

Final Action Set In House Today For Realigning 11 Congressional Districts

By NOEL YANCEY
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — The House was set today for final action on a bill to realign North Carolina's 11 congressional districts to bring them into line with 1970 census figures.

The House approved the bill tentatively Tuesday by an 80-18 vote. It would shift only 10 counties from one congressional district to another and would keep all the state's present congressmen in separate districts. The Senate passed the bill about two months ago.

The House approved the re-districting measure Tuesday after voting 70-27 to kill an amendment by Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, calling for a different realignment of the congressional districts.

One of the major changes in the Miller amendment would have kept Orange County in the 4th Congressional District instead of shifting it to the 2nd district as the Senate-passed measure provides.

Backers of Rep. Nick Galifianakis, D-N.C., opposed the shift of Orange from the 4th to the 2nd district because they feared that the loss of Orange County's customary Democratic majority would endanger the Durham man's reelection chances.

Following the vote, Galifianakis issued a statement in Washington, saying that he regretted that "the General Assembly could not keep all five counties together, but of course this could not be done."

"I will be saddened to lose my Orange County friends as constituents after 1972," he said, "but I am confident that the ties between Orange County and the rest of the district will remain."

Miller told the House that the population deviation between districts in his amendment was less than half that of the Senate bill. For this reason, he said, it would come closer to carrying out the mandates of the U.S. Supreme Court and would be in less danger of being upset by a legal attack.

However, Rep. Jimmy Love, D-Lee, told the House: "I think it is obvious that this (Miller's) amendment would never have been offered if Orange County had been allowed to remain in the 4th district."

Rep. Carl Venters, D-Onslow, sought to complete action on the measure Tuesday by moving to suspend the House rules so that the bill could be given third reading consideration immediately.

However, Rep. James C. Green, D-Bladen, opposed the

Ban Lifted

Farmers and other residents of Pitt County wishing to burn in the open today may do so, as the ban against open fires has been lifted.

Because of the recent rainfall, the North Carolina Forestry Service has lifted the ban on issuance of burning permits. These may now be secured from any of the various representatives in Pitt County who are authorized to issue such permits.

County Fire Marshal Bobby Joyner said no major brush or woods fires had been reported in the county for the past few days.

motion. Green, who objects to a provision in the bill transferring Bladen County from the 7th district to the 3rd district, appealed to the House to give foes of the bill a chance to present their arguments.

"I see no reason for railroading this bill today," Green declared, and Venters withdrew his motion.

In addition to shifting Orange County from the 4th to the 2nd district and Bladen from the 7th to the 3rd, the bill shifts the following counties:

—Carteret from the 3rd to the 1st district.

—Greene from the 2nd to the 1st.

—Caswell from the 6th to the 2nd.

—Lee from the 8th to the 3rd.

—Wilkes from the 9th to the 5th.

—Yadkin and Davie from the 5th to the 8th.

—Avery from the 10th to the 11.

One-Year Med Program Flaws Are Underlined

RALEIGH — East Carolina University president, Dr. Leo W. Jenkins said today that in the event the state decides for the one-year medical program at ECU, the university would accept that decision and "work to establish the most sound program possible."

Dr. Jenkins, speaking at a noon meeting of the N. C. Hospital Health Insurance Institute in Raleigh, said however, that the university feels the two-year school would be the "logical, accepted, most economical, and most beneficial way to begin a new medical school."

ECU medical school developers met with Gov. Bob Scott on Friday to discuss the program and Dr. Jenkins said after the session that he is waiting for the governor to make a decision on whether ECU should pursue the one or two-year school.

The ECU head noted today that the "one-year scheme can work if that is what the state wants us to do. However, I would be less than honest if I did not point out that it has several severe disadvantages."

One disadvantage, Dr. Jenkins pointed out, is that the one-year programs are "experiments in medical education." The two-year programs are an accepted sound approach, he continued.

In the second place, he added, the Board of Higher Education was not informed of the "drastic curriculum change at Chapel Hill so that if the one-year plan is used our students can move only to Chapel Hill — they cannot go to Duke, Bowman-Gray, or any other school to complete their medical education." Two-year graduates could transfer anywhere, he said.

Also, the new curriculum at Chapel Hill will require the ECU program to have as many faculty for the one-year program as would be required for a two-year school, Dr. Jenkins pointed out. Costs, he noted, would be virtually the same.

The difficulty in recruiting faculty for the one-year program is another disadvantage, Dr. Jenkins said, noting that "we have had no difficulty in recruiting and hiring highly qualified faculty for the developing two-year school."

"A one-year program will not attract doctors into our region," he cautioned.

"Establishing the medical school at East Carolina will reap two immediate benefits for our state and our region," Dr. Jenkins told the gathering.

He said that "First, it will increase the number of North Carolinians admitted to medical school. Last year over one-half

Arrest Twenty Activists

WASHINGTON (AP) — Police arrested about 200 antiwar activists today after they blocked the main entrance of the Selective Service System's headquarters building.

The youths, protesting at the building for the second straight day, formed what they called "a carpet of bodies" in front of the main doors.

Employees arriving early were told by the protesters they could enter the building but only if they walked over the demonstrators, lying face down as symbols of those killed in the Vietnam war.

The arrests were orderly and began after police issued two warnings.

As the arrests were being made at draft headquarters, other demonstrators were at the Internal Revenue Service handing out leaflets without incident.

Prior to today's demonstration, Chief Jerry V. Wilson of the District of Columbia police department, said persons attempting to block employees from entering draft headquarters would be arrested.

The demonstrations, organized by the People's Coalition for Peace and Justice, are part of a spring campaign to persuade Congress and the Nixon administration to end the war in Vietnam.

Draft Director Curtis W. Tarr met with eight demonstrators Tuesday and authorized Selective Service employees to leave the building and talk with protesters.

An estimated 150 demonstrators prevented several workers from re-entering the building after lunch. They allowed employees to leave at the end of the day but kept chanting, "Don't come back" and "Join us."

Tarr, despite his 6-foot-7 stature, walked out of the building without being recognized.

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare, planned target of demonstrators Thursday, announced it will provide meeting rooms for the protesters, and employees will answer questions about the agency.

Jenkins Asks For Building

RALEIGH — Dr. Leo Jenkins today requested that a $3,740,000 School of Art building be included in the East Carolina University capital improvements budget by the Legislature.

Dr. Jenkins made the request in appearance before the Joint Appropriations Committee this afternoon. The building was one of a number of projects requested earlier by ECU. However, it was not recommended by the Advisory Budget Commission.

The ECU president said the School of Art provides "one of the largest fine and applied art programs in this part of the country."

"I wish there were some way to impress upon you just how serious our problem is," he told the committee.

He said the school is the only School of Art in the state and it now has 695 full time majors. The school is now housed on the third floor of Rawl building, with make shift studios being maintained in an old dining room, a garage, the old "Y" hut and gymnasium office and other similar locations.

He also pointed out that the space which the school occupies in Rawl is needed for expansion of the School of Business.

"Furthermore, we are in danger of losing the exceptionally fine community of craftsmen, artists, educators and scholars who compose the 30 members of our professional art staff," the ECU president stated.

In addition, Dr. Jenkins asked the committee to provide $59,224 for a coordinator and stenographer for the office of special projects and grants.

Presently the coordinator does the job on a part time basis while continuing to teach. There are now 90 active grants at ECU totaling over $2 million, the committee was told.

"Obviously, any agency or institution responsible for securing and administering $2 million in grants should be supported by the state," Dr. Jenkins stated.

Dr. Jenkins did not discuss financing for a medical program at ECU during this afternoon's appearance. He has been promised a second appearance before the committee to discuss financing for medical, education later in the session.

Warplanes Hit Three Fronts

SAIGON (AP) — Waves of U.S. warplanes attacked enemy positions on three fronts today in support of Cambodian and South Vietnamese troops.

The North Vietnamese and Viet Cong eased their attacks in South Vietnam after four days of shelling, but struck anew in strength along Cambodia's highway to the sea. Hand-to-hand fighting was reported 55 miles southwest of Phnom Penh along Highway 4.

Informants in Saigon said U.S. fighter-bombers attacked North Vietnamese positions in the region in efforts to ease the pressure on the Cambodians.

More than 100 miles to the northeast, U.S. B52 bombers hammered North Vietnamese bases in eastern Cambodia near Highway 7 and around the giant Chup rubber plantation. Informants said there has been increased enemy activity in the region.

The B52 raids were in support of both Cambodian and South Vietnamese troops operating across Highway 7 in efforts to keep enemy forces from pushing southward into the heartland of Cambodia and South Vietnam.

The U.S. Command also announced that more than 300 American helicopter missions were flown in eastern Cambodia Tuesday in support of several South Vietnamese task forces operating there.

As many as 60 B52 bombers were in action in Indochina Tuesday and today, dropping 1,800 tons of bombs on North Vietnamese bases, troop concentrations, aircraft sites, bunker complexes, truck parks and infiltration corridors.

The B52s also struck along the demilitarized zone and north of the A Shau valley in northwestern South Vietnam, in the Sepone area of Laos.

Hunting Fire Setters

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
The North Carolina Forest Service says it is continuing to investigate whether recent forest fires were intentionally set, and has won a conviction in one case.

Tom Hegele, information officer for the service, said that two young men were convicted in state District Court at Whiteville Tuesday. He said they were given suspended sentences of four months imprisonment, and fined $500 and court costs each, plus what it cost the service to extinguish the fire.

Hegele also said that two teen-aged boys in Pitt County are awaiting trial in Superior Court at Greenville on charges of setting 13 wild fires. He said they were placed under bond after a preliminary hearing in District Court last week.

But Hegele said that the situation again has become hazardous, and that six fires, some believed set by arsonists, burned 1,500 acres Monday in coastal Carteret County. He also said a smaller fire was fought Tuesday near Asheville.

Greenville Ranked First In Retail Sales Growth

According to January retail sales figures released by the N.C. Department of Revenue, Greenville ranked first in percentage increase over last January among 15 Eastern North Carolina cities.

The Department announced that Greenville's gross retail sales for this past January totaled $8,424,772, compared with 1970 figures of $7,437,545, an increase of 13.3 per cent.

The 13.3 per cent increase placed Greenville far above the other cities in the East in retail sales as no other municipality recorded as much as ten per cent. Goldsboro followed Greenville with a percentage increase of 8.9 on 1971 figures of 9,972,341, compared to $9,154,951 in 1970.

Kinston recorded an increase of 6.3 per cent as sales increased in January to $8,281,937 over 1970 totals of $7,791,740. New Bern, climbing from $6,251,019 in 1970 to $6,660,857 this year, saw a 6.6 per cent increase in sales.

A percentage increase of 4.7 was reported in Washington on sales of $4,204,613 in 1971, compared with $4,017,255 in January of 1970. Wilson had a slight increase in sales (0.2 per cent) as figures there rose from $7,888,208 in 1970 to $7,907,582 this year.

Jacksonville and Rocky Mount were the only cities in this area to experience decreases in percentage sales. Jacksonville saw the biggest decline (7.7 percent) as sales slipped from $8,033,334 in January of last year to $7,410,982 this year. Rocky Mount had a 3.1 per cent drop in retail sales this year as their figures fell from $10,800,721 last year to $10,468,995 in recent tabulations.

The Pitt County United Fund Board of Directors yesterday elected a new president for the 1971-72 campaign year, thus taking the first step to once more shaping up plans for another year of consolidated fund drives.

William Glidewell, a vice president with Wachovia Bank and Trust Company, was nominated and elected as 1971-72 president of the Pitt County United Fund, Inc., succeeding John B. Lewis, Jr., Farmville attorney.

John S. Whichard, Business Manager for The Daily Reflector, was elected first vice-president. Whichard succeeds Glidewell, who was first vice-president for the current year.

Other officers elected were: Joseph O. Clark, second vice-president; J. Eric Whichard, secretary; Paul Bailey, treasurer; N. Eugene Carson, assistant treasurer; and James T. Chatham, III, counsel.

During the luncheon meet, tribute was made to a number of people connected with the successfully completed 1970-71 campaign year.

Joseph O. Clark, campaign chairman, received a metal mug inscribed for "a smashing success, 130 plus." The 130 plus referred to the total of $131,251.52 collected for the current campaign. This figure represents an amount of nearly $5,000 over and above the announced goal of some $126,000.

Others recognized for outstanding work during the recently completed campaign year were division leaders: Advance, Mrs. Walter F. Taylor; East Carolina University, Dr. Ed Hooks; Gold-Busters, Louis Clark; Industrial, Gerald Crane; Leadership, Sam Keel (now living in Boone, N.C.); Special Gifts, Carlton Taylor; Professional A, James Sullivan; Professional B, Dr. Robert Dayton; and County, Frank Little, Jr.

Community leaders within the county honored for their efforts in the campaign were: A. F. Rowe, Sr., Ayden; Eugene James, Belvoir; Alvis Mewborn, Bethel; Mrs. K. M. Crawford, Bell Arthur; Carter Smith, Fountain; Dr. Bert Warren, Farmville; Billy Phillips, Grifton; Mrs. Lawrence Davenport, Pactolus; J. Beverly Congleton, Stokes; and Willard C. Finch, Winterville.

Also recognized for outstanding contribution to the effort of the past campaign was William (Bill) Shires, director of the East Carolina News Bureau and publicity chairman for the 1970-71 United Fund campaign.

Certificates of appreciation were tendered to a number of firms and agencies for their efforts in employee participation. The firms and agencies honored, and the persons receiving certificates for them were: Burroughs-Wellcome, Paul Taddiken; Carolina Leaf; Tom Harvey; Carolina Sales, James T. Little, Jr.; Carolina Telephone and Telegraph, W. O. Powers; The Daily Reflector, John S. Whichard; E. I. DuPont, John Hogan; Empire Brushes, Walter Faulkner; Fieldcrest Mills, Melvin Moore; Garner-Wynne-Manning, Hobert Barnes; J. C. Penney, Fred Baumann; Pepsi Cola Bottling Co., John F. Minges; Prep Shirt, James Shadle; and Union Carbide, Fuller T. Motesinger.

Outgoing president Lewis expressed his appreciation also to Executive Director Joe D. Tripp and to the fund's secretary, Mrs. Kathryn Howard.

Following the annual elections, board members of United Fund held a brief business meeting to discuss two requests submitted by two local agencies seeking to join the agencies participating in the United Fund.

The first, that of the Pitt County-Greenville Council on the Aging was unanimously accepted. Budget Sub-Committee Chairman Dr. Ray Minges said the committee met April 15 to review the two applications.

Dr. Minges observed the application for the Council on Aging was received too late last year to become effective for the 1970-71 budget considerations. He then made a motion the council be recommended for inclusion in the list of participating agencies.

The second request, that made by the Boy's Club of Greenville was recommended for later final consideration with the inclusion of a stipulation.

"It is the contention of the Budget Sub-committee that the Boys' Club of Greenville meets all the qualifications except it is not county wide," Dr. Minges explained.

"Because of that, it is

Australian Government Says: 'Women Should Aim For Top Employment'

By IAN MCCAUSLAND
SYDNEY (AP) — Women in Australia are giving up the "hot stove slave" image to go out to work. And they are being asked by their government to aim for top jobs.

The appeal to male bosses to offer wider job and career opportunities to women is in a booklet produced by the Department of Labor and National Service. Its publication was followed by a promise by former Prime Minister John G. Gorton to establish more day care centers for children and a Federal Government offer of training and refresher courses for women.

Around 2,600 women responded to the scheme for which a budget of $392,000 was set. Of these, 1,200 applied for particular training programs, while others were placed in jobs.

The applications covered a wide range—from secretarial to industrial work, including first aid, catering, journalism, photography and management.

The department said 65 per cent of the applicants sought training in commercial and office work, 25 per cent in professional and semi-professional fields and 10 per cent in industrial work.

Last year, the government said, 40 per cent of all married women between the ages of 35 and 44 had jobs. The booklet said a survey showed this number could be increased if suitable child-care arrangements could be made. Now, only 14,000 of the 250,000 under-six children of working mothers attend registered child-care centers. And a disturbing find was that some 45,000 working mothers did not appear to make after-school arrangements for the care of their children aged between 4 and 11 years.

When in operation, the government hopes the child-care centers will boost the number of women at work and increase the pressure of women bidding to reach the top.

A survey taken in 1969 showed that only 1.6 per cent of the nation's executives were women, and all but six received lower salaries than their male equivalents. The government's booklet said that in terms of the industries in which women are employed and the occupations in which they are engaged the last 20 years have seen little change.

"It has been shown in a wide variety of studies that not only do men, employers and unions question the capacity of a woman to rise to executive status, but women themselves often doubt their own ability in a decision-making position and frequently question the ability of other women who achieve such positions," said the booklet.

Popular attitude in Australia about the subject is indecisive about the possibility of changing attitudes. There was, however, a small but vocal Women's Liberation Movement formed last year, and some women are setting an example for others to follow.

There are two leaders. The first is Mrs. Millie Phillips, who has "invaded" the formerly all-male preserve of the boardroom. She is chairman of International Mining Corp. N.L.

Another is Miss Beryl Young, who recently was appointed the sole official pilot to the Queensland State Government—higher than most males go.

She Cooks In Two Countries

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor
How do you switch from teaching university classes in romance languages (French and Spanish) to opening a cooking school devoted to French cuisine?

Ask Lydie Pinoy Marshall, a young woman who came to live in this country from France when she was 15 years old and has spent time in France each year ever since, and she's quick to answer: "Marry a man who thinks one of your metiers is French cooking, and you'll have enough enthusiasm to take the plunge."

Lydie did just that. Six years ago she married Wayne Marshall, a Midwesterner who is a professor of business administration in New York. Wayne became more and more entranced with Lydie's culinary talent with every mouthful of her French dishes that he ate.

But switching to fulltime culinary teaching doesn't mean Lydie isn't an expert in conducting language classes. She graduated from Western Reserve University and then, via a scholarship, got her M.A. at the University of Pennsylvania. Along with teaching cooking, she is working towards her Ph.D. in French Literature. "I always finish what I start," Lydie states.

"The important thing about teaching in any field," says Lydie, "is to have rapport with your students." She adds that if a teacher is an expert in his or her field, it's easy to relax and be entirely aware of students and their needs. "You must sense what a student doesn't understand," Lydie insists, "and help him over the hurdles. And that applies whether you teach languages or cooking."

Lydie learned how to do home-style French cooking from her French mother and aunt, both experts in the art. After her marriage, when her husband's sabbatical year took the Marshalls to Paris, she enrolled at Les Trois Gourmandes, the cooking school run under the aegis of Simone Beck, Louise Bertholle, and Julia Child. Mesdames Beck and Bertholle were Lydie's mentors because by this time Julia Child was launched on her TV career in the United States. At Les Trois Gourmandes Lydie added considerably to her repertoire and won a diploma.

"But there's nothing like starting young," Lydie says. "I did my first cooking when I was 7-years-old by making crepes. I had watched my mother make them since I could remember. Then one Shrove-tide Tuesday—the day crepes are always served in France—I made them all by myself. As I flipped my first crepe in the air to reverse it, it hit the ceiling! After that all my crepes returned to the pan—and they have ever since."

Lydie is especially happy that when she was growing up in France she spent time at her maternal grandfather's house in the Drome. "It is the section of France that is known for producing a large number of outstanding chefs," Lydie explains. Now Lydie lives in the Drome every summer. She inherited her grandfather's house and she and Wayne are renovating it.

In New York City the rest of the year, Lydie conducts both demonstration and participation classes in four-week courses. At each lesson students learn how to prepare a first course, a main course and a dessert, with emphasis on basic French techniques. These classes are held in Lydie's attractive French-provincial kitchen in the Marshall's Greenwich Village house. Lydie also gives cooking demonstrations and talks to groups interested in French cuisine and the culture that underlies it.

Juice of 1/2 lemon
Salt

1 tablespoon butter
1 pound veal scallops, thin slices of tender boneless veal
2 tablespoons flour
1 1/2 tablespoons bacon fat
1 teaspoon arrowroot
3/4 cup heavy cream
Cover mushrooms with 2 1/2 cups water and add lemon juice, pinch of salt and butter; simmer 7 to 10 minutes. With a slotted spoon remove mushrooms and keep warm in a hot dish in warm oven. Boil mushroom liquid until reduced to 1 cup. Dredge veal in flour, shaking off excess; add veal to hot bacon fat in a large skillet and quickly cook through. Add veal to mushrooms.

To skillet add reduced mushroom liquid, stirring to get up brown residue in pan. Dissolve arrowroot in 1 tablespoon cold water and add to skillet along with cream. Stirring constantly, cook gently until slightly thickened—sauce should not be thick. Add mushrooms and veal and heat thoroughly, adding extra salt and lemon juice to taste. Makes 4 servings.

Mixed Results From Fair

CAYLUS, France (WNS) — The village of Esparros has sold the rights to its annual Bachelors Fair to Caylus on condition that it continue to be held every April 18. On that date single women are invited to the fair to pick out the husband of their choice. "The fair attracts thousands of women, but it resulted in only one real marriage for our bachelor farmers," reported the mayor of Esparros. "The rest was just trouble and expense."

Homemaker's Haven

A Frost-Free Appliance is Not Care-Free

Frost-free refrigerator-freezers are certainly work savers. However, homemakers do need to clean these appliances thoroughly a few times each year. It really is so easy since the messy melting process is no more.

For safety, first unplug the refrigerator and turn all controls to "Off", especially the signal arm on an automatic icemaker. Take out all food and protect frozen items from thawing by wrapping in layers of newspapers or place in a picnic cooler. Remove parts such as crispers, meat pans, shelves, and light fixtures. The instruction booklet (which I'm sure you as good consumers have kept) will explain how to do this.

At the sink, wash everything in warm sudsy water. A gentle-action scouring pad may be used to clean stubborn food particles from racks. Be sure to remove and wash the water evaporating tray and air grill below the unit. With the crevice tool attachment, vacuum the condenser and other areas where dust may collect. Then wipe the entire inside and doors of the refrigerator and freezer. Refit components and replace food, wiping all jars and containers with a sudsy sponge first. Plug in the appliance and turn controls on.

To keep your refrigerator and freezer clean smelling, place charcoal briquets in small containers on the shelves. For the final touch—polish your refrigerator with an appliance polish.

Did you have some vinyl wallpaper left over when you did the kitchen or bathroom? Then by all means make use of it—make a telephone book or cookbook cover, wrap your old canister set, wrap a large potato chip can for a wastepaper basket, or use a large coffee can and you have a countertop—presentable mini-garbage container (just line with a plastic bag or bread wrapper before using).

Designer Calls Young People Shrewd Shoppers

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

"Everybody thought the youth market in home furnishings would be a bubble-gum one, but it is really quite sophisticated," observes William McCarty, 33-year-old Florida-reared London designer, who is winner of the 1971 Burlington House Young Designer's Award.

Young people account for the liberal reign young designers are being given in the homes field, McCarty points out. "They are shrewd shoppers," he says. In England, they use mod pieces with handsome inherited antiques. They have a lot of respect for the good old things, and they will cherish them, but they won't use something old, if it is hideous.

"They will have a good stereo even though they drive the least expensive little car. They will have lots of books that are read, not 42-linear feet of books that merely decorate a bookshelf. They buy what appeals to them and not what other people have. They will indulge themselves if the object is worthwhile—they want quality, but they won't spend money foolishly."

The height of sophistication is simplicity, so in a way, the sophisticated market is really going grass-roots.

But even the establishment is changing and perhaps it always wanted to, but couldn't get out of the rut as young people have, McCarty says. Status symbols are being shelved in California, Florida and New York, he has noted. People have new values about their home and its relationship to the family.

And when they decorate a second time around, they adopt a new viewpoint, he explains. They decide how they are going to live in the room and they choose furnishings that fulfill the function.

Before a room is redecorated, McCarty says everything should be taken out of it. That way, he points out, it can be seen in a new light. "You may decide to recolor your furniture, and perhaps you will use a different wall background. You may wish to make the room larger with mirrors," he says.

McCarty is a slim, gangling 6-foot-5, who looks far younger than he is. He grew up in Miami and lived in Korea and Okinawa when his architect-father was stationed there in the Air Force. In 1963, he went to England to work with David Hicks, well-known designer. In addition to designing furnishings, he has decorated many homes including "a bit of the peerage," he says.

He also studied architecture at the University of Pennsylvania, and worked as a draftsman for the Philadelphia Planning Commission. That knowledge was utilized in the design of his award-winning rooms for the David Rutherford of London. He updated one large traditional room in their residence with concave plastic columns that gave better proportion to the old English room. He stippled the walls in dark green, navy blue and pinky beige effects that emphasized the periphery of white columns and brought out the full beauty of the antiques, he says.

Husband Gone And Now She's Forgotten

By Abigail Van Buren

(c 1971 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: I am a widow. My husband was well-liked in this community and had many friends.

What I want to know is, where are all those kind people who came to his funeral? There, they embraced me and said, "We'll call you. We will have you over. Don't worry, we will look after you." I haven't heard a word from these people since then.

I have actually picked up my telephone to see if it was out of order. I feel so lonely and depressed. It's hard enough to lose a wonderful man, but when everyone else forgets you, it's unbearable.

I am not an old frump. I am 57, in good health and am considered intelligent and attractive. I was left fairly well off. So what is wrong with me? LONELY

DEAR LONELY: I don't know, but if I were you, wouldn't sit home wondering if my phone was out of order. I don't want to sound like a broken record, but the only sure cure for loneliness is to quit feeling sorry for yourself and to get involved in something worthwhile. A long list of worthy causes is screaming for volunteers.

Mental health, crippled children, cancer, heart, Red Cross, Goodwill, church auxiliaries, political groups, youth organizations, to name only a few. Now, aren't you ashamed that you didn't think of it yourself?

DEAR ABBY: I have been dating a divorced woman for two years but have not committed myself to marriage. She has a 16-year-old daughter living with her. On occasion I have been invited to remain overnight in the mother's room. I understand that the subject has been discussed with the daughter, who approves, but I don't. I would appreciate your comment. PUZZLED

DEAR PUZZLED: I'm with you.

DEAR ABBY: Please tell HEARTBROKEN BOY that his rabbi probably knows all about his father and his secretary. My own dad gets up at daybreak to meet his secretary before work. They have been seen sneaking around together.

You were right to say the father may have "problems." Our rabbi says Dad is "sick" and should be pitied, not despised because he is destroying his marriage and is setting a bad example for his children. Can sex be that important? ANOTHER DISGUSTED SON

DEAR SON: To some, it can. Unfortunately.

DEAR ABBY: That letter from "Brokenhearted Boy" took me back a lot of years. When I was 12 years old my mother ran a rooming house and my father worked nights. One day I came home early from school because I wasn't feeling well. When I opened the kitchen door I found my beautiful mother in the arms of a man who rented a room at our place. They were in the midst of such a passionate embrace they didn't even hear me come in.

My mother was 28 then. She explained that she and the roomer were "in love," but as young and inexperienced as I was, I knew it was wrong. I demanded that my mother ask the roomer to move out of our house. She did, that very day. And that's the last I ever saw of him. SENIOR CITIZEN lucky enough to be able to have children, but who don't have love enough in their hearts to give them.

DEAR ABBY: This is an open letter to those parents

Abby, my husband and I have been on the waiting list to adopt a baby for a year and a half, and they are hard to get.

Many people keep babies they don't really want because of outside pressure from friends and relatives. These children grow up without knowing love and a good family life. Isn't it much better to give the child to some adoptive parents who desperately want a child than to raise it in an atmosphere where it is neither wanted nor loved?

Maybe this letter will show people that everyone isn't cut out to be a parent, even if they are able to bear children. And it is much more humane to give a child away than to keep it and raise it unloved.

—WAITING IN ANCHORAGE

DEAR WAITING: There are plenty of babies who desperately need love and a good home. They are not all pink and white, but they are no less deserving, and they are available. Think about it.

How Best To Attain The Goal

East Carolina University and officials from the UNC School of Medicine have presented to Gov. Scott the results of their study concerning the feasibility of a one year medical program at ECU.

Right To Know Approach Used

By BRYAN HAISLIP
RALEIGH — Chances are brightest ever for enactment of a broad North Carolina law requiring governmental bodies to conduct business, in meetings open to the public.

McGeachy presided Wednesday (April 28) for a public hearing on the open meetings bill which already has passed the House. The case for news media access to proceedings of government boards and agencies was presented by the North Carolina Press Association, through its Legislative Chairman, Editor Howard White of the Burlington Times-News; and its Legal Counsel, William C. Lassiter of Raleigh.

Often in the past the issue has resolved itself into a press-politician hassle; legislators assumed the proposal sought special consideration for news reporters.

McGeachy said other exemptions are now unlikely. For example, an exclusion for Council of State meetings may be written into the bill, he said.

Press resistance to such limitations helped defeat similar legislation four years ago; some editors expressed the view that exemptions had weakened the law to the point where it should be killed outright and legislators obliged.

This time a more amenable attitude prevails, and the press association would be expected to accept a law even if it did not fit its preferences in all details.

Cordial press-legislative relations thus far into the 1971 session doubtless will work in favor of the bill. Only one incident has threatened harmony. House Democrats in caucus discovered in the room a tape recorder in operation under a pile of newspapers. Speaker Phil Godwin was incensed, confiscated the tape, and demanded an explanation.

Prospective candidates for '72 races in the Senate may improve chances for the bill. Certainly, none of them will want to offend the fourth estate on the eve of a statewide campaign effort.

The Governor's position, spelled out in a letter to Senator McGeachy last week, harks back to his own campaign stand in favor of ending secrecy in government.

Scott made it clear his espousal of the law was based on principle and indicated no backing down from past criticism of the press.

Such criticism, which understandably is held by an increasing number of people these days, should not be the basis for opposing the passage of this legislation," he said.

The fundamental, essential and far-reaching concept of the 'right to know' by our citizens is much more vital to a true democracy, and to the progress of our state and nation, than the sometimes failure of the news media to understand or to 'know what is right.'"

Gov. Scott quoted the North Carolina Constitution: "The freedom of the press is one of the great bulwarks of liberty, and therefore ought never to be restrained, but every individual shall be held responsible for the abuse of the same."

"I'm afraid both government and the news media are guilty of violating this provision of our Constitution," he said.

"Let us in government correct at least our part of this violation."

"We can only hope that the news media will attempt to correct theirs."

As Dr. Edwin Monroe said following the meeting, it was held "to decide what is the best start for the ECU program. It wasn't a matter of something or nothing, but of which is best."

Observers expect UNC to release a report this week saying that, while the one year program at ECU is feasible, a similar program at N. C. State can be done cheaper. This, however, is beside the point so far as East Carolina is concerned. Supporters of the ECU School of Medicine feel that the institution can do a great deal to alleviate the critical shortage of medical doctors in the east by getting the school underway. Gov. Scott has agreed with this and he has said a four year medical program should be ECU's long range goal.

What the state should be looking at at this point is how to best lay the groundwork for a full four year School of Medicine at ECU. If the one year program is the most direct route to this goal then that is the way we should go. On the other hand, if the two year school is the more feasible way to build toward a full medical school, then North Carolina should have no hesitation in proceeding with this immediately.

We are still inclined to feel that the two year school is the most direct route toward accomplishing what Gov. Scott has outlined as the goal for East Carolina University. Particularly do we believe this in view of the fact there is some indication that powerful forces are still seeking to block the development of medical education at ECU.

If we are to avoid a medical catastrophe in Eastern North Carolina, a medical school at ECU must be developed. The need is so great that there is really nothing else to decide. The only question is how to best develop the four year school in the most rapid way.

Housing Fair Results Indicate Real Success

Last week's housing fair held in Cannon's Warehouse seems to have been quite a success.

Pitt Extension Chairman Edwin L. Yancey reported that attendance at the three day fair was 16-18,000 people.

The visitors saw some impressive exhibits placed in the warehouse by businesses and organizations interested in the housing field.

It may be some years before the fair is held here again, but certainly the hard work done by so many people has made this one a success.

Mills Plans Spread $$$

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — What was intended as a grand national strategy session of the Democratic party last Thursday degenerated into an angry confrontation between two elements of the party that seldom see each other: Congressional leaders and big city mayors.

Much to the delight of the White House, the unprecedented meeting did not unveil a Democratic alternative to President Nixon's revenue-sharing program. Rather, the mayors were outraged by adamant opposition to revenue-sharing from Congressional leaders. Affirming their own support for revenue-sharing, red-faced mayors excitedly warned they were being read out of the Democratic party.

When it was over, the mayors called on Democratic National Chairman Lawrence F. O'Brien (who presided over Thursday's session on Capitol Hill) to call another such meeting a month hence. But an encore may not do much more than lower their voices. On the key issue of revenue-sharing, the mayors remain isolated from the Democratic mainstream.

Thursday's session grew out of O'Brien's efforts to evolve common party strategy, meeting first last month with senior Congressional Democrats quickly followed by a session with Democratic Governors. O'Brien wanted to bring Congressional leaders and Governors into session with the mayors. On Monday morning, O'Brien conferred for two hours with Rep. Wilbur D. Mills of Arkansas, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, about alternatives to Nixon programs to be presented Thursday afternoon.

Then for two hours on Thursday, the alternatives were presented without a word of dissent: unfreezing Federal grants frozen by Mr. Nixon, expanded summer employment, public employment and public works, partial Federal takeover of welfare. All this would help bail out the states, and the five Democratic Governors representing their colleagues beamed approval. But the five Democratic mayors representing their colleagues did a slow burn as they waited for the one item they really wanted: revenue-sharing, last on the agenda.

By the time the meeting got around to that item, bells were ringing for roll calls and Congressional leaders were drifting away. Mills, normally all Southern charm and tact, took less than 10 minutes and was uncharacteristically blunt.

Mills informed the mayors that he and the Congress were adamant: there would be no revenue-sharing. "But you will get money, m-o-n-e-y," he added. "The name of the game is money." He conceded that his partial Federal takeover of welfare would help the states, not the cities. So, Mills continued, there would be cold cash passed for the cities though he could not now give details. The chairman then left for (Continued On Page 5)

Strength For Today

A GOD-GIVEN GIFT

Are you capable of being angry?

"Oh, yes," you say. "You should see me when I get mad. Boy, do I blow up!" Probably you are mad (which means insane), but are you angry? Or are you just blowing off steam? Or are you only hostile and resentful?

The Bible speaks often of our Lord's anger. It was part of his perfect nature. Never once was he angry at anyone for what that person did to him. They railed on him and he answered not a word. They nailed him to a cross and he said, "Father forgive them, for they know not what they do."

He was frequently angry.

but always against men's cruel narrowness and against the heartlessness with which they treated their fellows. His anger was his flaming rebuke to selfishness, cruelty and a flagrant disregard of human rights.

So we should ask ourselves, should we not, whether we are really capable of anger. The capacity of anger is a gift of God. Hostility, resentment and the uninhibited manner in which we lunge at other people's throats is for the most part not anger at all but is the result of our frustration, our selfishness and our lack of love.

The Christian word on this subject is: "Be angry and sin not."

Ending With A Whimper

WASHINGTON — The world will not end with a bang or a whimper. It will probably end with a poll. Americans are being polled to death at the moment and you can't leave your house without someone asking how you feel about something.

The other day I had to fly up to New York. As I adjusted my seat and got ready to snooze, the stewardess handed me a questionnaire. "Would you mind filling this out for our airline?" I looked at the questions. "Are you happy with our service?" "How many drinks did you buy?" "What is your color preference for our baggage racks?" "Why did you choose to fly this airline?"

I dutifully filled out the questionnaire and went to my hotel. After checking into the room I found a questionnaire on the nightstand.

"The management would be grateful if you will fill out the following: Did you find the room made up when you checked in? Were there enough towels in the bathroom? Wash cloths? How often do you plan to take a bath during your stay?" And so on and so forth.

I canceled my lunch so I could fill out the question-

Other Editors Say Cautious Optimism

(Henderson Dispatch)

Early as it may seem in the spring, another flue-cured tobacco growing season has begun. Reports from the Georgia-Florida belt say transplanting in that region is virtually completed, and growers are talking with cautious optimism about prospects for a profitable crop year, barring unforeseen obstacles.

The possibilities of drought, flood, hail or other natural disasters are always to be considered. These might be called short-term problems, because until the past two or three years farmers could usually look ahead with the hope of making up "next year" for losses. But anti-smoking campaigns have altered the picture drastically.

This year will see the first grower sales of tobacco since cigarette commercials were barred from television, where manufacturers had been spending millions of dollars a year to promote their respective products. Cigarette sales have continued to increase slightly, but long-term future prospects are uncertain, to say the least.

A spokesman for Georgia-Florida growers was quoted as saying farmers in his belt generally were not seriously worried about the ad ban on TV hurting tobacco sales, but were much more concerned about groups and individuals who would outlaw the entire production and sale of tobacco products. Such groups do exist, with connections in Congress, even though they still lack documented proof of any effects of tobacco on human health.

It cannot be denied that thousands of former cigarette smokers have given up use of tobacco, some on the advice of their own physicians and others as result of anti-smoking campaigns. If researchers ever find conclusive evidence that tobacco causes cancer, the harmful element will have to be eliminated or the entire industry will be doomed. Meanwhile, each new growing season brings a certain amount of optimism from an economic viewpoint.

In a few weeks transplanting will be well under way in Vance and other Middle Belt counties, and by late July growers in this vicinity will be looking to the first Georgia-Florida sales for an indication of the demand and prices to be expected here later. The annual cycle has begun, and for another season, at least, the business outlook is promising.

naire honestly. After turning it over to the manager I went out to hail a taxi. A pretty girl in a mini skirt with a clipboard came up and said, "Would you answer a few questions for a survey our company is doing on New York tourism?"

"I'm very late," I pleaded. "It will only take a moment. How long have you been waiting for a taxi?"

"Just a few moments. There's one," I said. "Please, sir. I still have some questions to ask you."

"Hurry," I pleaded. "Why did you come to New York?"

"For meetings," I said anxiously. "Then not for pleasure?"

"Well, I'm hoping to get some pleasure in, but I can't until I find out what they tell me at the meetings. There goes another taxi."

She stopped me from hailing it and continued. "What irks you the most about New York City?"

Fatally Foolish Duck

By PIERCE LEHMBECK
SOUTH EGREMONT, Mass. (AP) — Someone ran over Peg-leg the other day and there's a void in our barnyard. The kids don't know it yet. But they will soon, when the meadow becons and Peg-leg isn't there to soar ahead of them as they race to the tree-line.

Peg-leg, you see, was a duck, a Merganser, we think. And she was most unusual—delightfully mischievous, inspirationally courageous and, it appears, fatally foolish.

She wasn't always called Peg-leg. For a long time it was just plain Duck. The name-change came after we found her one wintry morning leaning against the side of the house, her webbed feet so badly frosted that they fell off within a few days.

That left her with just the stumps of her legs to get around on. It was heart-rending to watch her take the first painful steps on those legs, after we'd nursed her back to good health. But little by little they toughened and she could wobble along with the best of them. She was a little sower in the water, but that didn't seem to bother her.

It affected her flying, too. Instead of taking a running start and soaring off to the housetop, she'd stand in one place and flap her wings furiously until she rose like a helicopter.

It was Peg-leg's mischievousness that endeared her most. You knew she was contemplating mischief when she'd begin quacking softly, raise the scruff of her neck and waggle her tail feathers.

And if there was cat food or dog food to be had, Peg-leg would pass up her grain. At feeding time we'd have to set up a duck lane to make certain the other animals didn't go hungry.

Peg-leg should have known to stay out of that lane. A winter ago, she disappeared during a snowstorm and we figured she'd simply had enough of Berkshire winter and gone South.

Then came a telephone call and a man asked: "Lady, you (Continued on page 5)

Preparing For New Youth Plays

By ELMER ROESSNER
The younger generation have developed a new way of twisting the Establishment's tail. It is to harass corporations' annual meetings.

Around the turn of the century, corporation meetings were closed affairs. They were open only to stockholders: small stockholders got only scant notices of the meetings; meetings were often held out of town, sometimes in inaccessible locations.

Then a newspaperman got an idea. He saved his money and began buying single shares of stock in important corporations. He would appear at a stockholders' meeting carrying a share of stock and identification, sit through the meeting and then write a detailed report for his paper.

As his collection of single shares increased, other reporters, sometimes with the help of their papers, did the same thing. And this revolutionized the annual meeting. The New Meeting Corporation directors, faced with the fact that they could not conduct their meetings in secret, turned them into propaganda shows.

ELMER ROESSNER

Stockholders were urged to attend, the famous box lunches appeared, so did dazzling charts and projections.

Presidents and chairmen made speeches, handing out copies to the press, and somehow or other some stockholders would arise and ask just the right questions to enable the chiefs to give glowing accounts of their stewardship and their plans for increasing earnings.

Armed with single shares of stock, or even with the proxy of a friend, they rose with barbed questions.

Executives denounced them as publicity seekers—they did make many front pages—but they winced when questions forced confessions of faults or omissions. And although these questioners rarely got credit, management often adopted the very reforms the questioners had demanded.

The New Breed
Now a kind of objector is making an appearance. Some are just anti-Establishment; others are members of the New Left; some are anti-war; some are Nader disciples, and some just want to raise a little hell.

They not only equip themselves with shares, but they also propose policies and compel corporations to include them on proxy solicitations, and bring them to a vote at the meetings. A study of the annual meetings of 17 major corporations by the Conference Board indicates that there will be an increase in these more sophisticated tactics this year. While companies do not like the injection of political and social proposals, they have to follow the law and submit legally raised proposals.

The Conference Board study showed that tactics companies felt proved effective last year were: patient and thoughtful response to protesters' charges, but prompt and firm action in removing unruly persons; adhering to the meeting agenda and channeling protest into the general discussion period at the end of the meeting; presenting the company's record of accomplishment in areas of expected protest; discretion in restricting discussion of political issues and matters of government policy, especially the Vietnam War.

Alex Holton Jr. Is Festival Winner

Alex Holton, Jr., senior of New Bern High School, and son of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Holton, Sr., was first place winner in the Orchestral Music Division at the State Fine Art Festival held in Greensboro under the sponsorship of the North Carolina Federation of Women's Clubs.

The senior Holton is manager of the Greenville plant of Mayola Milk and Ice Cream Company. He said his son plans to enter the School of Music at East Carolina University following graduation from the New Bern High School.

At the Fine Arts Festival, Alex was accompanied by Gregory Bell on the piano. Alex also appeared in a special program of music at the Centenary United Methodist Church in New Bern recently, where he played two Henry Purcell trumpet compositions, "Trumpet Voluntary" and "Trumpet Time."

The young musician was invited to perform at the Wilmington Azalea Festival as a featured performer. "He was unable to accept the invitation," his father noted, "because he works at night for Radio Station WHIT in New Bern, where he operates the computer."

lose a duck? We got one over here that's eating us out of chicken noodle soup."

As it turned out, Peg-leg had been hit by the town snow plow and knocked cold. The driver had picked her up and had taken her to the road department garage, where he nursed her back to health.

There was no snowstorm to blame the day Peg-leg was killed.

It was a clear warm day when you could see the mountain tops.

Perhaps that's one of the sadder aspects of the whole thing. There'll be other Peg-legs. But it's possible there'll never be another country lane that a duck can safely cross. That apparently belongs to another era.

trying to hail a taxi."

"I have only 20 more questions to ask, sir. When you walk around New York, do you look in the shop windows?" And so on and so forth.

I finally got rid of her, but there were no taxis in sight so I had to walk to my appointment. Ten blocks later I was stopped by a man with a briefcase who said, "I beg your pardon, but could you tell me if you think Mayor Lindsay is doing better, doing worse or holding his own in New York City?"

"I don't know. I'm a stranger here. I live in Washington."

"Washington?" He took another poll out of his briefcase. "Do you think President Nixon is doing better, doing worse or holding his own?"

"What gives?" I asked. "First you ask me about Lindsay, then Nixon?"

"Don't tell anyone," he said. "But I'm moonlighting and working for two political pollsters at the same time."

I tried to get around him but he blocked my path. "Look, if you don't want to talk about politics, I'm also doing a survey for a market research company on chocolate-flavored cigars."

I started to run down the street and he followed me so I sought sanctuary in a church on Fifth Avenue.

The service has just finished and a minister handed me a mimeographed sheet of paper which said "In order to make our afternoon services more relevant would you kindly tell us whether you were: (A) Emotionally involved. (B) Spiritually fulfilled. (C) Satisfied with the musical number selected by our organist. (D) Did you have a good view of the altar?"

I filled it out and left. The man with the briefcase was standing in front of the church. "How about giving me your thoughts on hot pants?"

the House floor, not to return.

The mayors were bug-eyed with anger. They felt they had been treated with condescension by the party's Congressional barons all afternoon and then had been handed marching orders.

Mayor Kevin White of Boston protested that he was just as adamant for revenue-sharing as Mills was against it. "The mayors will not go along with the Democratic party if the big cities are disregarded," he warned.

Other Congressional leaders shot back that they were worried the Nixon plan would pour no-strings-attached revenue into frivolous big-city projects and encourage insatiable demands by municipal employee unions.

That triggered Mayor Henry Maier of Milwaukee into a rage. "You don't have to tell me how to run my city," he shouted at Congressional barons not accustomed to being shouted at. "You don't have to tell me how to conduct my labor negotiations." Maier's outrage was fully shared by three other mayors present: Wesley Uhlman of Seattle, Carl Stokes of Cleveland, and James Tate of Philadelphia.

Moreover, three Governors — Robert Scott of North Carolina, Marvin Mandel of Maryland, and Calvin Rampton of Utah — gave nominal support to revenue-sharing, although their backing had none of the urgency of the mayors. Gov. John J. Gilligan of Ohio indicated some agreement with Congressional apprehensions, remarking that revenue-sharing funds for Cincinnati might be funneled into the new municipal stadium.

Thus, the mayors are temporarily isolated in their own party, unwilling to give President Nixon too much support but desperately eager for Congress to pass his proposal.

The 5,400 windows at United Nations headquarters require six to eight full-time window-washers.

BUSINESS CONSULTING

Political Forum

The four candidates for mayor and the 16 candidates for city councilmen will meet the public Thursday night at 8:00 p.m. in a program sponsored by the Greenville League of Women Voters. The forum, for which all candidates have expressed a willingness to appear, is taking place in the Fellowship Hall of Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church. The Greene Street entrance will be open for persons attending.

Mrs. Philip Clark, president of the league, will be moderator. Timekeeper is to be Mrs. Peggy Hersey. Each candidate will be limited to four minutes in which to present his views or make statements, followed by four minutes of question and answers from the audience.

Members of the Girl Scouts of America will assist in seating spectators and giving out copies of the candidate questionnaire printed by the League of Women Voters based on responses from the candidates.

Following the forum, Mrs. Clark said that plans were to have a coffee hour that would provide persons attending an opportunity to speak to the candidates individually and informally.

May Is Medic Alert Month

The month of May has been proclaimed by Greenville Mayor Frank M. Wooten Jr. and the Pitt County Board of Commissioners as "Medic Alert Month."

Sponsored by the Pitt County Association of Life Underwriters, "Medic Alert Month" is designed to make people more aware of the Medic Alert emblem and the protection it affords people with hidden medical problems.

According to Kenneth Barnes, project chairman, each emblem worn by these people has their specific medical problem engraved on the back alerting physicians and passersby to an accident victim's medical situation.

It was noted that over 340,000 Americans with medical problems and acute allergies are now wearing the Medic Alert bracelet or necklace.

The Medic Alert Foundation International, headquartered in Turlock, Calif., is a charitable, non-profit organization with the endorsement of numerous national medical associations. In addition to the issuance of the medical identification bracelets, the Foundation keeps medical records of its members in a central file in California. Information on these files is available on a 24-hour collect call basis to physicians and other authorized personnel in emergencies.

According to the Foundation, funds received from the purchase of Medic Alert emblems go to pay for the emblems themselves and to help support the educational program.

Barnes said that Medic Alert information booths will be set up in 100 locations throughout the city and county including banks, doctors offices and post offices.

Correctional Ass'n Meets Here Friday

The North Carolina Juvenile Correctional Association will hold its spring meeting in East Carolina University's School of Nursing Auditorium Friday.

C. O. Williamson of the Law and Order Division of the N. C. Department of Local Affairs will be the main speaker. He will deal with "Juvenile Planning for North Carolina and Its Implementation."

Also on the program will be Dr. Malene Irons, Mrs. Patricia Adams, and Mrs. Edna Hadley, all of the ECU Development Evaluation Clinic; Capt. Paul Tromboli, juvenile police officer of the Kinston Police Department; the Hon. Herbert O. Phillips II, Judge of the N. C. Third Judicial District Court, and Mrs. Robin Peacock of the N. C. Department of Social Services.

Dr. Leo Jenkins will welcome the group and the ECU School of Music will provide entertainment at the luncheon to be held in South Cafeteria.

The business session will be presided over by T. Wade Bunting, director of the Guilford County Detention Home, who is president of the Association.

This will be the first time the 200-member statewide Association has met east of Raleigh, according to Henry Cox, chief juvenile probation officer for Pitt County, who is a director of the Association. The Association is composed of people who work with children in trouble — social workers, probation officers, guidance counselors, school principals, juvenile court judges, and administrators of juvenile correctional schools. All interested persons are invited, Cox said.

Arkansas Has Native Diamond

MURFREESBORO, Ark. (AP) — In the kimberlite soil at two locations near Murfreesboro, one may find the only diamonds native to North America.

The gems generally are of industrial grade, but some are better, including a find by a Dallas, Tex., woman.

Her stone, dubbed the "Star of Arkansas," has been valued at $1 million.

The color of the brook trout usually varies with its habitat.

Boneless vs. bone-in meats

A 6-lb. bone-in rib roast yields only about 3-lbs. of boneless cooked meat. Often, less wasteful boneless roasts costing more per lb. are more economical.

PERHAPS A CENTURY? . . . The tangled wisteria vine in this photograph is at least 85 years old and may even have reached the century point. Located at the home of Mrs. Lena T. Tyson at 415 West Fourth Street, the old vine has claimed a large tree as its own, climbing and twisting to the very top, where new shoots reach out into the air. (Reflector Staff Photo)

Rambling Old Wisteria May Be A Century Old

By JERRY RAYNOR
There's one old huge, rambling wisteria in Greenville that may be approaching the century mark. At 415 West Fourth Street, the aged vine twists from the earth by the front porch of the home of Mrs. Lena T. Tyson. Long years ago the main stem reached for a nearby tree to begin its climb over the decades. Together the vine and the tree have matured, until today it is difficult to tell where one begins and the other ends.
"I've traced the history of the vine back to at least 85 years," Mrs. Tyson said. "I came here in 1915. This was originally the Latham property. He was a relative of Colonel Harry Skinner, who lived in a big house across the street."
Mrs. Tyson pointed to a vacant lot where the Colonel Skinner house stood. "It was one of the fine old houses in this neighborhood."
The wisteria, Mrs. Tyson commented, "has withstood times of being battered by hurricanes and ice storms, which at times practically ruined it." "But," she smiled, "it always managed to come back and hold its own."
The vine to Mrs. Tyson is more than just an ornamental flowering climbing plant. "My five children grew up playing in and around the vine," she said, "and so it has many memories for me."
Mrs. Tyson, a florist, says "the wisteria is such a lovely thing in bloom. It doesn't last long, but in good flowering years

Predicts Rise In U.S. Export

NEW YORK (AP) — Continued expansion of U.S. exports to Latin America was forecast by Harold B. Scott, Director of the Bureau of International Commerce, U.S. Department of Commerce. Growth in export trade to Latin America, he said, would probably be more modest than the 15 per cent increase between 1969 and 1970, when exports grew to $6.4 billion.

Oysters May Be Tumor-Fighters

LONDON (AP) — Scientists at Aberdeen University hunting for drugs and antibiotics in sea creatures say the oyster may contain tumor-fighting chemicals. Mollusks, crabs, fish and protozoa also are being screened for use in human medicine.

Peonies To Be Sold Saturday

In the meantime, tickets for collection on this day may be purchased from any PTA or Third Street staff member. "These flowers will make a fine Mother's Day gift or they would be appropriate for church or for your own home or that of a shut-in friend," Third Street principal, Robert E. Stewart, said. "They will come with buds closed ready to open within 24 hours after being put in water. This is the annual fund-raising project of the Third Street PTA. The cost of a dozen peonies is $5

RALEIGH (AP) — (NCDA)
—The North Carolina hen market today is steady with live supplies generally adequate for a fair buying interest. Too few sales reported to quote prices.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices rose moderately today against a backdrop of higher first-quarter earnings reports. Trading was very heavy.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 2.18 points at 949.27. Advances on the New York Stock Exchange led declines by nearly 2 to 1.

Gains were scored by motors, farm implements, mail order, retail and glamour stocks. Rubber issues and airline stocks were lower. All other groups were mixed. The advance in auto stocks followed reports of sharply higher first-quarter earnings by the so-called Big Three manufacturers in that industry. General Motors Corp., the largest automaker, reported Tuesday a 75 per cent increase in first-quarter earnings over a year earlier. The issue was up 1 1/2 at 89 3/4.

Several steel stocks were higher after a report Tuesday of higher quarterly net income by the two largest steelmakers, United States Steel Corp. and Bethlehem Steel Corp. Prices of steel issues included Bethlehem, up 3/4 at 24 1/4; U.S. Steel, up 3/4 at 35 1/4; and Jones & Laughlin, up 1/4 at 17 3/4.

The decline in prices of airlines stocks followed a sharp rise in that group Tuesday.

Analysts said the market was benefiting from earnings reports and from Nixon administration statements that the economy is advancing well with no further stimulation needed. The Associated Press 60-stock average rose 1.4 to 333.9. Industrials were up 1.8, rails were up 1.3, and utilities were up .3.

Bill Introduced
RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina counties would be permitted to issue tax-exempt bonds for industrial plants and antipollution facilities under a bill introduced in the House Tuesday.

Rep. William R. Robertson Jr., D-Beaufort, introduced the bill designed to get around constitutional defects which caused the State Supreme Court to strike down an earlier industrial bond law.

The bill seeks to link the new interest in pollution control with the hopes of under-developed counties that industry can be lured by government financed facilities.

PTI Library Value Stressed In Tours

Tours to promote and publicize resources of the Pitt Technical Institute Library were provided last week by the PTI Library staff.

Open house was held in the library Wednesday evening, Thursday morning, and Thursday evening, Mrs. Barbara Clark, librarian, said. The varied times were chosen to give different groups of students, faculty, and staff opportunities to view the resources, she said. Members of Monday-Wednesday evening classes numbered about 175; Tuesday-Thursday evening classes, 125; and day classes, 250. On display were non-book resources available to instructors and students.

Planning the exhibit and guiding tours were Mrs. Clark; assistant librarians, Mrs. Jane Smith and Mrs. Doris Phelps; and library assistant, Mrs. Miriam Kelsey.

The Pitt Tech library has recently been moved to spacious quarters on the third floor of the new classroom building. Its technically, vocationally oriented materials are available to the public. Its hours are Monday through Thursday from 8 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. and Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Mrs. Clark said.

of the North Carolina residents who applied were turned away because of lack of room.

"The second benefit is that the school will attract doctors into the state and particularly into the East," he added. "This magnetic effect of medical schools for doctors is well-known."

Saying that there are no guarantees that two-year school graduates would practice in the state or in our areas, Dr. Jenkins said, "I do know that our present schools . . . cannot meet the demand for more doctors."

"Even if only one-half or less return home to practice we will be much better off than we will if the present trend to highly specialized metropolitan practice of our present medical school graduates continues," the president asserted.

Dr. Jenkins added that " . . . whether we begin with one-year or two-years the state is committed to the eventual development of a second state-supported complete medical school."

Everglades' Wildlife Endangered By Drought

By NICK TATRO Associated Press Writer MIAMI (AP) — Massive fish kills and persistent ground fires threatening other wildlife were reported today throughout the vast Florida Everglades, caught tight in the grip of a six-month drought. While officials said the fish kill was the most graphic illustration of the drought's effects on wildlife, they said the most serious problem was fires burning uncontrolled through the peat-like top soil of the Everglades.

Called muck, it covers the Everglades in depths ranging from four to five feet. The fires burn through it in ragged lines, often disappearing underground only to break through to the surface again.

"Wildlife has experienced drought for thousands of years and is fairly adaptable," Maj. Lou Gainey of the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission said Tuesday.

"But if this drought goes on long enough and muck fires lower the level of this soil, the depth of the water will drop and the ecological balance will be upset."

Gainey and Robert Miller of the Florida Division of Forestry said the smoldering fires will destroy shelter for birds and other wildlife, leaving only barren, charred ground.

More than a half million acres of brush and grass have been burned over this year. In the past six months, South Florida has received only 5.05 inches of rain, compared with an average 19.76 inches.

Federal weather scientists were grounded for the second day today after two cloud seeding airplanes took a pounding in Monday missions. They produced 2.28 inches of rain. A few light showers in the Everglades were reported Tuesday.

Dr. Aldridge To Raleigh Meeting

Dr. M. W. Aldridge of Greenville will take part in exposing the North Carolina Citizens' Committee for Dental Health and its guests to new ideas on preventive dentistry at a meeting in Raleigh Thursday and Friday.

His specific subject, to be presented Thursday evening, will be "Plaque Control — North Carolina's New Preventive Weapon." Plaque is bacterial buildup on the surface of a tooth.

"To control it is to preserve the health of teeth and gums and that's what preventive dentistry is all about," Dr. Aldridge said.

"The thrust of the meeting is to get the General Assembly to endorse and finance an educational program on preventive dentistry in North Carolina's public schools," he said.

Grand Jury To Consider

DURHAM (AP) — Solicitor Anthony Brannon says he will let the Durham County grand jury consider a convict's assertion that Charles Barbour accepted a $500 gift while he was executive director of the state Democratic party.

Barbour, now director of the state Travel and Promotion Division, says he accepted the check as a donation to the party, and deposited it in the party's account.

He says he did no favors for Robert Castleberry, 53, who had been paroled at the time the money changed hands and had sought Barbour's help in getting permission to visit outside the state.

The grand jury is expected to get the case in June. Brannon said Castleberry would testify if he is willing.

No charge must be made to get a case before the grand jury. The jury has the authority to bring an indictment if it sees fit.

Castleberry was paroled last year after serving part of a sentence for accepting a bribe while he was a justice of the peace. He has since been charged in Texas with attempted rape, but that case has not yet been brought to trial. He now is in Central Prison in Raleigh for parole violation.

Aaron Gets 600th Off Perry But Giants Win

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

Records are made to be broken but winning, according to Hank Aaron and Willie Stargell, is the name of the game.

"I was looking forward to hitting it in a winning game," said Aaron after becoming the third player in baseball history to hit 600 home runs. Atlanta, however, lost to San Francisco 6-5 on Willie Mays' 10th-inning single Tuesday night.

"So what did it for me?" asked Stargell after belting his 11th home run of the season in Pittsburgh's 7-5 loss to Los Angeles, wiping out the April record of 10 set in 1969 by Baltimore's Frank Robinson and matched last year by Cincinnati's Tony Perez. "I'd rather have won."

Elsewhere in the National League, the New York Mets edged St. Louis 2-1. Cincinnati trounced San Diego 6-1. Houston nipped Philadelphia 1-0 and the Montreal-Chicago Cubs game was called off due to cold and wet grounds.

American League scores: Baltimore 6, Oakland 2; California 2, Cleveland 1; Milwaukee 4, Boston 2; Washington 2, Minnesota 0; Kansas City 8, Detroit 1 and New York Yankees 6, Chicago White Sox 5 in 12 innings.

Aaron, whose 600 homers trails only Babe Ruth's 714 and Mays 633, started his memorable evening with a run-scoring double in the first inning. It was his 542nd and tied him for eighth place on the all-time list with Harry Heilmann. "I hit it better than the home run," he said, "but I knew it wasn't going out because it wasn't high enough."

The big home run came in the third inning on the first pitch from Gaylord Perry following Ralph Garr's infield singler. The towering drive carried an estimated 350 feet, hitting well up on the wall of the left field stands behind the outfield fence.

"I knew the moment I hit it was gone. It was a high inside fast ball and I was guessing fast ball because he had thrown me several my first time up."

The 37-year-old Aaron isn't thinking about Ruth, though. "My next goal," he said, "is to hit the next one. If I get on a hot streak, the home runs will come."

For the moment, however, he is thinking about Mays, whose game-winning hit followed singles by Hal Lanier and Chris Speier. "Willie spoiled my day," Aaron smiled sadly.

And Mays had some thoughts about Aaron. "It was just another milestone," Willie said. "What's a milestone to him? He's not going to stop there."

Willie McCovey erased Atlanta's lead with a fifth-inning homer and then put the Giants in front with a sacrifice fly in the seventh. Garr, whose consecutive hit streak finally ended at eight, singled home the knatter in the last of the seventh following Marty Perez' triple.

The Dodgers wiped out a 3-0 Pittsburgh lead with four runs in the seventh, including Jim Lefebvre's two-run single, and added three more in the eighth, with Manny Mota contributing a two-run double. Richie Hebner cracked a pinch homer for the Pirates in the eighth and Stargell slammed his record-breaker in the ninth.

Having blasted Bob Gibson Monday night, the Mets snapped Steve Carlton's four-game winning streak Tuesday. They pushed across two runs off the Cardinal left in the third on Tommie Agee's single, Bud Harrelson's double, Lou Brock's error, an infield out and a wild pitch.

Jerry Koonsman, with big assists, from Ken Singleton and Danny Frisella posted his first victory. Singleton threw out the potential tying run at the plate in the third inning and Frisella worked out a bases-loaded situation in the ninth by getting Ted Sizemore to pop out and fanning Joe Hague. Joe Torre of the Cards got three singles and stretched his hitting skien to 21 games.

Cincinnati's Gary Nolan needed help from Clay Carroll in the eighth but also got his first triumph. The only San Diego run came in the first inning on Don Mason's first homer since 1966.

The Reds scored twice in their half of the inning on Lee May's RBI single and a sacrifice fly by Tommy Helms. Johnny Bench stole home and Helms second on a delayed double steal in the third and Pete Rose snapped an 0-for-14 slump with a run-scoring single in the eighth.

Doug Rader's eighth-inning sacrifice fly broke up a scoreless duel between Houston's Larry Dierker and Philly's Jim Bunning. Denis Menke opened the inning with a single, was sacrificed to second and stole third before Rader drove him in. Dierker, 3-0, was touched for six hits and retired Ron Stone for the final out with the bases filled.

Flood Leaves Game; Says It's For Good

By TOM SEPPY
Associated Press Sports Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Curt Flood has quit baseball again.

The once-great player who was talked out of retirement while his $3.1-million suit against baseball was pending, left the Washington Senators unexpectedly Tuesday and was en route to Europe.

The 33-year-old outfielder sent a telegram to Senators owner Robert Short just prior to the Washington-Minneapolis game.

"I tried. A year and one-half is too much. Very serious personal problems mounting. Thanks for your confidence and understanding. Flood."

Short, manager Ted Williams and his teammates said Flood's departure was caused primarily by personal problems and not the poor spring he's had in a baseball uniform.

"I personally feel bad that he's gone," said Williams.

"There wasn't a guy on the club with a better attitude."

Flood quit baseball in 1969 when he was traded from the St. Louis Cardinals, for whom he played 12 seasons, to the Philadelphia Phillies. He refused to report.

He sat out the 1970 season in Copenhagen, Denmark, while suing baseball over its reserve clause which binds a player to one club for life or until he's traded.

After sitting out a year, Short induced him to return to baseball for $110,000. In the meantime, he lost his case in federal court and said he would appeal to the Supreme Court.

It was a difficult spring for Flood, who conceded he had trouble getting back into shape in the glare of unwelcome publicity.

Flood opened in centerfield for the Senators at the start of the season but was lifted twice for defensive purposes—he had won seven Gold Glove awards with St. Louis—before being benched.

He was then taken out of the lineups against right-handed pitchers. His last start was April 20 against the Yankees in New York although he pinchhit twice over the weekend.

Flood had a lifetime average of .293, with 1,854 hits, in 12 years with the Cardinals. He was hitting .200 with seven hits in 35 times at bat in 13 games with Washington this season.

Flood, father of five children, is divorced. He gained some renown as a portrait painter in his last years with the Cardinals but said when he signed with the Senators he was giving up painting to concentrate on baseball.

He reportedly lost money in a restaurant venture in Copenhagen. To recoup those losses and to pay attorneys' fees for his suit against baseball was reasons he signed with the Senators.

Greene Central Falls To Lenoir

WHEAT SWAMP — North Lenoir High School handed Greene Central its first Eastern Plains Conference loss yesterday, nipping the Rams, 5-4.

North Lenoir took the lead in the game in the first inning, scoring a run. Bobby Phillips singled and came around on a double by Cliff Cashwell.

North Lenoir added one more in the fourth. Cashwell walked, stole second and went into third after a fly out. He then scored on an infield out.

Greene Central finally broke the ice in the fifth inning, coming up with two runs to tie it up. Mike Perry reached on a fielder's choice and Danny Whitley singled him in. Bob Scott got another hit, bringing in Whitley with the tying run.

In the sixth, the Rams struck for two more to gain a 4-2 lead. Stevie Williamson singled and Robert Ivey reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Williamson, who had moved to third on an error. Whitley walked, and Scott reached on a fielder's choice. Ron Bowen got a bases-loaded walk to bring in Ivey with the second run.

But North Lenoir then rallied for three in the bottom of the seventh. D. Tripp walked and Leslie Jarman singled. Both advanced on a wild pitch, and scored when Phillips reached on an error. Cashwell was intentionally walked, and Dave Phillips got a single, driving in Bobby Phillips with the winning run.

The Rams, 7-6 overall, are now 6-1 in the conference. They travel to Northern Nash on Friday.

Local Students Named To Bonn Study Center

Dr. Hans Indorf, Coordinator of European Area Studies at East Carolina University, has announced the names of 38 college sophomores and juniors from ECU and other institutions who will study at the ECU Bonn Study Center next year.

The students will begin their academic year at the overseas campus this fall and return after nine months of study in a special curriculum of European studies.

Included in the curriculum are courses in history, business, geography, art, music and political science. Opportunities will be provided for the students to strengthen their knowledge of the German and French languages.

Hans Steineck, a chateau overlooking the Rhine River a few miles from the West German capital, will house living quarters, library facilities and classrooms for the students.

According to Dr. Indorf, all classes will be taught in English, and a number of field trips into European cities will be a major part of the academic program.

The students will depart for Germany by airline from New York September 15.

Faculty for the Bonn campus, selected from the ECU faculty, will be:

Dr. Ralph E. Birchard, geography; Dr. Loren K. Campion, history; Dr. William F. Troutman Jr., political science; Dr. Joseph A. Hill, business; Tran Gordley, art; and Dr. Clyde Hiss, music.

Names, major fields of study, parents' names and hometown addresses of students who will study at ECU's Bonn campus this fall follow:

They'll Provide Music For Sidewalk Art Show

Music will be the handmaiden of art when the sidewalk art show opens at the Greenville Art Center on Friday.

For the first of the two day sidewalk show, three music events have been scheduled, with high school students from both the county and city schools on hand to provide music throughout much of the day.

The Chamber Ensemble of Farmville High School is first on the list, with a performance under the direction of Wilson S. Nichols, Jr., beginning at 11:00 a.m. on the grounds (or porch in event of rain). Nichols said that three male and eight female singers make up the Chamber Ensemble. Selections they plan to present range from popular to folk to classic. These include, the anonymous "Dona Nobis Pacem;" "The Lord Is My Shepherd;" and American folk-song; "Prayer to Jesus" by R. R. Terry, based on a Richard de Castre poem; Holst's "I Vow To Thee, My Country;" and several recent popular songs.

Beginning at 2:00 p.m. Friday afternoon and until 3:00 p.m. the Stage Band of Rose High School will take the spotlight. Under the direction of Tom Smith, the prize winning stage band will present several numbers, including, "Keep the Customers Satisfied;" "Love For Sale;"

and "Alfie." The last of the three events is the appearance at 4:00 p.m. of the Bironandjles, a singing group from Rose High. Among their selections, they plan to sing "Love is Blue;" "Cruel War;" featuring Amy Leggett, soloist; "Leaving On A Jet Plane," with soloists Helen Posey, Gloria Hawley and Mary B. Matney; "What The World Needs To Know Is Love;" "Come Saturday Morning;" "Monday, Monday;" and several others. A couple of duets will be performed by Steve Rogers and Susie Hill.

This is the second year music has been a part of the annual sidewalk art show. "We're delighted to have these young people perform for us," Mrs. Edith Walker, director of the Art Show commented. "It adds so much to the festive atmosphere, and people enjoy it."

Hanes Corp. Is Told Promising Signs In Sight

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — President Gordon Hanes says first-quarter results of the Hanes Corp.—a net loss of $232,000—reflected a marketing situation in the hosiery industry that is "as bad a slump as I have seen in my 30 years in the business."

However, he told the annual meeting of stockholders Tuesday that improvements in March, the last month of the quarter, offer a more promising long-range view. He said the improvements included a profit by the knitwear division, and a "Herculean effort" that enabled the hosiery division "to about break even and to hold inventory and short-term borrowing level."

He also said the corporation is contemplating purchases of low-cost hosiery from an Israeli-French company which has leased manufacturing facilities in Puerto Rico.

Royal Arbiter Bans Hot Pants

LONDON (AP) — The Duke of Norfolk has dashed cold water on plans to allow women wearing hot pants at this year's running of the Royal Ascot.

Ascot officials, who decree what can be worn in front of Queen Elizabeth in the royal enclosure, said hot pants would be acceptable for the mid-June horse race if worn as part of an ensemble.

But the Duke, the Queen's representative, had the last word.

"I wish to make it abundantly clear," he said Tuesday, "that the only form of ladies trousers permitted will be suits with long trousers."

The Duke's family motto, incidentally, is: "Virtue alone is unconquerable."

Scott said a $108,840 allocation will be used to conduct a student health involvement program in the Appalachian area of North Carolina. The other grant, for $78,646, will be used for a demonstration program of youth participation in the Appalachian area.

'Alternative Society' Institutions Are Dependent

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Alternative Society's institutions—free clinics, free universities, free stores—are still young and very dependent on straight society. But they exist, and they serve a large number of disaffected young Americans, as this dispatch, one of a series from the AP Special Assignment Team, discloses.

By KEN HARTNETT
Associated Press Writer
SEATTLE, Wash. (AP) — The house is warm and airy with high ceilings and spacious rooms and a handsomely carved mantelpiece. It was built in another day, perhaps for another kind of doctor, but it is perfect for Allen.

house into a commune—a commune for doctors.
"People are recognizing more and more that to have a new society, you have got to build it," he said, leaning his 6-foot heavily shouldered frame against the mantel.
As he spoke, his hands toyed idly with a half-braided leather belt that dangled from his shoulders at the edge of his flowing black hair.

Allen is hip and 30, an M.D. specializing in internal medicine.
He and two fellow physicians are helping organize Seattle's Country Doctor—a free medical clinic, one of several springing up to join free universities, free stores and other infant institutions of the Alternative

Society—that still wobbling attempt by disaffected young Americans to develop ways to live apart from straight society.
Allen has no interest in money—only in making enough to survive. His main interest is the clinic and leading a professional life not as "an economic machine" but as a human being with "medical knowledge to share."
"The way the arrangement is now, doctors are so incredibly overpaid I could work one day a week as a straight doctor and make around $12,000 to $14,000 a year easily. That's how screwed up things are," he said.

"Clinics are a long way from the answer," he said, "but I do see them as building blocks for a new medical system with free laboratories and free X-ray technicians and free radiologists and free hospitals and free people."

He laughed, a laugh recognizing that the reality of his vision was a long way off.
Doctors like Allen remain rare. As far as he knows, he is the only one of 72 doctors in his graduating class planning to devote his career to free medicine.

The important thing, he said, is the number of like-minded doctors who are coming out of medical schools after him.
Dr. Julius R. Krevans, dean of the University of California Medical Center in San Francisco, said it is too early to tell just how significant that number will be.

But, he said, there is no question that social awareness is quickening among students and faculty members in the nation's medical schools.
"Before this year, there wasn't a single medical collective in this area. Now you have at least three."
The Seattle Clinic, like virtually all the institutions of the Alternative Society, is directly dependent on the larger society.

Allen, for example, was trained at the University of California. The Country Doctor will operate out of an abandoned city-owned firehouse. Contributions will be tax deductible because the clinic will have tax-exempt status as a non profit institution.
Milwaukee's Free Clinic operates in the basement of a Roman Catholic hospital on the East side, close by that city's hip enclave.

The scarcity of doctors to man the free clinics makes continuity in treatment difficult. A young woman, well along in pregnancy, works in a Cambridge movement book store. She praises that city's medical clinic but says her baby will not be delivered by a movement doctor. "I want to be at a hospital where I would have the same doctor for delivery I had all along," she said.

Technical competence—not only in medicine but in auto mechanics—a thinly spread resource in the Alternative Society. Poets abound. Plumbers are scarce.
The People's Free Wheel, a no-charge bus line in Cambridge, Mass., has a disconcerting habit of breaking down as it plies back and forth along Massachusetts Avenue.

The politically minded organizers of the free institutions blame the failures on what they see as the corrupting influence of the larger society—influences that the free institutions are designed to minimize.

But the insulation is far from perfect. The Straight Society is very much a part of the Alternative Society. It supports it.
Rock concerts and people's donations provide some cash and give a sense of community participation. But the hard cash doesn't come from the hip community. It comes from straight people, one way or another.

From the manual "F—the System: How to Live Free in Albuquerque," is an example of how to "rip off":

"One of the best places to eat is your local supermarket. Get a car and start pushing it around. Throw a few things in occasionally for effect. Meanwhile, you can make sandwiches, eat fruit and cookies, and open a tin or two of smoked oysters. When you're full, leave your cart and split."

Naivete plagues some of the Alternative Society's institutions.

Albuquerque hips opened a free store and stocked it with donated clothing, food and household goods. All were welcome to come and take what they needed in exchange for what they could give.

"We had no restrictions on what people could take so they took everything," said a young woman at the store, which is now not so much a store as a store front movement meeting place with bare shelves and a handful of underground newspapers.

Linking the various experiments together within each community and within the nation is an elaborate communications network.

Most major cities and university towns have alternative newspapers, such as the Chicago Seed, the Milwaukee Kaleidoscope, the Great Speckled Bird in Atlanta or Berkeley's Tribe and Barb.

Many operate as collectives. Tasks rotate. Today's editor-in-chief will be next week's paste-up man. Salaries are paid according to need and the availability of funds. The process is often more important than the product, which leans toward unevenness.

Stores of national interest are circulated through one of several "wire services" with the highly ideological Liberation News Service (LNS) of New York the oldest and largest.

The problems in the Alternative Society are endless, but the institutions are new. Few scholars would pin their reputations on predicting their ultimate fate or impact.

Historian Harvey Goldberg of the University of Wisconsin maintains that the counter-culture and its institutions must be viewed as part of an epochal change sweeping American society.

Truths about the society that long have been kept beneath the rug, he said, are now visible. After a decade of protest and organization a new generation is rising deeply aware of the plight of blacks, Chicanos, Indians, women, the poor.

Its members, Goldberg says, start out with a perspective those who came before had to acquire. Consciousness gets raised another notch. The attack on the old institutions escalates. The counter culture grows as the old shared beliefs lose adherents.

"What holds a society together is a certain cement of loyalty," he said, "and I think that's eroded."

Very Encouraging Sign In New Housing Growth

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — One of the most encouraging economic developments in recent weeks has been the rate at which new housing is beginning to rise, after a depression that has left a critical shortage of decent shelter.

The pace of private housing starts is now believed to be approaching 2 million a year—it was 1,918,000 in March—and by all logic should continue growing, now that mortgage money is available again.

Lewis Eaton, president of the U.S. Savings & Loan League, comments that reports from all over the country show "you'd have to go back to pre-inflation years" to find financing opportunities comparable with those of today.

But there is also reason to be concerned.
First, it is estimated that the pace of new construction will have to reach 2.6 million units a year before the nation can begin making headway against the shortage.

Second, the price of new units being erected is rising faster than the incomes of those who wish and need to buy. The same is true for single family dwellings as for rental units.

"If a family earning $15,000 a year is to be categorized as affluent," says Louis E. Fischer, president of Levitt & Sons, Inc., one of the nation's largest builders of single family homes, "then a very small percentage of American families will be owning their own homes in the next few years if rising costs continue."

Years ago, Fischer told a recent meeting of the Conference Board, a family earning that amount could consider itself well off and be able to afford a $60,000 home, plus two cars, a second home and a maid.

"Today $15,000 qualifies a family for only a $30,000 home—and this home is usually 30 miles away from a large downtown metropolitan area, is limited to three bedrooms, one bath, one garage, no air conditioning or basement, and on an 80-foot by 100-foot plot."

How can builders provide homes for $15,000 incomes, he asks when a home that cost $24,000 in 1963 rose to $33,500 in 1970?

Prospects hardly seem to be improving either. "Based on the rising cost of living, this same home can easily soar to over $52,000 by 1980—thereby eliminating even a $15,000-a-year family from being able to live in a three-bedroom house."

One alternative is to rent, of course, but this only delays the day of reckoning, when a family no longer has a choice but must move to larger quarters.

When the family finally does buy, the price penalty will be even greater.

Moreover, the upward pressure continues on apartment rents, and landlords claim they see no end to the increases. The National Association of Real Estate Boards claim that rent increases haven't kept pace with costs.

One of the biggest factors in the bills of apartment house owners result from what they claim are constantly rising turnover rates, evidence of great dissatisfaction among renters.

The solution? You'll hardly find a consensus, but if one is developing at all it is that the techniques of assembly line, mass production and other factory techniques used so effectively in making automobiles, will have to be employed.

Public Outcry Closes Theaters

ANDERSON, Ind. (AP) — Public outcry against X-rated movies has led to orders closing three of Anderson's six theaters and drive-ins, their manager said Monday.

The manager said he can't get enough non-X-rated movies to keep the theaters in operation and that opposition to X-rated movies has been increasing so much he can't show them.

Committee To 'Study' FBI

By JAY PERKINS.
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A committee of educators and three former Justice Department officials, including one-time Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark, says it will conduct an investigation of the FBI's role in American life.

The announcement followed a Nixon administration decision Tuesday to ask the Supreme Court to rule there is no need for prior court approval for wiretapping in domestic national security cases.

And it occurred as the head of the Justice Department's internal security division contended the government has not only a right but an obligation to gather information on groups and individuals it feels are violence prone.

The committee, in a news conference statement, said "It is clear that widespread public concern exists about the lawfulness of some FBI operations and the fairness with which it pursues them."

"Revelations of some of the activities of the bureau in surveillance of private citizens and in what can only be called political intimidation of various individuals and groups has focused attention on the operations of this federal police force," the committee said.

Conducting the study will be the year-old Committee for Public Justice, which includes Clark, former Asst. Atty. Gen. Burke Marshall, Roger Wilkins, a former director of Justice's Community Relations Service, and educators from the Woodrow Wilson School of Princeton University.

Marshall, Wilkins and Duane Lockard of Princeton told the news conference the FBI said they wanted lawyers, prosecutors, police and educators familiar with the agency to participate in the inquiry. They said no one had yet asked FBI director J. Edgar Hoover to participate but an invitation may be issued.

The study will be "a clear, dispassionate review," Wilkins said. He added "Neither Burke nor I want to give the impression that the bureau was just dandy when we were there and it's turned horrible since we left."

Marshall agreed, saying "The bureau may have been on its unmanageable course for several years and this could have been looked at earlier." Clark and Hoover have been at odds recently with the former attorney general calling for the director's resignation and the FBI chief describing his former boss as a "jellyfish," among other things.

Clark headed the Justice Department toward the end of the Johnson administration, the same time period Marshall and Wilkins were in their jobs.

Also Tuesday, Solicitor General Erwin N. Griswold announced the Justice Department will appeal a lower court ruling that would restrict electronic surveillance of citizens in so-called national security cases. Two district courts have ruled for and two against the government's position.

Second Panama Canal Assigned HEW Deputy

By G. C. THELEN Jr.
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon has entrusted the job of winning passage of his No. 1 domestic legislation, welfare reform, to an administration second banana with a golden touch on Capitol Hill.

and now locked in a bitter dispute with the White House over another key Nixon proposal, revenue sharing.

Mills' committee is back at work on the welfare reform bill, which passed the House in the last Congress, but foundered in the Senate. The chairman called Veneman "an extremely able man, a real tactician."

Veneman's standing on Capitol Hill is noteworthy because other administration lobbyists have not won high marks from members of Congress. The undersecretary's willingness to compromise would appear to be the key.

"When he sees the tide running against him he doesn't stand and die at the end of the bridge," said Vail. "If he can get half of what he wants now, he'll take that and come back for the rest later."

That was the case in the last Congress, when Veneman was forced to accept almost a total rewrite of the welfare bill by a hostile Senate Finance Committee. He finally won committee approval, only to see the bill caught in the adjournment crush and never come to a vote.

JOHN C. VENEMAN

The assignment for John C. Veneman, undersecretary of Health, Education and Welfare, casts a rare public spotlight on one of those 11 No. 2 men in Cabinet Departments who share the workload but not the visibility of their bosses.

Veneman, for his part, was virtual co-secretary when his close friend Robert H. Finch headed HEW. Finch engaged Veneman in every problem from the lowliest department personnel squabble to the intra-administration donnybrook over school desegregation policy.

Finch has since moved to the White House staff. The new secretary, Elliot L. Richardson, has narrowed Veneman's assignments to make best use of his deputy's skill as a tactful and effective lobbyist with the Democratic-controlled Congress.

"Jack's not going to like this, but I think he and Wilbur Cohen have a lot in common," said Thomas L. C. Vail, chief counsel of the Senate Finance Committee. The comparison is a compliment. Democrat Cohen, the father of Medicare and HEW Secretary in the late Johnson years, is considered a legislative master.

Veneman, a 45-year-old Peach farmer from Modesto who learned his legislative lessons during seven years in the California assembly, is "a constructive compromiser," said Vail.

The praise from Vail was echoed by Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., chairman of the Ways and Means Committee.

Alumni Will Hear Bubas

Vic Bubas, assistant to the president at Duke University, will speak here Thursday night at a meeting of the Pitt County chapter of the Duke Alumni Association.

According to local alumni, the session will be held at Parker's Barbecue on Memorial Drive. A social hour will begin at 6:15 and dinner will be served at 7 p.m.

Duke alumni, friends or interested persons should contact Mrs. Robert E. Pittman, who is handling arrangements for the meeting, for reservations or information concerning the alumni gathering.

Bubas, for ten years the head basketball coach at Duke and holder of Coach of the Year award in 1963, 64, and 66, joined the University faculty in 1959 after eight years of coaching under the late Everett Case at North Carolina State University.

Justice Dept. Probes Handling Of Wallace Money

By JAMES R. POLK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department, in a move that may spark a political storm, is probing possible income tax violations in the handling of campaign funds by close associates of Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace.

A federal grand jury, aided by two Justice Department experts, is to resume its secret investigation Thursday in Montgomery, Ala., after a two-week recess. Sources say indictments may be handed down soon.

Gerald Wallace, the governor's brother, and Seymour Trammell, Wallace's top financial aide until two years ago, are believed to be central figures in the probe. There has been no indication that Gov. Wallace is directly involved.

The grand jury is digging into campaign donations for both Wallace's third-party run for President in 1968 and his late wife's election as governor in 1966.

The panel already has heard testimony that phony invoices were issued by an advertising agency to big campaign backers in the governor's race. The probe also has focused on presidential race contributions from contractors doing business with the state.

A $25,000 donation from a school textbook supplier is reported to be among the campaign checks under investigation in the 1966 election.

The grand jury probe is also touching on the financial dealings of firms and people linked to state payments for building supplies, liquor sales pier facilities, government bonds and highway contracts.

Wallace, who carried five Southern states in the presidential race, has had no public comment on the investigation.

His brother, Gerald, all but confirmed his own involvement in the probe. Calling the tax investigation a political move, he said in a recent statement: "The only person that President Nixon fears in 1972 is George Wallace. The Nixon forces know they cannot get at George Wallace, so they are attacking his brother."

There has been no indication Gerald Wallace has been called before the grand jury. Trammell is expected to appear when the panel returns Thursday. He declined comment on the probe.

The Justice Department has sent both a top tax prosecutor and a campaign money expert to Montgomery to help guide the probe. And the federal attorney from Alabama assigned to the case flew to Washington for two days of private talks last week.

The grand jury could return tax fraud indictments if it finds advertising invoices were used by contributors to deduct campaign checks as business expenses on income tax returns.

Political contributions are not legally deductible. Federal law also forbids corporate donations to presidential races.

A Mobile, Ala., advertising executive, Charles O. Ditmars, who handled the 1966 campaign of Wallace's first wife, Lurleen, spent almost three hours before the jury when it began its secret sessions April 12.

A source said Ditmars testified he issued invoices "for professional services" to certain campaign donors at Trammell's request. Ditmars is expected to be a government witness if tax indictments are brought.

Various sources close to the grand jury say the investigation has also involved a wide range of state-related businesses:

TEXTBOOKS—Sources said the panel was told another invoice, not linked to Trammell, was issued by Ditmars in 1966 for two checks to his agency totaling $25,000 from Elton B. Stephens of Birmingham, president of EBSO Industries, Inc. The multimillion-dollar firm distributes virtually all of the state-purchased free textbooks to schools throughout Alabama.

DOCKS—Several former officials of the State Board of Docks, which runs the huge port at Mobile, have appeared before the jury for questioning about donations channeled into the 1968 presidential campaign from state contractors. Former docks director Houston Feaster refused comment when asked about reports that he declined to testify.

BOND ISSUES—One report indicates a prominent Alabama attorney on state-issued bonds has been questioned by government investigators concerning whether two checks for five-figure sums given as fees to a former leader of the Alabama Legislature.

BUILDING SUPPLIES—A Montgomery businessman, Warner Mathis, whose firm supplies window frames, sashes and doors to builders, testified before the grand jury for two hours. Questions reportedly touched on a recent $30 million construction program for the state junior colleges.

LIQUOR SALES—One witness from a distillery in a northern state was called into the probe, apparently to be quizzed about an advertising invoice made out for a donation of more than $5,000 to the late Mrs. Wallace's race. In Alabama, the state-runs package stores and handles the wholesale purchase of all liquor, including the drinks eventually sold at bars.

HIGHWAYS—The probe may have revived an old controversy from the first Wallace administration threatened to take away a slice of highway aid because of fees that engineering firms were paying to local agents in getting contracts.

Thorniest Problems Still Await Legislative Action

By MELVIN LANG
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina's legislature, possibly into the second half of its longest session on record, awaits some of its thorniest problems of 1971.

Still to come are such items as insurance reform, legislative redistricting, higher education reorganization and final shaping of the 1971-73 budget.

Legislators freely are predicting it will be mid-July, or possibly a few days earlier, before the session ends.

The assembly has shown signs of gaining speed in recent days, pushing through a controversial anti-shoplifting bill that went back and forth between the houses as amendments were tacked on and then chopped off, and a bill that makes North Carolina the first Southeastern State with a presidential primary that commits delegates to a nominating convention.

Liquor by the drink, apparently killed in the House on a statewide basis, reappeared in the form of a local bill for Moore County. It comes before the Senate Thursday in what one legislator called a test of the "first step" toward legal mixed drinks.

Abortion on demand also died, but the issue remains before the legislature. The House has before it a bill reducing from three to one the number of doctors required to approve an abortion before it can be performed. If it passes the House, the bill still faces the Senate.

Insurance reforms broke into legislative consideration Monday with public release of a study commission's two-year examination of North Carolina's auto insurance programs.

There has been no indication when legislation to implement the commission's recommendations will be introduced, but when it comes fireworks are certain. The commission, among other things, suggested elimination of present auto inurance rates in favor of competitive scales set by the companies, mandatory coverage to protect policy holders against uninsured motorists and drastic changes in provisions for assigned risk policies.

The Warren Commission has yet to report on its study of higher education. There are some reports, as yet unconfirmed, that it will suggest a realignment of the trustees of the Consolidated University of North Carolina—a touchy problem with political complications.

Gov. Bob Scott's proposed $4.3 billion budget for the next biennium is far from its final shape, still in the hands of committees and subcommittees in both houses of the legislature.

Two bills introduced in the Senate could have far-reaching effects if they win approval.

The one most likely to succeed came Tuesday over the signature of Sen. John J. Burney, D-New Hanover. Burney, possibly the Senate's most influential member, introduced a bill that would make the state, county and municipal governments liable for wrongful acts or negligence by their agents.

Burney's bill would abolish "sovereign immunity," the common law doctrine based on the theory that the "king can do no wrong."

A Republican, Sen. Norman

Joyner of Iredell, quietly submitted a bill that would allow the state to use civil law in dealing with businesses linked to organized crime elements.

Proper Names Found Intriguing

NEW YORK (AP) — Nemesis is a Greek goddess of retribution: Bismarck is a doughnut shaped like a ball. Great Harry was a battleship and Vampire is a jet fighter plane.

These are among the intriguing items gleaned from Webster's Dictionary of Proper Names (G. & C. Merriam Co., $9.95).

Joyner, admittedly filing the bill without seeking cosponsors, said it would put the state on record as not being "another Florida or New Jersey."

Most YMCA Now Integrated

NEW YORK (AP) — Most local branches of the Young Men's Christian Association have eliminated all racial discrimination in membership and use of facilities in the last three years, the YMCA national council says. Only five of 168 YMCAs in the southeast have been suspended for failure to integrate.

after Florida's "anti-Mafia law," would allow the attorney general to file civil suits against corporations controlled by or engaged in organized crime, seeking revocation of the firm's charter.

It also would allow the attorney general to seek a Superior Court injunction barring continued operation by unincorporated firms with proven links to organized crime.

CUCKOO POX

LONDON (AP) — The cuckoo is multiplying faster than any other British bird, a census by the Trust for Ornithology shows. But skylarks, thrushes and linnets are losing ground.

Worry Clinic The Newspaper Has Advantage

Ward Quaal is a shrewd practical psychologist, so ponder the statements below. Those three communication media are almost the sole educators (as well as entertainers) of most Americans after they quit school forever at about the age of 18. But radio and many newspapers are letting TV steal a march on them!

By GEORGE W. CRANE
Ph. D., M. D.

Case Q-538: Ward Quaal is a famous Radio-TV executive in Chicago. He is also co-author of a popular college textbook on "Broadcast Management." "Dr. Crane," he said, "from your experience on both radio, TV and newspapers, what do you think of these three media?"

Back in 1936, I had a daily radio show on WGN and the Mutual Broadcasting System. It later went over to CBS.

And it consisted of the "soap opera" type, except each day installment was a complete episode. We dealt with the same problems as in this daily newspaper column.

largely a medium for disc jockey entertainment where a record is played for a couple of minutes and the listeners don't even get to build up to a proper emotional peak, before a different record starts blaring.

Radio, however, could easily beat TV during the daytime hours when busy housewives haven't time to sit quietly before their TV set.

(3) Newspapers have an intrinsic advantage in appealing to the eye.

For 65 per cent of our knowledge comes into our brains via vision. TV also partakes of some of this natural advantage, but its exposures are brief and cannot be mulled over leisurely or re-read, like interesting newspaper stories.

But newspapers, though potentially the basic educational medium of America, are largely ignoring grammar school children!

Their comic pages are slanted toward adults, even in humor and simple "puns," for kiddies don't comprehend adult wit.

Some editors have frankly admitted they have lost the kiddies to TV!

So they aren't interested in tempting children to use the comic page as a daily "reading laboratory," to supplement the school teacher's stress on this vital subject.

India is one-sixth the size of the Soviet Union.

The bidding:
South West North East
3 Pass 4 Pass
Pass Pass

Opening lead: Eight of ♠ South's opening three heart bid is distinctly sub-par inasmuch as he has only five winners. However, having no defensive values and buttressed by 100 honors, it is hard to fault South for his action. North's raise to four hearts is routine.

West opened the eight of trumps and East played the deuce permitting South to win the first trick with the nine of hearts. The king was continued and East was in with the ace. He shifted to the nine of clubs in an effort to get a ruff in that suit.

North won the trick with the ten and led a diamond. East followed with the three and West topped South's ten with the king. A club was returned and East trumped with the five of hearts. The defense could not be prevented from winning a spade trick subsequently to defeat the contract.

The defense was crisp and unerring, however, South could have averted the setback by taking certain precautionary steps. After he wins the opening lead, it is suggested that he return the ten of diamonds at trick two in an attempt to disrupt communications between his opponents. Whichever defender wins this trick will presumably play another diamond.

South must resist the temptation to ruff in his hand or else he will subsequently find himself locked up in dummy after he drives out the ace of hearts and East returns his singleton club. When declarer tries to exit with a spade, West gets in with the king to give his partner the club ruff.

When the defenders lead a second round of diamonds, declarer must discard a spade. He is now, finally in position to control the subsequent play because he can get off dummy by ruffing spades. After the ace of hearts is dislodged, East has no way to get his partner in for the ruff and South can draw the last trump when he regains the lead. In all, he loses one heart and two diamonds.

Other things being equal, it thus can beat radio and newspapers as a sheer entertainment and relaxing medium. And it wins more of the children.

(2) Radio demands a higher IQ in its audience and obviously lacks the visible action for sports broadcasting or semi-nude theatricals.

But Radio could run TV a much closer race if it would strike at the basic human interests in its programs.

For example, when I have offered dramatic short talks on "How to Win a Boy Friend," or "How to Avoid Sexual Assault," or have asked parents what they would say when Junior suddenly inquires, "Mommy, where did I come from?" the listeners stop short and listen.

But Radio has failed to increase these basic human interest appeals or adequately use the dramatic "Case Method." So Radio is now regarded as late rush for ride on trains

Being 'Copter Pilot Today Is Status Symbol

By WILLIAM CHAZE
Associated Press Writer
FT. RUCKER, Ala. (AP) — The shadows of a few small magnolia trees lengthened in the late afternoon sun as a grandstand on the edge of a vast, grassy parade ground slowly filled with women and children wearing their best clothes. They talked and laughed among themselves until an Army captain, a little pudgy beneath his tropical-weight uniform, his visored cap pulled low over wire-rimmed aviator's sunglasses, stepped to a microphone. He cleared his throat and clenched and unclenched his hands behind him before speaking in soft Southern accents, the amplified words rolling across the emptiness of the parade ground and echoing off a few mustard colored barracks on the other side. But the eyes of the people in the stands were on the pale Alabama sky to the west. Moments later, their wait was rewarded by the sudden appearance of 48 olive and dayglo orange helicopters, impossibly noisy machines flying in tight formation. A cheer went up from the stands. Inside the helicopters were 140 men—average age 20—who would graduate a few days later as pilots. The flight past the grandstand marked the end of 32 weeks of training. For 70 of the new pilots, it would be the last time they would fly in the tranquil skies of the U.S. before moving on to Vietnam. The rest would go on stateside or European assignments but, eventually, all will have flown in Vietnam. Every second Tuesday, the Army Aviation School at Ft. Rucker in southeastern Alabama graduates a new class of pilots. The war in Southeast Asia has been a massive helicopter action from the start—since the first GI machinegunner was buckled into the doorway of an old H-21 helicopter in 1961. Gen. William C. Westmoreland, Army chief of staff and himself trained as a 'copter pilot, has said the Army aviator "has made our conduct of this war possible." But since the incursion into Laos, the helicopter pilot's role has been even more visible. World War II had its paratrooper and tank commander. The Korean conflict had its gritty infantry commander. And now the Indochina war has made the wings of the helicopter pilot a status symbol. It is a hazardous job. A rifleman on the ground can bring down a helicopter with a single well-placed bullet. In the short time American helicopter pilots flew support missions over Laos, at least 85 helicopters were shot down while supporting the South Vietnamese action. The Pentagon says 4,344 have been lost since the war began—and that figure doesn't include the helicopters shot down but later salvaged. More than 460 Army pilots have been killed since the war began. Yet the Army says it has no shortage of young men who want to become helicopter pilots and who are willing to pay the price—flying hundreds of combat hours in Southeast Asia. All of them pass first through the Aviation School at Ft. Rucker. Applicants for helicopter pilot must be between 18 and 30 years of age, have a high school diploma or its equivalent and score at least 110 on a battery of intelligence tests. A candidate is first shipped to Ft. Wolters, Tex., for 16 weeks of flight training. At Ft. Wolters he learns how to fly; at Ft. Rucker he is taught how to fly in combat. Thirty-five per cent of the men who enter flight training in Texas wash out before graduation for one reason or another. The training itself is not without its hazards. Twenty-two persons were killed in helicopter accidents at Ft. Rucker in 1969. Eleven more died last year. Most of the Ft. Wolters training is done in the OH-13 Sioux, a tiny helicopter used mostly for artillery spotting, courier work and front-line reconnaissance. Four months after climbing into an OH-13 with an instructor, the student finds himself inside a "Huey," the workhorse of the Indochina war, in the sky above Ft. Rucker's 62,000 acres of piney woods, heliports and pastures. Having made it to Ft. Rucker, the prospective pilot is likely to complete the course. The dropout rate slides to 3 per cent. The Huey, more formally known as the UH-1 Iroquois, is used in a variety of roles in Vietnam and most helicopter pilots wind up flying them. The ships are used as gunships, troop transports and for medical evacuation purposes. The Huey, with its bewildering array of instruments, is exceedingly difficult to fly and the job becomes more complicated as weight is added. "What this Huey really wants to do," said one instructor, "is fall out of the sky." Students at Ft. Rucker generally rise at 5 a.m. for a 12-hour day of classroom work and flying. Usually, they spend half a day in the classroom and half aloft, perfecting instrument flying and learning the technique of supporting troops on the ground. About 30 per cent of the pilots will receive additional training as gunners. A pilot gets his wings after he has flown 210 training hours and sat through an additional 350 hours of classroom work. During his final week of training, the student is given a foretaste of what he will find in Vietnam. Officer candidates from Ft. Benning, Ga., and

Rangers from Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., are brought to Ft. Rucker for a simulated assault on enemy positions deep in the pine woods and thickets of Alabama. For the first time, the student pilot is ferrying live troops, trying to put them down on a hot landing zone where there can be no mistakes. Weapons are going off and smoke bombs are exploding in a realistic and sweaty situation. Instructors are carefully watching the trainees, trying to spot the pilot who cannot think clearly in the midst of noise, smoke and confusion. If he can't think clearly at Ft. Rucker, where there are no real bullets being shot at him, the odds are overwhelming that he will not be able to cut the mustard in Vietnam. "If it can be this way when it's just for drill, man, it makes you wonder what's waiting for you over there," said one 19-year-old trainee. "It makes you sweat a big bunch." That critical phase of the training is done under the supervision of Maj. Howard Sweeney, a tough-talking former Marine from Somerset, Ky. "What happens when they get here," said Haney, grinning, "is that they find out they still have a lot to learn." Haney says that by the time a student reaches his area, his time at Ft. Rucker has grown short. He knows that, very shortly, he will be exposing himself to enemy fire and that, despite the Army's effort to minimize the danger, there is a very good chance he will get shot down. The Pentagon says one of 18,000 helicopter sorties ends in a shoot-down. That sounds like a long shot. But the odds dwindle with 4,000 helicopters in Vietnam taking off and landing several times each day. "I think that by this stage of the game, these men are wondering whether that first bullet will be for them," said Haney. "Some of them are looking forward to getting it. Others aren't so sure." Despite the demand, the Army will train only 2,375 pilots during fiscal 1972, half the number being trained this year and a third the number trained last year. The Army has already trained more than 17,000 helicopter pilots. Fewer than 1,000 pilots per year were being trained by the Army until 1966 when more and more were needed to satisfy the demands of the war. Training reached its peak in 1969 when 7,218 graduated. By the Army's estimate, it costs more than $50,000 to train a man and put him at the controls of a $350,000 Huey. "I guess you could say that most of these men feel very strongly about their country," said a captain. "I guess you could say that if they are anything they are anti-everything that is anti-government."

Capt. Jerry Chandler, 31, of Wichita, Kan., an instructor who flew 500 combat hours during his Vietnam tour, was asked why men go the hazardous route of flying helicopters in Vietnam. The captain rubbed his chin with the back of his right hand and sat in uncomfortable silence for a moment. "That's a very hard question," he said. "I often wonder about it." "Maybe it's just something that you approach with a sense of duty. It's a job that has to be done." A hard-jawed young major sitting nearby grinned and shook his head. "The basic drive is for adventure," said Maj. Ray Dial of Payson, Utah. "That's why I'm here. I like getting shot at and I like shooting back. I'd do it without combat pay." But for most pilots, the flight and combat pay is an incentive, if not the most compelling reason for their willingness to fly helicopters into battle. Flight pay means another $100 monthly for the warrant officer and combat adds another $65. Lt. John C. Morrison, a handsome, dark-haired 24-year-old from Montgomery, Ala., is among those who view flying a helicopter as the key to advancement in the Army and admits that is the only reason he is flying. Morrison, who graduated from Auburn University in 1969 and received an ROTC commission, plans to make the Army his career. The father of an infant son, he will go to Vietnam in June as pilot of a Cobra, an evil-looking, swift-flying machine designed strictly for combat and regarded by many Army pilots as the "ultimate death machine." "Being a helicopter pilot is like being a tank commander or a paratrooper in World War II. Status attaches itself to the job. It makes you highly visible and if you take advantage of the situation, it can be helpful in terms of a career." Trainees at Ft. Rucker, whatever romantic notions they might have about the glory of combat, cannot avoid exposure to the reality of flying in Vietnam. They bump hard against reality when they encounter WO James R. Burch, 22, of San Jose, Calif., who flew 1,100 combat hours in Vietnam and who was shot down twice. His back was badly injured in one of the crashes, the result of his rear rotor being shot off by a machinegun.

HE FEELS BETTER NOW
BEAUMONT, Tex. (AP) — Lawson D. Turner Jr., Beaumont customs inspector, says a man at a border entry point donated 93 pounds of marijuana to the U.S. government.

Upon entering customs, the driver announced, "I brought you guys a couple of bags of marijuana. They're in the back."

Asked why, the man said he had bought the marijuana in Mexico to keep off the market and out of the hands of youngsters. He has 14 children.
