By BILL NEIKIRK Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House said today President Nixon will not seek tax reductions to give the economy further stimulation, nor will he attempt to speed federal spending.

enough as yet to cut into a 6.2 per cent unemployment rate, Connally said the President has decided there is enough stimulation to do the job eventually. The secretary told newsmen that an unemployment rate of four per cent, considered by economists to be a full employment, "is a myth. It's never happened, except in war time."

House Voting Again Today Teacher Funds Undecided

By NOEL YANCEY Associated Press Writer RALEIGH (AP) — The House will decide again today on an amendment which would boost teacher income by extending their term of employment from 9 to 9 1/2 months the second year of the next biennium if state revenues permit.

However, administration opponents of the amendment moved swiftly to get a reconsideration of the Miller amendment. A motion by Rep. James Long, D-Alamance, who voted for the amendment, to reconsider the vote was carried by a 58-55 margin.

In support of his amendment, Miller told the House that the General Assembly had voted teachers contingent pay boosts in the past and that increasing revenues had enabled them to be paid.

The new Wahl-Coates Elementary School under construction on East Fifth Street is proceeding without problems now, following a two month delay in the early construction days. C.G. Moore, vice-president for Business Affairs at East Carolina University, said the school "will definitely not be ready for use at the beginning of the school year."

Rep. Perry Martin, D-Northampton, spoke in favor of the motion to reconsider. He said the Miller amendment was "not sound and reasonable" and "There are many other needs in the state" as great as increased pay for teachers.

Retail sales figures for the month of March, recently published by the North Carolina Department of Revenue Statistics, show a sharp upswing in most eastern North Carolina cities in the value of gross retail sales compared to the month of March in the previous year, 1970. Greenville's figures showed it ranking third out of eight sample cities in the percentage increase over the previous year, and ranking fourth in the total value of gross retail sales.

Local Committee Decisions Over Medicaid Needs Will Be Honored

By CAROL TYER Reflector Staff Writer The plight of several Greenville Nursing and Convalescent Home residents was resolved yesterday when county commissioners, Social Services personnel, Blue Cross-Blue Shield representatives, nursing and rest home personnel met.

Services said she brought from Raleigh, "good tidings of great joy." As of July 1 — Thursday — prior approval by the Department of Social Services will not have to be given for Medicaid payments to be made.

home clients from Pitt County had to be sent out of county. At present, there is only one rest home in the County, Jones Eastside Rest Home in Winterville, and its capacity of 30 is constantly filled.

The big objection of Allen and the County Commissioners at yesterday's meeting was that a doctor hired on a consulting basis by Blue Cross-Blue Shield, which is the administrator of Medicaid in this state, decides on the eligibility of patients here whom he has never seen. They also protested that the doctor does not sign his disapproval statement, giving local persons no one to go to for justification of such decisions.

Senate Okays Capital Improvements Bond Issue

RALEIGH (AP) — The Senate passed and sent to the House Monday night a bill calling for the issuance of $46 million in bonds for capital improvements at state institutions.

city each year to continue their education. Henley said the project would include 150 rooms with two beds each to house these persons, plus eating facilities that would be financed through self-liquidating provisions.

Earlier, the House had passed and enacted a measure carrying approximately $55 million for capital improvements. Before passing the capital improvements measure, the House defeated an amendment by Rep. Claude DeBruhl, D-Buncombe, to add a $1.6 million appropriation for a social sciences building at the University of North Carolina at Asheville.

If the Pinehaven Center is converted, a vital need will be met. Many patients at the Greenville Nursing Home deemed not needful of skilled nursing care may be sent there, whereas, in the past, most rest

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

(© 1971 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: My husband [I'll call him "Joe"] spent six weeks in the hospital with a coronary and emphysema, but thank God he is going to be all right. His doctor told him he had to lose 45 pounds and give up cigars. Joe lost 25 pounds in the hospital and he didn't have one cigar, which isn't easy for a three-pack-a-day man.

When I was at the hospital to take Joe home, his doctor walked into his room smoking a cigar! Joe kiddingly asked the doctor for a cigar, and would you believe, the doctor gave him one! [I could have strangled that doctor!]

Joe has been home for three weeks and he's smoking again. I just know if that doctor hadn't given him a cigar Joe would have quit for good.

When I told the doctor what I thought of him he said, "I didn't think one would hurt him. Besides, I knew how much he wanted one because I can't quit either."

What do you think of that, Abby? If I hadn't witnessed this I never would have believed it. DISGUSTED

DEAR DISGUSTED: So what else is new? That doctor used inexcusably poor judgment, but if all the doctors who are hooked on nicotine were laid end to end, they would reach the Sloane Kettering Institute—which isn't a bad idea.

DEAR ABBY: I have no problems [ha!], but I read about the lady who wanted to give her two poodle pups a birthday party but was afraid people would think she was "nuts."

I think she should. I have a Spanish radio program in Rosenberg, Tex., and when my poodle, Louie Bon Bon III, was a year old, we had a contest limited to children up to 12 years of age. The one who drew the most original birthday card for the dog would win a transistor radio. There were other prizes, too.

The winners came with their parents and we had birthday cake, and hot chocolate. We all sang "Happy Birthday" to Louie Bon Bon on the air. It was wonderful! MARUCA TIJERINA

DEAR MARUCA: Usted esta "arf" nuts, tambien.

DEAR ABBY: I take care of children, and in one of the places where I work I saw something I never saw before. There are pictures of nude women in the bedroom of a 7-year-old boy. I was shocked! I think 7 years old is too young for looking at naked ladies, if you ask me.

Otherwise, they seem to be nice people. I can't understand this. Should I tell the mother how I feel about those indecent pictures, or isn't it any of my business? I am 10 kid, Abby. I'll soon be 40. Please don't disclose my name or town. SHOCKED

DEAR SHOCKED: Obviously that mother doesn't look upon nudity as "indecent," which is her right. Tell her how you feel about those pictures if you wish. [She may appreciate knowing.] But in answer to your question, it's none of your business.

DEAR ABBY: This is for the girl who is engaged to a man who finds it impossible to say, "I love you," or pay his fiancée a compliment. Then he tries to excuse it by saying he just isn't the "demonstrative" type:

Run fast, dear, in the opposite direction. A man who is stingy with his compliments is stingy with his money, himself, and everything else. I married one of those "undemonstrative" types, and one day he got angry with me and he calmly knocked me halfway across the room—with practically no demonstration whatsoever. EXPERIENCED

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90060. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Marie Hill Moved To Cottage Room

RALEIGH (AP) — Marie Hill, whose death sentence at the age of 17 three years ago stirred national action by civil rights groups, is being moved from her solitary cell to an individual room in a cottage now that the U.S. Supreme Court has given her the right to live.

The court Monday overturned 39 death sentences, including six in North Carolina.

The court also agreed for the first time to consider whether capital punishment is cruel and unusual and therefore unconstitutional. This ruling will apply to eight other prisoners who had been condemned to death in North Carolina besides the six whose convictions were overturned.

North Carolina has not had an execution since 1961, when Theodore Boylvin went to the gas chamber for a Duplin County rape.

Miss Hill, a grade school dropout, was sentenced to die December of 1968 for the slaying of W. E. Strum during a robbery in his grocery in her hometown of Rocky Mount. She is a Negro and he was white.

Officials at the North Carolina Correctional Center for Women said that during her confinement she has grown from a violent teen-ager to a mature young woman. They said that as a first offender she now would be housed in a cottage and have the freedom of the grounds.

Julius Chambers, Charlotte attorney whose firm appealed the conviction, said it was not certain whether life imprisonment would automatically replace the death penalty, or a state court proceeding would be held to set a new sentence.

Other North Carolinians whose death sentences were overturned:

Albert Bobby Childs, Negro who was 34 years old when he went to trial at Asheville in 1965 on a charge of attacking a 70-year-old white widow at her home. Childs, the father of four children, was convicted of burglary and rape.

Dee D. Atkinson, convicted of murder in the death of Katherine Carr in Wayne County.

Robert Lewisboro, a Negro who was 17 when he was convicted in June 1960 of murdering Mary Helen Williams of Shelby.

Willie B. Williams, a Negro who was 25 when he was convicted of murdering Mary Diane Johnston Smith, 19, a white bride of nine days, in near her house trailer in rural Bladen County.

Perry Sanders, convicted of murdering police officers Ralph East and Blenn Branscome on a highway bypass around Pilot Mountain.

Air Fare War Starting Today

MONTREAL (AP) — Negotiators of the world's international airlines gathered today for their toughest bargaining session in years, with Pan Am and TWA among lines reported threatening to quit the International Air Transport Association unless their proposals for cut-rate transatlantic fares are approved.

The two American carriers, plus Air Canada, and the British Overseas Airways Corp. propose to reduce the round-trip economy air fare to Europe by about one-third provided reservation are made and paid for four months in advance. They say they are determined to introduce the new rates whether IATA gives the go-ahead or not.

H. Don Reynolds, chairman of the IATA conference on North Atlantic air fares, said Monday the month-long round of negotiations would be "one of the most difficult IATA has faced in recent years."

Reynolds said some 200 air fare proposals are before the session, which is attended by representatives of 65 airlines involved in the North Atlantic traffic. Cut-rate youth fares, already introduced by a number of lines, are among the proposals.

IATA is a rate-fixing association that was formed to prevent cut-throat competition that would force some lines out of business. Unity is required for any changes in the fare schedules.

The major transatlantic carriers have been hit hard by competition from cut-rate charter lines which have reduced their average load to about 55 per cent of capacity. They are being squeezed even harder because this loss of revenue is occurring just when they are having to pay for the big 747 jets ordered in the days when traffic was booming.

In moving Monday for a preliminary injunction, the government changed tactics. Previously, it had filed criminal charges against other mail order firms, but authorities decided this time those firms could pay $1,000 fines and continue violating the law.

The suits contended the defendants have shipped cigarettes in interstate commerce without filing the required customer lists, depriving various states of tax revenue.

By naming individuals as well as companies, contempt proceedings could be initiated if the law is violated after a ruling forbids it.

Named in the suit in the U.S. District Court here were the B and N Co. and R. E. McCullen, B. H. Tucker and Associates and B. H. Tucker, and E. A. Goodyear, Inc., and B. F. and William Goodyear, all of Raleigh.

Diplomat Is Found Dead In Sahara

RABAT, Morocco (AP) — American diplomat H. Earl Russell Jr., 48, lost his way in the Sahara Desert and died of sunstroke after his car broke down, the U.S. Embassy announced today.

Russell's wife, Beatrice, their 14-year-old son, Scott, and a friend, Thomas Whitecomb, were discovered by a search plane Saturday.

Russell set out from Rabat with his family and Whitecomb early this month to drive across 2,500 miles of desert to Dakar, where he was to become deputy chief of mission at the American Embassy. He had been head of the political section at the embassy in Rabat for four years.

An embassy spokesman said Russell lost his way more than a week ago in the desolate mountain region southwest of Ain Ben Tili, in northern Mauritania. His station wagon broke an axle, and Russell died trying to repair it in the 105-degree heat.

The three survivors were found in an advanced stage of exhaustion and dehydration. They were taken to Port Etienne, on the coast, for treatment. Their lives were not in danger, the spokesman said, but they were "lucky to have been found in time."

Caesarian Birth For Lion Cub

LAGUNA BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Sheba, a 2½-year-old lioness, gave birth by caesarian section and the cub survived after mouth-to-mouth resuscitation, officials at Lion Country Safari said.

William York, director of this 500-acre wild animal preserve in Orange County, said after Monday's birth he believed this was the first where both mother and cub survived.

BOSTON (AP) — The Christian Science Monitor published today what it said were excerpts from previously unpublished Pentagon papers tagging American intelligence in Vietnam with a "principal responsibility for the unfounded optimism of U.S. policy."

The newspaper also reported that "for a crucial 21 months spanning the Kennedy and Johnson administrations the United States laid plans to pull almost all American troops out of South Vietnam over a five-year period—while being sucked inexorably deeper and deeper into the war instead."

The phased-withdrawal program was dropped in March, 1964—"overtaken by the rush of events, including (South Vietnamese) president (Ngo Dinh) Diem's assassination, Lyndon B. Johnson's accession to the American presidency, and a steadily worsening military situation in Vietnam itself—as well as weaknesses in U.S. planning," in the words of the Pentagon study tracing U.S. involvement in Vietnam.

They said the phased-withdrawal plan originally was to reduce American military personnel engaged in advising, training and support efforts from a high point of 12,000 men in fiscal 1964 to a mere 1,500 in fiscal 1968. After several revisions, the plan called for a scaling down from 15,215 in fiscal 1965, to 2,610 in fiscal 1969.

The Monitor quoted from a summary and analysis in the papers of developments from 1962 to 1964, in which Defense Department analysts found the phased-withdrawal program "proceeded from some basic unrealities."

"First, only the most Mi-cawberesque predictions," the summary said, "could have led decision-makers in Washington to believe that the fight against the guerrillas would have turned the corner by fiscal 1965. Other nations' experience in internal warfare pointed plainly in the other direction."

The analysts were quoted as suggesting the political situation in South Vietnam itself "should have prompted more realistic contingency plans against failure of the Vietnamese, in order to give the U.S. some options ..."

"The intelligence and reporting systems for Vietnam during this period must bear a principal responsibility for the unfounded optimism of U.S. policy," the summary was quoted as saying. "Except for some very tenuous caveats, the picture was repeatedly painted in terms of progress and success."

The Monitor reported the documents said some senior U.S. officials were misled by American intelligence reporting from the field, which "relying heavily on Vietnamese information—was poor and overly optimistic."

The Vietnam situation was not accurately assessed, the paper quoted the analysts as saying, until Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara visited Vietnam and reported in December, 1963, to President Johnson.

The Monitor thus joined 17 other newspapers across the country, beginning with the New York Times, in printing excerpts from the top secret study commissioned by McNamara to investigate the origins of American involvement in the Vietnam war.

In an editorial, The Monitor said it was "satisfied that the publication of this material at this time is a constructive act which will help the American people and their government to a better knowledge of what went wrong and hence on to changes in the policymaking process in Washington, which clearly needs improving."

The newspaper's account was signed by David K. Willis, American news editor, and Geoffrey Godsell, overseas news editor.

On the overly optimistic reports, the paper quoted the Defense Department analysts as saying:

"In the July, 1962 Honolulu conference the tone was set. Secretary McNamara asked COMUSMACV (commander, U.S. Military Assistance Command, Vietnam) how long it would take before the VC (Viet Cong) could be expected to be eliminated as a significant force. In reply COMUSMACV estimated about one year from the time RVNAF (Republic of Vietnam Armed Forces) and other forces became operational and began to press the VC in all areas. Mr. McNamara was told and believed that there had been 'tre-

'Nothing New' To North Viets

HONG KONG (AP) — North Vietnam's official radio said today the "most important fact" about American newspaper publication of the accounts from secret Pentagon study of the Vietnam war was "the publication itself, which conclusively proves the deep chasm existing between the U.S. people and the U.S. government."

Radio Hanoi said the study "reveals no secrets" to the North Vietnamese government.

The Bible was centered with a gold cross surrounded by magnolia leaves. On either side of the pulpit were standing baskets of white gladioli and mums flanked by emerald green palms, huckleberry and plamosa greenery and two seven branched candelabras and two spiral candelabras holding lighted white tapers. Family pews were marked with white gladioli, bridal ribbons and greenery.

The couple knelt on a white wrought iron prie-dieu decorated with white gladioli, baby's breath, bridal ribbons and greenery, for Communion and the wedding prayer.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal length white organza gown styled with a high neckline and bouffant silhouette skirt. A chantilly lace bib extended over the bodice to the empire waistline. The skirt front featured a triangular panel of lace to the lace-edged hemline. The attached chapel length train also featured a triangular panel of lace. Lace formed the cuffs of the full, Gibson girl sleeves.

Her bouffant elbow length illusion veil was attached to a headpiece of lace flowers and organza loop bows, trimmed with pearls. She carried a white lace-covered prayer book, a gift of her nephews, Michael and Scott Pollard, centered with a white hybrid orchid and showered with bridal ribbons and lilies-of-the-valley.

Mrs. Wayne Pollard of Greenville, sister-in-law of the bride, wore a full length gown of white flocked voile, featuring a nehru collar and short sleeves. The waist of empire design was accented with hot pink ribbon and streamers. She wore a pink organza picture hat accented with hot pink ribbon and streamers. She carried a nosegay of pink shasta daisies showered with fern, baby's breath and variegated Nile green ribbons.

Mrs. Eward McMillion of Greenville, Mrs. Joseph Nash of Snow Hill and Miss Dorcas Winfrey of Auburndale, Fla., served as bridesmaids. They wore pink flocked voile dresses identical to the honor attendant. They carried nosegays identical to the honor attendant.

Miss Anna leRoux of Greenville served as flower girl. She wore a full length gown of pink flocked voile. Her picture hat was of pink organza featuring hot pink ribbon and streamers. She carried a white wicker basket centered with pink shasta daisies, fern and baby's breath and she shrewd pink carnation petals in the path of the bride.

Scott Pollard of Greenville, nephew of the bride, served as ring bearer. He carried a white satin pillow featuring miniature wedding rings.

Banks Boyette Bowers, father of the bridegroom, served his son as best man. Ushers were Charles and Wayne Pollard, brothers of the bride, of Greenville, and Richard Cannon of Vanceboro.

The bride's mother chose a blue knit dress with matching blue accessories. A corsage of white cymbidium orchids complemented her ensemble.

The bridegroom's mother was attired in a yellow A-line crepe dress with matching yellow accessories. Her corsage was white cymbidium orchids.

Immediately following the ceremony the bridal couple received their guests in the vestibule of the church.

Miss Kay Radford of Greenville presided at the guest register and Mrs. David Wiseman also of Greenville served as mistress of ceremonies.

The bride is a graduate of J.H. Rose High School, Greenville, Emmanuel College, Franklin Springs, Ga. and was graduated from East Carolina University with a degree in primary education. She will teach first grade at Vanceboro Elementary School in the fall.

Mr. Bowers is a graduate of Catawba College, Salisbury, with an AB degree and from East Carolina University with an M.A. degree. He is presently serving as principal of Farm Life Elementary School, Vanceboro.

For a wedding trip to the North Carolina mountains, the bride changed into a yellow linen dress with matching coat and accessories. She wore the orchid lifted from her prayerbook.

Following their wedding trip, the couple will reside in Vanceboro.

After Rehearsal Party

Following the wedding rehearsal Saturday night, Mr. and Mrs. Walter M. Pollard, parents of the bride, and Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Pollard entertained the Bower-Pollard wedding party, family, and out-of-town guests with an informal reception at the Pollard home.

Guests were greeted by Mrs. Gerald Morris and invited into the den. The cutting of the traditional wedding cake highlighted the event.

In the den, a pink and white color scheme was carried out, with the appointed table being covered in a white lace cloth over pink linen. At each corner of the table were fastened pink flowers tied with net and pink bridal ribbons.

The table was centered with an arrangement of pink and white shasta daisies and snapdragons in a crystal bowl, flanked by burning pink tapers in silver holders.

The three-tiered pink and white wedding cake, designed and created by Mr. Wayne Pollard and Mrs. H.D. Austin Sr. graced one end of the table.

Punch was poured by Mrs. Paul Beck sister of the bridegroom of Lexington and cake was served by Mrs. Austin, after Miss Pollard and Mr. Bowers cut the first slices.

Good-byes were said to the honored couple and the hosts and hostesses.

On Saturday, Mrs. J. Melvin Moore and Mrs. Danel leRoux honored Miss Joy Pollard, bride-elect, at the Moore home with an informal coffee hour.

Among the guests present were mothers of the bridal couple, Mrs. Walter M. Pollard and Mrs. Banks B. Bowers, and the sister of the bridegroom, Mrs. Paul Beck of Lexington.

FRIZZIES AND SPLIT ENDS
Have you ever had those frizzy blues? Chances are at some time or other you have. If you are having a difficult time with them, don't panic. Frizzy hair can be straightened.

On normal hair, you should go for a treatment about as often as you would go for a permanent, and for the same reason. As hair grows out, so does the straightening. Thus, fight the frizzies with regular trips to the beauty parlor.

Split ends can also leave you in the doldrums. They can be caused by many things. Although there are numerous products on the market today proclaiming solutions to split ends, we suggest that you have a good trimming, frequent oil treatments, and remember to brush often.

Let us assist you this week in eliminating the frizzy blues and those split end doldrums.

Ignorance Seen The Big Risk

By BRYAN HAINSLIP

RALEIGH — Technology won't rescue man from the mess he is making of his world.

And hysteria is no help as he takes on the tasks of cleaning up the environment.

What is needed, said Rep. Norwood E. Bryan, Jr., of Cumberland, is recognition that pollution is basically a human problem and not just a need for better plumbing. Knowledge, faith, and an "environmental conscience" are essential, he said, to preserve Spaceship Earth on private hands.

A Boy Scout's Zeal

Bryan champions the environmental cause with the fervor of a Boy Scout working for a merit badge. As a matter of fact, Scouting as a boy awakened his interest in the degradation of nature. It's been a concern ever since.

"I ran an ecological campaign in 1966," said Bryan. "Of course, I didn't call it that. Nobody knew then what 'ecology' meant. I talked about the threatened balance of nature.

He was 31, a graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, and Yale University Law School, involved with the family auto agency in Fayetteville. Politically uninitiated, he decided to run for the legislature. He paid his filing fee, wrote his own radio spots, and let the tickets when votes were counted.

Some of his views are old fashioned. He thinks people will understand if he votes on the basis of what he thinks the best, long-range interest of the whole state. So far, they have; he's back for his third session.

Sane Approach Urged

It used to worry Bryan that people paid too little attention to deterioration of the environment. Now, he's bothered by the crescendo of alarm threatening to drown out voices of sanity.

"Some of the latter-day environmentalists are as reckless as those they accuse of destruction," he said. Caution against hysteria is the watch-word in searching for solutions, he suggested.

Pollution abatement solutions must be effective and also practical, Bryan said. "A practical solution doesn't throw the baby out with the bathwater. It recognizes that the long range must accommodate to the short range, lest there be no reason for the long range... It avoids the irreversible and thereby preserves society's alternatives," he explained.

Nor can solutions lean solely on technology. To illustrate, Bryan noted problems of Raleigh and Smithfield in taking water from the Neuse River. Raleigh installed sewage treatment facilities capable of 85 per cent clean-up to protect Smithfield's water downstream.

That was fine; but now, a few years later, Raleigh's growth makes it necessary for the city to construct expensive facilities for 95 per cent clean-up, Bryan said, "just to hold the water quality at the same level."

Ninety-five per cent approaches the practical limits of engineering capability, he added. Further help must be found elsewhere.

The hope, Bryan said, is that "mankind may recognize he is part of his world, a part that must harmonize and not dominate. The rest will follow."

British Parliament.

Presently France, Italy, West Germany, Belgium, Luxembourg and the Netherlands are in the EEC.

Observers say that selling British membership to Parliament will be difficult since there is considerable opposition in Britain to the county's joining.

It appears that the economic union has been good for the economy of the six member nations. Britain's membership will make the union even stronger and it should also be good for the British economy.

Promising Still More Individual Attention

Of significance in the East Carolina University budget for 1971-73 is an item to provide $109,412 for reducing the student-teacher ratio.

We understand that the joint appropriations subcommittee was seeking to equalize student-faculty ratios in all state supported institutions. Dr. Leo Jenkins expressed pleasure that this action was taken.

Certainly this appropriation will mean that students can receive more individual attention at ECU. It should mean better instruction for students attending the local institution.

Dividends In Nixon's Mind

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Contrary to a widespread impression here fostered by White House aides that President Nixon went to court to prevent publication of the Pentagon papers at the insistence of Atty. Gen. John Mitchell, legal action actually was decided upon by the President alone prior to any recommendations from lieutenants.

Moreover, Mr. Nixon decided to seek the anti-publication injunctions in full realization that this probably would, temporarily at least, reduce the political advantages coming his way as a result of the revelations of the Johnson administration's preparation for the Vietnam war.

The account put out by some Presidential aides, attempting to protect Mr. Nixon, was that he was merely following Mitchell's legal advice in asking the Federal courts to prohibit the New York Times (and later other newspapers) from printing the secret reports. In truth, the President had immediately decided that such a legal move was necessary to protect the right of the government to keep security information secret even though the case undoubtedly would be lost.

Besides, Mr. Nixon, himself a devotee of the conspiracy theory in politics, feared that Democrats would hint at a conspiracy participated in by the White House to embarrass the Democrats if he did not try to suppress publication of the documents.

Nevertheless, in conversation with close associates, the President has made clear he still hopes that political dividends will be derived from the papers. From the beginning, he had planned to make a statement reaffirming his belief in freedom of the press once the Supreme Court finally ruled against the government's efforts to prevent publication. With the censorship issue so disposed of, the President calculates, he can enjoy the political luxury of letting nature take its course and Democrats suffer for the decisions of the Johnson administration.

But this tactic requires top Republicans to keep cool and quiet, letting the documents speak for themselves.

Accordingly, Mitchell was aggravated when Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas, Republican National Chairman, missed the signal from the White House and waded in with a brawler's statement attacking the Democrats for causing all the trouble in Vietnam.

Muskie's California Honcho

A figure from the past has quietly emerged as Sen. Edmund Muskie's top man in the vital state of California: Beverly Hills lawyer Paul Ziffren, only semi-active in politics since being dumped as California's Democratic National Committeeman in 1960.

This has raised eyebrows among some Muskie supporters in California, who feel the Senator needs a bright new face to run operations there rather than a retreat. But Ziffren brings some important assets to the job: intelligence, political shrewdness and — perhaps most important — lack of sharp identification with the vicious factional feuds which have racked California Democrats over the past decade.

In contrast, the man put in charge of Muskie's fundraising in California is a completely new face: Los Angeles businessman John Sweetland, recently moved West from Detroit. His job will be to unlock the big California Democratic money now in virtual escrow for Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey.

The problem, faced by Ziffren and Sweetland is typified by San Francisco real estate millionaire Walter Shorestein. Although the Muskie camp has been cheered by a token contribution from Shorestein, he tells friends he will not actually back Muskie unless both Humphrey and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy are out of the Presidential race. Whatever Kennedy ends up doing, Humphreyites in California are spreading the word that Humphrey definitely will be a candidate in 1972.

Strength For Today

"The voice of the people is the voice of God."

Is it now? Think about it for a moment. Are the people always right? It was the citizenship of Athens which condemned Socrates to death. It was the rabble which cried out for the crucifixion of Jesus. There is probably no record of a lynching having been perpetrated by one person. It is always the work of a furious mob and the community usually agrees with the mob wholeheartedly.

No, the crowd is just as often wrong as the individual. Then why do we say that democracy is the proper form of government? Because right or wrong, the group has to decide what its life is going to be. The people by the exercise of democratic procedure may make many wrong decisions, but on the whole this is the best form of government. If there is no hope here, there is no hope anywhere.

And as a rule, the people, after much thought and discussion, come out generally on the right side of most issues. There is nothing perfect in this world, and that goes for democratic processes as well as for anything else.

The people may not always be right in their judgment, but it is this or hopelessness. Democracy is the best approximation of sound and just government.

NOW COMES THE TOUGH PART...

By J.J. KILPATRICK

Folly In Minimum Wage

The Nixon administration is doing its best to soothe a rash of proposals for an increase in the minimum wage, but the outlook is not especially cheerful. A House subcommittee has completed hearings and will have its bill in shape by mid-July. The Senate just about wrapped up its hearings with a flock of witnesses last week. The thing is coming to a head.

Since 1966 the Federal minimum wage in covered employment has been fixed at $1.60 an hour. The Nixon administration is willing to see that go to $1.80 on January 1, but with a couple of sensible restrictions: The White House would like to see the minimum held at $1.60 for persons under 18 and for full-time students under 20. The administration also is resisting any move to extend a Federal minimum wage law to farm workers generally.

The AFL-CIO has a different idea. It is asking an immediate increase to $2 an hour. Other proposals call for phased increases up to $2.50 by Jan. 1, 1973. Senator Harrison Williams of New Jersey, one of the leading proponents, is pushing for $2.25 next year.

Now, Williams is an intelligent man, and so is Jacob Potofsky of the Clothing Workers. It is reasonable to assume that they are not deliberately seeking greater unemployment, worse inflation, higher welfare costs, and crueler hardships in the ghettos. Yet the sharp increases they are proposing in the minimum wage would produce precisely these consequences.

Economics mixes poorly with emotion. Like blindfolded children, wondering what it feels like to be blind, we can try to imagine how difficult it must be to support a family on $64 a week, which is what a minimum wage worker earns, less deductions, in a 40-hour week. As Williams properly points out, this is below the poverty level.

But suppose the minimum wage is raised abruptly to $80 a week. In small business enterprises especially, but in large industries also, a great many economic consequences promptly ensue. The first of these falls immediately and directly upon the worker who simply is not worth $80 a week to his employer: He gets fired. Most such workers, regrettably are the poor whites and blacks of limited education and largely manual skills.

What has thus been achieved? The worker who was employed is now unemployed. He applies for public welfare. And instead of contributing $3,200 a year to society, through his labor, he now becomes a like burden on the state. The intangible loss is still greater, in terms of a man's dignity and pride and sense of self-sufficiency. He loses these along with his job.

The trouble is that Congress, through the legislative process, cannot amend the laws of economics. No law can successfully declare a man worth $80 a week, for economic worth is fixed in the marketplace. All that a higher minimum wage law can accomplish, so far as this poor devil is concerned, is to spin him off his little island on the fringe.

Other consequences are equally predictable. Wage differentials have to be maintained, according to skill, tenure and responsibility. If workers on the bottom rung must be paid 25 percent more, workers on the upper rungs must be pushed up accordingly. Somewhere in this broad land there may be a few employers who could absorb such higher labor costs out of profits, but they must be few indeed. In the ordinary case, if no one is to be fired, the alternatives are to raise prices or to go out of business.

Other Editors Say Compromise

(Christian Science Monitor)

We wish simply to note in passing that the Congress of the United States and the Nixon administration are well along now in the process of hammering out a sensible and workable compromise over the very important matter of how much longer and under what conditions young male citizens of the United States will be required, regardless of their personal wishes, to do military service.

Ideally, no citizen should ever be compelled to serve against his wishes. An all-volunteer service always has higher morale, and is more effective and efficient than a part, or all, conscript force. President Nixon is aiming at an all-volunteer force, and we wish him well in his efforts to reach one.

But it would be impossible to take such a drastic step at this moment while the United States is in the middle of the difficult and dangerous process of withdrawal from Vietnam and while the question of the terms of military service is being colored and heated by the conflicting emotions arising out of the war.

A two-year extension of the draft will assure a sufficient flow of replacements for the Army during the withdrawal from Vietnam and during the rundown that will come afterwards from the wartime peak of three and a half million men in the American armed services to the projected postwar level of two and a half million.

The extension also will, we trust, mean that when the subject comes up again the whole Vietnam issue will belong to history and the next presidential election will be over. Either a newly vindicated Richard Nixon or some other person will be in the White House with a new mandate. That will be a better time for deciding whether the United States needs, or can happily get along without, compulsion in military recruitment.

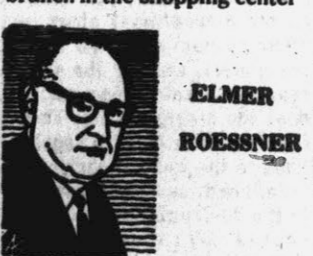

Watch The Wachovia Charges

By ELMER ROESSNER
In an unprecedented action, the Department of Justice has filed a suit in Greensboro, N.C., which, if successful, may invalidate half the retailer leases in the United States and completely disrupt the departmental leasing system in the department stores and supermarkets.

Assistant Attorney General Richard W. McLaren, head of the Justice Department's antitrust division, has directed the filing of a suit against the Wachovia Bank and Trust Co. of Winston-Salem, to terminate its lease agreement with the Holly Hill Mall Shopping Center in Burlington. Wachovia is the largest bank in the state and the 38th largest in the nation.

The suit alleges that the lease giving the bank the exclusive right to maintain a night depository in the shopping center is in violation of antitrust laws. It alleges the lease denies other banks in the area from competing with Wachovia for night deposits. A bank spokesman said that one other bank has a branch in the shopping center and two other banks have facilities within 700 feet of the mall.

Possible Consequences
If the suit should succeed it could churn up merchandising in America.

In almost every store lease when there is more than one store in a building, the landlord agrees not to lease other space to a competitor. In a building housing six stores, for instance, a landlord leasing to a drugstore will agree that he will not lease any of the other five units to another drug store. This has been standard practice for more than a century.

Sometimes such leases lead to curious restrictions. A lease to a drugstore, for example, may provide that all other leases in the same building provide that lessees agree not to sell aspirin or cosmetics. And other leases may provide that a drug store not be allowed to put in the traditional lunch counter because it would conflict with a restaurant.

If McLaren wins the Wachovia case, it will establish a precedent for voiding all such leases. Some landlords could demand new leases at higher rents; some tenants could move out from under one rous leases.

Effect On Leased Departments
If the McLaren theory is upheld, it could have even more confusing effects on leased departments in other stores.

Most department stores lease departments to specialists in the field. Fur, jewelry, watch repairing, boutique, hairdressing, cafeteria, stamp and coin, antiques, millinery and book departments are typically leased. At least one national fashion chain has practically no shops of its own, but has scores of leased departments from coast to coast.

Supermarkets frequently lease bakery, delicatessen, fresh produce and sometimes meat departments.

If the government wins the Wachovia case, a fur merchant, noting the success of a leased fur department in a department store, might demand, under threat of antitrust action, a similar lease. Or a supermarket might find itself with nine delicatessen departments.

Greater Trust In University Officials, Students

By YVONNE BASKIN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — The 1971 General Assembly has been willing to place much greater trust in university officials and students than the lawmakers of 1969 did.

Only two years ago a veteran legislator drew applause from his colleagues by declaring on the floor: "All of us here are sick and tired of these hippies with their long hair and sandals and beards. They're a disgrace to the state."

The bill Sen. Edward Griffin, D-Franklin, was opposing would have placed the student body presidents of the state's universities on the boards of trustees. The bill failed.

Last month the same bill was enacted into law after it passed the House without debate.

The man who sponsored the bill in both sessions, Sen. Ralph Scott, D-Alamance, thinks the whole attitude toward young people and the campuses has changed during the past biennium.

"They're putting more trust in the trustees this time," said Scott, who is a University of North Carolina trustee. "A whole lot of things have changed in the last two years. The lack of disruptions has helped more than anything else."

Also, the federal law allowing 18-year-olds to vote in national elections and the subsequent state constitutional amendment lowering the voting age, helped to soften anti-student feelings, he said.

"Why get up there and antagonize them when these 18-year-olds will be voting," he said. "Even a blind politician can read ballots."

The 1969 session came during the height of unrest on North Carolina's campuses and during a time of student turmoil throughout the nation.

Lawyer Failed Appear, Is Fined

BOSTON (AP) — Leon Leventhal, a Boston attorney, was fined the cost of one day in court, $2,500, for failing to appear to represent his client in a breaking and entering and larceny case.

Middlesex Superior Court Judge Allan M. Hale asked why Leventhal was not present Monday and was told he was on Nantucket Island. The judge asked for the approximate cost incurred by the court and was told $2,500.

A court official said the cost figure includes partial salaries for the judge, other court personnel and witnesses.

Anti-war marches were taking place on almost all the state's campuses. Black students supporting a cafeteria workers' strike at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill took over a dining hall; Duke students seized the university's administration building; black students started a riot in downtown Durham after a march protesting plans for a black studies curriculum; blacks took over a science building at little Belmont Abbey College; and at North Carolina A&T University in Greensboro, a student was killed when National Guardsmen fired into a dormitory on the troubled campus.

Guardsmen and Highway Patrolmen were called out in most of these incidents, and more than 100 persons were arrested.

Legislators responded by introducing a rash of bills aimed at cracking down on student disruptors and forcing administrators to take strong retaliatory action against them.

The most extreme of the measures — a new version of the old Speaker Ban Law and a bill calling for immediate expulsion of students who disturbed the campus routine — were allowed to die in subcommittees.

But the legislature did enact laws increasing the penalties for sit-ins and building takeovers; restricting weapons on campus; revoking state financial aid to students involved in disruptions; giving National Guardsmen the same immunity from civil and criminal liability enjoyed by local police for actions taken in good faith during riots; and allowing the governor to evacuate public buildings in time of emergency.

NEW ATTITUDE — Sen. Ralph Scott says attitude of legislators toward college students has shifted in the past two years. (AP Wirephoto)

Legislators also passed a comprehensive new Omnibus Riots and Civil Disorders bill.

Bills to lower the voting age and the age of legal adulthood to 18 never got out of committee in 1969, and Scott's bill to give students a small voice in running the university was ridiculed, gutted and then killed.

This session of the General Assembly, in contrast, has already approved for submission to the voters a state constitutional amendment to lower the voting age in all elections to 18, and it has passed a bill to lower the age of majority or legal adulthood to 18 if the voting amendment passes.

These bills, like Scott's bill concerning students on the boards of trustees, passed with relative ease and with none of the abusive speeches and impassioned opposition heard in 1969.

Only two other bills aimed at students have caused any significant discussion this session, and both were directed at what the sponsors consider the lax morals on today's campuses.

Sen. Julian Allsbrook, D-Halifax, angered at what he considered obscenity in some campus newspapers, sponsored a bill to do away with mandatory student fees which support these papers. It was killed in committee then brought to the Senate floor on a minority report, but the Senate refused to consider it.

Sen. Jyles Coggings, D-Wake, sponsored a bill that would have prohibited any visitation by students in dormitory rooms of members of the opposite sex. The Senate Higher Education committee also killed his bill.

Opponents of both these bills argued that campus morals were a problem for students, trustees and university personnel to work out for themselves.

Claims 'Copter Secretly Bought

RALEIGH (AP) — Officials in Gov. Bob Scott's administration have denied charges by a former Republican legislator that they secretly purchased a helicopter and have been trying to keep it hidden until the General Assembly adjourns.

Ted Dent, who served as a state Senator from Buncombe County in the 1967 and 1969 sessions, said Monday he had learned that the Department of Administration had bought a $140,000 Bell Jet Ranger helicopter and that someone in Scott's administration "put out the word to keep it quiet."

"I personally feel this administration owes the public and the legislature an explanation," Dent told a reporter. "It's particularly timely in view of how hard the Appropriations Committee has had to cut funds in all areas of government operations."

Dent recently announced he will run for the chairmanship of the state Republican party next year.

Department of Administration Director William L. Turner said the helicopter now housed in a hanger at the Raleigh-Durham Airport was one of two the state purchased with the use of federal matching funds supplied through the Governor's Law and Order Committee.

Turner said the purchase was made public around March when the federal funds were approved by the committee. He said he believed the state funds for the purchase came from the Contingency and Emergency Fund.

He said the second helicopter is due to be delivered by the middle of next month. In the past month or so, Turner said, the helicopter at the Raleigh-Durham Airport has been used numerous times by various law enforcement agencies, including the State Bureau of Investigation, the Highway Patrol and local rescue squads.

When a business fails, unemployment increases, welfare costs climb higher, and tax revenues decline. As prices go up, the purchasing value of the dollar goes down. It is small wonder that the Nixon administration, whose very survival depends upon the state of the economy next year, is resisting the Williams bill. But it is mystifying that responsible members of Congress, when they look at the proposed minimum wage, do not comprehend the maximum folly it contains.

Lions Pin Loss On R.C. Cola

The upstart Lions, mired in last place in the league, won their second straight game yesterday, downing the stumbling R. C. Cola nine, 7-5.

The Optimists have the title wrapped up with a 13-1 record, while the Kiwanis are safe in second at 10-4. Third is still up for grabs between Coke, 6-8, and the Jaycees, 5-9, while R. C. follows with a 5-10 record. The Lions are last with a 4-11 mark.

The Lions pushed over six runs in the first inning to sew up the win. Mike Adams walked and took second on a passed ball. Dale Steele walked and moved up on another passed ball. A third walk to Guy Bradbury loaded the bases. Wright Hooks singled in Adams, and Philip Gibbs reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Steele. Bradbury scored on an error and Hooks came over on a passed ball.

Freaser Sanders walked and also advanced on a passed ball. Jesse Baker reached on an error, scoring both Gibbs and Sanders for the 6-0 lead.

In the second, the Lions got their final run. Bradbury doubled and took third on a passed ball. Hooks grounded out, scoring Bradbury.

R. C. picked up all five of its runs in the third. Billy Ellington reached on a fielder's choice and Doug Burbage was safe on an error. Mike Brown reached on another error, scoring Ellington. A passed ball scored Burbage, and Ricky Bolonde singled to drive in Brown. Bryant Morton doubled in Bolonde, and he went to third on Bill Tugwell's hit. A passed ball scored Morton with the final run.

Pepsi Sews Up Second Place

Pepsi-Cola sewed up second place in the Tar Heel Little League yesterday with a 7-2 victory over Integon. The loss insured Integon of finishing in the basement.

The Graniteers have won first place with a 12-2 mark, while Pepsi is now 9-6. They are followed by the Elks, 7-7, Exchange, 6-8, and the Moose 5-9. Integon is 4-11.

Pepsi pushed over three runs in the first inning. Michael Shank reached on a fielder's choice and Dana Kendrick slapped a homer. Mark Conway followed with a double and moved to third on Joey Cherry's hit. A passed ball then scored Conway. In the third, Integon came up with a run. Worth Albea singled and Gene Pittman walked. John Miles reached on an error, scoring Albea.

In the fifth, Integon got another run, cutting the lead to 3-2. Albea singled and scored on Miles' double.

But Pepsi stalled the rally there and came up with four more runs in its half of the fifth. MacDonald Avery singled and Shank got a hit. Kendrick reached on an error, scoring Avery, and Cherry finished off things with a three-run homer. Integon 001 010—2 7 3

Pittsburgh Continues Assault With The Bats

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer
The Pittsburgh Pirates, leaders in the National League's East Division, have surrendered 35 runs in the last five games, a rather alarming average of seven per game.

It would be alarming except for the lively Buc bats which have produced 50 runs over the same span—10 runs per game.

The Pirates had their hot bats working again Monday night—all except the hottest one which belongs to Willie Stargell, the major league leader with 28 homers and 79 runs batted in. Stargell was hitless but the other Bucs collected 15 hits and ripped St. Louis 11-5.

Elsewhere in the National League, New York trimmed Philadelphia 3-1, Los Angeles downed Chicago 6-4, San Diego slugged San Francisco 6-2, Cincinnati swept a doubleheader from Montreal 4-3 and 5-4 and Houston took a pair from Atlanta 6-5, and 6-4.

In the American League, Kansas City shut out California 3-0, Boston belted Washington 10-4, Milwaukee downed Chicago 7-4. Cleveland swept a doubleheader from New York 3-0 and 5-2, and Oakland downed Minnesota 6-4. Detroit's game at Baltimore was halted by curfew after 13 innings with the

The Pirates got started fast against St. Louis, bunting five runs in the first inning, three of them on Manny Sanguillen's bases-loaded triple. That was only hit and every other Pittsburgh batter except Stargell had at least two with Jose Pagan collecting three.

After the Cards had chipped three runs off Pittsburgh's early bulge, the Pirates struck again, bunting six more runs in the fourth inning with Roberto Clemente and Bob Robertson each chipping in with two-run singles.

Joe Torre had three hits including his 11th homer for St. Louis, hiking his National League leading batting average to .373.

The victory kept Pittsburgh four games ahead of New York in the East Division. The Mets whipped Philadelphia, spoiling Rick Wise's first start since last week's no-hitter.

A University of Pennsylvania computer predicted odds of 600-to-1 against Wise pitching a second straight no-hitter and Tommie Agee's leadoff single in the first inning confirmed the computer's printout. Agee had four hits including a homer but it was Ken Boswell's two-run single in the eighth inning that sank the Phillies.

Willie Crawford and Wes Parker drove in two runs apiece as Los Angeles downed Chicago and chopped a game off San Francisco's West Division lead.

The Dodgers, who've won 13 of their last 18, now tail the Giants by 5½ games. Al Downing won his ninth game and one of Crawford's RBI's came on a first-inning homer.

Meanwhile, San Diego knocked off San Francisco with Clay Kirby besting Juan Marichal.

Dave Campbell doubled home three unearned runs as the Padres rallied for four runs in the fifth inning. Ed Spiezio homered for San Diego. Cesar Cedeno ripped three hits and drove in three runs in the second game as Houston came from behind to beat Atlanta and complete a sweep of their doubleheader.

Cedeno's hitting rallied Houston from a 3-0 deficit after the Astros had held off a late Atlanta rally to take the opener behind Don Wilson.

Wilson battled through a three-run Braves' rally in the eighth inning to record his ninth victory of the year.

BUIES CREEK — East Carolina University's Pirates picked up their second win in as many days last night as they gained a 7-4 victory over Campbell College.

The Bucs scattered their runs throughout the game, and one included an inside-the-park home run.

The victory raised the Pirate record to 4-2 in the North Carolina Summer Collegiate League, while Campbell's mark fell off to 3-6.

The Pirates got the action started in the third inning when they pushed over two runs. Steve Herring reached on a single, and Ronnie Leggett got a hit. Larry Walters walked, loading the bases. Troy Eason then followed with a hit, driving in Herring and Leggett for a 2-0 lead.

In the top of the fifth, the Bucs picked up two more runs. Leggett walked and moved to second on a wild pitch. Walters reached on an error, scoring Leggett. Eason singled, moving Walters to third, and he scored from there on Ralph Lamm's sacrifice fly.

Campbell came up with three runs in the bottom of the fifth to cut the lead to 4-3. Joe Baker singled and scored when Denver McCullough. Allen McRae singled and Kent Heintzelman got a hit to drive in DeTurriss with the third run.

The Pirates came up with what proved to be a winning run in the sixth inning. Rich McMahon slapped one that rolled to the fence, and he circled the bases for an inside the park homer while it was being chased down.

Campbell came right back with its fourth run, making it 5-4. Danny West was hit by a pitch and stole second. DeTurriss then singled to drive him in.

East Carolina added insurance in the seventh inning. Leggett walked and moved to third on Walters' single. The two runners then worked a double steal, with Leggett scoring his third run of the evening.

The final run came in the eighth. Bill Godwin doubled and scored on Mike Bradshaw's single.

The Bucs had a banner night with the bats, pounding out 16 hits in the game. Leggett and Eason each had three hits, while Walters, Lamm and McMahon had two each.

The Pirates' next outing will be Thursday when they play host to the U.S. Olympic Team in a non-league contest. They return to league play Friday, traveling to North Carolina.

Carolina Dairy Nearing Crown

Carolina Dairy flexed its muscles last night as it began knocking off the other teams in the Babe Ruth title race. Carolina Dairy rushed to a 26-2 victory over College View, while Planters Bank was nipping North Carolina National Bank, 6-5, and the results left only three teams still in the race.

Carolina Dairy leads the league with a 9-4 record, while Pepsi-Cola is second with 7-5 mark. NCNB is now 7-6, followed by Home Builders, 6-7; College View, 5-8, and Planters 4-8. Carolina Dairy needs to win only two games, or combine a Pepsi loss with a win to wrap it up. NCNB will be eliminated by a single Dairy win or NCNB loss.

In the opener, Carolina Dairy pushed over two runs in the first inning of play. Griff Garner walked and David Clifton made it 2-0 quickly with a home run.

In the second, four more runs came across. Edwin Clark walked as did John Causey. Clifton singled, loading the bases. Mike Parker then cracked a grand slam homer, upping the lead to 6-0.

College View picked up its only two runs in the second. Lee Moore singled and moved up on an error. Jay Jester singled him to third, and Jester stole second. Donald Cannon singled to score them both.

In the fourth, Carolina Dairy added another run. Clifton walked and stole both second and third before finally scoring.

In the fifth another scored as Bobby Jones homered.

Five scored in the sixth, including another grand slam homer, this one by Ronnie Garris. Then, in the seventh, Carolina Dairy exploded for 13 runs to wrap it up.

Clifton and Parker each had three hits and Garris had two to lead the Dairy attack. Bobby Kittrell had three and Cannon had two for College View.

Olympic Team Here

Eastern North Carolina baseball fans will have an opportunity to see the best collegiate performers in the nation when East Carolina hosts the U.S. Olympic Baseball team Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at Harrington Field.

The Olympians, under the direction of Arizona State Coach Bobby Winkles, are currently on a 24-game tour in preparation for their trip to the Pan-American Games in Cali, Colombia July 30-August 13. The talent-laden team includes three members of Southern California's National Championship squad and three of Winkles' Arizona Staters.

Pirate Coach George Williams billed Thursday's game as the highlight of the summer season. "It is an honor," Williams commented, "just to have these ballplayers in our area. They represent the finest talent in the NCAA, and it will be a treat to see them perform. It will be a tremendous experience for our boys to play against them."

Pre-game ceremonies for Thursday's contest will get underway at 7:30 p.m. at Harrington Field on the ECU campus.

First in 1969 and then again in 1970, a lightly regarded group of players representing Nationalist China (Taiwan) stormed their way into the Bermuda Bowl Finals, which decides the World's Championship of Contract Bridge.

China finished second both times—once to the famous Italian Blue Team and then the following year to the United States. They clearly lacked seasoned international experience—their bidding system (called the "Precision Club") authored by their nonplaying captain C. C. Wei, a citizen of the United States—consistently netted them excellent results.

An example of their system in action is presented today, where the Chinese scored heavily against the U. S. in an early round of last year's Title Match.

The bidding depicted in the above diagram occurred at the table where the United States Team held the North-South cards. In the Precision Club system, an opening bid of one club designates a hand containing a minimum of 16 high card points. Therefore, opening bids of one diamond, one heart or one spade (such as the call made by East in today's hand) are limited to a maximum of 15 points, excluding distribution.

The Chinese player seated East, opened the bidding with one spade and South passed. Inasmuch as West held only six points himself, there was no expectation that his side could score a game, and he was under no obligation to keep the bidding open—so he passed.

North was reluctant to sell out cheaply and reopened the proceedings with a one no trump bid. This call does not designate the values for an opening one no trump bid (observe North's original pass). Besides, holding a good hand, North would make a takeout double. He is merely designating his reluctance to sell out cheaply and his choice of one no trump shows that he holds a balanced hand.

South might have been better advised to merely bid two hearts, but he may have been carried away by the modest opposition exerted by the other side. When South jumped to three hearts, North got caught in the swing and carried on to game.

West, who had exercised admirable restraint to this point, lowered the boom and doubled.

The six of spades was opened and after East showed out on the first lead of trumps, declarer found that he could not avoid the loss of three hearts, and one trick in each of the other suits. The result was an 800 point setback on the deal.

At the other table, where the United States was seated East-West, East was declarer at a contract of three diamonds. This bid was defeated one trick for an additional deficit of 50 points against the American Team. The total profit to China on the deal was 850 points.

Mr. Koeler accepted volunteers from my class in the N.U. Law School auditorium.

He would shuffle a deck of cards; then let a student pick one out at random.

The student would show the card to the class but not let Mr. Koeler view it.

Mr. Koeler then asked the student if the card was a heart.

The student had previously been told to say "No" to all

Next, Mr. Koeler inquired if the card were a diamond; then a club; then a spade.

To all four queries, the student replied with a vigorous "No."

But Mr. Koeler immediately told him which suit the card belonged to.

Then he inquired if the student had picked out a face card. "No," was the retort.

Again he replied "No" when asked if it were a number card.

Mr. Koeler correctly told the student that he had selected a face card.

And in this same fashion he quickly found that it was the

Undecided Over Filing Appeal

GREENSBORO (AP) — An attorney for a former Randleman postmistress convicted of conspiring to burglarize the post office says he hasn't decided whether to appeal a circuit court ruling upholding her conviction.

The U. S. 4th Circuit Court of Appeals let stand the conviction of Mrs. Audrey Hester Cashatt Lineberger, convicted of conspiracy Oct. 2 in the theft of more than $46,000 in stamps and money.

Mrs. Lineberger was sentenced to five years in prison. She is free under a $15,000 rec-

Other disbelieving students came forward and tried to deceive the polygraph, but to no avail.

At present, additional physiological refinements have been added to help increase the accuracy of the polygraph.

But even then, its accuracy was higher than that of eye witnesses, for the latter are often wrong when trying to identify suspects. We psychologists for many years prior to the development of the original polygraph had used merely a stop watch and a list of maybe 20 words, 10 of which specifically applied to the contents of a secret box.

In my classes, I would retire from the room and let several volunteers come forward.

They were to delegate one of their number to peek inside the covered box.

Then I'd come back and test the volunteers, one at a time, while the others were now out of the classroom.

As I uttered each of the 20 words, 10 of which pertained to the contents of the box, I'd have an assistant use a stop watch to measure the reaction time.

For example, I would say "Table" and the suspect was to reply as fast as possible with the first word that came to mind, as "Chair."

Even with an ordinary stop watch, it was easy to find the guilty person.

Mr. Koeler's polygraph was a more refined method and its modern improvements make it a helpful twin for "truth serum."

When I addressed the University of Tennessee Law School Symposium on the polygraph, a colleague there told me that of 100 socially prominent

Grand Jury Calls Tola

DETROIT (AP) — A Chapel Hill antiwar activist, Michael Tola, is one of six young radicals ordered to appear today before a federal grand jury investigating the bombing of the

U. S. Capitol. An appeal by the six young activists was denied Monday by a panel of three federal appeals court judges in Detroit. Judge George Edwards, presiding judge of the 6th U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals, said: "The motion for a stay is denied and the district court's decision is upheld."

The jury called Tola, Ken Kelly and Terry Taube, both of Detroit; Larry Canad and his ex-wife Kathy, both of Nashville, Ind., and Lolin Neiberger of Boston.

The Psychedelic Scapegoat Six, as they have termed themselves, told the court their subpoenas were issued on evidence gathered by illegal wiretap.

U. S. District Judge Cornelia Kennedy ruled the six were entitled to a hearing on their claim only if they appeared before the grand jury.

CP&L Looks 10 Years Ahead With Computer

Ed Hobbs, head of Carolina Power & Light Co.'s engineering computer unit, prepares to initiate a program on CP&L's sophisticated engineering computer system that is unique in the power industry.

RALEIGH — Last year approximately 150,000 children were born in the Carolinas. Carolina Power & Light Co. is already busy determining how to supply the power that will be needed by the time those 1970 children reach their 10th birthday.

Because of the time needed to buy sites for and construct power plants, engineers normally work 10 years in advance. CP&L has improved its long-range planning ability with the installation of a sophisticated engineering computer system.

The system gives the company's engineers the ability to connect with large computer banks throughout the country and the libraries of electric utility computer programs.

With computers as their tools, the engineers make thousands of computations to determine size, location and number of power plants and transmission lines that will be needed for the future.

The benefit of the increased sophistication in planning has a direct effect on CP&L customers, according to Raymond Talton, vice-president and head of the company's system engineering department.

"Because we are able to tie into the larger computers and have use of power system simulation programs, more factors can be considered in our studies," Talton said. "The more factors that can be taken into account, the more accurate the studies are in determining the requirements to meet our customers' future power needs."

Using computer programs to simulate the actual operation of the power system, operating conditions are projected many years into the future. Using various types and sizes of generating plants and various patterns of transmission networks, the most economical and reliable combination of plans can be selected.

"The computers can complete a job in three to eight minutes that would require thousands of manhours," Talton said.

The sophisticated engineering computer system at CP&L was designed by Ed Hobbs, head of CP&L's engineering computer unit. Studies concerning nuclear fuel, rate calculation, short circuit effects, and profiles of transmission facilities are other types of problem solving performed on the computer system.

Previously most utilities have chosen to purchase computers and install them on their own system. CP&L is one of the first in the country to install terminals that are tied into the most sophisticated computer banks in the country and to use outside computers in this manner.

"Other power companies have studied the CP&L system and are planning to make nearly identical installations in the future," Hobbs said.

Churchmen Urge Defeat Local Option Right

RALEIGH (AP) — The two United Methodist bishops of North Carolina are urging legislators to defeat a statewide, local option liquor-by-the-drink bill pending in the House.

"In our opinion too much time has already been spent on the issue of alcoholic beverages during this General Assembly," said Bishops William R. Cannon of Raleigh and Earl G. Hunt Jr. of Charlotte.

In a statement released Monday they said, "We deplore the continued introduction of time-consuming bills on this subject when there are so many other more vital issues which need the attention of the state legislature."

One statewide liquor-by-the-drink bill was voted down earlier in the session, but the legislature since has approved mixed drink referendums in Moore and Mecklenburg counties. A House committee approved a new statewide, local option measure last week.

ROBBING THE BLIND
PORT ARTHUR, Tex. (AP) — In recent months more than $5,000 in checks have been stolen from mail boxes in this area.

Postmaster W. T. McCuiston said most of the checks were from the U.S. Treasury Department, state welfare, retirement and insurance firms.

They included one welfare check for a blind woman and an insurance check used to support seven children. The checks can be easily identified, said the postmaster.

Single-Shot Ban Fought

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Civil Liberties Union says a bill to outlaw single-shot voting is unconstitutional and aimed at minimizing the voting strength of racial and political minorities.

The Rev. W.W. Finlator of Raleigh, chairman of the group's legislative committee, released a statement Monday opposing the bill being sponsored by Rep. James Vogler, D-Mecklenburg. The bill would make it illegal to vote for less than a majority of the seats to be filled in any given race. It has been approved by a committee and sent to the House floor.

For example, in an election where 10 candidates were running for five city council seats, a person would have to vote for at least three candidates or his ballot would be thrown out.

Finlator said the proposed law "would force voters to compromise their consciences" if they felt they could conscientiously vote for only one or two of the 10 running. He said blacks or Republicans, who often field only a few candidates, would either have to vote for candidates they did not support or have their ballots thrown out altogether.

Singer Divorced And Near Broke

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Singer Vic Damone and Actress Judith Rawlings have been divorced and the crooner reveals in the property settlement that he is nearly broke.

Damone, 43, formerly married to actress Pier Angeli, agreed to the decree Monday in Superior Court to give his wife, 35, monthly support of $2,100 for herself and their three children. They married in 1963. He said in an affidavit he is contemplating bankruptcy.

Garbage Left In Her Backyard

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Somebody has dumped 60 large plastic bags of garbage and clothing in the backyard of a 79-year-old grandmother.

The Sanitation Department says it will see whether in the case of Mrs. C. B. Chapman it can make an exception to the rule that all trash must be at curbside to be picked up.

A similar thing happened to Mrs. Chapman about a month ago, but then it was only 10 bags, which her grandson and his friends took to the street. Mrs. Chapman says her brick barbecue grill also was torn up at that time. She says she knows of no reason for the garbage and the destruction.

Budget . . .

The amendment was part of a move by legislators to bring the salaries of employees who are not covered by the personnel act under greater legislative control. The legislators have been angered in the past when the governor and Advisory Budget Commission have granted these employees boosts of 25 and 30 per cent shortly after the General Assembly left town.

The $4.3 billion budget includes most of the recommendations made by Gov. Bob Scott and the Advisory Budget Commission last February. The total compares with a $3.5 billion budget during the present biennium.

Under the budget, the state will put up $52.8 million to pay 90 per cent of the nonfederal cost of the Medicaid program. This compares with $22 million the state is paying during the present biennium. Counties will put up $5.4 million to pay the other 10 per cent of the program.

The budget includes $1.4 million to begin operating a one-year medical school at East Carolina University and $350,000 for a medical school library.

The budget carries $12.3 million to pay $10 per month hospital insurance for teachers and state employees the second year of the biennium and $3.7 million to pay $3 per month for disability insurance the second year of the biennium.

During its study of the proposed budget, the Joint Appropriations Committee deleted more than $51 million from the recommendations of the governor and the Advisory Budget Commission and it proposed additions totaling $67 million.

The additions included: —$4.6 million for an elementary school at the proposed Central School for the Deaf in the Greensboro area.

—$4 million for the Department of Community College's to provide for increase enrollment and $3 million to provide matching funds for construction of community college facilities.

—$1 million to expand the kindergarten program in the public schools.

—$374,000 to provide for 10 more medical students at UNC Chapel Hill the first year of the biennium and 20 more the second year.

—$3.1 million for a dock for the State Ports Authority at Morehead City.

—$2 million for school lunches to enable the state to continue receiving $18 million in federal funds for the school lunch program.

Correction

ZENITH 151 is the number farmers should ask for in connection with long distance calls to report tobacco barn fire.

County Fire Marshall Bobby Joyner notes that 191, the number given in a story on fire safety checks for farmers, carried in yesterday's Daily Reflector, is in error.

Quiz Rivals In Joe Colombo's Shooting

REPUTED MOB CHIEFTAIN SHOT — Joseph Colombo Sr., blood streaming from his mouth, is eased into an ambulance after being shot three times Monday. (AP Wirephoto)

By RICHARD BOUDREAU
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Underworld figures who had been reported feuding with reputed Mafia boss Joseph A. Colombo Sr. have been questioned by police about the shooting of Colombo at an Italian-American Unity Day rally he was preparing to lead. Colombo remained in critical condition in a hospital today.

The gunman who fired three bullets into Colombo's head and neck Monday was shot to death moments later. Chief of Detectives Albert Seedman said the assault on Colombo was planned, possibly by rival mobsters.

The assailant was identified as Jerome A. Johnson, 25, of New Brunswick, N.J., who posed as a freelance photographer in order to get near Colombo.

Joseph and Albert Gallo, two of the underworld leaders questioned by police, were reported to have recently renewed with Colombo a feud dating back a decade when they fought on opposite sides in a gang war that claimed about 20 lives.

Carlo Gambino, 72-year-old reputed boss of bosses in the New York underworld, was also questioned by police. Gambino, once a patron of Colombo, reportedly had grown uneasy over public attention focused on organized crime by Colombo's Italian-American Civil Rights League.

Colombo, 48, founder of the league, had asserted publicly he had nothing to do with the underworld and has led rallies and demonstrations by league members who claimed use of the words "Mafia" and "Cosa Nostra" unfairly associated Italian-Americans with organized crime.

Colombo was reported still in a coma today with his blood pressure and breathing back to normal. Surgeons estimated his chance of survival "less than 50-50" but said it was "a miracle he is still alive."

In five hours of brain surgery, two bullets were removed, one from the mid-brain and the other from the back of the neck. A third slug, in the left jaw, was not considered critical and left in.

The burst of gunfire took place within 100 feet of the gaily decorated statue of Christopher Columbus where a crowd that eventually numbered at least 15,000 was gathered for the second annual rally, sponsored by the league and other groups.

Witnesses said a young black man with a camera snapped pictures of Colombo in an area restricted to newsmen with passes until Colombo said "All right, that's it. No more pictures." The man then moved behind Colombo, pulled a gun and fired, witnesses said.

"He fired three times with an automatic pistol," said James Delmonico, a freelance photographer. "Colombo fell. There were two more shots, I think. They crowded around the guy with the gun. Colombo had blood all over his head. The black man looked like he got hit three or four times."

British Find Arms Cache

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — One of the biggest arms caches ever found by British troops in Northern Ireland was uncovered early today in a raid on a Belfast warehouse.

"From the items uncovered, we can only surmise that the building was used as a bomb-making factory," a senior army officer said.

Three men were arrested at the warehouse.

The troops found 2,000 feet of fuse wire, 200 gallons of acid, 14 booby traps, two walkie-talkie radios, 130 detonators, three grenades, four gelignite bombs, one pistol, a rifle, more than 300 rounds of ammunition, machine-gun parts and an assortment of fuses, flares and time switches.

British troops also discovered an illegal arms depot in Belfast during a house-to-house search on Saturday.

Denies Rumors Sinatra Ailing

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Frank Sinatra's agent, deluged with whispers in the night and weehour calls that Sinatra is rumored ill, says the now-retired crooner may be forced to hold a news conference proclaiming his good health.

"It's getting ridiculous," said agent Jim Mahoney after being roused late Monday to deny rumors heard by a newspaper that the 55-year-old entertainer was in a Buffalo, N.Y., hospital.

Mahoney said rumors on Sinatra's health went wild after he announced his retirement from public life some two months ago.

Masons Observe St. John's Day

Masons throughout North America and Ireland celebrated and observed St. John's Day last week.

Masons of the Fifth Masonic District observed the celebration in Robersonville at Stonewall Lodge No. 296 by having a dutch supper served by the local Order of the Eastern Star.

A program was presented by the District Deputy Grand Master of the Fifth Masonic District "Why Masons Celebrate and Observe St. John's Day." The next St. John's Day observance will be held in Grifton the week of December 27th.

AYDEN — Mr. Marvin O. Caton, 60, died at his home in Ayden early Tuesday morning.

Mr. Caton had been in declining health for several months.

Son of the late George and Perlie Taylor Caton, he was a life-long resident of Ayden, and until his retirement was owner of the Ayden Bargain Supply Company.

SAIGON (AP) — A South Vietnamese general claimed today that Hanoi has committed 10,000 troops to an offensive against allied artillery bases in the northwest corner of South Vietnam.

Maj. Gen. Phan Van Phu, commander of the 1st Division, told newsmen in Dong Ha that the enemy force is maneuvering in 800 square miles of Quang Tri province, west from the provincial capital to the Laotian border and north of Highway 9 to the demilitarized zone.

Phu said 6,000 of the enemy troops infiltrated across the DMZ since May 1. He said they have mortars, rocket launchers and antiaircraft guns but no heavy artillery.

Phu denied reports that the North Vietnamese had moved 122mm and 130mm guns across the DMZ. The general said such big guns are just north of the buffer zone but "they have not been used against our forces up to now."

Miss Dorothy Bolton, director of Social Services for Pitt County, said, "All persons in rest homes out of the county will be moved back as rest home and family care units here open, if they and their families wish it. There are many, though who have no close family here and who have adjusted to their present situations so that it would cause more suffering for them if we were to move them back. These we will leave where they are."

ENDING SEASON

Today is the final day of operation of the Greenville Art Center for the 1970-1971 season. Mrs. Edith Walker, director of the center, says the opening date for the forthcoming season is scheduled following Labor Day in September.

The general said he expected "heavy fighting" along the defensive chain of bases in the unpopulated northwest sector. But he predicted they would be able to keep the enemy from breaking through to the coastal lowlands for a pre-election offensive in the populated regions.

Although the South Vietnamese were driven from Fire Base Fuller, Phu said the enemy is "generally weaker this year." He attributed this to the South Vietnamese invasion into Laos.

The North Vietnamese have kept up steady pressure on the allied firebases in the northwest sector with mortars, rockets and ground probes. One outpost four miles below the DMZ, Fire Base Fuller, was abandoned by the South Vietnamese last week after an 800-round mortar barrage. The hilltop base was reoccupied temporarily Sunday to provide protection for U.S. and South Vietnamese reinforcements sweeping the area.

South Vietnamese headquarters today reported only sporadic ground clashes in the region, but North Vietnamese gunners bombarded several bases and also shot down an American fighter-bomber.

A U.S. spokesman said the F4 Phantom was crippled by anti-aircraft fire over the western portion of the DMZ. The pilot tried to make it back to his base but couldn't, and the plane crashed into the South China Sea half a mile northwest of Da Nang. The two crewmen ejected and were rescued unhurt, the spokesman said.

Elsewhere, sharp fighting was reported close to Saigon for the first time in several days, and a South Vietnamese ammunition dump at the coastal city of Qui Nhon was blown up for the fifth time this year.

'Lumped It', And Center Approves

LONDON (AP) — Jackie Callaway lumped it and the British National Innovations Center liked it.

The 11-year-old blonde girl decided "brown sugar was better but lumps are more convenient."

"I wrote to the big sugar firms to ask why there were no brown sugar lumps, but none of them replied," she told newsmen.

So she made her own lumps, mixing "ordinarily brown sugar with just the right amount of water and left it to harden in the icetray in our fridge."

For her idea, the innovations center sent her $12.
