Nixon: State Of The World

Breakthroughs For Peace Despite Disappointments

By LEWIS GULICK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon issued a lengthy foreign-policy report today, claiming dramatic 1971 breakthroughs toward his generation-of-peace goal, but acknowledging a half-dozen "sharp disappointments."

The President also used his annual "State of the World" message to Congress this election year to urge public support for his handling of pressing foreign-affairs problems ahead.

Saying the diplomatic policies of the past year will be a springboard for the future, Nixon indicated historic agreement on a first step in curbing the U.S.-Soviet nuclear-missiles race will be reached about the time he visits Moscow in May.

At the same time, the President coupled avowed hopes of improving U.S.-Soviet relations with serious questioning of the "expansionist implications" of current Russian diplomatic and arms policies.

Nixon's 94,000-word account of global affairs portrayed 1971 as a "watershed year" for his administration's long-term peace efforts.

The President mentioned his forthcoming visits to Peking and Moscow, new economic relationships with European allies and Japan, and "creation of a new environment for the world's monetary and trade activities." Nixon also:

—Said his Peking journey starting next week will not resolve quickly deep U.S.-Chinese differences but will end "a sterile and barren interlude ... between two great peoples" and "will represent a necessary and giant step toward the creation of a stable structure of world peace."

—Reported his greatest disappointment in 1971 was failure to negotiate an end to the Vietnam war. He said an agreement can be reached "whenever Hanoi distinguishes between a settlement and a surrender."

—Defended his policy in the Indian-Pakistani war as not biased against India but reflecting an effort to stop a conflict potentially endangering world peace.

He also held the door open for revival of U.S.-Indian friendship and future American recognition of Bangladesh.

—Portrayed his emergency dollar-and-trade moves of last August as having "put behind us the imminent danger that conflicting economic interests would lead to the unraveling of free-world cohesion.

"It is beyond dispute that we have made signal progress," Nixon said in his 236-page report. "For too long, American policy consisted of reacting to events," he said. "Today the United States is once again acting with assurance and purpose on the world stage....

"We know where we are going. We are moving with history, and moving history ourselves."

And this is in the direction of "a new structure of global relationships in which all nations, friend and adversary, participate and have a stake" and "habits of moderation and compromising can be nurtured," he said. "This is what we mean by a generation of peace."

Under the heading of unfinished business, Nixon listed as pressing problems the need for greater U.S.-Soviet accommodation and self-restraint, a better relationship with China, disarmament, more-effective aid to poor countries, trade and monetary reform, and improving the United Nations.

He professed "a very sober awareness of how great a task" still lies ahead and voiced hope his report will help promote "a solid consensus of American public understanding and support" for his future efforts.

Presidential adviser Henry A. Kissinger in briefing newsmen on the book-length document said "one of the purposes of this report is to have a serious debate about the national purposes, and we would welcome a debate."

At A Glance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here, at a glance, is what President Nixon told Congress today in his third annual "State of the World" message.

Accomplishments

Striking progress was made in 1971 toward building "a stable structure of world peace ... a more-balanced alliance with our friends — and a more-creative connection with our adversaries."

Disappointments

Chief among the "several sharp disappointments" of 1971 was the failure to negotiate a Vietnam peace. Others included the inability to prevent the Indian-Pakistani war, lack of sucess in finding a Mideast solution and the expulsion of Nationalist China from the United Nations.

Dangers

Continued Russian buildup of airpower and offensive missiles coupled with questionable diplomatic behavior "raise serious questions concerning Soviet objectives."

Prospects

A first-step agreement in the U.S.-Soviet strategic-arms-limitation talks might be ready for signing by the time he reaches Moscow in May.

Further, while leaving for the time being deep differences, his trip to China later this month will eliminate "a sterile and barren interlude ... between two great peoples."

Utilities Approve Electric Surcharge

By ALVIN TAYLOR
Reflector Managing Editor

The Utilities Commission last night approved a surcharge on all of its electric schedules of 0.128 cents per KWH.

Director Charles Horne said the surcharge will average about five percent for retail customers. On an average customer's bill this would amount to around 83 cents per month.

The local utilities uses the same electric rate schedule for retail customers as that which is used by Virginia Electric and Power Co., its wholesale supplier and Horne told the commission that the same surcharge was recently imposed on retail customers by VEPCO.

The surcharge was not placed on wholesale customers, but Horne said a rate increase is being requested by VEPCO and its is anticipated that it will be applied to wholesale customers such as Greenville Utilities. Horne also reminded that Greenville Utilities is paying a retroactive rate increase which was imposed by VEPCO.

The resolution passed by the commission read, "The Greenville Utilities Commission has determined that it is in the best interest of the commission's electric consumers that we provide our customers with electric rates equal to those of the private power campany serving our area.

"The commission did adopt on May 1, 1971 rate schedules equal to those of Virginia Electric and Power Co., who serves our area.

"VEPCO, effective Jan. 17, 1972, added a surcharge of 0.218 cents per KWH to all of its electric schedules, which surcharge has been approved by the N. C. Utilities Commission."

The resolution made the same surcharge effective on GUCO rate schedules with billings of Feb. 17.

The commission adopted a new schedule of water tapping fees which will eliminate main fees in the future.

The new fees are: ¾ inch, in city, $130; out of city, $180. 1 inch, in city, $175; out of city, $225; 1½ inch, in city, $425; out of city, $500. 2 inch, in city, $725; out of city, $800. For all taps larger than two inch the fee will be cost of labor and material plus ten percent.

New sewer tapping fees were set at: 4 inch, in city, $110; out of city, $160. six inch, in city, $150; out of city, $225; 8 inch, in city, $275; out of city, $350.

The commissioners approved a low bid from Phelps Chevrolet of $4,585.94 for the purchase of two pick-up trucks to be used by the meter department. The trade-in of two trucks is included.

A backhoe was purchased from Eastern Tractor Co. for $9,623.48.

The commission received bids for sewer outfall extensions and, based on the bids, the contract was awarded to T. H. Faulkner, Inc. at a total bid for three projects of $243,946. However, the motion provided that if Faulkner "fail to execute the contract and forfeits its bid bond, that award be made to Roanoke Construction Co. P. O. Box 820, Roanoke Rapids, N. C. in the amount of $365,776.05 ..."

Other bids for the project were: T. A. Loving, $386,693.10; Central Builders, Inc., $391,336 Breece and Burgess, Inc., $394,160; Northstate Constructors, $394,303.65 and Trader Construction Co., $423,897.50.

Assistant Director Malcolm Green told the commission of plans to construct a new transmission line from the VEPCO station near Meadowbrook, along Mumford Road to the new Eastern bypass and along the bypass to the Norfolk Southern tracks. It is then hoped that the line can follow the railroad tracks to the ACL tracks and then the SCL tracks south and out of the city.

In other business:

— a trip was arranged to view data processing equipment similar to that being considered for Greenville Utilities use.

— Director Horn reported that GUCO is working with the Pitt Board of Health on protection of watershed areas of the Tar River above Greenville.

— Horne reported that a committee has been formed to work with the Pitt Planning Board on service area designations between Greenville and the Bell Arthur Water Corporation.

— A report was heard on an interim policy for extension of water and sewer mains into major mobile home parks.

— A report was heard that $500,000 in bonds had been sold to N. C. National Bank at a net interest cost of 4.7522 percent.

Disruption Plan A Flop

By COLIN FROST
Associated Press Writer

BELFAST (AP) — D-for-Disruption Day, a 24-hour campaign by civil rights leaders to bring civic chaos to Northern Ireland, brought no extraordinary violence today.

The British army was alerted for attacks by the Irish Republican Army and police leaves were canceled.

At Newry, scene of the massive march in silence Sunday, the main Belfast-Dublin road was blocked by barricades. Automobiles were set afire in Coalis and in County Tyrone.

In Belfast and Londonderry, promised protests on a mass scale did not materialize. Most shops schools and factories in Northern Ireland's two major cities opened normally.

"It is an absolute disaster at the moment," Londonderry civil rights leader Michael Havord said.

The Day of Disruption was called by the mainly Roman Catholic Civil Rights Association to protest Northern Ireland's policy of interning suspected gunmen without trial.

Both the government and security forces had braced for huge Catholic support of the Civil Rights Association's campaign which was aimed at closing factories and schools, jamming telephone communications and blocking roads.

By noon, however, the telephone network was working almost normally and a few roads near Londonderry and border with the Irish republic, which had been blocked by felled trees and telegraph poles overnight, had been cleared by the army.

ECU Infirmary Plaint Considered, Dismissed

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

"As far as we are concerned, our investigation has been completed and the incident closed," Dr. Edwin W. Monroe stated about the recent complaints concerning East Carolina University's infirmary.

Referring to an incident in January involving a sick student taken to Pitt Memorial Hospital by the rescue squad, Dr. Monroe, vice president for Health Affairs, said "The complaint concerning this particular incident was looked into. The student newspaper felt strongly this incident was a basis for making a judgment on the competency of the infirmary staff, but in fact it was not a valid basis for making a judgement."

Dr. Monroe said he can understand how students, not fully informed about the role of an infirmary, could misinterpret this role. "An infirmary is not a comprehensive care hospital with ambulance service, emergency call service and all that goes with comprehensive care," he said. "It is basically a center for treatment of minor ailments and a referral service."

Another point Dr. Monroe made is that there are established procedures for students to follow when more extensive medical service is needed. "That is why we have arrangements in effect for students to call on the campus police to assist in moving students who are unable to move themselves. It may be that all students are not fully aware of procedures that have been set up."

On points raised by the student newspaper about possible expansion of infirmary service — an ambulance for the infirmary; construction of a new infirmary; and a procedure for doctors or nurses to visit patients in dormitories, Dr. Monroe pointed out that to provide such services, "it would be necessary to increase ten fold the student health fee to build a new infirmary, and to provide even the expanded services some students have suggested would result in doubling or tripling the fees."

Dr. Monroe also pointed out that in the matter of doctors or nurses visiting patients in dormitories or houses "there's not a university campus in the nation that can afford this type of service."

"The university feels strongly that more and better infirmary services are highly desirable," Dr. Monroe commented, "but any program of expansion is hamstrung by the lack of enough money." He added that long range plans include a variety of added services once funds are available.

HEW Criticism Of Ten N.C. Counties Said 'Unwarranted'

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina's school superintendent says 10 school units in the state received "unwarranted criticism" in an audit report made by the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Craig Phillips said Tuesday the report "represents nothing more than a poor attempt on the part of the HEW audit agency, with unfortunate political overtones, to discredit the stage agency" and the Elementary and Secondary Education Act Title 1 program.

The auditors said the U.S. Office of Education should require the state education agency to return to the federal government $2.9 million in Title 1 funds alleged to have been improperly spent by the 10 school units.

The school units and the amounts are: Bertie, $31,500; Edgecombe, $50,291; Halifax, $1,701,417; Hertford, $12.600;

Utilities Commissioner Rebuffs 'Amen' Role

RALEIGH (AP) — A member of the North Carolina Utilities Commission says the heads of some public utility firms in the state want the commission to "leave all the thinking to them."

Hugh A. Wells said Tuesday "these men apparently think of the Utilities Commission as being there not to serve the people, but to serve their companies."

"They want to run their own show their own way," make their own decisions, good or bad, and they want a Utilities Commission which will say, 'amen,'" Wells said.

He made his comments in a speech prepared for the North Carolina Electric Membership Corp.

Wells said he thinks the commission doesn't "take itself seriously as an institution of government."

He also said he doesn't think the General Assembly puts much faith in the commission.

Wells criticized the president of Duke Power Co., Carl Horn Jr., saying he apparently wants "water boys" sitting on the commission "who will bail him out on request."

Although Wells did not identify Horn by name in his talk, it was an obvious reference to him when he said Duke Power had come before the commission seeking $68 million in rate increases during the last 18 months.

The commission recently issued an order granting Duke $23.46 million in gross annual revenue. The commission told Duke to tighten up its fuel-buying practices and to submit a report to the agency within 90 days on the actions taken to do so. Horn said the commission was engaging in "Monday morning quarterbacking."

Wells said the commission heard applications last year for rate increases totaling more than $100 million. Most of these, he said, drew little public attention.

He proposed that the electric membership corporation's distribution systems come under regulation by the commission.

"I believe your segment of the electric industry would be better off, could serve its consumers in the state, if it were to be regulated along with the rest of the industry," Wells said.

Couple Speaks Vows Saturday

AYDEN — The Liberty Free Will Baptist Church here was the setting Saturday at four o'clock in the afternoon for the marriage of Miss Ella Agnes Carmichael and Walter Benjamin Oakley. The Rev. Raymond Gashins officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The church was decorated with all brass wedding accessories. The altar was flanked on either side with seven branched candelabra and baskets of greenery. The center was accented with a basket of gladioli and mums interspersed with greenery. A fifteen branched candelabra also centered the altar. The couple knelt for prayer on a satin prie-dieu.

Preceding the candelight ceremony, music was rendered by Mrs. Roy Turnage of Ayden, organist, and Ernie Bedner of Grifton, soloist, who sang "Song of Ruth," "I Love You Truly" and "The Wedding Prayer" as the benediction.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal princess gown of satin. The gown featured a sabrina neckline with lace panels and long tapering sleeves that ended in calla points over the hands. The bouffant skirt was appliqued with lace and extended into a chapel length train. Her fingertip veil of illusion was attached to a crown of seed pearls and lace. She carried a bouquet of white pom pons and mums centered with an orchid.

Mrs. Doris Daughtery of Ayden served her sister as matron of honor. She wore a formal gown of peau de soie which featured a red A-line skirt and white velvet bodice with long bell sleeves. She also wore a red choker to match her dress. For her headpiece, she wore a white silk illusion veil attached to a red peau de soie bow. She carried a long-stemmed white mum tipped in red.

Bridesmaids were Mrs. Becky Griffin of Robersonville, sister of the bridegroom, Mrs. Frances Hardee of Ayden, Miss Billie Jean Cottingham of Greenville and Mrs. Ada Britton of Arlington, Va. They wore green and white dresses and headpieces identical to that of the honor attendants'. They also carried long-stemmed white mums tipped in green.

Miss Tiffney Carmichael, niece of the bride, was the flower girl. She wore a red and white dress and headpiece identical to that of the honor attendants'. She carried a white lace basket filled with a mixture of flower petals. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Carmichael of Ayden.

Odell Bullock of Robersonville served as best man. Ushers were Mac Carmichael of Ayden, brother of the bride, Michael Oakley of Robersonville, brother of the bridegroom, Levey Roebuck of Robersonville and Steve Williams of Ayden, formerly of Robersonville.

Malcolm Carmichael, nephew of the bride, was ring bearer. He carried minature rings on a white satin pillow. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Mac Carmichael of Ayden.

After the ceremony, the bridal couple received in the vestibule of the church. Mrs. Evelyn Carmichael directed the wedding and Mrs. Linda Carmichael presided at the guest register. They are both sisters-in-law of the bride.

MRS. WALTER BENJAMIN OAKLEY

The bride's mother chose a light pink double knit dress with black accessories and a white carnation corsage.

The bridegroom's mother selected a red, white and blue knit dress with matching accessories. She wore a corsage of white carnations.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Carmichael of Ayden. She is a graduate of Ayden High School and is employed with the Carolina Telephone System, Greenville.

The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Elsie Oakley of Robersonville and the late Mr. Walter Maynard Oakley. He is a graduate of Robersonville High School and is employed with C. P. Buckner Construction Co., of Chapel Hill.

For a wedding trip to unannounced points, the bride changed into a red tweed suit with matching accessories. She wore the orchid corsage lifted from her bouquet. Upon their return, the couple will reside in Ayden.

After-Rehearsal Party

The Oakley-Carmichael wedding party and guests were entertained at an after-rehearsal party Friday night given by the bride's parents at their home.

The refreshment table was covered with a white taffeta underlay with a white cutwork cloth. The table was centered with an arrangement of white and gold flowers. On either side was a three branched candelabra with lighted gold tapers. Each corner was accented with gold bows with greenery.

After the bridal couple cut the first slice of cake, the mother of the bride poured punch and the mother of the bridegroom served cake.

Company's Success Reflected

National Boat Works, Inc. has announced plans for a new multi-million dollar manufacturing plant to be built in the industrial park north of Greenville.

Officials said the 150,000 square foot facility will be one of the largest production plants of small powerboats on the east coast.

According to the company president Eddie Smith, Jr., the plant will have a production of 2,000 boats yearly, which will be double the production of the present plant on Albemarle Avenue.

President Smith also sees a doubling of the present work force of 150 craftsmen.

It was announced that 35.5 acres of land have been purchased from Greenville Industried, Inc. for construction of the plant and additional adjoining property has been optioned for future expansion.

The new building will be constructed by George W. Kane, Inc. and work is expected to get underway immediately.

This new industrial plant will be a welcome addition to the growing industrial complex in North Greenville.

The rendering of the building, which was unveiled at an announcement dinner at which Gov. Scott spoke, indicates that it will be an impressive manufacturing facility.

The Grady-White boats produced by National Boat Works, Inc. have established a name for fine workmanship in the Eastern United States.

The company's success in developing and building outstanding pleasure boats now means that a new plant will be constructed here and that additional people will be employed. National Boat Works, Inc. is an example of how local industry can grow, developing a fine reputation for local craftsmenship and furnishing additional jobs for the community.

Changes Ahead In Family Life

By BRYAN HAISLIP

RALEIGH,— Golden age or extinction — which is the prospect for the family in the year 2000?

Pessimists among social scientists say the family as a social institution is dead, but just not yet buried.

Optimists, like Mrs. Marilyn N. Stuber, say it's headed for a more democratic form with equal sharing of roles by husband and wife that opens up exciting possibilities Grandma never dreamed of.

Permissive sex, communal life styles and women's liberation will change the Tar Heel family in the next 30 years, but it will remain with us, said Mrs. Stuber, chairman of the Meredith College home economics department.

Minorities will experiment, but majorities will keep to the forms of the past, she predicted.

"It is safe to say that large numbers of people will refuse to abandon the familiar family forms. They will continue searching for happiness within the orthodox format," Mrs. Stuber said.

Future Family Style

Characteristics of the family of the future will be marriages entered without a sense of social pressure, with no stigma for the old maid or bachelor; wives who find fulfillment in the world of work, even when the husband must adapt to his mate's advancement; and children born only when they are wanted and planned for.

"It is impossible to imagine the profound implications for society if forced marriages and unwanted children were eliminated," said Mrs. Stuber. "It is almost impossible to grasp the full psychological, social, moral and economic consequences of the removal of this threat."

The eroded axiom that woman's place is in the home has strained the fabric of many families, leaving the wife depressed and bored. Freedom for her to follow a career will strengthen the family, Mrs. Stuber suggested.

"In the next 30 years, it will probably become increasingly common for father to change jobs so mother can keep hers. We may see families relocate so mother can work on an advanced degree or accept an enticing job offer. Or perhaps father will ask for maternity leave and stay at home with the new baby while mother works outside the home," she theorized.

Marriages Last Longer

While many authorities lament the current divorce rate and despair of marriage as a risky venture with a poor future, the fact is that the average union today lasts longer than at any other time in history, Mrs. Stuber said.

"In 1890 when the U.S. Census Bureau first took a census of marriages and divorce, 33 marriages per 1,000 were terminated annually. Now the figure is down to 29 per 1,000," she pointed out.

"At that time, 30 of the 33 were broken due to death of a husband or wife, and only three to divorce. Today, of the 29 broken annually, 19 will be by divorce and only 10 by death. Today, death rarely leaves children orphaned during their younger years. Divorce may, but the overall risk of broken homes is far lower than ever before."

Education for marriage and government commitment to the family as an institution worth survival can help assure its future, Mrs. Stuber said.

Cabinet Post Proposed

Some family life experts want to see a cabinet level post in the federal government devoted to research and assessment of the impact of legislative and administrative action on the family.

"Congress will quickly appropriate money for a space agency. Family research, it seems, is a bit too expensive," Mrs. Stuber observed.

Studies show young people still look to marriage and family as a life goal. "It might be said that social change in the area of mate selection has not been as great as has been indicated by the press, feared by the parents, and perhaps hoped by the youth," Mrs. Stuber said.

"As we look to the future and see a time when hasty, ill-advised marriages forced by pregnancy are eliminated, when every child born is a wanted child from the moment of conception, when families are given primary consideration by both government and employers, when men and women share equally in all responsibilities, when men and women marry only because of a genuine love for one another, then it does indeed seem that the family is approaching a Golden Age," Mrs. Stuber said.

"God-speed the day!"

It's Been A Long War For Japan's Holdouts

The recent discovery of a World War II Japanese soldier on Guam has been followed by reports of additional Japanese being spotted on the island.

For these men, 27 years after the war ended, the fight with the United States and her allies still goes on. Since they left their homeland Japan and the U. S. have become close friends and allies. Their fellow soldiers and those that they fought have long since returned home to civilian careers and raising families.

It is sad to think of these men spending their lives in the jungles still fighting the war which ended so long ago.

Blood-Letting For GOP, Too

By JOHN KILGO

RALEIGH — Not long ago it was the Democrats who shed all the blood in North Carolina primaries but that day apparently is gone forever.

Tar Heel Republicans have a death struggle going on for the gubernatorial nomination and are on the verge of a Texas Tag Team Match for the U.S. Senate nomination.

We reported here on Jan. 3 that Concord's Jimmy Johnson would wind up in the battle for the U.S. Senate and on Monday of this week he took the trip to Raleigh to announce those intentions.

Johnson is the second Republican to lay claims on William Booe, a Charlotte attorney, changed his registration from Democrat to Republican and tossed his bonnet into the ring, dutifully citing the 11th Commandment: "Thou shalt not bus my child to school."

The fireworks are not over, as far as candidates are concerned. Jesse Helms of Raleigh is a conservative, well-known Raleigh television executive. He reads editorials on radio and TV and writes a newspaper column. Helms has that quality that causes people to swear by him or at him. If the tides don't rise and the earth doesn't shake, Jesse Helms will announce as a Republican for the U.S. Senate on Feb. 18.

Simple arithmetic tells us that it will be three men running for one nomination. But it's more than that. It's three men who are as controversial as a topless dancer at the church bazaar.

Booe is a redhead who dearly loves a good fight. A member of the Charlotte-Mecklenburg School Board, Booe has on occasions so angered fellow members of the board to the extreme they could hardly swallow. He will not run a shy campaign.

Johnson is a political maverick, the Wizard of Concord. He openly courts the Democrats, often to the dismay of leaders of his own party who sometimes are led to think that an autopsy would reveal a heart shaped like a donkey.

Johnson says: "I don't have as much money as I would like to have heading into this campaign but I think more will come. But if guts and the willingness to fight mean anything, I'll do okay."

The 36-year-old Johnson almost got dizzy stepping to the brink of this race only to back off. He had planned to run, then stepped aside for the hoped-for entry of Congressman Jim Broyhill into the race. With Broyhill out of the way, Johnson again stepped forward to offer his services, only to hear rumblings that Jim Gardner wanted to be a candidate for the Senate. As Gardner said no, Johnson was about ready to go again when word came down: "We think Vinegar Bend (Congressman Wilmer Mizell) is going to agree to run for the Senate."

Says Johnson: "I stepped aside for Broyhill, Gardner and Mizell. Now I'm ready to draw the line and say, 'Okay, this is it. I'm running and if

The Future Is Women

WASHINGTON — (I was asked to speak the other night at a fund-raising affair for the National Women's Political Caucus in Washington, D.C. It is very rare for a man to confess his sins publicly before such a distinguished group. I know the speech may finish me at the YMCA locker room or the tables down at Morey's, but I have to think of my future in case the women's revolution succeeds. Although what I said was "off the record," my political advisers have warned me that the speech may be taken out of context. Therefore, I have been persuaded to release the entire text.)

"Gentlemen and sisters, this is indeed a historic occasion. We meet tonight in this dark cellar to plot our plans for turning this country around.

"I know you are asking yourselves, 'Why has this man, who is known to his wife as a male chauvinist pig, agreed to partake in these subversive activities?'

"There are many reasons.

"I believe that this is a sex whose time has come. I have seen the future and it is women.

"I know what it's like to be treated as a sex object. I know when someone takes me out to dinner she has only one thing on her mind. I am sick and tired of being pinched and mauled and groped at — just because I have a pretty face.

"And let the record read, if the revolution succeeds, that I was here on the platform tonight at your first $25-a-head cocktail party, and if you manage to overthrow those sexist politicians who now rule our nation, I would like to be put in charge of the telephone company.

"I have a confession to make.

"I am a sinner.

"And I come here tonight to ask your forgiveness and pardon.

"It's true that I was a male chauvinist pig.

"I studied it at school.

"But it wasn't all my fault. I discovered very early in life that during recess it was easier to fight with girls than boys.

"I also discovered at an early age that girls would do things for you that boys wouldn't — like lend you their roller skates or their homework.

"I found out other things. I found out that girls could make me blush and boys couldn't. I discovered, and may the Good Lord forgive me for this, that girls were nicer to touch than boys and they made my toes tingle all the time.

"I thought to myself, when I was maybe 9 or 10, that someday I'd like to have a

Public Forum

(Letters submitted for public forum must be limited to 300 words)

To the Editor:

Tune in on today: war, corruption, poverty and prejuidice. At some time each of us has thought: mankind is in trouble. That there is talk of responsibility to our fellow beings indicates hope for the future.

The problem being as major as it is, we tend to think there is little we as individuals can do to remedy the condition. So we go our spearate ways without making an effort. We should realize that any action is better than no action at all.

Even in our everyday way of life we can work towards the betterment of society. We can make it our goal to instill in our children a desire for a world of peace and brotherly love. We can set the example so that by the time children reach adulthood the teachings will have become so much a part of them as to become a way of life for their generation and generations to come.

We can do our bit in our mode of living: pleasant, friendly and helpful behavior towards those we encounter in our daily doings. This can become contagious. We think that the action of each person taken separately makes no difference but, it totals up and could result in a habitual way of life for a community.

If each family reaches outside of its circle and extends hands to others, they enlarge the circle. The circle could encompass all since it would be ever-expanding with room for everyone and would result in the development of a feeling of brotherhood.

With each of us working at becoming a beneficient person we'd be on our way to acheiving a harmonious society. Humanity can do something about its destiny if it works at it. By acting now we act for the future.

Check Your Status

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — A man's only as good as his status.

What a man thinks of himself may count in the long run, but in the short run it's the opinion that others have about you that counts. Therefore, that opinion is important to you and should be checked regularly.

For example, you can treat

yourself to a congratulatory pat on the back if—

Science discovers a new comet and names it in your honor.

The knocker on your front door weighs five pounds and is made of solid brass.

If you go to the supermarket, the manager himself pushes your shopping cart around—and tosses a free can of dog ration into it.

On the golf links you are now trying to make your fifth hole in one.

Traffic cops clear the way for you if you decide to jog around the block before breakfast.

You no longer buy tickets to New York State's million-dollar lottery. For one thing, what would you do with the money?

Yep, there's no immediate need for you to push the panic button about your status. But what about the guy who's situation isn't so rosy?

Well, he'd better take some emergency steps to better his image if—

His own mother has turned his picture to the wall.

The boss where he works has put a sign on the office bulletin

Ambassador Hugh S. Gibson, acting chief of the United States delegation to the World Disarmament Conference, presented to the conference today the American proposal for limitation of armaments. The American proposal presented by Gibson consisted of a Nine Point Peace Plan.

Three of the greatest movie dogs in the world were paying Greenville a visit today and apparently they were having the time of their lives watching people marvel at their uncanny intelligence. The dogs are Zander, Tarzan and Polar Ipsu, the property of Frank Barnes of Hollywood, California and the brother of Mrs. J. J. White of Greenville. The dogs, considered the most intelligent in the world, are valued at $30,000 and have appeared in many screen productions. The dogs will remain in Greenville until Friday and during that time they will appear in performances at Greenville school in behalf of the milk fund.

Strength For Today

IT STILL GOES ON

Persecution. Is it still manifesting itself in the present world? Yes, and sometimes in the circles in which we all move.

We encounter it most frequently in whispered conversations of gossip. People are frequently kept from certain of life's benefits because someone (or perhaps a small multitude) don't like this or that or something else which seems to go with a particular person's everyday life. Individuals may be kept from membership in certian clubs or social circles. This, of course, is not as bad as being burned at the stake, but everyone who has experienced such persecution knows that it is not easy to take.

But don't worry about the individual who is persecuted. Worry about the persecutor. He is getting his life torn to shreds. If we know anything about divine realities, we are pretty certain that the persecutor is going to have a hard time when the final judgement rolls around. The Creator can be tolerant to an amazing degree, and then again He can be hard. Our guess would be that He has little or no patience with people who persecute their contemporaries. In the light of what we know of the nature of God is it not quite certain that He hates meanness?

History gives lurid accounts of people who were persecuted for the truth's sake and went to their persecution with songs on their lips. In most of the world this type of persecutions has ceased—but not over the bridge table or the huddle or the solemn shake of one's head and a big laugh.

Complicated Selling To China

By ELMER ROESSNER

The breezy, story-telling salesman has no role in the enlargement of American trade with China, judging from "Trade with China," a hand-book for businessmen seeking sales or buys in the Middle Flowery Republic, published by Pan American World Airways.

All international buying and selling is done by seven state corporations, each in its own field. These are:

China National Cereals, Oils and Foodstuffs Import and Export Corp., 82 Tung An Men St, Peking. Cable: CEROILFOOD PEKING.

China National Chemicals Import and Export Corp., Erh Li Kou, Hsi Chiao, Peking. Cable: SINOCHEM PEKING

China National Light Industrial Products Import and Export Corp., 82 Tung An Men St, Peking. Cable: INDUSTRY PEKING.

China National Native Products and Animal By-Products Imports and Export Corp., 82 Tung An Men St., Peking. Cable: CHINATUHSU PEKING.

Airmail can be sent from the United States to China. For details, ask the Postal Service. Always address mail to companies, never individuals, and refer to the "Peoples Republic of China" or "China." Mail addressed to "Mainland China" or "Red China" will be returned unopened.

Chinese officials in foreign countries can be helpful in arranging contracts. Nearest ones are in Canada. American firms with offices overseas may be successful in working through Chinese commercial attaches.

China Resources Co. (Hong Kong), Bank of China Building, Hong Kong, is a general agent for the seven state trading companies, and is authorized to buy and sell. Foreign trading houses that have long-established relations with China may also be helpful.

"Trade with China" reports that from 30 to 50 per cent of China's foreign trade is negotiated at the Chinese Export Commodities Fair at Canton (Kuangchou in Chinese) from April 16 to May 15 and Oct. 15 to Nov. 15 each year. It's by initation. Applications may be made through the importing companies, through helpful sources cited above or to the Chinese Export Commodities Fair, Pearl River Square, Kuangchou, Peoples Republic of China. Sometimes requests must be repeated over several years before an invitation is issued.

"Trade with China" observes: "Few discussions and little socializing take place outside the Fair building. State trading officials will accept an invitation for drinks or dinner only from foreigners they have traded with for years. Often the Chinese will decline invitations and insist on being the hosts. Having done so, they will accept subsequent invitations."

Believes Irving Scored Literary Coup

Editor's Note—The following story was written by Nina van Pallandt in collaboration with London Sunday Mirror writer Don Short.

By NINA VAN PALLANDT
Written for the London Sunday Mirror

LONDON (AP) — It's all getting a little bit like James Bond. The events of the past four days have been in a world of sheer fantasy.

All I keep hearing are two names. One is Howard Hughes, the eccentric millionaire I've never met in my life.

The other is Clifford Irving, the name of a man I have loved and an author I still believe has pulled off the literary coup of the century.

If this affair had not got into the world headlines, I know my affair with Clifford, however indiscreet it was, would still be a secret today.

There is nothing I can do. What damage has been done, has been done, but I fervently hope it will not break his marriage to his wife Edith because I know they are very happy together.

It was 7½ years ago in Ibiza when we found ourselves in a small beach party together.

Clifford—I'd read several of his books and knew him by reputation—was in the party and we discovered we both lived on the island.

I was then living with my husband Frederik and our children.

Ibiza is a small island and it has lots of social life and it wasn't long before I was bumping into Clifford at cocktail parties and other functions. He became a family friend.

It wasn't until last year that our friendship developed into any kind of relationship. Clifford was then married to Edith, his fourth wife, and my own marriage to Frederik had broken up.

One night at my Chelsea home I got a call from Clifford saying he was coming to London and I invited him in to have dinner that same night with other friends.

During his stay, Clifford asked me if I would like to go on holiday with him to Nassau.

We took the plane to New York the next morning—it was Feb. 12 as far as I recall. When we got there, Clifford announced a sudden change of plans. "Would you mind," he said, "if we went to Mexico instead?"

Clifford then told me he had to go to Mexico to meet Howard Hughes, whose autobiography he was writing.

I had to return to London (from Mexico after 3½ days) and on the previous day Clifford went out to arrange my air ticket back.

He was gone between one and a half to two hours. That is the only time when he went out alone for any such period.

I have heard that in an affidavit Clifford has sworn that I was with him when he met Howard Hughes. I cannot believe Clifford would say such a thing because I certainly didn't meet Hughes at any time during our stay there.

But if Clifford saw Hughes in Mexico it could only have been during that two-hour period when he got my air ticket.

Last November, Clifford and I met again in Los Angeles. I picked him up at the airport and he was all aglow over his manuscript on Howard Hughes.

He had been to New York to see the publishers, McGraw-Hill, and he told me that the serialization rights had been bought by Life magazine.

Clifford had sworn me to secrecy about the whole thing.

At the house we borrowed from a friend I cooked some steaks for Clifford and my manager, John Marshall, and over dinner Clifford told us of the strange meetings he had with Howard Hughes.

Clifford told us of one secret meeting with Hughes in a parking lot and how cartridge tapes had been exchanged in some toilet somewhere.

It all seemed so fantastic, and the author showed us the original letter he had received from Hughes granting him the rights to his biography.

It looked perfectly genuine. Apparently he had known Clifford over a number of years and trusted and respected him.

Clifford is the kind of man that a woman finds great warmth in and someone with whom there is tremendous communication.

I still feel very close to him. But when an American postal department investigator came to question me last week when I was holidaying in the Bahamas ... I was literally shaken.

Suddenly the whole thing exploded around me I had to return to England to regain my senses.

Yes, I'm going to New York with John and we will both testify before the grand jury investigating the whole affair and of our relationship with Clifford Irving.

I will tell the truth and all I hope is that what I say will not harm or injure Clifford in any way. Because knowing this man as I do I cannot believe the book is false.

I believe it is authentic. I would dearly like to think the book is authentic and that Clifford will prove to the world it is.

And what of the two of us now? Who can say? Only time will tell.

Even his worst relative won't come to visit him.

girl of my own — someone who would cook for me and iron my shirts and shovel the snow out of the driveway and make my toes tingle at night.

"Now in retrospect these were terrible thoughts I had.

"But that's how we were all brought up. We thought of women as childbearers, car pool drivers, breakfast makers, and bed warmers. And if they couldn't do those things, at least they could type and take shorthand.

"Yes, sisters, I confess that I was no better than Hugh Hefner or Norman Mailer.

"I had hit bottom.

"But then one night, while I was reading Playboy and watching my wife scrubbing the floor, a light dawned on me and I said to myself, 'Is this really what I want out of life? How can I be free when this woman that I married is still in chains? What good is it to own the world when she has to stand in line at Safeway?'

"So I picked her up from the floor and said, 'Go get a job, I'll squeeze out the mop.'

"Sisters, from the day forward, I have been one of you.

"Because of these revelations I can now live with myself. My floors are dirty, but my heart is pure.

"And so tonight, I ask your forgiveness for all of the terrible sexist acts I have perpetrated on women, overt and undercover.

"I appear humbly in front of this group to say that Gloria Steinem and Bella Abzug and Betty Freidan and Kate Millett and Germaine Greer have shown me the way.

"All I ask of you is to take me to your bosoms and say, 'I forgive you, Arthur. Go and sin no more.' "

you want a fight, you can get one.' "

Like Booe, Johnson will not run a campaign based on timidity. He usually lets people know when something bugs him.

"This is the year for the Republicans to win the Senate seat in North Carolina," Johnson says, and you can tell he isn't talking about any old Republican.

If it can be said that Booe and Johnson don't back away from a knuckle sandwich, the same can certainly be said of Jesse Helms. As an off-the-air campaigner, he won't even have to offer equal time.

That's just the Senate race. You already understand that Jim Gardner and Jim Holshouser will go for the knockout in the gubernatorial campaign.

Back in the good old days, the Republicans used to leave all the headlines in the primary to the Democrats. And they seldom lost any of their own blood.

GOP Chairman Frank Rouse says of the primaries: "It shows our party has come of age in North Carolina."

That ain't the half of it, Mr. Rouse.

Army Expands Its Early-Release Plan

The Army has announced a major expansion of current early-release from active duty for draftees and volunteers who are in their first enlistment, according to Capt. Ivey C. Gentry Jr., commanding officer of the 398th Supply Co. here.

Gentry said the expansion includes a 179-day mandatory early-release except for Europe where the limit is 150 days and Vietnam where tour curtailments are in effect for up to 120 days. In effect will be voluntary discharge at port for Vietnam returnees with more than six months and less than 12 months remaining in their term of service.

Soldiers choosing the voluntary discharge option with less than 18 months service, he reported, must certify willingness to forego certain VA educational benefits.

The officer said that three-year volunteers may be released up to 18 months early if they have completed a full overseas tour and up to a year early if they have not.

The provision for those released in this category is that they are able to complete the remainder of their service obligations as members of an Army Reserve Unit, Gentry noted. These policies are in effect at this time.

He said that anyone desiring to get an early release should contact his personnel officer or unit commander. Parents or prospective participants of the early release program who have questions may contact the commanding officer, 398th Supply Co. at 1301 N. Memorial Drive here.

Gentry added that anyone desiring to enlist may contact the unit's representatives, at the same location, for details.

Brody's DOWNTOWN PITT PLAZA

By Abigail Van Buren

[c 1972 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.]

DEAR ABBY: This is for "MRS. NO NAME," who felt so abused because her three children and six grandchildren spend a few weeks of their summer vacations with her. My husband and I are the same age as the grandparents but the similarity ends there. We don't have a dishwasher or a swimming pool. But we do have 5 married children and 11 grandchildren, and nothing gives us more pleasure than to have as many of the tribe around as possible, with wall-to-wall air mattresses, and floor to ceiling fun and laughter.

Why doesn't that misguided woman get into "sync" and stay up until 2 a. m., enjoying the fun? Then she wouldn't have any trouble sleeping late along with everyone else.

Mrs. No Name is lucky her family wants to visit her. The years of togetherness are so few. If I were DYING, I would never write to my married children and tell them to come one at a time and to limit their visits. Motherly love, thou are a cowbell. DISGUSTED IN MONTANA

DEAR ABBY: Hooray for that grandma who had spunk enough to write to her married children and tell them it was "doctor's orders" that she could have only one family of visitors at a time.

Too many parents let their married children walk all over them, and they suffer in silence with all the inconveniences they are made to endure. [But some do complain a lot to their friends and relatives.]

I say, if married children abuse the privilege of being houseguests, sock it to 'em. NO PATSY IN PASADENA

DEAR ABBY: There are too many "MRS. NO NAMES" in the world. I refer to the grandmother who complained because her visiting children and grandchildren stayed up until 2 a. m. watching TV, laughing, playing cards and talking with friends.

She also complained because she couldn't turn on her dishwasher, sprinkler or radio until noon because her guests slept late. If they are welcome guests, whom I wished to accommodate, I would gladly refrain from making disturbing noises. If not, I'd go about my business and not worry about the noise. And if they didn't like it, they could leave!

I have no sympathy for doormats. I have always said that people are doormats because they want to be.

MRS. S. C.

DEAR MRS. S. C.: And I've always said that no one can be used for a doormat unless he lies down first.

DEAR ABBY: If you still have MRS. NO NAME'S address, I would sure like to have it. I want to write to her and ask her how it is possible to raise three children, and end up with a three-bedroom home and a swimming pool.

RETIRED AND STONE BROKE

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for the beautiful idea of sending roses to your mother on YOUR birthday. I am ashamed that after 19 years, I never gave it a thought. My mother has done so much for me, I think it's about time I started giving instead of taking. Thank you again, Abby, you may have started a tradition. K. IN FAIRFIELD, CONN.

DEAR K.: I didn't "start" anything. That lovely idea has been around for years.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069, for Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions."

Little Grounds For Old Claim

DURHAM, N.C. (UPI)—A Duke University study indicates there is little basis for the frequently heard claim that large numbers of doctors are practicing medicine "defensively" to guard themselves against the threat of malpractice suits.

The study, conducted by the Duke Law Journal, concludes that malpractice litigation has been much overrated as a contributor to rising health care costs. Those who say so maintain doctors practicing defensive medicine over-utilize diagnostic tests and procedures, just to be on the safe side in case a patient sues.

Carrier Abruptly Reassigned To The Tonkin Gulf

By GEORGE ESPER
Associated Press Writer

SAIGON (AP) — The U.S. Command abruptly recalled the aircraft carrier Constellation to the Tonkin Gulf today, raising the strong possibility of intensive retaliatory air strikes on North Vietnam should the Communist command launch an all-out offensive, informants said.

The 76,000-ton carrier cut short a port leave in Hong Kong as the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong made about 50 attacks across South Vietnam today and Tuesday, including the heaviest rocket assault on the Da Nang area in 2½ years.

Although many of the attacks were small scale, it was the largest number in more than four months, and it appeared to mark the start of a pre-Tet highpoint of activity.

The U.S. Command said attacks on American forces also intensifed overnight and at least 13 Americans were wounded.

Communiques and incomplete field reports listed at least 37 South Vietnamese killed and 141 wounded. The Saigon command claimed 147 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong killed and 22 captured.

Informants said the Constellation would join the carriers Coral Sea and Hancock in the Tonkin Gulf, forming a 225-plane strike force to attack supply depots and other installations in North Vietnam should the Communist command launch the major offensive that U.S. officials have been predicting for this month.

The United States has about 125 more fighter-bombers at Da Nang and at bases in Thailand.

The sudden return of the Constellation was also considered a show of strength to back President Nixon's repeated assurances that he will protect the remaining American troops in Vietnam.

Despite the surge in activity, the South Vietnamese Foreign Ministry issued a communique saying allied forces would observe a 24-hour cease-fire beginning at 6 p.m. Saigon time next Monday for the Tet festival of the lunar new year. Sources said, however, that allied troops would remain on heightened alert and South Vietnamese leaves would be limited.

The cease-fire applies only to South Vietnam.

The Viet Cong announced last December they would observe a 96-hour cease-fire for Tet beginning at 1 a.m. Saigon time Monday.

In the past, all such limited cease-fires have been violated.

Most of today's war activity centered in the northern and central coastal regions and the central highlands, where U.S. officials have been predicting a major enemy offensive.

The two heaviest attacks were against the U.S. air base at Da Nang and the adjoining city, South Vietnam's second largest, and a South Vietnamese firebase near An Khe on the edge of the central highlands, 275 miles north of Saigon.

The allied commands said three South Vietnamese civilians were killed and six civilians, one Vietnamese soldier and 10 American servicemen were wounded when 25 100-pound rockets slammed into the base and city shortly after midnight.

The Tax-Free Face Checkups

WASHINGTON (AP) — Many of the 112 high-income persons mentioned as escaping 1970 federal income taxes may hear from the tax collector after all, a congressional staff study says.

Chairman Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., of the House Ways and Means Committee, read the report into the record of a Rules Committee meeting Tuesday. Members had questioned whether the 1969 tax reform effectively closed tax loopholes.

At Mills' direction, tax specialists checked the returns of the $200,000-a-year individuals in question and found that Internal Revenue Service audits now under way may show that as many as one-third of them owe taxes.

Of the 112, the report said, eight show mistakes or misinterpretations that take them out of the category entirely.

Of the remaining 104, six paid no U.S. taxes because they paid as much or more in foreign taxes, the study said.

Twelve others were free of federal tax because of large deductions for state tax payments; 13 had large charitable deductions, and 55 had large interest deductions, the report continued.

"We suspect that in many of the 55 cases the interest deduction involved represents interest attributable to an investment, in which case it is properly subject to tax," the report said.

Among the remaining 18 returns claiming a variety of deductions, the report continued, two list very large theft losses which will be examined carefully and another reports large gambling winnings, offset by gambling losses.

Moore To Face Murder Trial

Charles Brinkley Moore of Route 1, Greenville, was ordered bound over to Superior Court for trial on a charge of murder after he waived a preliminary hearing before Judge J. W. H. Roberts in District Court this monring.

Moore, 47, was charged with murder in the Friday night death of 18-year-old Luby Earl Crandall of Route 1, Ayden.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said Crandall's body was found in a room at the rear of a store operated by Moore. He had been shot one time in the upper chest by a .22 caliber rifle, the sheriff noted.

No bond was set for the defendant.

Local Dentists Attended Meet

All Greenville dentists recently attended a meeting to discuss the latest techniques in detecting early periodontal (gum) disease.

A representative of the American Academy of Periodontology provided them with information and demonstrated methods of recognizing gum problems during regular dental checkups, so as to afford the patient the opportunity to have such conditions treated by a periodontist before they become painful and difficult to correct.

Winterville Okays Rezoning Property

WINTERVILLE — The Winterville Town Board Monday night approved rezoning a portion of property located in north Winterville from agricultural residential to general business.

The property, owned by J. E. Jones, was rezoned so that a self-service gasoline operation can be installed on the Doo-Drop Inn property. The request to install the gasoline facility was made by the Quick Fill Corporation of Grifton.

The property is located outside the town limits but within the one-mile zoning. The board agreed to rezone the property after the recommendation came from the Winterville Planning Board that the property be rezoned.

It was reported the town has applied for application from the Emergency Employment Act to hire someone to operate the Winterville treatment plant. As soon as funds are made available to the town, someone will be hired to fill the position.

Water and sewer pipes have been delivered in the Robinson Union No. 2 and Shamrock Terrace subdivisions and installation will begin as soon as weather permits. There are 65 lots in both the subdivisions.

Willie Fleming and Don Woods, representatives of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, appeared before the board requesting a permit to picket and demonstrate within the town limits.

The group was granted an application and told if the application is properly completed, then a permit will be granted.

Board members approved the rerouting of N. C. 903 as requested by R. N. Nelson of Robersonville.

Appalachia Antipoverty Efforts Failed

By VERNON A. GUIDRY Jr.
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A cautiously worded report from a congressional watchdog agency has suggested the present structure of federal antipoverty efforts may offer no real improvement in Appalachian poverty.

The General Accounting office Monday released the findings from a study of a lone Kentucky county, but the report cast shadows over the mountainous, poverty-ridden region.

The GAO set out to find what five years and $21.5 million in federal grants had done for rural Johnson County "because it had the typical characteristics of economically distressed areas: high unemployment, low family income, and high outmigration."

The findings were bleak.

"The Congress should be aware that, up to the time of GAO's study, extensive federal expenditures had not made a significant impact on alleviating poverty and unemployment in Johnson County," it read.

"In view of the similarity of Johnson County to other economically distressed rural counties ... elsewhere in the Appalachian region, the observations and recommendations in this report may have applicability to other places," it continued.

The GAO examined the county's progress during the period 1965-1969, finding that the federal government had pumped in enough money to average $243 for each man, woman and child each year.

What then is needed? The GAO decided that the solution is planning and coordination of the entire antipoverty effort.

"No federal organization has over-all responsibility to coordinate the wide range of federal programs in a specific locality," the report complained.

Specifically, the GAO said the Appalachian Regional Commission, a joint state-federal venture, should become more active in coordination and planning.

Not so easily done, replied the commission, citing statutory and other obstacles in the path of any primary responsibility for coordination.

The GAO maintained that the Economic Development Administration should undertake a major study of what will attract industry to rural areas.

The EDA replied that this was being done, but challenged the GAO finding that lack of coordination was the problem in Johnson County.

The real cause, said the EDA, was emphasis on social program funds at the expense of development-program funds.

More Profit In Selling Apples

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — When the Lansing State Hospital recently joined a medical campaign against smoking and took out cigarette machines, it also suffered an unexpected blow to the pocketbook.

The hospital had pulled in revenue from over 24,000 packs of cigarettes last year.

Then hospital service league employes decided to try selling apples instead, and the hospital's gift shop is selling 100-120 apples a day.

"The transition from cigarettes to apples wasn't completely smooth," said Marian Renaud, the gift shop manager, "but the career smokers seem to have adjusted."

And the hospital is making half again as much on apples as it ever made on cigarettes.

Name Tourney For Muskie

MANCHESTER, N.H. (AP) — The "Edmund S. Muskie Invitational Cribbage Tournament" will start here next week with championship playoffs Feb. 19-29.

Band Club's Installation

Officers of the newly created Band Booster Club of Aycock Junior High School were installed Monday night at a special meeting held in the school cafeteria.

B. L. Hunt is president; Mrs. Norman Wilkerson, vice president; and Mrs. Jean Dawson, secretary-treasurer. The officers were introduced by Mrs. Mabel Godette.

The Band Booster Club is dedicated to stimulating more interest on the part of parents and students to maintain a full complement of young students taking band, and in creating higher standards of musicianship.

Johnny Wooten, member of the city schools music faculty, presented a bouquet of roses to Mrs. Robert Kittrell in recognition of her interest and work in organizing the band club.

About 100 parents and students were on hand for the meeting and installation of officers. The band played "Italian Masters Suite" by Phillip Gordon and "Three Classical Miniatures" by Leroy Jackson during the program.

Three-Car Crash At Intersection

A three-car collision on N.C. 11-U.S. 13 about a mile South of the Dudley Street intersection at about 4:05 p.m. yesterday resulted in an estimated $1,125 property damage and injured one person.

Police identified drivers involved in the mishap as Cleveland Barnes, 44 of 1511A Fleming St.; Johnny Melson Piner, 25, of 111 North Warren St.; and Mary Monk Jones, 1613 Lincoln Dr.

Damage was estimated at $75 to the Barnes vehicle, $600 to the Pinner car and $450 to the Jones auto.

Mrs. Jones, who was reported injured, was charged with failing to reduce her speed enough to avoid an accident.

Lang Acknowledges Talk Of Office Appointment

Retired Air Force Major General John Lang, Vice-President of External Affairs at East Carolina University, this morning confirmed that there has been considerable conversation, but no definite word on the possibility of his appointment to head the newly created post of Secretary for Military and Veterans Affairs for the State of North Carolina.

"All I know at this point is what I have read," Lang commented. "I do think the article that appeared in Under the Dome yesterday (in the Raleigh News and Observer) is a pretty accurate statement of the situation."

The News and Observer article stated that Lang, a Carthage N.C. native "is said to be in line for the secretaryship of a new state government department..." and enumerated the agencies mentioned by Lang as those to come under the umbrella of the new department.

Lang, who retired from the Air Force in July 1971, has 35 years experience in government, and was for ten years with the office of the Secretary of the Air Force. He has been in the university position since his retirement.

The office Secretary for Military and Veterans Affairs for the state of North Carolina, Lang explained, would combine six current separate agencies under the one office. "The new office would include the National Guard, Civil Defense, Department of Veterans Affairs, the Civil Air Patrol, the State Commission under the one office. "The new office would include the National Guard, Civil Defense, Department of Veterans Affairs, the Civil Air Patrol, the State Commission on Armories, and the Mutual Agreement Treaty." Lang noted that the Mututal Agreement Treaty is the tri-state treaty between Virginia, North and South Carolina that in the event of national disaster, the three states would come to each other's aid.

Sanford Has Endorsement Of Jenkins

East Carolina University president Dr. Leo Jenkins issued a statement Tuesday endorsing the candidacy of Terry Sanford for President of the United States.

Dr. Jenkins said this morning that his statement was in response to a reporter's inquiry concerning the possible candidacy of the Duke University head and the action was not initiated by him.

"All North Carolinians should take notice when one of the state's native sons or daughters enters national politics," he said in the statement. "It would be an especial honor for the state if one so illustrious as Terry Sanford enters the race for president..."

Dr. Jenkins stated that Sanford "has paid his dues and earned his reputation both in public and in private life. His records as governor of this state and as president of a major university attest to his administrative and leadership abilities."

The ECU official pointed out that Sanford has the confidence of his own generation and "yet the youth find him so believable that they have sparked his entry into the race." Sanford, he added, has bridged that credibility gap.

"I sincerely believe that North Carolinians and the citizens of the nation at large will find Terry Sanford among the best qualified to deal with the problems of our future," Dr. Jenkins added.

Drugs Probe Is Welcome

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP)—University of South Carolina President Thomas F. Jones says he welcomes the decision to have a grand jury investigate the campus drug problem.

Jones said "We hope the grand jury can get to the root of the problem. We have been wrestling with it for a long time and we, like the rest of society, simply don't have all the answers."

Jones statements Tuesday followed an announcement by Fifth Circuit Solicitor John Foard that he has called a special session of the jury for next Monday.

Last week, the USC student newspaper, The Gamecock, published an interview with an anonymous instructor at the Columbia campus who said he sold illegal drugs to students.

Jones said Tuesday it is "a matter of record" that the university has "cooperated fully" with law enforcement agencies and legislative committees incestigating the drug problem.

Set Gymnastics Event For PTA

The Elmhusrt School PTA will sponsor a Gymnastics Event at its regular meeting Thursday, evening at 8:00 p.m. Thirty-six children representing each grade level will take part in the physical education display directed by Charles Crumpler. Mrs. Louis Singleton, PTA President, will conduct a brief business meeting.

During the past months the PTA has continued an extensive library program through the purchase of books and equipment and through volunteer library helpers. It is in the process of purchasing air-conditioning equipment for an interior double classroom. Under consideration at this time is the establishment of a fieldtrip program for each level throughout the school year. Parents are urged to support this meeting.

Robeson, $69,300; Warren, $347,739; Martin, $66,000; Mitchell, $53,380; Winston-Salem-Forsyth $209,661; Granville, $12,307; non-designated units, $384,471.

The audit report, Phillips said, covers the administration of the Title 1 program in North Carolina from July 1, 1966 through Feb. 28, 1970. He said it is an examination of the program and of projects conducted by 10 school units included within the scope of the audit.

"The state education agency," Phillips said, "finds no basis upon which it can accept the allegations contained in the audit report, and we expect to file an answer and work with the U.S. Office of Education to clear up these obvious misunderstandings."

He termed it "unfortunate" that the 10 schools had been criticized, adding: "This report in no ways dampens our enthusiasm towards the worth and the good already accomplished by this vital program which is operating with a high degree of efficiency in all of our 152 school units."

The audit report also recommends that the state agency be required to:

—"Determine the amount of Title 1 funds used by all local education agencies to replace previously funded state and-or local funded teacher positions and the amount so determined be refunded to the federal government.

—"Determine the amount of Title 1 funds expended by all local education agencies for general purpose teachers assigned to non-target schools and the amount. . .be refunded to the federal government."

Phillips said HEW failed to advise the state back in January, 1968, that the state agency's interpretation of the regulations were not in accordance with the interpretations of the HEW audit agency.

No Women In Academy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Navy Secretary John H. Chaffee says two girls nominated to the U.S. Naval Academy won't be admitted because federal law bars women from combat sea duty and the Navy needs its Annapolis graduates for the fleet.

Chaffee coupled his decision Tuesday with an announcement that the Navy will open its Reserve Officers Training Corps to women. The unit at Jacksonville University in Florida will be the first Navy ROTC program to admit women, he said.

"That is just the pilot program, and we are going forward with similar programs at other schools," Chaffee said.

Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., and Rep. Jack H. McDonald, R-Mich., who have nominated girls to the Naval Academy, expressed disappointment at Chaffee's decision.

A Review

London Symphony Deserves Accolades

Since such a large contigent of fine musicians came all the way from London, and as there was an overflow house of enthuisastic music lovers on hand at Wright Auditorium to hear the London Symphony, it was a crying shame we didn't get a single encore. Even the briefest bagatelle would have been welcome.

Having made this complaint, it's only fair to hurry up and say the London Symphony deserves the accolades that have been heaped upon it, both in the concert hall and on records.

The program, one of three selections, was very well balanced, representing a composer each of the early and late nineteenth century and one from the twentieth century.

Berlioz's Benvenuto Cellini, the opening selection, is typical of the great romantic's music, spirited, opulent and lyrical. The London Symphony in this rather short piece revealed their ability to define the full sound as well as accenting subtle nuances of a composition.

Bela Bartok's Dance Suite, composed 50 years ago, is a composition rich in imagination, with numerous musical surprises. Written for a festival anniversary for the meeting of Buda and Pest, Bartok's music is a marvelous fusion of original melodies and the zest and spirit of Hungarian folk music.

The major offering, Brahm's Symphony No. 4 in E minor, is always a joy to hear, especially when performed with the clarity and dpeth of feeling given the piece last night. There are few things in the literature of music more emotionally moving than the second movement, yet like all of Brahm's work, held in check by his regard for classical restraint.

The London Symphony concert was indeed one of the finer things to come to Greenville in some time, despite the lamentable brevity of an opportunity that comes not too often to bear master musicians perform masterpieces.

Bucs Out To Snap Spider Jinx

The East Carolina Pirates, battling to stay among the top three teams in the Southern Conference, travels to Richmond tonight to face the Spiders of the University of Richmond.

Earlier this year, Richmond nipped the Bucs in Minges Coliseum in a rally that took a one-point victory.

Now, with first place wrapped up by the defending champs, the Davidson Wildcats, the Bucs are battling with several schools for second or third.

East Carolina has three conference games left. Besides the encounter with Richmond, they meet William & Mary, also on the road, and The Citadel, in Minges. A sweep of all three would assure them of third, and should Furman lose another game, it would move them back into second.

The Bucs will be aiming to snap a two-game losing steak against two of the three teams that now stand above them in the Southern standings, Davidson and Furman. Both were stunning losses that surprised about everyone.

And now another foe has entered in that may play a part in tonight's game — the flu bug.

"We had quite a number of people who got sick coming back from Furman" Coach Tom Quinn said. "Just about everyone has been sick to some degree except for Al Faber and Greg Crouse," he said.

The illness was so bad that the Pirates were unable to hold practice Monday afternoon. "I hope we'll be able to have a good workout today," Quinn said early yesterday afternoon.

Quinn said that a couple of the players were beginning to feel the effects of the illness on Saturday night, but he didn't think that had anything to do with the outcome of the game.

Quinn said that a defensive breakdown had the most to do with the loss. "Our plan was to cut off their inside game, Obviously we were unable to do it," he said.

The inside game, Roy Simpson and Russ Hunt accounted for 67 points in the game, and that was what wrecked the Pirates.

"We were able to muster enough offense to stay in the game for the first half, but their press bothered us for the first time ever in the second half. It caused us to make a lot of turnovers, and that did it," Quinn said.

"Apparently we were afraid to drop off to the inside, even though we knew their scoring power was all inside," he added.

The coach still expressed the faith that he had a better team that did Furman. "We just have to do a better job from the midcourt line on in. One of the problems is quarterbacking. We need someone who'll make us run the patters. Probably from now on, we're going to use more (Ernie) Pope — (Jerome) Owens combinations, along with Greg Crouse, too.

"We're working hard on set offenses. We just need an offense to go to when we've got to have a basket. We don't have a star we can go to for such a shot, so we've got to get a good shot from someone else in our offense."

Quinn noted that the Pirates fouled too much against Davidson, and they also got in trouble against Furman. "We can't be effective inside with so many fouls," he said.

The Richmond game will be a tester for the Pirates. They badly need the win to give them momentum for the rest of the regular season. The Spiders continue to be a jinx for the Bucs, who've suffered three losses in the past three years already to them by one and two-point margins. Two of the losses came in the first round of the last two tournaments. And there is a good chance that if the Bucs do finish third, Richmond would be their first round opponent this season.

"We can beat them," Quinn said. "Both up there and in the tournament if we have to. They are big and talented, and we look for them to try and go inside too. They have the same strong inside game as does Furman. Defensively, they'll go in a sluffing man-to-man and a zone most of the time."

Following the Richmond game, the Bucs return home to meet The Citadel on Saturday evening.

The Pirate freshmen will play the Spider frosh in a preliminary to tonight's game.

Presbyterian Slips To Win

Presbyterian sneaked past Black Jack last night, 66-65, and moved a half-game up on idle Immanuel Baptist in the Church Basketball League. In the other games, Oakmont downed Piney Grove, 78-39, and St. James nipped winless St. Paul's, 45-43.

Presbyterian now is 10-1, while Immanuel is 9-1. They are followed by Oakmont, 7-4, which is the only team that can catch them. The rest of the league has Piney Grove at 6-5, St. James and Black Jack at 4-7, Trinity at 3-7, and St. Paul's, 0-11.

In the opening game, St. Paul's threatened to gain its first win by moving out into a 25-21 lead over St. James by the end of the first half. But St. James came back to outscore them, 24-18, and that was just enough for the win.

Guy Howell led St. James with 21 points, while Jack Wall had 20 for St. Paul's.

Oakmont had no trouble at all with Piney Grove, moving out to a 36-20 lead in the first half. They then outhit Piney Grove, 42-19, in the second half, for an easy win.

Bobby Tunstall and Doyle Daughtry led Oakmont with 16 each, while Bobby Hall had 12. Tom Meeks led Piney Grove with 12.

In the final game, it was close all the way. Presbyterian got a 32-30 lead in the first half. Black Jack tried to comeback, outscoring Presbyterian, 35-34, but it fell just short.

Larry Graham led Presbyterian with 23, while Lawton Nisbet had 14 and Bill Glidewell had 10. Black Jack was paced by Tal Adams with 24, while Steve Peele and Phil Smith each had 16.

Morrow Sets Diving Marks

NORFOLK, Va. — Jack Morrow stunned his fellow teammates on the East Carolina University swimming team yesterday as he led the Bucs to a 77-35 victory over Old Dominion University.

Morrow, in winning both the one and three-meter diving events, set new meet, pool and school records, and surpassed qualifying scores for the NCAA Nationals, to be held at West Point in late March.

And one of the records he broke was the oldest on the Pirate books and was thought to be going to stand forever.

First, Morrow cracked the school mark in the one-meter event, collecting an excellent total of 282 points. That qualified him for the Nationals in one-meter.

Then, as the meet drew to a close, he did an even more astounding job on the three meter board, collecting a total of 316 points to erase a 1960 record set by Bob Kingery of East Carolina. His 306.9 total was the oldest ECU record still around.

His total there also allowed him to qualify for the three-meter national competition.

Two other Bucs also took a pair of firsts. Jim Griffin won the 200 and 100 freestyle events, while Ricky Prince won the 1,000 and 500 freestyle. The Bucs won every event but the final relay.

The victory raised the Pirate record to 5-5 on the season. They host Appalachian on Monday.

Oak City Ices Tie For Title

OAK CITY — Oak City High School iced no worse than atie for the Martin County Conference championship last night with a 63-59 come-from-behind victory over Jamesville. The Oak City girls made it a sweep with a 31-23 win in their game.

The victory leaves the Trojans with a 7-1 league record, with a game to play against Robersonville. Jamesville is now 7-2 and can only hope for a tie if Robersonville pulls off the upset.

In the contest, it was tight for the first period as both teams threw in 13 points. But in the second frame, the Bullets began to pull away, moving out to a 32-25 lead at the half. Jamesville held a 19-12 scoring advantage in the period.

Oak City put on a rally in the third quarter, outhitting Jamesville, 18-13. That put the Bullet lead to 45-43 as the final period began. In that, Oak City finally pushed ahead with just under three minutes to go, and then held off the Bullets, with a 20-14 advantage in the frame.

Edward Briley led Oak City with 20 points, while Whit Whitfield had 15 and Wayne Jones had 11. For Jamesville, Larry Modlin, Tommy Mizelle each had 13, while Ellis Moore added 10.

In the girls contest, Jamesville moved into a 4-2 lead in the first period, but Oak City cancelled that with a 7-5 second quarter. That left it in a 9-9 tie at halftime.

Neither team could gain an advantage in the third perod, with each hitting eight to make it 17-17 as the final period got underway. In that, however, Oak City outhit Jamesville, 14-6 and took the win.

Sylvia Jones and Dianne Duggins each had 10 points to lead Oak City. Donna Williams led Jamesville with 11.

Oak City hosts Robersonville, and Jamesville entertains Gumberry on Friday.

Kinston Rolls Past Rampants By 86-65

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

KINSTON — For one quarter, Rose High School played with the big boys. They shot well, they ran the offense and they played good defense.

But then, they fell apart. Their defense fell away, and the offense settled into free lance, and the shooting and rebounding nearly became nil.

Kinston didn't stop a thing, however, hitting from about everywhere on the court, running up an 86-65 victory over the Rampants by the time it was over.

The victory raised the Viking record to 7-1 in the league where they hold first. The Rampants drop to 1-7, still in the basement.

Kinston's shooting in the game was outstanding. They hit on 12 of 19 shots in the second period when they pulled away from the Rampants, and canned 18 of 33 altogether in the half. Their shooting fell off in the third period, but they put it together in the fourth when they rolled out to their biggest lead, 28 points.

The Vikings pressing defense hampered the Rampants on a number of occasions, while Rose's own press just didn't do anything at all against Kinston.

And when Rose did get a shot, they got only one as Kinston controlled the boards at both ends of the court. When the Vikings did miss, there was usually someone around to toss it back for a score.

Kinston took the opening lead on a free throw by William Hill, but Lonnie Payton put Rose ahead, 2-1 on a jumper with 6:24 left in the period.

From then on until the second period, it was back and fourth as the two teams swapped basket after basket. Kinston and Rose changed the lead a total of 14 times during the period. It was tied on three occasions. Rose got the lead for the last time in the frame at 15-14 on a shot from underneath by Payton with 52 seconds left. Kinston regained it with 34 seconds left, 16-15, when Reid Hart tossed in a missed shot, and it stayed that way the remaining seconds of the frame.

In the second period, Rose regained the lead on a baseline jumper by Robert Carraway, and then stretched it to two, their biggest lead when Carraway got a free throw. Kinston tied it up, but Tommy Williams put Rose out, 20-18 with 6:21 left.

And then the bubble burst.

Kinston tied it at 20-20 on a drive by Doug Potter and then Duff Miller put the Viking ahead with a jumper at 22-20 with 5:11 left in the half.

Kinston ran off two more baskets as Greg Hill and Miller each hit to up the lead to six, 26-20. Rose scored a free throw, but a free throw by Miller and a tap-in of his missed second shot by William Hill ran it to eight. Alfred Sutton then hit to make it 10, 31-21 with 2:38 to go.

Rose and Kinston swapped shots until late in the period when Potter hit at the baseline to up the lead to 12, 39-27, and it stayed at that margin, 41-29 at halftime.

In the third period, Kinston continued to pull away. Hart opened the frame with a shot to make it 14, 43-29. A minute later, after the two had swapped baskets, Hill made it a 16-point spread. With 4:14 left, a three-point play by Hill ran it out to 19, 53-34, and Rose was never in it from there on out. Potter ran the margin out to 21 at 57-36, but Rose rallied to within 15 at 57-42 before Kinston pulled away again to hold a 63-46 lead as the final period got underway.

In the last perod, it was just a question of setting a margin, as Kinston slowly built its lead out to 21, 78-50 with 4:05 to go.

Potter led the Kinston scoring with 23 points, while Hill had 19, Hart had 11, and Miller and Greg Hill each had 12.

Payton and Carraway led the Rampants with 16 each, while J.C. Daniels had 13 and Tommy Williams had 10.

In the junior varsity contest, the Rampant Cubs blew a 14-point lead to bow in overtime to Kinston, 55-51.

Rose pushed in to the opening lead and went out by nine in the first period before leading 12-8 at the end of the period. They continued to hold the lead in the second quarter, leading 22-16 at the half.

In the third period, Rose moved out into a 14-point lead with 58 seconds left, 35-21, but Kinston ran off six points in the final minute to close within eight at 35-27.

In the final period, led by 10 points by Duffie Johnson, Kinston rallied, finally taking the lead at 43-41 on a shot by Johnson. Rose regained it, and held a 49-47 lead with 40 seconds left. But Johnson tossed in a missed free throw with five seconds left, tieing it at 49-49 and forcing the overtime.

Johnson then hit four of the six points that Kinston got in the extra period to spark them to win. He hit to put them ahead, then scored again after Rose ited it up. Two free throws by Mark Dale put the clincher on the win.

Johnson finished with 15 points, while Jame Johnson had 12. Robert Brinkley led Rose 16, while Herb Bynum had 10.

Johnson finished with 15 points, while James Johnson had 12. Robert Brinkley led Rose with 16, while Herb Bynum had 10.

Wilson moved out into a 14-8 lead in the first period of play and held command the rest of the way. They outhit Aycock, 11-8, in the second quarter, building the lead out to 25-16 by the end of the half.

The Wilson five continued to pull away in the third period, dumping in 18, while Aycock accounted for 16. That made it 43-32 going into the final stanza. In that one, Aycock managed to outpoint Wilson, 20-17, but it wasn't enough.

Lindberg Morris led Aycock with 13 points, while Tyrone Taft had 12 and Jack Jenkins had 10. Burke led Wilson with 20, with Edwardson adding 16 and Woodard, 10.

Robersonville Rolls By Bears

ROBERSONVILLE — Robersonville High School swept a pair of games from Bear Grass last night. The Eagles won, 70-58, while the Eaglettes took a 58-21 victory.

In the girls game, the Eaglettes, already crowned champions of the Martin County Conference, zipped away to a 17-8 lead in the first period. They outhit the Lady Bears, 9-3, in the second period to have it all wrapped up at the half, 26-11. In the third period, however, Robersonville really did the trick with a 23-7 advantage in scoring. That made a runaway of it, 49-18. Robersonville again outhit Bear Grass, 9-3, in the final period to finish it off.

Jennie James and Ruth Goins led the Robersonville scoring with 14 points each. Anna Mizelle led Bear Grass with 10.

In the boys contest, Bear Grass, still looking for its first win of the fading year, moved out into a 15-13 lead. But any hope of victory was quickly snuffed out as the Eagles came back with a 16-10 advantage and a 29-25 halftime lead.

Bear Grass outhit them again, 17-16, to trail 45-42 as the third period ended, but Robersonville shot away in the last frame, 25-16, to end any final hope of the Bears.

Clarence Wilson led Robersonville with 25 points, while Ernest Crandall had 18 and James Wynne had 12. For the Bears, Vann Rogerson had 18 and Charles Mobley had 17.

Robersonville travels to Oak City for thier final conference game Friday. Bear Grass hosts non-league Creswell.

Davidson Gets Southern Crown

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

To the surprise of a lot of people, including the league coaches themselves, Davidson's Wildcats have clinched the top-seeded berth in the Southern Conference basketball championship tournament for the fifth consecutive year.

The Wildcats wound up their conference schedule Tuesday night with a 79-75 victory over defending league champion Furman on the Paladins' home court and thus avenged one of their two setbacks inside the circuit in 10 games.

Davidson went into last year's tournament the favorite but was ousted in the semifinals by Furman, picked by the coaches to win again this year.

Conley Edges Past North Pitt

By CHIP LAMBETH
Reflector Sports Writer

BETHEL — North Pitt's Big Orange Machine struck again last night as they downed the Valkuries of D.H. Conley 38-28 after holding off a Conley rally in the third period. The Vikings, however, avenged their girls loss by dumping the Panthers, 65-58.

The Valkuries pulled to within six points of the Pant-HERS in the third quarter but a fourth period surge by the Big Orange gave North Pitt the win.

Minnie Hollis got the North Pitt girls off to a fast start with a pair of buckets in the first minute of the game. She added a free throw before Glenda Denton put the Valkuries on the boards with a jumper from the top of the key making it 5-2. Hollis again sank a field goal with 4:08 in the quarter, 7-2.

Hollis and Debbie Pollard combined for a three point play to put the Big Orange out by eight, 10-2, with 3:07 on the clock. June Hall hit a jumper from the corner but the Pant-HERS got the bucket right back when Susan James connected from the corner also for a 12-4 lead at the end of the period.

Hollis opened the second quarter with a basket, 14-4, but that was all they got for the next three minutes. Conley only got a single free throw during the span. Joy James broke the cold snap for the North Pitt girls, hitting from underneath to put the lead at 16-5 with 3:48 to go in the half.

The Valkuries stormed back, however, getting five points to pull within six at intermission. Denton scored first and Hall canned a shot from the corner cutting the lead to 16-9. Denton sank a free shot for the Conley girls. At the half, North Pitt still led 16-10.

Susan James made a charity shot for North Pitt as the second half got underway. Jane Hall matched the point with a shot from the stripe but that was as close as the Valkuries could get as the Big Orange moved out to a 12-point lead on baskets by Susan and Joy James. Hollis hit with 5:10 left in the third period making it 23-11. Denton scored from outside but Hollis got half of the points back on a free shot.

Jane Hall sank three straight jumpers from the corner but each shot was matched by the Pant-HERS. June Hall made a three point play as the third frame drew to a close to pull to 29-22.

North Pitt outscored the Valkuries in the last period 9-6 to get the win.

Hollis led the Pant-HERS with 14 points. June Hall led the Valkuries scorers with 11.

The Vikings had more trouble with the North Pitt boys, as the Panthers tied the game several times and often drew withing striking range. The Vikings rallied each time to put some distance between the two teams and went on to take their 13th win.

The Panthers scored first on Daniel Highsmith's outside jumper. Larry Daniels tied it up for the Vikings with a pair of free throws, 2-2. Mike Burroughs put the Panthers back in front on a bucket from the stripe. The Conley boys retied it when Mike Sutton scored on a fast break.

The two teams swapped free throws and then Burroughs sank two charity shots but the Vikings got a four point play from Tommy Roach and Sutton to put them in the lead, 9-5. They held on to that lead for the rest of the quarter. Roach sank a pair of jumpers and three free shots and a basket by Burroughs to put the Panthers three points down, 14-11. Two field goals put the Vikings back out by four at the end of the period, 18-14.

The Panthers tied the game in the second quarter as Herbert Wright hit with 4:38 to play in the half. Conley went back ahead on a free throw by David Pugh but Burroughs connected again to move the Panthers past the Vikings again. That was the last time they led in the game. The Vikings went ahead to stay on a basket by Sutton. A field goal by Pugh and another one by Sutton increased the Conley lead to 31-26 with 2:33 left in the half.

Four more free shots by the Vikings and buckets by Burroughs and Ronnie Briley finished the first half scoring.

The Vikings continued to pour it on in the third quarter as they moved out to an 11 point lead 45-34 with four minutes to go in the third period. The Panthers pulled within seven, 47-40, but the Viking guards Roach and Sutton, scored making it 51-40.

North Pitt edged the Vikings in the last frame, 18-14, but could not overtake them.

Pugh paced the Vikings with 15 points. Sutton dumped in 14, Roach 12 and both Dwight Hawkins and Daniels scored 10.

Burroughs led all the scorers with 19. Highsmith had 15 for the Panthers.

The loss drops North Pitt to 6-12 while Conley holds to third place at 13-6. The Big Orange are 19-0 on the season while the Valkuries are 13-5.

In the girls game, Williamston made it no-contest in the first period of play, zooming off to an 18-7 lead by the end of the frame. They outhit Murfreesboro, 13-7 in the second period, and held a 31-14 lead at the half.

Williamston continued to dominate things in the second half. They outhit their host, 14-6, in the third frame, moving the lead out to 45-20, and then outscored them, 21-8, in the final quarter.

In the boys contest, Williamston also pushed away to gain an early, but decisive lead. They outhit Murfreesboro, 15-7, in the first period, and then did it again, 11-10, in the second. That left the Tigers in control, 26-17, at the half.

Williamston outshot Murfreesboro, 18-10, in the third quarter, and rolled up a 44-27 lead as the final period began. Williamston again outhit their hosts, 19-10, to wrap it up.

Dwight Ange led Williamston with 15 points, while Rufus Speller had 12 and Albert Bonds had 11. For Murfreesboro, no one hit double figures.

Ayden-Grifton Ices Tie For First Place

LITTLEFIELD — The Ayden-Grifton Chargers clinched no worse than a tie for the Eastern Carolina Conference's first basketball championship last night with an 80-65 victory over league doormat Southern Wayne.

The win left Ayden-Grifton with a 14-3 record with only a game left. Only Farmville, 13-4, can catch them. A win by the Chargers Friday against Aycock, or a loss by Farmville Central, which plays North Pitt, would give them the title outright.

Ayden-Grifton roared away to a commanding lead in the first period, and never was in trouble after that. By the end of the first period, the Chargers held a 23-4 lead. Southern Wayne put on a small rally in the second period, outscoring the Chargers, 19-13, but that still left them down, 36-23 at halftine.

In the third period, Ayden-Grifton again pulled away, this time hitting a 27-22 margin in scoring. That ran the score out to 63-45. Southern again held an advantage in scoring in the final frame, 20-17, but it wasn't nearly enough.

Melvin Stewart led A-G with 17 points, whild Carlton McCarter had 14, Danny Garris had 12 and Willie Stewart and Jesse Smith each had 11. Edward Vann led Southern with 22, while Ed Loftin had 16 and James Murray had 14.

In the girls contest, Ayden-Grifton eased out into a 13-12 lead in the first period, then outscored Southern, 17-14, in the second stanza. That left the Chargerettes ahead, 30-26 at halftime.

But Southern came back out and outshot Ayden-Grifton, 12-6, in the second period, and took the lead 38-26 as the period ended. They again outhustled A-G, 14-5, in the final period, to pull away and win.

Jackie Bryant led Southern with 19, while Terry Bryan had 17. Deborah Harris paced Ayden-Grifton with 11 points.

Farmville Rips Greene Central

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central High School stayed hot on the heels of Ayden-Grifton High School, downing Greene Central, 62-55, last night. The Greene Central girls, however, beat Farmville's lassies, 25-24.

The Jaguar victory kept them within reach of Ayden-Grifton, but with only one game left, Farmville can do no more than tie for the Eastern Carolina Conference title. And A-G must lose to C. B. Aycock while the Jaguars win for it to happen.

In the girls game, Farmville pushed out into a 7-2 lead over Greene in the first period. The Ewes started a comeback in the second frame, however, outhitting Farmville, 4-2. That cut the Lady Jaguar lead to 9-6 at halftime.

In the third period, the Ewes continued to outhit Farmville, 9-5, and that pushed them into a one-point lead, 15-14. Greene Central then pulled away to lead by several points in the final period, before Farmville rallied and cut it back to one point right at the end.

Keith Gay led Greene with 11 points, while Pam Monk had 10 for Farmville.

In the boys contest, Farmville roared away to a 20-8 lead in the first period, and was never in trouble. The Jaguars outhit the Rams, 15-11, in the second frame to hold a 35-19 edge at the half.

The Jaguars continued to pull away in the third period as they outscored the Rams, 11-8. That ran the lead out to 46-27. The Rams finally put on a rally against the reserves, 28-16, in the final period, but it had no effect on the outcome.

McCoy Williams and Melvin Bunch led Farmville with 11 points each, while Stevie Williamson paced Greene with 22. Ervin Spivey added 11 and Lacy Ward, 10, for the Rams.

Speed Skater Gains First U.S. Gold

By JACK STEVENSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

SAPPORO, Japan (AP) — "An Olympic gold medal is a life's ambition come true," beamed Dianne Holum, bringing the United States its first in the 11th Winter Games Wednesday with a speed-skating triumph that crowned a decade of dreaming and dedication.

But another Great American Dream of a gold dissolved as the U.S. hockey team, a brash band of upstarts who had blitzed their way into medal contention, crumbled in a nightmarish 7-2 loss to the Soviet Union.

Miss Holum, a chunky, 20-year-old whiz from Northbrook, Ill., whipped around the 1,500-meter run in the Makomanai Outdoor Rink in an Olympic record-breaking 2 minutes, 20.85 seconds.

Even as she swayed toward the finish line, her arms swinging rhythmically, she wore a smile that showed her sense of victory.

Moments later, seemingly laughing and crying at the same time, she clasped her hands above her woolly blue cap and skated ecstatically into a shouting, cheering throng of American teammates and coaches.

And those teammates, including Anne Henning, have a chance to double the U.S. gold standard of the past two Olympics—one apiece in the 1964 Games at Innsbruck and 1968 at Grenoble. Miss Henning, also from Northbrook, is favored in the 500 and 1,000 meters.

The American hockey team, on the other hand, was anything but favored to win a medal at all, much less repeat its astounding gold medal conquest of 1960 at Squaw Valley.

But after an opening-game loss, the Yanks mangled second-ranked Czechoslovakia 5-1 and visions of an even greater upset were born.

Then the top-rated, defending champion Russians went to work today, shredding any semblance of an American attack and swarming around the U.S. territory almost at will.

After one period it was 2-0 and, by the end of the second, it was 5-0. The epitome of futility came on the fifth goal when defenseman Frank Sanders of St. Paul, Minn., intercepted a Russian pass, only to see it ricochet off his stick, past startled goalie Mike Curran and into the U.S. net.

Sanders made up for that with a goal into the Soviet net on a pass from Tim Sheehy early in the third period but the Russian machine rolled on, connecting twice more before Ron Naslund tallied with four minutes remaining.

"It was a very tough game," Williamson said. "Our boys, however, played courageously. It was the best game we've played against Russia in seven or eight years.

"We'd like to win a medal," he added, "and to do that we have to beat Finland. The Finns were idle today. That means we couldn't afford to exhaust ourselves in this game." The Americans face Finland Thursday night.

The margin of victory by Miss Holum, who broke the previous Olympic mark of 2:22.40, was a mere fifth of a second over Stein Baas-Kaiser, the world record holder from The Netherlands who finished in 2:21.05. The bronze went to Atje Kevlen-Deelstra, also of The Netherlands, with 2:22.05.

As soon as the race ended, Miss Holum was looking ahead. "There are two more races to come and I can't relax," she said."

"I'm an all-around skater. I started out as a sprinter but all these years I have been trying to build up my times over the longer distances. I vowed I would be a champion in the 1,500 and even the 3,000."

With the 1,500 tucked neatly away, Miss Holum goes after not only Saturday's gold in the 3,000 meters, but after the 1,000-meter title a day earlier.

She said she planned her race very carefully and could remember every second of it—not unlike the life she has led to reach this crowning moment.

At three, she was already taking figure skating lessons. But it was seven years later, when her family moved to Northbrook, a Chicago suburb, that her course was set.

She was within reach of a speed skating rink—and put it to good use. By 16 she was a medalist, taking the silver in the 500 meters and the bronze in the 1,000 at Grenoble. But she still wasn't satisfied.

Saving her earnings as a waitress, she went to Holland, lived a spartan life and trained fiercely under Dutch coaches for Sapporo.

"Being a sprinter doesn't get you very far in the Olympics," she said. "I was determined to build myself up for the longer distances." She did—and got far enough to reach the top.
General: top.

But from the laughing, triumphant moment, she was brought to the verge of tears at a post-race interview.

"What does your gold medal mean to soldiers in Vietnam?" a North Korean reporter asked.

"I don't understand," she replied. "What does that have to do with speed skating?"

"About Mr. Nixon ... " the North Korean continued—then Dianne's father, Edward, stepped forward. "Let's go, Dianne," he said. And as he led his distraught daughter from the room, Japanese press officials escorted the shouting, wildly gesturing North Korean away.

Two other sets of medals were also handed out in Wednesday's competition as Russia's Galina Koulacova became the Games' third multiple-gold winner by taking the women's five-kilometer cross country and Magnar Solberg of Norway repeated his 1968 victory in the grueling individual biathlon.

In the day's other major action, Ondrej Nepela of Czechoslovakia took the lead in men's figure skating with perfect scores in the compulsories and Erik Haaker of Norway was the surprise leader after the first of two runs in the men's giant slalom Alpine skiing.

Miss Koulacova, who picked up her first gold in the 10-kilometer cross country, joined the elite company of Switzerland's Marie-Therese Nadig, who grabbed a pair in the woman's downhill and giant slalom, and Ard Schenk of The Netherlands, a triple winner in speed skating.

She covered the five kilometers in 17:00.50, a slim five seconds ahead of Finland's Marjatta Kajosmaa and nearly seven in front of bronze medalist Helena Sikolova of Czechoslovakia.

Solberg, a 35-year-old policeman, was timed in 1:15.55.50 in the biathlon, a 20-kilometer cross-country race in which each competitor, with a rifle on his back, stops at four points to fire five shots at targets 150 meters away. East Germany's Hansjorg Knauthe was second and Lars-Goran Arwidson of Sweden third.

In the men's compulsories, which count 50 per cent toward the medals to be determined by Friday's free skating, the best the United States could do was the fifth place by Ken Shelley of Downey, Calif., who was just ahead of John Mischa Petkevich, the flashy Harvard premed student from Great Falls, Mont.

Costs May Be Up, But Cars Are At The Track

By BLOYS BRITT
AP Auto Racing Writer

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The cost of living is up, and so is the price of race cars. But you'd never believe it from the looks of things in the Daytona International Speedway garage.

"They are coming out of the stump holes," exlaimed John Marcum of Toledo, Ohio, president of the Auto Racing Club of America. "I have never seen this many race cars in one place in 30 years of racing."

He was referring to the steady stream of car transporters going through the gates into the speedway, and the unending line of racers moving through the inspection line.

In all, there are 293 entries for the four remaining races of the speed weeks program, all for stock cars. That's about 100 more than will find positions in any of the race fields.

While the flood of arrivals continued, 1970 Grand National champion Bobby Isaac was the first of the stock car pilots to get practice time on the 2.5 mile trioval speedway.

He was clocked at 178.217 miles per hour in a shakedown not intended to show what he could do under full power.

Several other drivers ran laps in their new cars, including three - time Grand National champ David Pearson who is entered in a new Ford built by master mechanic Bud Moore.

Marcum's ARCA late model machines will run a 300-mile race Sunday, worth $35,000. His entry list had mounted to more than 50 by the weekend, though only 40 drivers can make the start.

"I have already started building an alternate list," the arca chieftan said. "My first obligation is to take care of the drivers who run for me regularly in the Midwest. I don't know what I'm going to do with the overflow."

Among his alternates is Charles "Red" Farmer of Hueytown, Ala., the national sportsman racing champion the last three years.

"It's a shame not to be able to guarantee a driver like Farmer a chance at a starting spot," Marcum moaned. "He'd make the race more interesting because my boys like to take on the Southerners."

But if Marcum had problems, the same could be said for the other three races next week.

As of Tuesday, 82 hopefuls had filed entrys for the Permatex 300 for late model sportsman cars scheduled Feb. 19. That's more than the best previous entry. Only 40 can start the Permatex.

Meanwhile, 96 machines were on the list for the $200,000 Daytona 500 Feb. 20. The best previous entry was 89 in 1970.

Notably absent from the Daytona 500 list are 1970 winner Pete Hamilton, 1969 champion Leroy Yarbrough and former racing great Fred Lorenzen, neither of whom has announced plans for the season.

The crowded entry for the 500 will be easier to solve than the others. The two front row positions in the 44-car field will be settled in qualifying runs Saturday.

'Class Demarcation' Is Felt By Foreign Workers

EDITOR'S NOTE—The two countries that suffered the worst defeats in World War II are industrial giants heavily involved in exports while the victorious United States has a trade deficit. One part of this anomaly focuses on the attitude of American workers in comparison with those of Germany and Japan. This article looks at some of the conditions abroad, and shows that the German labor force has become more restive.

By DAVID MINTHORN
Associated Press Writer

HOECHST, Germany (AP) — Stout, cheerful and steady, Werner Sieg seems to personify the industriousness behind West Germany's postwar "economic miracle."

As a reminder of his own postwar advancement, Sieg keeps a framed color photograph taken in 1950. It shows him loading blood-flecked entrails of slaughtered cows onto a conveyor belt at a hormone factory —Farbwerk Hoechst.

He says he was lucky to have a job even though it paid only one mark, then 27 cents, an hour.

Sieg's current hourly pay of 8.26 marks or $2.56 is well above average for a German industrial worker. Night school technology courses qualified him to operate a pumping station in the plant's organic chemical section, where hormones such as insulin are extracted from animal glands.

"In general I am satisfied with my job," says Sieg.

But he admits to feeling irked by Germany's traditional class demarcations.

Sieg is an "arbeiter" or a blue collar worker, the lowest German social class.

"Angestelltes" or white collar employes instinctively look down upon him, although his earnings may equal or surpass theirs. On the other hand, youthful members of the new left glorify the arbeiter as the mainstay of socialistic society.

Every day Sieg and 15,000 colleagues are reminded of the arbeiter label when they show identification cards to guards at the plant gage.

"As you see," Sieg said, "my card number begins with zero. Thus I am immediately recognized as arbeiter. The cards of Angestellte do not begin with zero".

Nor do the plant's 15,000 white collar employes punch time clocks. They receive fixed monthly salaries.

The Hoechst complex is a smoky maze of drab brick plants, high-rise offices and storage tanks built along the polluted Main River. It is part of the former I.G. Farben chemical cartel which the Allies broke up because of heavy involvement in the Nazi war effort.

German workers, like those in Japan, are accustomed to greater paternalism than many American employers show.

As with large Japanese companies, Farbwerk Hoechst owns or leases 6,000 apartments near the plant which it offers at reduced rents to its workers. Apprentices are housed in dormitories on the plant grounds. Hot meals in company cafeterias cost 50 cents or less.

Many Japanese industrial workers retire at age 55 on lump-sum company pensions. Most German companies offer pension plans that supplement state old-age insurance, both being financed half and half by the company and the worker. Retirement is at age 65 brings monthly checks of up to 60 per cent of the worker's highest wage.

German and Japanese companies encourage workers to exceed production quotas by offering hourly premiums, annual bonuses and profits sharing plans.

For example, Sieg's base hourly wage in $1.83. In addition he receives a production premium of 40 per cent of his base pay, boosting his hourly earnings to $2.56.

Productivity figures indicate that German and Japanese workers tend to be more efficient than Americans. They avoid changes in employers and settle most wage disputes without resorting to strikes.

Sieg, who considers himself a moderate on pay questions, says: "We've never had a strike at Farbwerk Hoechst but I think it is essential we have the possibility to strike."

Speaking for management, Horst Legatis, a Hoechst personnel executive, says: "There is a growing radicalism in West German labor unions over the question of distribution of wealth."

Another indicator of changing industrial climates in West Germany and Japan is the increasing unwillingness of youths to take jobs in factories or traditional crafts.

A survey by Japan's Labor Ministry showed that most high school and university graduates prefer office desk work to plant jobs. They consider desk work clean and plant jobs somewhat dirty.

West German youths are more technologically oriented, and they prefer high-skill careers such as engineering, according to the federal labor office. A survey showed only one-tenth wanted jobs in crafts or production and another tenth wanted office positions.

Will Observe FFA Week

Members of the Ayden-Grifton Chapter of Future Farmers of America will join over 430,000 FFA members in celebrating National FFA Week which begins Feb. 19.

According to the presidents of the local chapter, Chris Parisher and Grover Cannon, the Ayden-Grifton chapter has made plans for special activities to support the FFA theme "Youth with a Purpose." Plans include a trip to Rocky Mount to see Watson Seed Farm and a visit to the FFA Camp at White Lake during the summer.

FFA Advisor J.J. Brown said FFA Week always includes George Washington's birthday in observance of his leadership in promoting scientific farming practices.

Organized in 1928, FFA promotes leadership, coopertion and citizenship among high school vocational agricultural students. The FFA Foundation Awards Program provides chapter, state and national recognition for supervised programs of agricultural production, marketing, processing and service.

Businesses Eye Women's Role

NEW YORK (UPI)—More than 100 businesses which could be operated by women alone will be featured at the 14th annual "Start Your Own Business Exposition" which opens Feb. 10 at the New York City Coliseum.

"The attendance by both single and married women at the Start Your Own Business Exposition has been growing by leaps and bounds since it first started in 1959," said George Arons, president of Enterprise Expositions, producers of the show. "Long before the women's liberation movement came into being, women took on the challenges of business opportunities once considered only to be for their male counterparts. Now that they have proved they could be equally if not more successful men, other women are being encouraged to follow their footsteps."

Filipino Export Targets Shift

MANILA (UPI) — Philippine coconut exporters shifted to the more lucrative European market last year, "obviously in an effort to avoid the import surcharge of the United States," the Manila Chronicle newspaper says.

Exports to Europe in 1971 totaled $122.6 million, about $345,000 more than shipments to the United States, the newspaper said.

Poultry Inspectors Fear Harassment By Superiors

By TOM WELLS
Associated Press Writer

Federal poultry inspectors say the reason they don't always inspect rigidly is because they fear harassment by superiors who want to create an image of smooth operations.

Complaints from plant managers about inspection being too rough do not create a picture of smooth operations, the inspectors say.

An in-depth look at the case of a U.S. Department of Agriculture veterinarian who refused to accept inaction by superiors as the only alternative appears to back up what the inspectors say about harassment.

On Oct. 28, 1970, the veterinarian, stationed at a plant in eastern North Carolina, wrote a letter to consumer crusader Ralph Nader.

The veterinarian said broilers with fecal material and other filth on them were being sold to consumers because his superiors wouldn't back him up in enforcing regulations.

Sometimes 60 per cent of the processed product was unfit for human consumption, the vet said.

He was transferred to another plant after USDA officials learned of Nader's involvement. The vet called the transfer harassment. He had to work in a plant 100 miles from his home.

He was able to get home only once a week and was not paid for his travel time to and from the plant.

The vet appealed the transfer decision through USDA channels, but lost.

Asking that his name not be used, the vet signed statements about his experience and made available to a reporter the numerous documents used by a Nader attorney who appealed his case and by the USDA.

The vet's superiors admitted in letters to their superiors during the controversy and later in interviews, that half the chickens turned out by the plant were unacceptable. The superiors also admitted that the plant's management "baited" the veterinarian into taking drastic enforcement action. Each time that happened, they said, management would claim the vet was looking for revenge because of personality conflicts with plant officials.

USDA records reveal that no letter of warning was sent to the plant during that period and no legal action was taken by the USDA against the plant.

But despite the admissions that the veterinarian was "baited" and that the plant was producing dirty chickens, the superiors sent the veterinarian numerous letters warning him to "watch his tongue" with plant personnel and emphasizing the importance of harmonious relations between the plant and the inspection service.

Speed of production in the poultry industry, as in any industry, is important. USDA regulations give veterinarians the power to cut that production speed if so many chickens are dirty that inspectors are having difficulty catching all of them.

However, the veterinarian charged in his appeal, and his six inspectors said in a written statement sent to USDA officials, that one of the vet's superiors gave to the company the power to control production speed.

That meant the company could produce dirty chickens at whatever speed it wanted. The vet's only recourse was to order the products reworked when he found them to be dirty.

Each time he did this, he said, the company officials would again accuse him of trying "to get even."

Each time the company complained, the vet would get a letter of warning from USDA superiors. Unable to control production speed, and under fire from superiors when he ordered the product reworked, he said he simply began to approve the unfit chickens for market.

Dr. A. K. Spencer, one of the vet's district superiors, denied charges by the veterinarian and inspectors that he undercut inspection power by giving production speed control to the company.

Spencer said in an interview that he met with the vet and inspectors, and suggested they try "other methods" of assuring a clean product than by reducing line speed.

Spencer said he visited the plant several times following complaints from company officials about the veterinarian. Spencer said he talked numerous times with plant managers. The vet was not permitted to sit in.

Whether Spencer countermanded regulations and gave control of production speed to the company is a disputed matter. But on Dec. 14, 1970, when the situation reached a crisis, the plant obviously felt it had such power.

The veterinarian said he found poultry so unfit that he ordered the line stopped altogether. The company refused.

In fact, the company went ahead and produced another 13,000 pounds of poultry even though the veterinarian had withdrawn his inspectors from the line.

That meant the product was uninspected and therefore had to be condemned by the veterinarian. USDA officials were called to investigate.

The veterinarian claimed the company had processed the poultry, knowing it would be condemned, simply to precipitate the crisis.

Spencer agreed in an interview that the company appeared to be trying to do just that.

And that wasn't the first time company officials had tried to put the veterinarian in a bad position, according to other USDA officials.

In a report filed by Dr. C. Bowen Parsons, assistant deputy director of slaughter, Parsons said three of the veterinarian's superiors in addition to Spencer believed that the plant at times "baited the veterinarian, "knowing his reactions would result in embarrassing situations." Parsons said the vet's superiors agreed that the vet's "station could be considered a problem plant."

Spencer was asked in the interviews if he thought pressure from the plant management's superiors for higher profits was the cause of the "baiting."

"I'd rather suspect that it was," Spencer replied.

The result of this "baiting," Spencer said, was that the vet "would get upset." Spencer admitted that the job would have been difficult for any USDA veterinarian "considering it was this particular company."

Nevertheless, the Consumer and Marketing Service transfered the veterinarian to the plant that required hours of travel to and from home.

Spencer says "there are no problems" at the "problem" plant now.

Inspectors who have learned of the case say the incident is only one of many they have seen in long years of inspection in which the service does not support its employes. The service denies such charges.

The inspectors say such action puts all inspectors on notice that it is safer to underinspect.

The more than 220 federal poultry inspectors in North Carolina and even those in other states know of the incident through the American Federation of Government Employes. The North Carolina Poultry Inspectors Union under that group has officially protested the veterinarian's transfer.

"When an inspector in charge has the initiative to do the job he was hired and paid to do, we request more firm support, rather than criticism, reprehension, suspension or transfering," said Ray Tulburt, president of the North Carolina Poultry Inspectors, in a letter to Harner.

The incident came, ironically, at about the time the USDA had issued a memorandum assuring inspectors that they would be backed up on decisions.

Robert Vaughn, the Nader attorney who handled the veterinarian's appeal, says such memorandums do little good when the inspection service does not back its words with actions.

Say Check-Up Is Rarely Done

By TOM WELLS
Associated Press Writer

Regulations for the U.S. Department of Agriculture's poultry inspection program require that USDA employes look at chickens and turkeys before they are slaughtered to see if they are ill.

The process is called an antemortem inspection.

But, according to some North Carolina inspectors who are supposed to be doing the checking, the antemortem is rarely done. And, even if it is done and poultry is found to be sick, they say in some instances the poultry is processed anyway.

One such incident occurred at a North Carolina plant that processes about 40,000 chickens each day, according to an inspector at the plant.

"The birds couldn't be processed on a Thursday because of dirty water at another plant, so they were brought to ours," the inspector said in an interview and later in a signed statement. "They arrived too late to be processed before the weekend, so they were just left on the truck in the hot sun until Monday morning.

"By then it was terrible," he said. "There were about 5,500. I guess about 1,000 of them were dead by Monday morning. The live ones were pecking the dead ones they were so hungry and thirsty.

"The assistant OIC (a USDA officer in charge who is a veterinarian) refused to go out and look at them," the inspector said. "He told me we weren't set up like red meat inspectors who have time to go out and look at them."

The inspector said the dead chickens were disposed of and the others were "run through the line. They were about half dead before being slaughtered. We condemned about 1,500 of them and approved the rest (about 3,000)."

Dr. George Harner, the director of the USDA's Mid-Atlantic region for poultry and meat inspection, said, "We have not come up with a very good antemortem for 100,000 chickens a day. I'll be the first to admit that.

"About all you can do is just walk around a truck while they're on it," he said, "and you can't tell much doing that.

"Generally, I think they (the antemortem inspections) are being done," he added. "But knowing human nature, some vets are doing more than others."

SEATBELT SAFETY

CHICAGO (UPI)—Safety experts say seatbelts lengthen the stopping distance of the body that is suddenly jerked during an auto accident. This means that instead of having all the force let out of the spot where the passenger's head hits the dashboard, the stopping energy is spread over a wider area.

The Worry Clinic

Secret Behind Abnormal Fear

Polly has an abnormal fear of insanity, as well as cancer of the womb. She knows why! But has not confessed her sex secret to her doting husband. So scrapbook this case, for it is a classic in the realm of female psychiatry! And send for the booklet below!

By GEORGE W. CRANE
Ph.D., M.D.

Case S-593: Polly D., aged 27, has a sex problem.

"Dr. Crane," her worried husband began. "Polly is a beautiful girl and quite talented.

"For she graduated from college with honors and planned on a career in music.

"But I persuaded her to marry, though she still retained hope of gaining fame as a musician.

"Now she seems to have forgotten her career and even her household duties, for she constantly tells me she is losing her mind.

"She cries and claims she is unable to remember things, which is one of the reasons she is sure she must be going crazy.

"Sometimes she also thinks she must have cancer of the womb, but most of the time she frets about loss of her sanity.

"Dr. Crane, what makes Polly act like this?"

Guilt Reactions

Polly's case is a classic regarding female sex guilt so study it carefully!

And I'll compress a lengthy analysis of her problem by reminding you readers that mankind has long associated dramatic ailments with God's form of punishment.

If Polly had been a forger or an embezzler or auto thief or even a counterfeiter, she would have dreaded the police or FBI, instead of the Almighty.

But when people violate what are universally considered to be Divine Laws, they seldom fear the police or even germ diseases such as typhoid or tuberculosis or measles, etc.

For God, is linked primarily with ailments that strike down their victim in a sudden manner.

The Almight is thus regarded as using the lightning type of punishment for sinners.

And such "lightning" ailments are strokes of apoplexy and coronary heart attacks.

Plus insanity!

And cancer, especially of the womb.

"I have sinned against God," Polly later confessed to me, "so I just know God is going to punish me!"

That's when Polly began to sprout the symptoms which she felt were linked with insanity, such as forgetfulness.

But occasionally she would dread cancer of the womb. Why?

Well, she has not wanted to become pregnant, for she still cherished a musical career.

But when she found she was going to have a baby, she didn't inform her doting husband but arranged for a secret abortion.

Later, her conscience began to twinge, for the more she thought about what she had done, the more she felt she was a heinous type of woman.

"Dr. Crane," she moaned, "can you imagine a mother deliberately killing her own baby? Surely I must have been insane!"

If Polly had confessed her problem to her husband, that would have reduced her inner tension. But she feared losing his love in so doing.

By keeping her secret bottled up inside herself, she then sprouted what she thought were symptoms of insanity.

"For I OUGHT to be punished by God," was her guilt reaction.

Many women also dread lest the Almight will kill them via the very portion of their anatomy which was involved in their sin, which explains why women who experience abortions often have an abnormal terror about later cancer of the uterus!

So send for my booklet "How to Prevent Nervous Breakdowns," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 cents.

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

Rabbi Is Among Panel Speakers

"Being A Jew In '72" will be the topic at a panel discussion on Thursday, at 8:00 P. M. in the Legislature Room No 308 in Wright Auditorium.

Sponsored by the Campus Ministers Association, the panel presentation will be made by Rabbi Max Selinger of Temple Beth El in Kinston, with Mrs. Dan Jacobson of Greenville and Dr. Norman Rosenfeld of the ECU faculty.

Announcement of the panel was made by Presbyterian Campus Minister John N. Miller. The purpose of the discussion, Miller said, is to provide information and opinion on issues facing Jews around the world today. The Campus Ministers urge all interested persons to take advantage of this opportunity to discuss Judaism.

See Large Drop In Diptheria

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Health officials recorded a drop of about 75 per cent in the diptheria rate here for 1971 as the city rebounded from the epidemic that struck the year before.

There were 54 cases with one death in 1971, compared to 201 cases with three deaths in 1970.

As the 1970 epidemic spread, doctors joined with nurses and military medics to man immunization clinics, dispensing vaccine to 577,917 persons.

The first year that U.S. combat statistics were recorded in Vietnam was 1961, when the United States lost 11 servicemen killed.

Opening lead: Six of ♠ A sound sequence of bids landed North and South in the only slam venture that could succeed.

When North responded to the opening one heart bid with two no trump, announcing a balanced hand containing 13-15 high card points, South's thoughts turned to slam, inasmuch as he had every top control plus attractive distribution. With a void, he preferred to play a suit contract and, in an effort to uncover the best fit, he resolved to show every feature of his hand.

His initial rebid was three diamonds over which North gave a heart preference as a temporizing measure to await his partner's next move. South now bid four clubs and North showed his diamond support.

South might well have gone on to slam himself at this point, inasmuch as his partner had cooperated so fully with his efforts. However, he was still not certain of where to play the hand, and in an effort to give North an opportunity to clarify his previous calls, South made a cue bid of four spades. There was little risk attended with this action since hearts had been ostensibly agreed on by North's earlier preference.

North's holding had taken on added lustre as the auction developed since he obviously had so many fitting cards for his partner, and he decided to proceed directly to slam. Holding his best support in diamonds, North favored that suit and in order to correct the impression created by his initial preference for hearts, he leaped to six diamonds. South was content to abide by his partner's judgment and he passed.

The play presented no serious problems. South ruffed the opening spade lead and crossed over to the dummy twice in clubs to trump out the remaining spades. The ace of diamonds was cashed, and the North hand was reentered with the king of hearts to play the king and another diamond, giving East his trump trick. Declarer's long club provided a parking place for dummy's losing heart.

Observe that if the slam is played in hearts, there is no way for declarer to avoid losing a diamond as well as a heart.

Grand Opening Activities Scheduled By New Store

Skip Collier, general manager and vice president of Fashion Fabrics, 333 Arlington Blvd. here, announced that grand opening activities will be underway at the new store Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Collier reported that ribbon cutting ceremonies Thursday morning at 10 a.m. will launch the three-day observance. Greenville Mayor S. Eugene West is expected to take part in the ribbon cutting, Collier said.

The general manager announced that Miss Teenage North Carolina, Angela Tripp of Raleigh, will be on hand through business hours Saturday.

With 4,500 square feet of space in the new store, Collier said the business will offer complete selections of dress, drapery, bridal and lingerie fabrics as well as a full line of sewing notions and accessories.

Collier said that Fashion Fabrics, operating from 10 a.m. until 9 p.m. Monday through Saturday, will employ six, including two home economics graduates who are qualified in all phases of sewing.

The fabric center, the first business to locate on the recently completed Arlington Blvd., opened Friday and is now completely stocked and prepared for grand opening, Collier reported. Customers, he added will find ample parking at the new store.

Collier, who has resided in Greenville some 12 years, is a graduate of East Carolina University. He has nine years experience in the sewing field.

California And Nevada Agree On Plan To Keep Lake Tahoe Water Pure

By BILL MARTIN
Associated Press Writer

SOUTH LAKE TAHOE, Calif. (AP) — California and Nevada, after years of painstaking work, have adopted an environmental plan they hope will keep Lake Tahoe as pure as the snow on its shores.

Approval of the plan by the bistate Tahoe Regional Planning Agency capped a two-year effort which included a computerized analysis of every foot of the 500-square-mile basin.

Although environmentalists and agency members hailed adoption of the plan as a major step to prevent the lake's pollution and to provide for orderly development, they cautioned it is only a framework and much is yet to be done,

The largest alpine lake in the world in terms of dimensions, depth and volume of water, Lake Tahoe averages 980 feet in depth. There are dropoffs so sharp that a boat may be in 25 feet of water one instant and 1,400 feet the next.

The crystalline clarity of the waters and their great depth combine to give Lake Tahoe its famed royal blue color. Mark Twain called the lake "the rarest picture the whole earth affords."

As such, the Lake Tahoe Basin is visited annually by hundreds of thousands of people. A four-hour drive from San Francisco and a scenic 30 minutes from the Reno airport, the Tahoe area has become one of the most popular resorts in the world. It combines natural beauty with summer and winter sports, and, on the Nevada side, casino gambling.

Summer homes, apartments, condominiums, resorts, luxury hotels and commercial complexes have risen throughout the basin, bringing congestion and severely marring the landscape in some places.

Studies during the past decade indicated deteriorating water quality and authorities said land erosion caused by development around the lake dirtied the water in some areas and affected lake and stream biology.

To combat the encroachment of 20th century living, conservationists and lake residents have long sought some way of preserving the lake's clarity and maintaining the surrounding forestland.

Planning efforts took a major step two years ago with the creation of the Tahoe Regional Planning Agency.

The agency—made up of five Californians and five Nevadans—was charged with succeeding where other efforts had failed.

The plan it adopted last Christmas includes a number of multicolored maps and an accompanying narrative. Still to be approved are four key ordinances covering land use, subdivisions, the lake shoreline and grading which will give the plan the force of law.

And yet to be decided is the key question of who will have authority to issue construction permits, the Tahoe Regional Planning Agency or the six individual counties within the basin? And how much review power will the agency have if the countries have permit-issuing authority?

These and other questions will be tackled in the next few months, but at least there now is a plan.

Crucial to the effectiveness of the plan are "environmental constraints," which agency executive officer Dick Heikka says are unique in modern planning. Heikka is the chief architect of the plan.

The constraints, or land capabilities, allow development only in areas where the land can withstand it without environmental damage. The land capabilities were arrived at through what planners called an "ecological inventory" of the Tahoe Basin. Data on seven land variables—topography, geomorphology, geology, climate, soils, vegetation and hydrology—was collected and fed into a computer at the University of California.

Aided by the computer-produced information, planners have put land within the basin into one of seven land capability districts, ranging from general forest to commercial. Specific allowable uses are identified for each district, based on the land's sensitivity to development.

For instance, in the general forest category, which applies to more than 80 per cent of the basin, land use is restricted almost entirely to outdoor recreation and a few agricultural uses.

When the ordinances are in effect, a developer who wants to build, say, condominiums, will have to prove that construction will not harm the ecology of the specific area.

The Corkscrew Is Standardized

CHICAGO (UPI)—Now technology was taken the guesswork out of corkscrews.

Studies have indicated that relatively few corkscrews can be relied upon to do a good job. Consequently, corkscrew experts evolved a set of standards, says Encyclopeia Britannica.

For example, a corkscrew should be long enough to penetrate fully through a long wine cork. Also the distance between threads should be uniform. The edges of the threads should not be sharp. Best results were reported with corkscrews having a diameter of .35 inch, and a distance between the threads of .40 inch, measured along the axis.

Spyglass Watch Guards Parked Cars

By WILLIAM C. HOOP

CLEVELAND (UPI) — The young man walks slowly up and down a row of parked cars, casting nervous looks from side to side. He wears dark trousers and a wool jacket with deep pockets.

The gravel crunches as he walks up beside a shiny, new hardtop. He looks around again then suddenly the hand in one of the coat pockets produces a long-bladed screwdriver which is quickly inserted between the front and rear windows and under the driver's door lock.

Under Two Minutes

Pop. The lock is up, the door is open and the man is inside, head swung under the dashboard. The screwdriver is inserted near the rear of the ignition assembly. A twist of the wrist and the assembly is apart. The screwdriver is replaced by four colored wires shorted together at one end. The wires are touched to prongs on the iginition producing a small electrical spark. The car's engine starts.

Elapsed time: one minute, 30 seconds.

The man sits up in the seat and pulls the automatic transmission lever to "drive." But he doesn't go anywhere. His path has been blocked by another car, and two men with guns in their hands who are not smiling are pulling open the door and inviting the man to step out of the car with his hands up.

"Where did you guys come from?" the man asks as his hands are cuffed behind his back. "I looked around ... I didn't see anybody for blocks."

"That's right," says one of the armed men as he slams shut the rear door of his unmarked police cruiser. "You looked everywhere but up."

Keeping Close Watch

Up, in downtown Cleveland, could be a perch on the observation deck of the terminal tower or any other tall building. Down is a maze of streets and parking lots, showrooms for car thieves shopping for a new model.

The average was about 25 cars a day stolen from the downtown area. Then the Cleveland police department activated its "spyglass detail." The result was a drop in thefts to about five a day and a lot of surprised, would-be car thieves who never saw the cop on the roof, binoculars to his eyes, walkie-talkig in hand.

"Of course, even one car stolen is too many," said Sgt. Raymond A. Wohl, who heads the "spyglass" unit. "But we are pleased with our record so far.

"Since we were activated the first of December, the rate of thefts has dropped and we had close to 30 arrests the first six week"

The unit was in service for 15 months prior to last July when financial problems in the city put it out of existence. In those 15 months, some 370 arrests were made by the unit, Wohl said.

After All Criminals

"But we don't just go after the car thieves," he said. "with a man on a building with binoculars and in touch with the rest of the team by radio, he might see a purse snatching for instance. He follows the purse snatcher in his binoculars and continually radios the man's position. Our men on the ground can then cut him off and make the arrest."

The detail currently is made up of five men, all of whom work in street clothes. Wohl said the usual procedure is to station one man on a building. The others are in two cars, cruising around but in constant contact with the "spyglass" man. At least one of the cars is an older model with out-of-state plates carrying only a radio as special police equipment.

Arrest Him Before

If a suspected car thief is potted, the object is to arrest him before he gets a chance to pull away, avoiding risky high speed chases through the downtown area.

"But we have to go like a rocket," Wohl said. "If these guys take more than a minute and a half to get in the car and get it going, then they're not very good."

The team's job is complicated by the apparent ease of getting inside a locked automobile and starting its engine and by the proliferation of break-in and ignition devices.

Wohl said that since the unit was re-activated it has confiscated dozens of blank keys to all car makes, ignition jumper wires, screwdrivers and pincher pliers for breaking into cars, ignition blocks and most recently, the newest device for removing locks, a "slaphammer," which allows the thief to pop off the door and ignition locks in a matter of seconds.

"We could use three times as many men to stop the hundreds of car thieves in the city," Wohl said.

"But the word is getting around that just because you can't see anybody doesn't mean there aren't a pair of eyes watching your every move."

..PTL. HERBERT REYNOLDS, of Cleveland's "spyglass detail", uses binoculars to keep an eye on auto parking lot below. Beside him is walkie-talkie he uses. (UPI Telephoto)

Seek Salvation With Toy City

By WILBORN HAMPTON

ROME (UPI) —On the outskirts of Padua, a team of scientists and technicians is building inch by inch a perfect scale model of Venice. The toyland minature is a tool in an effort to save the lagoon city from destruction.

Venice is sinking into the sea a centimeter a year, or about four-tenths of an inch. At that rate, the city is destined to go the way of Atlantis by 2048.

Government is Interested

Finally, after years of polemics, the government has suddenly adopted a note of critical urgency about Venice and has introduced a bill for a five-year plan to save it.

Part of the plan includes the scale model of Venice in Padua.

Work on the minature city was begun two years ago on 3.7 acres of land near the gates of Padua. However, the project was suspended a short time afterwards, primarily because political bickering had left it without funds.

Since then, workers built a roof over the project to keep the model from being inundated and destroyed by the elements before the city it is supposed to help save.

In recent months, the work has been resumed and speeded up and the model is now almost complete, along with a separate model of the mouth of the Lido, where the Adriatic spills its waters into the city.

Must be Exact

The technicians and scientists must now calibrate the model to an exact scale so that calculations made on the model will not backfire when applied to the city itself.

Once completed, the model's canals will be flooded and, with the help of a computer, scientist will try to work out a formula between the amount of water under the islands and their gradual sinking.

"The relation between the sinking of the city and the excessive extraction of water from the subsoil is beyond any reasonable doubt," Luciano Lippi, one of the team, said. "Now we are working to render this correlation in quantitative terms, that is, to assign it a definite numerical value, which we are not doing."

The formulas must take into consideration a myriad of natural phenomena, which account for the extraction of water from the subsoil.

Computer Can Tell

With this information, the computer can tell when various parts of the city will sink following a sudden rush of water from beneath it. Also, from any given weather circumstances — such as high winds, atmospheric pressures or even the phase of the moon —it can forecast high water situations in advance.

The government bill will provide 250 billion lire ($400 million). It will finance water gates at the entrances to Venice from the Adriatic and other emergency measures.

The work with the scale model will treat longer term problems such as the equation of water level and the sinking of the city. And while there is an air of urgency about the work, the builders also want to make certain they reach the right mathematical formulas.

"The Venetians have lived for centures with their feet wet," one said. But Venetians today are beginning to live with their ankles wet and time is running out.

South American Visitors Grow

NEW YORK (UPI) —South American travelers are coming to the United States in ever-increasing numbers.

Argentina, Brazil, Colombia and Venezuela provided the greatest number of travelers in 1970 —206,410 of a total of 319,202 for all South America, says Paul Hildebrandt, General Manager North America of Argentine Airlines.

There were 63,816 travelers from Venezuela, this perennial number one country in total visitors to the United States from South America.

Their Wedding To Be Broadcast

NEW YORK (UPI) — Not many average young couples get to see their wedding on a nationwide television show. New Study Of Dental Decay

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI)—The New York State Department of Health has launched a large-scale public healthy program to test the calories prevention qualities of a new clear plastic adhesive sealant which coats the pits and fissures of teeth, particularly molars. The study, supported by a contract from the National Institutes of Dental Research and conducted in Rochester, will continue for four years. The aim? To show that this treatment, combined with fluoridation, will prevent a very high percentage of calories.

Asians Face Second-Class Status In Black Africa

By JOHN PLATTER

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI)—The 367,000 Asians of East Africa have known for some tims they are in the twilight period with the black governments of Kenya, Uganda and Tanzania.

In historical terms their settlement on this side of the Indian Ocean has been short—70-odd years. British colonists first brought them over to build the railroads. Their descendants knitted themselves determinedly into the commercial sectors.

Came From India

They came from India but do not want to return. For many, at least 172,000 of them who hold British passports, the next stop is London. The rest mostly are naturalized local citizens, but the job advertisements often say "only citizens of African origin need apply," conferring a second-class status on Asians.

The general Asian dilemma—unwanted here or in Britain—has been intensified by recent developments.

Nationalization in Tanzania has forced many to leave. An accelerated system of work permits and trade licenses in Kenya is replacing them with Africans in the intricate business world they structured.

Anti-Asian Campaign

In Uganda, President Idi Amin has rounded off a four-month anti-Asian campaign by ordering the military police "to crush completely" Asians who hold political meetings.

Henceforth, said a presidential announcement, they must be treated the same as "Kondos" whom he earlier directed should be "shot on sight." (Kondos are a group of armed bandits operating in Uganda).

The Asian quandary prompted an American teacher here, Paul Theroux, to write that the prevailing mood in officialdom "seems to be that unless one's heart is black, one's heart is not in the right place."

Topping Amin's list of "sins" committed by the 80,000-strong community in Uganda was their reluctance to mingle socially with Africans and inter-marry with them. But his blun language—"they can go back the way they came, via Mombasa—Uganda will not become an Asian colony"—has driven many of them to queueing in increasing numbers at the British high commission in Kampala for entry vouchers.

Some Speak Out

Some have spoken up—like the man who wrote to Nairobi's Daily Nation: "The Asian reluctance to wed their daughters to an urban African, many of whom lack family responsibility, sentiment and sexual morality, in addition to preaching plygamy, is justified. The majority of urban Africans, corrupted by a capitalist culture, are so lacking in morals that no decent Asian lady would consider marrying them."

Travellers to Kenya speak of rape and assault upon Asian girls in the Ugandan capital, where Amin has held a census of all Asians ("We had to sign with a thumbprint, if you please") and more recently he has cancelled 12,000 citizenship applications by Asians while ordering investigations into the legality of the Ugandan passports already held by 30,000 of them.

No Exception

"Our top priority is to place the commercial sector in the hands of the indigenous African. All countries want their economies controlled by their own people and there is no reason why Uganda should be an exception," Amin told Asian representatives after a six-hour meeting when they petitioned him to act more leniently. But he predicted racial strife unless they integrated with Africans.

Unlike General Amin who rules by decree, Kenya's president Jomo Kenyatta so far has handled differences with his alien communities within existing laws—but his objectives are similar. In Tanzania, President Julius Nyere's socialist program is aimed at balancing the distribution of wealth by nationalization schemes, and he has not resorted to public campaigns. The Asian population is dwindling of its own accord.

Aside from his color and tight community activities, which differentiate him from the African population (a rough ratio in the three countries is 1 to 32) probably the single greatest factor which sets the Asian apart and angers the local population is his business acumen.

'Feel Pity'

It prompted one writer to "feel pity for the Asian ... every successful move he makes in business is held against him, as if business was synonymous with swindle."

For decates, uneasy dealings between the generally poorer Africans and the Asian in his "Dukawallah" (shopkeeper) role has earned him the reputation—deserved or not—of a mean and crafty hoarder of the nation's scant wealth.

Kenya has the largest Asian community of the three East African states—182,000 at last census—and also has the largest number of naturalized Asian citizens, 70,000. And it's from here that Britain eventually must take the greatest number of immigrants, 82,000 by British high commission estimates.

Britain has promised to accept them, but only on a quota basis of 3,000 heads of families a year from East Africa. Asian spokesmen say this will not be fast enough, and that violence and hardship may result.

Low Humidity Level Harmful

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — Cracking hardwood floors, shocking carpets and drooping house plants are sure signs of a low relative humidity problem in a house, according to Mary Dale McGregor, extension housing specialist, University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

A comfortable relative humidity level, or a measurement of moisture in the air, usually is around 35 per cent for a room temperature of about 75 degrees F.

ManyInfluences On Sofa Styles

NEW YORK (UPI)—Many factors influence the style of sofa a consumer selects. These include the ages of children, whether snacks will be eaten on it and if the sofa will be used for naps, to name only a few.

Take along a floor plan of the room to help the salesman get some idea of the wall or area where sofa will be used.

..THE ACCELERATED PROGRAM to replace Asians with Africans in the commercial sectors of Kenya, Ugnada and Tanzania may bring on a recurrence of demonstrations of the past, according to observers. (UPI Telephoto)

Tex Ritter, 66, Plans Quit Only 'Politicking'

By NANCY SHIPLEY
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Tex Ritter, whose resonant baritone has kept him one of country music's most popular personalities for 40 years, has no plans to retire — except from "politicking."

Ritter, who celebrated his 66th birthday last month, remains the strong, soft-spoken type who roped, shot and strummed his way through hundreds of movies.

He says he plans "only to retire from politicking for public office."

"Once is enough," he says solemnly, adding, "never again."

Ritter made an unsuccessful race for a U.S. Senate seat in 1970.

"Roy Acuff is about the only entertainer my age that I know who can afford to retired," Ritter says. "Roy's a millionaire."

Ritter works about 150 shows a year. "I get booked in Alaska during the winter and Florida in the summer, but I don't turn down any bookings," he laughs.

Ritter, a native of Texas, was elected as one of the first six members of the Country Music Hall of Fame. That was in 1964.

A double whammy from Nashville — an invitation to join the elite of the Grand Ole Opry and to co-host WSM's all-night country-western music show — enticed Ritter in 1965 from Hollywood's movie sets to Music City, U. S. A.

Ritter no longer appears regularly on the night-time radio show. But even prior to his move here, Ritter was a frequent visitor to the city where most of country music's recordings are made.

When he arrived in town to stay, he commented, "This is the start of my third career." His first two were in music and motion pictures, but his original aim was to be a lawyer.

He studied law at the University of Texas, where he first became interested in folklore and western music.

"I have a great collection of books on America," he jokes, adding in his big, rumbling way: "Someday I'm gonna read 'em."

Later, Ritter attended Northwestern University for a year, again studying law, but didn't complete the course.

But the law's loss was the theater's gain — and Ritter went to New York, where he started in several productions, including "Green Grow the Lilacs," which later became the musical, "Oklahoma!"

Movies were the next step — and Ritter was no slouch there, either. He made an uncounted number of movies, while maintaining a schedule of personal appearances throughout the country.

In addition to being a member of the Country Music Hall of Fame, he is also a member of the Cowboy Hall of Fame in Oklahoma. His biggest records were "High Noon," "Boll Weevil," and "Hillbilly Heaven."

X-Rated Films Out; They Bore

CORVALLIS, Ore. (AP) — X-rated movies have been banned by the Memorial Union film committee at Oregon State University because, it appears, they're boring.

Film committee chairman Mike Gerig says audience rowdiness and catcalls from the audience because of boredom during a recent presentation have resulted in an end to a short-lived attempt to establish what he called "a broader base of film offerings."

BALTIMORE (AP) — Wigs may be worn by city firemen, provided they meet the same requirements imposed on natural hair.

The Board of Fire Commissioners ruled that wigs could be worn on duty if the hairline remained above the shirt collar.

Fire detection is available now at a much lower cost than ever before. Good fire protection costs not $600, not $300 but less than $230 for the average home!

Consider these two cases: Family No. 1 had life insurance, auto insurance and fire insurance; but nothing to warn them when fire struck. They were lost; their insurance couldn't replace their lives.

Family No. 2 had a fire. Their home and belongings were destroyed. Their insurance replaced their lost items. Most importantly, they are still alive and enjoying life because they had adequate fire protection!

Return To Traditional Judaism By 'Moses Freaks'

By RICHARD STERN
Associated Press Writer

A teen-ager, his hair almost touching his shoulders, sways back and forth—eyes closed, head bowed toward his prayer book—as the cantor chants the Sabbath service at an Orthodox synagogue in New York.

In Vancouver, B.C., youngsters—some formerly into the local drug scene—stay after Saturday morning services to eat at the Synagogue because their parents do not observe the Jewish dietery laws.

In a building in Brooklyn, N.Y., another teen-ager, from a home with little Jewish tradition, sits for hours each day studying sacred Jewish writings as part of a deeply religious Hasidic community known as the Lubavitch.

Some call themselves "Moses Freaks." But others frown at the expression and explain they are merely returning to the traditional ways of Judaism, traditions abandoned in many cases by their parents.

Young rabbis in Beverly Hills, Calif., Holyoke, Mass., Monsey, N.Y., and elsewhere are talking about a return of Jewish youngsters to the more traditional ways of practicing Judaism. The return is small, they say, compared to those who do not practice, but it is a reality.

Rabbis, such as 31-year-old Stephen Riskin of Lincoln Square Synagogue in New York, add that many youngsters are finding in Judaism those things they had sought in Eastern religions and radical causes.

In Jerusalem, Bob Dylan—born Robert Zimmerman and who perhaps more than any single person symbolized the young cult—wearing a Jewish skull cap—a "Yalmulke"—visits the Wailing Wall.

Rabbi Riskin believes there has been a "polarization" among young Jews.

Many younger persons for all practical purposes have abandoned the religion, he says.

But those who do commit themselves, says Rabbi Riskin, commit themselves fully—unlike many of their parents, who according to Rabbi Meir Kahane, head of the radical Jewish Defense League, have tried "Protestanize" the religion.

The rabbis agree that the same combination of sociological forces that produced the so-called "Jesus Freaks," also have caused some Jewish youngsters to seek identity in their own traditions.

"They're sick of hypocrisy," says Rabbi Saul Berman, who from 1963 to 1969 headed a synagogue in Berkeley, Calif. "If they commit themselves, they commit themselves fully or not at all."

"We are living in a post-rational age. Science answers the how and not the why," says Rabbi Riskin.

"Kids today are more response to their hearts than their minds," adds Rabbi Morris Besdin of Yeshiva University, who heads a branch of the school for youngsters with little prior Jewish educational background.

"The synagogues have not been teaching Judaism and have not been establishing a religious community. The end has become the buildings of buildings. The rabbi has become a fund-raiser instead of a teacher," says Rabbi Riskin.

Rabbi Kahane, whose JDL claims more than 14,000 dues-paying members—more than 5,000 of them ages 15-21—adds:

"Young Jews would like to have roots. But they are alienated. In the last 40 years, a kind of bagels and lox Judaism has come into being. When a Jew moved from Bronxville to Hicksville—the city to the suburbs—he built a synagogue because he wanted his son to go with a Jewish girl—a Shirley rather than a Mary.

"Faced with this kind of Judaism, a Judaism without commitment, youngsters became alienated," says Kahane.

But now, says Rabbi Besdin, youngsters, with the help of young rabbis with whom they can identify, are discovering traditional Judaism and in it a philosophy, a community spirit and identity.

The result is that while some synagogues across the country continue to record low Saturday attendance, others report that teen-agers have doubled the attendance at Sabbath services.

Rabbis talk of youngsters walking miles to services rather than violate the traditional laws against riding on the Sabbath. They talk of a growing interest in Jewish study that goes far beyond the often disenchanting pre-Bar Mitzvah "Mother Goose" Judaism.

The National Council of Young Israel reports an upsurge in kosher eating facilities at such universities and colleges as Yale, Princeton, Johns Hopkins and the University of Texas.

Skylab Teams To Get Medicals

DENTON, Tex. (UPI)—A North Texas State University biologist will head a team of scientists at NASA in Houston that will decide which Skylab astronauts are physically able to make the mission.

Dr. Vernon Scholes of the NTSU biological sciences faculty says each astronaut will be checked for possible infections, even as late as 24 hours before blastoff.

See Bleak Year For Job Seeker

EAST LANSING, Mich. (UPI)—A survey taken by the Michigan State University Placement Bureau says employers are predicting a bleak year for the 1972 college-educated job seeker.

Total anticipated hiring is down 1.8 per cent from last year for bachelor's degree candidates. The survey showed most employers expect to offer the same salaries as last year, but some expected to boost pay levels.

Discoverer Saw Feathers Float

OROVILLE, Calif. (UPI)—Around 1820, Spanish Capt. Luis Arguello came upon a river in Northern California where numerous feathers floated.

He named the river "Rio de las Plumas" or "Feather River," which each year attracts thousands of tourists with its natural beauty.

CHEETAH CATCHER

STAMPRIEST, South West Africa (AP) — Farmer Willie Kotze is the talk of the town after catching three cheetahs by the tail. The cats had killed some of his sheep and he chased them in his pick-up 12 miles across the bush before they dropped exhausted. The cheetahs are to be sold for export.

Non-Prison Rehabilitation Is Hope Of Reformers

By CONALD E. MULLEN

NEW YORK (UPI)—A young man convicted of burglary faces two years in a state prison. Instead, he is returned to his hometown where he spends a short time in a small, minimum security facility and then is allowed to return to school or to work.

This "non-prison" rehabilitation plan for young men in the 17-to-24 age group is the hope of the California-based American Justice Institute (AJI), a nonprofit organization dedicated to penal reform.

Keep First Offenders Out

According to AJI president Richard McGee, the program is aimed at keeping first offenders out of a prison system that tends to generate repeaters, as well as ease the "now-you're-locked - up-now-you-aren't" parole system.

McGee, former director of both the California youth and adult corrections agency and the state department of corrections, believes that the farther an individual penetrates the U.S. criminal justice system "the harder it is to get them out of it."

In an interview during a New York visit he explained that the "non-prison" plan involved county facilities scattered in cities and communities across the state. Each facility would handle about 300 offenders who would be required to live there for the first 30 days or so.

Establish a Model

"By establishing a model, minimum-security program in which the offender spends more time working and living in civilian society, rather than being locked ip behind bars, the cost to the taxpayer is less and the offender is gradually reintegrated into civilian life," he said.

The relatively small facilities would consist of meeting rooms, a recreation center and various residential quarters, McGee said. Offenders would arrive in groups of 30 and would be required to live inside for the first few weeks. Living quarters would be more like dormitories than prison cells.

One of the key features of the program is intensive supervision. County probation officers would havs caseloads of about 15 men, instead of the usual 50 to 200. During their first weeks at the facility, the men would have round-the-clock help from officers who would attempt to get to know as much about their youthful charges as possible.

Honesty is Key

"There will be a self-examination period," McGee said. "The guys will have group discussions as to what probation means. Many of them rationalize their condition—we've got to get them to look at themselves honestly."

After this the men would be helped to find jobs, or job training or to return to school. They could live at home or find outside living quarters. At the same time they would be meeting regularly with their supervisors, as well as participating in various activities at the facility.

"If their homes aren't good, they can live in motel-like rooms at the facility," McGee said. "If they have a job they can pay room and board. Then we gradually lengthen the string on them."

The AJI plan, aided by a Ford Foundation grant, extends intensive parole programs which have existed in California for 12 years. Compared with the usual pattern of nine months' prison and 18 months' parole, the intensive parole system has turned out to be twice as successful in terms of rehabilitation, he said.

San Diego is considering the AJI "non-prison" program, he explained, adding that state, and possibly federal, funds were available.

At One-Third the Cost

In terms of cost per man "such facilities would cost only one-third as much as a prison," he said. "You're putting money into people instead of brick and mortar. Our facility, with limited inmates would not require large kitchen facilities.

Instead of jailers, we would have probation officers. The emphasis would be on rehabilitation, and case management, not punishment.

"One immediate benefit to the taxpayer is that the individual becomes largely self-supporting in a hurry. The burden of the cost of rehabilitation is shifted in part from the taxpayer to the offender."

McGhee said about 90 per cent of all 19-to-23 year-old offenders could be eligible for the program. He admitted, however, that one of the "stickiest" problems for the plan would be community acceptance.

Must 'Don't Want Them'

"Most people don't want them," he added. "But this can be overcome. We must get the community involved in the program's activities. People often fail to recognize that if the person were not under supervision he would be getting out on the street anyway under the old system, and would be even more of a problem.

"This way it's a gradual change, with more supervision, more, work-furlough, more training and more success."

The value of world offshore oil production is about $5 billion a year.

Ambassador Changing Posts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Diplomatic sources report that Charles Lucet will leave his post as France's ambassador to the United States next spring.

Lucet, who has represented France in Washington since December 1965, will take over his nation's ambassadorial post in Rome, the sources said Monday.

A person standing 80 feet above sea level can see about 12 miles.

Singer Acquires Gold-Trim Car

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Singer Isaac Hayes, with six gold records to his credit, has purchased a gold-trimmed Cadillac worth $26,000.

The custom-built vehicle includes gold-plated windshield wipers, door handles, hubcaps, fenders and exterior lettering. A refrigerated bar has been installed in the back seat and a television set is mounted under the front dashboard.

The peacock-blue car also has velvet interior, plush white shag carpet, oval backseat windows and an electric-powered sliding sunroof.

Library Victim Of Devaluation

ITHACA, N.Y. (UPI) — Devaluation of the dollar has wiped about $60,000 in purchasing power out of the current book buying budget for the Cornell University Libraries. This means about 6,000 of the nearly 60,000 foreign published books and periodicals that were to have been added to Cornell's collection this year will not be purchased, says Hendrik Edelman, assistant director of libraries.

Mail-Order Psychiatry Provided By 'Psycho Club'

By ALISON LERRICK

PARIS (AP) — Some people aren't rich enough, or crazy enough, to pay for weekly sessions with the shrink. So they can type up their problems in paragraph form and mail a "Dear Psychiatrist" letter.

Within a week, the Psychoclub sends back an answer that may be written by anyone from a single specialist to its complete team of collaborating psychiatrists, psychologists, psychoanalysts, economists, statisticians, lawyers, social workers and professors.

"Today people must pretend to be insane to be able to talk," complains psychologist Gerard Grass. He and other irate members of the Federationsdes Groupes d'Etudas Institutionelles were "fed up" with having their clinical work interrupted by patients with perfectly sane questions.

So last fall they banded together to take the "myth and magic" rout of psychiatry. People who like their practical solutions can sign up for the Psychoclub's membership card, which entitles them to participate as thinking humans rather than specimens.

Analysis, therefore, begins at home, and the Psychoclub is prepared to help only people who help themseles. "When you are stuck on a problem, good sense can help you resolve it," he says. "We are not interested in your past for your past's sake. If there is not an immediate crisis in your life, we aren't interested in you."

As a service in human "depannagd"—the term used when a mechanic comes to haul off your car—the Psychoclub deals with people who live in isolated places, are tied down by their jobs, don't know a psychiatrist or think "the majority are cretins"—as Grass does.

If people want to hide their shame from their spouses or parents, the answers are sent to their offices or to friends.

A "single consultation" costs only $4.50, while a book of 10 "stamps" entitles you to a thorough 10-letter analysis at $18. Instead of regular appointments, people can send for moral support whenever their problems get the better of them.

In contrast to "the hygienic side of psychiatry," where the patient monologues for hours and the analyst remains "neutral," the Psychoclub tells people what to do or to do what they want and don't dare to do.

"Not speaking up is like letting people wade in their own refuse, like being a voyeur. Our function is to put in periods and commas and permit others to hear their own speech"—an apt metaphor for analysis by mail. "Our answers," he clarifies, "Are simply periods and commas."

"Of course," Grass says hastily, "we don't claim to substitute for a five-year cure. The Psychoclub is just a coat rack you can hang your sore points on."

Once this first experiment is firmly established, he and his colleagues plan to set up another "coat rack" in America. The next move, however, will be a periodical in which exhibitionistic patients can discuss their difficulties and correspond with others who are in a similar mess.

First 'Floating House' Made Only Of Plastic

By ROON LEWALD
Associated Press Writer

LUEDENSCHEID, Germany (AP) — The main attraction at the world's first international exhibition of plastic dwellings floated like a small atoll on the surface of a shallow pool.

It looked less like a habitation than some organic mass risen from the sea.

Perspex-covered circular openings peering like lenses from the vegetation-fronded bulk, shaped roughly like two connected domes, were the only hint the thing was a hollow structure.

A small bulls-eye hatch allowed visitors to slip inside after clambering aboard a landing platform.

"Not bad, considering it was built in a week by four students who never handled anything like it before," said the originator of the world's first floating house made entirely of plastic.

Rudolf Doernath, the head of a Stuttgart housing research institute who acted as technical advisor to the Luedenscheid exhibition, calls his brain-child the "Bio-Dom" (bio-dome).

He hopes it will be the forerunner of do-it-yourself plastic vacation homes afloat off the Mediterranean coast, "maritime cities" whose inhabitants would support themselves from the surrounding ocean.

Doernath spent five years studying in the United States on a Fulbright scholarship as a research assistant to Buckminster Fuller, the prolific inventor known as the father of the geodesic dome.

He now is conducting technical research for his ocean habitat project. He hopes to have a pioneer sea dwelling known as "Hydropolis I" afloat by 1973 at Apes Bay, near Marseilles.

Looking into the future, he envisages a floating community living on "A big iceberg or mountain of plastic material into which everybody could dig his apartment to suit his own taste."

Like a ship's bottom, the drifting mass would attract algae, plankton and other microorganisms which in turn would draw fish.

"You would have a fish farm right on your doorstep as well as mussels and other edible shellfish."

By 1980, some 50 to 100 million Europeans will be spending their vacations around the Mediterranean, he estimates. Floating cities could solve the space problem.

Doernath's prototype required no skilled work. It consisted of haphazardly cut blocks of lightweight foam plastic, glued in layers to form a sort of twin-domed igloo and sprayed with an outside coating of polyurethane.

"The walls are so thick you can dig out niches, shelves and seats without harming them," said Doernath. Wear and tear can be repaired by melding new plastic foam into damaged places.

The 100 cubic meters of material used cost about $2,500, compared with 10 times as much for the same volume of concrete.

Because the foam is 50 times lighter than water, only a few inches of the Bio-Dom are under the surface.

Doernath claims the house has climatic advantages too. His concept calls for a "biological skin" of growing plants, providing food, increasing the oxygen supply and making it a "living structure".

"All you have to do is to spray the outside with a prepared mixture of cellulose fibers, seeds, fertilizer and plastic binding material," he said.

Visitors at Luedenscheid, a town of about 100,000 in scenic hill country some 50 miles northeast of Cologne, can inspect a bewildering array of geometric and free-form shapes at the exhibition.

There are flying saucer holiday homes perched on stilts, prefabricated boxes which can be moved from place to place and fixed together in almost any configuration of rooms, triangular units which can act either as self-contained homes or be piled on top of each other like building blocks, structures which literally grow out of a spray gun for instant use as emergency homes in disaster areas, and even houses made of paper.

Some of the exhibits are commercial products already on the market or in the final testing stage.

Others, like the Bio-Dom, are experiments which Doernath says are on show "partly as whipping boys, to test public reaction to new ideas."

The exhibition will run for five years. Doernath hopes to present new projects every year, withdrawing less successful or less interesting ones of the previous year.

Record Output Of Orange Juice

LAKELAND, Fla. (UPI)— The 35 processing plants that produce frozen concentrated orange juice packed a record 132,362,000 gallons of the product during the 1970-71 season, according to Florida Citrus Mutual.

But even that was not enough to meet the demands of consumers. Mutual reported total sales of concentrate during the 1970-71 season of 135 million gallons. The deficit between pack and sales was made up by concentrate held in warehouses from previous seasons.

Expo 67's Housing Complex Now Prestige Habitat

By JANET CAWLEY

MONTREAL (UPI) — When Habitat '67 opened four years ago prospective tenants called Montreal's futuristic housing complex eccentric and isolated. Today they call it bold, innovative and "the nicest place we've ever lived."

Getting in is the hardest part. About 20 rental inquiries are logged each day, for the 157 apartments, the waiting list can extend up to several years, and the management is super-selective about its tenents.

Habitat administrator Bernard Gobeille says the privacy, prestige, location and luxurious apartments have all made Habitat one of the most sought after addresses in town.

View of City

Located on Cite du Havre, a man-made island in the St. Lawrence River less than five minutes from downtown Montreal, Habitat offers a view of the city from one side and of Expo '67 from the other.

Its three "clusters," or main buildings, look from a distance like a precariously arranged stack of children's blocks. But up close, each "block" is a complete apartment, with its own patio and outdoor entrance. Sheltered walkways connect all the apartments and buildings.

Architect Moshe Safdie spaced the apartments to give a sense of total privacy. No tenant can see in on any other tenant's patio and even looking in windows is difficult.

"It's the nicest place we've ever lived or hoped to live," said Dr. Irwin Gopnik, a university professor who lives with his wife and six children in a four-bedroom apartment.

"It's a great concept in housing. We have privacy, yet we're close to the city. There's safety, comfort, visual and acoustic privacy and the kids have lots of room to play on the outdoor terraces. I wish everyone had a chance to live in something like this," he said.

Waiting List

When the complex, built for Expo '67, began renting in early 1968, only 18 of 112 available units were occupied.

But the first tenants told their friends and through what Gobeille called "mouth-to-mouth publicity" the remaining apartments were filled.

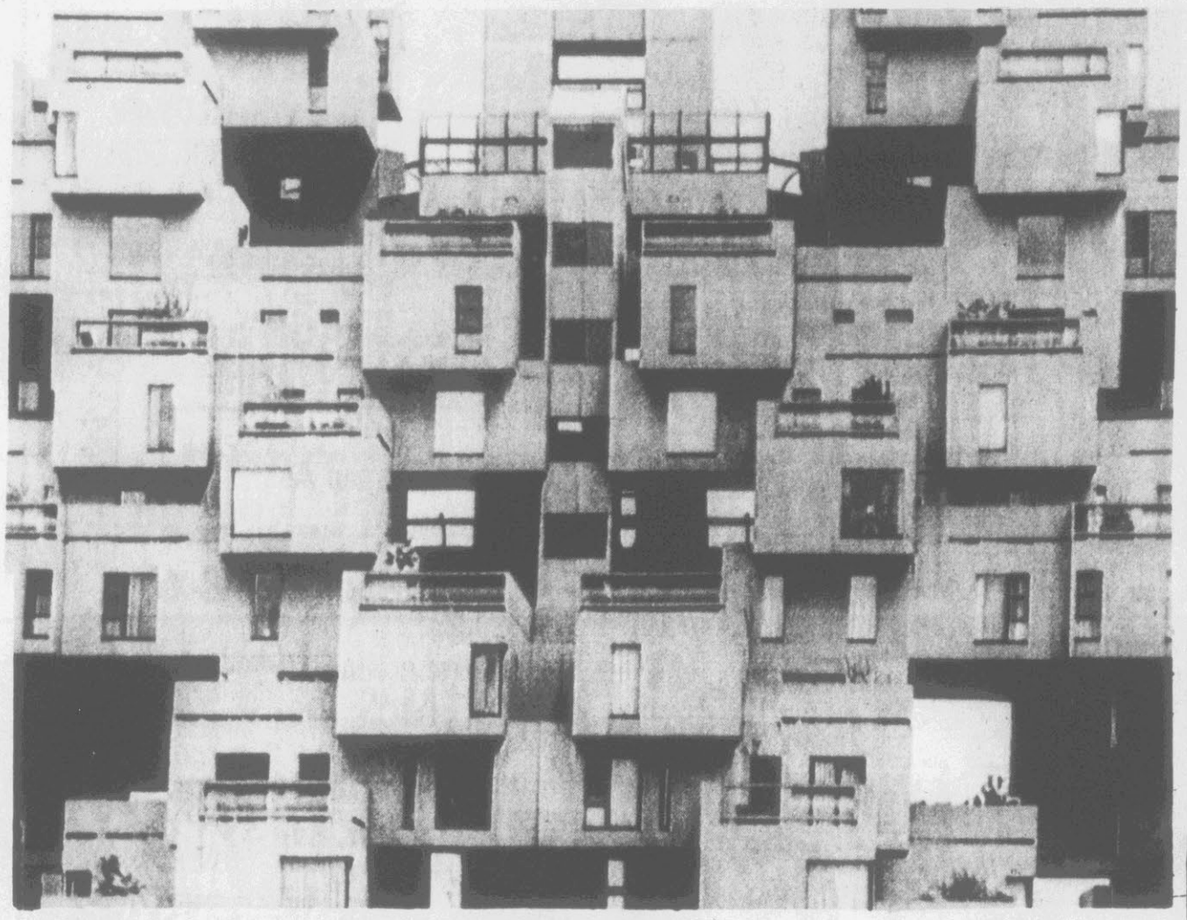
When the third "cluster" opened for occupancy in May of last year, all the apartments were rented in a matter of months. Gobeille estimated that 40 per cent of these new tenants were recommended by Habitat residents.

Today all the apartments are full and the best a hopeful applicant can do is have his name put on a waiting list. Habitat screens prospective tenants and Gobeille said there are about 74 or 80 on the waiting list "in whom we're really interested." He described the type of tenant they look for as "not just someone with lots of money, but a person with a good family record and who can meet the cost of the location."

The cost is, predictably, among the most expensive in Montreal. Prices range from $190 a month for a one-bedroom unit to $600 a month for the four-bedroom penthouse. Two-bedroom units range from $275 to $315. All the apartments are unfurnished and leases run from one to three years.

But for those on the waiting list, it can be a long time.

Depending on the type of apartment desired, it may take several years before a unit becomes available. This is due in great part to the fact that once there, few residents want to leave.



HABITAT '67 — Montreal's futuristic housing complex, has become one of the city's most popular and exclusive addresses. (UPI Telephoto)

Emperor's Death Site Is Marked In Turkey

By NICK LUDINGTON

ANKARA (AP) — The sign says "P" (for parking) and underneath "Frederich I Barbarossa."

It stands by a roadside park on Turkish Route 35 and marks the untimely end of a leader and a project.

Below the park, in the ancient Calycadnus (now Goksu) river; Frederick I Barbarossa, golden-haired German Emperor of the Holy Roman Empire, drowned while leading some 50,000 troops on the Third Christian Crusade to free Jerusalem from the hands of the Moslem champion Saladin.

After his death June 10, 1190, the proud force disintegrated, and most of the soldiers headed home. A few crusaders carried Barbarossa's body as far as Antioch, the present-day Antakya near the Turkish-Syrian border, where it was believed buried.

The Barbarossa "revival" was the work of Dr. Eggeharde Eickhoff, former German cultural attache in Ankara. He scouted around the area for years to see if there were any signs of the spot where Barbarossa drowned.

At the picturesque village of Eksiler, he met some local residents who told him the hill behind their village was called "Alman Dagi" (German mountain) and that the name has been handed down for generations.

They also showed him a large mound of earth, believed to cover a tomb. The villagers said it has always been called "The King's Tomb." But they did not know why.

Countess Helga Strachwitz, the present cultural attache, says the German Embassy will seek permission to excavate the mound in hopes it can be definitely identified as the tomb of or a memorial to Barbarossa, erected by his soldiers.

Ibrahim Usta, a teacher at Eksiler who helped Eickhoff, is convinced the mound holds Barbarossa's tomb, and with the village headman, Ahmet Demirci, is hopeful of a tourist influx.

Their hopes were given a boost when German Ambassador Dr. G. A. Sonnehol headed a group of German officials attending the opening of the Frederick I Barbarossa roadside park and placing of a marble memorial.

Pointing out that the Turkish sultan of the time, although a Moslem leader, gave the Christian army free passage through Turkey, the inscription says Barbarossa "drowned in this area in the Goksu River while leading his army to Palestine."

The Social Security Act went into effect Jan. 1, 1937.

what is the definition of a private brand?

To some people, it is a retailer's own brand created with selling price first in importance and quality second.

Quality comes first.
Value...the best for the least is the rule for our private brands.

If this wasn't true, how foolish we'd be to invest, as we have, literally millions of dollars in processing plants and testing laboratories.

If all we wanted were products we could sell cheaply without quality control, anybody could produce them for us.

The idea of quality private brands isn't new at A&P. As a matter of fact, it's one of our oldest policies– and by golly, we're proud of it.

Are A&P Private Brands a good reason for shopping A&P? They're one of many.
