

Hospital Rate Hike Effective June 1

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Rates for semi-private rooms and wards at Pitt Memorial Hospital are being increased, following adoption of a new scale by the Board of Trustees last night. They will become effective June 1.

Semi-private rates are being raised as follows: rooms now $30 raised to $32; rooms now $32 to $33; and rooms now $33 to $34. Ward beds will cost $29 instead of $27.

Operating, recovery, and delivery room charges were increased $5 each. The delivery room will be $50; the recovery room $20 for the first hour; and the operating room $55 for the first half-hour when the new rates take effect.

The last rate increase of room rates at the hospital was 18 months ago. Having operated at a deficit for several months now, the Board agreed it must do something to offset rising costs of operation. All hospitals in this area already have rates at least as high as the new ones, they noted.

Uncertainty Seen Ended

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — City-county school leaders, although dejected that the Supreme Court ruled to allow busing for desegregation, say at least they are relieved to have definite word after eight months of waiting.

"Even though I might detest the decision, I'm sure glad we've got something on it," said Thomas B. Harris, vice chairman of the Charlotte-Mecklenburg County Board of Education.

The Supreme Court's ruling, upholding an order by U.S. District Judge James B. McMillan, means the fleet of orange buses that has been transporting some 40,000 pupils a day will continue to roll.

Another school board member, Dr. Carlton G. Watkins, expressed hope that it also will mean a drop in the racial tension which the order has generated in the system's 100 schools and among thousands of parents.

"At least the community knows what is expected of it," Watkins said. "Maybe it can react in a positive way instead of the negative feeling we've had for the past year and a half."

Watkins said reception of the final judicial word might also prod the school board to refine the plan so that fewer children would have to be bused.

School officials said some 20,000 pupils have been bused this year who would have remained in neighborhood schools had the plan not been ordered, with 10,000 traveling between "paired" schools in widely separated and racially divergent neighborhoods.

The solid opposition to this inconvenience felt by many white parents prompted Harris and others to predict that the ruling would signal a departure from public schools into private academies.

"In my judgment, this decision is going to mark the beginning of the downfall of public education," said William H. Booe, an attorney elected to the board on a strongly antibusing slate last May. He called it "a sad day for America."

"I think there's going to be tremendous number of people who look for and find private education," said Harris. "I think it's very damaging that we've come to that."

The board chairman, William E. Poe, deferred comment on the ruling until he had time to read it. But he expressed disappointment that the court had restricted its decision to the cases before it without enunciating a nationwide principle for district judges.

Poe's disappointment was shared by Dr. A. Craig Phillips, the state superintendent of education.

"The decision still leaves us with a great many problems," Phillips said. "It does not really answer the question how children shall be assigned to public schools in North Carolina and in this country as a whole."

State Librarian Lauds Facility In Greenville

North Carolina's State Librarian, Philip Ogilvie, yesterday visited Greenville's Sheppard Memorial Library on his rounds of visits in connection with National Library Week.

Acknowledging he had heard much about the facility in Greenville, Ogilvie said, "This is a magnificent library you have here. I have intended for a long time to make a visit here, but have not had the time before."

Ogilvie said he came at a good time, when the azaleas and dogwood are in bloom. "The Greenville library is a delight, both inside and outside."

The top librarian in the state, Ogilvie said he had earlier in the day visited Winton to see the new library there and had attended a conference of the Council for the Aging.

State Librarian for the past five and one half years, Ogilvie noted he was at one time librarian in Winton, a small town on the Chowan River in Hertford County.

During his afternoon visit in Greenville, Ogilvie was a special guest at a meeting of the Library

A resolution of appreciation for Ed Waldrop's 12 years of service on the Hospital Board was called for. Waldrop went off the Board last month, having served the maximum time allowed, two six-year terms.

The Board also expressed appreciation to Carolina Sales, Inc. of Greenville for the donation of two biological refrigerators.

Provisional approval was given for the use of the hospital for an obstetrical assistant program East Carolina University is planning. This was done at the suggestion of the medical staff, who had it called to their attention by local obstetricians.

Hospital Administrator C. D. Ward reported that the hospital laundry should be being done by prison labor by July or August at a considerable savings to taxpayers.

Architects for the new hospital, Beverly Greeman and Mark Snoddy, presented preliminary plans for the hospital building. Snoddy told how they hope to try a new "cluster concept" that would make the hospital a group of connected one and two-story buildings.

He explained how such an arrangement would eliminate the cost of pilings to support a high-rise building, the cost of stairwells and elevator shafts, etc. He went on to show how each building could be planned for its particular use, and would not have to conform to another department with different needs. An example is that x-ray and surgical departments could have the high ceilings they need, yet other ceilings could be made lower to cut down on costs. Not planning a high-rise building would also make construction less expensive in that the possibility of hurricane-force winds would not have to be taken into account, he said.

The Board honored a request that Dr. W. A. Moody be relieved of his hospital duties because of his illness. Extended minor privileges were Dr. Rufus Henry Knott, in otolaryngology and Dr. Robert E. Cargill in dentistry. Dr. Keith McNeer was given consulting privileges in ophthalmology.

Birmingham Air Crisis Abating

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — An urgent summons from a citizens' group known as GASP set federal experts in motion today as an air pollution crisis began to abate over this industrial center.

A three-man Emergency Episode Team arrived before thunderstorms began washing away conditions that sent the city's particulate pollution count to 607 micrograms per cubic meter Tuesday.

The U.S. Public Health Service considers a reading of 200 as critical.

The leader of the team from the Environmental Protection Agency's Emergency Operations Control Center at Durham, N.C., Kenneth Lempert, said data was collected before the rains came.

A spokesman at the center in Durham, Darryl Tyler, said, "Our medical people are analyzing the data. We have nothing precise yet."

The National Weather Service's Birmingham office said

this morning that the rains would lower the pollution count to more normal levels.

A weatherman said, "The indicated circulation pattern does not favor reestablishment of stagnation in the next few days."

Lempert said other members of the team are technician Jack Snider of Durham and Tommy Gibbs of the Region Four Air Pollution Control Office in Atlanta. He said public relations specialist Charles Pou of the Atlanta EPA office would arrive later.

Youth, Drugs Seized

An East Carolina University student was arrested Tuesday night near here by the Pitt County Sheriff's Department on a charge of felonious possession of narcotics.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that deputies arrested James Bryant Eichling of Rt. 1, Greenville, who is currently managing editor of the ECU student newspaper, Fountainhead, around 8 p. m. near Frog Level about three miles east of the city.

Deputies confiscated some 1,500 capsules containing Darvon and Benzadrine and a quantity of marijuana, the Sheriff added, in addition to several syringes and needles and smoking pipes. A 1967 model car was also seized during the arrest.

Sheriff Tyson said that the drugs carried a Seymour Johnson AFB stamp.

Eichling is out on $2,500 bond and a hearing on his case has been scheduled for May 10 in District Court here.

Four Fugitives Still At Large

CLINTON, N.C. (AP) — Four convicts who fled a prison road gang Monday after taking a prison guard, a highway foreman and seven other prisoners as hostages are still at large. The hostages were freed unharmed.

Prison officials said today the four were last seen on U.S. 301 south of Fayetteville late Monday when they held up Charles Lee Carter of Eastover, tied him to a tree and took his car.

The four escapees are: Chamberland Able of Fayetteville, serving a term for robbery; Harry Green of Grayville, Ala., serving a sentence for kidnapping; Ernest Jones of Hopkinsville, Ky., serving six years for robbery; and Terry Sykes of Jackson, Miss., serving five years for criminal assault.

Hunt Arsonist In Pender And Duplin Woods Fires

By MELVIN LANG
Associated Press Writer
BURGAW, N.C. (AP) — State investigators have launched an intensive probe in Pender and Duplin counties to uncover the arsonist responsible for a fire that defoliated 13,000 acres of the one-green Angola state game preserve.

Gov. Bob Scott, who toured the fire area by helicopter and auto Tuesday, used the term "despicable" in talking about the person or persons who laid a torch to the pine and grass refuge Sunday.

Two investigators from the North Carolina Forest Service, which recently established its own enforcement division, and two from the State Department of Insurance were reported in the Burgaw area.

The Angola fire was the largest of nearly 1,200 wildfires reported in North Carolina since April 9. State forestry officials said Tuesday nearly two-thirds of the fires were believed the result of firebugs and arsonists. State Forester Ralph Winkworth, who accompanies Scott on the helicopter trip from Raleigh to Burgaw, said preliminary investigation showed that eight to 10 fires were set along the northern edge of the Angola preserve, in Duplin County.

"They knew what they were doing," Winkworth said.

State firefighters, forestry students from Wayne Community College at Goldsboro and employees of paper companies holding land in the area were attempting to hold the flames north of N.C. 53 today.

"We have it contained, but not controlled," said regional forester Ted Banner.

Scott's helicopter drifted through the fringes of white and blackish-grey smoke curling, upward from the fires Tuesday, circling at times so the governor could get a closer look at the charred remnants of pond pines dotting the stark black fields behind the flames.

In front of the fire all was green, yellow and brown, and hues mixed in spring splendor.

Meanwhile, two more fires erupted in the Pisgah National Forest in western North Carolina.

A 100-acre fire in Burke County, near the famed Brown Mountain, brought out 75 men backed up by bulldozers and aerial tankers. A 20-acre fire was reported in Madison County near the Tennessee border. The forest service said more than 45,000 acres of land had been scorched in North Carolina during the last two weeks.

Governor's Award To 3 Greene Communities

RALEIGH — Three Greene County communities are the latest recipients of the Governor's Award for efforts designed to attract new industry to their area.

The towns of Hookerton, Snow Hill and Walstonburg were cited this week by Roy Sowers, director of the North Carolina Department of Conservation and Development.

A letter to John Church Jr., economic director of Greene County, from Governor Bob Scott stated, "It is my pleasure to designate these communities as North Carolina Governor's Award winning communities. My congratulations to you and your communities ... for successfully completing the requirements for this award."

The date of the presentation of the official award will be announced later.

The Commerce and Industry Division of the North Carolina Department of Conservation and Development presented the Governor's Award Program as an assistance to communities in North Carolina in their industrial development efforts.

It is based on the achievement of goals which when reached, places the community in a stronger competitive position for the attraction of industry and for general economic growth. It is a program that was established to help those communities in North Carolina that need assistance — the smaller towns.

"Governor's Award communities" are recognized as communities that are better prepared for industrial and economic development.

The objectives of the program are:

— to help each community to become better prepared for industrial development;

— to give to the Commerce and Industry Division a better inventory of communities to bring to the attention of industrial firms seeking new plant site locations.

DOLL DRESSES Mrs. Alex Kristine, a devoted Shirley Temple fan, enjoys making doll dresses like the outfits the child star wore in her movies.

Shirley Temple Fan Is Still Devoted To Image

By MARY ANN CURTIS

GARY, Ind. (AP) — "For sale: Shirley Temple stationery, 20 sheets for $1," the advertisement states.

Another says: "For sale, two by three-foot black and white poster. Bright eyes pose. Movie script, Little Miss Broadway, complete, marked on cover Revised Final and dated 2-8-38

One might think such advertisements are from ancient newspapers. After all, Shirley Temple performed as a child star more than 40 years ago and now, as Mrs. Charles Black, she is best known as United States Ambassador to the United Nations.

The ads aren't old, though. In fact, they appeared in a recent issue of "Sure for Shirl!", a fan club newsletter published monthly by Jackie Musgrave, Box 524, Anchorage, Alaska, and distributed for $1.50 a year.

Mrs. Alex Kristine, a devoted Shirley Temple fan for many years, is a subscriber to that newsletter.

"I wouldn't miss it," she says. "Reading it is how I keep up with all the publications and news items about Shirley Temple. I correspond with some other fans through the newsletter, too, and one of them had three beautiful chalk drawings made for me of Shirley Temple because he knew what pleasure they'd give me."

I take a visitor into another room and reveal the 32 scrapbooks all about Shirley Temple, compiled by Mrs. Kristine through the years.

"But my greatest interest has been the making of doll dresses like all the real outfits Shirley wore in her movies," Mrs. Kristine says.

Then, she brings out the trunk containing 61 exquisite replicas of dresses worn by the famous child actress in films, as well as performer in Hollywood on two different occasions during those movie-making years.

Does Mrs. Kristine find interest in Shirley Temple waning or on the rise? "Well, of course, Shirley Temple is unique in the sense that many of her fans have avidly followed her non-performing life as mother, housewife, political aspirant and now United Nations ambassador with never-failing interest through the years, and now others are becoming re-interested.

"There definitely is a growing fascination for all movie stars of an earlier era, and of course, among the all-time greats of film, nobody rates higher than Shirley Temple."

Mother Hates Second Son

By Abigail Van Buren

(© 1971 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: A while back you had a letter in your column from a woman who had a baby boy, but she had wanted a girl so desperately that she couldn't love the baby no matter how hard she tried. She confessed she even had thoughts of killing herself and killing the baby.

I am in a similar situation. After four years of marriage and a baby boy, now 3, my husband and I decided on a trial separation. While we were apart, I lived with another man and became pregnant by him. While pregnant I went back to my husband, told him the truth, and now we are reunited and happy again. My husband said he would let me decide whether I wanted to keep the baby or adopt it out. I first decided to adopt it out, but at the very last minute I changed my mind and kept it.

The baby is 3 months old now. He is very pretty and advanced for his age, but I just can't love him. My husband treats him like his own true son, but I hold so much resentment against the boy I can't stand to hold him or feed him. Now I wish I had given him away while I still had the chance. I know he deserves to be wanted like my first son is, but I keep wishing he would die, so I wouldn't have to raise him.

You recommended an adoption agency for the other mother. Can you do the same for me? I live near Worcester, Mass. Thank you.—WISH I WERE DEAD

DEAR WISH: Yes. Please send me your name and address. It will be held in the strictest of confidence.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 14-year-old girl. I have gone with boys since I was 12 and I have fooled around a lot but I am still a virgin [technically] and of that I am very sure.

I recently went to a clinic and the doctor there told me I had syphilis. I am being treated for it now. Abby, if you think this will help other girls who think they can't get syphilis unless they go all the way, I am telling you THEY CAN! I did. Maybe I should explain that I did some real heavy petting, and that is how I got it.—NO NAME, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: Your letter is well worth printing, and I thank you for wanting to share with others a lesson you learned the hard way.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I belong to a card club which meets once a month on Saturday night. We play bridge and then the hostess serves. We are thru with refreshments at about 1 a. m. which should be late enough for anyone, right? Not this group! The men sit down again and play cards for another two hours while the other three women gossip, and I fall asleep.

There are only four couples, so without us there wouldn't be any club. If I stay up until 3 a. m. I am no good the following day. It's my turn to have the party next. How can I get them to go home at a reasonable hour?—SLEEPY

DEAR SLEEPY: You can't, without making yourself very unpopular and inhospitable to boot. Obviously you're mixed up with a bunch of night owls, so since they're rarin' to go, let 'em, and YOU go to sleep.

DEAR ABBY: That Kansas gal who's dateless but pure should move one state to the south. I'm from Oklahoma and I know lots of young men there [including myself] who prefer nice girls.

Plenty of men still want pure girls. A hint: Try a church.—"OKIE"

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Island Paradise Is Happy Hunting Ground

ASCENSION (WNS) — There are 200 men to every girl on this island paradise in the south Atlantic, but want-ads for nurses in the 14-bed hospital have gone unanswered in the European hospital. "It's a mysterious change from 1969, when we received 300 applications for a secretarial job," said an official of Cable and Wireless. "The one we selected said she would never marry, but had a husband within six months." Mary McMahon praised the island for its "perfect weather, no taxes and a fine choice of BBC men and Americans at the missile tracking base." "Even turtle-watching can be romantic," she promised.

NAPOLEONS — Rectangles of puff pastry are sandwiched together with a creamy filling, then frosted and finally marked with chocolate. All ready to be sliced into supremely delicious servings!

The Art Of Baking Napoleons

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor
My mother and her friends, years ago, used to make a special distinction. Any number of women might be called good cooks. But only rarely was someone designated "a good baker." To be a really fine baker was considered a special art.

I was reminded of this amusing use of the word "bake" when my helper in testing recipes turned out Napoleons—those puff-paste delicacies filled with creamy custard, covered with white frosting and given chevron markings of chocolate—and I bestowed the accolade of "good baker" upon her.

Believe me, it takes some doing to make Napoleons. But worthwhile if you enjoy turning your hand to a complicated but supreme dessert. Here is the recipe with which success was attained at our house.

NAPOLEONS

1½ sticks (¾ cup) butter or margarine
1¾ cups sifted flour
1 tablespoon butter or margarine

½ cup ice water
2 teaspoons white vinegar
Confectioners' Sugar Glaze, see below

Chocolate Glaze, see below
To Assemble Napoleons, see below

Slice the 1½ sticks butter into ¼-inch pats. Draw an 8 by 6-inch rectangle on a sheet of wax paper. Lay the butter pats within the rectangle; press and shape them together, distributing butter evenly, to form one large flat 8 by 6-inch pat.

Wrap and chill in freezer 20 minutes. Meanwhile, with pastry blender cut the 1½ cups flour into fine crumbs. Mix together water and vinegar. Pour over flour mixture and mix to form stiff dough; add additional drops of water, if needed. Knead dough until smooth; cover and let rest 20 minutes. On lightly floured surface roll dough to a 13 by 10-inch rectangle. Place chilled butter pat on one half of dough, leaving margins of dough. Carefully fold margin edges over butter, then fold other half of dough over to enclose butter completely. Press lightly around edges. Roll dough to an 18 by 8-inch rectangle, then fold from short sides to make 3 equal layers. Wrap in transparent plastic wrap or wax paper and chill in refrigerator 20 minutes. Repeat rolling and folding procedure 3 more times; when rolling, always place short side of rectangle parallel to table edge and roll away from you; chill in refrigerator 20 minutes between each rolling. Cut dough in half lengthwise then crosswise, forming 4 rectangles. Work with one piece at a time, keeping remaining dough covered in refrigerator. Keeping short side parallel to table edge, roll to a 14 by 6-inch rectangle. With floured sharp knife, trim edges neatly. Fold dough in half, then lift to ungreased cookie sheet; unfold. Chill in refrigerator 30 minutes. Prick with fork, making pricks 1 inch apart. Bake in preheated 400-degree oven until golden brown—15 to 20 minutes. Cool completely before assembling Napoleons. Meanwhile prepare Cream Filling, Confectioners' Sugar Glaze and Chocolate Glaze.

NOTE: In preparing the pastry for Napoleons, you will either need 4 cookie sheets and enough room in the refrigerator to accommodate them, or you will have to improvise another way. You can reduce the number of cookie sheets needed by cutting 4 pieces of aluminum foil at least 16 by 8 inches. Place a rolled out rectangle of dough on each piece of foil; place on tray or other flat surface; chill. Slide each piece of foil with dough onto a cookie sheet to bake.

Cream Filling: In top of double boiler, mix together ¼ cup sugar and 2 tablespoons cornstarch. Stir in 3 slightly beaten egg yolks and 1 teaspoon vanilla. Gradually stir in 1½ cups milk. Cook over boiling water, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens—about 5 to 8 minutes. Remove from heat, cover and cool to room temperature. Fold 1 cup heavy cream, whipped, into cooled custard.

Confectioners' Sugar Glaze: Stir together 1 cup sifted confectioners' sugar and 1½ tablespoons water to make a thin icing.

Chocolate Glaze: In heavy saucepan over low heat, melt together 1 square (1 ounce) semi-sweet chocolate and 1 teaspoon butter. To decorate Napoleon, spoon melted chocolate into a wax paper cone with a small opening.

To Assemble Napoleons: Frost top of 1 pastry rectangle with Confectioners' Sugar Glaze. Pipe on Chocolate Glaze in crosswise lines 1 inch apart. With a toothpick or tip of knife, quickly draw lengthwise lines 1 inch apart through Chocolate Glaze to form chevron markings. Set aside decorated pastry rectangle. Spread about 1 cup Cream Filling on one of three remaining rectangles; cover with second rectangle. Continue assembling layers, using all fillings and ending with decorated rectangle. Chill in refrigerator at least 1 hour before serving. Cut crosswise into 10 slices.

Have Just Arrived!

She Won A Pulitzer Prize And Lost A Husband

By OLGA CURTIS
DENVER (WNS) — Many a housewife has dreamed of writing a best-seller and becoming famous.

Barbara Tuchman of New York made that dream come true. Her World War I history, "The Guns of August," won the Pulitzer Prize. Her newest book, "Stillwell and the American Experience in China, 1941-1945," is currently No. 4 on the national best-seller lists.

But, she warns, "fame takes its toll." The housewife who succeeds as an author may also lose her husband, as Mrs. Tuchman did.

"My writing caused great difficulty between my husband and myself," she explains. "He resented anything that diverted attention from him—and writing is a hell of a lot of work. We were divorced in 1963, the year I won the Pulitzer."

Dr. and Mrs. Lester R. Tuchman remarried a year later, when the bonds of some 30 years of matrimony and three daughters proved stronger than the friction of her work. But Mrs. Tuchman hasn't forgotten that "bad year."

Her Books

"After 'The Guns of August' I promised my husband I wouldn't write again, but the itch was too strong. I used to bring research books home and hide them under the sofa. I kept writing, and everything else suffered."

"Now I'm going to keep that promise. I don't think I'll write another book."

That remark, made casually over lunch in Denver, caused her publisher's representative to turn pale. Mrs. Tuchman's last three books have sold nearly two million copies and have been translated into 12 languages, including Hebrew, Japanese and Rumanian.

But Mrs. Tuchman repeated:

"There's no new book tickling my subconscious. 'I've done what I wanted to do." The slender, gray-haired author, 59, became a celebrity about the same time she became a grandmother. But she has wanted to be "the first historian in my family" since she studied history at Radcliffe College.

Morgenthau

Mrs. Tuchman is a member of the noted Morgenthau clan. Her grandfather was real estate millionaire Henry Morgenthau Sr., who served as U.S. Ambassador to Turkey. Her uncle, Henry Morgenthau Jr., was Secretary of the Treasury during Franklin D. Roosevelt's administration. Her father, Maurice Wertheim, was an investment banker and publisher of "The Nation" magazine. And her cousin, Robert Morgenthau, was the losing candidate for governor of New York last year.

"Ambition and energy runs in the family," Mrs. Tuchman notes. Marriage, she added, sidetracked her personal ambition for many years. She had worked as a foreign correspondent during the 1930's, but "retired" after her wedding in 1940. After her youngest daughter was born, however, the itch to write could no longer be denied.

Each of her books was at least three years in the making. The research, she says, is "fun, like a detective story. You don't have to think, you just follow clues."

The actual writing is "the hard part." Mrs. Tuchman writes in longhand on pads of yellow paper, sometimes rewriting the same passage three or four times, and sometimes achieving only 200 satisfactory words a day.

Idea At Biba Boutique Is Head To Toe Approach

By ANN HENCKEN
AP Fashion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A woman in a midi skirt painted her fingernails in dark Vampira shades and wriggled them at the Biba salesgirl.

"You've got on the bilberry, plum, prune and mahogany," said the girl.

"I'll take them all," said the lady. "And give me two spiders and a caterpillar set of eyelashes."

The idea at the Biba boutique—recently brought over from London—is a head to toe approach. The dusty range of 10 colors in boots, jewelry, bras, hats, dresses and T-shirts match cosmetics colors. The makeup will be sold in stores in this country.

The look starts with the face. The skin is smoothed with a yellow foundation, and eyes are smudged with smoky, berry and brown shades. No eyeliner—very long false eyelashes—eyes big and dark. Lips are stained in prune tones, not reds or pinks.

"It looks ghastly," said a young man watching the crush of women experimenting with dark pots of color in the shop at Bergdorf Goodman.

"If you feel like going mad, it's great," called a woman, as she tried on tassel belts.

"It's important you excite feelings, the stronger the better. We're either totally accepted or totally rejected," said co-owner and business manager Stephen Fitz-Simon.

Six years ago he and his wife, Barbara Hulanicki, the creative talent for Biba, got their first strong sign of acceptance when they were deluged with 12,500 orders after a newspaper story on their small boutique line.

Today, the successful London store brings an estimated 100,000 customers a week, including plenty of devoted fans who dress solely at Biba.

New Building Caused Eye Strain

SOUTHEAST, England (WNS) — Harold Sullivan wants his rent reduced because his privacy has been invaded with the building of new apartment houses next door. "When I look out of my window, I can see ladies in stages of undress," he reported. "And if I can see them, then they can see me."

College Girls Get Credit For Studies

WINNIPEG, Man. (UPI)—College girls probably have been studying men since the first one enrolled, but 60 in Winnipeg are getting class credit for it—in a special all-female class on the study on the male sex.

They're studying the history of North American dating habits and hearing lectures by women's liberation militants.

Their homework includes asking men for opinions on equality, pre-marital sex and responsibility for pregnant women.

The three-hour-a-week course is the brainchild of its teacher, Mrs. Lesley Hughes, who was asked to design an English Department course at Red River Community College for 60 student nurses.

"So rather than set them to studying Shakespeare and Milton, two more men, I decided to give them something useful and with practical application," says 28-year-old Mrs. Hughes.

"I think the girls need it because life is so complicated for women in 1971. There are more choices and decisions open to a woman than ever before."

And despite the guest lectures by women's liberationists, Mrs. Hughes says the course isn't aimed at encouraging revolt by women.

"On the contrary, the point is not to turn out feminists but young women who can cope with the very sophisticated demands made on them by society—namely men..."

Says Mrs. Hughes:

"This course isn't anti-men. What would we do without them?"

Meanwhile her boss, Len Goodine, says that if the course is successful, it would be offered in other college departments such as secretarial science.

Parting Shot Left By Thief

COLOGNE, West Germany (WNS) — Romy Clauss, 27, returned to her parked car to find her handbag stolen from the glove compartment. In the compartment was a note from the thief, "I pity the poor man who marries a woman as careless as you." Handwriting experts believe that the note was written by a woman.

Affording Reasonable Means

Admittedly, the legislature has drawn a fine line between personal rights and property rights in the new shoplifting bid that would permit merchants to detain for a reasonable time, without being liable for damages for false arrest, persons suspected of shoplifting.

That fine line may in practice be almost indistinguishable at times. There are also points at which the new measure is vague. Even so, when all things are considered the new approach to discouraging shoplifting appears reasonable, and the additional protection it offers to the public as well as store owners warranted.

The problem with the old shoplifting law is that store owners were always liable for damages for

Plastic Worm Is Moving Up

By CHARLIE HALL
(Gastonia Gazette)
GASTONIA — First came an odd-looking green plastic worm. People snickered, but it turned out to be irresistible to fish.

Now comes "Sam Missile," a new creation with the promise of the same results.

The man behind the lures is Dr. W. W. Walker of Gastonia, orthodontist-craftsman-sculptor-investor, but most of all, a fisherman.

A partner in the venture is Jack Beaty, owner and operator of a tackle shop with the reputation of a fisherman's fisherman.

After the green plastic worm developed by Dr. Walker a few years back became too much for a practicing orthodontist to handle, he joined forces with Beaty. "It is really what you would call a merger," said Beaty. "We'll be putting out plastic worms and Sam Missile. And, of course, I imagine we'll add more lures as time passes."

It will be a few weeks before the new lure, named for Dr. Walker's young son, Sam, is ready to market. Machinery for mass production is on order.

Nationwide Market
Dr. Walker's products already are sold in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida and Alabama, and now will go nationwide.

The new lure had a mixed parentage. "A friend of mine pulled up an old plug at the river back in September. I took it apart, studied it, made a mold of it, later changed the hook placement and put it back together," Dr. Walker explained.

"In all, I took three different lures and made one. It looks so simple when you see it that you think it won't work, but it does."

As proof of that, he and several friends made a big haul of 42 bass back in February on the river. Several of the fish weighed over five pounds.

February is a cold month, usually braved only by a select few. But Dr. Walker, as well as Beaty, fish almost year-round and this was the reason for the conception of Sam.

"I needed a lure that I could go out and catch fish with, so I sat down and made one," he said.

Cool Weather Killer
"The plastic worm is a summertime lure and I needed something to catch fish with when it was cooler. That something was Sam."

Many hours went into making Sam. The instruments and training of his profession helped make Dr. Walker a success with fish lures. His instrument bag contains an expensive collection of pliers for bending wire and forming loops. With these instruments and his knowledge of orthodontic wire, balancing and weights, he could shape the wire on the lure for the kind of action required.

"Any product we put on the market and that I put my name on, you can be assured that it will be tested, tested and tested as a killer. It will be guaranteed to catch fish," said Dr. Walker.

As Beaty explained, "We are still both fishermen at heart. We got into this business because we love the sport and want to help people catch fish."

Dr. Walker recalled the first time a fishing companion told him bass were hitting a funny looking green plastic worm. Other fishermen would have nothing to do with a green worm, but Dr. Walker decided to give it a try.

He went to see a friend, Lloyd Dever, who was producing worms, to get some molds to make some green worms for himself.

"I took the green worms, which were six-inch worms, and melted them down and poured them into four-inch molds which was the size I wanted," said Dr. Walker.

Changes Made Improvement
Then his inventive mind went to work. First came a change in the weight of string and a different shaped hook so that it was almost weedless. Instead of the normal, umbrella-handle shaped hooks, he used hooks almost arrow-like and parallel to the shaft of the lure.

Dr. Walker ran out of the hooks, which came from Norway, and began looking for replacements. As he says today, this was just one of several fateful happenings which changed his lure for the better.

"I found some hooks in an old tackle shop in Wilmington," he related. "They were so old that the boxes had turned yellow, but they were different, almost arrow-like."

His wife didn't like the smell of a particular type of plastic, so he changed. Again, for the better; it held the color better.

"Another accident came when someone tampered with our hook-placement machine," he said. "Before we realized it, we had worms with the hooks farther apart, so much in fact that the bottom hook was almost coming out of the tail."

"But we packaged them and sent them out. People really went wild over it."

false arrest if they accused persons of shoplifting. In practice it meant shoplifters often were allowed to walk out of stores with stolen merchandise simply because shopkeepers did not feel they could run the risk involved. Under the new measure this risk to the store owner would be minimized.

We seriously doubt the new measure would mean that store owners would begin detaining customers on a wholesale basis and accusing them of shoplifting. After all, the store owner recognizes he stands to lose a great deal more by offending an honest customer than by recovering the loot a single shoplifter may take. The new measure does provide, however, a reasonable method by which merchants may cope with the growing problem of shoplifting.

The loss in merchandise through shoplifting not only costs the store itself, but likewise the honest customers who are required to pay prices sufficiently high to cover the store's shoplifting losses.

The new measure would enable the merchant to take a more forthright approach in dealing with dishonest shoppers while providing additional protection for the public as well as for the 80,000 or more retail merchants in North Carolina.

More Difficult Days Are Still In The Offing

The city board of education has acted to retain Dr. C. C. Cleetwood for another two year term as superintendent of schools after a show of strong support from citizens and educators who attended the board meeting Monday night.

The action should serve to clear the air after several weeks of rumors and speculations concerning Dr. Cleetwood's status.

During the past few years the Greenville city schools have undergone the most extensive reorganization under the most trying set of circumstances as could ever be brought about. There are still problems ahead, but without a doubt the worst should be behind for the city school system.

The board of education has settled the matter of Dr. Cleetwood's continued employment. Now we should continue to work as a community in building the best school system that we can possible have. The board of education and Dr. Cleetwood have guided our schools through their most difficult times and we feel that the road ahead will be much smoother.

Muskie Adopts Strange Allies

By ROWLAND EVANS
and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The fact that Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine endorsed Saturday's anti-war demonstration here without even considering its ideological beliefs of anybody in this organization," Muskie told us. Therefore, he had no idea whether Trotskyite Communists were or were not running NPAC nor did he show much interest in that question.

In their rising anti-war sentiment, Muskie and other prominent Democrats are determined to back any non-violent peace demonstration. Furthermore, in the lingering reaction to the Joe McCarthy ear, liberals are reluctant to probe anybody's ideological beliefs.

The result puts Muskie in some decidedly strange company. Scarcely a radical himself, Muskie as President would continue — for a time, at least — aiding the Saigon regime. Yet, he has aligned himself with left revolutionary forces who do not merely oppose U. S. participation in the war but openly advocate a Communist victory.

The situation derives from the fact that Muskie determined his attitude toward the spring anti-war demonstrations on one criterion only: non-violence. Saturday's march on Washington is peaceful in purpose and not likely to turn violent. Therefore, Muskie endorsed it. The series of sit-ins and other confrontations planned between May 3 and May 7, though avowedly non-violent, are likely to become violent. Therefore, Muskie did not endorse them.

At no time did Muskie check the background of the National Peace Action Coalition (NPAC), sponsors of the Saturday demonstration. "There is no way for us to inquire into the ideological beliefs of anybody in this organization," Muskie told us. Therefore, he had no idea whether Trotskyite Communists were or were not running NPAC nor did he show much interest in that question.

If he had, he would have found NPAC's staff dominated by the "Trots." An example: Don Gurewitz, a member of both the Trotskyist Socialist Workers Party and its youth arm, the Young Socialist Alliance. Another example: Jerry Gordon, a Cleveland Trotskyist leader.

Their presence in NPAC is no accident. NPAC was formed in June last year during a meeting in Cleveland held by the Trotskyist-dominated Student Mobilization Committee. At that meeting, leaders of the Socialist Workers Party and the Young Socialist Alliance were in dominant positions.

What makes all this significant is that the Trotskyists are not the few bedraggled malcontents of a generation ago but the most dynamic, most effective organization on the American far left. Ever since the Socialist Workers Party fully took over the Young Socialist Alliance (they three years old) in 1960, the Trots have undergone an amazing renaissance. The Young Socialist Alliance has replaced the faction-torn SDS

Strength For Today

TWISTING
Some folks think they can color lies and if they give a lie and pleasing color everything is okay. There are black, mean lies. There are white lies. "Oh, I'm sorry, I'll be busy that evening." "I'm sorry, Sir, but he isn't in his office today." "Why, I never said such a thing. You know I think Jack is a great guy." "Now, I wouldn't want this to get back to him—buzz, buzz, buzz." "Now, I didn't mean that guy when I used the word 'lousy.' You know I like everybody."

Cut it out, Brother (or Sister), as the case sometimes appears to be. A lie is the telling of something that isn't true. We don't need to go out of our way to tell people that they're homely or tiresome or pretty stupid. We can just close our mouths or change the subject when certain people and issues are being discussed. Yes, in court procedure—and in the ordinary living of our daily lives—silence sometimes becomes a lie. But the chances that we are telling a lie are greater when we talk than when we keep silent. Once in a while truthfulness requires that we speak up and speak out in defense of some person or issue. Truth is a fragile thing. It can easily become twisted and distorted.

Lying is a disease. Just as there are serious and mild diseases, so there are serious and mild lies.

Northern Schools Next?

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court may have opened the door in its busing decisions to a possible line of attack on school desegregation in the North.

Northern schools generally have been free from successful court attack on the grounds their segregation is accidental—or de facto—resulting from neighborhood population patterns and not from laws-de jure.

While the court in its series of busing decisions Tuesday said it was not getting into the de facto area, it did open the way for interpretation that some Northern segregation may be de jure rather than de facto.

When school districts plead de facto they say their schools are segregated because the neighborhood is segregated. But Chief Justice Warren E. Burger said Tuesday school boards may be responsible for creating the segregated neighborhoods.

This can occur, Burger said by the decisions a school board makes in locating new schools and closing old ones. He alerted federal judges to watch for construction of new schools in expanding white suburbs with the intent of attracting white families from the inner city.

"People gravitate toward school facilities," Burger said, "just as schools are located in response to the needs of people."

"The location of schools may thus influence the patterns of residential development of a metropolitan area and have important impact on composition of inner city neighborhoods," he added.

Some school systems, Burger said, have deliberately built their new schools in the areas of white suburban expansion farthest from Negro population centers in order to maintain segregation.

"Such a policy does more than simply influence the shortrun composition of the student body of a new school," Burger wrote for the court. "It may well promote segregated residential patterns which, when combined with 'neighborhood zoning,' further lock the school system into the mold of separation of the races."

Furthermore, Burger said a federal judge may consider this when ruling in school desegregation cases.

While the court was ruling specifically in Southern cases where school segregation laws once existed, implications arise toward similar situations in the North where a school board might have created segregated schools by first having helped create segregated neighborhoods.

The court has never ruled on whether school segregation rising solely from the racial patterns of the surrounding neighborhood is unconstitutional, and Burger pointed out this issue was not involved in Tuesday's cases.

They'll Expand No-Fault Policy

By ELMER ROESSNER
Bills providing for no-fault auto insurance are pending in about 30 state legislatures. Melvin Stark, vice president for governmental affairs of the American Insurance Association, has predicted that at least six states will adopt some form of no-fault insurance this year. No-fault insurance was made effective in Massachusetts last year. There are also bills in Congress providing for national no-fault insurance, but none is likely to be passed.

No-fault auto insurance eliminates the antagonist concept from insurance litigation. In event of an accident, regardless of who is at fault, insurance covers all medical expenses. There will be no compensation for anguish, mental shock, trauma.

It would eliminate sympathy verdicts in which pretty women and children get astronomical awards for slight injuries. It would provide for quick settlements of claims instead of drawn-out litigation. And it would reduce the cost of insurance greatly because there would be fewer sock-it-to-'em principal sources of income, outside of probate cases and an occasional divorce, was in auto liability cases.

This has been largely sustained by events since then. The three largest insurance associations have endorsed no-fault; several of the giant insurance companies favor it, and many state commissions have endorsed it.

Lawyers Fight Back
On the other hand, two of the most active opponents of no-fault are the American Trial Lawyers Association and the Citizens Against No-Fault, who have been pointing out the faults of no-fault.

The trial lawyers association is sending out releases stating that with no-fault a man can bring his family to the brink of disaster unless he can be compensated for time lost from work. A housewife, the association says, may get no compensation for being laid up, even though she has to "Look at it this way, sir. If you give my son a chance, he's bound to get better. There's no other way for him to go."

"Keep me out of this jerkwater college if you want to, but let me tell you one thing: I already got a lot of buddies going to school here, and if you don't let me in—well, there'll be a lot of windows busted."

"As your wife, Fred, I warn you that you'll have a lot of burned meals coming to you if you don't admit Myra Snodgrass' son. Why, she was the dearest friend in my sorority. I just can't imagine her having a dumb son. If he is, he certainly takes after his father."

"After you admit my Milliecent, I do hope you can assure me that she'll have a place of her own to park her car. It makes her very nervous if she doesn't."

N.C. Observes 'Library Week'

The "Right to Read" is the theme of National Library Week in North Carolina. The Public Information and Publications Division of the State Department of Public Instruction in Raleigh, in announcing the observance of National Library week for the period April 18 through April 24, notes that former Governor Terry Sanford is chairman of the week-long observance.

Locally, Pitt Technical Institute has also announced plans for the library commemoration week. As part of their program, the institute is inviting the public to visit its new library located on the third floor of the classroom building.

Mrs. Barbara C. Clark, of the Pitt Tech Library, is serving as chairman of library observance activities in Pitt County this year.

Mrs. Vera B. Melton, Executive Director of the N.C. National Library Week and Director of Libraries for the State's Community College system, notes that the theme of the week, "A Right to Read," points out the changing role of libraries and librarians.

Mrs. Melton observed that in many community colleges and technical institutes, for example, libraries are no longer simply storehouses for books, but have become places which utilize books and other media to help students learn.

"Our democratic heritage has made us aware that we must have knowledge to be free — and the road to knowledge is good books," former Governor Sanford stated in his memorandum as chairman. "Through reading good books, and reading them with comprehension, comes wisdom and understanding, goodness and beauty, all of which are essential to the survival and growth of a free civilization."

Evans, Novak

(Students for a Democratic Society) as the most important radical organization on college campuses and is now prime mover in national anti-war demonstrations.

Behind this success has been undeviating Trotskyist insistence on two positions: non-violence and sticking to the war. While other left groups (including the Moscow-oriented Communist party) go off on tangents concerning race and class struggle and may flirt with violence, the Trots have amassed support by concentrating on non-violent opposition to Vietnam.

But adopting this tactic does not mean they have abandoned their dream of a revolutionary takeover. Rather, the war opens a magnificent new avenue to an old goal. "The anti-war movement . . . can, through militant mass anti-war actions, contribute immeasurably — as it already has — to educating people about the true role and nature of the capitalist parties and the capitalist system," writes Nelson Blackstock of the Young Socialist Alliance.

Furthermore, unlike Muskies and other well-meaning liberals, the Trotskyists running Saturday's demonstration want more than just peace in Vietnam. Their literature describes the Communist aggression in Vietnam as "the Vietnamese revolution" and heaps praise on it.

Growing anti-war passion has shielded these realities from the liberals. Well-organized and purposeful, the Trotskyists take the trouble to plan nationwide demonstrations, and liberals such as Muskies feel compelled to cooperate. The result is what would have been unimaginable a few short years ago: hundreds of thousands of Americans marching in their capital under Trotskyist command.

Rally Backed By Sanford

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Former North Carolina Gov. Terry Sanford has given his complete endorsement to the April 24 peace march and rally in Washington, D.C.

Sanford, who is now president of Duke University, said Tuesday, "I full endorse the April 24 peace march and rally in Washington, D.C., and its objectives."

Sanford's statement, released to a campus group organizing for the national demonstration, continued, "The war in Indochina has continued for too long and must be ended as soon as possible."

"The march and rally are a legal and nonviolent way for the people of the United States to indicate positively that they want the war ended."

A group calling itself the National Peace Action Coalition is sponsoring the April 24 demonstration. The two main demands are an immediate and total withdrawal of all U.S. forces from Southeast Asia and an end to the draft.

"Listen, Fred, here's a list of five young horses you've got to open the gates for. As football coach, I can tell you right now that unless I get all five of them, we're not going to build that new stadium in our lifetime."

"He may not be bright enough for our standards, Fred, but his father is a member of the board of curators, and I think we are bright enough to see where that leaves us."

"If a kid's high school grades are all that count in getting into college, why do you need an admissions director? A computer could do the whole job in five minutes."

"I know my record doesn't look too good. But you are going to admit me, aren't you, Papa? If you don't, you know what mother will say when you get home."

Restoring The Fabled Gardens Of Babylon Urged; No Trace Remains

By ABDULLATIF EL MARY
BABYLON, Iraq (AP) — The Socialist government of Iraq has been urged to replant the Hanging Gardens of Babylon and revive one of the ancient seven wonders of the world to lure tourists to Iraq.

Baghdad newspapers have asked the government to restore the fabled gardens to their ancient splendour. "By rebuilding the Hanging Gardens, the government will encourage tourists to visit the site of Babylon," said one editorial.

Not a trace of the gardens remains at this dusty archeological site 60 miles south of Baghdad. Of the city of Babylon itself, once glowing with a splendour unrivaled in the ancient world, only a few low brick walls, mounds of earth and the main gate have survived the cen-safe speed, prayer for judgment continued on payment of costs.

John Jasper Hardy, driving under the influence, 90 days jail suspended on payment of $100 and costs and $25 to Greenville Rescue Squad and not operate a motor vehicle for 12 months.

turies. And of course, the Lion of Babylon.

The Lion is a stone figure erected near the site of the old temple of Babylon. Though much smaller than the Sphinx of Giza in Egypt, it has one thing in common with that enigmatic half-man half-lion—it has no nose.

Egyptian history books say Napoleon lopped off the Sphinx's nose with one of his cannon just to put the Egyptians in their place.

No one knows how the Lion of Babylon lost his nose.

And little is really known about the Hanging Gardens. Iraqi tourist pamphlets say the Hanging Gardens were built by Nebuchadnezzar in the 6th century BC to please his queen. She came from the highlands and pined for some greenery to refresh the arid plains of Mesopotamia.

Water from the nearby Euphrates River readily was available and Nebuchadnezzar—cast as a villain in history because he deported the Jews from Jerusalem to Babylon—fulfilled his wife's whim and planted the gardens.

Victorian artists in England pictured the gardens as fabulous botanical treasure houses, refulgent with rare and splendid plants.

They were represented as terrace upon terrace of lush cool greenery, full of the scent of fragrant flowers, bushes and trees. The portrayal was in keeping with Babylon's slightly decadent reputation from the time it was the capital of the Babylonian civilization in Mesopotamia.

Archeologists and historians in more recent times have cast a colder eye on the Hanging Gardens.

To begin with, it appears they weren't hanging at all. The gardens were vast fields planted outside the walls of the old city. There was a fragrance but it probably was the smell of onions, not the aroma of some rare and fragile plant.

For the gardens really were large vegetable patches, where Babylonian farmers grew cucumbers, onions and other staples. Some sections were also planted with vines to provide grapes for wine.

At any rate, the gardens now are not existent.

NO NOSE — The ancient noseless lion of Babylon stands guard near the site of the old temple of Babylon. It is not known how he lost his nose.

Find Women In All Fields

NEW YORK (UPI)—The cries of feminists Betty Friedan and Kate Millet notwithstanding, women's liberation is an established fact in many fields. This is made clear by referring to "Who's Who in the World," a new biographical directory published by Marquis Who's Who, Chicago.

Having compiled background material on more than 25,000 prominent persons from 168 countries for this 1,000-page volume Marquis' staff found women in important places of all types of endeavors. For example, there are Indira Gandhi and Golda Meir, two of a number of women in high posts within their governments.

Other women who have gained worldwide recognition for their achievements include photographer Margaret Bourke-White, artist Georgia O'Keeffe, news correspondents Georgie Anne Geyer and Pauline Frederick.

Also: publishers Dorothy Schiff of the New York Post and Katherine Graham of the Washington Post, magazine editor Helen Gurley Brown of Cosmopolitan, economist Barbara Ward, former British cabinet member Edith Summerskill, author Gwendolyn Brooks, public health official Dr. Frances Kelsey, Danish Supreme Court Justice Helga Pedersen, and opera manager Carol Fox.

Many other women also are listed because of their contributions to science, industry and the arts.

The Delta Phi Delta Student Art Show and Sale is currently underway for its annual spring showing in the ECU Student Union.

"This is the largest student art show ever to be held at the ECU Union," William Charming, a senior and chairman of the show commented. "Nearly 200 pieces are on display."

Charming commented that "the profits realized from sales will again this year be used for purchase of art books for the ECU Art Library." This has become an annual affair in which students join in giving their profits for this purpose.

The works on sale now are all original works, ranging in size from very small to huge, in media — prints, paintings, pottery, macrame, construction, drawings, photographs, mixed media and watercolor.

Prices for these works range mostly in the $5 to $20 bracket with a few less expensive than $5 and a scattering running more than $20.

Charming noted that for viewing purposes, interested persons can see the display from 9:00 a.m. to 10:00 p.m. daily. People interested in making purchases can do so from 9:00 a.m. until 5:00 p.m. Someone is on hand at all times to assist in sales.

The show, which opened Monday, continues at the Student Union through Friday at 5:00 p.m., when it is slated to come down.

D.C. Abortions Law Is Upheld

WASHINGTON (AP) — A divided Supreme Court today upheld the District of Columbia law that prohibits all abortions unless they are necessary for the preservation of the mother's health.

The ruling, announced by Justice Hugo L. Black, reverses a judgment by a federal judge here that the law is unconstitutional because of "vagueness." The decision does not settle the larger question whether abortion laws attacked on grounds of privacy are valid.

Partial dissents were filed by Justices William O. Douglas and Potter Stewart. Douglas said the law had "treacheries" of interpretation for doctors who practice in good faith. Stewart said he shared some of the "constitutional doubts" about the law expressed by Judge Gerhard A. Gesell, who had declared it invalid in November 1969.

Almost a dozen cases from several states remain on the court's docket. In these women, physicians and, in a case from Missouri, clergymen, are asking the court to strike down laws that restrict doctors from performing abortions and pregnant women from seeking them.

Five-County Conference Held Tuesday

By JAMES W. BUTLER
WILLIAMSTON — A five-county regional White House Conference On Aging drew a large attendance here Tuesday. The conference was preliminary to a state-wide meeting in Raleigh in May and to the national planning meeting in Washington, D. C., in the Fall.

C., this year and the implementing and activating a sound program of work in 1972.

The five-county conference area included Beaufort, Bertie, Hertford, Martin, and Pitt counties.

The campaign organization of the Pitt County American Cancer Society is being formed now with the actual canvass slated for the last week in April. The overall goal for Pitt County this year is $18,500. Warren has set the Grifton goal at $500.

A native of Snow Hill, Warren graduated from the University of North Carolina with a B.S. degree in radio, television and motion pictures. He has served a three year tour of duty in the Army.

"I accepted the Grifton chairmanship as a challenge to help do something about the nation's number two killer," Warren said. "Our job is twofold — to educate the public and to raise money. Right now our biggest weapons against cancer are early detection and treatment, and research."

The other track record came in the pole vault, when Bill Bean jumped 14 feet, 7 1/2 inches.

HOME SLUGGER

DETROIT (UPI)—The late Rudy York owns one of the few home run records not held by the immortal Babe Ruth. York, a first baseman with the Tigers, smashed 18 home runs in August, 1937, a total for one month that has yet to be topped. York teamed up with Hall of Famer Hank Greenberg to give the Tigers one of the feared one-two home run punches of their era.

GOLDSBORO — The Goldsboro High School Cougars got the leap on the Rose High School Rampants and ran up a 5-0 lead in the bottom of the first inning. Rose never recovered from that as the Cougars went on to gain a 9-3 win over the Rampants.

It was the second straight loss for Rose, which is now 1-2 in Division II play. Goldsboro is now 2-0.

Goldsboro came up with the defensive play whenever it needed it except for the last inning when they couldn't combat a home run. Rose actually got two more hits than did the Cougars, 9-7, but errors helped to make the difference. Rose made four miscues, Goldsboro, two.

Rose got a threat in the first inning. Kim Harbin reached on a fielder's choice and Jimmy Paige singled him to third. John Conway hit back to the third baseman, who fumbled the ball, but recovered in time to throw Harbin out at the plate.

The Cougars then struck back hard, pushing over five runs before it was all over. Charles Leto led off, reaching on an error. He stole second and Danny Kepley hit back to short. The play was made to third to get Leto, but was late, leaving both runners safe.

Goldsboro tried for the squeeze, but the bunt was missed. Despite this, Leto eased home, putting the Cougars on top. David Flowers then singled to left and Paul Southerland walked, loading the bases. Billy White singled to left center, scoring both Kepley and Flowers. The Rampants tried to pick Southerland off second on the relay, but the ball was errored, and he came all the way to score, with White finishing on second.

David Hill advanced him to third on a grounder that was errored, and Wil Rogers singled to deep short, scoring White with the fifth Cougar run.

Goldsboro added another in the fourth. Leto opened the inning with a triple to right field, scoring when Kepley singled to center.

Then, in the fifth, the Cougars picked up three more runs. White and Ted Futrelle both walked, and with two away, Leto drew a walk, loading the bases. Ronnie Percise reached on an error, scoring both White and Futrelle. Kepley followed with a single to right, bringing in Leto, but Percise was thrown out trying to make it.

Rose, meanwhile, was struggling to bring in just one run. They put men in scoring position in the second, third, and fifth innings without getting them across.

J. C. Daniels singled in the second and moved to third with one out on Robbie Cox's single, but both runners died without advancing.

In the third, Bill Lee tripled with one away, but didn't score. Harbin singled and moved to third on a hit by Lee and a sacrifice. Conway walked, loading the bases with one away, but a line-drive by Larry Dixon was caught at shortstop level and turned into a doubleplay by the Cougars.

Only in the seventh were the Rampants able to avoid a shutout. Derek Dunn Led off with a walk and Harbin reached on an error. Lee then followed with a home run over the left-center fence, scoring all three runs.

Lee's hitting was about the only bright spot for the Rampants, as he cracked out three. Cox had a pair of hits to follow him.

Rose travels to New Bern of Friday, seeking to snap their losing streak.

Randle Speaks To Optimists

Sonny Randle, coach of East Carolina University's football team, was the guest speaker at the regular meeting of the Optimist Club of Greenville at their meeting Monday night at the Three Steers Restaurant.

Randle did not speak from a prepared text, but opened the floor for questions regarding the football program at East Carolina.

Randle told the club that Wilson's Carlester Crumpler is doing well in school and will be eligible to play next fall. "With his ability," Randle told the group, "he is headed for a great career and only needs to polish up the rough spots." Randle added that Crumpler should be a high draft pick when he completes his collegiate career.

He also noted that East Carolina is blessed with three fine quarterbacks, but in general the lack of depth is one of his biggest problems. "Injuries," he said, "could be critical."

Randle said he felt he had one of the finest staffs anywhere. "I don't call them assistants," he said. "They are co-coaches, each an expert in his specialty." Randle noted that he felt very lucky to have gotten Vito Ragazzo on his staff, and pointed out that many larger schools were after him.

He predicted exciting football for next year, saying that the Bucs will probably be favored in four, underdogs in two, and he rated the rest as tossups. "I expect us to do quite well in the future as more of our top recruits come up to the team."

Randle also noted that he expects to see Ficklen Stadium enlarged within the next four years.

The coach told the group that while he would not mind being a part of the Atlantic Coast Conference, it would be rough to play some teams with lower standards. "I don't mind any eligibility requirements, as long as they are the same for everyone," he said.

Tornadoes Hold Off North Pitt To Claim 10-7 Baseball Victory

By BILLY EVANS

Reflector Sports Writer
BETHEL — The Ayden Tornadoes held off a last inning rally by the North Pitt Panthers Tuesday afternoon to take a 10-7 victory. The Panthers were trailing 10-5 going into the bottom of the seventh and cut the lead down to only three at 10-7 with two away and two men on base when Ken Cleaton robbed Tetterton of a sure hit which would have scored the two men on base. The catch by Cleaton retired North Pitt and gave Ayden the win.

Both teams were held scoreless in the first inning but Ayden jumped into a 2-0 lead in the top of the second inning. Moore got a free pass to first and was followed by Mike Griffin who promptly blasted a two run homer over the centerfielder's head to put Ayden into an early lead over the Panthers.

North Pitt cut the lead down to 2-1 in the bottom of the third. Tetterton walked to get things going for North Pitt. Brown grounded to short which forced Tetterton out at second but the throw was late to first making Brown safe. Little walked and was followed by Joey Moore who singled in Brown for the first Panther run. The scoring was cut short for North Pitt when Moore was cut down at second trying to stretch his hit into a double.

Ayden increased its lead to four over the Panthers by scoring three runs in the top of the fourth. Moore opened the inning with a double and was followed by Griffin who drew a walk. Pinner loaded the bases when he was walked. Cleaton singled in Griffin and Pinner to make the score 4-1. Delong who had been walked before the single by Cleaton advanced to third on the play. North Pitt caught Cleaton in a run-down between first and second leaving Delong free to score to give Ayden a 5-1 edge over North Pitt.

North Pitt scored one in the fourth. Grimes walked and came in on a double by Fuchs to draw within three of the Tornadoes at 5-2.

In the tip of the fifth Ayden scored once again. Manning helped out his own cause by beginning the inning with a double into right field. Manning scored when a ground ball hit by Tripp was errored.

North Pitt had its biggest inning in the bottom of the fifth when they drew within one of the Tornadoes at 6-5. Tetterton walked and Brown followed with a single and when the play hit was errored in right field Tetterton came in to score. Moore singled in Brown and Moore later scored the fifth run for North Pitt on a single by Earl Worsely.

Ayden did not allow North Pitt to stay close for long, scoring four runs in the sixth to open up a commanding lead of 10-5. Blount singled and was knocked in by a single from Cleaton and then on two doubles by Manning and Tripp the Tornadoes gained a 9-5 lead. Moore loaded the bases when the pitcher balked and the last Ayden run came in when Griffin walked to force in the tenth run.

North Pitt held Ayden scoreless in the top of the seventh and they came up for the last chance of pulling off the win. Moore opened the frame when his ground ball was errored. Grimes followed with a walk. Fuchs singled which scored Moore. A ground ball by Whitehurst was errored which allowed Grimes to score for the seventh run. Briley grounded out which left Ayden one out away from the win. Tetterton hit a blooper into right that looked like a sure hit but Cleaton stabbed the ball for the out giving Ayden the win.

Utility Players May Be Keys For Bucs

Only one problem has got East Carolina University Head Football Coach Sonny Randle worried as his Pirates put the finishing touches on their spring football drills. And, even practice won't help.

The problem is ECU's lack of depth, both offensively and defensively or "not enough seasoned veterans," as Randle puts it.

The depth problem was known about before spring drills began so Randle and his coaching staff initiated a new type of position—utility.

So far, there are only three ECU players playing the position, but next fall should see more players there.

Pete Woolley, a senior, leads the players at the post and should be named the honorary captain.

The River Vale, N.J., native, who stands 5-10 and weighs 180, can play just about any position on the field. Last season, he was a quarterback, running back, receiver and a member of the specialty squad. This season, he has added the defensive secondary to his repertoire.

Still another member of the utility squad—better known around Ficklen Stadium as the "Rescue Squad"—is senior Rusty Scales.

The carrot-topped 5-9, 190-pounder, was strictly a running back last season but will also see some action in the defensive secondary and on the specialty teams this fall. Defense is nothing new to the Little Falls, N.J., native, who started in the secondary as a sophomore.

Another member of the squad is senior Bob Hileman, who handles most all the offensive and defensive line duties. The 6-3, 220-pounder can play tight end, offensive tackle and defensive end. So far, this spring the Alexandria, Va., native has limited his duties to defensive end and done a good job.

But, even with these three utility players the depth problem worries Randle.

"If we get too many people hurt in one position next fall, we're in trouble," said the ECU head coach. "We live in fear of injury."

"Right now we have only 15 or 16 players both offensively and defensively that qualify as seasoned veterans," he continued. "There's nothing in the world that replaces experience."

Still, the play of several sophomores have impressed first-year Pirate coach. And, one player, who was expected to play on the "Rescue Squad" has looked so well at one position, it's doubtful he'll play anywhere else.

He's Jack Patterson, a senior from Jacksonville, Fla., who was expected to help the Pirates both offensively and defensively. The 6-1, 180-pounder was a quarterback and running back last fall but this spring he was moved to defensive secondary because of the graduation of three starters. He's looked so impressive at safety that Randle feels that's where he'll stay.

Despite the depth problem, Randle has been pleased with the progress of the spring drills. And, he'll be watching closely when the Pirates end their drills at 2 p.m. Saturday with the annual Purple-Gold football game.

He'll be watching for those unknowns, who just might cure that depth problem.

Williamston Holds To First

JACKSON — Williamston High School remained atop the Albemarle Conference standings with a 7-4 victory over Northampton High School yesterday.

Williamston pushed into the lead in the top of the second inning. Rock Cherry was hit by a pitch and stole second. He went to third on a wild pitch and came across on another.

Northampton struck back with three in the bottom of the second. Mitchell and Taylor both singled and Jenkins reached on a fielder's choice, loading the bases. Wade walked, scoring Mitchell, and Hasty doubled to drive in Taylor and Jenkins.

Williamston came right back with two to tie it up. Shelton Peele walked and Raymond Andrews singled. Both advanced on a passed ball and both came in on Jimmy Raiford's single. In the fifth, Williamston scored once to take a 4-3 lead. Andrews tripled and scored on Raiford's sacrifice fly.

Northampton tied it up with one in the bottom of the inning, but the Tigers came back with another in the sixth to take the lead for good. That came when Dwight Ange walked and moved to third on Billy Ritter's single. Sammy Roberson brought Ange in with a sacrifice fly.

Williamston added two more in the seventh to wrap it up.

The Tigers are now 8-1 overall and 5-1 in the conference.

Eagles Get No Hit Pitching

JAMESVILLE — The Robersonville Golden Eagles came up with a no-hit performance from Matt Wilson yesterday and found out they badly needed it.

Robersonville had to struggle all the way to gain a 1-0 victory over Jamesville in the first Martin County League game for the Eagles.

Wilson allowed just five runners to reach against him, four he walked and another he hit with a pitch. Along the way, he struck out 12 batters.

But the Eagles themselves stymied in trying to get a run across. They battled all the way, finally pushing over the lone run of the game in the seventh inning.

The run came after two men were out, and was unearned. Edward Warren singled and moved to second on an error on the play. Hal Knox then reached on another error, allowing Warren to score the lone run of the game.

Lang Hardison led the Eagles hitting, getting two of their six. The win left Robersonville with a 1-0 loop record, while Jamesville is 1-1. Robersonville is now 4-4 overall, and meets Vanceboro on the Eagle's field on Friday.

Aycock Claims Fifth Victory

WILSON — E. B. Aycock Junior High School captured its fifth straight win yesterday, downing Coon Junior High School of Wilson, 9-0.

Howard Leggett tossed a two-hitter at Coon for the victory.

It was a scoreless game until the fourth when Aycock pushed over its first run. William Carraway and Phil Ragazzo both singled and Jerry Griffin added another hit that brought in Carraway for a 1-0 lead.

Aycock added another to that in the fifth inning. Mike Wallace singled and Tony Phelps got a hit. An error on the play let Wallace come across.

Aycock then broke things open in the sixth with three more runs to run out to a 5-0 lead. Johnny Causey singled and moved up on a passed ball. Ragazzo got a hit and moved up on a fielder's choice. Griffin then reached on an error that allowed all three runners to score.

The remaining four runs came over in the top of the seventh. Ragazzo led the Aycock hitting with three, while Carraway, Causey and Griffin each had two.

Aycock hosts New Bern on Friday.

We Honor Master Charge Cards

Cards Take Giants, 2-1, To Halt String

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON

Associated Press Sports Writer

Phil Niekro lost his knuckleball in Atlanta last summer, found it in Arizona last fall, retained it in Florida this spring and gave it to the Pirates in Pittsburgh Tuesday night.

The Niekro knuckler was jittersbugging to perfection and the Pirates managed only six hits as the Atlanta Braves posted a 2-0 victory on Hank Aaron's two-run homer off Bob Moose in the first inning, the 598th of his career.

"One of his knuckleballs was taking off and the other—the bottom was dropping out of it," said Pittsburgh slugger Willie Stargell. "I was just looking for the one in between."

The Pirates never found it and show a mere six runs and 21 hits in their last five games mere peanuts for the powerful Bucs.

Elsewhere in the National League, St. Louis ended San Francisco's nine-game winning streak 2-1, Cincinnati edged the New York Mets 3-2 on Johnny Bench's two-run homer in the eighth inning, Philadelphia nipped Montreal 1-0 behind Chris Short's three-hitter, the Chicago Cubs downed Houston 3-1 and Los Angeles whipped San Diego 6-2.

American League scores were Detroit 7, Baltimore 6; Oakland 4, California 0; Minnesota 5, Kansas City 4; Washington 7, New York Yankees 2; Boston 4, Cleveland 1 and the Chicago White Sox 7, Milwaukee 1.

Niekro, who pitched Atlanta to the championship of the NL West in 1969 with 23 victories, slipped to 12-18 last season and his non-knuckler was tattooed for 40 home runs. After the season he worked with the Braves' instructional league team in Scottsdale, Ariz., and regained his touch.

He was pretty good in spring training and apparently came all the way back Tuesday night. Even during 1970's bad times, though, Niekro shut out the Pirates twice.

The Giants seemed a shoo-in to run their winning streak to 10 when they sent ace Juan Marichal against Reggie Cleveland of St. Louis, who had lost all six of his major league decisions.

But the Cards nicked Mari-chal for both their runs in the fourth on a walk to Matty Alou, who stole second and continued to third on Dick Dietz' throwing error, then scored on Joe Torre's single. Ted Simmons tripled for the deciding run.

Cleveland blanked the Giants until the eighth, when they scored on Tito Fuentes' two-out single. Reliever Frank Linzy ended that rally but Moe Drabowsky had to come on in the ninth with the bases loaded and strike out George Foster and Fran Healy to preserve the triumph.

The Giants lost outfielder Bobby Bonds when he suffered a severely sprained ankle trying to get back to first base on an attempted pickoff in the third inning. He was taken to a hospital for X-rays.

Manager Gil Hodges of the Mets elected not to violate the code that says thou shalt not put the winning run on base when he had Danny Frisella pitch to Bench with two out and a runner on second in the eighth inning.

Pirates Face Blue Devils

After an eight-day layoff, Coach Earl Smith carries his East Carolina University baseball team to Durham Thursday afternoon to battle Duke.

The Pirates bring a 6-9 record into the game after a disastrous Easter holiday road trip that saw them win but two in five tries.

But, there were some bright spots in the road trip.

One was the hitting of outfielder Mike Aldridge, who slammed three home runs in four games and upped his batting average to .328. His average leads the team and he also leads in runs scored (12), hits (19) and runs batted in (14). In addition he leads the team in doubles (6) and total bases (36).

Still, the Pirates could not be classified as sluggers through their first 15 games. As team the Bucs are hitting only .229 and 128 men have been stranded on the basepaths.

And, the usually strong pitching staff has not been as effective this season as in past years.

Lefthander Hal Baird has been the most effective. He's pitched 46 innings and holds a 1.96 earned run average. He's allowed only 29 hits and 10 earned runs and has struck out 54 batters.

Righthander Ron Hastings, an All-District III performer last season, has not been as effective this year. Still, he's pitched 44 2-3 innings, allowed 34 hits and 16 earned runs for an ERA of 3.22.

Either of the two will probably get the nod from Smith to hurl against the Blue Devils.

In other action, ECU's golf team entertains Southern Conference opponent The Citadel at Greenville Golf and Country Club.

Coach John Welborn's Pirates carry an 8-1 overall record into the match and stand 3-0 in the conference.

Buc Golfers Top Spiders Greene Central Nips Farmville

East Carolina University remained unbeaten in Southern Conference golf competition yesterday as the Pirates took a 19 1/2 to 4 1/2 victory over the University of Richmond.

The Pirates won seven of the eight individual matches in gaining their loop win. The are 8-1 overall.

Ron Pinner was medalist for the match, firing a two-over-par 73 over the Greenville Golf and Country Club course.

The Bucs host The Citadel on Thursday.

Summary:

Ed Pinnix (EC) defeated Bob Gillespie, 3-0.

Ron Pinner (EC) defeated Bill Judy, 2-1.

Phil Wallace (EC) defeated Dennis Balak, 3-0.

Jesse Judy (R) defeated Jim Brown, 2 1/2-1 1/2.

Harry Helmer (EC) defeated Harry Norris, 2-1.

John Daigle (EC) defeated John Welch, 3-0.

Carl Bell (EC) defeated Charles Ferneyhough, 3-0.

FARMVILLE — The Greene Central Rams remained unbeaten in Eastern Plains Conference competition last night, but had to struggle through eight innings to do it. The Rams finally outlasted Farmville, 6-4, to gain the win.

Farmville took the initial lead in the second inning when Bobby Daniels, the Red Devil hurler, helped his own cause with a homer.

The Rams came back to take the lead in the third, scoring two runs. Grant reached on a fielder's choice and advanced on an error on the play. He scored when Robert Ivey slammed a triple. Ivey then scored on Perry's hit.

Farmville got another run in the bottom of the third to tie it at 2-2. Ben Joyner singled and stole second, scoring on Ronald Carraway's hit.

Greene Central went right back in front, 4-2, with two more in the fourth. Taylor singled and Johnny Johnson got a hit. Jones singled in Taylor and Steve Williamson singled to score Johnson.

Farmville stuck with them, picking up another run in the bottom of the inning. Cobb walked and Glen Dwyer also walked. Ed Wells then singled in Cobb.

The Red Devils got another in the fifth to tie it at 4-4. Joyner and Carraway both singled and Daniels reached on an error. Cobb walked, forcing in Joyner with the tying run.

It stayed that way until the eighth, when the Rams struck for the win. Ron Bowen walked and was sacrificed to second. Johnson singled and Jones finished things off with a double, driving in both runners. G. Central 002 200 02-6 12 3

Image May Differ, But Horatio Alger Formula Used

By JURATE KAZICKAS
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The young businessmen of the '70s, stalking their first million, may wear blue jeans to meet with a banker.

They may relax with marijuana instead of a martini.

But the secrets of their success are straight out of Horatio Alger—hard work will bring just rewards.

"Making it" for these young entrepreneurs means being your own boss and working, whether it's promoting a rock group or marketing an invention or making movies. They work seven days a week and think that they can succeed at anything by really trying.

Only a few of the young millionaires would call money the goal of their work. Money is nice but most shun—at least for now—the obvious status symbols of wealth like sports cars and Acapulco weekends. They use their money to build yet bigger businesses.

Despite their occasional long hair and casual clothes, the capitalists of their generation differ little from those before them, though they feel they look more critically at the system that made them rich but still has no solution for the poor and hungry.

Except in the beginning when skeptical bankers may hesitate about granting loans, being young is a definite advantage at a time when the nation is making a cult of youth. And knowing that many years still lie ahead, these whiz kids are not afraid to take a chance. Coping with setbacks, as well as making that second million, is easier, they feel, when you're still under 30.

Howard Stein, 28, can usually be found in his office at the Capitol Theater, which he owns, in Port Chester, N.Y. His blue jeans have a flowered ribbon trim, the beard is just beginning to fill out, and his long hair has recently been tamed from a frizzy Afro.

Stein produces rock concerts and does everything from lining up the groups to introducing them on stage. When he booked the Rolling Stones at Madison Square Garden for a sell-out one-nighter, he took home $60,000. But then there was the time Aretha Franklin didn't show up for a concert in Toronto. He lost $35,000 that night.

Stein started out merchandising rock souvenirs like Elvis Presley sweatshirts and ID bracelets with names of rock stars.

When he traveled with the groups, he met several promoters and saw unlimited possibilities for big money. In less than two years he was booking some of the biggest names in the business, such as Jimi Hendrix and Janis Joplin.

"I wanted to make a lot of money, but on my own terms. I want to be heard, felt, have power. And if you don't have money, no one listens," says Stein. "Money is a tool. I want it to give me freedom."

Stein drives into New York from his suburban home, where he lives with his wife and two children, in a chauffeured limousine because, "I like to blow people's minds when I get out of a Cadillac dressed this way."

Stein feels that dealing with his market, the young, requires a certain sensitivity. "I wouldn't, for example, use the money I earn from rock to invest in Dow Chemical. The security at my concerts is never armed guards. I also wouldn't charge $20 a ticket for some rock festival where the kids have to sit 4½ miles from the stage. I respect the kids I make my money from. And that's what I mean by not being a capitalist pig."

Stein puts his boots up on a chair and puffs on his cigar. "It's hard to believe I really am a businessman," he says with a laugh. "You just got to get away from those labels."

Two young dynamos in the movie business are Dennis Friedland and Chris Dewey, both under 30, who in three years have pushed their company, Cannon Group Films, into a position that even the Hollywood giants can't ignore. They started out with "exploitation films"—sex movies with arty overtones made on very low budgets.

And then they hit it big with another low budget film called "Joe," a confrontation between Middle America and the hippies, whose appearance coincided with the public rise of the hard hats. So far, Cannon has not lost money on any of its 20 movies.

Friedland left law school with a simple objective—to make lots of money. Figuring that law offices would be around for a long time if he flopped, he decided to take a chance in the movie business. He teamed up with Dewey, who, among other things, had been a photographer and a shrimp boat builder in Freeport, Tex.

"We want to be the most important independent in the business. We're after the big money now," says Chris, sitting in a large office with a barber's chair ("It's comfortable. Why not?") that dominates the room.

Their secret to big money is simple: earn more than you spend. No film is allowed to go over a tightly-figured budget—"that means things like real crowds you can get for free instead of 3,000 hired extras," says Dewey—and since their films usually cost less than $350,000 to make, they're almost guaranteed to turn a profit.

They keep their staff at a minimum of 45 people and each man puts in up to 12 hours a day supervising production, selecting scripts and reviewing daily film rushes.

"It's ridiculous how hard we work," says Dennis, whose short, wavy hair and easy grin make him look younger than his 27 years. "But we enjoy it, especially the sense of power and accomplishment that comes from running your own business."

To Stan Buchthal, 23-year-old founder with two partners of a company that makes jeans, pants and T-shirts, loving your work is a key to success. He runs around his office in a worn T-shirt and bell-bottom corduroys and hair to his shoulders. He says he can never quite believe it's all happening to him.

"I really didn't start out wanting to make a lot of money. I just wanted to have a business of my own. And now, every few months, the orders keep doubling."

Stan went to work in the garment district right out of college but found the 9-to-5 white collar routine dull. He saw that the lucrative youth market was where it could happen for him and that good-looking, inexpensive clothes were what they wanted.

Two years ago, he designed a pleated jean in a cheaper fabric, made an initial capital investment of $10,000 from money he and his partners had saved, set up a sales force of five friends and was off. He now keeps four plants and 26 employees busy making jeans and this year his company, "A Smile Inc.," expects a volume of $3 million in sales.

Stan pays himself only $12,000 a year in order to have more money to reinvest in his company. He lives in a cheap Manhattan hotel room or bunks in with friends when business gets too hectic.

Robert Sonneman, 28, started out sweeping the floor in a lighting store while in college and now designs and manufactures several million dollars worth of lamps in his own company every year.

Sonneman often models in ads for his lamps. His dress is elegant and only slightly mod. His main office is located right near his plant in Queens, N.Y., where he commutes from the suburbs.

"I love designing. I love making products, and I like money," says Sonneman. "But money is not the prime motive for work, rather a tool. I need a successful corporate entity in order to do the things I really want to do."

One of his commitments is to protest the constitutionality of the Vietnam war. "It's much easier to effect changes from an acceptable plateau," he says. "Just as raising money is easier when you already have it."

Sonneman now has more than 50 employees, 23 salesmen and showrooms in New York, Chicago, Dallas, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

John McDonough and Tom Tuomey hope they can relax a bit when they finally get what they want, which is to insure at least 10 years of growth for their company, the College Marketing Corporation.

Founded in 1969, CMC was the outgrowth of Tuomey's and McDonough's and four other partners' successful business ventures while they all were at Manhattan College. There they promoted school dances, sold magazine subscriptions and organized a football team into a money making business by getting students to take shares in the team.

Now their company advises businesses on how to reach the $10 billion college market.

Tuomey and McDonough, both 28, president and senior vice president respectively of CMC, look like the kind of businessmen they deal with, short-haired with more or less conservative clothes, and they acknowledge their indebtedness to that generation for their sharp business sense. They have formed a board of directors comprising established business leaders well into their fifties.

"We knew we were just young bucks with a lot of ideas and ambition. But what did we know about Wall Street and lawyers? The board keeps us aware of pitfalls," says Tuomey.

But he is quick to emphasize that the young executives of the company are the ones responsible for the major decisions. "We are truly in control of our own destiny, and that's what I think young people want to be today."

Swedes Dislike Urban Renewal

By LARS LUNDBERG
STOCKHOLM (AP) — Tired cities quietly are being chopped all over the world but here the process of urban renewal has been like a public execution with cries of protest from a disapproving gallery.

Almost overnight, this ancient royal capital lost its Norrmalm city area where renaissance palaces crowded cozily with carpenters and tinkers' shops.

The razing went ahead in spite of impassioned protests from Swedes ranging from film director Ingmar Bergman to hippie youngsters. Today the area has the world's most modern Parliament building, Europe's biggest underground parking tunnel, and an incredible assortment of builder's rubble.

But while the architecture and style of the 1640s is lost, part of it as cheap filling under a new hotel, the exercise has alerted the community at large to the conservation issue.

New-born sensitivity is manifest in "City Alternative," an environment society whose membership has risen to several thousand after a recent start. Per Janse, speaking for the society, said the lesson of Norrmalm was that automobile traffic posed unacceptable demands on inner city rejuvenation and planning.

"Cars will just have to budget for new and rational means of public transport," Janse said, citing New York and Tokyo as places where a conventional approach to city and traffic planning had led to severe health hazards.

"In essence, we demand city planners shape the environment to benefit human beings instead of automobiles."

To press their demands for a viable alternative to current modes of city transportation, City Alternative and other grassroots groups are busily organizing vast demonstrations with participants blocking up the city on foot or riding bicycles.

At all times, such actions have been models of good behaviour on all sides, with even car drivers caught in deliberately caused traffic jams exchanging cheery waves and greetings with "the enemy."

The same spirit was evident recently when some 10,000 signatures were collected on an appeal to save half a dozen elms marked out for destruction by the Department of Transport.

All this, observers say, can be traced back to the wholesale Norrmalm demolition plan which was implemented from the 1950s onwards "to make way for the new city-road systems and car parks."

Over a period of 10 years, the axe was put to 395 shops, flats in the thousands and a scattering of churches. Through the 1960's, Bergman and some of this country's most prominent authors and artists jointly spoke up to block the further progress of demolition teams into the then still untouched southern Norrmalm area.

But somehow, the grinding wheels of government crushed their protest and 18th century houses again began crashing into the narrow city streets.

Today the work is complete and, to the chagrin of City Alternative, parking space has grown by 10,000 per cent.

MORE MILK
LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI)—Families probably are getting more "milk" in their diet than they realize. The extra comes from milk products.

The Nebraska Extension Service reports, for instance, that to make one pound of cheese, you would have to start with 10 pounds of milk.

It costs three times as much to toast bread in the oven as it does in an electric toaster

That's because you use more fuel or current to heat your oven. And spending unnecessarily doesn't make sense; especially now, with costs so high. (We know. Our costs for coal alone rose 43% last year!) So unless you're making lots of toast, use the toaster. And when you do use your oven, really use it. Cook whole meals instead of a single dish; or cook something to freeze for another day. And check these other money-saving hints.

1 Don't waste money cooking nothing. Get foods in the oven the moment it's pre-heated. And to save fuel, and save yourself a lot of scrubbing, don't pre-heat the broiler at all.

2 Heat the pot and not the room. Select flat-bottomed pans at least as wide as your range's heating elements, and use the small units rather than the large, whenever possible.

In 1954, a pound of sirloin cost 99¢; a luxury apartment rented for $65. Things are somewhat higher now, but the cost of one necessity—electricity—is actually lower than it was then. Since you're probably using three times as much now, however, chances are this bill is higher too. So we're offering these helpful hints from Vepco's Home Economists. Follow them and save.

3 Imitate the Chinese. Cook vegetables in as little water as possible for as short a time as possible. This saves vitamins, fuel and time, and actually makes foods taste better.

4 When boiling water for coffee or tea, heat only as much as you need. Then, when the water begins to boil, turn the unit down low. Boiling water is the same temperature at any speed, and you'll save fuel this way.

Vepco

With everything costing more these days, electricity is about the only bargain left.

Moore County Drinks Bill Is OK'd In House

RALEIGH (AP) — Legislation to permit a liquor by the drink referendum in Moore County is headed for a Senate committee after being approved by the House by a one-vote margin.

Supporters of the bill can thank Rep. J. F. Mohn, D-Onslow, for their 56-55 victory Tuesday. Mohn asked that his vote be changed from "no" to "aye."

Another member, J. A. Everett, D-Martin, voted present.

If the bill is passed by the Senate, it is expected to touch off a host of additional local bills to permit county referendums on the sale of liquor by the drink.

House approval of the measure came after adoption of an amendment by Rep. James Ramsey, D-Person, to make the election in Moore countywide. The original bill, sponsored by Rep. Clyde Auman, D-Moore, applied only to four townships where the Moore resorts of Pinehurst and Southern Pines are located.

The bill provides that if the voters approve, class A restaurants in Moore County would be permitted to serve mixed alcoholic beverages.

Rep. Mary H. Odom, D-Scotland, tried to block the possibility of other local mixed drink bills by offering an amendment to the Moore County bill. Her amendment stated the Moore measure would be "deemed a pilot program" and similar bills for other counties would be prohibited.

The amendment was tabled 63-33.

The House also rejected an amendment by Rep. Dempsey McDaniel, R-Forsyth, that would have stopped brown bagging in Moore if liquor by the drink were approved.

Coy Privette of Kannapolis, president of the Christian Action League of North Carolina, said Moore County leaders had told him "a countywide election will result in defeat of this proposition."

Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir, told the House that if the Moore County bill were approved "we will have to pass similar bills for every crossroads in North Carolina."

Cars driven by Nancy Novella Jones, 16, of Route 6, Greenville and Hunter Bernard Keck, 78, of 1,000 East Third St. collided about 5:12 p.m. at the intersection of Greene Street and Munford Road.

Police, who charged Keck with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety placed damage to his car at $100 and set damage to the Jones vehicle at $250.

Pearl Hester Worthington of Route 1, Winterville was charged with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety by officers investigating a 4:38 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Hooker Road and Greenville Boulevard.

$580,000 Suit

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — A suit seeking $580,000 on behalf of the son of a Marshall University football player killed in the crash of a chartered plane last year has been filed against Southern Airways, Inc., in federal court.

The suit, charging negligence on the part of Southern and the pilot of the aircraft, was filed on behalf of the 2½-year-old son of Larry Brown of Atlanta.

Brown, a senior at Marshall, was one of 75 persons who died in the Nov. 14 crash near the Huntington, W. Va., airport. Thirty six of those killed were members of the Marshall football team.

The suit contends that Capt. Frank H. Abbott, pilot of the plane, was negligent in that he flew the aircraft too low on its approach to the airport.

Shredded Pine Bark Is Thirsty

LUFKIN, Tex. (UPI)—Shredded pine bark can soak up three times its weight in spilled oil in five to 10 seconds, a Texas forest products researcher revealed.

DeWayne Weldon of Texas A&M University said pine bark is superior to straw, and plans have been completed to test the bark extensively in the Gulf of Mexico.

More Equality In Food Prices

COPENHAGEN (UPI)—Denmark's famed restaurateur, Spies, has introduced "mini, midi and maxi" portions for women in his new hotel-restaurant.

"It is not fair that women should pay the same amount as men when they don't eat as much," Spies said.

WEIGHTY BIRTHS

SAN JOSE, Calif. (UPI)—Mrs. Frank Nerli slapped her forehead in relief, or perhaps dismay, after she gave birth to twin daughters, Tracy and Lisa. The infants weighed in at a husky 8 pounds, 10 ounces each.

Doubts Pay Hike Is 'Acceptable'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Gordon Allott, R-Colo., says that he does not believe a $2.7 billion military pay raise voted by the House is acceptable to President Nixon.

The pay boost was included by the House in a bill to extend the draft for two years. It compares with a $1.5 billion pay increase recommended by the administration.

Allott, chairman of the Senate GOP Policy Committee, told newsmen Tuesday no one knows if higher pay will make it possible to achieve a volunteer army and for that reason a two-year extension of the draft should be approved.

$8,356 Taken In Bank Holdup

STANLEYVILLE, N. C. (AP) — A gunman wearing a stocking mask held up a branch bank in Stanleyville near Winston-Salem Tuesday and fled with $8,356 in North Carolina's 10th bank robbery this year.

It was the second time in 10 weeks the branch of Commercial and Farmers Bank of Rural Hall had been robbed.

In the earlier robbery, two bandits, also wearing stocking masks, fled with more than $15,000.

Tommy Griggs, manager of the bank, said the robber carried a small snub-nosed revolver and ordered employees to lie on the floor as he rifled three tellers' drawers of the money.

Worry Clinic Most Impotence Is In The Mind

Chet's case is typical of the older male's fondness for John Barleycorn. For virile husbands neither wish to dull their erotic verve by cigarettes nor liquor! Those who flee into alcoholism by the age of 40, are generally scared by their own waning libido. Scrapbook this frank dissection of husbands!

By GEORGE W. CRANE
Ph. D., M. D.

Case Q-533: Chet L., aged 42, is terrified.

"Dr. Crane," he said, "I'm afraid I am on the shelf as regards marital relations. 'It all started about 6 months ago when I was under a lot of tension at the office. 'One night I wanted to make love to my wife, but I couldn't respond. 'So I became worried and began to analyze myself for signs that I was over the hill as a virile mate. 'But the more I feared impotence, the more platonic I actually became. 'And I dreaded confession of my problem to my wife, lest she lose all respect for me. 'In my inner torment, I finally began to drink liquor, for it would temporarily make me forget my panic. 'And now I have developed the habit of stopping at a tavern on the way home from the office, so my wife will not expect me to be romantic when I enter the house. 'Is there any sex hormone that would perk me up again?'

Sex Rejuvenation
Sex hormones are often used in medicine on both men and women. But the best sex hormone for a husband after the age of 40 is a seductive wife who deliberately increases her "cheesecake" rating in their boudoir!

For impotence in males is usually above the eyes! It is a result of fear, due maybe to a single recent erotic failure. Then the victim begins to worry about his virility. Since worry is a mental process (like conversation or solving mathematical problems), the man's emotions immediately diminish. For you can't "cerebrate" and "emote" simultaneously for very long until one or the other of those processes wanes fast. Like many other medical doctors, I have tested sex hormone shots against normal saline injections. And I have found that if the patient didn't know I was injecting merely the mild salt solution, he would perk up and attribute his renewed erotic verve to a sex hormone. Meanwhile, however, the physician must retain sufficient prestige to inspire the patient's confidence. But no normal man can resist the aggressive erotic advances of his seductive wife, if she determines to banish his platonic nature. Alas, most women start out in marriage as relatively inert sex partners. And they usually become even more indifferent in later years. Part of their passive role is due to typical feminine modesty, for they are subconsciously trained to expect the husband to make all the advances. But wives also are seldom satisfied in the marital embrace, so they often try to avoid it, since they are usually left jittery and thus unable to sleep. "Dr. Crane," they routinely confess, "afterwards my husband starts snoring but I am then wide awake and irritable. 'For I was ready to drop off into sound slumber until he became affectionate. 'But he then merely woke me up, and thus left me a victim of insomnia. Send for my medical booklet "Sex Problems in Marriage," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 20 cents. (Always write to Dr. Crane in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 20 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

'Condemnation' Of Bald Head Doubtful

By NOEL YANCEY
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — It appears that Gov. Bob Scott will have to do a lot more persuading to convince the General Assembly that the state should seek to acquire Bald Head Island by the condemnation process. This was indicated by an Associated Press survey of members of the Senate Appropriations Committee which would have to approve state funds to buy the island.

Of the committee's 34 members, 21, were contacted. Ten of these indicated opposition to the state putting up a large sum for purchase of the island despite many other unmet needs.

Then some of the five members who were inclined to favor the purchase had important reservations as to the price.

Sen. John Henley, D-Cumberland, chairman of the committee, noted that requests for state appropriations had totaled $700 million more than the recommendations of the Advisory Budget Commission.

He said that as of now no funds are in sight for purchase of the island.

"I think the state should consider acquiring it," Sen. Jyles Coggins, D-Wake, "but under no circumstances do I think it should pay the amount of money mentioned by the owners."

Coggins said he felt the price should be "a realistic figure" fixed by appraisers and that he thinks $5 million is too much.

There have been reports that the island's present owners, Carolina Cape Fear Corp., paid $5.5 million for the semi-tropical island in the mouth of the Cape Fear River.

Gov. Bob Scott told the General Assembly last week he felt the state should seek to acquire it by condemnation if necessary. William R. Henderson of High Point, who heads Carolina Cape Fear, told the legislators last week the island is not for sale. He indicated that his group might seek to put a $20 million price tag on the island if the state persists in trying to acquire it.

One of those who said he was inclined to oppose condemnation of the island was Sen. Herman Moore, D-Mecklenburg. He said a reason for this is that the state has done little with land it already owns.

Those who favored state purchase of the island and an appropriation for that purpose included Sen. Gordon Allen, D-Person.

"I frankly haven't made up my mind," said Sen. Norris Reed, D-Craven. Similar sentiments were voiced by five other senators.

My position on Bald Head Island is that the state should not concern itself with acquisition of the island," said Sen. J. Rufin Bailey, D-Wake. "It should concern itself with the orderly development of the island to build up the tax base of Brunswick County and the state of North Carolina."

"I'm very much in favor of acquiring it if we can," said

Sen. Hector McGeachy, D-Cumberland. He said he would not want to pay more than $5 million for the island.

Also favoring acquiring the island was Sen. Hamilton Horton, R-Forsyth. He, too, said he did not think the price should be "anywhere near $5 million."

Those opposing state purchase included Sen. William Mills, D-Onslow.

"I just feel like with so many needs, so many demands and such a small amount of revenue to meet these demands, that other needs are more important," Mills said.

"If I had to decide right now, I'd be against spending any state money for Bald Head Island," said Sen. Phil Kirk, R-Rowan. "It's hard for me to vote money for it when we do not have money to build a Central North Carolina School for the Deaf, when the O'Berry School doesn't have a physical therapist."

"I wish we had the money to do it, frankly," he concluded.

Newsmen 'Apprehended' In Test Of Judge's Rule

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — Three newsmen were apprehended by deputies on orders of a Superior Court judge Tuesday for taking pictures of jurors in a restaurant parking lot.

Their employer, Publisher D. R. Segal of the Gastonia Gazette, said the newsmen were there as a test of who must edit newspapers, "newspaper editors or the courts."

Gazette reporters Jay Hampton and Gary Martin and photographer Kermit Hull, were detained for two hours and released.

The judge, Fate Beal of Le-noir, maintained the three were not actually arrested, but when he released them he said he was holding the case open for possible action.

One of the arresting officers, sheriff's Lt. Horace Helms, told Martin Monday night that Beal had said the jurors in a murder case should not be photographed.

Hull and Hampton appeared at the restaurant Tuesday near a motel where the jurors were sequestered during the trial of Richard R. Fite, 21, who was charged with slaying his wife.

Hampton began taking pictures and Helms told him he was "under arrest." Hull began photographing the apprehension and was taken into custody. Martin said he noticed the events while driving past and stopped. He began taking pictures and was also apprehended.

Segal said the picture of the jurors "was not particularly newsworthy or important. Our position was simply that either the newspaper editors or the courts are going to edit newspapers from now on and our belief is that newspapers are the proper ones, not the courts."

"I am sure the judge acted from good motives," Segal added, "but whatever his motives were, our position is that we are going to edit our newspaper or we are going to turn it over to the courts and let them do our editing for us..."

"We are going to cooperate with the courts to help anyone get a fair trial, but this could not have been a question in this case."

After taking the newsmen in custody, deputies radioed for a city police cruiser. The newsmen were taken to the courthouse and held for 25 minutes in the car. Then they were taken to a room upstairs and held under guard.

Bill Williams, editor of the Gazette, met in the judge's chambers with Beal, two Gazette lawyers, Helms, another deputy and Sheriff Dwight Bearh.

Williams told Beal the newsmen were apprehended on private property and asked what law they had broken. He noted the order against photographing the jurors did not come from the judge directly to the newspaper.

Beal said he feared publication of the pictures might influence the outcome of the trial. He said while the newsmen were not actually under arrest, he could hold them in contempt.

Helms said he acted under what he assumed to be a court order.

The officers confiscated the film shot by the newsmen, but it was returned to the Gazette when they were released, and the newspaper published pictures of the arrests.

RALEIGH (AP) — Student body presidents at state-supported institutions and the North Carolina School of the Arts would be added to their boards of trustees under a bill approved by the Senate.

The measure, sponsored by Sen. L.P. McLendon, D-Guilford, now goes to the House.

Before the bill was approved overwhelmingly Tuesday, the Senate rejected two amendments, one of which would have put student body presidents on the executive committee of their boards. This was offered by Sen. Hamilton Horton, R-Forsyth.

The other amendment, sponsored by Sen. Ollie Harris, D-Gaston, specified that the students would not have voting powers on the board.

After his amendment was tabled, Horton told the Senate,

"This bill is an insult to the youth of the state." He said the Senate had committed "a pious fraud" by not putting the students on the executive committee.

Sen. McLendon disagreed that Horton, saying "it's a great and distinct honor" to serve on the board of trustees.

Sen. Harris told the Senate that when it comes to voting matters, youths are "immature."

A similar bill was defeated two years ago.

Under the measure, the six units of the Consolidated University of North Carolina would each have a representative on the UNC board, increasing the membership from 100 to 106.

In opposing Horton's amendment, Sen. Claude Curris, D-Durham, said the board elects members to the executive committee.

"I don't think we should tell them who they should elect," Currie said.

Sen. W.W. Staton, D-Lee, said he is a member of the Wake Forest University board which includes the student body president.

Serpent Played Major Role In Indian Religion

Alabama. Bottom left is copy of an engraving of snake dancers on the outer surface of a giant marine univalve shell found in the Spiro Mound at LeFlore County, Okla. Bottom right is an Indian ceremonial disk from Moundville with the horned serpent and all-seeing hand and eye. (AP Wirephoto)

—An AP Special Report—
MOUNDVILLE, Ala. (AP) — The serpent figured prominently in the religion of the Indians that archeologists believe quit their large village complex here around the beginning of the 16th century.

The primitive culture, termed Mississippian by the scientists, left behind a rich tradition of religion. For instance, it left a massive earthen temple mound, shell tempered ceramics in many animal shapes and a complicated ceremonial art.

The reason the Indians left Moundville still is conjecture — drought, disease, a warring enemy or some other cause. The classic find at Moundville — other than the burial pits — is a ceremonial disk with a rattlesnake, hand and eye design.

Scholars say that next to sun worship and eagle worship, that of serpents is high on the list of Indian mythology. Indians of the Southeast and Southwest developed — or inherited from Central America or Asia — an elaborate ritual, including a serpent dance.

Symbolically, the serpent swallowing its tail is a circle related to the sun in the Indian's mind. Some believe the winged serpent was an innovative combination of the sun and an eagle. Such a drawing often occurs on pottery, textiles and sculpture of Indians.

In some legends, the Serpent Warrior is the most dreaded and powerful of all. He has his hut atop the temple mound, along with the chief. Primitive drawings show Indian gods with a serpent spear, believed to bring quick victory in battle.

Early Cherokee traditions of northern Georgia and eastern Tennessee named a lively huge, horned serpent "Uktena." It had a diamond on its forehead and rings and dots along its whole length. It was believed to be so deadly, that even to see it while it was asleep was thought to bring death to the ill-fated Indian.

The primitive mind, surrounded by nature and its images, also saw the serpent as a symbol for water and lightning. Serpents often were thick in streams. The instantaneous, jagged flash of lightning in the sky was not unlike a deadly reptile underfoot.

As the emblem of the fertilizing summer shower, the lightning serpent also was a god of fruitfulness. Pawnee Indians, some of whom traced ancestry to the Southeast, called thunder "the hissing of the great snake."

The lightning serpent was known as a forerunner of floods that washed away whole villages, of leveling rains and hail and wind that destroyed corn crops, wild rice and other plant life.

Consider, too, the tiny spider that succeeds where the serpent fails.

We can prove they're worth the extra money

To begin with, Old Taylor was created by Col. Edmund H. Taylor, Jr., foremost Bourbon distiller of the late 1800's. We still use the same costly grains, tend our mash as lovingly — still do everything exactly as the Colonel did. That's why Old Taylor is the best-selling premium-priced Bourbon in America. In pint, fifth and half-gallon sizes.

More Social Security Coming; You Will Pay For It

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Senior Editor
WASHINGTON (UPI)—Social Security benefits—and the payroll taxes which finance them—will continue to rise in the years ahead.

That's not a prediction. It's a statement of what will happen as a result of legislation already enacted by Congress.

The Social Security checks which 26.2 million beneficiaries will find in their mailboxes June 3 will be exactly 10 per cent fatter than the checks the same people got in May.

Later in June, all recipients will get an extra check, covering the amount due them as a result of applying the 10 per cent boost retroactively to payments they've already received since Jan. 1, 1971.

President Nixon, who signed the legislation authorizing the increase on March 17, had urged Congress to pay for it by increasing the Social Security "wage base" from $7,800 a year to $9,000 a year, also making that retroactive to last Jan. 1. But Congress voted to postpone the tax base increase until the start of 1972.

The tax base is important both in terms of how much payroll tax you and your employer pay and the size of the benefits you'll collect when you retire or are disabled or otherwise become eligible for Social Security checks.

This is how it works:

The government now levies a tax of 10.4 per cent—half of which is paid by the employer and half by the employee—on the first $7,800 of each covered worker's total annual wages. Income beyond the $7,800 limit is exempt from payroll tax—and also is ignored in computing the amount of benefits a worker eventually will receive.

This means the maximum bite of any individual this year will be $405.60.

Next Jan. 1, the wage base will rise to $9,000. The rate will remain at its current level of 5.2 per cent each on employer and employee. Because this rate will be levied against a larger sum, the maximum payroll deduction will rise to $468 in 1972.

This means anyone earning $9,000 or over will pay $63.40 more in Social Security taxes next year.

Under the recently-enacted law, the wage base is scheduled to remain at $9,000 indefinitely.

But the tax rate is scheduled to rise to 5.65 per cent in 1973 and to 5.85 per cent in 1976.

Before those raises take effect, however, Congress is likely to adopt President Nixon's recommendation to peg both taxes and benefits to an automatic escalator system. Under this system, benefits would go up when the cost of living rises, and taxes would go up when the average wage rises. The adjustments would be made simultaneously every two years.

Thus retirement benefits would keep pace with inflation, and the elderly would not suffer as much as they do now when sharp price rises take place months before Congress gets around to adjusting Social Security benefits.

The pension payable to any person upon retirement is related to the amount of "covered" wages he received during his working career. And the amount that can be counted as covered wages is the same as the wage base in effect at that time. Thus persons retiring in future years will be able to count up to $9,000 of annual income as covered wages for all years beginning with 1972.

The maximum benefit payable to a worker retiring this year at age 65 will be $213.10 after counting in the newly-authorized 10 per cent increase.

But, thanks to the increase in the wage base, the maximum payable to a worker retiring at age 65 in 1975 will be $228.80, even if Congress authorizes no further increases in benefits.

An increase in the Social Security wage base therefore means two things for all whose wages are above the previous base: (1) An immediate boost in payroll taxes and (2) higher pensions upon retirement. You'll pay more—and eventually get more for it.

Rhodes Scholar Writes Country Songs For Nashville

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Sometimes a singer-songwriter is discovered in Nashville in the general country tradition, but startlingly individual. The last time this happened big was when Roger Miller's "King of the Road" soared to the top of the pop charts.

Now, Kris Kristofferson, 33, is happening. Last fall his "Sunday Morning Comin' Down" was named song of the year by the Country Music Association. Johnny Cash introduced him on his TV show, as "the finest young songwriter today." The late Janis Joplin's record of his "Me and Bobby McGee" was No. 3 on the pop charts for two weeks in March and had dropped only to No. 10 on April 10. He has made two movies, neither yet released.

His variegated background includes study at Oxford and five years of starving in Nashville.

"Now I can't write songs fast enough," Kristofferson says. "When they think you're hot, they're digging songs they didn't like before. You know 'For the Good Times'—I couldn't give that away. Bill Nash cut a great record on it three years ago for Mercury. I thought it was going to be my first big hit. But it wasn't played. He was dropped off the label. Everybody's singing it now."

Kristofferson grew up in Brownsville, Tex., went to Pomona College in California and on to Oxford's School of English Language and Literature, on a Rhodes Scholarship. "Some of it is going into the lyrics," he says. "I don't consider any of it wasted." Then he got married and went into the Army for five years, the first three as a helicopter pilot in Germany.

"I started a folk-country group in the Army in Germany. A guy in my unit had a relative in Nashville and I went there on leave. People said, 'Come back when you get out of the service.' It was all the encouragement I needed.

"I started writing music when I was a little kid. I was kind of country music oriented I guess because I like simple music and the emphasis on lyrics and the emotion. It's a feeling I can relate to. My songs are lyric-oriented.

"I wrote 'Vietnam Blues' on my way to Nashville to live in 1965. When I got off the plane in Washington I saw war protesters. I wrote a talking blues, from a soldier's point of view. I got that cut my first week in Nashville. It was a pretty good country record, but it didn't do much. It branded me as a right-winger. I was embarrassed I'd written it.

"Then I didn't make any money for like about five years. If anybody had told me I'd be starving for five years I'd have been a little depressed. I separated from my wife three times.

"I just did odd jobs, labor and stuff. At Columbia Records I was a flunky, cleaning up after sessions, for a year and a half. I worked as a bartender. I flew helicopters for 20 months. I quit those jobs about a year ago.

"It's hard when people don't know you. There are so many good writers in Nashville. People go to them, the ones who have proven themselves.

"I got known in kind of gradual steps. At jam sessions, songwriters started picking up on my material. In Nashville, people pitch each other's songs.

They're not competing, which is refreshing. I got a lot of help from established writers and new guys as well.

"Roger Miller was the first big artist to record one of my songs. His cut of 'Me and Bobby McGee' was the first that got any attention. Then Johnny Cash started helping me out. The first thing I ever did in public was when Johnny Cash put me on his show at the Newport Folk Festival in 1969. I was just up there to watch him, and it scared the devil out of me, but it went over pretty good. The guy who owns Monument Records got me to record for him."

His first LP, "Kristofferson," is about to be followed by a second.

Kristofferson recently produced a Joan Baez record in Nashville. He says, "She has got about eight songs of her own on it. She just started to write; she wrote a song for her husband and one for her sister. She is writing real well. She turns them out so fast it is embarrassing."

Kristofferson's voice is heard in the movie "Ned Kelly." He plays the lead, a musician-dealer, in "Dealer." And he is in "The Last Movie." "When I went to Peru I thought I was going to do the music. I have half a dozen songs in it and there are another person's songs in it. They had a small part for me, too; they made me a wrangler. I ride a bucking horse. It was for real. I've had horses since I was 5. I can ride on a bucking horse.

"Movies are interesting but I would like writing and directing one. Acting is okay but for me it's sort of like singing somebody else's songs."

War Dog Trainer Now Teaches Guides For Blind

By RONALD E. WARTHEN
SAN RAFAEL, Calif. (UPI)—During his four years as a military policeman, Ray Underwood trained attack dogs to crush an enemy's forearm with a single snap of the jaw.

Today, as a civilian, he is one of only 21 men licensed by the State of California to train the same breed of dog to guide blind persons.

Underwood, a husky 28-year-old Californian, is on the teaching staff of Guide Dogs for the Blind, Inc., the largest training school for guide dogs and blind persons in the West.

Five of his colleagues on this 11-acre San Rafael campus also worked with attack dogs in the military.

The breed of dogs they trained then are the same they train now—Alsations, better known as police dogs or German Shepherds.

"Our dogs have to learn to help lead blind people, and they do their job just as well as the guard dogs did theirs," Underwood said.

Guide dogs for the blind also trains two other breeds—Golden Retriever and Labrador Retriever.

"The Golden Retriever is mild mannered and steady—a slow but very accurate dog," says Hap Haymen, a school representative. "The German Shepherd is on the other end of the scale, fast moving and active. And the Labrador sort of fits in between. We try to match the dogs to the student's age and personality." Classes of 150 blind men and women graduate annually after going through an intensive 28-day course. A typical class has included a professional football player blinded in an accident and now practicing medicine in Reno, Nev.; a city judge in southern California; a housewife in Walla Walla, Wash.; a student from Portland, Ore., and an insurance salesman from Texas.

A student can't be any younger than 16, but old age is no handicap. One active student is now in his 90s.

Guide Dogs for the Blind began in 1942 as a charitable organization supplying dogs for veterans blinded in the war. Now, any blind person capable of handling a dog is eligible. The training, room and board are still free.

As soon as possible upon arrival, new students are introduced to the dogs they will live and work with, and take home after graduation.

The student is taken into a small room and seated a few feet across from the instructor. A third person then opens the door and the dog bounds in alone.

The animal recognizes the instructor and runs to him expectantly, affectionate pat and a scratch behind the ears. But the trainer doesn't respond and the dog eventually turns to the student who has been coached beforehand to give the animal a warm reception, with plenty of hugging and playful embraces.

"We have to transfer the dog's affection from the instructor to the student," Haymen said. "The animal will perform for the trainer but is not going to obey the student until they get better acquainted."

Much of the training takes place amid the crowds and traffic of downtown San Rafael.

"The dogs are already trained to stop for all up and down curbs, avoid holes, low overhangs and other pedestrians," Underwood said.

"They won't step onto a street if cars are coming and they'll guide their masters around poles and through open doorways. When the four-week training session begins, we're teaching the blind students how to work an animal that already knows his job."

Underwood said many people think mistakenly that guide dogs won't cross a street with a red light.

"Dogs are color blind," he said. "They can't be taught to go when the signal is green or stop when it's red. But they are trained not to leave the sidewalk until the traffic is clear."

When the students complete their training they take their dogs home with them on permanent loan from the school. If the animal is mistreated it is recalled immediately.

School representatives travel around the United States at least once a year to visit their alumni and unflinchingly notice a marked change in these people who were once rendered nearly immobile by a loss of vision.

"When they get their seeing-eye dog," said school director Benny Larson, "blind people become the traveling bunch you'll ever meet."

Watched Thieves Stealing A Car

NEW YORK (AP)—A police sergeant and a detective were watching when three car thieves walked over to a new Cadillac at JFK airport. The thieves removed from an attaché case a lock punch, checked the chart listing manufacturers' key codes then fashioned a key on their key making equipment. Then they placed a ready-made sticker on the rear license plate.

When they finished they were arrested.

In the first three months of 1971 police reported 107 cars were stolen from the airport.

Success Spells Pressure On Diana Ross; She Pursued It A Lifetime

By GENE HANDSAKER
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Success means pressure to remain a success. But Diana Ross doesn't mind.

"If it's hard right now, that's all right," she says. "Pressure made the diamond."

Diana has been chasing success since she was a "wiry skinny little kid" in Detroit. The pressure has been extra high in recent months since she broke away as lead singer of the immensely popular singing group, the Supremes, to seek stardom as a single.

How is she faring? She has her own television special on ABC. She'll soon star in her first movie, a biography of the late singer Billie Holiday. And as a solo performer, she has broken attendance records in recent months at top night clubs.

Billboard magazine named her the top female vocalist for

Heavy Outlay On Medical Costs

NEW YORK (UPI)—Private health insurers are paying about $1.5 billion each month to help Americans meet their health care bills.

In reporting this statistic, the Health Insurance Institute adds that insurers paid a record $17.4 billion in health insurance benefits to the nation's policyholders last year. The figure represents an increase of more than $3 billion over the previous year's record.

NARCOTIC HAUL

HONG KONG (UPI)—Police seized 31 pounds of heroin, 170 pounds of morphine and 877 pounds of raw opium in 1970. The largest single seizure of the year was 79 pounds of morphine and 39 pounds of raw opium with a market value of almost $4 million.

1970 in record sales, as did England's New Musical Express. She recently signed a three-year agreement for appearances at lavish Caesar's Palace in Las Vegas.

How does the willowy black beauty feel about so fast a start? Cautious.

"In show business," she said, shy and smiling in an interview, "you never know what your future will be like. I've never counted my gold records—I'm afraid I'll stop getting them."

A Motown Records official says Diana has collected two dozen gold albums and singles, each signifying a million copies sold, since she started singing with the Supremes after leaving high school 11 years ago.

Diana sang along with records, performed at family parties and the Brewster Community Center and harmonized with two girl friends after school. With a young male group called the Primes they became the Primettes, singing concert dates around Detroit.

Diana worked as a cafeteria bus girl in a department store and designed and made stage clothes for the trio. Motown Records, meanwhile, was starting in Detroit.

"I auditioned for them at a young age, about 14, and they Want Detective Make Inquiries

TORONTO (UPI)—Ontario's Law Enforcement Compensation Board, which compensates victims for "pain and suffering" resulting from crimes, wants to hire a detective to investigate dubious complaints.

It asked for an investigation of such complaints as: "I was sitting in the beverage room, having a beer, minding my own business, when I was assaulted." The board, after three months, already has paid more than $72,000 to crime victims.

turned me away, told me to go back to school," Miss Ross remembers. "I was very determined, as I feel most young people should be, and are today, and I kept going back auditioning."

"Finally they let me do a little background work until they noticed me and realized that I was a wiry little skinny kid that was going to do something, and I started recording with the Supremes."

The Supremes, as the Primettes had become, recorded a few little-noticed singles, then hit the top of the charts with "Where Did Our Love Go?"

In 1967, Florence Ballard quit the trio, was replaced by Cindy Birdsong and the billing became "Diana Ross and the Supremes." When Diana decided later to go out as a single, her replacement, Jean Terrell, joined Cindy and Diana's girlhood chum, Mary Wilson.

There were, Miss Ross says, no ill feelings at her departure. On the way up Miss Ross has met hostility: cries of "nigger!" in a Southern pizza parlor ... four shots fired into the front of the Supremes' bus in their early days.

Last January she was married to a white man, Robert Ellis Silberstein, 25, vice president of a public relations firm. They had met two years earlier on a public tennis court. At the wedding in Las Vegas she gave her age as 26.

There's talk of an eventual Broadway show for Diana.

"Broadway would really be exhausting," she says, "but also an education. And I haven't lost my zest for learning."
