

Options Acquired For More CBD Land

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

Options to purchase additional parcels in the Central Business District have been acquired by the Redevelopment Commission, it was reported Monday night.

CBD project manager Lawrence D. Holt told commissioners that an option had been received from Gulf Oil Co. for the purchase of the Gulf Station on Dickinson Avenue just south of Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church.

Holt reported that an option had been executed to buy a small portion of the Georgetowne Shoppes property for Loop Road clearance. He said that the Commission is waiting for a severance plat on the property, which is owned by E. E. Rawl.

The British Petroleum

Corp. has indicated that it will sell the BP Station property on the Southwest Corner of Fifth and Green Streets, Holt continued, and an option is expected on that property soon.

He noted that the structure formerly occupied by Real House on Cotanche Street will be advertised for demolition bids.

In other business, Holt reported that the Project

Advisory Committee held a special meeting on Feb. 29 and the treatment of alleys in the CBD area was discussed. He said that an effort is being made to talk with each property owner involved concerning the alleys behind their businesses.

The project manager said that he has been advised by HUD that the possibilities of changing the CBD boundary through an amendment are slim and other avenues open might include the creation of another project southwest of CBD. The project, known as a Neighborhood Development Plan or NDP would be different from a conventional project in that it would be funded annually and evaluated, budget-wise, on a yearly basis.

The creation of the project would be in accordance with a directive from the City Council, it was pointed out.

Real Estate officer Kirby Boyd told commissioners that bid openings were held yesterday on two parcels in the Shore Drive Project and no bids were received.

Boyd requested that commissioners approve a motion assigning parcel 5-29 and 30, a storage warehouse located behind Taff Office Equipment Co., to the commission attorney for condemnation. The motion was approved.

Shore Drive project manager Jim Bishop said that all documentation concerning project closeout had been submitted to the Greensboro office of HUD. He added that some $4,000 in additional credits had been received for the project from demolition work on Eighth Street.

Newtown project manager T. I. Wagner reported that one more parcel had been acquired in the project area and a total of three parcels now remain.

He noted that all plans concerning Newtown are in Greensboro and if approval is received there as expected, the plans for housing units in the project should be up for bids by the first of April.

Commission rehabilitation officer J. W. Clark Jr. reported that a construction meeting involving Charles Horne of the Utilities Commission, city engineer Charles Holliday, and Woody Crumpler of Carolina Telephone was held March 6 and plans for the water, electrical, and telephone work in CBD were discussed.

Wagner, reporting in the absence of executive director, Col. A. E. Dubber, said that a social services seminar was held March 5-7 in Greensboro. Commissioners gave their authorization of staff attendance at the meeting since prior approval had not been received.

A motion was also approved authorizing the attendance of two staff members at a relocation conference in Greensboro March 28 and 29.

Iraqi Say Jordan, Israel Okay Accord

BEIRUT (AP) — King Hussein has reached a full peace agreement with Israel, Baghdad Radio reported today.

Earlier, the royal palace in Amman announced Hussein would make a "statement of tremendous importance" Wednesday concerning the territory Israel seized from Jordan in the 1967 war.

The Iraqi broadcast said the agreement provides that the occupied territory on the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip which Egypt occupied before the war will become an autonomous Palestinian state federated with Jordan in a United Arab Kingdom under Hussein's Hashimite throne.

A dispatch from Amman said details of a broad new plan aimed at breaking the deadlock between Jordan and Israel were handed to the ambassadors to the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain, France and the Arab countries Monday.

The Jordanian government newspaper Al Dostour said the king would announce a "plan to consolidate national unity between the two banks of Jordan on a permanent basis of decentralization."

The use of the term decentralization indicated some form of autonomy for the Palestinian population on both sides of the Jordan River.

Baghdad Radio broadcast an Iraqi news agency dispatch from Amman which said the king hoped to get approval of his plan at a meeting this afternoon with members of Jordan's parliament.

The radio gave these highlights of the agreement:

—Proclamation of a new federal state under Hussein to be called the United Arab Kingdom.

—The kingdom is to be made up of two autonomous states, Palestine and Jordan, each of which will have its own government for internal affairs.

Recent reports in the Arab press claimed Jordan and Israel have reached a secret agreement by which Hussein would get back the West Bank and Israel would keep the old Arab city of Jerusalem.

According to these reports, Jordan has agreed to the demilitarization of the West Bank, and the establishment of an autonomous rule in the region in exchange for an Israeli withdrawal.

Chain Reaction Smashup
SUPER HIGHWAY, SUPER JUNK YARD — This tangle of automobiles occurred on the Adirondack Northway, eight miles north of Albany at Clifton Park. A chain reaction smashup began in a snowstorm and one state trooper estimated "a couple of thousand cars backed up". The southbound lane of the road was closed but no serious injuries were reported. Throw-Away Cars?

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Throw-away cars," good for only 10,000 to 15,000 miles, may be one result of antipollution measures due to take effect by 1976, a private consulting firm has told the federal government.

Chase Econometric Associates, Inc., prepared the study under a federal contract as part of an over-all economic analysis issued Sunday.

Federal standards now require 90-per-cent reductions in auto emissions of carbon monoxide and hydrocarbons by 1975 and nitrogen oxides by 1976.

Meeting those standards, the study estimated, would require equipment costing about $300 per car, causing a relatively larger jump in small-car prices than in large-car prices.

The study said the price rise on small imported cars might trigger a move toward even smaller, cheaper cars.

For one thing, the report said, motorcycle engines can meet pollution standards more easily. And, it continued, available antipollution devices wear out after 10,000 to 15,000 miles.

"This suggests the emergence of very inexpensive automobiles which are not expected to last more than 10,000-15,000 miles and would be constructed with very inexpensive materials," said the report. "Both the 'motorcycles with roofs' and 'throw-away cars' are likely to be sold within the next five years, and by 1980 can be expected to have annual sales in excess of 7 per cent of the total auto market."

Moderate Early Turnout In Florida Primary Today

By CARL P. LEUBSDORF
AP Political Writer

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — The early turnout was moderate today as the first of an anticipated two million Floridians voted in a presidential primary expected to influence the prospects of three likely Democratic losers more than those of the probable winner, Alabama Gov.

George C. Wallace.

With 11 Democrats dividing the vote, Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine said he thought "the pattern that emerges over several primaries" will be more significant than just the Florida returns.

Muskie is fighting with Sens. Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota and Henry M. Jackson of Washington for second place behind Wallace's antibusing bandwagon and for position in the multicandidate scramble for the Democratic presidential nomination.

For Muskie, Florida could further cloud a front-runner image that suffered when he polled 46.4 per cent of the votes in winning last week's New Hampshire primary in his native New England. Humphrey and Jackson hope for strong showings to spur their drives to overtake him.

Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota, the surprisingly strong runner-up to Muskie in New Hampshire, and Mayor John V. Lindsay of New York, a former Republican in his first race as a Democrat, are the other major contenders in the 11-candidate Democratic field.

Among the Republican, President Nixon is expected to be a runaway winner over conservative Rep. John Ashbrook of Ohio, who has campaigned in Florida the past week. Liberal Rep. Paul N. McCloskey of California dropped out of the race last week but is still on the ballot here.

Nixon is also expected to win all 40 delegates to the Republican National Convention.

The 81 Democratic Delegates may be split, with Wallace's rivals hoping to capture close to half of them in the congressional districts of the Tampa-St. Petersburg and Miami areas.

Polls will be open from 7 a.m. EST to 7 p.m.

Blanket Condemnation Of Officials Withheld By Lt. Gov. Pat Taylor

RALEIGH (AP) — Lt. Gov. Pat Taylor gave is conditional support today to state mental health officials in their defense against charges of patient abuse and neglect in state hospitals.

Taylor, a Democratic candidate for governor, said employees of the state mental institutions were "historically underpaid. Under conditions like this, you could expect problems."

"I cannot give a blanket condemnation of these people," Taylor said at a news conference. He is a former chairman of the state Mental Health Commission.

Taylor, in response to news-men's questions, also said he, as governor, "would do all I could do to minimize the busing" of children to achieve public school integration.

The Wadesboro attorney said his own polls indicated "90 some per cent of the people" in North Carolina oppose busing for the purpose of balancing the races.

Taylor called his news conference to announce the formation of a "Farmers for Taylor" committee headed by Rhett Stroud of Reidsville, a former employe of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

Taylor told newsmen he did not want to "get into a debate" on mental health, which has become a prime issue for two other gubernatorial candidates, Democrat Hargrove Bowles and Republican Jim Holshouser.

Planning Board Sets Meeting

The Pitt County Planning Board will meet Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in the Law Library at the Court House.

Included on the agenda for the meeting is a report on progress of a proposed subdivision ordinance for the county and discussions on a proposed course in local government and of a proposed mobile home ordinance.

Three Killings, New Bombings

BELFAST (AP) — A three-day cease-fire declared by the Irish Republican Army ended Monday night with the killing of three more men and a chain of bombings in Northern Ireland.

Patrick McRory, an 18-year-old Roman Catholic standing on his doorstep in a mainly Protestant neighborhood of Belfast, was cut down by gunfire from a moving car shortly before the truce expired at midnight.

Before the night was over, 10 bombs caused much damage in Belfast, Londonderry, Lisburn, Strabane and Castledearg, and two civilian men were killed, apparently in a heavy exchange of gunfire between guerrillas and a British patrol in Londonderry.

The bodies of the men were brought to a hospital shortly after the gun battle in the Catholic Bogside district. The army said one of the dead men was a member of the IRA. Three British soldiers were wounded, two of them seriously.

The deaths brought to 272 the number of persons killed in the 31 months of Northern Ireland's political and religious war. Sixty-six persons have died in 1972.

The most powerful bomb wrecked nearly every store front on Lisburn's main street only 500 yards from British army headquarters. Between 50 and 80 pounds of gelignite were detonated inside a parked car, wrecking 10 nearby shops and wounding three soldiers and a police officer.

Irving's Next Book Said About His Role In Hoax

NEW YORK (AP) — Sources close to author Clifford Irving say he is writing another book—this one about his publicly admitted role in the $750,000 Howard Hughes autobiography hoax.

Proceeds from the sale of the book would go toward repaying the duped publisher, McGraw-

Hill, Inc., the $900,000 it is seeking in restitution for advances and expenses it paid, the sources said. Much of the total is reported to be intact.

Irving hopes to complete the new manuscript by June 15, the day before he, his wife Edith and researcher Richard Suskind are to be sentenced in the case, it was said.

The Irvings pleaded guilty to federal conspiracy charges Tuesday and were joined by Suskind to plead guilty in state Supreme Court to charges of grand larceny and conspiracy.

Irving, 41, and Edith, 36, each could face, between the federal and state charges, a maximum of 13 years in prison and $11,000 in fines. Suskind, 46, who was named a coconspirator but not a defendant in the federal indictment, could face up to eight years in prison and a $1,000 fine.

Federal mail fraud charges against the Irvings were dropped, as were state counts of larceny, conspiracy and possession of stolen documents against all three and of perjury against Irving and Suskind.

In the court proceedings, the government said it had traced the $750,000 McGraw-Hill gave Irving, including a $100,000 author's advance and $650,000 in three checks for relay to Hughes, to various banks and brokerage houses in Switzerland and the United States.

Nearly all of the $750,000 was said to be intact and will probably be returned to the publisher before sentencing, the New York Daily News reported today. In addition to the $750,000, McGraw-Hill is seeking restitution of another $15,000 it says it paid Irving for expenses and $135,000 it estimates it has paid for legal expenses, type setting and other costs.

And, said a McGraw-Hill spokesman, "the meter is still running."

Publishers File Action Against Shoppers Guide

A complaint seeking $198,000 in damages and a motion asking for a preliminary injunction to stop publication of the Reflector Shoppers Guide "at below cost rates" were filed with the U.S. Eastern District Court in New Bern yesterday afternoon.

The complaint and motion were filed by attorneys for Greenville Publishing Co., publishers of the weekly shoppers guide "The Advocate", against The Daily Reflector, Inc.; the Reflector Shoppers Guide; co-publishers David J. Whitchard and John S. Whitchard; and board chairman David Julian Whitchard.

According to the complaint, the defendants "have engaged in a continuing unlawful combination and conspiracy unreasonably to restrain and to monopolize interstate trade and commerce in the shoppers guide advertising market in and about Greenville..." in violation of U.S. antitrust laws.

The complaint charges the defendants "attempts to restrain trade, maintain a monopoly and destroy competition through unfair and deceptive methods and practices have included but are not limited to the following:

"Sale of advertising space in The Reflector Shoppers Guide at rates below publishing and distribution costs;

"Tying of the sale of advertising space in The Reflector Shoppers Guide with concurrent sale of space in The Daily Reflector;

"Statements in The Reflector Shoppers Guide about its circulation which are misleading and deceptive; and

"Publication of The Reflector Shoppers Guide at a loss in order to eliminate competition and regain the printed advertising monopoly previously enjoyed by

The Daily Reflector."

The conduct of the defendants as alleged in the complaint, "can be expected to have the following effects," the complaint charged:

"Inability of plaintiff to sell advertising space ... to retain advertisers ... to generate revenues sufficient to operate at

Thad Eure Dons Beef Cost Triples On Way To A Plate Straw Hat Each Year On April 5

(Editor's Note: Beef prices hit an average all-time high this year. The following gives a feedlot-to-dinner-table breakdown on you beef dollar.)

SIGN OF SPRING — Secretary of State Thad Eure will reenact this scene April 5 when he dons a new straw hat, a sure sign of spring on Capitol Hill. (AP Wirephoto)

By REESE HART
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Thirty-five years ago a group of school children trooped through Secretary of State Thad Eure's Capitol office and one girl told a companion, "He certainly is young looking, ain't he?"

Last spring another group of school children toured Eure's office and were given the royal treatment. As they prepared to leave a freckle-faced boy nudged a chum and said, "He's a nice old man, ain't he?" "I'll miss the school children this spring," said Eure, who is out of the Capitol for the first time in 35 years. He was moved to the state Administration Building while the Capitol undergoes repairs and renovation.

Eure, 72, dean of the nation's secretaries of state, is seeking re-election to a four-year term and has no plans for retirement.

"I've got more vim and vitality than I had 10 years ago," said Eure, who took office in December 1936.

"One of the things I've enjoyed most through the years is the annual visit each spring of thousands of school children to the Capitol," Eure said in an interview. "When they come through my office I ask them to tell their mamas and papas to remember me."

When Eure began serving as secretary of state he adopted an open-door policy.

"My office door has been open night and day ever since," he explained.

Eure is opposed by Democrat Louis Wade of Durham in his bid for renomination in the May 6 primary. When Eure won his post for the first time in 1936 he defeated Wade's father, Stacy Wade.

His long cigarette holder, bow ties and sports clothing are a familiar part of Eure's image. Every year April 5 is a notable occasion for him. On that date he dons a hard-brim straw hat, a sure sign of spring on Capitol Hill.

Eure, a native of Gates County, has convened the biennial state House of Representatives sessions since 1931 when he was principal clerk. He also has convened the Senate three times.

winds up on consumer tables at triple its original cost per pound.
Cattlemen are getting more money for beef and so are middlemen who slaughter, transport, slice, wrap and ring up steaks, roasts and hamburger on supermarket cash registers.
The result is higher beef prices for consumers, a record average of $1.11½ per pound on a composite, all-cut basis in January, says the Agriculture Department. On the hoof, beef cattle hit an all-time high of $32.60 per hundredweight in February.

The future for retail beef prices?
Hazy, according to government economists following last week's report by the Labor Department that the February wholesale-price index was up 0.9 per cent, the most in a year. Food products, mainly meat, led the pace.

Herbert Stein, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, said livestock prices recently have eased but indicated the retail price momentum will continue at least for a time.
"We do not expect further sharp increases in meat prices at wholesale, although retail meat prices are likely to continue rising a little longer," Stein said.
Meat accounts for nearly a third of the average family's food dollar, and beef is by far the favorite, according to government analysts.
Who gets the consumer beef dollar?
Allen Baker, a marketing specialist for the department's Economic Research Service, provided a breakdown of beef costs using figures for the fourth quarter of 1971, which included part but not all of the recent uptrend in cattle and beef prices.
A 1,000-lb. choice-grade live steer is sold by a farmer or feedlot operator for $327.79, or about 33 cents per pound, not including transportation or any marketing charges involved.
The packing company, which bought the animal, slaughters the steer and converts it into so-called carcass weight. By this time the steer has been dressed of hide, internal organs and other byproducts which are not classified as red meat.
At this point, the packing company has a beef carcass weighing only 620 pounds. The carcass is sold on the wholesale market for $340.10, or about 55 cents per pound for the net remaining weight.

ler trims the 620-pound carcass of excess bone, fat and other waste material. That leaves 463 pounds of beef cuts from the original carcass.
But, on the average, there is a 5-per-cent reduction in the retail cuts from spoilage and theft. That leaves 439 pounds of beef available for retail sale to consumers.
The prices of the cuts vary widely, from about 69 cents a pound for hamburger nationally last December, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, to more than $2 a pound for the more prized steaks.

All told, the original 1,000-lb. steer was reduced to 439 pounds of meat selling for $468.40 total or about $1.07 per pound. That's more than three times the original on-the-hoof cost per pound of the live steer.
According to the breakdown, and allowing for the $20.65 received by the meat packer for byproducts, there was a markup of $161.26 from the time the steer left the feedlot until it ended up in shopping carts as red meat.

School Busing Topic Is Hottest Single Issue In Fla. Demo Primary

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Ecology, the economy, crime in the streets and welfare all have been topics for the active candidates in today's Florida presidential primary. But for most Floridians, the primary issue is busing.
The question of busing children to achieve racial balance in schools has made Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace the leader in the Democratic race, and state legislative action that put a busing straw vote on the primary ballot is expected to bring out additional Wallace voters.
Busing has forced the major national candidates to take stands on the issue and forced them to tread cautiously so that a stand in Florida doesn't conflict with a stand in less conservative states where they face future primary contests. Of the seven Democrats actively campaigning in Florida, five favor school busing or say they can accept it as an unpleasant necessity.
Busing has caused Florida's young Democratic governor, Reubin Askew, to take an unpopular position as a crusader against the busing straw vote.

The busing referendum placed on the ballot has no standing in law. Sponsors said it merely will allow Floridians to tell the nation their opinion on racial busing.
The referendum reads: "Do you favor an amendment to the U.S. Constitution which would prohibit forced busing and guarantee the right of each student to attend the appropriate public school nearest his home?"
Askew's forces in the legislature failed to keep the referendum from being included on the ballot, but the governor did manage to tag on another referendum which reads: "Do you favor providing an equal opportunity for quality education for all children regardless of race, creed, color or place of residence and oppose a return to a dual system of public schools?"
A third question asks if voters favor a constitutional amendment to allow prayer in the public schools, but that issue seems to have been ignored by the voters.
Here are the positions on busing taken by the candidates campaigning in the Florida race:
—Rep. Shirley Chisholm of New York, the only black candidate in the race, is in favor of busing.
—Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota says he opposes massive busing solely for the purpose of achieving racial parity, but he favors busing where necessary to provide equal education opportunities.
Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington opposes busing and says he favors a constitutional amendment to outlaw it.
—New York Mayor John V. Lindsay favors school busing.
—Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota favors school busing, although he did vote for the busing compromise amendment in the Senate recently.
—Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine says school busing can be a useful tool for desegregation but that he does not like it.
—Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace opposes school busing and has based most of his campaign on this issue.
On the Republican side Rep. John M. Ashbrook of Ohio is the only campaigning GOP candidate, and he is an outspoken critic of busing.
President Nixon, the only other avowed Republican candidate, has not campaigned himself in Florida, but he has said he opposes busing and announced he will make a statement on the issue after the Florida primary.

Offers Discussion On Parapsychology

Rod Asberry, guest speaker, introduced the Jay-C-Ettes to the field of parapsychology. He related the developments of this field, which began at Duke University with the studies of Dr. Joseph B. Rynne.
Giant leaps have been made in the last 10 years. The phases of telepathy, clairvoyance, precognition, and retrocognition are parts of the study. Much emphasis has been placed on the study of dreams in the U.S. Courses in this field will be offered at Pitt Technical Institute if enough public interest is shown, said the speaker.
Dwayne Long, a Jaycee, presented the club a check for $100 as thanks for the group helping collecting money for the sale of circus tickets. This money will be used later for a community project.

Final thanks were expressed to Karen Turner and Carolyn Williamson for the Valentine dance, to Melba Hargett and Sarah West for the March of Dimes Coffee Day, to Nancy Landon for circus ticket collections, and Etsil Gordon for the Boy's Club bake sale.
The Jay-C-Ettes will entertain the Jaycee wives for the Jaycee Spring Regional meeting in April. Etsil Gordon, Melba Hargett, and Ann Reese will be tri-chairmen.
The Newcomers Bridge Party (for girls that have joined the Jay-C-Ettes this year) will be held in May. Sherri Carter and Joyce Stienbeck will work in the Crippled Children's Clinic this month.
A new slate of officers was presented and elections will be held at the April Meeting.
Guests, Mrs. Dick Johnson, Mrs. Chip Ernhart, and Mrs. Jimmy McKinny were welcomed by Vice President Etsil Gordon at the Wednesday night meeting.

Interior Decorator Predicts Trend Towards The Romantic Age

PICTURES ON THE WALL provide a romantic look for Ellen Lehman McCluskey's dining room.

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures

If you want to know how a trend in decorating begins, just ask Ellen Lehman McCluskey, one of the world's most versatile interior designers. She predicts we are heading toward a romantic age in decorating. And she is helping it evolve.

"It is happening because the world needs coziness. People are ready for it because we all want to shut out unpleasanties and envelop ourselves in cocoons," says the blonde dynamo who began the tented look in furnishings.

Restaurants, clubs, yachts, health spas and homes are being swaddled in tents, upholstered walls and nostalgic accessories. Mrs. McCluskey also sees a revival of lace curtains and peach bedrooms, all part of a romantic scene. And in the dining room the use of multi-tables will provide intimacy and coziness for home dinner parties.

Whether it is a pied-a-terre in New York City or a 54-room Tudor mansion in Greenwich, Conn., or hotels in Hamburg, London, Nassau and Caracas each place Mrs. McCluskey has decorated with that romantic look will have its stamp of individuality.

It may take a cultural twist as it did in the lobby of the Oaks Hotel in Houston, Tex., where the walls are decorated in 18th century art bought at local art galleries. It might be an old German look for a hotel in Hamburg, a hunting lodge look for a hotel-motel in Toronto.

Years ago when she began the tented look, it went into the bar of the Regency Hotel in New York. More recently a striped tent "reminiscent of the lavish field headquarters of Wellington" was used in the dining room of the newly built Churchill in London.

The restaurant Le Pavillon has been redone with a tent of grey, red and white stripes with romantic banquettes and alcoves. And a recently reopened night club, El Morrocco, was given the piece-de-resistance of romantic intrigue—a Casbah room swathed from ceiling to floor in bright paisleys.

The American Stock Exchange, where she decorated four restaurants, one frequented by women has murals reminiscent of old day liners, curlicue Thonet chairs, gingerbread bric-a-brac, old lamps and Victorian glass.

Men like her decoration because it isn't frilly. Women like it because the backgrounds flatter their fashion and makeup. She uses red, a flattering color for women, in many man-frequented public places.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

(© 1972 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: My mother is 68. She's been a widow for nearly two years and she is driving me crazy. She telephones me at home and at work at least 12 times a day for absolutely no reason!

All she does is take tranquilizers and watch television. She stays in her nightgown all day long. She does no housework whatsoever. My 10-year-old runs her vacuum. [It's too hard for her to push.] I change her bed for her. [Her arms are too short.] I write her checks for her. [Writing makes her nervous.] I hope you get the picture.

Don't tell me to take her to a doctor. I have taken her to four since Dad died, and they all say there is nothing physically wrong with her. She makes such a pest of herself on the phone, no doctor wants her as a patient.

My husband says if she doesn't lay off he will quit his job and move us out of town. My mother says if we ever move she will sell her house and move with us. [She's the only reason we would move in the first place!]

She blew a lot of money Dad left her on remodeling and refurbishing, but thank heavens the rest of it is tied up so she can't spend it all foolishly.

Please, please help me. I think I'm having a nervous breakdown.

EXHAUSTED

DEAR EXHAUSTED: Your mother may be physically well, but she sounds lonely, bored, slightly childish, and hungry for attention.

But from your letter, I think your mother is in better shape than you are. See a doctor about your nerves, and get professional help in learning how to cope with your mother. [Family Service offers excellent counseling.] If you run away from your mother, you will feel guilty. Stay there and work it out. After all, she IS your mother.

DEAR ABBY: Here is the situation: There is an obviously pregnant unmarried high school girl who is attending classes.

The principal called her in and suggested that she attend evening classes instead. The girl hired a lawyer to secure her rights. Successful in this, the pregnant but unmarried girl continues to attend regular classes. This has created quite a stir. Some of the more conservative teachers have threatened to walk out unless the girl quits.

Have you a solution for this problem? Perhaps some good pregnant answer.

PORTLAND, ORE.

DEAR PORT: The only problem at this point is what to do if the teachers walk out. The solution: Hire substitutes.

DEAR ABBY: My husband recently told our children [elementary school age] that he "sold" his high school notes to other students. I feel that this is nothing to be proud of and I would not want our children to follow in his footsteps.

My husband maintains that it is no different from buying published notes in bookstores.

Am I stuffy, or a sucker, to feel that personal integrity is to be strived for always? Or am I all wet?

MOTHER IN CAL.

DEAR MOTHER: You're all right. Your husband is all wet.

CONFIDENTIAL TO A. G. M. IN TACOMA, WASHINGTON: EVERYBODY has fantasies! Please tell me, how can MY fantasies possibly hurt YOU?

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

For Abby's new booklet, "What Teen-Agers Want to Know," send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069.

Frontrunners Just Remain So

New Hampshire is the first presidential primary of each election year, and for that reason it receives an unusual amount of attention from political observers.

It is possible that the results of the primary are watched too closely and weighed too heavily as political forecasters look to the upcoming election.

The biggest news to come out of this year's primary was the surprising showing of Sen. George McGovern. Still, with 96 percent of the vote counted McGovern had only 29,707 voters or 37 percent of the Democratic votes cast. Muskie had 38,330 or 48 percent of the vote.

Muskie, of course, had been expected to run much stronger since he is a New England neighbor of New Hampshire, but the McGovern support among the voters in that state was more than had been predicted earlier in the campaign.

Of course, New Hampshire provided the surprise of the 1968 campaign when Eugene McCarthy ran stronger than expected and subsequently President Johnson announced that he would not be a candidate for reelection.

There was nothing in this year's results to make any of the front runners withdraw, however, and it is likely that as the campaign moves on the New Hampshire results will be considered of little importance.

Federal Funds Aiding Payrolls

By BRYAN HAISLIP
RALEIGH, N.C. — More than 500 employees on local government payrolls in North Carolina are being paid with federal funds under the Emergency Employment Act.

They are policemen, clerks, engineers, county managers, skilled and semi-state for administration.

Retention Rate Good
Since the first contract for the program was signed last August, around 60 of those hired have been terminated. Babcock described that as a good retention rate.

He advised local governments to show more creativity in job development and consideration for training possibilities.

"Sometimes the towns are not hiring people they need because they set their standards too high when just a little on-the-job training of the prospects would solve the problem," he explained.

While present grants are for a one-year duration, Babcock is optimistic that it will be continued at the present level at least for one more year. Bills are now before Congress to appropriate the necessary funds, he said.

Compliance Urged
Babcock cautioned that local governments must follow the guidelines laid down for the program. Those units which stray from the path, he warned, "may find the employees they have hired to be in non-compliance ... and this could result in them having to refund money they already have spent."

He said this was particularly true in cases where local governmental units have hired persons who were not previously unemployed, where new employees had worked for the town or the state either full-time or part-time preceding their new jobs under EEA funds, or where their individual employment income had been above minimum income levels established by the Office of Economic Opportunities.

"What it means, in effect," Babcock said, "is that some of the small towns who made a list of employee needs in order to get their share of the funds are not abiding by the guidelines or are skirting them. The EEA funds are geared to those persons unemployed or underemployed and to veterans out of work. We urge all our recipients of the funds to keep this in mind."

The average salary of those employed to date, said Babcock, "is about $5,000 per position, which is about what we figured and will within the guidelines set down."

The range is all the way from the minimum wage level to the permissible maximum of $12,000 per year. Not many fall into the higher category, he added.

Local units should expect to pay about one-half the salaries from budgeted funds once the program is well established. "So far," Babcock said, "most units don't anticipate any problem with this."

Population Center Of N.C. Gradually Shifts

The center of North Carolina's population is now near the Randolph County town of Whynot. It was 4.55 miles eastnortheast of the little town, according to the Carolina Population Center in Chapel Hill.

The population center shifted with the new census which now shows a state population of 5.5 million.

Well, why not pick Whynot as the new population center?

Nixon's Secret 'Coordinator'

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Frederic V. Malek, the tough young hatchet-man on the White House staff, is playing a secret role in President Nixon's reelection campaign as clandestine agent of the powerful H. R. (Bob) Haldeman.

Officially, Malek remains on the White House payroll as a personnel manager, totally removed from the campaign. In fact, he is playing a key role in the affairs of the Committee to Reelect the President, located one block from the White House, despite his lack of any political experience.

Malek's unpublicized function is to "coordinate" campaign activities for youth, the aged and other special groups. But in reality he is the eyes and ears of White House staff chief Haldeman.

Indeed, although the reelection campaign is supposed to be under John Mitchell's control, Haldeman's influence is present through Malek and other agents. Accordingly, any free discussion by Nixon campaign operatives that might suggest something less than Mr. Nixon's infallibility is inhibited by the certainty that a disapproving Haldeman will hear all.

Nor has Malek, a self-made millionaire of 34 and graduate of West Point and the Harvard business school, displayed the flexibility essential to campaign politics. He was the White House agent in the peremptory dismissal of top Interior Department officials in 1970 and the FBI investigation of CBS News correspondent Daniel Schorr last year.

Muskie's Ghost Diary
Sen. Edmund S. Muskie is considering hiring a onetime ghostwriter for Republican Gov. Nelson Rockefeller of New York at $1,000 a week to keep and write the Senator's personal "journal" of the 1972 campaign.

Although a professionally ghosted Muskie journal might seem to violate the "Trust Muskie" campaign theme, Doubleday & Co. is eagerly pushing the project. The "journal" would be the third book in a lucrative three-book contract Muskie signed with Doubleday.

In a Feb. 22 letter to Muskie, confidential aide Donald E. Nicoll outlined the project with assurance that "the gathering of information and the writing would not be a direct burden on you."

The ghostwriter, Nicoll tells Muskie, "would have to be trustworthy and discreet, and... modest enough to keep himself out of the book as much as possible. It is, after all, supposed to be your 'journal,' if we do it."

Nicholl's proposed ghost: Rodney Campbell, a transplanted Englishman who ghosted Gov. Rockefeller's "Our Environment Can Be Saved" (Doubleday, 1970). The problem is Campbell's fee: $1,000 a week plus expenses, or around $50,000, "which is a sizable chunk from the (Doubleday) advance," laments Nicoll. Negotiations are still in progress.

House Busing Vote
Working strictly behind the scenes, the Justice Department dispatched three legal technicians to the House to get it to "instruct" its conferees on anti-busing amendments to the big education bill last week.

The effort succeeded beyond the Administration's wildest hopes. The vote to "instruct" the House conferees in the forthcoming House-Senate conference was a whopping 272 to 139. If the stringent House anti-busing provisions are not accepted by the Senate conferees the compromise bill probably will now be rejected by the House.

The Justice Department's technicians, apparently aided by White House lobbyists, persuaded Rep. Albert Quie of Minnesota, ranking Republican on the House

The Empire State Story

HOUSTON—John E. Healy II spoke at more than 200 meetings last year—industry meetings, union meetings, committee meetings—and at many of them he told the story of the Empire State Building.

The story takes only a few paragraphs, but it packs a wallop.

Healy is the handsome, hefty, third-generation builder from Wilmington, Del., who is the outgoing president of the Associated General Contractors of America. The AGC met here last week in its fifty-third annual convention. The 5,000 delegates went home with a renewed determination to restore some sense to their deeply troubled industry and they took with them the story of the Empire State.

The world's greatest skyscraper broke ground on Jan. 22, 1930. At peak employment, 3,400 men were working to erect 60,000 tons of steel, to lay 10 million bricks, to install 70 miles of water piping, and to connect 3,500 miles of telephone cable. The 102 stories went up at an average of four-and-a-half stories per week. On May 1, 1931, just one year and 98 days later, President Hoover dedicated the building and tenants moved in.

The same structure today, says Healy, would require three to three-and-a-half years to complete.

Granted, the Empire State Building lacked air conditioning, which a contemporary building would demand, but the man-hours required to install air conditioning have been more than offset by the new tools and new techniques of the past 40 years. The grim truth, in Healy's view, is that productivity in the building industry today is less than half what it was then. And why? "The work ethic has been lost."

It has been lost, he believes, through the power of avaricious trade unions, and through the weakness of contractors willing to buy labor peace at any price. The process has grossly inflated building costs, and it has sadly diminished the dignity of working men.

Members of the AGC are eager to have their troubles known. Day in and day out, their experience confirms the picture painted in a hard-hitting report last month by Engineering Views-Record. In 1926, a Chicago mason laid 600 blocks a day; today two masons are required for the same work, and they lay 100 blocks a day. In the days when concrete was finished by hand, a contractor figured on 2,000 square feet of finished concrete per man per day; today, with all kinds of power tools, the rate is 600 square feet.

The magazine cited the sorry example of a power plant job that required several small gasoline-powered generators. The union successfully demanded that each generator be watched by an operating engineer, an electrician, and a pipefitter. The operating engineer got $300 to $400 a week "for starting once or twice a day a gas engine smaller than those on many home lawn mowers." Each electrician received the same kind of money "for pushing

Other Editors Say No Thanks, Edward

(Richmond Times-Dispatch)

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., has tried his best to make a case for American intervention in Northern Ireland. In a memorable Senate speech of last October, he cited the indisputably great contributions made to this nation by Irish immigrants, and even stirringly reminded all that "the wearing of the green knows no narrow boundary of religion or nationality," which is certainly true on good old St. Patrick's Day, at least.

More ominously, Sen. Kennedy went so far at a Congressional hearing last week as to suggest possible rationales for sending American troops to Ulster. One supposes some of the men being withdrawn from Vietnam could be reassigned to the Irish Conflict. The Green Berets would be stylistically smashing.

Well, Mr. Kennedy's puerile antics may appeal to some Irish-American partisans who feel vicariously caught up in Ulster's tragic events (although the extent of such sentiment is open to doubt). But to the number one Irishman in Ireland — John M. Lynch, Prime Minister of the Irish Republic — Mr. Kennedy's proposed American solution represents unwarranted, illogical and dangerous advice.

Mr. Lynch told an interviewer for The Washington Post last week he opposes Sen. Kennedy's demand for an immediate withdrawal of British troops from Ulster because the soldiers serve the purpose of protecting both the minority-Catholic and majority-Protestant communities there — from each other.

Responsible leaders in Dublin, London and Belfast believe a precipitate pullout by the British would cause already aroused emotions to boil over into a civil war in which the half-million Catholics would stand to suffer more heavily than the one million Protestants.

Mr. Lynch believes time is needed for a cooling of passions and peaceful negotiations of a political settlement. As for Sen. Kennedy's do-it-now plan, Mr. Lynch was quoted as remarking: "I don't think he understands the situation as fully as we do." Are you listening, Mr. Kennedy?

Devaluation Termed Not Enough

By ELMER ROESSNER
A former chairman of First National City Bank has raised a point that only a few Europeans bankers have made: that the United States' devaluation of gold is not enough.

George S. Moore, writing in the current issue of Vision, the European business magazine, said the dollar should be devalued again by 50 per cent or there will be recurring monetary crisis. He said that the dollar devaluation by increasing the price of gold from $35 to $38 a troy ounce is an attempt to "patch up the system with sticking plaster." To compensate for the worldwide shortage of gold, its price must be increased "somewhere between 50 and 100 per cent, enough to give us 15 or 20 years without one crisis after another."

He termed "ridiculous" suggestions that countries turn over their gold and monetary reserves to the International Monetary Fund in exchange for standard drawing rights.

The Bretton Woods agreement worked out 25

years ago would be workable today if it were carried out. Under that agreement, when there was a shortage of gold, there should be a uniform increase in currency values. And under the agreement, he added, countries in fundamental disequilibrium must take fiscal or monetary steps to correct the situation. The disequilibrium in the U.S. remains uncorrected. No steps have been taken toward the convertibility of the dollar. "This works against confidence and the stability of the system."

Moore, who has retired from banking but is a director of U.S. Steel, Union Pacific and other giant companies, said only realistic but unlikely solution is to stay with the only real monetary base we now have: gold, "by raising the price so there will be enough chips for the game and by making the dollar again convertible into gold for central banks at the new parity."

That the dollar may be heading to another devaluation has been discussed in this column earlier. The enormous outstanding indebtedness of the U.S., the continuing multibillion-dollar federal deficit, the rise of state and local indebtedness and the persistent rise of wages and prices despite what is called a "freeze," and government action to increase prices for its services are basically inflationary.

Trite Phrase Game

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — Do you want to play a new game of trite phrases — which practically all of us have, since they seem to make up a major portion of our daily language. The game is easy and almost any number can play. First, you fill a pitcher with Martinis into every player's cup. The game usually goes faster if you use Martinis rather than molasses. Everybody now stretches out on the floor. Then one player asks a question, a question which any other player must answer by turning it into a recognizable cliché.

Here are a couple of examples:

Q. What kind of instrument did the mugger strike his victim with?
A. A blunt instrument.

Q. What kind of a bystander saw the crime committed?
A. An innocent bystander. Simple game, isn't it? But if the Martini pitcher doesn't run dry, the game can last forever. Certainly the supply of clichés won't run out.

Here are a few more examples just to get everyone into the spirit of the party:

Q. What did the mayor point to his record with?
A. He pointed to it with pride.

Q. What did he view the tactics of his opponents with?
A. He viewed them with alarm.

Q. What was it the critic couldn't do with the book that delighted him so?
A. He couldn't put it down.

Q. How would you describe a 45-year-old bookkeeper who ran off with his neighbor's wife?
A. As a gay Lothario or a middle-aged Romeo.

Q. And what about her?
A. She was socially prominent.

Q. How were they linked?
A. They were linked romantically.

Q. What has the political pot been doing again?
A. It is boiling or bubbling again.

Q. What kind of story does a poor boy have who becomes a millionaire?
A. A Horatio-Alger-like story, or a rags-to-riches story.

Q. What kind of bore would really enjoy playing this game?
A. A crashing bore.

On the other hand—if you're good at it—you'll be the life of the party, become a legend in your own time, and have more fun than a barrel of monkeys.

Quote

"Advertising reduces selling time in any type of store. The potential buyer of an advertised product is always sold when he enters a store; he knows what he wants and where he can get it." —Three Forks (Mont.) Herald.

While the decline in the purchasing power of the dollar has slowed a bit, the decline still persists. All these factors must eventually increase the price of U.S. exports until we start losing sales. Then, as Moore predicts, there will be another devaluation.

Hike In Freight Rates Not Killed, Just Postponed

Last week, describing inflationary forces at work, it was pointed out that the railroads had asked the Interstate Commerce Commission for selective increases in freight rates averaging 4.1 per cent. This, it was asserted, would tend to increase the price of everything moved by rail. Since then, the ICC has refused the increase, but it told the railroads that they could file for selective increases only on 45 days notice.

Strength For Today

NATURE OF TRUE PROGRESS

Usually a business forges ahead into prominence and prosperity if those in charge of its affairs are wise enough to junk obsolete equipment. Cost of production is always high in those plants where machinery is old and out-moded. The manufacturer who is always alert to learn new ways of doing things and who does not hesitate at any time to change his processes if by so doing he can improve his product and reduce his cost of production, is the man who will probably be in business long after his competitors have failed.

This spirit of enterprise works in every field. I work, for instance, in education. Schools and colleges that are willing to make any change necessary to bring curriculum and methods up to the strictest demands of modern life are sure to find many students knocking at their doors. Some churches are operated as churches were a hundred years ago. Many a church closes its doors and gives up because a new class of people preempt the immediate neighborhood. But this should be a challenge to the needs of these new neighbors.

Don't be afraid of the new because it is new. When old ways of doing things fail to fit modern needs, do not hesitate to scrap obsolete equipment and ways of doing things. Time moves on, and we have to move on with it if we want to escape being trampled upon by the marching feet of those who are truly progressive.

Power Reserves To Be Critical

RALEIGH (AP) — Carolina Power & Light Co. President Shearon Harris says power reserves in the Carolinas and Virginia will be critical this summer. He put much of the blame on environmentalists whose demands are delaying new power plant openings.

Harris outlined the power supply situation in the subregion Monday before a conference of utilities commissioners and power company representatives from North Carolina and Virginia.

He said power reserves should range from 11.4 per cent in June to 12.9 per cent in August. The Federal Power Commission considers 20 per cent a comfortable minimum reserve.

Harris said the power reserves have shrunk during the last few years, largely because of the increasing use of air conditioners during the peak summer months.

Total reserves of 2,258 megawatts, or 11.4 per cent, are projected for the Virginia-Carolinas subregion in June, he said. This should move up to 12.3 per cent in July when Duke Power Co's Cliffside No. 5 unit comes on the line and 200 more megawatts are purchased from outside power sources.

The peak summer load is anticipated in August, he said, when the subregion will be pulling 20,881 megawatts and should have a 12.9 per cent margin.

But to achieve that margin, he said, Virginia Electric & Power Co's Surry No. 1 nuclear unit will have to come on the line as scheduled.

Harris said if the plant's commercial service is delayed as much as one month, the total power resources of the subregion will drop to a reserve capacity of only 9.1 per cent.

He put much of the blame for the situation on environmentalists and recent court decisions strengthening provisions of the National Environmental Policy Act and the Refuse Act of 1899.

Harris said he would testify before the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy in Washington Thursday in support of interim legislation that would ease environmental impact statement requirements which are stalling several nuclear power plant projects.

Even if the industry gets this legislation, he said, it still will have to provide impact statements before the Army Corps of Engineers can grant permits for the plants to discharge hot waste water.

Harris said this requirement is an "intolerable situation" that must be relieved — either by changing or ignoring the 1899 law.

He said it would take the Corps well into the next century to process impact statement from the 20,000 discharge points that will need permits. CP&L doesn't plan to halt operations to wait for permits, he said.

Utilities Commissioner Hugh A. Wells objected to Harris' statement that the threatened power shortage in parts of the country is a consumers' problem that has been irritated by too fast a movement in interpreting the National Environmental Policy Act.

Wells said the problem is also that of industry. He said the first concern should be for the nation's natural resources.

He said air conditioning is not necessary to the "operation of the country."

He told Harris that he would be willing to forego air conditioning in his house this summer if necessary. He told the executive that environmentalists and the power industry should work toward a "compatible outlook" on resources conservation.

Sues To Place Name On Ballot

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Robert T. Daly, who describes himself as a former Seattle, Wash., school system psychologist but now unemployed, has filed suit to stop North Carolina's May 6 presidential preference primary unless his name is placed on the ballot as a Democrat candidate for vice president.

The suit, filed Feb. 28 in U.S. Middle District Court in Greensboro, says that Daly corresponded with state officials in January and received a copy of the new presidential primary law. It makes no provision for vice presidential candidates on the ballot.

Fire Damage For Mansion

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A fire Monday damaged the landmark Bellamy Mansion, built in 1859 and used as headquarters for Union troops who occupied Wilmington in 1865. Authorities say the possibility of arson is being investigated.

No one lived in the structure, which had an antique shop in the basement.

The owner of the building, Mrs. Emma Bellamy Williams Herndon, estimated damage as $6,000 to the structure and $69,000 to the antiques.

She said plans of a nonprofit foundation to restore the mansion still would be carried out. Firemen said the house appeared to be structurally sound.

Five fire trucks from the main station two blocks away answered the 2:30 a.m. alarm and had the flames under control in 15 minutes. The fire was spotted by a passerby.

Police and firemen said several interior areas appeared to have been saturated with gasoline and ignited, and that evidence was being analyzed at the laboratory of the State Bureau of Investigation in Raleigh.

The mansion is regarded as an excellent example of architecture of the Late Classic Revival period. It has a massive Corinthian portico around three sides.

Daly accompanied the suit with a petition asking for court-appointed counsel. He said he is without adequate funds to hire lawyers, that he is unemployed, and has been able to earn only about $2,000 a year since 1965.

He asked that North Carolina be ordered to cooperate with other states to develop a uniform system of primaries, political conventions and general elections.

The court papers allege "the present procedure of selecting the nominee for vice president at the national conventions as an arbitrary choice to balance the ticket is a violation of the constitutional rights of the citizen to vote for the vice president in the presidential primaries."

The suit, which asks that Gov. Bob Scott and other persons involved in the primary be made defendants, has not been answered. It is in the pending-case files.

Daly said that in Washington state he had been a precinct committeeman and twice a candidate for state office. He said he "fulfills the qualifications for vice president, being 43 years old and born a citizen in Chicago."

the wire plugs into the sockets of the machines whenever they were moved." The contractor said he never did discover what the pipefitter did.

Such examples are legion. A billion-dollar project in Albany has suffered repeated delays because of a dispute between teamsters and operating engineers: Who is to hold the nozzle of a fuel truck? On high-rise jobs, demanding elevators, one union member has to ride up when men are lifted, another union member goes for a ride when equipment is lifted. If a worker carrying a toolbox has to be hoisted, both union representatives go along. On a motel construction job in Philadelphia, electricians and carpenters quarreled over the installation of a chain-hung ceiling lamp. In the end, each union got a piece of the action: The carpenter screwed two hooks in the ceiling and draped the chain; the electrician put the plug in a wall socket. Cost: $40 per installation.

Many labor leaders privately agree that this nonsense has to stop. Union members themselves are suffering, as many contractors turn to the open shop. Jobs are vanishing as pre-cast concrete and pre-assembled units of steel and aluminum replace old structural techniques. The contractors who met here in Houston gave Healy an ovation when he insisted that with the unions' help, "or without it," productivity and morale must be restored. If the builders will match their convention zeal with hometown determination, the old concept of a fair day's work for a fair day's pay may yet be revived. It's what the unions have been asking all along.

Education Committee, to accept the "instruction" strategy. Though personally opposing two of the three amendments in the House bill, and voting against the motion to instruct, Quie did nothing behind the scenes to thwart the Administration's strategy.

A footnote: The explanation for this undercover operation was political. With busing a hot issue, White House strategists wanted a strong anti-busing vote to offset the one-vote loss of an equally strong anti-busing amendment in the Senate two weeks ago. The House vote gives President Nixon (not personally involved in the House action) a stronger political base for his own anti-busing strategy.

Florida Polling
A final telephone survey of Florida voters by pollster Oliver Quayle just before New Hampshire showed Sen. Edmund Muskie dropping six points to fourth place.

The survey (taken for Sen. Henry M. Jackson) has Gov. George Wallace in front with 35 per cent. In a virtual three-way dead heat are: Sen. Humphrey, 17 per cent (down one point); Jackson, 16 per cent (up one point); Muskie, 14 per cent.

Marquette Back Into NCAA Field Again After Lackey Signs Paper

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Marquette's basketball team, its once brilliant season first bruised and then nearly crushed to death by the tentacles of the pro leagues' bidding war, has been given a second chance in its quest for the national collegiate title.

The National Collegiate Athletic Association reinstated the seventh-ranked Warriors to tournament play Monday night after Capt. Bob Lackey signed an affidavit stating he had not engaged the services of an agent to represent him in bargaining with the pros.

The NCAA had asked Lackey to sign the disclaimer before Saturday's Midwest subregional game at Knoxville, Tenn. Lackey was willing to sign, but decided against it when Coach Al McGuire suggested he first obtain legal counsel.

Lackey scored 20 points Saturday as the Warriors crushed Ohio University 73-49 in easily their best showing since star center Jim Chones left the team to turn pro. The NCAA announced Sunday it was suspending Marquette from tournament play, but left open an avenue of appeal which Marquette used successfully.

McGuire said he thought reinstatement meant the NCAA and its eligibility committee "realized we weren't trying to hide anything. Now it's just on to the next crisis for us, I guess."

McGuire didn't know it at the time, but the Warriors' first crisis was spawned when Jim McDaniels jumped the American Basketball Association last month and signed with Seattle of the rival National Basketball Association.

The ABA, stung, eyed Chones, a 6-foot-11 junior whose widowed mother works in a Racine, Wis., restaurant to support her family. When the New York Nets offered an estimated $1.5 million in cash and told Chones to sign now or it would rescind the offer, Chones signed.

The Lackey incident came on the heels of Charlie Scott, the ABA's leading scorer, quitting the Virginia Squires.

Lackey was asked to sign the affidavit in a show of determination by the NCAA to avoid another Howard Porter case.

Porter led Villanova to second place in the NCAA tournament last year, but the school had to forfeit $76,000 in receipts when it was found he had signed a pro contract months earlier.

Lackey signed a statement affirming his eligibility at a meeting Monday involving Marquette officials and Warren Brown, an assistant executive director of the NCAA. Marquette's reinstatement was announced three hours later.

"I'm happy for Bob Lackey especially and I'm happy for my other ball players because they'll have a chance to prove their ability," McGuire said.

Coach Jim Snyder, whose Ohio U. team would have played Kentucky in the Midwest regional semifinals at Dayton, Ohio, Thursday night had Marquette not been reinstated, said he was "glad it's over."

"I wasn't necessarily disappointed when I heard," Snyder said. "It would have been nice to have another shot and go out a little better than we did. But I'm sure the better team is there."

Kentucky Coach Adolph Rupp, whose Wildcats have lost two of their last three games with Marquette—all in tournament play—said reinstatement of Marquette was "fine with me."

Solon Says No Merger Action

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—The Richmond Times-Dispatch quoted U. S. Sen. William B. Spong Jr., D-Va., Monday night as saying there likely will be no congressional action to permit merger of the two professional basketball leagues until the new Congress convenes next January.

Spong said the workload of Congress in a presidential election year, plus the ever-deepening inquiry into pro sports franchises by Sen. Sam Ervin, D-N.C., make quick passage almost impossible.

"From the standpoint of legislation moving, this bill is not going to pass this year," Spong told the newspaper.

The bill to allow merger of the National Basketball Association and the American Basketball Association is being sponsored in the Senate by Sen. John Tunney, D-Calif., and Sen. Roman Hruska, R-Neb.

The measure now is tied up on Ervin's antitrust and monopoly subcommittee of the Committee on the Judiciary.

The NBA and the ABA, weary after years of fighting a money war for players, have in effect asked Congress to protect them from themselves.

The war has increased in intensity in recent weeks since the signings by NBA teams of two ABA stars, Jim McDaniels of the Carolina Cougars and Charlie Scott of the Virginia Squires, and the ABA New York Nets' signing of Marquette undergraduate Jim Chones.

"The removal of the Washington Senators and the circumstances surrounding their move to Texas has focused attention on all professional sports owners," said Spong, an enthusiastic sports fan. "Localities ought to be protected from some of these owners."

Scott To Play For Suns Tonite

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Charlie Scott of the American Basketball Association Virginia Squires will wear the uniform of the National Basketball Association Phoenix Suns here Wednesday night, Suns general manager Jerry Colangelo said Monday.

Charging that Squires owner Earl Foreman was in default on several clauses in his contract, and had reneged on a promise to pay off a $26,000 loan for him, Scott waltzed away from a lucrative contract with the Squires last week.

The Suns obtained National Basketball Association rights to Scott in a trade with the Boston Celtics for "cash and future consideration," Colangelo said.

The Celts had drafted the former North Carolina "All-America in the seventh round of the collegiate draft two years ago. He shared ABA Rookie-of-the-Year Honors with Kentucky's Dan Issel, after averaging 27.1 points a game and leading the Squires to a 55-29 record and the Eastern Division championship last season.

Scott, 23, has been averaging about 35 points this year, and established a single-season ABA record of 2,524 points.

Colangelo promised to introduce his new star at a mid-morning press conference today.

Colangelo rated Scott in the same class with Jerry West, Oscar Robertson and Dave Bing.

"He's very fast and can really shoot," the general manager said.

Squires coach Al Bianchi also appears to have respect for Scott, despite his statement last week that he didn't care if he "never came back."

Bianchi and Foreman said the club plans to file a million-dollar lawsuit against Scott, charging breach of contract and asking that he be enjoined from playing with another club.

"If he signs with an NBA club," Foreman said, "we will ... institute a suit against the club and the NBA."

"If he does sign, we will be convinced there is a conspiracy in the NBA to induce ABA players to breach their contracts."

Swimmers Did Well

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — East Carolina University finished 14th in the Eastern Seaboard Swimming and Diving Championships which concluded Saturday night at Yale University. The Pirates picked up 22 points in the meet. The position was up one for the Bucs from last year, when they placed 15th.

In Saturday's activities, Paul Schiffl failed to place in the 1,650-yard freestyle, but set a new freshmen and varsity record for the Pirates with his time of 17:45.76.

Jim Griffin, in finishing eighth in the 100-yard freestyle, qualified for the nationals. His time set new ECU varsity record in :48.05.

The 400-yard freestyle relay team of Paul Trevisan, Bobby Vail, Wayne Norris and Griffin finished 10th in a time of 3:16.

Griffin joined Trevisan, who qualified in the 50 freestyle, and Jack Morrow, who has qualified in the one and three-meter diving, in heading for the NCAA Nationals, to be held this weekend in West Point, N.Y.

Brewers Hopes Not Improved

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — The Milwaukee Brewers have shifted to the American League's East Division, with few illusions of doing much better than their last place finish of 1971 in the weaker AL West.

At the same time, most baseball men agree Manager Dave Bristol has by far his best talent since the former Seattle Pilots moved here three seasons ago and became the Brewers.

Moreover, the front office believes acquisition of Billy Conigliaro, Joe Lahoud, George Scott and Brock Davis will bolster an attack which showed only a .229 batting average last year.

The Brewers are counting on stronger hitting a more stabilized lineup and the greater attractiveness of the AL East schedule to improve attendance, which dipped 203,289 last year to 731,531.

The price for obtaining Scott, Conigliaro and Lahoud from Boston included Marty Pattin (14-14) and Lew Krause (8-12, 2.94 earned run average), two mainstays of a pitching staff which had a 3.38 ERA.

Bristol is counting on two other Boston castoffs, 1967 CY Young Award Winner Jim Lonborg and Ken Brett, to strengthen the pitching. Lonborg was 10-7 at Boston and finally showed flashes of the form with which he pitched the Red Sox to the pennant five years ago.

Brett, a hard-throwing left-hander, was 0-3 at Boston. He has been rated a potential star, however, and Bristol thinks he can make it big if he improves his curve and learns to pace himself.

Other teams coveted Skip Lockwood (10-15), Bill Parsons (13-17) and Jim Slaton (10-8) all winter, but baseball operations chief Frank "Trader" Lane resisted all overtures.

Lockwood, oldest of the three at 25, doubled his victory total last year and, with stronger hitting behind him, could win at least 15. So could Parsons and Slaton, if they overcome the sophomore jinx.

The Brewers had baseball's top fireman last year in Ken Sanders, with seven victories, a league-high 31 saves and 1.92 earned run average.

But since Sanders also appeared in 82 games and finished a league record 76, the problem is to keep him from being overworked.

McDaniels Case To Fed Courts

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — Attorneys for the Carolina Cougars told the Washington Supreme Court Monday they want to pursue suits against Jim McDaniels in federal courts.

So a hearing scheduled Tuesday on the pro basketball player's status was canceled.

McDaniels was a Cougar in the American Basketball Association until last month when he jumped to the Seattle Super-sonics of the rival National Basketball Association. The ABA team first went to state court in North Carolina and then to a Washington court, asking that he be kept from playing in the NBA.

The North Carolina court issued an injunction to that effect, which is now being appealed. But in Washington a judge ordered Carolina not to interfere with McDaniels. That was the case being appealed to the Washington Supreme Court.

Other suits are pending in federal courts in North Carolina and Georgia.

Tar Heels Begin Work For Fifth Tournament

By KEN ALYTA
Associated Press Sports Writer
CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — It was back to work today for North Carolina's basketball team as it prepared for its fifth—that's right, fifth—tournament of the season.

Coach Dean Smith gave his Atlantic Coast Conference champions Monday off. They had afternoon workouts scheduled today and Wednesday before departure Wednesday night from Raleigh-Durham Airport for Thursday's NCAA Eastern Regional semifinal game with South Carolina at Morgantown, W. Va.

The tournament grind began in mid-December when the Tar Heels won the two-night North Carolina Big Four Tournament at the Greensboro Coliseum. They opened with a 99-76 rout of Wake Forest and the next night demolished North Carolina State 99-68.

A week later they were in Spain for the International Christmas Tournament in Madrid. They ran through three opponents, two top teams from Spain and one from Chile, to win. The three games are regarded by the NCAA as exhibitions and do not count in the Tar Heels' 23-4 record.

To break up the tournament monotony, North Carolina hopped back to Charlotte, N.C., two days after winning in Madrid and paused just long enough to whip Harvard 96-78.

The Tar Heels then went down to New Orleans to win the Christmas week Sugar Bowl tournament. They slugged St. Joseph's of Philadelphia 93-77 and beat Bradley 75-69.

Then believe it or not, they went almost two months without a tournament game.

But they got back in the groove last Friday and Saturday when they disposed of Duke and Maryland to win the ACC title and a chance, glory be, to play in another tournament—the NCAA.

Latest NCAA figures showed they were the top shooting team in the country, going into the ACC tourney with a .532 accuracy figure against .509 for runnerup South Carolina.

McDowell Sees 20

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — "If I don't win 20 games, I should be investigated," said Sam McDowell.

The San Francisco Giants' new left-hander made the spring training boast in a hotel lobby meeting with General Manager Frank Lane of the Milwaukee Brewers, one of the American League teams no longer threatened by Sudden Sam's fastball.

"I like his attitude," says Giants Manager Charlie Fox, who has liked the big pitcher's fastball since scouting him as a high school prospect in Pittsburgh, 13 years ago.

However, a day after praising McDowell's attitude, Fox had to ask him why he'd missed practice a day before his first scheduled exhibition game appearance. McDowell explained he was sick but told Fox he still wanted to take his turn.

The Chicago Cubs roughed up McDowell last Friday for eight runs in his first inning as a Giant pitcher.

"My shoulder is always stiff in the spring," said McDowell. "I won't start throwing really hard until about my third time out."

McDowell's optimism is based on San Francisco's run-producing lineup, especially with Willie McCovey healthy again after off-season knee surgery. The 29-year-old hurler, in eight full seasons with the Cleveland Indians, was a 20-game winner only once.

"When you give up one run in Cleveland, you might as well give up the game," says McDowell, who brings a 2.99 career earned run average to the National League, along with 2,159 strikeouts.

McDowell sat out part of 1971 because of a contract dispute, which involved incentive clauses offered by the Indians and ruled illegal by Commissioner Bowie Kuhn. He finished the season admittedly overweight, with a 13-17 record and a promise from the Indians they would try their best to trade him.

No Favorites In NIT Action

NEW YORK (AP) — Jacksonville and Maryland have the big guns, Virginia, Princeton, Oral Roberts and Syracuse the high scorers and most everyone else has a chance in the 35th National Invitation basketball tournament.

That was the majority opinion Monday to a drum-beating luncheon for the nation's oldest post-season tourney, which begins Friday at Madison Square Garden with one of its stronger fields in recent history.

"Compared to Maryland, we're pretty small," said St. Joseph's, Pa., Coach Jack McKinney. "But then again, so is most everyone else."

McKinney's team meets the Atlantic Coast Conference Terapins in one of Saturday afternoon's first-round double-headers. Davidson of the Southern Conference plays the first game of the twin bill against Syracuse, led by explosive Greg Kohls.

Virginia, paced by high-scoring Barry Parkhill, meets Lafayette in the tourney curtain-raiser Friday night. Fordham plays the second game against Jacksonville, led by 7-foot center David Brent.

In a Saturday night double-header, John Guqua, the second leading scorer in the country, leads Oral Roberts against Memphis State and Missouri plays St. John's, N.Y.

Princeton, powered by sharpshooting Brian Taylor, plays Indiana and Niagara meets Texas-El Paso in a Sunday doubleheader that closes out the first round.

Although Maryland was generally conceded in the early line as the team to beat, there is no odds-on favorite in this well-balanced tourney.

"This is the best field in my memory," says Ben Carnevale, who's on the NIT selection committee.

Big Fights In Sports Now On Baseball Field

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
Associated Press Sports Writer
The National Hockey League has clamped down so hard on brawling that you have to turn to baseball to find a good hockey fight.

And what more logical place to look for a hockey fight under the Florida sun than in the spring training camp of the once-wacky New York Mets?

The altercation between infielder Tim Foli—they don't call him "Crazy Horse" for nothing—and coach Joe Pignatano occurred following an apparent misunderstanding over tickets to a minor league hockey playoff match Sunday night.

Pignatano reportedly asked that eight tickets be left in his name and that of manager Gil Hodges, but when he arrived only two tickets were there.

Foli and some other players were occupying the rest of the seats.

Foli and Pignatano had words before Monday's 9-8 exhibition victory over the Detroit Tigers and each man reportedly threw a punch before coaches Yogi Berra, Eddie Yost and Billy Connors broke it up. Hodges discussed the matter with both combatants and said no disciplinary action would be taken.

But the really bad news for the Mets came when star pitcher Tom Seaver reported stiffness in his shoulder for the second time in three days. Seaver, who was scratched from a scheduled turn on the mound Sunday, threw batting practice instead and the shoulder stiffened again overnight. The Mets say they aren't too concerned...yet.

Meanwhile, the Mets' hitting...er, batting...star was rookie John Milner, who homered in the seventh inning and capped a three-run eighth with an RBI single.

The Los Angeles Dodgers did it with super pitching for the second day in a row. Al Downing, Mike Strahler and Jim Brewer had a tough act to follow—Tommy John, Bill Singer and Pete Richert hurled a one-hitter against Atlanta on Sunday—and they settled for a two-hit 2-1 triumph over the Cincinnati Reds.

The Pittsburgh Pirates broke out of a brief losing streak with a three-run rally in the eighth inning, climaxed by Richie Zisk's two-run homer, for a 6-5 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

The Baltimore Orioles, who managed only one run in each of their previous two contests, scored four times in the third inning and trimmed the Texas Rangers 5-2. Boog Powell stroked a pair of RBI singles.

Newly acquired Lee May rapped out three hits, as did Roger Metzger, as the Houston Astros downed the winless St. Louis Cardinals 4-2. Orlando Cepeda played six innings but didn't really have to test his worrisome knee in Atlanta's 1-0 squeaker over the New York Yankees.

Blue Moon Odom, trying to come back from an elbow ailment and a gunshot wound, worked two scoreless innings against Cleveland but the Indians had already battered Ken Holtzman for all their runs en route to a 7-6 win over Oakland.

The San Diego Padres ripped 13 hits, including home runs by Jerry Morales and Larry Stahl, and pounded San Francisco 9-3. The Chicago Cubs got strong pitching—five scoreless innings from Ferguson Jenkins—and key hits by Jenkins and Ken Rudolph and trounced Milwaukee 12-2.

Two Wildcats Get Trip Home

DAVIDSON, N.C. (AP) — Two starters for the Davidson Wildcats will be returning home to New York when the basketball team begins play in the National Invitation Tournament at 1 p.m. Saturday.

They are guards John Falconi, whose home is in the Bronx, and Mike Sorrentino, from Queens.

Their trip home is free. But to remain longer than 24 hours they have to help Davidson beat Syracuse in the first round. The Wildcats, Southern Conference regular season champions but runnerup to East Carolina in the League tournament, have a 19-8 record to Syracuse's 20-6 mark.

Both New Yorkers are sophomores. Falconi, a graduate of Iona Prep, and Sorrentino, an alumnus of Archbishop Molloy High, have played in Madison Square Garden in preliminaries to Knickerbocker games. Their teams won all those contests.

Both also played in New York — but at St. John's — in the regular season. Davidson beat the Redmen, 88-84 behind Falconi's 24-point effort. Sorrentino scored 11.

Falconi is the Wildcats' leading scorer with a 15.8 average.

The 6-foot-1 Sorrentino has a 10-8 average and leads Davidson in assists.

Falconi 6-foot-5, on the all-conference team, as was teammate Joe Sutter.

But the squad will be in New York without Sutter. Coach Terry Holland revealed Monday that Sutter was committed to an exchange program for a term's study in Mexico and is not enrolled at Davidson this semester.

Sutter, also all-conference, is a 6-foot-6 junior from Marion, Ind., who has started for two years. Holland said sophomore T. Jay Pecorak would replace him.

The problem arose when the NIT did not invite Davidson until Friday, a week after the Southern Conference tournament. Holland said Sutter held off accepting the trip until mid-week, but went ahead when it appeared the Wildcats were to be passed up.

"It was too late to work something out," Holland said. He added, "We are going up there to win the tournament" anyway.

Davidson is practicing daily and will fly to New York at noon Friday.

Long Putt Gives Better Feeling

By BOB GREEN
Associated Press Golf Writer
JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Notes from the pro golf tournament trail:

Rookie Allen Miller says a 30 foot birdie putt at Phoenix turned his thinking around and has made him "feel a lot more comfortable out here."

The 23-year-old Miller had a glossy amateur record at Pensacola, Fla. and the University of Georgia but had his difficulties after graduating from the PGA school at Palm Beach Gardens, Fla., last fall.

"I was pressing, trying to force myself there for a while," the personable young man said.

"Lanny Wadkins (another rookie) got off to that real good start. Well, a lot of people thought I'd get off to a real good start, too. But I'm missing the cut and missing qualifying."

"So I start trying to force myself, trying to make the cut. That's the only thing I'm thinking about."

The change came last month in Phoenix, he said.

"I knew what I had to do to make the cut on that last hole Friday," he said. "I needed a birdie and I made it from 30 feet."

"I felt like I'd won the golf tournament, that I'd won the world."

"I'm a lot more relaxed now. If I hadn't made that putt I might still be fighting it."

The Protour Television Network, which has national television coverage scheduled on seven tour events this year, made its debut in last week's Florida Citrus Open at Orlando.

The new organization also has national coverage scheduled at the greater Jacksonville Open this week, the Greater New Orleans Open, the Danny Thomas-Memphis Classic, Atlanta, Philadelphia and the Western Open.

Veteran television executive Frank Chirkinian is the originator, president and producer-director. Among the commentators are Tom Harmon and former U.S. Open Champion Ken Venturi.

Jerry McGee looked with distaste at the bright green, bush sprig of parsley that decorated his breakfast plate, then flicked it aside.

"I don't need this," he said. "I'll be in the rough enough today."

Frank Beard was discussing his problems on the Western swing.

"I've never yet made expenses out here," said Beard. "By the time I get through taking the wife and kids to Hawaii, I'm $6,000 in the hole."

"I probably shouldn't go. Just shouldn't play."

"But," said Beard, straight-faced as could be, "I feel I owe an obligation to the sponsors. Why, I probably draw four or five people a day. Paid, I mean. Not freebies. Four or five paid."

Top Seeded Win In NAIA Field

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Top-seeded teams in today's second half of the opening round of the NAIA basketball tournament hope the experts are as right as they were about the first half opening games Monday when each of the eight seeded teams posted victories.

Quinnipiac, Conn., 21-8, met Belhaven, Miss., 21-5, and Williamette, Ore., 23-5, played Adams, Colo., State, 17-10, in early action today.

Afternoon games found Augustana, Ill., 23-3, playing Kearney, Neb., State, 18-6; Western Washington, 24-3, taking on Findlay, Ohio, 18-10, and Stephen F. Austin, 27-2 and seeded second in the tourney, clashing with Hillsdale, Mich., 25-7.

In opening round action Monday, top-seeded Eau Claire, Wis., swept past Bishop of Texas 96-65 and Gardner-Webb, N.C., seeded fourth, blasted Eastern Monta., 109-94.

In other games, Ouachita Baptist, Ark., edged Elizabeth City, N.C., 90-89 in overtime; Glenville, W. Va., nipped Missouri Southern 68-66; Northeastern Oklahoma defeated Glassboro, N.J., State 87-69; Xavier, La., outdistanced Maryland-Eastern Shore, 102-80; St. Thomas, Minn., clipped Tri-State Ind., 78-61, and Westmont, Calif., downed Edinboro, Pa., State 91-72.

In games tonight, Kentucky State, 23-5, winner of the last two NAIA tourneys but seeded third this year, meets Minot, N.D., 20-2; Pittsburg, Kan., St. tackles Western Carolina, 20-15, and Northwestern, Iowa, 21-6, plays West Georgia, 27-4.

Eau Claire's Mike Ratliff, 6-foot-10 center, had 24 points and hauled in 19 rebounds in leading the Bluejays. Willie Collins, a 5-10 guard from Selma, Ala., was the top Tiger scorer with 26 points.

Gardner-Webb had little trouble handling Eastern Montana as George Adams poured in 28 points in the first half. Adams turned feeder in the second half but ended with 34 points. Roy McPipe, sophomore guard tallied 30 for Eastern Montana.

Ouachita Baptist gained the victory on William Hodge's lay-up with 1:13 left in overtime. Elizabeth City tied the game when Holland Moore scored a lay-up on a steal in the closing seconds of regulation time.

Elizabeth City's Glen Wendley led all scorers with 31 points while Tommy Patterson had 28 for Ouachita.

Another thriller was the Glenville-Missouri Southern game. Earl Hawkins' 16-foot jump shot with one second left made the difference for Glenville. Steve Datcher had 28 for the Pioneers and Bill Wagner 17 for the Lions.

Flashy Xavier of New Orleans had five men in double figures, headed by freshman Bruce Seals with 19 points. Robert Kearney topped Maryland-Eastern Shore with 20.

Northeastern Oklahoma had a cold-shooting first half, only 34 per cent, but Glassboro was even colder, 20 per cent. Finally Glen Feedback, a 5-foot-9 sparkplug, cranked up the Redmen's attack and he ended the contest with 32 points. John VanVliet added 16 points and 23 rebounds to the Northeastern Oklahoma cause. Spencer Person was high for Glassboro with 19 points.

CHICAGO (AP) — Second-seeded Ken Rosewall of Australia won easily and No. 3-seeded Tom Okker of the Netherlands had to play two tiebreakers Monday as the two men advanced to the second round of the $50,000 Kemper International Tennis Tournament.

Nine matches were played Monday.

Six other first-round singles matches, including one that features No. 1-seeded Rod Laver of Australia pitted against fellow Aussie Tony Roche, were scheduled today at two sites near Chicago.

Roche already has won three tennis tournaments this year. Rosewall beat an American newcomer, Jeff Borowiak, 6-2, 7-5.

Okker was forced to two tiebreakers before he could subdue Allan Stone, an Australian, 7-6, 7-6.

In seven other first-round matches, three-time Wimbledon champion John Newcombe, England's Roger Taylor and Mark Cox, Australia's Ray Ruffels, Terry Addison and John Alexander and France's Bob Carmichael emerged as victors. Newcombe, who won the Wimbledon in 1967, 1970 and 1971, defeated Tom Leonard of California, 7-5, 6-3. Newcombe was seeded No. 9. Taylor, ranked No. 12 seed, defeated unseeded Roy Barth of California, 6-1, 6-1.

Ruffels, who was unseeded, beat Owen Davidson, also unseeded, of Australia 6-4, 6-4. Carmichael, unseeded, beat Bob Maud of South Africa, 6-4, 7-5. Cox beat Brian Fairlie of New Zealand, 7-5, 6-2.

Addison, unseeded, beat Graham Stillwell of England, 7-5, 7-5.

The tournament ends Sunday when the finalists from an original field of 31 professionals play for a $10,000 first prize in singles and the $1,800 second prize in doubles. Runnersup will play for $5,000 second prize in singles and $800 second prize in doubles competition.

Miracles Lie In Compliments

David Shaw is a clever newspaperman who challenged Eric Weber to demonstrate his new book title, "How to Pick Up Girls." Eric accepted the dare and used the "Compliment Club" strategy as his basic weapon. You teen-agers should scrapbook this case!

By GEORGE W. CRANE, Ph.D., M.D.
Case T-525: Eric Weber, aged 29, is the author of a very clever new book titled "How to Pick Up Girls."

He wrote it to help reassure other shy young men who are fearful of speaking to a pretty girl without first having had a formal introduction.

"I was absolutely terrified of going up to a strange girl," he admitted regarding his teen-age years, "and starting a conversation of asking her for a date."

In his advice to young men on this crucial problem, he places great stress on the "Compliment Club" strategy that I have long urged in this daily column.

"Excuse me," he suggests as one lead-off, "but I wonder if you could suggest something appropriate that I might buy for my sister?"

This request for advice is one of the 5 Laws for Complimenting that millions of you readers have learned from the "Compliment Club" strategy.

Another Weber suggestion is this: "Excuse me but you look beautiful."

When challenged for being so blunt in his use of the direct compliment, Weber defends himself by saying:

"Girls spend hours in front of the mirror primping, combing and creaming themselves.

"After all that work, it isn't surprising that they like for you to tell them how nice they look."

Unfortunately, Weber urges the use of "flattery" when I am sure he means "compliments."

For flattery is insincere, whereas a compliment is an honest statement of praise for some objective merit or virtue that others will admit deserves commendation.

"Most girls," he adds, "want to be picked up as much as guys want to pick them up."

"Maybe it used to be considered improper but not today."

And as proof of the effectiveness of the verbal compliment, plus the unique use thereof, he cites his own case.

One day a charming blond tried to push past Weber and his friends.

"Excuse me," she pleaded as she tried to squeeze between them.

"No," was Weber's terse answer.

"Excuse me," she tried again but Weber gave her another "No."

"Why not?" she inquired, startled.

Then he told her she was too pretty to let escape him.

And she later became his wife! So the "Compliment Club" that I have been preaching to you millions of young people, still works miracles.

And it is so simple that many of you have overlooked it.

For the trend nowadays is to seek some complicated, erudite formula instead of using psychological "horse sense."

"Dr. Crane," I am often greeted at the conclusion of my addresses, "we never understood psychology before.

"But you have made it as simple as apple pie!"

Which means I merely employ short words, everyday actual cases from my office practice, and document each problem with concrete solutions.

That is supposed to be "par" in the realm of pedagogy.

Alas, far too many teachers obfuscate their propositions with polysyllabic circumlocutions, thus merely confusing their listeners!

More Catholics, Fewer Priests

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The number of Roman Catholics in the world increased by seven million from 1969 to 1971 but the number of priests kept falling, as it has done steadily for about a decade. Priests were down 4,228 to 347,481.

The "Activity of the Holy See," a yearbook, listed 533,604,110 Roman Catholics for 1971. This made a world average of 1,535 Catholics for each priest.

Newly ordained priests numbered 3,500 or 532 fewer than in 1969. Many seminaries were closed.

SUN SENSITIVITY

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—A growing number of people are becoming unduly sensitive to sunlight because of deodorant soaps and after-shave lotions containing antibacterial agents, says Dr. John H. Epstein of the University of California, San Francisco Medical Center.

RALEIGH (AP) — The president of the North Carolina Medical Society, Dr. Charles W. Styron of Raleigh, says no member of the society has been found to have engaged in "illegal or significantly unethical conduct" at Cherry State Mental Hospital at Goldsboro. Styron said Gov. The bidding:
South West North East
2 ♠ Pass 3 ♠ Pass
4 ♠ Pass 5 ♠ Pass
5 ♦ Pass 6 ♦ Pass
6 ♠ Pass Pass Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♠
The six spade contract arrived at by North and South in today's hand was a distinct underdog and the blame lies squarely on North's shoulders. His direct raise of partner's demand opening bid to three spades was warranted inasmuch as he has three trumps and eight high card points.

When South makes an immediate slam try by bidding four clubs, North should slow down the proceedings a bit by signing off at four spades. His holding in clubs is not all that impressive inasmuch as partner's call is a cue bid designating first round control and may not be based on a suit. The raise to six diamonds over South's second cue bid was totally without merit, but by that time it is doubtful if the former would have quit short of a slam.

West opened the jack of hearts and when the dummy was spread, declarer observed that the combined holding in clubs left something to be desired. If one of the defenders held a doubleton king-queen or if East had a singleton honor, then the play of the ace followed by a small club would restrict the opposition to one trick in the suit.

South played a small heart from dummy, won the first trick in his hand with the ace, and before attempting to gauge the club situation, began drawing trump by cashing the ace and king. West showed out on the second round, discarding the four of hearts. Dummy was entered by overtaking the queen and a spade was led so that South could finesse the ten in his hand after East followed with the six. The queen of spades drew the last trump as West parted with first six and then the seven of hearts.

Declarer decided, after some deliberation, not to commit himself immediately in clubs by cashing the ace. As a preliminary measure, he led the seven from his hand. West followed with the deuce, the three was played from dummy and East false-carded by winning the trick with the king. The latter exited with a diamond and South played the ace, continuing with the jack to North's king as East followed suit with the nine.

Unless East had false-carded, it appeared that West had started with four diamonds headed by the eight and at least five hearts—he had discarded three hearts and his original lead of the jack marked him with the ten as part of a sequence. He was known to have one spade and so far— one club. His original distribution consisted, then, of either five hearts and three clubs, or six hearts and two clubs. If it was the former, then declarer's only chance was to play the ace of clubs in the hope of felling the queen from East's hand. If West had the doubleton club, then South must proceed on the assumption that his remaining card is the ten.

Declarer decided in favor of playing West for the short clubs and he led the jack from dummy. It did not matter whether or not East covered with the queen, for West's ten was destined to fall under the jack in any event and South picked up the entire suit. Observe that West cannot hold the doubleton queen, or else East would have won the first club lead with the ten, not the king.

a profit... lessening and probable elimination of competition and tendency toward monopoly in the printed advertising media in and about Greenville ... and increasing restraint on plaintiff's business and probable destruction of that business."

The Greenville Publishing Co. complaint said by reason of the alleged antitrust law violations, "defendants have caused plaintiff to sustain operating losses of approximately $45,000 and to lose reasonably anticipated profits of $21,000 from December 10, 1970 to the date of filing of this complaint" and "if defendants' unlawful acts are not restrained, plaintiff will be unable to continue to publish The Advocate and will be forced to terminate its business, which will result in an additional loss of potential profits, capital investment and good will."

Greenville Publishing, in the complaint, asks for $66,000 "damage for the injury to its business... trebled to $198,000 as required by Section 4 of the Clayton Act", that the court order the defendants to "cease and desist any of the unlawful acts herein before described and enjoin defendants from pursuing any other activity tending to result in further losses or damages to plaintiff by violation of the antitrust laws..."

The motion for preliminary injunction asks the court to enjoin the defendants from "publishing The Reflector Shoppers Guide containing any advertising sold at below-cost rates; soliciting or selling any advertising ... at below cost rates; trying the sale of any advertising space in The Reflector Shoppers Guide with advertising space in The Daily Reflector; and stating the circulation of The Reflector Shoppers Guide at any figure other than the number actually distributed."

The plaintiffs charged in their motion that "unless restrained, defendants will continue their illegal, unfair and deceptive advertising and sales practices which will cause plaintiff to cease publication of its shoppers guide thereby re-creating defendants' monopoly and causing plaintiff immediate and irreparable injury, loss and damage to its reputation, good will, and ability to continue the business for which it was organized."

Both The Advocate and The Reflector Shoppers Guide began publication in 1970 and both are distributed free to residents in the Greenville area.

The complaint charges that, based on the amount of advertising in each issue and the rates charged, billings for The Reflector Shopper's Guide "have been estimated at $200 to $400 per week from December, 1970, to February 16, 1972..."

The complaint alleges "Billings of approximately $3,000 per week are necessary to break even" for The Advocate.

The plaintiffs have requested a hearing on the motion for preliminary injunction on March 21.

The defendants, under federal rules, have 20 days in which to file answers to the complaint or to take other procedures.

According to an affidavit accompanying the motion for injunction, Carl Venters, Jr. of Farmville is president of Greenville Publishing Co.

Wooten
Mr. James Henry Wooten died Sunday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Esther Whitehurst.

Funeral services will be conducted Thursday at 3 p.m. at the Philippi Baptist Church in Simpson with the Rev. Hattie Mae Cobb. Burial will follow in the church cemetery.

Born and reared in Pitt County, he spent his entire life here. He was a member of the Philippi Baptist Church.

His survivors are two daughters, Mrs. Esther Whitehurst of the home and Mrs. Ada Boyd of Washington, D.C.; three sons, Henry and Arthur Wooten of Greenville and Robert Wooten of New York City; two sisters, Mrs. Irene Connor and Mrs. Carrie B. Williams, both of New York; two brothers, Richard and Larry Wooten, both of Baltimore, Md.; 26 grandchildren; and 14 great grandchildren.

Family and friends will be at Phillips Brothers Mortuary Saturday from 8 to 9 p.m.

'Scuffle' At High School

A pre-clashes scuffle occurred at Rose High School this morning, erupting between two groups of black students.

Principal Robert Alligood, commenting on the situation, said that from the best he could determine, "the tension and fighting before classes is a follow up of misunderstandings the group had last night."

"It's not racial," Alligood continued, "but is one of those unfortunate things that seems to reflect differences of feeling in the community."

Alligood confirmed that police were called to the scene and had restored order. "The police are staying until we are assured all is calm," the principal stated.

He noted that following the first flare-up, which "started with girls fighting each other," there had been no further incidents. "We have had two class changes without problems," Alligood said, "and I think everything will soon be back to normal."

RALEIGH — The N.C. State Board of Health will sponsor a two-day Cancer Registry Symposium beginning March 15 at the Plantation Inn in Raleigh. Over 40 cancer registrars, hospital medical records personnel who collect and maintain data on cancer victims, are expected to attend.

The N.C. Cancer Registry is a collection of information about cancer patients — age, sex, type of cancer, location, treatment, and response to treatment. According to Thomas J. Vitaglione, administrator of the program, the purpose of gathering such information is to maintain a lifelong follow-up of cancer patients and to provide reports concerning diagnosis, treatment and survival of cancer patients to doctors who use the information to upgrade cancer care.

Require Leaf Be Certified

Tobacco producers are being reminded that they must certify they have not used pesticide products containing DDT or TDE on their 1972 tobacco plantings in order to be eligible for price support on the crop this year.

"Alternate materials are available and have been demonstrated to be effective in controlling tobacco plant pests," said Stacy J. Evans, Pitt County Executive Director for the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

"That means our tobacco growers must meet these standards now — as they did last year — because most of the 1972 crop that moves under price-support loan will not be sold and exported until after the foreign-country restrictions are in effect.

As growers know, tobacco is aged for long periods before it is
