

U.S. And Russia Inching Closer To Limitation Pact

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — U.S. and Soviet negotiators have come closer to agreement on curbing the nuclear arms race but there was no clear indication on when a treaty limiting antiballistic missiles may be signed.

"We have made reasonable progress," a conference spokesman said today after the 24th plenary meeting of the strategic arms limitation talks—SALT. He refused to disclose whether the treaty on limiting defensive nuclear weapons and an interim agreement on certain curbs of offensive missiles may be signed during a seventh round of talks at Helsinki, Finland, starting in March.

A communique issued at the close of the sixth round here today said both delegations in the last 2½ months "engaged in further consideration of issues relating to a treaty on the limitation of antiballistic missile systems and to an interim agreement on certain measures with respect to the limitation of strategic offensive arms."

"Progress was made on a number of issues. The delegations express their determination to continue their efforts to reach an agreement."

Prior to his departure the U.S. chief delegate, Gerard C. Smith, told newsmen: "The U.S. delegation is encouraged by the progress toward agreement on the complex issues relating to strategic arms limitations."

Smith was asked about reports that the Americans did not want to come to an agreement before President Nixon returned from his Peking visit.

Smith said: "No, I think you can tell by my shoes there has been no foot-dragging. We have worked as hard as we can and there was no relationship between our efforts and any other events. We have been working independently of any other political expectations and developments."

The delegations decided to resume negotiations in Helsinki on March 28—four weeks after Nixon's visit to China.

The sixth round of the talks opened Nov. 15, took only a brief break for Christmas, and was the second longest since SALT started 2½ years ago.

It apparently was also one of the busiest rounds. The negotiators were reported "hard at work" and numerous working sessions were held by experts in special fields to deal with details.

Nothing was learned about the topics covered in these meetings, however.

Triple Murder In Boone Home Is Discovered

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — Bodies of a prominent Boone couple and their teen-age son were found in an overflowing bathtub at their home Thursday night, Watauga County Sheriff Ward Carroll said today.

They were Bryce Durham, 51, his 46-year-old wife, and their son, Bobby Durham, 19.

The sheriff said each apparently had been strangled with a rope and there were bruises on the faces. Some blood was found. The water in the bathtub was running and had flooded part of the house. The bodies were discovered about 10:30 p.m. by a son-in-law of the Durhams, Troy Hall. Durham owned a new-car dealership in Boone.

Carroll said a four-wheel drive vehicle missing from the home was found about two miles away.

The sheriff said he did not think robbery was the motive, although the home had been ransacked. Carroll said he thought the motive was a "grudge," but he declined to elaborate.

Bloodmobile At Ayden Monday

Monday will be Bloodmobile time in Ayden again. Douglas Morgan, chairman of the American Red Cross Bloodmobile program for Pitt County, says the Bloodmobile will visit Ayden on Monday from 11:30 a.m. until 5:30 p.m.

The Ayden collection is sponsored by the Ayden Jaycees, with Ralph Riggs, president of the Jaycees, coordinating details.

Morgan said this would be the first drive in Ayden that 18 year olds would be available as donors. A state bill passed several months ago permits 18 year olds to make donations of blood.

The Bloodmobile chairman also pointed out that citizens living in Ayden and working for Du Pont would be able to donate in Ayden without conflicting with giving when the unit calls at Du Pont. He said the timing of schedules of visits made it possible for donors to meet the requirement of eight weeks between donations.

In expressing appreciation for the generous response to collections Pitt County Citizens have shown in recent months, Morgan commented he hopes this attitude will continue and feels confident it will as people more and more realize the vital importance of the life-saving blood program.

IRA Officer Says Guerrilla Force Will Avoid Clash

By COLIN FROST
Associated Press Writer
BELFAST (AP) — An officer of the Irish Republican Army said today that the anti-British guerrillas would steer clear of the British troops ordered to disperse a Roman Catholic mourning march Sunday in Newry.

"We plan to keep well away," an officer of the IRA's militant Provisional wing told local newspapers. "It would be distinctly unwise for us to go into a situation like this where we would run the risk of arrest or shooting by the soldiers."

Up to 30,000 demonstrators are expected to join the march. The Civil Rights Association is organizing it as a tribute to the 13 Catholic civilians killed when British paratroopers broke up another banned procession in Londonderry last Sunday.

All public processions are banned in Northern Ireland, and the British army warned that its soldiers would break up the Newry march by force if necessary. The army brought in 550 more infantrymen, boosting its strength in the province to 15,000 troops.

The Civil Rights Association appealed to IRA gunmen to stay away.

"We do not want any trouble-makers in our ranks," a spokesman said. "If there is any violence it must be made clear that it comes only from the British army."

Meanwhile, Catholics rioted for four hours in the Lower Falls district of Belfast, and army patrols were the target of stones, bottles and bullets.

A military spokesman said the soldiers shot four snipers, but it was not known if any were killed.

In Lurgan, 20 miles southwest of Belfast, troops dispersed rival mobs of Protestants and Catholics who were threatening a street battle. One man was shot and was reported in serious condition.

At the other end of Ireland in the republic, a mob of more than 1,000 stormed the British Railway offices in Cork with gasoline bombs and badly damaged the building.

At A Glance

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Here is a brief outline of the forces, issues and recent developments in the Northern Ireland crisis:

Who's involved: The British province's Roman Catholics, about one-third of the 1½ million population, and the Protestants, who run the provincial government. Also Britain, which has over-all responsibility for the province; British troops; the Catholic-dominated Republic of Ireland to the south, and the illegal Irish Republican Army—IRA.

Issues: The IRA, many Catholics in Northern Ireland and the government of southern Ireland seek reunification of the Irish people in one independent country, which would be predominantly Catholic. Britain and the provincial government oppose reunification, saying the Protestant majority in Northern Ireland chose to be under British rule.

The province's Catholics, claiming discrimination by Protestants, also demand improvements in their job opportunities, housing and governmental representation.

Recent developments: In August 1969, Catholics rebelled against what they regarded as 50 years of repression beginning in 1921 when Britain gave independence to the southern republic after a civil war. Britain sent thousands of troops to put down communal warfare between the Catholics and Protestants. Then the IRA launched a guerrilla campaign to drive out the British and reunite Ireland.

Violence escalated last summer after an emergency decree was issued allowing internment without trial of suspected terrorists.

The Catholic demonstration at which 13 civilians were killed last weekend was to protest the internment policy.

State Offering Buy Land For ECU Campus

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The state is offering to purchase rather than condemn a number of pieces of property along E. Ninth Street that are needed for a gradual, planned expansion of the East Carolina University campus.

According to Julian R. Vainright, assistant to the business manager at ECU, state property control officials have approved this procedure and have mailed letters to property owners in the affected areas explaining the offer.

Vainright said that the letters, dated Feb. 1, were mailed by the Property Control Division of the Department of Administration in Raleigh to property owners in the half-block area bounded by James Street, Ninth Street and the existing campus boundary.

This section, as well as property along Ninth from James to Cotanche Street, was listed as top priority in the planned expansion by the property committee of the ECU board of trustees in a report on Oct. 27, 1971.

The ECU official explained that the letters contained a request from the state for the owners to "have your property appraised at our expense" in order to set the fair market value as the basis of negotiations.

Letters stated that there will be "no obligation on your part" and indicated that a representative of the Raleigh office would arrange to meet individual owners personally within the next two weeks for initial discussions.

Vainright said that no date has been set for the appraisals nor for firm purchase offers. Funds appropriated by the General Assembly will be utilized for future purchases.

The ECU trustees property committee recommended, "If possible, immediately, or within this biennium, to acquire as much property as possible on the North and South sides of Ninth Street from the campus to Cotanche Street and then to acquire as much of this property along Cotanche Street on the western edge of the main campus as possible."

University officials have emphasized that property acquisition recommendations represent long-range planning on the part of the state and the university.

They said this planning involves months and years of study and negotiation and pledged this will be done in a spirit of fairness and consideration.

Positive Reaction By Communist Nations Is Spurring Peace Hope

By KENNETH J. FREED
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Positive reactions from some Communist nations to President Nixon's peace plan have given the administration added hope for a negotiated settlement, State Department sources say.

Secretary of State William P. Rogers made two references to this in an unscheduled news conference Thursday and other department officials elaborated later in response to questions.

The secretary at one point said, "I think that the American people and people generally throughout the world—and this applies to Communist countries as well in some instances—feel that the President of the United States has gone as far as he possibly could."

At a later point he told reporters: "The enemy indicates some interest in the proposals. And we have diplomatic conversations with others that indicate they think the President's proposal might be a way out."

Department sources said the secretary was referring to some Communist nations, among others, in that statement, although they declined to give any identification.

They gave as an example a report in which an official of one European Communist nation, described as having good relations with China, said it is difficult now to refute that Nixon on is trying to end the war. Rogers previously said on behalf of the administration the fact North Vietnam had not rejected the Nixon's proposal was a hopeful sign.

He repeated this Thursday and underlined it with his statement that world response could mean "the other side may feel that it would be the best course to follow to enter into meaningful negotiations."

And, Rogers said, even though the Thursday statement by North Vietnamese envoys in Paris was largely repeats of past positions, "in some instances they could be considered clarification"

One departmental source said this was encouraging at least to the point of indicating a sort of dialogue keeping the possibility of negotiations alive.

The Vietnamese presentation was given another interpretation by Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, who said it was another indication that President Nixon's proposals had indeed been rejected.

Muskie's latest stand on the Vietnam peace talks occupied much of Rogers' attention during his news conference and injected a strong political element into the situation.

The secretary, apparently the vanguard for other administration forces, said he was dismayed by the Maine Democrat's attack this week on the President's position.

Unemployment Rate Edged Downward In Month Of January

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's unemployment rate edged down from 6 to 5.9 per cent last month, the government reported today.

Although the actual number of jobless increased 752,000 to 5,447,000, it usually increases much more in January and the Labor Department figured it as a decline of 56,000 on a seasonally adjusted basis.

The nation's total employment rose 240,000 to 80,636,000 on a seasonal basis, although the unadjusted figures showed a drop of more than one million.

The report, by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, said nonfarm payroll employment on a seasonal basis reached an all-time high of 71.4 million.

"Employment has advanced strongly since last summer," the bureau said.

The bureau said the January unemployment figures represented essentially no change.

The report also said average hourly earnings of some 45 million rank-and-file workers rose three cents an hour to $3.53, but that a larger than usual cut in the length of the average work week reduced weekly earnings to $129.20, a drop of $1.35 from December.

It said weekly earnings were up $7.32 or 6 per cent over the past year. Inflation of 3.4 per cent over the same period reduced the gain to $2.93.

The average work week dropped 18 minutes to 36.9 hours, the report said.

The biggest drop was in manufacturing where the work week fell off 24 minutes to 39.9 hours.

The report said the jobless rate for men declined slightly from 4.3 to 4.2 per cent for a total of 2,485,000.

Comprehensive Regulations For Cable TV Announced By FCC

By JERRY BROWN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission has granted cable television operators limited rights to import nonlocal television signals into the nation's largest cities as long as the imported programs do not duplicate those being shown by local stations.

Thus, in a comprehensive set of rules issued Thursday, the FCC in a 4-2 vote took the middle ground on the major issue of controversy between cable operators and broadcasters.

The new rules will permit established stations to retain control over program materials, holding the line to a considerable extent on cable TV's development in the big cities. At the same time cable TV will be able to expand in the nation's rural areas and smaller cities.

But FCC Commissioner Nicholas Johnson, a key force behind liberalization of cable regulations, objected to the new rules. Johnson charged that White House officials, FCC Chairman Dean Burch and leaders of the film, cable and television industry railroaded the rules through the commission.

Johnson was joined by Commissioner Robert E. Lee, who said the rules had been presented only to the largest parties involved, "perhaps in violation of the legal requirements of the Administrative Procedures Act."

Cable operators have maintained there should be no restrictions on which signals they carry, even if it meant giving customers the options of tuning in the same program on more than one channel.

But that position has been strongly opposed by broadcasters, who feared losses in advertising revenue by having the audience for network or syndicated programs split among more than one station.

The new rules, to take effect March 31, establish four market categories, based on size, with different regulations for each.

The categories and rules: —The top 50, where cable operators would be expected to carry three full network channels and three independent channels.

—Markets 51 through 100, where cable operators would be expected to carry three full network channels and two independent channels.

—Markets below the top

100, but served by local stations, where cable operations would be expected to carry three full network channels and one independent.

—Remote areas unserved by regular broadcasting.

The new rules, however, will hold the line on cable TV's unlimited growth. As an example, broadcasters in the top 50 markets will be able to buy exclusive rights to movies and network reruns. So if a station in Chicago bought the rights to show a popular movie in its area, a cable operator would not be permitted to pipe the same film in from another market such as Detroit.

Cable systems operating within the top 100 markets will be allowed to import two signals from stations more than 35 miles away, with the

University College Students Praise The Program

A graphic cross-section of today's quest for knowledge and training may be found in the current record enrollment of the University College program at East Carolina University.

"If it were not available to us, we would never be able to obtain a good complete, well-rounded education," members of a representative group of adult University College students told Dr. Douglas Strickland, director at a recent meeting.

"Certainly, it is very relevant," said William F. Hattem (215 Leggetts Lane) Williamston.

Hattem began courses in the ECU University College in the Fall of 1968 and has earned 62 quarter hours with almost an "A" average working toward a degree in Business Education.

During the recently completed Fall term, 181 adults were enrolled in evening courses and 150 were registered for winter term. The program provides an opportunity for individuals within commuting distance of Greenville to complete two years of college credit with night courses. Some also enroll in day classes.

Mrs. Ruth J. Speller (506 White Street) Williamston, works with the Headstart program in Martin County. She and a number of other Headstart workers are participating in the University College program. Mrs. Speller is seeking a major in Education, specializing in kindergarten through third grade, and also takes day classes.

"This is very important to me," she says. "I think taking advantage of the opportunity here afforded offers a lot." She has completed 70 quarter hours and has a high "B" average since enrolling in the Spring of 1967.

Mrs. Hester R. Latham, (301 Library Street) Greenville, works as secretary and office manager in the ECU Maintenance Department but enrolled in the University College program in 1967. She has completed 66 quarter hours with almost an "A" average.

She is undecided about a major field. "It is personal satisfaction and enrichment," she says. "I feel involved and know that I am bettering myself."

Mrs. Latham added, "I cannot say enough about the teaching personnel. They are wonderful teachers."

Michael L. Hosey (118 Oak Drive) Washington, N.C. began attending University College classes in the Fall of 1966, and has completed 57 quarter hours. His average is 4.00 on a grade point average of 4, for a full "A" average, and is majoring in accounting. In the meantime he holds a fulltime job with the Burroughs-Wellcome production plant in Greenville.

Dr. Strickland says, "These adults fully demonstrate the initiative, endurance and achievement of the part-time adult students enrolled in the ECU University College.

"For various reasons, they have chosen to continue their education during evening hours. Primary among these reasons is their desire to remain fully employed during the day. I hope that the University College can continue to expand course offerings so that we can continue to meet adult educational needs."

The University College program is offered through the East Carolina University division of Continuing Education, and offers resident college credit.

Students Visit Biology Dept.

Two groups of high school students visited the East Carolina University Department of Biology last week.

The students, 14 members of the Biological Science Club from East Carteret High School, Beaufort, and 18 senior science students from Murfreesboro High School, toured the department's facilities.

Cites 'Legacy' In Job Training

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Bob Scott says his administration has increased appropriations for job training in North Carolina by more than 100 per cent.

The governor said this included a boost of more than 135 per cent to the state's community college system, which emphasizes vocational training, and an increase of more than 101 per cent in the support of vocational education in public schools.

Scott made his comments in a talk prepared for delivery to a conference of industrial developers and community college presidents. "I think you will agree that this illustrates in rather dramatic terms the determination of my administration—and the determination of North Carolina—to keep pace in this very vital field of education," the governor said.

Scott said he is "pleased that the advancement of vocational education will be part of the legacy" he will leave the state.

He said job training by community colleges and technical institutes has helped to attract new industry to the state.

"As the result of such training," he said, "people previously believed unemployable are being employed."

"This program is giving North Carolinians a head start when they begin work for a new industry. Their orientation period takes less time and they are ready for additional responsibilities faster."

Old News Film Has Educational Value

Instead of being destroyed, old news film from TV station WNCT will be used by East Carolina University art student Jimmy Johnston to show young children in Greenville ways they can try their own talent in producing film strips.

Johnston will use two techniques in his demonstration at the Saturday Morning Activity Time in the Children's Room at Sheppard Memorial Library.

One technique Johnston will use is the "scratch" method, where children will scratch drawings and designs on the black emulsion of leader film. For clear film, the technique is called "doodle" since for this type of film drawing images with magic markers if the most effective.

In addition to fun, the purposes of children creating their own films of four to five minutes length will be to stimulate an interest in art and to improve verbal and written expressions. Showing of the films will be accompanied by music.

The Saturday morning program, which is the newest addition to a varied group of programs being presented for participation by school children in Greenville, is under the overall direction of Miss Helen Parker, Children's Librarian. Miss Parker notes that the program this Saturday is for elementary students only, and will be held from 10:00 a.m. until noon. All children in the elementary age group are encouraged to attend.

Courses Announced For Spring Term

The University College, the undergraduate evening program of East Carolina University, will offer eleven courses covering a

ECU Scientists To Participate In AEC Course

Faculty scientists at East Carolina University will participate in a special intensive course in the use of radioactive materials Feb. 7-18.

The Atomic Energy Commission is sponsoring the program. Members of the ECU biology, chemistry, physics and medical faculties will participate, said Dr. W. James Smith, assistant professor of biology at ECU.

Facilities for the two-week course will include a mobile radioisotope laboratory specially designed for such programs.

Three Oak Ridge Associated Universities scientists will instruct the participants on such topics as radiation, atomic structure and nuclear processes. Experiments and lectures will cover the application of radioisotopes to the fields of physics, chemistry and biology.

variety of academic areas during the coming spring term. The University College is a program designed for the part-time adult student. Courses are offered primarily during the evening hours. However, the University College will also offer two courses on Saturday mornings during the spring term.

The spring schedule includes courses in the following areas: art appreciation, biology, college algebra, economics, English composition, American literature, world history, general mathematics, music appreciation, sociology, and speech. Music 120, Music Appreciation, and Speech 119, Voice and Diction, will be offered on Saturday mornings.

Adults interested in enrolling in courses offered by the University College should write the Director, Division of Continuing Education, Box 2727, Greenville North Carolina 27834, or phone 758-6321.

Rep. Chisholm In N.C. Monday

RALEIGH (AP) — Rep. Shirley Chisholm, D-N.Y., the nation's first black congresswoman, will bring her campaign for the presidency to North Carolina State University next Monday.

Mrs. Chisholm will speak in the Erdaul-cloyd Union ballroom at 10 a.m. under the sponsorship of the NCSU Union Lectures Board.

Showing Film At Sunday School

A film entitled "What Is The Church" will be shown at Sycamore Hill Baptist Church during the Sunday School hour Sunday.

The film deals with the real business of the church and the purpose of the church.

The church is located on Eighth Street.

SINGING PROGRAM

The Ladies Auxiliary of the Meadowbrook Pentecostal Holiness Church will sponsor a singing program Sunday at 2:30 p.m.

The public is invited to attend.

RIBBON CUTTING . . . Despite inclement weather, a large crowd was on hand Thursday morning for the ribbon cutting and dedication of the new Bank of North Carolina office on E. Tenth Street here. Participating in the ceremonies were (L-R) Mrs. W. R. Mercer, wife

Personal Service Turns Secretary Off

By Abigail Van Buren

(© 1972 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: I am a secretary for a very nice man. He is a wonderful person to work for, except for one thing. He is always bringing me his kids' essays or term papers or book reports to type up. Also his wife is active in club work, and she sends lots of letters and speeches to the office for me to type.

I wouldn't mind doing this once in a while, Abby, but I think I am being taken advantage of but I don't have the nerve to tell my boss how I feel.

Maybe if you print this letter in your column, he will see it and take the hint. Or perhaps some of your readers have some suggestions on how I can refuse to do work for the whole family without hurting anyone's feelings.

PEEVED TYPIST

DEAR PEEVED: I assume you are being paid to work so many hours a day, right? So long as the work falls within your general competence, what difference does it make what you're doing? If the extra work necessitates working overtime, then you're entitled to extra pay. And if you're not getting it, you can either demand it, or look elsewhere.

DEAR ABBY: My question: When someone is ill, what is wrong with asking the ailing person himself, or a relative or close friend about the nature of the illness? I have asked three different people this question, and I got the following answers: 1. It is "bad taste." 2. It is an invasion of privacy. 3. Some illnesses are "embarrassing" to reveal. Very truly yours,

BRONX DUMMY

DEAR DUMMY: My answer would be a combination of all three.

DEAR ABBY: My husband is good looking, but he is very conceited. Now that we are married, he can't stand it when someone gives ME a compliment instead of him. If someone tells him he has a pretty wife, instead of being pleased about it, he says something like, "She's very artificial. You should see her in the morning."

I get so upset when he makes remarks like that, Abby, because I know I am not ugly.

Whenever we get all dressed up to go somewhere, he never tells me I look nice. He always asks, "How do I look?" What is the matter with him? And how can I cure him?

PUT DOWN

DEAR PUT: Your husband isn't "conceited"—he's immature and unsure of himself. Only those who feel insecure are constantly begging for compliments and reassurance. His jealousy and competitiveness are further signs of insecurity.

You can't "cure" him. Only he can cure himself by improving his opinion of himself.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "WILL WAIT FOREVER FOR HIM IN ODESSA": You may have to. A man is married until he is divorced. It doesn't matter whether they have been "separated" for six months or sixty years.

Mrs. Bendall Gives Program

Mrs. Frank Bendall presented the program at the meeting of the Chatham Book Club held Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Robert Powell.

While on a New England tour last fall, Mrs. Bendall visited the largest Amish village in the United States, which is located in Lancaster, Pa.

Originally this religious group developed from the Mennonites, who came from Switzerland and settled here in 1727. Other settlements have scattered across this country and now number around 50,000.

In her description, of this religious sect of people, she told about their customs, religion, and way of life.

Women's Political Role Grows

There may be some question about whether women are taking more interest in politics in this election year than in previous ones, but there can be no question about the fact that their interest is attracting more attention than in past years.

At the outset of this election year, women's groups are asking for and receiving more time from candidates. The role of women in government at all levels is being discussed more openly, and more positively by candidates than during any previous election year. There is no doubt that the women's vote — for many years important in the outcome of elections — is being sought more actively by candidates at all levels this year.

In North Carolina this year Mrs. Margaret Harper of Southport, vice chairman of the Democratic party, will make her second bid for the party's nomination for Lieutenant Governor. Four years ago Mrs. Harper came in second to Lieutenant Governor Pat Taylor who is now campaigning for the post of chief executive.

Further indication of the growing role of women in politics and government is the recurring question to gubernatorial candidates as to what part women would play in their administration. With increasing frequency the candidates are declaring openly that women will have top places in state government, not just the traditional jobs of secretaries, assistants and the like. The demands by women's groups that females in government be assigned duties of "making policy, not coffee" are not falling on deaf ears in this election year.

In our judgment, it is a move toward using to the fullest extent the abilities and potential at the disposal of government in this state. North Carolina, like other states, has plenty of women capable of handling major responsibilities in government. The fact that they have traditionally been assigned minor roles is not in keeping with today's changing society, or with the needs of this growing state.

In government as well as in other areas of society, women have the capacity of making a significant contribution if they are given the opportunity.

It should be reassuring, not disturbing, to candidates and the public alike, that the women's role in government and politics is on the threshold of a major breakthrough.

After decades of struggle, this may be the election year which sees women come into their own from the standpoint of major political decisions, as well as from the standpoint of assuming important roles in the new leadership structure that results from the 1972 elections.

Lindsay Team Proves Ability

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
PHOENIX, Ariz. — On Jan. 17, two days before the filing deadline for last Saturday's primary vote for delegates to the Democratic state convention, Sen. Edmund Muskie had a solid slate of 23 pledged Mexican-American candidates in the 28th Assembly District of Phoenix.

That day, operatives working stealthily for Mayor John V. Lindsay of New York quite literally stole the 15 best known of those 23 candidates. Included in the theft was the state's number one Chicano politician: George Castillo, who heads an activist Mexican-America political group called Nosotros, or "us."

Not even Muskie's own Arizona managers claim the theft was based on monetary reward. It resulted, rather, from a shrewd, secretive Lindsay operation under overall direction of a New York Democratic activist named Art Kaminsky, schooled in the new youth-and-minority politics of former Rep. Allard K Lowenstein.

Kaminsky's play in the heavy Chicano precincts of the 28th District delivered all those 15 Muskie delegates to Lindsay in the party's Feb. 12 convention which will select this state's 25 convention delegates to Miami Beach next summer.

It was just such pinpointed tactics in areas of heavy Mexican, black and college voters that allowed Lindsay's astute managers to elect 118 of the 500 delegates to the state convention, far more than anybody dreamed possible. The result was a disappointment for front-runner Muskie and a catastrophe for the national AFL-CIO effort to elect an uncommitted slate of delegates.

To put the mayor's triumph in perspective, Arizona is a small state with an idiosyncratic system of picking delegates that favored his operation. Nevertheless, his first electoral test outside New York was the first good cheer for Lindsay since leaving his ancestral Republican home. If his campaign for President seemed dead before Arizona, it now shows signs of life. Although Lindsay's showing was strongest with youth and minority votes, he also won in the blue-collar areas of West Phoenix, electing half a dozen construction workers and department store employees pledged to him.

The Lindsay high command now crows over these breakthroughs as a sign that the mayor can do what Robert F. Kennedy did in 1968: build a coalition of minority, youth and blue-collar whites. On the strength of Lindsay's performance, some advisers want him to enter the blue-collar-oriented Pennsylvania primary on April 25.

Comparing John Lindsay to Bobby Kennedy seems premature, however. Arizona was peculiarly suited to Lindsay's last-minute campaign blitz in which each dollar spent by Lindsay's media campaign was made to pay.

Thus, Lindsay's billboard campaign (sneered at by party pros here) guaranteed saturation coverage in Phoenix and Tucson and the college towns of Tempe and Flagstaff, heartland of Lindsay's votes. Total cost of those billboards ("Vote Lindsay: Arizona Likes a Fighter") plus a barrage of 30-second radio and TV spots featuring the candidate himself came to only $17,400 — a pittance compared to similar saturation coverage for a state the size of Pennsylvania.

Furthermore, the cumulative voting system adopted for the primary here (each voter having between 12 and 26 votes to "bullet vote" or distribute as he wished) plus the low turnout (about 10 per cent of 3000,000 registered Democrats) put a premium on expert advance planning. Kaminsky assigned Lindsay agents to each polling booth to tabulate estimated votes for each Lindsay candidate during the voting. When one Lindsay candidate reached the desired total, Lindsay voters were ordered to cast all their votes for the next candidate. No votes were wasted.

Strength For Today

TRAGEDY ALWAYS A MYSTERY

On a spring evening in 1824 Beethoven, old, ill, worn in body and spirit, mounted the platform of the great concert hall in Vienna to conduct his famous Ninth Symphony. This was the first time it had ever been played. The house was crowded. Although he was desperately in need of money the arrangements were that Beethoven was to receive less than two hundred dollars as his share of the evening's proceeds. He was stone deaf. Certainly this master of music was a tragic figure.

He laid down his baton at the close of the concert. Had not someone from the orchestra gently turned him about to face the audience he would not have known that behind him a thousand people or more were on their feet rocking the house with their frantic applause. The great composer had not heard a note of his own composition. He could only see the applause which beat against his deaf ears.

We wonder at tragedy like this, as we wonder at all tragedy. There is no explanation for tragedy in the moment it takes place — no explanation why God can let a tragic figure stand alone in a tragic world. But certainly as we look back now, remembering what Beethoven did, remembering his true fame in the annals of the world, we cannot be sorry for him.

So it is with all tragedy. If we knew enough and could see it in proper perspective we would not be sorry.

Too Many Peace Points

WASHINGTON — One of the reasons that it is so difficult to get a settlement in Vietnam is that there are so many peace proposals on the table that no one knows which one anyone is talking about.

Even President Nixon, in discussing the secret meetings with the North Vietnamese in Paris, stumbled over the different plans that have been submitted.

In am certain that this is what is happening in the White House at this very moment:

"Mr. President, the North Vietnamese have just given an answer to our peace proposal."

"Good Henry. Is it a response to our reply to their public seven-point plan or our private eight-point plan which we submitted to them?"

"We're not certain. As you know, in 1965 they offered us a four-point plan and we came back at them with a 14-point proposal which they rejected outright. Then on May 14, 1969, we came back with our eight-point public plan which they countered by submitting a 10-point plan on July 8, 1969."

"What about our five-point proposal of Oct. 7, 1970?"

"They responded to that by publicly submitting the National Liberation Front's seven-point plan."

"What does that make the point spread, Henry?"

"I'm not too good at mathematics, Mr. President, but I believe on points they're slightly ahead. But if you add our eight-point secret plan, then we're ahead."

"Do you believe they'll come up with another point proposal when they realize they're behind?"

"I'm sure of it, Mr. President. They were very angry that we added a point to their seven-point proposal of July, and considered it an act of bad faith."

"The only reason we did it was because the seven points did not cover all the proposals."

"I know that you and you know that, but they don't know it."

"I have a good mind to bomb them tomorrow morning."

"Wait a minute, Mr. President. I think we ought to study their reply to our response to their proposal first. There may be something in it we've overlooked."

"Well, why can't we bomb them while we're studying their response?"

"Because if we respond to their answer with bombing, they could say we're not serious about our eight-point proposal."

"Is that the secret one or the public one?"

"It was the secret one, Mr. President, until you made it (Continued on page 5)

NEW YORK (AP) — Jumping to conclusions:

Any husband whose wife packs a liverwurst or baloney sandwich more than twice a week in the lunch he carries to work is entitled to a divorce. But a man is unlikely to run away from his home if his wife shows a little imagination in fixing him the meal he eats away.

A dog may dwell in luxury on Park Avenue, but he leads an underprivileged existence if never even once in his life he has the pleasure of scratching a flea.

Chopping up or sawing logs to warm his home has been one of man's commonplace chores for thousands of years. But so accustomed are we today to having other people do our work that a man who cuts up a fallen tree in his backyard feels he is a hero and equal to his pioneer ancestors. It is to him a feat of great virtue, and for a week he bores everybody at the office bragging about it.

Other Editors Say Buying Peace?

(Henderson Dispatch)

Since more than $100 billion has been scattered around the world by the United States since World War II in an effort to buy friends, it seems the height of folly to offer North Vietnam $2.5 billion if it will accept sensible terms to end the fanatical war in Southeast Asia. Yet that is, in effect, what President Nixon has proposed to this small nation which has been responsible for the killing of more than 50,000 American service men in the past five or six years.

Over a period of five years, the President has proposed $7.5 billion to be given Indochina for rehabilitation following an acceptable peace settlement. That too, in the likelihood that we would have to knuckle under to this tiny communist nation to get even this sort of consideration.

It doesn't matter too much what sort of an agreement might possibly be reached, the great probability is that when we move out and the enemy gets these additional billions of dollars of American money, the communists will move into South Vietnam to take over the country, despite the horrible sacrifice of our men and expenditure of countless billions in trying to win a no-win war.

This may be sound foreign policy, but we can't see it that way. The United States has all too little to show for the colossal doses spread around the world in the past 25 years. There are few fast friends indeed, but there is abundant jealousy for American wealth and resources, generating hatred and animosity toward this country.

The ace in the hole held by North Vietnam is the countless prisoners of war seized in the fighting in recent years. Hanoi well knows the eagerness here to set these men home safely, and is raising its price high, indeed out of all reason but in the hope on its part that we will pay.

This country owes the communist nothing by way of rehabilitation. It's a poor method of seeking peace.

Conglomerates Lose Glitter

By ELMER ROESSNER

The growth of conglomerates may have passed its peak, but they will continue to flourish, perhaps forever.

Conglomerates are, at the moment, in disfavor. Even the Nixon Administration, frequently accused of being pro big business, has included in the budget a $2 million request for a Federal Trade Commission survey of conglomerates. This is not a signal for an attack on these sometimes strangely mixed enterprises, but it may lay the groundwork for legislation limiting them. The money is to be spent gathering more facts on profits and sales of the 200 largest conglomerates.

Pending in Congress is the Mills Bill which would prevent one corporation from using unlimited debt to offset the cost of buying another company. The bill would limit the deductibility of interest on debt used to buy another company which, in effect, makes the Treasury pay part of the cost of a merger.

Conglomerates came under heavy attack last month when a Senate antitrust and monopoly subcommittee held four days of hearings. Albert Gore, former Democratic Senator from Tennessee, called for a tough antitrust policy that would break up corporations so big and powerful they could fix prices regardless of market conditions. Other witnesses said more extensive, perhaps permanent, price controls would be needed if massive corporations were not broken up.

Despite the big-business tag applied to the Nixon Administration, the Attorney General's office has continued steadfastly opposed to mergers that reduce competition. Currently, it is trying to get an injunction against the merger of two of the nation's largest commercial banks, Wells Fargo of San Francisco and the First Western Bank and Trust Co. of Los Angeles.

Justice can act when a merger of corporation in the same field appear to violate the antitrust laws, but can't do much about the merger of a steel producer and a spaghetti manufacturer. For example, Justice has warned the 200 top toy corporations against mergers.

There is also a growing public suspicion of, if not outright opposition to, mergers. They have resulted in plant closings, the firing of men, including many in the executive suite, they have been followed by price rises (which might have come anyhow) and there are reports of hanky-panky in many deals. Many stockholders believe they were shortchanged in merger deals and some mergers appear to have been engineered to gain control of pension and other funds.

When mergers began to increase in number in the early 1960s, they were generally regarded as favorable. The union of an industrial company and a consumer goods firm, or the merger of a company in selling luxury goods and another making a consumer necessity was regarded as hedging against any change in the market place. But as it swept on, and small, competitive companies disappeared, both government and public lost their enthusiasms.

What the present Congress will do is only a guess, and the best guess seems to be: not much.

The Congress has already relaxed restriction on bank holding companies. They have become the favored operators in the merger field. Banks are moving ahead cautiously entering one new field at a time and some day may be king of the merger hill.

Criticism Fails To Deter Muskie

By ROBERT L. CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer

Defying a host of Republicans who have chastised him for criticising President Nixon's latest peace proposals, Sen. Edmund S. Muskie has renewed his attack on the President for not unilaterally setting a date for complete withdrawal of U.S. forces from Vietnam.

On the campaign trail in Wisconsin, the Maine Democrat Thursday issued a statement responding to the latest GOP criticism—from Secretary of State William P. Rogers hours earlier, who, said Muskie harmed the national interest by rejecting Nixon's plan before Hanoi did.

"For years," Muskie said, "every time an American senator has made a proposal to bring this war to an end earlier, he has been greeted with the same response from our government as Secretary Rogers used today.

"It is apparent that the other side will not accept the terms the administration has set," Muskie continued, adding: "I believe they would respond seriously to the terms I have suggested."

Muskie said Wednesday release of U.S. prisoners of war and safety of the troops should be the only conditions attached to setting a withdrawal date.

Rogers' denunciation of Muskie's view as "most inappropriate and harmful to the nation's interest" followed similar criticism from presidential press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler, Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird and several Republicans in Congress.

And a source close to the White House indicated more of the same probably would be forthcoming today at an appearance in New Hampshire by Interior Secretary Rogers C. B. Morton.

Another Democratic presidential aspirant, Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington, told the Women's National Democratic Club Thursday: "I was sorry to see Sen. Muskie take the position he did."

In an apparent reference to escalation of the war under recent Democratic presidents, Jackson said the Democrats "have a special responsibility to help get the war over."

In other political developments:

MUSKIE: Later Thursday night Muskie engaged in a heated exchange with hooting and hissing antiwar protesters when he attempted to discuss questions on which they demanded answers—the Vietnam war, and whether marijuana and abortions should be legalized. Muskie said the reception at a Madison, Wis., hotel was the most hostile he had encountered since his vice presidential campaign days.

LINDSAY: New York Mayor John V. Lindsay predicted Thursday night the Massachusetts Democratic primary April 25 will be a head-to-head battle between Muskie and himself

Lindsay told the Massachusetts House Press Association that the field will be narrowed by earlier primary contests in which he expects to do progressively better.

JACKSON: The Washington Democrat, arriving in Wisconsin later Thursday to begin a three-day campaign for the state's April 4 primary, said Congress should close existing income-tax loopholes instead of approving a value-added tax, now being discussed. The working man, Jackson said in Wausau, "is being taxed too much for too little because of tax systems that are riddled with favoritism."

HUMPHREY: Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey filed in Charleston, W.Va., for the May 9 Democratic primary and told a joint session of the legislature he would relight the touch carried by the late John F. Kennedy, uniting West Virginians to bring him victory. "I want to build a coalition from the mountaintops and valleys across this great state, the kind John Kennedy had in our 1960 campaign," the Minnesota senator said.

McCLOSKEY: Rep. Paul N. McCloskey Jr. of California, antiwar challenger to President Nixon, told the National Press Club in the nation's capital if he were elected president, he would appear monthly before a joint session of Congress to answer questions.

ASHBROOK: Rep. John M. Ashbrook, R-Ohio, conservative challenger to Nixon, said a compromise reached between the Nixon administration and Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., on welfare reform "calls for preceding full-scale implementation of the family-assistance plan, but it provides that the plan will take effect regardless of the results."

HARTKE: Sen. Vance Hartke of Indiana, campaigning in New Hampshire for the Democratic nomination, challenged Sen. George S. McGovern of South Dakota to a debate. McGovern replied that he would like to debate Hartke, but would prefer a New Hampshire debate with Muskie, the acknowledged front-runner.

Muskie, McGovern, Jackson and Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace didn't show up Thursday night for a Democratic fund-raising dinner in the nation's capital, but Democratic National Chairman Lawrence E. O'Brien hosted congressional aides, pages and newsmen at the $500-a-plate affair.

Humphrey, former Sen. Eugene McCarthy and Rep. Patsy T. Mink of Hawaii were the presidential contenders on hand, but the biggest applause went to retired House Speaker John W. McCormack.

Want Mice For Cancer Research

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Students will begin a campaign to "Send a Mouse to College," in April, which has been designated cancer control month. The object is to raise enough money to provide 20,000 white mice for cancer research. To do it, the students will need to collect more than $5,000.

Allman Bros. Band At ECU On Sunday

The Allman Brothers Band is next on the series of Popular Entertainment coming to Greenville on campus at East Carolina University.

The group, formed around Greg Allman and the late Duane Allman of Nashville, Tennessee, will be on hand at Minges Coliseum Sunday, at 3:00 p.m.

First formed in 1965 as a four piece group called the Allman Joys, the quartet toured the club circuit in the South, broke up in 1967 and reformed as the Hourglass. From South the new group went to the West Coast, a venture destined not to last long. Then followed a period of shaping up the group, with brothers Greg and Duane being joined by other musicians.

Greg Allman, organist, also doubles as vocalist. On the alternate lead guitar, Dicky Betts performs lead guitar; with the rhythm section made up of double drummers Butch Trucks and Jai Johanny Johanson. Barry Oakley, bassist, rounds out the crew members of the group.

The group is best known for its second album, "Idlewild South" featuring old blues and numbers such as "Statesboro Blues", "Junior Wells" and "You Didn't Love Me Baby," as well as a longer work of its own, "In Memory of Elizabeth Reed."

Tickets for the Popular Entertainment series are $3.00 for members of the public and are available at the Central Ticket Office.

Parents Invited To Band Event

Another in a series of programs designed to stimulate interest and possible growth in the local school band is being held Monday night, at Aycock Junior High School.

At 8:00 p.m. Monday, parents of band members, particularly those in elementary and junior high grades, as well as any other interested persons, are invited to attend the program scheduled at the Aycock cafeteria.

At this meeting, officers for the Band Booster Club will be introduced, and the band will be on hand to play several selections.

Band directors James Rodgers and Johnny Wooten will direct the program, and will answer questions about ways and means of creating additional interest among students in connection with the band program.

Dr. Raper To Be Church Speaker

MOUNT OLIVE — Dr. W. Burkette Raper, President of Mount Olive College, will be the guest minister at Little Creek Church near Ayden on Sunday.

Dr. Raper will teach the young people's Sunday School class at 10 a.m. and then deliver the sermon at the 11 a.m. worship service.

The Reverend David Charles Hansley, pastor of the Church, invites all interested people to attend.

calculation was breathtaking. In the 30th District, Muskie received 5,100 votes but elected only eight delegates to the state convention. The uncommitted, labor-backed slate won 3,700 votes and two delegates. In short, Lindsay made every vote count while Muskie and the uncommitted slate wasted hundreds of ballots—taking advantage of the peculiar cumulative voting.

But the fact that Lindsay's managers were by far the shrewdest in taking that advantage and making Lindsay's media appeal pay off reveals technical competence in his Presidential campaign. Thus, though Arizona was no disaster for Muskie, it was the first faint sign that the Lindsay campaign has any viability.

public."

"Oh, yes, that's right. Well, is their response to our secret uh, public eight-point proposal, secret or public?"

"Publicly they have denounced it, but secretly they've indicated they're studying it."

"Well, why don't we bomb them publicly, but secretly let them know we're looking for a peaceful solution?"

"I believe, sir, we'd have to come up with another proposal before we do. How about a 35-point peace plan? That could really throw them into a swivet."

"That's not a bad idea. But before we do that, what was their response to our eight-point secret proposal which I made public the other night to show all Americans that I had gone the extra mile?"

"My people are sending it up to me now. Here's one of my aides. Thank you."

"Henry, you've gone pale. What is it, Henry?"

restriction that they could not provide simultaneously—via imported signal—a program carried by a local station.

However, once the local station has carried the program it could be shown on the imported channel.

Cable systems operating in markets below the top 100 would not be allowed to import signals except to meet the minimum standards.

There would be no restrictions on the number of signals imported into areas unserved by regular broadcasting.

The FCC also announced proposals for applying to cable TV the same blackouts of local sporting events that apply to regular stations.

One major issue yet to be resolved is copyrights. Cable systems do not pay local stations or the networks for the programs they pick up.

Burch said he hopes Congress will pass legislation soon to deal with copyright fees.

Cable TV, also known as CATV for "Community Antenna TV," brings television signals into the home via coaxial cable from a central antenna. Fees generally run $5 to $7 a month.

More than 2,750 CATV systems now serve about 4,500 communities and more than six million homes in 49 states.

Because over the years his parents have invested in U.S. Savings Bonds—in his name, for his future—by participating in the Payroll Savings Plan at work.

He probably doesn't even know. And right now, he couldn't care less. But when he's older, that money can be used for a lot of things—a car, a college education, or even a new home.

The Payroll Savings Plan is an easy way to save money for you and every member of your family. When you join, an amount you designate will be automatically laid aside from your paycheck and invested in U.S. Savings Bonds. It's a painless way to save.

And now there's a bonus interest rate on all U.S. Savings Bonds—for E Bonds, 5½% when held to maturity of 5 years, 10 months (4½% the first year). That extra ½%, payable as a bonus at maturity, applies to all Bonds issued since June 1, 1970—with a comparable improvement for all older Bonds.

Join the Payroll Savings Plan where you work and make your son the richest kid on the block.

Bonds are safe. If lost, stolen, or destroyed, we replace them. When needed, they can be cashed at your bank. Tax may be deferred until redemption. And always remember, Bonds are a proud way to save.

Take stock in America. Now Bonds pay a bonus at maturity.

do cats laugh?

We don't mean to offend any cat-lover, but we don't believe cats laugh.

Laughter is a muscular response to appreciated humor. And we're inclined to view humor as one of those high-level responses which are characteristic in humans only. And thank the Lord for humor. Without laughter this would be a sorry world.

Religion is another human characteristic not evident in animals. Our belief in and worship of God, coupled with our conscientious effort to live according to moral principles—these are not found in the animal world.

Whether cats laugh is not a question of great moment. But whether man is living up to the religious capacity God has given him is another matter. Our awakening to our spiritual potential is a great moment!

Board Sets '78 Priority

RALEIGH (AP) — An expanded occupational education program that would provide preliminary work training for all children in the public schools by 1978 was given top priority Thursday by the North Carolina Board of Education.

The board said in a statement the "best hope for the elimination of poverty, the raising of our standard of living and the economic growth of our state lies in the training of our youth and adults to have specific, salable job skills."

Vocational education has been pushed strongly by Gov. Bob Scott and by candidates in the current gubernatorial race. One of them, Hargrove "Skipper" Bowles, has made the subject a major issue in his campaign.

The board of education said its program would be designed to provide "occupational awareness and exploration" to all children in kindergarten through the 9th grade.

It added that by 1978, "80 per cent of all students in grades 10 through 12 shall be in a skill development program involving work experience training in business and industry."

Jacqueline Onassis To Testify At Trial

NEW YORK (AP) — A lawyer for Jacqueline Onassis says she plans to testify during the nonjury trial of a $1.3-million damage suit brought against her by a free-lance photographer.

Simon Rifkind, lawyer for the former first lady, said Thursday he did not know whether Mrs. Onassis' children also would testify at the open trial to begin Feb. 14.

Mrs. Onassis has claimed in a suit, later dropped, that the activities of photographer Ronald E. Galella terrified her, her son John and her daughter Caroline. Galella's suit contends that Mrs. Onassis and Secret Service agents have interfered with his work.

In scheduling the trial, U. S. District Court Judge Irving Ben Cooper denied a request by Galella that the case be heard by a jury. Cooper said he would hear the case himself.

The judge said he intended to handle the trial in a manner that would give Mrs. Onassis, widow of President John F. Kennedy, "no more and no less than would be due if her name was plain Mrs. Jones."

Should the issue of damages be decided in Galella's favor, Cooper added, he would consider impaneling a jury to fix the amount.

Rifkind opposed a jury trial, telling the court it would mean "taking a little case and expanding it into a big case."

GM disclosed in its financial report made public Thursday that sales in 1971 hit a record $28.3 billion compared to the previous high of $24.3 billion in 1969.

Last year's earnings were topped only by the $2.1 billion racked up in 1965.

For the first month of this year, GM reported a sales gain of 13.2 per cent in passenger cars and 68.2 per cent in trucks over the January 1971 figures.

Charge Youths With Additional Break-Ins

Two teenagers — one a juvenile — charged with breaking, entering and larceny in connection with a break-in last week at a Pactolus house in which an estimated $1,500 worth of property was reported taken have been charged with two similar offenses reported to the Pitt County Sheriff's Department during the first week in January.

Sheriff's officers said this morning that Ronnie Earl Brown, 18, of Route 8 (112 Jackson Ave.), Greenville, and a 15-year-old youth have been charged with a break-in at the home of Miss LaMond Walters, 115 Jackson Ave. reported January 3. A television, tape player and tapes, and jewelry valued at about $275 were reported taken.

Brown and two juveniles, deputies reported, have also been charged with a break-in reported January 5 at the home of Ernest Jones, Route 6, Greenville.

Investigators said two radios, two tape recorders, two flashlights, a jewelry box and jewelry, a camera and rings valued at $3000 were reported taken there.

Part of the property taken from the homes has been recovered, Sheriff's Department officers reported.

Pres. Nixon Is Boning Up

KEY BISCAWAYNE, Fla. (AP) — President Nixon, who seems increasingly fond of spur-of-the-moment travel, is here for a solitary weekend of homework for his China trip.

Nixon's decision to visit his bayside home was so unexpected that the military was unable to provide presidential helicopters to carry him from outlying Homestead Air Force Base to his closely-guarded compound following a hurry-up flight from Washington.

As a result, his jet set down Thursday night at Miami International Airport—a shorter motorcade distance from his ranch-style quarters.

Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler, the only top aide to accompany the President, said Nixon planned to concentrate while here on books and briefing papers relating to his Feb. 21-28 trip to Communist China.

Mrs. Nixon remained in Washington.

Flying to Florida aboard the presidential jet was Commissioner Pete Rozelle of the National Football League. Rozelle had been a guest at a White House conference and reception earlier Thursday and, said Ziegler, Nixon offered him a ride after learning the pro football chief was Florida-bound for a vacation.

Truck Hijacking Case To Jury

GREENSBORO (AP) — The case of nine men charged in the hijacking of a Lorillard Corp. truck loaded with $101,000 worth of cigarettes was expected to go to the jury today.

Defense lawyers made their statements to the jurors in U.S. District Court in Greensboro Thursday. Judge Richard B. Kellam was to deliver his charge as the trial reopened today.

Glum Forecasts Proved Wrong

COPENHAGEN (UPI) — Predictions that increased prices and economic squeezes would keep tourists away from Denmark in 1971 did not materialize.

The Hotel and Restaurant Board said a total of 379,500 foreign tourists spent a night at a Danish hotel from January to August, compared with 368,400 during the corresponding period of 1970.

Bucs Face Paladins In Key Contest

Conley Matmen Defeat Panthers

BETHEL — D. H. Conley High School downed North Pitt, 41-21, in an Eastern Carolina Conference wrestling match last night, throwing the league into a three-way tie for the regular season title.

Conley, Farmville Central and North Pitt finished in a three-way tie for the league, each with 6-2 records in league play.

The actual title, however, will be decided next week, when the three, along with Ayden-Grifton and Southern Wayne meet at Farmville Central for the conference meet. That will be held Wednesday.

Conley, in winning the match, took eight of the 13 matches, winning five by pins. North Pitt took two by falls. One of the matches ended in a draw.

Summary:

100: D. Hatch (C) decided.

David Brown, 11-9.

107: M. Tyson (C) pinned Wesley Manning, 3:15.

Pitt Tech In Win Over Sprunt

KENANSVILLE — Pitt Technical Institute struggled to a 91-85 victory over James Sprunt Technical Institute of Kenansville last night. It was a non-conference game for the Paladins, who are now 11-3 on the season.

Both teams got off to a slow start, with neither able to make much headway in the first half. After three minutes of play, only a 2-1 score had been recorded. Sprunt began to pull away, however, and built up a six point lead 20-14 midway in the period. Pitt struggled back, however, and trailed only 35-34 at the half.

In the second half, the Paladins tied it up on a free throw, and then began to pull out on their own. They built up a 10-point bulge, 42-52, near the halfway point, but Sprunt came back, tying it at 70-70 with about five minutes left in the game.

Pitt Tech then drew away again, holding a six-point edge most of the rest of the way.

Wayne Brown led the Pitt scoring with 32 points, while Frank Brown had 24, Leslie Saunders had 15 and Eddie Stokes had 12. Sprunt was led by R. Glaspie with 39, while W. Peterson had 18 and L. Miller had 14.

Pitt returns to conference action Monday, traveling to Edgemcombe Tech.

Jaguars Claw Ayden-Grifton

FARMVILLE — The Farmville Central High School wrestlers rolled to a 54-9 rout of Ayden-Grifton last night.

The Jaguars took all but two of the matches, losing one by default and one by decision to the Chargers. Of all the 11 Farmville Central wins, seven came by pins.

Summary:

100: Ronald House (FC) pinned A. Sasser, 5:04.

108: Ricky Bundy (FC) pinned S. Manning, 2:46.

Oak City Gals Fall To Nash

ROCKY MOUNT — Northern Nash High School's girls basketball team rolled to a 40-25 victory over Oak City last night. It was the only game played.

The Lady Knights pushed out into a 9-4 lead in the first period, but Oak City rallied in the second quarter and pushed into the lead. The Trojanettes outscored Nash, 11-4, and held a 15-13 halftime edge.

But in the third quarter, Northern Nash regained control of the game, edging Oak City, 12-3, to take the lead back at 25-18. They again outscored the Trojanettes, 15-7, to win going away.

Loretta Hunter and Jackie Stallings each scored 10 points to lead the Northern Nash scoring. Oak City was led by Sylvia Jones with 15 points.

Oak City's boys and girls visit Bear Grass for a Martin County Conference game tonight.

Oak City — Joyner 3, Butler 5, Jones 15, Ross, Little, Taylor 2, Reed, Andrews, White, Reynor, Spruill.

Northern Nash — Hunter 10, Stallings 10, Williams 8, Reges 5, Davis 5, Norwood 2, Sherrod, Smith, Fisher.

MCKINNEY ON THIRD

NEW YORK (AP) — Rich McKinney, obtained by the New York Yankees from the Chicago White Sox in a deal for pitcher Stan Bahnsen, says he hopes to become a regular at third base this season.

McKinney, a native of Piqua, Ohio, saw most action at second base last season, playing 67 games at that position. He played only five games at third base and 25 in the outfield. He batted .271.

Deacon Takes A Spill

Second Half Effort Gives Tar Heels Win

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

"We strive for perfection," said Wake Forest coach Jack McCloskey after Thursday night's encounter with fourth-ranked North Carolina. Perfection was what the lowly Deacons would have needed to beat the Tar Heels, who recorded a 71-59 victory.

For the first 20 minutes, the Deacons approached that exalted level. They hit 55 per cent of their shots, and at one point, late in the first half, led 20-14. Their stingy defense limited UNC to 27 per cent of its first-half shots.

After that, it was back to normal for both teams. The Tar Heels displayed their usual balanced attack, led by Bobby Jones, (13), Robert McAdoo and Dennis Wuycik (12) and George Karl (11, on as many free throws).

All Atlantic Coast Conference teams are idle tonight. Saturday's slate has Duke at Maryland, N.C. State at Virginia, Temple at Wake Forest, and independent South Carolina playing its first ACC foe of the season at Clemson.

The Gamecocks will be facing not only Clemson, but the noisy and intimate crowd at the Tigers' Littlejohn Coliseum. But if Frank McGuire had a scout in the stands at Wednesday night's Clemson-Virginia game, he knows one way to insulate his players.

Cavalier coach Bill Gibson decided to move his team from the normal visitors' bench, right in front of the student cheering section, to the comparative serenity of some theatre chairs under one of the baskets. Clemson coach Bates Locke vainly protested the move.

The Cavaliers came away from that one with their first win at Clemson in four years. The Gamecocks, ranked eighth, may try the same tactics. It's a cinch that the crowd, spurred by one of the South's fiercest intrastate rivalries, will be in rare form for the game.

Virginia, meanwhile, will be returning to its own vociferous home folks to face N.C. State and Tommy Burleson. The young giant from Newland, N.C., recently took over the ACC scoring lead from Virginia's Barry Parkhill, whom he now leads by a fraction of a point.

Wolfpack coach Norm Sloan makes no secret of his team's strategy: "We've got to get the ball to Tommy more." To counter, the Cavaliers are certain to press State's Joe Cafferkey, the lone guard in Sloan's 1-4 offense. Virginia won with those tactics last month in Raleigh, but this time, Sloan says he will not hesitate to put reserve guard Steve Smorl into the game to lend Cafferkey a hand.

Two victory streaks will be on the line when the Blue Devils visit Cole Field House for the weekend's regionally televised affair. Maryland has won eight straight at home this year. The improving Blue Devils have a four-game skein going, their best of the year.

The Terrapins will be playing without Mark Cartwright, a seven-foot reserve, who left College Park Thursday. He apparently intends to transfer to a Midwestern school where he can get more playing time.

East Carolina University can't get back into the Southern Conference lead Saturday night, unless The Citadel pulls off an upset. But the Pirates, by winning, could do a lot to help their cause as the Southern Conference season heads down the home stretch.

Saturday, the Bucs travel to Greenville, S.C., to meet the tough Paladins of Furman University. East Carolina already holds a victory over the Paladins, having beaten them in Minges Coliseum.

The Bucs' loss to Davidson on Tuesday, however, knocked the Pirates out of sole possession of first place in the league, but their position right now is not without hope.

The Bucs, but winning the rest of their games could finish with a 9-3 league record. Should Furman beat Davidson in their meeting next week, this would give the Bucs first in the league, since they play one more game than does Furman, and two more than Davidson.

But before they can start looking at the Davidson-Furman contest, they must look at their own meeting with the Paladins.

"This is really a key game if we are to finish first in the league," Coach Tom Quinn said. "Of course, each game we play is a key game to finish even in the top three. We've lost three now, and we lost four last year to finish third. That's more than we lost in the two previous years."

Quinn wasn't happy with the way the Bucs played at Davidson in their loss. "But it's not every game you get two of your starters with four fouls by halftime," he added. "Early in the game, the officiating let us know what we could do and what Davidson could do. And it wasn't the same thing. They could go to the boards and take the ball inside and we couldn't. We really didn't get an opportunity to play them."

Quinn added that one official was relatively new to varsity competition. "This is only his first or second year calling on this level."

Looking ahead, Quinn expects to get the same kind of game from the Paladins as they did earlier. "I know they were disappointed in their loss, and are anxious to get back at us. But at the same time, we're disappointed about losing to Davidson and are anxious to get back on the winning trail again, too."

Quinn added that the Pirates need a big road win to convince themselves that they are a good team. "The Davidson game could have provided us with this. Now Furman can. It's a wonderful opportunity for us since this is the best team we'll be meeting on the road in the league from here on."

To win, Quinn feels the Bucs must stop the inside game of the Paladins, who like to go to their big men, Russ Hunt and Roy Simpson, who stand one-two in the league in scoring.

Hunt, through last Saturday's contests, was hitting at a 21.9 average, while Simpson was scoring at an 18.1 mark. Furman, overall is still the leading offensive team in the league with a 90.8 average, but at the same time is the worst defensive team, giving up 89.6 points per game. Last night, they were blitzed by Jacksonville, 102-87.

"We also have to keep our big men out of foul trouble," Quinn said, remembering the Davidson contest.

The Buc defenses crumbled in the Davidson game, and the rebounding was also absent. This will have to return for the Pirates to pick up a win.

One factor that made important is the play of the two benches. Quinn feels that Furman has good reserves in Steve Dougherty and Bernard Collier. "Dougherty is very solid, but is more of a defensive player than a scorer. Collier was a starter last year, so we know he's good. Overall, I'd say their bench was as strong as ours, but in different positions. They don't have anyone who can effectively relieve Simpson and Hunt, while we have Ray Pesko and Nicky White, who can rest our front court people, so I'd say we're deeper where they're strongest."

Following the Furman contest, East Carolina will travel to Richmond to meet the Spiders on Wednesday. They then return home for a three-game series, including a conference meeting with The Citadel, before going on the road for three more games, including conference contest, with William & Mary.

If it doesn't shrink on their backs, why should it shrink on yours.

Animals wear leather all their lives. And they don't worry about rain or dirt or cracking or hardening.

But as soon as they lose their hides, that's when the trouble can start. Without protection, baseballs can shrivel up, mini-skirts become micro-skirts, size 9 shoes become size 8.

Union Carbide got together with the tanners to save a little bit of the world from shrinking.

We took a little known chemical called Glutaraldehyde and refined it and designed it so it could be added to the tanning process.

To give you a leather that resists hardening. A leather that resists cracking. A leather that doesn't shrink at the sight of water.

We're out to save your hide.

Russian, Dutchman Claim First Of Gold

By JACK STEVENSON
Associated Press Sports Writer
SAPPORO, Japan (AP) — Russia and The Netherlands claimed the first gold medals at the Winter Olympic Games and the determined United States hockey team battled its way into the Class "A" competition in the first full day of action.

Ard Schenk, the fleet Dutch speedskater, and Vyacheslav Vedenin, one of the Soviet Union's corps of powerful Nordic skiers, took the golds in Friday's only two medal events.

Schenk, half blinded by snow, raced to the 5,000-meter speed skating crown in 7 minutes, 23.61 seconds, slow by his standards but no easy effort in the blizzard-like conditions at the Maomanai open air rink. Heavy snow ringed the track as Schenk zipped around the rink, little more than one second off the Olympic record of 7:22.40 set by Fred Anton Maier of Norway in the 1968 Games, but well off his own world record of 7:12.00.

Norway captured both the silver and bronze medals in the event, Roar Grønvald taking the second spot in 7:28.18 and Sten Stensen third in 7:33.39.

Schenk skated in the first pair when the wind was not as fierce as it turned out to be later. The snow was his main problem, especially in the final 1,000 meters.

"Then it began to hurt my eyes. I have seldom skated in more difficult conditions," he said.

The best American finisher in the speed skating event was Dan Carroll of St. Louis, who finished 10th in 7:44.72.

Beltone In Lead

Beltone moved back into sole possession of first place in the Ladies Basketball League last night, as it downed Azalea Mobile Homes, 25-24. Fleetway-R.B. Jr., won its first game, downing Greenville Utilities by the same score.

Beltone is now 3-1, while Azalea and Greenville Utilities are both 2-2. Fleetway is now 1-3.

In the opening game, Fleetway moved out into a 17-13 lead by halftime. In the second half, Greenville Utilities rallied, outshooting Fleetway, 11-8, but it just fell short.

Dolly Johnson led Fleetway with 10 points, while Carol Manuel had 10 to pace Greenville Utilities.

In the other game, Azalea opened up a 12-10 lead at the half, but couldn't hold to it. Beltone outscored them, 15-12 in the second half, to just ease by for the win.

Sandy Barnhill led Beltone with 12 points, while Pat Hamilton had 14 for Azalea.

Vedenin, a 30-year-old soldier, hung back in the early stages of the cross-country skiing and was seventh when he made his move. He overtook Paal Tyldum of Norway to capture the gold.

A silver medalist in the 50-kilometer race of the 1968 Games, Vedenin was timed in 1 hour, 36 minutes, 31.15 seconds for the 39 kilometers which equals 18.6 miles. Tyldum's 1:37.25.30 took the silver medal and John Harviken of Norway earned the bronze with 1:37.32.44.

Vedenin was only the second non-Scandinavian ever to win a gold medal in individual Olympic ski racing. The best American finish was by Mike Elliott of Durango, Colo., who finished 26th in 1:43.15.03.

The U.S. hockey team, a disappointing sixth in the 1968 Games, had to earn its way into the top class for these Olympics and did it with a 5-3 victory over Switzerland.

Third period goals by Tim Sheehy and Stu Irving decided the issue for the Americans. Sheehy and Kevin Ahearn had two goals each for the U.S. team. The Americans dominated the game throughout, and outshot the Swiss team 59-18.

Coach Murray Williamson's squad had a mere 16 hours rest before swinging into Group A action against Sweden Saturday. Williamson said his young team would be underdogs the rest of the way but his players were optimistic.

"I think if we continue to play like we did today, we are going to win some more games," said Mark Howe, 16-year-old son of ex-National Hockey League star Gordie Howe.

Trio Tied After 1st Round Of Hawaiian Golf

By BOB GREEN
Associated Press Golf Writer
HONOLULU (AP) — "That's about as good as I know how to play," Chunky Bob Murphy said after posting a sparkling 65 for a three-way share of the top spot in the rich Hawaiian Open golf tournament.

"The last three rounds I've played, I've missed two greens by a total of four yards. That's about as good as I can play," the red-haired Murphy reported Thursday after moving into a tie with Dave Eichelberger and Grier Jones in the $200,000 event that offers a $40,000 first prize.

They were seven under par on the beautifully conditioned Waialae country Club course, but only one stroke in front of another half dozen players headed by Masters champion Charles Coody.

There was some spectacularly low scoring as the strongest field of the year took advantage of the mild temperatures and near-perfect conditions. Half the field—72 players—broke par 72.

"That's what the people want to see," said Lee Trevino, in contention with a 68. "They come out to see birdies and eagles. You get your leaders shooting two or three over par and the people are going to say, 'hell, I can do that,' and go off and play somewhere."

Tied with Coody were Lee Elder, Curtis Sifford, Jim Frieriell, Mart Fleckman and New Zealand's John Lister.

Arnold Palmer, making only his second start of the season, had a 67, and said with a shrug, "Well, it's a start."

Billy Casper had a 69, George Archer and Jack Nicklaus 70s. "I didn't birdie two of the par fives and had two bogeys," Nicklaus said. "That's how you turn a 66 into a 70."

Defending champion Tom Shaw struggled in with a 76 and all but eliminated himself from contention.

Murphy, 28, hasn't won in almost 18 months but has played extremely well early this season. He hasn't finished lower than ninth in three starts.

"I almost shot a 60 out there today," he said.

Murphy had seven birdies, no bogeys. He lipped out two putts, twice missed from four feet and had a couple more stop an inch short.

"I'm not doing anything different — just doing it better," said Eichelberger, who came out of the ranks of the Monday qualifiers last season to win a tournament and more than $100,000.

He made his round with a front side 31, five under par. It included an eagle three on the first hole, which he reached with a four-wood second shot that stopped eight feet from the flag.

"I played so bad last year, I'm just trying to catch up," said Jones, a one-time rookie of the year still gunning for his first title after four years on the tour.

He mastered the par-five holes, playing them four under par.

And he made a couple of monster putts, one from almost 20 yards.

Second Half Helps Dolphins

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Things were moving swimmingly for Joe Williams and his Furman Paladins Thursday night at the halfway point of their return match with Jacksonville, the team Williams led to the NCAA finals in 1970.

But then Dolphins' coach Tom Wasdin, switching presses throughout the first half, hit on the right combination early after intermission and Furman's five-point halftime lead quickly vaporized.

The 17th-ranked Dolphins had clipped Furman 91-90 on their home court Monday night and it looked during the first half Thursday night as if Williams might spring an upset with his home advantage.

But at the opening bill of the second half, the Paladins began throwing the ball away under the Jacksonville press and the Dolphins opened up their fast break.

Ernie Fleming hit six points within a minute to start the Dolphins on their way and minutes later Harold Fox collected a cluster of four straight baskets to take the fire out of Furman's attack.

Leon Benbow of the Dolphins took game scoring honors with 26 points while Fox collected 22 and Fleming added 21.

Roy Simpson led the Paladins with 22 points.

Joe Sutter scored 20 points to pace Davidson to an easy 84-61 victory over hapless Virginia Military Thursday night, the seventh win in a row for the Wildcats.

Jay Pecorac added 13 points for the winners while Eric Minikin had 12.

Appalachian State roared back from a 13-point halftime deficit to defeat East Tennessee 87-79.

BOSTON (UPI) — Only six players in American League history have won the league batting crown three or more times. The most recent entry to that select group is the Minnesota Twins' Tony Oliva who won the 1971 title with a .337 average.

Other members of the three-times club are Ty Cobb with 12 titles, Ted Williams with six, Harry Heilmann with four and Nap Lajoie and Carl Yastrzyski with three each.

The 1973 USGA Women's Amateur golf championship will be held at Montclair, N.J.

The Mountaineers outscored East Tennessee 20-6 in the first seven minutes of the second half and never was behind again.

John Rutt scored 27 points and Stan Davis had 24 for the winners.

Sophomore Mark Ritter scored a career-high 28 points as William and Mary ran away from Florida Southern early and then hung on for a 76-67 victory. Ritter hit 12 of 14 shots from the floor and also led the Indians with eight rebounds.

Jeff Trammell backed Ritter with 15 points while George Spack added 13.

There are no conference games scheduled tonight.

Immanuel Bops Presbyterian

It took an overtime to do it, but Immanuel nipped Presbyterian last night, 52-50, in the Church Basketball League and pulled into a tie for the lead. In the other games, Piney Grove nipped Trinity, 67-65, and Oakmont drilled Black Jack, 62-46.

The loss was the first for Presbyterian, and left them and Immanuel tied for the lead with 9-1 records. They are followed by Piney Grove, 6-4, Oakmont, 5-4, Black Jack, 4-5, Trinity, 3-7, St. James, 2-7, and St. Paul's, 0-9.

Immanuel eased out in front of Presbyterian, 23-22 at the end of the first half. But Presbyterian came back to take the lead. Butch Ricks stole the ball for a basket just before the end of the regulations time and tied it at 46-46.

In the overtime, Presbyterian got only two baskets while Immanuel got three, two from Ricks and the other from Mack Roebuck, and that was enough for the win.

Roebuck led Immanuel with 16 points, while Frank Freuler had 23 and Larry Graham had 17 for Presbyterian.

In the second game, also an overtime, Trinity and Piney Grove were deadlocked at 29-29 each after the first half. Both Butch Ricks stole the ball for a basket just before the end of the regulations time and tied it at 46-46.

Tom Meeks led Piney Grove with 23, while Avery had 12 and Jim Mills had 11. Jim Adams paced Trinity with 16, while D. R. Daniels and Lewis Hardee each had 15.

In the final game, no overtime was needed, Oakmont pulled out into a 35-20 lead at the end of the first half, then outscored Black Jack, 27-26 in the second period to win it handily.

Hersey Smithson led Oakmont with 17 points, while Don Parrott had 12, Bobby Hall had 11 and Bobby Tunstall had 10. Black Jack was paced by Tal Adams with 13, while Steve Peele had 10.

The Worry Clinic Taste Decided By Psychology

Mildred was shocked at some of the menu items which the Philippine natives regarded as delicacies. Yet they, in turn, were nauseated at some of our American food favorites. So psychology is basic to our food preferences. Mothers, brain-wash your kiddies accordingly and EARLY!

By GEORGE W. CRAME
Ph.D., M.D.

Case S-588: My sister Mildred and her husband went to the Philippines as missionaries 40 years ago.

"We noticed a marked difference in menu likes and dislikes," she told us.

"For the natives were horrified that Americans dined on rabbits.

"They seemed as nauseated at the idea as if we ate rats.

"But they regarded roast dog as a delicacy, though that turned our stomachs.

In late afternoon, if you saw a native sauntering out of the village and into the surrounding hills, followed by a couple of dogs, you could surmise what was ahead.

"For that often meant his family was having a feast and he was to furnish the meat course, namely, roast dog.

"Some of our American friends visited us and wanted to go hunting.

"So a native guide agreed to lead them.

"But when they approached a small log lying across their narrow path, the guide pulled them back.

"He told them the apparent log was the middle section of a big python.

"For such large snakes would lie across the trail, with their head upright at one side and their tail on the other, making a U-shape.

"If a young pig should then attempt to cross the supposed log, the two ends of the python would crisscross immediately and squeeze him into unconsciousness.

"Then the python would swallow the pig and sleep for a week as it then digested its pork meal.

"So the guide shot the python and the hunting party continued on its way.

"A day or so later, our American friends returned and were entertained by a leading family of the village.

"They enjoyed their dinner immensely, especially the steaks that were served.

"After the meal was ended, they complimented their hosts on the delicious food and praised the meat course, wondering if it were veal.

"The hostess smilingly replies, 'No, that was python! Don't you remember the big snake that was shot when you started on your hunting trip?'

"Well, their outlook changed instantly and as soon as they could make their way to the veranda, they threw up their dinner!"

Menu Psychology

Our delight in foods depends largely on our early contacts therewith.

If as toddlers we are in a happy mood when Mamma serves us roasted grasshoppers or octopus embryos, we may relish them all our adult lives.

But people who have not been so "conditioned" or brain-washed to such exotic menu items, may be nauseated at the very idea.

Many primitive tribes would delight in eating worms, bugs, lizards and snakes.

And dogs were a delicacy of American Indians, as well as the natives of the Philippines.

Even modern pie or cake, if we overeat and thus become very sick as a consequence, may then prove unpleasant to us thereafter.

Naturally negative foods include bitter or hot taste qualities, yet many people actually relish bitter beer plus hot sauce, red peppers and tamales!

So you smart mothers should inculcate a wide range of wholesome tastes in your kiddies, and daddy should help by going "Yum-Yum," even though he personally hates them!

Bronze Lute Is Old Instrument

MUNAKATA, Japan (UPI) — A tiny bronze lute excavated from an ancient shrine site may be the oldest Japanese musical instrument extant in Japan.

Hajime Matsumoto, cultural official for the Munakata-Jinja shrine, says the instrument was described in Chinese documents of the 6th century A.D. The metallic lute is about 11 inches long, five inches wide and one inch thick. It has five silk strings.

Turtles have no fixed body temperature like birds and mammals but can assume the temperature of their surroundings.

The bidding:

Opening lead: Eight of ♠

West did not harbor hopes for establishing one of his anemic four card suits against South's three no trump contract, and in an effort to do something for his partner, he opened the eight of spades—which proved to be an effective choice. The deuce was played from dummy and East signaled encouragingly by overtaking with the nine. Declarer won the trick with the king.

Inasmuch as there was no quick entry to dummy, South cashed the ace of diamonds in the vague hope that the king might drop. When only small cards appeared, he continued with another diamond and East was in with the king. The latter returned a small spade away from the ace to permit his partner to retain a card in the suit with which to reach East later in the play.

North was in with the jack of spades and declarer proceeded to cash three diamond tricks, on which East discarded one club and two hearts while West parted with two clubs and one heart. South had only eight top tricks at this point and in an attempt to develop the ninth, he led the queen of clubs for a finesse. West won the trick with the king and a spade return was taken by East's ace. The latter proceeded to cash his long spades to send the declarer down to defeat.

South missed an opportunity to pinch his contract at the opening gun. Inasmuch as he wishes to be in dummy for the diamond finesse, he should put up the jack of spades when that suit is led. If the jack wins, he can lead the queen of diamonds next.

If East covers the jack of spades with the ace and returns the suit, declarer is in his hand as before—the difference, however, is that he is well on his way to severing his opponent's line of communications. South leads the ace and another diamond, putting East in with the king. The latter can clear the spade suit by leading a third round, but when the club finesse loses to West subsequently, the latter is unable to put East in since he has no more spades and the defense is limited to three tricks on the deal—one spade, one diamond, and one club.

New Records Set In '71 By Telephone Company

TARBORO — Carolina Telephone during 1971 invested more in new plant facilities than in any single year of its history, over $52,000,000.

In a year of significant achievements, this was one of numerous record accomplishments, according to H. Dail Holderness, company president.

During the 12 month period, Carolina Telephone handled more long distance conversations, 38,690,000 plus; spent more for salaries and wages, above $28,500,000; and had more people on its work force than ever before, with over 4,200 employees.

In 1971, the company gained a record 41,495 telephones, and as of December 31, had 481,046 telephones in service. Total plant investment at the end of the year stood at more than $345,230,000.

Among the highlights of the year was the start of equipment installation in a vast, computerized $10,000,000 long distance switching center to be placed in service at Fayetteville during May, 1972.

A building addition is now underway at Rocky Mount to house a similar switching center. The new construction at Rocky Mount is the largest ever undertaken by the company.

Holderness concluded that Carolina Telephone's confidence in the economic future of eastern North Carolina is reflected in the company's expansion plans for 1972, which will again call for a construction budget in excess of $52,000,000.

Homemaker Honor Won

Miss Joyce Bailey has been named Betty Crocker Homemaker of Tomorrow for North Pitt High School.

Miss Bailey is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Bailey of Rt. 5, Greenville. She earned the highest rating at North Pitt in the 1972 Betty Crocker Search for the American Homemaker of Tomorrow.

As winner at North Pitt, Miss Bailey received a sterling silver charm and is eligible for the state competition. The test is given to all high school senior girls.

Claim Most In Power Output

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Northeast Utilities reports that its atomic power plant at Had-dam generated more electricity than any other in the country last year—just under 4.4 billion kilowatt hours.

The national total for atomic generating plants was 15.7 billion kilowatt-hours, the power firm reported Wednesday.

The plant is owned by 11 New England utilities and is operated by Northeast Utilities, a combine of five utility companies in Connecticut and Massachusetts.

They Came To Help Appalachia, And They Stay

By GARRY J. MOES
Associated Press Writer
CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — There is a highly-motivated cadre of reformers at work in Appalachia—a coalition dedicated to a mission of "power to the people."

In its most innocent manifestation, it is providing a framework for activists, mostly young and all on the "liberal fringe," who see the region as a "cosmic place to be."

But the movement, in a deeper view, is pervading the land, the people and the spirit of the Eastern mountains—and the face of Appalachia may never be the same.

"Whatever other labels may be attached to the movement, it is definitely broad-based—made up of natives and sojourners, freaks and professionals, many of whom have sacrificed lives of comfort in favor of log cabins, farms and tumble-down shacks.

Most of them came here as soldiers in the war on poverty and have stayed on or returned out of avowed love for the land and its people.

There are many of them—hundreds—and they are reaching "the people" by the thousands, farmers who feel threatened by surface mines, miners who fear for their safety, housewives who are convinced their environment is deteriorating too rapidly, poor people who will respond to any message of a different way of life.

And there is every indication that many in their audience are believing the message, sometimes veiled, of "peace and socialism in Appalachia," as one banner read at a recent anti-war rally in Charleston.

John D. Rockefeller IV, 34-year-old secretary of state who first came to West Virginia as a member of the President's Committee on Juvenile Delinquency and Youth Crime and worked with Action for Appalachian Youth, says of the movement: "These people are filling a gap—doing a job which needs to be done, which the people need to have done. I think the service which is being provided to the people of West Virginia is valuable and I am proud to see so many people involved."

The residents are being reached by workers like

Brooklyn-bred David Green and his wife, both former VISTA workers, who live along W.Va. 119 in Hershaw, Kanawha County, gateway to a poverty-stricken region of worked-out coal mines.

The couple lives in a rundown shack, in worse shape than those of many of the welfare recipients with whom they work.

And there is John Klein, a former VISTA worker and now a social organizer working in Bloomingrose, W.Va.; Bob Gates, Union Carbide employee, pacifist and draft counselor; the energetic young lawyers from the Appalachian Research and Defense Fund; and grass roots organizers in scores of communities in every corner of the mountain region.

"West Virginia is a microcosm—a place where you can see what the problems are," said Thomas Rhodenbaugh, 29, a former Appalachian Volunteer who is now president of Designs for Rural Action Fund Inc. (DRA). "You can chip off what you want to change."

Rhodenbaugh is typical of the activists who have taken the pulse of ground-level stirrings and channeled them into programs and movements which have brought the gospel of social reform to forgotten hills and hollows and, at the same time, influenced the minds of top government officials.

They are into liberal legislation from the abolition of strip mining to welfare and abortion law reform. They have taken on legal battles with the giants of industry and organized labor.

They have hounded legislators and congressmen and have taken their causes to the general public through marches, community television and literature.

They carry on their crusades with financial backing from the federal government, private foundations and their own or their parents' pocketbooks. A large percentage of West Virginia's "people's action" movement seems to be directed from an inconspicuous storefront establishment in the middle of Charleston—only about a mile toward downtown from the State Capitol.

The building houses the DRA, a nonprofit "consulting" organization which has fathered or fostered a broad spectrum of community action and reform movements since its inception in the mid-'60s. Other offices are used by the Black Lung Association, miners' health and welfare crusaders; the Draft Counseling Center; Community Focus, a television outlet for the movement, and A. J. Harris Supply Co., not actually associated with the activist organizations but complimentary in its business of purveying non-polluting cleaning aids.

The driving force behind the motley troupe of social reformers who bustle about the office is DRA, headed by Rhodenbaugh.

Like many of the others, Rodenbaugh sports a long history of social involvement from his Loyola University days, when he worked in an Appalachian "ghetto" in Chicago's North Side, through his days as an Appalachian Volunteer in Berea, Ky., and VISTA in North Carolina, to his present post which is part of his graduate program in social welfare at Brandeis University.

"I like this area. I like the people. There are the kinds of concerns here that are my concerns. I have this education and I want to share it," Rhodenbaugh said. "I consider myself a West Virginian."

On the wall in an office adjacent to Rhodenbaugh's is a picture of Karl Marx. Across the room is a poster bearing the words of Joseph "Jock" Yablonski, the insurgent mine union leader who was murdered a year-and-a-half ago. "It's time somebody speaks up regardless of what the sacrifice may be."

Working beneath the posters was Mimi Pickering of Palo Alto, Calif., doing her version of "speaking up."

Miss Pickering, a student at Ohio's Antioch College, spent the summer coordinating videotape television productions for liberal causes with the help of a crew of fellow volunteers and an impressive battery of television equipment on loan from New York University. She is now back at school, but the program continues.

They call their endeavor "Community Focus" and have chosen modern electronics as a means of preaching their message of social change.

Jay Phillips, 19, of Huntington, W.Va., a freshman from Antioch College, and the son of a Marshall University professor of social studies, was another involved with the "Focus" project.

Phillips sees his native state as "the perfect place to bring about social change."

"There are too many people who are poor, and there are too many people who are rich," he said. "Incomes and money have to be equalized or money abolished."

Phillips said Appalachia is ripe for socialism.

"The miners and widows, the poor people, all these people who cry for government help and benefits are practicing socialists," he said, "although we never make any reference to 'socialism' or they'd call us 'Commies'."

The corps of liberal and radical-minded young reformers has one of its most powerful weapons in the Appalachian Research and Defense Fund.

The Fund, which calls itself a "public interest law firm," was born in the fall of 1969—on a "shoestring" of $1,000 each in personal funds from the organization's four founders.

One of them is Naomi Cohen, women's liberationist and "refugee from New York City." She is a tall, dark-haired Barnard graduate and former VISTA volunteer for community action projects in the southern part of the state.

Like many of the other activists, Naomi and her husband Harvey, both lawyers, have given up the comforts of life in the city for a farm in the hills.

It was in 1969, following her term with VISTA, that she joined with Paul Kaufman, a two-term state senator and former candidate for governor; Ray Ratliff, West Virginian and another VISTA lawyer, who now lives in a log cabin he built himself, and John "Si" Boettner, another native and a Legal Aid Society volunteer, to form the law firm they refer to as APPALRED.

When personal funds ran out, the firm, later greatly expanded, secured a $500,000 grant from OEO. The fund has played key roles in a host of reform activities including the drafting of anti-strip mining legislation, antipollution lawsuits against big industry, welfare rights, disabled miners' benefits and consumer causes.

Ratliff's log cabin is nestled deep in the valley of the Big Coal River, where the black mineral which is now the lifeblood of Appalachia was first discovered.

In that same valley, a group of liberal young ministers and volunteer workers is bringing the new message of social change and personal commitment.

While their work is a modern continuation of a 75-year-old ministry by such a bastion of the "Establishment" as the United Presbyterian church, they are part of the larger circle of young radicals taking root in the homeland of "yesterday's people," as another former minister to the area has referred to the natives of the valley.

Daily routine for a Mountain Project minister bears little resemblance to that of clergymen serving more comfortable congregations elsewhere. Items: food stamp counseling, forest fire fighting, grave digging, filling out difficult government forms for black lung benefits, providing transportation for parishioners who must visit a lawyer, doctor or welfare worker, all of whom are scarce in the remote area.

"We've had people ask us to adopt their children," said one of the other ministers, Tom Eggebeen, 27, of Grand Rapids, Mich.

Eggebeen was involved in a community action project in Holland, Mich., while attending Western Theological Seminary of the Reformed Church in America. A local church body there refused to ordain him because of his "liberal" views, so he joined his present denomination and came to West Virginia. His wife Donna, the daughter of a small-town Minnesota businessman-farmer, did volunteer work during the 1971 legislative session for Austin's anti-strip mining group. They recently moved to a similar project in Pennsylvania.

"This work allowed me to relate to people on an intimate personal relationship I could not have found elsewhere," Eggebeen said.

"The character of poor Appalachia has been one in which the people see themselves as powerless to change things," Eggebeen said. "It's a colonial structure, really, because so much is imposed from the top—industry, government, the coal operators—and this has combined with cultural and education deprivation until the people say 'What's the use?' We came here to bolster their spiritual security and at the same time help supply their material and social needs."

ECU Alumni Dinner Set

East Carolina University alumni and friends, living in Pitt County are invited to attend a buffet dinner and meeting Wednesday, Feb. 23. A Pitt County chapter of the ECU Alumni Association will be organized.

The dinner will be held in South Cafeteria on campus. Dr. Leo Jenkins, ECU president, will address the gathering.

Tickets must be bought in advance, from the ECU Central Ticket Office or from several area alumni with tickets to sell.

Although Pitt County includes the largest concentration of ECU alumni, nearly one tenth of the names on the ECU Alumni Office mailing lists, no active chapter currently exists.

All area alumni are urged to attend and bring guests.

At Meeting For Coordinators

EDENTON — Bob Sigmon and Nancy Franklin of Greenville attended a meeting for PACE coordinators at the John A. Holmes High School here Tuesday.

Sigmon, director of Secondary Education with the Greenville City Schools, is a District 15 chairman for PACE. Mrs. Franklin is a teacher at Conley High School.

Gene Tomlinson, state advisory committee member, met with local unit coordinators to discuss coming activities. Reports were made of membership and plans for a political clinic to be held in March were discussed.
