Arson Is Not Ruled Out

A Queen Rolled Over And Died

HONG KONG (AP) — The once-proud passenger liner Queen Elizabeth, transformed into an 83,000-ton incinerator by 24 hours of fires and explosions, capsized today in Hong Kong harbor halfway around the world from the Atlantic sealanes she once ruled.

"She rolled over and died," said a Marine Department spokesman at the outlying Tsing Yi island anchorage where the 1,031-foot former pride of the Cunard Line was being converted for use as a combination cruise ship and floating university for Chapman College of Orange, Calif.

The Seawise University as the ship had been renamed was lying on her side, her one remaining funnel just above the water line. The other funnel collapsed earlier in the fire.

Firefighting officials said they believed no one died in the fire. Between 800 and 900 workmen were believed aboard the ship when fire broke out Sunday, but most of them got off by the normal exits. About 200 others jumped into the harbor or clambered down ropes and anchor chains. Nine Chinese workmen were hospitalized for injuries and scores more were given first aid.

The cause of the fire was not known, but the ship's last British master, Commodore Geoffrey Marr, said at his home in England: "I do not believe this fire could have started accidentally. The flames spread too quickly for that. It must be sabotage. I cannot understand how it could have spread so quickly unless it started in two or three places simultaneously."

One officer of the Hong Kong fire service also commented that the spread of the fire through the ship's 11 decks was "surprisingly, phenomenally fast."

Sheik Mujib Receives A Delirious Welcome

DACCA (AP) — Sheik Mujibur Rahman came home to a delirious welcome from his Bengali people today after more than nine months in Pakistani prisons.

Diplomats and troops of the new Bangladesh army were lined up at Dacca airport to greet the 51-year-old president of Asia's newest nation as he stepped from the British air force jet that brought him from London and New Delhi.

Police had to hold back the huge crowd that surged toward the plane shouting "Joi Bangla"—Victory to Bengal—the rallying cry of the independence movement Sheik Mujib spawned.

Mujib's 90-year-old father, Sheik Lutfar Rahman, was one of the first to embrace the arriving hero. But his wife waited for him at their cottage in a Dacca suburb.

From the airport, a motorcade took Sheik Mujib through thick crowds to the Ramna race course to speak to his excited followers. It was there on March 7 that the sheik sounded his call for a civil disobedience campaign against Pakistani President Agha Mohammed Yahya Khan's regime.

Mujib was arrested March 26 when Yahya Khan ordered his army to crush the Bengali independence movement. Yahya Khan's successor, President Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, released the sheik on Saturday and sent him off to London. He met with Prime Minister Edward Heath, and then the British flew him home, with a three-hour stop in New Delhi en route.

He was welcomed to the Indian capital by Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, President V. V. Giri and diplomats from about 20 countries, including Britain, the Soviet Union and France. But the United States sent no one to the airport.

Mrs. Gandhi gave her Bengali ally all the honors of a chief of state, including a 21-gun salute, red carpet, national anthems and a military honor guard.

Mujib told newsmen in New Delhi he was thinking of taking Pakistan's bloody attempt to suppress the Bangladesh movement before an international forum.

He said he wanted international jurists to review possible war crimes, adding: "My first task is about my unfortunate people who have been killed and butchered. I pray God for the peace of their souls."

Robersonville Has A Break-In

ROBERSONVILLE — Robersonville police report a break in of a business establishment within the city limits during the week-end. The Milton Haislip store, located on U.S. 64 east of Robersonville, was reported entered at about 3:30 a.m. Sunday.

Breaking the glass door to the front of the store, the person or persons entering took about 20 cartons of cigarettes and $8.00 in cash. Police are conducting an investigation into the robbery.

Opposes Fountain

ROCKY MOUNT, N.C. (AP) — Democrat Howard Lee, mayor of Chapel Hill, announced his candidacy today for the 2nd Congressional District seat now held by Rep. L. H. Fountain.

Fountain is seeking his 11th two-year term.

The 36-year-old Lee, first Negro elected mayor of a major North Carolina community, said in a prepared statement he planned "to campaign as hard as anyone ever has in this district."

Lee said he was convinced the federal government "devotes too much money and attention to problems of big business and big cities and not enough attention to the small towns, the small businessman, the farmer and the blue collar workers."

He also said his campaign would produce plans that would aid small communities in getting more federal aid to fight poverty, drug abuse, unemployment and inadequate housing.

Jim Graham To File Tuesday

RALEIGH (AP) — Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham said today he will file for re-election Tuesday.

Graham, 50, will be seeking his third full term as commissioner.

A Democrat, Graham has headed the state Agriculture Department since July 1964.

Expenditures Per Pupil To Hit New Peak

By WILLIAM J. WAUGH
AP Education Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Education Association announced today that average per-pupil expenditure in public schools will reach an all-time high of $929 in the 1971-72 school year.

At the same time, NEA President Donald E. Morrison predicted that for the fourth straight year the federal share of the $50.1-billion cost of public schools will shrink to its lowest level since 1965.

The figures were given in the NEA Research Division's 30th annual report, "Estimates and School Statistics, 1971-72."

Local school districts, the report said, will shoulder the largest share of public school cost—52 per cent. The states' contribution will be 40.9 per cent, and federal help will drop to 7.1 per cent from 7.2 per cent last year and an all-time high of 8.8 per cent in 1967-68.

Morrison said NEA and other major national associations soon will announce details of a new school-financing program, which calls for the federal government to put up nearly $30 billion initially.

The proposed program, Morrison said, urges guaranteed basic elementary and secondary education in grades 1 through 12. Most of the funds would be used for this purpose, but some would be used in such special areas as vocational education, remedial and compensatory education, early-childhood education, summer school programs, adult education and education for the seriously handicapped.

The statistical report said that for the first time since World War II the school-age population declined by 773,000 to 52,266,000.

Leveling off of enrollments and the economic slowdown probably account for the 7.1-per-cent increase in school expenditures, lowest in a decade, the report said.

Teacher salaries, the report said, increased only 4.5 per cent.

The study also showed: —The average annual teacher salary is $9,690, with the Far West highest at $11,067 and the Southeast lowest at $8,113.

—Capital outlay at $4.5 billion, 3.9 per cent greater than last year.

—Total public-school revenue and nonrevenue receipts at $50.1 billion, up 5 per cent.

—The number of school districts declining to 17,218 from a high of 35,676 a decade ago.

U.S. Surgeon General

Seeks Developing Safer Cigarettes

By JOHN STOWELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Recognizing that Americans continue to smoke despite the higher risk of cancer, heart attacks and lung diseases, the U.S. surgeon general said today that new efforts must be encouraged to develop safer cigarettes.

And the health hazard may not be limited to smokers, the Public Health Service said in a 226-page report to Congress.

Nonsmokers in a smoke-filled room may be exposed to carbon monoxide levels exceeding some local air-pollution limits, the report said, and especially threatening to persons already suffering from chronic bronchopulmonary and coronary diseases.

"We must continue to encourage cessation as the only certain way to protect both the individual and society from the harmful effects of smoking," Surgeon General Jesse L. Steinfeld said.

"We must also, however, work towards reducing the dangers of smoking for those who have not quit by developing less-hazardous cigarettes and encouraging less-hazardous ways of smoking," he added.

The report, the fifth in a series since the first 1964 surgeon general's report linked cigarette smoking to disease and premature death, recommended that primary emphasis in developing a safer cigarette be aimed at reduction of carbon monoxide, nicotine and tar. Sen. Frank Moss immediately announced that his Senate Commerce subcommittee will hold hearings Feb. 1, 3 and 10 to consider legislation setting tar and nicotine limits.

Health Secretary Elliot L. Richardson, in a letter accompanying the new smoking report, told Congress his department supports regulatory efforts by the Federal Trade Commission to require health warnings in cigarette advertising along with listings of each brand's tar and nicotine content. Printed health warnings now are required on cigarette packages.

"Should these efforts fail, however, we would return to our previous recommendations that this should be accompanied through legislative action," he said.

The report said carbon monoxide, nicotine and tar are "most likely to contribute to the health hazards of smoking." Removal of six other substances described as probable contributors should be given second priority, it said, before efforts are made to reduce several other compounds considered suspected contributors.

Bases In Thailand Raided

BANGKOK (AP) — Terrorists invaded the base in Thailand for B52 operations in the Indochina war early today and slightly damaged two of the big American bombers, the Thai government announced.

Informed sources in Saigon said there was no curtailment of B52 raids on North Vietnamese positions and supply routes in Laos and Cambodia as a result of the attack. "B52 operations are normal today," said the U.S. Command.

U.S. officials in Bangkok and Saigon refused to discuss the attack. But the Thai government said at least three terrorists slipped into the huge Thai-American base at Utapao, on the Gulf of Thailand 90 miles southeast of Bangkok, and put explosive charges under some of the parked bombers.

The announcement said Thai guards killed one of the attackers.

There was no mention of casualties among American or Thai personnel. More than 6,000 Americans are stationed at the big base, which is home for about 45 of the eight-jet, $8 million stratofortresses.

In South Vietnam, the Saigon government was investigating the grenade attack that caused more than 100 casualties Saturday night at a government rally in the soccer stadium in Qui Nhon, 275 miles northeast of Saigon.

U.S. officials said they had reports of nine Vietnamese killed and 111 wounded, but some Vietnamese authorities put the count at 12 killed and 115 wounded. Among the wounded were several government officials, including Col Nguyen Van Chu, the new appointed chief of Binh Dinh province and mayor of Qui Nhon. Authorities in Qui Nhon blamed the attack on the Viet Cong underground.

Pentagon Tells Of Arms Thefts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon says 40 incidents involving arms, ammunition and explosives thefts occurred in a five-month span during shipments through the states last year.

The list, supplied to the House Commerce Committee and inserted deep in recently published records of a transportation subcommittee hearing, includes reports of missing machine guns, pilfered pistols and thousands of rounds of stolen or lost ammunition.

Cases range from one at East St. Louis, Ill., involving 74 grenade housing assemblies that vanished from a boxcar containing 150,000, to one at Concord, N.H., concerning a stick of 40 per cent gelatin dynamite stolen from a van.

Other samples from the list, covering Jan. 8 through May 27 last year:

—Wilmington, N.C., 2,000 rounds of .45-caliber ammunition marked for Bandar, Shapur, Iran, were lost between Washington, D.C., and Wilmington.

—Anniston Army Depot, Ala., 37 containers received from Norfolk, Va., via a motor line, inventory disclosed 441 M14 rifles missing; seals on the containers were intact and boxes in the containers were banded.

—Bellwood, Ill., three 81mm mortar shells stolen from railroad car when shipped from Lexington, Ky., to Camp McCoy, Wis.

—Letterkenny Army Depot, Chambersburg, Pa., 5,000 rounds of .22-caliber ammunition stolen from rail car bound for West Point, N.Y.

Duke Endowment Seeks To Break Founder's Will

By ED ROWLAND
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE (AP) — When tobacco tycoon James B. Duke gave $40 million to establish the Duke Endowment in 1924, he had the trust agreement worded so that there would always be income to be distributed. Today, the endowment is before a state judge asking changes in that agreement, which one spokesman for the foundation calls conservative. "It was not a bad idea in 1924, but now it is," the spokesman said. The Duke Endowment has assets of more than $500 million and is ranked in the top half-dozen largest philanthropic foundations in the country. In addition to the money Duke gave it, at his death his will provided $68 million more. In the years since, the endowment has given more than $300 million. The endowment says the federal Tax Reform Act of 1969 is largely responsible for the court action. The act requires private foundations to sue for invalidation of provisions requiring a percentage of net income to be added annually to the principal. Duke's trust demanded that 20 per cent of the income be undistributed every year until those funds totaled $40 million. Now, more than $30 million has been accumulated that way and the full $40 million is expected to be in hand by 1976 if the agreement stands. Other aspects of the suit arise from provisions of the act, which the endowment says was passed to correct some abuses by other foundations. Duke, known familiarly by the nickname "Buck," was one of the nation's wealthiest men. The native North Carolinian had made millions selling flue-cured tobacco, first for chewing and then in cigarettes. He expanded from a factory in a small, ramshackle building in Durham in 1869 to control the powerful American Tobacco Co. by 1911. That year, however, the U.S. Supreme Court declared American Tobacco violated antitrust laws and ordered it broken up. Duke's company was broken into five smaller firms which later became dominant in their own right: American, manufacturer of Lucky Strike cigarettes and other brands; Liggett &

Myers, Chesterfield; P. Lorillard, Old Gold; R. J. Reynolds, Camel, and United Cigar. Duke turned his interests from tobacco to hydroelectricity and organized Duke Power Co., which today serves about half of North Carolina and South Carolina. Duke's estate was valued at nearly $90 million. His will provided that $17 million from the endowment would go to Trinity College, which then became Duke University. The endowment has given a total of $159 million to the university. Another $35 million has been given to Davidson College, Furman University and Johnson C. Smith University. Other beneficiaries have been hospitals and child-care institutions in the Carolinas, retired Methodist ministers and beneficiaries, and rural Methodist churches.

Rep. Johnson was a member of the Fairmont City Council before his election to the General Assembly. He serves as pastor of several Baptist churches in the Fairmont area and is a member of the Executive Board of the General Baptist State Convention of North Carolina. In the court action—which is similar in many ways to a suit in 1962 in which the endowment's case was rejected by the North Carolina Supreme Court—the state attorney general and several other lawyers are contesting the request. One of them represents yet-unborn beneficiaries. The federal act demands a suit to change the endowment's requirement that none of its principal be distributed. The law wants at least 6 per cent of its assets given out each year. And the kinds of stock the endowment has in its portfolio is under attack. At present only securities of Duke Power or governmental agencies may be bought. The endowment wants broader powers of investment. One reason is that the act will forbid it from buying more Duke Power stock for the number of years necessary to reduce holdings in those securities from the present 43 per cent to 29 per cent by the end of the decade. Those stocks have brought in nearly two-thirds of the endowment's income since 1924, a total of nearly $250 million. With government bonds not the lucrative investment they seemed 45 years ago, the endowment wants its portfolio to be broader, because non-Duke Power securities will assume an increasing importance. But the endowment does not now plan to sell any Duke stock, unless it is required to do so. A spokesman for the endowment said he expected the suit in Mecklenburg Superior Court to be over by midweek, and that an appeal would be ready for the state's Supreme Court by spring.

Speaker Cites Freedom's Price

By JANE KELLER
Representative Joy J. Johnson of Fairmont addressed a near-capacity crowd at the Sunday evening service of the Sycamore Hill Missionary Baptist Church on Eighth Street. Rep. Johnson, whose visit was sponsored by the Black Pastors' Conference of Greenville and Pitt County, is one of two Black legislators who served in the

1971 session of the North Carolina General Assembly, and the second Black to be elected to the N.C. General Assembly since the days of Reconstruction. Introduced by the Rev. B. B. Felder, pastor of Sycamore Hill, as a long time personal friend and noted worker in civil rights activities, Rep. Johnson spoke spiritedly and succinctly on the subject of Freedom for all Americans, especially Black Americans. In order to be free, the speaker said, one must pay the price of freedom: honesty, hard work, and standing up for what you know is right. He differentiated between the "freedom-rider", the "freedom-trader", and the "freedom-fighter". According to Rep. Johnson, the "freedom-rider" is the Black who does not demonstrate and work for freedom. The "freedom-trader" is the Black who trades his freedom for a pint or a dollar. The "freedom-fighter" is the demonstrator, the worker for civil rights, who many times goes unrecognized. He concluded with a statement on his views on the role of the Black minister in working toward this freedom. The emotional address received a standing ovation by the crowd which was comprised of representatives from many churches. Rep. Johnson was a member of the Fairmont City Council before his election to the General Assembly. He serves as pastor of several Baptist churches in the Fairmont area and is a member of the Executive Board of the General Baptist State Convention of North Carolina. Officers identified the driver of the second vehicle involved in the mishap as Joe Thomas Sutton, 42, of Ayden. Officers reported an estimated $750 damage resulted to the Sutton car and an estimated $75 damage was done to a utility pole in the mishap. No damage was reported to the Olena vehicle, and no injuries were reported.

Germany Studies Ban For Tobacco Chemical

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Germany is considering legislation that would ban import of tobacco treated with maleic hydrazide, a chemical now used on 95 per cent of the American flue-cured crop and on much of the burley crop. If Germany approves the ban, it would spread to the rest of the European Community, including Great Britain and associated countries when they become Common Market members. This would mean U.S. tobacco growers would have to give up one of their most popular chemicals or else stand to lose about two-thirds of their foreign markets. Maleic hydrazide or Mh is used for the control of parasitic plant growths called suckers. When the chemical came on the market in the 1950s it was hailed by growers as one of the greatest discoveries in the history of tobacco production because it eliminated the laborious task of removing as many as a quarter million suckers per acre by hand. Efforts by some buying interests to ban use of Mh on tobacco failed when a storm of protest arose from growers all across the South. Germany now bans use of Mh by its own tobacco growers. The pending legislation would become effective in 1975 and would ban import of any food or tobacco products containing residues of chemicals whose use is prohibited in Germany. Germany in recent years has taken more stringent action against chemicals than any other country. U.S. growers have discontinued use of DDT, TDE and similar pesticides largely because of the potential loss of markets in Germany and elsewhere. Alternatives reportedly being considered by Germany are setting an Mh residue tolerance level instead of an outright ban and making it effective next Jan. 1, or setting an acceptable residue level for cigarettes or other manufactured products rather than for raw leaf. They spent Saturday night in jail after being charged with manslaughter in the death of their daughter, Antonia Elaine Mason, who was 23 months old. The warrants drawn against them said that Mason, 19, and his wife Belvia Jean, 18, "did kill and slay one Antonia Elaine Mason by malnutrition, starvation, and poor hygiene." Police who investigated after Mrs. Marson reported the baby dead said the Marsons' apartment was infested with cockroaches and had a strong odor of urine in it. They reported finding rotten food in the refrigerator and said the house had no heat. The county medical examiner, after an autopsy, said the infant's body was emaciated and bore sores of varying sizes. He said there was evidence of skin degeneration and cracks in her skin.

Arrest Man As N.J. Fugitive

Horace Lee Duffie, 32, of 314 Conley St. was charged Saturday with being a fugitive from justice by Greenville Police officers. Chief Glenn Cannon said Duffie was taken into custody on the charge about 9 p.m. He explained that Duffie had been stopped earlier in the day and a routine check indicated he was wanted in Newark, N.J. for violation of probation and for possession of dangerous drugs.

Driver Charged In Auto Mishap

Richard W. Olena, 18, of 303B Dudley St. was charged with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of an 11:27 mishap Saturday on Memorial Drive, 1220 feet south of the Millbrook Street intersection. Officers identified the driver of the second vehicle involved in the mishap as Joe Thomas Sutton, 42, of Ayden. Officers reported an estimated $750 damage resulted to the Sutton car and an estimated $75 damage was done to a utility pole in the mishap. No damage was reported to the Olena vehicle, and no injuries were reported.

Author Raised Lion, Leopard, Black Panther And Elephant

By JOY STILLEY
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — "Stop it, you're biting me — now, that's naughty," exclaimed Mary Chipperfield as she tried to get the squirming lion cub she was holding to cooperate in a photographic session.

"They hate sitting still," she explained, giving 10-week-old Sheba a disciplinary tap on the nose. Miss Chipperfield is well acquainted with the habits of lions — both little and big, since her family runs the Lions of Longleat wildlife sanctuary in Wiltshire, England.

But, more than that, she herself raised a male lion named Marquis, the rejected offspring of Longleat's first two lions imported from East Africa. She's told the story of his upbringing in a book, "Lions on the Lawn," and in connection with its publication she was in New York with Sheba, a 30-pound bundle of energy.

"That's heavy enough when you carry her a long way," she said.

Mrs. Evans Gives Woman's Club Program

Mrs. Melton Evans, president of District 15 of the N.C. Federation of Women's Clubs, was guest speaker at the general meeting of the Woman's Club Friday afternoon.

Mrs. Evans gave a brief report of the Mid-Year State Board meeting held in Durham in December. She gave instructions to chairmen in making reports and reminded them to have them in by Jan. 15.

She then spoke briefly on the Federation's theme "Building a Better Environment." If we abuse nature, it will strike back. We can't afford to lose the beauty of the earth," she said.

Mrs. Evans urged club members to find their own community problems and work them out. "Working together on improving the environment can keep America beautiful," she added.

Mrs. W. E. Roseveare, vice president, presided and welcomed members and guests. Mrs. Dink James gave the devotional.

Members were encouraged to attend the Driver's Training Class to be held at ECU beginning Jan. 11. Mrs. Robert L. Humber reported on the United Nations dinner held in October.

It was announced that the Home Life Department will meet Jan. 18 at the home of Mrs. Kelly Rowel. Mrs. Sue May will be the speaker.

The Fine Arts Department will meet Jan. 11 at the club building and Mrs. W. E. Avery will give the program.

Hostesses for the meeting were Mrs. George Clapp, Mrs. James, Mrs. R. P. Rogers, Mrs. H. R. Phillips, Mrs. J. L. Rives, Mrs. Kelly Wallace and Mrs. Bruce Tyson.

Campaign Started To Protect Lovers Lane From Lights

HADDENHAM (WNS) — Women led the campaign here to stop the town council from putting street lights in the local lovers lane. "Marriage proposals are more easily said in the dark, and marriage needs all the help it can get these days," said campaign leader Alice Jones, 47. The success of this movement encouraged Sidney Alterman to propose that his town council on Canvey Island keep the local car park open all night for courting couples. "It is preferable for young people to court in the car park than in dark alleys," he said. "If a girl gets into trouble, she can call for help or get out of the car in the middle of town." Motion carried.

Once a good seamstress gets the hang of electric scissors she can clip rapidly around the bends, corners and notches of a dress pattern.

not too good on a leash," admitted the beautiful long-haired author, animal trainer and member of Britain's most famous circus family.

Marquis, the sickly cub she bottle-fed and raised into a handsome full-grown lion, was still roaming around the house and sleeping on her bed when he weighed 150 pounds at the age of 2.

"He's 6 now and so he's a middle-aged gentleman," she said. "He is in one of our family zoos at Southampton, where he has two wives. You can't put a tame animal that was reared by humans into the preserve — the other lions would turn on him. I visit him and when he sees me, well, lions don't purr but it's the same thing. He rubs me and makes a great fuss over me."

In addition to Marquis Miss Chipperfield has raised a tiger, black panther, leopard and an elephant. "It was one flown in from India much too young, about 3 months old. It didn't quite live in our house but we brought it in at feed times."

At the moment, she reported, there were four baby lions back home with her husband, Roger Cawley, manager of the game preserve, and her children, David 5, and Suzanne 16 months. "The kids play with them just as though they were dogs," she said.

Miss Chipperfield, who as a sideline trains animals for commercial work, has just taught a panther to jump 8 feet high for a "horror picture" made in England. For the "Dr. Dolittle" film she trained 30 cats to follow Anthony Newley down the street and taught a horse and cow to shake a back leg. Now, she is in the process of training a giraffe for publicity work and two zebras for a circus act.

"You learn a lot when you're with animals," she said. "Each has a distinct personality. There are cheeky ones; some are a bit aggressive; there are lazy ones that don't want to move at all and others that never want to keep still."

"Chimpanzees are remarkable in their response to humans," she continued. "The only trouble is they grow up too soon and they nearly always bite the one they like most. They become quite dangerous by about age 6 but we have one that's 8 and he's still good and I can still let my children have photos taken with him."

Miss Chipperfield doesn't consider her work dangerous, though she once had the top of one of her fingers bitten off by a lion.

"It was my fault," she insists. "I looked away when I shouldn't have. However tame any animal may be you've got to remember they are wild, you know, and something may turn them. Even when they don't mean to do it a playful nip can be quite painful."

"I have no fear of animals, but I do have respect," she declared. However, the woman who has handled snakes and has swum with a panther, a leopard and a couple of lions in film stunts, admits she is afraid of one thing — insects.

How To Diplomatically Cut Gift List

By Abigail Van Buren

(© 1972 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: This is a tough one: How do you suddenly take someone off your Christmas gift list? And let them know in advance, so they will take you off theirs?

We have many friends and relatives with whom we have been exchanging Christmas gifts for years. It started when our children were young. We used to give inexpensive toys, elaborately wrapped, so they would have something under their tree, and the kids would have the excitement of unwrapping them on Christmas morning.

The kids aren't kids anymore. We almost never see most of them. Many have moved out of town. Christmas shopping is not only a big bore, it has become costly. I am sure these people feel the same way about it, but we don't know how to break this vicious circle. So we keep buying the same people Christmas presents every year because we know they'll buy us something.

If you have a solution for this universal problem, Abby, you're a genius.

SICK OF CHRISTMAS

DEAR SICK: I'm no genius, but here's a suggestion: Around Thanksgiving, send them a note saying you are thankful for friends with whom you can be perfectly candid. Then tell them you are trimming your Christmas gift list, and do not plan to send their children (or them, if that's the case) a gift, so to please do likewise. I promise you, it will be the best Christmas gift you could give them.

DEAR ABBY: In the summer of 1944, I met and fell in love with a wonderful marine. I know he loved me too, but for reasons I won't go into we wouldn't marry then.

I tried hard to forget him, but I guess I never really did. I still have his letters, and when I read them and play all those tunes, "I Walk Alone," "I'll Be Seeing You," "Saturday Night Is the Loneliest Night in the Week," etc., I feel he is near.

I know he is still living on the northeast coast and I would love to see him again.

While trying to forget him, I married a guy I'd known all thru school, but it lasted only five years. I guess I didn't love him enough.

Abby, I am told I'm too nice looking to stay alone, but I think I'm one of those women who can only love once. I've never met a man who can measure up to my marine. Any suggestions?

SEMPER FIDELIS

DEAR SEMPER: Quietly investigate and find out if he's married or single. If he's single, maybe you can pick up where you left off. It's worth a try. Good luck.

DEAR ABBY: Please don't send a compulsive eater to her local Mental Health Society. Send her to a doctor who is qualified in diagnosing Hypo-glycemia. "Mrs. Lary," who was fat and miserable has every symptom of hypo-glycemia, a condition which can be corrected by the proper diet. And it won't run into a lot of money, either.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90060. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

A Common Ground For Justices

The U.S. Supreme Court convened this month with two new justices, appointed by President Nixon, taking their seats.

William H. Rehnquist and Lewis F. Powell, Jr., having been confirmed by the Senate complete the nine man court. Both men are regarded as conservatives and both are highly respected as keen legal minds.

Already Nixon has appointed four members of the Supreme Court and most observers are predicting that court decisions will begin to reflect the conservative leanings that the president has apparently been trying to bring about.

So there is a feeling that there will be a trend away from upholding civil liberties by this new conservative Burger court.

Well, there is no doubt that men of conservative views are being named to the Supreme Court but it would be a mistake to predict that there will be a turning away from civil liberties.

One has only to point to Sen. Sam Ervin, who has long been known as a southern conservative, to signal out an outstanding champion of civil liberties. It appears that the popular North Carolina senator will cap his public career with his momentous battle against government snooping into our private lives.

Supreme courts do not often undo the work of their predecessors but when older decisions are reversed the court is often reading the predominant public opinion. This was true when the major decision came in 1954 which declared legal segregation of public schools to be unconstitutional. Segregation laws had previously declared constitutional by the courts; however, by the 1950s the majority of the public had come to recognize that legal segregation was morally wrong.

We expect that the present justices, who will be judging cases in the future, are well aware that street crime has reached a proportion in our nation where it is unacceptable to the general public. In large cities and small towns, the armed robberies, muggings, rapes and break-ins have reached the point where public opinion is saying something must be done.

This new court will have the delicate task of continuing to protect individual rights as guaranteed by the constitution, while at the same time allowing the authorities enough power to bring criminals to justice.

Theirs is not an easy job and there will be no one earth shattering decision which will solve the problem.

It has been our observation, however, that if there is one area in which those of conservative and liberal philosophies find a common ground it is that of protecting the individual liberties guaranteed by the constitution. Based on this, we would have to believe that our rights and liberties will still be protected by the Supreme Court.

A Mustache Is A Dandy Gift

By BRYAN HAISLIP
RALEIGH, N.C. — It really isn't mine, although I carry it around.

It's Mary Allen's. I gave it to her for Christmas.

A mustache makes a dandy present for your wife. It's something only you can give. Besides, it's cheap.

Hair is the emblem of the age. The man without it, on lip or jowl if not on top, is stamped as a hold-out from another time.

My son at 17 has a luxuriant crop which he launders and grooms as though it were more essential to him than Lady Godiva's was to her. My brother-in-law who's a college professor wears a full beard. Even my 87-year-old Dad has let his sideburns grow.

I figured a modest mustache would be my badge as a now person. What was sparse above, I reasoned, could be compensated for below.

It began sprouting weedly a week before Christmas. Mary Allen quickly noticed the signs and squealed with delight.

"I've always wanted you to grow a mustache," she said. "I can hardly wait to see how you'll look."

"Like Walter Cronkite?" I asked, with an expression meant to be quizzical.

Comic Strip Comparison
"Right now, more like Snuffy Smith," she replied. "But it will grow," she encouraged.

I think her enthusiasm for mustaches began with a Mexican boyfriend she dated when he was a student at N.C. State. It's good to catch up with a rival, even if it takes 20 years to do it.

The kids looked at me with new respect. Their generation measures maleness by quantity of hair, and for too long my skimpy pate rated me low on the scale. It's amazing how far sideburns and a mustache can go to establish rapport with the young.

"Let it grow down around the sides of your mouth, like the Marlboro man," suggested Zesely, envy in his voice.

"Trim it like Clark Gable," said Teresa, who caught the last re-run of "Gone With the Wind."

The care and training of a mustache is ticklish business, any way you go about it. A few days light work with the razor gives an unshaven upper lip, but not necessarily a mustache.

Professional Help Necessary
Mary Allen tried to shape it with the scissors, but gave up with the giggles. "We need professional assistance," she decided.

She went with me to the barber shop. Since it was her present, she had the right to supervise.

"Boy, you're lucky your wife let you grow a mustache," said the barber.

"I grew one. I asked my wife how she liked it. She rubbed a tooth brush in my face and said, 'Like that.' I shaved it off."

He trimmed a bit here and there until Mary Allen was satisfied.

"You look distinguished. Like Prince Rainier," she said.

"Thank you, Princess Grace," I replied.

I had the forethought to take a two-week holiday vacation to cultivate my hirsute adornment in the seclusion of the home. The time came when I had to take it out in public.

Self Conscious Debut
I felt self conscious as a midget walking a Great Dane.

I met some stares of shocked unrecognition, some smiles of approval or disbelief. Some people pretended not to see it, then sneaked surreptitious second glances. Some stooped to low humor.

"I see you didn't finish shaving this morning," said a smooth-faced friend. I thought he sounded jealous.

"Lay off powdered doughnuts, or you'll taste sugar every time you lick your lips all day," advised another.

At the family Christmas gathering, Mary Allen beamed and called everyone's attention to my facial transformation.

"Doesn't Bryan remind you of a celebrity?" she asked.

"Yes," said my older brother. "Groucho Marx."

"I had in mind Rock Hudson," I said stiffly.

The devilish and debonair image of the mustache boosts the ego. Actual or imagined, it brings a metamorphosis of personality that makes the timid turn bold, gives confidence to the insecure, and raises hopes for renewed virility.

"Good morning, you rascal," I greet the new face in the bathroom mirror. And the day is off to a brighter start.

"It's a great feeling, but all in the mind. Behind the lip shrubbery, it's the same old me.

Hanoi's Grand Strategy Shift

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON—Within a few weeks, invading North Vietnamese regulars probably will fight their way into the provincial capital of Kontum in South Vietnam's central highlands importance but potentially portentous development in the endless war.

Whether or not Communist troops briefly occupy Kontum city has no relationship to Vietnam's overall military situation. Indeed, the annual dry season Communist offensive in the sparsely settled central highlands just about to begin is peripheral to the vital question of who controls the populated regions of South Vietnam.

The politburo in Hanoi is just as aware of these military facts of life as the Pentagon in Washington. The reason it is willing to expend precious supplies and crack troops in the central highlands is the impact any kind of Communist victory might have on the shaky U.S. Congress. Headlines about North Vietnamese troops capturing a provincial capital might reap rich benefits on Capitol Hill.

This is what is truly behind the Communist military offensive now underway throughout Indochina. Strike at the weakest points of anti-Communists resistance, attempting to give the Congress in Washington the false impression that President Nixon's Vietnamization policy is a colossal failure. Even more than embarrassing Mr. Nixon before his Feb. 21 journey to Peking, influencing Congress is Hanoi's

Such priority represents a shift in Hanoi's grand strategy. North Vietnam's leaders have soured on their ability to undermine the Nixon administration's support of the South Vietnamese government by working through American antiwar protesters. Now, they are concentrating on action by Congress steadily diluting vital U.S. aid. That tactic requires some news from the battle-front suggesting an ultimate Communist victory.

The trouble, from Hanoi's standpoint, is that it cannot manage a successful military offensive in the rice-rich Mekong Delta or even in traditionally troublesome central Vietnam coastal provinces or along the demilitarized zone. Overall, the North Vietnamese military position has never been weaker, despite the now total absence of U.S. infantry.

Thus, the Communists are attacking weak spots: Laos, Cambodia and, most important, the central highlands in South Vietnam itself, a vast region defended by the 22nd and 23rd Divisions, commanded by the reputedly two worst divisional commanders in the South Vietnamese army.

That is why the Communists are massing in exceptional numbers for an offensive in the highlands, quietly bringing in additional North Vietnamese regiments. There is a danger they may also bring the 130-millimeter artillery whose 16-mile range proved so demoralizing in recent fighting in northern

A President's Decision

WASHINGTON — It is no secret that not only is President Nixon the number one football fan in the United States, but that he also has been instrumental in calling the plays for several football teams.

Washington Redskin fans learned, such to their chagrin, that the President suggested an end-round play to George Allen which he said he'd like to see the Redskins use against San Francisco. Allen used it when the Redskins were on San Francisco's 10 yard line and Roy Jefferson was thrown for a loss to the 22. The Redskins never recovered from the play.

But President Nixon does not discourage easily, and last week it was reported in all the newspapers that he called Don Shula, coach of the Miami Dolphins, at 1:30 a.m. and told him he wanted him to try a pass to end Paul Warfield on a "down and in" pattern against the Dallas Cowboys in the Super Bowl.

How does the President of the United States, with all the problems and worries of the world on his shoulders, find time to call pro football players?

Here's how it's done: Every morning when the President gets up he is given a football briefing by Henry Kissinger on what took place during the night at all the camps. (When Billy Kilmer, the Redskin quarterback, got into a fight at a Toddle House restaurant a month ago, Kissinger woke up the President at 3 o'clock in the morning to break the news to him. But usually, most football problems during the night are handled by the White House duty officer, who prepared the summations for Kissinger in the morning.)

After the briefing, the President has a breakfast meeting with the National Strategic Football Agency, a top-secret group of men who advise him on the options he has regarding the various teams.

Richard Helms of the CIA reports to the President on injuries the players have sustained. He also shows the latest photographs taken by his agents who have infiltrated the teams, usually as water boys. Then he gives estimates of what each team should do on the following weekend and the point spreads which his computer people have figured out.

The head of the Joint Chiefs of Staff then gives his presentation, using graphs, to show the weaknesses of the

Other Editors Say Freedom-Curbers

(The Wilson Times)

Part of the cause of the unrest of young people has been attributed to a search for greater individual identity — in other words, a search for more individualism which many of the young feel has been denied them by existing institutions of government, education and business.

Freedom of expression, freedom of choice and freedom of opportunity are demanded today perhaps more strongly than anytime since the founding of the nation. Businesses and industries of all kinds and sizes are endeavoring in a thousand ways to emphasize the value of the individual, to give him free choice and to guarantee him the right to exercise to the maximum his individual, to give him free choice and to guarantee him the right to exercise to the maximum his individual talents. The theme is freedom in all phases of life.

In the light of this, the behavior of so-called liberal politicians is nothing short of astounding. They urge the passage of more and more laws that stress government compulsion — a flat contradiction of the universal mood that demands greater self-determination.

A prime example of political attempts to buck the search for greater freedom are the proposals for total state control of health care. Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Elliot Richardson has commented that proponents of federal compulsory health insurance "seem to assume that radical intervention by the federal government in health care, in an inflexible, predetermined, and monolithic manner, is the only way to solve health organization and delivery problems. I suggest that we are more likely to attain our common health objectives by stimulating competition and by promoting consumer education and freedom of individual choice."

Compulsion in health care, or anything else, judging by the present temper of the young will become increasingly repugnant. Therefore, the country should go slow in scrapping a system that rests on voluntarism.

Strength For Today

CALM DOWN
The word "terror" is one of the most agonizing words in human speech. It means "a state of intense fear that agitates both body and mind." It is an experience through which practically everyone has come in his lifetime or hers. A terrified person usually remembers the experience of terror with increased terror.

How can we deal with a state such as this?

We can (if we have time enough) ask ourselves whether or not terror is justified. Some people can become terrified over almost nothing. The report of violence in our community, theft, abuse of all kinds — these can grow and grow in our minds until we are literally beside ourselves in terror.

We need always to remind ourselves that imagination enters frightfully into a terrified state of mind. What appears to be the stealthy entrance into our home of someone intent on violence may be nothing at all. It may be the rustle of leaves in the tree outside our window. It may be traffic noise. It may be neighbors coming home late. Almost every terrifying experience is exaggerated. After a few hours have passed we will realize we were mistaken in what we feared. Trouble of any kind is usually mixed up and intensified by a state of timidity and apprehension which can be controlled if we take ourselves in hand and turn off morbid exaggeration. Justified terror does not usually occur even once in a lifetime.

Calm down, and of course the telephone is right there to call anyone that needs to be called.

Devaluation Is Largely Offset

By ELMER ROESSNER
The devaluation of the dollar may do far less for American's balance of trade than has been expected.

The dollar is to be devalued by 7.89 per cent as soon as Congress acts. This will be done by raising the price of gold from $35 to $38 an ounce. This should make all American exports almost 9 per cent cheaper in foreign markets.

However, we are now in the process of raising labor costs 5.5 percent this year. That 5.5 figure is not precise, of course. It is supposed to be the maximum.

Most labor contracts do not come up for renewal this off year. But many have built-in increases. And those being renegotiated have shown little tendency to stay within 5.5 per cent. Aerospace workers won a 12 per cent increase, although this may be cut back. Railroad signalmen won twice as much. There are many other settlements between 6 and 12 per cent.

Still Some Bargains
Prices of some American

exports will be little affected by higher wage rates. Farm products on the international market will still be priced according to the laws of supply and demand, although the coming increase in railroad freight rates will boost their basic costs.

Americans' travel spending abroad, a big factor in our balance of trade, will be unaffected. In fact, the higher costs at home of preparing trips will give many travelers fewer dollars to take with them to spend abroad. And cheaper dollars may encourage more foreigners to visit and spend in the United States.

Another factor will keep export prices down. Most countries of the world have adjusted the value of their currencies upward, which amounts to a further devaluation of the dollar.

But American manufacturers' products will have to go up in price abroad as well as at home. If wage rates average 5.5 per cent higher by the end of this year, which seems possible, manufacturers will have to increase their prices to cover the increase.

More To Come
In addition, higher wages in the U.S. will mean higher

U.S. Businesses Coping With New Job Safety Law

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Businesses around the country are slowly but surely making changes to comply with the government's new job safety law, although some companies question the need for the legislation and others are worried about eventual costs.

Glenn Taylor, president of Bankhead Enterprise Inc., of Atlanta, estimated for example, that it probably will cost the company $25,000 to comply with the new law. Right now, most of the changes mean adapting old machinery, Taylor said. In the future, the company, which manufactures auto hauling trailers, expects to buy new machinery, built to fit the specifications of the law.

The job safety law, signed by President Nixon almost a year ago, went into operation April 28 with the establishment of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration. The Labor Department reported recently that in its first six months of operation, the OSHA cited 60 per cent of the firms it inspected for alleged health or safety violations.

Just what has the law meant to businessmen?

Bankhead's Taylor said much of the money it has spent has been going for bathroom improvement requirements.

"Another thing that will cost will be a requirement that we will have to put a permanent fixture on all of our dump trucks to hold them in position while they are being worked on by a mechanic," he said. "In the past, he would just prop them up with a pipe or something. I don't argue with this requirement, though."

Specific accident figures before and after the changes were not available, but Taylor said "I see no difference."

He said the changes would mean "a minus effect on productivity."

A spokesman for Regal Stamping Co. of Detroit, a subsidiary of Peabody Galion Corp., estimated productivity dropped 10 to 15 per cent after installation of guards on metal-stamping machines. The spokesman said, however, he hoped production would increase as the employees become used to the new machinery.

A spokesman for Boston Edison, an electricity utility, said it was a "little too early to appraise the whole thing ... but I think ultimately workers will be better protected. We're all more conscious of the requirements of law now and I think we'll be more strict in applications of safety rules and regulations."

Reports of criticism of the law in Ohio came from Newton Brokaw of the Columbus Industrial Association. He said, "The majority of businessmen feel that it is undesirable here with us and we're going to have to learn to live with it."

Brokaw said the businessmen "find a good bit of merit in the law, but the repressive features outweigh in many instances the merit that is in it."

He said the two major complaints were that the law was directed at employers without delineating the responsibilities of employees and that employers haven't been told what they must do. "The likelihood is that this is going to bear most heavily on the small-business men of this nation," Brokaw said. "There has never been any concerted effort by any government agency to inform them on the requirements."

Del Snodgrass, a spokesman for the Nebraska Association of Commerce and Industry, said, "the law has had a sizeable impact, particularly on some manufacturers who have had to install new safety equipment. I'm certain it has increased costs in some places."

Asked whether the law meant more protection for the worker, Snodgrass said, "I don't know if you can say that. Employers haven't been told what I'm sure they felt were adequate safety features. It might be what you could call a nuisance law."

The safety officer for one Hawaii corporation complained about the way the law was being enforced. "The government is going to create a lot of ill-will in industry by going after things which are not imminent hazards and concentrating on minimal things," he said. The spokesman said the OSHA has concentrated on such things as the placement of fire extinguishers and the size and color of exit signs. "This is more in the nature of harassment," he said.

offensive and defensive teams, and makes a case for more aerial bombing to avoid casualties on the ground.

He is followed by "Jimmy the Greek" Snyder, one of the few outsiders who attends these meetings. Jimmy the Greek makes the betting line for all the football games, and President Nixon relies on his advice as much as anybody he talks to. (The President also has a hot-line to Howard Cosell when he needs a piece of information fast.)

After the President hears out all his advisers, he goes alone into his private office in the executive office building with a yellow, lined legal pad, to decide what to do.

Should he tell Don Shula to call a screen pass or a draw play? Should he advise Shula to go for the bomb, despite public opinion against it? Or should he ask the coach to try an "end around" play again, even though it didn't work for the Redskins?

The President can get the best advice from every source. He can call on the greatest football minds in the country for guidance, and he has all the intelligence services in the country at his disposal. But when it comes down to the final decision only Mr. Nixon can make it. And that's what makes the Presidency of the United States the loneliest job in the world.

There is, however, worry today at the highest levels of the government over the prospect that limited military engagements may be greatly magnified by the American media and thereby cause more and more Congressmen to misunderstand the true course of the Vietnam war. For that reason only, Hanoi's 1972 offensive in the central highlands is awaited with apprehension in Pentagon and State Department offices.

Milwaukee Coach Exults After Fired-Up Bucks Thrash Lakers

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
"It's fantastic," said a happy Milwaukee Coach Larry Costello after his fired-up Bucks had ended the longest winning streak in professional sports history, thrashing the Los Angeles Lakers 120-104.

"I'm just glad we were in a position to do it," added Costello after the Bucks had handed the Lakers their first National Basketball Association setback since Oct. 31 and stopped their 33-game victory skein Sunday. Lakers' Coach Bill Sharman also used the word "fantastic," but in a different fashion. "We played fantastic for two and a half months," he said, "and it had to end. But I hope we're smart enough to learn by our mistakes so we can play better against them the next time."

"It was a great performance, and that's what it took to beat a team like Los Angeles," said Costello.

Coach Bitter Over Being Ousted By Georgia Tech

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
"How can a team have confidence in a man who everyday is on trial for his life?" Bitter and emotionally shaken, Bud Carson exploded his bad feelings after losing the football coaching job at Georgia Tech.

Carson's expulsion came during a day of otherwise happy activity as three new coaches were named Saturday—Al Conover at Rice; Cal Stoll at Minnesota and Tom Harper at Wake Forest.

Carson said he was not only hurt by his dismissal, but also puzzled. "I don't even know why I'm being fired," he told a gathering of newsmen at Atlanta. "I guess I don't part my hair right or have the right image."

Called by the board and later stated: "I did not see any report." Carson, who compiled a 27-27 won-lost record in five years as Tech's fourth football coach, said he felt "on trial" during this past 6-5 season.

Randle Reveals 2nd Strayhorn Joining ECU

East Carolina head football coach Sonny Randle was all smiles yesterday when he announced that Kenneth Strayhorn, running back from Trenton, N.C. had signed a four-year gridiron grant with the Pirates. The Jones Senior star is the younger brother of Les Strayhorn, a mainstay in the East Carolina backfield for the past two seasons and a rising senior who figures heavily in Randle's scheme of things for 1972.

Jones Senior coach Dan Ballard called Strayhorn, "the complete ballplayer. He can play offense or defense," Ballard commented. "He can run, block catch passes, punt, and return kicks. A coach could not ask for anything more from one individual."

Basketball For Boys And Girls

The Greenville Recreation Department's elementary basketball program is being formed for boys and girls in the 4th, 5th, and 6th grades. Boys will play each Tuesday from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. A boy can play at the Elm Street gymnasium or the South Greenville gymnasium. Registration for boys basketball will begin Tuesday, January 11 at either the Elm Street gym or the South Greenville gym.

"I have a feeling for the players and I believe they have a feeling for me," said Harper, who had been a staff member for three years and moved up when Stoll resigned to take the Minnesota position.

Conover moved up from an assistant's job to the head spot at Rice while Assistant Athletic Director Red Bale was boosted to Athletic Director.

"I think we were flat and didn't play well," said Sharman, "but I give Milwaukee credit. They were very aggressive."

Both coaches agreed that defense was the deciding factor.

Another key point occurred early in the third period, when the Lakers' massive center, Wilt Chamberlain, picked up his fourth personal foul. After that, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, the Bucks' big center, scored 23 of his game-high 39 points. Jabbar also finished with 20 rebounds, while Chamberlain, who never has fouled out of a high school college or pro game, had only 15 points and 12 rebounds.

Chicago's Chet Walker hit seven of his game-high 33 points in overtime, helping the Bulls hand Cincinnati its 14th straight setback, three short of the league record. Jimmy Walker of Detroit pumped in 35 points as the Pistons saddled Buffalo with its 13th loss in 14 games.

Seattle survived an 18-point fourth-quarter outburst by Boston's John Havlicek in holding off the Celtics. The Super-Sonics' Spencer Haywood led all scorers with 33 points, one more than Boston's Jo Jo White.

In the NBA Saturday, it was: Buffalo 97, Cincinnati 87; Chicago 113, New York 108; Baltimore 110, Atlanta 102; Philadelphia 130, Phoenix 119; Milwaukee 135, Detroit 119; Portland 125, Cleveland 102, and Golden State 128, Boston 106.

Jack Marin's 28 points paced Baltimore's streaking Bullets to their sixth straight victory. Cazzie Russell, who hit a key three-point play with 51 seconds remaining, fired in 31 points.

Atlantic Coast Conference football games averaged 27,557 fans a game last season.

'Fade Away' Your Gray

Time-lapse photographs show how gradual action of Grecian Formula 16 lets him control just how much gray he slowly gets rid of—some of it or all of it.

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y.—Thousands of men all over the country are discovering they don't have to dye their hair a solid dark color to look years younger. Grecian Formula 16 is not a dark messy dye. It is a colorless liquid as easy to use as hair tonic. Used every day, the gray slowly fades away and is replaced by natural-looking color. The change occurs so slowly over a period of time even closest associates don't notice it happening. The user has complete control of just how much gray he slowly gets rid of—some of it or all of it. Once the desired results are obtained weekly use thereafter is all that's necessary. The hair definitely does not have a dyed look. Get Grecian Formula 16 today at

Follow That Bouncing Ball

Hill's Dramatic Birdie Forced 3-Way Playoff

By BOB GREEN
Associated Press Golf Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Oh, I'll go out and chase it around and try not to hit too many people," was Dave Hill's laconic assessment of his game plan for today's 18-hole playoff for the title and the $25,000 first prize in the Glen Campbell-Los Angeles Open golf tournament.

The slim, dark Hill, a sometimes bad boy who has had countless run-ins with golf-dom's authorities, canned a dramatic 30-foot birdie putt on the final hole to tie George Archer and Tommy Aaron at the end of 72 holes Sunday and force the extra round.

All had 72-hole totals of 270, 14 under par on the 6,823-yard Rancho Park Golf Course. Hill, the last man to finish, and the 6-foot-6 Archer each had a five-under-par 66 on the sunny final day and Aaron, who sported a three-stroke lead going into the round, had a 69.

Loyal Dallas Fans Greeted Cowboys

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The loyal hometown fans made it to Super Bowl VI town before the Miami Dolphins and the Dallas Cowboys arrived Sunday night, so—like loyal hometown fans—they went out to greet the teams.

"This reception is a big surprise to us," said Cowboy Coach Tom Landry. "We had a big sendoff in Dallas, but we didn't expect anything like this here."

Some 125 fans clustered at the airport to see the Cowboys come in. More crowded in the motel lobby where the team is staying.

About 75 persons jammed into the reception room at the airport gate that the Dolphins filed through and others gathered at the hotel where the team is headquartered.

"This is something," said Miami placekicker Garo Yepremian in amazement.

Though short and bald, Yepremian was easy to spot—he wore a bright red sportcoat, a red and white striped shirt and a red tie, compliments of his own tie-manufacturing firm.

"Yeah, the business has really picked up," he said, showing the "Garo Yepremian" label in his neckwear.

Two teammates, running backs Jim Kiick and Larry Csonka, were thinking about the Dallas Doomsday Defense that made them National Conference champions.

"They're a good defensive team but we've faced good defensive teams before," Kiick said. "I don't think we'll have trouble running against them ... if we play like we are capable of playing."

Csonka was somewhat more respectful of the Cowboys.

"Sure, they have a great defensive team and hell, yes, we're going to have a tough time with them, but that doesn't mean we're not going to try," Csonka said.

The Miami players weren't the only Dolphins at their motel. "Jimbo" and "Tinker-belle," two real dolphins, were imported from a Gulfport, Miss., resort to frolic in the motel pool.

Tight end Billy Truax thinks the American Conference winners are the toughest team Dallas will be facing all year.

"They had to be, to get where they are," he said.

"They are aggressive. It's their aggressiveness I respect," added reserve quarterback Craig Morton. "We haven't seen much of them, but we know they're going to be tough."

Dallas and Miami begin their pressurized workout today. The Dolphins will use the Tulane practice field behind the stadium where a sellout crowd will attend Sunday's game. The Cowboys will use the New Orleans Saints practice field in suburban Metairie.

College Football Season Is Ended

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Nine days into 1972, the 1971 college football season finally ended.

After what may have seemed like a million regular season contests, a thousand bowls and a hundred all-star games ... it's over.

The last straw was the Lions American Bowl, won Sunday by the North All-Stars 27-8 before 20,137 fans at Tampa Stadium and a national television audience. It wasn't exactly a classic finish, but it was a finish.

North quarterback Van Brownson, Jerry Tagge's backup man for national champion Nebraska, fired an 88-yard scoring pass to Bob Christiansen of UCLA and another West Coast hero, Jackie Brown of Stanford, sprinted 22 yards to score and spark the favored Yankees.

The South kept throwing, but even 55 attempts through the air by Brian Sipe of San Diego State and Steve Judy of Texas Christian couldn't make up for a bagful of first half boo-boos.

Stable Vincent of Rice fumbled for the South at the North 12 to set the stage for Brownson's cross-country bomb to Christiansen that made it 7-0 late in the first period.

Iowa tackle Larry Horton put on a one-man show of muscle to hike the count to 14-0 when he smothered a punt by Florida A&M's John Champion and pounced on the ball in the end zone.

The shape of things to come.

- Prediction
The Beetle will be around for years to come.
- Prediction
Someone else somewhere will introduce a new economy car and there will be lots of excitement.
- Prediction
The excitement will die down.
- Prediction
As in the past, people who own old Volkswagens will trade them in for new Volkswagens because (we guess) they like Volkswagens.
- Prediction
Our engineers will continue to improve the way the car works and our stylists will continue to be frustrated.
- Prediction
Sometime in 1972, the Beetle will become the most popular single model automobile ever made in the world, bypassing the Model T Ford with production of over 15 million vehicles.
- Prediction
We won't let that last prediction go to our heads.

The Worry Clinic The Secret Is Participation

Note Dr. Jessup's reason for joining the Toastmaster's instead of other splendid men's Luncheon Clubs in his city. For "audience participation" is a basic secret of human interest. It's also the "sugar" that star salesmen employ to get your name on the dotted line!

By GEORGE W. CRANE
Ph.D., M.D.
Case S-565, Dr. P.W. Jessup is a Dental Surgeon of North Carolina who was visiting in our home recently.

He and my son Daniel served together in the Dental Corps in Thailand and now are back in private practice.
"Dr. Crane," he began, "a number of Fayetteville patients very graciously invited me to attend their men's luncheon club meetings.
"And I appreciated the good fellowship as well as occasional speeches by guest lecturers.
"But I decided to join Toastmasters. Do you know why?

"Well, it gives its members a chance to speak for possibly 3 minutes.
"Thus, at the usual noon luncheon, maybe 5 or 10 members can get up and obtain excellent public platform experience.
"And by the end of the month, most of the members have had such a chance.
"Besides, our speeches are then criticized briefly so we learn our mistakes, as noted by the listeners.
"I find that many lawyers and business executive thus use our noon meeting as a preview for their longer talks later on before local civic groups.

"Since I am not too fluent a speaker, I much prefer this helpful experience to listening to outside orators."
Audience Participation
Please notice Dr. Jessup's final sentence.
"Audience participation" is a basic secret of human interest. And you can gain "audience participation" in two ways.
First, if you as an outside speaker deal with practical problems, such as these Case Records, you let the listeners (and readers) vicariously participate.
For by empathy, they can thus identify with the familiar situations you describe.
That's one reason why Jesus employed everyday cases (parables) to hold the fascinated attention of his vast outdoor congregations.
The second way to indulge in "audience participation" is actually to let your listeners or readers do something.
Dr. Jessup usually gains more by delivering his own 3-minute talk than by listening to the usual 30-minute imported lecturer.

In my professional speeches all over the continent, you millions of listeners will recall that I not only use the same "Case Method" employed in this daily column.
But I also ask you to participate in that "Positive Suggestion" experiment with your uplifted hands!
When our children were young, they attended the Presbyterian Sunday School in our neighborhood, then accompanied Mrs. Crane and me to the Chicago Temple in the Loop, where I taught the Dixon Bible Class at noon.
"Daddy," 9-year-old Judy informed me as we had dinner at the Chinese restaurant next to the Temple, "your sermon was much better today than last Sunday."

So I thanked her for her compliment but asked why she felt it was much better today than last Sunday.
"Because you talked about Daniel and David and me," she naively replied.
Daniel and David were then 7 and 6 years of age.
So "audience participation" involves not just the use of examples from the daily experience of the listeners, but even naming them discreetly.
Older adults don't freely admit their elation at being named, but they register to it just as eagerly as did Judy.
So send for my booklet "Public Speaking Strategy" enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 cents.
(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

Team Study Of Mansions

RALEIGH (AP) — A study commission left Raleigh Sunday for North Dakota on the first leg of a five-day trip to see governor's residences in six states.
The Executive Residence Building Commission, created by the 1971 General Assembly, will visit Utah Monday, Arkansas and Louisiana Tuesday, Florida Wednesday and Tennessee Thursday.
Within the next few weeks the group will make a one-day trip to Pennsylvania and New Jersey.
The General Assembly decided that the state's 40-room Victorian executive mansion, completed in 1889, is inadequate as a residence. The commission has said it would like to see the mansion preserved and used for formal state functions, for offices for the first lady and for overnight accommodations for official visitors.

ACCEPTED
Benjamin Norman Thompson of Winterville has been accepted for admission to Campbell College with the freshman class enrolling in the fall of 1972.
A student of D. H. Conley High School, he is the son of the Rev. and Mrs. Horace G. Thompson of Winterville. He plans to specialize in the study of pre-law.

What do you bid now?
A.—This is a very powerful hand opposite a partner who has jumped the bidding. You had an original valuation of 17 points, which is brought up to 18 when one is added for the fifth heart after partner has supported the suit. In normal circumstances it is our practice to show aces in this case, but it will be seen that there is not sufficient space to permit the showing of all three aces. Our suggestion is, therefore, to bid five hearts. Partner will deduce from this that you have all the outside aces, for if you had only two aces you would show each of them. He will realize, therefore, that your great concern is with the hearts.

Weaver Dies In New Delhi

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Fred H. Weaver, a former vice president for university relations of the Consolidated University of North Carolina, is dead at the age of 56.

Weaver died Saturday in New Delhi, India, where he was serving as a higher education representative with the Ford Foundation. He collapsed while playing tennis.

Memorial services will be at 2 p.m. Wednesday at the Episcopal Chapel of the Cross in Chapel Hill.

Weaver was an Aberdeen native and a 1937 graduate of UNC at Chapel Hill. He earned his master's degree at Harvard, attended Columbia and earned a doctorate at Duke.

He served with the U.S. State Department as a vice consul in Rio de Janeiro at the beginning of World War II, then became a Navy pilot.

He became dean of students at Chapel Hill after the war and in 1961 became dean of student affairs. He was named secretary of the consolidated university in 1962 and served from 1963-65 as vice president for administration. He resigned from the post late in 1965 to take a job with the American Council on Education in Washington, D.C.

Weaver returned to Chapel Hill in January 1966 to take the newly created post of vice president for university relations.

Farm Tips

By Dr. J. W. Pou
Agricultural Specialist
Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., N.A.

Many North Carolina farmers grew grain sorghum for the first time last year, but it won't be the last for some of them.

The grain crop was grown sparingly in the state prior to recent troubles with corn blight. Farmers have more than doubled the acreage planted in 1970. About 145,000 acres were harvested last fall.

Some farmers are growing sorghum as a second crop behind small grain, particularly barley. This has been a promising combination. The only real problem growers have run into is weed and grass control.

There are some other problems that have been noted with North Carolina's largest-ever grain sorghum crop. Some of the ailments are only eye sores, while others are more serious.

The "eye ache" problems are related to plant irregularities, according to A. D. Stuart, extension agronomist at North Carolina State University. Unusually tall plants frequently occur in fields of otherwise dwarf plants.

Stuart explained that these irregular plants can be caused by mutation, by mixture of seed with other varieties or types, or by cross pollination from pollen from undesirable plants such as Johnson grass or sudargrass.

"The Johnson grass types, particularly, should be controlled," Stuart said. These result when pollen from Johnson grass blows onto the grain sorghum seed fields and cross pollination occurs. These plants can be identified by the rhizomes growing with the roots. They will reproduce from these rootstocks unless they are removed from the field.

The other types of irregular plants should not be allowed to produce seed. These seed could produce tall, weedy plants in the following year's crop. Crop rotation and the use of proper chemical weed control on the tall non-Johnson grass types will help.

The NCSU specialist suggested that farmers shouldn't be concerned about tall plants which result from mutation. These are not under the control of the seed producer, and they are likely to occur in any year.

"Mutations, in fact, aren't all bad," Stuart noted. "It was a mutation that gave us the short or dwarf type of grain sorghum in the first place and made the crop easier to harvest."

Perhaps the number one problem with grain sorghum, particularly in Eastern North Carolina is birds. Birds, more than any other problem, virtually eliminated the crop in the east until bird-tolerant varieties were introduced.

But even where tolerant varieties are being grown, the recommendation is not to allow the grain to stay in the field too long after maturity. Research shows that birds will eat these varieties if the grain is allowed to remain in the field until completely dry.

VACATION SICKNESS

MUNICH (UPI)—One in every 20 West Germans gets sick while on vacation, according to statistics released by the German automobile club.

The club will hold a seminar here in next June to discuss ways of providing medical treatment and assistance for the vacationer. About 2,000 doctors and psychologists are expected to attend.

Tobacco TIPS

By SAM J. WEEKS

One of the elements found in mixed tobacco fertilizer is chlorine. Small quantities of chlorine tend to increase tobacco yields to a moderate extent. However, excessive quantities of chlorine tend to injure plant roots and produce a dingy, dull grey tobacco with a soggy characteristic and an undesirable odor, and poor burning quality. Excessive chlorine also increases the tendency of the tobacco plant to take up ammonium nitrogen.

It has been recommended for several years not to apply more than 30 pounds of chlorine per acre for the production of best quality tobacco. When more than 30 pounds of chlorine per acre is used, it may have no effect, or it may have an adverse effect, producing poor quality tobacco depending largely upon the season.

When large quantities of chlorine are applied without an early wet period to leach part of its down, excessive amounts may be absorbed by the plant and seriously affect the quality of tobacco.

In addition to the chlorine applied in mixed tobacco fertilizer, soil fumigants used for nematode control also contribute chlorine. Most of the soil fumigants used supply about 20 pounds of available chlorine when applied in the row.

In recent tests conducted by Dr. C. B. McCants, tobacco receiving 60 pounds of chlorine per acre averaged five per cent less per pounds than tobacco receiving 30 pounds. Tobacco receiving 120 pounds of chlorine dropped 18 per cent in price. The tobacco receiving in Addition of soybeans in 1972, along with sorghum and barley to corn and wheat as crops that may be used to maintain an ASCS feed grain base, further complicates your decision making. In trying to decide which crop or crops to plant, one of the first questions to come up is: What does it cost to produce it?

Farm Scene

A study was made by Clemson University to help estimate your costs. Clemson University figures are representative of the Eastern Coastal Plains. You would expect some variation between costs there and in the Delta, the other major soybean-producing area in the Southeast. Actually, though, there doesn't seem to be much difference in excess of 30 pounds of chlorine per acre, when examined by both domestic and export companies, was considered extremely undesirable.

I will be glad to discuss your tobacco fertilization program with you and make suggestions as to how to reduce the amount of chlorine to be applied to your tobacco fields.

Microfilming has grown into a $500 million business since World War II.

per acre costs.
According to a survey of state soybean yield champions, Delta farmers tend to spend somewhat more per acre for herbicides and labor but less for seed, machinery costs and fertilizer than do Southeastern growers. No doubt these costs are influenced by large acreages and fore fertile lands in the Delta. Following are the most often mentioned per acre cost figures from Delta soybean producers:

Seed	$3.50
Fertilizer & lime	7.50
Machinery	18.00
Labor	10.00
Herbicides	8.00
Total cost	$147.00

At these costs, and assuming at least $2.50 for beans next fall, anything above 20 bushels to the acre yield should be profitable.
