

POW Wife Says: 'You Can't Raise Children And Cry All Day'

By PEACE MOFFAT
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — "People are always trying to fit me into a slot. I was taking my son through a clinic one day, and the doctor said: 'You're a widow—? No. Then you're a divorcee—? NO. 'Well, then you've got a husband.' No, not exactly. 'In a situation like this you don't fit anywhere. I wonder if there's a way for me to fit back in. It bugs me.' The speaker is Mrs. Evelyn Grubb who for six years has not known for sure whether her husband, an Air Force pilot, is alive or dead. On January 26, 1966, he was shot down over North Vietnam. 'I was living in Petersburg, Va., then," Mrs. Grubb says. "There was a tremendous snowstorm, and a taxi driver had to bring the telegram. I wouldn't accept it, and the neighbors had to come. One of the children had chicken pox. Isn't it funny how you remember all that. But there's nothing like that initial shock." What happens after that shock wears off? For Mrs. Grubb, it was a question of raising four sons, the youngest of whom was born after her husband left for Vietnam. "You can't raise children and cry all day," she says. But for this attractive, calm-eyed brunette, it was also a question of "keeping it in front of the American public that the men are there." And as national coordinator for the League of

Families of Prisoners of War and Missing in Action, she's spent a lot of time on that issue. She has petitioned the United Nations twice—once on a personal level and recently in behalf of all POW-MIA families—to get the release of all prisoners, and she spends long hours every week on the league's activities. "This should be the challenge of all American people," she said on a visit to New York for a luncheon given by Kevin Murphy, chairman of the POW-MIA Scholarship Committee. "This has been the first war when the families have had to do so much to help their men by keeping the issue alive. The easiest attitude in the world is to be discouraged. And as Americans I think we're used to having things solved, so this is really frustrating for us. 'There aren't so many men there, either, that if the issue died it couldn't be written off as just a sad fact of war, and it is an ever present concern that this might happen.' Mrs. Grubb emphasizes over an over that the league is not political, noting that there are advisers from both political parties and some who are not affiliated with any party, and that there are no paid personnel. "We're a pretty unusual group," she says. "We're doing everything possible to put ourselves out of business." Mrs. Grubb has received conflicting news of her husband—on several occasions seeing pictures of him looking healthy, supposedly in Hanoi, but in 1970 hearing that he had died of "grievous" wounds nine days after he had been captured. "I had to make a decision to accept the latter quietly, or to bring it before the public that this was unacceptable," she says. "Obviously from the pictures he wasn't grievously wounded, so I decided to fight. There was so much to fight for. 'We have to do everything possible to keep the pressure on Hanoi to treat them humanely. I can only speak for what's happening here—to let me go for five years not knowing, and then to tell me he's dead. I really don't think that's too human.' Mrs. Grubb worries about what will happen when, and if, her husband comes home. She says she tries to keep things "the way they were," but that there are milestones that hurt—like her eldest son's voice changing. "My husband was 33 when he was shot down," she says. "These are the years—the important years of his life. Can you imagine trying to catch him up on all that's happened in six years? And there's no guarantee the world will treat them as heroes."

How does she, herself, meet the constant strain? "You only live once, and you decide how you want to live," she says. "I can't stand people who are feeling sorry for themselves all the time. It's such a waste of time to keep feeling sorry for yourself. Sure, I get down and out, but then the next day, the sun still comes up and you realize feeling sorry for yourself didn't help a bit."

There's Been A Face Lifting At Hotel

By TOM HOGE
Associated Press Writer
New York's stately Plaza Hotel has had a face-lifting and many of its patrons seem delighted by the new look. The tempo is set by the Green Tulip, a sprightly restaurant featuring offbeat dishes from breakfast through dinner. Set on two levels, the dining room gives just about every diner a view of Central Park. And attractive young ladies dressed in uniforms designed by American couturier Donald Brooks brighten up the indoor scene.

At the noonday meal, you can lead off with cold snails in a cream sauce flavored with pernod which I found delicious. Or you can try their terrine of duckling which is also superior. Among the offbeat specialties are dishes such as cold cream of pumpkin soup, mousse of carrot and avocado mousse, available as a dessert at luncheon and dinner. For weight watchers and health addicts there is an organic lunch which includes tomato juice, cottage cheese and a huge salad of grated raw vegetables.

If you want to try your hand at one of the far-out specialties, here is the Green Tulip's recipe for pumpkin soup, served cold
2 cups puree of pumpkin (canned)
3 cups light cream

1½ teaspoons worcestershire sauce few drops tabasco
salt to taste
1 dash pepper
juice of a whole lemon
Mix all ingredients well in a blender, correct seasoning and chill. Fill cups ¾ full and place a slice of tomato on top. Top this with unsweetened whipped cream and decorate each with a slice of ripe olive. Serves 6.

Valentine decorated cupcakes and other refreshments were served. Each child wore a red and white Valentine with her name on it, made to Mrs. Williamson.

Get Out Of Rut, Housewife Advises

By Abigail Van Buren

(© 1972 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: Lately you have fallen into a terrible rut. You tell everyone who has a problem to see a psychiatrist or some kind of counselor.

Abby, if these people could afford to go to psychiatrists they wouldn't be writing to you. I know what I'm talking about because my husband would never go anywhere if he had a problem, but if he saw something in your column that really shook him up he'd pay attention to it.

As a matter of fact, a couple of years back you had something in your column about how unpleasant it was to go to bed with a husband who didn't shower regularly. Right after that, my husband took to showering nearly every day, which made me very happy. And I'm sure his coworkers were a lot happier, too. Now, if you will just print some real sharp stuff about husbands who are under 50 and aren't interested in sex. . . . SEPARATE BEDS

DEAR SEPARATE: Sorry, but I send all men under seventy who aren't interested in sex to their family doctors. And if they're physically sound, then I send them to psychiatrists.

DEAR ABBY: A girl [I'll call her "Mary"] wrote to you. She said her sister was a nun, and a few years ago nuns couldn't participate in weddings, so Mary promised her girl friend that she could be her maid of honor when she got married.

Well, when it came time for Mary's wedding, the church had changed its rules and nuns were allowed to be in weddings, so Mary told her girl friend that she wanted her sister to be maid of honor. The girl friend got mad, and I don't blame her.

But you went along with Mary! Abby, how could you? A promise is a promise, no matter what. It wasn't the girl friend's fault that the Catholic church finally got smart.

I usually agree with you, but this time I think you were wrong. BUFFALO READER

DEAR READER: I still feel that since the circumstances changed, Mary was justified in asking her sister. The girl friend should have been more understanding, and accepted the role of "bridesmaid," which Mary offered her on bended knee. But she declined instead, saying if she couldn't be maid of honor she wouldn't even come to the wedding. I'm still with Mary.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are soon to celebrate our 25th wedding anniversary, and we're making plans. We would like to get married again in church with my daughter and her husband as our only attendants. It wouldn't be a very large wedding. Just our relatives and some close friends.

I want to wear my daughter's wedding gown and veil, which fits me perfectly. Would that be proper? When I was married, my husband and I didn't have much of a wedding. We just went to the minister's house and wore regular street clothes.

I have always wanted to be married in a church with a gown and veil. Do you think I'm foolish? Also, would it be necessary for my husband and me to have blood tests and apply for a license all over again? Let me know, and I'll do as you say. SILVER WEDDING

DEAR SILVER: Go ahead and have the church wedding in your daughter's gown and veil, and God bless you. And you do not need blood tests or another license. The ceremony is merely symbolic. You are already married.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "SICK OF UNINVITED GUESTS IN ORLANDO:" There is only one way to deal with an unwanted and unwanted guest, and that is to tell him you are not able to accommodate him. And if all your friends in Orlando are having the same problem, and if, as you say, all the motels are filled up, you should consider going into the motel business.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Need Pushes Congress Toward Strike Legislation

By JOHN BECKLER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is being pushed toward reluctant action on strike legislation that is opposed by organized labor and most business interests.

Under the persistent prodding of President Nixon and the pressure of the long West Coast dock strike, key House and Senate committees have agreed to consider long-bottled bills designed to prevent crippling strikes in the transportation industry.

Rep. Harley O. Staggers, D-W.Va., chairman of the House Commerce Committee, plans to take up the bills early next month. And Sen. Harrison A. Williams Jr., D-N.J., chairman of the Senate Labor Committee, has set March 29 for the start of a bill-writing effort.

Neither chairman is guaranteeing that a bill will be produced, but the fact drafting sessions are even being held is one of the most-significant developments in labor law since passage of the Landrum-Griffin Act in 1959.

It was the difficulty the Democratic leadership had in 1959 in defeating a long series of antiunion amendments that is the main reason no major labor legislation has reached the House or Senate floor since then.

However, eight times in the last seven years Congress has been forced to deal with labor-management disputes on a stopgap basis and the feeling in the House and Senate is that the limit has just about been reached.

"I think there is a good chance there will be a bill on the Senate floor this year," says a labor lobbyist who shudders at the thought. "Certainly there will be one if Congress has to act soon again on an emergency basis."

The dismay of the labor lobbyist is shared by many members of Congress in both parties and by business leaders who are strongly opposed to the compulsory-arbitration features of the proposed bills.

The bill would give the president three new options in dealing with transportation strikes that are held to create national emergencies. If the strike was not settled during the 80-day cooling-off period now provided for, the president could:

- Extend the cooling-off period 30 days.
- Permit partial operation of an industry to ease any emergency while the strike continues.
- Set up a panel to which each party would submit a final offer. The panel would select one as the binding settlement.

Not surprisingly, the AFL-CIO found nothing it liked. It dismissed the first option as "too trivial to comment on," called the second a sham provision that would never be invoked, and said the third was just another form of compulsory arbitration.

Representatives of the railroad, airline and trucking industries, the chief employers who would be affected by the bill, found numerous defects and proposed an alternative that would put greater restrictions on a union's right to strike.

And the National Association of Manufacturers, representing the business community in general, said Congress would be best advised to do nothing. It said the emergency strike provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act have worked reasonably well, found nothing wrong with last-ditch intervention by Congress in cases where the act failed, and expressed concern that compulsory arbitration, once applied to the transportation industry, would spread to other industries.

All these views are reflected in Congress, but its members are also subject to political pressures that become intense when a long strike starts pinching some sector of the economy and the president joins the clamor for action.

They are feeling that pressure now.

The official confirmed the Greek government wrote Makarios, seeking formation of a Cypriot government of national unity to include Grivas' representatives.

Meanwhile, U.S. officials said the Turkish government is becoming anxious about the Cyprus situation and is threatening to arm Turkish Cypriots for their own defense.

The danger of new fighting on Cyprus comes at a time when the United States is emphasizing the importance of both Turkish and Greek navies in helping shield NATO's southern flank against a strong Soviet fleet in the eastern Mediterranean.

It also coincides with U.S. negotiations with the Athens government for rights to establish a Greek home port for the 6th fleet.

New Russian Moon Probe

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet government launched another unmanned spaceship—Luna 20—toward the moon today, Tass announced.

The official Soviet news agency said it was sent up for further exploration of the moon and near-lunar space.

Tass said the space station's equipment was functioning normally and its trajectory was close to the one estimated for it. It said the ground control station was maintaining reliable radio contact with the station.

The last Soviet moon probe, Luna 19, was launched Sept. 28 and went into orbit around the moon on Oct. 3. It was still functioning at last report.

Luna 18 crashed into the moon Sept. 11 while trying to make a soft landing.

Luna 20 was shot toward the moon from an artificial satellite orbiting the earth, Tass said.

There was a possibility the new probe would try a soft landing. Western scientific observers believed the mission of Luna 19 was to make photographs from which to choose landing sites after the crash of Luna 18.

Arms Shipments Raise Fear Of War On Cyprus

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. officials are concerned about reported secret arms shipments to Cyprus and the resulting possibility of civil war on that strategic island in the eastern Mediterranean.

Twice before, in the 1960s, the United States came to the brink of an involvement in Cyprus' troubles because two U.S. allies, Greece and Turkey, were on opposite sides.

This time, officials said, the trouble is between rival Greek Cypriot factions. But American authorities fear fighting also would affect the Turk Cypriot minority and revive tensions between Athens and Ankara.

Perhaps more significantly, trouble on Cyprus could jeopardize the relationship in the area between the United States and the Soviet Union, both represented there by substantial naval forces.

According to recent reports, Pentagon sources said, several thousand weapons manufactured in Communist Czechoslovakia were landed secretly at a small out-of-the-way port last month and moved to Nicosia, the capital.

Intelligence reports said the weapons were for a special constabulary formed by President Makarios to counter Gen. George Grivas, who is backed by the right-wing government of Greece.

Late last week a high-ranking Greek foreign-ministry official said bloodshed would be inevitable if Makarios expanded his constabulary force and distributed arms to what the official called "irresponsible elements."

The official confirmed the Greek government wrote Makarios, seeking formation of a Cypriot government of national unity to include Grivas' representatives.

Meanwhile, U.S. officials said the Turkish government is becoming anxious about the Cyprus situation and is threatening to arm Turkish Cypriots for their own defense.

The danger of new fighting on Cyprus comes at a time when the United States is emphasizing the importance of both Turkish and Greek navies in helping shield NATO's southern flank against a strong Soviet fleet in the eastern Mediterranean.

It also coincides with U.S. negotiations with the Athens government for rights to establish a Greek home port for the 6th fleet.

Gardner Hitches Ride To Rally

SOUTHERN PINES, N. C. (AP) — Republican gubernatorial candidate Jim Gardner had to flag down a motorist Saturday night after the car Gardner was riding in broke down.

Gardner was on his way to a speaking engagement at the Foxfire Country Club at Southern Pines with 8th District GOP chairman Gil Boger when their car conked out.

Gardner got to the club in time to give his speech. The Rocky Mount businessman promised there would be a Republican running on every level in the May primary.

N.C. Primary Law Seems Fair

There are not many perfect laws on the books, and North Carolina's presidential primary law is no exception to that generalization.

Even so, it measures up well with presidential primary laws of other states and with the election laws generally which are in use today. Charges that North Carolina's presidential primary law will not properly reflect in terms of convention delegate votes, the votes cast at the polls are gross exaggerations.

New York Congresswoman Shirley Chisholm, who is a candidate for the Democratic nomination, has said she may institute legal action against North Carolina charging the presidential primary law is unfair in the formula used to allocate convention votes among candidates. Rep. Chisholm pointed specifically to the provision that requires a candidate to have at least 14 per cent of the popular vote before getting any convention delegate votes.

It would, of course, be impractical if not impossible to allocate convention delegate votes precisely in relationship to the number of votes a candidate receives the presidential primary. Further, an attempt to allocate the convention votes to every candidate in the primary, regardless of the number of popular votes received, would so dilute the state's national convention votes on the first ballot as to virtually eliminate a North Carolina voice at the convention.

Provisions of North Carolina's primary election law establishing the rules for eligibility for entering the presidential primary as well as the provisions for distributing delegate votes are sound. They should not be changed unless it is seen in practice that they can be improved.

The suggestion for change by Rep. Chisholm would not be an improvement. If changes are needed in the North Carolina law, they will show up in the first few presidential primaries held under the statute. It is absurd to talk of changes even before the first presidential primary is held in this state.

Food Price Boost Will Be Nice For Farmers

The Agriculture Department sees a rapid rise in food prices during 1972 and it is predicting that farmers will share in the profits.

Farmers had no gain in net incomes in 1971 but will see profits up by $1.5 billion to $2 billion this year according to the forecast.

Farmers, of course, for years have been accustomed to seeing food prices rise with little improvement in their own profit pictures. If the farmers come in for better profits this year it will be a pleasant change for them.

Fragile Crutch For Humphrey

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

CLEVELAND — The fragility of Sen. Hubert Humphrey's reliance on labor for a respectable share of Ohio's 153 delegates to the Democratic National Convention was demonstrated by an unsuccessful backstage effort to keep a first-term Congressman from endorsing Sen. Edmund Muskie.

Pro-Humphrey leaders of the United Rubber Workers in Akron most emphatically urged Rep. John F. Seiberling, elected with the union's backing in 1970, not to board the Muskie bandwagon. One Rubber Workers chieftain told others that the union might oppose Seiberling in 1972 if he opposed Humphrey. Here were echoes of 1968 when organized labor muscled politicians into line for Humphrey across the country and particularly in Ohio (whose delegation gave him 94 of its 115 votes.)

Echoes and nothing more, however. Seiberling endorsed Muskie anyway, and nothing came of the union's threats against him. Most significantly, the endorsement of Muskie Dec. 22 by Gov. John J. Gilligan was a mighty factor influencing Seiberling.

The incident vividly underlines the desperate condition here and elsewhere of Humphrey's last-chance campaign. Whatever labor does for Humphrey is eclipsed by the Muskie effort from party leaders of Gilligan's stature. Moreover, unlike 1968, labor today is not monolithically bound to Humphrey but is divided.

Humphrey's prospect, therefore, is grim in Ohio, a state he viewed optimistically just weeks ago.

Muskie managers are shooting for 120 delegates (leaving only 20 delegates for all other candidates after counting off 13 uncommitted delegates). To avert such catastrophe, Humphrey's only remote hope is that heavy-handed treatment of union officials by the Muskie-Gilligan camp might generate a huge blue-collar vote for Humphrey delegates in the May 2 primary.

Ohio is a classic case of how much Democratic politics changed over four years. In 1968, Jack Gilligan was the beleaguered nominee for the U.S. Senate, harassed by organized labor for his dovish views and finally pushed into supporting Humphrey at the convention. In 1972, he is governor, wielding patronage and presiding over the strongest Ohio Democratic party in memory.

Gilligan's value to Muskie is immeasurable. Although the governor's popularity is way down since his tax increase passed, his influence inside the party is undiminished. Several county chairmen and some Congressmen now on Muskie's team joined only because the governor did.

To counteract this, Humphrey had counted on old labor friends. But too many Ohio union leaders agree with the assessment by Ed Hinton, the state's political operative for the United Auto Workers (UAW): "Humphrey is a dear old friend of labor, but we just don't think he is electable."

Strength For Today

HOW LUCKY I AM

Gaye E. Conover died a few months ago at the age of 23, and the local newspaper required nearly a full column for her obituary. A cancer condition rendered her blind when she was just about a year old. She secured a Masters degree from a state university. At her high school graduation a request that applause for individuals be omitted was forgotten when Gaye crossed the stage for her diploma. At last she was told she would die. Did she scream and tear her hair? Not at all. Her face lighted up and she said: "How lucky I am to have lived all this time that I wasn't supposed to!"

Battlefield bravery is wonderful, and we have a country today because of the bravery of men who laid down their lives in battle or were willing to do so. But Gaye Conover's courage is something different. She performed on the piano, played on the clarinet, won distinction after distinction in fields that persons with two eyes seldom enter into.

Gaye grew up as a normal youngster. When she needed a spanking, she got plenty. In the third grade she had mastered typing. Gaye never sat around moping. At the time of her death she was planning a trip to Europe.

Play The Heartstrings

WASHINGTON — The Democratic Party is seriously thinking of holding a nationwide telethon to pay off its $9 million debt. Most telethons in this country have been held for diseases such as cerebral palsy and muscular dystrophy.

The secret of raising money on a telethon is to pull on the heartstrings of the viewer. The entertainment and even the appeals of celebrities are no substitute for showing the victims of the diseases. In order to get people to phone in pledges of money, you have to pull out all stops in dramatizing the ravages of the illnesses for which you are raising funds.

I suspect that the Democrats will also have to tug at the heartstrings of the American people if their telethon is to succeed, and I can just imagine how the Democratic National Committee program will go. Lawrence O'Brien, the Democratic national chairman, will be rolled out in a wheelchair by former President Lyndon Johnson. "Hi there, everybody. I'm Larry O'Brien. I'm suffering from PD or political deficit, a disease that strikes every political party sooner or later. I am asking you out there in TV land to open up your hearts and your pocketbooks so we can find a cure for political deficit which has plagued American for more than 100 years.

"We're going to show you some victims of PD on our telethon. They were once healthy men with great futures ahead of them. Then they decided to run for public office, and now they are debt-ridden and scarred. Some can barely hold up their heads. Others' hands shake so much they can hardly open their mail. All these men have been afflicted by PD.

"We are asking you out there to telephone your pledge so we can lick political deficit, the greatest party killer of them all. The telephone number is Jackson 6-2000. Let's start ringing those phones right now.

"We have some wonderful people with us today. We have Paul Newman, Gregory Peck, Jane Fonda, Lauren Bacall, Margaret Truman and Peter Lawford. But before we begin our entertainment, let's talk to some of the victims of political deficit. What is your

But among wives of the Big Namba tribe in the New Hebrides islands in the South Pacific, custom forbids them from being seen by their husband's brothers. 40 Years Ago Today

By GWYN COGHILL
Feb. 14, 1932

After again enjoying several days of springtime temperatures, winter descended upon this section yesterday and caused the citizenship to replenish depleted coal bins and seek heavier clothing. The cold wave last night and rain today continued the mercury to tumble during the morning hours carrying out the weatherman's prediction for colder weather. Under the balmy temperatures many trees in this immediate section were in full bloom, especially fruit trees, and the blossoms gave atmosphere to the springtime setting. The recent warm weather was the third or fourth spell of the winter, each having been broken for short duration by falling temperatures.

An outstanding event of the winter quarter of East Carolina Teachers College will be the presentation of "The Whole Town's Talking" by the senior class on February 17th and 18th.

There Would Go Housing Boom

By ELMER ROESSNER

The Nixon Administration is in a quandary. Because of the vast borrowing ahead resulting from the $40 billion deficit this fiscal year and the $25 billion or more deficit in the next fiscal year, it wants to keep interest rates down. But if it lowers interest rates — and it can — people will take money out of savings accounts and put it in speculative ventures, such as the stock market, draining the funds with which savings institutions have to lend for home mortgages.

And there would go the housing boom, which has been one of the sturdy supports for the otherwise shaky economy.

Banks are beginning to cut interest paid on savings accounts. They can't be blamed. Prime rates, the rate at which banks lend money to prime customers, are down to 4 1/2 per cent, and so commercial banks lose money when they pay more than that rate on commercial savings accounts.

Mutual savings banks and savings and loan associations, however, are in a different position. Their lendings on mortgages return them seven or more per cent. There is still a margin of profit in paying five per cent on savings accounts and six per cent on term deposits.

There is a feeling in the banking world that in choosing between a continuation of the housing boom and maintaining a market for borrowing to meet the deficit, the government will have to choose keeping interest high enough to sell bonds.

Last week the government offered 10-year bonds, dated February 15, paying 6 1/2 per cent interest. That may be a clue.

Here are more peeks into the business future:

New synthetics boom. Cotton is becoming scarce and more synthetic fibers will move into the gap. On last August 1, the carryover of cotton was 4.2 million bales, the lowest in 20 years. By next August 1, trade sources estimate the carryover will be down to 3.7 million bales, possibly less because mills will build their inventories. Meanwhile, many mills are considering various synthetics. Raw cotton prices aren't frozen, and as prices go up processors will have to ask the Price Commission for price increases. The shortage resulted from the fact that farmers have been planting less because of poor prices and irregular demand.

Ecological victory. A new recycling process by Union Carbide may expedite disposal of solid wastes in municipal garbage. Heat is applied to such wastes as paper and garbage, producing commercial quantities of gas and reducing metal, glass and other inorganic solid wastes into solid, useful wastes. Mount Vernon, N.Y. (cq) has applied to the Environmental Protective Agency for funds to help build a 150-tons-a-day plant to test the process.

Information aid. General Telephone Co. of California is testing a computer-controlled aid to "information, please" operators. The information operator presses keys containing the first three letters of a person's name, another key for the areas in which he lives and a fifth key for late-listed numbers. The number sought appears on a viewing screen almost instantly reducing time to get information by 15 per cent. If the test is effective, the machine will be offered to other phone units.

Meo Tribal Army's General A Recognized Hero

By CARL STROCK
LONG CHENG, Laos (AP)
North Vietnam's dry-season offensive this year has hurt Maj. Gen. Vang Pao more than anyone else.

Its early stages cost Vang Pao most of his territory and more than 1,000 troops. This mountain stronghold headquarters has been seriously threatened for the first time. But Vang Pao, the jaunty, widely admired commander in northern Laos, leader of the Meo tribal minority, talks about the war with his customary enthusiasm.

"Win? Not sure," he says in English peppered with American military slang.

"But we fight, sure. Hanoi wants to take our country. We must fight for our independence."

Vang Pao has been fighting Communists since 1946. As a 16-year-old he joined the French forces reoccupying Vientiane, Laos' administrative capital, in the aftermath of the Japanese surrender.

Vang Pao devised his own tactics to suit rugged terrain. When the pro-Communist Pathet Lao routed government forces from the Plain of Jars in 1965 he led his Meo people into the surrounding mountains where he organized guerrilla bands to harass the enemy.

Since then he has been one of the country's few recognized heroes. He also has been the darling of the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency. The CIA has furnished arms, ammunition and rice to keep his army and people going. This assistance has grown into a major effort. U.S. officials generally regard Vang Pao as the most reliable leader in a nation of generals who sometimes seem to be comic opera figures.

The support includes training program for Vang Pao's troops, CIA advisers, plus helicopter and airplane backing provided by Air America, a charter firm sometimes called "CIA Airlines."

One thing that drew attention to Vang Pao in the early days was that he could give the superstitious and clannish Meo an outlet for their precious opium crop. It's asserted, naturally without proof, that arrangements were made for Air America to pick up the raw poppy sap from dirt airstrips in remote areas and fly it out.

This is understood to have been quietly suspended when the GI drug crisis developed in Vietnam.

Vang Pao managed to broaden his political strength among the Meo, longtime observers have said, by taking a wife from each of the tribe's major clans. He has six wives and 27 children.

But Vang Pao remains primarily a soldier. "The best soldier in this part of the world," says one of his American admirers.

He has been wounded three times and is the only Laotian general ever wounded in combat after winning his stars. He also survived the crash of a plane a few years ago.

Although he is the acknowledged leader of the Meo, Vang Pao is not a Meo nationalist. He believes, in fact, that the "at people"—once about 40 per cent of the Laos population of 2.8 million—have no future as a separate culture.

For this reason he has forbidden the teaching of the Meo language in schools and urges his mountain people to adopt lowland customs as their only chance to survive.

"We are all Lao," he says. The general has earned a reputation for honesty in distributing his troops' payroll—a virtual phenomenon in itself. This is one reason his men remain fiercely loyal, some of his

American backers say. But he is held partly responsible by some mountain people for their casualties in recent years—casualties which have caused concern for the tribe's survival. Some U.S. officers also say privately that Vang Pao is too fanatical about leading his and each dry season they are driven out by the North Vietnamese.

Critics of the U.S.-backed operations have contended that at least 10 per cent of the Meo do not survive such moves.

"In 1968. I was running for President, and suddenly I started to feel sick and got feverish and I couldn't stop talking."

"So you would like to see science find a cure for PD?"

"I certainly would. It's my only hope."

"Can we bring the mike over here to this man on the stretcher? What is your name?"

"Sen. Fred Harris. I threw my hat into the ring for 1972 and I've been flat on my back ever since."

"Let's go over to the telephones now. Here is Mary Lindsay, Mayor Lindsay's wife. Do you have any pledges, Mary?"

It's possible that we need a new system of automobile insurance in North Carolina.

But it's certain that we must do something about the appalling traffic toll in our state, if we're going to keep insurance costs at a reasonable level under a no-fault system—or any other system.

Your independent insurance agents are going to be taking a good close look at no-fault insurance during 1972. We may urge adoption of a no-fault plan for North Carolina.

We've already taken a close look at what results from "our fault on the streets and highways". And we've already taken steps to help reduce traffic carnage.

For one thing, we've provided funds to purchase breathalyzer equipment to help get the drunken driver off our streets and highways.

We've also provided funds to help start a National Driving Center in North Carolina to find out how faulty driving habits can be diagnosed and improved.

We're interested in no-fault insurance because we're concerned about the insurance market for our customers.

We're interested in highway safety simply because we're concerned about the safety of our customers.

Nina van Pallandt Before Grand Jury

NEW YORK (AP) — Nina van Pallandt, a beautiful blonde folk singer, went to the federal courthouse today to testify before a grand jury probing her friend Clifford Irving's "autobiography" of Howard Hughes.

The 39-year-old Danish-born baroness, who is estranged from her Dutch husband, has said Irving didn't leave her sight long enough to interview Hughes when she and Irving were together in Mexico.

The federal grand jury continued its investigation of possible mail fraud in the case as Time magazine published excerpts of Irving's book which the magazine said proved much of it was pirated.

Time, calling Irving "Con Man of the Year," said Irving had admitted the hoax to federal prosecutors in an effort to spare his wife from jail.

Irving's lawyer, Maurice Neslen, called the Time article "a gloating, prancing, distorting piece that is irresponsible in the extreme."

The magazine printed part of Irving's book alongside excerpts from an unpublished manuscript by free-lance writer James Phelan to emphasize the similarities.

Time said it did not know how Irving gained access to Phelan's manuscript.

The magazine said Irving told federal investigators he would accept a prison term for fraud and perjury in exchange for leniency by Swiss authorities on forgery and bank fraud charges against his wife, Edith.

The New York Daily News said it had learned that U.S. and Swiss authorities had agreed secretly to drop charges against Mrs. Irving if her husband cooperates and "someone goes to jail."

U.S. Attorney Whitney North Seymour Jr. declined comment, but Swiss officials dismissed the report as "nonsense." They said a courier was en route to the United States with a demand for Mrs. Irving's extradition.

Baroness van Pallandt, who is a neighbor of the Irvings on the Spanish Mediterranean island of Ibiza, declined to talk to reporters as she arrived for the grand jury hearing.

Time said Irving might have sought the deal for his wife's freedom in fear that she might tell her side of the story in anger over his affair with Mrs. van Pallandt.

The magazine also said that when Irving was confronted with the new evidence of manuscript similarities he commented: "It's more complex than you ever think. You haven't seen the bottom line yet. There is going to be some

Test Bloodletting

NEW YORK (AP) — Researchers are turning to the ancient treatment of bloodletting in an experiment to explore whether it might help prevent strokes and heart attacks.

Blood donations reduce the level of red cells, and some studies have shown that heart attacks are more frequent among men who are naturally inclined to thick red blood—as measured by the number of red cells in their blood.

Dr. Leonard J. Stutman, who is directing the project at St. Vincent's Hospital, says its goal is to learn whether donations of blood every 2 1/2 months can be shown helpful for men aged 30 to 50, who are more prone to heart attacks and strokes than women of the same age.

In the last eight months, 140 men have been bled in a feasibility study at the hospital.

Dr. Stutman said in an interview that he hopes to obtain funding to expand the study to 2,500 men. Meaningful findings would then be available in five years, he said.

GOP Gubernatorial Candidates Will Be At Friday Reception

The names of the two Republican gubernatorial candidates who will be among those attending a "Meet the Candidate" reception here Friday night at the Moose Lodge were inadvertently omitted from a story in Sunday's edition. They are Jim Gardner and Jim Holshouser.

The two candidates will be joined by vice gubernatorial hopefuls Johnny Walker and Norman Joyner, U.S. Senatorial candidates Jimmy Johnson and Bill Booe, and First Congressional District candidate Mack Howard. Jesse Helms has notified local officials that he will attend if he decides to enter the race for U.S. Senate.

Other guests expected for the reception will be State Republican chairman Frank Rouse, First District chairman Bill Dansey, and the chairmen and vice chairmen from all 21 counties in the First District. Dansey said that interested persons of all political parties are invited to attend the informal 8 p.m. reception for all major Republican candidates currently running for office in North Carolina.

big news breaking. So be careful." Time's parent firm, Time, Inc., owns Life magazine, which had purchased the syndication rights to the book from McGraw-Hill Publishing Co. for $250,000. Last week Life canceled the contract after deciding the book was a hoax.

In its story Sunday, Time magazine said that Irving admitted through his lawyer in the U.S. attorney's office last week that "his baroque detailed scenario was a fraud."

Time said the admission came after Irving's researcher, Richard Suskind, told authorities that contrary to his earlier affidavit he had never seen

Howard Hughes. Time said "Irving's hoax worked because the base on which he built was largely genuine." It noted that the Irving work and the Dietrich memoirs, which were ghost written by Phelan, were identical in subject matter at many points.

"Irving could have come into possession of the Phelan version, along with 150 pages of the transcript of tape-recorded interviews with Dietrich, some time in the last year. Then with the help of a researcher, his own imagination, and information supplied by current or former Hughes associates, Irving concocted 'The Autobiography of Howard Hughes,'" Time said. Time said eventually Dietrich became dissatisfied with Phelan's work and settled with him for $40,000.

He then hired Associated Press writer Bob Thomas, who also does free-lance writing, and the completed work is to be published this month.

Interviewed Sunday on NBC-TV, Phelan termed the Irving work "a very expensive dead horse" and said it was "unquestionably" a hoax.

Two persons were reported injured in two Saturday night collisions investigated by Greenville Police officers.

Investigators reported Beverly Kay Gaskins, 17, of Route 1, Ayden was injured when the car she was driving went out of control and collided with a utility pole on Memorial Drive, 500 feet South of the Country Club Road about 11:30 p.m.

Officers estimated damage to the car at $800 and reported no damage resulted to the pole.

Carol Bryan Bland, 21, of Grifton was reported injured in a 9:05 p.m. collision at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Maxwell Street.

Police said a car driven by Mrs. Bland was involved in a collision with a vehicle driven by Stettinius Hemby, 26, of 413 Bonners Lane. Damage to the Bland car was set at $1,400 while damage to the car driven by Hemby was set at $225.

Hemby was charged with careless and reckless driving and driving without a license while the registered owner of the car he was driving, Alice Phillips Laughinghouse of 1308 A Colonial Ave. was charged with allowing an unlicensed person to drive.

Two ECU Athletes Qualify For Nat'l Competition

Tournament's Seeding Could Be Determined By Three Cage Games

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Three games this week could determine who'll be seeded No. 2 behind Davidson's Wildcats when the Southern Conference holds its basketball championship tournament March 2-4 at Greenville, S. C.

Furman's defending champion Paladins, 6-3 in league play behind Davidson—its conference season completed at 8-2 could nail down second place with victories over Richmond's Spiders tonight at home and over The Citadel's Bulldogs Saturday night in Charleston, S. C.

The Paladins maintained a slender grip on second place with a 104-66 rout Saturday night of Virginia Military's Keydets, while East Carolina's Pirates held third place at 7-4 with a 91-83 victory over The Citadel, dropping the Bulldogs to 3-5.

East Carolina has just one more league game — Saturday night at William and Mary against the Indians. At 4-3 with three conference scraps still to play, William and Mary is the only other team still in the running—but only if Furman loses one of its last two games.

Conference teams split even with nonleague foes Saturday. Richmond turned back Rhode Island 84-76 in two overtimes and Appalachian State's Mountaineers edged UNC-Charlotte 78-77, but Davidson lost at ninth-ranked South Carolina 86-71 and William and Mary was beaten at Duke 87-69.

Two conference games are scheduled tonight with VMI, 0-9, at The Citadel in addition to Furman's home scrap with Richmond, 3-5. East Carolina is host to St. Francis, Pa., in a non-league scrap.

Russ Hunt hit 15 of 21 floor shots for 32 points and Roy Simpson added 20 points as Furman routed VMI. The Paladins ran away in the second half after leading 48-35 at intermission. David Lester led the Keydets with 23 points as they lost their 10th consecutive game.

East Carolina overcame an early 10-point deficit and built a 20-point lead with 12 minutes left before the Bulldogs cut it. Jim Fairley had 23 points for the Pirates, John Sutor 20 for the Bulldogs.

Clark Wiseman tied the game for Richmond in regulation time and the first overtime, and the Spiders scored all eight points in the second extra period. Jeff Snider led the Spiders with 20 points.

Two free throws with six seconds left by Larry Dudas, his only points, won for Appalachian, whose John Rutt had 25 points.

Duke had a 17-point halftime lead and ran away from William and Mary, which got 18 points from Jerry Fisher. South Carolina built a 12-point lead at intermission against Davidson and won going away with Kevin Joyce scoring 28 points. T. K. Pecorak had 19 for the Wildcats.

Davidson coach expects injured sophomore John Falconi back for a return match Feb. 26 "and with him back, we think we can beat them."

Within recent days, two members of East Carolina athletic teams have qualified for the NCAA National competition in their individual sports, Walter Davenport and Jack Morrow.

Davenport, a junior from North Wilkesboro, is a member of the Pirate track team, while Morrow, a sophomore from Charlotte, is on the diving team.

Davenport gained his qualifying in the triple jump, passing the necessary mark with a leap of 49 feet, 6 inches. And in the VMI Winter Relays, held last week, he captured another honor, being named as the Meet's Most Valuable Field Events Man, as he won the event.

In the meet, Davenport went up against a jinx that has really hampered him during the past two seasons. As a freshman, he pulled a hamstring in the meet and took a long time to recover. As a sophomore, he injured a tendon and again suffered a setback in his career.

But the third time proved to be a charm. He turned in an excellent series of jumps, winning it easily.

On his first jump in the competition he went 48-11½. His second was 49-4, the jump that eventually won. Then, on the third, with a scratch of only about a half-inch, he soared 50 feet, eight inches, only to see it disqualified.

Following the rest period, he returned to jump 48-11, 48-8 and 49-1. On the last jump, Davenport actually didn't follow through after his hop and step, feeling that he has messed up. But Coach Bill Carson says that he actually had the best in the two that he'd had all day. "If he'd followed through with his jump, he would have been way out there," he said.

Carson feels that Davenport has the ability to reach 53 feet before his jumping career is over. "He should hit 51 this year, and he could easily place high in the nationals." A jump of 52-9½ won the NCAA last year. "It's not impossible for him to be high on the list this year, and make the all-America team. By the time he finishes his career he should certainly be among the top 15 in the nation."

Davenport got interested in track during his high school days. He was a basketball player there and his coach persuaded him to try out for the track team. In the Western North Carolina Athletic Association, of which North Wilkesboro is a member, the triple jump is a part of high school competition, so Davenport got his first taste of it there. His best high school leap was 46-7.

A major in English, Davenport hopes to continue on and get his masters' degree then teach and coach on the collegiate level.

Morrow, who majors in physical education, broke into the national spotlight with his one and three-meter dives at Norfolk, Va., against Old Dominion last week. He set two new East Carolina University records with the points he recorded, breaking one 12-year-old mark, the oldest the Pirates still had.

"Jack still has a long way to go," Diving Coach John Lovstedt said, "but he has the potential to place high."

"A lot will depend on how he finishes in the Easterns this year. If he does well, it'll help him along," the coach said.

The 1971 recipient of the Glen Dyer Award for Diving at East Carolina, Morrow has his future in front of him. "If he continues to progress at the pace he has so far, he'll be able to rank high in the nationals before he's finished."

The problem now is consistency. "Many of the divers he will face in the nationals are hitting high marks nearly every time they dive. This is his first time. He's got to get to the point where he does it all the time. When he does, he'll be able to place high."

One of the primary reasons for Morrow's improvement, as well as the improvement of the other divers has been the trampoline work they do as part of their training. "This has helped all of them a lot," Lovstedt said. "They are able to learn their twists better on this, as well as other parts of their skill."

The future for Morrow apparently is at least a year off, however. "He's got to develop the consistency first. Then as his tougher dives improve, he'll really be ready to go places."

With two years to go before graduation, the chances of Morrow finishing high in the nationals is extremely good.

Floyd Patterson Unsatisfied

SHELBY, N. C. (AP) — Floyd Patterson returned his father's remains to the Appalachian foothills Sunday, then speculated on his chances of regaining the heavyweight championship he first won in 1956.

"I've had offers from the Frazier camp," the 37-year-old fighter said. "But I'd like to fight once more before deciding on a bout with him."

Patterson fought and defeated Oscar Bonavena Friday, three days after his father, Thymon Patterson, died at the age of 60. "I was real sharp in training," he said, "but something happened after my father died and I was not as sharp as I expected."

Home Game

East Carolina University's Pirates will play host to St. Francis, Pa., tonight at 8 p.m. in Minges Coliseum.

The Baby Bucs will entertain Chowan in a preliminary slated for 5:45 p.m.

The contest will be the next-to-last home event for the Pirates, who close out their home slate against Old Dominion on Thursday night.

St. Francis will feature one of the premier guards in the country in Kevin Porter.

Rosberg Breaks 11-Year Drought

By RON ROACH

Associated Press Sports Writer

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — It had been 11 years since Bob Rosburg was a winner and the 45-year-old greybeard of the pro golf tour wasn't sure he could stand the pressure.

"I was ready to start shaking but it never happened," Rosburg said Sunday after collecting $29,000 as the winner of the $145,000 Bob Hope Desert Golf Classic. Lanny Wadkins, 22, of Winston Salem, N.C., was one stroke back and two 24-year-old Californians, Jerry Heard of Visalia and Johnny Miller of Napa, finished two off Rosburg's 90-hole total of 344, under par by 16.

"I was pleased with the way my nerves held up," said Rosburg. "After not having won in 11 years, it's very hard not to look at the bad things that might happen."

Rosburg's pro victories came in the 1959 PGA championship and the 1961 Bing Crosby ProAm.

Rosburg had rounds of 66-69-72-70-67, the first and last at the 6,500-yard Indian Wells Country Club course.

"I went 90 holes without three-putting a green, which around here is wonderful—I'm sure that won me the tournament. I thought I could get by 90 holes without hitting a ball out of bounds, and I did," said Rosburg.

As Rosburg sank five birdie putts ranging from five to 25 feet and played without a bogey in his final round, 72-hole leader Heard had his problems on the second hole, hitting his tee shot out of bounds into a swimming pool and winding up with a triple-bogey seven. He finished with a 71.

"I just didn't drive well today," said Heard. "I tied for third—not a bad deal. I'm getting closer to it."

Heard and Miller, who shot a 67, won $8,555, and Wadkins, who had 67, pocketed $16,530.

The 5-foot-8½ Wadkins missed a 35 to 40-foot eagle try by about half a foot on the 18th green to prevent a playoff. This was only the second tournament of the year to end after the scheduled number of holes.

Bob Murphy, 29, was fifth with a final-round 66 and 347 total, one stroke better than Arnold Palmer, who had a 69.

Asked about the three comparative youngsters close behind him, Rosburg said, "they're really tough. I told my wife if I lose to someone like Johnny Miller, there's nothing I can do about it."

Just now good they are, said Rosburg, "we'll have to wait and see."

Wadkins and Heard played in a foursome with the 42-year-old Palmer, defending champion and four-time winner here.

Wadkins, like Palmer a former Wake Forest student, said Arnie's army of followers didn't bother him, and he enjoyed the experience.

"Arnie said before we teed off that between us we had won 77 tournaments," said Wadkins, who quickly figured the number to Palmer's credit. "I haven't won any and Heard has won one."

Story-Book Finish Marks 11th Winter Olympics

Daytona Speedway Triumph Is 'Something For Grandchildren'

By BLOYS BRITT
AP Auto Racing Writer
DAYTONA BEACH, Fla.
(AP) — For Andy Hampton, who admits he's in the twilight of his career, winning a race at famed Daytona International Speedway "is something your grandchildren can remember after you're gone."

"It really doesn't mean that much to me, other than showing the younger drivers that you still have what it takes to win. But it means a lot to my seven children back home," the pudgy, greying, 43-year-old campaigner from Louisville, Ky., said Sunday.

Hampton, who with his four sons operates a "soft sell" used car business when he isn't racing, had just won the ninth annual Royal Triton 300 stock car race at Daytona—a race he dominated like no other driver in recent years.

He broke away from the other 39 starters with the dropping of the green flag and, except for brief pit stops, was never out of the lead. He paced the field for 104 of the 120 laps.

Hampton, frequently turning the awesome 2.5 mile trioval at speeds above 178 miles per hour, averaged 139.175 m.p.h. for his 300 mile trip—an outing he said was made "just a little bit tough by high winds."

Iggy Katona, a 56-year-old veteran from Willis, Mich. finished second, while Red Farmer of Hueytown, Ala., a comparative youngster at 37, was third. Both trailed Hampton by more than five miles.

Dave Sisco of Nashville, Tenn., and Charles McWilliams of Walton, Ky., were fourth and fifth, respectively, far off the pace.

Hampton was paid $4,300, a small sum as auto racing purses go these days, but still the biggest on the ARCA circuit each year. The money, however, wasn't the big thing for the winner.

"I have a lot of trophies scattered around the house in Louisville," he said, "but the one I took for winning at Daytona back in 1968 has a special place all by itself. This one will go in beside it, something for my children and grandchildren to scrap over when I'm gone."

The race, favored by mild, clear weather, drew 23,500 spectators and most of them were still around when Hampton completed his 2 hour, 9 minute, 20 second chore, though it was obvious from the half-way point on who the winner should be.

Asked how much longer he expects to race, Hampton smiled and said, "Well, all you need is a pair of strong arms, 20-20 vision and enough sense to stay out of trouble. I've still got all three."

"Anyway, every time I win I manage to sell a few more used cars back home."

HOW SWEET IT IS — Andy Hampton kisses his winning trophy at Dayton Beach in Victory Lane after powering his 1969 Ford for the win in the ARC Royal Triton 300 auto race. Hampton, from Louisville, Ky., turned the course for the 300-mile event with an average speed of 139.175 m.p.h. (AP Wirephoto)

Something's Wrong When U.S., Canada Not Qualified

BY GEOFFREY MILLER
Associated Press Sports Writer
SAPPORO, Japan (AP) — Something has gone wrong with the World amateur ice hockey scene.

The United States, silver medalist in the 11th Winter Olympics which ended here Sunday, is not qualified to play in the A pool of this year's World Championships.

Canada, acknowledged as the leading ice hockey country in the world, is neither in the championships nor the Olympics.

"It's crazy," said Hal Trumble, manager of the U.S. Olympic Hockey team. "A World Championships without Canada or the United States is not a World Championships at all. It's just a European tournament."

The World Championships are scheduled for Prague in early April. They will be contested by Russia, Czechoslovakia, Sweden, West Germany, Finland and Switzerland.

The Americans have to play in the Class B pool, starting in Bucharest March 25. They must win that pool to get back into the A pool of the 1973 World Championships. Canada has dropped out of both the World Championships and the Olympics. That is because the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, which wants to include pros in its national team, has quarreled with the International Ice Hockey Federation.

James Worrall, Canadian member of the International Olympic Committee, said he had done everything he could to bring Canada into the Olympic Hockey Tournament.

"We tried, but we always came up against protocol. We were told the CAHA must go through the international federation to the IOC."

Canada pulled out of the World Championships two years ago because the IIHF reversed a decision to allow a limited number of pros in each national team.

Worrall commented: "Naturally Canadians, with all their hockey traditions, are not content to enter a team that does not truly represent Canada."

"We have several hundred Canadian pro hockey players, and that means any strictly amateur team is a long way from the Canadian top bracket."

"I think Russia, and to a lesser extent Czechoslovakia and Sweden, play hockey of the standard of the National Hockey League. They come here as amateurs, and the Canadians don't come at all."

SAPPORO, Japan (AP) — The 11th Winter Olympic Games now belong to history and the record books following a finish that was strictly story book.

The 10 days of competition ended Sunday with the United States ice hockey team, which almost didn't qualify for medal competition, winning a silver and a Spanish skier winning a gold, the first medal of any kind his country has earned in Winter Olympics history.

Francisco Fernandez Ochoa's gold medal in the men's special slalom race and the U.S. hockey team's silver, which became reality when the Soviet Union beat Czechoslovakia, wrote an end to the Games which were pocked by controversy away from the athletic venues and by surprises at them.

"We should drop the Winter Games—they are not universal and they foster professionalism, especially in skiing," Avery Brundage president of the International Olympic Committee, said Sunday.

Brundage figured prominently in the Games' major controversy which erupted three days before the start of competition when the IOC banned Austrian Alpine skiing ace Karl Schranz from competition because of commercialism.

Skiing also figured prominently in surprises produced by the competition. Besides Fernandez Ochoa's upset in the men's special slalom, 17-year-old Marie Therese Nadig of Switzerland won the women's downhill and giant slalom, both times edging world champion Annemarie Proell of Austria, and Barbara Cochran of Richmond, Va., won the women's special slalom.

The silver medal by the U.S. hockey team was the only medal won by the American men in what was their worst Winter Olympic showing ever.

The young and eager U.S. squad had to beat Switzerland before the Olympics officially opened to qualify for Group A and a chance at a medal.

Once in Group A, the Americans went on to upset Czechoslovakia, beat Finland Saturday and ended with a 3-2 record and six points.

Then the Americans sat back and waited for what goalie Michael Curran called "a story book ending," and what Coach Murray Williamson termed "unbelievable."

The U.S. team was assured of at least a bronze medal when Finland upset Sweden 4-3 Sunday. It then got the silver, and the first medal in hockey since the surprise gold in 1960, when the Soviet Union beat Czechoslovakia 5-2 for the title.

Joining Barbara Cochran in a face-saving performance by U.S. women were gold medalists Dianne Holum and Anne Henning, two speed-skating whizzes from Northbrook, Ill.

Miss Holum, the teen-age darling of the 1968 U.S. team when she won a silver and bronze, won her gold in the 1,500 meters and added a silver in the 3,000 meters. The 16-year-old Miss Henning zipped to her gold in the 500 meters and got the bronze in the 1,000 meters.

The three golds were the most won by the United States in the Winter Olympics since they won three in 1960. The U.S. athletes could only bring home one gold each in the 1964 and 1968 Games. And Miss Cochran's gold was the first for the United States in Olympic Alpine skiing since Andrea Meade Lawrence won the giant and special slaloms in 1952. U.S. men have never won an Olympic Alpine gold.

Other U.S. medal winners here were Susan Corrock of Ketchum, Idaho, a bronze in the women's downhill, and Janet Lynn of Rockford, Ill., a bronze in women's figure skating.

Other highs and lows that marked the 11th Games included:

—Three gold medals by speed skater Ard Schenk of The Netherlands.

—The banishment of West German hockey player Alois Schodel after drug tests showed he had used an illegal drug.

—The 1-2-3 finish by the host Japanese in the 70-meter ski jump.

—The dismal showing by Alpine skiing powers Austria and France. Neither could win a gold in skiing and France failed to get a gold at all. The Austrian gold was won by figure skater Beatrix Shuba.

—The disappointing showing by U.S. figure skaters.

—The victory by Russian Vyacheslav Vedenin in the men's 30-kilometer cross-country ski race for the first gold medal of the Games and his tremendous anchor leg that brought the Soviet Union a gold Sunday in the men's 40-kilometer cross-country relay.

The Worry Clinic Ego Inflation Is Your Secret

Diana is very unhappy. She lacks girl friends and has never had a date. But she soon became popular by using the "Stoop to conquer" strategy outlined below. So send for that surefire booklet that teaches you the 5 rules for tooting the other person's horn!

By GEORGE W. CRANE, Ph.D., M.D.
Case T-501: Diana B., aged 17 is miserable.

"Dr. Crane," she moaned, "nobody likes me and I never have had a date with a boy."

"Maybe it is because I am so shy and tongue-tied, for I never know what to say when I am with people."

"So how can I become popular?"

"Or are some folks just born to be unhappy and friendless?"

Stoop To Conquer
Nobody is "born" popular or unpopular.

But everybody is "born" with this invisible tattoo across his chest:

"I WANT TO BE IMPORTANT."

So the popular people soon stumble upon this secret and then capitalize upon it early in life.

For they discover that if a boy and a girl are seated side by side in class or on a bus or park bench and each is branded with that desire for importance, then one of them must figuratively "stoop to conquer."

So the smart girl will temporarily curb her own desire to show off and appear important.

Instead, she will analyze her companion for some merit or virtue and then consciously phrase an honest compliment thereon.

That immediately makes the other person feel more important and thus happier.

But when we are happy, our surroundings look more beautiful, and that includes our own human companions, too!

So the person who receives this first compliment thus regards its author with more favor.

In fact, the recipient of the compliment thinks the girl who praised him has good judgment! And soon he may return the compliment.

So both receive a boost for their ego.

Meanwhile, that verbal compliment helps break the ice and starts conversation.

Soon, such a couple of former strangers now are gaily conversing and the boy may finally ask the girl for a date.

It's that simple, girls!

Just curb your innate desire to toot your own horn by self-advertising. Instead, toot the boy's horn!

Then he will reciprocate by tooting your horn, too.

So both of you get your horns tooted.

And the music always sounds much sweeter when somebody else is tooting your horn for you. Alas, many tactless folks are so hungry to have their horn tooted that they engage in blatant self-advertising, which offends their companions.

The usual wedding couple is merely a duet of horn-tooters, each of whom tooted the other person's horn!

Ultimately, they became so dependent on each other for further ego inflation that they feel they can't live without each other!

So send for the "Compliment Club Booklet," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 cents.

It's easy to win friends (and wedding rings). (Always write to Dr. Crane in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

HE LOST TWO WAYS
BALTIMORE (AP) — Dr. Joseph Krall, a dentist, told police a man he was treating for a toothache and a companion waiting for him stole his wallet at gunpoint.

The pair fled with more than $500 in cash and $300 in parimutuel tickets purchased that day at Bowie Race Course.

None of the horses won.

Godwin Will Seek Senate

GATESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — House Speaker Phil Godwin of Gatesville announced today he will be a candidate for one of the two state Senate seats in North Carolina's 1st Senatorial District.

In making the announcement, Godwin officially filed with the Gates Board of Elections. He said, "I feel that my qualifications for this important office speak for themselves in that I have served in the House of Representatives since 1961."

Godwin was elected speaker of the House July 3, 1969. He is a native of Gatesville and a graduate of the Wake Forest Law School.

The 1971 General Assembly revamped the state's Senate districts. Three incumbent senators were placed in the 1st District, which was increased from 10 to 14 counties. However, one of them, Sen. George Wood, D-Camden, has said he will not seek re-election. The other two, Sens. Ashley Futrell, D-Beaufort, and J. J. Harrington, D-Bertie, are expected to run again.

One-At-A-Time Solution Best

NEW YORK (UPI)—Finding time for smaller grooming practices is often difficult with a demanding infant in the home. The solution for the new mother: do the personal grooming tasks separately on a daily basis. Plan a manicure for one day, a pedicure the next. Try to include one beauty routine in each day. Finding the extra hours to catch up may be impossible if you wait to do all the grooming things at once.

owner, said he was "under capitalized" that first year.

Turner said average monthly revenues have improved about 50 per cent, but that the station still is in trouble financially. He said he would have had to declare bankruptcy if viewers had not contributed any money.

Turner also is an owner of Turner Broadcasting, which operates WGTN-TV in Atlanta. WRET-TV operates on channel 36 in Charlotte, a metropolitan area of about 350,000.

The station has a broadcasting radius of about 50 miles and is hooked up to 37 cables for cable television in other cities in North Carolina and South Carolina, according to salesman Hoyle.

GOREN ON BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN
(© 1972, By The Chicago Tribune)

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q. 1—Both, vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A43 ♥AK ♣K92 ♦109864
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ 1 ♠ 2 ♦ 2 ♠
Pass Pass 3 ♥ Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—A drastic bid by you is in order at this time. While your hand started out with a value of 15 points, it has increased enormously as the bidding has developed, for you to solidify both of partner's suits. The indicated call is, therefore, three spades, a cue bid forcing to game. Partner can hardly play you for more inasmuch as you passed East's two spade bid, which in itself was rather a conservative maneuver.

Q. 2—As South vulnerable, you hold:
♠Q1072 ♥853 ♣KJ ♦10984
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♥ 1 ♠ 2 ♥ 1 ♠
2 ♥ Pass 3 ♥ Pass
2 ♥ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—Two no trump. This may seem rather drastic with only six pints in high cards, but partner has shown a very powerful hand, with a value of at least 19 points, which gives the partnership a minimum of 25 points. It seems to us it is desirable to indicate possession of a partial stopper in clubs.

Q. 3 — Neither vulnerable, opponent opens with one club and you hold:
♠KJ1074 ♥A864 ♣K753 ♦Void

What do you bid?
A.—This hand has splendid offensive possibilities and may well produce a game in the best suit the partner may have a below average hand. The best way to portray this strength is by a takeout double. A mere one spade overall will not do justice to your holding, and partner may fail to act with just enough values for your purposes. Valued according to our methods, this hand is worth 14 points, 11 in high cards and 3 for distribution, which brings it up to the standard for a takeout double.

Q. 4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠642 ♥AKJ75 ♦AQ4 ♣83
The bidding has proceeded:
East South

What do you bid?
A.—Pass. This hand tempts many players into a two heart overcall, which is fraught with danger. While prospects of game are remote at the present time, the risk of a sizable penalty is distinct. Beware of hands in which you have three losing cards in the suit which your adversary has opened the bidding.

Q. 5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQJ1094 ♥A6 ♦AA ♣AQ93
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
2 ♠ Pass 3 ♠ Pass
4 NT Pass 5 ♠ Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—Our choice is six spades. Since partner has made a positive response to your two bid without the ace of clubs, he surely has either the king of diamonds or the king of hearts, or both. This answers the problem of disposing of the six of hearts, for surely he must have a club suit as good as five to the king-jack.

Q. 6—As South vulnerable, you hold:
♠KJ9862 ♥Void ♦A92 ♣AK82
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♥ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
2 ♥ Pass 3 ♠ Pass
3 ♥ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—Three spades. In this sequence of calls, the three spade bid is absolutely forcing. The partnership has shown such general strength that playing for a part score would be entirely out of the question. This is a convenient opportunity to show that you have a six card spade suit.

Q. 7—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠Q10864 ♥73 ♦62 ♣AJ84
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♥ 2 ♦ Pass Pass
1 ♥ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—So far as partner is concerned, you may have nothing, yet he is forcing you to bid again at the level of two. He must, therefore, have a powerful holding. If you should respond with only two spades, he will have to proceed on the theory that your hand lacks offensive values. In order to avoid such a construction, you should bid one spade more than necessary, in other words, three spades.

Q. 8 — Neither vulnerable, partner opens with one spade and you hold:
♠K72 ♥AJ84 ♦KQ5 ♣A64
What is your response?

A.—There is a response which announces to partner, "I have a 4-3-3-3 hand and could have opened with one no trump had been the dealer. Take it from here; you know what I have." That bid is three no trump.

Farm Tips

By Dr. J. W. Pou
Agricultural Specialist

A disease resistance wheat with the same high yielding capacity as the famous Blueboy variety is being released by North Carolina State University. It is named Blueboy II.

The variety was developed by Dr. Charles Murphy specifically for resistance to leaf rust, the number one disease of wheat in the southeast.

It has practically all of the outstanding qualities that has made its Blueboy parent, since its release in 1966, the second most widely planted soft winter wheat in the eastern United States.

"The real significance of Blueboy II is that it will allow growers in rust problem areas to enjoy the high production potential of the Blueboy line of wheat," commented J. C. Williamson, Jr., director of NCSU agricultural research.

Williamson said seed of Blueboy II will be increased by certified seed growers and be available for farmer planting in the fall of 1972.

Blueboy II has been in development since 1965, even before Dr. Murphy finalized work on the original Blueboy — the first semi-dwarf, stiff-strawed soft winter wheat of wide adaptability to be introduced in the eastern U. S. production area.

Blueboy has become the number one wheat variety in North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia, New Jersey, Mississippi, Kentucky and Maryland, and it is grown extensively from Florida to Ontario, Canada.

The state average wheat yield in North Carolina has increased 40 percent since the variety was introduced, with some individual yields going as high as 100 bushels per acre.

Rust, a fungus disease, has become a problem on Blueboy, especially in certain areas of the southeast. It has become so serious in some sections, including certain parts of eastern North Carolina, that growers have been forced to plant other varieties.

The source of rust resistance in Blueboy II was furnished by plant breeders in Texas from a cross they made of a hard red winter wheat and a wild relative of common wheat.

Dr. Murphy explained that tests with Blueboy II indicated that the new line has a moderate to good resistance to a broad range of races of the rust disease.

Blueboy II apparently doesn't have the broad resistance to mildew that the original Blueboy has. Mildew is a disease factor in soft winter wheat but usually not as serious as rust.

The new variety has the same general appearance as Blueboy. It is a semi-dwarf with very stiff straw, good tillering capacity and responds well to high rates of fertilization.

It appears to have the same good winter hardiness as Blueboy, which is the first soft winter variety developed for the southeast that can be grown successfully in northern areas.

Early test results indicate that Blueboy II has a slightly higher test weight than its major parent and a similar high milling quality.

Blueboy II yields have compared very favorably with Blueboy. In 26 different tests from throughout the South and East in 1971, Blueboy averaged just over 56 bushels per acre and Blueboy II averaged almost 60 bushels.

In tests in serious rust problem areas, Blueboy II yields have been significantly higher than those of Blueboy.

Tobacco TIPS

By SAM J. WEEKS

In recent years, foliar sprays have been used as a part of the tobacco fertilization program on some farms. When used, the application of foliar sprays has been used as a supplemental application of nutrients — mainly for the nitrogen content of the solution.

Urea is the form of nitrogen in foliar sprays. Experiments have shown that supplying nitrogen to tobacco plants through foliar sprays of urea solutions is neither efficient, practical, or economical.

In tests made by the North Carolina Experiment Station, it has been determined that supplying nitrogen through urea foliar spray to the leaf interfered with plant absorption of calcium and magnesium, and the growth and development of the root system. When this takes place, both yield and quality of the leaf are lowered in proportion to the amount of urea sprays used.

The use of foliar sprays and solid nitrate nitrogen was compared by the Experiment Station personnel by applying each of these materials one to two weeks prior to the beginning of harvest. All plots received 1000 pounds of 4-8-12 preplant fertilizer per acre. In each case, the foliar applied nitrogen gave a lower yield than the solid nitrate form applied to the soil. In two of the three cases, the yield was actually lower where nitrogen was applied as foliar spray than when no additional nitrogen was supplied. The leaf from plants which received the spray was dull in color while the leaf from the other treatments was clear in color. In short, all of our results suggest that if a

North Carolina's seed law was revised by the 1971 General Assembly. Some of the new provisions make it one of the most far-reaching such laws in the nation. The most pertinent changes are as follows:

1. A variety name must appear on the label of each kind of agricultural seed, or instead, the phrase "Variety not stated."
2. A "brand name," other than a registered trademark, may not be used to identify seeds unless a variety name is used. Also, if a brand name is used, it must be a separate statement from the variety name, if the brand name is a designation other than a Registered Trademark name.
3. All hybrid field corn seed must be recorded with the Commissioner of Agriculture.
4. The cytoplasm identity of all corn seeds sold in 1972 must be declared on the label.
5. The sale of non-certified seed by variety name is prohibited if it is a variety which has been given a certificate of variety protection to be sold only as a class of certified seed.
6. All seeds which have been treated must be discolored, if they carry a residue in excess of accepted USDA or FDA standards.
7. And investigation Committee may be appointed by the Commissioner of Agriculture to investigate complaints by farmers that seeds failed to perform as represented. The committee may recommend remuneration as a remedy for loss.

This last amendment is a broad authority which is intended as a tool to investigate complaints arising from seed failures. It is still expected that most problems' can best be handled at the local level between the grower and seedsmen. (Any seed dealer being sued in any court by a farmer alleging damages as result of failure of seeds purchased to perform as labeled may request an investigation by the investigation committee.)

This law strengthens the need for farmers to keep good records of their farming operations. Seed labels, sample containers, labels from chemicals and cultural practices employed are all important. Seed invoices should show lot numbers, variety and date of purchase. In general, any record or item that may affect a farmers ability to "show proof" should be helpful.

More complete details about the N.C. Seed law are available from the Agricultural Extension Agents.

ChurchBoard For 'Busing'

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The general board of the National Council of Churches has called for a determined effort to end racial imbalance in the nation's schools and asked government leaders to oppose anti-busing measures.

The board, in its midwinter meeting Sunday, adopted a measure "restating" the commitment to equal educational opportunity it first made in 1962.

"In the absence of integrated housing," the resolution said, busing of school children is "among the many effective methods which should be used to achieve higher degrees of equal educational opportunity."

The board said that 18 years after the Supreme Court outlawed segregation, "there is more racial imbalance in the schools."

It urged the President, Congress, and state legislators to assume leadership in a determined effort to achieve integration, and to oppose all anti-busing legislation.

The board said it planned to telegraph its statement to the President and to congressional leaders.

SEAGOING DONATION

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (AP) — Kasidah II is the newest addition to Texas A&M University's oceanographic fleet.

The 110-foot seagoing yacht, appraised at $175,000, was donated by Mrs. Jeannea A. Saunders of Corona Del Mar, Calif.

Dr. Richard A. Geyer, head of A&M's Oceanography Department, said Kasidah II will be converted for use as the university's prime vessel for studies along the continental shelf in the Gulf of Mexico.

Hearing Set In ShotgunSlaying Collectors Hear Kinston Guests

The Greenville Collectors Club held its second monthly meeting this week at the home of membership chairman Mickey Elmore.

In addition to regular members, visitors from the Kinston Club attended. They suggested several possible projects, such as their club "dig" which unearthed a number of Civil War relics, a Crafts Festival in cooperation with the Kinston Arts Council and the Lenoir County Historical Society, and a Flea Market.

The only requirement for membership in the informal organization is an interest in collecting old or unusual items, and being able to discuss it with other members at the meetings. Ronald Moye showed part of his collection of fossils discovered in and near Pitt County.

The March meeting will be held at the Elmore Home, 207-A Summit St., on March 16 at 7:30 p.m. In April, the Greenville club will host the Kinston group for a tour and discussion of ECU's Manuscript Collection, courtesy of curator Donald R. Lennon. Interested collectors are invited to attend.

MORGANTON, N. C. (AP) — A 20-year-old man will get a hearing Wednesday on a charge that he killed his father with a shotgun Saturday.

The defendant, Thomas Eugene Norman, is being held in the Buke County Jail on a charge of murder in the slaying of Glen Thomas Norman, 45. The elder Norman's body was found about 3 a. m. Saturday in the yard of his home. He had been shot once in the chest with a shotgun.
