Honorable Mention

"Not being named an all-America city is a disappointment but is not a cause for despair," Harold Creech, president of Greenville Chamber of Commerce and Merchants Association commented this morning after receiving word that Greenville was not one of the recipients of the All-America Cities Award for 1971.

"One of the major objectives in entering the contest was to motivate increased interest and efforts to improve the community, and certainly, this has been done," Creech said.

In a letter dated 18 February, William G. Andersen, Jr., Senior Associate for the National Municipal League, informed Creech that "Greenville has been cited for honorable mention in the All-America Cities Award of 1971.

"It is not uncommon," Andersen wrote, "for the honorable mention city of one year to become the All-America City of a later competition, and we hope this will be the case with your community."

Creech says he feels "that even if we did not win in the competition, neither did we lose, for we were one of 17 finalists selected from hundreds of entries from throughout the nation. Also, we now have an increased interest in making Greenville a better place in which to live."

Organizations and co-chairmen of the bid for Greenville were the Human Relations Council, Dr. Andrew Best; Greenville Chamber of Commerce and Merchants Association, Louis Clark; and the Greenville Jaycees, Larry Graham.

Incumbent District Judges To Seek Re-Election This Year

J. W. H. ROBERTS

Four incumbent District Judges, J. W. H. Roberts, Herbert O. Phillips, Charles H. Whedbee, and Robert D. Wheeler announced today that they will seek re-election to the bench posts they have held since 1968.

The four men have served the District Courts in the Third Judicial District — including Pitt, Craven, Pamlico and Carteret Counties — since they replaced the old recorders court system.

Jude J. W. H. Roberts of Greenville is presently serving as chief judge of the Third District, having been appointed to the post by the late R. Hunt Parker, Chief Justice of the North Carolina Supreme Court. As chief judge, he was responsible for setting up and administering the District Court system in the four-county district.

A Wayne County native, Judge Roberts served as Judge of the old Greenville Municipal Records Court for 11 years and has been an attorney in Greenville for 32 years. He graduated from George Washington University and the George Washington Law School where he attended as a part-time self-help student.

Prior to beginning his practice in Greenville in 1936, he was associated with the Home Owners Loan Corporation and the U.S. Department of Justice in Washington, D.C.

Judge Phillips of Morehead City, the only jurist in the district who is not from Pitt

CHARLES H. WHEDBEE

County, is a Carteret County native and a graduate of Morehead City High School.

The 43-year-old jurist received a B.S. degree in commerce from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill in 1948 and his law degree from the UNC Law School in 1951. He was awarded the Doctor of Law from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill in 1951. He was awarded the Doctor of Law from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill in 1951. He was awarded the Doctor of Law from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill in 1951.

A Gallup spokesman said Sunday that Muskie is favored by 29 per cent of Democratic voters nationwide, compared with 24 per cent for Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts and 23 per cent for Humphrey.

The poll was based on interviews with 605 Democrats out of a total sampling of 1,450 persons between Feb. 4-7.

The poll said Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota was favored by 5 per cent of those interviewed, Sen. Henry Jack-County attorney from 1963 to 1968.

Judge Phillips, during the past four years, has served as a special judge in other districts and in 1971 was one of four District Judges in the state chosen to participate in a panel discussion for the state District Judges' Conference at the Institute of Government in Chapel Hill.

He has also pioneered a move among some churches and civic organizations within the district to obtain suitable foster homes for the care of juveniles where a need for special help has become apparent in juvenile court hearings.

Judge Phillips is married to the former Frances Bunn and they have three children. He is a Rotarian, a member of the Moose Lodge, a past president of the Morehead City Jaycees and is a past recipient of the club's Distinguished Service Award. The judge is also a member of the First Baptist Church of Morehead.

The first of the four incumbent judges to file for re-election, Judge Whedbee is a Greenville native, the son of the late Superior Court Judge Harry W. Whedbee and the late Sallie L. Whedbee.

He completed undergraduate and law schools at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill after attending Greenville City Schools and was elected solicitor of the Pitt County Records Court, an office he held for several terms until

Urges Long March Toward Peace

Nixon Holds Talks With Mao And Chou

By FRANK CORMIER
Associated Press Writer

PEKING (AP) — President Nixon met today with China's top leaders, holding separate talks with Mao Tse-tung and Chou En-lai. Then, at a banquet in his honor, he said he was appealing to them to "start a long march together" with the United States toward peace.

"Not in lockstep," the President said, "but on different roads toward the same goal."

Both sides acknowledged the wide differences between Communist China and capitalist America but both expressed a desire for peaceful relations without compromising principles.

Nixon's remarks were made at an informal banquet given by the Chinese for him and Mrs. Nixon in the Great Hall of the People off to one side of Tien An Men Square—the Square of Heavenly Peace.

At the banquet, Chou spelled out China's terms for the establishment of diplomatic relations between Washington and Peking.

And the President told Chou there is no need for the United States and China to be enemies, as they have been for the past 20 years.

It was the final event of Nixon's historic arrival day on the Chinese mainland as the first American president ever to do so.

He had spent an hour with Chairman Mao, the 78-year-old supreme leader of Chinese communism. Afterward the meeting was described as "frank and serious" by both the Americans and the Chinese. In Communist phraseology, frank and serious usually means disagreement.

Then the President conferred with Premier Chou.

Next came the banquet for the Nixons and the other Americans with them. A Chinese band played American and Chinese tunes and the Nixons ate with chopsticks.

Chou sat next to the Nixons during the dinner and made his proposals for diplomatic relations in his toasts.

Americans and Chinese are both great peoples who have always been friendly to each other "but owing to reasons known to all, the contacts between the two peoples were suspended for over 20 years," Chou said.

But, he added, the gates to friendship have been opened by a desire of both Americans and Chinese for a relaxation of tensions.

"The social systems of China and of the United States are fundamentally different, and there are great differences between the two governments," Chou said. "However these differences should not hinder China and the United States from establishing normal relations on the basis of five principles: (1) of mutual respect for the sovereignty and territorial integrity of nations, (2) of mutual nonaggression, (3) of noninterference in internal affairs, (4) of mutual equality, and (5) of peaceful coexistence."

Nixon responded to Chou's toast by noting that if China and the United States remain enemies the future of the world is dark. He said common interests bring the United States and China together now to transcend their differences.

"As we discuss our differences," the President added, "neither of us will compromise our principles. Although we cannot close the gulf between us, we can try to bridge it so that we may be able to talk across it."

"And so let us in these next five days start a long march together. Not in lockstep but on different roads to the same goal: a goal of building a world structure of peace and justice in which all may stand together with equal dignity, in which each nation, large or small, has a right to determine its own form of government free of outside interference or domination."

"The world watches, the world listens, the world waits to see what we will do," Nixon asserted.

Near the start of his response to Chou's toast, Nixon had declared: "What we say here will not be long remembered. What we do here can change the world."

He complimented the Chinese band that played for the diners, saying: "I have never heard American music played better in a foreign land."

Among other selections, the band played the national anthem of each country.

The President and Mrs. Nixon sat with Chou at a table for 20 in the center of the Great Hall. The others sat at round tables for 10.

Mrs. Nixon, wearing an informal short red velvet suit with high neck and long sleeves, sat at Chou's left and the President at his right.

Both Nixons ate with chopsticks and the Chinese hosts occasionally leaned over to serve a tidbit to the First Lady.

Nixon met Mao between 3 and 4 p.m. at the chairman's home. With the President was Henry A. Kissinger, his special adviser. Chou accompanied them to the house along with Wang Hai-yung, deputy director of protocol, and an interpreter from the Foreign Ministry.

Mao did not meet Nixon at the airport on his arrival in late morning, but this was not unusual.

After the Mao meeting the 59-year-old American President had his first formal talk with Premier Chou, 73. A number of others are likely to follow in the week-long visit.

County Commissioner Vernon Cox Dies After Illness; Rites Tuesday

WINTERVILLE — Pitt County Commissioner Vernon Cox Sr., 56, died early this morning in Pitt Memorial Hospital. He had been ill one week.

Funeral services will be conducted Tuesday at 3 p.m. at the Winterville Missionary Baptist Church by his pastor, the Rev. Horace Thompson, assisted by the Rev. Richard Davis and the Rev. C. A. Francis, former pastors. Burial will be in the Winterville Cemetery.

All Pitt County offices will be closed from 1 p.m. on tomorrow in honor of Cox. The body will be taken to the church one hour prior to the funeral from the Wilkerson Funeral Home. Honorary pallbearers will be members of the Winterville Kiwanis Club, the Winterville Ruritan Club, the Church Board of Deacons, the Pitt County Board of Commissioners, and the director of the Winterville Machine Works.

A Winterville native, Cox spent all his life here and attended Winterville School and

N.C. State University at Raleigh. He was a founder and vice president and director of Winterville Machine Works Inc., formerly A. G. Cox Manufac-

Mortar Attacks By North Viets

By GEORGE ESPER
Associated Press Writer

SAIGON (AP) — The Vietnamese Communists welcomed President Nixon to Asia today with a spate of attacks that killed two Americans, wounded 10 and destroyed or damaged a half dozen helicopters and one tank. Most of the action occurred north of Saigon.

Two terrorist assaults were reported on South Vietnamese positions in the Mekong Delta, with 33 or 34 militiamen killed and eight wounded. Three other outposts and government offices in the delta were overrun or partially overrun during the weekend.

Many U.S. and South Vietnamese officials had anticipated a major offensive and rocket and terrorist attacks in Saigon in an effort to embarrass Nixon on his arrival in Peking. Instead, scattered rocket, mortar and terror attacks were reported overnight.

"We had good reason to expect something overnight," said the American officer in Saigon. "The enemy apparently changed his plans. Either he didn't have the capability, he found out we knew and were on the alert or he was ordered by higher headquarters to cancel."

U.S. officials had anticipated the main target of the offensive would be South Vietnam's central highlands.

The U.S. Command said that enemy gunners fired 10 rockets into the American air bases at Phu Loi, 10 miles north of Saigon, at Bien Hoa, 15 miles northeast of Saigon, and at Phan Rang, on the central coast. Seven Americans were wounded in the three attacks and light damage was reported to one helicopter, some buildings and vehicles.

Enemy troops shot down a U.S. light observation helicopter on a reconnaissance mission 25 miles northwest of Saigon, then shot up three other helicopters trying to aid the downed aircraft. Two crewmen were killed and one was wounded, the Command said.

A sixth helicopter was shot down in the Mekong Delta while on a reconnaissance mission, but the crewmen escaped uninjured.

Two Americans were wounded when a tank triggered a mine 25 miles northeast of Saigon. The South Vietnamese command reported 65 enemy attacks across South Vietnam on Saturday and Sunday.

A half dozen of these were major attacks concentrated in the Mekong Delta and in the far northern Da Nang region. Field reports said they accounted for 76 South Vietnamese killed and 47 wounded. Eight enemy troops were known killed.

In Cambodia, enemy forces have launched a heavy counter-attack against a government position four miles west of the ancient temple of Angkor Wat, reports from the nearby city of Siem Reap said today.

The reports said the fighting began Sunday and was continuing at the village of Bos Thom.

Labor Leader In Governor's Race

RALEIGH (AP) — Labor leader Wilbur Hobby filed today as a Democratic candidate for governor for those "hundreds of thousands of plain people who are the backbone of North Carolina."

Clutching a fistful of $1 bills, Hobby told a news conference his $385 filing fee marked the start of "the hardest fought campaign ever waged."

"I will speak out for the poor average taxpayer who now has no voice, and for those who wish real progress for our state," Hobby said.

Hobby, who said he would retain his job as president of the state AFL-CIO, said he was "not a special interest candidate." "I will discuss the problems in this state, and seek the support of, not only the more than 140,000 union members in this state, but also the hundreds of thousands of plain people who are the backbone of North Carolina but who do not receive fair treatment from the big boys in our state," he said.

Parents Should Inform Daughter

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1972 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: In regard to the teen-ager who wanted to entertain her friends at home, but got a lot of static from her Dad who criticized their music, their dancing, and complained about the noise:

We've always encouraged our 16-year-old daughter to have her friends over. We have pizza and soft drinks for them, plus we sit in the kitchen watching black and white TV while the kids are in the living room with the color set.

Now, I ask you, when things turn up missing after her friends have been here, what do we do? Also, my husband has sinus trouble, but those kids light up one cigarette after another until the whole house smells like a poolhall. Then they walk out without even a goodbye or thank you to the parents.

When we see some kids in our home we've never seen before and ask our daughter to introduce us, she says: "They don't do things like that anymore." [Don't they?]

Please answer this in the paper. I think other parents might be interested in your reply. TWO OLD SQUARES

DEAR SQUARES: When things turn up "missing," you should promptly inform your daughter, who should in turn question her friends.

If you can't find some effective way to eliminate [or at least minimize] the smoke, you may have to tolerate it, but people with manners still say goodbye and thank you.

I don't know who "they" are, but parents should be introduced to everyone who spends an evening in their home.

DEAR ABBY: A "WILLING WIDOW" wrote that she wanted to marry a wonderful widower, but he told her that he had had surgery which terminated his sex life and therefore would not marry her.

She said she had sworn to him on a stack of Bibles that sex was of little importance to her, but he still wouldn't marry her.

She appealed to you, and you said: "Get a higher stack of Bibles!"

Abby, your answer greatly disappointed me. That woman doesn't need a higher stack of Bibles. She and her gentleman friend need a good sex manual.

It is tragic that so many men believe that because of a physical condition, or advanced age, they are useless sexually. It simply is not true! Just as a man who has lost a limb must learn to walk again, that widower must learn to satisfy his partner with other techniques. He sounds like such a fine unselfish man. Please reconsider and suggest a really explicit "how to" book.

MRS. L. M. IN COLUMBIA, MO.

DEAR MRS. M.: You are absolutely right! I'll take 10 whacks with the best "how to" manual I've ever come across. It's "A Doctor Speaks on Sexual Expression in Marriage," by Donald W. Hastings. ["Human Sexual Response" by Masters and Johnson is also excellent, but it's twice as thick!]

DEAR ABBY: Those letters from secretaries and their dilemmas over receiving pornographic mail addressed to their bosses gave me a great big pain.

In the first place, what is "pornography?" Even the United States Supreme Court can't agree. Suffice it to say that it's every secretary's duty to open her boss' mail and give it to him. If he didn't order any of the porno and doesn't care to receive it, I am sure he knows how to put a stop to it. If he did request it, what right has a secretary to withhold it from her boss?

One of my bosses used to get postcards regularly urging him to call a certain number to arrange for a "massage." He laughed and told me to throw such cards in the basket. Another boss I worked for [a well-known political figure] asked me if I would be willing to receive copies of a certain magazine at my home, because his wife wouldn't permit them in the house. I agreed, and brought them to the office in a plain envelope for him to read.

Lest you think I'm an old tramp, I hasten to explain that I'm happily married, am considered attractive, and have had my full share of passes from the opposite sex.

If I were a boss, I wouldn't want a secretary in whose presence I had to watch every word for fear of offending her. A busy executive usually has enough problems at home and doesn't need more at the office.

MODERN SECRETARY

DEAR ABBY: You were right. That guest who loudly refused to drink out of a cracked glass, poured the contents down the sink and demanded that her hostess give her a "good" glass, was very rude.

You advised her [the hostess] to get rid of all the cracked glasses and dishes. You should have also suggested she get rid of cracked guests. D. W. IN CHARLOTTE, N. C.

DEAR D. W.: I wouldn't have dared. It was too obvious.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069, for Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions."

Task Force Recommends Changes In Education

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures

Young people who have difficulty with routine school subjects may be cheered by the recently issued report of the White House Youth Conference which made recommendations for changes in education.

The task force points out that in the area of "ensuring equal access" in secondary schools changes are needed in curricula that has been "overly standardized to help those students who plan to enter college meet admission requirements."

Of the youth delegates on the conference committee 38.8 per cent were high school students, which is their exact percentage of the country's population. Other youth delegates included authors, beauticians, laborers, state legislators, a college president, and the youngest dean of women in the United States.

It was pointed out that the primary goal of education should be self-actualization of individuals served, not preparation of individuals "to fit existing slots which are determined by economic considerations."

And the report also noted that exceptional students—physically, emotionally, mentally handicapped, gifted, etc.—need to learn how to develop their individual interests and aptitudes.

Owen Kingsbury Gives Program

Owen Kingsbury gave the program at the Tea and Topics Book Club meeting Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. M. W. Crumpler.

Kingsbury is the research glass blower in the chemistry department at East Carolina University. He blew several articles from glass.

After the business meeting, books were exchanged and refreshments were served.

Mrs. M. W. Crumpler Sr. and Mrs. Louis Singleton were guests for the evening.

Careful Planning, Shopping Can Cut Home Expenses

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Food Editor

NEW YORK (UPI)—Careful planning and shopping can cut home food expenses as much as 30 per cent, say family finance experts at a bank here.

Their announcement coincided with one from the Federal Price Commission that okayed price increases sought by several leading food companies.

Despite such increases, you can save money on home cooked meals in a variety of ways.

When you plan meals, choose foods for the number of servings per pound instead of the cost per pound. For instance, pork spareribs command a somewhat lower price per pound than pork roast, but they can be more expensive on a cost per serving basis.

A roast with a moderate amount of bone provides two or three servings per pound, compared with only one per pound for spareribs.

List Saves Money

Fryer chicken breasts at 60 cents per pound are a better buy than whole fryers at 33 cents a pound, says the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA), because the cost per serving works out at 15 cents for the breasts compared with nearly 25 cents for whole fryers. The USDA suggests ½ pound of ready-to-cook weight per serving when you buy chicken for roasting, frying, braising or stewing and ¼ to ½ bird per serving for broiling.

Another money-saver is a shopping list, provided you stick to it and avoid impulse purchases, which tend to add luxuries such as snack foods, candy and soft drinks to the market basket.

Base your list on store advertisements in the papers and watch the papers for the USDA's monthly list of plentiful products. February's list is made up largely of fruits and vegetables, including fresh oranges, grapefruit, apples and pears, split peas, eggs, peanuts and peanut products and canned peaches and fruit cocktail.

Pork Is Low
Pork products are low in price now, so a ham is a good buy, especially if you use the bone to make split pea soup.

If you do a lot of home baking, it pays to buy extra eggs when prices are low. While their refrigerator shelf life is limited to a week or so for maximum nutrition and flavor, raw eggs freeze well and can be held safely for 6 to 8 months at zero degrees Fahrenheit or lower.

Wash and dry each egg, break it into a cup or separate yolks and whites into a cup to check for freshness. Then empty the whole eggs or their parts into a bowl or freezer container that will hold the quantity you're apt to use in a single recipe. Cover whites, label with date and quantity, and freeze. Beat yolks or whole eggs to mix thoroughly without incorporating air. As a preservative, stir ¼ teaspoon of salt or ¾ teaspoon of sugar or light corn syrup into each ¼ cup of yolks or ½ cup of whole eggs. Cover, label and freeze.

The USDA also has an easy method for figuring best buys in eggs according to size. If the price difference per size is less than 7 cents per dozen, the smaller size is the more economical. Shell color makes no difference in quality or nutrition.

It pays to buy many foods in quantity, so you need shop less often. But don't overbuy perishables just because of low prices. Wasted food can cost more than items with a higher price tag.

JACKIE'S MUSTARD SAUCE
Adapted from Swedish cuisine.

1/4 cup prepared yellow mustard
3 tablespoons sugar
1 tablespoon distilled white vinegar
1-3rd cup salad oil
Into a small mixing bowl turn the mustard, sugar and vinegar; stir until smooth. With a rotary beater, beat in the oil, 1/4 teaspoon at a time; make sure oil is combined each time it is added before beating in more. Store in a tightly covered container in the refrigerator. Makes about 3/4 cup. It helps to have one person add the oil while another person does the beating.

A Better Selling Job Is Needed

With the spotlight on the problems at Cherry Hospital recently, it has come out that 26 positions are budgeted for physicians and psychiatrists at the institution in Goldsboro. Presently only 15 of these positions are filled and six positions have been vacant for over a year.

Only five of the 15 physicians at Cherry are psychiatrists when actually about half of the 26 authorized positions should be filled by psychiatrists.

Even an outside observer can figure out that these five psychiatrists are vastly overworked and that patients cannot possibly be getting the psychiatric attention they would receive if the full staff of psychiatrists were available.

The reason for Cherry being so understaffed with physicians we are told by state officials, is that physicians prefer to work in the more populated cities of the Piedmont rather than the rural east.

They also say that Cherry lacks some sophisticated medical programs which are of interest to many doctors.

To the latter we would answer that if Cherry lacks the sophisticated programs, it is somebody's fault in the chain of command which starts in Raleigh that such programs have not been developed at the Goldsboro hospital.

As to the contention that physicians will not locate at the eastern hospital our classification for that is that it is so much bull. If state officials were doing an adequate selling job with prospective physicians, we believe that things would be in considerably better shape at Cherry Hospital today.

Goldsboro, after all, is a thriving eastern city. It is less than two hour's drive from some of the finest coastline and beach recreation area to be found anywhere. If the populous Piedmont holds such allure, the drive to Raleigh is only an hour away in the opposite direction.

Goldsboro is not without culture and, with a 50 minute drive, residents there can attend cultural, sports and entertainment events at ECU in Greenville.

In this matter, as with so many others, we have the same old story from state officials. Somehow the million or more Tar Heels who live in the east are at fault for what our state government, to which we pay our taxes, fails to do.

Easterners, in this case, should demand that the state government institute a positive program for attracting the personnel necessary to operate this eastern hospital as it could be. It is true that we do not have huge metropolitan areas down east. But our population centers are thriving and developing and we also do not have the pollution and monumental traffic problems which now plague metropolitan areas.

What Cherry Hospital needs is not excuses and negativism from state officials. It needs a positive program to attract the personnel it needs. When they took office the public officials accepted this responsibility. Now is the time for them to produce results.

Dropping Back In Is Tougher

By BRYAN HANSLIP
RALEIGH, N.C. — Dropping out is easy. Dropping back in can be tough.

Young men who quit school, lacking the skills or motivation to enter the world of work, face a future that is a dead-end street. They may find it hard to get on the track leading out of poverty, jobs with low pay, and economic dependence.

One route upward is the Job Corps. It offers training and the promise of a fresh start to those willing to leave home to take it.

"A crucial factor to the program is that it is residential training," explained Gary D. Vassar, Job Corps chief for the state Department of Social Services.

"By removing the recruit from the environment that has been holding him back, it gives him a chance to see a different horizon. He discovers that life doesn't have to be a circle going nowhere."

North Carolina takes a different approach to the Job Corps, a manpower program under the U.S. Department of Labor. It is the only state, noted Social Services Commissioner Clifton M. Craig, in which the recruitment contract is with the social services department.

Whole Man Served
That emphasizes concern for the whole man, said Vassar. An applicant is referred to other agencies or steered to counseling if there are problems standing between him and an adjustment to the world of work.

Vassar and his staff of 12 Job Corps counselors who cover the state headed to the March 15 finish for a 120-day drive aimed to enroll 1,000 or more. The total is now well past 725, and he expects to reach or exceed the goal.

Recruitment isn't accomplished by sitting in an office and waiting for prospects to walk in. "The men we are trying to reach don't respond to Establishment signals," said Vassar. "We have to go out and find them where they are."

That means the street corners, pool halls, housing developments and recreation centers. The youth who dropped out of high school won't answer a letter, Vassar said, but he may respond to a face-to-face conversation.

16-21 Target Age Group

The target group is those 16 to 21 years of age, out of school and out of work, who need training in order to get and hold jobs.

"Jobs will be available, especially in construction, for young men who are able to overcome homesickness, complete a job-readiness program lasting approximately nine months at a residential center, and relocate where their skills are needed," Vassar said.

For example, he pointed out, the city of Atlanta recently passed a referendum favoring a Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Authority. "This project alone is expected to need hundreds of graduating Job Corpsmen during the next few years," he said.

Tar Heel recruits are likely to be assigned to one of three Civilian Conservation Centers in western North Carolina — Brevard, Franklin and Cherokee — or to Breckinridge Urban Center in Morganfield, Ky. Seven-Year History

The Job Corps came into being some seven years ago under the Economic Opportunity Act. It was transferred to the Labor Department in 1969.

Since its inception, some 13,000 Tar Heels have applied for Job Corps training. Approximately 4,700 stuck with it 90 days or went on to completion. Another 1,224 are in training at the present time.

Around 3,650 got cold feet and never left home.

Cultural shock is the major hurdle to overcome. For a teenager who never left home, moving hundreds of miles away can be a threatening experience, he said. Parents sometimes find it hard to cut the apron-strings and insist that a son be released.

"You have to remember that we're dealing with young men who have a record of failure," Vassar reminded. "When you consider that 45 per cent of those who begin public school never graduate, we think we have a pretty good success rate."

Individual success stories are in the record. A young man referred by a probation officer now is on the police force of a major city. A high school drop-out picked up his education in the Job Corps, and now is in college on a scholarship.

"I'm a believer," said Vassar. "I've seen it work."

Unique Dangers In China Visit

By ROWLANDE EVANS
and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON—Far more than President Nixon has acknowledged even to intimates, his spectacular journey to Peking faces trials unique for a Western statesman and dangers over which he himself has only a minimal control.

Thus, Richard Nixon, who in his autobiographical "Six Crises" defined for posterity the agonizing self-discipline of preparing for a crisis, today confronts potentially the most difficult crisis of all: negotiations with Communist China's prime minister, Chou En-lai, and the party's founder and chairman, Mao Tse-tung.

What first threatens Mr. Nixon's bold reach for détente with China's present leadership is the immense cultural and philosophical gulf separating Washington and Peking. When he sits down for his first session with Chou, the President will find that the customary rules of dialogue between Western heads of government have no meaning in the Forbidden City.

Instead of moving quickly toward hot issues—such as the Formosa question—Mr. Nixon will find himself ensnared in hours of philosophical discourse. He is sure to be asked about his convictions on the nature of man, the meaning of mystery, the basic forces that move societies and the significance of conflicting forms of government.

Mr. Nixon can cope with dialectics better than most American politicians. Nevertheless, such philosophic discourse is scarcely his strongest suit.

Yet his hopes for détente will be judged by China's leaders largely on his performance during these hours of subtle soul-searching.

In the words of one Westerner who has had considerable contact with Chou: "The President will make or break it depending on Chou's judgment of his character as a human being, and his depth of human understanding."

If the President flunks that test, there will be no immediate calamity. The Chinese will simply make a mental calculation downgrading their own hopes for détente.

Beyond that, the President will be operating under diplomatic delicacy unknown in the West. A case in point was Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's statement in Paris two weeks ago that Andre Malraux, the French intellectual and friend of both Mao and Chou, had told him Mr. Nixon should offer U.S. aid to China. Denying that he had told Kennedy any such thing, Malraux confided to the President in the White House Tuesday evening that any Westerner who gave such outrageous advice had "a damaged notion" of the Chinese character.

In short, if Mr. Nixon has any remote ideas about American aid for China (which is by no means certain), the subject can safely be broached with only the most oblique subtlety.

A wholly different danger arises out of the non-stop television coverage blanketing the event. With press conferences and backgrounders held to a bare minimum, Presidential

Just Keep Them Happy

WASHINGTON — One of the biggest businesses in this country right now seems to be the production and sale of college term papers. Described by New York Atty. Gen. Lefkowitz as a multimillion dollar industry, the selling of term papers, essays and theses has made it possible for many college students to pass courses and earn degrees never dreamed of 20 years ago.

While there has been criticism of this by some educators, my friend Elias Flimflam of the Institute of Instant Plagiarism defends the practice of buying and selling term papers as essential to a modern education.

The campaign spending bill, though far from perfect, is at least a first step toward ending corruption and the potential for corruption within the election process. Assuming President Nixon signs the bill into law — and every indication is he will — its impact will be felt in the up-coming national elections.

The measure does not however impose a ceiling on all campaign spending just on the most expensive costs, such as television and newspaper advertisements. Nevertheless the money spent on this year's presidential race should be considerably less than that spent in 1968. By law candidates will be permitted to spend no more than 10 cents per voting age person on the communications media. The effect of that is to limit presidential hopefuls to a maximum of about $15 million.

Campaign spending reform goes beyond placing a ceiling on media spending. The bill now before the President requires candidates to make a series of reports which include virtually all donations received in excess of $100. In theory at least the public should now be able to judge what individuals and firms are paying the freight for any candidate's trip to the White House.

Whether it will be totally effective is uncertain since many political contributions come in $100 denominations and the bill applies only to donations of more than $100. This is not the measure's only shortcoming.

When originally proposed, the bill was to suspend the equal-time provisions of the Federal Communications Act. That provides that broadcasters who grant free air time to one candidate in a race must make equal time available to other candidates. The effect of the requirement has been to foreclose discussion and debate between major candidates. The networks could not grant time for that without a troop of crackpots demanding an equal opportunity to present their views. Were the equal-time clause suspended, debates between legitimate contenders would again be possible. Regrettably the bill just passed failed to do this.

It did take some steps that are long overdue to be taken. And hopefully the President will concur.

Now You Know What Is Ahead

By ELMER ROESSNER
Let's see what some authorities are now saying about business prospects for the rest of the year:

J. Phillip Wernette, professor of the University of Michigan's Graduate School of Business and economist for the Ohio Citizen's Trust Co. of Toledo: This will be our best year yet, although not phenomenally favorable, with a continuing improvement in business volume, with a gross national expenditure of about $1,145 billion and a gross national product up about 3.3 per cent over 1971. Total corporate profits will rise about 12 per cent. Employment will rise one to two per cent, and the unemployment rate will decline slightly.

The National Association of Purchasing Management's business survey committee: "Recent optimism noted in the remarks of purchasing executives is now becoming more evident. New orders, production and forward commitments all show good improvement. Even inventory appears on the verge of joining the up side."

Industry Week: "Manufacturers are loosening their spending belts a notch, but they are not letting them all the way out. Caution is still king. Most managers agree that business is picking up again and they must make some provision for winning and handling higher sales."

Federal Reserve Bank of New York: "The pace of the economic expansion has shown modest signs of quickening in recent months, although the over-all progress of the recovery remains uneven. To a considerable extent, the stepped-up rate of activity has been grounded in the greater volume of retail sales. Prospective increases in personal disposable incomes —stemming in part from the reductions in tax liabilities in 1972 that were enacted on Dec. 10 — should provide impetus to consumption expenditures and, eventually, to other areas of the economy as well." (The bank overlooks the fact that withholding rates have been scaled upward.)

Dr. Martin Gainsbrugh, chief economist for the Conference Board, forecast an upturn in capital and defense spending and personal consumption. He added that the projected $40 billion federal deficit would have a burdensome effect on money markets. He predicted wage and price controls would continue into 1973.

Dr. Pierre Rinfret, noted Boston economist, at the same session, said, "Capital is not coming back to the United States. Europeans won't put their money into our economy...The greatest fake perpetrated last year was the personal income tax cut." Withholdings would rise $700 million this year while the increase in Social

If the robin weighs half a pound and the woman weighs 125 pounds, she would have to consume 17,800 earthworms daily to match the bird's appetite.

Strength For Today

GET GOING

Are all things possible? Jesus declared that with God all things are possible (Matthew 19:26). He also said that all things are possible to him that believeth (Mark 9:23). Jesus spent a night in prayer that it would not be necessary for him to drink the cup of suffering and crucifixion, but God said No. The Most High had something of infinite value to give the human race, and He gave it through the suffering of the only perfect man that ever lived.

People often remark quite glibly that everything is possible. This is not true. Can you paint a beautiful picture or sing with such marvelous appeal that the world will stop its work and listen? We can do a dozen times more than we do every day, especially if we have religious faith. But we cannot do everything. You and I are not in charge of the universe. If we were, the universe would probably go to smash within an hour. If we have religious faith we can move mountains, but let us not get so conceited that we think we can do everything.

But don't be discouraged because of that. We can do ten times as much as we usually do if we will bestir ourselves and begin to use the common sense we were born with. There is a Yes and No answer to the question "Are all things possible?" Life is so complicated that we know but little and can do; perhaps, only a few things. Well — why are we standing there like an international boundary post? Get going and perform miracles.

Walter Winchell Dies, Age 74

LOS ANGELES (AP) — As they met on a New York street, columnist Walter Winchell said, "Mr. Hoover, this is Lepke," then he turned murderer Louis "Lepke" Buchalter over to FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover.

The negotiation of the surrender in 1939 of Buchalter was one of the best-known scoops society.

"If they can purchase a term paper or an essay or even a thesis and hand it in as their own, these students are happy, and they don't want to tear down the system any more."

"The question the attorney general must ask himself is does he want contented students who don't do their own work, or does he want an honest homework program that could tear this country apart?"

"Is there any danger that if students cheat in school they will continue to cheat in life?"

"Cheating is a very strong word," my friend said. "Let's say that Prof. Applebaum assigns a paper on 'The Abstract Theory of Solid Gas.' This might require 10 hours of research in the library, plus three hours of writing, not to mention typing fees. It takes the student two hours to find a parking place near the library, and another two hours reading magazines before he gets around to the research. This adds up. It's time that could be much better spent exchanging important ideas with other people in the student union, or playing touch football against another fraternity."

"The problem we have to address ourselves to is, why are kids in school? Is it to get an education which they will never use, or a degree which will open up a new world for them?"

Flinflam continued earnestly. "What we do is to take the sweat out of college. By selling term papers to students we are removing competition from the classroom. Thanks to us it's possible for a mediocre student to compete with a brilliant student on his own level."

"For as little as $10 an ineffectual student no longer has to worry about the person sitting next to him getting a better grade. If this isn't a service to mankind, I don't know what is."

"You make a convincing case for the sale of term papers," I agreed, "but what happens when the student gets out of school and starts his profession? He could make a lousy doctor, lawyer or engineer, if he bought all his work in college."

"It's a good point, and we've been concerned about it. So what we're doing is starting a post-graduate service. We plan to sell lawyer's briefs, doctor's diagnoses and engineering blueprints to anyone who wants to continue his education once he gets out of school."

engineered by the columnist-radio newscaster who died Sunday at the age of 74.

Winchell's death at UCLA Medical Center was attributed to prostate cancer. He had been confined at the center since Nov. 19.

Winchell had lived in seclusion in recent years, mostly in a Los Angeles hotel, and avoided the night life, the action and gossip that he had loved for decades.

From 1932 until the early '60s millions of Americans heard the nasal, staccato opening of his newscast: "Good evening, Mr. and Mrs. America and all the ships at sea; let's go to press." His voice never lost the pronounced accent of his birthplace, New York City.

Winchell punctuated his brisk delivery with the insistent beep of a telegrapher's key. His slangy delivery had its print counterpart in the three-dotted style of the showbiz-oriented advisers worry that American living rooms will be flooded with "man in the street" interviews seeking to ferret out truths about Chinese Communism.

In fact, a candid picture of China is beyond any reporter's capability. Every "man in the street" will be a party cadre member programmed to say what the party wants Americans to hear. The result: a distorted view of China for the American public that cannot be easily corrected.

But perhaps the most dangerous risk to Mr. Nixon is political instability within the Communist party, apparently under control for the moment but, say some experts here, ready to break out anytime.

The 25-member Politburo has only nine active members running a factional range from the shrewd, resilient Chou to Mao's wife, the volatile Chiang Ching, a prime leader of the bloody Cultural Revolution aimed at the entrenched party bureaucracy.

Experts here don't pretend to know the real relationship between leaders of the late Cultural Revolution and the deposed military chief, Lin Piao (Mao's once-intended heir). But there are strong indications that some of Lin Piao's junior military commanders have not accepted either their reduced status or the invitation to Mr. Nixon.

Thus, a now-disgraced lieutenant of Lin Piao lobbied last summer, before his chief's fall, for "humiliating terms" to be placed on Mr. Nixon's visit. Other Lin Piao adherents still at large are candidates for a modern-day Bonapartism in which the army might seize power and reverse the U.S.-China detente.

President Nixon is well aware of all these dangers. They explain why even his unprecedented preparation for Peking cannot fully make him ready for the strange days immediately ahead.

column he wrote for the New York Mirror and some 800 other newspapers from 1929 to 1969.

"He wrote like a man honking in a traffic jam" was the appraisal of another writer who surfaced in the exuberant newspaper world of the 1920s, Ben Hecht.

In a Winchell column, a gangster was a Chicagorilla; liquor was giggle-water; expectant parents were infanticipating.

The short, sharp-featured Winchell even had a visual trademark: a snap-brim hat which he seemed never to be without.

His "scoops" became newspaper legend despite frequent criticism of inaccuracy. New Yorker magazine once analyzed 239 column items appearing in 1940. It said 53 were accurate and the rest partly inaccurate, wholly inaccurate or unverifiable.

Hoover was a friend of Winchell, and in fact virtually everybody in the public eye for a generation was either a friend or an enemy of the columnist.

Winchell was born in Harlem, the son of a silk merchant who abandoned his wife and two sons. Growing up in foster homes, Winchell was a newsboy at 8.

In 1909, when he was 12, the mother of a neighborhood pal got the boys jobs as ushers in a theater, where with a third they formed a signing trio billed as "The Little Men with the Big Voices."

The pal was George Jessel, who went on to a show business career of his own.

Informed of Winchell's death, Jessel told a newsman, "He was one of the greatest newspaper reporters who ever lived."

WALTER WINCHELL, the fast-talking song and dance man who became the best-read newspaper columnist and most-heard radio newscaster, died Sunday. (AP Wirephoto)

He will be remembered and missed as a personality, but not as a man. He was mean to nearly everybody."

After service in World War I Winchell tried to make it in vaudeville as a song-and-dance man.

His show business career didn't get far, but after showing talent at picking up backstage gossip he became a reporter-photographer-adman for the Vaudeville News. From there he went to the tabloid

New York Graphic where he developed his rapid-fire writing style.

Winchell stopped writing the column in 1969 shortly after his son, Walter Jr., committed suicide. Winchell's wife, June, died the following year in Phoenix, Ariz.

Winchell is survived by a daughter and three grandchildren.

Not All Physicians Take Hippocratic Oath

By C.G. McDANIEL
AP Science Writer
CHICAGO (AP)—"I swear by Apollo Physician and Asclepius and Hygieia and Panacea and the gods and goddesses ..."

Thus begins the Hippocratic oath, usually thought to embody the ethics of the doctors who take it upon graduation from medical school.

Not all doctors take this oath, however, and never have.

In recent years, medical literature shows oaths considered more modern and more relevant have replaced the 24-century-old Hippocratic oath in some U.S. schools, and it has been used in modified form in others.

Dr. Ralph Crawshaw—Portland, Ore., psychiatrist—did a survey of the 85 medical schools in operation in 1969 and found that about half of them used a pledge other than the Hippocratic oath or none at all.

Ninety-two per cent of the schools used an oath, an increase over the 74 per cent in a survey five years earlier. Seventeen per cent used the classical form of the Hippocratic oath—up 8 per cent from five years earlier. Another 29 per cent used a modified version of the Hippocratic oath.

Among schools which have abandoned the Hippocratic oath are Stanford and Harvard.

Some students object to the language and ideas expressed in the traditional pledge. It includes an oath not to perform abortions.

There also is a strange ring to some of the classical admonitions, such as banning sexual relations between the physician and his patients' slaves.

The most popular oath after the traditional Hippocratic is the Declaration of Geneva, adopted in 1948 by the World Medical Association.

This pledge contains a provision which reflects a contemporary concern: "I will not permit considerations of religion, nationality, race, party politics or social standing to intervene between my duty and my patient ..."

Local students of Lenoir Community College named for inclusion of this year's edition of Who's Who in American Junior Colleges include Lois Murphrey Barrow, Rt. 1, Farmville; Fed Wilson Davenport and Cecilia Faye Gaskins, both of Grifton; Allan Joseph Jones, Glendale Court, Greenville; and Olivia May Vandiford, Rt. 1, Ayden.

Queen Elizabeth Concludes Visit

SINGAPORE (AP) — Queen Elizabeth has ended a three-day state visit to this former British crown colony, sailing to Malaysia aboard the royal yacht Britannia.

The Queen held a black tie dinner aboard the ship attended by President Benjamin Sheares and Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew before the Britannia cast off for Port Klang Sunday night.

The Queen, Prince Philip and Princess Anne will spend three days in West Malaysia before flying to Borneo and the Malaysian states of Sabah and Sarawak.

There is a strong possibility that corn and soybeans that were harvested and stored after being damaged by Hurricane Ginger should be checked periodically for damage symptoms.

If there is evidence of damage or spoilage (heating and sour odor) the grain should be turned where possible and the fan should be operated until the corn or soybeans are cooled to 50 degrees or below. To cool the grain as quickly as possible, operate the fan when humidity is below 70 percent and the temperature is less than the grain mass. This would require approximately 15 to 20 hours of fan operation for an aeration fan.

If there is evidence of damage or spoilage above 5 percent for corn and 2 percent for soybeans, consideration should be given to moving the grain to market or feeding before further deterioration occurs.

Grain is considered damaged or spoiled when it is materially discolored and damaged by heat, sprouted, frosted, moldy, badly ground damaged, badly weather damaged, or otherwise materially damaged.

If grain is moldy, caution should be exercised in feeding it. Both young pigs and poultry are very susceptible to molds. Corn that may have mold damage should not be fed to chickens and fed only to hogs 75 pounds or larger. If the mold and other damage are extensive, it is recommended that poor quality grain be diluted with good quality grain before feeding. After the grain mass is chilled, it should be inspected weekly to determine its condition and operate the fan at least every two weeks to keep grain chilled to prevent sweating and insect activity.

Solved Mystery, Has A Problem

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (UPI)—Farmer Ah Kow did not know why 100 of his chickens and ducks disappeared in a week. He feared for the 32 fowls left, so he consulted friends.

The following day he tied a chicken to a big stone and set a trap nearby. Now he doesn't know what to do with the eight-foot-long culprit—a monitor lizard.

'Temporary' Job Lasts 30 Years

NEW YORK (UPI)—Back in 1941, Lillian Stines took on a "temporary" summer clerical job at the Flushing Hospital and Medical Center in Queens. Recently, Miss Stines, now head of the Medical Records Department, was honored for 30 years of continuous service at the hospital.

Slots Keep Clubs Going

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) — The slot machines are going, and the word is out at U.S. military clubs in Europe: Watch those peas!

If the connection seems nebulous, listen to the man running a club at Wuerzburg: "Without those slots I don't see how any club is going to make it."

Profits from slot machines have meant a continuous jackpot at clubs for officers, non-commissioned officers and enlisted men. Some clubs ate up excess profits by providing free meals.

Now an Army memo says over generosity means trouble. The number of peas accompanying the entree can mean as much as $20 during a single meal. An Air Force memo warns against the bartender who may favor friends.

The newspaper Stars and Stripes says Army and Air Force clubs or other facilities have received about $25 million annually from slot machines. The slots have been officially adjudged a corruptive influence, and are to be destroyed July 1.

The Navy is leaving discretion to local commanders.

Name Derived From The Ainu

SAPPORO, Japan (AP) — Sapporo, scene of the 1972 Winter Olympic Games, derives its name from the Ainu, the light-skinned, round-eyed people who lived on the island of Hokkaido before the Japanese arrived.

The city's name is a contraction of the Ainu phrase, "Sato poro petsu," meaning a large dry river.

EARTHQUAKE TOLL STOCKTON, Calif. (UPI)—Earthquake damage in the United States between 1925 and 1965 totaled almost $800 million, according to Dr. Tapan Mukerjee, University of Pacific expert on the economics of natural hazards.

Sex Discrimination Is No Joke

By MARGARET SCHERF
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Opponents of the 1964 Civil Rights Act considered it a joke when they proposed a ban on sex discrimination to the section creating the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

But Congress went along with the fun, so Title VII of the law prohibits job discrimination by employers, employment agencies and labor unions based on race, color, religion, national origin or sex.

Today, 20 per cent of all charges filed with the commission involve allegations of sex discrimination.

"Sex discrimination is not funny," says EEOC Chairman William H. Brown III, "certainly not to the more than 5,800 people who filed charges of sex discrimination with our commission in fiscal year 1971."

While details of charges filed with the commission are confidential, Sonia Fuentes, director of the EEOC's legislative counsel division, said in an interview that some generalizations can be made.

"Most sex discrimination charges are filed by blue-collar workers—proving it isn't just upper-class and professional women who are interested in women's liberation," said Mrs. Fuentes.

"The charges seldom involve a refusal to hire," she said. "More often they concern conditions of employment such as pay, promotions, seniority, opportunities for overtime."

In one case, an appeals court in Georgia entered a ruling requiring a railroad to hire one woman as a switchman and pay her $30,000 in back pay after the railroad had rejected her because women by law could not take jobs requiring them to lift more than 30-pounds.

"Title VII rejects just this type of romantic paternalism as unduly Victorian and instead vests individual women with the power to decide whether or not to take on unromantic tasks," said the court.

The EEOC has ruled that Title VII supersedes state protective laws and that all jobs must be open to both sexes unless the employer can prove sex is a bona fide occupational qualification.

Such "bona fide occupational qualifications" are extremely rare, Mrs. Fuentes said, and generally are confined to the following:

—For reasons of authenticity, as in the case of an actor or model.

—Because of community standards of morality or propriety, as in the case of a restroom attendant of lingerie sales clerk.

—In jobs in the entertainment industry for which sex appeal is an essential qualification.

Although most sex discrimination charges are brought by women, Mrs. Fuentes said "a number of significant issues have been raised by men," including refusal to hire because of draft status, restrictions on the length and style of hair, and differences in retirement plans.

Critics of EEOC contend it is a paper tiger because it does not have enforcement powers, and because a vast number of workers are not covered. Teachers and employees of federal, state and local governments are excluded. So are firms and unions with less than 25 employees or members.

At present, all the commission can do is seek voluntary compliance, advise the Justice Department to file suit, or file friend-of-the-court briefs in private suits. The Justice Department has filed only two suits charging sex discrimination since the EEOC was created, Mrs. Fuentes said.

In a new tactic, the EEOC recently filed a motion with the Federal Communications Commission opposing a rate increase sought by American Telephone & Telegraph Co., which it called "the largest oppressor of women workers in the United States."

"Because of its discriminatory practices against women, AT&T has a high turnover of female employees, which causes it to lose money," said Mrs. Fuentes. "If they'd quit discriminating, they wouldn't need a rate increase."

Although the FCC granted the rate increase, it ordered a public hearing on the EEOC charges. The hearing is in progress.

Below-Zero In Northeast

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Sub-zero cold settled over the Northeast today in the wake of a massive and violent snowstorm that left 15 persons dead in Pennsylvania and New York.

A state of emergency was declared in Pennsylvania by Gov. Milton Shapp. Emilien A. Levesque, director of civil defense for Maine, estimated storm damage in that state would reach into the millions of dollars.

In West Virginia, National Guard troops were placed on the alert to man rescue helicopters if needed in Preston County, hit by drifts up to 15 feet deep.

Ebensburg, Pa., was buried under a 45-inch snowfall and Binghamton, N.Y., reported two feet. High winds dropped the wind-chill index to 50 degrees below zero in the Albany, N.Y., area and winds to 50 miles per hour raked New York City, with the temperature in the teens.

Six persons died in Pennsylvania after collapsing while shoveling snow and nine such deaths were recorded in New York State.

Unseasonably cold air pushed down the Atlantic Coast to as far as Florida.

Over the remainder of the country, fair and dry weather was the rule, except for a few snow flurries near the Great Lakes and in the northern Rockies and isolated showers in Northern California and Alabama.

Attribute Lives To Safety Belts

SYDNEY, Australia (UPI)—A 19 per cent drop in January traffic deaths was attributed by state officials to a new, compulsory seat belt law. The fatalities on New South Wales roads totaled 69, compared with 85 in January, 1971.

The new law levies an on-the-spot $24 fine on any driver or passenger who police see riding without a seat belt.

A Limit To Delayed Move

CHICAGO (UPI) — Scratch one more controversy off the list—there's an answer to how much time a checker player has to make a move.

People for centuries have quarreled about taking too long to move from one square to another. But Encyclopaedia Britannica says standard tournament rules now provide that when a move is not made by the end of five minutes, time is called and if a move is not completed in 60 seconds the procrastinating player loses the game.

Virus Blamed For Host Of Most Lethal Diseases

By BRIAN SULLIVAN
AP Science Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The virus infections mankind knows best—colds, influenza, even polio—may be only the tip of the iceberg.

Beneath the surface, the suspicion is growing that viruses may play a vital role in a broad range of diseases, many of them the most serious of man's ills.

And further, it may be that some viruses are part of our normal genetic equipment, rather than an outside invader. Here are two major aspects of the virus story:

—Some scientists think they are closing in on detecting a human cancer virus. And there is an important theory that we are all born with seeds of this virus as part of our natural inheritance.

—A leading heart expert has said that viruses may do the original damage to children and young adults that eventually results in heart attacks and arteriosclerosis.

These two diseases, heart disease and cancer, are the No. 1 and No. 2 killers of Americans. Now add to them these serious diseases, all of them suspected by some scientists of being linked to viruses:

Arthritis, diabetes, Hodgkin's disease, juvenile arthritis, perhaps immunological and degenerative diseases of the central nervous system.

There has been a burst of activity in the virus field recently, most dramatically in the suspected link between viruses and cancer.

At the heart of some of the research is the striking theory that every cell contains the seeds of cancer, that we are born with these seeds in us in the form of genetic ingredients.

The genetic ingredient would be a gene, the unit of heredity, that is coded for the production of a cancer virus. Normally, some cellular mechanism, a repressor, keeps this gene in check. Then something triggers the gene, the virus is produced and the end result is cancer.

A virus itself is a nucleus of RNA or DNA, both nucleic acids, surrounded with a coat of protein. It cannot exist apart from the cell it infects, unlike bacteria. Viruses seems to be on the border between living and nonliving things.

The theory is called the "oncogene theory," from the word oncology, the study of tumors, and the word gene. It has been put forth by two scientists at the National Cancer Institute, Dr. Robert J. Huebner and Dr. George J. Todaro.

Up to now, various laboratories have reported associations between viruses and such cancers as cancer of the breast and cervix, leukemia, Hodgkin's disease, sarcoma—a form that primarily affects connnective tissue and bone—and Burkitt's lymphoma, found widely among children in Uganda, Africa.

In recent weeks and months scientists at a number of institutions around the country have reported finding what could prove to be a human cancer virus, but there is robust disagreement among the scientists about the various claims.

But Todaro, for one, is skeptical about many of the claims, noting at an international virology meeting that cancer viruses "come and go." Todaro and others cautioned against any impression that a cure for cancer was on the horizon.

The work suggests that if cancer is ultimately to be controlled, some way will have to be found to interfere with the mechanism that switches on the oncogene, a way to manipulate the gene to keep the body's natural defense mechanism, its immune system, working correctly. This would be a long way off.

While a link between viruses and cancer has been suspected, there is now the surprising suggestion that there may be a link between viruses and arteriosclerosis and heart attacks.

The suggestion comes from a leading cardiologist, Dr. George E. Burch, head of the department of medicine at Tulane University in New Orleans. He has discussed his ideas in leading medical journals in this country and Britain.

In heart disease, his theory runs, virus infections in children and young adults cause damage to the arteries of the heart, which results in scarring and, ultimately, over the years, turning into arteriosclerotic lesions.

Arteriosclerosis is marked by lesions, clumps of fat, in the walls of the arteries, thereby narrowing the arteries and interfering with the blood flow. This leads to heart attacks.

Using a virus called Cocksackie virus, the B-4 strain, Dr.

Burch and his colleagues have produced damage in the coronary arteries of mice. Cocksackie virus, among other viruses, is responsible for many of the common respiratory and intestinal infections of children.

This is not to dispute the findings that have linked such factors as diet or high blood pressure with heart disease. The idea is that the virus infection is the initial insult to the artery, which is then aggravated by, say, a diet high in cholesterol.

The same virus, Cocksackie B-4, also has been indicted as a possible cause of diabetes.

Diabetes has been considered a genetic disorder, passed on to offspring. The virus theory does not, again, repudiate this factor, because there could be a genetic predisposition or susceptibility to the virus.

As virus research expands, increasing attention is being given to viruses as possible causes of diseases of the nervous system.

Some of these diseases may result from an unusual response by the body to well-known viruses; some may be caused by so-called "slow viruses."

Slow viruses apparently have a very long incubation period—not producing any symptoms of disease for months or years after they invade the body.

Judges . . .

elected Judge of the Greenville Municipal Records Court in 1951.

Judge Whedbee held the city court judgeship until elected to the District Court bench in 1968.

The Greenville judge, after serving about a year on the bench, was awarded a citation from the American Bar Association-National Safety Council for conducting one of the most improved traffic courts in this section of the state.

A member of St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Greenville, Judge Whedbee has served several terms as a member of the Board of Vestry, one term as Senior Warden and is a licensed lay reader in church.

Judge Whedbee is the holder of the Green Band Award for his activities in Boy Scouting and is a 32nd Degree Mason, a Shriner and a member of the Greenville

Moose Lodge.

He holds the certificate for completion of the advanced course for traffic judges given by the National Safety Council and was one of the organizers of the Pitt County Safety Council which he served for two terms as president.

In addition to his judicial duties, Whedbee has written two books of short stories about coastal North Carolina, one titled "Legends of the Outer Banks," now in its sixth printing, and the other "The Flaming Ship of Ocracoke," now in its second printing since publication last August.

Commenting on his candidacy, Judge Whedbee said, "I have always done my very best to see that equal justice under the law was done for all."

"I hope and I believe that my record speaks for itself."

The jurist continued, "In these troubled times it is more important than ever for our people to know they will receive firm but fair treatment from their courts and that every case will receive careful and serious attention."

"Civilization itself is founded on law and order and on equal justice under the law."

A Grifton resident, Judge Wheeler came to the bench under the new District Court system when it was implemented here in 1968.

Prior to being elected Judge, he practiced criminal and civil law, both in state and federal courts for 12 years from his office in Grifton.

Judge Wheeler is a 1950 graduate of East Carolina University and the Wake Forest University Law School, and a World War II veteran. He is a Mason and taught school and served as a parole officer before opening his law practice.

He and his wife, the former Barbara Faye Moore of Grifton have two children.

According to Judge Wheeler, "My objective while serving on the bench has been to maintain law and order and to create respect and confidence in the courts and the judicial process by administering justice fairly and impartially under the laws of the State of North Carolina."

He said, "this I would strive to continue if I were reelected."

Wheeler is being opposed in the May 6 primary by Ayden newspaper publisher Russell Wooten who has served as a magistrate in Ayden.

Revival Series Begins Tuesday

Evangelist E. E. Dixon of Kansas City, Mo. will conduct revival services at Wells Chapel Church of God in Christ beginning tomorrow night at 8 p.m.

The services at the church located at the corner of Fifth and Hudson Streets will be held at least through Sunday. The public is invited.

the time of his death, he was serving as chairman of the Board of Health and as the Board's liaison concerning construction of the new Pitt County Memorial Hospital. Since Dec., 1967 he had served as chairman of the Building and Grounds Committee and had served as chairman of the Finance Committee.

Surviving Cox are his wife, Mrs. Helena Matthews Cox of the home; two sons, Roy T. Cox of Winterville, and Boyce V. Cox Jr. of Charleston, S.C.; his mother, Mrs. Roy T. Cox of Winterville; a brother, W. Riley Cox of Greenville; and a sister, Mrs. J. Dixie McGlohon of Greenville.

Discarded Baby Clings To Life

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Patricia Dianne Valentine, 5-day-old baby found Thursday in a trash can at the Fredericksburg Information Center along Interstate 95, remained in critical condition today, a Medical College of Virginia Hospital spokesman said.

Patricia, named by members of the Spotsylvania County Social Service Bureau, was found by two women tourists in a restroom at the information center.

State Police said they have "certain information" in connection with the baby but declined to elaborate on their search for the child's mother.

Father Of Nine Shot To Death

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — Police report the father of nine children was shot to death early Sunday in his cafe-pool room as his 18-year-old son looked on.

William H. Wilson, 41, of Gastonia, was pronounced dead at the scene.

Police charged Bobby Black, 35, owner of a night club across the street, with first degree murder.

Officers said Wilson was shot following an argument over whether to play pool for fun or money. They said Wilson was shooting pool with his son, Mike, and several other boys when Black walked up.

Tournament

The Pitt County Ladies Golf League will hold its first tournament of the year Friday at the Greenville Golf and Country Club.

Visiting golfers from clubs in Grifton, Ayden and Farmville will join ladies from Brook Valley and Greenville Golf and Country Club for the 1972 kick-off event. Golfers are asked to be at the country club by 9:30 Friday morning.

The League announced that golfers planning to participate should contact the Greenville Golf and Country Club pro shop by Wednesday.

Sanford Sees Himself As Serious Demo Contender

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Former North Carolina Gov. Terry Sanford considers himself a serious candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination and plans to let his name go on the state's presidential primary ballot.

"This is an extremely long shot, but I think it has some bare possibilities that make it worthwhile," Sanford said in an interview in the Sunday edition of the Raleigh News and Observer.

The president of Duke University also said that he has no interest in the vice presidency. He sees himself as an alternative candidate in case the national Democratic convention deadlocks over the major candidates.

"The possibility is real that the convention could become deadlocked between the major candidates," he said. Sanford listed the choices as Sen. Edmund Muskie, Sen. Hubert Humphrey, Sen. George McGovern, New York Mayor John Lindsay, Sen. Henry Jackson and Sen. Ted Kennedy.

"Muskie and Humphrey are the frontrunners. The others are the compromise candidates. Kennedy is not running, but is doing things that naturally put his name before the convention."

"If Muskie and Humphrey deadlock, the convention would look to McGovern or Jackson. But they have been in so long and represent such extremes of the party—McGovern on the left and Jackson on the right—that they would be part of the problem, not the solution."

"The Democratic party is certainly not going to Lindsay, who is only recently a Republican and has no claim on any groups within the party."

"If this comes to pass, then the party has to look for someone not in the active thing, and that is someone like Kennedy or Sanford," he added.

Sanford said even if this does not come to pass, the fact that students started the movement means that the "point of view of youth will be heard."

He said the other benefit will be the impact on the South. He said he has spent his professional and political life standing for the theory that the South could lead the nation and trying to project an image of a "creative, progressive, forward-looking South."

"I just think it is worth something to say that George Wallace, the concept he represents, had someone to run against in North Carolina other than a bunch of Yankees."

And, he said, "I want the South to shed this regional complex, so that it doesn't look to itself as a producer of vice presidents."

He said the only thing about his course that disturbs him is the appearance of a confrontation between himself and Gov. Bob Scott, a staunch baker of Muskie.

Pitt Underwriters

Hear Virginia Agent

The Pitt County Association of Life Underwriters held its February meeting Friday at Parker's Barbecue and heard remarks by Richmond, Va. agent Robert N. Gibson.

Gibson, speaking on the importance of continuing sales training while serving as agents, told underwriters that an agent's persuasion usually sells his client the first policy but his advance knowledge normally sells the client the second and third times.

The agent, who was awarded his C.L.U. designation in 1964 and is a member of the Richmond Association of Life Underwriters, asserted that agents should emphasize selling to a prospective client protection against premature death to insure family and business security.

Association president Stuart L. Buchanan announced that the deadline for payment of 1972 dues has been set for March 1. He said that dues must be paid by members if they wish to qualify for any national awards.

Buchanan reported that, to date, about 55 per cent of the PCALU members have paid dues.

Voting Law Discussion

This week the Greenville-Pitt County League of Women Voters will hold unit meetings to discuss election laws. Mrs. Ernest Marshall, chairman of the Election Law Committee for LWV, says that election law involves more than just "registering voters and having people to hand out and count ballots."

Among the topics the members will discuss are the residency requirements for voting, the voting status of resident aliens, and whether registration should be denied those having a prison record.

Unit meetings are scheduled to take place are:

Man Jailed In

Woman's Death

A 62-year-old Greenville man, Samuel Williams of 509C Sheppard St. was jailed here Saturday night charged with murder in connection with the death of a 49-year-old woman earlier in the night.

According to Chief of Police Glenn Cannon, Williams was charged with shooting Helen Ruth Gay of 509 Sheppard St. in the face with a .12 gauge shotgun. The incident occurred about 8:25 p.m.

Chief Cannon said the shooting allegedly followed an argument between the two.

A hearing has been set for March 6 in District Court.

Convincing Daytona Victory For Foyt

By BLOYS BRITT
AP Auto Racing Writer
DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A. J. Foyt, just a month past his 37th birthday, has finally become a member in good standing of what is known among Southern stock car drivers as "The Good Ole Boy's Club."

He won the Daytona 500, most prestigious of all the big money events for stock sedans Sunday and he did it in such convincing fashion that several NASCAR regulars went to victory lane to clap him on his sweat-stained shoulders.

"If it couldn't have been one of us, I'm glad it was him," said fourth-place finisher Benny Parsons, an ex-Detroit cab driver. Parsons, long a member of the "club," was born in North Wilkesboro, N.C.

Foyt had tried several times to win the Daytona 500, and when he did he dominated the big one as no other driver has since Richard Petty's first victory in 1964.

He led the high speed chase around the 2.5-mile Daytona International Speedway for 167 laps—Petty was in front of the 1964 race for 183 laps—and was four miles ahead of the poppy-red Dodge of No. 2 finisher Charlie Glotzbach when the 17 survivors were flagged to a halt.

Third place went to Jim Vandiver, whose Dodge was 15 miles to the rear.

Parsons, driving a Ford he owns and maintains himself, was in the same lap with Vandiver, but 10th-placer Vic Elford of England was 45 miles down.

The Texan covered the 200 laps in 3 hours, 5 minutes and 42 seconds for a record average speed of 161.550 miles per hour.

Foyt, whose career began in midwest in 1953 and includes three triumphs at Indianapolis, victory in the 24-hours of Le Mans and five USAC driving titles, was paid $38,400 from the $178,000 purse. The Mercury driver from Texas now has corralled more than $130,000 in his last nine NASCAR races.

"He gets better every time he sits down in our car," said greying Glen Wood, who heads the famed Wood Brothers team from Stuart, Va. Foyt put the Wood car in victory circle twice last year.

Foyt's victory, so easy that many of the 100,000 fans had left the vast arena before it was over, was made easier by attrition that felled most of the strong cars early in the race.

Bobby Isaac, the pole sitter who qualified a Dodge at 186 m.p.h., lost a cylinder and commented, "I couldn't keep up, so I quit ... and I don't quit easily."

Petty, stock car racing's all-time events winner and, like Foyt, a $1 million winner, pulled his sputtering red-and-blue Plymouth behind the wall after 80 laps. But the shock-haired Petty had swapped the lead with Foyt several times after flashing through the pack from a 32nd starting position. Petty was credited with leading the race for 32 laps.

The only other leader was Bobby Allison, No. 2 in 1971 winnings behind Petty. Allison's Chevrolet was slowed almost to a walk by an engine that misfired almost from the start. He held on doggedly, but finished 16th.

Buddy Baker, another top starter in a Petty-prepared Dodge, was wiped out in a crash that also eliminated 1971 rookie of the year Walter Ballard of Houston, Tex. Neither driver was hurt.

Foyt said he came within an inch of disaster when Jim Hurtubise of North Tonawanda, N.Y., one of Foyt's Indianapolis buddies, exploded an engine on the backstretch—near the same spot where driver Friday Hassler lost his life in a 125-mile qualifying race last Thursday.

"Oil covered my windshield to the point where I only had a deep-hole left to see where I was going," Foyt said. He pitted moments later after the yellow light came on and his crew gave the car a bath.

Foyt, who manages his own Indianapolis cars, said he was amazed at the speed with which the Wood brothers—the crew includes brothers Glen and Leonard and first cousin Delano Wood—got him in and out of the pits.

He made eight stops, three while the green flag was flying.

and the worst of the stops was 36 seconds—during which the five workers changed all four tires and loaded 22 gallons of gas. A normal stop for two tires and a gas refill meant an average of only 18 seconds.

The Daytona 500 ended "speed weeks," a series of 10 races that drew an estimated 250,000 persons and dished out about $300,000 in prize money.

Cavaliers Face Do-Or-Die Game

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Virginia, knocked for a loop by surprising Duke Saturday night, takes on thin Clemson in tonight's only Atlantic Coast Conference basketball game — a game the Cavaliers must win to keep pace with streaking North Carolina and Maryland.

With only two weeks left in the regular season, Virginia and North Carolina are tied for the conference lead at 7-2. Maryland is not far back at 6-3. All three teams have 18-3 overall marks and are nationally ranked, with North Carolina and Virginia in the top 10.

While the Blue Devils were upsetting their second high-ranked opponent of the year (they pinned a 76-74 upset on North Carolina last month), Maryland was beating Clemson and N. C. State was whipping Wake Forest in other conference games.

North Carolina, meanwhile, was pinning a 99-74 loss on Notre Dame in New York's Madison Square Garden.

N. C. State's pesky and tall Wolfpack is the next test for the Blue Devils. They play at Durham Wednesday. State won the earlier meeting, 85-58, and took a three-point win over Duke in a Big Four tournament meeting that didn't count in conference play.

One game is scheduled Tuesday: Richmond of the Southern Conference at Maryland. And two other games are on tap Wednesday: Georgia Tech at North Carolina and Pitt at Virginia.

The big games of the week come up Saturday. Maryland is at Duke, Virginia at North Carolina, Wake Forest at Clemson and East Carolina at N. C. State.

Schenk Eyes 1976 Games

OSLO (AP) — Ard Schenk, the Flying Dutchman who apparently can skate forever, has no plans to stop—at least for the next four years.

"Unless my form is disappearing completely, I would like to continue until Denver (site of the 1976 Winter Olympics)," Schenk said Sunday after completing a fantastic month by becoming the first man in 60 years to win all four events of the World Speed Skating Championships.

The 27-year-old Hollander won the over-all European championship early this month and then captured Olympic gold medals at 1,500, 5,000 and 10,000 meters.

Schenk began his world championship sweep here Saturday by winning the 5,000-meter race and tying at 500 meters with Roar Gronvold of Norway.

Sunday he added the 1,500 and 10,000 meters, setting a championship record of 2 minutes, 36 seconds in the 1,500. He held the old mark of 2:04.80. His time for 10,000 meters was 15:22.09.

"In the 10,000 meters race I was only skating to secure the over-all silver medals," Schenk said. When he won it, he became the first man since Oscar Mathisen of Norway in 1912 to win all four world championship races. He also became only the third man to win three consecutive over-all world titles.

Rookie Lanny Wadkins Bows, Vows To 'Make It'

By BOB GREEN
Associated Press Golf Writer
PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — "That's two in a row. But I'll get there yet," rookie Lanny Wadkins vowed.

Wadkins lost a sudden-death playoff to Homero Blancas for the title in the $125,000 Phoenix Open Golf Tournament Sunday, finishing second for the second time in as many weeks.

The 22-year-old former National Amateur champion from Wake Forest spun out a 20-foot birdie putt that would have won it on the 72nd hole, then bowed to Blancas' birdie four on the first extra hole.

The victory was worth $25,000 to the swarthy Blancas, a 33-year-old from Houston who scored his fourth tour victory. Wadkins pulled down $14,300 for second.

Blancas, who missed a four-foot birdie putt that would have nailed it down on the final hole, had a last round 69, two-under-par on the 6,641-yard Phoenix Country Club course. Wadkins, playing in only his 12th professional event, closed up with a sparkling 66 and caught Blancas at the end of the regulation 72 holes at 273.

Marty Fleckman came out of the pack to take third with a 68—274 as Tony Jacklin of England and outsider Paul Moran shot themselves out of contention late in the round.

"The playoff was kind of a give-away," Blancas said. "Then it got down to a putting contest and I was lucky enough to win that."

Wadkins pushed his tee shot on the par five playoff hole into some trees, had to hit a three-wood second shot under branches and then hit a sand wedge over more trees to within about 13 feet of the flag.

Blancas hit a poor second shot behind trees but stroked a sand wedge over them to within four feet. Wadkins missed his putt and Homero sank his for his first victory since the 1970 Colonial National Invitation.

Robinson, Wills Sign Contracts

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

In Casa Grande, Ariz., San Francisco Giants President Horace Stoneham arrived at camp asking the whereabouts of his pitching mainstay, Juan Marichal.

Not only did Stoneham express surprise at the absence of Marichal, who reportedly seeks a $150,000 contract, but he said, "I don't even know how much he wants because he's never contacted me."

Stoneham said a contract had been sent to the perennial 20-game winner, but the owner refused to disclose the terms.

Wills, the longtime shortstop and team leader, joined the Dodgers for a salary in the $100,000 range.

Robinson and Wills were the biggest names in a day of player signings that also included Bobby Murcer of the New York Yankees.

Murcer, the Yankees' leading hitter last season with a .331 average, signed for $65,000. Shortstop Gene Alley signed for an estimated $25,000 with the Pittsburgh Pirates, leaving only two of the World Champions unsigned—shortstop Fran Taveras and pitcher Nelson Briles.

Davidson's Coach Hurt

DAVIDSON, N. C. (AP) — Basketball coach Terry Holland, who has worried all season about his Davidson Wildcats getting injured, has been hospitalized after getting socked in the eye during a handball game with his wife, Ann.

Holland was struck in the eye with the small rubber ball during a game at the Davidson gymnasium.

He was hospitalized at Charlotte Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat Hospital where he has been ordered to lie on his back for at least five days to permit an accumulation of blood in the cornea of the right eye to drain.

Davidson will play Dayton tonight at the Charlotte Coliseum under assistant coaches Bo Brickels and Jim Larra-ngaga.

The Wildcats lost Southern Conference star John Falconi with an ankle injury earlier this year and top forward substitute Paul Wagner last week.

S. Illinois Takes Meet

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Southern Illinois won the championship of the 10th Southern Intercollegiate Invitational Swimming meet at the University of Georgia Saturday, with three first place winners in separate events.

Bill Tingley captured the 200 backstroke with a time of 1:57.2; Dale Korner took the 200 breaststroke with a time of 2:11.4, and Rob Dickson won the 100 butterfly at 53.1 seconds.

Southern Illinois gained 464 points during the three-day meet, followed by Miami with 423, South Carolina 406, Georgia 293 and Florida State 165.

Miami swimmers had their best day Saturday. Gregg Tye won the 500 freestyle at 4:41.5, Robert Vandemerve won the 100 freestyle in 47.7 seconds and Miami won the 400 freestyle relay at 3:11.9.

South Carolina's Gary Weatherhold took the 3 meter diving title with 373.4 points.

Gearhart began the payoff game with a strike and never gave up the lead. He struck in the eighth and ninth boxes and spared in the 10th to win his fourth PBA championship. Buckley, who has won one title, earned $6,000 for his runner-up finish in the four-day event.

Saturday's four-match wind-up began with Nelson Burton Jr., St. Louis, rolling 168, lowest game of the day, to lose to a 209 by Bill Beach of Sharon, Pa. In the next match, 12-time champ Dave Davis of Miami, Fla., finished with two strikes to edge Beach 212-205.

Then Buckley took on Davis, a 10-time runner-up since he last won more than two years ago. Buckley, marking in every frame, won 202-181.

Good Weekend For 3 Russian Trackmen

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It was a good weekend for three Russian track stars in the United States but a better one for an American in Moscow.

Tommy Lee White of Los Angeles set a world record of 7.4 seconds for the 60-meter indoor high hurdles at a Moscow meet Saturday night, according to Tass, the Soviet news agency. He came back Sunday and won the 110-meter hurdles in 13.8.

Meanwhile, in the San Diego Indoor Games, Valery Borzov, the world's best sprinter last year, scored a last-stride victory over Jean-Louis Ravelomanantsoa of Madagascar in the 60-yard dash in 6.0 seconds.

Two Soviet women also triumphed. Galina Kuzmina ran away from America's Jarvis Scott on the last lap to take the 800 in a leisurely 2:11.4 and Sayna Maylinik heaved the women's shot 57 feet, 7 1/4 inches to 45-0 1/2 for runnerup Jan Svendsen of the Los Angeles Track Club.

Another Russian, Rustem Akhmetov, cleared 7 feet in the high jump, the same as Reynaldo Brown, but Brown won on fewer misses.

first sub-four-minute mile of his career, winning in 3:59.5.

Another world record was set in Moscow when Sarmite Shula of Russia won the women's 600-meter run in 1:30.4.

Back in the United States, Fred DeBernardi of Texas-El Paso equaled the all-time best indoor shot put by a collegian in the Western Athletic Conference Championships with a toss of 67-10.

World record-holder Pat Matzdorf of Wisconsin, still hampered by a bad knee, won the high jump in a dual meet with Tennessee at 7 feet, which was 6 1/4 inches under his record.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla. (AP) — Ex-world champion heavyweight boxer Muhammad Ali arrived here Sunday en route to four exhibition matches tonight at the Oklahoma City State Fairgrounds Arena.

Ali was swamped by hundreds of fans seeking autographs and yelling greetings.

HAVERFORD, Pa. (AP) — Mrs. Lee Moyer of Pennington, N.J. regained the U.S. Women's Squash Racquets Championship Sunday by scoring a 15-10, 18-16, 18-13 victory over her sister, Mrs. Halsey Spruance of Wilmington, Del., at the Merion Cricket Club.

BUFFALO (AP) — The Buffalo Bills will play a preseason National Football League exhibition game against the New Orleans Saints Aug. 12 in Tulane Stadium, site of last month's Super Bowl VI.

After Saturday night, however, it would be hard to convince the West Virginia's Mountaineers, for Anastasio was the player who was largely instrumental in the Spiders' 99-87 upset that catapulted them right back into consideration as a conference darkhorse.

While the victory didn't help Richmond in the league standings, both Furman's defending champion Paladins and William and Mary's Indians enhanced their positions in the conference race.

The Paladins wound up an 8-3 league campaign and clinched the No. 2 seed behind Davidson, 8-2, in the conference championship tournament on Furman's home floor March 24 with an 80-75 triumph over The Citadel on the Bulldog's home court.

William and Mary, meanwhile, traded places with East Carolina by edging the Pirates 67-64. The triumph moved the Indians to third at 5-3 and dropped East Carolina to fourth at 7-5.

Saturday night's only other scheduled game in which Appalachian State was to entertain Lenoir Rhyne was postponed because of snow.

Three conference teams take on nonleague foes tonight with Furman at home against West Virginia, Davidson meeting Dayton at Charlotte, N.C., and Appalachian going to High Point.

Anastasio led the Spiders in scoring with 23 points, including seven crucial free throws after Richmond went in front for good at 83-81 on Jeff Snider's layup following a feed from Anastasio with four minutes left. And he also did the defensive job on Wil Robinson.

The West Virginia ace came into the game averaging 28.4 points, but Anastasio limited him to four shots from the floor, of which he made just one, and seven points. He also got Robinson in foul trouble, forcing him to sit out 10 minutes of the first half.

Anastasio finished with 13 of 17 from the foul line and Roger Hatcher hit 10 straight free throws and finished with 22 points. Mike Heitz had 20 points and 16 rebounds for West Virginia.

"Mike had the best game he's had since he's been here," said Richmond Coach Lewis Mills. "That little fellow is tough. He's got a lot of pride and he made the right plays at the right time."

Furman shook loose from The Citadel with six straight free throws in the final minute after the Bulldogs had overcome a 10-point deficit. Russ Hunt had 28 points for the Paladins, Cal Hayslip 25 for the Citadel in a losing cause.

A five-point streak in the last 2:17 broke a tie and gave William and Mary its triumph over East Carolina after the Indians had blown a 12-point halftime lead. Jeff Trammell had 18 points and Jerry Fisher 15 for the Indians, Jim Fairley 15 points and 16 rebounds for East Carolina.

The Best Warranty This Side of a Rolls-Royce

You can't put a price on the warranty you get with a Volkswagen. You see, a Volkswagen warranty runs twice as long as anybody else's small car warranty. And only one car, the Rolls-Royce, has one better.

Here's how ours works: All you do is maintain the car according to the Volkswagen maintenance schedule. If any factory part is found to be defective in material or workmanship within 24 months or 24,000 miles, whichever comes first (except normal wear and tear on service items) any U.S. or Canadian VW dealer will repair or replace it free of charge. See your dealer for details.

More Than 5,000 Inspections Per Car

The story behind our warranty starts at the factory. Where 1,104 nit-picking inspectors have one job, and one job only. To find something wrong with a Volkswagen before that Volkswagen finds its way out of the factory.

Every one of the more than 5,000 parts that go into a VW is carefully examined. Some of them get the once-over two or three times. If one of our inspectors is unhappy with only one of the parts, the whole car gets pulled off the line. Sometimes we pull as many as 225 VWs a day. But it's worth it. We pick the lemons. You get the plums.

The Most Advanced Service System In The World

No other car maker anywhere can offer you Medi-car, Volkswagen's ultrasensitive Electronic Diagnosis. It's designed to spot problems in your Volkswagen when they're at the minor adjustment stage. Long before they can do any real damage to your car or your wallet. Every one of our dealers has VW Diagnosis. And you get the first four check-ups free with a new VW.

The Highest Resale Value

Based on what's happened in the past, no other economy car on the road holds its value after 3 or 4 years as well as a Volkswagen. So, if you're thinking about buying a new car, think about what it's going to be worth when it's an old car. Because when the time comes to part company with your VW, you won't be left holding the bag.

Unless that's what you carry your money in.

Draft Dodgers, Deserters Demand 'Full Amnesty'

By DAVID E. ANDERSON
WASHINGTON (UPI) —Because of the Vietnam War, an estimated 71,600 young Americans can't go home again these days. About 1,600 of them are Communist prisoners of war or missing in action. Another 70,000 are living abroad in deliberate exile to avoid military service.

The government is determined that the 1,600 military captives must be released before a peace settlement can be reached. They are a "must" factor in the Paris negotiations to end the war.

But the fate of the 70,000 war resisters and another 500 imprisoned in this country may well continue to haunt the conscience of post-war America.

As no other groups, these two groups represent the conflict, confusion and polarization that has marked the evolving history of the Vietnam involvement.

POW's Come First

Release of the prisoners of war is a primary element of President Nixon's plan for a negotiated settlement of the war and the United States has engaged in an intensive international diplomatic effort to secure their release. There has been a steady build-up in public relations to call attention to their plight.

It is different—and many think it should be—for the imprisoned draft resisters, the self-exiled opponents of the war living in Canada and deserts from the armed forces living in Sweden and other European countries.

They are more a cause of diplomatic embarrassment than U.S. government concern. Until recently the question of amnesty was met with either brevity—"no"—or silence. Yet the issue is now a matter of growing public debate.

Although the idea of a general amnesty for draft resisters and exiles opposed to the war was first suggested on a national level by former Sen. Eugene McCarthy during his 1968 Presidential campaign, scant notice was given the proposal until recently.

Three Important Factors
Three events have begun to change that:

— The nation's Roman Catholic bishops issued a statement urging consideration of "granting amnesty to those who have been imprisoned as selective conscientious objectors, and giving those who have emigrated an opportunity to return to the country to show responsibility for their conduct and to be ready to serve in other ways to show that they are sincere objectors."

— Sen. Robert Taft, R-Ohio, introduced legislation which would grant amnesty "under certain conditions" to persons who have failed or refused to register for the draft or refused induction.

— Former Rep. Charles Porter, D-Ore., has formed an organization, Amnesty Now, to gain a general amnesty for draft resisters and exiles.

These developments have brought those who have been called "the war's other victims" into the news and a national debate is growing around the issue.

The focus is almost certain to be Taft's proposal. A similar measure has been introduced in the House by Rep. Edward I. Koch, D-N.Y.

Taft's proposal is considered important in the first place because of its source. The Ohio Republican is generally considered a Conservative and a consistent supporter of Nixon's Vietnam policy.

The Bishops' statement is also considered an important indication of a shift in public attitude about war resisters. It came from one of the most prestigious groups of religious leaders who previously were not identified with longstanding opposition to the war.

Overcoming General Resistance
The idea of amnesty has a long way to go, however, if it is to gain acceptance in the eyes of most Americans.

The Bishops' statement and the Taft proposal are criticized by both hawk and dove sides of the Vietnam controversy. Porter's proposition, because it calls for unconditional amnesty, is considered to have an even tougher outlook.

Supporters of President Nixon's Vietnam position argue that amnesty would open the floodgates to general opposition to the draft. They contend that granting forgiveness to those who have violated the law would lead to an increase in disrespect for all laws.

Timing is also cited by opponents. They argue that to grant amnesty or pardon would make it difficult if not impossible to continue the war effort and would undermine Nixon's gradual withdrawal policy.

And there are many who think it just plain wrong that any kind of forgiveness be granted those who violated the law and refused to fight for their country.

Taft has reported a great deal of hostile reaction to his bill, including a telegram from Florida offering to buy the senator a ticket to Canada.

Perhaps the most emotional argument against amnesty is that it is unfair to those who fought and died in Vietnam. The Washington Daily News sounded this theme in an editorial opposing the Taft proposal: "The families of men lost in the war are not apt to react sympathetically to a general pardon for those who willfully dodged their obligation."

"The country owes these families a debt it can never repay," the newspaper added.

Country Over Conscience?
Rep H.R. Gross, R-Iowa, was even stronger. Taft's proposed legislation is "a particular insult to those who made the supreme sacrifice and cannot raise their voices in protest," he said.

It is in response to this kind of criticism that Taft proposed a "qualified" amnesty rather than a full and general pardon.

Citing the 55,000 Americans who have died in the Indochina war, Taft said: "We should not grant amnesty to draft resisters without requiring them to undertake service to their country."

If his bill became law, young men currently imprisoned in exile would be released or allowed to return if they agreed to serve the United States—either in the military or in a form of alternate service—for three years.

"The time has now come to ask ourselves whether we will offer these men an opportunity to become productive citizens in the land of their birth," Taft explained.

"We must decide whether it is more in our interest to have them spend their time in jail and in bitter exile, or to offer them a practical course to amnesty."

There are indications, however, that the beneficiaries of Taft's proposal may well reject his "practical course" back to return to their native land.

In their view they were prematurely right, acted in line with their conscience, paid a price—either in prison or exile—and should not be asked to pay again for having a view about the war that growing numbers of Americans now accept.

Along this line, the Rev. Robert Gardiner, an Episcopal chaplain to the exiles in Canada, said the Taft proposal "has nothing to do with young Americans in Canada."

"It is a political football, an attempt to defuse the issue with the approach of an election year," he commented.

Gardiner's view is shared by some spokesmen for the exiles. Jack Colhoun, now living in Toronto, has published an open letter to Rep. Koch denouncing the alternative service aspect of both the Koch and Taft proposals.

"We left the states because we did not want to become criminals of the heart and now feel that a government which has the stain of Indochina on its conscience has no business passing judgment on our 'crimes' and meting out punishment no matter how seemingly tolerant and liberal it may be dressed up," Colhoun wrote.

A separate panel of resisters in Canada issued a statement shortly after Taft's legislation was introduced, denouncing all amnesty proposals now before Congress.

They demanded "totally non-punitive restoration of civil rights" before they would return home.

Thus it appears that most long-term opponents of the war will center their efforts on Porter's campaign for a full and unqualified amnesty and, in all likelihood, the question will subtly shift from whether amnesty should be granted or not to the nature of the offer.

"I am totally opposed to alternate service," Porter said when he set up Amnesty Now. "It is based on the need to punish, and to my mind these men have already paid a high price in exile or hiding."

Amnesty Now is preparing legislation that would offer full amnesty to both draft registers and military deserts who are excluded in Taft's bill. The group will try to get planks endorsing its position in the platforms of both parties at the conventions.

Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., and a presidential contender, has proposed a general amnesty on the lines of Porter's idea. Other Democratic candidates including Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, have indicated interest in amnesty proposals.

Is Nixon Softening?

The Nixon administration, which in the past has generally avoided the question, has in recent weeks shown a more amenable stance to the question.

The President on his hour long television interview early in January said he would be "very liberal with regard to amnesty."

But he also indicated he did not feel that now was the time to discuss the matter. Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird has also indicated that while the United States has always "tried to temper justice with mercy," he felt this was "not the time" to consider amnesty.

Laird said amnesty should not be considered until "every young American has been returned from the prisoner of war camps, or we have a complete accounting for every man missing in action..."

Amnesty as a tradition in the United States dates back to George Washington's pardon for the insurgents who participated in the Whiskey Rebellion.

At least eight other Harry S. Truman pardoned some 1,500 young men who proclaimed of one sort or another. In 1945, President War II.

Some View Nixon Trip To Peking With Concern

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent
For world leaders who may be looking for things to worry about, President Nixon's talks in Communist China provide a rich mine of raw material.

A case can be made for the view that this week will advance hopes of peace, if only because a door once closed is now open. But a case also can be made for the idea that this week's meetings can set back peace hopes.

The picture of a triangle of big powers has a new dimension now. What will it mean for Asia? Will there be a perilous big-power contest in the Indian Ocean? Will a Chinese-Soviet struggle for influence in Asia be sharpened? Will Japan or India—or both—feel new pressure to acquire nuclear arms because of a fear that China's potential as a nuclear power will be enhanced by economic ties with the United States?

Washington has assured allied capitals that there will be no major policy change affecting them. Yet the fact of Nixon's arrival in Peking spotlights radical change affecting all in one way or another. Indeed, onlookers may wonder whether embers of an old American crush on China, even though it had been based on misconceptions, might not be about to burst back into flame. Throughout the '60s, U.S. policy conveyed an idea of encircling and quarantining Red China. Now a profound change is developing. It is the Russians who seem intent on encircling and quarantining China.

It might appear to some that Washington and Peking share an interest in preventing dominant Soviet influence in the nations on China's periphery. The Russians patently are even more suspicious than they usually are. Thus they may be all the less likely to want to agree on vital issues.

There are so many imponderables in the presidential diplomacy that a case can be made for almost any prognosis, all the way from glowingly rosy to downright glum.

As the President begins his talks with Chou En-lai speculation on the impact might go like this:

Soviet Bloc
Moscow's recent effort to display a broad-minded attitude toward the Peking talks was unconvincing in view of a flood of propaganda indicating the opposite.

The Kremlin is unlikely to do anything that might upset the Nixon plan for a balancing Moscow visit in May, but it could, if it chose, use its influence indirectly to embarrass Peking while Nixon is there. One way could be to have others in the bloc stage a big international Communist protest on Vietnam, to emphasize that China entertains Nixon while U.S. forces war on a Communist regime.

Russia complains that Peking treats it as enemy No. 1. The complaint is valid enough. The Chinese, looking north, see a million Russians—land, sea, air and rocket forces—deployed on the frontier. Border talks, opened in 1969 after a serious military clash, have been stalled since. For China the threat from the north can seem all too real.

Peking could regard an opening to the United States as a means of giving Moscow second thoughts about any anti-China plans it might contemplate.

Japan
For 50 years after 1895, Japan was China's scourge. China today is far from convinced that Japan will avoid remilitarization. Peking regards Japan as her most potent future competitor in the economic arena and dreads the neighbor as a potential military power.

For its part, Japan's industrialists and businessmen long have eyed Communist China's possibilities as a huge market of 800 million people.

Japan's government now seems to feel abused by Washington because the Nixon-Peking development took it by surprise. Will Tokyo try to move closer to Peking and calm its fears?

America's Asian Allies
Technically, China and the United States remain at war. There was no peace treaty after the Korean armistice of 1953.

South Korea's President Chung Hee Park may wonder how long the Americans will continue strong military support of his regime against the Communist north.

As for North Korea, can it be happy with a picture of the President as the honored guest of its closest ally? Will North and South Korea both begin thinking in terms of communicating with one another?

Continuing U.S. support of Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalists represents the greatest single obstacle to normal Washington-Peking relations. But that does not exclude a possibility of Red Chinese - American collaboration on some other levels, notably the economic.

Taiwan may be a bit jumpy in its developing isolation. Chiang is 84, and those who must run the island after him may be pondering whether some approach to the mainland is indicated for an all-Chinese solution of their feud.

South Vietnam's leaders must be analyzing the cordiality between the heads of a government which has protected them and a regime that wants them overthrown.

On the other hand, Saigon's enemy may be uneasy, too. North Vietnam's leaders know Peking would not overtly pressure them to make a peace they wouldn't want. But Chou gives the impression that he feels the Americans genuinely want to get out of Vietnam.

If Vietnam no longer is an insurmountable obstacle to Washington-Peking communication, that in itself could be regarded in Hanoi as a form of pressure.

Thailand long has provided air bases and troops to the Vietnam effort. Its government occasionally has shown concern that it might one day be left holding the bag. Its leaders have left little doubt they would immediately explore means of coming to terms with their huge Chinese neighbor—if the Americans left Asia precipitously.

India
Prime Minister Indira Gandhi indicates India wants to continue nonaligned. India fought a border war with Red China a decade ago and now has a treaty tying her to Moscow.

But prospects of being in the middle of a big power contest are not pleasant to contemplate, nor would India find any comfort in the idea that Washington might tacitly recognize China's claim to the Asian continent as its rightful sphere of influence.

The "Third World"
What Peking calls the "Third World" of weak nations, as opposed to the advanced ones, is a point of Chinese-American contention.

The West
The Western Hemisphere,

China pictures itself as champion of those nations against the designs of the superpowers. Some of those nations likely would just as soon be thus defended, and will have noted with interest President Nixon's remark that no big power can presume to speak for any large bloc of nations.

The West
The Western Hemisphere,

watching Nixon's spectacular tourism, will be looking for clarification of U.S. policies. How far, for example, will the United States withdraw from commitments it shouldered voluntarily after World War II in Asia and Europe?

For the foreseeable future, the United States still must contend with Chinese and Soviet regimes that remain committed to world revolution in one form or another. For all their cordiality to the visitors, China's leaders still call for violent revolution as "the main trend" today. They are said to follow avidly all reports suggesting a weakening of the U.S. system.

That doesn't mean the Chinese expect that revolution in America is around the corner. It could mean to them, though, that an America seeking to protect home interests might seek to be less encumbered in Asia.

Voters Registering At Rose High Today

About 300 Rose High students are today taking advantage of having the voter registration books at the school to get their names on the rolls for the first time.

A number of faculty members not previously registered also took the occasion to enter their names on the voter registration books.

Under sponsorship of Rose High Student Government Association, the 18 year old students eligible to register began reporting to the school cafeteria this morning. Three registrars were on hand to sign up the new generation of voters.

SGA officers Mike Van Dyke, Eugenia Parker, Kathy Whichard and Darrell Davis, with the assistance of other SGA representatives, screened students, checking social security cards, driver's licenses or birth certificates to verify eligibility of students reporting to register.

Mrs. Rosalind Britt, Guidance Counselor at Rose High, said that the possibility exists the registrars may report again at the school at a later date, as many more students will reach their 18th birthday prior to the end of the school year and thus be eligible to register.

The Worry Clinic

One Can Curb An Inner Rage

Tommy is more like an Arabian race horse! For some people inherit not only a higher I.Q. but also more active glandular secretions. But his teacher is using good psychology on Tommy. For you can't simultaneously "celebrate" and also "emote."

By GEORGE W. CRANE, Ph.D., M.D.

Case T-507: Tommy G., aged 10 $\frac{1}{2}$, has a violent temper.

"Dr. Crane," his teacher began, "Tommy seems to be much more high-strung than many other boys in my class."

"Normally, he is rather quiet and a good student."

"But occasionally when things go wrong, he literally seems to 'see red' and acts like a tiger."

"So I have urged him to stop and count to ten before he loses his temper."

"Isn't that good psychology?" CEREBRATE TO "COOL IT"

Tommy's teacher is a good Applied Psychologist.

For I have repeatedly told you that there is an axiom of psychology to the effect that you cannot "celebrate" and also "emote" simultaneously.

And to "celebrate" means to use your cerebrum (brain) via a conscious thought process.

The mere act of counting to ten, thus makes your brain function so your rage will meanwhile decline.

In fact, even sexual passion will do likewise!

So when you women are threatened with rape, by all means play your would-be assailant with questions.

If you can get him to answer them, you thus have made his brain function, so his erotic excitement will decline rapidly.

Indeed, many a husband has complained to us doctors that when his wife engages in conversation or asks him questions while he is attempting marital relations, then his ardor wanes to the point that he is impotent for the moment.

"But, Dr. Crane," some of you may protest, "doesn't repression of emotions tend to produce peptic ulcer and spastic colitis?"

Yes; which is why some quick physical exertion helps protect your stomach from that peptic ulcer.

That explains why men explode verbally, for even the use of their vocal cords involves muscles of the throat and the chest.

Sometimes angry musicians will also expend their ire via loud music and military marches.

"Dr. Crane," the wife of a tense sales manager recently informed me, "my husband often comes home just ready to erupt in a rage."

"But he likes to play the piano, so he takes out his inner rage on the keyboard."

"When he first sits down at the piano bench, he plays violent music but after 15 minutes, I can tell that he has vented his inner tension because the music has grown softer."

This sales executive thus has hit upon a valuable form of what we psychiatrists call an "emotional catharsis."

The shedding of tears, as at a funeral, likewise helps do the same.

Tommy is more like a race horse than a placid perch on work horse, so he probably has more glandular prodding to violent anger.

Sometimes lack of adequate sleep, as by too much TV, will make a person more irritable. Urge kiddies to run and romp or indulge in school athletics, as a form of psychological insurance for relieving inner anger and tension.

Many a football player thus vents his emotions on the tackling dummy or an opposing lineman, which is a legitimate outlet.

Marc Antony cleverly diverted the mob that was angry at Caesar, into chasing after Brutus and Cassius, so employ this diversionary strategy, too.

Send for my booklet "How to Control the Emotions," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 cents.

Always write to Dr. Crane in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.

BRIDGE QUIZ ANSWERS

Q. 1—Neither vulnerable, partner has opened with one club and you hold:

♠QJ4 ♥1065 ♦Q3 ♣AJ1085

What is your response?

A.—One no trump. This is a specialized response in answer to a one club opening. A one no trump response shows a balanced hand of 9, 10 or 11 points and partner should bid again if he has more than a minimum.

Q. 2—As South vulnerable, you hold:

♠83 ♥AQJ3 ♦AQ1074 ♣32

The bidding has proceeded: South West North East

1 ♥ Pass 3 ♥ Pass

What action do you take?

A.—Four hearts. This hand is very little above minimum and since no slam is suggested by your partner it would be improper to show the diamonds.

Q. 3—Opponents are vulnerable, you are not and as South you hold:

♠QJ6 ♥AK62 ♦KQ104 ♣AQ

The bidding has proceeded: East South

1 NT ?

What action do you take?

A.—Pass. This is your best chance to show a substantial profit. The chances of beating this contract 200 points are not remote. If you double it is unlikely that partner will be able to leave it in and the best that you can hope for in that case is a part score. Don't let the enemy off the hook.

Q. 4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠J1062 ♥K3 ♦AQ742 ♣43

The bidding has proceeded: South West North East

Pass Pass 1 ♣ Pass

3 ♣ Pass 4 ♣ Pass

4 ♦ Pass 4 ♥ Pass

What action do you take?

A.—Four spades. A further aggressive bid of five hearts is not recommended. Your hand just about measured up to a three spade bid after your previous pass and without a high spade honor a further slam try would not be indicated.

Convention Role Dividing San Diego

By RAYMOND C. MEANS
SAN DIEGO, Calif. (UPI)—The selection of San Diego as the site of the 1972 Republican National Convention has been greeted locally with emotions ranging from elation to despair, but everyone agrees the city will never be the same again.

"The convention will be worth $5 million in free advertising to the city," says Chamber of Commerce President Eben W. Dobson Jr.

"I don't see how there can be any future benefits from the convention," said City Councilman Leon Williams. "Everyone knows we are here. We are already growing by leaps and bounds."

San Diego's growth rate is a matter of record. The population of the city has increased from 573,000 to 722,000 in the past 10 years. It now rivals San Francisco as the second largest city east of Dallas.

GOP conventioners will find a city aware of its attractions, a city that wants growth but fears becoming a second Los Angeles, with a mass of houses and industrial plants linked by a maze of freeways and smothered with smog.

A Splendid City

The attractions of San Diego are manifest. The Harbor of the Sun, as the city is called, blends what may be the nation's mildest year-round climate with all types of recreational facilities and a great deal of open space.

San Diego County is about the size of Connecticut, surrounded by the Pacific Ocean to the west, mountains to the east. Mexico to the south and the sprawling Camp Pendleton Marine Base to the north.

The average temperature in August, when the convention will be held is 72 degrees, and the rainfalls averages less than an inch.

Amusement attractions in the area for convention-goers range along the 45 mile strip from Del Mar Race Track at the north down to South-of-the-border Tijuana. Intersecting this strip is 15-mile Mission Valley from the ocean east to San Diego Stadium.

The area includes Mission Bay Park for all types of aquatic fundn Sea World Aquatic Amusement Park, the San Diego Zoo with the world's largest collection of wild animals, many of the county's 65 golf courses, most of the better restaurants and hotels, the port, the airport and numerous military bases.

Another 'Chicago'?

The racing season will be under way during convention time and Tijuana offers shopping bargains by day and bawdy entertainment at night.

Among the problems that worry San Diego is the threat of the demonstrations during the convention. Radicals Abbie Hoffman and Jerry Rubin already have indicated they expect to lead large contingents of protestors to San Diego.

Police inspector James Connole, in charge of the Security Task Force, said he expects anywhere from 10,000 to 250,000 demonstrators from outside the area.

Connole and his men are initiating a policy of working with demonstrators, but a great deal of money also is being spent on training and equipment in case peaceful methods don't prevail.

Both residents and police also fear that young demonstrators will come to protest and stay to enjoy the summer, increasing congestion and other problems at the height of the tourist season.

There also is the possibility of local demonstrators taking to the streets. George Stevens, chairman of the local chapter of the Congress of African People (slightly less than 10 percent of San Diego's population is black), opposes the convention.

Stevens told the City Council in 1971 it was committing grand theft in using tax funds for the convention instead of correcting inequities among the minorities.

Nixon's 'Lucky City'

"Prepare to suffer embarrassments next year," he warned.

San Diego so far has been relatively free of demonstrations and racial violence, although several isolated cases of sniping at police have arisen.

Mexican-Americans make up nearly 20 percent of the population, and they have been vociferous in community demands but relatively apathetic at the polls.

President Nixon considers San Diego his "Lucky City." In 1962, when he tried to make a political comeback after his defeat by John F. Kennedy in the 1960 Presidential election, Nixon scored a 4-3 vote margin in San Diego, even while losing the statewide gubernatorial race to Edmund G. Brown.

After winning the Republican presidential nomination at Miami in 1968, Nixon immediately flew to San Diego, where he and his vice presidential candidate, Spiro T. Agnew, spent 10 days mapping strategy.

The county was strongly for Nixon in 1968, and in 1970 when the President put his prestige on the line to back Sen. George Murphy's bid for re-election. Murphy lost the election to Democrat John Tunney but carried the county with 218,000 votes to Tunney's 62,000.

CONVENTION SITE — The San Diego International Sports Arena, site of the 1972 Republican Convention, has a seating capacity of 15,000. Selection of San Diego as the site of the convention has been greeted with emotions ranging from elation to despair. (UPI Telephoto)

Dreams for sale.

Everybody's got a dream lurking around in the back of his mind. A dream vacation. A dream cottage. A dream car.

Dreams can be a lot more fun if you know you're doing something to make them come true.

And that's what the Payroll Savings Plan is all about. When you sign up an amount you specify is set aside from each paycheck and used to buy U.S. Savings Bonds.

Now Bonds mature in less than six years. That's the shortest maturity period ever, and makes Bonds a practical way to save for dreams you want to come true while you're still young enough to enjoy them.

See the folks in the payroll office where you work. They've got dreams for sale.

Now E Bonds pay 5 1/2% interest when held to maturity of 5 years, 10 months (4% the first year). Bonds are replaced if lost, stolen, or destroyed. When needed they can be cashed at your bank. Interest is not subject to state or local income taxes, and federal tax may be deferred until redemption.

Take stock in America.

Declines Watch X-Rated Movies

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — California's first lady says she won't watch any X-rated films, even if they're award winners.

"No," Nancy Reagan said Sunday in her weekly column published by The Sacramento Union in response to a reader's question if she would attend one.

"I don't think anyone wants censorship," the former movie actress said "but I'm afraid if the picture business doesn't start to censor itself as it used to, that's exactly what will happen."

"The strange part is the very people who decry it (censorship) the most will be the ones to bring it about," said the pretty wife of Republican Gov. Ronald Reagan.

Sinatra Renting Hughes' Suite

NASSAU, Bahamas (AP) — Officials at the Britannia Beach Hotel say singer Frank Sinatra has rented a suite that comes with a pretty good recommendation. For 14 months it was the hideaway of billionaire Howard Hughes.

Hotel officials said Sinatra would take over the two-bedroom suite soon, but the exact date was not announced.

Hughes gave up the luxury ninth-floor accommodations last Wednesday after four members of his staff were ordered to leave the Bahamas because they did not have work permits.

A Law Protects Senior Police

MANILA (UPI)—The indiscriminate firing of older police chiefs by many newly-elected mayors has been protested by Manila's Police Commission chairman, Crispino de Castro.

De Castro said that the Police Act of 1966 reads: "Members of the local police agency shall not be suspended or removed except upon written complaint filed under oath with the local board of investigators."

In the last 35 years, coyotes have invaded the east, appearing in Canada and at least 13 states from Maine to Florida.

Farm Tips

By Dr. J. W. Pou
Agricultural Specialist
Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., N.A.

North Carolina livestock producers are finding that they have an extra tough role in the fight against pollution.

They must dispose of vast quantities of animal wastes without polluting water supplies. They must also grow their hogs, chickens and cows, without creating an odor problem for their non-farm neighbors.

Waste disposal is proving to be a particularly tough problem for hog farmers. Hundreds of them have built lagoons in recent years, only to find that lagoons are no longer completely adequate for waste disposal.

"Lagoons have been somewhat successful in reducing the amount of the animal wastes moving into our surface waters, but the N. C. Department of Air and Water Resources is trying to prevent any inadequately-treated animal wastes from moving into streams and rivers," says Dr. George Kriz, in charge of extension activities for the Department of Biological and Agricultural Engineering at N. C. State University.

A recent study in which more than 1,500 lagoon and stream samples were tested for animal wastes found that most lagoons eventually overflow and that this overflowing creates a problem.

The annual rainfall in North Carolina and other humid areas is greater than the rate of evaporation. This means that the water level in the lagoon is likely to become higher and higher until it overflows. An exception would be a lagoon located on soil that would permit excessive deep seepage.

Dr. Frank Humenik, a sanitary engineer working in the Department of Biological and Agricultural Engineering, is testing several methods to see if lagoons can be made more efficient.

Most lagoons, he pointed out, contain no oxygen because the oxygen has been used up in the process of decomposing the animal wastes. Scientists call such lagoons anaerobic.

Once a lagoon reaches the anaerobic stage the rate of decomposition greatly decreases. The lagoon then becomes primarily a holding basin for the wastes.

Dr. Kriz says research has shown that "the land provides an ideal treatment system for animal wastes."

Investigations, show, for example, that when animal wastes are properly spread on the land that little or no pollution reaches the streams. Much more research is needed on land disposal, as well as on all phases of animal waste management. However, research and extension personnel in Biological and Agricultural Engineering at NCSU recommend the following general guides for land disposal:

1. Apply the waste uniformly.
2. Base the rate, time and frequency of application on the nutrient need of plants to be grown.
3. Use land that does not erode.
4. Plow waste under on barren fields
5. Don't apply waste to grassed waterways or other drainage paths.

Farmers should avoid locating dry lots on streams or on hillsides leading to streams. It is also desirable to provide at least 100 feet of vegetative waterway between dry lots and streams.

Pickling Increases Income

Many Greene County families are increasing their financial resources by growing pickling cucumbers. Last year this crop generated $286,000 to the economy of Greene County. Johnnie Jones, III, Assistant Agricultural Extension Agent, says that this $286,000 received from this supplementary cash crop gave quick returns and at a time when most families were feeling the dollar gap the most.

Jones, stated that there are still many families in Greene County that have not realized the full potential of this supplementary quick return crop.

Greene County's average yield last year was around 350 bushels per acre, this yield can and should be doubled. This can be done by following the recommended practices given by your local Agricultural Extension Service and with optimum weather conditions.

The market outlook for pickling cukes this year looks favorable. Greene County will have around six or seven buying stations in operation this year within close distance.

For more information on pickling cucumbers contacts, production practices and free bulletins, contact your local County Agricultural Office.

Tobacco TIPS

By SAM J. WEEKS

Make plans now to attend the Annual district meeting of the Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corporation. The District No. 6 meeting will be held Wednesday, March 1, at the Martin County Agricultural Building in Williamston, N. C. at 2 p.m.

District No. 6 includes the following counties from the Eastern Belt of North Carolina: Pitt Beaufort, Martin, Bertie, Washington, Dare, Tyrrell, Jones, Lenoir, Craven, Carteret and Pamlico.

A summary of the Cooperative's 1971 activities will be given by Fred Bond, general manager, and J. B. Sineath, the Cooperative's assistant general manager. Their reports will include the Cooperative's receipts and sales, processing and sales operation, along with a summary of operations of Tobacco Growers Services, Inc., the Cooperative's subsidiary, which processes tobacco and operates storage facilities for growers.

In addition to Stabilization's operational report, officials of the USDA Tobacco Grading Service, Tobacco Associates, Inc., and the Tobacco Growers Information Committee will be on hand for brief comments.

There will be ample time set aside for discussion, to be followed by a short business session to designate members of the Advisory Committee from all tobacco procuring counties in the district. The Advisory Committee has the responsibility of informing the growers and general public of information concerning Stabilization's activities.

All interested persons are urged to attend this meeting, Wednesday, March 1, at the Martin County Agricultural Building in Williamston, N. C. at 2 p.m.

Glenn Returning For Anniversary

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — The first American to orbit the earth, John Glenn, returns to Cape Kennedy Tuesday for the 10th anniversary celebration of his feat.

Glenn's historic flight began at 9:47 a.m., Feb. 20, 1962, when his Mercury capsule, Friendship 7, was hurled into space by an Atlas rocket.

After a three-orbit mission, Glenn took manual control of the spacecraft and landed in the Atlantic Ocean 4 hours, 55 minutes after leaving the earth.

The anniversary celebration was delayed until Tuesday because of the Washington's Birthday holiday.

Omar Bradley Is Award-Winner

VALLEY FORGE, Pa. (AP) — The nation's only living five-star general, Omar N. Bradley, has been named by the Freedom Foundation as winner of its 1971 George Washington award.

The private foundation said Sunday it had selected Bradley for its highest individual award for his "long dedicated and selfless service to his country as a professional soldier, head of the Veterans Administration and chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff."

Bradley, 79, is board chairman of Belova Watch Co.
