Rumbles Of Violent Reaction

N. Ireland Home Rule Ended

By RODNEY PINDER
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — The British government suspended home rule in Northern Ireland today and took direct control of the strife-torn province in a bid for peace that risks civil war.

Heath told the House of Commons that Northern Ireland's Protestant-controlled provincial parliament was being suspended for a year, the internment without trial of suspected guerrillas is being eased, and Roman Catholics would get a greater voice in provincial affairs.

Heath announced that the six Ulster counties will be governed by William Whitelaw, floor manager for the government in the House of Commons, who will be named to the new post of cabinet minister for Northern Ireland.

Whitelaw will be assisted by a commission of local residents "fully representative of opinion in Northern Ireland," Heath declared. This means it would include representatives of the Catholic minority as well as Protestants.

The response from Northern Ireland was almost entirely hostile, and there were fears that Protestant extremists would turn to violence in retaliation for the ending of 50 years of Protestant rule.

Faulkner told the Stormont, Northern Ireland's parliament, that he had warned Heath in their crisis talks that British takeover would be seen in Ulster as a victory for the Irish Republican Army, which wants reunion of the two parts of Ireland.

"I told him," Faulkner said, "that it would be widely construed as an acceptance of totally baseless criticism of our stewardship; that it would be seen by the IRA and others as a first and major step on the road to a terrorist victory."

Faulkner's government is expected to remain in office to run routine provincial affairs until the British Parliament approves takeover legislation next week.

William Craig, leader of the hard-line Protestant Vanguard Movement who formerly was a member of Faulkner's cabinet, warned that his militants will fight the takeover.

"We would fight," Craig said. "I cannot exclude the possibility of violence."

He declined to comment, however, when asked if a shooting war would break out between his Protestants and the IRA.

Frazier Agnew, leader of the militant Belfast Young Unionists, accused Heath of betrayal and said he "has hastened the inevitability of civil war."

The Catholic guerrillas of the Irish Republican Army's Provisional wing vowed to continue their campaign of bombing and shooting to unite the Protestant North with the Catholic Irish Republic in the south.

Edward MacAteer, leader of the more moderate Catholic Civil Rights Movement, said he preferred Protestant Irish rule to that of Englishmen in the "remote and insensitive smoke-filled rooms of Westminster."

Six thousand Protestant shipyard workers in Belfast left their jobs and marched to the city hall in protest.

In an overture to the Roman Catholic minority in the six northern counties of Ireland, Heath also announced plans to release some of the suspected guerrillas interned there without trial and a plebiscite on whether the people of Northern Ireland want to unite with the Irish Republic.

The outcome of the plebiscite is a certainty since Protestants outnumber Catholics 2 to 1 in Northern Ireland and are solidly opposed to Catholic rule from the South.

The government took direct rule of the province after 31 months of religious-political warfare that has taken 286 lives and brought Britain to its gravest constitutional crisis since King Edward VIII abdicated in 1936.

Heath's action was the result of the collapse Thursday night of crisis talks between him and Northern Ireland's prime minister, Brian Faulkner.

Balanced Union, Business Voice Planned New 'Public' Pay Board Meeting

By BROOKS JACKSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The new "public" Pay Board set a rare Friday meeting for today as President Nixon pondered which four businessmen he must fire to balance four union defections.

United Auto Workers President Leonard Woodcock left the board Thursday as Nixon announced his plans to reshape the board.

Woodcock, the fourth labor member to resign in two days, called for a congressional investigation of the whole wage-price control effort. House Banking Committee Chairman Wright Patman, D-Tex., said he might get one.

The President said he will keep the present five public members of the board, plus just enough businessmen to balance whatever union members wish to stay. Woodcock resigned at almost the same time Nixon spoke, leaving Teamsters Union President Frank E. Fitzsimmons the sole representative of organized labor on the board.

So the new board will have seven members: Fitzsimmons, the five public members, and whichever of the present five business members Nixon chooses. The White House said it didn't know who the choice would be or when the decision would be made.

Director George Shultz of the Office of Management and Budget said all seven members would be considered public members, although the union and business representatives would be expected to stand up for their particular views.

The President, who personally announced his plans to newsmen after outlining them to a special session of the Cost of Living Council, severely criticized AFL-CIO President George Meany, who walked off the board Wednesday with two AFL-CIO colleagues.

Nixon said Meany's resignation had been prompted by the Pay Board's rejection of a 20.9-per-cent first-year pay raise for West Coast longshoremen.

"The Pay Board was right," Nixon said. "Mr. Meany was wrong."

He said he respected Meany as a labor leader, but added: "As President, I cannot permit any leader representing a special interest, no matter how powerful, to torpedo and sink a program that is needed to protect the public interest."

In reshaping the board as a body representative of only the public, Nixon abandoned the concept demanded earlier by Meany—that the board have public, labor and business members.

The new, whittled-down shape of the Pay Board may give it a stiffer policy toward individual wage settlements. Had the public members prevailed, for example, a 16.8-per-cent first-year raise for soft-coal miners would have been cut back somewhat in the board's first wage decision last year.

On many past issues, however, public members have sided with labor members. Woodcock announced his resignation after a meeting of the UAW executive council in Detroit.

He said the wage-price control program is scandalous and unfair, and hasn't controlled inflation or reduced unemployment. He said wages have been controlled rigidly while profits have been allowed to soar, charges similar to those leveled by Meany. Woodcock spoke just hours after the Labor Department announced that the cost of living rose 0.5 per cent last month, the highest monthly increase since before the Aug. 15 wage-price freeze.

Two More

Two temporary registration spots, in addition to those announced previously, will be manned in the area in the upcoming days as a convenience for area residents.

A black registration team has received permission from the Pitt County Board of Elections to hold registration Saturday only at the South Greenville Recreation Center from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m.

On Monday and Tuesday, teams will be in factious to conduct registration from 1-9 p.m.

SUIT REJECTED

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A theatrical producer's $209,000 breach of contract suit against entertainers Howard Keel and Kathryn Grayson was rejected Thursday by a judge.

Strike Talk Is Softpedaled By Longshoremen

NEW YORK (AP) — Talk of a possible nationwide dock strike over adverse Pay Board decisions has been soft pedaled by leaders of the country's two big longshore unions.

"Striking is easy," said Thomas W. "Teddy" Gleason, head of the AFL-CIO International Longshoremen's Association, "but where do you go after you go out? After we get our package before the board, we'll see."

Gleason and Harry Bridges, head of the 13,000-member independent International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, spoke to newsmen after meeting privately for three hours Thursday to discuss "matters of mutual interest."

Last week the Pay Board reduced a wage-benefit package won by Bridges' West Coast dockers after strikes totalling 134 days. The board rolled back a 20.6 per cent increase to 14.9 per cent.

The ILA has not formally submitted the new contract it negotiated for 45,000 East and Gulf Coast dockers. That pact calls for a 15.2 per cent increase the first year, but only 14.9 per cent in basic wages.

Gleason and Bridges, antagonists for many years, have reconciled some of their differences in the last two years. Last October they agreed to work "to insure that gains won in collective bargaining are not taken away by governmental action."

Bridges, who had threatened to strike if "one penny" was taken from the West Coast settlement, declined to talk about a walkout Thursday. Instead he referred to a joint statement that the two men would meet again.

Asked if the two unions were working in unanimity, Gleason snapped, "Absolutely." Bridges interjected, "Hell no. That's too much. We can't even get that at home."

Board Of Adjustments Approves Agenda Items

The record of both the City-County Board of Adjustments and the Greenville Board of Adjustments meeting Thursday night was one of approval of all items on the agenda, with stipulations attached to two items.

Approval of the four agenda items considered by the joint board, all matters of public hearings, included the following, all in the category of special use permit requests.

—Chester Rogers' request to construct a convenience market on the north side of Greenfield Boulevard, adjacent to the city limits.

—A request by Wheelless and Moore, Inc. to install two self-service gasoline pumps on the south side of Washington Highway, about 700 feet east of U.S. 264 by-pass and the Washington Highway intersection. A Convenience Store, which is permitted usage, is to be constructed at this point. The pumps required approval of a special use permit.

—E. E. Rawl Jr.'s request to locate a mobile home park on the west side of U.S. 13 across the highway from Burroughs-

Wellcome Corporation property; and —Dallas McPherson's request to construct multi-family dwellings on the north side of the Washington Highway and adjacent to the Greenville putt-

The city's Board of Adjustments also considered four items on the agenda, one a matter of old business and three new business. As with the joint board, all items were public hearings and all were seeking special use permits.

The old item of business was James E. Sutton's request to construct multi-family dwellings at the south-west intersection of Red Banks Road and East 14th Street extended. Approval, with a vote of four for and one against, carried stipulations that: no more than 10 units per acre be constructed; no structure or street be placed within 100 feet of the Melvin Buck property; and dedicated access be given for the southeastern and western perimeters of the Sutton property.

The three new business items for which approval were granted are:

—A request by Capital Mobile Homes, Inc. to use a mobile home located at 2720 South Memorial Drive as residential quarters for the resident manager of the mobile homes sales lot.

—The Trinity Free Will Baptist Church request to locate a principal use sign on the north side of Golden Road; and —Mrs. Maggie Eason's request to place a mobile home on property located at Route 7, Box 100 (Hooker Road). This was granted for a two year period and is subject to review and renewal at the end of that period.

Kleindienst Nomination Again Before Committee

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nomination of Richard G. Kleindienst to be attorney general apparently will face another vote by the Senate Judiciary Committee before it is brought before the full Senate.

The committee had unanimously approved the nomination before columnist Jack Anderson accused the Justice Department of settling an antitrust suit against International Telephone & Telegraph Corp. in exchange for a $400,000 contribution to the Republican National Convention.

Kleindienst was No. 2 man at Justice when the suit was settled and asked that the charge be aired before the committee.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield told newsmen Thursday he would delay a Senate vote on the nomination until the committee makes a new recommendation.

Judiciary Chairman James O. Eastland, D-Miss., said he would arrange a new vote but indicated it wouldn't have to be a reconsideration of the nomination.

Mansfield said other possibilities might include a statement that no wrongdoing had been uncovered, a request that the nomination be returned to committee or a reaffirmation of the original vote.

The committee has not yet heard a prime witness in the case, ITT lobbyist Dita D. Beard whom Anderson described as the author of a memo linking the suit and the convention contribution.

But sentiments expressed so far indicate Kleindienst's nomination still has the committee's support, although it is no longer unanimous.

Mrs. Beard's testimony is to be taken Sunday, Monday and Tuesday in the Denver hospital where she is a heart patient.

Also Thursday, Eastland indicated opposition to a request by Sen. John V. Tunney, D-Calif., that the committee's inquiry be broadened to examine Life magazine's charges that the Nixon administration killed an investigation into Republican political contributions in Tunney's state.

Eastland said the Life charges don't appear to involve Kleindienst.

Meanwhile, the State Department denied another Anderson charge: that ITT and the U.S. government plotted to prevent Salvador Allende, a Marxist, from becoming president of Chile two years ago.

Test Prototype Of Navy Jet Aboard Carrier

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — A prototype of the Navy's Tomcat jet fighter has made its first appearance on board an aircraft carrier to generally good reviews.

The aircraft was hoisted aboard the carrier Independence at Norfolk Naval Station Thursday for its initial ship-handling evaluations. It was not launched from the carrier.

The Gruman Tomcat was tested for its maneuverability on the flight deck, its compatibility with the carrier's intricate catapult launch system and how much storage space it requires in comparison with its predecessor, the F4 Phantom.

The first production Tomcats—expected to be operational next year—will go to Navy squadrons on the west coast with Oceana Naval Air Station in Norfolk receiving the first production models on the east coast.

Jade Bursts Out Of Retirement

By PHYLLIS FELDKAMP
NEW YORK (WNS)—It doesn't have the dazzle of a diamond or the depth of a star sapphire. It's subtle and — like olives, oysters, truffles and caviar — is definitely an acquired taste. Nonetheless, make no mistakes about it. Jade is the news in jewelry at the moment.

Hardly surprising, given the surge of interest in all things Chinese, is the fact the jewelers everywhere are scurrying around hunting up prime pieces of the gem known to Orientals as "The Stone of Heaven."

But some sensed a revival on the way long before the first bounce of a Ping Pong ball in Peking last spring. They saw jade coming back in the wash of nostalgia for the 20s and 30s, which were days when Chinoiserie was rife.

New York's trend-setting jeweler David Webb began stocking up on examples of apple green and the emerald color of jadeite called "Imperial" more than a year ago. Now his foresight is paying off for, in new settings, the jade is leaving his shop at a brisk pace. Just recently he sold a butterfly pin for $45,000.

Made Into Pendants
"We have had loads of requests for jade pieces and I think our Palm Beach ladies must have gone to their vaults and found every jade disc and so forth that they could, because we are now making pendants of every size and shape to hang from our gold chains," writes Roslyn Sailor from her trendy Palm Beach, Fla., shop.

There may well be, in fact, as much jade in America in private hands or in museums as there is anywhere on the international market. Gem-quality stones are scarcer than dragon's teeth, even in China, Hong Kong and Taiwan, and are priced accordingly.

Buying jade, unless you take the precaution of dealing with a reputable jeweler, can be a precarious business for it requires much more prior knowledge of the various types and colors than do other prized stones. The term "jade," for instance, is correctly applied to two different minerals.

"Jade is just a word like rock or stone," says Mrs. Elizabeth Easby, a leading authority, formerly on the staff of the Metropolitan Museum of New York and of the Brooklyn Museum.

"True jade is nephrite, a silicate of calcium, magnesium and iron, but it is also jadeite, which is a silicate of sodium and aluminum."

Gemstone jade that commands the highest prices is the jadeite of a vivid pure green, close to emerald in color. This is known as Imperial because it was the favorite jewel of many a Chinese Emperor and Empress.

You should also know, in setting yourself straight on jade, that the finest quality has, since the 18th Century, come from Burma — not, as you might think, from China. The antique Chinese carved jade of early dynasties is nephrite, which is not so hard, glossy or translucent as jadeite.

Cortes Puzzled
Imperial jade was also found at some point in time in Central America. Objects were carved from it by the ancient Mayas, Olmecs and Aztecs. Montezuma thought more of jade than he did of gold, to the puzzlement of Hernando Cortes.

The golden age of jade in China was during the reign of the great Chinese jade patron, the Emperor Ch'ien Lung (1736-1796), when blocks of jadeite and nephrite weighing up to seven tons were worked successfully. Jade is one of the hardest stones and it sometimes took a lifetime for the completion of a carving but Ch'ien Lung thought the results were worth it.

A common misconception about jade is that it must always be green. Its other colors include green, red, lavender (rare), black, white and yellow, but shoppers should beware of dyed jades which will lose their color and which are around on the market.

Some of the odd names that have been given to certain colors are "mutton fat" for a buttery white and "spinach" for a dark Russian variety used by the Czar's court jeweler Peter Carl Faberge.

Other minerals that look like jade — aventurine and agate, for example — are also traps for the unwary buyer.

The fussy connoisseur thinks jade can only be appreciated if it is handled and the height of gaucherie is to pick up a piece of jade when you are wearing gloves. It is always smooth and cool to the touch and the Chinese have carried pieces of it around for centuries as a tranquilizing fingering stone.

If you decide to wear jade

Pears Star In Cookie-Type Dessert

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor
A good cook has used canned Bartlett pears in an ingenious dessert. It's a cross between a bar cookie and a pudding—nice to serve to guests with afternoon coffee or for the final course at dinner for the family or company.

Because the pears add moisture, we found it was best to serve this offering on dessert plates with forks.

PEAR MERINGUE SQUARES
1 can (16 ounces) Bartlett pear halves
1 2-3 cups unsifted flour
¼ cup firmly packed light brown sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ cup butter or margarine
2 eggs, separated
1 teaspoon vanilla
¼ teaspoon plus ½ teaspoon cinnamon

¾ teaspoon nutmeg
½ cup granulated sugar
½ cup chopped pecans
Drain and dice pears—there will be about 1¼ cups.

In a medium mixing bowl stir together the flour, ¼ cup of the brown sugar and the salt. Cut in butter until particles are tiny. Add egg yolks and vanilla and mix until well blended. Press into buttered 9-inch square cake pan. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven for 15 minutes. Cool slightly.

Mix diced pears with the remaining ¼ cup brown sugar, ¼ teaspoon of the cinnamon and the nutmeg. Spread over baked layer.

In a small mixing bowl beat egg whites until stiff and gradually beat in granulated sugar. Fold in remaining ¼ teaspoon cinnamon and the pecans. Spread over pear mixture.

Bake in a preheated 325-degree oven until top is lightly browned—about 20 minutes. While still hot, cut into 16 squares. Best served the day it is made.

PEAR MERINGUE SQUARES — Canned Bartlett pears form the luscious filling for this three-layer dessert.

Experts Favor Variation In Wedding Ceremony

NEW YORK (UPI)—All those couples writing their own wedding vows. Are they doing the right thing?

They tend to have stronger marriages, according to a survey of clergy and psychologists, conducted in the New York metropolitan area by the Bridal and Bridesmaids Apparel Association.

"The couple that shapes its own service will doubtless have a deeper sense of their marriage being very much their own," said Rev. William R. Wolfe of the Paramus Congregational Church.

"One of the problems of our society today is that we don't have rituals that mean anything," Rev. Ralph E. Peterson of St. Peter's Lutheran Church said. "The wedding ceremony is an important memory. If you create something worth remembering, you are off to a good start in your marriage."

Father Michael F. Gallagher of St. Patrick's Cathedral said that until two years ago Catholic couples had been "merely mouthing like a parrot the words the priest gave them."

"Now there's a framework of 21 pieces from which they can select their prayers and find one that reflects their own personal moods and feelings," he said. "If they wish to be more creative, they can write a prayer that the guests respond to."

Dr. Nathan A. Perilman of Temple Emanu-El said that though many couples ask for changes in his service, almost

Advice Offered On Buying Right Wedding Gown

NEW YORK (UPI)—Does the bride-to-be have to spend a fortune for her wedding dress? Should she take anyone with her to shop? Is it wrong to buy the gown she falls in love with at first sight? Here are some answers from the Bridal and Bridesmaids Apparel Association (BBAA):

—Price for beautiful, well-made wedding dresses range from $70 to $1,000 or more. The important thing is fit and a gown that pleases the bride.

—Three's a crowd when shopping for a wedding dress. Don't go alone but take just one other person, preferably mother or sister or best friend. Get from that person an honest opinion about the dress that catches your fancy. More than one companion adds confusion and doubt.

—At gown shopping time wear the same hairstyle you plan for the wedding. It will help when judging the gown and selecting the headpiece. You'll see the total look. Wear shoes with the same height heels as wedding shoes to insure gown's length will be fitted perfectly.

—Falling in love with the first gown is okay, but, just to be sure, try on one more. The more you look, the greater the chance confusion will set in.

—Many girls say they are going to lose weight for the wedding. They want this to be taken into consideration when having the gown fitted. A bad idea. At final fitting time, invariably she has not lost weight, experience has shown.

Bride's Father Doesn't Have Entire Burden

NEW YORK (UPI)—The father of the bride can find some balm for that pain in his wallet in this: Despite what cartoonists depict, Dad doesn't pay all the bills.

The sharing of financial obligations involved in a wedding can be broken down as follows, advises the Jewelry Industry Council:

The bride pays for: Her trousseau, wedding ring for the bridegroom, presents for her attendants, accommodations for her attendants, personal stationery and calling cards, her medical examination.

The bridegroom pays for: bride's engagement and wedding rings, the marriage license, gift for the bride, his medical examination, bride's bouquet and going-away corsage, boutonnières for men of wedding party, flowers for the two mothers, gloves and ascots or ties for men in the wedding party, gifts for his ushers and best man, accommodations for his best man and ushers, fee or just to have some around the house for decoration, it won't ever knock your eye out the way some flashier precious stones will. It should give you a certain Celestial feeling, though.

The Princess Was Bored, So She Assumes Working Role

By ANNE DARLING
KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (WNS)—Question: When does the beautiful young Asian princess give up her life of ease to work 9-to-5 six days a week?

Answer: When she's bored. "I used to go shopping in the morning, meet friends for lunch and then wait around until tea time," said Princess Dara Naquiah who is "Nicky" to friends. "I was wasting my life."

The princess went to work two years ago, shortly after her seven-day-long fairytale wedding to a handsome prince, and she now is one of the most successful women in the public relations in Malaysia.

Gramps On Money
Finding a job was easy of course. After all, it means something here to be the daughter of a sultan and granddaughter of the first king of Malaya. ("That's grandfather's picture on all the money.")

But the princess has proved to be hardworking and capable, and admits turning down many job offers from competing companies since.

Her work involves meeting influential people (most of whom she's known all of her life), arranging parties, writing press releases and translating political reports from Malay into English.

Nicky's father is the sultan of Negri Sembilan, one of Malaysia's nine sultanates, who may one day be king. (Since independence from Britain in 1957, the kingship has been rotated among the sultans every five years.)

The royal women of Negri Sembilan are considered the most modern women in Malaysia. Negri Princesses who are liberal Moslems, were the first to be educated abroad, to play tennis in short skirts, to smoke and drink in public, and to work.

Abroad
Nicky went to schools in London, New York and Cairo — where her father was, respectively, a university student, Malaysian representative to the United Nations and ambassador to Egypt.

"The only time I was aware of being a member of royalty as a child was when we visited grandfather at the palace," said the 26-year-old princess. "But now it is something I accept, along with certain social responsibilities."

The social responsibilities, according to Nicky, include "working to improve living conditions among the rural poor in Malaysia" through women's civic organizations. A particular interest is in seeing that Malaysian women receive fairer treatment on divorce cases. (The Moslem man here still get rid of a wife by saying "I divorce you" or he may have up to four wives simultaneously.)

"While I don't like the idea of a man having more than one wife, or mistresses on the side," said the princess, "it's something I understand. Too often wife number one is a real bore."

And to this princess, being a bore "is unforgivable."

Her Collection Of Rhymed Recipes Not For Kitchen Use

By JEANNE LEMSE
UPI Food Editor
NEW YORK (UPI)—Eleanor Reinstein is compiling a book of rhymed recipes—not for kitchen use but for what they tell her about people.

Among the things they've told her so far is that authors tended to omit one or two ingredients so that no one could duplicate their recipes.

As an example, Mrs. Reinstein quoted from a four-stanza recipe for stewed duck and peas that ended with these lines:

"Dish up your duck,—the sauce improve
In the accustomed way,
With pepper, salt, and other things
I need not here explain;
And if the dish contentment brings,
You'll dine with me again."

Looks Up History
In an interview, Mrs. Reinstein said she looks for the historical background of each recipe and author. The duck rhyme was by Maria L. Moss, a Philadelphian who is credited with writing the first charitable cookbook in America. Her "Poetical Cookbook" was published in 1864, and dedicated to a sanitary fair.

"Women all over the states had similar fund-raising projects," said Mrs. Reinstein, adding that few survived because the cookbooks weren't the type to be kept in libraries. They usually were printed on paperboard, and tended to be mistreated and scribbled in by children.

Hopes To Publish
She hopes eventually to publish the recipes she's collected. There are about 125 from various sources, not including 52 that appeared in book form in 1912. Some in that book were reprints from magazines of the period.

In private life, Mrs. Reinstein is the wife of a retired physician in Merion Station, Pa., a suburb of Philadelphia. She is a member of the folklore and folklife department of the University of Pennsylvania.

She said she got into rhymed recipes when someone decided there should be an anthropology of food habits and sources. She dates their popularity to a brief period between 1859 and 1862. However, she also has found a recipe for "Lyric Neapolitan Pizza," an Italian-language poem that appeared in an American cookbook-travel guide in 1958.

Mrs. Reinstein said the old recipes usually fell into three classes. Some were written by well-known authors as a gimmick; some were by little-known or anonymous authors and intended for use. And others were anonymous and of such simplicity that Mrs. Reinstein thinks they were handed down from mother to daughter.

One of the most widely quoted and published was a salad dressing recipe by a 19th century English cleric, the Rev. Sidney Smith.

Mrs. Reinstein said she has found 65 copies of it, no two of them identical. She added that even his manuscript versions differed from one another.

She said the old recipes actually worked, although there's one theory that they were published as jokes because Americans took themselves so seriously about food.

Some Attractive Recipes
Some provide measurements throughout, while others include few or none. Some sound delicious—the cleric's anchovy-flavored salad dressing, for instance, and a boiled apple pudding by an anonymous author.

But others—including nasturtium sandwiches and a sweet omelet with strawberry puree filling—have more limited appeal.

Eve's Pudding
Eve's pudding is a rhymed recipe from the collection of Eleanor Reinstein.

"If you want a good pudding, mind what you are taught:
Take eggs, six in number,
When bought for a groat;
The fruit with which Eve her husband did cozen,
Well pared and well chopped,
Take at least half a dozen;
Six ounces of bread—let the cook eat the crust—
And crumble them soft as fine as the dust;
Six ounces of currants from the stalks you must sort,

Bride-Elect Entertained Wednesday Night

Miss Judy Kovalchick, whose wedding to Stephen W. Bailey will take place on April 1, was entertained Wednesday night at a miscellaneous shower at the home of Mrs. E. L. Ferguson.

Mrs. Bronson Matney was assisting hostess.

Greeting guests were Miss Kovalchick, her mother, Mrs. John Kovalchick, and the mother of the bridegroom-elect, Mrs. M. P. Bailey. Stephen Bailey was also a guest for the occasion.

The hostesses presented the bride-elect with a corsage of white carnations and a gift of china.

White candles adorned with white satin bows and lily-of-the-valley surrounded by magnolia leaves decorated the house. A large white wedding bell tied with white satin ribbons and decorated with lily-of-the-valley hung from the chandelier in the living room.

Miss Mary Bryan Matney, seated at a lace covered table, officiated at the guest register. A Spanish hand-tooled bronze tray was used to receive favorite recipes brought by each guest for the bride.

In the dining room, Miss Jane Ferguson and Miss Serena Matney poured punch from a crystal bowl.

The refreshment table was covered with a handmade lace cloth over green linen and centered with an arrangement of yellow and white daisies and white tapered candles.

Grandma Turned Off By X-Rated Films

By Abigail Van Buren

(© 1972 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: Please tell me, am I an old fashioned, prissy, 52-year-old wife, mother, and grandmother because I don't enjoy going to X-rated movies? My husband thinks I am.

He asked me to go to one of those movies with him and I did, and I didn't care for it at all. To me sex is something beautiful between a husband and wife, and I don't like to see it exploited before my eyes on a movie screen.

My husband says it turns him on. Well, it turns me OFF! Do you think I should go to sexy movies with him just to keep him company? I find them humiliating.

OLD FASHIONED

DEAR OLD: If your husband needs an X-rated film to turn him on, let him go alone. And tell him to hurry straight home before you turn IN, or he's turned OFF!

DEAR ABBY: This concerns the propriety of asking a hostess, when she invites you to dinner, "Who else is coming?" I don't think it's impolite to ask. I always do. And it's not because I may want to decline or accept, depending on who else will be there.

We live in the suburbs, and if friends who live nearby are going to the same party in the city, it's convenient and fun to ride together. If I invited someone to a party, and she asked who else was coming because if she didn't care for some of my other guests she might decline, I would rather she did.

ALWAYS ASKS

DEAR ALWAYS: Your reason for asking is a valid one, which changes the complexion of the situation. So, don't guess who's coming to dinner. Ask!

DEAR ABBY: In reference to "Disgusted" who had so many bad experiences with service and repairmen who didn't show up: She should call the Better Business Bureau when shopping for a repairman. And even more important, if one doesn't show up, she should let the B. B. B. know about it. Businessmen with a reputation for "standing up" their customers don't stay in business long. And your complaints to the B. B. B. are kept strictly confidential.

ALL FOR THE B. B. B.

DEAR ALL: Thanks for the reminder. Now hear it from the repairmen:

DEAR ABBY: Since others use your column to air their pet gripes, may I?

It's customers who, when they arrange for an appointment to repair their television, fail to be there, or even leave a door unlocked. They don't call, they just aren't there. [Always an excuse, "I went to the store for a few minutes," car trouble, etc.] Abby, time is money, and these inconsiderate people cost us both.

My other repairman friends tell me they've had the same lousy experience with some customers. What's the matter with people nowadays? Their word isn't worth a thing.

DISGUSTED REPAIRMAN IN TEXAS

DEAR ABBY: You wrote, "I think there should be a special place in heaven for the woman who marries a divorced man with a first family, because as far as the man is concerned (whether from guilt or whatever) his "first" family usually comes first. And the same holds true for a divorced woman with a first family.

Abby, I don't want to get personal, but such insight and compassion could only have come from a woman who has had that experience. Did you perchance marry a divorced man with a "first" family?

NOSY

DEAR NOSY: No. But some of my best friends did.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Recommendations Are Logical

Following the National Commission on Marijuana and Drug Abuse recommendations, there is almost certain to be a tendency toward easing the laws on pot smoking.

The commission, after a year's study, recommended that all jail terms and fines for private marijuana smoking be repealed; however penalties would be continued for cultivation and sale of marijuana.

The commission recommended a national policy of "persuasion rather than prosecution" as a means of discouraging smoking of marijuana.

Uneasy School Financing Plan

By BRYAN HAISLIP
RALEIGH, N.C. — A California court decision is shaking the ground under North Carolina's system of public school financing.

If the principle enunciated in the California case of Serrano v. Priest becomes the law of the land — and legal experts consider the possibility strong that it will — it would threaten the portion of local school support from property taxes.

The California supreme court held that the quality of most of the aid, North Carolina's adaptation to the standard should come easier than most," Dees observed.

Unequal Local Wealth
The common feature of school financing systems upon which the courts have focused, Dees explained, is "the partial reliance upon locally raised funds in the support of public schools."

"Rich districts with wider tax bases could provide high quality education more easily than could poorer districts. Thus school children in poor districts were being deprived of a right to equal opportunity of education in their public schools in violation of the equal protection clause of the Constitution's Fourteenth Amendment."

How local wealth does control to some extent the quality of education was illustrated by Dees with a comparison of Pasquotank and Mecklenburg counties.

Both show equal willingness to tax for school support; both have assessed valuation of 60 per cent of appraised value, and both contribute the same fraction of taxes raised to their schools.

School Opportunity Unbalanced
"Yet Pasquotank contributes only $116.72 per school pupil whereas Mecklenburg contributes $248.04," Dees pointed out. "This is attributable only to the fact that Mecklenburg has $34,980 in appraised value of property per child while Pasquotank has but $18,796."

"Better educational opportunity results that is conditioned only upon the difference in wealth."

As a solution, Dees suggested the state might consider a "weighted matching program" at the state and local levels for public school support.

First, the state would continue its basic contribution to current operating expense. Second, the state would require by law a minimum level of participation by the localities similar to what the school districts are now doing but at a consistent level statewide. Third, the state would condone supplemental programs on the local level by those districts willing to bear additional local taxing.

"At levels two and three the state would provide matching funds according to a table of 'effort' levels, 'effort' being that effort necessary for raising locally a certain number of tax dollars," Dees explained. "...The availability of matching funds satisfies the Serrano standard that variations in local wealth does not affect the spending for the education of any child."

"In general, we recommend only a decriminalization of possession of marijuana for personal use on both the state and federal levels," the commission said.

It would continue to be a felony to grow marijuana, to sell it for profit or to possess it with intent to sell.

There would be fines of up to $100 for smoking in public or public possession of more than an ounce or distributing it without profit.

Jail terms would be allowed up to 60 days and $100 fine for disorderly conduct linked with public marijuana use and penalties of up to a year and $1,000 fine for driving a vehicle under the influence of marijuana.

Marijuana was found to be less dangerous than generally believed, although it was concluded that anyone driving under the influence of marijuana is a serious threat to public safety.

We are still not convinced that marijuana is a harmless substance; however we find ourselves in general agreement with the Commission's report.

Use of marijuana is becoming rather widespread in the nation and it is obvious that stiff penalties are doing nothing to deter this increasing use. Instead they are often putting blots on the records of young people who would otherwise start out their careers with no record of arrests.

We cannot condone the use of marijuana since it is obvious it is but another drug to temporarily warp the mind. The commission has concluded that it creates another danger on the highways. On the other hand its use in privacy does not warrant some of the stiff sentences that can be handed out under present laws.

Government policy in this country should be to discourage use of marijuana or any other substance which affects our faculties. This can be done best, however, through education along with strong laws for those who seek to profit from the distribution of marijuana.

The commission's recommendations seem sensible to us the state and federal governments should move immediately to implement them.

Golda Fearful Of Soviet Deal

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Although Israel's public mood toward President Nixon is more euphoric today than at any time since he took office, Israeli fears of a U.S.-Soviet deal at the expense of Israel during Mr. Nixon's mission to Moscow now threaten to undermine that surface harmony.

The mere existence of these fears, in fact, is beginning to corrode the remarkably warm relations established between the President and Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir during their long, private conversation here in December, details of which are still a White House secret.

What Mrs. Meir now wants is assurance that President Nixon will bar any Middle East agreements with Communist party chief Leonid Brezhnev and other Soviet leaders during his week of summit talks in May.

Considering the fact that Mrs. Meir has now extracted virtually everything she asked from the President, including a new batch of Phantom fighter bombers and other advanced military technology to guarantee Israel's continuing superiority over the Arabs, this desire to keep the Middle East off the Nixon-Brezhnev agenda is angering the President's foreign policy advisers.

"If the Russians raise the Middle East with the President," one told us drily, "the President will talk no matter what they want on Tel Aviv."

Actually, Administration experts see little if any chance of a deal with Moscow to break the deadlock that finds Israel still in control of all Arab lands seized five years ago. But the Israelis, always terrified by the spectre of a settlement "imposed" on them by the great powers, sharply disagree on grounds that Moscow has a major card to play and strong incentive to play it: acceptance of a settlement along the lines of the Rogers plan first unveiled in late 1969.

The Russians dismissed the Rogers plan out of hand, but U.S. strategists now believe Moscow regrets that hasty turnaround. Calling for complete Israeli withdrawal from the Sinai peninsula, the Rogers plan was also totally unacceptable to Israel it still is.

The Soviet incentive, in Israel eyes, is obvious, and that is Moscow's increasing need to satisfy its Arab clients by bringing about Israeli withdrawal from the Sinai peninsula.

Soviet prestige has been steadily declining within the Arab world, with two major setbacks: the humiliating failure of a Soviet-backed Communist coup d'etat in Sudan last year; and the highly visible Soviet help to India in the India-Pakistan war last winter. Arab states, led by Egypt, were bitter that the Russians found it possible to help India achieve what it wanted in South Asia but for almost five years have been powerless to help the Arabs achieve a return of the conquered Arab territories.

According to this Israeli scenario, Soviet leaders might boldly offer President Nixon a plan to reduce the estimated 14,000 Soviet military technicians and advisers now in Egypt as an inducement for Mr. Nixon to resurrect the discarded

A WORD ON TRAVEL
Although there is a great cry going up everywhere about scarcity of funds, people seem to be spending a lot of money on travel. Some travel projects may undoubtedly be a waste of money. Many of them constitute a broadening of one's outlook to such an extent that travel becomes a blessing — almost a necessity.

Let us see our own country first. The millions of us who live in this broad land believe it to be the best that the world has to offer in opportunity, general comfort and peaceful living. A malicious nation could very well wipe out our existence if they had sinister designs against us and no conscience about using them.

Traveling should begin as early as we have money to spare and physical stamina to meet a closely bound program of events every day. And yet, not every day, for we need to take times of rest if we are going to enjoy the splendor of new sights and new acquaintances.

That person is foolish indeed who keeps putting off the project of travel until it is too late to get much satisfaction out of the project. Very young children cannot, of course, be dragged about over hemispheres and continents. Neither should they be kept within a city block until they are ready to go to college. It takes planning to bring about business success. It takes planning also to bring about satisfactory travel. This is a problem that requires reflection as well as cash. Start reflecting a bit and thumbing over the leaflets which travel agencies distribute.

Those Paper-Shredders

WASHINGTON—Among the many startling revelations that have come out of the International Telephone and Telegraph hearings is that ITT sent a team of security men down from New York to shred all of the memorandums in the company's Washington office.

ITT said this was absolutely necessary because Jack Anderson printed a confidential memo of lobbyist Dita Beard's (she has since denied writing it). The ITT people assured the Senate Judiciary Committee that they only destroyed "old memos" and did not cut up anything that had to do with the hearings. They also said Dita Beard not only participated in the paper shredding but got so involved in it that she wanted to throw everything away.

I can just imagine the scene as the security people bring in the paper shredder, which looks exactly like a wastepaper basket with blades on it.

"Well, Dita, we've come down from New York to destroy all your old memos and papers, but, of course, we have to be careful we do not destroy anything that could help the Senate investigation regarding our contribution to the Republican convention."

"Of course. Where shall we begin?"

"How about this program from the Kentucky Derby?"

"Oh boy, was that a Kentucky Derby! Did I ever tell you guys what I said to Atty. Gen. John Mitchell at Gov.

Louis Nunn's house before I passed out on the floor?"

"We'd rather not hear about that, Dita."

"Well, I told him if his Justice Department didn't..."

"Dita, please. Can we get on with the shredding? Now, what about these folders on the San Diego Sheraton hotels?"

"I thought you wanted me to give them to the Republican National Committee to show them what they were getting for our noble $400,000 commitment."

"Dita, there is no $400,000 commitment."

"Oh? Why didn't someone tell me, so I wouldn't have put it in my memo which Jack Anderson printed?"

"You didn't write a memo about the $400,000."

"Well, if I didn't write it, why are you shredding it?"

"We're just trying to clean out our files, Dita. It's company policy to do this every two years. Now what about this autographed photo of Peter Flanigan from the White House?"

"You're not going to shred that, are you?"

"We have a saying at ITT headquarters, Dita—'Better shredded than dead.'"

Other Editors Say Reason Without Cost

(Henderson Dispatch)

Health, Education and Welfare is so accustomed to squandering public money that it goes in for the most trivial proposals, whatever the cost and however non-essential. The latest one is intriguing. A $23,000 fund is asked for a study to find out why tots fall off tricycles. Can you beat that?

The title of the proposed study, according to Rep. William J. Scherle, R-Iowa, is "The Evaluation and Parameterization Characteristic of Two and Three Wheeled Vehicular Toys for Riding." Repeat, can you beat that? When money is spent for such foolishness it is no wonder that the public debt is going up to $450 billion.

This $23,000 is not even a drop in the bucket as to what the government spends annually, but, considering the purpose of the proposed outlay, it's a pretty big drop. If Congress approves such a monstrosity of expenditure as this, the honorables on Capitol Hill should be asked to assess anew their own fitness for office.

If any one is so irresponsible as to approve this project, probability is that the report would require page after page after page to print, when actually the explanation could be given in a single paragraph. We will offer one without any cost to anybody.

Tots fall off tricycles because of lack of experience, immaturity or possibly some mechanical defect in the tricycle. There it is in one sentence without cost to the government or the use of myriads of high-sounding words that might require resort to a dictionary to learn their meaning. And even then nothing seriously beneficial would have been accomplished.

If bureaucrats who pour tax money down drains or gutters in sums of this sort, or worse, they would learn better if the cash had to come directly from their pockets in lieu of the bottomless barrel they feel is there to be drawn upon nonchalantly, as if something worthwhile were being undertaken.

Over-Regulation Fears Voiced

By ELMER ROESSNER
The charge has frequently been made that the Nixon Administration is overly friendly to big business; the charge has been especially vociferous in recent days during Jack Anderson's expose of International Telephone and Telegraph's political activities.

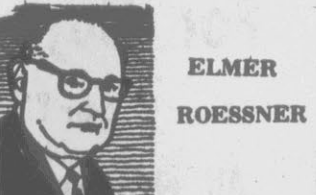

Nevertheless, there is a large element of business that feels that at least some element of the Administration has been reckless in its treatment of business.

Franklin M. Kreml, president of the Automobile Manufacturers Association, told the National Automobile Dealers Association that there is danger of government over-regulation of that industry and that, "We are I fear, on the same road that airlines and railroad industries have traveled."

C. Howard Hardesty Jr., senior vice president of Continental Oil Co., told the American Mining Congress that there was a decline in public confidence because of "slanted investigations, blatant falsehoods and political prejudgments" by the Federal Trade Commission.

The FTC has been under fire from other business sectors recently because of its efforts to write new basic rules for all advertising, questioning, for example, Wonder Bread's slogan that it "builds strong bodies 12 ways" on the grounds that other breads have the same added nutrients. Wonder Bread, incidentally, is an ITT subsidiary.

And Henry Ford II stated, "We must deal with air quality standards that go beyond present or foreseeable technology and with the standard that we install air bags before they are fully developed...There are some who say that industry should not complain about legal requirements that cannot be met — that such standards are needed to frighten industry into doing its utmost — and that standards that really turn out to be impossible to be modified when the time comes. I say that it is wrong in principle to establish legal requirements that cannot be obeyed and are bound to cause conflict and controversy.

"To leave management uncertain of what it must do to obey the law until the last moment before the law becomes effective is to create waste and chaos and to trifle with the jobs and incomes of American workers."

This view got unexpected support when a government group in the Office of Science and Technology estimated that the new auto regulations would add $775 to the retail price of the average car.

Continental Oil's Hardesty cited a report of the House

Hardly A Key Factor

By GREGG HERRINGTON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — North Carolina's first presidential preference primary is not likely to be one of the key political events of 1972, thanks to former Gov. Terry Sanford, the timing of the election and the surprising strength of Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace.

The candidacy of Sanford, now president of Duke University, Wallace's surprising 42-per-cent win in the March 14 Florida primary and the more important Ohio "primary just four days before North Carolina's contest, are expected to de-emphasize the May 6 Tar Heel election.

"It'll boil down to a Sanford-Wallace election," said an aide for one national Democratic candidate. "There's no sense wasting time and money there when your man could be campaigning in Ohio."

The Ohio primary is more attractive to the candidates because it is worth 153 delegate votes at the party's Miami Beach convention compared to North Carolina, which is worth only 64. In addition, the Ohio contest is uncluttered by any local or favorite son-type candidates, and Wallace is not entered there.

North Carolina's 64 votes are to be divided among the top four finishers on the first convention ballot only. After that, the delegates are free to vote their conscience.

While Sanford, Wallace and New York Rep. Shirley Chisholm are expected to campaign relatively hard in North Carolina, Sens. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine and, to a greater extent, Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington have apparently decided to reduce their efforts in the Tar Heel state. Only those five are on the ballot.

Muskie is backed by Gov. Robert W. Scott, who went out on a political limb more than a year ago to endorse him. Scott is head of a flourishing statewide committee backing Mus-

Strike Prevention Need Talked

DURHAM, N. C. (AP) — W. J. Usery Jr., assistant secretary of labor, says some form of imposed settlement might be necessary to resolve work stoppages in the transportation industry that cause severe public inconvenience or threaten the economy.

Speaking Thursday to Southern management executives at Duke University, Usery said the administration shares his concern that "compulsion is bad" and his conviction that "free collective bargaining is good."

However, he said, labor-management disputes in the major transportation industries "have been posing more and more problems, more and more impediments that become more and more difficult to resolve by the processes of free collective bargaining."

Usery said the answer might lie with the administration's proposed crippling strikes prevention act now before Congress.

The proposal is opposed by some segments of labor, primarily because of a provision under which an impartial board would choose from the final best offers of each side and impose it on the parties.

The measure also would give the president two other new options: an extension of the cooling-off period for another 30 days, if the dispute appeared to be nearing a solution, and limited operation of the transportation facilities to handle goods vital to defense or to the economy.

"No one wants to dictate the settlement of a labor-management dispute in this nation," said Usery. "But the increasing frequency of disruption of the economy by such disputes in this industry has put the question of the public interest squarely on the line, and demanded that we find a way to respect and protect that interest."

Usery was chief negotiator for the International Association of Mechanics before his appointment by President Nixon three years ago. He said he hoped that labor and management "will find ways of their own to prevent crippling work stoppages on the railroads, in the airlines, in the trucking industry, at the docksides and on board ships."

When the government proposes such measures such as the crippling strikes prevention act, he said, "it does so reluctantly, in sadness, you might say. Such a proposal can only be born of the failure of labor and management to function within the framework of the free collective bargaining system."

Usery spoke at the 31st annual Southeastern Personnel conference.

Placed 4th In Essay Contest

William Llye Barlow, a junior at Rose High School, has been named fourth place winner in the annual "Ability Counts" essay contest sponsored by the North Carolina Governor's Committee on Employment of the Handicapped and the President's similar committee.

The title assigned for the essay this year was "Employment of the Handicapped: How Well Is My Community Informed?" For his entry, Barlow received a Certificate of Merit from the President's Committee, presented by Governor Bob Scott; and a monetary award in the amount of $50.00.

At the Pitt County level, Jimmy Nelson, a student at North Pitt High School won top place in the contest.

Student winners statewide were: first place, Steven L. Vitek of Charlotte; second place Pamela Scott Ranson of Charlotte; and third place, Earl M. Vaughan, Jr. of Cleveland.

Top winner Vitek received a certificate and $200, plus a check for $150 from the State AFL-CIO to cover expenses to Washington, D.C. to attend the annual meeting of the President's Committee. His entry is automatically entered into the national competition for student essays this year.

Seek Triple State Funds

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The Community College Advisory Council wants to increase the state budget by $221 million for North Carolina's 56 technical institutes and community colleges during the 1973-75 biennium.

The recommendation, approved by the council Thursday, would nearly triple state funds going to the community colleges. It would provide for increased enrollment from 49,000 to 72,000 and a 25 per cent faculty pay raise during the two-year period.

In the past, the state Board of Education has closely followed the council's recommendations in submitting its requests to the legislature.

Ben Fountain, president of the community college system, said the recommendation would enable the system to meet all its campus and construction needs for the next several years.

The request proposed some $58 million for construction at the institutions.

Both Items On Agenda Okayed At Joint Meet

The two items on the agenda of the Joint City-County Planning and Zoning Commission, held Wednesday night at 8:00 p.m. in the Council Chambers of City Hall, were both recommended for approval by members of the joint commissions.

Both items were for rezoning requests. The first was that of D. G. Nichol's request for rezoning of property on U.S. 264 across from Cliff's oyster bar, with a portion to be rezoned R-6 residential and another portion to be rezoned highway commercial. The property is currently zoned R-20.

The second item was a request for rezoning approximately four acres owned by Dallas McPherson. The property is located on the north side of U.S. 264 and lies adjacent to the Greenville putt-putt. McPherson is seeking a change from RA-20 residential to highway commercial.

kie's candidacy that just last week moved to a larger headquarters in Raleigh.

But Muskies himself is expected to make no more than a single, two-day swing through the state shortly before the May 6 primary. And Jackson's strategists say their candidate hasn't decided yet whether to make any effort in North Carolina.

One source said if Muskies' campaign in North Carolina continues, Jackson will make a determined effort there just for the opportunity to beat Muskies, regardless of Sanford and Wallace and Mrs. Chisholm's expected strength.

In the media campaign, a spot check with some North Carolina television stations Thursday showed Sanford has already bought time or arranged for possible future purchases in Winston-Salem, Raleigh and Asheville, at least. The only other broadcast activity discerned so far is a series of radio spots some Wallace supporters have been running in Charlotte.

Mrs. Chisholm, a black, is counting chiefly on volunteer help on college campuses and in black neighborhoods. She was in the state for two days last week and has scheduled another trip for the first week of April.

Jackson and Muskies, along with Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota and Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota, will spend most of the latter part of April concentrating on Ohio's May 2 primary.

Wallace is not entered in that contest, and Jackson is known to see it as possibly his best chance to present himself as an alternative to the Alabama governor. Both men have stressed their opposition to forced busing to achieve school desegregation and the need for a strong national defense.

In addition to the Ohio conflict, several important primaries are scheduled for the same period as North Carolina's: Indiana, May 2, 76 delegate votes; Tennessee, May 4, 49 delegates; Nebraska, May 9, 24 delegates; and West Virginia, May 9, 35 delegates.

puncture get relief.

He says he learned from his grandmother and from a Japanese doctor the ancient Far Eastern method of therapy by sticking needles in a patient's body.

He soon will have an article on acupuncture published in the North Carolina Medical Journal.

He treats only patients who have been referred by other doctors, and he limits the number who are referred. He has been practicing acupuncture in Winston-Salem since he came here in 1966.

Among his latest patients is William Strecker, 55, a free lance writer from a Detroit, Mich., suburb. He suffers from diabetes, high blood pressure, poor circulation and a difficulty of the colon.

He is undergoing a two-week course of acupuncture. And Wednesday night, in his motel room, he received the second treatment by Toyama, who stuck 30 flexible, stainless steel needles half an inch into his arms, throat, stomach, legs, and into the flesh on either side of his spine.

As he worked, Toyama said, "The first needle is a little painful, but he won't feel the others. If you're in the right spot the patient does not complain."

Strecker said he lost much of his left leg in an accident and poor blood circulation threatens the loss of the remainder of the leg.

Toyama said the needles stimulate the nervous system, which in turn stimulates the brain. The brain, he added, then is able to order the endocrine system to correct any imbalance, and Strecker's diabetes and high blood-pressure result from an imbalance in his endocrine system.

Giant Soviet Spy Satellite Said In Orbit

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Russians have sent aloft a big new satellite which may have improved their ability to spy on American communications, U.S. military and space experts say.

After studying Cosmos 476, launched March 1, these experts say they believe it represents a new generation of Russian electronic intelligence satellite.

The "ferrets," as they are called, are designed to eavesdrop on other nations' radio traffic and to monitor radar. They usually record radio and radar signals they pick up.

Ground stations then interrogate the satellites by radio as they pass within range and extract the information.

Both the Soviets and the United States orbit spy satellites which gather intelligence information by camera and with a variety of exotic sensors, but neither government acknowledges use of such satellites.

Most Soviet military satellites are launched under the cover name Cosmos. They usually are described by the Russians simply as research vehicles. The first Cosmos was launched 10 years ago.

U.S. space experts estimate the Cosmos 476 payload at between 10,000 and 12,000 pounds, about 10 times heavier than an earlier generation of Soviet ferrets still in orbit.

They say the heavier weight of the new satellite suggests that it incorporates much more equipment than older models and probably involves a greater degree of technical sophistication.

Two earlier launches, in late December 1970 and last April, were believed related to the new spy-satellite class.

Govm't Concludes Case Against Berrigan, Six

By LEE LINDER
Associated Press Writer

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) —

After presenting testimony from 64 witnesses, the government has rested its bomb-kidnap conspiracy case against anti-war priest Philip Berrigan and six others.

Today the defense presses motions for directed verdicts of acquittal.

"The government has failed to prove that there has been any conspiracy," said attorney Paul O'Dwyer, a member of the six-man defense team headed by former Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark.

"They didn't prove there was a plot to kidnap the President's adviser, Henry Kissinger, and they didn't prove a plan to blow up government property," O'Dwyer said.

Chief prosecutor William Lynch said, "The evidence is overwhelming that they are guilty."

In a memorandum to U.S. District Court Judge R. Dixon Herman, the defendants accused the government of violating their constitutional rights by "proceeding against them in bad faith." They said they would introduce evidence to show this was deliberate discrimination.

"They are being prosecuted not for their conduct alone, but principally to vindicate the director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Justice Department of the United States," the 24-page memo said.

"That animus and, indeed, malice arose because of the defendants' conscientious outrage at the government's war in Indochina, and because of their outspoken dedication to civil disobedience as a way of bringing the war to a halt."

Lynch called the defense claim of discriminatory prosecution ridiculous. Berrigan and the others are charged with conspiring in 1970 to kidnap White House aide Kissinger, blow up tunnels that carry steam heat to federal buildings in Washington, and vandalize Selective Service offices in at least nine states.

"They have proved there have been draft board raids, which we never denied, but they have not proved these were part of any conspiracy, which we do deny," O'Dwyer said.

The government rested its case after 24 days of testimony, one day short of the ninth week of the trial.

Thursday's final three government witnesses were all from the FBI, making it 21 agents put on by the government.

Palmer G. Tunstall, a handwriting expert, first authenticated letters exchanged between Berrigan and another defendant, Sister Elizabeth McAlister, concerning the alleged Kissinger kidnap plot.

The letters were copied by paid informer Boyd Douglas Jr., while he served as courier for Berrigan during the spring and summer of 1970. Both were inmates at the federal penitentiary in Lewisburg, Pa.

TV Networks Promise Cut Excessive Violence

By JANET STAIHAR
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The presidents of the three major television networks say they plan to eliminate excessive violence from children's programs which could be mentally harmful to the young viewers.

In fact, ABC President Elton H. Rule said Thursday that by this fall cartoon series which depend solely on action and are devoid of comedy will have been taken off the network's children's schedule.

"We are placing additional emphasis on resolving conflict in children's programs through nonviolent means," he told the Senate subcommittee on communications, which is investigating crime and violence shown on television.

Rule, along with NBC President Julian Goodman and CBS President John A. Schneider, agreed with the U.S. surgeon general's recent report that there is a causal relationship between TV violence and aggressive behavior in some children.

Rule said greater emphasis is being placed on presenting children's programs which resolve conflict through charm, intelligence and imagination.

When selecting the time slot for a new series, more emphasis will be placed on the possible bad impact the show might have on young viewers, Rule said.

He said ABC makes a point to stress the solution of crime and the arrest of criminals on programs which have a definite adventure slant.

"In programs of this type, by stressing the solutions rather than the portrayal of the crime, we hope to combat disrespect for law and authority," Rule said. He gave as examples "The FBI" and "Mod Squad."

"I know in my heart we have done a good job in reducing the amount of violence on NBC," said Goodman.

Goodman said it would be advisable to consider pre-screening and a TV-rating system similar to movie ratings, but he added it might have some inherent weaknesses when applied to home television.

The vice president in charge of NBC's Department of Broadcast Standards, Herminio Traviesas, said that since 1961 the network has rejected 139 out of 817 feature films because they were unsuitable for children.

Schneider said that doing away with all violence on TV would wipe out such popular series as "Gunsmoke," "The FBI" and "The Six Wives of Henry VIII," as well as football games and news reports from Vietnam.

Holding Annual Service Sunday

The Hope For All Lodge No. 175, Knights of Pythias and Pride of Farmville Lodge No. 583, Courts of Calanthes, will hold their annual Thanksgiving services and observances and observances of their 92nd anniversary of the order Sunday at 4 p.m. at St. James FWB Church, Farmville.

The Rev. R.A. Morris, pastor of Union Baptist Church of Tarboro and the First Baptist Church of Warsaw, will deliver the special message.

The Rev. Morris holds a B.S. degree from Elizabeth City State University and a M.A. degree from New York University in administration and supervision of schools.

He has served as teacher-principal and home school coordinator in the Greene County schools for more than 42 years.

Airport Grants Are Announced

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration said today it has authorized a $164,000 grant to the Maine Department of Aeronautics for preparation of a state-wide airport system plan.

Airport master-planning grants to cover two-thirds of the estimated project costs also were authorized for: A new airport to serve the Berea-Richmond area of Madison County, Ky., $6,000; and one to serve the Morgantown-Lenoir, N. C., area, $8,600; Lewis B. Wilson airport, Macon, Ga., $21,000; St. Augustine, Fla., airport, $17,000; Pikeville-Pike County, Ky., airport, $16,000; Wood County airport, Parkersburg, W. Va., $15,000.

Brownie Troop Visited Bank

The members of Brownie Troop 246 visited the Bank of North Carolina Wednesday.

Mrs. Lynne Brown explained the functions of the bank and then conducted a tour of the new facilities for the scouts.

The Brownies attending were Robin Chandler, Marjorie Crane, Mary Louise Crisp, Paula Daughtry, Lori Jo Edwards, Kay and Kim Fisher, Teresa Little, Deborah Lowder, Debbie Narron, Stacy Stephenson, Becky Sullivan and Julia Yongue. Mrs. Gerald Crane and Mrs. Hoyt Narron are the leaders.

Coordinator In Campaign

Charles Malone has been named as assistant campus coordinator for East Carolina University for the campaign of Jim Hunt, Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor.

Malone is a pre-law major at ECU, having just returned from a tour of service in Vietnam with the U.S. Army. Before serving in the Army, Malone was a student at Campbell College. While at Campbell, he was president of the Campbell College YDC.

Malone served as a staff member to Senator Sam J. Ervin, Jr. from 1968 to 1969.

Hunt stated he was happy to have Malone on the campaign, and that he felt Malone's experience as a veteran, as well as a student, would be valuable in the campaign.

Malone, a native of Coats, and a graduate of Coats High School, will work closely with Jeff Mann and Bob Salem in the ECU campaign effort.

(Editor's note: The odds are all against anyone trying to hijack an airliner, but too many are challenging the odds. This final story of a two-part series by the AP Special Assignment Team outlines the tough new steps aimed at stopping hijackers before they get off the ground.)

By JOHN S. LANG
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The world must find a way to stop terrorism in the skies or give up air commerce as it is known today.

That is the belief of government and airline officials trying to cope with a crisis which has thus far defied all security measures.

As quickly as precautions have been devised, the faces of terror have changed: from a political exile with a gun, to organized teams of revolutionaries, to a disguised voice on the phone demanding a fortune to stop mass murder.

Denouncing "vicious extortion plots," President Nixon has ordered the airlines to impose comprehensive security on their ground operations.

"We must not be intimidated by such lawlessness," the President said. "Rather we must and will meet this blackmail on the ground, as vigorously as we have met piracy in the air."

N.C. Increase Drug Penalty

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The penalty in North Carolina for illegal possession of amphetamines and speed, two drug stimulants, is being increased to bring state law in conformity with federal law.

The new regulation, adopted Thursday by the state Board of Health, goes into effect in 30 days. It will increase from a misdemeanor to a felony the penalty for possession of amphetamines, phermetrazine, and methamphetamine and methylphenidate.

A first-offense conviction of possession or sale of these drugs is punishable by a prison sentence of up to five years and a fine of up to $5,000. Possession of these drugs is legal only when prescribed by a physician.

Under a law passed by the 1971 General Assembly, the Board of Health has the authority to change the penalties for possession and sale of various drugs covered by the drug law.

In other action, the board voted to require certification of small turtles entering North Carolina to insure that they do not carry salmonella, a disease that can be fatal if contracted by small children. The regulation goes into effect July 1.

Dr. Martin Hines, chief of the epidemiology division, said, "The children kiss these turtles, and can drink the water. They can easily get the disease."

The board also was told that local doctors are being encouraged to stop vaccinating small children for smallpox. The risk of the vaccination is greater than the risk of contracting the disease, the board was told.

Workshop On The Diabetic Scheduled

"Communicating with the Diabetic: A Shared Learning Experience," a workshop for health personnel who wish to improve their skill in communicating with the diabetic, will be offered by East Carolina University Friday, April 7.

The workshop is co-sponsored by the ECU School of Nursing and the ECU Division of Continuing Education.

Dr. Ruby Barnes, ECU's director of continuing education in nursing, said the workshop is intended to improve the participant's oral communication skills in assessing the learning needs of the diabetic and in instructing him within his environmental setting.

Panel speakers include: Luarel H. Holloman, diabetic teaching nurse, Greenville (moderator); James L. Rees, assistant professor of speech, ECU;

Dr. Wallace Wooles, dean of medicine, ECU; Patricia Lawrence, Diabetes Consultation and Education Service, Chapel Hill; and Dr. William W. Fore, internal medicine specialist, Greenville.

Persons interested in attending the workshop should write Dr. Barnes at the School of Nursing, Box 2753, Greenville, for further information and enrollment forms.

Queen

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Ann Elder, a star of the TV program "Laugh-In," will reign as Queen Azalea XXV during the annual North Carolina Azalea Festival at Wilmington April 13-16. In addition to her "Laugh-In" part, Miss Elder also has had dramatic acting roles.

In announcing the steps to be taken, the government was deliberately vague—to prevent criminals from inventing still more successful tactics.

But generally, they call for installing metal detectors at most terminal gates, constant surveillance of parked aircraft and tightening the baggage handling procedures.

These measures will cost $100 million.

The expense could be driven vastly higher by other steps being considered, such as isolating aircraft from terminals with fences and matching every passenger with every bag, which could require the redesign of all airport baggage handling facilities.

The fact is, airports in the United States are poorly designed for security. Fences exist primarily for channeling traffic; terminals allow mingling of travelers with sightseers.

"In the past airport managers would suggest security measures to be designed in new terminals but these were resisted by airline management," said one industry source. "Security didn't increase revenues."

Now, he said, security features will be incorporated into future airports and added whenever existing ones are remodeled.

Criticisms of the airlines' commitment to security also are voiced by administrators of the government's sky marshal program.

"During the year and a half we operated the sky marshal program on a voluntary basis, a few carriers did a good job but the majority played the odds and didn't buy metal detectors," said Al Butler of the FAA's Security Division.

The President's order made airline commitment to the sky marshal program mandatory, and the force of 1,200 marshals was reorganized to conform with the official view that airline terrorism must be stopped on the ground, not in the sky.

The new plan leaves only 200 marshals on flying status, concentrating the rest at 33 major airports for passenger searches and luggage checks.

City and county law enforcement officers trained by the FAA in anti-hijacking techniques will cover the remainder of the 87 airports through which 90 per cent of the traveling public moves.

For all the precautions being taken by the government, a demand by the Airline Pilots Association for a bilateral agreement with Cuba for the immediate return of hijackers is being ignored.

ALPA President J.J. O'Donnell told Congress last year that "to ignore Cuba is to ignore hijackings."

"Our disapproval of their political system is going to cause at some future date the death of a hundred people on one of our aircraft."

O'Donnell noted that the State Department sends empty planes to Cuba to fly refugees to this country, and said he had urged the State Department to give free rides to Americans wanting to go to Cuba.

The other side of the argument is evidence that Cuba has had quite enough of the hijackers. Among other things, it has deported 13 of them back to the United States.

The history of air terrorism is filled with disagreements between various government departments, between various segments of the industry and between nations on just what to do.

But the bombing two weeks ago and threats of more explosions aboard aircraft spurred unprecedented cooperation by all concerned.

Lt. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis, chief of the sky marshals, termed the bombing "a blessing in disguise."

"As a result, civil aviation security has never been higher than at this moment," he said. "The traveling public should take confidence from the reaction I know is being taken by the airlines to ensure there will be no repetition."

In fact, what the traveling public was taking were cars or trains.

The bombings generated a reaction which the hijackings had never achieved, resulting in widespread cancellations or switching of reservations to airlines not threatened.

While industry and government officials huddled to work out ways of coping with the threats, many involved in the conferences expressed fear for the future of air transportation.

"The costs may seem prohibitive," said Gen. Davis. "But the alternative really amounts to loss of air commerce as we know it. We've got to pay the cost in order to preserve air transportation for the traveling public."

Obituaries

Dixon — Mr. Robert Thomas Dixon, 54, died Thursday.

Funeral services will be conducted Saturday at 11 a.m. from the Thomas-Yelverton Funeral Chapel by the Rev. Ralph Messick and the Rev. Jack Daniel. Burial will be in the Hollywood Cemetery in Farmville.

Mr. Dixon a Farmville native, was a retired school teacher. He is survived by a brother, H. Lewis Dixon of Wilson.

Norris — Mrs. Corinne Cox Norris, 75, died here Thursday night.

Funeral services will be conducted Saturday at 11 a.m. at the First Baptist Church of Dunn. The body will then be taken to Washington, N.C., where it will be at Oden Funeral from 2:30 to 3:30. Burial will be in Oakdale Cemetery in Washington.

Surviving Mrs. Norris are a sister, Mrs. L. D. Harris of Washington, N.C.; seven half sisters, Mrs. L. T. Hardee and Mrs. Norman Stanley, both of Greenville, Mrs. Frank Johnson of Washington, N.C., Mrs. Doll Miller of Cincinnati, Ohio, Mrs. Clinton Ross of California, Mrs. Clarence Davis of Newport News, Va., Mrs. Thurston Edmondson of Goldsboro; and four half brothers, Levi Cox of Alexandria, Va., Tommy Cox of Warrenton, Va., and Grover and Charlie Cox, both of Greenville; and a stepmother, Mrs. Stella Cox of Newport News, Va.

Huggins — MACCLESFIELD — Funeral services for Mrs. Bertha Dupree Huggins will be conducted Sunday at 3 p.m. at Anderson Chapel Missionary Baptist Church near Sharp Point by Rev. Chester Frazier. Burial will follow in the church cemetery.

The daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Riley Dupree and the widow of the late Tom Huggins, she died last Sunday morning. She was a member of Anderson Chapel and served on the Usher Board for seven years.

Surviving her are a daughter, Mrs. Bertha Weaver of the home; a granddaughter; and a great grandchild; four sisters, Mrs. Rena Knight, Mrs. Annie Lizes, Mrs. Mamie Kearney, and Bowles . . .

"North Carolina can do it well if we have the proper leadership."

Turning to another subject, Bowles told an Ayden insurance salesman, "I think we are in a mess in North Carolina," as far as auto liability insurance is concerned.

"It will take major surgery ... not just a Band-Aid will cure it..." according to Bowles.

"We need to hit the rating structure and hit it hard."

"It's not fair for a young driver to pay more than an old driver just because he is under 25 years old."

"Nobody is happy with the present system, so something has got to be wrong."

"I think we need a limited no-fault plan. A limited no-fault plan," Bowles said, "is the answer ... but I'm not for a pure no-fault plan."

Education is always an issue in North Carolina elections and Bowles was questioned about his position.

"I have made a promise to teachers that I think we can live with."

"Let's go back to at least 50 per cent of the general fund tax dollar for education. I am fully committed to a return to this historical percentage..." Bowles said.

Noting that the percentage is less than 50 per cent now, the candidate said "I'm not going to make any promises... that can't be kept, but I know full well we can find 50 per cent."

Bowles, too, suggested that a formal committee composed of leaders in the field of public education be appointed to advise the governor on their views of the problems and possible solutions in the education field.

Mrs. Susie Darden, all of Rt. 1, Macclesfield, and George L. Dupree of Greenville.

The body will be at the Hemby Memorial Funeral Chapel in Fountain from 5 p.m. Saturday until one hour of the funeral Sunday. Family visitation will be from 7 to 9 p.m. Saturday at the chapel.

Rogers — Mrs. Mable Hardy Rogers died at her home, Greenville Route 3, Wednesday afternoon after a brief illness. Funeral services will be conducted Sunday at 4 p.m. at Phillippi Baptist Church. Burial will be in the Phillippi Cemetery.

Mrs. Rogers, daughter of the late Arthur and Nimmie Hardy, was born in Pitt County and spent most of her life in Pitt County. She was a member of Phillippi Baptist Church.

Surviving are one sister, Mrs. Hattie Brown of Grimesland, Route 1, two brothers, Jim Hardy and Arthur Hardy both of the home.

The body will remain at Flanagan and Parker Funeral Home.

Moore — Mrs. Evelyn Moore died Tuesday in Grantham Rest Home Goldsboro, after a lingering illness. Funeral services will be conducted Sunday at 1 p.m. at Rock Spring F.W.B. Church. Burial will be in the Brown Hill Cemetery.

Mrs. Moore, daughter of the late Isaac and Catherine Williams was born in Pitt County. She was a member of Rock Spring F.W.B. Church.

Surviving are one daughter, Mrs. Josephine Glee of Philadelphia, Pa.; one brother, Leatchy Williams of Greenville. The family will be at 1207 W. Third St.

Peebles — Miss Lois Ann Peebles, 18, died in the National Institute of Health in Bethesda, Md., Wednesday night at 7:30.

Funeral arrangements are incomplete.

She spent all her life in New Bern and attended the New Bern High School when she was in the twelfth grade. She was a member of the Calvary Baptist Church in New Bern.

Surviving are her mother Mrs. Frances Mills Willis of New Bern; her father, Arthur F. Peebles of Orlando, Fla.; two sisters, Mrs. Douglas Banks and Miss Johnnie Willis, both of New Bern; a brother, Phillip Willis of New Bern; her maternal grandfather, Leslie Mills of Vanceboro; her maternal grandmother, Mrs. Virginia Haddock of Bridgeton; and the paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Peebles of Hubert.

N.C. Building Activity Down

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Building activity was 12.2 per cent lower in North Carolina this February than in same month a year ago.

The state Department of Labor reported Thursday that $49.4-million worth of building permits were issued in February in 36 North Carolina cities with populations over 10,000.

Charlotte led the cities, with permits totaling $8.9 million. Raleigh had $5.2 million, Greensboro $4.6 million and Goldsboro $4.5 million.

Early bow-shaped harps with four strings weighed less than one pound, while today's 46-string concert harps weigh 80 pounds.

Guarded By Goose Patrol

PARAMOUNT, Calif. (AP) — Anyone trying to snatch parts from the hundreds of trucks parked at the SSP Truck Equipment Co. is sure to run afoul of the goose patrol.

George, Rosie, Eddie and Cindy waddle around the company's 10 acres and honk alarmingly if anyone tries to sneak in at night.

"We made a deal with the neighbors," said Robert Wilhelm, the company's vice president. "If they hear the geese honking they call the sheriff."

The feathered burglar alarm system has been on the job six weeks and there have been no robberies.

Wilhelm said SSP has lost batteries and other items from the trucks at night in this Los Angeles suburb and decided to try the goose patrol after hearing of a distillery in Scotland using the birds to watch over whisky while it aged.

Train Rams School Bus

CONGERS, N.Y. (AP) — A Penn Central freight train ripped a school bus in half today at a remote grade crossing, killing at least three of the 50 high school pupils reported aboard.

The accident happened at 7:55 a.m. in the Clarkstown section of Congers at what a railroad spokesman described as a "private crossing" with no warning bells, lights or gates. The scene is in Rockland County some 25 miles northwest of New York City.

Arthur Harrison, the spokesman, said the crossing was not at a federal, state or county road and that he could not immediately determine who owned the access.

Witnesses said the 83-car train bound from Weehawken, N.J., to Selkirk, N.Y., hit the school bus broadside, leaving the rear of the bus at the crossing and pushing the front section a quarter-mile.

The accident left the bus a tangle of twisted metal. The scene was a maze of strewn books, lunches and dead or injured young victims who had been headed for nearby Nyack High School.

One fireman, who was not identified, walked dazed along the tracks, picking up school books with tears streaming down his face as he repeated again and again, "What a shame."

Residents of the area seemed reluctant to come close to the grisly accident scene. They gathered in groups some distance from the site, some carrying blankets and first-aid supplies.

One told a newsman that they had been seeking a signal at the crossing for two years.

A spokesman at Nyack Hospital, where the victims were taken, said at least 30 of the pupils were injured, some of them seriously. One pupil was dead on arrival.

CORRECTION

WINTERVILLE—Patrick Langley, a fourth grade student at A.G. Cox Grammar School, was named to the principal's list for the fourth marking period.

The name furnished by the school to The Daily Reflector, Patricia Langley, was in error.

VISITED HERE... Jim Hunt, Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor, met Thursday with students and friends on the East Carolina Campus. He is shown talking with Jeff

Candidate Jim Hunt Equal Time Rule Eased

Wilson attorney Jim Hunt, a Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor, was in Greenville and other areas of Pitt County Thursday for an informal campaign visit.

Hunt spent some time in Farmville meeting friends and supporters and then made several stops in Greenville before touring the East Carolina University campus.

At East Carolina, where he spent some two and a half hours, the candidate met and talked with faculty members and visited the ECU Student Union where he discussed his campaign with students and student leaders.

Campaign officials reported that Hunt planned the visit to Pitt County as an informal campaign stop and a chance to get together with area friends and supporters.

The attorney is a graduate of North Carolina State University where he was president of the Student Government for two years and voted "Most Outstanding Senior."

He holds a Masters Degree in Economics and the Degree of Juris Doctor from the University of North Carolina law school. Hunt is a partner in the law firm of Kirby, Webb and Hunt in Wilson.

Little Damage In Movie Fire

A popcorn room fire last night sent smoke into other parts of the Plaza Cinema.

Firemen, called at 8:55 p.m., reported only light smoke and fire damage resulted when the popcorn popper started to burn. The popper, according to officers, was allegedly left unattended.

The theater was evacuated during the last show.

Roy Griffin, manager of the facility, said the normal movie schedule will be maintained.

Confrontation Was Avoided

NAGS HEAD, N.C. (AP) — A potential confrontation between fox hunters and the Dare County Humane Society was averted Thursday when more than 100 motorized hunters drove over to Currituck County to do their hunting.

Most of them were hunting from small vehicles with four-wheel drive.

The hunters, who came to Nags Head for their 24th annual hunt, shifted it about 30 miles from its traditional scene. Humane society members had told the Dare County Sheriff's office they were prepared to sign warrants if dogs and hunters trespassed on their property.

Said Their Vows On Trapeze Bar

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Don Martinez and Alicia Farfan got their marriage off to a flying start.

There were hundreds of witnesses under the big top Thursday as the two aerial artists exchanged their vows swinging to and fro on a trapeze some 40 feet in the air.

The Rev. Earl R. Rineheart, perched on a stationary platform, performed the ceremony, asking each marriage question as Martinez and Miss Farfan swung toward him, then waiting until they approached again to give their answer.

Martinez, 28, and Miss Farfan, 21, met last year and joined in an act in April.

They decided to get married on the trapeze bar, Miss Farfan said, "because that's where we both belong."

Oof — That's Pirate Power

When you're in trouble, you do all you can to get out, and that's what Ralph Lamm did when he found himself stranded between first and second on a pickoff play. Lamm (14) rammed into Dartmouth second baseman Todd

Keiller (8) as Indian shortstop Bill Deevy looks on. The ball, which popped free of Keiller's glove lies in the dirt in back of Lamm, who was safe on the play. The Bucs won, 5-3. (Reflector Photos by Tommy Forrest)

Rampant Runners Slip By Goldsboro, Kinston

NEW BERN — Rose High School continued to roll in track gaining a victory in a three-way meet with two Division II Conference members. The Rampants finished with 78 points, while Goldsboro was second with 64. Kinston was third with just 17 points.

Overall, Rose won eight events, while Goldsboro took seven, but the Rose depth added to the victory margin. Rose's Mike Harris won the 100 and 220 yard dashes to be the lone double winner.

The Rampants next outing will be Wednesday, when they again travel to New Bern to meet the Bears and Rocky Mount.

The Big Ten had 10 football sellouts last year.

East Carolina University spotted the Dartmouth College Indians three runs before they made an out, then took advantage of inconsistency by the Indian pitchers to take a 5-3 win and keep their unbeaten string alive.

The victory was the fourth in a row for the Pirates, who entertained Dartmouth again this afternoon at 3 p.m. at Harrington Field. Virginia will visit the Bucs for two games Saturday and Sunday, both set for 2 p.m.

Tommy Toms, who was rattled for the three runs in the first frame, kept his cool however, and went the distance to gain the win, his first of the year. Dartmouth did managed to threaten him on several occasions, but each time, the Bucs managed to get out of trouble.

East Carolina, meanwhile, got only four hits off the Dartmouth pitching, but it was enough. In addition, Dartmouth helped them with two errors and allowed 10 walks and a hit batsman.

Dartmouth started the action early, getting all of their runs before the Pirates could account for a single out. Rick Klupchak led off with a walk and Gavin Troster got a bloop single into right that the wind dropped just in front of the charging Mike Aldridge. Toms then unleashed a wild pitch that moved both runners up.

Wayne Young followed with a single off the mound that bounced just under Tom's glove and on into center, scoring Klupchak with the first run. Frank Mannarino finished off the scoring with another single to center, driving in both Troster and Young. Young had moved to second on the relay from the outfield to home as Klupchak scored.

The Bucs then got the next two batters to hit into fielder's choices, and a grounder to first polished off the next to end the inning.

The Bucs got off a slight threat in the bottom of the first. With one out, Ralph Lamm walked, the first of four he got off Dartmouth starter Dave Highmark, and then raced all the way to third when Highmark's attempted pickoff was thrown wide of first. But the hurler struck out the next two batters to end that threat.

Dartmouth again threatened in the second, as leadoff batter Bill Deevy singled to right and moved up on a sacrifice, only to die at second.

The Bucs finally got their rally going in the third, coming up with three runs on just two hits, one of them an infield one. Toms got his own thing going as he led off with a single through the middle. Ron Leggett and Ralph Lamm both walked, loading the sacks. Matt Walker hit sharply into the hole between second and short, and although Todd Keiller made a diving stop on the ball, he was unable to make a play in time, as all runners were safe and Toms scored.

Dartmouth appeared to be ready to stop the rally there, getting the next two out, but Highmark hit Troy Eason, forcing in Leggett, and a walk to Mike Bradshaw brought over Lamm with the tying run.

The Indians tried to get back into the lead in the fourth, putting up their biggest threat since the first. With one out, Keiller singled and Deevy was hit by a pitch. Both moved up on a wild pitch, but Toms got the next two on a fly ball and a grounder back to the mound to get out of the inning.

The Bucs had their own rally cut short in the fourth by a bad call — an obvious one. With two away, Lamm walked, but was then picked off first. He was caught in a rundown, but charged into second, knocking the ball loose from Keiller to reach safely. Walker then hit a grounder down to third, and Bob Lang's throw to first pulled Wayne Young off the bag about two feet. Umpire MacIcolm Sykes, near second base, missed it, however, and called Walker out. The plate umpire involved in a possible play at third, was watching that area of the field and did not see the play at first, and could make no ruling despite East Carolina protests.

Finally, in the seventh, however, the Bucs pushed over two more runs and wrapped up the win. Lamm led off with his fourth walk and Walker also got a free trip. A third walk, to Aldridge, loaded the bases, and ECU Coach Earl Smith went for the squeeze with Larry Walters batting. The ball was thrown in the dirt, however, and bounced over catcher Tim McDonough's head, letting Lamm score easily from third. Walker, who made moved up, was caught in a rundown, however, when another attempted squeeze bunt was missed. Walters was fanned, but a walk to Eason kept things alive. Bradshaw singled into left, scoring Aldridge with the fifth Buc run, giving them a little breathing room.

Dartmouth failed to get anything else going, and the Bucs hung on from there on out to get the win.

Robersonville Falls To Bertie

ROBERSONVILLE — Bertie High School got a shutout from Wayne Dawson and pushed in two runs to take a 2-0 victory over Robersonville yesterday.

The loss was the first for the Golden Eagles, who had won their opener on two days earlier.

The Eagles could get nothing going in this one, however, as Dawson scattered five hits, while striking out seven and walking none.

Only Royal Corey was able to do anything against him, getting two of the five hits by the Eagles.

Robersonville hurler Matt Wilson also scattered five hits, but gave up two runs, one of them unearned. He walked four and struck out seven.

Bertie pushed over its first run in the fourth inning. David Sumner walked and Kent Willford was awarded first on interference by the catcher. Tommy Salinger then singled, scoring Sumner.

The other Bertie run came in the seventh inning. Salinger singled and stole second. He came around with the second run when Marshall Willford got a hit.

Salinger led the Bertie hitting, getting three of their five.

Robersonville travels to Elm City on Tuesday.

Carolina Falls To FSU; UCLA Wins

By DAN BERGER
Associated Press Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bill Walton and Otto Petty will never see eye to eye. Yet the 6-foot-11 UCLA center and the 5-7 Florida State guard loom as the key players this Saturday night in the national collegiate basketball finals.

Each propelled his team to a semifinal victory Thursday night, Walton and his favored UCLA bruins by a lopsided 96-77 over Louisville and Petty's Seminoles in a cliff-hanger.

Walton took only 13 shots, made 11 of them, wound up with 33 points and 21 rebounds and blocked six shots as the Bruins, seeking their sixth straight NCAA crown, demolished Louisville's Cardinals in the second half.

Florida State did its damage in the first half, leading by 23 points early in the final stanza, before edging North Carolina 79-75.

The free-wheeling Seminoles used quickness and a sizzling fast break plus Petty's dribbling skills to win. Later, winning Coach Hugh Durham said the same type of game is in store for the Bruins.

"We're not planning to slow the ball down," said Durham, admitting he's heard rumors that teams can't run and shoot with the Bruins and win.

"If you run against them, you might catch Walton away from the basket but if you slow down, he'll be there and gobble everything up."

Petty destroyed the North Carolina full-court press with some astonishing dribbling and

Durham said:

"Petty was the difference. If we can get the ball to him in the middle of the floor, he can get away from anybody. And even when he's double-teamed, he's tough to stop."

UCLA Coach John Wooden admitted Petty was the key to Florida State's triumph.

"We expect Petty will give us trouble on our press but we'll give him a lot of trouble, also," said Wooden.

Florida State's offense ran into a cold spell midway through the second half against the Tar Heels and North Carolina chewed away until the score was 70-65 with 5:45 to play. But a layup by Greg Samuel, the Seminoles' 5-9 starting guard, helped pull Florida State into the final game.

Walton, double teamed most of the night, started UCLA's famed fast break with quick outlet passes.

Petty scored 10 points and had six assists in leading the Seminoles but the junior won't start against the Bruins Saturday. Samuel begins each game because he's better on defense.

Durham said he brings on Petty to light a fire under his kids.

UCLA's Henry Bibby had an off night against Louisville, scoring just two points, but he was praised by Wooden for his fine defense on Jim Price. Even though the 6-foot-3 Cardinal guard scored 30 points, Wooden said many of them came when the game was no longer in doubt.

UCLA led Louisville 39-31 at halftime but took a commanding lead midway in the second half. The Cardinals appeared to have some trouble with the UCLA zone press but only committed 11 turnovers in the game.

Maryland, Niagra Get Berths In NIT Finals

By KEN RAPPOPORT
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Center Greg Cluess said he didn't, but referee Joe DeBonis said he did.

The referee had the last word, as usual, and called a foul on the St. John's, N.Y. big man.

Al Williams then made the last free throws, giving Niagara a tinging 69-67 basketball victory over the Redmen Thursday night in the semifinals of the 31st National Invitation Tournament.

"I didn't touch him, I didn't even come close," said Cluess after Niagara pulled out the thriller on Williams' foul shots with five seconds left and joined Maryland in the finals Saturday.

The Terrapins earlier advanced to the payoff game by running Jacksonville out of Madison Square Garden with a 91-77 victory.

Before Williams made the pressure-packed shots, the Redmen called time out in an attempt to make the little guard nervous.

"I had confidence, though," said Williams. "I practice my foul shooting as much as I do my jump shots."

Despite denials, the 5-foot-9 Williams thought he was hampered by the 6-9 Cluess when he went up for a shot.

"He grabbed me and hit me on the arm," said Williams.

Williams wound up with 15 points. Marshall Wingate was Niagara's leading scorer, hitting for 23, including three key field goals in the last six minutes.

Tom McMillen scored 25 points, including six crucial points in less than a minute of the second half, to hold Maryland to a surprisingly easy victory over Jacksonville in the opener.

The Dolphins had trimmed the Terps' lead from 38-31 at the half to 52-49 with 11:30 left in the game. Then Len Elmore fired in a turn-around jumper and McMillen delivered two field goals and two foul shots to make it 60-49.

"It was a wild game and that's just the way we like to play them," said Maryland Coach Lefty Driesell. "We had a chance to really open it up tonight."

Maryland not only kept up with the usually swift Dolphins, but actually beat them at their own game—the fast break.

"Maryland outplayed us," said Jacksonville Coach Tom Wasdin. "They outrebounded us, outdefensed us—they were just the better club tonight. It was that simple."

"We're still capable of a better game," said Elmore, who scored 23 points and grabbed 14 rebounds.

McMillen wound up with 25 points, many of them smooth, outside shots, and 12 rebounds.

Before it was over, the two big men had powered Maryland to a lopsided, 89-71 advantage.

Hash Marks Are Moved By NFL

By MIKE RATHET
HONOLULU (AP) — National Football League owners have changed their game by just seven yards—not even the distance of a first down. But Super Bowl coaches Tom Landry and Don Shula hink that's enough to significantly aid the sport's harassed offensive units.

Four rule changes actually were adopted Thursday. The major one concerned movement of the hash marks used for the placement of the ball 3½ yards more towards the center of the field on either side, or an adjustment of seven yards.

It's that seven yards Dallas Coach Landry and Miami Coach Shula feel will give the offense more maneuverability against today's mammoth defensive units, which during the last three years have been held largely responsible for a 100 touchdown dropoff in scoring.

"I think it's a step in the right direction," said Landry. "It will enable offenses to operate better. It gives you more width of the field to attack both ways—with the run and the pass. The short side has become wider, and that's the significant change."

"I think that'll open things up a little," Shula concurred. "For example, we have Paul Warfield and we didn't like him on the short side of the field. Then here's Bob Griese—a young quarterback capable of scrambling who will have more field to work in."

Coupled with the hash mark move was the adoption of mandatory uniform markings for each NFL playing fields with the yard-line markings starting just one yard in from the new hash marks.

The first part of the change—moving the hash marks—serves the purpose of widening the field for offensive exploitation and, in theory, will aid the run, the pass and the kick. The second part of the change—uniform marking—destroys one of the keys used by some defenses.

Discussing the impact of making field markings uniform, Mark Duncan, the NFL's supervisor of officials, explained "that some teams used field markings as their keys" and that the change would prevent any team from getting an edge.

Coach Hank Stram of Kansas City agreed with that.

"Any time you have more consistency the better the game will be," Stram said. "It takes away anything a team might do for an advantage from a local point of view."

In other rules action:

—The owners also tried to stimulate the offense by permitting punts to be run out of end zone. Previously they were an automatic touchback.

—Made two changes in penalties: the penalty for a receiver stepping out of bounds and returning to catch a pass was reduced from 15 yards and loss of down to just loss of down. The penalty for grabbing a face mask was reduced to five yards and an automatic first down, unless in the judgment of the official the act is flagrant and then it will remain 15 yards and an automatic first down.

Worst Start For Foyt: 4th

By ED SHEARER
Associated Press Sports Writer

HAMPTON, Ga. (AP) — "It's my worst starting position in two years," A. J. Foyt of Houston said Thursday after his 1972 Glen Wood Mercury slipped to the No. 4 spot in qualifying for Sunday's Atlanta 500 NASCAR Grand National stock car race.

"With the exception of Daytona, I've had the pole for all races I've been in this year," said Foyt, the defending champion here and a favorite to capture an unprecedented third straight triumph on the NASCAR circuit.

"We'll be, all right," he added. "We tried some different things out there today. What we're trying for is consistency. That's what wins races."

The pole position for the $110,000 500-mile event went to Bobby Allison of Hueytown, Ala., who pushed his Junior Johnson Chevrolet around the 1.5-mile asphalt oval at Atlanta International Raceway at a record 156.245 miles per hour.

It cracked the mark for cars with restrictor plates set last August at 155.796 by Buddy Baker of Charlotte, N.C., in a Dodge.

Fifteen cars earned berths in Sunday's 40-car starting field on Thursday. Fifteen more will qualify today and the final 10 on Saturday. The race, with $18,000 awaiting the winner, is slated for 2 p.m. Sunday.

Bobby Isaac of Catawba, N. C., winner of the Carolina 500 at Rockingham two weeks ago, will line up beside Allison on the front row. Isaac sent his Dodge around the speedway in 156.066.

Sharing the second row with Foyt, a three-time Indianapolis 500 winner, will be Richard Petty, NASCAR's only million dollar winner.

Petty, from Randleman, N. C., turned in a 155.544 speed in his Plymouth, while Foyt had a 153.806.

David Pearson of Spartanburg, S. C., stepped into the No. 5 spot with a 153.016 in a Ford while Donnie Allison, Bobby's little brother, qualified sixth in a Chevrolet owned by Bobby. Making his first ride of the season, Donnie toured the high-banked track at 152.892 m.p.h.

Others qualifying Thursday were James Hylton of Inman, S. C., Ford; Jim Vandiver, Charlotte, N. C., Dodge; Benny Parsons, Elberne, N. C., Mercury; Baker, Dodge; Mark Donohue, Media, Pa., American Motors Matador; LeeRoy Yarbrough, Columbia, S. C., Ford; Frank Warren, Augusta, Ga., Dodge; G. C. Spencer, Bluff City, Tenn., Plymouth and Larry Smith, Whitnel, N. C., Ford.

Bucs Set First Meet

The East Carolina University track team will hold its first home meet of the season Saturday when it entertains Appalachian and Old Dominion.

The field events are slated to get underway at 2 p.m., with the running events starting at 2:30.

One member of the Pirate team will not be competing in the event, Jim Kidd. Kidd is in Florida to participate in a special half-mile during the Florida Relays at the University of Florida.

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, MARCH 25, 1972

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Until noon you can get much of value done, especially in using intuition to better understand what your companions expect of you. After midday, very different influences come into effect and you would be wise to retire from the world of positive action and work on improving your appearance and wardrobe.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) The early part of the day can be most active and happy at whatever duties you have to perform, but take care you do not get into arguments in p.m. You can spend money foolishly if you do not keep your purse zipped. Take care.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) The early part of the day is best to improve situations at home, but don't try to do it in the evening, or big rumpus can start. Get busy with the paint brush and other activities to cheer things up a bit. Show you are optimistic where the future is concerned.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) The day hours are best for whatever it is you have to do since you could meet up with some accident in p.m. unless careful, so plan to get as much done as you can during day. Go over your letters and see that the wording is right. Ditto for statements, etc.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Your judgment is better during the day than at night, so make the right decisions early. Take the time to attend to repairs that are necessary. Make your home really charming and clean.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Get work done during the day and then plan to attend some nice social affair in p.m. Dress well. Do not argue with one who is looking for a whipping boy. Smile and all works out fine.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Morning is best time to go after the information you want in a confidential way, or you could meet with criticism later on. Serve those who are not as lucky as you. Show that you have real poise.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Making plans with allies is best in a.m. since they are apt to be less cooperative later in the day, when you had better work alone. Avoid social matters, or there will be arguments. Enjoy family instead.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) The early part of the day is best for handling affairs in the business world, especially those that are truly vital. Adverse conditions could arise in p.m., but if so handle them quietly and well. Don't resort to violence or personal correspondence in a.m. and don't forget to make those important telephone calls, either. Not a good day for making radical changes or starting on some trip. Care and caution is the keynote now.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Get duties done efficiently in a.m. and then quietly play, read or whatever really relaxes you. Mate could be in a blue mood so do not expect much fun in that direction. Treat kindly, though.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You can easily find out what your true position is with others in a.m. and do nothing that can bring ill will. Control your temper since others are apt to be in a negative frame of mind. Call good friends on the telephone tonight.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) The a.m. is the best time to delve into any new projects you have in mind, but don't take others into your confidence. Your hunches are most accurate, but even these should be kept to yourself. Show devotion to mate in p.m.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be one of those highly sensitive young people who will absorb whatever the surrounding conditions may be and become morose if they are not up to expectations, so get busy now and make conditions at home more ideal and successful. Your child can become most successful if encouraged by you in the big ideas that are a natural part of this mentality. Send to college of own choice.

Pinch Of Soda Originated Term

NEW YORK (UPI)—During the 18th Century when British scientists were experimenting with artificially carbonating water one discovered that adding a pinch of soda to the water increased its power to retain the gas.

That, according to researchers at the Rheingold soft drink division, originated the term "soda water." The foul taste and smell of drinking water in European cities led to the sale of pure carbonated water on the strength of its therapeutic values, the researchers said.

Bureaucratic Pains In Gas Inventory

By JEAN HELLER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government is trying to figure out who's got gas and who hasn't and the problem is causing a serious case of bureaucratic heartburn.

The gas involved is natural. In recent years it's been emerging from the ground at a steadily decreasing rate, resulting in shortages that have triggered rationing in wide areas of the country.

New gas is lying around under the ground waiting for producers to come for it, but the producers aren't looking much. They claim that erratic Federal Power Commission regulation of rates they can charge for gas doesn't provide enough profit margin to finance exploration.

The FPC is considering changing its regulatory system, but first the commission says it must find out what companies have how much gas and where.

Therein lies the rub.

The FPC has never gone into the gas fields itself to inventory supplies. It has, instead, always relied on figures supplied by the American Gas Association, an industry organization which collects data on gas supplies from the producers.

But because AGA is an industry group, the charge has been made that it helped the gas industry overrate its problems and create an artificial gas shortage to force FPC to raise gas rates. AGA says this couldn't be further from the truth.

Anyhow, the FPC decided last year to do its own survey. So it set up a series of task forces and study groups to look into the gas supply situation—and promptly staffed each panel with a majority of gas industry representatives.

This brought a howl of protest in Congress. Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee, introduced a bill which would require the FPC to use its own staff people to do a gas survey.

In hearings on that and other bills this week, FPC Chairman John N. Nassikas told the committee that would be all but impossible.

"It would take 475 man years to make the survey," Nassikas testified. If 100 additional staff people were hired, "assuming we could even find 100 experts," the job would take nearly five years and cost 20 times what the current survey is targeted for, he said.

But the committee also heard from Alan S. Ward of the Federal Trade Commission who is all for the Magnuson bill.

"For the industry to be ever so honorable as it is presently constituted, its total revenues are directly dependent upon its own count of reserves," Ward said. He urged enactment of the bill to "assure an alternative source of information."

No matter how it all comes out, the consumer probably will have to pay a higher price, Nassikas says.

Hear Candidates In TV Voter Series

This spring, the 1972 presidential candidates are being interviewed by students on a special televised series of programs, broadcast regularly on U. S. campuses via closed-circuit TV.

East Carolina University is running each interview in the "New Voters Series" five times, in five different locations, in order to assure its potential student voters a chance to hear the candidates express themselves on issues which concern young voters.

Among these issues are legalization of marijuana, amnesty to draft-resisters, and large corporations' domination of American business.

Each week, a new candidate is featured. Lawrence O'Brien and Senators George McGovern, Henry Jackson, Jacob Javits and Robert Dole have previously been interviewed on the series.

Remaining programs will feature Senators Robert Taft, Hubert Humphrey, Edmund Muskie and Hugh Scott; Representatives Shirley Chisholm and Gerald Ford; Gov. Ronald Reagan and Vice President Agnew.

A panel of students asks questions and discussion is moderated by FCC Commissioner Nicholas Johnson and critic Nat Hentoff.

Cavern Will Get A Clean-Up Job

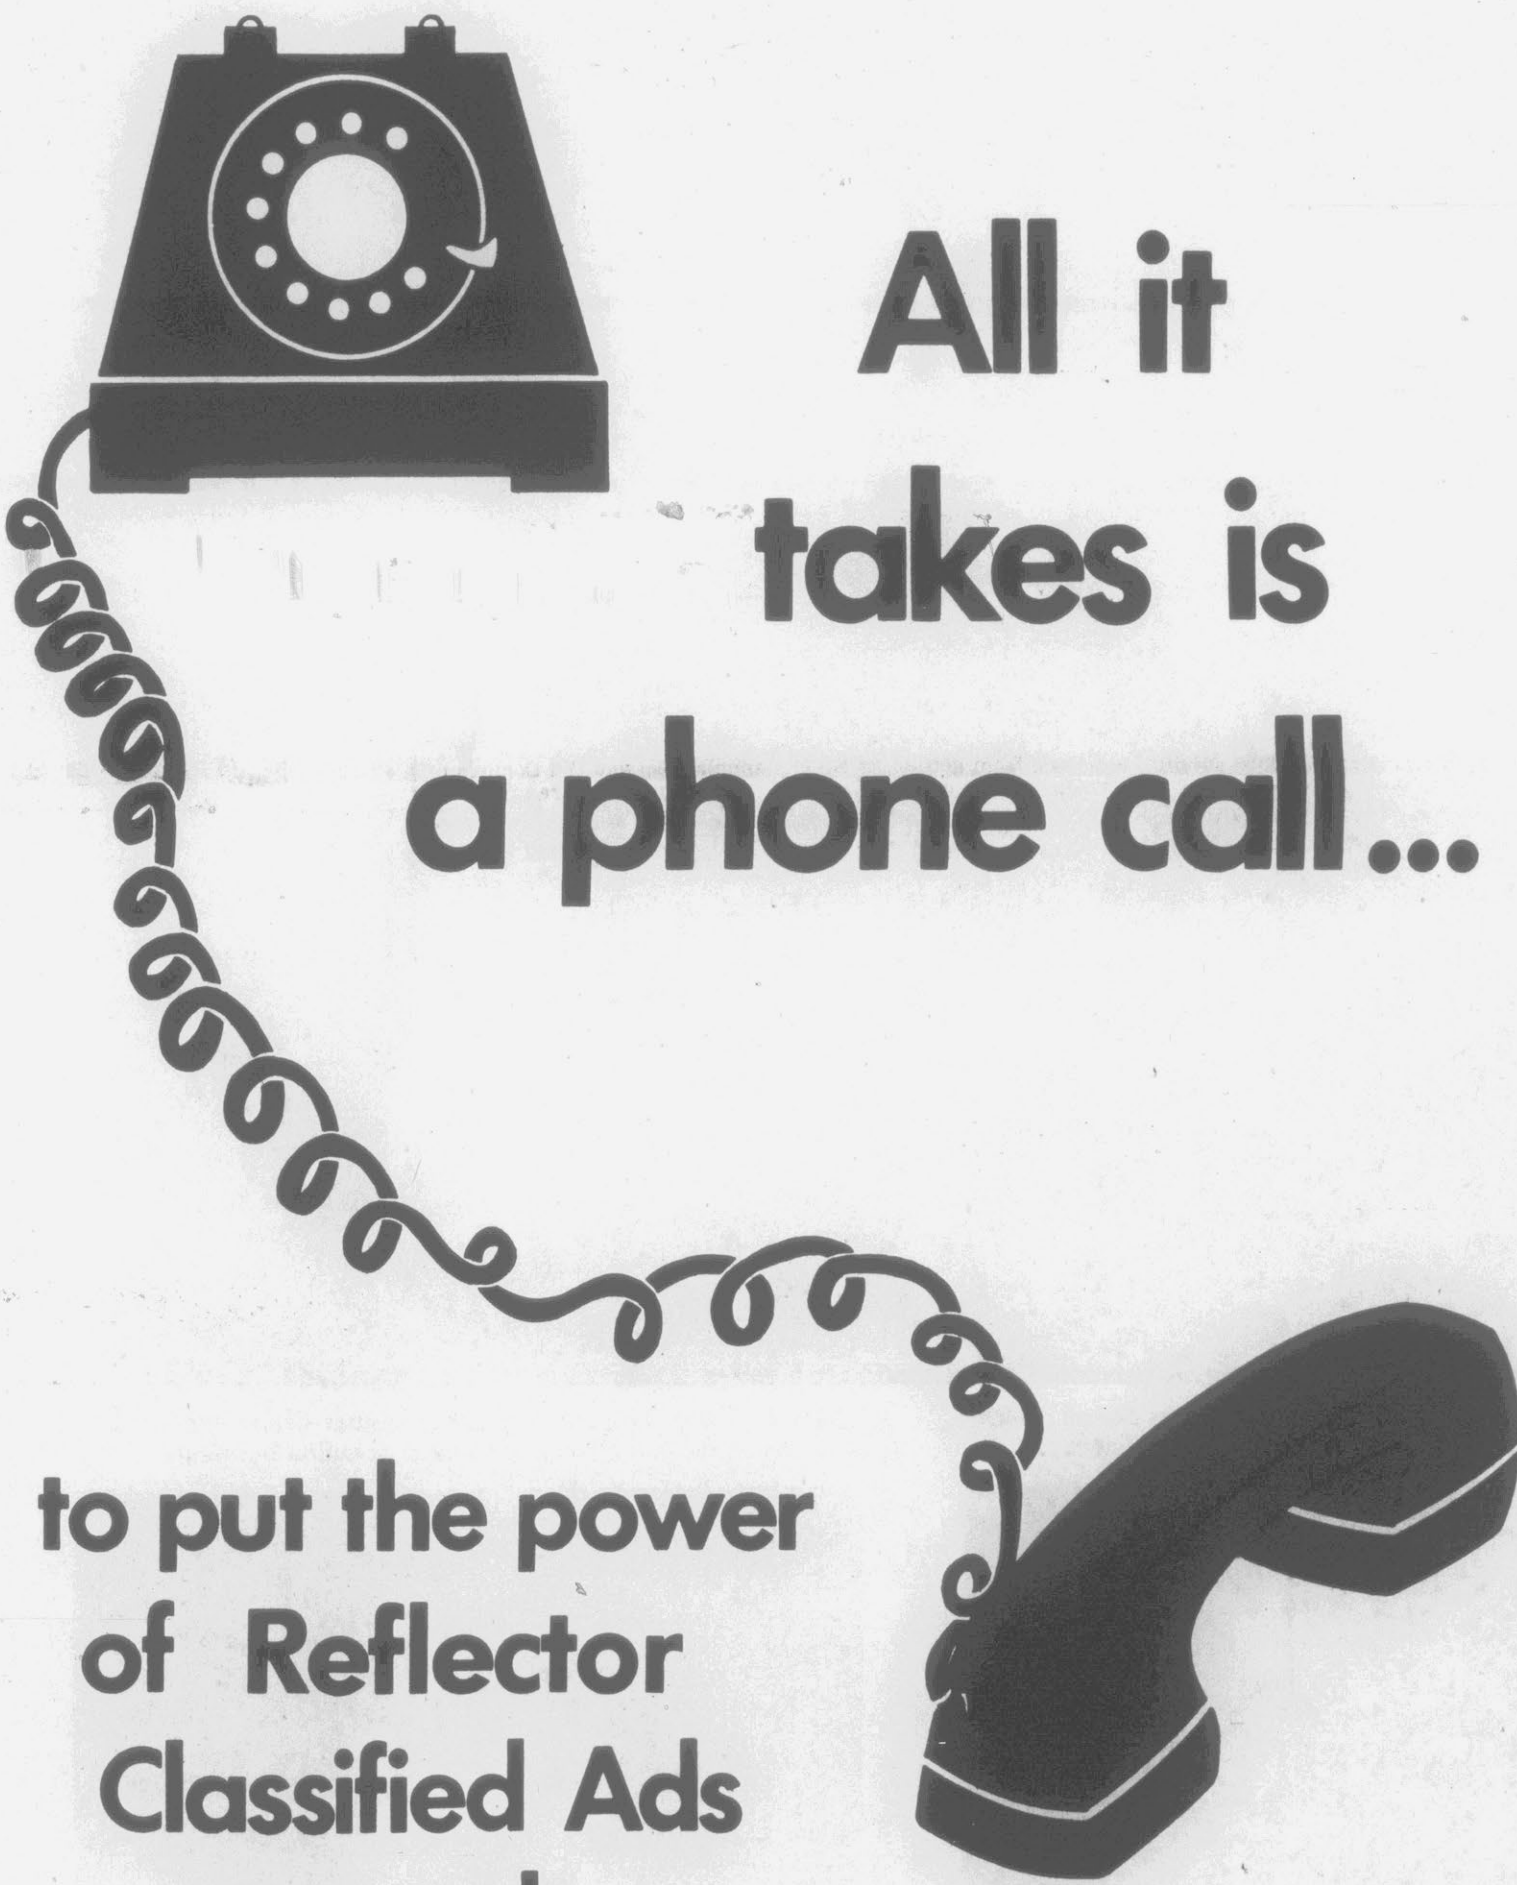

STANTON, Mo. (AP) — Even an old cave becomes involved in spring cleaning.

Meramec Caverns on U.S. 66 here will have all the grime and dust washed off its formations and cement paths in the near future.

"Tourists like to see creations of Mother Nature glisten," says director Lester B. Dill. "They see enough pollution and dirt outside the cave."

"Isfahan is half the world," the saying went. And so it seemed in its time of greatest glory—when the 17th century Iranian sovereign, Shah Abbas I, chose it for Iran's capital and determined to make it the most beautiful city in all of Asia. A ruler of taste and imagination, he brought to the city craftsmen, architects, artists and gardeners from as far away as China and Austria. Travelers' tales of the 17th and 18th centuries tell of the splendor of his palaces, mosques, bridges and gardens, of the brilliance of curving turquoise domes, with their delicate and precise faience mosaics, dominated by lofty minarets. This golden age was followed by a period of decline, and of neglect for the city's buildings. But many of them survive—crowded today between mud and brick houses of the old city and mushrooming business districts of the new.

The Worry Clinic

Women Notice Little Changes

Clark cites an interesting sex difference between women vs. men. It also verifies the strategy used in Germany to quell a strike, after an explosion of ammonia tanks in World War I. Are men or women more likely to be "office grasshoppers" re thermometers?

By GEORGE W. CRANE, Ph.D., M.D.

Case T-534: Clark K., aged 35, is a heating engineer.

"Dr. Crane," he began, "in my profession we have noticed an interesting sex difference between women vs. men.

"For we find that women workers in an office seem to have much more frequent fluctuations of their skin temperature.

"If we set the thermostat at 72 degrees in an office, the men never think about changing the temperature.

"But every hour or so a woman secretary or stenographer will run over to the thermostat to set it higher or lower.

"So it is now a standard practice in our field to install two thermostats.

"One is the real McCoy and it is not out in plain sight of all the women employees.

"The other is a 'phony' which we place where all the women can see it.

"Then, when they want to make their hourly variation in the thermostat, they can run over to it and move it higher or lower, as they see fit.

"Acually, it isn't even connected with the furnace at all.

"But they don't know this fact, so they apparently feel content to have done their own tampering with the source of heat.

"Why should women do so much more complaining about room temperature than men do?"

FICKLE FEMALES

Our psychology labs have shown that we human beings can make very fine distinctions in temperature by our skin.

In fact, by dipping our finger into pans of water, we can notice whether the temperature is the "same" or "different," down to one eighth of a degree.

So women office workers, with much more bare skin exposed to the air, thus become very much aware of slight changes in room temperature.

The men generally wear coats and shirts with collars, plus long sleeves, so their skin is insulated far more against the surrounding air.

And if the men grow a little warm, they will shed their coat or loosen their tie and unbutton their shirt collar.

The Daily Reflector, Greenville, N.C.—Friday, March 24, 1972—13

If a cold wave is scheduled, the men may thus wear wool socks.

But the women still wear their summer short sleeves and low-necked frocks, plus the same type of pantyhose.

So women are more like chameleons regarding their response to the minor changes in air temperature.

Thus, they get cold or hot depending on very minor changes of the thermometer.

And the phony thermostatic control satisfies the women quite well, as this heating engineer has attested.

After some German workers had been killed by explosions of high pressure tanks, while making ammonia by the Haber process in World War I, a strike threatened.

So management said it was adopting a new method entailing less pressure.

Opening lead: King of ♣

No one can seriously question that Pietro Forquet is one of the outstanding bridge players of the modern era. As an original member of the Italian Blue team which won the World's Championship for the first time in 1957, his consistent performances were instrumental in his team's string of triumphs which extended until 1969 when they retired as the reigning title holders.

Last December, the Blue Team emerged once more to do battle against the current World Champions, the Dallas Aces, in a special exhibition. Italy won the match and once again Forquet played a vital role as is illustrated in today's hand where a brilliant defensive coup enabled him to defeat a four heart contract that was made at the other table.

When the Americans were seated North-South, South chose to open the bidding in second position with four hearts and was permitted to buy the hand without competition.

Benito Garozzo, seated West, opened the king of clubs, North followed with the four, Forquet—as East—played the deuce and declarer the eight, which had all the earmarks of being a singleton. West switched to the king of spades and when this held, he continued with the queen.

Forquet gave the matter considerable thought and finally overtook the queen with the ace to return a third spade which his partner ruffed to score the setting trick.

At the other table, Italy also got to four hearts on a more protracted bidding sequence. The American player, seated West, also opened the king of clubs and, after observing his partner's deuce and declarer's eight, shifted to the king of spades. When this held, he continued with the queen, however East allowed him to win this trick as well.

West had no more spades to lead and, in desperation, he attempted to cash the ace of clubs. South ruffed, crossed over to the king of hearts and played North's A-K-Q of diamonds on which he disposed of his remaining three spades. A club was trumped in the closed hand and after the ace and queen of hearts drew the outstanding trumps, declarer claimed his contract, having lost two spades and one club.

Altho Forquet had no way of knowing that his partner held a doubleton spade and that declarer had preempted in hearts with a five card side suit, his overtake of the queen covered all possibilities. If West also held the jack, for example, it could not cost to play the ace. If West's holding in the suit consists of the king-queen and smaller cards without the jack, then his proper lead on the second round is a small spade—for East can lead a third spade as readily as West.

Buildings Talk Only To Blind

DENTON, Tex. (AP) — The buildings at North Texas State University will talk—but only for the blind—if the university makes use of a device invented by a student and a recent doctoral awardee.

Robert Hall, a graduate student in psychology, and Dr. John Pope, who received his Ph.D. last December, put their minds together to come up with an electronic device which sends out voice messages from buildings on campus to a receiver worn in a blind student's ear.

A BANK By Any Other Name is NOT a BANK WITH THESE PEOPLE . . .

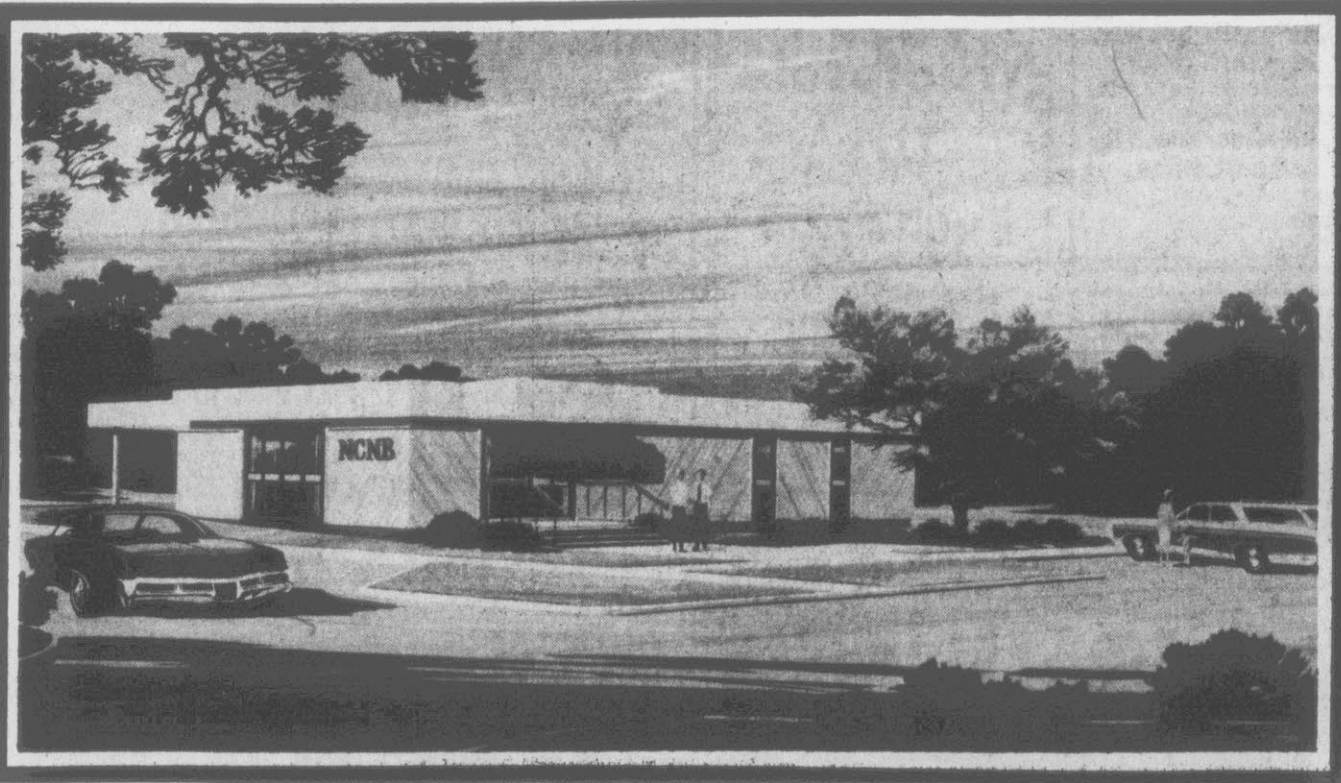

As you can see, NCNB is a Bank with Friendly People—and NCNB is on the move to better serve you.

Not all of us will be moving to our new location—but we will be serving you through our new branch which will be located on Greenville Boulevard . . . 300 yards (as the crow flies) south of the Washington Highway.

We're going to name our new location EAST END BRANCH—and East End Branch will be able to help you with all your banking needs.

Meanwhile, visit us at our Main Office, Five Points, Downtown, or our Washington Street and Circle Office Drive-In Branches.
