventh straight loss, 5-4 in 10 innings, and Baltimore whipped the New York Yankees 6-1 in the American League's other games.

In the National League, the New York Mets defeated Pittsburgh 1-0; Atlanta trimmed Philadelphia 8-7; St. Louis crushed San Diego 7-1; San Francisco rocked the Chicago Cubs 9-0 and Los Angeles topped Houston 6-5 in 10 innings. Snow postponed Cincinnati at Montreal.

While playing in Detroit is one of Smith's favorite things, it's also Nirvana for Gary Peters, the Boston left-hander who picked up Friday's victory.

"This is one of the parks I feel good in," said Peters, who pitched eight strong innings but needed ninth-inning rescue work from two relief pitchers. "I just seem to have good stuff against the Tigers."

Peters, however, knew it on the occasion he didn't—when he served up a gopher ball to Ike

Brown with one on in the sixth.

"I knew just before I let it go it would be a bad pitch," said Peters.

And Boston Manager Eddie Kasko knew it, too.

"He just threw a lousy pitch to Brown," said Kasko, "Peters had his eyes open like he knew it was coming."

PS: Like Smith, Peters is a Tiger lover, too. He's beaten them 16 times in 23 lifetime decisions.

Smith spanked his first homer of the year, a fifth-inning shot off Joe Niekro. The drive nearly cleared the right field roof, 370 feet away and 94 feet high. Smith's sacrifice fly came with the bases loaded in the eighth off reliever Bill Zepp.

Peters was cruising along with a 5-2 advantage, and got the first out of the last inning before a double by Al Kaline and single by Willie Horton. Ken Tatum then came in and was greeted by Bill Freehan's single, scoring Kaline from third. Freehan got the second out, but Sparky Lyle was called on to get the final one—Dick McAuliffe's infield fly.

California, held hitless for 6 1-3 innings by Minnesota's Jim Perry, broke up his no-hit bid with Alex Johnson's seventh-inning single, then rattled off five more in a three-run eighth.

Gerry Moses and pinch-hitter Tony Gonzalez lined singles to start the rally. Sandy Alomar then ripped a two-out triple and scored on Jim Fregosi's single. Another single by Johnson sent Perry to the showers.

Rudy May, lifted for Gonzalez' pinch-hit appearance, struck out nine Twins in nailing his first victory of 1971.

Reggie Jackson, reversing last year's sluggish start, banged a two-out home run in the 10th inning for Oakland. It was the slugger's third of the season, compared to 1970 when he went CHICOD — The Conley Vikings roared past Jasper Friday afternoon by shutting them out, 9-0. The Vikings were led in the hitting department by Prince Bunting who slapped three hits in four times at bat.

The Vikings held Jasper in the top of the first inning but Conley took an early lead by scoring two runs in the bottom of the frame. Bunting led off with a single and was followed by Cleve Averrett with another single. Worthington then scored both runners when he blasted a triple into left-center.

The Jasper team threatened only one time in the game and this came in the top of the third inning. Dawson reached on a fielder's choice and advanced to third on a ground ball and a steal but the Conley pitcher settled down and retired Jasper before the runner could score.

Conley increased its lead in the fourth inning by scoring two more runs and opened up a 4-0 edge over Jasper. Carmen reached on an error and then stole second to get into scoring position for Conley. Corey singled to left and when the play was errored Carmen raced in with the third run for Conley. Bunting doubled scoring Corey with the fourth Viking tally.

The Vikings came right back in the bottom of the fifth to score two more runs and established a commanding lead. Worthington singled to begin the inning for Conley. Evans doubled scoring Worthington with the fifth Viking run. Bryan reached on a throwing error to first and Evans finished up the scoring for the inning by racing in on the play.

The sixth inning saw Conley add three more runs to their lead. Gisson and Worthington reached on walks and they scored when a ground ball hit by Bryan was errored by Conley a 8-0 lead over Jasper. The last run was scored when the pitcher balked and Bryan who had advanced to third came in with the ninth and final run.

Greene Central Rolls By Wayne

SNOW HILL — Greene Central High School rolled to its fourth straight Eastern Plains Conference baseball victory Friday as it tipped Southern Wayne High School, 14-1.

The Rams pushed over 11 runs in the third and fourth innings to put things away for the afternoon.

They got things underway in the third inning, scoring six big runs. Robert Ivey was hit by a pitch and Mike Perry walked. Danny Whitley brought Ivey across with a single and Bob Scott followed with another hit, scoring Perry. Ron Bowen then cracked a triple, scoring both Whitley and Scott for a 4-0 lead.

Johnny Earl Johnson, who hurled the win, added another triple, scoring Bowen. Johnson then scored on Stevie Williamson's single.

In the fourth, Greene Central came up with five more runs. Ivey again opened the frame by being hit by a pitch. Perry singled and Ivey scored on Whitley's second hit. Scott brought in Perry with another single and Donald Taylor walked to load the bases. Johnson reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Whitley, and both Scott and Taylor scored when Williamson reached on an error.

The Rams added one in the fifth inning and two more in the sixth for their 14 run total. The lone Southern Wayne run came in the fifth inning.

Whitley led the Ram hitting with three, while Scott and Bowen each had two.

Johnson, in hurling the win, allowed only three hits, while striking out 13. He had some control problems, however, as he walked nine.

E. B. Aycock Junior High School spotted Southern Nash Junior High a 6-0 lead, then stormed back to take a 10-6 victory Friday.

It was the third straight victory for Aycock against no losses. They have a tie game with Rocky Mount to be completed.

Southern Nash scored once in the first inning, then came up with five in the second for their 6-0 advantage.

But Aycock came up with two in the bottom of the second John Causey reached on a fielder's choice and scored on Phil Ragazzo's single. Jerry Griffin then brought Ragazzo over with a hit.

In the third, Aycock scored four more to tie it up at 6-6. Mike

The White Sox scored three runs in the eighth to take a 4-3 lead, but Rick Monday led off the ninth for the Athletics with his third home run of the season to send the contest into extra innings.

Pat Dobson pitched a four-hitter and Dave Johnson, Frank Robinson and Brooks Robinson knocked in a run apiece in a three-run sixth to carry Baltimore over New York.

Farmville Falls To Falcon Nine

FARMVILLE — Charles B. Aycock High School rolled to a 7-1 victory over Farmville's Red Devils Friday night.

Farmville grabbed the initial lead in the game, but couldn't hold off the Falcons or get another rally started.

In the bottom of the first, the Red Devils scored their only run. Johnny Dickinson singled and was sacrificed to second. Chuck Finklea got a hit and that brought in Dickinson in with the run.

But in the third, Aycock came up with three to take a 3-1 lead, all they really needed. Durham reached on a fielder's choice and B. Davis singled, taking second on the relay. Pittman reached on an error, scoring Durham, and another error on the play let Davis come in. G. Davis then tripled to score Pittman.

Two more Falcon runs came over in the fifth. Durham tripled and scored on B. Davis' single. Davis stole second and scored on Pittman's double.

Aycock picked up its remaining two runs in the seventh inning.

B. Davis led the Aycock hitting with three, while Pittman, Holland and Durham each had two. Finklea had two to pace Farmville.

The Red Devils are now 3-2 in conference play, and 5-4 overall.

Wildlife Afield: Fisherman's Dream Spot Losing Its Youth

By JIM DEAN

For some 20 years now, I have carefully nurtured a sporadic but rewarding love affair with a wild beauty in eastern North Carolina.

I regret to report that she is in trouble, but more on that later. This wild beauty is Tyrrell County (you expected Raquel Welch maybe?). I have enjoyed too many of her favors, seen too many of her charms to write about her without a certain amount of affection.

You see, it was in Tyrrell County at Fort Landing down on the mouth of the Little Alligator River that I first did any serious fishing. During the summer, my grandfather would lead the rest of the family to a small, run-down cabin built out over the coffee-colored water on the edge of a marsh. A nearly two-mile boat ride was necessary to reach the cabin.

When you got there, you came in shooting. Snakes were always lying around on the narrow boardwalks which surrounded the cabin. Though we never found too many inside the cabin, my mother would just as soon we'd rolled in a grenade before entering.

This was the height of adventure to a 10-year-old boy, and I played it for all it was worth. I spent many summer days floating in an old juniper skiff with three or four cane poles hanging over the end waiting for white perch. I never had to wait long.

At other times, I fished the

Table Quail Draw Opposition

RALEIGH — The Wildlife Resources Commission is unanimously and wholeheartedly in opposition to a bill in the General Assembly that would permit the sale of bobwhite quail in grocery stores, restaurants, or any other public food outlets.

At its meeting in Raleigh on April 5, the Commission instructed Executive Director Dlyde Patton to express its objection to the bill.

In addressing the House Wildlife Committee on April 8, Patton said, "The bobwhite quail is North Carolina's finest game bird and is an important part of the State's natural order — our environment. Due chiefly to action of past general assemblies in passing laws prohibiting the wholesale commercialization of quail for food, the monetary incentive for trapping and selling was removed. Since then the Wildlife Commission and its officers have been enabled to restore the natural quail population from the alarming all-time low that existed in 1935 when the anti-marketing bill was passed. Beginning four years later, in 1939, it was my privilege to begin a career in wildlife conservation as a game biologist for the North Carolina Department of Conservation and Development under the Honorable John Chalk, Commissioner from Rockingham in Richmond County, and Uncle Bruce Etheridge, Director from Manteo in Dare County. At that time I shared with six other game biologists the responsibility for developing a program which would restore quail. It was soon confirmed that populations were low principally because of a deficiency in breeding stock carry-over to produce a satisfactory annual crop. The breeders left after the fall hunting season each year were being trapped and sold for food. With the new law, a base for improvement was established. When the Wildlife Commission was organized by the General Assembly in 1947 and new emphasis was placed on law enforcement, improvement was accelerated. Native quail populations today are the best in any living person's memory."

"Gentlemen, may I submit to you that a vote against this bill will be a vote against reestablishing a quail market and a monetary incentive to trap native birds for sale; a vote for helping the Commission with quail management in future years; and a vote to insure that the native bobwhite quail remains the important part of our natural environment as we have it today. The Commission hopes that in this year of the environment we will not start back down the road to the lows of 1935."

At a hearing before the House Wildlife Committee on March 18 these objections to the bill were presented:

1. There is no way to distinguish a wild quail from a stumpy banks under the spanish-moss draped cypress for largemouth bass. I watched the osprey and occasional bald eagle soar high over the primitive land.

In the fall, the rockfish would come, followed closely by the ducks and geese. The small bedrooms in the cabin were so jammed with decoys that you had to crawl over them to reach the beds.

The cabin — with its pot-bellied stove, calendars on the wall and cane poles stacked in the corner — is in ruins now. A good storm will take what's left.

But that is the only real change at Fort Landing. It is still pretty much the same as it was 20 years ago.

So is the rest of Tyrrell County, and this is both reason for rejoicing and reason for sadness — depending upon how you look at it.

Tyrrell County is the state's least populous county. Only 3,800 people live in this vast region of marshes, savannas and coastal forest shrouded with moss and guarded by fish hawks. The population drops yearly.

On the eastern edge of the county lies the untamed Alligator River, while Albemarle Sound borders the north and Philips Lake touches the western boundary. Columbia — with a population of 1,000 — is the largest town.

Tyrrell County is in trouble because its young people are leaving. In a time when most of the country is prospering, Tyrrell County is slowly dying. But times are changing. More and more people are beginning to discover this vast, unspoiled reach of land and water. Tyrrell County is a natural playground for the outdoorsman, and the county fathers are currently encouraging more anglers to sample the productive waters. "It's the only way we can capitalize on those things we love about Tyrrell County without losing them to some form of pollution," said one Columbian recently. "We want to grow, but we want to grow wisely without sacrificing our natural resources."

That — in this age of pollution — is a refreshing approach. It is also one that is likely to succeed.

America's Cup Battle Spirited

By JACK WOLISTON

NEW YORK (UPI)—Before the next America's Cup race ever gets started off Newport, R.I., in September, 1973, there's going to be some pretty spirited competition to determine which of four nations will battle the United States for the battered silver trophy.

Among those seeking the challenger's role are three yacht clubs in France, two in Australia and one each in England and Canada.

The field will have to be narrowed first to a representative from each nation and then pared down to the eventual challenger.

The New York Yacht Club, successful defender of the Cup since it became a perpetual challenge trophy in 1857, has been trying since the 1970 Cup series to set up an elimination series for the seven challengers. But without success.

As a result, it has tossed the whole matter to the challengers themselves, advising them they must come up with an elimination by June 1.

Seek Trials Method
"It is hoped that the challenging clubs can reach unanimous agreement on some method of conducting elimination trials," the NYYC said in a cable to each of the seven challengers.

"As it seems obvious that only one challenging club from each country should participate in the final eliminations off Newport, it will be necessary for the challenging clubs in one country to arrange between themselves which club will participate."

"If unanimous agreement cannot be reached by the challenging clubs by June 1, 1971, the New York Yacht Club will be obliged to select a single challenger from among the seven challenging clubs."

Commodore Elmer Ellsworth Jones of England's Royal Thames Yacht Club, that country's only challenger, said in reply that he had cabled the other challengers suggesting a meeting in London on April 26 to discuss elimination procedures.

Canada also has filed a single challenge—by the Royal Vancouver Yacht Club, filed at the request of George O'Brien, owner of the 12-meter yacht Endless Summer, formerly Australia's 1967 challenger, Dame Pattie.

12-Meter Yacht Ordered
Challenging from France are the Cercle de la Voile de Paris, whose Baron Marcel Bich lost the 1970 challenge trials to Australia; Yacht Club D'Hyeres, and Societe de Nautique de Marseille.

Australia's challenges came from the Royal Perth Yacht Club and the Royal Sydney Yacht Squadron, the latter represented by Sir Frank Packer, who headed unsuccessful challenges for the Cup in 1962 and last year.

Once the French and Australians determine who will represent their respective countries, the four nations will send their would-be challengers to Newport in the summer of 1973 to determine which among them will meet the American defender.

Between now and then, millions of dollars will be spent in design and construction of several new 12-meter yachts or re-designing of existing 12-meters.

The Royal Thames Yacht Club already has placed an order for a new 12-meter which will be designed by Peter Nicholson and Raymond Wall, who have produced a number of outstanding ocean racers. Reported cost of the new yacht is $960,000.

Handicapped Learning Skills At The Sheltered Workshop

CLARENCE SALISBURY . . . has been doing chair caning at the East Carolina Sheltered Workshop for about a year now. He uses four caning techniques: handweaving with either narrow or wide reed; pre-woven weaving; and twisted paper weaving.

Do you need a chair caned? How about a picture framed? Does your furniture need repair or refinishing?

Clients at the Eastern Carolina Sheltered Workshop here are engaged in these types of activities and many more. Handicapped persons are learning skills that will enable them to lead productive lives by doing things, and at the same time helping bring in money to support the training program.

If you need a chair caned, talk to Clarence Salisbury at the workshop.

A paraplegic — paralyzed from his waist down — Salisbury is in his late 20's, is married and the father of two children. He was injured in an automobile accident in June of 1967.

A truck driver before his accident, Salisbury has been at the workshop since December, 1969. He works from his wheelchair, and is teaching Isaac Moore to do chair caning. Salisbury learned from a former client of the workshop.

His four techniques of chair caning include handweaving with narrow reed or handweaving with wide reed, twisted paper or using pre-woven narrow reed.

It takes about three days to finish a chair top and bottom (Boston rocker type chair). Salisbury works from 9 a.m. until 3 p.m. with one hour for lunch.

Howard Dawkins, director of the Workshop, cited one excellent job Salisbury did on repairing one chair.

A woman from Washington had been to a number of shops asking if the chair could be repaired, Dawkins explained. She had been told the chair could not be fixed.

"She brought the chair to the workshop when Salisbury finished, the chair looked like new," the director noted.

If you need a picture framed, the person to talk to is Charlie James Whichard, age 19.

Whichard, who lives at 1219-A Legion St., with his grandparents, did seasonal farm work before coming to the workshop. He now does picture framing "from the beginning of the process until the finish," according to Dawkins.

There are at least 100 different mouldings to choose from for the pictures framed at the workshop.

The customers pick out the type of moulding they want and then Whichard measures and cuts the moulding to fit the

Whichard is assisted in the framing operation by Robert Armwood, 22, of 1509-B Fleming St.

How about furniture refinishing? Arlander Davis and Junius Carroll Boyd, under the supervision of Richard Worsley, can refinish any type of furniture, but they do not do any upholstery work. They only do repair and refinishing of the wood.

The clients turn out about 25-30 pieces of furniture weekly.

The workers first strip the old finish from the pieces with paint remover, then the items are sanded to make them smooth. The articles are then cleaned, stained and varnished.

In addition to chair caning, picture framing, and furniture refinishing, workshop clients are engaged in training for cafeteria services such as waitresses and cooks; carpentry; wrapping cook books and blender bowls for a local industry; and building supporters or guides for boat trailers.

Soon to be added to the list of training areas at the workshop are janitorial cleaning, sewing, companion living and nurses aides as well as motel services.

In addition to job training, clients also attend classes in social and personal adjustments and take three academic classes.

After a six-week evaluation period, new clients enter either a short term (six months) program or a long term (one to two years) training program.

Rose High Students In Vocational Fields

An open house this afternoon at 1107 Fairfax Street of a home built by members of Rose High School's Vocational Education department inaugurates the observance of Vocational Week from April 19 through April 25.

The open house, scheduled from 3:00 to 5:00 p. m., is slated to give citizens of Greenville an opportunity to see at first hand what Rose High students in Vocational Education have been able to do.

Members of the Rose High Home Economics Department are sponsoring the open house. They are also responsible for the selection of furnishings in the house, which were donated by two local firms.

The project of building the house, as explained by C. B. West, who heads the Vocational Education program is an example of what can be done when a school program, a group of students eager to work and learn, and the availability of community support, are all combined to produce ideal circumstances.

The house that approximately 50 of the students have completed was started in the fall of 1969. Land was furnished by a local real estate-rental agency. Building materials were made available by a Greenville lumber firm that agreed to wait until the house is completed and sold before receiving payment for the materials.

At a recent School Board meeting, board members voted that following sale of the house, profits, if any, would accrue to a special revolving fund so that students in vocational education could repeat a similar project. "All the work, except for electrical wiring, plumbing and heating was done by students," West commented. "The house they have built has three bedrooms, with a dining-living area, a kitchen and carport, as well as a porch and utility room."

Dr. Cleet C. Cleetwood confirmed the house will be sold at public auction at 11:00 a. m. on Thursday, April 22.

Two instructors, Jesse Dawkins in masonry and John Mallow in carpentry, have been guiding the high school boys working on this extended building project. Both these men are teachers in a special category, that of occupational education instructors. They exemplify the thinking of many progressive school systems, where persons skilled in a trade or craft are incorporated into the school staff. Educators are beginning to place more stress on, as West termed it, "the training of students so that at graduation the would have a salable service to offer."

Although this is their most spectacular achievement to date, it nevertheless is but one of many facets of a program designed basically to provide high school students with training in a large number of fields, ranging in scope from dental assistants to auto mechanics.

Initiated in its current format five years ago, the entire program, which encompasses Vocational Education, Distributive Education, and Office Occupation has grown from about 36 students to its present roster of about 100 students.

West, who has been with the program since it began, said that plans are to include Food Services as a new phase of the overall program beginning next year.

In addition to West, four other teachers are working with students in the various fields of vocational training. Horace Robertson heads the Distributive Education section. Mrs. Clara Carr has charge of 16 students in Office Occupations, which covers secretaries, stenographers, clerks and a bookkeeper; Mrs. Erma Carr will head the Food Service; and J. T. (Pete) Perry assists West in the Vocational Education department. Perry, a first year teacher, recently switched over to vocational teaching, after beginning the year in the business department.

Under the present arrangement at Rose High — and this system is in general applicable to many larger school systems — vocational training per se is categorized in two basic concepts.

The Industrial Cooperation Training program (ICT) part of Vocational Education is focused on individual trades. "We have students, boys and girls, now working as dental aides, nurses aides, in small engine repair, diesel mechanics in auto body repair, and in many other jobs," West said. He pointed out that one boy was learning the trade of marble works, including lettering, chiseling and lay out.

The Distributive Education (DE) portion of the overall program is directed to the field of merchandising, to include selling, advertising, merchandise selection, distribution and related aspects of this field.

When the Food Service section goes into full swing next year, that will provide training for students in general food preparation, dietary services, commercial food handling, and restaurant services.

In all these fields designed to give high school students practical training, West noted that in no instances are these classes a substitute for academic training. "In all cases, the student still gets the academic requirements he or she needs for entering college." A student entering any of these classes must first possess an adequate training background. As an example, West cited the 16 students in the Office Occupation section under Mrs. Clara Carr. "These students, all seniors, have had preparatory training in typing and administrative studies for at least one year before taking on the job training," he observed.

The approximately 100 students at Rose High involved in the ICT, the DE and Office Occupation programs are scheduled to attend classes on campus part of the day, and to work on their job part of the school day.

"We try to schedule students so that their class work ties in with their on job training. Some students work in the morning, others in the afternoons. The school administration always tries to make this program work for the benefit of the student as well as the employer," West explained.

Each year, in connection with observance of Vocational Education Week, the students working in Greenville and their employers meet for an annual banquet. This year the banquet was held on the night of April 6 at the Moose Lodge. "It was a fine banquet," West recalled, "with about 250 people in attendance." He noted their guest speaker was Nelson Taylor of Beaufort.

In summing up the advantages of the three programs making up the total Vocational Education offering at Rose High, West said: "First of all it gives the student more purpose. They can see more relevancy in going to school when they take part in a program that puts a little money in their pocket while they are learning."

"Ideally," he continued, "a student in this program would continue to work with his employer after graduation."

One of the unexpected advantages West commented on is that of student behavior among this group. "We have found these young people seem to be more mature than the average student. It is seldom we have any discipline problems with these boys and girls."

The key, West believes, for the dedication these students demonstrate is purpose.

"Our biggest problem," West concluded, "is that we have many more students wanting to take part in these Vocational Education programs than we have positions for. The merchants, businesses, firms and agencies in Greenville have been enthusiastic in their support by offering jobs, but we could fill other jobs easily from the applicants we have waiting to enter the program."

Has Something For Everybody

The 1971 Jamboree Weekend is the highlight of East Carolina University's Spring Quarter activities. This year, the sponsors of the annual spring jamboree feel they have something for everyone.

The Jamboree, to be held on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, April 23, 24, and 25, gets underway at 8:15 p.m. Friday with Ike and Tina Turner and the rock group, Dreams. The two acts will be in Minges Coliseum. Ike Turner is a native of Clarksville, Mississippi. Tina Turner was born Annie Mae Bullock on Brownsville, Texas. They both grew up with music. The two are perhaps best known for the "Fool in Love" number. They are backed by the four Ikeettes and the King of Rhythm Orchestra.

The Dreams, a group of instrumentalists and singers, are noted for their ease of involvement and diverse styles. One of their outstanding numbers is "Holla Be Home." Other numbers the group has made well known are "New York," and "Dream Suite." Their style of playing is said to be breaking down categories in jazz-rock music.

After the Purple-Gold Football Game Saturday afternoon, the Ten Wheel Drive and Richie Havens will perform in Minges. Nine instrumentalists, all men and a vocalist, the lone female, make up the Ten Wheel Drive, whose foundation is jazz-rock. Their motto is generating sounds, emotion sounds, which they accomplish with horns, organ, guitar, drums and the voice of their singer. Following the Ten Wheel Drive concert, the Student Union is sponsoring a free dance in Wright Auditorium from 10:00 p.m. to 2:00 a.m. The Strawberry Alarm Clock is the group furnishing music for the dance.

On Sunday, a different approach to music is featured in the weekend Jamboree festival when the noted folk singer, Doc Watson and the Southern Folk Festival will perform on the university mall. First to appear, at 3:00 p.m. will be North Carolina native "Doc" Watson, who hails from Deep Gap, N.C. A singer-guitar player, "Time" magazine has compared him to Burl Ives as a young singer with "the only difference: Watson sings on pitch."

At 6:00 p.m., Watson and the Southern Folk Festival singing group will appear together on the mall. The men and women of this southern group come from an island off the coast of Georgia, from the mountains of North Carolina and the coal camps of West Virginia. The group includes singers of gospel songs, Bluegrass music, mountain music and other types of music related to southern folklore, all favorite listening in America's southland.

Tickets for the Friday and Saturday concerts are available at the Central Ticket Office. There is no admission to the Sunday event on the mall, and the public is invited to come and listen.

Brubeck Drummer Will Appear In Jazz Concert

THE ECU JAZZ BAND . . . will appear with the ECU Percussion Ensemble and noted drummer Joe Morello in a concert at Wright Auditorium Wednesday night at 8:15 p.m. The concert is free, with the public invited to attend.

TV Notes

NEW YORK (UPI)—"Dark Shadows" may be off the air after a long career as a daytime ABC network serial — its umpteenth episodes are now in syndication — but the memory lingers on in the cinema. Last year, the series was drawn upon for the movie "House of Dark Shadows." Now, MGM has in production a second film inspired by the television program. "Curse of Dark Shadows" is the title.

Tennessee Ernie Ford's first special of the season, "Sing America Beautiful," gets a 9 p.m. NBC hour May 19.

Jackie Cooper, who "retired" from acting six years ago, returned to greasepaint to star in "Maybe I'll Come Home in the Spring," a motion picture for television.

Joe Morello, star drummer with the Dave Brubeck Quartet, is appearing in concert at East Carolina University on Wednesday, April 21.

Morello is guest artist with the combined Jazz Ensemble under the direction of Joe Hambrick and the Percussion Ensemble under Harold Jones' direction.

The major part of the concert will be devoted to the Jazz Ensemble group, with the Percussion Ensemble being featured in one part of the program.

The concert, to be conducted at 8:15 p.m. in Wright Auditorium, is open to the public. No admission is being charged for the concert.

While visiting Greenville, the noted drummer will also conduct a percussion clinic on campus. Morello's ECU visit is being sponsored jointly by the two groups appearing with him in concert.

Four Plays by Enid Bagnold, Atlantic-Little, Brown Books, Boston, 1970, 336 pp., $7.95.

Although Enid Bagnold may be remembered primarily for her novel National Velvet, she herself says that "the writing of plays became for me a passion, an opium, an addiction. I obstinately loved the hard form of the three hoops." Four Plays provides the reader with an opportunity to examine her skill at this form.

The "formula" for all the plays in this collection seems to be to create a variety of eccentric, intriguing, and-or mysterious characters, find some pretext that will bring them together, and then simply let the audience enjoy the entertaining situation which inevitably develops from the unusual combination of unusual people. Among her more memorable characters are Miss Madrigal, the governess with the mysterious past in The Chalk Garden; Ferdinand, the dying prince in The Last Joke; the aging actress who resurrects her "deceased" husband in time for dinner in The Chinese Prime Minister; and almost any character from Call Me Jacky, whose cast includes at least one lunatic, several homosexuals, a landed aristocrat, and a property-scoring socialist who later turns out to be enormously wealthy.

Of all these plays, only The Chalk Garden was a commercial success with respectable runs in New York and London. (Some readers may remember the movie version starring Deborah Kerr as Miss Madrigal the governess and Hayley Mills as Laurel the pupil.) The success of The Chalk Garden can be accounted for, I think, on the basis of its balance and control. Miss Bagnold's drama is frankly artificial; as she puts it, "I hold a fan up in front of life, and the fan is—words." In The Chalk Garden the words, the fan, the artifice are all present, but so controlled as to allow us glimpses of the life they may shield and filter but never completely hide. For example, we are intrigued by the eccentricity of Laurel's almost alarmingly modern grandmother, Mrs. St. Maugham, but we respond to her most fully when her tenacious hold on her granddaughter is revealed as the product of an ordinary human need for love. Viewed in this light the heretofore merely comic clashes between Mrs. St. Maugham and her daughter (Laurel's mother) become poignant examples of the conflicting values of different generations.

In none of the other plays is the balance between the genuine and the artificial achieved with as much success. Although The Chinese Prime Minister in plot summary sounds more appealing than does The Chalk Garden the predicament of the aging actress whose serene control of time and family relations is threatened by children, in-laws, and husband promises more than it delivers. The play is filled with reversals: the supposedly beautiful and sophisticated daughter-in-law turns out to be a gawky teen-ager; the aging butler "dies" at least twice during the play and conveniently revives when the action demands it. But in spite of these unexpected twists, the play is often tedious not from lack of action but from failure to convince that what happens is important—to us or to the characters. Perhaps in The Chinese Prime Minister the characters are too improbable, the situations too strained and contrived.

Yet even Miss Bagnold's failures can provide entertaining reading. Call Me Jacky, for example, presents us with the captivating account of Niggie's attempts to shock his conservative grandmother by bringing in an assortment of decidedly non-establishment friends, only to be more shocked himself by discovering that his grandmother has calmly hired a lunatic to cook for the household. Intriguing situations like the one just described, coupled with Miss Bagnold's witty dialogue, make Four Plays a rewarding experience for the readers who, like Miss Madrigal of The Chalk Garden, is eager "to explore—the astonishment of living." — Dee Cline

El Paso's Louis Krupp

At 82, An Artist Still Going Strong

Among artists, it seems that age is one factor that does not necessarily mean a diminishing of creative ability.

In El Paso, Texas, Louis Krupp is one of America's prime examples of an artist, who, although in his eighties, works with the vigor and drive of someone half his age.

Bavarian born and trained as a musician in early life, Krupp in his senior years is a tireless interpreter of the sun-filled, Spanish flavored western tip of Texas, where American and Mexican influences merge.

"In the summer I do some traveling in Mexico," Krupp writes about his current activities. "I like people, and enjoy painting portraits of people, or people within a landscape."

Krupp says "I always followed by own style and intuition, and was not interested in new or passing fads. I wanted to be my own self, to relay my message in my own language."

The senior artist acknowledges this attitude does not always win him the favor of critics. Writing about the large painting of a crucifixion (pictured on this page) that he completed in 1970, Krupp states:

"The art guild of El Paso does not want it displayed at the Art Museum here." He explained that in painting this unorthodox crucifixion, "the subject of a crucifixion has always interested me, but not the conventional one. It had to be something more of the present and tell a story, a lesson. To me, the life of the soldier is as important as that of anyone else."

Krupp added he had received several letters about this painting, which he calls "War and Peace." Some of the letters, he noted, "were very sad ones."

The principals in this painting are unmistakably Mexican, as are many of the subjects in his recent paintings. Nature is another subject the senior artist turns to frequently. The mountains of Texas and New Mexico have been the source of several paintings in the last few years. On trips to Mexico Krupp has captured the exotic streets and market places of colorful Mexican towns.

Krupp recalls that when he was about five years old in his home town of Miesenback he remembers drawing on a large piece of slate. At seven, one of his brothers gave him a small set of watercolors and some paper. His father, however, wished the lad to have a career in music and presented him a violin when he was eight years old. He relates that the local church deacon did not think much of his music, but his father would not hear of his studying art.

When Krupp was 14, his father apprenticed him to a band leader in Chicago. This meant emigrating to a new country and a new way of life. The first years, Krupp notes, were spent making music for dances, weddings, funerals, on excursion boats, for picnics and for any occasion music was needed.

In all these years Krupp kept his interest in art, studying at the Chicago Art Institute, followed by four years at the Art Institute in New York.

The Bavarian native who came to America to be a Chicago musician became a painter, eventually settling in the sun-drenched lands of West Texas.

At 82 he is still going strong, still painting, not content to rest on the awards he has won, nor satisfied that already his work is now in permanent collections of many collectors and museums.

A Daingerfield Retrospective

Two of the major events in April at the Mint Museum of Art in Charlotte focuses on North Carolina artists, past and present.

Elliott Daingerfield, one of North Carolina's outstanding artists (1859-1932), was born in Harper's Ferry, West Virginia, but moved to this state at the age of two.

In the Round Gallery at the Mint, a retrospective exhibition of Daingerfield's work opened last Wednesday and will be until May 16. (The show will then go to the North Carolina Museum of Art in Raleigh, opening May 23 and remaining there until June 20).

Many of the paintings in this show are landscapes of North Carolina painted in a style similar to that of Inness while other works reflect his interest in religious painting. The exhibition also contains many drawings that were preliminary studies for his murals in the Church of St. Mary's The Virgin in New York. Several of his Western period works will also be included in the big show.

In the BBB Gallery, during the month of April, a vignette of graphics are on view. The vignette consists of etchings, intaglios, serigraphs and lithographs by North Carolina artist Jill Flink, and American and European artists—Matisse, Richard Anuszkiewicz, Chagall, Dean Meeker and Alec Cowan. These works will be on view at the BBB Gallery of the Mint Museum through April 28.

HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE A COMPLEX PROBLEM

High pressure can mean anything from a local weather report to a persistent salesman. But when you insert the word "blood" in between, it takes on its most important meaning — a sign of a disorder of the body's cardiovascular system. The effects of high blood pressure and certain of its causes produce injury to the heart, the blood vessels and the organs they supply.

There are a great many prescription medicines that a physician can prescribe to help relieve this condition. Very little is known as to what is the actual cause in many cases. If you have an elevated blood pressure follow your doctors advice very carefully.

N.C. Standards May Change

By MELVIN LANG Associated Press Writer RALEIGH (AP) — Health and safety standards for an estimated 1.5 million North Carolina workers probably will be upgraded in the next few months as the state qualifies under new federal occupational guidelines.

President Nixon signed the 1970 Occupational Safety and Health Act last December, but the law does not become effective until April 28.

Only a sprinkling of the guidelines have been established by the U.S. Department of Labor, which will serve as a general overseer for the national program.

W. C. Creel, safety improvement officer for the North Carolina Department of Labor, said a request has been submitted to Washington for certification of the state agency as the enforcement unit in this state.

"If we do qualify we will use our personnel and our existing standards during this interim period," Creel said in an interview.

The national act, which becomes effective April 28, authorizes the federal government to set and enforce occupational safety and health standards applicable to businesses affecting interstate commerce.

Creel said the state agency is confident it will be certified as the enforcing unit in North Carolina. Final word on the certification could come April 27 when a representative of the U.S. Department of Labor comes to Raleigh for another review.

Still to be worked out, Creel said, are questions such as funding and the need for additional personnel.

The understanding now, he said, is that early expenses in implementing the program would be shared with the federal government paying possibly 90 per cent of the new cost.

Later, the ratio would be reduced to 50-50.

This Floor Plan Promises Privacy

THE CARDIFF 4/18/71

The Cardiff, a ranch designed by the Associated Architects, packs a lot of good living into less than 1,500 square feet. It has three bedrooms, two baths, a country kitchen and family room with a fireplace, a dining room and adjoining living room, a foyer, double garage, utility room and storage area. An alternative plan provides for a basement.

By GERRY BISHOP
With the right floor plan, a lot of good living can be squeezed into less than 1,500 square feet. The Associated Architects have done this nicely with the Cardiff, a three-bedroom that's packed with appeal for modern families. The main living area is isolated from the sleeping quarters, an arrangement that enhances privacy and puts family activities in the proper setting.

There's another advantage in the floor plan. The living room and dining room are out of the main flow of traffic, an asset for entertaining.

A hip roof, long shutters and a touch of wrought iron give the Cardiff a handsome exterior.

3 Bedrooms, 2½ Baths
Looking at the total picture, the one-story has three bedrooms and two and a half baths, a dining room, living room, country-style kitchen, family room with fireplace, foyer, double garage with storage space and a utility room. Although the plans don't call for a basement, one could be provided. An alternate drawing shows the location of the stairwell to the cellar.

The foyer provides a private entry for incoming traffic. There's a coat closet on the left, the dining room is straight ahead, the living room is to the far left, and the other sections are to the right. The garage also opens into the foyer.

The living room and dining room adjoin to create a spacious entertainment center. This would be a well-lighted area, thanks to the three windows, including one that is double size. Also, there's plenty of wall space to facilitate furnishing the two rooms.

Separate Living Area
The kitchen-family room is another living area in itself. Built-in appliances and cabinets at one end provide an efficient workshop. And the fireplace would be the focal point of social activities at the other end. It's a charming arrangement that is useful as well.

The furnace and water heater are closed on each side of the fireplace.

The master bedroom not only has a private bath but a dressing area, too. A large walk-in closet completes the arrangement.

The two other bedrooms also have large closets and fine dimensions. They are just across the hall from the main bath, which has a vanity and is ideally located to double as a powder room.

The utility room is in the garage, as is the storage space. This section is handy to the kitchen.

The Garden Clinic

N. C. State University Answers Timely Gardening Questions
Q. How do you control boxwood miners? (Mrs. M. M., Raleigh)

A. Spray your boxwoods with dimethoate (Cygon or De-fend) about three weeks after new growth starts in the spring. Meta-Systox-R may also be used. Always use pesticides with care and apply according to label directions. (H. E. Scott, extension entomologist)

Q. What causes tomatoes to have a tough whitish-green core in the center of the fruit? (J. C., Concord)

A. Adverse growing conditions can cause the problem. Also, the large fruited varieties, like Ponderosa, are worse than the smaller fruited ones. Proper fertilization, mulching and irrigation, and the use of small to medium fruited varieties will reduce the problem. (A. A. Banadyga, extension horticulturist)

Q. We have a ground cover, mondo japonica (dwarf Liriope). Please advise what to fertilize it with. Also should it have the tops removed this time of year? (W. S. Charlotte)

A. This is the time of year to fertilize your mondo grass. Use any standard complete fertilizer available. Most gardeners prefer to cut off the old yellowed leaves. Your mondo should be well into new growth by now, so trimming would only cut into the new leaves. It will be better to wait until late next winter to do this. (Henry J. Smith, extension horticulturist)

Q. My space for vegetables is limited. Any suggestions for using it to best advantage? (Miss E. R., Asheville)

A. Here's a space-saving suggestion for growing pole beans that I got recently from W. P. Farrior, agricultural extension agent in Wilson County. Position a post about eight feet high in the center of a circle. Attach a wheel to the top of the post. Plant your pole beans around the outer edge of the circle. Then anchor a string near each plant and tie it to the wheel. You can make the diameter of the circle as big as you like. A 10-foot circle would accommodate 31 plants spaced one foot apart. Not only will the circle save space, but it will enable you to sit in the shade and pick beans. But be sure to plant a pole variety. (George Hughes, extension horticulturist)

Urges Reserve Technicians

PITTSBURGH (UPI)—The chief executive of North American Rockwell Corp. says the federal government should form a "ready reserve" of engineers and scientists to combat ecological problems and growing unemployment among highly trained technicians.

Willard F. Rockwell told a meeting of engineers here recently: "Waste of any kind of manpower in this time of desperate need is monstrous, but waste of the kind of talent represented by these engineers and scientists is criminal."

FOR JOHN INGERSOLL,

Director of the Bureau of Narcotics & Dangerous Drugs

On "Meet the Press," you said when a drug pusher is arrested, he is booked and then released on bail. Sometimes it is a year before his trial comes up in court and that you know he goes right back to pushing dope, but you don't bother to arrest him again. Is this true?—Mrs. James Becroft, Franklin, Ohio

● I think it is possible that you misunderstood me. If drug traffickers released on bail between their arraignment and trial, which can be sometimes as long as a year, begin to sell drugs again, we do arrest them, providing we can collect sufficient evidence for prosecution which will stand up in court.

FOR LYNN SCHROEDER,

coauthor of "Psychic Discoveries Behind the Iron Curtain."

Do you feel the Russians are trying to put their psychic discoveries to use to help their military program?—John Forbes, Salt Lake City, Utah

● When you see that the Russian military is providing most of the funds, you have to conclude that they are headed in that direction. One of their hopes is that they will be able to use mental telepathy to communicate with astronauts.

FOR MORT WEISINGER,

author of "The Contest"

After reading your book about beauty pageants, I would like to know if you discovered any unusual facts about the Miss America contest.—Claire Berger, Teaneck, N.J.

● Not one Miss America has ever achieved the fame of three rejected contestants—Shirley Jones, Dorothy Lamour and Joan Blondell. No redhead has ever won the Miss America title. The most embarrassing moment in Miss America history occurred in 1969 when Judith Ford won the crown, although the pageant's sponsor was Oldsmobile.

FOR DINA MERRILL, actress

Why did you decide to put out a line of cosmetics? Have you always been very interested in this sort of thing?—Ruth Loehrig, Dayton, Ohio

● Since make-up is so vital to an actress—both in the interpretation of her role and the effect it has on her skin—I naturally am interested in make-up that

In a recent article, you wrote that there are 25 signs of the coming of Christ now in the process of being fulfilled. Will you please tell us what a few of the most important ones are?—Mrs. George C. Meiron, Abingdon, Va.

● Among the signs of the second coming of Christ are: (1). The distress and perplexity of the nations, Luke 21:25. (2). The wickedness and a moral breakdown would be evident and rampant upon the face of the earth, Genesis 6:5 and 13, Luke 17:26 and 27. (3). False religions and false teachers will appear in the religious life of the world, Matthew 24:11, I Timothy 4:1. (4). There shall be a falling away from the spiritual standards and sin shall be more rampant, II Timothy 2:3. (5). There shall be wars and rumors of wars over the face of the earth, Matthew 24:6. These and many more signs are now appearing on the horizon as being definite evidence of the second coming of Christ.

is pure and easy to use. Both as an actress and a woman fussing with a lot of cosmetics never appealed to me. Fortunately, a cosmetic company was interested in my ideas, and so my line of cosmetics came into being.

FOR DANNY THOMAS

What is your position with the St. Jude Hospital for children with leukemia? Where is this hospital located, and approximately how many patients are treated there at one time? Is significant progress being made toward a cure for the disease?—Elsie Simon, Trenton, N.J.

● I am founder and president of the St. Jude Hospital for children in Memphis, Tenn. The hospital is a research center but does have facilities (beds) for 36 patients. I've every hope that eventually a cure will be found for leukemia, but my approach to the subject is one of cautious optimism.

FOR WILLIAM M. PETERS,

President of National Association to Keep and Bear Arms

Does your Association claim credit for the defeat of Senators Tydings, Dodd, Gore and Goodell to Congress on the basis of their pro-gun registration views?—Mrs. L. W. Moore, Roseburg, Ore.

● Millions of Association informed Americans now stand as a bulwark of patriotism with the demand that those who would lead the United States of America must return to God and country and to the United States Constitution as it is written and not as it is, I believe, far too often communistically interpreted by many persons in positions of trust and leadership. It is because of this bulwark of patriotism that I am convinced the dedicated and tireless efforts of Association members throughout our country were not only instrumental in the defeat of Senators Tydings, Dodd, Gore and Goodell but also greatly aided in the defeat of many other anti-gun politicians at state and local levels throughout our country.

FOR HILDEGARDE, singer

I read your book, "Over 50—So What," a few years ago. Are you still so frank about your age, and if so, what is it?—Isobel

Dennison, New York, N.Y.

● My dear, I celebrated my 65th birthday on Feb. 1, during my engagement at the Rainbow Grill in New York City. I must admit it was a day I dreaded, but it wasn't bad at all. If antiques get more valuable as they get older, why shouldn't I?

FOR MELVIN LAIRD,

Secretary of Defense

Are there any other countries besides the United States that draft men under penalty of prison?—Mrs. Ella Kram, Langdon, N.D.

● Except for Australia and France, we have no specific knowledge of the penalties imposed by foreign countries for the violation of their draft laws. In both Australia and France, persons who are convicted of violating the draft laws are subject to imprisonment.

FOR BOWIE KUHN,

Commissioner of Baseball

Why are we privileged to see four football games on Sunday but no baseball games? And only a choice of one on Saturday, a day that many fans have other things to do. That may explain why football leads baseball.—R. D. Ludwig, Fairmont, Ind.

● All our clubs televise their games, both home and away, ranging from a small number of their entire schedule. No other sports can claim such a service to the public. You are mistaken in your assertion that football leads baseball.

FOR JACQUES-YVES COUSTEAU,

Do aquatic mammals, such as seals and walrus, drink fresh water, sea water or no water at all?—Mrs. Paul G. Smith, Stateline, Nev.

● As a rule sea mammals do not drink water. Their water comes from the metabolic breakdown of foods, resulting in CO<sub>2</sub> and H<sub>2</sub>O. Some of this water is used to replace that lost in urine. The kidneys are extremely efficient and retain much water resulting in a very concentrated urine.

"Women who have settled for being 'just a wife and mother' torture themselves equally by comparing their appearance to that of models or actresses and their earning capacity with that of female executives. In such a game almost no woman can win"

A Man's View: What Women Really Have To Complain About.

By Sloan Wilson

As the father of three daughters and of a son who is soon to present me with a daughter-in-law, I have a complaint: our kind of civilization is too tough on women, and it's getting tougher all the time.

No matter what a young woman does these days, a lot of people try to make her feel bad about it. If she is a quiet, prudent girl who believes she should not try to grow up too fast and that sex can be frightening when it is urged upon her without love, responsibility or thought of marriage, many of her peers jeer at her as a square or some sort of old-fashioned, neurotic nut. On the other hand, if she tries to become a real swinger, she reads condemnation in the eyes of her parents and in the faces of many of her more conservative friends. Girls are asked to make decisions about their life style at a much earlier age than was common in my youth, and because there is more confusion about what is right in the hearts of most people, there is no course a young woman can follow without self-questioning and regret.

exerts more of a strain on girls than it does on boys for the simple reason that girls risk more than boys do when they make love. They risk more physically, as is evidenced by the great number of juvenile pregnancies, despite all the talk about easy birth control. For many reasons they risk more emotionally. Even if girls don't get pregnant, they can make themselves miserable worrying about it, and no pill has yet been invented which will prevent a girl from expecting that a man or boy who makes love to her will treat her with a kind of love and consideration which never will go out of style.

When a modern girl finds that she is being taken casually and without responsibility, she is hurt just as much as women all through history have been in similar circumstances. The main difference between the girls of today and those of prior generations is that the young are not protected any more. Gone are the chaperones, gone is the parental supervision much of the time, gone is the generally accepted code of conduct which allowed a girl to be indignant if she were asked to break it. We live in an age which expects young girls to control their own passions and those of young men with very little help. This makes no more sense than it would to give adolescents control of large amounts of money or to put them at the wheels of powerful automobiles without any speed limits or traffic rules. I am astonished not by the amount of misery which results from this failure of adults to help the young, but by the fact that so many young women have the sense and the strength to grow up triumphantly anyway.

If a young woman survives the chaos of growing up in a world with no clear guidance lines concerning sex, she faces another dilemma: should she concentrate on making some man a good wife or on a career? Many magazine articles, newspaper seers and television experts assure her that she does not have to make a choice, that she can, if she is any sort of a woman at all, do both. Countless young women believe this and feel they are failures if they do not become a beloved wife and mother while at the same time achieving dramatic success in a profession, in the arts or in business. I believe that it is long past time to point out the obvious truth that almost no woman can find the energy and time to make headlines on her own, and at the same time to fulfill the needs of a husband and of young children.

No matter how "liberated" women may become, men who have demanding careers of their own usually need a full-time helpmate at home. In this age, when it is almost impossible to find domestics, the all-important job of rearing children cannot easily be delegated to anyone. The more successful a man becomes, the more he needs a full-time wife as a partner who can make his home an island of order in a sea of confusion. I do not think I am the only man in the world who simply could not exist without a wife who can keep the world off his back while he works and who makes a home pleasant enough to be worth all the struggles and frustrations we all must endure.

Of course, there will always be a few glossy career women who will appear on television and in colorful magazine layouts with tales of how they scaled the heights of their profession while at the same time keeping a husband and several children marvelously happy at home. I have known several of these frantic ladies, and most of them are keeping up a pathetically fragile front. The few who do manage to achieve real success in a career without making their husband and children feel short-changed have been lucky enough to find an extraordinary man to marry, a male animal so strong, so self-sacrificing and so without needs that he can permit his wife to give a large amount of her time and energy to a career without resentment at all.

The trouble is that not many of these paragons exist. Many who try to play the part are men who feel so unable to cope with the world that they welcome a wife who will fight the battles for money and for prestige for them. Women strong enough to win real distinction in the arts, in science or in business rarely are satisfied with weak men for long, and become more and more frustrated when they find that strong men usually demand a full-time wife.

Of course, I don't say that it is absolutely impossible for any woman to combine an exciting career with a satisfying marriage, but I cannot imagine a goal more difficult to reach. After all, few people have the requirements for success in a career, even if they devote all their time and energy to it, and few people are able to create a truly happy marriage even if they are unhampered by the distractions of a demanding job. To ask a young woman to do both these things and to meet all the needs of young children at the same time, is unbelievably cruel and unrealistic.

Yet many women nowadays feel inadequate if they have devoted themselves fully to their home and equally inadequate if they have given themselves fully to a career. If a career woman is married, she often tortures herself by comparing her part-time efforts as a homemaker with the full-time endeavors of her sisters who do not have jobs. Women who, as they say, "have settled" for being "just a wife and mother" torture themselves equally by comparing their appearance to that of professional models or actresses and their earning capacity with that of experienced female executives. In such a game almost no woman can win.

The "Women's Lib" enthusiasts, it seems to me, increase all this confusion and frustration, for they appear to denigrate women who do not find it demeaning to work full-time at raising healthy children and keeping a man happy and strong enough to realize his full potential, both at his job and at home. Old-fashioned advocates of the theory that a woman's only place is in the home also add to the bewilderment because they do not take into account the obvious fact that not all women can get married, happily or otherwise, and that many women who can simply prefer a career of their own to the responsibilities of being a wife and mother. It is pointless to ask whether it is better for a woman to choose a career or the equally demanding role of a housewife. Obviously some individuals are better suited to one kind of life, some to another, and regardless of personal preferences, the world often has a way of reducing choices and handing a woman a situation she has to manage as best she can. Neither career women nor full-time wives should be criticized, and it is criminal, I think, to make each feel guilty because she has not succeeded in ~~living two kinds of life at once.~~

Men never are subjected to this kind of attack because the role of a father and husband has never been conceived as a conflict between the demands of a job and the demands of a home. It is theoretically possible, I suppose, for a husband and wife to have equally demanding jobs and to divide equally the tasks of cooking, cleaning the house and rearing children. In such an establishment, the husband would find it difficult to compete with men whose wives did not make such demands on their time and energy. Perhaps that is one reason why one almost never sees such a situation exist. If the wife works, our society still gives her the full responsibility for the home and children. That is unfair, but it's the way it works out, and it's hard to see how the situation can be changed.

If, as I believe, a lot of young girls are made unhappy by being left almost completely unprotected in a world which cannot seem to agree on questions of morality or custom, and if a lot of women are made unhappy by being made to feel that it is not enough to be a full-time wife or to have a demanding career, we men have a problem because I don't think many men are happy for long if they are surrounded by unhappy women. Perhaps this problem is largely of our own making because many of us tend to lecture our daughters on high standards of morality without much sympathy for the problems they face when they go out with youngsters their own age without any supervision. Perhaps too few husbands feel grateful to their wives for giving up jobs that might be more fun than housework sometimes, and perhaps it is time for male executives to stop making career women feel as though they are less than feminine because they decided not to try to add the responsibilities of a husband and children to the demands of their job.

~~The main reason why America is so tough on women nowadays is that~~ American men keep trying to have everything both ways at once. They want to be modern enough, and perhaps lazy enough to give full freedom to their adolescent daughters, but at the same time they are often terribly disappointed if those young girls are confused by that freedom or use it to be any different from their mothers and grandmothers, who rarely had to contend with such a lack of guidance.

They want their wives to be on hand whenever they or their children need them, and they also want their secretaries and other women in their office to be on hand whenever needed, but they cling to the notion that really superior women ought somehow be able to keep everybody happy at once.

If we men want the happiness of living with a contented wife and daughters, and of working with contented women in the office, we are going to have to demand less of them and to respect them more for surviving in a world that is even tougher on them than it is on us. ♦

a simple plan of hearty eating and gentle body toning that

Turns up your "Digestive Furnace" and burns flab right off your body!

From the office of the "body-slimming specialist" whose patients have lost from 26 pounds to 148 pounds each, without a single moment's hunger!

A doctor who is so successful—who has produced so many incredible weight losses for men and women of all ages—that new patients are often forced to wait as much as several months to see him!

And—most astounding of all—a doctor who forces his patients to lose weight by eating! By eating three full meals a day—all with second helpings, and with "fill-em-up snacks" at bedtime (if they still have room for them)!

Because this doctor has discovered an "upside-down" way to reduce! A way to lose weight (to repeat this all-important fact once again) by eating, and not by starving! Because the foods he feeds you—and the simple "body-toning exercises" he recommends for you—automatically make your "inner furnace" burn hotter—so that flab turns into fuel—and you can lose 20 . . . 40 . . . 60 . . . 80 . . . even 100 or 120 ugly pounds in the most delightful way you've ever dreamed possible!

Revolutionary? Yes! Controversial? Yes!
But It Works! Hundreds Upon Hundreds Of Personal Patients Follow This Simple Plan
Every Month! AND We'll Let You Prove At Our Risk That It Can Work For You!

So here it is: A new way to lose the kind of weight you've always thought it was possible for you to lose. And do it—not by starving—but by eating as much as you want wisely!

Yes, this is a diet—an eating diet! That forces you to eat at dinner, even though you may actually feel full from breakfast and lunch and the hearty snacks you've had in between!

Yes, there are certain foods you can't eat, because they're poison for your weight. But this doctor pays you back for passing by those "poison foods"—by letting you take another second helping of other foods you love instead! And you keep right on burning off the weight!

Yes, you have to stick to the diet every day if you want to keep on melting off those pounds. And you have to stick to the diet even if you've lost 40 or 60 or 80 or 100 pounds—so you can keep that weight off for good! But who wouldn't want to stay on a diet that lets you fill up your plate with delicious delicacies over and over again! And snack in the morning! Snack in the afternoon! Snack delightfully every night before you go to bed!

And One Extra Point: This Diet Has A Second
Giant Benefit For You! It Drains THE EXCESS
FLUID Out Of Your Body, That You May Never Have Been Able To Lose Before!

This second way of evaporating ugly flab from your body is perhaps equally as important as the first. For medical science now knows that a huge portion of those ugly bulges on your waistline, hips, thighs, buttocks and elsewhere is nothing but plain trapped water! And that even when you melt away the fat itself, too much bulge remains until you get the trapped water out with it!

You probably already know this. But did you know that most of the ways you use to lose weight today—most of the so-called "diet foods" you use to try to starve that weight off your body—actually increase the amount of trapped water in your tissues!

This includes the Number One "reducing fruit," eaten by millions of men and women when they want to go on a "crash diet"—and that is so effective at retaining water in the body that the armed forces uses it to keep men from bleeding to death when they have no plasma handy!

This also includes the Number One "reducing cheese"—and the Number One "reducing hot drink"—and every single one of the so-called "no-calorie" or "low-calorie" soft drinks! They are all "super water holders"! And unless you know when and how to use them—and when not to use them at all—you'll simply swell up like a balloon, even if you're conscientiously starving yourself twenty-four hours a day!

In Just Fifteen Minutes With His New Book,
This Doctor Teaches You How To Drain Out
That Excess Fluid—As Well As That Ugly Flab—And Do It Without Destroying Your Face!

At this point, we must quote the doctor himself. Here is what he says: "The results of this diet will never be seen by your friends in sunken cheeks, hollow eyes, folds of unfilled skin, or other evidences of the typical starvation diet. If you stand before a mirror, you will have nothing but memory, and perhaps an old photograph, to tell you where you carried the weight before which has now disappeared."

At the same time, he also says:

"My patients find that soon enough their clothes will become frightfully loose; even their shoes become too big. If you stick to my diet, you might even have to have your bowling ball redrilled."

And he quotes patient after patient, like this:

"I am very happy with the results. I can wear a size 12 dress (was 20) or suit, and some size 10 dresses. Weight was 183, now 136 . . . I feel 10 years younger too."

No wonder prospective patients wait as much as several months to see this man—to learn how they can lose 20 . . . 40 . . . 60 . . . 80 . . . 100 and even 120 pounds with a diet that forces them to eat and eat again—and that drains excess fluids right out of their bodies at the exact same time!

But YOU don't have to wait a single minute! All you need to do to try this revolutionary diet—AT OUR RISK—is simply send in the coupon below! It must work for you, or every single penny of your money back!

Why not start losing that ugly flab—for good—today!

Star Profile/By Peer J. Oppenheimer

Mary Tyler Moore: From Mini-Slump To Big Comeback

Says a friend, "Mary is ambitious, but she has never been a bore about it."
And that's the saving grace. . . .

After spending most of her 33 years trying to deal with a lonely childhood, a rebellious adolescence, a disillusioning first marriage when she was 17 and the interim years of struggle for recognition, Mary Tyler Moore is convinced she's finally happy.

Being secure as the wife (since 1963) of Grant Tinker, ex-television executive-turned-producer, and mother of 15-year-old Richard (by her first marriage), has a lot to do with her contentment. But most significant is the fact that Mary—star of the highly rated TV series, the "Mary Tyler Moore Show," a product of her own MTM Production Company—is now the success she has always dreamed of being.

When Mary first captured TV audiences as Laura Petrie, the very human and very vivacious wife of Dick Van Dyke on "The Dick Van Dyke Show," she suspected her success was due to Dick's charisma. "He was so fantastic, I thought his glow had just rubbed off on me." For five years she felt like a spill-over from Dick. She wanted to know whether she could succeed—really succeed—on her own.

When Mary was offered a seven-year contract at Universal at the closing of Dick's show, she took it, and was miscast as the shy darling in "Thoroughly Modern Millie." It was a devastating experience. "I am simply not geared for movie-making."

So Mary decided to tackle Broadway. She got a year off from the studio, moved to New York with Grant and Richard and nearly killed herself trying to make a hit out of the disastrous "Breakfast at Tiffany's." Richard Chamberlain, another refugee from TV, was her costar in the ill-fated play.

Thanks to a tenacious streak that has never let her deviate from her desire to be a success, Mary mended quickly. "At first I blamed myself for the "Tiffany's" fiasco—probably because I never had confidence in myself and my ability."

She returned to Hollywood and remained dissatisfied with herself in such films as "Don't Just Stand There," "What's So Bad About Feeling Good" and "Change of Habit." When CBS asked Mary to star in her own series, she could hardly believe it. "I wanted to—but I wasn't sure whether I could, or whether I should! I certainly wasn't going to turn them down!"

Once production started, however, Mary began to relax for the first time in years. Referring to her production unit, Mary said, "We respect one another, and we have a lot of fun. I could sense the same feeling building on the set that we had on Dick's show, and that made that one work well for so long."

Mary's life has always pivoted around her career. In a way, it is an obsession. Said a friend, "Mary is ambitious, but she's never a bore about it." And that's the saving grace.

Mary's nagging ambition was noticeable when she was a child and pleaded to be allowed to take extra dancing lessons after school. The harder she worked to assure herself she was the best, the less time she had for friends and family. A few years after the family moved to Los Angeles from Brooklyn—Mary was eight at the time—she was convinced her parents really didn't want her. Both of them worked, her mother as a telephone operator and her father for the Edison Company. When her father was home, he was an adamant disciplinarian. Her mother tried to compensate by being overly indulgent. As a result, Mary didn't know what was expected of her, so when she was 14, she moved in for a while with an aunt.

Even the night of graduation, when a girl usually thinks about her new dress and a date for the prom, Mary was more concerned about getting a good night's sleep because she was to audition the next day for a TV commercial.

She gave up the party, got the job and received $2,000 a day for dancing around some kitchen appliances.

Once she graduated and was receiving such an astronomical salary, Mary thought she had life pretty well under control. She decided to marry Richard Meeker, "the boy next door." Looking back, she admits that, in a way, it was an act of defiance aimed at her parents. A year later her son was born. Neither squelched her ambition. Mary still wanted a career in show business.

Mary's first break came when she was cast as Sam on "The Richard Diamond Show," back in 1959. As a gimmick, only her legs were seen. After 13 weeks of that, Mary, fed up with nobody knowing the appendages were hers, left to do guest shots on, "77 Sunset Strip," "Hawaiian Eye" and "Bachelor Father." Finally she landed the role of Laura Petrie. But even that five-year success didn't satisfy her. Like most TV actresses, she wanted a crack at making movies. It was disappointing for her to discover that she didn't click on the big screen as she had on TV, and it was also a shock for her to realize that she really didn't like making movies: "But I had to make movies before I learned what it was about making them I didn't like."

Grant Tinker fell in love with and married Mary while she was doing "The Dick Van Dyke Show." Although he doesn't feel that Mary's career should be the center of their lives, he is content to stay in the background.

Right now, everything is coming up roses for Mary. "I enjoy life more than I ever did," she says. "I've always taken things to heart, but I am very resilient, and I've learned to put things in their proper place and forget them."

As Mary's show steadily climbs on the rating chart, she says, "It is as if I've come back to life. I feel I am fulfilling a real function: I am making people laugh. And I am proud of what I am doing. I spent too many years being unhappy. No more!" ♦

Recipes for a Tight Family Budget

By Melanie De Proft
Food Editor

■ Wise homemakers keep the family budget in mind when shopping for food. They eagerly take advantage of supermarket specials on "marked down" items. They check local newspapers for stores offering attractive weekend "buys." Purchasing some foods in quantity often effects a sizable saving. Foods in season are usually plentiful, and therefore, priced within reach of most budget-minded shoppers.

Here are several recipes which should be cost-satisfying as well as palate-satisfying, although prices for many products may differ from one area of the country to another.

Kraut and Frankfurter Plank Dinner

Sweet-Tart Kraut
Mustard-Sauced Carrots
8 Frankfurters, slit diagonally
3 times about halfway through Melted butter or margarine
Mashed Potatoes for 4 servings

1. Prepare Sweet-Tart Kraut and keep warm while preparing Mustard-Sauced Carrots.

2. Heap kraut mixture in center of a large seasoned plank (see Plank Facts). Brush franks with melted butter or margarine and arrange, slit side down, at two opposite corners of plank. Pile the Mustard-Sauced Carrots and Mashed Potatoes to side of kraut at opposite corners. Drizzle melted butter or margarine over potatoes.

3. Set under broiler with top 6 to 8 in. from heat until franks are browned. Turn franks and continue broiling until franks and potatoes are lightly browned. Serve on the plank. 4 servings

Plank Facts: To season a new hardwood plank, rub well with cooking or salad oil. Heat in a 250°F. to 275°F. oven 1 hr. Remove; wipe off excess oil. Use or cool and store, wrapped, in a cool, dry place.

To use the plank, always put it into the cold oven and preheat together; then remove from oven, oil thoroughly, and arrange food on it.

A Plank Dinner of kraut, frankfurters, mashed potatoes and mustard-seasoned carrots is zesty, tempting, satisfying, easy to prepare and easy on the budget.

How You Can Make Your Gasoline
Go Farther By Richard Trubo

Most automobile manufacturers claim that their cars get more miles-per-gallon than their competitors. But no matter what kind of car you drive, you can help determine just how far your gasoline dollar will go.

Whether you own a domestic or foreign car, an automatic transmission or stick shift—there are certain driving techniques that you can adopt to increase your gas mileage.

1. Avoid quick starts. When you move away from a stop-light, do it smoothly.
2. Anticipate upcoming stoplights. Don't rush to a red light only to have to stop quickly. If you think a red light is about to turn green, slow down only enough so that you'll arrive at the intersection when the signal changes.
3. Use the gas pedal gently and smoothly. Don't pump the pedal. When you pass other cars, allow yourself enough clear road so you can make the move smoothly. Abrupt acceleration eats up gas.
4. Avoid excessive speeds at all times. You use up 10 percent more gas at 60 m.p.h. than at 50 m.p.h. Speeds higher than 60 m.p.h. drain your gas tank even more.
5. When the car is stationary for an indefinite period, kill the motor. If you are waiting to pick someone up, you're only wasting gas by keeping the motor running.
6. Learn to maneuver hills properly. Since speed costs less on a flat road than on an incline, accelerate slightly before the hill, and let your momentum help you ascend the hill more economically.

7. Keep your tire pressures at the levels recommended in your owner's manual. If one tire is "softer" than the others, it will tend to drag. As well as causing uneven tire wear, your gas mileage will decrease substantially. Check your tire pressure about once a week.

8. "Back off" of the gas pedal slightly when you're driving on high-speed freeways. Accelerate to the speed you desire, then ease off the pedal slightly. Usually your speed will remain the same, but the decreased pedal pressure will send less gasoline to the engine.

9. Avoid panic stops. Leave plenty of safety space between you and the car in front. Tail-gating only increases the chances of quick stops—and accidents—and eats up your gasoline dollar, too.

10. Experiment with different brands of gasoline. Run about three or four tanks of a brand through your car, keeping accurate tallies of the gallons, mileage and costs. You may find that a particular gasoline is more economical for your particular car. ♦

Constipated Today?

You wouldn't be if—

...you realized that as you get older your system naturally slows down and the laxative you have been taking may no longer be best for you. So, if you've been taking magnesia, salts, oils or harsh chemical laxatives once a week or more and you're still not satisfied—here's a better way to end constipation worries. Take medically proven Serutan. It's different!

Unlike other laxatives that may cause irritation or griping, Serutan, taken daily, forms a soft gel which moistens food wastes and shapes them into a well-formed stool. Serutan produces the proper amount of bulk needed to help bring peristaltic stimulation to your sluggish colon. This is utterly different from forcing your system with harsh chemical laxatives which may dry you out. You can take gentle Serutan every day because it is a pure, non-irritating vegetable hydrogel and contains no harsh roughage, no chemical laxatives. Take Serutan every day to get regular—and keep regular.

Delicious Fruit Flavor

Serutan now comes in a delicious fruit flavor. Get Serutan regular powder, fruit flavor or toasted granules today. When you read Serutan backwards, it spells "natures." And nature's way is best. Get Serutan today.

I was the 320-pound "Baby" of the family.

By Martha Nick—as told to Ruth L. McCarthy

You can see from the crack that I used to jam my "320-pound pictures" at the back of a drawer.

DON'T misunderstand. At 320 pounds, I was no cradle baby. The fact is, I was in my twenties and so heavy that even my nieces and nephews noticed how I waddled. So they called me Baby Huey, the fat duck. It was embarrassing all right, but it actually took the threat of an operation to make me lose 175 pounds.

Of course, all that weight wasn't put on overnight. From the time I was twelve, I ate enough to feed my four brothers and three sisters. My parents, being dutiful, took me to doctors for tests, but the conclusion was that I had a normal thyroid and an overactive appetite. I simply liked food and nobody stopped me from eating. Maybe because I was the baby of the family and everybody spoiled me.

Anyway, by the time I'd left my teens, my appetite was enormous. My breakfast consisted of 12 fried eggs, a pound of bacon, a package of buttermilk biscuits, a quarter pound of butter and a quart of milk. I got so big, my mother often used upholstery material (and a size 60 pattern) to make me dresses.

Difficult as the clothing problem was, job hunting was even worse. At one place, they said I just wouldn't fit into their office. So I finally stayed home and ate myself into an acute gall bladder attack. But when the surgeon saw me, he refused to operate. Instead, he grabbed my belly and said: "Get that off or you won't live six months."

Like me better like I am now? So does everyone I know. They can hardly believe it. But that's what getting down to 145 pounds can do for a girl.

I sometimes wonder what I'd have done, if my mother hadn't discovered Ayds®...you know, that vitamin and mineral reducing-plan candy.

It had worked for her, but I'd never given it a fair chance, as I hadn't with anything else. And let's be honest. To reduce, you just can't keep stuffing food into yourself. Like getting up in the middle of the night and gorging on cold cuts or leftover pork chops.

But this time, I was in earnest, so I bought some vanilla caramel Ayds at the drugstore, though my mother often kept a box of one of the other flavors in the cupboard.

At first, I just substituted Ayds candies for between-meal snacks. And when you're used to eating a dozen crunchy-nut donuts at one clip, you can see how many calories I cut out of my day. Before too long, I began to see results, so I decided to follow the Ayds Plan properly. I took one or two Ayds before each meal with a hot drink (for me, tea) and those little candies really helped curb my appetite. Without harmful drugs, too.

It was around Christmas, I remember, and it was the first year that I hung more cookies on the tree than I ate. Of course, on the Ayds Plan, I ate lots of proteins and greens and I not only dropped pounds, but my blood pressure went from 220 to 125. The doctor was so amazed, he postponed my operation until July.

Meanwhile, I began to take up sports. I wanted as much exercise as I could get to let my muscles catch up with my skin. Besides, I wanted my social life to make up for my wasted years. You see, I'd been imprisoned in all that fat for so long that I needed to feel totally free. That's why I took up sky diving. Just the elements and me! A really super feeling.

Today, at 145 pounds, I've come completely out of my shell. I have a great job at Indiana Bell Telephone Company in South Bend, and these days I go out more than I stay in. What's more, for the first time in my life, I can face women on an equal basis. I'm not afraid of them anymore. In fact, I even feel secure enough to have a steady boyfriend. As for getting married, that can wait awhile. You see, thanks to Ayds, I still have a lot of living to do.

Are You A Good Judge Of Human Nature?

Your happiness is determined to a very large extent by your ability to understand people.

The more sensitive your insight into the personalities of the people around you, the better you are going to get along. People who lack the ability to see others as they really are, constantly are "disappointed in human nature" and place their confidence in the wrong people. Since understanding people—getting an accurate "feel" of their personality characteristics and how their minds work—is so important to us, you'll enjoy taking this true-or-false quiz which lets you in on science's most significant findings on this interesting subject.

1. Women are better judges of human nature than men.
2. A wife is a shrewd judge of her husband's character.
3. People who are good judges of other people are usually good judges of their own character.
4. A wife is a better judge of whether her spouse is telling the truth than a husband is.
5. A man can make a pretty accurate judgment of a girl's capacity for warmth and affection simply by taking her out to dinner.
6. The only way you can tell how good you are at sizing up people is by checking your track record—how many bull's-eye judgments, how many misses.
7. If you're a poor judge of others, there's nothing you can do about it.

ANSWERS

1. True. Psychologists have found that in social situations women are far quicker than men to sense the other person's thoughts and feelings, much more acutely aware of the nuances of manner and the tone of voice which reveal another's under-the-surface feelings. As Rutgers University studies have shown, in interpersonal relations, women are more keenly sensitive to what is going on, more astute than men in telling the difference between what people say and what they mean.
2. False. Regardless of how expert a woman may be when it comes to seeing others as they really are, she tends to lose perspective and objectivity when it comes to judging her husband or anyone she feels close to. Psychological studies at the University of California have shown that though a wife may feel that no one understands her husband as well as she does, her judgment is distorted by blind spots.

3. False. Psychological studies show the people who have the keenest perception when it comes to sizing up others are likely to have difficulty in seeing themselves clearly. On the other hand, people who have the best insight into their own strengths and weaknesses, tend to be the poorest judges of others.

4. True. Even though a woman may look at her husband through rose-tinted glasses, minimizing his faults and exaggerating his virtues, she is far more expert than he is in judging whether her spouse is lying or telling the truth—just by his voice. In tests at DePauw University, psychologists found that women are much more proficient than men in judging whether a person is lying or telling the truth from the sound of the voice.

5. True. If she's a picky eater, doesn't like this and can't abide that—give her a negative rating. Studies at the University of Texas have shown that people who are finicky about their food, tend to be similarly inhibited in the love and romance department, too.

6. False. Findings of a study by Colorado State University researchers provide a handy yardstick. Psychologists found that people who made the best scores in judging the character and personality traits of others tended to have these traits in common: they had well-balanced personalities, were tolerant of others, exhibited poise and self-control. Those who made poor scores in sizing up others tended to be lacking in emotional stability and in their self-control.

7. False. Just make it a practice not to make snap judgments. Cultivate the art of drawing the other person out. Most people, when encouraged, love to talk about themselves. And the more they talk, the more completely they reveal themselves to you. Learn to be a good listener. People will tell you a great deal more about themselves than they realize if you listen carefully. ♦

What in the World!

Celebrating the Official Birthday

This Wednesday a salute of guns in London will signal Queen Elizabeth's 45th birthday. The occasion will be celebrated officially, however, on June 12—which happens to be two days after husband Prince Philip's 50th birthday. The two-part birthday arrangement was started in 1903 by Edward VII, to fit in with his busy schedule. Saturdays have been convenient for the Queen; she had announced back in March, 1952, that it would always be an early June date. When her birthday is observed in other parts of the British Empire, other dates are chosen to suit other conveniences. In Britain, the birthday, although celebrated with regal ceremony, is not designated a national holiday.

ELEVATED WALKWAYS
To unclog future traffic?

"Today's fast-growing towns and cities should begin now to boost street capacities if they want to avoid a future of traffic-clogged chaos," says Los Angeles architect J. Edward Martin. "Most street systems are operating at only one-third of their capacity because of cross traffic, traffic signals and pedestrians. Today's traffic lights, for instance, are green only 40% of the time, and keep both pedestrians and cars at a standstill for the other 60%." Martin suggests eliminating the clog points by making streets one-way, taking pedestrians off them and onto elevated walkways and creating adjacent superblocks. The superblock areas, equivalent to 4 to 6 of today's standard blocks, would then become pedestrian-oriented, nonautomotive traffic shopping malls.

SUPPOSE THE HOTEL STAFF DOUBLES AS SECURITY GUARDS - WITH INSTRUCTIONS ABOUT TRESPASSING GUESTS, BUT, BY NOW, I SHOULD LOOK HARMLESS ENOUGH...

HEY! NOBODY'S ALLOWED UP HERE, BUSTER. Y'WANT TO GET HEAVED OUT ON YOUR EAR?

HARD OF HEARING, EH, MAC? OKAY! YOU GET A BELT...

HERE! WHAT THE DEVIL...?

TERRY! BEAUTIFUL! Y'KNOW? WITH THE PRACTICE YOU'RE GETTING, YOUR RESCUE EFFORTS ARE BEGINNING TO TAKE ON A CERTAIN PROFESSIONAL SHEEN.

SEE, MR. HOOD? YOUR OBSESSION WITH SECRECY DOES AROUSE DISTRUST. I WARNED YOUR MEN THAT YOUR UNORTHODOX WAY OF INVITING ME HERE WOULD MAKE COLONEL LEE'S JUICES FLOW.

BUT THAT'S ALL RIGHT, DARLING. LET 'EM FLOW. GIVES ME A NICE, COZY FEELING.

LOOK, DEEPSIX! I'M GETTING A CONFUSED IMPRESSION THAT YOU WERE NOT ABDUCTED...

A MASTERFUL DEDUCTION, COLONEL. NOW WILL YOU GO EXHIBIT YOUR GRANDSTANDING HEROICS ELSEWHERE? REPRESENTATIVE DEEPSIX AND I ARE IN A BUSINESS CONFERENCE!

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR
BY HAL FOSTER

Our Story: BEN ZIRARA LEADS PRINCE VALIANT AND ARN ACROSS BRITAIN AND DOWN THE COAST OF BISCAIY BAY, A ROUTE THAT IS SAFE FROM THE MIGRATING GOths. BUT THERE ARE OTHER DANGERS. A SEAPORT TOWN IS IN FLAMES, EVIDENCE THAT VIKING RAIDERS HAVE PAID A VISIT.

THEY STABLE THEIR HORSES AT A TAVERN AND CARRY IN THEIR BAGGAGE. THE PLACE IS EMPTY. EVERYONE HAS GONE TO FIGHT THE FLAMES.

ZIRARA LEAPS TO HIS FEET, EYES BLAZING. "SHOW ME THESE MISCREANTS. THEY SHALL PAY IN BLOOD FOR THESE MISDEEDS, FOR MY SWORD IS EVER READY TO PROTECT PURE WOMANHOOD!" "OH, THEY HAVE GONE NOW," ANSWERS PURE WOMANHOOD AS SHE GOES TO TIDY UP. THERE IS JUST THE HINT OF A SMILE ON HER FACE.

WHEN SHE RETURNS SHE PLACES FOOD BEFORE THEM, SEEMING NONE THE WORSE FOR HER EXPERIENCE. BUT VAL IS WORRIED. ZIRARA'S OUTBURST SHOWS HIM TO BE SUCH A ROMANTIC. THAT HIS DEDICATION TO PROTECT WOMANHOOD MIGHT LEAD TO DELAYS IN THEIR QUEST.

WAKING OR SLEEPING THE FACE OF ALETA IS EVER BEFORE HIM, SPURRING HIM ON HIS RESTLESS WAY, FOR WELL HE KNOWS THE DANGERS OF HER LONG SEA VOYAGE.

EACH DAY THE DISTANCE BETWEEN VAL AND ALETA WIDENS. PERHAPS THEIR SEPARATION WILL BE FOREVER. TOO LONG HAS SHE NURSED THE PAIN IN HER HEART. THE RECORDS THAT HAD BEEN SENT HER EACH YEAR ARE BROUGHT TO HER CABIN AND SHE THROWS HERSELF INTO THE WORK OF PLANNING THE FUTURE OF HER KINGDOM. BUT WHO CAN CONTROL THEIR DREAMS?

NEXT WEEK - Lady in Distress

-SCHILLER-

BEARING GIFTS OF ANCIENT ARTIFACTS PROVIDED BY GOLDSWINGER, THE EXPEDITION ARRIVES AT THE HARBOR WHERE THE "HISPANIOLA" RIDES AT ANCHOR----

HOW'RE WE GONNA TELL THE CREW THAT CAP'N AHAB'S BACK THERE AT EL DORADO DIGGIN' HIMSELF INTO A TIZZY TRYIN' T' LOCATE 'GOLD THAT AIN'T T' BE HAD?

IT IS MY CONSIDERED OPINION THAT THEY WILL GREET THE NEWS OF THEIR CAPTAIN'S ABSENCE WITH SOMETHING LESS THAN REMORSE!

LEAPIN' LIZARDS!! THE MINIMEN TOOK OFF WITHOUT US EVEN HEARIN' 'EM MOVE!!

THEY HAVE COMPLETED THEIR JOB, PRINCESS! THEY FELT NO NEED TO LINGER!

HEAVE TO, YER BLASTED LUBBER!! WE AIN'T NEVER GONNA GET OUT O' THIS MAUSOLEUM IF YER WASTES YER LAST OUNCE O' STRENGTH DIGGIN' FER TREASURE THAT AIN'T THERE!!

THERE'S GOLD T' BE HAD AN' I'LL BE HANGED AFORE I GIVES UP ON IT----

WE HAVE BEEN DECEIVED BY THE FALSE GOD, EROG---- AND THE MAN FROM THE SHIP IS RESPONSIBLE---- SO----

HE MUST PAY THE KROGS PENALTY ---- HANGING!!

WELL, I GOTTA ADMIT THAT THE ONE THING I AIN'T GONNA MISS THE SIGHT OF IS THAT "DEVIL'S TRIDENT" ---- THE THOUGHT O' IT'LL GIVE ME THE SHAKES FOR A LONG TIME T' COME!

SO LONG, GOLDSWINGER... AN' ALL YOU MINIMEN OUT THERE... I'M SURE GONNA MISS YOU!!
