

Gap Narrowing In Mid-East

By United Press International
Secretary of State William P. Rogers said Saturday his weeklong Arab-Israeli peace-seeking mission succeeded in "narrowing the gap" between Egypt and Israel. He sent his top Middle East expert back to Cairo for further consultations with Egyptian leaders.

Rogers said on leaving Tel Aviv for Rome following two days of talks with Israeli leaders that Joseph C. Sisco, assistant secretary of state for Near Eastern affairs, was returning to Cairo to present Egypt with "certain clarifications" of Israel's position on a pullback from the Suez Canal. Sisco accompanied Rogers on his tour of Saudi Arabia, Jordan, Lebanon, Egypt and Israel which was delegated by President Nixon to reach an interim settlement on the canal and an over-all accord for peace in the tense Middle East. Sisco flew to Cairo from Rome where Rogers went to meet Italian leaders and Pope Paul VI before returning to Washington.

Rogers said "we think there has been some narrowing of the gap" between Egyptian and Israeli demands, particularly with regard to what U.S. officials described as a "key concession" by Israel which did not reject the notion of an Egyptian "presence" on the occupied Sinai side of the canal.

In Cairo, diplomatic sources said Sisco's visit "raises our hopes a great deal." They said he would meet with Egyptian Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad Sunday and later with President Anwar Sadat.

The sources said they assumed Sisco was bringing "meaningful clarifications" to Cairo on the Israeli position regarding reopening the canal as a prelude to an over-all settlement.

They said in his talks with Israel leaders Rogers "hit hard" on the need for an advance commitment from Israel to withdraw from all Egyptian territory occupied in the 1967 war. Israel captured the Egyptian Gaza strip and the Sinai Peninsula.

Win-The-War Marchers Demand Asian Victory

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A flag-waving, hymn-singing crowd of about 14,000 persons cheered a telephoned greeting from Vice President Nguyen Cao Ky of South Vietnam Saturday and roared approval of demands for a U.S. military victory in Southeast Asia.

Fundamentalist preacher Carl McIntire's "Patriots' March for Victory" down Pennsylvania Avenue ended at the Washington Monument, where—in view of the White House—McIntire urged President Nixon to "reverse your policy to give the world the leadership it needs in confronting and defeating communism."

Undaunted by an earlier rain and what McIntire called "fear of the hippies," an estimated 2,500 persons, from hard-hats to Bible-carrying grandmothers, set out from the foot of the Capitol at noon. By the time the rally began at the monument the crowd had swelled to about 14,000 by estimate of the U.S. Park Police.

A cheer went up when a call came through from Saigon at 2:40 p.m. and Ky's voice was heard over the loudspeaker.

"Hello, how are you? This is Vice President Ky. Can you hear me?" he said, and then the connection was broken. Ky had cancelled plans to attend McIntire's last "Victory March" in Washington in October, citing threats of violence but denying political pressures.

Other scheduled callers were Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek of Nationalist China, Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama and Lt. Gov. Lester Maddox of Georgia, who said that "it's time for the American people to say they're tired of compromises and sellouts" in Vietnam.

The rally broke up with another rainstorm about 4 p.m., just as a call from Wallace came through from Dallas, Tex. "And I pray that we will soon be out—victoriously," Wallace's voice boomed out as soaked demonstrators ran for cover or toward their buses. A group of hippies whooped and circled in a rain dance during the pandemonium.

The telephone call from Ky was never reconnected, and the call from Chiang never got through.

McIntire said he was "very satisfied" with the day's events except for the turnout, which was the smallest of the three victory rallies he has staged in the past 13 months.

"There's no question about it—the Lord rained on my parade," he said. "But the Lord knew what He was doing. He wants us to press on for another round." He said he would hold another rally later this year in Washington.

Two long-haired young men were arrested and charged with disorderly conduct after a brief scuffle with victory demonstrators. The two identified themselves as John Conrad of Sarasota, Fla., and John Majors of Fargo, N.D.

A dozen mounted park police rode through the outskirts of the crowd, keeping antiwar activists at a distance.

Construction worker Gene Shaffer won rousing cheers when he waved a dirty, tattered flag he said he wrested from peace demonstrators a year ago during a hard hat march through New York's Wall Street.

Communist Hit During Birthday

By KENNETH J. BRADICK
SAIGON (UPI)—Communists attacked allied forces and detonated a mine against U.S. paratroopers Saturday in violations of Buddha's birthday cease-fires. At least two Americans were killed and three wounded. Two South Vietnamese soldiers were killed and five wounded in a Communist ambush. In Cambodia, a U.S. helicopter was shot down, killing three crewmen.

Widespread American air attacks also were reported shortly before the start of a 48-hour Viet Cong cease-fire and a 24-hour allied truce called to mark the anniversary observance.

U.S. B52 bombers pounded targets in Vietnam early Saturday and the eight-engined bombers also flew raids over Laos and Cambodia—both predominantly Buddhist nations but not covered by the truces that were limited to Vietnam.

Military spokesmen said U.S. Air Force F4 Phantom jets streaked into North Vietnam Friday to hit antiaircraft guns firing at American planes flying raids over the Ho Chi Minh trail in Laos.

SIMPSON — A five-year-old boy was killed here Friday afternoon when he rode his bicycle into the path of a car.

Struck at an intersection near his home in Simpson was Monty Frizzell Jr., five. The driver of the car was identified by investigating officer, Trooper James C. Ball as James Rogers Bailey, 21, of Route 3, Greenville.

The death, which Coroner E. W. Harvey attributed to a crushed chest and internal injuries, was declared accidental. No charges were made.

The victim was the son of Monty Frizzell, an audio-visual technician with the Pitt County Board of Education.

Letter Backs Med School

TARBORO — The chairman of the steering committee working toward a two-year medical school at East Carolina University has urged Gov. Bob Scott to press for a two year medical program for the ECU campus during the current session of the North Carolina General Assembly.

Tarboro attorney Cameron S. Weeks outlined his thoughts on the medical school question in a letter to Gov. Scott, dated May 6.

In expressing his hope that the governor will support a bid for a two-year medical school, Weeks noted, "Whether you desire it or not or have even given it a thought, it will be more than a memorial to you. It will be something that will benefit this State even more than the wonderful undertaking your illustrious Father accomplished concerning our secondary roads when he took the farmers out of the mud. (It was under the administration of Gov. W. Kerr Scott — the present governor's father — that work was started to pave secondary roads in the state.) It will be an everlasting memorial to you and the entire Scott family."

Saying plans for a one-year medical program at North Carolina State University at Raleigh and an expanded program at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill "can do nothing but destroy the whole idea when it comes to any fruition respecting a two year med school on the campus at ECU," Weeks explained, "my answer to it, however, is if it can be done that cheaply at NCSU, and that cheaply at UNC, Chapel Hill, we ought to have all three, including the two year med school at ECU."

Weeks who is a member of the Board of Trustees of the Consolidated University of North Carolina, is blind. His letter continued, "I have often sat back and thought of course, there are times when I have nothing to do but think, under the circumstances of my situation, about inventions: why not invent it now, we are one day in the near future. So I say, why wait ten years to have a two year med school at ECU or two more years or four years. Let's get the show on the road now and do something for the people of North Carolina from a health standpoint and put this State on the map from a nationwide standpoint."

Educators from across the nation are noticing "with great approval" the development of the community college system in North Carolina, Weeks wrote. "We are already above the average State in many, many things," he continued.

"I think one of the finest things we could be above the average State on would be the good health of our people. The only way in the world we can establish this and conquer the health problem is to have more doctors," Weeks emphasized.

"The only way we can have more doctors is to have more med schools."

"I'm positive that with the timber our people are made of in their bodies they will feel a moral obligation to stay in North Carolina if they attend our school at ECU."

Weeks noted, too, "Of course, inducements at the proper time leaning toward this end could be established without any difficulty."

Weeks' letter indicated that copies have been sent to other state officials including Lieutenant Governor Pat Taylor, and the chairmen of the finance committees and appropriations committees of both houses of the General Assembly.

"By such copy I am asking those distinguished gentlemen to do everything that they can to help carry out the thoughts in this letter. You and those men do it at this Session."

Unemployment Affects Pitt County Too

By BARBARA FUSSELL
(This is the first in a two-part series which deals with unemployment in Pitt County.)

Tobacco in the summer; unemployment lines in the fall — Formerly a tenant farmer, F. Carter's life evolves around tobacco.

C. Washington has four children whose father deserted them. With only a grammar school education she seeks employment in vain.

H. Clarke attends a mental health clinic. There is no work available, nothing to occupy his mind.

A freak accident caused C. Donovan to have his legs amputated, yet he wants to feel useful and work.

Besides these persons — not their real names — many others in Pitt County desire work. According to William L. Batchelor, Pitt County Employment Security Commission counselor, though, the county is close to the national unemployment average of 6.6 percent.

People in almost every life situation for various reasons are affected by the lack of employment — from the poorly-educated to the well-educated.

Mrs. Jo Ann Smith, social work supervisory of the Family and Children's Services in the Pitt County Department of Social Services cited problems welfare recipients face in finding employment.

Residence in rural areas is one problem Mrs. Smith related. Rural inhabitants are isolated from plant and factory locations; thus, transportation to the work areas is difficult to obtain.

Women who could do domestic work receive fewer job offerings when they reside in rural areas. "For jobs that require a day here, a day there type of situation people are not usually willing to drive long distances to transport workers to their homes," reflected Mrs. Smith.

Related to the inability to find jobs is the care of children in the home. Many parents cannot leave home to work because they have preschool children Mrs. Smith said.

Consequently, better paying industries hesitate to employ welfare recipients because of child care problems. For example, when a child becomes sick the parent may have to be absent from work for a week; therefore, industries consider the recipients high risk employees.

Unskilled Laborers Abundant

Another problem Mrs. Smith cited is the current shortage of jobs for the unskilled laborer. She believes this lack of job opportunities is a result of the general economic change in the area. For example, as in Carter's case, tenant farmers are not as prevalent today. Previously, tenant farmers received a "draw," say $100 a month, from their employers until they sold their share of the crops. After the sell the employer would deduct the "draw" from the tenant farmer's profits.

The "draw" situation created a yearly cycle assuring the tenant farmer of a monthly income. Today those who harvest tobacco and work in tobacco factories may be employed only around six months. The other six months they usually file for unemployment or seek welfare.

Also, a problem Mrs. Smith related is that many of the recipients lack the ability to learn complicated tasks. "It has taken some people as long as five years to improve themselves in order to obtain good employment," she said.

Besides the inability to learn complicated tasks, Mrs. Smith said many people have less than a tenth grade education. Employment for them is unlikely.

Many of the poorly-educated, she feels, would profit from additional training. For instance, Pitt Technical Institute has been helpful in this area, especially with their nurses' aide program.

Finally, for various reasons, some recipients experienced breakdowns in their overall emotional adjustment from very mild to moderate related Mrs. Smith.

The Vocational Rehabilitation Center and the Sheltered Workshop have been used as the chief resources to help these people. As in Donovan's case, he is physically disabled and though he is eligible for disability benefits he needs to feel useful. It is likely employment would help accomplish this.

Besides those who are poorly-educated, disabled or unskilled laborers, the well-educated and skilled also face unemployment problems in Pitt County.

Report Certain To Draw Fire

By NOEL YANCEY
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A study committee agreed Saturday to recommend a new plan for governing state-supported higher education in North Carolina that would deconsolidate the University of North Carolina and replace the State Board of Higher Education with a new statewide coordinating board.

The chairman of the Governor's Study Committee on the Structure and Organization of Higher Education Lindsay C. Warren Jr. of Goldsboro, said the committee voted 13 to 8 for a plan calling for the new coordinating board, which would leave the state's 16 institutions of higher education to be governed by separate independent boards of trustees.

President William C. Friday, of the consolidated university contacted by newsmen for comment, said he had only heard a headline on the proposed reorganization on his car radio while returning from an alumni meeting. "There is nothing I should say at this stage," he said. Dr. Cameron West, director of the Board of Higher Education, said he had no comment for the present.

Dr. James Ferguson, chancellor of the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, called the commission action disturbing.

"I am disturbed at the prospects of deconsolidation," Dr. Ferguson commented when told of the recommendation. "But I really can't comment on the situation until I learn more about it. A lot depends upon the budget review powers of the coordinating board."

Warren said a minority of his committee had supported a plan to retain the present structure of higher education and "restate the existing powers of the Board of Higher Education."

Warren said Gov. Bob Scott had been advised of the committee's action and had authorized Warren's news release. "In the near future, the committee will present to the governor its report and a minority report setting forth the views of the committee," Warren added. "The governor has asked me to say that he will have no statement to make about the matter until he has read the committee reports and had an opportunity to review the same," he concluded.

Scott named the 23-member Warren Committee in January and charged it with the task of recommending a new structure for governing higher education in the state. The committee's members were drawn largely from the ranks of trustees of the 16 institutions of higher education.

The governor has said he wanted a new structure that would eliminate the political log-rolling and confusion that has surrounded higher education in the state in recent years.

The proposals of the Warren Committee are certain to arouse a storm of controversy in the General Assembly, particularly the scrapping of the consolidated university whose board of trustees is one of the most prestigious organizations in the state.

If approved by the General Assembly, the proposals would bring about the most drastic change in the control of higher education in North Carolina since the formation of the consolidated university during depression days.

It also would overshadow the creation of the board of higher education back in 1955 and the developments of recent years, including addition of units at Charlotte, Wilmington and Asheville to the university and conferring of university status on East Carolina University, Western Carolina University, Appalachian State University, A and T State University, Pembroke State University, North Carolina Central University, Winston-Salem State University, Fayetteville State University and Elizabeth City State University.

Something Of A Victory

By NOEL YANCEY
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Bob Scott's recommendation to the General Assembly Tuesday on reorganization of state government contained something of a victory for Director Roy Sowers of the State Department of Conservation and Development.

In recommending reorganization of state government into 18 cabinet-level departments, Scott urged that the big sprawling C&D department be kept together under a single agency instead of being placed under separate conservation and development agencies as recommended by the Committee on Reorganization of State Government.

Sowers had contended stoutly that conservation and development functions should continue under the same agency.

The governor had not always been sure which setup he favored. While serving as lieutenant governor four years ago, Scott proposed that a study be made of the feasibility of dividing C&D into two agencies.

In his message to the General Assembly Tuesday, Scott said some people feel that "development" and "conservation" are entirely at crosspurposes and the department should be divided.

"There is something to be said for this view," Scott told the General Assembly, "but there is another side of the coin."

He said the state's industrial development program is considered one of the best in the nation and its contributions to the state are "beyond calculation."

"It should be allowed to go forward within a framework of proven value," Scott added.

"At the same time, our development efforts can be, and are, compatible with our conservation efforts," he said. "The two are complementary, serving as supportive agencies one for the other. Industrial development can, and is, proceeding with a healthy concern for avoiding damage to the natural environment."

State Sen. John Henley, D-Cumberland, who headed the study committee, was asked about the committee's proposal that C&D be separated into a separate Department of Economic Development and a Department of Natural Resources.

Henley said a majority of the committee felt that under the present setup development had been emphasized over conservation, and that if they separated, "conservation and development would receive equal status in government."

In his message to the General Assembly Tuesday, Scott called for creation of a Department of Natural and Economic Resources that would embrace the present function of the C&D department, the Department of Water and Air Resources and the Wildlife Resources Commission.

"This will provide a local group of agencies concerned with the betterment of our total environment."

This is essentially the setup that Sowers had recommended when he appeared before the Committee on Reorganization of State Government.

In a speech at Greenville last year, Sowers said: "We need economic development in North Carolina, especially in our poor regions and it must be accomplished within the framework of a protected environment."

"That, in my opinion, can be best achieved by having both the conservation and development functions of state government traveling down the same highway, and not on two different roads with a structural fence in between."

Support For Stand

GOLDSBORO — A resolution commending Dr. Leo Jenkins, president of East Carolina University, for his stand on student conduct and dormitory visitation was adopted this week by the Goldsboro-Wayne Ministerial Association.

The resolution echoed support for "the recent decision of East Carolina University trustees defining the university's position governing housing for students and student visiting privileges in dormitories."

It also offered congratulations to ECU trustees for exercising that authority and in their continued support of Dr. Jenkins in carrying out the directive.

Trustees voted Wednesday to ban any form of visitation by students in dormitory rooms at the school. The vote supported an earlier decision of the board's executive committee to revoke the visitation policy following a March 30 demonstration at Dr. Jenkins' home.

The Ministerial Association also adopted a resolution commending Duke University president Terry Sanford for his leadership in establishing "appropriate standards of conduct for student tenants" living in university accommodations.

Bonds Approved

FOUNTAIN — A $45,000 bond issue for improvements to the town's electrical system was approved by voters here Tuesday.

The vote was 54 for and 14 against, according to Mrs. Annie Gray Purvis, Town Clerk.

The Mayor and all the Town Commissioners were re-elected. None had any opposition. They are Carter Smith, Mayor, and Alfred Jones, Scott Peele, N. A. Gardner, Bruce Beasley Jr., and William Walker.

$1,000 Grant

St. Gabriel's Catholic Church has received a $1,000 grant from a Roman Catholic Church fund for a tutorial program, probably for grade school children.

Father C. H. Mulholland said the program will probably be held for six weeks during the summer. As of now, it is planned to enlist the help of East Carolina education students and to work through the city school system to secure the names of students who need special help.

Any parent interested in enlisting tutoring for his child should contact Father Mulholland at the St. Gabriel's Catholic Rectory.

Approval For Pay?

RALEIGH (AP) — Some members of the General Assembly want to do something about biennial raises for top echelon state employees, which are usually handed out just after the legislature has adjourned.

Rep. Sneed High, D-Cumberland, said the purpose of legislation introduced by him and Rep. J. E. Mohn, D-Onslow, Friday was "to keep them from announcing $5,000 a year raises a week after we go home, when we have raised the other state employees five percent."

The measure which he introduced would provide that legislative approval must be given to any proposed raise for a top-level state employee.

Under present law, the governor and the Advisory Budget Commission review the salaries of more than 1,100 top state officials at the end of each fiscal year and approve raises. No legislative approval has heretofore been required.

Police Over Courts

RALEIGH (AP) — Tar Heels apparently have higher regard for the police than the courts, according to preliminary data from a public attitudes survey.

Oliver Williams, one of two university professors in charge of the survey, told the N.C. Law and Order Committee Friday that "We are finding a very high regard for the police and somewhat less regard for the way the courts are operating."

Williams said it was too early to say definitely what the final results of the survey would be, but the preliminary results made this showing.

He said the year-old survey is trying to measure how the public is victimized physically and psychologically by crime.

"By talking to people," he said, "we are able to get a great deal more information than by just looking at crime statistics. We are finding out what types of crime go unreported, what the public's experience has been with investigation of crime and how satisfied they are with police, courts and correctional institutions."

Environmental Bonds?

RALEIGH (AP) — The State of North Carolina may need to float a sizeable bond issue to meet the environmental challenges of the coming decade, according to Lt. Gov. Pat Taylor.

"It's becoming apparent there is not enough money to meet all the needs," Taylor said.

He said some thinking was being done on the possibility of holding a statewide referendum on bonds to finance possible land purchases, such as Bald Head Island, and to aid counties and towns in water and sewer projects.

Bald Head Island has been a favorite objective for environmentalists who want to preserve it in its natural state. It is an undeveloped island in the mouth of the Cape Fear River. A development corporation has plans to turn it into a resort.

More and better water and sewer treatment facilities are also seen as a major environmental need, to clean up the water supply.

"There is also talk of a possible school building bond issue," Taylor said.

Fine Voices In The Making

Some very nice things happened at East Carolina University's Recital Hall Friday night on the first of two evenings of Seven Scenes from Seven French Operas.

For one thing, it revealed beyond a doubt there are some fine voices in the making among students of the School of Music. It is an exciting prospect to speculate on how far in a few years, once they have reached maturity and had the advantages of training, that young singers like Donna Stephenson, Robert Beard and David Faber will go in the highly competitive world of opera or concert singing. They are well endowed with talent, and with a little bit of luck, the public will be hearing much more from them.

Others too, were more than competent in their roles in the ECU spring production of opera scenes. David Gradis, Janet Boyd, James Powers, Sandra Nicholson, Mary McFarland, Jacqueline Somers, Alan Jones and Linda Green were all in excellent form.

Throughout the program an air of competence and professional coordination marked the production. In most instances these young singers knew how to conduct themselves as actors as well as singers—which adds much to the effectiveness of any opera production, full dress or in an abbreviated version.

The longest scene, an English version of a scene from Offenbach's "Orpheus in the Underworld" was great fun—carried out with just the right touch of spoofing. Mercury dashing about in tennis shoes is a novel touch not usually encountered, but it worked. Jacqueline Somers as Juno, goddess of the hearth-home, had a field day trying to keep order.

The tender, lyrical opening scene, from Delibes' "Lakme" was one of simplified poetry with June Laine and Christy Burns like warm colors moving against an austere background. This simplification set the pace for all the staging. With the utmost in economy of special effects, by the use of only a suggestion of props and a few lights, each scene was enhanced by the absence of any fussy clutter. This bare essentials approach fortunately focused attention on the young singers, where it rightfully belonged.

The diversity of French opera emerged from this production of a little more than two hours. The often mined legend of Orpheus was contrasted in its various interpretations by the inclusion of a scene from Gluck's "Orpheus and Eurydice" immediately prior to the Offenbach version. The savage passions of Samson and Delila revealed in the scene from Saint-Saens' "Samson and Delila" had its counterpoint in emotions of an entirely different order expressed in Massenet's "Manon."

Wilson Nichols and Ellen Reithmaier, pianists; Peggy Buenger, organist for the "Faust" and "Manon" scenes; Linda Pesatore playing the horn and Michael Kinzie the violin; were effective in their support of the singers.

Dr. Clyde Hiss, who directed the student singers and conducted them in the Offenbach scene, is to be congratulated for a first-rate evening of opera excerpts. Hiss also sang one role and gave brief remarks on backgrounds of the operas and composers.

The one sad note about this otherwise delightful program was the lack of a sizeable audience. The small auditorium was only about half filled. Many Greenville residents missed a fine opportunity Friday night to find out for themselves how good the ECU student singers really are. —JERRY RAYNOR

D.C. Judges Drop Charges Against Many Demonstrators

By MICHAEL J. REILLY
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — District of Columbia judges, confronted with the largest number of arrests in a single day in the city's history, are reversing many actions taken by police during the week's antiwar and antipoverty demonstrations.

W. Halleck Friday dropped charges against 200 persons arrested outside the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. He ruled unconstitutional the parading-without-a-permit law under which they were arrested.

Other judges made similar moves as they continued hearings for some of the 12,000 persons arrested during the current wave of antiwar protests which ended Thursday.

Many of those arrested Wednesday on the Capitol steps for "unlawful entry" were freed.

When the D.C. corporation counsel charged that many demonstrators had come to Washington "with the express purpose of bringing to a halt the government of the United States," Judge Harold H. Greene asked: "Why didn't you charge them with that?"

Another 346 demonstrators were released on bond after Greene ruled their fingerprints and arrest records must be kept out of Federal Bureau of Investigation files. Many said they refused to submit to police processing for that reason.

When Greene made the ruling, the demonstrators were scattered in various detention facilities. But earlier in the day they had been held in a cellblock designed for no more than 250 persons.

Superior Court Judge James A. Belson toured the cellblock Friday morning and ordered immediate transfer of many held there. He called the block tantamount to "cruel and unusual punishment."

Dr. Ronald Gregor, who visited the block, said conditions presented severe risk of an epidemic among demonstrators and guards.

Stage Walk For Mankind

Gov. Bob Scott's twin daughters joined hundreds of others North Carolina teenagers Saturday in "Walks for Mankind" to raise funds for the sick and the poor.

Meg and Mary Scott, the 15-year-old twins, walked with about 250 young persons in Raleigh, one of seven cities across the state where marches were being held.

Meg planned to double the eight-mile scheduled length of the march to raise $138 for the ailing and poverty stricken of Appalachia, New Mexico, Hong Kong and Mexico.

Mary's contribution, $68 for the eight miles, was sponsored in part by the governor, who like other sponsors agreed to pay a certain amount for each mile walked by a certain person.

The project was organized by Dr. James Turpin of San Diego, Calif., national chairman of the "Walks for Mankind," and by State Rep. James Beatty, D-Mecklenburg. The Junior Womens Clubs in the state sponsored the walks under "Project Concern."

Capp Charged In Morals Case

EAU CLAIRE, Wis. (AP) — Cartoonist Al Capp has been charged with a morals offense against a 20-year-old coed. He issued a statement calling the allegation part of a leftist campaign to stop him from speaking on campuses.

Dist. Atty. Lawrence W. Durning said the warrant issued Friday by County Judge Thomas Barland charged Capp with sodomy, attempted adultery and indecent exposure.

The warrant named Alfred G. Kaplin, 61, of Cambridge, Mass., who draws the "Li'l Abner" comic strip and speaks around the country under the Capp name.

The complainant, married, told authorities she went to Capp's motel suite to report to him on the liberal point of view on the campus, where he lectured later that day to some 2,500 persons. She had been assigned to brief him after he requested the information, she said.

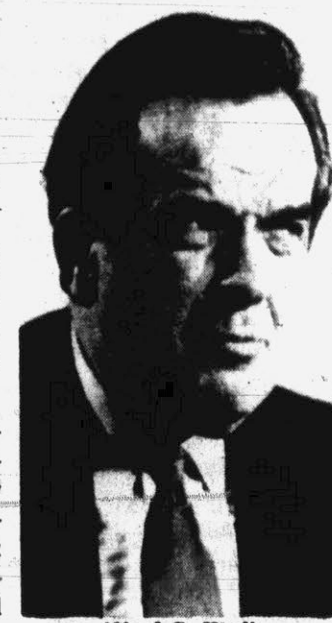

Capp, whose home is in Cambridge, Mass., replied in a statement issued through his Boston attorney, Alvin Hockberg.

"The allegations are entirely untrue," the statement said.

Capp has been sharply critical of many who demonstrate in opposition to U.S. policy in Vietnam and of unruly activities of college students.

The warrant and complaint, sent by mail to the sheriff of Suffolk County, Mass., was issued following an investigation by the district attorney's office and police, Durning said.

An Eau Claire State University coed, who cannot be identified under a Wisconsin law which prohibits public identification of victims of sex crimes, told authorities the alleged offense took place April 1.

Question Of Opening Tract Raised In Robbinsville Area

AP News Special
By ED ROWLAND
Associated Press Writer

Should a 3,800-acre stand of virgin timber, unspoiled by man since only the Cherokee Indians roamed the southern Appalachians, be left inaccessible to most tourists? Banker Smith Howell of Robbinsville, N.C., says no. He is a spokesman for many in the Robbinsville area of western North Carolina, an almost isolated corner of the state near its borders with Tennessee and Georgia. Howell says a 37-mile road from Robbinsville to Tellico Plains, Tenn., across the mountains, built along the lines of the famous Blue Ridge Parkway, would bring a million persons a year through the area.

He says they could enjoy the view from their cars, whereas now visitors must hike for some distance to get a first-hand look.

The road has been authorized and the money allocated from federal funds, since most of the land between the communities is owned by the National Forest Service. Construction of 20 miles—from Tellico Plains east almost to the North Carolina border and from Robbinsville westward—has already begun or is under contract.

In the remaining portion, however, stand two tracts of virgin timber. One is the 3,800-acre Joyce Kilmer Memorial Forest, dedicated in 1936 to the young poet who died in World War I without knowing that his poem "Trees" would become a classroom standard.

The other is just across a ridge to the north of the Kilmer preserve, 10,700 acres of the Slickrock Creek Watershed.

Whereas the Kilmer forest never felt the ax of lumbermen who roamed the area at the turn of the century, the Slickrock area has some second-growth trees. But almost a third of it is so remote and steep that it, too, is as it was before white settlers came.

Conservationists, chiefly the Sierra Club, are preparing legal papers to defend the Kilmer and Slickrock areas.

The Forest Service is finishing an environmental impact study of the situation.

And businessmen, like Howell Smith, and civic boosters, like retired Army cavalryman Frank W. Swan, are getting impatient.

Howell says: "We feel like Kilmer is one of the most valuable assets in western North Carolina. Under no circumstances would we have it destroyed."

"Kilmer is really beautiful, but it is rough and rugged. Only the most rugged with packs on their backs can see it. With a road on top, others—the old and the young—could see, too."

Howell and Capt. Swan, who moved to the area in 1928 when he retired from the service, advocated a route for the highway along the top of a ridge at the northern edge of the Kilmer forest. But protests led to a Forest Service review, and early this year Sen. Bill Brock, R-Tenn., announced all parties involved agreed to move the route a few hundred yards north—out of Kilmer.

But the new route lies in the Slickrock forest, and more protests were heard.

Swan replies, "I'm just as much a conservationist as they are," but he makes it clear that alternate, bypassing routes are unacceptable. One, to the

Biggest Trees

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Some of the biggest trees of their types in the world grow in the nation's only memorial forest.

The forest is named for Joyce Kilmer, the young poet, killed in World War I, who in his poem "Trees" penned the words, "I think that I shall never see a poem as lovely as a tree ..."

The forest contains 3,800 acres deep in the North Carolina mountains. Established in 1936, it is maintained by the U.S. Forest Service.

One reason for the size of the trees is they have not been cut in hundreds of years. Another is the climate.

Nearly 80 inches of rain falls annually in the area, and one frequent visitor says he's hardly ever able to go there without getting wet. The moisture nourishes ferns and flowers as well as trees with trunks measuring 20 feet across.

No camping is allowed in the Kilmer forest. Sightseers must leave before nightfall.

The ground rules for visitors are not to avoid moving anything, living or dead.

The Sierra Club and other conservation groups propose combining the Kilmer tract with the larger Slickrock Creek Watershed into a national wilderness area under protection of a congressional act. Only one such area exists in the states—at Linville Gorge, 100 miles to the north.

Turn To The Poorer Counties

Looking at the decade between 1960 and 1970, North Carolinians can see the progress made in its industrial development program by the 104.1 per cent increase in the state's per capita income.

The fact that North Carolina's growth in this vital statistic outstripped the national rate is significant. But it is likewise significant that North Carolina had much farther to go than most states. Only Mississippi and South Carolina, both of which had and still have lower per capita income than North Carolina, showed a greater per centage growth in the decade.

Last year marked the first time in history that per capita income in the Tar Heel state reached above the $3,000 mark. The 1970 figure put North Carolina's per capita income at $3,188, more than twice the $1,562 per capita income of ten years ago.

Even so, North Carolinians still enjoy a per capita income $722 below the national average. It still ranks 39th among the 50 states in this category.

The gap has been closed, but much remains to be done before this state can assume that it is doing all it should to provide for its people an economic base with economic opportunities comparable to those in many other states.

There can be no doubt that the emphasis on industrial growth in North Carolina in the last couple of decades has been responsible in large measure for the increase in the state's per capita income. If the gap between per capita income in North Carolina and that of the nation is to be narrowed further in the current decade, the effort must be continued.

In recent years the state and its communities have become increasingly selective in the kind of industries they have sought. This greater selectivity with respect to wages and to environmental considerations must be intensified in the years ahead. It must be intensified even in the face of greater competition from other states for the new plants which are being established.

It is significant also, that if North Carolina is to make the kind of gains it wants, per capita income must be raised in poorer areas of the state as well as in the areas which already are at the top of the economic heap.

Per capita income in a number of North Carolina counties is still far below that for the state as a whole. And the gap is even wider between per capita income in the counties of this state at the top and the bottom of the economic ladder.

It is not enough for North Carolina to look at the progress between 1960 and 1970 and assume that the economic problems of all its people are being resolved. Unfortunately, they are not.

North Carolina's best hope for closing the gap between its per capita income and that of the nation as a whole in this decade is to place additional emphasis on raising per capita income in its poorer counties. Such emphasis will not hinder future progress of the wealthier areas of the state, and it will certainly enhance the economic position of the state as a whole.

How Gold Was Found In N.C.

By JOHN W. KENNEDY
(Concord Tribune)

CONCORD — John Reed, a Hessian soldier hired to fight for the British during the American Revolution, must have liked the land which he came to help conquer.

For it was at Charleston, S. C. that Reed deserted his Army and fled northward, settling in what is now Cabarrus County, North Carolina.

This German-born American settled the land in southern Cabarrus and tilled the not-so-fertile fields to provide a livelihood for his family.

On a hill overlooking Meadow Creek, John Reed constructed his "Mansion House" and here he lived with his wife, Sarah, until his death in 1845.

In 1799, his son, Conrad, was fishing in Meadow Creek and there on a Spring Sunday morning he spotted a shiny stone in the creek. The stone was about the size of a small smoothing iron.

Expensive Doorstep
For three years the hunk of shiny material was used as a doorstep in "Mansion House" atop the hill.

In 1802, Reed took the stone to Fayetteville where a jeweler confirmed that it contained gold. The following year, a nugget weighing 28 pounds set off America's first gold rush and within a few years gold was discovered at numerous other locations in Cabarrus County.

Until 1824, all of the native gold minted in the United States came from North Carolina, most of it from the Reed Mine. North Carolina continued to be the nation's chief gold-producing state until the Sutter's Fort discovery in California in 1848, and gold mining was the state's second most important business — second only to agriculture — until after 1850.

U. S. Mint at Charlotte
Because of the richness of the North Carolina mines, a branch of the United States Mint was established in Charlotte in 1837 and the Bechtler family in Rutherford County operated a private mint during this time. Even so, most of the gold production went into commercial uses.

Most of the mining until 1831 was done in the creeks and on the surface of the ground near Reed's "Mansion House." But in that year, Reed associated himself with several neighbors and their company opened shafts, one of them over 100 feet deep. By 1854 many of these shafts had been connected far below ground by a network of tunnels.

The Reed Mine continued operation intermittently until 1896 when the last large nugget, weighing 17 pounds, was found.

The author of a study of gold nuggets of the world, in 1900, proclaimed the Reed Gold Mine as the "world's champion producer" of gold nuggets in terms of size, number and value.

Now Historic Site
John Reed died in 1845 and he is buried on the property now acquired by the State of North Carolina as a historic site. Reed is buried beside his wife, Sarah, in a small family plot far back in the woods on the land which he helped settle.

Little did he know at the time of his death that more than 100 years later an entire State would become concerned and interested in his life, interested enough to develop a State Historic Site to mark the development of the Reed Gold Mine.

After his death, the land changed hands several times until it came into possession of the Kelly family of Ohio. After mining operations ceased in 1897, the property lay idle, except for occasional farming by tenants.

Today, almost 200 years after Conrad Reed first found his shiny stone in Meadow Creek, activity at the Reed Gold Mine will again pick up and people will again be flocking to the site of America's first gold discovery.

But this time, instead of digging for gold, the visitors will be at the site to see for themselves where American history was made.

Hanoi Seeing Troubles Grow

By ROWLANE EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Evidence of declining morale among Communist troops in South Vietnam, coupled with new shortages of food and war supplies, is now under study here by cautious officials who regard it as the most significant indication yet seen of Hanoi's problems.

If these new signs of trouble for the Communists are as accurate as indicated by their source—the top political general in the Communist command inside South Vietnam—they suggest this conclusion: that President Nixon's Vietnamization policy, now at an extremely delicate stage, is working.

The fresh evidence of trouble for the Communists is a remarkably candid clandestine broadcast by Cuu Long, a North Vietnamese general whose real name is Tran Do—the long-time political chief of all Communist armed forces in South Vietnam. The broadcast, routinely intercepted on April 29, came from the so-called COSVIN high command, a floating headquarters which operates along the South Vietnamese-Cambodian border. Gen. Tran Do flatly stated that "every unit, locality, and individual" engaged in the south have been infected by "rightist phenomena" in one form or another.

Although filled with doctrinaire exhortations, the broadcast warns that the war has become "increasingly critical, difficult, and fierce," despite the fact that U.S. forces are down from 543,000 to less than 248,000. Reading between the lines, the political chief of COSVIN reveals his deepest concern: that the political side of the "people's war" is deteriorating.

Thus, he repeatedly refers to "rightist phenomena" afflicting Vietcong sympathizers and the underground Communist political organization in the South on which the invading armies of North Vietnam, and the Vietcong, are dependent. He warns that "deep vestiges of the old regime and the old society and the reactionary, bad thinking of the U.S. imperialists and the rotten social regime in the south are still influencing our people."

"Our people" include cadres, military and political, who run the war in the battle zones. Some have now become infected with "counter-revolutionary, negative, and nonprogressive thoughts and acts." No harsher indictment could be made against Communist leaders.

The supply problem was referred to in bleak terms as "a shortage of everything." As for treating the wounded, the general paints this stark portrait: "Many surgical units, although they do not have a fixed area of operation, have succeeded in taking care of the sick and wounded combatants along with fighting and trying to find food for these combatants."

As translated here, that means food sources in hamlets and villages sympathetic to the Vietcong are no longer dependable. Coupled with that hopeful interpretation are the results of the two major U.S.-backed incursions into Cambodia and against the Ho Chi Minh Trail. Despite controversy over their success or failure, the heavy emphasis that Gen. Tran Do placed on the supply problems strongly indicates that they had a harmful impact on the enemy.

The importance of these Communist difficulties is further heightened by the manner in which Gen. Tran Do chose to reveal them. Under normal circumstances, such frank talk would have been sent to cadres in the field by sealed pouch, not transmitted over Hanoi's easily-monitored "Liberation Radio." That deviation from normal practice indicates new Communist difficulties in moving agents through territory in South Vietnam which is now pacified, or at least far less hospitable than it used to be.

Strength For Today

HARD TO UNDERSTAND
Would you believe it, that there are millions of people who read the Want Ads in newspapers every day? If you have something to give away or some rare object you want to acquire, put it in the Want Ads and your telephone will keep buzzing most of the day. Whether your name is John Smith or Cyril Vian doelimbriks, people will find your name in the telephone book and start calling you.

It's amazing, the way some people live. Even the great George Washington arose each morning at four o'clock and when there were newspapers to read saw that they all got read before tea time. One letter followed Washington while he was a long journey, and when the letter caught up with GW he had to pay eighty dollars in accumulated postage.

Look at that kid lying on the floor chuckling over the funnies, or the middle-aged woman who never misses a crossword puzzle. Someone else reads on page 35 that a dog has been lost "and I'll bet it was that dog that was hanging around here yesterday morning. Get the telephone book, and hurry."

Well, what's wrong about all this? Nothing. Why do we throw up our hats and yell "Hallelujah" over practically nothing at all?

The Lord looks down upon us from above and we can imagine that He smiles once in a while at the way we put in our time. They used to talk about the sixty-four-dollar question. Now people win lotteries and gain enough to live comfortably the rest of their lives. But at the same time there are tens of thousands that never won a dollar and never will.

Sunday Morning Notes

Gov. Bob Scott was the principal speaker at the dedication of the new limited access dual lane highway from Greenville to Kinston last week. He spoke under clear skies on a sunny, mild day.

However the governor had a slightly raspy voice. "I hope you'll forgive a little hoarseness in my voice," he told the crowd. "It's been with me since last Friday. The vice president called and said he wanted to come to North Carolina and I've been speechless ever since."

Taking note of the fact that it had required three administrations to complete the

Other Editors Say Harmed Cause

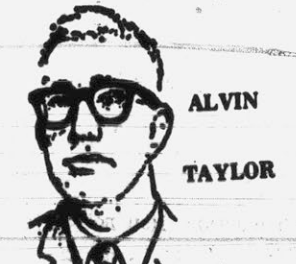

(Shelby Daily Star)

PROTESTERS of the current ilk in the Nation's Capital are indeed harming the cause of peace in Vietnam. In contrast to their immediate two predecessors, the Mayday Coalition has caused enough trouble among commuters to ruin whatever good intentions the Coalition might have had. If immediate withdrawal from Vietnam is their bag, then the cat is out of it, for every commuter and every policeman and every Guardsman and every federal trooper who has had to contend with these protesters is up to here in disdain and disavowal.

The current crop of protesters is doing no one any good. As bright as they appear to talk with them, they are mouthing words and philosophies that are too foreign. As polite and pleasant as they seemed less than a week ago, they are riotous in activities that do nothing other than raise tempers and confirm the worst that people think of demonstrators. They undo the good that the veterans and the Peoples' Lobby might have done a week ago in their peaceful demonstrations, and their actions cast aspersions upon the entire anti-war movement. It is difficult to separate the wheat from the chaff in such instances.

Yet, we must attempt to do so. To lump all protesters and all demonstrators in the same pile is to deny democratic principles of disagreement. To turn a deaf ear to all those who are saying something is to provoke more of the same. To punish the peaceful in the same way as the disrupters is to equivocate. To equate the placard-carrier with the traffic-blocker is not to see what is there, but to see only what we want to see. No quarter should be spared those who disrupt illegally and those who flagrantly break laws and disregard authority, but there must be an understanding of who is doing what.

WE ASK nothing that is impossible. Just because there is a protest does not mean unAmerican activities, does not mean the breaking of laws, does not mean that youth is going to the dogs. Just as campus protests of a year or two ago were overshadowed by the disrupters, so, too, are the protesters of the streets today overshadowed by the law-breakers. They must be dealt with according to the law, but the eyes of the law must be discriminating. The violent protesters of the Mayday Coalition have irrevocably harmed their own cause, if their cause is honestly that of immediate withdrawal from Vietnam. It never really had a chance, any way, but it stands to create a backlash now.

project the governor said this was "disheartening." "Lord I won't live long enough to see my projects completed if that's the way it is," he declared.

Gov. Scott said he was glad the dedication was being held at Grifton. He recalled being in the southern Pitt-Lenior town a few years back when he was lieutenant governor.

He said he went to a barber shop for a haircut and one man asked another if he knew who the customer was.

"This is the lieutenant governor" the first man explained.

The second man took a hard look and shook his head. "This is no lieutenant governor" Gov. Scott recalled the man saying. "There ain't a soul in Raleigh who knows where Grifton is."

The governor said he always felt a little bad when he was dedicating new highways. As is often done a section of the Grifton bypass was blocked to set up the speaker's stand and ribbon for the dedication.

Scott sympathized with motorists who were detoured

Extend Life Of Man?

By DELOS SMITH
UPI Science Editor

NEW YORK (UPI)—It is easy to lengthen the life span of laboratory mice: Underfed them. Many will live half again longer and some twice longer than mice usually do, and in vigorous health. Does it follow, then, that science can extend man's life span? We may never know. Caged mice have to get by for lifetimes on the calories scientists allot them. People don't—and won't.

Scientists interested in lengthening the human life span find people—society as a whole, in fact—generally uncooperative and indifferent. We make boasts to "long life" but do we really want a longer one than nature and circumstances allow?

That question occurs repeatedly to practitioners of the science of gerontology, which is the science of aging. One of its leaders, Dr. Denham Harman, remarking on this, cited for UPI the newest example of indifference.

The new budget proposed for the National Institutes of Health, Harman noted, contained an $8 million item for aging-related research, a piddling sum compared to those allotted to "negative" means of lengthening the life span which, of course, is conquering diseases which shorten it.

Yet this $8 million item was cut even before Congress considered the budget. To Harman and other gerontologists that is indicative of a general lack of understanding of what gerontology is all about.

Medicating old people to palliate old-age infirmities is incidental to its positive goal of understanding the aging process, whatever it is, to the point of being able both to slow it and to prevent its dire concluding consequences.

Cancer appears most frequently among the aged. Arthritis accompanies the aging process. Hardening of the arteries which leads to heart attacks and strokes inevitably goes along with aging, in greater or lesser degree.

"We gerontologists would like a shift of emphasis from the outer aspects of diseases to their inner aspects," Harman said. "These are the most basic processes of the body and they carry with them degenerative aging."

For harman the possibilities of lengthening the human life span are less important than those of preventing or at least lessening the degenerative changes of aging.

"The research goal should be more to make long life better, rather than to just make long life longer," he said.

That's a goal Harman and other gerontologists believe will interest very large numbers of people who don't seem interested in statistical life-span increases. Harman's hope is that it will be especially attractive to young people because "they have the most to gain and their backing would be enlightened self interest."

He is chairman of a now-forming voluntary health agency, the American Aging Association, called AGE for short, with temporary headquarters in his offices at the University of

Observations From Editorial Columns

HOW TO IMPROVE OUR ONLY WORLD

By ROGER CARAS

"O.K., Things are bad. But what can I do?" I get that question every time I speak and in about ten letters a day. It is a legitimate question, one worth a very serious answer. Walt Whitman said, "The American compact is altogether with individuals — America is nothing but you and me." I agree. So here is one man's opinion about what each of us can do.

(1) Learn and care — become involved, establish a personal ethic toward the world you live in and toward the people and creatures with whom you share it. Until you are personally involved and really caring, your actions will be self-serving gestures.

(2) Take a personal ecological inventory — literally, check through the things you do, the things you buy, use up, consume, and the things you throw away. How much is waste and how much is wasted? Are you nothing more than a consumer? Do you put anything back? How many trees have you planted to replace the paper you have consumed?

(3) At whatever stage of life you have reached, do what you can in both positive and negative action to limit the population growth. If you already have children, think before you have more. Think about adopting some.

(4) Give time to whatever problems and programs that you can. Get personally involved and don't be afraid to get your hands dirty. If you pick up after your neighbor, you are not demeaning yourself — you are elevating yourself and putting him where he belongs. Maybe he can learn from your actions. Do whatever you can for whatever programs you can affiliate with. Lick stamps, file, make phone calls, pick up the litter on a beach, rake a park, plant a tree, show films, lead kids, make speeches, write copy, drive a car, paint a fence ... get into it! You will find things out about yourself you might like.

(5) Refuse to use DDT or any of the other persistent environment-ocides.

(6) Refuse to purchase any objects of clothing or decor made from the bits and pieces of dead wild animals.

How visible are you to your government? Do you really care? How do you show it? Do you teach?

AIMLESS WALKING

The city council of Dallas recently passed an ordinance forbidding, and providing penalties for: "Walking about aimlessly, without apparent purpose, lingering, hanging around, lagging behind, idly spending time, delaying, sauntering and moving slowly about, where such conduct is not due to physical defect or condition."

This legislative landmark is intended, no doubt, to hamper and harass the hapless hippie, whose shiftless ways seem forever capable of arousing the ire and eloquence of our lawmakers. Perhaps it will work, especially in the cold and wet times of the year. But it could be hard, come spring, on teenage lovers, or small boys on their way to school, or old boys on their way to work who are neither hippies nor young lovers nor small boys, but who, suddenly and without warning, are struck by a passing breeze on the busy street, and pause a moment, and remember. —Louisville (Ky.) A Conservative View A U.S. Visitor's Reflections On British Justice

By J. J. KILPATRICK

LONDON — It was a little after 10:30 at the Royal Courts of Justice. In courtroom No. 9, Mr. Justice Hinchliffe was listening closely to two wigged and robed barristers reviewed the unhappy case that had been dumped this morning in the plump lap of British Justice.

A young woman—a librarian, as it happens—had become obsessed with an unrequited passion for a certain ballet dancer. She had pursued him, made scenes, flung herself at his feet. In desperation, the dancer had obtained an injunction against her, but the injunction had been violated and the harassment had continued. Now the question was whether the unhappy girl would be sent to prison for contempt of court. She sat in the third row, her blonde hair strawed listlessly over a blue coat, her face a white mask. Then suddenly she slumped forward and her head thumped against a bench.

"Excuse me, gentlemen," said Mr. Justice Hinchliffe, interrupting the discussion, "but she appears to have had a seizure."

The two barristers glanced around.

"Indeed, M'lud," said the first.

"It would so appear, m'lud," said the other.

And the discussion at once resumed. The unfortunate defendant, limp as a sack of flour, was lugged away. It later transpired that she had taken a massive dose of sleeping pills just before entering the courtroom. The next day's papers reported her recovery. The case was continued for a month. I tell the tale merely by way of illustrating the absolute imperturbability of British justice. An attempted suicide ruffles no ruffles.

The British system is better than ours in at least two ways — first, in the selection of judges for courts of record, and second, in the orderly speed with which most cases are disposed of. The system is harsher than ours in its treatment of criminal defendants, but this aspect has its good and bad points.

Our own process of judicial selection is permeated with politics; in many States, trial judges still run for office in popular elections. In Britain, by contrast, judges are nominated by the Lord Chancellor from the very highest ranks of the bar. The system produces superlative judges; in the past 270 years, only a single jurist—a member of the Admiralty Court of Ireland in 1828—has had to be removed by Parliament.

Criminal trials in the United States ordinarily proceed with maddening slowness, along a path strewn with a thousand procedural delays. How long did it take merely to seat a jury in the Manson trial? The British get straight to the point. Until quite recently, when a backlog temporarily dammed the flow of cases at Old Bailey, only eight weeks elapsed—at a maximum—from arrest to trial. No tedious voir dire examination of jurors is permitted. A typical jury is seated in 10 to 20 minutes; few trials demand more than two days. Appeals are disposed of in two months. And that, m'lud, is that.

The system has its drawbacks. In the usual criminal case, bail is unknown; the defendant languishes in jail until he is summoned to the dock. British courts are not handicapped, if that is a fair verb, by the strictures of a written Constitution as interpreted by the Warren Court. The rulings of trial judges command immense respect, and centuries of tradition have left a patina of dignity and deference upon the whole structure of jurisprudence.

One other aspect merits a word. At the very bottom level, equivalent to our police courts and traffic courts, the British rely upon lay magistrates—18,000 of them—who have had no formal training whatever in the law. They sit ordinarily in panels of three. They have power to impose fines up to $1,000 and jail sentences up to six months. These magistrates hear 97 per cent of all criminal prosecutions, and apparently they do a remarkably good job.

Experienced observers believe that the system, taken as a whole, works as a deterrent against crime. Indictable offenses in great Britain are increasing, but at less than half the rate of increase witnessed in the U.S. Granted, the system is hard on the innocent defendant, wrongly accused; but it works upon the guilty man with justice both swift and awesome. Our own bench and bar are not likely to buy the wigs and sashes of Great Britain, but we could profitably borrow a few other aspects for useful adaptation here at home.

QUITE A MOUTHFUL

One final observation that has little to do with politics. Word comes to me that hot pants and colored stockings will completely sweep the fashion world this fall. I am of the opinion, however, that fat and-or skinny legs remain fat and-or skinny, no matter what color stockings they're wrapped in.

The idea for Age originated with scientists of the American Gerontological Society, who felt the need to increase their lobbying power with the public and congress. Age in a memorandum to members calls attention to two bills pending in Congress to establish a separate government agency for aging research.

"President Nixon has called for a massive strike against cancer," the memorandum states, "yet the aging process, which ultimately becomes the concern of all Americans and underlies increased susceptibility to cancer and heart disease, has had scant support. Write your congressman—even a postcard—urging his attention and support of these vital bills."

As a scientist, Harman feels aging research in its present state offers the possibility of increasing the average human life span in the medically advanced countries by no more than 10 to 15 years. It now fluctuates around 70 years.

The present maximum attainable life span, in the generally accepted scientific view, is 110 years. Harman and other scientists are skeptical about

Ervin Isn't Convinced Of Equal Determination

By JOHN KILGO

RALEIGH — U. S. Senator Sam Ervin — even with the latest Supreme Court rulings — isn't convinced that racial discrimination will be attacked in the North with the same resources it's being assailed in the South.

"The Supreme Court talked about past history in the Charlotte school case," Sen. Ervin said in an interview. "I think the Supreme Court will continue to look at Southern cases a lot more closely than they will cases coming from the North."

Sen. Ervin said the busing of school students against their will violates the equal protection clause of the Constitution.

"You can't treat people in similar circumstances in a different manner," he says.

"We're saying now that some children have a right to go to a neighborhood school and others don't. That certainly, in my opinion, is a violation of the equal protection clause."

The new congressional redistricting plan drawn by the Tar Heel legislature makes it extremely easy on 9th District Republican Charles R. Jonas. The new 9th District is composed of Mecklenburg, Iredell and Lincoln counties. Jonas runs about even with his Democratic opponents in Lincoln, could be expected to run slightly behind in Iredell, but always wins a whopping margin in Mecklenburg.

So unless a political miracle transpired, Jonas could be expected to stay in Congress for many more years. But the 10-term veteran still tells close associates that he will retire from politics after this term. Meanwhile, 4th District

Congressman Nick Galifianakis lost Orange County from his district — and that didn't make him happy. Galifianakis ran well in Orange, but he took the legislature's decision philosophically. "I can certainly appreciate that redrawing congressional districts is a formidable task," he said. Galifianakis has been giving serious consideration to running for B. Everett Jordan's Senate seat. Redistricting will make him give that thought even closer attention.

Jim Hunt of Wilson is off and running for lieutenant governor. He is in Raleigh frequently, shaking hands and talking politics. Rep. Jim Beatty spoke in Goldsboro last week and was introduced as "possibly the next lieutenant governor of North Carolina." There will be no shortage of candidates

To The Editor:

Before other of our mayors are unfairly criticized for dereliction of duty, as was Mayor Wooten in a recent paid ad appearing the Daily Reflector entitled "Leadership," I feel compelled to state a few pertinent facts and observations.

1. Under Greenville's city manager form of government, the city manager is the administrative head of the city government. 2. Legislative powers of the city are vested in the city council. 3. The mayor, as official head of the city, greets visiting dignitaries and represents the city at such functions as are deemed expedient. He presides over council meetings and has the same power as other members of the council to vote upon measures coming before it, but he has no power of veto.

I have lived in Greenville for 18 years and have been continually impressed with the high caliber of our elected leadership and their dedication to the people and to the progress of our city. (Greenville today is proof positive of this statement.) Mayor Frank Wooten, like his predecessors, has worked diligently toward this goal. While serving as mayor, Mr. Wooten kept himself constantly apprised of the happenings in the city government through the city manager. Also, a particular member of the city council was assigned to each city appointed commission and committee, and they, in turn, made progress reports to the council as a whole. As for Mayor Wooten's "limited comments," one doesn't have to be garrulous to be effective. It is an acknowledged fact that some of our greatest leaders were men of few, but well-chosen, words. Mayor Wooten has proven himself to be a statesman, a gentleman, and an astute leader.

Mayor Wooten, you have served us well, and we thank you. Mayor West, we shall cooperate with you in every way we can. Mrs. M. P. Bailey

President Allowed Himself To Be Drawn Into An Economic Trap

By GEORGE BRYANT, JR.

Most times, President Nixon turns out to be his own best public relations man. Thus, it is both surprising and disconcerting to see him handle the problem of confidence in the economy with considerable ineptness.

Confidence, of course, is necessary if the budding recovery is to become a real, and sustained pattern of growth. Prudent businessmen aren't going to spend on plant and equipment unless they can see a reasonably profitable market ahead. And consumers aren't going to spend, either, when they are worried about jobs and the future buying power of the dollar.

The President changed basic economic signals months ago. The time had come, he said in effect, to end the no-growth policy with was aimed at dampening down forces that make price inflation and turn the economy upward again.

To this end, the President persuaded the Federal Reserve Board to return to an "easy" credit policy and went far toward abandonment of controls on government spending. In fact, he "sanctified" the return to huge deficit financing by calling it a "full employment budget."

In making these moves, the President made it abundantly clear that government policies would be used to the fullest to bring about the recovery sought. In the first quarter, faint signs of a return to growth appeared in the economy.

Obviously, the response was disappointing, especially from the standpoint of politics, since it gave Nixon's critics and detractors new ammunition. The Administration, they said, is not doing enough.

So now Nixon has allowed himself to be drawn into the position of offering additional and even specific stimulants if — if things are not humming by mid-year. In this, he may have been trapped by those who are going to carp, no matter what he does.

In the latest bid for that all-important mood of confidence, the President has talked about tax relief. The implication is this relief will be tailored to persuade business to spend on plant and equipment and to reduce the individual tax load a bit so that consumers will have more money to spend.

This sort of "reassurance" can well backfire, blunt recovery and thus force the sort of pump priming which could bring on an even more disastrous inflation. It may actually encourage business and the consumer to try "waiting and watching" a bit longer. Nixon implied this week that his decision would depend on what happens in this quarter, which ends June 30.

Thus, government policy, always important to the business climate, takes on a new wobble at a time when a period of relative stability would seem to be one of the essentials to firming up confidence. It is the sort of thing which induces hesitancy into the business of decision making.

Of course, if Nixon is to go to a still larger deficit to push the economy up, cutting taxes would be much more effective than simply running up government spending. Individuals, rather than Washington, would determine how the extra in the deficit would be spent. They would spend quickly.

Government spending, as a stimulant, has major drawbacks. It involves too much "trickle down," Most spending proposals today are based on meeting city problems — housing and transportation, for example. They are slow and major portions of the money never find their way into the market place.

Most "public works" spending requires heavy outlays for property. In city renewal programs, this means a big portion of the funds involved to acquire land for redevelopment. This makes for few immediate jobs — adds only slowly to consumer spending.

The tax cut, on the other hand, would tell an individual how much extra he will have to spend and allow him to make up his own mind as to how he used it. For this reason, liberals in Congress might well turn against lower taxes, if Nixon should propose them. Big spenders in the House and Senate like to have a hand in who gets the money and for what.

Impartial observers give Nixon a pretty good score on managing the economy. He has held down inflation, but at a higher than expected unemployment rate. It would be rough to lose recovery by rocking the boat himself.

Here's How To Do It

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q—We have a small fish pond in our back yard. The bottom and sides are made of concrete. Cracks are beginning to develop near the top but slightly below the water level. Can these cracks be patched with ordinary pre-mixed concrete?

A—Yes, but you'll get an even more permanent result if you use a pre-mixed product made of sand, cement and a waterproofing compound. You may have to do some shopping around, since all hardware stores and lumber yards don't carry it. But any dealer who carries the regular pre-mixes can get it for you.

Q—A section of the concrete walk in front of our house has tilted slightly on one side, making the walk uneven. How can this be leveled without breaking up the concrete and redoing that section?

A—Use a long wooden lever, the longer and heavier the better. Dig under the low portion of the walk just enough to get the lever under it. Holding the far end of the lever, pry up the section of concrete while a helper pours sand and gravel under it.

Q—We have a small home that we are getting ready to paint. The gable ends now are the same color as the siding. Would it be all right to paint them a contrasting color?

A—Not on a small house. It will make the house appear even smaller.

Q—There is a low brick wall on each side of our driveway. Some of the bricks have developed a white covering on the outside. It doesn't wash off with water. How can we get rid of it?

A—This is called efflorescence. It means water is penetrating the mortar joints and pushing out soluble salts. The coating can be washed off with a mixture of one part of muriatic acid to 10 parts of water. Scrub with a fiber brush. Work very carefully, since this is a strong solution. Wear rubber gloves and be careful not to spill any on your skin or clothes. After the white coating is gone, rinse the bricks thoroughly with a hose. But first correct the condition that is causing water to enter the joints or you'll have the same problem again.

Furniture Redone By People On Move

By VIVIAN BROWN

Large segments of the population are on the move. Young couples are searching for new frontiers, middle-aged couples are moving with their employers to suburban areas and far-off places, and retired people are looking for a complete change of scenery.

One thing all should keep in mind is that it may be far cheaper to move household effects even to a distant point than to buy new furnishings, advises Rudolph Salazar, home designer. Many older people may be tired of the heirlooms and the furniture that may be child-scarred, but these things can be made to look different in new environment.

One of Salazar's functions as consultant to a new Mexico housing enterprise is to advise new home owners and apartment dwellers how to refurbish old furnishings. Says Salazar: "Because of the bright days there, Mexican style colorful furniture is very popular. But you can give the same kind of decorative glamor to an early American chest or an old washstand. These can be painted in bright yellow, orange, red and decorated with floral or animal designs."

He helps adapt furnishings to meet the architectural requirements of homes which may have random-walled rooms with lots of glass.

"You don't use furniture in a conventional way, but in placing a large sofa or other large piece of furniture, an unusually fascinating solution may be found," he says.

Salazar likes to work with sheer fabrics because one can have instant outdoor living that way. But it is difficult to persuade some people that the environment is sootless and smogless if they've lived in large cities.

Now that mortgage money is plentiful again at reasonable rates, the house builders are back at work.

Many builders are economy-minded. They're looking for reasonable construction: comfortable, roomy shelter with the amenities modern living requires.

The Fanning, designed by the Associated Architects, is such a house. It's a three-bedroom contemporary ranch with two baths, a living room, dining room, modern kitchen, full basement and attached carport.

The floor plan is keyed to a simple rectangle. The carport could be eliminated to accommodate a narrow lot.

The Fanning has a cozy appearance. It would fit snugly into any neighborhood. The low-slung lines would assure easy maintenance, an asset for the "do-it-yourselfer."

Plans call for frame construction with battened plywood for the exterior finish. The built-up roof is low pitch (2 1/2-12).

Welcomes Guests

A brick planter wall enhances the front entrance. There's also a stoop to protect arriving guests.

The main entrance opens into the living room-dining room section which is distinctive for its bright, cheery openness. Large windows let in lots of natural light and cathedral ceilings, a housewide feature, create spaciousness.

The living room is large, approximately 15 feet square, and despite the full windows has enough wall space for attractive furnishings.

The dining room also has good dimensions, 13 feet by 9 feet, and is adjacent to the kitchen. Because the living room and dining room adjoin, they create a fine area for entertaining.

The kitchen is an efficient workshop. The cabinets and appliances are built in and arranged in a step-saving pattern.

Stairs to the basement are located in the kitchen. There also is a door to the carport. This is a handy arrangement for unloading groceries.

Sleeping Quarters

The sleeping quarters are located in the rear section. The master bedroom, 14 feet by 11 feet, has a private bath and a large closet.

The other two bedrooms are clustered about the main bath. One is 11 feet square, the other measures 11 feet by 10 feet. Each has a large closet.

The two baths are back to back, which saves money on plumbing.

Specifications call for drywall interior finish, oak floors in major rooms and wood awning windows.

The carport has a storage area at the rear.

The overall dimensions are approximately 42 feet by 40 feet and the main level contains 1,132 square feet of living area. There's an equal amount in the basement and 286 square feet in the carport.

THE PRODUCT—A crack caulking material that bonds to wood, metal, plastics, concrete, glass and underwater fittings.

Manufacturer's claim—That this epoxy compound stays resilient year after year, never shrinks nor hardens, never falls out and does not require a primer ... that it can be sawed, filed and sanded ... that it is water-proof, impervious to gasoline, oil, acids, alkalies, solvents, brines and other chemicals ... that it never sags on vertical surfaces ... that preparation of the surface requires sanding and cleaning of all grease ... that it comes in two parts, so that you mix the amount needed for each project ... and that, although it does not contain iron or steel, it will not shatter when struck by heavy blows.

THE PRODUCT—A special screwdriver that also can be used to cut wires and strip insulation.

Manufacturer's claim—That wire is cut by inserting into a hole close to the handle, pressing the screwdriver strip against a surface and pushing down ... that insulation is stripped by selecting the proper wire gauge from a gauge selection table, setting the dial on the handle to the proper number, inserting the wire into the hole closest to the screwdriver tip, pressing the driver against a surface and pulling the wire firmly ... and that it cuts and strips wire from 12 to 22 gauge.

THE PRODUCT—Wall-panel moldings that look like aluminum but are made of durable plastic.

Manufacturer's claim—That the moldings have a thin steel core inside the plastic ... that they are designed for do-it-yourself enthusiasts and are available in 6 and 8-foot lengths ... that they can be nailed or stapled into place and can be cut to length with shears, tin snips, a knife or a saw ... that they will not peel, crack, rot or warp ...

The Time For Readying Your Air-Conditioner Is Now; Things To Do

By DOROTHEA M. BROOKS
NEW YORK (UPI) —It's spring and if you're going to be ready for summer and its dog days you'd best heed your cleaning chores—particularly those involving air conditioning.

Whether you have a window unit or a central cooling system, probably it has been idle all winter. Taking the time now for a little preventive maintenance may save several days of sweltering discomfort—not to mention money—when the summer sun shines hot.

A handy do-it-yourselfer can take care of routine maintenance but repairs should be handled only by professionals, advises G.E. Buchanan, general service manager of the York Division of Borg-Warner Corp.

Window units that have been stored all winter in other than their regular operating position should be placed "at the ready" on a level surface for 24 hours to allow the oil in the sealed system to drain back into the compressor, Buchanan suggests.

Dust all exposed surfaces, paying special attention to air inlets and outlets; wipe down plastic surfaces with soap and water, and oil according to manufacturer's instructions.

Rusting does not often occur, but it can happen, especially near the seashore. Buchanan suggests cleaning and painting any exposed parts that may have rusted over the winter months.

It always is wise to test-run the unit on the floor before installing it. Choose a day when room temperature is in the 70s and outside temperature in the mid-60s and let the air conditioner run for five to 10 minutes. Note the cooling effectiveness and listen for unusual noises that may indicate the unit requires more extensive checking. If the unit runs but does not cool it usually means it has lost its charge of refrigerant and an authorized repairman should be called, Buchanan said.

Air conditioners that have been left in the window over the winter also require attention, but if the unit has operated all winter, a change of filter and oiling may be all the maintenance required.

Many homes have central air conditioning with common duct

Basic Goals At Heart Of Debate

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Two of the nation's basic goals — environmental quality and decent housing at prices most families can afford — are at the heart of a renewed conflict over use of the national forests.

The timber industry wants the government to permit a larger number of trees to be cut from the 97 million acres classed as commercial forest in the 186-million acre National Forest system.

Conservationists oppose most increases in the allowable cut. They claim increased logging will detract from watershed protection, damage the habitat of fish and wildlife and reduce recreational uses of forests.

With the increasing concern for the environment in the background, it seems like an inauspicious time to attempt to increase logging in the national forests.

But the cost of softwood lumber and plywood has skyrocketed since the first of the year. And wood still is the basic material for home building.

Lumber and plywood prices soared in early 1969 but dropped last year as the pace of home construction slumped. But with home building on the upswing again, so are wood prices.

The White House task force on lumber prices, headed by Hendrik S. Houthakker, a member of the Council of Economic Advisers, has resumed its study of the situation. The panel was active in 1969 but its interest declined last year when prices fell.

A congressional subcommittee, headed by Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, also is investigating the price of lumber and its relation to the price of homes.

While the administration and congressional panels are searching for a way to reconcile the conflicting objectives of preserving the environment and meeting the nation's housing goals, partisans on both sides are drumming up support for their positions. More than 90 witnesses testified at a recent three-day hearing conducted by Church's subcommittee.

Most conservationists say they do not oppose logging provided careful safeguards are imposed to protect the forests from overcutting.

The Sierra Club, a strong advocate of environmental protection, claimed in a memo to members that the U.S. Forest Service tends to side with industry. The club warned that some forest service "environment programs" could be aimed at more logging.

Lowry Wyatt, Tacoma, Wash., President of National Forest Products Association, said the timber industry must conserve the forests as a matter of economic survival.

work for heating and cooling. In this case, Buchanan recommends:

—Reset dampers for air conditioning. (Dampers adjustment is required only if there are separate duct for the cool air).

—See that air inlets and outlets, both indoors and out, are free from obstruction.

—Clean or replace filters.

—Lubricate where called for. (Generally this is limited to fan motors and bearings.)

—Turn on the power for at least one day before you start the compressor. Run the fan only, with the cooling thermostat set high. In the compressors of many makes of air conditioning units are complete packages, but many others are "split systems." In this arrangement, Buchanan explained, the heat-discharging compressor-condenser section is located outdoors while the cooling evaporator is in the house and connected with the ducts to various rooms.

Split systems require not only all the checks just listed, but a few others:

When there is piping going outside, check the condition of insulation, concrete foundations and exposed metal surfaces for rust. Make sure that concrete foundations have not been broken or tilted by frost action.

Look, too, at air intake and discharge vents, making sure

Marine Biologist Sees Seas Final Food Source

By HOWARD BENEDICT
Associated Press Writer
MIAMI (AP) — The world's expanding population is outstripping the food supply from the land and man may have to turn to the sea for survival, says a noted marine biologist.

"A prospect even more horrifying than the hydrogen bomb faces the world today—the prospect that man may continue to reproduce at such a high rate that he will scrape the last crumb of food from the surface of the earth," writes Dr. C. P. Idyll in his recently published book, "The Sea Against Hunger" (Crowell).

"In the headlong crush preceding this," Idyll adds, "such a desperate struggle might take place among the swarming people that atomic war would be only one aspect of the calamity that would annihilate mankind."

Idyll, one of the world's leading oceanographers, is chairman of the Division of Fishery Sciences of the Institute of Marine and Atmospheric Sciences at the University of Miami.

He is among a number of scientists who believe all nations should work to realize the full potential of the oceans as a source of food.

Presently, he said in an interview, the sea produces only two to three per cent of the food consumed on earth. He believes there may be enough food in the oceans to support the entire world population.

Idyll said if the population continues to explode at its present rate, there will be 7.5 billion people on the globe in the year 2000—more than double the present 3.5 billion. By 2035 there will be 12 billion.

"The most urgent problem arising from the increase in human population is the inadequate supply of consumables—food, fresh water, minerals, energy. Food is the most critical of these. Man has a serious food problem now and it is getting worse."

He said a doubling of the world food supplies is required by 1980 and a tripling by 2000.

Lang To Talk At Banquet

GRIFTON — John Albert Lang Jr. will be the guest speaker at the annual ladies' night banquet of the Grifton Masonic Lodge No. 243 Wednesday.

Lang, currently administrative assistant to the Secretary of the Air Force, will shortly assume duties as a special assistant to Dr. Leo Jenkins, president of East Carolina University.

Lang's professional recognition include recipient of the Exceptional Civilian Service Award, Department of the Air Force, for three periods of public service, 1961-64, 1965-66, and 1966-69. He is also listed in Who's Who in America and Who's Who in the South and Southwest.

He has had 35 years of public service in the federal government.

Lang received the bachelor of arts degree from the University of North Carolina in 1930 and a master of arts degree from UNC in 1931.

Lang is a native of Carthage.

Can Tell A Lot By One's Talk

ATLANTA (UPI)—A clinical psychologist at Emory University believes he can tell a lot about a person's problems by the way the person talks. It's not necessarily what the person says but the grammar, syntax and other formal characteristics that give away his personality traits and emotional problems, according to Dr. Donald Kiesler, associate professor of psychology.

He said obsessive traits, for example, are indicated by using many qualifiers—such expressions as "perhaps," "I suppose," "for the most part." This indicates indecisiveness.

National Survey Is Eye-Opening

NEW YORK (UPI)—The nation's optometrists put themselves in the driver's seat to help uncover troublesome vision factors involved in night driving. The national survey of O.D.s conducted by the American Optometric Association and Potters Industries, Inc., says color blindness (protonopia) gives those affected "difficulty" in distinguishing red signals, stop lights and tail lights.

Biggest "irritants," according to the driving optometrists: too many cars on the road, headlight glare, inadequate pavement markings and unsafe autos.

"In really hungry parts of the world, four times the present available amount of food will be needed by 2000, and six times the present supplies of animal products which provide most of the protein."

He said the land could grow much more food than it now produces but "no matter what miracles the agricultural sciences perform, man probably will not have enough food in the future if he relies solely on farms."

"It is this situation, in which mankind is faced with starvation, that has turned the attention of experts and the lay public alike to the possibility that the sea might hold the key to human survival," Idyll said.

He noted the world catch of marine products was 57.4 million metric tons in 1968 and that experts estimate the potential is two billion or more metric tons. A metric ton is 2,204 pounds.

More important, there is a greater content of animal protein in most fish than there is in beef, often considered the standard of prime food.

Idyll said one reason for optimism in increasing the catch from the sea is that techniques and markets are being developed for harvesting and marketing kinds of animals that previously seemed out of reach—small fishes, squids, Antarctic krill, Pacific red crabs and others.

In his book Idyll listed these possibilities for increasing the food bounty from the sea:

1. Humans must take advantage of plant and animal plankton—the small to microscopic plants and animals that live in great abundance in the upper levels of the ocean. They are the base of the food supply for all the animals of the sea. The plant plankton converts sunlight, carbon dioxide and other nutrients into living matter which is consumed by the animal plankton. The animal plankton is eaten by small fish and the small fish by large fish. The most promising for catch is the Antarctic krill, a tiny shrimp-like creature which swarms in great numbers near Antarctica.

2. The bigger plants like seaweeds might yield vast amounts of food. The Japanese eat thousands of tons of seaweed yearly—why not the rest of the world?

3. A great hope of many is that man will improve his fishing methods through technology so he can truly farm the sea.

4. Useful marine animals might be transplanted from one part of the ocean to another, filling gaps that nature has left with food fishes, mammals and plants for ready harvest.

5. Establish farms to raise sea animals. The Japanese and others have been successful with oyster farming, but fish are difficult to raise in captivity and the cost is high. It is not probable that farming will produce substantial quantities of seafood for the hungry in the near future.

Idyll is experimenting with a shrimp farm at the University of Miami and said "sea farms may eventually prove to be profitable operations for some investors in the production of oysters, shrimps and other seafoods in high demand."

He said the Soviet Union and Japan are the nations doing the most to exploit the potential of the sea, and the Soviets have declared their intention to wrest world leadership in fishing from Japan.

Idyll also is concerned about pollution of the waters.

"It has been estimated that as much as 90 per cent of the seafood produced by United States fishermen is of species that must spend part of their lives in the estuaries or shallow waters near the shore," he said. "But through the destructive process of harbor and land building, and the dumping of enormous quantities of killing pollutants into the estuaries and bays, we are reducing the ability of the sea to produce marine animals. The bright hopes for vast new harvests from the ocean may be in vain unless we learn better control of activities along the shore."

Idyll believes if man is to truly realize the potential of the sea, there must eventually be an international control organization, perhaps a division of the United Nations.

Area Children Are The Benefactors

'Safety Town' Given By The Pilot Club

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Greenville has seemed to have more than its share of pedestrian deaths and injuries in the past few years, and most of the victims have been children.

Cognizant of this distressing fact, the Safety Committee of the Greenville Pilot Club embarked on a project suggested by Pilot Club International. They have brought Safety Town to Greenville, making the safety-teaching program the club's largest project for this year and involving the entire Greenville community in the effort before it was officially opened last Monday.

Safety Town on the grounds of Agnes Fullilove Kindergarten is a paved area on which "playhouse-sized" building have been erected. There are a church, a bank, a police station and jailhouse, and several stores and houses. Streets and pedestrian walkways are marked off and a full-sized stationary spotlight marks the center of this miniature business district.

"Safety Town is all these things," Mrs. Warren said, "But in a very real sense, it's also the tangible result of the most beautiful cooperative effort for a noble purpose that I have ever seen."

Gladson Pushed Project
"When the Pilot Club first undertook the project and named me chairman, I went to see Police Chief Tommy Gladson. He gave me my first and best incentive to keep working. He was more than enthusiastic, visualizing it from the start as a permanent project that would benefit young children for years to come in Greenville. He wanted it planned in such a way that it would not be a one-time stand."

Mrs. Warren kept appointments with others in the City government, the City School system, and the City Recreation program, and with local merchants. "All of them seemed impressed with the idea and expressed their willingness to help," she said.

"City engineer Charles E. Holliday volunteered to make scale drawings of both the street layout and the buildings. He did a beautiful job.

"Various Greenville merchants became our patrons. Before we had been to half that we planned to call upon, we had the funds we needed for building materials and other expenses.

"Dalton Sullivan of the Recreation Commission constructed and erected the buildings. They were planned to be sturdy, yet collapsible so storage will not be too difficult. The City of Greenville did the paving and the Utilities Commission erected the lights.

"We hired a professional sign painter to do the lettering on the buildings, but all the decorative painting was done by Pilot Club members. The Pilot Club paid for some of the buildings and for the nine tricycles and one bicycle with training wheels used on the site. A local hardware store sold them to us at costs."

Paid for Locally

Greenville's Safety Town is the first permanent one in North Carolina, and as far as Mrs. Warren and her committee can ascertain, it is the only one that has been seen to completion without the use of a federal grant or other outside funds. "Doesn't that make you proud of Greenville people?" Mrs. Warren asked.

She went on, "We in the Pilot Club feel strongly that the community should make more concerted effort both to attack local problems ourselves and to work for the improvement of our local schools. Somewhere along the way it seems that we've got the idea that civic action does not apply to the schools.

"We were really delighted to get a two-week safety program put into the curriculum at Agnes Fullilove. When I went to Joe Smith, the Kindergarten principal, and asked him about how we could get pre-school children to attend a Safety Town course during the summer, he asked me, 'Why don't we do it while the children are here?' To our delight, the School Board approved.

Anyone Can Use

"Aycock Junior High principal, John Jones, has already asked that the trainable class there be able to use Safety Town, and Boyd

Lee of the Recreation Department wants to plan some programs with it. We hope any sincerely interested private kindergarten or other pre-school group will feel free them instruction about staying within the pedestrian crosswalks, which signal light to watch to tell when to stop and go, etc.

to use it.

"What we hope to give children here is good fundamental training in safety. The kindergarten teacher will spend two weeks teaching the rules and habits of safe driving and pedestrianism in the classroom with lecture, films, drawing, and the like. Then 30 minutes a day spent in Safety Town should amplify what they teach.

"We will never have more than 18 in Safety Town at one time. Greenville Policemen Eddie Wallace and Ray Early will be there at all times giving them guidance in safe practices. In addition, along with the teacher of each class, at least four Pilot Club members will be on hand. Our goal is to give each child all the individual attention he needs to make sure he has the principles of safety firmly in his mind."

Since there are 144 children at Agnes Fullilove, half have used Safety Town this past week and half will use it next week. Certificates of graduation from the Safety Town program are being presented each Friday.

"Our Safety Committee members who are, besides myself, Mrs. Jean Cox, Mrs. Lib LeConte, Mrs. Nan Noble, and Mrs. Sue Smith, have worked hard and we have enlisted the help of many of the other members of Pilot Club. This will be a continuing project of our club. We will maintain the site and equipment and will assist those who use Safety Town in any way we can," Mrs. Warren said.

A DREAM COME TRUE . . . is what Mrs. Nancy Warren (center) called the opening of Safety Town. She chats with C. E. Holliday, city engineer, who did the scale drawings for the streets and buildings. In the right corner are the two Safety Town Police instructors, Ray Early and Eddie Wallace, and City Manager Harry Hagerty. Kindergarteners are in the foreground.

Committee. Mrs. Sue Smith paints the jail and police station.

city and school officials, Pilot Club members, and other special guests, as well as all Agnes Fullilove children and their teachers.

Furniture Designed For Essential Needs

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

New furniture of wood is being designed to accommodate essential needs in the home where people are entertaining and being entertained, and where many husbands are making a second office.

For example, roll-top desks shown by several manufacturers at the recent New York Furniture Exchange show provide a traditional idea in contemporary decorating. Big-daddy, 54-inch wide, roll-top oak desks and some designed in lady-like dimensions have been updated. One showed the roll top in 35 finish colors of oak including black, Venetian green, mint green, dark red, blue and yellow. Another showed roll-top desks and roll-top schoolmaster desks with high-pressure plastic tops.

A charming functional home entertainment center that won an award for Lea Industries consists of a bachelor chest, light hutch, double dresser, television utility desk, in a compact unit that is ideal for viewing, listening to hi-fi, book and record storage, and for displaying objects that can have a pleasing effect on the eye while you are listening to the hi-fi. It's in line with the company's idea of functionalism—furniture that can be assembled to solve a person's needs in whatever room it is used.

A mobile server in a rectilinear design is another handsome piece that could be at home in a traditional or contemporary setting. Designed by Bill Hinn of White of Mebane, N.C., it is of primavera and Carpathian elm burl with a black plastic serving surface for hot and cold service and a drawer fitted and lined for flat silver. Two shelves below are for glasses, food and other service.

Another server of oak in a Jacobean style provides shelves for dishes and glassware with a cabinet below. The 12-inch drop leaves at each end may be flipped to make a serving counter more than six-feet long.

Traditional-minded types may enjoy a new Directoire game table, but it is the type of piece that would fit into any decorative scheme. A slim, handsomely detailed table, it has inlaid squares of dark and light wood, a gallery on either side and two little drawers. It may be used also as a telephone table.

Some safety rules to follow in use and storage of aerosol cans: Never leave in the sun, especially in a closed car; never leave on a warm surface, such as a stove; never incinerate or puncture a can. Treat the spray can with the respect you would any explosive device.

Couple Exchanges Vows In High Noon Ceremony

RICHMOND, Va. — The marriage of Miss Martha Elizabeth Waring, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Winston Hill Waring of Richmond, Va., to Wilfred Edmond Almeida Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Edmond Almeida Sr. also of Richmond, took place Saturday at high noon at St. Bridget's Roman Catholic Church here.

The Rev. Father William H. Carr officiated.

The church was decorated in the traditional green and white. Vases of white stock and baby's breath with fern in the background were located on either side of the pulpit. The pews were marked with satin ribbons.

Justin T. Russell played a program of nuptial organ music before the ceremony as the guests arrived and played the traditional processional as the bride entered the sanctuary. Thomas Dailey, a tenor vocalist, sang "Ave Maria" and "The Wedding Prayer."

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white taffeta designed along traditional lines. The bodice and high collar were trimmed with peau d'ange lace encrusted with seed pearls as was the hem of the A-line skirt. The chapel length train was appliqued with medallions of lace and hemmed with lace and seed pearls.

She wore a chapel length mantilla of illusion edged in peau d'ange lace. It was held in place by a lace headpiece made of individual lace medallions. The bride carried a cascade bouquet of phalaenopsis orchids with lily-of-the-valley, stephanotis and ivy.

Miss Marguerite Nelson Waring of Richmond, Va., sister of the bride, was the maid of honor and Mrs. John Bernard Barrett of Warrenton was her sister's matron of honor. They wore La mounge blue organza gowns which were made similar to the dress of the bride. The neck, bodice and cuffs of the sleeves were trimmed in a heavy scroll lace. The bodice of the dresses also had satin buttons to the empire waist.

Their headpieces consisted of matching lace and organza half hats with short illusion veils. They carried old-fashioned bouquets of pastel spring flowers with mid-length streamers.

Other attendants included Mrs. Emmett Clyde Williamson and Beverly Ann Almeida, sisters of the bridegroom, both of Richmond, Va., Miss Patricia Page Minges of Greenville, N.C., cousin of the bride, Miss Virginia Saunders Barns, Miss Frederica June Vaughan, Miss Judith Lynn Thornton, and Miss Teresa Lee Hutteman, all of Richmond. Miss Jill Waring, cousin of the bride, served as flower girl.

Their gowns and headpieces were fashioned after the maid and matron of honor in light blue. Their flowers were identical to the honor attendants'.

The bridegroom's father served as his best man. The ushers included Terry Lynn Almeida, brother of the bridegroom, of Norfolk, Va., Emmett Clyde Williamson of Richmond, Va., John Bernard Barrett of Warrenton, Barbu Dinu Alim of Rhodesia, now residing in Alexandria, Va., Leslie Wayne Trent of Lynchburg, Va., Charles Stephen Mock of Kessler, Miss. Gary Harmon Rosen of Coco Solo, Canal Zone, and William Charles Patterson of Edinburg, Ind. Nephew of the bridegroom, Emmett Clyde Williamson Jr., was ring bearer.

A reception followed the ceremony given by the bride's parents in the Presidential and Metropolitan Rooms of the Executive Hotel.

The cake table, covered with a white satin cloth, was centered with a tiered wedding cake adorned with a nosegay of pink and blue delphinium and pink sweetheart roses, and was encircled at the base with fern and daisies.

The reception table held a centerpiece of white and pink rosebuds, daisies and carnations flowing from a silver epergne.

Rehearsal Dinner

Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Edmond Almeida Sr. of Richmond, Va., honored the couple with a dinner Friday at the Meadowbrook Country Club, Richmond.

Guests included the families of the bride and bridegroom, the wedding party, and out-of-town guests.

Arrangements of blue carnations, white rosebuds, and baby's breath adorned the tables. Adding to the head table were three tiered candelabras at each end.

A cocktail hour preceded the dinner.

Church Women Hold Meeting

The Woman's Club of St. Peter's Catholic Church held its final meeting for the season on Wednesday evening.

The meeting was opened with prayer by Father Maurice Spillane, moderator.

Mrs. Louise Bracto noted that many new women were present and members introduce themselves.

There were suggestions made for projects to be worked on for the fall. Mrs. Anne Butler and Miss Dina Massi were congratulated for their perfect attendance record.

The meeting was concluded with prayer by Father Spillane.

An arrangement of purple iris in a cut glass vase added to the theme of the table decoration, "spring time". Refreshments were served by Miss Dina Massi and Mrs. Anne Butler.

Engagement Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Johnson Gonder of Norfolk, Va., announce the engagement of their daughter, Anne West, to Robert Harold Staton Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Harold Staton of Bethel. The wedding will take place Aug. 21.

Boy Scouts Are Rebelling

LONDON (WNS) — More than 1,000 Boy Scouts have rebelled against orders to abandon traditional "hot pants" shorts for long trousers. Charles Morris, chief of a breakaway organization called the European Scout Federation, predicts that some troops may go underground if necessary in order to keep their old khaki shorts. Rebel Girl Guides are joining them in their demands to avoid new changes. As rebel Mary Bacon put it, "Women's liberation in the hot pants area should not deprive Boy Scouts of their own freedom and fun."

Engagement Announced

EDITH BEMBRY STREETER . . . is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Bembry of Falkland, who announce her engagement to Freddie Outerbridge, son of Mr. and Mrs. John I. Outerbridge of Greenville. The wedding will take place June 12.

Mrs. Garland Gives Program

Mrs. Barbara Garland was guest speaker at the meeting of the Iter Cum Libris Book Club held Tuesday night at the home of Mrs. C. B. Taff.

She spoke on the history of the U.S. Social Security Administration and her work with the administration. She told of the many benefits of Social Security for retirement, for survivors and disability insurance.

Mrs. Garland discussed the benefits of Medicare. She gave members pamphlets prepared by the administration to help the public become more aware of the coverage of Social Security.

After the program, refreshments were served and books were exchanged by the members.

Chocolate Eclairs Created Problems

BETHUNE, France (WNS) — Marc Warembourg, 25, loved everything about Noella Bouchez, 34, except her fat. He promised to marry her as soon as she reduced, then found her eating a dozen chocolate eclairs when he paid a surprise call. In sudden anger, he seized a kitchen knife but was knocked out before he could use it by Noella's son, who hit him over the head with a hammer. Marc is in the hospital, and Noella is in bed with a nervous breakdown. "I've lost my appetite and never want to see pastry again," she declared.

Sandhurst Has Fewer Cadets; Gloss Is Gone

By KENNETH L. DAVIS
Associated Press Writer
SANDHURST, England (AP) — The sergeant-major, whose bellow made kings and princes hop, gazed over the rolling slopes of Britain's 229-year-old Royal Military Academy.

"That affected, foppish kind of officer that we used to get once has gone," he said with a hint of Welsh lilt. "There's no time for that now."

Sgt. Maj. Cyril Phillips delivered with authority this obituary of "Col. Blimp," the cartoon lampoon of all drawing, ineffectual British officers. In his time he trained more than 6,000 officer cadets. Nine foreign princes, three sheikhs and a sultan stiffened in awe of his foggish commands.

"Oh, the cadet's the same," he said. "Doesn't matter where he comes from, he's the same. There are just fewer of them."

That's the Sandhurst problem, for the storied halls of the Royal Military Academy are fallen on dull days, largely deserted by the establishment which chases pounds sterling instead of rebeling natives.

From the mid-18th century, this incubator of the British officer caste was the Mecca of well-born youths who yearned to pursue romance in far-off and fabled places. They queued for the privilege.

But, the gloss has eroded in this abrasive century. "I can remember more than 1,100 cadets here," said the sergeant-major. "Now we are down to a little under battalion strength."

Enrollment at Sandhurst has dropped from more than 1,000 in the 1950s to 568 today. Even two years ago the cadets numbered 656.

Youth is rebelling against war and regimentation and violence not of their own choosing. Industry is siphoning off the ambitious with a high-salary vacuum.

Col. E. C. Elgood of the academy said, "My son is at Wellington. I attended an entertainment night recently when each of the houses put on skits. Three of them were antiwar."

Lt. Col. A. A. Daere, the academy's director of studies, thought the problem more complex than revulsion to war.

"There's instability because of the reduction in the size of the Army and the phasing out of some regiments. There's the money to be made in industry and the antiwar feeling among youths, and a number of other factors."

It is ironic that rebellion against tradition should depopulate the 700-acre academy nestled on the borders of Surrey and Berkshire near Camberley in south England. In the 20th century, Sandhurst became something of a cradle of the coup.

The roll of Sandhurst coup plotters is extensive. "Young Gowon who commanded the Nigerian army was here under me," said Sgt. Maj. Phillips.

There are others besides Maj. Gen. Yakubu Gowon, who took over power in 1966 shortly before Nigeria's Biafran revolt, including Qabus bin Said of Muscat and Oman, Lt. Rex Frank LaFalle of Trinidad, Saaduddin abu Schweirib of Libya and Field Marshal Mohammed Ayub Khan of Pakistan.

The other side of the barricades has its Sandhurst graduates, too, among them King Hussein of Jordan, Louis Napoleon, Sir Winston Churchill and Gordon of Khartoum, to cite a fraction of the famed who learned their leadership at this ancient academy.

Social ferment was not a factor when the Royal Military Academy was founded at Woolwich, England, in 1741 to produce officers for the artillery, engineer and signal corps, or when the Duke of York founded the Royal Military College at High Wycombe in 1799.

By the time the college moved to Sandhurst in 1812 the United States had been training officers at West Point for a decade and there still was no problem getting youth to chance life east of Suez.

Sandhurst and the U.S. Military Academy at West Point have the same mission: production of officers for the army. Beyond that, the differences are great.

Sandhurst furnishes 90 per cent of British regular army officers. West Point furnishes 10 per cent, thanks to the Reserve Officers Training Corps in land-grant colleges. Britain has no ROTC.

Sandhurst keeps its cadets only two years—one year for military training and one year for academic subjects. West Point keeps its cadets four years and graduates them with a university degree.

West Point takes only high school graduates. Sandhurst normally attracts high school juniors who then complete high school at Sandhurst. Although it is difficult to equate U.S. and British educational standards, Britons think the Sandhurst graduate is one pace up on the U.S. high school graduate.

In the British tradition, changes at Sandhurst have been gradual and far from earth-shaking. Until 1954 the academy clung to an 18-month format. Then it jumped to two years.

Until January this year, academic study took up 47 per cent of the time of Sandhurst cadets. Now it's 50 per cent, about one-fourth the total time West Point cadets put in during their four years.

Only the shrinking of the army itself keeps the shortage of dashing young men and a slight decline in quality of cadet material from being crippling. Not all the 568 men at Sandhurst go to the British army. Seventy-four are from other countries, some of them former colonies.

SO WHAT'S NEW?

NEW YORK (UPI) — A museum which exhibits fashions dating back to 1862 is housed at the Traphagen School of Fashion. Many of today's "hot" styles can be found among the collection, completing a full cycle, says Wanda Wdowka, the school's director.

Bucs, Furman Split; Pirates Are Out

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Lady Luck finally smiled on East Carolina's Pirates yesterday, but by the time the grin came, it was too late.

The Pirates got a frown the first time around, as Furman rallied in the last inning to nip the Bucs 3-2 after East Carolina had taken a 2-1 lead an inning before.

Then, in the second game, the Lady was a tease, letting Furman first build up a 5-0 lead, then lose it 7-5, only to rally and tie it at 7-7.

But finally, a two-run homer by Matt Walker in the 10th inning got the Bucs a 9-7 victory.

Even so, the loss served to eliminate the Pirates from a chance at the title. Richmond's Spiders, postponed in a doubleheader at William & Mary, took over the league lead with a 9-4 record, one which the defending champion Bucs cannot overcome.

And the loss also left the Bucs overall record at 10-17, meaning they will have their first losing season since 1934, as one of the longest, if not the longest, strings of winning seasons fell this year.

Furman, which trails Richmond now by a half-game with an 8-4 conference record, pushed over a run in the first inning of the opener. With one out, Glenn Fry grounded to third, and Mike Filippic, who had walked, was cut down at second. Neil Eichelberger then lofted a long single to center field, scoring Fry all the way from first with the go-ahead run.

East Carolina tried to rally in the bottom of the first, as Mike Aldridge singled and went to second on a wild pitch. Furman offered another threat in the second as Peyton Barton singled and moved to third on a walk and a sacrifice. But Hal Baird struck out the last two batters to halt that threat.

East Carolina then came up with the tying run in the second.

With one out, Baird helped his own cause with a walk, and then stole second. Ralph Lamm reached on an infield hit, moving Baird to third, and Baird came in on Skip Horton's single to right.

Both teams threatened in the fourth. Furman got Don Legee on with a single and a wild pitch moved him into scoring position. The Bucs put Baird on with a walk, and he again stole second. Both neither threat came to bear fruit.

Mark Bonn then singled to score him with the tying run. Mike Filippic lifted a long double off the fence in right, scoring Bonn with the third and go-ahead Paladin run, and for the Bucs, that was it.

It was the seventh one run loss in their eight loop defeats.

In the second game, it again looked like the Bucs were doomed to defeat as Furman pushed over two runs in the first, two in the second and one in the third for a 5-0 lead.

In the first, Bonn walked and moved up on a sacrifice. Eichelberger then lifted a 320-foot homer to right field, making it 2-0.

The second inning saw Furman push over two more without a hit or a Pirate error, just five Buc walks. Three went to Fry, Billy Boyd and Bonn, loading the bases. Then, two more were issued to Filippic and Batton, forcing in Fry and Boyd to raise the total to 4-0.

One more came over in the third. John Campbell opened with a single to left and moved up on a hit by Fry. Legee also got a hit, in the infield, loading the bases. Jim Fair laid down a sacrifice bunt, but no one covered first and all runners were safe, as Campbell scored.

The Pirates then started their comeback with a run in the bottom of the third. Mike Bradshaw led off with a single, and sped all the way to third on a wild pitch. He scored on Walker's ground out to the first baseman.

In the fourth, the Bucs added three more to close the gap to 5-4. With one out, and Gus Robertson on first with a single, Dick Corrada grounded to short, and Robertson was cut down. Ralph Lamm reached on an infield hit and Troy Eason singled in Corrada with a hit to right. Bradshaw then lined a triple off the center field fence, scoring both Lamm and Eason.

Then, in the fifth, the Pirates struck for the lead. Wayne Post doubled down the right field line and Robertson singled. Rich McMahon reached on a sacrifice bunt when the second baseman lifted his foot off first too soon, and Walters scored on the play. Corrada then grounded back to the pitcher, but the throw was to second and was wide of the mark, again leaving all hands safe. Lamm also tried to sacrifice, but again, there was an error, as the pitcher again fielded the ball, and overthrew it at first, letting Robertson and McMahon score.

Headed For Second

East Carolina's Bryan (Squeely) McNeely starts to dive toward second base while serving as a courtesy runner for Hal Baird in yesterday's first game against Furman University. Shortstop Glenn Fry reaches for the ball as umpire Malcolm Sykes gets into position to make the call. Furman split the doubleheader with the Pirates, winning the first game, 3-2, and then losing the second 9-7 on a 10th inning homer by Matt Walker. (Reflector Photo)

Kentucky's Three Point Goal Brings Close Win; Even Series

By BILL WINTER
LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Scrappy Louie Dampier's three-point play with 31 seconds remaining gave Kentucky a nationally televised 129-125 overtime victory over Utah Saturday, tying the American Basketball Association championship series at two games apiece.

Dampier's heroics, capping a 33-point performance, put an end to a Utah rally that had seen the Stars make up an 18-point deficit in the second half to force the overtime.

The Colonels had led 80-62 early in the second half, but Utah went ahead 118-116 on a jumper by George Stone with only 2:15 left in the final period.

The fable went into overtime at 119-111 when Utah's Austin "Red" Robbins missed an open five-foot jumper at the buzzer, the ball rolling off the rim.

The teams traded baskets in the overtime period with Willy Wille, the game's leading scorer with 34 points, hitting a free throw to give the Stars a 125-124 lead with 1:01 remaining.

Dampier retaliated with a free throw four seconds later, then followed with a court-length drive for a basket with 31 seconds showing.

Fouled by Utah's Ron Boone, Dampier completed the three-point play, then added a single free throw to complete the scoring with ten seconds remaining.

Kentucky played the overtime without front line starters Dan Issel, Jim Ligon and Cincy Powell, all of whom fouled out in regulation play, while Utah played the extra period without center Zelmo Beaty who also had six fouls.

Kentucky followed Dampier's streak shooting to an early 23-9 lead, and never allowed Utah within ten points until the final period. Dampier had 17 points in the first half.

Wise and Stone paced Utah's fourth period comeback with Stone hitting 16 points in the half and finishing with 19 to complement Wise's 34. Beaty had 25 before fouling out, and had 16 rebounds, one less than Wise.

The two teams return to Salt Lake City where the series fifth game is scheduled Wednesday night. The sixth game will be in Louisville next Saturday.

... And Safely In

Squeely McNeely makes it safely into second base ahead of the throw as Glenn Fry tries for the tag. McNeely, a courtesy runner for pitcher Hal Baird, later scored to put the Bucs into a 1-tie in the first game of a double header, but Furman rallied to win, 3-2. The Bucs took the second, 9-7 in 10 innings. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Stadium Dedication Set For Afternoon

Five former East Carolina University baseball coaches will be on hand this afternoon for the dedication ceremonies of the Pirates' newly renovated baseball stadium.

The stadium will be named in honor for Milton Harrington, a Pitt County native and former Greenville resident. Harrington was at one time the coach of Greenville's entry in the old Coastal Plain League. He is now president of Liggett & Myers Inc.

Also scheduled to be honored in addition to Harrington are Ken Beatty, G. L. (Doc) Mathis, Bo Farley, Jack Boone and Jim Mallory, all former ECU baseball coaches.

Beatty was the first baseball coach at East Carolina when the school began the program in the early 1930's.

Mathis took the program in the middle '30's until Bo Farley became coach in the later part of the decade.

Jack Boone became coach in the late 1940's and stayed until 1963 when Jim Mallory took over. Mallory coached from 1963 until 1962 before Earl Smith, the present coach, took the job.

All but Mathis still reside in Greenville. He now lives in Graham.

Beatty was also East Carolina's first football coach and now works with the Greenville Public Works. Farley recently retired as J. H. Rose High School's athletic director while both Boone and Mallory still work with the university.

Boone, who also coached football in the 1950's, is a professor in the school's health and physical education department in addition to his duties as director of intramurals.

Mallory became ECU's Dean of Men after stepping down as head baseball coach and still holds the post.

Cash's Homers Power Detroit

DETROIT (AP) — Norm Cash clouted solo homers off Wally Bunker in the fourth and sixth innings Saturday to give the Detroit Tigers a 2-1 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

It was almost one year ago—May 10, 1970—that the Tigers' first baseman last hit two homers in a game at Tiger Stadium. And that was against Kansas City's Dick Drago.

Joe Coleman, 2-0, started for Detroit and was relieved by Fred Scherman in the eighth when the Royals loaded the bases with one out. But Scherman got pinch hitter Dennis Pappe to hit into a double play to end the threat.

The Royals, down 1-0 after Cash's fourth homer of the year landed in the upper deck in right, put together consecutive singles by Cookie Rojas, Paul Schaaf and Bob Oliver to tie the game in the fifth.

Monzon Holds Title With TKO

MONTE CARLO (AP) — Argentine's Carlos Monzon retained his world middleweight title with a third round technical knockout over Nino Benvenuti of Italy Saturday night in a bizarre bout that ended in total confusion when a towel was tossed into the ring from the challenger's corner.

The fight ended suddenly, after Monzon sent Benvenuti to the canvas for the second time. As the former champ rose to his feet, the towel was thrown by his manager, Bruno Amaduzzi.

Benvenuti stood crying in the center of the ring and his wife, Guilianna, rushed through the ropes, screaming, as the result was announced. It was ruled a TKO at 1 minute, 5 seconds of the third.

Benvenuti, who lost the 160-pound crown for the second time last November when he was knocked out by taken some stiff punches in the second and third rounds, but did not appear to be badly hurt.

Asked why Amaduzzi threw in the towel, Benvenuti replied: "For an excess of love—he had not understood that I was in perfect shape and ready to continue."

"I did not feel tired. He pushed me down—both times."

Arthur Mercante of New York, the referee for the Joe Frazier-Muhammad Ali heavyweight championship fight in New York and a judge here, said "the referee lost control of the fight. He should not have stopped the fight when the manager threw in the towel. This was a championship fight. He should have made Benvenuti get in there and fight."

Monzon, a free-swinging who rose up from obscurity by knocking out Benvenuti in their first fight, took charge in Round 2 of the rematch.

He stung Benvenuti with a left to the body in the closing seconds and sent the off-balance challenger down with a right to the side of the head. But the referee did not start a visible count and the bell sounded with Benvenuti on his feet.

In the third, Monzon landed a hard right to Benvenuti's jaw and then pummeled him against the ropes. Benvenuti sprawled across the ring and went to his hands and knees.

Again, there was no apparent count, but the towel was dropped into the ring seconds later, finishing Benvenuti and possibly ending his 91-bout career.

Donna Caponi, 26, and her sister Janet, 24, regulars on the Ladies PGA golf tour, are natives of Detroit who now live with their parents in Los Angeles.

Mathis took the program in the middle '30's until Bo Farley became coach in the later part of the decade.

Jack Boone became coach in the late 1940's and stayed until 1963 when Jim Mallory took over. Mallory coached from 1963 until 1962 before Earl Smith, the present coach, took the job.

Angels In Win

CLEVELAND (AP) — Roger Repoz' home run and a two-run triple by Syd O'Brien in the sixth inning powered the California Angels to a 5-2 victory over the reeling Cleveland Indians Saturday.

The loss was the Indians' fourth straight and 18th in their last 23 games.

Repoz' two-out homer in the sixth keyed a four-run rally off reliever Rich Hand.

Ken McMullen and John Stephenson followed with singles and both scored on O'Brien's triple to right. O'Brien scored on pitcher Rudy May's single.

The Indians took a 1-0 lead in the second when Ray Rosse led off with a single and, with one out, May walked three batters to force in a run.

California tied the game in the fifth on Stephenson's one-out single, a throwing error by third baseman Craig Nettles and a single by Sandy Alomar. J

Coody Holds Nelson Lead

By BOB GREEN
Associated Press Golf Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Masters champion Charles Coody slipped to a 72 but retained a one-stroke lead in the third round of the $125,000 Byron Nelson Golf Classic Saturday.

Lurking at just one stroke off the pace was the impressive trio of defending champion Jack Nicklaus, Lee Trevino and Homero Blancas with dangerous Arnie Palmer only two strokes back.

Coody, an Abilene, Tex., native, was two over par for the day on the 7,031-yard Preston Trail Golf Club course and had a 54-hole total of 207.

Nicklaus, the current PGA champion, barged into contention with a 68 for 208. He was tied at that figure with Blancas, who had a 69, and Trevino, 70.

Palmer, winner of two events this year, had a 68 and was one of several at 209.

Also at that figure were Gibby Gilbert, who had the best round of the hot, sultry day, a three-under-par 67.

Others included Frank Beard and Gene Littler, each with a 70, Ted Hayes, 69, and silver-haired Bob Stone, 72.

Coody, who had a two stroke lead when he started out, found his putting—the strong part of his game through the first two rounds—suddenly turning sour.

He three-putted for bogeys three times, including the final hole, and missed a five-footer for still another bogey. He had only a single birdie, holing a 10 foot putt on the ninth green.

"A very poor day on the greens," the soft-spoken 33-year-old veteran said. "There were three-putts and I must have missed three or four very makable putts around the 10-12 foot range."

"I'm very disappointed," he continued. "I had the opportunity to shoot a much better round and put myself in really good position."

As it is, the upset winner of the Masters has some of the game's greatest stars breathing down his neck going into Sunday's final round.

"That ain't no good round," snorted Trevino after his 70. He was tied with Coody at one point, but bogeyed the 18th when he pulled his drive, then had to lay up short of a creek that guards the front of the green.

"But tomorrow is another day," he grinned.

"I'm in a good position if I have a good round tomorrow," said Trevino.

Nicklaus, who beat Palmer in a sudden death playoff for this title a year ago. "I'm playing real well," he warned.

Nicklaus was one over par after 10 holes, then rallied with birdie putts of 10 and 16 feet before he pitched to three feet on the 18th.

"Not too bad," Palmer said after taking two strokes off par.

"I could have been better, but I can't say I'm too disappointed with the round. I'm in pretty good position."

Sixteen players were locked within three strokes of each other. If there is a tie after 72 holes, the $25,000 first prize will be decided in a sudden death playoff.

Smith Leads Sox To Win

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Reggie Smith, drive in four runs with a homer and two singles as the Boston Red Sox trimmed the Milwaukee Brewers 4-2 Saturday for their sixth straight victory.

Sonny Siebert, 5-0, checked the Brewers on five hits until the eighth, when he left for a pinch-hitter. Ken Tatum finished up for the Red Sox, who have won 13 of their last 15 games.

Smith drove in Boston's first run in the first inning with his fifth homer of the season. He delivered another with a second-inning single and ripped a two-run single in the eighth to put the game out of reach.

The switch-hitting right fielder, who also made a circus catch of Roberto Pena's fifth inning liner, paced a 10-hit Boston attack against loser Lew Krause and two relievers.

Braves Rally To Dump Giants

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—The Atlanta Braves, blanketed for seven innings by San Francisco's Ron Bryant, erupted for five runs in the eighth on Clete Boyer's pinch two-run homer and a three-run shot by Hank Aaron and beat the Giants 5-2 Saturday.

Willie Mays, who was 40 on Thursday, cracked his sixth homer of the season and 634th of his career off winner Ron Reed in the sixth.

But Bryant walked Marty Perez to open the eighth and, after Bob Didier lined out, Boyer batted for Reed, 4-2, and came through with his initial homer. It was the fifth hit off Bryant.

Dusty Baker's infield hit and Ralph Garr's bunt single sent Bryant to the showers and Aaron then socked his homer off Jerry Johnson. It was his 12th of the year and 604th lifetime. Bryant suffered his first setback after two victories.

The Giants had won seven of their last nine games.

Reed held the Giants to four hits before Cecil Upshaw worked the final two innings, allowing Kan Henderson's ninth inning Homer.

Twins Rip Nats By 9-2 Score

By PAT THOMPSON
Associated Press Sports Writer
ST. PAUL-MINNEAPOLIS (AP)—Tony Oliva unleashed a tie-breaking three-run homer 410 feet into the right field bull-pen and added three singles Saturday in powering the Minnesota Twins over slump-ridden Washington 9-2.

Oliva, the American League batting and home run leaders broke a 1-1 tie with his ninth homer in the fifth inning after Leo Cardenas and Rod Carew singled with two out off Dick Bosman.

The Twins' slugger also keyed two other Minnesota outbursts with singles—moving Cardenas into scoring position for Harmon Killebrew's run-scoring single in the third and leading off a two-run seventh with a vicious liner off Tim Cullen's glove at second. He drove in a run in the eighth with a grounder.

The Senators tied the game 1-1 in the fourth on singles by Paul Casanova and Del Unser and Toby Harrah's sacrifice fly. Frank Howard connected with a mammoth 425-foot homer, his third of the season, with the bases empty in the eighth for their other run as Jim Kaat gained his third victory.

The Senators have lost seven of their last eight games.

Jim Holt contributed two run-scoring singles to Minnesota's 17-hit attack. Killebrew contributed three singles after missing two games with the flu.

Washington's bullpen was hit hard by the Twins' offense. The Senators' pitcher, Jim Holt, was hit by a home run in the fifth inning.

ABA-NBA Game Is Possibility

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — There is a "strong possibility" of a playoff between American and National Basketball Association league champions to determine the 1971-72 season, ABA Commissioner Jack Dolph said Saturday.

Dolph, in Louisville for the fourth game of the best-of-7 championship series between the Kentucky Colonels and Utah Stars, said he felt the tentative merger agreement reached by the leagues Friday is "definitely for the best of all players and teams concerned."

The merger must be given Congressional approval, but Dolph said "I make a flat prediction that the majority of players in both leagues will actively back the merger."

Dolph noted an NBA Players Association suit which precludes the merger pending permissive legislation.

Dolph said he was "absolutely sure" there would be interleague exhibition games before the 1971-72 season, and "practically certain" there would be a play-off between ABA and NBA championship teams after the season.

Dolph, whose duties in the new interleague arrangement have not been spelled out, said the merger was a financial necessity and would work for the best interest of all concerned.

"Without a merger, teams in both leagues would have been in deep financial trouble soon," he said. "Also having separate

Top Field Set For Talladega

By BLOYS BRITT
AP Auto Racing Writer
TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Despite early talk of a "stay-away" of several name drivers, one of the season's top fields has entered next Sunday's $165,000 Winston 500 stock car race at Talladega.

The entry list, totaling more than 70 Grand National cars, includes all of the hotshot drivers who normally race on NASCAR's elite big car circuit.

The massive $6 million speedway will open for practice Tuesday, with qualifying runs for the 50-car lineup to begin Wednesday. Because of technical restrictions on engines and horsepower, no driver is expected to get close to the single lap qualifying record of more than 190 miles per hour.

Two races Saturday will serve as warmups for Sunday's 500 miler. Formula 100 machines will run in a 50-mile Talladega Challenge event, followed by the 20-mile Carter Hall Cup race for big bore sports cars.

There had been reports at recent races that several of the circuits top stars were planning to skip Talladega because officials of the 2.66-mile trioval had refused to pay "deal" or appearance money.

Winston cigarettes, which set up a $100,000 championship point fund for the drivers at the start of the season, bought the Talladega race and renamed it the Winston 500. At least a part of the $165,000 purse presumably comes from Winston.

Several drivers complained that the speedway should have matched whatever contribution the cigarette firm made, either adding to the purse or guaranteeing the drivers appearance money would be paid. Instead, several top drivers were hired to do promotional work in a number of adjoining states in advance of the race.

Jimmy Paige came within two out of hurling his second straight no-hitter Friday, but this time, his teammates chipped in to help him out.

Tuesday, the Rose High Rampants had watched Paige throw a no-hitter at Wilson, but five errors had helped Wilson to a 4-0 victory.

But Friday the Rampants could do little wrong and rolled to an 8-0 victory over Goldsboro's league leading Cougars, and knotted up the race all over again.

The win actually gave Rose a step up, depending on the outcome of the Wilson-Rocky Mount game. Wilson is the only team with two wins over the Rampants. Rose swept Rocky Mount, and split with Goldsboro. They have two games left, with New Bern and Kinston. A sweep of those could leave Rose along at the top.

Paige had excellent control all the way in Friday's game, striking out 11 and walking just three. Only one ball was hit out of the infield on him, prior to the seventh inning. He did have to get relief from Bill Lee in the final frame, however. Paige had been struck in the back by a pitched ball in the bottom of the sixth, and began having pain in his arm during the top of the seventh. Bill Lee came on to toss one pitch to the final Goldsboro batter, getting him to ground out to second.

Rose also had some fine defensive plays in the game. J. C. Daniels made one, going deep into the hole between first and second to snag a grounder and rob one Goldsboro batter of what looked like a sure hit.

Then, John Conway also came up with a fine play, pulling off an unassisted double play. He picked off a line drive down the first base line with a walked batter just a step off first, making the second put-out almost simultaneously.

And Rose went to town with the bats, cracking out 10 hits in the game.

It all began in the first. With one away, Kim Harbin lifted a hit just over the first baseman for a single. Lee followed with a single into left and Paige watched both move up on a wild pitch, then singled them home with a hit into center.

Conway walked and Stanley Cobb hit a slow roller down the third base line, beating it out to lead the bases. J. C. Daniels cracked a long single into center, and the ball got by both the center and right fielders, moving Daniels around to third, and apparently scoring all three runners.

Cobb, however, was called out for not touching third on an appeal, costing the Rampants a run. Daniels, on third, then came in when Jimmy Sugg's grounder to third was errored. So instead of a 6-0 lead, the Rampants settled for 5-0.

But it really didn't matter as it was all they needed.

Just to make doubly sure, however, Rose came up with three more in the fourth. They had threatened in the second, but a line-drive catch doubled off another runner to end the threat.

In the fourth, Rose put together three straight hits to get things going. Sugg singled to left and Cox moved him to third with a single into right. Larry Dixon then banged one into center, scoring Sugg. Harbin walked, loading the bases and walk to a Paige brought in Cox. Conway grounded to short, and Paige was cut down at second on the play, as Dixon scored the eighth Rampant run.

Rose reloaded the bases on another walk, but failed to score again. They also threatened in the sixth, as Lee doubled, Paige was hit and Cobb walked, again loading them up.

Rose, now 5-3 overall, plays host to New Bern on Tuesday in the final regular season home game. They close out the conference year in Kinston on Friday.

Low Tops All-Stars

By MIKE RECHT

NEW YORK (AP) — Lew Alcindor of the Milwaukee Bucks completed his sweep of the National Basketball Association's top awards Saturday by leading the balloting for the 1970-71 All-Star team.

The awesome 7-foot-2 center, who led the Bucks to their first NBA title last Sunday in only the third year of their existence, was a near unanimous choice, receiving 16,938 votes of a possible 17,000.

Joining him on the first team were forwards John Havlicek of Boston, 14,312, and Billy Cunningham of Philadelphia, 10,017, and guards Jerry West of Los Angeles, 14,615, and Ave Bing of Detroit, 12,594.

A panel of writers and broadcasters in the 17 league cities participated in the balloting.

Alcindor adds this honor to his Most Valuable Player award, his scoring title, and his MVP award in the championship series.

Alcindor, who made the second team last season, his second in the league, replaced New York's Willis Reed this year. Reed, last year's big award winner, finished on the second team with 4,929 votes in the complicated balloting system.

Havlicek, five times on the second team, made No. 1 for the first time in his brilliant nine-year career while Bing made it for the second time.

Cunningham was named for the third consecutive season and West, despite a late season injury, was selected for the eighth time.

Aycock Takes Eleventh Win

E. B. Aycock made it 11 straight Friday with a 13-3 romp over Coon Junior High School of Wilson.

Aycock pushed over five runs in the first inning and was never in trouble after that. Mike Wallace led off the first with a walk and was sacrificed to second. Robert Brinkley then brought him in with a single. Brinkley stole second and scored on William Carraway's single. Johnny Causey reached on an error, letting Carraway score. Phil Ragazzo then singled in Causey and stole second. Jeff Daniels finished things off by scoring Ragazzo with a hit. Coon came up with a run in the top of the second, but Aycock came right back to counter that. Wallace reached on an error and Carraway walked and Causey reached on an error, scoring Wallace. Ragazzo then singled to drive in both runners.

Aycock went on to add four more in the fifth, after Coon had scored its other two runs.

Brinkley, Carraway and Ragazzo led the Aycock hitting with two each.

Aycock will play host to Williamston on Tuesday.

Greene Central Takes Hobbton

HOBBTON — Greene Central High School stayed atop the Eastern Plains Conference race Friday with a 6-1 victory over Hobbton High.

The Rams started the action in the second, pushing over three runs. Donald Taylor walked and stole second. John Earl Johnson singled and he stole second. Stevie Williamston then got a hit that scored both runners. Williamston stole second, and then third, coming on in when the ball was thrown away on the last steal.

Hobbton came back with its lone run in the bottom of the second. Williams reached on a fielder's choice and Creech walked. Casey then doubled to drive in Williams.

Greene Central picked up one in the third. Danny Whitley walked and stole second. He scored when Ron Bowen got a hit.

In the seventh, the final two Ram runs crossed. Mike Perry walked and Whitley reached on a fielder's choice. An error on the play allowed Perry to score and moved Whitley to third. He scored from there on Bob Scott's single.

Greene Central, now 9-2, in the league, travels to Southern Wayne on Tuesday.

Appalachian Is Newest Member

NATURAL BRIDGE, Va. (AP) — The Southern Conference has added an eighth member and, in a move to bolster its diminishing bank account, has moved its championship basketball tournament out of Charlotte, N.C.

Appalachian State University of Boone, N.C., was admitted to the conference Friday at the Southern's annual spring meeting.

At the same time, the league's faculty athletic chairmen awarded the 1972 basketball tournament to Greenville, S.C., home of the Furman University Paladins, who seem headed upward in the college basketball world under new coach Joe Williams.

The 1973 tournament was awarded to Richmond, where a new 11,000-seat coliseum is to open this fall. Richmond was the tourney site from 1955-1963. Since then it had been played in the Charlotte Coliseum.

The tournament is the Southern's No. 1 source of revenue and after several successful years at the gate, principally because of the national prominence of the Davidson Wildcats, it began declining in attractiveness to Charlotte fans as Davidson declined in cage power.

The 1971 tournament last February, won by Furman in Williams' first years as head coach netted only $37,000, conference sources said.

Appalachian State will be eligible for the 1972 basketball tournament, which this year had only a seven-team field because of the withdrawal of George Washington University from the league last year.

"We are very pleased to be admitted," said Appalachian President Dr. Herbert Wey.

"One requirement of a good athletic program is to be a member of a strong conference. We think the Southern Conference is such a conference ... We think we can make a contribution."

Appalachian has been noted for its strong athletic program. It formerly belonged to the Carolinas Conference and joined the NCAA only a few months ago, looking forward to acceptance by the Southern.

The vote on admission of Appalachian State — which with 7,000 students will be the conference's second largest member, after East Carolina — was not disclosed. Friday's meeting was behind closed doors.

Virginia Tech, West Virginia and George Washington had pulled out of the conference in the last six years. East Carolina was the last previous member. The Pirates were admitted in 1964.

Greenville and Richmond were among five cities that had made bids for the basketball tournament at the meeting here. Other cities were Norfolk, Roanoke and Hampton in Virginia.

Appalachian State will be North Carolina's third member of the Southern. Davidson and East Carolina are the others. Richmond, VMI and William and Mary are members in Virginia and The Citadel and Furman are in South Carolina.

MONTREAL (AP) — "They've won two in their building and now it's only fair that we win two in ours," says Coach Al MacNeil of the Montreal Canadiens.

MacNeil failed to add that it is not only fair but imperative that the Canadiens win the next two games at home in their best-of-seven Stanley Cup finals against the Chicago Black Hawks.

The Hawks, armed with 2-1 and 5-3 victories in Chicago, could put a quick end to the series if they manage to split the two games in Montreal Sunday afternoon and Tuesday night.

In case the Hawks win one in Montreal, they could close out the series in game No. 5, which is scheduled at Chicago Thursday night.

Despite having to go a full seven games against the New York Rangers in the semifinals, including three overtime conflicts, the Hawks so far in the final series have finished stronger than the rested Canadiens.

The Hawks had a lapse in the second period of the first game but battled to a tie in the third period and won it in a second overtime period on a goal by Jim Pappin.

In Thursday night's game in Chicago, the Canadiens put on a brilliant show for a period and a half and held a 2-1 lead. Then the Hawks pulled ahead with two goals late in the second period and clinched it on two unassisted goals by super sub Lou Angotti.

ABA, NBA Bow To Soaring Costs; Petition Congress For Merger

Associated Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The rival pro basketball leagues finally bowed to the astronomical cost of war Friday and decided that their futures lie together. Now it is up to Congress to decide if peace is possible.

"I think the chances of Congressional legislation are very good," Walter Kennedy, the commissioner of the National Basketball Association said optimistically after announcing the long-awaited merger agreement with the American Basketball Association.

However, Larry Fleisher, counsel for the NBA Players Association which has an anti-trust suit pending in an attempt to prevent a merger that would put an end to the wild bidding war, was not so optimistic.

"I don't believe Congress will approve the merger and we're going to be fighting it," he said.

It is the suit that makes anti-trust exemption by Congress necessary for any union between the leagues to be completed, and even the positive thinking Kennedy felt the actual merger was some time off.

"Realistically, I think it will be a year or more before we can get Congressional approval," he said. "Hopefully, it will be before the start of the 1972-73 season."

That means there will be no common college draft next spring, prolonging the bidding war for graduating college talent that has forced contracts up to as much as a reported $3 million. Even low draft picks were getting in the thousands.

However, the raiding of each other's players apparently will stop.

While Kennedy said the merger plan forsook a 28-team league, including all of the present NBA and ABA clubs in their current locations, inter-league and championship play would have to wait for congressional approval, the 1972-73 season at the earliest.

Kennedy did say inter-league exhibition play could start before next season if individual teams desired to schedule them.

Among the other terms of the agreement was the indemnity of $1.25 million each ABA team, with the exception of Virginia, will pay the NBA; the dismissal of the ABA's anti-trust

Bailey Is Winner

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Rain shortened the NASCAR Grand American Division 100-mile race Friday night in Nashville with H.B. Bailey of Houston, Tex., declared the winner after 109 laps.

Bailey, driving a 1971 Pontiac Firebird, averaged 93.34 miles per hour on the five-eighths mile course after the race, postponed from Thursday because of weather, was delayed 30 minutes, then finally called.

Bailey led the first five laps but gave up the lead to DeWayne Lund of Cross, S.C., who drove a 1969 Camaro. Lund, who was driving with a broken leg, held the lead until the 38th lap, when he was forced to slow down because of tire trouble. Bailey moved back in front to stay.

Lund finished second, followed by Tommy Andrews of Huntsville, Ala., in a 1971 Mustang; Phil Wills of Nashville in a 1968 Camaro; Gary Myers of Huntsville in a 1971 Mustang; Jimmy Vaughn of Greenville, S.C. in a 1969 Camaro; Stan Starr Jr. of Nashville in a 1969 Chevy II; George Bauer of Covington, Ky., in a 1969 Camaro; Bob Williams of Jackson, Miss., in a 1970 Mustang and Al Straub of Louisville, Ky., in a 1971 Mustang.

away midway through the second period and that was it," lamented MacNeil. "Against this team you have to work extra hard. You can't make mistakes."

Williams Qualifies

One member of the Rose High School track team was inadvertently left out of the list of those who qualified for the Regional Meet to be held at the East Carolina University track on Friday.

Mitchell Williams of Rose High qualified for the 220-yard dash, finishing third in the sectional event for Class II runners. He will join the others listed in Friday's Daily Reflector who made the Regionals from this area.

AYDEN — The Ayden Tornadoes kept up their winning ways as they staged a seventh inning rally to slip past Vanceboro Friday afternoon, 11-10.

The Tornadoes were down 10-7 going into the bottom of the seventh when they exploded for four runs to take the victory.

Neither team could score until the top of the third when Vanceboro came alive for four runs. Dawson opened the inning with a free pass to first and he was followed by White who reached on an error. Roland Hooks doubled to score Dawson, Lilly also doubled and when the play was errored in right, White, Hooks and Lilly scored to put Vanceboro in the drivers seat with a 4-0 lead over the Tornadoes.

Tripp reached on a walk to load the bases, Blount drew a free pass which forced in Griffin with the third Ayden run. Loftin doubled into center to score Moore and Tripp to make the score 5-5.

Ayden went into a two run lead when Cleaton's ground ball was errored which allowed Blount and Loftin to score.

Ayden did not enjoy the advantage long however because Vanceboro charged back in the top of the sixth inning to score five runs and regain the lead at 10-7. Whitford and Ipoek reached on errors and Dawson loaded the bases with a single. White singled to score Whitford. Two singles by Hooks and Lilly resulted in four more runs for Vanceboro. Vanceboro now held a three run advantage over Ayden with the score standing 10-7.

Ayden fought back in the bottom of the frame to cut the lead down to only two at 4-2. Phillips singled and then went on to second when the pitcher threw a wild pitch. Manning, the Ayden pitcher helped out his own cause by promptly slapping a homer into right-center field.

Ayden was unable to cut the lead down in the bottom of the sixth and Vanceboro did not add to their lead in the top of the seventh so Ayden came up to bat in the bottom of the seventh with the last chance of pulling the game out of the fire. Blount was hit by a pitch, Loftin and Eason reached on walks to load the bases. Cleaton singled to score Blount and Loftin to draw within one of Vanceboro at 10-9. Manning singled in Eason to knot the score at 10-10. Griffin walked to again load the bases, Moore also drew a walk which forced in Cleaton with the winning run for Ayden.

Vanceboro added another run to their total in the top of the fifth to increase their lead to three over Ayden. Dawson tripled and White hit a ground ball that was errored allowing Dawson to score with the fifth run for Vanceboro which made the score, 5-2.

Study To Show Engine Effect

By JACK WOLISTON
NEW YORK (UPI) —What effect, if any, do marine engine exhausts being discharged into the water have on aquatic ecology?

A two-year, $400,000 study which, it is hoped will answer this question will get under way shortly under sponsorship of the Marine Exhaust Research Council of the Boating Industry Association.

The Water Quality Office of the Federal Environmental Protection Agency has authorized a grant of nearly $100,000 to help launch the study. The grant is renewable the second year. The BIA will provide the balance of the funds.

BIA Executive Director Matt J. Kaufman, administrator for the project, said two teams of scientists will use a "mini-lake" approach in the study, one pair of lakes in a cold water area, the other in a warm section of the country.

In each of the pairs selected, care will be taken to insure that the lakes are as much alike as possible in water quality, bottom conditions and plant and animal life, Kaufman said.

One lake will then be subjected to increasing "pressure" from marine engines, and the other will be retained as a "control" factor. Scientists will monitor both lakes for any changes in condition and make frequent comparisons between the two.

"It's essential to study both cold and warm water lakes," Kaufman said, "because of the great differences in aquatic life between them. In addition, the cold water lake will get a 'rest' when it's frozen during the winter, just like its big brothers all over the northern part of the country. In the warm water area, the exhaust emissions will continue the year around."

The cold water study will be carried out by the University of Michigan's Department of Water Resources and Environmental Control technicians of Ann Arbor, Mich. The warm water phase will be handled by Environmental Engineering, Inc., Gainesville, Fla.

Some groundwork for the research study already has been done, Kaufman said.

"For two years, the University of Michigan's Dr. Walter Weber has been conducting a boating industry-financed study of the effects of outboard motor exhaust on fish," Kaufman said.

"Varying amounts of exhaust gases are piped into tanks containing colonies of minnows to determine possible effects of spawning habits and changes in subsequent generations. Actually, the Council's study will simply move this experiment outdoors and enlarge it to include all species of fish, as well as additional factors like plant life, weather and water temperature changes."

In a complaint filed recently with the U.S. attorney's office in Syracuse, N.Y., Livingston M. Parmele, a retired salesman, charged that outboard motors are polluting the nation's waterways with up to 200 million gallons of gasoline and oil a year. He quoted Ron Stewart, director of the Lake George (N.Y.) Research Center, as saying that outboards do not use 10 per cent of the fuel and oil they consume but dump it into the water.

Public Hearings Crossing State

RALEIGH — A new program to expand North Carolina's Game Lands and several changes in the general statewide hunting regulations will be proposed by the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission at a series of public hearings soon to be held across the state.

The hearings began in the west on May 4 at Sylva, and move east through the state where they will conclude at Edenton, May 14.

The Wildlife Resources Commission, in cooperation with the U.S. Forest Service, will propose to expand the present half million acres of Game Lands to include an additional million and a half acres of land. Roughly half of this additional land is U.S. Forest Service land in Croatan, Uwharrie, Pisgah and Nantahala National Forests, while the rest is owned by other state agencies and large industries.

Hunting is already allowed on most of this additional land, particularly in the National Forests. Essentially, the proposal would intensify the Wildlife Commission's game management and wildlife protection programs on these expanded Game Lands.

"We feel that the proposed expansion of Game Lands would provide higher quality hunting on a more equitable basis for both the hunters of today and the hunters of tomorrow," said Clyde P. Patton, Executive Director of the Wildlife Resources Commission. "In would also be reduced. Last addition to improving hunting year, hunters could kill one bear through improved game a day, have two in possession management and protection, we also plan to greatly simplify our Game Lands regulations."

The Commission will propose a single $6 season Game Lands permit which would cover all hunting for all species on all Game Lands. The $6 season permit would replace the confusing variety of daily and special hunt permits.

Hunting on Game Lands in the western part of the state would be permitted on a six-day per week basis during the open season. On eastern Game Lands, hunting would be restricted to three days per week on Wednesdays, Fridays, Saturdays and holidays.

"In addition to other benefits, the expansion of the Game Lands would aid in setting up 33 bear sanctuaries," said Patton. "The sanctuary program would save our bears without the necessity of closing the season statewide."

Several changes in the general statewide hunting regulations — which apply both on and off Game Lands — will be proposed. The squirrel season would be increased by adding a month to the end of the season. Last year, the season ended January 1, but under the proposal, it would end January 31.

The elimination of winter hunting for wild turkeys will also be proposed, and a statewide spring gobblers-only season would be open April 24 through May 13.

LITTLE DUCK — BIG EGG

The ruddy duck lays the biggest egg of all North-American ducks, in comparison with size of the females. Eggs will measure about 2½ x 1½ inches (2.45 mm x 1.80 mm). In the aggregate, six of these eggs will weigh more than the female ruddy herself — 1 lb. 2 ozs. 5 to 10 eggs are laid in a well built nest of reeds, generally over water.

Russell, Lucas Are Swapped

By TED MEIER
Associated Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Knicks, deposed champions of the National Basketball Association, traded 6-foot-5 Cazzie Russell to the San Francisco Warriors today for 6-8 Jerry Lucas.

It was a straight player deal involving former All-Americans, each of whom had been the College Player of The Year. Russell played at Michigan and Lucas at Ohio State.

It appeared to be the first step in the Knicks' plan to regain the NBA title.

"We hated to give up someone with the ability of Russell," said Red Holzman, the general manager and coach of the Knicks.

"But in order to get a player of Lucas' stature you have to be ready to give up someone of equal ability. Cazzie is one of the finest shooters in the league and was instrumental in our winning the championship in 1970. In addition to his ability as a forward, Lucas can play center which would give us a two-position player."

Lucas' ability to play center apparently was the key to the deal. With Willis Reed, their star hampered by knee and shoulder ailments the Knicks were on the lookout for a capable backup.

Lucas, who played at Ohio State in 1960-61-62, is an eight year NBA veteran. He was traded by Cincinnati to San Francisco for Jim King and Billy Turner during the 1970 season.

Russell signed with the Knicks after playing for Michigan in 1964-65-66. He gained a reputation as a clutch shooter, but suffered a wrist injury that hampered his accuracy.

Colonels Win To Keep Alive

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Before the opening of the American Basketball Association's best-of-seven championship series, Kentucky Colonel coach Frank Ramsey made a prediction: "Defense will be the key." He was right.

Ramsey's Colonels put on their defensive shoes and cut off Utah's inside scoring Friday night to win 116-110, cutting the Stars' series margin to 2-1 going into Saturday's nationally televised CBS, 2 p.m., EDT fourth game.

Both teams were hampered by injuries going into the fourth game. Kentucky's Louie Dampier was slowed by calcium deposits on a bone in his foot, while Utah's Merv Jackson had an injured knee and Red Robbins an upset stomach. All three were ready to play, however.

Wildlife Afield: A Real Fish Story—The Bass That Wasn't

By JIM DEAN
I don't expect you to believe a word of this.

I would not believe it if you told me the same story. But what I am going to tell actually happened on a golf course pond near Burlington.

It was a windy, warm winter day, and I had decided to spend a couple of hours dragging a plastic worm along the bottom of the pond in hopes that some obese largemouth bass—grown senile with age—would yawn at the precise moment my worm dropped into his mouth.

I was not exactly brimming with confidence as I took a seat on the dam near the drain pipe and aimed my first cast toward the center of the lake. After 30 minutes of fruitless casting, I was beginning to daydream.

That's when I had a strike. I leaped to my feet, threw open the bail on my spinning reel and watched the line peel off in satisfying snatches. "Boy, look at him go," I said to a fellow angler sitting on the bank next to me.

I let the bass run, hoping he would stop and swallow the worm. He ran, and ran, and ran, and ran. I've never seen a bass run so far without stopping or even slowing down. I knew I should set the hook. In fact, I knew I should have hit him shortly after the strike, but I was amazed at his dazzling speed.

Finally, when half the line was gone from the reel, I closed the bail and set the hook with a mighty strike. Nothing.

"What the heck..." I muttered. I opened the bail. Line streamed from the reel. I closed it and struck. Nothing.

"Hey buddy," said the other angler. "I don't want to disappoint you but I think your line is going into the drain."

"That's impossible," I said. "I was fishing on the bottom."

I tightened the line. It went directly to the drain pipe. "It can't be," I said. I began to reel furiously, and after about five minutes, the worm popped out of the drain.

The other angler looked at me strangely, then moved a dozen feet down the bank and sat facing me. I thought I heard him mutter something about "some crazy kooks."

I sat down on the bank and scratched by head. I looked at the water, then I looked at my rod. It couldn't have happened, but I had seen it.

Finally I made another cast to the same spot I'd been fishing. The mystery began to unravel. As I slowly reeled, the line blew in a gentle curve along the top of the water until it came to rest against some debris lodged on the pipe. The line passed directly over the hole. I continued to reel, and the worm climbed the pipe then plunked in. I felt a jerk when the lure plopped. That had been the strike. I opened the bail, and line ran off the reel in a steady stream.

"I don't believe it," I said to no one in particular.

I reeled in my line, put my tackle in the car and drove home.

"I don't believe it," my wife said later.

"I don't believe it," my boss said.

"We don't believe it," my friends said.

But it happened. I will swear in church on a leather-bound Bible and a first-edition Isaac Walton that it happened.

If you don't believe me, ask that fellow who was wearing a blue shirt, khaki pants and a baseball cap. I'm pretty sure he lives in Burlington, but I don't know his name. You could look around....

Seaver Downs Three Marlin Bite Off Coast

Tom Seaver is two jumps ahead of Bob Gibson, by every one's count except his own.

"I don't pitch against Bob Gibson. I pitched against the Cardinals," Seaver said Friday night after hurling the New York Mets to a 3-1 comeback victory over St. Louis and Gibson.

It was the second duel in 12 days between the two Cy Young Award winners. Seaver, who took the National League pitching prize two years ago, has won them both.

Elsewhere in the NL, Montreal tripped the Chicago Cubs 3-1, Houston drubbed Philadelphia 8-1, Pittsburgh beat Los Angeles 3-2 and San Francisco defeated Atlanta 4-3 in 10 innings. Cincinnati and San Diego were rained out.

Seaver, who scattered seven hits in beating the Cardinals 12-2 at St. Louis on April 26 as the Mets kayoed Gibson in the fourth inning—fired a six-hitter and struck out nine in the rematch.

The Expos also came from behind to down the Cubs at Montreal, with Carl Morton tossing a seven-hitter for his first career victory over Chicago in six decisions.

Bill Hands, who had a 6-0 lifetime pitching mark against the Expos, lost a 1-0 lead in the seventh when Ron Fairly drilled a leadoff homer, Ron Swoboda doubled and Coco Laboy punched a run-scoring single.

Houston's Joe Morgan came to Philadelphia batting .212, then personally wrecked the Phillies by banging out four hits, stealing two bases, scoring three runs and knocking in two more.

Willie Stargell crashed his 13th homer of the season, a bases-empty shot in the sixth, to give Pittsburgh a 3-0 lead at Los Angeles and the Pirates hung on behind tight relief pitching by Bob Veale and Jim Grant.

Willie Mays, who celebrated his 40th birthday Thursday, sent the Giants past Atlanta with a run-scoring single in the 10th. Denny Lawrence, of the Iron Already, in our new season, 3 blue marlin have taken the baits offshore, and the season is just getting started! Bill Stewart, Greer, C.C. fishing on board the Dixie Izzy, pulled aboard a 281 pounder was captured. The Morehead City Yacht basin based craft, is skippered by Rick Kirvan, and mate aboard is Chuck Lemke.

Fishing over the week-end brought plenty of sea bass, trigger fish catches were good, along with good supplies of silver snappers. Tuesday, Robert Kirkpatrick, Birmingham, Mich., fished on the Dolphin One, with skipper George Bedsworth, boated a 20 pound albacore.

Steamer Pier, is still bragging about the big sea mullet caught by Ted Drinnon, Greenville, N.C., just a few days ago. The mullet weighed 3 pounds 8 ounces. Denny reports that on Tuesday, the southwest winds had the sea mullets taking the baits 2 at a time. Anglers were having a grand time snagging the popular sea mullets. Wednesday morning, the blue fish have been hitting, and they are getting larger as the season progresses.

Negro sculptor William Artis, native of Washington, is another of Eastern North Carolina's native sons, who, like Bertie County's Dr. Francis Speight, Tarboro's Hobson Pittman and Kinston's Henry Pearson, have received national acclaim for their achievements as artists.

Artist-teacher now being honored with a retrospective show at Fisk University in Nashville, Tennessee

Native Son Is Outstanding American Sculptor

The decade of the 1970s is proving to be a highly rewarding one for sculptor William Artis. The Washington, North Carolina native, now an Associate Professor of Art at Mankato State College in Mankato, Minnesota, was notified on January 14 this year he had been selected to the membership of the National Sculpture Society.

Soon after receiving his honor, Artis was informed that his terra-cotta head of the late Dr. Louis Tompkins Wright had been selected for inclusion in the National Portrait Gallery of the Smithsonian Institute. This is the portrait gallery, in sculpture form, of prominent Americans from Benjamin Franklin to Will Rogers.

Artis was also one of nine Mankato State College faculty members chosen to appear in the 1970 edition of Outstanding Educators of America.

On the second of April, a retrospective showing of sculpture and ceramics by the 57 year old Negro opened at Fisk University in Nashville, Tennessee. This big show will be there until June 2.

The North Carolina native, who has been called "a poet of hope," is today one of America's outstanding Afro-American artists.

"(Artis) has showed the beauty of his people, modelled and shaped in bronze and clay, black and beautiful," David C. Driskell, Chairman of the Department of Art at Fisk University, writes in the catalogue of the exhibition. "He has not attempted to solve problems with his art," Driskell notes, but . . . has seen beyond those obstacles often binding the human spirit and has encountered through his art the meaning of a universal world."

As far back as 1951, Time magazine of April 9, 1951, in comments on the annual show of Negro painting and sculpture at Atlanta University, singled out Artis' sculpture, "The Quiet One." It "dominated the sculpture section . . . a quiet, beautifully compact monument to a Negro boy who sits withdrawn, miserable and taut with life."

In the 20 years since the 1951 Atlanta University show, the climate of general public acceptance of Negro art as an important current in the mainstream of American art has undergone a radical change. Despite this, Artis' "plan," as pointed out by Driskell in the Fisk catalog, "has neither changed nor faltered."

Even judged solely on the basis of numerous photographs of the artists' work over a period of years, it is obvious the artist works with a deep inner conviction, with an understanding of his model that expresses far more than a mere physical likeness. Though the sculptor's plan may not have changed, nor his goal been redirected, his ability to instill a "universal quality" in his sculpture grows with the passing years.

In the terra cotta busts shown on this page, all dated 1969, there is a new element, one of elongation of the model's physical features, somewhat like the technique El Greco used in his paintings, that adds an extra dimension to the character of the subjects.

One is reminded of Wallace Stevens' "... noble accents, and lucid, inescapable rhythms." These works are a counterpart in clay to the poet's lyrical statement. They carry also the stamp of Artis' African heritage. The modeling, and the quality of facial planes that make life bronzes so marvelously expressive, are echoed in Artis' recent work.

In his ceramics, too, the accent is on peices fashioned on the vertical concept. Jars, jugs and vases of recent years seem to be reaching upward. This feeling of an upward thrust is reflected more dramatically by the sculpture shown on this page, in which a young man raises his arms and face skyward.

Perhaps this upward reach parallels the progress of the artist. Although not far from entering the sixth decade of his life, Artis continues actively productive, as a talented artist and as a teacher of young people who seek to find their own destiny in art.

. . . Artis at work on a terra cotta bust

William Ellsworth Artis was born February 2, 1914 in Washington, North Carolina, the son of the late Thomas Midjette and Elizabeth Davis Artis.

As a boy, he attended the Washington Public Elementary School and the Washington Catholic Elementary School. While still a teen-ager, Artis left Washington, moving to New York, where he graduated in 1936 from Haaren High School in New York City.

Early in life, he became interested in ceramics, and at various times studied at the Craft Students League, the Greenwich House Ceramic Center, summer sessions at the New York State College of Ceramics in Alfred, N.Y.

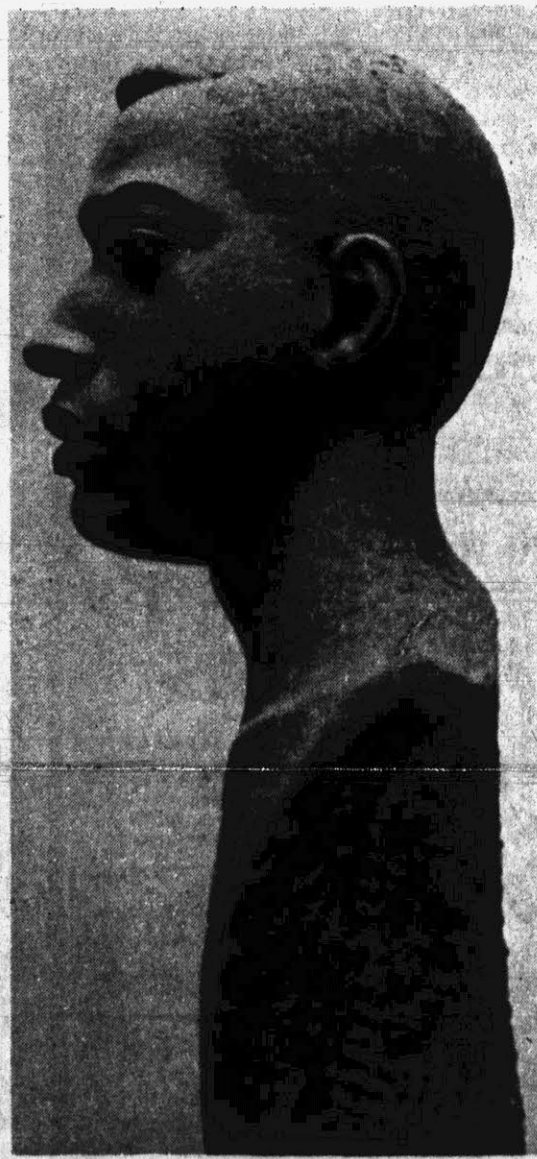

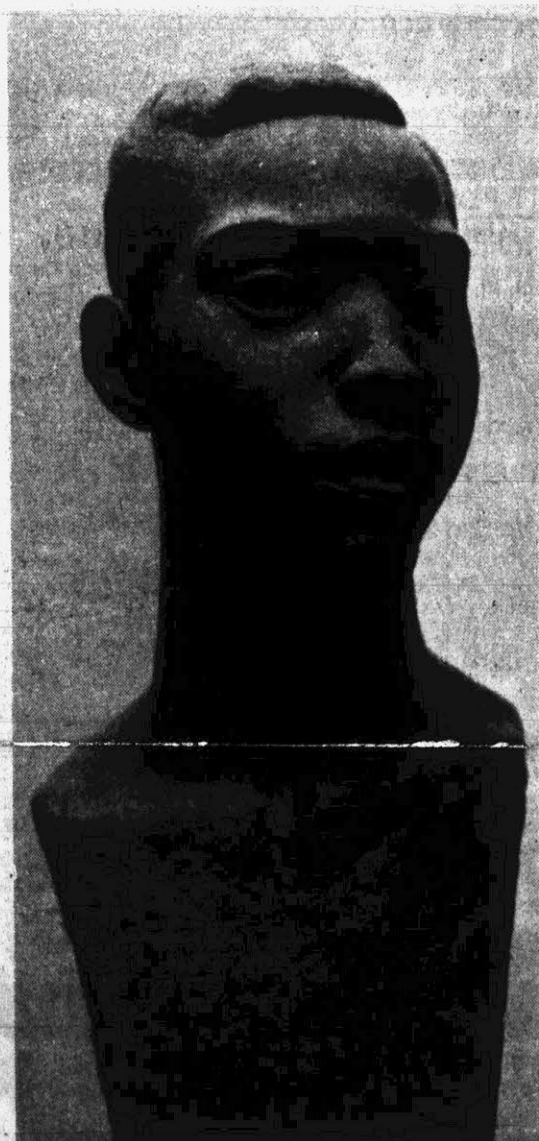

In 1941 Artis was drafted into the Army, and remained in service during the World War II years, returning to resume his studies in 1946. In 1947 he enrolled in the College of Fine Arts at Syracuse University, N.Y., receiving the Bachelor of Fine Arts degree, in sculpture in 1950. In June 1951, Artis was awarded the Degree of Master of Fine Arts, also in sculpture, from Syracuse. Artis has also attended the Graduate School of Pennsylvania State University.

In the years he was in service, Artis continued his sculpture whenever time permitted, and exhibited in The American Red Cross in Bari, Italy.

Since 1951, Artis has taught at the YMCA in New York City, at the New York State College of Ceramics in Alfred, N.Y., the Ogala Sioux Arts and Craft Project in Pine Ridge, South Dakota, for the Department of Interior, and at Nebraska State Teachers College in Chadran, Nebraska before becoming a faculty member at Mankato State College.

Through the years, Artis has won numerous major awards, including the Julius Rosenwald Fellowship for a 12 month period at Tuskegee Institute in Alabama; four Edward B. Aford purchase awards at the Atlanta University annual exhibitions and a first purchase award at the same annual exhibition; the Harmon Foundation Travel Fellowship and Lecture Tour award, the Metropolitan Scholarship Award for creative Sculpture at the Art Student's League in New York, among others.

His work is in a number of prominent collections, including that of the Walker Art Center in Minneapolis; the International Business Machines building in New York; the Slater Memorial Museum in Norwich, Connecticut; Howard University Gallery of Art in Washington, D. C., and many other museum and private collections.

Snow Goose Has Test Flights

NEW YORK (UPI)—The snow goose, star of the Hallmark Hall of Fame's upcoming production of Paul Gallico's famous story "The Snow Goose" is being put through test flights at Los Angeles before the one-hour film goes on location in England.

On its first trial, the goose flew one quarter of a mile on cue and returned to its handler's shoulder at a whistle blast. When it passes all the tests deemed necessary, the goose and its stand-ins will fly to England for a period of quarantine, then begin work on the television special in June.

TV Notes

NEW YORK (UPI)—NBC has changed the title of a new program due in September from "Marriage Can Be Fun" to "The Funny Side." It involves a permanent repertory company of five couples using songs and sketches to treat everyday problems.

CBS will telecast 83 National Football League regular-season games during the 1971 season, beginning Sept. 19. There will be three pre-season night games aired on Aug. 28, Sept. 3 and Sept. 12.

The American Football Conference schedule on NBC calls for telecasting 84 regular-season contests and three pre-season matches.

Lee Majors jumped quickly from the cancelled "The Men from Shiloh" series to a co-starring role in "Owen Marshall, Counselor at Law," one-hour drama skein that will be seen on the ABC network Thursday nights beginning in the fall. He'll work with Arthur Hill.

The "Mr. Wizard" science show with Don Herbert will be back on the NBC network from noon to 12:30 p.m. Saturdays beginning Sept. 11. The program was on the network from 1951 to 1965. Its content will be a bit more sophisticated this time because "today's young audiences more knowledgeable than any we have programmed for in the past."

ABC again will present "The Undersea World of Jacques Cousteau" specials during the 1971-72 season. There will be eight one-hour programs, four new ones and four repeats.

Shirley MacLaine Says Other Stars 'Watching'

By ROBERT MUSEL

LONDON (UPI)—Shirley MacLaine says a number of the big holdout stars who have thus far refused to commit themselves to television are waiting to see how her new situation comedy, "Shirley's World," turns out.

If it is a success and doesn't damage her movie boxoffice value these other major figures may descend from the firmament to take their chances on the small screen. Miss MacLaine mentioned no names, but Steve McQueen, Marlon Brando, Paul Newman, Gregory Peck, Charlton Heston and others must be among them.

"I don't agree that TV necessarily hurts the cinema boxoffice," said the 36-year-old actress and author. "If you make it on TV you really grab the hearts of the people watching. And if they like you in the living room they are even more likely to go out and see you in films."

"I believe the task of the stars is to raise the medium to help films. I don't believe they should stay away from television."

Of course, if "Shirley's World" flops, all bets are off. Miss MacLaine was in London for the start of filming on the series which will take her around the world as a photographer-journalist who gets involved in the stories she is covering or the people she happens to meet.

She was asked at the National Film Theatre where she gave the John Player lecture (actually an interview and question-and-answer session from the audience) why she had chosen to make her debut in a series financed by Britain's Sir Lew Grade of Associated Television. It will appear on ABC-TV in the United States.

"Sir Lew has the money," said Miss MacLaine, who is apt to be very practical about such matters. "I tried to get the American networks to do an around-the-world show but all they wanted me to do was to show my legs and do a time step."

Another thing that persuaded her to take the TV plunge was her belief that plot isn't as important as personality on the small screen—and of that quality she has more than her share.

SHIRLEY MacLAINE doesn't agree that TV necessarily hurts the cinema box office. Shirley is starting the filming of her new television series. (UPI Telephoto)

The three-paragraph items in the back of the paper that report the random violence of big city life, are the subject of Jules Feiffer's satire in the comedy called "Little Murders," which opens Wednesday night at 8:15 at the East Carolina Playhouse in McGinnis Auditorium.

"Little Murders," a 400-performance success in New York in 1969, has been called "stabbingly funny," though the homicides and near-homicides dotted through the tale result not from knifings but from senseless shooting in the streets outside the apartment where the action takes place.

This is an apartment inhabited by a family called Newquist who, barricaded behind the double locks on their door, have become numbed by the constant dangers and inconveniences of big city life—power-failures which are so routine that they don't even break their meal-time conversation as they light candles in the blackout, sinister visitors who put their hands over the door's peep-hole after knocking, anonymous obscene telephone calls, the drift through their windows of sooty air and the sounds not only of random shooting but also the sirens of ambulances, fire-trucks and police squad cars incessantly plunging toward scenes of disaster.

Amanda Muir as Patsy, the daughter of this family, is the heroine who despite all the terrors of city life, maintains a sunny disposition, while James Slaughter as her henpecked father tries to cling to his image of a vanished peace and security and Anita Brehm as her rapidly genteel mother goes about with a semi-lunatic calm smile while her world shatters around her.

Others in the cast of this comedy about the sufferers from the quiet hysteria that spreads through every metropolis, will be Gregory Smith, Christ Jones and Franc Wiczerzak.

"Little Murders" is directed by Guest Professor, Joseph Stockdale, with setting and costumes by Robert T. Williams and lighting by Andrews Giffilan.

Tickets are available at the McGinnis Auditorium box office (758-6390).

Hollywood Scene

HOLLYWOOD (UPK)—Jerry Paris will direct Sandy Duncan and Tony Roberts in "Star Spangled Girl" at Paramount.

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Leonard Nimoy—formerly of "Star Trek"—and currently starring in "Catlow"—will appear in "Fiddler on the Roof" in summer stock.

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Lee Grant will co-star with Peter Falk in the new Neil Simon play, "The Prisoner of Second Avenue," being directed by Mike Nichols for Broadway.

The comedy's plot centers on Mark Ramsey as her apathetic fiancé Alfred into finally marrying her, and into taking a few positive stands in life.

"Alfred," she tells him, "I wake up every morning with a smile on my face. And for the rest of the day I come up against an unending series of challenges to wipe that smile off my face."

Alfred is unconvinced. He is the kind of person who wears a dental guard so he won't get his teeth knocked out when he is mugged. He doesn't fight his muggers back because "after a while they get tired and go away." Alfred is Feiffer's modern man, crawling into his shell, pretending none of it is happening, so maybe it will all go away.

Patsy and Alfred do get married—but by a whacky, all to emancipated minister of Greenwich Village's "First Existential Church." Kirk Thayer will play this take-off of certain "advanced" clergymen who condone everything.

They do not then live "happily ever after." In Feiffer's corrosively funny view of modern metropolitan life, that is not possible. He can portray Patsy as an optimist, but he himself is not one.

Others in the cast of this comedy about the sufferers from the quiet hysteria that spreads through every metropolis, will be Gregory Smith, Christ Jones and Franc Wiczerzak.

On Tuesday night at 8:15 p. m. in Room 201 of the College Union at East Carolina University, a new type of entertainment on campus will see its first experiment.

Under the auspices of the Fine Arts Committee at ECU, Hungarian poet and translator Maxim Tabory will present a group of university faculty, students and towns people in a program encompassing music, poetry and brief dramatic skits.

Persons taking part in the mixed program will be Fran Conklin, Emily Cameron, Maxim Tabory, Dr. Joseph Daugman, Daniel Irvine, Joyce Carraway, Kit Hunter, Woody Thurman and a chorus.

Tabory said the highlight of the evening is a short dramatized version of Paul Green's "Thou Shalt Not Kill" with two music selections, an aria from Verdi's "La Forza del Destino" and one from Berlioz's "Festivities at the Capulets," interwoven into the skit. Daniel Irvine, Woody Thurman and the chorus are participants in this portion of the program. Another highlight will involve a translation of an anonymous work, "Szuk konyok utcan hazamegyek" (Through this elbow shaped alley), with the use of the overture to Verdi's "La Traviata."

Other poems, most of them translations in English of Hungarian originals, to be read on the program include "The Ship," "Like Falling Between the Railroad Tracks," "The Night, the Dream and the Tortures" and "The Glass Door."

Music for the program will include "Casta Diva" from Bellini's "Norma;" Debussy's "Clair de Lune" and "Premiere Arabesque;" "Love Minus Zero No Limit" by Dylan-Baez; "I'll Turn Into A Cherry Tree," a Russian love song; Strauss' "Tales From The Vienna Woods," two arias from Bolto's "Mefistofele," and Schmidt's "Heut' ist der Schonste Tag in Meinem Leben."

Art work for the program is by Laurice Aramoonie. Steve Apple has charge of lights; and Robert Hudgins is musical technician. John Wallace is in charge of special effects, and Dr. Joseph Daugman is consultant in Russian.

The public is invited to attend this experimental program. No charge is being made for admission.

Because of the limited size of Room 201, Tabory noted there will be about 100 seats available, seating will be strictly on a first come, first seated basis.

The most recent to go on view is the annual Student Art Show at Rawl, both in the first floor cases and along the dim stretches of the narrow third floor hall.

This annual showing by art students below the graduate level usually provides a mixed bag of so-so things along with some interesting work. This year is no exception. A few of the prints and drawings and several pieces of sculpture come off very well, as does the handsome craft creations of ceramics, leather goods and textiles in the ground floor cases. The latter of course have the distinct advantage of good lighting and at least a minimum of viewing space.

On the third floor, incidentally, its important to remember to look among the lockers for pieces that could otherwise be missed.

Whatever a viewer's main interest may be, there's something for everyone—photographs, prints, soft and hard constructions, weaving, paintings, sculpture, ceramics, jewelry, commercial designs, and interior decorating.

This reviewer heard an observer say at last year's show, "It's like finding treasures in a dark attic." That statement can apply to the 1971 show. It is certainly worth the effort to climb the three flights of stairs and jockey for a reasonable satisfactory angle for looking at the students' work.

—JERRY RAYNOR

Reviews

When in Rome. Ngaio Marsh, Little, Brown, and Co., Boston, 1971. 260 pp. $5.95

In the years since 1960 there has been a tremendous influx of remarkably good writing on the fiction market. There have been more noteworthy novels written, in fact, and a high percentage of them by novice authors, than can be readily accommodated in the rather limited print space available for their discussion. Why it is, then, that publishers insist on sending out drivel like When in Rome to be seriously reviewed and consequently publicized, escapes me completely. I will not even begin to surmise; I will get on with the review.

Ngaio Marsh is a woman. I found this out reading the dust jacket; it is something I had not known before. In this respect the inside cover is, at least, enlightening. What it fails to point out is that Ngaio Marsh has an insufferably dull prose style and a sterile imagination. Her characters are wooden and her plot is mechanically manipulated. Of course whoever wrote the liner is trying to sell books and can therefore be forgiven for overlooking these kinds of deficiencies in the prose he is paid to extol.

The dialogue that has been forced into When in Rome is in a class by itself. I really do not know what else to say about it so I will give the reader examples and let him judge for himself. The first is from an encounter between a couple of Italians on page six. They say to each other: "Basta!" "—lasci passare—"

"Se ne vada ore—" "Non desidero parlarle" and so on. I suppose this is intended to add something to the setting. It does not.

There is an even better conversation on page nine. This one is between the English Consul and one Barnaby Grant, who has something to do with the plot. It goes like this: "Now look here, this is a bad business, you know. It's a bad business." "You, my dear Consul, are telling me." "Quite so. Quite so." There is more, but lack of space dictates that I omit it. Besides, I do not want to give away the story.

Ngaio Marsh does employ a few clever scrivener's tricks in the unravelling of her mystery. I have to give her credit for that. She manages, for instance, in the very first sentence of the novel to inform the reader (and she is terribly subtle about it) that she has read Romeo and Juliet, or at least seen the movie, and that the reader is a dullard indeed and most likely unable to appreciate the intricacies of her style if he has not. The marvelous thing is that she mentions neither Romeo nor Juliet by name: in one fell swoop she has expanded name dropping into an allusive art.

The mystery has something to do with dope. It is solved in the end.

Book News

From Sheppard Memorial Library

By JANE CUNNINGHAM

With the sunbathing time upon us, many people have asked for exciting new books to read while they are getting a tan. We have some new books that are concerned with mystery, suspense, or adventure that could be of interest to sunbathers and non-sunbathers alike.

THE SHADOW GUEST by Hillary Waugh concerns Angela and Howard Whelan who move from New York to London. As soon as they arrive one tragedy after another besets them. Angela has a nervous breakdown; Howard has a heart attack. Their doctors advise them to move to the country. Angela finds a house that is the opposite of her taste and his, but Howard goes along with her decision. The house appears to be haunted or at least the legend of the cottage says it is haunted. Many strange events occur with a ghostlike figure appearing on the lawn, seemingly luring Angela away from Howard. The story comes to an exciting climax with a surprise ending.

Caroline Cole found an old grave stone that says: "LUISA b. Jun 4 1788 d. Oct 8 1806". This stone changes Caroline, a happy wife of a real estate agent when she brings the stone into her home. She has no idea who Luisa was but Caroline somehow feels that this is going to bring about her own rebirth. In THE STONE CARNATION by Naomi A Hintze the reader is involved with the two heroines. Caroline's marriage flounders, there is a subtle scent of carnations throughout the house and she is pregnant. The reader does not know whether to hope Caroline has a boy—or Luisa.

SAVANNAH PURCHASE by Jane Aiken Hodge is the story of two cousins who look alike. They are separated by the Battle of Waterloo to be reunited four years later near the Savannah River. Josephine, who is married to a rich planter, suggests that she and Juliet play their childhood game of impersonation. Josephine leaves to take the chance of rescuing Napoleon from St. Helena. Juliet soon learns that Josephine did not tell her very much. Entertaining guests or dancing with the President of the United States Juliet is aware of disaster looming over them.

Selena Mead decides to take a trip around the world before she is married. At the airport in Berlin she becomes involved with a case of espionage. A whirlwind courtship and marriage to a secret agent, Simon Mead, leads to her involvement in the secret intelligence agency section LEGACY OF DANGER by Patricia McGerr, leads the reader through a series of adventures with Selena as she tracks her husband's murderer, protects a girl with secret information, helps a foreign minister defect, and keeps a scientist from defecting. Quickly the reader will be looking for sentences that begin with a "q" as a clue, the section Q needs her assistance.

THE WHITE DAWN, an Eskimo saga by James Houston is the account of three New England whalers. They become lost at sea where the Eskimos find them and take them in. Avinga narrates the story of the three curious strangers. They are nursed back to health, and have the problem of communicating without a common language. Each of the strangers adopts to the situation in a different way, and they each cause a unique individual problem. THE WHITE DAWN relates the life style of the Eskimos with its balance between man and nature. This is the Eskimos of the past before "civilization" came to change their lives.

Vaughan Williams. Starcher will conduct the "Jedermann" overture by Paul Whear.

Thinks Her Son Deserves Better

(© 1971 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd. Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: My son is handsome, intelligent and could have married anyone he chose, but he married a fat, ugly slob who was pregnant at the time, and no telling whose child it was.

She walks all over him. He does exactly what she tells him to do like a child. She started him smoking, and everytime he tries to quit she pokes a cigaret in his mouth or gets him to light one for her. He is trying to finish college but he'll never make it because she keeps him up at all hours and he isn't able to get to school half the time, besides working a 3 to 11 o'clock shift. She doesn't work, and sleeps all day herself. She humiliates him in front of others, but he remains loyal to her and defends her. He thinks she is "wonderful". She is destroying his health and his future.

Can you tell me why my son puts up with this? Is there anything I can do to help him?

HIS MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: It is entirely possible that because of your intense hatred for the girl, your son is trying all the harder to prove you wrong. The more you knock her, the more fiercely he will defend her. It's also possible that in his eyes she is indeed "wonderful." Save your energy, Mother. You can't help him because he doesn't feel that he needs any help.

DEAR ABBY: I am an 18-year-old girl with strict old-fashioned parents (especially my father). I am not allowed to accept a date with a fellow unless my father meets him first. But here's the catch, after he meets him, he asks a million questions, like what does he do for a living, and if he's going to college, which one, and does he live with his parents, etc.

Once my father suspected a boy was lying about his age, so he asked to see his driver's license. Abby, I could understand my father's asking all those questions if a fellow and I were getting serious about each other, but on the first date, it's embarrassing. What do you suppose a guy thinks when he is put thru a quiz like that?

PROTECTED

DEAR PROTECTED: I'm sure he thinks you are one girl who doesn't go out with every Tom, Dick and Harry, and he's right. And he also probably thinks that if he gets the third degree on the first date, what would happen with a proposal?

DEAR ABBY: Ten years ago, a four-year-old girl, the 10th in her family, was adopted by my niece and her husband. They provided this child (I'll call Pam) with love and a good home, and enrolled her in a public school when the time came. Pam didn't get along with the other children, fighting them on the school bus, etc., so they finally had to send her to a private school.

Now, at 14, Pam receives the lowest possible grades, makes no friends, lies constantly, has been caught stealing sizable amounts from her parents. She's even tried to set fire to the house. Tests showed that Pam has an I. Q. of 90. When asked why she doesn't attempt to get better grades, her stock answer is, "I don't care to."

My heart aches for my niece who teaches school daily, runs a competent house and is raising two well-behaved sons. I notice her nerves are ragged and she appears defeated.

Is there a school or some place where this child can be sent before it's too late? I would gladly help financially.

WORRIED

DEAR WORRIED: It's hard to believe that your niece hasn't been at least as "worried" about Pam's anti-social behavior as you. Let her know that if psychotherapy or a special school is needed, you are prepared to help finance it.

DEAR ABBY: Is there any special significance in wearing a carnation on Mother's day?

CURIOUS IN ABILENE

DEAR CURIOUS: Yes. One wears a red carnation to honor his mother who is living. And a white carnation for a mother who is deceased.

City Engineer Explains Plan

Fornes Run between East Fourteenth and East Tenth Street was the subject of a presentation by City Engineer C. A. Holiday at the City Council meeting Thursday night.

Explaining that the matter was not now up for official consideration, Holiday used maps and charts to show the course of the stream and the possible means available to correct flooding problems which confront residents living in this area.

"There is some apprehension about our plans on the part of property owners," Holiday said. "People are not properly informed about what we want to do. We can get in there with a rubber tired tractor and do the necessary work by cutting only a few small trees."

Holiday said that rounding of sharp angled corners of the stream should materially help the flow of water without substantially altering the course of the stream.

He also noted that his investigations showed that high water marks indicated a flood level of about 40 feet in width. "It would be impossible to construct a channel," he remarked, "as that would be a matter of making a channel about 25 feet wide and four feet deep."

Holiday said it was hoped the problem could be corrected with a plan similar to that on the north side of Overlook Drive.

Ask Them Yourself

FOR ASTRONAUT STUART A. ROOSA

What was your reaction to the Russians' criticism of Apollo 14's exploration of the moon? —Thomas Brown, Utica, N.Y.

● I'd be making the same statements if I were in their spot. When you compare the data, you find there wasn't even a contest. They were beaten hands down getting a man to the moon, and they're just sore.

FOR BERNADETTE DEVLIN,

Northern Ireland's extreme activist

As I understand it, Angela Davis is being detained by the authorities because of her connection with some weapons allegedly used in a murder episode in California. Is it true then that you consider her a "political prisoner"? I understand you also have some criticism of the presence of our troops in Vietnam.—Henry Moore, Clearwater, Fla.

● Yes. I believe that if Angela Davis was not a black and a Communist she would not have been imprisoned by the authorities. Secondly, I think your troops do not belong in Vietnam, just as I think the British troops do not belong in Northern Ireland.

FOR PETE ROZELLE,

Commissioner, National Football League

Several ex-football players—Johnny Sample and Dave Meggsey, for example—have written books blasting pro football. How do the other players feel about these books?—J. J. Flynn, Atlantic City, N.J.

● Those I've talked with find it very distasteful. They feel that much of what these men have written is not fact. It's either opinion—and in some cases very exaggerated opinion—or it's some form of vindictiveness.

FOR HOWARD PYLE,

President National Safety Council

Please tell me how many illiterates have been granted drivers' licenses?—Art Cromsky, Las Vegas, Nev.

● Data are not available on the number of illiterates who have been granted drivers' licenses. But various states do provide oral examinations if the applicant is illiterate or does not speak English. These states require that the applicant be able to recognize signs and that he knows and understands traffic laws.

FOR RICHARD BURTON

I read somewhere that you dislike actors and acting. Is this true?—Diane Douglass, Lancaster, Pa.

● I can hardly say I dislike actors, being one myself. But, although many of my best friends are actors, I do think theatre people can be a bit of a bore. As for acting itself, to me it's a tedious profession. Not only are the hours long and the pressures severe, but it takes a tremendous amount of energy to perpetuate the ego-mania acting requires—energy that might be better spent elsewhere. Besides . . . well, acting seems like such a silly thing for a grown man to do.

FOR CHAD EVERETT,

TV's "Medical Center"

Do you have to know a lot about medicine to play Joe Gannon, MD? —Mimi Perkins, Milton-Freewater, Ore.

● No, but I did study with real doctors and observed hospital procedures before we started work on the show. That at least made it possible for me to talk about complicated medical terms and act as though I knew my way around an operating room without stumbling.

FOR MILDRED ALFORD,

Director of American Airlines Stewardess College

What is the average age for stewardesses? How many are there? —Alyse Gilbert, Bakerville, Calif.

● The average age for American Airlines stewardesses is about 24. American has about 4,500 stewardesses, including supervisors and instructors, and we also have a number of stewards assigned to our Caribbean and South Pacific routes. In the entire U.S. airline industry, there was a total of 33,600 stewardesses, stewards and pursers at the end of 1969—three times the 11,000 who were flying at the end of 1959.

FOR MORT SAHL, satirist-lecturer

I have heard that you said that there was a reason, other than reporting the news, that caused the press to give so much coverage to the tragedy at Chappaquiddick. What is it?—T. M., Grand Rapids, Mich.

● Sen. Edward Kennedy is the one man who could lead a peace movement in the United States. Those in the war establishment who don't want peace set out to destroy him through excessive publicity on the tragedy.

● I think the only game the Rams lost this season when I sang was the New York Jets game.

FOR GEN. ELIZABETH P. HOISINGTON,

Director, Women's Army Corps

How many members of the Women's Army Corps have been killed in Vietnam? How many WACs are now in Vietnam?—Mrs. R. A. Caubernat, Laurel, Del.

● In Vietnam, as in previous conflicts, members of the Women's Army Corps (WAC) serve in noncombat positions. There have been no deaths among our women in Vietnam. WACs have been serving in Vietnam since 1964. At the present time there are approximately 25 officers and 100 enlisted women on duty there. They are located at the major headquarters in and around Saigon.

FOR ARTHUR HAILEY,

author of "Airport"

When will your next novel be published? What will it be about? —R. L. Catpost, New Smyrna Beach, Fla.

● I am now finishing a novel called "Wheels," which is about the automobile industry. It will be published in the fall of 1971, probably in September.

FOR LUCILLE BALL

On your show, "Here's Lucy," there is the sound of laughter at a humorous situation, but television viewers never see an audience.

Is the laughter canned?—Verda Ross, San Bernardino, Calif.

● No. With the exception of the shows filmed on location, all "Here's Lucy" shows are filmed in front of a live audience. The laughter is real.

FOR WILLIAM E. MILLER,

1964 Republican Candidate for Vice President

As a former National Republican Committee Chairman, you must have known President

Richard Nixon well. In view of this, do you think he will drop Spiro Agnew from his 1972 ticket as has been rumored?—M. L. Russell, Atlantic City, N.J.

● If Mr. Agnew is a one-percent liability at the time the 1972 ticket is formed, he will be dropped. If he is a one-percent asset, he will be kept. This is not a unique situation. Similar action would be taken with any Vice President. Knowing Mr. Nixon to be an astute politician, I think he will play the game according to traditional guidelines.

FOR JIM NABORS

What record have the Los Angeles Rams compiled in games at which you sang the National Anthem?—Jac Pauley, Santa Anna, Calif.

THESE TWO WOMEN ARE REDUCING THEIR WAISTS, TUMMIES, HIPS AND THIGHS

Fabulous New SAUNA BELT™

TRIM- JEANS

The Space Age
Slenderizer for MEN and WOMEN that is so effective it is...

Mary Lou Wilhelm

"I lost 11 excess inches using the remarkable trim-jeans and it happened so fast I could hardly believe it—but figures don't lie and here are mine: trim-jeans reduced my waist 2½ inches, my tummy 2 inches, my hips 2 inches and my thighs 2½ inches each. I ate normally—it took just 3 days—and best of all, the inches have stayed off."

THIS SUPER PRODUCT IS PRODUCING SUPER NEW SLENDERIZING FOR A HOST OF MEN AND WOMEN. HERE ARE JUST A FEW:

David Medeiros: "Just 3 days on the trim-jeans program and I trimmed off 13 excess inches; 5 inches from my waist, 4½ inches from my abdomen; 1 inch from my hips and 2½ inches from my thighs. No dieting—and my appearance has improved 100%."

Miss Marilyn Mackay: "Would you believe I lost 3 inches from my waist, 4 inches from my tummy, 1½ inches from my hips and 3 inches from each thigh for a total loss of 14½ excess inches in just 3 days? Well, I did—and I did it with trim-jeans—and I'm terribly thrilled about the whole thing!"

Mrs. Linda Seatz: "In just 3 days my waist went from 29 inches to 25 inches—my hips from 39½ inches to 37 inches and my thighs from 24 inches to 21 inches with a total overall loss of 14½ inches with these wonder working trim-jeans—and all without the need for dieting."

GUARANTEED TO REDUCE YOUR WAIST, TUMMY, HIPS AND THIGHS A TOTAL OF FROM 6 TO 9 INCHES IN JUST 3 DAYS OR YOUR MONEY REFUNDED

Here is how it works:

Miss Penny Dix has slipped into her trim-jeans and is inflating them with the handy little pump provided. She is now ready to perform her 'Magic Torso' movements, an exercise program designed specially for trim-jeans.

After a few pleasant moments—about 10 minutes or so—doing her 'Magic Torso' movements, Penny is now relaxing for an additional 20 minutes while keeping her trim-jeans on. That is all there is to it.

Penny now slips her trim-jeans off and checks her 'after' measurements. Remarkable! Penny lost 1 inch from waist, 2 inches from tummy, 1 inch from hips, 1½ inches from each thigh for a total measurement loss of 7 inches in just 1 brief session.

Penny Dix

"Incredible! I lost 7 full inches from my waist, hips and thighs the very first day I tried trim-jeans. Altogether I used them just 3 times and lost a total of 11½ inches. The inches melted off so rapidly and right where I wanted to lose them: 2 inches off my waist, 2½ inches off my tummy, 2 inches off my hips and 2½ inches off each thigh. No dieting, no discomfort and thanks to trim-jeans my figure has never looked better."

TRIM-JEANS — THE SPACE AGE SLENDERIZER WITH RESULTS THAT ARE OUT OF THIS WORLD.

The trim-jeans are a marvel of ease, comfort and efficiency. Once you have slipped them on, you are ready for the most astounding experience in rapid slenderizing you have ever known. Only trim-jeans has the unique features of design, including the exclusive super sauna-lock that permits the constant snug fit and solid support in all 4 areas—waist, tummy, hips and thighs—without which truly sensational results are not possible. We recommend that the trim-jeans be used a few minutes each day for 3 days in a row when you first receive them and then several times a week until you have achieved your maximum potential inch loss. After that, for maintenance you can use the trim-jeans about twice a month or as often as you feel the need.

THE MOST REVOLUTIONARY GUARANTEE IN SLENDERIZING HISTORY. So many users of the trim-jeans obtain 'instant reducing'—are inches slimmer, inches trimmer in from just 1 to 3 session with this super slenderizer—are actually losing as much as a total of 7 or more inches from their waists, tummies, hips and thighs in just 1 session and up to 14 or more inches from 3 sessions. This principle produces really fantastic results. There may be variations of speed and/or degree of results due to individual differences in metabolism and body response. Not everyone may lose 7 inches in just 1 session and 14½ inches in 3 days but remember this: No matter what your metabolism, no matter what your body type, if you do not lose a total of from 6 to 9 inches from your waist, tummy, hips and thighs in just 3 days, you may return the trim-jeans and the entire purchase price will be immediately refunded.

THE AMAZING TRIM-JEANS TAKE OFF INCHES WHERE THEY NEED TO COME OFF. Your trim-jeans are designed to give you just the reducing effect you need where you need it... and the price of the trim-jeans is just $13.95 and each pair carries a FULL MONEY BACK GUARANTEE. Here is the slenderizer supreme—trim-jeans—which we sincerely believe to be the easiest, fastest, most convenient, most sensationally effective waist, tummy, hip and thigh reducer ever discovered—with the most revolutionary guarantee in slenderizing history. So if you want trimmer, slimmer, sleeker measurements and you want them now, send for your trim-jeans today.

A Soldier's Story: "The Day I Was Killed in Vietnam"

"The doctors tagged the body and sent it to the morticians to be embalmed, placed in a rubber bag and sent home. Another statistic. Then the miracle began. . . ."

It was a sultry July day in 1967. Jacky Bayne, a 20-year-old Spec 4 from Fort Mill, S. C., was on patrol with his German Shepherd, Bruno, near Chu Lai, Vietnam. Suddenly there was a terrific explosion. The land mine sent both man and dog flying. By the time the evacuation helicopter arrived, Jacky Bayne was "dead."

Back at the field hospital, doctors carefully examined the body. The rescue team had spent 45 minutes trying to resuscitate Bayne, but to no avail. There was no audible heart beat, no respiration. Giving up, the doctors tagged the body and sent it to the morticians to be embalmed, placed in a rubber bag and sent home. Another statistic.

The miracle began a few hours later when the morticians began preparing the body. As preliminary six-inch slits were made in the groin, one of the men drew back. Was it his imagination, or was that a quiver he had seen? At that moment someone gasped, "His heart is beating!" Quickly, excitedly, the embalmers worked to sew up the incisions. Jacky Bayne's death was over; now began his long return to life.

To look at his open, good-humored face now, it is difficult to remember that Specialist E4 Bayne began his resurrection with such a precarious grasp on life that doctors believed there was little hope for survival. And even if he did beat the odds, they predicted he would never regain the use of his faculties.

When informed of their son's condition and that his unconscious body was being sent from Vietnam to Walter Reed Army Hospital, Mr. and Mrs. Eb Bayne left Fort Mill at once for Washington. What they learned firsthand would have discouraged lesser folks. This is the way Mrs. Bunia Bayne describes it:

"The doctor took Eb and me into his office and told us, 'I'll lay it on the line. Your son may live to be 50 years old, even 75, but he'll never be more than a vegetable.' I said, 'Doctor, I can't believe that. He came back for a purpose, or he'd have died on the battlefield. We have faith he'll wake up.'"

It took faith. The young soldier didn't recognize his parents. One leg had been amputated at the knee. He couldn't talk, eat or do anything for himself. But gradually he began to improve. One day, he said a complete sentence. A few days later, the feeding tube was removed from his throat, and he ate some gelatin dessert.

Jacky remembers none of this. He can remember only the pain, the distress at being away from his outfit, the anxiety that he might be court-martialed for being AWOL.

It was November 4, 1967, nearly six months after the Viet Cong land mine had blown him into living death that he was admitted to the Veterans Administration Hospital at Columbia, S.C., his home state. The Baynes rented a house not far from the hospital so they could remain near their son. "We didn't worry about the future," Mrs. Bayne says. "We knew he was going to get well."

But the VA Hospital officials weren't so sure. John L. "Buck" Smith, Administrative Assistant to the Chief of Staff, says, "I wouldn't have bet you two cents on his recovery when he was admitted. He had suffered massive neurological damage, no doubt from a lack of oxygen during those hours he was unconscious. We had absolutely no idea what to expect."

But the miracle continued, inexorably, to unfold. From the moment he was rolled through the front door in his wheel chair, Jacky became the overriding preoccupation of the Columbus VA Hospital staff. His case was discussed at conferences and private consultations. Did Jacky recognize his therapist today? Did he propel himself a few feet in the wheel chair? Each small point of improvement became cause for excited talk and general rejoicing in the canteen and along hospital corridors.

A star athlete almost six feet tall when he attended Indianland High School in Lancaster County, S.C., Jacky weighed only 90 pounds when he was admitted to the VA Hospital. He was spastic and suffered from continuous body tremors.

The Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation team began a course of treatment immediately. As Dr. Harry Zankel, then Chief of PM&R put it, "We are not interested in what a man has lost, but in what he has left. That principle guided us in working with Jacky."

So the immediate goal was to tone up Jacky's skin and muscles. He was given whirlpool baths and heat treatment in a Hubbard tank several times a day. His limbs were manipulated to combat deterioration.

Just as his mother had prophesied all along, Jacky improved steadily. One milestone was reached a few months after he entered the Columbia VA Hospital when he was presented the Bronze Star. The citation described his "superior proficiency and courage which has earned him the respect and admiration of both superiors and peers." Another milestone passed when a South Carolina man, whose son was in Vietnam, gave him a German Shepherd puppy. Jacky promptly named him "Bruno." Some recollections of his past were beginning to return.

Quietly, solemnly, with each day that passed, the young man was building his new life with courage far surpassing any shown on the battlefields of Vietnam. Often confused and frightened, he faced each new day with resolution. He satisfied himself with small victories.

The most important milestone of all passed on November 4, 1970, when Jacky Bayne was discharged from the hospital, precisely three years from the day he was admitted.

If miracles come in acts like plays, this was the end of Act One. The VA granted him $12,500 toward the purchase of a special house adapted to accommodate a wheel chair. He receives $1,143 a month from the VA as compensation. "I don't lack for much of anything," he admits.

What will happen during Act Two? First of all Jacky wants to strengthen his limbs so he can move himself from his wheel chair to a stationary chair or bed. Then he would like to walk.

Small victories, and then? "I wanted to become a high-school coach and teach history on the side," he says. "Maybe I'll go back to college and study history. Of course, I have to learn to write first."

Don't try to tell Jacky Bayne he can't accomplish all that. You might get laughed at because he has heard it before. It's not easy to discourage a young man who is living his own miracle. ♦

Bronze Star winner Jacky Bayne: "I don't lack for much of anything."

A Love Letter For Mother's Day

By Vera Holding

The sweetest thing about a love letter from a daughter is that, even though there are things left unsaid, a mother can read between the lines

Dear Mother,

Today is Mother's Day, and I want to write you a love letter. Somehow what I have in my heart is too tender for speech. I feel that I am about the richest person in the world, having you. I recognized, even as a child, that you were the one woman in life that I must try to live up to.

It has been a hard climb, trying to get up to the place in the world where you are, Mother. I shall never quite make it, but it may comfort you to know that—at least in my eyes—you have reached the summit of all that is noble and fine. There hasn't been a single time in all the years we have been together that I have not felt proud to say, "That's my mother."

I remember over at the little town of Anadarko several years ago, I found a faded old photograph of a group of people standing near a tent. Tacked above it was a sign that read: "First Christian Church." I was proud to point to a slender, dark-eyed lady standing there and say, "That's my mother."

The picture is down at the museum now, among all the other early-day relics of the people who made a raw new country into a homeland. You were one of those.

I love you because you have never at any time lost your sensitivity to beauty, your sense of humor and the song in your heart. I love you for your loyalty to all of us. No matter what we did, it has been all right with you; you have always found some excuse for our failure or neglect or heartache.

In these troubled days, you might think my dearest wish would be for wealth, for peace, for security. But that's not true. Deep down, my dearest wish is to leave to my children the wealth of character that you have tried to bestow on me.

The sweetest thing about a love letter to a mother is that, even though there are things left unsaid, you will read between the lines. You know me better than I know myself. But I just wanted to stop in for a minute and thank you again for being what you are—a living pattern, God-given, for my own motherhood.

Your youngest,
Vera.

Time-Saving Dishes for Busy-Day Cooking

Tomato-Sauced Chicken is served over raisin-and nut-studded rice.

Because of the quickened pace of living these days, wise cooks will take advantage of the many fine convenience foods obtainable to help speed meal preparations.

Recipes for each course in the menu are provided for your use. From soup to dessert, each recipe utilizes at least one, sometimes more, of the modern convenience foods. They were created to lessen the cook's time in food preparation without sacrificing either flavor or nutrition.

Tomato-Sauced Chicken

- 6 lbs. broiler-fryer chicken pieces
- Flour for coating chicken pieces
- Salt
- Seasoned pepper
- $\frac{1}{2}$ cup vegetable oil
- 1 onion, chopped
- 1 green pepper, chopped
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 4 cans (8 oz. each) or 2 cans (15 oz. each) tomato sauce with tomato bits
- 2 teaspoons curry powder
- $\frac{1}{2}$ cup water
- Snipped parsley
- Hot cooked rice for 8 servings
- $\frac{1}{2}$ cup seedless raisins, plumped
- $\frac{1}{2}$ cup toasted slivered almonds

1. Coat chicken pieces with a mixture of flour seasoned to taste with salt and seasoned pepper.

2. Heat some of the oil in a Dutch oven. Add some of the chicken pieces, skin side down, and brown on all sides. Remove from Dutch oven and keep warm. Repeat with more chicken and add more oil as needed.

3. When all of chicken is browned, add onion, green pepper, and garlic to fat in Dutch oven; cook until onion is tender, stirring occasionally. Spoon off excess fat. Stir in a blend of tomato sauce with tomato bits, curry powder, and water. Return chicken to Dutch oven and baste with sauce. Bring to boiling, reduce heat, and simmer, covered, about 45 min., or until chicken is tender; baste occasionally.

4. Arrange chicken on a large heated serving platter and spoon sauce over all. Garnish with parsley. Accompany with a bowl of the hot rice tossed with raisins; sprinkle with nuts.

About 8 servings

Liverwurst Dip

Blend liver spread (about 5-oz. cans) and a small amount of instant minced onion with desired amount of bourbon, brandy, or sherry. Serve potato chips and crisp crackers for dippers.

If you have a passion for a special flavor of soda let yourself go and freeze it into a creamy dessert. Orange, grape, root beer, lime, sarsaparilla, cola... any flavor you like. You'll zap them right out of their minds with this one and it's easy as 1, 2, 3. (See recipe at right.) The magic ingredient that makes it all happen is Borden Eagle Brand Sweetened Condensed Milk. It's a pre-cooked, nutritious blend of milk and sugar, condensed so it works and tastes like a miracle.

RECIPE

1. POUR one can Borden Eagle Brand® Sweetened Condensed Milk (not evaporated milk) and one 28 oz. bottle soda pop (or two 12 oz. cans of soda) into bowl and mix. Pour in ice cube trays or loaf pan.
2. FREEZE in the freezing compartment of refrigerator until a firm slush is formed.
3. BEAT till smooth. Quickly return to freezer. Freeze till firm. Makes a quart. For large families, double the ingredients. (If you have an ice cream freezer, combine the ingredients and just freeze as usual.)

Family Problems: As Parents See Them, As Kids See Them

The gulf between the ages may not always be so severe as we are told

By Jean Adams

One of the most important issues of our times is the question of communication between parents and children.

While the research that I have been conducting (among 19 families who were selected as candidates for the All-American Search Award) is not a statistically sound analysis, it does at least give some indication of how the so-called "generation gap" is affecting today's average family.

Here is the way the parents and kids in my sample line up on the following topics:

—The Family Pocketbook

Three-fourths of the families give their children an allowance. Whether children receive an allowance or not, they are generally expected to do assigned chores around the house.

—Children's Choice of Friends

In our sample, parents exerted relatively mild influence on their children's choice of friends. When a difficult situation or a poor association with a friend does develop, parents attempt to work out these problems in a variety of ways, the best involving open discussions.

—Going Steady

Parents and children tend to agree that going steady is permissible. Parents, however, insist that age be a consideration.

—Today's Clothes and Hair Styles

As a group, my sampling of "typical" parents neither strongly agreed nor disagreed with today's youth trends. However, of all the factors looked at in our survey, the question of these trends gave rise to the sharpest disagreement with-in certain families.

Parents tended to go along with the new, long-hair styles for boys, provided that the hair was kept clean and neat. The children, of course, were more tolerant toward long hair.

—Marijuana

We talked about the question of marijuana. Parents are on the fence about its legal use. They tend neither to disagree strongly nor strongly agree about its legalization. Surprisingly, our sampling of children indicated they were much more intensely against the use of marijuana than their parents.

—Premarital Sex

Parental answers about premarital sex and its permissibility were typically that this should be left to the discretion of the individuals involved. But those parents who were opposed were very sharply opposed. Children's responses to this question tended to follow pretty much the same course as their parents.

—Conclusion

Although many modern observers agree that it's very "in" for parents to be "out", our All-American Families interviewed show a two-way respect that is admirable—and conducive to two-way communication. There may be a hint in this research that the average teen-ager feels "misunderstood" on some points, but the feeling is not as intense or widespread as some would have us believe. ♦

The Little Things

You start on a walk only to enjoy nature;
Your problems vanish
from your mind;
You see the small animals,
And you feel warm and kind.

These are the small things,
The small, simple things
That, if you take the time,
Can touch your heart,
And make you feel glad to be alive
To write a rhyme.

Constipated Today?

You wouldn't be if—

...you realized that as you get older your system naturally slows down and the laxative you have been taking may no longer be best for you. So, if you've been taking magnesia, salts, oils or harsh chemical laxatives once a week or more and you're still not satisfied—here's a better way to end constipation worries. Take medically proven Serutan. It's different!

Unlike other laxatives that may cause irritation or griping, Serutan, taken daily, forms a soft gel which moistens food wastes and shapes them into a well-formed stool. Serutan produces the proper amount of bulk needed to help bring peristaltic stimulation to your sluggish colon. This is utterly different from forcing your system with harsh chemical laxatives which may dry you out. You can take gentle Serutan every day because it is a pure, non-irritating vegetable hydrogel and contains no harsh roughage, no chemical laxatives. Take Serutan every day to get regular—and keep regular.

Delicious Fruit Flavor

Serutan now comes in a delicious fruit flavor. Get Serutan regular powder, fruit flavor or toasted granules today. When you read Serutan backwards, it spells "natures." And nature's way is best. Get Serutan today.

Miss U.S.A., 1970: "I Grew Up In One Year"

Despite her indelible beauty, Debbie may be best remembered for her bluntness

By Ted Otis, of the Family Weekly Staff

Appearing much younger than her years, Mrs. John P. Shelton's face beamed with pride as she watched her daughter Debbie, Miss U.S.A. of 1970, on a recent showing of "Laugh-In."

It was reminiscent of the first time Mrs. Shelton had viewed Debbie on TV, almost a year before. She had been watching the same TV set on May 17th, 1970, as the moment of truth was about to descend upon the 51 long-limbed lovelies assembled at the Miami Beach Auditorium for the Annual Miss U.S.A. Pageant. Now Master of Ceremonies Chuck Zink announced the new queen.

The cameras zoomed in on Debbie. Her face burst with radiance as she realized the name Zink had pronounced was her own. Escorted gracefully to the platform, the jade-eyed beauty from Norfolk, Va., accepted her crown as the 19th Miss U.S.A. It was now obvious that, whatever Debbie's life is going to be, her former ambitions of dentistry and anesthesiology would play little or no role in it.

Vivacious Debbie is a far cry from the run-of-the-mill beauty queen. She has brains. A student at Old Dominion University in Norfolk, she ranks academically in the upper one-half of the first percentile of the student body, her major interest being art and languages. More important, however, she has the kind of pragmatic intelligence that allows her to be disarmingly honest and direct. On Women's Lib: "Girls who are out burning bras don't have anything better to do; it's like men burning their underwear." On the possibility of a movie career: "I'm looking for someone to write a role for me. That's the only way to succeed, not with a little pop-in role in a Dean Martin picture." On former Miss U.S.A. Wendy Dascomb (who complained that the pageant "used" her to sell merchandise): "Of course you have to sell merchandise. That's what the pageant is all about. I notice Wendy didn't gripe when she received the $5,000 mink coat, $5,000 cash, $5,000 salary and all expenses paid."

The personal sacrifices one must make in the beauty-pageant business would appear to be staggering, but Debbie seems to take them in stride. When her disgruntled boy friend told her it was either him or the pageant, she quickly settled on the pageant. There was little time for remorse. A new boy friend turned up at the pageant a few nights later.

She feels that education is important, but that it should be tempered by practicality. She wishes to return to Old Dominion U. but must consider the position in which the title has placed her. "If I take a year out of the public eye to return to school," she observes, "I won't be a valuable property any more." Valuable property she is, as evidenced by her recent appearance on the "Merv Griffin Show" and "Laugh-In." As one of the Miss U.S.A. judges said, "There isn't a movie actress I can think of who measures up to Debbie's perfection of face and figure. She is quite extraordinary."

Despite her indelible beauty, however, it may be that Debbie will be best remembered for her bluntness and total avoidance of cant:

On alcohol: "I think drunks are worse than old ladies who whisper behind your back about your skirt being too short. I drink liquor—but only because I'm expected to."

Regarding her measurements (39-24-36): "My bust isn't really that big. I have broad shoulders from swimming."

About being Miss U.S.A.: "Of course it's difficult. You see all those fellows gawking at you, and you know what's going on in their heads. But I like to make people happy. I guess that's the hippie in me."

On Vietnam: "In politics, I'm dumb."

On the over-all effect of the title: "The regimentation and discipline are good for me and have helped me. I entered the pageant as a girl. But when I finish this month, I feel I will really be a woman." ♦

The Sorrows And Success Of Dick Sargent

"You're going to military school," his grandfather told him.

"That'll make a man of you."

Instead, it almost ruined his life

Dick Sargent and Elizabeth Montgomery of "Bewitched"

For the past two years Dick Sargent has appeared on ABC's television show, "Bewitched," in the role of Darrin Stephens, the long-suffering but ever-lovin' husband of the bewitching witch Samantha (played by Elizabeth Montgomery), and father of their little witch and warlock.

In real life, however, 38-year-old Dick Sargent wants no part of married life or fatherhood. "I used to think I wanted children and that I'd missed out on a lot because I didn't have any. But I've finally come to realize I wouldn't make a good father." Dick sighed as he made the admission. "I know that sounds terrible. But it's true. I don't have the patience any more."

Sargent tried marriage for a short time, but as he told me during lunch in the executive dining room of the studio where the series is filmed, "I was too young. Only 19."

Dick hates any form of regimentation, an attitude that dates back to his early days at a military academy. When he was 12, his father died and left a void in his life that Dick admits has never been filled. His young mother remarried six months later, and Dick's grandfather took over.

"You're going to military school," his grandfather told him in no uncertain terms. "That'll make a man of you!"

Instead, it nearly killed him.

"It was a hideous experience," Dick recalled. He pleaded to come home, but his grandfather wouldn't hear of it. "So I finally let myself get tuberculosis and was sent home." His mother cared for him through his illness, but his grandfather saw to it that he went right back to military school as soon as he was well.

The fact that Dick became an actor is practically a miracle. In his military academy days, he was so shy and insecure that he couldn't open his mouth. At Stanford University, he says, he finally met people who liked him for himself. So he opened up and became a speech and drama major. But he quit school and went into movies, making about half-a-dozen films.

When ABC put "Bewitched" together, Dick York played Samantha's husband. Five years later, Sargent took over.

"I've never worked so steady in my life," Dick said.

The wardrobe man interrupted: "Here are the shirts you wear this afternoon. This one has a 15½ collar to fit your pig's head."

Dick grinned. "I turn into a pig today. That's the best part of this show. There's nothing static. I like that. You never know what to expect next." ♦

When Ingrid Bergman opened recently in a Shaw play, two of her children were in the audience. Afterwards, she celebrated with her 18-year-old twin daughters, Ingrid (print dress) and Isabella, whose father is director Roberto Rossellini. The 54-year-old actress commented that if she were today the age of her girls, she'd never be an actress. "I am against violence and this obsession with sex that has crept into films. I would never take my clothes off. It's so embarrassing with the film crew all around you, watching. We made films for 50 years, and no one ever minded that we were not showing our naked bodies." She added that there were some present-day films being made which she would not care to see. "I am easily shocked."

"Project Lifespan" had a recent conference which met at the Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions at Santa Barbara, Calif. On hand was Dr. Donald G. Carpenter, U.S. Air Force Academy, who suggested that research may soon lead to an average life span of 96 years. Unfortunately, because of the increase in elderly people, he also foresees a growing turbulence between the generations. One possible peaceful solution to this problem was suggested by another scientist, Dr. Robert W. Prehoda of the Bedford Foundation: a population of supercentenarians. "Anti-aging developments will enable older leaders to retain the mental flexibility of youth," he says, "and undertake projects undreamed of today." Along with this, the scientist foresees the "one-child family," reducing the present overpopulated world of 3½ billion to a more livable 2 billion, by the 21st century.

A museum explanation of his revolutionary art is: "... All traditional beliefs destroyed and new inspiration sought in the unexplored depths of man's mind and spirit... the realm of the subconscious, of dreams, of instincts normally repressed."

The new sailboat owner staggered to the marina under a load of paraphernalia for his first cruise.

Veteran skippers watched him put aboard food and drink, life jackets, charts and a lot of miscellany. The one item which stood out was a very large pair of scissors.

The scissors looked like the kind used for gardening and clipping hedges. This so puzzled one old salt that he couldn't keep silent.

"Do you mind telling me, young fellow," he said, "what you'll be doing with those shears?"

"Well," replied the freshman mariner, "I was told that one of the first things I must learn is 'how to trim the sails.'"

A big-game hunter was approaching camp one evening when an enormous tiger appeared out of the jungle not 20 feet away.

As the tiger was about to spring, the hunter fired his last cartridge—and missed.

But the tiger sprang too far and landed 15 feet beyond the hunter, who then ran for camp and arrived safely.

The next day the hunter walked behind the camp to practice a little shooting at close range. He heard a strange noise in the bush and went to investigate it.

It was the tiger, practicing short leaps.

TERRY

AND THE PIRATES

by GEORGE WUNDER

DOLORES DECIDES TO ACCEPT HOOD'S OFFER—AND ITS CONSEQUENCES.

REALLY, JILL! IF I'M A FOOL, THEN I'M AN OPEN-EYED ONE.

ARE YOU, MRS. DEEPSIX? THE WAY I'VE TRIED TO TAKE TERRY AWAY FROM YOU SHOULD GIVE YOU AN IDEA OF HOW WE HOODS PLAY GAMES.

USING YOUR POLITICAL CAREER AND HOW IT WOULD CONFLICT WITH YOUR PRIVATE LIFE AS A PLOY TO DISILLUSION TERRY ABOUT YOU WAS ONE OF MY NASTIER TRICKS.

BUT IT'S A FAIR EXAMPLE OF HOW WE GO AFTER WHAT WE WANT, ISN'T IT, FATHER?

BLAST YOU, JILL! I'VE HAD ENOUGH SNIDE INNUENDOS. MRS. DEEPSIX IS QUITE AWARE OF HOW AN ASSOCIATION WITH ME WILL BE MIS-UNDERSTOOD.

I'M NOT A POLITICAL CHILD, GIRL. I KNOW THERE WILL BE RUMORS ABOUT WHY I PUSHED FOR MINING LAW CHANGES TO ACCOMMODATE YOUR FATHER'S NEW PROCESS.

BUT HIS TECHNIQUE AND MONEY WILL MEAN A GREAT DEAL TO THE MINERS IN MY DISTRICT, REGARDLESS OF WHAT PEOPLE THINK OF HIM—OR ME.

SINCE WE HAVEN'T COME UP WITH ANY MIRACLE SUDS TO LAUNDER MR. HOOD'S REPUTATION, I'LL HAVE TO SETTLE FOR BEING REGARDED AS SLIGHTLY SOILED MYSELF.

THERE'S NO SUCH THING AS BEING "SLIGHTLY" SOILED OR "SLIGHTLY" DESTROYED!

"DESTROYED"? JILL, THIS IS SHEER SPITE. I'VE EVEN PROMISED MRS. DEEPSIX THAT IF THE HEAT GETS TOO BAD, I'LL OPEN MY BOOKS TO PROVE THERE CAN'T BE BRIBERY, CORRUPTION...

DADDY! YOU'RE TURNING OVER A NEW LEAF! SWELL! HOW ABOUT SHOWING HER THE PRIVATE REPORTS FROM YOUR PEOPLE?

WHAT PRIVATE REPORTS, JILL?

OH, THE ONES HE KEEPS IN HIS WALL SAFE, TO WHICH I HAPPEN TO KNOW THE COMBINATION. YOU'LL FIND THEM FASCINATING READING, DOLORES.

JILL! ARE YOU MAD? I'VE WARNED YOU TO NEVER SNOOP THROUGH MY PAPERS.

WHY NOT, DADDY? SINCE YOU'VE GIVEN UP YOUR SILLY MYSTERY MAN POSE, DON'T YOU WANT EVERY ONE TO KNOW THAT THE ORE REFINERY YOU'LL BUILD WILL PRODUCE MORE POLLUTION THAN REFINED ORE?

MRS. DEEPSIX! PURE FANTASY!

THOSE REPORTS DO READ LIKE SCIENCE FICTION. AN ORE-PROCESSING PLANT DEVELOPED AND BUILT IN EAST GERMANY AND SHIPPED PIECEMEAL TO THE STATES.

THE FOLKS IN REPRESENTATIVE DEEPSIX'S DISTRICT WON'T KNOW MUCH ABOUT IT—UNTIL CHEMICALS AFFECT THE AIR, THE STREAMS, LIVING THINGS, EVEN PEOPLE.

THEN DADDY'S LAWYERS STEP IN. LEGAL DELAYING ACTIONS TO TAKE YEARS. BY THE TIME IT'S SHUT DOWN, DADDY'S MADE HIS BUNDLE AND IS OFF TO EVEN MORE GLORIOUS ADVENTURES.

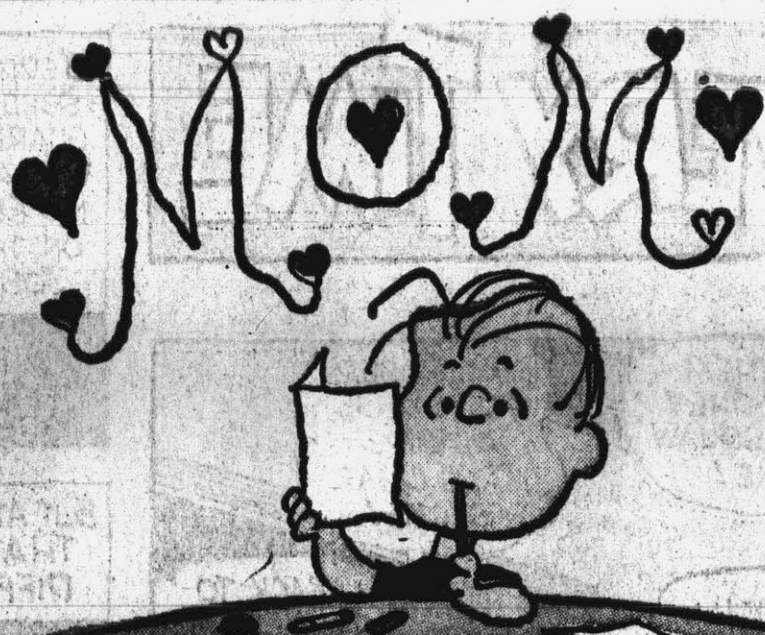

JILL, WHY HAVE YOU TOLD US THIS?

TERRY SAID HOW HONEST YOU WERE ABOUT YOU AND HIM, APPARENTLY ADMIRING YOU FOR IT. I GUESS I WANT HIS RESPECT, TOO...

Prince Valiant
IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR
BY HAL FOSTER

Our Story: THE THREE COMPANIONS SPEED ON THEIR WAY, EACH SEEKING HIS OWN GOAL; ZIRARA THE DESERT CITY HE CALLS HOME, ARN TO REUNITE HIS PARENTS, AND PRINCE VALIANT TO ONCE MORE WIN BACK THE ONE HE WILL ALWAYS LOVE, ALETA. THEY FOLLOW THE COAST WHERE LONG SANDY BEACHES PERMIT THEM A FAST GALLOP. FIVE HUNDRED MILES HAVE THEY COME, A THOUSAND MORE LIE AHEAD.

A RIVER BARS THEIR WAY AND THEY RIDE INLAND TO FIND A CROSSING. ZIRARA SPEAKS: "WE MUST BE EVER ON GUARD FOR WE ARE APPROACHING THE PATH OF THE MIGRATING GOTHS."

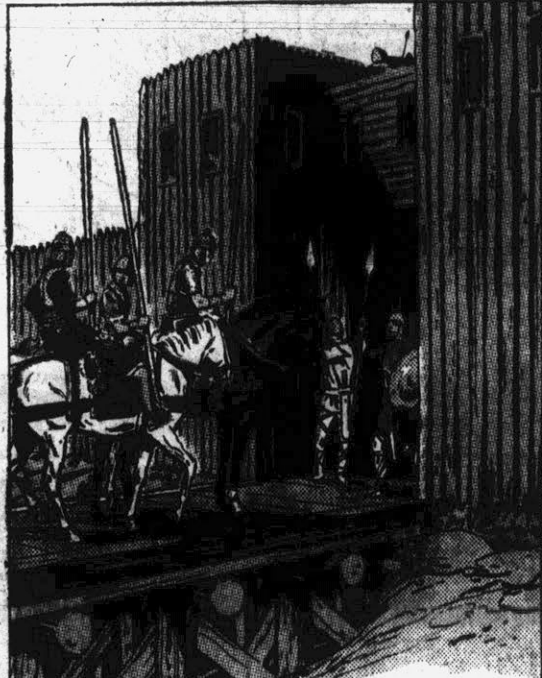

THEIR FIRST ENCOUNTER COMES SUDDENLY. MOUNTED ON SWIFT HORSES THEY MIGHT HAVE AVOIDED CONFLICT, BUT EACH IS DRIVEN BY A SINGLE PURPOSE AND THEY HACK THEIR WAY THROUGH. THE GOTHS FEAR OF MOUNTED WARRIORS HELPS AS MUCH AS THE SLASHING SWORDS.

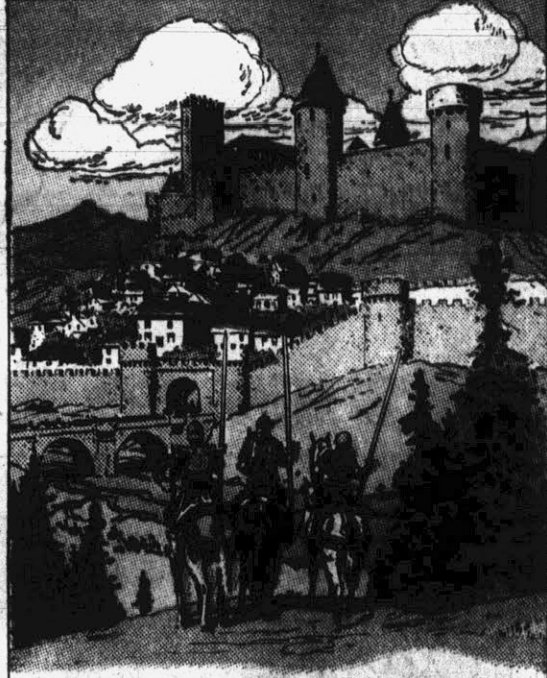

BUT NOT WITHOUT COST. A BATTLE-AXE HAS CUT THROUGH ARN'S SHIELD AND WOUNDED HIM ON THE LEG. ARYAK HAS A KNIFE WOUND ON THE SHOULDER. "FROM NOW ON WE WILL HAVE TO CARRY SPEARS," ADVISES VAL. "THEY WILL KEEP OUR ENEMIES AT A DISTANCE."

THE LANCE IS EASILY CARRIED AT A STately WALK, BUT TO THOSE IN A HURRY IT SPOILS THE RHYTHM OF TROT AND GALLOP AND IS A NUISANCE IN THE FOREST. HOWEVER, THEY ARE NOW A NECESSITY.

AS THEY RIDE SOUTHWARD AN OMINOUS CHANGE IS SEEN. SMALL VILLAGES ARE PROTECTED BY DITCHES AND PALISADES AND ALL MEN GO ARMED....

...AND CITIES ARE ENCLOSED BY CURTAIN WALLS AND DOMINATED BY STRONG CASTLES. VIOLENCE IS ABROAD IN THIS LAND AND THEY HAVE NOT AS YET REACHED THE MOST DANGEROUS PART.

NEXT WEEK—The Pyrenee

THE DECADENT DEMOCRACIES ARE ELATED WITH THE DEFECTION OF OUR LEADING BALLET DANCER, TAMARA!

DO SVIDANIYA!

"TILL WE MEET AGAIN"

WITH THE TACIT APPROVAL OF THE U.S. STATE DEPT., BALLERINA TAMARA HAS DEFECTED AND FINDS REFUGE WITH OLIVER WARBUCKS...

TAMARA'S WHOMPIN' UP A SPECIAL DESSERT JUST FOR "DADDY"! SHE SAYS SHE WANTS T' SHOW HER 'PRECATION FOR ALL HE'S DONE!

UNOBSERVED, TAMARA HAS ADDED A SECRET INGREDIENT TO THE BATTER SHE IS PREPARING FOR HER BENEFACTOR...

SOMETHING WRONG WITH THE CAR, ASP?

THAT'S RIGHT! WHY?

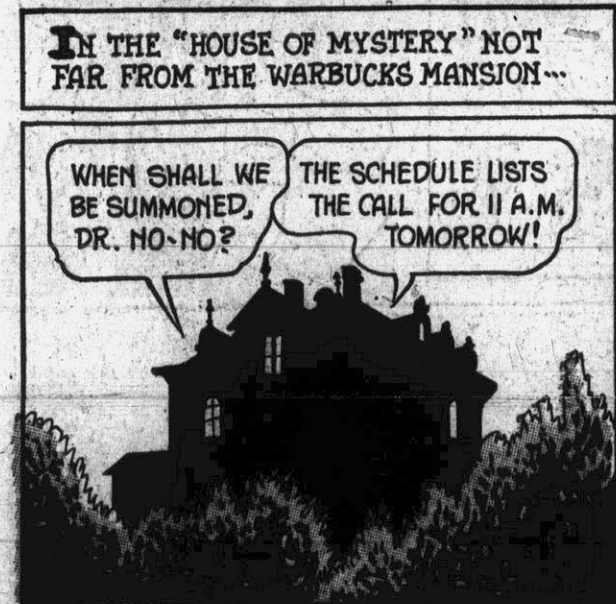

THEN YOU MUST HAVE ASSISTED HER BY UNLOCKING THE TRUNK, WHICH IS NORMALLY LOCKED?

NOT ME! I NEVER SAW HER IN MY LIFE UNTIL I OPENED THE TRUNK HALFWAY HOME THAT NIGHT!

CURIOUS... VERY CURIOUS! IF THE LADY WERE A MAGICIAN INSTEAD OF A BALLET DANCER, I MIGHT BETTER UNDERSTAND THE REMARKABLE FEAT SHE PERFORMED!

IN THE "HOUSE OF MYSTERY" NOT FAR FROM THE WARBUCKS MANSION...

WHEN SHALL WE BE SUMMONED, DR. NO-NO?

THE SCHEDULE LISTS THE CALL FOR 11 A.M. TOMORROW!

I CAN'T HARDLY WAIT T' SEE THE EXPRESSION ON "DADDY'S" FACE WHEN HE SINKS HIS TEETH INTO THAT "SPECIAL DESSERT" YOU FIXED UP FOR HIM!

NEITHER CAN I, ANNIE!

YOU STARE AT THAT LIMOUSINE AS THOUGH YOU ANTICIPATED IT SUDDENLY BECOMING BLESSED WITH THE POWER OF SPEECH, ASP!

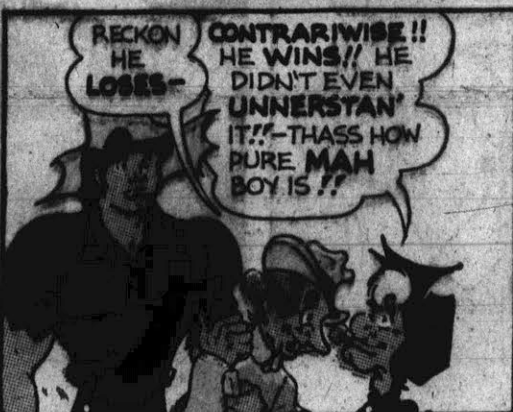

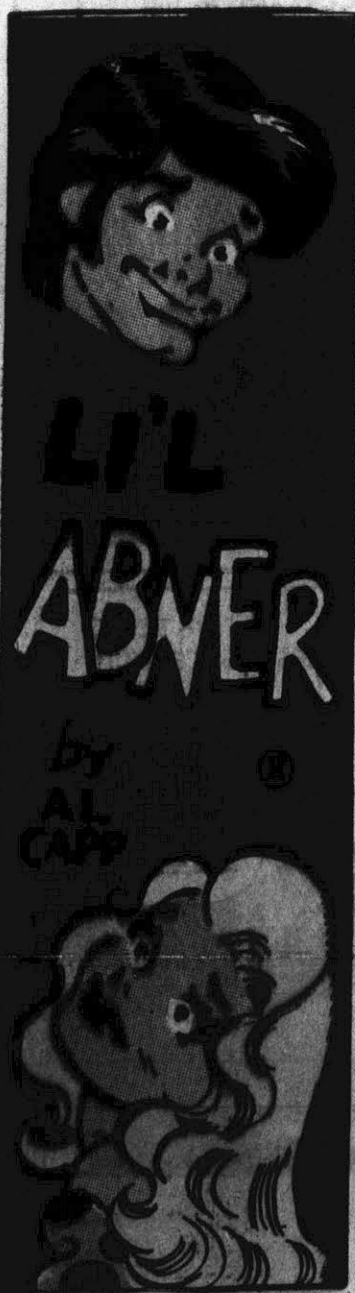

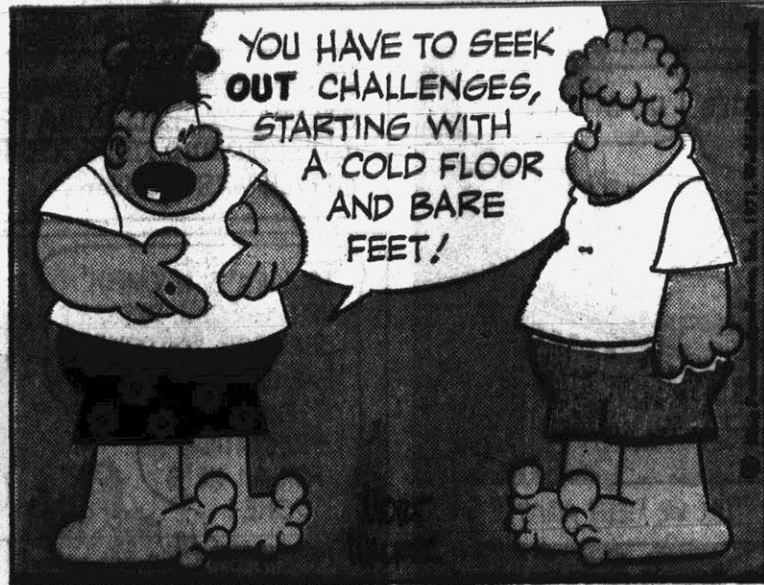

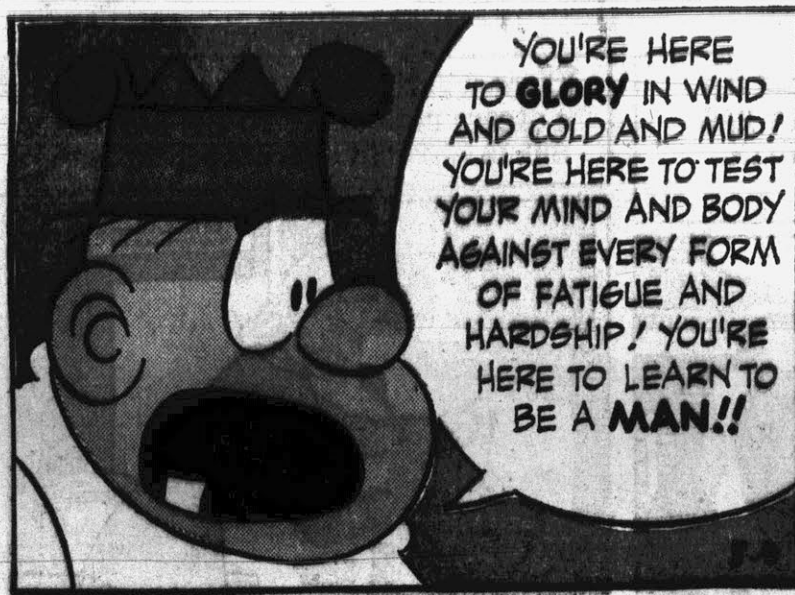

IT IS TRYING TO COMMUNICATE WITH ME, PUNJAB... BUT AS YET I AM UNABLE TO TRANSLATE ITS MESSAGE!
