Compromise A Victory For UNC Supporters

Higher Education Restructuring Enacted

RALEIGH (AP) — Far reaching legislation to place all of North Carolina's state-supported universities under a strong governing board was enacted into law late Saturday after the Senate and House overwhelmingly approved a compromise proposed by a conference committee.

The vote in the House was 106-3, and in the Senate 40-0.

The voters climaxed a hectic legislative session which saw the House vote 55-54 to reverse action it took Friday in approving a Senate amendment to the bill. This vote sent the bill to the conference committee.

The compromise worked out by the eight-member committee in two hours of deliberation represented a victory for supporters of the University of North Carolina.

The compromise calls for 16 members of the board of governors to be elected from the membership of the UNC trustees and 16 elected from the membership of the trustees of the nine regional universities and the North Carolina School of the Arts. In addition there will be two non-voting members selected from the membership of the state Board of Higher Education who will serve until June 30, 1973.

Enactment of the legislation represented a major victory for Gov. Bob Scott who has pushed for nearly a year for restructuring of higher education to end what he called "log-rolling" and "in-fighting" between the state's 16 higher education institutions.

In urging the House to accept the compromise, Rep. J. P. Huskins, D-Iredell, one of the conferees, called it a "fairly agreeable compromise."

Rep. Sneed High, D-Cumberland, who had spoken out vigorously Friday against the bill called it "a very workable and acceptable bill."

Rep. Ike Andrews, D-Chatham, a UNC trustees and also one of the the conferees, described it as "acceptable."

After the House vote, Rep. Jim Holshouder, R-Watauga, state GOP chairman, said the legislation will provide "the elements for a new system of higher education in North Carolina and that the overwhelming House vote "will give the people confidence" in the legislation.

"I urge you who are back in 1973 to give this new board a chance to work, to do its job ... and for goodness sake to make a mistake occasionally, for it will not be perfect," he said.

Sen. Russell Kirby, D-Wilson, gave a brief explanation of the conferees report and urged the Senate to pass it. He said he could not "get really exercised" about the makeup of the board since the views of the members will change when their constituency changes under the new system.

Sen. Ruffin Bailey, D-Wake, said he was "100 per cent behind" the compromise even though he had opposed earlier restructuring attempts. He urged the Senate to "put behind this board the strength and muscle of the General Assembly" by accepting it overwhelmingly.

Shortly after the enactment of the restructuring measure, the General Assembly adjourned until 1973.

The day's developments began Saturday morning when Rep. Jim Ramsey, D-Person, moved that the House reconsider the action it took Friday in approving Senate amendments to the bill. This represented an overnight reversal of position for Ramsey.

In explaining why he had changed his mind, Ramsey said, "I felt that when you put 32 cats in a bag you ought to put them there on an equal basis."

Ramsey said he felt that the new board of governors would need a mandate from the General Assembly and Friday's close votes did not give it a mandate. He said reconsideration might result in such a mandate.

There was no debate as the House took the first of four votes that were necessary to undo what it had done by such a narrow margin Friday.

The first vote came on Ramsey's motion to reconsider the vote by which the House refused Friday to recall the bill from the enrolling office. It was carried 55-54.

Then on motion of Rep. John S. Stevens, D-Buncombe, the House voted 56-54 to recall the bill from the enrolling office.

The next motion, from Rep. McNeill Smith, D-Guilford, was to reconsider the vote by which it concurred Friday in the Senate amendments.

Finally, the House voted nearly unanimously to refuse to concur in the Senate amended.

White House, State Dept. Seek Ways To Salvage U.S. Foreign Aid Program

By DANIEL RAPOPORT

WASHINGTON (UPI) —President Nixon and the State Department, stunned by the Senate's surprise death sentence for foreign aid, held emergency meetings Saturday in a search for ways to salvage the program that has showered $143 billion around the globe since World War II.

Secretary of State William P. Rogers said the 41 to 27 Senate vote Friday night to kill $2.9 billion in authority for another year of foreign military and economic assistance "will have a profoundly adverse effect on our relations in the rest of the world and on our national security."

Shortly after he bad farewell to Yugoslav President Tito, the President called in Dr. Henry A. Kissinger, his national security affairs adviser, to discuss the implications of the Senate vote.

At the same time, Undersecretary of State John N. Irwin II met with Aid Agency Director John A. Hannah and other top State Department officials. Rogers, in a statement, promised to "work deligently and closely with Congress" in restoring foreign aid.

White House Blamed

But Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield said he considered foreign aid dead in its present form, and that he would oppose any efforts to revive it.

Sen. George D. Aiken of Vermont, the Senate's senior Republican, and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., charged that the White House had only itself to blame for the vote that saw antiwar senators joining longtime conservative foes of foreign aid in killing the program.

Aiken, ranking Republican on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said the administration "over-lobbied" to defeat the Cooper-Church amendment that would have cut off all funds for U.S. military operations in Indochina except for troop withdrawals. He said this lost "quite a bloc of votes on the liberal side."

Aiken also deplored what he called the "utter lack of compromises" in the struggle between the White House and Senate critics. The administration, he said, "will have to come down to earth" and treat senators as "equals" instead of "hostile" opponents.

South Vietnam Threatened

Kennedy said Nixon himself invited the stunning Senate defeat last week when he "appealed to the worst instincts in the Senate and the American people" in denouncing U.N. delegates who cheered the ouster of American-backed Nationalist China.

"It comes with especially ill-grace now for him to criticize the U.S. Senate for taking him at his word and killing foreign aid," Kennedy said.

Aid Director Hannah said after the State Department conference that the best hope of salvaging the program rested in passage of a continuing resolution financing existing projects at last year's levels—a device already rejected by Mansfield.

Hannah said a foreign aid cutoff threatens South Vietnam's economy with collapse, and Rogers said it could wreck the Nixon doctrine of encouraging self-help among Asian nations.

Pipeline Empty

Hannah acknowledged there were unspent aid funds totaling $4.7 billion, but that all was committed to payment of outstanding orders. He stressed there was no money "in the pipeline" to keep foreign aid programs going.

Current authority for aid spending expires Nov. 15. The bill defeated Friday night, already cut back from Nixon's $3.2 billion request, would have extended aid authority until next June 30.

The bill included $139 million for voluntary U.N. agencies, $549 million in economic aid for South Vietnam, $300 million in military sales credits for Israel, $250 million in relief for Pakistan refugees, and other funds totaling less than half of all U.S. spending on economic and military foreign assistance.

Absentee Ballot For Primaries Wins Approval

RALEIGH (AP) — Tar Heels who are away from home during the party primaries next spring will be able to cast their votes by absentee ballot.

The Senate approved an absentee ballot bill for the 1972 primaries by a 29-8 vote after more than an hour and a half of debate. The House quickly agreed to six Senate amendments and enacted the measure.

The bill would allow qualified voters, including college students, to vote by absentee ballot in the party primaries, but not in the statewide bond elections to be held in May. The act would expire after the 1972 primaries and leave the 1973 General Assembly to decide whether the practice should be adopted on a permanent basis.

Earlier in the week the legislature adopted a similar temporary measure which would change the day of the 1972 primaries back from Tuesday to Saturday.

Five of the Senate amendments were added in the Rules Committee and were intended to cut down on the possibility of fraud in the use of the absentee ballots. They dealt with the methods of issuing and returning the ballots and the deadlines for their return.

The Senate also accepted a minor amendment by Sen. Herman Moore, D-Mecklenburg.

The body rejected two other amendments. One, by Sen. Ollie Harris, D-Cleveland, would have provided for mailing of the ballots by registered mail. But Sen. Zebulon Alley, D-Haywood, a sponsor of the bill, said this was not necessary and was not required in the general elections.

The Senate also rejected an attempt by Sen. David Flatherty, R-Caldwell, to increase the penalty for fraudulent use of absentee ballots in general elections.

Harris and Sen. Julian Allsbrook, D-Halifax, led the opposition to the bill with warnings about the election frauds that occurred in the 1930's.

But Sen. Jyles Coggins, D-Wake, told the Senate that young people are now enfranchised and "it is encumbent on us to give them a practical means of exercising the right to vote in their hometowns." He said otherwise the courts might allow them to vote — and take over the governments — of their college towns.

Saigon Under Guard

By DONALD A. DAVIS

SAIGON (UPI)—Forty thousand South Vietnamese soldiers and police went on full alert in Saigon Saturday night to ensure safety for Sunday morning inauguration of President Nguyen Van Thieu. Nearly 200,000 U.S. servicemen were confined to their bases throughout the country.

U.S. Treasury Secretary John Connally arrived in Saigon to represent President Nixon at Thieu's inauguration for a second term following his controversial one-man reelection by a 94.3 per cent margin of the votes.

Speaking on the eve of the inauguration Vice President Nguyen Cao Ky, who had termed the election a "farce," said he feared for the survival of South Vietnam under Thieu, and announced he was returning to active military service as an air vice marshal.

Ky's speech, broadcast over Vietnamese television, was his swan song as vice president. He was being replaced Sunday by Thieu's running mate, former Premier Tran Van Huong.

'Nonaligned' Tito Gets Pledge Of U.S. Support

By NICHOLAS DANILOFF

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Yugoslav President Tito flew west Saturday after briefing President Nixon on peace prospects in the Middle East and receiving assurances of U.S. support for the "independence and nonaligned policy on Yugoslavia."

After a final one-hour session with Nixon which the White House described as "warm and friendly," Tito and his wife Jovanka boarded a Marine helicopter on the south lawn to the thunder of a 21-gun salute, ending a two-day visit to Washington.

From Andrews Air Force Base, Md., they flew to Houston, Tex., on a tightly guarded tour that also will take them to Palm Springs, Calif.; Los Angeles, and Des Moines, Iowa, before they go on to Canada on Tuesday.

At Long Beach, Calif., Tito will visit the McDonnell Douglas Corp. plant, reinforcing speculation he is interested in buying American commercial jet planes and possibly combat jets.

Nixon and Tito expressed satisfaction with their countries' developing relations since Nixon's visit to Yugoslavia in September, 1970, but concern over the Middle East and growing tensions between India and Pakistan.

Tito, who disclaimed any role as mediator at the Middle East, disclosed Friday that Soviet Communist party Chairman Leonid I. Brezhnev had told him that Russia has no intention of staying permanently in Egypt and other Arab countries and would withdraw all its troops once a "solution" is reached in the Middle East.

The White House said Nixon had only sought Tito's assessment of the situation, in light of his talks with Brezhnev and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, but did not ask him to "play a direct role."

In a joint statement, Tito and Nixon pledged further cooperation in economic, scientific and technological ventures and work on a long-range program of cultural and artistic exchanges.

Hate, Not Glee In UN Vote Is Bush's View

By DANIEL RAPOPORT

WASHINGTON (UPI) —U.S. Ambassador George Bush said Saturday it was "Hatred" rather than "glee" which greeted the U.N. General Assembly's admission of mainland China and expulsion of Taiwan. But he urged continued American support of the United Nations.

"There are things going on there that benefit everyone in the United States, regardless of their political ideology," Bush said.

The ambassador met with a group of reporters to discuss Monday night's General Assembly vote and the events that led up to it.

His remarks reflected disappointment at the outcome, concern over the emotions exhibited and the hope that neither Congress nor the American people would retaliate against the world organization, which relies heavily on U.S. financing.

Mood Was Ugly

Bush said he did not think "glee" adequately characterized the U.N. mood. The White House denounced the delegates' activities Monday night as a "shocking demonstration" of "undisguised glee."

"That wasn't the mood of the General Assembly. The mood of the General Assembly that night was ugly. It was something harsh," Bush said.

What the television clips did not show, he said, was the hissing he received later when he rose to speak.

"I wasn't bothered by it," he said. "But I was concerned for the U.N.

"There was too much hatred. "Why? I don't know why."

Delegates Were Worried

Delegates, even those who opposed the United States, came to him afterwards with "expressions of concern" for the United Nations.

The results of the vote —a rejection of the U.S. two-China policy —came as a surprise to him. Up until the last moment, he added, he thought the U.S. resolution would carry. Some of the votes against it, he said, were cast by countries who had given "firm commitments" to support the U.S. position.

Bush said he still does not know why they did not come through.

Dust Off Old Explanation Of Eerie Mountain Lights

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The U.S. geological Survey chose Halloween eve to dust off a half-century-old explanation of the eerie "Brown Mountain Lights" of North Carolina that some Blue Ridge oldtimers still refuse to believe.

For years, there have been reports of "mysterious lights" hovering in the air above Brown Mountain, 12 miles northwest of Morganton, N.C., which some viewers believed came from supernatural causes or the glow from enormous mineral deposits in the area.

At a Tarheel congressman's request, the survey sent an investigator in 1913, who reported the phenomenon was nothing more than locomotive headlines seen over Brown Mountain from neighboring heights.

But the "explanation was too simple and prosaic to please anyone," the survey said. When the lights were seen again after a flood in 1916 —when no trains were running —the initial explanation was discredited locally and the survey dispatched a geologist, George Rogers Mansfield, to lay the legend of Brown Mountain to rest once and for all.

His detailed report, based on two weeks of observations in the spring in 1922, said 47 per cent of his sightings were automobile headlights, 33 per cent locomotive headlights, 10 per cent stationary lights and 10 per cent brush fires.

Mansfield's study, which the survey stands by officially to this day, attributes the strange shapes and colors of the lights to varying density of the atmosphere, especially in early evening, with humidity, mist, dust and fine particles refracting the lights and tinting them reddish or yellowish.

And although the lights seem to glow above Brown Mountain, most viewers do not realize they are standing higher than the crest of the mountain and are actually looking over it toward the floor of the Morganton Valley beyond, not toward the sky.

The survey reissued Mansfield's 1922 report Saturday because of "persistent inquiries concerning an old legend that refuses to die."

Education...

Before the last vote was taken, Rep. Perry Martin, D-Northampton, chairman of the House Higher Education Committee, told the UNC supporters it was obvious that "someone did his homework very well last night."

Martin referred to the politicking that went on Friday night to get absent members to the Saturday session and to get others to change their minds.

A comparison of the votes showed that five changed their vote from "no" to "aye," five changed from "aye" to "no," that seven attended Saturday who were absent Friday and three were absent Saturday after voting Friday.

One of those voting Saturday after being absent was Rep. C.W. Phillips, D-Guilford, who got up from a sickbed to vote "no."

The legislation will set up a new University of North Carolina System headed by the powerful governing board. It will have full authority to establish new programs in the 16 schools and to discontinue present programs and to supervise the budgets of the institutions.

Under the bill, the present consolidated UNC and the Board of Higher Education will pass out of existence next July 1. The plan calls for a merger of the staffs of the consolidated university and of the Board of Higher Education.

Those who served on the conference committee were Reps. Martin, Andrews Huskinds and McNeill Smith, D-Guilford; and Sens. L.P. McLendon, D-Guilford; Bailey; Gordon Allen, D-Person; and Kirby.

The restructuring movement got underway nearly a year ago when Scott called a group of educators and legislators to a conference in the executive mansion and told them he wanted to an end to what he called the "infighting" and "log rolling" among the state-supported schools.

Later Scott named the Warren Commission headed by former State Sen. Lindsay Warren of Goldsboro to study the issue. The commission made its report last May recommending the creation of a coordinating board to supervise higher education in the state. Scott backed the recommendation but later came out for the stronger governing board concept.

Squadron Is Withdrawn

SAIGON (AP) — A second squadron of U.S. Air Force F4 supersonic fighter-bombers has been pulled out of Indochina combat in preparation for return to the United States.

The pending withdrawal of the 480th Tactical Fighter Squadron from Phu Cat air base on the central coast will cut U.S. strength by another 650 men, the U.S. Command said today.

The Command also announced the withdrawal from combat of the Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, Americal Division artillery, resulting in a cut of 215 men. The Americal Division is being disbanded.

By the end of next month, U.S. troop strength in Vietnam is expected to be down to about 175,000 from its present 200,000. President Nixon will make another troop withdrawal statement about Nov. 15.

Souvenir Glass Sale Organized

Plans were made last week to organize a local sales force to promote the sale of All-American City campaign souvenir glasses as a means of financing Greenville's bid for All-American City honors.

The project, spearheaded by the Greenville Jaycees, will involve the sale of glasses, purchased from Carolina Peanuts of Robersonville, to raise funds to help underwrite the expenses necessary for the local bid in Atlanta Nov. 14-17.

Each glass, according to the Jaycees, bears an All-American City Nominee shield. The shield, it was pointed out, is silk-screened and baked-on in a durable process. All glasses are Anchor Hocking.

The glasses, which will be boxed, will sell for $5 per set of six, it was announced.

The Jaycees reported that persons interested in purchasing glasses for gifts or personal use should contact the Greenville Chamber of Commerce Merchants Association or Joe DeLoach.

According to DeLoach, anyone interested in making the trip to Atlanta in support of the Greenville All-American title effort should contact the Chamber of Commerce Merchants Association and secure reservations for the chartered flight to Atlanta.

Formal Entry Nearer

BEDFORD, N.H. (UPI)—Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, said Saturday he would probably announce his candidacy for the Democratic presidential nomination about the first of the year.

Muskie, considered the front-runner for the nomination, said of his announcement, "The time is getting close. I would think that just before or after the first of the year you'll see a rash of announcements probably including my own.

"I like to keep some element of doubt in the whole thing so that when the announcement comes there'll be some element of surprise," Muskie told a small gathering of politicians at the Sheraton Wayfarer motel on a one-day campaign swing through New Hampshire.

The senator said he would probably enter most of the 24 primaries next year including New Hampshire, Florida, Wisconsin and Rhode Island.

Labor Told Vote 'No'

LONDON (UPI)—Opposition Labor party leader Harold Wilson laid down the law Saturday to Laborite members of parliament, telling them they must vote against all legislation aimed at taking Britain into Europe's Common Market.

Wilson spoke at his constituency of Huddersfield in Yorkshire after attending a ceremony at which jeering students pelted Prime Minister Edward Heath with eggs.

The egg-hurling incident took place at Bradford University, where Heath received an honorary degree from Wilson, who is the university's chancellor. One egg splattered across Heath's trousers.

In his speech at Huddersfield, Wilson said:

"One thing must be made clear. No Labor MP can vote for any legislation consequential on Thursday's vote; no Labor MP can abstain on any legislation consequential on Thursday's vote."

Speaking at Bradford after receiving an honorary degree of technology, Heath said "Britain is now on the threshhold of a new world."

But about 500 jeering students indicated they did not agree. Some staged a sit-in at the main entrance to the auditorium to protest against his presence

Bandits Free Hostage

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) —A young man taken hostage by two bank robbers who shot a Sacramento policeman was released unharmed Saturday in Los Angeles.

Police said Ronald Tice, 22, flew home to Sacramento about two hours after he was freed. Police learned of his release from Tice's father, who received a telephone call from his son from Los Angeles.

A police spokesman said officers met Tice at Sacramento Metropolitan Airport upon his return and were questioning him.

Four hours after the robbery Friday, the men took Tice hostage in his car at a service station where he worked two miles from the bank. The robbers evaded a massive police search in northern California.

Low Profile Expected

UNITED NATIONS (UPI)— U.N. diplomats generally agreed Saturday that Communist China's delegation will present a "low profile" unlikely to disrupt proceedings in the world organization.

Peking notified Secretary General Thant Friday that it would send a delegation in "the near future." An informed diplomatic source said, without confirmation in official U.N. quarters, that the delegation could be expected about Nov. 4.

Foreign Minister Thanat Khoman of Thailand said the United Nations definitely would not be the same as before the assembly voted on Oct. 25 to seat Communist China and expel the Chinese Nationalists.

"There will be significant and substantial changes in the United Nations," Thanat said. "Or, more exactly, we can expect those changes to occur, not only in the General Assembly but also in the Security Council and generally in the rearrangement of political forces within the United Nations."

Thanat said it would take time to digest the significance of Peking's seating in the United Nations.

The Word: 'Think Big'

BUSHKILL, Pa. (UPI)—For a certain group of people in this Pocono Mountains valley resort this weekend the word is "think big."

That is the slogan of the 70 members of the Little People of America, composed of persons four feet, 10 inches and under in height, who gathered Friday for their annual district meeting.

The group seeks to help short people adjust to a world fitted to persons taller than five feet.

Robert Spector, district director of the organization for Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York, said, "This society places emphasis on conforming to a norm ... and our group aims to help short-statured individuals adjust psychologically."

In addition, the organization promotes the development and use of such inch-giving devices as gas pedal extensions and telescoping rods and tools for increasing one's reach.

Swiss Women To Polls

ZURICH (UPI)—A weekend of nationwide balloting began Saturday to choose a new Swiss parliament, with more than two million women eligible to vote and stand for election for the first time in Switzerland's history.

About 2.1 million—or approximately 60 per cent—of the 3,565,435 ballot-filled envelopes sent to Swiss citizens in recent weeks were addressed to "women," electoral officials said.

It was Switzerland's men, on the weekend of Feb. 7, who decided to make this dramatic change in the size and composition of the electorate by approving a constitutional amendment giving women full electoral rights.

South Vietnam Especially Hard Hit

World 'Stunned' By Foreign Aid Vote

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

U.N. officials expressed surprise and dismay over the Senate's vote to end U.S. foreign aid, and American officials in Saigon said without the appropriation South Vietnam can't get through the fiscal year.

The vote stirred no immediate official reaction in Europe, the Middle East and Africa, where because of the time difference most people were asleep. But some British newspapers viewed the Senate move as a slap against countries which supported the ouster of Taiwan from the United Nations.

The measure would have provided $549 million in economic aid to South Vietnam, although war appropriations under the $1.9 billion military procurement bill were not affected by the Senate action.

"We ought to go back to Congress and say, 'Do you really want to cut such things as refugee relief'" said one American official in Saigon.

The aid program for South Vietnam breaks down this way: —$315 million for commercial imports which include a wide variety of machinery, equipment and raw materials for industry, and some consumer goods. Of the total amount, $15 million earmarked for land reform.

—$150 million for an "economic support fund" to stabilize the loss of dollar revenues to the South Vietnamese government as the result of the continuing withdrawal of American troops.

Analysts in Saigon said there is not enough economic aid money available in the "pipeline" to carry South Vietnam through the current fiscal year.

The foreign aid bill would have provided $143 million for U.N. voluntary funds. The general U.S. assessment of $56.3 million was not affected by the Senate action.

A spokesman for the U.N. development program, which would have received $100 million of the U.S. money, said, "We are, of course, extremely concerned. We desperately need the United States for our multilateral aid."

He added that "a great country cannot abandon both its leadership and its responsibility. We just don't believe it will."

An official of the U.N. Children's Fund remarked of the Senate's action: "I think it's very regrettable. Clearly, it's the children around the world who will suffer."

The Washington correspondent of London's Daily Express wrote: "The action reflects bitterness against the small nations who turned against America this week to oust Nationalist China and admit Communist China. It also reflects America's dollar problems."

The Guardian of London said the Senate's action was "dramatic evidence of the isolationist wave sweeping the United States." It said the effect on some countries "is likely to be serious."

The Washington correspondent of the London Times said the foreign aid debate in the Senate "was overshadowed by the aftermath of the U.N. action last Monday," when the General Assembly voted to admit Peking and oust Taiwan.

He said the Nixon administration "failed to work actively" to save the foreign aid bill, adding: "It was evident tonight that an era which began with the post-war Marshall Plan has been decisively closed."

In Tokyo, officials at the Foreign Ministry expressed surprise over the Senate's action, which came as a stunning climax to years of grumbling in Congress over U.S. outlays and involvemet around the world.

"It would be a serious problem not only for Japan but also for all the recipient nations particularly in Asia, if U.S. foreign aid is substantially cut down because of the Senate action," they said.

Police Have New Tricks For The Sick Citizens

By DOUG ANDERSON
United Press International

Police have some new tricks this weekend for dealing with the sick citizen who spikes Halloween treats with needles or razor blades or something equally dangerous.

New laws in some places prescribe penalties as heavy as 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine for "purposefully introducing harmful objects into food." Other places are resorting to warnings and restrictions on the time or place chosen for trick-or-treating.

National and local agencies also warned of another danger —highly flammable costumes— which on Halloween and other such occasions take a toll of about 3,000 lives and injure another 150,000 persons a year.

The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) advised housewives that homemade costumes can be fireproofed by spraying or dipping them into a solution of seven ounces of borax and three ounces of boric acid in two quarts of hot water after each washing.

Last Year in Solon

The FDA also warned of such other hazards as plastic bags or unventilated masks which might cause suffocation and the fire hazard created by candles burning in flammable jack-o-lanterns.

In the Cleveland suburb of Solon, Ohio, Mayor William E. Price announced that trick-or-treating ends this year. One child in Solon was given a candy bar containing a needle on Friday, and another got an apple with a golf tee and a part of a hairpin in it.

"This will be the last year for trick-or-treating in Solon," Price said. "We'll go to some type of parties where we'll be able to control the situation."

In Louisville, Ky., an ordinance providing a penalty of 50 days in jail and a $100 fine for treat-spikers was rushed through the board of aldermen Friday night and signed into law at once by Mayor Frank W. Burke.

Needled Candy

Michigan's Gov. William G. Miliken also signed a new law Friday prescribing 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine for booby-trapping halloween goodies. In an unusual step, the law was declared effective immediately.

Despite the stiff penalty, authorities in Monroe County, Mich., southwest of Detroit, found needles or pins in candy in unopened bags in four stores. They were uncertain how the candy was needled.

"We don't think the needles were put in at the place of manufacture or en route to the store," said Deputy Sheriff Orrin Tyson. Police also said they did not believe the stores were to blame—suggesting that perhaps a patron had surreptitiously jabbed needles through the bags into the candy.

In Maryland, Health and Mental Hygiene Secretary Neil Solomon warned children to "accept Halloween treats only from people you know personally. Then inspect them carefully before eating them. If in doubt, throw them out."

In Chicago, Buffalo, N.Y., Atlanta and Philadelphia parents and children were warned to inspect treats carefully and to be wary of any whose wrappers showed signs of tampering. In Boston, Mayor Kevin H. White asked parents to discourage trick-or-treating.

In Marion, Ill., the city council authorized police to restrict trick-or-treating to children up to the age of 12 and to ask that parents accompany them. The Philadelphia police also advised parental supervision.

Flue-Cured Leaf Marts See Price Sag During Week To Lowest Point

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Flue-cured tobacco markets in North Carolina and Virginia recorded the lowest price averages of the season this past week.

The Federal-State Market News Service said the low prices also caused a rise in the percentage of tobacco placed under government loan.

On the Eastern Belt, most markets reported exceptionally light volume during the three-day week. No sales were held Monday because of the Veterans Day holiday.

Gross sales for the week amounted to 18,416,696 pounds averaging $76.58 down 82 cents from the week before. Season sales reached 312,806,229 pounds and returned $78.52.

The Stabilization Corp. received 18.7 per cent of the week's sales, bring season deliveries to 5.8 per cent.

Final sales were held during the week at Ahoskie, Washington and Windsor. Dunn, Kinston, Wallace and Wendell will close Tuesday, Clinton Wednesday and Williamston Nov. 24.

Volume on the Old Belt was heavy the first of the week but deliveries slackened considerably in the latter part of the week.

Gross sales for the week amounted to 27,308,927 pounds averaging $76.40 per hundred, a drop of 93 cents from the season low of the week before.

Season sales total 175,015,392 pounds averaging $77.70. The Stabilization Corp. received 8.4 per cent of sales, the largest percentage of the season. Its season receipts stand at 3.1 per cent.

On the Middle Belt volume was heavy for the week, but some of the one-sale markets experienced light sales after Tuesday.

Total sales for the three-day week amounted to 12,249,859 pounds averaging $76.03 per hundred. This was a drop of 65 cents from the previous week.

Season sales have reached 107,735,316 pounds averaging $77.39.

Some 11.6 per cent of marketings were placed under government loan, the highest proportion of the season. Season receipts were raised to 4.1 per cent.

Ellerbe closed for the season Thursday and Sanford will hold its final sale Wednesday.

Three Children Among Victims

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) —A British soldier was killed and three children were injured when a house used by the army as an observation post blew up.

The children had returned with their father to their former home in the Catholic Springfield Road area to collect their belongings when a bomb exploded in an upstairs bathroom.

The explosion wrecked the home which the family had recently sold to the army. It knocked a hole in a dwelling used by troops next door and blew down a big 15-foot-high army observation platform in the garden.

An army cook, Norman Booth, 22, was pulled dead from the rubble. Four other soldiers, one hurled off the platform, were hospitalized for shock.

Crashing debris injured several civilians who were passing by as well as three children of the John Doran family, who were moving out to make way for army occupation.

The outpost, like almost all security facilities in Northern Ireland, was heavily sandbagged, ringed with barbed wire and guarded by sentries.

The attack followed the bombings of eight customs posts on the border with the Irish Republic.

In raids carried out in 35 minutes, gunmen blew up customs posts in Killen, Tullydonnell, Cullaville and Fathom in County Down, at Aghalane, Annaghmartin and Clontibren in County Fermanagh and at Carrickduff in County Armagh, an army spokesman said.

At Clontibren, a man who arrived in a truck walked into the customs post, put a package on the country and said, "that's a bomb," witnesses reported.

The customs officer fled the post, which flew up on his heels and the man escaped in the truck, witnesses said.

Cuba Receives MIG Shipment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cuba has received its first new Soviet MIG 21 jet fighters in more than four years, Defense Department sources say.

The sources reported Friday five of the planes arrived in Havana aboard a Russian freighter last Sunday, shortly before Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin visited the Communist island off the Florida coast.

Brezhnev, Pompidou Sign Declaration Of Peaceful Coexistence

By ALINE MOSBY

PARIS (UPI)—Soviet Communist party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev and French President Georges Pompidou signed Saturday a declaration of peaceful coexistence in Europe ruling out the use of force and threats against neighbor states.

At the same time, however, they failed to reach an agreement on the reduction of western and Communist military forces in central Europe.

Acting at Pompidou's demand, according to French officials, Brezhnev underwrote the joint pledge of non-violation of other nations' frontiers in a special declaration ending his six-day state visit to France.

From Paris, Brezhnev flew Saturday to East Berlin for a visit western diplomats said they hoped would speed up an east-west German agreement on Berlin.

Second Pledge

It was the second such public pledge in two months by Brezhnev who has been widely held responsible for ordering the Warsaw Pact armies to invade Czechoslovakia in 1968. The 65-year-old Kremlin leader first upheld the need to respect each nation's own regime after visitng Yugoslav President Tito last month.

The Paris document, called modestly the Enunciation of Principles of Franco-Soviet Cooperation, said, in its key provision:

"Great importance is being attached to the fact that France and the USSR should closely cooperate in Europe in agreement with the interested countries, in order to maintain peace and pursue the relaxation of tension, improve security as well as strenghthen relations of peace and cooperation between all European countries by rigorous respect of following principles: inviolability of present frontiers, non-interference in international affairs of other nations, equality, independence, non-recourse to force or to threats."

Elysee Palace officials said the declaration was in no way a diplomatic pact or treaty. They said it was an extension and a broadening of some terms of the protocol on political consultations signed by Pompidou in Moscow Oct. 13, 1970.

France Holds Out

The officials said Pompidou and Brezhnev at their final meeting Saturday admitted they could not agree on what the Russians have long demanded ... France's approval for a reduction of forces in central Europe.

The French fear that while Soviet Russia's forces would remain close to France's frontiers, American forces would be pulled out of Europe altogether, officials explained.

The declaration said the Franco-Soviet cooperation was directed against no nation and did not affect any obligations France and Soviet Russia have towards third parties. Though the late President Charles de Gaulle asked U.S. armed forces to leave French territory, France still belongs to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

A parallel joint communique urged the early normalization of relations between the two Germanys so that the projected European security conference can meet in 1972 and the two Germanys be admitted to the United Nations.

Brezhnev flew to East Berlin from Paris for a "friendship" visit on his way back to Moscow. Officials said he will urge the East German regime to achieve inter-German normalization so preparations for the European security parley can be speeded up at preparatory meetings.

Some Measure Of Farm Relief

Farmers may be furnished some measure of relief from their losses due to storm damage through the declaration of this section as a disaster area.

Congressman Walter B. Jones reported last week that all 21 counties of the First District and Edgecombe, Halifax and Northampton Counties have been declared disaster areas.

Because of this the Farmers Home Administration officials say that anyone who has suffered loss is entitled to receive an emergency loan at the prevailing five and one-eighth percent interest.

The congressman also said he was working with the governor's office to qualify the area for a program carried out by the Emergency Preparedness Administration. If approved, this would provide additional benefit to persons other than farmers who suffered losses.

The storm hit North Carolina farmers worse than it was originally believed. Eastern North Carolina peanut crop damage was set at $25 million. Soybean and corn damage is estimated at another $25 million.

These are major losses in farm income for North Carolina and the individual farmers who are bearing these losses are bound to be hurt by them. Our area was fortunate that the big tobacco crop was mostly in the barns when the storm struck. However, the loss farmers suffered on other crops could mean the difference between profit and loss for the entire year for some.

They need all the assistance they can get.

Priorities Changed By Personal Involvement

It is certain that teachers in North Carolina are going to become more politically involved in the future.

Dr. Jerry Paschal, superintendent of Goldsboro city schools and chairman of the Political Action Committee for Education, told a Pitt NCAE meeting last week that many educators had been "politically naive."

"Rather than involving educators in negative and potentially damaging activities such as work stoppages, why not a positive alternative — why not PACE?" he said.

"The effect of PACE would be to change educator's role from one of passive acceptance to active participation."

More and more talk of political involvement is being heard in educational circles. The teachers have learned that this is the way priorities are changed in government.

Milestone In N.C. Justice

By MIKE KOHLER
Kinston Daily Free Press

KENANSVILLE — October 27th, 1961, might well become a day to remember in the history of criminal justice in North Carolina. The date could mark the end of capital punishment in the state.

It was on this date that Theodore Boykin, 31, an itinerant laborer of Duplin County was put to death for the "felonious rape and murder" of a white Rose Hill school teacher, Mrs. Lena Barnes, age 50.

The U.S. Supreme Court may order the practice of capital punishment abolished under the "cruel and unusual punishment" clause of the federal Constitution.

If it does so, the execution of Boykin could go down in history as the last legal taking of a life in North Carolina.

Events leading to the execution taken from testimony at the trial provide an interesting story of the complex world of justice in North Carolina.

The body of Mrs. Barnes was discovered by Duplin County Sheriff's deputies on investigation of reports that she failed to meet a dinner engagement. Her body was found concealed under a basement stairway of her home. Two .38 caliber bullet wounds were found in her chest. A coroner's investigation ruled she had been raped.

Christmas Day Arrest

Warrants for the arrest of Boykin, a former employe of Mrs. Barnes, were filed by Deputy Sheriff S. C. Dempsey on the basis of "confidential" information. Boykin was arrested on Christmas Day.

Boykin was placed in an undisclosed jail because "feeling here was not too good," according to Sheriff Ralph Miller. A hearing was waived on charges of rape, breaking and entering, and first degree murder, and Boykin was held without bond. Judge Chester Morris signed a Duplin Superior Court order committing him to Cherry Hospital in Goldsboro for mental evaluation.

Boykin was termed "sane and responsible, and able to aid in his own defense" by Dr. M. M. Vitols at the hospital. The trial began April 4, and Boykin pleaded not guilty to all charges. The second day of the trial, Judge Morris was stricken with a heart attack and the trial was continued.

Former Jeopardy Plea Denied

It resumed July 5, with Judge George Fountain presiding. He denied a motion of former jeopardy, based on the abortive start under Judge Morris, and testimony began.

Mrs. Mary Kenan said Boykin came to her home on Dec. 24 and gave her a number of personal items later identified as belonging to Mrs. Barnes. John Boyd testified that the fatal bullets came from a gun found in Boykin's possession at the time of his arrest.

SBI Agent H. T. Hartley testified that Boykin had confessed in his presence and four officers in the Duplin County Sheriff's office that he entered the bathroom window of the Barnes home Dec. 24. While searching the house, he heard Mrs. Barnes enter the driveway. Hartley said Boykin related that he stood behind the kitchen door as Mrs. Barnes, entered, and hit her several times with a poker.

No Defense Testimony

The defense offered no evidence and moved that the charges be dismissed. The motion was denied, and the jury retired to render a verdict.

At 10 a.m. June 9 the jury announced the verdict of guilty without recommendation for mercy, making the death sentence mandatory.

It is ironic that on this same day the North Carolina General Assembly defeated a bill for the abolishment of capital punishment.

A stay of execution was granted for an appeal to the State Supreme Court. The Supreme Court found no error in the Superior Court judgement.

A last-minute appeal for a reprieve was denied by Gov. Terry Sanford, and Boykin was executed Oct. 27, 1961.

So ended a chapter in the history of criminal justice in North Carolina, a chapter which may well mark the end of capital punishment in this state.

New Surge Of Isolationism

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

COLUMBUS, Ind. — Here in the heartland of pre-Pearl Harbor isolationism, a new isolationist spectre is rapidly taking on a shape that could drastically hamstring the ability of President Nixon — or any other President — to committ U.S. power to the assistance of an ally threatened by military aggression.

By substantial majorities, voters in 61 households here in Indianapolis flatly rule out "full" or even "partial" military aid to U.S. allies that might be threatened with aggression in four separate areas of the world: Western Europe, Israel, Southeast Asia and Latin America.

To obtain a rough yardstick of the new isolationism, we used pollster Oliver Quayle's index which measures a voter's reaction to American military involvement abroad in this descending scale: "full" military assistance (including U.S. troops), "partial" military assistance, "minimal" assistance and "none" at all.

For Southeast Asia, locale of the 10-year war in Vietnam, the results are unsurprising: 61 per cent of our respondents flatly oppose "full" or "partial" U.S. aid to help any country friendly to the U.S. that was threatened by military aggression. Instead, they chose either "minimal" aid or "non" at all, giving them an isolationist index of 61 per cent.

For Israel and Western Europe, the results narrowed. By similar ratios of 53 per cent to 47 per cent, our voters chose "minimal" or "no" U.S. aid in the event that Israel or such staunch post-war allies as France or West Germany came under the threat of enemy aggression.

Most surprising of all was Latin America. Our sample, taken with the help of Mrs. Lucille Sutherland, Quayle's Indiana field chief, showed that, by 63 per cent to 37 per cent, the low-to-middle-income voters we interviewed were against "partial" or "full" U.S. military assistance. Hence, as regards Latin America, we found an isolationist index of 63 per cent.

Those findings in the old Midwest isolationist heartland differed only in degree from recent samples of a thousand voters taken by Quayle in other areas of the U.S. In one Western state, never so isolationist as Indiana, nearly 500 voters opposed "full" or "partial" military aid to any U.S. friend in Southeast Asia in precisely the same ratio as our voters in Indiana — 61 per cent to 39 per cent. For Israel, Western Europe and Latin America, the division was much closer, but in both areas the index showed isolationist sentiment higher than interventionism.

In a Southern state surveyed by Quayle, where Vietnam sentiment has been far more hawkish, only the barest majority of 51 per cent to 49 per cent favored either "full" or "partial" aid for Western Europe and Latin America. For Israel, the split was 50-50, and for Southeast Asia, 54 per cent to 46 per cent "isolationist."

In Indiana, moreover, our sample revealed surprising strength for Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota, an announced Presidential candidate who, more than any other Democratic White House hopeful, speaks the language of the new isolationism.

We matched several Democratic contenders against President Nixon, only Sen. Edmund Muskie of Maine, the front-runner, lost fewer votes to Mr. Nixon than McGovern. Muskie actually beat Mr. Nixon, 29 to 26 (with Gov. George Wallace of Alabama getting 2 votes and 4 not sure).

Against Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington, the

Other Editors Say Hard To Explain

(The Wilson Times)

This is an age of contradictions, as shown in the growing crime record. All efforts are directed toward controlling crime, but it continues to grow, and among the younger generation.

There are holdups, stealing, destroying and every type of vandalism you can imagine. There are more agencies to assist those who want to get ahead than have ever been supported in this nation before, and on every level; national, state and local. But crime increases and at a faster pace than the population growth.

The laws give those arrested protection, and while paying the penalty, efforts are directed toward rehabilitation. There is the feeling that many who are able to work will not, and often it is difficult for those who would work to find the type of job they desire. Under no circumstances can an excuse be found for stealing the types of products you find listed in this newspaper every day, as record players, television sets, destruction of vending machines and the like.

The products taken generally demonstrate the desire for more than the person can pay for, or just the fun to be derived from obtaining what is desired and not obtainable. With this appears to go the feeling that stealing is the best way, and the only sin here is getting caught.

There is no reason for this feeling for the schools, the churches, the scouts and many other organizations offer training and recreation and teach the character-building qualities of life.

With all the arguing and justifying, no real reason can be found for the stealing unless it is the growing indifference to what is right and wrong, the breakdown of the moral structure. Then there is the argument that the Supreme Court decisions make arrests and convictions more difficult.

Another factor which has to be considered today, is the growing drug traffic. It is said this is one reason for the stealing of record players and television sets. These are so easily converted to cash.

So in this day of plenty, when the majority have more than they have ever had before, crime is rampant, also getting to the root and cure becomes harder and harder, because of many factors beginning in the home and extending to recent laws as upheld by the courts.

They'll Miss Slots

By DON DAVIS

SAIGON (UPI) —U.S. Air Force servicemen's clubs in Vietnam clear $90,000 a month from slot machines. But the men who plunk in the nickels and dimes that make up that total are not unhappy about their losses.

"It's my money and if I want to spend it in a machine, that's my business," said Army Staff Sgt. David C. Holiday, of Santa Ana, Calif.

His comment summed up the feelings of most of the men who play "the slots" in Vietnam. But the machines are being phased out of military bases around the world on the heels of congressional investigations into corruption at the clubs.

Army Secretary Robert F. Froehlke called slot machines a "corruptive influence" and ordered all Army bases everywhere to get rid of them by July. Following the controversial club investigations all slot machines were removed from Army posts in Vietnam earlier this year.

The Air Force still maintains slot machines in its clubs, but these too are being phased out and will be gone by next July.

The most direct result will be a cutback in entertainment at the clubs where the enlisted men and officers go to relax. The income from the slot machines normally is funnelled directly into the entertainment budget.

When the slot machines go, prices at the various clubs may increase and some services may be curtailed to make up the difference.

The suggestion of corruption is brushed off both by the men who use the machines and those in charge of them.

"It's just about a foolproof system of checks and balances," said T. Sgt. Kenneth Stout of Colorado Springs, Colo.,

SLOW DOWN

Complaint. Complaint. Complaint.

Some people are always complaining. The house is not properly run. This food tastes awful. Why don't they throw that guy out of office and let us put a man in his place who has common sense and character?

Would you be willing to take that place? If you did you would find people complaining against you, and you, probably, would be standing on your head.

Complaint is not wrong if it emerges in something truly worthwhile. The unendurable type of complaint is the constant type — morning, noon and night. Against husband, against wife, against unreasonable people that live on our street. Against the dog that runs through the flower bed and destroys its beauty.

When the thirteen original colonies decided to go out on their own they assumed a tremendous responsibility. Every two or four or six years we hear about the villainy of the political party to which we do not belong. "Why, that guy's a crook." "Our six-year-old youngster could do better than he does." "Why is it you keep getting later and later coming home from the office?" "That public school teacher is a mess." "The case of eggs I bought this morning was one egg short. You've got to watch that guy behind the counter."

For some people complaint is their existence. They wouldn't know how to get along if they weren't complaining about something. And some of their complaint is, of course, justified. But a complaint is a sorrowful project for the complainer and a matter of growing annoyance for the people who have to listen to such complaint.

Red China To Welcome Trade

By ELMER ROESSNER

President Nixon's warning that he goes to Red China with "no false hopes" leaving behind "no unrealistic expectations," may have been unduly cautious. While he may win no political converts, he may gain some eager economic relations.

China is starting its fourth Five-Year Plan. For it, it needs heavy machinery, steel, chemicals, fertilizer and know-how. The United States could be an important source.

The third Five-Year Plan was a success, despite the interruptions caused by the Red Guard. China's grain and potato production in 1970, according to Western China-watchers, set a record of from 210 to 220 million metric tons. Other crops were good, flue-cured tobacco rising from 300 million metric tons to 400 million.

Food is always the big problem in China. Its population of 800 million live in 3.7 million square miles compared to a population of 200 million in 3.6 million square miles in the U.S.

Leap Toward Industrial Power

The communist leaders of Mainland China have long talked about making tne nation a leading industrial country of the world. Now that food supplies, barring perhaps inevitable famines, have been solved, it can be readily conjectured that the new Five-Year Plan will be for industrial development.

To gain money for that, China must increase its exports and agricultural products are its major bet. China's exports in the past have been largely agricultural. Even in its hungriest days, Red China exported from 6 to 7 per cent of its agricultural production. China has exported seeds and oil, rice, livestock and livestock products, tobacco, silk, tea, fruit, potatoes, sugar, dried beans and peas and other products. It has also imported wheat, cotton, rubber, and other grains.

To gain foreign currency and credits for industrialization, the nation will have to increase exports of agricultural products and that will require huge imports of fertilizer.

Other Needs

It will also require machinery, trucks, road-building equipment, power plants, mining equipment, vast amounts of other materials and, most of all, huge amounts of technical guidance.

Russia and other communist nations can supply much of all this, Western Europe can supply much more if the Chinese can amass the valuta to pay for it.

But the great source, the vast pool of materials and skills, remains the United States.

The U.S. can sell to China, but it will involve buying from that country. Buying, of course, will open as many opportunities for importers as selling will open for exporters.

Mr. Nixon may find a rich economic bonanza in Peking. Chin up, Richard!

Has Your Baby-Sitter A Tear-Gas Revolver?

A tear-gas revolver is advertised in the Wall Street Journal as an "ideal gift for secretaries, college girls, nurses, baby sitters" by McInnis Co., Port Arthur, Texas. It's "not a gun, not a toy," and it shoots a six-foot cloud of tear gas 15 feet forward. Each cartridge contains an identifying powder visible under ultraviolate light to aid police. It carries four shots. No price is given and delivery is by Greyhound only.

Observations From Editorial Columns

THE 100-YEAR-OLD DRIVER

Levi Records of Edinburg, Ind., observed his 100th birthday Thursday and he still drives a car. These facts must be the cause of some mixed feelings on the part of other motorists who share the streets and roads around Edinburg.

Of course a good many drivers of 20, 40 or 60 are surely more dangerous than Edinburg's 100-year-old marvel. But the report that he passed his driving test last summer with a perfect score may say more about the leniency of Indiana law than the competence of Levi Records to drive a car.

In the campaign to improve safety features of our cars, far too little has been done to assure the qualifications of licensed drivers to drive safely. There are not many 100-year-old drivers on the road, but there are a lot of people licensed to drive who shouldn't be.

One factor in any serious attempt to reduce the number of traffic deaths and injuries must be stringent new requirements for periodic re-examination of all drivers. —Tulsa (Okla.) Tribune

QUOTE OF YEAR

"I know I'm somebody because God don't make no junk," a West Palm Beach high school student remarked during a conversation with the school counselor. The observation must rate as one of the top quotations of the year.

One of the greatest tragedies of the human race is that so many "somebodies" set out early in life to make junk of themselves. And overcrowded prisons, a growing drug problem and depravity in general offer proof that too many are succeeding in achieving that end. —Greenville (S.C.) News

CLEAN BLOOD

The rivers and streams are slowly being cleansed, thanks to public indignation, a large part of it coming from the country's youth.

That brings up something James A. Michener wrote in "The Drifters." He said: "It has perplexed me that our young people, who have been so judicious in opposing the pollution of rivers, should be so indifferent to the contamination of their own bloodstreams, which I would suppose to be of at least equal importance to them." —Charlotte (N.C.) Observer

SEAT BELTS

The government has decreed that beginning 1974 all new automobiles will be equipped with seat belts that must be locked before the vehicle will start. The theory being that everyone then will wear seat belts.

That, of course, is nonsense. What it means is that 95 per cent of the motoring public will sit on its forever-locked seat belts, while the other 5 per cent buckles up as it now does. Further, it means that there will come into existence another potential trouble spot in the ignition system of automobiles.

If the federal government truly wishes to encourage the use of seat belts — and we hope it does — we suggest that it begin immediately to encourage the states to enact uniform laws making it a traffic violation to ride in automobiles without the protection of a fastened seat belt. —Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution

A BETTER WAY FOR WASTE

Private enterprise took a giant step into the garbage disposal field in Broward County this week. An incinerator that is supposed to be pollution free began operating. It cost a half million dollars and will handle the same load as proposed public incinerators estimated to cost $3 million. The owner claims that the waste will be reduced to an odorless dust which will be used for land fill.

If the new plant is attracting a great deal of attention it is because there have been very technological breakthroughs in the handling of solid waste despite the near desperate all the time. It is being handled by methods that have changed very little in the last 100 years. It is being buried at dumps that create their own large pollution problems or burned in incinerators that pollute the air.

If the Broward plant proves it can dispose of waste better and cheaper it will represent not only a victory for free enterprise but a ray of hope in a most perplexing urban problem. —Miami (Fla.) Herald manager of the Airmen's Club at Saigon's Tan Son Nhut Air Base. The club averages about $8,000 a month from the slots.

"There are so many cross-checks, it would be almost impossible to cheat the system," Stout said.

"Under the present system, there's just no way" for a slick operator to take a rakeoff of the profits, said T. Sgt. Bill L. Jenkins, of Del Rio, Tex., one of the men who runs the NCO club. That club operates about 60 "one-armed bandits" and has a profit of better than $20,000 a month from them.

Col. Sig Jensen, of Colorado Springs, Colo., deputy base commander, said he views the slot machines as harmless.

"I have no feeling of the machines being detrimental to anyone's well-being," he said. But he said the Armed Services were "gun-shy" after the recent club scandals.

The men who use the machines also feel the slots are not a dangerous influence

"There's just no way a slot machine will corrupt you," said Airman Patrick Elbert of Waterloo, Iowa., while making one of his frequent yanks on the handle of a nickel machine. "The government doesn't force you to play them." He said he usually plays about $3 in the machines in a night and is about $10 ahead for his seven months in Vietnam.

Sgt. George H. Salter, 28, of Savannah, Ga., plays the slots "just once in a while —five or six dimes and then I walk away." Salter said the men who lose any substantial amount of money in the machines "were going to find some way to gamble anyway, whether by slot machines or playing cards in the barracks."

"It's just a time killer," said Airman Edwin R. Ruzicka, of Cleveland, Ohio. "I've had an over-all grand loss of about 100 per cent. But if it upset me, I wouldn't be coming in here."

Old Libs Never Weary Of Defending Alger Hiss

By J. J. KILPATRICK

Alger Hiss turned up in England last week, launching a five-week lecture tour. And sure enough, Alfred Friendly, senior correspondent for the Washington Post, promptly turned up to write a friendly piece about him.

There is one thing to say for the old Libs: They never quit. They will go to their graves defending Hiss. For nearly a quarter of a century, this has been their ultimate touchstone. One imagines that whenever the Bilderbergers meet or the Council of Foreign Relations convenes, a guard is posted to question arriving guests: "Do you believe in the innocence of Alger Hiss?" "I believe." "Then enter the inner sanctum."

Yet it is a curious thing—one of those rainy-day reminders of approaching age—that a whole generation has grown up that knew not Alger Hiss. I put the question to a young lady of 25. She thought he was the Nazi, you know, who had escaped and spent so many years in prison. And Chambers? Whittaker Chambers? A dead blank.

Friendly's interview brought it all flooding back. For the record, my children, Hiss was the impeccable young lawyer who emerged from Johns Hopkins and Harvard Law to become secretary to Mr. Justice Holmes, later a high-ranking attorney in the State Department, adviser in 1945 to Roosevelt at Yalta, president of the Carnegie Endowment for World Peace. In the summer of 1948, when the drama began to unfold, he was 43; and the world was his beautiful oyster.

Whittaker Chambers was known that summer, to the extent he was known at all, as a senior editor of Time. He was a pudgy man, squat and homely; his background was obscure. He had joined the Communist Party as a young intellectual in 1925; he had repudiated the party in 1937. For the last three years of his membership, he had served in Washington as a secret courier and minor functionary, attached to what was known as the Harold Ware cell.

On August 3, 1948, Chambers testified before the House Un-American Activities Committee, which then was investigating Communist infiltration of government. Chambers came unwillingly, in one sense, for he knew he himself would be doomed; but he came also from a powerful motivation to bear witness, to make atonement: "I sensed, with a force greater than any fear or revulsion, that it was for this that my whole life had been lived."

Chambers publicly identified Alger Hiss as a member of the Harold Ware cell. Four days later, in executive session, Chambers described his relationship with Hiss in meticulous detail; he told of the Hiss apartment, the Hiss cars, the Hiss dog, the Hiss hobbies. He recalled that Hiss, an amateur ornithologist, once had seen a rare prothonotary warbler.

But Chambers at first was not believed. Hiss denied everything; and Hiss was — well, he was Alger Hiss. The whole liberal establishment leaped to his side. Then Hiss came before the committee in executive session on August 16. Congressman John McDowell put the question casually: "Did you ever see a prothonotary warbler?"

"I have," said Hiss, "right here on the Potomac."

It was the beginning of the end. In January of 1950, Hiss was convicted on two counts of perjury; he served three and a half years at Lewisburg. Chambers died in 1961. To this day, the record still rings with the truth of Chambers' testimony; and it still reeks with the stench of Hiss's lies.

The revisionists hint at nothing of this. To them, Hiss remains a man of "rather charming gravity and grace." He is gentle of manner, soft of voice. A sense of injustice and outrage still burns within him, but he is filled with consuming hope of ultimate vindication. He is still bewildered at what he believes was a monstrous and deliberate frameup. He surmises that Chambers was psychotic. Or perhaps Chambers rigged a certain Woodstock typewriter that figured significantly in the trial.

It won't do. Chambers was among the sanest, purest, and noblest men of America in this century. And it wasn't the typewriter that trapped Alger Hiss. It started with a tiny warbler, "beautiful yellow head, a gorgeous bird." And so long as professional paintbrush artists defame the memory of Whittaker Chambers, those of us who respected that brave and brilliant man will remember that warbler and bear our own witness to the guilt of Alger Hiss.

Deprived Children Of The World Helped By Concerned Americans

By GEORGE W. WILBUR
Associated Press Writer

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — A South Vietnamese war orphan, an abandoned waif in Calcutta and a former street urchin in So Paulo, Brazil, will sleep under shelter with full stomachs tonight, thanks to a taxi driver in Chicago, a schoolteacher in Los Angeles and a banker in Atlanta.

The cabbie, the teacher and the banker are part of a rapidly growing army of concerned Americans responding to the desperate plight of hundreds of thousands of deprived children throughout the non-Communist world.

Without this army, millions of children over the past three decades might have perished from disease or starvation or become permanent physical or emotional cripples.

Instead, they symbolize a modern-day response to that ancient biblical injunction, "Suffer little children to come unto Me . . . ."

Such is the phrase chiseled into the cornerstone of the headquarters here of Christian Children's Fund, Inc., oldest of the international relief agencies dedicated to rescuing children the world over from the slag-heap of poverty, pestilence and despair.

Like their counterparts, Save the Children Federation, Foster Parents, Inc., Children, Inc., and others, CCF has compiled a notable record of accomplishment since its founding by the late Dr. J. Calvitt Clarke, an American missionary to China, in 1938.

Since the first bleeding infant was unstrapped from its dead mother's back following a Japanese air raid near Peiping in 1938 and later cared for in a CCF orphanage, more than a million children have benefitted from the organization's assistance.

In 1970 alone, some 115,000 children received help in over 850 CCF-owned homes or affiliated projects in 59 countries. More than $15 million, virtually all from individual contributions and bequests, funded the program, compared to a budget of little more than $10,000 in 1938-39.

"Thanks to the generosity of our supporters, we're able to continually expand," said Dr. Edmund W. Janss, Methodist minister and associate executive director of CCF.

"But, unfortunately, the need seems to escalate out of proportion to our ability to cope with it," he said. "For every child we can save, there are a hundred more who remain doomed."

It was CCF that originated the "foster parent" approach to worldwide children's relief, a formula now used successfully by most similar organizations.

Under this plan, monthly contributions of $12 or more from individuals and organizations are earmarked for aid to a specific child. The donor is supplied a picture and a biography of the recipient and is encouraged both to correspond with and visit the child.

Sponsors in the CCF army represent a cross-section of "middle America," Jamss said. They include singles and married couples, those without children of their own and those with large families, fraternities, Sunday school classes and business and industrial groups.

One woman in Virginia Beach, Va., sponsored 35 children at one time. As a result of vigorous interdepartmental competition, a factory in Wisconsin sponsored 53.

CCF provides multi-level children's relief around the globe. It operates with its own staff dozens of orphanages and special homes in six foreign countries, provides primary support for dozens more and contributes to hundreds of others.

While essentially geared to relief needs in foreign countries, it pours hundreds of thousands of dollars each year into assistance programs for poor blacks in the American South, disadvantaged American Indians in the West and Ghetto children in virtually every urban center in the United States.

If you like the idea of putting your hobby to work, you'll like the Army Reserve.

leading Democratic hawk and strongest advocate of more U.S. aid to Israel, 30 of our voters favored Mr. Nixon, only 13 Jackson and 4 Wallace (with 14 not sure).

The explanation of Jackson's performance, and the high percentage of "not sure," is only partly atributable to his lack of familiarity. At least as significant, we found, is his reputation as a hawk.

Accordingly, the new isolationism so apparent here poses problems not only of rising magnitude to President Nixon in the judicious use of U.S. power abroad. It might also have a profound impact on the Democratic party, in terms both of candidates and platform for the party's 1972 Presidential campaign.

Judge Really Shook Up Charlotte-Mecklenburg

By JOHN KILGO

Remember the vibrations from the California earthquake? Well, that was minor stuff compared to what Superior Court Judge W. K. McLean did to Charlotte-Mecklenburg.

They asked Judge McLean to rule on the constitutionality of the local option act that gave Charlotte-Mecklenburg the right to vote on liquor-by-the-drink on Nov. 5th.

Judge McLean said the election could be held — but he said only government-related buildings, such as the Coliseum, could sell liquor-by-the-drink. Otherwise, Judge McLean said, the local act regulates trade, and local acts cannot do that and be in tune with the constitution.

The Charlotte Chamber of Commerce wasn't pleasantly surprised at the judge's ruling. They will appeal to the State Supreme Court. But it's doubtful that appeal will come until after the Nov. 5th vote.

The court ruling had to be considered a victory for the drys, who are headed by attorney Allen A. Bailey. Bailey is an astute lawyer and he's the man who formulated the law suit. Also, every poll indicates that liquor-by-the-drink is going to win voter approval in Charlotte-Mecklenburg.

What will McLean's ruling do to the election? It's hard to say. The wets hope to overturn it but some of the enthusiasm has fizzled from their campaign.

As Bailey says: "As I understand it, we'll be voting to decide whether they can serve liquor-by-the-drink in government buildings. I think I'll go along with that kind of election."

The wets don't interpret McLean's ruling that way.

But as one man said: "I sure would like to own a restaurant and bar, in Charlotte's new civic center."

Most big banks and businesses dabble in politics. Some of them try to stay in the background — but the politicking is still there.

First Union National Bank has brought its political machine into the open, even though the bank prefers to call it its department of public affairs.

The political department is headed by Charlie Smith, a young, active, somewhat controversial Democrat who is always involved in just about every campaign that comes about in North Carolina.

The head man at First Union, C. C. Cameron, felt it was time to bring the Smith people out of the back room and acknowledge what they're doing.

Some people are critical of the bank for doing it. Others are praising Cameron for having the courage to operate in the light of day.

Make up your own mind.

4th District Congressman Nick Galifianakis, who still isn't ready to announce for the U.S. Senate, is carrying on a campaign that would tax a track star. He's jumping around the state making talks to groups everywhere. I wouldn't be surprised to see Nick making a talk on the Square in Mocksville ... Also in the Senate picture, Herman Moore of Mecklenburg says he is encouraged about his chances of running. The good guess is that Moore — who is now a member of the State Senate — will toss his hat into the ring for the U.S. Senate in about two weeks.

Northern Balking At School Integration Weakens Democrats

By GEORGE BRYANT

Time and events have a way of unmasking hypocrites, especially those in elective political office.

Thus, the spectacle of Northern "liberals" in Congress back-peddling on school integration comes as no great surprise. They found it easy to don the non-bigot mantle and demand that the South integrate, forthwith. But now that they face the breakup of their own neighborhood schools, they are starting to sing a different tune.

It probably would be wrong, certainly at this time, to see in this development any relief for Southern states from strains placed on their public schools. It's more like misery finding company. But it has wide political implications.

A recent story in The Washington Post detailed what is taking place in Michigan's delegation in Congress. Pontiac, in the state's highly industrialized region, had to accept crosstown busing under court order in September. Now, a Federal Judge threatens to order integration of Detroit's majority-black schools with the white schools of the suburbs.

With this threat hanging over Detroit, seven members of Congress from the state introduced a bill to stall busing of students until all appeals have been exhausted. The Post's story called the seven, two Republicans and five Democrats, "certified Northern civil rights advocates and moderates all."

What prodded the Michigan members to action was a rash of protests, marches, meetings and resolutions by white parent groups, backed up a flood of mail reminding them of the 1972 elections when their seats would be at stake.

"Mississippi's John Cornelius Stennis has been saying in the Senate for three years that Northerners would lose their enthusiasm for desegregation the day that it reached their doors," the story noted. "The current philosophical and political rout in Michigan suggests that the senator was right."

Democratic power in this key industrial state depends largely on a black-working class coalition. The school integration issue could well lead to some upsets. Michigan's two black Congressmen have, so far, merely stood to one side as the controversy has developed. There is clear danger that the black vote might split. Many black parents don't care for busing.

The implications of the "retreat" by the Michigan congressmen go far beyond that state. For years, the National Democratic Committee has courted the "Black bloc." Nationwide, the black vote is relatively small. But it is a concentrated vote in many of the big cities in the North. And without it, the Democrats would be seriously weakened in such states as New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and California, as well as Michigan.

Signs so far this year indicate that in the 1972 presidential convention, black leaders will be very demanding. Their big threat is that they might back a black splinter party unless their demands are met.

There is no doubt that the black voting strength in next year's convention will be the greatest ever. Changes in convention rules guarantee that. There's talk of a "black caucus" to bargain with candidates on bloc support.

The black faction of the party may even put one of their own in a few state presidential primaries. If this strategy is adopted, the likely candidate will be New York Representative Shirley Chisholm. The threat is intended to force concessions.

Next to the big labor unions, the AFL-CIO combine and the Auto Workers, blacks are considered a main strength in the Democratic party. Labor is now very active in organizing blacks at the political level.

With all the would-be presidents now running for the Democratic nod and the growing splits within the party, there is ample reason to question whether the 1972 nomination will have any value beyond the publicity.

Balking by Northerners on school integration won't help.

Rustic Appeal In A One-Story

By GERRY BISHOP

A dramatic fireplace wall steals the show in the Jamison, a four-bedroom, contemporary home designed by the Associated Architects.

And the fireplace wall is as practical as it is charming. It serves as a divider for the kitchen and the living room. Appliances are built into the stone on the kitchen side. On the living room side there's a fireplace, log storage section and a char grille.

The living room is another pleaser. Its sloping ceiling and adjoining wood deck made the dimensions, which are spacious anyway, seem tremendous.

The architects have thought out the floor plan well. Activities are centrally located while the bedrooms stretch across the back.

Four Bedrooms

Altogether there are four bedrooms, two full baths, a dining room, kitchen, living room and two porches. Laundry facilities, furnace and water heater are located in the basement.

The living room and wood deck jut out to give the Jamison a T shape. Sliding-glass doors comprise one wall, providing access to the deck. In good weather the spacious deck could be used to advantage.

Measuring approximately 22 feet by 15 feet, the living room would be a center of family activities. The fireplace is a charming asset, as is the char grille.

The central location of the kitchen is ideal. It has an island counter containing a sink, dishwasher, cabinets and work space. The refrigerator, range and oven are built into the fireplace wall.

Open Space

The dining room, approximately 11 feet square, is tucked into a corner adjacent to the kitchen. The two rooms are open, adding spaciousness.

There's a choice of master bedrooms, since two of the sleeping chambers are identical in size and each is served by a bath. Their 15-foot-by-11-foot dimensions make nice accommodations.

The floor plan gives each bedroom access to a bath by providing each bath with two doors. The middle bedrooms also are of identical size — approximately 11 feet square.

Besides the wood deck, there are two porches which could be screened in for added comfort.

The Jamison has been designed for Southern living or as a fine summer home. It can be adapted for Northern, year-round living by constructing a basement along with heating facilities, under the living room. Access could be through an outside door under the large wood deck and plans are available for a spiral staircase in the closet labeled "coats."

The main floor has 1,420 square feet, the porches add 156 square feet and the deck includes 450 square feet. The overall dimensions are approximately 57 feet by 51 feet.

SMARTLY-DESIGNED T — This T-shaped one-story, the Jamison, features four bedrooms, two baths, a large living room which adjoins the wood deck, a dining room, unusual kitchen and two porches. A fireplace wall that has space for built-in appliances on the kitchen side and a fireplace, charr grille and log-storage section on the living room side divides the two rooms.

Predicts Two-Thirds Of U.S. Housing Will Be Factory-Produced

By DOROTHEA M. BROOKS

NEW YORK (UPI)—"By the end of this decade, at least two-thirds of all housing production in the United States will be factory produced ..."

This, the prediction of George Romney, Secretary of the U.S. Department of Housing & Urban Development (HUD), may, to some, conjure up row on row of flat-roofed, box-like dwellings in town after town across the nation. It shouldn't.

Industrialized, or systems, building is coming of age. There are problems still, but progress is being made—not only in the technical and cost aspects of factory building, but in the area of design as well.

By way of proof: the second Industrialized Building Exposition and Congress—INBEX-71—with its displays of some 300 manufacturers including 32 total structures (even one three-story model), building systems, components, building products, and equipment used in handling, transit and on-site erection, as well as consultative services in design, production and management marketing.

INBEX, held in the Kentucky Exposition Center, Louisville, attracted an audience of more than 15,000 professionals drawn from all phases of the building industry for five days (Oct. 31 to Nov. 4) of seminars, panels, workshops and roundtables on all facets of industrialized building.

The exposition is sponsored by the building industry publications of Cahners Publishing Co., in cooperation with the National Association of Building Manufacturers.

Marsh P. Trimble, Cahners vice president, publisher of Professional Builder magazine, and executive director of INBEX, discussing the role of industrialized building, said factory housing promises more and better homes for more Americans.

Rapidly soaring costs of land and labor, he noted, are increasing the selling price of new homes to the point where relatively few families can afford them. Only 20 per cent of American families, he said, can afford the normal monthly mortage and upkeep costs on a house selling for more than $27,000, which is what the average new single family home costs today.

There always will be the conventionally built, cost-is-no-factor, one-of-a-kind custom home, Trimble said, but if the goal is to be realized by decent housing for all Americans, and home ownership for those who want it, industrialized housing and land planning will have to provide the answer. They can, he believes.

Technically, Trimble said, just about anything that can be done by means of conventional on-site "stick" construction can and is being done in one form or another of industrialized building:

—Modular, three dimensional, cubical or box shaped units, one or more to a structure, completely factory built and finished, often down to floor and wall coverings, and requiring only to be put in place and connected together at the building site;

—Componentized, assembled on site of a variety of factory-built component parts, assemblies and sub assemblies;

—Precut or packaged, simply a conventionally-built house in which all of the structural parts are cut and assembled in a factory for erection on site with considerably less labor, time and expense than if all cutting and assembly work were done on site.

Mobile homes, Trimble explained, are a form of modular construction but, unlike other industrialized building, generally do not meet minimum FHA standards.

Leaving an attic unfinished enables a builder to offer a house at a lesser price to a family which either doesn't need upstairs rooms or would prefer to do the finishing when the space is needed and the budget permits.

A do-it-yourself job on an attic can cost as little as several hundred dollars to as much as several thousand, depending on the general floor plan and the kind of materials used. If the family can get by without a bathroom on the second floor, for instance, there is a sizable savings. Even if one is installed, the difference in cost can be considerable between a small one with only a sink and toilet bowl and a large one with a bath and-or shower.

Whether the attic layout is elaborate or simple, the excellence of the result depends on what is under the walls and ceiling; in other words, the framework. When the framing is installed properly, the walls and ceilings will have a neat appearance no matter what their composition. Also, if the framework is level and plumb, the task of attaching to wall and ceiling materials in much easier than if it is out of line even a fraction of an inch.

It is important that a sketch, no matter how crude, be made before hammering a single nail. The location of doors, built-ins and electrical outlets must be determined and marked, permitting the elimination of studs at certain points and the avoidance of additional cuts later.

The collar beams or joists already running horizontally across the upper area between the rafters can serve as a base for the ceiling. Additional joists can be added if necessary to make them 16 inches apart on center. And if you think the present location of the collar beams is too high for the ceiling as you visualized it, attach another set at a lower point.

The walls can be anywhere from 4 feet high to about 5½ feet. The top height is preferable when there are to be closets and built-ins, but the installation of gypsum board, plywood, hardboard or any material that comes in 4 foot dimensions is easier with knee walls close to that size.

There are several ways to attach vertical studs to the rafters. One is to nail the tops of them to the rafters. Another is to attach 1 by 3s to the underside of the rafters to form top plates. In either case, sole plates are nailed horizontally to the floor where the bottom of the walls are to be. The sole plates, 2 by 4s, should be nailed through the floor to the joists below. The studs rest on and are nailed to these plates.

Nothing should be left to the eye. Measure everything twice and constantly use a level and a plumb bob. No sole plates are needed where there will be doors, but the framing should be reinforced at the top and sides.

One extra tip: select the doors first, then build the framework to fit them. This avoids the problem of choosing doors that must fit framing already in place.

(Squeaky floors and stairs, sweating windows and walls, overflowing gutters and noisy plumbing are among the 35 household problems discussed in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," which can be obtained by sending $1 to this newspaper in care of Box 5, Teaneck, N.J. 07666.)

Here's How To Do It

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q.—There is a banging noise when we shut off the cold water faucets in our house. It also seems as though the pipes along the basement ceiling are rattling. What causes this and how can it be corrected?

A.—The causes include excessive water pressure, the lack of necessary air chambers and waterlogged air chambers. The noise can be diminished by seeing that all pipes are rigidly fastened to structural members, but what usually is necessary is the installation of air chambers, something that must be done by a plumber. However, first try draining all water out of the plumbing system, then refilling, which sometimes removes water from existing chambers and replaces it with air.

Q.—The dictionary tells me that linseed oil comes from flax seed, but it doesn't tell me what I want to know, which is the difference between regular linseed oil and boiled linseed oil and why some instructions call for the boiled type. Can you explain it for me?

A.—What you call "regular" linseed oil is referred to as "raw." It is recommended for outdoor use, but takes several days to dry. Boiled linseed oil (the container must have the word boiled on the label) has drying ingredients in it. When used inside, it drys in a few hours, although the excess should be wiped from the surface on which it is applied. To sum it up, raw linseed oil is generally recommended for outside use, boiled for inside use.

Q.—Every time I use toggle bolts or expansion anchors to hold shelves on our kitchen wall, the wall gives way at those points and the shelves come tumbling down. Is there some other type of fastener I can use that will hold permanently?

A.—Yes, ordinary screws. But they must be driven into the studs behind the wall rather than the wall itself. You can use toggle bolts or expansion anchors capable of holding hundreds of pounds, but the fastening will not be secure if the wall—probably of the dry type—will not support that much weight. It's the old story of a chain being only as strong as its weakest link.

Q.—One of our clothes closets is on an outside wall. If we keep the door open all the time, it is all right, but when the door is closed, the closet develops a musty odor. How can we prevent this? We want to keep the door closed.

A.—Try installing small, louvered vents in the outside wall. Two towards the top of the closet and two towards the bottom should provide enough ventilation to prevent the odor.

N. C. State University Answers Timely Gardening Questions

Q. Where do you take a soil sample — on top or underneath? (Mrs. E. E., Durham)

A. Take a core sample — that is a slice of soil — from the top down to three or four inches at several locations. Mix these samples together in a bucket and send about one-half pint of this mixture to the Soil Testing Division, North Carolina Department of Agriculture, Raleigh, N.C. (W. M. Lewis, extension agronomist)

Q. Is it time to plant strawberries? Or, when should I do this? (J. M., Reidsville)

A. The best time to transplant strawberries in the Reidsville area is March. Fall planting (late October-November) is okay, but plants sometimes fail to survive the winter. (Joe Brooks, extension horticulturist)

Q. The leaves on many of my oaks turned brown much earlier than they should have this fall. They looked as if someone had seared them with a torch. What caused this? (Mrs. G. C., Bessemer City)

A. Probably two or more fungi-related diseases attacking the trees simultaneously. Moist weather conditions in many areas enhanced the growth of these fungi this past summer. These same weather conditions also increased the effects of certain air pollutants, which may have caused part of the problem. The diseases probably hit them too late in the season to do permanent damage. Your trees should resume normal growth next summer. (Fred Whitfield, extension forester)

Q. Every morning I find a few white grubs at the steps of my house. They apparently get trapped at ground level each night. How can I get rid of them? (E. Y., Winston-Salem)

A. The white grubs you refer to are probably those of the green June beetle. They move about at night and on dull damp days. They have a peculiar movement since they slide along on their backs. These are real pests of lawns and should be controlled. Use carbaryl (Sevin) 50 percent wettable powder at a rate of two ounces in enough water to cover 1,000 square feet. (H. E. Scott, extension entomologist)

Useful Items In A Junk Pile

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures

"Operation: Junk" might be a big solution to the community rubbish problem in the United States.

Objects discarded would merely change hands, and the transition from junk to treasure might take no more than a few minutes.

At a typical town collection of large items that couldn't be removed by the refuse collector because of the town's overburdened dumping grounds, everything from refrigerators to toys was unloaded by townspeople, and in most instances, quickly corralled by bystanders in waiting vehicles parked on the town hall grounds.

One boy had a table taken out of his arms while looking for a place to put it. Another boy reported that a man picked up the iron stew pot as soon as he put in on the metals pile. The 20-year-old rusted pot had seen its day on the range. But it would make a fine flower container.

Nothing that had a semblance of usefulness was overlooked. One young girl clutched what remained of an enormous bass fiddle. She was trying to persuade another girl with whom she obviously lived that "it really would look nice standing up down stairs." The front of the fiddle was completely bashed in.

A man drove up with a couple of wicker chairs, and one girl said to another, who was maneuvering toward the door, "Sorry, I saw them first," and, then, as the man removed the first of two wicker chairs, she turned agreeably, and said, "you're in luck, he has another." The man looked at the chairs again with a puzzled expression.

The recirculating rubbish scene was that way for three weeks. Four pairs of leaky waders disappeared before you could say "trout stream." An old electric power saw with a non-running motor was snatched up at once. A refrigerator was carted away because an extra one would be useful for the family. Does it work? "We will soon find out," he replied. "If it doesn't we'll put it in the spring cleanup."

Such an object might circulate 25 or more times. But most things are useful for something, even if they don't perform in their original fashion, one girl pointed out, and "eventually someone will get it who will convert it into a storage cabinet or something."

That girl explained she had furnished an entire room from last season's pick-up. What she needed now was an area rug, "but they must disappear right away," she said. She had been scavenging for five days.

The town's fathers were pleased with this pick-up and there were comments that perhaps the town had been cleaned out, at long last. Did they realize that the "rubbish" was still in town and should it still be referred to as "rubbish."

As one girl settled for some bottles to be recycled, regretting she was too late for anything of value, she predicted that next time around there might be a waiting line, "and perhaps we should have town cards to restrict junk-digging to residents. I am sure lots of people come from other towns," she said.

Why do people discard items that might be sold? The consensus is that they do not get the price they ask or they are just too busy to find a buyer. Someone in the family begins harrassing them about the junk, and they close their eyes and part with a lot of things they may have have been saving for the second home, for the children "when they get married" or for that white elephant sale that has been postponed too long.

Some people may regret disposing of some things and others may have delegated the garage clean-up to others as indicated by one advertisement in the local paper a few days after this town's pickup was over. The black bordered advertisement read: "Reward for return of old straight-back chair with a broken seat. Left at the rubbish collection by error."

Toothy Advice For Youngsters

ATLANTIC CITY (UPI) —A two or three year old child can be an excellent dental patient if he is prepared properly by his parents, a specialist in children's dentistry reported at the annual meeting of the American Dental Association.

The aid of parents in educating the child about dental care should be enlisted so that the child learns to "accept the necessity for treatment and if possible, to cooperate actively in a pleasurable, enjoyable sort of way," Dr. Marvin Kozlov, of Park Ridge, Ill., told his fellow dentists.

Liberia's New President Sees Hard Road Ahead

By JOHN PLATTER

MONROVIA, Liberia (UPI) —Just after he became president three months ago, William R. Tolbert told his fellow Liberians he had "mountains to climb and giants to meet."

After 19 years in the shadow of late Liberian President William V.S. Tubman, the new president —who had been Tubman's vice president —was hardly known to his countrymen. In three months he has surprised and reassured them.

Tubman, however, still casts a long shadow in Liberia and it poses a dilemma for his successor. Tolbert has said he would forgive no one who slighted the late president, officially proclaimed "Father of Modern Liberia."

Tolbert recognizes the need for economic and administrative reforms in a country with virtually no civil service and an average annual per capita income of $140.

But how can he make changes without tarnishing Tubman's image and questioning his policies and methods?

When Tubman suffered a hemorrhage after a prostate operation and died in a London Clinic July 23, at age 75, he was a national hero and few even in Monrovia predicted the display of affection he was accorded during the funeral by the 200,000 Liberians who crowded into the capital.

Few Liberians yet know that Tubman, after an uninterrupted 27 years in power, left Liberia deeply in the red but bequeathed his widow, Mrs. Antoinette Tubman, a fortune abroad, estimated by official at about $220 million, making her one of the world's richest individuals. She could keep the Liberian administration in funds for nearly four years.

In a private interview Tolbert used a semantic distinction to tell how he plans to modernize Liberia without detracting from Tubman's posthumous image.

"All things are relative, you have good, better and best. If my administration proves a good one it doesn't mean President Tubman's was bad. The administration that succeeds mine may be better, more innovative," he said.

In a bold and —according to newspaper comment —popular move, Tolbert dismissed Tubman's two confidants on national security, C. Wellington Campbell, chief of National Intelligence, and James Bestman, chief of the Special Security Service.

"Hallelujah! There is no more getting rich overnight and no more tales to be told about innocent citizens," said the Sunday Mirror. It said Campbell and Bestman had used trumped up charges to jail innocent Liberians.

Another departure was that of Tubman's butler, who has left Liberia for the Canary Islands. The butler also was the keeper of the keys to the safe of the executive mansion. And he was a senator.

The new President of Liberia speaks with an American accent, like many Liberians, the descendants of freed American slaves who began settling along the western bulge of Africa 150 years ago. Liberians, too, have their "Founding Fathers," pilgrims who crossed the Atlantic to make their freedom proclamations on "Providence Island," a pear shaped, five-acre island in a peaceful lagoon beside Monrovia.

Liberia is a 43,000 square mile country the size of Ohio, with a population of 1.5 million. Its capital city of Monrovia was named after American President James Monroe, who encouraged the ex-slave settlement.

The Liberian president works at the executive mansion overlooking the domed capitol building. The legislature is one of the three branches of government established by the U.S.-styled constitution. Liberian currency is the dollar and Liberians have names such as "Ike" and "Al."

The new president, 58 and portly, the father of seven children and a former president of the 33-million member World Baptist Federation, speaks with the slightly stilted language of the lay preacher that he is.

Tolbert is "disposed" to see visitors and he told a recent international rice conference in Monrovia he was a rice grower by saying, "many may not know it, but I am gratified to indicate that I am a rice producer."

Rice is a serious subject with Tolbert. It is the staple food of Liberians and he moved immediately to fix its price and warned Lebanese traders, well-entrenched up and down the West African Coast, their future was in jeopardy if they exploited the people. Rice grows easily in Liberia but in 1970 the country spent $9.7 million on importing rice from the United States.

Liberia's problems include a literacy rate of 10 per cent, and barely 1,000 miles of paved roads. Although the national average income is $140 a year, the 70 per cent of the population engaged in subsistence agriculture earns $50 a year or less. Tolbert has pledged to even out income distribution.

He also has encouraged freedom of expression and stirred Liberians into public debate. His promised economic reforms include more educational facilities, improved communications networks and increased government participation in agricultural productivity. A day doesn't pass without some action, some new pledge, a major speech.

Some Monrovians have taken to calling him "Speedy Gonzales" and hope urban improvement also is on his list. The capital is a riotous blend of rusted tin roofs swarming around the occasional modern office block. Paved roads abruptly become corrugated earth tracks leading through the dense green jungle growth which covers most of Liberia.

Among the moves that Tolbert has made was his decision to sell the luxury ocean-going presidential yacht, a pet acquisition of Tubman's. He halved the expenditure on his own inauguration in January. He receives ambassadors in a business suit, unheard of in almost three decades of Tubman rule when only formal wear would do.

Foreign diplomats say Tolbert's activist image has excited Liberians and raised their expectations. If he can't fulfill these, and Liberia's debts and meager resources will constrain him, they say he may soon face rising frustrations.

The new president chuckled when a reporter asked if he could keep pace with his pledges, especially with an empty treasury.

"I am a man born in the rurals and I know the people and their wants. With God's help we shall improve their lot," he said, smiling and circling his index finger to signify Liberia's new slogan, "Total Involvement to Attain Higher Heights."

To the hundreds of native fishermen in their dark dugouts —who from the air look like black pepper dots bobbing on the Atlantic —the slogan may not mean much yet. But with other Liberians, they appear ready to give Tolbert time to try.

Fire-Fighting In Manila Can Be Tough In The Hot Season

By WILLIAM C. MANN

MANILA (AP) — What do you do if your ninth floor office or apartment in Manila catches fire? You get out and pray for rain.

The Greater Manila area— it's a little bigger than Chicago—has about 80 fire trucks, but only one has an extension ladder that reaches eight floors. Another truck has a 65-foot ladder, good for six floors. They are the longest extension ladders in the Philippines.

Add to this a notoriously poor water distribution system in which a hydrant's flow under the tropical sun often is only a trickle, and the conditions are right for millions of pesos in fire losses annually. The big damage comes during the Philippines' four month long hot season.

There are approximately 100 buildings in the city with more than eight floors, about 20 of them hotels and many others combination residential-commercial buildings.

The last big fire of the most recent hot season illustrates the city's fire-fighting problems.

It was a quiet Sunday afternoon, and flames began spitting out of the seventh-floor windows of a 13-story insurance building in Makati, the city's wealthiest suburb. The blaze was eating through the eighth floor when fire units arrived.

One ladder went up and a Filipino fireman scampered to its top. His hose, made impotent by low pressure, trained a stream on the sixth floor where it made office records soggy but did little else. The top seven floors were destroyed within eight hours.

During the first six months of 1971, which included the hot season, fire cost Manilans about $15 million. Twenty-nine persons were killed and scores injured.

Fire periodically devastates shantytowns set up by squatters, but Manila fire chief Federico Garcia said the city's major losses—human and financial—generally occur in the high-rise buildings.

"There's not even a law that staircases must be enclosed," Garcia said. "But we're not approving blueprints for buildings that don't enclose them. Anything to stop the fires and save lives.

"We need new equipment, but we don't have the money to buy it. We need more men, but we don't have the money to pay them."

To serve the city of 1.5 million inhabitants, Garcia's force has 60 officers and 390 firemen, whose monthly salaries begin at about $45. Jobs are tight, and he said he has no trouble finding men to ride the city's outdated trucks, some of which still use hand-cranked sirens. Suburban companies have fewer men for another 2 million people.

Mount Washington—6,288 feet —is the highest point in New England.

An old pastime is reborn across the nation

Bicycle Riding — Fun For All

A TANDEM BIKE . . . was Mr. and Mrs. Walter Blackley's gift to each other last Christmas. The Farmville couple rides their "bicycle built for two" mostly in the evenings and Sundays and their children, grandchildren, and friends enjoy it, too.

In the country, on campus, downtown, and at the shopping centers, bicycles are on the go with young and old alike.

Bicycles are the latest mode of transportation for some businessmen and students though they were around long before the automobile was even thought of.

Families have begun to turn to bikes for exercise and as a means of recreation as a family unit. Parents of children too young to ride bicycles often have carriers attached to the bikes so the youngsters can be carried. Some have even been seen with a preschooler on the back of the bike and a toddler in the carrier on the front.

Because of the fast-growing interest in bicycles, they are becoming increasingly difficult to find, even for local dealers.

According to the bike dealers in Greenville, some companies have been having trouble with manufacturing enough bikes to sell. And, several factories have reportedly had several extended strikes which also mires down production.

Local bicycle dealers have only limited supplies of bicycles in stock and are having difficulty in securing new orders. Some have only children's bicycles in stock and expect to receive new shipments just in time for Christmas shopping.

E.C.U. campus almost necessitated transportation by bicycle.

Students want bikes for transportation to work and to classes, especially those living on "The Hill" and in the women's dorms near downtown Greenville.

It has been called a bicycle fad, but dealers in bikes say that the so-called "fad" will last for the next five to seven years, with more to be sold each year.

Unlike many of the fads that have begun at the E. C. U. campus, the bicycle fad has yet to spread to area high schools.

Clarence Gray, the associate principal at Rose High School, said that to his knowledge, only about four students had been seen riding bikes to school. Secretaries at the school said the most students there drive the family cars or ride buses to school.

Styles of the preferred bicycles seem to depend on the age of the rider. Adult riders prefer the regular bicycles which range in price from $39.95 to $79.95.

College riders seem to prefer the lightweight English bicycles which have from three to 10 gears. These bikes, the fastest selling in the bicycle business, cost from $50 to $139, depending on the manufacturing company and where it is located and accessories such as baskets and lights that go with the bike.

Used bicycles on the market are now a rarity. Even used bikes in poor condition sell for much higher prices than in years past.

Leon Williamson, a salesman for Sutton's Service Center, says that he questioned several of his bicycle customers on their resons for buying bicycles.

Most adults, he said, wanted bikes for exercise for family outings. Some mentioned the fact that bikes were better for transportation to work since they cost little or nothing to run and were no parking problem.

Others said that the parking difficulty on the Salesmen at Cozart's Auto Supply Co. said that though the demand for bicycles is big, they don't get the kind the public wants to buy.

They said that the demand for bikes has risen steadily for the past year and are being purchased mainly by college students and adults.

The increased number of bicycles was confirmed by police department records of bike registration.

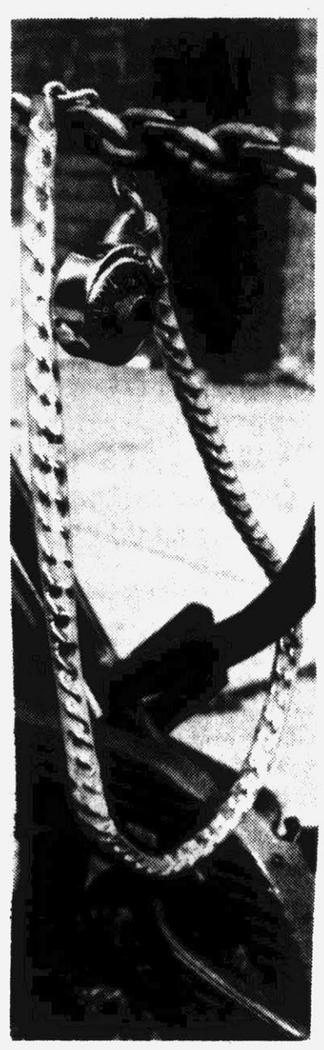
Their records show that registered bicycles have risen from 1,366 last year to some 2,700 so far this year.

A reason for the increased registration of bicycles is the enforcement of bike rules on the East Carolina University campus. And more E.C.U. students than ever own bicycles, especially on College Hill Drive where hundreds of girls living in Tyler Dormitory use bikes for transportation to classes from the hill.

The rapid growth of bikes was also confirmed by records from the bicycle retail dealers who say that more bikes have been sold this month than in any four or five month period in the past few years.

Police reports confirm the fact that more bike owners are being careful to lock their bicycles with fewer stolen and fewer confiscated than last year. Their records show that only 55 were picked up by police this year compared to 80 or more last year.

The Department holds a bicycle sale each Christmas to get rid of those bikes that have been picked up and have not been claimed. Ads are run in the newspaper for ten days, and any bikes not claimed, are sold at a public auction.



TO PREVENT THEFTS . . . locks are now abundant and almost a necessity for bike riders in and around Greenville. Bike locks come in all shapes and sizes, but come for one purpose—to keep a walking thief from picking up some new transportation.

'Arizona Utopia' Travel Film To Be Shown On Wednesday

"Arizona Utopia", the second of the travel-adventure series of films for the 1971-72 season, will be shown on Wednesday, November 3, at 8:00 p.m. in Wright Auditorium.

Robert Davis, noted lecturer, cinematographer and film producer, will be on hand to narrate the film and to answer questions.

In "Arizona Utopia", the scenes and cultures of the 48th state to be admitted to the union will be shown in all its majestic beauty and variety.

Davis will touch on archeological treasures, botanical and zoological wonders, and he will also cover the considerable Indian population of the state. Arizona is noted for its vast plains, for scenic mountains including unusual stone formations, and the Grand Canyon.

A full time professional photographer since 1951, Davis travels 40,000 miles each year in the U.S. and Canada on lecture tours that take him to large and small cities. His films emphasize home life, history, peography, religion, industry and recreation of the people he has filmed.

Davis has filmed on lacation in the U.S. and in many parts of the world. Before filming, he spends at least a year researching the area he plans to film.

Tickets for "Arizona Utopia" are available to the general public at $1.00 per ticket. Also, season tickets at $3.50 per person to cover all the films are available, with the price at $2.50 per person for season tickets when purchased for groups of 20 or more.

Soil Erosion Now Critical

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI)—Johannes van der Merwe, director of the government's soil conservation department says soil erosion in South Africa is critical. A government expert has calculated soil erosion causes about 400 million tons of valuable, fertile topsoil to flow into the Orange River annually.

The Republic is largely an agricultural nation, and agriculture earns the country about $1.7 billion annually, but, say the experts, the damage farmers do to the soil is estimated at much more than that.

Dr. Stefanus da Plessis, policy advisor to the minister of agriculture, said eroded farmland was entirely due to a "neglect bordering on treason" by farmers incapable of doing their job properly.

John Acocks, one of South Africa's top botanists, has predicted that by the end of this century, the Karoo Desert, in the heart of South Africa, would overrun farms in the northern and western Transvaal and reach into the lush Natal province. In the past 66 years, he said, the desert had advanced about 186 miles.

Part of the country's soil erosion problems can be attributed to the traditional farming methods of African tribes. Their goats' destructive grazing habits and their practice of overstocking cattle have led to denuding the veld in many areas, despite the efforts of agricultural officers to teach modern and conservationist farming methods.

Space Age Knowledge Is Applied

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Man's space-age knowledge is coming down to earth.

An example of this was demonstrated by scientists from a rocket propulsion company who used a hand-held metal cutting torch to quickly extricate a driver trapped in the wreckage of a car under simulated accident conditions.

The device, which looks like a Buck Rogers ray gun, is a specially designed rocket motor which, when held nozzle end forward, becomes a highly efficient cutting torch with a flame temperature of over 5,000 degrees.

Spokesmen for United Technology Center, developers of the new tool, said as far as they know it was the first application on earth of a rocket for other than propulsion.

Wayne J. Colahan, director of the center's project, said that in the past 10 years about 24,000 victims of auto accident fatalities in the United States were killed because rescuers couldn't get them out.

Victims Aided Swiftly

"Unfortunately, in the past, victims of these types of situations had to wait—sometimes for hours—until crews with the proper equipment could be contacted and brought to the scene," Colahan said.

"Now law enforcement personnel and others who are the first to arrive at the scene of such accidents can have with them the means of getting these people out immediately and on their way to medical attention."

The center spokesmen said the tool was a spinoff from work on the hybrid rocket engine which first took flight in 1968. The engine was the propulsion system in the Air Force Sandpiper supersonic target missile.

Help for Palsied

United Technology Center is located in Sunnyvale, Calif., near Moffett Field where doctors and scientists gathered to discuss applying space know-how to the nation's handicapped.

The symposium was conducted by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Amex Research Center and the United Cerebral Palsy Research Foundation.

Dr. John Billingham, chief of the biotechnology division at Amex, described recent concepts of adopting rigid space suits to aid the cerebral palsied.

He said the suit's strong but flexible "stovepipe" joints could be used to encase the limbs of patients and thus prevent their involuntary spasmodic movements.

Equipped with miniature motors and control systems, a patient could move a wholly paralyzed limb at will.

When all the general visitors have left, husbands, wives and their newborn are brought together in the patient's room where they share their new parenthood in privacy.

Ancient Norse Runic Writings On Coast Of Maine

By DAVID HASKELL

POPHAM BEACH, Maine (UPI) —Three rocks found near this jut of land and inscribed with ancient Norse Runic writing may be the first authentic evidence of Viking contact with the continental United States.

Some experts are convinced the rocks prove the Vinland of the Norse sagas is actually this coastal region, not Canada's Maritime Provinces north of here as is popularly believed.

Their authenticity is sure to be the subject of heated debate in archaeological circles, particularly since the man who discovered them became so frustrated after trying for a year to find out what the runes said that he buried the rocks back near where he found them.

Fortunately, however, experts in Viking runes were able to study and photograph the rocks before Walter Elliott, 43, of Quincy, Mass., shoveled them under.

Norse expert Dr. O. G. Landsverk of Glendale, Calif., head of the Landsverk Foundation which specializes in Norse studies, and his associate, Alf Monge, examined the rocks extensively before Elliott, who had loaned them, asked they be returned.

"In view of these finds I now believe that the Vinland that existed in the early 12th Century was centered in the Popham-Popham Beach area," Landsverk said after Monge had deciphered the coded messages on the rocks. Monge explained Viking runes generally contained coded secret messages and thus cannot be taken literally.

Monge's solution to the code "can only be described as fantastic in its historical connections and implications," Dr. Landsverk said. "This new development is really astmunding."

Elliott, a carpenter and sparetime beachcomber, found the stones by accident last summer while searching the beach for Indian arrowheads. He became excited when he noticed the strange markings on the rocks, particularly one that appeared to be a map. He first thought it might be a treasure map because of its similarity to this coastal area, just south of Bath.

In his desire to find out what the markings meant, Elliott began what turned out to be a frustrating year for him. At first, no one showed much interest in the rocks. He once spent five hours at Harvard — without success —trying to get someone to even look at them.

Elliott said he spent more than $1,000 sending letters to some 50 colleges, professors and various experts, telling them of what he had. He received 15 replies.

Among the most interested were Landsverk and Monge who persuaded Elliott to ship the stones to them in California. Elliott, however, grew impatient after a few months waiting for Monge's translation and asked they be sent back.

Still without the solution he sought, Elliott told the state of Maine about the rocks which, it turned out, he had found on state-owned land. Elliott said he had intended to donate the rocks to the museum at Bath, but when he received a reproachful letter from John W. Briggs, historian of the Maine Park and Recreation Commission, he became angry and changed his mind.

"If it is found that the material is indeed Norse in origin, it would be a most important historic breakthrough in the United States," Briggs said.

Elliott was ordered to give the rocks back under the implied threat of possible prosecution.

Elliott said he got so mad that he went up and buried the stones somewhere back at the site and then sent a telegram to Briggs, saying: "Let some other damn fool dig them up."

It is possible, however, that Elliott would retrieve the rocks if he reaches an agreement — the nature of which is not known —with the state.

When Landsverk first studied the stones, he said, he was a bit skeptical, but since has become convinced they are authentic.

"Physically, I see no reason except one that these inscriptions could not be authentic," Dr. Landsverk said. His one reservation was the fineness of the carvings which, if they had been exposed to prolonged weathering, would have been much smoother.

Landsverk believes the stones had been buried in the beach area and that the tides over the centuries slowly eroded the bank, causing the stones to tumble out fairly recently. This, he figures, could account for the small degree of weathering.

What was the "secret message" contained on the three stones? Monge, after months of working on the cyrpstic writing, said the message told of the trip of a Bishop Henrikus to Vinland. Henrikus, his church name, also was known as Bishop Eric Gnupsson whose ventures are referred to numerous times in the Norse sagas, church records, and the Icelandic annals.

The bishop, according to the annals, was believed to have died in Vinland, the name etched on the rock that contains the map.

The basic message on all three stones, Monge said, is more or less the same: "Henrikus sailed 34. 68. 6 October 1123." The "34" and "68" refer to days, Monge said, the latter being the sailing time to and from Vinland, presumably from Greenland.

On one of the rocks are various pictographs and a Norse word which means "seen by me, observed by me, or held by me," Monge said.

Henrikus is listed in the Icelandic annals as the "Bishop of Greenland and Neighboring Regions." After his death, a new bishop was named in 1124 for the diocese of "Vinland-Greenland," according to Monge.

He said there are "only four persons ... capable of 'faking'" these inscriptions —Monge himself, Dr. Landsverk, Monge's brother in Norway, and a friend.

"It would hardly pay us to have gone to all this trouble," Monge said. "These stones are authentic Norse items from the early 12th Century."

Destructive Starfish Is Spreading

COLOMBO, Ceylon (AP) — The "Crown of Thorns" starfish, Acanthaster Planci, responsible for the destruction of some of the world's finest coral reefs, has been discovered in numbers off Ceylon's east coast.

The starfish was observed by U.S. Navy Cmdr. Donald Walsh, oceanographer and deep sea diver, and science writer Arthur C. Clarke.

Walsh, in Ceylon for a lecture tour sponsored by the U.S. Information Agency, took time off to go skin diving with Clarke. Near Pigeon Island, some 10 miles off the coast of Trincomalee, which has one of the world's finest natural deep water harbors, they encountered what they considered far too many of the mollusks.

The starfish feeds on the living coral which provides natural barrier reefs around this 25,000 square mile island off the southern tip of India. Sea erosion is a major problem, particularly along the south coast, where man has attacked the reefs for their rich supply of lime. The result has been that monsoon waves have caused extensive coastal erosion.

Now the starfish could be the new predator. It already has wrought havoc on Guam Island in the Western Pacific and the Great Barrier Reef off the east coast of Australia.

Walsh, who along with Dr. Jacques Piccard holds the world record for the deepest dive made by man, has warned Ceylon the starfish spells danger unless its breeding is checked.

The Ceylon government has alerted the island's marine biologists to the danger.

Fund Screening For Gonorrhea

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) —The nation's first fully state-funded attack on epidemic gonorrhea is being launched by New York State. A gonorrhea screening program, using a recently developed culture test, is being made available without cost to all private physicians, public and private health clinics, county and city health departments. Principal target of the screening program: the female patient who is infected but unaware of her infection. This is true of four of five infected women, authorities report.

Geology Dept. Has Display

Slides and 16 mm. movies portraying geological formations of North Carolina and activities of the ECU Department of Geology will be shown throughout the meeting.

On display will be geologic studies conducted by ECU geology majors;, fossils from the coastal plain and minerals from the Spruce Pine, N.C. area.

The display booth will be staffed by ECU geology students. Attending the convention will be leading geologists from universities and laboratories throughout the U.S.

STONE SKIPPING— The combination of autumn, a lake, and those smooth, flat, river rocks was more than this lad could take. He was hooked on the ancient and honored tradition of stone-skipping. Framed by a willow tree at Bonham State Park (Tex.) the boy threw five 3-skippers, which as we all know are hard to come about. (AP Wirephoto)

Some Of The Dropouts Return To Straight World

By JURATE KAZICKAS
Associated Press Writer

Hippies was the word once used to describe them.

They were the dropouts—long hair, beads and bells, rejection of the straight world. They left their schools, jobs and homes to find a new life through drugs, communal living, a return to nature.

Paul tried college for a year, then dropped out to travel, eventually ending up in San Francisco where he started taking drugs to increase his spiritual consciousness.

Lilly, child of divorced parents, failed in her bid for a master's degree and dropped out in search of adventure and a family.

Martha was turned on by Timothy Leary, the LSD prophet and quit the straight world with her husband, Roger, to live on a commune and find an answer to the question of who she was.

Now, years later, these four have returned to society. Other flower children have joined them. For some, the drugs had palled, the dreams of a new revolution of love had crashed. Even the communes, they found, had their share of hypocrites and liars.

But for others, it was not a return of despair. They had found answers by their experimentation, and in traveling full circle, they found they could be more accepting of the very world they once rejected.

According to Berkeley sociologist Benjamin Zablocki, about 350,000 people are now living in the alternate society. At least a million-and-a-half, he figures, move in and out of the straight world. About one-half eventually return to society.

It's not always easy to come back.

"Each subculture has its myth to justify it as the best way of life, and when these kids learn it's not for them, they feel lost," says Zablocki, who has been studying communes for six years.

"There are those who tried to solve a lot of problems that way, by merely dropping out, and they couldn't," says Dr. Peter Weiss, a clinical psychologist in Madison, Wis. "But then there are those who come out of it with some understanding of the importance of community, compassion and sharing with others."

Interviews with several of these self-described returnees to the straight world reveal that while they didn't solve all their problems, they are all thankful for the experience and agree it was a necessary part of their growing up.

All have jobs now, some have cut their hair, and almost all have renounced drugs.

"Drugs woke us up to the spiritual and invisible side of life, and for that I'm grateful. But drugs eventually can make you crazy and blind to the outside world," says Paul Hawken, 25, who dropped out in 1965.

He now lives in Boston and is president of a macrobiotic food company, Erewhon, which he says is worth well over a half a million dollars. In a button-down shirt, corduroy slacks, he looks nothing like his former hippie self.

"I cut my hair because I saw that it created a shield between me and other people. I asked myself what was important, what's inside or outside? I want to be able to talk to everybody, soldiers, bankers."

And what he talks about now is his new appreciation of life. "There's not enough wonder about nature," Paul said as he ran his fingers through a mound of sunflower seeds. "Drugs, wars, it's all a death trip. I believe in creation and life."

Steven Katona still has hair well below his shoulders, but he likes it that way. He dropped out in 1967 when he visited a commune in Colorado. "It seemed like such a great life. No one was working. It really blew my mind."

He founded the Manera Nueve commune in New Mexico whose sole purpose, he admits, was experimentation with drugs.

Now the owner of a bar in Placitas, he says he works too hard to find time for drugs. He has money in the bank, a car, and lives with Sky and a little daughter, Happy. He dropped back in because he wanted to provide for his family and because he saw that meaningful work had a lot to do with happiness.

"Everything turned sour. There I was supporting the commune, and those jerks were just sitting around. I guess I did lose faith in my brothers," says Steve. "I used to think that the best in people would surface if no requirement was made on them, but that wasn't true."

"But I'm not bitter," says Steve. "I'm glad I did everything I did because I learned so much about myself."

The quest for personal discovery is often a hard road to travel. Lilly—that was the name they gave her on the commune—was afraid. Her master's thesis in archeology had been rejected. She was lonely and confused.

"Dropping out was the first real decision I made in my life, and at the same time I was frightened, ecstatic and joyous," she recalled.

She joined a commune called The Family near Taos, N.M. It was experimenting with encounter techniques.

"We were creating a new society. We were to concentrate on the present experience and experience everything. Our leader told us that was the only way to be a healthy human being," said Lilly.

Everyone had to give up all their possessions, change their names, give up their identity, "let it all hang out." Fifty people lived in a 5½-room house. It was a group marriage with sexual experimentation. But no drugs were allowed.

"Some people there were beautiful," Lilly recalled. "Sweet and vulnerable. But the leaders were unprincipled, I thought, and then for many reasons I became disillusioned."

The commune was $20,000 in debt. There was sickness and filth. In spite of the talk of love and honesty, Lilly saw the people as hustlers, con men.

"The people on the commune were told—we are the losers, the misfits. They had no alternatives in life, no place to go but The Family. At first I thought I was a loser, too, because my thesis had been rejected, my parents were divorced and I had very few friends. I thought the family could give me a home, growth, a realization of my self."

But then Lilly realized that she did have alternatives. "I had my inner resources. My mind, my education, my background were all important and I had been told to strip all these away."

Lilly left the commune after a few months. She has now heard that there is nothing left of The Family.

"We were told that society is rotten and that the Establishment and its people stink. But when I dropped back in I saw that it wasn't all that bad."

She went to visit friends in Boston.

"These people lived in gentle surroundings. They were people I could respect. They worked hard to achieve something and they looked at it and said it was good. They were very moral. It was beautiful."

She returned to school and successfully completed her thesis. Lilly, now 27, has a teaching job at a junior college in Seattle, Wash.

Lilly says if she had to do it over again, she would do exactly the same. "I'm proud I joined the commune. It was brave of me to drop out because the idea frightened me, but I did it anyway. But now I see it was brave of me to leave, to go to Boston, to finish my thesis, and stay in Seattle."

Roger and Martha Irwin work now at a college in Arizona where he, 32, is a teacher and she, 27, is an administrator. They own a $20,000 home in Tucson with a garden where cantaloupes and olive and almond trees grow. They have returned to society after six years of communal living. For both of them it was a long odyssey to discover themselves.

"I never felt I was dropping out," says Martha. "I wanted to find out who I was, and I thought that living with other people could give me the answer."

They visited Timothy Leary at his estate in Milbrook, N.Y. He told them to go back to Kansas and start a commune. In the spring of 1967, they founded Amitabba Ashram, which is Hindu for Boundless Light.

"It was a very crazy but a very happy time. Like first puppy love," recalls Martha. "We experimented with everything. We explored so many different ways to learn about ourselves. We knew each other inside out. The people on the outside all seemed so superficial. Theirs was such an empty life."

Roger and Martha were the only ones on the communes who had teaching jobs and found it difficult for that year-and-a-half to support the other dozen or more members. "Money had become a control game and we didn't want to play that anymore," says Roger. "So at the next commune, we made a rule that everybody had to work. Our commune was to be one in service to the community, and we organized a rehabilitation center for retarded children in an old funeral home that had 22 rooms."

They spent a year-and-a-half at that commune, called Ahimsa, Hindu for nonviolence, where for Martha it was still a battle with self, intense religious experiences and great joy in working successfully with the children. But that, too, came to an end.

They joined another commune, in Arizona.

"I felt I was in paradise. It was the most perfect place I could imagine," says Martha, her voice filled with happy memories. "I was really free. I could be or not be. Everything was so right."

Martha spent all her time there in total contemplation, often just sitting quietly in the garden. Roger helped manage the commune, did some carving, and built houses for the 40 members.

And then suddenly, it was time to leave.

"You go to a commune because you have needs and when there are no longer those needs, you leave. It was really a graduation for me," says Martha. "I was no longer on the way to growing up. I had nothing more to work out."

Martha realized that her great love was music, and she renewed her determination to become a successful singer and musician.

Roger says he found understanding that would have taken 10 years in the straight world.

The problems of coming back? "Well, it wasn't easy learning how to cook for two people after cooking for 40," laughed Martha. "And then suddenly, Roger and I were alone together for the first time in six years. It was very, very nice for a change, but I miss relating to other people on that very deep level we had at the Ashram."

Roger found it difficult to adjust to the time schedule when he began working at the college. "Not that it's hard to make an 8 o'clock class, but there's that sense of uneasiness when one realizes that every day one is locked into being somewhere at a certain time."

The Irwin home still has members of their communal days. Martha's hooked rugs in psychedelic patterns are on the walls. Sweet incense smells fill the rooms. A small Buddha statue is in the same room as Martha's piano. They own a TV but rarely watch it because they say the sunsets are so much more beautiful.

Roger's hair is still very long, but he says he'll cut it soon. His very personal reasons for wearing it that way no longer exist.

After all his experiences, Roger is disappointed most about one thing.

"The illusion is perpetuated in dropping out that you can get away from it all. But you can import the rat race anywhere. The same people are everywhere—the neurotics, the crazies, the hustlers. The problems are the same no matter where you go.

"Maybe that's the most important discovery I've made," says Roger. "There's no essential difference between being here or there. And part of growing up is to want to be where one is now."

Pirates Split Paladins Wide Open 26-13

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina University's Pirates turned a ho-hum performance for the first half into a Oh, Yeah! one in the second half, and zipped to a 26-13 victory over the Furman Paladins in Ficklen Stadium last night.

The win was the second in a row for the Bucs and kept their hopes alive for a break-even series. The Bucs now stand 3-5 on the year.

The story of the game lies in the fine performance of two of the Bucs on offense, flanker Tim Dameron and running back Carlester Crumpler.

Dameron caught two touchdown passes that put the Pirates into the lead, one covering 72 yards and the other 31. Both were thrown by John Casazza. Dameron's total yardage in five catches was 152 yards, just 17 short of the school record by Dick Corrada, set last year. The two touchdown catches tied the school record, held jointly by three other players.

Crumpler, who played his first full game at the running back position, showed them what it was all about as the heralded sophomore lived up to the reputation he's had but only shown flashes of in previous games.

The big Crump ran 21 times, picking up 110 yards, and scoring the other two Pirate touchdowns. His scores came on runs of four and 17 yards.

Quarterback John DeLeo picked up both of the Furman touchdowns scoring them both from the one yard line.

For a while, however, it looked like the Bucs had their minds on last week's victory at State with the performance in the first half.

The Bucs were fumble-fingered in the first half, losing the ball on three of four slips. They lost it twice more in the second half for a total of five losses, which also ties a school record.

The Bucs stayed in Furman territory early in the first quarter, but couldn't get a sustained drive going. They took the kickoff series from their own 29 to the Furman 43 before running out of gas. Then on the next series, they started at their own 48 and got only to the Furman 46.

Furman didn't get anything going until midway in the period when DeLeo punted away to Jack Patterson, who was hit just as he tried to field the ball. He fumbled and Brent Theiling recovered for the Paladins on the Buc 18.

DeLeo kept the ball on the first play and rolled down to the 12. Steve Crislip picked up five in two carries, and then John Wolfrom added three more. DeLeo barged down to the one on the next play, and went over from there.

Al Standiford's soccer-style kick made it 7-0 with 4:09 left in the period.

Furman came back inside the 50 late in the quarter, but finally was held at the 45 after a penalty threw them back from the 37. A fumble gave them the ball back on the 35, but the Bucs got it back this time on a Rusty Markland interception.

Late in the period, the Bucs got a drive going, moving from their own 33 to the Furman 34 before another fumble killed their drive.

But on the second play after Furman got the ball Patterson picked up another interception at the Buc 28 to turn the ball over again.

Casazza tried to hit Dameron on the first play but missed. On the next play, however, Dameron got behind the Paladin defense, and gathered in a long throw by Casazza at about the 25 and rolled into the end zone untouched for the touchdown.

Bob Kilbourne added the extra point, tieing it at 7-7 with 1:33 left.

The Bucs almost got another before the half ended. They recovered a Furman fumble on the kickoff at the 24, and moved it to the five in three plays. With 33 seconds left, however, Casazza was thrown for two straight losses back to the 27, and a field goal from there as the clock ran out was short.

But if the Bucs were lacking in the first half, they certainly weren't in the second. Crumpler, with only 10 yards at intermission, took over in the second half and went to town.

Furman threatened first, however, recovering still another fumble at the Buc 41. They drove to the 25 before a long penalty for holding nullified a pass down to the three. A field goal, from the 34 was short, and Patterson ran the ball back 44 yards from the end zone, setting up the go-ahead score for the Bucs.

Crumpler took an option across midfield, fighting his way down to the 36. He added five more in two carries, and from the 31, Casazza hit Dameron who had gotten open again, and it went for the second Pirate score. Kilbourne kicked again, and with 7:01 left, the Bucs were ahead for good, 14-7.

Just a few minutes later, the Buc defense held and the Pirates got the ball on their own 27 after a punt. After a short gain, Crumpler went outside again, getting 15 yards. Then from the 49, he went for 13 more to the 38. After reaching the 35, the Bucs were penalized five, but Casazza and Dameron again teamed up, down to the 13. Two plays lost a yard, but on fourth down, Casazza hit Carl Gordon for a first down at the four. Crumpler went around right end from there for the touchdown, and the Pirates held a 20-7 lead with 23 seconds left in the quarter.

After a brief Furman threat after another fumble, the Bucs took over on their own 37 after holding the Paladins on downs. Two plays and a penalty pushed them back to the 36, however. From there, Billy Wallace broke through on a draw and scampered down to the Paladin 17, a 47-yard romp. Crumpler broke loose from there and went in for the final Pirate touchdown, making it 26-7 with 10:28 to go in the game.

Furman then came back with its other score, driving from the 31 behind the passing and running of DeLeo. He hit Jim Warren at the 40, and then gained to the 45 on a run. He ran again down to the Buc 42, and then went to Wolfrom at the 25. He hit Carlyle at the one, and then sent over from there with 6:50 left.

Twice more in the game, the Pirates moved into Furman territory, going to the 35 before giving it up on downs, and the last time, just letting the clock run out with the ball on the 12.

Casazza finished with seven of 18 passing for 175 yards, while Wallace added 87 yards rushing. Monty Kiernan again led the defense with 19 tackles, as he continues to be the defensive stalwart for the Bucs.

The Pirates turn their attentions to the Davidson Wildcats next weekend, entertaining them for Homecoming in Ficklen Stadium.

Cavs Pull Out Of Cellar With Win

By MEL LANG
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C.(AP)—Quarterback Larry Albert passed for both touchdowns Saturday as Virginia outlasted North Carolina State 14-10 in a fight to escape the cellar in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

With Albert calling the signals Virginia hit strong offensively in the first half and then held on against N.C. State's at times strong passing attack to win its second game in eight starts. The loss dropped N.C. State to 1-7

The Wolfpack took a short-lived 7-0 lead in the first quarter with sophomore Willie Burden scoring from the two after an 80-yard march. Wolfpack quarterback Bruce Shaw, troubled all day by an erratic arm and a heavy press by the Cavaliers, hit for two big plays during the drive--a 24 yard pass to Burden and a 19-yarder to Mike Stultz.

Virginia came back on the next series. Albert picked up 17 yards through the middle, hit end Dave Sullivan on two passes good for 27 yards and then passed to Bill Davis in the end zone.

The Cavaliers took the lead after Kevin Michaels intercepted a Shaw pass on the Wolfpack 24. Albert again set up the touchdown, hitting Sullivan from 30 yards out as the junior flanker dived head first into the end zone.

Defensive end Stanley Land led the Cavalier press on Shaw during the first half, twice trapping the sophomore quarterback for big losses as Virgina deflected three of his aerials and forced him to overshoot on others.

Shaw's aerial attack improved in the second half with his favorite target being Stultz, who set a Wolfpack yardage record with six receptions for 155 yards. Halfback Kent Merritt, the workhorse of Virginia's offense, had trouble holding the ball and fumbled twice during the first half. He carried 21 times, picking up 108 of Virginia's 179 yards on the ground.

Tech Freezes Duke 21-0

By BILL ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Georgia Tech's vaunted defense stopped Duke cold Saturday and used a blocked kick and a fumbled punt to help defeat the Blue Devils 21-0 before a homecoming crowd of nearly 50,000.

The Yellow Jackets scored on runs of two and six yards by tailback Tom Lang and on a 10-yard pass by quarterback Eddie McAshan to split end Jim Owings.

Duke's deepest penetration was to the Tech 17 in the second half but linebacker Bruce Elliott ended the threat with a tackle deep in the Blue Devil backfield.

At that point, Dave Wright failed on the second of his two field goal attempts.

Tech's offense leaned heavily on tailback Greg Horne, who carried the ball 20 times for 114 yards. In the air, McAshan fired 20 passes, completing 13 for 123 yards.

Duke's big threat was fullback Steve Jones, playing in his first game in five weeks since an automobile accident. He lugged the ball 28 times for 123 yards, several of the runs making big gains. But when it was needed most, Tech's defense stopped the Blue Devils' ground attack.

Tech scored its first touchdown in the second quarter after halfback Mike McKenzie blocked a Jones punt and it was recovered by linebacker George Novak on Duke's 19. Three plays later Lang went over from the two and Bobby Thigpen kicked the first of three extra points.

In the third period, a Tech punt was fumbled by Duke safety man Rich Searl and was recovered by Owings on the Duke 46. On the first play after the recovery, Lang ran 36 yards to the Duke 10, with only a desperation tackle by Searl stopping the score. Three plays later, Lang went over from the six.

Tech's final score came with 1:11 left in the game after the Yellow Jackets drove 73 yards in five plays, capped by McAshan's pass to Owings.

The game was the 39th meeting of the two teams in what has been called one of the nation's longest uninterrupted football series. Tech has now won 22, Duke 16 and one ended in a tie.

McAshan was deprived of a touchdown in the scoreless first quarter when on fourth down and two on the Duke eight he fired a pass to tight end Mike Oven. Cornerback Ernie Jackson tipped the ball out of Oven's grasp and Duke took over on the 20.

Tech's Cam Bonifay also lost a chance for a field goal late in the second period when his 43-yard attempt soared to the left.

The victory evened Tech's record at 4-4, and Duke went to 5-3 with the defeat.

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's Tar Heels gambled on an extra point pass with two minutes left and made it to score a 36-35 come-from-behind victory over William & Mary in an explosive offensive battle Saturday.

A crowd of 38,500 saw the Tar Heels roll 75 yards for a touchdown in the closing minutes with Lewis Jolley scoring on a pitchout from the 13. Quarterback Paul Miller then hit Jolley for the two pointer that proved the winning margin.

William & Mary, led by the running and passing of John Gargano, had gone ahead 35-28 in the fourth quarter on an 80-yard touchdown drive with Dennis Cambal scoring from the one.

It was the sixth victory against two losses for North Carolina. The Tar Heels were led by Miller, who scored two touchdowns on runs of 10 and eight yards and passed seven yards for another to end Johnny Cowell.

Gargano scored touchdowns on runs of 23 and 15 yards as the Indians dropped their third against five victories. Phil Mosser also scored two touchdowns for William & Mary on runs of two and six yards.

Huskers Down Colorado 31-7

By ODELL HANSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Top-ranked Nebraska combined a stonewall defense with the cool quarterbacking and pinpoint passing of Jerry Tagge Saturday to rout Colorado's ninth-rated Buffaloes 31-7 in a Big Eight football game televised nationally.

Turnovers generated by the defense set up Nebraska's first two scoring opportunities and still another scoring chance made good in the third period.

In the only major defensive lapse, Nebraska allowed Colorado to connect on a 34-yard scoring pass from sophomore Ken Johnson to speedy Cliff Branch in the second quarter.

The victory margin for the defending national champion Cornhuskers compared with a 45-17 decision by second-ranked Oklahoma two weeks ago in the only previous loss suffered by Colorado, now 6-2, and served further to set the stage for an Oklahoma-Nebraska Thanksgiving Day showdown.

The game was the 27th without a defeat--Southern California tied early in 1970--for coach Bob Devaney's crew, ran the Husker win string to 18 and the season mark to 8-0.

Tagge's passes and the running of Jeff Kinney and Johnny Rodgers repeatedly provided key gains for Nebraska against the fired-up Buffaloes.

Tagge passed to Maury Damkroger for one Nebraska touchdown and sneaked for another. Kinney, the workhorse rusher, scored touchdowns on runs of 11 and three yards.

A 30-yard pass from Tagge to Rodgers highlighted a 65-yard drive for Nebraska's second touchdown and established the speedy flanker as Nebraska's all-time leading pass receiver.

Kickers Drop Match

DAVIDSON — East Carolina's kickers dropped a close match to the Wildcats Friday 2-1. The Cats scored in the final two minutes of the game to pull off the win.

ECU scored first as Tom O'Shea hit after six minutes had gone by in the second period.

Davidson tied it up in the next period as Tom Tuboee got the goal midway through the quarter. Steve Cuibertson put the winning point on the board with only 1:20 left in the game.

Pirates Brad Smith, Rick Lindsay, and Bob Poser were cited for their outstanding play. ECU was to have played Furman there yesterday but no information was available at press time.

Dickenson, Trevino Lead Sahara Tourney

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Lanky Bob Dickson birdied the third hole Saturday and tied Lee Trevino for the lead early in the third round of the $135,000 Sahara Invitational Golf Tournament.

Trevino, the second round leader and the pre-tourney favorite, parred the first three holes in greatly improved weather as he sought his sixth title of the year.

Trevino and Dickson, an outstanding amateur but an also-ran as a pro, were in the last two groups to get away on the 7,143 yard, par 72 Paradise Valley Country Club course, a desert layout plagued by severe winds and biting cold for the first two rounds.

A bright, warm sun broke through Saturday, however, and the temperature was in the 50s with relatively light winds.

With 15 holes to play in the third round, both Trevino and the 27-year-old Dickson each were three under par. Trevino, seeking to overtake absent Jack Nicklaus in the chase for the leading money winner's role, established the 36 hole lead at 141.

Dickson, a one-time American and British amateur champ, was one stroke back at 142 starting Saturday's play and moved into a tie with Trevino after the birdie on No. 3.

Bert Yancey, Kermit Zarley, Labron Harris and Don January were tied at 143 after 36 holes and were the only other players under par at that point. Zarley, Harris and January remained two strokes off the pace through three holes of play Saturday but Yancey fell back with a bogey on the third.

Arnold Palmer, one of the earlier starters, made the turn in 35, one under par. Palmer, also involved in the three-man chase for the No. 1 money spot, birdied the fourth hole.

That put him three over par for the tournament and six strokes off the lead.

Mildren Sets Mark As Sooners Win

By RON JENKINS
Associated Press Sports Writer

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Quarterback Jack Mildren fired two touchdown passes and shattered the all-time Oklahoma individual total offense record as the second-ranked Sooners hammered out a 43-12 victory over Iowa State Saturday.

Mildren scored two touchdowns in the romp as Oklahoma extended its perfect record through seven games.

Oklahoma raced to a 29-6 halftime lead on the passing and running of Mildren and the ground gaining of halfback Greg Pruitt. Keyed on throughout the game, Pruitt still managed to rush for more than 150 yards.

Mildren, who seldom passes since Oklahoma has averaged 487 yards per game rushing, hit split receiver John Harrison with a 41-yard touchdown bomb in the first quarter and tossed a 27-yard scoring pass to tight end Albert Chandler in the second period.

Iowa State got on the scoreboard on a 2-yard plunge by quarterback Dean Carlson in the first quarter and a 95-yard kickoff return by Willie Jones in the third quarter.

Oklahoma rolled up 500 yards rushing in the game despite frequent fumbles.

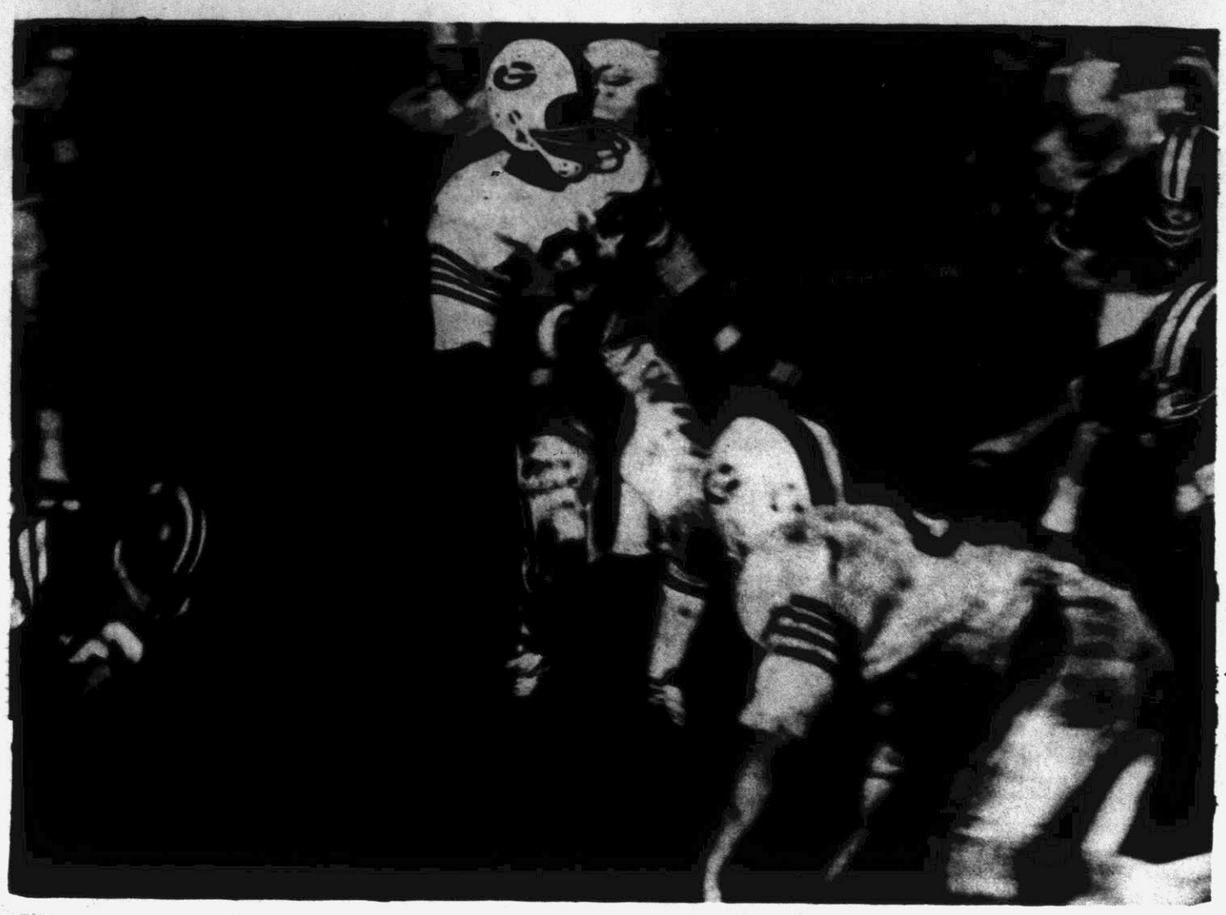
The Cyclones did manage to force the Sooners to punt in the second half--the first time Oklahoma has had to do that in two games.

The victory erased OU's last serious stumbling block before a Thanksgiving Day showdown for the Big Eight title and probably the national championship with Nebraska. The top-ranked Cornhuskers defeated ninth-ranked Colorado, 31-7, Saturday.

Mildren, an Abilene, Tex., product, rushed for 148 yards and connected on 7 of 12 passing attempts for 175 yards to erase the OU total offense record set just last week by Pruitt, who finished the day with 159 yards on the ground.

The defeat dropped the Cyclones record to 5-2.

Mistakes Give New Bern 20-11 Victory



Looking For Running Room

NEW BERN — Two fumble recoveries and a punt return did the trick for the New Bern Bears Friday night, bringing them their first Division II victory of the year. They used the breaks to put together a 20-11 victory over the injured Rose High School Rampants.

Rose was playing without their leading scorer and ground gainer, Al Hunter, who was knocked out for the year by a severe leg bruise suffered Monday night against Raleigh Enloe.

They also have lost John Conway for the rest of the way with a reinjury to his leg. And Robbie Cox was hurt in the contest with New Bern, near the end of the game and is questionable for the final game of the year.

The combination of the injuries, plus the slippery ball on a rainy field, was too much for the Rampants, who nevertheless, led at halftime, 3-0, on a 30-yard field goal by Phil Ragazzo.

The two fumbles, both in the third period, enabled New Bern to bounce right back, however, as Milton Kornegay scored on a 14-yard run, and Jo Edwards went over from the two. Willie Harvey then put the iceing on the cake with an 85-yard punt return.

Rose's lone touchdown came in the final period, on a eight-yard run by Calvin Moore.

The Rampant defense, which did a good job in the first half, crumbled before the rush of the Bears in the second half, and that was the story of the game.

New Bern got off the first drive of the game early in the first period, going down to the Rose 19 before the defense finally due in to stop them. Behind the running of Edwards and Kornegay, they steadily moved the ball along, with a 20-yard pass from Gene Austin to Harvey the chief play of the drive. But Rose dug in at the 19, holding there for two plays to take the ball over.

Rose twice crossed midfield early in the second period, but couldn't get a drive going. Then, they got a fine play from two of their players on a punt. Jim McDermott angled a kick for the sidelines deep in New Bern territory. The ball bounced on the one, and Lee Cherry quickly slapped it out of bounds there, putting New Bern in a deep hole.

They were forced to punt from the six and Rose got a good return from Calvin Moore, down to the Bears' 27. Matthew Clark cracked over left tackle for four yards and Reggie Perkins picked up five more on a double reverse. Clark got the first down at the 17, and then carried for eight more yards to the nine. Two more plays netted just a yard however, and on fourth down, Rose tried to draw New Bern offsides by using a play gleaned from William & Mary, in which the quarterback goes in motion. The officials, however, ruled that it was illegal (in opposition to other officials who have called it different in other games) and penalized Rose instead of New Bern.

Ragazzo then came on to kick the field goal from the 20 to put Rose into a 3-0 lead with 2:46 left in the half.

In the second half, Rose got a break on an early roughing the kicker penalty on a punt and picked up a first down on the New Bern 37. But two plays later, a pitchout went astray and New Bern's Reginald Moore recovered it on the Bears' 48.

That was the beginning of the end for the Rampants.

Edwards took off on a delay on the first play for eight yards, and Harvey picked up 15 on the next play, an option. Kornegay gained 14 yards down to the 15, and Harvey added one more yard to the 14. From there, Kornegay broke through the middle and went all the way for the score, putting the Bears in front. Greg Williams kicked the extra point and New Bern held a 7-3 lead with 8:11 left in the period.

It took just five minutes for the Bears to get back on the board. This time it was another fumble that set it up, oddly enough at the same spot, the New Bern 48. This time, Clark fumbled and John Hughes recovered for the Bears.

Kornegay broke away for 11 yards on the first play, but the Rose defense tossed Harvey for a three yard loss on the next. Kornegay got away again for 15 down to the Rose 19, but again the Rampants brought in a loss on the next play, back to the 30.

Another breakaway play, this time by Edwards, rolled the ball down to the four yard line. Harvey picked up two and then Edwards cracked over from the two for the score. Williams kicked again, and with 3:03 left in the quarter, the Bears held a 14-3 lead.

But the magic of the period wasn't over for the Bears. They held Rose and forced a punt on the first series after the kickoff. Harvey pulled in the ball at the 15 yard line, and following his blocking down the right sidelines. He got a couple of blocks and then was in the open, sprinting 85 yards for the final Bear score, making it 20-3 with 1:41 still to go in the period.

The Rampants frantically tried to get back into the game, but just couldn't seem to get the yardage that counted. They drove down to the 31 before a pass was intercepted at the 11.

Then, midway through the period, they got the ball inside Bear territory again, but again, they could not move it.

Finally, Cherry picked off a weird fumble at the New Bern 44 and returned it to the Bear 23. The Bear quarterback, Austin, was not even up against the center, but facing one of the running backs and giving instructions when the center apparently snapped the ball into Austin's stomach. The ball popped into the air and Cherry picked it off and rambled down to the 23, nearly breaking away for the score. A penalty, however, moved it back to the 38.

Three plays netted just six yards, but on fourth down, Moore went wide down to the 23. New Bern drew a penalty to the 12, but three plays netted nothing. A penalty, however, put it down to the eight, and Moore went around left end for the score from there. Dean Phillips ran over the two-point conversion to pull it to 20-11 with 2:14 left, but Rose never saw the ball again.

The Rampants, now 2-7 overall, and 1-4 in conference play, wind up their season next Thursday night, playing host to Goldsboro in Ficklen Stadium.

Field Goal Gives Tigers 10-9 Victory Over Wake

By RICK SCOTT
Associated Press Writer

CLEMSON,S.C. (AP)—The magic toe of Eddie Siegler booted Clemson to a 10-9 football victory Saturday over Atlantic Coast Conference rival Wake Forest.

Seigler popped a 30-yard field goal with just 37 seconds left in the game, capping a come-from-behind victory with Clemson scoring all its points in the final stanza.

The visiting Wake Forest team had led by 6 points from early in the first quarter.

The homecoming victory kept Clemson undefeated in the conference while Wake Forest dropped its third contest.

Clemson, its offense showing few signs of life during the first three quarters, got on the scoreboard when Quarterback Tommy Kendrick came off the bench in the final period.

Kendrick led his team on a 51 yard, eight play drive that culminated with Rick Gilstrap breaking through the Wake Forest line for seven yards and a touchdown. Seigler kicked the extra point.

Wake Forest regained the lead on Chuck Ramsey's 37-yard field goal with about 10 minutes left. The 3-pointer was set up by a Clemson fumble.

With time running out, Clemson killed one of its own punts at the visitors' one. A short punt out gave Clemson the ball in good position to move to the 13, from where Seigler made the soccer style game winning field goal.

The Wake Forest touchdown on a 55-yard drive was made by Larry Russell's eight yard pass to Kevin Byrnes. Ramsey's conversion try was wide.

It was the second surprise Clemson victory off Seigler's foot. He upset Duke earlier in the season with a field goal in a 3-0 victory.

The powerful ground attack of Wake Forest dominated the first three quarters, but found getting touchdowns impossible after its first march.

Both teams missed scoring chances when they turned the ball over on downs inside the five yard line during the first half.

Wake Forest's running backs Larry Hopkins and Ken Garrett found good holes in the Clemson line near midfield, but could only make short gains as they neared paydirt.

Clemson now is 3-4 for the season and 3-0 in the ACC, while Wake Forest is 4-4 in all games and 2-3 in the conference.

Citadel Gets 28-0 Victory

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — The Citadel exploded for three first half touchdowns and added another in the final period Saturday for a 28-0 football rout of Illinois State.

The winning Bulldogs, who entered the game as the nation's No. 6 team in total offense with a 448-yard average, piled up 523 to dominate the game. Both teams were 4-3 going into the contest.

The Cadets had many chances to blow the game open but penalties, interceptions and fumbles stymied their attack.

The Citadel opened the scoring with a touchdown drive of 61 yards in 10 plays late in the first period. Quarterback Harry Lynch scored from two yards out on a fourth down play.

Moments later, tackle Tony Cicoria recovered a fumble at the Illinois State 28 and five plays later The Citadel had another touchdown, Jon Hall going over from the six.

Lynch hit split end Brian Baima on a 69-yard scoring pass play early in the second period and another fumble recovery by Cicoria on the visitors' 25 in the fourth period set up The Citadel's last score. Bob Carson ran 18 yards for the touchdown.

Illinois State's deepest penetration, in the closing minutes, ended with The Citadel taking over the ball on downs at its 12.

The Citadel netted 276 rushing yards, Hall running 14 times for 125 yards; Carson 15 for 61 and Lynch 15 for 43 to lead the parade.

In addition, Lynch, a sophomore, passed for 247 yards, hitting 12 of 26.

Ron Bell led the Illinois State ground game with 13 rushes for 58 yards and Elliot Bruce added 45 on eight carries.

The biggest Illinois State threat, with three minutes to play, carried the Redbirds to a first down on The Citadel 15 after a pass completion and a penalty. But the Cadets dug in to regain possession at their 12.

Foreman Not Ready For Joe

By EARL GERHEIM
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — All undefeated George Foreman could talk about after scoring his 29th knockout in 32 pro fights was sharpening his fistic skills, not meeting heavyweight champion Joe Frazier.

"I've got a lot to learn. I'm still learning. I've got a lot of gym work ahead," Foreman said in his Madison Square Garden dressing room Friday night after he halted Luis Pires of Brazil at the end of four rounds.

"Dick (Sadler, his manager) has brought me a long way," the 23-year-old No. 2 heavyweight contender said. "But, I'm in no hurry."

The 215-pound Foreman battered Pires, 214¾, with winging left hooks and clubbing rights in the first round and had the former South American heavyweight champion in trouble at least three times. Pires, who is a part-time policeman in his native land, battled back gamely in the second stanza, landing several good punches to take the round on the scorecards of the referee and two judges.

Foreman rocked Pires with a barrage of numbing punches in the third, nearly closing his opponent's left eye and opening a cut under the eye.

Foreman battered Pires almost at will in the fourth, picking his spots and jolting the Brazilian with looping punches. Pires left arm dangled useless at his side in the final round and Referee John Lobianco stopped the bout shortly before the bell for the fifth.

Pires, who is now 18-8-1, said later he injured his left forearm blocking a punch in the second round. Dr. Edwin Campbell, New York State Athletic Commission physician, diagnosed the injury as a muscle hemorrhage and possible hariline fracture.

Glotzback On Wilkes Pole

WILKESBORO, N.C. (AP) — When it comes to money, stock car driver Charlie Glotzbach is willing to take a chance and figure that two birds in the bush are better than one in the hand.

The Georgetown, Ind., driver had won the pole position and the $500 to the top qualifier during trial runs in September for the Wilkes 400. But the Sept. 19 event was rained out and NASCAR officials said the 32 drivers could requalify in an attempt to better their positions but at the risk of doing worse.

Glotzbach, of course, already had the pole position, so NASCAR offered an additional $500 for the pole position as an incentive for requalifying. Glotzbach said he wanted the extra money, and set a track record of 107.558 miles per hour Friday in winning the pole position again for the $29,000 race Sunday.

Glotzbach was driving a Junior Johnson Chevrolet in both qualifying rounds on the five-eighths of a mile North Wilkesboro Speedway.

His elapsed time when he qualified Sept. 17 was 21.141 seconds. His elapsed time Friday on the asphalt track was 20.919 seconds.

The record broken by Glotzbach of 107.040 by Bobby Isaac in a Dodge in April, 1970.

Bobby Allison knocked Richard Petty out of the No. 2 front row spot in Friday's qualifying with a speed of 105.634 in a Mercury. Petty, who also elected to requalify, ended up in third spot with a speed of 104.943, compared to his 105.125 in September.

Dave Marcis moved up four spots to fourth place with his requalifying effort in a Dodge. The Wisconsin driver hit 103.954 Friday, compared to his 102.338 the first time.

Saturday's track action was expected to be confined to practice, although drivers who had not requalified still had time to change their minds for a second attempt.

Big Games On Sunday's Slate

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The National Football League's little old schedulemaker came up with a couple of dandies to headline this weekend's action as the season reaches the halfway point.

First, there is the showdown between Kansas City and Oakland, who share the American Conference's West Division lead with identical 5-1 records. And then there is the matchup between Miami, leader in the AFC East, and Los Angeles, tops in the NFC West.

And then, to sweeten the package, the schedule has Denver meeting Philadelphia, with both teams coming off big victories last week, and an interesting matchup between Chicago and Dallas, both a surprising 4-2.

Elsewhere Sunday, Atlanta is at Cleveland, Minnesota plays the Giants at New York, Pittsburgh plays at Baltimore, Cincinnati is at Houston, St. Louis meets the Bills at Buffalo, New Orleans is at Washington, New England plays at San Francisco and the New York Jets are at San Diego.

In Monday night's game, Detroit plays Green Bay at Milwaukee.

The dream match is the KC-Oakland affair, with both teams battling for the top spot in the AFC West and sporting similar records. Both clubs dropped their openers and have won five straight since.

Kansas City is led by Len Dawson, the conference's No. 1 passer and Otis Taylor, the No. 2 receiver. Oakland has gotten quality rushing from Marv Hubbard, who scored three touchdowns against Cincinnati last week.

There's another interesting matchup within this game with Gene Upshaw, Oakland's pulling guard, likely to be running interference for the Raider rushers squarely into his brother, Marvin Upshaw, who plays defensive end for Kansas City.

Miami and Los Angeles both take winning streaks into their interconference confrontation. The Dolphins have won three straight to move ahead of Baltimore in the AFC East, while the Rams have captured four in a row after a stumbling start and taken a one-half game lead over San Francisco in the NFC West.

Miami has two power runners in Jim Kiick and Larry Csonka who have both gained more than 100 yards rushing twice—and both times on the same day—this season.

LA's Roman Gabriel fired three TD passes in last week's victory over the Packers.

Denver stunned Cleveland with a 27-0 shutout last Sunday and Philadelphia won its first game of the season, beating the Giants 23-7.

Dallas, which figured to be better than its current 4-2 log, will try something new, alternating quarterbacks Craig Morton and Roger Staubach on every play with Coach Tom Landry calling all the plays from the bench against Chicago.

The Bears are down to their third-string quarterback, left-hander Bobby Douglass, but he pulled out a victory over Detroit last week.

Curtis To Fight NCAA Rule

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Football star Isaac Curtis of the University of California has reportedly filed a federal court suit in San Francisco challenging the NCAA's ruling that athletes must achieve a 1.6 grade point average on pre-entrance tests before becoming eligible.

The report by the Los Angeles Times today said Fred Rosenfeld and Stan Sanders, lawyers for Curtis and Cal teammate Larry Brumsey, filed the lawsuit Friday in U.S. District Court in San Francisco. An injunction hearing has been scheduled for Nov. 8.

The suit alleges that the application of the NCAA rule, as applied to Brumsey and Curtis, violated the athletes' constitutional rights, due process and equal protection of the law.

The school was placed on a minimum of one year probation when it failed to declare Curtis and Brumsey ineligible for not taking the required entrance test. The test is to determine if the student is capable of earning a 1.6 grade point average in his first year.

The probation prevents California from competing in any post-season athletic contests including the Rose Bowl. UCLA was similarly punished for a similar infraction by James McAlister. However, UCLA was not ruled ineligible for post-season play.

The suit seeks to enjoin the NCAA from continuing to penalize the Bears for playing Curtis, a junior running back and, sprinter on the track team, and Brumsey, a sophomore tight end. It also asks that the 1.6 grade rule be declared unconstitutional.

Celtics Knock Off Milwaukee

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Boston Celtics, parlaying a natural seven-eleven combination, have gained a tie for the lead in the National Basketball Association's Atlantic Division—the first time they have held or shared the top spot in three years, when they had the great Bill Russell.

The Celtics, who had lost 11 consecutive games to Milwaukee, ended the Bucks' winning streak at seven this season, handing the defending champions their first loss 125-114 Friday night.

The victory, coupled with Philadelphia's 137-135 double overtime loss to Phoenix, moved the Celtics into a tie for the Atlantic Division lead with the 76ers, each with 6-2 records.

Elsewhere in the NBA, Atlanta nipped Cleveland 98-97, Detroit beat Baltimore 119-105, Golden State trimmed Chicago 99-83, Buffalo edged Portland 124-119, and Los Angeles trounced Cincinnati 119-107.

"We wanted to win real badly," said Boston Coach Tom Heinsohn, sporting his new, long modish hairstyle. "We really hustled. We moved and moved, and we ran and we ran. We don't have great size, so we have to use our speed.

"And tonight we used all our speed," said Heinsohn, a member of the Celtics' dynasty that won 11 NBA titles in 13 years, before Russell retired on May 5, 1969.

Second-year pro Dave Cowens, Russell's successor at center, poured in 37 points and grabbed 15 rebounds for the Celtics, who took the lead for good 96-85 with 10 straight points in the final 90 seconds of the third quarter. John Havlicek contributed 24 points and Jo Jo Wite added 22.

Kareem Jabbar, formerly Lew Alcindor, had 43 points and 17 rebounds for the Bucks.

Connie Hawkins, who had scored seven points in the first overtime, including a tying field goal with eight seconds left, gave Phoenix its victory over Philadelphia with a basket at the buzzer of the second extra period. Dick Van Arsdale topped Phoenix with 28 points. Fred Foster was high for Philadelphia with 29.

Don May's 30-foot desperation shot from the right corner at the buzzer lifted Atlanta past struggling Cleveland. May led Atlanta scorers with 28 points.

Jimmy Walker's 24 points and Bob Lanier's 23 paced a balanced Detroit offense as the Pistons ended a three-game losing streak against Baltimore. The Bullets' Jac Marin had a game-high 25 points.

Baby Bucs Fall To Citadel On Safety

By CHIP LAMBETH
Reflector Sports Writer

East Carolina's lackluster Baby Buc offense could not get the points Friday night as the Bullpups of the Citadel squuzed past the ECU frosh 8-7. It was the first annual JC Charity Bowl.

The Pirates scored first as linebacker Danny Keply intercepted a pass at the three yard line and took it in for the touchdown. The kick by Jim Woody was good.

That was the way things went until the third quarter when the Pups got a TD on a Stuart Leslie to Eddie Westeruelt pass from six yards out. The extra point attempt failed.

In the fourth quarter, the Baby Buc defense, which played an outstanding game, got the ball back on its own five but four plays later Kemblie Farr pounced on Vic Wilfore as he tried an end around for a safety. The Bucs ran out of steam and could not pull out a win.

The EC Frosh took the opening kickoff but were held after a gain of only five yards, and had to punt. Leslie fumbled on the Citadel's first play and Keply recovered at the Bullpup 38. On first down, Robert Bailey hit Steve Clark for 14 yards. Bruce Rutledge got four and Clark added one. A penalty set the Pirates back five and Bailey's next pass fell short forcing EC to kick again.

Citadel quarterback Leslie faked a hand-off to his halfback that drew everybody in the middle as he scampered around his right end for 15 and a first down. A pitch-out to Steve Ansley got seven and a play later Allen Mullenax carried the Pups into Pirate territory on a five yard pick-up. Leslie gained six to the 43 but lost four on the next play as Keply banged through the line to nail him at the 47. Leslie tried to hit Rich Crosby but the pass was short and the Citadel had to kick.

The Bucs were held to only three plays and punted. They got the ball right back as Keply, who was all over the field, smothered a fumble at the Citadel 39. On second and ten Jimmy Howe found a hole in the middle of the Bullpup line that was good for 15 yards down to the 25. Ricky Cheatham threw incomplete on the next play. Don Shink got eight to the 17. The ball changed hands again as Howe fumbled on fourth down giving the Bullpups the ball on the 23.

The Pups did not want the ball either and gave it back to the Pirates after a short gain. The Bucs were stymied and punted.

Ansley was stopped for no gain at the 23 and on the next play Leslie threw the ball right into the hands of Keply who walked into the end zone untouched.

The Bullpups took the kick and started driving down the field. After an offside penalty, Mullenax got eight up the middle but Leslie was dropped for an 11 yard loss. He got it back, however as he found Crosby for 12. Mullenax took Leslie's handoff on the next play and rambled 28 yards to the Baby Buc 33. Leslie kept the ball on a sneak up the middle for five tough yards and a play later Tom Erwin added four. There the drive stopped as the Pirate defense made a strong stand on fourth and one.

The Citadel took up where they left off three plays later as John Lebore intercepted a pass on the 22. The Bullpups could only get two yards and had to try a field goal but it was short.

EC was again forced to turn over the ball as Bill Lons picked off a second Cheatham pass this time at the 17 of ECU.

That was the way the game went for the remainder of the second half — one team picking up several yards and then the other defense would stiffen forcing a turn over.

The Citadel took the second half kickoff and sustained a drive that was climaxed in a TD. On second down from his 29, Leslie threw to Tim Murphy for 16 yards and then hit Lovel Hunley for 23 putting them on the Pirate 32. After a loss of a yard, Leslie again threw, this time to Crosby for a gain to the 27.

Leslie hit Murphy for 12 but a flag cost them five. Mullenax got four of those yards back on a short run and another pass netted 11. That put the ball on the ECU 5 where Leslie hit Westeruelt for the score. Brian Cockfield came in to try the extra point. On the snap the ball flew over the head of both holder and kicker. Cockfield tried to pick the ball up and run with it but a Pirate lineman nailed him at the 15.

Citadel had control of the ball the better part of the rest of the quarter holding the Baby Buc offense to their series.

Mid-way through the last period, the Bullpups had the ball on their own 25. A pass to Murphy gained eight and Mullenax added three. That gave Citadel a first down at the 37. Mullenax took the ball on the next play and crashed through the center of the Baby Buc line and cut to the sideline as he ran all the way to the East Carolina one-foot line before being pushed out by Billy Hibbs and Joe Pulley saving a TD. Leslie fumbled but recovered, losing two. He lost the ball again for good on second down as Pirate David Thompson fell on the ball at the five.

The Baby Buc lost from the five to the two and on fourth down Cheatham handed off to Wilfore. Farr played off a block and tacked Wilfore for the safety that proved to be the winning points for the Bullpups.

The Baby Bucs tried to regain the lead, but a fumble and the stubborn Citadel defense wrapped up the win for the Pups.

A key factor in the win was the rushing totals for both teams. The Citadel Frosh netted 136 while holding the Pirates to minus 16.

The Baby Bucs will meet Richmond for their last game of the season on Nov. 12 at Richmond.

Late Scores Win For Jags

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central High School fought off stubborn D. H. Conley Friday night and used two second half touchdowns to gain a 14-2 victory over the Vikings.

Conley had held a slim 2-0 lead in the first half, gained on a safety after a blocked punt.

The win enabled Farmville to hold onto at least a share of the Eastern Carolina Conference lead, pending the outcome of Saturday night's Southern Wayne-Eastern Wayne contest. A victory for Eastern Wayne would put the Jaguars into the drivers' seat in the conference.

The two teams remained scoreless despite a couple of threats until late in the second half. The Conley defense then backed up the Jaguars into a deep hole and Cloyce Wilson went into his own end zone to punt.

Conley's Stacey Evans broke through the line, however, and blocked the punt. All Wilson could do was fall on the ball to prevent a Conley touchdown, and that resulted in the safety.

But in the third period, Farmville finally forged into the lead. The first of the two Jaguar touchdowns came on a three-yard plunge by Robert Tripp, and Chip Venters added the two point conversion. That gave Farmville the lead for good, 8-2.

The other touchdown came in the final period as Tripp again went over from two yards out. The conversion attempt failed, however, but Farmville had to the game on ice.

Conley threatened on three occasions, moving to the 13 before being stopped on downs, and then to the 18 and 29 where fumbles killed the drives. Farmville twice moved inside the Viking 30 during the first half, only to be pushed back by penalties.

The game was highlighted by the penalties, as Farmville collected 128 yards and Conley had 115.

Conley and Farmville close out the regular season on Friday night. Farmville travels to Charles B. Aycock, while Conley hosts Southern Nash.

North Pitt Gets First Touchdown

BETHEL — Getting beat by 32 points would probably leave a lot of teams unhappy, but somehow, the feeling is that the North Pitt Panthers were pretty excited about the way things turned out.

The Panthers were overrun by Ayden-Grifton's Chargers last night, but the score was 36-8. And the eight was quite important. It was the first touchdown scored by North Pitt in varsity football.

And it ended seven previous frustrating evenings without a score.

By the time it came, however, the game had already been decided, with the Chargers in a firm, 36-0 lead.

Ayden-Grifton took the lead in the first period of play, scoring once. That came on a 40-yard run by Mike Griffin. Griffin also ran over the conversion to make it 8-0.

In the second period, Ayden-Grifton scored again. A 30-yard run helped to set up the score, which came when Leroy Sumpter went over from the five. Mike Tripp kicked and that made it 15-0.

In the third period, the Ayden-Grifton defense set up a pair of scores. The Chargers recovered a fumble on the 41, and Griffin carried 37 yards on the first play down to the four. He then ran it over from there for the score. Tripp kicked to make it 22-0.

Cleaton recovered a fumble on the 19 yard line to set up the next score. Cleaton got the score this time, going over from the one. Tripp again kicked, making it 29-0.

In the last period, Ayden-Grifton scored again. A blocked punt set it up and Lyman Blount went over on the score from the 11. Tripp's final kick made it 36-0.

The North Pitt touchdown came late in the game when Ayden-Grifton gambled on fourth down deep in their own territory, and the Panthers held. Charles Jenkins got the touchdown, going over from the two. Charles Young took the extra points in for the final 36-8 score.

Ayden-Grifton closes out the year next Friday, playing host to North Lenoir. North Pitt entertains Southern Wayne in the finale.

Robersonville Grabs Tobacco Belt Crown

SWAN QUARTER — The Robersonville Golden Eagles rolled to a 30-0 victory over Mattamuskeet Friday night clinching the Tobacco Belt Conference title.

The victory leaves the Eagles with a 5-0 conference record, and a complete sweep of the league's teams,. They have only one game left in the regular season, against non-conference West Craven.

Then, the Eagles will open play in the State 1-A Championship Playoffs, meeting the winner of the Tidewater Conference.

Robersonville's defense completely dominated Mattamuskeet, holding them to just 64 yards in total offense. The closest the Lakers came to the goal line was the Eagle 26, where a long field goal failed.

Robersonville scored four times, leaving only the final period without a touchdown. In the first period, the Eagles used the long pass for the score. Summey Mobley hauled in a 30-yard aerial from Joe Edmundson for the touchdown, making it 6-0.

The Eagles came back with another score in the second period. This time Jesse Coppage did the honors, going over from five yards out. Matt Wilson ran over the two-point conversion and it was 14-0.

Twice in the third period, the Eagles put points up on the scoreboard. The first touchdown came on a three-yard plunge by Coppage. He added the conversion and that boosted the total to 22-0.

That was followed by a 14 yard pass from Wilson to Edward Warren for the final touchdown. Wilson ran over the PAT, and the Eagles had it all wrapped up, 30-0.

Now 8-1 overall, and winner of eight in a row, the Eagles close out the regular season by playing host to West Craven.

Death Brings New Precautions

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The chilling death of wide receiver Chuck Hughes of the Detroit Lions has prompted professional and college football teams to increase their precautions to prevent such tragedies, according to a nationwide survey by The Associated Press.

The 28-year-old Hughes collapsed and died last Sunday late in the Lions' National Football League game against Chicago. His death was ruled due to a clot, cutting off the flow of blood in a main artery already severely constricted by hardening of the arteries.

Originally, there was criticism that Hughes' death might have been averted if a defibrillator—a machine that shocks hearts back into regular rhythm—had been available. Medical authorities disputed the claim.

Meanwhile, the Lions announced Friday that a special cardiac unit, including a defibrillator, would be available on the field at their future home games, on the road and on airplane flights.

The Green Bay Packers, who play the Lions Monday night at Milwaukee County Stadium in a nationally televised game, said they would have a similar intensive care unit installed at the park.

A spokesman for Memorial Coliseum, home of the Los Angeles Rams, the University of Southern California and UCLA, said arrangements have been completed for the first aid crew to have cardiac facilities, starting today.

A spokesman for the Chicago Bears said the club had discussed the matter with a number of doctors long before Hughes' death and is deeply concerned about developing such a unit for both players and fans.

The Bears have long had two ambulances, equipped with resuscitation and oxygen devices at home games, along with a first aid station in the stadium and two doctors and two nurses on call an hour before kickoff until the stands clear after the game.

The stadia housing both the Atlanta Falcons and Cleveland Browns have been equipped with cardiac units for the past two years.

At the Houston Astrodome, there is an elaborately equipped clinic with respiratory equipment. The Dallas Cowboys' new stadium in Irving, Tex., has an infirmary equipped with what is known as a "life pack," a sophisticated device for diagnosing and treating heart cases.

The University of Nebraska, the nation's top college team, has sophisticated cardiac unit, with specialists stationed at strategic spots in the stands during all Nebraska games to detect heart attacks.

It is routine for all college and pro teams to have physicians, trainers with special medical knowledge and ambulances at all games.

American Motors In Daytona 500

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Holman & Moody, a stock car building company in Charlotte, has built one American Motors Matador and is preparing another for possible use in the NASCAR Daytona 500 in February.

It would be the first time American Motors has raced cars on the banked Ovals of Grand National super speedways.

Holman & Moody's Ralph Moody said Friday that his shop is putting together the second Matador, which has replaced the Rebel line of American Motors' cars.

The racing of the cars would be under the jurisdiction of Roger Penske of Detroit, who has the current American Motors contract, if he reaches an agreement for next year with American.

Penske could farm out the stock cars to other outfits, and there have been unconformed reports that Dick Hutchinson, a former Holman & Moody executive and ex-stock car driver, might be just the man.

The Matador is an intermediate size car with a displacement ranging from 232 to 401 cubic inches.

Williamston Nips Plymouth

WILLIAMSTON — The Williamston Tigers held onto second place in the Albemarle Conference Friday night with a tough 12-6 victory over Plymouth.

The win boosted the Tigers' record to 7-1 in the league and 8-1 overall. Their lone loss was to unbeaten Gates County.

Plymouth went into the league early in the first period, scoring its only touchdown. Tommy Cherry got the score, going over from the two yard line.

It stayed that way until the third period. Williamston bottled up Plymouth deep in its own territory, forcing a punt. Clifton Little pulled in the ball on the Williamston 44 and then raced 56 yards down the sideline to go into the end zone untouched with the tieing score.

The Tigers made the extra point to seemingly move ahead, but a penalty nullified it and a second kick was no good, leaving it at 6-6.

The Tigers then came back on their next possession to get the winning touchdown. Mike Bundy put that on the board with an 11-yard run, making it 12-0.

Plymouth didn't give up, moving inside the 10 yard line on three occasions. Twice field goal attempts failed, and the other time, Little intercepted a pass.

Williamston closes out its regular season Friday, traveling to Edenton.

Greene Central Trips N. Lenoir

WHEAT SWAMP — Greene Central kept its fading Eastern Carolina Conference championship hopes alive Friday night with an 18-6 victory over North Lenoir.

North Lenoir threw a scare into the Rams, however, taking the lead in the first period of the game. Mike Butts did the damage, going over from the five yard line.

Greene Central came back in the second period of the contest to tie it up. Danny Whitley got the touchdown, scoring on a 19-yard pass from Lonnie Carraway. The conversion attempt failed, however, and the Rams and Hawks had to settle for a 6-6 tie at intermission.

In the final period, Greene Central finally broke the deadlock and forged into the lead. The scoring play was set up on a 25-yard pass from Carraway to Whitley down to the nine yard line. Robbie Ivey cracked over from there and that put the Rams in front, 12-6.

Later in the period, Whitley picked off a fumble at the Hawks' three yard line and on the next play, Willie Forbes pushed into the end zone with the final score of the game.

Greene Central closes out the regular season Friday night, playing host to Eastern Wayne.

Boat Owners Help Make Law

By JIM DEAN

What would you do if you could make the laws regulating pleasure boating?

If you own a boat, that question may bring to mind several ideas which you feel might contribute to improved boating safety or the enjoyment of boating.

Perhaps you believe that boat operators should be licensed like automobile drivers (that's been a hot potatoe for a long time). Or maybe you'd like to see more uniform regulations governing pollution control devices on boats (that's another one that's sparked a lot of controversy).

It's likely that some of your ideas might be worth considering, even though they may not concern controversial topics.

Wouldn't it be nice if there were a place where you could send your ideas — a place where you were guaranteed that the ideas would be read and carefully considered?

There is such a place, and as a result you can have a hand in shaping the boating laws under the new Federal Boat Safety Act of 1971.

This new law provides the Secretary of Transportation with the authority to establish minimum safety standards for boats and associated equipment, give financial assistance to states for boating safety programs and set up a more ambitious numbering system for boats.

The new Boat Act also sets up a Boating Safety Advisory Council to help implement the law, and that's where boat owners can get into the act with their recommendations. The council has the job of making the new boating laws more uniform across the nation, and any ideas you have will be appreciated.

Charles R. Fullwood, chief of the Division of Motorboats and Water Safety for the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission, has been nominated to serve on this council.

"We will soon be meeting to discuss what will be done, and it will be very helpful to me and other members of the committee to have suggestions from boat owners on how to improve boating laws across the country as well as in North Carolina," said Fullwood.

Fullwood and his staff will review the suggestions from North Carolinians, and present the best ones at the next big meeting.

"Suggestions need not be elaborate, nor necessarily original," said Fullwood. "We want to know what boat owners are thinking, and the more suggestions we get, the better we will be prepared to come up with good laws. We are particularly interested in suggestions which will help make boating safer and boating laws more uniform across the nation."

In addition to being chief of Motorboats and Water Safety for the Wildlife Commission, Fullwood is also incoming president of the Southeastern Association of State Boating Law Administrators, chairman of the committee on Uniform Waterways Markers for the National Association of State Boating Law Administrators and a member of the American Boat and Yacht Council which sets safety standards for boating.

Those who have suggestions or need help should write to Charles R. Fullwood, chief of the Division of Motorboats and Water Safety, N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission, Box 2919, Raleigh, North Carolina 27602.

Rough Seas, High Water Fail To Deter Fishing Along Coast

By HELEN RAY

This past week fishermen have been harried by very rough seas and unusually high water, however, the undaunted sportsmen have been trying their luck despite the handicaps.

Joe Burney, Triple-Ess Pier reports good fishing throughout the week with catches of black and puppy drum, sea mullet, spot in great quantity, blue fish and a few flounder. Saturday produced a big crowd on the pier and Norman Young of Bakersfield, N.C. landed a 11 lb. 6 oz. flounder.

Joe Hardison, Oceanana Pier had good crowds Thursday and Friday with catches of albacore and king mackerel off the end of the pier. Saturday crowds increased and blue fish, spot, sea mullet, hog fish and black drum were being taken with blood worms and live shrimp. The puppy drum weighed between 5 and 6 pounds.

Ken Bradley, Sportsman's Pier said that fishing was nothing to brag about for the first part of the week, however the Saturday weather change brought a big crowd catching 2 and 3 lb. flounder, black and puppy drum weighing from 2 to 5 lbs., spot, hog fish, mullet, blue fish and several nice trout. Shrimp and cut mullet were being used as bait.

Herb Orama of Herb's Tackle Shop has been reluctant to take his boat out in the rough weather, however he has done some "inside" fishing this past week returning each time with 23 to 25 lbs. of fish including king mackerel, trout, flounder, croakers and hog fish. On Saturday, his party Ralph Dean and sons, returned with 85 lbs. of fish.

Jack McAnn of Calico Jack's Inn, Marina, Restaurant and Boutique at Harkers Island was most enthusiastic about the fishing this past week. Their boats returned with king mackerel, Spanish mackerel, flounder, trout and blue fish. Jolene McCann invites the fisheretts to browse in the Boutique and examine the lovely and exclusive line of dresses and cosmetics. The very fine sea food served at the restaurant should not be overlooked. Bill Meyers, son of Rod and Till Meyers, owners of the Cape Lookout Motel, Restaurant and Marina reports that Tuesday and Wednesday were excellent fishing days with catches of flounder, trout, puppy drum. Speckled trout and king mackerel were being caught off the rocks. Thursday and Friday were very rough and only a few trout were caught. Saturday the boats were out and catching blue fish, flounder, trout and Spanish Mackerel.

The sport fishing boats and the party boats had a dreary week.

Good Time To Purchase Boat

By JACK WOLISTON

NEW YORK (UPI) —If you're thinking of buying a boat, now is the best time, the experts say, even if you can't get out on the water with it until next spring.

First, a lot of dealers are anxious to unload their present stock to get ready for the 1972 models. So anxious, that they offer sizeable discounts and many throw in free yard storage for the winter.

Second, a lot of this year's first-time boaters have decided that the sport is not for them. They want out and most are willing to let their craft go for a lot less now than they will in the spring when the demand will be greater.

Industry sources estimate that generally prices are 10 to 20 per cent lower in the fall than in the spring when first-time buyers swarm into the market.

Beware Fast Purchases

One thing to remember: when you find that boat of your dreams, especially a used one, and you decide the price is right, don't rush into it too fast. There are a lot of things to consider.

Among them: Is the boat suitable for what you have in mind—fishing, cruising, skiing; is it suitable for the type of water you expect to sail —calm inland waterways or offshore where things sometimes get pretty rough; is it capable of carrying at proper speed with absolute safety the number of passengers who will be sailing with you?

Any used boat in which you are interested should be hauled before you buy for a complete inspection —and not by you nor the seller, but by an expert.

A small fortune in big repairs can be lost, or even the whole investment if the boat proves to be dangerously unsound.

Give Boat Tryout

Qualified inspectors are usually members of the National Association of Marine Surveyors, Inc., and will charge from $2.50 to $3.50 a foot (measured by deck length) for boat inspection. Most boatyards can put you in touch with an inspector.

If you are buying a powered boat, remember the engine, whether inboard or outboard, is subject to most of the ills that might be found in a used car engine, plus a few special problems such as in the cooling and ignition systems. Propeller and shaft machinery also should be closely inspected. A trusted and experienced engine mechanic is a big help here.

Former Buc Player Making New Career

RICHMOND, Va. — Glenn Bass, formerly a split end for the Buffalo Bills of the American Football League and then for the Houston Oilers, began his second year of study at Union Theological Seminary this fall with what he terms "real excitement about the ministry."

A native of Wilson, North Carolina, Bass had an outstanding career in athletics. He participated in three sports in high school. While attending East Carolina University, where he majored in physical education and psychology, he played baseball and football, and was named to the Little All-America team in both sports. With a chance to attempt either professional baseball or professional football, Glenn chose football. For six years he played as a flanker or split end for the Buffalo Bills, was named most valuable offensive player for the Bills in 1961, and was a member of the 1964-65 team which won the American Football League championship. He then moved to Houston and played three years for the Houston Oilers.

In 1969, Glenn gave up his professional football career and decided to come to the Seminary to begin training for the ministry. He finds it difficult to say exactly when this decision was made. Always interested in the church, he had been active in his youth fellowship during high school, and later, in the Fellowship of Christian Athletes. Glenn says that he has always been "people-oriented" and his concern for his fellow man and for the world situation as well as his "belief in a God who has acted through Jesus Christ and who continues to act in history" led him to Union Seminary. He also sees this decision as one growing out of his belief that an important part of life is "checking to see if we're growing or standing still." A concern for his growth as a human being, and as a husband and father, helped to crystallize his decision to prepare for the ministry, a decision which he and his wife Jean "wrestled with for six to eight months."

Once the decision was made, Glenn plunged into his new work both academically and through practical experience. During the summer before he began his first academic session, he set up a recreational program at the State Farm Penitentiary, where he found working with the prisoners a "good experience." During the summer between his first and second years, Glenn served as an assistant at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church in Chesterfield County, Virginia.

This year, his second at the Seminary, finds Glenn, Jean and their two and a-half year old son Brandon keeping very busy. Jean is teaching second grade at St. Christopher's School. Glenn, in addition to his studies, is participating on a five member Evangelistic Team which travels to various churches with a weekend program for youth groups.

Looking back, Glenn is thankful for his career in professional football and for the varied opportunities he had during the off-seasons. He speaks especially of the "extensive travel" and of his "broadened perspective." But his main contact with football now comes on Mondays when he joins members of his class for an intermural game of "flag-ball." Instead, his talk now turns to his Seminary experience. He is "excited about mine and Jean's growth as a couple and about our growth as Christians." He is also excited about the parish ministry, though he says that he tries to "stay open to other forms of ministry as well."

Shirley Booth Not Dull Nor Dead-Eyed

SHIRLEY BOOTH

By DUSTON HARVEY

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— Actress Shirley Booth doesn't think much of low-key "natural" performers, stars making television commercials, or the film roles being offered her generation of leading ladies.

She finds them dull and dead-eyed, an affront to "the mystique of the theater," and just plain undinified and insulting.

The 63-year-old actress, best known for her Academy Award winning role in the film "Come Back, Little Sheba" and her television series "Hazel," is neither dull nor dead-eyed after a half century on the stage.

She talked at length, and with humor, about her profession, her poodles and her past while in town with a national touring company revival of the 1946 whimsical comedy "Harvey."

"I don't like dead eyes and faces so I don't like low key actors," said Miss Booth, who acts out her frequent anecdotes and "favorite lines" from roles past with the same energy she uses on the stage.

But she blamed the "school of naturalism" on a society that has become more theatrical than its theaters.

"We were in Denver recently, and every woman in the audience was wearing a wig and false eyelashes," Miss Booth said. "Since actresses are left nowhere to go, they do the reverse and become quite natural."

The result, she insisted, was dullness—a corps of performers so uninteresting that they are forced to "shock" people with their personal lives in order to intrigue them.

Miss Booth, who is suing a soap maker for using "my voice" in a cartoon commercial in which "Hazel" plugs the product, said proudly that she had never done a commercial and has "refused enormous sums."

"I think it's hard enough to keep the mystique of the theater going without commercials," she said, defining the "mystique" as a "warmth" and "contact" between performer and audience that "drags them into the theater."

She looks askance for the same reasons at the horror and other low-budget films other leading ladies of her youth are making.

"If they do it for economic reasons, it's fine," she said. "But I don't need the money, and I like to have a little dignity at the end of my life."

She described the roles being offered her and her contemporaries as "real tripe" and said producers think if the money is good enough, "You'll overlook previous conditions you've set."

Things Only The TV Censor Sees

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP Television-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — So you think there are more violence, cuss words and low-cut gowns on your television screen this season?

Gosh, no, say the top censors of the three major networks who will then tell, usually, without revealing the name of the program, a few things that you are NOT going to see:

A sequence in a Western involving hungry dogs and a wounded man.

A vivid bit in an action show about a victim being hung upside down and being skewered.

Since the word "censor" enjoys the same popularity in television circles that some of those tags used by Archie Bunker achieve among ethnic minorities, the men who ride herd on violence, sex and bad taste are called "editors." They are contained within departments euphemistically labeled "Program Practice" (CBS), "Broadcast Standards and Practices" (ABC) and "Broadcast Standards" (NBC).

Whatever the name, their job is to try to walk that fine and ill-defined line that separates violence from "action necessary to plot development;" acceptable taste from crudeness; naughty from dirty. Their basic guidelines are amply set forth in 34 articles of the Television Code of the National Association of Broadcasters which covers everything from cigarette smoking (frowned upon) to on-camera demonstrations of hypnosis (banned).

Enforcing Code limitations is a touchy business: producers howl in pain when scenes are watered down; critics, and often viewers, scream when bodies, blows and bullets turn up in wholesale quantities.

William H. Tankersley, the calm and not overly defensive man who heads CBS' crew of censors, is particularly fond of a pair of reviews of the same episode in the network's "Cannon," in two trade papers. One—by a woman—complained about the amount of violence. The other—by a man—mourned that it was too bland.

"You really can't win," he said.

In theory, at least, the program editors ask that one or two bullets be fired instead of emptying the gun; that a man be knocked out by one or two blows instead of absorbing a prolonged beating.

Each network has one censor assigned exclusively to its late-night talk show. This is partly because the shows are ad lib and likely to erupt in forbidden language, and partly because blips—erasure of words—and excisions must be made as soon as the programs are taped so they can be broadcast later in the evening.

"The editor assigned to the Carson taping makes a constant check on the subject material," says Herminio Traviesas, NBC's guardian of good taste. "Four-letter words are blipped out, except for some hells and damns. You would be surprised at some of the language that slips in. Not too long ago we were forced to cut a solid three-and-a-half minutes out of the show—a comedian launched into a long outhouse story and nobody could stop him. We would rather blip than cut anytime.

"The difficulty is that the laughter of a studio audience heard after a blip frustrates the viewer who is curious about what he has missed," said Traviesas.

Although one editor is usually assigned to four shows, one NBC man in Burbank takes care of only "The Dean Martin Show" and "Laugh-In."

"He watches for double entendres," the NBC man explained.

None of the networks is interested in acquiring X-rated movies for broadcast. Four-letter words and sexy scenes are routinely edited out of those otherwise acceptable. Bedroom scenes are usually cut.

Alfred Schneider, the ABC vice president under whose wing the censorship division functions, said it is network policy to show programs in advance on closed circuit to executives of affiliated stations.

"That gives station licensees a chance to raise any questions," he said. "We also will screen in advance for the NAB Code authorities.

Realignment For College Of Arts

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — A College of Visual and Performing Arts has been established at Syracuse University. Its components are the School of Art, the School of Music, the department of speech and the department of drama.

This is a realignment. The School of Speech and Dramatic Art is dissolved, with its television-radio department going into the S. I. Newhouse School of Public Communications and its department of audio and speech pathology transferred to the School of Education.

Porter Wagoner Has Own 'Day'

WEST PLAINS, Mo. (AP) — Porter Wagoner presented two Honorary Wagonmaster Scrolls which highlighted Porter Wagoner Day here, in his home town.

They went to Bob Ferguson, Wagoner's record producer in Nashville, and to Sid Vaughn, owner of the grocery store where Wagoner was employed in his youth. Vaughn also once sponsored a 15-minute radio program featuring Wagoner.

East Carolina Art Society

Membership Drive Underway

ART OF AFRICA . . . in dress styles is shown by Miss Linda Ebrom of Greenville, a junior at East Carolina University. Miss Ebrom models her own creation.

Membership is the key word these days in community planning by members of the various boards of the East Carolina Art Society (ECAS), the organization charged with the operating the Greenville Art Center.

From now until Christmas, efforts will be concentrated on broadening the number and scope of membership in the society. Mrs. Betty (William) Fore, president of the ECAS Board of Directors, has emphasized that fees collected for membership are not by any means the basic motivating factor for seeking new members, despite the fact that membership fees are a vital source in the society's limited income.

Active participation as a member in the society is the goal being sought by Mrs. Fore, by Dr. Allen Taylor, first vice-president and chairman of the membership drive, and other concerned members.

Basic to the thinking of all concerned is a feeling that membership is the first step to an individual or a family becoming more involved, more concerned with making the Art Center an integral part of their community life.

It has been pointed out, that aside from special satisfaction inherent in being a participant in this one segment of community cultural efforts, there are also tangible benefits to be derived from membership. These include receiving a copy of the Art Center News Letter each month — a mimeographed sheet giving details of coming exhibits, receipt of gifts, acquisitions, and reports on events related to the Art Center.

Membership also gives a person the opportunity to attend the annual society dinner at which officers are elected; and provides for a ten percent "members" discount on the price of purchases made through gallery sales.

In order to encourage the widest possible public participation through membership, annual dues have been kept deliberately low.

Individual membership is $5.00 per year. Family membership, regardless of the size of the family is $10.00. For anyone desiring to go further, there is available membership in the categories of donor, benefactor and sponsor, at $25, $50 and $100 respectively.

If the current drive for a much broadened community membership representation is realized, this will bring into play many benefits. Foremost, of course, would be a quickened community spirit and interest in the Art Center. Financially, it would make possible the expansion of programs such as free art classes for children, now seriously hampered by the lack of funds.

Persons interested in full details on membership are urged to call the director of the Art Center, Mrs. Edith Walker at 758-1946, or any of the following persons, all of whom are members of either the board of directors, the advisory board or serve on one of the speical committees:

Mrs. Arthur Alford, Mrs. Alton Barrett, M. K. Blount, Sr., Mrs. M. K. Blunt, Jr., Mrs. James T. Cheatham III, Mrs. W. S. Corbitt, Jr., Miss Lucy Cherry Crisp, Mrs. John P. East, Mrs. James Ficklen, Mrs. William W. Fore, William Holley, Francis Neel, Mrs. J. Vance Perkins, Robert (Bob) Pittman, Mrs. C. H. Rand, Jerry Raynor, Mrs. J. W. H. Roberts, Mrs. W. E. Roseveare, Mrs. S. A. Sewell, Mrs. Charles Stevens, Jack Thomas, Mrs. J. Hampton Thomas, Dr. Donald Tucker, Mrs. Robert D. Van Veld, Mrs. David Wichard II, Mrs. Charles White, Frank M. Wooten, Jr., Mrs. W. I. Wooten, Sr., or Dr. Alfred Yongue.

Membership in the art society, it is emphasized, is not in any way a requirement for attending events at the Greenville Art Center — the constantly changing exhibits, the sidewalk art shows or any other activities available free of charge. These are always free and the public is encouraged to make good use of the Art Center, which is open each day Monday through Friday from 9:00 a.m. until noon and from 2:00 p.m. to 5:00 p.m. Hours on Saturday are 9:30 a.m. until 12:30 p.m. It is closed on Sundays and for major holidays, except for occasional public receptions for new shows held on Sundays. The Art Center is located at 802 South Evans Street.

Local Church Program Combines African Arts

"Church Worship, African Style," is the first event in a series of African Culture for a Greenville church made possible through the joint efforts of musicians, artists, art students, designers and others in a program under the chairmanship of Johnny Wooten, with Mrs. Mabel Godette as advisor.

Today at 11:00 a.m., the morning service of York Memorial A.M.E.Zion Church will illustrate the early traditions of African Church worship, in a service designed to show cultural, spiritual and educational aspects of services, with a display of African exhibits in the vestibule of the church.

For the past two weeks, preparations for the special service have included research into historical and related facts of early African worship; African slave and worship songs; and research into traditional African costumes and dress.

Singing of African slave and worship songs will be by the combined voices of the York Memorial Youth Felowship Choir; the Souls of East Carolina University; and the Crusaders.

Persons assisting in costuming and preparing the African exhibits to be placed in the church vestibule include Mrs. Marsha Eakes, under whose direction art students at Aycock Junior High made African masks; Mrs. Lucille Sledge, who researched into geographic landmarks; Mrs. Vivian Selby, responsible for African ornaments and designs; Miss Addie Gore, costume designs; Mrs. Martha Dawson and Mrs. Clara Barnhill, autumn designs, and Johnny Wooten, photographic exhibit.

Rev. A. W. Washington will deliver the sermon for the African worship. Some members of the congregation are also expected to be dressed in traditional African dress or in the current Afro styles.

The public is invited to attend the Church Worship, African Style morning worship at 11:00 a.m. at York Memorial A. M. E. Zion Church, which is located on Albemarle Avenue.

Maazel New Conductor For Cleveland

"I don't believe we're going to do anything for music by spitting in the faces of long-time music-lovers," 41 year old Lorin Maazel said in a recent interview printed in The New York Times.

Maazel has been elected to head the Cleveland Orchestra, which has been without a leader since the death of George Szell in 1970. The new leader of the Cleveland orchestra has been termed "not a member of the avant-garde in his approach to the symphony orchestra." His appointment was the subject of controversy, since a poll of the orchestra player's committee had favored Istvan Kertesz, a frequent guest conductor with the orchestra.

This and numerous other stories are featured in the current 28 page issue of Symphony News, the newsletter of the American Symphony Orchestra League published six times yearly. Music lovers interested in more information about the newsletter can write to the American Symphony Orchestra League, Inc., Symphony Hill, P. O. Box 66, Vienna, Virginia 22180.

Greenville Craftsmen Showing In Piedmont Craftsmen's Fair

Ron Calhoun forges art and craft works in open-air workshop.

Several Greenville artisans will be numbered among the more than 120 persons to be represented in the Eighth Annual Piedmont Craftsmen's Fair to be held in Winston-Salem for two days, Friday, November 5 and Saturday, November 6.

Mrs. Lynn S. Hill, chairman of Fair Promotions, has informed that to date it is known that Mr. and Mrs. George Bryant, Jim Pringle, Dempsy R. (Ron) Calhoun, Charles Chamberlain and Michael Goins, all from Greenville, will be participating in this year's annual exhibit which will have artisans from throughout the southeastern United States. Other Greenville artists may also be planning to exhibit.

The Bryants will show hand-carved bird decoys. Two of the local group, Pringle and Chamberlain, are potters. Goins specializes in crafted jewelry; and Calhoun works in leather, wood and forged metal.

This annual southeastern fair has in a few years become the second largest in the Southeast. Over 50 different craft forms attest to the wide range of methods and media now at the command of craftsmen, in which traditional and folk crafts are perpetuated at the same time new and innovative contemporary crafts are practiced.

The fair is being staged at the Memorial Coliseum in Winston-Salem, where artisans will have a total of 90 craft booths (ten more than in 1970). At these booths, individuals will demonstrate their techniques, and have on display for sale finished products.

The Piedmont Craftsmen Fair is a mecca for collectors of every shade — from the individual wanting one item to galleries, museums and business firms. Many of the participants have won national and international recognition for their work. A large number of the exhibiting craftsmen are craftsmen-in-residence at the renowned Penland School of Crafts.

One special feature is the Christmas Booth, for which both associate and exhibiting members will display unusual and one-of-a-kind Christmas ornaments.

Other attractions will include the Sidewalk Cafe and Baked Goods Booth; entertainment by musicians from the N.C. School of the Arts, and a puppet show by Mitchell Grayson, UNC-Greensboro student, planned especially for children.

Price of admission is $1.00 for adults, 75 cents for senior citizens, and 50 cents for students through high school.

Mrs. Hill notes that Piedmont Craftsmen, Inc. welcomes inquiries from prospective new members. Two types of membership are available. An exhibiting member pays annual dues of $5.00 and is accepted only after consideration of samples of the craftsman's work by the Standards Committee. Associate membership at $3.00 per year is for craftsmen not interested in exhibiting and selling, but wishing to be associated with the organization.

Membership as patrons is also available at $10.00 and up annually. Anyone interested in full details is encouraged to write to: Secretary, Piedmont Craftsmen, Inc., c-0 Arts Council, 610 Coliseum Drive, Winston-Salem, N.C.

We in eastern North Carolina are fortunate enough to be along the great Atlantic flyway of waterfowl. It is our privilege to hear the wild honking of Canada geese znd the eery cry of the wood duck. Ours is the privilege of seeing many wildfowl. Those who are familiar with the beautiful birds in our area will enjoy THE WAYS OF WILDFOWL by Russ Williams. Those who have not yet opened their eyes to the marvels around us should by all means read this book and study the many paintings and etchings of Richard E. Bishop which are included with the text.

"JUST WAIT TILL YOU HAVE CHILDREN OF YOUR OWN!" by Erma Bombeck and Bil Keane is a humorous look at teenage family life. Written from a parent's point of view, it exposes the teenager's foibles not to ridicule, but to light-hearted laughter. Parents of teens, or anyone old enough to look back on his own teenage years objectively, will appreciate the chuckles "JUST WAIT" brings.

Keith Middlemas, author of COLORED GLASS, a book on the development of glass making in England, has written a new book on glass, ANTIQUE GLASS IN COLOR, in which he traces the fascinating development of colored glass in Europe. He has separate chapters on glassmaking in France, Germany, Spain and the Netherlands. The ninety-six pages of beautiful color illustration show in great detail how European glass manufacture developed from the 15th to the 20th century.

DERE MR. PRESIDENT edited by Hannibal Coons is a delightful collection of letters written to President Nixon by children. Filled with mispelled words, curious notions, and complete candor, the letters present a humorous idea of what children expect of the President of the United States. Readers may wish to overlook the editorial comments included since they are generally either boring observations or snide remarks.

THE LAST CENTENNIAL. By Patricia Kilina. 313 pages. The Dial Press. $6.95.

Writing a novel is hard work and represents a big expenditure in time and a certain commitment on the author's part; for these reasons it is difficult to pan a novel, especially, a first novel. Patricia Kilina has shown less than full commitment to her work. She has developed her plot haphazardly, has written about things of which she knows little, and has filled her novel with vague and stereotyped characters.

THE LAST CENTENNIAL consists of three distinct parts with nothing in common but locale. Actually there parts are novelettes in themselves. The first concerns Johnny Eagle Chance, a Northern Cheyenne, World's Champion Rodeo roper, adopted as a child by a famous white rodeoing family. Johnny has been raised as a white and what little he knows about Indians comes from books. This is a good out for the author in case she makes a mistake. The only things Indian about Johnny are his long braids and his obsession with the past. Here Kilina comes closest to making Johnny more than a cardboard figure. She manages for brief periods to make Johnny's double-life mysticism and obsession with the past real, but she can't sustain it. Johnny wants to be a real Indian but can't face up to it; however, the author assures us in one of her blatant plants that he will find himself at the centennial celebration of the town's founding. Sure enough, right on schedule, Johnny forgets his fears and becomes an Indian. In the process, he takes his adopted sister as a lover (she's a hippie so it's all right), breaks with his adopted family, is defeated by his white brother in a roping contest, but comes back as super-Indian by roping fifteen calves in less than fifteen seconds each. Through all this we have political speeches ranging from the low-profit accorded the beef producer to the uses of Red Power. Indians deserve better than this.

About half way through the book, a new main character is introduced and we hear no more of Johnny Chance. Beth Stuart is described in one of the most embarrassingly bad paragraphs in the book. "She knew she was a horse because she could feel the two sensitive ears swivel around on top of her head . . . as she galloped and her tail hairs floated on the air . . . and when she looked back she could see the sturdy, hard-muscled hindquarters, with the hocks working away and the tail held high." It is hard to get involved with a character like that. This horsey female is in love with a jockey, naturally, by the name of Speedy Gonzalez. Speedy would like a less chaste Beth, but she keeps him at a distance. Later, she's sorry. To make amends she tours Europe enticing men, at the proper moment jabbing them with hat pins. When she returns to the West she finds Speedy dead of lukemia but she has his ashes in a box. She carries the box around for awhile and finally buries it in the stable, a fitting end. The shock of it all causes her to black out, fight a battle with a giant crab, and find upon awakening that she's just a plain old girl, no hocks, no tail.

The final quarter of the book is devoted to Pinter Brodie, one of the last Real Cowboys. His story is the melancholic fare one would expect with the overtones of suicide leading us to the inevitable conclusion. Fortunately, gun primed and ready, Pinter decides to catch Walter Cronkite on the evening news instead.

This has got to be one of the all-time bad books and you're urged to pass it by.

HE WHO HESITATES IS TAKING A BIG CHANCE
This paraphrase of the old adage is especially pertiment when it comes to good health. At the first signs of an illness or when symptoms are recurring is the time to check with your physician. If you wait, what might be a simple illness to cure, could develop into something serious.
The same premise applies when it comes to having a prescription filled. Your doctor wants you to have the medicine he prescribes for an ailment used at once. That is when it can do the most good. Don't delay in bringing your prescription to the pharmacy of your choice.
YOU OR YOUR DOCTOR CAN PHONE US when you need a delivery. We will deliver promptly without extra charge. A great many people rely on us for their health needs. We welcome requests for delivery service and charge accounts.

Poultry Group Tours Facility

TOURING LOCAL EGG PLANT . . . George De Ketelaere, Rein Ruigrok, Willy Mestdag and Jan Buys are given a tour of Sunnyside Eggs, Inc., facility, near Winterville by Bob Dominick, general manager of the local poultry operation. (Reflector Photo by Blanche Hardee)

WINTERVILLE—Four representatives of Hubbard's Poultry Breeding Organization of Europe toured the facilities of Sunnyside Eggs, Inc., near here Friday.

The four men were George De Ketelaere of France, Rein Ruigrok of Belgium, Willy Mestdag of Itlay and Jan Buys of Holland.

The group will spend two weeks in the United States touring poultry operations. They have visited Louisburg, Asheville and Greenville, Also included on the trip will be stops in Birmingham, Ala., Atlanta, Ga., and areas along the northeastern coast of the United States.

"We have been most impressed by the Sunnyside operation here," said Ruigrok. "We are impressed with the efficiency of the operation.

"We came to the United States to learn better methods of processing eggs and raising broilers. We have definitely learned something at Sunnyside," stated Ruigrok.

Anti-Trust Law Role Stressed

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — North Carolina Atty. Gen. Robert Morgan says state government should play a major role in enforcement of antitrust laws for the protection of consumers and the free enterprise system.

"The impact of antitrust violations on the consumer is staggering," Morgan said Friday. "A recent study suggests that antitrust law violators presently drain the American economy of some $45 billion annually in lost output."

His comments came during a seminar on consumer legislation in New Orleans sponsored by the Council of State Governments and the National Legislative Conference.

"Major manufacturers of many of the necessities of life are prone, at times, to conspire among themselves to fix ultimate prices in various and devious ways," he said. "When they do so, we must pay for the goods they produce at the price they set or go without.

"Through such collusive agreements the greatest element of balance in our free capitalistic system is removed—competition for the consumer's dollar," he added.

Morgan said the attorney general in each state should take the major role in consumer protection. He said this includes three primary responsibilities—protecting the public from monopolies and price fixing, representing the public before regulatory agencies and combatting unfair and deceptive trade practices.

"Where there is no consumer's advocate, rate increases requested by regulated industries may follow as a matter of course, whether justified or not," he said, because the industry's counsel needs only to introduce a bare minimum of evidence to back up a rate request.

"It is my belief that our efforts to protect the consumer have strengthened the free enterprise system," Morgan said. "If our economic system is to be retained, and each citizen is to receive the opportunity to earn and profit financially from his own efforts, we need to provide some governmental control over those unfair business practices which stifle competition and cause widespread distrust of the system itself."

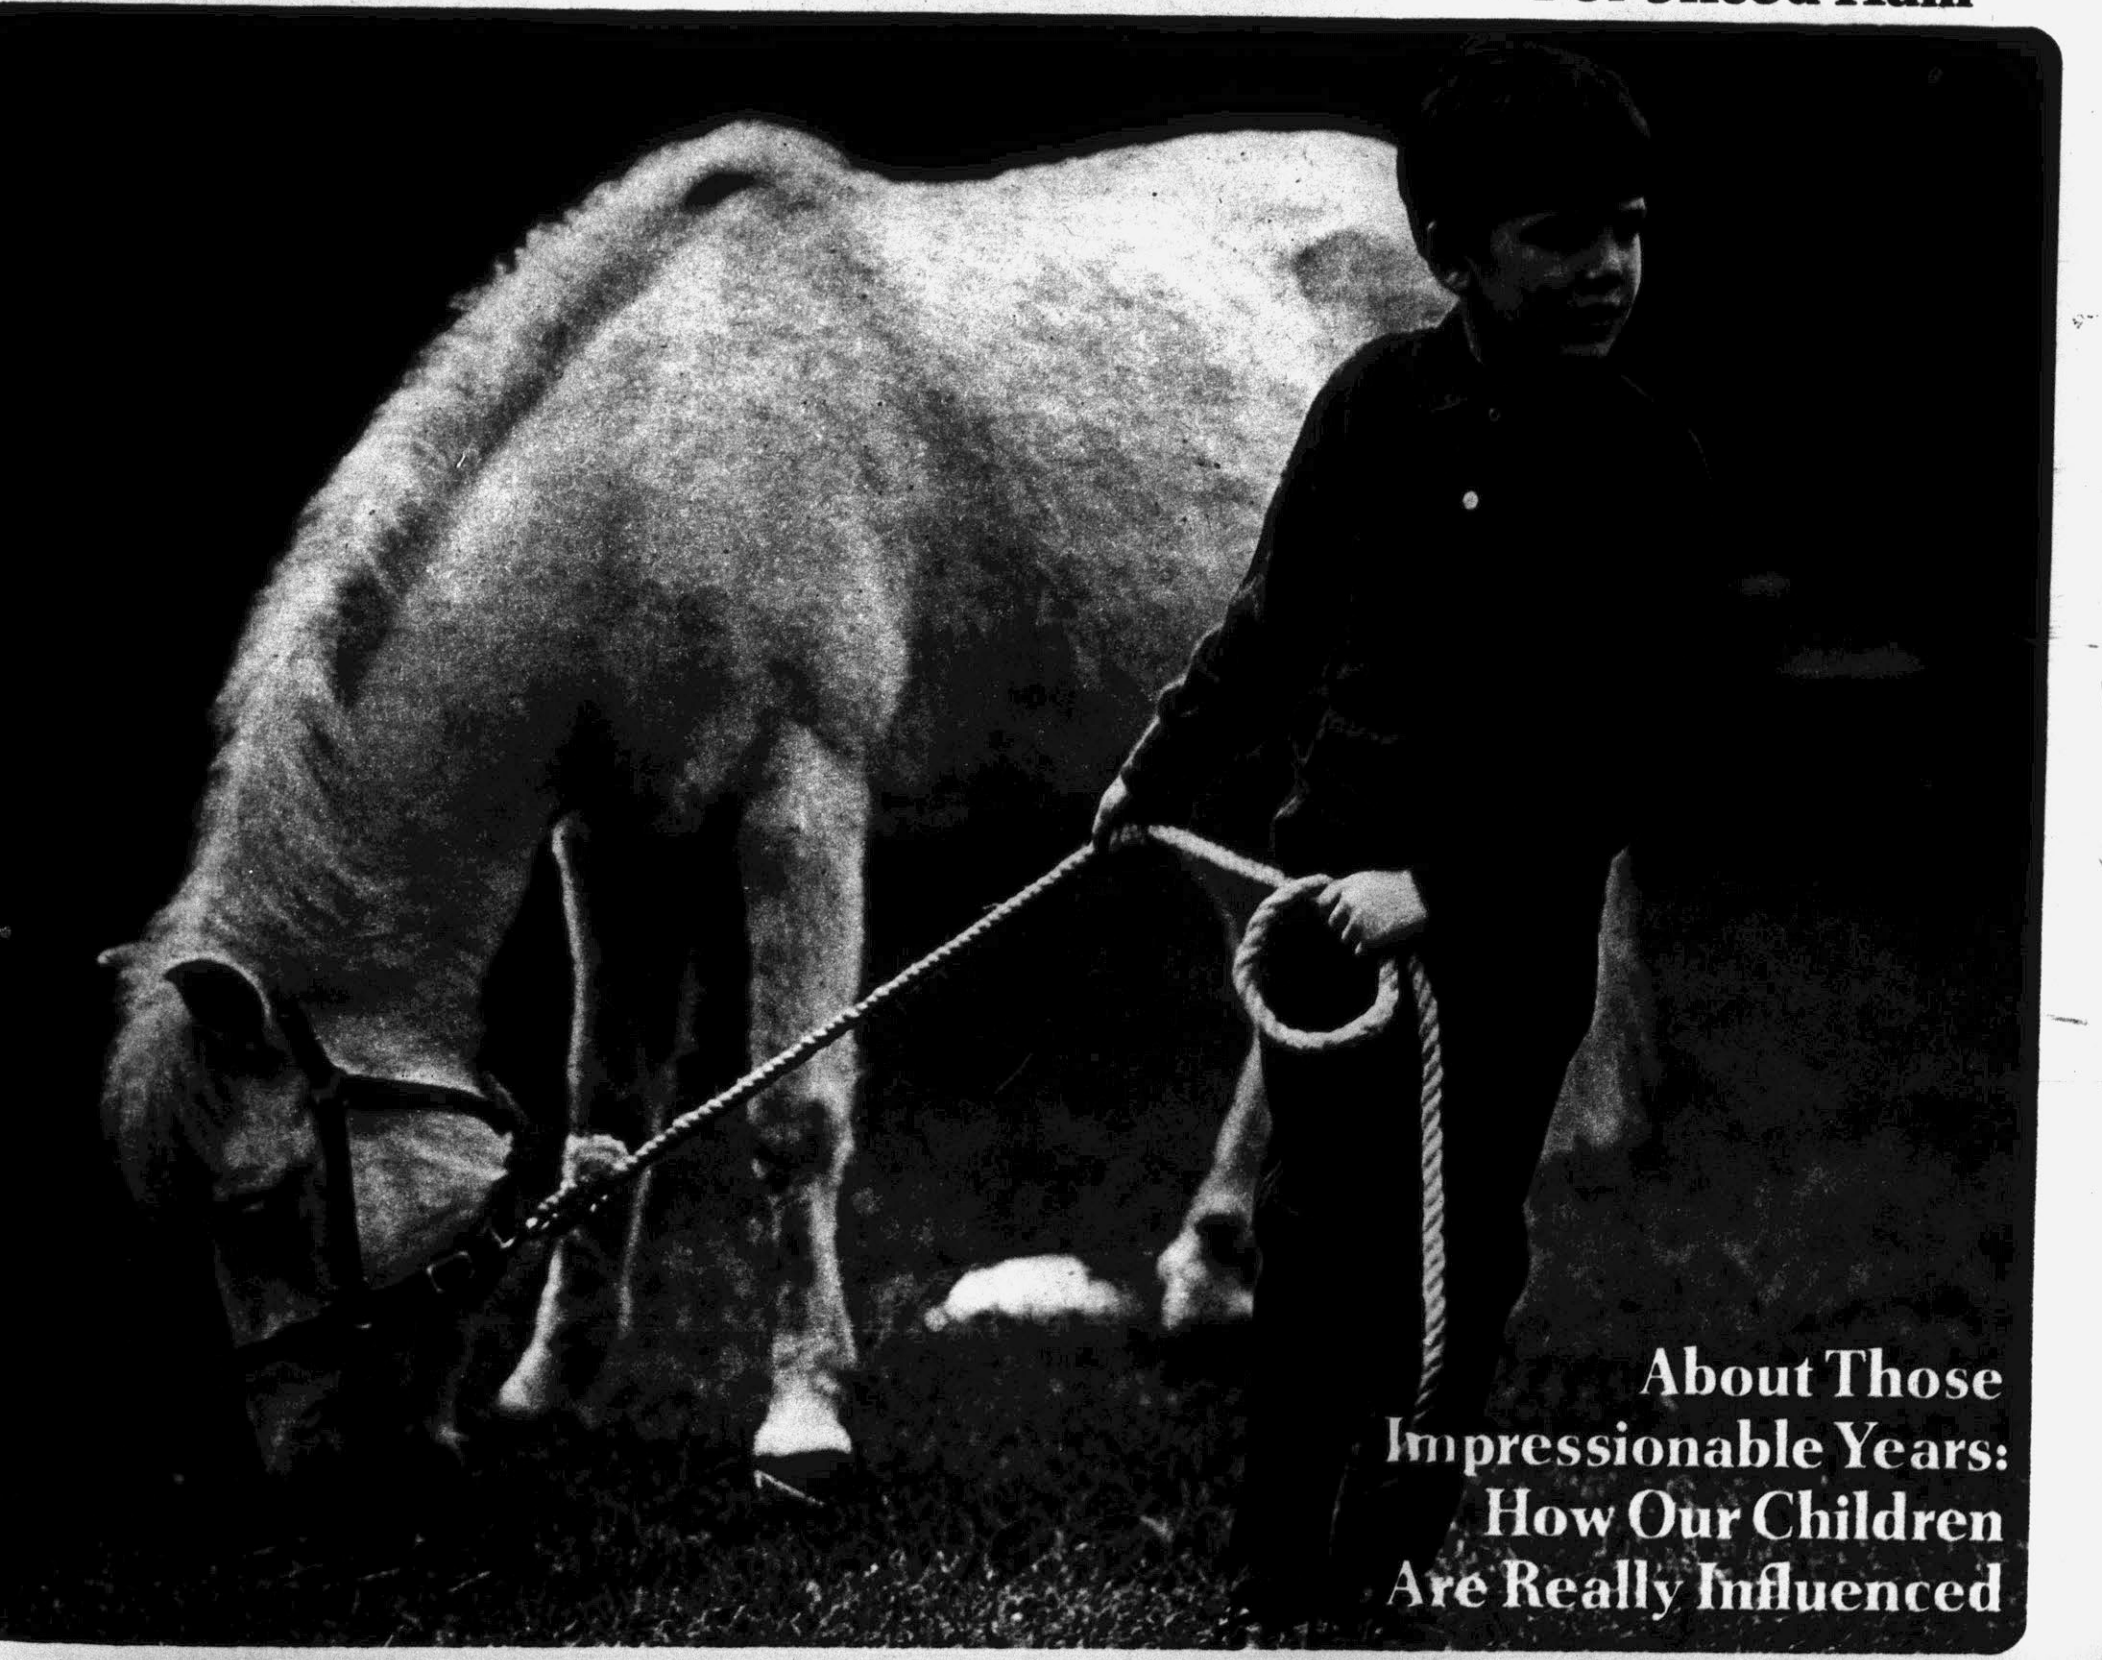
The Flavor of Fall In a Peach Sauce For Sliced Ham



About Those Impressionable Years: How Our Children Are Really Influenced

Ask Them Yourself

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR MARIAN CHRISTY, award-winning fashion writer

What are some of the tip-offs to future fashions? —George Hill, Seattle, Wash.

● First: Don't worry about hemlines. They're stabilizing at the knee. Think sportswear. This is the year to invest in ribbed sweaters to wear with vests and blazers. Sportive tops can be co-ordinated with straight-legged pants or an easy A-skirt with slits that show off great legs. Experiment with colored hose. Forget those basic black shoes—think in terms of bright-colored suedes. Get a new coiffure—something soft and fluffy. Fashion taboos like don't-wear-velvet-for-day are finished. Designers are showing velvet jackets and satin shirts with wool plaid skirts. The easy-to-wear long-sleeved princess dress is "in." Dior showed it in Paris. Every one of the 53,000,000 home sewers in America can whip up a facsimile for little money. Fluffy furs are fun—fox being in the forefront—but the fakes are great. Wrap up winter in a coat that slides on like a bathrobe, and ties at the waist with a leather sash. Boots are a classic shoe substitute. So keep on stomping along.

FOR JOEY BISHOP

When you host the "Tonight Show," why do you argue with Ed McMahon and some of your guests? You say afterward that you're only kidding, but sometimes it sounds serious. —Mrs. W. Theis, Green Bay, Wis.

● It really is kidding. I've been doing it for so long that I've taken it for granted you viewers all realized it was just that.

FOR GEORGE MURPHY, former senator from California

How do you feel about the talk of letting Red China into the United Nations?—L. L. Jackson, Waco, Texas

● I'll probably be scolded for saying this, but the United States can't possibly consider letting Red China into the United Nations without totally abandoning the principles of this country. It was this type of thinking that caused us to lose the China mainland in the first place. We didn't lose it, we gave it away. To admit Red China into the UN is like asking the Boston Strangler to tie your necktie in the morning. It just doesn't make sense.

FOR JOE GARAGIOLA, NBC-tv's "Today Show"

You've had successful careers in both baseball and television. What about your own children's ambitions?—Jane Ennis, Schenectady, N.Y.

● My oldest boy, Joe, Jr., would like to get into broadcasting. He's now at Notre Dame, where he's sports director for the on-campus station. My 16-year-old, Steve, plays football, and he's also a good golfer—but I don't know if he has any plans to become a professional athlete. My Gina is 12 years old. I don't want her to be anything but a little girl.

FOR CAROL BURNETT

Since you are so interested in pollution, you undoubtedly have an opinion about the problem. What do you think is the worst contributor to pollution?—Allan Reed, Columbus Grove, Ohio

● Automobiles. There's no excuse for automobiles not being equipped with smog devices.

FOR JIM LANGE of "The Dating Game"

How are the girls selected on your show?—Mrs. Milton C. Bell, Ft. Worth, Texas

● All applicants play a preliminary game, and if they indicate potential for air, they are called back to play for the producer. Final selections are based on appearance, personality and enthusiasm for the game.

FOR JIM NABORS

How did you get started in show business?—Helen R. Smith, Lisbon, N. H.

● I was a film cutter at NBC in Hollywood and singing at night at "The Horn," a showcase club for new talent in Santa Monica. Bill Dana saw me there. He brought Andy Griffith to see me, and Andy brought his manager, Dick Linke. The next thing I knew I was playing Gomer Pyle on "The Andy Griffith Show."

FOR ANN MILLER, tap dancer

I remember you from "New Faces of 1937" and "You Can't Take It With You" back in 1938. Now I understand you will be dancing again in "Dames at Sea" on TV. What does your husband think of your comeback?—Mrs. M. Thomas, Santa Ana, Calif.

● My husband doesn't say. I'm divorced. But I am looking forward to dancing again very much. I've been married three times. Each husband was a millionaire, but I got nothing from any of them. Well, I did get something from the last one—a 35-carat diamond ring.

FOR ROBERT KLEBERG, owner of Canonero II

When Canonero II is retired for breeding purposes, how many colts do you expect the horse to be able to sire in one year? Will this be done through artificial insemination? —Charles B. Rouse, Bradenton, Fla.

● He'll likely be mated to 40 mares a year, since this is the usual number for younger stallions. All will most probably be by natural service, since the Jockey Club, the organization responsible for setting regulations for the propagation of thoroughbreds, permits horses to be sired by artificial insemination only under very limited conditions.

FOR ROBERT MITCHUM

Prior to "Ryan's Daughter," you had expressed a desire to retire. After that film, you said the same thing, and yet now you are making "Going Home." What changed your mind? —Frank Lawrence, Los Angeles, Calif.

● When Robert Bolt called to ask me to accept a role in "Ryan's Daughter," I told him I couldn't because I was planning to commit suicide. "Oh, yes...I see...," he said, "well, if you would do this wretched film of ours first, and then do yourself in, I'd be happy to stand the expense of your burial." It took nine months to make the film, and I swore that that was it, no more, never again. But they kept on sending me scripts. Finally I said, well, it's about time to get out of the house again. I looked to see how many days off I had on the shooting schedule—then I looked at my tax return. That clinched it.

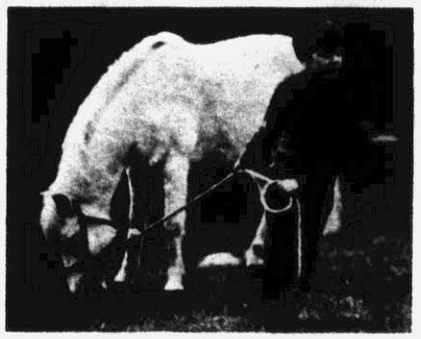
QUIZ/By John E. Gibson

The Impressionable Years: How Our Children Are Really Influenced



True or False: A suitable pet can make the difference between a happy and unhappy childhood (See number 4)

The most important years of your life are the formative ones—when character is molded, when thoughts, ideas and concepts are given direction. This is the period your child is living in. And this quiz deals with some of the things parents are most concerned about during that time.

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. The most important thing you can give your child is an education which will equip him to achieve his full potential in life.

2. If your child has a good sense of humor, this is an indication of creative ability.

3. If your child has developed a "hate" for a neighborhood boy, the best way to handle it is to keep hands off and let him get it out of his system with fisticuffs or harmless name-calling.

4. A suitable pet can make the difference between a happy and unhappy childhood.

5. Boys tend to have a different concept of God than girls do.

6. A parent can learn as much from his child as his child can learn from him.

ANSWERS

1. False. Authorities agree that the most important thing you can give your child—especially in his tender, formative years—is understanding: taking the trouble to listen to his problems with a perceptive ear, and acquiring sensitive insight into the things that he wonders and worries about. Nothing is more vital to a child's sense of security than a close relationship with his parents.

2. True. Psychological studies have shown that a well-developed sense of humor, a marked ability to see the funny side of things, is an indication that the child possesses creative ability. Other signs of creativity in children: learning to walk and talk at an early age; an inquiring mind and strong curiosity about people, places, what makes things tick; good reading ability and enjoyment of reading; and a tendency to favor older children as playmates.

3. False. This is likely to lead to further violence on both sides and result in troublesome complications. Studies conducted by investigators from two leading colleges have demonstrated the efficacy of a method of harmlessly releasing one boy's hostility toward another. Let him draw a picture of the boy he 'hates' with chalk, or whatever, on a large piece of cardboard—prop it up in the back yard and throw things at it as hard as he can. The psychologists found this principle to be highly effective with aggressive youngsters in reducing their feelings of anger and hostility.

4. True. Psychologists have found that a child will often feel closer to a pet than he does to any friend or playmate. And frequently a child who may have difficulty in relating to an adult can achieve a wonderfully satisfying relationship with a pet. Also, studies show that children with emotional problems have benefited remarkably when they acquired a pet which they could feel a close accord with.

5. True—according to the findings of a psychological study on how boys and girls felt about God. The investigation showed that the qualities emphasized by girls were helpfulness and affection. ("He helps us to be good." "He takes care of us.") Boys were more inclined to think of God as an all powerful creator, a lawmaker, judge and punisher.

6. True. A little child's attitude—full of hope, love and curiosity—often reflects a far healthier state of mind than the adult's does. The wise parent will realize that he can often absorb a great deal of simple wisdom from his child. The child can teach him, among other things, something that perhaps he has forgotten—how to be happy. ☐

COOKBOOK/By Melanie DeProft

A Peach-Clove Sauce For Sliced Ham

(Served With Corn Spoon Bread)

Picture a fruit-sauced ham with these great go-alongs —fresh golden corn and corn spoon bread.

PEACH-CLOVE SAUCE WITH HAM

3 tablespoons brown sugar
1 tablespoon cornstarch
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon ground cloves
1 can (15 or 16 oz.) cling peach slices, drained
Peach syrup
1 cup apple cider
1 teaspoon lemon juice
Canned ham slices, heated

1. Blend brown sugar, cornstarch, salt, and cloves in a saucepan. Stir in the peach syrup and apple cider. Bring mixture to boiling, stirring constantly; boil 3 min.

2. Mix in drained peach slices. Heat thoroughly. Remove from heat and mix in lemon juice.

3. Spoon hot fruit sauce over ham slices arranged on a platter.

About 2⅔ cups sauce

CORN SPOON BREAD

6 ears fresh corn
1 cup yellow cornmeal
2 tablespoons finely chopped onion
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
4 eggs
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 to 2 tablespoons baconion or prepared bacon-like pieces
2 teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon sugar
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon seasoned pepper

1. Scald milk in top of a double boiler over simmering water.

2. Meanwhile, remove husks and silks from corn; rinse. Cut corn kernels from cobs (about 2 cups). Set aside.

3. Add the cornmeal to scalded milk gradually, stirring constantly. Mix in onion and parsley. Cook over boiling water until thickened, about 10 min., stirring frequently and vigorously.

4. Meanwhile, beat eggs in a large bowl until thick and piled softly.

5. Remove double boiler top from water. Stir in butter or margarine, baconion or bacon-like pieces, and a mixture of remaining ingredients. Add hot mixture gradually to eggs, beating constantly. Mix in the corn. Turn into a buttered 2-qt. casserole.

6. Bake at 425°F. 40 to 45 min., or until top is browned. Remove from oven immediately; garnish with a large thin orange slice (peel notched) and a small sprig of parsley drawn through center. Serve immediately.

6 to 8 servings

CARROT-RAISIN SLAW

Prepare Orange Salad Dressing (see recipe). Put plumped dark seedless raisins into a bowl and pour in dressing to cover. Chill raisins and remaining dressing. In a salad bowl, toss desired amounts of shredded carrot and cabbage with the marinated raisins and dressing to coat.

ORANGE SALAD DRESSING

1 to 2 teaspoons grated orange peel
2 tablespoons cider vinegar
1 env. Italian salad dressing mix
⅔ cup salad oil

1. Put orange juice, orange peel, cider vinegar, and salad dressing mix into a bottle; cover and shake well. Pour in oil, cover, and shake well. Chill.

2. Shake dressing before using.

1 cup salad dressing

GINGER TEA WITH ORANGE SLICES

Brew tea using 1 prepared tea bag or 1 rounded teaspoon tea for each cup of freshly boiling water. Put a piece of crystallized ginger into each tea cup needed. Pour freshly brewed tea over ginger. Float half slices of orange studded with cloves.

Hello, my name is Norris Strauss . . .

and I've got to get something off my chest before I explode!

You may think I'm a big shot for putting a full page ad in Family Weekly Actually I just work at a regular job which I enjoy. I was born and raised in Brooklyn as were my parents—I have many relatives here. I've only moved once in 28 years.

I'm not a racetrack character, nor am I fronting for anybody. Instead of a yacht, sports car and six figure bank account as system writers boast, I drive an ordinary klunker and live in a modest apt. (my family says it's too modest). But I have plenty of leisure and a local rep as a studious neighbor who burns the midnight oil. I was always fascinated by serious research on old Racing Forms to see what I could come up with . . . well, after many disappointments, I finally found the pot of gold.

I've hit onto something so royally big that I feel like the Chinese with a tiger by the tail, and it's driving me nuts! I went into a spin and ordered a whole stack of back issue Racing Forms, and I found a winning secret that WORKS, period. I can't express the joy of this achievement, nor the sense of power or well being—I feel SECURE.

If I didn't expect a nice pension—I plan to pull a slow one and live to 100, didn't enjoy my job, didn't have ample leisure, if my family wouldn't give me a hard time, if I weren't so darn timid, if my religious parents weren't so anti-gambling, I'd follow the sun from track to track. I've figured I can win over $11,000 a year on $20 bets, and that's more than I earn. What to do? What to do?

I need advice. How can I convince people? I've got the races beat out of the frame and I just can't keep it to myself or I'll burst at the seams!

Maybe I shouldn't bring this up, as I have no proof and won't mention names. But something is odd—these horses are winning when they "shouldn't." If I've cracked a code involving track management, publishers or horsemen, or any related combination thereof, I'm ecstatic. If some group is making money on these winners, well—

I checked this method on old Racing Forms for the following periods: Nov. 65 through Apr. 66; Aug. 67 through 68; Jan. 69 through Sept. 69. All periods proved very profitable. Tightening the rules might improve it, but it looks great as is. Were these just lucky periods?

The system selects about 4½ plays per day per track, so you can see this gets plenty of action. Past results have shown that you can expect to make about $962 profit on $20 win bets per month at one track. Winners will average about 30% with an average win mutuel of about $9.55.

It's completely mechanical and requires no judgment. It's really simple. If I were dying, I could whisper it to you in about 100 words (60 if I had rehearsed the scene). All you need is the Racing Form or Morning Telegraph. No need to be at the track.

Ever did anything wild on a lark? Want to join this adventure, come what may, for $10? Ever thought of following the sun from track to track? Or perhaps playing the horses at the legal bookies in Vegas or Caliente? No job worries, no boss, sleep late, plenty of money—but most important of all, living the kind of life so few people are ever able to.

One last word. You've seen system sellers using aliases from p.o. boxes and mail drops. Has any one of them ever signed his real name, given his history, worked for an honest living, stayed put over 60 days, or cared for anything except getting your money? Weigh that.

I can rush my complete secret to you by return mail for $10. Check me out. Do what I did. Take any back Racing Forms over a reasonable period of time. Apply my system. If you can show me that it doesn't work, I'll NOT ONLY REFUND YOUR $10 BUT I'LL DOUBLE IT AND SEND YOU $20. Fair enough?

READ HOW THOSE USING MY SYSTEM ARE MAKING OUT WITH IT

I can't thank you enough for this system. So far all my back checking has proven to be correct. The following results were obtained through diligent checking:

Hollywood Park	July 1 to Aug. 1, 1970	$1,394	(21 days)
Aqueduct	July 1 to Aug. 1, 1970	$814	(27 days)
Saratoga	Aug. 3 to Aug. 29, 1970	$826	(20 days)
Belmont Park	Aug. 31 to Sept. 30, 1970	$862	(25 days)
Golden Gate	Mar. 27 to April 10, 1971	$600	(13 days)
Del Mar	July 24 to Aug. 31, 1970	$4,252	(32 days)
Bowie	Mar. 24 to April 10, 1971	$930	(15 days)
Santa Anita	Mar. 24 to April 10, 1971	$1,000	(13 days)
Aqueduct	Mar. 24 to April 10, 1971	$400	(17 days)
Longacres	May 29 to June 28, 1970	$2,378	(20 days)
Longacres	Aug. 1 to Sept. 12, 1970	$1,840	(25 days)

I can just hardly believe it! Thanks to you I can win at the races!—C.M., Seattle

At Golden Gate here from Feb. 16th opening day to March 24th the system showed a net profit of $1728 on a $20 flat win bet. A $10 win $10 place bet showed $1257 net profit. From March 24th to present—the overall profit has decreased to $1200 flat win ($20).—B.S., El Cerrito, Calif.

Thank you! Thank you! Thank you! Everything you said is true. You have come up with the best system ever. I've tried to strengthen it, break it, refine it but I simply cannot come up with any way to improve on it. My success has been at the Liberty Bell and even when I wasn't at the track I figured the races and your method proved itself time and time again.—D. F., West Chester, Pa.

I am the owner of many racing systems, all which are very good. When I received the system which I ordered from you I tried the system, I checked and rechecked it, and I can truthfully say that it is one of the best systems I own. —M. F. W., South English, Iowa

Enclosed find results at the track for the last 2 months. It's incredible. I am ahead by $1550. You may use my name for any testimonial.—L. O., Los Angeles, Cal.

Incidentally, I find that the system's choice comes in 2nd often enough that it pays to bet both win and place. In fact winnings as far as I've gone are just about double by betting both. Thanks for being one honest solicitor.—B. F., Gila Bend, Ariz.

I owe you a million thanks. Just like you said, it doesn't work at all times, but I'll be honest with you the highest number always comes in the money.—E. S., Lorain, Ohio

What's religion got to do with success in marriage?

Marriage advice was never so freely available as it is today. Marriage problems were never so openly discussed. Worldly goods for family use were never more abundant. Yet divorce and unhappy marriages continue at an appalling rate.

With all the talk about how to make a "go" of marriage, little is said about religion. This is strange considering that the family is an essential part of God's plans for the world of men . . . and that God is, in fact, the true architect of successful marriage and family life.

Whether you are already married . . . or just thinking about it . . . it may help you to read our new pocket-size pamphlet: "The Real Secret of Successful Marriage." Write today. We'll send a copy free . . . nobody will call.

PAT BOONE: "Today, My Career

Professional colleagues have made him the target of jokes. Dean Martin cracked, "That Pat Boone . . . he's so religious! When I shook hands with him the other day, my whole right side sobered up." But Pat enjoys the ribbing. "Let's face it," he admits, "I am an oddity."

Pat Boone had it made: success, popularity, money, acclaim, a loving wife and four beautiful daughters. Then, as he tried to simultaneously straddle two separate worlds (the glamorous show world where he worked, and the fundamental world of his wife, children and faith, where he lived) everything suddenly came apart at the seams. "My marriage, my family life, my faith and my career all began to unravel in the classic tragic pattern."

Pat began his singing career by winning a Ted Mack amateur contest. This was followed by appearances on the Arthur Godfrey Show and a success that took him to the heights of his profession. His records (30 million of them) whirled around on turntables all over the nation. He made personal appearances, movies and starred on his own television show. Apple cheeked, scrubbed clean, Pat Boone was the All American Boy with white shoes, the dream son of every American mother, and a solid show-business smash. To meet the staggering demands on his time and talent, the Boones moved to California and established their home base there.

"I quit my television show to make the film 'Journey to the Center of the Earth.' We decided to concentrate on movies and quit the grind of weekly TV performances." Pat continued to travel when necessary, ". . . for weeks at a time on a film set or on a concert tour." As he did this, the question at the Boone home grew more and more . . . "Will success spoil Pat Boone?"

The career-demanding travel on Pat meant separation; his wife Shirley couldn't go along because the children were little. "What troubled her so much was that she knew my standards were starting to slip. For one thing, I had begun to drink a bit, partly because I had been in Europe where it was normal to drink wine instead of water. Also, I had been with missionary friends in Germany who said they had to drink beer with people in order to reach them with the Gospel. I claimed this as a basis for my feeling that there wasn't anything inherently wrong with alcoholic beverages."

The returned-from-Europe Pat was quite different from the Pat Hollywood had remembered. "I didn't see any reason for not having something to drink," he now confesses. "And this brought on other things . . . I started telling indecent jokes at parties. Obviously I was changing to a greater and greater degree."

When Shirley questioned him husband Pat recalls, "I would shrug off what she was saying. On the road, I would go to a party on Saturday night and be out until two or three in the morning. During those hours I would engage in a lot of ribald talk with girls. I found it easy and enjoyable. An occasional drink, the loud music and the titillating awareness that some young lovely was obviously 'available' all seemed more and more fun."

As that "fun" increased for Pat Boone, so did his troubles. While filming a scene in "Good-Bye Charlie" with Debbie Reynolds, Pat found himself playing a naïve "mama's boy" character. "It was a caricature of what many people really thought about me—something of a square. I was playing Pat Boone, plus! But I played it all the way, to the extent of drinking champagne, getting half-bombed. When I got home, Shirley felt she was looking at a stranger."

This was a family crisis. Shirley was more troubled than Pat; she could see her family and the Boone life about to crumble. While in this drift, Shirley and Pat began to wonder whether they really loved each other.

Shirley had made the decision not to fight Pat. But she was finally forced to remind him that, as the head of their family, he was responsible not only for himself but for the souls of five other people.

Shirley's pronouncement struck Pat. Now he had to admit that his life was floundering. From his North Texas State College days, when he had served as a preacher for the Church of Christ, he had strayed far. It was stark to him now that he had lost his way not only with his wife and children but also with God.

Troubled, Pat turned to a friend. The friend, realizing that here was a tormented soul, introduced Pat to one Harald Bredesen, a man of God. Bredesen came to Pat's home, where they talked long and seriously. Bredesen suddenly asked: "Can't we go outdoors where we can pray?"

Out in the open, they wandered to the Coldwater Canyon of the Hollywood Hills. Here, with Bredesen in the lead, they began climbing up to the heights, praying

Is Second to Family and God"

Pat with Shirley and family: His wife was finally forced to remind him that, as the head of their family, he was responsible not only for himself but for the souls of five other people.

as they went. A strange passion overcame Pat. As Harald Bredesen prayed, Pat listened.

"It was difficult to tell when he stopped talking to me and when he started to pray to God," Boone recalls now. "He prayed with his eyes closed, he prayed walking, he prayed standing still, he knelt down to pray. The sense of God's presence began to grow on me. The sun dipped into the ocean, darkness crowded over the hills; lights winked on in the houses in the valley below. Only faintly was I now aware of the physical world about me. Never before had I experienced the sense of the Lord's presence as I did now on the mountaintop. I had the feeling He was all around me. With the sense of His presence came a feeling of release, as though I were suddenly freed from the restraints and limitations of the world below me."

As he worshipped, Pat sensed "a love for my brother and for my wife and children, for all those who came to my mind in those hours, that I had never sensed before. We prayed, we wept, we shouted, we sang. It seemed to me that all the inhibitions, apprehensions and concerns of my life washed away."

Down from that mountaintop and out of that intimate experience, there arose a new Pat Boone—a man who now felt cleansed and who was absorbed with a new hyper-belief in God. From that day on, a reunion of love began to surge through the hearts of Shirley and Pat. "My marriage became like a honeymoon again, and my children and all of us were extremely close."

As Boone's commitment to God swelled out, extending over into his career, his business, his friendships, professional colleagues (Frank Sinatra, Phil Harris, Don Rickles, etc.) began to make him the target of jokes. Dean Martin cracked, "That Pat Boone . . . he's so religious! When I shook hands with him the other day my whole right side sobered up." But Pat enjoys his show-biz friends and their good-natured ribbing. "Let's face it" he admits, "I am an oddity."

There have been more serious repercussions and reactions to his career. On the Merv Griffin television show recently, Pat said he felt that his devout belief and practice has hurt him somewhat professionally. Whether this is true or not is not clear. His capable personal manager Jack Spina (the only one he ever had), who has guided his commercial destiny for 16 years, has well understood Pat's personal trauma. Spina has skillfully modulated Pat out of his exclusive solo work into the group field as well, with the entire family. "The Boone Family" has already cut several records and albums (on the religious side) for a receptive market. They have appeared in concert to standing-room-only audiences, and this June they headlined at the Fremont in Las Vegas for four weeks. Pat has also told his story in his latest book, "A New Song."

Last April, Pat's Church of Christ in Inglewood, California, through one of the elders, read a statement of "disfellowship" to the congregation, directed to Pat and Shirley. His disapproving minister, the Reverend Darrel Rickard, told the congregation "Pat has gone to an emotional extreme. It has become almost a narcotic type of thing, a spiritual type of high . . ." But Pat remains convinced that he has found his destiny, and nothing can change it. Personal happiness, he says, and the happiness of his family are more important than either his career or the opinions of others. He is hopeful that our young people, too, can restore their lost identity. "Today's young people have grown up without a feeling of identity or relationship with God," says Pat.

With increasing frequency, Boone appears at rallies where the kids flock to see and hear him. He tells them, "There's no isolation from drugs and other problems today; there's only insulation—a search for meaning, relationships that matter. All this can be summed up in that one word: insulation."

To Pat Boone it came that day high on the Hollywood mountaintop. With his own identity found, Pat and his family are more and more "a-travellin', a-talkin', a-singin', and a-spreadin' the word"—"insulation." □

NOTHING STANDS IN HER WAY

Softly compressed Tampax tampons give her protection she can depend on. They're worn internally so nothing can show. And so comfortable, they can't even be felt when they're properly in place. No wonder millions of women who think for themselves choose Tampax tampons.

TAMPAX® TAMPONS ARE MADE ONLY BY TAMPAX INCORPORATED, PALMER, MASS.

Make Betsy Ross' skirt out of George Washington's wallpaper.

The wallpaper thing is true.
We hunted for months in little material shops until we found some swatches of material that almost exactly matched the wallpaper pattern George had in his bedroom.

In the process, we ran across a lot of other old and interesting patterns.

Tiny blue flour-sack flowers. Colonial stencils. Pillow-ticking patterns. Grandma Moses primitives. Wildflower linoleum block prints. Farmer patterns. Ancient bandana prints. Peasant patterns. Paisleys.

(Paisleys were invented in pre-historic times. Originally rude prints made with the heel of the fist, they later became stylized.)

All of the patches are bright, earthy, and happy.

They go with anything from ruffled lace to blue denim to Army olive drab.

We've taken 180 of these 4" squares, and included them in a kit with unconventional patterns for a mini, midi, or maxi skirt, a jumper, a pinafore, a poncho, a shoulder tote bag, kerchief, hot pants, peasant bolero, knickers, or slacks.

If you make the smaller items, you can make two or three things with one $6 kit.

(In the old days, women used to weave and print their own cloth. So every scrap was valuable, and every scrap was saved and used. No one would have dreamt of throwing it away.)

Everything in the kit is the best quality you could buy. The material is all good old American washable crease-resistant preshrunk cotton. Pinked on all four sides of every patch to prevent raveling. Even the thread is first-quality Coats & Clarks. The press-on tape and elastic banding are the finest made.

Sewing the kit is very easy. And it's fun.

You create your own fabric as you sew. If you're really gutsy, you can create your own patterns.

Patch your jeans. Or put pockets on a solid skirt. Make gifts.

(One kit makes 3 tote bags, 10 ties, 12 throw pillows stuffed with torn pantyhose, or 22 potholders.)

Cafe curtains take one kit. Shower curtains take 2. A bedspread might take 3 or 4.

Make a country apron for your Mother. Or a cummerbund for Dad's tux. Or a great shirt for your boyfriend.

You can quilt the material. Add fringe. Or ric-rac. Start a sewing bee.

The possibilities are endless. It is virtually impossible for any other girl in the world to come up with an identical garment, even if she used the very same patches as you did.

The permutations and combinations of 180 four- sided patches is astronomical.

This is very important. Patchwork gets very popular in Revolutionary times.

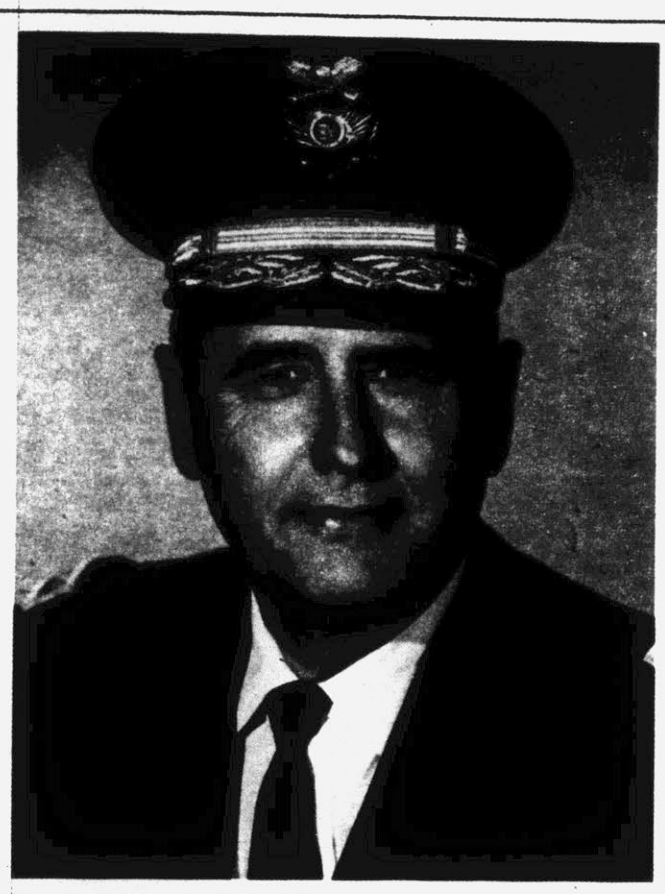
A Checklist of Ways To Protect Your Home



By Edward M. Davis, Los Angeles Chief of Police

How good are burglar alarms? What should you do if a burglar attacks you? What breeds make the best watchdogs? In an exclusive report for Family Weekly, an expert answers these questions, plus 10 others every homeowner should know

No home—house or apartment—can ever be made 100-percent robbery and burglaryproof. But there are means to assure you, your family and your property an enormous amount of protection. Most of them cost little money. Basically, the idea is to deter a potential intruder from getting into your premises by "hardening the site," as the military would say. In short, make it difficult for him to break into the house. Here are the most basic rules to follow:

1. The best protection is a dog, and the two best types are the Doberman and the German shepherd. They are intelligent, usually gentle with the family and fiercely protective. But raise them to be a bit reserved with people outside your immediate family.

2. It's comparatively easy to get into a house with sliding glass doors by simply wiggling open the lock. To avoid this, put a stick or broom handle in the lower track. This way the door can't slide open. As an added protection, you can put little bells on the inside of the screen door or any other device that makes a noise when jiggled even slightly. No intruder likes noise.

3. Wherever you have solid doors, install "dead bolts" (these are locks which have to be locked by hand, as opposed to "spring latches," which can easily be opened). No amount of manipulation from the outside will open that lock. If you have glass panels in your door, get the type of lock that can be locked from both outside and inside with a key. Otherwise the intruder could break the glass and reach in to open the door. And be sure the doors are solid, not hollow doors that can be easily kicked in.

4. If you have a double door, don't rely on a tiny bolt to keep the second (usually) stationary door from opening. It

She Needs Your Love

Little Mie-Wen in Formosa already knows many things . . . the gnawing of hunger . . . the shivering of fear . . . the misery of being unwanted.

But she has never known love. Her mother died when she was born. Her father was poor—and didn't want a girl child. So Mie-Wen has spent her baby years without the affection and security every child craves.

Your love can give Mie-Wen, and children just as needy, the privileges you would wish for your own child.

Through Christian Children's Fund you can sponsor one of these youngsters. We use the word sponsor to symbolize the bond of love that exists between you and the child.

The cost? Only $12 a month. Your love is demonstrated in a practical way because your money helps with nourishing meals . . . medical care . . . warm clothing . . . education . . . understanding housemothers. . . .

And in return you will receive your child's personal history, photograph, plus a description of the orphanage where your child lives. You can write and send packages. Your child will know who you are and will answer your letters. Correspondence is translated at our overseas offices.

(If you want your child to have a special gift—a pair of shoes, a warm jacket, a fuzzy bear—you can send your check to our office, and the entire amount will be forwarded, along with your instructions.)

Will you help? Requests come from orphanages every day. And they are urgent. Children wrapping rags on their feet, school books years out of date, milk supplies exhausted, babies abandoned by unwed mothers.

Since 1938, thousands of American sponsors have found this to be an intimate person-to-person way of sharing their blessings with youngsters around the world.

Little Mie-Wen and children like her need your love—won't you help? Today?

Sponsors urgently needed this month for children in: India, Brazil, Taiwan (Formosa), Mexico and Philippines. (Or let us select a child for you from our emergency list.)

can be kicked in easily. Get a thick commercial type half-inch bolt. As added protection you could bar the doors on the inside with two-by-fours slid into ornamental hardware.

5. Keep some exterior lights on—all night long. If you are away for the evening or on a vacation keep one or more lights on inside as well but not in a room that can be looked into from the outside.

6. Electronic alarm systems have value, but they are expensive and by no means foolproof. Naturally, extreme noise such as bells going off loudly, will frighten some but not all burglars. Some of the more elaborate alarm systems have lines to both private protective agencies and the police. But about 98 percent of all alarms we get that way are false—someone forgot to turn off a system to get into their house, opened a window in the middle of the night to get fresh air, dogs running into it. That sort of thing.

7. Call your police if you see anyone suspicious, not just in front of your home or apartment, but near your neighbor's as well. And ask them to do the same for you. Many people think that the police don't like to be bothered. Not true. We'll gladly respond to 99 calls that don't pay off in the hope that the hundredth will net us a man we are looking for.

8. If someone actually breaks into your home, and sees you, use your best judgment what to do. Screaming is good—provided you don't live in a soundproof apartment or house. If you can convince him another member of your family may come back momentarily or is in a different part of the home, it may help. There are times when doing nothing is best. But if you're attacked, fight back by every means, fair or foul.

9. Have the number of the police on all your phones. If you don't remember, call the operator.

10. If a stranger should ask to use your telephone, don't allow him to enter. Instead, offer to make the call for him.

11. Have your valuables appraised and record a description and the serial numbers. Leave a copy of it in your safe deposit box. Every year we collect thousands of items that have to be auctioned off because we can't find the rightful owners. Last year in the Los Angeles area alone, we auctioned off 800 bicycles because we couldn't find the youngsters who owned them.

12. If you have a garage attached to your house, with a door that leads into it, never leave the garage door open and unlocked when you are gone. It's too easy for someone to go into the garage, close the door, then work his way into the house undisturbed.

13. Don't advertise your absence. Refrain from having an article in your local newspaper that mentions your trip—until you return. Arrange to have your lawns and shrubs trimmed and watered while you are away. Leave the blinds or drapes drawn in different positions—not closed—and arrange to have these positions changed from time to time by a neighbor. Turn your telephone bell down to its lowest level. A constantly ringing telephone is an indication that no one is home. Stop your mail and paper deliveries. In addition, have a friend or neighbor check your mailbox and driveway or (in an apartment) front door to be sure that nothing (i.e. a delivery) is left that could give you away. □

NEW JN INSTA-JET PROPANE

FLAME GUN

In winter, the adjustable instant-action flame clears away ice and snow faster than you'd believe possible. Whips through even the heaviest drifts. Clears walks and driveways. Routs clogged gutters of ice and old leaves. Thaws frozen pipes.

In summer, your JN Insta-Jet burns out weeds incredibly fast. Destroys insect nests at a safe distance. Edges walks, paths, lawns, flower beds. Burns out grass between patio stones or bricks. Removes old paint from hard-to-reach places.

OUTPERFORMS THE OTHERS!

This remarkable gun features Tune-a-Flame so you can dial the right size flame for the job. Extra-long feeder tube lets you reach out-of-the-way spots without straining. Machine-gun grip is easy to hold. Lightweight . . . less than three pounds including cylinder.

Jobmanship

Introducing a new feature dedicated to helping you understand and improve your on-the-job relationships. By S. R. Redford

HOW TO HANDLE A COWORKER'S INCOMPETENCE WITHOUT NAGGING

● People working alongside you can often make or break your job. No matter how efficient a worker, teacher or salesperson you are, if there's friction between you and coworkers, your supervisor may consider you a liability.

When a fellow-worker's actions are complicating your job life, the safest approach is to avoid any tinge of fault-finding. Instead, achieve what you want by letting him help you. For example, "John, I have a problem keeping up with my paperwork. Maybe you can help me. Could I have the parts-order sheets every day before lunch? I think then I could take care of them by five o'clock." This implies that you have something at stake. It's not criticism, but rather a constructive request for aid. Spoken in private to your fellow worker, it should produce results while keeping your job friendship intact.

WHY CAN'T PRODUCTION AND SALES PEOPLE BE FRIENDS?

● You may have noticed that production and sales people in the same company often disagree at business meetings. According to an authoritative management publication, it's the inevitable result of two very different kinds of personalities.

The production man is usually a "realist." He's a good administrator and fact oriented. He sees the world and the people in it as a complex but mechanistically patterned place.

A salesman sees people, not facts, as the real center of the world. Influencing others is his main concern. Year in and year out salesmen are impressed by the whims of human responses. As a result, sales presonnel are not particularly impressed with facts.

At the company meeting, the production man hammers away at the facts of the situation. The salesman at the same meeting is impatient with "mere" facts. He sets forth the plan that his experience and his hunches lead him to trust. Is it any wonder that the production man's and the salesman's proposals are often so very different?

A Reader's Remembrance:

The Day I Met Johnny Cash

He hesitated a moment, as though thinking, then looked me straight in the eye. "Suicide is a dead-end street," he said softly.

It was the spring of 1959, a Saturday night in Shreveport, Louisiana. I was an Airman Second Class stationed at Barksdale Air Force Base in Bossier City, La., far from my home in Tennessee. I was 22 years old and very despondent that night, close to the thought of taking my own life. I'd only been in the Air Force for a few months and had never been so far from the people and places I loved. Nothing seemed to be going right. The world seemed bleak and empty.

To perk up my spirits, I decided to go to the Louisiana Hayride, a popular Saturday-night show near the base. The special guest that night was a man who was not too well known nationally but who had already made a name for himself on the country music circuit—Johnny Cash. I'd always loved his music but had never seen him perform in person. Johnny took over the stage like a thunderbolt—he sang and sang with all his heart, making every song ring true. I watched him perform and thought to myself: Here's a man whose life has meaning because he can make other people feel good. I was determined to meet him.

I waited backstage after the show was over, and finally Johnny Cash came through the door. I was only hoping to get his autograph. But when I saw him face to face, I felt a sudden compulsion to stop him and tell him my troubles. I murmured something to the effect that his performance had helped me a great deal.

"I know how you feel" he said, looking up from his autograph signing and straight into my eyes. "I've only been out of the Air Force a couple of years myself, and I've had those same feelings."

Then he did something which had a profound effect on me. Setting his guitar case down, he put his arm around my shoulder and walked off with me a few steps. "Try to remember something, son. Life has corners, corners you'll find you have to turn even when you didn't know they were there. And though things may seem terrible at the time, around every one of those corners is a new story and a new friend. Life is a challenge. There's always something to look forward to."

He hesitated a moment, as though thinking, then looked me straight in the eye again. "Suicide is a dead-end street," he said softly.

I watched him as he picked up his guitar case and walked to his car. I'm sure Johnny Cash doesn't remember this meeting with me now. For he's come a long way since then. But he seemed so sincerely interested in me, so determined to help me in whatever way he could. He gave me new strength. I did get through those trying days, and I did find new friends, new interests. But it was Johnny Cash who made me do the looking.

REDU-CAL™—SCIENCE'S INCREDIBLE "FURNACE-IN-A-'TAB'" THAT TRIGGERS THE SAFEST, FASTEST, MOST EFFECTIVE FAT-BURNER THE WORLD HAS EVER SEEN!!!

LOSE

up to 7 lbs. in just 48 HOURS!
up to 16 lbs. in just 1 WEEK!
up to 34 lbs. in just 1 MONTH!
up to 79 lbs. in just 3 MONTHS!

YES, MELT AWAY, BURN AWAY, FLUSH AWAY AS MUCH AS 79 POUNDS OF FAT IN JUST 3 SHORT MONTHS!

Not a dangerous drug . . . Each "tab" sets the stage for a fat-burning chain-reaction FOR PERMANENT LIFETIME SLIMNESS!

So safe, a leading doctor not only recommends REDU-CAL to his wife and patients, BUT INSISTS that anyone with a weight problem can avail themselves of this FINAL VICTORY OVER FAT . . . THAT OXIDIZES, VAPORIZES, TOTALLY ANIHILATES EXCESS WEIGHT AS FAST AS UP TO ONE POUND EVERY 8 HOURS!

NOW! A LIFETIME OF SLIMNESS WITHOUT A MOMENT OF HUNGER!

First, I want to make one thing perfectly clear. No matter how many times you've been fooled by useless drugs, fad diets, or ridiculous exercises, etc., you simply must accept the fact that you cannot buy "slimness in a bottle". No one pill all by itself can ever "atomize" 30, 40, 60 pounds of excess flab overnight! BUT . . . there is a special new formulation . . . designed by a leading medical authority, that when used as directed, converts your entire digestive system into an incredibly potent "CALORIE NEUTRALIZING MACHINE" THAT B-L-A-S-T-S OFF AS MUCH AS 16 POUNDS OF FLAB IN JUST 7 DAYS!

In other words, you not only burn, disintegrate, evaporate pound after pound of fat right out of your body . . . you not only turn calories into energy instead of globs of ugly fat . . . BUT ACTUALLY MAKE LOSING WEIGHT one of the most thrilling and enjoyable experiences of your entire life!

WHAT A DOCTOR DISCOVERED WHEN HE GOT SICK OF HEARING THE WORD "FAT"!

Let's face it . . . Doctors are no different than anyone else. They yield to temptation! They love eating good food . . . BUT—they don't enjoy being called fat. That's why when a leading medical authority finally got disgusted with overweight problems, he became determined to lick it ONCE AND FOR ALL . . . and without gruelling diets, back-breaking exercises or dangerous drugs. Here are the shattering facts he came up with:

FACT 1: That no matter what you may have been led to believe in the past the only reason you gain weight is the inability of your body to neutralize, burn, oxidize the calories you eat AND CONVERT IT INTO ENERGY INSTEAD OF FAT! That's why so many thin people can seem to eat "till kingdom come" and never gain an ounce. Their bodies simply have TOTAL ENERGY CONVERSION. That's why, no matter how many different fad-diets, fad "wonder" drugs, or ridiculous reducing gadgets you may have used . . . NOTHING EVER WORKED!

FACT 2: Medical science through BIOLOGICAL AND BIO-CHEMICAL means can take any food, and meal and actually NEUTRALIZE it . . . Yes, actually convert those calories into energy instead of bulging, ugly fat. And, of course, with absolute safety.

FACT 3: That when a COMBINATION OF NATURAL INGREDIENTS are released into the blood stream at precise times of the day (always after each meal) in concert with a calorie-neutralization regimen that has been proven over and over again on tough obesity cases under the auspices of over 3,000 physicians YOUR BODY SUDDENLY B-L-A-S-T-S AWAY INITIAL EXCESS FAT as fast as 1 pound every 8 hours . . . and without experiencing a moment of food-craving hunger.

So, instead of torturing yourself with hit-and-miss diets . . . that are doomed to eventual failure . . . instead of kidding yourself, or even worse, harming yourself with dangerous drugs . . . YOU SIMPLY TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THIS FINAL BREAKTHROUGH . . . THIS FINAL SOLUTION . . . AND BURN AWAY AS MUCH AS 79 POUNDS OF FAT IN JUST 3 SHORT MONTHS!

EACH AND EVERY "TAB"—A MINIATURE "CALORIE BURNING" FURNACE

Each "tab" is a compound of natural extracts that when taken orally trigger off a high powered charge of biological reactions. You get an INSTANT LIFT, your body chemistry starts working to REVERSE FAT CALORIE BUILD-UP. You neutralize, destroy and obliterate unwanted, un-needed calories . . . AND EVEN MORE—YOUR APPETITE IS CONTROLLED!!! You don't feel like eating. And when used with our weight-slashing regimen (program directions) LEADS TO LIFETIME SLIMNESS. It's not only the safest, fastest, best way to a brand new body, but it is the surest way for a normally healthy person to achieve PERMANENT WEIGHT LOSS—WITHOUT THE AGONY OF TORTUROUS, NERVE-WRACKING DIETS.

Think of it! No more torture diets! No more drain on your system and strain on your nerves. No more inhuman demand on your willpower . . . no more constant calorie counting, and no more embarrassment when your friends feast and you can only fast. Or those nightmare weeks when your family eats and you "nibble". And that dreaded day of final frustration and failure when you eventually crack and the ugly pounds soon bulge again.

And now do you realize why here at last is the perfect reducer . . . the dream discovery you've long hoped for . . . the only true, safe, fast and effective reducer that trims down pounds and slims down the figure WITHOUT DANGEROUS DRUGS AND WITHOUT THE RIDICULOUS CHANGES OTHER METHODS REQUIRE IN YOUR DAILY LIFE.

WHY LIVE IN THE SHADOW OF SHAME WHEN MEDICAL SCIENCE NOW MAKES IT POSSIBLE TO ENJOY A LIFETIME OF SLIMNESS WITHOUT HUNGER!

REDU-CAL . . . SCIENCE'S "FURNACE-IN-A-'TAB'" . . . the secret to the most effective fat-burning weight-reducer the world has ever known!

IMAGINE A WORLD WHERE YOU ARE IMMUNE TO FAT!

Just think of what this can mean to you . . . Now the starches, carbohydrates and fat in the food you eat are super-energized, super-oxidized and super-neutralized. It means that mealtime, snacktime, party-time are no longer moments of regrets, no longer the birthplace of new pockets of fat BECAUSE YOUR BODY IS NOW ARMED AND PROTECTED AGAINST FAT-PRODUCING CALORIES! And since this entire concept . . . this entire regimen . . . this entire breakthrough is based on the fact that NEVER AGAIN DO YOU HAVE TO COUNT CALORIES, FOLLOW INSANE DIETS, PUNISH YOURSELF WITH HARSH AND TIRING EXERCISES . . . there's no strain on your system, no drain on your health . . . no drastic changes in your everyday way of living (except of course the new wardrobe of clothes you'll be forced to buy because of your brand new figure).

UNCONDITIONALLY GUARANTEED—TAKE ADVANTAGE OF "NO RISK" OFFER

So, if you are seriously determined to transform your body into a new SLIM-LINE YOU . . . if you've finally made up your mind that you'll never again be plagued with the problem of being overweight . . . if you want to see pounds and inches vanish from sight faster than you ever dreamed possible . . . AND VANISH FOREVER . . . in brief, if you want to lose as much as 7 pounds in just 48 hours, if you want to lose as much as 34 pounds in just 1 month, AND MORE . . . if you want to take advantage of this MEDICAL BREAKTHROUGH that makes LIFETIME SLIMNESS not a hope BUT A PROVEN REALITY then take advantage of the no-risk offer described below. RESULTS ARE UNCONDITIONALLY GUARANTEED. YOU MUST LOSE WEIGHT FASTER, SAFER, EASIER THAN YOU EVER IMAGINED POSSIBLE . . . From Japan! An "electronic miracle" for your engine that TURNS POLLUTION INTO POWER! GIVES YOU UP TO FOUR EXTRA GALLONS EVERY TIME YOU FILL UP YOUR CAR!

Someone had to do it! Someone... somewhere ...had to discover how to burn gas twice in your engine! So that the waste gas that's pouring out of your exhaust today could be transformed into a source of extra fuel, and incredible extra power!

Let Us Repeat This Fact Again! This Device BURNS GAS TWICE In Your Engine! So You Take Off Like A Rocket At The Lights! AND YOUR GAS-GAUGE NEEDLE SEEMS TO BE STUCK AT FULL!

Right now—for just ninety seconds—come with us inside the engine of your car, and realize the incredible ingenuity and beauty of this idea. . . .

At the present moment, your engine works by feeding gas into your cylinders, and exploding it with a spark. That spark is produced by a spark plug; and each time gas is poured into your cylinder, that plug fires once. And only once!

How long does that spark last, even if that plug is brand-new? About one-thousandth of a second! And how much of that gas does even a brand-new spark plug burn? Far less than half! And what happens to the unburned gas? It pours right out your exhaust into the air, where it chokes you and every other driver on the road!

But who in the world ever said that a spark plug should only fire ONCE, every time you poured a new load of gasoline into its cylinder! Why only allow that spark to burn that gas for no more than a thousandth of a second? Why not "stutter" that spark—stretch it out—keep it flaming in that cylinder for three . . . four . . . even five times as long!

Yes, why not SUPER-IGNITE that gas! So that every single drop of it produced up to 30% MORE POWER . . . up to 30% MORE MILEAGE . . . AT THE VERY SAME MOMENT THAT EXHAUST POLLUTION IS CUT DOWN ALMOST BY HALF!

How Many Years Will It Take American Car Manufacturers To Put This Japanese "Spark-Stretcher" On Their Engines? And HOW MANY DAYS MORE ARE YOU GOING TO WAIT, BEFORE YOU PROVE THIS KIND OF INCREDIBLE NEW PERFORMANCE FROM IT —ENTIRELY AT OUR RISK!

But now comes the real pay-off! The breathtaking new performance that you can produce from your car in just three minutes—without even touching a tool!

All you do is this: Open your hood. Locate your distributor. Simply pull off the wire leading from the distributor to your engine. Plug on this Japanese THUNDERJET to your distributor. Put the wire back on top of the THUNDERJET. And close the hood.

You've done all the work you need! Now the THUNDERJET takes over!

BONUS BENEFITS!

- Super starting sparks—your engine roars to life the instant you turn the ignition key—even in below freezing weather!
- No more summer stalling or overheating! The hotter, longer sparks keep your plugs clean . . . keep your engine clean . . . keep your muffler clean! No caked dirt clogs the inside of your car, and can never turn it into a summer oven!
- Plugs last AT LEAST twice as long! They stay clean . . . stay gapped . . . stay strong! Another $10 savings—twice a year!
- And—above all—you get a cleaner engine that needs far less repairs! You get a cleaner muffler that lasts twice as long! And you—and every other driver on the road who uses this "Japanese Miracle"—gets a CLEANER exhaust, CLEANER air, and CLEANER lungs! And YOU save up to $50 a year doing it!

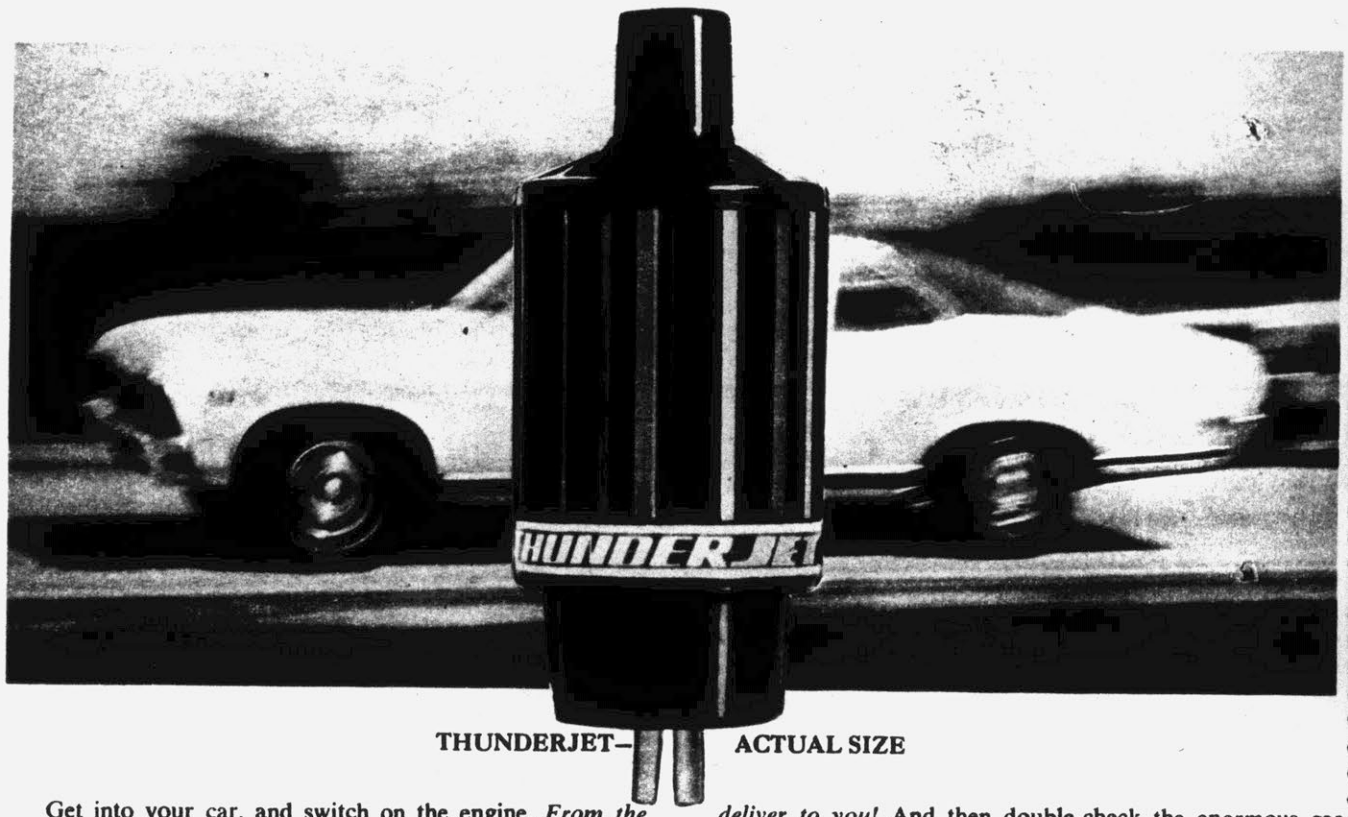
Why not try it yourself—entirely at our risk—today!



THUNDERJET— ACTUAL SIZE

Get into your car, and switch on the engine. From the very first moment, you'll see and feel the difference! That engine will literally hum with new, throbbing power. When you release the emergency brake, your car will glide out of its parking space . . . roll down the street with your foot hardly touching the pedal.

Every thirty or forty feet, give that car an extra little shot of gas. Feel it spurt ahead instantly. Test immediately, the marvelous new power that's singing under your foot!

We Ask You To Pull Up At The Stop Light, To Another Car Of Approximately The Same Year And Make As Your Own!

Sit there for a moment, side by side with that other car. Nod at the other driver as he recognizes that you're both driving the same car—on the outside!

Then wait until the light changes to green. Let the other car start first. Wait till the other car gets half way across the street. And then slam your foot down on the gas pedal!

Before that other car has even crossed the street, you will have caught up with him. For one brief second, you and that other car will race fender to fender. Then you will flash away from him . . . you will leave him a full block behind . . . you will look in your rear view mirror and see the startled look of amazement in that other driver's eyes!

And Now Test This Blazing New Power In A Hundred Different Ways!

But this is just the beginning! We want you to test this revolutionary new Japanese spark-stretcher — entirely at our risk!

Use it to flatten out the steepest hills at the slightest touch of your foot . . . to whisk you over the top with power to spare—while other cars are huffing and puffing half-way down the slope behind you!

Use it as a life-saving bonus whenever you pull out to pass another car! Prove to yourself from the very first day that this "double-gas-burn" skyrockets you past those other cars in 2, 4, 6 and even 8 seconds LESS than you've ever known before! So fast in fact, that when you stop later for coffee and they finally catch up with you, they'll beg you for the secret!

Yes, and really open it up on the throughway! See for yourself the top speed THIS KIND OF ENGINE can now deliver to you! And then double-check the enormous gas savings it gives you at these high speeds! Prove to yourself that at 50 . . . 60 . . . even 70 miles an hour, your foot is still half-way up on the pedal! That you are now saving $50 . . . $100 . . . $200 a year on your gas bills! That this revolutionary new THUNDERJET actually pays back its full cost, in gas savings alone, during the first two to three months that you own it—OR WE SEND EVERY CENT OF YOUR MONEY BACK.

Prove It Entirely At Our Risk!

This Japanese THUNDERJET—proved by scientifically-recorded tests at both the University of Tokyo and the University of Kyoto—can be obtained in the United States only through this advertisement! Its price is only $12.98 complete. And that is the total cost! There is no installation fee! A twelve-year-old child can install it in minutes!

And most important of all, we guarantee that you will save the full purchase price in gas bills alone—in the first two or three months that you use it! Or every cent of your money back at once!

You have nothing to lose! A whole new world of driving power and economy to gain! Why not try it at our risk . . . today!

What in the World!

PANTS IN THE OFFICE
Some like 'em hot; some do not

What do bosses and employees think of girls who wear hot pants in the office? To find out, one temporary office-help firm (Western Girl) took a survey. What they found: hot pants were prohibited in 63 percent of 402 offices in 10 geographic areas; 12 percent didn't approve but permitted them anyhow; three percent felt they were okay if they were not "too hot." Some 29 percent had not been exposed to the problem. The attitude among the managers who okayed the attire was typified by the remark, "As long as people get the work done, what difference does it matter what they wear?" One interesting statistic: five percent of officers still do not permit miniskirts.

Here's welcome news: More and more health plans are expected to start, including dentists' services. Recently, a large union (United Auto Workers) demanded dental care in its last contract—and won. That victory brings the number of workers and families covered by dental insurance past the 10 million mark. Facts are that four in every five Americans over 14 have gum trouble; one child in four has disfiguring alignment of teeth—and too many breadwinners find dental costs too high to do anything about it. Hopefully, that problem is on its way out.

What was Dr. Timothy Leary like before he became so involved with drugs? "Charming, friendly, a really creative researcher," says antidrug crusader Dr. Allan Cohen, a former Leary disciple. "But after the drug thing started, Timothy became disenchanted with the academic world. He never stopped believing that the psychedelic experience represented the best of life." Doctor Cohen, 31, and now Dean of Students at JFK University in Martinez, Calif., is one of the growing legions of former experimenters who have become disillusioned with drugs. "Our community was deluding itself. For example, I watched a group come into the kitchen, high from an LSD experience, then start fighting over who'd do dishes. I know now that love for God can make you touch higher than any drug." As for Leary: "He's ruined his life with too much acid. In jail, he'd be a martyr. Outside, he's a living example of a man of great promise short-circuited by drugs." Doctor Cohen has written a new book on drug alternatives, "Understanding Drug Use: An Adult's Guide to Drugs and the Young" (Harper & Row, $5.95).

GOOD-TIME CHARLIES

They hardly start to work when Joe
Says, "What's the time? My watch is slow."
Before too long, Bill says to Jake,
"Seems like it's time to take a break."
Still later someone in the bunch
Will state it must be time for lunch.
In mid-p.m. someone will say,
"Just three o'clock? . . . Time drags today!"
Thus they proceed, in their own way,
To gaily pass the time of day.

—G. Sterling Leiby

The trouble with people who think they know more than you do is that they're always insisting that you agree with them. —E. B. Winston

Our scientists have perfected their technique for destroying the earth, but they are still working on the problem of a safe place to stand when it is put into use. —D. O. Flynn

IMP-BUTTONS

By Talbert

The little girl was lost in the supermarket. She wandered up and down the aisles, sobbing out her mother's name, "Nancy, Nancy, where are you? Nancy, I'm lost."

When the mother caught up with the child, she reprimanded her. "I'm Mother to you, not Nancy."

"I know," said the little girl, "but this store is full of people called Mother." —Terry Sowne

A GI had put in a request for special leave in order to help his wife with the spring housecleaning. The CO, racking his brain for a tactful denial, said, "I hate to refuse you, but I've received a letter from your wife saying that you are more of a bother to her than a help."

The GI saluted and turned to go, then stopped. "Sir," he said, "there are two people in this outfit who are pretty loose with the truth, and I'm one of them." He paused, then added, "I'm not married." —Dorothea Kent

The little girl appeared to be downhearted at the passing of October. When asked why she felt so sad, she mournfully replied, "I've just learned how to spell it. And now it's gone."
—Lucille J. Goodyear

HOME SEX EDUCATION

We talked about the birds and bees,
My Son and I, and felt at ease—
I thought my teaching was quite good,
Could never be misunderstood—
But then he asked (and flunked the test),
"Was I born in a hive or nest?"

—Roger W. Dana

REPRESENTATIVE DOLORES DEEPSIX FIRES GLEN ENGLISH.

MMMM... IT IS PLEASANT TO BE DOING BUSINESS AGAIN WITH AN OLD, ESTABLISHED FIRM.

HEE, HEE... I DO FEEL A BIT SORRY FOR BENTLY BURLY, TERRY. SUCH A MODEL MAN - AND NOW HIS SECRET GAMBLING IS KNOWN TO ONE AND ALL.

IMPROVE HIS IMAGE, I'LL BET. EVERY-ONE SHOULD HAVE ONE SMALL VICE, DOLORES.

I HOPE MY STATEMENT TO THE PRESS CLEARING HIM OF GLEN'S CHARGES MOLLIFIES HIM.

HE'D BE SMART TO FORGET IT! EVERYONE ELSE WILL IN A WEEK OR TWO.

...AND CONGRESS-WOMAN DEEPSIX TO THE GUEST LIST...

SINCE THIS IS TO LOOK LIKE A SOCIAL BASH, SUGGEST SHE BRING AN ESCORT.

SHALL I DROP A HINT IN THE INVITATIONS, SIR?

NO. EVERYONE ON THAT LIST IS A POLITICIAN. THEY WILL KNOW WHY I AM BRINGING 'EM TOGETHER.

I'M SURE THEY'LL BE GLAD TO HAVE THE ADVICE AND COUNSEL OF OUR LEADING ELDER STATESMAN, MR. ARRCIVE.

THEY'D BETTER! BIG ELECTION NEXT YEAR... GOT TO PLAN FOR IT.

I'VE SPENT A LIFETIME IN GOVERNMENT, OR ADVISING THE MEN WHO WERE.

THAT'S WHERE THE POWER LIES. WITH THE MEN WHO MAKE POLICY.

I FLATTER MYSELF THAT I KNOW SOMETHING OF WHAT THIS COUNTRY'S POLICIES SHOULD BE... THAT'S ALL, PEND.

THANK YOU, SIR.

GREAT DEAL OF POLICY, HISTORY, MADE IN THIS OLD PLACE, CLEAR BACK TO THE REVOLUTION...

EVERY HALLOWEEN THE GREAT PUMPKIN FLIES THROUGH THE AIR WITH HIS BAG OF TOYS

AND JUST THINK..IF YOU AND I SIT HERE ALL NIGHT, WE MAY GET TO SEE HIM!

I REALLY APPRECIATE YOUR SITTING OUT HERE WITH ME, SNOOPY...

I MUST ADMIT, HOWEVER, THAT I'VE BEEN WONDERING WHY YOU'RE WEARING THOSE DARK GLASSES...

THERE ARE CERTAIN TIMES WHEN YOU PREFER NOT TO BE RECOGNIZED!

Prince Valiant®

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

BY HAL FOSTER.

Our Story: THE ESCORT VESSEL ORTHO HAD SENT TO BRING PRINCE VALIANT SAFELY TO THE MISTY ISLES TURNS SUDDENLY AND, WITH SUBLIME TREACHERY, RAMS HIS SHIP.

THE ENTIRE ARMED CREW GATHER ON THE FORECASTLE AND SWARM DOWN THE BOARDING LADDERS SHOUTING: "DEATH TO PRINCE VALIANT!"

VAL AND THE CAPTAIN WATCH INTENTLY. A PLAN MUST BE FORMED QUICKLY, FOR THEIR WELL-DISCIPLINED CREW IS GREATLY OUTNUMBERED.

THE WIND HAS DRIFTED THE SHIPS SIDE BY SIDE, THE RAM TEARING A FATAL HOLE IN THEIR VESSEL'S SIDE. VAL SHOUTS A PLAN TO THE CAPTAIN AND, WITH A STROKE OF THE 'SINGING SWORD', BRINGS THE GREAT SAIL CRASHING DOWN.

THE HEAVY SPAR FALLS ACROSS BOTH SHIPS AND THE BILLOWING CANVAS FORMS A SCREEN. STEP BY STEP THE ATTACKERS ADVANCE, PAYING HEAVILY FOR EACH STEP. THEIR FOES GROW FEWER BECAUSE ONE BY ONE THEY SLIP UNDER THE SAIL.....

.....AND CLIMB ABOARD THE UNOCCUPIED STERN OF ORTHO'S SHIP. IT IS MOST DISCOURAGING TO BE WINNING A FIGHT AND THEN SUDDENLY FIND ONESELF ADRIFT ON A SINKING SHIP!

THERE IS STILL A CONSIDERABLE NUMBER OF WARRIORS CROWDED ON THE FORECASTLE, BUT THEY ARE NO LONGER SHOUTING 'DEATH TO PRINCE VALIANT. IN FACT WHEN PRINCE VAL LINES UP THE ARCHERS THEY EXPRESS A WHOLESOME DESIRE FOR PEACE!

ANNIE...DID "MR.?" SAY WHY ALL THESE AMAZING THINGS TOOK PLACE?

HE SAID...THAT FOR THE FIRST TIME JOHNNY WAS GIVIN' WITH HIS HEART 'STEADA HIS HEAD...HE MEANT THAT JOHNNY WAS OFFERIN' HIS LIFE T' SAVE MINE, I FIGURE....

AND YOU SENSED THAT IF SOMEHOW THIS MAN WERE GIVEN THE OPPORTUNITY OF TRULY PROVING HIMSELF, HIS SON WOULD BE SAVED? IS THAT WHY YOU PRETENDED NOT TO BE ABLE TO SWIM, ANNIE?
