Recodification Approved

City To Publish New Code

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Publication of a new edition of the City of Greenville's Ordinances was approved at the meeting of the City Council last night.

In this final meeting of the present, Council, City Attorney David Reid read an ordinance proposing adoption of the recodification of the City Code. Approval of the recodification gives the city an ordinance that make possible the immediate publication of a complete book containing all the city's ordinances, publication of changes, and future publication under the authority of this ordinance.

The total cost of the project, which includes research, editorial work, consultation of the publishers' representatives with Greenville city officials, amounted to $6,323.66. City Manager Harry Hagerty reported that $1,500 had been paid already, and $2,000 is in the budget for this item. The amount of $2,823.66 will be placed in the next fiscal budget to pay the balance of this project.

Attorneys or other interested persons can get a copy of the new city book for $25.00. One hundred copies, hard back, first edition, are being received as part of the $6,323.66 total expenditure.

Council members approved unanimously the payment of legal fees applicable to the City of Greenville in the case of the suit brought by Mayor Frank M. Wooten, Jr. against the city. This amount is $1,104.33.

A total of $3,312.98 is being asked by the four attorneys representing the city. This amount will be borne equally, at $1,104.33 each, by the City, the Redevelopment Commission and the Greenville Utilities Commission. Fees requested by attorneys for the city are: Robinson O. Everett, $1,789.46; Louis W. Gaylord, $523.52; David E. Reid, Jr., $500; and Kenneth G. Hite, $500.

Councilman Jerry Sutherland, noting he had heard statements to the effect the City of Greenville had paid legal fees for Mayor Wooten in this case, said he felt the mayor should have an opportunity to answer on this.

"I have paid $10,062 in legal fees and expenses," Mayor Wooten replied, "and that is in addition to what others joining me in the suit have paid." Wooten emphasized this amount he paid personally, and that the city has not paid any of his legal fees.

City Attorney Reid, reporting on the status of cases pending in Federal Court, last night revealed that Federal Judge John Larkins had denied a request by attorney Jerry Paul for legal fees in the amount of $1,500. The request for the city to pay Paul's fees resulting from the 1969 case of Janet Underwood and others against the City of Greenville was denied in a memorandum signed by Judge Larkins on April 19.

In the case of Mayor Wooten and others versus the City of Greenville, Reid reported that the case had been transferred from the Court of Appeals to the docket of the Supreme Court and would be heard in the fall term, probably early in September. Reid said he believed it was the third case docketed for the State Supreme Court.

Attorneys for the city have filed a motion to dismiss, based on what is considered shortcomings and technical imperfections. Reid noted that this motion "should be considered at that time," referring to the September hearing.

Assessment rolls for costs to property owners were approved for curb, gutter and paving on Fourth Street from Memorial Drive to Conley Street; and for curb and gutter for portions of Arlington Drive, Berkshire Road, Eden Place and Third Street. There were no property owners at the public hearing on this matter and therefore no objections were registered on the assessments.

Dr. Frank Fuller reported he and councilman Sutherland had met yesterday with two of the five members of the East Carolina University Student Advisory Council. Fuller termed the meeting a fruitful one, and mentioned that he and Sutherland, if continued as advisors to the students in the new City Council, would meet again with the students at an early date.

Authorization was granted by the council to City Engineer C. (Continued on page 8)

Farmville Board Begins Planning For Centennial

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

FARMVILLE — The Board of Commissioners agreed last night to advance $2,000 to a non-profit organization yet to be formed that would plan and direct Farmville's centennial celebration next year.

Rev. Marion D. Lark, chairman of the Mayor's Committee on Community Improvement made the request, explaining that the funds would be used to hire a professional promotion firm. The money will be paid back from profits made from enterprises connected with the centennial, which is tentatively set for late spring. The Board asked that the Mayor's Committee, Rev. Lark head, appoint the non-profit organization officers.

The results of Tuesday's municipal election were presented by Registrar C. A. Lilley and accepted by the Board as official. There were no departures from the tentative results released Wednesday.

Joby Griffin of the Farmville School Board asked the Board to go on record as endorsing a request to the State Highway Commission to install a stop light at the entrance to the new consolidated school due to open next fall and a request to the county school board for a fence around Sugg School. The Board complied.

Griffin also asked the Board to consider taking the new school into the city limits and installing fire hydrants around it. A final request was that the Town close the portion of Hines Street that runs through Sugg School property to reduce the traffic hazard. Both of these matters were taken under consideration and the Town Attorney, Jack Lewis was asked to investigate the legalities involved with closing such a portion of a dedicated street.

The Board endorsed the sales tax to be voted on by Pitt County citizens May 25.

Fire Chief H. P. Norman asked the Board to put up a $50 reward for the arrest and conviction of anyone turning in a fire alarm intentionally false. Five have been turned in this month, he said. The Board agreed.

Norman told the Board that Second Assistant Fire Chief Pat Bundy has been retired with 30 years of service. Former Lt. Lyman Craft has been promoted to Second Assistant and John Baker has been named a lieutenant.

Street Department Director E. P. Freuler told the Board he is picking up trash daily at the Pinehaven Nursing Home just outside Farmville and is making a monthly pickup at a self-service gas station on the outskirts of town. Prices will be set later. He said his men are now moving vacant lots and plan to try out the fogging machine next week. A new trench will soon have to be dug at the town landfill at a cost of approximately $1,500, he said.

Town Engineer Jack McDavid said all sewer work should be done by the end of May. Installation of water line is moving right along, he said.

The Board honored a request by the architects of the new consolidated school that the town provide yard lights for the school. The cost will be $312.50 a

Bank Will Open Its 3rd Facility

The Planters National Bank and Trust Co. will open its third banking facility in Greenville on May 17, according to an announcement by Robert A. Henley, vice president and city executive of PNB's Greenville operation.

Henley said that permission has been received from the office of the Comptroller of the Currency in Washington to temporarily change the location of the bank's approved but unopened branch from the vicinity of Tenth Street and U. S. 264 Bypass to 2900 Tenth Street.

Manager of the new temporary facility will be Herbert (Herb) Brett, a graduate of East Carolina University.

A Norfolk, Va. native, Brett joined Planters National in 1969 following graduation from Ahsokie High School, Oak Ridge Military Institute, and ECU. Prior to his current assignment with PNB, he has been attached to the bank's customer credit departments in Greenville and Ayden.

Automakers Doubt Can Meet Pollution Deadline

By JAMES PHILLIPS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The world's automakers, from Rolls-Royce to General Motors, doubt they can produce a 1976-model car that will meet all the stringent air pollution laws now on the books.

"At this point in time we have no way of controlling oxides of nitrogen to the extremely low levels which could be required by the Clean Air amendments of 1970," Edward N. Cole, president of General Motors, said today in a prepared statement. "Based on current technology and results we have achieved to date—and assuming modification in the test procedure—we are hopeful that the average emission levels from 1975 model General Motors cars can meet the standards for hydrocarbons and carbon monoxide," Cole added.

Cole made his statements at an Environmental Protection Agency hearing on industry efforts to reduce the discharge of pollutants into the air.

Demos Skeptical As Spiro Urges Revenue-Sharing

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina lawmakers generally reacted along party lines to Vice President Spiro Agnew's revenue-sharing speech to the General Assembly.

The Republicans praised the speech and the Democrats were skeptical about it. Agnew told the General Assembly in his Wednesday visit that North Carolina stands to get $155.8 million in additional federal money if revenue sharing gets through Congress. Of this, $113.5 million would be without strings and $42.3 would be increases in funds tied to specific programs.

"I think he gave new light that we didn't have before," said Sen. John Burney, D-New Hanover, an outspoken opponent of revenue sharing last month when the state Senate roundly defeated a resolution that would have endorsed the principle.

"But it only goes half far enough," he quickly added. "True revenue sharing means getting some of the administrative cuts out of it. If this is going to mean cutting out some bureaucracy and getting direct grants to local government, then I think we could go along with it."

Second from right, with leg crossed, is North Carolina Governor Bob Scott. (AP Wirephoto)

Burney, who heads the Senate Finance Committee, expressed skepticism that the bureaucracy would be diminished. Granting direct aid, he said, would "take it right back to them, and that will be rocking the Washington boat."

Rep. Dwight Quinn, D-Cabarrus, chairman of the House Finance Committee, said he would prefer a plan "to keep the dollars in North Carolina, under North Carolina's control."

"Regardless of their statement of 'no strings attached,' we know better than that. You can't share something you don't have," he said.

Sen. George Wood, D-Camden, added, "They don't have anything to share but a great big debt."

A similar skeptical line was taken by House Appropriations Committee Chairman Kenneth Royall, D-Durham.

"He kept telling us how much more we are going to get, but he didn't tell us how much more it's going to cost the country. Somebody's got to pay for it somewhere down the line," he said.

State GOP Chairman Rep. James Holshouser, R-Watauga, said "I think he made it clear that we would have more money than we have now, without all the strings and haggling and red tape we have now."

Endorse Tax

Members of the Greenville City School Board of Education last night went on record endorsing the one cent sales tax scheduled for a public referendum in Pitt County on May 25.

This decision was reached during the course of their closed workshop session of a special call meeting held last night. Dr. Cleet C. Cleetwood, superintendent of the city schools, was authorized by board members to reveal the board's stand on this issue.

Dr. Cleetwood said the endorsement reflects "the conviction that funds from this source are needed to meet increased obligations and to provide public services." He added, "The board endorsed the proposed increase in the sales tax and pledged support to this issue which is important to schools and other city and county agencies and departments."

The chief also purchased 3,000 window stickers which say, "All items of value in this house have been registered with the police department."

Police Campaign Enlists Citizens

WAYLAND, Mass. (AP) — Police Chief Corrin J. McGrath has launched an antiburglary campaign by purchasing six electric engraving tools.

Now he is asking householders in this town of 15,000 to borrow the tools for 24 hours, mark appliances with their automobile license number, then list the items on a master sheet at the police station.

The chief also purchased 3,000 window stickers which say, "All items of value in this house have been registered with the police department."

also said the Clean Air Act passed by Congress last year calling for the reduction of exhaust pollutants poses "one of the most formidable technical assignments our company has ever faced."

"During 1970," he continued, "our U.S. expenditures for automotive emission control facilities, research, engineering, and reliability and inspection testing totaled $119 million, not including the cost of hardware installed on the vehicles. For 1971, expenditures for these activities are expected to be at least $124 million."

Aycock PTA Resubmits Air Conditioning Appeal

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

A delegation representing the E.B. Aycock PTA appeared before a special meeting of the Greenville City Schools Board of Education Thursday night to re-submit a request that the board consider air conditioning the junior high facility.

Appearing during a public session prior to the board's executive workshop, a closed workshop session, the spokesman for the group, Dr. Moses Sheppard told the board that air conditioning for the school is "no longer a luxury, but a necessity."

Dr. Sheppard, chairman of the committee backing the air conditioning project, said the committee feels the improvement would increase student learning and teacher efficiency and urged that the board give the project priority consideration.

Mrs. Julian Vainright, PTA president, noted that a letter had been sent to parents and they "are together on this" and it was hoped that the board would consider the matter during its workshop session.

Board members assured the delegation that the matter would be discussed during the workshop. Harding Sugg pointed out the he felt the school was designed for air conditioning and that he would vote for the project.

Money for the project would be available through capital outlay funds, Superintendent Dr. C. C. Cleetwood asserted, if the idea is given priority.

Dr. Cleetwood said this morning that the air conditioning project received favorable discussion during the workshop and that the matter of financing had survived the session but he noted that its place in the budget would have to receive approval at the final budget meeting.

The Greeks Have Two Words For It: Brains And Beauty

By DOROTHY DARKS WASHINGTON (WNS) — Christine Dunbar Sarbanes is unique among the wives of new Congressmen in the 92nd Congress.

For a starter, she is British. She teaches Greek and Roman history at the college level. And finally, she is married to the only Rhodes Scholar among the 67 freshman legislators.

Even if she were none of these things, she would probably stand out. In an interview in the House of Representatives restaurant the softspoken newcomer exuded the poise of someone used to speaking before large groups. She is a tall, slender brunette who grew up at Brighton-by-the-Sea in the south of England. She looks less than her 35 years.

Of course, her husband Paul is a standout too. They met at Oxford University where she was majoring in the classics and leading a campaign to get women admitted into the all-male Oxford Debating Union. She did.

Agnew Paul Sarbanes is one of five Greek-Americans in the House of Representatives, all of them Democrats. Like another Greek-American who presides over the Senate, name of Spiro Agnew, he grew up in Maryland where his parents Sprys and Matina Sarbanes operated a restaurant.

Paul graduated from public high school in Salisbury, Maryland, won a scholarship to the Woodrow Wilson School

What is it about Greek-Americans in the Congress? I asked Christine Sarbanes. After all, besides her husband, there are only three other Rhodes Scholars, Democrats William Fulbright of Arkansas, House Speaker Carl Albert of Oklahoma and John Brademas of Indiana who was the first Greek-American elected to the Congress in 1958. Statistically speaking, half the Rhodes Scholars in Congress are Greek-Americans.

"And why not? After all, the Greeks invented politics. The word itself as well as the practice. They had the first democracy." As for Paul, Christine Sarbanes says, "My husband was headed in the direction of government service before he ever went to Princeton."

Greek-Americans don't forget their origins. "As a matter of fact," she says, "I think he married me because I look more Greek than he does." She has an olive skin and dark eyes while he is more fair-complexioned.

Americans were a pretty exotic breed to me and, besides, I thought I might get some support there for my campaign to have women admitted to the Oxford Debating Union."

"I got there early and this young chap rushed over to me — Paul was the President of the American Club — and said 'Hi, what part of the States do you come from?'"

"About three dates later I realized he wasn't just interested in the debating union," she says.

Does she find it difficult to keep up her teaching at Goucher College in Baltimore, run the house there, and still be a supportive wife of a new Congressman in Washington?

"Well, yes. Paul wants me to continue my teaching but I'm glad I had the good sense to cut back to only one course this year. I find I simply must come to Washington once or twice a week to do the things a new Congressional wife should do."

She Wants Family That's Ready-Made

By Abigail Van Buren

(© 1971 by Chicago Tribune; V. News Synd., Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: I once read in your column where a man had been injured in the war and became sterile, and he asked you to find him a woman with a ready-made family. I have the same request. I want a man with a family. I am not sterile. My problem is my looks. I am extremely fat. I am 18 years old and weigh about 250 pounds. Don't tell me to see a doctor and lose weight. I've been all thru that without success.

I have never been kissed on a date, so don't get the idea that I am a pregnant girl looking for some guy to marry her.

I love children and need some to give my love to. I can cook and sew and keep house better than any woman I know. I've lived on farms and in the city, so it doesn't matter where I live. I don't care if the man wants love or not. If he doesn't, I won't bother him. If he does, I have plenty to give him.

I insist on marriage and will promise to love and cherish his children as if they were my own. I prefer an older man, but it really doesn't matter. Sign me, READY, WILLING AND NEEDY

DEAR READY: You obviously have very little self esteem—because you are fat. You are willing to marry any man who needs a cook, housekeeper and substitute mother, but is no prize himself, because you don't consider yourself a prize either. You could be wrong. Fat girls who have less to offer than you are getting married every day to men who really love them.

Before agreeing, at age 18, to spend the rest of your life with just any man in return for your services, get some counseling from your local mental health clinic. You will thank me for sending you there.

DEAR ABBY: After 36 years, Grandpa has jumped the fence. When I found out about it and told him I knew, he went to pieces. He has been bending over backwards to make it up to me ever since. I have lost all respect for him and will never be able to trust him again.

I don't want a divorce, but it makes me sick to look at him, never mind sleeping with him! Can you give me a word of encouragement to help me go on? I am broken-hearted.

GRANDMA

DEAR GRANDMA: Time heals all wounds. [And sometimes wounds all heels.] This is not the end of the world. Have you never done a deed which you later regretted? Have you never needed to be forgiven? Answer these questions honestly, then concentrate on some of the good things Grandpa has done throughout the years.

DEAR ABBY: I read about Alice who rode to school every morning between two guys. She wanted to know what to do about one guy who tried to "feel her up" under her sweater. You told her to knock him on the noggin with her loaded lunch bucket.

I'm reminded of a true story: In 1915, two brothers lived on a farm in Oregon. Their parents secured the services of a plump, fun-loving new hired girl. The boys would take her sleigh riding in their dad's new cutter. "Susie" [I'll call her] always sat in the middle and seemed to enjoy the ride.

There was always a certain amount of horseplay, and on this one occasion one brother approached Susie from one direction, and at exactly the same moment, the other brother approached her from the other side. Much to their surprise, their hands met! There was a dead silence. Then the brothers shook hands, and all three of them nearly died laughing.

CONVENIENT MEAT ACCOMPANIMENT — Rice and green peas, plus mushrooms, are baked in a casserole and served from the baking dish.

Baked Rice And Green Peas Are Easily Prepared

By CECILY BROWNSTONE Associated Press Food Editor

To make life easier at dinner-time we like to mix rice with a vegetable and bake the two, casserole style, in the oven. So convenient to bring to the table right in the baking dish and to serve!

If this idea appeals to you, you might like to try this baked rice and green pea combination. Canned mushrooms go into it, too, plus chicken bouillon, sherry and seasonings. We found it a good dish to serve to company along with beef or chicken.

Either regular milled white rice or parboiled rice may be used in this recipe. If you use the former, choose the long-grain variety; when cooked, its grains tend to separate. Short and medium grain varieties of regular milled white rice have softer grains that tend to cling together; they are excellent to use in meat and chicken loaves and in croquettes where it is an advantage to have the grains adhere and in chilled rice desserts where the extra softness of the grains is an advantage.

RICE AND GREEN PEA CASSEROLE

1 cup uncooked rice

2 tablespoons butter, cut up

1 can (4 ounces) sliced mushrooms, undrained

1 package (10 ounces) frozen green peas

1/4 teaspoon white pepper

1/4 teaspoon nutmeg

1/4 teaspoon dried marjoram

1/4 teaspoon onion powder

2 cups boiling water

1 chicken bouillon cube

2 tablespoons dry sherry

Into a round 2-quart glass casserole (8 1/4 by 2 3/4 inches) or similar baking dish turn the rice, butter, undrained mushrooms, frozen peas, pepper, nutmeg, marjoram and onion powder.

Add the bouillon cube to the boiling water and stir to dissolve; add the sherry; pour over rice mixture; mix well. Cover tightly; if baking dish has no cover, use foil.

Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until rice is cooked.

Sen. Montoya Sees Violent Repercussion

By PEGGY SIMPSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Joseph M. Montoya says an increasingly embittered and militant Spanish-speaking minority may turn to "terrible violence" unless it gets political power and equal opportunity.

Montoya, the Senate's only Spanish-named member, says he repeatedly has urged his people to work within the system and to be moderate.

But, the New Mexico Democrat said in a Senate speech Thursday, the discrimination and bigotry has barely lessened, something the returning veterans of Vietnam won't tolerate.

The Spanish-American jobless rate is nearly twice that of any other group, their illiteracy rate is five times higher than Anglo-Americans, they are the target of prejudiced law enforcers in the Southwest, and alone among the minorities their television image is a totally demeaning stereotype, Montoya said.

"America continues to pay loud lip service to the aspirations of these people," he said. "Such superficial concern is surpassed only by the paucity of what our society is doing to aid them escape conditions of life afflicting so many of them. It is one of our worst national disgraces."

"A small but growing group in our Spanish-speaking community is beginning to despair of making real progress," he continued. "It feels only deliberately-fostered turbulence will awaken our power structure and th nation to their needs."

He rejects that approach, Montoya said, yet understands the frustration which prompts it.

"The most notable success achieved by Spanish-speaking Americans has been through the religious-oriented nonviolent union of farmworkers of Cesar Chavez," Montoya said.

With Chavez going to jail to gain in 1971 for his farmworkers what most American labor got during the New Deal, Montoya said, "the Pentagon repeats an atrocious policy by escalating lettuce-buying just as it suddenly discovered a need in past years to support nonunion grape growers through increased purchase of grapes."

In the military services, he noted, Spanish-speaking Americans are drafted at disproportionate rates and their death rate in Vietnam is at an exaggeratedly high level.

Those who return face the difficulties—unchanged—they left.

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Merchants Association wants the General Assembly to enact a statewide uniform Sunday blue law to prohibit the sale of certain merchandise.

A bill, patterned after South Carolina's blue law, was introduced Thursday by Sen. Ollie Harris, D-Cleveland.

The measure is certain to touch off strong opposition since some of the state's larger cities permit Sunday sales.

Thompson Greenwood, executive vice president of the N.C. Merchants Association, said, "we want a uniform law in North Carolina. The present laws are discriminatory because Sunday sales are allowed in some areas and prohibited in adjoning areas."

In Raleigh, for example, discount stores are not allowed to operate on Sunday, but those in Wake County can hold Sunday sales.

"This bill," Greenwood said, "is almost word for word like the South Carolina law which has been upheld by the South Carolina Supreme Court and the U.S. Supreme Court."

The measure lists many items that could not be sold on Sunday, including appliances, clothing, housewares, paints, building supplies, jewelry, musical instruments, automobiles, trucks and trailers.

There are a number of exemptions in the bill. It would not apply to the operation of radio or television stations, movie theatres, newspapers, books and magazines, and eating places. Undertaking establishments also are exempt. Harris is an undertaker.

The proposed blue law would permit the sale of numerous items, such as drugs, medicines, swimwear, novelties, souvenirs, cosmetics, toilet articles, cameras, films, fish bait, tobacco, soft drinks, fuel oil, motor fuels, flowers, plants and shrubs.

The bill provides that violators would be punishable by a fine of not less than $50 nor more than $250 for a first offense and a fine of not less than $100 nor more than $500 for each subsequent offense.

In other legislative developments Thursday:

—Rep. McNeill Smith, D-Guilford, and several other House members introduced a bill calling for a tenure system for employment of public school teachers in North Carolina. Teachers would be given the status of "permanent teachers" after they had been employed by a school system for three successive years and had been re-employed by the school board for the following year.

—Sen. Henry M. Milgrom, D-Nash, sponsored a bill providing for death benefits for members of a rescue squad killed in carrying out their duties. The Industrial Commission would award $5,000 to the surviving widow or dependent parent.

—Sen. John Henley, D-Cumberland, offered a bill to authorize the state Board of Pharmacy to issue licenses without examination to persons licensed as pharmacists by pharmacy boards of other states.

Wagoner Speaks To Kiwanis Club

Leo W. Wagoner, vice president in charge of sales for North Carolina Blue Cross-Blue Shield Inc., addressed the Wednesday night meeting of the Greenville Kiwanis Club.

Wagoner, who was introduced by Alton Andrews of the local Blue Cross-Blue Shield office, spoke on the cost of health care.

The Jonesville native, who is currently vice president of the Chapel Hill Kiwanis Club, served as a group representative and district manager with Hospital Saving Association of Greensboro before joining Blue Cross-Blue Shield.

Students In Competition

RALEIGH — Students from Pitt Technical Institute and Martin Technical Institute will compete in the Plymouth Trouble Shooting contest May 13 in Raleigh.

This is an annual event sponsored by Plymouth dealers of this area in which auto mechanics students find and fix several malfunctions deliberately hidden in new cars by experts.

Ability to quickly restore the car to normal running order counts as 70 percent of a team's final score. There is also a written examination which counts as 30 percent of a team's score.

Scholarships, an inside track on a job, and a chance to perform on the famed Indianapolis "500" Speedway are the students' inducements.

The winning team receives an all-expense trip to Indianapolis where the National Trouble Shooting Finals will be held June 14-16.

Trophies for their schools and individual prizes are provided for local contest winners.

Report Theft Of 4 Boat Motors

Pitt County deputies are investigating a break-in that occurred sometime Wednesday night or early Thursday morning at Gaskins Supply in Grimesland.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that four new boat motors, on display in the front area of the store, were reported stolen. Total value of the item was estimate at $2,000.

The sheriff added that entrance to the store was gained after a lock on one of the doors was jimmied. The incident was reported to the Sheriff's Department around 8 a.m.

Moose Meet Top Officer

Nine members of the Greenville Moose Lodge last night attended a gathering of area Moose in Wilson to meet the fraternity's Supreme Governor, Judge Howard Kline, of Wichita.

Kline, on a visitation tour of the Southeastern States, directed his remarks primarily to new members who had been inducted into the Moose prior to his address.

"Most of you, I am sure", he said, "became members of this large fraternity for personal reasons and on the basis of local inducements ... such as recreation facilities, a social outlet, or because you were simply invited by a friend. But there is a facet with which you will become better acquainted, that of protection we offer our children and aged members."

The speaker then sketched the beginnings of the Order, its growth and the origins of Mooseheart and Moosehaven.

Many lodges were represented at the gathering, as well as officers of the State and District associations.

Those attending from Greenville Lodge 865 were: Dick Everett, James Harris, Edwin Baldree, Dick Barnes, Jasper Anderson, James Heath, D.C. Schlien, George Sawyer and James Andrews.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Joseph M. Montoya says an increasingly embittered and militant Spanish-speaking minority may turn to "terrible violence" unless it gets political power and equal opportunity.

Montoya, the Senate's only Spanish-named member, says he repeatedly has urged his people to work within the system and to be moderate.

But, the New Mexico Democrat said in a Senate speech Thursday, the discrimination and bigotry has barely lessened, something the returning veterans of Vietnam won't tolerate.

The Spanish-American jobless rate is nearly twice that of any other group, their illiteracy rate is five times higher than Anglo-Americans, they are the target of prejudiced law enforcers in the Southwest, and alone among the minorities their television image is a totally demeaning stereotype, Montoya said.

"America continues to pay loud lip service to the aspirations of these people," he said. "Such superficial concern is surpassed only by the paucity of what our society is doing to aid them escape conditions of life afflicting so many of them. It is one of our worst national disgraces."

"A small but growing group in our Spanish-speaking community is beginning to despair of making real progress," he continued. "It feels only deliberately-fostered turbulence will awaken our power structure and th nation to their needs."

He rejects that approach, Montoya said, yet understands the frustration which prompts it.

"The most notable success achieved by Spanish-speaking Americans has been through the religious-oriented nonviolent union of farmworkers of Cesar Chavez," Montoya said.

With Chavez going to jail to gain in 1971 for his farmworkers what most American labor got during the New Deal, Montoya said, "the Pentagon repeats an atrocious policy by escalating lettuce-buying just as it suddenly discovered a need in past years to support nonunion grape growers through increased purchase of grapes."

In the military services, he noted, Spanish-speaking Americans are drafted at disproportionate rates and their death rate in Vietnam is at an exaggeratedly high level.

Those who return face the difficulties—unchanged—they left.

Wagoner, who was introduced by Alton Andrews of the local Blue Cross-Blue Shield office, spoke on the cost of health care.

The Jonesville native, who is currently vice president of the Chapel Hill Kiwanis Club, served as a group representative and district manager with Hospital Saving Association of Greensboro before joining Blue Cross-Blue Shield.

Students In Competition

RALEIGH — Students from Pitt Technical Institute and Martin Technical Institute will compete in the Plymouth Trouble Shooting contest May 13 in Raleigh.

This is an annual event sponsored by Plymouth dealers of this area in which auto mechanics students find and fix several malfunctions deliberately hidden in new cars by experts.

Ability to quickly restore the car to normal running order counts as 70 percent of a team's final score. There is also a written examination which counts as 30 percent of a team's score.

Scholarships, an inside track on a job, and a chance to perform on the famed Indianapolis "500" Speedway are the students' inducements.

The winning team receives an all-expense trip to Indianapolis where the National Trouble Shooting Finals will be held June 14-16.

Trophies for their schools and individual prizes are provided for local contest winners.

Report Theft Of 4 Boat Motors

Pitt County deputies are investigating a break-in that occurred sometime Wednesday night or early Thursday morning at Gaskins Supply in Grimesland.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that four new boat motors, on display in the front area of the store, were reported stolen. Total value of the item was estimate at $2,000.

The sheriff added that entrance to the store was gained after a lock on one of the doors was jimmied. The incident was reported to the Sheriff's Department around 8 a.m.

Promising Era Of Leadership

Greenville's voters have elected an outstanding group of men to the City Council and we hope the group will swing right into the job of solving local problems as quickly as possible.

S. Eugene West, after being out of office for two years, was returned as mayor. It was under his administration that many public works programs, including the Central Business District redevelopment work, were begun. Thus we can expect that Mayor West will provide the leadership which will give this project the impetus it needs.

The four incumbent councilmen, Percy Cox,

Frank Fuller, Johnnie Edwards and Jerry Sutherland, all received strong votes of confidence in the 16 candidate race for the six seats on the council.

The other two seats on the recently expanded council will be filled by Clarence Gray and John Taylor. Their elections were significant in that they are both Negro and it is the first time since the turn of the century that a Negro has served on the city's governing board. More important than that, however, is the fact that both are new faces so far as seeking public office in Greenville, but both have been active in public work. Taylor has served as chairman of the Recreation Commission and Gray is assistant principal at Rose High School.

We believe the group of men who have been elected to the City Council are capable of providing the leadership the city needs to grow and improve.

There will be many matters to be considered in the months ahead in the way of human relations, development, improved recreation and parks, city employee relations and other areas.

No doubt these men will not always be in unanimous agreement, just as they will often find many citizens in disagreement with their positions.

If each of our elected councilmen make their decisions based on what they feel is in the best interest of all our citizens; if they support projects which will mean total development of our city, then very much can be accomplished during the two years ahead.

Their Warning For Democrats

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The two election analysts who helped transform the 1970 campaign are about to issue a bleak warning to the Democratic party which goes to the heart of growing fears that it is placing itself in bondage to the left for the 1972 Presidential election campaign.

The warning is contained in an epilogue, now in draft form, by Richard M. Scammon and Ben J. Wattenberg to their best-selling book of 1970, "The Real Majority" — the epilogue written for the paperback edition to be published late this month (Coward, McCann and Geoghegan). Significantly, publication coincides with deepening concern felt by some Democrats that their party may be flinging away victory next year.

The new Scammon - Wattenberg warning boils down to this: the 1972 Democratic convention is in danger of being controlled by the party's extreme left faction, so that its nominee — no matter how moderate — will be tainted for the entire campaign. If so, the Democrats will have cast aside the lessons of both 1968 and 1970 and will help President Nixon into a second term in the White House.

What makes the Scammon - Wattenberg warning appropriate right now is the exceedingly dangerous game being played for the Democratic Presidential nomination by Sen. Edmund S. Muskie. Fearful that antipathy toward him from the left might make his nomination worthless, Muskie has been trying appeasement.

Within the past month, Muskie has made headlines endorsing and attending antiwar demonstrations, attacking the FBI, and turning up on the Mall to rap with the antiwar Vietnam veterans. He even wanted to visit the veterans while they were disobeying a court injunction, until aides convinced lawyer Muskie he might make himself liable to disbarment proceedings.

Being against the war is good politics, but underwriting street demonstrations is not. Muskie's calculation is that once the left is sufficiently neutralized, he will turn again toward the center where the votes for general election victory are found. But once having given the left veto power over candidate selection, can their influence be cast off that easily? That is the question posed by Scammon and Wattenberg, two liberal Democrats who view this danger with the greatest trepidation.

Their work, "The Real Majority," in no small part was responsible for convincing the Democrats that law and order is not a codeword for racism and that the social issue — riots, crime, violence, narcotics — is indeed a valid concern. The White House ruefully concedes that the book was a major influence in making Democratic candidates less vulnerable.

But in their new epilogue, Scammon and Wattenberg suggest that Democratic liberals are now reverting to their disastrous stance of pre-election 1970. "By defusing the social issue, by demonstrating that concern for people afraid to walk their streets by day or night was not an illiberal concern — many liberals were able to win in 1970," they write. "If some liberals will now re-use the issue, they and their party and their party's candidate will suffer in 1972."

Furthermore, they suggest the Democrats may be mistaking anti-Vietnam sentiment for an "indict America" hysteria. They suggest that Democratic intensity may turn the environmentalist camp into "an elitist antiworker movement."

Thus, they pose this central question: "Is it possible that the label elitism and the political poison it connotes will move from the Republicans to the Democrat left?" Their question suggests a situation that Kevin Phillips, the conservative theoretician, jubilantly proclaimed in 1969 as the basis of a new Republican majority.

The grim Scammon - Wattenberg conclusion is that left-wing militants may be achieving the dominant voice in the Democratic party, as seen in Muskie's remarkable

Strength For Today

BETOLERANT

Millions of truly great things will be done today, some by people of high position and others by people of no standing whatsoever. There is plenty of heroism in the world. Kings, Presidents, business leaders make a big splash — and they should, but little Mr. and Mrs., Tom Dick and Harry keep the world going, and it's a blessing they do.

Have you ever seated yourself in a comfortable chair, closed your eyes and thought what a wonderful person you are? No kidding. People like you have turned the world upside down on many occasions, and others who have never turned anything upside down will be remembered by multitudes.

A China Expert Speaks

WASHINGTON — Now that the euphoria is over about our Ping-Pong match with Red China, people are starting to think about the significance of a real detente between the United States and the People's Republic of China.

I hadn't given it much thought until I talked to my friend Cutaway at the State Department.

"Well," he said, "it looks like we've made a breakthrough with the People's Republic of China."

"That's good," I said.

"No, that's bad. The Soviets are very mad at us because we're playing table tennis with Chou En-lai."

"That's bad," I said. "It could be good," Cutaway said. "If the Soviets are afraid of us making a deal with China they might be more accommodating about the SALT talks on nuclear weapons."

"That's good," I said. "It could be bad. If the Soviets decide that an America-China pact was a threat to their security, they might insist they need larger nuclear weapons to protect them from the Chinese."

"That's bad."

"It could be good. We might risk the Soviet wrath in order to open up trade with a country of 800 million people. The Chinese need everything, and there is no reason why we shouldn't consider them our largest potential customer. It's a very significant market."

"That would be good," I agreed.

Cutaway shook his head. "Bad. In order to sell them stuff, we'd have to buy things from them."

"Is that bad?"

"In a sense it is because the Chinese might undersell the Japanese to get our business. If we bought things cheaper from the Chinese than we did from the Japanese, we could cause an economic disaster in Japan."

"We'd have to put Pearl Harbor on full alert again," I said.

"It would be good, though, if the Japanese realized that they could no longer flood the American market. Then we'd manage to have better trade relations with them."

"That's good."

"Of course, it wouldn't help our employment situation here, because if the Chinese undersold the Japanese — and we can't compete with the Japanese now — there would be less jobs than ever in this country."

"That's bad," I said.

"It's good in this sense: Once we build up a strong trade relationship with

Other Editors Say Stands His Ground

(Henderson Dispatch)

A man with the stamina to have a firm opinion and then stand by it is worth as President of the United States more than half a dozen wishy-washy officials who can be swayed by every wind that blows. Richard Nixon said he would not be intimidated by demonstrators nor by ultra-liberals in Congress. The country can afford to applaud a leader with such convictions. He may be right or may be wrong, but when he is certain in his own reasoning that he is right and stands steady he definitely has that much in his favor.

The vast majority of the people in this country are not ready to turn over public affairs operation to mobs of profane beer drinkers who are willing to follow a leader who knows little more about realities than they do, and who can't tell you what he would substitute for what we have even if he should tragically win the chance. That's the sort of intimidation Nixon faces. Regardless of party, law-abiding Americans will support him in his honest convictions, and will be glad the country is in the hands of such an individual.

It may be that the chief executive has taken a leaf from Henry Clay's book in preferring to be right than to be President. He remarked some months ago that he had his convictions even if he should be a one-term President. We can't think of any one of those most frequently mentioned as candidates next year who could or would face up to the challenges of the hour without blinking and without surrendering his conscience to the whims and fancies of his critics, whoever they may be.

It has been said of the President that he possesses a stubborn streak. Well, stubbornness can have its virtues at times, and this may be one of those times. Richard Nixon in heart and conscience is as much a loyal American patriot as are many of his detractors. He wants to do what is right and what is best for his country. For our part, we are willing to trust his judgment until there might be good reason not to do so.

Unemployment Can Be A Barrier

By ELMER ROESSNER

President Nixon has promised to get the boom on the road again, a promise he must mean sincerely because unless he does he will be another one-term President.

He has a lot going for him. The government clique is sounding bullish, as might be expected. But there are some sound indications that the economy is getting better.

But there is one difficulty. That's unemployment.

There are more than five million unemployed in the United States. Our loss of the war in Vietnam will add to it. Draft calls will be smaller and more veterans will be discharged.

One of the best things going for Mr. Nixon is the housing boom that appears to be getting under way.

Nixon Helped. The President can take some credit for the boom. There is, of course, a tremendous shortage of housing in the nation; thousands of families doubling up; thousands upon thousands living in derelict buildings. The Administration, after vainly trying to halt inflation with high interest rates, has lowered them and increased money available for mortgages.

The housing starts in March were at an annual rate of 1,918,000. There were 1,465,400 in recessive 1970 and only 1,490,000 in happy 1969.

If the rate continues, and it can if the government continues to make mortgage interest rates, it will do much to bring back the boom and re-elect Mr. Nixon.

Most important, it will create jobs, not only for home builders but also for street and highway building, utility workers, teamsters and many others.

It will also create a renewed demand for furniture, appliances and all the other things that go into a new home, and it will create jobs to make them. Some starving artist may sell a painting to hang over a fireplace.

Other Bright Spots. The Department of Commerce's April survey showed a rise in consumers' intentions to spend. The increase was less than the Administration hoped for and, while retail sales have increased somewhat, most of the increase is due to higher prices.

However, industry spending for new plants and equipment may not increase employment.

The Economic Department of McGraw-Hill, after its 24th

Office Offers Stage

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — You can win an Oscar in Hollywood or a Tony on Broadway, but there is no nationally recognized award for acting in an American business office.

This is a shame because if there is any real center of drama in U.S. life it is the average office, full of shabby green desks and bilious-feeling people, each desperately playing the role of his choice to the hilt.

For example, they all display the talent of a Barrymore even in getting on stage. If you just pause and see how some of the people in your own office come to work each morning, you are likely to find familiar some of the following characters in the cast:

"How do you do you do you do you do?" sing out "Mike and Ike the office drunks, as they enter arm in arm. They have had a pick-me-up already at a bar down the street. Because of the theory that there's safety in numbers, they do their drinking together. By 10 a.m., each will have stolen $5 from the petty cash drawer, and they'll be back at the bar, stool to stool, having a drink during coffee break.

The femme fatale—The boss' secretary, an antique adventure in fading mascara, writes her name ruefully in the dust on her desk. As she tugs off her gray-white gloves she notes there's a hole in another finger, sits down primly and says fatalistically, "Oh, well, one hell at a time."

Busted Ben-Jauntily whistling alternate strains of "dixie" and "Tea for Two," the office gam-

The regular meeting of the Board of Alderman will be held in the city hall tonight. Only business of minor importance is scheduled for consideration.

The Citizens Ice Company suffered only minor damage today in a fire that destroyed a house adjoining the ice plant. The cost of repairs was estimated at $75.

It was announced today by Mr. Collins, manager of Home Furniture Company, that free miniature cedar chests will be given to the girl graduates of Greenville High School.

It was also announced today that the Westbrook swimming pool will be thrown open to children of school age this summer if plans of citizens, interested in improving the condition of the city, meet with success.

girlish spirit still is undimmed and expectant.

Motherhood in the abstract is a cornerstone of America, a paragon of virtue praised by politicians. It brings to mind a long-suffering martyr to children and family.

Mother didn't fit such a cardboard ideal. She was impulsive, quick to laugh and to reprimand, generous and demanding. She could be angry after breakfast and singing before noon.

Depression hardships survived

She suffered and sacrificed, raising a family as the Depression made farming a disheartening enterprise, but she didn't have the patience to martyr very well.

Sally was her nickname when she grew up in rural Pitt County, one of the 11 children of Biggs and Jutry Hart Cox. Zenobia Teresa was simply too much of a mouthful.

(Incidentally, with her brother, Desmond Cox, she will be host on June 13 for the annual Cox family reunion in Oak City.)

Sally was a pretty girl, high-spirited and easy to spoil.

Her doting father did, right from the start, in the tough, turn-of-the-century times when making a child happy was one of a man's few pleasures.

So did Daddy, a dozen years older and naturally shy. He marveled at Mother's sunny nature, and matched her brightness with his own true strength.

We children thought we spoiled her, too. We indulged her whims, did the housework with her, laughed and argued with her.

She depended on all of us, trusted our care, and leaned on our love. Maybe that wasn't being spoiled at all.

Parents Taken for Granted

I took parents for granted as part of the furniture God provided to make my world safe and pleasant.

"Gee, your mother is pretty," a fourth grade friend said.

"Yeah," I replied nonchalantly to hide my surprise. At supper I studied her face by lamplight. Her eyes danced with blue sparkles. Her black hair, beginning to streak with gray, escaped in crisp tendrils from the bun on her neck.

She was pretty. I knew it, and felt proud. I was glad I had blue eyes, too.

Mother's gift to me was curiosity about life and the world, and an urge for self-expression.

She read and I did, too. She read the Bible aloud some Sunday evenings. Times didn't get too hard for us to subscribe to newspapers and magazines.

She read the library books I brought home, sometimes with shock but never censorship. "Well, I didn't think much of that one," she said tartly after "Of Human Bondage," in which W. Somerset Maugham put hero and heroine in the same bed.

Sewing Fine Seams

The needle gave her creative outlet. She made clothes, without the luxury of patterns, for her family and neighbors who asked her help. She quilted, knitted, embroidered.

When I wanted to try, she didn't say boys weren't supposed to. She gave me the materials, some casual advice and let me go ahead. A blue and white coverlet with embroidered animals is evidence of my proficiency.

She's a good mother, then and now, because she's a good friend.

Ours is not a demonstrative family. You know more about the love that keeps you close than you ever hear or say. Mother's Day is a chance to say those things unsaid but just as true every day of the year.

Saying it seems inadequate. Imitation is the sincerest form of appreciation.

My older sister laughed when her daughter was 16, remembering how she chafed under Mother's strict dictums.

"If I live long enough," Sister said in exasperation and affection, "I think I'll not only understand everything Mother did, but end up doing all the same things myself."

If we catch in our parenthood some of the joy for life she shared with us as children, we will have said "Thank you, Mother," in the very best way of all.

"That's good," I said. "But it will already have been built by then and cost the country $50 billion."

LIFE among the DEAD

Children take a shortcut over the tombs on the way home from school.

The cemetery in Saigon's Chinatown is home for many of the living, too.

A family gathers for a meal between the graves, above. And, below, police patrol the cemetery on motorcycles.

Among straight, measured rows of gray tombs in which thousands of their ancestors are buried, the cemetery dwellers of Cholon live in their small, tin-roofed houses. To these people of Saigon's Chinatown, the Cantonese cemetery is a big backyard. They live and work and play among the dead.

The women hang their laundry out to dry on poles stretched between headstones, and prepare lunch under sunshades propped on the graves. A fisherman stands on a row of tombs and tosses his net out over the graves to dry—tomorrow he will go back again to the nearby canal to catch food for his family.

Policemen on motorcycles and bicycles drive down a cement walkway between graves on a routine patrol, stopping to check identification cards before they ride away. The Viet Cong once used the tombs as hide-outs during fighting in Saigon.

Flower gardens grow in the cemetery, too, the flowers planted in pots because the ground is covered with cement. And, since tombs in many rows are connected, children can scamper along the rounded tops of the stones as well as between them on their way home from school.

At night, the living go back inside their homes, and the peace of the dead returns to the stone homes of their ancestors.

Now Installing Toll-Free Line

Carolina Telephone is now installing facilities to provide toll free service between Greenville and Bethel.

Don A. Collier, local manager for the company, said that these facilities will include specially designed central office equipment at Greenville and Bethel.

A new telephone cable between the two exchanges is also being erected to provide circuits for the toll free calls.

Collier said that the new service is to become effective on August 26, 1971.

Under the plan, which subscribers here endorsed, long distance charges for calls between the two towns will be eliminated. There will, however, be some upward adjustment in local service rates to compensate the telephone company for its loss of long distance revenues when the service becomes effective.

Directory Representatives are now in town working on a new directory which will include the Bethel subscribers, along with Greenville, Ayden, Farmville, Fountain and Snow Hill. Scheduled for delivery August 26, 1971, it will be the largest telephone directory ever published in this area.

Collier stated the new directory will contain more listings than ever before as a result of the growth in the area and the addition of Bethel.

The cover of the new telephone directory features full color photographs of these eastern North Carolina recreational and tourist areas: the Benvenue Country Club, Rocky Mount; Lake Waccamaw; Ocracoke Lighthouse; a Pamlico River hunting scene; a sports fishing boat, Morehead City; and a scene on Kerr Lake.

Rogers Flies Over Sharm el Sheikh

By LEWIS GULICK
Associated Press Writer
JERUSALEM (AP) — With Israel's army chief of staff as his guide, Secretary of State

William P. Rogers flew over Sharm el Sheikh today and told newsmen "he had a better understanding of the situation after seeing the area."

Rogers sat in the copilot's seat as Lt. Gen. Haim Barlev pointed out strategic areas at the stronghold on the southern tip of the Sinai desert. They circled the outpost for about 15 minutes before returning to Tel Aviv.

The flight lasted 1 1/2 hours.

Using his presidential jetliner, Rogers sandwiched the sightseeing flight in between talks with Israeli leaders marked by brisk debate over his desire for more flexibility in Israel's demands in the peace negotiations with the Arabs.

Sharm el Sheikh commands Israel's waterway to the Red Sea; East Africa and the oil of the Persian Gulf. The Israelis say it is vital to their security and that Egypt's blockade of the adjacent Strait of Tiran caused the 1967 war. They want to keep it in any peace settlement and the Egyptians want it back.

Rogers has not presented any specific proposals, a spokesman said. But he is known to feel that the Israelis have not been forthcoming enough in setting out proposals for negotiating.

Arriving in Tel Aviv from Cairo Thursday to complete his Middle East tour, the secretary of state went first to Jerusalem for talks with Premier Golda Meir and other — Israeli policymakers.

A U.S. spokesman described the 2 1/2-hour meeting as "a good and animated exchange."

Israeli sources said Rogers asked Israeli to be more flexible—and they expected he would pursue the matter at a second round of talks this afternoon before his departure Saturday.

The question of what pressure Rogers might bring to bear is a highly sensitive one with the Israelis, who look to the United States for their main outside support.

"One should not assume, for the exchange of views that we will not arrive at a strenuous dispute," said Deputy Premier Yigal Allon, one of those at the Jerusalem session.

The secretary of state set the tone of his Israeli visit in an arrival statement which spoke of U.S.-Israeli friendship and "the constancy of America's support for the well-being and security of Israel."

Ben-Gurion has said he believes Israel should abandon all but the Golan Heights of Syria and East Jerusalem in return for what he terms "true peace."

After dinner, Jerusalem's Mayor Teddy Kollek drove Rogers to the old section of the city to view the Wailing Wall, Judaism's holiest place, and to the Mount of Olives.

A U.S. spokesman denied that Rogers' trip to East Jerusalem, which Israel took in 1967 and Jordan wants back, implied an endorsement of the annexation.

In northern Sinai, eight Israeli soldiers were wounded when a mine exploded.

City To . . .

A. Holiday to use rip-rap (broken up concrete pieces) on a ditch to control erosion on the property of C. P. Shaw of 201 Kent Drive. Shaw appeared before the council, contending the development of the area, coupled with the pattern of street developments, were factors resulting in the erosion. Holiday informed the council of three plans to combat the erosion. The first two were based on use of covered pipe, and would have entailed considerable expense.

The City Manager was authorized by the Council to proceed on a first phase for making an official study relating to a possible bus transportation system for Greenville. Hagerty outlined a series of steps, and asked that immediate approval be given only to the first part, that dealing with funds to secure the services of a professional firm, Kimley-Horn Associates, to assist the city in initial preparation of application to secure a federal study grant.

Dr. Fuller, making the motion to approve the first phase, stipulated a ceiling of $1,200 for the initial cost.

Public hearings were conducted, and a one year approval given, for requests for mobile home permits. Approval for these were given to Mrs. W. R. Gladson, 512 East Gum Road; Oakley Carr, Blount Street; and McDonald Carr, Memorial Drive. A one year renewal was granted to Vernon R. Stalls, 134 West Gum Road.

Two new city ordinances were approved at the meeting, one prohibiting consumption of alcoholic beverages on public property, including streets and sidewalks. The ordinance also prohibits anyone offering another person an alcoholic drink on public property.

The second ordinance authorizes the police to have vehicles parked in no parking areas towed away where parking makes the normal flow of traffic a problem. Hagerty commented that the city is replacing signs in such places with new signs pointing out that towing would be enforced.

A request by Planters National Bank to place a temporary mobile branch bank at the corner of Cedar Lane and East Tenth Street was approved for a one year period. Herbert Brett, who will be the manager of this branch, presented the request, noting that when the shopping center is constructed, Planters will build a permanent facility in the shopping center area being planned for the vicinity of U.S. 264 and U.S. 264 by-pass.

A request for rezoning of the John F. Moye property on the north side of U.S. 264 by-pass (west) was set for a public hearing on June 3.

Unscheduled items considered at the City Council meeting included a report that beginning July 1, 1971, the Blue Cross will have to increase the amount of monthly payments for hospitalization insurance for city employees. The new rates will be $9.14 per month employee, an increase of $2.02 per person from the current rate of $7.12. The Blue Cross based the increase on rising costs, and the fact that for the period September, 1969 to February, 1971, the firm paid out $69,405.32 compared to $69,567.24 paid in by the city for employees. Insurance for dependents of city employees will still, as in the past, be borne by the individual employee without cost to the city.

The Council declined to grant a request for waiver in the case of Calvin Hansley for non-payment of licenses for pool tables at a Recreation Center owned by Hansley on West Fifth Street.

It was noted that Hansley has met all the requirements for physical safety of the building, and that he could, with the purchase of licenses, operate the pool tables, provided the city ordinances for parental or guardian supervision of children under 16 were met when minors used the facility.

Requests were considered for street lights on Pittman Drive and in Section 7 of Eastwood Sub-Division. The Council directed attention of these requests to the city manager.

Fire Chief Ray Smith reported that the 1970 Ford fire-truck had been returned to the factory at Battle Creek, Michigan for repairs under the new warranty contract at no cost to the city. The council also authorized the installing of another reel and hose on this truck while it is at the factory. This will cost the city about $1,000. Smith pointed out this installation would result in a higher credit rating by fire insurance underwriters.

Police chief Floyd Lucas said this morning that investigation so far had determined that over 163 dozen hot pants, valued at $4,000, and 20 sample dresses, valued at $60, were stolen.

Chief Lucas noted that the hot pants were already in crates and ready for shipment at the firm. The dresses were not finished items, he added.

Phil Lewis singled to load the bases, and two wild pitches let Wilson and Dickinson score.

WILSON — Four members of the Rose High School tennis team participated in the sectional tennis tournament here yesterday. All four, however, were eliminated prior to the finals.

Two lost out in the first round. Glenn James was defeated by Steve Richards of Goldsboro, 6-0, and 6-1. Mike Stevenson lost to Thomas Traylor of Norlina, 2-6, 8-6, and 10-8.

New Format For ACC Tourney

By KEN ALTYA
Associated Press Sports Writer

SOUTHERN PINES, N.C. (AP) — The Atlantic Coast Conference has revised its basketball championship tournament format and will consider other changes in view of the July 1 departure from the league of South Carolina, last season's champion.

Basketball provided the major problems for the annual spring meeting, which had been scheduled for this morning but was moved up to Thursday afternoon in the absence of other pressing items.

South Carolina trustees announced in March that the school would withdraw from the eight-member conference Aug. 15 because it could not operate under ACC standards for athletic scholarship recipients. The conference, in addition to the NCAA grade point ratio of 1.6, requires a score of 800 in college board tests.

Last December the conference eased the test score requirement. It voted to accept a score of between 700 and 799, provided the student had a grade point ratio of 1.75.

South Carolina said this still would not solve its recruiting problems and the trustees' withdrawal announcement followed three months later.

The departure date was advanced six weeks to July 1 simply to bring it in line with the start of the new operating year of the conference.

The withdrawal of South Carolina leaves the conference with seven teams. As a result, the tournament to determine the NCAA basketball representative will start with a first-round tripleheader next March at Greensboro. The regular season leader will be given a bye. In an afternoon doubleheader the second place team will meet No. 7 at 1:30 p. m., and No. 3 will play No. 6 at 3:30 p. m. A single night game will pair Nos. 4 and 5 at 8 p. m. Thereafter the schedule of former tournaments will prevail.

A three-man committee headed by Gene Corrigan of Virginia, has been named to study the feasibility of playing first-round games on college campuses. The committee will report at the December meeting.

The conference basketball television package has been prepared and bids invited from TV producers. It includes nine Saturday afternoon games, beginning Jan. 8.

Night basketball telecasts have been left to individual schools to arrange, provided they do not conflict with other ACC games in the area, or with high school games. The only exception would be a game televised nationally involving an ACC team.

The net worth of the conference as of May 3 was reported at $1,033,000. After an audit is completed the eight schools will receive their share of basketball and football television receipts and football bowl money.

Dr. Ralph Fadum, North Carolina State faculty chairman for athletics, was reelected president, retaining the post he has held since last January when he succeeded R.R. Ritchie of Clemson, who is retiring from the university this spring.

Other officers elected Thursday were Edward Hedgepeth of North Carolina, vice president; and D. Alan Williams of Virginia, secretary-treasurer.

Fadum said there has been no applications for membership in the 18-year-old league.

There will be no more jersey swapping, such as done by the Maryland basketball team before its tournament game with South Carolina last March. It resulted in every Terrapin playing under another name and causing much confusion among the spectators. Such practice was ruled out by the conference Thursday.

The conference golf tournament, extended to 72 holes this spring and split between Aiken, S.C., and Rockville, Md., will be cut to 54 holes at one site to be picked later.

Christian In First Victory

First Christian won their first game in Church League competition last night, nipping Trinity, 11-10, in the final inning of play. In the other game, Grace ripped Marantha, 22-2.

In the National division, Immanuel leads with a 3-0 record, while Mt. Pleasant is 2-1, and Black Jack, Grace, Oakmont and Piney Grove are all 2-2. Marantha is 0-4.

In the American division, Presbyterian is 4-0, followed by St. James, 3-0. Belvoir is 3-1, followed by Meadowbrook, 2-2, Christian, 1-3, St. Gabriel, 0-3, and Trinity, 0-4.

First Christian had recorded one other win, last season, but that came by forfeit.

Trinity started the scoring, however, getting three in the first, but Christian came back with four in the bottom of the inning. Four more Trinity runs came in the second, while Christian added one in the third. Trinity then scored two in the fourth and one in the fifth for a 10-5 lead. Christian came back with four in the fifth, including a homer by Jerry Jones to pull with one at 10-9.

Then, in the seventh, they got the winning run. With one out, Sherwin Bennett doubled and scored on Glenn Roper's double, tying it up. Marvin Hunt then got a hit, driving in Roper with the winning run, ending the game.

Roper led the hitting, getting four.

In the other game, Grace got all it needed with nine in the first inning. George Pleasant reached on an error and Ken Smith walked. Donald Hudson singled, loading the bases. Lindsay Hardee tripped to drive in three runs, and he scored on an error. Louis Hardee walked and Sammy Pugh got a hit. Billy Peed drove in Hardee with a hit, and Oscar Hallman reached on an error, scoring Pugh. Robin Coggins then ended the scoring with a home run.

Grace went on to add one in the second, two in the third, six in the fourth, three in the fifth, including a homer by Peed, and one in the sixth.

Marantha picked up one in the second, and another in the fourth as Gray Mayo homered.

Hudson and Doug Randlett led the Grace hitting with four each.

McNally Gets 5th As Orioles Win

By TOM SALADINO
Associated Press Sports Writer
Dave McNally's wife told a rare joke but it was business as usual for her husband Thursday evening.

The result was a slick four-hitter for the Baltimore left-hander, who is gunning for a fourth consecutive 20-victory season as the Orioles swept a two-night twinbill from the Calfornia Angels by 3-1 scores. The triumph gave McNally a 5-1 mark and it was his fifth complete game of the young season.

In the nightcap right-hander Pat Dobson evened his record at 2-2, scattering nine hits and striking out 10 Angels as the Orioles crept to within one-half game of East Division leader Boston.

"When I was leaving the house today, my wife said, 'pretend you're Vida Blue.' She usually doesn't make wisecracks like that," said McNally.

Mrs. McNally was referring to the young Oakland A's southpaw who has jumped off to a 7-1 record this season.

In other American League action, Minnesota topped the New York Yankees 5-3 and Boston routed Chicago 10-1.

In the National League, Houston tripped Montreal 5-2 and Los Angeles trimmed Cincinnati 5-2.

The Chicago at New York Mets and St. Louis at Philadelphia games were called by rain.

McNally got all the support he needed in the fifth inning when run-scoring singles by Brooks Robinson and Dave Johnson snapped a 1-1 tie. The only run the red-haired lefty gave up was in the fifth on doubles by Tony Conigliaro and Ken McMullen.

Dobson was staked to a 1-0 edge in the opening inning of the second game on Frank Robinson's RBI single and Baltimore made it 3-0 in the fifth on Dobson's run-scoring single and a sacrifice fly by Elrod Hendricks.

The 6-foot-3 right-hander had a three-hit shutout until McMullen homered in the eighth. Although rapped for five other hits in the last two innings, the Angels failed to score.

Rookie Steve Braun bounced a two-out, two-run infield single in the eighth inning, giving the Twins their victory over the Yankees and a three-game sweep of the series.

Braun's hit off Mel Stottlemyre, 2-1, was grabbed by Horace Clarke, but the second baseman couldn't make a play as Cesar Tovar and Tony Oliva scored. Earlier Tovar had driven in the tying run with a single.

The Red Sox took advantage of six Chicago errors and left-hander Gary Peters tamed the White Sox on seven hits.

Rico Petrocelli and Luis Aparicio drove in two runs apiece for the Red Sox while George Scott cracked a solo home run for the winners.

Larry Dierker captured his fifth straight victory without a loss but the right-hander needed eighth inning relief help in the Astros victory. The Astros won the game in the opening inning, scoring three runs off loser Steve Renko, 3-1. A walk and singles by Roger Metzger, Jim Wynn and Jesus Alou got in two runs and another scored on John Bate-man's throwing error. The Dodgers jumped on lefty Jim Merritt, 0-3, and reliever Tony Cloninger for four runs on five hits in the third inning and rolled to their victory.

Wes Parker, Jim Lefebvre and Billy Grabarkewitz had run-scoring hits in the inning and winner Claude Osteen, 3-2, added a sacrifice fly.

Lefebvre later cracked a solo homer in backing Osteen while Johnny Bench slammed his 10th of the year, a two-run shot in the eighth for the Reds.

NATURAL BRIDGE, Va. (AP) — The Southern Conference was expected to decide here today where its 1972 championship basketball tournament will be held and whether to expand its membership by admitting Appalachian State.

The two items-headed the agenda on the conference's annual spring session, and there were indications of differences of opinion on both.

While officials of Appalachian State, a former member of the Carolinas Conference, believed they had the necessary five votes for conference membership, there were some reports of possible opposition.

At least one source inside the conference, which operated the past year with seven members after the withdrawal of George Washington, indicated he felt Appalachian could add little to the league's prestige.

Nevertheless, The Citadel was prepared to offer the Boone, N.C., institution, second only in size to East Carolina University, for membership.

Five cities made bids Thursday to the basketball tournament committee to serve as host for next year's title event, but most sources felt it was between Greenville, S.C., and Richmond, Va.

Presentations were made by three other Virginia cities — Hampton, Roanoke and Norfolk. Like Richmond, all will have new coliseums ready by the time of the tournament.

It seemed certain the playoff, which determines the league champion and NCAA tournament representative, would not return to Charlotte, N.C., after an eight-year run there.

The tourney was moved to Charlotte after being played a number of years in Richmond, where it outgrew the Richmond Arena.

But attendance has declined recently in the North Carolina city.

This year's seven-team tourney had a net income of just $37,000, said athletic director Les Hooker of William and Mary, a tournament committee member.

Leagues Huddle Over Merger

NEW YORK (AP) — The rival American and National Basketball associations huddle in separate sessions today for the second day to consider the possibility of a merger.

The NBA met for seven hours and the ABA, four Thursday at mid-town hotels in serious consideration of joining forces.

It's the latest attempt to end the astronomical bidding war for college players and inter-league raiding of stars.

"If something is not done at this meeting, the war will return," said Charles Cavagnaro, general manager of the Memphis Pros of the ABA. "All the owners in the ABA feel this way. We're tired of having our hats in our hands."

"This is the third meeting we have had in conjunction with the NBA—and if we can't get together now, then we'll start fighting again."

Cavagnaro warned "things will be worse than before" if the issue is not settled this week in New York.

A spokesman for the ABA said there was a possibility of some kind of announcement today, but would not specify. An NBA spokesman said league owners were taking a hard look at merger possibilities.

While the younger ABA has made it clear it wants a merger, the long-established NBA has thus far been unable to get the required 13 votes of its 17 members.

Assuming there is a favorable NBA vote, the result would be an agreement to join the ABA in a presentation to Congress for merger. If the leagues do agree to merge, they must be joined by federal legislation.

Anthony Clark has a big responsibility. One false move of his hands and he's mixed the wrong measure of grain for the Old Crow formula. Does he ever miss? The proof is in the good taste of our Bourbon.

Making Bourbon which tastes good, bottle after bottle, made Old Crow famous. Back in 1835, our people figured out the formula that took Bourbon-making out of the hit-or-miss category. Later, they handmade the first sour mash Bourbon. We still use our hands in making Old Crow.

After work, most of our men keep on using their hands. Anthony Clark calls on the same craftsmanship mixing grain as he does tying fishing flies.

Over the years, craftsmanship like this has made Old Crow America's best-tasting Bourbon.

Governor Can't Hope To Keep Up With Agencies

By YVONNE BASKIN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Bob Scott has virtually no contact with the ladies who run the Confederate Women's Home in Fayetteville. And yet, if they should create a scandal, he would be directly responsible.

The home, which now houses about 25 elderly widows of Confederate veterans, is only one of the nearly 300 state agencies, boards, commissions and institutions in North Carolina which are answerable to the governor.

It is through these agencies, and the more than 100,000 employees who run them, that a governor must carry out his constitutional duties to "take care that the laws be faithfully executed."

And yet, Scott and the state's three living former governors agree that it is impossible for a North Carolina chief executive to subject this bureaucracy to the leadership and close scrutiny that efficient government demands.

The Committee on Reorganization of State Government headed by Sen. John Henley, D-Cumberland, has identified 46 agencies as those which exercise most of the state's executive power. These are the agencies like the Departments of Revenue, Conservation and Development, Insurance, Health, Social Services and Administration and the Highway Commission which the governor has a great deal of contact with during his term.

Several dozen other state agencies are in some way related or answerable to these major departments.

But the 200 or so agencies left are responsible only to the governor. And Scott has said repeatedly that he doesn't even expect to meet all these agency heads before he leaves office.

Wiley Earp, Scott's assistant in charge of appointments, said in the first year and 10 months of his term, Scott made 2,600 appointments to various agencies.

Some of these, like the Highway Commissioners, the members of the Board of Conservation and Development and the heads of large departments, represent powerful and highly political appointments.

But, Earp said, the bulk of the governor's appointive powers involve putting people he has never met onto boards and commissions he has never heard of.

Some of these, especially the historical commissions and licensing boards, are so steeped in local tradition or professional rivalries that a governor has no chance to base his choices on either politics or merit.

And, Earp said, some of the agencies are so obscure that his office can't find a mailing address or a list of current officials for them when it comes time to make appointments. Others just seem to disappear and become forgotten in the shuffle.

Take the Lockhart Gaddy Wild Goose Refuge Commission, created in 1953 to preserve and continue a refuge in Anson County. The governor was to appoint five citizens to the nine-man board, and four state officials were to serve as ex-officio members.

But apparently the governor's office never got word that the commission had been created, and to this day no one has ever been appointed to it.

Essentially, this is what state government reorganization is all about. Somebody has got to keep up with all of these agencies to see that the functions they were created for are carried out. But the governor just cannot do this, any more than a corporation president could deal with hundreds of supervisors on an individual basis.

The state is now required, by a constitutional amendment passed by the voters last Nov. 3, to streamline the bureaucracy into not more than 25 departments by 1975.

A reorganization proposal presented to the General Assembly Tuesday would create a new group of cabinet level administrators for state government — 18 men directly responsible to the governor and to whom all other agencies would be responsible.

The hope of the men who drew up the plan is that the legislature will change its traditional attitude toward the executive branch, which has been to keep it decentralized and therefore, not very powerful.

The legislature has been asked to give these new department heads the authority to streamline and merge agencies and programs placed under their departments and to centralize such functions as budgeting, purchase, personnel and public relations.

These men would be appointed by the governor and could appoint, with the approval of the governor, the heads of agencies placed under their departments. The study commission recommended that the positions be given large enough salaries so that they would attract top administrators.

In the 1971-73 biennium, the departments heads—most of them call secretaries—would be authorized to create staffs by reclassifying vacant positions assigned to agencies in their departments or using personnel from these agencies.

Henley's study committee noted that, "Whether or not the new department level becomes a costly and unproductive layer of state government depends primarily on the authority and responsibility assigned to the department head."

"If he is given responsibility without authority, he will be ineffective, and few qualified men will be attracted to the job," it said. "If he is assigned both responsibility and adequate authority he will have a demanding and productive position worthy of the best talent available."

Even though the report stressed the necessity of giving these men adequate authority, it also noted that "many of the existing relationships between the various boards and commissions and the corresponding operating agencies cannot be changed in 1971 because this would require a major revision of the statutes."

The report suggested that a balance must be created between the powers of the agencies and their new department heads during the next biennium.

During this time the new secretaries would study ways to coordinate activities of related agencies, cut out duplication and draft proposed legislation for the 1973 General Assembly to consider for streamlining the internal organization of each department or transferring functions between departments.

"You don't move bureaucracy overnight," Henley said. "I think the new secretary should be slow to use his powers, but if he sees duplication he should eliminate it. It should be done cautiously and deliberately and done right."

"First, we need to put them under the new levels and let them live together," he said. "Now these agencies never see each other."

The opposition to the reorganization has come from the agency heads who, as Scott put it, "don't want their little houses tampered with."

Many agencies told the committee they didn't like the departments they were assigned to, and others said they didn't want to give up their independence at all. These agencies will undoubtedly express their opposition again when the legislature begins consideration of the proposed groupings.

Reorganization of some sort is now a certainty. The constitution demands no more than "25 principal administrative departments" by 1975.

But how effective the reorganization is depends on the legislature and how much strength it will allow the executive branch of government to have.

The legislature could build protection around various agencies, making them independent barons within their new departments, and give the secretary little authority to administer the service for which he is responsible.

This would leave the executive branch as it is now, fragmented and awkward to control. In that case, the state will have just one more highly paid set of bureaucrats and leave the governor, as Scott put it, "shod with two left shoes."

Students Plan Fund-Raising

More than 90 junior and senior high school students in Greenville will converge on the street corners on Greenville for several hours Saturday.

The purpose of their intersection invasion is to raise funds for the Community Ambassador fund, which provides the means of underwriting expenses of the two students chosen each year to represent Greenville as Community Ambassadors in foreign countries.

This summer, two girls, Mickey Jones and Annie Young Clark, will go abroad as Greenville's teen-age representatives. Mickey will live for six weeks with a Dutch family in Holland. Annie Young's family will be a French-speaking one in Switzerland.

Each year since the inception of this community program, the support of citizens, merchants, industries and civic clubs in Greenville has made this "getting to know other people" project a reality. In the past, boys and girls from Greenville have lived in Japan, Greece, Italy, France and several other countries as a community ambassadors.

This year, in order to once more send the two selected ambassadors, the young members of the United Christian Youth Movement (UCYM) must raise a total of $1840. This is the amount needed to complete the more than $4,000 required for all expenses, including language training prior to their journey overseas.

Persons wishing to support this project who do not have an opportunity to contribute to the intersection collections, can send their contribution to: Pattie Sanders, UCYM Community Ambassador Fund, 1706 Battle Avenue, Greenville.

Essentially, this is what state government reorganization is all about. Somebody has got to keep up with all of these agencies to see that the functions they were created for are carried out. But the governor just cannot do this, any more than a corporation president could deal with hundreds of supervisors on an individual basis.

The state is now required, by a constitutional amendment passed by the voters last Nov. 3, to streamline the bureaucracy into not more than 25 departments by 1975.

A reorganization proposal presented to the General Assembly Tuesday would create a new group of cabinet level administrators for state government — 18 men directly responsible to the governor and to whom all other agencies would be responsible.

The hope of the men who drew up the plan is that the legislature will change its traditional attitude toward the executive branch, which has been to keep it decentralized and therefore, not very powerful.

Church Will Hold Revival

The Rev. William Gordon, pastor of the Farmville Presbyterian Church, will be guest minister each of the four evenings. Services each night are to be conducted at 7:30. Various choirs, including the Farmville Choir on Wednesday night, will take part in the revival services.

Rev. Gordon, a native of Monroe, N.C., is a graduate of Davidson College and the Union Theological Seminary in Richmond, Va. Prior to his pastorate at Farmville, which he began five years ago, Rev. Gordon was pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in Fairmont.

The public is invited to attend the revival services at Boyd Memorial Presbyterian Church.

Wayne Board Honor Pupils Named For 2-Year At A.G. Cox School

Med School

GOLDSBORO — Wayne County Commissioners Tuesday endorsed efforts to establish a two-year medical school at East Carolina University.

The endorsement for the two-year medical school followed requests from the president of the nine-county Neuse River Regional Planning and Development Council, D. Livingstone Stallings, and the chairman of the Pitt County Commissioners B. Vernon Cox.

Cox stated the need for the school to include a community-oriented facility to help alleviate the shortage of doctors.

Stallings said the expansion and improvement of a medical center in eastern North Carolina is one of the most important goals of his organization.

"It appears that the badly-needed two-year medical school being sought by East Carolina University will not become a reality unless many prominent voices are heard from this area," Stallings emphasized.

"There are several basic advantages to a two-year program over the one-year alternate program being suggested," Stallings said.

"A one-year program would not attract doctors to the area who are so badly needed. And, because of limitations which would appear in a one-year program, ECU's medical students would be less prepared scholastically when they transferred to Chapel Hill."

Stallings also noted that generally, medical students do not transfer until after their second year of study.

The little boy follows her finger, and she is warmed and gratified by his smile of appreciation.

It seems as if mothers are eternally anxious to make sure that their children get all there is to get out of life—that they miss nothing.

Mothers would, if they could, show their children all that there is to see and give them everything—time for fun, time for play—new clothes, new toys, a television to watch cartoons, endless red kites and bright yellow balloons and, later, skis and sports cars.

Yet, in this eagerness to show and to give, aren't they in danger of overlooking some of the most important things of all? What of beauty, of serenity, of joy—the knowledge of God's goodness, His love, and familiarity with His house on earth... the Church?

Worry Clinic Smiles, Praise Win Friends

"It's better to light a candle than curse the darkness," is a wise adage. Thomas Edison followed this positive motto and has thus lighted the whole Earth at night! If you are shy and friendless, then follow the example of my Northwestern University students. Smile and praise your comrades for that will put a new light in their souls!

By GEORGE W. CRANE
Ph.D., M.D.
Case Q-547: Thomas A. Edison gave us the electric light back in 1879.
Many people were skeptics, so he demonstrated his new invention before them.
"Making things which kill men," Edison added, "is not for me."

"I would rather brighten the world a little bit.
"It has been stepped in darkness long enough."
Edison thus was a POSITIVE thinker.
Jesus differed from Confucius in part because of His positive approach to human relations.
"Do not unto others," warned Confucius, "what you would not have others do unto you."
"Do unto others," advised Jesus, "what you'd have others do unto you."
Please take note that Christ thus omitted the negative word "not."
Confucius was born 551 years before Jesus, so he apparently belonged to the negative era.
For Moses, too, about 1,200 B.C. brought down the Ten Commandments from atop Mount Sinai.
And the Ten Commandments routinely state: "Thou shalt not
