Astronauts Await Flight

All In Readiness For Monday Morning Blastoff

By CHARLES E. TAYLOR

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI)— Apollo 15's astronauts broke training Saturday and went joyriding in jet trainers while officials met and decided all was in readiness for proceeding toward a Monday morning blastoff to the moon.

Apollo Program Director Rocco A. Petrone said after a 2½-hour meeting with project leaders that everything was in order with the Saturn launch vehicle, the spacecraft and the three space fliers —David R. Scott, Alfred M. Worden and James B. Irwin.

"Fit, relaxed and ready to go," was the way chief astronaut Donald K. (Deke) Slayton summed up the condition of the astronauts. To help themselves relax, they all took spins over central Florida Saturday in sleek, white jet trainers.

"The only problem we might anticipate is weather —and we have assurance that the weather looks good," countdown supervisor James Harrington reported.

The all-Air Force crew is due to take off at 9:34 a.m. EDT Monday aboard a massive Saturn 5 rocket on a 12-day, seven-hour mission to explore the base of some of the moon's highest mountains. It will be the longest and potentially most rewarding of the five manned lunar expeditions.

With the challenge of walking on the moon met in the Apollo 11, 12 and 14 missions, the $445 million Apollo 15 flight begins a series of three final expeditions in which the emphasis will be on enriching scientific knowledge of the earth's nearest neighbor in space.

Scott and Worden, both 39, and Irwin, 41, are the best equipped astronauts ever to set out for the moon. They will have a car to cover 10 times as much terrain as their predecessors, and they may bring back a record horde of moon samples.

"The 15, 16 and 17 missions, we believe, are really the greatest scientific endeavors that mankind has ever attempted," said W. T. O'Bryant, assistant director for Apollo lunar exploration.

"Never have so many people, so many scientific investigations been collected together for a concerted effort of exploration. The missions which followed the first lunar landing were fairly restricted as far as science is concerned."

With the promise of mostly sunny skies for the weekend and for the Monday morning launch, visitors flocked in for the show. Spaceport tour buses were doing a booming business, beaches were full of sunbathers and surfers, the "no vacancy" signs were out at motels —and area promoters passed out buttons that said, "tourists are beautiful."

At launch complex 39, the Apollo countdown moved into its final phases as ground crews loaded liquid oxygen and liquid hydrogen aboard the service module of the command ship Endeavour to fuel batteries which power the spacecraft's electrical system. Flight batteries were readied for the Saturn launch vehicle.

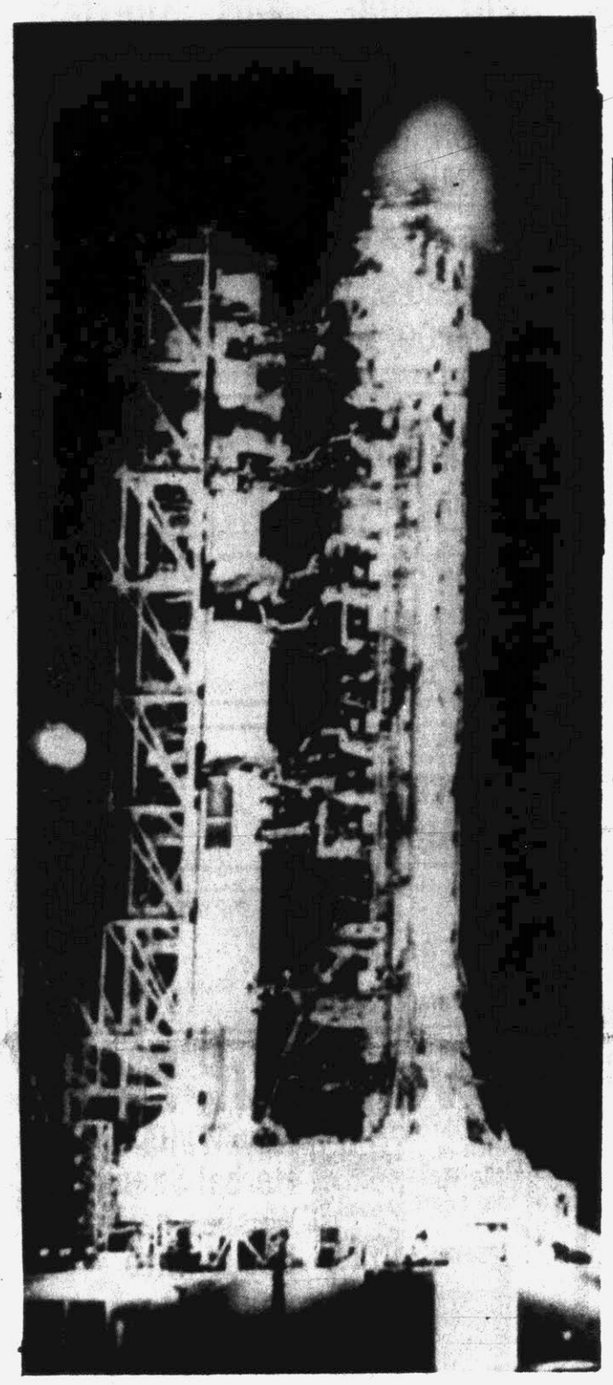

Two hours and 50 minutes after they blastoff, Scott —the mission commander —Worden and Irwin are scheduled to blast themselves out of earth orbit and speed away on a three-day, 230,000-mile trip to the moon.

They should arrive Thursday afternoon, and Scott and Irwin in the landing craft Falcon are scheduled to touchdown at 6:15 p.m. Friday in a basin-like area on the moon's face that is bounded on three sides by peaks soaring up to 15,000 feet in the Apennine mountain range. On the north side of the landing site is the 1,000-footdeep, mile-wide canyon called Hadley Rille.

"Of all the sites that we'll go to on the Apollo program, this is the one where we are most likely to get a piece of the original lunar crust," said Dr. Harold Masursky, a geologist from the U.S. Geological Survey.

While Worden whirls in orbit above them, Scott and Irwin will spend 67 hours on the lunar surface and make three excursions totaling 20 hours and covering 22 miles. They'll ride in a battery-powered Rover vehicle, and their explorations will be televised back to earth.

The moonwalkers will collect rock samples from the base of the mountains and the rim of the rille, and lay out a scientific station to radio reports to earth on moonquakes, radiation and other such phenomena.

U.S. Intensifies Peace Efforts In Middle-East

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The United States is intensifying its efforts to rpomote a Middle East peace settlement by sending a high level emissary to Israel to discuss proposals for reopening the Suez Canal, State Department officials said Saturday.

The officials said that Joseph J. Sisco, assistant secretary of state for Near Eastern affairs, would depart Tuesday or Wednesday to begin another round of talks with Israeli leaders.

The administration is reported to feel that time is beginning to run short in the effort to achieve a partial Mideast settlement by concluding an agreement on reopening the Suez which has been blocked since the Arab-Israeli war of 1967.

Want Quick Approval

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Sen. Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., Saturday urged quick action on his bill to compensate victims of violent crime.

Under the bill, the convicted criminal would be held responsible for compensation to the victim if he was able to pay. If not, the government would pay the victim.

"The innocent victims of rape and robbery, of mugging and murder, these are the citizens who deserve consideration," Mansfield said.

Disruption Is Seen

SAIGON (UPI)—A sharp rise in Communist activity in the Saigon area raised fears Saturday the Viet Cong is planning to make the capital focal point of an attempt to disrupt South Vietnam's approaching congressional and presidential elections.

Official records showed Saturday that shellings, firefights and finding of arms caches within a 35-mile radius of Saigon this month have exceeded those of any month this year except April.

News Conferences Set

RALEIGH, N. C. (UPI) — Gov. Bob Scott will hold two news conferences next week, one to review the just concluded General Assembly session, and the other to announce the results of a survey on nutrition in North Carolina.

The two news conferences highlight the governor's official calendar, which also includes two trips to the Tar Heel coast.

Scott will unviel the nutrition study Monday morning and address the North Carolina Sheriffs' Association in the port city of Wilmington that evening.

Wednesday the governor will hold a general topic news conference which will center largely on the accomplishments of the past legislative session.

Friday morning Scott is to meet with the board of conservation and development in Wrightsville Beach and that afternoon he will officiate at dedication ceremonies for Masonboro State Park at Carolina Beach.

Now Four Railroads

Train Strikes Spreading

By RICHARD LERNER

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Train crewmen fighting an industry bid to change work rules extended their selective strike Saturday to a total of four railroads. No agreement was in sight, and a fifth of the nation's rail freight capacity was choked off, with grain and coal shipments among the hardest hit.

The United Transportation Union (UTU) struck the Southern Pacific and Norfolk & Western railroads at 6 a.m. EDT, nine days after closing down the Union Pacific and the Southern Lines.

The Nixon administration's chief labor troubleshooter began meeting separately at mid-afternoon with negotiators for both sides to explore what he termed "some new ideas." But the mediator, Assistant Labor Secretary W. J. Usery Jr., said the timing of the next joint bargaining was uncertain "because the issues get tougher as the strike spreads."

The UTU widened its walkout after a 15-hour negotiating session lasting until 4:30 a.m. EDT failed to produce a settlement.

The union has served notice it will strike six more lines next Friday.

In Lockheed Debate

Laird Denies Opposition

By MIKE FEINSILBER

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Reversing himself overnight, Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird sought Saturday to retract his statement opposing an administration bill under which the government could aid firms facing bankruptcy such as the ailing Lockheed Aircraft Corp.

Laird's denial that he or Deputy Defense Secretary David Packard oppose the bill authorizing $2 billion in government-guaranteed loans to troubled corporations was the centerpiece of a two-hour debate in an unusual Saturday session of the Senate.

In another development, Sen. James L. Buckley, the New York conservative, announced his opposition to the loan guarantee bill, saying it "would erode the market disciplines required by a healthy system of free and competitive enterprise."

Opponents of a prospective $250 million government-backed loan to Lockheed had seized upon Laird's opposition, which was expressed in a Pentagon news conference Friday. They called his opposition to the bill "significant" and "startling."

A transcript of the Friday news conference, obtained from the Pentagon, showed this exchange:

Question: "Is there a dichotomy within the administration?"

Laird: "There is a difference within the administration. I don't think you can say that there is not. All you have to do is read his (Packard's) statement and there is some difference in his position, but Dave Packard feels very strongly that we've got to toughen up on the procurement policies as far as our government is concerned and his views are his own views but I want you to know that I support Dave Packard."

Pitt Legislators Review Work Done By 1971 General Assembly

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The North Carolina General Assembly closed last week after changing the laws of the state to given 18-year-olds the right to vote and enter into contracts and do almost everything else 21-year-olds can do, except buy whiskey legally.

Other things that stand out in the minds of Pitt County's legislative representatives include the fact that no new taxes were levied or imposed; a number of environmental protection bills became law; several consumer protection measures were approved; and — close to home — legislators funded a number of important projects in Greenville and Pitt County, including the first year medical education program at East Carolina University.

Pitt's senior member of the House of Representatives, Horton Rountree said the medical school ". . . that we've been working on since 1965 . . ." was funded with a $1.8 million appropriation. "A step in the right direction . . ." the representatives noted "I think this is sort of a giant step forward."

Rountree said a $350,000 appropriation from the General Assembly to fund the beginning of a medical library "will boost both programs . . . the medical school and the Department of Health Affairs . . ."

Another accomplishment, Rountree pointed out, was the shifting of money for renovations to the Wahl-Coates lab school building to a new School of Art facility.

The university has been seeking funds for a new home for the School of Art for several years and until the last week of the General Assembly, it looked as if the long wait would continue.

However, the lawmakers saw fit to add $700,000 to the $1.3 million renovation figure to fund partial construction of the new art school center.

"Legislators," Rountree noted, "figured classroom space was a must since the art department is teaching in five locations on the campus. The renovation of Wahl-Coates can be deferred until the next biennium."

The legislator noted that some maintenance money may be used to make the Wahl-Coates building more usable for the Speech and Drama Department, which will inherit the building when the lab school moves into its new home on East Fifth Street, probably after Christmas.

Another sizable amount of money — some $3.2 million — was made available for additions to Joyner Library. Planning money was made available for the project in 1969, Rountree noted, and the General Assembly this year provided funds to carry out the plans. And an additional $1.1 million was approved for air conditioning three dormitories for summer school use.

"I think overall, we did real well," Rountree said.

"We ought to be satisfied," Sam Bundy, Pitt's junior House member noted. "ECU, in relationship to the amount of money other institutions received and to the amount of money we had to distribute, faired well."

"And," Bundy commented, "I'm tickled to death for the rehabilitation center appropriation."

"The real cream of our appropriation was the Vocational Rehabilitation Center," Rountree agreed.

Rountree explained the rehabilitation center was being sought by Wilson and Goldsboro, but the advisory committee on the site location recommended Greenville.

'This rehabilitaton center will tie in and really be a boost to the Department of Allied Health at ECU, the Sheltered Workshop, the Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center and the Coastal Plain Mental Health Association. . ."

"This will be one of the greatest boosts for Eastern North Carolina . . . and will provide 55 beds at the new Pitt County hospital complex," Rountree said.

Sen. Vernon White, commenting on the General Assembly, pointed to the $25 million operating budget for ECU and the capital improvement funds given by the legislature as major acts.

He also cited appropriations for the rehabilitiation center and for the one year medical school as major accomplishments. Another major step, he said, "We beat back attempts to tie the medical school to a one-year school in the future. . ."

In the field of agriculture, White pointed to new seed laws, ". . so farmers will be assured they can read from the tags and determine just what they are buying as to variety and quality. . "

The pesticide act and funds to implement, White termed "significant for the people, especially in terms of the environment."

White noted too, that secondary education in the state fared well, with "better than a $150 million increase in appropriations above the last biennium."

The General Assembly left one major, and controversial, item of business unsettled, however.

The question of restructuring higher education in the state will face the lawmakers in a special session scheduled to begin October 26.

"The joint Higher Education committees of the House and Senate are tentatively set to begin public hearings in September, prior to the October meeting of the legislature," Rountree noted, "to make recommendations to the General Assembly."

Both Rountree and White are members of the education committees.

"Restructuring? It's a must," Rountree said.

"You get into a position on priorities on capital improvement . . . salaries of various officials and administrators in higher education . . . there's really no board to override the usefulness of positions or duplications of positions . ."

The lack of control and coordination, Rountree expressed, is the main problem.

"There is really no control or direction over research programs," Rountree cited an example. The state, he noted, is spending $7 million in oceanography and marine science, "spread over four different schools and departments of government, with very little coordination." North Carolin State University, ECU, the University of North Carolina at Wilmington and the Department of Administration," Rountree said are all engaged in oceanographic and marine science research.

"Lack of control of student applications . . . duplication throughout the system . . . the difference in tuition costs at various schools . . ." are all in need of coordination, according to the Pitt representatives.

"It appears to me that the Consolidated University is pouring money in these extra campuses (Wilmington, Charlotte and Asheville) in order to boost attendance instead of looking to the schools that already have the attendance. They hope to attract students by building buildings and financing programs and buildings before they have the students. . ."

Rountree charged, "The cost to educate and undergraduate student at Wilmington, Charlotte and Asheville is five to six times more per student than at ECU, Western Carolina University or Applachian State University . . . not including capital improvements."

Rountree said, "This is absolutely what the governor is talking about. Coordination," Rountree noted, "is what the governor says needs to be done."

"Of course, UNC has a $3.5 million staff in the consolidated university office and they've got their system and to heck with Elizabeth City State. . . Fayetteville State, Applachian . . . and they don't want to share it. . ."

"This is where the rub is. All the rest of the schools, in order to expand and serve the state, have to have the same consideration as the Consolidated University. . ."

Appearances Deceiving In Diplomacy

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

At first blush, Premier Chou En-lai's remarks about preconditions for better Washington-Peking relations would seem to rule out significant progress in that direction. But in diplomacy, appearances are supposed to be deceiving.

The fact is that for some time the Communist Chinese regime has been surprisingly flexible—so much so as to arouse suspicion from the Soviet government and Chiang Kai-shek's Formosa-based regime.

At this stage of the three-cornered game being played out by the big powers, statements issued by leading politicians for general consumption often can be taken with large grains of salt.

Chou has listed the Vietnam and Korean problems as among obstacles in the way of normal U.S.-Red Chinese relations. At the same time, Peking's internal propaganda continues to blast the "American imperialists."

The propaganda will coor as long as it serves its internal purpose, and the chief players in the game will pay scant attention to it. As for official statements, perhaps Chou could hardly have been expected to say anything else.

The audience at whom he aimed his remarks included the North Vietnamese and North Koreans, to say nothing of pro-Chinese Communists everywhere who might now be worrying about Peking's revolutionary image.

But Peking would hardly have gone as far as it has into the game unless it expected to benefit thereby, any more than President Nixon's advisers would want him to risk his political neck if there were no hope of concrete result.

Chou's options remain wide open. What is said publicly now can be changed at the will of the Peking leaders, and their propaganda machine can be just as industrious persuading the Chinese that a new line expresses the inspired wisdom of Chairman Mao.

On the record, Chou had been saying that any nations wanting diplomatic ties with Communist China must first recognize its claim to sovereignty over Formosa.

When some nations seeking relations balked at the condition, he arranged matters to avoid embarrassment.

Chou showed yet more flexibility when he opened the door to Americans in the ping pong episode, and again when he received President Nixon's envoy, Henry A. Kissinger.

Chiang, meanwhile, may be painting himself into a corner. Taipei complains about and attacks the United States now, after 21 years of relying on U.S. protection, and indicates if Peking gets into the United Nations, the Chiang government will walk out.

That, in fact, may be a solution to the American dilemma.

Officer Sees Parallel With Japanese Trial

By KATHRYN JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

FT. McPHERSON, Ga. (AP) — Lt. Col. Kenneth Howard, who will preside at the court-martial of Capt. Ernest Medina, says he thinks the Medina case will be "the Yamashita case" all over again.

In an interview Friday, Howard referred to a Japanese general who was tried by the United States after World War II for atrocities committed by his troops in the Philippines.

Medina, 34, goes on trial Monday charged with the premeditated murder of 102 Vietnamese civilians at My Lai in March 1968. The Army has said he is held responsible for the deaths and is not accused of personally slaying 100 civilians. The captain is accused in separate charges of killing two victims himself.

In explaining he charges against Medina, Army Prosecutor William Eckhardt said that Medina is a "principal" to the crimes. Under the Uniform Code of Military Justice, a "principal" is one who "counsels, commands, or procures another to commit an offense..."

That person, said Eckhardt, "is as guilty of the crime as if he had committed it." The prosecutor declined to say whether the Army will prosecute Medina for ordering the massacre at My Lai or for failing to stop it.

Howard said he felt "the approach in Medina's case will be the Yamashita case all over."

The Japanese general, Tomoyuki Yamashita, was hanged for atrocities committed by his troops. The United States never established that Yamashita actually ordered the atrocities, but convicted him for failing to take sufficient measures to stop them.

Medina will be tried on a non-capital basis, which means the maximum sentence a jury could give him would be life imprisonment.

This the second historic My Lai trial Howard has presided over. The first was Sgt. Charles Hutto, who was acquitted of charges arising from the My Lai operation.

The 47-year-old Howard won the Legion of Merit for his work as a military judge in Vietnam.

"What's happened in courts in the My Lai cases is innovative," said Howard. "Things have happened that the Army has never had happen—like arguments being made in one My Lai case in federal court."

He also said he had benefitted considerably from procedures in the Lt. William Calley court-martial. Calley, one of Medina's platoon leaders, was convicted in March of 22 murders at My Lai and sentenced to life. His case now is under review.

"This case is going to go much smoother and faster than Calley's," Howard said, referring to the length of the Calley court-martial. It ran four and a half months—the longest in military history.

The Calley case was given a lengthy delay for a sanity hearing, an issue which has not been brought up in the Medina case.

And, said Howard, defense attorney F. Lee Bailey has said there are many issues he is not going to press—and this will eliminate the calling of witnesses involved with those issues.

New Moon Sights Are To Be Seen

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Television viewers following the flight of Apollo 15 will see mountains, valleys and craters on the moon, with added attractions such as a space walk and the sight of a spacecraft rocketing off the lunar surface.

Two television cameras will be aboard the Apollo 15 spacecraft. One will remain on the command ship for interior views and for the space walk. The other be on the lunar surface and will be remotely operated by mission control.

Here is the television from space schedule for Apollo 15—all times EDT:

Monday, July 26—12:50-1:15 p.m. — Command module docking with lunar module.

Tuesday, July 27—7:20 to 8:05 p.m.—Astronauts transferring to lunar module.

Friday, July 30—10:22 to 10:36 a.m.—View of the Apollo 15 moon landing site.

Saturday, July 31—9:34 a.m. to about 3:14 p.m.—Lunar surface excursion. The camera will be turned off periodically as the astronauts drive the lunar rover car from one point to another.

Sunday, Aug. 1—7:09 a.m. to 1:34 p.m.—The second lunar surface excursion, again with the camera turned off from time to time.

Monday, Aug. 2—3:49 to 9:34 a.m.—The third lunar surface excursion. The camera will be left on the surface, focused on the lunar module.

Monday, Aug. 2—1:04 to 1:34 p.m.—Lunar module is launched off the moon's surface. This is the first time this type of launch has been witnessed.

Monday, Aug. 2—2:37 to 2:43 p.m.—Lunar module rendezvous with command ship by the camera on the command module.

Monday, Aug. 2—3 to 3:05 p.m.—Lunar module docks with command ship.

Thursday, Aug. 5—11:44 a.m. to 12:14 p.m.—Space walk by Astronaut Alfred M. Worden. His crewmates, David R. Scott and James B. Irwin, will operate the television camera while Worden goes outside the spacecraft to retrieve film from the science camera in the service module and take it back of the command module.

Friday, Aug. 6—4 to 4:30 p.m.—News conference from space. Astronauts will answer questions from newsmen and relayed by mission control.

Also possible on Aug. 6, is a televised solar eclipse using the camera left on the moon.

There will be more than 22 hours of television beamed to earth from space during the 12 day mission.

Ellsberg Brief Is Filed

BOSTON (AP) — Dr. Daniel Ellsberg's lawyer, Leonard B. Boudin, filed a brief in federal court Friday opposing Ellsburg's return to California to face a charge of illegal possession of the Pentagon papers. Ellsberg has admitted leaking the papers to the new media.

Boudin's brief said, "The sole question the defendant has raised before this court is whether an arrest warrant issued in California can ... be enforced by issuance of a removal warrant in this district despite the fact the arrest warrant is the product of illegal conduct by the government."

Boudin asked at a hearing July 15 that the government be required to disclose whether the warrant was based on any evidence obtained by wiretaps.

The brief sought "suppression of the arrest warrant and not the dismissal of the indictment."

Ellsberg was indicted in Los Angeles for unauthorized possession of defense information and for converting government property to his own use. The government said he had access to the papers while employed by the Rand Corp.

S. C. Tobacco Is 'Top Quality'

FLORENCE, S. C. (UPI) — South Carolina's multi-million dollar tobacco crop which goes to market Aug. 3 is a "top quality, low nicotine crop," according to a Clemson extension tobacco specialist.

"Excellent, beautiful a real top-notch crop," is the way Don A. Benton sums up the 1971 market situation in the state.

Benton said about 60,000 acres of the high quality leaf is beginning to move into the curing barns, adding "this appears to be a low nicotine crop — something the buyers have been wanting."

The Federal Crop Reporting Service has estimated average yields will be about 2,100 pounds an acre, giving the state a total poundage of about 135,450,000, Benton said.

He said that with the Crop Stabilization Service announcing price supports of 69.4 cents per pound, hopes are that cash sales may well go well above $90 million. Tobacco is already the state's largest cash crop.

Benton said the crop has been aided by "good rainfall distribution and our growers following recommendations."

Some 3,000 acres in a half dozen counties were severely battered by hail in June, but the damage was confined to localized areas. However, potential acreage earlier estimated by the Crop Stabilization Service at 64,500 acres.

The 11 South Carolina auction markets will open for sales Aug. 3, the same day as the Georgia-Florida and North Carolina belt markets. The selling period for the Palmetto State markets usually lasts from six to nine weeks.

Marion S. Fowler, executive secretary of the State Tobacco Warehouse Association, has called this year's crop "one of the most promising of this decade."

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Gov. Bob Scott has appointed Kenneth A. Griffith, a former solicitor, to the state District Court.

Speed Limits Set

Motorists traveling from Greenville to Kinston along the recently completed N.C. 11 will notice several changes in speed limit regulations.

Phil Dickerson, an official in the N.C. Highway Commission's Sign Department, said that from the bypass to the Greenville city limits, new signs depicting 45 mile per hour limits have been set. From the city limits to just south of Pitt Technical Institute, the new speed limit will be 50 mph. The official said that from the area just south of Pitt Tech to the south end of the Grifton bypass, the posted speed will be 60 mph and from there to just beyond Du Pont, motorists will be in a 55 mph zone.

Dickerson said that all of the new signs are now up along the highway and he cautioned motorists to be aware of the various speed changes.

Pedestrian Hurt Here Friday

A 47-year old pedestrian was injured here Friday when hit by a moving automobile and thrown against a parked car.

Investigating police said the man, William G. Moore, 47, 209 Elm St., was injured in the 10 p.m. mishap when a car driven Bertha Mae Bount, 30, 811B Bancroft Drive hit him, throwing him against a parked car owned by William Roland Keller, 23, Rt. 8, Box 716B.

Officers, who charged Bertha Mae Blount with failing to see her movement could be made in safety, placed damage for her car at $25, while estimating that for the Kellar car as $50.

Visits Made After Crowds

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A day or so after an outdoor event which has drawn a big crowd, Ralph Walters likes to visit the area with his metal detector.

Walters, a barber, has a tackle box full of $160 worth of coins he has found. He figures that in another year he will have made back the $270 he invested in the metal detector he bought a year and a half ago when he wanted an outdoor hobby.

He also has found a couple of diamond rings, and some class rings. He has tried to get the rings back to their owners if possible.

Tar Heel Delegation In Montreal

MONTREAL, Que. (AP) — A delegation of Tar Heels led by Atty. Gen. Robert Morgan visited Montreal Saturday to promote North Carolina as a travel spot.

The visit, which is to last through Sunday, is part of the city government's "Folk Culture" fair. Saturday was designated as "North Carolina Day" in programs arranged by the U.S. Travel Service to acquaint Canadians with travel spots in the United States.

The summer-long programs are being staged in what was the U.S. Pavilion of Expo '67.

With Morgan on the promotional tour are Charles Barbour, head of the Travel and Promotion Division of the Department of Conservation and Development, and Hugh Morton, owner of Grandfather Mountain.

ONE MILLION HOMELESS

NEW DELHI (UPI) —More than one million people have been left homeless by floods along the Ganges River and its tributaries in the eastern states of West Bengal and Bihar, Indian news agencies reported Saturday. The agencies also reported about $2.7 million in crop damage.

Obituary

Forrest

Mrs. Mollie Harper Forrest, 78, died in Beaufort County Hospital in Washington Thursday night at 8:45. Cannot Buy Liquor

Question Of What 18 Year Olds Can Do Muddled

By YVONNE BASKIN
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina 18-year-olds definitely can get tatooed, adopt children, serve on juries or run for sheriff. They cannot buy liquor or pilot ships on the Cape Fear River.

New specific cases like these, the whole question of what persons between the ages of 18 and 21 can do is in a muddle.

The 1971 General Assembly granted to persons 18 and older the full rights of legal adulthood, a move which top state officials and legislative leaders predict will change the whole complexion of North Carolina's political and social life.

But the state Attorney General's office says it will be months before lawyers and the courts analyze just how the change affects specific areas of the law and begin establishing precedents and broad guidelines.

"As soon as we can we're going to try to go into it and analyze what the general effect will be," Atty. Gen. Robert Morgan said. "But we drafted over 5,000 bills this session and we haven't even had time to catch our breath."

Meanwhile, the best advice anyone seems to be able to give to 18-year-olds with questions about their rights is "get a lawyer."

"That's the best advice anybody can give now because each case turns on its own merits," said Christine Denson, a member of Morgan's office who headed the legislative bill drafting office.

"But the problem with that now is that the lawyers don't have a copy of the bill yet," she said.

The legislation spelling out the rights of 18-year-olds — which was sponsored by Sen. Zebulon Alley, D-Haywood — was enacted Wednesday, the day the legislature adjourned. An earlier bill by Alley changing the definition of a minor went into effect July 5.

In the crush of last-minute paperwork, even members of the attorney general's staff were not able to get copies of the new law before the week was out, and it will be next week sometime before the lawyers of the state can sit down to begin working out the specific applications of the bill.

Basically, the new law means that every place in the statutes which refers to minors refers to persons under 18 instead of persons under 21. The bill enacted Wednesday changes the wording of laws which before used the specific age of 21.

This bill, for example, allowed 18-year-olds to get tattoos, serve on juries, be sheriffs, insurance agents, detectives, bail bondsmen or forest rangers and drive city buses.

The new laws also give 18-year-olds full financial independence—the right to sign binding contracts and the full responsibility for upholding them; the right to sue or be sued; the right to operate a business and buy or sell land, and the responsibility for paying ad valorem and other taxes; and the full accountability for their own debts. They can also get medical treatment—including abortions—without parental consent.

Parents are also freed of the legal responsibility for supporting offspring who have reached majority—age 18.

But no one has yet worked out whether and how the law will affect such things as the income tax exemptions for dependents, the definition of dependent in the laws dealing with welfare program and—perhaps the biggest gray area of all— the statutes concerning guardianships and property or funds held in trust.

The problem in the latter area is basically with written instruments—deeds, wills, insurance policies—signed before July 5, the day the definition of a minor changed.

An unsuccessful last-minute drive in the state Senate to repeal or delay for two years the effect of the adulthood change was largely based on the confusion clerks of court across the state were experiencing when young people between 18 and 21 began asking for trust funds and other matters being handled for them by guardians to be turned over to them.

Mrs. Denson said her office would release Monday or Tuesday an opinion concerning guardianship matters, but she said it would not be very clearcut. Basically, it will suggest that young people with questions about their own situations get themselves a lawyer.

In general, in cases where the written document says a person is to receive control of certain monies or interests when he reaches majority, the new law would apply. If the instrument specifies 21 or another age, the new law probably would not change that age.

As other specific problems areas become defined, the attorney general's office will issue opinions on them, and some conflicts or confusions may have to be worked out by the 1973 legislature.

For example, the federal constitutional amendment which gave 18-year-olds the right to vote also gave them the right to run for office in North Carolina since the state Constitution says qualified voters may run. But the state constitutional amendment to lower the voting age, which will be put to the voters in November of 1972, would also change the wording of the document to limit officeholding to persons 21 or older.

For Brazilian Officers

'Orientation Tours' Said Costly

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Pentagon has spent more than $1 million flying future Brazilian military officers to the United States for two-week "orientation tours" including nightclub shows in Las Vegas, trips to Disneyland, poolside luaus, 15-gun salutes and accommodations in plush hotels.

The Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee on Latin America released a hearing transcript containing the Defense Department's accounting of the trips. The bills for the tours in 1968, 1969 and 1970 added up to $1,163,902.

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, the subcommittee chairman, said the trips were "junkets."

But Maj. Gen. George S. Beatty, who runs the orientation program, testified "orientation visits provide a unique opportunity to acquaint selected groups of current and future leaders with U.S. culture, technology and government. To the staff and command schools, these visits mean knowledge of the United States at a formulative time of the officers' development."

Church questioned whether the United States has become too closely identified with the "repressive Brazilian government." He said Brazilian military and police, which the United States helps to train, operate without political or judicial restraints.

The orientation tours for Brazil's future military leaders consisted mainly of visits to U.S. military bases, briefings by American officers and examination of U.S. military equipment.

The Brazilian delegations did not stay in barracks or officers quarters, but in such hotels as the Sheraton Park in Washington, the Sheraton-Palace in San Francisco, the Edgewater Hyatt House in Los Angeles and the Flamingo in Las Vegas.

The 59 visitors from the Brazilian Naval War College, at a cost to American taxpayers of $67,090, got a 15-gun salute in San Diego at the Naval Training Center, a tour of Universal Studios in Hollywood, a trip to Disneyland and "lunch at the Blue Bayou."

In New London, Conn., there was a beach party on July 27, 1968, for 74 visitors from the Brazilian Naval War College, who were here for two weeks at a cost of $90,000. Other groups got a poolside luau in Charleston, S.C., a "visit to Radio City Music Hall as guests of the Coca Cola Company and, in San Francisco, a reception on "Treasure Island."

King Hassan II, Agnew Hold Meet

By STEVE GERSTEL

RABAT, Morocco (UPI) — Vice President Spiro T. Agnew and King Hassan II met for nearly two hours Saturday in the exact spot where two weeks ago about 100 persons were massacred in a bloody attempt to overthrow the ruler of Morocco.

With only a few bullet holes in the cream-colored walls left as a reminder of the carnage, Hassan opened his summer palace at Skirat near Rabat for the first time since a group of high-ranking officers backed by 1,600 cadets tried to take control of Morocco.

The most stringent security on Agnew's round-the-world diplomatic mission, and the abreviated stay in Rabat, attested to the aftermath of the attempted coup.

Another reminder was Prince Moulay Abdullah, the king's brother, whose arm was enclosed in a cast as he welcomed Agnew at the airport along with the eight year-old crown prince, Sidi Mohamed. Prince Abdullah was in obvious pain.

The king's brother and the crown prince rode with Agnew in the bullet-proof vice presidential limousine as a symbolic gesture to prove that absolute security was being provided.

Agnew flew here from Malaga, Spain. From the airport his car drove the 25 minutes to Skirat in a tightly guarded motorcade with a military helicopter hovering overhead. Every few hundred yards a soldier or a plainclothesman guarded the route.

Hassan, appearing relaxed and jovial, greeted Agnew at the entrance to the palace and led him across a large patio into a wood-paneled conference room. Almost at the exact time two weeks ago 1,000 guests had assembled on the patio built around a swimming pool and facing the Atlantic ocean when the rebels struck.

In the next few hours about 70 guests and 30 servants were gunned down.

Hassan escaped unscathed, crushed the revolt, and three days later ordered the execution of a number of high-ranking officers. In all, the coup cost Morocco nine of its 16 generals.

Agnew and Hassan, accompanied only by an interpreter and U.S. Ambassador Stuart Rockwell, talked for about 25 minutes.

The vice president and the king then dined on the patio, feasting on lamb, chicken, shishkebab, caviar, slamon, cheeses, and moroccan delicacies.

After the meal Hassan, Agnew, Rockwell and Gen. John M. Dunn, the vice president's military aide, retired to wicker chairs under a multicolored umbrella which shielded them from the hot sun.

They continued their conversation for a half hour. Although no details were given, it was believed they conferred about the Middle East situation and about additional economic aid to Morocco.

Ralph Scott Says Gov. Had Support Of Pres. Friday

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Bob Scott said Saturday his uncle's statement that the governor understood he had the support of University of North Carolina President William Friday when he called for a further consolidation of higher education "is absolutely correct."

Sen. Ralph Scott, D-Alamance, had said earlier Saturday that Friday shifted positions under pressure from trustees. "It was not necessarily an agreement with Friday," he said. "But the governor got the idea from Bill Friday that he agreed this was what should be done."

Sen. Scott also said a telephone interview that he recalled a casual convensation in which the governor said it was Friday who gave him the idea for setting up a regents system to control all the state's public universities.

"He said Bill Friday was the one who led him into it. Then he said, 'he (Friday) left me'—I believe that's the way he put it," Sen. Scott said.

The senator, who also is a UNC trustee, said Friday changed his position due to strong pressure from four powerful members of the UNC Board of Trustees Executive Committee.

He identified the four as Archie K. Davis of Winston-Salem, president of Wachovia Bank and Trust Co.; Watts Hill Sr. of Durham; Tom White of Kinston, former state senator and a member of the Advisory Budget Commission; and Victor Bryant, a Durham attorney.

"I think these people studied the plan and didn't like it and decided to oppose it," Sen. Scott said. "They were afraid they'd lose their power, and they backed off from it.

"There is no doubt in my mind that they would have fired him if he didn't change his position on the matter of higher education consolidation.

"Anything I'm saying is not derogatory toward Bill Friday. He's got a difficult job to perform. Also, he had a right to change his mind if he wanted to.

"If those four people hadn't come along, you wouldn't have had any of all this controversy," Sen. Scott said.

Gov. Scott, contacted while in Asheville, said Friday changed his position on the matter. "I don't know why, but I must strongly suspect the reasons cited by Sen. Scott are the facts."

The governor said he didn't know Friday's true feelings on the matter, however, "since he is employed by the trustees, who are controlled by the power bloc in the executive committee—said trustees having no real say about how the university is run—Dr. Friday is not free to speak his true feelings."

"And I am convinced," the governor added, "after watching all the pressure applied to him by this power bloc that he would have to resign if he revealed how he really feels."

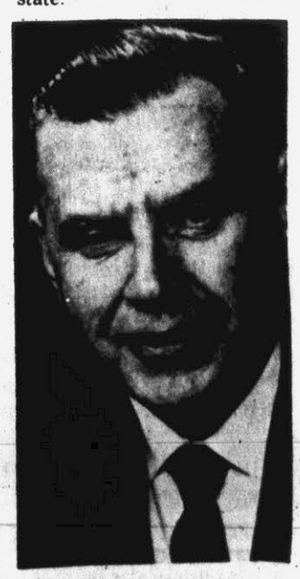

"I regret that Dr. Friday does not have the freedom of expression as president of the university that universities are usually so proud to uphold.

Friday, reached at his home in Chapel Hill, said he did not want to comment on Scott's remarks.

The senator made his first remarks on the subject in Greensboro during a taping session of WFMY-TV's Newsmakers program. In that interview he said the governor and Friday at one time had an agreement on restructuring higher education. But he said later that it was more an understanding that Scott had reached through talks with Friday.

"Friday evidently led him to believe the idea was allright," Sen. Scott said.

UNC has been conducting an intense campaign against the governor's plan for creating a new UNC System to governor all 16 public universities in the state.

Retarded Boy Flees Rescuers

By DANIEL TAYLOR

CASPER, Wyo. (UPI)—The mother of a retarded and epileptic boy who for six days has fled through the rugged Casper Mountain canyons from those who want to save him, said Saturday her son was probably frightened because he had not taken his tranquilizer medicine for almost a week.

She was confident her son would be found safe.

"I think we will find him today," Mrs. Phillip Dye said. "This is the first time I've felt that way."

Her 9-year-old son Kevin has eluded thousands of searchers, trained dogs, helicopters and skilled professional trappers. He has built himself shelter at night, stolen food and eaten a cake left out for the birds.

At least 100 National Guradsmen went into the area Saturday.

Another 100 Boy Scouts went into the treacherous canyons, as well as about 75 volunteer workers.

Sheriff Bill Estes said the search tactics Saturday were a vast change from the way it had been handled during the week.

"We are using only trained people now," he said. "Earlier this week we had thousands of people, unorganized, blundering around in the canyon. But now everyone in the area is a trained, certified searcher and knows what he's doing."

Mrs. Dye said she has continually been optimistic about Kevin's chances for survival in the mountain wilderness.

"He is a physically healthy, very sturdy little boy," she said. "The only reason he runs from people is because he has been off his medication for six days."

He was taking nine tranquilizers a day before he left from in front of a cabin for his marathan flight through the wilderness.

Helicopter crews and ground searchers spotted him at least four times since the hunt began.

Mrs. Dye said Kevin is normally "warm, extremely affectionate social boy when he is on his medication." But she said he becomes "extremely afraid and runs away from people" when he doesn't have it.

Tito Visit Being Planned

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — President Tito says he will visit the United States this fall, returning President Nixon's 1970 trip to Yugoslavia.

Tito did not give a specific date for his trip, but inquired Friday about October weather in Washington and said he looked forward to the visit.

Referring to Nixon's planned trip to Communist China, Tito said it was a wonderful initiative which should contribute to better relations among nations.

State Council Meets Here For A Workshop

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Robert L. Denny, in Greenville for an inservice workshop for the North Carolina Council on Mental Retardation and Developmental Disorders, spoke about recently enacted legislation affecting the retarded.

Denny is executive director of the Council.

The council's name was changed by the legislature. "Developmental Disorders" was added and the Council was given a mandate to act on behalf of persons having neurological disorders like cerebral palsy and epilepsy, as well as for the retarded.

A recommendation by the Council to provide a sliding scale of charges to parents for care of children in centers for the retarded was adopted. During the last legislative session, a $12-a-day charge that most parents found prohibitive was imposed, so this year's action was a rescinding one.

The establishment of a statewide system of early childhood education for the handicapped was provided and Denny called this a landmark action. "This act makes it possible for public school systems across the state to use their teacher allotment to develop programs for children with disabilities before they reach first grade or even kindergarten age. "Research has proved that early intervention such as this minimizes or even prevents some disorders and reduces the stigma which the child might feel. We really are thrilled with the possibilities we see for this type of program," Denny said.

"Our biggest disappointment was that all our request for expansion of the state's Developmental Evaluation Clinic program was turned down. "Diagnosis of learning and other disabilities is the key and it's one we must have to make use of all our other resources. Our clinics are severely overworked. For instance, the one here in Greenville must serve all of eastern North Carolina with a limited staff. I hope this need can be made clearer to the General Assembly by next session."

Money for the direct care of patients at centers like O'Berry and Caswell were increased. More cottage parents can be hired with the money provided.

Funds were allocated to provide for programs on the community levels for retarded and neurologically disabled children of all ages. It will be up to local Mental Health Clinics to develop programs and obtain these funds, Denny said. There are many needful areas such as adult day care, homes for released retarded center residents, and the like.

The Council and others who worked for it were pleased with a law making it mandatory for any professional person who sees an abused child to report it. A Social Services person and-or law enforcement officer will investigate and testify when necessary leaving the reporter liability-free. "It is predicted that the number of child abuse cases detected may rise from about 3,000 a year across the state to 5,000 or more, Denny said.

Money for training and attracting people to the mental retardation field was allocated. "These funds will be used in our universities, community colleges, and technical institutes to good advantage," Denny said.

"All in all, it wasn't the best of years, but we will do the best we can with what we have for our retarded children," Denny said, "and will be expanding our program fields like cerebral palsy whose victims have not previously had an advocate on the state level. We have some interesting prospects."

Dep't. Chairman Plans Talks

Dr. Vila M. Rosenfeld, chairman of Home Economics Education in the School of Home Economics at East Carolina University, will address two groups of vocational home economics teachers during August.

On August 4, Dr. Rosenfeld will address the Virginia Vocational Home Economics Teachers at Hotel Roanoke, Roanoke, Va., on the topic of "Perceptual Learning".

On August 11, she will report at the Greensboro meeting of the N. C. Vocational Home Economics Teachers on research entitled "Evaluation of the 1969-70 In-Service Education Program for North Carolina Vocational Home Economics Teachers".

Sudan Executes More Officers

By GERARD LOUGHRAN

BEIRUT (UPI) —Sudan executed three more rebel army officers involved in this week's short-lived coup Saturday and ordered Iraq to close its embassy at Khartoum, the official Sudanese radio said.

The executions raised to seven the number reported killed by firing squads as a result of the coup by leftist army officers who seized power from President Maj. Gen. Jaafar Numeiry Monday and were in turn ousted by Numeiry Thursday.

Sudan's Omdurman radio identified the men shot Saturday as Lt. Col. Hahgoub Ibrahim, Col. Bashir Abdel Razek and Lt. Ahmed Bonar, all key figures in the coup. It said military courts tried them and sentenced them to be stripped of their insignia, cashiered from the armed forces and shot dead.

Numeiry approved the sentences, the broadcast said. Omdurman radio announced the execution of four officers Friday.

The Egyptian Middle East News Agency quoted Omdurman radio as saying that Sudan ordered Iraq to close its Khartoum embassy and send all of its officials home within 24 hours. Sudan also announced the closing of its Baghdad embassy and the recall of its officials, the news agency said.

Iraq was the only arab country to announce support for the coup.

A planeload of Iraqi Baath party and army officials, on their way to Khartoum to congratulate the coup leaders at Jeddah, Saudi Arabia, crashed thursday killing 11 and injuring a number of others.

Baghdad radio said Iraqi President Ahmed Hassan Al-Bakr Saturday attended the funeral of those killed in the crash and thousands of Iraqis took part in a procession through the streets of Baghdad.

In London, Foreign Secretary Sir Alec Douglas-Home asked Numeiry to show clemency to two Sudanese revolutionary leaders seized from a British airliner in Libya.

Cairo radio said Lt. Col. Babkr Al Nour and Maj. Farouk Osman Hamadallah were returned from Libya to Khartoum Friday. They had been taken Thursday from a British Overseas Airways Corporation VC10 that Libyan authorities ordered to land at Benghazi.

Legislators To Be Commended

Pitt Countians owe a debt of gratitude to members of our legislative delegation and local officials who worked long and hard to bring about a $375,000 state appropriation for a regional rehabilitation center here.

The prospects for obtaining the funding appeared dark indeed at one time during the session of the Legislature which was just concluded. However, as the result of considerable work the funds were approved by the Joint Appropriations Committee late in the session and the appropriation was subsequently made.

The state will provide $25,000 in planning funds and $350,000 in construction money for the center. This should lead to a federal grant for 61 percent of the project cost or about $1.14 million. Pitt County will provide the remainder of the $1,875,000 needed to construct the unit.

The center will be built as a part of the new Pitt Memorial Hospital, for whcih bonds funds have been approved by county voters. Planning is now underway for this new structure to be placed on land west of the present Pitt Memorial site.

In addition to the obvious advantage of having the state rehabilitation center here, the unit will also provide about 50 hospital beds, some of which will be available for use by county patients at times.

Some outstanding work was done by Reps. Horton Rountree and Sam Bundy and Sens. Vernon White and Julian Allsbrook in getting the appropriations for the rehabilitation center included in the budget. A number of county officials also spent considerable time working on the project.

The regional rehabilitation center will be a splendid addition to the growing complex of health related facilities which is growing up here.

Good News If Hospital Timetable Stepped Up

Among the good news coming out about the progress of medical care and training, is an estimate by Pitt Memorial Hospital architects that the new structure might move ahead of schedule.

Freeman and White reported to the board of trustees that if present plans for arrangement of buildings are pursued, the new structure may be occupied by the summer of 1974 instead of the following year.

Since the new hospital is to be coordinated with other things happening here — the rehabilitation center and the medical school being good examples — the speeded up schedule will be welcomed. It is important also to remember that the present hospital has about reached capacity. Thus the year that we gain might be critical in providing needed patient beds.

Floor-Sweeper To Ministry

By JAN YOUNG
(The Gastonia Gazette)

GASTONIA, N.C. — In 1936, Floyd Massey, Jr., then 21 years old and a recent graduate of Johnson C. Smith University, found himself sweeping floors at First Baptist Church.

Jobs were hard to come by in the 1930s. Massey had wanted to be a teacher, but no positions were available. A former shoeshine boy, he worked as head janitor at the Gastonia church.

"Dr. Bartlett Bowers was the preacher then," he recalled. "I always came into the church when I was working to hear his sermons."

Bowers' sermons must have impressed Massey. Shortly thereafter, he traded his broom and dustpan for the ministry and a Doctor of Divinity degree in 1955 from Johnson C. Smith University in Charlotte.

Dr. Massey returned to his hometown of Gastonia last Sunday to serve as guest minister at First Baptist. He is reportedly the first black man to preach at the all-white church.

"And he was tremendous," said one member.

Warmly Received

The church was nearly full, with attendance estimated at 950, to hear Dr. Massey.

Host pastor Dr. Douglas Aldrich said, "He was just very good, very fine. The congregation responded very warmly to him."

His sermon topic was "Encounter With Jesus."

Today, Dr. Massey is pastor of the 1,400-member Macedonia Baptist Church located in the Watts section of Los Angeles, Calif.

After 26 years in the ministry and dealing with human relations, Dr. Massey is more concerned about the plight of the black man and the white man than ever before.

"My greatest disappointment in my service to the public is that the silent majority of good people, both black and white, have let a small minority of right and left wingers, both black and white, push us into polarization. The result is that neither the black nor the white trust each other," he said.

Silence Hurts Country

"It's hurting our country. I'm sure that both good blacks and whites could get along today if the silent majority would decide to do something about these left and right wingers, whether black or white."

From 1944 to 1965, Dr. Massey was minister of the largest black church, Pilgrim Baptist, in St. Paul, Minn. He was vice chairman of the Governor's Commission on Human Rights, serving under three Minnesota governors. He was the first black to serve as secretary of the Planning Board, City of St. Paul.

"I was so busy at that time that I didn't even realize 21 years had passed," said the minister.

Dr. Massey received a call to the Macedonia Church during 1965, while the buildings were still smoldering from the racial riots that had gripped Watts.

He Accepted Challenge

"Everyone in St. Paul thought I was crazy for going," he said. "I considered it quite a challenge."

Arriving in Watts, the minister found the area in shambles.

"The churches weren't damaged," he said. "Only the white businesses in the neighborhood had been ramsacked."

Since Dr. Massey took charge at Macedonia, membership has increased 50 per cent and the yearly giving has doubled. The church has been able to acquire insurance on its property—something that few buildings in Watts were able to obtain after the riots.

Macedonia is the largest black church in Los Angeles.

Dr. Massey cited a career highlight as an invitation he received in 1967 to be keynote speaker at the American Baptist Convention.

What did he think about as he stood in the pulpit of First Baptist, where he once had been janitor?

"I was really deeply touched. I could remember all those people who since had passed on. I remembered Dr. Bowers preaching. It was a wonderful moment."

Dr. Massey is married to the former Ethel Hurley of Johnston, S.C. They have three sons.

Legislators Plan Ahead

By MELVIN LANG
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Future generations can thank the 1971 North Carolina General Assembly for initiating action to assure clean water and clean air decades ahead.

From Bald Head Island to the tiny mountain stream, the legislature took the first steps toward protecting North Carolina's ecology—especially pollution of its streams.

Legislation approved in the closing days of the session provided for a statewide referendum to decide of $150 million in bonds should be issued for new water and sewage treatment facilities.

Sen. Hector McGeachy, D-Cumberland, prime sponsor of the referendum bill, said the bond issue would ensure clean water for at least five years. The money would produce $700 million through matching federal and local funds.

With the money in hand, said House sponsor Rep. Richard Lane Brown, D-Stanley, state and local governments could "bring North Carolina and its localities current with their needs for adequate water supply and clean streams."

The enabling legislation directed Gov. Bob Scott to schedule a referendum no later than May 6, 1972.

The clean water bill was among a package of environmental measures enacted by the General Assembly, which was praised by Scott for its interest in ecology and conservation.

Legislators accepted major portions of Scott's environmental program, including laws protecting coastal swampland and sand dunes and rivers throughout the state.

Included in the legislation was an Environmental Policy Act that makes North Carolina the first Southern state whose government is required to study environmental impact before any construction project is undertaken.

The coastal protection includes requirements that a state permit must be obtained before dredging or excavation can be conducted in marshes and swamps.

A state system of natural and scenic rivers protected by law was authorized, but the selection of waterways to be included was left up to future legislatures.

Monitoring systems also were ordered for industries emitting pollutants into the air, and new standards were set for exhaust emissions from automobiles.

A law sponsored by Rep. Norwood Bryan, D-Cumberland, gives private citizens the right to sue state agencies to make them enforce water and air pollution standards, offering a safeguard against lax enforcement.

Possibly more publicized than any was the legislature's defeat of Sen. Bunn Frink's proposal to bar state condemnation of Bald Head Island. The Brunswick County senator sought legislative encouragement of private development for the island lying off Southport in the mouth of the Cape Fear River.

Gov. Scott has called repeatedly for state acquisition of Bald Head Island to preserve its ecological and historical value.

Sunday Morning Notes

Mrs. Lillian Trotman and her daughter Edith, along with other family members, stopped at a camper park in the North Carolina mountains on their way back from a trip to Six Flags Over Georgia.

They bought some cantaloupes and had one left when they prepared to leave, so they offered it to an older couple camping nearby. The couple accepted it graciously and the Trotmans left for Greenville.

A few days later Edith left on another trip to the mountains with her brother and his family. They went to the same camping park and found the same space.

In a few hours a man came over and told them he was preparing to leave. He said he had an extra cantaloupe that he would be glad to give them.

Then he looked intently at Edith. "Weren't you here last weekend?" he asked.

"Yes," she laughed.

"Well," the man answered. "It looks like I'm giving you your cantaloupe back."

Two people were fishing at the river bank alongside the walkway off First Street one recent summer day.

One was dropping his line in the water near the shore line. He hadn't caught anything.

The other was skillfully casting to a certain spot on the opposite side of the river. He had half a bucket full of fish.

It's got to be a science.

News For Tass

(The Boston Globe)

Tass news agency, which says only what Moscow wants it to way, has put out a story to the effect that the United States's celebration of its 200th anniversary in 1976 will not mask our social and economic difficulties. The answer, of course, is that it wouldn't be the United States if its social and economic difficulties were hidden. It would, in fact, be the Soviet Union or any of her Communist satellites or rivals.

The Tass story points to the publication of the Pentagon papers as the latest example of the "Crisis of confidence" which is "rocking contemporary American society." We take this as one more proof that Tass, unfortunately, doesn't know what America is all about.

Seen from the viewpoint that allows no opposite opinion in its press, the publication of secret documents — even historical documents — must indeed seem alarming and a sign of weakness. But we take it as a sign of great strength.

Has Moscow forgotten that one of the first acts of its own revolutionary leaders in 1917 was to publish for all the world to see the secret treaties that had been made before and during World War I?

The Soviet regime proceeds today on the assumption that it is dangerous and a sign of weakness for a government to be open and frank with its own people. Unfortunately, too many of our own leaders in the past and the present have had the same notion, albeit for different purposes.

What all of them should realize is that government is strongest and most beneficent when it comes clean with its own people, making public the bad news as well as the good. That means being really on the same level as an open and fair and honest exchange of either opinions or goods between individuals.

We have, to be sure, plenty of ills, both internal and external. But we won't cure any of them by keeping them a secret. That is why we believe that when our 200th anniversary rolls around our country, while it will still have troubles, will nevertheless be in considerably better shape than those which are not allowed to enjoy the blessings of freedom.

Opinion In Brief

"There seems to be a connection between the state of our national economy and the national highway traffic fatalities. Fewer accidents when money is harder to get is the formula. There is always something good that comes of everything." — Bridgeport (Ill.) Leader.

ELKHART, Ind. (AP) — In Elkhart, "The City With A Heart," bitter fighting broke out among small groups of black and white high school students this spring.

The fighting spilled into the streets. Police had to break up the brawls. Officers patrolled the city heavily for the rest of the week to keep roming bands of angry youths from attacking each other. High school classes were postponed for a week.

Why?

Why would racial trouble come to a city with integrated schools, an open housing ordinance, equal employment opportunity, a black school board member and a black airport manager, a low unemployment rate, a high average income?

Elkhart may well typify the situation in the small cities of the Middle West today—the towns which suddenly find themselves facing racial outbreaks they thought happened only in the big cities.

Ask some Elkhartans why, and they may cite "polarization":

—"I've found myself becoming prejudiced over the past few years, and it really bothers me," said a white professional woman. "I think it's because of all the problems the militant blacks are creating."

—"It's sad that we don't seem to make any progress until right after there is some kind of disturbance," said a black professional man.

Elkhart is a city of just over 43,000 at the tip of the industrial area which stretches eastward from Chicago into Indiana.

There are a little over 4,000 blacks in Elkhart. Many of their ancestors migrated from the South, attracted by the multitude of jobs at the railroad division point during the age of the steam engine.

As racial disturbances go, Elkhart's wasn't a big one. Things have been worse in other Indiana cities. And things have been much worse in nearby states.

But the May disturbances frightened the people of Elkhart —especially when Edith Pasley, president of the local chapter of the NAACP, scheduled protest march downtown on May 22.

Mrs. Pasley called off the march, but she and NAACP officials delivered a list of demands to Mayor John Weaver and other white leaders that day, and later discussed the demands with city officials.

"There's no difference, really, in the demands made by blacks in Charlotte, N.C., or in Elkhart," Weaver said. "And I think some of their complaints are legitimate. But the mayor just doesn't have the authority to do anything about many of these things."

The big gripes concern housing, employment and education.

Theoretically, it is possible for a Negro to buy or rent a home anywhere in Elkhart, if he has the money.

"But something always comes up to stop it," said Mrs. Pasley. "It's more subtle now. Maybe you can't get your mortgage approved."

"Even though you make enough money, maybe they'll say that since you've only been on the job five years you might be laid off if there is a recession."

Strength For Today

LIBERTY

What is citizenship? It is the status of being a citizen, and the word "citizen" means "a member of a state...who owes allegiance to government and is entitled to reciprocal protection from it." It is opposed to the word "alien." A citizen is entitled to the protection of life, liberty and property at home and abroad.

We who live in free countries regard citizenship under freedom a blessing too precious to describe in ordinary terms. If we try in our imagination to project ourselves back a thousand years when freedom was almost unknown in the wrold which then called itself civilized, we can see how precious citizenship under liberty is today. Not all countries are free. There are areas in our own national life which contradict freedom. Crime, tyranny, hatred of certain groups — these things belie true citizenship. And if we allow ourselves to give in to these evils at all, we soon find that we are unhappy and worse than certain people we may call our enemies.

It is a wonderful thing to be free provided we use our freedom in a way that helps us and helps others. If we hate any group simply because that group does not agree with everything we believe, then such liberty is a corrupting influence, not by any means a blessing.

There are tyrannies in the world that have lasted for centuries. Our hope and expectation is that they will eventually be overwhelmed. "Now the Lord is that spirit and where the spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty" (II Corinthians 3:17).

Little Fellow Was There First

By ELMER ROESSNER

Aquarius? No, this is the Age of the Consumer.

Perhaps never before in history have corporations been under so much pressure to respect the rights of the consumer. The Federal Trade Commission, Ralph Nader, Better Business Bureaus, Consumers Union, and hundreds of consumer, mothers, ecological organizations touch off blasts daily on behalf of consumers. Even the Food and Drug Administration, the Department of Agriculture and a few other government regulatory agencies occasionally waggle a finger at naughty companies.

It is difficult to find a business magazine these days without an article counseling readers to go along with the game. The prestigious Committee for Economic Development has just published a 74-page book on "Social Responsibilities of Business Corporations" stating that corporations have a real duty, not only to consumers, but to minorities, environment and society.

All of this is aimed at corporations, the bigger the better target. And what about the little businessman?

An Old Story

Why, bless you, the little fellow has been socially conscious and consumer conscious for years, for hundreds of years.

Most little fellows haven't any published guarantees, but they will give a customer his or her money back if the customer finds fault.

They are prime targets for every civic fund-raising drive. They are the first to be hit by every local charity campaign.

I was in a small grocery one day when a pretty girl came in and asked the proprietor if he would buy a raffle ticket to benefit a local church. He opened a drawer beside the cash register and said, "Look, Miss!" the drawer was full of raffle tickets, dance tickets and other evidences of donations. Nevertheless, he bought one more 25 cent ticket.

The small shopkeeper may be a dedicated atheist, yet he is bound to be a contributor to every church and temple in his area. It's good business, despite his convictions. So is corporate consideration of consumers today.

Origin Of The Rackets

Years ago, groups of boys would organize dances and sell tickets to, among others, neighborhood stores. These dances became aptly known as "rackets." Storekeepers were such sure touches that some began selling dance tickets without ever holding the dances. Then they dropped the pretence of holding dances and charged for "protection." And thus the rackets were born.

Meanwhile, shopkeepers became a principal support for policemen's, sanitation men's and other city employees' balls, knowing what was good for them. And many a small establishment is willing, even eager, to have the cops drop in for a cup of coffee or a drink. It's comforting to have a cop around the place. And in many places this has grown from consumerism to graft and shakedowns.

In addition, many small businessmen are dedicated activists in church, civic, political and other groups. Some may join as a form of advertising only to get sincerely involved in projects and causes.

Observations From Editorial Columns

WHO KNOWS?

Despite the deluge of news about the Pentagon Papers and the right to publish government secrets, a Gallup Poll indicates that 45 per cent of the persons questioned had neither read nor heard about the subject. Of the 55 per cent who were aware of the controversy, 58 per cent said the newspapers did the right thing, 30 per cent said they did wrong. Apparently those citizens who were aware of the matter were divided about the same as the Supreme Court (6 to 3). The astonishing part to us is that 45 per cent could have escaped knowledge of it altogether. —Charleston (S.C.) News and Courier

NOT EVERY ESSENTIAL IS NEW

Speaking of safety devices on highway vehicles — the basic ones, and of major importance, are not new but old.

They are — not necessarily in the order mentioned —a steering wheel, brakes, and an accelerator intended for use at reasonable height, rather than at floorboard level.

Failure to use these elementary safety devices intelligently accounts for most of the accidents. —Nashville (Tenn.) Banner

WHO'S FAULT

A fellow in Nevada, the fleecing state, filed a complaint that he lost about $200 in disability money trying to prove that a slot machine malfunctioned by paying $7.50 rather than $10 for a jackpot.

The judge in the case disposed of it with a truth that all too often is overlooked in the gaming field. He told the complainer that his losses were due to his playing rather than the machine's cheating. There are no losses in this business where there is no gambling in the first place. —Greenville (S.C.) News

COST OF CRIME

The incidence of crime is so high in 28 states, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico that obtaining crime insurance is very difficult or very expensive, or both.

The problem has been so widespread that the federal government is thinking about underwriting crime insurance.

More police and swifter justice would be cheaper. — Birmingham (Ala.) News

INSTANALYSIS

When it's in the paper, it's news. When it's in a book, it's history.

Last week The Pentagon Papers were still news. This week they are history. Bantam Books has published the entire New York Times series in a $2.25 paperback, the most recent and one of the most amazing examples of the phenomenon of "instant publishing."

In those leisurely centuries that preceded ours there was usually a period of years or decades between an event and the historical analysis of it. Today the event and historical analysis are virtually simultaneous. Tomorrow? Who knows? Maybe we'll analyze history before it occurs. —Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution

POLITICAL ADVERTISING MERITS REGULAR RATE

One wise deed deserves another. Members of a State Senate committee displayed their wisdom by killing a bill prohibiting newspapers and radio and television stations from charging political advertisers premium rates. Newspapers and broadcast executives who still engage in this practice should now display their's by stopping it.

The bill was sponsored by Sen. Jyles Coggins, D-Wake. Besides barring premium charges, it also would have forced news media to offer uniform rates to candidates for the same office. While seemingly fair on its face, testimony given the Manufacturing and Labor Committee exposed several defects in the measure.

Radio and television stations probably would not have been included in the bill's coverage even had it passed. The N.C. Association of Broadcasters indicated in a letter to the committee that federal equal-time regulations likely would preempt the field and, in effect, nullify any state law affecting broadcasters. The bill omitted other advertising media such as billboards and direct mail. The bill's impact apparently would have fallen solely on newspapers.

Radio and television are licensed to use the public's air waves and are protected by government in that use. Newspapers on the other hand, hold no government franchise. They are engaged in private enterprise in its fullest sense. The prices they charge advertisers are set by the pressures of the marketplace. Price-fixing by government has no legitimate role here.

Nevertheless, the press is and should be society's foremost advocate of free political expression. To the extent that higher ad rates discourage this, the press is doing a disservice not only to the candidates but also to society and to itself. William C. Lassiter, general counsel of the North Carolina Press Association, told the Senate committee that many of the state's newspapers offer candidates regular commercial rates. He assured the senators he would urge the others to do the same. Simply calling attention to the problem should be sufficient. Responsible publishers and broadcasters will need no urging. — Raleigh (N.C.) News and Observer

CLOSED MEETINGS AGAINST LAW

The "open meetings" law recently enacted by the North Carolina General Assembly may be about to get a severe test.

In Burlington, the school board, under federal court orders to desegregate, has announced it will not make its deliberations public until it has perfected a plan it is sure will be acceptable to the court.

We in Mecklenburg County, on our experience over the past two years, will attest to the dubious value of such a policy. And, in the light of the "open meetings" act, we can wonder whether it isn't against the law.

In Winston-Salem, the Board of County Commissioners is angry at morning newspapers in town for publishing a front-page story that the commissioners have been meeting secretly over budget and school questions.

Our experience in Mecklenburg over many years will again attest to the doubtful value of such secret sessions, and in the light of the "open meetings" act, so does the law. —Charlotte (N.C.) Observer

Education Becomes Busing The Chairs And Books

By J. J. KILPATRICK

ROANOKE, Va. — Several hundred principals, supervisors, and others engaged in education at the elementary school level met here a few days ago for a conference on what ails them. The delegates came from six Southern States, whites and blacks alike, and for three days they listened dutifully to a program built around trade unionism and the new worry of "accountability."

These are important concerns. The unionization of public school teachers has become a fact of educational life, and the principals, understandably, were eager to know all those things about contract negotiation they always had been afraid to ask. The business of accountability embraces the growing demand of parents for a kind of quality control in the classrooms: If Miss Jackson's third-grade pupils fail to learn to read at third-grade levels, fire Miss Jackson.

But back in their rooms, or over a drink in the hotel pub, these deeply troubled professionals were not talking of militant unions or critical parents. They were talking of busing. A summer conference at a modestly posh hotel ought to mean happy times. These were the saddest sessions I ever sat in on.

The term "busing" has come to mean a great deal more than the mere physcial transportation of pupils from Point A to Point B. In today's lexicon, it connotes such measures as "pairing" and "clustering" and "closing," and by extension it takes in all the problems of discipline, white flight, and school-comminity relations that afflict Southern school systems today.

By way of example, consider two elementary schools in a major Southern city. One of them, Hyde Park, on the east side of town, is located in a section of the city that has been wholly black for 70 years. The other, Bellhaven, on the west side, serves a neighborhood once wholly white but now substantially mixed. Each of the schools has a capacity of 800 pupils.

Under court order, Hyde Park and Bellhaven were paired for the 1970-71 school year. Roughly 160 white children were shipped every day to Hyde Park, and roughly 120 black children were shipped every day to Bellhaven. All six grades were maintained at each school, and the situation created problems that were "real but no intolerable."

For the coming year, the schools are to be "split-paired." The local District Court has decreed that all schools in the city system must be racially mixed, as nearly as may be practicable, in a ratio of 65 blacks to 35 white. A part of the decree requires that Hyde Park abolish its kindergarten, first, second and third grades; and that Bellhaven abolish its fourth, fifth and sixth grades. The object is to place 520 blacks and 280 whites in each school.

The principal of Bellhaven, who happened to be telling me all this, is a plump fellow in his early fifties; his face looks as if all the happiness had been squeezed out. He has spent the past six weeks, since the school year ended, in these educational endeavors: He has moved all his school furniture for fourth, fifth, and sixth graders to Hyde Park, and he has received like shipments in return. He has worked with his librarian in purging the Bellhaven shelves of 2,000 books beyond the third-grade level, and he is swapping these with the Hyde Park collection for tiny tots.

Mostly he has been on the phone with parents. His opposite number, eleven miles across town, has been equally engaged. Infuriated black parents are threatening violence and boycott. Outraged white parents have filed 230 requests for pupil records as a preliminary to placing their children in private schools. The principal of Bellhaven at this moment has no idea " if I can produce my 280 whites." He won't know until September 7.

I do not identify the city or the principal; educators have been warned they may be in contempt of court if they publicly criticize busing. Those are not the true names of the two schools. But the story is absolutely true. It is entirely typical. Down in Austin, Texas, the government has been demanding imposition of a plan that would give each school the same ethnic mix of the city at large — 64.6 percent white, 20.4 percent Chicano, and 15.1 percent black. This is education? No. This is madness.

Perhaps Largest Dirty Book Collection Across Street From The Capitol

By JERRY BROWN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Across the street from the Capitol, unpublicized but available to the public, is one of the world's largest collections of pornography.

It's housed in the Library of Congress.

Two copies of most books published in the United States, including erotic literature, are sent to the library for copyright registration.

All but a handful of what the library staff considers hardcore pornography of "absolutely no merit" goes onto the library's shelves. It's available to anyone over high school age.

The Library of Congress doesn't solicit or buy erotica, said Jean Metz, head of the selection staff, but plenty of it pours in.

While publishers seeking copyrights are the source of most of it, books seized by customs officers or other federal agents also go to the library.

"We must have gotten a thousand copies of 'Tropic of Cancer'," during the 1960s when it was banned in some areas, Mrs. Metz said.

The courts have removed virtually all legal barriers to distributing pornography for adult consumption. But even in the days when the legal battles were being fought, the library made its copies available to the public.

"We had to do some soul searching," said Mrs. Metz. "We do get a few so-called 'dirty old men,' who just want to read a dirty book."

Since everything produced by established publishing houses is kept on file, the library's problem involves what Mrs. Metz calls "the borderline stuff."

"There's a whole factory putting this stuff out," she said. "We don't buy any of it, but if it's deposited for copyright we usually keep it."

Some of that, she said, includes "hard core pornography" plus a sampling of "even harder core" material, much of it seized on its way into the United States from such countries as Denmark or Mexico.

At one time, most erotic books went into what was known as the Delta Collection, a hodge-podge of pornography, expensive art books and other volumes that might be "susceptible to mutilation."

The Delta Collection no longer exists, but many of the books that were in it now are in the Rare Books Collection, not because they are rare but to give the library more control over them.

Anyone wanting to read a volume in the Rare Books Collection has to register with a receptionist. A member of the library staff keeps a watchful eye on the book the whole time it is being used.

In other words, anytime you read a dirty book in the Library of Congress, someone will be looking over your shoulder.

to pin down.

The Mayor's Commission on Human Relations, a part-time board, receives few complaints concerning discrimination. Blacks criticize the commission for doing little more than receive complaints; they say the organization does not actively seek out discrimination.

Some blacks say their children aren't getting a fair shake in school, even though black and white school administrators say they are fighting any tendency toward prejudice and "double standards."

The school system, site of the racial outbreaks, also seems to be the place where many blacks and whites place their hopes.

"I think we have a function to teach people how to get along," said Dr. Ricahrd Wilson, high school principal. "If you put 2,000 people under one roof, you've got a sociological experiment whether you like it or not."

A white fourth-grade teacher told of a problem she had presented to her class as part of an experimental sociology program.

The children were asked to discuss a statement which said something like: "Since the Declaration of Independence states that all men are created equal, Americans treat all men alike."

"Those kids really tore that statement apart," said the teacher.

Hugh Morton Impressed By Gov. Scott's Advice

By JOHN KILGO

RALEIGH — Hugh Morton dropped in to see Gov. Bob Scott the other day and left very impressed with what the Governor said.

Morton is thinking of running for Governor and chatted about this with Gov. Scott.

"Do not make any commitments that you aren't sure you can keep," Scott told Morton.

The Governor is still upset with himself about campaigning to raise teachers' salaries to the national level when, in fact, he didn't know what he was talking about. Scott has had the courage to face up to that mistake and he's advising those who would like to suceed him in the Governor's mansion not to make the same blunder.

"I was very impressed with what Gov. Scott told me," Morton said, "and he certainly came up several notches in my estimation."

Kenneth Royall III, son of Rep. Kenneth Royall, Jr., was married in Asheville over the weekend and many of the State's political leaders were there including Pat Taylor, Skipper Bowles, and Hugh Morton.

On Sunday, Lt. Gov. Taylor went to Grandfather Mountain with two of his supporters, Dave Clark of Lincolnton and Luther Hodges, Jr. of Charlotte. They ran smack into Hugh Morton, who was having lunch with his family and some friends at the Grandfather Mountain Country Club.

That was an interesting meeting, because Hodges and Morton have been close friends for years and years — but Hodges has pledged his support to Taylor in the upcoming Governor's race.

There's a beehive of activity that greets visitors to the office of Attorney General Robert Morgan. Receptionists-secretaries Mrs. Lyn Smith and Mrs. Carolyn Jones are quite attractive and always busy. On the wall is a huge picture of Morgan trying to ski at Beech Mountain. Snow is flying and Morgan is on the seat of his pants. Morgan's office is at the end of a long corridor and looks like an old-fashion living room. It overlooks the old State Capitol Building.

House Speaker Phil Godwin is telling friends that he has decided to try for lieutenant governor next year... Mecklenburg Rep. Jim Beatty very likely will be a candidate for the State Senate in 1973...East Carolina University President Leo Jenkins plans to use every opportunity to hit at the amount of money it takes to run for high office in North Carolina. Politicians are saying at least one gubernatorial candidate is prepared to spend $1.7 million in this campaign, and to run for lieutenant governor will cost about $250,000.

Lt. Gov. Pat Taylor makes $5,000 a year in his State job. When the Senate last week passed a bill making the lieutenant governor's job full-time at a salary of $30,000 a year, Taylor banged his gavel and said: "You're looking at the biggest bargain in the history of the State of North Carolina."

It was revealed today that the Pitt County school system will lose ten one, two and three teacher schools and seven teachers through the reorganization program made necessary by enactment of the MacLean School Law. No high schools were affected by the change and the closed schools will be merged with consolidated schools in their respective districts.

Now playing at the Capitol Theatre is James Cagney and Jean Harlow in "The Public Enemy."

Several hundred people attended the formal opening of the new State Bank and Trust Company here this morning. The honor of the first deposit went to V.P. Wright who deposited receivership funds in behalf of the Federal Government.

Dr. W.M. Brown and W.S. Tyson have returned from Chicago where they attended lectures at the University of Culver, Ind.

Environmentalists Are Winning Some Points At A Heavy Price

By GEORGE BRYANT, Jr.

CHINCOTEAGUE, Va. — Environmentalists aren't winning them all, by any means. But even a casual reading of the news shows they are scoring often enough to drive their batting average up.

In far-off Alaska, the oil boom which was to dwarf all the gold rushes of history has been brought to a standstill. The result is a high rate of unemployment among those who went to the young state to work in the oil fields.

Only about an hour's drive up the coast from here, the small state of Delaware has killed off a tremendous "progress" venture. It promised the investment of billions in new heavy industry along the southern shore and out in the waters of Delaware Bay.

The Maryland State Planning Department is threatening to kill off, as a potentioal polluter, a proposed 900-acre petrochemical complex and port at Crisfield, on nearby Chesapeake Bay. Another Bay project, a proposed port and oil storage complex, is being eyed.

Here on Chincoeatgue Island, a real estate promotor set out to dredge and fill a march, Florida style, and was stopped by the Army Engineers. The project threatened pollution of oyster and clam waters, including famed Tom's Cove.

And out of North Carolina comes news of the threat of suits against both municipalities and businessmen for damage to public waters. While these N.C. actions are not big enough to get any great attention, they fit into the national pattern. The drag line and the bulldozer, once the symbol of "progress" in the "low country" are finding the going tougher.

The Delaware action is of significance to every state with a coast line. Since the first DuPonts put a powder mill in the Wilmington area, the state has been a front runner in the race for industry, no matter the consequence. Now, apparently, the state has had enough.

A new statute signed by Republican Governor Russell Peterson, a one-time DuPont executive, is pretty specific. It simply bars from the state's coast any new heavy industry — paper mills, steel mills, oil refineries and chemical plants. As for existing plants, they must get a permit from a new state agency of future expansions.

The action by the Delaware legislature was touched off by two new projects. One involved plans of the Shell Oil Co. to build a new $200-million refinery on 5,600 acres of land it had assembled. But an even greater threat to the Delaware environment, especially its coastal waters, was a proposed construction of islands out in the mouth of the bay.

The Island project was to provide off-shore facilities for loading iron ore and coal onto huge ocean freighters and to receive oil from giant tankers. There was fear that oil spills might flood the whole of the bay and its shore.

Washington got drawn into the "island" fight. The Commerce Department took the position that Delaware Bay offered the only economic location on the East Coast for docking facilities to accomodate huge new super tankers and freighters.

Shell Oil and Washington, too, may challange the new Delaware law in court. A precedent with a bearing along the entire coast line of the nation may be in the making.

Still, the basic issue goes beyond water pollution to pollution of any sort. Power companies, mining operations, steel mills, smelters and, in fact, all "dirt-making" industries, is running short of a welcome mat anywhere.

Involved are the needs of a rapidly rising population — jobs, fuel, fiber, etc. These things have to be provided or the nation simply has to accept a living standard that is lower than most aspire to.

Much more reliance can be placed on imports of many basic industrial products. More steel and copper can be brought in in refined form, to get away from some of the dirt. The same goes for all, which can be brought into the U.S. in refined form, rather than as crude. But this raises the political horor of too many jobs going abroad.

The threatened closure of Chesapeake Bay and other coastal areas to the North to heavy expanding heavy industry may well bring tempting opportunity to port areas to the South, such as Morehead and Wilmington in North Carolina.

It's all too easy to take the short term profit and then hope that, somehow, we will be smart enough to avoid the long term grief.

TV Notes

CBS is bringing back one of its famous old programs, "You Are There," as part of its Saturday lineup for children in the fall. The format of dramatizing various events in history will be the same, but the program will be designed for a younger audience than was formerly the case. It started as a radio series in May 1948 and stayed on for two seasons. From February 1953 until October 1957, it was a television feature.

Gloria Stewart will appear in an episode of "The Jimmy Stewart Show," new NBC series in the fall. The wife of the star will play his grandmother in a flashback type of story that gives Stewart a dual assignment in which he will play his own grandfather.

"NBC Children's Theater" will present six one-hour color specials during 1971-72 that will be aimed chiefly at children seven and under. They will be aired Saturday mornings.

Gershwin Music To Add Glitter

'Girl Crazy' Next At Summer Theatre

SUZANNE BROCK

SALLY-JANE HEIT

Haunting, rhythmic jazz-age songs by George Gershwin, who composed "Rhapsody in Blue," are the main feature of "Girl Crazy", the next musical show being presented at the East Carolina Summer Theatre on campus at East Carolina University.

Robert Sevra, Suzanne Brock, and Sally-Jane Heit will have the leading roles in this tuneful production that is to be on stage from July 26 through July 31, singing such long-time favorite song-hits as "I Got Rhythm," "I'm Bidin' My Time," "Embraceable You" and "Sam and Delilah."

Sally-Jane Heit will sing the very popular "I Got Rhythm" which, when a previously unknown singer named Ethel Merman sang it at the New York opening night of the show in 1930, catapulted her to a stardom of top standing. Singing the chant with a frenzied exultation, she electrified the first-night audience by holding a high C for sixteen bars while the orchestra continued the melody.

Suzanne Brock will have another role that proved to be a star-maker in the original production of "Girl Crazy," that of a post-mistress in a quiet western town, suddenly beset by a gambling crime wave. This was originally acted and sung by a more-or-less unknown beauty who went on from that success to become world-famous as Ginger Rogers.

Among the jazz-age Gershwin hits that Miss Brock will sing are "But Not For Me," "Could You Use Me," and the classic "Embraceable You," while Miss Heit, in her role is a nightclub singer, will deliver her usual vibrant performance not only with "I Got Rhythm," but two other treasures for "Girl Crazy"'s famous hits — "Boy, What Love Has Done To Me" and "Sam and Delilah." In all there are twelve tunes written by the composer of "Porgy and Bess," "Lady Be Good," "Of Thee I Sing," and "Oh, Kay!"

With a book by Guy Bolten (whose stage successes have included such famous musicals as "Anything Goes," "Rio Rita" and "Follow the Girls," and Jack McGowan, "Girl Crazy" is concerned with a TV cowboy star named Johnny, who suddenly finds himself facing a real Western adventure. Torn between Molly, who wants him to clean up the illicit gambling ring in Custerville, and Kate, a nightclub singer who is trying to lure him back to Hollywood, Johnny is finally persuaded by love to stay and fight the good fight. Replete with good and bad guys, not to mention dance-hall girls, "Girl Crazy" presents a zany, fun-filled picture of the new west with lots of fast moving action and exciting Gershwin tunes.

Edgar Loessin is directing this fun-packed show, Mavis Ray has choreographed the spectacular dance numbers, and Barry Shank is supervising the melodious Gershwin score. The settings have been designed by Robert Williams.

Newport Jazz Festival Lost Round, This Time

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

George Wein, producer of the Newport Jazz Festival, which was canceled this year half way through its third concert, said, "The festival will continue. Where and under what structure we don't know yet. Maybe in a different area or form. We're going to recreate it somewhere so fans who really love jazz will be able to hear their music. There will be a Newport Jazz Festival next year."

The festival was planned to have seven concerts—one Friday night and two each on Saturday, Sunday and Monday—on the July 4 weekend. At the Saturday night concert, approximately 18,000 persons who had bought tickets were sitting on wooden folding chairs in Festival Field. Some 18,000 more, young persons, many of them with knapsacks and wine jugs, were sitting on a hillside behind the field. They could see and hear; police left them alone.

But several hundred of them broke down a chain link fence and then either broke down or climbed over wooden fences to get inside the field. Some threatened audience members; many broke chairs.

Hours after the audience was told to go home and had left, young persons were still dancing around on the stage, tearing up music arrangements and pulling keys out of the grand piano.

The Rev. Norman J. O'Connor, the jazz priest, said to one of them, "Why are you doing this? You're destroying the music."

The young man said, "I am the music."

Father O'Connor said, "Well, then, let's hear you sing like Dionne Warwick."

The concert had been canceled just before its intermission by Wein, City Manager B. Cowles Mallory and Police Chief Frank H. Walsh, who were afraid that fighting would start and people would get hurt.

Around midnight the police decided to cancel the Sunday and Monday concerts as well. Wein was bitter about that. He said, "The town was peaceful Sunday morning. The festival could have gone on, on a concert-to-concert basis. I don't quarrel with what was done Saturday night. But that emergency was over Sunday morning.

"They could have announced there would be a Sunday afternoon concert at 10 or 11 Sunday morning and thousands of people could have come.

"There weren't any kids in the hills. And the police had all night to get help from the governor to see that they didn't come back. There were a number of things they could have done and they chose to do none of them. The police were just happy to see everybody get out of town."

Wein said, "We are, conservatively, $100,000 in the hole. We would have shown a profit of $100,000, the first time we ever hit that kind of money. All we needed was good weather and we certainly got that. Day to day we had exactly the ticket sales we had projected. Sunday night would have been our biggest.

"It might have been the greatest of all Newport Jazz Festivals. Look at the excellence of the musical performances so far."

There was talk among musicians of a benefit concert to help Wein pay his bills. Some musicians told Wein to pay them only enough to get them out of town. Also, a number of persons who had bought tickets were deciding not to ask for refunds, to help lessen the financial loss.

Wein said, "The Newport Jazz Festival is my business, but it is more important than that. It means so much to musicians and people who come every year."

Wein said that his talent budget was $130,000 but overhead for items like police protection, rent, sound system, lights, publicity, was $150,000.

The day after the long weekend he said, "I gave a check for $21,000 to the city for police. It bounced today. They said they're going to take criminal action. Whatever money I've got now is going to be paid back to the public. The city later. I've always paid all my bills. I won't go under. I'm going to pay every penny."

Asked why he thought the young people broke into the festival, Wein said, "It's a defiance of authority of any kind. Even if the concert had been free, somebody is telling them it's free. The fact you're giving it to them makes them mad. Who are you to let them sit on the hill?

"You don't hassle them. Who are you to let them move freely?

"It's an unsolvable situation with that psyche.

"We're sorry these kids destroyed a great weekend for thousands of people who love jazz. It just shows nobody is immune. We thought we could beat it but we couldn't. There's a sickness in our society that touches us all."

First Film Role For Diana Ross

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Shooting on "Lady Sings the Blues," starring Diana Ross, will begin here in the fall at Paramount Studios.

It marks Miss Ross' first motion picture. She will depict in her own singing style the early career of Billie Holiday, the blues singer who died in 1959. Producer will be Jay Weston with Sidney Furie directing.

Big Sur Locale For Scary Film

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Deadly Honeymoon," starring Ryan O'Neal, will be shot here and on location in Big Sur this fall with William Tennant producing for MGM.

The film, based on a Larry Block novel, is a contemporary mystery drama dealing with a honeymooning couple whose nuptial eve is violated by hired killers.

Vietnam Art Tour For Donald Sexauer

Artist Donald Sexauer

"I'm not sure what the details are," artist Donald Sexauer was speaking about his forthcoming visit to South Vietnam. Under the sponsorship of the Chief of the Office of Military History — the civilian equivalent of archives and art museum — Sexauer will spend the month of August "observing, photographing and drawing activity in the field."

The East Carolina University School of Art faculty member — he is chairman of the Prints Department, leaves about the first of August for Saigon, "where I will be met by an escort officer."

The stockily built artist wryly admitted his activities for the past six weeks were not exactly conducive to adjusting his metabolism for the semi-tropical warmth of a country noted for palm and banana trees.

"My family and I and John and Dorothy Satterfield have just returned from a six week camping trip," he related. "We spent 20 days in the Rockies, including a trip in the Columbian Ice field in middle Alberta Province, (Canada) where we encountered snowstorms."

As a participant in the Civilian Artists Volunteer program, Sexauer will be provided transportation, billets and chow for the 30 day period. "There's no salary involved," he explained. "The contract only calls for me to donate something to the military archives."

Although Sexauer spent four years in the Navy in the early 50's, he never had an opportunity to travel to the Orient. "I'm really curious to see what Vietnam is like, and that's one of my main reasons for wanting to take this opportunity to go."

A married artist obviously is confronted with the same problems a military man or correspondent faces when going it alone on such an assignment. "I told Myra, my wife, there are certain places I'd try to avoid," he commented. Some of the places he wants to include in his itinerary are "the Mekong Delta, the city of Hue, and ruins of old temples." Ancient ruins of the former Champa Kingdom still abound in a belt running from the coast at Nha Trang westward into Cambodia.

As an artist, Sexauer is keen on being able to bring back a small number of typical national crafts. For his wife, whom he describes as "a weaver and housewife", he hopes to bring back one or two good native weavings.

Getting back to talking about basic plans for the trip, Sexauer said "I hope to spend the first weeks orienting myself, and the last two weeks concentrating on watercolors and drawings." He feels it might be best "if I'm able to get attached to one unit so that I can better get the feel of the situation."

The ECU artist has mapped out tentative plans for a few days following completion of the South Vietnam assignment. "I'd like to go to Bangkok for a couple of days, and from there visit Burma for a few days." Plans for the added excursion include a flight to Mandalay, "and from there I'll try to take a paddle boat down the Irrawaddy River to Pagan. There's so many temples and palaces at Pagan, but even a few days would give me the opportunity to see at least some of them." He mentioned too he understands this area produces "some handsome lacquerware."

Sexauer's pack and canteen for the month tour in Vietnam will contain cameras, film, pencils, water colors and drawing paper. Already he has hurdled one of the penalties in preparing for a trip to Southeast Asia — the innumerable round of immunizations. On Monday he finished the last of the required needles at Fort Bragg.

Best known for his haunting prints of people, Sexauer said that from this trip "I hope to do a small series of prints for a folio."

Sexauer's colleagues at the School of Art take pride in the fact from their number two faculty artists are making late summer working art tours in connection with military projects — Ed Reep reports to Berlin for a series on the Berlin Wall during the same time span that Sexauer will be in Southeast Asia recording his impressions in a country that has preoccupied so much of America's thoughts in recent years.

And Sexauer's admirers are looking forward with high expectations to impressions on paper the artist will bring back when he returns. — Jerry Raynor

THE FLAMING SHIP OF OCRACOKE AND OTHER TALES OF THE OUTER BANKS, By Charles H. Whedbee. Winston-Salem, John F. Blair, Publisher, 153 pp, illustrate by Virginia Ingram, $4.95.

Greenville's Judge Charles Whedbee continues his popular collection of coastal folklore legend which he first compiled in Legends of the Outer Bands and later in Tar Heel Tidewater.

Similar in vein to the earlier two volumes, The Flaming Ship of Ocracoke contains a fascinating array of tales and legends that are a colorful part of the history of the sturdy, individualistic inhabitants of coastal North Carolina.

Whedbee reminds his readers that some of the stories are true; that others "contain no more than, maybe, a germ of truth or a spark of native islander wisdom." The purist may take umbrage with Whedbee's mixture of reportage and fictionalizing. For the readers who want no more than charmingly recounted tales of ghostly mysteries, intrigues, buccaneering and experiences of dealing with the devil, The Flaming Ship of Ocracoke fills the bill with the distinctive flavor and style established by the author in his earlier two volumes.

"The Legend Writ on Rocke" relates a brief history of mysterious stones found reportedly bearing names attributable to members of the Lost Colony. The first stone, found near Edenton in September 1937, soon touched off reports of other stones "discovered" as far afield as Greenville, S.C. and Gainesville, Ga. The authenticity of these stones has never been resolved. The flurry of interest they evoked has become another chapter in the unsolved fate of the early English settlers.

A theme of high adventure — that of two female pirates — runs through the longest legend contained in this collection. "The Female of the Species" traces the careers of Anne Bonny and Mary Read, two full-blooded daring young women who could not resist the lure of the sea and of wild adventure offered by piracy. Eventually, justice prevails and the pirate crew is captured and hanged — that is, except for Anne and Mary, who were saved by the fact they were both pregnant.

The tragic fate of a group of Palatines immigrants, men, women and children, all murdered at Ocracoke Inlet by the crew of their ship, and how the burning pilotless ship bore down and destroyed the murderers attempting to escape in a long boat, sets the stage for the title story. To this day, it is avowed, the flaming ship of Ocracoke appears each year off Ocracoke Inlet on the night of the first new moon in September.

A tale with an Edgar Allen Poe twist is "The Maundy Thursday Affair." In the port city of Wilmington in the year 1810, a group of wealthy young debauchees from some of North Carolina's leading families, dreamed up the idea of celebrating the Last Supper in their own manner — with a rollicking orgy. The aftermath is a tale of horror, in which each participant became the victim of a terrifying prophecy.

These and seven other tales constitute the third of Whedbee's series on folklore and history of the Outer Banks and coastal North Carolina.

As entertainment these tales are tops. With summer time here, this volume could also serve as a guide to the curious to check further into the strange, the weird, the sometimes bawdily comic legends that persist in this area of sand and water. The Flaming Ship of Ocracoke should be placed high on the list of recommended reading for all North Carolinians.

BANGKOK, By Alec Waugh. Boston: Little, Brown and Company. 282 pp., illustrated, $7.95.

Take one of the world's most fascinating cities and have one of the world's most seasoned writers fall in love with it, and the end result is a rare experience of complete reading enjoyment.

The British author, Alec Waugh, creator of many books for more than half a century of professional writing, is youthfully alert to the many nuances inherent in his exotic city subject.

BANGKOK is more than a travel book. Waugh tells the development of the fabled city of temples and waterways through the lives and actions of its succession of kings, sketching in deft touches of the history of 19th century colonial expansionism. By using this method, he weaves in accounts of court intrigues that have all the flavor of first-rate fiction with the added excitement of being historically true.

"It began with a quarrel about white elephants; at least that is what they believe on the banks of the Menan River," is the opening sentence of the origin of present day Bangkok. From this interest-arousing opener to the final sentence, Waugh takes the fabric of people and events to skillfully block in a history of the city.

With keenly developed observation, the author recreates in full living colors the strong and weak characteristics of a marvelous parade of individuals — Thai and Westerners — who left their imprint on Bangkok.

The history of Thailand's sovereigns is one of a procession of generations, brilliantly told. There's Mongkut, for example, subject of the musical "The King and I." Waugh effectively lays to rest any misconception about the musical's plot bearing any resemblance to reality, including the role of Mrs. Anna Leonowens, the British woman at Mongkut's court who is mentioned but once in all of Mongkut's writings. The real story surpasses the fiction. Mongkut married young, had two children, and at the age of 20 went into priestly seclusion for 27 years, rigorously observing his vow of chastity. In those long years of priesthood, the future king acquired a sound education, including a knowledge of English. At 47 he came to the throne. His vow of chastity ended, he immediately proceeded to take 35 wives and fathered 82 children.

At the other extreme the traditional harem system suffered a severe setback in the person of Rama VI, enthroned in 1911. This unfortunate king, although very handsome, preferred the company of boys to women.

For tragic romance, there's the story of Fanny Knox, whose marriage to a dashing Thai nobleman, Preecha, created a long series of royal complications, terminating in the beheading of Preecha. Fanny escaped, later returned bent on revenge, but instead became a dedicated worker for the people.

Waugh perhaps best expresses the special magic of Bangkok and its people when he writes: "It was built in terms of that essential frivolous gaiety that distinguishes the Thais from other races."

In BANGKOK, the elderly author has given us a book as young as springtime in spirit and freshness of perception. It is at the same time a well-documented book in which events, people, art, romance and intrigue are fashioned by a fine craftsman into a finished product that is a sustained spellbinder.

Summer is the time for travel. Go to one of the exciting places you have always dreamed of visiting. These new travel and history books may help you in planning your vacation. If you cannot go to these faraway places, at least treat yourself to an armchair trip.

Explore the mysteries of the Orient! John C. Caldwell has provided for travelers to the Far East an indispensable guide to the Orient in his book ORIENT TRAVEL GUIDE. Having planned and conducted tours in the Orient for nearly a decade, John Caldwell, a native of China, is well qualified to advise travelers touring the Orient. Although Mr. Caldwell concentrates on Japan, Taiwan, Hong Kong, and Bangkok, the favorite tourist places for Americans, he also covers other countries of the Orient. He includes not only such pertinant information as what to wear, what weather to expect, the rate of currency exchange, etc., but also fascinating background meterial on each country. ORIENT TRAVEL GUIDE will certainly prove valuable to any traveler to the Orient.

Take an African safari! Dr. Louis S. B. Leakey describes the animals one may find in Kenya, Uganda, and Tanzania in his book ANIMALS OF EAST AFRICA. Published by the National Geographic Society's Special Publications Division, ANIMALS OF EAST AFRICA is of the high quality generally associated with National Geographic publications. Over 150 color photographs are used to take the reader on a memorable safari through one of nature's great kingdoms.

Leave the sweltery summer heat for a cool vacation in Newfoundland. Canada's easternmost province was once the home of the oldest European settlement in North America. Harold Horwood describes charming areas in the book NEWFOUNDLAND. Based on the author's own travels, NEWFOUNDLAND gives its readers insight into the land and people of the province.

Discover the wonders of South America's Peru. Ruth Karen author of THE SEVEN WORLDS OF PERU, leads the traveler through Peru, explaining the history and significance of the sights. She also gives helpful tips on where to eat and where to stay.

Gain a new understanding of a country which has been in the headlines many times in the past few months. Ireland has been a seat of turmoil for years and recent uprisings between Protestants and Catholics have caused world-wide consternation. Emily Hahn brings some enlightenment to the situation in FRACTURED EMERALD: IRELAND. Miss Hahn has read the works of Ireland's professional historians and talked with many of these historians. Her book is Irish history for the general reader and is well worth reading.

Travel to the ends of the earth! See the Arctic and Antarctic through the eyes of the daring explorers who have ventured to the North and South Pole. Life Nature Library presents THE POLES by Willy Ley. Beautifully illustrated in color, THE POLES tells of the frozen land and the men who have explored it.

Greenville Musicians Contribute To Success Of Eastern Music Festival

GREENSBORO — North Carolina's major program of summer music, the Eastern Music Festival, this week concludes its special 10th anniversary program. This summer, as in several summers past, the planners of this month long festival has relied rather extensively on Greenville musicians to shape up orchestras of professional quality.

In addition to faculty members from the School of Music at East Carolina, at least two Greenville teen-agers have been summer participants in the festival as orchestra members.

John Daugman, a student at Rose High, is third chair viola in the Guilford Symphony Orchestra, the festival orchestra composed of top student players. Daugman is with the orchestra as the result of a scholarship from the Eastern Music Festival. The 60 members in this orchestra are students from many states and a number of foreign countries who were invited or offered scholarships to be members of the summer orchestra.

The son of Professor and Mrs. Joseph Daugman, he is also a member of the East Carolina University Symphony Orchestra and the Rose High Band.

Another young Greenville musician, John Wiegand, is also an orchestra member at the Eastern Music Festival. A 1971 graduate of Rose High, Wiegand is a bass viol player. Like Daugman, he is a regular with the East Carolina University Symphony Orchestra. The son of Dr. and Mrs. Wiegand, young Wiegand is appearing with the Eastern Music Festival for the second successive summer.

In the final week of the 10th Anniversary Easter Music Festival, four concerts are scheduled for Monday through Thursday evening:

Monday, July 26: ECU Symphony Conductor Robert Hause will conduct the festival's Eastern Symphony Orchestra in a performance of Prokofiev's "Piano Concerto No. 1," featuring soloist Warren Rich. Rich has been a soloist with the BBC in London, and on radio and TV in Western Europe and Brazil. Other selections for the Monday concert are Rossini's "La Gazza Ladra" and the third movement of Gustav Mahler's "Symphony No. 1."

Tuesday, July 27: Robert Helmacy conducts the Guilford Symphony Orchestra, the student orchestra, in a program of festive, colorful music. The compositions to be performed are: Blow's "Prelude and Canon," Villa-Lobos' "Sinfonietta," Moussorgsky's "Night On Bald Mountain," ballet music from Gounod's "Faust," and Dvorak's "Slavonic Dance No. 4."

Wednesday, July 28: The 30 members of the Guilford Chamber Players will present an anniversary program of chamber works that will include Bach's "Sonata in G," Debussy's "Danses Sacrees et Profanes," Thuille's "Sextet in B Flat," and Bartok's "String Quartet No. 5."

Thursday, July 29: In the fianl concert for the 1971 festival, Sheldon Morgenstern will conduct the Eastern Philarmonic Orchestra in performances of Haydn's "Symphony No. 21," and Beethoven's "Symphony No. 8." A special feature will be the appearnce of cellist Roger Drinkall as guest soloist for Legeti's "Cello Concerto." The finale of the festival will be Richard Strauss' "Death and Transfiguration."

All performances are at 8:15 p.m. and are held in the Dana Auditorium on campus at Guilford College.

ECU Music Camp Public Concert Today

The first public concert of the East Carolina University Summer Music Camp will be performed today at 3 p.m. in Wright Auditorium.

A program of contemporary wind pieces, marches and light numbers will be presented by the Camp Symphonic Band and the Camp Concert Band, according to ECU's Director of Bands, Herbert Carter, who is director of the music camp.

Conducting the bands will be Carter, and two other ECU faculty musicians, George Knight and John Savage.

The camp, which opened July 18 and closes July 30, is the 18th annual Summer Music Camp for junior and Senior high school musicians.

Among the featured activites of the camp are nightly camp concerts for music campers and their instructors, at which a number of solo and ensemble performances are given.

Lecture demonstrations of electronic music as produced on the Moog synthesizer and the classical organ have been presented by Dr. Otto Henry and Dr. Robert Irwin, of the ECU School of Music faculty.

Harriman Doubts Peking Trip

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — W. Averell Harriman says the place to end the war in Vietnam is at the Paris negotiating table, "not in Peking."

Harriman, 79-year-old former ambassador to the Soviet Union and chief U.S. delegate to the Paris peace talks under two presidents, expressed that opinion Friday in a speech before the Commonwealth Club.

He said President Nixon's planned trip to Peking is important, but he felt Secretary of State William P. Rogers should make the trip instead to determine "what could be accomplished for the United States by such a visit."

Hijacker Is Shot To Death

NEW YORK (AP) — A man who fit a "hijackers-behavior profile" but passed an airport security check pirated an airliner and a truck Friday, then was shot to death holding a hostage stewardess as he walked toward a jet for a flight to Milan, Italy.

The thin, former airline mechanic launched the double-hijack attempt after tripping a metal-sensing alarm at the boarding gate of a Trans World Airlines jet at LaGuardia Airport. TWA employes searched his carry-on bag, found no weapon and allowed him to board.

Nervous and sweating profusely he grabbed the petite rookie stewardess shortly after takeoff for Chicago, forced the jet at gunpoint back to LaGuardia and took her and a driver as hostages on a nine-mile truck shuttle to Kennedy airport.

There, on a corner runway of the sprawling airfield, he was cut down by two high-powered rifle bullets fired by an FBI agent, Kenneth Lovin, from behind a metal fence 75 yards away.

The slain hijacker was identified as Richard A. Obergfell, 27, who lived alone in a one-room apartment in Clifton, N.J. He had worked two years as a mechanic at LaGuardia and Newark airports for United Airlines until last December, when he was fired for absenteeism

A former landlord said Obergfell had a girlfriend in Italy whom he hoped to marry.

He was the first airline hijacker shot fatally in the United States.

The stewardess, Idie Maria Concepcion, 21, held at gunpoint during the entire 2½-hour afternoon drama, was unhurt. "I wasn't afraid until I heard the shot," she said. "I thought I had been shot."

John F. Malone, assistant director of the FBI here, said the decision to shoot the hijacker was "a calculated risk, but we felt it had to be taken."

Airline agents at the LaGuardia boarding gate said they had found several harmless metal items in Obergfell's bag that could have tripped the detector, but they said no weapon. They asked him to open his coat for a visual inspection which revealed nothing.

Both the agents and Miss Concepcion said they had recognized in Obergfell's behavior several traits they had been trained to identify as common to many hijackers. They did not specify what the traits were.

Before Miss Concepcion could alert the pilot to Obergfell's behavior, however, the hijacker unwrapped a P38 pistol from a torn white T-shirt on his lap, pointed it in her back and forced her into the cabin with him.

He told Capt. Albert R. Hawes he wanted to fly to Milan, but Hawes convinced him to return to LaGuardi and change for a larger jet. There, TWA officials told him he would have to go to Kennedy for the plane.

Obergfell allowed the flight's 55 passengers to get off, then descended the ramp, still holding the stewardess, and arranged with TWA officials for the six-passenger panel truck that took him to Kennedy with an escort.

First Family Expects Child

OTTAWA (AP) — Margaret Trudeau, 22, wife of Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, 51, is expecting a baby in December, his office said Friday.

The only other Canadian first lady to give birth while her husband was in office was Mrs. John A. MacDonald, the country's first prime minister.

Attention Given To Contaminant

WASHINGTON (AP) — A leak in the cooling system of a Southeastern fish meal processor has brought fresh public attention for another food and environmental contaminant: PCB.

The letters stand for polychlorinated biphenyls, toxic chemicals suspected of causing birth defects and liver damage. It has cropped up in poultry at least twice this year and started federal and state officials Friday on a 12-state search for 16,000 tons of chicken feed believed contaminated.

Studies have implicated PCB in reproductive failures noticed in ocean birds on both coasts. A Dutch scientist who injected the chemical in chick embryos found every one of the embryos died.

Particularly in the sea birds, the symptoms blamed on PCB paralleled symptoms earlier blamed on DDT.

"We've been blaming DDT for a number of things, but I suspect in highly industrialized areas that it's not DDT but PCB," said

PCB has been produced in this country since the early 1930s and has been used in specialty paints, adhesives, sealants and cooling systems. Like DDT, it degenerates very slowly. Monsanto Company is the sole producr.

The Agriculture Department said the latest incident came to light when a poultry producer noticed fewer of his eggs were hatching and later discovered 40 parts per million of PCB in his hens. The federal guideline for PCB levels in chicken for human consumption is 5 parts per million.

Police Haven't Given Up One-Year-Old Mystery

By DALE SINGER

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UPI)—One year ago Saturday, Phillip J. Lucier, 49, president of the Continental Telephone Corp., and two vice presidents of the firm had completed lunch at the St. Louis Club in suburban Clayton. They walked out to get into Lucier's 1966 black Cadillac Fleetwood.

Lucier told the vice presidents, James L. Robb and James V. Napier, he would "get in and cool it off" with the air conditioner before they climbed into the car.

Lucier got in, turned the ignition, and a bomb exploded, killing him instantly. Napier and Robb were showered with debris but were otherwise unharmed.

Twelve months later, police still are stumped as to who murdered Phillip Lucier. They are even more puzzled as to why.

"You just don't kill an angel, and this guy was an angel," said David A. Diedrich, chief legal investigator for the Office of the Prosecuting Attorney of St. Louis County.

Diedrich and Sgt. Keith MacConnell have been working on the case full time for the past year.

"Lucier was a very good man," Diedrich said. "A good family man, a damn hard worker, a devoted Roman Catholic. We checked into possibilities of gambling, other women—all negative."

The father of 11 children, Lucier had formed the Continental Telephone Corp., in 1960. In 1961 the company operated 48,093 stations, and by the end of 1969 the number had grown to 1,492,189.

The third-largest independent telephone company in the United States, Continental has operations in 43 states, eastern Canada and seven Caribbean Islands.

The search for Lucier's murderer has stretched from coast to coast and has involved the Clayton police, the St. Louis county police, the major case squad of the St. Louis area and the Federal Bureau of Investigation, as well as police departments of Richmond, Va., New York, Washington, Little Rock, Ark., Cincinnati, Pensacola, Fla., and Tulsa, Okla.

Diedrich sees the case as following one of three possible paths.

"First, it may have been an organization-type crime," Diedrich said. "Second, it may have been a hate bombing, some disgruntled or deranged person. However, without another bombing of the same type happening since then, this becomes less probable. Third, it may have been someone in the telephone industry."

The possibility of mistaken identity—that the bomb that killed Lucier might have been meant for someone else—was a prominent theory at the time of the murder. But at this point Diedrich says it would "be a hard pill to swallow." He pointed out there were no cars in the parking lot at the time that resembled Lucier's.

Clayton Police Chief Michael M. Broser agrees with Diedrich.

"If it had been mistaken identity," Broser said, "it would have caught up with the right person by now. We were concerned about it for a while, and a lot of other people with black Cadillacs were, too. But their minds are at ease now."

The bomb itself was a fairly crude device, Broser said, and that is another aspect of the crime he finds puzzling.

"It's unusual in that the construction of the bomb was so crude that whoever planted it could have blown himself up if he had screwed it in a little tigher," Broser said.

"Yet, he obviously knew the makeup of the car pretty well, at least that particular model Cadillac, because he knew just where to connect it. Those two things don't go together as far as mechanical knowledge is concerned."

The pipe bomb was apparently hooked up to a fuse under the dashboard which was not given current until the ignition was turned on. The device was placed under the driver's seat.

When it exploded, Lucier was "damn near cut in two," said Maj. Herbert Johnston of the Clayton police at the time. "It looked like he sat on a stick of dynamite. It probably took no longer than five minutes to install.

"All that was required was placing the bomb under the seat and connecting the other end into a fuse box under the dashboard. There was no wiring required. It was apparently a professional job."

A composite picture of a suspect has been put together with information supplied by the only known witness, but so far it has produced no definite results.

The witness, whose name has been withheld, told police, "I saw a man in the driver's seat. The door of the car was open slightly and the man's foot was outside. I thought he was going to leave.

"After a few minutes, I guessed the man was waiting for someone. Then he looked back for a glance, pulled his foot inside, shut the door and sat there."

Police said the man's coat was not the same color as the one worn that day by Lucier. They concluded the witness did not see Lucier in the black Cadillac, but apparently saw the man who planted the bomb.

Since that time, according to Diedrich, hundreds of leads have been followed up. But despite the time, effort and a reward of $50,000 offered by Continental, no suspect has been found.

Who killed Phillip Lucier? Why?

Perhaps the second of these questions is the more interesting as well as the more perplexing. As far as police have been able to tell, Lucier had no enemies, personal or financial, had no outside interests which might have put him in any danger, and had done nothing discoverable that would have made him the target of such a violent murder.

"He was really sincere," Diedrich said. "He wasn't an all-American saint in business—he was a shrewd businessman who drove himself and those he worked with. But everybody seemed to like him. He was a very good man."

Lucier's former associates at Continental say Lucier was admired and respected, not only in the company but throughout the telephone industry. They say his dynamic personality and enthusiasm rubbed off on those he worked with and was a major factor in Continental's growth.

One area where some persons thought a motive might be found was Lucier's work in the renewal of St. Louis' West End area, where he and his family lived and which has been on the decline in recent years.

PHILLIP J. LUCIER, was killed when a bomb exploded in his car one year ago. The police are still working on the case. (UPI Telephoto)

Lucier's activities led many to speculate that persons, either from the area who resented what he was doing, or who were against renewal of the neighborhood, might have had reason to want him killed.

Yet both Diedrich and Broser say no evidence has been found to support that view. They say there just doesn't seem to be any good reason why anyone would have wanted to kill Lucier.

What is the next step in the investigation?

While the length of time since the bombing has discouraged some investigators, Diedrich sees a positive aspect.

"Every day that goes by we extend our knowledge of the corporation and of persons involved with Lucier," he said. "The disproving of leads is an asset, because that means there is just one more thing that we know is false."

Broser said, "as far as we're concerned, the investigation isn't closed and won't be closed until we come to a conclusion. I can think of nothing better from the standpoint of the police force, the community and the company than to solve this crime. Nothing is more important."

The leads police have checked out over the past 12 months have taken investigators across the country always to dead ends. Right now they are following up one particular tip. But, as Diedrich said, "we don't know if it has any value or if it's some con man leading us up the primrose path."

As for who was behind the murder, Broser thinks it was one man, not an organization or a conspiracy.

"There is no doubt in my mind that it will be proven to be one disgruntled person," he said, "Someone within the organization or a former employe who is just slightly off his rocker."

Diedrich admits he feels discouraged at times.

"I would like to think eventually there would be a break in the case. We have attempted to use all the sciences available, but sometimes you just have to get lucky," he said.

"It becomes an obsession. This is the most interesting case I've ever worked on. I would like to come to some sort of conclusion, even in my own mind if not in the courts."

Eugene McNary, prosecuting attorney for St. Louis County, summed up:

"There is no satute of limitations on murder," McNary said. "We'll never quit."

Big Row Over A Small Dam

By E. MICHAEL MYERS

GILLHAM, Ark. (UPI)—The winding Cossatot river drifts and cuts its way out of the rugged Ouachita Mountains through sparsely populated southwest Arkansas and spills into Little River, only 87 miles from its source. But for such a short river it has kicked up a giant controversy with national implications.

On one side are land owners along the river and the Army Corps of Engineers, forced by a court order to halt construction of a dam across the river on which $10 million already has been spent. On the other side are conservationists from several states and their friends who want to preserve the Cossatot in its free flowing state.

The dam project was shut down indefinitely last February when a federal district judge ruled the Corps of Engineers had failed to make a proper study of the dam's potential environmental impact as required by the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969. It was the first such injunction issued against a dam project already in progress and has a bearing on 240 other dam projects now under construction in the country.

Judge G. Thomas Eisele blocked further work until the engineers submit a report on "all known possible environmental consequences" of the project as required by the act.

Eisele described two reports submitted by the engineers as falling "far short of the requirements of the law."

Reacting to Eisele's decision, a spokesman for the secretary of the Army complained the Congress did not intend that all previously authorized projects be stalled pending more detailed environmental studies. The Army has appealed Eisele's ruling, but the engineers at the same time have gone to work on a new study.

Since Eisele's ruling, the climate along the river has not been friendly. A Beaumont, Tex., Boy Scout troop floating down the river said someone fired rifle shots at their canoes. No one was hurt.

At DeQueen, Ark., largest town near the dam, feeling runs high for its construction and against "outsiders," environmentalists from other states who have joined to halt the dam. DeQueen is filled with cattlemen and farmers who lost livestock and valuable topsoil to flash foods the dam will help control.

"No one is more interested in saving the environment than we are," said Larry Hale, president of the Chamber of Commerce. "I know this river, my father lost thousands of dollars because of it."

The city, seeking industry, spent $800,000 on a still-dry pipeline to the Cossatot. "There is no guarantee without that dam we can get the water," Hale said.

Hale's father, Reese Hale, 58, said over the years the river has cost him plenty, that in 1968-69 alone flood damage to his 535-acre farm cost him almost $18,000.

Wellborn Jack Jr., a Shreveport, La., attorney, who likes to take his two young sons on river float trips, is one of the chief spokesmen for those seeking to block the dam.

Palmer Moves Out By Three

By BOB GREEN
Associated Press Golf Writer

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — Arnold Palmer, leading all the way, stretched his margin to three strokes Saturday with a four-under-par 68 in the third round of the $250,000 Westchester Golf Classic.

Palmer, rested after a two week absence from the pro tour, had a 54-hole total of 202, 14 under par on the 6,700-yard par 72 Westchester Country Club course.

The 41-year-old millionaire, gunning for his third victory of the season, was three strokes in front of streaking Gibby Gilbert.

Gilbert, a balding, 30-year-old from Hollywood, Fla., closed with four consecutive birdies for a 68 and 205 total. Gilbert moved into position on the strength of a string of a season high six consecutive birds in Friday's second round.

It was two more strokes back to former Colorado football player Hale Irwin and 1969 PGA champion Ray Floyd, tied at 207. Floyd had the day's best rest, a 66, and Irwin had a 67.

Sam Snead, 59-year-old giant of another era of golf, remained in contention with a steady 68 for a 209.

Jack Nicklaus, still bothered by an eye inflamation, slipped to a par 72 and 213—11 strokes back of the leading Palmer.

Lee Trevino, admittedly dead tired after a string of 15 consecutive tournaments, missed the cut after Friday's second round and spent the day fishing at an undisclosed location.

With Trevino, the U.S., Canadian and British Open champ not on the course and the magnetic Palmer making his move, a hugh gallery flocked after the winner of 57 American tour events.

He gave them what they wanted to see on the 16th hole, when he holed out from a sand trap for a birdie putting him 13 under par for the tournament.

Palmer closed with a birdie 4 on the relatively easy par 5 finishing hole, increasing his lead one stroke more than it was going into the bright, sunny day.

Palmer started quickly, taking birdies on the second and third holes and threatening to make a rout of it until he chipped poorly and bogeyed the ninth.

He reeled off another pair of consecutive birds early on the back nine, then bogeyed the 13th when he missed the green.

York Pitches Royals By Cleveland, 6-1

CLEVELAND (AP) — Jim York pitched eight innings of one-hit relief and capped a five-run explosion in the fourth with a three-run homer, pacing the Kansas City Royals to a 6-1 victory Saturday over the slump-ridden Cleveland Indians.

York, 5-3, took over for Bill Butler with the bases loaded and none out in the second. He allowed one run to score on an infield out and then shut the door on Cleveland the rest of the way, allowing just a fifth-inning single by Graig Nettles and striking out eight.

The Royals had taken a 1-0 lead when Fred Patek slammed his fourth home run of the season leading off the game. The Royals' explosive fourth came off Alan Foster, 5-10, after the Indians had tied the score.

Gail Hopkins and Cookie Rojas singled and Ed Kirkpatrick walked, loading the bases. Dennis Paepke followed with a two-run single and then York slammed his first major league homer.

The Indians have lost four in a row and 17 of their last 21 games.

White Sox Slip Past Nats By 6-5

CHICAGO (AP) — Rick Reichardt slapped a leadoff single in the tenth inning and scored on Jay Johnstone's one-out triple to right center field, giving the Chicago White Sox 6-5 victory over Washington in the first game of a Saturday doubleheader.

The White Sox' winning run was scored against Joe Grzenda, 4-2, who had started the tenth. Bart Johnson, 6-6, who worked out of a first and third, none-out jam in the top of the tenth, was the winner.

After yielding singles to Frank Howard and Dick Billings to open the top of the tenth, Johnson struck out pinch hitter Don Mincher and got Elliott Maddox and Del Unser on fly balls.

The White Sox rallied for three runs in the eighth for a 5-5 tie. Rich McKinney started the rally with an infield single and Reichardt reached on an error by third baseman Dave Nelson. Ed Herrmann and Johnstone each singled home a run.

With the bases loaded and none out, Luis Alverado forced pinch runner Tom Bradley at the plate and when the Senators tried to double Alvarado at first, Johnstone raced all the way home with the tying run.

Washington took a 2-0 lead in the first on a single by Len Randle and Howard's 17th home run. Randle walked in the sixth, reached third on a single by Howard and scored on an infield out to make it 3-0.

Herrmann triggered a two-run Chicago seventh with his seventh homer, but the Senators got two more in the eighth as Randle walked, Howard doubled and both scored on a single by Dick Billings.

Pirates Slosh By Louisburg, 3-0

LOUISBURG — For the Pirates of East Carolina the rain came down again last night for the third time this week but not until they had played six innings and defeated the Louisburg Hurricanes 3-0.

All the scoring was in the first inning. Mike Bradshaw led off by reaching on an error. Matt Walker drew a free ticket and Larry Walters sacrificed both runners up. Mike Aldridge drew a walk. Catcher Rick McMahon lined a single to center driving in Bradshaw and Walker and moving Aldridge to third. Ronnie Leggett got a hit scoring Aldridge.

For the next five innings the game was a pitchers duel. East Carolina put men on in the third, fourth, and fifth but could not push farther ahead. Louisburg put two on in the first.

The Pirates' next game is this afternoon against Wilmington in a doubleheader at Harrington Field.

Ninth Inning Runs Beat Twins, 6-3

MINNEAPOLIS—ST. PAUL (AP) — George Scott, who launched a three-run eighth inning rally with a long double, singled in the tie-breaking run in the ninth and Joe Lahoud followed with a two-run triple as the Boston Red Sox overtook the Minnesota Twins 6-3 Saturday.

Reggie Smith started Boston's winning rally with a double off Jim Perry, 12-10. Ron Perranoski replaced Perry and retired Carl Yastrzemski on a grounder and walked Rico Petrocelli before Scott cracked his single, scoring Smith and breaking a 3-3 deadlock.

Mets Zoom Past Houston Astros

NEW YORK (AP) — Cleon Jones drove in five runs with two doubles and a single, and Wayne Garrett, playing his first game of the season, had three singles and knocked in two runs, sparking the New York Mets to a 9-3 victory over Houston Saturday.

The Mets, who had lost 17 of their previous 21 games, opened up on Bill Grief, making his major league debut, for three runs in the first inning. Ken Boswell led off with a walk. Garrett, just recalled from the minors after spending the first half of the season on military duty, singled, and Tommie Agee walked, filling the bases.

Jones then cracked a single, scoring two runs and knocking out Grief. Ed Kranepool's grounder drove in the final run of the inning.

The Mets tagged reliever Denny Lemaster for three more runs in the second. Singles by pitcher Jon Matlack, Boswell and Garrett produced the first run and Jones' first double sent in the other two.

Ted Martinez' sacrifice fly in the fifth scored Kranepool, who had doubled. The Mets got their final two runs in the seventh, when Boswell singled, stole second, Garrett singled him home went to second on the throw to the plate and scored on Jones' second double.

Tug McGraw, 7-3, who blanked the Astros over the final 41-3 innings, was the winner.

Booming Bats Carry Yanks Over Brewers

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Danny Cater's two-run double in the fifth inning and Jake Gibbs' two-run homer in the first led the New York Yankees to a 4-3 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers Saturday.

Cater's drive scored Bobby Murcer, who had walked, and Ron Blomberg, who had singled. The Yankees had taken a 2-0 lead in the first inning on a walk to Jerry Kenney and Gibbs' fourth homer of the year.

The Brewers closed the gap in the seventh when Ellie Rodriguez walked, pinch hitter Al Yates got an infield hit and Tommy Harper slammed his eighth homer of the year.

Mike Kekich was credited with his fifth victory in nine decisions for New York, but needed reflief help from Lindy McDaniel after Harper's homer.

Giants Stop Red Machine, 6-1

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Rookie Don Carrithers hurled a five-hitter for his first complete game in the majors and hit a two-run single in a six-run, sixth-inning rally, boosting the San Francisco Giants to a 6-1 victory over the Cincinnati Reds Saturday.

John Bench's bloop double and Dave Concepcion's two-out single gave the Reds a 1-0 lead off Carrithers, 2-1, in the fifth before the Giants jumped on Wayne Simpson, 2-3, with two out in the sixth.

Willie McCovey triggered the uprising with a single and Dick Dietz walked before Ken Henderson's double scored McCovey for a 1-1 tie.

Jimmy Rosario was walked intentionally, loading the bases, and Allan Gallagher's walk forced in the go-ahead run.

Carrithers followed with a single, scoring two runs. Gallagher also came home on the play when centerfielder George Foster threw wildly past third base. Carrithers scored on a wild pitch.

This was Carrithers second major league start. He lasted only four innings in his first start agsinst Atlanta, July 18.

Club Organized

A Boys Home Benefactors Club has been founded in conjunction with the upcoming Boys Home All Star Game at Ficklen Stadium.

According to a Jaycee spokesman, applications for charter membership in the club have been mailed across the state. The club, the spokesman said, is designed to provide financial assistance to the Boys Home, as does the annual football classic.

All charter members will be listed in the official souvenir program for the game. Persons interested in becoming charter members of obtaining more information should write to the Boys Home Benefactors Club, P. O. Box 2161, Greenville.

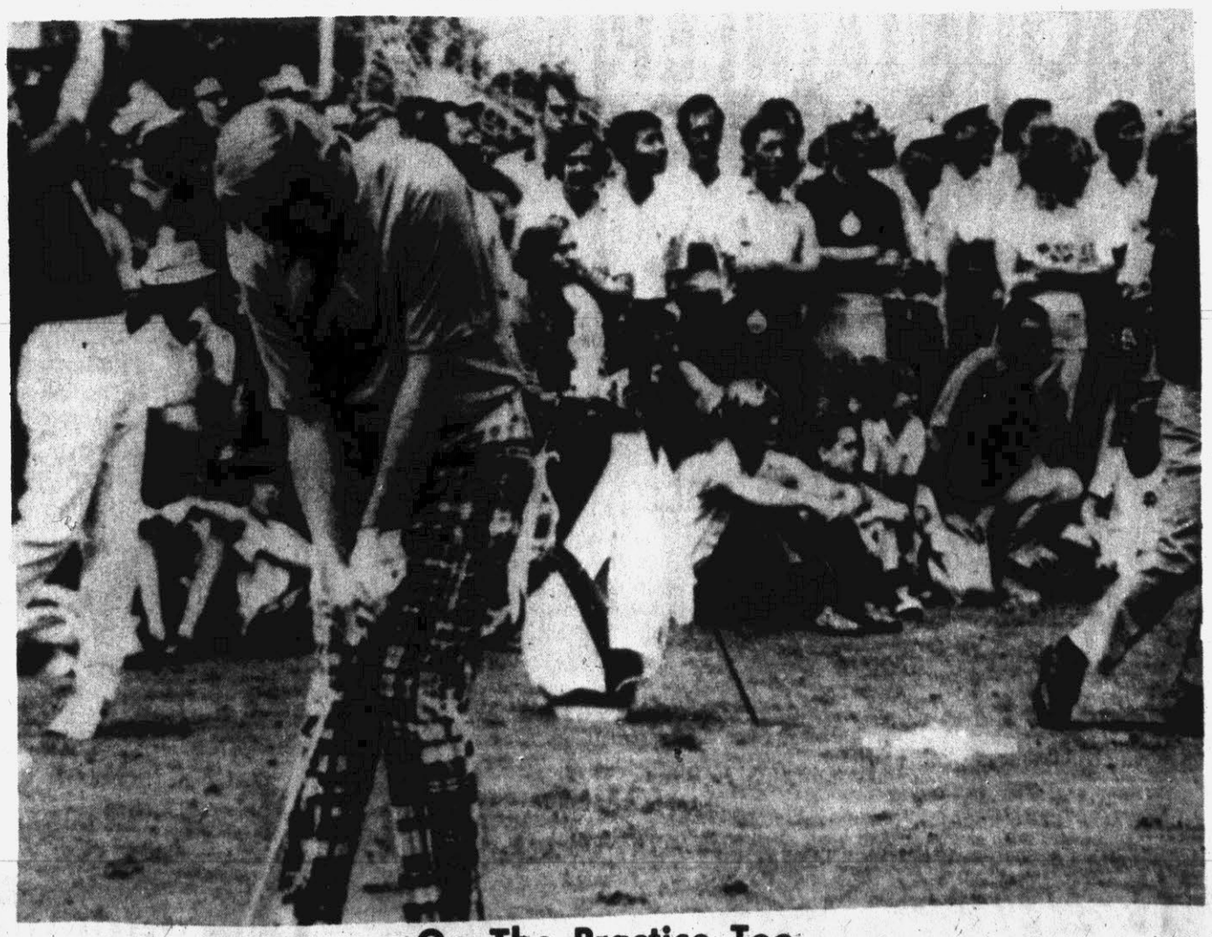

Game chairman Doug Mewborn said that the club will demonstrate that, in addition to the 54 players, four coaches, the official and more than 10,000 North Carolina Jaycees who participate in the game, there is another group of North Carolinians who have interest in the 106 youths at Boys Home.

Twin Bill

Semi-pro baseball will be in Greenville this afternoon at Guy Smith Stadium with the locals meeting Williamston in a doubleheader. The first game is scheduled for 2:30 p.m.

Lombardi, Brown Among New NFL Hall Of Famers

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — Seven former National Football League greats, including the late coach Vince Lombardi and running star Jim Brown, will be inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame here Saturday before what is expected to be a record turnout.

Adding glamor to the ceremonies in front of the Hall will be the appearance of President Nixon, who is expected to make closing remarks after Lombardi, Brown, Bill Hewitt, Frank "Bruiser" Kinard, Andy Robustelli, Y.A. Tittle and Norm Van Brocklin are enshrined.

Officials of the hall, located in the city where the NFL was born 51 years ago, said the press corps covering the event was already the largest in its nine-year history before Nixon announced Thursday he would attend.

Much of the increased interest was in the inductions of Lombardi, who built a dynasty at Green Bay in the 1960s, and of Brown, a star for nine years with the Cleveland Browns.

The enshrinment, at 2 p.m., is free to the public and follows a morning parade through downtown streets in which Mrs. Lombardi will serve as grand marshal.

The day's events end with the nationally televised exhibition game between the Los Angeles Rams and Houston Oilers, which will be held at adjacent 18,500-seat Fawcett Stadium.

Lombardi, who died of cancer on Sept. 3, 1970, took over as coach of the Packers after the club posted a 1-10-1 record in 1958, their worst ever. The Packers finished 7-5 in 1959 and then won the NFL championship in 1961, 1962, 1965, 1966, and 1967 and the first two Super Bowls with the then-American Football League.

Brown, who retired in 1965 at age 30 for a movie career, holds all of the NFL's major rushing records, including a career total of 12,312 yards gained and 106 touchdowns rushing. He led the league in rushing eight of his nine seasons.

Hewitt, who was killed in an automobile accident in 1947, was an offensive and defensive end for the Chicago Bears and the Philadelphia Eagles in the 1930's.

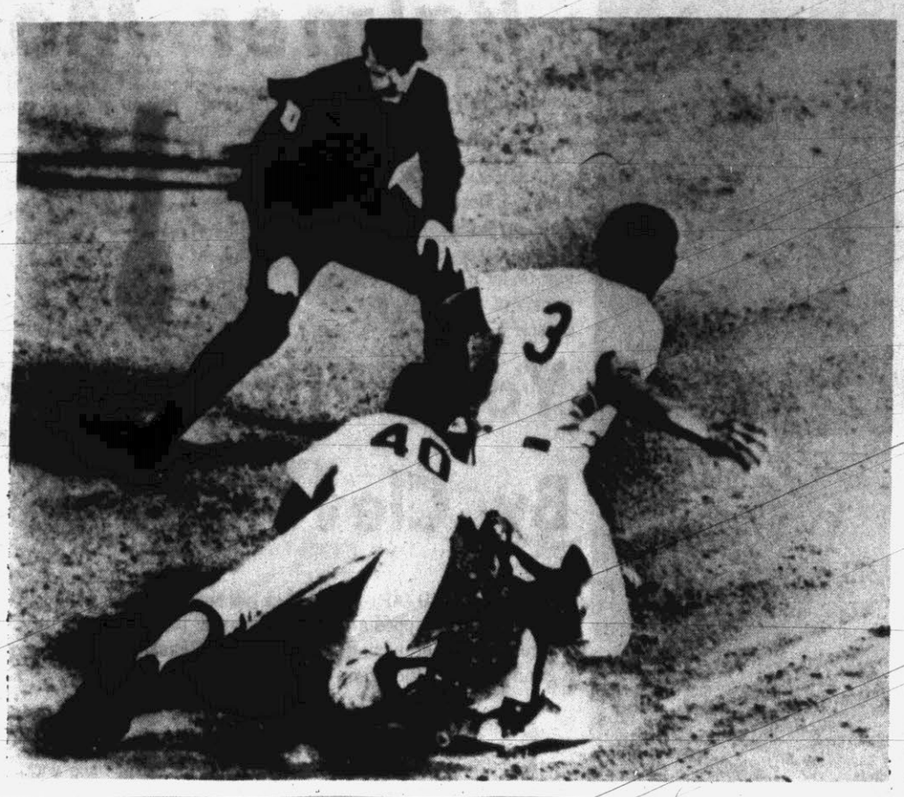

Robustelli was a star defensive end for 14 years, five with the Rams and the last nine with the New York Giants. He retired after the 1965 season, after having been named an all-NFL defensive end seven times.

Kinard was a two-way tackle for the Brooklyn Dodgers of the NFL for seven years and for the New York Yankees of the All-American Football Conference the last two years of his career, which ended in 1947.

Tittle and Van Brocklin were both standout quarterbacks.

Tittle toiled for 17 years, three with the Baltimore Colts of the old All-American Conference, ten with the San Francisco 49ers, and the last four with the New York Giants. He retired after the 1964 season, after leading the Giants to three Eastern Division titles.

Van Brocklin, now head coach of the Atlanta Falcons, spent nine years with the Rams and the last three with the Philadelphia Eagles. He retired after leading the Eagles to the NFL championship in 1960.

Legion Slips By Rocky Mount 7-6

Greenville's American Legion team scored three runs in the bottom of the ninth inning to tie the game and went on to score in the twelfth to win the third game of a best of five series from Rocky Mount and gain the Area I championship. Post 39 will next meet Siler City in a best of five series. The first game will be at Harrington Field with the succeeding games to be played on a home-and-home basis.

Greenville scored first in the first at Phil Blount singled and moved to second as Timmy James walked and scored on a hit by Larry Hatton.

Rocky Mount could not get a real threat going until the fifth when with two out Greg Bunn singled and Howard McCullough drew a walk. Larry Daughtridge singled to score Bunn and an error on the relay scored McCullough. Daughtridge moved to third. Dennis Pittman singled to drive in Daughtridge and moved to second on a wild pitch. Earl Warren got the fourth hit of the inning scoring Pittman making the score 4-1 in favor of Rocky Mount.

Rocky Mount got two more in the sixth as Sonny Wooten and Randy Warrick got hits. Both runners scored on McCullough's double.

Greenville pushed over two in the bottom half of the inning to cut the margin to 6-3. Stanley Cobb led off with a walk and moved to second on Bill Lee's hit. Phil Blount singled to score Cobb and Lee scored on an error.

Greenville again threatened in the eighth as Hatton doubled but died on second. Finally in the ninth, Greenville came up with three runs. Blount singled as did Hatton. Joe West got a hit scoring Blount and moving Hatton to third. Hatton came in on a wild pitch. West moved to second as Jimmy Paige walked and scored on Cobb's hit.

The game was deadlocked until the twelfth when with two out, Blount went all the way to second when his fly was dropped. He moved to third as James beat out an infield hit. Hatton got his fourth hit of the game driving in Blount.

Winning pitcher Cobb struck out eight, and gave up one hit after relieving starter Steve Arnaud.

Stewart Sets New Speed Mark

By BLOYS BRITT
AP Auto Racing Writer

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. (AP) — World driving champ Jackie Stewart set a record qualifying speed of 134.58 miles per hour Saturday to win the pole position for Sunday's fourth race in the million-dollar Can-Am racing series.

The mod Scot, driving a stub-nosed Lola T260 carrying a massive 495 cubic inch Chevrolet engine, toured the new 2.43-mile Watkins Glen Grand Prix course in 1 minute, 05.1 seconds to nose out the twin McLarens of Pete Revson and Dennis Hulme for the top front row spot in a starting grid that will include about 30 cars.

The 2 p.m. start is expected to draw upwards of 60,000 to the picturesque circuit nestled in New York's Finger Lakes region.

The Can-Am is the second half of the Glen's annual July doubleheader racing program. A six-hour race featuring manufacturer's endurance cars started the fireworks Saturday.

Revson, the New Yorker who won the last Can-Am outing at Road Atlanta two weeks ago, got the second spot on the grid with a speed of 134.17 mph. Hulme, seeking his 20th victory in four years of competition in this richest of all road racing series, starts third after qualifying at 133.56 mph.

Stewart, who started his challenge of team McLaren's domination of the Can-Am by winning the second outing at St. Jovite last month, will have help from U.S. star Mario Andretti Sunday.

The two-time United States driving champ will debut a new seven-liter Ferrari from the fourth spot on Sunday's grid, his qualifying speed of 131.15 mph giving him a good shot at the front runners.

Also in the lineup will be a new Porsche 917 Spyder purchased only a week ago by STP oil additive king Andy Granatelli, to be driven by Swiss road racing expert Jo Siffert. For this race, the car will carry a three-liter engine, considered far too weak to challenge the bigger McLarens. But Granatelli said an 800 horsepower Porsche mill is on the way and will be available for the series shortly.

Hulme and Revson have one triumph each this year, with Stewart having the other. The Scot also is a certain winner of his second Grand Prix driving title on the fast international Formula 1 circuit.

All-Stars Take Win

STATESVILLE — Greenville's Babe Ruth All-Stars rebounded from an opening round loss to Statesville to turn back St. Stevens 8-1 Friday night in state tournament play. No details were available on the game.

The locals, who are defending their state title, were scheduled to play again Saturday night at 9 p.m. but the game was called because of rain.

Hunter Gets Mad; Drives In Four Runs

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

The Oakland A's haven't been scoring many runs of late for Jim "Catfish" Hunter, so the pitcher took matters—and a hot bat—into his own hands Friday night.

The right-hander crashed a home run and two singles, driving in four runs as he snapped a personal four-game losing streak and beat the Detroit Tigers 9-7 with help from Roland Fingers in the seventh.

"I think when a pitcher can hit, the manager will stay with him longer, said Hunter, 12-9, who surrendered eight hits and six run before giving way to Fingers. Hunter is now hitting .365 with a double, triple, home run and 11 runs batted in.

Elsewhere in the American League, Baltimore edged California 4-3, Boston outlasted Minnesota 8-6, Kansas City beat Cleveland 6-4 and the New York Yankees downed Milwaukee 6-2. The Chicago White Sox and Washington were rained out.

In the National League it was: Philadelphia 4, Chicago 2; Houston 5, New York 1; St. Louis 6, Montreal 2; Pittsburgh 4, San Diego 0; Cincinnati 3, San Francisco 2, and Atlanta 5, Los Angeles 3.

Detroit took a 2-0 lead against Hunter in the first inning on Aurelio Rodriguez' homer and Jim Northrup's RBI single. Hunter, who lost his last three decisions by scores of 2-1, 3-0 and 2-1, tied it in the third with his home run off Mickey Lolich.

Ed Brinkman's two-run homer in the fourth regained the lead for Detroit but Oakland tied it again in the sixth with five singles, including run-scoring hits by Hunter and Dick Green.

Sal Bando put the A's in front with a two-run homer in the seventh-Hunter drove in another run with a ground ball—and hit a solo shot in the eighth. Kevin Collins and Dick McAuliffe also homered for Detroit.

"I like to think of myself as a good hitter," said Hunter. "I don't go for the long ball this despite his home run but I just try to hit line drives. I've hit .200 or more every year but one home run a year is about my limit:"

Hunter said he couldn't remember ever driving in four runs on one game before, although he did recall a bases-loaded triple against Washington. "I don't think I ever got three hits in one game, either," he said.

Baltimore and Boston continued to pull away from the pack in the AL East. The Orioles lead the Red Sox by 3½ games while the Tigers dropped 10 lengths back.

The Orioles rallied twice against California and finally beat the Angels on Elrod Hendricks' tie-breaking pinch single with the bases loaded in the ninth inning, giving Pat Dobson his 13th triumph and 10th in a row.

Frank Robinson's home run in the fourth helped Baltimore erase a 230 deficit and Robinson walked in the sixth, took third on Brooks Robinson's double and scored on an infield out after the Angels had taken a 3-2 lead.

Merv Rettenmund's infield hit, an error and Mark Belanger's bunt single preceded Hendricks' game-winning hit.

Home runs by Reggie Smith and George Scott drove in five runs in the third inning and the Red Sox held on to beat the Twins, who have lost 13 of their last 17 games. Bob Montgomery's double and a single by winning pitcher Ray Culp accounted for the first run of the six-run frame.

Montgomery's sacrifice fly in the sixth drove in the decisive run and Boston added an unearned tally in the ninth. Harmon Killebrew and Jim Nettles each drove in two runs for the Twins.

The Royals trailed the Indians and Sam McDowell 2-0 but erupted for four runs in the fifth and were never headed. Jerry May doubled home the first run, Paul Schaal's sacrifice fly tied the score and Cookie Rojas singled with the bases loaded to put KC in front 4-2.

May singled a run home in the sixth and Amos Otis homered in the seventh. Roy Foster and Graig Nettles connected for the Indians.

Two-run singles by Bobby Murcer, Felipe Alou and Jerry Kenney sparked Mel Stottlemyre and the Yankees to their victory over the Brewers.

Palmer Increases Westchester Lead

By KAROL STONGER
Associated Press Sports Writer

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — Arnold Palmer went farther in front and Lee Trevino went fishing.

Jack Nicklaus, who couldn't see, went to the doctor and Gibby Gilbert, who had visions of missing the cut, went out and shot the longest string of birdies this year.

Palmer, the first-round leader in the $250,000 Westchester Classic with an eight-under-par 64, made it a 10-under 134 Friday, two strokes in front of Bob Smith, who matched his first-round 68 for a 136.

Palmer, golf's most popular player, bogeyed the par four No. 3 but recovered with birdies on putts of 20, 15 and three feet to finish with a 70. He missed by a fraction of an inch a 10-footer for a birdie on the 18th.

Gilbert was tough. He bogeyed No. 1, took a double bogey on No. 2, parred No. 3 and bogeyed No. 4. After parring the next hole he birdied six straight for the longest string of sub-par play on the tour this year. He was just two short of Bob Goalby's eight-year-old record of eight.

Larry Ziegler also set a 1971 tour record. He scored the year's first double eagle, holing out a five iron on the 500-yard par five No. 12 en route to a 68 and a 36-hole total of 142.

"After four holes I had visions of missing the cut," Gilbert said after his round.

Instead, he was tied for third at 137 with two relatively unknown tour regulars—41-year-old Bob Stone and Larry Wood, who was in sole possession of the No. 2 spot Thursday.

Lee Trevino wasn't so lucky. Already planning a two-week vacation like the one that seemed to revive Palmer and Gilbert, Trevino carded a 75 Friday, his score ballooned by an unbelievable eight on the par five No. 18.

With a two-day total of 146, one stroke over the cut-off, the U.S., Canadian and British open titlist packed up his clubs and went fishing.

Nicklaus, who could manage only a par on the 6,700-yard course Thursday, shot a three-under-par 69 Friday. Plagued by Conjunctivitis, a disorder that causes the eyes to redden, swell and burn, he had trouble keeping his eye on the ball. Nicklaus was treated by a physician and will continue to play.

Tar Heel Stars Lose Close One 3-2

Greenville's Tar Heel League All-Stars were knocked out of contention for the state Little League championship Friday by Roanoke Rapids 3-2. Roanoke advances to play the winner of the Area I-Area III contest for the state championship.

Greenville scored first in the top of the first. Dana Kendrick doubled and scored on a passed ball.

Roanoke Rapids came back in the bottom half of the inning to go ahead on two runs. Odie Griffin reached on a fielder's choice and scored on Robert Squire's double. After Dale Connor walked, Quinton Gregory doubled to drive in Squire.

Roanoke pushed over another in the fourth. Lee McCall reached on an error that let him come all the way around to score.

Kison Gives Fine Showing In First Complete Game

By BERT ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Sports Writer

Bruce Kison, Pittsburgh's rookie right-hander, has an unusual way of warming up before a game.

First, he does wind sprints in the outfield. Then he goes through some calisthenics. And he follows that with a short warmup.

"I don't need many pitches to get ready," he says.

He apparently doesn't need many pitches to beat the opposition, either.

Friday night, Kison permitted only two hits, walked two and struck out nine in hurling his first complete game in the major leagues, a 4-0 triumph over the punchless San Diego Padres in a game that lasted only one hour and 57 minutes.

Elsewhere in the National League, Cincinnati edged San Francisco 3-1; Atlanta downed Los Angeles 5-3; Houston whipped New York 5-1; St. Louis topped Montreal 6-2, and Philadelphia defeated Chicago 4-3.

In the American League, Oakland beat Detroit 9-7; Boston held off Minnesota 7-6; Baltimore shaded California 4-3; New York trimmed Milwaukee 6-2; Kansas City took Cleveland 6-4, and Washington at Chicago was rained out.

Since joining the NL's East leaders, Kison has won his only two decisions compiled a glittering 1.82 earned run average in 29 2-3 innings.

His sidearm deliveries have been particularly baffling to right-handed hitters. His fast ball moves up and in, and he has mixed it well with a sharp breaking curve.

Against San Diego, he was superb. He retired the first 17 batters before pinch hitter Angel Bravo lined a single to left field with two out in the sixth inning.

After the game, Joe Brown, Pittsburgh's general manager, presented Kison with the box score he had kept in the press box.

"I thought you might want this," said Brown, "and I am sure that you will pitch a lot more shutouts."

The shutout loss was the Padres' third in a row and increased their scoreless inning streak to 29.

Richie Hebner provided Kison with all the support he needed, socking a two-run homer, his 16th, in the third inning, off Clay Kirby, 8-7.

Willie Stargell, the major league leader in homers, walloped his 32nd in the fifth. And a single by Stargell, a double by Hebner and a sacrifice fly by Milt May accounted for the first Pittsburgh run in the second.

Cincinnati, in winning for the 11th time in 14 games, overcame a 2-1 San Francisco lead in the eighth on Pete Rose's leadoff homer, three walks and a sacrifice fly by ex-Giant George Foster. The loss was the first in eight National League decisions for former American Leaguer John Cumberland.

Hal McRae homered in the fifth for the Reds' other run.

Rookie Earl Williams lashed two homers in pacing Atlanta's victory over the slumping Dodgers, who have lost 13 of their last 17 games. Williams belted a solo shot, his 16th, in the second inning and connected with one on in the fourth.

Both blasts came off Bill Singer, 5-12.

Willie Crawford had four hits for the Dodgers, including homer and a double.

Don Wilson, 7-7, stopped the Mets on three hits and seven strikeouts in saddling the slumping New Yorkers with their 17th loss in 21 games.

Jim Wynn's two-run homer and run-scoring hits by Cesar Codeno, Doug Rader and Enis Menke highlighted the Houston attack.

St. Louis capitalized on three Montreal errors to score four runs in the fourth inning and beat the Expos in a game delayed 37 minutes by a power failure that hit all of Quebec Province.

During the blackout, Cardinals' pitcher Bob Gibson was ejected by Umpire Ken Burkhart. Burkhart said Gibson was thrown out for leaving the bench and shouting at the umpires unnecessarily.

Mike Ryan's tie-breaking single in the seventh and Don Money's leadoff homer in the eighth enabled the Phils to withstand the Cubs, whose one-run rally in the ninth fell short.

Although Money is hitting only .214, Manager Frank Luchesi believes he is ready to break loose.

Immanuel Wins Crown, Meadowbrook In Finals

Immanuel captured the Church League's National Division championship Friday night, topping Piney Grove 6-3 after losing 7-1 in the first game for their first tournament setback. In American Division play, Meadowbrook earned the right to meet St. James for the title by downing First Christian, 7-6.

Piney Grove, second round losers to Mt. Pleasant, avoided elimination in the first game by getting four runs in the second inning and coasting over Immanuel. A double by Kenny Beamon, singles by Wayne Avery and Robert Nichols, and a triple by Tommy Meeks accounted for three of the runs and Jimmy Evans' single brought in the fourth.

The losers were held to a single fourth-inning run on a double by Sid Carraway and Mack Roebuck's single. Piney Grove added one in the fourth and two in the sixth for an easy win.

Immanuel came back in the showdown game to score in the first for an early lead. Bill Dickens, Jim Grimsley and Roebuck put singles together for the run. Piney Grove went ahead with two in their half of the second on a homer by Nichols. After they got a run in the fourth, Immanuel stormed back with three in the fifth to go ahead and added two in the seventh to win the game and National title.

In a game played on the old field at 7:30, First Christian shocked Meadowbrook with all six of their runs in the first two frames. Homers by Billy Revels in both innings were the key blows. In the first inning Billy West singled, Marvin Hunt got a safety and Revels slammed his first round-tripper of the game for three runs. A triple by Sheron Bennett and Dave Davis' hit brought in the fourth run. Hunt's single and Revel's second homer finished up the scoring for Christian in the second inning.

Meadowbrook, who lost to St. James Thursday night to fall into the loser's bracket, came back in the third inning to score five runs. Bucky Roebuck's double, a single by Gordon Bunting, a walk to Linwood Owens and Bob Harris' single accounted for two runs and John Huber's hit brought in another. Two more came home on Dwight Foster's hit.

The winners came up with two in the fourth to edge ahead and they held that advantage by shutting out Christian the rest of the way. A two-run homer by Harris provided the winning margin.

Meadowbrook now takes on St. James for the American Division crown. Game time is set for 7:30 Monday night. If Meadowbrook wins the first game, a second game will be needed to decide the American Division winner since St. James has not yet suffered a loss in tournament play.

No specific time or day has been set for the class between National and American Division winners for the city championship. The two division champions were originally scheduled to begin their best-of-three series Monday night but rain forced post-ponement of several games to push the series back.

When the Pittsburgh Pirates traded Matty Alou to the St. Louis Cardinals last January they dealt off their best run producer of 1970. Alou figured in the scoring of 143 runs.

The see-saw battle between Peninsula and Kinston for second place in the Carolina League finds Kinston occupying the spot today.

Kinston scored a 4-1 victory over Peninsula Friday night at Hampton, Va., to move back into second place ahead of Peninsula. The Eagles are a game and a half behind front-running Winston-Salem.

Meanwhile, Lynchburg defeated Winston-Salem 4-2 at Winston-Salem to sweep their two-game series. Steve Hardin scattered 10 hits in gaining the victory, but he had to have relief in the ninth when Winston-Salem got two men on base.

Burlington shelled four Raleigh-Durham pitchers for 13 hits to defeat the Triangles 8-4 at Durham. The Triangles also had 13 hits but were unable to make the most of them against Hank Bunnell and reliever John Susce.

In the other league game, Rocky Mount routed Salem 12-6 at Salem.

Tonight's games: Kinston at Peninsula, Burlington at Raleigh-Durham, Rocky Mount at Salem and Lynchburg at

by ANGUS SHORTT
Ducks Unlimited

BLACK DUCK

Eastern relative of the mallard, this duck has earned a reputation for wariness unequaled among ducks. Though widely distributed in eastern Canada, it is not found in large flocks like the mallard. Tree bordered marshes and swamps are favorite habitat. Age governs the leg coloring in drakes and the real red-leg is a mature bird. Average weight is about three and one-half pounds. Frequents both fresh and salt water marshes. Ducks Unlimited projects in the Maritimes benefit this splendid duck.

By JIM DEAN

A long cloud of chalky dust billowed up behind the truck and rolled across the tobacco fields as I left the highway and drove up the narrow dirt road.

I looked at my watch. It was 5 o'clock. I was early, but that was okay. For the first time in what seemed like months, I was in no hurry.

I came to an open gate, turned through it, then bumped across the grass and stopped in the shade of several old oak trees. The pond shimmered darkly under the brassy mid-summer sky as I walked down to the edge. It was not a large pond, maybe two acres.

The upper end was already shaded by the trees on the opposite bank.

I wrestled the small aluminum boat out of the truck and dragged it down to the bank. Then, I got my tackle box, cushion, rods, net, paddle, and the small cooler and put them in the boat.

It was hot, and there was no breeze. The man on the radio had said it was 93 degrees. At least, I thought. I took a drink from the cooler and then walked back up to the truck and sat under one of the oaks to wait and watch. It was funny how already the pond was working its spell. Overhead, two doves flew past. In the distance, a lone buzzard hung in the sky. Insects buzzed and whined, but other than that, it was quiet. Not even the noise from the highway could be heard, and for once, there was no ribbon of jet vapor in the sky.

Across the pond, tobacco was curing in a log barn, and several times I thought I detected the faint smell of the leaves.

I looked at my watch. It was past six. Time to get going.

I walked back to the boat, pushed it into the water and sat on the front seat where I could scull with the paddle with one hand and fish with the other.

I rigged a popping bug on my fly rod and a blue worm on my casting rod, then I quietly paddled along the banks casting the bug into the grassy nooks.

Several small bluegills took the popper, but they really didn't seem to want it—eating just to be eating.

After I had fished past the stumps without a strike, I paddled out into the deeper water and began to fish with the plastic worm.

I fished very slowly, and by 8 o'clock, I had covered the pond rather thoroughly, but without success.

Okay, be that way, I thought. I don't care if you don't bite. And strangely enough I didn't. I was content to stretch out across a boat seat with the cushion under my head and watch the high clouds while the boat drifted.

A snake doctor lit on my foot, and I left him there. A leaf drifted past like a tiny sailboat. The shadows lengthened across the pond, and the sun glittered behind the trees for awhile, then dipped under the ridge.

I need to do this at least once a week, I thought. Sitting at my desk a few days later, I happened to notice a sign I have hanging on a nearby file cabinet.

Foolhardiness Has No Place In The Water

By RAY SCHARF
Aquatic Director and Swim Coach
East Carolina University

Every year hundreds of lives are lost by persons with good intentions who attempt to aid other persons who are in difficulty in the water.

On protected beaches where there are regular lifeguards on duty, the best assistance one bather can give to another who is in trouble is:

Attract the attention of the lifeguard to the swimmer in trouble and attempt to swim to shore once the lifeguards are on their way.

In water over their heads bathers are cautioned not to attempt to aid stricken persons except when small children are in trouble. Rescue operations are often complicated because of would-be rescuers.

In unprotected areas all persons are cautioned to think before attempting any rescues. Except for strong experienced swimmers, swimming rescues are out. Find something that floats to throw or a pole to reach to a victim — call police, fire department, coast guard etc. (If a car is near by, a spare tire can be used as a float.)

If you think that you are a good enough swimmer to attempt a swimming rescue consider the following points before making up your mind.

1. How far is it out and back?
2. What is the condition of the water between you and the victim?
3. How much extra weight will you be pulling on the way in?
4. You will not have the use of at least one arm.

If there are any doubts in your mind DON'T GO! You don't help anyone by drowning yourself. You may risk more lives if someone must come to save you too.

Remember, think before you act, evaluate the situation, consider all the facts presented and don't even try a rescue unless you are sure that you can make it both ways. You may be more useful alive on the shore than as a drowned hero.

Karate Club Wins Trophies

The Summer School students of the ECU Karate club Southern Coast Championships held in Charlotte this past week. Miss Vikki Morrow took first place in the womens division while Jan Wilson won third. Jimmy Lewis won third place in the Green Belt Division and Sammy Isley took a first. Charles June and Mark Cayton placed two and three respectively in the Black Belt area. Instructor Bill McDonald said he was pleased with the six trophies won since only a small number of the club was able to attend.

The Boston Bruins had four men who scored 105 or more points in National Hockey League games last season. They were Phil Esposito (152), Bobby Orr (139), John Bucyk (116) and Ken Hodges (105.

DRAGON FLY . . . also called a Mosquito Hawk

Insect watching, like girl-watching, has special appeal to boys and men. Like girl-watching, the participant in watching insects must exercise a bit of caution or face the possibility of getting stung.

During the warm summer months Eastern North Carolina is a paradise of insects. Bees, wasps, beetles, ants, grasshoppers, crickets, dragon flies, butterflies and a host of other insect population swarm for a short life span through grasses, weeds, and forests, displaying the beauty of their form and color to any one who takes time to observe them.

Incidentally, girls and women are known to be among those who enjoy the rewards of insect-watching.

Insect Watching — Summertime Fun

After hesitating for a moment, he would enter the flower, gather pollen (photo at right), or move on to another flower without entering.

One wonders if he was determining if there was enough pollen inside to justify entering, or if this might be an instinctive act of politeness to determine if another insect was already inside.

Text and Photographs
by Jerry Raynor

Awkwardness and gracefulness are two of many characteristics observable in various species of insects.

The Japanese Beetle at left, climbing a fern, is beautifully iridescent, a creature of dark green and burnished gold. But he's a clumsy fellow, constantly tumbling from his perch as he laboriously climbs his way from meal to meal.

The ant at right, although a rather plain creature of one color, moves with the speed and grace of a trained ballerina.

Archeologists Hunt Secrets Of Caesarea

By HAL McCLURE

SEDOT YAM, Israel (AP) — An American archeological team is utilizing the tools of modern science to solve the long buried mysteries of the Roman city of Caesarea.

It's a race against time—and bananas.

"We have to preserve the antiquities and stop encroaching agriculture, mainly banana plantations," explains Dr. Robert Bull, expedition leader.

Caesarea was built by King Herod the Great in the first century before Christ as the capital of Roman Palestine.

It was one of the largest Roman colonial cities in the Middle East, sprawling over 8,000 acres on the Mediterranean coast, about half way between what is now Tel Aviv and Haifa. Its population may have reached a half-million.

After the Romans came the Persians and the Byzantines, who were in turn vanquished by Araby's desert warriors under the sword of Islam.

Europe's crusading knights conquered Caesarea in the 12th century and held it on and off the next 200 years until its final destruction by the Arabs in 1291.

Most of Caesarea's past grandeur lies buried under the drifting sands today. Only a few Byzantine columns and statues and the squat Crusader fortress are tourist attractions.

Except for a fine Herodian theater, excavated and partially restored by an Italian team in the mid-1960s, and a crumbling aqueduct north of town, nothing can be seen of the original Roman city.

Bull finds it incredible that there has been no real attempt—until now—to uncover Roman Caesarea.

"Lord knows what we will find here," he adds.

For it was only 10 years ago that archeologists discovered a Roman inscription mentioning the name Pontius Pilate.

It was the first archeological evidence of the actual existence of the procurator of Judea, under whose rule, from 26-36 A.D., the crucifixion of Jesus occurred.

Bull, who is director of the William F. Albright Institute of Archeological Research in Jerusalem and head of Drew University's archeological department, has collected a team of 50 volunteers, primarily students from Drew and Los Angeles' Occidental College. They receive credit for the dig.

"We are digging with teaspoons, as it were, so slowly it is agonizing," says the stocky, balding archeologist. "We're sifting everything coming out of there—gems, pottery, coins, everything that is a dating clue."

Bull hopes to write the city's history eventually, after more excavation. Among the structures buried are a giant amphitheater and hippodrome, the locations of which are known, and a temple.

Bull also is using scientific aids in his search. These include infrared photography and measuring the earth's magnetic field and its resistivity.

Bull's team moves a fluxgate magnetometer across the fields to register variations in magnetic force, recorded when it encounters any anomaly, such as a wall buried under the sand. It is the first time this instrument has been used for such exploration in the area.

Plotting the various variations on a chart hopefully will yield the street patterns.

The team also plans to send an electric current through metal probes imbedded in the earth. The resistance encountered can be measured because electricity travels at one rate through sand and at another through stone. "Hopefully, I can get still another picture of what's beneath us," Bull said.

A third method to help find the streets will be to take infrared photos of Caesarea from the air at night as the earth cools. Sand quickly emits heat while buried stones hold it back. "The photos again should give us a pattern," the archeologist said.

"We still have another ace in the hole, and I mean that literally," Bull said. "I mean the sewers."

Caesarea had a unique sewer system, flushed daily by the sea. The flooding tide would come up into the sewers beneath the city and the ebb tide would flush them out.

Some of the sewers were nine feet in diameter, "big enough to drive a Jeep through," Bull says. He has located several sewer entrances, which have been blocked by sand. Bull said he could trace the sewers back under the city to locate the streets. "Roman engineers usually built sewers beneath the streets," he said.

Aviary Permits A Close Look

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Bird watchers here are all a-flutter over a new aviary that permits them to mingle with native Virginia birds at close-up camera range.

"It's proved to be one of our biggest attractions," said Reinier Hendriksen, city horticulturist who helps oversee the nature center in Richmond's rolling, wooded Maymont Park.

In an age of increasing criticism of cruel and unnatural confinement of wildlife, the aviary, unobtrusively integrated with its surroundings, seems to be enjoyed as much by the birds as the bird watchers.

Nestled into the side of a slope, its vinyl-coated green mesh screening almost invisible against the leaves of the oak trees towering above it, the aviary offers all the comforts of the wild to its colorful inhabitants.

A fast running stream cascades over a musical waterfall, which, in turn, feeds a small pond over which glide a variety of species of native Virginia duck. Dogwood, wild cherry and pine trees supply the necessary perches while juniper, osmanthus, mountain laurel and azalea provide ground cover.

A series of green metal booms resembling a ship's rigging supports the mesh at an average 35-foot height to give the birds an ample flyway.

One of the aviary's unique features is a redwood and cement V-shaped observation deck that cantilevers from the slope to give observers a close view of the birds while restricting them from the actual nesting area.

Two doorways overhung with white plastic strips give visitors easy access but appear solid enough to the birds to discourage egress.

The $35,000 facility, the latest addition to the nature center's wildlife exhibit, encountered an unexpected problem at the start.

"Rats," said Hendriksen. "Rats killed most of our ground nesting birds and we had to clear the entire area and fumigate with gas before we could build up the bird population on a permanent basis."

"But they don't do any harm," said Hendriksen. "They're compatible with the birds and add to the natural setting."

Girl Scout Day Camp Is This Week

Greenville Girl Scout Day Camp will be held this week at Camp Hardee on the Pamlico River.

The theme this year is "Eco-Action—To Know, To Care and To Be Involved." Special resource people are Mrs. Evelyn Spangler, a Pitt County Home Economics Extension Agent, and Ed Kainowski, director of the Soil Conservation Service of the Department of Agriculture for Beaufort County.

A bus will pick up campers at 8:30 a.m. at St. Gabriel's School and at 8:45 a.m. at Rose High School and will deliver them to these points in the afternoons.

The staff director is Mrs. J.F. Davenport and the assistant director is Mrs. Wyatt Brown.

Other directors are Mrs. J.J. McAllister, Brownies: Mrs. John Weeden and Mrs. Charles Van Sickle, Fly-ups; Mrs. Minos Hatem, Juniors: Mrs. Charles Croom Jr., Cadettes, Mrs. R.P. Grady, Waterfront director: Mrs. Hoyt Narron, nurse; and Mrs. A.H. Cheek Jr., equipment chairman.

Senior Scouts are serving as program aides. They are Josie Boyette, Cherry Croom, Deenie Croom, Martha Davenport, Lynn Dodds, Hazel Hatem, Eileen McAllister, Debbie Mosely, Sally Singleton, Vickie Tedder, and Debbie Toler.

Easterners Set Up Wells Fargo

NEW YORK (UPI) —Wells Fargo & Company, perhaps the most famous transport service in the West, was founded by two easterners.

Vermont-born Henry Wells and New Yorker William Fargo set up their express and banking concern in San Francisco in 1852 to transport gold from the mine areas to San Francisco as well as provide coach trips across the country.

Sex Education To Be Required

COPENHAGEN (UPI) — Compulsory sex education will begin in Danish state schools in August as a result of legislation passed by Parliament.

A directive to school officials said the move had four aims: to avoid "uncertainty and fear which could give the pupils problems"; to give them an understanding of the relationship between sex and love; to give each pupil the chance to find a way of sex life best suited to his personality, and to stress the importance of a sense of responsibility in sexual relations.

Medical School Costs Run High

NEW YORK (UPI)—It costs well over $4,000 a year on the average to attend medical school, reports the Health Insurance Institute.

The institute says latest figures available show expenditures for living and education averaged $4,394. Single students averaged $3,421 a year and married students with no children $5,727. For students with two children or more, the cost went up to $6,310.

Best We Can Do For Children? Let Them Grow

By DR. HAIM GINOTT
Living With Teenagers

MOTHER'S BIRTHDAY came and went and there was no greeting from her 14-year-old daughter Ruth. Mother was disappointed. She knew Ruth was very involved at camp. But she felt forgotten, nonetheless.

A few days later, mother received a call.

Ruth: Are you angry with me for having forgotten your birthday? The day just slipped by. I got you a belated gift, and my performance tomorrow evening will be another special gift for you. What time will you be here?

Mother: Why don't you suggest the time to fit your schedule?

Ruth: Please come at noon. I'd love to have lunch with you.

Father and Morther drove to the camp theater. As if on signal, the air rang out with a thunderous rendition of "Happy Birthday." Mother, stunned and surprised by the song, smiled with joy. Ruth came bouncing out of the group.

"When I discovered that I was late in wishing you a happy birthday," she explained, "I took my woes to my friends — the drama people. You heard the results."

Mother was speechless. All she could say, finally, was: "My cup runneth over."

The best was yet to come: Ruth's performance on stage. Mother could hardly believe that this beautiful actress, so sure of herself, so adept and elegant, was her "little" girl. "She is growing up" Mother thought, "and I must not hold her back. I must let her grow away without guilt."

Ruth's mother arrived at a most significant conclusion: To support her daughter's desire for independence. The best we can do for teenagers is to let them grow and separate from us without guilt.

Marni (age 16): I hate the roast chicken you made for dinner. I'm not eating it.

Mother: You may substitute something else for the chicken.

Marni: Don't worry, I won't starve. You know I can nourish myself. I'll find something.

Marni sat down at the table, and sliced herslef a chunk of white meat. She chatted amiably and ate heartily. No one mentioned her tirade against chicken.

Marni: You'll have to teach me to cook, Mom. This chicken is delicious. Of course, I'd like to cook with wine and herbs, but first I'll concentrate my energies on becoming an actress.

Mother: That's very important for you — isn't it?

Marni: Oh yes. When are my ugly braces coming off? I feel like a freak with them.

Mother: Your dentist can give you the information you want.

Marni: He won't commit himself. He always asked me to trust him . . . (without pause) . . . You know that record you bought me before the summer — well, I didn't really like it at first. Now it's my favorite. Isn't that odd? I hear things in it now that I've never heard. It's beautiful. The poetry sings by itself. It's lovely and lyrical and it makes me feel like crying. Isn't that absurd? I wonder why I am so inconsistent? I'm ambivalent — that's what I am.

In this episode Mother allowed her daughter to ramble, without rebuking her. She did not try to point out contradictions, or to set her thinking straight. Instead she listened with sympathy and responded succinctly. Mother's reward was that Marnie felt free to share her inner feelings and intimate thoughts.

RUTH, AGE 16, had a few extra minutes in the morning and hovered around the kitchen doing nothing. Mother was tempted to remark that her shoes needed polishing and her jacket could stand some brushing. Mother also notices that two buttons missing on her sweater were replaced with pins. Her pleated skirt showed evidence of still another safety pin holding up the hem.

Mother's first impluse was to criticize; but she resisted the temptation. She did not want to start the day with a rebuke. Mother said: "There are safety pins in your sweater and skirt." Ruth answered laughingly, "Oh, that." Mother replied, "The secret of my disappearing safety pins has finally been solved."

Ruth went to school still brandishing the telltale silver streakes on her sweater and skirt, but she had a smile on her lips. The buttons were replaced in the evening.

It was mother's light touch that contributed to the happy ending. Instead of making a loud issue of the missing buttons, Mother alluded to the need to replace them. Ruth got the point and appreciated its gentleness. With teenagers, gentle persuasion is often more effective than brute bombardment.

"Mother! You didn't really think I was too busy to remember, did you?"

Busy Chef Is A Hamburger Man

By JOSEPH D. KEEFER

ATLANTA (UPI)—It may come as a surprise to some of his customers—people such as Alfred Hitchcock and Jack Benny among others—but most of the time when Hank Norris is hungry he settles for a hamburger.

Norris is a chef and rated as one of the country's best. He became well known to many of the big names in entertainment, sports, politics and business when he was top chef at California's Mission Inn, which closed its doors this summer because of financial difficulties.

Today, Norris is head chef at Atlanta's Riviera Hyatt House, but he still reminisces fondly about the Mission Inn.

"They'll never build another hotel like it," Norris said. "I just could never believe that it would close. I had a feeling I was in love with that hotel."

Norris moves well for a man of 340 pounds and he looks younger than his 50 years. He's jovial and soft-spoken when sitting at a table in the rear of a nearly deserted dining room in mid-afternoon. But after he charges through the swinging doors into the kitchen, he's all business.

At the Mission Inn, Norris watched over a huge kitchen manned by 27 cooks who prepared every dish imaginable for discriminating guests in 17 dining rooms spread over seven floors. The complete food service staff totaled 240 persons, including two who did nothing but polish silverware.

For three years—from 1966 to 1969—every dish served at the Mission Inn bore the mark of Hank Norris. He ruled the kitchen with an iron fist, he made up the inn's menu using his own recipes and he "always worked on the line" with other cooks putting out the food.

The menu was topped by Chateaubriand, coq au vin (chicken in wine), rack of lamb and veal scallopini—each of which cost $9. But even those specialties didn't satisfy one business executive who was holding a banquet for 37 persons and wanted duck fixed a different way for each person. Norris balked at first, but finally agreed to do it.

Norris recalls that the last person he served at the Mission Inn was Alfred Hitchcock. "He sent word to me in the kitchen that he wanted to see me," Norris said. "but it's my policy never to go into the dining room because I'm always covered with food.

"I sent word back that if he wanted to see me, he'd have to come to the kitchen. He came. He complimented me on the meal. And I explained to him why I couldn't leave the kitchen."

Norris also remembers an encounter with Jack Benny when the comedian was staying overnight in the inn. "Somehow he got through to me by phone," Norris said. "He complained that he was 'freezing' in his room. I went up and found him sitting on a chair, dressed only in underclothes, holding a blanket around his shoulders. It seems he didn't know how to turn on the heat."

Norris got his first taste of kitchen work in the 1930s when, as a teen-ager, he peeled potatoes for his grandfather who ran the kitchen in the Elks lodge at Belleville, Ill. Norris spent more than 20 years cooking in restaurants from New England to California, building up a reputation that would land him the top job at the Mission Inn in 1966.

Norris headed the kitchen there until the inn—struggling financially—closed temporarily three years later. It reopened again in nine months, but by that time Norris had moved on to other kitchens on the west coast. He feared the inn was doomed, and he was right.

The sprawling 300-room hotel —a favorite resort for the rich and famous—had begun as a 12-room travelers' haven in 1876. In the chapel of the Spanish-style inn, thousands of couples were married, including a young lawyer name Richard Nixon and Thelma Catherine (Pat) Ryan on June 21, 1940.

About a year after leaving the Mission Inn, Norris joined the Hyatt House hotel-restaurnt group and just recently was transferred to the Riviera Hyatt House here. He brought with him his wife and their two sons, aged 7 and 17. He has reorganized the Riviera's kitchen and put together a new menu. "It's my way or else," he said firmly.

He said that despite his weight, he "doesn't eat that much." But he adds with a wide grin, "I taste a lot." He likes hamburgers as a diet staple but when pressed to name a favorite dish, he goes with Chateaubriand. He shuns liquor. "I can't work and drink," he said.

He eats out "a couple times a month," always going unannounced so he will be treated like anyone else. What happens if he doesn't like the food? "I don't complain," he explained. "I just don't go back."

Still Writes In Her Spare Time

JOURNALIST AND PLAYWRIGHT . . . Mrs. Bernadette Hoyle chats with Lindsay Bowen, a local resident and employee of the U.S. Labor Department, whose one-act play "Roommates" was produced at East Carolina University last year. (Reflector Staff Photo)

Mrs. Bernedette Hoyle, a newspaper columnist whose writing has appeared frequently in North Carolina and out of state newspapers, now Public Information Officer for the North Carolina Council on Mental Retardation, has returned to Raleigh after spending a week in Greenville.

A native of Henderson, Mrs. Hoyle is in Greenville in connection with the annual summer In-Service Training Conference for the staff of coordinators from all points of the state meeting here for the annual training event.

In August, Mrs. Hoyle will, as in past years, be planner and coordinator of the annual Tar Heel Writers Roundtable meeting in Raleigh. As director of the biggest literary event in North Carolina, she will be working with established and aspiring young writers gathering for the full two day event.

Commenting on her book "Tar Heel Writers I Know," Mrs. Hoyle said it "is the result of interviews with 35 prominent Tar Heel writers and attempts to show something of their personalities and of their work."

Of her years in journalism, she commented: "During the time I lived in Smithfield, I devoted my time to free-lance writing and press photography." These were the years, she recalled, "when I contributed extensively to the Raleigh News and Observer, the Greensboro Daily News, the Durham Herald, the Winston-Salem Journal and the Raleigh Times." Out of state newspapers which used her material are the Washington Post, The Philadelphia Inquirer and the Richmond Times Dispatch.

"I'm still writing in my spare time," she said, " and last fall I had the pleasure of teaching a creative writing class in the Vance County Technical Institute."

The bayonet took its name from the French city of Bayonne.

Training Sensory Specialists Is Her Job

By BETTY CASEY

"I made the first tuna fish frankfurter in the United States," smiled personable Barbara Hall Ellis, a food technologist. "It didn't go over too well," she admitted with a laugh.

Mrs. Ellis also has a patent on one of the first instant puddings, and helped develop "Tang", an orange juice substitute beverage.

She has been involved in many other fascinating projects along similar lines. Companies with whom she has been associated include Kimberly-Clark, Lipton's, The Lord Rank Research Center and Beecham House in England, Canada Packers, a Gloucester Fishery, Crossley-Shelvadore Refrigerators, Anheuser-Busch, Sea Grant, Continental Can, and General Foods. Others are General Mills, Armour and Co., Swift and Co., Mallinckrodt Chemical Company and Hunt-Wesson Foods, Inc.

Now Mrs. Ellis operates her own Sensory Evaluation Consultant service from her home in Greenville. In other words she emplanes at the drop of a hat to rush off to Pennsylvania or Minnesota or England to train "taste testers" for commercial food firms. Why do they need food taste testers?

Mechanical machines can measure distance farther than eye can see, and also temperature changes too trivial to feel, in addition to sounds pitched higher than ear can hear..."but there is no mechanical means of measuring taste," the consultant said.

For instance. What makes bacon taste like bacon, rather than like lamb? Bacon, with a combination of many flavors — smoke, salt, cured pork, sweet and acid — is chewy and crisp and leaves a meaty aftertaste. Its own characteristic blend of flavors distinguish it from any other food. But how do they decide just how much of each flavor it needs?

"Trained sensory specialists," Mrs. Ellis explained, "measure and evaluate the taste of over 5,000 new food products annually marketed by commercial companies before the products are exposed to the nitty-gritty of the consumer market place." As a Sensory Evaluation Consultant, Mrs. Ellis is in the unusual profession of training some of these sensory specialists.

"Taste testing is usually done by a group of about four to six taste experts called a Flavor Profile Panel," said Mrs. Ellis. She has trained sixteen of the panels for various companies.

No basic educational background is required for panel members but they must establish a physiological ability to evaluate taste by means of a screening test. They are given four unknown solutions to taste and identify as salty, sweet, sour or bitter — the four different tastes. Then, since taste is largely determined by its aroma, they sniff 20 unmarked bottles of household solutions such as vanilla, orange, lemon, lime, ammonia, lighter fluid and rubbing alchohol, which they must be able to identify. They also describe the odor with terms such as "musty, rancid, spicy, floral, or chemical."

"Once their ability and sensitivity have been established," Mrs. Ellis said, "they are ready to go to work."

They meet in a special room devoid of conflicting odors and preferably with separate booths. Individual samples of food to be analyzed await them in specially washed glass beakers kept at a specific temperature before and during testing.

They not only distinguish each individual food flavor and aroma, but they also evaluate and make a record of the changes in flavor from the first bite through chewing, swallowing, and after swallowing. Panelists must learn to be objective and not be influenced by individual food likes and dislikes.

"My first job," Mrs. Ellis said, "was doing laboratory work in a Fishery in Gloucester on production development and quality control." There she made the tuna fish frankfurter which never became popular and extracted Vitamin A from fish livers for sale as a vitamin. Also she worked on cat food recipes and experimented with canning scallops but was not able to overcome their tendency to turn brown and to disintegrate "as a result, scallops are not canned," she stated.

At the refrigerator company her work entailed checking the effect on foods of the first experimental automatic defroster. "At first, when the heat came on to defrost," she recalled, "it partially cooked and dried out the food."

In the Anheuser-Busch corn products division she was project leader in the use of corn starch and corn syrup. That is where she got the patent on an instant pudding; which was a new concept at the time.

The development of "Tang" was a General Foods project. "Before addition of the orange color, flavoring and opaque look," she said, "Tang was a nutritional clear liquid with no flavoring."

Mrs. Ellis is active in several other related areas. She writes for food product development magazine as an Associate Editor and has published over 25 scientific articles and a manual on sensory methods.

She received an award for writing the best technical from the Society of Soft Drink Technologists.

Another project is that of designing a "tasting room" to be used by the Home Economics Department at ECU.

A new field is the development of a profile method for evaluating fabric softness to be used in feminine products for the Kimberly-Clark company, one of her clients.

"There is no instrument to measure softness and drape of fabrics," she said, "and the problem is to find evaluative terms with specific meanings to be used as guidance for panel members. Softness is a low degree of hardness," she explained.

The trim businesswoman would like to become further involved in North Carolina projects. She has worked some on crabmeat for the Sea Grant company. "Fish is of great economic importance to this state," she declared.

She and her husbnad, Theodore, R. III, who teaches in the English Department at ECU, have been in Greenville for three years.

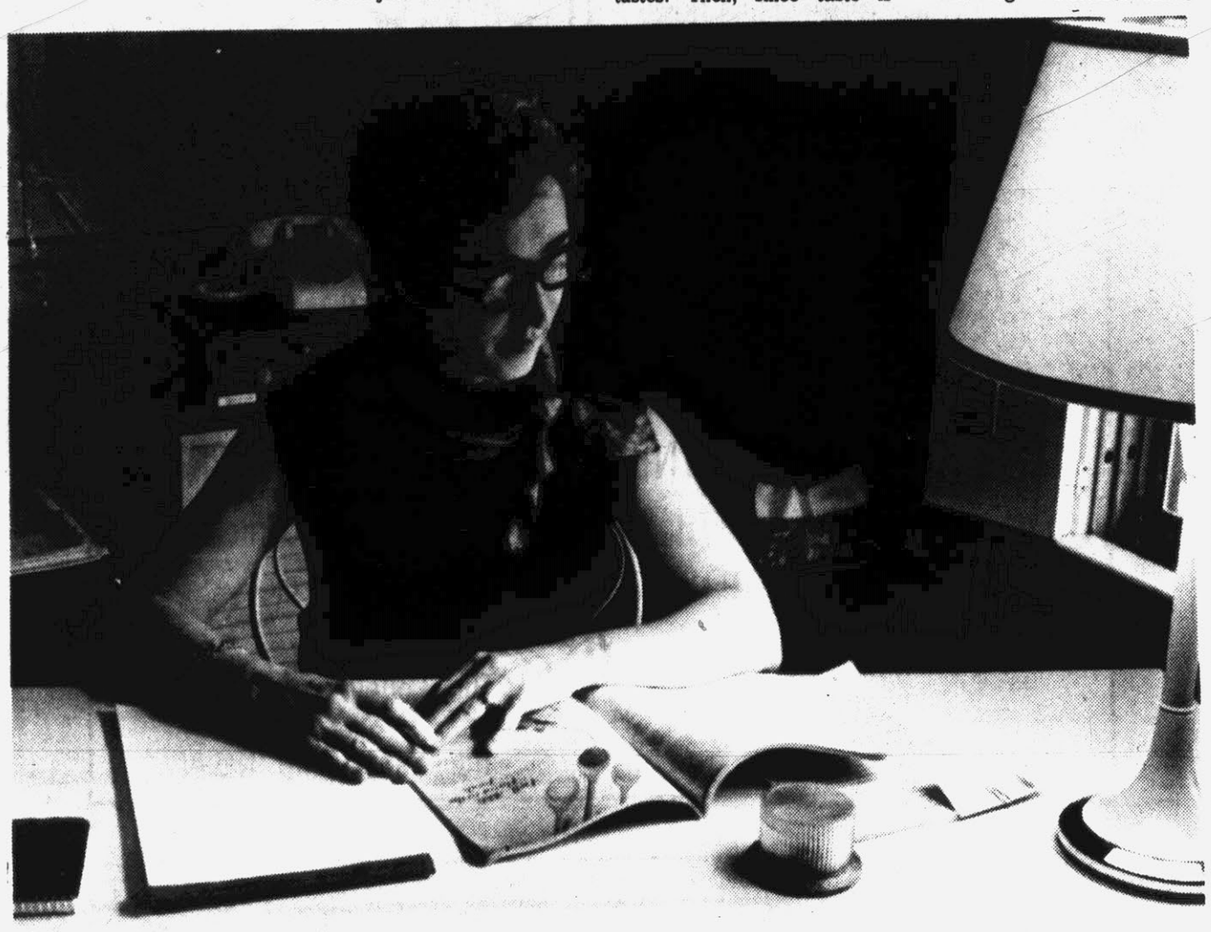

"We love it here," she confessed, "it is so beautiful."

The couple have two Siamese cats, "Sirikit," named for the Queen of Thailand, and "Bhumibol", named for the King and nicknamed "Bhum-Bhum." Hobbies include refinishing antiques, sailing, and snow-skiing.

The busy traveler enjoys doing embroidery and crewel needlework, "especially while waiting between planes at airports." Another pastime is entertaining and cooking. What else? Barbara bakes sour dough bread and cans fresh vegetables and fruits in season between far flung trips to teach trainees to recognize good taste in order to better please your taste.

EVALUATING FOOD . . . Mrs. Barbara Hall Ellis, Sensory Evaluation Consultant, "sniffs" a beaker of food to evaluate it. Flavor Profile Panelists must be able to establish an ability to evaluate taste.

MRS. ELLIS . . . writes scientific papers about her work. She is an associate editor for "Food Product Development" magazine and has published over 25 scientific articles and a manual on sensory methods.

HER SIAMESE CAT . . . "Sirkit" is named for the Queen of Thailand. Mrs. Ellis has another Siamese cat named "Bhumibol" for the King and nicknamed "Bhum-Bhum."

Actress Plans Escape From Apes

By REBECCA MOREHOUSE

NEW YORK (WNS) — Kim Hunter is not going to make a career of playing an ape named Dr. Zira.

"I've explored Zira as much as I care to," said the actress. "I think it's time to say good bye to her."

She first played the simian scientist Zira in "Planet of the Apes," which 20th-Century Fox released in 1968. When it turned out to be one of the most profitable pictures in the studio's history, a sequal, "Beneath the Planet of the Apes," was filmed and released in 1970.

She plays Zira a third and perhaps last time in "Escape from the Planet of the Apes," now on screens across the country.

Why would an Academy Award winner play a role in which her own true (and quite nice) face is never seen?.

"I did the first picture because it was a terribly good script and I had an awfully good part," she said. "I balked like a mule about the second picture but I did it. I was there principally for continuity; I didn't have a lot to do. The third script again is awfully good and my part is delicious."

A day after she made that statement, a New York Times critic described "Escape from the Planet of the Apes" as "one of the better new movies in town" and Miss Hunter's characterization of Zira as "hugely successful." Roddy McDowall, her chimpanzee husband in the movie, received favorable notice, too.

Baby Chimp

"The new picture takes place more or less in the present, in Los Angeles," she said. "I have a baby in the picture. We used a six-month-old chimp just off the boat from Africa — they don't start training them until they're a year old.

"We got along splendidly. He plays a boy, Milo, in the picture but actually he's a she. He was terribly alert and behaved very much like a baby; he would have temper tantrums. I was not afraid but I was cautious: They do have teeth.

"The worst part about all these pictures was the makeup; one never got used to it. It took 3½ hours to get it on and 1½ hours to get it off. Roddy and I would come in together and he had a cassette stereo and we'd listen to lovely music. He has wonderful collection of opera.

"I always took a tranquilizer before I got into the chair. It was the only way I could keep from climbing the wall. We'd have a liquid lunch and sometimes we'd have steak cut up in very tiny pieces — we ate it with a toothpick. The makeup is glued solidly to one's skin."

The biggest hit of Kim Hunter's career, stage and screen, was the Tennessee Williams play, "A Streetcar Named Desire." She received an Oscar (best supporting actress) for her performance of Stella in the movie, and the New York Drama Critics Award for her acting in the Broadway play. Vivien Leigh got the best-actress Oscar for her portrayal of Blanche Du Bois.

"It's the only thing I've been in that, so far as I know, got only one bad review," she said. "That was by George Jean Nathan.

Too Soon

"Streetcar" was made too soon as a movie. People who saw one movie and did not see the play never realized what Blanche's problem was. The movie did not reveal that she had found her young husband to be a homosexual. The rape scene could not be shown in the movie. You couldn't talk about homosexuality or show rape on the screen in those days.

"I think Vivien was the rightest of all the people who played Blanche. She made one believe the two sides of the lady, the gentitlity and the sensuality."

Miss Hunter was in London not long ago for the Drury Lane opening of "Carol Channing and Her Ten Stout-Hearted Men." Her husband, Robert Emmett, wrote the sketches for it — and danced in it.

"Robert was a dancer years ago. In Toronto, they lost one of their stout-hearted men and asked Robert to fill in. They broke him in Baltimore and he opened in the show in London, He used to write a lot of comedies for television. Now he does mostly specials. He's written all of Barbra Streisand's except the one in Central Park.

"Carol swept London off its feet — it was marvelous, so exciting, the reviews were fantastic. The Drury Lane is one of the largest theaters in the West End and Carol's is essentially a one-woman show. Laurence Oliver told her, 'You've got to have more nerve than anyone I know.'"

Kim Hunter was born in Detroit and moved to Miami Beach with her family at the age of ten. Originally, her name was Janet Cole. She and her husband and their teenage son Sean live in Greenwich Village. Sean is expert in electric bass. Their daughter was graduated from Yale Law School and is practicing law in Connecticut.

TWO VIEWS OF KIM . . . Kim Hunter says she is not going to make a career of playing an ape named Dr. Zira. She plays Zira for the third and perhaps last time in "Escape from the Planet of the Apes," now on screens across the country.

Women's Liberation Absent On Fairways

By KIMBERLEY COY

ST. SIMONS ISLAND, Ga. (WNS) — Feminism has a long way to go on the fairways, where professional golfers give hardly a backward glance to their sister competitors.

Sue Roberts and Debbie Austin, both 23, are among the small and select group of professional female golfers, and they claim that the golf world for women pros sometimes seems like one big sandtrap.

Sue, in a white pantsuit, and Debbie in a pink one, sat at the clubhouse at Sea Palms resort clubhouse on St. Simons Island, after a day of practice. They were on their way through Georgia for a tournament in Raleigh.

They travel around the country, driving together and performing what seems like endless one-night stands from as early as March to mid-November. The rest of the year they must find jobs to support themselves.

TV Blackout

The pickings are lean.

"The purses aren't nearly as large in women's golf as in men's. For one thing, people aren't as interested, and one reason for that is that they're not as acquainted with us because we're not on television," said perky and well tanned Sue. She's been a pro for two years. Debbie's been on the circuit for three.

There are about 60 lady pros who play every week, and a hundred more teaching pros who won't travel.

"We can't get as good off-season jobs as men, either. They get all the top-paying ones. We get things like a starter or a cart girl or instructor. Maybe even working the snack bar or being a waitress. We just have to take anything, and we do — because we want to stay in the sport," Debbie said.

How can two 23-year-olds let loose on the world possibly exist with so littly money?

Sue answers, "Well, we get free clubs and equipment, and wealthy people or companies sponsor us on the tour."

But they have to pay nightly motel expenses.

"It's close," Debbie nods. "It's a very individual game and it's chancey. You miss the permanence, and you have to enjoy traveling.

"There's no time to be lonely. You have to take care of the laundry, spend all that time driving, spend time with your sponsors, go to cocktail parties, practice then participate in pro-am tournaments, write to your other sponsors, do bookkeeping for tax deductibles and send thank-you notes. Any free time, you have to write home, let them know you're all right and still eating. Then maybe sometime you get a chance to relax and read a book."

Romance?

What about romance? Debbie laughs, "Listen, we know better. No man's going to put up with the schedule we keep. We're just going to have to settle down someday — but not now."

Sue, who hails from Columbus, Ohio, said she got interested in the game through her family which plays together. She started seriously at the age of 11. Debbie, from Oneida, N.Y., started much the same way at the age of 12. "My folks' new home is on a golf course," she said.

Other differences between man's golf and woman's, they admit freely, is man's strength and force behind the iron. And, they say, men might be more fun to watch because they take the game ever more seriously than women.

"Women are much more outgoing than men. They'll talk to spectators going from hole to hole in a tournament. Men could care less about spectators," Debbie said.

Debbie attended Rawlins and Miami-Dade Junior College for a year, then dropped out to go pro. Sue finished high school and started polishing her game. "I just couldn't see putting it off," she said.

They advised that no one with more than a five handicap go pro, but it seems that a low handicap, a small appetite, a pound of energy and a lot of will are requisites.

Engagements Announced

MISS BILLIE FAYE SUMRELL . . . is the daughter of Mrs. Thelma Sumrell of Ayden who announces her engagement to Robert David Smith Jr., son of Mrs. Mamie Ruth Smith of Rt. 2, Greenville, and the late Mr. Robert David Smith. Miss Sumrell is also the daughter of the late Mr. William A. Sumrell. A Sept. 3 wedding is planned.

MISS BRENDA KAY WINBERRY . . . is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Lee Winberry of Robersonville who announce her engagement to Thomas Eugene Furlough, son of Mr. and Mrs. Guilford Furlough of Hamilton. The wedding will take place Sept. 19.

Here's The Art Of Making Good Muffins

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Don't work hard when you are making muffins. Easy does it. If you mix the batter too vigorously your muffins will be riddled with tunnels, on the tough side and peaked. Their exterior, too, is likely to be smoother and paler than that of muffins made by stirring gently.

The following recipe produces a pleasant hot bread that's a little different from the usual variety. That's because cinnamon raisin bran, a new ready-to-eat cereal, is added.

Muffins should be served as soon as they have finished baking. Although for convenience sake we have reheated many a muffin, we must confess that this way they aren't quite so good as when they are eaten fresh from the oven.

RAISIN BRAN MUFFINS

1 cup unsifted flour, stir to aerate before measuring
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons sugar
1-3rd cup butter or margarine
1 large egg
¾ cup milk
1¼ cups cinnamon raisin bran

Butter 10 muffin-pan cups, each 2½ inches across top and 1 inch deep.

In a medium mixing bowl thoroughly stir together the flour, baking powder, salt and sugar. With a pastry blender, cut in butter until particles are tiny.

In a small mixing bowl beat egg until thickened and lemon color; add milk and beat to combine. Add to flour mixture; stir only until dry ingredients are moistened. Fold in cinnamon raisin bran.

Fill prepared muffin-pan cups about 2-3rds full. Bake in a preheated 400-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in center comes out clean and muffins are lightly browned—about 20 minutes.

Makes 10.

Equality For Japanese Women

By TRIXIE BELMONT

TOKYO (WNS) — Masako Kameyama is a ravishingly beautiful model girl with long straight legs who would adorn the catwalk of any Paris fashion show. She is 23, has her own apartment in Tokyo, and when we met, her long hair tumbled over her black see-through blouse and her white hip-hugger slacks were held up by an ultra-modern buckled belt.

And her father is a Buddhist monk. Which just about sums up the progress of women's lib in Japan.

Masako is one of 20 million Japanese girls who work for a living. She graduated in English and French literature at Tokyo university four years ago, but the thought of becoming a teacher appalled her. She became a model.

Any parental objection? "Of course," she admitted. "My father thought modeling most unladylike, but my mother was on my side. My father still doesn't like what I do, but he's given up the battle — we're friends. I go home to see the family twice a year."

From Defeat

Ironically it was Japan's defeat which brought freedom to Japanese women, for MacArthur produced a constitution giving women equality in everything ranging from property rights to divorce.

The result is that women have invaded almost every male preserve. At six every evening Tokyo's pavements are crammed with happy micro-skirted teenagers — the girl often with a male arm around her shoulder — as they make their way home.

Yet this is Japan and if you stand at the same spot a couple of hours later you might well see the same girl without recognizing her. For then she could be decorously dressed in an old-style kimono, trotting off with her parents to a formal party.

On the whole parents seem to have accepted the changed ways of Japanese youth — perhaps because families are very united in Japan and so neither age group wishes to hurt the other. Most girls go home each evening, as in any city, and if they tend to stray on the way, nobody remarks on it.

It's rather different though with girls who don't go home — because of the nature of their jobs. Itsuko Abiru achieved the dream of almost every Japanese girl when at 22 she became a stewardess on Japan Air Lines. This, however, meant travelling, spending nights as far away as London, San Francisco, Honolulu.

Father

An only child (and now a full-fledged purser on a jumbo jet) she met stiff opposition from her father. Her mother — as so often happens, perhaps because of women's harsh role in the past — backed her up.

"Go out and see the world," she said,' she said. "I will talk to your father."

Any arguments? Rather primly Itsuko replied, "We don't really argue in Japanese families. Of course everything is changing," she added. "TV has made an enormous difference to parents' views."

It has indeed — particularly where love is concerned. Today young girls look to love as a foundation for marriage — not their parents' view that marriage comes first with a hope of love later. As Keiko Shirashi, a Tokyo schoolteacher explained to me, "For tradition-minded parents this is entirely new. They just don't understand that it is better for everyone to fall in love first. But we're teaching them!"

Before the war, when a father wanted to marry off a daughter, he presented her with a photo of the intended and that was that. Today nine out of ten girls decide for themselves, and even in country areas where tradition dies hard, the rules are being bent. There are no more photos. Instead half a dozen male prospects are paraded at a series of tea ceremonies where the daughter, with lowered eyes and decorous manner, has a choice, even if limited.

Cover-Up

Curiously, these traditions still linger among the millions of girls working freely in the cities, even if only as a polite cover-up. Tetsuko Fukushima, who has worked for three years in a big store in Tokyo's Ginza, fell madly in love with a boy working in the store. He was 24, she 20, fond of hot pants (on sale everywhere in Tokyo) and as a member of the Japan Women's Lib group, she admits quite frankly that they were lovers.

But then came the question of marriage — and mark what happened. Beset by doubts about hurting her parents, Tetsuko reverted — if only in theory — to tradition. She asked her boss, the store's general manager, to act as the go-between which is still necessary when arranging a Shinto wedding.

He agreed, and made a formal visit to Tetsuko's parents, told them what a good worker she was, but felt that it was time she settled down and — as it so happened! — he knew just the man, and would be happy to present him for their approval. Tetsuko is getting married in September.

In Japan you don't ask if Tetsuko's parents realized they had been the victims of an artful dodge. You don't hurt people. Tetsuko has shown respect to her parents — and the parents, no doubt bewildered by a changing Japan, keep their counsel.

After Marriage

What happens after marriage? Who is the boss? Mrs. Tsuneko Ogawa, a woman's editor married to a TV director, told me, "We put all the money we earn into a paper bag at home and dip into it when we need some. Of course the husband represents the family, but more and more women are ruling behind the scenes."

Understandably — in view of the past — many young Japanese wives tolerate infidelity, perhaps as a throwback to the "traditional" rights of men when Japanese women were probably the most unhappy creatures on earth, bound by a blind obedience first to fathers and then to husbands.

Since that has gone, wives tend to turn a blind eye to the evenings a husband has to spend at "conferences," which used to be held with the assistance of tte renowned but vanishing geisha girls. (For who wants to spend years training to be a geisha when you can be a model or an air hostess?)

Now the conferences are held in the bars of the Ginza. And there, nothing has changed. For they are still staffed by exotic-looking Japanese girls, who still have no peers in the whole wide world when it comes to the gentle art of entertaining tired businessmen.

Lederhosen Are Standard Attire

INNSBRUCK, Austria (WNS) — "Mini-skirts yes. Hot pants no." Such was the poster of college men here, who themselves were wearing "lederhosen," the leather shorts that are standard male attire from cradle to grave. "Let ladies find their own fashions, not copy ours," said leader Hans Bruckner.

Godmother Prospect Turned Off

By Abigail Van Buren

(© 1971 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: How can a person tell a friend that she doesn't want to be the godmother of a child who is due to be born in a few months?

At first I was flattered when asked, but over the months I have been told what I, as a godparent, am expected to give my godchild, materially. It has been suggested that I start a bank account when the child is born and to add to it constantly until the child is ready for college. Also, I've been told that the godparent remembers his godchild on all gift-giving occasions such as birthdays, Easter, Christmas, etc.

All of this I would have probably done on my own, but to be told I must do so, rubs me the wrong way.

I have already gone overboard with gifts and favors for the parents and would probably have done so for their child, but I don't want to be taken advantage of. So, how do I get out of being a godparent without causing hard feelings?

RELUCTANT GODMOTHER

DEAR RELUCTANT: I can't guarantee that there will be no "hard feelings," but if you want to "get out of it," don't offer any "excuses" to justify your change of heart. Simply state that you have decided against accepting the "honor." [P. S. You sound like a big-hearted "softie" to me.]

DEAR ABBY: Our son has confessed to us that last summer he went to a public health physician and was treated for venereal disease. The boy was only 15 at the time! The doctor who treated our son assured the boy that he would not tell his parents.

I think parents have a right to know what is going on with their minor children. Can we sue this doctor?

PARENTS OF A MINOR

DEAR PARENTS: Sue him? You should thank him!

DEAR ABBY: I belong to a group of women who help support a mentally handicapped children's clinic. We are presently confronted with a very sticky problem. It was long suspected, but not confirmed that one of our oldest and most faithful members, "Mrs. X," "takes" things. They range from cigarets to expensive jewelry. Since we meet in each other's homes, members are becoming increasingly reluctant to offer their homes for this purpose, and you can't blame them. It's too costly to meet in a hotel. Lately we have assigned a woman to be the "watchdog" for "Mrs. X."

Our bylaws provide that a member can be expelled if her conduct is embarrassing or detrimental to the group, but "Mrs. X" has not been well physically [she has suffered two serious strokes] and her mental condition is deteriorating as well. Can you suggest a solution. STUMPED

DEAR STUMPED: Assign two women to be "watchdogs" for "Mrs. X." And since you are all aware of her actions, it's highly unlikely that she will be able to "pick up" anything more. Because of her failing health, you surely wouldn't want to expel this unfortunate woman from the group. She is obviously very sick.

DEAR ABBY: The hassle about who should wash out the bathtub, reminds me of a sign we used to have over the bathtub in our college dorm. It read: "A pessimist washes the tub BEFORE she bathes. An optimist washes the tub AFTER she bathes. A lady washes the tub BEFORE and AFTER she bathes." Respectfully,

MRS. B.: FINDLAY, O.

DEAR MRS. B.: And so does a gentleman.

She Designs And Creates Her Own Hats

By SANDI GOULD

CAMBRIDGE, Ohio (UPI)—A bit of felt, a bit of net, a kitchen item, a toy or a leftover. Put them on a hat form, and it's an original by Mrs. Leonard Kyle, who calls herself the "Mad Hatter of the Ohio Hills."

Mrs. Kyle's hobby of designing and creating her own hats began in 1965.

She said she got the idea when she heard about a woman in Alabama who was making her own hats, using scraps and leftovers from her husband's lumber yard.

What many homemakers toss out, Mrs. Kyle keeps.

"The aluminum spouts from salt, sugar and cereal boxes resemble butterflies when they're painted," she said.

Dental Theme Hat

One of her most unusual hats was made with dental supplies, and it was sold.

"I made a 'tooth hat' with samples of teeth, bridgework and other materials from a dental laboratory," she said. "That one I sold to a dentist's wife who said she had a dress to match.

"My first hat was made from moss and acorns. Soon I ran out of ideas with nature items, and I decided 'Why should I stop here?'"

Ideas began popping under a hat of this Guernsey County Hedda Hopper. And creations were formed through her talented fingers.

Painted egg shells attached to a straw hat formed an Easter bonnet.

Thanksgiving Hat

Colored plastic drinking straws satisfied her daughter's wishes for a straw hat.

Christmas, a time for gift giving, finds Mrs. Kyle wearing a violet cloche with the top filled with small gift-wrapped packages.

Nothing, or rather practically nothing, slips through her fingers.

For instance, she painted the shells of English walnuts, then fastened them to felt strips around a hat for Thanksgiving.

Any occasion gives rise to a special hat.

Fisherman Hat

For the fisherman, Mrs. Kyle fastened white boat rope, bobbers and a stringer to a hat and painted them in red, white and bque.

Or for the 'going-steady' pair, it's a hat with plastic colored spoons done up in what she calls a "courtship' hat.

Mrs. Kyle is like many other women who have to have the purse to match.

"But I only make purses to match the hats when I have enough materials," she said.

She has about 30 hats on hand.

"The older ones I'll tear up and re-use the base, if it's still good enough," she said.

Husband Helps

Mrs. Kyle often takes her creations out for demonstrations and displays.

"I used to exhibit them in several county fairs and festivals," she said. "But it became a chore, what with the transporting back and forth and they would get so dirty.

"I finally decided upon exhibiting them at just one festival—my favorite—the Ohio Hills Festival. "And I get help from my husband, too.

"He helps me take them to and from the festival, and sets up the display for me. He, too, gives me some ideas for my hats.

"And, he gives his approval on which ones I can wear to church."

A one-piece tank suit for men makes the wearer a real fashion star. In navy nylon, the swim suit has low cut sides and back and three huge stars in white from top to bottom in the front.

Tudor-Stillman Vows Are Said

The marriage of Miss Judy Frances Stillman and James Edward Tudor, Jr. was solemnized Saturday afternoon at four o'clock at the Ayden United Methodist Church. The Rev. Leonard T. Wilson officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ward Stillman of Ayden. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Edward Tudor of Bracey, Va.

A program of wedding music was presented by Mrs. Emmett Joseph Whitaker, organist, and Rob Roy Turnage, soloist, who sang "O Perfect Love" and "A Wedding Benediction".

The chancel of the church was decorated with seven-branched candelabra and a background of bridal palms. A floor basket containing white mums and gladioli, standing before a fifteen-branched arched candelabrum, centered the alter where the couple knelt for the benediction of a white satin priedieu. The pews were marked with white bridal bows and greenery.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an antique white formal gown of re-embroidered Alencon lace on English net, designed by Priscilla of Boston, fashioned along skimmer lines. The high sculptured neckline and short sleeves featured tiny bridal pearls. Her detachable chapel-length train of imported silk-faced peau-de-soie was completely encircled with re-embroidered Alencon lace, highlighted with inserts, and appliques of lace. She wore a bar pin of diamonds and sapphires, which belonged to her maternal grandmother.

Her fingertip veil of imported silk illusion fell from a Camelot cap of re-embroidered Alencon lace and pearls. She carried a cascade formal bouquet of pixie carnations and valley lilies centered with a hybrid orchid and tied with streamers of satin and tulle.

The maid of honor was Miss Margaret Hamlin of Kinston and Richmond, Va. She wore a formal gown of turquoise chiffon featuring an empire waist accented with appliques of white daisies, scooped neckline, short sleeves.

She wore a large picture hat of white bridal braid with pressed turquoise flowers and velvet streamers to match. She carried a basket of white lace accented with multicolored bows.

Bridesmaids were Miss Carolyn Stillman of Plymouth, cousin of the bride, and Miss Lee Wahlig of Norfolk, Va. They were attired in dresses and hats identical to the maid of honor and carried colonial nosegays of mixed summer flowers in pastel shades with matching streamers of satin and tiny puffs of tulle.

Allen Tudor of Norfolk, Va., serves as his brother's best man. Ushers were Michael Tudor of Bracey, Va., brother of the bridegroom, Donald Chapman of Fincastle, Va., and Thomas Rector of Columbus, Ohio.

Mrs. Stillman chose for her daughter's wedding an ensemble of nile green lace featuring long, full sleeves and a sleeveless coat with matching accessories. She wore yellow cymbidium orchids.

The mother of the bridegroom selected a pink dress fashioned with a dropped waistline and flared skirt with matching accessories. Her flowers were green gymbidium orchids.

Honorary attendants were Miss Sarah Johnson of Kinston, Miss Martha Gooding of Richmond, Va., Mrs. Thomas Campbell of Wilson, Mrs. Richard Hunsucker of Greenville, Mrs. Alan Shelor of Morehead City, Mrs. Scott Wiley of Ayden, Mrs. Perry McLawhorn of Richmond, Va., Mrs. Kyle Highsmith of Raleigh, Mrs. Sydney Evans of Rome, Ga., and Mrs. Stuart Davis of Bethel. They wore street length dresses in pastel shades and carried small arm bouquets of Marguerite daisies with satin bows and streamers.

The bride is a graduate of Stratford College and the Pan-American Business School. Until her marriage she was employed by the Architectural and Engineering firm of Ballou and Justice in Richmond, Va.

The bridegroom attended VPI and Old Dominion. He is President of Southern Kinetics Company of Virginia and North Carolina, based in Norfolk, Va.

For traveling the bride changed into a sleeveless linen navy dress with red and white trim and navy and white accessories. She wore the orchid lifted from her bouquet.

After a northern wedding trip the couple will reside at Virginia Beach, Va.

Reception

Following the ceremony a reception was given by the parents of the bride at the Ayden Golf and Country Club.

Guests were welcomed into the foyer by Mr. and Mrs. Clay Stroud who directed them to the dining room where they were greeted by Mrs. William Johnson and Mrs. James Thomas, Dr. and Mrs. Wesley Gooding introduced them to the receiving line composed of the parents, the bridal couple and the bride's attendants.

The refreshment table was overlaid with a formal floor length cloth of white satin and lace with lace swags caught at the corners by miniature nosegays. The table was centered with a multicolored floral arrangement in pastel shades flanked by silver candelabra. From opposite ends of the table Mrs. Brice McCay and Mrs. Joseph H. Whitaker poured fruit punch and spiced tea from silver punch bowls. Mrs. C. C. Little and Mrs. Fred Yorke assisted. Mrs. Jack Quinerly invited the guests to the bride's table.

The bride's table was covered with a white bridal cloth and centered with a five tiered wedding cake encircled with greenery. Mrs. William Shelton and Mrs. Wesley Harvey, assisted by Miss Nancy Shelton, served the cake after the bride and bridegroom cut the traditional first slice.

Mrs. J. R. Taylor and Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Gwyn presided at the register. Good-byes were said to Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Hardee.

Pre-nuptial events honoring the Tudor-Stillman wedding party and out-of-town guests included an after-rehearsal party held at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Wesley Gooding. Mr. and Mrs. Clay Stroud served as co-hosts.

Prior to the rehearsal a champagne buffet was held at the home of Mrs. William Shelton for the wedding party and out-of-town guests. Other hosts and hostesses assisting were Mr. and Mrs. William Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Gwyn, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Taylor and Mrs. Wesley Harvey.

On Friday, a bridesmaid's luncheon honoring Miss Judy Stillman was held at the home of Mrs. J. H. Whitaker. Assisting hostesses were Mrs. Lloyd Turnage and Mrs. E. J. Whitaker.

EDITH BRENNER'S SOUR CREAM COFFEE CAKE

An exceptionally delicious version of a popular dessert from a Richmond, Va., hostess.

½ cup (1 quarter-pound stick) butter
1 cup sugar
2 large eggs
1 container (½ pint) commercial sour cream
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon baking soda
2 cups sifted cake flour
1 tablespoon vanilla
¾ cup finely chopped walnuts or pecans
Topping, see below

In a medium mixing bowl cream butter and sugar; beat in eggs. Stir together the sour cream, baking powder and baking soda. To creamed mixture alternately stir in the flour and sour-cream mixture just until smooth after each addition. Stir in vanilla and nuts. Turn into a buttered 9-inch spring form pan. Sprinkle with Topping, bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in center comes out clean—about 45 minutes. Let stand on wire cake rack for 10 minutes; loosen edges; remove band. Cool. With a long narrow spatula loosen cake from bottom of pan if you like.

TOPPING: In a small mixing bowl stir together ½ cup firmly packed light brown sugar, 3 tablespoons flour and ½ teaspoon cinnamon; with a pastry blender blend in 2 tablespoons butter until particles are fine; stir in ¼ cup finely chopped walnuts or pecans and ¼ cup finely chopped semi-sweet chocolate.

The engagement ring still is worn on the fourth finger because it once was believed that the "vein of love" ran from this finger directly to the heart.

On The Local Scene

by Rosalie Trotman

Mrs. Katharine H. Adams and Mrs. Roy Cox have returned from a vacation in the North Carolina mountains where they spent a week studying the art of Tapestry Rug Hooking at the Douglas-Pool School for the development of creative talents.

The program was supervised by Mrs. Margaret Hunt Masters, rug designer. She is well known for her beautiful Aubussen designs and her quaint Christmas rug designs.

Awards were presented at a banquet and certificates for the completed prescribed course of study were given to Mrs. Adams and Mrs. Cox by the directors of the school.

Mrs. Robert C. Howison Jr. of Raleigh has been named honorary chairman of the Terpsichorean Club's 1971 North Carolina Debutante Ball.

Mrs. Howison will entertain the mothers of the debutantes at a noon coffee hour on Friday, Sept. 10, at the Carolina Country Club prior to the Debutante Ball that evening.

Mrs. Howison is the former Virginia Holmes Brinkley of Lexington and made her debut at the Debutante Ball in 1940. Moving to Raleigh in 1946 after graduating from Brenau College, she served as chairman for the Girls Committee for the Debutante Ball in 1952.

She is married to Robert C. Howison Jr., a Raleigh attorney and a former vice president of the Terpsichorean Club.

A number of festivities were held at the Elizabethan Garden, located on the north end of Roanoke Island near Manteo, Saturday afternoon.

Created and maintained by the Garden Club of North Carolina, Inc., the Elizabethan Garden is a memorial to the Elizabethan Colonists.

Adjacent to the "Lost Colony", members of the cast performed during the afternoon tea. In front of the gate, guests were greeted by Ron Osborne as Sir Walter Raleigh and Nancy Kaye as Queen Elizabeth in costume.

A comic scene from Midnights Summer Dream was performed by the actors from the "Lost Colony" and strolling musicians entertained during the afternoon.

Dancin' And Fiddlin' Are Centenarians

LE MANS, France (WNS) — Ernestine Compain, who just celebrated her 106th birthday, rejoices that there has never been a better crop of old-timers in the Sarthe than in 1971. "Our little area has a dozen centenarians this year, which breaks all records," enthused Mme. Complain, who is lady dean of the dozen. Jules Delaroche, male dean at 105 years, was her waltz partner at her party but confided that he hopes she picks another next year. "I'm much happier playing the fiddle," he explained.

Norwegian Actress Plays Cave Woman

By ANGELO NATALE
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — "A sex symbol?" asks Norway's Julie Ege, crossing her legs in her hot pants. "In these days I see no need for it."

"Everyone has his own sex symbol today," the 24-year-old blonde actress volunteers. "But if there is a need for a sex symbol, I don't mind being it."

Julie, recently touring the United States to promote her new film, "Creatures the World Forgot," is a product of the new, enlightened generation.

"I do not play nude in this film. I look filthy and very authentic," she says of her role as a cave-woman. She doesn't speak a word.

"I wear a long black wig, and no makeup," she says. But the rest is undisguised Julie Ege, who is being billed—needed or not—as the new sex symbol of the seventies.

As for nudity before the camera, "well, what's wrong with that? I have no hangup about that.

"I've already done a nude scene, in 'Every Home Should Have One'," she says. "After that my friends began calling me 'The Naked Ege'."

Hard to believe, but Julie insists she was a fat, ugly child. There's nothing of that left. Julie became a model at age 16, did a bit of television work, finally movies.

Married? "A couple of times," she says. Her first husband was a farmer, whom she wed when she turned 18 and shed nine months later, her second a dentist whom she divorced seven months ago. She has a two-year-old daughter, Hjordis Joanna.

"No marriage again," Julie says. "I'm through with it."

Julie is not content to get by on her good looks alone. She takes acting lessons, and is frank enough to admit that not much dramatic ability has so far been required of her.

She got her part in "Creatures" by winning out over almost 3,000 applicants in a talent hunt last year for an actress to follow in the footsteps of Raquel Welch. But it's not Raquel Welch in whose footsteps Julie hopes to follow. She says her idol still is Marilyn Monroe: "That face. An angel. And she was an actress."

She obviously enjoys being a girl, but feels right in step with the women's liberation movement. "I'm completely liberated," says Julie.

She likes hot pants, and wears them often "now that I've lost some weight." She also finds them practical for travel. "I'm not carrying too many suitcases, and need a lot of different outfits and hot pants take up almost no room."

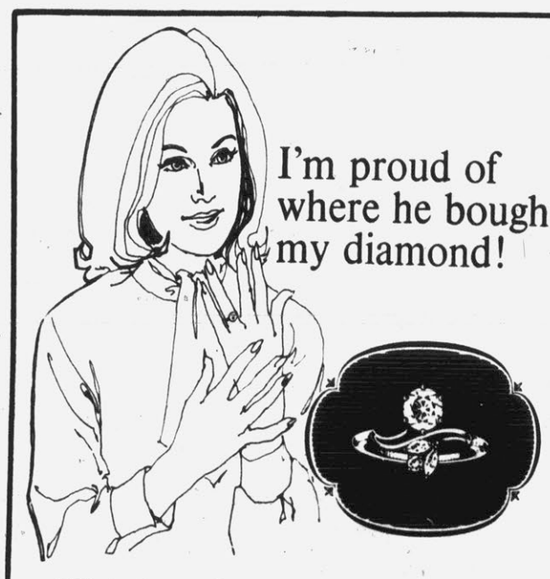

Little Shavers Deliver Victim

BRUSSLES, Belgium (WNS) — Armand Bruyere, 24, fell asleep in the sports car of a college girl who picked him up at a dance and woke up to find himself on his doorstep — with his head shaved clean of his long, wavy hair. Bruyere, who claims that he was drugged, may have been the victim of a ladies group known as the Delilahs. Their aim: "to revive crew cuts so that men will look and act like men again."

Couple Exchanges Vows In Saturday Ceremony

RICHMOND, Va. — The marriage of Miss Susan Jean Carter and Dr. Harry Staton Latham was solemnized on Saturday at 2:00 p.m. in Saint Giles Presbyterian Church in Richmond. The Rev. Dr. Earl Moray, minister of the church, officiated at the ceremony. Wedding music was rendered by Hilton Rusty, church organist.

Miss Carter is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William Walton Carter of McLean, and Dr. Latham is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Cleophas Latham of Bethel, N.C.

The couple spoke their vows before a chancel which was graced with four-tiered candelabra against a background of palms and white wedding flowers.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal gown of white organza designed with an empire waist, a high illusion neckline and Bishop sleeves edged in lace. Delicate pink satin ribbon and white lace flowers accented the waist. The long, flowing skirt extended into a tubular train of Cathedral length and her veil of silk illusion was held in place by a lattice designed coronet. She carried a bouquet of white sweetheart roses interspersed with carnations and showered with bridal ribbons.

Mrs. Stephen Harold Brown of New Haven, Conn., sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Maids of honor were Judith Jean Carter, sister of the bride, and Charlotte Llewellyn Latham, sister of the bridegroom. Their dresses were of delicate pink silk organza embroidered with miniature white flowerlets in panel design. The gowns were fashioned with long flowing skirts softly gathered to the high bodices, low rounded necklines and short sleeves. Accenting the waistlines were white velvet tie belts ending in long streamers in the back. Their flowers consisted of showered bouquets of pink carnations.

Mrs. Carter, mother of the bride, was attired in a dress of Champagne Alaskine fabric with sleeves and overskirt of silk chiffon. Focal points were pen tucked collar and cuffs and a pearl buckle at the drop waist. She wore matching accessories and her corsage was of beige cymbidirim orchids.

The mother of the bridegroom wore an A-line dress of pink cutwork embroidered white silk linen, matching accessories and a white pink-throated orchid corsage.

Mrs. Andrew Paul Dedick of McLean, Va., wore a powder blue and white cotten brocade dress, matching jacket, and white accessories. Her corsage was a pink orchid.

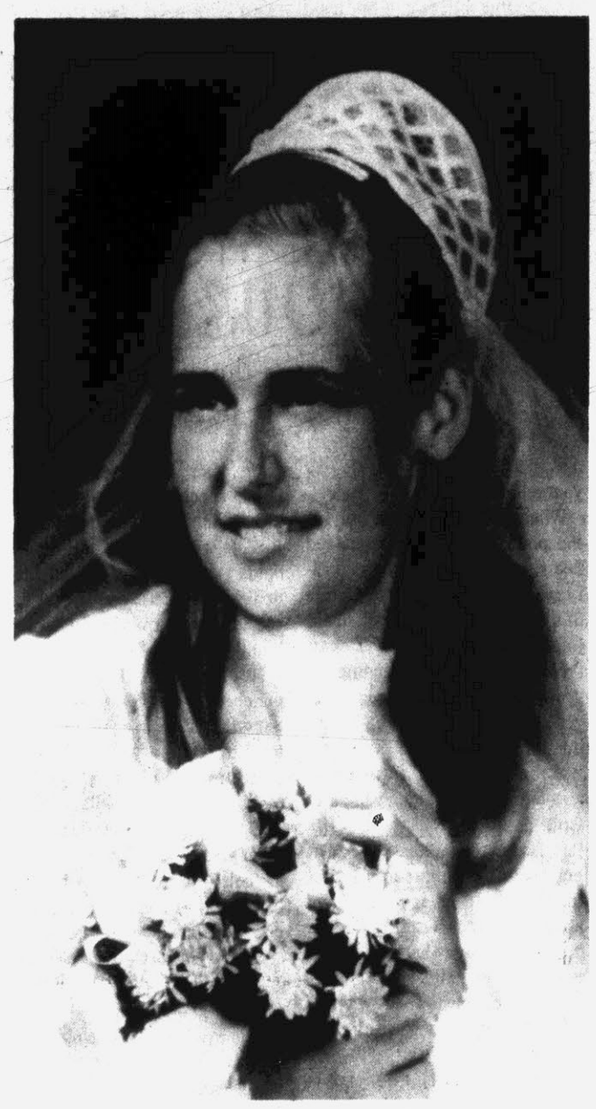

Walter Latham served as best man for his son. Ushers were Dr. William Carson Latham of Thomasville, N.C., Dr. Walter Bryan Latham of Miami, Fla., both brothers of the bridegroom and Paul Walton Carter, brother of the bride.

Mrs. Latham attended Emory University, Atlanta, Ga. and graduated from The Medical College of Virginia where she is employed as a Medical Technologist.

Dr. Latham is a graduate of both the Undergraduate School and the Medical School of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, N.C., where he was a National Merit Scholar. He interned at Stanford Medical Center in Palo Alto, Calif. and presently is in residency as a Pathologist at the Medical College of Virginia.

Following a six weeks wedding trip to Europe, Dr. and Mrs. Latham will be at home in Richmond.

Immediately following the wedding the parents of the bride entertained at a reception for the bridal couple and their wedding party at Saint Giles Church House. On Saturday evening the parents of the bridegroom entertained at a Rehearsal Dinner at the Holiday Inn West in Richmond in honor of the bridal couple. Members of the wedding party and out-of-town guests were present.

Using Leisure Constructively Can Prolong Life

By KATHLEEN NEUMEYER

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Know how you can prolong your life, improve your disposition, and save your marriage—without even seeing a psychiatrist?

It's all a matter of using your leisure constructively, says Patsy Edwards.

"A lot of people say they don't have any free time," Mrs. Edwards says. "I have them write down exactly what they do every day."

When they get it all down on paper, in hours and minutes, they find they have more spare time than they thought—and sometimes they aren't pleased with what they have been doing with it.

"Many people say they'd like to play tennis and swim if they had time," Mrs. Edwards said.

"What they are actually doing in their free time, however, is watching television and reading periodicals. They say, 'but you've got to watch television.'

"Well, you don't 'got' to watch television. That's fine, if that's the way you want to spend your leisure, but if it's not, you should reorganize your time."

Book Tells

Mrs. Edwards, a lifelong volunteer in various charitable and civic projects, started a business three years ago to counsel people on better ways to rechannel their energies.

Now she has written a book called "You Have to Find Happiness, It Won't Find You."

According to her, most Americans have 30 hours a week leisure, and by 1975 it will have expanded to 38.

"Fifty per cent are happy with the way they spend their time," she said, "and another 20 per cent aren't so happy, but are too lazy to change. Thirty per cent are really interested in changing."

She tests their interests and then suggests such things as sports (rollerskating, bowling, fencing, croquet) crafts (candlemaking, glassblowing, winemaking, furniture refinishing) places to go (auctions, circuses, nudist colonies, ghost towns, travel, class-taking, and pet-raising.)

She also pushes volunteer activities.

Raps Soul-Searching

"There isn't anything you can do that someone doesn't need help with," she says.

It's her theory that doing worthwhile things during leisure makes people happier—which makes them live longer and improves their marriages.

"If your husband thinks you are uninteresting, maybe you are," she says.

"There is too much soul-searching today," the attractive mother and grandmother insists. "Instead of sitting around trying to decide who you are, you should be out doing something."

As for her own leisure, Mrs. Edwards considers taking care of her family her primary responsibility, and running her business, Constructive Leisure Inc., is what she does for fun.

But she also studies French, takes lessons in modern ballet technique, and is learning to play Spanish castanets.

The best way to wear shorts is with a matching top. The match-up can be anything from a jacket or sweater to midriff top or cotton knit shirt.

COOKING IS FUN!

RUM BALLS

No cooking necessary!

1¼ cups finely crushed vanilla wafer crumbs

Sifted confectioner's sugar

¼ cup finely chopped walnuts

1 tablespoon unsweetened cocoa

1½ tablespoons dark corn syrup

2 tablespoons light rum

Mix together well the wafer crumbs, ½ cup sifted confectioner's sugar, walnuts and cocoa. Add corn syrup and rum and blend well. Using 1 scant tablespoon for each, shape into balls; roll in confectioner's sugar. Makes about 1½ dozen.

Spanish Design Can Be Exciting

By GERRY BISHOP

The Ripoli takes a revolutionary approach to housing. It is a delight for homeowners looking for something different.

In designing this model, the Associated Architects have focused attention on the split-foyer. The result is two spacious levels that separate entertainment from everday living.

This two-story has a Spanish flavor that is enhanced by the roof design and the graceful arch of the drive-through guest carport. Balconies with steel railing at the full-length windows in the front contribute to this motif. Dignity and charm are added by the carport which has practical as well as esthetic values by providing shelter from rain and snow.

This is a large home with impressive credentials. There are three bedrooms, three baths, a large living room with fireplace, dining room, kitchen, game room with bar, laundry and double garage.

Split Foyer

The split foyer is the keystone to the traffic pattern. It all begins there. A few steps up and one is on main living level. A few steps down and there is the game room and garage level.

A sloped-beam ceiling creates a lot of excitement in the living room, an expansive area that measures 23 feet by 16 feet. It's a spacious chamber because of the floor-to-roof dimensions. The log-burning fireplace is another plus. A railing separates the foyer from the living room, adding to the feeling of openness.

The dining room adjoins the living room and measures 12 feet by 13 feet. The corner location is an asset. Sliding-glass doors provide access to the back yard which could be developed as a terrace for additional living area.

The large kitchen has built-in appliances and cabinets. There's also a breakfast area which is brightened by a large bay window over looking the back yard.

Walk-In Closets

The sleeping quarters occupy the left half of the main living level. The master bedroom — 15 feet by 13 feet — is isolated in the left rear corner. It has a dressing room with a double vanity and private bath. There's also a large walk-in closet.

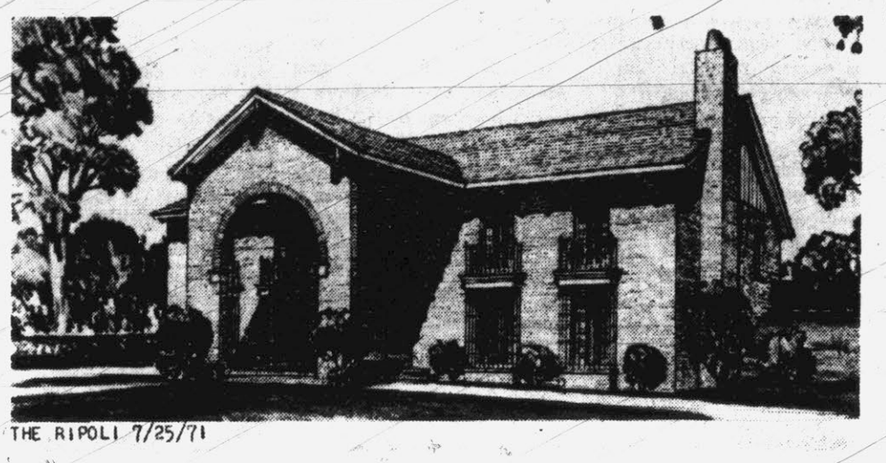

Each of the other two bedrooms has a large walk-in closet, and each is approximately 12 feet square.

The game room on the basement level also has a log-burning fireplace and sweeping dimensions of approximately 23 feet by 16 feet. The adjoining bar with wet sink compliments the facilities for entertaining. So does the isolation of the game room. It would be possible to party without disturbing the rest of the house.

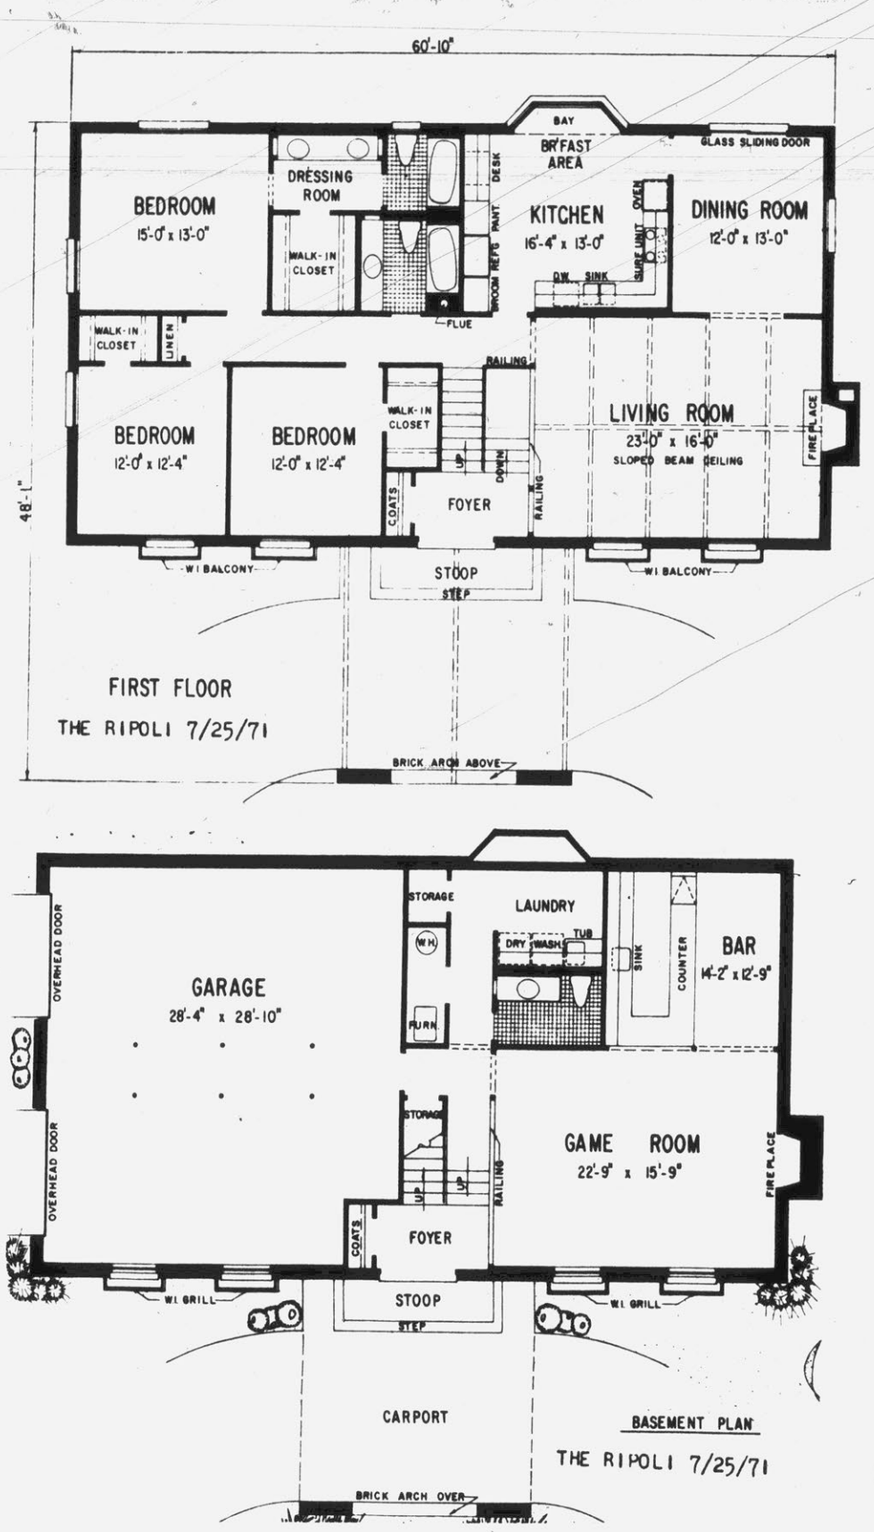

Laundry facilities are confined to a room large enough to accommodate a washer, dryer, and tub. There's also a storage closet and a closet for the furnace and water heater.

The two-car garage is exceptionally large — approximately 28 feet by 29 feet.

There are 1,890 square feet of living area on each level and the exterior dimensions are approximately 61 feet by 48 feet.

A SPANISH NUMBER — The Ripoli, designed by the Associated Architects, features Spanish styling and split-foyer design on two main levels. The drive-through carport lends dignity and grace to the main entrance.

Plan Restoring Of Old Queen Victoria Markets Building

By GORDON TAIT

SYDNEY (AP) — When the Queen Victoria Markets Building was opened July 21, 1898, it was Sydney's wonder of the decade, if not the century.

Mayor of Sydney Alderman Matthew Harris said at the opening: "We can lay claim to solid and durable work, work that will live with the centuries and stand as landmarks in history, speaking to people yet unborn of our commercial, social and material existence. It may be truly said that we have here built for the future as well as the present."

This is the building that has just avoided by the tips of its turrets from being pulled down to make a civic square.

In 1898 the building, on the word of the chroniclers of the day, had a basement "big enough to lay two football grounds end to end," a ground floor with a tesselated pavement 200 yards long with 58 shops and a "coffee palace;" a first floor with 17 large rooms; a second floor with 12 rooms; a third floor with a photographic gallery, showrooms and dressing rooms; and atop this the largest copper dome "south of the line" (equator) and a score of smaller copper turrets.

Today it's the Queen Victoria Building—no longer used for markets and warehousing as first intended. For many years the city fathers have been wondering what to do with this piece of Sydney City Council property.

In 1971 there are rats and a few parked autos in the dank and smelly basement; a mass of untidy shops and tea and coffee cafes on the ground floor, with the tesselated pavement hidden under all manner of floor coverings; the city public library on part of the first floor; the city Health Department on the second; a lot of rubbish and empty rooms on the third; and that great copper dome, 62 feet in diameter, is a storeroom. It's on a valuable chunk of real estate, probably worth $26.9 million to developers.

But there has never been in recent years any suggestion that it be sold for office buildings—only that it, or part of it, be restored, or that it be bulldozed and the area turned into a civic center.

Now the plan is to restore the old building to its former glory, and the cost is estimated at $4,480,000 against the original construction cost of $565,000.

When the job is finished the idea is to have an open gallery on the ground floor, and elsewhere a small theater, facilities for exhibitions, specialty shops, child minding and information centers and low rental accommodation for community organizations.

Smog Chamber To Set New Standard

By BILL STOCKTON

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — Scientists, who say wrong decisions in the war on air pollution have resulted from poor smog chamber design, are building a sophisticated new model they hope will become standard nationwide.

Since the first smog research chamber was built in the early 1950s, scientists have been divided over whether they accurately simulate aerial reactions between pollutants and sunlight that produce smog.

Some chambers don't, critics say, and as a result laws have been passed and other measures put into effect to control pollution that are unrealistic.

The problem came into focus recently during a study of major smog chambers around the country in which widely varying results were obtained with known amounts of pollutants and radiation simulating sunlight.

"While there was qualitative agreement between the chambers, there was no quantitative agreement at all," said Dr. James Pitts, director of the University of California's air pollution research center.

A smog chamber usually is a box or tube—sometimes as big as a man—into which pollutants such as automobile exhaust and smokestack emissions are placed in measured amounts. The mixture is bombarded with radiation that simulates sunlight and the subsequent chemical changes measured.

Pitts and his colleagues describe the $250,000 facility they're building at the university's Riverside campus as the most advanced smog chamber in the country.

"What we are trying to build is a reference chamber that everyone will agree is a reference chamber," he said.

There still are many puzzling questions about air pollution that must be answered in such a chamber before more sophisticated pollution controls are put into use.

KeepBalance In Humidity

YORK, Pa. (UPI) —"It's not the heat; it's the humidity."

You'll hear that lament a lot this summer and although many people have come to regard it as an "old chestnut" by now, it's a fact, according to York Division of Borg-Warner Corp., manufacturer of air conditioning and refrigeration equipment.

Excessive humidity or moisture in warm summer air makes it feel hotter than it really is because the more saturated with moisture the air the more the human body's ability to cool itself by evaporation is limited.

Modern Air conditioning systems are designed to take the humidity factor into consideration in providing a comfortable whole-house environment. They extract moisture from the warm air in addition to lowering the temperature, says York.

In winter the problem is just the opposite: too little moisture in the air. Cool air is relatively dry because it cannot hold as much moisture as warm air and so when dry, winter air is taken indoors and heated the resultant warm air tends to absorb whatever moisture is available, including moisture from the human body.

Moisture, therefore, must be added to the air in winter to maintain a comfortable humidity level.

The Garden Clinic

N. C. State University Answers Timely Gardening Questions

Q. Is there anything that I car plant to attract mockingbirds tc my yard? (H. B., Durham)

A. Mockingbirds find the fruit of berries of these plants to be attractive food: red cedar, beautyberry (Callicarpa), blueberry, honeysuckle, pyracantha. (Henry J. Smith, extension horticulturist)

Q. I have small brown patches in my lawn, which I am told are caused by sod webworms. Will the damage increase? If so, how can I control this pest? (R. S., Raleigh)

A. Yes, you can expect the damage to increase because sod webworms have more than one generation per year. Some adults — a small moth — of the webworms are present all growing season. However, they will appear in large numbers two or three times. About two weeks after a heavy flight, treat your lawn thoroughly with sprays containing Sevin, diazinon granules. (H. W. Scott, extension entomologist)

Q. What can I do to prevent dahlias from wilting soon after they are cut? (C. J., Boomer)

A. Cut dahlias either early in the morning or in the evening at least an hour after sundown. Large dahlia blossoms are prone to wilt if cut during the day. Carry a bucket of water to the garden. After cutting the bloom, submerge the stem in water and make a new cut — removing about one-half inch of the stem. Immediately after carrying flowers into the house, singe the end of the stem with a candle flame or cigarette lighter. (Henry J. Smith, extension horticulturist)

Q. Will the webs on my pecan tree kill it? How can I destroy these pests for good? (J. K., Clinton)

A. You'll be lucky to get rid of these pests — fall webworms — for even one reason. The moths which lay the eggs that produce the worms (caterpillars) can fly a considerable distance. Also, there is usually more than one generation each year. You can spray the caterpillars that you see with Sevin, malathion or diazinon. However, you will need enough pressure on your sprayer to penetrate the webs. (H. E. Scott, extension entomologist)

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG

AP Newsfeatures

The many faces of hardboard have kept that material high on the popularity list of the do-it-yourselfer.

Whereas it once came only in the plain dark or blond-colored board used principally for utility paneling, it now is available in a wide variety of wood-grain finishes, colors, textures, patterns and styles, including v-grooved, plastic-surfaced, filigreed, embossed and the familiar perforated.

Some persons still regard it as a synthetic product, which it isn't. A more accurate description is a manufactured product, but even that might imply that there's something artificial about it. Actually, it's wood—made from logs that have been converted to chips and then to wood fibers, permanently bonded together under heat and pressure.

The manufacturing process is what gives hardboard its density and strength. It has no grain or knots, resists scuffing and denting, cracking, splitting and checking. Most companies which once handled only lumber and-or plywood now sell hardboard in one form or another.

It is useful for the homeowner to be familiar with the most common types of hardboard. The following list will be of help:

Ordinary hardboard—Available dark or blond-colored, smooth on one side and screen-textured on the other, or smooth on both sides. Thicknesses vary from ⅛th to ⅜th inches. Lengths run up to 16 feet. The most common width is 4 feet.

Paneling—Prefinished in wood grains and a variety of shades. May be smooth-surfaced or random-grooved. Thickness is usually ¼th of an inch. Specifically treated for resistance to stains, scrubbing and moisture.

Plastic-surfaced paneling—Finishes include wood grains, plain colors, marble reproductions, speckled, simulated tile, lace prints and many others. Resists water, stains and household chemicals. Sufficiently dense and moisture-resistant for use in bathrooms, kitchens and laundry rooms.

Perforated—Has been punched with receive hooks and hanging hardware. Principally used to create "working" walls that provide extra space for tools, kitchen utensils, sports equipment, toys and dozens of other items. Available in natural color or pre-painted, pre-primed, v-grooved, pre-finished and wood-grained, tempered or standard in ⅛th or ¼th-inch thicknesses.

Textured or embossed—These panels are pressed during manufacture with wicker, burlap, tile or other textured surfaces. Make possible a wide range of unusual wall effects.

Filigree hardboard—Decorative panels made of tempered hardboard, smooth on both sides and die-cut into filigree patterns. Useful for cabinet doors, room dividers, folding screens, sliding doors and as accent wall panels.

Other types include exterior siding, underlayment, ceiling blocks, ceiling beams, barn siding.

(Fixing things around the house becomes a lot simpler by utilizing Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," available by sending $1 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J. 07666.)

Supermarkets Born In 1925

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI)—The first "true" supermarket appeared around 1925 and by the late 1930s a large segment of the grocery industry had become supermarket-minded.

So reports Dr. Gary Hansen, chairman of the department of family economics and management, University of Nebraska-Wuccmln. The Progressive Grocer, a trade publication, defines a supermarket as any self-service store that has annual sales of $500,000 or more. The paper estimates that in 1969, there were 47,180 such stores, doing an estimated 76 per cent of the nation's $82 billion of grocery sales.

Leather Surface Requires 'Bath'

NEW YORK (UPI)—Leather surfaces in household furnishings need a "bath" occasionally.

The Cleanliness Bureau suggests using just the foam of a suds solution and wetting as little as possible. Rinse several times with a clean damp cloth. Then apply furniture cream. Avoid silicone polishes, heavy paste wax or liquid wax. If glass tops are used on leather, cushion with felt bumpers on corners to provide for air circulation. Otherwise, just dust with a clean, soft untreated cloth.

Here's How To Do It

By ANDY LANG

AP Newsfeatures

Q.—A neighbor of mine recently paid off the balance of the mortgage on his home. When my wife and I went to the bank to make plans to do the same thing, we were told that we would have to pay an extra fee if we wanted to prepay the mortgage ahead of time. Is this legal?

A.—Yes. When you obtain a mortgage from a lender, there is a clause in the contract specifying the conditions under which the loan can be paid off before maturity. In most cases, it calls for a prepayment fee. In others, it states that there is no fee. When it does not go into details, the borrower and the lender can negotiate terms when the situation arises. Presumably, your neighbor's agreement permitted repayment without penalty. Have you read your mortgage contract to see what it says about prepayment?

Q.—I put a pane of glass in my kitchen window a few weeks ago. A crack has developed in the glass for no reason. Could this have been caused by a piece of glass with a flaw in it?

A.—It's possible but not likely. There are a dozen ways in which a window pane can be cracked without your knowledge, including such things as being hit by a ball or having a bird crash into it. Here's another probability: the pane may have been fitted too tightly. When purchasing the glass, it should be 1-16th of an inch smaller on each side than the dimensions of the window opening. This allows room for movement of the wood around the glass.

Q.—I read somewhere that resilient floor tiles can be laid over a wooden floor if the floor boards are three inches or less in width, but that if not, a plywood or hardboard underlayment must first be put down. Can you tell me why this is so?

A.—The wider the floor boards, the more tendency there is toward warpage, which would affect the floor tiles at a later time. Incidentally, regardless of whether you use underlayment, be sure to nail down all loose floor boards. The principle of tile installation is that the tiles will remain solid and secure when there is no movement of the materials underneath them.

Q.—The veneer of a table top in our dining room has come loose at two of the four corners. I intend to refinish the entire top, taking off the old finish and putting on new, as well as relining the veneer in place. Should I do the refinishing first and then reglue the veneer or should the veneer be done first?

A.—It is best to remove the old finish first, then reglue the veneer, then do the refinishing. But it is important that there be a long interval—at least a week, preferably more—between the regluing and the refinishing. This is to minimize the chance that the refinishing, especially if there is to be any rubbing, might disturb the new bond between the veneer and its base.

A Cat's Love For Its People And The Impossible Journeys That Love Inspires

A Hero Bomber Crew From World War II— All Alive, All Reunited

Just How Interesting Do You Seem To People Around You?

Ask Them Yourself

FOR ROBERT YOUNG

What do you think of all the X-rated movies and "skin" films currently flooding the market?—R. L. James, Bloomington, Ind.

● Like a lot of other actors, I don't much like them. It seems to me there are three elements that you must have in any form of entertainment, whether you're talking about films or the theater or TV: these are the play, the players and the audience. The audience must be involved, it must be allowed to use its imagination. When you force an audience into sheer voyeurism, you deprive it of the use of imagination.

FOR PIERRE SALINGER, press secretary to JFK and LBJ and author of "On Instructions of My Government"

After being on the inside in two Administrations, it must be hard to be out of politics now. Do you plan to get back in?—Dexter Walling, Santa Monica, Calif.

● I will be doing some campaign work for Senator McGovern, who is my choice for the next President. Of course, it's too early now to have anything but a wide-open race. And then, I've always had what you might call a secret hope to be named Ambassador to France. I almost was. It happened when John Kennedy and I were discussing his second term—that was our plan for the future. I mentioned that being Ambassador to France was my preference rather than being press secretary for eight years. "Fine," said the President, "you've got it."

FOR NINA FOCH, actress

Do you find that many intelligent women keep their mouths shut when in the company of men?—M. M. Miller, Salt Lake City, Utah

● One of women's strangest convictions is that their brains are like icebergs—only ⅛ should show above the surface. Time and again I've seen women pulling in their brains when a man appeared, afraid the poor thing might scratch his ego on the exposed edges.

FOR CHAD EVERETT,

of TV's "Medical Center"

Is it true that you own six cars? If so, what makes are they?—Vic Dennis, West Covina, Calif.

● You're half right—I own three: a sports coupe (Cobra), a station wagon (Chrysler) and a 1952 classic Rolls-Royce.

FOR BILL COSBY, comedian

This year, you, folksinger Glenn Yarborough and Frank Sinatra all announced that you were leaving show business at what many feel is the height of your careers. Do you think this might become a trend among other stars?—Dwight Berman, Asbury Park, N.J.

● The reports of my retirement from show business have been somewhat exaggerated. I have simply given up my TV series because it was taking up too much time. I plan to get my Master's degree at the University of Massachusetts and become a teacher there. But to pay the rent and earn bread for the family, I will continue to give concerts on the weekends, make occasional guest appearances on television shows, and, during the summer vacation, make movies. I would think that the retirement trend among stars in show business will never reach epidemic proportions.

Are whales the biggest mammal in the sea? If so, how big are they? —Jeff Van Belle, Wenatchee, Wash.

●The blue whale is the largest animal known in evolutionary history. It weighs as much as 25 elephants. The largest one ever measured and weighed was 100 feet long and weighed 290,000 pounds, or 145 tons. While the extinct Brontosaurus reptile was that long, it was not nearly as heavy as the water-supported whale.

FOR SHARRON MORAN,

"Golden Goddess" of the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour

Can we expect to see lady golfers wearing hot pants on the courses soon?—D. R. Lang, Durham, N. C.

● I doubt it. Hot pants really are short shorts, and they've always been frowned upon. Bermuda shorts are all right, but there's a limit on skirt length, even with culottes. So I doubt that hot pants will be allowed

FOR RONALD ZIEGLER,

Presidential Press Secretary

What pin or emblem does President Nixon wear in his lapel? Is it a war medal?—Mrs. Charles Silver, Venice, Calif.

● The President wears an American flag in his lapel.

FOR FLIP WILSON, comedian

Where did you get the expression "Don't do that, don't you ever do that?"—Cathy Lynch, Millbrook, N. Y.

● I was working on the "Tonight Show" in New York. I went out for lunch and accidentally brushed against these two soul sisters coming out of the Time-Life Building. One of them, making it clear she didn't appreciate my action, uttered the words.

FOR JOHN C. METZLER,

Superintendent, Arlington National Cemetery

Does President John F. Kennedy have some children buried in Arlington Cemetery?—Mrs. Rube Morelock, Rogersville, Tenn.

● Two children of the late President are buried with him. One is the unnamed infant daughter who died in 1956; the other is his late son, Patrick B., who died in 1963. Both the burials were made in accordance with National Cemetery regulations, which authorize minor children to be interred with their parents.

FOR JOHN CASSAVETES,

film director-actor

You have done a great deal as a director as well as an actor. Which is the tougher job?—Mark Sullivan, New York, N.Y.

● Directing a film is a terrible strain. It takes a lot of time. It leaves you "racked," since you are required to put in enormous mounts of energy. Acting, on the other hand, is relaxing. I regard it as a hobby.

FOR CLIFFORD M. HARDIN,

Secretary of Agriculture

Is it true that after World War II straight DDT was sprinkled over the heads and bodies of millions of Europeans who survived and that DDT is credited with the prevention of widespread malaria and plague? If it is true, then why the fuss regarding the use of DDT?—Willene Domenichelli, Geyserville, Calif.

● DDT was used during and after World War II for protecting Europeans from various insect-borne diseases. In 1943, a louse-borne typhus epidemic threatened in Naples, Italy., Thousands of persons were treated with 10 percent DDT powder, and the epidemic was quickly brought under control. After the war, DDT was used successfully to eradicate malaria from the United States and much of the rest of the world. But, despite its many advantages, DDT has certain disadvantages. DDT tends to persist in the environment and has been detrimental to certain beneficial insects, aquatic life and birds. Because of these environmental problems, the Environmental Protection Agency has initiated proceedings to cancel all uses of DDT.

QUIZ/By John E. Gibson

How Interesting Are You

To Other People?

True or False: There are certain scents and fragrances —in women's perfumes, men's colognes and after-shave lotions—which automatically make you more romantically interesting to the opposite sex. (See answer number 5)

What is it that makes one person dull and the other fascinating? This true-false quiz clues you in on what it is that makes one person interesting to another.

1. You won't be nearly as interesting or attractive to another person if you're difficult to understand.
2. If you're an introvert, the type of person who will find you most interesting is likely to be an extrovert.
3. You're most interesting and attractive to others at a certain time of day.
4. The best way to become an interesting conversationalist is to bone up on a wide variety of intriguing subjects, so you'll always have plenty to talk about.
5. There are certain scents and fragrances—in women's perfumes, men's colognes and after-shave lotions—which automatically make you more romantically interesting to the opposite sex.
6. Good looks and an interesting personality usually go hand in hand.

ANSWERS

1. False. Investigators at Cornell University made a study of the things which make one person interesting to another—what makes some people dull and others stimulating. They found that the people who were considered most interesting were those whose personalities presented something of a challenge, who were too complex to be easily understood and typed as 'so-and-so' or 'such-and-such.' (The opposite from the type of person of whom it is said, "You can read him like a book".)
2. False. Studies show that the like-attracts-like principle holds true in the majority of cases; that the people we find most interesting, attractive, and agreeable are those with whom we have most in common.
3. True. Studies at Cambridge University and elsewhere show that cyclical changes in mood, alertness and personal magnetism determine whether a given person is at his best in the daytime or evening, in the morning or afternoon. Psychologists have found, for example, that people with outgoing personalities are at their best in the afternoon, while those with more introverted tendencies are more 'with it' in the morning hours. It's easy to pin-point the time of day when your personality has the most effective impact on others—it's the time when you feel most vividly alive and all-of-apiece.
4. False. People who have the reputation for being the most interesting conversationalists are those who excel in two sure-fire social techniques. They (1) are adept at drawing people out and (2) have cultivated the art of being a rapt and attentive listener. One of the best ways to interest another person is to let him interest you. It's foolproof, and it works like a charm. It permits his ego to expand pleasantly, thus affording him a feeling of self-importance and well-being.
5. True. Psychological studies show that perfumes, colognes and after-shaving scents are highly effective in making a person more "interesting" to the opposite sex. This was found particularly true for scents based on musk. Why does it have this effect? Most likely theory, investigators conclude, is that the scent sets up an electrical charge on the surface of the olfactory centers of the brain, producing a heightened emotional reaction, rendering a person more susceptible to a romantic mood.
6. False. Some of the world's most fascinating people have been neither exceptionally handsome nor possessed of outstanding beauty. On the other hand, there are many men and women whose physical attractiveness is virtually their only social asset—and whose personalities are dull, boring, and lacking in either wit or imagination. Studies at Miami University show, however, that most people expect attractive people to be interesting —despite the fact that they are often disappointed. ◆

A Hero Bomber Crew From World War II—

Twenty six years ago last January, nine crew members of a B-17 "Flying Fortress" completed 30 combat missions over Germany and the occupied countries. After the war, they were discharged from the Air Force and scattered over the U.S. With the exception of the pilot, copilot and bombardier, they—like most World War II "buddies"—lost contact with one another.

Then last September, the copilot, Ralph Trout, now a successful businessman, came across some mementos in his attic. Deciding to hold a reunion with the missing crew he started sending queries by mail. He sent letters to county sheriffs, the Postmaster General, J. Edgar Hoover—even President Nixon himself—trying to track down his comrades.

Soon he found all the crew—with the exception of Doug Stott, their flight engineer. A sheriff had written Trout that Stott was deceased. Trout and the other seven crew members proceeded with plans to hold their reunion in Harlingen, Texas, on August 3-5. "But a gnawing fear struck me," says Trout. "Suppose Doug Stott was not really dead, and we held the reunion without him?"

Trout's wife came up with the answer. "Why don't you write to the Bureau of Vital Statistics in Glens Falls, N.Y.?" (Stott's home town) The Bureau wrote back that they had no record of Stott's dying in the past 10 years. With renewed hope, Trout obtained the addresses of Doug's mother and aunt and wrote them. They forwarded his letters, and in a few days Trout received a long-distance call from Mechaniesburg, Pa. It was Stott. "What do you mean, I'm dead?" he asked.

Jack Waldhoff, 55, bombardier and eldest of the crew: after the war, he lived in Los Angeles and Winter Park, Fla. He stayed in touch with Cromer and Trout. Now he owns a drugstore in Burlington, Iowa. He loves old automobiles, golf, chess and Boy Scout work. He'll celebrate 32 years of marriage next month. Their four children are aged 19 to 25.

Michael Phillips, 50, navigator: after release from Air Force, he returned to college. He married in 1946, then went to dental school. Now he practices dentistry in Norwich, Conn., where he lives with his wife and four children, age seven to 22. He was the first missing buddy Trout located, on the basis of some papers Trout came across in his attic.

Ralph Trout, 49, copilot who organized the reunion: after discharge, studied law, then returned to duty in 1952 to fly intelligence missions. Presently Sales Manager for the Heinz Company in Tampa, Fla., where he lives with his wife and 18-year-old son. About the reunion: "It couldn't happen at a better time! Today's turmoil needs the stability of yesterday!"

Joe Cromer, 52, the pilot: after the war, he married his schooldays sweetheart, and they now have three children, age 19 to 25, and a granddaughter. He and Trout never lost contact with each other. Presently a life-insurance agent, Cromer still flies: he's accumulated 2,500 hours as Air Force Reserve Squadron Commander and Civil Air Patrol Deputy in Tyler, Texas.

As they were in World War II.

Why Harlingen, Texas, for the Reunion?

Harlingen is the home of the Confederate Air Force—world's largest collection of flyable old war planes.

The CAF owns 33 World War II planes, all flyable. An additional 19 flyable World War II planes are owned by individual CAF members.

As part of the celebration, the crew plans to put an original B-17 in the air. It will be "attacked" by a Messerschmitt ME 109, which in turn will be "attacked" by an American fighter. Harlingen is the only place where such an authentic reenactment could take place.

Eugene Clark, 47, waist gunner: after the war, he graduated from college, expanded and became vice-president of his family's restaurant chain in Seattle, where he lives. It was the pilot, Joe Cromer, who located him. Clark's now married and has two children. Asked to sum up his life, Clark did it tersely: "I went from burgers to bombers to Châteaubriand."

Robert Coffin, 46, ball-turret operator: after the war, he married, had two children, (Jim, now 23 and Sherrill, 22) and opened his own J-A-G Construction Company. He is also City Commissioner of Dodge City, Kan., where he was finally located through the cooperation of the sheriff in his home town of Minneola, Kan. His daughter was married this past June.

Vincent Villagio, 46, tail gunner and the youngest crew member: after the war, he attended Pratt Institute in Brooklyn, N.Y., worked in the commercial art field, and now supervises a ceramic and glass-decorating company. Trout says he had "no trouble" finding him. Villagio is married and has three children and lives in New York City.

Martin Goodman, 48, radio operator: after discharge, he married and now has four children, age 14 to 25. He manages Cheyenne Liquor in Los Angeles. The trail that led to him included a search of White House files and aid from the Douglas County, Neb., sheriff. He remembers the missions: "You'd have thought we were on a picnic. We had faith in each other."

Douglas Stott, 50, engineer-gunner: his most memorable mission was the sixth—his first son was born back home while he was flying it. Presently is claims manager for a Pennsylvania insurance company. Mistakenly thought to be deceased, he was "rediscovered" by Ralph Trout. He lives in Mechanicsburg, Pa., with his wife and four children, age 17 to 27.

All Alive, All Reunited

Joe Cromer told us: "I had the only picture of our B-17, and my young son tried to eat it! Luckily, I saved it in the nick of time."

Their Roughest Mission: It Was Rough

"Our roughest mission," says Trout, "was our 13th. The target was Pölitz near the Baltic Sea. We later learned that the refinery we blew up produced one-third of Germany's synthetic oil. They had 360 flak guns around this city, and they used all of them. Our group suffered one of the most severe losses of the entire tour. Five crews failed to return, and seven other crew members were injured.

"The battle damage was so severe that we could not put up a single plane for seven days! We counted over 100 holes in our plane. One of them, through the left wing, was large enough to crawl through. This shell knocked out the radio and stripped away the flaps on the left side. But we got back to base without a single crew member getting a scratch. In fact, we flew all 30 missions without an injury to a crew member!"

The Love Cats Feel For People... The Journeys Their Love Inspires

By Felicia Ames

What built-in cat radar led Clementine through endless miles of unknown country to the one house and one family in the world she was looking for?

What is the force that guides these animals? The most common theory, and one that dates back from time immemorial, is that cats are somehow psychic.

How long would it take to walk from Dunkirk, N. Y. to Denver, Col.? A cat named Clementine could tell you. It took her four paw-bruising months to make that 1,600-mile trek. But then, Clementine didn't know the way.

When Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lundmark moved from Dunkirk to Denver, they left their pet black cat with neighbors because Clementine was in the family way. Once the litter was weaned, however, Clementine abandoned her brood and hit the road. Four months later an exhausted female cat appeared on the Lundmarks' Denver doorstep. There was no doubt it was Clementine, for this amazing animal was unique in other ways. She had seven toes on each front paw, two white spots on her stomach and a scar on her left shoulder.

That she survived the journey was remarkable in itself. But how did she find the way? What built-in cat radar, sixth sense or instinct led her through endless miles of unknown country to the one house and one family in the world she was looking for?

The feline is famous, of course, for his homing instinct. There are countless tales of cats, lost or abandoned by their owners, traveling hundreds and even thousands of miles to make their way back to the hearth.

Take the case of Wahoo, a blue-eyed, long-haired male with bizarre markings and coloration. Every spring Wahoo's owner, Walter Coleman, goes to Alaska to work on the family's homestead, leaving his wife, children—and usually Wahoo—at home in Seattle. Two years ago he decided to take Wahoo with him for company, but when the Alaska-bound travelers hit Gold Pan, B.C., 300 miles north of Seattle, Wahoo bolted from the car and disappeared. Eleven months later, a tired and bedraggled blue-eyed cat, his long hair dirty and matted, appeared in Seattle. Wahoo was home again.

Or consider Tom of Kokomo, Ind. Shipped by train to Augusta, Ga., when one branch of his family moved there, Tom gave Augusta exactly three weeks —a fair trial, by cat standards—before homesickness overpowered him. Twenty-one days later he arrived in Kokomo, having averaged better than 30 miles per day in his 720-mile journey.

As remarkable as Wahoo and Tom are, they did have one enormous advantage over Clementine. At least they were aiming at a familiar goal. They were headed home, and it is possible that the senses of smell, sight, touch, hearing, or some remembered experience, helped to guide them.

It is the trail blazers like Clementine that are the real puzzlers. Not only did she travel an enormous distance, but she was seeking a destination totally unknown to her. The regular senses could not have helped her chart her course.

Scientists have a name for this mysterious direction-finding ability. They call it "psi-trailing" ("psi" is a general term that loosely approximates the word "psychic")—or, more specifically in the case of animals, "anpsi." For the past 20 years scientists at the Parapsychology Laboratory of Duke University have been studying this phenomenon as one possible manifestation of extrasensory perception in animals.

Dr. J. B. Rhine and his associates at Duke have assembled a case-history file of animals that have tracked owners who have moved to new locations that the animal never visited. Many stories of psi-trailing are reported to the Duke laboratory, but only those that pass rigid standards of verification are accepted as authentic. First, the owners or narrators are investigated to eliminate hoax. Next, the animal must have identifying marks or behavior so unique that it cannot be mistaken for another animal. The animal must have traveled at least 30 miles. Veterinarians, friends, witnesses are queried; photographs are examined; in some cases, the animal himself receives a visit from a Duke investigator.

Among the dozens of cases reported to the Duke Laboratory, many—possibly a majority—are true. But only a few have been officially accepted because of the stringent standards.

One is Smoky, a male cat who was easily identified not only by a peculiar mark under his chin but also by his behavior habits. When his 14-year-old mistress played the piano, Smoky always sat at her right and placed his paws on the keys. Smoky escaped from the car during a family move from Tulsa, Okla., to Memphis, Tenn., returned to his old home for a lonely two-week vigil, and then disappeared again. A year later, a smoke-colored cat with a red spot under his chin arrived in Memphis. The crucial test, of course, was the piano. When his mistress sat down to play, so did Smoky.

Another case accepted at Duke is that of Sugar, a cream-colored male, part Persian cat with an unusual bone deformity in his left hip joint. When his family moved from California to Oklahoma, Sugar escaped from the car and—in classic cat fashion—made his way back to the old home. Like Smoky, he stayed around for several weeks, then he too disappeared. Fourteen months later, a cream-colored cat leaped through an open downstairs window and onto the shoulder of his mistress in Gage, Okla. She had only to stroke his left leg to know it was Sugar. He had traveled 1,500 miles!

A 1,500-mile hike through the mountains and deserts of the Southwest is as rough an endurance test as any cat could ask for. But it is probably no more perilous than tracking through city traffic. There is no easier place in the world to get lost, for example, than in the great urban sprawl of Los Angeles. But a cat named Old Tom, born and raised on a quiet country ranch 100 miles away, followed his family on foot after they moved to the city. It took Tom one year to the day to find the right house, the right street, in a city of eight million people.

Another cat performed the same magic when his owners moved from Cleveland to Chicago, a distance of some 375 miles. It took this intrepid psi-trailer eight months to find his family, living somewhere in several hundred square miles of the bustling city of Chicago.

It does seem to be sort of magic, this ability to track down one spot in a destination alien and remote. What is the force that guides these animals? Many theories have been proposed, and all are guesswork. One suggests that cats may use some form of celestial navigation; another is that cats may be so sensitive to the earth's magnetic forces that they use them in direction-finding. But the most common theory, and one that dates from time immemorial, is that cats are somehow psychic.

That is why psi-trailing is under study at Duke University. ESP (extrasensory perception) in people has been pretty clearly established. The Duke University Laboratory is studying evidence of the same powers in animals in the hope that is will reveal further knowledge of psychic powers in human beings.

Meanwhile, the file of psi-trailing stories—touching, heroic, incredible—grows. One thing, at least, is clear. Whatever the homing instinct or direction-finding ability is, it is born—not bred—in the cat. Even kittens are endowed with this particular form of sorcery. A recent news item from Pisa, Italy, tells of an eight-month-old cat who was given to relatives 300 miles away because he insisted on sleeping on a cot with the baby. Three hundred miles is a long lap for one so young, but kitty came home—and walked straight to the cot. ◆

Great Salad for "Cold" Tables

During the hot summer days, thoughts of food turn to something cold. This recipe promises to pick up lagging appetites on even the steamiest "dog days."

A creamy, chilled potato salad with Swiss cheese is served with sliced bologna and salami, pickles, cherry tomatoes, assorted rolls and cups of cold milk.

POTATO AND SWISS CHEESE SALAD

- 12 slices bacon, diced and fried until crisp, reserving 6 tablespoons drippings
- 3 medium onions, chopped
- 1 cup cider vinegar
- 1½ tablespoons sugar
- 1½ teaspoons salt
- ¾ teaspoon Accent
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- 6 medium potatoes (about 2 lbs.), cooked, peeled, and cubed
- ¼ cup bottled French dressing
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 1 tablespoon prepared mustard
- 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon paprika
- ⅛ teaspoon pepper
- 1 cup dairy sour cream
- 1 pkg. (10 oz.) frozen peas, cooked, drained, and cooled
- ½ cup chopped celery
- ¼ cup sliced radishes
- 2 tablespoons chopped chives
- 4 oz. Swiss cheese, cut in thin strips

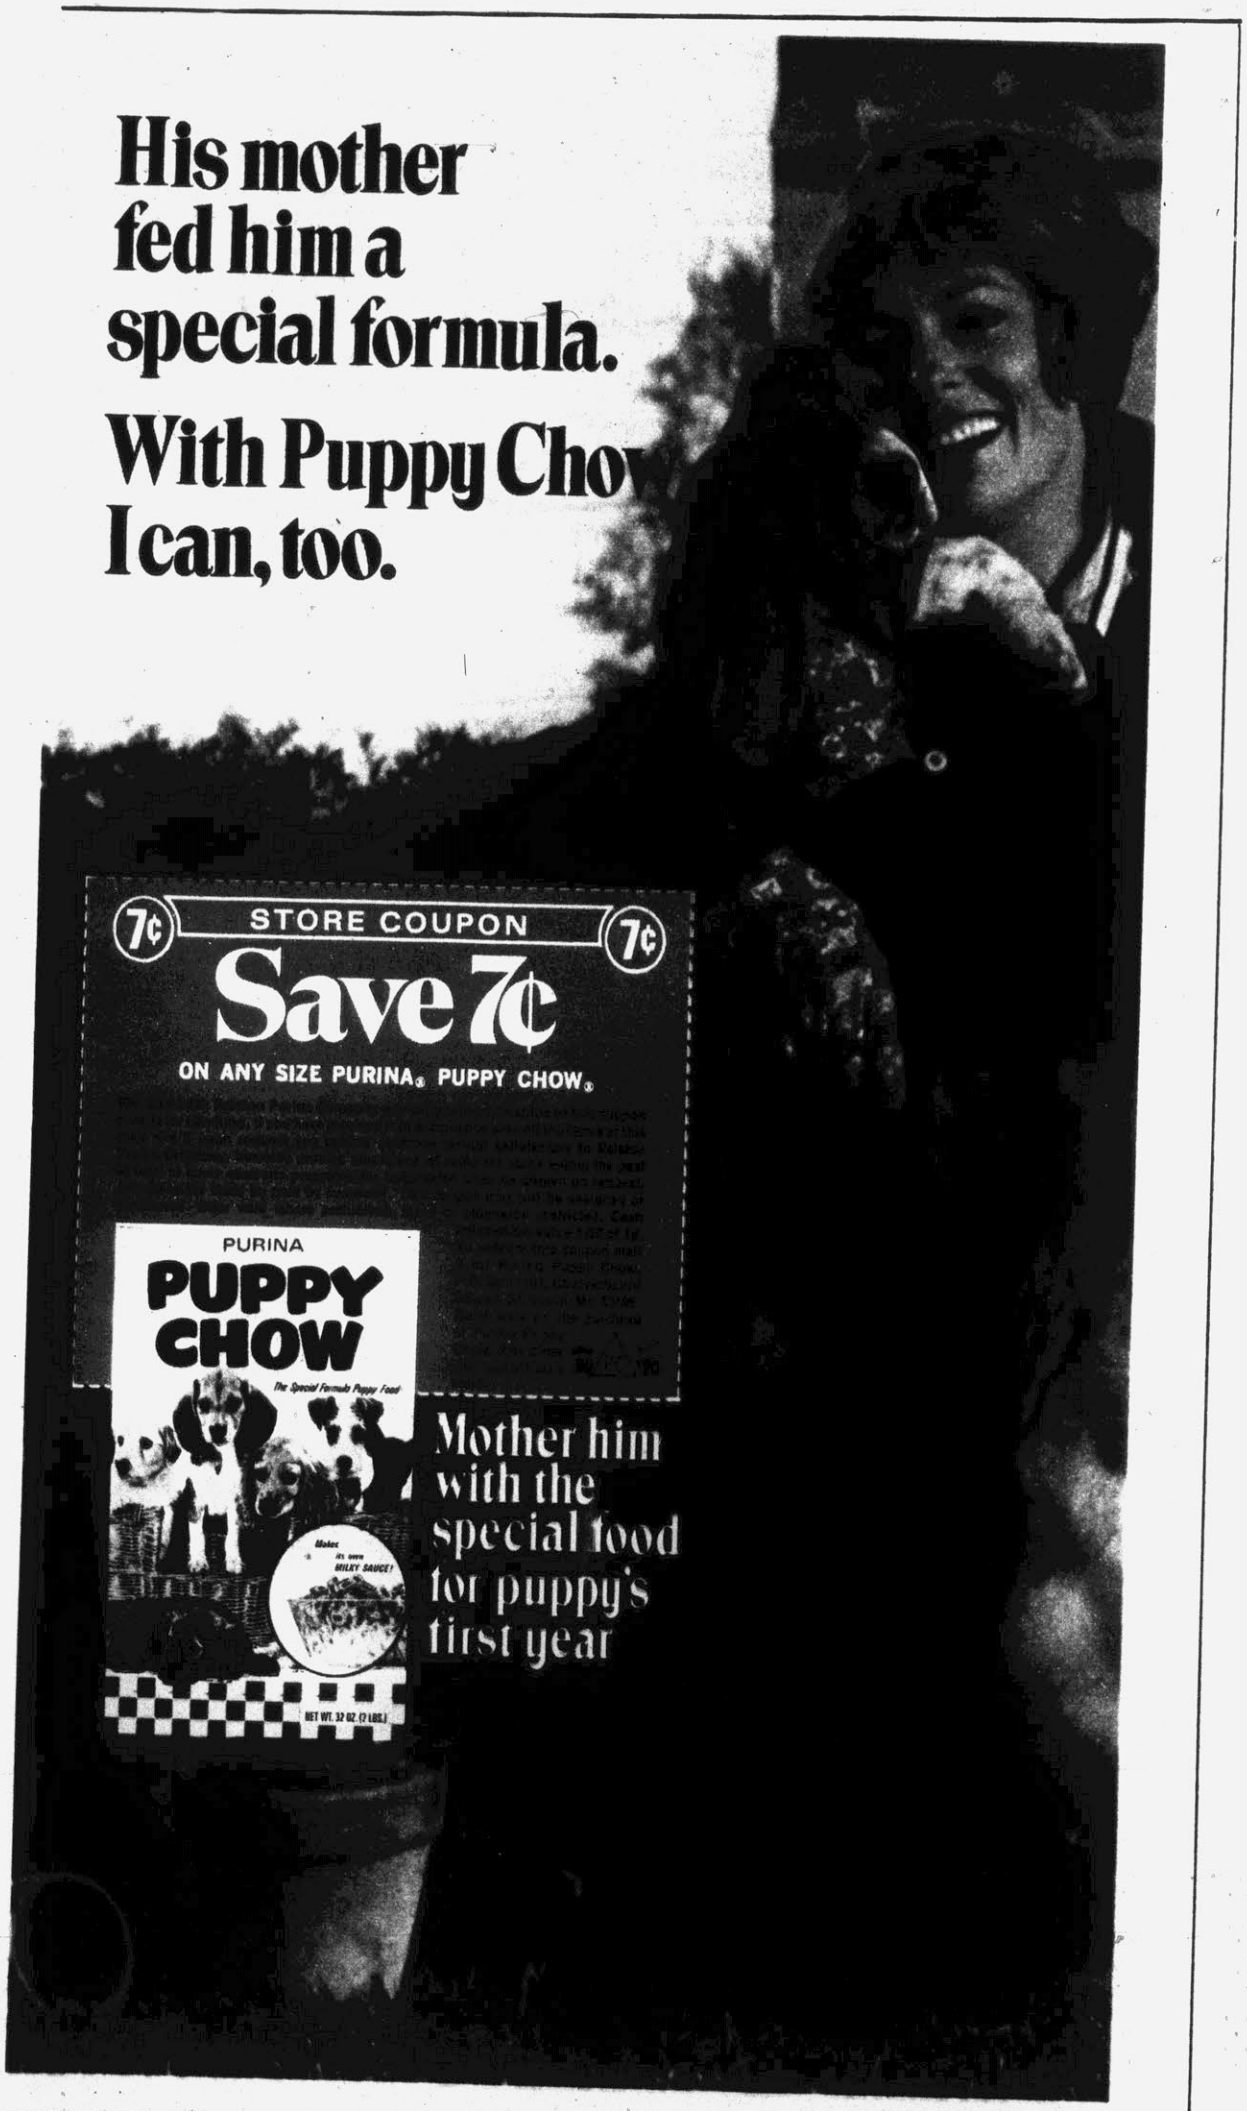

1. Heat bacon drippings in skillet. Add onion and cook until tender, stirring occasionally. Mix in vinegar, sugar, 1½ teaspoons salt, Accent, and ¼ teaspoon pepper; heat to boiling. Mix in bacon. Pour over potatoes in a bowl and toss lightly to coat evenly. Set aside.

2. Blend French dressing with lemon juice, prepared mustard, Worcestershire sauce, 1 teaspoon salt, paprika, and ⅛ teaspoon pepper. Add gradually, stirring constantly to the sour cream. Pour over peas, celery, radishes, and chives in a bowl and toss until well coated. Allow to marinate in refrigerator.

3. Mix marinated vegetables with seasoned potatoes. Blend well and chill.

4. Before serving, gently toss the Swiss cheese strips with the salad. Line a chilled large platter with lettuce. Mound the potato salad to one end. Overlap bologna slices folded over salami slices to one side of other end. Pile dill pickle slices to the side and cherry tomatoes in the center of the platter.

Denture Invention

For People With "Uppers" and "Lowers"

For the first time, science now offers a unique plastic cream that holds dentures—both "uppers" and "lowers"—as they've never been held before. It forms an elastic membrane that helps hold your dentures to the natural tissues of your mouth.

It's FIXODENT®—a revolutionary discovery for daily home use. So different it's protected by U. S. Patent #3,003,988.

FIXODENT not only holds dentures firmer, but it holds them more comfortably, too. It's so elastic you may bite harder, chew better, eat more naturally.

The special pencil-point dispenser lets you put FIXODENT exactly where it's needed. Resists oozing over and gagging.

Just one application may last for hours. Dentures that fit are essential to health. See your dentist regularly. Get easy-to-use FIXODENT Denture Adhesive Cream at all drug counters.

THOSE HORRID

FADE THEM OUT

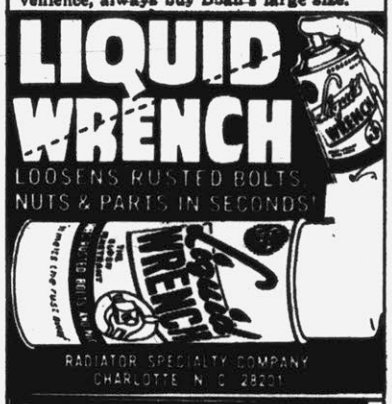

*Weathered brown spots on the surface of your hands and face tell the world you're getting old—perhaps before you really are. Fade them away with ESOTERICA, that medicated cream that breaks up masses of pigment on the skin, helps make hands look white and young again. Equally effective on the face, neck and arms. Not a cover-up. Acts in the skin—not on it. Fragrant, greaseless base for softening, lubricating skin as it clears up those blemishes. If you have these age-revealing brown spots, blotches, or if you want clearer, lighter skin, use ESOTERICA. At your favorite drug and toiletry counter. $2.50.

Amanda Blake–After 17 Years As Gunsmoke's "Kitty"

Amanda, who loves animals, never had a pet as a child. "My parents had a Boston terrier, but we never became friends."

It's hard to think of redheaded, five-feet, seven-inches, 120-pound Amanda Blake as an entity separate from Kitty Russell, Long Branch saloonkeeper and madam on "Gunsmoke." And no wonder! She has played the role on television for 17 years—a record for female actresses. "Kitty is my career," Amanda says. "I haven't tried to do anything else. I don't want to do anything else."

In order to do the shooting for the series, she commutes to Los Angeles by private plane from her home in Phoenix—in spite of the fact that she's terrified of flying.

"I've always maintained that the Wright brothers were wrong," Amanda insisted when we visited during one of her recent hops back into the smog zone around Los Angeles. "I won't sit up front with the pilot. Looking at all those instruments really upsets me." Her businessman husband Frank Gilbert sometimes takes over the controls, but never, Amanda maintains, while she's aboard. "I saw him going through the emergency landing procedures with the pilot once, and I said, 'Get your cotton-picking hands off that wheel!' I went absolutely crazy!"

Life for Amanda Blake as Mrs. Frank Gilbert of Phoenix is quite different from the life of Kitty on the sets of Dodge City, Hollywood. She lives in a luxuriously large, comfortable two-story adobe Spanish-style home originally built by her husband's father upon his emigration from England. She is presently redecorating it room by room with Spanish and Mexican artifacts. In between, Amanda fills the roles of hostess, a good neighbor, rancher, philanthropist and dedicated fund-raiser for the Phoenix zoo.

A typical day in Phoenix usually starts with the phone sounding off around seven. "It seems like the middle of the night. Frank's business—he drills water wells—starts very early. I hate that phone! Sometimes I just won't answer it. If the call is for me, I'll ask the housekeeper to say I'm on the coast." Before she meets "the girls" for lunch, she's kept busy for several hours with the menagerie she keeps on the four acres surrounding the house. Besides 11 head of horses, they have four poodles, a great Dane, four cats, two ponies, birds of all kinds, and a Southeast Asian wild leopard named Myron.

Oddly enough, Amanda, who loves animals, never had a pet as a child. "My parents had a Boston terrier. They thought it was easier to raise than a child. Then I came along, and the dog was always jealous of me because it had been number one until I arrived. We never became friends."

"I tried making movies, but I hated it! I didn't like the executives, and I didn't like the miserable little pictures they wanted me to do, either."

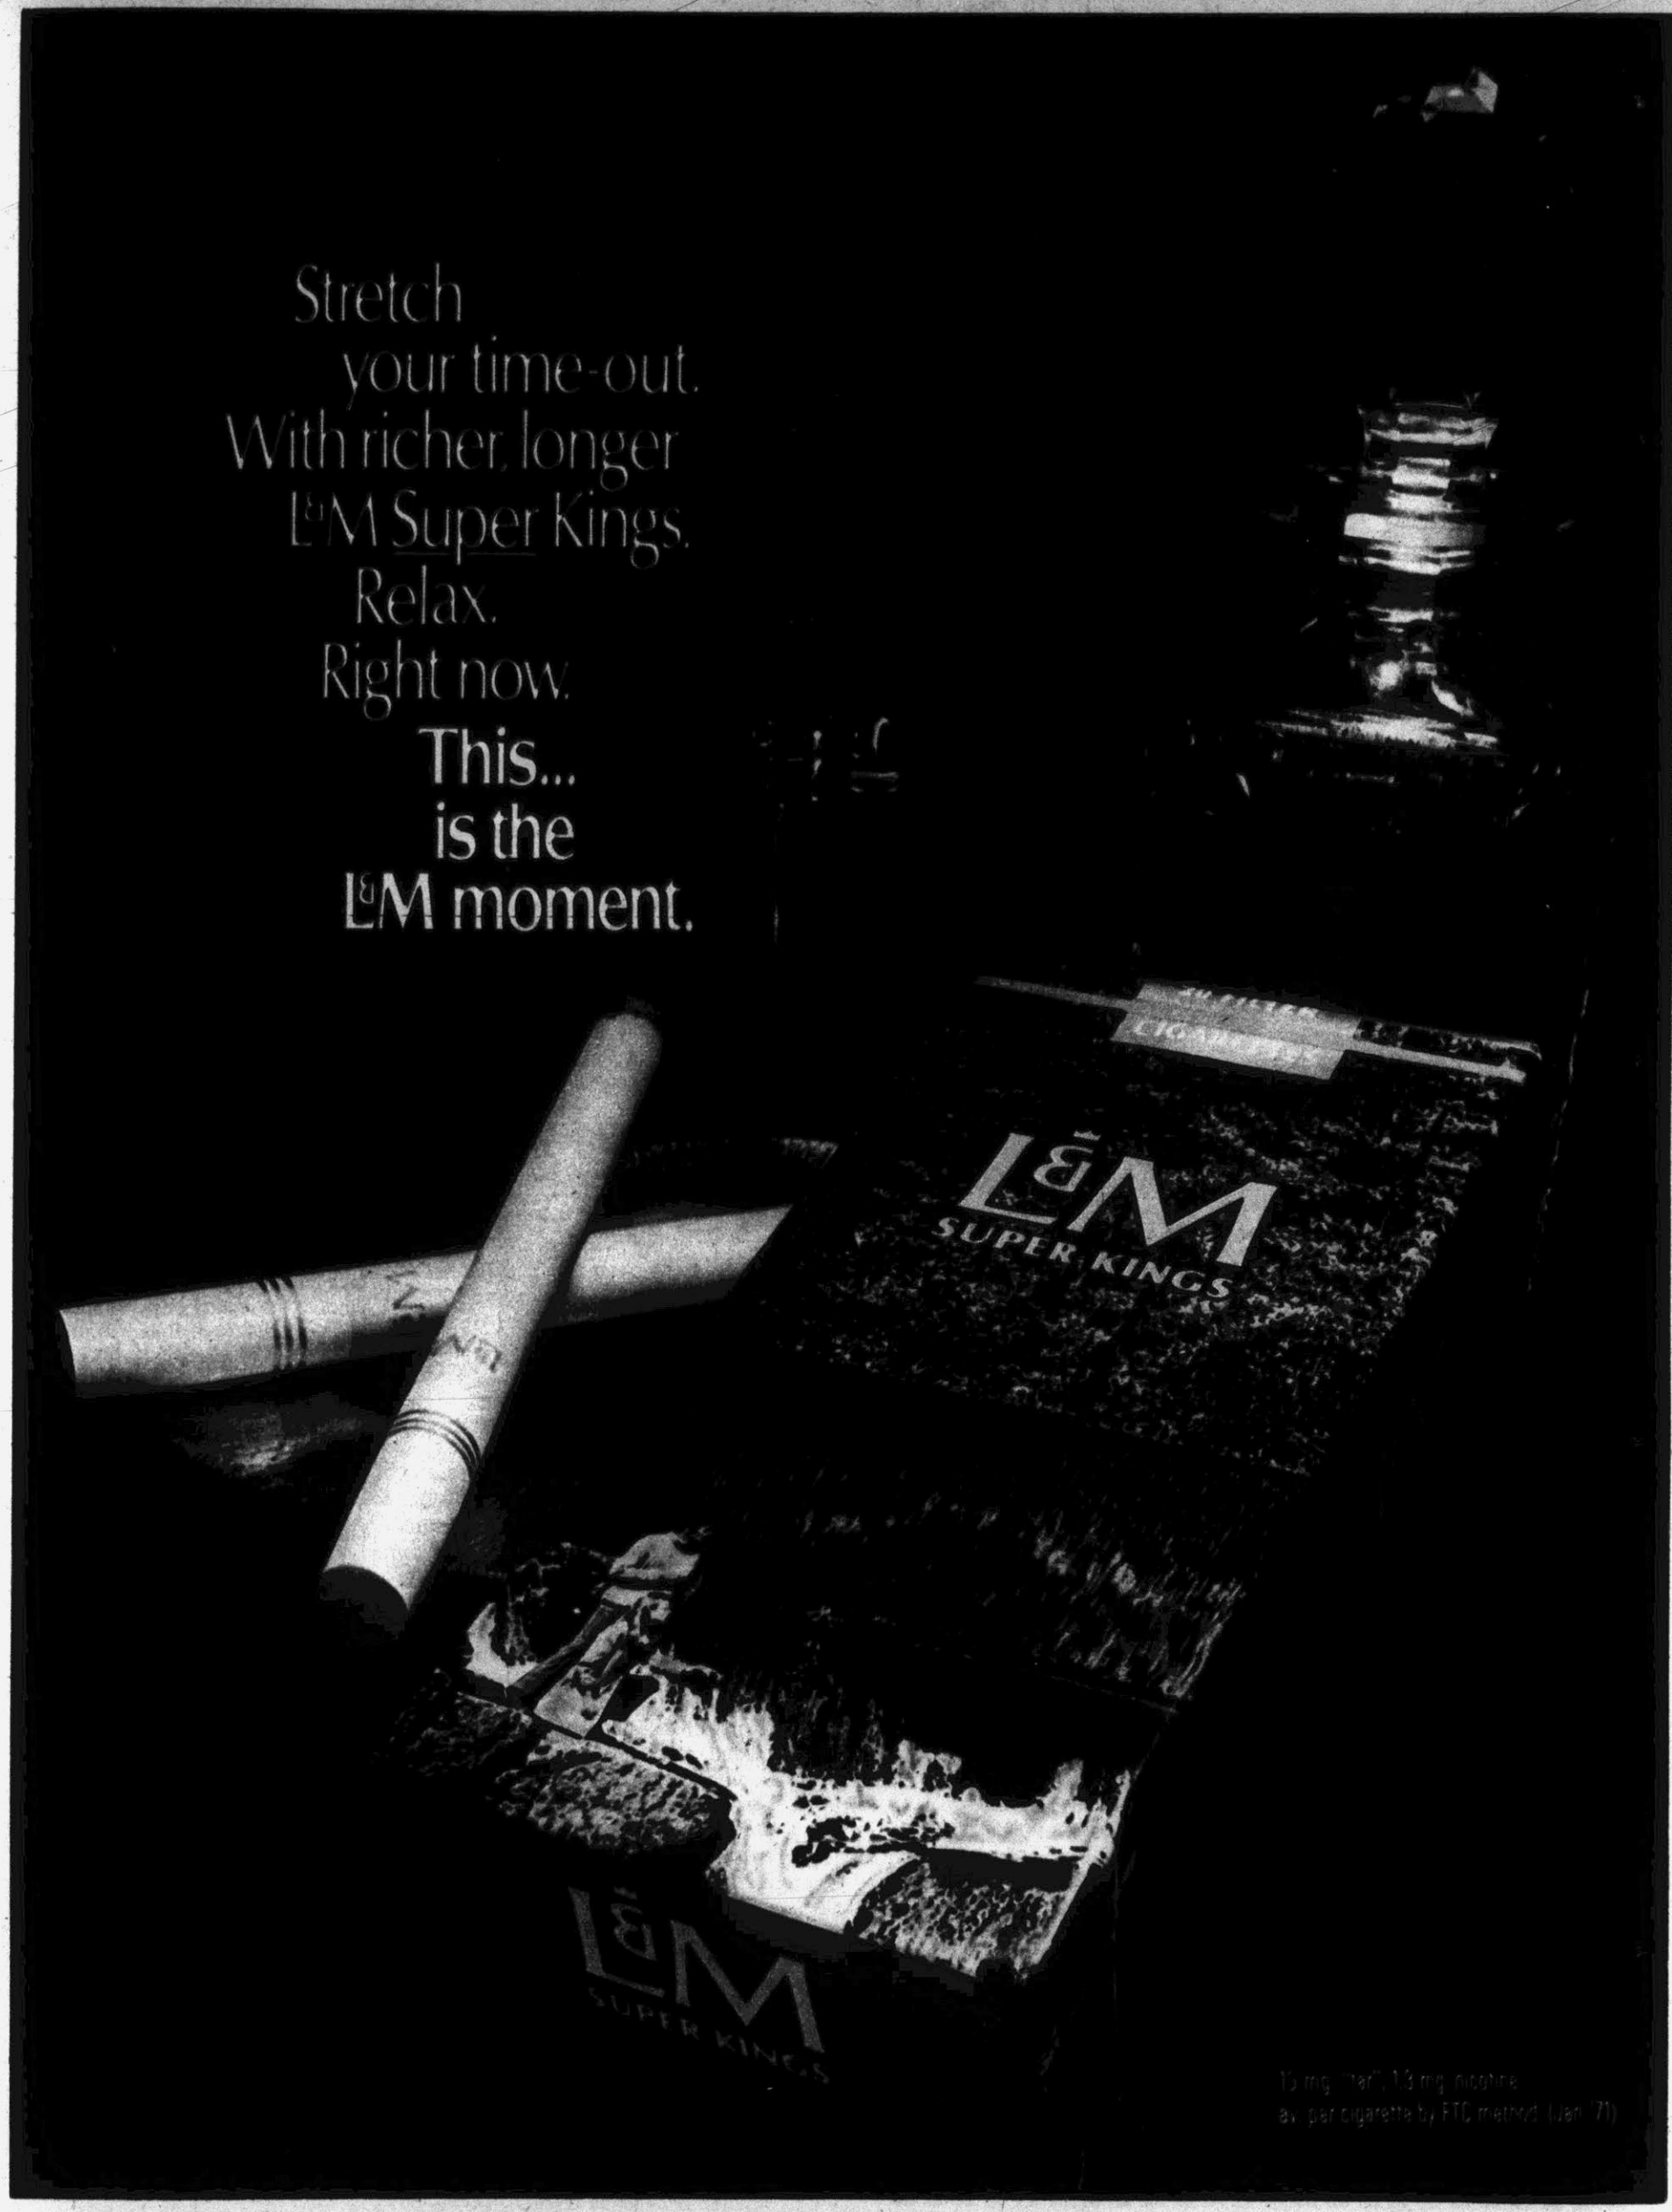

Amanda and Frank almost didn't get together. Frank had just gotten a divorce, and Amanda had recently married when a mutual friend invited Amanda to dinner with the announcement, "I want you to meet the man you should have married." When things got too complicated in her marriage, Amanda went back to Phoenix, and she and Frank renewed their acquaintanceship. "Our friend's prediction came true," Amanda said. "We were married in July of 1967."

Amanda, who hails from Buffalo, N.Y., always knew she wanted to act. She was encouraged by her actress mother who, says Amanda, "is really super. She acts all the time—never gets off." When her family moved to Claremont, Calif., in 1943, Amanda barely got in one year of college because little theatre productions claimed most of her attention. She was signed by MGM while still in her teens, and from there went to Columbia for a year. "I hated it! I didn't like their executives, and I didn't like the miserable little pictures they wanted me to do, either." She was at CBS when she heard that the successful radio show "Gunsmoke" was going to be made into a television pilot. "I knew I had to have the part of Kitty, so I hounded the producer until I got it!"

Aside from having married an extremely wealthy man, Amanda is a rich actress in her own right. Yet her only extravagance is jewelry. "I don't go in for that big fashion routine. "It's a waste of money. The first really good piece I ever bought for myself was right after 'Gunsmoke' started. I couldn't wait to get my first pay check so I could buy that pinky finger ring, with diamonds and emeralds. Jewelry doesn't give me a sense of security or anything like that. I just think it's beautiful."

Amanda admits that her husband would prefer that she didn't work, but she says with appreciation, "He understands how it is with me. I am no longer ambitious myself. Frankly, I've had it with this show-business stuff. But I love 'Gunsmoke,' and I love the guys I work with. I couldn't stand it if the show went on, and I wasn't part of it!" ◆

New Repair for Hernia?

More than 3,000,000 Americans have hernias. Hernia repair is the commonest form of major surgery today (nearly 500,000 a year). Hernias cause the loss of an estimated 10,000,000 work-days annually and over $500,000,000 in productivity.

A hernia ("rupture") is when an organ pushes out of its body cavity due either to an inborn defect or to straining or injury. Most commonly, some intestine pushes into the groin. The preferred treatment has long been surgery, although this sometimes fails. But a West Coast surgeon recently urged "One-Day Hernia Repair," done with a local anesthetic dentists use. The patient gets off the operating table afterwards and walks back to his room. Next day he leaves the hospital with no restrictions on activity, usually drives home himself. Sometimes a plastic mesh is sewn in to seal bad defects.

THE DIET WATCH
By Harriet La Barre

How to Get More Out of Fewer Calories

What are you doing to get thinner and healthier these days? Even a 1,000-calories-a-day diet can be so well-balanced that you can make every calorie yield up good nutrition and better health.

The trick is to eat synergistically: That is, make the things you eat work. Cereal and milk yield up more nutrition when you eat them together rather than separately. So do bread and milk. Bread and meat are more nutritious eaten together. So are eggs and toast. Synergistic is from the Greek, meaning "work together," and it means that the total effect is greater than the two things working separately. When you eat foods of a high protein value (eggs, fish, milk, meat, dairy products) at the same time you eat a cereal or grain such as bread, the high protein food "rounds out" the lower protein food and increases its nutritional value. So don't even skip potatoes and bread! Eating like this, you can eat less without worrying about nutrition. While the fat fades away, you won't.

How the Temperature Can Affect Your Career

Your chances of winning the job you want or favorably impressing a new friend or new client are best when the temperature-humidity index is comfortable. Psychological experiments at Kansas State University proved that temperature discomfort causes a definite drop in favorable decisions about other people. The researchers say that when you are going to be evaluated by someone, you should, if possible, arrange comfortable temperature conditions. Meeting in an air-conditioned room, or one with sufficient wintertime warmth, makes it more likely that the other person will make a favorable decision about you.

Should Cats Have Rabies Shots? Yes —Here's Why.

Although only about 10 percent as many cases of rabies are diagnosed in the cat as in the dog, it is always a fatal disease to the poor cat and sometimes to the animal or person he may bite while infected. Rabies is usually transmitted to a cat by the bite of an infected animal—most often a dog or a skunk. (The dog, cat, and skunk have medium susceptibility, while the fox, coyote, and cow are highly susceptible.)

Should you have your cat inoculated as a kitten? An emphatic yes. A cat with rabies can be a furious animal, biting and clawing without reason. If you suspect your pet has this dread disease, do not try to apprehend him yourself, but get in touch immediately with the proper authorities such as your local department of animal regulation.

I thought I was over-the-hill, until I lost 72 pounds.

By Dee McManus—as told to Ruth L. McCarthy

Look at that arm! Only good thing about it is the way it covers some of the other fat. And I hadn't even reached my top weight of 214 pounds.

There's nothing quite like reaching 30 and weighing 214 pounds. When I got off the scale, I looked in the mirror and said to myself: "You're over the hill, kid." But deep inside me, I really didn't believe it. I knew I had to try once more to look my age—by losing weight.

You see, I'm one of those people who's tried about every kind of diet and reducing aid you could name. Yet I wasn't born fat. My mother says I was skinny until I was eight or nine. Fact is, food just didn't agree with me as an infant. So my mother developed the habit of forcing me to eat. And it took me half a lifetime to change the pattern.

Unfortunately, it wasn't in time for the high school prom. I had a gown, high hopes, but the invitation never came. After graduation, I went into training in Pittsburgh to become a Licensed Practical Nurse. But it didn't train me to eat less. I consumed pounds of spaghetti, noodles, mashed potatoes, gravy, fried egg sandwiches and pizza pies. How I ever caught a husband, I will never know. Yet at the age of 20 I married a man who was as thin as I was fat.

Having children didn't help either. After each child was born, instead of losing, I started gaining — until I became the biggest parent at Parent Teachers meetings. Why, my hands even got so fat, nobody wanted me to dry their water glasses for fear I'd break them.

But the day I heard a friend say, "You don't want to look like Dee, do you?", I knew I had to do something about my weight. For a long time I'd been reading about those vitamin and mineral reducing-plan candies called Ayds®, so I decided to give them a try. I knew I couldn't take reducing drugs, and since Ayds contains none, I bought a box at the drugstore.

I took one or two Ayds, like the directions say with hot coffee (it can be any hot drink) fifteen minutes before meals. Those little candies really helped curb my appetite. For instance, for breakfast, I was satisfied with grapefruit and cereal. I never was a big morning eater. At noon, I'd have my Ayds and coffee again and a sandwich, or sometimes cottage cheese and citrus fruit. And for dinner, meat or fish, salad, and a vegetable.

I'd carry Ayds wherever I went, too, for snacks. Chocolate mint, always, though there are four Ayds flavors to choose from. My kids don't like mint, so I knew they'd leave them alone.

Well, I guess you can see from the pictures that the Ayds Plan really worked for me. That weight came off and off. 72 pounds! Maybe I ought to mention one other thing. When I used to read those stories about other people, I'd wonder where all the extra flesh went. Well, my skin began to tighten up with exercise. No gymnastics. I'd just wiggle or rock and roll to music with my children. It was great fun.

How's this for a change? I've decided, at 142 pounds, I can smile at the world and the world will smile back!

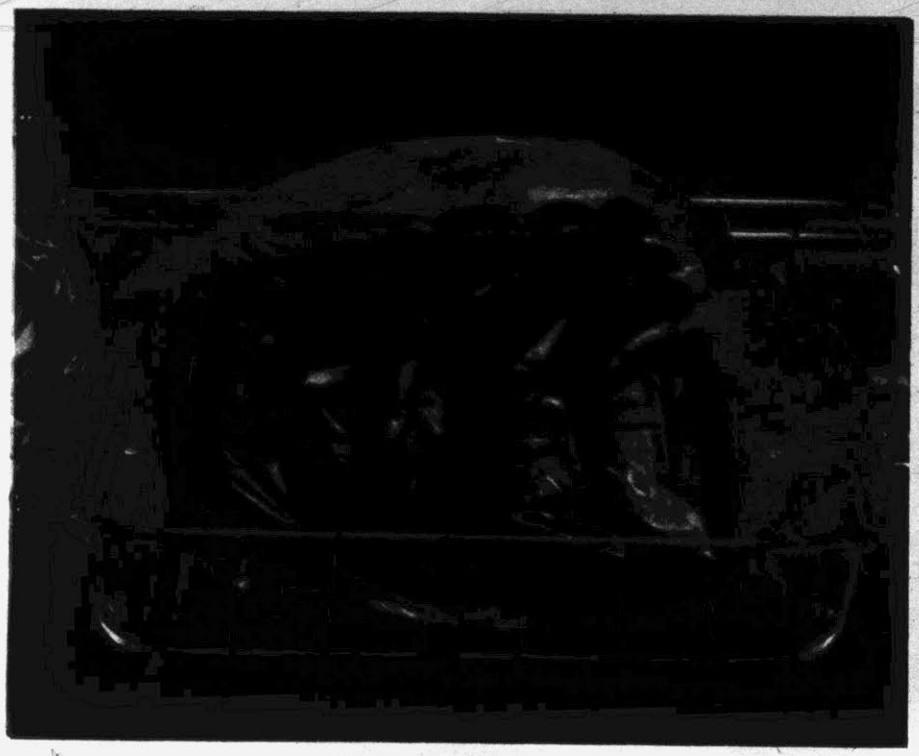

I'm still not quite as firm as I would like to be, but at my age, I figure I have time.

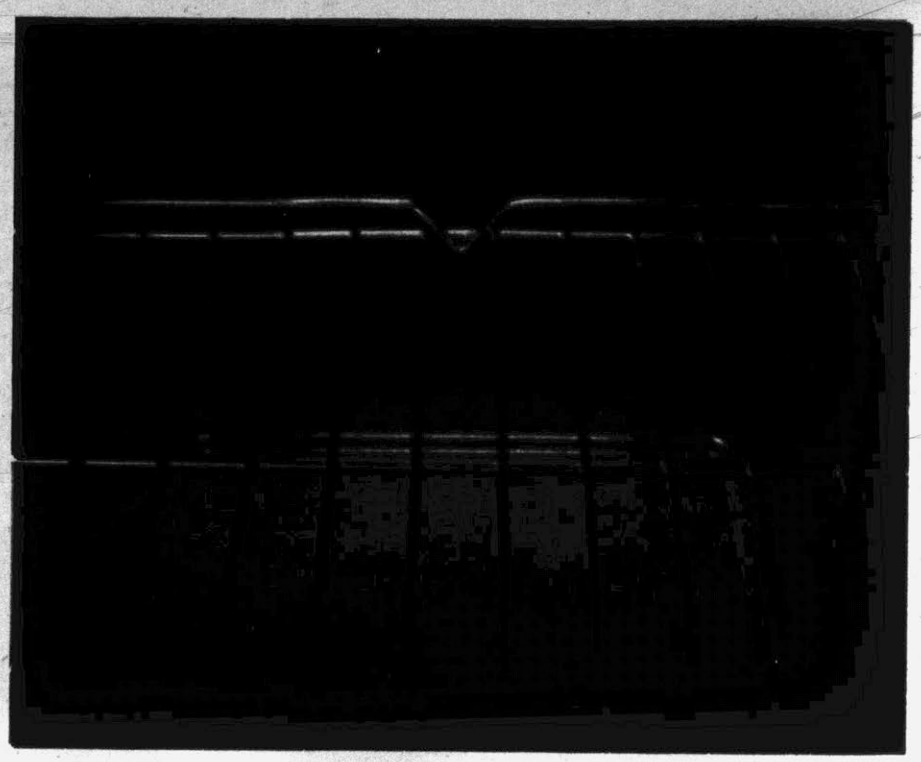

As for my husband's reaction to my weight loss, he was a little jealous of all the compliments I was getting. There were many things that we didn't see eye to eye on, and since our marriage had been shaky long before I reduced, we finally agreed to get a divorce. It was a hard time for me, but now I feel there is a whole new life ahead of me. I've got a job and lots of invitations. The telephone just never stops ringing. My sons say that I am more like a sister to them now. And they love it. Why, I've even started dating.

Oh, yes. One last thing. Thanks to the Ayds Plan, I've now got a figure good enough for hot pants. And I'm going to wear them. Bet I'll be the first one in my hometown, too, which is Butler, Pennsylvania.

For juicy meat, without a juicy oven. Reynolds Brown-In-Bag.™

We made the Brown-In-Bag so you can cook juicy, tender meat. Every time. And never come back to a messy oven.

Those meat juices that should be giving you tender meat, end up giving you more work.

We don't think you need more work. What you need is the Reynolds Brown-In-Bag.

Because the Brown-In-Bag is a bag, the juices can't escape and splatter on your oven. Instead, they rain back all over the meat. So your meat bastes itself in its own natural juices.

Because the Brown-In-Bag is made of transparent Reynolon®, meat browns right in the bag. You never have to open the bag while the meat is cooking.

Two popular sizes: 10″ x 16″ bag holds 3-6 lbs. Pot roast, chicken, other favorites. Recipe folder in each carton of ten.

14″ x 20″ bag holds 6-12 lbs. Two chickens, ham, roast, many others. Cartons of eight, with recipe folder.

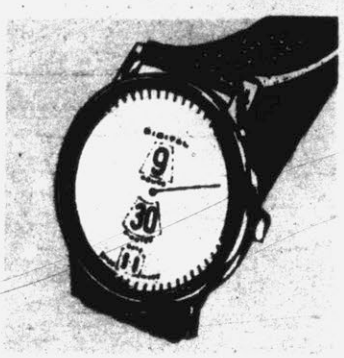

For juicy meat with no oven cleanup.

Margaret was found in a back lane of Calcutta, lying in her doorway, unconscious from hunger. Inside, her mother had just died in childbirth.

You can see from the expression on Margaret's face that she doesn't understand why her mother can't get up, or why her father doesn't come home, or why the dull throb in her stomach won't go away.

What you can't see is that Margaret is dying of malnutrition. She has periods of fainting, her eyes are strangely glazed. Next will come a bloated stomach, falling hair, parched skin. And finally, death from malnutrition, a killer that claims 10,000 lives every day.

Meanwhile, in America we eat 4.66 pounds of food a day per person, then throw away enough garbage to feed a family of six in India. In fact, the average dog in America has a higher protein diet than Margaret!

If you were to suddenly join the ranks of 1½ billion people who are forever hungry, your next meal would be a bowl of rice, day after tomorrow a piece of fish the size of a silver dollar, later in the week more rice—maybe.

Hard-pressed by the natural disasters and phenomenal birth rate, the Indian government is valiantly trying to curb what Mahatma Gandhi called "The Eternal Compulsory Fast."

But Margaret's story can have a happy ending. For only $12.00 a month, you can sponsor her, or thousands of other desperate youngsters.

You will receive the child's picture, personal history, and the opportunity to exchange letters, Christmas cards—and priceless friendship.

Since 1938, American sponsors have found this to be an intimate, person-to-person way of sharing their blessings with youngsters around the world.

So won't you help? Today?

Sponsors urgently needed this month for children in: India, Brazil, Taiwan (Formosa) and Hong Kong. (Or let us select a child for you from our emergency list.)

What in the World!

COURAGEOUS GEORGE TUCCI, JR.
He found a way to survive

George Tucci, Jr., lost both legs in Vietnam but still manages to operate a service station in Merrimac, Mass. He can service a car faster than many guys who can walk. A button on his wheel chair drops it so he can wheel himself under a car that is up on the lift for greasing. He's also fast on the U-turns necessary for filling the tank and checking the dipstick. After 38 operations, including his double amputation, George was "worried about looking funny." That was five years ago. "Some friends of mine who have handicaps just gave up," he continued. "That made me angry. I told myself I was going to find a way to survive."

George not only has found a way to survive through his Mobil station, he also found a way to practice his philosophy of good will. For example, there was a Marine passing through who didn't have enough money for emergency repairs. George adjusted the price and then invited the Marine and his wife home to meet his own wife and eight-year-old son and to spend the night. "I'd rather make a friend than a buck," says George Tucci.

Acne will disappear when the teenager stops feeling "picked on." Based on this theory, a controversial cure for acne has been developed by a Nebraska psychiatrist, Dr. C. Ellerbrook of Omaha's Psychiatric Institute. Treatment included psychotherapy to change life-style, a drug to relieve anxiety and an antibacterial toxoid. Whose complexion cleared the fastest? "Patients who practiced good posture, maintaining a pleasant face and voice, with sentences ending with an upbeat." The Medical and Pharmaceutical Information Bureau reports that 80 percent of Doctor Ellerbrook's patients showed improvement within eight weeks, and 50 percent were curred in 16 weeks. To maintain the cure, the discharged patients were advised to keep their new-found positive thinking in control "for a minimum of about two years."

This young lady's exotic name is Alla Babapulle, and she's a 22-year-old dancer. Recently, she left her native India on a nine-month dancing tour of Japan, Spain and France. Her boy friend is His Royal Highness, Prince Sayajirao, of Baroda, India. The trip will keep her separated from the Prince for all nine months, though Alla says they will keep in touch by telephone everyday. The Prince, meanwhile, is hardly standing pat on his princeliness. He went off to London to try his hand at rock 'n' roll.

SEAT BELT
I always discover—
Right after I lock it—
I left all my keys in
A deep lower pocket.
—Lee Orr Harris

A man was drinking ginger ale at his club bar and going on at great length about his redemption from booze. "It's great to be off the stuff," he claimed.

Finally he turned to a man who had been on the wagon from time to time, and wondered aloud why people drank alcoholic beverages at all.

Taking a sip of his whiskey-and-water, the man turned to the bore and said: "I only drink to make my friends seem interesting!" —Dan Bennett

The kindly judge was counseling the swindler before his bench.

"How could you cheat these nice people who trusted you?" he asked.

"Well, Your Honor," the prisoner replied, "have you ever tried to swindle people who didn't trust you?"

"Mommy," said six-year-old Ellen, "why do mothers always dress baby boys in blue and baby girls in pink?"

Before Mother could reply, eight-year-old Billy spoke up.

"That's a silly question," he said. "It's because the babies can't dress themselves." —F. G. Kernan

5 CHARLIE BROWN Books your child will adore,
Will bring your youngster fun galore!
For $1.59 your child will see
How much pleasure books can be!

BEAUTIFUL, FULL-COLOR, HARD-BOUND CHARLIE BROWN BOOKS!

5 CHARLIE BROWN BOOKS FOR $1.59

Most mothers and fathers frankly acknowledge that they haven't either the time or the perspective to choose precisely the right books for children not yet ready to read or who are just beginning to read. That is why parents are happily turning this problem over to the highly qualified editors of Parents' Magazine... by enrolling their youngsters in the Read Aloud and Easy Reading Program for Little Listeners and Beginning Readers.

BOOKS ARE BY OUTSTANDING AUTHORS AND ILLUSTRATORS

Membership brings to your home each month an outstanding book, carefully selected from a wide variety of titles by leading authors and illustrators, which you may read to or along with your little one. Each book will charm and captivate your child– from its bright, colorful cover through its gaily illustrated pages, with a story appealing and understandable to even the youngest mind.

SAVE UP TO 50%—AND MORE!

Besides the assurance of good entertainment, and the wonderful read-together sessions each selection provides for you and your child, you will be pleased by the savings on every book. Member's price is only $1.59 each (plus small mailing charge) for books regularly priced up to $3.95.

MAIL POSTPAID CARD TO RECEIVE YOUR 5 CHARLIE BROWN BOOKS FOR ONLY $1.59

If your child is of "beginning reader" or "read to me" age, enroll your youngster now—and receive the introductory package of the 5 Charlie Brown books shown above—all 5 for only $1.59, plus small mailing charge. You must be convinced of the pleasure and benefits this highly praised Program offers your child—or you may return the books in 10 days and owe nothing. Parents' Magazine's Read Aloud and Easy Reading Program, P.O. Box 161, Bergenfield, N.J. 07621.

PRAISE FROM KINDERGARTEN AND EARLY GRADE TEACHERS. Every year thousands of kindergarten and first and second grade teachers make a special effort to introduce their pupils' parents to the Read Aloud and Easy Reading Program. They like the quality of books offered through membership, they note the enthusiasm which greets each new book's arrival, and the beneficial effect on reading skills and general school work.

Decorates Over 3 Feet of Wall Space in Hammered Metal
Full Colored Glorious Pink, Blue and Brilliant Yellow Roses

A REMARKABLE NEW ART OFFER FOR ONLY $3.98

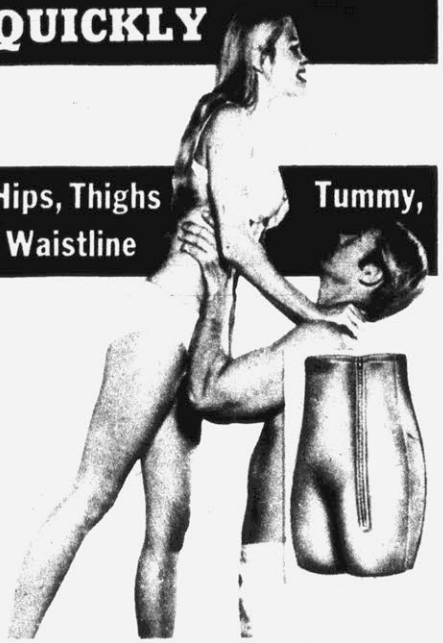

Giant Metal Rose Wall Bouquet

Imagine the beauty of glorious fine enameled hot pink, gentle baby blue and brilliant canary yellow roses poised in perpetual splendor on graceful, abundantly leafy cool green stems. This symphony of multi-colored roses ascends from a snow-white shell basket that is tipped in a kiss of rich gold. Truly a colorful spectacle dramatized by finely crafted hammered metal.

We emphasize these are not tiny miniatures, but beautiful museum quality hammered decorator wall plaques that dominate over 3 full feet of wall space. This lovely plaque will bring springtime to the decor of any room and only when you see it in your home, will you fully appreciate its charm.

11178—Rose Wall Decorations $3.98

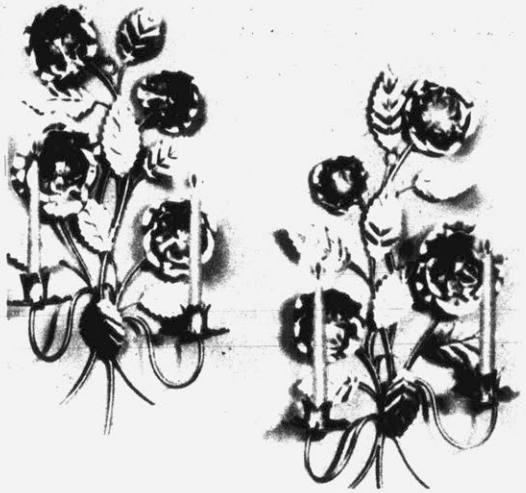

TAKE INCHES OFF QUICKLY

SHORTS THAT WORK LIKE A DRY HEAT SAUNA

Inch your way to a slimmer figure. Trim up. Shape up. Firm up without exertion; go about normal everyday activities...housework, even leisurely walking. The principle is simple, the method fabulously new! Inflatable pants are worn exactly as you would any shorts but the heat of your body is captured and held inside so that every movement becomes an exercise. The soothing warmth remains as long as you wear the shorts. When you've removed them—waistline, tummy, thighs feel and look more youthful—trim and vigorous. Optional exercises and a 7-day diet plan are included. Smoky vinyl. One size fits all. Zippered.

10679—Inflatable Pants $7.98

Golden Rose Metal Wall Sconce Duet

Captivates an Entire Room With Candlelight. Two towering golden rose vines, each holding two candles, are portrayed in handcrafted metal. Eight rambling gilt roses, each artistically formed to embrace the glint and glow of the flickering candlelight, then to cast that golden halo throughout the room. Glorious roses and leaves gathered in the incomparable artistry of hammered metal. Each is 15½" tall. Candles not included.

11264—Sconce Set $4.98

Create Unusual Shelf Arrangements

ONLY $4.98

3 scalloped-edged, maple-finished curio shelves are far from the ordinary! 10 removable spindle dowels invite your own artistic wall arrangements: a ladder, left-right steps or scatter-about effect. 19 inch assembled height, 13 inch long shelves. Wood.

A10242—Scatter Shelf Set $4.98

ELECTRONIC COLONIAL LANTERN KILLS BUGS!

ELIMINATE PESTS THAT RUIN PICNICS, PATIO LOUNGING AND OUTDOOR LIVING. Forget fly swatters, sprays, chemicals, traps. Use this silent killer for instant action. Works like a mini anti-missile system, attracting mosquitoes, flies, gnats to its tantalizing rays, then kills them with low power, safe electric charge. Keeps wide area free, clear. Yet, it's a boon for people and pets! Smart design looks like a colonial lamp with the styling of a modern swag lamp. No moving parts to wear out. All set up, hang and plug in the moment you get it. 7½x4½".

THE CRITIC PREFERS NO PUBLICITY, FOR FEAR OF STARTING A NEW ACTORS' FAD.

THE PAPER'S COMPANY DOCTOR PATCHED UP THE BUMP ON SHEDZ' HEAD. WHEN HE LEARNED CHAY'D SLUGGED HIM WITH THAT STATUETTE, HE PRESCRIBED KARATE LESSONS, MRS. GAR.

I'M VERY GLAD HE'S ALL RIGHT, COLONEL LEE. I STILL CAN'T BELIEVE THAT I WANTED, FOR ONE AWFUL MOMENT, CLINTON SHEDZ TO BE ... BUT I DID! NOT A NICE THING TO LIVE WITH.

LIKE FATHER, LIKE DAUGHTER, EH? EXCEPT, FOR WHAT IT'S WORTH, I ONLY HAVE TO REGRET WHAT ALMOST HAPPENED.

I KNOW HOW LATE IT IS, MOTHER, AND HOW LONG YOU'VE LIVED ALONE WITH FATHER'S MEMORY, BUT COULD I COME HOME WITH YOU NOW?

I'D LIKE THAT, GALEE.

WHILE, ON ALASKA'S OIL-RICH NORTH SLOPE, BUSH PILOTS RELAX AT A REMOTE DRILLING-SITE AIR STRIP BETWEEN ENDLESS SHUTTLE FLIGHTS, BRINGING IN MEN, GEAR AND SUPPLIES FOR THE BOOM THROUGH THE SHORT ARCTIC SUMMER.

HEY, TORCHY! DON'T TELL ME YOU'VE SOLD THAT NEW AIRPLANE DRIVER ON YOUR DUMB SCHEME?

WHY NOT? NONE OF YOU SNOW-BIRDS WOULD TAKE THE JOB

TORCH, WE DON'T WANT TO WASTE YOUR MONEY. WHEN IT COMES TO UNFREEZING AN AIR-PLANE ENGINE AT FIFTY BELOW WITH A BLOW TORCH, YOU'RE A GENIUS. ELSEWISE, YOU JUST AIN'T REASONABLE.

IT'S MY MONEY, AIN'T IT? IF I KNEW MORE ABOUT FLYIN' AND HOW TO NAVIGATE, I'D DO IT ALONE, BUT I CAN'T, SO LOOK WHAT I'M STUCK WITH!

THIS IS MY FINAL WORD ON THE SUBJECT, MY TREMULOUS TUNDRA TULIP. YOUR DOUGHNUTS ARE DEFINITELY TASTIER THAN THE ONES A WORLD-RENOWNED MOVIE STAR BAKES FOR OL' FYFFE.

GEE! YOU'RE SOME KIDDER.

HEY, DRUMMOND! AT FIFTY CLAMS A DAY, COULDN'T YOU AT LEAST HAND ME WRENCHES OR SOMETHIN'?

TORCHY, MY HEARTLESS EMPLOYER, YOU HIRED ME TO FLY YOUR AIR-CRAFT. DISSECTING IT IS YOUR TRADE.

BUT FOR THIS KIND OF BREAD...

SIMON LEGREE, I ACCEPTED SERVI-TUDE UNDER YOU BECAUSE I AM MOVED BY YOUR ROMANTIC QUEST. THE LUCRE IS IRRELEVANT.

NOT TO ME, IT AIN'T! TOOK SOME HIGH FINANCIN' AND LOW POKER TO PUT IT ALL TOGETHER AND BUY THE "GONE GOOSE!"

WASN'T EASY, EITHER! THIS IS ABOUT THE LAST PLACE IN THE WORLD WHERE THESE OLD TRI-MOTORS ARE STILL FLYING.

DRUMMOND, YOU'RE A MAD, RECKLESS DOG! TAKING UP THAT DECREPIT RELIC OF A VANISHED CIVILIZATION JUST SHOWS HOW LITTLE YOU VALUE YOUR NOBLE HIDE!

GETTIN' NERVOUS, BIRDMAN? TAKES A REAL PILOT TO FLY THIS KIND OF KITE. YOU SHOULD HAVE SEEN BEDELIA BLOOMER, ME LOVED ONE, TAKE OFF IN THE "MOTHER GOOSE!" SO BEAUTIFUL I USTA CRY!

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

HAL FOSTER

Our Story: ZIRARA LEADS THE WAY ALONG THE NORTH AFRICAN COAST. HERE GARDENS BLOOM, DATE PALMS SWAY IN THE BREEZE, AND OLIVE GROVES COVER THE HILLSIDES. A PLEASANT CHANGE AFTER THEIR SEA VOYAGE AND THE CROWDS AND SMELLS OF ALGIERS.

"ENJOY IT WHILE YOU MAY, FOR SOON OUR PATH TURNS INWARD AND WE WILL MEET THE DESERT."

THEY HALT FOR THE NIGHT IN A TAVERN WHERE WEALTHY MERCHANTS GATHER AND THERE IS ENTERTAINMENT. WHEN ONE SLY GUEST REACHES OUT TO ONE OF THE GIRLS ZIRARA LEAPS TO HIS FEET IN A RAGE.

"HOW DARE YOU INSULT AN UNPROTECTED WOMAN?" HE BELLOWS AND STRIKES THE OFFENDER DOWN.

ANGRY CRIES RING OUT. WEAPONS ARE DRAWN AND IT SEEMS SURE THAT BLOOD WILL BE SPILT, BUT AT VAL'S CALM COMMAND THE THREE TRAVELERS BACK OUT INTO THE NIGHT BEHIND THEIR GLEAMING SWORDS.

"FORGIVE ME, SIR VALIANT, BUT I CANNOT BEAR TO SEE A WOMAN INSULTED."
"YOU MIGHT HAVE WAITED UNTIL THE LADY ASKED FOR HELP," ANSWERS VAL, "I THOUGHT SHE WAS PLEASED TO PROVOKE SUCH ARDOR."

"TO MEASURE UP TO ALL THAT IS DEMANDED OF HIM, A MAN MUST OVERESTIMATE HIS CAPACITIES" - GOETHE

MR. NOONAN'S BEEN GONE FOR A COUPLA HOURS! IF WE'RE GONNA MOVE, IT'D BETTER BE PRETTY SOON!

ANNIE'S PLAN TO PERMIT HERSELF TO BE CAPTURED IN ORDER TO LOCATE OLIVER WARBUCKS HAS SUCCEEDED ...

HOW'RE WE GONNA TALK T' EACH OTHER IF DR. NO-NO'S GOT EVERY BRICK IN THIS DUMP BUGGED??

SEARCH YOUR MEMORY, PRINCESS ... CAN YOU REMEMBER THE LANGUAGE OF THE FINGERS I ONCE TAUGHT YOU?

LEAPIN' LIZARDS!! WHY DIDN'T I THINK OF THAT!!

YOU SAID IT WAS A SPECIAL LANGUAGE, AN' IT WAS ONLY T' BE USED IN CASE O' EMERGENCY! WELL, WE'RE FACIN' ONE GREAT BIG JUICY EMERGENCY RIGHT NOW!!

THEY ARE ALL WHISPERING!

FOOLS!! ALL THAT IS NEEDED IS TO RAISE THE VOLUME OF THE ELECTRONIC EAVESDROPPER!

ANNIE'S FINGERS MOVE DEFTLY IN "ASP LANGUAGE" ....

HY NOONAN AND FOUR KIDS ARE WAITING AT THE BASE OF THE CLIFF FOR WORD FROM ME! THEY MOVE IN AS SOON AS WE GOT A PLAN!

ANY OVERT MOVE TO REMOVE SAHIB WARBUCKS FROM THIS PRISON WILL BRING SWIFT AND SAVAGE REPRISAL FROM THE VENGEFUL DR. NO-NO...

ANNIE REPLIES IN SIGN LANGUAGE ...

PUNJAB, HOW FAR YOU FIGURE YOU CAN TOSS A ROCK?

AS FAR AS IS NEEDED, PRINCESS! AND IF I READ YOUR MIND CORRECTLY ....

... THIS ROCK WILL NOT BE AN ORDINARY ONE ...

NOT UNLESS YA CALL A BOULDER WITH WRITIN' ON IT ... "ORDINARY"...

I HAVE, DR. NO-NO ...

HEAR SOMETHIN', SCOOBIE?
