

Moonlander Skin Peels; No Concern

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Apollo 16 hurtled onward today toward a Thursday landing on the moon's mountainous rooftop while engineers on earth wrestled with the mysterious peeling of protective skin of the lunar lander Orion.

Particles of the outer aluminum foil and mylar thermal blanket were observed Sunday flaking away from an area several square feet in size near Orion's reaction control system fuel tanks.

Navy Capt. John W. Young and Air Force Lt. Col. Charles M. Duke entered the lunar lander Sunday night a day ahead of schedule, turned on its power and conducted a onehour inspection.

Nothing appeared amiss in the spacecraft's systems and there were no plans to alter the mission.

At Grumman Aircraft in Bethpage, N.Y., engineers worked with a lunar lander mockup seeking an explanation.

While engineers pondered the problem, the astronauts slept. They retired shortly before 4 a.m. and weren't scheduled to awaken until noon.

Nothing appeared amiss in the spacecraft's systems and there were no plans to alter the mission.

"At this time there is no undue concern about it," Mission Control said after the inspection apparently ruled out troubles with major spacecraft systems.

"The only thing we can say is that it is very perplexing," Mission Control said after engineers studied telemetry radioed from the lunar lander. "The immediate reaction ... was one of concern for the possible thermal effects that this might have."

No abnormal readings were found and Duke said the lander looked "extremely clean" during the inspection.

"At this point any hypothesis about what caused the degradation of the thermal skin is purely speculative," Mission Control said. "We have no explanation at this point."

The skin problem was the first flaw in an otherwise perfect mission that began at 12:54 p.m.

EST Sunday when a towering Saturn 5 rocket thundered the astronauts into space.

Apollo 16 was so precisely on course Sunday night that a planned midcourse correction was canceled. The astronauts will have an opportunity to perform a course correction tonight and again Tuesday and Wednesday before firing their spacecraft engine at 3:23 p.m. Wednesday to slip into lunar orbit.

Young and Duke are to land Orion on an undulating plateau between two mountain peaks in the lunar highlands near one of the highest points on the moon. Navy Lt. Cmdr. Thomas K. Mattingly will orbit the moon in Casper, the command ship, conducting remote surveillance of the lunar terrain with scientific instruments.

Bumping over the dusty plateau and up a mountain slope in a battery powered car, Young and Duke will seek evidence the lunar highlands were born in fiery volcanic upheavals billions of years ago.

Reporting the particles stripping away at "about five or 10 a second," Duke said, "It's all tattered and torn and shredded. Looks like Shredded Wheat."

"Sure is something strange going on," Young said.

Mattingly trained a television camera through a cabin window at the flaking skin while Young and Duke toured Orion. The picture received on earth clearly showed the firefly-like bits of material flicking away.

Young, a veteran of three prior space flights, and Duke and Mattingly, space rookies, were taciturn as they rode the roaring rocket into earth orbit.

As earth quickly receded behind them, the astronauts, like their predecessors, marveled at the view.

Touchdown is set for 3:41 p.m. EST Thursday, beginning a record 73-hour stay.

BODY RECOVERED

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — The body of Samuel Ward, 40, a commercial fisherman of Cartaret County, N.C., one of three men missing in the Gulf of Mexico, has been recovered.

"We are forced to admit that we do not really know the extent of child abuse and neglect in North Carolina," he said.

The 1971 General Assembly enacted a law requiring cases of child abuse and neglect to be reported to county social services departments.

Scott said the "important issue for the 1970's is whether the present system of child abuse reporting is a sufficient or effective approach to achieve adequate child protection."

He said our system of laws is based on "the assumption that parents will protect their children."

"Thus, court decisions tend to place more emphasis on protection of parental rights than protection of children from abusive

Rogers Points To All-Out Invasion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State William P. Rogers said today the Nixon administration "has no intention to permit South Vietnam to be taken over by force."

Rogers said the United States will not permit the North Vietnamese offensive to succeed.

Rogers said the air offensive against Haiphong and Hanoi is in keeping with President Nixon's prior assertions that the United States would not permit North Vietnam to take advantage of the withdrawal of U.S. forces.

The secretary of State appeared before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee to defend the Administration foreign aid budget but immediately was quizzed by Chairman J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., about renewed American assaults in North Vietnam.

Fulbright said he did not think that the interest of the United States merited such a counter-reaction.

Rogers said there are three purposes primarily for the renewed air and naval strikes against North Vietnam:

1-To protect American troops still in South Vietnam.

2-To make certain that the withdrawal of American forces can continue.

3-To give South Vietnamese a chance to defend themselves against the massive invasion.

Rogers said the United States does not intend to reintroduce ground combat forces into the action in Vietnam but that the air and naval strikes should make clear to the other side that America is going to take any action necessary to support the people of South Vietnam."

Rogers said that although 450,000 troops have been withdrawn from the Vietnam conflict, there still are 85,000 Americans there.

"If the Communists took over South Vietnam militarily," he asked, "what about the 85,000 still there?"

Rogers said that the new North Vietnam offensive, involving 12 of its 13 divisions, shows that the North Vietnamese were "lying in their teeth" in their claims that there were no North Vietnamese troops in South Vietnam.

Fulbright said he could not understand how the new attacks on North Vietnamese supply bases promote the interest of the United States with Russia and China.

Rogers responded that the President's record is good.

He said the administration was severely criticized by members of the committee for incursions into Laos and Cambodia on grounds that it would make it difficult to improve relations with China.

He said that the President's recent successful visit to Peking showed that "the President was right."

"The South Vietnamese have risen to the challenge; they have demonstrated their determination to resist aggression. They deserve, now more than ever, our steadfast help and encouragement," Rogers said in a prepared statement before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Four Damaged?

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union said today four Soviet merchant ships were damaged in the U.S. bombing raids of the North Vietnamese port of Haiphong. U.S. Ambassador Jacob D. Beam was summoned to the Foreign Ministry and handed an official protest, Tass reported.

Clearer Pictures

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The public and scientists likely will see the clearest televised view ever of the lunar surface this week because of a high-speed transmission relay system developed here.

Live telecasts from the moon will be relayed at the speed of light through equipment of Image Transform, Inc., established in North Hollywood three months ago to convert taped television shows into film.

The equipment is designed to rid television screens of visible horizontal lines by eliminating a factor known as "noise interference."

The process worked Sunday, bringing television viewers a clear picture of the earth transmitted from the Apollo 16 spacecraft 7,000 miles in space.

Signals from Apollo 16 are received in digital form at the Goldstone, Calif., tracking station in the Mojave Desert. Traveling at the speed of light, the signals are relayed to the space center in Houston, where they are first converted to picture signals and then fed through the equipment here. The relays are nearly instantaneous.

SAIGON (AP) — American warplanes made their biggest MIG kill in 4½ years Sunday and heavily damaged fuel depots in massive raids in the Hanoi-Haiphong heartland of North Vietnam, the U.S. Command reported today.

Three MIG21s, North Vietnam's fastest warplanes, were shot down Sunday southwest of Hanoi before they could get off a shot, the command reported. It was the first time American pilots had downed three MIGs in one day since Oct. 26, 1967.

While the command said no U.S. planes were downed by the enemy fighters, it reported a Navy A7 and an Air Force F105 lost during the raids. The pilots of the A7 was rescued at sea, and the two crewmen of the F105 were reported missing.

Three other American aircraft were lost in South Vietnam, the command said.

On the ground, the South Vietnamese command claimed that is forces and allied warplanes killed more than 400 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong in heavy fighting a mile east of An Loc in Binh Dinh Province on the central coast, and in southern Cambodia. South Vietnamese losses were 53 killed and 86 wounded, the Saigon Command said.

The South Vietnamese said 2,000 paratroopers who were landed Friday within two miles of An Loc had fought their way into the provincial capital 60 miles north of Saigon, joined forces with the defending garrison and pushed out the enemy troops. A spokesman claimed that government forces had recaptured the entire town.

North Vietnam claimed that "many hundreds of civilians" were killed and wounded in the U.S. strikes at Hanoi, the North Vietnamese capital, and Haiphong, its chief port, and that several ships tied at the Haiphong docks were damaged. It said several Russian sailors were wounded when a Soviet ship was hit.

The U.S. Command refused to confirm or deny that the Haiphong docks were hit. It declined to go beyond communications saying that the Air Force and Navy planes attacked fuel depots, warehouses and truck parks in the vicinity of Haiphong, and on the outskirts of Hanoi.

The command said the air strikes—which other sources said numbered several hundred—apparently "caught the enemy in a considerable state of confusion and disarray."

It said the North Vietnamese fired thousands of rounds of anti-aircraft artillery and approximately 200 surface-to-air missiles, and many of the missiles "were fired erratically."

"The strikes against petroleum storage facilities, truck parks, warehouses areas, and other logistics facilities, will help reduce the enemy's capabilities to continue military activities in South Vietnam," the command said in explanation of the raids."

They were the first raids into the Hanoi-Haiphong area since President Lyndon B. Johnson called a partial halt in the bombing of North Vietnam on March 31, 1968.

U.S. warplanes also kept up heavy attacks on North Vietnamese troops in South Vietnam as the Communist offensive there moved into its 19th day.

The U.S. Command reported that Navy and Air Force fighter-bombers carried out 347 strikes in South Vietnam between 6 a.m. Sunday and 6 a.m. today. B52 heavy bombers made nearly 60 strikes, some of them within 50 miles of Saigon, in an attempt to crush North Vietnamese troop concentrations south and west of An Loc along Highway 13.

On the northern front below the DMZ, forward elements of a South Vietnamese marine battalion spotted five North Vietnamese tanks in stationary positions. Field officers said U.S. Phantoms were called in, destroyed two of the tanks and heavily damaged a third.

Enemy gunners shelled the provincial capitals of Phuoc Binh, 25 miles northeast of An Loc, and Tay Ninh, 45 miles southwest of An Loc. There was no immediate report of casualties at Phuoc Binh, but the Saigon command said four civilians were killed and two were wounded in Tay Ninh.

Back From Behind The Lines

RESCUED FROM BEHIND LINES—U.S. Marine Major Clyde D. Smith is examined by doctors at medical facility identified by allied spokesmen as somewhere in Southeast Asia, after being rescued from jungle in southern

Newly-Arrived Pandas Settling Down In Zoo

By MARGARET SCHERF Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A pair of pandas settled into luxury at the National Zoo today, oblivious to their likely destiny as America's most pampered pets.

The two giant pandas, gifts to the United States from the People's Republic of China, arrived Sunday and were swept immediately into the seclusion of roomy air-conditioned apartments.

Zoo officials said the fuzzy, bear-like animals will undergo physical examinations today. They'll stay under wraps until official unveiling ceremonies possibly later this week.

The huggable creatures apparently were faring better than Milton and Matilda, the two musk oxen the United States gave to China. Milton is reported to be losing his hair, and Matilda doesn't feel very well, either.

The Japanese news service Kyodo reported Sunday that Milton "is suffering from a skin disease, portions of the fur on the sides are falling out, and the animal coughs at times. Matilda is in somewhat bad shape also."

They were reported "unresponsive to the crowds" at the Peking Zoo where they are on display.

Dr. Theodore Reed, director of the National Zoo, said the pandas will keep their Chinese names, but he wouldn't say what they are. Reed took the musk oxen to China and brought home the 18-month-old pandas, one male and one female.

The pandas' departure from the Peking Zoo was delayed so they could undergo a crash course in sex. They had to watch other pandas mate so they will know what to do when the time comes, probably in a couple of years.

In case of conjugal spats, the swank panda pad is designed to provide separate quarters, each with a private entrance to the adjoining garden.

The pandas dined on bamboo after their arrival and reportedly were adjusting easily to their new home.

"You can bet they're being handled with kid gloves," said a zoo worker.

At full growth, a panda normally stands about six feet tall and weighs about 300 pounds, but these are still in the toddler stage. The panda is mostly white with black fur on the legs, shoulders and ears and black patches around the eyes.

Pandas have not been seen in the United States for 21 years. Su-Lin, the first captive panda brought to this country died at Brookfield Zoo near Chicago in 1951 after living there 13 years.

Area Travel And Recreation Facilities Reviewed

BELHAVEN—The first step to inform people in a ten county area about travel and recreation facilities in their own region took place late last week in Belhaven.

The occasion was a workshop attended by officials of the Coastal Plain Development Association and representatives of the press at EEli's Little Korner of The World in Belhaven.

Mrs. Effie Raye Batemen, chairman of the Travel and Recreation Committee of the association, led the workshop which began at 10:00 a.m. Thursday.

Others present were Arthur T. Edmondson, Jr. of Tar-

Committed.

Basic ideas discussed by the group revolved around means to publicize the varied travel and recreation facilities in the ten counties, comprising what is known as regions "L" and "Q" established by Governor Scott in grouping the state into 17 planning and development regions.

The ten counties are: Beaufort, Bertie, Edgecombe, Halifax, Hertford, Martin, Nash, Northampton, Pitt and Wilson.

Some of the means discussed to get information to local people about places to go and things to see included the possibility of each newspaper having a member of their staff report on a particular item of interest in their local area. This in turn would be sent to the committee's public relations man, Julian Goff, who would send the item to each newspaper within the ten county district.

Many of the editors of newspapers in the area, including those not represented at the workshop, indicated their support of this idea in previous contacts with Mrs. Bateman, Goff and Edmondson.

Other ideas included compilation of facilities and scheduled events that would be of general interest to readers of all the newspapers in the ten county region, such as location of camp sites, fishing and hunting grounds, cultural events, scenic and historic sites.

Because of limited funds—the association is self supporting from assistance received from merchants, firms and local agencies—no immediate plans were made for compilation of a brochure on facilities and events relative to travel and recreation in the area. Full use, however, will be made of information already available in printed form.

"We would not want to be funded through state or federal funds," Edmondson pointed out. "If we were, we would be directed what to do. We want this project to be something of our own."

Those attending agreed the first in a series of articles should be one calling attention to the make up of the Coastal Plain Association, explaining the difference between this local association and others with similar names that are state and federally funded which are designed to serve a purpose different from the local association.

Two 3-Fatality Wrecks In State

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

There were two three-fatality traffic accidents in North Carolina over the weekend as a total of 13 persons were killed in wrecks.

The deaths brought to toll for the year to 480, compared with 467 by this same time last year. A tractor-trailer truck and a car collided five miles south of Monroe Sunday, resulting in the deaths of three Charlotte residents. The victims were Kenneth Bradford Horton, 24; Brian Scott Horton, 2, and Karen Lee Purdue, 24.

The other three-death wreck occurred Saturday four miles south of Burgaw on a rural road. The Highway Patrol said a car veered across the center line and collided with another. The victims were Cleveland Edward Jordan, 40, Oliver Wendell Brown, 19, and Ellis Edward Smith, 17, all of Rt. 1, Burgaw.

The only other multideath wreck occurred on a rural road in Beaufort County when two cars collided. The dead were Pearl Taylor Paynter, 38, of Rt. 1, Blount's Creek, and Gary Brothers, 16, of Rt. 1, Aurora. Arthur Harold Locklear, 22, of Rt. 1, Pembroke, was killed when a speeding car ran off a rural road eight miles west of Lumberton.

Another speeding car ran off a rural road in Sampson County, killing James Earl Beaman, 21, of Salemburg.

A Mount Holly youth, Randle Joe Willocks, 16, was killed near Belmont when an auto struck his bicycle. Highway Patrolman W. C. Saunders said the driver of the car, Hamit Decal Dixon, 32, of Belmont, was charged with drunken driving.

A Poplar Branch man, Clarence White Jr., 30, was killed when his car ran off U. S. 158 and plunged into a canal in Camden County.

A car struck an embankment on a rural road near Old Sparta in Edgecombe County, fatally injuring Charles Randy Abrams, 19, of Pinetops

Policeman Shot; Man Being Held

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Alvin Ware Sr., 48, of Asheville, has been charged with murder in the shooting of an Asheville policeman, Patrolman Alfred Baird, 41.

Baird and a bystander were shot late Saturday night. The other wounded man was identified as Dedrick Gamble, 46, who was chatting on the street with Baird.

Asheville police say numerous witnesses told them the shootings were unprovoked.

Police Chief J. C. Hall said today that Ware slashed his left wrist while in his cell Sunday afternoon and was taken to a hospital for treatment, after which he was returned to the cell.

Twig Brooms, Shovels For City's Snow

By FRANK CREPEAU

Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — When the first flakes of snow whiten the ground in Moscow a civilian army attacks with everything from twig brooms to echelons of snowplows parading down the broad avenues.

No city as big as this metropolis of seven million people gets as much snow, and no city in the world works so hard to dispose of it.

In contrast to some other public services in this communist capital, snow removal is well organized and highly efficient.

Anger Rises In Slowdown

LONDON (AP) — A go-slow strike by 300,000 railmen threw a stranglehold on Britain's commuter systems today and made millions late for work.

Angry passengers booed and jeered trainmen as they fought their way onto the few jam-packed trains that were running. Massive traffic jams built up on the roads into major cities as thousands switched to cars to reach work.

"Chaos is too mild a word to describe the situation—it is a complete disaster," said a spokesman for the state-owned railway system.

The railway unions declared the slowdown after negotiations Sunday in which an independent referee proposed that the state-owned railroad system raise its pay increase offer from 11 to 12 per cent.

Union leaders rejected the deal half an hour before their deadline for the slowdown. They have demanded 16 per cent raises, with immediate new weekly base pay of $52 for the lowest brackets and $91 for train drivers.

The government was believed to be preparing to invoke its new Industrial Relations Act and order a 60-day cooling-off period with a secret ballot on the management offer.

Boy Is Charged With Murder

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A 15-year-old boy has been charged with murder in the slaying of another youngster who was hit Saturday by a stray bullet.

The name of the teen-ager charged with murder was not released since the boy is a juvenile. The youth who was slain when hit in the face by a bullet fired at another youngster was William F. Berry, 12.

A youth who allegedly loaned the weapon to the boy charged with murder was charged with accessory before the fact of murder. He is Aleurby Massey, 17. Massey's bond was set at $20,000.

When snow begins, thousands of "dvorniki" the corps of workers who clean courtyards and sidewalks—mobilize their brooms and shovels.

The rhythmic rattle of twig brooms and the scrape, scrape, scrape of shovels can be heard far into the night if the snow holds out.

They work quickly to get the snow out of their balliwicks and into the street where the machines can take over.

Squads of burly, ruby-cheeked women, wearing orange vests to make them visible to drivers, swarm over the bridges and sidewalks with their shovels.

Trucks start spreading sand and salt at major intersections and if snow depth reaches one inch, hundreds of snow plows are dispatched.

"We try to do everything to clear our streets as fast as possible," says Boris Lifshitz, head of Moscow's Department of Public Services.

That means work round the clock. Lifshitz, a tall, black-browed man who has been fighting snow for 20 years, said that from Nov. 1 to April 15 "we have about 1,300 machines on duty day and night."

When heavy snow falls, the waiting plows, trucks and loading machines are dispatched from 31 headquarters in the city. Once the snow is pushed to the sides of the streets, fleets of dump trucks move in and machines with crablike claws scoop up snow and convey it to the trucks.

And only official cars whizz along on spiked snow tires in Moscow.

Moscow won't tolerate a snowfall crippling the city as sometimes happens in New York City, for example. City government edicts specify that an inch of snow must be removed from major streets in 24 hours. The time is extended for major storms, but the streets must be kept open in downtown Moscow.

That means work round the

ABC Team Arrests Trio

NEW BERN—Pitt County ABC officers assisted Craven County ABC officers and U.S. Treasury Department of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms Division destroy a distillery and arrested three men in the North Harlow section of Craven County Saturday.

Charged in connection with the illegal whiskey manufacturing operation were Dallas Carter, Leon Carter and Alexander Godette.

They were recognized to appear at a hearing this morning in district court in New Bern.

Found at the site was one 75-gallon still and one 55 gallon still, complete with a 60 gallon drum boiler, 100 gallon cooler with radiator condenser and 900 gallons of mash.

Seized at the still site was a 1966 pickup truck which is being held pending outcome of the case.

SNOW FIGHTERS — When it snows in Moscow it really snows, and the residents of the city attack the white stuff with everything from snowplows to twig brooms. At top, a snow loader scoops up snow from a street; in the center, women shovel snow on a square adjoining Gorky St.; and at bottom, a snowplow clears the street along the Moscow River.

Kitchen Slave Returns Home

PARIS (WNS)—Francoise Simon called police when she found two holes bored through her kitchen door. She imagined that burglars were on the prowl. Police put a watch on the door and promptly arrested Jean Claude Lelong 19 who had bored the holes so that he could watch the pretty girl bathe. "I have no bathroom and use the kitchen sink," she testified in court. The judge replied "Then in a certain way this was homage being paid to your beauty." Luncheon Given Club Members

The De Novo Book Club was entertained Tuesday by Mrs. James Williamston at a luncheon meeting.

The guest speaker for the afternoon was Mrs. Gene Baker, a representative of the recently established Yamaha Music School in Greenville.

After presenting an introductory film, Mrs. Baker stressed that the school teaches music fundamentals and understanding. Yamaha's courses for children between four and eight years, claim preparation physically, mentally, socially and emotionally for the students' entire lives.

The Yamaha coordinator mentioned that all their classes are conducted by highly skilled music teachers trained additionally in the Yamaha method to bring out musical awareness in a young child.

Mrs. Roger Hesdorffer, vice president, officiated at the business session.

Trash Service Not State Job

Johnston County legislator Rep. J. Marvin Johnston has succeeded in drawing attention to the highway commission's policy of picking up litter along the state's roads.

Rep. Johnston dumped a barrel of trash from one of his self-service gas stations into a ditch beside a highway then sent to the local court clerk a check for $200 for violating the state's anti-litter law.

The Representative was not charged with violation of the law, but said he broke it "with full intentions of paying my obligation to the state for it." Johnston's complaint is highway commission crews will not empty the litter barrels at his self-service gas station while they are picking up other litter along the highways.

It would be nice, of course, if the state could afford such service to its citizens; but from a practical standpoint it is out of the question. If Rep. Johnston bases his complaint on the fact that motorists use the trash barrels at his filling stations, then every business on any state road, and many residents along those roads, could lodge the same complaint.

The state highway commission has not gone into the trash collection business for the convenience of those who live along the highways or those who operate businesses along the highways. The commission is in the trash collection business only because so many unthinking citizens toss litter along the roads of the state. As bad as the litter looks now, it would be infinitely worse were it not for the efforts of the highway commission.

The state highway commission should not be expected to provide trash or garbage collection service in rural areas any more than individual counties do. Most counties have reached the point where they are providing designated refuse areas where trash can be dumped. And fortunately, a good many citizens are making use of those designated refuse areas rather than throwing their trash at random along the roadside.

What Rep. Johnston succeeded in calling attention to, in our opinion, is not an inadequacy in the highway commission's policy of trash collection. Rather it is the inadequate cooperation of far too many individual citizens in doing what they can to ease the litter problem the state faces.

The Instinct To Go Fishing

By BRYAN HAISLIP
RALEIGH — Among the things which do not change are the clamor of politics, the unpredictability of April weather, and the pleasure of fishing.

The observation is seasonal. Current campaigns assault the senses without engaging the attention or edifying the mind. Days begin in sunshine, turn showery at noon, and end windy and chill.

And unexpectedly one fine afternoon the routine of work is interrupted by a deep visceral urge to find out if bass are biting.

The notion is reinforce by an outdoor writer's recent comment that in Piedmont North Carolina the largest bass are caught during the months of March and April. News like that does more than any candidate's pronouncement to make a fellow restless at his desk.

The Tar Heel instinct to go fishing in spring survives from time long past. Those who respond to it may not be rewarded with fish in the pan, but they are certain to arrive at a state of mind more charitable towards Nature and man.

Fishing Defined
"The true science, piscatorial, is occupation without ostentation, fun without fury, patience without glory; a desire for nothing better not fear of anything worse — an existence in vacuum."

That insight is from A. V. Dockery, a Tar Heel turn-of-the-century fisherman, and its truth is unchanged today. I fished a copy of Dockery's "Black Bass and Other Fishing in North Carolina" out of a pile of old books in a junk shop. It was one of the best catches I ever made.

All I know about the author is what he tells in the book, published in Raleigh in 1909. It's enough to wish for him as a fishing companion. Dockery was American consul in Germany, Portugal and England for 14 years, and an ardent fisherman and close student of nature.

Some of his advice may be outdated; a hollow gourd may not be the only container that will keep minnows alive and lively, and the plastic worm may catch fish as well as the job of angle worms he preferred as bait.

Basic Do Not Change
Down to basics, Dockery remains an authority to follow in 1972 as in 1909.

As for fishing equipment, he took note there is a wide range of choice but it is the man and the rod which brings the quarry to bag.

"There are many other things which are unnecessary appendages; yet the best appendix to a true fisherman is a conscience, a pint flask and cup, and a pipe and tobacco," he wrote.

"Keep your temper in good order," he advised, "unless the bottle gets broken."

The bass is wily game, a fighter when hooked and a prize when caught, but temperamental in feeding and not easily tempted to sport. Uncle Jake, the best fisherman I knew as a boy, said all you had to do to catch bass was to find out where they are and give them what they want when they want it. I recognized the wisdom, but it hasn't done too much for my experience.

A Finicky Feeder
"As to bait," Dockery observed some 70 years ago, "a bass will take almost any living thing when in the mood, and yet it is often so fanciful that it will take nothing when it really ought to be hungry."

"The moon and the weather may have more or less to do with the feeding time, but I never recognized the authority of the moon; preferring to believe that the condition of the stomach of the fish regulated his relish for food."

Fishing inclines the simple man to philosophy, which does more to recommend it than what it puts on the table. Dockery's little book may not increase any fisherman's catch, but its sampling of homespun wisdom is fresh and tasty to the mind.

"Somebody is said to have enunciated the theory that practice makes perfect. It does nothing of the kind. A dullard never can be even a perfect ass. But one can always learn something in fishing."

"Encourage the innocent pastime of fishing in the boy's mind and save trouble. Manliness will come with the love of the sport; untouched by cruel thoughts."

"And the longer a man lives the better he will love fishing, the more he will respect Nature, and, perhaps, mankind also."

Hint Of Hanoi Internal Crisis

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — An astonishingly tough warning by North Vietnam's internal security boss against a "counterrevolutionary" wave that may even now be affecting parts of North Vietnam has raised the specter of internal crisis resulting from Hanoi's massive offensive against the South.

Just how much the tough call for "repression" of all anti-war forces in North Vietnam is based on events actually occurring, and how much is designed to put party cadres on notice to beware, is admittedly somewhat speculative.

But the long and extremely specific lecture by Tran Quoc Hoan, North Vietnam's minister of public security and an alternate member of the controlling politburo, published in the March issue of Hoc Tap, the party's theoretical journal, hints strongly at the existence of grave home-front problems.

Consider, for example, these words:

"The counterrevolutionary clique in our country has carried out investigations and intelligence collection in the military, political and economic fields in order to study and evaluate our strength. It has carried out material and spiritual destruction with a view to causing difficulties and obstacles to the revolution and has established secret bases in order to carry out destructive schemes, psywar (psychological warfare), riots and murders of our cadres (trained party workers) to...annihilate the socialist regime through violence or 'peaceful evolution.'"

In the past, the Communist government of North Vietnam has periodically been forced into draconian measures to put down revolt, particularly among the 700,000 Catholics, the Montagnards (mountain tribes) and former small landowners dispossessed by the revolution.

Two such occasions came in the convulsive aftermath of de-Stalinization in the Soviet Union and the Hungarian revolution of 1956, and following the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia in 1968. Both are referred to in the Hoc Tap article.

But today, the sweeping directives to party cadres in Tran Quoc Hoan's draconian call to arms seem surely the result of war weariness coupled with fears that the main force invasion of South Vietnam would trigger the strongest wave of anti-war fever yet experienced.

Thus, the interior ministers' definition of "counterrevolutionary" — the first time such a definition has ever been published by Hanoi — includes "any person or organization...who opposes the struggle for peace and national unification" (as well as anyone against "socialist construction" or "the building of a Communist state").

What the publication of that definition of "counterrevolutionary" hints is that Hanoi is deeply concerned by the growth of North Vietnamese "doves." The message to party cadres: identify and punish anyone heard criticizing the war, because pursuit of the war for "national unification" of North and South Vietnam has equal urgency with building Communism at home.

Moreover, the interior minister implicitly and sharply rebukes party cadres for being too lenient with home-front dissenters.

"A great number of cadres and party members have been inclined to emphasize the organizational and building aspects of the proletarian dictatorship" (obviously by indoctrination and education) "while neglecting the aspect of suppressive violence, believing it is no longer necessary." In short, violent measures are needed.

Continuing, Tran Quoc Hoan writes that the object

Strength For Today

PERMANENCE
"What is a man profited," asked Jesus of his disciples on one occasion, "if he gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? Or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?" (Matthew 16:26).

We need to keep reminding ourselves that we are primarily spiritual beings. Our bodies come out of the dust and to the dust they at last return. There is a permanence to the whole of life which begins with the conviction that God created the world, that He sustains it, that He has a destiny in store for every human being. There must be something above the earthly desires and ideals we all cherish. There must be a permanence about life which goes on through eternity. The value of the soul is incalculable. Spiritual beings must have a spiritual destiny.

Many devout Christians today feel that Christianity is slipping badly in its influence. Churches are losing members. Church services on the whole are poorly attended. "The Church is all washed up," according to any people.

The situation we confront is serious, but the fear many people have about the Church's future is unjustified. In the year 1800 (not 1900) everyone was ready to concede that the Church was through. Deism had come in to take over Christianity, yet almost 175 years later the Church is still in business. We don't like empty churches and the cynicism about religion which is expressed on all sides. But we can be proud of our young people today. The future lies with them. God has not gone out of business, and there is no indication that He intends to.

A Prayer For Taxpayers

WASHINGTON — Heavenly Father, We beseech You in our hour of need to look down kindly on Your humble taxpaying servants who have given all we possess to the almighty Internal Revenue Service. Grant us that we have completed our Form 1040 correctly so no power will find fault with it.

We pray to God that we have added lines 12, 13, 14 and 15 accurately, and that we have subtracted line 17 from line 16 so our audited gross income is computed to their divine satisfaction.

We ask you, O Lord, to protect our exemptions and bless our deductions as outlined in Schedule A (Form 1040) (See Chapter 10 and 11).

Have mercy on those of us who failed to wisely estimate our payments during the year, and must now borrow from Peter to pay Paul. Blessed are those who spent more than they earned and

Other Editors Say The Byrnes Record

(Durham Herald)

During his political career that spanned almost half a century, James F. Byrnes, who died Sunday at age 92, made many valuable contributions of public service to the nation.

His career and the many offices he held touched many facets of American life.

Included in the list of offices held by the Charleston native are U. S. representative, U. S. senator, associate justice on the Supreme Court, Secretary of State, director of economic stabilization and war mobilization during World War II, delegate to the United Nations General Assembly, and governor of South Carolina.

In the World War II years when he served as war mobilizer and economic stabilizer, Mr. Byrnes played a vital role in domestic affairs, so much so that he was referred to as "assistant president."

He served with distinction during that critical period, when President Franklin D. Roosevelt was centering his own attention on the conduct of the war, and in the latter part of the war, after Mr. Roosevelt's death, was an intimate adviser of President Truman.

The wide range of Mr. Byrnes' public service reached into county and state offices in South Carolina, and into the three branches of government at the federal level.

His service reached into domestic affairs and into world affairs, and it extended into both Democratic and Republican parties.

After winning honors for his service as a Democrat, he broke with that party in 1952, and in 1968 supported Richard Nixon in his campaign for the presidency.

Mr. Byrnes will be remembered for his long service and for the many offices he held.

He will be remembered for his ability to answer the call when another office beckoned.

He was a man of many talents, as he demonstrated during his long and useful career.

At times he was a man of controversy, but he was a man of dedication.

He will be remembered for his many contributions in his record of public service covering almost half a century.

contributed so much to the economy.

Give us the strength, Lord, to find losses to wipe out our net gains (See Form 4797) so that we may dwell in a lower tax bracket forever and ever (as outlined in Publication 17, the Revised 1972 Edition).

Pray help us find loopholes and tax shelters so we are not deemed sinners, but are looked upon as honorable businessmen who are just taking full advantage of the law.

We ask you, Almighty, to protect us from auditing by government servants who don't know the difference between a business lunch and a family picnic. Give them the wisdom to realize that none of our entertainment was for pleasure, but only to entice our acquaintances to buy our exalted products.

And if You can see Your way to doing it, provide us with legitimate reasons for taking our wives when we go on trips to Florida and California. What good is it for a man to own the world and then discover his wife is not

Salty Cowboy Lingo

By ROBERT E. FORD

Associated Press Writer
DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — Persons who judge a cowboy's articulateness by the "nope" and "yep" of the movies' Western hero just don't understand the situation.

Cowboys were great talkers in their own way, although a dozen words or less were all they needed to make their point.

In concise expressions, they could describe something so that no one ever forgot it.

But the cowboy was not to be accorded literary fame.

For one thing, there usually weren't any writers around.

Yet, out around the rim of the campfire, where there were only flickers of light, a fellow named Ramon F. Adams was busily noting the language.

His scribbles cover somewhere near 80 years; and he has just finished a book, "The Cowman Says It Salty," published by the University of Arizona Press at Tucson.

Why this ability of cowboys, to paint a sharp picture in few words?

Well, for one thing they tried. Pithy comments set a man apart, made him a figure in the region.

And there was plenty of time to compose a sentence just right when riding a fence line or circling all night around a herd of sleeping cattle.

The cowboy could make a verb out of anything and always spoke in the present tense. His use of the double negative was beautiful.

As in this one, combining negatives and present tense:

"A cow with a fresh-branded calf might be a mother, but she shore ain't no lady."

Their humor was grotesque, rough, sly and startling, as Adams relates it:

"One cowboy was telling me about his bunkie coming home drunk."

"And you know," he said, "that son-of-a-gun piled into bed just like a rooster."

"Not being sure if he meant merely 'cock-eyed' I asked: 'How's that?'"

"With his spurs on," he answered as if astonished I did not comprehend his meaning without question."

Or a cryptic explanation of human motives: "I came out here because it's a country where a man can switch his tail."

On drinking to forget your troubles: "A corkscrew never pulled nobody out of a hole."

Probably nothing is as violent in range work as breaking a bronc. Thus it spawned a gold mine of language.

One universal phrase was too graphic and desperate to become any one man's property.

The scene is a just-thrown cowboy jumping up and down "like an empty barrel boundin' downhill."

The calf ropers were proud of their cutting horses. One declared his "can turn on a biscuit and never bust the crust." Cowboys used few words which would offend the morality of the early West.

Just about as far as they would go was a cowboy, alone, far from camp, thrown from his horse and forced to walk back, who commented, "There's more of hell above ground than I thought."

He may not have had a Ph.D. in English, but the old cowboy certainly had a love of language.

Hal Boyle is ill.

Presidential Note To Faculty Member

President Richard M. Nixon, responding to concerns about ecological problems, has replied in a personal letter to Miss Gwen Potter, chairman, Department of Accounting, School of Business at East Carolina University. Miss Potter had written the president.

Dated April 10 on the White House stationery, Mr. Nixon replied:

"Your letter about my Executive Order barring the use of poisons on Federal lands has come to my attention, and I was pleased to receive your expression of support. This step, together with the other measures I proposed in my February 8 environmental message, will, I am confident, make a lasting meaningful contribution to the protection and increased enjoyment of our natural heritage for every American — now and in the generations to come."

It was signed: "with my best wishes" by Richard Nixon.

Governor's Innovative Housing Plan Bogged Down

By YVONNE BASKIN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N. C. (AP) — After three years in limbo, Gov. Bob Scott's innovative plan to spur construction of low income housing in North Carolina is still bogged down in the bond market.

eral Assembly at Scott's request, was authorized to issue up to $200 million in bonds to finance mortgages for low income families. The goal was 10,000 homes a year. No bonds have been issued, and no one is sure when any will be. During the three-year wait, the corporation has changed its emphasis, moving into areas of counseling and technical assistance to developers and low income families, planning of regional housing programs and short term loans to developers of low income housing. Executive Director Joe E. Eagles said there are two main reasons bonds have not been issued. One is that the interest on the bonds would not be low enough to allow the agency to loan money at an interest rate lower than that offered by banks and over private lenders. Second, Eagles said, the administration feels there is sufficient money in the private market and the corporation should not compete with private lenders unless it can offer lower interest rates.

services to help stimulate the construction of speculative housing in the region. Another is providing counseling for low income home owners to keep from "building the slums of tomorrow", Johnson said. The major aspect of the program, he said, is a plan to develop 1,280 federally financed rental units in the 31 western counties during the next two years. Johnson said this has not been workable before because no single small community could support enough rental units to make the project financially feasible. A 25-unit project, he said, does not pay for its management and maintenance costs, and the federal government will not back it. The corporation has developed a plan under which a number of small communities in a region will pool their proposed rental units under one manager and maintenance system and apply for federal backing as a single construction project. He said the Department of Housing and Urban Development would back a 250-unit project under a single manager where it would not have accepted 10 smaller projects under separate administration.

He said underwriters have advised that the best rate the corporation's bonds could get now would be about 6½ per cent. With the current mortgage rate at 7 per cent, Eagles said, the agency would have to sell its bonds at 6 per cent, or preferably 5½ per cent, to be able to operate.

The difference between the cost of the money from bonds and the rate the corporation lends it at would go to pay the private lending agency which serviced the bonds, to operate the corporation and to provide some type of rebate to the low income persons who borrow corporation money.

The difficulty in getting a good price for the bonds stems not only from the current situation in the bond market but also from the uniqueness of the corporation's bonds. They are believed to be the first in the nation backed only by low income mortgages.

Eagles said there are no plans to put the faith and credit of the state behind the bonds — a move which would need General Assembly and voter approval, both which would give the bonds an aaa rating.

Meanwhile, the agency is still operating off the $500,000 it received from the 1969 General Assembly and federal grants obtained for technical assistance programs in housing.

With a $100,000 grant from the Appalachian Regional Commission, the corporation has hired five housing specialists and a consultant to work in the western part of the state. Skip Johnson, coordinator of the program, said the agency is concentrating on three approaches. One is providing technical Mercury Comet is wider, roomier, heftier and has a bigger engine than VW, Toyota, Datsun or Opel.

So how come the price is about the same?

The sticker prices of the imports have increased. But Mercury Comet's price has stayed about the same.

Mercury designed Comet to be the better small car. We didn't design it to be in the same price class as the little imports. It just turned out that way, thanks to recent monetary developments and cost increases. Now the sticker prices of the imports listed above have increased by at least $170 since January 1971. But Mercury Comet is within $15 of its sticker price at that time.

Mercury Comet's longer wheelbase gives a solid, smooth, comfortable ride.

Comet is a lot more automobile than the imports listed. It has a longer wheelbase, greater length, wider stance and bigger tires. So you get an amazingly smooth and comfortable ride, solid road-holding, and remarkable stability in Comet. You get a ride Mercury is proud to call its own.

Mercury Comet's bigger engine has six cylinders, not just four.

Comet's standard six-cylinder engine operates economically, yet packs up to 73.4 more cubic inches. Optional engines available include 200 and 250 cu. in. Sixes or a 302 cu. in. V-8.

Look at all the convenience and luxury features that are standard on Mercury Comet.

The Comet has an expensive look outside and in. On the outside you get a bold, handsome grille, wheel lip moldings, heavy bumpers and dual body paint stripes. Inside you'll find deep, 100% nylon carpeting, armrests front and back, foam-padded front seat cushion, deluxe steering wheel and a lighted front ashtray. All standard equipment.

Comet is built to Lincoln-Mercury's high standards.

Comet has a thick, hefty drive shaft. The doors are made of heavy gauge steel. In fact, Comet is crafted with the same high-quality steel and acrylic enamel as the highest priced Lincoln-Mercury cars. When we call it "the better small car," it's not just a slogan. It's a fact. And with the new small-car price picture, Comet's the car to see. And drive. And own.

Mercury. Better ideas make better cars. At the sign of the cat.

Six Days Of Oddities During Mountain Climb

By SKIP SHOUTIS
and
ROB HELLYER
For The Associated Press

MOOSE, Wyo. (AP) — Feathers of frost a foot long, a barrier of frozen breath, metal so cold it burns your hand, and cheese so solid you break it on a rock for breakfast.

These are the everyday oddities we lived with for six days high on the shoulder of The Grand Teton in an assault that eventually put 12 young climbers on the granite pinnacle far above Jackson Hole—in the dead of winter.

This was the National Outdoor Leadership School's seventh attempt to master the mountain. Only once before, in 1969, had the climb been successful. While we made the peak this year, four other assault parties were turned back. But even our climb wasn't a total success. We had hoped to make the summit New Year's Eve ... but were four days late.

The climbers, originally 27, came from Wyoming and 14 other states. There was a college professor from Minnesota, a 17-year-old from Casper, and the young wife of an instructor, the only woman in the party. Then there were six of us, instructors at NOLS.

And, of course, there was Paul Petzoldt, at 63 director of the school but still as big and hearty as the mountain he knows so well.

We devoted that first day to outfitting. Heavy Army surplus boots, wool socks, under-clothing and shirts were the rule, since wool remains relatively warm even when soaked with perspiration.

When we first saw the Teton, they were so clear ... rising abruptly from the valley floor. At the end of the road, three miles beyond park headquarters where we checked in, we saddled up and began skiing through the pines and spruce toward the base of the peak.

A lot of people had trouble in the deep, powder snow. Many tumbled, but all recovered their packs and we started climbing. From there on, it was up, up, up.

In the next couple of hours, the party's skis carried us higher, eventually to the stubby base of Middle Teton glacier. We pitched our tents in the moonlight and camped for the rest of the night.

After breakfast, we dropped our tent poles but left the tents pegged into the snow. Our skis were stood on end because, from now on, the climb would be on foot.

Friday, New Year's Eve, brought the storm—a howling, driving snow-spewing blast of arctic cold. Bundled tightly in layers of wool and storm coats, we forced our way up the side of the glacier to a region we knew would be filled with deep drifts. There, 3,000 feet below the summit, we broke out the grain shovels and began digging.

ging.

This would be our base camp, four small holes in the snow.

But behind the door holes, the shovels carved out four large chambers, each the size of a room and each with several smaller rooms off to the side.

The snow caves were large enough to walk around in, with even six-footers able to stand upright.

With the mountain winds gusting above 40 miles per hour and daytime temperatures of 20 below, the temperature inside our apartment complex held at about 25 to 30 degrees above zero.

The storm raged. Soon after the caves were complete, the wind finished the work, drifting across the doors to seal them tight.

Here we sat, for three days. Reading, sleeping, talking, eating, sleeping and letting the storm and time pass.

Each day, however, one of our four parties—generally six or eight of us—would climb to the top of the glacier, into the Teton's lower saddle where there is a small quonset hut, about 10 by 12 feet.

If the weather would permit it, the final assault would be launched from the hut by whomever was there when the skies cleared and winds abated.

But the wind and snow continued—through our blackberry brandy toast—New Year's Eve into Saturday, through Saturday into Sunday. The nighttime temperatures fell to 40 or more degrees below zero, and the winds gusted up toward 50 miles per hour. The chill factor—the relative effect of cold and wind on bare skin—plunged to 101 below zero. We couldn't move. Ice from frozen breath built up on moustaches, hair, collars and hoods.

The tin walls of the hut, exposed to the constant blast of wind and snow, resounded like the inside of a drum. Large chunks of ice and snow, along with occasional rocks from the wind-swept saddle, slammed into the walls like bullets.

But the storm had to break, and it did—Monday. A party of nine was in the hut, the rest snuggled in the caves below.

The snow stopped, the wind stopped, and the cold—by itself—was bearable.

Skip Shoutis, 23, an instructor at Lander, and two other instructors, Dave Gipe, 20, of Indianapolis, and his brother, Steve, also 20, were at the base camp.

All three of us were in good physical condition after hiking with NOLS classes through the 13,000-foot Wind River Range during the summer and fall. The bright sun was too much for us, and we raced to the assault hut at daylight, making the two-hour climb in 30 minutes.

The going was good, but potentially dangerous. An ice axe cut steps in the snow for the party to follow.

We overtook the main party en route, and after five days, all straggled to the summit within an hour, about 11:30 a.m. Monday.

False Culture In Video Dramas

By JERRY BUCK
AP TV-Radio Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Television distorts the image of this country by censoring controversial and provocative themes and replacing them with myths, cliches and stereotypes, says a group of writers.

TV drama and comedy has become the culture of a vast majority of Americans, "and what they think of life is a reflection of what they see on television, and it's a lie," one said.

That was the consensus of four writers asked by The Associated Press to discuss allegations of censorship by producers and network executives.

The request came after representatives of the 3,000-member Writers Guild of America testified on censorship before the Senate Judiciary Committee's subcommittee on constitutional rights in Washington recently.

Participating in the discussion were David W. Rintels, chairman of the guild's censorship committee; Richard M. Powell; John Furia Jr., and Harlan Ellison.

The four writers, all award-winning writers for television and movies, said the views expressed represent their own and not the guild's.

Q. What is censored, what do they make you take out, what kinds of things are you forced to avoid?

Rintels: "What do they make you take out? I would say almost anything that does not deal in a routine establishment way with any of the great concerns that we will have. At random, Vietnam, race, economics, a wide range of social and personal questions. There is an unwillingness to deal with any material which the network regards as potentially sensitive, potentially offensive to any possible viewer."

Powell: "The best way I can answer this is to give you an analogy. When I was 12 years old I used to read a lot of stories in 'The American Boy' and 'Boy's Life.' They had standard-type plots in which the hero was always a football hero. Now if those writers were around today they would be writing television because that's what we're getting today. We're feeding pap and mythology to the public, and we have become their entire culture. They watch television. They don't read books. They don't read magazines as a whole. They don't read newspapers. They watch television. And what they think of life is a reflection of what they see on television, and it's a lie. ... This is the sin of television, and the sin can be laid directly at the doors of the networks."

Ellison: "We are told that the demographics of the buying audience is between the age of 18 and 39. On a series that I just worked as story editor, 'The Sixth Sense,' we were not allowed to have characters on our show under the age of 18 or over the age of 40. There were stories planned, for instance, for a colony of senior citizens. We could not do it. It had to be changed to a Rand Corp. think tank, with people about 35 years old. This tends to promulgate the idea that growing old is bad. That, God forbid, you should get over the age of 30, you're dead."

Furia: "I think what's excluded from entertainment television is reality. ... We never see anything that's troublesome. Any troublesome problems we see have nothing to do with society, they have only to do with the individual. It's all right if someone is dying of cancer, but it's not all right if you're involved with a social problem. ... We are constantly pre-censored, because we know that if we were to attempt to write stories involving any side of a controversial issue the thing would not be acceptable. None of the lead characters has any flaws, and that's an aspect of reality I certainly think needs redressing."

Rintels: "On the series 'Cannon,' Bob White proposed a show about something congressional hearings have been held on, which is the practice of some otherwise legitimate drug companies of manufacturing millions of excess amphetamines which somehow find their way into the illegal market. The producer of the series said you cannot take on a drug company on television. Drug companies advertise."

Q. How far should television go and how frank should it be?

Ellison: "Everything should be permitted. If you're watching something that offends you, turn it off."

"No vestige of genuine personality or character analysis is permitted. When a script is long the first thing that goes out is that little touch you

Old Cannonball Is Still Deadly

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Police have warned Jackson residents that a stolen 200-pound cannonball, made in 1863 in the North, is still capable of creating heavy damage and of killing persons.

The "live fuse" cannonball, filled with black powder, was stolen from its resting spot outside the home of C.O. Drummond of Jackson, police said. Drummond noticed it was missing Saturday.

Drummond said Sunday he had tried to get bomb experts to defuse it, but they had declined because they were not sure of how to disarm such a large explosive device safely.

Drummond said it was one of two cannonballs found on his property in Vicksburg in 1947, during construction of an addition to his home at the time.

Bailed Out The Bedroom Flood

MISSOULA, Mont. (AP) — Sunday wasn't the day for sleeping late at the Mike Picchionni home.

Shortly after 11 a.m. a frantic call summoned firemen and neighbors to his home.

A fire truck, specially equipped with a vacuum hose and used mostly to combat grass fires, rolled up to his bedroom window, and firemen and friends pitched in to their task.

A waterbed had burst and the vacuum hose was needed to bail out the flooded Picchionni bedroom.

Soviet Files Protest Note

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet government made an official protest Sunday night against the U.S. escalation of the air war in Vietnam and Pravda followed up with a strong attack today. But there was no mention yet of President Nixon's trip to Moscow next month.

A White House advance team was to leave Washington today and arrive in Moscow on Wednesday to begin preparations for Nixon's visit. A U.S. Embassy spokesman said there had been no change in plans.

U.S. Ambassador Jacob D. Beam was summoned to the Foreign Ministry to receive the Soviet protest note. Sources said it specifically mentioned the bombing of Haiphong but they declined to say whether it referred to Nixon's visit May 22 directly or indirectly.

Administration officials in Washington said the U.S. government was working on a reply.

"Venturing a new escalation in the war in Vietnam, the U.S. aggressors are playing with fire," the Communist Party newspaper Pravda said in a commentary today.

BERNALILLO, N.M. (AP) — Nudists, of course, don't wear clothes.

But the nature worshippers in New Mexico's only nudist camp go even farther—they give away clothes.

The Yucca Naturist Club, near Bernalillo, presented Goodwill Industries on Saturday 1,780 pounds of clothing and other items collected in the club's annual clothing drive.

Find Body Near Disabled Car

MONROE, N.C. (AP) — The burned body of a Matthews man was found in a field in U.S. 74, near his disabled automobile, five miles west of Monroe this morning.

He was identified as Marion Francis Hager, 50.

Coroner Roy Funderburk said death was accidental. Authorities said a cigarette lighter was found on the car's engine and the air filter had been removed. They theorized that Hager had sought to learn the trouble with the aid of the lighter when gas fumes or leaking gasoline ignited his clothing.

He apparently had tried to snuff out the flames by rolling in the field.

Final PTA Meet Of School Year

The final Wahl-Coates School P.T.A. meeting of the current school year was held Thursday at the school's auditorium.

For entertainment, a variety of acts was presented by students. The Fourth Grade Mixed Chorus gave a program of music, several students took part in a modern dance and a tap dance number, and other students performed a program of string music. Two students played piano solos. The entertainment program was directed by Mrs. Zenora Langley, music teacher.

Two Scouting executives, Hugh Benson and Bob Dubose, spoke on "P.T.A. Involvement in Scouting."

Some 250 Jaycees and their wives are expected to attend the Spring Regional Convention for the northeast region of the North Carolina Jaycees here Saturday and Sunday.

Jaycees from across the state will be on hand to participate in the activities with U.S. Jaycee vice president Bill Hobbs of Forest City and state president Avery Nye Jr. of Fairmont heading the list of dignitaries.

"Get Acquainted" parties have been scheduled for the visitors on Saturday afternoon, according to convention chairman Tom Reese.

Also on Saturday afternoon, regional Speak-Up competition will be held to determine the region's representatives in state competition. Area winners will be competing for the state honor and two local chapter members, Joe DeLoach and Reese are representing this area.

Saturday night, the chairman reported, will be highlighted by a banquet and dance.

On Sunday morning, the Jaycees will be exposed to state Jaycee politics when they hear the candidates who are seeking office for the North Carolina organization. These officers will be elected at the state convention scheduled in Raleigh in May. On Sunday morning's agenda will also be the election of regional officers.

Reese said that the local Jaycees, "with the assistance of many Greenville merchants and citizens, are making every effort to welcome these visitors and show them the fine points of Greenville."

'Careful' Pearson Wins By 2 Laps At Darlington

COOLING TOWEL—David Pearson, of Spartanburg, S.C., cools off with a wet towel around his head after winning the Rebel 400 stock car race Sunday. (AP Wirephoto)

By BLOYS BRITT
AP Auto Racing Writer
DARLINGTON, S. C. (AP) — David Pearson says he isn't superstitious like most race drivers. "I'm just careful," is the way he puts it.
Pearson, 37, didn't let any qualms he might have had about numbers stand in his way Sunday when he drove a Mercury to a two-lap victory over Richard Petty's Plymouth in the 16th Rebel 400 stock car race.

It was his first major triumph in two years and it paid him $14,850. It also proved that the veteran campaigner from Spartanburg, S. C., has lost little of the driving skill that has carried him to more than $696,000 in prize money since 1960.

Pearson had won the pole position for this spring classic, capturing it on the 13th day of the month, and exactly 13 years since he first sat in a grand national car.
Not only that, his pit pass was No. 13 and he once had crashed a car that bore the number 13.

"Aside from the wreck," he said, "I had always figured 13 was my lucky number, and the wreck was my fault—not from some bad luck omen."

"So, when I qualified on the pole the other day, I told the Wood brothers, my car owners, we'd do well in the race."
And so he did. The 20-year driving star paced the 36 car field four times during the race for a total of 220 of the 293 laps around the tough Darlington International Raceway oval. His speed was 124.426 miles per hour—not as fast as the 132 laps he needed to win the 1970 Rebel, but fast enough.

There were six other leaders and 14 lead chances, but in the end Pearson's candy-apple red Mercury and Petty's Plymouth were the only cars left running at full speed. Only 18 cars made it to the finish.

Even so, Pearson made the final seven circuits with yellow caution lights blinking in his goggles. The last of five yellow lights that slowed the race was brought out when Dodge driving Jim Vandiver wrecked on the front straight. Track officials were unable to clean up the mess in the time remaining.

It had been a good race most of the way, with Pearson, Petty, Bobby Allison, Buddy Baker and Bobby Isaac swapping the lead at top speed. Right behind this pack were new Fords driven by LeeRoy Yarbrough, Fred Lorenzen and Benny Parsons. Parsons survived to finish fourth behind third placer Joe Frasson of Golden Valley, Minn., driving a Dodge. James Hylton of Inman, S. C., finished fifth in a Ford.

Isaac went only 100 miles before the engine failed in his Dodge. Baker wrecked his Dodge along the front straight, and Allison, winner of the previous two NASCAR starts, was slowed late in the race by sway bar problems.

The caution lights slowed the race for 36 laps, giving the record Rebel crowd of 45,000 a respite from the torrid action.
Pearson had taken over the Wood brothers car last week after it was vacated by A. J. Foyt, who went back to try for a fourth triumph in the Indianapolis 500. Foyt had driven the car to two major victories and a second place finish in a third.

Marathon Has 1,200 Entries

By DAVE O'HARA
Associated Press Sports Writer
BOSTON (AP) — A flock of doctors, clergymen, a congressman, judges, authors, cops and firemen, authors, bank tellers, salesmen, laborers, school teachers—and now housewives.
People from all walks of life were represented among more than 1,200 entries today for the 76th Boston A.A. Marathon, a 26-mile, 385-yard jaunt for a few prizes and traditional beef stew.
Distance runners from 11 nations, 42 states and the District of Columbia were down to jam the starting line on a narrow tree-lined street in Hopkinton. The starting gun at high noon touched off the second biggest human stampede in BAA history.

Marathon officials, who have tried in vain to keep gals from the course in the past, finally bowed to Women's Lib. Nine women assigned special "F" designations and numbers, were due to start with the men and compete for three special prizes.
Despite strict qualifying rules, BAA Director Will Cloney and his top, and unpaid, assistant, John Semple, had another tough time holding down the field. The majority of entries held little hope of finishing with the leaders. Most sought only to finish, and in a respectable time.
The joggers included New York State Supreme Court Justice Arnold G. Fraiman, Nevada Lt. Gov. Harry Reid, author Erich Segal, Congressman Byron Goodloe of Maryland and two former BAA winners, Johnny (The Elder) Kelley and Johnny (The Younger) Kelley. The Elder, now 64, was ready for his 41st BAA run. The Younger, now a Groton, Conn., school teacher, won in 1957, but has slowed at the age of 41.

Ambrose Burfoot, who dominated the pack as a Wesleyan College senior in 1968, the last Olympic year, was the only other former winner in the field. He and Kelley were the only American winners since World War II, the elder Kelley winning in 1945 before foreigners took charge.

The course record of 2 hours, 10 minutes and 30 seconds appeared safe. Colombia's Alvaro Mejia won in 2:18.45 last year, but did not enter for a return performance.

Although many nations, such as Japan, are concentrating on the Olympic Games in Germany this summer, Colombia sent four representatives, Finland two, Mexico five and Canada a record 67.

Guatemala Tops U.S. In Match

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — Guatemala defeated the United States 3-2 Sunday in an Olympic soccer elimination match.
The winners broke a 1-1 tie with two goals in the 50th and 58th minutes. The American team got a goal in the 37th minute when a Guatemalan accidentally out the ball in the U.S. goal and another in the 80th minute.
The victory put Guatemala on the top of the four-nation tournament which will decide two countries will represent the North and Central Americas and the Caribbean at Munich.

Rusty Royals Spoil A Good Protest, Win All Three First Contests

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer
Memo to American League President Joe Cronin:
Remember that protest from the Kansas City Royals regarding their opening series with the Chicago White Sox?

Well, now you can forget it.
The Royals were up in arms over the disadvantage they were at because Chicago had allowed its players to work out at White Sox Park during the major league baseball players' strike, contrary to an American League order.
Management decided it would protest any games the rusty Royals lost to the in-shape White Sox. Then the KC players were and spoiled the plans by winning all three games.

Kansas City completed the opening series sweep with 2-1 and 4-3 victories in Sunday's doubleheader. Elsewhere in the American League Sunday, Minnesota topped Oakland 3-2; Texas trimmed California 5-1 and Baltimore defeated New York 3-1 in the rain-shortened first game of a scheduled doubleheader. The second New York-Baltimore game, Milwaukee's doubleheader at Cleveland and Boston's game at Detroit all were rained out.

Amos Otis, who was too late driving from his home in Virginia to get in Kansas City's starting lineup of Saturday's opener, made up for lost time Sunday. Otis drilled a pair of singles in the first game, driving in the Royals' first run and then scoring the winner in the fifth.

ninth by Bob Oliver had tied the score for KC, took the early lead behind Stan Bahnsen in Sunday's opener.
In the nightcap, Steve Hovley's 10th inning single drove home Paul Schaaf with the deciding run. Schaaf had walked and moved up on infield out before Hovley's two-out hit won it.

Bobby Darwin, converted from pitcher to outfielder, hit his second homer in as many games for Minnesota and the Twins edged Oakland. Darwin's two-run shot tied the game in the fifth inning for the Twins after Chuck Manuel had opened the inning with a single—the first hit against Jim "Catfish"

Hunter.
Then, in the eighth, Cesar Tovar was hit by a pitch—a decision the A's argued against long and loud—and circled the bases on Rod Carew's double for the winning run.

Brooks Robinson drove in two Baltimore runs and the Orioles trimmed the Yankees in a game rained out in the bottom of the seventh inning.
Pat Dobson, one of four 20-game winners on Baltimore's pitching staff, combined with rookie Doyle Alexander for the five-hit victory.

Pete Broberg worked eight innings and then relievers Paul Lindblad and Horacio Pina split the ninth as Texas whipped California.

Sarasota Loses To Robersonville, 5-0

ROBERSONVILLE — The Golden Eagles of Robersonville High School ran their overall record to five wins and one loss here Saturday with a 5-0 thumping of Sarasota.

Doyle Farmer hurled the victory for Robersonville, scattering six hits whole Webb took the loss for Sarasota, who saw their record slip to 7-4.
The Eagles picked up a run in the second inning and it was really all they needed. Summy Mobley singled and Matt Wilson was hit by a pitch. The throw to third on Larry Jackson's sacrifice attempt was late, leaving the bases loaded and Mike Mathews walked to force in Mobley with the first run.

In the third frame, Ricky Brown singled and stole second. Mobley doubled and Brown scored on the play. Wilson single to bring in Mobley.

The home squad added two insurance runs in the fifth. L. Corey walked and Phil James got a double to score Corey. James went to third on the throw in and scored on Wilson's sacrifice fly.

Mobley lead the Robersonville hitting with a single and double in three attempts while no one got more than one hit for Sarasota.

Robersonville's Friday afternoon game with Edenton was rained out and was tentatively re-scheduled for today.

Cragwood Stable's Windjammer, a Restless Wind colt bred in Florida by Mrs. M. G. Tippitt, won four of his five races in 1971.

Farm Tips

By Dr. J. W. Pou
Agricultural Specialist
Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., N.A.

In what is called a show of "remarkable progress," North Carolina dairies are becoming the best in the South.

North Carolina State University extension dairy specialists said figures show that Tar Heel cows on Dairy Herd Improvement Association records last year produced an average of 13,037 pounds of milk each.

For the supermarket shopper who measures milk in different terms, that's about 152 gallons or 608 quarts per cow.

Five years ago, the state average was 11,575 pounds of milk per cow.

"We overtook Virginia in the southern region a year ago and held on last year," commented Marvin Senger, in charge of extension dairy husbandry at N. C. State University. "Our's is now the best production record in the South and an example of rather remarkable progress."

Senger added that the continued increase in milk production per cow is a direct result of a tremendous effort by our dairymen to become more efficient and thereby keep milk costs down.

Computer records have been one of the big factors contributing to progress on North Carolina dairy farms. These records are maintained by the Dairy Herd Improvement Association center on the N. C. State University campus. The center serves 12 states, Puerto Rico, the Dominican Republic, Bahama and Jamaica.

Farmers submit monthly records on virtually all aspects of their operations. The computer returns, within two or three days, a neat package of summary figures and analyses which the farmers use as the basis for management decisions.

"They use the records for such basic decisions as how much feed the herd needs to maintain a level of production," Senger noted. "Or, the records identify the low producing cows which might be considered for culling from the herd. They identify cows that should be ready for breeding or those that should be pregnancy tested."

All of these factors are important in a well managed dairy operation.

Senger said about one-third of the Grade A dairies in North Carolina are on Dairy Herd Improvement Association records. "We know and the farmer knows exactly what kind of progress these farms are making," he said. And we believe these farms are in a better position to plan for continued improvements — the kind of improvements we will have to have to keep North Carolina ahead in dairy efficiency in the South.

A ROASTED DELIGHT — A little wary, this squirrel pauses a few inches from a proffered roasted peanut. After a short moment of indecision, the temptation of a favorite food won out and the roasted delight was accepted. (AP Wirephoto)

Farm Scene

By HENRY C. RIDDICK

At this time there appears to be a shortage of peanut seed. There is no way of determining this shortage is real or artificial. In talking with Astor Perry, Extension Agronomy Specialist at N.C. State University, he says there definitely is a shortage of NC-S's since they were the last variety dug last year during the extremely bad harvest season. While our seedsmen have on hand as many seed as they sold last year, we suspect that many growers who normally save their own seed did not do so last fall which has created a greater demand for seed than ever before.

Due to the possible shortage, let me suggest that when you pick up your seed from the seedsmen, take only the amount needed for planting, do not plant until the soil is warm and the chances of getting a good stand is high. If there is a shortage, seed for replanting may be hard to find.

The adverse weather conditions also caused a great deal of difficulty in picking corn last fall. This means that a lot of ear corn is still left in the field in which we will plan peanuts in the next two weeks. Harold Coble, Extension weed specialist at N. C. State University has this possible solution to that problem. Prepare your seedbed now. When the corn gets one to two inches high, disc once. If a power drive rotary hoe is available, this would be better since it would break up the ears. Allow time for the corn to germinate. When corn is one to two inches high, treat with Balan plus Bernam and cross disc or rotary till. Plant peanuts then use Dinitro at cracking to get the remaining corn plants.

All data points to the fact that using a good herbicide program in peanuts will increase your yield considerably over conventional cultivation. This does not mean that it is not necessary sometimes to cultivate but growers should take a closer look when they do. If you need additional information on good peanut production practices, contact the Agricultural Extension Office in Greenville.

Firefighting Is Hampered

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — State Forest Service men and equipment were called in from a wide area of North Carolina Sunday to battle a large wildfire raging in the Hoffman Forest 15 miles north of Jacksonville.

The forest service reported the fire was discovered early Sunday afternoon and that by late afternoon it had destroyed about 5,000 acres of woodland.

Three large air tankers and a fleet of smaller tanker planes threw thousands of gallons of chemical retardant on the blaze and heavy forest service tractors equipped with special plows attempted to establish a control line around the fire.

However, the forest service reported that firefighting efforts were hampered by gusty winds that spread the flames and by a maze of canals which crisscross the forest.

The fire boss on the scene, Dane Roten of Raleigh, sent out a call for more men and equipment to help combat the big fire, and the forest service reported that more help was on the way. Two paper companies and the Camp Lejeune Marines also sent men and equipment to help.

The Hoffman Forest is owned by the Forestry Foundation of North Carolina State University.

Soul City Fate At Stake Today

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A hearing on whether the 2,000-acre site of the proposed All-

Negro community of Soul City in Warren County will be sold at auction to satisfy an $11,000 surveyor's bill was scheduled to be held in Raleigh today.

Superior Court Judge A. Pilston Godwin Jr. will hear arguments on a motion by attorneys that a default judgment calling for auction of the property May 9 be set aside.

If the judge allows the motion, the sale will not be held. If he rules otherwise, the land could go on the auction block at a sheriff's sale.

But, Theodosius T. Clayton of Littleton, attorney for Soul City, and a participant in its development, discounted such a possibility.

"It is insignificant," he said. "It is not even worth putting in the paper." He added that he had been out of town and did not know details of the matter.

Soul City's founder, Floyd

McKissick, was not available immediately for comment.

Legal ads that appeared in a Warrenton newspaper last week, said that Sheriff Clarence A. Davis would conduct an auction for the several tracts that comprise Soul City on May 9.

The ads appeared after Truelove Engineers, Inc., of Greensboro obtained a default judgment against Floyd B. McKissick Enterprises, Inc., and Soul City Development Co. The Greensboro firm obtained the judgment in its attempt to collect $11,000 it claimed Soul City owed it for surveying work.

Probe 'Arsenal' Unions Have At University Room To Grow

COLOMBO, Ceylon (AP) — A three-man royal commission has been appointed in Ceylon to discover how one of the country's major universities was turned into an arsenal prior to the abortive insurrection in the country last year.

Molotov cocktails, homemade bombs, spears, grenades and firearms were among the weapons stockpiled at Peradeniya University.

DUBLIN (AP) — Trade unionism has grown in Ireland in recent years, but still only 53 per cent of workers belong to unions. There are 386,800 union members in the Republic and 263,000 in Northern Ireland. In the Republic 57 per cent are male and 43 per cent female, while in the North 66 per cent of union members are men and 34 per cent women.

DUBAI

SMUGGLERS' LAIR

The tiny Arab sheikhdom of Dubai has at least two claims to fame. Offshore oil reserves of fabulous potential, and the title of smuggling capital of the Middle East. The city-state is located on what used to be known as the Pirate Coast, on the Persian Gulf. That was just one phase of a long and colorful history. Now, along with all that oil and the gold smuggling, Dubai's present includes membership in the new Union of Arab Emirates, and plans for a $25 million deep water harbor. But for the moment the bustling old port still swarms with assorted dhows, tiny ferry boats, tramp steamers and coastal luggers. Merchants throng the quaysides and jostle through the souks, trading in a rare variety of exotic goods. Drugs, silver and Swiss watches are common items. But underneath cotton bales, oil drums, loose rice and other camouflage, come and go the glittering consignments of the gold trade. And gold smuggling is still Dubai's specialty.

'Unreal Ring' To Food Price Complaints

By BERNARD BRENNER
WASHINGTON (UPI) — All the current talk about high food prices has an almost unreal ring to Truman W. Waite of Ursa, Ill. Waite has been raising and fattening cattle for 50 years. Recently, after reading a report that live cattle prices hit record levels earlier this year, he wrote UPI a letter about "high" beef prices: "In looking over the past half-century, the highest meat prices I can recall were during the depression of the 1930s. You could buy bacon and good roasts of beef for a dime a pound,"

Waite said. "Only nobody had the dime." Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz likes to say much the same thing in another way—pointing out that consumers will spend a record-low 15.6 per cent of their take-home pay for food this year in spite of higher retail prices. He concedes, however, that many consumers have little sympathy with such comparisons, particularly on the heels of a 14.3 per cent jump in retail beef prices in the year ending in February. Arguments designed to show food is still a bargain "go over great" when he's talking to cattle feeders, Butz told a group of Ohio farmers recently, "But just try telling that to a gal who paid $1.89 a pound for steak." The secretary explains that he means the "average" wage earner when he talks about consumers spending a lower percentage of take-home pay on food. And averages can be misleading. The 4.2 per cent rise in the cost of a typical family "market basket" between last October and February represents a real pinch for a family whose income hasn't risen. Retired people living on Social Security or other fixed income are hard hit. Why are food prices moving up? And who gets the money? Grocery prices in 1972 will average about 4 per cent higher than last year because of two factors: Farm returns and the margin between farm and retail prices are both up.

reversal of the trend of the past two decades when stepped-up marketing costs have been chiefly responsible for retail food price increases. Government figures show dramatically the disparity between the farmer's "take" and that of so-called middlemen. The typical food "market basket" cost $290 more last year than it did in 1953, $50 of the increase reflected higher farm prices but $240 represented extra marketing charges. And last year, when retail market basket costs rose $21, $1 went to farmers and $20 reflected higher marketing costs! The picture began changing last fall. Prices of some raw farm products recovered from a seasonal slump, pork went up because supplies were narrowing and beef cattle prices climbed because production was temporarily down despite strong consumer demand. As a result, the typical retail market basket cost rose by $52 between October and February with $40 going to farmers and $12 due to higher marketing costs. Taking beef alone, Agriculture Department reports showed average retail prices for all choice grade cuts rose 10.7 cents a pound from October to a record-high $1.158 in February. This broke down to 7.4 cents for farmers and 3.3 cents in extra marketing costs.

FELLOWSHIP—Wendell Gene Wilson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin C. Wilson, Rt. 2, Mill Spring, N.C., is the first recipient of the Lawrence F. Brewster Fellowship in the Department of History, East Carolina University. Dr. Brewster (L) is professor emeritus in History at ECU, and is shown congratulating Wilson. Wilson is a History Honors Scholar, winner of the ECU History Honors Scholarship, a member of Phi Alpha Theta Honor Society and is listed in "Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities." Named Winners In Auditions

Dr. Charles W. Moore, state auditions chairman for the National Association of Teachers of Singing, has announced winners in the student auditions held in Chapel Hill last weekend. Winner include: Jacqueline Willis Rausch, student of Gladys White, ECU; David Faber, student of Antonia Dalapas and Dr. Clyde Hiss, ECU; Mrs. Rausch and Faber were among six students given travel awards for further competition at the NATS regional competition to be held later this month at Florida State University Tallahassee, Fla.

This predicted retail rise compares with a 2.5 per cent gain in 1971 when the August-November wage-price freeze helped hold retail price advances at the lowest level since 1967. It more nearly resembles the 5 per cent gain in 1970 and the 4.8 per cent rise in 1969. For 1972 as a whole, economists believe that about two-thirds of the jump in consumer prices will represent higher farm prices. Increased processing-marketing charges will account for the rest. The farmer's share of the consumer food dollar was only 38 cents last year. If that increases as expected in 1972 it would be a

Scholars Speak At Greensboro

Three North Carolina doctoral candidates sponsored by Delta Kappa Gamma, international society for women educators, spoke at the state DKG Banquet in Greensboro last week. They were Patricia M. Stroud of Kinston and Helen Kemp Gay of Raleigh, winners of international scholarships, and Janice Joan Thompson of Smithfield, winner of the Gilbert-McNairy state scholarship. All are graduates of East Carolina University and all are recipients of $2500 DKG 1971 scholarships.

Winner Of Scholarship

WINSTON-SALEM — Leslie Anne Denson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond L. Denson of 409 Glenwood Ave., Grifton, is among 42 winners of George Foster Hankins Scholarships at Wake Forest University. The names of the winners were announced yesterday by William G. Starling, director of admissions. The 30 boys and 12 girls, all North Carolina high school seniors were chosen for their outstanding records and for their scholarship and leadership. The scholarship range in potential four year value from $1,200 to $12,400. The program was established in 1955 through income of an estate of more than $1 million left to Wake Forest by Col. George Foster Hankins of Lexington. Miss Denson is a senior at Ayden-Grifton High School. She writes for the Greenville Daily Reflector and the Ayden News Leader.

Muskie To Urge Immediate End To Viet Bombing

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer
Sen. Edmund S. Muskie says he will introduce a resolution in the Senate today calling for an immediate halt to all American military action against North Vietnam.

And Sen. George McGovern says President Nixon's orders sending U.S. planes to bomb the North "puts us just one more notch closer to the disaster that can come any time."

Both contenders for the Democratic presidential nomination used the word "reckless" to describe the bombing of the Hanoi and Haiphong areas, and Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey described it as very dangerous.

But the President was complimented by a fourth Democratic presidential hopeful and received indirect support from a fifth.

"It was a very courageous act," said Mayor Sam Yorty of Los Angeles. "I hope President Nixon will go directly to the American people and ask for their support in this action to stop Communist aggression."

Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama said he would not pass judgment on what is or is not a proper military target but added he favors continued U.S. withdrawal. "and I approve of whatever action is necessary to defend the health and safety" of American troops still in Vietnam.

Duke University President Terry Sanford, who also is making a bid for the Democratic presidential nomination, said that, "the dangerous escalation brings nearer than ever before the prospects of a direct Russian-American confrontation."

The reaction of Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington, one of the more hawkish Democratic contenders, wasn't reported Sunday.

Muskie, discussing his proposal on the ABC broadcast "Issues and Answers" Sunday, read the "sense-of-the-Senate" resolution he is to introduce. The measure, if passed, would not be binding on the President but would merely express the will of the Senate.

"What the President may well have done" by escalating the air war, the Maine senator said, "is to greatly undermine, if not destroy, the possibilities of getting those prisoners back"

McGovern of South Dakota, in a speech to about 1,000 people in Framingham, Mass., said: "It is ironic that four years ago the same man who pledged to end this war is now commanding the Air Force to bomb North Vietnam. This puts us just one more notch closer to the disaster that can come any time."

Sen. Robert Dole, chairman of the Republican National Committee, defended the bombing and accused Muskie, McGovern and other Democratic critics of engaging in "the politics of hypocrisy when we recall their respective roles in dragging us into the war"

The Kansas senator conceded there is always a risk of inadvertent bombing of Soviet ships in Haiphong harbor but said, "American air power is directed only at military targets."

In other weekend political developments:

POLLS—A Gallup Poll showed that if the race for the Democratic nomination were narrowed to a two-man contest Democratic voters would prefer either Humphrey or Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts over Muskie.

Asked to choose between Humphrey and Muskie, the Democrats found in a national sample of 1,478 registered voters preferred Humphrey 54 per cent to 39 per cent with 7 per cent undecided. In a Kennedy Muskie contest, Kennedy led 50 to 42 with 8 per cent undecided. Kennedy, however, has said he is not a candidate.

The Gallup Poll didn't test Muskie's strength against McGovern.

10,000 screaming fans to a rival rally at the state fair grounds and accused his opponents of trying to jump on his populist bandwagon.

HUMPHREY—The Minnesota senator announced plans to actively campaign in the Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, West Virginia, Nebraska, Michigan and Maryland primaries but to skip two states where his names will also be on the ballot: Massachusetts and Tennessee.

ANGUISH—A Vietnamese man lies weeping on the road after his wife was killed Monday when their truck was ambushed by North Vietnamese troops on Route 13 north of Saigon.

The man was also wounded in the attack. The North Vietnamese stopped the truck with a rocket-propelled grenade then opened fire with small arms. (AP Wirephoto)

Budget Data To Be Available On Thursday

Information on the Greenville City Schools' budget for the coming fiscal year will be available on Thursday, according to Associate Superintendent Glenn Cox.

Cox said plans are to have printed information ready for distribution at that time to be placed in the schools and in the Central Office on West Fifth Street where interested persons can pick up copies.

The public hearing on the school budget will be held Monday night April 24, at Wahl-Coates Auditorium at 8:00 a.m.

The regular school board meeting, usually held on the third Monday night, has been postponed until Tuesday night, April 25, following the public budget hearing.

Says Impact Of Judas Ignored

NEW YORK (AP) — Social studies textbooks currently used in U.S. high schools and colleges largely ignore the contribution of Jews and Judaism to modern civilization, says a Stanford University historian.

Dr. Gavin I. Langmuir told an American Jewish Committee meeting here that the omission was directly responsible for the ignorance of most Americans about Judaism and Jewish history.

Congress Near Decision On Space Flight Project

By CARL C. CRAFT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — While Apollo 16 reaches for the moon, Congress nears a decision on whether to commit the nation to a multibillion-dollar shuttle course that could prompt a space-flight revolution.

With the first test of President Nixon's space-shuttle project due in the House this week, opponents say privately the program for the first reusable space vehicle is gaining such momentum that they see a call for deferment and more study—instead of a move for rejection—as their best plan of attack.

However, powerful backing for the shuttle comes from the House Space Committee, which says the vehicle—taking off like a rocket, flying in orbit like a spaceship, landing like an airplane—is "the key to future space applications and exploration."

The committee voted 22 to 0 for a bill authorizing $3.428 billion to run National Aeronautics and Space Administration programs during the year starting in July, including $200 million for detailed design and development work on the shuttle. In addition, there is $27.9 million for construction of space shuttle facilities.

Over six years, developmental costs are estimated at $5.15 billion, with the first manned orbital flight planned for 1978.

"Its versatility will open up vast new opportunities to realize the promise of space for practical applications on earth and for expanding the frontiers of science," the committee said in its report to the House.

A leading opponent of the shuttle, Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., said he plans to urge the House to delay development "before committing ourselves to a vague and undefined program." Congress "has yet to hear from NASA a definite and straightforward presentation of the military role of the space shuttle," Aspin said.

PART OF THE SOLUTION: PART 1

So automobile liability insurance rates have gone up. Take a look at this chart and be thankful you live in North Carolina.

BASE LIABILITY INSURANCE PREMIUMS BY STATE FOR PRIVATELY OWNED PASSENGER VEHICLES*

*Rates published here reflect latest available information

Despite the recent 7.7 percent increase in private passenger auto liability insurance rates, you're still better off than your neighbors.

With the rate increase, North Carolina still ranks 20th among the 22 eastern states and the District of Columbia. That means you pay less for your auto liability protection than motorists in 19 other eastern states.

A rate increase for automobile liability insurance was badly needed in North Carolina. Before the recent rate increase, automobile liability insurance rates had increased only 2.8 percent over a four-year period.

And we all know how much more the cost of repairing damaged cars and the cost of hospital and medical care increased during that same period.

Because rates had not gone up in proportion to the cost of settling claims many insurance companies did not want to write auto liability policies. This restricted insurance market caused problems for many motorists and forced many motorists to purchase coverage through the Assigned Risk Plan.

Adjustments in the premium rates should make it easier for you to purchase liability coverage — and easier to stay out of the assigned risk plan.

Although nobody likes to see prices go up, the rate increase for liability insurance helps solve some insurance problems for many motorists in the long run.

So look around at other states. Then be thankful you live in North Carolina.
