

Senators Approve Chou Pledges Continued Federal Role Curb Work Toward Friendship In School Busing

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the support of its liberal members, the Senate has voted to allow federal spending for busing only at the request of local school officials.

The provision was part of a compromise amendment approved Thursday as a preface to debate on several tough proposals to outlaw busing.

All four senators from the Carolinas voted against the compromise busing amendment.

A vote was expected today on an amendment by Republican Whip Robert F. Griffin that would strip federal courts of power to order busing as a means of achieving integration.

Southern senators are ready with other antibusing riders if the Griffin amendment is defeated.

The compromise proposal offered by Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield and Republican Leader Hugh Scott was adopted on separate votes on its three parts—51 to 37, 50 to 38 and 79 to 9.

The outcome was a setback for senators who oppose all busing. They denounced it as meaningless and a hoax, and said it would not stop any of the busing now being ordered by federal courts.

The compromise was supported by a combination of liberals and moderates, many of whom said they hoped it would allay much of the concern about busing and stave off much stronger amendments.

These are the main restrictions in the Mansfield-Scott proposal:

—Federal funds could not be used for busing to carry out a racial desegregation plan except on the written request of local school officials. Courts and federal officials would be barred from ordering local officials to make such requests.

—Federal funds could not be used for busing "when the time or distance of travel is so great as to risk the health of the children or significantly impinge on the educational process."

This language was lifted from the decision last year in a Charlotte, N.C., case in which the Supreme Court permitted busing to continue.

—Federal officials would be barred from inducing local school officials to use state or local funds for a school busing desegregation program unless constitutionally required. The latter phrase would let the courts continue to decide what is required.

—Federal officials would be prohibited from inducing local school officials to bus pupils from a good school to a substantially poorer school.

—Any court order requiring that two or more school districts be consolidated or that pupils be bused from one district to another would be stayed until all higher court appeals had been exhausted. This would apply in the pending Richmond, Va., case and in others that might arise.

This section on appeals was the most-popular of the leaders' proposal; it won the 79-9 vote.

Scott said he knew the compromise would not satisfy the extremes in the controversy.

"What it does is to leave these decisions up to the local school districts where possible," he said. "But it permits the interposition of the courts when that is necessary to carry out desegregation required by the Constitution."

PEKING (AP) — Premier Chou En-lai pledged tonight that China "will work unswervingly" for normal relations and friendly contacts with the United States.

At a dinner in his honor, the Chinese leader responded to a toast in which President Nixon declared: "We have begun the long process of removing that wall between us."

Seated at round tables in the Great Hall of the People, the Chou and Nixon entourages ate a nine-course meal of Chinese food except for grapefruit and orange segments flown from the United States. They sipped California champagne.

Nixon began the toasting by expressing appreciation for the Chinese hospitality shown the Americans the five days they have been in Peking.

Chou and Nixon came to the dinner from their fifth and final meeting, at which they presumably reached agreement on improving contacts through cultural and other exchanges, with diplomatic relations some time in the future.

Recalling his visit Thursday to the Great Wall of China, Nixon said the wall showed "the determination of the Chinese people to retain their independence throughout their long history."

"The Great Wall is no longer a wall dividing China from the rest of the world," he continued. "But it is a reminder of the fact that there are many walls still existing in the world, which divide nations and peoples."

"The Great Wall is also a reminder that for almost a generation there has been a wall between the People's Republic of China and the United States. In these past four days, we have begun the long process of removing that wall between us."

Nixon conceded that both sides recognize there are great differences between the United States and China.

"But we are determined that those differences will not prevent us from living together in peace," he went on. "You believe deeply in your system and we believe just as deeply in our system. It is not our common belief that have brought us together here, but our common interests and hopes."

Nixon and Chou applauded each other during the toasts.

Chou began by noting that Nixon had met with him and Chairman Mao Tse-tung and "we exchanged views on the normalization of relations between China and the United States and on other questions of concern to the two sides."

"There exist great differences of principle between our two sides," Chou noted. "Through earnest and frank discussions, a clearer knowl-

American Troops Fight Five-Hour Battle With North Viets And VC

SAIGON (AP) — American ground troops today fought their biggest battle in months, a clash with North Vietnamese and Viet Cong forces 42 miles east of Saigon.

First reports from the U.S. Command said 21 Americans were wounded but none killed in the five-hour battle south of an American artillery base called Cross Sabers.

Enemy losses were not immediately known.

A spokesman for the U.S. Command, Maj. Chester Hanson, said the casualties were the heaviest since last July 5, when five Americans were killed and 38 wounded in a rocket attack on the Da Nang air base.

Fighting broke out at noon when a company of the 3rd Brigade, 1st Air Cavalry Division, engaged an enemy force of unknown size and exchanged small arms and automatic weapons fire.

The ground troops called in U.S. bombers, helicopter gunships and artillery to blast the enemy. Hanson said the fighting broke off just before dusk, but U.S. fighter-bombers continued to pound the area.

Meanwhile, U.S. military sources said heavy U.S. air strikes against three major enemy base camps along South Vietnam's western border in mid-February knocked out more than 200 trucks and destroyed large quantities of ammunition and fuel.

The sources reported, however, they could not say how the raids had affected enemy plans for an offensive in South Vietnam's central highlands, which has been predicted for several weeks by U.S. officials.

In other battlefield action reported today, enemy forces ambushed a 35-vehicle U.S. convoy in the central highlands and shot down a helicopter flying overhead. The U.S. Command said seven Americans were wounded and three vehicles damaged, but only minor damage was done to the helicopter.

Five more U.S. troops were wounded 13 miles southwest of Da Nang when an American helicopter gunship accidentally fired into their position while trying to drive off an enemy squad.

Ten Pitt County seniors — two from Farmville Central High School and eight from J. H. Rose High School in Greenville, have been announced as finalists in the National Merit Scholarship competition.

Having moved into the finalist category, the seven young men and three young women will now compete with some 14,000 other finalists across the nation in a bid for one of the one thousand Merit scholarships of $1,000 each and 2,000 renewable Merit scholarships being offered students to be used at the college of their choice.

Wholesale Prices Rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices jumped another eight-tenths of one per cent in January. The rise exactly matched December's increase and indicated that the expected Phase 2 price bulge has not yet begun to flatten out.

When adjusted for the usual seasonal trends, the rise in the wholesale index was only half as great, or four-tenths of one per cent, the Labor Department's announcement said.

The seasonal improvement resulted from a smaller climb in food and farm products, which rose 3.2 per cent in December—the biggest increase for those items in 10 months—and 1.3 per cent in January.

But there was no comfort for administration economists in the segment of the index that covers industrial materials and commodities. It increased five-tenths of one per cent, compared with four-tenths of one per cent in December. The industrial commodities are considered a better indicator of future price movements at retail than the food and farm prices, whose movements are more erratic.

White House economists had predicted substantial increases in both December and January, the first two full months following the end of the 90-day price-wage freeze. Early decisions by the Price Commission gave a green light to substantial adjustments of prices frozen since Aug. 15.

The wholesale price showing was disappointing nevertheless because consumer prices rose only one-tenth of one per cent in January, or three-tenths of one per cent after seasonal adjustment. This movement, announced Wednesday, was a distinct improvement in the cost of living increase from December when the jump was four-tenths of one per cent, or a rate of 4.8 per cent a year.

Spacecraft To Carry Plaque For Beings Outside Solar System

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — In the first attempt to use a satellite to communicate with intelligent beings in outer space, a spacecraft scheduled for launch Sunday will carry a plaque that tells in scientific symbols when it was launched, from where and by what kind of people.

Along with the symbols, the plaque on pioneer 10 bears the naked figures of a man and woman, the man's right hand raised in a gesture of goodwill.

The experiment is strictly passive. Inhabitants of another star system would have to capture the payload to get the message.

National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials say the chances are remote that anyone will find it.

But they note Pioneer 10 is the first manmade object intended to escape our solar system, that it will travel for millions of years, perhaps forever, into other galaxies, and that no one knows if other civilizations exist out there.

Pioneer 10's primary mission is to be the first spacecraft to explore the largest planet in our solar system, Jupiter, and its puzzling red spot. To reach the distant target, the probe will be hurled away from earth at 32,000 miles an hour, faster than any previous space vehicle.

Even so, it will take 22 months to reach the vicinity of Jupiter. After photographing and probing the planet with sensors, it will zip deeper and deeper into space, beyond the reach of the sun's influence.

Because of the possibility that there is intelligent life elsewhere in the universe, the idea of the plaque was suggested by two Cornell University astronomers and the wife of one of them.

Dr. Carl Sagan, director of the Cornell's Laboratory for Planetary Studies, explained:

"I was really amazed at how just about everyone thought it was really a good idea. After all, this is the first object to leave the solar system. It seems appropriate there should be something on it telling which star in the galaxy and which planet about that star it came from and when it was launched, using a sort of cosmic clock for the date."

Working with Sagan on the project were his wife, Linda Salzman Sagan, a painter and film maker, and Dr. Frank Drake, director of the National Astronomy and Ionosphere Center at Cornell.

Pioneer 10 is scheduled for launching from here at 8:52 p.m. Sunday. The Atlas-Centaur is to drive the 570-pound probe away from earth at 32,000 miles an hour, nearly 8,000 miles faster than any previous spacecraft.

The craft is scheduled to pass within 87,000 miles of Jupiter in December 1973, after traveling half-a-billion miles. For nearly a week during the flyby, it is to gather scientific data and relay crude television images.

Medical Society, Auxiliary District Meet Held Wednesday

The Pitt County Medical Society and Auxiliary hosted this year's Second District meeting of the Medical Society of the State of North Carolina Wednesday.

County medical societies and auxiliaries represented were Carteret, Beaufort-Hyde, Pitt, Lenoir-Greene-Jones and Craven-Pamlico. The day-long session was held at Brook Valley Country Club.

Registration at the club was followed by presentations by: Dr. Earl Watts, Bowman Gray School of Medicine; Dr. John Edmonds, Bowman Gray; and Dr. Barbara Hulka, the University of North Carolina Medical School at Chapel Hill.

A social hour and steak dinner was held by members of the local society and auxiliary and their guests.

Dr. Lee West, local society president, recognized Dr. Emory Miller and Dr. Ron Davis from Durham, who were responsible for the day's activities under the "Cooperative Continuing Education Program."

After dinner, the doctors and their wives attended separate study sessions. Dr. Donald Hayes, Bowman Gray School of Medicine, was guest speaker for the men.

district counselor, presided over the women's meeting. She introduced Mrs. C. C. Byrum, of Raleigh, state auxiliary president, Mrs. Torben Seear, of Gastonia, state president-elect, and Mrs. Ledyard DeCamp of Charlotte, state legislative chairman.

The state officers presented information pertaining to her office.

Pitt County Auxiliary President, Mrs. Ed Clement, welcomed those attending. Mrs. Shirley Herring of Kinston presented the State AMA-ERF report.

County reports were given from Pitt and Lenoir-Greene-Jones. Lenoir-Greene-Jones extended an invitation to hold next year's district meeting to be held in Kinston.

Approximately 105 doctors, their wives and guests were in attendance at the meeting.

Cranberries Star In Pies And Tarts

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor
Early American cooks liked to use cranberries for pies and tarts. Recipes directed that sugar be added to taste and as one long-ago cookbook suggested, "Add spices till grateful."

The following recipe for cranberry pie leaves nothing to the imagination because modern cooks like to use exact quantities. And another change has been made: apples are added because now that combination usually pleases.

CRANBERRY APPLE PIE
Pastry for 2-crust 9-inch pie
2 1/2 cups fresh or frozen cranberries

3 medium cooking apples
1 1/4 cups sugar
2 tablespoons flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
1 tablespoon butter

Prepare pastry for 2-crust 9-inch pie. Divide dough almost in half. Roll out larger half on a floured pastry cloth with a floured stockinet-covered rolling pin to 1 inch larger around than an inverted 9-inch pie plate. Fit pastry into pie plate. Trim off overhanging edges even with edge of plate. Roll out other part of dough for top crust large enough to extend 1 inch beyond edge of pan.

Rinse and drain cranberries; coarsely chop and place in large bowl. Peel apples, cut into quarters, remove cores and slice 1/2-inch thick—there should be 2 cups. Add apples to cranberries. Mix together the sugar, flour, salt and cinnamon and add; mix gently but well. Turn into pastry lined plate. Dot with butter.

Make several slits in top crust, near center, to allow steam to escape. Place top pastry over filling. Fold edge of top pastry under edge of bottom pastry; flute edge.

Bake in a preheated 425-degree oven until apples are tender and pastry is browned—40 to 45 minutes.

Bank President Is A Female

PARIS (WNS) — Gilberte Beaux was 17 when she went to work as a stenographer. Now 42, she is the only lady bank president in France and heads two other corporations. "Character is more important than intelligence for success," she reported. Women's Lib? "Men and women are not equal," she said. "They are different, that's all. A woman has a slight disadvantage when she becomes boss of a hundred employees, but it disappears after a few days." As for American women, "Unfortunately, they have thrown away their femininity as well as their chains. There is no reason why women should not remain attractive and chic."

Credit Women Hear Program Tuesday Night

The Greenville Credit Women International met for their regular meeting at the Three Steers Restaurant Tuesday with Mrs. Angelene Venters speaking on "Keys To Etiquette For The Business Girl."

The main question that arises in the mind of an ambitious businesswoman is, "How can I develop the kind of personality that will contribute most to my effectiveness, open the door to advancement, and make my business associates like me?" said Mrs. Venters.

"Being able to get ahead is being able to get along with people. In order to do this, courtesy is the key. Courtesy can help us to reach our goals of achievement. The technique is available to all who wish to acquire it. It's never too late to learn manners and courtesy. Courtesy, after all, is just plain common sense," she said.

"Learn to overlook a lot that people say and do and try to understand their moods and accept them for what they are, because even we are not perfect. All of us have our faults, but we should try to work on being more understanding and more considerate."

"The 'Golden Rule' states, 'Do unto others as you would have them do unto you.' If we took heed to this, working together would be more of a pleasure rather than a task," she concluded.

Barbara Manning was a guest for the meeting, introduced by Pat Elks.

Birthday Night will be held on March 15 at the Holiday Inn.

Mrs. Crisp Is Guest Speaker

Mrs. Nelson Blount Crisp was guest speaker at the meeting of the Alpha Iota chapter of Alpha Delta Kappa, honorary sorority for women educators, held Tuesday.

Mrs. Crisp, who is a local attorney, spoke on civil rights and interesting points of law.

Mrs. Elizabeth Savage, president, conducted the meeting which was held at the Women's Club. The devotion was given by Mrs. Mickey West, chaplain.

Mrs. Josephine Brookshire was appointed chairman of the nominating committee. Mrs. Norman Gray, Mrs. Patricia Cheek and Mrs. Gladys Pate will also serve on the committee.

Mrs. Rebecca Groome gave a report on the scholarship fund. It was decided to offer a $100 scholarship to a Rose High senior girl, who plans to enter the teaching profession.

Mothers React To Letter On Special Child

By Abigail Van Buren

(© 1972 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: This is my first letter to a column: How should one react to the news that their friends have had an "abnormal" child? I think I can answer that because we had one. We were lucky enough to be told immediately of our baby's condition and did not have the agony of the slow realization that "something was wrong."

Feeling it best to face the problem, we freely told our friends and relatives about our "special" child. Altho we knew very little about what to expect, he was our baby, and we knew we wanted to keep him with us. He is now a lovable, mischievous 11-year-old Mongoloid, going to a special school, and we have never regretted our decision.

Perhaps "congratulations" are not in order, but to ignore the presence of a new baby in a home, when you would normally express interest is, I think, cruel. To this day I remember the pleasure I felt when someone came to see our baby, to hold him, and to let me talk about him.

One of the burdens a mother of a retarded child has is not having anyone with whom to compare notes about her child's progress. Every tiny gain has a tremendous important meaning for the mother of a handicapped child.

So, do acknowledge the birth of a special child. Or send a little gift. Or send flowers to the mother. Continue to show an interest [not curiosity], and encourage the parents to get in touch with their local society for retarded children for help with mutual problems. It will be rewarded with much love, affection, and gratitude.

DEAR ABBY: Someone wrote asking you if they should send a gift or a card of "congratulations" to a mother who has given birth to a Mongoloid child. Thank you for saying: "By all means, yes. To a mother, a child is a child."

I know your advice was sound because I had a Mongoloid son. Friends called. They stopped by. They even gave me a surprise baby shower when he was a month old. Here is the message on one card which meant so much to me:

"God gave this child to you to guide,

To love, to walk thru life beside.

A little child so full of charms,

To fill a pair of loving arms.

God picked you out because he knew

How safe His child would be with you"

God bless friends like that. MRS. C. B., BEACON, N. Y.

DEAR ABBY: I liked your answer to the person who wanted to know if she should acknowledge the birth of a Mongoloid child or out of kindness ignore the "tragedy."

I will always be grateful to friends who sent cards and gave us the feeling of "normalcy" when our Mongoloid son was born. He is now a happy 6-year-old and a great source of joy to us. He goes everywhere with us and is so full of love, we wouldn't trade him for any other child in the world.

Not all Mongoloid children are severely retarded. No one knows at the time of his birth what his potential will be if given a chance. He deserves better than to be written off as a "tragedy." An investment of love and care and a little work can be returned tenfold.

There are organizations all over the country to guide and counsel parents who share this experience. Anyone interested may write to The Mongoloid Development Council, 1810 S. 31st St., Kansas City, Kas. 66106.

The Serious Problem Remains

The N. C. Mental Health Association has said it will release the "shocking" results of an evaluation of four of the state mental hospitals prior to March 1.

Officials expressed shock and dismay over the report.

A statement said the association "must make clear that it abhors the reports of patient abuses. While these are most serious allegations, we feel a more serious problem is the lack of treatment within the state mental hospitals. This is the greatest abuse because it affects most of the patients within the hospital system."

It is time now for North Carolina to move in improving conditions in its mental hospitals. The old argument about lack of funds, valid as it is, will not do. We must find the money to do an adequate job.

Moving Up Nearer To The Construction Stage

The long delayed new Student Union at ECU will finally be constructed if low bids are approved. The 2.5 million structure will be built between Seventh and Ninth Streets. It will contain all the present Student Union facilities plus a 750-seat theatre and an eight-lane bowling area.

The building has been controversial because of its location. However, it is a badly needed facility to house student government offices and to provide student recreational facilities. It is good to see it nearing the construction stage.

The Disarmers Behind Muskie

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — The

pressure for wholly irresponsible cuts in defense spending by Sen. Edmund S. Muskie's active supporters is reflected in a bizarre discussion last November among his secret policy advisers ending with recommendations smacking of unilateral disarmament.

The Muskies advisers talked about cutting $30 billion from Pentagon spending ($75.8 billion for this fiscal year) and redistributing the money to the poor. Although it is inconceivable that Muskie as President would even contemplate such irresponsibility, one of the Senator's top aides sat in on the meeting without one serious word of dissent.

That reflects a little understood fact about the Muskies campaign. Whereas the Senator maintains a centrist image in his drive for President, both his paid staff and his voluntary advisers are situated well to the left. Consequently, Muskie will prove an extraordinary political balancer if he can appeal to the masses and simultaneously satisfy his ideologically rigid supporters.

Such supporters make up the "Muskies Domestic Issues Group" headed by Morris B. Abram, distinguished attorney and former president of Brandeis University. It meets regularly at Abram's elegant Manhattan apartment in The Dakota with Donald E. Nicol, Muskies' longtime aide and confidante, flying up from Washington to attend.

The Nov. 17 meeting of the Abram group accurately reflected the caliber of its advice to Muskies. S. M. Miller, professor of educational sociology at New York University, presented a paper on redistribution of income which proposed $30 billion of tax relief for poor-to-middle brackets by cutting annual defense spending that much within three or four years.

Even Muskies' own liberal staffers privately acknowledged $30 billion easily transcends reality when Soviet military spending is ominously rising. Moreover, currently studying possible defense cuts, the Muskies staff, properly, starts from what U.S. foreign policy commitments ought to be and how much must be spent for defense to sustain them. Prof.

Miller's approach — setting an arbitrary $30 billion target — reverses this.

But Nicol, Muskies' staffer present at the Dakota, offered no rebuke. Instead, he echoed the sidestepping of Muskies himself on defense. According to the meeting's official minutes: "Nicol said that Sen. Muskies' position was that the military budget must be cut but that he had not proposed a fixed amount for that cut because we are not sure of the correct figures involved and it is very difficult to get these figures."

That triggered several flights of fancy. Miller said the way to cut defense spending was to promise spending in education and housing. Sociologist Herbert Gans talked about cutting military spending for "right-wing dictatorships" (actually an insignificant amount). Ronald Corwin, professor of sociology at Ohio State, talked about channelling military spending into social needs ("for example, we could use Lockheed to deal with public transportation").

At no time were the harsh realities of national security discussed. Rather, the consensus was that cutting the Pentagon budget is strictly politics. "Prof. Miller observed that Secretary of Defense McNamara said that he could have cut the budget if he had not had political pressures."

Abram agreed that the defense budget "hand become almost a sacred cow," adding: "This military budget is a monstrosity and a disgrace. We should lock the Chiefs of Staff in a room and tell them not to come out until they have cut $20 billion from the military budget and we should use that money to raise the minimum exemption to $1,200 per person (presently $750)."

In conclusion, Nicol injected a note of political, though not military, caution. "It is hard to sell a $20 billion reduction now with the economic situation as bad as it is. He (Nicol) liked the approach of going at the problem in stages and talking of reduction gradually over three or four years."

The Abram group adjourned with no reason to believe Muskies had any disagreement with virtual unilateral disarmament.

Officially, the Muskies camp values the Abram group's advice. Privately, however, Muskies aides say it is (Continued on page 6)

Strength For Today

LEARNING TO PRAY

A few Sundays ago I stood in a room filled with little boys and girls and heard a skilled and devout teacher give these children actual practice in the experience of prayer. She repeated a prayer herself which she had carefully composed with the needs of the children in mind, and the little ones repeated it after her. They were thus being trained in the vocabulary and attitudes of petition.

People do not pray naturally. They have to be taught to pray. In a moment of great danger or grief some ejaculatory prayer may spring to the lips and be miraculously effective. But prayer is more than this. It is a systematic offering of the heart to God and the experience in return of fellowship and guidance. This all comes about as the result of spiritual discipline. We have to learn to pray just as we have to learn to do anything else well. It is not easy, but the reward of such effort is beyond computation. All this puts upon parents of every religious faith the necessity of teaching their children to pray. They may start with the "Now-I-lay-me-down-to-sleep" prayer. It is a beautiful one for children, and devout adults often incorporate it into their mature prayers. But the child should be encouraged also to praise God, to thank Him for his goodness, to remember others, to pray for the Church to commit their lives into God's hands. All this takes continuous, year-after-year training. But the spiritual results are worth all its costs.

Woman Power On The Ballot

By BRYAN HAISLIP
RALEIGH, N.C. — Woman power is on the ballot this year for North Carolina's primaries and general election.

Wearing every party label and aiming for offices from the county courthouse to the White House, more female candidates than ever before are in the running.

It has the makings of a petticoat revolution at the polls. Whether it turns out that way depends on how women voters respond to the campaigning of their sisters.

Leading the parade of feminine office-seekers is Rep. Shirley Chisholm, the black Congresswoman from Brooklyn. She was among ten contenders for the Democratic presidential nomination recognized by the State Board of Elections to run in the Tar Heel preferential primary.

Mrs. Margaret Harper of Southport, a Democrat, is making her second run for lieutenant governor.

Two women are in races for Council of State offices. Mrs. Grace Rohrer of Winston-Salem is the Republican nominee for Secretary of State. Mrs. Ruth Jones of Rocky Mount is one of three candidates for the Democratic nomination for Superintendent of Public Instruction.

20 In Legislative Races

Around 20 women are among the field of candidates for the state legislature, including the two women who served in the 1971 session.

At the local level, an uncounted number of women are running for county commissioner, school board seats, and other offices. Hardly any of the 100 counties will have the kind of all-male ballot that once was standard.

Oddly enough, Congressional campaigning is the one area where women are missing. There are no female candidates for the U.S. Senate seat at stake or in the eleven Congressional districts.

Women's Lib and the tide of the times doubtless swelled this year's influx of women candidates. In years past, the number who dared to make the plunge into politics was small. A woman who would run was rare, and one who could win was rarer still.

Representation Disparity Cited

Feminist leaders cite the disparity between the proportion of women in the electorate and their representation in government as a spur for action.

The League of Women Voters of North Carolina recently pointed out the facts of the case.

"...There are two women in the North Carolina legislature," the League said. "There is no woman in a top-level, policy-making position in the North Carolina state government; elected, career or political appointees. During the past seven years, the two women who held such positions were replaced by men."

"According to the 1971 North Carolina Manual, 220 women as opposed to 1,214 men hold appointments to state governmental agencies, boards and commissions...Men completely outnumber women on 116 of 123 state agencies, boards and commissions; and most of the important bodies have no women members, e.g., Conservation and Development, Highway, Banking, Utilities and many other important decision-making bodies which critically and directly affect all of the state's citizens, including the more than 50 per cent who are women."

Feminine Unity Urged
Mobilizing feminine political strength is the mission of a state-wide organization recently formed. Some of its leaders urged that women cross party lines in order to support qualified candidates of their own sex.

Whether that will happen, and to what degree, is debatable. The likelihood is that the women's vote will not be a bloc, but dispersed among the parties and candidates.

To assure that, the male contenders are going out of their way this time to give women more substantial roles in their campaigns.

Eight women ran in the 1970 general election for state legislative seats. The two who make it were Mrs. Nancy Chase of Wayne and Mrs. Mary Horne Odom of Scotland, both House members. They are running for reelection.

Others on the ballot include two aiming for the Senate, and at least 15 in House races. Ten are democrats, eight are Republicans, and one is on the American Party ticket.

Repugnant If 'Like Us'

WASHINGTON—The latest news from the Census Bureau is that younger women are refusing to have children, and the United States is fast approaching a "zero population growth" rate. This means the death rate and birthrate figures in the country will soon be even.

Disturbed by this information, I sought out three young ladies in a coffeehouse to find out what had gone wrong. Their names were Fern, Clara and Mary Jane. And they were sitting with three boys—Harry, Fred and Claude.

"Ladies," I said, "I have just read in the newspapers that women in this country only had an average of 2.4 children in 1971 as opposed to 2.9 children in 1967, and if the trend continues they will be down to 2.1 in a few years which could mean zero population growth. How can you explain it?"

"Who wants kids?" Fern asked.

"But," I said, "that is the role of women—to reproduce their own kind."

"That's the point," Clara said. "Who wants to reproduce people like us?"

"I don't understand," I said.

Clara said, "It's a generation problem. Your generation had a high opinion of yourselves. You thought you were wonderful people—brave, strong, honest, law-abiding, productive and God-fearing. Therefore you wanted to reproduce more of the same."

"You assumed that your offspring would be just like you and you wanted to flood the country with little copies of yourself.

"Well, it didn't work out that way," Clara concluded. "You produced an entirely different breed and we've decided we don't want any more like us because we can't stand each other."

"Why should we make babies who are as unhappy and miserable as we are?" Mary Jane asked.

"I don't want any kids like Harry," Fern said.

"But," Harry protested, "you're my girlfriend."

"I don't mind you as my boyfriend," Fern said, "but I couldn't stand you as my son."

"It's true. I could never think of raising a Claude or a Fred. I wouldn't have the stomach for it."

"That isn't a nice thing to say," Fred said defensively.

"Well," Clara replied, "would you like to be the father of Fern or Mary Jane or Harry or Claude?"

"I wouldn't even want to be the father of me," Fred said.

"If I understand you," I said, "the reason why you don't want to have babies is that you're afraid they'll all

Other Editors Say Fearful Of Costs

(Henderson Dispatch)

Hugh Morton had made a good start in his campaign for the Democratic nomination for governor, but when he had a taste of the amount of money needed he became fearful of the costs, if not convinced that expenses entailed in the bid made it unworthy of the effort. He told a group of friends assembled in his headquarters that money was the one and only reason he was quitting the race.

While Morton was new to the political scene, he had impressed a host of supporters of his sincerity and integrity and a desire to serve the State as chief executive. They believed in him and still do. But neither they nor the candidate could guarantee the cost of the campaign.

The high cost of running for high public offices could conceivably destroy this democracy if the trend continues. It could mean that only a rich man, and a very rich one at that, could stand for election, or that the candidate without money of his own would be beholden to those who chipped in, and that would place him under obligations, with the possible result that groups of money people would run the government. That would be disastrous for the great masses of the people, who under such circumstances could lose their voice in helping to shape the course of public affairs.

We have no idea how the costs of a campaign could be reduced. All the laws imaginable might be enacted and still vast sums of money be used to influence votes. In the final analysis, it is a challenge to the people themselves. In the end, they have more at stake collectively than any one else.

Hugh Morton's retirement from the race for governor should bring new emphasis to the problem, though he may not be the only man who might be abundantly qualified for service but who would be denied because of financial requirements.

DISC Can Help Profits Soar

By ELMER ROESSNER

You are going to hear a lot about DISCs in the next few months that hasn't anything to do with phonograph records. A DISC is a Domestic International Sales Corporation, provided for in the Revenue Act of 1971.

The purpose of DISCs is to encourage American business to increase efforts to sell goods.

A DISC can be incorporated under the laws of any state or the District of Columbia. They can be formed by individuals, as corporate subsidiaries, trade associations, by groups of corporations. They may have only one class of stock and maintain separate accounting records.

The advantage of organizing a DISC is that its profits are not taxed to the corporation. Half of profits are taxable to the stockholders; taxes on the other half are deferred and may be used to expand the business. A DISC keeps this tax advantage as long as 95 per cent of its income is related to export sales.

The Administration expected that there would be a rush of corporations to set up DISC subsidiaries to handle foreign sales. However, there hasn't been a rush. For one reason, the Internal Revenue Service has not completed drafting its rules for DISCs. For another, there is no telling whether states will go along with the dererred taxation. For a third reason, the whole idea is so new that many businessmen do not understand it.

Now Commerce Department and Treasury are arranging a series of meetings with exporters across the country to explain and sell the ideas of DISCs. About 50 meetings are scheduled and more may be added.

The meetings will also provide the government with a feed-back of exporters' views. One thing that may be discussed is a proposal to make up to 100 per cent of profits tax-deferrable. That would get everybody into the act.

American exporters should be able to sell much abroad, the Administration believes. Last year, under one of several ways of calculating it, we had a trade deficit of $39 billion, the largest in history. That means that there are $39 billion more American dollars or dollar credits held abroad. In addition, devaluation has made American products cheaper. Surely American salesmanship, sparked by the lure of tax bonanzas, should be able to sell products abroad under those conditions.

The Treasury has prepared a 56-page booklet explaining in lay language what DISC is all about, and reprinting the complete text of the law establishing DISCs. Copies of

Life's Little Quirks

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — A man should sort out his worries periodically just as he does his convictions.

If he doesn't, he will wind up worrying needlessly and profitlessly in all directions.

And since Lent is a good season for giving up things you don't really need, now is a good time to quit worrying about things you can't do much about anyway.

Here are a few possible items on your I-won't-fret-my-little-head-about-that list:

Has science gone too far?
How many friends will Mayor John V. Lindsay make and how many people will he influence in the Democratic party?

Would it be better for international amity if all Americans studied Russian or just learned to eat with chopsticks?

Can a man really build character by eating more breaded veal cutlets?

After Congress, what?

Is death worth living for?
"When a lot of people are out of work," said Calvin Coolidge, "unemployment results." What did he really mean by that remark?

Some people don't put too much stock in the stock market. Do they need to take stock of themselves?

Who gave Margaret Mead that snazzy new red hair ribbon for Valentine's Day?

Why is it that everything that goes into one ear of Dr. Joyce Brothers seems to come out her mouth?

If a baby is reared according to Dr. Spock, will he grow up to think like Dr. Spock?

Why save the environment as it is? Since it changes us for the worse—it makes us grow old, for example—why shouldn't we try to change it for the better?

What makes people so violent when they talk about violence?

When will the real Howard Hughes stand up?

No Plot, Characters Or Suspense; But Best Buy

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Without plot, characters, or suspense, it is still one of the best buys in Greenville for $1.00. Just off the press, the eight and one half by ten and one half inch publication, called simply "A Study of Pitt County and Greenville" is a compact presentation of all you've wanted to know in a nutshell about the official structure of the community. In the making for the past two years, the publication is authored by a group of anonymous researchers, editors and writers, working as a unit. The compilers are members of the Pitt County-Greenville League of Women Voters, whose purpose in assembling the information is two-fold ... first is their purpose to furnish citizens with a readily available run-down of government and all types of government services; secondly, it fulfills one of the requirements that will permit the chapter to obtain its full-fledged status as a permanent chapter member in the American League of Women Voters.

Utilizing the flip type stepped-page size type of format for the 30 page booklet, the compilers have made it possible for those using it to locate any particular segment of information with a minimum of search.

The booklet opens with a "Foreword" explaining the method used in compiling the information and emphasizing the non-partisan aspect of the league. From there it moves into a brief page, "Introducing Pitt County," which provides a capsule history of Pitt County and Greenville, including major industries and agricultural products.

With the preliminaries out of the way, the booklet gets into the meat of its presentation. In 13 succeeding sections, information is provided by text, charts and an occasional photograph. The sections cover the following basic categories: County Government; County Finance; Greenville City Government and Finance; Administration of Justice; Public Protection; Health Services; Social Services; Education; Planning-Zoning-Renewal; Transportation-Recreation-Culture; The Citizen and His Vote; Greenville City Government Chart; and County Government Chart.

In these times when many factual publications are overly long and filled with reams of eliminatable trimmings, the League of Women voters adopted an editorial policy that restricts information to bare essentials.

As a reference source covering all fields of public endeavor, it is difficult to imagine a publication more concise, more to the point.

Duties of officials, the manner in which they are elected or appointed; sources of city and county incomes; services available to citizens whether it be for health, recreation, education, cultural or whatever purpose — are all given here.

It will perhaps, for example, surprise many citizens that in addition to the services offered in the social field by the Pitt County Department of Social Services, there are 24 agencies, groups and committees established to provide assistance to area residents. These range from the Walter B. Jones Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center, through the United Fund to REAL.

Channels and procedures for controlling land use in both Pitt County and Greenville are outlined in "Planning-Zoning-Renewal," and everything about voting, from voter qualifications to types of elections on through a clear map showing the locations of Greenville's nine voting precincts and listing the county precinct locations; are set forth in "The Citizen and His Vote."

This small booklet is the type of publication that deserves a rightful place among the small handful of publications that need to be at the fingertips of all involved citizens, whether in an official capacity or simply as a concerned citizen.

As long as the supply lasts, copies for $1.00 each are available from: City-County Study, P.O. Box 1551, Greenville, N.C.

It may not be an excessive amount of paper for a dollar, but it is indeed a mine of useful information diligently gathered from a large variety of sources and conveniently put under one cover.

Won't Quit Union Post

RALEIGH (AP) — Wilbur Hobby apparently plans to keep his job as president of the state AFL-CIO while he is running for governor despite a call that he give up the post.

"I'm calling for Wilbur Hobby's resignation as president of the AFL-CIO for conflict of interest," said Dr. Reginald Hawkins, another gubernatorial candidate, in a telephone interview Thursday.

"We're getting many complaints from people who are union members who say Wilbur is using their facilities and not giving them a choice of saying who they should support," Hawkins stated.

Hobby has told newsmen he planned to keep his labor post during the campaign. He announced in Charlotte Wednesday that the AFL-CIO executive committee had made a $10,000 contribution to his campaign.

Hobby could not be reached Thursday for comment on Hawkins' demand that he step down, but his chief campaign aide, Arthur White, said the decision to retain the AFL-CIO post was firm.

"Wilbur put it to the executive board and asked their opinion," said White. "They thought that should he become the nominee of the party, he should step down but not before."

turn out like you."

"You got it, Pops," Fern said. "We know what we've done to our parents, and we're not about to let our kids do that to us."

Clara said, "I couldn't handle with my kids the way I handle with my mother. I'd go up the wall."

"But," I protested, "if all of you feel that way, the American people—the greatest, most magnificent and wondrous people the world has ever seen—could go down the drain."

"It's not our fault," Mary Jane said. "We're physically but not mentally equipped for it."

Fern said, "Once the country gets down to zero population growth, I might reconsider the whole proposition. But at the moment, I'd rather take the money it costs to raise a child and go to Europe."

"Even buying a Honda motorcycle," Harry said, "would be more fun than having a kid like me."

Price-Fixing Trial Looms

RALEIGH (AP) — A suit brought by the state of North Carolina against nine plumbing manufacturers charging price-fixing and asking for treble damages may be tried in Raleigh.

This developed after the Judicial Panel on Multidistrict Litigation in Washington, D.C., accepted arguments of Deputy Atty. Gen. Jean A. Benoy who is handling the suit.

Benoy said North Carolina is the only state actively pursuing trial in the case. He said the others appear willing to accept a settlement.

The suit against the nine firms which produce most of the nation's plumbing fixtures was filed last September.

The defendants in the case are: American Standard, Inc.; Kohler Co.; Crane Co.; Universal-Rundle Corp.; Rheem Manufacturing Co.; Borg-Warner Corp.; Wallace-Murray Corp.; Briggs Manufacturing Co. and the Plumbing Fixture Manufacturing Association.

Connie, The Conformist

The last thing Connie intended to be was a conformist. So one day Connie resolved in dead earnest to be a nonconformist. She joined the group. She learned their views, their values, their life-style. Soon the cycle was complete—Connie had embraced the way of the nonconformist . . . had conformed to it.

The adventure of Connie is a reminder that conformity is part of human nature. We all conform to something. And the seemingly sharp differences apparent between certain life-styles merely reflect the contrasts and contradictions between the things to which men conform.

The role of the Church in our society is to provide spiritual and moral values that enrich life. In a world in which all men conform to something, the Church's aim with youth and adults is to give them SOMETHING WORTH CONFORMING TO.

World Revolution Dream Appears Fading In China

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent
President Nixon's Peking visit it throws a searchlight on what China's Communist leaders have said and one in recent times. There is reason to suspect that something truly revolutionary has taken place.

The revolutionary development could be that the Chinese leaders' cherished dream of world revolution has faded away.

Chairman Mao Tse-tung and Premier Chou En-lai are in their 70s. Their realization that they will never see anything even approaching revolution on a world scale could account for the remarkable reception Nixon is getting.

Some might suspect that the display for Nixon is part of an over-all strategy to advance the cause. After all, Mao was insisting only a couple of years ago that "revolution is the main trend in the world today," and was calling on all revolutionaries to "unite and defeat the U.S. aggressors and all their running dogs."

But it seems it would take much more than a strategy ploy to make the Chinese leaders pay so high a price for a change in policy. It has cost them a painful purge at the top of the ladder and posed the risk of disillusioning pro-Chinese revolutionaries everywhere else.

The Nixon visit, in fact, provides a new vantage point for exploring the murky mysteries of Chinese policies and throws new light on pronouncements of recent months.

One line of speculation is that Premier Chou, around the end of last June, took a firm grip on the helm and veered the Chinese ship of state onto a radically new course, dumping overboard some high-ranking hands in the process.

This would not mean that Chou, the patrician revolutionary Mandarin, had abandoned his leader's precepts. But there's a good chance it might mean that Mao, listening to Chou's counsel, is resigned to the long view. That would mean they could now look inward toward building China and outward toward ties that might tend to protect them during that building process.

What is now going on leaves the impression that Chou wants the Nixon meeting to have a look of success. Thus he speaks of the talks as "positive," refers to possible normalization of relations and says the gates have been opened between the two nations. The Chinese people are told about the visit in startling headlines and pictures. That could happen only on orders from the highest Peking level.

With the benefit of hindsight it is possible to detect how this situation developed.

Only a week or two before the July announcement of the projected Nixon visit, an official review of the Chinese Communist party's 50-year history was carried by all top organs of the party press. One point dwelt on the 1966-69 Cultural Revolution which the account said had been initiated and led personally by Chairman Mao. It conceded that "everything seemed to be chaos for a time," but suggested the upheaval was necessary to insure continuity for the Chinese revolution against those who wanted to settle back, relax and forget about such things.

But, the party document went on, "nobody must think that everything will be all right after one or two great cultural revolutions or even three or four, for Socialist society covers a long historical period." At the same time, it said, the time had come to "make a concrete analysis of the conditions of our enemies, our friends and ourselves."

A week or two later Henry A. Kissinger was in Peking. The Chinese leaders had set in motion a process of reassessing the nation's position in today's world power picture.

It was not without a serious wrench. There had been strong resistance to any opening toward the United States. Lin Biao, named in 1969 as Mao's successor, fell in the resulting quarrel and was eliminated from the Peking scene along with a number of others in high places. The ruling Politburo that had 25 members when named in 1969 has nine left. Mao is first, Chou ranks second. In third place is the once ultrarevolutionary and loudly anti-U.S. Chiang Ching, Mao's wife, who was Nixon's smiling hostess at the ballet this week.

Hindsight permits tracing the development of a Chinese shift growing out of a fear of the Soviet Union on the frontier. For a year or more before the U.S.-Peking contact, the official Chinese press had been reviving significant Mao quotations.

One dated to the days of Japanese invasion. It counseled distinguishing between "imperialists" who aggressed and menaced China and those who did not. Also revived was a Mao dictum that while principles must be firmly maintained "we must also have all permissible and necessary flexibility to serve our principles."

Under Chou's guidance that flexibility seems to be emerging. Perhaps it will permit close enough contact with the United States to make the Peking regime rest more easily in the shadow of Soviet leaders whom the Chinese press has called "mad present-day social imperialists and world stormtroopers opposing China."

Chinese Require Many Cuspidors

PEKING (AP) — Spitting is an old Chinese custom, good for clearing dragons out of the head and chest, reports Associated Press Special Correspondent Hugh A. Mulligan.

That might be an explanation why so many cuspidors are seen in pictures being taken in China during President Nixon's visit here.

Mulligan, taking a punsters view of the ancient custom, also noted that the People's Republic of China is the Cuspidor's last stand.

Aga Khan On A Business Visit

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The Aga Khan, spiritual leader of 20 million Moslems, is in Las Vegas for a visit that a secretary describes as "strictly business."

The Aga Khan leased a suite of rooms at the Thunderbird Hotel on the Strip amid reports that he was interested in backing a proposed $25-million Strip hotel-casino project.

Ban Boomerang At Public Park

BALSALL HEATH, England (AP) — Boomerang thrower Henry McCabe has been told to stop pitching his favorite missile in a public park near Birmingham. McCabe's boomerang always returns for a landing within 10 feet of its launching place but authorities ordered an end to his Sunday morning practice sessions on the grounds that "it could be rather dangerous."

Discussions On 'Reach Out For Life' Scheduled

Barry G. Ulloth, pastor of the local Seventh Day Adventist Church, will begin a series of community open house discussions entitled, "Reach Out For Life" next Saturday.

"The discussions will be relevant to individual and personal needs," Pastor Ulloth said. "We are going to discuss things like, 'What can I do after I've wrecked my life?', 'Where do we go from here?', 'Is love enough?', and 'Is it too late to turn the clock back?' We are going to do everything we can to help folks in our community reach out for life—a better life—and find it," the pastor asserted.

This effort is part of a worldwide Seventh Day Adventist endeavor to help others find meaning and happiness in life, Ulloth said. The "Five-Day Plan To Stop Smoking" course and the vegetarian cooking school and buffet will be continued, he said.

edge of each other's positions and stands has gained."

Noting the exchanges had been beneficial for both, Chou continued: "The times are advancing and the world is changing. We are deeply convinced that the strength of the peoples is powerful and that whatever zigzags and reverses there will be in the development of history, the general trend of the world is definitely toward light and not darkness."

"It is the common desire of the Chinese and American peoples to enhance their mutual understanding and friendship and promote the normalization of relations between China and the United States. The Chinese government and people will work unswervingly toward this goal."

The champagne was served in White House glasses bearing the presidential seal and flown from Washington. Many of the Chinese guests took them as souvenirs.

White-jacketed waiters and waitresses distributed presidential gifts to all those present. The gift was a clear plastic paperweight with Nixon's card imbedded.

The toasts seemed more low-key than those voiced at the banquet Chou gave the presidential party Monday night when both talked of opening the gates to friendly contacts.

Before the banquet the Nixons toured the famed Peking palace of China's emperors during a snowstorm.

Scotland County Feud Touches Off An Inquiry

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A factional row over the chairmanship of the Scotland County Board of Elections has touched off a U.S. Justice Department investigation of alleged racial discrimination. Democratic candidate for governor Reginald Hawkins, a black Charlotte dentist, requested the probe after a Laurinburg Negro, John T. McPhatters, apparently was blocked from becoming chairman of the Scotland board.

Hawkins charged that maneuvers blocking anticipated election of McPhatters as county chairman were racially motivated.

The dispute stems from selection of incumbent county Chairman John Nichols last Monday as a member of the new elections board, along with McPhatters and one Republican.

Nichols' name had been left off the slate of nominees proposed to the state Board of Elections by Scotland Democrats headed by county Chairman William Winn. Nichols' name subsequently was added to the list by state party Chairman John T. Church.

The state board names members of the county boards of election, but the county groups select their chairmen at organizational meetings on March 6.

Church said he added Nichols' name to the list after receiving petitions signed by more than 2,000 of the "best Democrats" in the county.

Winn said today the petitions were obtained with the help of Republicans in Scotland County.

"We can only conclude that with such eagerness to retain him, including the Republicans' work, it was his intent to retain him, Mr. Nichols, as chairman," Winn said.

"It's quite possible now, however, with all the publicity, that the vote might be different," he said.

Winn said Negroes represent 35 to 40 per cent of Scotland County's population and make up about 25 per cent of the 8,000 registered Democrats.

Adjustments Bd. Hears Requests

Approval of two requests, denial of two, and tabling of one request is the record established last night by the Greenville Board of Adjustments at their February meeting.

Approved were requests by Lamba Chi Alpha Housing Corporation for special use permit of a residence located at 500 Elizabeth Street to be used as a fraternity; and a request by Janmar, Inc., for special use permit in constructing a Ramada Inn on the northwest side of Greenville Boulevard.

In the case of the fraternity house, a stipulation was added that a fire escape by constructed from the third to the second story of the building to conform with state standards.

Ramada Inn will consist of 116 units with 303 off street parking spaces, a restaurant and a swimming pool.

There was no opposition to the fraternity or the Janmar, Inc. requests.

Denial of a special use permit request by Phillippi Church to build a church at the northeast corner of Bancroft Avenue and Farmville Boulevard was based on space limitations for which variances were being sought. The ordinance requires a 50 foot set-back on all sides. The —Christopher O'Connell, son of Mr. and Mrs. James O'Connell, is a National Honor Society member, assistant editor of Rampant Lines, winner of the National Council of Teacher of English award, and is N.C. Junior Chess Champion. Chris is a member of the Stage Band and Quill and Scroll.

Bucs End Regular Season With State

East Carolina University's cagers wind up their 1971-72 regular season Saturday night, traveling to Raleigh to take on tall N.C. State.

The chief worry for the Pirates is 7-4 Tommy Burleson, one of the nation's outstanding sophomores. Burleson is the number two scorer in the Atlantic Coast Conference so far this year, hitting at a 21.4 clip, just a half-a-point behind All-American candidate Barry Parkhill of Virginia.

Burleson also leads the conference in rebounding with a 14.1 mark, and this will be an additional test for the loose-ball minded Bucs, who lead the Southern Conference in rebounding.

Burleson is not the only problem for the Pirates, however, Joe Cafferky is hitting at a 13.9 clip, while Rick Holdt has an 11.6 average. Steve Nuce has a 10.1 mark, putting four members of the team in double figures.

Otherwise, the Pirates and Wolfpack have interestingly similar team marks. The Bucs are averaging 76 points per game, the Wolfpack 78.3. The Bucs are allowing 78.1 points per game, the Pack, 72.0.

In field goal percentage, State is hitting 48.7 percent, the Pirates 46.2. At the line, the Pack has a 66.3 mark, while the Bucs have a 64.9 mark. State is averaging 46.7 rebounds per game, and the Pirates, 49.4.

The Bucs also have four players in double figures. Jim Fairley leads the way with a 13.5 mark, while Jerome Owens is hitting 13.3. Al Faber is next at 12.9, while Dave Franklin owns a 12.1 mark.

The other start, Earl Quash is hitting 9.0.

State comes into the game following a one-point loss to improving Duke, to whom the Bucs lost early in the year, 71-62.

"Burleson presents a number of problems for us, both offensively and defensively," ECU

Coach Tom Quinn said. "He has come along and every time he gets his hands on the ball, something happens."

Quinn also noted that Steve Smoral, a 6-3 guard, has begun to come around and is providing a lot of backcourt help for the Wolfpack.

"Against State, we'll have to look heavily to our playmaking to control the game and make it come our way," Quinn said. "We have two days to get ready, but we're in exams and that isn't going to help us at all."

The coach added that the Bucs have lost three in a row, and a win over State would certainly make up for these and put the Pirates in a good frame of mind for the tournament next week.

Meanwhile, State Coach Norm Sloan is trying to keep his players from being lulled to sleep by the Bucs' seeming lack of success this year. "We know that East Carolina will be approaching the game in the same manner as did its football team last fall," he said. "A win for them would make their season."

Sloan also pointed out that the Pirates never seem to go to the same person twice in a row. During the season, seven different players have served as high scorer for the Pirates game-to-game.

Sloan may be cautioned not only by this, but by the fact that the Pirate gridders were given little chance against the Wolfpack last fall and walked away with a 31-15 win.

"Every time they've played us," he said, "they've been ready."

The game also pits the two men who were Player of the Week in their respective conferences last week, Fairley and Cafferky.

Following the game, the Pirates will begin work for the Southern Conference Tournament, that begins on Thursday in Greenville, S.C.

"I have no preference as to our opponent," Quinn said. "It will either be The Citadel or Richmond."

Quinn noted that the Bucs have begun a running program during their drills designed to prepare them for the three-day grind of the tournament.

This year, the Pirates will be playing either in the first or second game of the day, rather than the last as in the past two years when they dropped one-point losses to Richmond. Quinn is hoping the earlier start might be better for the Pirates. "I don't know whether waiting around all day and watching the other teams might have tightened up or not, but we certainly aren't planning to come home early this year."

The Bucs come into the tournament with a 7-5 league record, as compared to 9-2, 9-2 and 7-4 records in the past three seasons. Overall in the Southern in the last four years, the Pirates are 32-13, and have one of the best records in the league.

Prior to Saturday's varsity game with State, the two freshmen teams of the schools will meet at 5:45 p.m.

Tigerettes, Eaglettes Both Are Eliminated

EDENTON — Both Williamston and Robersonville, the Albemarle and Martin County champions were eliminated from the District I girls basketball tournament last night.

Unbeaten Manteo handed the Williamston girls their first loss, 51-40, while Northampton downed Robersonville, 37-16.

In the opening game, Manteo eased out into an 11-8 lead over the Tigerettes and never lost it after that. They outthit the Tigerettes, 14-7, in the second period, and held a 25-15 lead at the half.

In the third period, Williamston managed to stage a small rally, hitting 10 to eight for Manteo, but they still trailed by eight, 33-25. Then, in the final period, Manteo just held off Williamston, 18-15, to collect the victory.

Connie Hines led Manteo with 22 points, while Lu Ann Swain had 15 and Amy Foreman had 12. For Williamston, Kathy Davenport had 22.

Robersonville, suffering from poor shooting, never was in the first period of the contest. They fell far behind, 14-3, during the frame. The Eaglettes, however, put on a rally in the second frame, getting a 10-3 advantage, and came back to trail only 17-13 at the half.

But in the second half, the Eaglettes lost their shooting eye for good. They were outthit 10-1 in the third quarter, and trailed 27-14. They again suffered through a 10-2 period going to the wire, as Northampton gained the finals.

Player Roughs Ref

CHARLESTON, S. C. (AP) — The Western Carolina at Baptist College basketball game was stopped with 2:16 remaining and Baptist was declared the winner Thursday night after David Smith of Western Carolina manhandled an official during an argument.

Smith, a 6-8, 230-pounder, was called for his fifth foul by Ben Brooks, about 5-6 and 150 pounds.

Jerry Sanders of the Charleston News and Courier, who covered the game, said the player stooped down and apparently exchanged words with the official, then put his arm around the official's neck, lifted him and dropped him to the floor.

The official got up and walked off the floor unassisted while some of the estimated 350 fans mixed with players in a shoving exchange.

Smith, a senior, transferred to Western Carolina from Guilford and became eligible to play on Jan. 24. He had become the team's leading scorer, averaging 23 points a game.

Those participating from Rose High include three class winners and a runner-up. Winning sectional titles last week were Angelo Daniels are 119, Ken Perkins at 138 and Bob Barrett at 145. Gary Walton was the runner-up at the 132-pound level.

Conley's six had only one weight winner, but the others were all runners-up. The lone title came in the 105-pound class where Melvin Tyson won. The others include Dyke Hatch at 98, James Swinson at 138, Alton Nicholson at 145, Billy Justice at 158, and Stacey Evans at 195. Farmville's two include Carlos Moore, who won the 167-pound class, and Roger Eason, who was the runner-up in the heavyweight division. Eason has lost only once this year, in the finals of the sectionals.

Andrew Daniels of North Pitt won his title at the 112-pound level, while Ayden-Grifton's Demitrius Edwards was the runner-up at 185.

Ayden-Grifton Gains Finals; Jags Out

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
VANCEBORO — The defense and discipline of the Ayden-Grifton Chargers paid off in the final period of play last night as they pulled away from West Carteret to win, 52-38, and gain a place in the finals of the District II, 3-A Tournament. They will face North Lenoir, another member of the Eastern Carolina Conference, which pulled off its second straight upset in the tournament, dumping Farmville Central, 65-51.

North Lenoir, which finished fourth in the Eastern Carolina regular season standings, knocked out the Coastal Conference champ, East Carteret in the first round, then proceeded to polish off the Jaguars in the second round. But to gain the title, the Hawks will have to make it three-in-a-row, and the Chargers will be out to prevent that.

North Lenoir, in winning its game, proved to be too much on the boards, and too much in field goal percentage, hitting at a much better rate than did the Jaguars, who never really got it all together despite one last late flurry that cut the margin to six.

Ayden-Grifton just had too much defense for West Carteret, which stayed with them for three periods before being completely outmatched in the final frame. The Patriots had a height advantage, but in the final period, you would have never known it. The Chargers were blocking the shots of taller players and constantly outrebounding them.

In the opener, the Hawks and Jaguars battled closely throughout the first period. Farmville got the opening lead on a basket by McCoy Williams, and they slowly moved out to a four-point edge, 6-2, on baskets by Connie Tripp and Williams.

But a three-point play by Frank Herring closed the gap to 6-5, and another buck, a jumper by Curtis Hines pushed North Lenoir into a 7-6 lead. Farmville got it back on a jumper by Luther Hunter and Williams hit again to run it back to three, 10-7.

North Lenoir got another basket by Hines and a pair of free throws by Joe Keyes to return to the lead, 11-10. Hunter tied it up for the Jaguars on a free throw, but two charity shots by Wilbert Pope put the Hawks out again. Charles Rasberry hit a jumper with one second left, finally tying it at 13-13 as the period ended.

That was as close as Farmville was to come the rest of the way, however. As the fouls began to mount against the Jaguars (they had 26 called against them; against 13 for North Lenoir), the Hawks began to pull away. Charles Cratch hit a jumper to open the second period, putting North Lenoir back into the lead. Frank Herring added another basket and two free throws, one each by Pope and Cratch, ran it to 19-13 before Farmville finally hit. Robert Tripp and Mitchell Carmon hit to cut it back to two, but North Lenoir streaked away again.

Keyes hit two jumpers and Cratch made a pair of free throws followed by another Keyes basket, making it 27-17. After a Farmville free throw, Herring canned a pair and that ran the margin to 13, 31-18, but Farmville struggled back with four free throws and a basket to trim the lead to nine, 33-24 at halftime.

Farmville got two more baskets as the second half opened to trim it to five, as Williams got both. But that was as close as they could come.

North Lenoir stretched it back out to nine, but had to settle for an eight-point spread, 43-35 as the period ended.

Then, in the final period, a five-point burst pushed the Hawks out to 13 as the frame got going. Cratch opened it with a basket and Pope connected on a three-point play to make it 48-35. It stayed right around there until a basket by Pope made it the widest margin, 14, at 55-41 with 4:52 left.

Farmville put on one last rally, cutting it to six, 57-51, with 2:02 left to play. Williams hit three baskets during the streak, while Connie Tripp got the other.

But North Lenoir got a pair of free throws by Curtis Rouse and baskets by Pope and Herring to run it back to 12. Two late free throws brought it back to the final 14-point spread, as the Jaguars failed to score in the last two minutes.

Williams led the Farmville effort with 20 points, while Robert Tripp had 10. For North Lenoir, Keyes and Herring each had 16, Cratch had 13 and Pope had 11.

The second contest was close until the final seven minutes of play. After that, it was a run-away Chargers.

Ayden-Grifton got the opening lead on a free throw by Jesse Smith, with Willie Stewart hitting a basket to make it 3-0 for West Carteret got on the boards. After a Patriot basket, however, the Chargers got two more, by Stewart and Smith, to move out by five, 7-2, and despite losing it down to one, they returned it to five and held it until a tap-in by John Graham at the horn made it 15-12.

Ayden-Grifton got the first two baskets on the second period, as Danny Garris collected his third foul and went to the bench, and he took the Ayden-Grifton scoring with him.

For the rest of the period, the Chargers failed to crack the tight Patriot zone, and their outside shooting deserted them. And West Carteret used the time to catch up again. Billy Downum got a free throw and then Dennis Hester hit on a tap. Graham hooked one in and with 1:51 left, Joe Raymond hit on a jumper to tie it at 19-19, and it stayed that way the rest of the half.

West Carteret got the opening basket of the second half as Graham hit, and a free throw by Colin McDuffy upped the margin to three. Ayden-Grifton fought back, finally regaining the lead on a baseline jumper by Stewart at 25-24. But West Carteret again regained the lead, and shot out to a five-point margin. Raymond hit on the baseline for a 26-25 lead, and successive baskets by Raymond and Buddy Robinson ran the margin to 30-25 with 4:31 left in the period.

Ayden-Grifton pulled steadily back, however, finally tying it at 32-32 on a free throw by Jesse Smith. After that, it was tied at 34-34 and 36-36 before Ayden-Grifton finally regained the lead on a buzzer jumper by Carlton McCarter for a 38-36 lead.

Smith opened the third period with a free throw for a three-point Charger lead, and that was all they needed. With 7:33 left, Graham made a pair of charity shots, cutting the lead to 39-38, but West Carteret didn't score again the rest of the way.

The discipline of the Chargers took control the rest of the way as they salted the ball away, going only for the easy shot. Usually, however, they got fouled, and even that worked in their favor.

After baskets by Melvin Stewart and McCarter, the Chargers ran through three free throws. On each, they made the first, then missed the second, only to get the ball back on the rebound. Finally, a three-point play by McCarter with 1:33 left raised the margin beyond the Patriots' catch-up ability, making it 50-38. A last second basket by Smith set the final margin.

Willie led the Ayden-Grifton scoring with 12, while Melvin Stewart had 11 and Garris had 10. Graham had 16 and Raymond had 10 for West Carteret.

The championship game tonight is set for 8 p.m.

Blue Thinking Of Trying Japan If He Can't Reach An Agreement

By ALEX SACHARE
Associated Press Sports Writer
While Harmon Killebrew is happy with his dollars, Vida Blue says he might start collecting his paychecks in yen.

Killebrew, Minnesota's 35-year-old slugger who has hit 515 home runs and driven in 1380 runs in his major league career, signed his 1972 contract Thursday for an estimated $125,000. This would be $15,000 more than he made in 1971, when he clubbed 28 homers and knocked in 119 runs.

Blue, meanwhile, was home in Mansfield, La., even though the Oakland A's were opening their spring training camp in Mesa, Ariz. The 22-year-old pitcher is said to be asking $92,000, while Oakland owner Charlie Finley has offered $50,000.

And according to a report in the San Francisco Chronicle, if he can't come to terms with Finley, Blue might seek employment in Japan.

"Yes, I've been talking to teams in Japan," the Chronicle quoted Blue's attorney, Robert Gerst, as saying. "They are interested, if we can't reach an agreement with Finley."

Blue earned $14,750 last season, when he had a 24-8 record, a 1.82 earned run average and 301 strikeouts. He won both the Cy Young and Most Valuable Player awards.

Although he still feels he'll eventually get Blue to come to terms, Finley conceded there is a growing possibility the 22-year-old lefthander might not play for the A's this season.

"I'm beginning to wonder," he admitted.

Killebrew, meanwhile, maintained his record of never having been a holdout with the Twins. The veteran slugger, who broke into the major leagues in 1954, has averaged nearly 39 homers and 104 RBI in each of the 13 seasons he's been a regular.

Other than Killebrew, most of the major signings Thursday involved pitchers.

The Chicago White Sox signed Tom Bradley, a 15-game winner last season; Detroit came to terms with Mike Kilkeny, expected to be a candidate for the Tigers' starting rotation and Kansas City inked Dick Drago, who won 17 games in 1971.

Veteran reliever Eddie Watt, 3-1 with 11 saves, signed with Baltimore, while George Culver signed with Houston and Ross Grimsley with Cincinnati.

St. Louis added seven players to the fold, but that leaves nine men unsigned, including regulars Matty Alou, Ted Sizemore, Joe Torre and Ted Simmons and pitchers Steve Carlton, Jerry Reuss and Don Shaw.

And the Montreal Expos opened their training camp with four pitchers missing, including ace starter Carl Morton, who is still unsigned.

Johnny Green Rolling Along

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Johnny Green, like that ol' man river, just keeps rollin' along.

Green, who has the distinction of having played professional basketball in three decades, came off the bench with just six minutes left to play Thursday night and sparked the Cincinnati Royals to a 108-97 National Basketball Association victory over the Buffalo Braves.

In the only other NBA game, Golden State defeated Detroit 116-106, while in the lone American Basketball Association contest, the Floridians defeated Denver 130-118.

Green, 38, entered the game with the Royals ahead only 85-83. He scored six points and added three assists down the stretch, teaming with Nate Archibald on four fast-break baskets.

Now in his 13th pro season, the 6-foot-6, 210-pound Green is regarded by his coach, Bob Cousy, as an inspirational team leader. Green, who broke into the NBA with the New York Knicks in the 1959-60 season, led the league in field goal accuracy the past two years.

Meanwhile, Archibald led all scorers with 32 points, while center Sam Lacey contributed 20 points and 15 rebounds. Cincinnati has now won four straight.

Rookie center Elmore Smith led Buffalo with 23 points. Forward Bob Kauffman had 21 and guard Walt Hazzard added 19.

Warren Jabali scored 30 points, including a team-record six three-point goals, to spark the Floridians. Jabali also had 10 assists as the Floridians, tied 92-92 after three periods, outscored Denver 38-26 in the fourth quarter.

Ralph Simpson had 29 points and Dave Robisch 24 for Denver, while Willie Long netted 25 and Mack Calvin 23 for the Floridians.

Golden State trailed 55-43 at the half, but came back strongly in the second half to defeat Detroit, outscoring the Pistons 34-23 in the final period.

Cazzie Russell scored 20 points in the third period to spark the Warriors' comeback effort. Russell finished with 26 points, while teammates Nate Thurmond had 27, Jeff Mullins 25 and Jim Barnett 24.

Detroit center Bob Lanier led the Pistons with 26 points and 20 rebounds. Guard Dave Bing added 25 points.

The victory moved the Warriors one-half game ahead of idle Seattle in the race for second place in the NBA's Pacific Division.

Oral Roberts Blasts Union

By KEN RAPPOPORT
Associated Press Sports Writer
"We didn't go out to set any records," said Oral Roberts Coach Ken Trickey.

He could have fooled Union College.

The 20th-ranked Titans, led by Richard Fuqua's 51 points and tremendous production from the reserves, squashed the Jackson, Tenn., school 153-113 in college basketball Thursday night.

"We just got up and down the court like we should do all the time," said Trickey in a masterful understatement.

His club, the nation's leading scoring team, "got up and down the court" enough times to deposit 70 field goals. Yes, 70.

"This is a heck of a way to go out of this building," said Trickey, referring to Oral Roberts' last game in its 3,000-seat field house. The Titans move into more expansive headquarters, the 10,500-seat Special Events Center, next year.

In other action Thursday night, 16th-ranked Houston defeated Corpus Christi 105-81 and No. 19 Memphis State stopped Wichita State 108-98 in a key Missouri Valley Conference game.

Fuqua, the second leading scorer in the country, boosted his average to 35.3 behind Southwestern Louisiana's Dwight Lamar. He started out slowly, scoring only eight points in the first 12 minutes before getting red-hot and helping Oral Roberts move into a 71-45 halftime lead.

The reserves added 51 points after the starters were given a rest and the scoring output gave Oral Roberts a 107.7 average for the season.

Sophomore Dwight Jones scored 27 points and grabbed 18 rebounds and senior Dwight Davis scored 24 and accumulated 15 rebounds for Houston. The Cougars have won 10 straight games since overcoming early-season problems.

"Overconfidence had a lot to do with it," said Davis. "It was just our attitude. Some of the younger guys didn't have the desire to put out."

Memphis State's triumph, built on 26-point performances by Larry Finch and Don Holcomb, moved the Tigers within a half-game of first-place Louisville in the intense MVC battle.

Memphis State meets Louisville in a probable showdown match on March 2.

Glamor Golfers Didn't Dent Par

By HUBERT MIZELL
Associated Press Sports Writer
FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Golf's glamor gang—Nicklaus, Trevino, Palmer, Player—couldn't dent par at the beginning Jackie Gleason's $260,000 Inventry Classic.

For heroes, you had:

—Gene "The Machine" Littler shooting a record 65 for the first round lead, displaying the faceless precision that magnetizes golfing perfectionists if not the roaring majority.

—Bruce Crampton, the "Awful Aussie" to some, close behind at 67 and explaining how he is perhaps the most misunderstood man on the tour.

—And, other contenders at 68 with such unmagical names as Bob E. Smith, Benson Rayfield McLendon and Forrest Fezler.

Jack Nicklaus began double-bogey, double-bogey and "ralied" for a one-over-par 73 on the 7,128-yard layout. Arnold Palmer "played miserable" with a 74. Lee Trevino shot 76 and marched to the putting green for practice. Gary Player was the best of the millionaire clan with even-par 72.

Crampton, while not in the upper strata of golf's glory squad, has always performed well in high-paying tournaments. The son of a Sydney cop won a $50,000 payoff at the 1970 Westchester Classic and has bagged $120,000 in his three latest tour triumphs.

With $52,000 top money on the table this week, Bruce headed around the first turn in magnificent position behind Littler, the family man from San Diego who gets a kick out of tinkering with his three old Rolls Royces, a Model A Ford and a 1955 T-Bird.

Rookie Fezler, along with unheralded campaigners Smith and McLendon, played well during an unusually windless Florida morning.

Sensational rookie Lanny Wadkins, Masters king Charles Coody, Englishman Tony Jacklin and Doug Sanders were among a group of seven players at 69.

In all, 27 men cracked par on what was supposed to be a rugged Robert Trent Jones-designed course. The Nicklaus-Palmer-Player-Trevino bunch faced a battle today to make the 36 hole cut.

VMI Pulls Off Second Surprise

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Up until three nights ago, who'd have thought Virginia Military Institute's Keydets would be capable of creating even a stir in the Southern Conference basketball race.

Going into Tuesday night's conference game at home against William and Mary's Indians, the Keydets had played 10 league games and the closest they'd come to winning was a five-point defeat at East Carolina and a six-point overtime loss at home to The Citadel.

But Coach Mike Shuler went to a deliberate four-corners offense Tuesday night and the Keydets shocked William and Mary with a 37-36 overtime victory.

Richmond's Spiders, meanwhile, had been doing some shocking of their own by beating West Virginia and leading 12th-ranked Maryland at the half before being overpowered.

But it was the Spiders who were in for a surprise Thursday night, for VMI made it two straight in the conference by outlasting Richmond 79-74, this time in two overtimes.

The Keydets never trailed in regulation time, but Richmond's Clark Wiseman hit a field goal with three seconds left that tied it at 62. After the Keydets took a 68-66 lead in the extra period, Wiseman hit

The illumination of the city's major buildings makes them a visual delight by night as well as day. This is part of a general improvement to the city's lighting, designed to help banish crime and its covering shadows from the streets, at the same time as it enchants the eye by spotlighting architectural treasures to show off both their fine detail and their imposing masses.

Security Guard Business Now Fast-Growing Field

EDITOR'S NOTE—The security guard business is one of the fastest growing enterprises in the United States. There have been complaints, however, that it is TOO easy to become a guard. Here is an AP reporter's personal experience in Michigan.

By STEFAN DONEV
Associated Press Writer

DETROIT (AP) — Borrowing the name of a man on the FBI's "Ten Most Wanted Fugitives" list, I found work almost immediately as a private guard.

As Cameron David Bishop—a name taken from a wanted poster—and using a basket full of lies, I applied for work with a guard agency near Detroit. I was told I could start work the next night. The firm even provided me with a uniform.
The FBI wants Bishop for sabotage.

In hiring me, the firm did not violate Michigan law in any way.
I was asked if I had at least an eighth-grade education and if I'd been arrested in the past five years. I was also told to submit to a state police fingerprint check, but I could work while the check was being run—possibly several weeks.

Eventually, however, the state police and the FBI would have uncovered the fraud.
Seven other firms told me to fill out an application and come back for an interview. None of the agencies asked to see identification, but one did tell me to bring my Army discharge papers.

Harry Rager, 60, owner of Rager Private Patrol of Royal Oak, which gave me a job and uniform wasn't upset when I told him who I really was. He pointed out he had obeyed the law. And he had.
Although Rager would have put me to work, he said—when he thought he was talking to Bishop—"You'll work with other guards at first for training," and I couldn't carry a gun until a concealed weapons permit was issued.

My experiences evoked little surprise from leading figures in the guard agency business or the state police officer in charge of private guard licensing.

"There's quite a lag in checking fingerprints. A person could conceivably go for six weeks before he was discovered," said Lt. Raymond Cager.

"We're backed up." He also pointed out that some guards in the state have been convicted of felonies before being hired as guards.

"All the law requires is that he's been off probation or parole, that he's been clean for five years. There's nothing we can do about it," Cager added.

"The way this business is growing, there'll be men guarding garbage cans in a few years. And the worst part is, the majority won't know how," observed Jim McGahey, international president of the United Plant Guard Workers of America.

McGahey estimates there are nearly 1,500 private guards in Michigan, "and maybe 20 per cent of them have any training worthy of note."

Some agencies, such as Pinkerton's and Burns—two of the largest—insist upon seeing identification before hiring, and won't allow a man to start work until the state police fingerprint check and the firm's own background search are complete.

Finding work as a "rent-a-cop" isn't that hard. Partly because of low pay—few firms offer more than $2 an hour to start—the turnover rate is great. A 50-hour week is common.

Both McGahey and Reed Singleton, owner of a Detroit security service and president of the Michigan Association of Private Detectives and Private Guard Agencies, said the industry had improved somewhat since Michigan adopted standards for private guard agencies in 1968. But those already in business were allowed to continue.

Chou Calls The Weather Right

PEKING (AP) — Premier Chou En-lai is getting the reputation of a weather man among the Americans visiting Peking.
When he met with President Nixon Wednesday during a snow storm, the premier told Nixon that Thursday would be a "fine day" and the weather would not interfere with the Nixon's trip to the Great Wall. He was right.
Chou warned, however that the weather would get worse by Friday. And today the snow fell all morning, ending at midday.

Predicts Nixon Will Join Fight

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — State Rep. Jim Holshouser of Boone, a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor, predicts that on his return from China President Nixon will join the fight against busing.

He added at a news conference Wednesday that more and more studies are showing that the quality of public education is suffering because of busing.

He cited a recent Gallup Poll to support his claim that 85 per cent of the people in the county are opposed to forced busing. He said the figure included a "sizable majority" of Negroes and whites.

Three Hurt In Accidents

Three persons were reported injured in two collisions investigated here yesterday afternoon.

Greenville police reported vehicles driven by Elias Worthington, 39, of Winterville and Ned March Kinsey, 24, of Raleigh collided about 4:45 p.m. at the intersection of Fifth Street and Cemetery Road causing an estimated $100 damage to the vehicle operated by Worthington and about $500 damage to the Kinsey vehicle.

Kinsey and a passenger in his car were reported injured.

No charges were reported.
Karen Campbell Cookson, 24, of 1900 Charles St. was reported injured when a car she was driving collided with a vehicle operated by William Joseph Crane, 50, of 113 North Summit St. about 4:15 p.m. on Charles Street, 500 feet South of the Stratford Drive intersection.

Officers estimated damage to the Crane car at $300 and placed damage to the Cookson vehicle at $1,000.

Mrs. Cookson was charged by investigators with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety.

Seek Recruit Young Doctors

WILLIAMSTON—Steps have been taken to recruit new doctors in Martin County. In connection with the new county hospital now nearing completion, the board of trustees has moved to authorize construction of ten offices adjacent to the hospital building.

Building Committee Chairman David Boyd said the action is not unprecedented, "Five years ago it would have been but in recent years practically all hospitals being built in the state are including provisions for adjacent doctor offices." Boyd mentioned that Clinton, Valdese, Dunn, Roanoke Rapids and other towns have taken similar action.

The board of trustees, in approving the idea of constructing the ten units, revealed that the cost of the building will be somewhere in the neighborhood of $200,000 for 17,000 square feet of floor space. Boyd pointed out there will no operating connection between the offices and the hospital, adding that "each doctor will be responsible for his own office operation."

Each doctor in the county has been offered an opportunity to lease space in the proposed building. To date, Boyd said that four medical doctors and tow dentists have accepted.

Congratulations to the undefeated "Big Orange Machine" for winning first place in the conference. Good Luck "Big Orange Machine".

Drug Survey
A drug survey was taken last week at North Pitt to learn the extent of the drug problem in Pitt County.

The survey consisted of 12 "yes" or "no" questions. The students were not asked to give their names, just their ages and grades.

The members of the Student Involvement Committee conducted the survey. The completed questionnaires from North Pitt were sent to the county office where they were mixed with the questionnaires from the other high schools in the county. The results may or may not be publicized.

With the Junior-Senior Prom only two months away, the Junior Council has been busy planning the activities. The questions of which bank and which theme have almost been decided. May 12 has been set as the date for the prom.

Mini-Course Handbooks

Mini-course handbooks were given to the students on Monday. The students will select five courses from those offered, that they would like to participate in. From an analysis made by the Student Government of the student body's selections, the students will then chose the two mini-courses they would like to take.

The Future Homemakers of America had a special treat Wednesday as "The Casuals" played for them. The members of the band are Ervin Cogdell, Teddy Hyman, James Sutton, Charles Jenkins, Marvin Barnes and Lionel Carney. All are students at North Pitt.

The students welcome Mrs. Thelma Switzer, English teacher, back to school, after an extended illness.

David Whichard and David Moore Jr. will participate in the Optimist Club Oratorical Contest tonight.

State police Detective Sgt. John Clisch, the only other officer assigned to police the state's 220 private guard agencies, says private guards perform a necessary function and help police in many cases.
But Clisch reported two instances where off-duty guards pointed pistols they thought were unloaded and shot someone. Another off-duty guard killed himself while playing Russian roulette because he didn't know which way his revolver's cylinder turned.

Other guards have been killed in the line of duty.
Police said most complaints about private guards—most of whom are in the metropolitan Detroit area—involve weapons violations and a tendency among guards to think they have more law enforcement powers than they do. A private guard has no right to do more than make a citizen's arrest—as can any civilian.

"Our officers are in school for months before they're allowed on the streets," a Detroit police inspector said, "and we still have problems with them occasionally. What can you expect from a man who's just given a gun and told to be a guard?"

One private guard said, "Look, my boss doesn't like to pay me the $1.75 an hour I get. He'd pay less if he thought he could get away with it. No way is he going to spend any money training me." Singleton and McGahey both said they had fired guards who wanted excuses to "play policeman." Singleton added "but some of my men have become policeman and one is now with the FBI."

Wrong Notions

Feed Jealousy

Arnold is insanely jealous of his devoted wife. And it is due to an earlier sexual brainwashing that he received from a traveling salesman! Wives, you can stop such faulty erotic notions by the booklet below. Use it to sweeten a bitter mate!

By GEORGE W. CRANE, Ph.D., M.D.
Case T-511: Arnold J., aged 27, is insanely jealous.
"Dr. Crane," his pretty wife began, "Arnold doesn't even let me go to the store to buy our groceries, unless he is along."

"And he shuns social engagements for he thinks all the men are trying to make dates with me."
"If we do go to a party, then he accuses me till almost morning of being interested in other men."
"Why, I am not even allowed to attend church by myself!"
"And if we occupy a pew with other folks, if the stranger near me offers me a hymnal, then Arnold thinks I must have been dating this man behind his back."
"Actually, I am not interested in any other men but Arnold, so why does he make such false accusations?"
JEALOUSY'S CAUSE
"It takes a thief to catch a thief," runs an old adage. Which means, in effect, a person who cheats is more likely to suspect others of doing likewise.

When you married couples encounter abnormal signs of jealousy in your mate, then consider the above idea as a possibility.
But sometimes the illicit philandering is still in the imagination of the jealous person.
He may merely have contemplated being unfaithful but may not actually have been guilty of physical unfaithfulness. However, it is a sure axiom of psychiatry that a jealous person is a victim of a sexual inferiority complex!
"I haven't what it takes to hold my wife's undying devotion," is thus the terrifying thought that percolates through Arnold's mind.

"Other men can thus outbid me for her affection," is then the follow-up.
So Arnold becomes chronically suspicious of every male he meets and browbeats his wife by false accusations. For her ardent and often tearful protests of her love are sweet music to his harassed spirit.
Actually, the root of Arnold's specific problem was due to his wrong notion about a woman's erotic hunger.
As a teen-ager, he heard a traveling salesman describe experiences with prostitutes in Chicago's "red light" district.

The salesman recounted vivid cases of wild sexual passion that were demonstrated by those commercial female sex pots.
And the salesman then affirmed, positively, that "all women are wildly passionate; even more so than men!"
Arnold thus believed this Don Juan authority, though those women just put on an act to gain a bigger tip!
But Arnold found, to his dismay, that his wife was not very ardent.
She was rather diffident and even frigid, according to Arnold's mistaken notion about female passion.

"But she must be wildly passionate," he reasoned, "for that experienced salesman said all wives are that way."
"Ergo, she is dissipating her sexual urges with clandestine affairs behind my back."
And he then began to feel sexually inferior, which goaded him into excessive jealousy.
You can stop the jealousy of either mate by sending for the booklet "Sex Problems in Marriage," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 cents.

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

The bidding:

Pass Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♠
North and South reached a game contract in hearts for which there was no legitimate play inasmuch as the partnership is off four top tricks. Had the hearts divided less favorably—in fact—a contract of two hearts would have been the maximum plus score obtainable on the deal.

The first round of bidding was routine and South's response of two hearts to one no trump shows a five card suit with less than eight high card points. It is a sign off and partner is not expected to carry on unless he has a maximum no trump plus a good fit. While North has four trumps, his high card content comes to only 16 points and he should pass. If South had 8 or 9 points, his proper response is two clubs which requests the no trump bidder to show a major suit. South's subsequent action would depend on partner's rebid.

Once North invited a game, South could hardly quit inasmuch as he had 7 high card points—the very top of his original response.
West opened the jack of spades which provided declarer with a respite from an immediate setback inasmuch as he is off two tricks in each of the red suits. He began by cashing the top three clubs in order to dispose of one of his losing diamonds. The nine of hearts was led next and ducked around to West's jack.

The latter shifted belatedly to a diamond and East was in with the king. He resisted the temptation to cash the ace, and instead, led back a fourth round of clubs. South ruffed in, however West overruffed with the king to complete the defensive book and East subsequently scored the setting trick with the ace of hearts.
Once West failed to find the killing lead on the deal, South was in position to safeguard his contract. After he obtains a diamond discard on the third round of clubs, the only danger is in permitting the jack of clubs to remain outstanding which provides the opponents with an opportunity to score their trumps separately.
The solution to the problem is quite simple. After the queen of clubs holds, South merely continues with dummy's remaining club and discards his last diamond—permitting East to win the trick with the jack. Subsequent trump leads will restrict the defenders to two hearts and one club trick.

Five Demo Presidential Candidates Missed Voting

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Political Writer

The Democratic senators running for president have achieved unanimity of a sort in the stormy dispute over school busing:

All five were absent Thursday when the Senate approved compromise terms on the busing issue, 51 to 37.

Only one, Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington, had announced opposition to the busing terms sponsored by Senate leaders, who sought to defuse what looms as a major issue in the 1972 campaign.

Sens. Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota, Edmund S. Muskie of Maine and George McGovern of South Dakota announced they would have voted for the measure; Sen. Vance Hartke of Indiana expressed pleasure at the outcome.

The amendment would write into law some limits on school busing for the sake of racial balance, and would stay the effect of federal court orders requiring busing across district lines until all appeals have been exhausted.

The presidential candidates of both parties spread their campaigns from one coast to the other Thursday.

LINDSAY—New York Mayor John V. Lindsay was stumping through California Thursday, with visits to Watts and East Los Angeles, Sacramento and San Francisco, where he acknowledged most top Democrats in the state were committed to others even before he started.

McCloskey, R-Calif., speaking in Rochester, N.H., said Nixon's remarks in 1968 were correct—that any man elected president who didn't end the Vietnam war in four years should not be re-elected.

SPOCK—The People's Party candidate for president, Dr. Benjamin Spock, filed suit in Boston to have the Navy allow him to campaign at Quonset Point Naval Air Station in Rhode Island where the base commander turned him down.

Bring Story Of N.C. Moravians

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — Five residents of Winston-Salem, N. C., dressed in Moravian costume, explained to a fifth-grade class in Montpelier Thursday the history of that religious sect.

One of the visitors, Mrs. Donald Fuller, said the visit was part of the Expanding Experiences program for youngsters in Winston-Salem schools. The North Carolinians brought with them tape-recorded questions about Vermont from the fifth-grade class of Mrs. William MacLeod in Winston-Salem. The Montpelier youngsters will record the answers and mail the tapes.

The visitors were Mrs. and Mrs. Donald Fuller and their son Dan; Miss Patsy Law and Miss Lola Jean Yoder.

The Moravians emigrated to America during colonial times to escape religious persecution in their homeland, now part of Czechoslovakia.

WALLACE—Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace was cheered by 2,300 people in Fort Lauderdale's War Memorial when he told them "there's a lot of flim flam going on . . . about this proposed constitutional amendment to prohibit forced busing." Though he favors an amendment, Wallace said, he doesn't want to wait years for its enactment.

Jackson, one of the five Democratic campaigners who missed Thursday's Senate vote, also favors a constitutional amendment to solve the busing issue.

Harnett County Woman Speaks At Local Senior Citizens Seminar

Miss May Marshbanks of the Harnett County Council for Senior Citizens, Inc. was the principal speaker at a seminar on "Commitments of Local Agencies to Senior Citizens" held here yesterday morning.

Her main idea was how churches work to help senior citizens, according to Mrs. J. B. Spilman, coordinator of the Pitt-Greenville Council on the Aging. Sponsoring agencies for the event were the Council on the Aging, Pitt Technical Institute, and the Greenville Recreation Department.

The invocation was given by the Rev. W. L. Jones and Dr. Clinton R. Prewett, chairman of the local Council on Aging made the opening statement.

A panel discussion was held with representatives of local agencies telling what their particular agency has to offer senior citizens. Rev. Jack M. Daniell was the moderator and those participating included Dr. Robert D. May of the Community Health Department, Miss Dorothy Bolton of the Social Services Department, Mrs. Sue May of the Home Extension Service, Lionel B. Harper of the Social Security Commission, the Rev. Graham Nahouse of the Pitt county Ministerial Association, Rep. Horton Rountree, Ola L. Porter of Pitt Technical Institute, Boyd Lee of the Greenville Recreation Department, and Lloyd Noe of the Employment Security Commission.

Rep. Rountree told of recent legislation on behalf of senior citizens, Mrs. Spilman said. About 125 persons attended the meeting.

Demand Courts Decide Border

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Angered because Tennessee won't take a border dispute seriously, two Georgia legislators want to drag their northern neighbor—and North Carolina, too—into court.

A joint House-Senate resolution was introduced Thursday, asking State Atty. Gen. to sue the two states for land Georgia claims it rightfully owns.

The resolution was a quick reaction to news that the Tennessee House had just passed a resolution advising Georgia "to mind its own business."

Rep. Larry Thomason, D-Decatur, initiated the quarrel last March.

He contended that the southern boundaries of Tennessee and North Carolina had been inaccurately drawn, short-changing Georgia of about 200 square miles of land.

He and Sen. Maylon London, D-Cleveland, co-chaired a study committee which explored the disputed territory last year and decided that most of Chattanooga is in the area which belongs to Georgia, not Tennessee.

The two legislators co-sponsored the resolution Thursday calling for the law suit.

The Tennessee resolution described Georgia's claims to the land as "somewhat ridiculous and without merit."

It not only advised Georgia to mind its own business, but also said the state should clean up its rivers, finish Interstate 75 between Atlanta and Chattanooga and solve transportation problems in Atlanta and DeKalb County.

Bowles Critical Of Slow State Action At Cherry Hospital

HICKORY, N.C. (AP) — Candidate for governor Skipper Bowles asserted today state mental health officials have not moved speedily and aggressively "to clean up the situation at Cherry Hospital."

"It appears more and more that they (the officials) have sent the proverbial goats to guard the cabbage patch," Bowles said in a talk prepared for delivery at a luncheon at Hickory.

"Instead of opening some windows and letting in some air, it seems that high mental health officials are slamming windows and barring doors in hopes that public interest will soon die down."

Bowles said editor Eugene Price of the Goldsboro News-Argus "is not convinced that much is being done to correct the deplorable situation at Cherry Hospital . . . I regret to say that neither am I."

The gubernatorial candidate sharply criticized Human Resources Secretary Lenox Baker for saying that things such as occurred in the Goldsboro hospital "happen every day and every night in every town in every state in the nation."

"I am surprised," Bowles said, "that he would be willing to hold a corner of the rug while frightened mental health officials sweep the problem of Cherry Hospital under it."

that the state Department of Mental Health officials "would have known of the serious situation at Cherry and moved to correct it without an SBI investigation to prompt them."

He said if the "host of well-paid medical doctors in" Raleigh doing administrative work is "ignorant of what is appearing in the hospitals" then "I suggest that they get off their backs and go to the hospitals and involve themselves in direct treatment for a while."

"Program planning is fine," Bowles said, "but we need doctors in the hospitals executing the programs and at the same time anticipating problem areas and spotting problem employees."

Artificial Skin Aprons For Band

LONDON (AP) — British army bandmen are to lose their tiger and leopard skins—to support wildlife and save money. In the future, drummers in the army's 75 bands will wear nylon fabricated copies of the skin aprons.

"If we go on using skins for another 20 years there'll be no tigers or leopards left," a military spokesman said.

Claims 'Blackout' In Abandoning Tots

LONDON (AP) — The father of two little American sisters left alone in a big London department store says he had suffered a temporary blackout and loss of memory.

Dr. Neil Mitchell, 36, an Asheville, N.C., psychiatrist, was found Thursday when he asked first aid officials at a London railroad station for help.

The girls' Irish-born father was taken immediately to visit his daughters, Charlotte, 7, and Siobhan, 5, at a children's nursery where they have stayed for two days since their father disappeared.

The girls are to remain at the nursery while their future is decided, police said.

Mrs. Hilary Mitchell, who lost custody of the children during divorce proceedings in the United States two years ago, traveled to London from her home in Wales after seeing the girls' pictures in newspapers.
