Pittsburgh Sees Celebration Turn Into Big Rampage

PITTSBURGH Pa. (AP) — A World Series victory celebration Sunday night turned into a wave of destruction, looting and sex-in-the streets. Nearly a hundred arrests were reported and at least that many others were treated at city hospitals.

Newsmen reported witnessing two apparent assaults on young women — in full view of hundreds who cheered the assailants — and there were displays of public lovemaking, nudity and drinking.

At the height of the melee, a police desk sergeant said he had calls reporting about a dozen rapes. But officials today denied they had such reports.

"This isn't a riot. It's a goddamn orgy," a motorcycle policeman said during the disorders that left the main downtown area a sea of broken glass, paper and debris.

Police said they arrested about 90 persons for intoxication, five for disorderly conduct, one for disorderly conduct and assaulting a police officer, and two juveniles.

The crowd downtown at one point was estimated at more than 100,000 persons.

There was scattered shooting, but only one reported wounding. Hundreds of explosions caused by fireworks often were mistaken for gunshots.

At least 30 stores were looted and 30 or more were damaged. More than a dozen cars were overturned and in some cases burned.

Helga M. Boseman, 34, was driving the car at the time of the wreck.

Her husband, their three children and her husband's brother, his wife and their four children were passengers in the car.

Trooper Padgett said the Boseman car was headed North on N. C. 1 when the right-hand wheels dropped out of control, spun around on the wet pavement and collided with the railing of a bridge about two-tenths of a mile South of the Bethel town limits.

Young Clayton and five other injured children were taken to Pitt Memorial Hospital for treatment. Clayton died of head injuries, 5:30 p.m. in the hospital's emergency room.

The others injured included Frederick, 6; Ludwina, 4; John, 5; Paul, 4; and Vera Boseman, 2.

Frederick and Ludwina were children of Helga and Lewis Boseman, while Paul, Vera and John were children of Lawrence and Clarice Boseman of Route 8,

A 57-year-old pilot, considered by many to be the most outstanding stunt pilot in America, was killed here yesterday afternoon when his biplane crashed during an air show.

Beverly "Bevo" Howard apparently died instantly when his plane crashed into the ground about 250 feet north of an airport runway after striking a tree. Pitt County Coroner E. W. Harvey, who said investigation of the death is continuing, reported Howard suffered severe head injuries when his aircraft slammed into a weed-covered field.

Howard had been performing in an air show sponsored by the Boys Club of Greenville.

The crash came as Howard circled to make an inverted pass over the field and pick up a ribbon suspended 50 feet from the ground.

He made one upside down pass at the field, had righted the plane and was in a steep left turn when the aircraft struck the top of a tree and plummeted to earth.

At least two witnesses said they saw something drop from the plane before it struck the tree.

Federal Aviation Administration investigators here today investigating the crash, were endeavoring to determine what made the plane fall. An FAA official Sunday said the agency would seek to determine if the crash was due to pilot error or a defect in the plane.

E. H. Moser, president and general manager of the air show, operators Aero Sport Inc. said this morning that it appeared that the engine of Howard's plane was not running at the time the plane crashed into the ground. He said it is possible that the aircraft ran out of gas, causing it to lose altitude and strike the tree.

The plane Howard was flying was a 1937 model Buecker Jungmeister, considered one of the most stable aircraft for stunt flying. Made in Germany, it bore serial number 42.

Dave Hatton, a ground controller with the air show said Howard's aircraft was scheduled to be put on display in the Smithsonian Institute in Washington, D. C. in the near future.

Howard, considered a millionaire, made his home in Charleston, S. C. Born in Bath, S. C., he learned to fly when he was 16 years old and was currently making one or more stunt flying appearances a month.

He started with Hawthorne Aviation as a line boy at $10 per week in 1932 and became president of the firm, which he served as board chairman at his death, when he was 21. He became Eastern Air Lines' youngest pilot at 22.

The aviation firm sold business airplanes, serviced Army aircraft, and offered flight instruction and charter flights.

His other business interests included mobile home parks and an Atlanta, Ga., shopping center.

As a civilian instructor, Howard trained more than 6,000 pilots, including 2,000 cadets for the French government, during World War II. He also trained pilots during the Korean conflict.

Howard began flying air show exhibitions in 1933 and was once the highest paid air show pilot in the country. The first pilot to outside loop a light plane (1938) Howard took first place in the International Aerobatic Championships in 1946, 1947, and 1949, and placed second in the competition in 1948 and 1950. He was co-author of "You Can Learn To Fly."

A physical fitness advocate, Howard swam regularly in the YMCA pool in Charleston and passed the 1,000 mile mark in the pool in July, 1968.

FAA officials, on hand to direct traffic over the airport while the air show was in progress, ordered the crash site roped off to preserve the scene for investigators and prevent looting.

Memorial Show?

Colonel Ernie Moser, long-time friend of Beverly (Bevo) Howard, the famed flyer, killed in the crash of his Jungmeister stunt plane on Sunday afternoon at the air show in Greenville, has suggested that a Bevo Howard Memorial Air Show be held in Greenville in the fall of 1972.

Moser, whose Air Circus based at St. Augustine, Florida, provided performers in yesterday's air show, yesterday made the recommendation to Austin Britt, Chairman of the Pitt County Greenville Boys' Club sponsored show.

Although Howard is an independent performer, he has appeared many times in past years on the same bill with Moser and members of his air circus. Moser informed Britt he would head plans to contact other old-time performers who had known and worked with Howard to participate in a memorial show at Greenville.

Britt said he is taking action, as chairman of this year's air show, to contact members of the Board of Directors of the Boys' Club to get their reaction to Moser's suggestion. If the board approves the recommendation, Britt said plans would go forward to begin laying the groundwork for a Bevo Howard Memorial Air Show to be held in Greenville early in the fall of 1971.

The air show in Greenville yesterday was the final show of its type in North Carolina this year.

Ground Fighting Again Flares On Cambodian Front And Near Saigon

SAIGON (AP) — Ground fighting flared anew on the South Vietnamese-Cambodian border today and military spokesmen also reported a weekend battle 33 miles north of Saigon.

It was the closest big-unit action in the capital in several months, involving an estimated 400 enemy troops and about 700 South Vietnamese of the 5th Infantry Division.

Spokesmen said the fighting began last Saturday when two South Vietnamese reconnaissance companies engaged an enemy battalion. The South Vietnamese were supported by artillery and tactical air strikes and later an infantry battalion reinforced them.

Fighting continued into the night. A body count Sunday morning showed 29 of the enemy and 17 government troops killed and 11 government men wounded, the South Vietnamese said.

Hostilities on the Cambodian border 60 to 90 miles northwest of Saigon intensified this morning with a sharp firefight near a paratroop base at Thien Ngon, on Highway 22 in Tay Ninh province.

Government spokesmen said about 200 paratroopers clashed with a large enemy force and killed 29 of them with the aid of artillery strikes. Seven South Vietnamese were reported killed and 20 wounded.

The Thien Ngon base was shelled four times Saturday and Sunday, but casualties were reported very light with no fatalities.

Another South Vietnamese base at Krek, seven miles inside Cambodia, was hit Sunday by nine 122 mm rockets and two mortar rounds. Again casualties were reported light with no fatalities.

Fire Base Pace, the only American outpost in the border region where most of the fighting has occurred, was hit by eight mortar rounds this morning. The U.S. Command reported no casualties or damage. Pace has been shelled for 24 consecutive days and subjected to sporadic sniper fire since North Vietnamese troops launched an offensive in that border area four weeks ago.

Despite the upsurge in fighting, South Vietnamese military sources said some of the Communist forces committed to the border campaign appear to have withdrawn.

Small, scattered skirmishes were reported elsewhere.

U.S. spokesmen announced the 68th "protective reaction" strike this year inside North Vietnam. They said an Air Force F105 escorting B52s bombing Laos streaked into North Vietnam and fired one missile at a radar site 52 miles north of the demilitarized zone after the missile's radar system locked on to the F105 preparatory to firing. The U.S. Command said results of the strike were not known.

What Would You Say If You Were 'Abby'

By Abigail Van Buren

(c 1971 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.)

DEAR READERS: Now DEAR ABBY has a problem! I received a letter signed "CAUGHT IN A BIND" and never before have I pondered so long over a reply. I asked my husband how he would answer it. First he took one side. Then the other. I found myself doing exactly the same thing. I shall set down two considered answers. Please send me a postcard indicating which answer you would use if YOU were Dear Abby. You need not sign your name. But please indicate whether you are a male or female. Thank you.

ABBY

DEAR ABBY: We have an awkward problem at our house. My husband's boss has invited us to a "housewarming party," which my husband feels we must attend. I disagree.

His boss' wife had surgery recently and was found to have inoperable cancer. [The wife doesn't know this.] The boss sent her to Europe [where she came from] to be with her mother while she's "recuperating." He told her he'd join her in three months and bring her home. But it's obvious that he's banking on her not lasting that long, because the day after she left he moved his girl friend into their home and they've been living together ever since. [She's a divorcee whose husband got custody of their children, so you know what she's like.]

This unmarried team goes everywhere together, knowing that nobody is going to tell his dying wife what's going on. They have now moved into a deluxe high rise apartment furnished with the European wife's generous dowry, and we are invited to the housewarming.

My husband says if we don't attend it will mean his job, and jobs aren't exactly hanging on trees these days. Am I wrong for refusing to go? Or is my husband wrong for insisting that we go?

1. DEAR CAUGHT: Your first consideration is to your husband. If he feels his job depends upon it, close your eyes, hold your nose, and go!

2. DEAR CAUGHT: Tell your husband that he can help "warm" their house if he wants to, but the setup leaves you cold, and you're not going!

[Well, readers, how would YOU vote?]

DEAR ABBY: A girl friend of mine called me and asked if she could spend Christmas week with me and my family. [She lives 300 miles away.] I had plans of my own but had forgotten about them at the moment, so I said okay.

Two weeks later she called to say how happy she was about coming, and then I explained that I had planned on going away myself that week. Then this "friend" proceeds to tell me her ex-boyfriend was coming home that week and she admitted she still liked him and she wanted to see him. [He lives in my city.] I am hurt to think that she would use me just to see him. Also, she ruined my plans for going away Christmas week.

She Shares Football With Mate

By RUTH THONE
Omaha World-Herald Writer
LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Gentle, sparkling Mrs. Bob Devaney could give lessons on "How to keep your husband happy."

As wife of the University of Nebraska athletic director, "winningest" football coach in the nation, she's shared the joy, excitement, hard work and long hours leading up to a new Cornhusker football season.

And Phyllis Devaney says, "It's my world as much as his." Mrs. Devaney's role is not a public one though.

"I'm not usually on the football field," she chided, when asked where her picture was among the many that grace the walls of their recreation room.

"I stay home unless specifically invited," she says of the countless dinners, luncheons, programs and meetings her famous husband attends each year.

Mrs. Devaney finds the football season exciting but sees her real role as "keeping our life simple. Bob doesn't want me to get too involved socially.

"He doesn't like to walk in the door at night and have to go out again right away, although he's good about doing it if he's not tired."

"Bob would rather I did my gadding during the day. Then our social life can be spontaneous."

Although Devaney is in Lincoln most of the time during the fall football season, his wife says she didn't prepare a single evening meal the last week in August.

During training, when he eats with the team, his arrival home at 8 or 9 p.m. poses no problem.

Mrs. Devaney says, "I like to stay home at night. Bob's restless if I'm not here. Besides, I'm not a clubby person."

She restricts her bowling, bridge and charity activities to the daytime hours and finds reading, sewing or knitting sufficient occupation for her evenings.

Flexibility is, of necessity, the byword in the Devaney household.

"Bob tries to keep me informed of his schedule ahead of time. He calls two or three times a day."

A virtue that Mrs. Devaney believes is a must for a coach's wife is understanding her husband's moods and frustrations.

"I think that's one place where gals have to learn to give," she marvels at her husband's ability to do so many things.

"There's much more than just the football these days. Bob doesn't say no very easily."

She recited a list of statewide charities which Devaney has helped. And his most faithful fan says the coach doesn't wait until football season to get in shape. "He's a good swimmer and runs up and down the stadium steps every day."

The Devaneys have been married since their college days and it was 10 summers ago that Bob Devaney gave his family "the first house we ever owned."

"Bob doesn't like to do things around the house and yard," says his wife, "and this house has a small yard."

Mrs. Devaney has translated her calm to the furnishings of their home. The recreation room in the walk-out basement is filled with mementos of the Cornhusker years. Of special pleasure to the Devaneys are the scrapbooks, meticulously kept and decorated page by page for them by a devoted Omaha fan.

Mrs. Devaney is hostess to the coaching staff on Saturday evenings after home games, when the men gather to share their pleasure or pain. "Bob always says I wait until everybody leaves and then start second-guessing his coaching," laughed Phyllis.

She loves to hear her husband discuss the day's game.

"I get a much different idea of it than he does. He's always said he has the worst seat in the stadium."

When asked if the football season was her husband's favorite time of year, Mrs. Devaney paused a minute and then grinned.

"Why, I'd say 6 o'clock Saturday night after a winning game is his favorite time of year. And, of course, his least favorite would be 5 o'clock the Friday night before a game."

Concert Displayed Musical Talents

A scattering of people were on hand Sunday afternoon to hear four local Negro choirs in the inaugural concert at Wright Auditorium marking the opening of East Carolina University's week long Black Arts Festival.

The Waterside FWB Male Chorus, Little Creek FWB Junior Choir, Elm Grove FWB Combined Chorus and The Crusaders were the four groups presenting a free public concert of Negro music in a program entitled "Black Voices" that lasted well over an hour.

"This festival is an exercise in experiences of black people in the development of this nation, a step in a new and positive direction," Rev. John H. Taylor, keynote speaker for the program, stated.

Taylor spoke for several minutes on the "Relevancy in music to the black struggle for freedom," tracing the development of music among Negro people before, during and after the Civil War as their particular means of expressing their longing for freedom.

"If we take a close look at Negro spirituals," Taylor observed, "we'll find a strand woven, one of experiences and a determination to overcome the problems of bondage and slavery."

The educator-minister-city councilman pointed out the close resemblance between laments contained in Biblical stories of the Old Testament about the people of Israel in bondage and similar cries for deliverance in the music of black people in America.

"For over one hundred years our people have had a strong urge, a strong edesire for freedom, the kind promised by the Constitution of the U.S.," Taylor said.

In the program of music offered by the four choirs and choruses, themes of hoped for deliverance, of soulful pleas to the Lord, and remembrances of suffering were present in the selections. But the joy of being alive and a firm belief in eventual freedom were equally present in the songs.

In several of the selections, members of the audience joined in rhythmic hand-clapping, with musicians of choirs waiting their time on stage accompanying the on-stage singers with tambourines.

Innovation, spontaneity, unexpected shifts in tempos and rhythms all play their part in Negro music in America. Based on heritages that stretch far back into the tribal history of numerous African tribes, the music we know today as "spiritual," "gospel" and in a large measure — "rock and roll," still embodies the rich texture of vocal and body sounds that emerge as personal and collective emotional experiences in Negro music.

Music is perhaps the greatest contribution to the arts of the world that the Negro people have made. It is in the 20th century with its accelerated means of cultural exchanges that Negro music has assumed a major role in the world's arts.

The Negro's bond of attachment to his native earth — whether the tribal village in the plains or forests of Africa, the plantation fields of the south in the days of enslavement; or his kinship today to the place of his birth, are strongly relected in his music; one that can be vibrantly joyful or speak with the genuine knowledge of suffering and patience.

In Sunday's program, the full range of beauty of Negro music — from moments of sadness to marvelous improvisations on themes of joy were clearly registered. The program was also enlivened visually by the Crusaders, who wore full flowing costumes and turbans of bright colors based on African costumes.

It is sincerely to be hoped "Black Voices" is an experience that can be repeated from time to time in the future, and that more local citizens, black and white, will find time to hear the fine musical talent that is in our midst.

Put Into Proper Perspective

Gov. Scott put an important matter in proper perspective when he declared that the first step in protecting the resources and ecology of the state must rest with local officials.

The governor pointed specifically for officials of coastal counties to see to it that "indiscriminate and unwise development" of coastal areas are prevented and that coastal areas and waters are protected.

Certainly his appeal to coastal area officials to prevent the indiscriminate and unwise development

The Defender Plan Is Liked

By BRYAN HAISLIP
GREENSBORO — The public defender has won his spurs as a partner in North Carolina's administration of criminal justice.

Those who operate and observe the courts agree the system has worked well in the 21 months it has functioned in two judicial districts, the 18th here and the 12th in Fayetteville.

The praise that matters most comes from the ones directly affected. They are the defendants, unable to afford counsel, whose cause is pleaded by the public defender.

"I am going to stay out of trouble. I want to get out as soon as I can."

"P.S. I think you did a great job at my trial. Thank you very much."

That letter from a young man in prison made Public Defender Wallace C. Harrelson feel better than any compliments from judges or lawyers.

"I feel without question that the program has been a complete success," said Harrelson, citing the letter as Exhibit A.

Criminal Law Expertise
"We deal daily with the criminal law. We become experts in the field. We can do a better job to assure the rights of indigent defendants because we do nothing else."

That expertise too often is lacking when counsel is appointed. The attorney assigned may have scant experience in the criminal courts. That can be a handicap for the defendant's case.

The public defender program is past the experimental stage, said Bert Montague, administrative officer for state courts. "It has proven its worth in the two districts where it operates," he said.

"A judge who held court in Fayetteville said if he got in trouble there he wouldn't hire a lawyer, but would declare himself an indigent and ask for the services of the public defender. That indicates how well he thought of the system."

Equality of justice is a basic consideration, but economics is important, too. The public defender approach costs less than court appointment of counsel in compacted judicial districts.

Saving In Dollars
In its first full year of operation, calendar 1970, expenses of the 18th district public defender office were 40 per cent under payments for appointed counsel in the previous year, Harrelson reported, and almost twice as many cases were handled.

Montague agreed that the public defender system is less expensive in the present two districts. It would not work out that way everywhere, he added.

The minimum cost to staff and run a public defender office would be about $50,000 a year, Montague estimated. A number of the state's 30 judicial districts now spend well under that amount for counsel appointments, some less than $10,000 a year.

For that reason, Montague noted, the public defender system does not recommend itself for statewide use. He does anticipate its extension in the future, perhaps to as many as a dozen districts.

For the fiscal year ended last June 30, expenditures for the 18th district public defender office were $80,845; for the 12th district, $61,366.

By way of comparison, in the 26th district (Mecklenburg County, the state's population leader) payments for appointed counsel totaled $175,000. North Carolina spent $1,405,412 to provide lawyers for indigent defendants.

Expediting Justice
Speeding the wheels of justice is a key advantage, both for defendants and the courts, said Harrelson. Cases can be expedited because his staff works without the distractions which crop up in private practice.

"No question about it: dockets are more current than prior to the public defender office," he commented.

Harrelson, a Cherryville native, saw the old system work as solicitor for the High Point domestic relations court and as chairman of the indigent counsel committee of the district bar before his appointment as public defender.

The public defender and the solicitor are courtroom adversaries, but co-workers outside. Cooperation between the two keeps dockets moving.

Skeptics said at the start the state would be on both sides since the public defender and the solicitor are on its payroll.

"The contrary is true," said Harrelson. "Our staff members get just as personally involved in their cases as private counsel. A real client relationship develops with those we defend."

That burns midnight oil, but makes for quieter sleep. "No attorney could rest if he didn't feel he had done all in his power for those he defends," said Harrelson.

"At least, I know I couldn't."

of areas applies to officials of other counties of the state as well.

If local officials throughout the state do not adopt a positive attitude toward protection of the environment in their immediate areas, North Carolina will be hard-pressed to protect itself.

The real crux of the problem so far as local officials are concerned is that they are constantly torn between the economic benefits which may be realized by their respective counties through "indiscriminate and unwise development" and the off-setting long-term advantages which go with slower, better planned development.

There are few county officials who want to stand in the way of development of a new coastal resort area. Such development means additional values on the tax books, additional jobs for people in the area, more dollars in circulation from those who become part of the new resort. Far too often, other relative factors are overlooked in the face of promised economic gain.

The same thing applies to the development of property in other counties, the attraction of industries, the use of waterways. And in most cases the attitude of local officials reflects the prevailing public opinion. More often than not, the long range disadvantages are overshadowed by what appear to be short-term economic gains.

The time has come, as Gov. Scott indicated, for local officials to take a tougher attitude toward protecting their own areas of responsibility. That does not mean they should be anti-development, anti-industry, anti-use of whatever natural resources their respective areas offer.

It does mean they should take a more careful look at the long-range impact, good and bad, of a proposed project as well as the short-term effects. It does mean they should give more consideration to possible long-range sacrifices that are required to enjoy the short-term gains.

North Carolina must continue its development. At the same time it must likewise see that its resources and its environment are protected. And certainly the project must begin at the local level with local citizens as well as local officials.

Muskie Stance Said Mistake

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The fatal fascination of front-running Sen. Edmund Muskie's top political advisers with courting the Democratic party's left fringe reappeared, undiminished, this week when they pushed Muskie into a self-destructive campaign, doomed to defeat, over the 1972 convention machinery.

Muskie's support for Sen. Harold Hughes of Iowa for temporary chairman of the convention's credentials committee did not, of course, win that elusive support from leftish Democrats. What it did was widen a breach with the AFL-CIO political leadership, irritate fence-sitting moderate Democratic politicians and question the good sense of Muskie strategists.

Moreover, the Muskie team's performance during the Democratic National Committee meeting at the Mayflower Hotel contradicted the Muskie grand strategy of uniting all shades of Democrats behind him. John F. English, Muskie's highly skilled chief political organizer, has been building just such a broad base of support. Yet, when an ideological issue beckons, the Muskie advisers — including English — cannot resist the leftward tug.

The credentials committee chairmanship was just such an issue. The mortal danger of the party is that bitter internal fights over such questions as delegate credentials will so disrupt the Miami Beach convention that its nomination will be of little value for Muskie or anybody else.

Consequently, National Chairman Lawrence F. O'Brien was horrified two weeks ago when he saw no opposition to Hughes as credentials chairman. An inflexible advocate of party reform, Hughes could scarcely be counted on to discourage credentials fights or contribute to a safe and sane convention.

O'Brien and National Treasurer Robert Strauss, backed by big labor, belatedly found a challenger: Patricia Harris, former ambassador to Luxembourg and a prominent Washington lawyer. The selection of a Negro woman unknown in big time politics for the job usually reserved for high-level Democrats may have been unusual, but O'Brien felt unusual steps were needed to overcome Hughes' early lead. The party's left wing immediately mobilized against O'Brien — joined, surprisingly, by key Muskie staffers.

The partial reason was practical politics. After pulling out of the Presidential race July 15, Hughes secretly supplied Muskie mailing lists and promised to help deliver him Iowa's delegates. The go-between has been ex-Federal Trade Commissioner John Reilly, a prime supporter of Hughes who quickly switched to Muskie after July 15.

But more than Hughes' meager help is involved. The Hughes candidacy evoked reflexive support for English. Despite his invaluable skill as a political organizer, English as Democratic National Committeeman from New York is attuned to a leftist politics that has produced fewer and fewer statewide victories as it has become ever more doctrinaire.

Just one example of how this hurts Muskie is its impact on Al Barkan, the AFL-CIO's chief political operative who still has not forgiven Muskie for appearing at a bipartisan anti-war rally in Providence, R. I., last April 18.

Frayed relations were smoothed at a luncheon Oct. 4 attended by Barkan, Muskie (Continued on page 5)

Strength For Today

THIS MARVELOUS AGE
Witnessing is the chief duty of the Christian Church and its adherents. This does not mean that we have to "buttonhole" friends and strangers when we meet them and try to preach them a sermon. The best witness to our confidence in the effective power of Christian faith is to live a life of such integrity, uprightness and courage that people will know where we stand on the moral issues of life.

The best witness to Christian faith is the witness of a righteous life, and this righteous life may manifest itself in the home, the office, the factory, the school, college, workshop. We do not need to be queer or fanatical in our Christian witness. All we need is to be sincere and to stick to what we believe about Christianity and what it can do for us and others.

Many people today believe that the Church is on its way out. It is losing members. Finances are frequently a tremendous problem in churches because of what appears to be lassitude and indifference on the part of its members.

The Christian Church is not on the way out. It has problems and they are serious, but business, education, welfare work — these are having their problems, also. This is no time for discouragement.

The Inflation Fighter

WASHINGTON — I was putting a Phase 2 sticker in my living-room window to prove I supported the President's economic game plan, when my wife came by. "What are you doing?" she demanded to know.

"Read it. It says, 'WE FIGHT INFLATION — WE SUPPORT THE U.S. ECONOMIC PROGRAM.'"

"It means that as loyal Americans we have joined a volunteer army of wage earners, executives, bankers and consumers to fight the goddess hordes of inflation."

"We have?" she asked.

"Yes. Don't you remember the other night the President said that we should look at his program, not as Democrats or Republicans, workers or businessmen, farmers or consumers, but as Americans? Fighting inflation is everybody's business, he told us. Well, showing this sticker is the first step."

"But I don't understand how showing a sticker will fight inflation."

"It is a warning to everyone from the milkman to the Avon lady that we're willing to lay down our lives for the President's game plan. When they come to the door we will say 'No, thank you, we shall not contribute one dime to the spiraling forces of inflation that have been unleashed all over this land.'"

"I thought the President wanted us to spend money so there will be jobs and a strong economy."

"He does," I said. "But at the same time he is asking us all to show restraint. He says, buy things but don't expect higher wages, because if you get a raise that means prices will have to rise, and the whole thing will be self-defeating."

"How can we spend more money if we can't get more money to spend?" My wife demanded.

"Now you're thinking like a Democrat," I said disgustedly. "We can get more money by going to the banks and borrowing it. Then we can buy things, which will perk up the economy and make it possible for factories to tool up, people to be employed and stockholders to get dividends."

"You mean stockholders are going to get dividends?"

"Of course. You don't expect stockholders to make

Threat In Minimum Wage Bill

By ELMER ROESSNER
Legislation to increase the minimum wage from $1.60 to $2 an hour is moving through Congress. It would take effect on January 1, 1972. Since 1972 is an election year and low-paid workers have just as big votes as corporation executives, the legislation may be passed.

And if President Nixon finds it expedient to sign the bill, there goes his ball game, the new game plan, that is.

As has been demonstrated every time the minimum has been increased, these have been the consequences:

The increase in minimums tends to increase all wages. When a lowly worker gets a raise, those getting slightly more demand more, and so well up the line.

A rise in the minimum tends to increase unemployment, since a man not worth the new minimum is likely to be dropped. This hits the mentally and physically handicapped and the aged, many fighting gamely to be self-supporting.

Hits Prices
The increase in minimums and its effect on other wages will tend to increase payrolls and the first way to recoup is for employers to increase prices.

An increase in minimums also tend to increase taxes, since governments and subdivisions will have higher wage bills and welfare costs will rise.

Most important of all, as the hourglass now runs, is the fact that all these influences will just about wreck the wage-price freeze and much of the New Economic Plan.

It will be imperative for the control boards to allow increases in wages and prices. The 25 per cent increase in minimums of course would not bring an immediate rise in payrolls of any specific per cent, nor would it bring an immediate rise in prices. The effects would be gradual. This would be all the worse for the NEP, since it would be a constant upward and inflationary pressure.

Other Look-Aheads
Other business prospects are:

• Cheaper foods: Bountiful weather has made pork, potatoes, apples, pears and eggs plentiful, and in November there will be abundant pork, rice, potatoes, prunes, apples, cranberries, pears, turkeys, eggs and broilers.

New ground rules: Other chains may follow Safeway in changing present classification of ground beef. Three surveys recently have reported that there is little difference in flavor and nourishment of ground sirloin, round, chuck or random scraps of beef, and that the major difference is in the fat content. So Safeway will offer burger meat as "regular," "lean," "extra lean," and "super lean," with maximum fat content 28, 25, 22 and 18 per cent respectively.

Costlier juice: The Florida citrus crop this season is predicted to be much less than last, foretelling a rise in prices. Farm products are not frozen. In addition, some Floridians fear that Disney World's attractions for motels, trailer parks and other enterprises will lead to the uprooting of many groves, cutting future crops.

sacrifices during a wage-price freeze, do you?"

"Why should people who work be frozen, but people who clip coupons be allowed to make all the profits they want to?" she asked.

"Because, my dear, the only incentive business has is profits. If you take profits away from people, they won't go out and buy stocks. Then the stock market will suffer, and that could be very bad for the country."

"Well, what am I supposed to do?"

"Increase your productivity. Instead of doing two washloads a day, do three. Instead of vacuuming one room, vacuum two. Drive the kids to nursery school four times a week instead of three."

and two of the Senator's top political aides: Mark Shields and Democratic National Committeeman George Mitchell of Maine. Barkan criticized the choice of Hughes as credentials committee chairman; Muskie responded by saying he would not oppose Hughes. Nevertheless, the hot-tempered Barkan told friends the luncheon had not at all prepared him for the Muskie camp's all-out opposition a few days later to Mrs. Harris's winning candidacy. The upshot: relations between Muskie and labor's high command are worse than ever.

Indeed, few Democrats expected the front-running candidate would plunge so deeply into a divisive intraparty quarrel. English, Mitchell and Shields manned telephones at Muskie headquarters this week in the doomed effort for Hughes. On the night before the National Committee vote, the tough-talking Shields roamed the Mayflower's corridors trying to turn around votes.

Muskie's practical politicians defend this on grounds that Hughes is not all that radical and, as credentials chairman, would be a protective device against truly far-out reformers. But privately, at work are less rational factors, including deeply-felt animosity against Barkan and organized labor by some Kennedy-McCarthy veterans of 1968 now at Muskie headquarters.

Whatever the true motive, the result was that Muskie gratuitously swept into a bitterly divisive battle he could have easily avoided. Thus did Ed Muskie, who more than any other Democrat stands to gain from a united party, add to Democratic divisiveness in a week where the feuding at the Mayflower contrasted unfavorably with President Nixon's great initiatives in the economy and diplomacy.

$1 Billion Boost In Farm Crop Subsidies Sought By President

By DON KENDALL
 AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration plans to boost farm crop subsidies next year by as much as $1 billion in a new drive to curb production of corn and other livestock feed-grains.

Most of the increase will be used to pay farmers for taking more cropland from production. Direct subsidy payments based on grain raised on remaining acres also will be boosted.

A record 1971 corn crop of 5.4 billion bushels, nearly a third more than last year, is the main cause. The huge crop has led to depressed grain prices and has helped dim hopes for a general improvement in farm income.

Now, the administration says, if feed planting next spring is not reduced sharply, the nation could be headed for a new era of grain surpluses and price difficulties.

The Agriculture Department was to introduce the new plan today, here and at briefings at Des Moines, Iowa, and Dallas, Tex., in an unusual effort to give as much public exposure as possible.

Basically, the administration is asking farmers to take perhaps 40 million acres or more from feed production next year, including corn, sorghums and barley.

That goal is more than double the land idled under the 1971 feed-grain program, estimated to cost around $1.1 billion in federal payments.

Under the 1972 plan total payments are expected to be at least $1.5 billion and perhaps more than $2 billion, according to government sources.

This year farmers were required to idle or "set aside" 20 per cent of their crop acreage to qualify for feed-grain price-support loans and payments. However, there was no direct payment for the idled land.

In 1972 the requirement will be boosted to approximately 25 per cent of a farmer's feed-grain base acreage. In addition, farmers will be given a voluntary option of taking additional land from production for which they would receive subsidy payments.

The goal is to take between 40 and 45 percent of the nation's feed-grain acreage from the 1972 grain output, nearly half of it in return for government rental payments.

As an additional sweetener to get farmers to enroll in the program next year, a "preliminary payment" based on half a farm's normal corn (and other feed grains) production will be increased to about 40 cents per bushel, compared with 32 cents this year.

State Fair Crowds Off

RALEIGH (AP) — Attendance at the North Carolina State Fair is running behind last year and fair officials are hoping it will pick up this week.

A crowd estimated at about 50,000 turned out Sunday for entertainment at the big show at the state fairgrounds. This was about on par with the same day last year.

Bob Willis, fair public relations director, said that attendance Saturday was 101,000 compared to 120,000 on the comparable day last year. He pointed out that last year there was a football game in nearby Carter Stadium to help attract folks to the fair.

Willis said opening day attendance Friday was 44,509 compared with 63,607 last year on opening day.

Willis blamed the slump on the fact that Friday was a school day and said, "we hope to get our 19,000 back on Tuesday when Wake County schools will be closed for a teachers' meeting."

Rouse Resigns AP News Post To Join Paper

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Roger D. Jolley has been named news editor in the Charlotte bureau of The Associated Press, succeeding J. Michael Rouse, who has resigned after 10 years with the AP to become managing editor of the Durham Herald.

Jolley, 26, will be responsible as news editor for immediate direction of the AP's news gathering operations in North Carolina and South Carolina and serve as assistant to Carl Bell, chief of bureau for the two states.

Rouse, 32, joined the AP in Charlotte in 1961 and has been news editor for the last five years. He began his news career with the Goldsboro, N.C., News-Argus.

Jolley, a native of North Carolina's Rutherford County, joined the AP in Charlotte nearly two years ago, after more than four years as reporter and city editor of the Durham Herald.

Bowles For An Extension

RALEIGH (AP) — A Democratic gubernatorial hopeful, Greensboro Sen. Hargrove "Skipper" Bowles, says he would be willing to extend the Oct. 26 legislative session as long as it would take to consider no-fault auto liability insurance.

"Fresh new evidence is now available to us from the state of Massachusetts which proves that we can lower the cost of automobile insurance in North Carolina," Bowles said in a statement released Saturday.

"The record for the first six months in Massachusetts shows that under their new no-fault plan, the average claim paid is down over half. The total money paid out is down almost 80 per cent."

"As a result of this reform, the automobile owner has already had a 15 per cent reduction in his premium and the insurance commissioner says that further cuts are definitely coming next year," he said.

Bowles added, "We can do the same thing for every automobile owner right here at home, if we want to do it." He said the matter shouldn't be put off until 1973 because people need lower rates now.

U.S. And Albania Square Off On 2-China Question

By WILLIAM N. OATIS
Associated Press Writer
UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.
(AP) — Albania and the United States square off today as the General Assembly starts its debate on whether to replace Nationalist China with Communist China in the United Nations or offer them both seats.

Albanian Foreign Minister Nesi Nase, speaking first, was prepared to argue that only the People's Republic of China deserves a U.N. seat and that it would, as it had said, "Have nothing to do with the United Nations" unless Chiang Kai-shek's delegates were ousted.

U.S. Ambassador George Bush was expected to contend that ouster of Chiang's Republic of China would create a dangerous precedent for other governments that might lose part of their territory and that Peking's "no" to dual representation was not necessarily final.

Nase was introducing a 22-nation proposal drawn to Peking's specifications—the so-called "Albanian resolution" that would recognize representatives of the People's Republic as "the sole legitimate representatives of China" to the United Nations and "expel forthwith the representatives of Chiang Kai-shek."

Bush was introducing another 22-nation resolution classifying ouster of Nationalist China as an "important question" that could only be approved by a two-thirds vote, and a 19-nation resolution to decree "dual representation" of both Chinas in the assembly and recommending that Communist China be put on the Security Council.

The Chinese Communists would have been voted in and the Nationalists out last Nov. 20 if a resolution had not already been adopted making any change in the representation of China an important question. Although it failed to get the necessary two-thirds majority, the vote in favor of the Albanian resolution was 51-49 with 25 abstentions.

The United States on Aug. 2 announced that it would support seating the Peking regime but would oppose expelling the Nationalists. Whether the new policy saves the Nationalists' assembly seat depends on the voting after the debate, expected within two weeks.

Nobody expects the Albanian resolution to get a two-thirds majority. The crucial issue is whether the U.S. "important question" resolution gets the simple majority needed for its adoption. Many observers think that the margin will be close and the outcome will depend on 10 yet uncommitted countries.

Dunns Attend Ass'n Governor To Meeting In Denver Washington

Henry Dunn, president of the North Carolina Association for Retarded Children, and his wife, Mrs. Pennie Dunn, president of the Pitt County Chapter of the association, attended the 22nd Annual Convention of the National Association for Retarded Children held in Denver, Colorado last week.

The Dunns, residents of Greenville, were among approximately 2,000 parents and professionals representing the 1,500 member units of the National Association on hand for the four day convention held in Denver.

Keynote speakers at the convention included Senator Hubert H. Humphrey; Senator Robert Dole, chairman of the Republican National Committee; and John D. Twanname.

administrator of HEW's Social and Rehabilitation Service. All three speakers have played key roles in forwarding the needs of the nation's mentally retarded. Workshops, addresses and special sessions were scheduled on a wide variety of subjects, including education and employment of the mentally retarded, and the relationship of poverty to mental retardation.

Mrs. Hubert H. Humphrey, a past recipient of a National Association Distinguished Service Award, was a special guest at the convention's banquet. Twenty-one years of achievement were commemorated at the 1971 meeting, one that underlined the associations' emphasis on its role in the challenging decade of the 1970s.

Among those honored at the convention were Miss Bonnie Cook, the nine year old poster child for 1971 and Mrs. Henry Mancini, wife of composer-conductor Henry Mancini.

Entertainment was provided by the U. S. Air Force Academy Band and the Cadet Chorale.

Asks Asylum

BRUSSELS (AP) — The Belgian Foreign Ministry announced today that Soviet trade mission employee Anatoly Tcheboratev has sought political asylum in the United States.

Police reported Sunday they had handed the Foreign Ministry a note they say was supplied by Tcheboratev listing 30 to 40 Kremlin espionage agents operating in Belgium. There was no indication whether the government would expel them.

Tcheboratev is said to have been a friend of Oleg Lyalin, the Soviet trade official who defected in London and exposed 105 of his colleagues as spies.

Tcheboratev has been missing from Belgium since early this month.

Election Of ASC Committeemen Slated December 1

Full details are now available to Pitt County farmers on the upcoming election of ASC committeemen—says W. F. Tyson, chairman of the Pitt County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation (ASC) Committee.

ASC community committeemen elections this year will be held December 1. The ballots farmers will use to elect three regular members and two alternates to ASC committees will be mailed out about November 19. A special effort is being made to make sure every eligible voter in the county receives a ballot.

"We would like farmers to 'voice their choice' for good committeemen candidates who will effectively serve all the farmers in their community without regard to race, color, creed, sex or national origin," Tyson said.

The period set for nomination-by-petition of ASC committeemen begins October 4 and runs for 23 days. All petitions must be filed at the County Office by close of business October 27.

Procedures for nominating a candidate are simple:

- (1) One nominee to a petition;
- (2) Candidate must certify that he will serve if elected;
- (3) Three signature of eligible farm voters are required (this is a change from last year when six signatures were required);

(4) Petitions must be in the County ASCS Office on Oct. 27. There is no limit on the number of petitions farmers may sign.

"For more than 35 years the farmer-elected ASC committee system has functioned under democratic principles. These grassroots committees are comprised of, function for, and are run by farmers who live and work in the area," Tyson said.

"If the system is to remain effective, not only must dedicated farmers be willing to serve on the committees, but all Pitt County farmers should be willing to nominate and elect responsible people to fill the committee posts," he added.

He explained that after the community committees are elected, three delegates from each newly-elected committee attend a county convention to fill vacancies on the County ASC Committee. The County Committee makes all local farm program decisions and works with community committees in carrying out various ASCS programs. ASCS programs in Pitt County are: Rural Environmental Assistance Program; Tobacco; Cotton; Peanut; Feed Grain; Price Support Loans; Bin and Dryer Loans; Wool; and others as assigned by the Secretary of Agriculture.

A farm owner, tenant, or sharecropper, 18 years old or older, is eligible to vote if he can participate in any ASCS program administered in the community where his farm is located. If he is not of legal voting age, he may vote in the ASC election if he supervises and conducts the farming operation on an entire farm. All persons whose names are listed on the deeds or rental agreements are eligible to vote. This will include most wives of owners and operators.

Tyson said that any practicing farmer who has not received a ballot by Nov. 21st should apply for it at the County Office.

A list of known eligible voters in Pitt County is available for inspection at the County ASCS Office, 214 Evans St. A 1971 calendar of committeemen election events is posted at the County Office and in each of the twenty-two ASC communities within the county.

Farm voters will elect three regular committeemen and 2 alternates to their community committees when they vote in the elections Dec. 1. Full details on voter eligibility, nomination by petition, community boundaries, and other election the County ASCS Office, Tyson procedures are also available at said.

Farm Tips

By Dr. J. W. Pou
Agricultural Specialist
Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., N.A.

An expanded facility at the Central Crops Research Farm near Clayton is helping assure the continued growth of the quality, as well as the volume, of North Carolina's pork industry.

The facility is the Swine Evaluation Station—the proving ground for North Carolina swine since 1961, and one of the largest contributors to the improved quality of Tar Heel pork.

The addition of the new unit should enable us to double the number of litters tested, said Ray Woodard, North Carolina State University specialist in charge of swine evaluation. "We have been averaging about 150 litters a year," he added.

The specialist said the increased testing capacity should accelerate progress toward improvement of the quality of Tar Heel hogs.

The progress has been coming along at a rather fast clip in the last 10 years. For example, the amount of lean meat cut from a 200-pound hog tested at the station has increased by about 13-1/2 pounds in this time.

Consumers can multiply this by the price they're paying for ham, pork chops or shoulder and realize the added value of an individual animal.

"This improvement in animals tested at the station has carried over into our commercial hogs," Woodard pointed out. "I think it is reasonable to assume that North Carolina hogs generally have increased in quality in direct proportion to those we have tested."

Producers, primarily purebred breeders, place representative animals from individual litters of pigs at the station to be grown out, slaughtered and evaluated under controlled conditions.

They are measured for growth performance, which is important in terms of cost of production, and carcass characteristics, which are important in terms of product quality.

Littermates of these animals, and other offspring of the boar and sow, are usually sold to commercial producers as breeding stock. In this way, the high quality blood lines are introduced into the large herds that produce most of the consumer pork products.

Increasingly, commercial producers are demanding performance and carcass data on stock they buy for breeding purposes. Poor doing animals are costly to produce, and don't bring the premium prices that slaughter markets pay for top quality animals.

The strong demand for North Carolina feeder cattle also continues to indicate that Tar Heel farmers have a promising future in this segment of animal agriculture.

Results of state-sponsored demonstrational sales held last fall were particularly encouraging, according to Sam Buchanan, extension livestock specialist at North Carolina State University. Prices per head were the highest since 1951.

We have plenty of room to grow in beef cattle production. There are opportunities for more good cow-calf and stocker operations throughout the state.

Selecting better bulls, culling the cow herd more closely, better management of pastures, and giving more attention to animal health problems are some of the factors involved in producing the kind of calves that buyers want, and the kind that make a profit for the cow herd owner.

The fall sales last year indicate Tar Heel farmers are heeding this kind of advice and making considerable progress in upgrading their commercial beef herds.

Sullivan Special Taps Old Shows

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

AP Television-Radio Writer NEW YORK (AP) — Ed Sullivan started his new career as host of television specials by recalling some of the highlights of his 23 years as host of a weekly variety show.

The Sullivan program on CBS was able to tap an enormous storehouse of talent for a star-drenched 90 minutes Sunday night.

The guest list, stretching from 1948 with the Andrews Sisters to the 1970 Jackson Five, ranged from former President Lyndon B. Johnson to the Moiseyev Dancers, from Jackie Gleason to Joan Sutherland.

It was a remarkable job of assembling all the bits and pieces—of color and black and white, from film, tape and grainy kinescopes—into a program that was, by and large, vastly interesting.

There were appearances of the Beatles, first in a 1964 show attended by a throng of squealing youngsters and with the British stars themselves looking very young and diffident. Then there was the appearance of Elvis Presley. After a brief shot showing the singer from head to foot, the camera concentrated steadily on his face and guitar. Several years later, it was noted, singer Tom Jones received much the same camera treatment on the show.

There was the unknown young singer, Barbra Streisand, putting a lot of emotion into an indifferent song. The emergence of Diana Ross as a solo star was traced in various appearances on the show over the years, starting as one of "three young girls from Detroit"—The Supremes in their Sullivan show debut.

Many of the performers seen are gone now—Bert Lahr, Sophie Tucker, Gary Cooper, Clark Gable, Charles Laughton, Janis Joplin and Judy Garland among them.

Each of the networks this year has a children's program that is something special, they tell us, in quality. CBS has "You Are There"; ABC, "Curiosity Shop," and NBC, "Take a Giant Step." The latter, like the rest on Saturdays, is ambitious, well-intentioned, and an effort to satisfy critics and, at the same time, attract the desired audience—the post-"Sesame Street" and pre-"Mod Squad" crowd.

Unless you are one of them, it is hard to tell how well it succeeds. This past Saturday's hour was pegged to the word "Machine" and we saw a number of them in operation, but most of all we saw a rock music group called "Machine."

Suggests Educational Toys May Be Harmful

By C. G. McDANIEL
AP Science Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — A Harvard University pediatrician says many educational toys may have harmful effects on children. He suggests they would be better off playing with pots and pans.

The pediatrician, Dr. Richard I. Feinbloom, says he has found no evidence to support claims by manufacturers that toys programmed to stimulate learning will do so.

"Toys that teach" may, in fact, have harmful effects, Feinbloom reported Sunday in a presentation to the annual meeting of the American Academy of Pediatrics.

In discussing educational toys and so-called crib environments "alleged to offer unique benefits" which accelerate the development of learning ability in infants and young children, Feinbloom warned of a growing trend called "programmed cognitive stimulation."

He showed slides of hexagonal-shaped cribs equipped with a variety of objects reputed to stimulate infants and noted that "pressured parents" may not have time to play with their offspring and welcome these substitutes. "Turning children over to the television set has paved the way," he said.

Referring to the harm that might result, Feinbloom said the new crib systems are almost an invitation to parents to turn infants over "to a machine wired for sound and light" and free themselves for "more important things than interacting with children."

Feinbloom cited an article he published with Dr. Peter H. Wolff of Harvard in the journal Pediatrics. They said programmed mental training of infants "can interfere with the mutually nurturing relation of mother and infant."

"The spontaneous social interchange of parent and child is at least as important intellectual development as early academic achievement," they said.

"Therefore, there is little reason for pediatricians to encourage, and ample reason for them to discourage, the use of specialized toys when these are used for maximizing the rate of mental development in the first two years."

Peace Corps-VISTA Team At ECU To Seek Recruits

Peace Corps-VISTA recruiters will be on the East Carolina University campus Tuesday through Thursday of this week recruiting for program openings in both domestic and international divisions.

Representatives of the two organizations, which merged this summer with several smaller volunteer agencies to form ACTION, will meet with students and interested community residents to provide information on the opportunities in either the Peace Corps or VISTA programs.

Former volunteers on the campus will be Miss Laura Larson, serving VISTA in Missouri and Kansas, and Ray Tidwell, Peace Corps volunteer in India.

Both recruiters will be at the ACTION booth located in the lobby of the ECU Student Union each day to answer questions that local students and residents might have.

ACTION is composed of seven affiliated agencies whose identity and purpose will remain intact.

Those agencies are: The Peace Corps, VISTA (Volunteers in Service to America); Foster Grandparents; Retired Senior Volunteer Program; Service Corps of Retired Executives; the Active Corps of Executives; and the Office of Voluntary Action. Pending enabling legislation, it was announced, the Teacher Corps may be shifted from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare into ACTION.

Joe Blatchford, former director of the Peace Corps, has assumed duties as director-designate of ACTION.

Awards Won By 15 Underwriters

Some 15 members of the Pitt County Association of Life Underwriters received National Quality Awards Friday during the monthly meeting of the group at Parkers Barbecue.

Association president Stuart Buchanan presented the 1970-71 awards to the agents who had at least 90 per cent of their new paid business to renew during the past 24-month period.

Qualifying members and the number of the years as award winners are: W. M. Scales, 14 years; J. D. Wilson, 13; R. Clarke Stokes, 10; Max R. Joyner, seven; Mrs. Minnie Mae Smith, six; James O. Perry Jr., five; William R. Stroud, five; David A. Boyd, four; W. Evan Griffin, two; Leon Smith Jr., two; Johnny W. Spencer, two; Mrs. Jeanette H. Baur, one; Billy C. Ellis, one; Bobby Joe Lawhead, and J. D. McGlohn Jr., one year.

Guest speaker for the meeting, Dr. James L. Knipe of the East Carolina University faculty, told underwriters that he felt the current economic policy, as announced by President Richard Nixon in August, will have little or no effect on American economy in the long run.

Knipe said that unemployment figures are misunderstood. He asserted that instead of six per cent being quoted as unemployed, the figure should be one-half of one per cent unemployed. In his opinion, he added, the other 5.5 per cent are not in the main stream of American life and if they are to be placed there as producers, then the federal government will have to spend billions to train them to work.

For the future, Knipe predicted a boom in business with a long, slow rise in the stock market. He also said that bond interests will drop slowly.

There were 17 members and guests present for the luncheon meeting.

Speechless, So He Put On Ring

TORONTO (AP) — Tom Hamilton took Wendy Follitt to the observation deck atop the 54-story Toronto-Dominion Center Saturday ostensibly to meet a friend.

The friend wasn't there, but a small plane flew past trailing a 155-foot sign: "Wendy Follitt, will you marry me? Love, Tom."

Wendy, 24, was speechless. She thrust out her left hand, and Tom put an engagement ring on her finger.

Murder-Suicide Ruled In Deaths

KENLY, N.C. (AP) — Murder-suicide has been ruled in the weekend deaths of a Wilson County couple, the county coroner, Dr. R.E. Goudy, said today.

Wilson County Deputy Sheriff Gene Pearson said Purvis Elwood Raper, 46, shot his wife, Joyce May Raper, 41, during an argument late Saturday night.

Pearson said Raper then turned a .22-caliber pistol on himself. He said Mrs. Raper was hit once in the head by a bullet.

The incident occurred in a house near Kenly.

Taking Off On Treasure Hunt

CHARLESTON (AP)—Two young Charleston men, after more than two years of work and waiting, will take off this week on a treasure hunt.

Lee Spence, 23, and Michael Douglas, 22, will begin a search for artifacts aboard the British steamer Constance, which sank off the Isle of Palms in 1864.

The two young men said the salvaging operation will involve more than 80 persons and $500,000 worth of equipment.

Spence, who said he had been interested in the Constance since he was 15 years old, and Douglas have obtained the rights of salvage from the state of South Carolina.

Under the agreement, Spence said, his company will turn over to the state one-fourth of the value of artifacts salvaged from the sunken ship.

What is aboard the Constance?

That, Spence said, "is a well-kept secret. The information is classified because the state is a afraid of a rush on shipwreck leases."

The vessel sank about one mile offshore after it hit another sunken ship. Spence said the Constance, owned by Confederate sympathizers and manned by a British crew, was attempting to run a Union blockade and reach Charleston with a valuable cargo when it sank.

Spence said it took more than one year to get the salvage rights from the state and then another year, to prepare for the operation.

Pitching Staff Turned The Tables For Pittsburgh

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer
BALTIMORE (AP) — In the end it was a maligned pitching staff working without its top winner that turned the tables for the Pittsburgh Pirates and made them baseball's world champions for 1971.

Steve Blass, his hair soaked with champagne, stood on top of a table in the bedlam of the Pirate dressing room Sunday and shouted, "We've got a no-name pitching staff but we're the champions."

Blass had just pitched the Pirates to the title, beating Baltimore 2-1 on a tension-packed four-hitter that captivated a nationwide television viewing audience which included President Richard Nixon.

The President called the Pirate dressing room after the game to congratulate Manager Danny Murtaugh and his team on their first title in 11 years.

"He complimented me on looking so calm on the bench," said Murtaugh, "and he said that although the day belonged to Blass and Roberto Clemente, it took a real team effort to win the Series. I thanked him for taking the time to call. It was a tremendous tribute to baseball and a great thrill for me."

Nixon also phoned the Oriole dressing room to talk to Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver, who often had lamented over not hearing from the President, despite the past successes of his team.

It was Murtaugh who manipulated the seemingly thin Pirate pitching staff to the title. Deprived of his biggest winner, Dock Ellis, who worked only 2 1-3 innings in the Series, Murtaugh won it anyway with two sensational jobs by Blass, a shutout by journeyman Nellie Briles and a brilliant relief job by 21-year-old rookie Bruce Kison.

"Anytime you go into a Series like this, the emphasis has to be on the pitching," said Murtaugh. "They had four 20-game winners, but we had enough pitching to win our division and the pennant, so I thought we'd have enough now."

And while the Pirate pitchers, shelled for 16 runs and 24 hits in the first two games of the Series, suddenly shut off the Oriole offense, Clemente stepped into the hitting spotlight.

A veteran of 17 major league seasons, the slugging right fielder tore the Orioles apart, collecting 12 hits, one short of the Series record. He was the obvious choice as the Series' most valuable player.

"This means so much to me," said Clemente. "I'm 37. I might never get to play in another World Series."

Clemente did it all in this Series. His flawless fielding and a rifle arm kept the Baltimore baserunners wary throughout. And his big bat marked the eventual downfall of the defending champions.

It was Clemente's booming fourth-inning home run that put Pittsburgh in front Sunday. The shot was the first hit off loser Mike Cuellar, who had retired the first 11 Pirates in order.

"Now people in the whole world know how I play," said Clemente, who glittered in the spotlight of the Series.

"I wanted to show people that the Roberto Clemente who swings bad in the playoffs against Cincinnati last year, is no not the real Roberto Clemente. I was hurt and I couldn't swing the bat. I wanted to finish what we started last year."

Clemente's homer woke the Pirates up. "It was like an explosion in the dugout," laughed Murtaugh, who also managed Pittsburgh's last champions in 1960.

Armed with the lead, Blass bore down. "I was rushing myself early in the game," the right-hander said. "But around the fifth inning, I fell into the same rhythm I had in the first game."

That was bad news for the Orioles, whose spin-out in this Series started when Blass beat them in game No. 3 on a three-hitter.

"I had two great days," said

Blass, "and they happened to be in the World Series."

Blass spent most of the afternoon pacing nervously around the mound between pitches, digging at the dirt and otherwise occupying himself.

"The pacing?" said Blass. "Oh that's just the preview of a bad stomach. I was trying for physical self control but it felt like there were 12 elephants in my stomach."

Blass ignored the parade of pachyderms in his tummy and rolled through the Orioles' array of hitters with ease. Every inning he came to the bench and tried to ease the tension by talking with Murtaugh.

"Wouldn't four runs this inning be nice?" Blass said he asked Murtaugh. The stoic skipper just nodded as the Pirates tried to add to Blass' thin edge.

Finally, in the eighth, they got him another run when Willie Stargell singled and circled the bases on Jose Pagan's double.

The Birds got the run right back from Blass in the bottom of the eighth on hits by Ellie Hendricks and Mark Belanger, a sacrifice and an infield out.

That put Blass back in a one-run pressure cooker in the ninth with the heart of the Orioles' batting order—Boog Powell, Frank Robinson and Merv Rettenmund coming up.

Steve Blass The Loneliest Guy

By D. BYRON YAKE
Associated Press Sports Writer
BALTIMORE (AP) — "I was probably the loneliest guy in the world," said Steve Blass.

"Nobody said a word to me before the game and less during it."

But the Pittsburgh Pirate right-hander, who won the seventh World Series game with a brilliant four-hitter, can't be lonely now.

"God, we won the World Series," he tried to say calmly as reporters clamored for his comments after the Pirates' 2-1 victory Sunday.

Blass is a witty personality who has the ability to laugh at himself, win or lose.

But it was a different Steve Blass who won two World Series' games from the Blass who was hit hard by San Francisco in two playoff games.

"I was carried away with the atmosphere of the playoffs," said Blass. "After the Series, I gave some thought to the bad playoffs I had and decided I had to stay within myself emotionally."

Blass admitted, however, that he was frightened.

"I really didn't know how well I would do," he said.

"But I disappointed myself. I slept well last night."

When the Pirates were two games down in the Series, Blass picked them up with a three-hitter, the first of three straight victories in Three Rivers Stadium.

Before the sixth game, when the Pirates had a chance to clinch the title behind Bob Moose and with Blass scheduled to pitch Sunday, he said: "I'd be happy if Moose would retire me."

But, as things turned out, it was Blass who did the retiring of the Orioles.

And he did it in spite of complaints by Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver that he was not properly stepping up on the pitching rubber before each delivery.

"He had a legitimate gripe," said Blass. "Murtaugh said it was in the rule book."

Blass also got through a touchy situation in the Baltimore eighth, when with none out and runners on first and second, pinchbatter Tom Shopay sacrificed.

Blass fielded the bunt, and instead of throwing to third where he had a play, he got the out at first, putting two runs in scoring position.

A run did score on an infield out by Don Buford, but he retired Dave Johnson on an infield grounder.

And despite his exuberance, Blass was able to realistically appraise the on-paper reason that the Orioles were favorites in the Series.

As his teammates drenched him with champagne, Blass said: "We don't have any spectacular pitchers, only pitchers with a lot of experience."

"We have a no-name pitching staff, but I imagine it will have a name now."

The heroes of the Pirates' title-clinching game were Blass and Roberto Clemente.

But others, perhaps a bit more unsung, share the glory.

Utility infielder Jose Pagan, who was in a World Series in 1962 with the Giants when they lost in the seventh game, doubled in the Pirates' second run after Willie Stargell singled.

His ball sailed over Merv Rettenmund in center and Pagan couldn't understand it.

"I know they usually play shallow on me but I hit a home run once in a while."

Then there was shortstop Jack Hernandez, who felt he got just revenge by starting every game but one against the Orioles. Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver once had said the Pirates couldn't win with Hernandez.

It was Hernandez who fielded Rettenmund's grounder and threw to first for the final out of the Series.

"I didn't care where they hit the ball," he said. "I just wanted it to be to me."

As the champagne flowed and corks popped in the mobbed Pirate dressing room, it was obvious that Bill Mazeroski's mind was flickering back and forth between 1960 and 1971.

In 1960, Mazeroski was the hero after hitting the winning home run against the New York Yankees in the seventh game.

In 1971, at the age of 36 and now a utility infielder, Mazeroski batted only once in the World Series—as a pinchhitter.

As he clutched a bottle of champagne in the Pirate training room, he looked up and laughed: "I was the inspirational leader."

Center fielder Gene Clines stood on a table and just flicked his fingers from the two-finger peace sign to a No. 1 sign.

"That's what we are now," he said.

Arnold Palmer Adds $20,000 To Winnings

PARIS (AP) — Arnold Palmer, golf's all-time leading money winner, has added another $20,000 to his bulging bankroll.

The popular millionaire from Latrobe, Pa., took the top prize Sunday in the Lancome Trophy Tournament, firing a one-under-par 71 over the 6,947-yard Saint Nom la Breteche course for a final 54-hole score of 14-under-par 202.

It gave him a two-stroke victory over Gary Player of South Africa in the tourney limited to eight of the world's top professional golfers.

Chi Chi Rodriguez of Puerto Rico finished with an eagle 2 on the 374-yard 18th hole for a 69 and took third at 211, one shot ahead of defending champion Tony Jacklin of England.

"It's great. It's wonderful," Snead said Sunday after winning the $100,000 National PGA Club Pro Championship by a five-stroke margin.

Asked if it was as big a thrill as his first tournament win, Snead replied, "No, I can't say it is. But it's wonderful."

Despite an early double bogey, the long-belting West Virginian closed with a three-under par 69 for a 72-hole 275, 11 under par. It was worth $15,000 to the 59-year-old veteran.

'The Old Men' Again Put It Together For Redskins

By BRUCE LOWITT
Associated Press Sports Writer

The old men got together for another one in Washington while one kid did some masterminding in New Orleans.

"The old geezers did it again," Coach George Allen grinned after his undefeated Washington Redskins won their fifth in a row Sunday, a convincing 20-0 whipping of the St. Louis Cardinals.

And quarterback Archie Manning, New Orleans, No. 1 draft choice, took advantage of six Dallas turnovers to run for two touchdowns and pass for a third as the Saints upset the Cowboys 24-14.

In Sunday's other National Football League games, Baltimore walloped the New York Giants 31-7, the New York Jets toppled Buffalo 28-17, Cleveland nosed out Cincinnati 27-24, Miami crushed New England 41-3, San Francisco beat Chicago 13-0, Detroit dumped Houston 31-7, Los Angeles defeated Atlanta 24-16, Minnesota turned back Green Bay 24-13, Oakland ripped Philadelphia 34-10 and Denver edged San Diego 20-16.

The Pittsburgh Steelers take on the Chiefs in Kansas City in Monday night's nationally televised (ABC, 9 p.m., EDT) game.

"We keep hearing that the 'old men' are going to fold or that the balloon will burst," Washington quarterback Billy Kilmer said. "We have something to prove every week."

Kilmer and Charley Harraway each ran for a touchdown and Curt Knight booted two field goals for the 'Skins, but the star of the day was linebacker Jack Pardee, who intercepted three passes to thwart the Cardinals. "I guess they feel sorry for an old man," he laughed.

The victory boosted Washington's lead in the NFC East to two games over the Cowboys, whose coach, Tom Landry, muttered: "When you give them away, you can't win them. What went wrong? Our kicking, passing running—nobody was playing."

Dallas fumbled the ball away three times and had three passes intercepted. "For the first time this year," Saints

Coach J. D. Roberts said, "our special teams started forcing the errors and started making the big plays for us."

Manning passed 29 yards to Tony Baker for New Orleans' first touchdown, then scampered 13 and two yards for two more, countering Roger Staubach's two scoring passes for the Cowboys.

Norm Bulaich rumbled for 108 yards, including 34 for a touchdown, and caught a 27-yard pass for another score in the Colts' romp. "Our running game was going and we mixed in a few passes," quarterback

Earl Morrall understated. He also fired two scoring strikes to Ray Perkins as Baltimore broke open the game against the Giants with 21 points in the second quarter.

Bog Davis, the Jets' third-string quarterback making his first start since 1969, passed for a pair of touchdowns against the winless Bills and Emerson Boozer churned up 116 yards, including a two-yard touchdown, as New York scored more points than it had managed while losing three of four previous games.

"I couldn't hear the count so I went with the snap of the ball," said Bo Scott of the Browns, who went four yards with it into the end zone for his third touchdown of the game with 39 seconds remaining to stun the Bengals.

"They beat the living hell out of us," was all shell-shocked Patriots Coach John Mazur could say after Bob Griese fired four touchdown passes, two apiece to Paul Warfield and Howard Twilley, while the Dolphins held New England to just 117 total yards and smothered quarterback Jim Plunkett six times.

The 49ers survived a shaky offensive performance to score their first shutout in 10 years. John Brodie's 12-yard pass to Gene Washington provided the game's lone touchdown.

Lem Barney raced 28 yards with an interception for a touchdown and Steve Owens rammed over for two more as the Lions overwhelmed the Oilers' defense with 230 yards on the ground.

Roman Gabriel snuck over for a pair of one-yard touchdowns, setting up the second on a 68-yard pass play to Jack Snow in the fourth period, as the Rams rallied to turn back the Falcons.

Oglesby's Condition Is Key Item To Tar Heels

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Fans of the University of North Carolina football team are keeping their fingers crossed this week on the status of star runner Ike Oglesby.

Oglesby, a 5-11½, 191-pound junior halfback, has missed the last two Tar Heel games with severe leg cramps. North Carolina lost both, the latest a 16-0 setback to seventh-ranked Notre Dame.

With the Greensboro speedster healthy for the first four games, North Carolina rolled to easy victories.

Coach Bill Dooley isn't saying that Oglesby's absence caused the defeats, but he's sure to welcome Oglesby back to practice Monday. Dooley could have used him Saturday at South Bend, Ind., but decided not to since Oglesby was not at full speed.

The cause of all the concern for the North Carolina fans is Saturday's clash at Chapel Hill with the team which defeated the Tar Heels for the Atlantic Coast Conference championship last fall—Wake Forest. The Deacons are primed and ready to go against North Carolina again, remembering how nice it was to win, 14-13, a year ago, and knowing they have an offense that can get the points.

Tulsa knows about those points. In their game Saturday, the invading Hurricanes were pushed around and down to defeat, 51-21.

In the process Wake Forest collected more points than it has in the last 20 years, set several school and individual records and evened its over-all record at 4-2. In the conference it is 1-1, compared to North Carolina's 2-0, but it plays one less league foe than do the Tar Heels.

Stars for the black-and-gold Deacs were fullback Larry Hopkins, quarterback Larry Russell, and halfback Ken Garrett. And it has no problems with anyone's health.

Meanwhile, Clemson was blasting Virginia, 32-15, for its second win after three opening losses; Duke was rolling over N.C. State, 41-13; and Maryland lost to former ACC member South Carolina, 35-6.

Games this week send Clemson to Auburn, Duke to Navy, Maryland to Florida, East Carolina to N.C. State, Virginia to Army and South Carolina to Florida State.

North Carolina has tasted the heady wine of Top Twenty listing this season, as has Duke. Both fell from the polls after losing, but the Blue Devils may be coming back. Despite losses of key players due to injuries, their performance Saturday was overwhelming.

Defensive back Ernie Jackson, for instance, is a standout in his normal role. But pressed into action as a halfback, which he had not run since high school, Jackson went both ways against the Wolfpack.

He merely scored the first Blue Devil TDs.

South Carolina got a star performance in its trouncing of the Maryland Terps. Defensive halfback Dick Harris scored a touchdown on a 59-yard run with a punt, tying an NCAA record.

Clemson quarterback Tommy Kendrick was the hero at Richmond, Va., in the Tobacco Bowl. He had three completions on four long passes, scoring on one and setting up touchdowns with the others.

Both Need A Win Tonight

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The Kansas City Chiefs and the Pittsburgh Steelers have one thing in common—both teams need to win tonight's nationally televised game or lose ground in their bids for American Football Conference division titles.

The game will be televised by ABC and starts at 9:05 p.m., EDT.

Kansas City, 3-1, must win to keep step with the Oakland Raiders in the West. The Raiders, 4-1, took at least temporary possession of first place Sunday by overcoming the Philadelphia Eagles 34-10.

The Rookie-studded Steelers are 2-2 in the Central Division and 1½ games behind the front-running Cleveland Browns, 4-1, who defeated the Cincinnati Bengals Sunday 27-24. A Pittsburgh loss would give the Browns a rather commanding advantage.

The Chiefs, who turned in a brilliant second half last week to overhaul San Diego 31-10, could run into trouble tonight because of Len Dawson's sore elbow. The veteran quarterback insists he will be ready, and Coach Hank Stram says Dawson will start.

The last and only time Kansas City faced Pittsburgh, Dawson hit on 19 of 24 passes for 257 yards and three touchdowns and was named offensive player of the week. Kansas City won the 1970 game 31-14.

When Spiders Meet Paladins Big Test: Defense vs. Offense

By MARSHALL JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

"I was extremely happy with the defensive unit. I was really impressed. They just wouldn't be moved. As we gain more experience, we're going to be a good football team."

So said Richmond coach Frank Jones after his Spiders allowed Virginia Military's Keydets just 99 yards in total offense Saturday night en route to a 21-6 Southern Conference victory.

"I was fairly well pleased with the way we moved the ball, but we should be a little bit more consistent. The boys did a real fine job. They worked hard and I'm sure they are going to keep on working to improve week by week. We've really finally put it all together."

So said Furman's Bob King after the Paladins, although out-gained on the ground and in the air, recovered four fumbles, intercepted two passes and got scoring kickoff and punt returns in a 41-6 Southern Conference rout of Davidson's Wildcats.

One might be proved wrong this Saturday afternoon in Richmond City Stadium when Furman and Richmond match their 2-0 league records with the winner taking over undisputed possession of second place.

The winner might gain the lead, but that isn't likely since William and Mary's Indians — 41-30 losers at nonleague Virginia Tech last Saturday — will be favored to up their conference record to 4-0 against VMI.

It wasn't a good day for league teams outside the circuit, for The Citadel's Bulldogs were edged by Presbyterian 24-23 and East Carolina's Pirates were mauled by West Virginia 44-21.

The only winner was Appalachian State. Clayton Deskins tied two school records as he scored four touchdowns and 24 points — on runs of 15, 8 and 2 yards and on a 55-yard pass from Steve Loflin — as the

Win Their Third Seniors Title

PAWLEYS ISLAND, S. C. (AP)—Harry Welch of Salisbury, N. C., and Dale Morey of High Point, N. C., have teamed together again to win their third straight Carolina Golf Association Senior Four-Ball Championship.

It was the third year for the event and the Welch-Morey team has conquered the title every time.

Morey and Welch shot a 68 Sunday over the par-72 Sea Gull Golf Club course at Pawleys Island. They had a two-day, 36-hole total of 134.

Finishing second were Clay Felts and D. T. Legrone, both of Charlotte, N.C., with a two-day total of 138. Felts and Legrone had a 71 Sunday after a 67 in the first round.

of 11 passes for 102 yards and ran for two touchdowns, and sophomore fullback Barty Smith, who ran for 83 yards on 17 carries and caught three passes for 27.

"Ken has come a long way," said Jones of Nichols, an early-season booby target. "He's gonna be a fine quarterback."

Mike Fabian had a 96-yard kickoff return and two pass interceptions for Furman, while Donny Griffin ran a punt back 72 yards and George Harbin recovered two fumbles and intercepted a pass.

William and Mary ran up 543 yards in total offense with Steve Regan passing for 297 and Phil Mosser running for 119 and Dennis Cambal for 108, but the Indians — after overcoming a 21-0 deficit to go ahead 30-28 — fumbled twice inside their 20 in the final minutes and lost.

Harry Lynch ran for 135 yards and Jon Hall for 106 and Brian Baima caught nine passes to set a school season record of 43 receptions, but The Citadel lost six fumbles, two in the closing minutes when the Bulldogs had a one-point deficit they couldn't make up.

By the time sophomore quarterback Carl Summeyell directed a pair of touchdown drives and John Casazza led an 80-yard march, East Carolina had fallen behind West Virginia 30-0. The Pirates also were in a give-away mood, losing five passes and two fumbles.

'Venture In Faith' As Church Hires Black Pastor

OAK RIDGE, Tenn. (UPI) — The one thing members of Kern Memorial United Methodist Church do not want is to be pictured as heroes, as having done something outstandingly praiseworthy.

"The only thing we really were concerned with," says Paul Wilkinson, lay leader of the church, "was getting a Christian minister. If the pastor were truly Christian, there was nothing we could do but accept him. That's the way the people here feel."

And it was in this context that the Rev. Walter Willis, a 40-year-old native of Sylacauga, Ala., became the first black pastor of an all-white Methodist church in the Southeast, in July.

"There was obviously a lot of discussion," Wilkinson said in an interview, recalling last spring when the district superintendent came to the leadership of Kern Memorial and asked them if they would work with a black minister.

THE REV. WALTER WILLIS greets members of the Kern Memorial Church at Oak Ridge, Tenn. (UPI Telephoto)

Bishop L. Scott Allen, the first black head of the Holston United Methodist Conference, which covers east Tennessee and a small area of southwest Virginia, was looking for a white church which would work with a black minister.

"We were among 25 or so churches under consideration," said Charles Kite, chairman of the administrative board of the church.

A special meeting of the board was called, and most of its 50 members were there, plus some other members of the congregation. The proposal was openly and thoroughly discussed and put to a vote by secret ballot.

"I think the vote was 38 to 6 in favor," Wilkinson said, and with that approval the "venture in faith," as Willis calls it, was launched.

"Naturally we had some doubts," Kite said. But for the church leaders, there was a ready-made out, anyway—built right into the structure of the Methodist Church, the practice of moving ministers around every two or three years.

"If the pastor was not an ideal match, black or white, it was not going to break the church," Wilkinson said. "We'd had experience with white ministers who were not always an ideal match."

"If anybody was taking a chance, it was much more on the part of the preacher than on the part of the church membership."

Willis came to Oak Ridge after three years in the Division of Curriculum Resources of the United Methodist Board of Education in Nashville.

He had entered the ministry in 1949, had served as minister and dean of men at Huston-Tillotson College in Austin, Tex., and as minister at Claflin College in Orangeburg, S.C. He had been pastor of a number of churches in Alabama and Tennessee, after his start in Evergreen, Ala.

He liked what he was doing in Nashville. And the decision to come here was not easily made.

For Willis, the venture began with a request that he take the appointment from Bishop Allen.

"If he had not ever asked me, I would have been happy," Willis admits. "A lot of time was spent in prayer. It was basically the children with whom I was concerned."

There are three Willis children, Henry Walter, 13; Timothy John, 9, and Stephen Edward, 6. In addition, Mrs. Willis' mother, Mrs. Lula Garrett of Greenville, S.C., is a member of the family which moved into the parsonage near the church in a white neighborhood.

"I had the feeling that I just could not say no," Willis says. "It was a challenge, and not an easy thing to do. It allowed me to put my faith on the line, even though I would do something that might be risky."

Willis says his main concern was not for himself but with how the children would adjust to being removed from a basically black environment in Nashville, where they had friends, and put into a white environment where they would have to start over.

Three months is too short a time to really evaluate the final outcome of the move, but Willis has found his "venture in faith" a rewarding experience so far.

There have been no threatening phone calls, no nasty letters, only one small incident which could be interpreted as hostile—a neighbor who asked that the Willis children not come into his yard.

There were some who found the move hard to accept, but even they came to church and gave their new pastor a look.

"This is a very open church," says Willis, "with a strong spiritual quality." And, although many were doubtful about the "publicity" a news story would give the church, on the Sunday this reporter attended services the congregation was warm, friendly and generous with the new pastor.

"We have a rather broad cross-section of the community in this congregation," Wilkinson said of Kern Memorial, which has about 853 members—third largest among Methodist congregations in the city.

The church has a history of greater than average social concern, Kite said, and this may be a factor in its acceptance of Willis.

"We're active with Youth Haven, a temporary shelter for wards of the court. Some Sunday School classes regularly visit Eastern State Psychiatric Hospital at Knoxville to visit the elderly or to meet with drug addicts," Kite said.

"We were asked by the Holston conference to contribute $2,600 to the Fund for Reconciliation—a $20 million program to help the economically disadvantaged. The church contributed $6,200."

Willis hasn't performed any weddings or officiated at any funerals, yet. "But I'm not sensitive about that," he said. He has been sought out by members seeking counseling, "and you don't ask counsel of someone you don't trust."

As to the future, Willis says he would not hesitate to go to another all-white church after his experience with Kern Memorial. And he believes Kern will be a different church for the experience, even though it may not have another black minister for many years.

"This church won't become a dumping ground for black ministers," Willis said bluntly. Whether it could have succeeded so well in another city in the South is hard to say. Oak Ridge, born with the atomic age, is not a typical Southern town. Less than 10 per cent black, with higher educational and economic levels than other east Tennessee cities, it has to be different.

"But not that much," said lay leader Paul Wilkinson.

Armored Units Moved Up By North Vietnamese

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The North Vietnamese army has been moving tanks and other armored units into the region above the demilitarized zone, Pentagon sources report.

U.S. experts are uncertain what this portends. Some think Hanoi wants tanks and self-propelled artillery in position to counter any possible new South Vietnamese ground thrust against the Ho Chi Minh trail network in southern Laos, or even northward across the DMZ.

There is agreement among U.S. experts that the concentration of armor in the panhandle greatly enhances North Vietnam's quick-reaction capability.

The armor buildup in the North Vietnamese panhandle was noticed by U.S. reconnaissance planes watching the growing concentration of supplies and antiaircraft weapons in preparation for the coming dry season.

More than 40 Soviet-built T34 and newer T54 medium tanks, SU76 armored assault guns, and self-propelled antiaircraft guns were sighted recently in convoy near Vinh and elsewhere in the panhandle. American observers also spotted a new armored training area including about 35 barracks, maintenance shops and other buildings close to Vinh.

This suggests to U.S. officers that the North Vietnamese may be expanding their armor elements over-all, and that they intend to keep strong tank forces in the panhandle permanently.

The presence of significant tank forces above the DMZ ultimately could pose a serious threat to the northern provinces of South Vietnam.

The North Vietnamese already have undertaken some limited roadbuilding across the DMZ and some U.S. military men forecast expansion of this kind of effort as the United States scales down its bombing power in Southeast Asia.

Armor has played a relatively minor role in the Indochina war until now.

Allied forces claimed to have destroyed 120 North Vietnamese tanks in Laos during U.S. air-supported South Vietnamese ground operations against supply roads early this year. But most were the light and very thinly armored PT76 amphibious tanks.

The armor seen moving into the North Vietnamese panhandle in recent weeks is considerably heavier and more powerful.

SCENE OF RAP BROWN'S CAPTURE — This is the area on West 85th St., N.Y., where early Saturday morning H. Rap Brown, black militant on the FBI's most wanted list, was gunned down by police. Action started in the Red Carpet Lounge (left) where police became involved in shootout breaking up a bar room crap-game hold up. Two men were captured there, while Brown, already wounded, and a fourth, ran down street to gray building (center rear). One was captured in the lobby while Brown took elevator to penthouse (next to top level) and ran up stairs to roof. He scaled a four-foot wall and jumped or fell 18 feet to terrace level. There he was shot again and captured. He is recovering in Roosevelt Hospital. (AP Wirephoto)

Wall Street Opposes Watchdog

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — The announcement from the New York Stock Exchange was timed to coincide with testimony scheduled for Monday before the House Subcommittee on Commerce and Finance.

"There is no need for new federal legislation covering any aspect of the way securities transactions are settled, a top New York Stock Exchange executive declared today." That was the first paragraph.

The second quoted directly Richard B. Howland, executive vice president: "All of these matters are receiving vigorous top-priority attention from the self-regulatory bodies."

It was read to Hurd Baruch, a special counsel for the Securities and Exchange Commission, the government agency responsible for protecting the public in the stock market. He termed it contemptible.

"It denotes three things," he said. "First, they at the Exchange have learned nothing from their blunders of the past. Second, their contempt for the sensibilities of the investing public remains undiminished. Third, there is no hope for reform from within the Exchange."

These are blunt words from a government official—enough, it would seem, to risk his career—but more were to follow. "I hope Congress reads that release and realizes the need for regulatory reform," he said.

It might be suggested also that Congress and the investing public too read "Wall Street Security Risk," written by Baruch and published by Acropolis Books Ltd., Washington, D.C.

In a preface to that eye-opening volume Baruch states: "...the securities industry has a long tradition of opposing every constructive change in the markets, and such is its power that it may again prevail, unless the public understands and actively supports the proposed reforms."

Baruch was in the midst of the give and take between government officials and the New York Stock Exchange during the frantic months of 1969-1970, which included the paperwork blizzard, stolen, misused and misplaced securities, broker failures and liquidations.

Using documentation that few people outside the Commission would have been able to assemble or use effectively although they are in the printed record-Baruch draws a devastating picture of deceit, double-dealing, hypocrisy, incompetence and unprincipled and often bizarre behavior.

Consider the practice of hypothecation, "which involves pledging securities as collateral for a loan from a bank or, in certain circumstances, from another broker." That's customer money, not broker money.

Baruch produces figures that show that billions of dollars of customers' securities are hypothecated at any one time. At one point, he shows, just 10 firms had pledged $1.416 billion of customers' securities to obtain loans for themselves.

"The professionals," he writes, "control those aspects of the game which are not left to chance, and they keep it going by maintaining the illusion that the amateurs have a reasonable chance of winning."

Baruch is very cool but angry young attorney with an "establishment" background that produced many of the people he criticizes so sharply.

As he tells it, he was compelled by conscience to write this book after spending frustrating hours dealing with Exchange officials, whom he said "Run the game for the benefit of members, first and last," while posing as the small investors' guardian.

Congress, he stated in the interview, must deal with "the immediate need for further customer protection rules." That, he said, is the most pressing need.

Beyond that, he added, "It is fundamental that you cannot make meaningful reforms without doing away with self-regulation. It's a shield against regulation in the public interest."

In fairness to the New York Stock Exchange, and to Baruch and investors too, it would appear that his viewpoint be afforded a larger audience than a book can provide. That is, through Congressional testimony.

Students Concerned Over Restructuring

RALEIGH (AP) — Student leaders from North Carolina's predominantly black universities are urging the legislature to guarantee certain authority to local boards of trustees under the proposed restructuring of higher education.

The North Carolina Youth Organization for Black Unity — composed of black student government associations, student unions and other black groups — released Saturday a list of recommendations mailed earlier to the legislature's Joint Higher Education Committee.

The group recommended that the central governing board have only those powers delegated by the legislature and that local boards have final authority in the area of student conduct and administrative appointments, including chancellors.

The legislative committee voted Friday to submit to the Oct. 26 session of the General Assembly a bill that would give local trustees no powers except those delegated to them by the governing board. The provision is strongly opposed by regional university forces.

The black students also recommended that a minimum of 30 per cent of the governing board and the local boards for predominantly black campuses be blacks. The legislative committee provided that four of the

Turtledoves In Singing Contest

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (UPI)—Seventy two turtledoves recently fought it out in a singing contest organized by the Aquarists and Aviarists Society on Penang, an island city 210 miles north of here. The winning bird was imported from Bali by policeman Leiw Eng Peow, at a cost of $1,300.

32 governing board members must be black.

The letter was signed by Maurice Carter of Fayetteville State University, chairman of the Youth Organization for Black Unity; Terry Howard of Winston-Salem State University; Harvey White of N.C. Central University; William Alston of Fayetteville State; and Ronald Ivey of A&T University.

"Dr. Crane," she exclaimed, "my husband is beginning to call me a 'waddling walrus.'"

"For I need to lose 25 pounds, since now I weigh 155 but when we were first married, I was only 122."

"But the women in my club try to 'sell' me on their own 'pet' diets."

"And there are several of these diets, whose champions all claim they are the best."

"Dr. Crane, why are there so many publicized diets for losing weight?"

"And how can I lop off 25 pounds most easily?"

Dieting Strategy

Most of the publicized diets will take off weight, IF. And that big "IF" means, "IF" you follow them exactly. The trouble with most plump folks is the fact they tire of one dieting method and constantly hope to get another which will lop off excess upholstery by magic!

So women (and men, too) shift around from one diet to another. Here are the main things to remember if you need to lose weight:

(1) Beware of diets that use stimulating drugs which race your heart and thus increase your burning of fat via such acceleration of your "motor". Don't penalize your heart when it is your tummy that is in error!

(2) You can't "eat all you want" on ANY dieting plan unless you have shrunk your stomach!

If your stomach is accustomed to hold a full quart of chewed food, try to shrink it down till one pint will fill it.

Your stomach will resist this effort, for organs of the body develop habits and try to make us surrender to their whims!

An excellent method in cool weather to shrink your stomach is to reduce your fluid intake to one total glass of liquid the first day; then 2 glasses the second, and 3 glasses thereafter through the 10th day.

You thus dry out your stomach juices as your mouth gets cottony so you don't feel as much hunger.

(3) Limit your daily caloric intake to 800 calories for a woman and 1,200 for a man, with about 400 calories in protein foods.

Protein is vital to replenish worn out muscle fibers, including your faithful heart.

And protein is the ONLY food that loses 15 percent of its caloric value in the process of digestion!

(4) Take a vitamin ampule daily and you may need an aspirin tablet the first couple of days if you develop a caffeine headache!

For you should reduce your coffee, cola and tea input since their caffeine makes you hungrier.

Use half a cup at breakfast, if necessary, and skip them the rest of the day.

(5) At restaurants, order hot dogs or hamburgers without buns.

And at home, have your plates filled in the kitchen so you will not face loaded platters on the table as you dine.

For your appetite literally expands due to the amount of food in front of you!

After 10 days you will have lost at least 10 pounds which is such a delightful boost to your morale, that you then will continue on a more moderate diet that lops off maybe 2 pounds per week.

BRIDGE QUIZ ANSWERS

Q. 1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠Q10 ♥K7 ♦AQ1043 ♣7643

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 2 ♦ Dble.
Rdbl. 2 ♥ ?

What do you bid now?

A.—Pass. In this type of situation it is proper to give partner the courtesy of the road. You are not in position at this time to determine what will be the best course of action. Partner's redouble announces not only that he has a good holding but that the situation is well in hand.

Q. 2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠K10962 ♥K2 ♦9 ♣Q10762

The bidding has proceeded:

West North East South
1 ♥ 2 ♦ 2 ♥ ?

What do you bid?

A.—Pass. While it is tempting to enter the bidding, no appropriate call is available. Had partner been interested in hearing about your suits he very likely would have chosen to double originally. If his hand is composed essentially of diamonds, any action on your part might lead to serious trouble.

Q. 3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠6 ♥AKQ10 ♦A864 ♣AJ108

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East
1 ♥ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
2 ♣ Pass 4 ♣ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—Five diamonds. You have not yet begun to describe the strength of your hand. In view of partner's vigorous action over what may prove to be a near minimum in your hand, the conclusion is inescapable that the hand will produce a slam.

Q. 4—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠1097 ♥AJ ♦AQ3 ♣A8752

The bidding has proceeded:

West North East South
1 ♠ Pass Pass Dble.
Pass 1 NT Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—Two no trump. Partner might readily have 10 or 11 points and yet have chosen to exercise restraint in responding to allow you leeway for having made a shaded double in the "reopening" position. Since your double was quite sound, you should extend one more chance to partner.

Q. 5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠1097 ♥AJ ♦AQ3 ♣A8752

The bidding has proceeded:

West North East South
1 ♠ Pass Pass Dble.
Pass 1 NT Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—Two no trump. Partner might readily have 10 or 11 points and yet have chosen to exercise restraint in responding to allow you leeway for having made a shaded double in the "reopening" position. Since your double was quite sound, you should extend one more chance to partner.

♠AQ4 ♥32 ♦65 ♣QJ865

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South
1 ♥ 2 ♦ ?

What do you bid?

A.—Pass. There is no action which you can take with safety. If you mention either of your suits, partner will probably be catered into bidding three hearts which will place you in a highly awkward position. When a free bid tends to project the bidding to the three level, the player contemplating such action should be backed up by a holding which is equal to an opening bid.

Q. 6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠AKQJ93 ♥106 ♦A1065 ♣3

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 2 NT Pass
3 ♦ Pass 3 NT Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—Four spades. Your hand is not strong enough to justify contracting for slam, but hope for slam is not abandoned by the four spade bid. The very fact that you took pains to bid three diamonds, intending all the time to take partner out of his aggressively bid game contract, indicates your willingness to entertain the idea of a slam. If his points are first rate (aces and kings), he may proceed.

Q. 7—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠AQJ64 ♥7 ♦A865 ♠1072

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 2 ♦ Pass
2 ♠ Pass 3 ♠ Pass
3 ♦ Pass 3 ♥ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—Four diamonds. You possess a good fit for the diamonds and should so indicate by returning to that suit. Do not make the mistake of bidding three no trump. Partner was in position to make that call himself, but bid hearts instead.

Q. 8—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠10963 ♥J832 ♦K6 ♣A93

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South
1 ♠ Dble. ?

What do you bid?

A.—This holding falls just short of the requirements for a redouble. An immediate raise should be offered only on a hand with less high card strength and more distributional values. You are forced to compromise by passing the time being with every intention of offering competition on the next round.
