Large Trade Deficit For U.S. Cited

By BILL NEIKIRK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation recorded its largest trade deficit in history in 1971, when the value of imports exceeded exports by more than $2 billion, the Commerce Department said today.

It was the first balance-of-trade deficit since 1888, when the nation's trade figures were $33 million in the red.

The department said the deficit was caused by a 14 per cent increase in imports and a 2 per cent expansion in exports.

The actual deficit for 1971 was $2.047 billion.

The department's Bureau of Economic Analysis said the trade balance grew sharply worse the last three months of the year to a record quarterly deficit of $1.535 billion, mainly because of dock strikes.

"Trade movements were severely distorted in the last two quarters of 1971" the bureau said. "Shipments in the third quarter, notably September, were heavy in anticipation of the dock workers' strike at East and Gulf Coast ports on Oct. 1.

"Subsequently, there was a sharp slowdown in trade during the fourth quarter when work stoppages crippled port operations for nearly two months," the bureau said.

The department said exports reached $43.555 billion while imports totaled $45.602.

The Commerce Department prepared the final figures on the differences between what the nation's businesses sell overseas and what foreign enterprises ship into the country.

The deficit through the first 11 months of 1971 was $1.875 billion, a massive $4.7-billion turnaround in the balance-of-trade figures from the same period in 1970.

But the Nixon administration says the picture should get better as 1972 wears on, with a chance that the traditional surplus in foreign trade will be restored before this year is over.

One reason is the new monetary agreement in which the dollar is worth less and foreign currencies worth more in exchange markets, a situation that makes imports more expensive and U.S. exports cheaper in foreign markets.

At first, the monetary agreement may actually hurt the nation's trade statistics, a high Treasury official said. Imports having a higher dollar cost are continuing to enter the country on the basis of business commitments and plans made before the currency realignment of last December.

But the official, Jack F. Bennett, deputy Treasury undersecretary for monetary affairs, told a Senate subcommittee:

"The U.S. trade balance should be reflecting substantial changes in relative prices and cost are increasingly reflected in new market decisions."

Commerce Secretary Maurice H. Stans said the nation has a fighting chance, as he put it, to convert the huge 1971 deficit into a surplus.

Bank Of Winterville Reports Growth Of Resources In 1971

WINTERVILLE—The Bank of Winterville, at its 66th annual meeting Monday night, reported total resources of $6,082,196.19 as of Dec. 31, 1971, a gain of $1,079,579.87 over 1970.

President C. D. Langston reported, "The bank experienced a continuous growth in the last year even though the farmers of our county experienced a great loss in their income due to the fact of the storm Ginger." He added that the bank "is in a stronger financial position than ever before to serve its customers in Pitt County."

Langston said that earnings for The Bank of Winterville during 1971 amounted to $372,239.09 as compared to $266,235.54 in 1970.

The president pointed out that the bank contributed $358,086.84 to the community in salaries, employee's benefits, interest paid on savings accounts, and other expenses.

Stockholders earnings per share, before taxes, was $8.46, he reported, and earnings after taxes were $7.00.

"The people of Greenville and vicinity continuously contributed substantially to the bank's growth," Langston noted.

Two new members were elected to the bank's board of directors Monday night. Kenneth K. Dews and John R. Farley will join six other board members who were reelected. They are Langston, W. J. Bullock, W. A. Weatherington, J. Miltonmay, Sen Vernon E. White, and John F. Minges.

Officers who were elected at the director's meeting following the annual session included: Lanston, president: Sen. White, vice president: Tommy Langston, cashier: and Grace Adams, assistant cashier.

Shirley Says Hat In Ring

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Rep. Shirley Chisholm of New York, the nation's first black congresswoman, formally announced today that she is a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination.

She has openly campaigned for her party's nomination since late last year and made it official at a news conference at the Concord Baptist Church in Brooklyn.

The fiery former schoolteacher from the Bedford-Stuyvesant slums said: "We have looked in vain to the Nixon administration for the courage, spirit, character and the words to lift us, to bring out the best in us, to rekindle in each of us our faith in the American dream."

Mrs. Chisholm, 47, who went to Congress after serving four years in the state legislature, has made no bones about her intentions in numerous campaign speeches around the country for the past several months.

On Jan. 2, she told a Broadway theater audience during an invitation appearance: "I dare to run for the presidency," she added, "The hour has come in America when we can't be passive recipients."

She was equally frank about her intentions at Jacksonville, Fla., a few days later when she described herself as the only "unique candidate" in the Democratic race and vowed she wouldn't drop out of the competition she hadn't yet officially entered.

Saying she had been urged to drop out to avoid splitting the liberal vote with New York Mayor John V. Lindsay and Sen. George S. McGovern of South Dakota, Mrs. Chisholm told a Florida college rally:

"I'm black and I'm a woman. I can go into New Mexico and Texas and talk to the Chicanos in their own language. Why not ask Lindsay and McGovern to drop out?"

In addition to Lindsay and McGovern, others already in the race for the Democratic nomination are Sens. Vance Hartke of Indiana, Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota, Henry M. Jackson of Washington, and Edmund S. Muskie of Maine, former Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy of Minnesota, Mayor Sam Yorty of Los Angeles and Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama.

Warsaw Summit Meeting Begins

PRAGUE (AP) — Communist party and government leaders of the Soviet Union and its six East European allies opened a summit meeting today on European security and relations with the West.

The rulers of the Soviet Union, Poland, East Germany, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Romania and Bulgaria met in the Prague Castle, former seat of the kings of Bohemia.

Police standing 25 yards apart lined the street as the delegations arrived by limousines from embassies and state guest houses. It was freezing cold, and few Czechs were on the street.

Radio Prague said the conference would produce a "new initiative for peace and security in Europe." This was expected to consist of a specific date or other concrete proposals for the all-European security conference the Kremlin has been seeking.

Rude Pravo, the Czechoslovak Communist party newspaper, said today that "a situation has arisen that permits immediate preparations for an all-European conference that could meet within as early a time as possible."

Now 3-Way GOP Contest

Gardner Joins Race For N.C. Governor

RALEIGH (AP) — Republican Jim Gardner, who ran unsuccessfully for the state's top elected position four years ago, said today he will seek the GOP nomination for governor of North Carolina.

Gardner, whose candidacy had been expected, told a gathering of some 200 supporters he had disappointed his backers earlier.

"I will not let them down again. Today I am here to announce that I will be a candidate for governor of North Carolina," Gardner said.

His entry created a threeman race for the Republican nomination in the May 6 primary.

State Rep. Jim Holshouser of Boone filed as a candidate Monday with the state Board of Elections. Thurman Willard of Guilford County also has announced he will seek the nomination.

Gardner, a Rocky Mount businessman and former congressman, was defeated by Gov. Bob Scott in the 1968 election.

Holshouser paid his $385 filing fee with a big roll of bills which he said had been raised by his home folks in Watauga County.

He immediately told a news conference he is confident he will win the primary "and move on to victory in November."

"The majority of Republicans stand with me," Holshouser said in a prepared statement.

The winner of the election, he said, "is going to be one who brings depth and substance, rather than the glossy exterior and generalities and cliches about a better life."

Holshouser, 37, who has served four terms in the General Assembly, said, "The people of North Carolina have been saying louder and louder in recent elections that they're ready for a change in Raleigh ... Our people are ready to vote for a Republican governor—not perhaps just because he's a Republican, but because they want to pump new blood into the veins of state government to get it moving."

He added, "Republicans realize that we must present to the people a man who puts the people's interests first and not his own personal interests."

Noting his legislative experience, Holshouser told newsmen, "What people today want is someone who has the experience to understand state government and our problems and the courage to do something about them."

He said the governor's job "is going to be a full-time job, not just a stop in the children's game of hopscotch."

Holshouser, a Boone attorney, resigned last year as state GOP chairman when he announced his candidacy for governor.

Enrollment At PTI Said Up By 20 Percent

Dr. William E. Fulford, president of Pitt Technical Institute, reported on the enrollment for winter quarter at the board of trustees regular meeting last night.

Dr. Fulford pointed out that student enrollment for this year's winter quarter was up approximately 20 percent over last year.

He attributed the increase to new programs being offered and an increase in enrollment in certain curriculum programs.

It was reported to the board that the self-study for reaffirmation of accreditation by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools was progressing smoothly.

"We now believe that our steering committee can begin making reports concerning findings and possibly recommendations to the trustees at the March meeting," Dr. Fulford explained.

Carter Smith of Fountain was sworn in as a new member of the board of trustees last night.

Dr. Fulford announced PTI had received three gifts since the last meeting, including $2,000 from Miss Jesse Roundtree Moye to be used toward purchasing a U.S. Flag and flag pole, $100 in cash from Mrs. David J. Whichard II, and a used bookkeeping machine donated by Wilkerson's Funeral Home.

The trustees officially approved accpetance of the gifts and requested Fulford to express the institute's appreciation.

The board also approved regulations relating to the purpose, role and policies of the Campus Security Officers. In addition to handling a number of routine matters, the board approved certain budget transfers.

Small Urban Center Goal

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Bob Scott said today he is convinced that the foundation of rural development in North Carolina "must rest on the creation of a network of smaller urban centers" throughout the state.

Scott said these smaller centers of population, along with larger cities, "can maintain a reasonable balance between where people live, where they can find jobs and where they can obtain the level of services that we have come to expect in today's world."

The governor made his remarks in a prepared talk at the State Conference on Rural Development.

The governor said there are many "cities" in North Carolina that go unrecognized as such. As an example, he pointed to the North Wilkesboro area where a cluster of over 16,000 people is centered around a city of just over 3,000.

"An urban cluster of this size," Scott explained, "can provide a level of public services that will be a major factor in attracting job opportunities—not only for the people within the cluster, but also for people in surrounding rural areas."

Scott pointed out that Goldsboro had a 1970 city population of 26,000 which served as a center for an urban cluster that totaled 50,000: Rockingham was listed as 6,000, but had a urban cluster of 25,000: and Asheboro had a city population of 11,000, but a total urban cluster of 26,000.

"If we are to achieve rural development in North Carolina," the governor said, "we must accept a statewide policy of supporting the growth of these smaller centers of population throughout the state. The creation of new job opportunities in our rural areas depends largely upon our ability to develop an urban support base in these small-to-medium-size clusters of people."

Scott noted the decade of the 1960's witnessed a rather large movement of people out of agricultural employment in North Carolina.

"The decline in agricultural employment," he said, "does not mean that agricultural output is declining. Quite the contrary, we have seen our total agricultural output and income continue an upward trend over the years."

Too Many Greenvilles

By JERRY RAYNOR

Miss Elizabeth Copeland, librarian for the Greenville City libraries, says she is confident the new bookmobile "will get here despite all the Greenvilles."

A few days ago a driver left with the new unit from the city of Wooster, Ohio, headed for Greenville. The only problem, Miss Copeland states, is that the man evidently confused the two Carolinas and wound up in Greenville, South Carolina.

The first indication that Greenville, North Carolina's bookmobile had gone astray was a call from Spartanburg, S.C., telling library people here he had discovered his error and was on his way.

Some time later another call came through. "Where am I? Where am I supposed to be? I'm in Greenville, but I understand now it's the next one I'm suppose to be in," the driver told Miss Copeland. He was calling from Greenville, Tennesee.

Miss Copeland said she told him "Get in your bookmobile and from where you are head for the Atlantic Ocean. Greenville, North Carolina is near the water, and not in the mountains."

The librarian noted she hoped no one would head him in the direction of yet another southern Greenville, the one in Mississippi.

Agency Reducing

By KENNETH J. FREED
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agency for International Development today formally announced a major reorganization plan that calls for a 25 per cent cut in personnel.

John A. Hannah, administrator for the agency which handles the American foreign aid program, said in a letter to AID employes the dropping of more than 3,000 employes is part of an efficiency and modernization plan to make the foreign aid program more reflective of modern needs.

The reorganization, disclosed Monday by The Associated Press, also aims at implementing a major reform spelled out by President Nixon in 1970 but not yet approved by Congress.

AID already has been cut back 30 per cent in personnel since mid-1968, when it had 17,569 employes. On Jan. 1, AID had 12,957 people on its payroll overseas and in the United States.

Hannah said most of the new reductions will take place in the overseas staff. He added that the manpower cutbacks will depend on Congress approving incentives for the retirement of older AID workers.

The director outlined five other areas in the reorganization plan. These include a new bureau for population and humanitarian assistance, which will incorporate previous separate AID programs for population and family planning: the Food for Peace program: disaster relief: and support for voluntary agencies that provide overseas assistance.

Hannah said a bureau for technical assistance will be established to provide technological leadership in handling basic human problems.

Japanese Soldier On Guam Has Emerged

AGANA, Guam (AP) — A man who told officials he is a former Japanese army sergeant and has been hiding in the jungle since World War II says, "It all seems like a dream."

"I keep thinking I'll wake up soon," Shoichi Yokoi said as he met with newsmen after two fishermen spotted him and subdued him near his cave home on Monday.

Guam Gov. Carlos Gamacho said first investigation showed no reason to disbelieve Yokoi's claim to be a Japanese army survivor, but Camacho said he knew of no way to establish the claim conclusively.

With Camacho standing at his side and honorary Japanese Consul James Hintaku serving as an interpreter, Yokoi described his life since Americans landed an invasion force in 1944.

He said he and nine other soldiers fled into the jungle in 1944 and the group gradually dwindled to two other men and himself. He said he had been alone since the two others died within a short time eight years ago.

The 5-foot-4 Yokoi said he is 58. Doctors said he weighed only 90 pounds and was anemic, but was otherwise in surprisingly good physical condition.

Yokoi said he was afraid to come out of hiding because he didn't know what would happen to him. He said he subsisted on fish, coconuts and wild vegetation.

Camacho said he will return Yokoi to Japan as soon as possible.

In Japan, officials of Aichi prefecture reported that official notification of Yokoi's death was made to his father, Eijiro, on July 30, 1945, two weeks before Japan surrendered.

Eijiro died 23 years ago at the age of 68 and his mother, Tsuru, 14 years ago at 70. Shoichi had no brothers or sisters, but Osamu Yokoi, 42, who was adopted by Shoichi's mother 17 years ago, said she never believed the army's report of her son's death.

"If his mother had lived, she would be extremely happy," he added.

Bunzo Minagawa, 52, another Japanese veteran who was found on Guam 12 years ago, said he lived with Yokoi and eight others for about a month in the jungle 28 years ago but separated because of fear that a large group would be hard to hide.

"I can't believe he lived alone in the jungles," said Minagawa, who spent 16 years on the island in the company of another Japanese soldier, Tadashi Ito, 51.

SUB PULLED OFF

A WARM WINTER'S DAY . . . . This old mule, standing motionless under a warm January sun in his small pasture on 14th Street near the Charles Street intersection, seems to be enjoying the unseasonably warm weather just as most Pitt County residents did yesterday. Big-Four Cereal Makers Attacked

By MICHAEL J. REILLY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Trade Commission has acted to break up the multimillion-dollar breakfast-food industry with a proposed complaint against the nation's four largest cereal manufacturers.

The commission said Kellogg Co., General Mills, Inc., General Foods Corp. and Quaker Oats Co. maintain a highly concentrated market through such practices as false advertising and price fixing.

They have "illegally monopolized" cereal promotion and production for the past 30 years, the FTC said Monday.

The proposed complaint said the four engage in "proliferation of brands and trademark production; artificial differentiation of products; unfair methods of competition in advertising and product promotion; restrictive shelf-space-control programs and acquisitions of competitors."

Kellogg replied that the FTC allegations were "based on theories that have never been tried or tested."

A spokesman said the commission "has said it is wrong to be big, wrong to be efficient, and wrong to succeed."

A General Mills spokesman called the action "legally untenable."

"General Mills will resist today's action," the company said following Monday's FTC announcement.

General Foods said it "remained convinced that the cereal industry is extremely competitive and we should know, since we have to struggle every day to maintain our competitive position in the marketplace."

The four companies, the FTC said, control 91 per cent of the ready-to-eat-cereal market in the United States.

They would have 60 days to respond to the proposed complaint under normal FTC practice, then it would become final. After that, the matter may be appealed to federal courts.

The commission proposal urged:

—"Divestiture of assets, including plants and other facilities, for the formation of new corporate entities to engage in the manufacture, distribution and sale of ... cereals."

—"Prohibition of acquisition of stock or assets of firms engaged in the business of manufacturing or selling" cereals.

—Prohibition, also, of "any practices found to be anticompetitive."

First Copies Of Encyclopedia

TEL AVIV (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II of Britain, President Nixon and President Zalman Shazar of Israel will receive the first three completed volumes of the "Encyclopaedia Judaica," it was announced Monday at the official ceremony marking publication.

The work comprises 16 volumes and was compiled by 300 editors and 1,800 contributors. The publishers, Keter Publishing House Ltd., said it is "the most comprehensive guide to the Jews and their civilization."

Soviet Skippers To Enter Pleas

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — A Soviet fishing fleet commander and two ship masters are to enter pleas Friday in U.S. District Court on charges of illegal intrusion into U.S. waters.

The officers were in charge of two Russian herring boats seized Jan. 18 by the U.S. Coast Guard in the Bering Sea.

Facing federal criminal charges for conducting illegal fishery support activities within the 12-mile U.S. zone are Vladimir Artemov, Igor Bovtun and Nikolai Pavluk.

Artemov is commander of an 80-boat herring fleet working in the Bering Sea. Bovtun and Pavluk are skippers of the Soviet vessels seized slightly more than 9 miles from St. Matthew Island, about 200 miles from the coast of western Alaska.

The Russians were arraigned Monday before U.S. District Court Judge James VonDerheydt after being flown from Adak Island in the Aleutians. They were realeased on their own recognizance to the custody of Albert Ambrossov, vice consul from the Soviet Embassy in Washington, D.C.

Also pending in federal court is a civil complaint filed by U.S. Atty. G. Kent Edwards which asks forfeiture of the ships, their gear and stores.

"The vessels were involved in a transfer of fish from the Kolyvan, a trawler, to the processing ship Lamut," Edwards said before the arraignment.

The judge, speaking slowly through an interpreter, advised the Soviets of their rights. He told their attorney, James Wannamaker of Anchorage, that he would accept pleas before Friday if they were ready to enter them.

The three men sat quietly, nodding their heads and answering "da" or "yes" when asked through the interpreter if they understood the court procedure.

Artemov and Bovtun, both clean-shaven young men, wore blue uniform blazers with gold patches and buttons. Pavluk, middle-aged and slightly balding, wore a dark uniform. None made any statement to the court and they refused to meet with newsmen.

If convicted, the men face a maximum fine of $100,000 each, plus confiscation of their vessels, gear and cargo.

In a letter to ECU President Leo W. Jenkins, Dr. Allan Barclay cited the chapter's establishment of local scholarships and a chapter library as worthy of "national recognition."

He also cited Dr. William Grossnickle, facutly advisor for the ECU chapter who is currently Regional Vice President for the fraternity, as a "valuable member of the Psi Chi National Council."

Presidential Candidates To Be Assigned Guards

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secret Service agents are expected to begin guarding presidential candidates early next month, with at least eight of the 1972 entries likely to be offered federal bodyguards.

A panel assigned to decide which candidates are entitled to get protection is scheduled to meet Thursday.

The law provides for protection of major candidates for president and vice president unless they decline it.

The commission must figure out how to determine who in the crowded 1972 field are the major candidates.

At preliminary sessions, aides to commission members have agreed generally that the national public-opinion polls should be the basis for initial selection of candidates to protect.

The problem is to set a minimum standing in those polls as the criterion for major candidacy, and that is expected to be a major topic Thursday.

The commission members are Sens. Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., and Hugh Scott, R-Pa., the majority and minority leaders; Speaker of the House Carl Albert, Republican Leader Gerald R. Ford, and former Sen. Thomas Kuchel of California, a public member chosen by the other panelists.

The goal of the panel is to begin coverage by Feb. 1 or Feb. 7. The first presidential primary election is in New Hampshire on March 7.

One source said a standard almost certainly would be set to cover such entries as Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota, who has been campaigning for more than a year but still is near the bottom of the Democratic ranking in public-opinion polls.

In addition, it was understood, there will be a more general category to cover entries who are not counted by such polls, but obviously are major candidates, such as Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace.

This category also would cover Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts, who ranks high in the polls but insists he will not be a 1972 candidate.

In addition, the commission will have to decide whether the two Republicans challenging President Nixon in the presidential primaries, Reps. John M. Ashbrook of Ohio and Paul N. McCloskey of California, should receive coverage.

Sens. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine and Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota are certain to be offered protection, whatever standard is set.

Muskie tops the Democratic polls, followed by Kennedy and Humphrey.

Trailing them in the current surveys but likely prospects for offers of protection are New York Mayor John V. Lindsay, McGovern, former Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy and Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington.

Air Force Proposes To Burn Herbicide Stocks

By ROBERT A. DOBKIN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force proposes to burn in Texas or Illinois 2.3 million gallons of a plant killer that was banned in Vietnam after tests showed it may have caused animal birth defects.

The disposal methods were proposed in an environmental-impact statement filed earlier this month with federal and state agencies in Texas, Illinois and Mississippi.

The herbicide, code-named Orange, would be burned in commercial incinerators in Deer Park, Tex., or at Sauget, Ill., across the Mississippi River from St. Louis.

The proposal, a copy of which was obtained by The Associated Press following inquiries, is subject to comment by the agencies to which it was submitted. They have 30 days to respond. If significant controversy is aroused, the Air Force may hold a public hearing before turning in the final impact statement to the Environmental Protection Agency.

"This action is not considered to have an adverse effect on the environment," the Air Force said. "The probable environmental consequences of the proposed action will be minor or insignificant."

Orange was the defoliant most commonly used in Vietnam to strip away jungle cover concealing enemy troops and supplies.

The Defense Department banned its use in 1970, shortly after the Agriculture Department banned the herbicide 2,4,-5-T—the principal ingredient of Orange—around homes, water areas and food crops. This followed laboratory tests indicating it retarded growth and caused birth defects in rodents.

The Air Force was left with 2.3 million gallons or Orange worth $16.9 million, most of which is stored in 55-gallon steel drums in Vietnam.

Although two sites are under consideration for disposal, the Air Force has not made the final selection and no contracts have been let.

Under the Air Force's draft statement, the herbicide would be incinerated at a rate of 2,000 to 5,000 gallons a day, producing a total of 44.6 million pounds of carbon dioxide, a nontoxic gas, and 12.4 million pounds of hydrogen chloride, which would be converted into sodium chloride, or common salt.

"The 'adverse' environmental effects which cannot be avoided are the generation and discharge of combustion byproducts and liquid effluent residue into the atmosphere and public waterways," the Air Force said. It added that this would "not adversely affect human health, esthetically or culturally valuable surroundings, standards of living or other aspects of life."

"The alternative of no action would maintain the stock in drums at Gulfport, Miss.; Elgin Air Force Base, Fla.; Kelly AFB, Tex.; South Vietnam or other storage sites," the Air Force said. However, the drums would gradually deteriorate and leakage would cause environmental problems, the Air Force explained.

Controllers Reject Pact

OTTAWA (AP) — The strike by Canada's 1,600 air traffic controllers entered its ninth day today following the union members' overwhelming rejection of a mediated settlement.

J.R. Campbell, president of the Canadian Air Traffic Control Association, said most of the men would be ready to return to work if the government recalled Parliament and obtained legislation to end the strike, "but I don't think the prime minister is prepared to call Parliament in at this time."

Treasury Board President C. M. Drury said the government intends to "exhaust all other possibilities of settling the strike before resorting to, in effect, withdrawal of the right to strike."

By a vote of 1,390 to 247, the controllers rejected a proposed 27-month contract that would have raised their salaries 17 per cent from the current annual top of $14,600 and shortened their work week from 36 to 34½ hours. They had sought a 22 per cent raise.

Taiwan Hit By Tremors

TAIPEI (AP) — A moderately strong earthquake that hit parts of Taiwan today killed one person and destroyed or damaged several houses, police reported.

The police said a university student, Li Yung, 21, was killed in a landslide nine miles west of Hualien, in east Taiwan. Two houses were reported destroyed in Kaohsiung, a southern port, and several houses were damaged in Taitung, east Taiwan.

The quake struck at 10:07 a.m.—9:07 p.m. EST Monday—and was felt over a wide area. The Central Weather Bureau said it registered an intensity of five on a scale of six in Taitung, and four in areas of northern and southern Taiwan.

The quake's center was offshore in the Pacific about nine miles southeast of Taitung.

Bidding For Governorship

BLUEFIELD, W.Va. (AP) — John D. Rockefeller IV, nephew of Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York and former Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller of Arkansas, is bidding to become governor of West Virginia.

A former Republican who shifted from the party of his uncles after he came to West Virginia as an antipoverty worker, the 34-year-old oil empire heir has been secretary of state since 1969.

He announced Monday at a news conference that he will seek the Democratic nomination to run for governor in this fall's election. Gov. Arch A. Moore Jr. is expected to seek re-election on the Republican ticket.

Accompanied by his wife Sharon, daughter of Sen. Charles A. Percy, R-Ill., Rockefeller promised that if elected he would "bring West Virginia one standard of government, one government that listens to the people, and works for the people, all of the time."

Favor Gas Tax As Funds Source

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit Renaissance, a local civic action group which includes top officials of all four automobile companies, unanimously endorsed on Monday the principle of increasing state gasoline taxes to provide mass transportation funds.

In a departure from traditional auto industry opposition to diverting gas tax revenues to mass transit, support for the resolution came from Henry Ford II, chairman of the board of Ford Motor Co.; Richard C. Gerstenberg, chairman of the board of General Motors; Roy D. Chapin Jr., chairman of the board of American Motors, and Virgil E. Boyd, vice chairman of the board of Chrysler Corp.

LONDON (AP) — The population of England and Wales reached 48,815,000 in 1971—an increase of 2.6 million in 10 years, according to a government estimate.

Britons See Their Queen Through Eyes Of American Artist

LONDON (AP) — Britons saw their queen through an American painter's eyes today, and several thought his eyes weren't so good.

"Much too young for a start—I would say the picture has been touched up quite a bit," mused office worker Nora Davis as she contemplated the first portrait by an American of Queen Elizabeth II, who is 45 and the mother of four.

The work of Joseph Wallace King of Winston-Salem, N.C., was unveiled at the Mall Galleries near Buckingham Palace Monday.

It shows the queen in a flowing, sequined ballroom gown and cloak with a castle in the background. The picture was prominently displayed in all British newspapers.

"Few concessions to reality are made in the latest portrait of the queen," commented Terence Mullaly in the Daily Telegraph.

"What the artist has painted is an idealized American concept of queenship," Mullaly said. "He has not entirely missed a likeness, but the portrait makes little attempt to probe character.

"It tells us much more about that streak of the romantic that is so persistent in the American character. This is evident not only in the actual figure of the queen, but also in the whole conception of the picture and in the painting of landscape and sky."

Among people given a preview Monday was 20-year-old government worker Lyn Hemmings who said: "It's the queen all right. But it could be Ingrid Bergman, couldn't it?

"The artist has certainly made her attractive."

Storekeeper Gordon Stevenson, 43, thought it was "quite the most beautiful portrait of the queen I have ever seen."

The mass-circulation Daily Mirror, which headlined the picture "Her Movie-Star Majesty," asked its readers to write in with their views.

Riley-Dunbar Vows Said In Ceremony On Saturday

COLUMBIA, S.C. — The Riverland Hills Baptist Church was the setting Saturday at 3:00 p.m. for the wedding of Miss Deborah Lynn Dunbar and Clarence Gregg Riley III.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Henry Osbourne Dunbar of Columbia, S. C. formerly of Greenville, N.C., and Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Gregg Riley of Swansea, S.C.

Soloist, O. William Sapp of Lumberton, N.C. sang "We'll Walk with God" and the "Lord's Prayer." Mrs. Emmett Connor of Columbia, S.C. was the organist.

The bride wore a full length gown of white crepe. The empire bodice was designed with a round neckline and long flowing sleeves trimmed with white fur. The cathedral length train of white crepe was attached at the side and back of the empire bodice. Both the train and shirt were trimmed with white fur.

Her short, three tiered tulle veil was attached with narrow band of white fur. She carried a muff of white roses centered by a single red rose. At ther throat, she wore a plain golden cross worn by her mother and her sisters on their wedding day.

Honor attendant was Mrs. Lawrence Alan Gray, sister of the bride. Bridesmaids were Miss Julie Riley, sister of the bridegroom, and Mrs. Peter Vaden Abene, sister of the bride.

Their gowns were full length, styled with an empire waist, oval neckline and short puffed sleeves of flame orange and champagne. Their headpieces were of layers of orange tulle and material of their gowns. They carried a spray design of gladioli and carnations.

The bride's mother was attired in a princess coat of champagne crushed velvet and princess knit dress. Her flowers were talisman roses.

Mrs. Riley chose a maize lace coat and crepe dress with matching accessories. She wore a corsage of green cymbidium orchids.

Clarence Gregg Riley served as his son's best man. Ushers were Joseph Riley, brother of the bridegroom, Henry Dunbar, Jr., brother of the bride, and Kenneth Dawson.

The double ring candlelight ceremony was performed in front of the altar where white gladioli mums and snapdragons were flanked by standing brass candelabra and palms.

Mrs. Riley is a graduate of Irmo High School and attended the University of South Carolina. Mr. Riley attended the Swansea City Schools and is a graduate of Wofford College. He has just returned from active duty overseas, and is teaching at the Swansea Middle School.

The couple will reside in the St. Matthews Community.

Actress Ruth Gordon Says She Will Never Stop Working

By PEACE MOFFAT
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — When Ruth Gordon came to New York to be an actress many years ago, her New England family wasn't quite horrified, but they weren't too happy either—"Why, that's the same as being a prostitute," Miss Gordon says one distraught aunt said. But still, they backed her up.

And now, after a career that's spanned the stage and screen and has included writing plays, screenplays, essays and an autobiography, Miss Gordon's success has proved the wisdom of her family's understanding her when she was young.

In her apartment here, with its stunning view of Central Park, the still-active Miss Gordon didn't mind reminiscing about her first Broadway performance. "It was in 'Peter Pan,' on December 21, 1915," she says. "I played the part of Nibbs, and I did the pillow dance. It was a marvelous dance."

Later she appeared in "Seventeen," "The Doll's House," "Serena Blandish," "The Country Wife," and "The Matchmaker." And she made her talking-film debut in 1939 in "Abe Lincoln in Illinois."

After a pause in her film career, Miss Gordon returned to the screen in the '60s for "The Loved One," "Inside Daisy Clover," "Lord Love a Duck," "Rosemary's Baby" and "Where's Poppa?" Her latest film is the recently-released "Harold and Maude." She also wrote the plays, "Years Ago" and "Over 21" and several screenplays in collaboration with her husband, Garson Kanin. Her autobiography is "Myself Among Others."

Dressed in a plaid skirt, dark sweater, her hair pulled back from her face and lots of gold jewelry jangling at her wrists, Miss Gordon says she'll never stop working. "You know that old thing about greasepaint being in your blood," she laughs.

Her first love, she says, was the stage, but "I fell in love with films too," she admits. "And I guess the thing of all crazy things I love now is a talk show. You reach people then. You're not a figment of an author's brain. You're you. That contact with the human race is thrilling."

In "Harold and Maude," Miss Gordon plays the part of an 80-year-old woman conducting a romance with a 20-year-old boy, but she says that part of the film shouldn't be lifted out of context. "It's like taking a thread from a beautiful piece of lace, and saying how beautiful the thread is," she says firmly.

And as to whether such a romance could really occur—"You have to say what man and what woman. I'm 16 years older than Garson," she readily admits.

She's pleased with the film because it's "marvelously funny. Jack Benny says one part is the funniest he's ever seen in a movie," she comments. "As a writer myself, and an actress, I know it has to be the written word first, and this is written as an original, as very few movies are."

Combining a writing career with her acting hasn't been so hard, Miss Gordon says, because she's well organized. "I write four hours every morning," she relates. "Then I try to walk three miles. I come back for tea and if I'm really on stream I'll write some more."

Why all the writing? "I've had a fantastic life," she says. "And I guess it's the New Englander coming out in me—I don't want any of it to get lost."

Dining Is An Art At Le Pavilion

By TOM HOGE
Associated Press Writer

Joan Crawford insists on freshly-grated horseradish with her meals, and Harry S. Truman has a weakness for chocolate ice cream.

Those are among the small but vital details that must be kept in mind when running a restaurant such as New York's Le Pavillon.

Stuart Levin, an elegantly turned out man of 41 with a seemingly endless supply of energy and charm, has spent nearly four years at the helm of this eating establishment.

Levin runs his "store," as he likes to call the restaurant, on the theory that eating is an art that is visual as well as gustatory. To savor the delicacies of the house, to see and to be seen in attractive surroundings—that is Levin's law for dining.

The idea must be good, since Levin says he has more than doubled Le Pavillon's volume in the past couple of years which is not bad in times when other famous restaurants are closing.

A member of a restaurant family, Levin served in the quartermaster corps during the Korean War and ran an officers' club in Japan. After he returned to the United States in 1951, he went to work for his father, but set out on his own in 1956. He was part of the team that built up New York's famous Forum of the Twelve Caesars and the posh Four Seasons.

Intrigued by the catering end, Levin joined Louis Sherry Co. in 1966, and masterminded such events as a luncheon for Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir and a party for the King and Queen of Thailand.

By 1968 Levin had taken a close look at Le Pavillon and fell in love with its stately beauty. In March of that year he became the owner. In June of 1971 at the suggestion of his wife, Carolyn, Levin redecorated the restaurant which leaned to the conservative side. Today it is known for its light, airy touch, set off by fresh flowers supplied daily.

One of the house specialties is lamb, young, tender and done to the right turn. But Levin insists even the finest lamb needs the proper sauce to make it successful. Here is his recipe for Mornay to go with Roast Lamb Persille.

MORNAY SAUCE

1/8 pound butter
1/4 cup flour
1 1/2 cups milk
1/2 cup heavy cream
1 teaspoon salt
1-16th teaspoon ground white papper
1 egg yolk
1/4 cup medium cream
1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese

Melt butter in 1 quart saucepan. Remove from heat, stir in flour, and cook over medium heat 1 minute, remove from heat, add milk.

Stir over medium heat and bring to boil. Add 1/2 cup cream and seasonings. Cook 30 seconds.

Blend egg yolk with medium cream, add to hot cream sauce. Add grated cheese and cook till cheese has melted. Do not boil. Makes about 2 1/2 cups.

Diaper Rash Causes Fiance Friction

By Abigail Van Buren
(c 1972 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: I would like your opinion on a statement my boyfriend has made to me. Let me preface by saying that our relationship is very serious, and we are considering marriage.

We were discussing marriage and children, and I asked him if he would ever change a baby's diaper. He replied, "Absolutely not. Just the thought of it is revolting!"

Abby, I am not saying that this particular task would be shared equally between us, but I would like to think that if I were not feeling well, or happened to be away for a few hours, my husband would assume the job if necessary.

How do you feel about this? NAMELESS, PLEASE

DEAR NAMELESS: I think there should be some "changes" made before you have children. And for openers, one should be your fiance's attitude.

DEAR ABBY: I have been married for 33 years. My husband is 62 and I am 58.

Recently my husband lost his job because he had an affair with a young married woman who worked where he worked.

My question: Should I write and tell our son the truth about his father? Our son lives in another state but will be coming home soon, and I'm afraid somebody might tell him. This is a small town and you know how people talk, and I'd rather have him hear it from me than from a stranger.

Also, the young woman my husband had the affair with is still working there. Her husband is employed and I am not, and I am too old to start looking for a job. Do you think that's fair? UNHAPPY AT 58

DEAR UNHAPPY: No. If your husband was fired because of the affair, the woman should have been fired also. Don't tell your son the reason for his father's dismissal. He may not hear about it. But if he does, tell him the truth.

DEAR ABBY: I'll get right to the point: I've been a saleslady in the same store for 36 years, so you know I'm no kid. I've sold neckwear, blouses, costume jewelry and purses over the years.

My pet peeve is the "looker". When I notice a customer is interested in something, I approach her with a smile and in a pleasant tone of voice, I say, "May I help you, Madame?"

Nine times out of ten, she will drop whatever she was looking at and say, "No thanks, I was just looking." Then she walks away.

I suppose I should be used to it by now, but it still burns me up.

Why do women do this? "MISS B"

DEAR MISS B: Because while "Madame" is trying to make up her mind, the salesperson interrupts her silent "should-I-or-shouldn't-I" debate, and Madame becomes defensive. She's afraid she'll be talked into a sale she may later regret. A better approach would be, "If you find something you like, I'll be glad to help you."

Remember, all buyers were "lookers" first.

CONFIDENTIAL TO GOLDEN GATE GIRL: The man who is forever talking about what a great man he is with the ladies is usually doing what he does best. Talking.

She Was Age Five When Lincoln Was President

By RHODA WEISS
Yonkers Herald Statesman Writer

YONKERS, N.Y. (AP) — Jannie Peppers Carmichael remembers when Abraham Lincoln was president. She was 5 years old then.

Now she is 115 years old but she still remembers the days of slavery when, at the age of 6, she was put in the fields to plow.

"In those early days I used to farm, cut grass, plow with mules and cut tobacco," said Mrs. Carmichael, who moved to Yonkers seven years ago.

"It was hard work but without it I wouldn't be here today," she added. "Seems like I plowed those fields every day of my life.

"And when the snows came up to our knees we didn't really mind it too much cause we could play in it and build big snowmen."

Mrs. Carmichael was born Oct. 3, 1856, in Lumberton, N.C., and she remembers the Civil War with "fires, ruined land, houses torn down and people getting killed all over the countryside."

A smile warmed her face when she spoke of the early railroad days.

"In my day the boys and girls used to stand by the side of the railroad track and as the train was passing by, we would swing onto one of the cars and go for a ride," she said.

When she saw her first automobile, a Model-T in the early 1900's, she thought it was a wagon. "I didn't know where the mule was," she said.

Her husband, "Doc," died "three years before he was 100." Mrs. Carmichael has four children, seven grandchildren, 27 great great grandchildren, 26 great great great and 15 great great great great great grandchildren.

She moved to Yonkers in 1964 to live with her daughter Mrs. Mary Graham. "But I'm always longing to go back to North Carolina and I really like traveling," she said.

Mrs. Carmichael has lived through 23 presidents, the invention of the airplane, automobile, color photography, dynamite, telegraph, zipper, washing machine and electric stove.

"Things aren't anything like they used to be," she said, "but people are just about the same."

Does she have a secret for long life?

"Do right, trust in the Lord, live right and be good to people and appreciate them."

Her age makes her one of the oldest persons living today.

But she is not really old. Every afternoon she walks up and down three flights of stairs to take her daily stroll. In mind and spirit, Mrs. Carmichael is young.

The Spartan Environment Best

There's good news for old soldiers and bad for new Army recruits.

The liberalized life that recruits have been living for the past year or so is about to come to an end.

The New York Times reports that after a year long experiment, the Army is tightening up on its eight-weeks basic training course.

Gone will be such things as the barracks beer machine (barracks what?) and colorful curtains which divided the big open barracks into private cubicles (colorful what?).

It will be back to the open barracks with their long lines of army cots made up in a military manner with their army blankets.

But that is only part of it. The training is going to toughen up, too. There will be a return to such requirements as jogging between drill areas, and the Army Daily Dozen is to be back. The Daily Dozen, for those who do not know, is a series of excercises performed in formation each morning. They are designed to reach every muscle in the recruits body—and they do.

"We've taken a long look at things, experimented around, and now we've decided that the relatively Spartan environment is the best for the recruits," Brig. Gen. Ira Hunt, who is in charge of the Army's Training Command, said.

There will be some breaks for future recruits, however. There are no plans to reinstitute the reveille formation for recruits and weekend passes will still be issued during the final month of training.

The liberalization program was begun in an effort to attract more volunteers as the Army moves toward fewer draftees. Apparently, however, it has been decided that tough training cannot be dispensed with if the Army is to function.

At any rate the old Army evidently will soon be back and it should fit right in, in this nostalgic era.

Not Likely In 1973's Session

By BRYAN HAISLIP

RALEIGH — Electronic voting may be in the future for the North Carolina legislature, but it's not likely for the 1973 session.

Considerable sentiment exists among legislators for an electronic tally system, with its potential for greater accuracy and smoother operation in recording legislative decisions.

On the other hand, some

lawmakers would rather not do away with voice votes and standing counts which leave a smokescreen of anonymity on the record.

Another negative factor is cost. A sophisticated system would carry a price tag of $175,000 to $225,000. With budget demands tight, some legislative leaders are wary of public reaction to such an expenditure.

From the public's point of view, the great benefit from electronic voting would be legislative accountability. Instead of a few roll calls on sensitive issues, it would be possible to know exactly how a Representative or Senator voted on every bill or amendment.

The 1971 General Assembly cleared the way for electronic voting. It directed the Legislative Service Commission to name a committee to shop for a system, and gave it authority, if it chose to do so, to proceed with purchase and installation.

Committee Members Named

Appointed to the committee were Sens. Jack Baugh of Mecklenburg and John Burney of New Hanover, and Reps. Jay Huskins of Iredell and Liston Ramsey of Madison.

So far, it has held no formal meeting. Time is limited, and the growing implication is that its decision may be simply not to act.

Studying the various systems available, seeing them in operation, and selecting the one best suited to facilities of the Legislative Building and needs of the General Assembly would require several months.

After a firm contract to purchase is made, several more months would be necessary for custom installation.

"Six months would be the minimum any manufacturer would be willing to promise, and one year would be none too long," said Clyde Ball, legislative services officer.

July 1 Deadline

To be in use for the '73 session, installation would have to begin no later than next July 1, he estimated.

Facilities for electronic voting were considered when the Legislative Building was built some 10 years ago. Although it was not installed at that time, it was contemplated it eventually would be and raceways are adequate for the necessary wiring, Ball said.

Financing provisions made by the '71 session include using some $100,000 remaining in a fund left over from construction of the Legislative Building and drawing on the Contingency and Emergency Fund for the balance.

The trend to electronic voting is marked among the legislative bodies across the nation, keeping in step with the technology of times, Ball said. Probably as many as half of the states have systems, he estimated. Among North Carolina's neighbors, he added, Tennessee has a system for its legislature.

"Some states have a Constitutional requirement that every vote be recorded by roll call in the journal. They would bog down instantly without a tool such as electronic voting," he explained.

"Our need is not so great in terms of mechanics," he added.

Accuracy Is Advantage

The principal advantage would be in accuracy rather than time saved, Ball speculated.

"Counting a standing vote in the House, where there are 120 members, and always some movement on the floor, can be distracting and liable to error," he said. "It's not as much of a problem in the Senate, with only 50 members."

Although systems vary, in general electronic voting would place on each member's desk a console with switches for "Yes," "No," and "Present." When the presiding officer called for a vote, one of the three would be activated. Lights would flash the decision on a scoreboard visible to the whole chamber.

Some form of "instant replay" in the form of a printed tally sheet quickly available to members would be necessary to assure confidence in the system, Ball said. "It will be difficult for legislators to trust the machinery unless they can promptly verify that their vote has been corectly recorded," he said.

A Better Measure In Matters Of Control

A court ruling has led the State ABC Board to ban topless dancing and, as usual, legal efforts in the area of censorship are leading to great confusion.

It proves to us once again that legal moves aimed at what is considered obscene should take the path of control, rather than outright bans.

We would never agree that what could be offensive material should be displayed in store fronts or on roadside bill boards.

On the other hand, with what is available in magazines and in theatres today it does not make much sense to try to prevent adults whose tastes lean that way from paying their money in topless places.

See Weakness In Sen. Muskie

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Sen. Edmund S. Muskie's surprisingly unimpressive performance on NBC's Meet the Press Jan. 16 was topic No. 1 the next morning at an exclusive gathering: the daily meeting of President Nixon's top White House aides.

The Nixon men could scarcely conceal their glee. Several aides who had regarded Muskie, front-runner for the Democratic Presidential nomination, as Mr. Nixon's most formidable possible opponent said they were downgrading their evaluation.

The White House consensus was that while the telecast did not have the kind of impact that would seriously hurt Muskie's chances for the nomination, it did reveal his weaknesses. The Nixon aides noted that after a full year's campaigning, Muskie tended to respond defensively to hard interrogation.

What makes this important in their opinion is that the very nature of Presidential primary campaigning will require Muskie to submit to a heavy schedule of televised interviews and press conferences. Based on his Jan. 18 form, they feel this might erode his stature before the general election campaign begins.

Some Presidential aides proposed helping along this Muskie erosion. In 1968, when Democratic Vice Presidential nominee Muskie was clearly the most personally attractive candidate on any national ticket, the Republicans avoided direct attacks on him. This may have been a mistake, the Nixon Monday morning advisers agreed. At any rate, they added, Muskie is quite clearly vulnerable to frontal attack in 1972.

A footnote: Democratic politicians privately agreed with the White House appraisal of Muskie's Meet the Press performance. But a possible saving grace, some said, was the Muskie's Agnewsque toughness and hostility toward questioning newsmen might have arounsed a sympathetic response from rank-and-file voters.

Nixon's New Speechwriters

In another effort to solidify relations with Republican leaders in Congress, President Nixon made an unprecedented gesture in a White House meeting last week: a request that his "Big Four" legislative lieutenants read his State-of-the-Union speech line by line and suggest changes.

The reading took place Wednesday morning in the office and under the watchful eye of Clark MacGregor, Mr. Nixon's Congressional lobbyist. Eight proposed changed in the President's text were made by the four leaders: Sens. Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania and Robert Griffin of Michigan and Reps. Gerald Ford of Michigan and Leslie Arends of Illinois.

Most of these came in the economic section of the President's message, a sure sign of growing Republican concern about the economy.

Of the eight changes, Mr. Nixon accepted three in toto, two in part and will include the other three in special messages the next few weeks.

A footnote: Griffin pressed hard for fuller Presidential treatment of a complex but politically-potent subject: permitting workers to take new jobs without losing pension rights in their old

Strength For Today

GOOD CHEER

In his brief ministry of about two years Jesus spoke a great deal about duty, but his greatest emphasis appeared always to be on the word "joy". "Be of good cheer," was an expression he appeared to love. He declared on one occasion that there was more joy in heaven over one sinner that repenteth than over ninety and nine persons which needed no repentance (Luke 15:7). We do well when we search the Bible in an effort to find guidance or to learn just what duty really is. But we have not read Scriptures right until we have caught the note of joy which characterizes all true religion. The 23rd Psalm speaks of the cup of joy which runs over. And ponder this: "Rejoice, and be exceedingly glad; for great is your reward in heaven" (Matthew 5:12).

As we think over the truly religious people we know, we find that the lives of most of them are characterized by joy. Once in a while there is a solemn-faced but sincere Christian. This is no doubt because such a person is serious and solemn by nature. We have to take poeple as they are, and although we may not be enthusiastic about the sincerely religious person who is always solemn and long-faced, yet he (or she) has a legitimate place in Christian faith.

The Bible does not tell us what the mood and demeanor of Christ was, but it seems to imply that he was definitely cheerful and out going.

VERY CUTE PICTURE---FOR THE MOMENT!

By J.J. KILPATRICK

Burial Ground In N.H.

MANCHESTER, N.H. — In the popular legend, New Hampshire ordinarily is credited with all those good New England virtues, among which, one might assume, would be a certain tidiness in its public affairs. Let us assume no more.

New Hampshire's presidential primary this year offers the voter, among other attractions, no fewer than five announced Democrats and four announced Republicans. The Democrats will be seeking to win 20 delegates to the party convention in Miami, each of whom, if you please, will cast nine-tenths of one vote apiece. Wait until that delegation has to be polled!

There also is a vice presidential primary. The only announced Democrat is former Gov. Endicott Peabody of Massachusetts. The only announced Republican is Chief Burning Wood of Greenwhich Village, born Austin Burton of Louisville. The chief also ran unopposed for the office in 1968, when his platform — or so the credulous visitor is advised — was "Give the country back to the Indians." On the morning of March 8, he will become the only gentleman of Indian extraction ever to be twice nominated by the voters of New Hampshire to become the Republican vice president of the United States. It is a distinction in which a man could take some pride.

Under New Hampshire law, any registered voter may get his name on the ballot as an uncommitted delegate, or as a delegate favoring one of the presidential hopefuls. So many voters take advantage of this invitation that the ballot is bigger than an Indian blanket.

The state's motto is "Live Free or Die." Presidential candidates do both. Lyndon Johnson expired here in 1968. He beat Eugene McCarthy by 27,500 to 23,300 but in the confusion McCarthy walked off with 20 of the 24 convention delegates. Three weeks later, Johnson quit.

This time around, the four principal Democratic contenders are Edmund Muskie, George McGovern, Vance Hartke and Sam Yorty. Any one of them could see his candidacy congeal in the frozen hills. The three principal Republicans are Richard Nixon, Paul McCloskey and John Ashbrook. Local morticians also are measuring them.

One difficulty in diagnosis is that nobody has any dependable figures on the number of registered voters. The state keeps no statewide records. It is generally believed that when the books

Other Editors Say Basis For Winning

(Raleigh Times)

The winning of a collegiate football game begins a long time before the opening kickoff. The recruiting scramble now going on is that beginning.

A recent story by Caulton Tudor, Raleigh Times sports writer, illustrates the importance of recruiting star high school players. He pointed out how the teams in the Atlantic Coast Conference are doing as recruiters, compared with some of the bigger-time teams in other conferences.

The University of North Carolina, a member of the ACC, has announced only eight high schools stars who have signed to attend Chapel Hill, but Tudor says that usually sound sources indicate that the Tar Heels have signed 24 gridders all told. Under ACC regulations, a team cannot sign more than 70 during a two-year period, and Carolina awarded 39 scholarships in 1970, so will be limited this year.

Carolina won the ACC title during the past season, and played in the Gator Bowl. Both of these factors will help the Tar Heels in their recruiting, since aspiring young athletes like to sign with winners.

South Carolina, which is seeking big-time greatness under Coach Paul Dietzel, had signed 41 high school players as of a few days ago, and was expected to award at least 15 more. South Carolina withdrew from the ACC some months ago in a dispute over entrance requirements which it felt handicapped its recruiting of some players, so isn't bound by the ACC limits on the number of players who may be signed.

Tudor points out that South Carolina's current recruiting pace would put it in the recruiting class of such national powers as Nebraska, the national champions of the past season. Nebraska is expected to sign 55 players during this recruiting season. Such Southeastern Conference powers as Tennessee, Alabama and Auburn average approximately 50 scholarships each year, and the Big Eight Conference members average about 55 each. Notre Dame and Southern California will give as many as 60 to 65 scholarships in a single recruiting season.

The scholarships are expensive since they pay for all the expenses of the players.

Winning is the name of the game in bigtime intercollegiate football today, and winning begins with recruiting. Recruiting is a very expensive process — which explains why the dollar so often calls the tune in today's intercollegiate athletic dance.

40 Years Ago Today

The largest poultry sales in history were reported in Pitt County the month of January and hundreds of dollars found their way into the pockets of Pitt County producers. The sales were promoted by the County Mutual Exchange, assisting the Farm Department, and the results were not only gratifying to officers of the exchange but to growers also. The exchange, organized only a few months ago, is already showing indications of achievement and should become a vital factor in improving the economic life of the country.

Grace Perkins' father decided she would be a writer and she actually became a successful novelist. She is the author of "Boy Crazy," the serial beginning in The Daily Reflector today. A native of Boston, Miss Perkins in private life, is Mrs. Fulton Oursler, wife of the playwright and editor.

Those Naughty Wall Streeters

By ELMER ROESSNER

Only six men were sentenced to prison for hanky panky in Wall Street last year. Eleven were convicted of various kinds of criminal greed — five were fined and 17 more indicted but have not yet been tried.

If you think Wall Street was almost lily white last year, forget it. It was a year of avarice, deception and hornswoggling. This doesn't include the messengers who delivered negotiable bonds to friends in the rackets. It counts only the operators in Brooks Brothers' suits.

According to my count, which is probably incomplete, the Securities and Exchange Commission revoked our suspended the licenses of 69 brokers for various offenses, ranging from churning accounts to pitching pennies with customers' coins. In addition, the SEC withdrew the registration of 85 employees for periods ranging from five days to life for conning customers or playing put-and-take with their money.

The SEC made charges against 70 brokerage firms, most of which are still pending, and against 174 owners and employees.

The National Association of Security Dealers, which runs a tight ship in a turbulent sea, in addition expelled 36 security dealer companies, and suspended 16 more. An expelled or suspended firm cannot do business with any other member firm, which almost puts it out of business. NASD also suspended 98 partners, employers and employees from five days to life. During suspension they cannot work for any NASD member and for expellees that means learning a new trade.

The New York Stock Exchange also polices its members. During 1971, it levied $227,500 in fines against wayward brokers, and censured eight. It also pressured one firm in financial difficulties to sell its seat. It sued one accounting company for $900,000 and another for $5 million, charging they presented misleading audits to the exchange, and accepted a $200,000 settlement from a third. It barred 20 brokers and employees from further association with any member firms.

The American Stock Exchange fined one broker $75,000 and another $25,000 for failing to follow the rules. It also admonished two other firms and suspended three employees.

More funny business was charged in suits. The SEC sued seven men and two brokerage houses alleging they paid bribes of up to $2.50 a share in Pied Pipers Yacht Charters Corp. Samuel Masielle and members of his family were accused by a trustee in bankruptcy of squandering $6 million of the assets of the James J. Anthony & Co. securities firm.

Ten shareholders who got $41.8 million when they sold their shares in the Dreyfus Corp. agreed to pay $5 million to settle a claim that they had made illegal profits. Four insurance companies sued a Chicago accounting firm for $10 million, charging they had been defrauded in a "false and misleading" statement. And the SEC charged that three officers of Sharon Steel diverted millions of dollars from the employees' pension fund in a plan to take over other companies.

And the Wall Street Journal reported that Keith Funston, for 16 years head of the N.Y. Stock Exchange, was "taken in" by investing $100,000 in Takara Partners Ltd., whose assets shrank from more than $4 million to $300,000.

U.S. Makes Evident Its Cool Attitude Toward UN

By KENNETH J. FREED
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration has made its cool attitude toward the United Nations even more evident by its lack of response to Secretary General Kurt Waldheim's effort to raise some quick money for the debt-ridden organization.

Waldheim, in office only a month, spent all of Monday with President Nixon, Secretary of State William P. Rogers and congressional leaders, going over the U.N.'s financial suffering.

Although Waldheim told newsmen the response to his position was positive from the President on down, U.S. officials indicated the Austrian diplomat may have been wearing rose-colored glasses.

"The United States isn't interested in bailing the U.N. out of its hole this time," one government official said. "We're going to wait for the people who dug the hole."

In more diplomatic tones State Department spokesman Charles Bray made the same point Monday when he told newsmen it is too early to characterize the U.S. response to Waldheim's request that U.N. members advance $20 million in contributions to tide the world body over this year.

The administration first "would like to have the opportunity to see the response from other members" before deciding its own course of action, Bray said.

He added that the large U.N. debt is more the responsibility of other members, particularly those he indicated were to blame for the world crises that led to expensive U.N. peacekeeping missions.

The debt, estimated variously at $65 million by Waldheim and $150 million by Bray, is largely the result of failure by the Soviet Union, several East European nations and France to pay their share of the peacekeeping costs.

Waldheim said he is seeking support for his plan from all other members and only came to Washington first because the United States is the host nation to the U.N.

Although the Nixon administration is aloof to the $20-million request, it is sympathetic to Waldheim's general effort to bring some financial order to the U.N., which is near self-proclaimed insolvency.

He said the world body has lost esteem throughout the world and a start to regaining global confidence is to achieve fiscal reform. "Something has close, there may be 140,000 Republicans, 105,000 Democrats, and 130,000 "undeclared." Perhaps half of them will vote on March 7.

Some of the pundits are calling it, on the Democratic side, Muskie 45 per cent, McGovern 2.9, Yorty, 19, Hartke 3, and others — New Hampshire prides itself on its "other" vote — perhaps 4 per cent. If that doesn't add up, neither does anything else. Both Muskie and McGovern desperately need a large chunk of the vote — Muskie to maintain his momentum, and McGovern to get some momentum going.

Yorty is the spoiler. The ebullient mayor of Los Angeles is cruising around in his great white Yortymobile, equipped with a stern like a Pullman car. He is making the most noise and having the most fun and, with the backing of the influential Manchester Union Leader, he is assured a hefty vote as the only putative conservative on the Democratic ballot.

Everyone says Nixon will sweep the Republican field, but "Dump Nixon" buttons are coming out like crocuses and his margin may not be impressive. McCloskey's youthful brigades have been marching around since August, and the Ashbrook campaign, though it suffers for want of money and experienced hands, will be coming on strong.

All the candidates are hustling for the youth vote. High school seniors, who can barely be tolerated anyhow, promise to become insufferable soon. One of them asked McGovern a four-part question on the Middle East the other night. McGovern answered it, too, as respectfully as he might have answered Senator Fulbright on the floor. If the pimple-dimple vote turns out, who knows? Muskie and Nixon, who have the most to lose, might yet stumble in New Hampshire in their march to the White House.

Pitt Group Backs Booe

Citizens for Bill Booe for the United States Senate was organized yesterday in Pitt County.

Among the leaders present at a meeting in Greenville was Wilbur Foushee, a State Co-Chairman of Charlotte.

Don Fidler was elected Chairman of Citizens for Bill Booe in Pitt County.

Booe addressed the gathering and in his remarks condemmed the Federal District Court in Richmond for extending mass busing across county lines. He further stated that the Federal Courts are destroying the autonomy of local school boards across the nation. He also pointed out that the financial burden being placed upon local citizens to carry out their decrees is running into millions of dollars and is taxation without representation. He expressed the hope that the Supreme Court would reverse the Richmond decision and begin to return government to the people locally where it belongs.

jobs. Although Griffin's phrase—"portability of pensions"—was left out of the Nixon speech, it will appear in a special message on the subject of private pensions and financial security after retirement.

Jackson's Tennessee Ploy

An attempt by Sen. Henry M. Jackson to slow the Muskie bandwagon by advancing the date of the Tennessee Presidential primary is likely to fall short.

Tennessee is the one state where Jackson has substantial support from key Democratic leaders. It is also perhaps Muskie's weakest primary state. Whatever Tennessee strength Muskie had was badly diluted last September 20 in Chattanooga when he virtually endorsed school busing, an impolitic statement anywhere but particularly in Tennessee.

However, the state's primary is not scheduled until May 4. By that time. Muskie may have locked up the nomination.

Consequently, Jackson operative Bill Brawley (ex-LBJ Southern political aide and Deputy Postmaster General in the Kennedy administration) has been pressing for legislative action changing the date to late March. That would put Muskie in unfriendly Tennessee waters immediately after a possible loss in Florida March 14 and before he can recoup in Wisconsin April 4. Back-to-back defeats in Florida and Tennessee would test the Muskie bandwagon's momentum.

But a change in the primary date requires Republican support in the legislature and the Republicans are not about to give Jackson that boost without a massive quid pro quo: passage of a Congressional redistricting bill to safeguard the seat of Republican Rep. Dan Kuykendall. The Jackson Democrats might be willing to grant that but do not control enough votes to deliver it.

Republicans do seem willing, however, to move the primary date up two weeks to April 20. That would come after Muskie's expected triumph in Wisconsin but perhaps before he has a stranglehold on the nomination. Even a two-week change will be vigorously opposed by Muskie's Tennessee forces, led by former Sen. Albert Gore.

Stans Expected To Retire Soon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Commerce Maurice Stans is expected to resign soon to repeat his 1968 role as an active fund raiser in President Nixon's election campaign.

Asked Monday when the resignation of Stans would be announced, Presidential Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said it could be expected in the next few days.

For every 5,000 North Carolinians, there are 4¼ Wachovians.

Which makes sense. Because people go to the bank more often than they dent fenders, chip teeth, or have fires.

Three North Viet Missile Radar Sites Attacked

By RICHARD PYLE
Associated Press Writer

SAIGON (AP) — American warplanes attacked three more antiaircraft missile radar sites in North Vietnam, the U.S. Command announced today, as the air war continued to intensify over North Vietnam and along its border with Laos.

The three so-called protective reaction strikes—one Sunday and two Monday—raised to eight the number announced in the last three days, the most for any comparable period since the bombing halt more than three years ago.

Five of the attacks, including two announced today, have been carried out against missile sites and radar installations along the Laotian frontier where, U.S. military officials say, Hanoi has recently concentrated the bulk of its antiaircraft missile batteries in an attempt to protect the flow of supplies through the mountain passes into Laos.

In two of the most recent attacks, Navy A7 Skyhawk jets fired missiles at radar sites near the Ban Karai Pass, 45 miles north of the demilitarized zone, after detection equipment indicated they were tracking the American planes.

In the third strike, Air Force F105 fighter-bombers escorting an RF4 reconnaissance plane attacked a missile radar site near the coastal city of Dong Hoi, 45 miles north of the DMZ.

Results of the three strikes were not known, a spokesman said, but none of the U.S. planes was reported hit.

Ground fighting was sporadic in South Vietnam, with 23 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong reported killed, but the Cambodian command reported the first big battle in Cambodia in more than a month.

The Cambodians claimed they killed 18 of the enemy in the fighting 13 miles east of Phnom Penh, on the edge of Veihear Suor marshes. Two Cambodians were reported killed and 24 wounded. The fighting ended at nightfall Monday, and allied bombers apparently hit an enemy ammunition dump in the village of Dhong Serei, near the battleground, and touched off a series of explosions.

Meanwhile, a Viet Cong broadcast promised to reward all South Vietnamese who help overthrow the Saigon government and defeat President Nixon's Vietnamization program. Amnesty also was promised to officials, military commanders and soldiers who defected.

New Affidavit Denies Hughes-Irving Project

NEW YORK (AP) — Attorneys have filed a new affidavit attributed to Howard Hughes denying that he agreed to publication of an autobiography compiled by Clifford Irving, while an international police search continues for a mystery brunette who cashed $650,000 worth of checks paid for the book.

The affidavit was submitted in Manhattan Supreme Court Monday. It denied that Hughes had supplied any material either for Irving's book or a second purported autobiography edited by Robert P. Eaton.

Meanwhile, Irving, who left New York Friday for his home on the island of Ibiza off Spain, was ordered to appear in court here Friday in connection with another case.

While Hughes interests have sought to stop publication of both the Eaton and Irving books, primary interest has centered on the latter because McGraw-Hill Book Co. paid $650,000 for the rights to the work.

Swiss police have issued a warrant for the arrest of a petite brunette identified as Helga Hughes who cashed the McGraw-Hill checks through an account at the Swiss Credit Bank. The warrant is based on the publisher's complaint charging criminal fraud.

Irving claims he compiled the book based on a series of interviews with Hughes. Attorneys for the billionaire recluse have repeatedly labeled the book a hoax and sought to bar its publication.

McGraw-Hill and Life magazine deferred publication plans for the book when the controversy arose over who received the money from the Swiss bank account.

Just Like Dad

MIAMI (AP) — Mary Lou Whittaker, 19, said her father always taught his children to get involved.

So when a 6-foot shoplifting suspect tried to flee from the discount store where she was working Sunday, Miss Whittaker grabbed him around the waist and held him until store security officers arrived.

"I saw this man running across the store and people yelling to stop him and I knew I had to do something," said the petite Barry College coed.

Miss Whittaker's father is Kenneth Whittaker, special agent in charge of the Miami FBI office.

"We never taught them much self-defense," said Whittaker. "We just taught them that law enforcement is everybody's business, not just the police. She's heard me say that often."

Devices Planted For Quake Study

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Four small electronic devices will be installed along the San Andreas fault to gather data that may help scientists predict earthquakes.

Wesley G. Bruer, a state geologist, said the devices are called tiltmeters and consists of a two-axis, one-inch glass container with conducting fluid enveloping a bubble inside. North American Rockwell has designed them so that any motion causing them to tilt would set off an electric charge that would send data to a computer.

District Governor Visits Local Lions

North Carolina Lions District Governor Sam Jernigan made an official visit to the local club last night and praised the Greenville Lions for their 33 years of service in this community.

He made special mention of the Greenville Lions Club work with the blind and visually handicapped, the underpriveleged, and in general community betterment.

Jernigan called the years since the founding of Lions International as "54 years of magnificent achievement." He stated, however, "We have yet to make our impact fully felt in the fields of drug abuse or on the attitudes of the young. If we are not prepared to help these young people, he said, we are being remiss in our duty."

He charged the Lions with the responsibility of total commitment to their slogan "We Serve" saying, "Each Lion has the power in his own hands, in his own job, in his own club ... every Lion has the power to change the world."

Two charter members of the Greenville Lions, George Wilkerson and George Brown, assisted Jernigan in presenting service chevrons to club members. Those receiving the awards were: R. B. Starling, Ruland Davenport and James L. Harris, 30 years; Melvin Williams, 20 years; Charles Horne and J. D. Wilson, 15 years. A special North Carolina Lions pin was presented to Charles Waller, president of the Greenville Lions.

Wreck Kills Greene Man

SNOW HILL — A Greene County coach and teacher, James Murphy "Jim" Rouse, was killed yesterday morning when the car he was driving skidded into the path of an oncoming car on Highway 13 1.7 miles west of here.

Trooper W. G. Perkins said Rouse, 32, who apparently was on his way to Snow Hill Junior High School, was dead when the trooper arrived about 10 minutes after the accident occurred at approximately 8 a.m. Trooper Perkins said the pavement was wet and that witnesses said Rouse did not appear to be speeding. There was a car turning onto the shoulder some distance in front of Rouse's car, the witnesses told him, but it is not known whether Rouse braked to avoid the car and lost control or whether he was attempting to pass it, Trooper Perkins related.

The driver of the other car was identified as High Morris Warren of Rt. 3, Snow Hill. He and the other passengers, Bobby Lee Sheppard, Jasper Warren Jr., and Milton Lee Warren III, all of Rt. 3, Snow Hill, are in satisfactory condition at Wayne County Hospital in Goldsboro, Trooper Perkins said.

Both cars involved were total losses, the Highway Patrolman said.

In addition to his teaching duties, Rouse did considerable conseling, Junior High School principal Jones said. He also coached the Junior High baseball team and was assistant football coach at Greene Central High School. A Greene County native, he was a graduate of A & T State University and a former professional baseball player with the Cincinnati Reds.

He and his wife, the former Minnie Sampson, lived in Goldsboro with their two-week old son, James M. "Jamie" Rouse II. Other survivors include his mother, Mrs. Lassie Rouse of Rt. 2, La Grange, and two sisters, Miss Irma Joyce Rouse, of Rt. 2, La Grange and Mrs. Annie Reynolds of Macon, Ga.

Funeral arrangements are being made at Albritton Funeral Home in Kinston.

Steam-Powered Bus Emits Little Smog

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — A steam-powered passenger bus tooled quietly through the streets today, emitting one-fifth as much smog as a comparable diesel-powered bus. And an occasional gurgle.

"It floats along very well," said passenger Burt Trubody of Oakland after the bus took the streets for the first time Monday.

The only difference noticeable to the ordinary bus rider was the silence and the quicker acceleration. And a gurgle or two.

"Nothing to it," said Kerry Napuk, manager of the project for Scientific Analysis, Inc. Some plumbing was loose, he explained.

Driver Payton Colvin, 44, said: "I like it fine. It turns a little stiffer: the accelerator is a little stiffer, but then it's new."

The bus is being tested by the Alameda-Contra Costa Transit District to see if steam can be used to propel mass transit—and to see if the public will accept steam buses.

Berkeley engineer William M. Brobeck hand-built the engine, boiler and condenser units at a cost of $300,000 in an experiment funded by the federal government.

From the outside, the bus looks like any of AC Transit's other 750 diesel-powered, 51-seat buses. Inside, it has 1,400 feet of continuous copper tubing and a three-cylinder double-expansion steam engine that can run all day on 50 gallons of water.

Even though the steam bus uses diesel fuel to heat water into steam, the resulting pollution is less because the burner consumes fuel more thoroughly and does not emit the pollutants thrown off by combustion engines.

In Coup Try Sheik Slain

SHARJAH (AP) — The ruler of the little Persian Gulf emirate of Sharjah, Sheik Khalid, was stabbed to death early today in an attempted coup led by a cousin.

The police clamped a curfew on the sheikdom. No traffic moved, and communications with the outside world were limited.

Sheik Khalid's cousin, a former ruler named Sheik Sakr bin Sultan, drove into the palace grounds Monday with two carloads of Bedouins, occupied the palace and took Sheik Khalid hostage.

Led by the ruler's brother, Sheik Sakr bin Mohammed, police and troops of the Union of Arab Emirates surrounded the blue and white building, and after an exchange of shots rushed it today. They found the ruler dead, stabbed by a long curved Bedouin dagger known as a khanjar.

The president of the Union of Arab Emirates, Sheik Zaid bin Sultan of Abu Dhabi, announced that Sheik Sakr bin Sultan and those associated with him had surrendered. The president also reported that four other persons, who were not identified, were killed with Sheik Khalid.

President Zaid called a meeting of the union's executive council in Dubai.

Sakr bin Sultan was deposed in 1965 and had been living in Cairo. He blamed his overthrow on the British. Sharjah was a British protectorate until British forces withdrew from the Persian Gulf last month. Then Sharjah joined five other sheikdoms along the gulf that had been British protectorates and formed the Union of Arab Emirates.

Judge Threatens Bar Newsmen At Berrigans' Trial

By LEE LINDER
Associated Press Writer

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — The judge at the conspiracy trial of the Rev. Philip Berrigan and six other antiwar activists has threatened to bar newsmen from the jury selection process and impose secrecy on the proceedings.

"I'm not telling the news media what to do," U.S. District Court Judge R. Dixon Herman said Monday as the jury selection began.

He urged, however, that "all names, questions and responses be kept secret until the jury is sworn, and then you can publish it whenever you see fit."

"I think it is in the province of the court, if you violate it (the request), to continue the voir dire in camera"—questioning prospective jurors secretly in chambers.

Herman said early publication could prejudice his efforts to obtain an unbiased, unharassed jury.

The high-ceilinged, modern courtroom seats 80 spectators. Three newsmen now are permitted to cover the jury selection proceedings—representatives of the Associated Press, United Press International and the Harrisburg Patriot-News.

After the first day the original panel of 175 was trimmed to 82, with 38 of those excused, claiming they had formed prejudicial opinions and could not render an impartial judgment.

Berrigan and the other defendants are accused of plotting to kidnap presidential adviser Henry Kissinger, bomb heat tunnels under certain Washington, D.C., buildings, smuggle contraband in and out of the federal prison, and raid draft board offices in various cities around the nation.

A group of 46 men and women, now seated in the court room, answer more general questions from the judge today before individual examination by lawyers begins.

The 48-year-old Berrigan, a self-styled revolutionary priest, told a newsman during a courtroom lull, before federal marshalls stopped him from talking, that there was indeed a discussion among some of the defendants of a possible kidnaping.

"There was no planning," he insisted, however. Then he added:

"Part of any discussion, if it is to be real, is to investigate the feasibility of it" and Berrigan indicated that members of his peace movement apparatus had done that. "Millions of people have these kinds of ideas at some time or another," Berrigan said in the first interview he has given in nearly two years. "It doesn't mean they would act or want to act, but why shouldn't they think about it and maybe do something about it and even investigate it?"

Asked whether he believed he would win the case, Berrigan replied: "It's not a priority of ours to win acquittal, but to conduct a political trial and get the issue before the American people."

Fatal Mauling Ruled 'Accident'

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — The mauling death of Richard Hale, 19, in the polar bear grotto at the Toledo Zoo last week has been ruled accidental by Lucas County Coroner Dr. Harry Mignerey.

Mignerey said Monday he based the ruling on a court decision that said the death of a person under the influence of drugs must be considered accidental.

Mignerey said faint evidence of methadone was found in Hale's body. He said the youth had a history of drug usage and was known to have been under the influence as late as 5 p.m. Tuesday.

Hale's body was found in the grotto shortly after 9 a.m. Wednesday.

only business.

Blue Cross started the health service business back in the early 30's. It was our only business then. It still is. Then, as now, Service was our guiding objective.

From the start, we've had only one purpose: to protect your health through the best combination of service and benefits we could offer. We set out to make the service benefit principle work. It did. Today, Blue Cross and Blue Shield is the largest health protection organization in North Carolina, with over 1½ million subscribers covered.

Service is still the key to our business. Just as it was when we were only a handful of people putting away a little money regularly so that when one person needed hospital care—the money would be there to pay the bill.

That idea—of sharing the load—is still as good as ever. That's why we're consistently paying back over 93 cents of every subscriber dollar we receive into benefits and services. Every week we pay out more than $2.5 million in claims... covering not only hospital, medical, and surgical care, but expanded benefits like outpatient care, dental care, and home nursing care.

At the same time, we're busy studying and keeping up with the advances in medicine and improvements in the quality of care, the decline in the purchasing power of the dollar, the fact that people are living better and longer, and other related trends in the complex health service industry.

We're also striving to deliver health service more efficiently, by working with regional planning programs to avoid or minimize hospital cost increases. And by encouraging everyone to practice preventive medicine through health education programs.

To provide all these services, we've grown to 11 central and 22 regional offices, all across North Carolina, with almost 1,000 carefully trained and experienced people working to serve your health care needs.

We've set up an entire division devoted to Subscriber Service, to insure that your questions are promptly answered and your claims are promptly paid. And to solve any problems that might come up in delivering the benefits you need, we have specially-trained service representatives who call on hospitals, doctors, and other providers to assist them in submitting your claims for payment. All experts, ready to be of service when needed in handling your hospital or doctor bill.

All of these things—our Subscriber Service Division, our regional offices throughout the State, our local representatives who work with hospitals and doctors, our health education efforts, and all the rest, add up to just one thing: Better Service to you, our subscriber. It's what Blue Cross and Blue Shield stand for. It's why we've been in business for 39 years.

As North Carolina has grown and changed, so have we. Our ideas are always changing, always expanding. But one thing hasn't changed since our beginning. We still operate on the service benefit principle. It's the guiding objective on which our business was founded. We're not a health insurance company—we're a health service plan. One of 74 such Blue Cross and Blue Shield Plans in the United States with a combined membership of over 75 million persons. And still growing every year.

Midshipmen Not Happy Over Girls At Academy

By DAVID GOELLER
Associated Press Writer

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Citing tradition and practicalities, several members of the 4,000-man brigade of midshipmen at the U.S. Naval Academy say they don't want their school to go coeducational.

"It's completely impractical," said Robert Hardy, 21, a senior from Columbus, Miss. "The idea of this place is to train shipboard officers, but there's nowhere women can serve in the fleet yet."

The prospect of women joining the brigade has become more than the campus joke it once was. Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., and Rep. John McDonald, R-Mich., have nominated teen-age girls for appointment to Annapolis.

To a man, the future Navy officers interviewed at the academy said they do not think the mission of the school and its physical layout—one dormitory—are geared for women.

"I'd probably be in favor of it from the standpoint of making this place nicer to go to, but from the standpoint of training I don't think this place is set up for women," said Lloyd Holz, a 22-year-old senior from Schulenburg, Tex.

Mike Candalor, 21, a senior from Johnsonburg, Pa., said he felt it would be difficult to integrate coeds into such non-classroom programs as summer sea training and intramural athletics.

"Would girls box like we have to?" Candalor wondered. "I got my nose bloodied doing it, but would a girl?"

Robert Musselman said he doesn't take the nominations seriously. "It's not much more than politicians trying to get their names in the newspaper," said the 21-year-old senior from Atlanta, Ga.

He suggested that if the Navy decided women could benefit from the educational facilities at the academy, girls could be permitted to attend classes without formally joining the brigade.

Sophomore Wayne Thornton of Fairfax, Va., said his initial reaction to the nominations was, "Wow, fantastic!—but then from a real side I knew it can't happen."

Thornton, 19, pointed to the rigors of the freshman, or plebe, year when young men, through a rigorous process of discipline, are changed into midshipmen.

"I don't think there's any way a woman could survive plebe year from a physical standpoint," Thornton stated.

One persons who did favor the admission of coeds was Capt. Harry C. Duncan, the senior chaplain.

"We'd be glad to have them in church," the officer said. "We're short of sopranos in the choir."

Terrorism Is Unabated

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Masked gunmen burst into the home of a 19-year-old Protestant factory worker and shot him in the leg and side during the night, authorities reported. He was reported in satisfactory condition today.

Police could give no explanation for the attack, in Lurgan, County Armagh.

In another attack during the night, a 15-year-old youth was painted blue and feathered in Belfast's Catholic New Lodge district. He, too, was hospitalized. The Irish Republican Army uses tarring and feathering to enforce discipline in areas it controls.

The army said 250 British troops raided four social clubs in Belfast's Catholic Ardoyne district Monday night and arrested 69 persons. It said all but two were set free after questioning.

Pro-IRA sources said seven clubs were raided and more than 100 men and boys seized. They said one elderly woman suffered a heart attack when the troops, with faces blackened, burst in, and that others were treated for shock.

Civil Rights Lawyer Asks For $161,252

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The civil rights lawyer whose firm won the Charlotte-Mecklenburg school desegregation case before the U.S. Supreme Court last year, is asking U.S. District Judge James B. McMillan to order the school board to pay $161,252 to his firm.

That is the same amount the school board paid its attorneys in the case.

Chambers, in a brief, asked the board to pay his bill because "The board's steady resistence to its obligation under the United States Constitution required an extraordinary amount of work by plaintiff's lawyers, caused an enormous imposition upon the court and delayed the realization of the constitutional rights of black school children in the Charlotte-Mecklenburg system.

Also, "The School Board totally defaulted in its duty to remedy the dual school system in Charlotte-Mecklenburg and sought at every turn to thwart this court's order."

The School Board is opposed to the request.

William J. Waggoner, the board's desegregation attorney, said Monday it would be "tragic" to order the board to pay the expenses of Chamber's firm.

In a brief filed with Judge McMillan, Waggoner said such an order "... would say to the defendants (the school board) and the community that it was wrong to litigate the case in court, to continue its financial support, to comply with the school officials, School Board's and court's effort and orders, to bring about a workable, drastic and emotional change without total chaos."

Long Beach Hopes For Chance To Meet Front-Running Bruins

By BOB EGELKO
Associated Press Sports Writer

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — It's hard to take basketball coach Jerry Tarkanian of Long Beach State seriously when he says he isn't thinking about UCLA. It gets harder when, in the next breath, he starts talking about what his third-ranked 49ers will have to do if they find themselves on the same court with the mighty Bruins.

"Of course, you can't beat UCLA if you can't get through their press and stop their fast break," the coach says. "If you can do those things, then they're down to earth.

"They run so well that if you just relax for a second they've got a bucket. I hope we get to play them."

UCLA isn't on Long Beach State's schedule. "I don't blame them," Tarkanian says. But in Long Beach 30 miles south of the Bruins in Westwood, it's hard to ignore John Wooden's giants of college basketball, who again this year may stand between the 49ers and a chance at the national title.

It's also hard to ignore the Bruins nationally. In nationwide balloting in this week's college basketball poll, they received all 43 first-place votes and 860 points. They've won all 14 games played this season.

So has Marquette, ranked second. Long Beach State was rated third, followed by Louisville, North Carolina, Ohio State, Southern California, Virginia, Penn and Florida State.

South Carolina headed the second ten. Then came Southwestern Louisiana, Brigham Young, Marshall, Hawaii, Minnesota, Princeton, Maryland, Northern Illinois and Missouri.

Tarkanian's unheralded team nearly beat UCLA in the NCAA regionals last year, but the Bruins squaked by 57-55—and then rolled to their fifth straight NCAA championship.

This year, however, the 49ers are anything but unheralded. They have won 15 of 16 games and rank third in the nation. They also have their fans hoping that this may be the year they end UCLA's reign.

The Top Twenty, with first-place votes in parentheses, won-lost records through games of Saturday, Jan. 22 and total points on the basis of 20 for first, 18 for second, 16, 14, 12, 10, 9, 8, etc.

Mt. Olive In Win Over Frosh

MT. OLIVE — Mt. Olive Junior College completely dominated the backboards last night and rolled to a 103-70 victory over the East Carolina University freshmen cagers.

Mt. Olive didn't allow the Pirates a second shot in the second half as they roared away to take the easy victory. In rebounding, they held a 42-31 edge.

The Baby Bucs shot 54.1 per cent in the first half, but were unable to get as many shots as did the Trojans, who led all the way. Both teams got off to a slow start, but Mike Cherry finally sparked Mt. Olive, and they roared away. Cherry hit 10 of the first 18 Trojan points as they moved out to a 40-29 halftime lead.

They continued to pull away from the Bucs in the second half, ending up with 43 of 81 shots from the floor for the game. The Trojans outhit East Carolina, 63-41, in the second half, for the win.

Tom Marsh led East Carolina with 23 points, while Fred Stone had 21 and Mike Smith had 10.

Cherry paced Mt. Olive with 25, while Mike Gaillard added 18, Mitch McNabb had 14 and Preston Parker had 13.

The Baby Bucs, now 0-7, seek their first victory, traveling to Louisburg Junior College on Wednesday.

Marquette Holds Off Notre Dame

By BERT ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Sports Writer

Al McGuire, Marquette's usually fiery basketball coach, did an about-face, but his Warriors didn't.

The unbeaten Warriors ran their season's winning streak to 15 Monday night, defeating Notre Dame 71-62, while McGuire, who has been berating his team after virtually every victory, was surprisingly calm after the unexpectedly close call against the 3-9 Fighting Irish.

Instead, he reserved most of his comments for Notre Dame. "They should be proud," he said, referring to the losers. "They played well. Digger Phelps has done an excellent job. Every time we went to the zone, he had his team hold the ball, which was a smart move."

Phelps also was proud of his team. "I felt we did a great job," he said, "But we got a little tired at the end and missed some key shots. But we kept our poise and confidence the whole game. Remember, we played the No. 2 team in the country and they didn't run us off the court. Before the season ends we're going to knock off some of those biggies."

Jim Chones paced Marquette with 24 points. Gary Novak of Notre Dame scored 25.

Meanwhile, fourth-ranked Louisville walloped North Texas State 95-72 for its 13th consecutive victory following a season-opening one-point loss to Florida.

The Cardinals, now 3-0 in the Missouri Valley Conference, held North Texas scoreless for nearly the first four minutes while racing to a 9-0 lead. Louisville's Jim Price led all scorers with 23 points, while teammate Ron Thomas scored 17 points and grabbed 22 rebounds.

Brigham Young, the No. 13 team, routed Athletes in Action 109-59 as 6-foot-11 Kresimir Cosic scored 17 points, snared 18 rebounds and blocked 11 shots.

Northern Illinois, rated 19th, registered its 10th consecutive victory and 11th in 12 games, handing Central Michigan its worst setback in eight years 93-64. Sophomore Jim Bradley led Northern Illinois with 25 points.

Eau Claire of Wisconsin, ranked the nation's top small college team, suffered its first loss in 14 games, bowing to North Dakota 73-70. Craig Skarperud's 22 points led North Dakota, now 12-4. Mike Ratliff had 25 points and Frank Schade 24 for Eau Claire.

Jim Andrews poured in 34 points as Kentucky overpowered Vanderbilt 106-80 in a rough game. Kentucky's Larry Stemper was ejected from the game after decking the Commodores' Jan Van Breda Kolff.

Pitt Tech Rolls Past Nash Five

BETHEL — Pitt Technical Institute rolled to a 113-90 victory over Nash Tech last night.

For the Paladins, it was a night they could do no wrong against a good basketball rival. "We put it all together," Coach Bob Turner said after the game. "Nash is a good team, but we just had everything going for us."

Pitt moved out into a 4-0 lead in the opening seconds of the game, but Nash came back to tie them up. After that, Pitt regained the lead, and slowly pulled away. By halftime, they had opened up an 11-point margin, 55-44.

In the second half, the Paladins really began to blaze away at the nets. By the midway point of the half, they had run out to a 91-66 lead. They reached the 100-point mark with about seven minutes to go, and then reserves came in after that to run out to the final mark.

The win boosted the Paladin record to 7-3 in the league and 8-3 overall. They are in second place in the conference.

Wayne Brown led the win with 36 points, while Eddie Stokes had 33, Frank Brown had 14, Leslie Saunders had 12 and Henry Beamon had 10.

For Nash Tech, J. Williams led the way with 41 points. W. Hunter had 16, Johnson had 12 and S. Middleton had 10.

Pats Regain Some Picks

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — The New England Patriots traded away their first five selections in the 1972 National Football League draft, but they've managed to re-acquire four selections.

The Patriots were assured of choices in the first five rounds, with the exception of the fourth, as NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle completed compensation Monday for the loss of Phil Olsen to the Los Angeles Rams.

Rozelle ruled that the Patriots should receive the Rams' third round choice in the draft Feb. 1. Earlier, the Patriots had been awarded the Rams' first round choice.

The Patriots had surrendered their first five draft choices, including the first in signing Joe Kapp from the Minnesota Vikings in 1970. However, they bounced back into the draft market by getting the first choice from Los Angeles, the second round pick from Kansas City, the third round selection from San Francisco and the fifth round draft from Oakland.

The top two teams in the City Basketball League continued to roll along last night, picking up victories. Coca-Cola, the leader, beat College View, 82-61, while Hallow's Distributing Co., number two, got a forfeit win over Stewart's Sandwiches. Big Value Discount took over third with a 64-58 win over Book Exchange.

Coke leads the league with a 7-0 record, while Hallow's is 5-2. They are followed by Big Value 4-3, College View, 3-4; Book Exchange, 2-5, and Stewart's, 0-7.

Big Value and the Exchange struggled through the first half, with Big Value gained a 27-26 edge at the horn. Then, in the second half, Big Value got a little more breathing room, easing out to a 37-32 advantage in scoring to take the win.

Ivey Smith led Big Value with 15 points, while Dixon Sauls had 12 and Lester Wells had 11. For the Exchange, Tom Jordan had 18.

Coke wasted little time in showing College View that it intended to stay on top. They rushed away to take a 46-24 lead at the halftime and put it out of reach. College View got a small rally in the second half, outhitting Coke, 37-36, but it barely dented the big lead.

Jim Modlin led Coke with 27 points while Johnny Turner had 21 and Tom Coker had 10. For College View, Tom Hayes had 19 and Joe Clayton had 14.

Furman Moves Into 1st Place

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

William and Mary's hopes of a first-division finish in the Southern Conference basketball race should get a shot in the arm tonight when the Indians play host to Virginia Military's last-place Keydets.

The Indians stand 3-3 in conference play and can pull into a virtual tie for fourth with The Citadel's Bulldogs, 3-2, with a victory over the Keydets, who have yet to win in five league starts.

But coach Warren Mitchell knows better than to take VMI lightly in spite of the Keydets' 3-11 over-all record. His own Indians are only 4-9 against all opposition, and VMI had shown a tendency of late to stay within striking distance when the Keydets are hitting the basket.

VMI's big trouble has been poor shooting and inconsistency. The Keydets also have given away height to just about every opponent, and tonight's encounter will be no exception.

It's the only game on tap tonight for conference teams.

Furman's defending conference champion Paladins, shooting 63 per cent from the floor, moved back into sole possession of first place in the league standings Monday night with a 116-98 victory over Appalachian State's Mountaineers.

The triumph boosted the Paladins to 6-2 in league play compared with the 5-2 marks for Davidson and East Carolina. It was the 11th consecutive defeat for Appalachian, which played just four league games in its first season and lost them all.

Conference scoring leader Russ Hunt poured in 34 points and Roy Simpson added 31 for the Paladins.

Made Selling Personalized

Erskine Gallant became a famous Merchant-Prince by using regular newspaper ads, 7 days per week, for 44 years. Coupled with his folksy personality and keen merchandising 6th sense, he enriched the lives of millions via quality goods at fair prices!

By GEORGE W. CRANE
Ph.D., M.D.

Case S-580: W. Erskine Gallant, Sr., died recently, aged 82.

He started as a retail store clerk in the great Belk Stores (North Carolina), drawing $6 per week.

He became an expert Applied Psychologist who regarded selling as a personalized thing.

And he developed a 6th sense regarding the type of merchandise that would appeal to customers.

So the Belk Stores made him a buyer; then later aided him in opening some 40 Gallant-Blek department stores all throughout the Southeastern States.

But he didn't hide away behind a grandiose office desk, for he was out on the floor, hobnobbing with customers.

And on the street of his home city, (Anderson, S. C.) he would stop to shake hands or inquire about the families of his many friends.

For Mr. Gallant was a folksy person, though one of America's greatest modern titans of our "free enterprise" system.

Mrs. Crane and I had vacationed with him and his lovely wife, Ione, at St. Petersburg, Florida.

And we had often been entertained by the Gallants in their Anderson home during the past 35 years.

Since I spent 5 years as a salesman; then later taught the courses at Northwestern University and George Washington University on "Sales and Advertising Psychology," I doubly admired Mr. Gallant.

For he had also pioneered the listing of prices of his merchandise on the tags attached thereto.

Most of you readers may not be able to remember that some 50 years ago, prices were concealed by various code numbers.

So you had to ask the clerk how much a dress or pair of shoes really cost.

And the merchants of those days might vary the price, depending on whether you were wealthy or a poor man.

But Mr. Gallant, like Henry Ford in the automotive realm, offered quality merchandise at a standard price for everybody.

He was also a devout church member and a heavy contributor to hospitals, YMCA and other worthy organizations.

For our "free enterprise" system has thus sponsored as a "fringe benefit" far more colleges, hospitals, churches and other charitable organizations than Socialistic Britain, plus Communistic Russia and Red China, combined!

Erskine Gallant thus epitomizes the wonderful advantages that America has offered every ambitious boy who mixes elbow grease and good character with diligence to duty!

And he certainly proved the value of regular newspaper ads including color, which he pioneered!

For he ran a daily display advertisement (¼ to a full page), 7 days per week, for 44 consecutive years in the Anderson newspapers and attributed the zooming success of his chain of large stores to this form of educational print publicity!

Editor J. B. Hall concluded his superb eulogy of this great Merchant-Prince:

"We don't know what Erskine Gallant will be doing in heaven...but his talents will then have full range on a magnitude we cannot even imagine.

"There his grand personality will abound and expand under the sunshine of God's eternal love and care."

SOLUTION OF YESTERDAY'S PUZZLE

Male Coyote Is A 'Family Man'

NEW YORK (AP) — The male coyote is an unselfish and attentive "family man," who ill deserves his infamous reputation as a predator, states Ezra Bowen in "The High Sierra," first volume in Time-Life Books' American Wilderness series. The coyote brings food to his pregnant wife, plays with the pups, helps the family to move to a new den and, Eskimo-style, touches noses with wife and friends when returning from a hunt.

Choir Greeted Ex-Opera Star

STEVENSON, Md. (AP) — Former Metropolitan Opera star Rosa Ponselle received a surprise Christmas gift in the form of a serenade at her home by the Immaculate Heart of Mary choir.

Miss Ponselle's Christmas cards had featured a portrait of the 35-boy choir.

SUB MAKES AN ERROR

NEW LONDON, Conn. (AP) — A nuclear-powered submarine, transferring water used as a coolant, inadvertently discharged 500 gallons into the Thames River.

The coolant was being transferred from the nuclear attack submarine Dace to the submarine tender Fuller.

Hawaiian Poi Has Varied Uses

HONOLULU (AP) — Poi, a food staple of ground taro root and water, often serves other purposes in Hawaii.

The sticky paste sometimes is used as a gentle cleansing agent, a cure for colic, an antidote for scorpion and bee stings, and as a soothing poultice for eye and skin irritations.

Opening lead: Queen of ♣

An apparently routine play at trick one spelled disaster for most Souths who played today's hand at four hearts when it was dealt at a recent National Tournament.

West opened the queen of clubs and most declarers covered with dummy's king which led to an unexpected outcome. East played the ace of clubs and promptly shifted to the seven of spades. Some Souths chose to take a finesse—playing the deuce from their hand. West was in with the king and continued with the eight which East ruffed with the nine of hearts. The eight of spades was a suit preference signal requesting partner to return a diamond, the higher ranking of the two remaining suits. If West wanted East to play a club, he would have led his lowest spade.

East dutifully returned a diamond and West trumped with the deuce of hearts. Another spade enabled East to score the king of hearts and a diamond back gave West a ruff to complete the rout which amounted to a three trick setback for South.

An even worse fate awaited those declarers who refused the spade finesse and played the ace from their hand when East shifted at trick two. A diamond was innocently led in an attempt to reach dummy to take a heart finesse. West ruffed in, cashed the king of spades and continued the suit—inaugurating a crossruff in spades and diamonds which enabled the defenders to score all five of their trumps as well as the ace of clubs and the king of spades. The result was a four trick set.

The only successful declarers were those who ducked the queen of clubs at the opening gun. Altho East could have profited by overtaking with the ace to shift to a spade, such an unnatural play could only have been based on a peek at South's holding. East signaled encouragingly with the eight and declarer ruffed the continuation with the five of hearts. A diamond was led and West trumped in, but there was no way that he could reach his partner.

If West returns a spade, the jack is played from dummy so that South can take the heart finesse. East's king succumbs, trumps are drawn and a trick is conceded to West's king of spades. The jack of diamonds is discarded on South's long spade and declarer loses only three tricks on the deal—a club, a spade, and the diamond ruff.

Special Course Trains Family Doctors

By THOMAS C. MILLER

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— Specialization has made the family doctor a vanishing breed, but at the University of California Medical Center, family medicine training is not only alive and well but a specialty in itself.

According to Dr. Herbert Vandervoort, the head of the UC family medicine program, the pendulum in medical schools is swinging toward a return to family doctor training.

"Studies indicate that about 80 per cent of diseases can be treated by a GP (General Practitioner)," Vandervoort said. "And a lot of people graduating now want to go into family medicine."

A family medicine specialty was created in 1969 by the American Medical Association, and since then 30 students in each graduating class at UC, or about 25 per cent, have named it as their choice.

"There has been a void due to the trend toward speciaization," Vandervoort said in explaining why the family doctor has been disappearing from the medical scene.

"And there has been a myth that GP's were toward the bottom of the academic pole in medical school. Students got the idea that the GP is out there doing a lot of lousy work," he said. "That's just not so."

Support Increases

Another UC family medicine faculty member, Dr. Donald Ransom, said the trend toward family medicine was due to a combination of increased support from medical and government officials, a demand by patients for more personalized care, and more socially conscious medical students.

"But practitioners have also discovered that some of the old models just don't work anymore," Ransom said. "The shift to family medicine is like the shift to ecology."

The family medicine program at UC combines classroom instruction, on-the-job training with family doctors in the San Francisco Bay area and a family practice residency that allows a doctor to bypass his internship and concentrate on family care at a hospital.

A UC freshman medical student can choose family medicine as one of six specialty areas and begin his training by taking a basic course in family medicine.

"We limited the freshman class to 30 students, but 50 wanted in," Vandervoort said.

A student in the freshman class, Lucia Cies, said she was looking for a "new method of reaching people."

"The family doctor concept was an alternative to the clinic model or the teamwork method now being practices by many doctors," she said.

While in the freshman course, the students can volunteer for preceptorships —actually working with a practicing family doctor.

One Family Study

While working with the practicing doctor from six to nine months, the student is assigned one particular family for special study.

"We expect a very detailed report on that family," Vandervoort said. "Some students become very close to the familes, and even after the course ends, they continue to keep in touch with them."

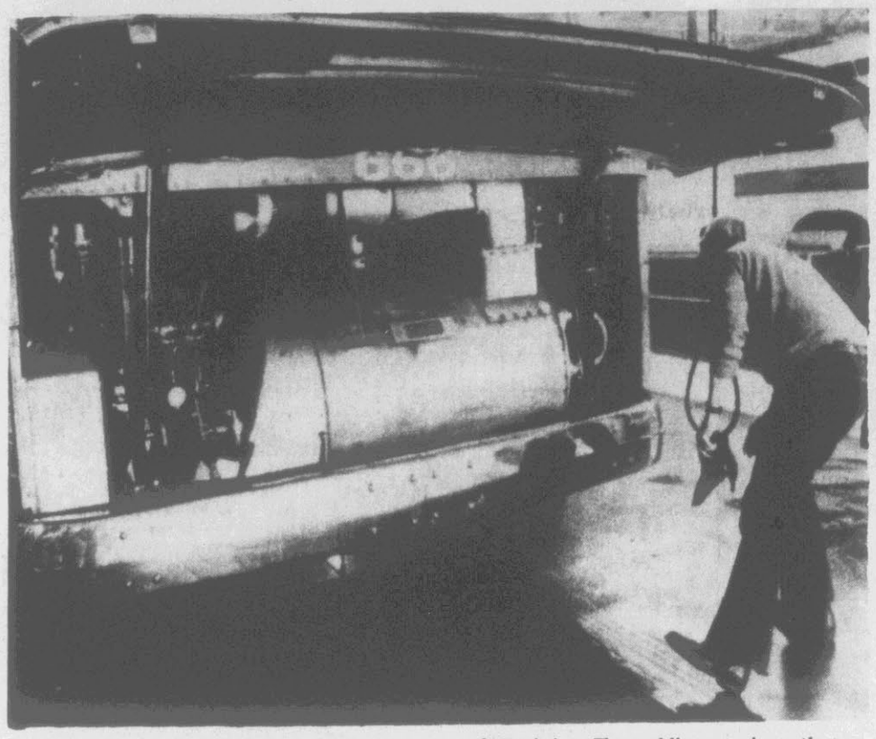

The students in the preceptorships are offered a choice of working with a doctor in an urban minority area, an urban majority, a suburban, or rural practice. Vandervoort said the students have selected these options in about equal numbers.

After the basic freshman course, the students can take advanced courses in such subjects as family counseling. At the junior level, some students actually do family counseling at the UC Hospital family clinic.

After graduation, the doctor can apply for a family practice residency related to a university, such as UC's program at Sonoma County Hospital in Santa Rosa, north of San Francisco.

In the residency, the doctor is given total responsibility, within the limits of his training, for the care of a number of families. At the same time, he receives training in other specialty areas.

"We have 18 residents at Sonoma, with six slots opening each year," Vandervoort said. "We have 60 applicants for those six slots."

CHECKING THE BOILER — Jim Miller of William Brobeck and Associates checks the boiler in the AC Transit steam-powered bus during a break in test runs Monday in Oakland and Berkeley. The public was given the opportunity of riding the bus during the runs. The steam engine is said to be well within air pollution standards. (AP Wirephoto)

Chased Down 'Flying Itchers'

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Police and pedestrians who chased down some unidentified flying objects discovered they weren't flying saucers—they were flying itchers.

Officers said the objects were seen Monday night floating from fashionable Davis Islands in Tampa Bay to the Hyde Park area.

They turned out to be plastic laundry bags kept airborne by small burners that used sulphur to provide hot air.

"They also seemed to be covered with something that made everybody itch like mad," said one police officer. "All you had to do was get near the things and you started scratching."

Named One Of Top 20

Miss Chrisanthe Kares of Greenville has been named one of 20 "Outstanding Seniors" at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

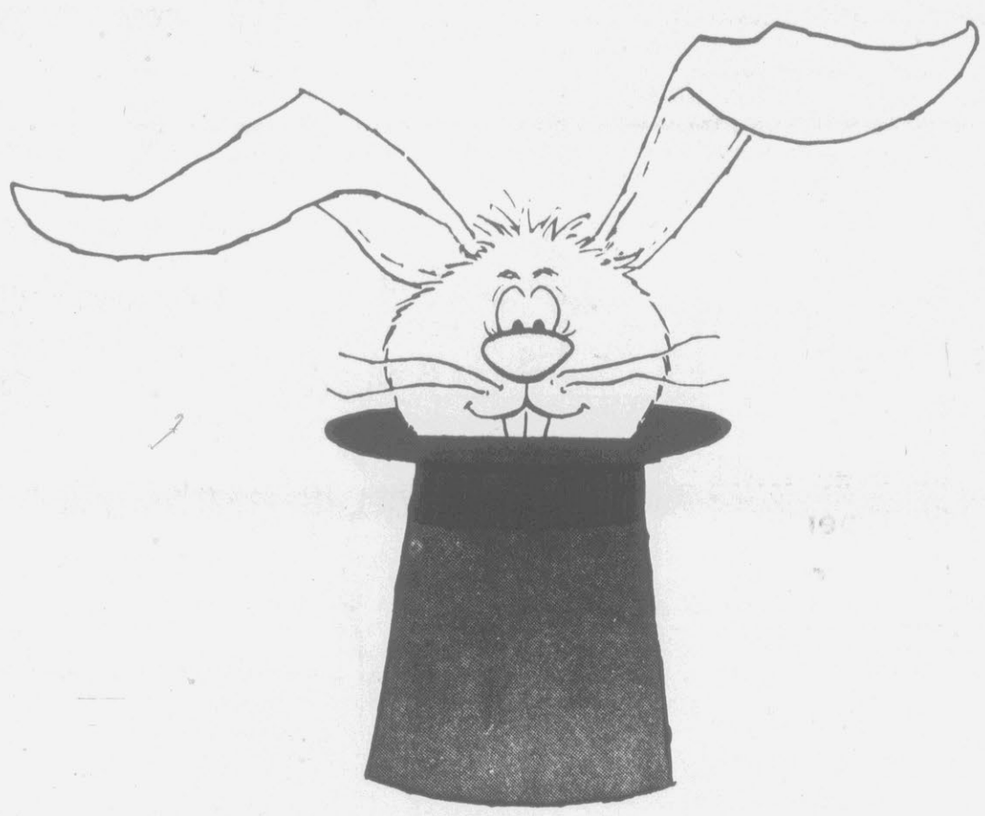

The Outstanding Seniors were elected recently in a balloting of senior class members who number more than 1,000.

The daughter of Mrs. Chris Kares of 501 E. Third Street here, Miss Kares has served on UNC-G's freshman orientation committee and as chairman of the school's Judicial Court. She is a member of the Golden Chain, a campus honorary organization.

The Rose High School graduate says she hopes to teach first grade when she graduated next June.

Will 'Fight' Strike Law

WASHINGTON (AP) — Organized labor is talking tough against President Nixon's proposal for a special law to end the long West Coast dock strike but is privately worried the bill might pass.

"We will fight it. We are not going to buy compulsory arbitration in any form," said a spokesman for the 13.6-million-member AFL-CIO.

Nixon's bill, if enacted by Congress, would end the strike, send workers back to their jobs and create a three-man arbitration board to settle the dispute within 40 days with a binding ruling effective for 18 months.

Many members of Congress with big labor blocs in their districts generally shy away from proposals for forced labor settlements, especially in election years.

But AFL-CIO sources noted that the walkout by the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union had gone on so long that many people, including members of Congress, hace been alienated.

"It's a tough one for us. It was the one issue greeted with a good deal of applause in Nixon's State of the Union message," said one highly placed source in the labor federation. Nixon first mentioned his proposed compulsory-arbitration proposal in that address.

Withdrawal, POWs Deal Seen

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — There are strong indications the Nixon administration is preparing to offer the North Vietnamese a date for total withdrawal of U.S. troops from Vietnam in exchange for the release of American prisoners of war.

The possibility of such a trade offer before the November presidential election has been mentioned often in recent weeks, but Sen. Edward W. Brooke, R-Mass., said Monday night he had heard the offer will come "very soon."

Brooke, a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, told the Greater Boston Young Republicans Club he is so certain he could almost predict it.

And a high-level State Department source said Brooke "appears to be on sound ground," but he would not discuss it further.

A spokesman for the State Department specifically refused to knock down the Brooke report but would not confirm it either.

Ambassador William Porter, chief U.S. negotiator at the Paris peace talks, who flew home secretly last week, conferred Monday with Secretary of State William P. Rogers, but there was no official report of what was discussed.

Presidential press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler, however, told newsmen earlier in the day that Porter would not be taking any specific new proposals back to the negotiating table when he returns to Paris later in the week.

President Nixon said in a television interview Jan. 2 that the North Vietnamese in Paris had said "no deal" to a withdrawal-for-prisoners exchange offer. But no such proposal has ever been made at the Paris talks.

Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., and Rep. Robert L. Leggett, D-Calif., both have said their talks with North Vietnamese negotiators convinced them such a trade is possible.

The North Vietnamese, however, indicated following the Nixon television statement that they were not dropping their insistence that the United States abandon the Saigon government as a part of any settlement.

The U.S. guarantee of support for the Saigon government, often stated by Nixon in the past, was not mentioned in the Jan. 2 interview.

Asked whether by next November "there will be no Americans, land sea or air—no residual force—fighting in support of Laotians, Cambodians or South Vietnamese," Nixon said:

"That depends on one circumstance ...: the situation with regard to our POWs."

The White House said later, however, that the United States was not dropping its support of President Thieu of South Vietnam, but the spokesman stopped short of saying that support had to be in the form of a residual U.S. force in the Southeast Asian country.

Irving Plans Early Return

IBIZA (AP) — Writer Clifford Irving plans to return to the United States before the end of the week in an attempt to straighten out the conflict over the authenticity of his biography of Howard Hughes, his wife said today.

Edith Irving, 36, said her husband was in contact with "people in New York" by telephone today and planned to return in a couple of days.

"Nobody is as confused as we are over developments," Mrs. Irving said as she talked to a newsman outside her home on this Balearic island in the Mediterranean.

Irving was not at home.

She said Irving mailed to Hughes checks made out to "H.R. Hughes" by McGraw-Hill Book Co. They were deposited in the Swiss Credit Bank in Zurich. McGraw-Hill bought material purported to be Hughes' autobiography.

Swiss police have issued an international warrant saying that an unidentified woman was wanted on several counts of fraud in drawing out $650,000, practically all the money in the account.

Mrs. Irving said that if her husband were present he would say forcefully that the checks had been mailed to Hughes.

The mystery woman has been identified both as a blonde and a brunette. She identified herself as Helga R. Hughes to the bank with a Swiss passport issued in Spain.

The Swiss Embassy in Madrid has said it has no knowledge of such a passport. But its Consulate in Barcelona, where the passport reportedly was issued, refused to confirm or deny its issuance.

Recognition For Bangladesh

DACCA (AP) — Czechoslovakia quickly followed the Soviet Union today in recognizing Bangladesh and other nations were expected to follow suit.

Officials of the young nation expressed great pleasure at Moscow's recognition.

Force-Feeding Policy 'Wrong'

NEW YORK (UPI) "A fat baby is a healthy baby" is one old saying that is not necessarily true. A fat childhood can lead to an unhappy adolescence and an invitation to adult heart and arterial disease, say medical authorities. The pattern for overeating in adulthood may be set by parents who drill the "clean your plate" syndrome into their offspring.

New Greenville Deanery Includes Eight Counties

Under a reorganization of Catholic deaneries in North Carolina, St. Peter's Church in Greenville has been designated headquarters of a new deanery comprising eight counties.

The eight-county district is made up of Beaufort, Bertie, Hertford, Hyde, Martin, Pitt, Tyrrell and Washington. It will be known as the Greenville deanery.

The title of Vicar Forane is borne by the pastor of the headquarter church, the Very Reverend Maurice Spillane.

In a letter to Father Spillane, Bishop Vincent S. Waters of the Diocese of Raleigh, pointed out the necessity for reorganizing deaneries in Eastern North Carolina following recent erection of the new Diocese of Charlotte.

Until the reallignment, Greenville came under the Goldsboro Deanery; and immediately prior, under the Rocky Mount Deanery.

Historically, organization of deaneries in the Catholic Church dates back to the second Century.

The role of the Dean, or Vicar Forane, is described as to "watch over the District in his care, and to see particularly whether the clergy of his District lead a life conformable to prescriptions of the code of canon law."

Ethiopia Hosts Security Council

By SHIRLEY CHRISTIAN
Associated Press Writer

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The United Nations begins moving its decision center to Ethiopia today for a week of Security Council meetings on African issues.

Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, his aides, the ambassadors of the United States, the Soviet Union, China, Britain and France, the 10 other Security Council members and a Secretariat staff of 125 depart on a charter flight and commercial planes.

After an overnight stop in Madrid, the chartered jet will land the Secretariat personnel plus newsmen and a few diplomats in Addis Ababa Thursday afternoon.

Most of the 15 nations on the council are sending three or four members from their delegations on later commercial flights. Waldheim leaves Tuesday night and will stop over in Rome.

The meetings will begin Friday and must be completed by the following Friday, Feb. 4. They will be held in Africa Hall, seat of the U.N. Economic Commission for Africa.

It is the first time the Security Council has met away from U.N. headquarters in 20 years and the first time ever for it alone to convene away from headquarters. The council met in 1951-52 in Paris, when the General Assembly was meeting there.

The cost to the United Nations is estimated at $139,500. The Ethiopian government agreed to pay the cost of hotel rooms for U.N. staff and provide messengers, security personnel and local transportation.

Addis Ababa apparently was chosen because resident U.N. staff and facilities were available, reducing the cost. Estimates of the price to hold the sessions in other African capitals ranged as high as $500,000.

The council already has agreed to allow speakers to talk about any African question the council ever has taken up.

Among them are such live issues as Portuguese colonialism: South African racial segregation: South Africa's control over South-West Africa and the minority white government in Rhodesia.
