Nearly 9-Inch Rainfall In Some Areas Ginger Left A Wet Wake

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. (AP)—Ginger hit the North Carolina coast as a hurricane Thursday inflicting nearly $1 million worth of damage, then it moved inland and caused tidal rivers to flood homes, businesses and streets.

It was reduced to tropical storm status as it continued moving over land during the night.

Even so, it packed a fear-some arsenal of rain. Nearly nine inches fell in some sections of eastern North Carolina and the small Pungo River town of Belhaven was isolated as the river rose two to three feet deep in the streets and highways.

Belhaven is 30 miles east of Washington, N.C., where Thursday evening floodwaters from the Pamlico River inched into some homes and into at least six businesses on the outskirts of town.

The State Highway Patrol said high winds in the Washington area Thursday as the hurricane came inland to the south may have caused the death of Charles Clifford Price, 29, art director for station WITN-TV. Price was killed when his small, foreign car veered into the path of a tanker truck, and the patrol said the car may have been whipped out of its lane by the wind.

The towns of Bath and Swan Quarter near Washington also suffered water damage.

On the ocean where Ginger made landfall as a hurricane with gusts of 90 m.p.h., electric power and telephone service were interrupted, trailer houses were capsized and streets and highways were flooded in the area of Morehead City, Beaufort and Atlantic Beach.

Mrs. Floyd J. Lupton, reached by telephone at her home in Belhaven, said she was staying home because water was a foot deep in the street in front of her house.

She said many downtown buildings had water over their floors, but that most merchants stacked their goods on blocks before the flooding began. Many Belhaven residents also took their cars to "higher ground" in advance of the flooding, she said.

Mrs. Lupton said the wind had torn down many trees and damaged roofs in the Belhaven area and that electricity was off most of Thursday.

At 9 a.m., the center of tropical storm Ginger was estimated by the U.S. Weather

East Coast Ports Idled By Walkout

NEW YORK (AP) — Dock workers from Maine to Texas struck today, facing the government with the first complete shutdown of every deep sea port in the continental United States. Last-ditch talks to settle a guaranteed income dispute between the AFL-CIO International Longshoremen's Association and the New York Shipping Association broke up hours after a midnight contract expiration.

With the other ILA locals pledged to follow New York's lead, all 45,000 members at East and Gulf ports were out. West Coast ports have been struck since July 1 by the Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union.

"We offered to continue working under the President's wage-price freeze but this was turned down by the shippers, so you can say we're being locked-out or on strike," said ILA President Thomas W. Gleason.

President Nixon said earlier this week that he would automatically apply for an 80-day cooling-off period under the Taft-Hartley Act if both East and West Coast ports were shut down. Asst. Secretary of Labor W. J. Usery Jr. and Federal Maritime Administrator Andrew F. Gibson sat in on the final marathon negotiating session in an effort to head off the walkout.

Both Usery and Gibson declined comment. The chief shipping association representative, James Dickman, also declined to talk to newsmen as he left the U.S. Labor Department offices in the Federal Office Building about 3 a.m.

Gleason said another negotiating session had been set for Monday at 10 a.m. He said management then would present a list of the abuses that it charges have occurred under the guaranteed annual income—GAI—plan.

The shippers proposed a new GAI plan Thursday calling for the union members to be employees of specific firms and under their direct supervision.

Pitt School Bd. Puts Off Using $335,622 Grant

The Pitt County Board of Education has unanimously approved a motion that prohibits the expending of any of the money made available by the Emergency School Assistance Program until it can be determined whether or not a regulation of the U.S. Office of Education can be set aside.

According to Arthur Alford, superintendent of Pitt County Schools, the regulation provides for the possibility of from one to five schools in the county being denied the use of any of these funds in order that these schools might be set aside as "control schools."

Kick-Off

The Pitt County United Fund will kick off this year's drive with a breakfast Monday at 8:30 a.m. at the Holiday Inn.

Ed Warren, campaign chairman, will conduct the meeting and show films about the operations and structure of the United Fund. Warren and Joe Tripp, executive secretary, will hold a question and answer session, also.

Chairman from all the communities in the county are invited, Warren said.

problems met daily in the desegregating of schools," Alford explained.

This information was not available to the board until after the grant, totaling some $335,622, was announced and the board has reacted strongly to the possibility that even one school may be denied the use of these funds.

The U.S. Office of Education with a random sampling will possibly select from one to five schools in the county to be denied the funds.

"Officials in Washington have been contacted to see if there is any way that this regulation can be lifted," Alford explained, "for it is felt that the program can be evaluated by other means rather than depriving schools of the use of these funds."

Vice President Ky Urges Boycott Of Sunday's Election

SAIGON (AP) — Vice President Nguyen Cao Ky today urged voters to boycott Sunday's one-man presidential election and appealed to police and soldiers "not to suppress the legitimate desires of the people."

Addressing an antigovernment political rally in a monsoon rain, Ky said President Nguyen Van Thieu's unopposed candidacy was unconstitutional. "Do not vote, do not participate in any way in the election, and do not accept the results of the election," Ky urged the 200 applauding delegates to the People's Congress, an informal coalition of anti-Thieu political and religious factions.

Ky was accompanied by some 40 to 50 air force security guards—his personal contingent—in 10 Jeeps and two trucks bristling with guns. He was wildly applauded on arrival and several times during his speech.

Throughout the rally, speakers assailed Thieu as a "dictator" and joined Ky in urging a voter boycott of the election.

The rally, at a government guest house used by Ky as his political headquarters, appeared to be the last pre-election effort of the organized, nonviolent resistance to Thieu's one-man race.

But official worry over more street protests was indicated by the hundreds of combat police in battle gear who sealed off several blocks around the meeting

Alford continued, "The assurance that the board of education acknowledged and which was contained in the project application reads as follows: 'the applicant will undergo and cooperate with an evaluation conducted by the commissioner or by an organization, agency or institution selected and approved by him on any project assisted under the program. Such an evaluation may include a reasonable number of interviews with administrators, principals, teachers and students at reasonable times and places.'"

"Congress has been discussing a $1.5 billion school aid bill for several months and the U.S. Office of Education is apparently trying to be in the best position possible to defend the large money bill which could provide five to 10 times the amount of money which we received last week," Alford said.

The Pitt County Board of Education, at a special meeting Sept. 17, had agreed to make available $280,000 to the Pitt County Schools to be used in the area the principals felt the money was most needed.

The money was based on an allocation of $20 per high school student and $25 per elementary student.

Alford said no action will be taken until Pitt County Board of Education hears from the U.S. Office of Education on the changing of the regulation.

Relatively Minor Damage For Pitt County From Hurricane Ginger

Relatively minor problems were caused in Pitt County yesterday and last night as winds and rain from dying Hurricane Ginger were in the area.

A few trees were reported blown over or broken in Pitt County from the winds yesterday and last night, while other scattered light damage was reported to buildings.

Edward Yancey, chairman of the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service, said this morning that certain Pitt County crops were severely damaged yesterday. "The remaining corn is rather severely damaged by winds and rain," Yancey said. "Peanuts were lightly damaged because of delayed harvest and peanuts that have already been plowed for harvest received some damage."

"Soybeans will probably straighten up because they are still in the developing stage. They received some damage, but in the light to moderate stage," Yancey reported.

Yancey said the agents were out this morning checking the county to see how severely the crops had been damaged. It was still a little early this morning to determine the extent of damages received.

Don Collier, local Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Company manager, said about 250 to 275 telephones were out early today in Greenville and surrounding areas. He said work toward restoring services to these customers was begun early today.

Collier said the primary reason for the outages was "the severe wind and tree limbs falling on the telephone lines."

"However, in some areas, where we have underground service, the phones were not affected at all," Collier explained. Long distance service was kept moving yesterday and last night without any interruption except toward the coast.

Collier said that one additional crew will come in to assist in the restoration work. "All new installations will be delayed since all efforts are going to be directed toward restoring the service that is out," Collier said.

The North Carolina Highway Commission reported some flooding on 14th Street and on Charles Street in Greenville and some trees blown down on roads in the county last night. The commission reported the roads were all clear by this morning.

High water was also reported on N.C. 43 south of Greenville and on N.C. 903 between N.C. 11 and Stokes.

The Greenville Utilities Commission reported that rainfall for the 24-hour period ending at 8 a.m. today totaled 3.89 inches. The Tar River, which stood at 2.3 feet yesterday, was recorded at 6.2 feet this morning and rising.

Winds this morning were ranging from 18 to 20 miles per hour. Yesterday winds were recorded as high as 65 miles per hour.

Temperatures, according to the utilities weather station, reached a high of 74 degrees yesterday and a low of 63 last night. At 8 a.m. today the temperature was 73 degrees.

Arthur Alford, superintendent of Pitt County Schools, said the schools opened this morning at the usual time and without any problems.

Alford said he encouraged the bus drivers to be careful to see that their speed was reduced due to the possibilities of water on the roads.

Alford said the school day missed yesterday will have to be made up. It will either fall during the Easter holidays or at the conclusion of the school year.

"It is a board of education policy that make up days will not be scheduled on Saturdays," Alford said. "Most likely the board will not take any action in the immediate future since the winter season could cause additional days to be lost."

"As to school activities, especially football games for tonight, the school principals will handle this matter and will determine the best source of action to take," Alford said.

Hurricane Ginger's heavy rains created "only run of the mill" problems for Greenville City Schools, according to Maintenance Superintendent Francis Dorey.

"There's a few roof leaks, one or two bent antennas and a broken glass here and there, but nothing more than what we have after any storm with heavy rain," the superintendent commented. "We had ample warning, of course, and were prepared for much worse."

Gentry Mills, Superintendent of the Greenville Street Department, reported that damage due to Hurricane Ginger was quite

Wife Doesn't Like His Talk About Trading Her In

By Abigail Van Buren

(© 1971 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: When we're out in company, my husband makes remarks like, "I think a man should be able to trade in his wife for a new model, just like he trades in his automobile." Abby, we've been married for 40 years and I don't think this kind of talk is a bit funny. He calls me his "1909 model." I'm not very witty, but I wish I had a snappy comeback for him when he talks like that. Can you think of one?

OLD MODEL

DEAR OLD: Tell your wisecracker that just because a model is "new" doesn't mean it's better. Then ask him if he's priced a 1909 Rolls-Royce lately.

DEAR ABBY: My sister became a widow a year ago, and out of necessity she returned to work. She has two sons, ages 10 and 12. They are good boys, and have shown themselves to be responsible and obedient. Now the problem:

My sister refuses to give the boys a key to their apartment. She says she's afraid they might lose it or maybe the door unlocked and the apartment will be robbed. Abby, the boys get out of school at 3:30 and their mother doesn't get home until after 5 p. m., and those poor kids have to hang around the building or sit on the sidewalk like a pair of stray dogs until their mother comes home. The apartment building is locked and they can't even get into the hall without a key.

I've pleaded with my sister, but she is stubborn. There are no friends or relatives in the neighborhood the boys can stay with. I'd let them stay with me, but I live in Brooklyn and they live in the Bronx. She trusts you. Say something.

CONCERNED UNCLE

DEAR UNCLE: Your sister should be more concerned about the safety of her sons than her worldly goods, and should realize that the boys are better off inside than outside. In any case, she shouldn't assume that they are incapable of having a key without giving them a chance to prove they are.

DEAR ABBY: I share an office with eight other women. One has a habit which is about to drive us up a wall. She breathes very loudly. It sounds like the cooing of a dove—only it's louder and much more annoying.

We complained to the supervisor who spoke to her about it. She told him she couldn't help it as she suffers from asthma, and he believed her! I think she is just trying to attract attention because if someone whispers, she immediately stops her heavy breathing and breathes normally so she can hear what's being said. Now, you can't tell me "asthma" can be controlled that easily.

How can we shut her up? She can be heard above nine typewriters.

LOUISVILLE

DEAR LOUISVILLE: The best way to shut out annoying sounds is with ear plugs. Of course, you won't be able to hear the telephone, the fire alarm, or the boss when he talks to you but if you believe this woman is making annoying sounds just to attract attention, this solution will attract so much attention that the boss will have to isolate her if he wants to get some work out of the rest of you.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069.

At Age 75, Grandmother Jogs, Still Works, Enjoys Mountain-Climbing

By KATHLEEN NEUMEYER LOMA LINDA, Calif. (UPI) — Hulda Crooks intended to take a 75-mile hike this summer, one mile for each of her years, but she settled instead for a 54-mile trail which included ascending Mt. Whitney.

It was the tenth time the fragile-appearing grandmother has climbed the 14,502-foot mountain in the past 10 years, and she made it in faster time than ever before.

She thinks it is because she has been jogging.

Mrs. Crooks, who at 75 still holds down a full-time job as a research assistant in the school of health at Loma Linda University here, gets up early five or six mornings a week and runs a mile.

"I worked up to it gradually," she explained, starting out four years ago running just a block or so every morning.

"Then I do an hour of exercise in the university gym for the upper trunk," she said.

She began mountain-climbing nearly 40 years ago. A Saskatchewan farm girl, she grew up "chasing cows and pigs, but I didn't get any education."

At 18, she hadn't yet finished sixth grade, but she went back to school and worked her way through high school and two years of college before suffering a physical collapse.

"My husband, who was a doctor, knew he had a semi-invalid to keep or cure," she said, "so he tried every way he could to encourage my interest in the outdoors."

Mrs. Crooks loved flowers, and her husband urged her to learn the names of all the Southern California wildflowers and trees.

"It's been such a blessing, because all the trees and shrubs have a personality to me. I get many invitations now to take groups for nature walks and I tell them what all the plants are. They drink it all in, but they don't remember it she laughed.

Mrs. Crooks began going on mountain hikes with her small son in the 1930s. Her husband, who had a heart condition, could not accompany them.

"My husband died 20 years ago," she said in an interview. "But one time when we were passing through Independence, Calif., he pointed out Mt. Whitney to me and told me it was the tallest mountain in the continental United States.

"Neither he nor I ever dreamed I would climb it, but after I started working at the university, I heard students talking about climbing it, and I wondered if I was good enough."

In 1961, she made her first ascent, with a small group of students, and she has been back nine times since. In 1966, she took her two older brothers, Dr. Edward Hoehn of Angwin, Calif., then 75, and Chris Haines, of Issaquah, Wash., then 77, along with her.

All three of them made the top of the mountain but only one of the three television cameramen who accompanied them got to the peak.

When Mrs. Crooks climbs, she carries a back pack weighing about 25 pounds including a set of warmer clothes, a sleeping bag, and food. She wears lightweight cloth-topped shoes, and she likes to start out on Friday, hike four miles to Mirro Lake and camp there until Sunday morning. Then she hikes 6½ miles to the peak and back out all in one day.

"It's easier for me now than it was 10 years ago," said the white-haired woman.

"I want to see how long I can keep on doing it. It does a lot for me psychologically. I feel I can still climb a mountain, I can come back down and battle in the valley again."

Founders Day To Be Observed In October

Founders Day was discussed at the first meeting of the new year of Alpha Iota Chapter of Alpha Delta Kappa Tuesday night at the Woman's Club.

The event will be observed in October with the County Chapter as host at the Holiday Inn.

Mrs. Elizabeth Savage, president, presided during the meeting.

During the business session, various reports were given by committee chairmen. Altruistic chairman Dorothy Johnson reviewed the work of the sisters with the sorority patient at Cherry Hospital. She asked for volunteers and supplies for the Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center.

Ways and Means chairman Becky Groome discussed projects for the year and asked for comments. Final plans will be announced at the November meeting.

The president gave highlights of the international convention she attended in New York in August. Delegates from most nations of the world were among the hundreds that attended, many the leading educators of the nation and world.

A 4½-ounce deviled ham can makes a bread cutter, just the right size for canapes. Remove the top and bottom of the can. Press the remaining cylinder down on each slice of bread and twist slightly. Make 18 bread rounds and spread them with the contents of the can. Garnish with pickles, eggs, or cheese.

Concert Will Be On Mail Funds OK'd For North Pitt's Athletic Field

The unique and extremely pleasant sound of the Trinidad Tripoli Steel Band will be heard on the mail of the East Carolina University campus Saturday at 2:00 p.m.

The open-air concert is free and open to everyone.

Composed of 27 young musicians from Trinidad who make marvelous music on steel oil drums and rhythm instruments, the band has been praised by audiences and critics alike during their U.S. tour.

Among the Steel Band's numerous concert appearances have been performances before Queen Elizabeth II and at Expo '67. They have been especially popular on the campus concert circuit.

Their repertoire runs the gamut from such light classical selections as "Sabre Dance" to native calypso to a variety of popular tunes.

Of the highly refined and very musical sound produced by their specially-tuned steel oil drums, a Salt Lake City critic wrote: "You can shut your eyes and be convinced a symphony orchestra is playing. These boys are that good."

The approval of funds for completion of the athletic field and a review of proposals for the expenditure of government assistance funds highlighted two meetings at North Pitt High School Monday night.

In the first meeting, a total of $4,625 was approved by the North Pitt Advisory Council to finish the reclamation of land for the athletic activities area of the year-old campus.

Arthur Alford, superintendent of Pitt County Schools, told the advisory council members that the $1,500 per acre cost at North Pitt compared well with the other county schools.

Alford told the committee that his presence, along with school board member William House, and school officials Thomas Craft Jr. and W. J. Edwards, was part of the continuing effort to place such decisions in local hands.

Walter Latham, North Pitt principal, noted that the six light banks and new bleachers would probably be ready for the Oct. 15 football game with Charles B. Aycock High School. This

Documentary On Nicky Cruz

NEW BERN — A full-color television special, "No Need To Hide," will be hosted by Art Linkletter on Channel 12, New Bern, Monday, Oct. 4, at 7 p.m.

The 60-minute television documentary retraces the dramatic steps in the life of Nicky Cruz, former warlord of a ruthless street gang and now an ambassador of Christian hope to the youth of America.

Cruz will conduct a crusade in Ficklen Stadium at East Carolina University Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights, Oct. 12-14. His visit to Greenville is under sponsorship of 24 laymen and ministers, members of the Fellowship for Christian Outreach.

School Role For Parents Asked

The presence of parents during specific hours at E. B. Aycock Junior High School is being urged by the school PTA's Parental Involvement Committee, co-chaired by Mrs. J. W. Gibbs and Mrs. W. L. Morris.

In particular, says Mrs. Gibbs, parental presence is sought during the lunch period (11:30-1:50 p.m.) and when the school buses are running (8:00-9:00 a.m. and 3:00-4:00 p.m.).

"We feel parental presence during those hours would be a beneficial factor," says Mrs. Gibbs.

Parents available for such service are urged to call Mrs. Morris (752-4027) or Mrs. Gibbs (752-3936) for schedule arrangements.

Chapter Designated Best For 6th Year

The East Carolina University chapter of Phi Sigma Pi honorary fraternity has been selected best chapter in the nation for the sixth consecutive year.

Announcement of the award was made during the fraternity's national convention in Washington, D. C. last week, where ECU's Tau chapter was represented by six active members, an alumnus member and its fraternity advisor, Dr. Richard Todd, professor of history.

Dr. Todd is national vice president of Phi Sigma Pi.

Tau chapter president, Ron Eggers of Rocky Mount, was the student representative to the national executive council.

ECU's official floor delegate to the convention was Joseph Williams of Lexington.

Other members attending the convention were Joseph LeConte, Matt Garrett, Robert Arcenia and Steve Crosby.

Opening lead: King of ♠
In going thru the bridge archives at the office the other day, I came across one of my favorite hands featuring a sparkling defensive play made by my late partner and very good friend, Helen Sobel Smith, who unquestionably earned her place in Bridge's Hall of Fame as one of the all-time greats.

Also we were defending a rather innocuous contract of two hearts with the East-West hands, by defeating that contract one trick, Helen earned an excellent result for us in a National Championship Event where each deal is a separate contest and has an equal bearing on the final standings.

Helen opened the king of diamonds on which I began an echo with the East hand by playing the nine. She continued the ace and when my deuce appeared, she knew that I had started with a doubleton. The jack was continued and declarer realized that it would be useless to ruff low in dummy for I would overruff. If he trumped with the king, it would surely establish a heart trick for the defense, so he discarded a small club—which was a loser in any event. On the jack of diamonds, I discarded the jack of clubs.

Helen now paused to reflect. The high club signal indicated that she could expect to cash two more tricks in that suit with the ace and king. That would bring the total up to five. In order to develop a setting trick, it might be necessary to promote a winner in the trump suit. This can be accomplished only if East has the ten of hearts. If he does, this card can be put to effective use on a fourth round of diamonds. However, first it is necessary to cash out the defensive book.

In order to achieve her objective, West has to be on lead at the crucial moment. Helen, therefore, shifted to the nine of clubs at trick four. I played the king and returned the suit to her blank ace. The scene was now set for the knockout punch. Back came a fourth round of diamonds. A spade was sluffed from dummy and now the ten of hearts uppercut the declarer. South overruffed with the queen, but there was no way to prevent West from scoring the setting trick in hearts inasmuch as she still held the J-8-6.

Observe that if the two club tricks are not cashed before the fourth diamond is led, South is not obliged to overruff the ten of hearts. He can discard another club loser from dummy—trading trick for trick. Against Helen's defense, South was helpless.

Let's Avoid Any Undue Delay

An Associated Press article this week reported that motorists with smoky vehicle exhausts have won a breathing spell.

The story went on to explain that a new law virtually outlaws any visible emissions from the exhausts of automobiles and trucks.

While a few warning tickets have been issued, little has been done to enforce the law, pending training of highway patrolmen to read visible emissions.

"We would expect to have enough law enforcement personnel of the state trained by the first of the year so that we could have valid enforcement," William S. Knight, air quality control director for the Department of Water and Air Resources, said.

Troopers will be instructed in troop-by-troop briefings and under the law, motorists with smoky vehicles will be warned and given 30 days to have repairs made. After that, if the repairs are not made, a fine will result.

We can understand that it takes time to get a program of this type underway, but we hope there will be no undue delay. If we are to clean up foul air one of the first points of attack must be the motor vehicle. This new law gives highway patrolmen a weapon to use in correcting this problem.

High Stakes In Test Of Power

By BRYAN HAISLIP
DURHAM Political solutions to higher education problems is wasteful of resources and deters North Carolina from its goal of broad opportunity for every student-citizen.

That argument for restructure is laid down by Watts Hill, Jr., Durham insurance executive and former legislator.

Every North Carolinian is involved, Hill declared, in the he said. Lack of budgetary authority prevents the present Board of Higher Education from serving effectively as the single state agency for the 16 higher education institutions, Hill said.

Legislature Sets Budgets
The practical result is that the legislature itself has to consider budgets for the individual institutions, with attendant political jockeying and regional rivalries between campuses.

Hill is an alumnus of the University of North Carolina, and a member of a family prominently identified with the Chapel Hill campus. The current controversy finds him and his father, George Watts Hill, Sr., a UNC trustee, on opposite sides.

Hill narrowed the focus of the restructure issue to the opposition of supporters of the Consolidated University who resist what they feel would be the breaking up of the six campuses under the consolidated umbrella.

"The irony is that the Consolidated University supporters who already have a single budget oppose extension of that concept to all institutions while those with independent budgets now see the need for a single budget," he said.

Confusion Compounded
"No wonder the picture is confused! Equally confusing is the argument of the Consolidated University supporters who say, 'The single agency, single budget approach has worked well for us, so why break it up?' as those who hold a differing viewpoint point out. It has worked so well for the Consolidated University, why not extend the single agency, single budget approach to the state as a whole?"

"Supporters of the Consolidated University have never answered that question. Could it be that they are silent because while logic is on the other side, politics may make it difficult for logic to prevail?"

Educational politics is the biggest hurdle North Carolina has to cross in reaching the goal of high quality, broadly available opportunity in higher education, Hill suggested.

"There are many who would say that the real issue is whether the Consolidated University is going to continue to dominate higher education in the state or whether a single agency will be permitted to coordinate all 16 public universities. They may well be correct," Hill observed.

Budget Is Indicator Of PTI Importance

The Pitt Technical Institute budget of $1.4 million is some indication of how important the education facility has become in Pitt County.

Money alone is no criteria of the calibre of work Pitt Tech is doing, but we know that the institute is offering a wide variety of courses which are benefitting many people throughout the area.

There are 672 regular curriculum students enrolled in Pitt Tech this fall. They are taking one and two year courses which will qualify them for jobs in various fields.

Pitt Tech has developed to fill an important educational need in our county.

Japan Puzzled By U.S. Role

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

TOKYO — On Sunday, Sept. 17, a U. S. envoy, unsuccessfully playing at cloak-and-dagger diplomacy, slipped into Tokyo with a secret proposal that buttressed this widening suspicion in Japan: the United States, under President Nixon, has become an unpendable, capricious and utterly inscrutable ally.

The envoy was Anthony Jurich, aide to Ambassador-at-large David Kennedy and the latest of many Americans (most, like Jurich, expert in neither trade nor diplomacy) sent here to negotiate the textiles question. Jurich's principal demand quickly spread through Tokyo: unless Japan, by Oct. 1 or soon thereafter, agrees to governmental negotiations on reducing textile exports to the United States, Washington would arbitrarily reduce them.

But one aspect of Jurich's proposal did not immediately leak out. If the Japanese government agrees to textiles negotiations, Jurich made clear, Washington will yield considerably on how much it wants Japan to reevaluate the yen upward.

Beneath their studied public nonchalance, high Japanese officials are distraught and perplexed by this latest proposal. With President Nixon's new economic program having precipitated a world-wide financial crisis, they ask themselves, why does he now revive that tangential old political irritant of Japanese textile exports? Furthermore, how can Mr. Nixon's 1968 political commitment to an essentially healthy American textiles industry be given priority over overriding questions of international monetary reform?

Thus, apart from concealed fury at being handed an American ultimatum, the Japanese are genuinely puzzled, as indeed is the U. S.

embassy here, over just what Mr. Nixon is up to.

The anger and confusion merely reinforced a disillusionment about the United States within the Japanese establishment that may be only dimly perceived in Washington. Unmistakably, the generation-long alliance of the World War II enemies has been badly shaken by the events of the summer of 1971 and may never be the same again.

Prime Minister Eisaku Sato's government has not yet recovered and may never fully recover from the first of what Tokyo calls the Nixon Shocks: his July 15 announcement of the new-China policy. Although Japanese officials grumble that Mr. Nixon should have given Sato advance warning, their real complaint concerns the unpredictability of U. S. policy.

"I think it was not a wise thing for your President to move so suddenly," a high Japanese official told us bluntly, contradicting careful official statements. "From a president of Argentina or a president of Chile, you expect instability and surprises. But not from the President of the United States. What can we expect next from you?"

Japanese reaction to the second Nixon Shock, his new economic program of Aug. 15, has slowly intensified with the fully justified feeling here that the Nixon administration, winning cheers at home for its get-tough-with-Japan posture, is using Japan as a scapegoat for deficiencies of the American economy.

Undeniably, the Japanese have bungled their dealings with the Nixon administration, moving too slowly in lowering trade barriers and making a horrible mess of the textiles question. But that scarcely excuses Uncle Sam's record in Japan since 1969. With professional diplomats at

GETTING BETTER

Creeds are important, and the disposition of modern man to scoff at creeds and their significance is a real mistake.

The thing that gives the Church its eternal value is that the Church (clergy and laity alike) is trying to put certain teachings into practice. When Church leaders compromise on any issue both they and the Church they are supposed to serve are experiencing a profound disservice.

In the Christian order of things there are no big people and no little people. We are all children of God and brethren of Christ. Some may have the advantage of natural endowment, fine education, social status, but none of these things make individuals any bigger in the sight of God than those who are striving to serve Christ wherever we happen to be and with whatever we happen to possess. We may not occupy a position of any advantage and we may have but little to give. This makes no difference in the Lord's sight. The only thing that counts, that we are willing to give — particularly to give ourselves in human service.

We are all shockingly inadequate to the duties that have to be performed. There is ignorance in the world — hunger and oppression in many instances. But the day in which we are living is a day of sound moral progress.

If our Christianity is not practical it is not Christianity.

The Thieu Opposition

WASHINGTON — President Thieu, who is running hard against no opposition in the October presidential elections, has maintained that the South Vietnamese elections are not rigged. He said the people have a fair choice. They can either vote for him or mutilate their ballots. He has said that if more than 50 percent of the population mess up their ballots, he would accept this as a defeat and graciously resign.

He also said he is going to tell the people now to mutilate their ballots in protest. They can tear it, mark it up, fold it or crush it to show their displeasure with him.

I asked my man in Saigon to give me the latest word on the elections there and here is his report.

"The excitement is building here in South Vietnam for the Oct. 3 presidential election. President Thieu is still leading in the polls, with 52 percent of the vote. This is down six points from August.

"Picking up support are those who are going to tear their ballots in half, who now number 23 percent of the electorate, followed by those who are going to stomp on their ballots with their feet, who account for 15 percent of those polled.

"Ten percent of the people said they still hadn't made up their minds whether they were going to burn their ballots or throw themselves into the river.

"But opposition forces to Thieu are hopeful that a coalition between the ballot tearers, the stompers and the burners can be formed before the election, so Thieu can be defeated.

"Hok Sam-thung, who is chairman of the ballot tearers committee, has maintained that the only way to defeat Thieu is by tearing the ballot. He feels the people who want to step on their ballots are unrealistic. Thieu can easily have stomped ballots cleaned and pressed and then count them for himself." Hok told me at his headquarters, where they were holding a "tear your ballot for peace" rally.

"The ballot tearers are the only ones who can beat Thieu, but we'll never do it unless the foot stompers and burners join us."

Over at the foot stompers headquarters Suk Ran-duk said, "The ballot tearers are more interested in their own methods of mutilating a ballot than they are in the election. We know for a fact that the United States has given Thieu $30 million in Scotch Tape so he can have his henchmen repair the ballots that are torn. When you stomp on one with your foot, you crush it. It's impossible to repair, and we're telling our people to stick with their heels."

The ballot burners, the most militant of the anti-Thieu forces, say that the ballot tearers and the ballot stompers are playing into Thieu's hands.

Other Editors Say Pandora's Box

(Asheville Citizen)

Attorney General Robert Morgan says he doesn't think a ruling by the California Supreme Court in a school tax case will affect North Carolina.

That appears to be wishful thinking. True, the financing of the public schools is somewhat different in the two states. In California the bulk of the school cost is borne by the local districts; in North Carolina, the State finances most of the bill.

But in most urban Tar Heel communities, local taxes are levied to supplement the State allotment for schools. Rich communities spend more money than the poor for school support. That makes the "quality" of education substantially different in the varying income areas.

The California court says this use of public tax funds is unconstitutional.

In one case, for example, property owners in the 10 poorest California school districts paid an average school tax rate of $4.50 per $100 assessed valuation and raised enough money, with limited state aid, to spend $600 a pupil per year.

But in the 10 wealthiest districts, school taxes averaged only $2.80 but raised enough to spend $900 per pupil.

Despite their lower tax rate, the wealthy communities end up with more money to spend because they have more industry or more expensive homes to tax than do the poorer communities.

The situation, the court said, "makes the quality of a child's education a function of the wealth of his parents and his neighbors and such a system cannot withstand constitutional challenge and must fall before the equal protection clause of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution."

Similarly, in North Carolina, do the unequal school supplements.

If the California ruling stands up, or if other cases are brought to the courts (several are pending), there appears to be little doubt that the system of school financing will have to be revised.

In North Carolina the objection could be satisfied by requiring the State to raise the level of its school funding and prohibiting local communities from supplementing the State allotment.

But what if the principle is applied to local financing of police, fire departments, and recreation? The prospect opens a full Pandora's box of fiscal woes.

Chinese Host Britons

By COLIN FROST

Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — While the British are booting out the Russians, the Red Chinese are pulling in the British. It's open house at the Chinese legation and the men in Mao-style tunics are clearly enjoying a propaganda success.

Just why they did it remains a Chinese puzzle. But anyone may now walk into the once-barred legation and grab himself a soft drink and a free cigarette.

The cigarette is Chinese—filter tipped, Virginia-style tobacco, and the product of the former British-American Tobacco factory in Shanghai.

Between sips and puffs the British visitor is invited by smiling Chinese diplomats to walk round an exhibition entitled "Photo Exhibition on China's Achievements in Socialist Construction."

It is a series of photographs interspersed with texts to the effect that Communist party Chairman Mao Tse-tung is an excellent thinker and the Chinese people are industrious.

The new experience of a free excursion in what is technically Chinese territory brought a steady stream of visitors Thursday night, despite the total absence of any advance publicity.

The visitor to the Chinese legation gets only good news. Turn left through the door of the ground floor reception room and the first picture, in color, is of Chairman Mao. Next, somewhat smaller, is a double portrait: "Chairman Mao and his close comrade in arms Lin Biao."

Liu, once rated No. 2 in China's Communist hierarchy, does not rate a picture. Nor, more surprisingly, does Premier Chou En-lai, to whose influence some China experts have attributed Peking's current campaign to win world affection.

Acupuncture, the Chinese medical system by which nerve centers are penetrated by hair-thin needles, gets rave treatment.

The exhibit claims cures for deaf-mute children, and the achievement of anesthesia effective enough to permit major abdominal surgery.

Spain's Prices Suit Tourists

By ELMER ROESSNER

Spain is the greatest tourist center in the world today, in the opinion of John Troy, commercial attache of the American Embassy in Madrid.

This country of 35 million people entertains 25 million tourists a year. Yet there is a curious paradox here. The main reason it is so attractive is that tourism does not make Spain prosperous.

The average tourist spends $70 on a visit to Spain.

That's about what one day in New York would cost. A double room in a good hotel, a dinner at a fine restaurant, two tickets to a good show, a souvenir or two, a bit of sightseeing and taxis and taxes would come to $140 or more.

But despite heavy inflation, Spain is one of the most inexpensive countries in Europe. In addition, it has a superlative climate that provides sunny beaches in the south in winter and year-round skiing in the mountains; a friendly, honest people; and a gaiety that erupts in songs and dancing and, for those who like them, bullfights.

Where The French Go
Time was when France was the tourist mecca of Europe and the Western Hemisphere. Americans, Canadians, British, Scandinavians, Germans, and other Europeans flocked to France. One summer in Paris a newsboy followed me for half an hour trying to sell me a Stockholm newspaper, convinced that I was a visiting Swede.

But prices have gone up in France, and the weakness of the dollar has made it even more expensive for Americans. But pesetas are cheap and even the number of French people who take vacations in Spain instead of their home country are many.

The peseta is worth 1.47 cents today. It was worth 1.67 cents in 1960. For comparison, the dollar, on a basis of its 1957-9 buying power, was worth 97 cents in 1960 and 42 cents today.

That makes the peseta a bargain, even for the ugly Americans. And it is an even greater bargain for the British, French, Germans and other Europeans.

Tourism income is swelled by Social Security and other pensioners and retirees, and by American military and aerospace families settled there. American Ambassador Robert C. Hill told the Spanish at the Vendimia at Jerez de la Frontera that the success of the last Apollo depended on the three tracking stations in Spain.

The commercial attache, Troy, said however that spending by American and government personnel and by pensioners was small compared with spending by American tourists.

He observed that many Spaniards believe the government ought to encourage more spending by tourists. The government has already encouraged the construction of a chain of tourists hotels.

Earl Glenn, guest evangelist, assisted by the Rev. James Lupton, pastor. Services will begin at 7:45 and special music will be provided each night. Homecoming services on Sunday, Oct. 10, will conclude the revival.

Pitt Native Named Dean

CHARLESTON, S.C. — Boyce V. Cox Jr., a native of Winterville, N.C., has been named Dean of Students at the College of Charleston here.

Cox comes to the College of Charleston from Duke University, Durham, N.C., where he was field secretary for Alumni Activities. He received his B.A. degree in psychology from Wake Forest University and a bachelor's degree from Duke University with a concentration on counseling.

Cox was a resident fellow at Duke in 1964-65 and developed a men's dormitory into an independent living group complete with its own independent government, social regulations and intramurals. He has also served as youth director for rural Methodist churches in North Carolina and a counselor at a Methodist camp. Cox also spent a year as youth counselor in Aberdeen, Scotland. Dean Cox's wife, Mrs. Anna B. Cox, is also on the staff of the College of Charleston. As placement counselor, she is developing a full scale placement office to assist graduates in job placement, career planning and graduate study.

opposition to Thieu is to burn the ballots in hopes that the polling places will burn down at the same time," they say. A small group who are for defacing ballots with crayons have been trying to get support, but they started late and don't seem to have the charisma with the electorate that the ballot tearers and stompers have.

The Daily Reflector, Greenville, N.C.—Friday, October 1, 1971—5
So at the moment it looks like Thieu will probably be the winner unless someone comes up with a method of destroying the ballots that all the opposition parties can agree upon. A reform group in Saigon is trying to get everyone to eat their ballots, but so far most South Vietnamese have shown no appetite for this suggestion.

Frightening, isn't it? You see a picture like this and suddenly you feel you are standing at the edge of a chasm in the dark. You are confronted with the threat of the unknown, and you don't like it. Why, you wonder? Why can't men live together in peace? We all need the courage to face the future unafraid. We need to find and to develop love, understanding and peace of mind. But to attain our goal, we need Faith. That help can be found in church. On Worldwide Communion Sunday — millions of men and women will unite in one of Christianity's holy sacraments. There will be new faces at thousands of altars, men and women who have only recently begun to realize where man's Hope is to be found.

The U. S. embassy suspected of disloyalty at the White House and therefore kept in the dark, the unending procession of Nixon envoys — secret and public, official and unofficial — established a climate of confusion leading up to the two Nixon Shocks. Japanese officials appreciate such conciliatory gestures by Mr. Nixon as his trip to Alaska to greet Emperor Hirohito and his strong call for Senate ratification of the Okinawa agreement. But gestures cannot compensate for the Nixon Shocks. Far more important to the Japanese foreign ministry than ceremonial cosmetics is Secretary of the Treasury John B. Connally's emergence as economic strong man of the Nixon administration. Japanese diplomats perceive the U. S. government seeking warm diplomatic relations with Japan totally distinct from Connally's brass-knuckle economic tactics. "Economics and diplomacy — it is the same to us," said one foreign ministry officer. "They cannot be separated." That is not the Nixon administration's first miscalculation about Japan and probably will not be its last. Enjoying short-term economic gains from cracking down on Japan, Washington may not realize the grim long-term impact: a new and potentially dangerous isolation for Japan in foreign affairs without changing the root causes of Japan's industrial advantages over the United States, an unhappy situation we shall take up in future columns.

Sixty Went To Armory

Sixty persons, all Pitt County residents except for one traveling couple, spent the night at the National Guard Armory last night.

Civil Defense Director J. H. Rose this morning reported "all the people spending the night were delighted with the accommodations provided by Company B, and the services furnished by the Pitt County American Red Cross unit."

Rose said most of the people staying in the armory overnight were county people living in trailers, or those without phone or lights.

Mrs. Ruth Taylor, Executive Director of the Pitt County Chapter of the American Red Cross, said three girls from East Carolina University were on hand to help out. "We wish to express our thanks to them, and to the fraternity who offered their help in case we needed them," Mrs. Taylor said.

light in Greenville.

The Greenville area experienced a number of minor power outages during yesterday's brush with Hurricane Ginger, but, according to Utilities Commission director Charles Horne, all systems are in operation today.

Horne reported that although there were several "relatively small" outages in the area during the storm, no power losses were reported on any of the main feeder lines.

GUCO crews worked until around midnight repairing damaged lines and correcting other problems along the system. Horne continued, and a few problems were taken care of this morning. He pointed out that most of the trouble was experienced during the strong gusts of wind and attributed damages primarily to trees and limbs falling on power lines.

The director said that the situation today involves a matter of clean up operations.

Rainfall measured four to five inches in most of north-eastern North Carolina, but the weather bureau said three more inches might occur and that the heavy rains would spread into south-central Virginia by evening.

Ginger highest sustained winds at 9 a.m. were 45 m.p.h.

Gale warnings were in effect along the North Carolina coast and northward to Virginia Beach. Small craft warnings were up in the Chesapeake Bay and along the coast north of the Virginia Capes to Manassquan, N.J., and south to Savannah, Ga.

Gov. Bob Scott alerted National Guardsmen to possible duty to prevent looting in the storm area.

Protestors' Truck Seized

FARMVILLE — A rental truck used to transport protestors to Farmville for the past few days was impounded by Farmville Police late yesterday afternoon.

Police stopped the driver of the truck, identified as Willie J. Fleming, 21, of Winterville for alleged speeding on South Main Street here. Alleged insults and profanity directed at the arresting officer resulted in a disorderly conduct charge and the impounding of the truck, in addition to the speeding charge. Fleming was in Pitt County Jail at 10 o'clock this morning.

Three Accidents In City Are Reported

Three traffic accidents here yesterday resulted in an estimated $2,980 property damage and injured one person.

Police reported heaviest damage resulted from a 9:10 p.m. collision on 14th Street, 30 feet East of the Greene Street intersection.

They reported a car driven by Ruth Agnes Knapp, 16, of Route 7, Greenville, collided with a parked car owned by James Earl Johnson of 211 West 14th St., causing an estimated $1,400 damage to the Knapp car and about $250 damage to the parked auto.

Miss Knapp, charged with exceeding a safe speed, was reported injured in the crash.

Cars driven by Angelo Maurakis, 39, of Greenville and Mary Grubbs Callop of 1753 Beaumont Dr. collided about 1:05 p.m. at the intersection of Memorial and Sylvan Drives and caused an estimated $850 damage to the Maurakis car and about $30 damage to the Callop auto.

Mrs. Callop was charged with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety.

Maria Fernandez Barraza, 23, of 2110 Pendleton Dr. was charged with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of an 8:35 a.m. wreck at the intersection of Arlington and Pendleton Drives.

Officers reported the Barraza car collided with a vehicle operated by Dennis Ray Dail, 17, of Route 1, Greenville.

Damage was set at $200 to the Barraza car and $250 to the Dail auto.

A Review... Film Is True Story Of Life In Ghettos

CROSS AND THE SWITCHBLADE, playing through Saturday night at the Pitt Theater here, is a true story of life in the ghettos of New York several years ago, but it's perhaps more relevant to Americans now than it would have been then.

Pat Boone plays David Wilkerson, a country preacher who goes to Brooklyn determined to reach the street people he has read about in an account of a trial of boys accused of a killing during a gang battle. The movie is based on a book by the same title written by Wilkerson himself.

Jo-Ann Robinson does a marvelous job as the female leader of a Little People's theft ring. Bo, as the little tough likes to call herself, adopts Wilkerson and takes him to the hideout of the dreaded Puerto Rican Mau Mau gang. They get there just in time for a war council between the Mau Maus and the Bishops, an equally tough Negro gang.

Wilkerson is at once confronted with two problems: if he is to deal with the problems of the street people, he must deal with addiction to hard drugs. And to reach the Mau Maus, he must break the shell of their toughest member, Nicky Cruz.

How God leads him to reach Nicky and the scenes along the way — gang battles, dope shooting, etc. — make for some gory viewing, but it all seems true to life as indeed it is.

Cruz, of course, is the same man, now an evangelist, who will be here in Greenville in October for a crusade. The movie follows the book, "Cross and the Switchblade" closely and some of the same scenes are to be found in Cruz's autobiography, "Run, Baby, Run," copies of which are now being widely circulated in the county.

It's a movie that every young person, every parent should see. And church youth leaders certainly should make every effort to get their respective groups there. You won't be preached at, though you'll overhear a little, but you'll be moved by the depth of human misery that can be overcome by the love of God and people who love Him.

High Scoring Citadel Visits Pirates

The battle of the offenses is what is expected to go on in Tacklen Stadium Saturday night at 7:30 p.m. when East Carolina University meets The Citadel. But the question remains as to how much offense the Pirates will be able to put on the field.

Coming into the game, The Citadel ranks as the top offensive team in the Southern Conference, averaging 407.7 yards per game for three contests. They are second in rushing offense and first in passing in the league. They also rank first in scoring in the conference.

In contrast, East Carolina is fifth in total offense with 281 per contest. They are fifth in rushing and fourth in passing. And they are fourth in scoring, some 26 points behind the Bulldogs.

Defensively, it's an entirely different story. The Citadel ranks sixth in total defense, the Pirates eighth. A difference of 100 yards separates the two. The Citadel has been much more effective against the rush, ranking third to eighth for the Bucs. Against the pass, ECU is fourth and The Citadel is seventh.

And in giving up points, the two are right at the bottom of the list. The Citadel is seventh (36.7 points per game against them) while the Bucs are eighth with 40.0.

And the prospects of the Pirates doing better are not very bright. Rich Peeler, the captain of the team and the glue of the defense, is still out with an elbow injury.

And the two leading tacklers on the team, Monty Kiernan and Ralph Betsch, are listed as doubtful for the game. Kiernan injured his back in practice this week, and Betsch has a shoulder injury from last week's 47-21 loss to Bowling Green.

Then, too, Carlester Crumpler, the Pirate sophomore running back, is still out with an ankle injury, and is also a doubtful for the game.

"This leaves some big holes in our defensive lineup," Coach Sonny Randle said, "and we're going to have to work hard to fill them up."

Following last week's loss to Bowling Green, Randle went through his lineups with a fine tooth comb and did some weeding out. He's made several changes, eight to be exact.

These include Dan Killebrew for Mike Kopp at tackle, Stan Eure for Bob Mille at one end, and Tony Maglione for Bill Croisetiere at the other end. In addition, John Cassazza will take over for Carl Summerell at quarterback.

Defensively, Greg Burke and Les Walker move into the tackle positions, with Paul Haug and Ricky Eason at the ends. Jim Post goes into the linebacking position for Don Mollenhour.

"We've tried to get people into the lineup who want to play," Randle said. "Changes were made in every position to try and find these people and we hope we've found them."

Randle emphasized, however, that this did not apply to the quarterbacking change. "John (Cassazza) came in last week and had a hot hand and he's earned the starting job. But if things go bad for him, Summerell will be right back in there."

Randle expressed disappointment with the attitude of the team during the week prior to the Bowling Green game. "We didn't have good workouts," he said. "We went up there beaten.

This is what has surprised me the most. Most 0-3 teams in the country are ready to fight as hard as they can to get a win. But with us . . . I just don't know."

Randle said that the team seemed to be growing a defeatist attitude. "We've got 23 seniors on this team, and they've had three different coaches. It could be they're just a little bit frustrated."

The Citadel isn't likely to make things less frustrating for the Pirates with their explosive offense. "They have a great throwing game," Randle said. "They're seventh in the nation in this. They must be the most explosive team we've played. In their last two games they've scored 24 and 34 points in a half."

But passing isn't all the Bulldogs have. From their veer offense, they have a balanced attack. "They have been able to break the games open with this," Randle said.

The Dogs are using two quarterbacks, sophomore Harry Lynch and senior Terry Widel. Lynch has hit 13 of 30 passes for 311 yards and four touchdowns. Widel has 13 of 33 for 267 and two touchdowns. Randle is looking for Lynch to be the starter this game.

In the backfield, Bob Carson and Jon Hall are the two top runners. Hall has 301 yards in 44 carries, a 6.8 average, while Carson has 218 in 36 lugs, for a 6.0 average. He's the leading scorer with five touchdowns.

Brian Baima, last week's Southern Player of the Week, is the split end and favorite target of the passers. He's caught 16 passes for 376 yards and five touchdowns.

They have an experienced line, similar in size to the Bucs'. "But they must feel that they are a better team than last year, and they beat us 31-0 last year," Randle said.

He agreed that teams had been able to score against them, but that they had had to grind them out. "Nobody has been getting the long play against them.

The defense is anchored by All-Conference Jeff Varnadoe, who has picked off two of The Citadel's three interceptions so far. He's also the leading punt return specialist with 224 yards in 12 returns, one for an 89-yard touchdown.

"They give you a lot of different sets on defense and try and confuse you," Randle pointed out.

Because of the defenses, many observers are looking for a high scoring affair, but it may not turn out that way. "You never can tell sometimes," Randle said. "But with five of our best players on the sidelines, we're at a definite disadvantage."

The big thing for the Bucs is to try and get it all together for four quarters. They showed that spark against William & Mary, taking control of the game in the second quarter. But the injuries slowed them down then. "We need a win badly, and it would do a lot for us," Randle said.

Marichal Hurls Giants Into National Playoffs

By BERT ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Sports Writer
"Fun in 71" was Charlie Fox' slogan for the San Francisco Giants.

"It's the year of the Fox," proclaimed Giants' fans. The Giants, after building a huge early-season lead and nearly losing it in a dreadful September slump, put everything together on the final day of the season and clinched the National League's West Division title with a 5-1 victory over the San Diego Padres Thursday night.

Fox, in his first season as Giants' manager, was in the midst of a champagne-filled dressing room celebration that had been brewing for more than a week. "I feel wonderful," he said, his uniform dripping with the bubbly stuff the Giants had been carting around in the final hectic days of the frantic race.

Fox said that when the game's last out was made and the Giants surrounded pitcher Juan Marichal on the mound, he felt a thrill he had experienced only once before in his life.

"It was the same way I felt when I came back from my second Russian run in the Navy during World War II and saw the Statue of Liberty," he bubbled.

The Giants' victory enabled them to finish one game ahead of the onrushing Los Angeles Dodgers, who completed their season with a 2-1 victory over the Houston Astros.

"Sure, I'm disappointed that we didn't go all the way," said Dodgers' Manager Walt Alton in the quiet Dodgers' dressing room.

The Giants' triumph also sends them into the NL's best-of-five playoff against Pittsburgh, the East Champion, beginning Saturday in San Francisco.

The Pirates ended their regular season with a 4-3 victory over Philadelphia Thursday. In other NL finales, New York defeated St. Louis 6-1, Atlanta downed Cincinnati 6-2, and Chicago trimmed Montreal 5-3.

In the American League, the New York Yankees were awarded a 9-0 forfeit over Washington in a wild finish to baseball in the nation's capital, Chicago edged Milwaukee 2-1, and California nipped Minnesota 3-2.

The Giants, leading the wild West since April 12th, took an 8½-game lead into the final month of the season but their late swoon, which saw them lose 16 to 23 games, shrank their lead over Los Angeles to one game going into the final day of the campaign. But even in the team's worst stretch, Fox was certain the Giants could win it.

"We had the confidence all along," he said. "We knew we'd get straightened out." Fox was right. The Giants won three of their last four games and hung on for their first title since 1962.

Marichal, the high-kicking right-hander and ace of the staff, made sure of it. He held the Padres to five hits, struck out five and had his usual pinpoint control, walking none, in winning his 18th game against 11 losses.

Rookie Dave Kingman, filling in for injured Bobby Bonds, provided Marichal's major offensive support. The 6-6, 210 pound right-handed slugger capped a three-run fourth inning against Dave Roberts with a two-run homer.

Tito Fuentes opened the inning with a single and scored on a double off the center field fence by 40-year-old Willie Mays. The Giants added two runs in the ninth, but they weren't necessary as Marichal had the Padres well under control.

The Dodgers, meanwhile, were concentrating on beating the Astros and watching the scoreboard. They had to win—and did. But there was nothing they could do to stop the Giants.

Don Sutton, 17-12, pitched brilliantly for the Dodgers, thwarting the Astros on six hits and six strikeouts. He also scored the winning run when he singled in the seventh, moved to third on a hit by Wills and came home on Bill Buckner's Hurricane Ginger has washed out at least two football games from this weekend's slate, according to reports at 10 a.m. today.

The games included Greene Central at Conley and North Pitt at Farmville Central.

Both of these will be played on Monday night, with kickoff set for 8 p.m.

Other area games, Rose at Rocky Mount, Ayden-Grifton at Eastern Wayne, Elm City at Robersonville and Williamston at Northwest were still tentatively scheduled at last report.

Giants Need The Day Off

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer
SAN DIEGO (AP)—The San Francisco Giants had a day off today and they needed it.

The tension of a September slump that very nearly cost them the National League West championship ended in a splash of champagne Thursday night when Juan Marichal's masterful five-hitter carried them to the title nobody seemed to want on a 5-1 victory over San Diego.

The victory left the Giants a slim one game ahead of the pursuing Los Angeles Dodgers with none left to play. And the way they celebrated, you'd have thought they won the World Series instead of a play-off berth against Pittsburgh.

"It's only half a pennant," said Willie Mays, a pocket of calmness in the wild dressing room celebration. But half a pennant was enough to set off the rest of the Giants, who doused anybody in splashing distance.

The Giants had seen an easy division title disintegrate into a life and death struggle in the final weeks as the result of a slide through the final month of the season.

"You know," said Manager Charlie Fox, champagne dripping all over him, "when you lose games in May, they call it a slump. When you do it in September, they say you're choking. But it was just slump, that's all."

The slump resulted in 16 losses in 23 games and the 8½ game lead shrank to one. Then, last Sunday in Cincinnati, the slumbering Giants bats woke up. "Just in time," decided Fox.

Believe it or not, the Giants won three of their last four games and will go into the best-of-5 playoffs Saturday against the Pirates on the upswing.

Ironically, it was one of Fox's shock troops—rookie Dave Kingman—who slugged the two-run homer Thursday that put Marichal in control against the Padres. Kingman was playing in place of Bobby Bonds, the Giants' offensive leader and latest member of the walking wounded with a sore rib cage.

"That kid Kingman has done some job," said Fox. "They all did. That's why I'm so proud of my boys. I managed most of them in the minors, you know."

Mayor Joseph Alioto of San Francisco embraced Fox in the liquid King dressing room. "It's wonderful, the mayor said, 'just great for our city.' The man who made sure the Giant ship got squared away was Marichal, who did a masterful job against the over-matched Padres. The high-kicking right-hander was in total control and the only run San Diego managed was a result of the pitcher's own error when he dropped a throw at first base.

Cougars Face Kentucky In Exhibition Tonight

The Carolina Cougars play host to the Kentucky Colonels tonight at 8 p.m. in Minges Coliseum on the campus of East Carolina University. It marks the third time in the three-year history of the Cougars that they have visited Greenville during the exhibition season.

The two teams come into the game following four earlier contests. The Cougars split with the Baltimore Bullets of the NBA in their first two games, losing 106-104 in the opener, then winning the second 108-98.

Following that they lost to Kentucky, 112-109 on Wednesday night in Camp Lejeune. Then, last night in Roanoke, Va., they lost to the New York Nets, 116-103. Kentucky comes into the game with a 2-2 mark, having beaten the Cougars Wednesday, and losing to Virginia last night, 124-123.

Still missing from the Cougar lineup is "Jumping" Joe Caldwell, who made the switch from the NBA to the ABA last year and was one of the spark-plugs for the Cougars. He is still recovering from surgery. The Cougars, allowed to carry 12 players, are currently listing just 10, not counting Caldwell. Four of them are guards, three of them veterans. They include Gene Littles, former High Point star, Bob Verga of Duke and Larry Miller of North Carolina. Joining them is rookie Ted McClain of Tennessee State. He was the number three draft choice of the Cougars, and is being brought along slowly by the Cougar management.

A fifth guard, George Lehmann, has left the team and asked to be traded.

Currently playing at the center position is another rookie, former Duke star Randy Denton. He's operating with a bruised instep.

When Denton comes out of the lineup, 7-foot Jim McDaniel, another rookie from Western Kentucky, moves over from his accustomed spot at forward into the pivot position.

Joining McDaniel at the forward spot is Warren Davis, former A&T star, who joined the Cougars this year after being with the Floridians. Supporting them are Wayne Hightower, a nine-year veteran obtained from Texas, Ron Dorsey, another rookie from Tennessee State, and Frank Card, another veteran.

Kentucky's big feature are former Kentucky star Dan Issel, who has switched from center to forward this year, and appears to be making the switch with ease. Moving into the center spot is 7-2 Artis Gilmore, from Jacksonville. It will be the second trip into Minges for Gilmore, who appeared here two years ago, while still at Jacksonville.

One member of the Colonel staff will not be with the team, Cincy Powell, who has a broken finger. The other forward position will probably be filled by Jim Ligon, while Walt Simon and Louis

Saturday's Sports Football

Dampier take the guard positions.

Issel is leading the Kentucky scoring (not counting last night's game) with a 28 point average. Gilmore is hitting 20 per game.

McDaniels is the leading Cougar scorer with 20, while Denton is getting 16 and Verga, 14.7.

One of the big reasons for the hard battle with Utah for McDaniel's was for more rebounding power for the Cougars. And thus far they are getting this. They outbounded Kentucky 44-40, in the first meeting of the two, and pulled down 115 to 91 in the series with Baltimore. The Cougar shooting hasn't been up to par, however, and this was blamed for the three losses so far.

Rose Faces Rocky Mount

Rose High School's Rampants will take to the road tonight to meet Rocky Mount's Gryphons in a Division II contest.

The game is slated for 8 p.m. in Leaf Stadium in Rocky Mount. The Gryphons come into the game with a 1-0 loop record and a 3-1 overall mark. Rose is currently 0-1 in the league and 1-3 overall.

Newsroom, Sports Grab Early Lead In Picking The Winners

Last week got things off to a good start in the new staff contest to pick up the winners. The sports and news staffs got away to the best start posting perfect 12-0 records. In addition, the high school predictions went to a 5-1 mark, giving sports an overall 17-1 record for the week. That raises this column's overall prediction rate to 39 right and 14 wrong for the year, or a percentage of .736.

As far as the standings in the Pick the Winner field, this writer and news staffer Tom Baines finished with 12-0 marks, while composing room representative George Holland was 10-2. Copublisher Jack Whichard and advertising's John Trotman were both 9-3, while our distaff member, Lauren Riddick was 8-3.

But last week wasn't really that hard. This week it gets a little tougher. First, however, lets look over the rest of the high school slate.

Greene Central visits Conely in an Eastern Carolina game. Conely picked up its first win last week, but Greene Central should prove too strong for them this week. It's the Rams all the way.

North Pitt travels to Farmville Central. The Panthers still are looking for their first touchdown, let alone a victory. Farmville, after stopping Ayden-Grifton, could be the team to beat in the conference. The Jaguars are the choice.

Ayden-Grifton goes to Eastern Wayne in another key game. Both have lost one and need a victory badly to get back in the running. But A-G has lost its quarterback, and this may be the telling point. We'll pick Eastern Wayne.

Elm City visits Robersonville in another contest. The Golden Eagles are flying high, but will be leaving the conference for this game. They could be ripe for an upset, but we must stick with them.

Williamston, rolling along too, puts its unbeaten mark on the line against Northwest. The Tigers are too strong. We'll go with them to win this one.

Now, turning to Rose and Rocky Mount, the distinguished panel of pickers are unanimous in their decision. Rocky Mount has shown they have a strong offense and defense. Rose has shown good defense, but very little offense. The choice of all six: Rocky Mount.

East Carolina and The Citadel meet in the top college game and it looks like it could prove to be something. Neither team has put up much of a defense. East Carolina and The Citadel rank seventh and eighth in defense in the conference. The scoreboard might just blow a fuse trying to keep up with the scoring.

The panel is not quite so sure here, but sure enough. Only Holland picks East Carolina. The rest all take The Citadel.

Duke, Carolina Place Unbeaten Strings On Line; Heels Favored

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Duke and North Carolina, the 19th and 20th-ranked teams in the nation, will try Saturday to bring more football glory to the Atlantic Coast Conference. The Blue Devils—minus workhorse fullback Steve Jones—are in California to face the 10th-ranked Stanford Indians. North Carolina goes to Raleigh to play brother institution N.C. State in a regionally televised game. Duke and the Tar Heels are the only unbeaten teams left in the conference after three weekends. Duke romped past Virginia, 28-0 last week while the Tar Heels trounced Maryland, 35-14. In other games, all in the afternoon, Clemson is at Georgia Tech, Wake Forest at Maryland and Vanderbilt at Virginia. Former conference member

South Carolina is at Memphis State for a night game. Jones is staying in Durham because he fractured his sternum, or breastbone, in a wreck Tuesday night. Doctors say the injury is not serious, but it is painful. Blue Devil coach Mike McGee says he will use Bob Zwirko in Jones' spot at fullback and use second-stringers in Swirko's place. McGee will probably rely on a more varied attack against the Indians than the running game he had used—most by Jones.

Stanford is also 3-0 after rolling past Oregon last week, 38-17. Don Bunce was the star in the game, throwing three touchdown passes and running for another score. Duke and Stanford have never played each other in football. North Carolina has played N.C. State before, almost every year since 1894. The Tar Heels lead the series, 40-14, with six ties. Last year the Tar Heels won, 19-0. N.C. State has had problems with its offense this season since the first game when sophomore Willie Burden set a school record rushing against Kent State. Three three-touchdown output in that narrow loss is the highwater mark for the team to date, with only three more TDs scored in the next two games. South Carolina beat the Wolfpack last week, 24-6. North Carolina has had only two touchdowns scored on it and is the conference leader in almost all team categories. It is trying for the same four straight opening victories it had a year ago. Clemson, a 28-0 loser to No. 11 Georgia last week, takes on the Tech Engineers in an effort to get a win on the record. Tech lost to Army, 16-13, a week ago, and internal complaints about strategy seem to have been settled by coach Bud Carson. The teams' meeting is the 40th in a series that Tech leads, 30-9-1. Last year Clemson fell to the Engineers 28-7.

The Wake Forest-Maryland clash will be between high-powered offensive, questionable defensive teams. The Deacons won two in a row before falling to Miami (Fla.) last week, 29-10. Maryland has won once and dropped a pair. Virginia, trying to regain its balance after the Duke loss and one earlier to No. 2 Michigan, runs into a Vanderbilt squad that embarrassed Mississippi State, 49-13, a week ago.

Rep. Emanuel Celler, D-N.Y., who heads the House Judiciary Committee, joined Sen. Sam Ervin, D-N.C., in the joint actions.

Their move comes a week after Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., introduced a bill that would place baseball only under the antitrust laws.

Celler and Ervin said "Too often sport monopolies come crying to Congress for special legislation because they feel the health of professional sports is in the national interest."

"But when it comes to blacklisting and throttling player negotiations, charging high prices to fans, blacking out TV and moving franchises at will, sports monopolies act with the greedy, single-mindedness of a child reaching in a candy jar—more, more and more."

Torre Takes NL Bat Crown

By ALEX SACHARE
Associated Press Sports Writer

Joe Torre's been on a diet—and not just of National League pitchers.

Torre, once known as the fat kid brother of Philadelphia Phillie first baseman Frank Torre, lost considerable weight prior to this season, but gained some new headgear: the National League batting and RBI crowns.

"I did try to stay hungry—at the plate," quipped the St. Louis third baseman, whose .363 batting averaged topped the majors.

Three players waged a tight battle for second place in the National League batting race, although none posed a serious threat to Torre.

Atlanta's Ralph Garr nosed out the Chicago Cubs' Glenn Beckert .3416 to .3415, although both were listed at .342 in the rounded-off figures. Pittsburgh's Roberto Clemente finished fourth at .3409, or .341.

Tony Oliva, sidelined late in the season by torn cartilage in his right knee—an injury which he played with for over two months, won the batting title in the American League with a .337 mark. The New York Yankees' Bobby Murcer finished second with .331, while Baltimore's Merv Rettenmund, an outfielder who wasn't even a starter until mid-season, finished third with .318.

Willie Stargell of Pittsburgh won the National League home run crown with 48, just one more than Hank Aaron. Aaron's 47 raised his career total to 639, not so far from Babe Ruth's major league standard of 714.

Torre took the NL RBI title with 137, beating out Stargell, 125 and Aaron, 118.

In the American League, Chicago White Sox third baseman Bill Melton won a close race for the home run title. Melton hit 33 while Norm Cash of Detroit and Reggie Jackson of Oakland clubbed 32, Reggie Smith of Boston had 30 and Frank Robinson of Baltimore, Rico Petrocelli of Boston, Graig Nettles of Cleveland and Harmon Killebrew of Minnesota each had 28.

Killebrew easily won the RBI crown, however, with 119. The runner-up was Frank Robinson, who was far back with 99.

But if anything, 1971 was a banner year for pitchers. The American League produced nine 20-game winners—four of them on one team—while the National League added four more.

Baltimore's American League East Division champions became only the second team in major league history to boast four 20-game winners, the other being the 1920 Chicago White Sox with Urban Faber, Claude Williams, Dickie Kerr and Ed Cicotte.

For the Orioles, Dave McNally won 21 while Mike Cuellar, Pat Dobson and Jim Palmer each won 20.

Other 20-game winners in the AL were Vida Blue and Jim "Catfish" Hunter of Oakland, Andy Messersmith of California, Wilbur Wood of Chicago and Mickey Lolich of Detroit. In the National League, the 20-game circle consisted of Ferguson Jenkins of the Chicago Cubs, Al Downing of Los Angeles, Steve Carlton of St. Louis and Tom Seaver of New York. McNally's 21-5 record gave him an .808 winning percentage, tops in the American League, while the New York Mets' Tug McGraw led the National League with a .733 mark on an 11-4 record.

McNally's 21-5 record gave him an .808 winning percentage tops in the American League, while the New York Mets' Tug McGraw led the National League with a .733 mark on an 11-4 record. Blue won the AL earned run average crown with a 1.82 mark, while Seaver's 1.76 was the best in the National League.

Lolich was the AL's strikeout leader with 308 and Seaver paced the NL with 289.

Fans Kill Off Senator's End

By BRUCE LOWITT
Associated Press Sports Writer

It was the death of an era—and the 14,460 fans in Washington who showed up to view the remains finished them off by killing the Senators personally.

The scoreboard showed Washington leading the New York Yankees 7-5 in the ninth inning—but the scoreboard and other portions of Robert F. Kennedy Stadium were disappearing.

The Senators' fans, bitter, nostalgic and sometimes vandalistic, were running wild on the field and in the stands, mobbing the players and ripping up bases, seats, the scoreboard, other mementos of what would soon be only a memory of what was at that moment, a baseball team in the nation's capital.

The public address announcer asked that the field be cleared so play could be resumed—but in vain. And so, on the decision of the umpires, major league baseball bowed out of Washington on the short end of a 9-0 forfeit score to the Yanks Thursday night.

In the only two other American League games Thursday, Bill Melton won the league batting title with his 33rd of the season as he led the Chicago White Sox past Milwaukee 2-1 and the California Angels beat Minnesota 3-2 to beat out the Twins for fourth place in the West Division.

In the National League, the San Francisco Giants won the West Division title by beating San Diego 5-1, Los Angeles beat Houston 2-1, the New York Mets whipped St. Louis 6-1, the Chicago Cubs defeated Montreal 5-3, Pittsburgh topped Philadelphia 4-3 and Atlanta downed Cincinnati 6-2.

The Washington fans reserved their biggest cheers for big Frank Howard, who won a standing ovation when his 26th homer ignited a four-run, game-tying rally in the sixth inning.

The forfeit was the first in the majors since 1954.

Melton, who had hit two homers Wednesday to grab a share of the league lead, broke the three-way deadlock with Oakland's Reggie Jackson and Detroit's Norm Cash with his third-inning blast.

The 33rd homer equalled his 1970 output, when he set the White Sox' all-time record for four-baggers' and gave the team its first home run champion ever.

Syd O'Brien two-run pinch single in the eighth inning gave California its victory while Leo Cardenas of the Twins broke the major league record for fewest errors in a season by a shortstop with 11, one less than the mark set by Ernie Banks in 1959.

Sports Bill Introduced

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bills have been introduced in the House and Senate to bring both baseball and football under the control of antitrust regulations.

Top lawmakers on both sides of Congress introduced the bills, joining in a statement that classed team owners as "czars" who administer a serfdom by way of restricting players' rights.

Rep. Emanuel Celler, D-N.Y., who heads the House Judiciary Committee, joined Sen. Sam Ervin, D-N.C., in the joint actions.

Their move comes a week after Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., introduced a bill that would place baseball only under the antitrust laws.

Celler and Ervin said "Too often sport monopolies come crying to Congress for special legislation because they feel the health of professional sports is in the national interest."

"But when it comes to blacklisting and throttling player negotiations, charging high prices to fans, blacking out TV and moving franchises at will, sports monopolies act with the greedy, single-mindedness of a child reaching in a candy jar—more, more and more."

The Worry Clinic Good Speakers Are Not Born

Rev. Luke is an amateur speaker. But he wants to become a professional as fast as possible. So memorize the basic rules outlined below. Nobody is a "born orator" nor a "born musician." Both require specific following of the basic rules.

Timid, stuttering Demosthenes thus became the world's foremost orator!

Case R-577: Rev. Luke is pastoring a village church while he attends the seminary on week days.

"Dr. Crane," he began, "I am not a gifted orator for I have always been quiet and not very talkative.

"So how can I intrigue the interest of my small congregation?"

"And expand attendance so our little church will grow more rapidly?"

Church surveys show that the laymen prefer hymns that enlist the active cooperation of the men, as well as women.

These hymns should also be old time favorites, not fancy new tunes with unfamiliar verses to which religious emotions have never been entwined.

Wholehearted congregation undergone the "warming up" period that speakers (as well as athletes) require for maximum results.

For it also involves more people and thus permits greater "audience participation" which is vital to a good sermon.

Then the speaker should select a dramatic text which lends itself to illustration by local examples.

Jesus thus used the "narrative" or "parable" formula for his sermons, and that is still the best recipe available.

Indeed, all great orators, political as well as religious, have spontaneously hit upon this same method.

Because most speakers (even professionals) are nervous at the start and thus may be a bit awkward in phrasing their opening sentences, you should begin with an interesting, relevant story.

For that will loosen your tongue and meanwhile reduce your nervous tension.

It requires little effort to repeat a story and by the time you are finished with it, you have feeling of isolation and individualism, both of which moods reduce group cooperation with the speaker.

Have your ushers seat people compactly, starting with the front pews, for vacant seats between listeners also cut down on applause, laughter at jokes, etc.

If you must speak in a dimly lit auditorium and aren't sure if the crowd is awake, keep speaking but casually walk 10 feet to one side of the lectern.

All who are wide awake will turn their heads to follow you. Those who are still staring at the lectern are asleep!

Maintain eye-contact with your audience, so look at them closely, instead of focusing on the ceiling or the far wall.

Speak loudly, so the hard-of-hearing oldersters in the rear can hear you.

Don't make it a habit to rely on the microphone!

I'VE TRIED TO BE A BETTER PERSON...

I'VE TRIED AND TRIED AND TRIED! I'VE REALLY TRIED!

YOU KNOW HOW HARD I'VE TRIED! TELL ME HOW I'VE TRIED...

NICE TRY...FIVE CENTS, PLEASE

THIS ISN'T FOR ME, BUT I'VE GOT THIS FRIEND WHO HAS A TERRIBLE RASH.

WHAT DO YOU SUGGEST?

I SUGGEST YOU TELL YOUR FRIEND TO STAY AWAY FROM YOU FOR A WEEK OR SO.

NUBBIN

WHAT QUALITIES DO YOU THINK A GIRL SHOULD HAVE, OWL?

WELL...IDEALLY, SHE SHOULD HAVE BEAUTY, INTELLIGENCE, AND A SWEET DISPOSITION!

IT'S MARVELOUS THAT I COULD PUT IT ALL TOGETHER!

BLONDIE

OH, DAGWOOD... I HAD ANOTHER ONE OF THOSE INTERESTING DREAMS

I JUST DREAMED I WAS A PRINCESS IMPRISONED IN A DUNGEON

AND YOU SWAM THE MOAT, CLIMBED THE CASTLE WALL, AND KILLED A DRAGON TO SAVE ME!

NO WONDER I'M ALWAYS SO TIRED WHEN I GET UP IN THE MORNING

BEEBLE BAILEY

HOW ABOUT THAT? I DIDN'T THINK I COULD REALLY MAKE IT ALL IN ONE TRIP

HEY, HE'S MOVING! TIE HIM BEFORE HE COMES TO, HE'S LIKE A BULL!

HERE HE IS, BIG V. CALLS HIMSELF MR. WALKER!

LOOKS INTERESTING.

DEVIL FOLLOWS HIS MASTER AS FAR AS HE CAN.

HE COULD HELP YOU ENORMOUSLY. DID YOU SIGN A CONTRACT WITH HIM?

HE SAID "A NOD OF THE HEAD WILL DO." IN THAT WAY — AND I QUOTE HIM AGAIN... "YOU WON'T BE STUCK WITH ME, MISS JULIET."

SOUNDS LIKE A LOT OF WORK FOR LITTLE MONEY.

YOU ARE OBVIOUSLY BLIND, MY DARLING RITA, TO THE POTENTIAL OF THIS SIMPLE RURAL GOLD MINE. THIS JULIET PERSON IS WORTH A FORTUNE, EVEN AT 10% OF THE GROSS!
