Housing Fair Opens Friday; Sen. Jordan To Speak

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

An address by U. S. Senator B. Everett Jordan and ribbon cutting ceremonies here tomorrow morning will officially launch activities for this weekend's Housing Fair, sponsored by the Coastal Plain Development Association and North Carolina Extension Service.

Final preparations and last minute details are being handled prior to opening ceremonies at 10 a. m. tomorrow and local extension personnel note that they are much closer to being ready for the event than they were last week at this time.

If the proverbial slogan 'hard work pays off' holds water, the three-day event will meet expectations. A coordinated effort has gone into preparations for the fair, only the second of its type in Eastern North Carolina.

According to fair manager J. H. Moye, a final tally of expected exhibitors reveals that some 52 commercial and 14 educational exhibits will be set up for public viewing.

The commercial exhibitors, from throughout the six-county area served by the association, have contracted for space at Cannons Warehouse, the site for the fair, and a wide variety of displays dealing with all aspects of housing has been promised.

Commitments for educational exhibits, for which spaces are provided by the Housing Fair, have been received from eight different organizations and departments in the state and county, in addition to exhibits by each of the six county home economics committees within the area served by CPDA.

Included in the educational displays will be exhibits furnished by the School of Home Economics at East Carolina University, the Farmers Home Administration, Pitt County Health Department, Greenville Fire Department, Department of Local Affairs, North Carolina Housing Corp., Soil Science Department at North Carolina State, and the Wood Products Section at state.

Grocery Prices Up, Cost Of Living Inches Higher

By NEIL GILBRIDE
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Higher grocery prices nicked more than a penny form the purchasing power of every food dollar last month, but a drop in housing and new car prices held down the overall rise in living costs and cheered the White House.

"This has to be interpreted as good news indeed—extremely good news, very reassuring," said President Nixon's chief economic advisor Paul McCracken, after the government's March living costs report came out Wednesday.

The overall rise in living costs was three-tenths of one per cent, pushing the government's Consumer Price Index up to 119.8, said the report by the Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics. This meant it cost $11.98 last month for every $10 worth of typical family purchases in the 1967 period on which the index is based.

Grocery prices rose 1.1 per cent, sharpest monthly increase in six months, but housing costs declined two-tenths of one per cent, almost entirely because of a continuing drop in mortgage interest rates.

New car prices dropped eight-tenths of one per cent, but used cars were up 1.2 per cent. Overall transportation costs rose three-tenths of one per cent because of additional price increases for train, plane and bus travel, the report said.

Clothing costs rose four-tenths of one per cent, including a 1.3 per cent increase for men's wear, the biggest rise in several years. Women's wear declined by two-tenths.

Medical costs rose eight-tenths of one per cent because of a continuing sharp rise in doctors' fees and hospital charges, the report said.

McCracken said the best news in the report were figures showing that on a seasonally adjusted basis, prices the first three months of 1971 rose at an annual rate of 2.7 per cent for the smallest first-quarter rise in four years.

Prices over the year were up 4.6 per cent, compared with calendar year 1970's 5.5 per cent rise and 1969's 6.1 per cent hike, biggest two-year jump in two decades.

AFL-CIO economist Nathaniel Goldfinger, persistent critic of Nixon's economic policies, said, "The cost of living is still rising rapidly."

But another frequent critic, Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., chairman of the joint House-Senate Economic Committee, said, "This is the most encouraging indication in many months that the President's program of inflation control is beginning to work."

Pitt School Board In Budget Meeting

By BLANCHE HARDEE
Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Pitt County Board of Education held a lengthy meeting last night to help formulate a proposed budget for the 1971-72 fiscal year.

No action was taken at the session where the board members expressed their feelings toward proposed expenditures.

The budget for the county school system, including funds for current expense and capital outlay for the current fiscal year amounts to more than $1.6 million in county funds. The proposed budget for the coming fiscal period is expected to show a substantial increase.

The board's budget committee is scheduled to continue work on the proposed list of expenditures and have a proposal ready for action by the board at the May meeting.

The proposed budget, after approval by the Board of Education, will go to the Pitt County Board of Commissioners for final approval and funding.

If a one percent local sales tax is approved by Pitt voters in May, schools in the county (and the city of Greenville) could receive an estimated $114,000 in funds from other than ad valorem tax sources.

Thomas Craft, associate superintendent of the county schools, presented the 1971-72 proposed budget for the driver training program.

The budget, totaling $60,706 (state money) includes $46,080 for salaries, $3,200 for instructional supplies, and $6,451.20 for retirement and social securities. Also included in the driver training budget is $1,792 for insurance and $3,942.40 for car operation expenses.

The program, basically for sophomores, will serve an estimated 1,207 persons. This figure includes 1,182 county school students, 10 students in private schools and 15 non-school persons.

Board members approved the budget which will be sent to the State Board of Education for final approval.

Two Killings At Hospital

MORGANTON, N.C. (AP) — A psychiatrist in a mental hospital was found lying dead on an office floor with a bread knife through his heart today and a nurse lying beside him with two stab wounds in her chest died shortly after the grisly discovery.

The two, identified as Dr. Paul Douglas Boyles, 37, and Mrs. Betty Cheek Yarborough, 39, were discovered after the office's locked door was forced open when another hospital employe heard a "commotion."

Both had been employed at the Broughton Hospital, a state mental institution, for several years. They had often worked together, according to Dr. Michael A. McCall, assistant superintendent at Broughton.

McCall said the two were seen entering the office shortly before 7:30 this morning. Another nurse heard a "commotion" and tried to open the door to see what was the matter, he said.

But she found the door locked from the inside. Other hospital employes helped her force open the door several minutes later.

When they entered the room, Boyles was dead, the knife still in his heart. Mrs. Yarborough was alive but died about an hour later in the hospital's operating room.

McCall said the victims were alone in the room at the time the "commotion" was heard. There was no indication any mental patients were involved.

The administrator said Mrs. Yarborough, who lived near Morganton, died without regaining consciousness and thus gave no indication of what happened while the door was locked.

Dr. Boyles, who lived on the hospital grounds with his wife and three children, appeared to be in good spirits during his contacts with the staff Wednesday, hospital administrators said.

Dr. Abner C. Withers, the Burke County Medical Examiner, was on the scene to investigate. Dr. John C. Reece, the regional pathologist, said he would perform autopsies on the bodies.

Duvalier Dies; Power Struggle Seen For Haiti

PORT AU PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Francois "Papa Doc" Duvalier, the little doctor who became dictator of Haiti 14 years ago, is dead at the age of 64. His son Jeane Claude, 20, was announced today as his successor.

A presidential palace announcement said: "President Duvalier is dead after a three-month illness. He passed away last night."

The official radio said Jean Claude Duvalier is now president. It listed a new Cabinet with only two holdovers.

Port au Prince was quiet. The national radio played classical music.

None of the announcements reported the cause of death. The "president for life," as he had himself designated, had suffered a series of strokes. He was also a diabetic.

As his health weakened, Duvalier asked the republic's legislature in January to change the constitution to allow his son to take over as president in the event anything happened to him. This was because Jeane Claude was below the previous established age.

Before he became 64 last week, associates said Duvalier would make a birthday appearance to demonstrate that he was healthy and strong. He did not. His son took his place. The palace insisted that Duvalier needed rest on the orders from his doctors.

Duvalier's death raised speculation of a struggle for power, despite the appointment of his son as successor.

Since Haiti is only 46 miles from Cuba at the nearest point, the hemisphere is sensitive to its upheavals and the possibility of a thrust in Haiti's direction from Fidel Castro's Communists.

Diplomatic sources foresaw the possibility of a long period of chaos in this tiny, impoverished Caribbean nation of five million. A struggle for power could be concentrated, meanwhile, among the high-ranking officers of Duvalier's armed forces, always the source of political struggle in Haiti.

Lawmen Pursue 3 Bank Robbers

SPRING LAKE, N.C. (AP) — Three men held up a branch of the Southern National Bank at Spring Lake today and fled with law officers in hot pursuit.

Robert Murphy, agent in charge of the FBI's office for North Carolina, said the holdup occurred shortly before 11 a.m. He said officers were chasing men believed to be the robbers but so far had made no captures.

It was not immediately determined whether the robbers were armed or whether they escaped with any of the bank's money.

No injuries were reported.

Ayden Youth Drowns In Pond

GRIFTON — An Ayden boy, 15-year-old David Earl Buck, drowned in a farm pond about three miles south of here in Lenoir County yesterday.

Kinston Fire Department officers said the department's rescue unit was called at 3:15 p. m. to search for the youth. Buck's body was recovered about 4:27 p. m.

The pond, according to fire officers, was located off rural road 1802.

Officers said Buck has gone to the pond with four companions. He and two others entered the water. Buck went under.

Birmingham Air Crisis Report Came Too Late

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency says it would have used emergency powers against the Birmingham, Ala., pollution crisis if only it had known it sooner.

"If we had known about it earlier we'd have had a Justice Department lawyer down there so fast it would make your head swim," said an EPA official who declined to be identified.

The federal agency has no routine authority over pollution and no widespread monitoring service of its own; but the 1970 Clean Air Act authorized it to seek antipollution court orders when human health is in danger and local and state authorities fail to abate the pollution.

Birmingham was blanketed by dense air pollution for five days before a citizens group known as GASP notified EPA Tuesday and asked it to invoke its emergency authority, the spokesman said.

He said local authorities had approached the situation by asking area residents to stay out of downtown Birmingham.

EPA asked the six industrial firms it viewed as the major source of pollution to cut down their emissions. By late Wednesday, only one had responded with assurances of a reduction, and a seventh firm which had not been contacted volunteered on its own to cut back.

The firms contacted were U.S. Steel; Universal Atlas Cement, a division of U.S. Steel; Lone Star Cement; Alpha Portland Cement; U.S. Pipe Co.; and Woodward Iron Corp.

The pollution crisis in Birmingham ended Wednesday with a rainfall that helped clear the air.

Even under normal conditions, Birmingham's air is considered far from clean.

Normal pollution levels in Birmingham range between 200 and 300 migrograms of dust per cubic meter of air, the EPA spokesman said, a level which proposed federal air standards would permit only one day a year.

Payroll Tax To Climb?

WASHINGTON (AP) — The day of reckoning is here on the cost of Social Security-Medicare benefit changes approved by the House Ways and Means Committee—and the likely tab may be a 41 per-cent increase in payroll taxes.

That would mean a maximum of $166.80 each for employe and employer.

The committee has approved, subject to a final vote, costly increases in Social Security benefits, including higher payments for widows, a cost-of-living adjustment in the future, more leeway for pensioners' earnings and extension of medicare to the disabled.

The committee started work Wednesday on payroll-tax changes needed to finance the increases. No firm decision has been reached, but sources said the most likely outcome would be an increase in the payroll tax Jan. 1, 1972, to 5.4 per cent on a base of $10,600 in wages.

This would mean a total of $572.40 in tax withheld from anyone earning $10,600 or more in 1972 and an equal mount from his employer.

By contrast, the rate this year is 5.2 per cent on a $7,800 maximum, or $405.60.

The committee may still work out a different financing method, or even cut back on some of the benefit increases.

Senate Approves

RALEIGH (AP) — The State Board of Elections can now begin working on the mechanics of North Carolina's first Presidential Preference Primary, which will be held a little over a year from now.

The May 2 primary, expected to be a major Southern barometer for Presidential hopefuls, was enacted Wednesday when the Senate routinely approved eight House amendments.

One major alteration stipulates that if a candidate dies or withdraws after the contest, Tar Heel delegates committed to him are released. The other amendments were primarily technical.

In other action the Senate approved a bill which would make it illegal for an individual, business or corporation preparing a tax return to reveal the tax information.

The bill now goes back to the House for approval of a Senate Amendment. The amendment makes a $500-$2,000 fine and imprisonment the penalties for violation, at the discretion of the court.

In the House Wednesday, Rep. Ernest Paschall, D-Wilson, introduced a bill requiring that all House and Senate votes on final action for appropriations bills be recorded and entered in the journal.

Scientist Reports On Threshhold Of Disease-Resistance

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A prize-winning scientist says researchers are on the threshold of engineering human cells "so none of the things we now call disease need exist."

Dr. Robert A. Good, 49, a professor of pediatrics at the University of Minnesota and 1970 winner of the Albert Lasker prize for medicine, said Wednesday that the conclusion is based on newly evolving methods of cell manipulation.

The research has involved patients whose lymphatic systems had inborn defects for disease resistance, Good said in an interview.

"We can actually grow genetically determined diseases in a test tube," he said. "This means we will be able to study and manipulate them in standardized experiments all over the world."

Research with Dr. B.H. Park at the University of Minnesota has underscored the importance of "stem cells" in the human bone marrow for controlling the lymphoid cells which provide man with resistance to disease, Good said.

A transplant of bone-marrow stems cells at Minneapolis nearly three years ago shows that it is possible to engineer mosaic bood cells to overcome genetic deficiency in the disease-fighting mechanisms, Good said.

A baby boy, lacking the cells that carry immunity to disease and infection, was given bone marrow cells from his sister and now is completely healthy, Good reported.

"We have analyzed the blood cells of the boy recently and find them to have his characteristics as well as his sister's, which means genetic materials really mesh," he said.

He said the boy's type-A blood changed into the type-0 blood of his sister.

"Our followup studies now have proved that the boy is immunologically perfectly normal," Good said.

"We have both the biological and chemical means," he said, for engineering cellular changes.

VEPCO Indicates May Seek Another Rate Boost

RICHMOND (AP) — Officials of the Virginia Electric & Power Co. have indicated the utility may seek its second rate increase in less than a year.

T. Justin Moore Jr., president and chief executive officer, told a shareholders' meeting Wednesday that when he reviewed the history of rate increases in utility companies in general, he found it is not unusual for a utility to seek a second rate increase within a short time after winning an increase.

"Many second-round requests for rate increases have come about in a fairly short period of time," Moore said. "As far as Vepco is concerned, it is obvious that the rapid rise in operating expenses since our last rate increase have imposed severe pressure on our earnings, but any final decision by management cannot be made until we see the Virginia Supreme Court's decision."

The 9.2 per cent rate boost last July affected only Virginia customers, but Vepco is seeking to have it applied systemwide.

The northwest corner of North Carolina is served by Vepco. A company spokesman said the proposed rate increase there would generate about $400,000 a year.

Vepco also announced it had raised its projected spending for generating plant construction in the 1970s by a full $1 billion to $3.1 billion.

The new construction projects include four additional generating units designed to produce 4,225,000 kilowatts of capability and to bring Vepco's system capability to 14,332,000 kilowatts ny 1979.

Vepco also reported it had record revenues of $374.9 million last year, up 14.8 per cent from the previous year. But Moore said earnings improvement was "severely limited by rapidly increasing costs of doing business."

Moore said expenses increased 27.6 per cent last year largely because of the "unprecedented cost of coal, including freight, which rose 43 per cent in 1970."

John M. McGurn, vice chairman of the board and chief executive officer, said increased fuel costs alone more than offset the $15.2 million in additional revenue from the 9.2 per cent rate boost.

The rate hike was approved by the Virginia State Corporation Commission but has been appealed to the Virginia Supreme Court.

Widower: I'm In Love With Young Girl

By Abigail Van Buren

[© 1971 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.]

DEAR ABBY: Please help me. I am a widower and very much in love with an 18-year-old girl. Altho I am over 60, the difference in our ages doesn't matter, as the girl is very mature for her age and I am in the best of health.

But here is my problem. My son is trying to break us up. He tries to tell me that this girl is too young for me, that she is only after my money. He's tried to turn me against her, but I think he is trying to get her for himself.

First he tried to make her look bad in my eyes, and when that didn't work, he tried to make ME look bad in HER eyes. How can I get this girl to marry me before my son ruins everything between us? I don't want to lose her.—DAD

DEAR DAD: A long engagement would be to your advantage. Don't worry about "losing" the girl. If it's the real thing, it will stand the test of time. And if it's not, you're ahead to find out early.

DEAR ABBY: You will never believe this, but it is the truth: We received an announcement of the marriage of the son of old friends of ours. The last time we saw the lad he was 16. He and his bride live in another state where he is studying law and the bride is working for her Master's degree.

Not knowing what they needed, but wanting to send them something useful, we sent a generous check with our letter of congratulations.

We received no note of thanks from this couple. However, when my canceled checks were returned from the bank I found that the young man had CASHED our check the day he received it, and ON the check he had written, "Thank you."

This was a new one for us?—CINCY READER

DEAR READER: For me, too!

DEAR ABBY: I am a man who has been divorced for a year. Since then I have dated women who have no children and women who have had up to five children.

When my friends hear that I'm dating a woman with children they have been unanimous in their opinions that I should avoid getting involved with a woman who has a ready-made family.

Maybe I'm a weirdo, Abby, but I feel that children are an asset to a woman, not a liability. When I remarry, I hope the woman has a family, and the more the merrier. Children can add strength and purpose to a relationship.

So far I haven't been able to find anyone who agrees with me. How do you feel?—LOVES CHILDREN

DEAR LOVES: With your attitude, you should have a wide selection. In fact, you should have an open field as there is apt to be very little competition. Raising children is expensive in terms of money and emotions. If you can afford them, I say more power to you. I think you're generous, courageous and one in a million. [And if your identity ever becomes known, you'll need police protection.]

DEAR ABBY: This is for "TOO MUCH MOTHER": Abby is right! Take her advice and get transferred to another city if possible. And make the break while your mother is still able to adjust to being without you. If you continue to let yourself be her "whole life," neither of you will ever have a life of your own.

I was an only child. My father died when I was a teen-ager. My mother made me her whole life. She refused to let me make any close friends, and she made none of her own. She reminded me daily how much she "needed" me. She became more possessive and domineering with each passing year.

My mother is nearly 90 now and she's confined to a wheelchair so I certainly can't leave her now. Besides, I am 66, so where is there for me to go?—"TRAPPED"

American Housewife Is Expert In Rich Cuisine Of Belgium

By TOM HOGE
Associated Press Writer

The 17th century residence in Brussels once was a popular restaurant known as the House of the Six Young Men, and a latter-day occupant was kept busy turning back would-be diners who came knocking at her door.

But the callers would have fared well. That lady of the house was Sarah Miles Watts, a journalist who spent a number of years in Brussels.

She had always loved cooking and while she was in Belgium she persuaded a noted chef to teach her the culinary traditions of his country.

Mrs. Watts sent many of the recipes she obtained to friends in America, and they soon began asking for more. This inspired her to write a cookbook, "The Art of Belgian Cooking."

She describes Belgian cuisine as a rich combination of peasant Flemish and elegant French. Special Belgian dishes in her book range from Salade Liegoise, or green beans and potatoes, to Carbonnade, or beef and kidneys stewed in beer.

There is also a delectable specialty known as Poulet a l'Estragon, or Chicken in Tarragon Sauce. One of the most popular accompaniments to chicken or beef dishes is French fries. The Belgians insist they invented this form of potato and that rightfully they should be called Belgian fries.

Mrs. Watts, who has returned to America, described a typical Belgian meal for me.

"It usually is preceded by an aperitif or, something like a garnet Campari and soda with a twist of lemon, which is both refreshing and doesn't deaden the taste buds as much as our American cocktails. After that might come a soup made of the very popular eels in white wine, a good cut of steak with French fries, and an endive and beet salad, and perhaps baked pears for dessert.

"A fancier dinner," she said, "would substitute Tarragon Trout for the steak and a simpler one might offer their delicious beef and vegetables stewed ~~in a~~ quart of beer."

The Belgians love game like pheasant and wild rabbit. A favorite of Mrs. Watts is fillet of wild boar which she says has the texture of beefsteak but the richness of chicken liver.

Shallots appear in many of the recipes, but Mrs. Watts says that if you cannot get them where you live, substitute the white part of a scallion. This gives you the desired onion flavor along with a firm texture which will not melt in cooking.

TRUITE A L'ESTRAGON

4 trout
Salt, pepper
Flour
5 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons chopped shallots
2 tablespoons dry white wine
1 cup cream
½ tomato peeled, seeded and quartered
1½ tablespoons tarragon
2 tablespoons mousseline

Season trout with salt and pepper, coat with flour. Cook in 3 tablespoons warm butter until done—about 10 minutes—remove to serving dish.

For sauce, melt 1 tablespoon butter in small saucepan, add shallots, cook slowly several minutes without coloring, deglaze with wine, add cream and tomato. Bring to boil, reduce to desired thickness, remove from high heat, add remaining tablespoon butter, tarragon and mousseline. Correct seasoning, coat trout.

Sauce can be made in advance and kept until just before serving when tarragon and mousseline are added.

Child Drinkers Trouble Chile

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — The 8-year-old boy tugged the sleeve of a beer stand patron in Chile's national soccer stadium and held up a small plastic bag. The surprised soccer fan poured in a few ounces.

"Is he around here a lot?" the patron asked the vendor. "Yes," was the reply. "The kid seems to have the vice."

Chile's National Health Service (SNS) cites evidence of numerous other child alcoholics, who share with adults one of this South American country's most widespread maladies. A survey in Quilpue, 80 miles northwest of the capital, showed 1.5 per cent of the town's children are alcoholics, and 10 per cent are "excessive drinkers."

The SNS estimates there are 300,000 alcoholics in Chile, a nation of 9 million, and says the disease kills more Chileans than any except cancer and circulatory ailments. Chileans drink an estimated 400 million quarters of wine and other alcoholic beverages annually.

President Salvador Allende, who also is a physician, has called alcoholism "the most serious and the worst disease Chile has." He has pledged that under his administration "the people are going to work more and drink less."

'It's Their Bag' They Picketed

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (WNS) — Male shoppers picketed a supermarket here in a campaign to get women in trouser suits to renounce handbags and carry their belongings in pockets as men do. As leader Jan Mintjens put it, "Have you ever waited behind a line of women at a cash counter? They put down their parcels and reach for their handbag, open the bag and dig for their wallets, take out a bill and dig for their coin purses, and who knows what else! Then they have to reverse the whole procedure, and invariably drop things all over the floor. By that time, I'm late for the office and in very bad temper."

Group Selects Children's Books That Aid In Field Of Good Human Relations

By JOY STILLEY
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — "The more children are hooked on books, the less they'll be hooked on other things," declared Ann G. Wolfe, who for more than two decades has been reading and evaluating hundreds of children's books a year.

She heads a project sponsored by the American Jewish Committee in which 15 volunteers meet regularly to review and discuss children's book and to recommend those that foster good human relations. The selections are published approximately every two years in a pamphlet called "About 100 Books," actually a misnomer since the latest list contains 187 titles.

The compilation is used extensively by public and school libraries and by university schools of education. It focuses on books that deal, directly or indirectly, with questions of racial and religious understanding, war, peace, poverty, social issues and some aspects of the foreign scene.

Mrs. Wolfe, program consultant in AJC's Intergroup Relations and Social Action Department, reads every volume that makes the list. Though she is guided by the committee's point of view, she insists on the final veto if she considers a book dangerous or wrong.

"It's not altogether democratic," the Columbia University social work graduate admits, "but it's my own feeling that someone has to make the decision and take the responsibility for it."

In the last two or three years children's books have become much more oriented to "where the children are today," she explains. They concentrate on urban problems, the drug scene, the generation gap, peace and the whole war experience and there is increasing interest in ethnic groups.

"Today's children's books are much better than they once were; writers and editors have greater respect for their audience now and don't talk down to children," comments Mrs. Wolfe, who carried out the appraisal program alone for 16 years after publishing the first list in 1948.

"Particularly in the black literature coming out recently, people are full dimension," she observes. "I can't stand the George Washington Carver stuff where he has every good quality. In biographies I think it's important to get a well-rounded figure. For a child struggling to make his way in the world to read about geniuses in his racial or religious group may even turn him off. He thinks 'How can I do that? I'm just ordinary.'"

The criteria for selection includes good writing, though Mrs. Wolfe adds that if she had to choose between a well written book that is boring and a less well written one that is interesting, she would choose the latter.

"The book has to have some human relation aspect that helps the child even minutely to broaden some idea of his," she continues. "Both the subject matter and the writing must be appropriate for an age level. It has to be in good taste; by that I don't mean it has to be prissy —it can even have dirty words, but it has to help the reader get some notion of a quality of decency. I do believe there are rights and wrongs and children have to be helped to understand them."

The art work enhances a book but it doesn't make it, she points out, noting that all too often beautiful art obscures a poor book.

Automatically eliminated are what Mrs. Wolfe calls the "chamber of horrors" books that are full of stereotypes. She claims she doesn't like the good stereotypes any better than the bad ones, since both deprive kids of seeing people as human.

In addition she deplores poor writing, too many problems that are not realistic and that have too pat a solution, and plots so obviously contrived they make no sense, though she does not rule out imaginative or fanciful tales.

The recommended list is in three classifications: Just Beginning; The World Is Big, and Those Teen Years. The first group, age 5 to 9, she characterizes as having simple writing but good language and first-class art work. Most of the some 2,500 children's books published annually are aimed at the middle-aged group, 8 to 13, with art work de-emphasized and a strong identification for either boys or girls. The teen-age period, 11 to 16, begins to deal with personality, emotional problems, love affairs and dating. There is little art work.

To foster love of reading Mrs. Wolfe considers it essential that the parent read to the child. "He gets the most marvelous sense of language when he hears the word read slowly and clearly and repeated," she says. "It's boring to read the same thing 90 times but that's the way to get him to learn to love words."

Women's Liberation In Spain Goes On At A Very Slow Pace

By PATRICK BUCKLEY

And this infuriates Lidia Falcon. First, because it is 99 per cent true. Second, because she is one of Spain's women's liberation advocates and to date she hasn't made much progress.

The Spanish woman, she says, "is a kitchen-bound creature ... undoubtedly the most oppressed in the Western world." These are strong words in a country where a woman cannot buy property or have a bank account without her husband's permission, and where there is no divorce.

But foreign trends and fashions undoubtedly have influenced Spanish women during the past two decades and Spanish society daily becomes more permissive. Mrs. Falcon still thinks too many college graduates end up in the kitchen and the really good jobs remain a male monopoly.

"It even looks as though women's rights in Spain are going backwards," she says. In 1932, during the Second Republic, the 19th century laws that made second-rate citizens of the Spanish women were abolished. Women were given the right to vote, and divorce was approved by the Republican Parliament.

After Gen. Francisco Franco's victory over the Republican troops in 1939, however, the government, backed by the powerful Spanish Catholic Church, annulled most of that legislation.

The legal situation of the Spanish women has improved only slightly since 1939. The government recently granted women equal labor rights but, according to Mrs. Falcon, working women still are being discriminated against. Female farm workers get only 80 per cent of the men's wages and many state employees are forced to resign when they get married, she says.

Mrs. Falcon says the number of marriage breakups in Barcelona every year is comparatively equal to the number of divorces in New York. And thousands of women have clandestine abortions under hazardous conditions. "The government not only does nothing to solve these problems; it ignores them," she says. But she adds, "the most difficult part of it is persuading Spanish women that they have to be liberated."

MRS. BALDINO'S ITALIAN CHEESE CAKE

Crust, see below
1 pound ricotta cheese
½ cup sugar
4 tablespoons flour
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla
4 eggs, separated
1 container (8 ounces) heavy cream, whipped
¼ cup finely chopped blanched almonds
¼ cup raisins
¼ cup diced citron

Make crust. Beat together the cheese, sugar, flour, salt and vanilla; beat in egg yolks one at a time. Fold in whipped cream, then egg whites beaten until stiff, almonds, raisins and citron. Pour into crust. Bake in a preheated 400-degree oven for 5 minutes; lower heat to 325 degrees and bake until golden-brown—1 hour and 15 minutes. Cool thoroughly. Sides of cake will be higher than center. Serve at room temperature; if held, store in refrigerator, but bring to room temperature before serving. There will be a dense layer at bottom holding nuts and fruit and a fluffy layer at top.

CRUST: Stir together 1 cup sifted flour and ¼ cup sugar; cut in ¼-pound stick butter until blended; stir in 1 slightly beaten egg yolk, 1 tablespoon milk and ½ teaspoon vanilla; gather in a ball and divide in half. Cover and refrigerate one-half of dough. Spread remaining half of dough over bottom of a 9-inch springform pan with sides removed. Bake in a preheated 400-degree oven until golden—about 6 minutes; cool. Attach sides of pan to bottom and pat remainder of dough around sides so it comes up about 2 inches.

Red China Beginning Emerge

The visit of the U. S. table tennis team, and newsmen who were admitted with them to Red China, has come to a conclusion and it is still most difficult to assess its effects on the course of world events.

One thing is certain, however, and that is that almost every knowledgeable observer sees in this surprise invitation a great change in Communist China's thinking towards the United States.

What brought it about is open to speculation. Perhaps with the winding down of the American role in the Vietnam war China felt the time was ripe to warm up relations with the United States. It may be that Red China feels it needs closer ties with the U. S. because of its cool relations with the Soviet Union.

Whatever the reason, it is expected that the table tennis team visit will be followed by other invitations to Americans to visit China. It is also likely that negotiations will get underway to solve some of the problems that exist between Red China and the United States. Although the road will be bumpy there is much reason to hope that such negotiations can eventually lead to diplomatic relations between the two nations.

There are those in our country who are deeply suspicious of the Red China moves, and the possibility of some sort of double cross cannot be ignored. Nevertheless the United States cannot allow this first gesture of friendship from Red China to pass without making every effort to establish friendlier relations. Communist China is a fact of the modern world. There is little likelihood of the Mao government falling apart in the near future and therefore we must deal with the China mainland as it is.

Prior to the Communist take over of the nation, the United States had a history of friendship toward the Chinese people. We have been isolated from the bulk of them for 22 years, but perhaps the time has come to re-establish this friendship.

N.C. Pride In Its Debts

By BRYAN HAISLIP

RALEIGH — What it means to be a North Carolinian today owes cultural debts to past times and peoples.

That is the lesson of North Carolina Heritage Week, a first-time event now in progress in schools and communities throughout the state.

"The artistic heritage of the whole world belongs to us," proclaimed Jim Hall, director of the cultural arts division in the State Department of Public Instruction. His agency gave the impetus for the series of programs, exhibitions and festivals, running the gamut of drama, music, dance, art and crafts.

"People from many countries and different ethnic backgrounds contributed to our heritage," Hall explained. "Recognizing this diversity, we can come to a greater appreciation for what it is that gives us unity."

Mrs. Robert W. Scott, Tar Heel First Lady, gave emphasis to Heritage Week by serving as chairman. The Governor's wife joined Dr. Craig Phillips, state superintendent of public instruction, in a Capitol Rotunda ceremony Monday launching the week. Music for the occasion was provided by the Shelby High School Band, the Pamlico County High School Band, and the Sandwich Singers (a lunchtime singing group of state employees organized by Hall).

Mountain-To-Coast

Her schedule called for Mrs. Scott to fly to Murphy on Tuesday for a luncheon and school festival in that mountain area, then journey to the coastal city of Wilmington on Thursday for a festival there.

More than 200,000 students will have a part in one or another activity during the week, Hall reported. "The response from the schools, both teachers and youngsters, has been fine," he said.

Other agencies and organizations cooperated, bringing communities and adults into the scope of Heritage Week.

The idea grew out of a conversation last summer with Young Allen, Robeson County schools superintendent, Hall said. The superintendent suggested that timing might be right for an approach to acknowledgement of divergent elements in Tar Heel culture. That appealed to Hall. He notified music and art teachers last fall of plans for the special week, giving them the opportunity to use it as a spring focus for student work during the year.

Anniversary Noted

Heritage Week observance works out almost as an anniversary celebration for Hall. He came to the Department of Public Instruction last May, to head the cultural arts division created by Superintendent Phillips.

He brought a background as teacher and performing arts director. He earned both undergraduate and graduate degrees at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. He has taught at Mars Hill College and Grainger High School in Kinston, Winstom-Salem city schools, and the Charlotte-Mecklenburg schools.

The new division recongized an equal place at table for the arts with other curriculum areas.

The objective is to give every child broad experience in the arts, to help him discover his own interests and abilities, and to assist him in using those talents in a creative way. "Every child in North Carolina has a right to this much," Hall asserted

How well is the state doing in assuring that right?

"Our program in North Carolina is strong, particularly at the secondary level," Hall answered. "If there are weaknesses, they are more apparent at the elementary grades."

Emphasis now is being given to planning for the kindergarten through sixth grade program.

Teacher Training Needed

Another area demanding attention is the training of teachers for music and art programs. Fifty per cent of the music instruction in public schools is given by professional music teachers; only 20 per cent of art classes are taught by professionals. That means that the majority of Tar Heel school children are exposed to the arts through untrained teachers.

"Teachers must be creative if they are to inspire their students to create," Hall noted. Attention is being given to innovative methods for training teachers, he said.

Why cultural arts in the classroom, anyway? Can they be regarded as relevant to the contemporary world?

Hall thought a moment. "The most important role," he said, " is to keep the ideal of individual worth alive in the schools." Other subjects lend themselves to uniformity and conformity; only the arts are open for the full range of self expression.

Threat Of Wood Fires In County Is Growing

With dry weather continuing, the threat of wood fires in Pitt County and throughout the state becomes more serious.

It is important that every citizen use extreme care to avoid setting off the spark that can destroy many acres of woodsland.

Outdoor burning is still prohibited in this county and motorists should be careful with cigarettes and matches.

Gardner Denies Political Bid

By JOHN KILGO

They're still saying that Jim Gardner is going to change his mind and run for Governor on the Republican ticket in 1972.

Gardner smiles and asks: "How the devil do they know what I'm going to do?"

He has sold his interest in the Carolina Cougars of the American Basketball Association. He's president of Caro-Lando, which is developing 250 acres next to Disneyland in Orlando, Fla. His company just acquired ownership in Horne's Motor Court with 20 motels. It has options to buy 17 restaurants connected with the motels. And they're planning more motor courts. So Gardner asks:

"How does that leave me time to talk about politics or think about politics?"

Gardner's emphatic. He says he's not running for anything in 1972.

"I've made three political speeches in the last year," he says, "and the further I get away from politics, the more I wonder how I ever got involved in them in the first place. I'm happy now. My family's happy. My wife never liked politics."

Gardner thinks he could win in '72.

He talked of the three Democrats being mentioned as gubernatorial timber — Pat Taylor, Skipper Bowles and Bob Morgan. He says he would go into a campaign against any of those with at least an even chance of winning.

"Morgan's the only one of those three who is strong in the East," Gardner said. "Still, nothing has changed. I'm not a candidate."

Gardner reflects about 1968 now. He said one of his biggest mistakes was butting heads with the press.

"Let's face it," he says, "I was dumb. I shouldn't have done it. But I'm stubborn. Everyone knows that the Raleigh News & Observer is strongly Democratic and when I'd see an unfair story in that paper, I'd say something about it. I should have kept my mouth shut."

Gardner isn't looking for controversy. He feels he's had enough. But when pressed, he feels the Republicans will be very fortunate if they make a race out of the '72 gubernatorial race.

"Nixon will have trouble in North Carolina in '72," Gardner said. "I don't know if he could carry the state again or not. It depends on who runs as Democrat and what happens between now and then. But I would have to say that he's not as strong in North Carolina now as he was two years ago."

Is there any way that Gardner can be talked into changing his mind and running for Governor in 1972? Again he smiles.

"People keep talking about me," he says. "Good and bad, but mostly I guess they say bad things. No, I'm not changing my mind. I'm out of politics. I have a chance to make some big money. My business takes up my full time. I'm on the road about five days a week."

Sure politicians change their minds. They change quickly. But after talking with Jim Gardner, and looking at his financial commitments, you have to believe that the Republicans will have to look elsewhere in '72.

Strength For Today

TRUST THE CAPTAIN

The worst back-seat drivers are those who have never learned how to drive. Some years ago aboard a ship I heard a passenger wax extremely critical of the captain's seamanship. He took exception to the manner in which we left the dock, our speed through the harbor and our course down the channel. Here, I thought, must be a former sea captain of great experience. But not so. Upon inquiry I learned that he was a landsman who had never been on a vessel larger than an excursion steamer.

It is a favorite human trait to find fault with the ship's course, so to speak, when we ourselves do not know how to navigate or even to steer. The office boy often knows more than the boss — or thinks he does. Any private would gladly tell the generals about strategy. We all know what is wrong with the world and with life, and just how we would make everything all right if we were running it and not God.

Is that so? Friend, if God placed the steering wheel in your hands would you know which way to turn it? I doubt it. You and I have our own infinitesimally small tasks aboard this great ship. Let us do them as well as we can and have faith in the Captain who in His infinite wisdom sets our course.

Revamping Peace Corps

What ever became of the Peace Corps? The question crops up now and then, generally when an observer of foreign affairs senses that something has dropped out of the news and realizes the Peace Corps is it.

On inquiry, one learns that the Peace Corps leaped into lively existence under Kennedy, peaked of its own momentum in 1966, and then lapsed into slow decline. Now that decline has been reversed. Applications from prospective volunteers once more are flooding in, and the Congress is about to take up Nixon's plan for bringing half a dozen volunteer agencies, including the Peace Corps, under a single tent to be known as Action.

Let an old skeptic confess, in part at least, the error of his ways. When the Peace Corps first was conceived, many a conservative critic, including me, saw the outfit as a gaggle of adolescent do-gooders, bearing ideological Rinso to the great unwashed. At best, we supposed, the volunteers would be innocents abroad; at worst, they would turn into meddlesome Melvins, bound to make trouble.

The estimate, in fact, was not wholly in error. Some of the volunteers, equipped with little more than a liberal arts degree and a few stars in their eyes, proved to have little of value to the host countries where they worked. In Latin America, some of the activist types, working to organize the campesinos and instruct them in their civil rights, achieved little but new disillusion. In the course of time, the Peace Corps formally was invited out of half a dozen countries. And as the novelty wore off, applications declined from 45,600 in 1964 to 19,000 last year.

Yet the picture, viewed as a whole, was much better. The Peace Corps volunteers proved themselves, by and large, as excellent emmissaries of the United States. They taught in schools where there had been no schools before; they performed some ingenious miracles here and there in agriculture, in sanitation and in public health. They caused little or no embarrassment in U.S. foreign policy, and they made a host of friends in people-to-people diplomacy. Barry Goldwater's enthusiastic comment that the Corps is "the best thing we have going in the field of foreign relations" probably is close to the mark, though it tells us something of what else we have going for us in the field of foreign relations.

Under Director Joseph Blatchford, sideburned and blue-eyed, the Peace Corps is steadily being revamped. The new emphasis is on recruiting volunteers with specific skills—plumbers, carpenters, especially farmers. In 1969, barely 2 percent of the requests reaching the Peace Corps from host countries were for farmers. This year the figure is 18 percent. Meanwhile, requests for "gerenalists" have dropped in half, from 60 percent ot 29.

Recruiting efforts are being altered in other directions also. From its inception, the Corps has encountered great difficulty in attracting black and Chicano volunteers. Vigorous programs are in motion to change this picture. Formerly the Corps took married couples, but none

Other Editors Say They Tell A Story

(Washington Daily News)

Some recent statistics tell us a real story. We are speaking of the doctor shortage in our part of the state.

Just how bad is the doctor shortage? Well, for all of Noth Carolina the recent statistics show that for the state we have one doctor for every 963 people. But in far Eastern North Carolina, in the Northeast section we have one doctor for every 1,567 persons, while in the Southeast section we have one doctor for every 1,759 people. But in the Piedmont area of our state there is one doctor for every 427 people.

The figures in black and white show clearly the present condition and the great need. And perhaps areas of our state where there are ample doctors really cannot understand how it is here in our part of the state. Some of our counties today have no doctors. Several in our area have only one doctor. And it is said over and over, "if anything happens to him, there is no one to take his place." And these words have a sincere ring of truth about them.

It seems to us that it is time for the squabbling about medical schools to cease and time for the show to get on the road. The big story of course is not the squabbling but the need for more doctors.

And East Carolina university is but the medium through which our people are pinning hopes. A medical school there could serve at least to give us a better chance to get more doctors into our area.

Let us continue to put the emphasis on the need. That is the one factor the opponents of an ECU Medical school do not like to discuss.

The Pony Express Rides Again

Starting today, the Post Office promises to deliver airmail the next day to urban destinations within 600 miles. Such mail will have to carry zip codes and be deposited before 4 p.m. weekdays in specially marked boxes. The service will be limited to 500 cities at the start.

Airmail for destinations beyond 600 miles that meets those conditions will be delivered within two days, Postmaster General Winton M. Blount promises.

COMMENT: Gad, the speed of it all! Six hundred miles in less than 24 hours! But why use airplanes? A truck could make that distance in 12 hours, with time out for the driver's coffee.

But it will be an improvement over some present postal runs. Airmail between Washington and New York now takes longer than surface mail. General Blount should be encouraged.

However, this promise of improved service, and probably more to come, looks very much like a program to condition the public for higher mail rates.

If Cadmium In Oysters Why Not In Clams Too?

The U. S. Public Health Service discovered that cadmium had been found in oysters from Maine to North Carolina in 1968. Like mercury, cadmium isn't good for people.

Now the Northeast Water Hygiene Laboratory of the Federal Environmental Protection Agency is making new studies which may lead to the definition of safe levels of cadmium in oysters.

COMMENT: It is strange that the public was not alerted when cadmium was first noted in oysters. Perhaps it would have hurt oyster sales. And if oysters pick up cadmium from industrial wastes, why not clams? Mussels? Scallops? Shrimp?

How To Muffle A Man Who Hates Income Taxes

The Wall Street Journal reports that Arthur J. Porth, 69, of Wichita, believes federal income taxes are unconstitutional. He refused to pay them and last fall began serving a five-year term for violating the revenue law. Last January his sentence was reduced to two years and he was placed on probation. The WSJ added: "But before he was set free, the militant tax foe had to agree to abstain from writing and speaking activities 'calling into question the constitutionality of the Federal Reserve System and the federal income tax laws,' a federal attorney says."

COMMENT: This is a blatant outrage. It appears that Porth was forced, under threat of jail, to forswear one of his most precious constitutional rights, the right of free speech, guaranteed him by the First Amendment to the Constitution.

It would seem fitting that Attorney General John N. Mitchell move into Kansas and bring about indictment of those who conspired to deny Porth of his rights. And if that failed, President Nixon could return a regiment from Vietnam and bring Kansas back into the Union.

A Dog Is Now Legend

By JOHN WOODFIELD
Associated Press Writer

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Dodo is dead.

The tiny black and brown mongrel dog who wandered dripping wet out of a summer storm one night five years ago and into the hearts of the U.S. Naval Academy's 4,000-man brigade, was discovered ill in the academy yard recently and died soon afterward.

His past was murky and his ancestors unknown, but Dodo fast became a legend in his own time, outranking Tecumseh and the famed Navy goat in Academy tradition.

Although he was never accorded recognition by academy officials, he was that tiny touch of home to new recruits and a symbol of independence once known to upper classmen.

Dodo never spent two consecutive nights in the same room, fastidiously avoided favoritism, and the disdain with which he held commissioned officers brought secret delight to the hearts of his human roommates.

Wherever the brigade went, Dodo was there.

He slept in Bancroft Hall, ate in the mess hall, trotted happily alongside the midshipmen at parades, including the fabled June Week Color Parade, and regularly attended classes.

It was not unusual to see plebes (freshmen) snap to attention when Dodo sauntered into their rooms.

So important was he to the brigade that various plebes were assigned to keep a log of his activities.

A sample entry reads: "Midshipman dog was seen returning from chapel this morning. A glow of humility was noted in his eyes and he was obviously in penance to atone for missing morning meal yesterday. He decided to anticipate this morning's formation and arrived 17 minutes early."

View Spring Madness In Current Art Show

The current show of art on the third floor of Rawl Building is a refreshing viewpoint on spring madness. Entitled "A Self-Participating Exhibit," it is a rather far-out hodgepodge of fun, always clean, if at times a bit gruesome.

There are, for example, authentic tombstones which now serve a new role — as objects decorated with photographs. One of these, with the word "father" chiseled on the stone, bears a cut out photograph of J. Edgar Hoover, the Caesar like image of the FBI chief that came out on the cover of a recent issue of Life magazine.

Another self-participating item is an actual window crowded with decorations of cut out images, with the top panes filled with navy blue cloth net, an elegant simulation of rusted screen wire.

Old childrens toys — a wagon and a tricycle, are given new life by the addition of a large basket of pink azaleas (probably wilted by now). A rusted pair of bed springs, hanging on a wall, still has tattered bits of old matteras cloth adhering. It has been touched up whimsically with little bouquets of flowers.

Worn-out curtains and towels have been painted, draped and added on large pieces of paper, drip or abstract painted.

Here and there amid this helter-skelter of renovated left-overs, a fine bit of drawing shows up unexpectedly.

Any viewer willing to accept the results of a show of this type will find here a certain amusement. It is different . — Jerry Raynor

Originated By Franklin

NEW YORK (UPI)—Daylight Savings Time was first proposed by Benjamin Franklin in the 1770s but not solely for scientific reasons, according to researchers for a watch company.

Franklin said it would be smart to save an hour of daylight by "postponing nightfall." His reputation as a scientist was so great in America and in Europe that it was generally believed he was motivated only by science.

Franklin was a lively night owl while at the French court in Paris, where he was first American minister to France. He frequently missed many of the summer's daylight hours while sleeping off the exertions of the night before, which, say the Bulova researchers was a non-scientific reason for his DST proposal.

STAY-AT-HOMES

BRUSSELS (UPI)—Only 30 per cent of Belgium's 9.6 million people take away-from-home vacations, according to government statistics. Of these, 48 per cent remain in Belgium and the rest go abroad.

Movie Starlets' Home Is Feeling Hard Times

By GENE HANDSAKER
Assocatied Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The YWCA's Hollywood Studio Club, once home to Marilyn Monroe, Kim Novak, Barbara Eden and JoAnne Worley, has fallen on hard times along with the movie industry whose golden era it long symbolized.

It has cut out meals and, for newcomers, increased the room rates once paid by such aspiring starlets as Linda Darnell, Donna Reed, Barbara Hale and Zazu Pitts.

But 50 talented young beauties still occupy the big, Spanish-type residence, practicing songs or dance steps or rushing off to auditions.

Meals were discontinued Dec. 31 and the single-room rate of $20 a week was upped to $36 in an effort to cut losses of thousands of dollars in recent years. Why the losses? For a variety of reasons, spokeswomen say.

Occupancy, a capacity 107 until about five years ago, fell as movies lost money, sound stages went dark, many productions moved overseas and panic hit Hollywood. Some girls went back home, their hopes for movie fame battered. Some moved out leaving room and meal bills unpaid.

Studios, individuals and groups, formerly financial supporters, quit or reduced their donations—another spinoff of the town's economic woes.

On land in the heart of the Hollywood donated by the YWCA's national board the three-story club was built sturdily of concrete and steel in 1962. Brass plates over the two upper floors' bedroom doors identify contributors—"This room was given by Harold Lloyd" ... "by Cecil B. De Mille" ... "by Jackie Coogan" ... "by Mary Pickford" ... "by Gloria Swanson."

Beamed high ceilings, fireplaces, antiques, pianos and plump furniture provide somewhat faded but quiet comfort.

Conference rooms will now be available to women's clubs and college groups. Nurses, travelers and others besides starlets are invited to stay. Says the spokeswoman: "We hope to make the club available to the total community."

Bottles Drift To Same Shore

SYDNEY (AP) — Two message-carrying bottles launched by Japanese school children came ashore in Australia after drifting perhaps 6,000 miles in less than 14 months.

The identical bottled messages said they were launched by the Sea Science Club of Yaizu High School, Japan, and that the children were doing a special project on tidal currents.

One bottle was picked up on Gerringong Beach, 80 miles south of Sydney, the other at nearby Mollymook Beach.

BUSY AIRPORT

COPENHAGEN (UPI) — Copenhagen's Kastrup Airport was Europe's fourth busiest in all kinds of traffic, after London, Paris and Frankfort in the first half of 1970, according to the Danish air authorities.

years ago. He was presented with a Navy blanket with the gold "N" on top and gold letters reading "Bite Army" on either side.

He trotted at the sidelines at every Navy football game.

Academy officials, who persistently refused to admit that Dodo had replaced the Navy goat in the heart and eyes of the brigade, continued to emphasize before each Navy away game that the small dog would not be afforded official transportation.

But shortly before last fall's Army-Navy game at Philadelphia, one high ranking officer lamented, "I know that just as sure as the sun comes up tomorrow, that dog will be there if the middies have to smuggle him in."

with children. Now whole families are being recruited. In 1969, only 6 percent of the applicants were over 28; the figure this year is 21 percent.

Blatchford has a highly carbonated optimism about the road ahead. The new Action agency—unless Congress disapproves—will bring such agencies as VISTA (Volunteers in Service to America) and eventually the Teachers Corps under his wing. He foresees all kinds of possibilities for men and women with a sense of dedication to volunteer service—for example, one year of teaching in some troubled spot in the United States, followed by two years of teaching abroad. A number of universities are working out plans to grant academic credit toward master's degrees in return for volunteer service.

Not everyone is so enthusiastic. Many of the VISTA people, suspicious of change and hostile to Nixon, are dragging their feet. But Blatchford is warmly convinced that plenty of Americans still possess the old volunteer spirit, and he is ready to welcome them aboard his refurbished ship, for duty at home or abroad.

Holshouser Has More Questions

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina Republican Chairman James Holshouser says he still has some questions that need answers on his charges of alleged misuse of state-owned cars.

But two legislators indicated Wednesday they are opposed to any further hearings.

Sens. John Henley, D-Cumberland, and Rep. Peter Foley, D-Mecklenburg, implied this after the Senate and House State Government Committees held a third hearing on the issue.

Holshouser, state representative from Watauga, called for an investigation several weeks ago into the alleged misuse of state cars and later asked for a legislative hearing.

"I'm not quite through with my questions," Holshouser told the joint committee Wednesday. "One more hearing will finish it."

"We just keep going on and on," said Henley. He added he didn't feel that state officials should have to come to another hearing to answer any more questions.

He told a newsman later that if Holshouser has a specific question, he can obtain the answers by telephone from state officials.

Foley said he agreed, adding, "If he has a specific question to ask, I think he has had plenty of time to ask it."

Most of the questions at Wednesday's hearing came from Holshouser.

State Purchasing Director R. D. McMillan told him the state had considered leasing motor vehicles, "but at this time it is not considered economically feasible."

Charles Williams, assistant director of the state Department of Administration, said state agencies are required to maintain a log showing the mileage the cars are driven.

ABC Permits At 2 Area Outlets Are Suspended

One Greenville service station and a Grifton firm have had their ABC permits suspended by the State Alcoholic Control Board for violations of regulations.

The State ABC Board at its April 19 meeting in Raleigh suspended a permit issued to Jasper L. Summerlin for Billy Summerlin Service Station, 1620 North Greene St., for 60 days effective May 3, on charges of "possessing alcoholic beverages on the retail licensed premises on December 9, 1970 at 6:05 p.m.... and failed to give the retail licensed premises proper supervision..."

A permit issued to Edward Hollis Owens for Grifton Recreation Center, 409 West Queen St., was suspended by the board for 30 days, effective May 3, for permitting a "person in an intoxicated condition, to loiter on the retail licensed premises... and through his employee, failed to give the retail licensed premises proper supervision on November 14, 1970..."

Arrest Youths For Theft Of Tractor-Mower

Two area youths were arrested Tuesday afternoon and charged with the larceny of a lawn mower tractor from Farmer Funeral Home in Ayden. The tractor was reported stolen on March 22.

Pitt County deputies apprehended Kenneth Clayton Wilson, 17, of Rt. 1, Winterville, and Samuel Fleming Cox, 16, of Rt. 1, Ayden at Wilson's home around 5 p.m.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that the tractor, belonging to Jimmy Farmer of Ayden and valued at an estimated $489, was recovered at the time of the arrests.

Bond was set at $300 for each youth and a hearing in District Court here has been scheduled for May 10, Sheriff Tyson added.

Housing Fair

In addition to the interior exhibits, there will be two mobile homes displayed outside, it was pointed out.

A feature of the fair that should prove educational is the scheduling of classes on Friday and Saturday on subjects pertaining to many aspects of the housing theme.

On Friday at 1 and 3 p. m., Mrs. Nancy Holmes of the School of Home Economics at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro will have a class on "New Concepts in Housing." At 2 p. m. that day, Henry J. Smith, Extension Horticultural Specialist in charge of landscaping at N. C. State, will speak on "Landscaping Your Home."

Saturday's schedule will include a 1 p. m. class on "Living With Light" with Miss Sandra Rogers, Home Economist with Vepco, instructing. Louis Clark, president of the Greenville-Pitt Board of Realtors, will have a class on real estate at 2 a. m. and at 3 p. m., Miss Rogers will offer a class on "Cooking the Microwave Way." Saturday's classes will end with a 4 p. m. address by W. C. Warrick, who is in charge of Housing and House Furnishings at N. C. State.

During tomorrow's opening ceremonies, remarks will be made by the president of CPDA, Jim Hunt of Wilson, and Mrs. Ada Dalla Pozza, state home economics extension agent. Greenville Mayor, Frank M. Wooten is scheduled to introduce Senator Jordan.

Pitt County extension chairman Edwin L. Yancey pointed out that one of the purposes of the fair is to give people the opportunity to compare the latest ideas and materials used in the building and remodeling of homes today.

There are several reasons why the Housing Fair is needed, he said. A major reason considered by the extension service and CPDA is the need for better housing.

The extension chairman noted that there are almost 96,000 housing units in the six county Coastal Plain area. Using the criteria of plumbing, more than 21,000 of those units are substandard. When other items such as heat, space, storage, and general state of repair are considered, the substandard figures rise to almost half of the total.

"A housing fair such as the one being held in Greenville . . . helps call attention to the needs and opportunities for improved housing in the area," Yancey said.

He continued, "It provides individuals the opportunity to see the complete range of ideas, products, and services related to housing, which might be valuable. On top of all that, a housing fair can be fun."

Officials point out that there will be no admission charges during the fair and persons attending and viewing the displays will be under no pressure to buy; in fact, direct product sales have been prohibited by the fair management.

Exhibits will be open from 10 a. m. until 9 p. m. on Friday and Saturday, and from 1 to 6 p. m. on Sunday. Parking will be available at the warehouse.

Included among the commercial exhibits will be displays on house plans and building sites, financing, landscaping, water systems, roofing materials, plumbing materials and fixtures, heating, cooling and insulation, electrical wiring and lighting fixtures, appliances, furnishings and remodeling materials.

Persons connected with the Housing Fair feel that the theme — Better Homes for Better Living — is an appropriate one and efforts are being made by them to provide exhibits and displays that will lead to better informed home builders in the Pitt, Martin, Wilson, Nash, Edgecombe, and Beaufort County areas of the state.

War Protestors Ignore Order Break Camp On Capitol Mall

By TOM SEPPY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — With implied approval of the Justice Department, hundreds of Vietnam veterans have ignored a Supreme Court order to break camp on the Mall while protesting the war in which they once fought.

The court upheld a lower-court ruling which banned camping on the grassy area between the Capitol and Lincoln Memorial. And former Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark, a lawyer for Vietnam Veterans Against the War, suggested the demonstrators obey the order.

But a 480-400 vote Wednesday night affirmed sentiment voiced throughout the day by protest leaders: "Hell no, we won't go."

Spokesmen for the Justice Department, Disctrict of Columbia police and National Park Police indicated no action would be taken immediately against the battle-clad veterans.

"We are not going in there at 1 in the morning and pick up some wounded veteran and throw him into the street," said Park Police Lt. William R. Kinsey. "We don't treat people like that."

Lt. L.H. Herring, asked if it might take days for official word of the court order to reach Park Police, smiled and replied, "You're right."

But the veterans, who promised any resistance to police would be nonviolent, took some precautionary measures as drizzle, wind and darkness moved across the campground.

They asked all nonveterans to leave, requested money for bail and told state protest chairmen to submit to lawyers the names of protesters who would submit to arrest. Several accepted offers to sleep in private homes while others moved into some congressional offices made available for the night.

Among the after-dark visitors as the war veterans ended the third day of their scheduled five-day protest was Sen. Philip A. Hart, D-Mich. Earlier in the day he had sought to put the Senate on record in favor of the Mall campsite. The move was blocked temporarily by Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C.

An agreement reached between veterans' leaders and the government, was interpreted to mean the order banned sleeping, lying in bedrolls, making any fire, cooking, erecting any shelter and digging on the Mall.

Several tents had been erected earlier in the area and were left standing. Most of the veterans used bedrolls or bedding.

Clark announced the court order with the statement: "I would like you to comply with it."

All told, some 20 members of Congress visited the Mall campsite Wednesday to offer encouragement. Others urged President Nixon to allow the veterans to continue their protest on the Mall.

Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., exercised a senatorial privilege and allowed demonstrators to eat in a Capitol restaurant during rush hours. And Washington Mayor Walter E. Washington offered city park sites and transportation to the protesters, as an alternative to the Mall campground.

No Impact On Schools

Commenting on the recent Supreme Court decision relative to the federal courts ordering busing as a means of desegregating public schools, Dr. Cleet C. Cleetwood, superintendent of Greenville City Schools, said the ruling would not require changes for the city schools.

"The decision only justifies and vindicates the local board of education in moving all along in the direction schools should have been taking," the superintendent remarked.

"The decision of the court unanimously confirms that the board has acted wisely by already have entered into zoning and providing bus service to achieve desegregation in our schools," Dr. Cleetwood said.

Dr. E. B. Aycock, chairman of the Greenville City School Board, says "I don't believe the Supreme Court ruling will affect the Greenville City School. The way we are presently operating, I feel, would not make any change necessary."

Locks And Bars Now Inadequate

NEW YORK (AP) — "People used to rely almost entirely on locks and bars to keep out intruders," says Sol Rosen, president of Pro-Tech Programs which makes and installs electronic alarm systems. "But the soaring crime rate has proven these methods inadequate, precipitating the growth of companies engaged in supplying security systems for industry and home."

Forest Fire Costs High

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It is costing North Carolina $30,000 a day to fight forest fires, some of which have been reportedly set by arsonists.

Tom Hegele, information officer for the North Carolina Forest Services, says that in the eight days ended last Sunday a minimum of $241,000 was spent. And not included in the estimate was the cost of fighting the biggest fire, in the Angola Swamp area. It was brought under control Wednesday after it burned more than 15,000 acres of woodland and grass in Pender and Duplin counties in the eastern part of the state.

The estimate does not include the cost of building the land up again with new forests.

The forest service said more than 45,000 acres of woodlands have been blackened in the last two weeks by hundreds of fires.

Showers of the last couple of days did not remove the forest fire hazard. Only a good, soaking rain will do that.

The $241,000 includes the cost of leasing three aerial tankers from a private company in Arizona. These are converted World war II B-17 Flying Fortress bombers.

Hegele said an additional plane will be put into service Friday. It will operate out of Hickory and cost $400 an hour to operate.

It is being leased from the Department of Transportation of the Canadian province of Quebec. The plane, named the Canadair, can opeate from both land and water, and can refill its 1,400-gallon tanks from lakes.

Lineups Announced For Purple-Gold

Starting Quarterback

East Carolina Coach Sonny Randle hands the ball to sophomore Carl Summerell in naming him as the starting quarterback for the Purple (first) unit in Saturday's Purple-Gold game. Transfer student Gary Wann will handle the Gold, with last year's starter, John Casazza, alternating between the two.

Sophomore Carl Summerell and junior college transfer Gary Wann have been named the starting quarterbacks for East Carolina University's annual Purple-Gold football game Saturday in Ficklen Stadium.

Head coach Sonny Randle made the announcement Wednesday and at the same time announced the starting lineups for both squads.

The Pirates' other quarterback, John Casazza, a 5-11, 180-pound senior who started last season will be the back-up quarterback on both squads.

Summerell, a 6-3, 190-pounder will direct the Purple team, composed of both the offensive and defensive starters. Wann, a 6-2, 195-pounder, who transferred to ECU from Fullerton (Calif.) Junior College, will direct the Gold team, which is manned by second teams, both offensively and defensively.

Offensively, for the Purple team, Bob Millie and Tim Dameron will start at the wide receivers. Millie, a 6-5, 200-pound senior, has been very impressive in spring drills as has Dameron, a 6-1, 180-pound junior. Bill Croisetiere, a 6-1, 210-pound junior, will start at tight end.

Grover Truslow, a 6-4, 235-pound senior, and Paul Haug, a 6-2, 250-pound senior, will start at the tackles. Truslow was a defensive starter last spring and was moved to offense. Haug started at tackle last season before a knee injury knocked him out for the season.

Mike Kopp and Ron Peed, a pair of seniors will start at the guards, and Jimmy Creech will start at center. Kopp, a 6-1, 220-pounder, started and guard and tackle last season while Peed was a reserve at guard. This spring, Peed, a 6-3, 220-pounder, has been very impressive as has Creech, a 6-1, 210-pound junior, who was a reserve center a year ago.

In the backfield, the Purple team will have two of the best running backs in the Southern Conference in Billy Wallace and Les Strayhorn, both starters last season. Wallace, a 6-0, 185-pounder, was the conference's second leading rusher last season. Strayhorn, a 5-10, 195-pound junior, played only half the season last fall because of an ankle injury but still managed to gain over 500 yards.

Offensively for the Gold, Tom Counter and Mike Myrick will start at the wide receivers. Counter, a 6-3, 200-pound junior, sat out last season after playing as a freshman at Virginia Tech. Myrick, a 5-10, 180-pound sophomore, started for the ECU freshmen last fall. Tony Maglione, a 6-1, 215-pound senior will start at tight end.

Mark Pohren and Fred Horeis will start at the tackles. Pohren, a 6-1, 210-pound senior, started at center last season, while Horeis, a 6-1, 215-pound sophomore, started as a freshman last year.

Two juniors, David Callahan and Terry Cumberworth, will start at the guards. Callahan, a 6-0, 200-pounder, was a part-time starter last fall, while Cumberworth, a 5-11, 210-pounder, transferred to ECU this year from Centerville (Iowa) Junior College.

In the backfield, the Golf team will have Rusty Scales and Fred Benevento at the running backs. Scales, a 5-9, 190-pound senior, was a reserve last season, as was Benevento, a 5-9, 170-pound junior.

Defensively for the Purple, Ted Salmon and Kirk Doll will start at the ends. Salmon, a 6-2, 210-pound senior started last season, while Doll, a 6-2, 215-pound junior, transferred from Hutchinson (Kan.) Junior College.

Rick Peeler and Greg Burke will start at the tackles. Peeler, a 6-2, 250-pound senior, is the Pirate captain and was All-Southern Conference at the position a year ago. Burke, a 6-5, 240-pound sophomore, has been impressive during spring drills, and is one of two sophomores starting for the Pirates.

Rusty Markland, a 6-0, 190-pounder, is the other sophomore, and will start in the secondary along with a pair of seniors, Jack Patterson and Mike Stephens. Patterson is a 6-1, 180-pounder, while Stephens is a 6-2, 175-pounder.

At the linebackers are Monty Kiernam, Don Mollenhauer, Terry Stoughton and Ralph Betesh. Kiernam, a 6-0, 200-pound senior, was a starter last season, as was Betesh, a 5-10, 200-pound senior.

Mollenhauer, a 6-2, 215-pound senior, was a reserve last season, while Stoughton, a 5-11, 175-pound junior, transferred to ECU from Fort Scott (Kan.) Junior College.

Defensively for the Gold, Bob Hileman and Joe Tkach start at the ends. Hileman, a 6-3, 215-pound senior, was an offensive starter last season, while Tkach is a 6-1, 215-pound sophomore.

Two sophomores and two juniors will start at linebackers. Jim Post (6-2, 225, junior) sat out last season after transferring from Kansas State while Dick Paddock, also a junior, is a 6-1, 200-pounder.

In the secondary for the Gold are Will Mitchell, Terry Kelly and Buddy Yeaver. Mitchell, a starter last season in the secondary, is a 5-11, 175-pound senior, while Kelly is a 5-11, 180-pound junior. Yeager, a sophomore, is 5-11, 175-pounds.

Sophomore Vaughn Bozman will handle the place kicking duties for both teams, while Wann and Maglione will handle the punting duties for the Gold as will sophomore Clark Davis for the Purple.

Kickoff time for Saturday's game is 2 p. m.

Pirates Are On Road

A tennis match and a golf match, both on the road, are the only two spring sports events scheduled for East Carolina University on Friday.

ECU's tennis team meets Georgia Southern at Charleston, S.C., in a two event sponsored by The Citadel.

In other action, Coach John Welborn's golfers meet UNC-Wilmington. Earlier in the year the Pirates knocked off the Wilmington golfers 15-3 in a match played at Greenville Golf and Country Club.

The University of North Carolina's lacrosse team rolled to a 12-5 victory over East Carolina University yesterday.

It was the fifth loss in eight starts for the Pirates this year.

Carolina took a 2-0 lead in the first quarter of the match, and never lost the lead. Both teams scored once in the second period, and the Bucs trailed, 3-1 at the half.

But in the third period, Carolina put through five goals, while the Bucs got just two to up the lead to 8-3. The Tar Heels again outscored the Pirates, 4-2, in the final period to wrap it up.

Northrup Burning Up Oriole Hurlers

By KEN RAPPOPORT
Associated Press Sports Writer

Who's on first? Jim Northrup. As a matter of fact, he's on second, third and home plate, too.

"Northrup is hot," says Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver, "and when you're hot, you're hot."

Baltimore's been burned two nights in a row by the Detroit outfielder, so Weaver speaks from painful, first-hand experience. Northrup, who delivered four runs in Tuesday night's Detroit victory, belted in three more Wednesday night as the Tigers bumped the Birds 5-1.

The powerhouse performances have lifted Northrup in front in the American League's RBI race. But they haven't done a thing for his ego.

"I don't think I'll ever be a superstar like the Willie May's, Hank Aarons and Mickey Mangles," said Northrup after hitting a home run and two doubles. "I don't think I'll ever fit into that category. A superstar is a guy who plays 15 years or more and does the job all those years.

"I'm not going to fill any ball parks. But, to a kid who likes Jim Northrup ... well, then, maybe I'm a superstar. It depends how you define it."

The fans in the center field bleachers at Tiger Stadium have their own definitition. When Northrup loped out to his position after his sixth-inning double, they gave him a standing ovation. Northrup doffed his hat and grinned.

Boston whipped Detroit 9-7, Washington outscored the New York Yankees 9-6 and Oakland stopped California 4-2 in 13 innings in the other American League games.

Wet grounds postponed Kansas City at Minnesota and the Chicago at Milwaukee game was wiped out by cold weather.

In the National League, Pittsburgh ripped Atlanta 10-2; New York took Cincinnati 5-2; St. Louis downed San Francisco 5-3 and Los Angeles blasted San Diego 10-2. The Philadelphia-Montreal and Houston-Chicago contests were postponed by rain.

Northrup, who's long played second fiddle to a cast of Detroit stars like Al Kaline and Norm Cash, is off to the best getaway of his eight-year major league career with 17 RBI.

While Mickey Lolich held baseball's defending champions in check with five hits, Northrup bugged the Birds with a solo home run in the first inning and run-producing doubles in the third and fifth. Lolich struck out nine Orioles, whose only score was Andy Etchebarren's third inning homer.

The two-game Tiger sweep didn't disturb Weaver.

"I'll take us two days longer to clinch the pennant," he said.

Carl Yastrzemski clubbed four hits, including a home run and two-out eighth-inning double which drove in the tie-breaking run for Boston. Yaz was surprised the Indians decided to pitch to him in eighth with a man on second, first base open and right-hander Vince Colbert on the mound for the Indians.

The three-time American League batting champion then whistled the first pitch on a line to left field, where it eluded Roy Foster's diving shoestring try. Joe Lahoud scored the go-ahead run from second.

Frank Howard stroked a run-scoring single with two out in the eighth inning to break a tie for Washington and the Senators added two more in the ninth.

Washington Manager Ted Williams was satisfied with the Senators' breakout of 18 safeties: "I think that's the most hits I've seen by one club in Yankee Stadium."

Sal Bando unloaded a two-run homer in the top of the 13th to give Oakland a comeback victory over California. The Athletics had tied the game at 2-2 in the ninth inning on Joe Rudi's leadoff homer off Rudy May.

Until Rudi's blast, May had given Oakland only two hits and struck out 12.

Stargell Runs Wild In Pittsburgh Win

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

Those April showers are just the home runs Willie Stargell is raining all over the National League.

The Pittsburgh strong boy, rapidly becoming the biggest menace to Atlanta since Gen. Sherman, whacked three more home runs and drove in five runs as the Pirates trounced the Braves 10-2 Wednesday night.

With nine homers in the young season, Stargell is one short of the major league record for April shared by Baltimore's Frank Robinson and Cincinnati's Tony Perez. Seven of the nine have come against Atlanta pitching.

"This is a funny game," said Stargell. "I can't explain why you do better one night than another."

Neither can the Braves' pitchers, and they aren't even laughing. Nor are the batters who have to face New York's hard-throwing Tom Seaver. The Mets' ace right-hander set a club record of 26 consecutive scoreless innings in a 5-2 victory over Cincinnati.

Elsewhere in the NL, St. Louis shaded San Francisco 5-3 and Los Angeles handed San Diego its eighth straight defeat 10-2. Houston at Chicago and Philadelphia at Montreal were rained out.

American League scores: Detroit 5, Baltimore 1; Oakland 4, California 2 in 13 innings; Washington 9, New York 6; Boston 9, Cleveland 7. Kansas City at Minnesota was postponed by wet grounds and Chicago at Milwaukee was halted by cold.

Last year at this time Stargell was "oh for April," hitting, he thinks, about .042. His first homer Wednesday came in the first inning with one man on base and he hit a solo shot in the fourth, both off loser Jim Nash. His third homer, in the sixth, came off Tom Kelley, but he failed in his bid to become the eighth player in baseball history to hit four home runs in a nine-inning game when he struck out against Steve Barber in the seventh.

"I was trying to hit a home run," he confessed.

Bob Robertson also homered for the Pirates and Richie Hebner snapped an 0-for-24 skid with a two-run single as the Buc broke out of their batting slump with a vengeance in support of Dock Ellis' five-hit pitching.

Seaver, who needed eighth-inning relief from Tug McGraw, had his scoreless streak broken in the seventh when he walked Johnny Bench with two out and Willie Smith doubled. The old club mark of 23 innings was set in 1969 by both Jerry Koosman and Jim McAndrew.

The Mets, who got run-scoring singles from Cleon Jones in the first inning and Bob Aspromonte in the seventh, wrapped it up with three in the eighth as they beat Gary Nolan for only the second time in 11 decisions and for the first time ever as a starter.

the eighth on Woody Woodward's third hit, a walk and Pete Rose's run-scoring single. But they had plenty of kind words afterwards.

"When I get three hits off Seaver in one night it's as good as two years' work for me," said Woodward. Manager Sparky Anderson said Seaver "is a great pitcher, in a class with Bob Gibson and Juan Marichal."

Gibson was in action, too, Wednesday. The St. Louis fireballer hurled a five-hitter and Joe Torre lashed a bases-loaded triple as the Cardinals shelled San Francisco's Gaylord Perry for all five runs in the sixth inning.

Trailing 2-0 on Willie McCovey's fourth-inning homer, his first of the season, the Cards erupted on Matty Alou's single, Alan Gallagher's throwing error and a single by Ted Simmons. Torre then sent all three runners scampering home with his triple and the other two runs came across on Jose Cardenal's double and Joe Hague's single. Ken Henderson homered for the Giants' final run.

The setback snapped Perry's nine-game winning streak, three this year. Gibson has whipped the Giants eight straight and the last time he lost to them, on Sept. 17, 1968, Perry had to pitch a 1-0 no-hitter.

Richie Allen paced the Dodgers' triumph over San Diego with a home run and two doubles and the left fielder threw out two Padres trying to score on base hits in the fifth inning.

Danny Coombs and Steve Arlin were the victims of Allen's booming bat while Bob Barton and Enzo Hernandez ran afoul of his supposedly weak arm.

The Dodgers banged out 18 hits as Bill Singer coasted to his first victory in five decisions.

Grifton Rally Stops Panthers

BETHEL — Grifton turned on a five-run outburst in the last inning to defeat North Pitt, 10-8. The Panthers had led most of the way, and held an 8-5 lead going into the final frame.

Grifton took an early lead, scoring twice in the first inning. Johnny Willis reached on an error and walks were issued to Billy Edwards and Jim Herring, loading the bases. Lynn Thomas also walked, forcing in Willis, and Mike Coles doubled to score Edwards. Herring, trying to score, was cut down.

North Pitt came back with four runs in the bottom of the first. Linwood Brown reached on an error and Earl Worsley doubled. Joey Moore singled home both runners, and he scored when Steve Fuchs tripled. Danny Whitehurst singled to score Fuchs.

Grifton and North Pitt each scored two in the second, making it 6-4 for the Panthers. North Pitt added two more in the fourth, and Grifton added one in the fifth for the 8-5 margin as the seventh opened.

Grifton then responded with the big inning to take the win. Ricky Thorne walked, as did Willis. Edwards singled and Thomas doubled to score Thorne and Willis. Mike Coles singled to score Edwards and Thomas, putting Grifton ahead. Ed McCullom got a hit to score Coles with the insurance run.

North Pitt plays Conley at Bethel on Friday, while Grifton entertains Ayden.

Milwaukee Runs By The Bullets

By MIKE RECHT
Associated Press Sports Writer

MILWAUKEE (AP) — It was the Milwaukee Bucks against the opener of the National Basketball Association championship series, but the spectre of last year's champion New York Knicks hovered over them.

"We played very bad," Coach Gene Shue of the Bullets said simply.

Coach Larry Costello of the Bucks said only a bit more. "We were not sharp. I think Baltimore can play better and I know we can play better."

Both were talking about Milwaukee's sloppy 98-88 uninspiring victory over the Bullets in the nationally televised game Wednesday night for a 1-0 lead in the best-of-7 series.

Oddly, the Knicks, eliminated by Baltimore last Monday in a gruelling seventh game of their semifinal series, were blamed by both clubs for the off-night in Milwaukee had 23 turnovers and Baltimore 14.

"Subconsciously, we have had to readjust our thinking," explained Greg Smith of the Bucks.

The Bucks, haunted by the thirst for revenge against the Knicks, who eliminated them in the playoffs last season and were the only team to dominate them this season, had only two days to put the Knicks out of mind and set their sights on the Bullets.

The Bullets were too tired to get their thoughts off their very satisfying victory over the Knicks, who eliminated them the past two years.

Without the lift that carried them past the Knicks—despite the loss of starters Eddie Miles, Gus Johnson and Kevin Loughery for all or parts of the series—the Bullets were no match for the heavily-favored Bucks and awesome Lew Alcindor.

The 7-foot-2 monster man of the middle took the game out of Baltimore's hands in the third quarter with 18 points on eight of 11 shots from the field.

Alcindor, who sat out 15 minutes of the first half in foul trouble and had only eight points and one rebound, raised the Bucks from a 50-42 halftime lead to an 11-point spread entering the final period. With neither team a ball of fire, that type of lead was enough, although the spunky Bullets made one last gasp and pulled within six points before running out of steam.

Oscar Robertson was the other big Buck, taking over in Alcindor's absence for 15 of his total 22 points in the first half.

Earl Monroe had 26 for the Bullets, who hit only 36.4 per cent from the field and 47.6 from the free throw line.

Milwaukee, too, was off their record regular season pace of more than 50 per cent from the field, managing only 46.8 despite Alcindor's accuracy.

The teams resume with game No. 2 in Baltimore Sunday afternoon, again on national television.

The third game will be back here next Wednesday night with No. 4 in Baltimore Friday night, April 30.

Unretouched Photographs Demonstrate Amazing Action of Grecian Formula-16

As Mr. Collier continued using it daily, GRECIAN FORMULA-16 gradually built up the natural looking color he wanted. So gradually not even his closest associates noticed the day-to-day change.

Remember: the photographs above are absolutely unretouched. The amazing gradual change in hair color was brought about entirely by GRECIAN FORMULA-16. No other type product works quite like it.

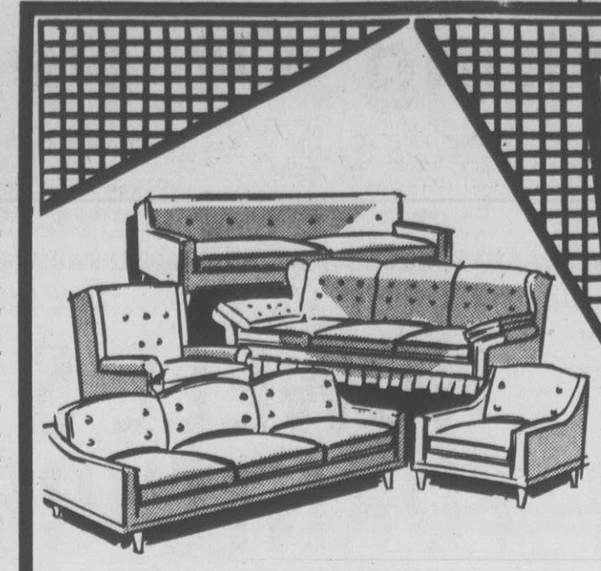

Colorless—Easy to Use

GRECIAN FORMULA-16 is not a harsh coal tar dye but a colorless liquid you apply just like hair tonic. As it grooms your hair, day by day GRECIAN FORMULA-16 builds up color in gradual stages until in two or three weeks you see hair color so natural you hardly remember how you looked when you were gray. Occasional use keeps it that way.

So why look like an "older" man now that there is a masculine way to banish gray hair? Get GRECIAN FORMULA-16 today. $3.50. Satisfaction guaranteed.

Legislature Rejects Abolishing Of Death Penalty

RALEIGH (AP) — Legislation to abolish the death penalty in North Carolina apparently has been turned down by this session of the General Assembly.

The House voted against the bill 65-46 Wednesday after a 2½-hour debate. The legislative clincher was then applied to the measure on motion of Rep. Perry Martin, D-Northampton.

The clincher means that a two-thirds vote would be required to revive the bill this session.

A similar bill was defeated two years ago 66-36.

Rep. Howard Twiggs, D-Wake, told the House that doing away with the death penalty would "do more for race relations than any other law we could pass."

"The black people," he said, "think capital punishment is directed at them. Statistically, they are correct."

Supporters of the bill argued that the death penalty is no deterrent to crime and that it is carried out largely against the poor and the black.

Opponents contended it does serve as a deterrent and that rights of the poor and helpless are better protected these days.

The bill was sponsored by Rep. Henry Frye, D-Guilford, one of the two Negro members of the House.

In leading off the debate, Frye said the states that have abolished the death penalty have the lower murder rates.

He told the House that the action of the North Carolina General Assembly in allowing juries to recommend mercy in capital cases had not resulted in any increase in capital crimes in the state.

Rep. Joe Johnson, D-Robeson, the other Negro member of the House, said 59 of the 77 persons executed in North Carolina in the past 25 years were Negroes, 16 were whites and two Indians.

"Capital punishment would have been abolished long ago," Johnson said, if the same percentage of whites had been executed.

"Not a single white person has ever been put to death in North Carolina," he added, "for committing a capital crime against blacks."

Rep. J. Marvin Johnson, D-Johnston, sought to counter the arguments that capital punishment is carried out only against the poor and the black by recalling the case of a wealthy man in his county, Jimmy Creech, who was executed for killing his wife.

Martin told the House the state of Tennessee once abolished capital punishment and then reinstated it two years later. He said, "They apparently felt it was a deterrent to crime."

Rep. Donald R. Kincaid, R-Caldwell, who argued against the bill, said, "The people of this state and nation are getting tired of coddling criminals."

Mrs. John B. Chase, D-Wayne, said she would refuse to sit on a jury and vote to take a person's life.

Growth Rate A Nat'l Index

TORONTO (AP) — The growth rate of children is a sensitive index that can measure the social well being of a country, a Toronto doctor says.

And by that criterion, said Dr. Carol Ann Cowell, Canada has a healthy environment because Canadian children mature earlier and are bigger and heavier than their parents or their British cousins.

BOB BARRETT (above) has been elected president of the United Christian Youth Movement of Greenville. Other officers: Thomas Foreman, vice president; Patti Sanders, corresponding secretary; Cathy Wilson, recording secretary; and Mamie Moye, treasurer.

Initiated Into Science Society

RALEIGH — Dr. Raymond E. Fornes, formerly of Greenville, was one of 15 faculty members at North Carolina State University who were initiated into the top scientific organization on the campus, the Society of Sigma Xi.

Dr. Fornes teaches physics and textile technology.

Seek Housing To Stem Migration To Cities

WASHINGTON (AP) — The director of a program of rural housing in North Carolina has urged that the nation commit itself to develop such housing to help stem migration to the cities.

William R. Pursell of Durham told a House committee Wednesday, "The true challenge to this nation lies in its rural areas, for these areas are the spawning ground for the problems of the cities of tomorrow."

Pursell is rural housing director of the Low Income Housing Development Corp. in Durham. This is an Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO) demonstration program to develop rural housing for the poor.

Pursell testified at a House Education Committee hearing on President Nixon's request for a two-year extension of the OEO.

He said that besides a commitment to rural housing, the need at the national level is for a long-range federal housing plan, high-risk investment money, and new, adequate housing subsidies.

He said his agency in North Carolina not only is doing study and research but at the same time is building housing. He said it has 339 units in various states of planning and development in the state.

He listed as among the problems of creating an adequate supply of rural housing:

Incomes too low to support mortgages even at subsidized one per cent interest; credit ratings too poor to get the mortgages; and a general lack of experience or interest by the construction industry in high-risk investment in such housing.

Both lectures are in a series arranged by the ECU biology graduate sutdents and are free and open to all interested person.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Horton Rountree of Greenville, Mrs. Cameron is married to Julian Everett Cameron of Kinston. They reside in Farmville.

She is enrolled in a double major program in the physics department which certifies her to teach both physics and mathematics at the secondary school level.

Judges Endorse Assistance

DALLAS (AP) — Judges in criminal courts here may yet free themselves of administrative duties.

The seven judges have approved a proposal calling for one administrative assistant for non-judicial matters and for seven briefing lawyers.

The administrative assistant would serve all seven judges, while each judge would have a briefing attorney.

The cost would be about $100,000 a year.

Opening lead: Queen of ♣

In his haste to learn his fate in today's hand, declarer did not make use of every available prospect and the outcome was an unnecessary loss on the deal.

The slam was a sound endeavor. Once the trump suit was fixed by North's jump raise to three spades, the partnership began to exchange information by showing controls. South's five heart bid following the previous four heart call reveals that he holds the king of hearts as well as the ace. Since North has the top card in clubs and a sound holding for his previous bids — he proceeded without further ado to six spades.

West opened the queen of clubs and the ace was played from dummy. Declarer drew trumps in two rounds. He observed that he was confronted with a potential loser in diamonds and one in hearts, but he observed that if the outstanding diamonds were divided three-three, the long diamond in dummy would provide an ultimate parking place for his heart loser.

He put his conclusions to a quick test by leading the ace, king and another diamond. West showed out on the third round, however, and East exited comfortably with his last diamond. When the queen of hearts did not drop under the ace, king—declarer was obliged to concede defeat.

South did not give himself the best chance, because his reasoning did not go far enough. Success did not hinge solely on an even diamond break. Declarer might be able to execute either an end play or a squeeze if the outstanding high card strength in the red suits is concentrated in one hand. South could have availed himself of all opportunities, had he not surrendered control of the diamond suit.

After trumps are drawn, it is suggested that declarer play ace and another club, ruffing in his hand. Dummy is reentered with a spade and a small diamond is led away from the ace, king. East must play the jack in order to prevent South from winning a trick with the ten. Any return East makes at this point will give declarer his 12th trick.

The recommended line of play retains the prospect for finding a favorable diamond division, while at the same time expanding declarer's opportunities. If all else fails, South may still win the hand via a squeeze provided that the same defender has the queen of hearts as well as four of diamonds.

Australia has six states and two territories.

Worry Clinic

A Good Riddle In Family Tree

Jill asks a startling question. Do you think that even Einstein could have answered her correctly? Use the suggestions below for fascinating adventures into antiquity. For they involve mathematics, history, art, medicine and even the vivid imagination of the novelist or newspaper reporter.

By GEORGE W. CRANE
Ph.D., M.D.

Case Q-534: Jill T., aged 28, is a Copley newspaper reporter.

"Dr. Crane," she asked, "how many ancestors do we have?

"But think of the thousands of years before the Christian era.

"The number of our ancestors must be phenomenal, isn't it?"

Dr. R. M. Bell's recent genealogy of President Nixon, going back only to 1771, gives him how many "cousins" in this country?

Make a guess!

Well, the estimate is over 2,000,000 if we go out as far as his 9th cousins.

In trying to recall our own ancestors, we are lucky to remember ever seeing our great grandparents!

So you history teachers can develop a fascinating classroom project by asking your pupils to sketch 60 figures, male and female, to represent their direct ancestors back to the time of Christ.

Let them tie-in such figures with the current history of their times.

For example, the 10th generation behind us would be contemporary with the Pilgrims and also Shakespeare.

The 46th was living when Attila, the Hun, ravaged Europe.

Where were our ancestors during the rule of Attila? And how were they dressed?

This dynamic history assignment thus involves not just the use of arithmetic, but also art and costume designing, plus the vivid imagination needed for writing good English themes.

And for you mathematical hobbyists, try to compute the number of your direct ancestors?

You will then be able to puzzle over eugenical lines and wonder where all your forebears came from!

For instance, you have 2 parents, 4 grandparents, 8 great grandparents, etc.

Now notice how fast the number begins to zoom, for after 8 comes 16, then 32, 64, 128, 256, 512, 1,024, 2,048, 4,096, 8,192, etc.

Just 34 generations back, which was during the reign of Charlemagne, Emperor of the West (768-814 A.D.), you would have almost 16 BILLION direct ancestors!

But there were only 400 MILLION human beings on this entire planet Earth at that time, including Europe, Asia, Africa and the Americas.

So where did those other 15½ BILLION ancestors live?

Remember, too, you will have 26 more generations beyond Charlemagne before you arrive at the time of Christ!

And the total world population in the year 1 A.D. has been estimated at only 300 MILLION.

If you thus wish an interesting discussion in high school and college, compute the number of your direct ancestors (not counting cousins, etc.) back to the birth of Christ.

If you can solve this genealogy riddle, let me know.

For it would have confounded Einstein!

Growers Are Unconcerned By Ad Loss

WAYCROSS, Ga. (AP) — Virtually all of the 1971 Georgia-Florida flue-cured tobacco crop is in the fields and farmers show little concern at the loss of television cigarette advertising, says the chairman of the Georgia Agriculture Commodity Commission for Tobacco.

Fred Voigt, the chairman and also a tobacco grower, said farmers are not concerned over the loss of TV advertising, but they are worried about forces opposing the use of tobacco in any form.

"We are concerned about those forces which want to halt the production of tobacco," said Voigt, 70, who will produce his 53rd crop this year.

Farmers in the Georgia-Florida belt, including a few in Alabama, grossed more than $148 million in Type 14 tobacco production last year. This is the type grown primarily for use in the manufacture of cigarettes.

The cigarette manufacturing companies were spending some $226 million a year on television advertising until the law banning TV advertising of cigarettes was passed by Congress. It went into effect for the first time this year.

"We're not worried about the loss of television advertising," Voigt said in an interview. "This will be overcome with other means of advertising. But we are concerned about the force that opposes the use of tobacco in any form.

"I don't think there has been a sufficient amount of research to say that smoking causes cancer. There are so many factors in our society today that are causing us stress. Statistically, you can prove anything."

Voigt said he stopped smoking 20 years ago.

"I quit because it was causing hyperacidity," he said. "I was having stomach pains. But I have a lot of friends who died of lung cancer before they were 60, and they never smoked a day in their life."

Voigt said the crop throughout the belt appears to be in excellent condition.

Georgia, which raises most of the tobacco in the belt, has a base quota of 112 million pounds.

However, last year, the state's growers underproduced by seven million pounds. So, this year, they will have 119 million pounds.

Voigt said a preliminary survey indicates that most of it will be cultivated.

Three Hurt In Collisions

Three persons were reported injured in a series of collisions here yesterday that resulted in an estimated $1,020 property damage.

Police said both drivers involved in an 8:30 a.m. mishap at the intersection of 14th and Cotanche Streets were injured.

They were identified as Charlene Marie Williamson, 17, of 403B Paris Ave. and Jack Clinton Gorham, 49, of 600 Albemarle Ave.

Damage to the Williamson car was set at $100 while damage to the Gorham vehicle was set at $200. Miss Williamson was charged with having improper brakes.

Mrs. Rosa Chang Taylor of Winterville was reported injured in an 8:50 a.m. mishap on N.C. 11 about 100 feet South of the U.S. 264 intersection.

Investigators reported the Taylor car ran off the roadway and into a field in an effort to prevent a collision with other cars at the intersection when her brakes failed.

No charges were placed by police who set damage to her vehicle at $400.

No charges were made in a 1:30 p.m. collision at the intersection of Spruce Street and Pennsylvania Avenue.

Officers reported cars driven by Betty Hardison Taylor, Route 1, Ayden, and Clement Culbert Dickens, 41, of Washington, D. C. were involved in the mishap.

Damage was estimated at $250 to the Taylor car and $70 to the Dickens vehicle.

Await Redistricting Action Next Week

By YVONNE BASKIN
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — The House is expected to act next week on a congressional redistricting plan approved two months ago by the Senate.

The plan, which moves only 11 counties from their present districts and does not throw any incumbent congressmen together, won the approval of the House Congressional Districts committee Wednesday.

The only serious opposition to the bill comes from the Fourth District, which now includes Orange, Wake, Durham, Chatham and Randolph Counties. The Senate bill would lop off Orange County, which has been a major area of support for Rep. Nick Galifianakis.

Before approving the Senate bill, the committee killed a modified version of a bill by Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, which would keep Wake, Orange and Durham counties together in the Fourth District.

Immediately after the committee meeting convened, Rep. Ernest Messer, D-Haywood, moved that the Senate bill be given a favorable report. He said the session has been going for three months and it was time to "take a run on this bill and see where we are."

He said the bill has four main strengths: (1) it is the only bill which has already passed one house of the legislature, (2) it shifts a minimum number of counties, (3) it keeps incumbents separated and (4) it has "reasonable" population variations.

The bill creates districts that have an average variation of 1.01 per cent from population equality. In comparison, Miller's bill has an average deviation of only .53 per cent, and the modification of his bill drawn up by Rep. Lawrence Davis, D-Forsyth, has a deviation of .71 per cent.

Messer's motion was set aside temporarily when supporters of the Davis bill got the committee to agree 11-8 to hear a report from three subcommittees.

Rep. Herschel Harkins, D-Buncombe, said his subcommittee had voted Wednesday morning to approve Davis' plan. High said his group had not taken any votes, but three members supported a modifacation of the Miller bill and two favored the Senate bill. Rep. Clarence Leatherman, D-Lincoln, said his group had not met recently.

Republicans object to the Davis and Miller plans because they would move Davidson County—home of Rep. Wilmer Mizell—from the Fifth District into Rep. Earl Ruth's Eighth District. Both Mizell and Ruth are Republicans. However, Republican objections are not strong since Mizell lives just across the county line from Forsyth and has indicated he could change residences if necessary.

After the reports the committee quickly voted down Davis' bill, approved the Senate bill and adjourned. Miller promised to renew his fight on the House floor.

Lady Chased A Car Thief

GASTONA, N. C. (AP) — Sandra Williams, 21, of Mobile, Ala., is ballet mistress at the North Carolina School of the Arts in Winston-Salem and, as might be expected, she's pretty nimble afoot.

For about a dozen blocks through the western section of Gastonia Wednesday night, Miss Williams pursued a would-be car thief, yelling as she followed, "I'm chasing a car thief. . . call police."

The police department got calls, almost a flood of them, and officer Charles D. Huffstickler of the vice squad, alerted by radio, closed in near Gaston Memorial Hospital.

Huffstickler arrested a man identified as Brady Johnson Keziah Jr., 33, of nearby Ranlo. Keziah was charged with carrying a concealed weapon, a blackjack, and after being questioned about a Monday night car theft, he also was charged with auto larceny.

The chase started at a motel as members of the ballet troupe were returning to their rooms. They saw a man get out of his car to go to a newspaper stand. Another man slipped into the car but the owner returned too quickly and pulled the man from the car. He fled with Miss Williams in pursuit.

Said one officer, "If she had been chasing me, I wouldn't have run two steps."

The Common Pin Has Its Points

WATERTOWN, Conn. (AP) — Here's a point about points on common pins:

You can stick 'em through the thread screen of the cloth, but not through the thread itself.

This is important because otherwise the material would get to look like a public golf course on Monday morning. It takes a precise manufacturing process performed on each pin to give it the proper "penetration rate," according to pin-pointers at Scovill Co. which makes common pins.

The point of each pin is sharpened on two angles and the angles are blended.

'Diaper Corps' At Union College

SCHENECTADY, N.Y. (AP) — The four-man admissions staff at Union College is so young it calls itself "the Diaper Corps."

Director Jay Shupe is 24. His assistants are 25, 22 and 21—for a cumulative total of 92. The staff deals with potential applicants and Shupe says it helps to be young.

FHA Plans Show What Can Be Done With Housing

By BLANCHE HARDEE
Reflector Staff Writer

A glimpse of the new contrasted with the old will be given visitors to this week's Housing Fair by a Farmers Home Administration display.

The FHA booth is designed to depict good and poor housing. Pamphlets about better housing, general credit, and the FHA program will be handed out to visitors. Personnel from the local FHA office will be on hand to answer any questions.

Paul Bailey, supervisor of the Pitt County FHA office, explained that FHA is a branch of the U.S. Department of Agriculture and is designed to provide credit for rural residents.

"These loans are made to farmers and other rural residents living in areas of 10,000 or less population," Bailey noted. "Loans may also be made to urban residents of low and moderate income who are employed in rural areas, and to other urban residents who own building sites in rural areas."

Funds may be used to finance dwellings, building sites, and essential farm service buildings.

"Rural housing loans are made only to applicants who are unable to obtain the credit they need from private lenders," the county supervisor said. "We are not designed to replace other credits, just a supplement if someone is not eligible for a loan from other agencies."

Since July 1, the local FHA office has loaned about $2,350,000 for housing in Pitt County. The local office has about 585 house loans outstanding.

The average loans made by FHA range in the area of $13,000 to $13,500.

Loan repayments are set up for as long as 33 years, Bailey stated.

FHA loans are also made for farms, operating expenses, rural water and waste disposal systems.

To be eligible for a loan, an applicant must:

—Own either a farm or non-farm tract or become the owner of a minimum adequate building site when the loan is closed;

—Be without decent, safe and sanitary housing or without farm service buildings essential to the success of his farming operations;

—Be unable to finance the needed improvements with his own resources or with credit from other sources;

—Have sufficient income to pay operating and family living expenses, and meet payments on debts, including the proposed rural housing loan.

"Each borrower is expected to refinance the unpaid balance of the loan when able to obtain such refinancing at reasonable rates and terms from other lenders," noted Bailey.

Foyers Brighten Welcome

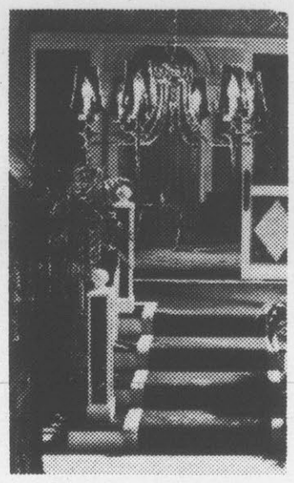

First impressions are important.

The foyer or entrance room of the home gives callers a good idea of what the rest of the house is going to be like. It could almost be called the most impressive room in the whole house for this reason.

Therefore, a foyer should say "hello" in a manner befitting the rest of the residence.

As in any room, decorations start from the bottom up. If the floor is not protected by tile, slate or ceramic type tile, this should be considered. Outdoor-indoor carpeting might be still another idea.

The key here is a flooring material that is attractive yet will take the wet and muddy footwear during inclement weather, and still be easy to clean.

GEORGIAN-STYLED wall sconce is decorative asset which sheds light on foyer. Electrified candles glisten in glass globes. Lights by Stiffel.

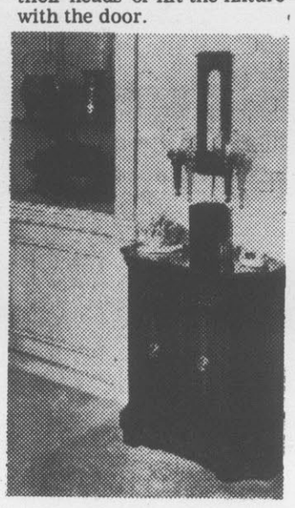

Budget and tastes dictate a decorating theme, which should, of course, be the first decision.

If the foyer is large, a chest or credenza is a fine addition and functional as well.

Lighting the entrance room is especially important. It sets the mood and offers a warm welcome. Chandeliers, large pendants and other light fixtures help convey exactly the impression the homeowner desires.

Height from the ceiling is the only limiting factor in selecting a foyer light. People don't usually like to bump their heads or hit the fixture with the door.

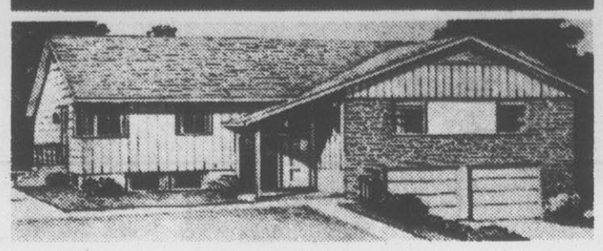

FOYERS WELCOME guests, elegantly. This one is dramatized by a chandelier with matching wall brackets. Lighting by Thomas Industries.

Adding Room Creates More Living Space

Adding a room is often the best solution when a family outgrows the existing home. Such was the situation with the Leon Titus family of Tacoma, Wash.

The teen-agers wanted a room where they could relax with friends. The parents wanted an informal atmosphere where they could entertain. But there was more to the decision. Should they add a room or buy a new home?

They discovered that a new home would cost more than they wanted to pay, that even if they could afford a new house, it would be in a suburban area away from old friends, work, school and church.

Economically Sound

Fortunately they didn't need to worry about whether the addition would have a "tacked-on" look, thanks to advances in building technology and a growing fund of remodeling ideas.

Today virtually any house can be modernized to provide more living space and more conveniences. For many homeowners, remodeling makes sense both from the standpoint of better living conditions and sound family economics.

So it was with the Titus family.

They carefully selected a local contractor who helped refine their ideas. He suggested creating a 16'x20' family room by tieing into the outer wall of the kitchen.

The final plan provided a bonus—not one but two new living areas, one indoors, one out.

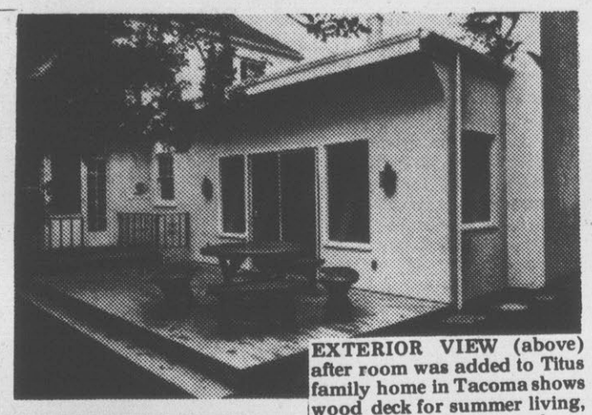

Paneled in Plywood

For interior walls, the contractor combined the advantages of cost-cutting plywood building techniques and new textured softwood plywood paneling.

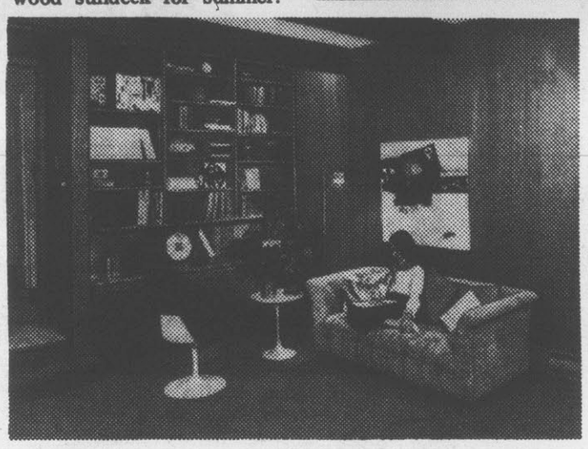

Exposed beam ceiling pairs with brushed cedar softwood plywood paneling to provide a carefree entertainment center. The natural relief pattern, accented by the brushed panel surface, joins with a red shag carpet to add informal warmth to the family room.

Unity with the home on the exterior walls was achieved by repeating the white stucco used on the house and maintaining the roofline style.

Remodeling Expands Kitchen Space, Scope

ADDING A DINING AREA or refreshment center is one way to "open up" a small kitchen. Companion wallcoverings help to coordinate the two rooms. On the walls here are vinyls. From J. Josephson; the larger pattern is "Spring Beauty."

BREAKFAST CORNER GETS a custom look, thanks to a new window shade kit which offers choice of two hemshapes. Here, scalloped hem is trimmed with ball fringe, and window is framed by make-believe beams. Shade kit is by Breneman.

Family's Needs Guide Modernization Plans

Remodeling ambitions often center around the kitchen, and for good reason. As the heart of the home, the kitchen deserves attention. What's more, it usually needs it.

In older homes, the kitchen may be large, but chances are a good deal of the space is wasted, simply because appliances and furnishings have been added at random, without changing the original room plan.

Remodeling calls for a thorough study of family needs and work and traffic patterns in the kitchen. With thought, the larger kitchen can be reorganized on a time- and step-saving basis.

There may even be some space left over, to use as a dining area or game corner.

In newer homes, the kitchen problem may be too little space especially where there's a growing family.

When it's time to remodel, emphasis goes to the devices that save or stretch space.

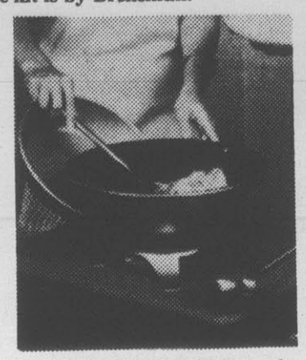

Adding cabinets and shelves can be one way to expand the scope of the kitchen, while new appliances bring a bonus in compact design, taking up less of the floor area.

For major remodeling projects, adding a room certainly opens up a lot of possibilities. A family room, a laundry area or a dining room make sense as adjuncts to the kitchen.

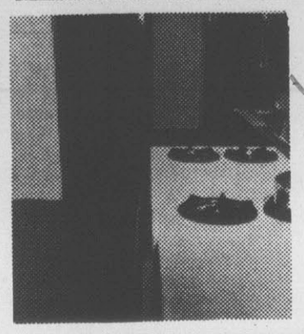

The same kind of convenience can be created by transforming an adjoining room into an extension of the kitchen—again, as dining, laundry or family area.

Kitchen modernization brings decorating opportunities—new coverings for floors and walls, new treatments for windows. These vary, of course, according to tastes and needs.

But there's one common denominator. When the kitchen is remodeled, major appliances will be updated, in virtually every case.

WOK FOR CHINESE cookery also functions as a fondue pot, Dutch oven, deep fryer. It's electrically operated on a new integral heat principle. Lee Lok Wok by 3M.

Washing 45,000 Dishes Is Easy Job for Modern Dishwashers

The new appliance most homemakers will want to consider is an electric dishwasher. After all, it can cut the time spent doing dishes by at least one half.

That's quite a saving, since the average family of four uses about 45,000 dishes, pots, pans, in a year.

Some models have filtering devices that remove food particles after the wash cycle, so they can't be redeposited during rinsing. Others liquefy particles and flush them away.

Why Water Isn't Hot

Water heaters are very good. That's why many families often run out of hot water.

Paradoxical as it seems, the above conclusion is the simple truth.

Most manufacturers build such a long life into their water heaters that one may be working at high efficiency, from the mechanical standpoint, long after its gallon capacity has lagged behind the growing needs of the family.

Garbage Is Always a Problem, But Handy Disposer Solves It

A recent survey asked the question, "Are garbage disposal problems more severe in summer or in winter?"

Almost unanimously, the homemakers queried agreed that garbage is a year-long problem, reports the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau.

Proper disposal of food wastes is a matter of special importance, due to the present concern about pollution.

The electric food waste disposer provides a real solution. It handles all food waste, and takes surprisingly little water and electricity to operate.

This appliance is installed beneath the kitchen sink, connected to the waste line. It operates at the flick of an electric wall switch, and food goes down the drain in a stream of cold water.

Luxury Bath for Every Bedroom Is New Trend

Within seven to 10 years, there will be a bathroom for every bedroom in virtually every new home.

This prediction is one that home builders are taking into account, and it also has its influence on those who plan to remodel existing homes.

Some other examples of this trend, are, as summarized by the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau:

Bathroom vanities with two lavatories are enjoying a boom. The bedroom vanity with running water is also gaining friends.

The shift to colored fixtures is continuing, with many homes having one white bathroom and the other in color.

Decorated fixtures—with flower, fruit, abstract, Grecian, early American and other designs reminiscent of great grandmother's bowl and pitcher—are appearing as both bathroom and bedroom vanity lavatories.

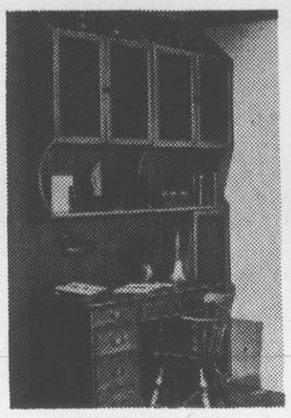

Off-the-floor water closets are being installed in more and more homes, for ease of cleaning.

Bathrooms are being specialized to the needs of users—for example, "juvenile" fixtures for early training of youngsters, "teen-age" bathrooms and specially-designed fixtures for disabled or senior citizens.

Bidets, whirlpool baths, home steam baths and automatic temperature controls for the bath and shower are among the products that are growing in popularity.

EXCITING EXTERIORS

Stone-on-plywood panels provide the homeowner with easily-installed, virtually maintenance-free exterior siding. Sanspray panels, a product of U.S. Plywood, are available in Traditional or Contemporary designs, with colorful large or small size stones.

IN THIS DEN, walls of hardboard paneling in two different finishes—rough-sawn wood and travertine marble—can be wiped clean, are mar-resistant, never need painting.

Handyman's Best Friend Is Easy-to-Use Paneling

Wood Product Offers Fast Installation, Cuts Upkeep

A handyman is no longer the skillful jack-of-all trades who comes running when there's a repair or remodeling job to be done.

Today he's the busy head-of-the-household who has to learn to be a weekend do-it-yourselfer. Even when he becomes skilled at home maintenance and improvement, he still wants to keep that work to a minimum.

Hardboard paneling is one of the building materials that saves the home handyman time and labor when he's doing the original job. It also eliminates later maintenance problems.

Hardboard is an engineered wood product of uniform quality. For do-it-yourselfers it has the advantage of being knot-free and easy to saw, plane, sand, drill and punch.

There are several types of hardboard to meet both exterior and interior needs. Many are prefinished.

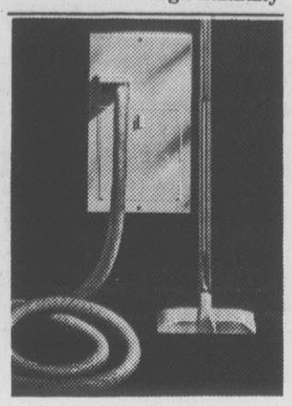

Hardboard paneling is suitable for use in any room, especially where appearance and resistance to rough wear are of equal importance—children's rooms, kitchens, family rooms, for example.

Plastic-surfaced hardboard paneling comes in many finishes, including wood grains, marble reproductions, solid and speckled colors, tile and lace prints, wallpaper textures and murals.

Some are moisture-resistant for use in high humidity areas, such as bathrooms and laundries.

An extra benefit of hardboard paneling is noise control. Laboratory tests have shown hardboard to be an excellent sound barrier, especially when used in combination with appropriate back-up materials.

The do-it-yourselfer will find a selection of hardboard paneling, including perforated panels for storage areas, at local building supply centers, which also carry matching moldings, adhesives, nails and accessories.

BUILT-IN vacuum systems offer cleaning convenience. Unit shown can be mounted in nearly any wall or enclosed storage area, with remote outlets throughout the house. By Thomas Industries.

More People Prefer to Fix Up Home

Careful Planning Can Provide Modernization at Sensible Cost, Improve Value

By EDGAR V. HALL,
Executive Director
National Home Improvement Council, Inc.

This year, at a time when rising construction costs and interest rates prevent many families from owning new homes, more Americans than ever before are considering remodeling their present homes. As a matter of fact, spending for fixing up the home is the first preference for American families these days.

But at the same time, too many homeowners still hesitate to improve their houses. They have heard that prices for fixing up are high.

Well, of course, it's wise to be prudent when spending for home improvement just as it would be in making any other major purchase.

Exercise ordinary caution and care when remodeling and you should be pleased with the results.

When selecting a contractor, it's good idea to get the recommendations of friends who have had similar work done.

Other sources of reliable remodelers are the recommendations of the home improvement loan officer at your local lending institution, a local building materials dealer or a local chapter of the National Home Improvement Council, National Association of Home Builders or National Remodelers Association.

Most cities have one or another of these. Be sure to get at least two bids—three are even better—from local contractors. Don't automatically take the lowest bid, but judge who will do the best job for you at the best price.

If your remodeling project is a sizeable one in the terms of the money you are spending, then it will pay you to consult a lawyer about the contract you are signing.

And if the remodeling includes extensive structural work, it might also be advisable to have an architect go over plans and specifications.

People often ask, "How much should I spend to fix up my home?" One answer is never to spend more than you can recover if you sell your house.

For instance, if you own a $20,000 dwelling in a neighborhood where houses are priced $18,000-$25,000, don't put more than $5,000 into your remodeling project. If you do, you will price your house out of the market.

But that answer is not always the correct one. "Spend what it takes to make your home the kind of place you really want it to be" is the better answer.

You may not recover your entire investment. But you and your family will live better, healthier, happier lives in a fully up-to-date home.

And after all, when you buy a new car it depreciates rapidly in value. And if you spend money on a luxury vacation, all that remains afterwards, and when the money is gone, are pleasant memories.

So why not invest in the pleasure of better living!

Latest Products Inspire Successful Remodeling

The nice thing about remodeling your home is that there are so many new and improved and exciting products to put into the job.

On the outside, there are attractive new roofing materials, better looking and longer lasting siding, new and more beautiful windows and much more.

Inside, there are exciting and colorful bathroom fixtures, up-to-the-minute kitchen appliances, new walls and floor and ceiling materials. There are new lighting systems, improved home comfort systems, to just name a few things.

Oftentimes, with the new products that are available, you can have a remodeled house that's better for your needs than a new one—and at less cost too!

Last, but not least, there are increasing numbers of skilled contractors in every community to do the work.

If you are handy around the house, doing the job yourself might be the way to modernize.

Remodeling a home can be a rewarding experience. You not only better your own living, but you help to improve the neighborhood as well.

INDOORS, REMODELING CAN TURN a characterless basement into attractive living space for the entire family, witness this modernized basement. Paneling, installed over furring strips, levels uneven walls. Bi-fold doors separate children's play area, in background, from adults' TV room, or open up for entertaining. Used here, U.S. Plywood's Weldwood Roughtex paneling and Jet-Set bi-fold wood doors.

Insurance Too, Needs Updating

When the Baxter family's 20-year old house was completely destroyed by fire, they at least had the consolation of knowing it was insured.

Then came a second disaster—they discovered that the insurance benefits they received when the claim was paid were not enough to rebuild a home to the size and quality of the one that had been destroyed.

Their home had been insured for its original purchase price, along with the furniture and other contents. But because of inflation, their homeowners insurance fell below replacement costs.

Problem Grows

Most homeowners are happy to hear that their homes are growing in value each year—but, at the same time, this creates for them an insurance problem that is growing worse each year, as the Baxters discovered.

"Insurance coverage purchased 10 or even five years ago might have seemed more than adequate then," says Stephen P. Janco of CNA/insurance.

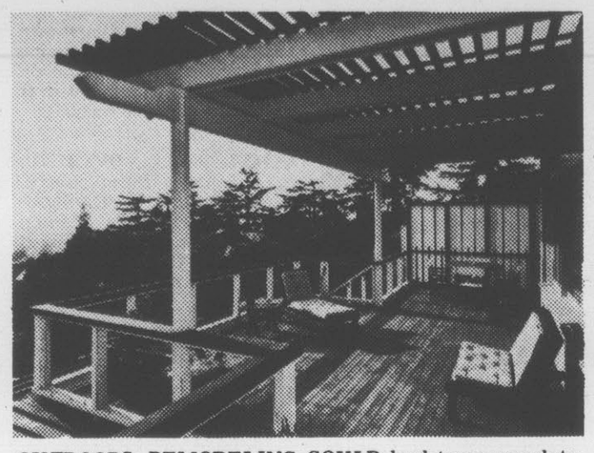

"But in today's market, the same amount of cash would not replace more than a fraction of your home."

Increases Coverage

One new development offering some protection from this hazard is the new inflation guard endorsement to the homeowners policy.

It provides a graduated increase in coverage, ranging from one per cent on the date the policy has been in effect three months, up to 12 per cent after 33 months.

Another new trend in homeowner's insurance gives the policy-holder a chance to upgrade his coverage more frequently. Until recently, most homeowners policies were written on a three-year basis.

BULLETIN BOARDS in fruit designs—apple, orange, lemon or lime slices—brighten modern kitchens. They're made from Fome-Cor board by Monsanto; this one has a Mylar surface.

Keeping Noisy Pipes Quiet

Bothered by water hammer? If pipes slam or shudder when water is suddenly turned off, it may be because they have become limed up with hard water deposits.

There are anti-hammer, shock-absorbing devices which can be installed on these pipes. Or, relief can be gained by fastening pipes to supports more securely, particularly where a pipe turns a corner.

There Is Help At The Bank

When the urge to put in a brand new kitchen or add another bedroom and bath becomes almost irresistable and the family budget shows little hope of allowing this dream to come true, it's time to visit the home improvement officer at a local full service bank.

Remember, restoring, repairing, renewing and expanding real estate—besides providing a beautiful place to live—increases its value, too. It's a sound investment.

Here are several sources of aid, when financial assistance is needed in a home improvement program.

1. FHA Title 1 Loans. The Federal Housing Administration insures loans for permanent structural improvements such as a new roof. On a short-term loan, the borrower may take up to seven years to repay up to $5,000.

Interest rates are $5.50 per $100 each year for the first $2,500, then $4.50 per $100 per year for any additional amount. The interest is deducted in advance.

A full service banker can determine whether a home improvement plan is eligible for the FHA loan.

2. Bank Home Improvement Loans. Not subject to FHA regulations, bank improvement loans are generally more expensive and more flexible.

Free-standing kitchen appliances—such as a mobile dishwasher or a cutting board-topped rolling cabinet—might be financed by a bank loan, whereas they would not meet specifications for a FHA loan.

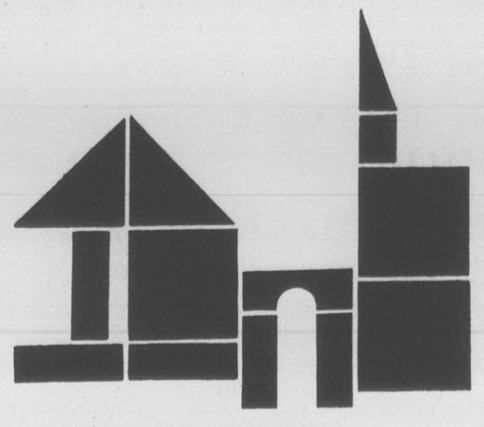

Generally, rates for these loans at full service banks range from $5 to $7 per hundred per year, with as long as five years for repayment.

3. Refinancing Present Mortgage. If the repair can't wait for savings to accumulate towards it—a new roof may be an absolute necessity now—some homeowners will consider replacing their present mortgage with a new one large enough to pay off the old loan and at the same time cover the cost of the improvement.

It's Clean-Up, Fix-Up, Brighten Up Time

FOR THE CREATIVE COOK, AND HER husband, a make-it-yourself project might be a cookbook holder, using acrylic sheet. Instructions for this and other projects are given in a booklet, "Do It Yourself with Plexiglas Acrylic Sheet," available for 25 cents from Rohm and Haas Company, P.O. Box 9730, Philadelphia, Pa. 19140.

Electric power shortages, limited natural gas supplies, restricted oil supplies, high worldwide demand for low-sulphur coal, the lag in atomic power plant development and energy conservation are all factors.

Conservation of energy is one area where a homeowner and do-it-yourselfer can help himself to a great extent. He can reduce fuel consumption, make his home more comfortable and reduce fuel bills all at the same time.

There are several sure-fire ways to conserve heat and cut home heating bills.

Storm doors and windows are very helpful but should be checked and made air-tight each season. Seal with removable strips of caulking.

Home insulation may be inadequate. Some indications of this are excessive fuel bills, prolonged furnace operating times, cold walls and drafty areas, snow melting on the roof when other roofs remain snow covered.

A small investment in insulation pays off all year by also keeping a home cooler in summer.

Tests indicate that optimum performance can be achieved when attic insulation is six inches thick.

If the home is built on an unheated crawl space, three inches of insulation is also recommended under the floor.

Uninsulated walls or partitions between storerooms or an unheated garage often are overlooked. Three inches of insulation in these areas also is recommended.

Additional insulation in sidewalls, however, is a job for an insulation contractor because the new material must be machine blown between the walls.

INCREASED ATTIC INSULATION CAN conserve heat and cut fuel bills. Blankets of insulation six inches thick provide optimum performance, and can be installed by the homeowner. Shown is Friction Fit insulation by Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corporation.

Electric Fireplace Charms, Glows, To Meet Extra Heating Needs

When a room is remodeled, questions about the heating usually arise. One way to meet the need for additional heating is with electric warmth.

One of the advantages of electric heat is that it can be added to a remodeled room even though the home has another type of heating system.

For instance, an electric fireplace offers the charm and glow of its wood-burning predecessor, yet it can be installed in any room without flue or venting. Maintenance is minimal.

Family rooms, living rooms and vacation homes are favorite spots for electric fireplaces. Such a fireplace can be used against any type of wall or as a portable heater.

All types are available in self-contained units that operate independently of the home furnace, for easy installation anywhere.

In kitchens, electric baseboard units help solve both space and heating problems. Another space-saver is a valance heater that delivers both radiant and convected heat.

Around Home, Versatile Chains Serve Dozens of New Uses

Chains of proper strength make easy, dependable supports for shelving, counters, tables or even swinging sofas and beds.

The two basic types of chain—welded, for tougher lifting and holding jobs, and weldless, for lighter chores—come in many different metals and finishes. Or, they can be painted to match favorite color schemes.

Or a fine dog run for the family pooch can be made by stretching a wire between trees and fastening a chain to the wire to permit freedom of movement.

This is an easy handyman's job and requires only a hammer, screwdriver, small chisel and pliers with a good sharp wire cutter, to cut sash chain to needed lengths.

HOMES FOR AMERICANS

SPLIT LEVEL: Four upstairs bedrooms above a family room and two-car garage afford ranchlike living. An open cellar is below the first floor living, dining and breakfast rooms. The master bedroom has a private bath and four closets. Features of the family room are a brick hearth, a bar, lavatory and sliding doors to a terrace. Plan HA696P was designed by architect Samuel Paul, 107-40 Queens Blvd., Forest Hills, N.Y. 11375.

Sidings Copy Nature So Well, Even Woodpecker Is Fooled

"You're not just whistling through your hat when you say your siding looks like wood shingles. Ours even fooled an expert.

"Early one morning this week, we were awakened by a strange noise outside our bedroom window. It was a woodpecker hammering away at our siding."

The homeowners' letter also comments, "Of course, the woodpecker's hammering didn't mar our siding.

This illustrates only some of the many advantages of modern siding materials now available to homeowners. In fact, a whole new generation of building materials exist which are virtually maintenance-free.

The recent development which fooled the woodpecker, for example, is a new type of siding known as mineral siding.

Because of the siding's mineral composition, it's also fire-resistant, and won't be attacked by another of nature's most famous wood lovers, termites.

It will resist the normal warping, shrinking and curling characteristics of aging wood. And it doesn't dent, buckle, or corrode, won't conduct electricity or echo the sounds of rain or hail.

Other modern materials offer similar advantages when used as home sidings.

Easy care is a plus factor for steel, aluminum, asbestos, cement and vinyl siding. Added benefits include color variety, weather and fire resistance and installation convenience.

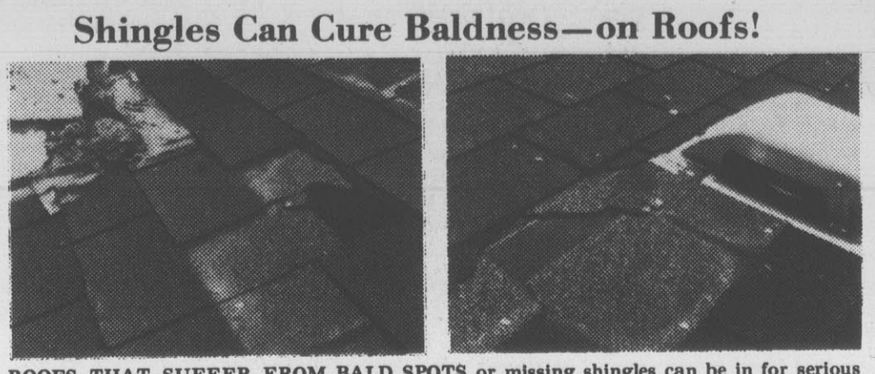

Concealed nailing or other techniques assure an attractive appearance.

Pre-finished hardboard sidings, with their plastic-coated surfaces, offer washability, long paint life and high resistance to denting, fading, abrasion and weather.

Shingles Can Cure Baldness—on Roofs!

Dressing Up The Home For Spring

Family room greets spring with carefree comfort. Walls, covered in vinyl, are easily cleanable. Durable latex foam fills window seat cushions, floor pillows, and soil-resistant nylon carpeting has latex foam backing. On the walls, it's Uniroyal's Naugahyde vinyl; carpeting by Barwick.

Softness, Romance Set New Scene

Whether the direction is rustic, traditional, modern, Mediterranean or mixed—and the latter is the most likely—home fashions are trending toward softness, shape, warmth and romance.

It's a trend that makes living space an appropriate background for people and the fashions they wear, which are soft, shapely and warmly romantic, too.

The stark lines of "old" modern and the ultra-massive, weighty look of days-gone-by traditional furniture are on the wane. Modern is softened; traditional is slimmed down—to be more modern.

Living Calls for Good Mixing

In decorating, almost any mixture is possible. With the mix of styles and the mix of materials, most homemakers seem to have a special talent for putting it all together, home-fashion wise.

Perhaps that's because they're aided and abetted by designers who know quite well that contemporary living calls for mixing furniture styles as well as lifestyles, from the relaxed and casual to the elegant and almost-formal.

Accessories Add Color, Shape

One man's modern could be another's contemporary—or even Oriental.

The shadings of difference between country or rustic, provincial and early American designs may be very slight, while Mediterranean veers from provincial warmth to traditional formality.

From accents such as dishes, vases, trays and pillows to lamps, tables and mirrors, home accessories are important for an attractive mixture. Through color and shape, they contribute to warmth, softness and romance for the home.

Further enhancing the romantic, soft and shapely look, home fabrics appear with velvety, textured and quilted surfaces. Modern fibers, such as nylon, polyester, olefin and acrylics, increase performance, provide longer wear and easier care.

Textures Showing Importance

One new process uses nylon to simulate hand quilting, with a deeply-sculptured paisley pattern. This fabric is used for upholstery, bedspreads, pillows and other decorative accessories.

Nubby and slubbed fabrics, chenilles, jacquards, tufted and velvety effects point up the importance of texture. Contemporary geometrics, florals, abstracts and mini ribs show up with the velvety feeling, too.

The materials mix for home fashions combines chrome and plastics, wood and plastics, fiberglass and vinyl, plywood and polyfoam, crystal and metal.

Plants, Green or Flowering, Express Spirit of Season

Like an Easter bonnet, fresh green and flowering plants express the happy spirit of the season, bringing the promise of new vitality to the home.

Larger foliage plants, such as philodendron, ficus or schefflera, could flourish in the entrance hall. Set these treelike plants directly on the floor, in red clay pots with matching saucers.

Smaller green plants—ferns, ivy or pothos—can adorn wall-mounted bookshelves or free-standing dividers. Lacy fronds and trailing leaves help break the monotony of rectangular shapes.

Dining areas, too, will welcome a reminder of spring. A clay-potted azalea could be the choice for a centerpiece—or tulips and hyacinths.

A tea wagon or other cart can be transformed into a lovely and portable island of spring color.

Materials Go To Modern Mood

When spring brings out the urge to clean up, dress up and refurbish the house, new developments in home-furnishings materials add zest.

Leather Appears In New Forms

New looking in the leather furniture field are desks and Parsons tables, not merely leather-inlaid but completely covered in leather.

Leather upholstery combines with woods or metals for distinctive sofas and couches. Then there are wood or metal benches, leather-cushioned.

Lawnmowing Safety Given Emphasis

By DOROTHEA M. BROOKS

NEW YORK (UPI)—Drive with care. Watch out for children and pets. Don't leave keys in the ignition.

Good rules for the family car, these cautions apply also to some 37 million power mowers in use across the nation.

With the growing season getting under way in most parts of the country, the Outdoor Power Equipment Institute once again is campaigning for law mowing safety; this year with an effort to enlist 100,000 retailers in a "Mr. Lawnmower Safety" program. Participating dealers will emphasize safety in their stores and their products and will offer free copies of mowing safety rules, "A Guide for the Mowing Man."

Along with the basics, the rules go into such topics as steep slopes, gravel driveways, and low hanging trees.

Great care must be used when mowing slopes, the Institute stresses. "If they are too sharp, don't mow them at all. Replace the grass with a ground cover or a rock garden."

Avoid Low Branches

When using a walk behind mower on a hill, mow across the slipe laterally —never up and down. With a riding mower or tractor, the rule is just the opposite: mow up and down for greater stability and avoid sudden uphill starts.

With gravel drives, take care to disengage the mower blade of your riding unit when passing from the grass surface to the driveway. With walkbehind mowers, be sure the engine is off when crossing gravel areas.

Low hanging branches can give trouble when mowing. Ideally, they should be cut away. If this is not practical, the operator should take special care, avoiding the area altogether with a power machine if there is any chance of injury — being hit in the face by branches, or perhaps knocked off a riding mower.

Other rules stressed by the Institute:

—Read your owner's manual. Note all operating, maintenance and safety instructions. Understand your machine thoroughly.

—Dress properly. No bare feet, sandals, shorts or loose clothing to catch in the mechanism. Tailored slacks and sturdy shoes are a must.

Clear Out Debris

—Fill gas tank before starting, and always out of doors. Never gas up or start engine in the garage or shed. Never refuel while engine is running or hot. Let it cool.

—Clear the lawn of foreign objects. Debris can turn into a lethal missile when picked up and hurled at high speed.

—Clear the area of children and pets. Never let children operate or play around any mower. With a rider, don't tow youngsters in a car behind as you mow. When backing, make sure children have not come into the area. You can't be too careful.

—Keep feet well away from mower blades, especially when starting. Keep clear of the discharge chute at all times. Never attempt to clear a clogged chute while the mower is running.

—Disengage power attachments before leaving the seat of a rider—and give mower blades ample time to stop before dismounting.

Avoid Public Highways

—Push, don't pull your walk behind mower. Be extra careful of your footing, especially on slops or wet grass. Better yet, don't mow when grass is wet.

—Stop engine and disconnect spark plugs before making repairs.

If you are a first-time power mower user, pay special care to the safety rules. If you're one of the more than 37 million individuals who already owns a power mower, don't let familiarity breed contempt.

Provide Palaces For Party-Giving

By MICHAEL DENNIGAN

PARIS (UPI)—How about a party in the bedroom of King Louis XIV, complete with a brocaded fourposter bed? Or cocktails overlooking the cell Marie-Antoinette left only for the guillotine? Or even champagne in the hall of a chateau once owned by a warrior friend of Joan of Arc?

All these are among sites the French government is offering Frenchmen and foreigners alike to rent out for private parties, receptions, concerts or business conferences.

Cautious Start

Begun cautiously three years ago with the 17th Century Chateau at Maisons-LaFitte, the project is now gathering speed—and bookings—from all over France and some from abroad for functions ranging from family weddings to international business conferences.

The chateau, in a northern suburb of Paris and the home of succeeding generations of French noblemen and generals, is the pilot project of the program, mainly because it has been extensively restored and refurnished by the French government with some modern amenities such as central heating, a sound system and flood-lighting.

But other ancient builds are doing good business, too, according to Mrs. Anne-Marie Thibaut, the Ministry of Culture official in charge of the renting out of national monuments.

The Gothic-arched Salle St. Louis in the Palace of Justice in Paris can accommodate 1,200 persons at a reception or cocktail party.

The chamber includes the old guardroom, the men-at-arms room and the ancient royal kitchens of the kings of France who lived on the site before the Louvre Palace was built on the other bank of the Seine in the 16th Century.

Wonders of Nature Can Enhance Decor, Help Conservation, Too

Soft and romantic, doubly practical, well-accessorized—this sums up spring in home decorating. Typically, the room shown is built around a double-purpose sleep-and-sit sofa, enhanced by lamps, wall plaques, console and elephant-foot tables and a mirror. Here, home accessories from Tyndale's Indian Divali collection.

Bringing the wonders of nature into the home, new fabrics copy delicate flowers, unusual birds, one-of-a-kind plants and stately trees.

At the same time, these fabrics help to protect nature outdoors, as well as projecting nature indoors.

And, for every piece of fabric sold in the United States, the manufacturer of the fabrics will pay royalties to the National Wildlife Federation.

Money will be directed to the Federation's Youth in Conservation program, which aims to make young people more aware of their environment.

The manufacturer is Greef Fabrics.

Homemakers concerned about the total, as well as the family, environment should find a special pleasure in decorating with these fabrics.

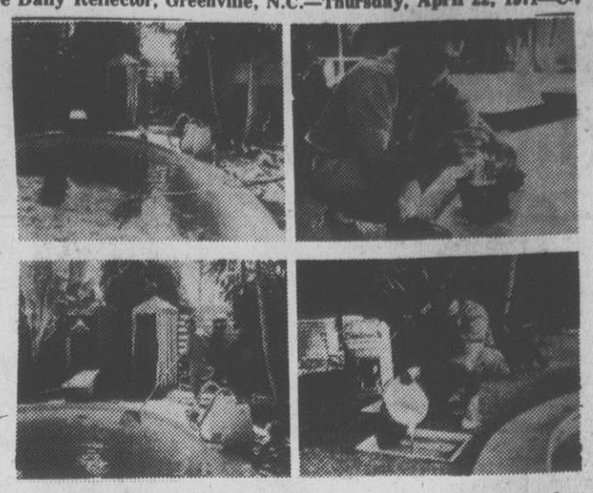

Beauties of nature live indoors, thanks to fabric designs that capture flowers, birds, trees. Draperies, pillow covers and framed fabrics above the sofa follow the conservation theme. From Greef Fabrics' "Nature's Heritage" collection.

They're available for curtains, draperies, pillow covers and many other home uses. In fact, some might inspire do-it-yourself projects, such as the framing of individual designs.

The Snowy Egret, the Caribbean Hummingbirds, Audubon's Warblers, mysterious mushrooms, 17 species of ferns, the rare Franklinia flower are among subjects that inspire the designs.

COLORING SPRING

New Shower Valves Take Control

It's a common problem.

Somebody takes a shower, and all of a sudden, the water changes from icy cold to scalding hot.

The usual reason is that water is being used elsewhere in the home, causing a sudden drop in pressure.

The modern answer could be new automatically-controlled mixing valves. These valves make it possible to preset the temperature before turning on the water for a shower.

Water then remains at that temperature regardless of pressure change.

In a well-planned kitchen, modern materials mean ease of care, as well as a bright and cheery appearance. Cabinets, countertops and bases are faced with sponge-clean plastic laminate. Used here, it's Melamite plastic laminate by John's Manville.

Quality Counts In Longer Wear

Planning a new bathroom can and should be easy. That's because there's a wide choice of equipment.

1. Make sure the bathroom is big enough. Until recently, a 5x7-foot size was considered adequate. Now rooms 7x9 or larger are coming into vogue.

The extra space enables installation of a more luxurious tub and twin-bowl lavatory to double bathroom utility and elegance.

2. Choose better-quality equipment. It's the most efficient and retains its good looks longer.

The siphon-jet is the best water closet because it's got the best flushing action and is the most quiet.

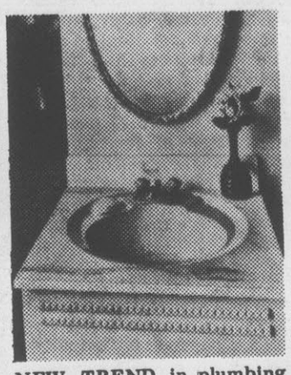

3. It's important to have quality faucets and other brass that will not corrode from contact with water. The better showerheads come with varied settings, from needle-spray to full-flow.

4. Don't skimp on the size of the medicine cabinet. It's wonderful to have enough room for all toiletries, and large mirror doors give a look of luxury.

5. Choose colors carefully. The most popular colors currently are tan, blue and pink, followed by green and yellow.

6. A shower enclosure is another useful item that gives the bathroom a rich look.

A final tip: Visit a plumbing contractor's store to see what's available in fixtures, faucets, accessories and floor and wall coverings.

NEW TREND in plumbing fixtures sees the vanity lavatory moving into the bedroom. This one copies marble's random grain. It's Borg-Warner's Astra-Lav.

Ruffles, romance, embroidery and easy care go together in this bedroom ensemble—spread, curtains, valance and pillow shams. By Croscill in Kodel polyester and cotton.

Accents on Living Spark Excitement in Interiors

Season by season, people may revamp their personal wardrobes to a considerable extent.

But the home's fashion wardrobe isn't changed that often. It wouldn't be sensible—too much expense, too much upheaval.

That's the why of home accessories. Because, even when major furnishings aren't changed, adding accents can create quite a difference.

Take a plump and plushy floor pillow, for instance, or a pedestal table that's an art object in itself. Either or both could help make a room look new.

Ideas for accessorizing the home emphasize contrast between styles—modern, traditional, rustic, provincial and all the other designs for decorating.

For instance, modern lamps and lighting fixtures blend with traditional furniture, just as abstract paintings have often been used to dramatize otherwise traditional settings.

Shaped along a curve are many coffee and occasional tables. Elephant-leg tables, for example, add substance and soft lines when used as room accents.

Ornamental pedestal bases are topped by circles or squares of furniture-grade crystal, in table styles to complement traditional, Mediterranean, modern and mixed decorating schemes.

WHY WAIT?

Flooring Goes Modern, Goes Decorative, Too

And that can be taken literally.

Today's floors have become an important part of decorating, redecorating or planning every room in the house.

There are new ideas for the treatment of traditional flooring materials, such as wood, plus new developments in floor coverings.

Oak Looks New

Oak floors can be a short cut to improving the appearance, and value of a home. Because they will serve 50 years or longer, oak floors, now hidden by carpeting or tile, can be uncovered, refinished and give many years of service.

After checking the floor's joints for proper tightness, all wax or adhesive should be completely removed. After the floor has dried, it can be sanded and refinished with new colors or designs.

There is no harm done to the mighty oak floor if the color or pattern is changed.

Oak floors should not be painted. Paint not only hides the grain patterns of the wood surface but may not stand up to wear very well.

A clear or colored penetrating sealer is usually used. Sealers soak into the fibers of the wood and become part of it.

Carpet Tiles Arrive

Some houses, built on concrete slabs, do not have permanent hardwood floors, so the project becomes installation rather than renovation. When it's preferable to cover the floor, carpet tiles provide a modern answer.

Carpeting is sometimes put down directly on the concrete foundation or over a rough plywood subfloor in a house with concrete slabs.

Carpet tiles, first introduced in 1965, have undergone many refinements and improvements.

Today, there is a wide choice of thick shags, printed or embossed tiles, new 18-inch square sizes and bright, exciting colors.

What hasn't changed is the resilient backing of high density foam rubber. The foam rubber backing means a non-skid, insulating and easy to install tile, which doesn't need a separate underlay.

Vinyl Decorates

Vinyl sheet flooring is yet another way to tastefully decorate a room. It is easy to care for and insulates against noise. A damp sponge wipes up potential stains and paper toweling takes care of spills.

This type of flooring is resilient and is featured in many styles. From elegant marble to abstract flowers, cushioned sheet vinyl flooring is long wearing and easy to care for.

Many styles contain a transparent wear layer of polyvinyl chloride. This means that the pattern or color never wears, only the special layer gets the traffic.

Vacuuming or periodic sweeping is sufficient for weekly maintenance. As for waxing, the continuous, nonporous vinyl wear layer gives a floor covering that makes waxing unnecessary.

DOWN WITH TRASH

Trash disposal, a major environmental problem, may get an assist from a new major electric appliance, the Whirlpool Trash Masher compactor, which can reduce a week's worth of trash—including food wastes, cartons, bottles, aerosol cans—down to a little bag. Compactor can be installed under a kitchen counter or used as a free-standing unit.

Clean Up, Fix Up Now

Right Windows Become Perfect Decorations

When it comes to windows, many home decorators draw the final curtain—to cover up or camouflage—because the proper type was not chosen before the decorating was planned.

Windows do need covering up if they invite the public to look in, expose an ugly view, or let in cold air, dirt or drafts.

But carefully chosen windows, properly placed in the home, do not need camouflaging. Instead, they serve as part of the decor, and expensive window dressing can be avoided.

Before remodeling, window styles should be studied in relation to what the house needs and what will look the best.

Ponderosa pine windows with double glazing (two panes of glass with insulating air sealed between) are now available as complete units in all styles and stock sizes.

Casement windows should be placed over counters, or in any other spot that is difficult to reach, because their rotary cranks make them easy to open and close.

In a small room, a bow or bay window works wonders. With little or no added floor space, it adds considerably to the apparent size of the room.

If the view is good, generous gliding or casement windows and glass doors permit maximum visibility. The outdoors will be the window decor, even in winter.

Clean Air Campaign Applies To Home Environment, Too

Air in the great outdoors may not be as clean as it used to be, but air in the home may be even dirtier.

The main enemy is a tiny particle called dust, which can provide air pollution problems.

Dust makes easy entry to homes. Doors, windows and other direct openings are its greatest welcomers. Unvented clothes dryers, appliances and home workshops are major contributors.

There are some tools to remove home air pollution from the air and fight it at its source.

Kitchen exhaust fans can remove vaporized oils and unwanted food odor. Easy-to-install clothes dryer vents are usually more efficient than dryer lint traps.

Vacuum cleaner bags should be emptied frequently to prevent trapped dust from being forced back into the air.

Dust from home workshops can be reduced by an exhaust fan and heavy duty vacuum cleaners. Dusty repair work and use of highly volatile liquids should take place in areas where the polluted air cannot circulate throughout the home.

Furnace air filters should be changed at least every month, especially during the home heating season.

Tests conducted by Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corporation, maker of Fiberglas Dust-Stop filters, indicate that frequent replacement of furnace air filters also can help keep the furnace operating at peak efficiency.

But if the air flow is restricted by a dirty filter, it could require the furnace to operate for longer periods of time in order to raise the air temperature to a comfortable level.

Another source of household air pollution is cleaning agents. These should never be combined. In some cases, the mixture could release toxic gases. Read labels carefully.

Faucet Drip Stains Make Fast Exit

A dripping or trickling faucet often causes brown or green stains in sink basins. A dribbling showerhead can do the same thing in a tub.

Installing a new washer, or making other repairs to stop the leak, can all but eliminate the staining.

These stains, caused by small amounts of copper or iron picked up by acid water from plumbing, can be permanently eliminated with installation of water conditioning equipment.

It's a Clogger

Poured grease is a prime clogger of drains. It combines with hair, coffee grounds and other debris to form a clogging mass. The gummy precipitate that soap forms with hard water also has the same effect.

Lose Efficiency

Besides contributing to clogged drains, hard water may also cause water supply lines to become clogged and water heaters to lose their efficiency.

When water is heated, its hardness minerals deposit like a layer of rock inside the pipes and on the sidewalls of water heater tanks. This same kind of deposit is frequently observed in water kettles.

Restores Equipment

Soft water service, or installation of a water softener, avoids replacement of clogged pipes or deteriorated water heaters.

Softened water gradually reabsorbs deposits and restores equipment to normal service. Clogged showerheads then reopen and ugly deposits vanish from toilet bowls.

It's Important, Too, To Know When Not To Try It

By DOROTHEA M. BROOKS

NEW YORK (UPI)—For the do-it-yourselfer around the house knowing when not to do it yourself is one of the keys to successful home maintenance and improvement.

Knowing when a job calls for more knowledge and skill than you possess, or more time than you have available, helps to insure that the time and money you spend on do-it-yourself work will not be wasted and the results disappointing.

Some projects are purely optional —work done to enlarge and enhance a home, make it more pleasant or valuable. These can be scheduled as time and money allow. In this category there are some jobs — major construction, for instance —which call for a professional unless the do-it-yourselfer has unusual skills. Other projects can be divided between the professional and amateur. Still others are ideally suited for the handyman or hobbyist and, with no urgency involved, he may even want to acquire the necessary new skills for a special project.

Then there are the routine maintenance chores, most of which the do-it-yourselfer can handle if he has the time and inclination. These can be scheduled to suit, but should not be put off beyond a reasonable time if maintenance is not to turn into repair.

Emergency Repair

The third category is the emergency repair. Some of these the fairly skilled homeowner can handle but probably most call for a professional. Needless to say emergencies call for immedate action.

For example, if the wind blows a tree limb onto your reef, damaging it, the first thing to do is call your insurance agent to report the loss, then get the hole fixed.

"If you want to do the work yourself, the adjustor will estimate the loss and give you a cash allowance for the cost of repairing the roof," says Jimmie Lacy, supervisor of property claims for CNA insurance. "If you don't feel the job is one you can handle, he will meet with your contractor to work out the repair price."

Some Basic Principles

He stresses the basic principles: Do It Yourself and Don't Do It Yourself. "Knowing which principle to apply when is undoubtedly the single most important aspect of safe and economically sound home maintenance," he said.

The Do It Yourself principle should apply when:

—The job requires only the kind of skill you can learn from reading or being taught by an experienced friend;

—The job is tedious and time-consuming, yet not difficult to learn, such as caning a chair or replacing a broken cement step.

It should be Don't Do It Yourself, Lacy said, when:

—The task requires special talent or skill, without which valuable materials may be spoiled;

Almost every household repair job requires both materials and labor, Lacy noted. Usually, professional labor is the larger portion of the total expense; but if for any of the foregoing reasons you decide not to do it yourself, he suggests you follow this advice:

For the job requiring great skill, hire the best obtainable skilled labor, regardless of cost. Rember that many retired workers possess great skill and experience. Also, skilled workmen moonlighting after-hours and weekends may be available at somewhat lower rates.

Saving money by using low-quality materials is a false economy that inevitable results in a waste of labor or a job that will have to be done again in the near future. But this doesn't mean you should pay the highest prices for everything you buy. If the work is of the type that can be planned well in advance, you can watch for closeouts, clearances, or distress sales at reputable dealers.

Remember there are many grades of lumber and plywood and selecting a better grade than necessary is a waste of money. On roofing, linoleum, carpeting and electrical items, watch for sales of remnants, discontinued patterns, stock disposals, etc.

Nowadays only the hobbyist and the dedicated handyman need make heavy investments in tools. Anything you might need is sure to be available at a rental center. And it pays to check hourly, daily and weekly rates at competitive centers.

An important factor in savings involves hiring the high priced professional only when necessary, and then for as short a time as possible. This means having the house ready for him (furniture and children out of the way) and cleaning up after him so that his expensive hours on the job are kept to a minimum.

Even if you have little time or talent for household repair work, Lacy suggests, you can save money by doing enough research to find out what the costs should be and then supervising the professional as closely as possible to keep costs in line.

For the householder —man or woman —who can personally handle home projects with safety, there are enormous savings to be enjoyed.

Simple Pointers Aid Remodeling Plans

Cost estimates for remodeling a house can be tricky. Homeowners getting bids from two or more contractors may find a startling difference between total estimated prices.

Among the factors causing the wide gap may be:

Check their reputations with local building supply dealers and ask the contractors for the names of other people they have done similar jobs for. Then talk with those clients and, if possible, take a close look at the work.

Check Quality of Materials

Materials. Ask for specifications of all materials to be used. The contractor who made the low bid may use minimum quality windows, roofing, hardware, plumbing fixtures, and lumber.

Extent of work. One contractor may not include some details on which the other figured his costs. See that everything is spelled out in full.

Timing. One contractor may work at your convenience and get the job done quickly, guaranteeing the completion date; the lower bidder may plan to interrupt your work from time to time, to tackle other jobs.

A handy homeowner can save by completing details such as installing shelves and moldings, and by permitting the contractor to work at his own pace. But saving money by skimping on materials is false economy.

Take Roofing

Take roofing for example: Asphalt shingles are the most popular type of roofing today. When a new roof is to be applied, it makes sense to use the highest quality asphalt shingles, called "heavyweights" because they weigh 290 pounds or more per 100 square feet of roof area.

Designed to last up to 25 years, they have a rich, textured appearance because of their extra thickness.

A 'Green Thumb' Exists

By JOY STILLEY
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Is there really such a thing as a green thumb?

Yes, believes internationally-known horticulturist Dr. Donald Wyman. But he adds that people who were not born with this useful appendage can still become successful gardeners by reading and doing.

"Many people have a feeling for growing plants," explains the former president and director of the American Horticultural Society. They're observant of nature, know by instinct how far down to plant, when there's too much water, or not enough. But anyone can learn to make things grow, whether in a tiny window pot or a large outdoor plot."

The secret is to select as a start one plant that interests you and read everything available on how to grow it, advises Wyman who has been with Harvard University's Arnold Arboretum for the past 35 years and is the author of numerous articles and books on horticulture.

His latest book is "Wyman's Gardening Encyclopedia," a volume crammed with information on some 9,000 plants, including hardiness ratings and proper selection for various climates, and advice on use of pesticides and fertilizers.

"Growing things brings a feeling of creation, of personal accomplishment," declared the author on a visit to New York. "From 25 cents worth of seeds you're able to get 50 feet of zinnias to cut bouquets and bring beauty into the house.

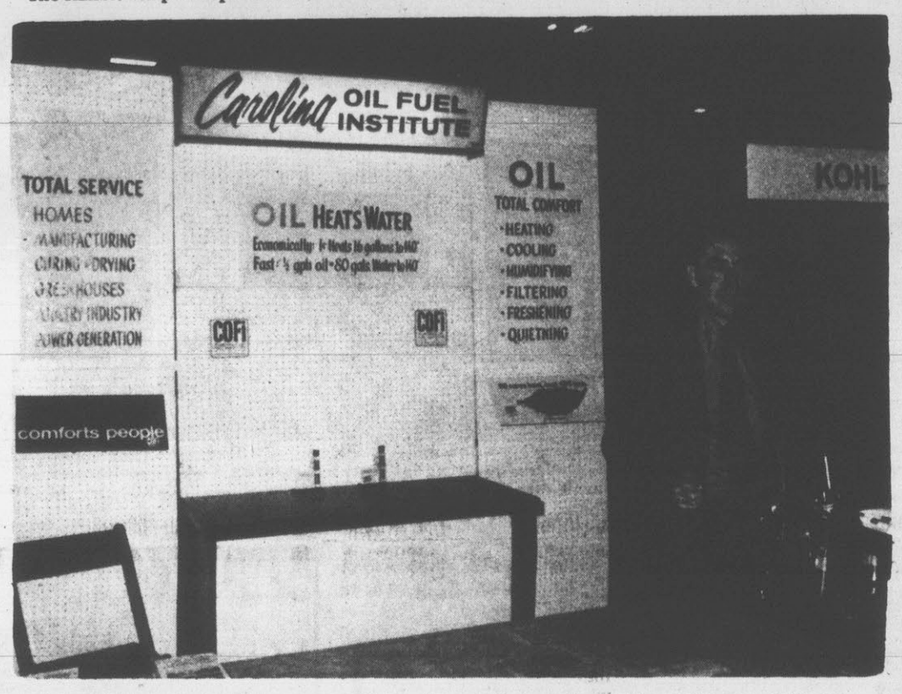

Oil Distributors To Be Offering Special Exhibit

The Housing Fair exhibit of the Greenville Oil Distributors Association will be provided by this group in cooperation with the Carolina Oil Fuel Institute.

The exhibit will point up all the uses of oil heat in home, manufacturing, curing and drying, greenhouses, the poultry industry and power generation.

The home will be played up with the use of two real oil furnaces and an oil-fired hot water heater.

The exhibit is being planned by Tom Scoopmire, vice chairman of the local Association and Les Edwards, managing director of COFI, who will be on hand for the fair.

Cooling Air with Central Unit Helps Alleviate Hay Fever Problems

Hay fever time means sneezing, and other symptoms for sufferers, and it usually comes at a time when the majority of people are trying to escape the heat.

BOYS' ROOM IS easy to clean, no matter how much mud and dirt they track in, thanks to easy-care sheet vinyl flooring. Suggested is Luran Foamcraft sheet vinyl by GAF.

JUST PEEL AND place. That's all there is to custom shag floor coverings, when carpet tiles are used. These have self-adhering, latex foam backing. They're by Mohawk.

N.C. Dept. Of Local Affairs Will Be An Exhibitor

The North Carolina Department of Local Affairs, with headquarters in Raleigh, will be a participant in the Home Improvement Housing Fair being held in Greenville Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

The department, which now serves the state through four regional offices in addition to the home office, has an office in four towns throughout the state—Washington, Fayetteville, Salisbury and Ashville.

Mrs. Sylvia Hewitt, public information officer for the Raleigh office, said "these are regional service centers set up to provide our varied services to all the areas of North Carolina."

At the Greenville fair next week-end, personnel of the office in Washington will be manning the booth on housing services provided by the Department of Local Affairs.

Ed Stanfield, in charge of the information and advisory services section of the Government Relations Division of the Washington office, said that he and M. D. (Buck) Jones, who handles housing services in the Government Relations Division; Robert Hinshaw, heading the Community Planning Division; Steve Moler, head of the Recreation Division; and Jim Swinpson, head of the Human Resources Division, will be on hand at various times during the week-end to assist and explain the services of the Department of Local Affairs.

In addition to the Washington based personnel, Stanfield said that Jay Evans, of the Law and Order Division from the Raleigh office would probably be on hand. Evans was formerly with the Washington office as head of the Law and Order Division there.

Mrs. Hewitt noted that the Department of Local Affairs is an organization designed to offer technical services and assistance to all levels of housing programs in North Carolina.

This includes a varied program of services, all interrelated to phases of housing development. To facilitate the handling of the diversified assistance given to people in North Carolina, the department is broken down into five distinct divisions, one each for—Community Planning; Government Relations; Law and Order; Human Resources; and Recreation.

To explain the services provided by the Department of Local Affairs, Mrs. Hewitt said that a series of brochures covering the salient points of each division would be available at Greenvills's fair.

The brochures, she explained, have been prepared in simple language and format to provide essential information to the average layman without getting involved in too much technical detail.

"The real purpose," she commented, "is to show people the what, where and when of finding information on housing programs." As an example, she noted that a local official from any town can call and say they need money for a housing project. "Our research staff can take the request, do some research and determine if money from state or federal sources are authorized for that particular project."

In connection with this part of the total program, a brochure is being made on the functions of the Planning and Research Staff of the Raleigh office.

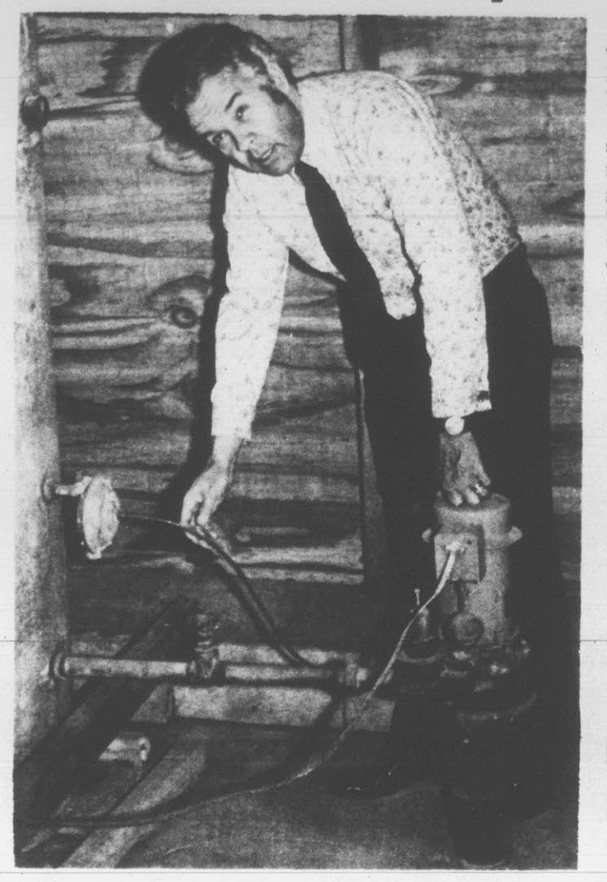

At the level of the four regional offices, services can be provided to local officials and people with the same type of assistance given by the Raleigh office.

G. Irvin Aldridge is the Director of the Department of Local Affairs office in Raleigh. It is under his supervision that the staff of the Raleigh office and the four regional service centers work.

HONG KONG (UPI)—Television license fees in Hong Kong were abolished April 1, start of the current fiscal year. About 500,000 television set owners benefited from the move.

Rural Water Supply To Be Health Dept. Exhibit

AN IDEAL DEEP WELL . . . is located at Randolph's Dairy near Greenville. Lin Kilpatrick of the Pitt County Health Department (left) said the Health Department Environmental Health Section helped the Randolphs plan for the 300-foot well that supplies their dairy and home. There's plenty of pressure even when everything's in use and water never runs low, Randolph said. The Health Department tests the water annually. Mrs. Randolph poses with Kilpatrick.

An ideal rural water supply will be the subject of the Health Department exhibit at the Housing Fair.

According to Lin Kilpatrick, a sanatarian with the Department, two diagrams of wells, a good shallow one and a deep one that is ideal, will be shown. A deep one goes through a stratum of rock, he said.

How to chlorinate will be explained and how to locate a well away from sources of pollution will also be shown. Any well; shallow or deep; should be at least 50 feet from any septic tank or line, pit privy, lake or pond, gasoline or fuel oil tank or line, hog pen, chicken lot, or dog pen, he said.

The exhibit will be kept as free from wordiness as possible, he said. "We think the viewer should be able to tell at a glance what we're attempting to get across. And he should be able to benefit from it without too much effort," he explained.

Plenty Of Birds In The Bahamas

ANDROS BEACH COLONY, Bahamas (AP) — There are so many game birds here that the government permits a bag limit of 50 wild birds a day or 200 birds total possession.

The birds range from white crowned pigeon to wild ducks and geese. Hundreds of thousands of duck make their winter home in the bays and marshes on the uninhabited west coast of Andros Island.

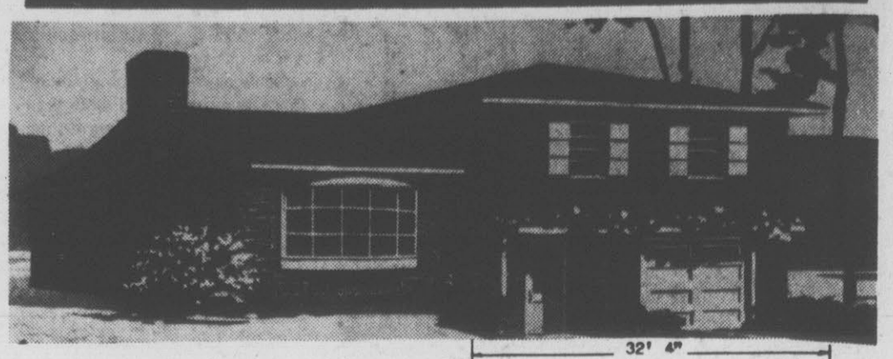

Picnic Party-Time

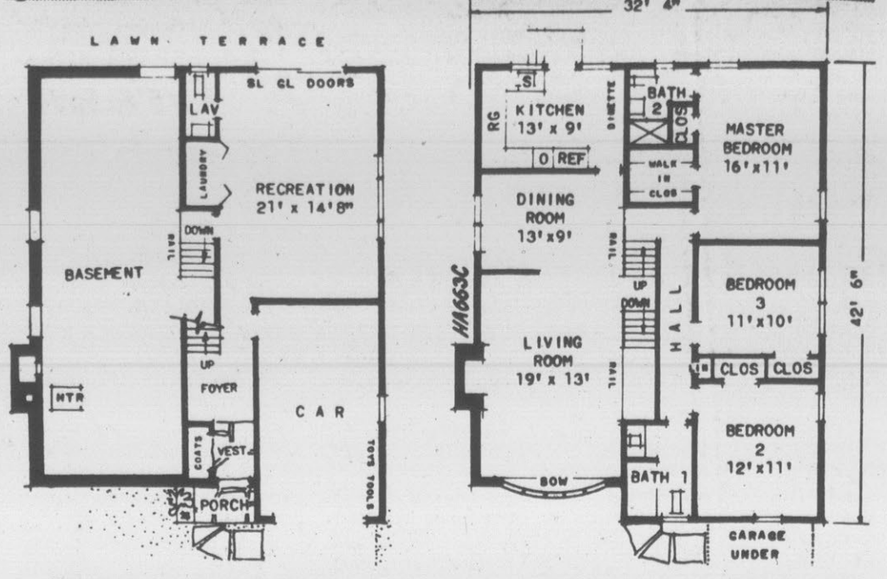

At the best planned picnics, someone may forget the salt but you can be sure appetites are never left at home. Today's coolers and picnic jugs make it easy to carry all sorts of goodies while vacuum bottles hold beverages either hot or cold.

HOMES FOR AMERICANS

ECONOMICAL SPLIT-LEVEL: This practical and economical split-level design can be used on a narrow parcel of land. The house is only 32 feet 4 inches wide with 1,215 square feet of living room space. There are six rooms and two baths. The lower level contains a recreation room, lavatory, garage and basement. Resort Acquires Old Building

GALVESTON, Tex. (UPI)—This historic resort city has paid El Mina Shrine $125,000 for Ashton Villa, the first brick building built in Texas.

The 120-year-old building was an emergency hospital in the yellow fever plagues which scourged the Gulf Coast during the turn of the century. It also was headquarters for both confederate and U.S. troops at various times during the civil war.

What's New around Home and Garden

START AT THE TOP
To help homeowners coordinate ceilings to room decor, four-color Ceiling Selector Sheets from Johns-Manville illustrate ceiling tiles or panels in designer-executed room settings. For free selector sheets, write Johns-Manville, Box 290BD, Murray Hill Station, New York, N.Y., 10016. Specify numbers IB-130A-10, 11, 12, 13.

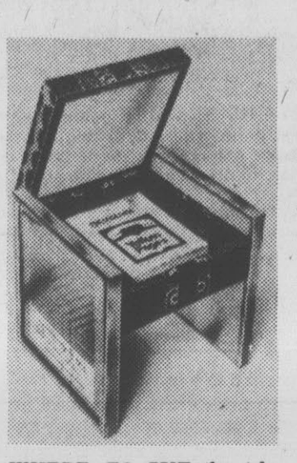

FOR BARBECUE
Furniture styling comes to outdoor cooking with introduction of a redwood barbecue wagon by Weber-Stephens. Called the Sequoia, the wagon has an early American cabinet wrought iron hinges and handles and, for modern mobility, eight-inch rubber wheels. The Sequoia's Weber covered barbecue kettle has lifetime porcelain finish, cooks with reflected heat.

INSTANT WINDOWS
New aluminum replacement windows can up-date homes. Nu-Sash windows by Georgia-Pacific replace all types and sizes of old windows, including wood, steel casement, sliding and picture types. Insulated tracks fit into the old window opening, and replacement window snaps into place. Nu-Sash units also tilt in for quick cleaning from inside the home.

WHAT'S COOKING
Counterspace cooking, new concept from Corning, features four thermostatically-controlled cooking units. "Counterrange" and "Counter That Cooks" electric ranges provide even heating through direct contact. There are no coils, burners or drip pans to be cleaned.

DOES BIG JOBS
New pocket-size hack saw does the work of a big hack saw, cuts angles and curves, cuts in tight places where a big saw can't. All-steel frame holds regular hack saw blades. It's the Mini-Hack utility hack saw, from Stanley Tools.

BEAUTY UNDERFOOT
New Luran Foamcraft sheet vinyl for floors is enhanced with an extra-deep cushion of vinyl foam for warmth, quiet and softness. A wear layer of clear nonporous vinyl protects the design and eases cleaning. This GAF product is available in four patterns—El Cid, Salem, Sun Valley and Trojan Marble.

FOOTPRINT THAT leads the way to many home decorating ideas is this fuzzy rug. For instance, two rugs sewn back to back and filled with foam rubber make great lounging pillows. "Fuzzy Foot" by Glenoit.

FOR KITCHENS
Quick change for kitchens is aim of "Kitchen Cabinet Decor" self-adhesive vinyl door panels from Decro-Wall. Three-dimensional panels come in woodgrain finishes, are scaled to fit most sizes of cabinet doors. Backing paper peels off; panels press on.

Gas Grill Easy To Use and Keep Clean

One of the best things about a modern gas grill, the American Gas Association reports, is that it practically takes care of itself.

To keep your grill clean and sparkling, after each use leave the top open and turn the control to "high" for about 15 minutes to burn the grease drippings from the briquettes.

Clean the grid or rack with hot, sudsy water and rinse it while it is still warm from use. After several uses, turn the briquettes over, and clean the inside of the grill as needed.

POWERING MOWERS
To reduce air pollution and increase power mower efficiency, all service manuals for Toro Manufacturing Company's 1971 mower line recommend unleaded gasoline. Low compression engines run better with the new anti-pollution gasoline, and spark plug fouling and valve deposits are reduced, Toro experts believe.

MOVING OUT
Look of the tropics moves out to patio or garden living room, with "Tahitian Bamboo," a new pattern for Samsonite's "Cushionaire" outdoor furniture. Foam-cushioned flexible plastic slats are covered with decorative vinyl and resist weather, as do the specially treated steel frames.

HOSE GOES FLAT
New development in garden hose could be a boon to gardeners short on storage space. It's Flatline garden hose which flattens like a strip of tape when not in use, but expands for five-eighths-inch flow for watering. It's a product of American ESNA Corporation.

POLLUTION CONTROL
A single aerobic wastewater treatment that entraps and retains organic solids until oxidation occurs is now available from Cromaglass Corporation, Williamsport, Pa. The Cromaglass System often permits the use of land for building that would be unsuitable for septic tank installations. It is practical for homes, apartments, factories, schools and mobile home courts.

By 1980, 3 Million Homes Yearly

By NORMAN KEMPSTER

WASHINGTON (UPI) —By 1980, the Commerce Department believes, the nation will be producing new homes at a rate of almost 3 million a year, a pace which comes close to meeting congressionally-set housing goals.

The department estimates 1980 production will include 2.4 million privately owned housing starts plus manufacture of 575,000 mobile homes. This compares with a 1970 output of 1.4 million housing starts and 415,000 mobile homes.

Congress in 1968 set a 10-year goal of production of 26 million new or rehabilitated housing units. It said this total — including both single-family residences and apartment units —was needed to guarantee to every American a decent home in a suitable environment.

Since the goal was set, production has lagged. So far, output has not approached the 2.6 million units-a-year pace needed to meet the goal.

The Nixon administration last year decided the goal includes mobile homes as well as houses with fixed locations. When the congressional goal was set, most observers thought it referred only to permanentlocation houses although it was not made clear in the law.

The Commerce Department outlook estimates 1.75 million housing units will be started this year, accompanied by 450,000 mobile homes for a total of 2.2 million units.

By 1975, the department estimates 2 million housing starts along with 525,000 mobile homes, a total of 2.5 million units.

Commerce's estimates are not as optimistic as the forecast of George Romney, Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, who predicted in a speech to the National Association of Home Builders earlier this year that 1971 housing starts would total about 2 million —the figure Commerce projects for 9175 — and that production would rise to 2.3 million units in 1972.

Commerce analyzed the slump which hit the housing industry in 1969 and 1970: "Inadequate supplies of mortgage funds and high interest rates, along with selling prices and rental beyond the economic reach of much of the population seeking new dwellings, were said to be the prime reasons for the slackening of demand."

But the department predicted steady improvement this year.

"A steadily growing supply of mortgage funds at declining interest rates has sparked a turnaround in housing starts," the report said. "With due consideration to generally advancing costs of land, higher construction wage rates and moderately higher prices for materials, it now seems possible to project 1,750,000 starts in 1971, an increase of 25 per cent over 1970.

"Implicit in this outlook is very strong demand stemming from demographic factors; the removal of 500,000 to 800,000 units annually because of demolitions, increasing private and public development involving land clearance and the abandonment of rural dwelling units, growth in total economic output and related gains in average per capita income; and a much attenuated rate of inflation."

Make Vacation Last Longer—in Backyard

Creating Your Own Outdoors Cafe Will Help Set Stage for More Fun, All Summer Long

Want to make your vacation last longer and cost less this year? You can do it by creating an original outdoor cafe — right in your own back yard.

All it takes to design and equip your cafe is a little imagination, some furnishings and decorations, and a gas grill for outdoor cooking at its best. You might also want to add the extra touches of gaslights and gas infrared heaters to make your special part of the great outdoors more enjoyable.

Then, when decorations are complete, why not invite some friends to join you in your outdoor cafe?

Let's Give a Party

For a change of pace, try a Western theme at your next party, and return your guests to the romance of the Western cowboy cooking his meals outdoors. Keep the dress casual, the decorations rustic and the food simple but delicious.

For dress, you might suggest jeans and a comfortable shirt for all. The children will really get into the swing of things if you give them a cowboy hat to wear, and everyone will smile nostalgically if their beverages are served in a tin cup.

Set your table simply. A checkered tablecloth, some colorful napkins, paper or plastic plates; tin cups and wooden serving bowls will all help recreate the days of the old West.

When you are ready to start cooking on your gas grill, all you have to do is turn it on. Since the grill cooks with even, infrared heat, 10 minutes is all the time needed to warm it up.

The delicious smoky flavor that adds so much to outdoor cooking comes from meat drippings as they fall on the permanent briquettes in your gas grill. All you have to do is turn the meat!

For Guaranteed Success

To insure the success of your party, the American Gas Association offers these hints:

Keep it simple — the meat you serve is your main attraction, so limit the other courses and make them easy to prepare.

Plan ahead — and when you do, remember that outdoor dining seems to increase an appetite; be sure you have plenty for all.

Gaslights Add Elegance to Patio Living

Think back for a moment to the days when the West was a wild and beautiful land of adventure and excitement — when homes were romantically lit by gaslamps, and men and women walked the streets of their towns with gaslights gently casting a warm and comfortable glow. Times were rough and rugged, but there's no denying that life in those days had an elegance and excitement that's hard to match.

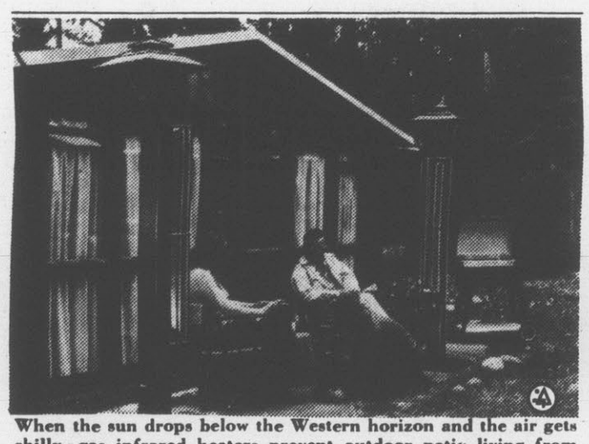

Today, in your own home, you can recreate the best features of these bygone days. You can turn your backyard patio into a Western vacation wonderland which lets you enjoy the great outdoors as it used to be. And, you can do it very inexpensively!

The secret lies in using modern conveniences to create the right mood. No matter what size or shape backyard you have, picture it as it might have looked in the West 100 years ago. Your furniture would have been rustic — a wooden table and chairs or benches — a simple table setting — and simple but delicious food prepared outdoors.

And don't overlook the importance of lighting. Try gaslights, styled in rustic early American designs, to recreate the romantic feeling of the past. Let them softly and subtly light your patio just as they would have done when the West was an untamed frontier.

This family has discovered how to stretch their vacation time and their dollars. They have created a private vacationland right in their own backyard — and equipped it with a modern gas grill, gas patio heaters and gaslights. Now their vacation fun in the great outdoors lasts most of the year.

Swim in Comfort in a Heated Pool

How often do you test the water in a pool — and then decide not to go for a swim because the water is too cold?

Today, more and more homeowners are solving that problem by heating their pools with gas. The American Gas Association indicates that more than 40% of the newly installed pools in the U.S. are equipped with heaters, and 90% of those heaters operate by natural gas.

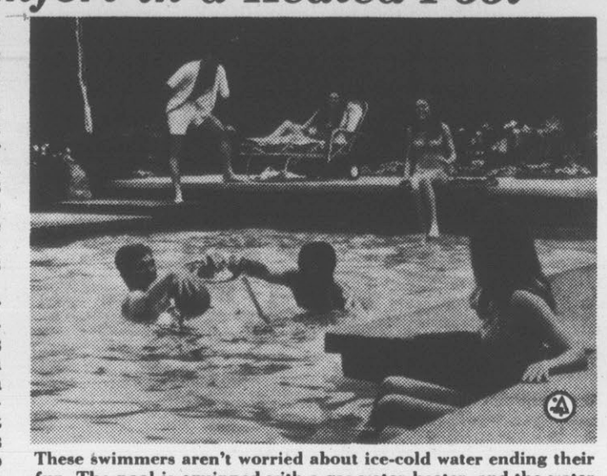

Modern gas pool water heaters are small and compact, and many homeowners inconspicuously place them in a garage, bathhouse or in shrubs. Since most are finished with weather resistant materials and the controls are completely covered, no protection from the elements is required.

Before buying a pool heater, carefully consider the size of the pool, the temperature at which the water will be kept (most experts recommend 80° as ideal, and 78° as comfortably adequate), and the area's general climate.

Accurate heater sizing, the American Gas Association stresses, is important for getting the best buy in a gas water heater. A heater that is too big for the pool is a waste of money. A heater that is too small won't be able to keep the pool at the desired temperature even though it operates perfectly.

Accurate temperature control is vital, since fuel bills can increase rapidly when water temperatures rise even 1 degree. A.G.A. reports that properly sized natural gas pool heaters are able to maintain water temperature with complete accuracy.

A.G.A. also recommends that the water be heated only when the pool is in use. By intermittent heating, fuel costs can be cut 30% over continuous water heating.

These swimmers aren't worried about ice-cold water ending their fun. The pool is equipped with a gas water heater, and the water stays comfortable even on cool days and chilly evenings.

STOP LEAKS

Control Patio Climate

Modern gas infrared heaters now make it possible to control the climate on your patio!

The heaters, which operate by imitating the sun, transmit a special infrared heat wave. The wave passes directly through the air without warming it; however, once it comes into contact with a solid object, that object is warmed.

Since the air around a patio and pool doesn't absorb the heat and let it drift away, it isn't necessary to warm large open spaces at high costs. In fact, depending on local gas rates, it generally costs between 2c - 4c an hour to operate a gas patio heater.

According to the American Gas Association, infrared gas heaters operate effectively even in freezing temperatures. They come in a variety of styles, and may be mounted on a post, wall, ceiling or roof. The most popular style, A.G.A. reports, is a combination infrared heater and gaslight.

Usually, a minimum of two patio heaters are installed, so that people are bracketed between them. When the heaters are stationary, they are supplied by natural gas extended from the house. Portable gas heaters, operating on LP gas, are also available.

WITH A LITTLE REMODELING, SUMMER cottages can become year-round weekend homes. Since such cottages usually have a rustic setting, remodeling should take advantage of the scenery. When this lakeside cottage was made into an all-year house, the owner installed big windows and gliding doors, making nature part of the decor. Doors, windows by Andersen.

ON THE HOUSE

You may never have thought of it that way, but an important piece of equipment in obtaining a good varnish finish is a vacuum cleaner.

Varnish has survived the challenges of other finishing materials over the years because it produces both a durable and beautiful coating on wood. But its biggest enemy is dust, which settles on the object being finished while the varnish is still wet and which has resulted in the use of such things as tack rags, picking sticks and the like.

Before applying varnish, therefore, the room where the finishing is being done should be as dust-free as possible. A good vacuuming job is essential, not only on the floor but on anything else in the room which might have dust on it.

Even this precaution will be useless if the worker neglects to remove all dust from his clothing. Too often, someone will saw or sand in a workshop area and then move from those tasks to the application of varnish or, for that matter, any other finishing material without cleaning the room and his clothes. A friend of mine whose hobby is wood finishing makes it a point to change his entire outfit between the sanding and finishing operations. It is said that, many years ago, some furniture companies insisted that the men work naked while applying varnish.

A tack rag is a big help in cleaning the surface of the wood before varnishing. You can buy one or make your own from cheesecloth or any clean lintfree rag. It should be saturated in turpentine, then rung out thoroughly. Sprinkle some varnish on it and ring it out again. Wiped over the wood, it will quickly remove all dust. It can be kept indefinitely in an airtight metal container and used over and over, renewing the turpentine-varnish treatment each time.

A picking stick is any object with a small tip. I prefer a wooden toothpick. While some wood finishers apply a rosin-varnish mixture to the tip, I get good results by using the toothpick as is. It should be kept handy while varnishing and used the moment a speck of dirt is discovered on the wet surface. The tip picks up the bit of dust, after which the varnish closes in around the spot and smooths it out. Remember that this works only while the varnish is very wet.

All your trouble will go for naught if the object which has just been varnished is kept in a room or area where people are going in and out. Be sure there will be no traffic in the vicinity for several hours at least.

Incidentally, you won't be able to spot the specks of dust in the varnish and remove them unless you do the job in an area that has plenty of light.

Star, Flame Are Seals of Approval

For more than four decades, a star and a flame have steered consumers to safer, more dependable gas appliances. They are the Blue Star of the American Gas Association Certification Program, and the Blue Flame of the Canadian Gas Association Seal of Approval.

To win its Blue Star or Blue Flame, a gas appliance goes through a long series of rigid tests — ranging from simple inspection to "torture" by machines. If it passes the tests, the gas product will have met national safety standards and earned the seal for one year. Each year the seal must be renewed, and each five years, the product retested.

Greenville Utilities Among 65 Exhibitors At Fair

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Greenville Utilities Commission will be among the more than 65 exhibitors scheduled to have displays on hand when the Housing Fair, sponsored by the North Carolina Extension Service and the Coastal Plain Development Association, opens for a three-day exhibition here April 23.

The Housing Fair theme, "Better Homes for Better Living" has as its purpose to give people a chance to compare the latest ideas and materials that are used in building or remodeling a home.

Through their exhibit, the Greenville Utilities Commission hopes to emphasize its slogan "Service Is Our Most Important Product", by showing how homes can be designed to use electric heat economically. The commission's exhibit will also give consumers an opportunity to see electric, water and gas meters in operation and have explained to them how the meters work.

One portion of the GUC display will be a full-size section (or cut-away view) of a house showing how an all-electric home is insulated for electric heat. That display will also include an electric furnace and a section of electric baseboard heat installed as it would be in a home, according to John R. White, GUC's electric heat representative.

White explained that as a service to customers, the utilities commission will help a home owner plan proper installation of electric heat — either in a new home or in a remodeling program — and will estimate the annual cost of operation for the installation.

This service, White noted, includes helping select the right size heating system; giving information on the various types of electric heat, and making recommendations for insulation that will enable home owners to operate their heating systems most efficiently and most economically. These services are rendered at no cost or obligation.

Another service rendered by the Commission, according to White, is GUC's budget billing plan for all-electric homes.

White explained that under this plan, Commission employees estimate the cost of all electric service over the period of a year and the customer is billed an equal amount per month. Any under or over payment is adjusted at the end of the billing year.

Cut-away views and working models of gas, water and electric meters will be displayed by the Commission in order to give Fair-goers an opportunity to see meters in action and see how they work.

Utilities employees will be on hand to explain the operation of the meters to those interested in them.

"We're trying to inform the public how their consumption of gas, water and electricity is measured, how the services benefit them, and how electric heat can serve them," White commented.

AT HOUSING FAIR . . . Rufus Bynum, a Greenville Utilities Commission Meter Department employee with water, electric and gas meters similar to those slated for GUC's display.

Snips Help Handyman, Speed Cutting Jobs

Need to renew some flashings around the house? Replace a section of rain gutter or spout, or cut some vinyl tiles for a new kitchen floor?

To turn the life of the home handyman brighter, there's a new type of metal-cutting snip that will help with all these jobs. It's called a pipe and duct snip.

This compound-action snip is especially useful in cutting leaders, gutters and sheet metal pipes and ducts, or even vinyl tiles.

It can make its own holes for starting, will cut through double layers or seams and is designed to give a clean cut without distorting edges.

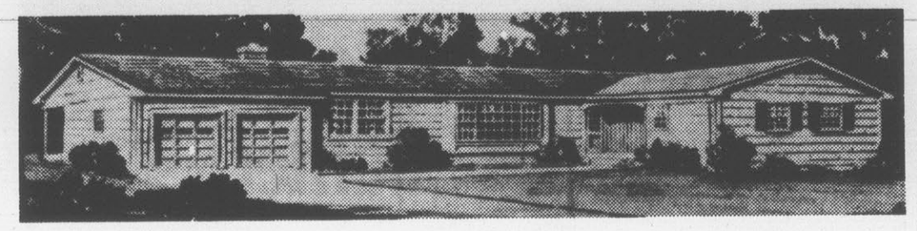

A safety factor is that waste metal curls up and forward out of the pipe and duct snip's jaws and cannot cut the operator's hand.

Easy-Care Lawn Can Be Dream Come True

Right Mower, Sprinkler Reduce Chores of Grooming Grass

Having a lovely green lawn is the dream of every homeowner—but the work it takes to achieve such a lawn sometimes seems more like a nightmare.

However, a well-groomed lawn can also be an easy-care lawn if the homeowner plans carefully, keeps the lawn basically healthy and makes use of the work-saving equipment now on the market.

Advice for planning a low-upkeep lawn is offered by Dr. James Watson, director of agronomy for Toro Manufacturing Company.

Choosing the right mowing equipment is important in reducing lawn-care chores. As a general rule, choosing the largest mower practical for the size of the lawn will reduce time and work. For a lawn one-quarter acre or larger, the homeowner might consider a rider or tractor.

Use mowing strips to keep grass in a neat line around flowerbeds and other cultivated areas.; The strips will also make grass-cutting easy.

Avoid small chopped-up areas of grass, which are difficult to cut.

Use ground cover on steep grades and in areas of heavy shade or excessively wet soil.

Since more over-all time is spent hand watering than in any other lawn-care activity, automatic watering with an underground sprinkler system can make an important difference.

Automatic underground sprinkler systems have been around for 50 years, but their cost has been reduced substantially in the past five years, thanks to sprinkler heads with wider coverage and the use of plastic pipe.

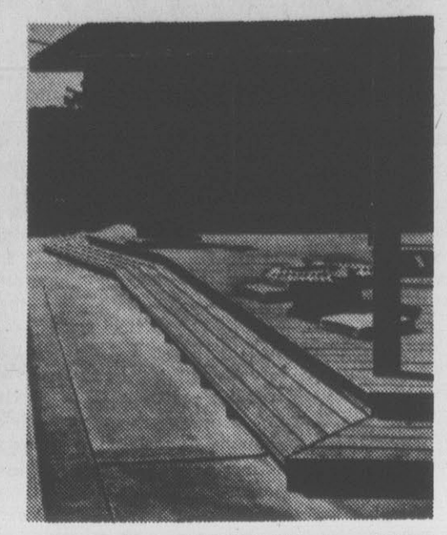

Part of the investment in a sprinkler system returnes through lower water bills. Though an automatic sprinkler system keeps the grass greener, it uses much less water than hand methods.

The system saves water because it may be programmed to supply only as much water as is needed for healthy turf. A well-designed system delivers water only as fast as the soil can absorb it—like a gentle rain—so there is no loss from runoff.

Shrubs and plantings, as well as lawn areas, can be watered with an automatic underground sprinkler system. There are new dual controllers on the market which have two separate watering schedules.

HIGH STYLING, COOL comfort for patio roofs can be provided with these ribbed, colorful, translucent fiberglass plastic panels. They have pinstripe accents. Sunguard panels by Filon, Vistron Corporation.

SIMPLE BUT SATISFYING redwood deck expands living area, provides sunning or snacking space in open air. Redwood boards are cool in hot weather, and can be used when lawn is damp.

Electric power shortages, limited natural gas supplies, restricted oil supplies, high worldwide demand for low-sulphur coal, the lag in atomic power plant development and energy conservation are all factors.

Conservation of energy is one area where a homeowner and do-it-yourselfer can help himself to a great extent. He can reduce fuel consumption, make his home more comfortable and reduce fuel bills all at the same time.

There are several sure-fire ways to conserve heat and cut home heating bills.

Storm doors and windows are very helpful but should be checked and made air-tight each season. Seal with removable strips of caulking.

Home insulation may be inadequate. Some indications of this are excessive fuel bills, prolonged furnace operating times, cold walls and drafty areas, snow melting on the roof when other roofs remain snow covered.

A small investment in insulation pays off all year by also keeping a home cooler in summer.

Tests indicate that optimum performance can be achieved when attic insulation is six inches thick.

If the home is built on an unheated crawl space, three inches of insulation is also recommended under the floor.

Uninsulated walls or partitions between storerooms or an unheated garage often are overlooked. Three inches of insulation in these areas also is recommended.

Additional insulation in sidewalls, however, is a job for an insulation contractor because the new material must be machine blown between the walls.

INCREASED ATTIC INSULATION CAN conserve heat and cut fuel bills. Blankets of insulation six inches thick provide optimum performance, and can be installed by the homeowner. Shown is Friction Fit insulation by Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corporation.

Decks Expand Living Space

Outdoor living space can sometimes be the most pleasant living space of all, and wooden decks can make the outdoor area around the home usable from the first sunny days of spring until the lingering afternoons of autumn.

To enlarge and improve a living room, dining area, family room or even a bedroom area, consider adding a durable redwood deck.

Then the family can breakfast, dine or entertain outdoors without mud or leaves underfoot. Overhangs or screens can protect from too much sun or wind.

Decks of insect-resistant redwood can be left unfinished or water-repellent treated to preserve natural color. They can also be stained or bleached to match or contrast with the house.

TAPING SESSION

When taking apart objects that contain screws, nuts or tiny parts, first put down a piece of masking tape. Place each part on the tape as it is removed to avoid loss.

Electric Fireplace Charms, Glows, To Meet Extra Heating Needs

When a room is remodeled, questions about the heating usually arise. One way to meet the need for additional heating is with electric warmth.

One of the advantages of electric heat is that it can be added to a remodeled room even though the home has another type of heating system.

For instance, an electric fireplace offers the charm and glow of its wood-burning predecessor, yet it can be installed in any room without flue or venting. Maintenance is minimal.

Family rooms, living rooms and vacation homes are favorite spots for electric fireplaces. Such a fireplace can be used against any type of wall or as a portable heater.

All types are available in self-contained units that operate independently of the home furnace, for easy installation anywhere.

In kitchens, electric baseboard units help solve both space and heating problems. Another space-saver is a valance heater that delivers both radiant and convected heat.

MOWING EQUIPMENT like this rear engine rider can cut the time needed to mow a lawn in half. It's Toro's Sportsman II.

Heating Greenhouse Keeps Plants Growing, Blooming

That's what many an amateur gardener may ask himself, as he wraps his evergreens in burlap, to protect them from the cold winds of winter.

Now, the home gardener can grow his favorite plants and flowers, in season and out, if his home is equipped with hydronic (modern hot water) home heating, says the National Better Heating-Cooling Council.

For comparatively little money, the home gardener can build a greenhouse in his backyard. If it is near to the house, the greenhouse can be heated by expanding the present heating system.

Of course, the present heating system should have enough capacity to handle the extra load, but many residential boilers are large enough to produce more heat than is actually needed.

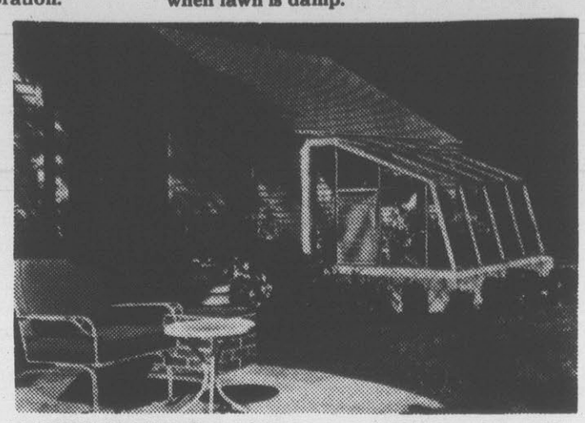

It must be kept in mind that a greenhouse is not a hot house. Many of the finest flowers, as well as a number of vegetables, do not need a night temperature higher than 40 to 50 degrees.

During the day, the greenhouse usually receives all the heat it requires from the sun and needs no boost from the heating system.

Because climate and other growing conditions are under the home gardener's control, he'll have better results all year long.

Central Air Conditioning Sets Modern Trend

One System for Heating and Cooling Secures Total Home Comfort

It's sound economy to plan a central air-conditioning system as part of a home modernization project. The cost of a cooling system represents an investment usually recovered when the home is sold.

And because of the overwhelming acceptance of air conditioning as a necessity, no home is truly "modernized" without it, reports the Air-Conditioning and Refrigeration Institute.

Installation and operating costs of central air-conditioning systems vary somewhat from one area to another, but an expert in the field of "climate control" has prepared estimates to show that the daily expense is actually quite low.

Initial costs of a central system pro-rated over its expected life, plus operating costs, result in a total average cost to the owner of 90 cents per day, says Dr. Preston E. McNall, associate director of the Institute of Environmental Research at Kansas State University and head of the KSU Department of Mechanical Engineering.

A total comfort system —including not only air conditioning but also humidification, electronic air cleaning and odor control —will cost the home owner about $1.20 per day over the life of the system.

To make the point that this is a relatively low daily cost, McNall points out that $1.20 per day is just about one-third the daily amount necessary to own and operate an automobile.

And he notes that a total comfort system adds to a family's pleasure and comfort 24 hours a day, whereas an automobile is useful for only two to three hours a day on the average.

Homeowners who plan to have central cooling installed should secure estimates from several reliable contractors who will survey the home and recommend a suitable central system to handle cooling needs.

Consideration should be given to the existing heating system, the orientation of the home to the sun, the insulation in walls and roof and other factors.

When the written estimates of cost are submitted, homeowners should check to be sure the contractors have specified using the same size equipment.

If the home has a warm air heating system, with heating ducts that can handle cooling in summer, a "split" system of air conditioning will probably be recommended.

This is the most common installation for most homes, and the least expensive. Interior space savings are considerable when a compact split system is installed, because the condenser-compressor is located outside, and only the evaporator coils and blower are located indoors—in a small corner of the basement, in the attic, or a closet or crawl space.

It is also important that equipment recommended by a contractor carries the blue-and-white ARI Seal of Certification. This emblem assures that the equipment has been manufactured according to an industry-wide standards program for capacity and reliability set up more than 10 years ago.

Although Certified central air conditioning, installed by an expert, is engineered to last nearly as long as the house, it needs annual servicing and inspection—like any mechanical equipment.

Servicing, as well as installation of central cooling, is ideally scheduled during off-season fall and winter months, when contractors sometimes charge less, and can do the job at a convenient time.

TOTAL COMFORT, YEAR-ROUND, COMES WITH NEW automatic heating-cooling systems. For remodelers, installation of such a system offers the bonus of increased home value. Total comfort system suggested here includes central air conditioner, electronic air cleaner, warm air furnace and power humidifier. A "split system," it has compact condenser (right) outside the home. By General Electric.

Togetherness Counts, For Pot Plants

An attractive display of container plants can improve appearance of the home—both in and out of doors.

As a decorative and horticultural rule of thumb, keep in mind that plants look best when grouped together.

Unless a single plant is really outsized, a grouping of both foliage and flowering plants makes a definite statement, and can be used functionally—as a "natural" room divider, or to fill in an empty corner.

Remember to select plants with their ultimate location in mind. Don't try to grow sun-loving mums in a shady spot, or pots of African violets in direct sunlight.

Outdoors, too, location is an important factor. In choosing pot plants for a shaded patio, fuchsias or tuberous begonias are logical choices, since both need protection from direct sun.

Another decorating and green thumb rule to follow is to select and keep all the plants in porous red clay pots. A cluster of plants looks best in similar containers which do not detract from the appearance of the plants.

The amateur gardener can also be more confident that the plant itself will not fail because of overwatering, if it is kept in a porous clay pot. The walls of the pot allow excess water to evaporate, so plants never become water-logged.

It's best to check with a local florist or garden store on the most healthful environment for each plant selected.

TOOL CARE

Push yard tools up and down in pail of sand, mixed with oil, before putting them away.

PREVENT STICKING

FABRIC DECORATING

Fabric as a wall covering can be installed with Vinyltak tape, a new pressure-sensitive tape from Arno. High-tack adhesive on both sides of the tape adheres to fabrics and walls simultaneously.

Walls Highlight Home Decor

Whether they're in a new home, an addition or a remodeling project, the walls of a room are influential elements in establishing a decorating motif.

People notice walls first, since they form the background for the room and its furnishings. Wall treatment, as a result, is extremely important to the success of a room.

Robert Kindness, a Design Center manager, Masonite Corporation, puts it this way:

"A homemaker or decorator must first design space in terms of the individual needs and interests of those who will use the room.

"She must then see that the surfaces which enclose this space reflect a central design concept and also complement and coordinate the needs and interests of the family."

Depending upon the design of the room, walls can be painted, papered, tiled or paneled in a variety of colors, textures or woodgrains. The choice and type of material selected will directly affect the cost and maintenance of the room.

Familiar solutions to many remodeling projects have been paint and paper. Today, however, the demand for distinction and individuality in wall treatments invites the use of more textured and/or woodgrained surfaces.

Paneling of durable, low maintenance, high fidelity woodgrained and textured surfaces in a variety of colors and tones has put an infinite selection of wall treatments within the budget of most families.

As the primary element in room design, walls tie the room together. They visually unify the space.

This is not to say that other elements can be overlooked, once paneling is selected. All elements of a room should be integrated into a cohesive unit to insure the room's total success.

FIRST THING PEOPLE NOTICE as they enter a room is the wall covering. This couple, realizing that walls establish an identity for the room as well as making a favorable impression, is busy installing prefinished hardboard paneling to meet these specifications. Paneling is by Masonite.

Growing Popularity Seen For Townhouses In '70s

By NORMAN KEMPSTER

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The head of the Census Bureau predicts that townhouses —rows or clusters of homes with individual front and back doors but at least one shared wall — will become increasingly popular in this decade.

"With 70 per cent of our population already living in metropolitan areas, the supply of land within 30 minutes driving time to the central city is steadily diminishing and will become even more scarce by 1980," George Hay Brown said in a recent speech.

Brown said that despite rising costs, the percentage of homeowners increased during the decade of the 1960s. The 1970 census showed that 62.9 per cent of all households owned their own homes, up from 61.9 per cent in 1960.

He predicted a continuing desire for home ownership, particularly among young adults who spent their childhood in single-family houses.

Households headed by persons under 25 years of age had a homeownership rate of only 20.3 per cent in 1970. Many of those persons will be buying their own home in this decade as they grow older, Brown said.

Cluster Housing

"There is reason to believe that the houses which these young people buy are increasingly likely to be row houses or, as the real estate developers now call them, townhouses," he said.

"To a large degree this underlying trend will surface in the form of cluster housing — groups of three to six townhouses with possibly each unit sold as a condominium.

"These clusters will not have all the features of detached houses. They will have a little land around them but not enough to let each husband spend his weekends with a lawnmower."

Builders who responded to questions from the association said they plan to more than double their townhouse production this year. The builders expect to increase their total production for the year by about 28 per cent. The townhouse proportion of the total this year was projected at 22 per cent, up from 14 per cent of a smaller total last year.

Prices May Rise

Most predictions emphasize —as Brown did —the scarcity of land. There is another factor, too. Townhouses are somewhat less expensive than detached houses to produce and soaring production costs are pricing many families out of the detached house market.

Louis E. Fisher, president of Levitt and Sons, Inc., said recently that a house which cost $23,000 in 1963 now sells for about $33,500. He predicted the price would go to more than $52,000 by 1980 if present trends continue.

"Year's ago, a family earning $15,000 a year could consider themselves well off and be able to afford luxuries such as the $50- or $60,000 home, expensive automobiles, maids and a second home on the beach or in the country," Fisher said.

Today, $15,000 qualifies a family for only a $30,000 home —and this home is usually over 30 miles away from a large downtown metropolitan area, is limited to three bedrooms, one bath, one garage, no air conditioning or basement and on an 80-foot by 100-foot plot of ground."

Of course, the same inflation that eroded much of the purchasing power of $15,000 has also vaulted far more persons into the $15,000 income bracket.

Old Stored Gadgets Can Be Given Modern Look

Flea market enthusiasts might keep in mind a prediction of Jack Denst of Chicago. The artist-designer, noted for his wall coverings and sculptural effects predicted the rush to art nouveau 15 years ago. He now says the newest collector will be the one with "motion mania," collecting machines that work, the artifacts of the '30s, and using them.

The demand for player pianos is already being felt—new rolls are being made. And the foresighted collector of 78 rpm records may find the old Victrola, with a new coat of paint, can be a great conversation piece.

"An old radio, toaster or typewriter from the period, decorated with paint, paper or fabric, can be put to work in a modern environment," Denst observes.

Denst, a bachelor, is seeking a particular old-time refrigerator which he plans to paint and use as an icemaker and bar supply unit in his new apartment living room.

He can see lots of possibilities —the old-time fan that can become useful again and, in addition, become a striking decoration with a bright new color. And how about the old fashioned treadle sewing machine? Zinged up with a fresh coat of wild paint a young girl might like to have it for her room. And think how economical it would be for her to learn basic sewing methods.

"Working art is much more satisfactory than the traditional transformation of an object from its original purpose into a planter or a lamp," says Denst. "Concentrate on objects which can make a comeback into usefulness with lively visual impact. For example, cover a carpet sweeper base with fabric or painted stripes and it will make its incidental clean-up appearances to the tune of admiring remarks never earned by contemporary appliances."

There are the old things that might be converted to other things—an old-fashioned permanent wave machine may be made into a game table lighting fixture.

And then there are the sculptural effects. Some old things Denst and his artists rounded up at second-hand stores include an orange Hollywood Kleig light (he placed it on a slick black pedestal) and an old dress form (size 42) sculptured white with plaster of Paris.

Browsing in second-hand shops might turn up a variety of useful things—meat grinder, curling iron, clothes wringer. You can count on them to be conversation pieces, he says.

Here's the Answer

A.—There are two basic differences. The face fiber and backing fabric are man-made materials that are what is called "dimensionally stable," meaning that they do not expand or contract because of temperature and humidity changes.

Also, they have a built-in cushion of high density latex foam rubber so that they do not need a separate padding. To install, roll out the carpet, cut to fit with a heavy-duty scissors or razor-blade knife and anchor at the edges with a double-faced tape. Since the carpet conforms to the floor, it is necessary to smooth out any patches in the wood before installing the broadloom.

Q.—Despite all our efforts, we still get water in the basement after a very heavy rain. We have been told that a sump pump is an effective way to get rid of the water. Is this so and how does it work?

A.—Yes, a sump pump, properly installed, will drain water from a basement. An electric pump is placed in an opening in the floor. When the water in the opening, called a pit or sump, reaches a certain level, the pump is automatically activated, sending the water into a sewer or other pre-selected area.

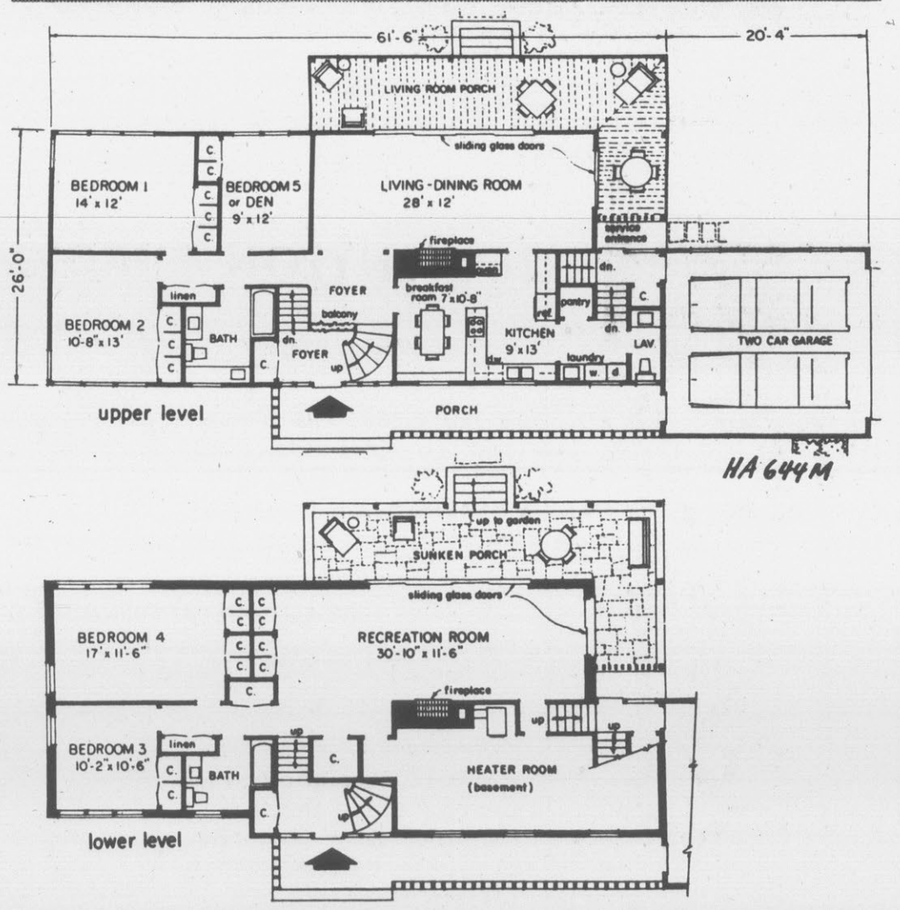

Q.—I was a visitor in a wood finishing plant a couple of years ago and noticed one of the men rubbing two pieces of sandpaper together. I didn't pay too much attention to it at the time, but now that I have to finish some furniture, I have been wondering why he did that.

A.—For especially fine smoothing operations, it is important that there be no loose grit on the paper that might scratch the surface. The worker probably was rubbing together two pieces of new sandpaper to be certain he dislodged any loose bits of grit. This generally is unnecessary if an abrasive paper with very fine grit is used for the final sanding operation, but it's a precautionary measure.

HOMES FOR AMERICANS

WHITEWASHED BRICK AND CONCRETE BLOCK HOUSE — The long flat roof deck tying into the garage, which is at the intermediate level rather than at the lower, gives this house the appearance of a low slung two story house. Inside, there is a large eating area in the kitchen, and a formal dining area is combined with the living room. Three bedrooms with multi-closets and bath with twin lavatories complete the upper level. On the lower level are two additional bedrooms and bath along with a 30 foot recreation room. Plan HA644M, with 2,542 square feet of living space, was designed by architect Rudolph A. Matern, 89 East Jericho Tpke., Mineola, N.Y., 11501.

Granules, Color Keynote Look Of Roofing

Quarried rocks are broken into tiny granules and then given a ceramic color coating which is fused on permanently in high temperature ovens by granule manufacturers—such as 3M Company.
