

Dollar Plunges Abroad As Devaluation 'Possible'

By LOUIS NEVIN
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — The possibility of devaluation sent the dollar plunging to record lows on major European exchanges today.

Market conditions were generally described as hectic and state banks in Paris and London were reported buying substantial amounts of dollars to slow the decline in value.

In Switzerland, banks were limiting dollar transactions to a maximum of a million per customer.

The dollar-selling wave was sparked by reports from a

Rome meeting of the richest Western nations that the United States is ready to negotiate a dollar devaluation of perhaps 5 per cent against gold within a general realignment of world currency values. The official price of gold is now $35 an ounce and the unofficial price around $43.

Exchange operators expected a cut in the dollar's value to be announced after a further meeting of the Group of Ten non-Communist nations in Washington Dec. 17-18.

European stock markets also brightened at the prospect of an early end to international monetary and trade uncertainties after 3½ months of the crisis set off on Aug. 15 by President Nixon's announcement of his new economic program.

On the Frankfurt foreign exchange, the dollar plunged to a record low of 3.29 West German marks, compared to Wednesday's close of 3.3035 marks. Today's rate represented an increase in the mark's dollar value of 11¼ per cent since May when the West German money was set free to find its own level in the market.

The dollar was also at a record low in Zurich at 3.9305

Swiss francs against Wednesday's closing of 3.9547. This was a dollar devaluation of 3¼ per cent from the previous parity of 4.08 francs.

In Paris the situation was more complicated because of the French two-tier system set up to keep a so-called "commercial franc" used for 90 per cent of transactions, pegged closely to the dollar. There is also a "financial franc" used mainly by tourists which is permitted to fluctuate.

The financial franc opened at 5.365, down from Wednesday's closing 5.405. Today's rate represented a 3½ per cent upvaluing of the franc from parity.

In London, the pound opened in a range of $2.4940 to $2.4942 compared to Wednesday's closing $2.4939. This was almost a 4-per cent increase in the pound's dollar value from parity.

The dollar declined also against the Japanese yen in Tokyo, closing at 326.75, a new low. The previous low was 327.07 at closing on Wednesday. The new low represented an upward valuation of the yen of 10.17 per cent since the yen was floated on Aug. 28.

Indira Rebuffs Western Appeals Indian State Capital Is Strafed

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Pakistani planes strafed the capital of India's Tripura State today, adjacent to East Pakistan's southeast border, an Indian government spokesman announced in New Delhi.

The spokesman said the Indian army had been ordered to take immediate "defensive action," indicating it would cross the border. The government used the same phrase in connection with the three previous advances into East Pakistan which it has admitted.

The Indian spokesman gave this account:

Five U.S.-made F86 Sabre Jets bombed and strafed the city of Agartala, 60 miles due east of Dacca, and its airport for 20 minutes this afternoon.

A number of civilians were killed or wounded, but anti-aircraft guns prevented any damage to the airfield.

Agartala has been under heavy shelling since 8 p.m. Wednesday, with artillery shells smashing into heavily populated areas and in the surrounding refugee camps for Bengalis from East Pakistan. The shelling has killed four civilians and wounded 37.

The Pakistani army reported two new Indian ground attacks, but Pakistani military sources said the defenders held or repulsed all assaults.

Prime Minister Indira Gandhi responded today to U.S. suspension of military shipments to her government with a declaration that India will follow its own policy toward Pakistan and will ignore any Western advice that her government feels is against India's national interest.

"The times have passed when any nation sitting 3,000 or 4,000 miles away could give orders to Indians on the basis of their color superiority to do as they wished," Mrs. Gandhi told members of her Congress party outside her residence.

Mrs. Gandhi did not directly mention the U.S. decision to cancel $2 million worth of military export licenses and to refuse all future licenses. But in obvious reaction to the U.S. move, she said: "The country is not so weak as to be afraid of any aid being cut off. Today we will do what is best in our national interest and not what these so-called big nations would like us to do."

The prime minister called again for the Pakistani army to withdraw from East Pakistan and in a new demand said Pakistani troops should also pull back from India's western border.

She did not promise any reciprocal Indian withdrawal.

Public Protected From Wage Hikes

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Price Commission has warned American businessmen against assuming they can pass the full cost of high wage increases on to their customers.

In reducing a requested price hike from a coal company, the commission Wednesday placed itself at odds with the Pay Board which recently okayed a 15 per cent wage and benefit increase for coal miners.

The decision also raised Commission Chairman C. Jackson Grayson to status as the dominant figure within President Nixon's apparatus for battling down inflation.

"This coal settlement was made after the wage guidelines were known," Grayson said in announcing that the Old Ben Coal Co., a subsidiary of Standard Oil of Ohio, would be allowed to pass along only 9.6 per cent of the wage hike.

From now on, Grayson said, the commission "will take a very careful look" at any request for a price hike based on wage settlements above the Pay Board's 5.5 per cent guideline.

Was he saying that firms which sign hefty wage contracts approved by the Pay Board are not yet "out of the woods" when they go before the Price Commission?

Grayson responded with a firm "yes."

In the case of Old Ben, the commission allowed a 3.78 per cent price increase. The firm had sought a 6.71 per cent hike.

Officials of the United Mine Workers said the commission's actions would have no effect on their newly negotiated contract.

But Carl E. Bagge, president of the National Coal Association, said in a sharply worded statement:

"If, with one hand, the government has approved a wage contract, another hand of government cannot legitimately compel the industry to operate at a loss."

Grayson said the same criteria used in limiting Old Ben will be applied across the board in the coal industry.

Grayson also described preliminary results of a survey the commission is taking of the pricing intentions of the nation's top 1,500 businesses.

Of 500 who answered a survey request, he said 20 per cent will not raise prices, 60 per cent said they would request modest increases and 20 per cent were noncommittal.

There were, meanwhile, these other economic developments: —The Senate approved 86-4 and sent to the House a bill giving President Nixon a year's extension, to April 30, 1973, of broad powers over the economy.

—A buoyant stock market rallied with a strength some analysts attributed to growing confidence in the economy.

—General Motors released a few examples of how it would distribute the 2.5 per cent average price raise approved by the Price Commission: Chevrolet Vegas' suggested retail price will be hiked by $51 to $2,251; a full-size Chevrolet Impala four-door hardtop with basic V-8 engine will increase by $109 to $3,519.

Senate OKS Allowing President To Extend Controls Through 1972

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate has passed 86 to 4 a bill permitting President Nixon to continue wage, price and rent controls through April, 1973.

The measure also contains a provision designed to give retroactive wage increases to most employees who lost them because of the Aug. 15-Nov. 14 pay freeze.

The Senate vote sent the legislation to the House where the Banking Committee is scheduled to meet again today in an effort to finish work on its version.

Accredited

The North Carolina Department of Mental Health has announced that the Walter B. Jones Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center of Greenville has been designated as a fully-accredited member of the American Hospital Association.

This signifies the compliance to and the maintenance of the highest standards which are mandatory for accreditation.

The local center is a 76-bed in-patient intensive treatment unit and serves the needs of the 33 counties comprising the eastern regional of North Carolina.

The panel failed on an 18-18 tie yesterday to clear the bill it had tentatively worked out. But various compromises were to be offered to break the deadlock.

Though the Senate rolled up an overwhelming vote for the bill, many members said they voted for it with great misgivings.

There was some confusion surrounding the retroactive pay feature—the major Senate addition to what Nixon originally said he wanted.

The administration resisted such increases during the freeze and has continued this stand since the Pay Board was established, despite organized labor's vociferous objections.

The Senate provision would allow raises negotiated before the Aug. 15 freeze so long as these were not "unreasonably inconsistent" with the 5.5 per cent guideline established by the Pay Board for Phase 2.

Sponsors said they wanted to make sure teachers and most others denied their raises would now receive them.

Late in the debate, the administration sent word it would accept this language; some senators speculated the White House was short of the votes needed to strike it from the bill and so decided to support retroactivity.

An AFL-CIO spokesman said labor lawyers were convinced the provision would obtain most of the retroactive raises labor is determined to get.

The House Committee has adopted a retroactive pay provision which the administration strongly opposes. It calls for payment of the raises unless they are "grossly disproportionate" to the guidelines.

Buildings Burn In Rocky Mount

ROCKY MOUNT, N.C. (AP) — Damage estimates were not available today in a fire that gutted two buildings on the edge of the Rocky Mount business district Wednesday.

Heaviest damage was suffered by the B. Klitzner and Sons store and an adjacent building. Three other businesses were damaged.

Bands, Floats, Crowds Greet Santa's Arrival

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer
FARMVILLE — Santa Claus didn't throw candy this year, but the children followed him down the street just as merrily as ever. St. Nick brought up the rear of the long line-up in yesterday's Christmas parade, but he was first in the minds of children who waited impatiently for his arrival.

A magic camera to snap the radiant face of each child as Santa neared him would be a joy to parents. The children's happy faces are a testament to a belief in all that is good.

Bands heralded Santa's coming — those of Farmville Central, Greene Central, Robertsonville and Tarboro. Floats of every imaginable Christmas motif and nursery rhyme themes were adorned by beautiful girls.

To the greatest extent of any Christmas parade within recent years, both races could recognize some of their own on each float.

The Rocky Mount Police Department's Drill Team rhythmically shuffled in unison, to the delight of young boys, and Smokey the Bear waved at the crowd.

Mayor Will Joyner and Chamber of Commerce president Emil La Coste were present and so were representatives of the Marvin Tyson American Legion Post. Chamber of Commerce

Secretary Louis Williams said yesterday's parade crowd seemed to be the largest in several years.

This small town project still brings happiness, and the lighting of Christmas street decorations immediately after the parade, as twilight set in, signified the beginning of the Yule season here.

Clamp-Down

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — The government declared a state of emergency for the province of Santiago today after a night of clashes between supporters and opponents of Chile's leftist government.

About 100 persons were reported hurt in fighting that grew out of a demonstration Wednesday by 5,000 women protesting food shortages.

About a third of Chile's 9 million people live in Santiago Province, which embraces this national capital. The state of emergency empowers the government to make arrests without warrants and impose news censorship, among other things.

Hugh Morton's Hat In Ring For Governorship

RALEIGH (AP) — Wilmington businessman Hugh Morton, who toured North Carolina's 100 counties to test his political chances, plans to seek the Democratic nomination for governor.

He formally announced his candidacy Wednesday from the steps of the state Capitol.

Three other Democrats have already announced—Lt. Gov. Pat Taylor, former state Sen. Hargrove (Skipper) Bowles of Greensboro and Dr. Reginald Hawkins, a Charlotte dentist.

Morton's announcement was no surprise. A resort developer and photographer, he had spent four months touring the state.

He said the tour was "a rewarding experience because North Carolinians are a special people, proud of their achievements."

Morton, 50, developer of Grandfather Mountain, is a former member of the state Board of Conservation and Development and was president of the first Wilmington Azalea Festival in 1948.

He said Wednesday that in his travels about the state he has found that the people "are troubled."

"They work but today they are uncertain of the results of their labor," he said. "They adjust to change, but they are unsure of what is required of them. They are eager to seek the future, but they are in doubt of the road to take."

Morton said he was becoming a candidate "so that we can place North Carolina back on the road of progress as we move into the future. It is time that we apply ourselves effectively to bring new ideas, new programs and new hope to North Carolina."

Noting that North Carolina lost population in the late 1960's, Morton said the state is "faced with second-class status in the region we once led. We face second-class status because we need new leadership to develop fully the potentials of the state and our people."

He also said the solution to the problems of North Carolina's urban areas "lies in the revitalization of our great rural areas and in the strengthening of our smaller towns and communities that have been so long neglected by the state and federal governments."

BRINGING UP THE REAR at Farmville's Christmas parade yesterday is good old Saint Nick...

minus candy, but brimming over with the gift of happiness for children.

Miss Janice Mills Is Bride Of Zack Brown

St. Stephen Episcopal Church was the scene of the wedding of Miss Janice Marie Mills and Zack Bernard Brown on Saturday at 2:30 p.m.

Father J. H. Banks officiated at the double ring ceremony. A program of nuptial music was presented by the Rev. John H. Taylor of Greenville, organist.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Jessie Mills of Rt. 1, Winterville, and the late Mr. Henry S. Mills. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Brown of Camden, S.C.

Given in marriage by her brother, Dr. Thulman Mills, of Chicago, Ill., the bride wore a white gown with a chapel length train of silk organza over net and taffeta designed with a high neckline and empress bodice. Clusters of pearls and chantilly lace patterned the bodice and full skirt. The bishop sleeves were silk with chantilly lace.

She wore an English net mantilla of chantilly lace matching that of her gown. Her bridal bouquet was designed with white mums with red tassels at the end of the ribbon.

Maid of honor was Miss Brenda Faye Mills, sister of the bride. She wore a yellow long sleeved dress of chiffon and satin.

Bridesmaids were Mrs. Alex Jones of Jackson Heights, N.Y., sister of the bride, and Miss Peggy Dixon of Ayden, cousin of the bride. They wore rose red velvet dresses with white lace around the neckline and sleeves. They wore matching headpieces.

Flower girl was Miss Elva Jean Keaton of Indianapolis, Ind., niece of the bride. Joel Karmardi Mills of Chicago, Ill., nephew of the bride, was ring bearer.

The mother of the bride wore a long sleeved blue knit dress with matching accessories. Her corsage was of white mums. The mother of the bridegroom wore a light beige dress with matching accessories.

The bridegroom's brother, Nathaniel Brown, of Camden, S.C., was best man. Ushers were Leon Morgan of Camden, S.C.

MRS. ZACK BERNARD BROWN

and Kelly Mills of Nashville, Tenn., brother of the bride.

After a wedding trip to unannounced points, the couple will reside in Nashville, Tenn.

The bride is a graduate of A&T State University, Greensboro, and Atlanta University, Atlanta, Ga. She was a former science instructor at D. H. Conley High School. The bridegroom is a graduate of Morehouse College, Atlanta, Ga., and is presently a medical student at Meharry Medical College, Nashville, Tenn. He is a member of Omega Psi Phi fraternity.

Reception

Following the ceremony, the bride's mother entertained at a reception at her home.

The bride's table was decorated with a five tiered wedding cake and other decorations.

Assisting in serving and pouring punch were Mrs. Lawrence of Greenville and Miss Linda Cannon Winterville. Others assisting were Mrs. Marian P. Smith, Mrs. Lillian Powell, Mrs. Essie P. Mills and Miss Jean Mills.

Mrs. Pecolaja M. Keaton of Indianapolis, Ind., directed guests to the gift room.

Pre-nuptial activities honoring the bride couple and guests included an after-rehearsal dinner party Friday evening held at the home of the bride's mother.

Raymond P. Smith Jr. and Wayne Smith, cousins of the bride, served as acolytes.

Good-byes were said by Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Smith of Greenville.

Is It Snobbish To Vote For Self In School Election?

By Abigail Van Buren

(© 1971 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: I am a boy, 15, and a high school sophomore. Recently we had school elections, and I was nominated for vice president of my class and I am wondering about the following situation:

Is it snobbish to vote for yourself in any kind of election? I'm not speaking only of the secret ballot when nobody else will know for whom you have voted, but in open elections when the voters raise their hands to cast their votes. I did this the other day [voted for myself in an open election], and now I feel terrible because I'm afraid some of the kids will think I am stuck up.

I would like your opinion on this.

DAVID

DEAR DAVID: The Rabbi Hillel said: "If I am not for myself, who will be for me?" The rabbi was right on!

DEAR ABBY: I have been a lonely divorcee for nearly three years. I'm 45. Several months ago I met an attractive 50-year-old man who was [and still is] separated from his wife. This gentleman and I have been constant companions ever since our meeting, which is the nicest thing that has happened to me in a very long time.

Several weeks ago his wife started phoning me at all hours of the night. At first I was patient because I felt sorry for her. But now her calls have become frightening.

I have left my receiver off the hook for hours, but still the calls continue. I spoke to my companion about this, and he has spoken to her, but to no avail.

I don't want to get an unlisted number as I have friends all over the country who call me and come to town occasionally, and these calls are important to me.

My companion says his wife is emotionally disturbed, and I believe she is. What's the answer? Should I put up with her calls until she decides to quit? Must I stop seeing my gentleman friend? Or should I take legal action to stop the harassment?

NEEDS ADVICE

DEAR NEEDS: Don't take any legal action unless you are positive that both you and your constant companion are not vulnerable to some legal action from his wife. Until a man is divorced, he is married, you know, which places you in the position of cavorting with a married man.

DEAR ABBY: I am 41 and am getting married for the first time. My fiancé is 49 and has outlived two wives. My problem is what kind of wedding to have.

I have always dreamed of having a big church wedding with a white gown and veil, bridesmaids and all the frills, but I am afraid that some of my friends and relatives would consider this bad taste.

I want my wedding to be perfect, but I care a great deal about what people say.

My fiancé is agreeable to anything I decide. I can well afford to have a large, church wedding, but I am wondering if perhaps a smaller, more quiet wedding wouldn't be in better taste? What do you think?

UNDECIDED IN BOSTON

DEAR UNDECIDED: A large church wedding would not be in "bad taste" since this is your first. But since you have misgivings, I think you'd be happier with a smaller, more quiet one.

'Miracle' Child Observed Her Fourth Birthday

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI)—The fact that Cameron Rene (Cammie) Bohren observed her fourth birthday is something of a miracle.

Cammie was brought to Children's Hospital Medical Center gravely ill with encephalitis and chicken pox.

Doctors can find no case in medical records in which a child with her type of brain disease has survived.

If encephalitis develops as a complication of chicken pox (and this itself is rare), it usually attacks the cerebellum, the part of the brain which controls coordination of movement. The child may stagger for a few days, perhaps lose his balance, and the condition disappears.

In Cammie's case, encephalitis attacked the cerebrum, the main part of the brain which forms the largest part of the central nervous system. She had massive brain swelling, which usually kills.

Because the brain is a closed compartment, the swelling pushes the lower part of the brain, controlling vital functions involving heart and lungs, down through the spinal column. But doctors were able to control the swelling by medication.

The moment Cammie came into the hospital, doctors realized she was going to stop breathing. They placed a tube through her nose to her trachea so they would be ready when the time came. Exactly 10 hours later, she stopped breathing. They hooked her to a waiting respirator.

"That might have been the single most important thing we did for her," says Dr. Edward Connolly. "There was no significant period, as far as we know, when her brain was deprived of oxygen."

Doctors believed she was dying that first long night. Both her lungs collapsed. Two members of the staff and a nurse took turns applying postural drainage (a pounding technique) throughout the night. Cammie's condition remained grave. Her lungs continued to collapse. She developed pneumonia, there was bleeding in her stomach (common in diseases of the central nervous system) and liver damage, now known to be minor.

Every two hours, day, and night, personnel from the physical therapy department administered postural drainage.

On the third day, Cammie opened her eyes and looked around. That was all. She could not move any other part of her body, breathe for herself or even keep her heart going with her own flagging system.

Respirators breathed for her and medication was given to

Blind Children Can Sniff Out Solutions With Aid Of 'Strips'

NEW YORK (AP) — Who stole Detective Arthur's birthday cake?

With the help of some magical paper strips, blind children can, literally, sniff out the solution to this mystery.

"Detective Arthur on the Scent" is a book available in a braille edition, about a dog detective who smells his way through six flavorful clues to find his missing birthday cake.

The aroma of the clues comes through to the blind children at the scratch of a fingernail across small paper strips. They are attached to the book, and each one holds 50 million bubbles just waiting to release a specific fragrance—one which lasts for months at least.

In Detective Arthur's case, the clues are scented in banana, cherry, lemon, grape, mint and even chocolate. There are two other scented books—

"Little Bunny Follows His Nose" and "The Sweet Smell of Christmas."

The scented strips are the products of a process known as microencapsulation or micro-fragrance, and according to the 3M company, were first used to advertise perfume. They have since been used in the advertising of soap, food and beverages.

The braille books come in "twin vision." That means that pages in braille accompany and give the text of conventionally printed pages, so that a blind child can read along with a sighted parent or friend.

Officers Installed, Club Woman Of Year Named At Dinner Meeting

Officers for 1972 were installed in ceremonies last night at the annual Christmas dinner meeting of the Junior Woman's Club of Greenville.

Mrs. Melton Evans of Washington, president of District 15, installed the following: Mrs. William E. Fugua Jr., president; Mrs. Lewis Robbins, first vice president; Mrs. Melvin Hathaway, second vice president; Mrs. Samuel Cox, recording secretary; Mrs. Jack Respass, corresponding secretary; and Mrs. Lon R. Williford Jr., treasurer.

Mrs. Robbins named Mrs. Richard Ullom, now living in Winter Haven, Fla., as the Outstanding Club Woman of the Year.

The Ullom family moved to Florida on Sept. 1 of this year. Mrs. Ullom was cited for her outstanding work in the Junior Woman's Club and other areas. She was second vice president of the club and served as chairman of the club's Antique Show and Sale and pecan sale. In addition, she was a member of the Fine Arts Department.

Winner in local and district sewing contests for Fine Arts Festivals, Mrs. Ullom won second place in the state sewing contest for the Fine Arts Festival 1970-71. She was selected to appear in the 1971 edition of "Outstanding Young Women in America."

While living in Greenville, Mrs. Ullom was a member of the First Christian Church, serving as a board member of the Christian Woman's Fellowship and was a youth advisor. She was director of Operation Sunshine 1970-71. She is the mother of three children, Melisa Kay, six, Richard Todd, four and Robert Trevor, three months.

Mrs. Robert Dean, outgoing president, presided during the evening's activities. She also gave a president's report of accomplishments over the past two years.

Special guests for the evening, Mr. and Mrs. Evans, were introduced by Mrs. Dean. Mrs. James Hudson gave the welcome and Mrs. Hathaway gave the invocation.

The dinner meeting was held in the Blue Room at the Candlewick Inn.

block the nerve from the brain to the heart to interrupt its message to stop. Her heart was beating only 20 to 30 times a minute, but the medication speeded it up again.

A tracheotomy was performed. Cammie's breathing was maintained on a positive pressure respirator, which works well for a child, but cannot be used indefinitely because it makes no allowances for improvement or deterioration of the patient's lungs.

The time came when she could no longer tolerate the respirator. Doctors knew she would die without a volume cycle respirator, which has a computer-like mechanism and built-in "sigh-cycle." Unfortunately, Childrens Hospital did not own such a respirator. Doctors began using hand respiration and calling other hospitals in the area.

Finally, Dr. David Dugan located in another Oakland hospital the type of Respirator the little girl needed. After six hours of hand respiration, she was placed on the volume cycle respirator. Within three hours, she took a dramatic turn for the better.

For the next few weeks, Cammie could breathe for herself intermittently for 10 to 15 minutes. Then she would tire. For anyone else, it would be like having a 50-pound lead weight strapped to the chest and trying to breathe.

Gradually her muscles became stronger and from the end of May until June 19, Cammie seemed to improve daily without major setbacks.

Then the night of the 19th she stopped breathing again. As doctors poured into the room, Cammie went into a coma. Physicians feared she had lost all she had gained, but within 15 minutes, under vigorous treatment, she regained consciousness.

Cammie now is at the Kaiser Rehabilitation Center in nearby Vallejo. She goes to physical therapy every day during the week and goes home with her parents in Concord on week-

Nutrition Professor Says Better Food Labeling Is Essential For Upgrading

By JEANNE LESEM

UPI Food Editor
SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (UPI)—Better food labeling is essential if we are to upgrade American nutrition, says Jean Mayer, a Harvard nutrition professor and director of the 1969 White House Conference on Food, Nutrition and Health.

In a speech and interview, Mayer emphasized the need for more and better information about snacks and other formulated and fabricated foods that are fast replacing traditional meals prepared entirely at home.

Mayer was in Scottsdale to address the annual meeting of the Society of Nutrition Education, a professional organization.

"Food labeling is absolutely essential because 50 per cent of our foods no longer are primary ones as they were depicted in old charts," he said. Taking frozen spinach soufflé as an example, he asked:

"Do you describe it as a high fat or a low fat food? A high or a low-calorie one? The label doesn't say."

Mayer added that "nutrition education is not very relevant when it considers all fruits as equivalent. Watermelon as a source of nutrients is better than apples, which are a symbol of goodness."

He said watermelons provide more vitamins A, B-1, B-2, C and iron than apples.

"Apples are useful for other things. Chewing them is good for the gums, for dental hygiene, and they're easy to carry along for a snack."

Mayer traced meal pattern changes from World War I, when veterans wanted three meals a day, with meat and potatoes at two of them.

Vietnam veterans skip breakfast, but their food from vending machines and snack all day, said Mayer. "We're dealing with a generation that feeds itself differently, but there's no reason it can't be fed adequately."

More nutrition information is needed about prepared foods because about one-third of all meals now are eaten away from home, he continued.

Adult men are the persons most likely to die of nutritional inadequacy because they eat more than half their meals away from home and tend to choose a lot more fat foods for these meals.

"We must teach them how to use restaurant, hotel and airline meals," said Mayer.

"Now it's only a question of what kind of eggs they're going to have if they breakfast in any of these places."

"Two myths are foisted on the American people. One says that beef offers the best protein and is low in calories. But you can get fat on meat because of its fat content."

"Americans are convinced that two-thirds of the world is starving. A lot are without an optimal diet, but the average Chinese or Indian is not starving. How do you think they stay so lean on a high carbohydrate diet?"

"Everybody except dietitians overestimates the (number of) calories in carbohydrate foods and underestimates the (number of) calories in meat."

"People believe bread and potatoes are fattening but nothing else is. They're shocked to hear there's 12 to 14 per cent protein in bread."

Mayer said he'd counter such misconceptions with a nutrition education program for doctors, nurses and the general public. But he said he would teach it in terms of human biology, not the nutritive value of foods.

"Even the people who know a lot about nutrition—the vitamins and minerals—don't know how to apply (their knowledge) to specific foods," he said.

Doctor Develops Home Treatment that RINSES AWAY BLACKHEADS HELPS DRY UP ACNE-PIMPLES In 15 Minutes or Your Money Back!

Queen Helene Mint Julep Masque 15 Minute Treatment Must Show Immediate Improvement or — YOUR MONEY BACK!

A New York Doctor, working with a cosmetic laboratory, has developed a simple home-treatment that rinses away blackheads in a matter of minutes. It was demonstrated recently on five teen-age girls and three boys.

The results were breath-taking. Blackheads really rinsed away. In fact, many could be seen on the cloth used to wash off the Masque. But this wasn't all! Acne-pimples improved after one application, enlarged pores reduced, and rough complexions became cleaner, clearer and smoother looking. These results certainly indicate why teen-agers are now saying "this is one product that really works" and why mothers of teen-agers have endorsed its use.

The Masque-Cream Treatment is indeed a remarkable discovery, not only for clear healthy skins, but also for the self-confidence, poise and self-esteem a fine complexion brings to teen-agers!

Anyone Can Use It

If you suffer the agony of teen-age blackheads, acne-pimples and rough unsightly complexions, give yourself this home treatment at our risk. Apply this delightfully Mint-Scented Cream and within 2 or 3 minutes an absorbing agent, called Argilla, dries and turns this cream into a plastic-like masque. You will now feel as though hundreds of "tiny fingers" were softly kneading the skin, loosening pore-caked dirt, blackheads and foreign impurities.

As it firms and hardens, its suction-action draws out waste matter from the pores. . . In 15 minutes you simply rinse the masque away with lukewarm water which dissolves it immediately. When you wipe your face, you can see that blackheads and other pore "filler" actually come off on your towel. And your skin feels clean... really clean... refreshed, smooth like velvet!

Start Now Improve Your Complexion

Don't take a back seat or be a wall-flower because of bad skin. If you want to get your full share of fun and parties... clear up your complexion and let Mint Julep Masque "Lead the Way!" You certainly owe it to yourself to try a single fifteen minute home treatment to convince yourself that this new Queen Helene masque-cream can work wonders for you.

Attention! MOTHERS of Teen-Agers

Queen Helene Mint Julep Masque is a MUST for you, too! It will help tighten sagging skin on face and throat, relax tired face muscles and stimulate a fresher, cleaner, more youthful complexion. Try a medicated Mint Julep Masque Treatment YOURSELF. You'll be delighted with the skin-tightening experience and more alive feeling that comes with every treatment.

Queen Helene Mint Masque is only $3.00 for the six ounce jar, enough for over 3 months of daily home treatments. Buy it today! Start using it immediately! Prove it to yourself at our risk, for one full month. If, at any time during the month, you are not completely satisfied, simply return the unused portion and you will get back every penny of your purchase price.

The Taste Of Things To Come

North Carolina had a taste of things to come last week-end as it witnessed probably its worst traffic jam in history on Interstate 85 north of Durham.

Admittedly it was a combination of unusual circumstances which caused traffic to back up some 20 miles on the major highway. There was a series of wrecks coupled with the heavy holiday traffic as motorists headed for home during the waning hours of the Thanksgiving holiday week-end.

Although such traffic tie-ups are rare on the state's major highways, it is evident to most people that the state's highway construction program is

Shoplifting Is Big Problem

By BRYAN HAISLIP
RALEIGH — Cash registers jingling a merry Christmas shopping season for Tar Heel merchants will miss millions of dollars worth of merchandise.

Shoplifting, a year-round problem, is a December plague. Lavish advertising and loaded counters heighten temptation, crowded stores and bulky winter clothing increase opportunity, and sticky-fingered pilferers walk out with goods from toys to kitchen appliances.

Ten million is a conservative estimate of the shoplifting loss the state's retailers will suffer this month, said Thompson Greenwood, executive vice president of the North Carolina Merchants Association.

The rule-of-thumb for the toll from shoplifting is 1 per cent of sales, Greenwood explained. On that basis, North Carolina's 85,000 merchants with an annual volume of $11 billion are hit for $110 million per year. At least 10 per cent of the total comes in the busy final month of the year.

"Those are minimum figures, and probably only scratch the surface," Greenwood emphasized. "No one knows the real extent of the shoplifting traffic."

Consumer Is Loser
While the merchant feels it first, the loss really falls on the state and community in uncollected sales tax and finally on the consumer who pays the price.

And the shoplifter, particularly the young person for whom apprehension can mean a record marked "thief" for life.

Shoplifting antedates the general store, but in recent years it has soared to the proportions of a national scandal, Greenwood said.

Modern merchandising methods are a factor. The self-service trend took products off the shelf and put them within easy reach of the customers with fewer clerks to keep surveillance. The boom of discount and variety stores demands a high inventory and makes it difficult to keep track of losses.

The permissive society aggravates the problem, Greenwood added. Few shoplifters are driven by basic economic need. Most respond to a dare of the quest for a thrill without thought for the consequences. Some simply recognize no bounds of property rights for others. Then there is the cadre of professionals. They operate with a high degree of skill, devising ingenious means to pursue a profitable trade.

Drug Scene Reflection
The drug scene casts a reflection. "Among the professionals, there has been a tremendous increase as a result of the drug problem," Greenwood said.

"An addict who needs $100 a day to feed a habit has to steal about $500 worth of merchandise because he gets so little for it selling to a 'fence.' They go out in the morning and stay at it all day, just like you and I go to work," he explained.

Combating shoplifting erosion has mobilized the retail industry. National consulting firms have emerged as specialists in the field, advising merchants on systems to cut losses.

Here in North Carolina, merchants succeeded in getting a tough new shoplifting law through the '71 General Assembly.

Its key provision removes civil liability for the merchant or his agent who detains a person suspected of shoplifting. Previously, the possibility of being sued for malicious prosecution or false arrest inhibited stores from cracking down.

Fears Not Realized
Debate over the bill raised cries of a threat to personal liberty. Such fears have not been realized, Greenwood contended.

"The word is 'reasonable,'" he noted. "The detention must be in a reasonable manner and for a reasonable length of time, and only when there is reasonable ground to believe the person committed the offense of shoplifting."

Since September, the merchants association has held 32 seminars across the state to acquaint its members with the law and to offer guidance in following its provisions.

As a further step to reduce shoplifting, Greenwood said, the association next year will add a full time member of the staff to work with members in the security area.

Merchants timid about tackling shoplifting actually contribute to the problem. "We encourage merchants to make arrests when they are aware of violations," Greenwood said. "Shoplifters know where the 'soft touches' are, and flock to them."

More important, he added, strict enforcement can deter those who might otherwise succumb to temptation. "Education for prevention is our best cure for the disease of shoplifting."

not keeping pace with growing traffic. It is true in areas of the state where there is less population just as it is in the areas around the major cities in North Carolina.

Superhighways that have been constructed in various sections of the state normally do a good job of handling the traffic flow. But there are times that congestion slows traffic along many sections of these highways, even without the kind of situation which developed Sunday near Durham.

In its highway construction program, as with other phases of state operations, North Carolina has reached the point in its growth where it must run at an increasing pace just to stay even. With the time involved in planning and constructing major highways it is necessary to think in terms of needs a decade from now rather than in terms of needs a year or two from now.

In far too many states, the kind of traffic jam that occurred on highway 85 Sunday has become a common-place, almost daily occurrence. North Carolina must see to it that it continues to plan and build with adequate foresight to assure that such traffic jams are the exception rather than the rule on both its major and minor highways.

Public Money Shouldn't Go To The Politician

Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., sees pressure in President Nixon's threat to veto a pending tax bill. The House passed a version which was reportedly acceptable to the president, but the Senate added a number of measures which are unacceptable. The two bills must now go to committee to iron out the differences.

One of the things which is unacceptable is the amendment which would allow individuals to earmark $1 of their income taxes to finance presidential campaigns.

The president should do all he can to see that this money grab is left out of the bill. Politicians should not be allowed to get their hands on public money to finance their campaigns. This provision should never be allowed on the tax reform bill.

Morgan Happy With Decision

By JOHN KILGO
RALEIGH — Exactly two weeks after Attorney General Robert Morgan decided not to run for Governor, he says: "After getting back in this office, I feel better than ever that I made the right decision."

Morgan's decision not to run for Governor was made at 1 p.m. two weeks ago. I asked him when he decided for certain that he wouldn't be a gubernatorial candidate. "At 10 o'clock on the morning that I made the announcement," he said. "I called about 10 of these lawyers in who had been helping and advising me. I told them now was the time to make the definite decision. We talked for a couple of hours, debated things back and forth and decided that I would take myself out of the race for Governor."

Morgan's reason not to run was because of the pressing duties in his office of attorney general.

"We had done a lot since we took this office," Morgan told me, "but there was plenty left to do. Things were moving so fast in the Governor's race that I would have had to devote full-time to that campaign, which means I would have to resign this office. I couldn't see my way clear to do that. I like and believe in what I'm doing in this office and we're not finished with the programs that we've started."

Morgan says no one knows how difficult the decision was to make. He says he believes in his heart he could have won the Governor's race.

"It was not a question of getting cold feet," he said. "Many of my friends were extremely disappointed that I didn't run for Governor."

Was Morgan hurt politically by getting out of the race?

"At first I thought I would be," he said, "but I don't believe so now. I've received mail from all over the state from people who say they're sorry I didn't run for Governor but say they can understand why I didn't. I acted in good faith and I believe the people understand that and accept it."

Morgan was feeling the pressure from other areas, too. Hector McGeachy had already announced for attorney general and had some billboards up. Elton Edwards had announced for the office, even though Morgan was insisting that he had not completely made up his mind to run for Governor.

And to cap things off, House Speaker Phil Godwin was planning to announce for attorney general. Morgan was pressured by time and while he had thought for weeks that he would be a candidate for Governor, it didn't work out that way.

He made the No-Go announcement to clear the air.

"I had a lot of things to consider," Morgan said. "I told people all along that I had to consider these things but they didn't really believe me. It was a tough decision to make. But I'm satisfied I was right."

Morgan left the door slightly ajar to a U.S. Senate race. But the smart money is that he will seek reelection to the office of attorney general next year.

Strength For Today

DELAY
"Never put off until tomorrow the thing that needs to be done today."

This is an old adage but a helpful one. What if you get violently ill before tomorrow? Suppose that the people who could help you fade out of the picture and you are left to handle a difficult situation alone? Some people are superstitious about making their wills. They think it will hasten death — which of course it will not. The letter that should have been written to a friend or to someone within the circle of your own family — do it now. The interest payment and the note from the bank — you know what that means. "Oh, I've had enough education. Two years in high school is plenty. I'm going to get a job and make a lot of money."

Except for those who have inherited wealth, practically every successful person has worked hard to get what he actually owns today. That scholarship which makes the difference between a college degree or no college degree — don't delay in your efforts to get such a scholarship. If the brakes on your car are slipping, you know what to do. If you think you can get along without taking a vacation, you are getting ready to be sent to a hospital bed. If you turn on the same TV program every evening, just remember that there are other people in the house who are not being entertained.

Delay has caused empires to fall. If may catch up with your little empire and mine if we are not careful.

Other Editors Say Defusing Bugouts

(Rocky Mount Telegram)
In making his recent announcement of a substantially increased U.S. troop withdrawal from Vietnam, President Nixon has again refused to do what the Bugout Brigade in Congress seeks: precipitate withdrawal from Vietnam without regard to the consequences.

Noting that 80 per cent of the men who were in Vietnam when he took office have now come home, Nixon announced that over the next two months 45,000 more Americans will return. As for the announcement of future withdrawals, the President states that these will be determined by three factors:

—The level of enemy activity and particularly the infiltration route because if these levels substantially increase, it would be very dangerous to our sharply decreased forces in South Vietnam.

—The progress of Vietnamization, the U.S. program of training the South Vietnamese to handle the combat duty themselves.

—Any progress that may have been made with regard to the two major U.S. objectives: obtaining the release of all POWs wherever they are in South Asia.

These three criteria, the President declared, "will determine the next announcement, both its duration and its rate."

As for the American combat role in Vietnam, it "is already concluded," the President said. "American troops are now in a defensive position."

To the critics of U.S. bombing policy in Vietnam, the President replied: "As we reduce the number of our forces, it is particularly important for us to continue our air strikes on the infiltration routes. If we see any substantial step-up in infiltration in the passes, for example, which lead from North Vietnam into Laos, and, of course, the Laotian trail which comes down through Cambodia into South Vietnam — if we see that, we will have to not only continue our air strikes; we will have to step them up."

That is why the President has been categorical about that situation, because as the level of our forces drops, the danger to them increases. Nixon insists he is not going to allow the enemy to pounce upon our remaining troops through our failure to use air power against increased infiltration if it occurs. That makes sense.

Save The Smaller Breweries

By ELMER ROESSNER.
The Federal Trade Commission is concerned over the concentration of breweries in the United States and may take some action to save some of the smaller breweries before competition results in the existence of only two brands of beer in the entire United States, perhaps with one brand put up in aluminum cans and green bottles, the other in steel cans and brown bottles.

COMMENT: I have long mourned the day when almost every valley in the United States had its own brewery with its own distinctive flavor of beer. In those pre-free-way and pre-turnpike days, travel around the country was always an exciting adventure. Even if you were slapping the reins of a reluctant horse, the next bend on the road could bring in sight a small brewery, making a distinctive beer from spring water by an old family recipe. There was usually a biergarten attached and a large stein of beer for a nickel. And if you engaged the proprietor in conversation, he would invite you in to see the brewery and let you draw as much as you wanted through the spigots on the huge barrels.

And you never had to worry about having too much. The horse knew the way home.

Poor Hit Hardest By Tariff
The hidden costs of tariffs weigh slightly more on the poor than on the well-to-do, according to Norman S. Fielege, economist for the Boston Federal Reserve Bank. A family with an income of $4,919 might be paying $105 in passed-along 1967 tariff charges he calculated. He did not project his theory to the cost of the poor of the current 10 per cent emergency surcharge, but the inference is obvious.

COMMENT: It would seem that the low-income families should be alerted not to buy imported goods. If they concentrated on American goods they would be avoiding the tariff penalty and, more important, help to strengthen demand for American products which will in turn increase employment here and possibly improve their earning power.

Variable-Rate Mortgage Up Again
There's renewed talk about home mortgages with variable rates of interest. When the Federal Reserve rediscount rate or some other widely accepted rate declined, the interest on such mortgages would decline proportionately; when the key rate rose, the mortgage interest rate would rise.

COMMENT: This sounds like an attractive idea right now, when interest rates are declining. But in actual practice, it's a trap for lenders and a trap for mortgaged families.

Under ordinary mortgages

One of the trials of being a columnist is the habit some readers have of bombarding him with unexpected weird gifts. Some of them are rather hard to dispose of.

The adenoid came in a test tube full of alcohol. You'd be amazed how few people want to buy a second-hand adenoid. I did, however, have a few bids for the alcohol.

I gave the cobra-skin necktie to a teen-ager. The two birds died. The deed to a square inch of Texas I put away in a safe deposit box. There's always the chance that some innocent promoter may come along and build a big city over my inch of soil.

But my point is that it isn't the presents you get at Christmas that make you happy—it's the ones you don't get.

It was announced today from Kinston that the Ram Neuse, "suicide ship" of the Confederacy, will remain in its watery grave in the channel at the edge of the Kinston business district. City officials have no money to clear the bulk which has been made visible by low water in the river. The Neuse, named for the river which now holds it fast in mud and sand, was built in the early years of the Civil War. When it was launched, a big iron-clad designed to play havoc with wooden craft of the Union forces, there was not enough water to float it to tidewater and freshets were waited for, but Federal forces came before the freshets and the craft, useless in the narrow river, was sunk to prevent the enemy from capturing it.

today, if the general interest rate falls, the mortgagor can usually refinance the mortgage, paying a small penalty. If the rate goes up, he still pays the original rate, which becomes a bargain. But under a variable mortgage, he would pay less if the rate went down, more if it rose, and never could he be sure that his payments were stabilized.

What Will TV-Phone Do To Us

The National Science Foundation has granted $30,500 to two Cornell researchers to determine the benefits and problems from the wide-spread use of the coming video-telephone.

COMMENT: Perhaps a useful idea. It might stimulate the sale of both pleasant and horror masks and wigs. What woman would answer a video-phone before 8 a.m.? But if the idea is really useful, why isn't A.T.&T., I.T.T. and other electronic companies putting up the money instead of Uncle Sam, the patsy?

Geographers Attend Meet

Three members of the East Carolina University Department of Geography were at the annual meeting of the National Council for Geographic Education in Atlanta last week.

Representing ECU were Dr. Robert E. Cramer, department chairman, and professors Dr. Richard Stephenson and Dr. Charles F. Gritzner.

Dr. Cramer, who is state coordinator for the National Council, served as North Carolina's official representative. He also met with officials of Gamma Theta Upsilon, international geographical society, of which he is first vice president and president elect.

Dr. Stephenson conducted a geographic field trip into northwestern Georgia, and Dr. Gritzner attended the meeting as member of the National Council's executive board.

Twenty-three more demonstrators were arrested by Greenville police in the third day of protests here led by Southern Christian Leadership Conference field secretary Golden Frinks.

Twenty persons were taken into custody about 12:45 p.m. yesterday on West Fifth Street on charges of parading without a permit. Police officials said the marchers, headed by Frinks, walked only a short distance from St. Gabriel's Catholic Church where they met prior to the march, before being stopped and placed under arrest.

Many of the protestors, who again were beginning a planned march to Raleigh, according to Frinks, sat down on the sidewalk when confronted by officers, and had to be carried to a bus waiting to transport them to jail.

Yesterday was the third day this week that protestors have been stopped as they began a scheduled march to Raleigh to protest the shooting of a black man near Ayden and "police brutality."

Frinks, according to Police Chief Glenn Cannon, promised

Tuesday to walk out of town without displaying posters or in other ways violating the city's parade ordinance. But, the chief explained, the protestors did not live up to their agreement and 33 were jailed.

Of the 20 paraders arrested yesterday, three gave Greenville addresses; eight listed Washington, N.C. homes; four, Bethel; two Farmville, two Ayden and one, Frinks, from Edenton.

Of the 115 paraders charged over the past three days, only 14 have listed Greenville as their home.

Shortly after yesterday's marchers were taken into custody, three blacks were arrested at the intersection of Fourth and Evans Streets on charges of impeding traffic. Police reported the three were bouncing a basketball in the intersection.

Twelve persons were arrested Tuesday on similar charges following two incidents at Five Points involving ball-bouncing and rope-jumping sessions.

One of yesterday's marchers, Dorothy Atkinson, 17 of Bethel, was charged with contributing to the delinquency of another parader, 16-year-old Audrey Highsmith, also of Bethel.

Miss Highsmith's mother signed a warrant against Miss Atkinson, charging that she encouraged Miss Highsmith to participate in the parade, thus contributing to her delinquency.

It will be a long time, one is told, before the colonels bring back a parliament. The Greeks miss it. This is not to say that they want to return to status quo ante. The parliament of five years ago was mostly sham and the country was in chaos. But the democratic tradition runs deep, and the forms of democracy are still much cherished. What is desired is a revival of the parliamentary form — with substance. The colonels are now unwilling to risk. They are providing clean streets, new industries, and a stable currency instead. It is not quite the same.

The colonels have had a bad press from American intellectuals and from liberals generally. This is to be expected. Intellectuals tend to hate colonels as cats hate dogs. The animosity is instinctive, not reasoned. Evidence abounds here in Greece that the colonels deserve something better.

The country's industrial development, for one thing, is eye-popping. Greece's gross national product is soaring at a solid 7 to 9 per cent a year. Everywhere one looks, in Salonika and Athens, construction is booming. A visitor is proudly escorted to new shipyards, steel mills, refineries and rubber plants. Inflation is being held to 2.5 per cent. There is virtually no unemployment. The government is collecting taxes with such efficiency that its budget shows an annual surplus. Per capita income is rising. Illiteracy is falling. Tourists are flocking. This government if Getting Things Done — but it is like the little boy who learned more about penicillin than he really wanted to know. The volatile Greeks seem to feel a little caged by the bankers' bar charts. There is not much poetry in statistics.

Deputy Prime Minister Stylianos Pattakos, answering a correspondent's question, insists that the government enjoys the support of 95 per cent of the people. This is most probably nonsense, though the massive oversubscription of an October bond issue provides evidence of a remarkable public confidence. To say that "popular support for the military government is insignificant," as an aide to Congressman Benjamin S. Rosenthal last month reported, is the kind of nonsense that used to be called blithering. The colonels have lots of respectful approval; what they lack is charisma.

In terms of population, Greece is about the size of New York City. To draw some comparisons, Greece has no problems with drugs or crime; its sidewalks are free of hippies and litter; the peak-hour traffic is not yet intolerable, and the sky above the Acropolis is as clear as the blue Aegean. New York, by contrast, has the right to elect Mr. Rosenthal. A meditative American visitor, sitting at a sidewalk cafe and watching the girls go by, may be forgiven the heretical thought that maybe Greece would like to arrange for a swap.

For Sandra Marie McCarter, 20 of Ayden, and her mother, Cornelia McCarter of Route 6, Greenville, it was a bad day yesterday.

The Greenville Rescue Squad was called to Empire Brushes on N.C. 11 North of Greenville at 2:20 a.m. to take Miss McCarter to the hospital. She had reportedly passed out while at work.

At 3:45 a.m., the rescue unit was called a second time to take Miss McCarter and her mother to the hospital.

After being treated following her first trip to the hospital, Miss McCarter was being driven to her mother's home when their car collided with a mule on N.C. 11 a half-mile North of the Empire Brushes plant.

Both women reportedly received minor injuries in the mishap that killed the mule.

Fall Concert Broadcasts Set

The fall concert of the East Carolina University Symphony Orchestra will be broadcast by several FM radio stations during the month of December.

James L. Rees, director of Radio Services at ECU, said symphonic tapes are being mailed to radio program directors, some of whom have already scheduled a broadcast of the concert.

WNCT-FM, Greenville, will air the concert Dec. 3 at 9:05 p.m.

WPTF-FM, Raleigh, has scheduled it for Dec. 5 at 2:07 p.m.

WGH-FM, Norfolk-Newport News, Va., has scheduled it Dec. 14 at 8:05 p.m.

Radio stations in Washington, Greensboro and Charlotte will announce their scheduling later, Rees said.

"SOMETHING for EVERYONE...SAVINGS for ALL!"

An Institution Known As Count Basie Is Coming

COUNT BASIE

It's not known for sure how William Basie came to be known as "Count." He has said a Kansas City radio announcer gave him the nickname in 1936, but a recording he made with Bennie Moten's band indicates he may have been called "Count" a few years earlier.

Anyway the renowned band leader has long since shucked his given name and has delighted audiences for many years. Saturday night he will perform at the Music Factory in Greenville.

Born in Red Bank, N.J. in 1904, he started pounding the piano at an early age. His mother taught him the scales in self-defense, he said. His first jobs were as accompanist to blues singers and he got into the big money (about $40 a week) replacing his friend and idol, Fats Waller, in a vaudeville-type act called "Katie Crippen and Her Kids."

He played with the Bill Moten and Walter Page and His Blue Devils, before he formed his own nine-man group of Blue Devil and Moten alumni after Moten died. The group played first at "The Reno Club" in Kansas City, "a place that had nickel hot dogs and hamburgers, nickel beer, and whiskey for 15 cents."

His band is now a "high-powered professional sound" which tours Europe frequently, is a fixture at jazz festivals, and plays often at Carnegie and Philharmonic Halls. It was among those chosen to play at Pres. John F. Kennedy's inaugural ball and has given command performances for the British royal family.

Basie uses a relaxed approach with his music and his men, for he is a warm, gentle man. He walks ploddingly and speaks in the deep, strained voice of a man awakened by the telephone at 4 a.m. On the bandstand, he exchanges smiles with the audience or sits immobile at the piano, jaw slack, but leading the band all the time. He has a home in St. Albans, Long Island, but is on the road eight months a year. His absent-mindedness is legendary. Says his road manager: "One thing you can be sure of on a road tour with Basie. He won't know where he's going, who he's playing for or how to get there."

"He has never had a message to push or an ax to grind, only a desire to communicate on a universal level," says Leonard Feather, who wrote his biography in The Swing Era, 1938-1939, the book which provided the information for this article.

Lena Horne has said of him, "Count Basie isn't just a man, or even a band. He's a way of life."

"Many young people today don't know what it's like to be comfortable when they go visiting, they're so used to roughing it," says Tom Kane, general manager of the hotel.

Hotel Offering Student Rates

NEW YORK (UPI)—At least one hotel is getting into the airline act of offering lower rates to youth. The Roosevelt here is introducing special student rates in the hope of winning the youngsters as regular customers in later years.

In the last five years there has been a 100 per cent increase in lock sales, says the Associated Locksmiths of America.

Underwriting Losses Did See Remedy

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Some property and liability insurers are reporting solid profits in recent months and so the prospects are growing that rates may soon be coming down.

While this is good news for homeowners, businessmen, drivers and others, it is almost too much to believe for some of the insurers, who year after year lost money even though they raised rates.

For the decade ending Dec. 31, 1969, for example, the underwriting losses for 148 capital stock liability companies were

Would Shake Up Women's Image

EGGS-ACTY!
NEW YORK (UPI)—The humble egg-crate, designed to protect its thin-shelled cargo from farm to supermarket to kitchen, can also become a work of art. On view in the Hallmark Gallery exhibit, "Garbage: The Need to Recycle," is a decorative white pillar made entirely of used egg-containers. Because of their shape, egg boxes also can be used as sound-proofing materials on ceilings and walls.

NEW YORK (AP) — New York state and Connecticut Methodists, at a recent conference, urged their church's Board of Education to radically revise their portrayals of men and women in church teaching materials.

The materials should portray girls as participants "in muscular activities, scientific endeavors and leadership roles," and as being "capable, brave and self-reliant," the delegates urged.

time.

But is there more to this story? Could it be that the insurers—themselves rather than events beyond their control could have had something to do with their huge losses, which occurred during widespread prosperity?

Seldom did the insurers even permit this possibility to be discussed. The fault was not theirs, they proclaimed, but society's; the resolution of the problem must come from within rather than from without.

One wonders about the credibility of that argument after reviewing the procedures through which one giant, Continental Casualty, worked its way from a $34-million loss in 1965 to the break-even point last year.

The remedy was sought within the company.

More emphasis was placed on commercial business rather than on expenses. "We had to clamp down hard on expenses, painfully hard," an executive said.

Regional and branch offices were given more authority and responsibility.

Management personnel were upgraded through an evaluation system, a series of schools and seminars, transfers and promotions.

An emphasis was placed on consumerism. "How well are you providing the customer with a series that he really can't do without?" agents were asked. And the business of trade associations and their big premiums were solicited.

The final point is especially worth noting. Here it is, in the company's own language:

"A heavy accent on profit. Branches became 'profit centers' and were repeatedly told that income had to surpass outgo or the stockholders and the board of directors won't stay with us."

Rate increases and adjustments also were made, but admittedly only as a "close-the-gap" measure after it was already clear the strategy was working.

There are many features of this program worth reviewing, but who can escape the overall significance—that the return to the break-even point was achieved mainly from within rather than from without, and by traditional, logical methods?

After years of disclaiming responsibility, of blaming factors beyond their control, could it be that insurers really have much of the solution to profitability right in their own offices?

Is there a lesson for other industries and businesses who today claim they are facing special problems that demand they be given special consideration, such as federal assistance?

Distinct Pattern Seen Among 1971 Winners In N.C. Artist Exhibition

GREENVILLE WINNER . . . ECU faculty member of the School of Art Melvin Stanforth was one of four top purchase award winners in the 34th annual N.C. Artists' Exhibition. His mixed media work is entitled "Annzedenbok." (Photo NCMA)

One factor is very clear in this year's prize-winners in the annual North Carolina Artists' Exhibition, the 34th such affair that marks the show of the year for North Carolina. Each winner is a painting or mixed media work with a definite repetition of pattern.

Vernon Pratt of Durham, was declared top first award prize winner for $1,000. Pratt's painting consists of a repeated pattern resembling a section of chicken wire that has been filled in with a coating of plaster.

Announcement of this award, three $500 purchase awards and other purchase awards was made Wednesday night at the annual dinner meeting of the N.C. State Art Society and the N.C. Museum of Art, part of the state's week long Culture Week.

Greenville's Melvin Stanforth, a faculty member at East Carolina University, was one of the four purchase award winners in the $500 category. The that marks the show of the year for North Carolina. Each winner is a painting or mixed media work with a definite repetition of pattern.

Stanforth's mixed media creation ranges from sheets with a minimum of added details to ones covered with dots and circles of many colors. "Annzedenbok" was on view earlier at the Greenville Art Center during the ECU faculty exhibition.

Other prizewinners were: Harland H. Pell of High Point for a metal sculpture, "Two Hundred and Fifty-Five," a work comprising 255 identical square metal hinges mounted on board in vertical rows; and "White Bridge," a gouache by the late Howard Thomas of Carrboro.

The North Carolina National Bank purchase award of $800 went to Maud F. Gatewood for a painting, "Fall Rain" in which finely drawn thin light lines contrast with curved dark lines. Thomas Hammond of Athens, Ga. received the $150 purchase award for "Levitatio Plus;" and Marlene Manning of Chapel Hill won the Raleigh Women's

Opposes Church Political Role

WASHINGTON (AP) — Preaching social reform or getting involved in political issues is not the church's job, and is weakening many denominations, says Kenneth H. Wood, editor of the Seventh-day Adventist periodical, Review and Herald.

He says denominations which have diverted their emphasis from spiritual mission to social concern have been hit by "internal division, shrinking memberships and hostility from civil governments."

The Wildlife Management Institute will sponsor a North American wildlife and natural resources conference in Mexico City next March 12-15.

A total of 152 works of art were chosen from 852 entries received for the exhibition competition. Judges were Adelyn Breeskin, curator of contemporary art, National Collection of Fine Arts, Washington, D.C.; Dean Swanson, chief curator, Walker Art Center, Minneapolis; and Will Barnett, a painter and teacher of New York.

The 34th annual exhibition will be on view at the North Carolina Museum of Art in Raleigh through January 23.

More Bark Than Bite For Average American If Dollar Is Devalued

By JACK LEFLER
AP Business Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Devaluation of the dollar would have a bigger bark than bite as far as the average American is concerned.

The question of devaluing the dollar—reducing its value in relation to other currencies—was a vital subject this week at a meeting in Rome of top finance officials of the 10 richest non-Communist nations.

The meeting of the Group of Ten ended Wednesday with reported progress but no agreement on means of solving the international monetary crisis. Another meeting was set for Dec. 17-18 in Washington.

The United States has been resisting demands of other countries for devaluation of the dollar. Those countries want an unstated increase in the American price of gold—$35 an ounce—to decrease the value of the dollar.

The free market price of gold is $43 an ounce. Even if the United States raised its dollar price to that amount, more than European nations are believed to be asking, the only direct effect in this country would be a possible reopening of previously unprofitable gold mines.

Devaluation in terms of gold, however, could ease the way for an upward revaluation of foreign currencies. And even if dollar devaluation in terms of foreign currencies were to come out of the Group of Ten negotiations, economists say it wouldn't hit the pocketbooks of individuals in this country to any appreciable extent.

"So far as the individual is concerned, this whole question so hotly debated in Rome couldn't matter less," said an economist for a major New York bank.

This would be the case, however, only if the individual confined his purchases to American goods and spent his vacations in the United States.

"In the long run," the bank economist said, "devaluation would produce more jobs in the United States and make U.S. goods more competitive abroad, especially with the goods produced by West Germany and Japan."

This would result because U.S. goods exported to other countries would be priced lower, therefore would be easier to sell. Foreign goods brought into this country would likely cost more, cramping their sales.

The economist said devaluation would particularly improve the competitive position of small U.S. cars and some electronics products, such as radio and television sets.

Pilot Is Rescued Inside Cambodia

By GEORGE ESPER
Associated Press Writer
SAIGON (AP) — Nearly 200 miles away from his home base, Capt. Alvin W. Moore II ran from tree to tree, from rice field to rice field, deep inside Cambodia. North Vietnamese bullets whizzed over his head for more than two hours.

His face, right arm and right leg were burned from a flash fire in the cockpit of his light bomber when it was shot down while supporting Cambodian troops 100 miles from the South Vietnamese border.

The 25-year-old pilot from Livingston, Calif., was on a low bombing pass near Kompong Thom. Suddenly his twin-engine jet shook.

"You're on fire!" his wingman radioed. As the flames reached the cockpit, Moore parachuted into the North Vietnamese lines.

The wingman radioed a command plane in the area, and within minutes rescue aircraft were on the way from Bien Hoa, Moore's base in South Vietnam.

Two Jolly Green Giant helicopters swooped down for the pickup, but heavy ground fire forced them back. Their escorting fighter-bombers began pounding the enemy guns.

The Cambodian ground forces knew Moore's approximate location, having been alerted by radio by the American rescue team. Riding armored personnel carriers, they fought their way through the North Vietnamese lines and carried Moore to a secure location.

On a second attempt, a Jolly Green Giant commanded by another Californian, Capt. Stephen Tyler of Los Angeles, picked Moore up and flew him back to Bien Hoa.

The rescue was made Monday, but the Air Force did not disclose details of the operation until today.

"Except for getting hit," said Moore, "everything went my way all day."

Hint Striking N. Viet Airfields

By ROBERT A. DOBKIN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Pentagon officials say American war planes may retaliate against North Vietnamese air bases if Communist MIG fighters attack U.S. planes flying air strikes over the Ho Chi Minh trail in Laos.

The hint came Wednesday from Pentagon spokesman Jerry W. Friedheim who reported the North Vietnamese may be preparing to threaten U.S. B-52 bombers and other aircraft attacking the enemy infiltration routes leading into South Vietnam from Laos.

Friedheim said there have been 10 separate instances over the last two months in which MIG 19 and MIG 21 jet fighters flew briefly into Laos, occasionally firing air-to-air missiles.

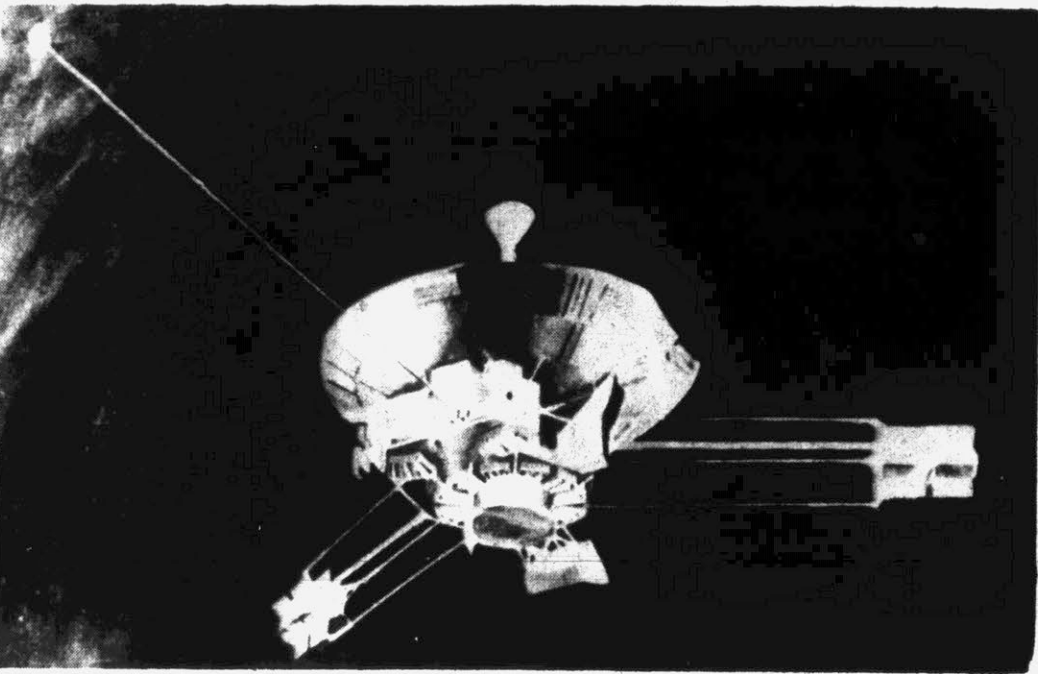

No U.S. planes were hit and there was some doubt as to what the North Vietnamese were up to, Friedheim told newsmen, adding:

"We certainly couldn't be surprised if they have in mind here developing a capability to threaten aircraft" bombing and strafing the Ho Chi Minh trail. Asked if the U.S. would bomb North Vietnamese airfields if American aircraft were attacked, Friedheim replied, "That would be an option open to us."

Later, Daniel Z. Henkin, assistant secretary of defense for public affairs, said Gen. Creighton Abrams, the U.S.

commander in Vietnam, "has the authority to take whatever action he deems necessary to protect American men."

U.S. planes have always enjoyed unchallenged air superiority over Laos in their intensive bombing campaign against the North Vietnamese supply lines.

TO EXPLORE JUPITER — Artist's conception shows Pioneer 10, which will be launched Feb. 27, 1972, to explore for the first time the largest planet in our solar system, Jupiter and its mysterious red spot. After a half-billion-mile trip, which will take about two years, the spacecraft will spend about a week swinging through Jupiter's atmosphere, snapping pictures and collecting scientific data. (AP Wirephoto)

Physician And Associate On Film For AMA

Dr. J. Elliott Dixon and his physician associate Stephen Joyner of Ayden participated in an interview filmed and taped to be shown to a clinical session of the American Medical Association meeting in New Orleans.

Another physician and a nurse practitioner, Mrs. Curtis of Council, Idaho also appeared along with the moderator, Dr. Malcolm C. Todd, chairman of the Department of Health Manpower of the American Medical Association.

The film deals with various aspects of the physician associate's and the nurse practitioner's work, how they have been used in the two practices, and how well they have been accepted in their two communities, both of patients and fellow physicians. It was pointed out that paramedical personnel is necessary to help relieve the shortage of medical services available in this country.

BARTON'S QT
PREMIUM AMERICAN WHISKEY
Over the years, there've been a lot of new whiskeys. But Barton's QT is the first truly new taste in whiskey in 182 years. It's distilled at a higher proof than leading traditional American whiskeys. And the distilling makes it milder and lighter and smoother than any whiskey you've ever tasted. We store Barton's QT in selected, seasoned barrels. (Traditionally, most whiskey has been stored in new barrels.) We even filter Barton's QT in a special way—to make it lighter and smoother. Next year, we expect that many other distillers will also be selling whiskey distilled at a higher proof and stored in seasoned barrels. But they'll still be serving Barton's QT at the best parties.
For an illustrated booklet detailing the whole exciting QT story, just send a card to Barton's QT, P.O. Box 3376, Merchandise Mart, Chicago, Ill. 60654.

Over 400 Items Of Canned Food Were Collected

Arnold Air Society and Angel Flight conducted a canned food drive last Tuesday for the needy families in the Greenville area.

The drive was planned as the community service project for the fall quarter pledge class of the Arnold Air Society.

Carl Knott Jr., president of the pledge class, reported that the drive resulted in the collection of over 400 items of canned goods in two hours.

The Arnold Air members were assisted by the girls of Angel Flight, their complementary sorority. Both Arnold Air Society and Angel Flight are honorary service organizations affiliated with the Air Force ROTC Tet 600 at E. C. U. The food collected was given to the Salvation Army for distribution in the Greenville area.

Carolina Cycle Club Sets Trip To New Bern Sunday Morning

The date is Sunday, December 5. The occasion is the First Century Ride of the Carolina Cycle Club. And the hour is early, 7 o'clock in the morning.

The Carolina Cycle Club, under the leadership of Charles L. Bernier, is currently working on a venture to enlist dedicated cyclists to join in the weekly rides, which will depart no later than 9:15 a.m. on most Sunday mornings.

The earlier hour this Sunday is due to the distance of the ride planned — one to New Bern and return. Bernier gives details of plans as:

—Start at Wright Fountain at 7:00 a.m. In event of rain or snow, the century ride will be postponed until the following Sunday, December 12. Riders are asked to bring spare parts and snacks to be put into the "sag wagon" which will accompany the riders.

—A stop for coffee and doughnuts on 10th Street, then off to Vanceboro. A pause and regrouping in Vanceboro, and then continue to New Bern.

—At New Bern, there will be time for a full meal and some sight seeing at Tryon Palace for lifelong resident of the Beargrass community. He is survived by two brothers, John W. Gurganus and Henry Staton Gurganus, both of the home.

The body will remain at the Wilkerson Funeral Home and will be carried to the Church one hour prior to the time of service.

APPROVES GRID LOAN FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — The state has approved the borrowing of $9 million to help finance a new University of Kentucky football stadium at Lexington, 30 miles from here.

those wishing to visit there. The stop over time will be one hour.

—After the hour stop-over, start back to Greenville, with a stop each ten miles at the "sag wagon" to receive snacks and moral support. Arrival time back in Greenville is scheduled to be at approximately 6:30 p.m., with the "sag wagon" reporting to Lum's Restaurant at 10th and Cotanche where cyclists can unload their belongings from the wagon.

Bernier feels that after this trip, even the hardest will be able to go home and sleep soundly.

Carolina Cycle Club, organized on March 20, 1971, is a non-structured club open to anyone who meets certain qualifications. These are that the person be seriously interested in improving cycling conditions; own a bicycle; registers the bicycle in accordance with local laws; and demonstrates ability to ride a bicycle at least 15 miles in 90 minutes. The latter requirement must be met at least once every six months.

The club is a free one, and will remain without membership fees, although donations for certain expenses are not discouraged. One leader is required, and this person must meet rather stringent requirements and must keep all records for the club.

Weekly tours that will be a feature of the club, Bernier notes, are essentially leaderless. The group will go wherever the majority want to go. Most of the rides will be of less than four hours in duration, and more than one group may be formed whenever some riders might prefer to ride in the local area.

Other rules mentioned by Bernier include that the club does not, and will not exclusively promote the products of any one manufacturer, wholesaler or retailer in return for publicity or money. It will also not become a vehicle to promote the sales of any individual business organizations or the welfare of any non-profit organization.

Later, if participants decide they would like to invest in "Carolina Cycle Club" patches, decals or stationary, Bernier says efforts will be made to secure these.

With widespread interest booming in the use of bicycles, Bernier points out some of the most notable bicycle records achieved. These include records for: Distance covered in one hour — 76 miles, 604 yards established September 30, 1928 by Leon Vanderstuyft in Belgium; distance covered in 24 hours — a total of 860 miles, 367 yards set by Hubert Opperman of Australia in 1932; slowest speed — the feat accomplished by Tsugunobu Mitsuishi who remained completely stationary on a bicycle for five hours and 25 minutes; and the greatest instantaneous speed, that set by Jose Miefret, a Frenchman, who reached the record mark of 127.243 miles per hour under his own power on July 19, 1962.

Cyclists interested in more details concerning the various routes of planned regular rides and other information can contact Charles Bernier, 1800 East Fifth Street, Greenville.

Creswell Stops Jamesville Teams

CRESWELL — Creswell High School swept a pair of games from the Jamesville Bullets last night. They won the boys game, 74-62, while taking the girls contest, 37-21.

In the opener, Creswell shot away to a 16-8 lead, and never lost control after that. In the second quarter, Creswell outthit the Bullets, 8-6 and built up a 24-14 lead at the half.

The Creswell girls continued to pull away in the third period, outscoring Jamesville, 9-3. That made the lead 33-17, and the margin didn't change after that as each team hit four points in the final quarter.

Verlene McDowell led Creswell with 16 points, while Diane Norman had 10. Donna Williams led Jamesville with 12 points.

In the boys contest, Creswell inched out into a 15-12 lead in the first period. In the second frame,

Dooley Is Area Coach

DURHAM, N. C. (AP) — Bill Dooley, whose North Carolina team finished with a 9-2 record and will play in the Gator Bowl, has been chosen coach of the year in District 3 of the American Football Coaches Association.

The district is Maryland, the District of Columbia, Virginia, North Carolina and South Carolina.

Bill Murray, former Duke coach and now the association's executive director, announced Wednesday night that Dooley had been chosen in balloting by 160 coaches in the district.

The runner-up was Lou Holtz of William and Mary, who has been named to take over at North Carolina State.

Dooley is one of eight finalists in the association's balloting for national coach of the year, with the winner to be named in January.

Pitt Tech In Opening Win

ROCKY MOUNT — Pitt Technical Institute opened the 1971-72 basketball season last night with a 95-78 victory over Nash Tech.

The victory gave the Pitt team a leg up in the Eastern Carolina Community College Conference's Northern Division with an early 1-0 record.

The team was handicapped at the start of the game when one carload of its players arrived at the game late, and several of the starters didn't get into the opening action. Still Pitt Tech managed to get away to an 8-2 lead.

Nash Tech put things together, however, and rallied coming back for a 20-10 lead. But by then, the regulars had shown up for Pitt and went back into the action. They caught up and forged an eight-point lead by halftime, 43-34.

In the second half, Nash again pulled back into the game, tying it at 57-all, and then moving into a slight lead. The lead switched back and forth for a few minutes, but then Pitt regained the lead and never lost it after that, moving out by nearly 20 points in the closing minutes.

Eddie Stokes led the Pitt scoring with 29 points, while Wayne Brown added 21. Frank Brown had 18, Henry Beamon had 11 and Leslie Saunders added 10.

But J. Williams of Nash got the evening's top total pushing through 17 field goals and seven free throws for a total of 43. Middleton added 19.

Pitt stays on the road, traveling to meet Roanoke-Chowan in its next game, Monday night.

MORGANTOWN, W. Va. — East Carolina University's Pirates got a fine example of how much difference team experience means last night as the West Virginia Mountaineers rolled to a 103-86 victory over them.

It was the opening game of the season for both teams, and it marked the seventh straight win by the Mountaineers over the Pirates.

The biggest factor in the game was the turnovers recorded by the Bucs, 34, as compared to just 18 by the West Virginia five. However, West Virginia's first seven players are all returned from last year, including all five of their starters, giving them a year of experience together.

The East Carolina starting unit of Al Faber (who sat out much of the game in foul trouble), Dave Franklin, Jim Fairley, Earl Quash and Jerome Owens, had never started together, and most had little

Cougars Get Win

Two points in two games and now half a game separates three teams in the American Basketball Association's well-packed East Division.

That's the results of Wednesday night's only two ABA contests, the Floridians' 107-106 overtime squeaker over Dallas and Carolina's come-from-behind 118-117 nerve jangler against Pittsburgh.

The Floridians appeared en route to an easy victory over the Chaparrals as they grabbed a 51-38 halftime lead. But the Chaps fought back and forced the game into overtime as Rich Jones hit a 15-foot jump shot with 27 seconds remaining in regulation play.

But Mack Calvin sank a pair of free throws with 12 seconds to go in overtime to lift the Floridians to victory—and Dallas missed a chance to pull it out with six to go when center George Johnson failed to sink an eight-footer.

Larry Miller's 34 points and Jim McDaniels' 24 led Carolina's attack—but it was Gene Little's only two field goals of the game that put the Cougars on top to stay as they rallied from a 13-point fourth-quarter deficit.

game experience together. Faber was a starter all last year, but Fairley missed part of the year with a knee injury, and Franklin was only a reserve until then, when he moved into the lineup for Fairley. Both Quash and Owens are junior college transfers, adding newness to the Pirate lineup.

And as the turnovers mounted throughout the game, the Pirate chances of pulling off a victory went with them. Not that the Bucs were not able to move against the Mountaineers. They went into the second half of play down by 19, and that quickly raised to 22. But they quickly cut that back to 11 before turnovers again began to plague them.

Probably one of the high spots for the Bucs, however, was the fact that in a game played at the pace this one was, the Bucs committed fouls. They were called for 11 in the first half, while the Mountaineers were charged with 10. But in the second half, the Bucs went nearly 15 minutes before getting their first called against them, with 5:04 remaining.

In contrast, two members of the starting unit for the Mountaineers fouled out, All-American Wil Robinson, and Dave Werthman.

But it was the hot-shot scoring of guard Levi Phillips that made the real difference in the points. Phillips, hitting mostly from the outside, canned 29 points on 14 field goals and a free throw.

The Pirates, while not exactly dominating the boards, did out rebound West Virginia, 59-56. Fairley led the Pirates, pulling down 19.

West Virginia ran off six straight points before the Bucs could get on the board with Werthman, 7-0 center Mike Heitz and Phillips hitting.

Quash put the Bucs on the board with a three-point play, and after Heitz hit again, baskets by Fairley and Franklin cut the lead to one at 8-7. Phillips hit to raise it to 10-7, but a free throw by Franklin and a basket by Fairley with 15 minutes left tied it at 10-10. That was as close as the Bucs got to taking the lead.

West Virginia called time out, and came back on the court to rip off four straight baskets, with Phillips getting the first, and Robinson the next three. After swapping shots, Werthman hit to raise the lead to 10 at 22-12. Then, with 11:42 left, Heitz hit a jumper upping the lead to 11, at 26-15.

Ray Peszko hit two free throws and Fairley added one to cut it back to eight, and it stayed at eight or ten until a jumper by Owens and another Fairley free throw cut it to seven at 32-25.

But Larry Harris and Werthman each hit free throws, and Phillips added two baskets, rining the lead back to 38-25, a 13-point spread. With 6:08 left, Werthman hit again, making it 42-27, a 15-point spread. It stayed right around there until late in the period, when a three-point play by Curt Price, plus two free throws by him, and baskets by Werthman and Phillips raised the lead to the highest of the first half, 21 points at 59-38. The Bucs cut it to 61-42 at the end of the half.

The Pirates came back strong in the opening minutes of the second half. West Virginia opened with two baskets sandwiching a Pirate free throw to up the lead to 22, 65-43, but for the next five minutes the game belonged to the Bucs. They outscored West Virginia, 13-2, cutting the lead back to just 11 points, 67-56. Quash and Fairley led the way during the rally, hitting two baskets and a free throw each.

But as the first five minutes of the half ended, West Virginia shot away again, getting three quick baskets on turnovers by the Bucs. That shot the lead back to 17, at 77-60, and just a minute later, four straight baskets by the Mountaineers raised the lead to 23, the biggest of the night. Price hit once, while Phillips added another and Sam Oglesby got two, running the lead to 87-64 with 11:01 left.

The Bucs cut it to 15 shortly after that, but couldn't get another rally going the rest of the way, as the Mountaineers pulled back out by 23 at 101-78, but they got only two more points in the closing three minutes of the game as the Pirates closed the gap to 17.

Besides Phillips' 29 points, Werthman added 17, Heitz had 16, Robinson 15, and Oglesby, 10, for West Virginia.

The Pirates were paced by Franklin with 18, Quash with 17, Fairley with 16, and Owens with 15.

East Carolina continues its "Murderer's Row" schedule Saturday night, in its home opener against Jacksonville University.

Perry Disappointed; But He'll Try to Help Cleveland Future

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif. — "I'm disappointed, but baseball is baseball. It won't change me."

So said former-San Francisco Giants pitcher Gaylord Perry in a telephone interview yesterday.

Perry was traded Monday by the Giants to the Cleveland Indians of the American League, and is slated to join them this coming spring. News of the trade came as a shock throughout Eastern North Carolina, and not even his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Evan Perry of Williamston were expecting it.

Gaylord, however, wasn't as surprised as a lot of people might have thought. "I knew they wanted a lefty, but I didn't think they wanted one that bad," Perry said. "But sometimes baseball clubs do things that you don't understand. I have to look to the other side and try and make plans to be helpful to Cleveland."

Perry learned of the trade while attending the Player Representatives meeting in Acapulco, Mexico. "Tom Howard of the Dodgers told me about it. One of the radio men in San Francisco found out about it and tried to get up with me. He couldn't get me and talked to Tom instead. He found me and told me."

Gaylor has already talked with Ken Aspromonte, the new manager of the Indians. "He called me Monday in Mexico and we had a long conversation. He's looking forward to the job, and he's got a lot of aggressive, young kids. I think the Indians are going to do all right."

Perry doesn't know too many of the Indians, however, and will be making a lot of new friends. "I like to look at it positively," he said. "I've been with the same organization for 14 years now, and I think I worked hard and earned my pay. I won a lot of games for the Giants, and of course, it's hard to leave. But I think the worst part is on my wife and children." Perry said he probably would not move out of the San Francisco area, where he had just bought a new home, for at least a couple of years.

The Indians do their spring training in Arizona, so he won't have far to go to join the team come next spring. "I'm counting on being their number one starter," he said. "But I know that I'll have to prove myself first to them."

Ayden-Grifton Ready To Open Fledgling Wrestling Program

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
(Eleventh of a series)

LITTLEFIELD — Ayden-Grifton High School adds a new sport to the usual football-basketball combinations this year when the Chargers field their first wrestling team.

One of the fastest growing high school sports, wrestling has moved into the winter spotlight and is gaining more supporters every day. "A lot of people think they are going to see the same type thing they see on television," A-G Coach Neal Hughes said. "But they get quite a surprise when they see their first match"

Television wrestling and "real" wrestling bear almost no resemblance. Most of the stuff seen on the tube is not a part of the true sport at all.

But for Ayden-Grifton this coming season will be really one of preparation, since it is the first time for the sport at the school. "We'll be like any other school just starting. It's a totally new program for us, and we haven't had a lot of time to work yet. But the interest is good, and we expect to have three or four wrestlers who can compete with about anyone," Hughes said.

"Of course, we cannot expect to win more than we lose. I'm sure we'll get beaten by about everyone we face, but we should be able to score against about anyone," he added.

Hughes noted that he has been having trouble in filling some of the lighter weight classes, but that he has good strength in the middle weight classes.

"We have 21 or 22 out for the 13 weight classes, but none of them have any experience. Another thing that has hurt us is a state rule on the length of hair a boy can have and compete in the sport. Too many don't want to conform to it, and this hurts us."

Hughes went through the classes and listed the prospects he has.

In the 98-pound class, lightest of the group, he has only one wrestler out, Andy Sasser. "He's got a long way to go, but he's just a freshman," Hughes said.

In the 105 and 112-pound classes, Hughes really has a problem, with no one on the team meeting these weights. "We may have to forfeit those," he said.

At 119, Hugh has Earl Harris. "He's going to be good," the coach said. "He's just a freshman, but he's quick and agile and will be a good wrestler when he gets some experience."

Don Phillips, a sophomore, is the leading candidate at the 126-pound level. "He works hard and we expect him to improve and be a big help by the end of the year."

At 132, Linwood Bell, a sophomore holds down the class.

"He's another hard worker, and he's very strong. He's also been working up to 145 pounds in practice, and should be very respectable this year."

Mike Rose holds down the 138 class, but he has to lose a little weight before he can officially make this class. "He had an introduction to wrestling while in Tennessee," Hughes said, "and he has a definite interest in the sport. He's going to be a good one."

At 145, Jimmy Wagstaff, a senior, and James Bell, a junior, are vying for the first team slot. "Wagstaff is the leader now, and he gives 100 per cent. Bill still has to get in shape."

Burley Gardner and Ronnie Eason handle the 155-pound load. "Both of them are really a little light for this, but they're quite strong. Really I'd like one of them to move down to the 145 class, so I could use them both," Gardner is a freshman, while Eason is a senior.

Mike Griffin and Terry Harper are the 167-pound candidates. Both are juniors. "Griffin is short and stocky and strong and may get the nod," Hughes said. "Harper has a lot to learn but should come on."

Demitrius Edwards and Chuck Mohle are working at 185. "Dee has the edge right now, and he's probably the best wrestler I have," the coach said. "He weighs 174, but has been working against our 230 pound heavyweight and looks good." Edwards is a junior, while Mohle is a sophomore.

Leroy Sumpter, a senior, is the top man at 195, but he too is going to have to lose some weight to make his class. "Dee may move up it he doesn't make it. Leroy is strong, bull type and when he learns what to do, he'll do well."

Furman, VMI In Only SC Wins

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Defending champion Furman was one of only two winners as six Southern Conference basketball teams took advantage of the season's opening night to make their debuts, and even the Paladins had it rough.

The Paladins, favored to win the league title again, were pushed all the way before subduing Wofford 100-95 Wednesday night behind the 35-point performance of All-Southern Russ Hunt.

Surprisingly, the other victory was turned in by Virginia Military, which has been the conference's last-place team the last three years. The Keydets opened with a 95-78 romp over West Virginia Wesleyan's Bobcats.

Davidson's Wildcats, who won the league title four years in a row before being dethroned last year by Furman, posted an 81-79 exhibition victory over the Australian National team on Eric Minkin's jump shot with four seconds left. Sophomore Hall Wagner led the Wildcats with 20 points.

For the rest of the league, however, it was a rough night.

The Citadel's Bulldogs lost to Campbell 79-77 in overtime. East Carolina's Pirates were drubbed 103-86 by West Virginia. Richmond's Spiders dropped a 54-42 decision to Duke and new member Appalachian State was edged by Mars Hill 75-73.

Tonight's only action sees Richmond trying to rebound at home against Belmont Abbey.

Furman led Wofford by only 52-51 at the half and never was able to pull away from the Terriers, who had won three three straight going into the encounter. Hunt had 16-point help from sophomore Bud Bierly, who also grabbed 15 rebounds. Freddie Pearson led Wofford with 25 points.

A couple of nonstarters, junior Rod Brewer with 22 points and sophomore Bob Frank with 17, led VMI, which also got 14 points from sophomore David Lester. The Keydets pulled away late in the game after leading by only 37-32 at intermission.

Jimmy Sears' 30-foot jump shot with two seconds left in overtime lifted Campbell past The Citadel, which got 27 points from Steve Fishel. Rod Clark tipped in a missed shot at the buzzer to win for Mars Hill at Appalachian, whose Stan Davis had 20 points.

Richmond held Duke to a 23-21 standoff the first half before the Blue Devils scored seven straight points after intermission to pull away. Gary Melchionni had 14 points for Duke, Clarke Wiseman 12 for the Spiders in the low-scoring game.

Levi Phillips scored 29 points as West Virginia moved to a 61-42 halftime lead over East Carolina and never was threatened. Dave Franklin had 18 points, Earl Quash 17, Jim Fairley 16 and Jerome Owens 15 for the Pirates.

Kiernan Honored

NEW YORK (AP) — Ernie Jackson of Duke made the second team football All-America as defensive back.

The honorable mention list on offense included John McMakin of Clemson, tight end; Brian Baima of The Citadel and Jim Mitchell of South Carolina, wide receivers; Ed Newman of Duke, tackle; Bill Bobbora of Wake Forest and Ron Rusnak of North Carolina, guards.

Larry Russell of Wake Forest, quarterback; Larry Hopkins of Wake Forest and Lewis Jolley of North Carolina, running backs.

The honorable mention list on defense included Richard Grissom of North Carolina and John LeHeup of South Carolina, tackles; John Bunting of North Carolina, Monty Kiernan of East Carolina and Ed Stetz of Wake Forest, linebackers; and Steve Bowden of Wake Forest, Dick Harris of South Carolina and Rich Searl of Duke, backs.

KINSTON — Farmville Central High School gained a 35-21 victory over Kinston High School last night in the opening wrestling match of the year for the two teams.

Farmville Cental captured seven of the 13 matches, winning five of them by pins. One match ended in a draw.

Summary:

98: Louis Baker (FC) by forfeit.

105: Ricky Bundy (FC) pinned Greg Manley, 0:53.

112: Charles Hardy (K) pinned Milton Reel, 0:59.

119: James Gorham (FC)

draw with Jeff Taylor.

126: James Nobles (K) decided Charles Rose.

132: Sammy Balock (FC) pinned Fornell Williams, 3:41.

138: Bobby Locust (FC) pinned Jim Rapier, 1:51.

145: Bobby Barrett (FC) pinned Harvey Cox, 2:49.

155: Gary Green (K) decided Carl Turnage.

Southern Cal Handed Upset

By ALEX SACHARE
Associated Press Sports Writer

"I'm not concerned whether we look good or bad," declared Maryland basketball coach Lefty Driesell, "only whether we win or lose."

Driesell's Terps, ranked sixth in The Associated Press pre-season poll, looked something less than good against Brown Wednesday night, but did manage to defeat the Bruins 100-83 in one of the key games on the opening night of the 1971-72 college basketball season.

In the night's major upset, third-ranked Southern Cal, which lost only two games—both to UCLA—last year, fell before unranked Arizona State 95-78 at Tempe, Ariz.

In other games involved the Top Ten, No. 4 Marquette overpowered St. John's, Minn. 89-50. No. 5 Ohio State got by Georgia Tech at Atlanta 63-55. No. 7 Houston defeated Stanford 87-67. Florida, playing at home, upended No. 9 Louisville 70-69 and No. 10 Kentucky turned back Northwestern 94-85.

No. 1 UCLA, No. 2 North Carolina and No. 8 Long Beach State did not play.

"The young players were probably a little bit tight," conceded Driesell, speaking about his sophomore-studded line-up.

One of those youngsters, heralded sophomore Tom McMillen: scored 16 points and grabbed 10 rebounds, but was not overjoyed by his performance.

"I wasn't very nervous, but I became a little frustrated," the 6-foot-11, former Pennsylvania high-school star said. "It seems like I always have a game like that my first game of the year."

Southern Cal, considered a threat to dethrone UCLA as Pacific 8—and NCAA—champions, ran into a sizzling shooting performance by the Sun Devils. Arizona State sank 50 per cent of its field goal attempts, with Rhea Taylor scoring 22 and Bill Kennedy adding 21. Paul Stoval chipped in with 17 points and 13 rebounds.

Southern Cal, meanwhile, could hit on only 33 per cent of its shots.

Marquette proved too much for little St. John's, Minn. Jim Chones, the Warrior's pivotman, scored 24 points, grabbed 17 rebounds and blocked six shots, prompting raves from his coach, Al McGuire.

Luke Witte, Ohio State's 7-footer, poured in 20 points and grabbed 13 rebounds to spark the Buckeyes. Guard Dan Gerhard added 16.

Houston started slowly against Stanford, leading only 39-36 early in the second half, but then came on to pull away from the Indians.

North Carolina State will make things more interesting for nationally ranked North Carolina and Maryland, and other basketball teams in the Atlantic Coast Conference now that Paul Coder and Bob Heuts have returned following the dropping of marijuana possession charges.

They had voluntarily left the squad pending disposition of the case. A judge in Raleigh threw it out of court Wednesday, holding that an automobile had been illegally searched.

Each scored 11 points Wednesday night as N. C. State defeated Atlantic Christian 113-75.

Tommy Burleson, 7-foot-4 sophomore for the winning Wolfpack was high man in the game with 23 points. Cliff Black had 22 for Appalachian.

It was the opening game of the season for the Wolfpack and four other ACC teams.

The era of touted sophomore Tom McMillen opened at Maryland, which is sixth-ranked nationally. The Terrapins won 100-83 over Brown but McMillen scored only 16 points along with 10 rebounds. Junior guard Howard White was high pointmaker for Maryland with 26.

Duke pulled away from a 23-23 tie at the half with seven straight points at the resumption of play and went on to defeat Richmond 54-42.

Gary Melchionni with 14 points for Duke was high man in the low-scoring game. Chris Redding added 13 for the Blue Devils. Clark Wiseman had 12 for the Spiders.

Virginia overpowered Washington and Lee 113-80, aided by a 24-point performance by Scott McCandlish. Barry Parkhill, another veteran, had 18 for the Cavaliers, sophomore Lanny Stahurski 14 and Bob McKeag, another sophomore had 13.

Wake Forest lost to visiting Canisius of Buffalo, N. Y., 94-87. The Deacons were behind most of the way but closed within four points at 75-71 in the middle of the second half. Then the Canisius Griffins scored eight points to none for Wake Forest.

Mike Macaluso had 24 for Canisius. For Wake Forest, Eddie Payne had 19 and Sam Jackson 18.

Carolina Tar Heels, ranked No. 2 nationally behind UCLA, is the only ACC team to play tonight, and will be home to Rice.

An old hand at the Boston Ropewalk, Bernie Cavanaugh, above, holds a 9" rope to be tested. Above right, a high speed ropemaking machine in action.

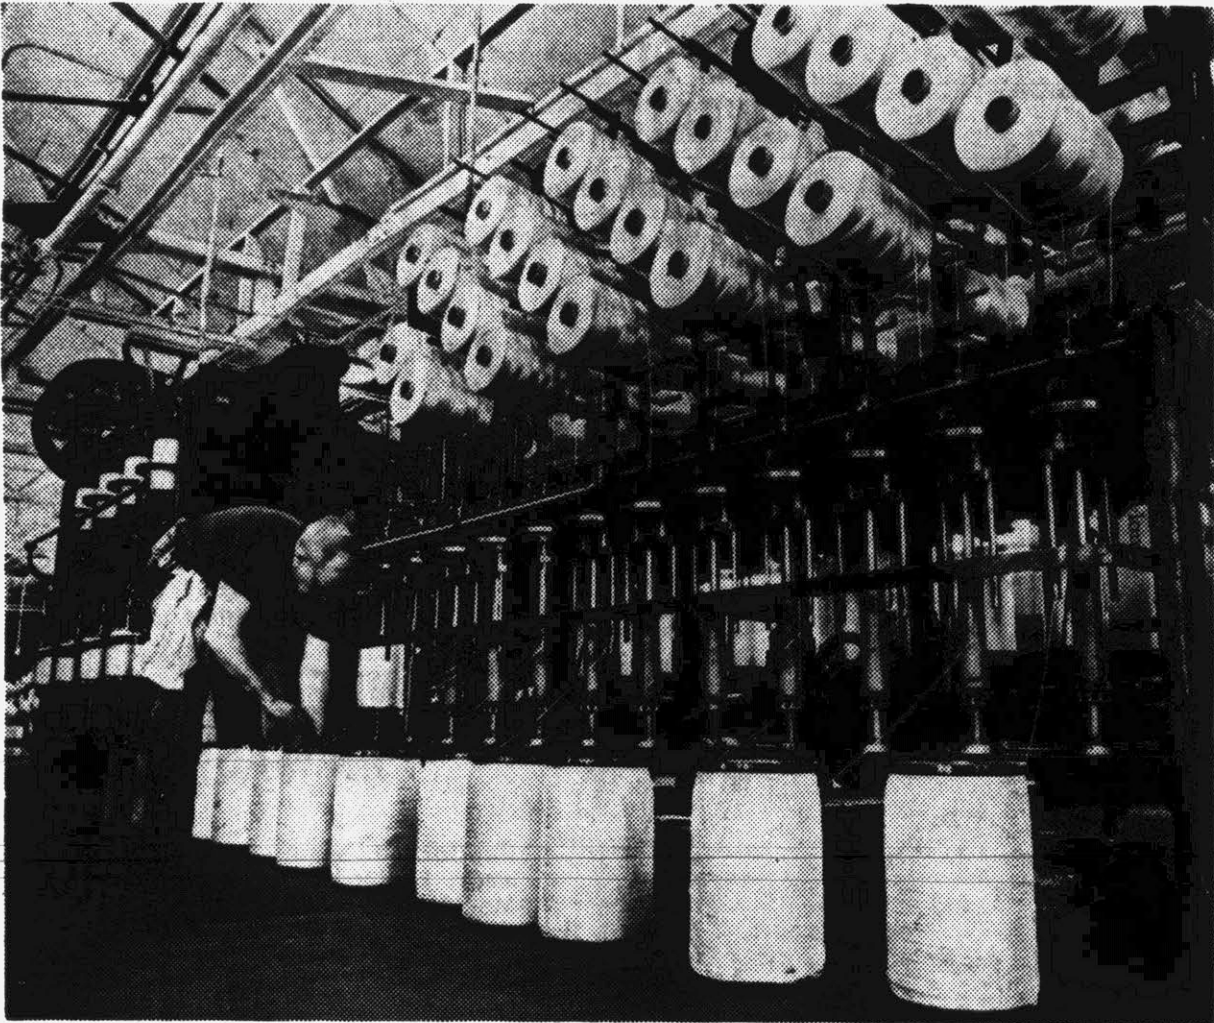

End of the Line

"In that building, long and low . . . human spiders spin and spin." Men and machines busily turning out chains and webs of rope and cordage—the scene has changed somewhat since Longfellow wrote about it in 1854, in his poem, "The Ropewalk," but a look around the historic Ropewalk at the Boston Naval Shipyard still shows why the analogy came to mind. However, although the ropemakers may have been immortalized by the poet, present day economic realities have brought into sight the probable end of the Ropewalk. The Navy has decided to close the famous, 137-year-old institution at the end of the year.

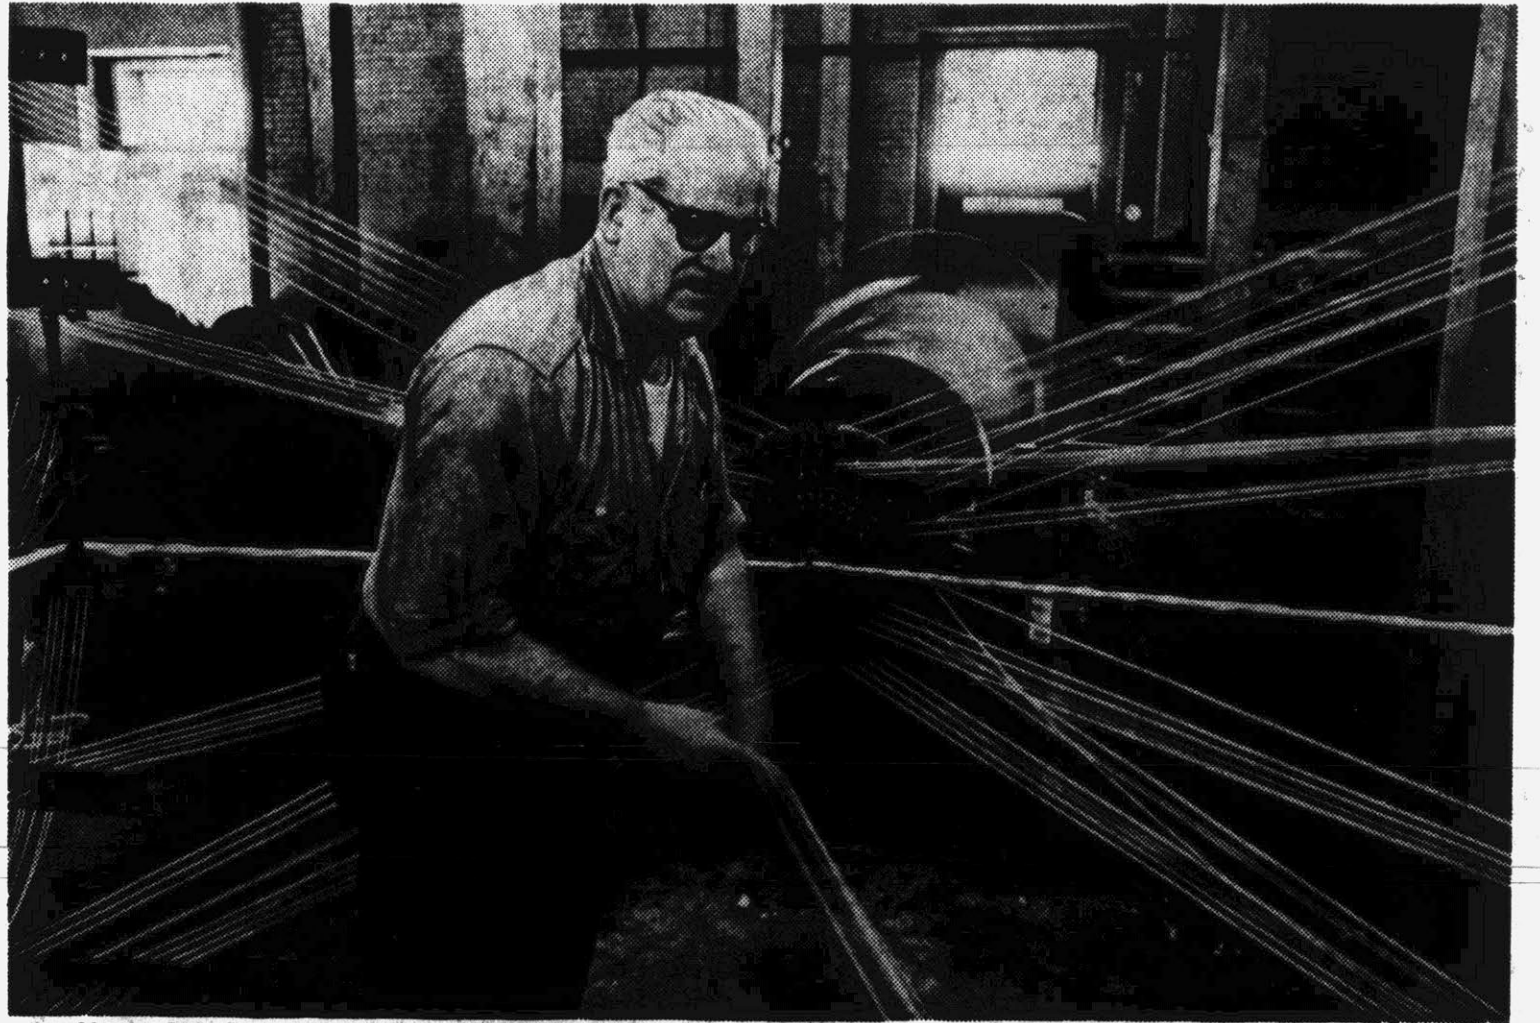

The original Ropewalk got its name from the 1,200-foot walkways down which the ropemakers laid out long strands of hemp fibers before twisting them into rope. That old building is now a museum, and ropemaking is carried on in a newer facility across the street, where largely automated equipment and nylon fibers are used to produce over a million pounds of cordage a year. The current mission of the Ropewalk has been "research, development, testing and production of cordage." Although the era of sailing vessels and their need for miles of rope for riggings is gone, the Navy has used ropes for purposes as varied as tying duffle bags and anchoring aircraft carriers. Here on this Picture Show page are scenes of the Ropewalk's operation—and soon that'll be history, too.

PICTURE SHOW photographs by J. Walter Green.

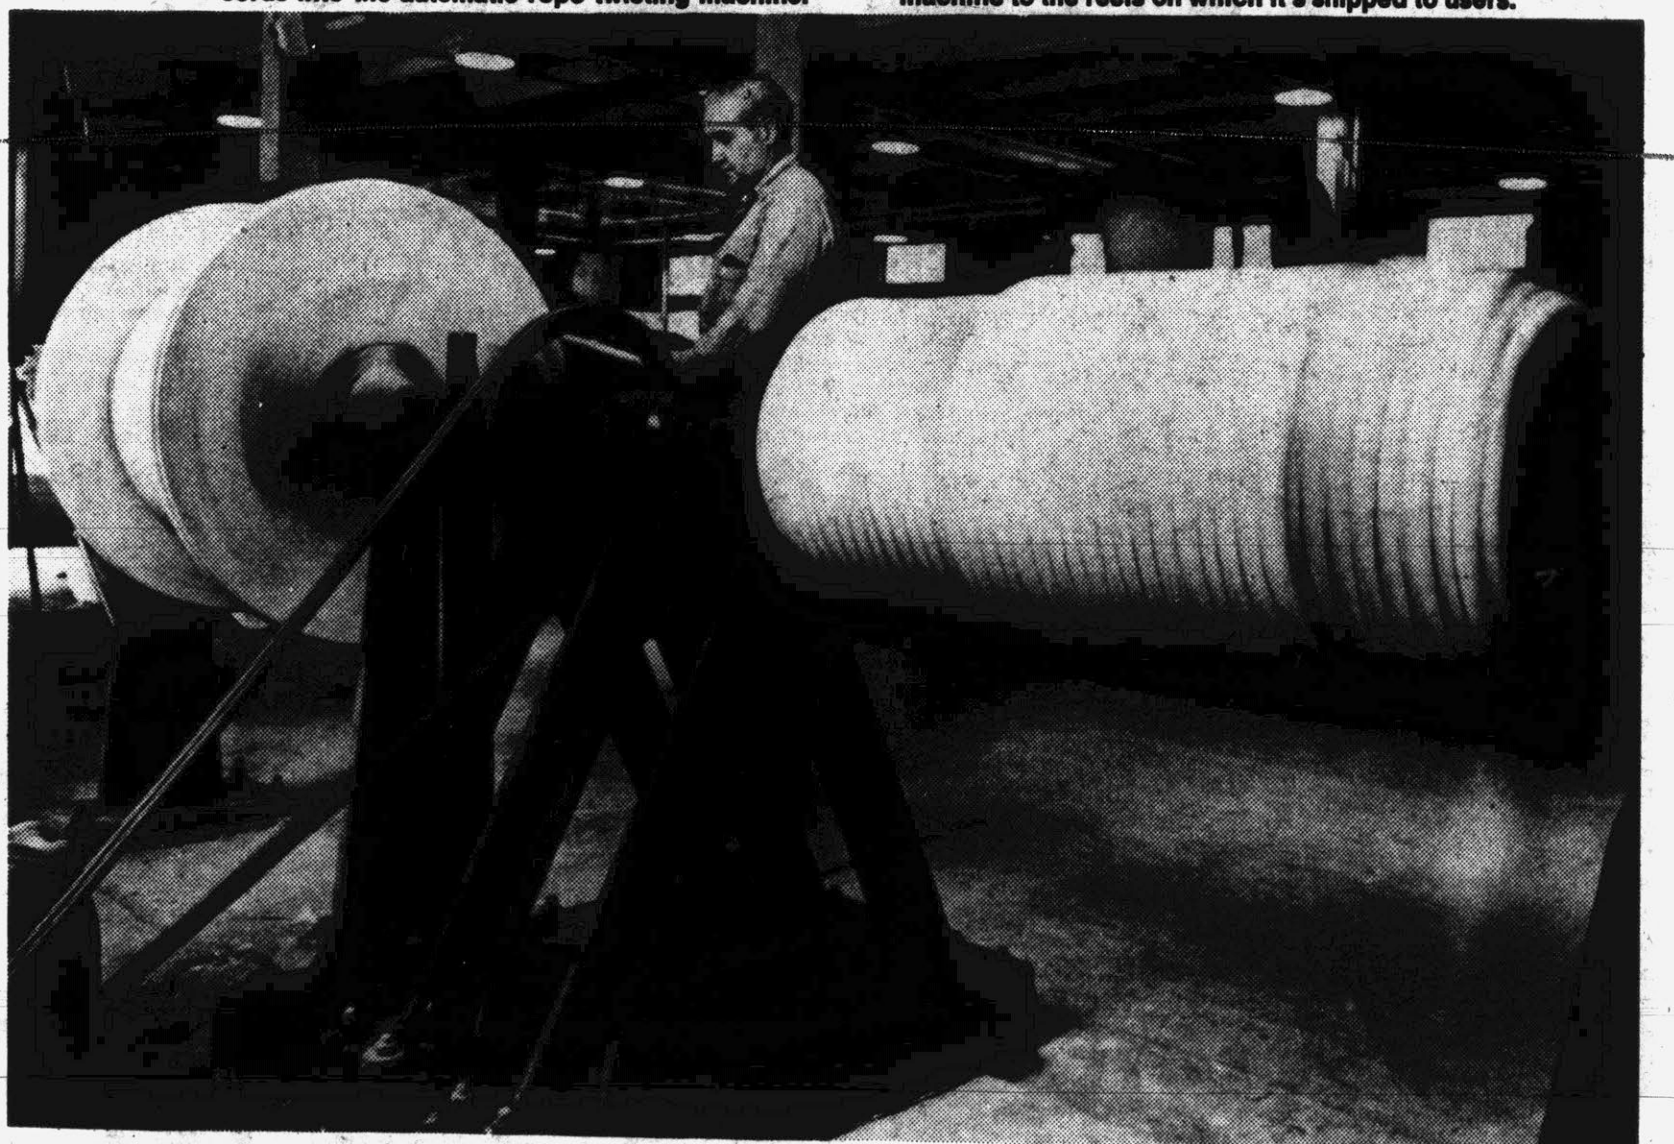

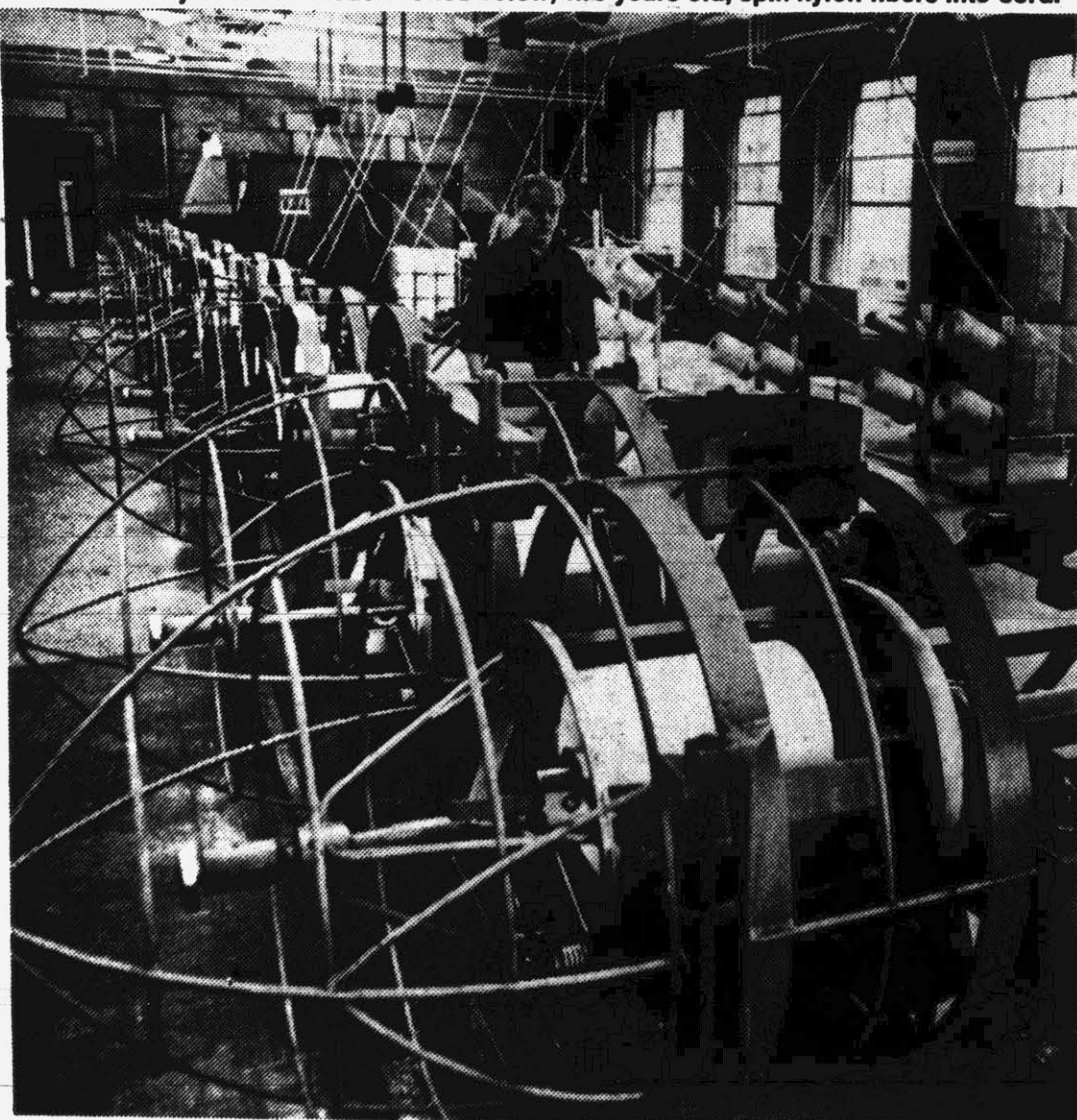

The machines above are some of the Ropewalk's oldest, still in use after 35 years. The modern ones below, two years old, spin nylon fibers into cord.

Above, Gino Rappoli of Quincy, Mass., feeds nylon cords into the automatic rope twisting machine.

The finished nylon rope, below, is spooled from the machine to the reels on which it's shipped to users.

AMA Ordered To Study Need For 'Major Overhaul'

By FRANK CAREY
AP Science Writer
NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The American Medical Association has been ordered to hold unprecedented, widely publicized "open hearings" on whether there is a need for a major overhaul of the AMA's programs, priorities and governing structure to better assure meeting the nation's health requirements.

The order came from the AMA's policy-making House of Delegates, Wednesday in final session of its 25th annual clinical meeting.

It came in response to a declaration by the Wisconsin delegation that the AMA "cannot fly in the face of mounting criticism from (individual members) that the association is not as responsive as it should be to their needs and desires" in caring for their patients.

But the entirely unexpected action also amounted to at least a partial victory for the AMA's controversial and outspoken president, Dr. Wesley W. Hall of Reno, Nev.

The 64-year-old Nevada surgeon had stirred some sharp controversy within the AMA's 25th clinical meeting when he proposed last Sunday that the AMA call "a constitutional convention" or take some other extraordinary means "to streamline our governing process...and... get our organization back on the track and restore our profession to the highly respected status it once enjoyed."

Hall charged in his speech that the AMA has too many overlapping programs; that morale is "low" among its administrative staff; that the AMA is paying too much attention to "politics and legislation" at the expense of promoting scientific and medical education; and that "a serious struggle for power" is under way within the AMA's high echelons, including the powerful Board of Trustees. The board and other top officials already have denied the morale and power struggle charges—but offered no comment on the politics charge. The final action by the House Wednesday in ordering the "open hearings" for AMA membership also came shortly after Hall had made an emotional, unplanned speech, reiterating essentially all his previous charges.

But Hall indicated that he had virtually given up hope that the House would approve his call for a constitutional convention or some other extraordinary mechanism. He urged that the House at least order the AMA to hire a private firm to "make a management survey of our business" and to define the exact responsibilities and duties of all the AMA's top officers and staff.

Repeating the low morale charge, Hall—referring to the AMA's administrative office in Chicago—declared: "If you think that at 535 North Dearborn St.—Chicago—1,000 hearts beat as one, I can tell you that is not so." He said he talked to or received letters from hundreds of practicing physicians throughout the country during the past five months, and he said many of them voiced dissatisfaction with the AMA "and one of the first questions I am asked is: 'What has the AMA done for me lately?'" The new order by the House demanded that the AMA hold "open hearings" at its two national meetings during 1972 on the "subject of constitution changes, organizational structure and delineation of committee responsibilities." And a further order was that a report on the outcome of those hearings, together with recommendations of appropriate committees be submitted to the AMA June 1973 meeting.

Those open hearings are to be given wide publicity and as many individual members of the AMA as possible are to be urged to attend. In approving the resolution, offered by the Wisconsin delegation, the House refused to approve a recommendation by two of the AMA's key councils that the House flatly turn down Dr. Hall's call for a constitutional meeting.

May Yet Face A Grand Jury

RALEIGH (AP) — Two North Carolina State University basketball players may face a grand jury although marijuana charges against them were dismissed in Wake County District Court.

Judge George Bason said Wednesday he could find no probable cause for trial of team captain Paul Coder and junior Bob Heuts. He ruled that an automobile involved in the case was searched illegally. The players were charged with possession of marijuana.

District Solicitor W.G. Randall Jr. said he will have to look at the evidence before deciding whether to send the case to the grand jury.

Coder and Heuts were arrested in September in Pullen Park next to the N.C. State campus after police searched a car in the park's parking lot.

Judge Bason held that evidence obtained during the search wouldn't be admissible in court.

City patrolman A.C. Munday said he saw the car while on a routine patrol and thought it might have been stolen or abandoned. He told the court he found two windows rolled down, clothes and shoes on the back seat, coins on the floor and what looked like a long hunting knife.

Detective M.J. McLamb said the car was kept under surveillance all night and that at 8 a.m. he saw two people, later identified as Coder and Heuts, approach the car. Coder opened the trunk, McLamb said, while Heuts stopped at the right front door. The officer said he and another detective went to the car and Coder gave them permission to search it.

McLamb said a warrant was being drawn at the time but was never served.

No evidence pertaining to any marijuana was introduced.

Coder and Heuts announced last week they were dropping from the team until the cases were settled. They rejoined it Wednesday night and were in the starting lineup against Atlantic Christian College.

Holiday Jobs Build Up Social Security

A million people — students, housewives, and others — will work in holiday jobs in department stores and elsewhere to earn some extra yuletide money this season. Most of them will also be building up their protection under social security, according to William McClure, social security district manager in Greenville.

"If your holiday job is covered by social security — and most jobs are — you'll get social security credit for 3 months' work if you earn $50 or more in the October-December period," McClure said. "This is true even though all your earnings come in December." Work credits build eligibility for social security disability, survivors, and retirement benefits and for Medicare coverage at 65, he explained.

"Credits earned in holiday jobs can be particularly important to young people," McClure said. "For example, a young person who becomes disabled may need credit for as little as 1½ years of work under social security to be eligible for monthly checks. Credit for 3 months of work because of a holiday job can be a big help."

Social security now pays $279 million a month to almost 2.8 million disabled workers and their families.

Work credit also builds eligibility for monthly benefits for the families of young workers who die prematurely. Social security pays $672 million a month in survivors benefits to almost 6.6 million children, widows, and other survivors of deceased workers, Mr. McClure said.

Holiday workers should have a social security card, the district manager noted. "Be sure you show your card to your employer so your earnings can be credited to your social security number," he said.

"For more information, call or visit any social security office," McClure said.

More Suits May Result

RALEIGH (AP) — The director of the North Carolina-Virginia Commission for Racial Justice says a series of hearings being held in North Carolina to get the views of blacks on desegregation progress may lead to more school suits.

The Rev. Leon White told newsmen Wednesday that testimony in Charlotte Tuesday disclosed "black students are not getting a meaningful education, and we are trying to do something about it."

The Rev. Mr. White spoke to newsmen prior to a hearing in Raleigh Wednesday night. A third hearing was scheduled today in Wilmington. White said additional hearings may be held during the next few weeks.

He said the hearings are closed to newsmen because those testifying might be "subjected to intimidation" if accounts of their testimony appear in the news.

The hearings are cosponsored by the Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

'Oldest Speed Cop' Is Retiring

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A policeman who has worn out 11 motorcycles in 46 years and whose boss calls him "the oldest speed cop in the world" is nearing 70 and preparing to retire.

Carl E. Perscheid logs about 75 miles a day as supervising sergeant for the police department. He's been on the bikes since he became one of the city's first 12 motorcycle officers in 1925.

Feb. 1, he'll turn 70 and will be required by departmental rules to retire.

Senior Recital At ECU Tonight

The one music event at East Carolina University this week is a senior recital tonight at 8:15 p.m. in the Recital Hall of the School of Music.

For tonight's program, senior Jo Ann Gillette will give a performance on the horn, with assistance from Linda Pescatore at the organ.

Sunday Dancing Ban Is Extended

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Dancing in the streets—or any public place—on Sunday has long been illegal in Salt Lake County, and county fathers now have banned Sunday dancing even in private clubs.

The county commission Wednesday added private clubs to the no-Sabbath-dancing law. County Atty. Carl Nemelka had said the old law was discriminatory and offered commissioners two choices—ban Sunday dancing everywhere or completely legalize it.

Two commissioners voted to ban it everywhere. One called the whole law stupid.

The Worry Clinic

Malingering Is Common Trait

Linda was my son Daniel's patient at the College Dental Clinic. Notice how conveniently she began to mangle. But also see how quickly she could stop her vomiting when the Professor used his psychological strategy. For pain and nausea are largely psychological!

was a patient at the Dental College Clinic.
"Dad," our son Daniel began, "she would vomit at the slightest pretext."
"In fact, I decided she even did it on purpose, just to attract more attention from her mother and us doctors."
"But I was a senior student and felt I should let the Professor handle the matter."
"So I called him to the chair and the very next time that Linda began to vomit, the Professor stuck his thumb under her chin."
"Then he firmly pushed upward, till her lower teeth were against the uppers, saying: 'Now you swallow it!'"
"Well, Linda did so!"
"And never attempted to vomit again while in my dental chair!"

Malingering
Many patients in both medicine as well as dentistry will malingering.
That means they feign illness or pain, usually for some ulterior purpose.
And sometimes they do so, subconsciously, never having bluntly admitted they are using feigned illness as a club over their heads.
For example, many a school child will complain of stomach ache at breakfast time.
Oddly enough, this usually occurs only on school days — never on holidays!
And even doting mamma may develop a convenient headache when she wishes to avoid certain social obligations she likes to avoid.

Workers by the tens of thousands also reduce our industrial efficiency by telephoning Monday morning that they are "sick."
If so, they are usually having a hangover from carousing on Sunday night with John Barleycorn!

Senior Citizens likewise can turn on a lot of extra medical symptoms to gain more sympathy from relatives or neighbors.

Even a toddler soon learns that the sicker he appears to be, the more consternation and excitement he produces among the adults in his home.

In dentistry, many people do tend to gag, especially if they are having an impression made for false teeth.

For the plaster often tickles the back of their throats, thus starting the gag reflex.

But the more you think about such things as vomiting or a squeamish stomach, the more you nauseate yourself.

The bidding:
West North East South
Pass 3♣ Dble. 3NT
Dble. Pass Pass Pass
Opening lead: Five of ♠
West allowed himself to be bamboozled by a foxy opponent and permitted South to escape at a bargain price in today's hand.
North opened in second position with three clubs. He had a reasonable expectation of winning six tricks even if partner's hand was worthless — which would produce a maximum loss of 500 points against an almost certain game or slam available to the opposition.
East made a takeout double and now South came up with an enterprising call. Inasmuch as his right hand opponent might be expected to hold the bulk of the outstanding strength on the deal, the king of spades looked like a probable trick and South's holding in the red suits offered reasonable protection against adverse attack. He therefore decided to take a shot at three no trump.

It was not his expectation that nine tricks were available on the deal. His length in clubs precluded any reasonable hope of being able to defend successfully against a game contract by the opponents, and it was South's intention to attempt to steal the hand for a bargain price.
West had 10 high card points, a good holding facing a partner who had made a vulnerable takeout double at the three level. He doubted that South could make his bid and he accordingly made a penalty double. North and East passed and South chose to gamble it out instead of retreating to the safer haven of four clubs—since that action might goad the opponents into bidding their game.
West opened the five of spades and East put up the ace. He shifted to the king of hearts at trick two to test that suit, but when he did not get an encouraging signal from partner, he led back the ten of spades. South put up the king and ran for cover with seven club tricks. He then conceded himself down one, for a very modest loss of 100 points on the deal.
In our opinion, West did not show good judgment by doubling three no trump. Game in spades for his side was a virtual certainty, and a profit of at least 820 points might be expected to accrue if he merely ignored his opponent and proceeded to four spades.
The prospects of inflicting severe damage to three no trump were not bright inasmuch as South might be expected to have a stopper in both major suits—presuming his bid to be honest. If South was bluffing and retreated to four clubs, West would be bound to carry on to four spades because the penalty against four clubs amounts to only 300 points (two diamonds, two hearts, and one spade).
In short, whether his opponent was serious or fooling, West might just as well have made the call he should have chosen had South passed the double of three clubs—namely, four spades.

weather, so a woman in the middle seat just two rows ahead of us suddenly cried out for a "Whoopee bag."
She vomited and vomited and then did so some more.

By this time, the men on each side of her grew pale and then they also called for whoopee bags.

The alert stewardess, seeing that this air sickness might become contagious, abruptly reprimanded the woman, saying: "You must stop this!"

Then the stewardess passed around questionnaires for all of us passengers to fill out, listing our wishes and dislikes re airplane travel.

But she was merely trying to divert the attention of the remaining passengers so they would not indulge in "sympathetic vomiting."

PHILIPPINE INVESTMENT
MANILA (UPI)—The Philippine National Economic Council reports that gross domestic investment in the country totaled 6.6 billion pesos ($1.1 million) in 1970, compared with 6.5 billion pesos ($1.08 million) in 1969.

The eligible servicemen, whose round-trip tickets from Saigon cost $479 apiece, will arrive Dec. 22 and head back to the war zone Jan. 2, the sponsors said Tuesday.

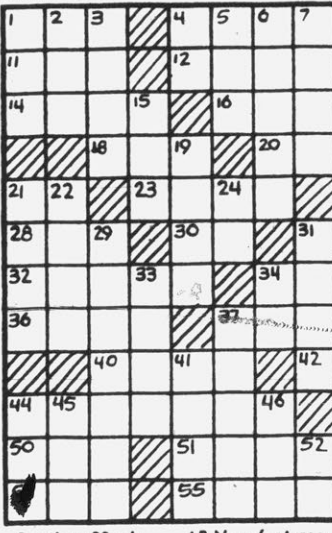

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP)—More than 100 upstate New York GIs serving in Vietnam can come home for the Christmas holidays on leave using airline tickets paid from public donations in six counties.

The "Home for the Holidays" program, introduced in Cortland County last year when 16 servicemen were brought home, has attracted financial support from individuals, business firms and civic groups.

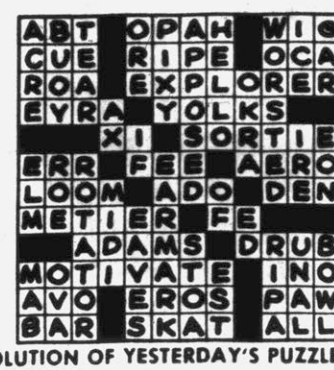

The eligible servicemen, whose round-trip tickets from Saigon cost $479 apiece, will arrive Dec. 22 and head back to the war zone Jan. 2, the sponsors said Tuesday.

National Impact Seen From Suit

The action of five leading environmental groups in bringing suit against officials of Soil Conservation and other divisions of the U.S. Department of Agriculture in the case of the Chicod Watershed Project will be a case having "tremendous national impact," according to Frank M. Wooten Jr.

Speaking about the case, Wooten said "This will certainly be a landmark case, as it is the first one nationally to test the National Environmental Policy Act as it applies to the drainage of farmlands and agricultural lands in the nation."

Wooten, after stating he believes the case will have far reaching implications, said that national focus would be centered on the outcome, as "it will affect all cooperative drainage of such lands."

Visible Drive-In Movie Is Closed

SHELBY, N. C. (AP) — The manager of a drive-in theater was arrested Wednesday night and charged with violating a new law making it illegal for movies to be seen from a public road in Cleveland County.

The law become effective Wednesday. It was passed after people who live near another drive-in complained that it showed movies with nude scenes. This theater, the Sky-Vue, was closed Wednesday night pending a Superior Court hearing on its suit challenging the constitutionality of the ordinance.

Dean Canipe, 26, manager of the Sunset Drive-In on U. S. 74 just west of Shelby was arrested under the ordinance, and released in $50 bond for a hearing Dec. 9.

Water Management Plans Are To Benefit Wildlife

The Commissioners of Pitt County Drainage District Number 1 have tentatively decided to add additional water management measures that will benefit fish and wildlife in the 115,000 acre Little Contentnea Creek Watershed project in Pitt, Greene, Wilson and Edgecombe Counties.

W. A. Allen, Chairman of the Board of Commissioners for the drainage district, reported that C. L. Lehning, Jr., assistant state conservationist, Soil Conservation Service, and Stuart Critcher, assistant chief, Division of Game, North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission, proposed several measures that can be added in order to meet the requirements of the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969.

Water in the swamps can be better managed for increased tree growth and wildlife benefits by adding flash-board type risers on the inlet ends of drop pipes. Allen said the Commissioners are considering adding these risers on the drop pipes along the proposed canals in Middle Swamp, Sandy Run, Black Swamp and Old Womens Branch.

Another added feature being considered is the use of low water pools in the main channels. These pools would be created by over-digging the canal bottom about two feet deep on a level grade one thousand to three thousand feet long. Tree logs or large rock would be installed to serve as low level dams on the pools.

Lehning reported that the Soil Conservation Service is working engineering design personnel in Raleigh overtime to get the construction plans for the first contract segment ready early next year.

"The Little Contentnea Creek Watershed Project is programmed to begin construction during 1972 fiscal year," Allen said.

Fifteen items are on the Greenville City Council's agenda for the December meeting tonight at 8:00 p.m. in the Council Chambers of City Hall. Three are old items, and 12 new ones.

Under old business, the council will consider appointments to boards and commissions; a request for renewal of a mobile home permit by Huey L. Harrison at 152 West Gum Road; and withdrawal of portions of East Eighth Street, Charles Street, East Seventh Street and a 20 foot alley, all in connection with East Carolina University acquisition of property in the areas.

New items of business will cover a request for rezoning of an area north of Greenfield Terrace; bids on police communications equipment; withdrawal from dedication of a portion of Allen Street; requests for rezoning in the cases of Bob's Mobile Estates on Hooker Road and U.S. 264 By Pass; the E. L. Clark property on the east side of North Greene Street; and an area in the vicinity of Home Builders Supply Company.

Other items on the agenda are the Thoroughfare Plan; discussion concerning the operation of a Day Care Center at Moyewood Social Services Center; the improper maintenance of a screening fence at King's Plaza; overtime pay for policemen; waiver of interest on paving petition in the case of William M. Nobles; and a request for tax refund submitted by Mrs. Naomi Burney Harte.

Honor 'Trigger' Of Bus Boycott

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit's International Afro-American Museum has issued a Christmas card honoring Rosa Parks, often referred to as the "mother of the civil rights movement."

Mrs. Parks triggered the Montgomery, Ala., bus boycott 16 years ago when she was arrested for refusing to move to the back of a bus.

The boycott, led by the late Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., started a decade of protests.

Mrs. Parks has lived in Detroit with her husband and mother since 1957. She works on the Detroit staff of Rep. John D. Conyers Jr., D-Mich.

Social Security Offices Will Get Complaints

The Greenville Social Security Office, along with social security offices in 850 communities around the country, has been appointed by Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, (HEW) Elliot L. Richardson to serve as a local center to receive complaints about substandard conditions in nursing homes.

Persons who have information about specific instances of poor quality care, neglect, unsanitary or unsafe conditions in a nursing home may give that information to the nearest social security office in person, or by letter or phone. William McClure, Social Security District Manager in Greenville noted that, if desired, the name of the person making the complaint and the name of the nursing home patient will be kept confidential.

The social security office will see that the complaint gets to the proper Federal, State, or local authority for investigation.

The designation of the Nation's social security offices as "nursing home listening posts" is preliminary to a plan announced by Richardson for the establishment of an ombudsman system in the States. The ombudsmen would take complaints and suggestions about nursing home care and channel such information to the right people. They would also find out what nursing home patients think — not only about the facilities where they live, but also about alternatives to nursing home care — ways in which older people may be enabled to stay in familiar surroundings instead of being institutionalized.

Boy Injured In Accident

One pedestrian was injured and an estimated $3,000 property damage caused in three collisions investigated here yesterday.

Greenville police reported a five-year-old boy, Eric Tyrone Bullock of 214 Perkins St., was injured when struck by a car at the intersection of Dickinson Avenue and Hooker Road about 1:10 p.m.

Police identified the driver of the car involved as Frances McGowan Andrews of 1607 South Elm.

No charges were made and no damage resulted to the car.

Leslie O'Neal Mooring, 38, of Route 3, Snow Hill was charged with failing to stop for a stop sign following investigation of a 4:45 p.m. collision at the intersection of Second and Cotanche Streets.

Police reported the Mooring car collided with a vehicle driven by Beverly Gail Powell, 22, of 403B Holly St., causing an estimated $1,000 damage to the Mooring car and about $1,500 damage to the Powell auto.

Drivers of three cars involved in a 6:30 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Greene and Dudley Streets were identified as George Keel, 48, of Rober-sonville; Lester Best, 64, of 404 West 14th St. and James Marland Worsley, 38, of 1016 Martin St.

Officers estimated damage at $200 to the Keel car, $250 to the Best auto and $50 to the Worsley car.

Best was charged with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety.

Possible Oil Off Coast

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Interior Department says an undersea extension of the Cape Fear Arch formation off North Carolina is one of six areas off the Atlantic Coast which may contain oil.

A geological report, based on published information, updated a 1967 study and said areas off New England, North Carolina, Georgia and the Bahamas Island might deserve first attention.

There has been virtually no exploratory drilling off the East Coast and the report, issued Wednesday, said it is not known whether any of the six areas contains oil.

The department has increased oil-leasing on the West Coast and the Gulf of Mexico. It has announced it will consider leasing the Atlantic coast in the future.

The report has been sent to governors of the Atlantic coast states. It was written by Dr. John C. Maher, a marine geologist with the U.S. Geological Survey in Menlo Park Calif.

Anti-War Classes Caused Bare Stir In Berkeley Community

By THOMAS C. MILLER
BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI) — A recent directive by the Berkeley board of Education to teach antiwar classes in the public schools would have sparked a sharp controversy in most communities, but in this longtime center of the antiwar movement it came as no surprise.

The school board's action drew some criticism —primarily from a group of University of California Law School professors —but most parents, teachers and school officials expect such antiwar activism.

Early in October the board passed, by a narrow 3-2 margin, a resolution supporting two nationwide student strikes against the Vietnam War on Oct. 13 and Nov. 3 and requesting the school administration "to establish and carry out antiwar programs in all schools and classrooms on those days."

It wasn't the first time the school board had passed antiwar resolutions. Board President Samuel Markowitz, a University of California chemistry professor and now an opponent of the school antiwar program measure, said the board had approved several earlier resolutions in which all five members expressed opposition to the war.

Last spring, the board approved a proposal requiring the school district to provide buses for students to attend an April 24 peace march in San Francisco. A similar measure was approved along with the classroom teaching proposal last month so that students could attend an antiwar rally Nov. 6 in San Francisco.

"But the bus resolutions involve activities on Saturday, which meant students wouldn't be allowed to miss class, and the students who wanted to go had to pay for the transportation themselves," Markowitz said. "The buses were provided at no cost to the school district."

Markowitz added, however, the antiwar teaching measure was "the first time such a sweeping motion affecting the classroom" had been approved by the board.

The resolution's co-authors, Marc Monheimer, a San Francisco attorney, and Mrs. Louis Stoll, a newly elected board member who ran last April on an antiwar platform, admitted such proposals are difficult to implement.

"All we can do is try to give some direction to the district," Monheimer said.

Schools Superintendent Richard Foster sent a memorandum to administrators and teachers asking them to comply with the school board resolution "when it is reasonable and applicable," and to "present educational activities supporting the board's position."

Because of the flexibility of the resolution, the antiwar programs in the schools varied greatly.

"I visited Berkeley High School and they had some special classes that students could attend rather than their regularly scheduled ones," said

Preston Roney, an assistant to Foster. "In these classes the students could engage in a discussion of the subject and hopefully come to some conclusions."

Lyn Teller, vice principal of Berkeley High, said on one national student strike date all history classes were transformed into forums on Vietnam.

"I guess you could say they were antiwar in essence," he said.

Jefferson Elementary School Principal Mary Giorgi said her teachers talked about war in each of their classes, which includes the kindergarten through third-grade level.

"We have to handle this in a very sensitive kind of way," she said. "Some of the children's fathers may be involved in the war. Most of our teachers talked generally about ways people can show love for human beings and about their concern over death."
