

Britain Sets Up Court Of Inquiry

Order Londonderry Probe

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — The British government sought to calm the Irish Catholics today by setting up a court of inquiry into the killings of 13 civilians in a battle with British paratroopers in Londonderry Sunday.

The Catholics struck back Monday with bomb blasts, fires, strikes, demonstrations and torrents of abuse. Barricades made of hijacked vehicles blazed in Belfast, and clouds of smoke rose from a burning brewery and saloon.

Mobs tried unsuccessfully three times to burn down the British Embassy in Dublin, capital of the Irish Republic.

British Prime Minister Edward Heath announced he would ask Parliament to establish a special tribunal with judicial powers to investigate Londonderry's Bloody Sunday. But spokesmen for Northern Ireland's Catholic minority threatened not to cooperate with any commission set up by a government which they believe is out to bolster Protestant rule in the province.

No action was expected against Bernadette Devlin for her assault on Home Secretary Reginald Maudling in the House of Commons Monday, although normally she would have to apologize or face suspension. Infuriated because Speaker Selwyn Lloyd would not let her question Maudling about the killings, the 24-year-old Catholic deputy from Northern Ireland called the 54-year-old home secretary a "murdering hypocrite," then charged across the floor of the house, hit him in the face, pulled his hair and clawed him.

Dragged out of the Commons chamber, she told newsmen, "I'm sorry I didn't get at his throat." She added: "Both the provisional and official wings of the IRA have said they will each kill 13 paratroopers in vengeance for those who died on Sunday. That is 26 coffins coming home to England—and I won't shed a tear for any one of them."

Miss Devlin was in the crowd at Londonderry when the firing broke out.

SAM Sites Are Again Attacked

By GEORGE ESPER
Associated Press Writer

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. planes made their heaviest attack on North Vietnam today and Monday since the Dec. 26-30 air offensive. The U.S. Command reported seven "protective reaction" strikes in two days.

The fighter-bombers made five attacks Monday and two more today against surface-to-air missile—SAM—sites, anti-aircraft artillery batteries and radar defenses from the northern edge of the demilitarized zone to a point 50 miles to the north.

The command said the North Vietnamese fired three SAM missiles and a barrage of anti-aircraft artillery shells on unarmed reconnaissance planes, bombers attacking the Ho Chi Minh trail in neighboring Laos, and the fighters escorting them.

The command said all of the American planes returned to their bases safely, and that the results of the retaliatory attacks were not known.

Other U.S. military sources said the American air campaign to blunt the North Vietnamese offensive expected this month along the DMZ and in South Vietnam's central highlands triggered the enemy action.

In other air action, the command reported that U.S. fighter-bombers flew 19 combat strikes in South Vietnam on Monday, the highest number in the south since Oct. 27 when 27 were flown.

The raids were concentrated against the North Vietnamese buildup in the northern quarter of the country and the central highlands.

The South Vietnamese command acknowledged for the first time that its bombers have been flying strikes in Laos since Dec. 1. This had been reported by U.S. and South Vietnamese officials, but the Saigon command said it withheld an official announcement "for security reasons and best results."

It said South Vietnamese bombers have been averaging 5 to 10 strikes a day against the Ho Chi Minh trail, and no planes have been lost. U.S. planes are averaging 200-to-250 strikes a day against the trail network.

The U.S. command reported an increase in ground activity involving American troops, with small-scale engagements between reconnaissance patrols on the eastern flanks of Saigon and North Vietnamese patrols.

It said two soldiers from the 3rd Brigade, 1st Air Cavalry Division, were killed and four wounded in three clashes Monday and today 38 to 45 miles east of Saigon.

New fighting was also reported along the DMZ.

Fire Severely Damages Glass Firm's Buildings

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Firemen, hampered by dense smoke, battled for an hour yesterday before bringing a mid-afternoon fire in a glass company work area under control.

Fire Department officers reported extensive damage resulted to buildings used by the Ernest and Knott Glass Co. after the fire erupted about 3:30 p.m.

Glass company official Carl Knott said he thought the fire might have started from an oil space heater used in one of the areas of the building. He said an employee of the firm started the heater about 1 p.m., but noted that no one was in the building when the fire erupted.

The buildings damaged by the fire were former stores that fronted on the 900 block of Dickinson Avenue. One damaged section of the building was used to store about 300 auto windshields, Knott said, while another section was used as a work shop. He noted that church window glass and other glass was also stored in the burned portion of the brick-masonry structure.

No fire reached a third section of the building used by the glass firm as a picture frame shop, although some smoke damage was reported.

Officers said firemen were hampered in combating the blaze and dense smoke that sometimes covered firemen in the street so they could not see. The smoke, fire officials noted, was generated when flames

Neighborliness

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — Harrison Scott wants you to know that neighborliness is still alive in Wilson.

Things were looking bad for Scott of Rt. 3, Kenly this year. The farmer is in his second month of recuperation from an illness.

But his prospects changed Saturday when crews and machinery moved in from a dozen neighboring farms and plowed the 160 acres Scott will have in production this year.

"Some things you can't pay for," Scott said as he watched the 12 tractors and 51 bottom plows prepare the soil. "You can't imagine how I feel—and there is no way to describe the emotion with mere words.

"Anyway, what the fellows are doing here is deeply appreciated—and the whole thing makes life seem more worthwhile.

"We go along routinely from day to day and it takes an unusual happening oftentimes, for us to discover how concerned, warm and friendly the neighbors in the area really are," he said.

No-Fault Plan Foes Attacked

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon's consumer adviser accused the American Trial Lawyers Association today of waging an emotional and deceptive campaign against no-fault automobile insurance proposals.

"The techniques being used by that organization would appear to be so devious, misleading, and blatantly self-serving, as to cast a long shadow over the integrity of the entire legal profession," said Virginia Knauer, presidential assistant for consumer affairs.

Mrs. Knauer, a spokesman for the administration's support of state no-fault insurance programs, made her charges in a letter to the president of the American Bar Association.

She asked the ABA to measure whether the trial lawyers' tactics violate ethics of the legal profession.

"What we are doing is telling the truth," said Marvin E. Lewis, president of the trial lawyers. "We will not be intimidated."

At issue are proposals to pay accident victims under most circumstances without resorting to legal action to fix liability or negligence.

No-fault systems are already in effect in Delaware, Florida, Puerto Rico and in Massachusetts, where the government has promised a 27.6-per-cent rate cut this year due to savings from no-fault. A no-fault plan passed in Illinois has been declared unconstitutional and is locked in a legal battle.

The American Bar Association is to consider at its convention this week an endorsement of a modified no-fault plan. The smaller American Trial Lawyers Association, whose members handle insurance litigation cases, is opposed to no-fault.

In her letter to ABA President Leon Jaworski, Mrs. Knauer specifically complained about unsigned pamphlets distributed by the trial lawyers, by Lewis' characterization of no-fault as a "hoax and a giant fraud being perpetrated on the public," and a series of newspaper advertisements in Pennsylvania.

Mrs. Knauer said the unsigned pamphlets "strike me as a combination of emotional tactics and half-truths."

"I'm very sorry Mrs. Knauer doesn't like our pamphlets," said Lewis. "I don't like her statement."

Lewis denied his organization was responsible for the Pennsylvania newspaper ads, which were signed "The Ad Hoc Committee of Lawyers."

Humphrey Says CIA Should Get Drugs Job

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer

Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey says the United States should put its Central Intelligence Agency to work hunting down heroin smugglers.

"It is time we made known to our friends around the world," the Democratic presidential candidate said, "that we will not permit the cultivation and export of a poison that destroys the lives of hundreds of thousands of Americans and which is responsible for a substantial portion of American crime."

The Minnesota senator discussed the drug problem Monday in a speech prepared for delivery at a drug-treatment center in Miami where he was campaigning in the Florida presidential primary.

"We should enlist the efforts of the CIA in this battle," Humphrey said. "If the CIA can ferret out subversives, it can find the dope smuggler and put him out of business."

The former vice president called the Nixon administration's $230 million allocation for drug treatment "totally inadequate" and said there should be a massive increase in federal appropriations to set up a drug cure and control agency. The agency, he said, should have responsibility for both law enforcement and drug treatment and education.

Three other Democratic presidential hopefuls unveiled proposals for new domestic aid programs Monday.

Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine, speaking in St. Petersburg, Fla., which has a high proportion of retired citizens, said the government should establish a $1 billion program giving direct federal aid to the elderly.

"We must bring relief and reform to our property tax system," Muskie said. But he criticized President Nixon's proposed value-added tax as a national sales tax "that will make you pay more money every day so that you can pay a little less money at the end of the year."

Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota told a news conference in Boston the federal government should underwrite a third of the cost of public school education through direct grants to states on the basis of their needs and ability to raise revenue for education.

States that publish all property valuations, have uniform assessments and eliminate special tax privileges should be rewarded with larger grants, McGovern said.

Pat Paulsen Is Ruled Subject To 'Equal Time'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Comedian Pat Paulsen is a legitimate candidate for president, the Federal Communications Commission says.

The FCC made its ruling Monday in response to a request from Walt Disney Productions, Inc. Paulsen is scheduled to appear in an episode of a new Disney television series called "The Mouse Factory."

The company wondered if Paulsen's announced candidacy for the Republican presidential nomination would obligate stations showing the program to provide equal time to other presidential hopefuls because of the FCC's equal time clause.

The FCC said the regulation would apply and stations would be obligated to provide equal time to other candidates who demanded it.

Paulsen should be considered a national candidate because he "has qualified to be on the ballot in New Hampshire and is apparently actively campaigning," the FCC said.

Beef Prices, Already High—May Soar Higher

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supermarket beef prices, already at record highs, may be on the verge of a full-fledged stampede, according to new government smoke signals.

The Agriculture Department said Monday that January beef cattle prices broke a 21-year record set during the Korean War, reaching an average of $31.40 per hundredweight for live animals.

Meanwhile, the department says, retail prices of choicegrade beef in December—before the full effect of the record cattle market was felt—rose to a record all-cut average of $1.08 per pound.

Raw farm products are not included in federal price controls, and retailers may pass on added costs to customers.

Also, consumers appear willing to buy beef almost at any price. It is the favorite, by far, and, with second-ranked pork, comprises nearly one-third of the average family's food bill.

Doubts over the cost of meat production were raised Monday by the Food and Drug Administration which served notice it will curb the use of antibiotics in livestock feed unless the medicines are proved safe for meat eaters.

Some agricultural spokesmen say that, if feed antibiotics are banned, costs of livestock production would soar and consumers would end up paying much more. But government experts say the economic effects of an antibiotic ban are impossible to tell at this time.

Rising cattle prices are providing a mixed blessing for the Nixon administration, which wants to see farm incomes improved but shudders at the possibility of a consumer revolt over soaring prices in an election year.

In 1951, when the previous record of $30.30 per hundredweight was set for cattle, retail beef prices averaged 88 cents per pound, fully 20 cents less than today.

Cattleman costs for shipping, processing and marketing beef have risen much more sharply, so farmers are not the primary recipients of higher prices.

Little consumer relief is seen for the near future. Agriculture Department officials predict cattle prices will continue strong and see little likelihood of middleman markets shrinking much.

This, they say, is true even though more cattle are now being fed for slaughter later. As of Jan. 1, there were 8 per cent more in fattening pens than a year earlier, and cattleman say herds are expanding gradually to take care of future needs.

One immediate solution, favored by many consumer groups, is expansion of meat imports. But those, mostly lowgrade meat used for hamburger and processing, are tightly supervised under a quota system.

FTC Broadens Health Warning

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Trade Commission has accepted consent orders that will result in a health warning in every advertisement for cigarettes manufactured by six major companies.

The orders require manufacturers to print in all ads: "Warning: The surgeon general has determined that cigarette smoking is dangerous to your health."

Newspapers, magazines, and even billboards will come under the rule, which the FTC says probably will be put into effect by summer, pending consideration of manufacturers' comments on the proposal.

His Idea Is Foreign With French Female

By Abigail Van Buren
(c 1972 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: I am a college student [male type] who recently started going with a very dishy French exchange student. We combine business with pleasure as she also tutors me in French. [This is no gag, I pay her.]

The problem is that she lives on campus and I commute. When we are together it is always at my place because she lives with two other girls. I call for her and drive her home, but it is such a great distance that we usually pull up in front of her place in broad daylight. She doesn't like this because she says the neighbors "talk," and it looks bad. I told her she could eliminate that problem by staying at my place all night, but she won't buy it.

How can I convince her that in this country it doesn't mean anything if a guy brings a girl home by the dawn's early light?

COLLEGE MAN

DEAR MAN: I can't convince her because I agree with her. Start earlier and you won't be bringing her home in the "oui" hours of the morning.

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of a co-worker whose idea of a very special Christmas "gift" is a large picture of HIMSELF with a flowery inscription?

JUST ASKING

DEAR JUST: He must be long on pictures and short on taste.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 21-year-old bride-to-be. The groom is still married to his first wife. Our wedding is set for Feb. 12th, the invitations have already gone out, but he's still not divorced.

Every time I mention it to him he tells me that these things take "time." When we became engaged [two years ago], he told me we were getting a divorce, but for some reason it hasn't come thru yet. I sometimes wonder if he isn't still in love with his first wife, and is just using me.

What am I going to do about all the wedding plans if he is still married by our wedding date?

CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: Cancel the wedding, of course. But if I were you, I wouldn't wait that long.

DEAR ABBY: This is for the husband of "PRACTICALLY UNTOUCHED IN TULSA": We don't believe that if he doesn't see a doctor, his wife should see a lawyer. He should see his nearest recruiting officer and spend a year in Viet Nam. Then he would appreciate one of the finer things in life—having his wife with him.

Marriage 2000
Why Father Will Mind The Kids

(Editor's Note: Following is the last of three articles on what marriage will be like 30 years from now.)

By STELLA BRUCE.

NEW YORK (WNS) — Mr. and Mrs. 2000 will finish breakfast, send the children upstairs to wash their faces and get themselves ready for school.

But what's this? It's the husband who receives a peck on the cheek as he waves the family off from the front doorstep and returns to the kitchen to wash up and start the day's chores!

It's the wife who, briefcase in hand, hurries off to catch the bus or commuter train for a day's work in the city.

Is this really what marriage 2000 will be all about? Will the basic roles of husband and wife be completely reversed in only 30 years' time?

According to what are known as "projected studies" — using today's facts to forecast tomorrow's trends — it looks as though in many households this is exactly what will happen.

More Independent

Professor Nicholas Pyzer, in charge of Environmental Studies at San Francisco University, is only one expert who is quite reconciled to the fact that basic alterations in the accepted pattern of marriage will have become quite commonplace by the year 2000.

In other words, if mom is brighter than dad, and can earn more money, it will be quite in order for her to do so. And dad will be stuck with the diapers and dirty dishes, whether he likes the idea or not.

According to the results of a recent survey, 85 per cent of husbands claimed to hold the view that they should do some work in the home — but of course that is very different from doing it all the time.

And when 2,000 girls in the 18 to 25 age-group were asked whether they would be prepared to go out to work leaving their husbands at home, 45 per cent said they would, so long as the money was more than the husband could earn.

Certainly it would seem that Mrs. 2000 is going to be a far more independent-minded woman than today's housewife.

There's even a possibility that although she is married and wears a wedding ring, if she continues a career she will prefer to be known by her maiden name.

The present system, according to dozens of wives questioned by Britain's National Union of Townswomen's Guilds, is out of date, confusing, and can hit the career of a successful businesswoman.

Said one wife: "The single woman who has built up a reputation for herself in a career can find the change of name detrimental." Said another: "It harks back to the days of serfdom!"

The day of the husband as the undisputed boss of the household will be over, too — if it isn't now. Sociologists note there is a strong trend toward equality which should reach its peak around the year 2000.

Significantly, young people questioned in surveys are already all for a husband-wife equal partnership: 82 per cent opted for this arrangement in one recent study.

Increased Longevity

But what will happen when both husband and wife want to continue with their careers?

According to Professor Pyzer, it's extremely likely that children won't start formal education until the age of seven and will continue their studies until their early twenties.

"This is because of increased longevity of the work force," he explains. "Until they start school, children of working mothers will go to play areas, where they will be looked after by 'worker mother'."

Where there is some doubt about which member of the marriage partnership should go out to work, Professor Pyzer envisions a simple examination.

"The person with the most potential," he said, "will become the breadwinner. The other will stay at home!"

How will men feel about an arrangement like this? Naturally it will take some getting used to.

Work Enjoyment

A recent British nationwide survey among young unmarried men revealed that 45 per cent didn't like the idea particularly, but would like to have more time to think it over. Twenty-three per cent thought it had a good chance of working. The rest were dead against it.

What most men objected to was not so much staying at home with the kids, but losing the companionship and social life of work.

Traditionally men claim to dislike their work, but recent industrial studies have shown that over 70 per cent actually enjoy their working day and would miss it if they were suddenly forced to stay at home.

Says a leading sociologist, Dr. Eunice Mayell: "As leisure increases — perhaps by 30 per cent in the next three decades — people will have to get used to regarding their homes, not their jobs as the focal point of their lives."

Of course, there's no reason why husbands shouldn't do the household chores. In fact, many of them are more suited to a male physique than a female one.

Tests have shown that ironing, scrubbing and polishing expend more calories than a day's bricklaying or 200 miles at the wheel of a heavy truck.

Nor is there any apparent reason why they shouldn't cope with children just as well as we do. Dr. Mayell has noted that small children often respond better to a father's calming influence than a mother's.

"Centuries of responsibility in business and industry have given men an authority that is often lacking in a woman's make-up. There's no reason why a man's business training should not be a positive asset to him when organizing a home."

Already some men have realized that a woman's lot is not half as bad as many of us would have people believe.

A psychologist at a recent New York conference on business stress quoted the case of a steel company president who could hardly wait to get into the kitchen among the dirty dishes the moment he climbed out of his limousine.

Explained the doctor: "He told me it was the only part of his day when he wasn't having to order people around."

For worried businessmen everywhere, the year 2000 could hold the answer to their problems. That's assuming they can last that long . . .

Publisher Of Newsletter Says Women's Lib Is Stronger Now

By JOY STILLEY
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A tremendous sense of common cause, genuine cooperation and organization on all levels is what's happening to women's liberation today, declares Susan Davis, editor and publisher of the monthly newsletter, "The Spokeswoman."

Ms. Davis, as she prefers to be called, sees her publication as an information service, "a very how-to-do-it thing, a sort of clearing house for national news the mass media doesn't pick up that women need to know about."

Started in June 1970, it was a spinoff from her work at Urban Research, a Chicago news-gathering service, where she edited a newsletter on minority business. Last summer she bought "Spokeswoman," still published in Chicago, from the parent firm.

The printer is a woman, Ruby Bailey, who at one time was production manager at Urban Research but now has her own printing company. The editor reports the newsletter is already paying its way through subscriptions that have come from word of mouth and praise in women's magazines.

"I hate it when people say women's lib—it sounds so chichi," says the ordinarily soft-spoken Ms. Davis, who comes on strong, however, when the subject is women's liberation. "It's worth taking a little extra time to say the whole thing."

"The movement is spreading like wildfire," she said on a visit to New York to pick up an award from Mademoiselle magazine as one of seven outstanding young women. "The amount of material I get is phenomenal. Every month I receive 40 women's publications and people tell me when I cover something they get 50 or 60 phone calls and queries."

"The movement's not competitive, it's not hierarchical," she continues. "It's strong and powerful—constructive, not destructive power—and it goes across all traditional divisions."

The 29-year-old brunette is active in the National Organization for Women, as well as many other groups. "I try to join everything," she points out.

"A lot of the reason women haven't identified with women's liberation," she goes on, "is that their margin of security is so slim they can't afford to join a movement that is not strong. As it gets stronger they can afford to commit themselves."

Ms. Davis believes that consciousness-raising happens in all kinds of ways and that people go through different stages at different times.

"All the inner searching and inner honesty is very tough," she concedes, "but any woman, married or not, can be a liberated woman, doing things in the whole world—facing power, confronting power, fighting for power in a positive way."

She herself believes in marriage, but only with a marriage contract that is written to suit the lives of the two people in-involved. However, right now she doesn't have much private time.

"My social life has always been my professional life," says Ms. Davis, who majored in Russian at Brown University and did graduate work at Harvard. "It will always be important that I have a job that is socially relevant. I want to do 'Spokeswoman' well. I think it is important and will continue to be important. With the profits I hope to find a socially relevant way to finance women's projects."

State Collected Record Penalties From Truckers

WEIGHING IN — An inspector prepares to weigh a tractor-trailer truck at the state-operated weight station on Interstate 40 at Statesville. (AP Wirephoto)

By REESE HART
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina collected a record $1.2 million in penalties from truckers during the past year, most of it for exceeding vehicle weight limits.

Roger Parker, assistant director of the license and theft division of the state Motor Vehicles Department, said the penalties were assessed by the state's 12 permanent weight stations and by roving inspectors with portable weighing equipment.

Parker said $1,164,721 was collected for either exceeding the legal weight per axle or the over-all weight designated by the truck license. The remaining $56,586 represented penalties for failing to have the $1 gas registration license from the state Department of Revenue.

North Carolina truck licenses are sold according to the gross weight of the truck and the weight it will haul.

The maximum weight allowed in North Carolina per vehicle is 73,000 pounds for a five-axle tractor-trailer. A license for a right of this weight will cost $1,278.50 per year. In contrast, the owner of a farm pickup truck of 5,000 pounds will pay $13.50 for his license.

Truckers are required to register with the Department of Revenue and file quarterly reports showing the amount of miles traveled, plus the amount of gas purchased in North Carolina and out of state. If they have not purchased sufficient gas in North Carolina to cover the miles traveled in the state they must pay the additional tax.

On a recent day, 4,551 trucks were weighed at Hillsborough.

Four of the 12 weight stations are on busy interstate highways and were designed and built especially for North Carolina's needs.

"These four stations," Parker said, "were designed to weigh trucks in just a matter of seconds and get them out of the way. The volume of traffic is so heavy on these highways that we can't afford to have trucks lined up waiting to be weighed."

All trucks are required to stop at weight stations. Parker noted that at the four interstate stations a tractor-trailer truck can be weighed in six to eight seconds. The weight per axle registers immediately on a flasher. Other stations have to weigh each axle of the truck individually, which requires more time.

The four interstate stations also measure the height of a rig. If it exceeds the maximum of 13½ feet a bell will ring.

Parker said trucks found to be overweight must be parked and the drivers must arrange to pay the penalties.

"If it is a reliable trucking company," he explained, "we issue a citation and the trucker is allowed to proceed. But if it's a small company we never have heard of he is required to pay on the spot."

Very few states have a truck weighing program comparable to North Carolina's, Parker pointed out. Several, including Georgia, South Carolina and New Jersey, are studying North Carolina's program.

"The purpose of our program," Parker said, "is to see that our highways are not abused by excessive weights and to enforce our license requirements."

Recently a stolen rig, valued at some $40,000, was uncovered at the Wilson station. When the rig pulled in, inspectors noticed that the truck portion bore a trailer license. The driver was asked to check with the owner on the registration.

He told the inspectors he didn't have any change to make a call from the station's pay phone, so he went across the highway to a service station to get change. He kept going.

The truck had been stolen in Nashville, Tenn., and the trailer in Gulfport, Miss.

Senator Jordan Ignored Warning

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. B. Everett Jordan, D-N.C., joined a group of Southern senators Monday in opposing extension of a federal anti-discrimination law. In the process he may have incurred the opposition of the North Carolina NAACP to his re-election bid.

Jordan voted in favor of an amendment introduced by Sen. Sam Ervin, D-N.C. which would have continued to exempt some 10 million employees of state and local government from the federal ban on racial and sexual discrimination in employment.

The amendment, was defeated by a 59-16 vote.

A vote was scheduled today on ending the filibuster over the bill. Debate started on Jan. 19. North Carolina NAACP leaders asked Jordan over the weekend to support the bill and vote to end the filibuster.

They said he might lose the black vote if he supported Ervin's position, as he did Monday.

North Carolina NAACP president Kelly Alexander said Monday that Jordan's vote on the Ervin amendment "indicates that he is not going to vote in our favor."

"State and local government must be included in this bill, since blacks do not have a fair share of the jobs on those levels."

"The black voter understands this issue and he can differentiate between friend and foe."

Jordan's press secretary, Wes Hayden, denied that the vote "was against the Negro. But you can't vote both sides of an issue and you have to displease somebody."

Jordan has already voted in favor of an amendment that would delete a provision giving the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission the power to issue cease and desist orders against employers it finds guilty of discrimination. That amendment failed by a narrow margin last week in the Senate.

'End-The-War' Chapter Forms

A local chapter of the North Carolina Committee to End the War has been formed by a group of local citizens in Greenville.

At a meeting held late last week, the group elected Dr. Henry Lofquist of East Carolina University as chairman of the local committee whose aim is to end hostilities in Indochina immediately.

Lofquist noted that all persons interested are urged to write Congressman Walter B. Jones and Senators Sam Ervin and Everett Jordan to express their views on the war.

Membership in the Greenville chapter is open to all Pitt County citizens. Further information can be obtained by calling Dr. Lofquist at 758-5872.

FAA Orders Screening Passengers, Baggage

By VERN HAUGLAND
AP Aviation Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government has ordered the nation's scheduled airlines to screen all passengers and baggage in an effort to stop hijackings and sabotage.

Major airlines have used the security measures, at least on a part-time basis, for the past two years.

The Federal Aviation Administration, in making screening rules public Monday, also disclosed it seeks to halt illegal publication of police and airplane radio conversations during flight emergencies.

The FAA ordered the new rules into effect immediately, waiving the usual 30-day preliminary notice on grounds that the wave of hijackings has created a threat to public safety of an emergency nature.

The regulations must be met no later than three days after they are published in the Federal Register, probably today or Wednesday. The new equipment and procedures, therefore, will have to be operating at all U.S. airports served by scheduled airlines no later than Saturday.

Promoted To New Position

Robert Edward Smith has recently been promoted to the position of Equipment Superintendent with the State Highway Commission for Division 2, comprised of Beaufort, Carteret, Craven, Greene, Jones, Lenoir and Pitt County.

ROBERT E. SMITH

Smith was born in Winfall, April 23, 1926 and is married to the former Shirley Cowan of Williamston, who is employed at East Carolina University. He began work with the Highway Commission in June, 1943. He served in the U.S. Navy from March 1944, until June 1946, before returning to the Commission. He has served in the position of Parts Clerk, Mechanic, Mechanic Foreman I & 2 prior to his promotion.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith reside at 417 Arbor Street and have two children, Cynthia, a student at Rose High, and Robert W., presently employed with the N.C. Department of Corrections in Greenville.

He is a member of Crown Point Masonic Lodge and the Elks.

The FAA said it will accept four screening systems, used alone or in combination: the thoroughly tested and proven hijacker-behavioral profile, magnetometers or similar metal-detecting devices, identification systems, and search of passengers and baggage.

The order will not apply to foreign airlines, air-taxi operators of small planes, or supplemental airlines specializing in charter service.

The FAA said Administrator John H. Shaffer asked the Federal Communications Commission Monday to investigate suspected illegal news-media interception of police radio conversations during hijack emergencies.

Shaffer told FCC Chairman Dean Burch there are reasons to believe some individuals had violated that section of the Federal Communications Act for

Says Police Fired Upon

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — Police Chief Laurie Pritchett says he did not order his men to start shooting at Black Panthers headquarters in High Point until he heard a rifle shot from the house and received word that Police Lt. Shaw Cooke had been wounded.

Other officers corroborated his account Monday in the trial of four young men accused of shooting at police last Feb. 10. The officers were making an eviction raid on the headquarters of the black militant organization.

Pritchett testified he led about 60 heavily armed city police and county sheriff's deputies to the house.

Pritchett said he and two other men knocked on the door, identified themselves, and said they were there to serve eviction papers. Pritchett said the only reply was a male voice which responded, "We've got nothing to say."

The prosecution said Monday that it did not expect to finish presenting its evidence until at least Wednesday.

The defendants Larry Medley, 17, George DeWitt, 17, and Bradford Lilley, 20, all of High Point; and Randolph Jennings, 18, of Winston-Salem — are charged with assault with intent to kill resulting in serious bodily injury and with two counts of assault on a police officer with a firearm.

There are four blacks on the Superior Court Jury.

Medley also was wounded in the shootout.

An Outside Jury List Required

GRAHAM, N.C. (AP) — Newspaper circulation figures were used Monday to persuade Superior Court Judge Henry McKinnon to order special jury selection procedures in an Alamance County bombing conspiracy trial.

The jurors for the trial will be drawn from Chatham County, where the Burlington Times-News, the Greensboro Daily News, and the Alamance News have fewer readers than in Alamance.

The defense argued that its seven clients had been the subjects of prejudicial publicity before their trial for conspiracy to bomb the home of a police detective.

Deadline Set On Internships

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — The deadline for applications for state and local government internships in North Carolina next summer is Feb. 15.

North Carolina residents who are enrolled in colleges in or out of the state who will have completed at least three years of college by June are eligible. Out-of-state students are eligible for the local government program.

The applications are being handled by the Institute of Government in Chapel Hill. Fifty internships are available, 25 with state agencies and 25 with local government departments.

'Loop Road' Just Isn't Enough

Greenville owes its thanks to the Redevelopment Commission and the Planning and Zoning Commission for tackling the problem of what to name the planned downtown thoroughfare before it becomes known as Loop Road.

During all the planning for the street, which will take up at the end of Reade Street and circle around to Greene and Pitt Streets, the new thoroughfare has been called simply "Loop Road."

That is a good way for the street to get stuck with the name — except that the Redevelopment Commission took the bull by the horns and asked the Planning and Zoning Commission to come up with an appropriate name for it.

Planning and Zoning took to the project with gusto and a committee was appointed to study names for the new street.

Thus it appears that pretty soon the thoroughfare street, for which right-of-way is now being cleared, will have a suitable name of its own.

We have no suggestions to offer to the planners — just our thanks that the new street will not go through the years with the name of "Loop Road."

Shaw's Plight Spurs Friends

By BRYAN HAISLIP

RALEIGH — Every dollar of debt is discouraging to a college president.

Dr. J. Archie Hargraves has 500,000 reasons to be glum, but he keeps an optimistic outlook.

For one thing, he's too busy to waste time worrying. Six months into the presidency of Shaw University, his efforts are concentrated on getting the institution on a sound financial footing.

BRYAN HAISLIP

Too, if there's comfort in company, plenty of others in private higher education are in the same boat. Shaw's plight may be more severe than many, but its money problems are typical rather than an exception.

Optimism is tempered by reality, but President Hargraves takes heart from the fact that something is being done. Friends are responding to a $750,000 campaign for funds, he said, and steps taken for better money management.

"Shaw is going to make it," he said. "We still face very serious problems, but we are confident we can solve them."

Crash Program Not Enough
Solutions that stick won't come through a crash program alone, but from long range planning and effort, he said. "The emergency must be met, but it must be related to the mission of the institution."

The crisis for private higher education has been spotlighted in the past year by national studies and proposals for some form of state aid.

It creates an atmosphere, Dr. Hargraves said, in which institutions must become more cost conscious and cost effective.

"Most of us are aware that there is a tremendous amount of fat and waste," he explained. Institutions must learn to husband their resources, doing more with fewer people and gaining efficiency in handling dollars.

Faculty and staff curtailment is a step Shaw will take out of its dilemma. "We won't go on any faculty-cutting binge," Dr. Hargraves cautioned. For those released, there will be assistance in finding new employment.

Seeking Efficient Operation
The point is to find the most efficient level of operation, and gear to that, the president said.

"We begin by asking: 'What is the job we have to do? Then we must answer: 'What does it take to do it?'" he said.

Shaw's mission grows out of its history. Founded in 1865, it was the first black college in the South at the end of the war. It is the third oldest black institution of higher education in the nation. It is church-related, with support coming from the General Baptist State Convention (black).

Today, its 1,089 students include only a handful of whites. "We hope to see that become a real number, and not just a token," Dr. Hargraves said.

Shaw's experience and expertise in the education of the poor, the black and the disadvantaged equips it for a significant role in today's world of social change, he suggested.

Black Colleges Have Future
He has a quick, short answer to the question whether black colleges have a future. "Yes," he replied.

Where else, he asked, can the black perspective on society be taught?

"Tomorrow won't be a homogenized white world. It will be a kind of Technicolor society in which black, white, red and yellow will have a distinctive contribution," Dr. Hargraves predicted.

He is a 55-year-old native of Greensboro who came home to North Carolina last summer. A magna cum laude graduate of A & T State University, he also holds degrees from Union Theological Seminary in New York and Chicago Theological Seminary.

His career has mixed religion and social action. He has been a minister, community development leader, and professor, as well as lecturer and author. He was associate professor of urban mission and director of the Kenwood Project at Chicago Theological Seminary when he accepted the Shaw presidency.

Hospital Thefts Only Add To Their Expense

It is a sad story that, with hospital costs soaring, thievery is one of the causes of these increasing costs.

The Associated Press reported last week that more than $100 million in goods are stolen every year from hospitals in the United States.

The articles range from bed sheets to medical instruments. Most of the losses are inside jobs and, while more than 3,000 items can be used in the home, there is also a ready market for medical instruments and electronic devices.

This indicates a need for better security in the nation's hospitals. If such a massive loss can be stemmed, then perhaps the rapidly rising cost of hospitalization can be slowed.

New Pressure On Yugoslavia

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Rising pressure from Moscow on Yugoslavia's President Tito for Soviet port facilities at Kotor on the southern Yugoslav Adriatic coast is causing concern in Washington and alarm among America's European allies, particularly Italy.

The latest signal reaching here that the Soviet Union is pressing Tito anew to give the Soviet fleet water and supply rights at Kotor was a confidential diplomatic report that during Tito's polite but formal meeting with Soviet Communist party leader Leonid Brezhnev last September, Brezhnev came down hard on his host.

The Soviet Communist party chief also strongly urged Tito to reserve the process of decentralizing his government, a move Tito has been embarked upon for several years in an effort to relieve nationalistic passion centered on Tito's own birthplace of Croatia. These passions carry the gravest threat to the future unity of Yugoslavia when the 79-year-old Tito, whose political skills have kept his country together, retires from the scene.

According to the well-documented reports reaching here, Brezhnev's aim in seeking to reverse Tito's Decentralization policy is to keep a strong centralized government intact in Belgrade, thus making it easier for Soviet agents to undermine Tito's successors and forcibly move nonaligned Yugoslavia intact back into the Soviet hand.

Tito flatly rejected both Brezhnev's counsel and the Soviet bid for naval facilities at Kotor. But the mere fact that Brezhnev is escalating Soviet pressure on its number one enemy in Eastern Europe carries ominous overtones.

The Soviet Union wants naval landing rights at Kotor to give its growing Mediterranean fleet a supply berth on the southern coast of Europe. Today that fleet can be watered and supplied from Syrian and Egyptian ports, but nowhere in the northern Mediterranean south of the Black Sea.

Muskie's Governor

By the time Gov. Milton Shapp of Pennsylvania finally got around to endorsing Sen. Edmund Muskie for President last Tuesday, his evasive tactics and demands for super-secrecy had very nearly alienated the Muskie camp — including the Senator himself.

Indeed, Muskie was so irritated by Shapp's evasions that he thought twice about returning a telephone call from the Governor last Monday. He did, however, and learned, to his pleasant surprise, that Shapp would endorse him for President the next day.

Actually, as we reported earlier, Shapp had long intended to put his patronage-fueled state organization behind Muskie. But in an effort to first mobilize his troops, Shapp stalled the Senator with a series of comic-opera maneuvers which left Muskie's staff bewildered.

For instance, Shapp insisted on cloak-and-dagger secrecy when he conferred in New York with Muskie Jan. 5. Muskie was listed on Shapp's private schedule as "Sam Moscovitz." Although Muskie was staying at the Plaza in Manhattan, the meeting was held in a room at the Carlyle hotel to stave off onlookers. Fearful of offending Shapp, Muskie aides followed the Governor's demands for secrecy so religiously that they told outright falsehoods to newsmen, denying that any meeting had taken place. But Shapp refused to make any commitment of endorsement to a frustrated Muskie at the Carlyle.

As negotiations between Shapp and Muskie's key lieutenants continued, top Muskie campaign officials in Washington came to the conclusion that the Governor's endorsement might be more trouble than it was worth. In anger, one of Muskie's closest advisers told us: "How did this guy ever get elected governor of Pennsylvania?" It was at this point that Shapp surprised the Muskie camp with his sudden endorsement.

A footnote: If Muskie had been irritated with Shapp, Sen. Hubert Humphrey is enraged by the Governor's unique style. Humphrey privately believes Shapp's endorsement of Muskie is a direct betrayal of a flat promise to stay uncommitted made by Shapp during a private luncheon with Humphrey in Philadelphia last December.

Strength For Today

ONE IN A MILLION

Helen Keller, unable to speak, see or hear, produced during her lifetime literature of surpassing value and made herself one of the outstanding personalities of all times.

On one occasion she wrote the following words: "As I wander through the dark, encountering difficulties, I am aware of encouraging voices that murmur from the spiritual realm. I sense a holy passion pouring down from the springs of infinity. I thrill to music that beats with the pulses of God. Bound to suns and planets by invisible cords, I feel the flame of eternity in my soul. Here in the midst of everyday air I sense a rush of ethereal rains. I am conscious of the splendor that binds all things of earth to all things of heaven — immured by silence and darkness I possess light which shall give me vision a thousand-fold when death sets me free." Greatness was speaking on this occasion and through this remarkable person. People of angelic nature walk the earth at times. How we should admire and love them! And we can congratulate ourselves that we do — if we look deeply enough into our hearts.

Kunstler Hates The Law

PITTSBURGH — We touch gloves. It is expected of antagonists before they come out fighting, a teaspoon of harmony to cool approaching discord. For a few moments, backstage, we sip on small talk, not speaking of Bill Buckley, not mentioning Judge Hoffman, keeping a careful distance; and so the debate begins.

This is our third match. We met at Vanderbilt, two or three years ago; we tangled later on at Oklahoma. Now it is Pittsburgh, in the university's little jewel of an auditorium — in this corner William Kunstler, lawyer, defender of the poor, counsel to the Movement; and on your right, the Southern journalist, conservative columnist and self-styled Whig: me.

"Resolved, that decisions of the Warren Court have tended to protect criminals at the expense of law-abiding citizens and of society in general."

The affirmative goes first in these sawdust affairs, and the rule is to paw twice at the question before seeking a hold. Thus a small tribute to Kunstler: a dedicated lawyer. The adjective is noncommittal. Kunstler knows it. Then a suggestion that lawyer and newspaperman, disagree though they may on particular opinions, share a respect for the law itself. For my own part, I say, before tackling Miranda v. Arizona, "I love the law." Twenty minutes later it is Kunstler's turn.

"I hate the law," he begins, and he tracks his leonine head around the balconies, sold-eyed, a twin battery of five-inch guns. He drops the words as heavily as shells: "I hate the law."

"I know the law," says Kunstler. "It is used to oppress those who threaten the ruling class. The judicial decree has replaced the assassin. . . . I remain a lawyer, I stay with the law, only because the law is maneuverable, it can be manipulated. But in the future?"

Kunstler leaves the question hanging. He recalls what Fidel Castro once said in a great speech: "I thought the law could be used in order to change the system. I found it could not be so used in Cuba, and therefore I went into the Sierra Maestra." He pauses; the implications echo. Then he goes on to attack the Court under Warren, and even more coldly, the Court under the Nixon nominees.

The debate, as it turned out, collapsed in misjudgment. In Kunstler's view, the Warren Court "did nothing for individual liberties." Whatever it might have built, in any event, was now being dismantled by the Court under Burger. Those "two new constitutional subversives," Powell and Rehnquist, would complete the job. The Miranda rule already lay in ruins, the prohibition against self-incrimination had been further abridged, the protections of habeas corpus were being destroyed. Kunstler's attack was comprehensive, bitter, and wrong.

The particular cases and opinions to one side, it was Kunstler's acid view of the law itself that set in motion an uneasy train of thought: "I despise the law; I loathe the law." To judge from a recent article in the Washington Post, it is a view widely shared by Movement lawyers. Their bitterness Robbers were active in Greenville over the weekend entering two stores and making away with money and goods valued at around $50 or more. Entrance to the Home Grocery Store, on Dickinson Avenue, was made by thieves last night and a check up this morning indicated that about $15 in cash was missing from cash registers. Cigarettes and cigars valued at approximately $15 were also taken. The same band of thieves was believed to have entered Rollin's Cafe, on Ninth Street, Saturday night and made away with $15 worth of cigars and cigarettes. Police began a widespread investigation to determine the identity of the robbers but no definite clue has been obtained today.

Always Best To Know A Seller

By ELMER ROESSNER

There are hidden dangers in the tax-exempt bond market, it is pointed out in a booklet, "How Not to Get Burned in the Municipal Bond Market," published by the Florida Security Dealers Association.

It has been pointed out here that state and municipal bonds may often be sold only at a discount before maturity; that they usually come in multiples of $5,000, although a few come in $1,000 units; and the savings on taxes are worth while only to those in upper income brackets.

The Florida association observes that the tax-exempts offer sound and rewarding returns for many investors, but that care should be used in buying them, especially since bond dealers are not required to be members of the National Association of Security Dealers and that some dealers and salesmen may be guilty of shady practices.

It offers seven warning signs for bond buyers, here condensed:

ELMER ROESSNER

1. Unethical dealers often advertise these bonds are second in safety to only U.S. government bonds. In fact, they can be rated from AAA to RISKY. Before buying, consult the rating of Moody's or Standard & Poor's.
2. Yield claims should be checked. "Municipal bonds, like all other fixed-income securities, offer yields in direct relation to the degree of risk or maturity involved. 3. Count your coupons. Each municipal bond bears one or more coupons stating the interest due for each six-month period. Make sure the next due coupon is due within six months. Some unscrupulous dealers detach the first coupons and collect the earnings themselves.

4. Sellers sometimes "guarantee" to repurchase tax-exempts on demand. If so, get the guarantee and the price in writing. Any dealer will buy back a bond at his own price. No one can guarantee a market price.

5. Be careful of "seminars." Although some are useful and informative, some are simply devices at which to apply sales pressure. 6. Be alert to "mistaken identities." Sometimes another bond will be used as a stand-in for a highly rated one. "For example, Harris County, Texas, Unlimited General Obligation bonds are a prime credit. Harris County, Texas, Unlimited General Obligation bonds are a prime credit. Harris County Irrigation District bonds are unrated and of a lesser quality."

7. Buy bonds from only reputable dealers. Members of the National Association of Security Dealers and national and regional security exchanges police their members.

If any one of the seven warning signals appear, consult an association or exchange member or your bank.

Ayden-Grifton SCHOOL NOTES

By ANNE DENSON and SUE HASELEY
The Ayden-Grifton drama department, under the direction of Branson Woodard, has scheduled its Spring Variety Show for February 24 and 25. Skits, monologues, and The Gallery, a one-act play by William Faulk, produced under special arrangement with The Dramatic Publishing Company of Chicago, will be featured. Class rings arrived Tuesday, Jan. 25 and were distributed to juniors and seniors who ordered them. Also on Jan. 25 seniors ordered graduation invitations. Presently, the A-G boys' varsity basketball team occupies first place in the conference standings, while the girls rank second. Both teams will play Farmville Central tonight, and Eastern Wayne Friday. Both games are away. Juniors and sophomores who took the Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test in October have received the results of the test. Students who want to take the PSAT again, and those who have not taken it, will be able to take the test when it is given in the spring.

seeps below the bedrock, beyond the individual judge or the publicized trial.

"The System must be changed." That is their first premise. The System cannot be changed successfully by law. That is their second. Therefore, goes the syllogistic conclusion, the System must be changed by other than lawful means. Kunstler does not advocate bloody revolution, not as such; but he offers no alternative either.

The monstrous fallacy of the Movement's twisted reasoning ought to be exposed. In the name of restoring liberty, in the name of ending oppression, the Radical Left would have us change from a society based on law — to what? To a society of their law? If the rule of law itself should be of law itself should be despised, why should we then love the law of Mr. Justice Kunstler? Yet a society of now law is no society; it is no more than a jungle, ruled by brutish beasts.

To love the rule of law is not to minimize its imperfections. These abound. But to suppose that human liberty can survive social order is to suppose the impossible. We debate this night, he and I, because there is law — law that frees, law that restrains. To hate the law is to hate the freedom it secures. Out of the poisoned spring of such hatred, only tyranny can flow.

Wilkins Urges Union Support

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Roy Wilkins called upon organized labor to double its efforts to see that black Americans get their rightful share of the nation's security and prosperity.

Wilkins, executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, told the Ohio AFL-CIO's fourth biennial civil rights conference that special efforts should be made to move blacks into the $10,000-to $20,000-a-year blue collar wage ranges.

Now, he said, "Negroes are virtually excluded from the higher-paying echelons of the blue collar workers."

begun burning among several false ceilings in the building which prevented firefighters from putting water directly on the blaze.

Knott said this morning that damage to his firm's stock would amount to about $12,000.

Agents for the owners of the buildings said late this morning that they had no estimate of the damage to the building.

Warrants For Irvings

ZURICH (AP) — The Swiss government has issued arrest warrants for author Clifford Irving and his wife but says it has not decided whether to seek their extradition.

Dist. Atty. Peter Veleff revealed Monday night that the warrants were issued Friday on suspicion of falsification of documents and on "urgent grounds of suspicion" that the couple was involved in a scheme to pocket $650,000 in McGraw-Hill checks meant to pay billionaire Howard Hughes for his purported autobiography.

Veleff explained that under Swiss law an extradition request would be justified if the couple were charged with fraud, but not for charges of forging documents.

Veleff said Swiss authorities had impounded $422,707 in a Zurich bank account in the name of Hannah Rosenkranz and that this probably was a pseudonym for Mrs. Irving.

McGraw-Hill Book Co. gave the three checks totaling $650,000 to Irving for delivery to Hughes, and Mrs. Irving has admitted that she deposited them in a bank account in another Zurich bank and then withdrew the money.

Irving, who convinced McGraw-Hill and Life magazine that his Hughes autobiography was based on extensive interviews with the reclusive industrialist, is in New York for appearances before state and federal grand juries also investigating the case.

His lawyer, whom Irving retained last week after attorney Martin S. Ackerman abandoned him, won postponements from both juries Monday so he could familiarize himself with the case.

Irving refused to comment on the Swiss warrants. Nor was any statement forthcoming from his wife, who has claimed that she was acting according to instructions from Howard Hughes when she funneled the checks through a Swiss account that she opened in the name of Helga R. Hughes, using a false passport she claimed was supplied by Hughes.

UCLA Again Unanimous Pick For First Place

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

For the second consecutive week, unbeaten UCLA has been unanimously acclaimed as the nation's No. 1 college basketball team.

The all-conquering Bruins, 16-0, received all 44 first-place votes and a whopping 860 points in this week's balloting by an Associated Press national panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

Last week, UCLA whipped Chicago Loyola 92-64 and Notre Dame 57-32, extending its two-season winning streak to 31 games. The Bruins' last loss was to Notre Dame in Jan. 1971. They have won the NCAA championship the past five years and seven of the last eight.

The Bruins' performance this season has surprised Coach John Wooden.

"We expected to be good," he said, "but we've come along better than I anticipated. Just how good, I don't know."

Wooden said he would still like to wait until the season is over before making a true evaluation of his team, but he said, "I'm exceptionally pleased with our progress."

Marquette, also undefeated in 16 games, held second place in the balloting with 768 points.

Louisville, winner of its last 15 games after an opening loss, moved up one place to third. North Carolina, 13-2, also advanced one spot to fourth, with Long Beach State dropping from third to fifth.

The remainder of the Top Ten also underwent a big shuffle. Penn leaped three places to sixth. Virginia went from eighth to seventh. South Carolina vaulted into the eighth slot. Ohio State tumbled from sixth to ninth, and Brigham Young jumped from 13th to 10th.

Marshall headed the second 10 and was followed by Florida State, Southwestern Louisiana, Hawaii and Missouri. Providence, No. 16, Jacksonville, at 17, and Michigan, ranked 20th, were the new teams in the listing this week.

Southern California took the biggest fall, plunging from seventh to 18th after losing to Providence, Seattle and Santa Clara. Minnesota in 19th place, was the other team in the Top 20.

Knocked from the rankings were Princeton, Maryland and Northern Illinois.

The Top Twenty, with first-place votes in parentheses, won-lost records through games of Saturday, Jan. 29 and total points on the basis of 20 for first, 18 for second, 16, 14, 12, 10, 9, 8, etc.

Daniel, a few thousand years ago, managed to go into a den of lions and come away without a scratch.

Tonight, East Carolina is hoping to slip through a den of Wildcats and come away with their Southern Conference lead intact. But Tom Quinn feels that it won't be quite as simple as Daniel had it.

"Going in there is not easy," Quinn said, "but it's no worse than some other places." For some years, Davidson's Johnston Gym got the reputation of being one of the horror spots in the conference. It is small and Davidson's teams seemed to thrive there, never losing.

But Furman, earlier this year, ended their 50-plus game winning streak at home, proving that the Wildcats are at least, human.

"We may have a little advantage in just coming from the VMI gym, which compares with Davidson's a lot," Quinn said.

But the Bucs will be facing an entirely different team than they faced against VMI, and they'll have to play somewhat better.

"I thought we played well against VMI," Quinn said. "We got in foul trouble in the first half, but our defense was unbelievably tough in the second. (Al) Faber and (Nicky) White did an outstanding job rebounding for us, playing less than a half each."

Quinn did note that the Pirates shooting was off in the first half. "We were trying to penetrate, and they were just standing in the lane in our way. We also had some turnovers that they took advantage of. They played a four-corner offense against us to get the good shots and to hold the ball, too. We adjusted to it well after a few minutes. It was a harder-fought game than here, and I think we played better."

The Bucs went through a 2½-hour workout on Monday, getting ready for the Wildcats. "The kids are up high. They're really looking forward to it," Quinn said of tonight's contest.

John Falconi, the leading scorer for the Wildcats injured an ankle in Saturday's game, with Wake Forest, and reportedly will miss the next few weeks. "I've heard he'll be out," Quinn said, "but we've prepared as if he'll be there. I'll admit that he does pay an important role in their game, but I don't think it'll change things if he's not out there. They have several other fine players who can take his place. They have about eight real good players altogether. He's their leader, of course, and missing him will have to hurt some."

Against Wake Forest, the lowly Deacons outthit Davidson from the floor by 14 points, but still lost by setting a school record in fouling. Davidson mopped up at the line, hitting 36 free throws to pull out the victory.

The game means a lot. The Pirates can increase their lead in the Southern to a full game with a victory. While they wouldn't sew up first in the league, they could go a long way toward it, and set things up for their meeting with Furman Saturday night. A loss however, would drop the Bucs all the way to fourth, depending on the outcome of the Citadel-Richmond game. Davidson would then climb into first in the league.

"Davidson has definitely improved since we played them last," Quinn said. "They've won nine of their last 11, but then, we've won seven of our last 10, so we've improved too. But I think we still haven't really arrived yet. We've got to put together several games of the caliber of the one we played against Furman."

The Bucs will go into the game with a four-game winning streak. They also have the advantage of having beaten Davidson, 67-57, in their first meeting.

"It'll be a tough game," Quinn said. "But it's also a pride game for us. We want to win it badly."

Pitt Tech In Rally For Win

BETHEL — Pitt Technical Institute rolled to an 87-73 victory over Johnston Tech last night, but had to overcome a first half deficit to get the win.

The victory boosted the Pitt Tech record to 10-3 overall as they took the non-conference contest.

Johnston pushed out into the opening lead, getting the first four baskets. They continued to hold the lead throughout the first half, moving out by seven points at the middle of the period and holding as much as a nine-point margin late in the half.

Pitt Tech dropped in the opening basket of the second half, taking a 41-40 lead, and they never lost it. They began running with the ball and worked their way up to a 62-53 lead midway through the period. They eventually led by as much as 18 points late in the game before settling for a 14-point win.

Wayne Brown led Pitt with 21 points, while Eddie Stokes had 20, Hardy had 18 and Frank Brown had 12. For the taller Johnston team, R. Lyons had 20, F. Artis had 18, C. Sutton had 12 and M. Littleton had 10.

Pitt goes to James Sprunt of Kenansville, on Thursday.

Citadel Can Move Tonight

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

East Carolina's league-leading Pirates and Davidson's tied-for-second Wildcats tangle tonight with first place in the Southern Conference basketball race at stake.

The winner of the game at Davidson will have sole occupancy of the lead, since the Pirates are 5-2 in conference play and the Wildcats 4-2 and deadlocked for the runner-up spot with Furman's defending champion Paladins, who are idle.

East Carolina takes an 8-8 over-all record into the encounter, while the Wildcats have the league's best over-all mark of 12-5.

The Citadel's Bulldogs, 3-2 in league play, have a chance to tie for the No. 2 spot tonight in a game at Richmond against the Spiders, 2-4. The Citadel is 8-7 against all opposition, the Spiders 3-11.

Tonight's only other action involving a conference team has Virginia Military's Keydets, 3-13 over-all, at Ohio University.

Of three conference teams in action Monday night, only Appalachian State's "provisional" members came out a winner, edging Western Carolina 74-70 to avenge an earlier defeat.

Furman dropped a 91-90 decision at Jacksonville, where the Paladins' Joe Williams was coach until last season, and William and Mary's Indians were beaten 65-52 by Cincinnati's Bearcats.

Sophomore Stan Davis scored 28 points as Appalachian broke a 20-game losing streak on the road. A three-point play by Davis broke a 44-44 tie and put the Mountaineers ahead to stay in the second half.

Williams was called for one technical foul in Furman's defeat, in which Jacksonville took the lead for good at 64-63 but never could shake the Paladins. Furman had a final shot at victory with 12 seconds remaining but threw the ball away.

Conference scoring leader Russ Hunt had 31 points for Furman and Roy Simpson added 28, but Simpson was in foul trouble much of the second half and finally fouled out with four minutes left.

William and Mary led Cincinnati 48-47 with 7½ minutes left, but the Indians were outscored 18-4 after that, hitting just two field goals the rest of the way. Lloyd Batts had 21 points and 19 rebounds and Derrek Dickey 19 and 15 for Cincinnati. Jeff Trammell was the Indians' only double figure scorer with 16 points.

Austria May Withdraw Team

SAPPORO, Japan (AP) — Austrian officials prepared tonight to withdraw their whole ski team—Nordic as well as Alpine—because the executive body of the International Olympic Committee refused to reinstate ace Karl Schranz.

They delayed only on the remote possibility that the full IOC might overrule its executive committee.

Austrian sources said all their top ski officials backed the proposal to withdraw all skiers from the Games. In addition to eight men and six girls in the Alpine division, Austria has three jumpers, three cross country skiers and one Nordic combined skier here.

Schranz was disqualified by the IOC Monday because he sold his name and photograph for commercial advertising.

Dr. Rudolf Nemetschke, Austrian member of the IOC, proposed today that the decision be rescinded.

A spokesman for the Austrian Ski Federation told newsmen "the IOC executive body has rejected the appeal. That means that Schranz must leave the Olympic Village."

However, the Austrian officials still followed protocol.

The chance that the IOC would reverse its executive committee appeared as remote as the prospects of a thaw that would melt the hip-deep snow in Olympic Village.

Nevertheless, Dr. Karl Heinz Klee, president of the Austrian Ski Federation, told reporters he would propose that Austria's Alpine skiers be withdrawn from the Sapporo Games—if the full committee accepted the executive committee's decision.

Patulski Expected To Lead NFL Draft

By MIKE RATHET
NEW YORK (AP) — The Buffalo Bills stood ready today to select Notre Dame defensive end Walt Patulski as the No. 1 pick at the National Football League draft—and Patulski stood ready to join them for the right price.

Patulski, a 6-foot-6, 260-pounder rated the best athlete available in a lean college crop, has been quoted in the weeks leading up to the draft as saying:

"I don't care where I play. I don't mind the cold at all. But if it's true some of the things I've heard about what the pros paid top choices last year, I'm going to have to think things over."

The suggestion there is that Patulski feels the contracts offered No. 1 draft choices last year were low and that he might be forced to consider the Montreal Alouettes, who hold the rights to him in the Canadian Football League.

But it isn't considered likely that the Bills would let money stand in the way of signing Patulski. Just three drafts ago they laid out a $300,000 contract for O.J. Simpson.

Patulski, of course, doesn't figure to command that much as a defensive player, but he is such an outstanding talent that he figured to be the first defender selected No. 1 since Baltimore took Bubba Smith in 1967.

The Bills, however, have been contacted by many clubs looking to pry the No. 1 choice loose in a trade and the Buffalo club was expected to be on the phone talking up to the moment they have to announce their pick.

Because of what the pro scouts indicate is a lean crop the pre-draft guessing was far more involved that it was last year when quarterbacks Jim Plunkett, Archie Manning and Dan Pastorini went 1-2-3 as expected.

But there were indications that the draft might go this way through the first seven teams:

Buffalo—Patulski.
Cincinnati—Bobby Moore, Oregon running back-wide receiver, or Royce Smith, Georgia tackle.
Chicago—Lionel Antoine, Southern Illinois tackle, or John Reeves, Florida quarterback.
St. Louis—Mike Kadish, Notre Dame defensive tackle.
Denver—Moore or Jerome Barkum, Jackson State wide receiver.
Houston—Barkum or Riley Odums, Houston tight end.
Green Bay—Willie Buchanan,

San Diego State defensive back, or Jerry Tagge, Nebraska quarterback.

After Green Bay, the first round went like this:

8, New Orleans. 9, Jets. 10, Minnesota, on choice acquired from New England. 11, Green Bay, on choice acquired from San Diego. 12, Chicago. 13, Pittsburgh. 14, Philadelphia. 15, Atlanta. 16, Detroit. 17, New England, on choice acquired from Los Angeles. 18, Cleveland. 19, San Francisco. 20, Oakland. 21, Jets, on choice acquired from Washington. 22, Baltimore. 23, Kansas City. 24, Giants, on choice acquired from Minnesota. 25, Miami. 26, Dallas.

The Bears, Packers and Jets, with two first-round choices, were in good shape considering the supposedly sparse talent available while San Diego, Los Angeles and Washington were on the outside looking in without a first-round pick.

The Redskins, as a matter of fact, did not have a draft selection until the eighth round, and have only a total of 10 remaining in the 17-round selection process expected to last two days.

The New Orleans Saints and the Oakland Raiders had the most choices—22 each.

Other club totals were: Pittsburgh and Dallas 20, St. Louis and Baltimore 19, San Francisco and Cleveland 18, Buffalo, Chicago, New England, Philadelphia, Miami, Los Angeles and Giants 17, Atlanta, Cincinnati, Green Bay, Houston, Kansas City and Jets 16, Detroit, San Diego and Minnesota 15 and Denver 14.

One of the more interesting discussions in pre-draft days has centered around Auburn's Heisman Trophy winning quarterback, Pat Sullivan, and the runner-up in the voting, Cornell running back Ed Marinaro. It is expected Marinaro will be selected before Sullivan.

Also expected to go early are

Penn State running backs Franco Harris and Lydell Mitchell, Auburn receiver Terry Beasley, defensive linemen Sherman White of California and Larry Jacobsen of Nebraska, linebacker Willie Hall of Southern California and defensive backs Tommy Casanova of LSU and Clarence Ellis of Notre Dame.

Kentucky Regains Southeastern Lead With Victory Over Alabama

By BERT ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Sports Writer
Adolph Rupp, the University of Kentucky's 70-year-old basketball coach, apparently has found the fountain of youth.

"I'm only 40 years old," said the usually stern Rupp in a rare moment of jubilation after his Wildcats had regained the Southeastern Conference lead with a 77-74 decision over Alabama Monday night.

The victory boosted Kentucky's league record to 6-2 and put the Wildcats a half-game ahead of Tennessee, which was upset by Louisiana State 63-62. Tennessee fell to second place with a 5-2 mark.

LSU's triumph was no surprise to Rupp. "The last thing (LSU Coach) Press Maravich told me before he left (Lexington Saturday night) was 'I'm going to beat (Tennessee Coach Ray) Mears if it's the last thing I do.'"

Rupp, in his 42nd season as the Wildcats' leader, had to go to a seldom-used zone defense in order to ward off the stubborn Crimson Tide.

Kentucky's 1-3-1 zone—necessitated when starters Jim Andrews and Ronnie Lyons got into foul trouble—worked so well that it held Alabama scoreless for the first four minutes of the second half. In that time, the Wildcats scored 10 points, and with 5:32 remaining, they had pulled ahead 72-60, before holding off a late Alabama rally.

Tom Parker paced Kentucky with 22 points and Larry Stamper had 19.

The Wildcats have won the SEC title an amazing 26 times, including the last four years, since the league was organized in 1933.

Tennessee, seeking its fifth league championship, was beaten by the deadly shooting of LSU's Al Sanders. Sanders scored 21 points, hitting nine of nine field goal attempts and three of four foul shots.

Meanwhile, seventh-ranked Virginia raised its record to 14-1 and its Atlantic Coast Conference mark to 5-1, downing Clemson 62-58.

Florida State, rated 12th, got a career high 29 points from Rowland Garrett, 24 from Otto Petty and 21 from Reggie Royals in trouncing Pan-American 109-83. Royals also grabbed 20 rebounds. The Seminoles now are 17-3.

Jacksonville, the No. 17 team, ruined the return to Florida of its former coach, Joe Williams, outlasting Furman 91-90.

Williams, known as a quiet coach at Jacksonville where he spent seven years before leaving for Furman two years ago, spent much of the game screaming at officials. He even was charged with a technical foul for racing onto the court to protest an officials' call.

Furman's Russ Hunt led all scorers with 31 points and teammate Roy Simpson had 28. Ernie Fleming topped Jacksonville with 27, while 7-foot Dave Brent had 15 points, 18 rebounds and 13 blocked shots.

Richie Fuqua, one of the nation's leading scorers, poured in 45 points, leading Oral Roberts, 16-1, to a 112-92 rout over William Jewell.

California's John Coughran fired in 47 points—a school record—but the Golden Bears were beaten by Utah State 96-87.

Sophomore Leonard Coulter connected for 42 points and shared 15 rebounds, leading Morehead State to a 101-90 victory over Tennessee Tech.

In a battle of young big men, 6-11 sophomore Tom McMillen scored 22 points in outplaying North Carolina State's 7-4 soph Tom Burleson as the Terrapins edged the Wolfpack 66-65 in an Atlantic Coast Conference clash. Burleson had 18 points.

Starr To Quit After One Year

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Bart Starr, the prolific play-caller of the Green Bay Packers, says he will call it quits after the coming season, but only if he is physically able to play during the year.

In an interview Monday night with The Associated Press, Starr, 38, said the time had come for him to decide definitely his future as a professional football player.

It was the first time that Starr, the gifted Packer veteran who guided the National Football League team to Super Bowl victories in 1967 and 1968 had flatly acknowledged he would retire after the 1972 season.

"It's time to make that particular decision," he said, stressing that his brilliant career would end only if his health holds up and he is able to play during the coming season.

Starr disclosed the news while in Nashville, Tenn., for a speaking engagement.

"There are several reasons I want to retire but I really don't want to go into them right now," Starr said.

The Packer quarterback has been plagued by an ailing right shoulder since the 1967 season.

He said, however, that his shoulder has improved since surgery sidelined him last season and that he intends to give it a rugged test in April.

Of his retirement, Starr said: "I don't see there's that much to be made of it," noting that he has hinted on several occasions that the 1972 season would be his last as a pro. But he added, "I guess, perhaps, I had not made any mention of it before now."

"I don't want to go out on a stretcher," he said. "I want to get out when it's time, and I think it's time to make that decision."

Though he declined to elaborate on long-range plans, Starr did say he has always thought and dreamed about coaching.

The 15-year veteran said he originally planned to retire in 1968.

"I had intended to retire after our second Super Bowl. But then Coach Lombardi retired and I didn't think it was appropriate for me to leave at that moment since we didn't have a young quarterback to step in."

Cougars Are Beaten

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
The Virginia Squires learned the hard way that Bob Netolicky bears watching on the basketball court.

Indiana's Netolicky had averaged a mere seven points in two previous American Basketball Association contests against Virginia, giving the Squires little cause for concern Monday night.

By the time they learned their lesson Netolicky scored 26 points and snared 20 rebounds in leading the Pacers to a 123-115 triumph over Virginia.

In the night's other ABA game, Zelmo Beaty tossed in 34 points and snared a career-high 27 rebounds as the Utah Stars crushed the Carolina Cougars 135-115.

Netolicky canned two straight field goals at the end of the third period and poured in eight more points early in the fourth stanza to erase an 83-80 Virginia lead. The Squires' Charlie Scott led all scorers with 37 points.

"Our domination of the boards was of course the biggest key to the game," Utah Coach LaDell Anderson said. "I'm also pleased with our 35 assists, which is better than we've been doing."

Utah outbounded the Cougars 78-48 and every Star scored, with Willie Wise accounting for 23 and four players hitting 14 each.

Utah broke the game open midway in the last period with 11 consecutive points, and with a 120-102 advantage with 4:34 left, allowed the reserves to ice the game.

Maryland Rally Nips Wolfpack

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Maryland came back from an 18-point deficit to win a "must" game at North Carolina State 66-65 Monday night and continue in contention in the regular-season Atlantic Coast Conference basketball race. Virginia took first place with a 62-58 victory over Clemson.

"That was a great win for our club," said Maryland Coach Lefty Driesell, whose Terps had lost ACC road games to Virginia, Clemson, and then by 20 points to fifth-ranked North Carolina last Saturday.

"We had a shaky start when our press wasn't working, but then we went to the half-court defense and began to get going," Driesell said of his 18th-ranked team.

Maryland used a slowdown offense the final 5:49 of play and built a 64-58 lead with a little over a minute left on four straight free throws by substitute guard Rich Porac. The State Wolfpack wiped out the lead and had a chance of win, but Rick Holdt missed on a jump shot from the corner with two seconds left. By the time 7-foot-4 Tommy Burleson of N.C. State rebounded, time had run out.

Tom McMillen of Maryland led all scorers with 22 points. Burleson had 18 points and 13 rebounds.

Maryland is 3-3 in the league and 13-3 in all games. N.C. State is 2-3 and 10-6.

Barry Parkhill of Virginia was held to his lowest total of the season, 10 points, but his rebounding and shooting preserved a 62-58 victory for the Cavaliers at the Clemson Tigers' Littlejohn Coliseum, a tough court for visitors.

Clemson, trailing by two, missed a shot and the rebound with 20 seconds left. Parkhill rebounded and Clemson fouled him. With four seconds left, he made the two free throws for the final score.

Eighth-ranked Virginia, which had been tied for the ACC lead with North Carolina at 4-1, now is alone in first place at 5-1, and is 14-1 in all games, the loss only to North Carolina.

Clemson is 1-4 and 9-6. ACC teams are idle tonight. Clemson is an independent Virginia Tech in Wednesday night's only game. On Thursday, North Carolina plays Wake Forest in the Greensboro, N.C., Coliseum.

Record Catch

CAPE HATTERAS, N.C. (AP) — James M. Hussey of Tarboro went trolling off Cape Hatteras Monday and returned with a bluefish that smashed the listed world record by more than seven pounds.

Hussey's catch weighed 31 pounds, 12 ounces and measured 47 inches in length and 23 in girth.

The listed world record bluefish was caught off the Azores in 1953, and weighed 24 pounds, 3 ounces. That mark was bettered by four ounces last November by another Cape Hatteras angler, Mrs. Ruth Mizelle.

Unusual Winter Weather Due Jet Stream Vagaries

Sandy Duncan Loses An Eye

By GENE HANDSAKER
Associated Press Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Actress Sandy Duncan now is permanently blind in her left eye, but the last person to feel sorry about it is Sandy Duncan.

"It's no big deal, really," says the pert, blue-eyed television star. "It doesn't affect anything."

Miss Duncan underwent a 10-hour operation Nov. 1 at the UCLA Medical Center to remove a benign tumor from behind her left eye. Because the surgery was through the top of her there are no visible scars.

Both large, beautiful eyes move normally. Is the sight really gone permanently from the left one?

"Yes, it is," she said matter-of-factly Monday. "They say, well nothing's impossible, but there's no medical proof or reason why it should return."

For one so young—Sandy's 26—was the loss a terrific blow?

AP Science Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Unusual antics of the jet stream, a meandering, 300-mile-an-hour river of air coursing miles above the earth, are primarily responsible for the nation's erratic weather this winter, according to government meteorologists.

They say the jet stream, which hasn't behaved in its current manner for 20 years, accounts for such unlikely winter weather as:

—Frequent unseasonably warm weather in the eastern third of the nation; unusually cold weather in the western third; erratic changes in weather in the remaining third.

—What might be called reversed vertical weather, a frequent occurrence this season. The dividing line for cold and warm weather often has run in a roughly vertical pattern, more or less along the Mississippi River. In other winters, the line usually runs horizontally, separating north and south.

—Relatively rapid changes in temperature for short periods of time, mostly in the Midwestern states. Examples are a 72-degree drop in temperature to 20 below zero in the Indianapolis area during 72 hours and a 33-degree drop to 13 below zero in the Duluth, Minn., area during 18 hours.

Resulting oddities during the fall and winter have ranged from circus elephants suffering frostbitten ears and feet in a major October snowstorm in Wyoming to the sudden blooming of Japanese cherry trees during the Christmas season in Washington.

Scientists at the National Weather Service say the jet stream, a major factor in determining weather at earth's surface, has upset usual winter patterns because it is north of its normal position as it passes high above the eastern and southern parts of the nation. The result is unusually warm temperatures so far in these areas.

At the same time, the stream has been south of its normal course as it moves over the western United States.

Another weather factor, interacting with the off-course jet stream, has been extremely cold surface air over Canada and Alaska these past few months.

The frigid air, 15 degrees colder than normal, at times has been sucked southward more quickly than usual by weather processes linked with the jet stream. This largely accounts for the rather sudden drops in temperature in some areas.

Meteorologists describe the jet stream as a 100-mile mass of rapidly moving air that whirls west to east around the Northern Hemisphere at an altitude of four to seven miles.

Characterized by huge dips and rises, it controls the pattern and direction of the earth's storm tracks, intermittent areas of low pressure that tend to produce rainy or snowy weather.

Giving details on what's been happening since October, meteorologist James Wagner of the weather service said that in an ordinary winter the jet stream passes relatively close to the Gulf and Atlantic Coasts.

The warm air it sucks northward from the Gulf travels a relatively short distance before it hits larger amounts of cold air sucked down from the north. This situation results in snowy or cold weather over the midwestern and northeastern United States.

This winter, however, the jet stream has passed farther north over the Gulf and Atlantic Coasts. The warm Gulf air has been pulled much farther northward into midwestern and eastern areas before colliding with the cold air.

"So," Wagner said, "this winter, storms originating along the Gulf Coast have been almost completely absent. Moreover, storms originating in or near the Rockies have been deflected farther north than usual because of the unusual configuration of the jet stream."

"These latter storm tracks have tended to move more toward the northern Great Lakes as contrasted with their usual winter pattern of moving through the lower Great Lakes and out through the St. Lawrence Valley."

Wagner said the last time the nation had a similarly erratic winter was in 1951-52. The winter of 1948-49 and 1949-50 also had the same odd pattern, and prior to those, the winter of 1882-83.

He said this year's so-called vertical weather—warm east, cold west—was highly unusual. The tendency during the past 10 years, Wagner said, has been just the opposite—abnormally cold in the east and abnormally warm in the west.

How long will the present situation last?

Naval Facility Abolishing Jobs

NORFOLK (AP) — The Navy says 240 civilian jobs at the Naval Air Rework Facility here will be abolished by May 31 because of a reduction in work force ordered by the Naval Air Systems Command.

The present work force is 5,056.

Just Their Job For Garbagemen

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Garbage collectors were just doing their job when they threw away a Charlotte woman's just-washed clothes, the city attorney contends.

Attorney Henry Underhill recommends that a claim by Mrs. Isabell McGee for $175.11 for the loss of the clothing be denied. Mrs. McGee says she had just washed some clothes and placed them on a trash container for a few minutes. When she returned, the garbagemen had hauled them off.

Firemen Want No Phone Calls

MAPLETON, Utah (AP) — Firemen in the central Utah town of Mapleton have asked local residents to call someone else about conditions on a local sleigh riding hill.

They say mild weather will probably keep the hill in nearby Maple Canyon unusable for several weeks.

And besides, when someone calls the fire department number, phones ring in the homes of all of the city's nine firemen.

"It's hard to say," Wagner said. "Our records of the few winters of this exact type indicate that sometimes a change comes in February, sometimes in March, sometimes in April."

Also, he said, there's no way of predicting whether things will be different next fall and winter.

Hostage In Diplomatic Prison

By HOLGER JENSEN
Associated Press Writer
VIENTIANE, Laos (AP) — Col. Soth Pethrasay goes to cocktail parties and brags about Pathet Lao victories on the Plain of Jars. But he is a hostage living in a diplomatic prison.

"The government tries every way to make life difficult," he says. "Once they surrounded my house with tanks and threatened to blow me away. They follow me, provoke me, insult me. But I mind my own business and show good will."

As the sole Pathet Lao representative in Vientiane, Pethrasay helps the rightist regime perpetuate its fiction of neutrality. In return he is allowed to attend diplomatic receptions, entertain visiting newsmen and propagandize a little.

His home is an enclave overlooking the main downtown market. Solemn little guerrillas in mustard-colored uniforms, tennis shoes and Lenin caps guard the modest, two-story house. They have ancient French rifles.

Pethrasay's reception room has metal ash trays and little model planes allegedly made from U.S. fighter-bombers shot down by the Pathet Lao. There is an impressive photographic display of Communist-led forces storming government positions on the Plain of Jars, and pictures of captured Thai mercenaries.

"We too have our combat photographers," Pethrasay explained with a smile. "This proves Thailand's military intervention in Laos."

A bulky man with a square face and high cheekbones, Pethrasay looks younger than his 57 years. His eyes crinkle easily with laughter and visitors find him an amiable host, dispensing cigarettes and orange pop.

Once a teacher in colonial Vientiane, he readily describes how he worked for the French for 17 years before turning against them in the first Indochina war. He fought alongside many men who now hold top positions in Premier Souvanna Phouma's government.

"All the big shots were comrades of mine in that war," he said. "They were good friends. I don't get invited to their homes any more, but we still exchange pleasantries when we meet at receptions.

"At heart they don't want to fight. They only do it because the American imperialists incite them to make war."

Pethrasay used to share his sanctuary with other Pathet Lao representatives after the Geneva agreements of 1962 "neutralized" Laos and added leftists to its coalition government. They fled in 1964 to avoid assassination when the rightists gained control. Pethrasay stayed on, guarded by 110 Pathet Lao soldiers. His wife and their two youngest children live in the mission, but the soldiers are not allowed to have their dependents here.

North Vietnamese forces control two-thirds of the countryside. The Pathet Lao claim to rule this zone from their capital of Sam Neua in the far northeast. The town has been wrecked by American bombing, but Prince Souphanavong and other guerrilla leaders with their families are said to live in an elaborate underground city beneath its ruins.

"My older children go to school in Sam Neua," said Pethrasay. "I have radio contact with the capital and a courier flies there regularly."

The courier presumably goes by way of North Vietnam, boarding the International Control Commission plane that flies weekly from Vientiane to Hanoi.

The Worry Clinic Error In Logic Is Perpetuated

Ellen has an analytical mind so try to answer her question without reading my reply. Ancient Aristotle made a very logical mistake 2,000 years ago. And modern clergymen have often perpetuated Aristotle's error. Even Cupid does the same thing! But lovers enjoy it!

By GEORGE W. CRANE
Ph.D., M.D.

Case S-585: Ellen D., aged 17, sings in a church choir.

"Dr. Crane," she asked, "our minister always tells us to 'bow our hearts and heads' when he starts to pray."

"But I don't understand why he talks about bowing our hearts!"

"People can't bow their hearts any more than their stomachs or livers, can they?"

As a result Aristotle decided that the heart was the center of our soul and consciousness.

"But, Dr. Crane," you may inquire, "what did he think was the function of the brain?"

suggest the heart as the center of our thinking.

Thus, we hear United Fund directors making "appeals to our hearts."

Sympathetic folks are called tenderhearted.

Kindly charitable folks are described as warm-hearted or goodhearted.

Evil men are termed coldhearted, hardhearted and blackhearted.

The Bible also uses such adjectives as merryhearted, stiffhearted, brokenhearted, fainthearted, stouthearted, willinghearted and wisehearted.

It also mentions that the hearts of the people melted.

But Pharaoh's heart was said to have hardened against the enslaved Israelites.

"Let not your heart be troubled," was one of Christ's comforting admonitions, so modern clergymen often imitate Ellen's pastor!

Although Hanoi is known to have up to 90,000 troops in this country, Pethrasay maintains no North Vietnamese are helping Pathet Lao guerrillas in fighting less than 100 miles from the capital.

"That is a lie to deceive public opinion," he said. "When the other side goes on the attack and seizes our territory they keep quiet. When we counterattack and get it back they start screaming about North Vietnamese."

A picture of Lenin hangs over Pethrasay's coffee table, but he laughs when asked if he is a Communist.

"According to the Americans anyone who is patriotic is a Communist. I find that very funny."

Worked With New 'Optacon'

A new medical machine, Optacon, was shown on the ABC Television program "Longstreet" Thursday night.

Chuck Rogers, son of Col. A. H. Rogers, USAF (Ret.) and Mrs. Rogers of Orlando, Fla., received his doctorate in biomedical engineering with most of his Ph.D. work on the Optacon. He is a nephew of Mrs. Rupert F. Allen of Greenville.

Rogers is now doing work for Corning Research Lab in Raleigh, where he resides with his wife and year-and-a-half-old son, David Charles.

"That is a lie to deceive public opinion," he said. "When the other side goes on the attack and seizes our territory they keep quiet. When we counterattack and get it back they start screaming about North Vietnamese."

GALS BUY THE CARDS
NEW YORK (AP) — "Single girls have a ball each year buying St. Valentine's Day cards," says Irving Cohen, president of a card chain.

"This is the one day in the year when the girls really can take the initiative, and don't think they don't know it."

Local Church Has Revival

REV. DONALD WILKES

Through this week the Greenville First Pentecostal Holiness Church is holding revival services with the Rev. Donald H. Wilkes, of Wheaton, Md., as guest preacher, announces the Rev. M. D. McPherson, host pastor. The services are nightly at 7:30.

The Rev. Mr. Wilkes is pastor of the Faith Pentecostal Holiness Church in Wheaton, a Washington, D. C. suburb. For 21 years as an ordained minister, the Rev. Mr. Wilkes has had a pastoral and evangelistic service which has covered an extensive area in the Southern and Mid-Atlantic states.

Pastor Wilkes is a graduate of Holmes Theological Seminary, Greenville, S. C., and in much demand in Full Gospel churches for his Bible-centered messages, according to the Rev. M. McPherson.

In addition to his pastoral duties, which include service to youth of the Washington metropolitan area, the Rev. Mr. Wilkes is active in civic affairs and special projects.

A pilot, Pastor Wilkes is a captain in the Civil Air Patrol. His radio ministry, "Moments of Inspiration," covers a wide listening area. He is an active member of the Wheaton Ministerial Association, and has served his congregation as pastor since 1960.

Pastor Wilkes is in Greenville for the second engagement with the First P. H. Church and has been warmly received, says Host Pastor McPherson.

Bobby Jackson Evangelist For Revival Service

Evangelist Bobby Jackson of Greenville will be guest speaker at revival services beginning Wednesday night at the Trinity Free Will Baptist Church.

Services will start nightly at 7:30 and will continue through Sunday, Feb. 6. Special singing will be featured during the services, including a quartet from Kingston.

Jackson graduated summa cum laude from Free Will Baptist Bible College, Nashville, Tenn., and received the M.A. degree from Bob Jones University, Greenville, S.C.

As an author, he contributes frequently to religious publications. His publications include "Messages That Matter," "Awakenings in the Wilderness" and "Beyond the Stars." In addition, he has released three record albums.

Al Davis is pastor of the Trinity Church, which is located on East 264 By-pass at Golden Road.

Rink Outing For Girl Scouts

Members of Girl Scout Troop 335, their leaders and guests had an outing last week to the Rocky Mount skating rink.

The group boarded the Pitt County Activity bus at Hooker Memorial Church, the troop's sponsor.

The outing was to pass off requirements for the Skating badge.

After lunch, the troop toured the Children's Museum and Zoo. Leaders of the troop are Mrs. Jimmy Dail and Mrs. Herbert Paschal.

Troop members who attended are Shannon Avera, Sandy Brown, Nancy Dail, Balfie Grady, Lisa Harris, Rae Marie James, Karen Jeffreys, Julia Joyner, Laurie Lucas, Anne Middleton, Kerry O'Neil, Pat Paschal, Dawn Price, Norma Roberson, Camille Smith, Laura Smith, Donna Tripp, Gwen Tyson, and Gina Whitchard.

Farm Workshop Series Starting

The first in a series of farm management workshops will be held Wednesday at 7 p.m. at the Agricultural Extension Building, 203 W. Third St.

Dr. Charles Pugh, head of the extension farm management section at North Carolina State University, will conduct the workshop.

At the first workshop, study will include budgeting.
