

Mariner 9 Approaches Rendezvous

Nearly One-Fifth Of Average Living Costs Free Of Control

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Hurtling faster and faster toward its Saturday rendezvous with Mars, Mariner 9 beams to earth today its first scientific photographs of the red planet.

Some scientists fear a million-square-mile swirling dust storm on the planet will interfere with observation of surface features.

Other scientists, however, are eagerly awaiting Martian rendezvous because they feel the storm, which has been in progress for seven weeks will give them a unique chance to observe a dynamic, changing event under way in the planet's atmosphere.

Scientists said the reddish-yellow storm seems to be moving from 20 to 30 miles an hour, may have reached heights of more than five miles, and now covers all of the visible southern part of the planet.

Mariner 9 began taking a series of 31 photographs at 5:17 p.m. EST Wednesday while 535,000 miles from Mars. The picture-taking session was to end at 5:56 p.m. EST today when the tiny spacecraft was 355,000 miles from the planet. The photographs were stored in an onboard tape recorder which was to begin playing them back at 6:16 p.m. EST for display at the California Institute of Technology here.

Twenty-five of the pictures are to show Mars as it rotates through one Martian day. Six others will show Deimos, the tiny Martian moon.

Deimos has never been photographed close up before. Phobos, the other Martian moon, was photographed once in 1969 during the Mariner 6 and 7 flights.

Draft Eligible Offered Chance For New Date

WASHINGTON (AP) — Draft Director Curtis W. Tarr has told draft boards nationwide to allow men who have been deferred from selective service to drop their deferments if they choose to do so by Dec. 31.

Such an action by eligible young men with numbers of 126 or higher would give them brief exposure to the risk of being drafted, and they would slip into a lower category Jan. 1, if they escape the draft until then.

The rule applies only to men born in 1951 or earlier—not to those turning 19 this year who received numbers last July.

Tarr said "our purpose is to achieve fairness to all registrants in determining their priority status on Jan. 1... and to limit the uncertainty that young men with high random-sequence numbers face. Registrants with student, occupation, paternity, agriculture and hardship deferments will be eligible to take advantage of this policy."

Men with numbers 125 or lower who are not drafted by Jan. 1 will have their prime liability for induction extended to March 1. Most are expected to be drafted because the new national uniform call brings in men nationwide by the same numbers.

Last year there were state quotas and many draft boards did not reach the cutoff number. But men who regained their deferments before the March 1 end of the extension last year may not again drop their deferments this year.

Tarr also said men can't get new lottery numbers if they gave their draft boards the wrong birthdates, then ended up with lower numbers than they would have with the correct dates.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government officials say nearly a fifth of the average American's cost of living will be exempt from post-freeze price controls.

The Price Commission was putting finishing touches on those price guidelines, which are to replace the more-rigid freeze rules this weekend. An announcement was expected today or Friday.

But Wednesday the Cost of Living Council, which outranks the price panel, greatly expanded the list of items that will not be controlled. And the council said more exemptions might be made.

It said all used products, including cars and homes, and a long list of lesser things including custom-made items, handicrafts and dues will be free from government ceilings after the freeze period ends at 12:01 a.m. Sunday. New homes will be exempt.

The council did not estimate how much of the cost of living the exempt items account for. However, an official at the Bureau of Labor Statistics said used cars make up 2 per cent of the Consumer Price Index, homes make up 6.2 per cent and other items might add a little more.

These are added to items that were partly or wholly free from price ceilings from the start, including raw agricultural products, taxes, stocks, interest rates and imports. The bureau estimated earlier that these make up roughly 10 per cent of the cost of living.

The new and old exemptions added together mean that 18.2 per cent or more of the cost of living will be free from post-freeze price ceilings.

The Pay Board also has allowed some exceptions to its general rule that post-freeze agreements can't call for pay raises of more than 5.5 per cent a year. For example, existing contracts will be allowed to run their course subject only to rollbacks of raises found to be "unreasonably inconsistent" with the 5.5 per cent rule.

Furthermore, Donald Rumsfeld, executive director of the Cost of Living Council, said at a news conference Wednesday that the Pay Board likely will make other exceptions. He did not elaborate, but the board has left room for inequity adjustments and exceptions for substandard wages.

In another action Wednesday, the Cost of Living Council announced that post-freeze controls for the vast majority of America's businesses and workers will be policed only by spot checks and citizen complaints. Advance approval of price or wage increases will be required only of the biggest businesses and unions.

However, Rumsfeld stressed that all wholesale and retail prices and wages would be subject to controls unless specifically exempted, regardless of the size of a business or the number of persons covered by a wage agreement. Only the method of enforcing the ceiling will vary by size.

The council established three categories for prices and wages.

—Advance approval by the Pay Board or Price Commission is required for the biggest units. These are businesses with $100 million or more in yearly sales, and wage agreements affecting 5,000 or more persons. This includes roughly 1,300 companies with 45 per cent of all sales, and 500 wage agreements affecting 10 per cent of the work force.

—Quarterly reporting, but no advance approval, is required of the middle group. These are subject to review and possible wage or price rollbacks. Included are businesses with $50 million to $100 million in yearly sales, and wage agreements including 1,000 to 5,000 workers. This takes in 1,100 companies with a scant 5 per cent of all sales, and 4,000 wage agreements affecting 7 per cent of American employees.

—No reporting or advance approval is required for businesses with under $50 million in sales or agreements affecting fewer than 1,000 workers. These will be policed in the same way as the 90-day freeze was enforced, by Internal Revenue Service spot checks and complaints by citizens.

The council said this group contains 10 million businesses with half of all sales, and 10 million wage agreements with 83 per cent of all workers.

Craig Would Fight HEW Regulation

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina Social Services Commissioner Clifton M. Craig says he is ready to fight a federal regulation which would require the state to pay transportation costs for all Medicaid recipients to and from points of service.

"I don't know of any state which provides this service,"

$43,175 Grant In Sight

Preliminary approval has been received by the City of Greenville for a federal grant totaling $43,175 under the President's Emergency Employment Act.

The grant, requiring matching funds by the City of Greenville in the amount of $4,979, for a total fund of $47,972, was announced this morning by Mayor S. Eugene West.

The one year grant, with an expiration date of August 31, 1972, is basically set up for the purpose of hiring a human relations director, as assistant human relations director, an assistant recreation director and several other personnel.

The setting up of a human relations office with a full-time director and assistant director is considered the key portion of the grant.

In a letter dated November 2 to Mayor West, Robert C. Babcock, program coordinator for the Department of Administration, noted that "employment proceedings may be initiated immediately to accept applications to fill these positions."

All the jobs are to be filled from applications received from the Greenville-Pitt County area, unless there are no applications from residents of this area, designated as Region Q by the state's Department of Administration, which approved the grant.

Mayor West said "we hope to get the program established and started by the first week in January."

Lists Hospital 'Bargains'

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Pennsylvania's insurance commissioner, Dr. Herbert S. Denenberg, has released a "Shoppers Guide to Hospitals" in the Greater Philadelphia area. It's designed for the patient seeking the best medical bargain.

The Insurance Department says it is the first guide of its kind in the nation.

It compares the average daily costs charged by the 101 hospitals in the Philadelphia area, costs paid by Blue Cross, bed capacity, percentage of bed occupancy and the average length of patient stay.

Craig told the State Board of Social Services Wednesday. The board agreed to support Craig in opposing the regulation by the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Craig told the board a suit was filed in U.S. District Court against HEW in October on another regulation. The suit seeks to have HEW strike from its regulations a requirement that states continue to send checks to welfare recipients who are appealing termination of their welfare payments.

"This is absolutely the worst regulation I have ever seen," Craig said. "State after state has refused to abide by the regulation."

Craig said that under the regulation, the state must notify the welfare recipient at least 15 days in advance of the termination of his payments and of his right to file an appeal within that period. He must also be notified that if he does not appeal, his funds will be terminated on schedule.

The state board has refused to follow the regulation, which went into effect April 1.

Craig said it is "rather unrealistic" for the federal government to require states to pay transportation costs for Medicaid recipients in all cases where needed.

"Let them hold a hearing. I'm ready to fight on this," Craig told the board.

"The General Assembly," he added, "has told us in no uncertain terms that they want us to hold the line on Medicaid costs."

HEW could call a hearing on the state's noncompliance with this regulation and cut off all HEW funds to North Carolina.

Craig said that if the state were to fulfill this regulation it could cost an estimated $3.3 million per year. Of this, the federal government would pay $2.4 million, the state about $760,000 and the counties $134,000.

Expiration Of Foreign Aid Is Still Possible

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate and House have taken separate steps to continue U.S. foreign aid but doubt remains either move can be completed before the current program expires Nov. 15.

The Senate late Wednesday passed a sharply reduced $1.1-billion economic aid bill for the remainder of this fiscal year by a vote of 61 to 23.

Senators today consider a

$1.2-billion military aid measure, second portion of a two-part package designed to replace the $2.9-billion aid bill rejected by the Senate on Oct. 29. The administration has asked a total of $3.4 billion.

The House, meanwhile, passed and sent to the Senate an interim funding resolution to provide money until Congress adjourns for several federal agencies—chiefly the Pentagon, the Agency for International Development (AID), which runs the foreign aid program, the Office of Economic Opportunity, which administers the anti-poverty program, and the District of Columbia. Present authority for all of them expires Monday.

But Chairman Allen J. Ellender, D-La., said he won't even call a meeting of his Senate Appropriations Committee to consider the continuing resolution passed by the House.

Meanwhile, the General Accounting Office ruled that unspent foreign aid funds can't be used for administrative expenses in most cases, so AID will have to close up shop unless Congress acts by Monday.

That ruling prompted Sen. J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, to offer a surprise resolution late Wednesday that would pay the salaries of AID employees pending approval of the regular appropriations bill.

But Republican Leader Hugh Scott, who favors the broader continuing resolution objected.

"There is a faint air about it of not being entirely kosher," Scott said.

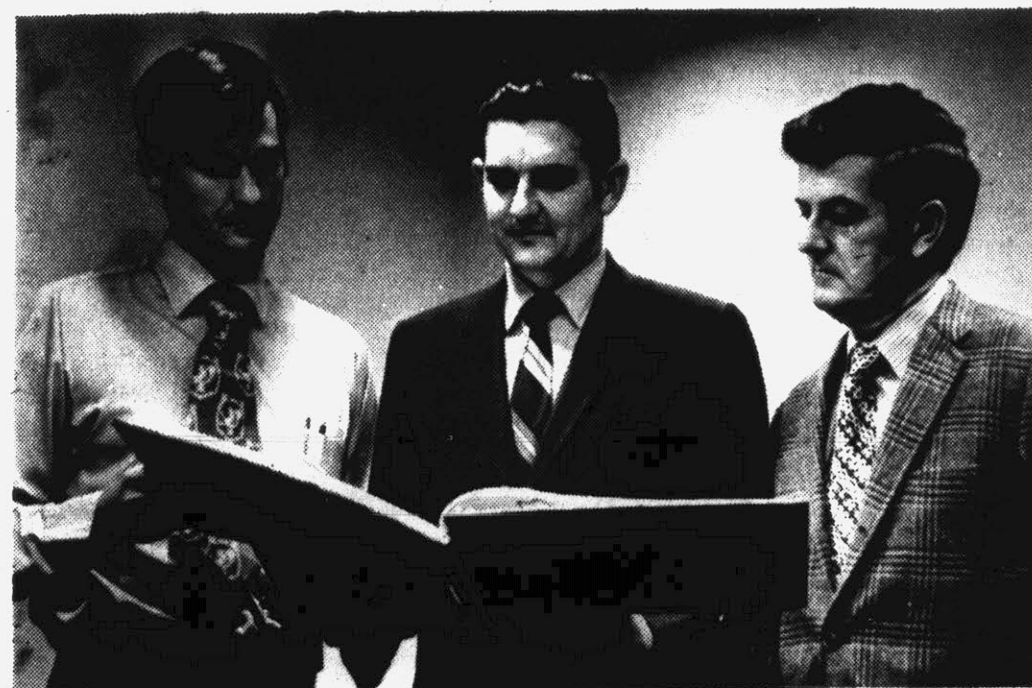

Fulbright agreed to hold off at least until today.

Senate consideration of the military aid bill promised to produce stiffer opposition than the economic measure, on which only a handful of floor amendments were offered.

The major fight loomed over the administration-backed amendment by Sen. John C. Stennis, D-Miss., to restore $318 million cut by the Foreign Relations Committee from the bill.

VOTED AGAINST
WASHINGTON (AP) — North Carolina Senators Sam Ervin and B. Everett Jordan voted against the $1.1 billion economic foreign aid bill, which the Senate passed Wednesday.

Bids Invited On Chicod Creek Watershed Work

CHICOD CREEK WATERSHED... shed project are George Murrell, Bobby Stokes and Larry Tucker.

Sponsors of the Chicod Creek Watershed have mailed 60 invitations to bid for construction of the project, according to Bobby Stokes, chairman of the Drainage District.

Bids will be opened Dec. 16 at 2 p.m. at the office of Frank Wooten Jr. in Greenville. Wooten is serving as attorney for the drainage district.

The project will include 35 separate bid items involving stream channel improvement, fish and wildlife mitigation, and pollution abatement measures. The Soil Conservation Service has worked with the sponsors and fish and wildlife agencies during the past six months to add additional measures to meet the requirements of the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969.

The estimated price range for the work is $550,000 to $676,000.

The Chicod Creek Watershed project covers 29,825 acres in Pitt County and 5,475 acres in Beaufort County. The project is sponsored by Beaufort Soil and Water Conservation District, Pitt Soil and Water Conservation District, Pitt County Commissioners and Pitt County Drainage District No. 9.

Leon R. Hardee, Marvin L. Mills, Fred Edwards Jr., Ben D. Forrest Jr. and Grover Hodges are officers, along with Stokes.

Larry K. Tucker has been appointed contracting officer for the drainage district and Ben Forrest has been named his assistant.

The original Chicod Creek Watershed application was signed March 7, 1963. The project plan was approved by committees of the United States Congress in August, 1966, and the drainage district organization was approved by H. L. Lewis, clerk of superior court, on May 10, 1971.

The SCS has established an office in the federal building at the corner of Third and Evans Streets.

George Murrell, civil engineer, was transferred from Fort Worth, Tex., to head the new project office.

If the contract is awarded after the bid opening, construction should begin in January, 1972.

Frinks Charges Morgan, SBI Withheld Evidence

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — A Negro civil rights leader says he believes the State Bureau of Investigation report on the fatal shooting of Negro farm laborer William Murphy in Pitt county was a "whitewash."

Golden Frinks made the claim Wednesday as he accused Atty. Gen. Robert Morgan and the SBI of withholding evidence in the pistol death of Murphy near Ayden on Aug. 6. A coroner's jury filed Sept. 25 that Highway Patrolman Billy Day shot Murphy in self-defense.

Frinks, field secretary for the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, told a news conference he had been unable to get a copy of the SBI report.

Morgan and Charles Dunn, director of the SBI, were not immediately available for comment.

Frinks' new conference followed a rally and march on the University of North Carolina campus. About 500 persons attended the rally and marched to the UNC Institute of Government, where Highway Patrolmen receive part of their training. Day has taught classes on self-defense at the institute.

Jeffrey Paul of Greenville, a lawyer for the American Civil Liberties Union, and state SCLC coordinator Milton Fitch attended the news conference.

"We are asking the institute to stop training men to kill and start training them to save lives," Paul said.

A list of 14 demands was presented by Frinks and his group. They are asking for Day's dismissal.

Other demands include psychological tests for police, a limit on the size of police weapons to reduce the probability their causing deaths, and sensitivity sessions and other training under psychologists for law enforcement officers.

"Our struggle in Pitt County against police brutality is not a black struggle, it's not a white struggle, it's a human struggle," Frinks said. "If we permit widespread police brutality, our first amendment rights are in jeopardy all over the state."

Frinks accused Gov. Bob Scott of being "lukewarm" on the issue of Murphy's death. He called for a boycott of Long Meadow Farms milk, saying the dairy is supplied by farms owned by Scott.

"We must move to organize, agitate and disrupt throughout the state," Frinks said. He added that SCLC President Ralph Abernathy plans to return to Ayden next Wednesday to take charge of the movement.

Plaids, Tie Belts Back In Style

DESIGNER CLOTHES FOR FALL AND WINTER are light-hearted, yet still neatly tailored, with such favorites as plaids and flannels coming back into style. 1. Ungaro mixes two lightweight pure wool flannels in red, yellow, black and brown for this pleated skirt and coordinated jacket. He adds a loose tie belt, and neat high pockets on the jacket. 2. From Lanvin comes a smashing three-engineered single-breasted coat cut in wool broadcloth. Again, a tie belt is added, with enormous patch pockets. The armholes are deep and the sleeves are gathered into wide cuffs. 3. Dior chose this plaid in red, yellow, green and navy for a casual suit, with a long loose jacket and wide pants. The wool flannel plaid is set off by a flannel shirt and a bright red tie. 4. Coats are becoming looser and martingales are replacing belts, as seen in the emerald green zipped coat from Patou. He adds a fringed knot at the neck, loose gathers below the martingale and hidden side pockets. 5. Givenchy uses wool broadcloth in the rendering of this neat navy, beige and rust checked suit. The skirt is cut very straight, the short jacket is nipped in at the waist. A neat little hat and scarf repeat the check. 6. Cardin tops this violet gabardine dress with a soft mauve wool circular-cut open coat. The edge of the coat is marked with rows of topstitching. 7. Yves Saint Laurent and Rive Gauche have some of the best in tank tops, like this patchwork tweed wool gem in tones of rust, beige, gold, green and orange. It's worn with Saint Laurent's kilt in yellow and shocking violet tones

Winter Social Season Is Near

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

It is that time of year when women look around the house and moan. There are so many things to do before the holidays, the winter social season, and how to find the time to plan.

"Our problem is a badly cracked wall in the room we use for entertaining," says one homemaker. "I covered the wall, which is next to a doorway, with a heavy fabric, but the big bulge shows up more than ever." Brick is too expensive, but she wondered how fake brick would look. Or is there another solution, she asks.

Many people keep fiddling with small areas trying to cover bumps, cracks and other bruises with a variety of wall coverings, but many times a replastering job is the best solution, and it might be the least expensive.

Plastic bricks are very interesting and look very much like real brick. Some have a used look, and one company touts a product as being heat resistant, fire retardant, scratch resistant, colorfast, washable and nonporous which will not absorb grease or dirt. You put the gray or black mortar on the wall with a trowel or putty knife and also spread it on the brick which is then pressed into position. Grouting is formed by the mortar left on the wall.

But even if this brick is put on a wall, you cannot escape smoothing the wall. The ridge must be leveled and filled in if anything over it is to look good.

Another woman found a cache of old paint that her husband overbought and had in their garage. Why do paint dealers let you buy too much paint? Her husband claims that in every instance he was told by a dealer that he would need the amount of paint he bought.

If dealers are given the exact dimensions of the wall, they can give you a pretty good estimate of the quantity of paint needed. But you can't say that you are going to do eight walls and your staircase, and use terms like "very big" and "very small" to describe a job. A more accurate gauge is to establish the square feet of the area to be painted.

Paint experts suggest that this guide be used: Multiply the length of the wall by the height to get the square foot area of the wall. Add the areas of all walls to be painted. You need not make deductions for windows or doors.

When you give this figure to the paint dealer he can divide the number of square feet to be painted by the number of square feet in the gallon of the particular kind of paint you choose. It's a formula that may also be used in estimating the amount of covering needed for floors and ceilings.

One word of caution—it is usually better to buy a little extra paint. If you run out, it might be difficult to match it exactly. Then too, you might decide to paint a few accessories in a room to match the walls.

Another homemaker dreads the thought of entertaining because the living room in her new home looks so small now that she has furniture in it. It has been painted so she doesn't know how to make it look larger than it is.

Many decorators are using mirrors to make rooms look larger. Be sure the mirrors are right for the room. The mirrors look particularly good in rooms with lattice and lots of plants, but they also show up well in rooms with dark walls.

One decorator doesn't use mirrors that face doorway areas. It can be annoying to see yourself each time you walk into a room, he points out. He likes to see a sofa against a mirror to get a back-to-back sofa effect.

Mirror tiles are very popular and these are being installed by do-it-yourselfers. If a full-size mirror is to be used in a room, it is better to have it professionally installed.

And, if you want a worry-free household during the holidays, be sure you are not facing the season with a balky septic tank system. If the tank needs cleaning, now is the time to do it. With the added activity of the holidays on the dishwasher, disposal unit and washing machine, small septic tanks may cause a back-up. Many tanks were installed before new appliances were put into the house, and some are not large enough to be efficient.

How To Teach A Child Respect For Other People

By Abigail Van Buren
(© 1971 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: Teen-agers have a very common problem. Will you help us, please?

I asked my very understanding grandfather why so many teen-agers hate their parents, and he said, "Probably because of the parents' snooping."

I think my grandfather is right. Lots of parents (especially mothers) open their children's mail. My grandfather says it is a federal offense to open another person's mail. Does this include teen-agers?

If kids have a legal right to such privacy, how can they enforce it? STEVE

DEAR STEVE: My legal beagle says, "It is federal offense to tamper, interfere with, or improperly obtain possession of mail addressed to another."

However, if a minor resides with his parent, the parent may (a) open the minor's mail without his consent, (b) destroy the mail of the minor without his permission, (c) instruct the postal authorities to send the minor's mail directly to the parent instead of to the minor, (d) instruct the postal authorities to withhold the mail from the minor.

In plain language Steve, parents DO have a legal right to open their children's mail.

But HAVING a right, and exercising it are two different things, and since children learn from example, the best way to teach children to respect the privacy of others is to respect theirs.

DEAR ABBY: Recently at my mother in law's house, my child asked me a direct question about sex. I gave my child a direct answer. My mother in law was horrified and said as much. She then let me know in no uncertain terms that she thought the child was too young to be told. I then replied that if a child is old enough to ask the question, he's old enough to be told the answer.

I then asked my husband how old he was before he had sex explained to him. He said, "I asked my mother where I came from when I was six, and she said, 'Ask your father.' I asked my father and he said, 'You probably know more than I do already,' and that was the end of it."

My husband sides with his mother by saying, "Nobody ever told us kids anything, and we never got into trouble?"

I say, it's darned lucky. What do you say, MODERN MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: I'm with you.

DEAR ABBY: We recently married off our youngest daughter at a lovely church wedding. We had a reception and sit-down dinner for 364 guests. Since this was our third wedding, and we were more experienced, we would like to tell you how we handled guests who failed to acknowledge our R. S. V. P. invitations but showed up anyway:

First, we did not telephone those who failed to acknowledge our invitation to ask, "Are you coming?"

We simply planned on entertaining the ones who responded, and we assumed that those who did not, were not coming.

Those who didn't respond, but showed up anyway, were not given the same cordial welcome as those who responded in the affirmative.

No last minute rushing around to set more places at the table, and no hastily scribbled place cards for them. They were treated like "drop in" guests, and had to wait until they could conveniently be served.

Care to comment? NO ULCERS IN N. Y.

DEAR NO ULCERS: If anything could cure one who ignored an R. S. V. P., but showed up anyway, this would. But too few hostesses have the courage to follow your example.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "FRIENDSHIP RUINED": What did you expect? The only person lower than a woman who would live it up with her best friend's husband while she was in the hospital having a baby, is the husband who would confess to "get it off his chest."

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Mrs. Whitehurst Gives Program "Water Pill" helps Avoid Pre-Period, Weighty-Water Bloat

Mrs. Albert Whitehurst presented the program at the meeting of the Lakewood Pines Garden Club Tuesday at the home of Mrs. J. Knott Proctor.

She discussed "Chrismsons," which are Christmas symbols used to decorate a Christmas tree in a church. The ornaments depict what Christ is and what he does. The idea originated with a woman in the Lutheran Church in Danville, Va., said Mrs. Whitehurst.

Mrs. Whitehurst said that the decorations are in white and gold — white for purity and gold representing glory and majesty. Small white lights are used to signify that Christ is the light of the world.

"SEWING ON SILK-LIKE FABRICS"

The appearance of seams in a garment is directly affected by: 1) the thread made from silk-like fabrics used in sewing, 2) the adjustment of the sewing machine, 3) and the sewing techniques employed. Neglect in any one of these areas will result in puckering seams that no amount of pressing will correct.

1. Thread selection is important to seam appearance. Sewing threads containing polyester are smaller in diameter than cotton threads of similar strength. Polyester thread separates the yarn in fabric less than cotton thread.

Polyester thread may or may not shrink. If the thread shrinks after garment is washed, seam puckering appears. Test for thread shrinkage by steam ironing (wool setting) — a 12 inch length thread. If the thread shrinks more than 3-16 inch, shrink the whole spool of thread by emerging it in hot water for thirty minutes; allow the thread to dry on the spool.

2. Sewing machine needles should be size No. 11, or for very sheer fabrics, No. 9. The Throat Plate should have a small, round opening. (A wide, oval opening used for zigzagging may cause seam puckers since the fabric is forced down into the hole). If you cannot avoid using a wide throat plate, use paper between the fabric and the throat plate to achieve a smooth seam. Machine pressure should be light. Machine tension should also be minimum with balanced stitches. (If seam puckering still is present, you may have to resort to a slightly unbalanced stitch). For most woven fabrics sewing stitches should be 10-12 stitches per inch; 12 to 15 for knit fabrics.

3. Sewing techniques to remember include the following: Seam puckers can be further reduced by holding the fabric taut both behind and in front of the needle, being careful not to pull the fabric through the machine. Sew at a moderate, even pace with few stops and starts. Appropriate seam finishes to prevent raveling are: (1) turning the fabric under and stitching it, (2) hand overcasting and (3) machine zigzag overcasting.

Raspberry jam is used under the meringue.

1 cup plus 2 tablespoons sifted flour

1 teaspoon baking powder
Pinch of salt
1-3rd cup butter
½ cup sugar
1 egg yolk
1 tablespoon milk
½ teaspoon vanilla
¼ cup (about) raspberry jam
Meringue, see below

On wax paper sift together the flour, baking powder and salt. In a medium mixing bowl cream butter and sugar; beat in egg yolk, then milk and vanilla; stir in sifted flour mixture. (Chill dough if too soft to shape.) Using 1 level tablespoon for each, make balls of dough and place at least 2 inches apart on a buttered cookie sheet; with heel of hand flatten balls to ¼-inch thickness. Place ½ teaspoon raspberry jam in center of each cookie; top with Meringue, completely covering jam. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until edges of dough are browned—about 18 minutes. With a wide metal spatula remove to wire rack to cool. Store in tightly covered tin box. Makes 20 large cookies.

MERINGUE: Beat 1 egg white until stiff; gradually beat in 5 tablespoons sugar; fold in 1-3rd cup finely chopped walnuts or pecans.

Norma CraneCombinesCareers

By VIVIAN BROWN,
AP Newsfeatures Writer

If actress Norma Crane were to have a confrontation with a director on a stage set, it probably would be caused by the decor. She is a compulsive decorator—and a licensed one.

But, most decorators don't seem to mind her suggestions and are likely to humor her.

"In Yugoslavia, where we were making the movie, 'Fiddler on the Roof,' I walked into the house that is mine in the movie—I play Golde, mother of five—and I just automatically said, 'That belongs here ... no, no that should be here ... put that over here,' and so on," she recalls.

Sometimes she "goes crackers" when she is playing a role like a rich woman on a set that looks "early Las Vegas."

Miss Crane, a strikingly handsome woman with a throaty voice has had the opportunity to try her hand at a variety of sets in her acting career which began in 1953 on television.

Three years ago she began moonlighting at decorating when she was licensed in California, but she recalls that at 20, she had been doing "some very good things decorating with orange crates" in a New York apartment.

"After a little prosperity I traded the orange crates for an interest in Louis XIII," she said.

Somewhere along the line she switched from an interest in clutter to unclutter, and she got "hooked on Oriental rugs."

She was particularly interested in window treatments in the American period rooms at the museum—they were so simple compared to those being used in France with all the ruffles.

In California someone admired her house and asked her help in decorating. Soon she was decorating for fellow actresses like Hope Lange and film producer Martin Manulis. She decorates only for those who have houses that intrigue her and she likes people who have good taste. It makes the job easier, she says.

Her clients are willing to risk interruptions that arise when an acting role comes along. Several have been waiting the nine months while she was in Yugoslavia. But she never goes off leaving a room half-decorated.

Even for favorite clients she will not use gold or pineapple shaped lamp bases. She prefers white window shades to colored shades and she never has used a white electric light bulb—soft pink is more flattering. She hates phoney coffee tables and fake leather "that you get stuck to." Wall-to-wall carpet is great for bedrooms, but she wouldn't use it in any other room. She likes area rugs even over other rugs.

In her opinion people with money to spend on furnishings shouldn't try to do it alone. Most amateur decorators are defeated by fabric, she has observed. "They simply do not know how to mix it."

If people have the money to spend on furnishing their homes they should hire a decorator, she comments.

Young Hostesses Set Their Tables

THE YOUNG WAY — In the past, Tiffany has shown hostess tables in its New York store that were planned and decorated by established and social ladies. This year, the store decided to try something different, so eight young women who are constantly on the move with their jobs, but still enjoy entertaining, were asked to decorate tables. Here are four of the results.

At top left, Korby, manager of Jax, plans a Midsummer Night's Dream for her favorite party, a fete on the grass. Since she lives only a few steps off Central Park and finds her apartment too small for the kind of entertaining she likes to do, she often invites friends to the park for a luxurious feast. Her mattress ticking cloth is set with sterling silver flatware and a casserole, the main dish, is kept warm in a silver cabbage. At top right Marty Everds, vice-president of Wollman and Everds advertising agency, sets a table for a working lunch with her client. The atmosphere is casual, but efficient. A mug full of pens and pencils is as handy as the bottle of wine. At bottom left, Linda Frankel, an editor of Vogue magazine, finds that planning meals to fit the schedules of her young son and husband is a difficult task, so she has created "A Movable Feast." Shown here, her son has his supper on "Beatrix Potter" china while his mother relaxes on her chaise with a dinner tray. At bottom right, newly married Muffy Amory sets a romantic table in a summer gazebo. She chooses an airy floral print in roses and white for her cloth, with earthenware in a complementary pattern of flowers.

All china, crystal and silver are from Tiffany & Co.

Ilka Chase Gives Views On Russian Cookery

By TOM HOGE

Associated Press Writer
"There's no lack of food in Russia," said actress-author Ilka Chase, recently returned from a tour of the Soviet Union. "But it's all pretty dreary. If you're longing for traditional Russian dishes like blinis, you'd better have them in New York."

Miss Chase and her husband journeyed to Russia to celebrate the publication of her new novel, "The Sounds of Home." Among their stops were Moscow, Leningrad, Samarkand and Tashkent.

On the plus side, Miss Chase noted that you can get a big bowl of caviar for $2 and that ice cream is good, even if it is almost always vanilla.

"Food is far from cheap," she went on, "yet the two best restaurants in Moscow always have lines. It cost us $22 for a very ordinary meal for two, but that included all the liquor we wanted."

Miss Chase said that the Russian hotels she stopped at had no room service. Breakfast, she said, usually consisted of yogurt, cheese, apple juice and cold soft-boiled eggs prepared hours earlier.

"Compared to ours, their food transportation system is primitive," said Miss Chase. "When we described to Russians the refrigerated trucks and boxcars which keep our supermarkets brimming with out-of-season produce through the winter, they hardly believed us."

Miss Chase described herself as a gourmet eater and her husband, Dr. Norton Brown, as a gourmet cook. She likes to whet her appetite before dinner with a Campari and sparkling water rather than a highball.

"A lower-proof aperitif doesn't dull the taste buds like liquor," she said. "What good is all that herb cookery, if you can't taste the delicate overtones and undertones?"

One of Miss Chase's favorite recipes is:

STRIPED BASS WITH CUCUMBER STUFFING
5 pound striped bass
1 onion, finely minced
½ stick butter
½ cup chopped almonds
½ cup white wine
1 ounce brandy
4 cups dry bread crumbs
1 cup peeled, chopped cucumber

1 teaspoon thyme
½ teaspoon fennel seed
salt & pepper to taste
Clean fish and rub cavity with salt, pepper and some extra butter. Saute minced onion in ½ stick butter till soft; combine sauted onion in bowl with bread crumbs, cucumber, almonds, thyme, fennel, salt and pepper. Moisten with about half the wine and the ounce of brandy, mix well and stuff lightly into fish cavity. Sew up fish, place in buttered baking pan. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and add remainder of wine to pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 40

May Test Limit Of Tolerance

George Meany didn't become president of the AFL-CIO by being stupid. And he is fully aware that people who boast "I say what I think" usually wind up being heartily disliked.

So Mr. Meany is not ready to say what he is thinking until, and unless, he has the muscle to make it count.

As an important figure among labor spokesmen on the Presidential Pay Board, he has not said that the unions will not go along with the restrictions on wage increases being prepared by the board. He has grumbled; he has protested; he has voted (as did other labor representatives) against the limitation.

The real fireworks may erupt at the forthcoming union convention in Florida where the leadership has to earn its keep by pressing for more, and more, and more.

But if it's true that always saying what one thinks harms individuals, it follows that organizations and movements sometimes find it wiser to curb their collective voice.

There have been occasions in the past when unions struck against the national interest; and left a correspondingly bitter impression on the rest of their countrymen who tolerated the action.

Unless they have been taking Stupid Pills, union spokesmen are going to tread cautiously in their opposition to the Pay Board's guidelines.

Too many people are willing to make sacrifices for the sake of future economic stability for a distinctly minority group to upset the appiecart.

Opposition, yes. Protest, yes. But to carry unadulterated greed to the point of severely damaging the nation's economic rehabilitation, no.

Out Of Slums To The Bench

By RAY HUBBARD

High Point Enterprise

HIGH POINT, N.C. — "When I look in the mirror in the morning, I like what I see. I don't feel insecure. I know that I don't have everything, but I have the principles of dignity and the love and respect for humanity that my parents gave to me, and that is what matters."

These self-searching thoughts came to Sammie Chess, Jr., last week as he talked about what it means to be the first black ever to be appointed a Superior Court judge in North Carolina, and among only a few in similar positions in the South. The appointment by Gov. Bob Scott places him in the highest position held by a black in the state's judicial corps.

At 37, Chess has come a long way from the sharecropper home of his birth in South Carolina through the poverty of High Point's Hulda Street slums to his place on the bench.

"I have dreamed of being governor or president, but I never even dreamed of being judge," he declared as he tried to sort out his thoughts and new goals.

Difficult Decision

"This has been one of the hardest decisions of my life," he confessed.

"I have thoroughly enjoyed practicing law. I don't know of anything else I would rather do. In law, you have an opportunity to do so much for so many and to me that is what law is about," he said.

"I have always wanted to be a public servant. But one of the things I had to decide was whether I could render a greater public service in law practice," he related.

"I talked with friends across the state and come to see that in being judge I'd be able to sort of spread my kind of good faith in the system across the state, rather than just in High Point. As a judge I will have an opportunity to help more people," he said.

"When you're talking about help, you're talking about understanding," Chess contended. "Many times just understanding is half of the solution to recurring problems," he added.

And Chess believes his experience as a trial lawyer since 1958 equips him with the tools of understanding.

Role In Civil Rights

Chess has played a major role in the behind-the-scenes legal maneuvering on civil rights issues of the past decade, and has been in the forefront in the legal battles to break down segregation in High Point schools.

Chess was the visible attorney in the original law suit brought against High Point's Board of Education in 1963 which eventually led to the court order under which the schools are integrated today.

In this case and others involving civil right issues, he has worked closely with the Charlotte firm of Chambers, Stein, Ferguson and Lanning.

"What I think this country needs is for us to move away from the black and white thing. I think the young people are ready to put race and religion behind them in dealing with public problems," he said. But regrettable, we still have some in high positions that continue to expose them (young people) to this sort of thing. They keep resurrecting this evil prejudice and thus delaying a day of brighter sunshine," he said.

"When boards and commissions sworn to uphold the law do everything they can to circumvent the law, they ought not to be appalled or surprised when the young don't respect law and order."

Examples For The Young

"When they become appalled, they ought to study their own conduct and then there could be little wonder that children respond the way that they do. Whether they want to be or not, boards and teachers and administrators are living examples to their children," he observed.

Chess and his mother came to High Point when he was 12. He dropped out of school when he was 16, but returned to graduate at the urging of his principal. He went on to North Carolina Central University in Durham, then to law school where he graduated with honors. He came home to High Point to practice law, and said he has no intention of ever leaving.

He is married to the former Marlene Enoch of Alamance County, and they have two daughters.

Chess acknowledged the battle for racial equality is far from over, but he is optimistic.

A teacher taught him the singleness of purpose which guides him.

"A teacher once told me about a dog chasing rabbits in a burning field. . . . Another rabbit jumped in front of the dog, then another and another. Soon the dog became frantic and ended up chasing his own tail."

"I've always tried to chase only one rabbit. You can't solve all the problems at once. You must approach them one at a time or only in the number you can deal with effectively."

Rough Assignment For Aussie Photographers

It must be a hard life for news photographers in Australia, and this is why.

By late October or early November the summer sun begins to reach the land down under. Everybody knows the summer sun brings out bathing suits and girls eminently suited to wearing them. This sort of thing inspires photographers to deeds above and beyond the call of duty.

Your news photographer braves this turnout of beauty with all the courage and devotion attributed the late Light Brigade. Doggedly he snaps pictures of damsels with surf or sand backgrounds, and submits them to his editor as news of the day.

He does not groan. He does not yawn. This is serious stuff. Out of commiseration for people in northern latitudes he carefully selects the most distracting sample of photographic art for transmission by cable to cohorts on the other side of the Pacific, who, in turn spread them over the darkening and chill land.

We tell you all this to explain, and so you will understand why Stateside papers are known to carry in the cool of autumn and chill of winter a picture of an incredibly young Australian miss in an incredible bathing suit.

News is news, and Americans must be kept informed as to what's going on down there in the land of kangaroos, boomerangs, racing horses, tennis champions and girls, and girls, and girls.

It sort of gets one, doesn't itthe photographer's ordeal, we mean.

It All Depends On The Money

By JOHN KILGO

RALEIGH — The race for lieutenant governor in North Carolina has always been a rather low-key affair with relatively small campaign budgets but this time the candidates must have the pot of gold before they can reach the end of the rainbow.

House Speaker Phil Godwin planned to make the race and he stands as one of the state's best-known politicians.

"It's a damn shame we've come to the place in North Carolina where money is so vital in a campaign like this," Godwin told me. "But it was too deep for me. I was afraid if I got into that race I'd end up having to mortgage my property. A quarter of a million dollars or more is hard to scrape up."

Three men are running for lieutenant governor in the Democratic primary. They are Jim Hunt of Wilson, C&D Chairman Roy Sowers, and Rep Allen Barbee of Spring Hope.

Barbee has to be the man in the middle of a knock-down fight. About money, he says: "It's going to cost more than I thought it would to run for the office."

Hunt has the backing of Bert Bennett, the Winston-Salem oil man, who was the general of the Terry Sanford forces. Sowers isn't hurting for money and has good support around the state.

Godwin says: "Up until two weeks ago I didn't think Sowers would run for lieutenant governor. But he is. It looks to me like this is going to develop into a money-spending contest between Bert Bennett and Roy Sowers and I didn't want to get caught in the middle of that."

A lot of money will be spent in the campaign for the $30,000-a-year position of lieutenant governor. It's now a full-time job.

Gov. Bob Scott held the office from 1964-68. He's told friends that he spent in the neighborhood of $25,000 to campaign for lieutenant governor. Four years later Pat Taylor ran for the office and spent less than $100,000.

Politicians who have reason to know say it's going to take about $250,000 to run for the office this year.

And the campaign started weeks ago. It's hard to ride down a stretch of North Carolina highway without seeing billboards pushing Hunt's candidacy.

Sowers holds a state office, so his announcement will be later coming.

Barbee, of course, was the first to announce. He met with his financial advisers Monday night and if he got good news, that in itself would have to be a surprise.

But Barbee is working. He has visited all but 14 counties in the state. He plans to hit

UN 'Committed Truth'

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. — When the United Nations voted the other day to accredit the delegation from Peking, the General Assembly "committed truth," as Ezra Pound once remarked. The UN implicitly acknowledged its own dishonesty — or if you please, its own addition to illusion — and proceeded to recognition of the reality that is mainland China.

This was always the most glaring of the UN's hypocrisies, to pretend that the gentlemen from Taiwan were in fact the representatives of China. It wasn't easy to purge this well-intentioned falsehood, and it may be unpleasant to live with the obsidian consequences now arriving from Peking. Truth, as they say, hurts.

But in the catalog of the UN's hypocrisies, the China seat was notable only for primacy, not for exclusivity. There have been a hundred others. And it would be singularly appropriate if the General Assembly, now that it is charged with the virtue that follows upon first communion, would stay honest long enough to turn from its largest lie to its smallest. Turn, that is, to Rhodesia. Today (November 11) marks the sixth anniversary of her independence.

To speak of the UN's treatment of Rhodesia as its smallest lie is merely to relate a small nation of 5.4 million to a vast subcontinent of 800 million. In every other way, the sanctions heaped upon Rhodesia have been uglier, more unwarranted, more scandalous, than the ostracism visited upon Peking. At least the exclusion of Red China could be rationalized in terms of tenuous law and a loftier morality — Red China was not "peace loving," as the Charter requires, and Red China actually had waged war in Korea against the UN itself.

The sanctions against Rhodesia are something else entirely. The Security Council's brutal resolutions were founded upon a lie — the lie that declares Rhodesia a "threat to the peace" — and they never have risen above that contemptible footing. In order to promulgate this jawdropping falsehood, it was necessary for the Council to violate both the letter and the spirit of its own charter, first by intervening in the domestic affairs of a member nation (Great Britain), and then by applying a double standard of political morality (Rhodesia did not propose to observe the principle of majority rule in her internal affairs).

The late Dean Acheson termed the UN's action "naked aggression," and the description will do until something better comes along. It remains a matter of lasting shame that the United States, playing the role of Uriah Heep, connived with Great Britain and the Afro-Asian block in this manifestation of mob rule. Whatever London's self-interest may have been, our own long-range self-interest surely rested in preserving the integrity of the UN and maintaining the pro-Western stability of southern Africa. But the truth was not in us. Ambassador Goldberg joined the mob. Crying "one man, one vote!" we goose-stepped into the swamp.

Now six years have passed. Six years! The fact of Rhodesia's independence is just that: a fact. The lie of her "threat to the peace" is just that: a lie. The impotence of

In order that school children and employees of city offices may have an opportunity to take part in observance of Armistice Day, city schools, city offices and the court house will be closed today.

Gloria Swanson, screen actress, was honeymooning today with Michael Farmer, Irish sportsman whom she married twice to be sure that the ceremony was legal. Miss Swanson went through the ceremony with Farmer in Elmsford, New York last August 16 but because there was doubt as to the legality of the New York union since her formal decree of divorce had not been obtained, she and Farmer decided to remarry to settle the question.

Strength For Today

TRY LIVING FOR A CHANGE

Yesterday we spoke about the evil of habit-forming drugs. Indulgence in habit-forming drugs appears to represent in the lives of many people a factor of supreme importance. We all want to be happy. There is nothing wrong about this. Jesus was constantly urging his disciples to be of good cheer. Nothing makes a person so happy to the very roots of his life or her as to be right with God, committed to Him in faith.

There are some people who are religious fanatics and who because of their fanaticism are a genuine nuisance, but this is not true of the average run of religious people. They are happy. They have their problems. They may do a lot of wrestling with themselves as they pace the floor or lie in the darkness of their bedroom at night. But if they are committed to the things of The Most High God, they are pressing on to triumph.

The best way to get joy out of life is to live it to its full. It is utterly amazing how full of joy life can be if lived to its full. Do you mean finding joy in this house where I spend most of my time cleaning or cooking, or both? You don't know the problems I confront in my office every day. I've got to have something apart from my daily employment to make me glad and keep me glad.

Brother and Sister, we insist and will keep on insisting that the way to get satisfaction out of life is to live it to its full.

Try it.

Foreign Aid Will Be Returning

By ELMER ROESSNER

The United States foreign aid program is very much alive and in the end Congress will appropriate a sizeable amount to continue it, though perhaps the original White House request for $3.5 billion will be shaved, according to Washington observers.

COMMENT: While many voters and Congressmen feel that American give-aways are excessive, there are still great pressures and intense lobbying to continue foreign aid.

The Administration is supporting it because we have promised many friendly nations both military and economic aid, and there is a danger that Russia will rush to fill the gap. Example: the Soviets, now intensely wooing India, would surely present that nation with a fresh bouquet of rubles.

Big business is lobbying for a restoration of aid because most of the money must be spent in the U.S. In 1970, $140 million of aid money was spent with the chemical industry; $106 million for iron and steel; $41 million for nonferrous products; $265 million for machinery and equipment; $98 million for transportation equipment; $26 million for pulp and paper products; $44 million for petroleum products; $44 million for foodstuffs in addition to the Food for Peace Program, and $13 million for rubber products.

ELMER ROESSNER

Agriculture is for it because it provides a market for surplus food.

Labor is for it because it means jobs in all categories above.

The defense complex is for it because it helps keep plants operating despite the cut in defense spending.

Wall Street is for it because it will mean dividends. The rejection of the foreign aid bill by the Senate was followed by a disastrous slump in the stock market.

While Congress feels foreign aid needs re-examination and overhauling, it probably cannot withstand all current pressures.

Foreign Investments Set Records

Direct foreign investment abroad by American investors totaled $7.1 billion in 1970, the Department of Commerce reports. That is a new record for a year and brings the total to $78.1 billion. In the same year, foreign investment in the U.S. was a record $1.4 billion, for a total of $13.2 billion.

COMMENT: This is one reason why the balance of payments is running against the U.S. The difference in investments last year was a drain of $5.7 billion. In addition, these foreign investments lead to considerable personal spending by executives sent abroad to manage investments.

And some investments abroad were to take advantage of low wages for products for the American market, including textiles, electronics, etc., hence are the equivalent of exporting jobs.

Watershed Study By Varied Agencies

A water resource study in the Swift Creek Watershed is being conducted by the Agricultural Research Service, the Soil Conservation Service, the U. S. Geological Survey and the N.C. Department of Water and Air Resources.

According to Roy Beck, district conservationist with SCS, Creeping Swamp serves as a natural boundary between Pitt and Beaufort Counties and also between Pitt and Craven Counties.

The project will provide data to answer such questions as: —What effect will stream channel improvement have on recharge to the upper sand aquifer?

—Is it possible to accomplish surface drainage and, at the same time, increase ground water recharge to the Castle Hayne aquifer?

—How will the improved channel system in one watershed affect the ground water regime and base flow in the adjacent creek watershed?

—What will be the effects on the ground water divides between watersheds?

—To what extent will the improved channels affect ground water discharges into the streams during low flow periods?

Eleven shallow wells, seven deep wells, four ground water recorders and five automatic rain gauges have been installed.

“Three stream gauging stations have also been built to measure low flow discharges,” Beck explained. “An automatic sediment sampler has been installed where N.C. 43 crosses Creeping Swamp at the Pitt-Craven County line.”

Initial installation costs are estimated at $50,700 with an annual maintenance and date collecting cost estimated at $9,900 for each of the remaining nine years.

“You know if you just dipped in the tillna little each day for yourself, kid, in time you could buy out the bank.”

the rest of them before Christmas.

“If (Phil) Godwin does get out of the race,” Barbee told me, “I will be the only candidate in the race with legislative experience.”

Godwin, of course, is out of the race. We reported last week that he wouldn't run and some of his supporters called and said that was untrue and wanted a retraction. Getting out of the race was a hard thing for Godwin to do. He had planned to announce the minute the legislature finished its special session.

“The more I looked,” Godwin said, “the more concerned I became. I took some polls. They indicated I could have done rather well. But there will be more money spent in the race for lieutenant governor this year than ever before in the history of North Carolina.”

So what does Godwin do now?

He plans to run for attorney general, if Bob Morgan goes through with his expected plans to run for Governor. Morgan met with his advisers over the weekend and some of them expect him to make a formal announcement for Governor this week.

Godwin says: “The race for attorney general should be sort of low-key, more to my way of campaigning. It won't break the bank to run. I'll watch what Morgan does. If he runs for Governor, I'll have something to say about my plans right after the 15th of this month.”

Kilpatrick . . .

the Security Council's sanctions cannot be concealed. One has only to visit Salisbury to see a nice microcosmic sample of the commerce of the world. There is nothing in this drama of dignity or majesty or grace; there is little but the snicker, the nudge and the horselaugh, as the Soviet Union buys Rhodesian chrome, marks up the price, and sells it blandly to the United States.

It will be much more difficult for the UN to undo its folly in Rhodesia than it was to reverse itself on China. In the interplay of global forces, Rhodesia simply does not matter; or she matters merely as a symbol, a penny-ante chip in a game of high-rollers. The Afro-Asians and the Communists, having got this handy genie out of a bottle in 1966, have every reason to keep Rhodesia in exile and none to admit her to the family of nations.

But Great Britain, the architect of this ugliness, can do much toward dismantling the structure by concluding her own treaty of reconciliation with Rhodesia. Recent months have brought encouraging signs that such a treaty may be nearing fulfillment. This would tend to let everyone off the hook, and the sanctions, without being repealed, would fall into desuetude. It would mark a happy if anti-climactic ending to an ignominious story.

Ayden Board Discusses Sunday Beer, Wine Sale

AYDEN — The Ayden Board of Commissioners Monday night discussed the sale of beer and wine on Sunday.

A large group of Ayden citizens, for and against the repeal of the present ordinance dealing with the sale of beer and wine on Sunday, was present to discuss the issue.

After a long discussion, the Ayden board members decided not to repeal its present ordinance that prohibits the sale of alcoholic beverages on Sunday.

The board's attorney, Robert Booth, read a letter from the Attorney General's office dealing with the placing of a trailer on a lot on North Lee Street.

According to the letter, taking the wheels off the trailer would not make any difference. The board instructed Joe Godwin, owner of the lot and trailer, to appear before the Planning Board and recommend that the property be rezoned.

Christmas bonuses were approved for all the town employees.

Town Manager Don Russell reported that the total cost for paving King, Queen, Princess and Fleming Streets, amounted to $12,799.38. He said the front footage cost for the individual owners involved would be discussed at the December meeting.

Bids were opened for the new high band radio equipment and bids will be awarded at a special board meeting in the near future.

Bidding were Motorola and General Electric. Russell said a meeting will be held next week to review the bids from the two participating companies.

Scott Is Named Chairman For Muskie Forces

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Bob Scott, who endorsed Sen. Edmund S. Muskie for president nearly a year ago, has been named chairman of the Maine Democrat's campaign in North Carolina.

Muskie's headquarters in Washington made the announcement Wednesday, and said a similar announcement would be made in Raleigh today.

The announcement leaves little doubt that Muskie will enter North Carolina's first Democratic presidential primary next May.

Scott was one of the first governors to endorse Muskie.

Headquarters of the North Carolina committee for Muskie will be in the Sir Walter Hotel in Raleigh.

Muskie will kick off his southern campaign next Thursday with an outdoor rally in Raleigh and a fund-raising reception in Charlotte.

Researcher Will Address Club

Dr. Elvin A. Holstius, Director, Pharmaceutical Research and Development Laboratories, Burroughs Wellcome Company, Greenville, N.C. will be the guest speaker for the East Carolina University Sigma Xi Club on Wednesday night, Nov. 17, 1971.

The meeting will be held in the ECU Biology Building Auditorium, Room 103. Dr. Holstius will speak on "Pharmaceutical Product Development and Consumer Protection."

The general public is invited to attend his lecture.

CASUALTIES DROP
SAIGON (AP) — The number of Americans wounded in combat last week dropped to 13, a fifth of what they were the week before and the lowest total in more than 6½ years, the U.S. Command announced today.

Muskie Team Is Visiting ECU Campus Today

Eric Cole, the State Field Coordinator for the North Carolina Youth Coalition for Muskie will be on campus at East Carolina University today to rally support for presidential hopeful Edmund Muskie.

With him is Geoffrey Mitchell, a Greenville native now a student at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Mitchell will be focusing his efforts on working with seniors at Rose High and the high schools in Pitt County.

"We'll be contacting leaders from the Student Government Association," Cole commented, "and there will be an organizational meeting tonight at eight o'clock."

Cole said emphasis will be placed on giving volunteers instructions on canvassing, on voter registration, and related matters as well as organizing a group to go to Raleigh for the Muskie speech there on Thursday.

"There are approximately 20 college and university groups in North Carolina in the N.C. Youth Coalition for Muskie," Cole commented. "From these groups we're hoping for between 750 and 1000 students at the rally."

Cole says that one service planned in December is a canvass of 11 North Carolina campuses. "We'll be asking each student to name the two presidential hopefuls or candidates of his choice," Cole observed. "We hope of course the results will favor Muskie, but the canvassing will be completely bi-partisan. Later, after the entire student bodies of the campuses have been canvassed, we hope to be able to report our findings."

NAME OMITTED
In a Sunday article which listed the staff of the Coastal Plains Mental Health Clinic, the name of Dr. Thomas E. Long, an East Carolina University psychologist, was omitted as a consultant to the Mental Health Clinic staff.

Flint Harding, general manager of the grain merchandising and vegetable oil processing firm's Fayetteville plant, said the new scale reduces the damage discount from three cents per bushel for each percent of assessed damage to two cents.

The net effect is more money in the farmer's pocket for his storm and weather damaged crop. The crop in damaged areas is estimated at $60 million in eastern North Carolina and at $20 million each in South Carolina and Virginia.

Committee In No Hurry To Vote On Court Nominees

By JOHN CHADWICK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Judiciary Committee was called into closed session today to consider President Nixon's Supreme Court nominees, but no vote is expected for a week.

The committee's hearings on the nominations of William H. Rehnquist, a top aide to Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell, and Lewis F. Powell Jr., a millionaire Richmond, Va., lawyer, ended late Wednesday.

While Chairman James O. Eastland, D-Miss., said he hoped to report both nominations favorably to the Senate at today's meeting, committee rules allow any member to force a seven-day delay.

And, Sen. John V. Tunney, D-Calif., a member of the committee's liberal bloc, said that if no one else did, he would invoke the rule to prevent a vote on Rehnquist's nomination.

Tunney said he is prepared to approve the nomination of Powell but had not decided how he would vote on Rehnquist, who has run into sharp opposition from civil rights and labor leaders.

"Why should we rush to a quick decision?" asked Tunney.

"Why not wait a week?" Tunney and Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., another committee member who says he has reservations about Rehnquist, have said the committee appears ready to approve both nominees if a vote is taken immediately.

As for the full Senate, Eastland has predicted confirmation.

Powell, 64, has been nominated to succeed the late Hugo L. Black on the court, while Rehnquist, 47, would replace John M. Harlan. The two seats have been vacant since early September.

Among 17 witnesses testifying Wednesday at the committee's concluding hearing were representatives of the AFL-CIO and the United Auto Workers Union who opposed Rehnquist's nomination but not Powell's. The same position had been taken the day before by spokesmen for the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights.

Their argument against Rehnquist, an assistant attorney general, was that he supports what Bayh has called Mitchell's hard-line policies "and is insensitive to individual and human rights."

But Rep. Paul N. McCloskey, R-Calif., who is opposing Nixon's re-election, told the committee "Mr. Rehnquist's reverence and respect for the law and our Constitution will cause him to bend over backward to prevent an intrusion of his political beliefs into his judicial decisions."

Paul O'Dwyer, a lawyer for the Rev. Philip Berrigan and others charged with having plotted to kidnap presidential aide Henry Kissinger, opposed Powell's nomination. He cited an article Powell wrote earlier this year saying "the outcry against wiretapping is a tempest in a teapot."

Catherine Roraback, testifying against both nominees on behalf of the National Lawyers

Guild, said the records of Rehnquist and Powell show both are "incapable of taking the oath to support the Constitution."

Review Area Of Activities

Members of the Greenville-Pitt County League of Women Voters held a general meeting Tuesday night at St. Paul's Episcopal Church to review various areas of activities.

Mrs. Philip Clark, president of the league, outlined the structure of the league, locally, statewide, and on a national level. Mrs. J. G. Boyette, chairman of the U.S. Congress Item, the current National Program study subject, said that the consensus of the league would be reached by March 1, 1972.

Others making brief reports at the general meeting included Miss Pat Dougherty, Environmental Quality Chariman, who gave a report on the league's involvement in the Green Mill Run Project; Miss Peggy Blanchard, Chairman of Human Resources; and Mrs. Danny Jacobson, chairman of Representative Government and Voting Rights.

Mrs. Wallace Wooles, chairman of Parks and Recreational Needs, reported extensively on the Greenville area in relation to committee findings concerning administration, finance, program, and comparison studies of the area. The subject is the study item for the local league for a two year period.

Winterville Bd. To Be Offered Subdivision Plat

WINTERVILLE — The first plat for a proposed subdivision and plans for a new trailer park will be discussed at the meeting of the Winterville Planning and Zoning Board Monday night.

A plat for the new subdivision, to be called the Vernon Cox subdivision, will be presented to members of the board for approval. The proposed subdivision will be located in east Winterville and will run parallel with Forbes Avenue, between Main and Cooper Streets.

A proposal for a trailer park to be located in a 28-acre wooded area between the new N. C. 11 bypass and the old N.C.11 road will be discussed.

City Planner Robert Keleman will head the meeting.

Wet October

If you think October was wet, you're right.

The Greenville Utilities monthly report shows that 10.36 inches of rainfall were recorded during the month. That compared to 3.99 inches for the same month last year.

The report showed that 26.73 inches of precipitation has been recorded for the fiscal year (beginning July 1). For the same period last year the total was 29.04 inches.

High temperature last month was 85 degrees, while the low for the month was 42 degrees. In 1970 the high for October was 88 degrees and the low was 32 degrees.

Use Tear Gas In Halting Fight

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Police used tear gas to break up a 20-minute fight among 200 blacks and white pupils at the John T. Hoggard High School Wednesday. Five pupils were injured, none seriously.

A school official said the fight began about 8:15 a.m. when a black youth threw a chair in the cafeteria, the only room open for pupils who arrive early after riding buses.

Classes continued, although many parents took their children home. Policemen patrolled the campus.

Deputy Shot, Hunt 2 Men

HICKORY, N.C. (AP) —

More than 150 law enforcement officers, aided by bloodhounds, a helicopter, and an airplane, slogged through a wooded swamp west of Newton this morning, searching for two men believed to have shot a Catawba County Deputy sheriff.

Deputy sheriff Ted Elmore was operated on by doctors at Baptist Hospital in Winston-Salem this morning for bullet wounds in the arm, abdomen, and spine. His condition is listed as serious.

Elmore radioed his headquarters at 5 a.m. that he had stopped a 1961 white Chevrolet with Georgia tags for a routine check. Shortly afterwards, he was found by a private security officer who passed by and saw the patrol car's flashing blue light on the side of the road.

Newton police later spotted a car fitting Elmore's description and gave chase. Its two occupants abandoned the car near the swamp, and the manhunt began.

Before he was hospitalized, Elmore told Sheriff Dale Johnson he had been shot while returning to his car. Johnson said he feared the deputy's spine had been severed by one of the bullets.

The search for the men was hampered by wet, mucky conditions. The Charlotte police helicopter and a light plane from the State Department of Wildlife Resources tried to spot the fugitives from the air.

Basketball For Young People

GRIFTON — A total of 80 Grifton young people, from grade five through 12, participated in the basketball sessions conducted by the newly-organized Grifton Police Club.

Basketball sessions will be held in alternate weeks with varied activities such as ping pong, volleyball, carrom, and free play basketball also being scheduled.

Lynwood Outlaw of the Grifton Police Department is coordinator for the program. He is assisted by Carlton Gray. Other officers of the police department are also assisting in the various activities.

Help In Removal Of Junked Cars

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Tennessee Valley Authority is cooperating with local governments in several states to help remove junked automobiles.

Under the program, TVA lends collection vehicles—specially outfitted trucks and military type wreckers—to local governments for four months.

So far, some 3,500 abandoned cars have been collected, crushed, shipped, shredded and recycled to a foundry, the authority says. Each team of collection vehicles can collect 200 cars a month.

Campaigns are now being carried out in Lauderdale County, Ala.; Avery and Cherokee counties in North Carolina; Wise County, Va., and Greene, Henry and Loudon counties in Tennessee.

Another Girl Humiliated

LONDONDERRY, Northern Ireland (AP) — Another teenage girl was shorn and tarred in Londonderry's Catholic Bogside district early today for dating British soldiers.

A crowd of about 200 watched in silence as a group of women bundled the girl from a car, tied her to a lamp post and set to work with scissors and tar pot. "Soldier Doll" said a cardboard placard hung around her neck.

She was tied to the same post at which 19-year-old Marta Doherty, fiancée of a British soldier, was humiliated in the same way Tuesday.

Earlier in the night Wednesday a crowd of Bogsideers jeered as Marta fled from her home with a scarf over her shorn head and took refuge across town with friends.

On Friday she is scheduled to marry 19-year-old Pvt. John Larter of the Royal Anglican Regiment, one of the units sent to Northern Ireland two years ago to try to keep the warring Protestants and Roman Catholics apart.

Larter became a Roman Catholic so he could marry the girl.

"He is sick and worried but determined to go through with the wedding," said Father Bernard Jones, an army chaplain who is to marry them.

Bogsideers said at least four other girls have been marked for the scissors and tar treatment. One teen-ager fled to England Wednesday after "Soldier Dolly Beware" was daubed on her house.

Asserts Lessons Are Forgotten

LONDON (AP) — Prince Philip, husband of Britain's Queen Elizabeth II, says the world has forgotten the lessons of events that led to World War II.

"Slowly but surely all the crazy characteristics of human nature, which are as old as mankind itself, are reasserting themselves and violence creeps back into our daily lives," he said Wednesday night at a Canada Club dinner.

"It seems somewhat ironic that the longer the so-called peace lasts, the more does factional and international bickering go on."

Because outside threats to peace and liberty are not so obvious today, he said, all sorts of people—groups and communities—"feel safe to indulge in every sort of activity in the name of freedom and independence."

Magistrate Is Out Of Office

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Superior Court Judge H. Pou Bailey dismissed Fayetteville Magistrate Frank Armour from office Wednesday after a hearing on charges of misconduct involving a drunk driving case.

The misconduct charges were brought by Superior Court Solicitor Jack Thompson, who alleged that Armour improperly disposed of a drunk driving case against Dr. John Hill, an Asheville physician. Hill was on Army Reserve duty at Ft. Bragg at the time.

Robersonville Opens Quest; Pitt Closes

Robersonville's Golden Eagles, high flying since they were shot down in their first flight of the year, start going after the big prize Friday night, the Class A State Football championship.

Only three victories stand between the Eagles and the title, but one of those may be against the team that has won the crown the past two seasons.

And if it comes down to that, there might be just a little bit of confusion.

First, however, the Eagles have a great advantage on their side at least for the first two games. The first, against Knapp Friday at 8 p.m. will be played on the Eagle field. Should Robersonville win that one, they'll be the host team for the second game, to be played the following Friday.

But if they win their way into the state title game, they'll have to travel to the Western Champion's site. That could turn out to be in the Eastern part of the state, however, since only two of the eight teams in competition are from the western half of the state.

One of those, Robersonville, is the defending state champ, having won for the past two years. Imagine the confusion that might exist if these two meet — Robersonville vs. Robbinsville.

But at any rate, the Eagles have to win a pair to get that far, and right now their main concern is Knapp, the Tidewater Conference representative.

Knapp really didn't win the conference title, but tied for it. They tied Manteo, last year's titlist for the crown when the two deadlocked in their regular season meeting. Manteo represented the conference last year, so the trip was awarded to Knapp on that basis for this year. Reports say, however, that Manteo was the class of the conference.

Robersonville Coach Noland Respass said that the biggest problem the team has had so far this week has been lagging practices. "It just might be the cold weather," Respass said. "It's been colder than at any time before. I'm hoping that things will shape up as the week goes along," he added.

Respass noted that because Knapp comes into the game with just a so-so record and that because they are not regarded as the best in their league, the Tobacco Belt champs may have a hard time getting up for them.

"We've tried to tell our boys that they're Number One. They've got to have pride in this and not let themselves be beaten. They have to prove that they are the best. We hope this will pull us through."

Respass said that the Eagles had a slight disadvantage in not being able to scout Knapp live. "They finished their season before we knew that they'd be the team we'd be playing. We've gotten some reports from some of their opponents, and we're supposed to have a film in before the game to look at."

The coach reported that Knapp runs from the wishbone, but doesn't employ the option off it. "They like to run power stuff, and they put a lot of people in motion. They also have a good passing game, and their kicking game is supposed to be very good."

Respass pointed out that guard James Sampson is supposed to be one of the outstanding players on the team. "They try to follow his blocking," he said.

"They also use the halfback pass as an option. They pass a lot, but usually not long, just enough to loosen you up for the run."

Robersonville has also had success with the pass. "It's been terrific," Respass said. Usually Joe Paul Edmundson, the slotback, throws from the reverse, or quarterback Matt Wilson uses the drop-back.

The running game hasn't suffered either, with Jesse Coppage and Ed Warren the chief ballhandlers. Coppage passed 1,000 yards in his last regular season game, and Warren has over 600 yards to his credit.

"Our kicking game has also been very good," Respass said.

"It's helped us set up several touchdowns."

If the Eagles have a weakness, it's in pass defense and in the lack of breakaway speed. "The pass defense is getting better,"

Robbie Leggett

Respass warns. "We've been doing much better lately."

In the line, there are several standouts for the Eagles, including tackle James Gaylor, offensive guard and linebacker Robbie Leggett and tackle D-Dock Ayers. The defensive backfield is sparked by the play of Warren, Freddie Andrews, Phil James, and Ricky Brown, who has intercepted five passes this year.

"We really don't have any big stars on the team," Respass said. "They all just give a great team effort."

Also on the slate for this weekend is a late scheduled game between North Pitt and Enfield High Schools, to be played at the Panthers' home field.

Coach Danny Wilmer, faced with only nine games this year, decided late to seek a 10th, and Enfield, with only eight on its schedule, quickly took them up on it.

The battle will be between two teams who are largely inexperienced in football. North Pitt is in its first year of varsity ball, and Enfield is returning to football for the first time since consolidation.

The Panthers come into the game without a victory, having dropped all nine of their conference games against 3-A competition. Enfield is 1-6-1, and is a Class A school.

"We feel like they are more our size," Wilmer said. "We're a small 3-A school, and with our inexperience, this could turn out to be a real good game. We hope we can pull this one out and have a good game."

Wilmer noted that toward the end of the year, the Panthers began to click a little more. "We had a good game against Southern Wayne. We hit well on defense, and held them in check for a while. They scored on a throw-back to the quarterback."

"We drove the ball in close a couple of times, but penalties hurt us. We could have tied it at that point, and it might have been a different game. They kept their first team in there all the way, and still never really broke it open."

Wilmer praised Ronnie Briley for his play, and added that Mike Burroughs, Charles Young and Louis Ayers all did a good job.

The game will close out the year for the Panthers.

Ernie Banks Won't Be New Cub Manager; He's Liked Too Well

By JERRY LISKA

Associated Press Sports Writer CHICAGO (AP) — Maybe Leo Durocher won't manage the Chicago Cubs in 1972, but neither will Mr. Cub, Ernie Banks.

Owner Phil Wrigley erased Banks, a Cub playing star since 1953, as potential successor to controversial Durocher "because I'm too fond of Ernie to make him manager of anything."

Banks, 40, in the twilight of a great major league career all spent with the Cubs, long has been mentioned as a possibility to become the first black manager in the major leagues.

The 65-year-old Durocher apparently is on the ropes after six Cub seasons, but Wrigley Wednesday made it clear that if Leo is dumped, Banks won't be his successor.

"Managing is a dirty job, it doesn't last long and it certainly isn't anything I would wish on Banks who is headed for baseball's Hall of Fame," the 75-year-old Wrigley told the Associated Press.

"Furthermore, I think Banks wouldn't take a managerial job."

Wrigley, who last Sept. 3 took out ads in all Chicago papers giving Durocher a 1971 vote of confidence, now is vague about Durocher's 1972 status.

"I talked on the phone the other day to Durocher who is in Arizona and I told him I wanted to meet with him when he returns to Chicago which he said he would in a week or 10 days," said Wrigley.

The chewing gum magnate, whose hiring of long-jidle Durocher after the 1965 season was no more startling than Wrigley's ill-fated college of coaches, declined to say whether the vis-a-vis with Leo meant his dismissal.

"I don't know how I will talk to Leo," said Wrigley.

The guess that Banks would succeed Durocher got its latest prompting when Joe Amalfitano, Cub coach and a Durocher pet, resigned Tuesday.

But today, the Cubs signed another former Durocher protégé, Larry Jansen, 11-season San Francisco Giant coach, as pitching coach. Jansen was a star pitcher two decades ago for the New York Giants managed by Durocher.

Banks has player-coach status with the Cubs on a staff which also includes Al Spangler and Peanuts Lowrey, with Amalfitano's spot to be filled.

Romanians Did Not Come To Win

By HUBERT MIZELL

Associated Press Sports Writer PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (AP) — Don't bet the family jewels on the Romanians in the 19th World Cup Golf Championships. A three-legged horse in the Kentucky Derby has a better chance.

"It was worth our trip just to see the Romanian flag raised with all the others," said 61-year-old Pavel Tomita, a pro in Bucharest. "We know we cannot win, but maybe someday ..."

The United States team of Jack Nicklaus and Lee Trevino were top-heavy favorites today as 46 countries attacked treacherous PGA National Golf Club with a variety of strokes as wide as the earth's belly.

"I think Lee and I will win it," Nicklaus predicted with relaxed confidence. "The thrill of winning, though, isn't as big as the thrill of representing your country."

As for the others the national pride angle had to be especially dominant in these Olympics of the golfing world.

The little Iron Curtain team entered World Cup play for the first time in 1970 at Buenos Aires, Argentina. Australia's team of Bruce Devlin and David Graham shot a 32-under-par 544 total to capture the cup. Romania hacked its way to a 727, an unbelievable 183 shots behind the Aussies. Tomita led his team with 86-89-92-92.

Golf to some of the countries is as familiar as ice fishing in Hawaii.

"My greatest feeling in a World Cup is when they raise the United States' flag," said Nicklaus, a man who became thinly handsome 20 months ago at the age of 30.

"Anybody who doesn't feel patriotic at a time like that had just as well find himself a new place to live."

The Romanians aren't the only Communist nation entered. The Czechoslovaks decided to come this year.

Nicklaus captured the 1971 PGA championship on the same 7,096-yard east course at PGA National, earning a spot on the Yankee entry for the World Cup. Sidekick Lee Trevino got here by beating Jack in a play-off for the U.S. Open title.

Grouped behind the favored United States are the South African team of Gary Player and Harold Henning, the defending Aussies, Devlin and Graham, and the New Zealand combination of John Lister and lefty Bob Charles.

Alston Signs Another Year

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Walter Alston, who has survived seventh-place finishes and annual predictions of dismissal to outlast all other active major league managers with the same club, will be back next year for his 19th season with the Dodgers.

The gray-haired, unflappable pilot, who will be 60 Dec. 1, was given his 19th one-year contract Wednesday.

Terms weren't announced, but a team spokesman said Alston was "a safe bet" to be making more than his 1971 salary, which was believed to be between $60,000 and $70,000.

He succeeded Charlie Dressen at the helm of the Brooklyn team after Dressen had differed with management about the length of his contract.

Alston has never asked for more than a one-year pact.

"I'm satisfied, and I hope they are," he says.

This year's Dodgers, who Alston said included "more rookies than I've ever had before," trailed division-leading San Francisco by eight games entering September but surged within one game at the finish.

The performance earned him National League Manager of the Year honors from The Associated Press for the fifth time.

Alston will set a longevity record for Dodger managers next year, eclipsing the 18-year tenure of Wilbert Robinson from 1914 to 1931.

He'll also tie the Chicago Cubs' Cap Anson (1879-1897) for third place on the all-time list of managing one team, behind Connie Mack and John McGraw.

AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — "The public has turned sour on the baseball and football magazines," said veteran Rep. Emanuel Celler, D-N.Y.

"They keep moving men hither and thither like pawns over a chess board. They are possessed by greed."

"They traffic in athletic franchises like Wall Street brokers traffic in stock," added Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C. "Their attitude is one of public be damned."

"People are getting fed up with the owners," insisted Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash. "If we had a plebiscite, I think the fans would throw the lot of them out."

The mood in Congress is dark and forbidding over the phenomenal growth and thrust of big time professional sports. Men in key legislative posts paint it as a ballooning monster with an insatiable appetite for spectator dollars — cold and heartless, spreading its tentacles to all parts of the nation.

"It's a cold-blooded, money-grabbing situation," argues Rep. B. F. Sisk, D-Calif. "To some owners, the dollar sign is becoming bigger than the fans—it's the guiding light of their operation."

"We in Congress are obligated to do something about it."

Sisk is one of several members of the House of Representatives sponsoring legislation to put baseball under anti-trust laws and to apply some governmental restraints to all major professional sports, including football and basketball.

Rep. Celler and Sen. Ervin, each chairman of the powerful judiciary committee in their respective houses, are cosponsoring a bill to end baseball's exemption from the anti-trust laws and together are leading a fight to prevent the merger of the National Basketball Association and the American Basketball Association.

Magnuson, long active in the fight to end the giant sports war between the Amateur Athletic Union and National Collegiate Athletic Association, also is in the forefront in championing legislation that would take away sport's virtual immunity from antitrust laws and particularly eliminate baseball's reserve clause.

Baseball, with a reserve clause that binds a player to a club for life or until he is traded or sold, has been exempt from antitrust laws since the Supreme Court in 1922 ruled it a sport and not a business.

Recently, the highest court said it would listen to the case of Curt Flood, former star centerfielder of the St. Louis Cardinals, who is contesting the reserve clause on the grounds it reduces a player to virtual slavery.

"The fact that the Supreme Court has agreed to hear the case indicates to my mind that the court is now prepared to overthrow the original ruling," Sen. Ervin said.

"It's ominous," agreed Congressman Celler.

Celler, gray-haired, bespectacled, chomping on a black cigar, sat on a brown leather sofa outside the House chamber and let off steam from his growing disenchantment with the operation of professional sports.

"Victor Hugo said when the time for an idea has come, nothing can stop it," said the Brooklyn congressman, who is now approaching his 50th year in the House. "The time has come to declare pro sports a business."

"What was Wellington Mara's motive in moving the New York Giants football team to New Jersey? Every Sunday that the Giants played the stadium was full."

"But Mara had to move. Why? Money. Selfishly, Mara wanted more money. What was the motivating force in the move of the Senators' baseball team to Dallas? Again it was money."

"If money is the motive—and not the welfare of the sport or the fan—then surely this becomes a business."

"It's no longer pure sport. Concessions are worth billions. Television and radio bring in tons of money. Yet owners run the business with an iron hand. They can't have it both ways—moneywise and sportswise. It's like mixing vinegar with water."

Celler stoutly opposed the merger of the National and American Football Leagues in 1966, as did Sen. Ervin. The merger was made possible by an amendment attached to a tax bill.

"It was a sneak play—an end around," Celler contended. "They skirted my committee. I'll guarantee you it won't happen again. I'm watching every step."

Ervin, also upset by the maneuver, vowed the same.

"The present baseball setup is a form of peonage," the gray-haired Southern senator said. "It's exactly the same thing as in the old days when serfs had to live off the land."

"This is the only case I know of where men are given a monopoly and are allowed to regulate themselves. It's ridiculous."

Professional sports are getting so big and have such an impact on American life, he added, that it may be necessary to create a federal commission to regulate professional sports.

"I'd hate to see the government have to step in," Ervin said. "We are overly governed as it is, but it may be inevitable."

table. "From evidence before my committee, it's impossible to tell whether the club owner is gaining or losing money. For instance, Bob Short (owner of the departing Senators) may show a loss of $200,000 in his baseball operations. But when you apply this to all of his other enterprises and include tax writeoffs, he may show a gain of $100,000 or $150,000."

Signs of "Save Our Salmon" and "Quit Polluting the Water" are conspicuous in the offices of Sen. Magnuson in the old Senate Office Building. He may be preparing another: "Save Sports."

"Club owners are no longer concerned with what they are doing for the community—they are only looking at their combined pocketbooks," Magnuson, a cigar-chomping veteran of the Hill, said.

"The case of the Washington Senators is like that of the Seattle Pilots a couple of years ago. A group wanted to buy the Pilots as a civic move just as a group wanted to keep the Senators in Washington."

"But baseball owners don't look favorably on clubs run as a community enterprise. They want rule by one man or a clique of their choosing. No one can deny baseball is a business."

Most upset by the sudden move of the Senators after 71 years in the nation's capital is Congressman Sisk, a baseball fan who was a season ticketholder.

"I disliked Short's panti-hose promotion," he said, referring to the gimmick of giving away panti-hose to customers. "Why didn't he try to fill the park with young kids? There was definite collusion among club owners in moving the franchise to Texas."

"Short mismanaged the team from the word 'go.' He made every mistake in the book. Yet he was able to get away with saying, 'To hell with the people. I want a bigger take.' It could destroy pro sports."

Sisk has solicited a group of former athletes now serving in Congress for preliminary strategy sessions designed to air the problem in hearings and to come up with some legislative solution.

These include Rep. Wilmer "Vinegar Bend" Mizell, R-N.C., a former major league pitcher; Rep. Bob Mathias, R-Calif., a two-time Olympic decathlon champion; and Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., one-time pro football quarterback. All are young men.

"I have no personal argument with baseball," said Mizell. "I was treated fairly. I was traded twice—to Pittsburgh in 1960 and later to the New York Mets. Both moves were to my advantage."

"But owners dealing in monetary gains have created hostility in Congress. The fan should get primary consideration. I think we are obligated to look into the situation."

Jabbar Paces Bucks In Comeback Victory

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
They called him Mr. A when he led UCLA to three straight national collegiate basketball championships.

Now a star in the National Basketball Association with the champion Milwaukee Bucks, the 7-foot-2 Kareem Jabbar, formerly known as Lew Alcindor, has been tagged as a "big safety valve."

Cotton Fitzsimmons, coach of the Phoenix Suns, used that appellation for Jabbar when he scored 44 points in leading the Bucks from behind to beat the Suns Tuesday night. Jabbar did it again Wednesday night getting 33 points as the Bucks erased an 11-point deficit to beat Atlanta 116-110.

Cincinnati downed the New York Knicks 99-85, Chicago tripped Baltimore 125-106, Detroit routed Portland 139-122, Los Angeles crushed Philadelphia 143-103 and Boston overwhelmed Houston 142-103 in other NBA games.

Lou Hudson of Atlanta outscored Jabbar with 41 points, but as Fitzsimmons put it "the Bucks play with confidence when they're behind." It was Milwaukee's 12th victory against one defeat so far this season.

Nate Archibald led Cincinnati with 22 points as the Royals pulled away from a 42-42 half-time tie to whip the Knicks. Playing one of his best games, Archibald scored 14 points in the third period as the Royals opened a 10-point lead.

Jerry Sloan led the Bulls over the Bullets with 35 points. Jimmy Walker, with 31, paced Detroit as the Pistons made it a happy home debut for new Coach Earl Lloyd.

The Lakers had an easy time downing the 76ers for their fifth straight victory, paced by Gail Goodrich's 34 points. The Celtics also coasted against the Rockets, at one time holding a 40-point bulge. John Havlicek led Boston with 28.

Icemen Take Aim At Record

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
The National Hockey League season is only five weeks old, but the New York line of Rod Gilbert, Vic Hadfield and Jean Ratelle, and Montreal's Frank Mahovlich already are taking aim on season-ending scoring records.

The Gilbert-Hadfield-Ratelle combination — the league's top scoring unit — accounted for eight points Wednesday night as the Rangers thrashed the Los Angeles Kings 7-1 and extended their unbeaten string to 12 games.

Gilbert and Hadfield each collected two goals and one assist, and Ratelle set up two goals as the Rangers handed the Kings their seventh straight setback. Gilbert now has 27 points, the most in the league. Hadfield is next with 26 points and Ratelle is fourth with 21, only one behind Boston's Phil Esposito.

The total of 74 points in 15 games for the Rangers' No. 1 line puts it far ahead of the record-setting pace set last season.

Larose was injured during the game's opening minutes when struck by a puck being cleared into the Montreal end of the ice as he sat on the bench. He did not play the rest of the game.

HANOVER, N.H. (AP) — Dartmouth has dropped three hockey games from its 1971-72 schedule with teams that will be using freshmen on their varsity squad.

Seaver Petgers, director of athletics at Dartmouth, said Wednesday that the school has dropped games with New Hampshire, Army and Colgate.

Keydets Have Tough Challenge

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Even though Virginia Military Institute's Keydets have lost seven football games in a row since their opener, they weren't embarrassed until the last two encounters.

Both were 38-0 defeats — at the hands of Maryland and Southern Mississippi. And things don't figure to get any better Saturday when the Keydets go to former Southern Conference member West Virginia.

The Mountaineers, 6-3, already have beaten two VMI conquerors — Richmond's Spiders and William and Mary's Indians. Furthermore, West Virginia suddenly is on an unaccustomed losing streak, having dropped its last two starts against Penn State and Duke.

VMI and West Virginia have met only nine times since they first played in 1952, and the Mountaineers have won every game. The closest the Keydets came were defeats by 13-6 in 1956 and 14-7 in 1968.

The Keydets haven't scored in the last nine quarters they've played, so one of coach Bob Thalmann's problems is trying to inject some scoring punch into the VMI attack.

Thalmann's other problem is trying to jazz up his defense to hold down the quick striking Mountaineers, whose backfield speed has broken up more than one game so far.

The Citadel's Bulldogs worked on polishing their veer offense Wednesday with special emphasis on the passing of Harry Lynch to Brian Balma and Champ Reiley.

The Bulldogs play host to Furman Saturday.

Meanwhile, the Palladins concluded their contact work Wednesday for The Citadel game with an hour and 45 minute drill.

"We know we have a tough row to hoe defensively and our offense hasn't really overwhelmed anybody this year," coach Bob King said of the The Citadel contest.

Untrained For Call

RALEIGH (AP) — The executive director of the American Football Coaches Association says football officials are not trained to determine when a man should be called for piling on.

Bill Murray said Wednesday he saw a game last Saturday — "and this has been a pet peeve of mine for many years — in which at least 12 piling-ons should have been called, and only one was called."

Murray, former Duke football coach, suggested that better training of officials would solve a lot of problems in football and increase "the safety of players."

He made his comments in a talk to the Raleigh Sports Club. "Unfortunately," Murray said, "officials do not have the training and experience that football coaches have."

"We (college football) have a rule against spearing — the use of the head as a vehicle for delivering a blow to a player," Murray said. "I have been following football ever since that rule was put in, and well before, and to my knowledge I have never seen that foul called."

Officials do not call them, he said, "simply because they are not trained to recognize the difference between a legitimate block with the head and the so-called spearing."

Steal Keeps Squires Tied

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
A vital steal by Roland Taylor with 13 seconds left on the clock kept the Virginia Squires tied with the Kentucky Colonels for first place in the Eastern Division of the American Basketball Association.

After he stole the ball, Taylor drove in for a basket that gave the Squires a 119-116 squeaker over the Floridians Wednesday night. Trailing 117-116, the Floridians had the ball and called time out to set up a possible winning play.

Taylor spoiled it by stealing the in-bounds pass from Larry Jones to Mack Calvin and drove in for the basket that sewed it up for the Squires. Charlie Scott led Virginia with 35 points. Calvin topped the Floridians with 32.

Kentucky had an easy time beating Dallas 115-89. In the other ABA games, Utah whipped the New York Nets 127-110 and Indiana overwhelmed Pittsburgh 154-125.

Led by Dan Issel's 26 points, the Colonels quickly opened a 23-7 bulge over the Chaparrals and coasted to their sixth straight victory.

Bob Netolicky, with 30 points, and rookie George McGinnis, with 37, combined for 57 points in leading the Pacers over the Condors. George Thompson of Pittsburgh took high game honors with 36.

Jimmy Jones scored 12 points in the closing minutes to spark Utah over the Nets and keep the Stars half a game ahead of Indiana in the ABA West.

Jones finished with 23 points, the same as Zelmo Beaty. Bill Melchionni, with 34, and Rick Barry, with 26, topped the Nets.

Coaches' Wives Get Nervous Too

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — While football coaches suffer frayed nerves during weekend mayhem, what do their wives do? Apparently they go quietly to pieces in the wings.

Take Barbara Dooley, wife of the University of Georgia's Coach Vince Dooley. She's convinced that she may have to take her first tranquilizer ever before the Auburn game Saturday.

"I'm so nervous about the Auburn game Saturday that I don't think I can stand it," she said. She's not sure she'll last that long.

"I may start biting my fingernails before the week is over. Generally, when I get real nervous, I cry and itch and I'm already doing that."

"Monday night, right in the middle of the night, I woke up thinking about that game and I shook Vince and yelled, 'It's only five more days,'" she said in an interview.

The dark-haired Mrs. Dooley says she had to take the telephone off the hook because callers "seem to think I've got ten million (tickets) to give away."

She said a woman from Macdon called and told her she had cancer and was dying and her last dying request was tickets to this game. "And she didn't want just one. She wanted to bring a friend with her," said Mrs. Dooley, incredulously.

"Another lady called from somewhere in South Carolina and claimed she met Vince 15 years ago. She thought this would get her some tickets.

"I asked her that if I had some and let her have them, who she'd yell for and she said, 'Auburn, of course.' Now that took the cake."

The mother of four says the "whole town has gone stark crazy about this game. This is all they talk about. I'm not going to read another line in any newspaper. That just makes it worse. And I've told Vince not to tell me anymore about the game."

She says people can't tell from her husband's appearance whether he's nervous or not. But she says, "He's got to be nervous. Let's face it. They're working so hard. But they've been working so hard all year. I really haven't seen all that much of him since August."

"But he will never come close to being as nervous as me. After all, when you see your paycheck running up and down that field you have to be nervous."

Costs Take Senator Out Of Campaign

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Fred R. Harris of Oklahoma says he is broke, $40,000 in debt, and out of the Democratic presidential campaign.

His withdrawal, after a costly, six-week campaign, could leave Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota and Mayor John V. Lindsay of New York as principal rivals for liberal Democratic support in early primaries next year.

Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine remains the frontrunner, the man to beat for any Democrat who wants the 1972 presidential nomination.

Muskie told a news conference in Billings, Mont.: "I'm sorry Fred can't go on, but it is difficult to evaluate the impact."

Harris quit the race saying he is not satisfied with any of the other prospects, but doesn't have the money to challenge them.

And McGovern, now the only announced Democratic candidate, said the early dropouts of Harris, Sen. Harold E. Hughes of Iowa and Sen. Birch Bayh of Indiana should help his presidential bid.

"I think there's more potential McGovern support among the kind of people who were backing them," he said in an interview, though he acknowledged it could yield Lindsay support, too.

Harris summed up his situation Wednesday with three words: "I am broke." He said the campaign he announced formally on Sept. 24 cost between $250,000 and $300,000 before the funds ran out.

"If I could see $50,000 a month up until primary time, I would run right now," he said.

He said he believes America is ready for fundamental change, for a redistribution of income, a breakup of major corporations, a foreign policy based on idealism.

"There's a great constituency out there for somebody," Harris said.

Harris said that although he will not run for re-election to the Senate in Oklahoma next year, he will keep trying to influence national opinion and issues, perhaps by writing and lecturing.

Democratic sources said the Harris campaign foundered after Herbert Allen Jr., a New York businessman and major supporter, cooled toward his role as a political financier.

Seek Indictment Of 2 Policemen

GREENSBORO (AP) — The Greensboro chapter of the NAACP has asked that two Greensboro policemen be indicted in the slaying of a youth during a stake out.

The NAACP said the policemen could have taken the youth, Michael Riggins, 20, into custody, without the use of deadly force. The Police Department reported after an investigation that he was shot Oct. 31 during a stakeout of a warehouse where he had broken in. The report said he had lunged at officers with what they thought was a weapon.

Solicitor Douglas Albright of Guilford Superior Court said Wednesday he would have no comment on the NAACP request until he also has received the report of an investigation of the slaying by the State Bureau of Investigation.

Novelist George Garrett Recalls Varied Background

AUTHOR TALKS OF THE PAST — George Garrett tells of his days as a truck driver, bartender and pro boxer. (AP Wirephoto)

By ROB WOOD
Associated Press Writer
COLUMBIA (AP)—George Garrett fought as a professional boxer, played three years on the Princeton football team, drove a truck, worked as a bartender, installed linoleum, coached for a couple of seasons, and ended up writing what some critics call "the best historical novel in many years."

George Garrett did a few other

School Parents Adopt Program

The St. Raphael Home-School Association unanimously adopted a list of proposals for the remainder of the year last night at their November meeting.

A committee was appointed to implement the proposals as offered by the president, Mrs. Robert Dominick.

Mrs. Emmett Walsh, Ways and Means Committee Chairman expressed appreciation to all who helped make the Halloween carnival a financial and social success.

The attendance trophy was won by the second grade.

er things along the way before finishing "Death of The Fox," a 730-page novel of Sir Walter Raleigh—who, by the way, never spelled his name with an "q."

The author dropped out of college three times because "what was being taught was not relative to my life." But still, he earned a Phi Beta Kappa key from Princeton.

He took a fling at writing movie scripts, "just to see how it was done, and I can claim to be one of the writers who first put Peter Fonda on a motorcycle and one of those who wrote the classic, 'Frankenstein Meets the Space Monster'."

Garrett, now an English professor and writer-in-residence at the University of South Carolina, admits to having a few teeth cracked while earning $25 a fight as a welterweight and then a middleweight boxer. He suffered several broken bones while playing on the undefeated 150-pound football team at Princeton.

He had a leg broken while coaching freshman football at Wesleyan University, when he became disgusted with the way a halfback was running a play, took the ball himself to demonstrate and "awoke in the hospital."

Garrett also served five years as poetry editor for the University of North Carolina Press, won the Sewanee Review Fellowship in poetry, the Rome prize of the American Academy of Arts and Letters, the Ford Foundation grant in drama, wrote 13 books, and has two others in the works, including one entitled, "Life With Kim Novak Is Hell."

But it is his "Death of The Fox" that has captured the fancy of the critics, one of whom wrote, "It is a wonder that a book so steeped in England's past could be written by an American."

Another critic praised Garrett for capturing the senses—the smells, the sights, and the feelings—of the English Renaissance.

To this praise, Garrett answered, "I have spent one week in England in all my life. I took everything I could in those seven days and then spent a lot of time on Raleigh biographies and books on the Elizabethan period."

Garrett is a short, muscular man, with a retreating hairline and a hair-trigger humor, who often spices his conversation with a damn or a hell.

He laughs easily, has the ability to put those around him at ease, and is cautious of slipping into a rut of life, any rut.

"I have been determined," the 42-year-old Garrett said during a recent interview, "to never be fitted into one groove of life or to receive recognition in just one area. Once an individual does that, there is no escape."

Of his writing habits, Garrett said, "I agree with Coach Earle Blaikie when he was at Army. His practice sessions lasted only 90 minutes, but he said he got more done when he knew he had a limited time to do it. That's the way with my writing. I have only a limited time each day and therefore I get more done."

Garrett, at times, seems to relate in character with Sir Walter Raleigh, a poet, a sailor, a soldier, an historian, brilliant, cunning, outspoken, and daring.

When Raleigh met his death, Garrett said, he ran his thumb along the edge of the axe that was to be used for his beheading, and remarked, "this is sharp medicine, but a sound cure for all diseases."

During the seven years it took to research and write the book, Garrett admits he became Walter Raleigh. The author even purchased pipes, the smoking of which Sir Walter introduced to England, and several cans of Sir Walter Raleigh tobacco and pipe cleaners. Garrett, who smokes a filtered cigarette, never learned to smoke the pipes.

Garrett speaks of Sir Walter with a touch of sorrow, because even in "our modern day society, he would have been tossed out of his government job."

"He was a complicated character," Garrett said. "There was a mystery about him, a mystery that had no answers. In the days of Raleigh and in our own times, we attempt to lump individuals into categories, without understanding their contributions to life.

"Raleigh lived in poverty," Garrett explained, "and then became the favorite of Queen Elizabeth and a multi-millionaire, but he never changed in character and I wish all men could be that way."

And, Garrett said, "don't believe that it was an act of great courtesy when Sir Walter placed his cloak across a puddle for Queen Elizabeth."

"In those days, the cloak you wore was a status symbol, like the automobile is today. Raleigh was getting up into years, and to place down that cloak was like cracking up a new car to get someone's attention."

"Queen Elizabeth thought it was a gracious gesture, a flair she admired, and brought Raleigh to court, something he had counted on when he put the cloak on the ground."

In "The Death of The Fox," all of the action takes place within the hours from the time Raleigh arises on the morning of his beheading to the time when he dies beneath the axe.

On the pages in between, Garrett gives a panorama of Elizabethan England through the words of Raleigh, King James, Francis Bacon, a sailor, a courier, and many others.

A Review 'Carnal Knowledge' Fulfills Definition

Webster defines carnal knowledge as the use of a woman for sexual purposes without intellectual or sensual feelings involved.

And the current Mike Nichols-Jules Feiffer movie by the title of "Carnal Knowledge" fulfills that definition quite well. All Women's Libbers will greatly appreciate the theme.

"Carnal Knowledge" is being shown at the Park Theatre through Tuesday, Nov. 16.

The movie covers three phases of the lives of two men, concentrating on one of them, Jack Nicholson. Alfred Garfunkel (of Simon & G.) is his friend. The picture opens with them in college, and follows them into their 40th decade, tracing Nicholson's gradual decline.

Nicholson is the kind of man who never outgrows his youthful late 1940 view of women and sex. For him, women are there simply for his enjoyment. He cannot become involved with one after he is put down by his first real love, Candice Bergen.

Nicholson begins the picture by sending Garfunkel after Miss Bergen. The two begin a relationship, and on hearing the details, Nicholson decides to horn in, with the result that both men end up bedding her. But she finally chooses Garfunkel, after that, Nicholson slams the door on women.

Ann-Margaret, as Nicholson's mistress, 10 years later, finds bed is fine...for a while, but when marriage comes into the picture, she learns his true feelings.

Unfortunately, Nicholson's views begin to rub off on Garfunkel, and it costs him a wife or two. Only with a girl who cannot be tainted by Nicholson's bitterness is he finally satisfied.

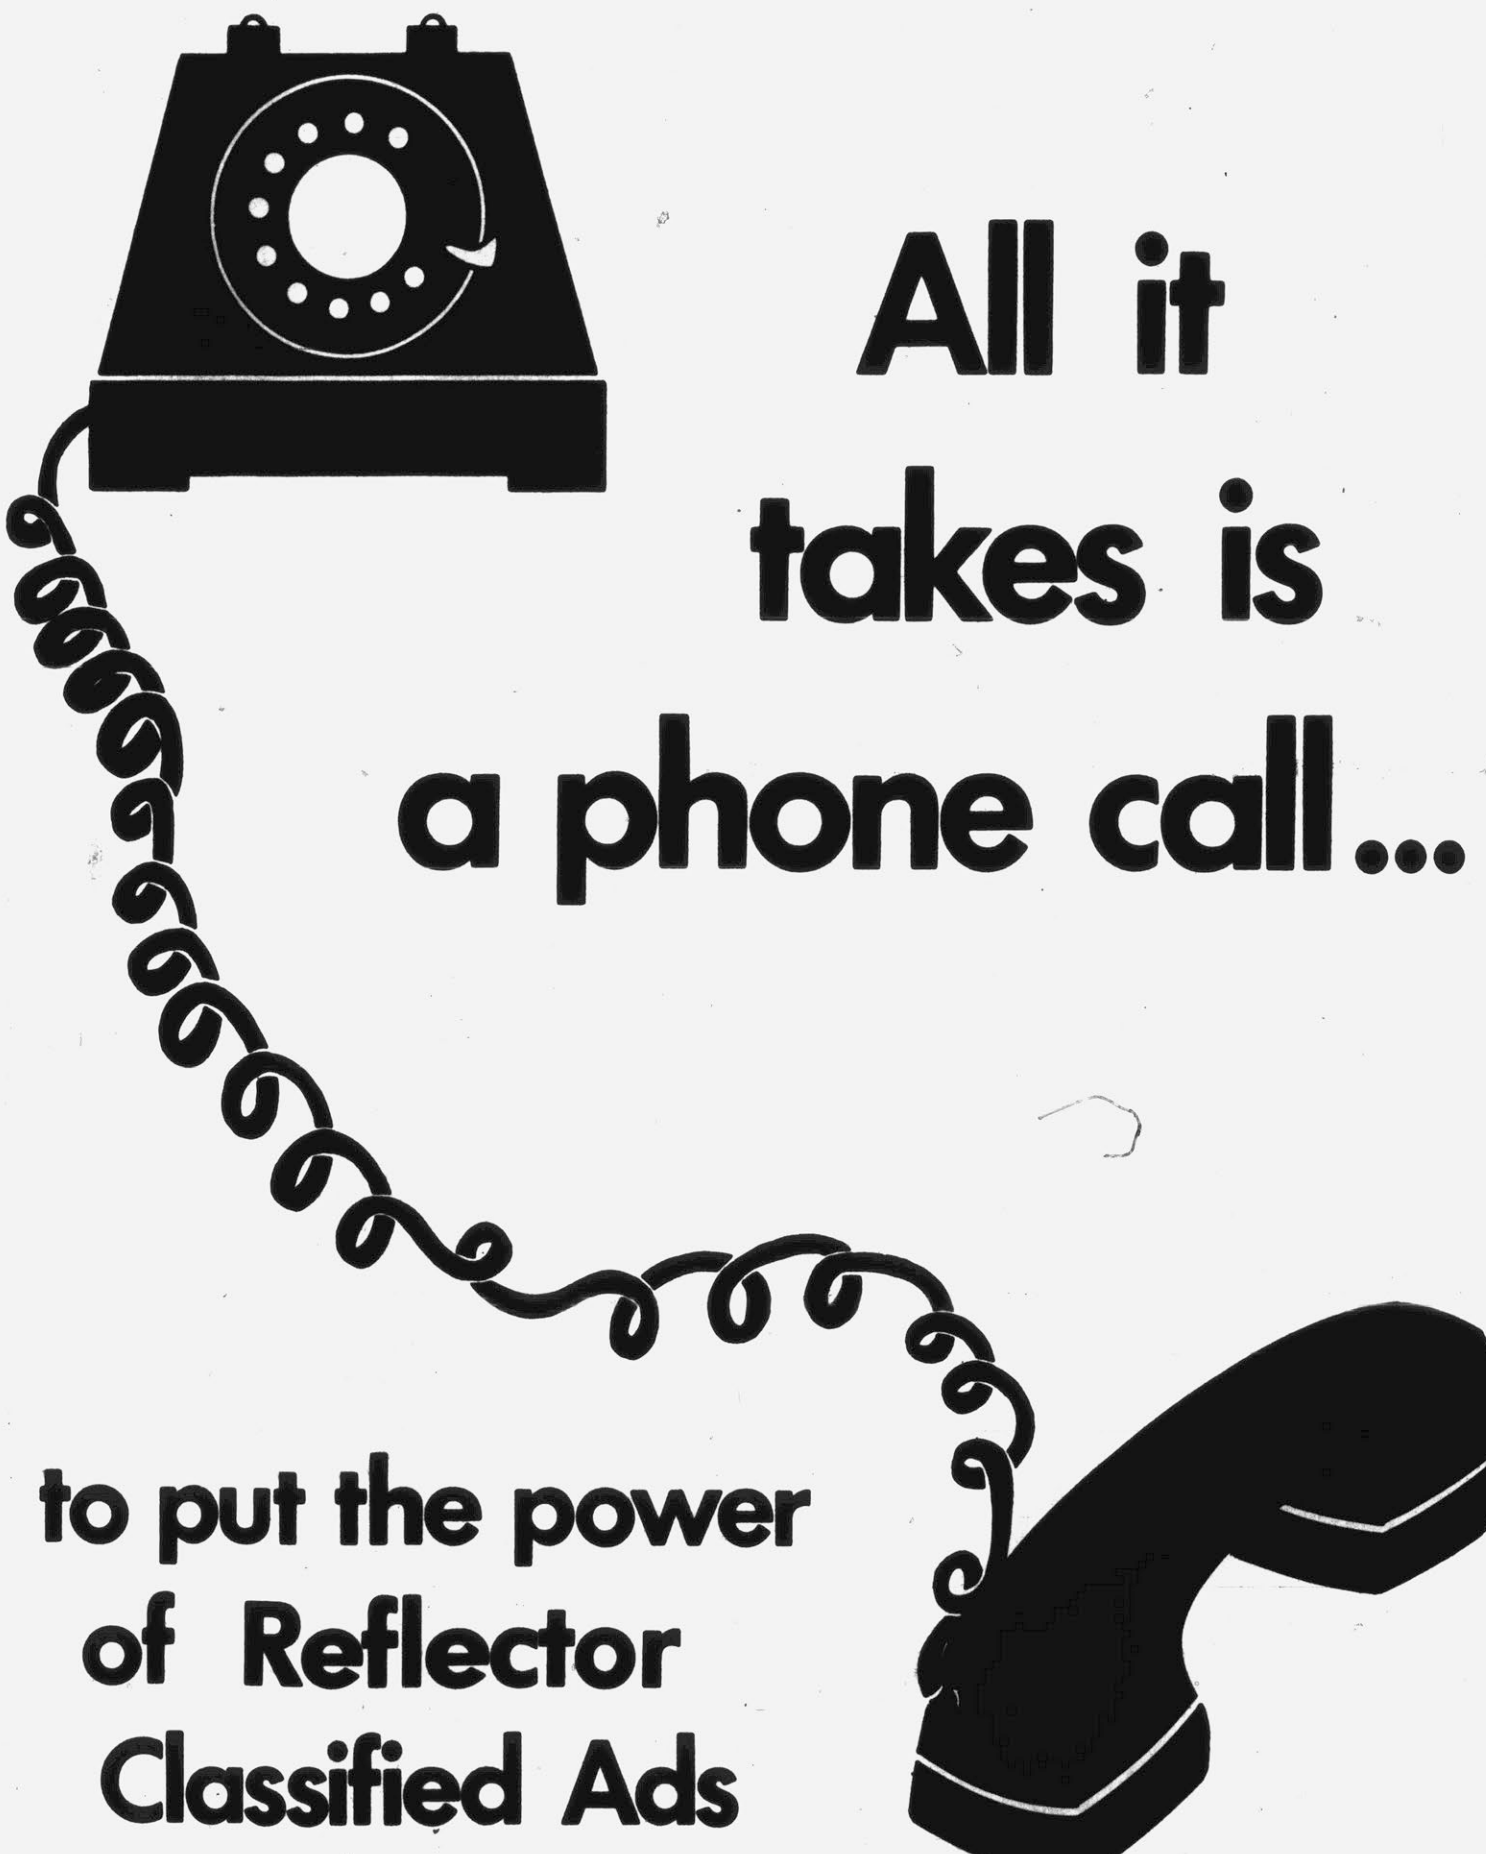

Nicholson ends up nearly impotent, and only a ritualistic affair which praises his domination of women manages to give him temporary relief.

The movie, although it is filled with locker-room language and several nude scenes, is well-acted and well-put-together.

And the theme is definitely there — you cannot expect to find love, if you have no love to give. Nicholson has only love for himself, and all his women are simply objects.

Women's Lib may cheer.
—Woody Peele.

Action Committee On Civil Justice Is Organized Here

Representatives of local churches have formed a study-action committee on civil justice.

The group aims to initiate some attempt to assist in the more equitable functioning of the civil justice system.

No officers have been elected and no formal name has been chosen yet. Most participants are from Greenville, but the group is seeking interested persons from throughout Pitt County as potential members, according to Father Charles H. Mulholland, one member.

The four general activities

Fireworks Ban To Be Enforced

Greenville police chief Glenn Cannon said today that the department would begin strict enforcement of a city ordinance that prohibits possession or sale of any kind of fireworks "or amusement explosives" within the city.

The chief said the city ordinance, in addition to banning firecrackers, Roman Candles and Skyrockets, prohibits the possession or sale of sparklers.

Cannon said that although there has been no open sale of fireworks or various aerial displays reported, reports have been received that some local stores have been selling sparklers.

He explained that enforcement of the ban on sparklers as well as other "amusement explosives" will be enforced.

Say Concord Safest City

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Concord was the safest city in North Carolina for motorists and pedestrians last year, the North Carolina State Motor Club said today.

The club's annual ratings indicate five Tar Heel cities of the 39 having more than 10,000 residents had no traffic deaths in the period. The club said Concord had more vehicles registered than the other four.

Runnerup communities were Shelby, Asheboro, Albemarle and Roanoke Rapids. None had any fatalities during 1970.

Concord was named the safest city in 1964. The 1969 winner was Shelby.

Rocky Mount, with 14 deaths, was at the bottom of the club's list, which is based on registration figures. Charlotte, with 55 deaths, was 35th.

At Fall Session Of Optometrists

Dr. Sam White of Greenville was one of 250 optometrists who attended the fall educational congress of the North Carolina State Optometric Society in Raleigh Sunday through Tuesday.

The program featured continuing education courses for practitioners in the new soft contact lens, vision care of the aged, visual therapy in learning and reading disorders, new refractive techniques, and ocular pathology.

tensive Self-Study program. This Self-Study is required every 10 years to reaffirm accreditation by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools (SACS).

In November 1972, a visitation team will come to ECU but this visit will merely climax the comprehensive study which the entire university is now undergoing.

The purpose of the Institutional Self-Study Program, according to the SACS, is "the improving of educational effectiveness in institutions of higher learning."

The SACS further states that the procedures of the program are "designed to help institutions reassess their objectives, measure success in attaining objectives, and explore ways and means by which educational efficiency may be improved."

Rummage Sale Set Saturday

The ladies of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints will sponsor a downtown rummage sale on Saturday from 10:30 a.m. until 4 p.m.

The sale will be on the corner of Washington Street and W. Fourth Street in the old Rhythm Sewing Machine Building.

Items to be sold are a dinette set, record players, sewing machine, child's tractor and other toys, mens' suits and shirts, ladies and childrens' clothing, jewelry, decorations and household goods.

One of the end products of this Self-Study will be a final report, drawn up by a committee of faculty members and students chosen by the Student Government Association. This Steering Committee, under the chairmanship of Dr. Charles Culp, must develop the report by the end of this school year.

According to Dr. Culp, a 60-page composite questionnaire has been sent to the dean of each school in order to gather the date necessary for compiling the report.

The questionnaire contains 11 standards which are to be studied. They include areas such as organization and administration, educational programs, faculty, library, graduate programs, and financial resources.

RemindCompany Not Responsible

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — The Iowa Employment Security Commission has turned down an appeal by a Keokuk woman that she receive unemployment benefits because the pregnancy which forced her to quit her job was unintentional.

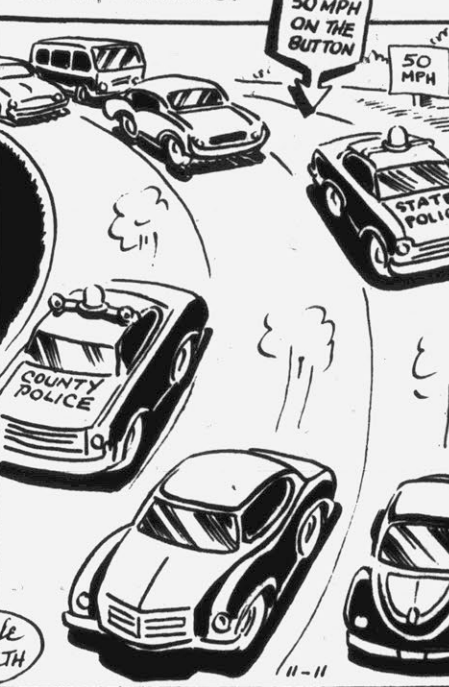

The commission said in rejecting the appeal of Mrs. Sandy K. Thoeny that the company wasn't responsible for her pregnancy, either.

Unemployment benefits are awarded only when it is proven that an employer is responsible for an employee leaving his job.

BOMBS AWAY

They hadn't learned to love their bombs, exactly. But residents of Nerima ward, Tokyo, had lived with them for over 26 years, ever since the three 2,000-pound blockbusters, dropped by U.S. planes in March, 1945, had fallen short of their targets, failed to explode and slammed deep into the mud of a farm field.

For years the owner of the field, who had watched the bombs fall, lived literally on top of one of them. Now, planning to build a new home, he asked the Japanese Ground Self Defense Force to get rid of these brooding ghosts from the past.

So, a force of 1,200 police, firemen and civil defense workers moved into the area with sound trucks. And they organized the evacuation of some 10,000 residents while GSDF ordnance experts disarmed the bombs at the bottom of 40-foot-deep holes which had been excavated around them.

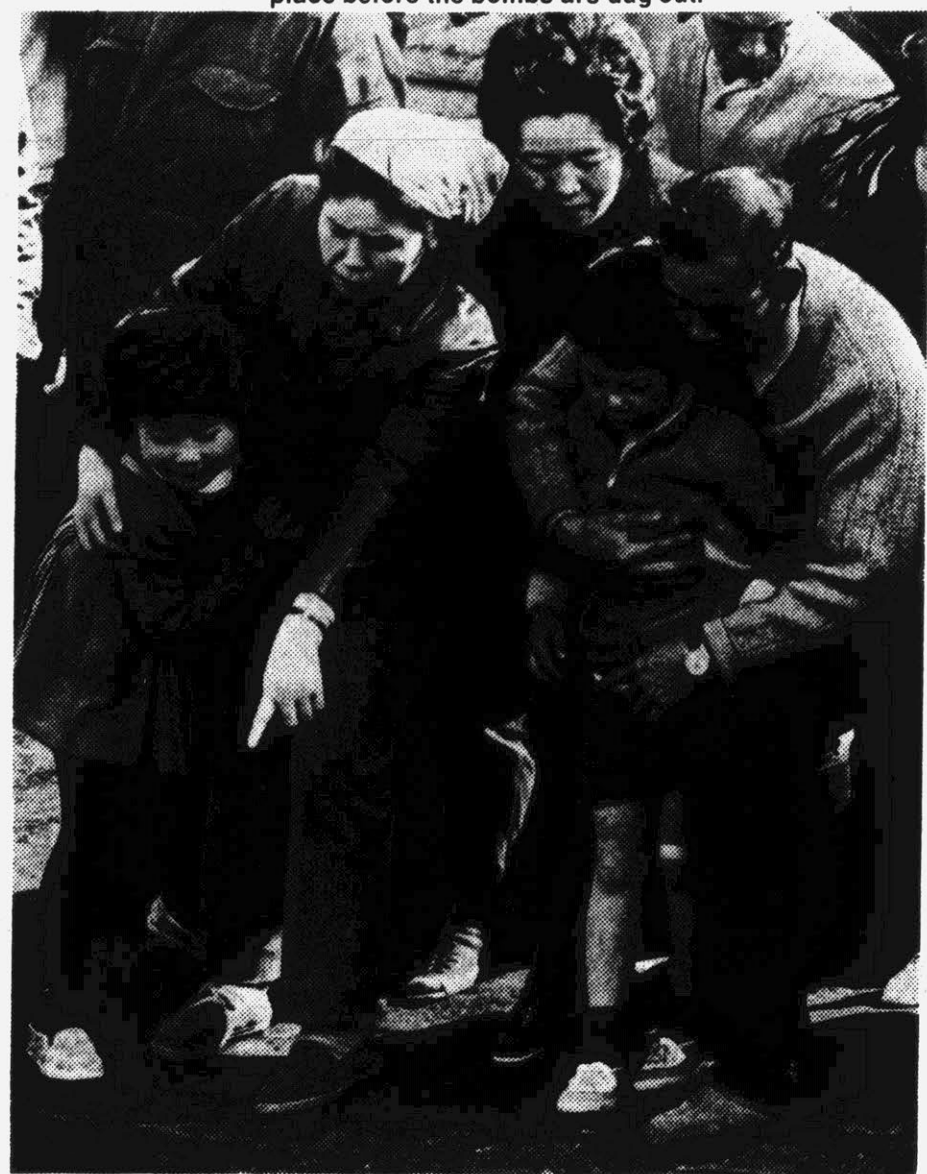

The area's residents stayed away just long enough for the detonators to be safely removed, then moved thankfully back onto home ground to watch three tons of World War II memories being carted off forever.

Bomb disposal men work in 40-foot hole where one of the bombs was uncovered.

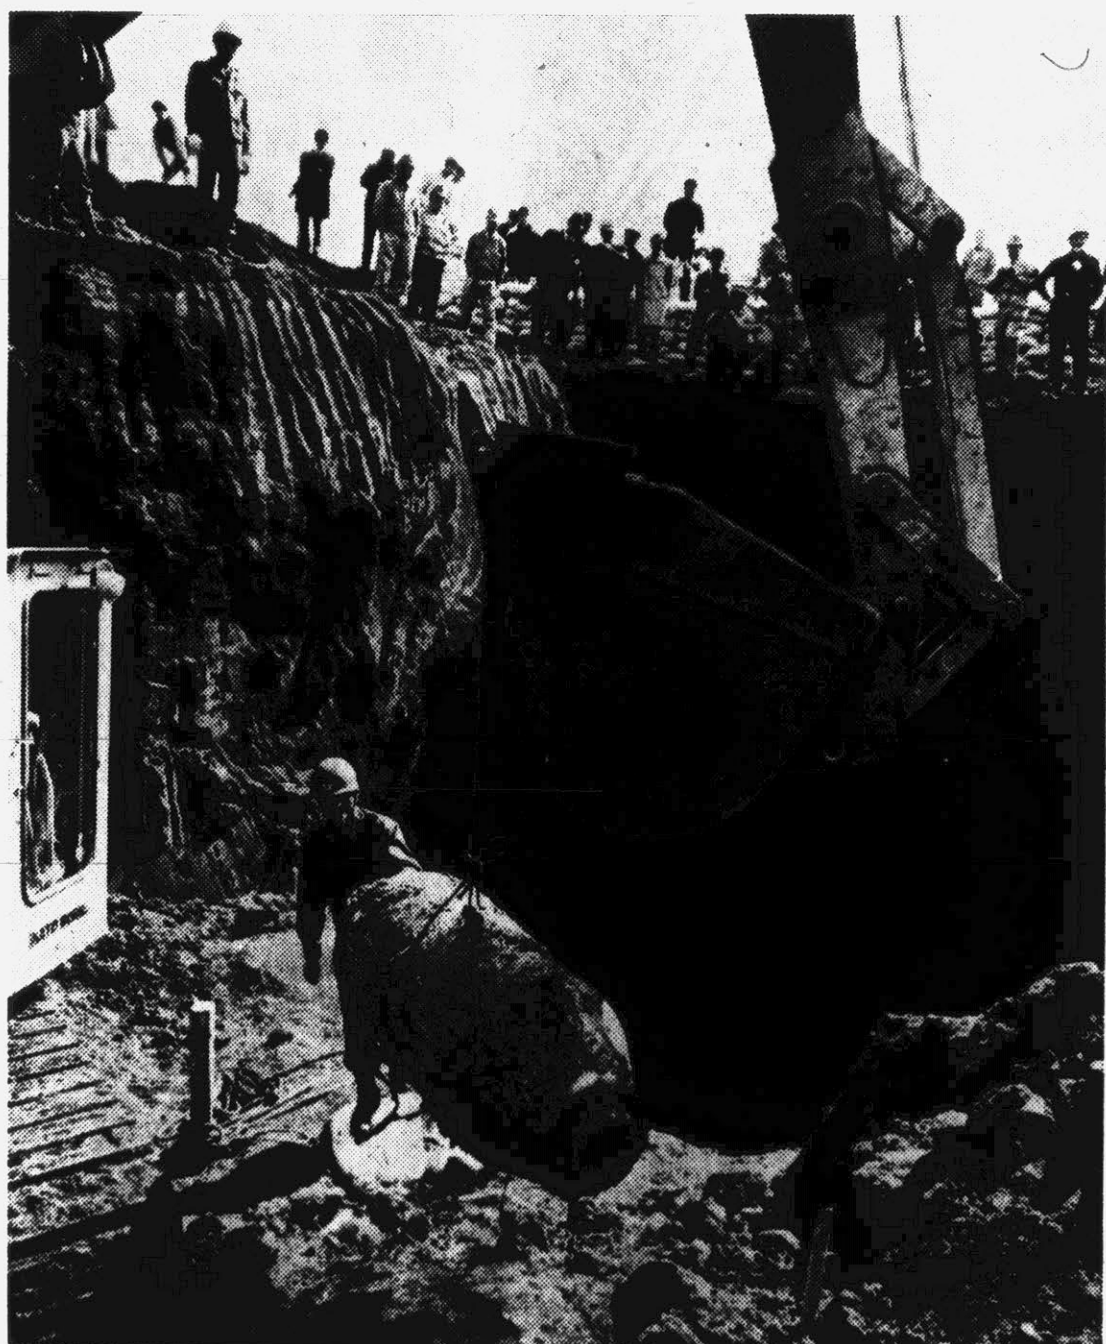

Police check residents' names as the temporary evacuation takes place before the bombs are dug out.

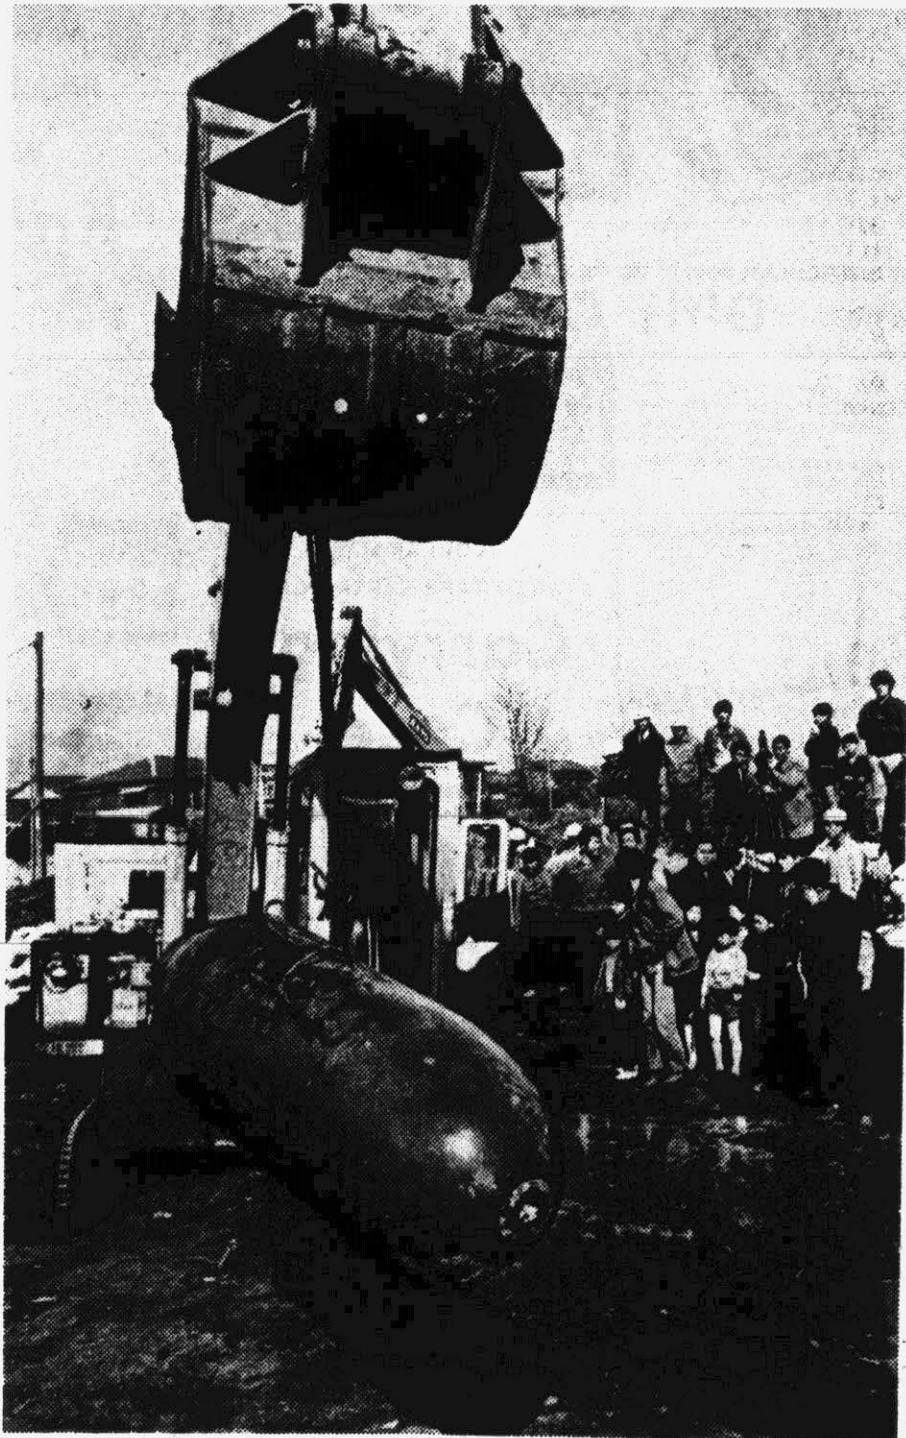

After the bombs' defusing, residents return and peer down with awed curiosity at these now-harmless ghosts of WW II.

Defused at last (fuse held left) . . .

. . . the disarmed bomb is slowly raised from its deep bed . . .

. . . and finally reaches the surface, watched by returning residents.

The Worry Clinic Mind Requires Exercise, Too

Dr. Higasson shows that your brain can remain keen and alert, despite advancing years. But it demands daily mental calisthenics! So stay in touch with reality by devouring your daily newspaper. Don't vegetate until you lose track of time, person and place. Reading "oils" your brain cells!

By GEORGE W. CRANE
Ph. D., M. D.

Case S-516: Dr. J. C. Higasson, aged 88, is the oldest dental surgeon in Danville, Illinois.

Occasionally he drops into the office of my son Daniel to reminisce about dentistry.

For he has a keen mind and also a superb sense of humor. Until their firstborn son arrived earlier this year, Dan's vivacious wife, Judy, helped in the dental office.

So when Dan was at the YMCA on Monday, Wednesday and Friday noons playing volleyball with his team, Judy would be regaled with Dr. Higasson's stories.

One of them involved Rotterdam.

Dr. Higasson said a little girl called to her mother to "tattle" on her 12-year-old brother.

"Mother," gleefully exclaimed the girl, "Billy swore at me!"

Well, this was a good moral home where Sunday School was an integral part of the week's schedule, so Mamma was horrified.

"Billy," she challenged, "did you swear at your sister?"

Billy denied the charge.

"Yes, he did, too!" positively affirmed his sister.

"I did not!" just as firmly protested Billy.

"Then why does your sister say you did?" persisted Mamma.

"Well," replied Billy, "what does Rotterdam mean to you?"

His mother wrinkled her brow momentarily.

"Oh, that's a big city in Holland," she answered.

"Well, all I told her was that if she ever stole another piece of my candy, I hoped it'd Rotterdam teeth out!" Billy proudly defended himself.

This story is just a sample of the mirth that Dr. Higasson spreads around his city.

But he also is keenly interested in civic affairs, so he frequently sends letters to the editor.

For several years, he has thus been invited by the Gannett newspaper in Danville to receive a citation at the annual banquet sponsored by the Commercial News for the best letters to the editor.

This annual event brings together alert citizens, whether bricklayers or bankers, lawyers or housewives, doctors or high school students and clergymen, who have expressed their views most effectively in brief letters to the editor.

Earlier this week I told you that the famous Freedoms Foundation at Valley Forge also awards medals each year not only to editors, orators and columnists, but also to letter-writers to their local newspaper.

Indeed, one of the best outlets for those who crave to be writers, is the "Sound Off" page of their newspapers where the local readers may express their opinions in terse, 200-word missives.

And if you wish to influence your Congressmen, first send your letter to your local newspaper editor!

If he deems it worthy of reprinting, then clip the entire page, mark your letter with red or green pencil, and enclose the page for your Congressman at Washington or your State Legislature.

On the outside envelope, also write "Marked copy" and enclose in red!

Your letter will then have perhaps 10,000 horsepower punch!

So send for my booklet "How to Write Salable Copy," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 cents.

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

Opening lead: Four of ♣. Altho the odds were admittedly overwhelmingly in declarer's favor when the dummy was spread, his failure on the deal must be charged to inferior technique rather than bad luck.

The small slam in hearts was reached with dispatch. When South opened the bidding with one heart, North's hand was worth 20 points in support and he flashed an immediate slam signal by making a jump shift to three diamonds. South raised to four diamonds and North proceeded to check back for aces and kings. Finding that the partnership was lacking one secondary control, he settled for a small slam in hearts.

West opened the four of clubs and dummy won the trick with the ace. The play appeared to be quite routine to South. He drew trumps with two pulls, played the ace of spades and then finessed dummy's jack. East was in with the queen and he exited with a spade to the king. The king of diamonds was cashed to test that suit in case a singleton appeared. When both opponents followed with small cards, a diamond was led to the ace. West showed out, and South—muttering something about the bad breaks—conceded himself to be down one on the deal.

Despite the highly unfavorable distribution, South's contract was actually iron-clad provided that the trumps divided no worse than three-one. It is suggested that he lead a trump to his king at trick two. When both opponents follow suit, he can claim 12 tricks.

A club is ruffed with the ten of hearts and the remaining trumps are drawn with the queen of hearts. A diamond is led to the queen, followed by the ace, king and another spade. By refusing the spade finesse, South straddles the lead on the opposition at a time when the clubs have been stripped from both hands.

The player that goes in with the queen of spades cannot exit in either black suit without giving South a ruff and discard which permits him to dispose of his potential diamond loser. If the diamonds are divided three-two, the contract is assured regardless of how the hand is played. But—if the player who goes in with the queen of spades has all the remaining diamonds, he must exit with the jack and thereby exposes himself to a successful finesse against his ten.

In the present case, East is in, returns the jack of diamonds and North wins with the queen. The nine is led and whether or not East covers, South picks up the suit without loss. The only trick taken by the defense is the queen of spades.

Though the moon is pockmarked with countless craters, many immense, meteorites fall so infrequently there is little danger to visiting astronauts.

Further Honors For Dr. Kosteck

Recognition for his music compositions continues to be received by East Carolina University's Composer-in-Residence, Dr. Gregory Kosteck.

Just prior to departing on a tour of Japan, Dr. Charles Stevens of the ECU School of Music faculty and a member of the North Carolina Music Teacher's Association (NCATA) announced locally that Dr. Kosteck has been awarded the annual commission for a composition of a major piece of music. The commission is given by the NCMTA.

Kosteck was chosen for the 1972 commission from a group of composers nominated by the NCMTA executive committee.

The commission stipulates that the composition include music both for piano and strings. Another requirement is that the work receive its premier performance at the fall meeting of the NCMTA in Winston-Salem.

Another recent recognition of Dr. Kosteck's music was a performance on October 22 of his First Symphony by the Radio Trieste Orchestra of Trieste, Italy. The first American performance of this work will take place November 19 at Indiana University. Conductor Keith Brown will direct that performance.

Kosteck's First Symphony has received a nomination for the 1972 Pulitzer Prize in musical composition.

They Watch For Famine Indicators

ROME (AP) — In 70 countries around the world international civil servants are practicing a new profession—famine watcher.

They are regional officials of the U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) who have been assigned the additional duty of standing guard in an early warning system against disastrous food shortages.

FAO set up the system on the basis that although man may be able to do nothing about cyclones and earthquakes, the perennial disasters of famine stemming from floods, drought or plant and animal diseases can be foreseen.

By early warning, the suffering and damage that these cause in crop failure, hunger, starvation and widespread poverty may be lessened or averted.

These disasters seldom are felt any more in the richer, industrial countries of the world. But throughout the two-thirds of the earth that is poor and predominantly agricultural—the developing countries of Africa, Asia, the Middle East and Latin America—disastrous crop failures are frequent. Hunger is commonplace. And the dividing line between hunger and starvation is thin.

The FAO early warning system seeks to spot crop failures in the making, and predict their extent and consequences in time to get emergency relief to the scene.

This relief is largely in the form of food aid obtained from the surplus of the over-producing countries, such as the United States, Canada, Western Europe, Japan, Australia and New Zealand.

Within the past year early warnings from the famine watchers have forestalled famine disasters or eased the suffering in four parts of the world.

The warning system foresaw the failure of maize, rice and millet crops this year in the little West African nation of Gambia in time to send in enough emergency food to feed 150,000 people, more than a third of the population, for 40 crucial days.

Iraq was hit by one of the worst droughts in its history. But the famine watchers spotted signs of the disaster in reports of livestock mortalities and increasing food shortage among the Bedouins in the rural areas. Within two months, $1.3 million worth of emergency food supplies was on the way to the stricken regions.

The FAO-U.N. world food program, which acquires and distributes the surplus food supplies, has $10 million a year for such emergency aid.

But the organization has to appeal to governments for more money when frequent or major disasters make this amount inadequate.

Offer Farm Record Book

A comprehensive agriculture record book is being distributed free to North Carolina farm families and will be available at any of Wachovia Bank and Trust Company's 149 state offices.

The 28-page book, which is being furnished by Wachovia, is divided into sections with entry spaces for recording receipts, expenses, inventory and depreciation of farm buildings and machinery and an inventory of feed, crops and supplies.

Space is also included, Wachovia announced, for crop production records, fertilization, livestock and poultry records, labor and income and other tax payments and deductions.

Dr. Joe Pou of Greenville, agricultural specialist for Wachovia, said the book "has been a long-overdue need of farm families in all sections of North Carolina. I am delighted that we are now able to provide this service."

He added that "A farm family's ability to account for income and expenses for all crops and livestock leads to raising farm profits. This record book will make the job easier than ever before."
