Most Extensive Floods In U.S. History As Susquehanna and Ohio Rivers Overflow Banks

By United Press International

Dozens of helicopter rescue squadrons rushed food and drinking water to 600 persons trapped Saturday in their Wilkes-Barre, Pa., homes by raging 15-foot-deep waters as the most extensive floods in U.S. history ravaged Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Ohio.

The mighty Susquehanna River smashed through sandbag dikes and swamped WilkesBarre despite the efforts of thousands of disaster workers. Downstream, the river flooded downtown Harrisburg and threatened to inundate Sunbury, Pa. The Ohio River, also in record floodstage, spread through the Golden Triangle business district of Pittsburgh, forced mass evacuations of towns in West Virginia and Ohio and posed a major threat to Wheeling, W. Va.

The weeklong death toll in floods spawned by Tropical Storm Agnes climbed to 110 and damage soared past the billion dollar mark. More than 370,000 persons were left homeless and uncounted scores were missing.

President Nixon, who already had declared Florida, Maryland, Pennsylvania, New York and Virginia major flood disaster areas, toured inundated sections of Maryland and Pennsylvania by helicopter Saturday morning.

"We saw devastation everywhere," the President said.

At least 30 helicopters from the Navy, Marines, Air Force, Coast Guard, National Guard and State Police flew into flooded Wilkes-Barre in relays dropping supplies on the rooftops of partially submerged homes.

All local radio stations cooperated in setting up an emergency network, taking calls from the stranded families and relaying their requests for aid to state police at a rescue headquarters at Scranton-Wilkes-Barre Airport.

State police said 600 were trapped in the center of the city of 56,000 after apparently ignoring or not knowing of evacuation orders.

Civil Defense workers, National Guardsmen and temporarily released prisoners aided in evacuating entire cities in the Northeast. Hundreds of thousands of persons near the Susquehanna, Allegheny, Chemung, Monongahela, Ohio and James Rivers—all fed by five days of relentless rains from tropical storm Agnes—left their homes to the mercy of the spreading water and fled to higher ground.

Pennsylvania was the hardest hit with 47 known dead and more than a quarter million residents homeless. The capital of Harrisburg was inundated and statewide damage was estimated at more than $1 billion.

State's Worst Disaster

"Without any doubt, it is the worst disaster in the history of Pennsylvania," said Gov. Milton J. Shapp. "I think Pennsylvania will have every reason to rename Hurricane Agnes, Hurricane Agony."

The National Weather Service said diminishing rain and subsiding winds had reduced the fury of Agnes, but warned flooding would continue. In Pennsylvania, Lt. Gov. Ernest P. Kline said, "I feel reasonably sure that the worst is yet to come."

The skyscraper Golden Triangle in downtown Pittsburgh, where the Allegheny and Monogahela Rivers meet to form the Ohio, was swamped and water spread to the Hilton Hotel. The city, however, was spared as the floodcrest swept on downstream.

There were 17 known dead in Virginia, 14 in Maryland, four in New York, two in North Carolina and one each in New Jersey and Delaware. Sixteen persons died earlier in the week when Agnes raged through Cuba and Florida

Martial Law Declared

In Sunbury, Pa., down river from Wilkes-Barre, was placed under martial law. More than 400 National guardsmen, Army reservists, police, firemen and civilian volunteers feverishly sandbagged the Susquehanna in an attempt to stem the flooding water. A family four was swept to death when the river carried away their car.

Residents of towns along the Ohio River in the northestern part of the Buckeye state and the northwestern panhandle of West Virginia were evacuated from their homes and rescue officials said the waters posed a "major" threat to Wheeling. Some 7,000 residents of Wheeling Island, located in the middle of the the Ohio, were evacuated. The island was expected to be submerged by Sunday morning.

Wheeling Downs racetrack was covered with six feet of water and flooding also was reported across the river in Martins Ferry, East Liverpool and Bellaire, Ohio.

Nixon at Harrisburg

President Nixon stopped in Harrisburg during his helicopter tour and said,"I'm particularly concerned about the houses. We need to find places for these people to live.

"I'm also concerned about the steel plants because that means jobs. We've got to get that steel plant (Bethlehem Steel Corp.'s steel plant in Harrisburg) operating again or find another industry. If they can't open again, this would destroy Harrisburg," the President said.

Nixon also talked to some of the 700 refugees at William Penn High School.

"We lost everything. The furniture, everything we own," Charles Crewsaw, who lives near the inundated governor's mansion in Harrisburg, told Nixon.

"Can you go back?" Nixon asked.

Sandbag Barrier Breaks

A force of 17,000 volunteers lost a desperate battle to to save the downtown section of Wilkes-Barre when the floodwaters smashed through a sandbag barrier sending the workers running for high ground. Nearby Kingston also was flooded. The nearly 100,000 residents of both cities had been evacuated earlier.

Gov. Shapp said damage "will be well over $1 billion. Just Wilkes-Barre, Harrisburg, Bloomsburg and Sunbury alone would be worth that, and there has been considerable damage in western Pennsylvania."

Half of the historic city of Richmond, Va. was without tap water after the worst flooding in the history of the James River. Nearby residents of Hopewell and Petersburg braced for expected flooding Saturday night from the rainswollen Appomattox River.

In western New York where 75,000 persons had to be evacuated from their low lying homes, most rescue operations could be carried out only by boat and helicopter because of flooded roads. The towns of Corning and Coopers Plain were under up to five feet of water and tons of food and other supplies were being flown in to homeless persons.

All Nations Interested In Solution To Vietnam

By EUGENE V. RISHER

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Presidential envoy Henry A. Kissinger said Saturday his talks with Chinese Premier Chou En-lai convinced him no country in the world wants to see the Vietnam War continue.

But he gave no encouragement to hopes that China's might be enlisted in efforts to negotiate an end to the conflict.

He said he expected Hanoi's two top negotiators, Le Duc Tho and Xuan Thuy, to return to Paris "in the not too distant future" but gave no indication when the Vietnam talks there, suspended since May 4, would be resumed.

"I believe that all countries in the world now have an interest in bringing about a peaceful solution (to the war)," he said. "There may be differences as to what the best solution would be but we do not believe there is any major country in the world today, or any country in the world, that wants the war to continue."

Kissinger Describes Mission

Kissinger met with newsmen after reporting details of his 3 ½-day visit to Peking to President Nixon during an overnight stay at Camp David, Md., the presidential retreat 65 miles away.

He said he met with Chou for a total of 24 hours—18 of them in formal negotiating sessions and the other six in informal conversation—and he and his party "were treated with extraordinary courtesy."

Propane Fire May Burn Out

NORTH WILKESBORO, N.C. (AP) — Weary firemen hoped Saturday that a flaming gas leak would burn itself out without causing more damage at a propane storage company.

Two propane tanks exploded and burned late Friday, causing considerable damage in a multiblock area and in the downtown business district of North Wilkesboro, about a half-mile away. Authorities blocked off a three-to-four block area around the propane firm and evacuated the few residents of the industrial section.

No injuries were reported to firemen or residents.

In addition to destruction of the two above-ground storage tanks, a police spokesman said a warehouse of Foster-Sturdivant Construction Co. next door was demolished. He said windows were blown out and other slight damage was caused at a nearby building supply company.

J. P. Reidy, an official of Humble Oil Co. at Charlotte, which owned the plant said the explosion was believed to have occurred as a tanker truck unloaded his cargo. He said the driver received minor injuries.

Wilson Fires Investigated

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — Firemen in Wilson are investigating what they say may have been fires from "other than natural causes" that destroyed three homes in an exclusive section since June 12.

The latest blaze occurred before dawn Saturday where the unoccupied home of J. R. Simpson burned.

They said an investigation is centering on a hole that seemed to have been smashed in a den door, a hole which they believe was not caused by the blaze.

There was no estimate of the loss.

Two other homes within a mile of Simpson's burned early June 12 and 17.

The first fire destroyed the unoccupied home of Russell Thompson with an estimated $50,000 loss. Firemen listed probable cause as spontaneous combustion of paint and rags, but they said the damage was so extensive it was impossible to pin down the reason.

Large Delegation From National Farm Society Here For 3 Day Meet

The American Society of Farm Managers and Rural Appraisers (ASFMRA) will hold its annual meeting in Green ville today, Monday, and Teusday.

According to Dr. Joe Pou, program chairman of the meeting, more than 400 members of ASFMRA, mostly from the midwest. will be here for the meeting,. Many of them will be accompanied by their families. While here, it is estimated that these visitors will spend more than $30,000 for lodging, meals, gasoline, and other needs.

The executive committee has already arrived in town and is preparing for the event. Sunday evening in the East Carolina University cafeteria, Dr. Leo Jenkins and Mayor S. Eugene West will welcome the ASFMRA members to the session and to Greenville. They also will see a movie about the tobacco industry in North Carolina.

On Monday, the members will be taken on a tour of the Texas Gulf, Inc. facilities, and be given orientations of local industry. That evening, Governor Bob Scott, himself a member of the North Carolina ASFMRA, will be featured speaker at a banquet.

Tuesday, the members will be taken to the Worthington farm at Ballards Crossroads, ten miles west of Greenville, for a demonstration in the production of peanuts and tobacco, crops which are unfamiliar to some of the other farmers. They will also be shown a land appraisal demonstration near Wilson to conclude the meetting.

Dr. Pou stated that some of the people attending are professional farm managers and accredited rural appraisers.

President for the ASFMRA is Delos Ellsworth of Mesa, Arizona.

Israel Sinks Arab Vessel Off Lebanon

By United Press International

Israel said its gunboats sank an Arab guerrilla vessel off the Lebanese coast Saturday and its artillery shelled guerrilla bases in southern Lebanon. But Lebanese Premier Saeb Salam said Israeli raids would not force his government to crack down on guerrillas operating on its territory.

An Israeli military communique said its forces struck anew in retaliation for a rocket attack on the frontier settlement of Gesher Haziv. The Israeli chief of staff warned his country would take "all the necessary means" to end guerrilla attacks from Lebanon.

In New York, the United Nations Security Council scheduled more debate on a request by Lebanon to condemn the Israeli raids and order the return of Lebanese and Syrian army officers captured by the Israelis last Wednesday.

In council debate Friday night, Israel claimed more than 5,000 guerrillas were based in Lebanon and that its raids against them were in self-defense.

Both sides claimed victory in the clash between a guerrilla vessel and Israeli patrol boats off the ancient Lebanese coastal town of Tyre.

The latest violence on the frontier between Israel and Lebanon followed four months of relative peace in the area.

Kerr Lake, Central N.C. Rivers At Record-High Water Levels

HENDERSON, N.C. (AP) — Rising rivers in central North Carolina sent waters to record-high levels at many points, including the popular Kerr Lake recreation area.

Hydrologists with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers said Saturday the lake had reached a height of 310.2 feet above sea level, a record for the 20-year-old impoundment, and predicted the water would crest Tuesday at about 313.5 feet.

The top of the dam, at 332 feet is the maximum height water could go.

Despite the slowing rising water that was gradually covering campsites at the lake, visitors continued to come to the area. Rangers were warning boaters and others of hazards which included floating picnic tables.

Engineers said feeder streams, principally the Roanoke River. were sending 130,000 cubic feet of water per second into the lake. They said to avoid flooding damage downstream, only 20,000 cubic feet was being released every second.

Kerr Lake straddles the North Carolina-Virginia border about 50 miles north of Raleigh.

Roads leading to it were open Saturday, with the exception of barricaded areas near three submerged bridges on secondary routes. Engineers said one of the bridges could become a hazard to unwary boaters who might hit guard rails covered by water.

The high water from tropical storm Agnes was the second flood at the lake this year. High water this spring that sent the lake to 307.5 feet resulted in $50,000 damage to campsites.

Not all that had been repaired by the Kerr Reservoir Development Commission before this week's rain.

The National Weather Service said all gauges upstream from the lake were falling Saturday and that levels were about a foot below flood stage.

Elsewhere, rivers slowly rose in eastern North Carolina.

On the Roanoke below Kerr Lake a 26-foot level was forecast to remain steady at Weldon and Scotland Neck until further notice. The weather service said that is two to six feet below flood states.

On the Cape Fear, considerable flooding was expected on bottomland from Fayetteville to Elizabethtown. The Cape Fear crested at Fayetteville Friday night 2.2 feet over flood stage.

The crest was expected to be at Elizabethtown about midnight Saturday, nine feet above flood stage.

The Neuse was also expected to crest late Saturday at Neuse with waters about 2.5 feet above flood stage. At Smithfield the Neuse is expected to reach a crest of four feet over flood stage Sunday night.

The weather service said minor overflow was occurring from northeast of Raleigh to Smithfield.

To the west the French Broad was falling and was well below flood stage.

Lakes Wylie and Norman on the Catawba River were reported at 100 per cent levels after slight rises in the past 24 hours. Badin and High Rock lakes on the Yadkin also rose slightly and were only a fraction of a foot under 100 per cent levels.

Black Coalition Poised For Swing To McGovern Camp

By BOB GREENE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A coalition of previously uncommitted delegates, mostly black, are poised to swing onto the George McGovern bandwagon, sweeping the senator within an eyelash of the Democratic presidential nomination.

Yancey Martin, black affairs coordinator for the McGovern campaign, said the mostly black coalition will come into the McGovern ranks this weekend.

"We have a hard count of 86," said Martin. "I'm looking for a lot more."

In a show of solidarity, some members of the Congressional Black Caucus, the National Black Political Convention and independent black political powers in the South have thrown most of their support to the Democratic front-runner.

A news conference has been called for Monday morning when McGovern reportedly will announce the backing of the black delegates.

Rick Stearns, another McGovern aide, said the senator had 1,413 delegates as of Friday. It will take 1,509 to win the Democratic nomination.

Rep. Walter E. Fauntroy, D-D.C., heads a 15-member delegation as a favorite-son candidate. Two other members of the Black Caucus, Missouri's William Clay and Ohio's Louis Stokes, speak for 16 more delegates.

Although Martin refused to identify where the 86 firm votes are, he did list support among black delegates from Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, South Carolina and Georgia.

McGovern met Thursday night with the three co-chairmen of the National Black Political Convention, a meeting described by Mayor Richard Hatcher of Gary, Ind., as "very positive."

"They came out of that meeting ready to support him," Martin said of the co-chairmen—Hatcher, Rep. Charles C. Diggs Jr. of Michigan, and poet Imamu Amiri Baraka, a black nationalist leader from Newark, N.J.

At the meeting, McGovern was asked to endorse the National Black Political Agenda, which was drawn up at the black convention in Gary last March.

According to one McGovern aide, the senator endorsed most of the agenda, but refused to go along with hotly-debated resolutions concerning Israel, school busing, and creation of an all-black state.

Uncommitted black delegates meet in several states today with a McGovern backer at each meeting. Five of the states concern first ballot votes, while McGovern is attempting to line up second-ballot support, if necessary, in two others.

Leaders of the National Black Political Convention also meet today in Las Vegas, Nev.

On Sunday, McGovern is to meet with representatives of all of today's sessions, plus other members of the caucus.

A key to McGovern's bid for a first-ballot victory could be Rep. Shirley Chisholm, D-N.Y., another caucus member who also is running for the presidential nomination and controls 32 votes.

Fabric Center Opens Monday

The new Fabrific Fabric Center will open for business Monday morning at 9:30 in the West End Shopping Center.

Miss Patricia Alligood will be the store manager and business hours will be from 9:30 a.m. until 9 p.m., Monday through Friday, and Saturday from 9:30 until 6 p.m.

Fabrific officials announced that in addition to Miss Alligood, personnel at the new center will include Mrs. Betty Yuknevice, Mrs. Sandy Cusey, Miss Marcia James, and Miss Debbie Gilchrist.

Officials said that Miss Alligood's appointment as manager fits the philosophy of the company in employing home town personnel to staff their stores.

Miss Alligood said that the new facility is a complete under-one-roof home center that caters to the demands of today's style conscious home sewer. The seasoned seamstress and novice needing guidance, she contended, will find the latest in pattern, fabrics, and accessories, as well as selections for the craft enthusiasts.

"Home sewing today, from recent statistics, range as high as one out of three women wearing items they made themselves," the manager said. "Once an economic necessity, it is now the choice of women who want high style and quality and find they can best meet their exacting demands by doing it themselves.

Fabrific Fabric Centers have grown from one store in Garland, Texas in 1968 to approximately 450 stores throughout the United States.

Charge Is Made In Death

NEW BERN--A Route 2, Ayden man, Thelmond R. Dudley, 62, has been charged with manslaughter in the death of another Route 2, Ayden resident--28-year-old Montgomery Cannon--Monday night.

Dudley allegedly backed his vehicle over Cannon at a home in the Riverside Section of Craven County near the intersection of rural roads 1459 and 1460.

Craven County Deputy Bruce Edwards quoted Dudley as saying he picked up Cannon after Cannon's car had run hot, and took him to the home of James Edwards.

When Dudley left the Edwards home about 9 p.m. he allegedly backed over Cannon.

Deputy Edwards quoted Dudley as saying Cannon told him he was all right and Dudley took him back to his car, and Cannon was still alive when Dudley left him.

Cannon's body was found about 9:30 p.m. by Craven County deputies on the floor of his parked vehicle.

Deputy Edwards said an autopsy indicated Cannon suffered a ruptured liver and broken ribs.

Flu Shots Value Limited

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — The Center for Disease Control says influenza shots have proven of limited value for the masses but still should be given to the chronically ill and the elderly.

The CDC said its recommendations resulted from the ineffectiveness of the vaccine in some cases, unpleasant reaction in some persons and periodic changes in influenza virus.

Because of the seriousness of influenza, the CDC recommended Friday that the vaccine be given to "persons of all ages who have chronic debilitating conditions."

The center said these included congenital and rheumatic heart disease, asthma, bronchitis, cystic fibrosis, emphysema, advanced tuberculosis and diabetes mellitus.

"Because some influenza occurs each year, annual immunization of high risk patients is indicated as a routine procedure regardless of the amount of influenza expected in any geographic area," the center said.

WITN Gifts Announced

WASHINGTON, N.C. — At its regular Board of Directors meeting held last week, directors of North Carolina Television, Inc. (WITN-TV) authorized contributions totalling $1,000 to area institutions, according to W. R. Roberson, Jr., President and General Manager.

A contribution of $500 was given to the Elizabeth City State University for use in the Art Department. The gift was given to encourage further development in art in Eastern North Carolina and in recognition of the many important contributions the University has made to the area over the years.

A similar $500 was given to the Baptist Children's Home of North Carolina, Inc. with the request that the funds be used at the Kennedy Home in Kinston, for unrestricted use. The Board also recognized the fine work being done at the Kennedy Home.

Doctor Union Seen OK

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—There's nothing wrong with a doctor joining a union "as long as he takes care of his patients," says the retiring president of the American Medical Association.

Dr. Wesley W. Hall of Reno, Nev., commented Friday during a question and answer session after his address to the Commonwealth Club. He stepped down this week as president of the AMA, which held its annual convention here.

Asked if a doctors' union could strike without violating the Hippocratic oath, Hall replied:

"I cannot see any violation of the Hippocratic Oath as long as a a doctor who belongs to such a group takes care of his patient. This is a free country and every doctor is free to do what he wants to as long as he takes care of his patients."

The AMA avoided a formal position on unionization of doctors by referring the controversial issue to further study "to determine the most effective legal way to permit collective bargaining."

Water Trucked Into Flood-Hit Capital of Virginia

By FRED MCNEESE

RICHMOND, Va. (UPI) —As Richmond began trucking in water Saturday to replenish its supply polluted by a rampaging James River, residents of Hopewell and Petersburg braced for expected flooding Saturday night from the rain-swollen Appomattox River.

Widespread flooding in Virginia has claimed 17 lives, more than 20 others were missing, damage was estimated in excess of $160 million, hundreds of families fled their homes to escape high water, thousands were without water, and power to downtown Richmond was knocked out.

The James River crested Friday night at 36.5 feet, 27.5 feet above flood level, after water cascaded over a 32-foot protective dike. Water spilled into a power substation, knocking out power to downtown Richmond, and flooded into a water filtration plant, endangering the city's water supply.

The National Weather Service said the Appomattox River was expected to crest about midnight Saturday at 40 feet, more than 20 feet above flood level for Petersburg and Hopewell. Police evacuated families from low lying areas.

In Prince William County, near Washington, police said they were hoping to restore water service to some 125,000 persons.

Eight thousand residents evacuated from low lying areas on the Virginia side of the Potomac River Friday were allowed to return to their homes.

Although water was receding in downtown areas of Richmond, national guardsmen still maintained a ring around the central business district, which was without power. Guardsmen even prohibited newsmen and those owning businesses to enter. Officials said the area was still highly dangerous because of fallen power lines.

The flood waters in Richmond were the highest since records were started in 1870, and a National Weather Service spokesman said expected flooding in Petersburg and Hopewell would be "without question, the worst flood of record."

Cleanup operations were under way in most parts of the state as most rivers began to recede. Officials said 3,812 homes and 514 buildings were damaged throughout the state. Those figures did not include the Richmond area.

Water distribution points were set up in the northern part of Richmond Saturday as trucks brought in drinking water for half the city's population.

City officials used tanker trucks from as far away as Pennsylvania to bring in water from neighboring counties. Temporary water filtration and storage equipment was flown in from Atlanta, columbus, Ohio, and Eglin AFB, Fla.

Half of the city's 300,000 population, that living south of the James River, was expected to have tap water because residents there receive water from another filtration plant.

Brick Rider, public information officer for Richmond, said it would be "several days" before the damaged plant could be repaired. He said workmen first had to wait for flood waters to drop below the plant, take out all the machinery and replace it with new parts.

"We are trying to pull every cotton-picking string we know to get some water in here," Rider said.

Officials said they would limit water to five gallons per person at eight distribution points in the city.

"We think we are going to have all the water we need for drinking," said city budget direcord Leonard Horton, who was manning a command center.

Officials ordered water limited to drinking only. Industries and other businesses using substantial amounts of water were closed.

Gov. Linwood Holton met with 30 state agency heads at midmorning Saturday to decide a further course of action. The group heard damage reports from around the state and scheduled another meeting for Sunday afternoon.

No Injuries Reported In Bus Station Shoot

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A middle-aged man who fired several rifle shots into a crowded bus station here Saturday was arrested after his gun jammed, said a policeman who traded gunfire with him. No one was reported hurt.

About 100 persons were in the Union Bus Station early Saturday when eight or 10 bullets were fired through the front door.

Warren G. Stephenson, 49, was arrested by a city policeman who had been in the station restaurant when the firing started.

Officer Patrick McCann Jr. said he heard shots and saw people diving for cover. Running outside, he saw a man firing a rifle from between two parked cars.

The policeman said he ducked behind a nearby car and fired several shots at the sniper.

"His gun jammed," McCann related. "When he started walking off, I ran up to him and he offered no resistance."

He said Stephenson was carrying a .22-caliber rifle and had a box of cartridges in his pocket. Stephenson was also carrying a large sum of money, the officer said.

The incident came less than a month after a sniper in Raleigh's North Hills shopping center killed four persons and wounded seven others before fatally shooting himself.

Stephenson was charged with assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill, firing into an occupied building and firing a gun inside the city limits. He was being held in lieu of $18,500 bail.

Search For Hijacker Underway In Indiana

PERU, Ind. (UPI)—A hijacker who parachuted from a jetliner with more than $500,000 ransom money early Saturday was hunted by lawmen with dogs, planes and on foot in the woods and farmfields southeast of here.

By late afternooon police had found no trace of the man who bailed out at about 10,000 feet into darkness from the second American Airlines 727 jet he commandeered.

Police said when he jumped, the man was believed carrying the weapon, which the FBI said may have been a machinegun, with which he took control of the first plane at midafternoon Friday.

He was also believed to have jumped with a canvas mail sack containing $502,500 handed over by the airline in St. Louis, Mo., and two shovels.

James Martin, special agent in charge of the Indianapolis FBI office, said late Saturday afternoon the search was concentrating in wooded area since aerial surveillance of the open country and farm fields, where crops are just up, had not led to any clues on the hijacker's whereabouts.

The search area was widened and included a strip along the Wabash River southeast of here. The 12,830-acre Mississinewa Reservoir, five miles south of Peru, was being patrolled in boats by conservation officers but there were no dragging operations.

The FBI would not comment on possibilities that the hijacker may have been killed in his jump, that he had an accomplice on the ground and was spirited from the area before daylight, or what he might have intended to do with the shovels.

The skyjacking was reminiscent of the first of at least five hijackers who bailed out. A man who boarded a plane Nov. 24, 1971, using the name of "D. B. Cooper," hijacked a Northwest Orient Airlines plane and parachuted from the 727 en route from Seattle, Wash., to Reno, Nev., with $200,000 in $20 bills. The FBI is still looking for him.

The most recent hijacking began when a man carrying what St. Louis FBI officials described as a machinegun or "grease gun," took control of American Airlines flight 119 as it flew out of St. Louis at midafternoon Friday.

He ordered the craft returned to St. Louis where women and children passengers were released. The plane then took off again, circling St. Louis for two hours before the hijacker ordered it on a course to Fort Worth, Tex. But before landing in Texas he told the pilot to return to St. Louis.

On the ground again, the hijacker was given the ransom money and parachute. He asked for assistance in putting on the parachute. All but one of the passengers was released.

Then a suburban St. Louis man crashed his 1971 Cadillac Eldorado through an airport fence, raced it past the parked jetliner several times and then crashed the car into the front wheel assembly of the plane, disabling it.

The hijacker ordered another 727 readied and, wearing the parachute and carrying the ransom money, he walked to it, keeping two stewardesses and the passenger hostage so close that FBI sharpshooters held their fire.

The plane took off from St. Louis about 1:45 a.m. CDT and the hijacker bailed out about 2:53.

Protocol Chief Has Resigned

WASHINGTON (AP) — Famous yachtsman Emil "Bus" Mosbacher Jr. resigned Friday as U. S. chief of protocol, a post he held since the early days of the Nixon administration.

President Nixon accepted the resignation "with special and very personal regret" and commended Mosbacher and his wife, Pat, for the job they have done in the diplomatic field at home and abroad. The chief of protocol is the nation's official greeter.

Graham Opposes Proposal

HENDERSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham is strongly opposed to a proposal by President Nixon to eliminate import restrictions on beef.

Graham said Friday "some action may be needed to help in the battle against inflation, but we must not throw the door wide open for whatever our foreign competitors have to move into our market channels."

He made his comments in a prepared talk to the North Carolina Angus Breeder's Association.

He added, "This action will be detrimental to the big and small alike. When the long-term effects are taken into consideration, it will only move the ultimate price of beef higher."

Ten Wiretaps Are Cancelled

HYANNIS, Mass. (AP) — U.S. Atty. Gen. Richard G. Kleindienst says the Justice Department had to cancel 10 wiretaps because of Monday's 8-0 Supreme Court decision prohibiting such surveillance of suspected domestic subversives without a court order.

Kleindienst told a news conference he did not agree with the decision, contending wiretapping is "an effective weapon to reduce organized crime to a mere irritant in this society."

HEW Poses Question On Fund

RALEIGH (AP) — State School Supt. Craig Phillips said Saturday a Department of Health, Education and Welfare audit has questioned the spending of $307,596 in an education program for children of migrant workers.

Phillips said the report questions the expenditure of $158,958 in the 1970 fiscal yaar and $148,638 for the 1971 fiscal year. The report said the expenditures were questioned for "alleged ineligible students enrolled in programs" and "for the use of audio-visual materials and equipment for nonmigrant children."

Phillips said the HEW audit agency failed to take into account the fact that North Carolina law permits students to be enrolled in education programs until they reach 21. He said migrant program regulations clearly indicate that each state may enroll migrant youngsters in keeping with state law.

Phillips also said that the educational program for the migrant children has been greatly enriched through the use of audio-visual materials and equipment.

Local Man Is Top Graduate

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — Graduation exercises were held today at the national guard operated officer candidate school at the North Carolina Military Academy for 45 graduates.

Second Lt. William E. Ingram of Greenville, son of Col. William E. Ingram of Elizabeth City, was honored as the classes' distinguished graduate and for having the highest scholastic scores during the OCS. Second Lt. Larry D. Moore of Marshall was honored for displaying outstanding qualities of leadership.

Merger Plans Ready For N.C. Universities

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Plans are ready for the administrative merger of the University of North Carolina's six campuses and 10 other state-supported institutions of higher education July 1.

The new Board of Governors, which officially begins functioning that date, sat as a planning body Friday and approved plans to carry out the merger.

The board voted to merge nine administrative agencies, including the existing Consolidated University of North Carolina and the state Board of Higher Education.

The 1971 General Assembly enacted legislation restructuring higher education and created the Board of Governors to supervise the system.

Agencies coming under the merger include the North Carolina Internship Office, the North Carolina Educational Computer Service, the Center for the Continuing Renewal of Higher Education, the Student Educational Assistance Authority, the Educational Opportunity Information Center, and the Community Services and Continuing Education programs under Title 1 of the Higher Education Act of 1965.

UNC President William Friday will become president of the new university system. He and university leaders have been preparing requests for a systemwide budget for the next biennium.

Friday told the governors that budget discussions with presidents and chancellors of the various institutions indicated some $453 million would be needed to meet requests for current operating funds and for projects already processed.

He said current capital improvement requests total $214 million, but are expected to increase. He expects to recommend an increase in the in-state tuition when the budget talks are completed.

The governors approved Friday's recommendation that a five-member committee be named to study the feasibility of funding a second-year class at East Carolina University's medical school. A one-year medical training program was placed in operation at ECU this year.

Beef Prices Are To Rise

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A member of the federal Price Commission says beef prices will rise this summer, and the only way to keep them from going through the roof is to lift import quotas.

"It is not our function to dictate people's tastes, and I don't know of any serious consideration to rolling prices back," Robert F. Lanzillotti of Gainesville said in a telephone interview Friday. "I am not trying to hold down any particular group's prices because I have any ill will toward them. But when you try to bring the cost of living down, you see options open and use the ones available."

President Nixon said Thursday he is thinking of lifting quotas on meat imports temporarily.

Cabinet Meeting To Be Historic

RALEIGH (AP) — Take it from Gov. Bob Scott, the first meeting he will hold Monday with his cabinet will be a historic occasion.

"This will be the first time that the governor has been able to sit down around the table with the heads of the major departments of state government where he can look them eyeball-to-eyeball and discuss the problems of state government," Scott said.

The governor's cabinet is composed of 19 persons — the governor, lieutenant governor, eight elected state officials and 10 secretaries of major state departments appointed by the governor.

The cabinet was created under legislation enacted by the 1971 General Assembly which grouped about 300 state agencies into 17 departments.

The first meeting will be at 10:30 Monday in the state Highway Commission meeting rooms which has a table big enough for the governor and his council to gather round.

Scott said he would issue an executive order officially creating the cabinet.

One item of business, Scott said will be a report from Transportation Secretary Fred Mills reporting a saving of $87,000 a year from a change in the method of reporting traffic deaths and injuries.

"If we can make this one saving in one small area, it indicates what can be done as a result of the reorganization of our state government," Scott stated.

Also on the meeting agenda will be a report from State Auditor Henry Bridges on the development of a uniform accounting system for state government.

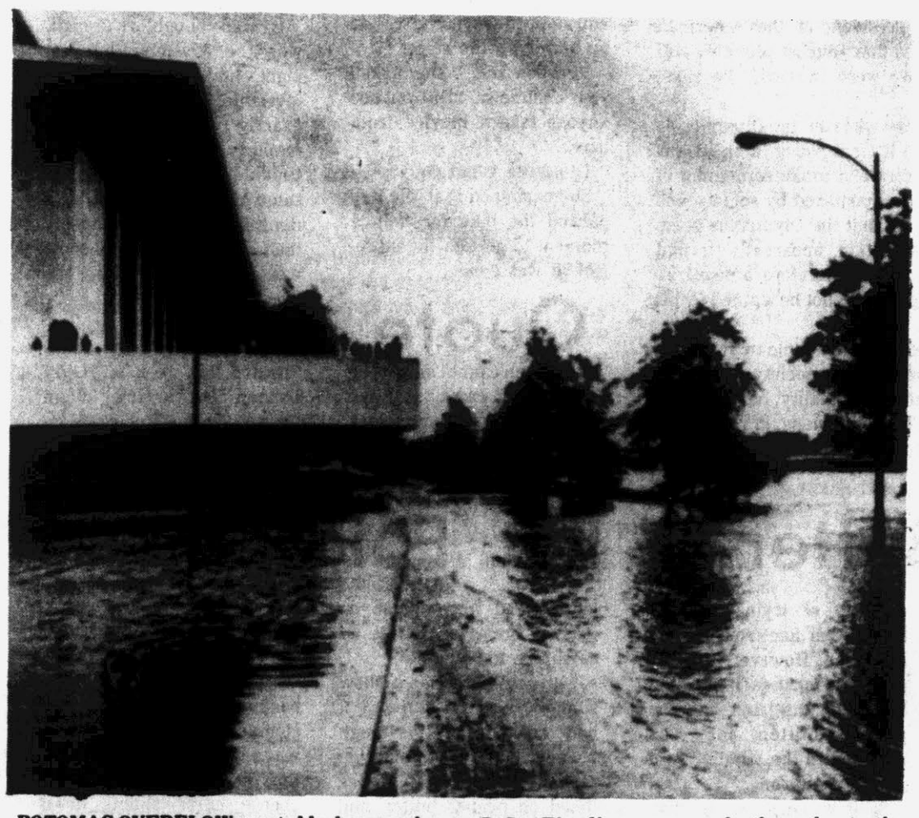

Scott will report on reorganization and outline management goals for the next six months of his administration.

Wallace May Attend National Convention Despite Son's Statement

SILVER SPRING, Md. (UPI) —Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama is greatly improved and still intends to go to the Democratic National Convention next month despite his son's statement that his condition has weakened, an aide said Saturday.

"I saw him this morning," said Elvin Staunton, press spokesman for the candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination.

"His complexion and color are good. He says he feels good. His pain has diminished. His physical therapy has increased."

George Wallace Jr., the governor's son, said at a Wallace-for-President rally in Graceville, Fla., Friday night that his father's condition "is not as good as it has been the last few days."

"Sort of Stupid"

"He is very alert mentally, but his physical condition has weakened," the son said.

It was the first time anyone close to the governor had indicated Wallace might be unable to attend the July 10 Miami Beach convention.

The Washington Daily News reported that Dr. Joseph Schanno, the neurosurgeon who performed the first surgery on Wallace after he was shot May 15, said the son's statement was "sort of stupid."

The News reported that Schanno said convention reservations have been made for Wallace and himself at Miami Beach, and that the governor spent most of Friday working with his staff on who would accompany him to the convention.

Wallace had surgery last weekend to remove a bullet that was lodged near his spine. He has been paralyzed from the hips down since he was wounded and doctors have indicated chances are not good that he will be able to walk again unaided.

Has Good Night

"His physical condition has greatly improved," Staunton said. "The governor had probably the best day since his operation yesterday (Friday). He had a good night last night and is feeling very well this morning. He ate a big breakfast and read the newspapers.

"He had two sessions of physical therapy yesterday. The second lasted over an hour," Staunton said.

He described the therapy as exercises to strengthen the arms and chest, pushing and pulling against pressure, and maneuvers with a tilt table.

Acting Alabama Gov. Jere Beasley, who has disagreed with Wallace in the past, also warned at the rally "the news media has put too much emphasis on the fact that the governor will physically be at the convention ... it depends upon his physical condition."

Most Suspense In VP Choices

The Democratic and Republican conventions coming up this summer are fast shaping up to be suspenseful only in choosing of the vice presidential nominees.

The Republican presidential nomination, of course, it all wrapped up. Barring the completely unforseen, the party will have to nominate Richard Nixon for re-election!

That leaves to be decided whether Spiro Agnew will be the vice presidential running mate. If Agnew were dropped it would infuriate some conseratives in the party. But where would they go? Certainly not to the Democratic candidate.

The tantalizing possibility is that John Connally of Texas might switch to the Republican party and become the vice presidential nominee. As a part of the Nixon administration Connally has proven bright, articulate and popular and there is no doubt that he would add something to the ticket. The final decision will be made depending on how much help Nixon feels he will need from voters to which Connally would have appeal.

If George McGovern does not have the Democratic nomination wrapped up, he is close to it. He won all of the California delegates with a minority of the votes, which might be undemocratic but that is the way it is done in California.

In facing the electorate Sen. McGovern will have some past statements that border on the radical to defend which is bound to be unsettling to the party professionals. Still he has the pledged delegates and his nomination will be difficult to head off.

Selecting the vice presidential running mate in Democratic convention sill appears wide open. Assuming Sen. McGovern does get the presidential nomination, Sen. Muskie, Sen. Kennedy and Rep. Wilbur Mills have been mentioned so far.

The Mills candidacy would be to offset the leftish stance of Sen. McGovern and one has to wonder, with his long record of fiscal responsibility, if Mills could be comfortable on a ticket with Sen. McGovern.

The Kennedy name would no doubt add pulling power to the ticket but it is almost impossible to believe that Sen. Kennedy would be willing to take second billing to Sen. McGovern.

There are other possibilities, of course, and it is possible that Sen. McGovern may have difficulty persuading a moderate to accept the vice presidential nomination. It is going to be interesting to watch.

Wallace Joins Demo Telethon

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Democratic party, as needy as the next charity case, plans to entertain America in an 18½hour convention-eve telethon designed to get the party out of hock.

There will be brief, taped appearances by most presidential contenders, including George Wallace who has not always embraced the party establishment. But their spiels won't be allowed to detract from the theme that Democrats have more fun than that other, richer, political party.

If it works, it could do for political parties what the Sunday collection plates do for churches. If it doesn't, the Democrats will be left still searching for ways to pay back $9.3 million put on the cuff in 1968.

Wallace's singing wife will join such entertainers as Andy Williams, Alan King, Shirley MacLaine and Paul Newman in what a press agent—in the exuberance of his trade—calls "an incredible wave of entertainment."

Wallace was won over by John Y. Brown, the man who got rich on Kentucky Fried Chicken and is applying his talents for the Democrats.

"I said, 'Governor, you sent a message to the Democratic party and sent it loud and clear—now we need your money,'" said Brown. "He smiled, and said okay."

The telethon, beginning at 10 p.m. EDT July 8 on at least 155 stations, was Brown's brainchild.

"Part of my motivation is to find some way to change the whole system of political financing, because the whole structure is corruptive," Brown said. "I'd like to think we'll raise enough to get the party out of debt. If we raise $5 million or $6 million it will be a success, because it will be the biggest fund-raising."

To keep the program from becoming a bore, the candidates will be limited to two or three minutes apiece and the money pitches will be in a light vein.

"This is a paid political program for the Democratic party—paid for by the people," is one plug. "No other political party can make that statement."

Another:

"If you're up at this hour and can't sleep because you're worried about your oil-depletion allowance—this program is not for you."

Brown, board chairman of the fried-chicken firm, guaranteed the $1.75-million cost of the program to be carried over the American Broadcasting Co. network. He said the finance council already has raised $400,000 and a dinner in Miami Beach, where about one-third of the program will originate, will raise another $300,000 to $500,000.

The bulk of the program will come from Los Angeles and will include a Nashville-taped segment of country-and-western singers.

To the editor:

Once again another child is dead in Pitt County as a result of drowning. Once again the ugly head of death by drowning has been reared in this county.

The time and the need is now for public swimming facilities within the county and within the City of Greenville. How long must we put off this desperate need with the excuse, there is not enough money. Are we setting our values on money, or will we set our values on human life?

There is no such thing as not enough money to save one life. This is a plea once again for public swimming facilities for those in our community who are not fortunate enough to be members of private clubs and the University system, to whom swimming facilities are readily available.

To those in the position to do something about this, let your conscience be your guide.

Rebel Fighter In S. Vietnam

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON—The irony in last week's military funeral for John Paul Vann at Arlington National Cemetery was the prominence of Cabinet members and four-star generals, symbolizing the very establishmentarians whose bungling in Indochina he battled for a decade.

Like the funeral, many eulogies have distorted Vann's unique role in Vietnam. Hawks have painted him as a superpatriot, bravely but simplistically questing after military victory. Doves have depicted him as a former critic of the war somehow corrupted by power into embracing what had once disillusioned him.

The facts are dramatically different. Besides being one of the very few heroic figures to emerge from the war, Vann from the first to the last was a non-conformist critic of tragically mistaken policies that moved Saigon and Washington. At the end, performing essentially military duties formerly entrusted to a lieutenant-general, Vann had not changed his critical outlook as an obscure lieutenant-colonel a decade earlier. That hard, critical view is his legacy.

What changed was Vann's discretion. Although still outspoken, Vann realized in 1970 that Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker in Saigon would sack him at the next outburst. Knowing his influence would abruptly end if he beccame a dismissed rebel, Vann avoided public criticism. But talking privately to us late into the night at campsites in the Vietnamese wilderness, Vann left no doubt he felt anti-Communist forces in Vietnam had made a mess of it.

Most important, Vann deeply believed 50,000 American lives lost in Vietnam were tragically unnecessary. He felt that if President Johnson in 1965 had fixed as hard U.S. policy the prevention of a Communist takeover and nothing more, as few as 100,000 U.S. troops would have sufficed.

But that would have required immediate strengthening of the South Vietnamese army (ARVN) In effect, Vietnamization four years before it came. As a lieutenant-colonel in the early 1960s, Vann urged arming ARVN with M-16, automatic rifles in place of obsolete M-1 carbines. The Pentagon refused, forcing ARVN to lag behind well-equipped U.S. troops, who then did most of the fighting—and dying.

With the advent of Richard M. Nixon and Vietnamization in 1969, Vann's views became more respectable and his voice more powerful. But he criticized the slow U.S. troop withdrawal and argued unsuccessfully with Gen. Creighton Abrams and the Pentagon against keeping tens of thousands of American combat soldiers in a useless residual role.

His private ire in recent years was strongest against President Nguyen Van Thieu and his intimate relationship with Ambassador Bunker. Whereas the embassy in Saigon viewed Thieu as the best Vietnamese leader available to the U.S., Vann felt his political intrigues undercut the war effort. In official circles, he made no secret he felt Bunker was much too soft on Thieu.

Specifically, Vann never forgave Bunker for not fighting Thieu's imprisonment of opposition leader Tran Ngoc Chau ("one of the greatest men I ever knew"). To Vann, Thieu's peremptory personnel policies were steeped in crass politics and, therefore, damaged the war effort. Anticipating this year's Communist offensive, Vann batttled for months before Thieu finally replaced incompetent commanders in the threatened central highlands.

Unlike the U.S. military, Vann fully understood how political the Vietnam war really was. While American generals last year shrugged off the fiasco of Thieu's unopposed reelection, Vann perceived it as a heavy blow to South Vietnam's future.

Vann often said U.S. military intervention in Strength For Today

DISCOVERING SPIRITUAL TRUTH

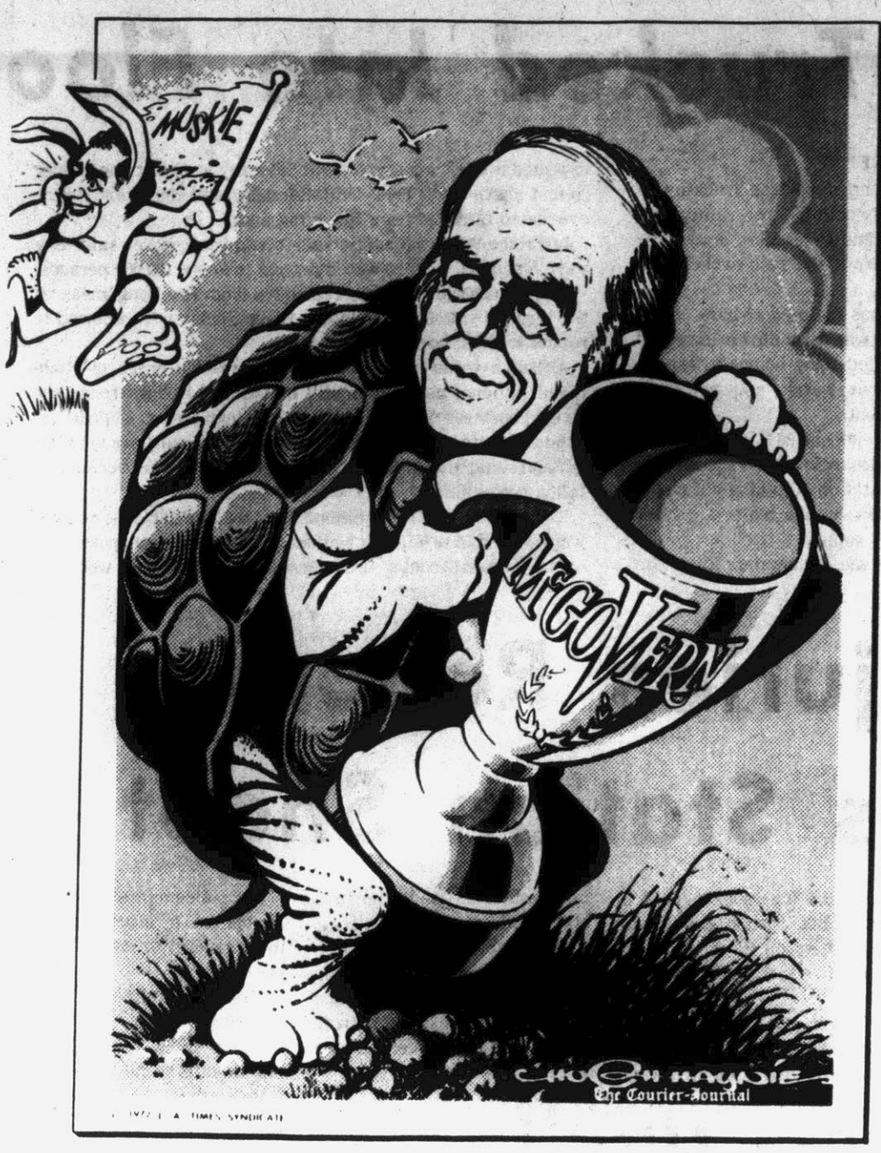

We speak of an event being supernatural. What do we mean by supernatural? We mean just what the word indicates—above natural. This does not necessarily mean that it is contrary to natural law or even that it is natural law working in unfamiliar combinations or with unaccustomed potency. It means something that is above nature.

Go slowly in denying the existence of the supernatural. Many things which today appear perfectly natural to us would, a generation ago, have appeared supernatural. Furthermore, after the mathematicians, the scientist a vast area of reality which their reasoning appears never to have touched.

The Bible claims to deal authoritatively with this material. The word "supernatural" does not of course occur in the Bible, but the Bible deals with almost nothing else but the supernatural. It calls it the will of God, the power of God, the revelation of God. It calls it miracle, and mighty works, and God's wrath, and God's loving purpose.

Science has no technique for laying hold of any such information. Spiritual things can be apprehended only spiritually—that is, through the medium of faith. And with faith even simple-hearted men can make discoveries more significant than any discovery ever made by a scientist.

Sunday Morning Notes

At a recent luncheon which Wickes held when it had its grand opening, Rep. Sam Bundy of Farmville spoke.

He discussed having the proper goals.

"Do you know the direction in which you're going?" he asked his audience. "Does the federal government know the direction ... naw, I know they don't."

Wo could argue with that?

That makes things difficult sometimes.

I even spotted a coed pedalling a tandem bike on a local street. The back seat was empty and not a boy in sight. Maybe she was going to pick him up.

And a story came over one of our news teletypes with an identification line reading "Henry".

A few minutes later a correction came through. Referring back to the "Henry" story the wire service advised editors to make it "Kissinger".

Somebody is just getting too familiar.

The amply endowed young lady was dressed, shall we say, sensibly for a summer evening.

She made her way around a grocery store picking up several items.

"If I gave her the wrong change," he muttered, "it's her fault."

And a pretty young lady came out of a downtown store and stopped short. She looked up and down the street.

"Pardon me," she asked your columnist. "Did you see anyone take a bicylce from here.

I told her I had not.

She explained that she had parked the bike for only a moment to go into the store. Now it was gone.

Other Editors Say From Olympus

(Greensboro Daily News)

According to an Associated Press dispatch from Munich, it seems highly unlikely that a young man named Bobby Lee Hunter will be permitted to participate in this summer's Olympic Games. If that is indeed to be the case, it will be a genuine injustice.

Hunter is a young South Carolinian who has been serving a sentence for manslaughter in a Columbia correctional institution. He has a talent for boxing, and the institution's staff has encouraged him to develop it. He has done so to the point that he went to the Pan American Games, accompanied by a guard, and won a bronze medal for the American team. Boxing has, by his own testimony and that of staff members, turned his life around, and representing the U.S. at Munich has become his chief goal.

He is unlikely to realize it because Avery Brundage, the octogenarian president of the International Olympic Committee, says he has not "lived in the spirit of the Olympic rules, the Games and the Olympic idea." A German official, according to the AP, "said Hunter could hardly be considered an example for youth." And Clifford Buck, the president of the American Olympic committee, seems relieved that Huntter probably will not be allowed to participate. "We were worried," he says, "about our international image."

Evidently the autocratic gentlemen who run the Olympics as a private fiefdom have no room in it for a young man who is attempting to correct his past errors and make something of himself. Bobby Lee Hunter has been punished by society and has taken that punishment manfully, but the Olympians seem determined to add to it. The assumption, apparently, is that Hunter has done something bad and is therefore himself intrinsically bad, and that the Olympics must not be stained by his presence.

For our part, Bobby Lee Hunter is "an example to youth" to be applauded rather than condemned. In a society where imprisonment usually results in further criminality, he is proof of the possibilities of rehabilitation. The Olympians, in refusing to acknowledge what he has accomplished, diminish themselves.

Piracy Is The Rule

By RODNEY PRIDER

ISTANBUL (AP) — Tired of paying high electricity bills? Why not throw a cable on a power line and plug yourself in? Still waiting for water to be connected to your new house? How about buying some pipe and just connecting it up to the municipal supply?

Slum-dwellers in Istanbul are doing both, and revelling in free water, electricity and gas. The harassed municipal authorities hand out fines and even jail sentences, but the piracy goes on.

In the outer suburb of Okmeydani, much of which is not connected to the electricity network, the sky is crowded with cables at crazy angles, leading to the main power line which traverses the area. Householders have simply lassoed the line with their own cables.

It's a dangerous business, as the cables they use are not strong enough to take the main current and fused wires are common. Shocks and even fatal electrocutions occur. Even if the system works there is still the possibility of punishment from the authorities, who can hand out six month jail terms for habitual offenders.

Officials, however, are reportedly wary about interfering after an attack recently on three electricity board inspectors, who were injured in a clash with householders. The houses are still lit and heated by electricity.

Stealing water is a bit more complicated, but less dangerous. About 10 per cent of Istanbul's water supply is drained off by water pirates, officials say. They either fiddle with the meter or dig their own pipes. In the city pipe-digging is apt to create attention, but it happens. In the outer suburbs it's much easier: a businessman building a new factory often puts in his own pipe and an extra hole here or there goes unnoticed as the pipes are connected to the mains.

Gas is easy. Most Istanbul apartment houses have all the requisite piping for the munici-

E. G. Flanagan, member of the Legislature from Pitt Couty and delegate to the National Convention of Democrats, left this morning for Chicago to take part in deliberations of the convention next week. Mr. Flanagan will be among the thousands of Democrats from all over the country to reach the city on the eve of what is believed to be one of the most spectacular gatherings in years.

It was daughters's night with the Kiwanis Club last night and members were given an opportunity to see exactly what kind of fair feminity the other fellow was capable of turning out, for some of the boys didn't have daughters but fortunately their neighbors did and some were borrowed for the evening.

Playing at the State Theatre this week is "Lefty Lynton" starring Joan Crawford and Robert Montgomery.

Peanut Butter Is For Epicure

By ROBERT CAREY

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., (UPI) —As a charter member of the Peanut Butter Fan Club and a life-long booster and user of the creamy spread, I feel compelled to speak out on recent developments in the field.

To set the stage historically, peanut butter and I go back a long way. I cannot remember not having access to it and using the stuff on a fairly steady basis.

In the early years of our marriage, my wife has told me, she knew something had gone amiss in the evening meal when I, easing back from the chair, would go to the cabinet and return with bread and peanut butter to continue my nourishment.

I would, too, on occasion, eat half a jar with a teaspoon while sitting reflectively in the kitchen drinking milk.

Alas, those days are gone, a casualty of trying to hold one's waist line from season to season. However, my son now calls for it each morning to put on his toast and the peanut butter jar has returned to the table.

Show stopper

So it was with more than passing interest that I read recently of presidential candidate Hubert H. Humphrey's special affinity for peanut butter.

Humphrey, a man never caught without something to say, had been asked by Miss Paulette Brown, the reigning "Georgia Peanut Princess," how he felt about peanut butter.

"I agree with you that peanut butter is as much or more of a household treat as Mom's apple pie," the Minnesota Senator wrote the Georgia Peach. "My favorite sandwich is peanut butter, baloney, cheddar cheese, lettuce and mayonnaise on toasted bread with lots of catsup on the side."

Well sir, there was a show stopper. Was he serious? I had been a pretty tough peanut butter combination man myself in my day. I have dined on peanut butter and mayonnaise sandwiches, peanut butter and banana and your standard peanut butter and jelly, of course, among other combinations. I tried peanut butter and raw onion for a brief period but developed no real fondness for it.

Epicure's joy

There was only one way. Test it. I chose Sunday afternoon, feeling that the hospital emergency wards would be less crowded at that time should I need assistance.

Selection of an accompanying beverage was necessary. I chose a can of beer. Science was at work here as I figured the alcoholic content of the beer might somehow offset any strange bacterial cultures that the stomach would give house to when the peanut butter, mayonnaise, baloney and cheese came sliding down with the catsup.

I made the sandwich, sloshed catsup on the side of the plate, popped open a can of beer and fell to. The first bite was without catsup, the second with, so as to get the full range of taste subtleties involved.

Friends, it was fine. I ended up eating two of the things. It's true. I have witnesses. I am of a mind now that Hubert wasn't putting us on at all.

Simple ingredients, when fitted to the imagination of the gourmet chef, are reborn into an epicure's symphonic delight.

Life In New York

In Gotham, people are divided into two broad classes: those who have been robbed or mugged, and those who expect to be at any moment. The following is a true story of a tall, burly insurance executive in the second category.

He was standing nere the center doors of a subway train on his way to work near Wall Street. At one stop, a well-dressed smaller man entered the car, bumped into the executive and turned to retreat from the car.

The executive instinctively reached into his inside breast pocket. Sure enough, his wallet was missing. As the doors were closing, he reached out and grabbed the smaller man by his jacket collar. The doors closed, with their rubber edges around the big man's wrist. The train started to roll, but the executive held on. Suddenly the jacket tore and the executive was left holding a patch of cloth, with no pickpacket attached.

On the way to his office, he began to consider moving from a city where no one can ride the subways without the ever-present risk of being robbed. A few minutes after he reached his office, the phone rang. It was his wife, calling to tell him he had left his wallet at home.

No trace of the innocent little man was ever found. He probably thought he had been the victim of an attempted mugging. By now, he may be holed up in the boondocks of Idaho.—Montgomery (Ala.) Advertiser

The Oddsmaker

Was it only four months ago that Las Vegas oddsmaker Jimmie the Greek focused his bookmaking talents on the Democratic presidential race? Let's see, now. Ed Muskie, said Jimmie, was a 2-5 favorite to win the party nomination. Hubert Humphrey followed at 4-1; then came Scoop Jackson at 5-1. Ted Kennedy was rated at 20-1. Way down in the pack, at 50-1, were John Lindsay, George Wallace and that political joke from South Dakota, George McGovern. Faithfuls who took that last bet are now laughing, we are certain, all the way to the bank.—Charlotte (N.C.) Observer

It Makes Sense

Union electricians in the Mobile area recently voted not to seek a wage increase in the coming year. The idea was to help bring new life to a depressed construction industry in the district.

This is an example of pragmatic and responsible unionism. If the idea catches on, it could do more than wage-price ceilings to beat inflation.—Birmingham (Ala.) New

The Freedom That Is Basic

In the name of free speech and freedom of the press—the First Amendment provisions—a lot of Communist trouble—makers and their stooges cavort in public places; saying and doing things that are at least on the borderline of the seditious, always with the declaration that such is their "constitutional right."

It is significant, however, that it is not their admired Marxist lands in which such freedom is known; but the democracies. Everywhere a Marxist moves in, the movement clamps down violent closures on freedom. By way of illustration, note a quotation: "Why should freedom of speech and freedom of the press be allowed? Why should a government which is doing what it believes to be right allow itself to be criticized? It would not allow opposition by lethal weapons. Ideas are much more fatal things than guns. Why should any man be allowed to buy a printing press and disseminate pernicious opinion calculated to embarrass the government?"

Whose words are these? Nikolai Lenin said it—the Marxist hand that led to the violence that established communism as the way of life in Russia. Characteristically, communism puts out the light wherever it takes over. Stooges in this country who invoke the First Amendment are wrapping themselves for protection in the very instrument they would totally destroy should their ideology come to power.—Nashville (Tenn.) For An Era, 'No Survivors'

Newsmen everywhere will feel a twinge of nostalgia over the death of the last Bonfils.

The unusual name, pronounced Bone-feece, is legendary from the era of rip-roaring journalism. The Denver Post was the setting, starting in 1895. That is the year the newspaper was bought by Frederick G. Bonfils, showman extraordinary, and his partner, H.H. Tammen, self-styled rascal.

Their deeds of derring-do and deviltry were immortalized by the late Gene Fowler in his book,"Timberline." They and their flamboyance are virtually the antithesis of present-day respectability amoun newspapermen. They amassed a fortune, and it wound up in the hands of Miss Helen G. Bonfils, twice married, once widowed, once divorced, a patron of the theater and "angel" to Broadway.

She died Tuesday in Denver. The New York Times ended its account of her life matter-of-factly: "She leaves no immediate survivors."—Miami (Fla.) Herald

The System Works For Miss Davis

We held no preconceived notion as to the guilt or innocence of Angela Davis, so we are willing to accept the verdict of the jury that she was innocent of participation in the kidnaping of hostages and the murder of a judge in California.

Miss Davis was tried before an all-white jury, a fact that is significant only because many blacks contend that black defendants cannot get a fair shake in court from whites.

The outcome of the trial shows that the system which is under so much attack from discontented people can be made to work for the benefit of those like Miss Davis who are outside the system...

We need a reminder now and then that every accused is presumed innocent until found guilty. In Angela Davis' case, despite strenous efforts by the prosecution, guilt was not proved.—Gainesville (Ga.) Daily Times

A Conservative View

The New Order Takes Over The Old Dominion

By J. J. KILPATRICK

The Virginia Republican party convened in Roanoke on the 3rd of this month. A week later, the Democrats came in. There has not been such a wrenching, such a falling and a rising, since Cicero cried out against Catline. O tempora, O mores!

Sometimes a reporter can be too much on top of his story. A newman who has spent 30 years at the window pane, watching the parade go by, may have his nose snubbed too closely to the passing hour. Perspectives get distorted. But unless I am wholly mistaken, what is happening in Virginia — and happening generally throughout the South — presages one of the major political transitions of our time. Changes seem to be in progress that are more than skin deep, changes that go beneath the epithelial labels and get down to the ideological bone.

Not long after I came to Richmond, as a 20-year-old cub in the spring of 1941, one of the old hands fetched me to Washington for a make-your-manners visit to Virginians on the Hill. The House delegation, from John W. Flannagan of the Ninth to Otis Bland of the First, was solidly Democratic from the mountains to the sea. Carter Glass, born in 1858, was then our senior Senator. The real power, I was instructed, rested with a ruddy, apple-cheeked man with diamond blue eyes and a farmer's solid grip: Harry Flood Byrd.

Virginia was then, for all practical purposes, a one-party State. There were a few decent Republicans in Floyd and Carroll Counties, and a considerable passle of misguided rebels in the mountains of the deep southwest, but elsewhere they were hard to come by. The GOP was largely in the hands of a few seedy characters waiting for President Dewey to make them postmasters. It simply wasn't respectable to be a Republican then.

Virginia in those days, for political purposes, was also a white man's State. The poll tax of 1902, which Glass had helped to write into our State constitution, served to inhibit voting generally, but it operated most effectively against the poor and apathetic blacks. Few of them voted and none of them ran for office.

In the 1940 census, Virginia's population was 35 percent urban, 65 percent rural. In those figures rested a great part of the strength of the Byrd organization. Today the numbers are almost exactly reversed — 63 percent urban, 37 percent rural.

We were, in those days, Democratic, white, rural — and conservative. A hundred years before Byrd came on the scene, John Randolph of Roanoke had startled the House with a shrill interruption: "Mr. Speaker!" he cried. "I have discovered the philosopher's stone! It is pay as you go, sir pay as you go!" This was Byrd's motto; he imbued his party and his State with principles of fiscal conservatism that were matched by caution in every other field. We used to have a budget director, John Henry Bradford — but let it go.

It is gone, all gone. Eclipses, eathquakes, floods and convulsions: Our politics suddenly have known them. The Virginia Republicans, in their convention moved sharply to the right. They rebuked their own moderate Governor, Linwood Holton, and they adopted resolutions that by clear implication would provide a welcome for homeless conservative Democrats now wandering in a wilderness.

The Democratic convention was like nothing ever seen before. Liberals swept the place clean. They took over the State committee. They drafted resolutions calling for amnesty, end-the-war, and the legal possession of marijuana. They named a black attorney from Canville, Mrs. Ruth Harvey Charity as National Committeewoman. The conservatives were routed, horse, foot and dragons.

The virus of revolution that has seized Virginia may prove contagious. The South as a whole counted 2,164,000 registered Negro voters in 1964; the number is past 3,357,000 now; they are achieving political clout. Meanwhile, rural conservatism fades; Forty-two of Virginia's 97 counties lost population between 1960 and 1970, and the trend prevails acorss the South. What is emerging is a new two-party system, realistically divided into liberals and conservatives. A century of Democratic allegiance is dissolving into a decade of realignment. For the Old Dominion, and for much of the South, it's a whole new way of life.

Hanoi Appears To Feel Boxed In By Diplomacy Between Friends, Foes

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

North Vietnam's Communist regime has been grouchy all along about high-level U.S. diplomacy in Red capitals, and now it seems worried that it is being boxed in between allies and foes.

The emerging picture is one of a regime under pressure, and the impression is created that some movement is possible soon in the long deadlock over peace terms.

The pressure could be generated by worry in Hanoi that a changing world climate might force it to consider terms well short of its goals.

The effectiveness of President Nixon's diplomacy now could depend on the extent of Soviet and Chinese belief in the President's ability to be reelected.

Washington sources say the initiative for Henry Kissinger's latest trip to China came from Peking. Premier Chou En-lai may have been anxious to hear what the White House thinks about the President's chances for re-election. He would also be anxious to know what went on between Nixon and the Russians in Moscow and what are the absolute minimum American terms for an Indochina settlement.

Whatever the Russian views might be on such matters, Soviet President Nikolai V. Podgorny did make a hurried trip to Hanoi, and his welcome seemed to have been something less than hearty. His mission undoubtedly involved explaining the Moscow summit and promising that the Kremlin would remain faithful to its "internationalist duty" in Indochina. Still, that would not preclude some forceful Dutch Uncle talk.

If Nixon looks like a winner in November, it could make sense for Hanoi to take what it can get now. A re-elected Nixon could be much tougher to deal with.

The outlook can hardly be pleasant for the Hanoi regime. The United States has mined its harbors, cut off or drastically reduced its supplies from abroad and greatly increased attacks on its transport, communications and power plants. The North Vietnamese offensive in South Vietnam has had some battlefield successes and has captured Quang Tri Province, but North Vietnam has suffered some severe material and psychological damage even apart from an enormous cost in manpower.

Hanoi's internal propaganda pictures mounting problems. The press demands total effort to "produce sufficient food and grain to feed our troops and people," to put every available square foot of land and every available worker to use. It warns against black-marketing in food; concedes that U.S. responses to the offensive "created many difficulties for us" and warns of strict measures to maintain "public order" and "prevent opportunists from taking advantage of wartime to infringe on the property of the state and people."

Such complaints and warnings are not new, but today there is a background obligato of reproach to Hanoi's allies suggesting perhaps some desperation.

The official press has been reluctant to tell the North Vietnamese about Nixon's huddles in Moscow and Peking. It complains without naming the allies.

U.S. sources in Southeast Asia express belief that both China and the Soviet Union want to see the Indochina war ended, each for its own reasons. But the Americans are unlikely to buy any agreement they would regard as making inevitable an eventual Communist takeover in the South.

At the Paris talks, the North Vietnamese may now want to mark time and wait for the U.S. elections. But meanwhile their allies do nothing about the U.S. bombing and the mining of North Vietnamese waters. Thus, while neither the Russians nor the Chinese may want to do any arm-twisting in Hanoi, the situation in itself implies pressure on the North Vietnamese regime.

Vietnam should have been continuously supplied by sea rather than through the gargantuan logistical apparatus that overflowed South Vietnam. Acres and acres of now-deserted camps were seen by him as mute testimony to the stupidity of American military bureaucrats. He despised the armchair generals in their air-conditioned officers' clubs and loathed those Foreign Service officers assigned to the pacification program who valianty tried never to hear a shot fired in anger. In return, they viewed Vann as a pop-off who did not play by the rules.

What dismayed them most was Vann's talent at beating the bureaucratic system. Against Gen. Abrams's wishes, he piloted his own helicopter—perhaps ensuring his death in battle but giving him a mobility unequalled among senior officials. Last year, he named a junior Foreign Service officer as his deputy for pacification, overriding determined State Department opposition.

John Vann was by no means the only sensitive U.S. official appalled by American and Vietnamese officialdom. But unlike so many, Vann never forgot that the tyranny of communism was the greater evil for South Vietnam.

It was this rare marriage of dedication and iconoclasm that made Vann indispensable. In assessing Vann's death, that is the essential point to be made because the combination is so sadly lacking in the misery of Vietnam.

Sen. Jordan Has Much To Do In Final Months

BY JOHN KILGO

RALEIGH—Sen. B. Everett Jordan, defeated in his bid for reelection; says he isn't bitter and is paying attention to his daily chores in the U.S. Senate.

"I can take what happened," Sen. Jordan told me in an interview. "A majority of the poeple who voted said they wanted the other man. That's what a Democracy is all about. If I couldn't take that, then I wouldn't have much business being here."

Sen. Jordan says he hasn't given much thought to what he will do when his Senate term expires.

"I have six more months to go on this job," Sen. Jordan said. "There is an unbelievable amount of work to do. I started this morning in the Senate at 9:30. Congress will probably go throuh Christmas. I have plenty to keep me busy, as you can see."

Jordan says he doesn't like losing, like he did to Nick Galifianakis, but he says he has no regrets about the way he conducted his campaign.

"I was the incumbent Senator," he said, "I felt my job was to stay up here and tend to my work. I wasn't able to campaign much in North Carolina during first primary. Politically, I guess that was a mistake. But I thought it was the proper thing for me to do."

Jordan said his attendance record in Congress during the campaign was 67 per cent, while he said Galifianakis' was 27 per cent.

And the Senator's age and health, which was maybe the biggest issue in the campaign?

"I've not felt bad," Jordan says. "I feel good and strong. Physically, I'm very well off. I have the Good Lord to thank for my fine health."

Jordan will concern himself with future plans after his term is up. He has no worries about that.

"I accept everything that has happened," he says. "I tried to a good job for the people of North Carolina. I believe I did. And you can look at my desk and see that there is still much to do.

Nick Galifianakis, the winner in that race with Jordan, is looking forward to a vacation with his family...Frank Rouse tells me that he will return as GOP Chairman "to make it a full-time job, as before. And, yes, I am taking the job with enthusiasm."

Rouse also feels that Jim Gardner supporters "will actively" support Jim Holshouser in the election against Democrat Skipper Bowles.

Bowles, by the way, has been told by his experts that North Carolinians are tired of politics. They needed a little time off. Bowles has responded by laying low. I almost feel like offering a reward, a small one, of course, for anyone knowing of Skipper's whereabouts.

pal gas supply. The gas department merely supplies a meter when a householder asks for gas to be connected. This can take months, and to save the bother it's easy enough to unscrew the stopper and plug your gas stove straight in.

The water department makes periodic checks with mine-detectors in a search for pipes which shouldn't be where they are. The electricity department also is going on the offensive and plans to insulate overhead power lines in areas where electricity pirates are at work.

"They will be very hard to steal power from," said Istanbul Electricity Department Director Saffet Gurtav. "Or at least we think they will be."

Health And Education Fields Are Signaled Changes Are Coming

By GEORGE BRYANT, JR.

Health and education, two of the nation's biggest and most basic industries, are receiving warnings of changes to come. The paying public—the stock holders, so to speak—are becoming more insistent that costs be brought under control.

While the two fields are vastly different, they have a great deal in common. They benefit from the popular generality that nothing is too good for the young and the ill. They are not much concerned with efficiency, since the taxpayer is hit for all or part of the bill. In a way, inflation coupled with politics have given each what might be called a joy ride.

But during the week, there were signs that some of the free wheeling ways of the past are heading for restraint.

The platform writers for the up-coming Democratic National Convention listened, with evident sympathy, to calls for national health insurance, provided by government. And with this would come control of hospital charges and doctors' fees. Republicans lean in this direction, but on a more moderate scale.

University and college administrators got something to think about from the weighty Carnegie Commission on Higher Education. The Commission blunty warned that higher education "may be reaching a ceiling in the amount of money it can expect from society."

The Commission said that if the colleges and universities continue the spending trend of the 1960s through the 1970s they will come up $10-billion short, even with vast increases in federal support. The report had some specific advice as to how to get rid of "fat", including what might be called some of the early retirement atmosphere.

High on the list was a recommendation that the schools get more work out of their professors—give them larger classes and more hours in the class room This was a reminder that the institutions now are in a strong bargaining position and can get more for their money.

There were some words about the desirability of dropping "reluctant attenders" and not enrolling "unmotivated students", along with reducing the curriculum from four years to three.

The report felt that too many Ph. D. programs are being created, at unnecessary expense, and that Ph. D. training and federally supported research should be concentrated in fewer institutions. This obviously was aimed at institutions scrambling for prestige, regardless of cost.

Many college and university administrators will find this sort of advice hard to swallow. To a certain extent, they are in much the same position as many in the health field who resist any restraints on their freedom.

National health insurance, which many Washington observers feel will become a fact next year, or no later than 1974 (the next Congressional election year), still has strong opposition. Many physicians don't like the idea (socialized medicine). Neither do the private health insurers.

Basically, any such legislation would put health care in the "public utility" class. The differences in various plans are largely over the degree of control, not the objective which is adequate care for all and in a way that all can afford.

Seantor Ted Kennedy, as do others, contends that the taxpayers, in one way or another, already subsidize health care to a considerable extent, but without any control of the costs. For example, the public contribution to a physician's education has risen steadily since world war II. Hospitals, more and more, are built with public money. And medical insurance has become "essential", although it is not available to all in any adequate way.

The medical profession, itself, is split on the issue. In recent years, the anti faction has been shrinking. Through the combination of government aids and private insurance plans, members of the profession have been able to move, quickly, into top income levels. But many are taking the attitude they would trade income for a lighter work load and a "better life."

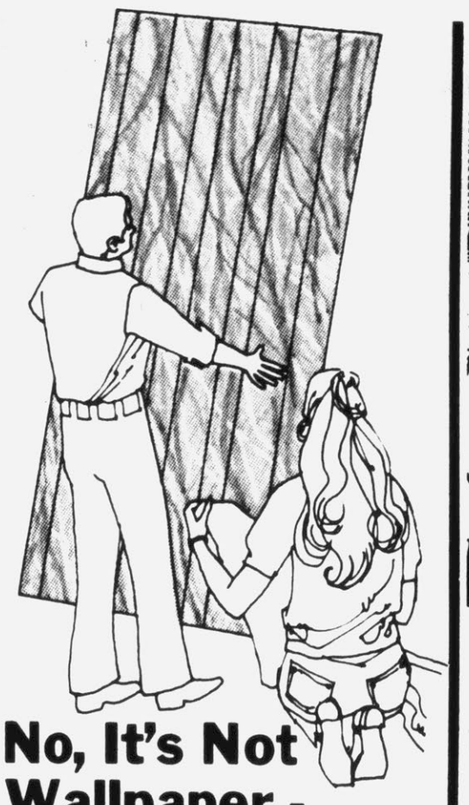

When Congress gets down to serious consideration of the health issue, howpital inefficiency is expected to make real headlines. Hospital administrators as do school administrators, like to blame their skyrocketing costs on the "hired help," meaning down the line employees. These costs have up, of course, But according to those who have seen some of the records, they don't tell the whole story.

It's probably good that the health and education industries face a challenge of their ways. Stockholders may not be able to run a business. But they can, if they wish, make management perform.

Some Needlessly Die From Summer Water Fun

More than 100 million Americans will take to the water this summer for fun and good health, and some of them will drown needlessly, reported Miss Nell Stallings, water safety chairman of the Pitt County Chapter of the American Red Cross.

Miss Stallings pointed out that 60 per cent of the people who drown each year fall into the water accidentally.

"They could have saved themselves," she said, "if they had been able to swim, because almost invariably safety — in the form of a dock, a boat or the shore — was nearby."

She said that all followers of aquatic sports, including swimming, sailing, and canoeing, or cruising in motor-powered boats, should observe safety precautions in or near the water.

Red Cross began teaching swimming and lifesaving around 1914, she observed. In the nearly 60 years since then, Mrs. Stallings contended, Red Cross instruction and that of other organizations has resulted in a reduction of 1,700 in the number of annual drownings. During the same period, it was noted, the total population has more than doubled and participants in water sports have multiplied more than tenfold.

"Each year about 7,300 persons drown," she reported. "This figure could be reduced greatly if people observed a few safety rules."

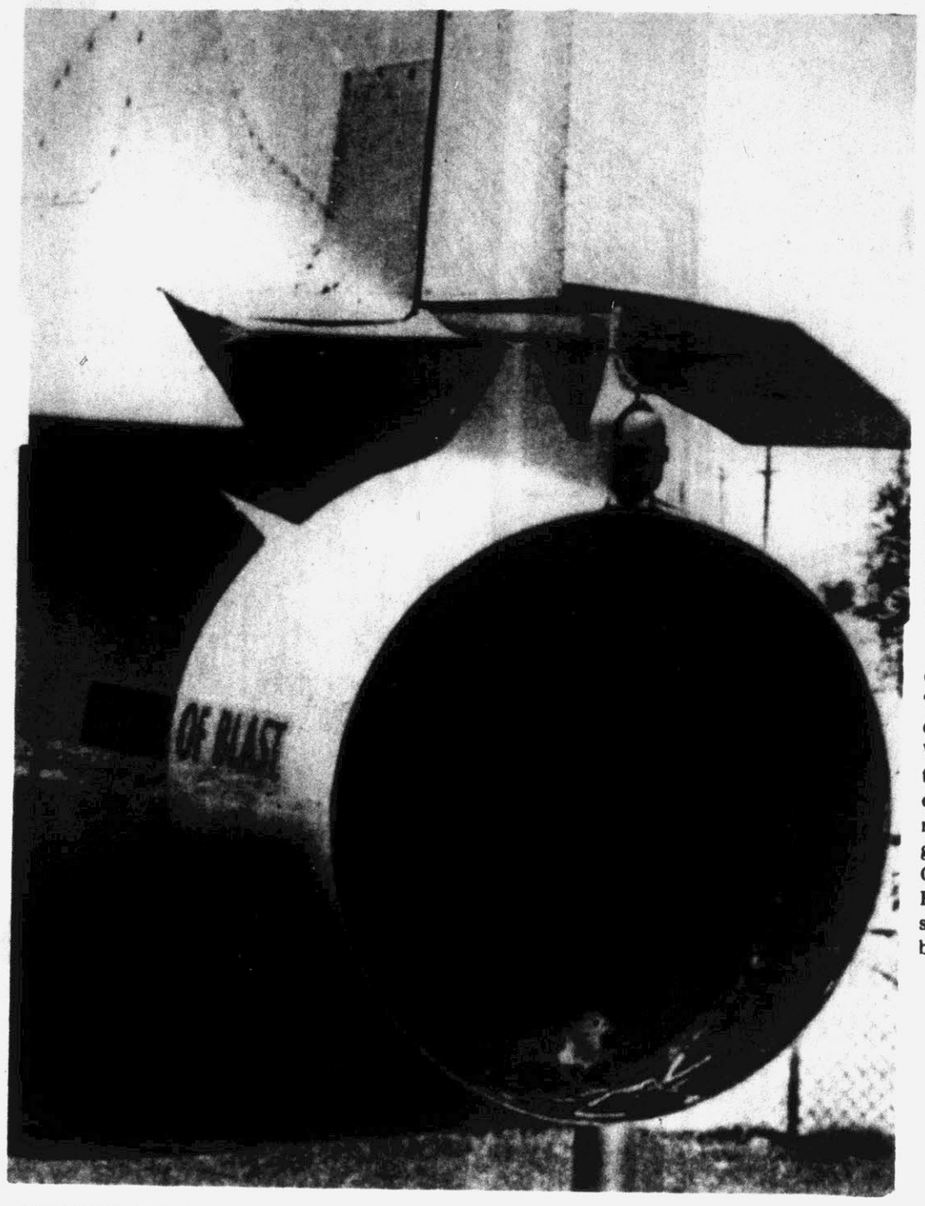

The chairman asserted that the first safety precaution is to learn to swim. Also small children should be watched carefully around the water, she said, even in supervised and guarded areas and even at shallow wading pools.

Miss Stallings offered other safety tips. Always swim with a companion, never alone. On a long distance swim, arrange for someone in a boat to accompany you. Swim in a safe place. The presence of lifeguards usually indicates the area is safe for swimming. Stay away from the area in front of a diving board and do not swim near piers or pilings.

Before diving, she warned make sure the water is deep enough and there are no hidden objects such as submerged rocks. If you have not been swimming since last summer, take it easy at first and know your limitations.

Wait at least an hour after eating before swimming and do not swim when overtired or overheated, Miss Stallings cautioned. Also, make certain that reaching poles, buoys, and similar rescue equipment are available. Do not depend on an inflated innertube or toy to hold you up. Whenever a storm approaches, get out of the water — it is a conductor of lightning, she said.

Named ECU Bureau Assistant Director

George A. Threewitts Jr., will join the staff of the News Bureau-Department of Public Relations at East Carolina University July 1 as assistant director.

Known professionally as George Copeland, Mr. Threewitts has been news director for television station WITN, Washington, N. C., for the past four years and has wide experience in the field. He is a native of North Carolina, a graduate of Atlantic Christian College with an A. B. degree in English and taught in the public schools of Carteret County before entering television news work in 1968.

Threewitts, 27, also worked as program director and sales for WRCS, Ahoskie, before joining WITN. He is married to the former Linda Rhodes and they have two children. His mother, Mrs. G. A. Threewitts is a teacher in Greenville. He is a nephew of Superior Court Judge J. William Copeland of Hertford County.

The appointment was announced today by William A. Shires, director of the ECU News Bureau-Department of Public Relations.

Rural Housing Loans Available To Many

Willard Dean, Pitt County supervisor for the Farmers Home Administration, announced that many additional families in Pitt are now eligible for rural housing loans from the FHA.

"In families where both husband and wife are employed," Dean explained, "The new policy permits half of the wife's gross income to be excluded in determining whether the total family income is within the maximum limit for loan eligibilty."

Dean emphasized that newly eligible families must demonstrate that they otherwise merit FHA financing, and that credit is not available from regular commericial sources.

"The new policy will assist families in which the wife's income is needed to improve the standard of living. Note that if the wife is the principal breadwinner, the rule does not apply," the supervisor added.

"This change will in no way effect our expanding service to low-income families," he said.

Dean pointed out that loans may be made to families that will buy or build homes in open country or towns of up to 10,000 population, and who are not able to secure credit from regular commercial sources.

Complete information is available from the local county office located in the Federal Building here, he said.

Rodeo Cowgirls, A New Twist To Women's Lib

By RENA PEDERSON

BURNET, Tex. (UPI)—"You ain't seen nothin' till you see 95 pounds of 'honky tonk angel' come riding out of the chute on 1,200 pounds of bucking Brahma bull," said an old cowboy, losing half a chaw of tobacco down the corner of his mouth.

"Lookit her ride," he whooped. "She's got her bottom planted on that one!"

The "honky tonk angels" are rodeo cowgirls, and they have added a new and daring twist to women's liberation by taking up the sport of riding, roping and barrel racing acrss the Southwest.

Hundreds of women have traded their desks and homes for horses and saddles — traveling between Texas, Oklahoma, New Mexico, Wyoming and up to Idaho and out to California.

Tough Cowgirls

Wearing blue jeans so tight they can't bend over to dust their boots, they rope and ride a horse like Dale Evans never dreamed of doing.

"The cowgirls are tough and yet they are quite feminine," said Sally Dishman, president of the Texas Barrel Racing Association and the organizer of the Burnet All-Girl Rodeo, the largest of its kind in Texas.

"Our youngest contestant is 8 and our oldest would admit to being "over 60," said Mrs. Dishman, the pigtailed, petite wife of a central Texas rancher. She trains horses and joins the rodeo circuit on weekends.

"We rodeo pretty near year 'round," she said. "Some people really work at it —they can make two or three in one weekend if they haul."

Rain No Damper

Burnet (rhymes with durn-it) is a central Texas town with 3,000 population and no other claim to fame than an armadillo farm and "The World's Smallest City Park." Yet 8,000 persons have turned up there the past five years to watch the "honky-tonk angels" perform. This year it rained steadily throughout the second night's performance, but 600 fans sat two hours in the stands and cheered as the girls hit the mud.

"Every year I say I'm not going to do it again, but I do," said Nancy Boswell, an 18-year-old cowgirl from Killeen, Tex. At 5'2" and 95 pounds, she looks like she should pack up her freckles and go back to grade school. But she calmly swings over the fence, pats down her hat and comes roaring out on a bull they call "Moby Dick."

"It's a challenge to prove something to yourself," explained 15-year-old Debbie Allen, of Axtell, Tex., who rides broncs and bulls bareback. She batted her Gidget-blue eyes (no makeup) and said: "It shows you're alive and you ain't scared."

Girl Gets Gored

Last year, Mrs. Sally Dinndorf, of Potlatch, Idaho, was gored by a bull in Burnet. It took 35 stitches to sew up the left side of her face. She won the "Hard Luck Cowgirl" award for that.

"I just love it," the 35-year-old housewife said. "My mother thinks I'm crazy but my husband backs me 100 per cent."

Bow-legged boyfriends and husbands who usually compete in rodeos themselves, fill up the stands or cluster around the chutes. They offer advice and eventually a handkerchief to dust off bad falls and wipe away tears.

"Aw, you rode just fine, honey," said one fellow to his fallen star pupil, "Your hat didn't even come off."

Grooming For Major Beauty Title Is Near Career

TANYA WILSON is something of a novice in the beauty queen game, having been in but eight to date. The Miss Universe contest will be her ninth. (UPI Telephoto)

By FRANK SWERTLOW

NEW YORK (UPI)—When Tanya Wilson, this year's Miss U S A, steps onto the stage next month to compete for the Miss Universe title, it will be the end of a road she has trod with determination for five years.

The contest will be her ninth beauty pageant. At that, she ranks as something of a novice in the beauty queen game.

"Compared to some of the girls I met in Miss U S A," she said in an interview, "I was just a beginner. They'd been in 20 or 30 pageants, especially the girls from the east."

Beauty queens, in other words, just don't burst into blossom. They tend to be most carefully cultivated.

"They usually start at a local pageant, then onto the state level. Then if they're lucky, to Miss U S A and finally Miss Universe," said Tanya, just 22 and just graduated from the University of Hawaii.

Tanya, a willowy 5-foot, 8-inch brunette with the winning measurements of 34½-24-36, was born in Mexico, Mo., then moved to Tucson, Ariz, then to Reno, Nev., and finally settled in Honolulu where she lives with her mother. Her father died several years ago.

Interested As Child

Sitting in the Manhattan office of Miss Universe Inc., sponsor of Miss U S A and Miss Universe, Tanya said she became interested in beauty contests as a child. "Every little girl sees pageants on television, so when I was older, I decided to enter in one," she said.

So at 17 she competed in the Junior Miss Contest and by 20 she had been in five other pageants in Nevada.

"Through pageants in Nevada, I was able to pay my way through school," she said. "So it was well worth it for me. You don't have to be the winner to get a scholarship, just a finalist."

After moving to Honolulu, she entered the Miss Hawaii contest and with a victory there she was off to Puerto Rico and the Miss U S A crown. "I didn't feel anything for days," she recalled of her triumph.

But she admitted most perennial contestants psych themselves up for each competition. "Something has to spur you on to keep going. I don't know if its parental pushing or a chance at a scholarship or expenses or it's just their thing. But something has to drive you."

And, she said, the more contests a girl enters, the more confident she gets. "After you've been in a few, you relax and take things as they come. Most of us realize that getting tense and anxious about winning won't help.

Tension Prevails

"Still,' there is a lot of tension. Any time you put 51 girls together for 10 days as they did for Miss U S A, there is bound to be a bit of tension. No one is very aggressive or pushy, but if they are, it's usually the girls who've only been in a few contests."

Herbert K. Landon, the executive director of Miss U S A and Miss Universe, said the public has many misconceptions about beauty contests and contestants.

"Most girls come from good families and have graduated from college and many even bring their parents. But despite this, many people still have a sex-bomb image of the girls," he said. "The only place you get that is in contests like Miss Bagel or Miss Roller Coaster."

Landon noted that once the contests are over and most of the girls and their swimsuits are back on the beach, Miss U S A and Miss Universe will be busy making product endorsements, shopping center openings and other personal appearances.

Tanya, with full knowledge of this, is eager for the upcoming year. In fact, she can't wait until July 19 when she returns to Puerto Rico, slips into her gown, drapes Miss U S A over her shoulder and joins 71 other girls on stage for the Miss Universe contest.

Whether it's win, lose or draw, Tanya said she'll spend her year working for Landon, then marry her fiance, a Honolulu policeman, study for a masters degree and eventually "be a mommy."

And with that, she might be off and running for Mother of the Year.

Owner At Fault In Dog Problems

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures

Dogs may be worth their weight in loyalty and affection to owners, but they may be a real nuisance to neighbors. In summer dogs are aired for longer periods and may mess up everything in the neighborhood—flower beds, terraces, driveways. They overturn garbage cans. In apartment houses, there are yapping dogs to contend with all through the year.

One elderly woman living alone has been driven to distraction, she says, by "a nice young couple who keep their dog locked up all day while they work." In the early morning and in the evening, the dog is aired, and the couple doesn't care "where she visits."

The woman's porch is used as a comfort station. To make matters worse "the dog often brings a friend with her."

The lady doesn't want to harm the dog, but she'd like to use a repellant on her porch to discourage the dog. A gate erected as a barrier at the porch "was so light, it was blown down and the dog was back again within a few minutes."

An operator of a kennel has used dog repellants and says good ones may be obtained from veterinarians or dog shops and these work quite well. There are the aerosol type and some that are diluted with water. She also has found the use of chlorine bleach diluted with water quite effective. She fills up a plastic bucket with the solution and keeps it handy to wash the porch.

An elderly couple's problem is similar. Their real joy in life is their flower garden, but they are made miserable by their neighbor's dog trampling over their plants and overturning their garbage pails. They are getting too old to do unnecessary chores, they point out.

These are not isolated instances. In some large cities dogs have become such a problem that owners may be given summonses if dogs are not curbed when they are walked. In most communities there are ordinances to cope with such situations. These may provide penalties for those who ignore regulations concerning the airing of animals.

Most dog wardens do not enforce the rules unless they receive complaints. They understand it is virtually impossible to keep a dog on one's property all the time. The most obedient dog will be lured occasionally from his property by another dog or an animal scent.

But the daily troublemakers should be reported.

Anyone with a dog problem might consider these solutions:

If a dog visits your yard occasionally, you might accept the fact that your neighbor may not be able to control the situation. Dogs will stray from time to time. But if it joins a pack, it should be reported to the owner.

If a dog is permitted to roam every day, the dog owner is inconsiderate of his neighbors and his dog, who isn't happy being a tramp. That neighbor should be given a kindly warning that his dog is a nuisance.

If the owner continues to ignore his dog's wanderings, investigate town ordinances. If dog-roaming invokes penalties, call it to the attention of the dog owner. One man had great success in having an owner build a pen for his dog. He had solicited the help of other neighbors, and told the dog owner that there was considerable feeling about the dog in the neighborhood, and that if someone should report Fido to the warden, the fine might be $50. The dog owner took the hint, and did not hold a grudge against his neighbors.

For a little outlay of money, a dog pen can provide great happiness to a dog, its owner and the neighbors.

One veterinarian suggests pens of 5 by 10 feet or 10 by 20 feet, depending on the amount of space available. A pen should always be longer than wider to keep the dog exercising. A square pen invites laziness.

Big dogs—Labrador retrievers, German shepherds, dobermans—need sturdier fencing, such as chain link attached to stancions, and a strong gate. But little dogs can be successfully penned with sturdy wire or wooden fencing or both.

Heart Card For Wallets

NEWARK, N.J. (UPI) — People with heart conditions can now carry a small card that fits in wallet or purse and on which there is a clear facsimile of the patient's electrocardiogram and a physician's name and phone number.

Main purpose of the new ID card is to speed emergency treatment, according to Dr. Russell Brancato, a heart specialist and medical consultant to EKG Service Corp., developer of the card.

Brancato said a person stricken on the job or on a trip, is often placed in a hospital's intensive care unit while efforts are made to determine his condition and contact his doctor.

"A patient carrying the Mini-Med card provides instant information. The time saved in accurate diagnosis can save a life," Brancato said.

The physician fills out a form containing all pertinent medical data. The company reproduces it wallet-size. One copy goes to the patient, the other to the doctor for his files.

Largely Unaware Of Auto Costs

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Most American motorists, although they spent more than $20 billion last year for new cars, don't really know what it costs to own and operate one. The Federal Highway Administration, in a recent publication, estimates it will cost the owner of a standard size 1972 automobile $13,552.95 to operate and maintain it over the 10 years of its anticipated life, or 13.55 cents per mile.

Hydrofoil Gunboats Of Navy Are Non-Polluters

EDITOR'S NOTE — The swiftest ships in the fleet are the radically designed hydrofoils. Not only do they practically fly through the air, they keep it clean, too.

By STEVE LOWELL
Associated Press Writer

SEATTLE (AP) — The boats that fly through the water with the greatest of ease—hydrofoils—are also ahead of their times when it comes to pollution.

They already meet 1975 autc standards for exhaust emission, according to a spokesman for their maker—Boeing Co.

Instead of internal combustion engines, gas turbines power them; and he says these turbines don't "do such awful things to the air we breathe."

These hydrofoil gunboats Boeing has built for the Navy are "quiet, clean, don't pollute the water and don't pollute the air," he says.

About 13 years ago the company began designing and testing these speedy craft, which operate on foils entirely under water, in contrast to the usual hydrofoil boat with foils that pierce the surface.

It's not strange that an aircraft company should branch into this field, since these foils "fly" in water like the airfoils of planes soar in their element.

Boeing's first hydrofoil was the Fresh-1. The 50-foot, twin-hulled research boat looked like a giant waterbug. The company never said how fast the 15-ton craft traveled during tests, but Boeing did say it was designed to rip the water at speeds "up to 100 knots."

Then came Little Squirt, a 2½-ton boat powered by a gas turbine engine operating a centrifugal pump capable of forcing 3,500 gallons of water per minute through a nozzle at the stern. The continuous water jet could drive the boat along up to 45 knots.

Those two research boats led to Navy contracts for the construction of the grandame of the Navy's embryo hydrofoil gunboat fleet, the 110-ton High Point, and for the 60-ton Tucumcari, which has seen action in the Far East and the Mediterranean.

The 71-foot Tucumcari, launched in 1967, flies on wings developed through Fresh-1 and is powered by engines pioneered by Little Squirt. It is capable, the company says, of speed at least "in excess of 40 knots."

Now the company is fussing over details of a contract that it expects to lead to construction of at least two more Navy hydrofoil boats. These won't be gunboats, exactly. They will carry missiles.

The PHM, for Patrol Hydrofoil Guided Missile Ship, will have a speed in excess of 40 knots.

The new vessel will be patterned after the Tucumcari, which is stationed at Norfolk, Va.

All this, the company says, has led to national and international interest in what kind of flying boat Boeing could build to ferry people places faster on the sea or on inland waterways.

Boeing says there is commercial interest in Hawaii, New York, San Francisco and right at home, in Puget Sound, but financial eyes also have been raised in such widely spread places as Japan, Denmark, Hong Kong and in the Mediterranean.

A commercial hydrofoil along the lines of the sleek military versions is being developed. It will carry 190-200 persons, depending on baggage, and cost about $3.5 million.

Household Tax Burden Heavier

NEW YORK (UPI) —The average federal tax burden per household for the 12 months that started July 1 will be $3,227, a $62 increase from the 1972 fiscal year, says the Tax Foundation.

For the first time, health, education and welfare, including Social Security payments, will take a larger part of the dollar than national defense.

The "Savannah," departing Savannah, Ga., May 22, 1819, was the first steampship to cross the Atlantic.

Airline Traffic Climbed In '72

WASHINGTON (AP) — Passenger traffic on U.S. scheduled airlines, both domestic and international, during the first quarter of 1972 increased 14.8 per cent from the first quarter of 1971.

So says the Air Transport Assn.

Twenty-three U.S. airlines, including trunk, international, local service and helicopter air carriers, flew 33.8 billion revenue passenger miles in scheduled domestic and international service. This was up 29.5 billion flown the first three months of 1971.

The passenger load factor for the period was 48.7 per cent, compared with 44.3 per cent for the period last year.

Average Office Output Is Poor

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — Despite national focus on improved productivity, many firms seem satisfied with about a 60 per cent output in clerical and administrative areas, says a business leader.

"The average office is limping along with the equivalent of a three-day week," says Harold W. Nance, president of Serge A. Birn Co., Inc. "Alert managements should be thinking of upping output to a four-day week, not reducing to that level."

Wilmington Snaps Pirate Streak, 9-2

WILMINGTON — The University of North Carolina's Wilmington branch snapped the seven-game winning streak of the East Carolina Pirates last night 9-2.

The loss was the third of the season for the Bucs, which are now 7-3. Wilmington, by winning, pulled back into a tie for the lead with the Bucs, with an identical record.

The Pirates grabbed the initial lead in the game, getting a pair of runs in the first, but a three-run third inning homer put the Seahawks on top, and they didn't let the Bucs push across another run. The Hawks went on to add four runs in the fourth inning and score two more in the fifth.

The Pirates managed seven hits, but couldn't put them together often enough to get another rally generated. Jimmy Paige got three of the hits, all in the infield. Ralph Lamm picked up two of the others.

Wilmington catcher Bruce Cavanaugh was the big hitter for the Seahawks, getting two singles and a homer. All together he drove in five runs. Dennis Jeffus added two more hits as Wilmington put together 10 hits.

The Bucs got their scoring in the first. Paige got a one out single, but went down when Lamm hit back to short, reaching as Paige was cut down. Larry Walters followed with a base hit and moved up when the throw was made to third as Lamm pulled in there. Ron Staggs followed with the third hit of the inning, driving in both runners for a 2-0 lead.

It was to be all the Pirates were to get.

They did manage a few threats. In the third, Paige singled again and made it to third when Lamm singled. In the fourth, Rick McMahon walked and stole second, but also died without advancing. In the fifth, Paige got his third hit, moved to second on Lamm's hit, but went down at third on a fielder's choice to end the frame.

In the sixth, the Bucs failed again to get their breaks going. McMahon again walked, and moved to third on two passed balls. Finally, in the eighth, Walters reached on an error and made it to third on an out, but waited the inning out there.

Wilmington, set down in order for the first two innings, came up with three in the third to take the lead. Bill Hutchinson led off with a single and Jeffus followed with another hit. Then, with one down, Cavanaugh lifted a homer out of the park, giving Wilmington a 3-2 lead, all they would need.

They came back with four more in the fourth. Dave Sandlin led off with a single and Greg Dalton and Eric Higgins both singled to bring Sandlin over. With one down, Jeffus reached on a fielder's choice, as the Bucs went for Dalton at the plate, but missed him on an error. Higgins also managed to come around on the play. Barnes Yelverton followed, reaching on the second Buc error, and he and Jeffus worked a double steal to account for the next run.

Wilmington threatened again in the sixth, when Yelverton walked and Cavanaugh singled, but it came to naught.

Then, in the eighth, they scored two more. With one down, Jeffus and Yelverton both singled. Cavanaugh followed with another base hit, driving in both.

The Pirates try to get a new streak going on Monday when they return to Harrington Field. They will play host to Louisburg with game time at 7:30 p.m.

Stengel Arrives In Style

Baseball great Casey Stengel doffs his hat to the crowd at New York's Shea Stadium Saturday as he arrives prior to the Old Timers Day game and ceremonies. The ceremonies, which featured such former stars as Whitey Ford, Satchel Paige, Stan Musial, and Yogi Berra, preceded the Mets' game against the St. Louis Cardinals. (AP Wirephoto)

St. Louis Spoils Old Timers Day For Mets, Whips Seaver

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — St. Louis battered New York ace Tom Seaver for 10 hits and a fifth-inning knockout and Luis Melendez greeted reliever Ray Sadecki with a pinch hit grand slam home run as the Cardinals drubbed the Mets 11-0 Saturday behind Reggie Cleveland's six-hit pitching.

A crowd of 45,334 watched the nationally televised baseball game following an old timers contest.

Coupled with Pittsburgh's triumph over Chicago, the defeat dropped the Mets 1½ games behind the victorian Pittsburgh Pirates in the National League East.

Seaver, 9-4, faced three batters in the fifth and was charged with seven runs, the most earned runs he has ever given up in his career and his earliest knockout of the season.

Cleveland, 7-4, yielded a lead-off walk to Tommie Agee and John Milner's two-out single in the first inning and then retired 14 consecutive batters before Agee's one-out single in the sixth.

Meanwhile, the Cards tore into Seaver for three runs in the first. Lou Brock drilled the first pitch past seaver's ear for a single and Ed Crosby also singled. Matty Alou doubled home the first run when his fly ball glanced off Agee's glove in right-center and the others scored on Joe Torre's sacrifice liner to left and a single by Ted Simmons.

Seaver pitched out of a bases-loaded, one-out jam in the second but the Cards added a run in the fourth on a walk to Dal Maxvill, a sacrifice and Crosby's single and chased the right-hander in the fifth.

After a single by Torre, Simmons' double and a walk filled the bases, Melendez batted for Bernie Carbo and slammed a 3-2 pitch over the fence in left center.

The Cards made it 9-0 on Maxvill's double, a sacrifice and Brock's sacrifice fly and scored two unearned runs off Sadecki in the sixth on the pitcher's throwing error and RBI singles by Melendez and Maxvill.

In two games this season, St. Louis has belted Seaver for 18 hits and 13 runs in 11 innings.

The Cardinals, who scored 14 runs on 16 hits in their previous game, rapped out a season-high 17 hits, the last being Cleveland's two-out single in the ninth. Simmons and Brock each collected two singles and a double while Crosby, Alou, Melendez, Maxvill and Cleveland had two hits apiece.

After the first inning, the Mets failed to advance a runner past first base until singles by Agee and Dave Marshall in the sixth. They finally got a runner to third with one out in the ninth when singles by Milner and Jim Fregosi and a walk to Ed Kranepool loaded the bases.

But Cleveland fanned pinch hitter Jim Beauchamp, his ninth strikeout, and retired Ken Boswell on a grounder to first to preserve his second shutout of the season.

Bucs Defeat Chicago, 3-1

CHICAGO (AP) — Manny Sanguillen's bases-loaded, tie-breaking single in the eighth inning Saturday boosted the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 3-1 National Leaguebaseball victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Dave Cash opened the decisive eighth with a single and after two force outs, Willie Stargell singled to center and took second on the throw to third.

Al Oliver, who had tied the game at 1-1 with his sixth homer in the seventh inning, was given an intentional walk before Sanguillen delivered his clutch, two-run single.

Nelson Briles, 5-2, retired the first 14 Cubs he faced before Rick Monday singled with two out in the fifth inning. The Cubs broke in front in the sixth on a bunt single by Glenn Bekcert.

Kiwanis Take Win Over Lions

The Kiwanis pulled off a 9-4 upset of the Lions yesterday in the North State Little League.

The victory boosted the Kiwanis record to 4-8, while the Lions fell off to 5-7. The loss eliminated the Lions from any chance at the title.

The Kiwanis pushed over one in the first inning. Danny Hester singled and Calvin Williams walked. Greg James singled, driving in Hester with the first run.

In the second, the Kiwanis came up with another. Stuart Motsinger singled and came all the way around on passed balls, making it 2-9.

In the third, the Kiwanis broke it open, scoring six runs to take an 8-0 lead. Williams singled and with two outs, Ben Miller got a hit, scoring Williams. Michael Clemmons walked and Stevie Smart singled to score Miller. Motsinger singled in Clemmons and Chris Dickson got a hit to score Smart. A passed ball brought in Motsinger and Dickson scored on an error.

The final Kiwanis run came in the top of the fifth. Brad Brown singled, took second on a passed ball and scored on Williams' double.

The Lions came up with all four of their runs in the fifth inning with one away. Jesse Baker singled and Marty Worthington doubled. Mike Adams singled Baker over and Ray Kilpatrick singled in both Worthington and Adams. A passed ball brought Kilpatrick in, but the rally ended there.

Tommy Carpenter had two hits to lead the Lions, while Williams, James, Miller and Motsinger each had two for the Kiwanis.

Brewers Bump Boston By 5-2

MILWAUKEE (AP) — John Briggs homered and Bob Heise stroked a two-run double as the Milwaukee Brewers beat Boston 5-2 Saturday in an American League game, which saw Red Sox Manager Eddie Kasko and two of his players ejected.

The Red Sox took the lead in the top of the second inning when, with one out, Danny Cater singled and John Kennedy hit his second homer of the season into the left field stands.

The Brewers tied the score in the bottom of the second on four hits, including RBI-singles by Rick Auerback and Ron Theobald. Heis's two-out double in the third scored both George Scott and Dave May, who had singled.

Briggs added his seventh homer of the season for Milwaukee in the fifth.

Home plate umpire Hank Morganweck ejected both Kasko and center fielder Tommy Harper for protesting a called third strike on Harper as he led foo the Boston seventh. Morganweck also thumbed out Red Sox starter Sonny Siebert, 7-4, when he argued a 3-0 count on Joe Lahoud in the Brewers' seventh.

Kaat Hurls 9th Win For Twins

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Minnesota's Jim Kaat earned his ninth victory of the American League baseball season Saturday, besting the Kansas City Royals 4-1.

Kaat who improved his record to 9-2, limited the Royals to eight hits.

Minnesota chased left-hander Jim Rooker, 3-5, with three runs in the third inning. A one-out walk to Rick Renick started the rally. Bobby Darwin's double moved-Renick to third and Eric Soderholm's single made it a 2-0 lead for the Twins.

Kaat doubled over Amos Otis' head in center, scoring the third run.

The Twins scored their fourth run in the seventh off relieved Al Fitzmorris. Danny Thompson singled with one out and traced to third on Rod Carew's single An error by Richie Scheinblum in right allowed Carew to go to second. After Harmon Killebrew was walked intentionally, Fitzmorris also walked pinch hitter Steve Braun to force in Thompson.

Lady Ump Ejects Self

By DON WATERS
Associated Press Sports Writer

GENEVA, N.Y. (AP) — Bernice Gera broke professional baseball's umpiring sex barrier Saturday night, then abruptly quit after officiating at her first game.

The 40-year-old Jackson Heights housewife's debut in the New York-Penn League was a somewhat stormy one as she made three disputed calls as base umpire, one of which led to her ejecting Auburn Phillies Manager Nolan Campbell.

The rhubarb came in the top of the fourth inning of the first game of a doubleheader, when Mrs. Gera at first called an Auburn player safe at second base, then quickly reversed herself.

Be sure to watch the weather when you are out in a boat. A change in wind direction or a temperature drop could mean there's a storm on the way.

Blue Is Beaten, 3-1

Wright, 8-3, allowed the A's their only run in the third inning when Reggie Jackson hit his 15th home run of the baseball season into the right-field stands.

The defeat was the fourth in five decisions for Blue. He had a two-hit shutout going until Bob Oliver singled with one out in the seventh.

After Ken McMullen flied out, Leo Cardenas and Jeff Torborg singled to drive in two runs.

Rollie Fingers relieved Blue in the eighth and the Angels scored again when Ken Berry walked, moved to third on Vada Pinson's single and scored on a sacrifice fly by Oliver.

Moose Capture Win Over Elks

The Moose outlasted the Elks, 13-7, yesterday in a seven-inning Tar Heel Little League game.

The win brought tthe Moose record to 5-6, while the Elks fell off to 5-7, and were eliminated from the title picture.

The Moose pushed over two runs in the first. Mickey Finn reached on a fielder's choice and William Brewington slapped a home run, making it 2-0.

In the bottom of the second, the Elks scored once. Len Jackson walked and moved up on Don White's infield out. Greg Hargett reached on an error and stole second. Calvin Ray singled, knocking in Jackson to make it 2-1.

In the fourth, the Moose came up with two more. Brewington walked and Steve Lawler got a hit. Both moved up on a passed ball and Danny Wood singled to score them both.

The Elks came back with two in the bottom of the fourth. White reached on a fielder's choice and moved up on a wild pitch. Hargett walked as did Terry Skinner. Ray was hit by a pitch, scoring White and Jarvis Campbell walked to bring in Hargett, cutting the lead to 4-3.

Three more Moose runs crossed in the fifth. Ashley Taylor singled and moved to second on a passed ball. Mickey Finn singled him in and Brewington hit his second homer of the day.

The Elks came right back and scored two to trim it to 7-5. Reggie Spain reached on an error and moved up on a passed ball. Jackson singled and stole second. White walked and Hargett singled in Spain. Jackson scored on an error on the play, but the rally ended there.

The Elks got two more in the sixth to tie it up. Campbell singled and moved up on a passed ball. Mack Stocks walked and another passed ball moved both up. A balk scored Campbell and Spain walked. A double steal brought in Stocks with the tieing run.

The Moose then rallied to score six runs in the top of the seventh to win it. David Caroll walked and Finn singled. Brewington got a hit to load the bases. Lawler reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Carroll. Tony Farmer doubled to drive in Finn, Brewington and Lawler and Scott Peele doubled in Farmer. Peele moved up on an out and scored the final run on Paul Lemmond's double.

Brewington led the Moose hitting with three, while Finn had two. No one had more than one for the Elks.

Carolina Dairy Ices Tie For Ruth Crown

Carolina Dairy iced at least a tie for first place in the Babe Ruth League yesterday, downing North Carolina National Bank, 11-1. In the other game, Pepsi-Cola beat NCNB, 12-2.

Carolina Dairy meets Home Builders on Monday, and a victory will wrap up the title for them. A loss would mean a tie with Pepsi. Carolina Dairy is now 10-4, while Pepsi is finished at 10-5.

Carolina Dairy pushed over one in the first inning to take the lead. Dickie Johnson walked and stole second. Chris Garrett sacrificed him to third and Wayne Miller singled him home.

NCNB scored once in the bottom of the frame. Donnie Haddock walked and stole second. He took third on a passed ball and came on in when the ball was thrown away on the attempt to get him.

Carolina Dairy went back out with two in the second. Leonard Williams was hit by a pitch and stole second. Johnson doubled him in and stole third and home, making it 3-1.

In the fourth, another run came over. Johnson singled and stole second. Two wild pitches brought him over.

The fifth saw three more runs come across. Wesley Deal walked and moved up on an error. Jimmy Peszko was hit by a pitch and Deal scored on an error, scoring Peszko and he scored on a wild pitch.

Two more crossed in the sixth. Miller walked and stole second. Deal reached on a fielder's choice, and also stole second. Peszko then reached on another, scoring Miller and an error on the play let Deal score.

The final two came in the seventh. Johnson walked and stole both second and third, ending up with seven stolen bases for the game. Chris Garrett walked and stole second and Miller sacrificed in Johnson. Garrett scored on a wild pitch.

Johnson and Miller led the Carolina Dairy hitting with two each, NCNB got only two hits off Deal.

In the second game, NCNB suffered again. Pepsi pushed over five in the second to take the lead. Doug Causey reached on an error and stole second. He took third on a passed ball and scored on Macon Moye's single. Bill Ellington singled and also stole second. Leavy Brock singled to score Moye and David Dixon singled in Ellington and Brock. Curtis Lee then got a hit to score Dixon for a 5-0 lead.

In the fourth, they came up with four more. Lee walked and stole second. He gained third on an error and scored on Bobby Dough's single. Causey reached on an error and Moye was safe on another, scoring both runners. A hit by Ellington brought in Moye for a 9-0 advantage.

In the fifth, two more crossed the plate. Dixon walked and stole second. Lee singled and Doug walked. A balk brought in Dixon and another scored Lee.. The final Pepsi run came in the sixth. Moye singled and took third on a passed ball. He came around to score on an error.

NCNB got both of its runs in the sixth. Kelly Heath walked and George Martin doubled. Joey Cherry doubled, driving in both runners.

Lee and Moye each had two hits to pace Pepsi, while Cherry had two to pace NCNB.

Pirates Rally To Win Seventh Straight

Woody's Ramblin's

By WOODY PEELE

Greenville was saddened Thursday morning by the death of Boyd Huff, Greenville Golf and Country Club pro. Huff died of a heart attack during the early hours of the day.

Only the second pro in the history of the club, Huff came to Greenville only a short time ago, when the first pro, Harold Thomas, purchased Brook Valley Country Club and moved there as its owner-pro.

A good friend of Ben Hogan, Huff had the reputation of being on the of the finest teachers in the Southern part of the country. He came to Greenville from Texas, where he once served as an assistant to the legendary Wee Ice Mon.

During the few years he was in Greenville, Huff became a great patron of the East Carolina University golf team, which played its home matches on his course. He aided Coach John Welborn with the team, and accompanied them to the Southern Conference tournament four years ago, when the Pirates won their first title in the sport. Since then, they've won two more titles, missing out only one year in the past four.

The search for a new pro will be getting underway shortly. But Boyd Huff will be missed.

We are glad to be able to report that Osborne Meteye, Rose High School basketball coach, is now at home recuperating from a heart attack he suffered just before the end of the school term.

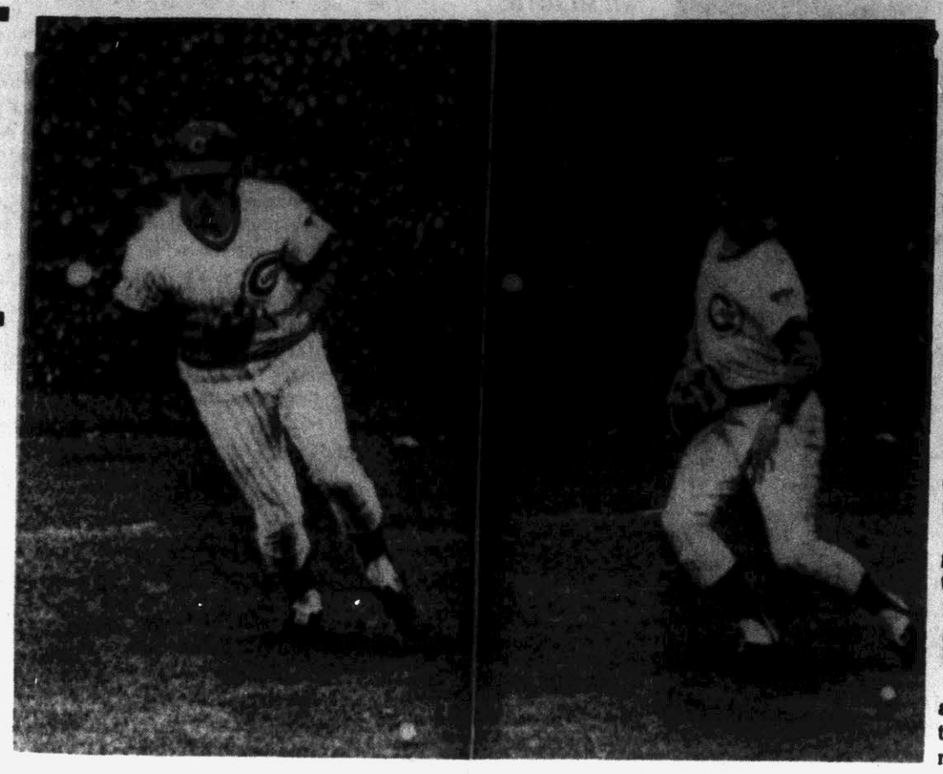

Oz has asked us to pass along his best wishes for the "prayers, cards, letters, visits and well wishes" he has received during the past few weeks.

Wiht all the water Hurricane Agnes has dumped onto the eastern part of the country, rivers are swelling with flood waters. One picture came over the wire showing the Allegheny River flowing over a bridege spanning it.

One person questioned whether Three Rivers Stadium, standing at the junction of the Allegheny and the Monongahela to form the Ohio, might be flooded. It was also wondered whether Riverfront Stadium in Cincinnati might suffer the same fate later as the waters rose further down the Ohio.

"Maybe we'll be hearing about the Louisville Pirates and the Memphis Reds if the floods get bad enough," he added.

East Carolina University's Pirates rallied from three runs down to pull out a 10-inning 5-4 victory over the University of North Carolina Friday night.

The win helped the Bucs to solidify their hold on first place in the league, bringing their record to 7-2. They have now won seven in a row. They were scheduled to play the University's Wilmington branch Saturday night.

Carolina had forged a 4-1 lead after four innings, but Tommy Toms, who earlier took a 3-1 12 inning win over Heels, shut them out after that, despite several threats.

The Bucs slowly came back, getting one in the fifth and two in the eighth to tie it up. Then in the tenth, Toms won his own ball game batting a single with the bases loaded to end the gane.

Toms also knocked in the third and fourth runs of the game for the Bucs, proving the hero in more than one way.

The victory was his third of the season, against one loss. Mike Merritt, the Carolina ace, took the loss in relief.

The Tar Heels pushed ahead in the top of the first inning. Russ Niller hit the first pitch into center for a base hit, and Mickey Hickerson parked the second against the centerfield fence for a run-scoring double, but Toms put out the fire after that.

The Bucs came right back with one to tie it up. Mike Bradshaw led off with a double to almost the same place as Hickerson. He advanced on an out and scored when Ralph Lamm singled. Larry Walters followed with a hit and Ron Staggs was intentionally walked, but the next two fanned to keep the Pirates from moving ahead.

In the second, North Carolina pushed over two runs to take the lead. Randy McNeil singled and with one away, Ron Merritt walked. John Danneman followed with a single, scoring McNeil with the go-ahead run. Niller singled, driving in Merritt for a 3-1 lead.

In the fourth, the Heels added another. Don Davis walked and moved up on a wild pitch. Merritt moved him up with an infield out, and Danneman hit a sacrifice fly to score him.

Carolina didn't get off another threat until the seventh. Danneman led off the inning with a single and was sacrificed up, but died there. In the eighth, Jack Leachman led off with a walk and moved to third on Tom Kennedy's single, but also waited out the rest of the inning there. One more threat came in the 10th. McNeil reached on a fielder's choice that left two out and he stole second. Davis was walked intentionally, but again Toms snuffed out the rally.

The Bucs, unable to get anything going, finally put together some Carolina mistakes for a run in the fifth. With one out, Jimmy Paige beat out a bunt to third. Then, with two down, Walters hit a ball to deep short and when the play was made to second, the ball was dropped, leaving Pagie safe. Carolina catcher Niller then tried to pick off Walters off first, but threw the ball away, and Paige raced home from second to make it 4-2.

Then, in the eighth, the Bucs came up with two more to tie it up. Staggs walked and with one down, Vern Summerall also walked. Ron Leggett hit a single to short left, loading them up. Toms then stepped to lash a single to left, scoring both Staggs and Summerall.

The Bucs came up with the winning run in the 10th. With one down, Troy Eason singled and was replaced by Russ Smith. Ken Strayhorn walked and Leggett again hit one to left, loading them up. That left it up to Toms to be the hero, and he did it. His hit through the middle brought Smith over, ending the game and preserving the win streak.

Following Saturday night's game in Wilmington, the Pirates will return home to play host to Louisburg on Monday at 7:30 p.m. at Harrington Field.

It will be the first of three home games during the week. The Bucs play host to Campbell on Tuesday, and then host Louisburg again on the second annual Chamber of Commerce night on Thursday. Tickets for that game will be available free of charge from all participating merchants.

Jamieson Builds Big Lead In Western Open

By BOB GREEN
Associated Press Golf Writer

NORTHBROOK, Ill. (AP) — Jimmy Jamieson, a moon-faced nonwinner on the pro tour, forged a four-under-par 67 and established a whopping eight-stroke lead Saturday in the third round of the $150,000 Western Open Golf Tournament.

The chunky Jamieson, playing the unusual role of gallery favorite, posted a 54-hole total of 202-11 under par on the 6-716-yard Sunset Ridge Country Club course.

Veteran Tommy Aaron, who matched Jamieson's 67 as the best round on the cool and cloudy day, was a distant second at 210 with one round left in the chase for the first prize of $30,000.

Jamieson, who carries 215 pounds on a 5-foot-10 frame, had a three-stroke lead starting play and ended the day with the biggest 54-hole margin on the tour this year.

Doug Sanders slipped to a three-over-par 74 and headed a group of five tied for third at 211.

Also at that figure were J.C. Snead, Steve Oppermann, Bob Lunn and Bobby Nichols.

Nichols had a 69, Lunn 68, Snead 73 and Oppermann 70 despite a triple-bogey six on the sixth hole.

Billy Casper, with a 68, was one of five at 212. Defending champion Bruce Crampton of Australia managed only a 73 and was well back in the back at 219.

Jack Nicklaus, who won the U.S. Open last week, Arnold Palmer, Lee Trevino and South African Gary Player are not competing.

Jamieson was trailed by a huge and highly enthusiastic gallery of fans from his hometown and rewarded them with consecutive birdies on the third and fourth holes after saving par when he missed the green on the opening hole.

"The gallery helped a lot. A lot of them were from home," said the 29-year-old Jamieson. A four-year regular on the tour who has yet to win and lost his exempt status last season when he failed to make the top 60 money winners.

He holed a nine-foot putt on the third hole, wedged up to about eight inches on the fourth and stretched out the lead with a 25-foot birdie putt on the ninth.

That put him out in 32, three under par, as he continued to dominate the front nine. In three rounds, he's 11 under par on those nine holes.

Most of the rest of the field—with the exception of Aarion—backed off in the growing pressure and Jamieson pulled away. He made a deuce from three feet on the 11th, bogeyed the 15th from a bunker, missed birdie from five feet on the next hole but made it from 20 on the 17th.

Jamieson, who already has a career record of $47,603 in earnings this year, came to national attention when he made a surprise challenge in the Masters earlier this season, then threatened twice in the last month—at Philadelphia and in the Kemper Open at Charlotte, N.C.

The cheerful, personable young man said he had a plan for Sunday's final round when he will seek his first tour triumph.

"There must be about 500 people here from Moline and the Quad Cities area," he said with a big grin.

"We're going to have a meeting tonight and I'm going to give them their orders. I'm going to have them packed around every green.

"And if I ever hit one into the gallery, it's going to look like a handball court—bang, right back on the green."

Hayes Swapped To Baltimore

By GORDON BEARD
Associated Press Sports Writer

BALTIMORE (AP) — Coach Gene Shue of the Baltimore Bullets will face a dual challenge next season: rebuild the National Basketball Association team and find a way to handle Elvin Hayes.

Both projects were set in motion Friday night when the Bullets acquired the controversial "Big E" from the Houston Rockets in exchange for Jack Marin and undisclosed "future considerations."

Although the Bullets won division titles in three of the last four seasons, their record has dropped steadily from 57-25 in 1968-69, to 38-44 last year. Shue figured it was time to make a move.

"When you have a damned good team, changes aren't necessary," he said. "But if you're on a downward spiral, it's silly to sit back and accept it. With this trade, I think we face the prospect of turning the tide."

Marin, a 27-year-old, 6-foot-6 forward, averaged 16.7 points per game in six NBA seasons, including a career high 22.3 last year when he was named to the All-Star team for the first time.

Hayes, a 6-9 center who is a year younger, has averaged 27.4 points and 16.3 rebounds per game in four seasons. He also was among the league leaders in personality conflicts.

In Houston, President Ray Patterson of the Rockets said Hayes was not traded because of his differences with Coach Tex Winter. And Shue said, "With a change in location, we hope Elvin will have a change in attitude."

Hayes has scored more points, 8,996, than any other player during the past four years and his 5,351 rebounds ranks second only to his new teammate, Wes Unseld.

With his acquisition, the Bullets finally will be able to shift the 6-7½ Unseld from center to forward.

Shue said Hayes would open at center, but play outside to take advantage of his shooting. Unseld will continue to play inside as a forward, and possibly play center against certain opponents.

In the 1968 college draft, the now defunct San Diego Rockets won a coin toss with Baltimore for the No. 1 choice and selected Hayes. The Bullets then took Unseld.

Hayes led the NBA that season with a 28.4 scoring average. But Unseld was named both the Rookie of the Year and the league's Most Valuable Player.

Ali: Quarry May Be Tough

By JACK STEVENSON

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Muhammad Ali admits Jerry Quarry might be stronger than he and hit harder.

"But I'm skillful and creative and artistic and I'll beat him," the former world heavyweight boxing champion declares of his Tuesday night 12-round bout against the Southern California Irishman.

"I've boxed against stronger men and beat them," Ali adds. "I hit hard enough to hurt and I've boxed so regular and I'm hitting so fast that I'll win.

"Thinking and speed wins heavyweight fights, not just strength."

Quarry had declared earlier he was the physically stronger of the two and would put pressure on Ali in this rematch of their 1970 bout in Atlanta when the Irishman was cut in the third round and the fight stopped.

Ali stands to earn $500,000 for the Quarry fight at the Las Vegas Convention Center yet he looks ahead to an even bigger payday, another multi-million dollar meeting with Joe Frazier, the heavyweight king who beat him last year.

"He's got to fight me to clear the slate," the ex-champ said after Friday's workout.

Ali ranks as the No. 1 heavyweight contender and Quarry No. 2. On the same card, Jerry's brother Mike challenges champion Bob Foster for the light-heavyweight title.

At Friday's training session at Caesar's Palace, the crowd of about 2,000 was told, "Muhammad Ali has enjoyed entertaining you for the past several days, but as the time of the fight approaches, he asks that you help make this a serious training session."

Quarry, who at about 197 pounds will be about 20 pounds lighter than Ali, said of the first fight, "I learned then I had nothing to fear. He can't punch hard."

Schaefer Washed Out

By BLOYS BRITT
AP Auto Racing Writer

MOUNTPOCONO, Pa. (AP) — Heavy rains and serious flooding conditions in the area have washed out this weekend's qualifying runs for the $400,000 Schaefer 500-mile auto race at Pocono International Raceway.

Race officials announced Friday that the 33 fastest cars for the July 2 championship event will be selected in time trials next Thursday and Friday.

The 2.5-mile raceway, unique because it features two long straights and one short one and only three corners, was closed today. Officials were to decide later in the afternoon whether any activity would be allowed Sunday.

Rains associated with tropical storm Agnes had shut the track down five of the six scheduled practice days.

The race, No. 2 event in USAC's "triple crown" series that includes Indianapolis and Ontario, Calif., drew 45 driver-car entries. However, only 29 drivers had been able to get on the track.

Among these who managed to practice last Tuesday, the only day of activity, were last year's inaugural Schaefer winner, Mark Donohue; Indianapolis pole winner Bobby Unser, and Mario Andretti, Al Unser, Joe Leonard and Gordon Johncock—all of whom are candidates for up-front starting spots

Bobby Unser clocked the fastest practice time, 185.299 miles per hour, some 12 miles faster than Donohue's 172.967 m.p.h. pole speed of last year. Donohue, Andretti and Johncock got around in excess of 180 m.p.h.

Among top entries who had had no practice time were Pete Revson, the No. 2 qualifier at Indianapolis, and Gary Bettenhausen, who led more laps in the May 27 classic than any other drive.

Sports Briefs

NEW YORK (AP) — A record attendance of 8,192,034 for the regular season and the 1972 Stanley Cup playoffs was announced by the National Hockey League Friday.

President Clarence Campbell said the regular season attendance was 7,609,368. Attendance was 582,686 for the 36 playoff games.

The regular season attendance was 351,691 more than the 7,257,677 for the 1971 campaign and also marked the 12th straight year that attendance figures have been up.

REGGIO CALABRIA, Italy (AP) — The United States scored five runs in the third inning on its way to a 10-0 triumph Friday night over Italy and the championship of a five-nation softball tournament.

Canada beat Zambia 7-4 and tied for second place with Holland, which did not play Friday.

Marlin was clocked at 163.625 miles per hour in his 1972 Monte Carlo.

Viking Club Meet

HOLLYWOOD—The Viking Booster Club of D.H. Conley High School will meet Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at the school.

The purpose of the meeting will be to organize for the 1972-73 season and make plans for the coming year.

All interested boosters of Conley athletics are urged to attend.

Petty On Pole For Texas 500

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
Associated Press Sports Writer

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (AP) -- Richard Petty established himself as the man to beat by winning the pole position in Sunday's Lone Star 500 NASCAR race, but Bobby Allison, who also will be on the front row thinks there is another man to beat—the weatherman.

"It is going to be tough on the drivers and crews and the fans too," Allison said Saturday after a practice run at Texas World Speedway, where temperatures jumped to the 90s.

Petty, the current leader on the Winston Cup Grand National Circuit, and Allison, ranked third going into Sunday's race, will occupy the two front row positions with qualifying times of 169,412 miles per hour for Petty and 167.836 m.p.h. for Allison, drivinghis 1971 Monte Carlo.

Bobby Isaac had the third fastest qualifying time at 165.005 m.p.h. and will be joined on the second row by Lee Roy Yarbrough at 162.316 m.p.h.

Isaac will drive a 1971 Dodge and Yarbrough will drive a 1971 Ford.

Petty has won four NASCAR events this year and finished second three times, all in his 1972 Plymouth. Petty, however, will be driving a 1972 Dodge here.

Petty agreed that heat will play a factor in Sunday's race.

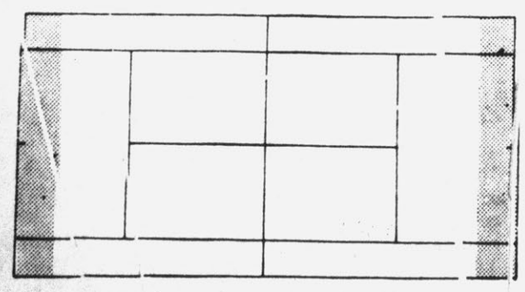

"We ran a little better than we figured (during qualifying rounds), but if you run as fast as you can in this heat, you don't know how the car, the tires or the drivers are going to hold up."

Petty and Allison have been duelling each other for the first 15 races of the Winston Cup circuit and they could not resist a chance to duel some more in a practice session Saturday, running neck and neck with each other for several laps.

Qualifying Saturday were Tiny Lund, 72 Chevrolet, 157.895 m.p.h.; Dean Dalton, 71 Mercuty, 165.092; Duke May, 1972 Ford, 152.245; John Sears, 1970 Plymouth, 152.588; Henlry Gray, 1972 Thunderbird, 147.647; Johnny Anderson, 1972 Monte Carlo, 145.974, and Ronnie Chumley, 1972 Chevelle, 136.402.

HIT THE BALL DEEP

It's been said many times that the player who keeps the ball deep is usually the one who wins matches.

While this may not be always true, it generally proves to be correct. The reasons behind this are that the shots which land in the back three feet of the court are the most difficult to return and they give you more time to set up for the return shot.

Carolina Dairy Upset; Pepsi, Planters Get Babe Ruth Wins

Carolina Dairy lost out on its chance to ice at least a tie for the Babe Ruth League title Friday night, falling to last place College View, 8-6. In the other games, Planters Bank nipped North Carolina National Bank, 8-6, and Pepsi-Cola bombed Home Builders 29-13, in the completion of a halted game.

Pepsi took the lead in the first game in the first inning, scoring two runs. David Dixon singled and T. J. Payne got a hit. Curtis Lee walked, loading them up and Bobby Dough singled to score both Dixon and Payne.

Home Builders came up with a run in the bottom of the first. Chris Manning singled and stole second. He scored on Ricky Harris' hit.

In the second, Pepsi scored four more runs to take a 6-1 lead. Billy Ellington walked and Dixon reached on a fielder's choice. Payne walked to load them up. Lee reached on an error, scoring Ellington and Dixon. Dough hit a sacrifice fly to bring in Payne, and Doug Causey singled to score Lee.

The top of the third saw Pepsi score three more to take a 9-1 lead. Ellington walked and took second on a wild pitch. Payne walked and so did Lee, loading them up. A balk scored Ellington and Dough singled in both Payne and Lee.

In the bottom of the third, however, Home Builders rallied to score six runs. Daryl Roebuck walked as did Jon West. Manning reached on a fielder's choice and Jim Wilkerson was hit by a pitch, forcing in Roebuck. West and Manning scored on wild pitches and Carlton Walls reached on an error. Joe Godette also reached on an error, scoring both Wilkerson and Walls. Billy Glidewell singled to drive in Godette, cutting the lead to 9-7

Home Builders added one in the fourth, while Pepsi came up with five more in the fifth to wrap it up. Payne walked and stole second. Dough slapped a homer. Causey singled and stole up, while Macon Moye walked. A wild pitch scored Causey and Levy Brock and Frankie Davis both walked. A wild pitch brought Moy over and Dixon singled to score Brock. That made it 14-8, a lead Home Builders couldn't overcome.

Pepsi then added three in the sixth and two in the seventh to finish off their scoring. Home Builders got three in the sixth and two in the seventh to end it.

Dough and Causey each had three hits for Pepsi, while Payne had two. Harris had two to pace the Builders.

College View grabbed the lead in its game in the first with a run. Jim Averett got it, hitting a homer.

Carolina Dairy tied it up with one in the second. Wesley Deal walked and took third on two wild pitches. He scored on an error.

The third saw College View go back ahead with two more. Keith Jones reached on an error and Lee Moore singled. Jim Buck singled in Jones and a balk scored Moore, making it 3-1.

In the bottom of the third, however, Carolina Dairy came up with four to take the lead, 5-3. Wayne Miller singled and stole second. Kevin Walker singled Miller in and also stole second, taking third on an error. Wesley Deal reached on a fielder's choice and a passed ball scored Walker. Leonard Williams reached on an error and another passed ball brought in Deal. Williams scored on a wild pitch.

Carolina Dairy added one more in the fourth. Dickie Johnson walked and a passed ball advanced him. Wayne Miller singled him in.

College View came up with three to tie it at 1-6 in the sixth. Ron Hunt walked and stole second. Bobby Gadrow was hit by a pitch and Bill Wilson doubled to score Hunt. A passed ball let Gadrow score and Greg Sasser brought in Wilson with a hit.

The winning runs came in the ninth. Jones doubled and scored when Moore got a two-bagger. Jim Buck singled to score Moore with the final run Planters came up with three runs in the first to take the lead in its game. Bobby Sasser singled and Wayne Elks got a hit. Ed Connolly reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Sasser. Greg Jester reached on an error, bringing in Elks and Connolly.

In the second, NCNB got a run. Robert Bellesheim reached on a two-base error and scored when Jeff Smith was safe on another error.

In the third, NCNB came up with three more to take a 4-3 lead. Jack Jenkins reached on an error and Donnie Haddock singled. George Martin singled in Jenkins and Jimmy Radford walked. Joey Cherry sacrificed to score both Haddock and Martin.

In the bottom of the third, Planters scored one to tie it Jester got it all with a homer Planters went back ahead in the fifth with a run. Connolly reached on an error and Jester was safe on a fielder's choice Dennis Christiano singled to score Connolly.

Three more came over in the sixth, wrapping it up. Sasser singled and Elks got a hit. Both moved up on a passed ball and Jester walked. Christiano grounded out to score Sasser. and Mel Boyd singled in Elks and Jester.

NCNB came up with two more in the seventh. Haddock doubled and stole third. He scored on Martin's grounder that was errored. Radford walked and Bellesheim singled in Martin

Padres Win Behind One-Hitter By Arlin: Colbert Hits Homer

By TOM EMORY
Associated Press Sports Writer

Steve Arlin's two-hitter against Pittsburgh last Sunday was a hard act to follow but he managed to do it with a one-hitter against San Francisco.

The San Diego Padres' right-hander was brilliant all the way against the Giants Friday night but he still needed a three-run homer by Nate Colbert in the eighth inning to give the Padres a 4-1 National League victory.

Arlin and Giant left-hander Sam McDowell locked in a pitching duel that lasted until Colbert's shot. Garry Maddox got San Francisco's only hit when he tripled in the second and scored on a sacrifice fly by Alan Gallagher.

"It was the same pitch I struck out two batters on in the first inning," Arlin said.

Arlin, 7-6, walked three and struck out eight while McDowell, 8-5, walked four and struck out four in seven full innings.

In other National League baseball games, Cincinnati thumped Houston 7-1, Los Angeles edged Atlanta 2-1, Pittsburgh defeated Chicago 4-2, Montreal trimmed Philadelphia 2-1 and St. Louis at New York was rained out.

Cincinnati regained first in the NL West as Ross Grimsley pitched a five-hitter and was backed by Jonny Bench's 19th homer of the year. Bench's three-run circuit in the fourth, a single run in the fifth and three runs in the eighth gave the Reds a half-game lead on Houston.

The Astros scored their lone run when Grimsley cut loose a wild pitch in the ninth with a man on third.

Frank Robinson's 10th homer won the game for Los Angeles before its largest home crowd of the season, 53,107. His sixth-inning shot following Willie Davis' double put him in a tie with Eddie Mathews and Ernie Banks for career homers with 513. The Braves loaded the bases with none out in the seventh but managed just one run.

Robert Clemente drove in two runs with a windblown triple as the Pirates rallied for three runs in the fourth. The victory over Chicago was Steve Blass' eighth straight and raised his record to 9-1.

Right-hander Mike Torrez, 8-3, of Montreal and the Phils' Jim Nash pitched scoreless ball for seven innings before Oscar Gamble drove in a Philadelphia run. The Expos loaded the bases in the eighth and Ron Fairly singled in one run and Ron Woods drove in the winner with a sacrifice fly.

Brewers Shock Fans, Win 8-1

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

On "Ten Cents A Beer Night" in Milwaukee, the Brewers rolled out the barrel and had themselves some fun.

A crowd of 20,865 turned out to take advantage of the beer sale and watch the Brewers play Boston. And some of the patrons might have thought they had tipped one too many when they saw the "6" go up on the scoreboard for the home team in the fifth inning.

The home team Brewers, in case you haven't noticed, have not exactly been tearing up baseball's American League. Only three times all month had they scored as many as six runs in an entire game and here was the scoreboard man asking the fans to believe six runs in a single inning. Was he in the beer too?

Nope. It was true. The Brewers did indeed have a six-run inning and wound up whipping Boston 8-1.

Elsewhere in the American League Friday night, New York tripped Cleveland 4-1, Kansas City shut out Minnesota 5-0, Texas edged Chicago 4-3 and California beat Oakland 2-1. Detroit's game at Baltimore was rained out.

Ken Brett allowed just three hits in eight innings to earn the Brewers' sudsy victory—his first triumph since May 10. Did it mean anything special since it came against his ex-teammates? Not at all.

"I'm glad to win even if it's against the girl's softball team across the street," said Brett. "I've got a long way to come back. I haven't won in six weeks.'

The Yankees stretched their winning streak to six games—longest in two years. Fritz Peterson earned the victory on a six-hitter.

The victory left third place New York 5½ games behind Detroit in the American League's East Division.

John Mayberry had a big night for Kansas City, driving in four runs, three of them on an eighth inning homer as the Royals whipped Minnesota.

Dick Billings' eighth inning single drove home the winning run for Texas as the Rangers knocked off Chicago.

Ted Ford and Frank Howard both rocked knuckleballer Wilbur Woof for Texas home runs. But Howard, for one, was impressed with the floater.

Nolan Ryan fired a two-hitter and struck out 10 Oakland batters including seven in the first three innings, pitching the Angels past the A's.

Bob Oliver's ninth inning homer broke a 1-1 tie to give Ryan his seventh American League victory in 12 decisions.

Sets New Prep Mark

DENVER (AP) — Alvin Jackson, a 6-3, 235-pounder who throws the shot, discus and hammer but will be going to Penn Statethis fall on a football scholarship, had his back to the wall Friday night and he knew it.

"I was in fourth place going into the finals," the 17-year-old from Providence, R.I., said. "I knew I had to do it on my last throw."

What he did was establish a national prep record in the hammerthrow of 191 feet, 11 inches at the National Junior Track and Field Championships. That mark bettered his previous personal high of 180 feet and gives him a shot at making the U.S. Olympic team at next week's trials.

It also gives him a chance to compete against some talented Russian juniors since the top two finishers in each of the 19 events here will qualify for the International Meet against the Soviet Union July 28-29 at Sacramento, Calif.

Jackson's performance was the only record in a day punctuated by gusty winds in which the mile-high altitude took its toll on many of the track performers.

Rice Stadium in Houston will be the scene of the 1974 Super Bowl game. The date is Sunday, Jan. 13.

Meadowbrook Nearing Title

Meadowbrook Presbyterian moved closer to clinching the American Division title in the Church Softball League Friday night, beating St. James, 15-11. Meadowbrook needs only two victories to claim the title.

Only Presbyterian, a forfeit winner over Belvoir, can catch Meadowbrook. In the other games Friday night, First Christian nipped St. Gabriel's, 6-4, and Mount Pleasant beat Trinity, 14-11.

Meadowbrook is now 11-1, Presbyterian is 5-5, St. James is 3-9, Christian, 4-8; Belvoir, 3-9; St. Gabriel, 4-8; Mt. Pleasant, 6-7; and Trinity, 5-6.

Meadowbrook moved into the lead in the first with a run, but St. James came back with three, including a homer by J.J. Harris to take the lead in the bottom of the inning. Meadowbrook then reallied to score nine runs in the second and take a 10-3 lead. St. James came up with three in the third to cut it to 10-6, but Meadowbrook put it out of reach in the top of the fifth.

Bucky Roebuck and Carson Heath both singled to open the fifth and Vic Wade walked, loading them up. Linwood Owens doubled in three runs and Bobby Harris reached on an errorl Carl Powell doubled to drive in the last Meadowbrook runs.

St. James tried to rally, getting five in the bottom of the fifth, but it wasn't enough.

Gabriel took the lead in tis game with a first inning homer by Bernie Colardo. They add two more in the second, but First Christian came up with three in the fifth, including a homer by S. Randle, to tie it at 3-3. St. Gabriel went back ahead with a run in the top of the sixth, but a homer by J. Jones tied it for Christian in the bottom of the sixth.

Christian then scored two in the seventh to win it. D. Davis singled and with two out, B. West slapped a two-run homer to end it.

Trinity moved ahead in the final game, scoring four runs in the second, including a homer by J. Adams. Mt. Pleasant came up with two in the third on Travis Doughtie's homer, but Trinity went out, 9-2 with five in the fourth, including homers by D. Bowen and R. Silby. Mt. Pleasant scored one in the bottom of the fourth and four in the fifth to cut the lead to 9-7. Trinity got two more in the top of the sixth for an 11-7 lead.

Then, in the seventh, Mt. Pleasant came up with seven runs to win it. Glen Roper and Buddy Teel both singled and Bobby Bullock and Doughtie got hits. Harold Barnes and Willie Wallace singled and Abe Corey hit into a fielder's choice, getting Doughtie at the plate, but leading the bases loaded. Poe Worthington then ended the game with a grand-slam homer, giving Mt. Pleasant the victory.

Huey's Captures Another Victory

Shirley's came out on the short end of two games in the City Softball League last night. They fell to Hardee's, 9-0, then lost to league leading Huey's, 14-11.

Huey's now holds a 12-1 record in the league, while Hardee'a is 7-7. Shirley's is 6-9.

In the first game, Hardee's got all the needed in the first inning, scoring four runs. Jimmy Evans reached on a single and William Nichols was safe on an error. Robert Nichols hit into a fielder's choice getting William Nichols. Wayne Avery walked, loading the bases and Charles Meeks doubled in two runs. A passed ball scored Avery and Tommy Meeks singled in Charles Meeks.

Hardee's added four in the second, including a homer by Robert Nichols, then got one more in the fourth.

In the other game, Shirley's pushed over three runs in the first to move ahead, but fell behind in the second when Huey's came up with four. Shirley's went back out with two in the third, but fell behind again when Huey's scored six in the fourth, including homers by K. Hungate and J. Hicks. Shirley's came back with six in the fifth to move ahead, 11-10, but Huey's scored three in the bottom of the frame to cop the win.

Hungate singled and Hicks got a hit. Tucker then reached on an error that let all three runners come around to score, making it 13-11. Huey's added one more in the sixth to wrap it up.

Integon Wins; Graniteers Lose

Integon won its first game of the season, and the Exchange continued its domination of the Graniteers in the Tar Heel Little League Friday afternoon. Integon rolled to a 19-11 win over the Elks, while the Exchange took a 6-5 victory over the Graniteers.

In the opening game, Integon jumped on the Elks for 10 runs in the top of the first. Michael Walker reached on an error and moved up on a wild pitch. Bobby Wiggins was hit by by a pitch and both advanced on a passed ball. Howard Tucker walked to load the bases. Sandy Abbott singled in both Walker and Wiggins and a passed ball scored Tucker. David Houston walked and stole second and Blair Smith walked. Jeff Miles singles in Abbott and Houston and another passed ball scored Smith. Jimmy Miles singled in brother Jeff and he took second on a passed ball. Wiggins singled and Tucker doubled to score Jimmy miles. Abbott got a hit to score Wiggins and Tucker for ax10-0 lead.

In the second, they added two more. Jeff Miles doubled and Bruce Redgate slapped a home run. That made it 12-0, more than the Elks could overcome.

Elks came up with one in the bottom of the second. Reggie Spain doubled and took third on a wild pitch. Don White singled him in.

In the third, Integon came up with four more to make it 16-1. Tucker reached on an error and Abbott singled. Both moved up on a passed ball and Houston walked. Smith doubled in Tucker and Abbott and Jeff Miles doubled to score Houston and Smith.

Integon later added two in the fifth and one in the sixth. The Elks scored four in the third, six in the fourth with Spain homering to wind it up.

In the second game, the Graniteers pushed into the lead with a run in the first. Timmy Allen reached on an error and stole second. Kevin Haut walked and Sam Hardy did too. A passed ball then scored Allen.

In the second, the Graniteers came up with another run. Mike Moye did it all with a homer.

In the bottom fo the second, however, the Exchange came up with four runs to take the lead. Rodney Swain singled and stole second. Pep Cox walked and Allan Clark also did, loading the bases. A wild pitch scored Swain and John Cleetwood finished things off with a home run.

The Graniteers came back with three in the third to move ahead again, 5-4. Allan walked and stole second, scoring when Haut doubled. Chris Moye singled and Hardy grounded out, scoring Haut. Mike Moye reached on an error, scoring Chris Moye with the final Graniteer run of the day.

The Exchange tied it with one in the third. Cliff Fearington walked and moved to third on a wild pitch and a passed ball. Bobby Boseman hit a sicrifice fly to score him with the tieing run.

In the fifth, the Exchange got the winning run. Eric Deal reached on an error and was wild pitched to second. Cox singled him to third and Clark reached on an error, scoring Deal with the sixth and winning run for the Exchange.

Jaycees Fall To Coca-Cola

Coca-Cola edged past the Jaycees Friday in the North State Little League, taking an 11-7 victory.

The win left Coke with an 8-4 record, while the Jaycees are just the oppositie, 4-8.

The game was scoreless until the third, when Coke pushed over four runs. Mark Berbert walked and Gary Chapmen also won a free trip to first. Ronnie Chapman singled, loading the bases. Jerome Ross then doubled to drive in Berbert and Gary Chapmen. Ronnie Chapmen scored on an out and a passed ball brought Ross over.

The Jaycees came up with three in their half of the third. Joey Mathias reached on an error and moved up on a passed ball. John Winstead was awarded first on interference and Bill Collier doubled in Mathias. Danny Boyd walked and Lance Weatherington singled to score Winstead. Grey Guthrie walked, bringing in Collier.

In the fourth, Coke added another run. Will Sanderson walked as did David Lowe. Both advanced on a passed ball and Gary Chapman singled in Sanderson.

The Jaycees also scored one in the bottom of the fourth to stay one back, 5-4. Charles McLawhorn did all the damage with a home run.

The fifth saw another Coke run score, but the clincher came in the sixth, when they scored five runs. Ronnie Chapmen led off the inning when hit by a pitch and Joe Downing reached on a fielder's choice. Passed balls scored Champan and Rusty Lilly doubled in Downing. David Johnson singled and Sanderson got a hit to score Lilly. Passed balls brought both Johnson and Sanderson around with the final runs.

The Jaycees tried to get a rally going, coming up with three runs in the bottom of the sixth. Mathias reached on an error, took second on a passed ball and scored on McLawhorn's single. McLawhorn went down on Collier's fielder's choice and Boyd slapped a homer to end the scoring.

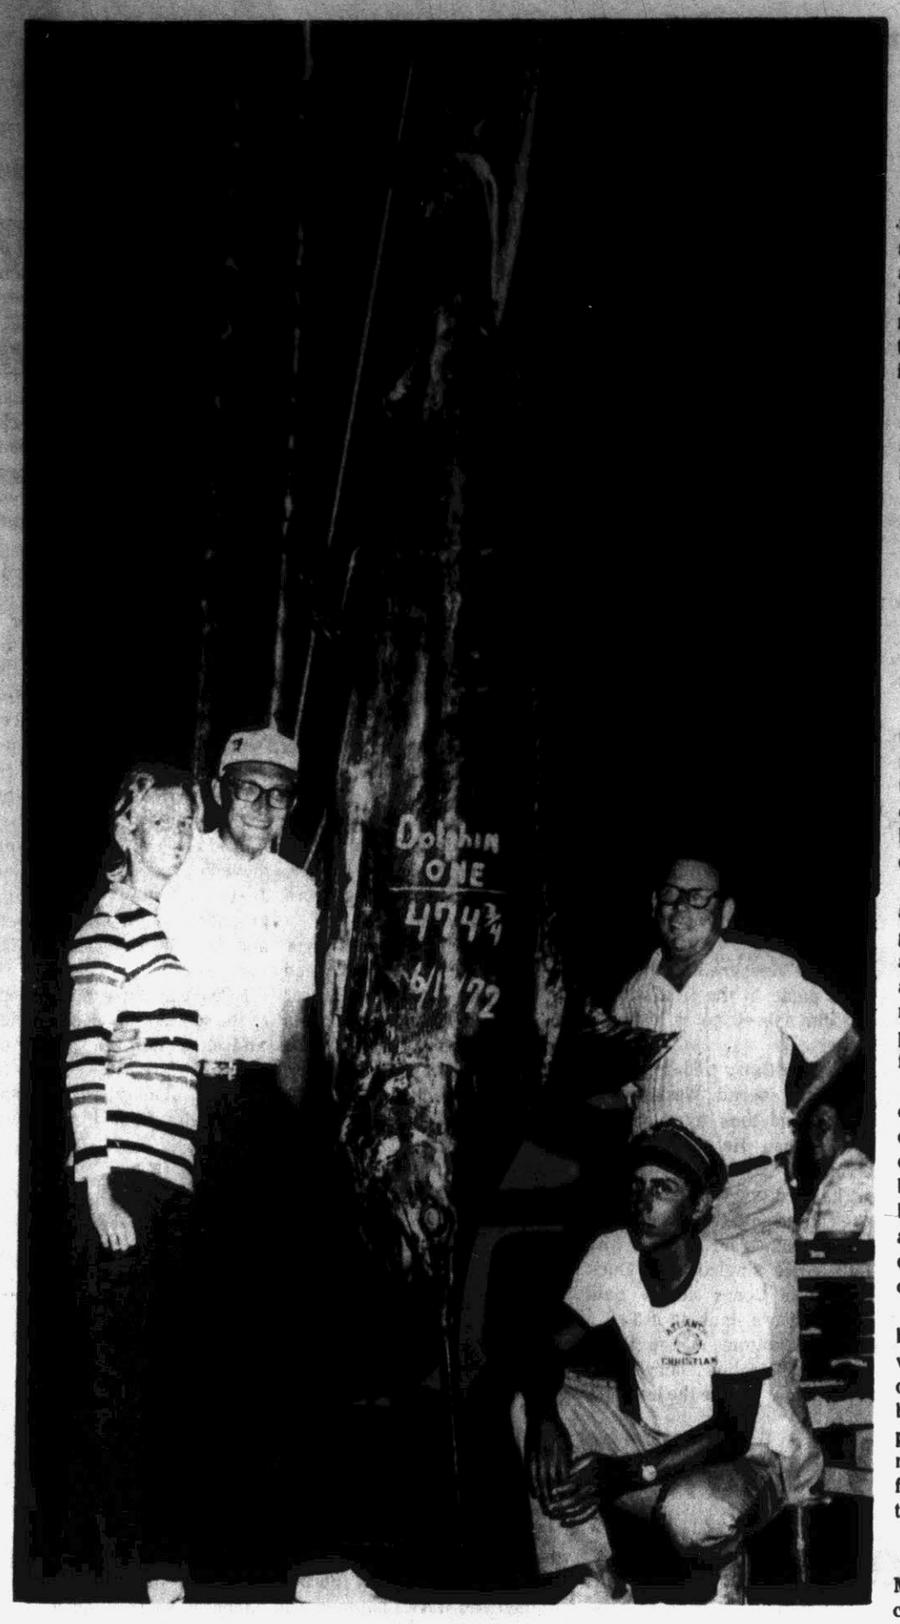

Ross and Johnson led the Coke hitting with two each, while McLawhorn, Collier, Boyd and Weatherington each had two for the Jaycees.

Quite A Haul

Wildlife Afield: Trout Killed

When hatchery assistant Owen Taylor looked out the window of his house at the Waynesville Fish Hatchery early Saturday morning on May 20th, he knew something was wrong right away. There was no water flowing through the hatchery's raceways. His first thought was that some trash had blocked the intake pipes.

He ran out in the drizzling rain and headed for the intake pipes at the dam. He could see trout lying in the raceways. It looked bad. Most of them were not even flopping.

When Owen reached the dam which stored water for the raceways, it was obvious that trash had nothing to do with the drained receways-unless, that is, you consider "trash" an accurate name for a vandal.

Someone, perhaps several people, had sneaked into the hatchery grounds during thenight. The vandals had pulled the boards from the hatchery intake dam, stopping the life-giving flow of cold, clear, oxydenated water.

Without the water, most of the trout in nine concrete raceways died-a total of nearly 20,000 trout. Every one of the dead fish had been ready for stocking. They ranged between eight and 10 inchers long.

Most of the fish-some 10,743-were brown trout. There were also 4,606 dead brook trout and 4,554 dead rainbow trout. Twenty additional "show" trout were also killed. These trout, all rainbows, were kept at the hatchery in a display pool for visitors. They were big fellows-ranging from 18 to 24 inches long.

"I don't understand why anyone would want to do anything like this," said Hatchery Superintendent Johnnie Byrd. "Whoever did it wasn't trying to steal fish. It was just willful damage."

Byrd and his men wound up burying the dead fish, and North Carolina's trout streams will have 20,000 fewer fish this year than was originally planned.

"It could have been much worse," said Byrd. "These fish were surplus trout that we were going to stock. We had already finished our regularly planned stockings for the year."

Vandalism is relatively rare at the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission's fish hatcheries, but there have been other instances.

"We've had occasional vandalism at the Weldon rockfish hatchery," said Don Baker, chief of the Division of Inland Fisheries, "and we've had a few problems at other areas.

"During this past year, hatchery officials at the Armstrong Creek trout hatchery heard a dog barking in the middle of the night. They got and surprised a couple of men who had backed a pickup truck up to one of the raceways and were busily filling it up with trout. The men got away before they had taken enough trout to hurt us."

Baker believes that the vandalism at the Waynesville Hatchery might have come from someone who was irked over the installation of some new security night lights.

"I'm just guessing, but it may be that somebody had been taking a few trout occasionally at night without our knowing it," said Baker. "When we put up security lights, they realized that they weren't going to be able to steal fish anymore so they waited until one night when it was raining and pulled out the boards on the intake dam to get even.

"What the vandals don't seem to realize is that they are just hurting themselves and other fishermen," added Baker.

At any rate, security lights have been or are being installed at all the trout hatcheries and hatchery personnel are keeping a close watch to prevent the murder of future hatchery stocks.

Junked Automobiles Used To Make Reefs

By JACK WOLISTON

NEW YORK (UPI) —A lot of those junked automobiles that mar the landscape and the thousands of tires they wore out on their way to oblivion are being put to a useful purpose on ocean bottoms.

They are being used to build artificial reefs where fish will gather to feed on the mussels and other organisms which attach themselves to the reef material. This in turn, will provide a happy hunting ground for the boating fisherman.

Junk car reefs have been constructed in a number of coastal areas in the past decade on an experimental basis and, according to marine biologists, have been a big asset in helping to restore diminishing coastal fish resources.

One of the first reefs was built in Maunalua Bay, Hawaii, where 443 cars were spread over 13 acres of virtually barren bottom. Biologists reported that within seven months an estimated 10 tons of fish had taken up residence in the area.

Fish On First Day

At Paradise Cove near Malibu in California, a small car-body reef sunk at 50-foot depth was reported to have attracted fish only a few hours after it was down. Over a 30-month period, 49 different species of fish were counted in the reef area.

In most instances, the biologists reported, car wrecks stayed in place on the bottom and were not scattered by storms or currents. However, the cars rusted away in three to five years and the reefs had to be replenished every few years.

The use of worn-out tires to construct artificial reefs is a more recent development, with about 80 such projects now under construction in East and Gulf Coast waters. They will consume an estimated 300,000 old tires, and experts predict that about 500,000 old tires will be sunk every year as new reefs are created.

Bundled and Weighted

Thousands of worn-out tires are being sunk to form the first of a series of reefs near the island. The tires are compacted and bundled in a special machine, then each bundle is weighted with concrete to anchor it to the Gulf bottom.

Initially, the tires are being placed 20 feet deep in units of 100, 250, 500 and 1,000 bundles per acre. Future observations by scientists of the Marco Applied Marine Ecology Station will determine the optimum number of tire bundles per acre.

"The artificial reef has been attracting fish as well as fishermen for years," says George P. Spinner, Deltona's director of environmental management. "Essentially, it starts the food chain almost immediately. It provides shelter for the smaller fish, and for the larger fish it is a reference point, as well as a food source."

MARSH WORLD

WETLAND SPARROWS

Two small, elusive sparrows are found in the wet grass and sedge areas around marshes. Leconte's likes the dense long grass habitat of the outer edge while the sharp-tailed sparrow prefers grass and sedges in an inch or two of water. Nests are on the ground or just above water. Both sparrows are dark brown, with streaked backs, buffy underparts and a bold face pattern. Leconte's has a bright, almost orange face with a greyish cheek patch, the sharp-tailed has a similar head pattern but colors duller, it has heavier streaking on the underparts.

Softball Tourney Being Planned

The 1972 District Three Slow-Pitch Softball Tournament will be held at George Davis Field in Meadowbrook Park in Rocky Mount beginning July 17. For the fourth straight year, this tournament will be sponsored by the Rocky Mount Jaycees on behalf of the North Carolina Amateur Softball Association. Entries for this tournament are now being accepted from teams in the district which includes Tarboro, Rocky Mount, Nashville, Spring Hope Washington, Williamston, and Plymouth among others.

Last year 35 teams, including 27 men and 8 women, played 69 hard fought softball games that saw Pepsi Cola of Rocky Mount in the man's division and Blue Creek Paintettes of Jacksonville in the women's division emerge victorious.

Teams which did not receive invitations may enter by sending a roster of players and a $30 entry fee to cover state registration to the Rocky Mount Jaycees, 308 Alford Building, Rocky Mount, N. C. 27801 Attention Softball Tournament Committee. Deadline, June 30.

The closing dates of the tournament have not been determined yet as the number of teams will not be known until after the deadline. Admission to the games for spectators will be 50c for adults and 25c for children. The Rocky Mount Jaycettes will be working with the Jaycees to operate concessions at the tournament. Meadowbrook Park has facilities for small children to play when not watching the games.

Funds derived from this tournament will be returned to the community through Jaycee and Jaycette community projects.

Virginia Offers Many Facilities For Camping

If you're a "Trailer-traveler," the V in Virginia stands for vacationland, because the Old Dominion is dotted with places to pitch your tent or park your rig.

Between the Atlantic Ocean and the Allegheny Mountains there are more than 18,000 campsites in 200-plus state-approved private and public campgrounds.

The location of the parks make it possible for camping families to enjoy a "recreational mix" that would be hard to match anywhere else in the world. And the availability of the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel simplifies traveling from one section of Virginia to another. Although nature in the form of the Cheasapeake Bay, divided Virginia into two parts—the narrow coastal peninsula known as the Eastern Shore and the mainland-engineers tied the state together in 1964 with the 11 .4 mile-long structure that goes over and under the Bay.

The Eastern Shore, north of the Bridge-Tunnel, claims 10 of Virginia'a campgrounds, with six of these being in or near Chincoteague. Because of their close proximity to Assateague Island National Seashore and the 9,000 acre Chincoteague National Wildlife Refuge, these campgrounds are particularly popular with fisherman, bird watchers, photographers, swimmers, shell collectors and beach browsers.

When the "natural life" begins to pall, Virginia Beach, largest resort city in the world, is only 100 miles from Chincoteague, via the Bridge-Tunnel and U.S. 13, Virginia Beach has five campsites, including one state park, within a few miles of the boardwalk.

If the kids soak up too much sun and sand, another refreshing change of scene—Virginia's historic triangle of Williamsburg, Jamestown and Yorktown—is only 45 miles away. And there are at least eight campgrounds in the immediate vicinity. And so it goes across the state from the sea to the mountains.

A convenience for all motorists—it cuts 95 miles and about 90 minutes driving time between Wilmington, Del., and Virginia Beach—the Bridge-Tunnel really "makes the going great" for camper families. First of all, the Brideg-Tunnel's regulations on compressed gas are much liberal than those of most tunnel facilities. Campers are permitted to go through the structure's two mile-long tunnels with up to two 45-pound capacity tanks of I.C.C.-approved compressed cooking or refrigerating gas. The tank valves must be completely shut off and the tanks must be securely attached to the vehicle.

The Bridge-Tunnel's rate structure also favors families. One-way toll for a passenger car or a two-axle camper vehicle is $5.25; rate for an automobile pulling a two-axle trailer is $10.25. There is no charge for passengers.

Split Pair Of Contests

FARMVILLE — Winterville and Farmville split a doubleheader last night in the Pitt County Babe Ruth League.

Winterville won the first game, 5-3, handing Farmville its first loss of the season. Clennell Streeter was the winning pitcher, while Oakley took the loss. Lionel Streeter led the Winterville hitting with trree, while Clennell Streeter had two. No one had more than one for Farmville.

In the second game, Farmville came back to take a 1-0 win in nine innings. Barry Johnson took the win in that one, while Keith Gould was the loser. Again, no one had more than one hit.

Farmville is now 7-1 in league play, while Winterville is 6-3.

A DELAWARE FAVORITE

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — Eldon Nelson, who won the Preakness Stakes at Pimlico riding Bee Bee Bee, is one of the favorites of summer racing fans at Delaware Park.

Over the years Nelson has won many races at Delaware Park, including such stakes as the Blue Hen and Dover, sprints for 2-year-old fillies.

MORE FULLBACK WORK

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Coach Duffy Daugherty says his main regret about the new wishbone offense used by his Michigan State football team last fall was that the fullback failed to carry the ball more often.

MANAGERS MET

H. H. Howard, Greenville district manager for Pilot Life Insurance Company's Combination Division, participated in Pilot's mid-year managers' meeting last week at the company's home office in Greensboro.

Howard joined with other managers from North and South Carolina and Virginia in work sessions on management principles, motivation and manpower selection.

STOCK SPLIT

The shareholders of The Little Mint Inc. have approved the split of its common stock by reducing the par value from $1 to 50 cents, the company announced. The date of record will be at the close of business July 10 with payment of the additional shares to be made July 28.

Wilber Hardee, chairman of the board of directors and president, said that the convertible debenture has been called, thus giving the firm 787,694 shares of common stock outstanding after the split. The debenture conversion increases the stockholders equity to more than $900,000 he said.

The Little Mint chain presently has 36 family drive-in restaurants operating with 10 additional units under construction. Hardee said it is projected that some 50 units will be operative prior to Dec. 31.

JOINS DEPARTMENT

Richard N. Fallon, M.D. has joined the Medical Department of Burroughs Wellcome Co. and in his new position in the Clinical Investigation Section will be responsible for studies in infants and children of both investigational and marketed drugs.

Fallon is a native of St. John's, Newfoundland. He received his B.A. degree from Holy Cross College and his M.D. from the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine.

JUST RETURNED

Officials of the Pitt-Greene Production Credit Association have returned from Atlanta where they attended the annual conference for directors and executive officers of Production Credit Associations and Federal Land Bank Associations in the Carolinas, Florida and Georgia.

F. L. Little Jr., association president, said that the conference was held June 11-13 and was sponsored by The Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Columbia, S. C., and The Federal Land Bank of Columbia.

Little said that program topics during the session included future plans for PCA's and FLBA's; a panel discussion by the commissioners of agriculture representing the Carolinas, Florida and Georgia; an address by E. A. Jaenke, governor, Farm Credit Administration; and a concluding address by Dr. Norman Vincent Peale of New York.

The Pitt-Greene PCA is currently serving 1,039 farmers with loans totaling $14 million in Pitt and Greene Counties. Home office is in Greenville and the branch office is located in Snow Hill.

In addition to Little, other officials attending included Alton Gardner of Rt. 2, Ayden, board chairman; W. F. Welfare Jr. of Snow Hill, vice chairman; Chester Don Worthington Jr. of Rt. 1, Greenville, director; David Harold Smith of Rt. 2, Ayden, director; and Charles H. Harper of Snow Hill, director.

COMPLETED COURSE

Mrs. Linda Ward and Mrs. Terry Shank, both brokers with The Louis Clark Agency, and David Nichols, D. G. Nichols Agency, have completed Course B of the North Carolina Realtor's Institute.

The Institute, in its 25th year, is held by the North Carolina Real Estate Educational Foundation at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Course B, taught June 11-17 at UNC, included classes in law and taxes, finance, appraising, brokerage, communications, creative management, and sales techniques.

NEW GENERAL MANAGER

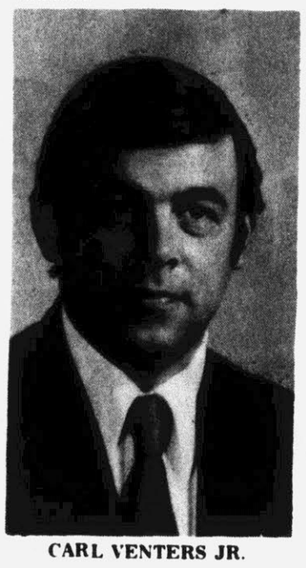

Carl V. Venters Jr. has been appointed general manager of Durham Life Broadcasting Services, Inc., WPTF & WPTF-FM, effective Monday, according to an announcement by Richard H. Mason who will continue in his capacity as president, treasurer and director until his retirement later this year.

Owner of WFAG Radio Station in Farmville, Venters has served as president and general manager of the station since 1960. He is also the publisher of a weekly shopping newspaper in Pitt County, and served as the first chairman of the Mideast Economic Development Commission.

Venters has served as president of the Rotary Club in Farmville, the Chamber of Commerce, United Fund, the Farmville Golf and Country Club, and was recently selected 'Man of the Year' by the Chamber of Commerce.

He served as manager of WUNC-FM during his senior year at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and graduated with a degree in Radio, Television and Motion Pictures.

Venters, a major in the U.S. Marine Corps Reserve, is married to the former Bobbie Lee Hamby and they have three children.

CARL VENTERS JR.

FIRMER STAND

Carolina Telephone reported that it is taking a firmer stand against fraudulent telephone usage that is costing the company an estimated $600 per day in 1972.

Pat Kelly, head of the company's security department, said that Carolina Telephone has recently implemented "much more aggressive fraud control procedures" as part of a toll fraud control program emphasizing strong preventive measures, early detection, prompt investigation and vigorous prosecution when warranted under state or federal criminal codes.

The official reported that through the first six months of 1972, there have been 13 arrests and eight convictions for toll fraud in the area served by Carolina Telephone. Five cases are pending in court. He added that in North Carolina, making a fradulent call is a crime punishable by a $500 fine or six months in jail and if the call crosses the state boundary, it then becomes a federal offense punishable by $1,000 fine and not more than five years in prison or both.

An Exciting War On Street Crime

EDITOR'S NOTE — It was quiet; the moon cast a light; the woman seemed asleep. The perfect setup for a mugging or robbery. But as the prowler moved in on his victim, hell broke out. Following is a report on New York's latest elite anti-crime group and how it operates.

By MALCOLM CARTER
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A figure in denim stole from the shadows of Central Park, his eyes flashing in the glow of mercury street lights.

He looked downtown, toward the lights of Broadway, and then uptown, past blocks of fashionable apartment houses and a string of benches against the park wal.

Four benches uptown, he saw a woman seemingly asleep, chin on chest. She wore a loose gray dress with white polka dots, and a white shawl against the summer night's chill. A beige pocketbook hung from her right arm and rested at her hip. Her stringy black hair straggled into her eyes.

But the shadowy figure could not know that the woman was a decoy, a policewoman in wig and costume.

Neither could he know that 16 eyes were watching his every move. They belonged to operatives of New York's new elite police unit, the City-Wide Anti-Crime Squad—CWACS, which has been waging all-out war on street crime here.

This is what happened one night recently in mid-Manhattan:

Because this normally peaceful area where lovers stroll, residents walk dogs and indigents sometimes nap has had a run of muggings and purse-snatchings, the eight policemen disguised as hippies, cab drivers, and thugs had lain wait four hours.

Across Central Park West, a street running for 51 blocks alongside Manhattan's biggest park, a police lieutenant with a Mickey Mouse patch on his dungaree jacket sat in an unmarked car and studied the prowler.

Ready to cut his potential escape route through the park were three other policemen.

Thomas Sullivan, in bell-bottom jeans and funny hat, sat holding a styrofoam jug he had taken from a garbage pail and had "filled" with a walkie-talkie.

With Sullivan was Robert Lucente, whose Army fatigues, beard and floppy black hat made him another unlikely cop.

Looking to his left, downtown, the prowler barely could have noticed an off-duty yellow taxicab, where Patrolman Kenneth McCann slouched behind the wheel.

On a distant bench sat Patrick Quinn, seemingly absorbed in the newspaper he had been reading all night.

Fred Schroeder also had positioned himself on the street, obscured by the shadows. A slim black in dugarees ambled past the prowler, hardly heeded. He was Don Stewart who might have been a potential mugger, but was another cop.

As the prowler skulked uptown in the direction of 29-year-old Policewoman Mary Glatzel, Motherway breathed into the walkie-talkie, "There's a live one heading her way."

The prowler approached the woman, hesitated in front of her and went on. Half a block away, he stopped, bummed a cigarette, from a passer-by and lit it.

Then he turned toward the woman—known by her colleagues as "Rocky," for her bravery, and "Muggsy," for her success as a decoy. Motherway inched his car closer.

At 10:25 p.m., the prowler plopped onto Mugsy's bench, and the muscles tensed in Motherway's bearded face.

Peering at the motionless woman, the prowler made his move. He sprang toward her and slipped his hand into her pocketbook.

She rose suddenly, brandishing a gun from beneath her shawl. A quick tussle, and the gun barrel slapped against Muggsy's mouth. She fell to her knees, momentarily dazed.

The prowler darted down the sidewalk and swerved to avoid the strangely clad men who popped from everywhere, breaking the evening's tranquility with their shouts.

"Stop!" came a yell. The prowler veered into the intersection where Motherway had maneuvered his car. The headlights flashed on, and the prowler, pursued by a half-dozen gun-wielding patrolmen, raced uncomprehendingly for the vehicle.

The youth could be seen clearly in panic.

Motherway slammed his foot on the brakes. The boy plunged into the hood and slid under the bumper.

Police instantly yanked him to his feet, pressed the uninjured youth against the hood and handcuffed his arms behind his back.

"I didn't do anything," the youth said, over and over. "Taking a pack of cigarettes. That's all I did. I had no bread."

Squeezed into the back seat of Motherway's car on his way to the nearest stationhouse, he muttered in wonderment, "I never saw this before—policewoman on a park bench ... with a gun."

Thus the prowler became the 1,618th person this year to have discovered that potential crime victims, and occasionally accomplices, were really the fuzz.

CWACS was organized last October out of the Taxi-Truck Surveillance Unit, which used policemen disguised as cab drivers in real taxis. The unit played a role in cutting robberies against hacks from 492 in July 1970 to 163 last October.

When the new squad was organized, it acquired wigs, Santa Claus outfits, ice cream vendor uniforms, dresses, wheelchairs, bicycles, crutches and other items for disguise.

It now numbers 220 men, 6 women and 28 supervisors. The waiting list of volunteers is as big as the squad.

Why so many volunteers? Deputy Inspector Anthony Voelker, the commander, says, "Because this is police work the way it should be done."

While the CWACS makes up only .76 per cent of the nation's biggest police force, they account for 1.7 per cent of all arrests here and 3 per cent of all felony arrests.

Its success has led to a $528,000 federal grant, which will supply binoculars, a radio network, theatrical makeup and late-model cars with white-wall tires and jazzy trim not usually found on unmarked police vehicles.

Patrolman Schroeder put it this way:

"This has gotta be the most exciting job in the world."

U.S. warships under Commodore Dewey destroyed a Spanish fleet in Manila Bay May 1, 1893.

If you can't manage now, how are you going to manage later?

Money's tight. You feel pretty lucky if you can stretch your paycheck enough to meet all the everyday expenses. It's harder than ever to save a buck. And how are you going to take care of the future, when you've got enough trouble just taking care of the present?

But, you can manage to save—by joining the Payroll Savings Plan where you work. It's a sure way to get started on a nest egg that you can depend on in the future.

The amount you designate will be automatically set aside from your paycheck and used to buy U.S. Savings Bonds, before you get your check, and before you can spend it.

So, join the Payroll Savings Plan and start on your "secret stash" today. And then just relax and don't worry about tomorrow. You'll manage.

Now E Bonds pay 5½% interest when held to maturity of 5 years, 10 months (4% the first year). Bonds are replaced if lost, stolen, or destroyed. When needed they can be cashed at your bank. Interest is not subject to state or local income taxes, and federal tax may be deferred until redemption.

ELIMINATES COLD POCKETS SO YOU GET MORE COLD CASH AT AUCTION!

EVEN DISTRIBUTION OF AIR MEANS NO COLD SPOTS
COMPLETELY ADJUSTABLE FOR BOTH HEIGHT AND LENGTH

THE NO-SWET™ DEHUMIDIFIER

FOR COLORING
COLORS OVER RIPE . . . UNDER RIPE . . . RIPE . . . TOBACCO—EVENLY IN THE SAME BARN thanks to the patented air diffuser that circulates air from four different levels keeping ripe or over ripe leaves in good condition until greener leaves are ready for curing heat.

Although over ripe or ripe leaves color first the NO-SWET™ DEHUMIDIFIER circulates the air so thoroughly they remain in good condition (no sponging) until the greener leaves are ready for higher heat.

FOR CURING
Fresh air is forced into the barn then the patented diffuser spreads it evenly throughout the barn in thin layers. This forces the dry heated air evenly through the tobacco—eliminating sweating.

The NO-SWET™ DEHUMIDIFIER allows the farmer to cure mixed tobacco over ripe under ripe and greener leaves in the same barn.

It cures with less trash and little fear of sponging which is caused by steam from other drying tobacco.

ADVANCES CURING TIME FROM ONE TO ONE AND A HALF DAYS FASTER • BRINGS TOBACCO TO ORDER ONE TO TWO DAYS FASTER • CAN BE USED TO COOL YOUR BARN DURING HANGING. This secondary use makes the hanging process cooler and easier.

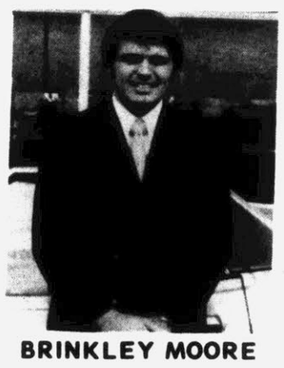

THIS INSURES TOP TOBACCO—TOP PRICES AT AUCTION
PORTABLE . . . CAN BE MOVED FROM BARN TO BARN

THE NO-SWET™ DEHUMIDIFIER WILL PAY FOR ITSELF SEVERAL TIMES OVER DURING ANY NORMAL CURING SEASON AND IN MANY INSTANCES WILL PAY FOR ITSELF THE VERY FIRST TIME IT IS USED. AT THE LOW PRICE OF $225.00

Models available for any size curing barn

Reflector Staff Writer

"Make your baby's food yourself — it's less expensive, free of additives, and handy as your refrigerator freezer."

This is the advice of Mrs. Mary Ann Denny, food counselor with the North Carolina Regional Board of Health here. She is teaching every mother of an infant she can how easy it is to "make your own."

"Any cooked vegetable, fruit, or meat may be used," Mrs. Denny said. Pureeing by using a blender is the easiest method, though mashing and straining through a sieve is too much trouble either.

"It's just ridiculous from a financial standpoint to pay 11 cents a jar for some carrots for the baby when you could buy a bunch of carrots, cook them a few minutes, and make enough for two dozen meals. Or if you don't care to cook at all, you could used canned ones. For convenience, we recommend freezing the pureed foods in an ice tray and then placing the cubes in a plastic bag, according to the number you think your baby will eat. You can even package foods in meal-size combinations, say a yellow vegetable, a green vegetable, a meat, and a fruit.

"If you are cooking a vegetable for the family, it's a good idea to take out a portion for baby and then season, because baby does not need the salt, sugar, butter, grease, or other seasoning, and he doesn't desire these things either unless you make him develop tastes for them."

Additives are the main reason Mrs. Denny says she is against commercial baby foods in jar. "Let's take a jar of beef and noodles, as an example," she said. "The ingredients, listed in order of volume from greatest to least as required by the Food and Drug Administration, are as follows: water, beef, carrots, enriched egg noodles, wheat flour, modified corn starch, potato solids, salt, onion powder, and torula yeast. Think now — in that tiny jar, water is the greatest ingredient by volume. The corn starch and potato solids are both modified starches — amylopectins — which cannot be digested by a young baby because his salivary glands are not yet producing amylase needed to digest these substances.

"The salt has been taken out by two companies recently because consumer advocate Ralph Nader and others have called attention to its inclusion. Mothers who do use bought baby food should check to see if salt is added. It has been proved that six-month-old babies can be hypertensive merely because of too much salt in their diets. Also, it's starting them off wrongly to teach them to expect salt on nearly all foods.

"The onion powder probably isn't harmful, but it's put there to appeal to mother's taste buds, not baby's.

"Sugar has no nutritive value and children should not be encouraged to develop a sweet tooth. I would allow no desserts at all until a child is at least a year old, and then I'd limit them."

She explained part of her reasoning: "A baby eats for calories and as soon as he's satisfied, he stops. Every calorie should be nutritious, not an empty one.

For this same reason she discourages too rigid a schedule for feeding baby. If the mother or even the doctor thinks the baby should eat every four hours, they usually fail to let the baby know. If allowed to, however, he will develop a fairly regular schedule of his own. A mother who forces her infant to eat when he's not hungry often starts an overeating pattern for him. Also, she makes mealtime an unpleasant affair."

What should be included in the baby's calorie quota? 1.8 grams of protein per 2.2 pounds of body weight is generally accepted. In other words, a 22-pound child should have at least 18 grams of protein per day. 8.5 grams may be obtained from one cup of milk, but it should be kept in mind that 15 grams of iron also are needed and milk provides almost no iron. For this reason, Mrs. Denny recommends an iron-supplemented formula and dry-packed baby cereal, which she says is now supplemented with a very digestible form of iron.

Cereal, usually the first thing added to the formula, should come when the baby begins not to be satisfied with milk alone. When formula plus cereal no longer satisfy, add mild fruits and vegetables like applesauce and bananas, green beans, spinich, garden peas, and carrots.

"Gradually add every fruit and vegetable you can," Mrs. Denny said, "so your child will learn to like a wide variety."

"Meats are usually added at four or five or six months. They cannot be digested this early, but they satisfy hunger and they're in the diet once baby can begin to use them. Cooked egg yolk is usually added about the same time. Doctors urge that egg white be left off considerably longer, because it's so likely to promote allergies. Digestion of meats usually begins at about nine to 12 months about the same time baby learns to chew them."

Mrs. Denny strongly advises that anything served to baby be heated thoroughly and then cooled, even the food from jars. "Botulism is too terrible to risk giving it to your baby," she says, "even though chances are no such germs will be present. If they were and you heat, you've killed them. Never serve unused portions of foods left in the refrigerator for over two or three days, also for safety reasons."

If canned fruits are used, she recommends that these be unsweetened types. If syrup-packed types are used, they should be rinsed with cold water to remove as much sugar as possible, she said.

Once baby can chew a little, mother will not have to be so careful about pureeing everything he eats. Even before he can, though, Mrs. Denny urges feeding him with a spoon so the swallowing and chewing muscles can be developed. She abhors the plunger-type feeders and nipples with a big hole used in recent years. She also is against propped bottles, because the baby needs his mother and father's attention as much as the food he consumes.

"All the nutrition points that apply to babies also apply to young children and every other member of the family for that matter, she said — every calorie should be a nutrition-packed one," she said. "It's most important for a baby or small child, however, because he weighs so little and is growing and developing so rapidly and cannot afford to have any of the relatively small amount of food he takes in doing him no good at all. Also, any additives that might be harmful could not be as safely absorbed by him since he weighs so little."

Miss North Carolina Is Concerned About Her Ballet Students

KINSTON — Named Miss North Carolina last weekend, Connie Dorn now has one big concern—what to do about the 30 girls to whom she gives ballet instruction in her hometown.

"My girls all are happy for me," she said, "but I feel badly that I won't be able to teach them next year because of my duties as Miss North Carolina. I'm anxious to talk to a friend in Goldsboro who I know is an excellent ballet instructor to see if she can take over my school for a year. The girls who are serious just cannot afford a year's break in their instruction and practice."

Asked if her own practice would suffer once her promotion duties begin, she said, "I just can't let it happen. There may be some days I can't practice, but I'll have to make them up. I've always been fortunate that I love to dance so much and don't mind practicing. Thirty minutes to an hour and a half daily is essential."

When Miss Dorn goes to Atlantic City, N. J. for the Miss America pageant, she will be accompanied by Mrs. Kemp Stagg, a former Miss South Carolina who is the official Miss North Carolina chaperone; her mother; Mrs. Peggy Little, her business manager who arranges appearances and does other scheduling; and several members of the Kinston Jaycees which sponsored her as the first Miss Kinston in seven years.

For the Miss America talent competition, she says she will once again dance to "Le Grand Holiday" from Wuthering Heights. "I'll probably change the choreography almost entirely," she said, "just as I did between the Miss Kinston competition last November and the Miss North Carolina pageant."

Miss Dorn began studying ballet when she was five years old and started teaching it at 12. Last year she studied under Mavis Ray during her first year at East Carolina University and she called this "a wonderful experience." Asked if she would major in dance, she said, "Yes, if possible. There is no dance major at ECU now, but they tell me there will be one by the time I'm a junior."

During the last two quarters of the past school year, she lived in an ECU dormitory, but went home on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons to teach "her girls." She said she probably always will teach ballet and that she's especially interested in teaching it to handicapped children. "I have a retarded child in my class this year," she said. "It's the most gratifying feeling in the world to see her blossoming. She practices so hard and gets so much satisfaction from learning a new step. Ballet is wonderful for those who have trouble with motor coordination, also. I think it's just being realized that the handicapped can learn and benefit from the arts and I'd like to be a part of it all."

Besides being a talent winner, Miss Dorn won the swimsuit competition in the Miss North Carolina contest with her 35-24-35 figure. Asked if she has any hints for keeping in shape, she said, "No, I just tend to be skinny. I work off what I eat because I'm miserable if I'm not constantly on the go. Of course, my ballet undoubtedly helps with muscle control."

Her other interests besides dancing and her school work are painting and swimming. She said her dating will be severely curtailed during her year's reign, but that what time she has for it hopefully will be filled with Bill Chambers, a University of North Carolina basketball player.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Dorn of Kinston, she has two sisters, Lynette, eight, and Carol, six, and a brother, Leonard Jr., 17. Her father is an accountant for DuPont.

Miss Susan Kay Galloway Weds Saturday Afternoon

The wedding of Miss Susan Kay Galloway and William Henry Worsley was solemnized Friday at 6:00 p.m. in the Saint James United Methodist Church.

An altar arrangement of white chrysanthemums and white gladioli with accents of yellow decorated the church. Fifteen branch spiral candelabra with cathedral candles were accented with a background of jade foliage. The honor pews were marked with bridal satin bows.

The Rev. Christian White performed the double ring ceremony. A program of organ music was presesnted by Frances Cain and Sheila Marlowe sang "We've Only Just Begun," "The Lord's Prayer" and "Be Thou With Them."

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. James Madison Galloway Sr. and Mr. and Mrs. Francis Henry Worsley, all of Greenville.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown which she designed and was made by Christine Purser. The empire style gown had a gathered skirt of chiffon featuring a ruffle at the bottom. The bodice of English lace over chiffon was designed with scallops at the neckline, sleeves and adorned by satin ribbon and lace appliques at the waistline.

Her fingertip veil, edged in English lace, was attached to a cap fashioned of grape leaves. She carried a cascade of yellow roses and baby's breath.

The bride's sister-in-law, Bonnie Galloway, of Winston-Salem was matron of honor and maid of honor was Leigh Galloway of Greenville, sister of the bride.

Bridesmaids were Suzanne Stovall of Wilmington, Cindy Chapman and Patty Chapman, both of Alexandria, Va., all cousins of the bride, and Jean Trevathan of Greenville, cousin of the bridegroom.

The attendants wore formal length mimosa yellow dotted voile gowns designed with scoop necklines which tied in corded voile. The empire bodices featured white lattice lace edged in white Venise lace daisies. Matching trim also banded the long Juliet sleeves. The full gathered skirts were styled with a ruffled flounce bordered in lattice lace and daisies.

They wore mimosa yellow satin double bow headpieces with long streamers. They carried colonial bouquets of mixed summer flowers with white satin streamers.

The bride's mother was dressed in a pink linen A-line dress with cap sleeves accented with darker pink Venise lace. She wore white accessories and white cattleya orchids. The mother of the bridegroom wore a figured chiffon dress with long sleeves, complementing accessories and yellow cymbidium orchids.

The father of the bridegroom seved as best man. Ushers were Tommy Worsley of Greenville, brother of the bridegroom, Joe Allen of Cary, Jim Galloway of Winston-Salem, brother of the bride, Ted Taylor of Grifton, Steve Stowe and Norm Couns, both of Raleigh.

MRS. WILLIAM HENRY WORSLEY

For a wedding trip to Myrtle Beach, S.C., the bride changed into a pink polyester dress, white accessories and wore her mother's corsage.

The bride is a graduate of East Carolina University and taught at the Ayden Grammar School. The bridegroom is a graduate of N.C. State University and is a candidate for a master's degree in aerospace engineering. He worked at Carolina Sales. Corp. and is now a second lieutenant in the U.S. Air Force.

The couple will reside in Warner Robbins, Ga., where the bridegroom will be stationed at Robbins AFB.

Immediately following the ceremony, the parents of the bridal couple entertained the wedding party and out-of-town guests at a dinner at the home of the bridegroom's parents. Goodbyes were said to Mr. and Mrs. Fred Byrd.

Pre-nuptial events honoring the Worsley-Galloway wedding party included a wedding breakfast Friday morning at the Elks Lodge.

Hosts and hostesses were Mr. and Mrs. Guilford C. Worsley, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Turnage, Mr. and Mrs. James R. Worsley, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Worsley, Mr. and Mrs. Richard K. Worsley, Mrs. Augustus Schmidt, Mrs. Rhoderick T. Williams, Mrs. Ann DeLaMater and Robert C. Worsley.

On Thursday evening following the rehearsal, a dinner was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Trevathan honoring the wedding party and out-of-town guests.

Hosts and hostesses were Mr. and Mrs. William C. Haddock, Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Travis Purser, Mr. and Mrs. Trevathan, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Byrd and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Scott.

A luncheon honoring the bridesmaids, their mothers, and the mother of the bridegroom-elect was held at the Three Steers given by the birde's mother and her grandmother.

Sunshine Center Activities Reported

Mrs. Curtis Howell and Mrs. Stuart Buchanan reported on Operation Sunshine activities at the meeting of the Greenville OptimMrs. Club held Tuesday night at the home of Mrs. Joe Johnson.

They said that various supplies had been given to the center for a picnic which was held earlier this week.

Plans were discussed to select two outstanding Operation Sunshine girls according to guidelines taken from the Opti-Mrs. Creed. The girls will be named at the end of the summer program. Mrs. Buchanan will serve as club chairman for the selection.

A letter was read by Mrs. Charles Ross, president, from the State's District Governor, Fay Cardinal, of Charlotte. Mrs. Ross stated that she had attended a silver tea at the Sunshine Center in May.

Mrs. Ross conducted a business session which included several reports. Mrs. C. P. Shaw gave the devotional.

A cookout for members and their husbands will be held Saturday, July 8, at 6 p.m. at the home of Mrs. John Trotman.

Next Time, Serve Him Baked Potato

(© 1972 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: I recently married a widower with a 13-year-old son. Last night I served roast turkey with mashed potatoes and gravy. There were just the three of us. David [that's not his name] started to put his fingers in the mashed potatoes, making "road maps, and rivers and valleys."

I told him it wasn't good manners to put his fingers in his food or play with it. He didn't talk back to me, but he looked at his father for support, and his father said, "It's okay to eat however you want at home, as long as you remember your manners when you eat out or have company over."

David brightened up and continued to make road maps, etc. in the mashed potatoes with his fingers.

You can see, Abby, my husband is the boss and what he says goes.

I told him I was going to write to you and ask how you felt about this and he said, "Go ahead. I'll bet she says I'm right."

Well, what do you say? ANONYMOUS, PLEASE

DEAR ANON: Your husband loses. First, David is much too old to be playing with his mashed potatoes, but more important he should not be allowed to play the "divide and conquer" game, which appears to be what's happening at your house. You and your husband had better get on the same team—fast.

DEAR ABBY: This is my first job and I am ready to climb the walls. I am in a one-girl office with 18 men including my boss. Everything I do or wear causes comments from the men. If I wear a colorful print, someone says, "Where's the party?" If I wear black, they say, "Where's the funeral?" If I wear a short skirt, I hear, "Wow, look at those gams!" If I wear pants, someone says, "Hi, Sam!"

The money is good and I have to work, but I get so nervous from all the remarks around here, I'm a wreck. Can you help me? SENSITIVE

DEAR SENSITIVE: Learn to tune 'em out, or develop a thicker skin. Chances are, they're just being friendly.

DEAR ABBY: I have an explanation for your male reader who said women knit in company to give them something to think about while they're talking.

I learned to knit to give myself something to think about while my husband was talking, which he did incessantly. MEG FROM MINONK

DEAR MEG: Touche. You're great with the needle!

DEAR ABBY: I read your "Confidential to Feeling Guilty," who apparently found a lost pet and didn't advertise to find its owner. You said if a person finds a lost pet and doesn't make every effort to locate its owner, it's as bad as stealing it, or words to that effect.

Well, I disagree! I love animals, and whenever I'd find a lost pet, I used to advertise for its owner, but no more!

Pet owners who let their pets roam around might enjoy having a pet, but they don't really love them.

Why should I spend my good money advertising to find an owner when nine out of ten times the pet is left to roam and gets lost again? JENNIE IN COLUMBUS

DEAR JENNIE: If you love animals, you know the heartbreak felt by one who has lost a pet. To some, it's almost as traumatic as losing a child. Even the most loved and cared for pets sometimes get "lost."

CONFIDENTIAL TO LINDA OF MASS.: Your mother was right. If you have someone else's husband, you have someone else's troubles.

Wedding Invitation

Mr. and Mrs. James O. Taylor request the honor of your presence at the marriage of their daughter, Jackie Carol, to Ronnie Lee Bowen, on Saturday, July 1, at 8:00 p.m. at the Rountree Christian Church, near Ayden. No invitation were mailed.

Beauty Expert Counsels Teens

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Although long-time beauty expert Lucille Bouchard studied to be a school teacher in her native Montreal, and became instead an electrolysis technician, she is using her teaching abilities to make young people more aware of their grooming needs.

In addition to conducting beauty seminars for New York State's Board of Cooperative Education (BOCES), a program that helps potential drop outs learn a trade as they attend regular school classes, she treats and comforts a great many young people who have extreme hair and skin problems.

"The incidence of excess hair growth on girls' bodies has increased fifty-fold in the last few years," she notes. "Some girls have hair lines that grow almost to their eyebrows, others have hair on their faces."

Such problems have existed in other generations, but many people are baffled as to the cause of the large increase in excess hair growth, she comments. In her opinion it is caused by overexposure to the sun—excess hair is nature's way of protecting the skin, but she says in many instances the problem is hereditary or caused by glandular disturbances.

Many young people make the hair problem worse by treating it themselves with bleaches and waxes or by shaving the skin or tweezing the hair.

Mrs. Bouchard warns young people to consult doctors if they need hair removal as there are many inexperienced people doing electrolysis work. Some doctors may consider such treatments expensive and tedious, but Mrs. Bouchard feels every woman wants to be pretty and "the greatest morale builder for a woman is to be admired."

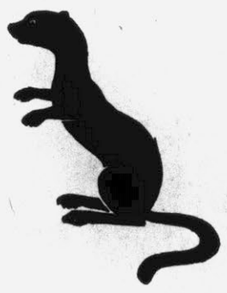

This beauty consultant often has to start from scratch and teach her clients to wash their faces properly. In doing so, she explains that skin is largest organ of the body, and that its real food comes from within by activation of the skin. Exercise, warm water, ice, and applying cream or patting the face will bring blood to the surface that will nourish the skin. When she suggests a cream for problem skin, it is applied after the pores have been opened with hot towels.

In teaching the BOCES group, she stresses personal grooming because "they may never go into the beauty business doing nails and hair, but at least I will have taught them how to be well-groomed for their own satisfaction."

Miss Linda McLawhorn Weds Cecil H. Nuckols

MRS. CECIL HAMPTON NUCKOLS

AYDEN—Miss Linda LaRue McLawhorn became the bride of Cecil Hampton Nuckols on Saturday at 2:00 p.. in the Ayden Christian Church. The Rev. James H. Trader officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Earl McLawhorn of Ayden. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Alice Carolyn Nuckols and the late Mr. Cecil Vandor Nuckols of Richmond, Va.

A program of wedding music was presented by Miss Virginia Belle Cooper. Joe A. Ray of Ayden sang, "More" and Mrs. Dennis Jones of Greenville sang "The Wedding Prayer."

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal length gown of silk organza styled with a high neckline and an empire waistline. The bodice, A-line skirt and chapel length train featured panels of alencon lace.

Her headpiece was an illusion veil attached to a taffeta bow with matching alencon lace. The bride carried a cascade bouquet of white pixie carnations and lily-of-the-valley centered with a white bridal orchid and tied with streamers of satin and tulle.

Miss Teresa Anne McLawhorn of Ayden, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She dressed in a light blue dotted swiss dress designed with an empire waist, short puff sleeves and an A-line skirt.

Bridesmaids were Miss Patsy Lynn Mclawhorn of Ayden, sister of the bride, and Mrs. Gerald D. Frye of Blacksburg, Va. Their dresses were similar to the maid of honor's. All attendants carried single long-stemmed red roses with navy blue and white streamers.

Ronald Lee Nuckols of Richmond, Va., brother of the bridegroom, served as best man. Ushers were Daniel Earl McLawhorn of Ayden, brother of the bride, and Gerald Dalton Frye of Blacksburg, Va.

Mrs. H.W. Gooding of Ayden directed the wedding. Miss Pattie Williamson, cousin of the bride, presided at the guest register.

The mother of the bride wore a street length pink dress with complimenting accessories. The mother of the bridegroom was dressed in a street length light blue dress witt complementing accessories. They both wore a corsage of red roses.

Following a wedding trip to unannounced places, the couple will reside in Manakin, Va.

The bride is a graduate of Ayden High School and Wayne Community College. The bridegroom is a graduate of Hermitage High school, Richmond, Va., and is currently an apprentice electrician, Richmong Va.

After the ceremony a reception, given by the parents of the bride, was held in the fellowship hall of the church.

Assisting were Mrs. James A. Williamson of Ayden, aunt of the bride, and Mrs. Walter B. Proffitt of Manakin, Va., aunt of the bridegroom.

Following the Nuckols-McLawhorn rehearsal on Friday evening, a party was given in their honor by Dr. and Mrs. Wes Gooding and Miss Virginia Belle Cooper at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Gooding.

The house was decorated in a bridal motif. Guests included the members of the wedding party, close relatives and out-of-town guests.

Push-Button Angels Please Hairdresser

BRUSSELS, BELGIUM (WNS) — Hairdresser Louis Legrand has found the perfect way to produce angelic expressions to go with his angelic coiffures. As the lady customer stares into the mirror to regard the finished hairdo, a halo gradually appears above her head in the reflection. "The mirror is wire to produce the halo when I push the right button," explained Legrand. "Even my most shrewish customers become angels with amused smiles when they see it appear."

1 teaspoon vanilla

In an 8-inch skillet over low heat, melt butter; off heat stir in grape nuts; set aside. In a medium mixing bowl beat eggs until thickened and lemon color; gradually beat in sugar, milk, salt and vanilla; stir in grape nuts mixture. Turn into six 6-ounce glass custard cups. Place in shallow pan of hot water having it come halfway up custard cups. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven for 20 minutes, stirring twice at 10-minute intervals; then bake, without stirring, until a silver knife inserted in center comes out clean—15 minutes longer. Chill. Makes 6 servings.

LEMON-APRICOT CHIFFON PIE

A make-ahead dessert that's economical.

1 envelope unflavored gelatin
2-3rds cup plus ¼ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
¾ cup water
1-3rd cup lemon juice
2 eggs, separated
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
1 can (8¾ ounces) apricot halves
3 drops yellow food coloring
8-inch graham cracker pie shell

In a medium saucepan thoroughly stir together the gelatin, 2-3rds cup sugar and salt. Whisk in water, lemon juice and egg yolks. Over low heat stir constantly with a rubber spatula until gelatin is dissolved—about 3 minutes. Remove from heat; stir in lemon rind, apricot syrup (drained from apricot halves) and coloring. Chill, stirring occasionally, until the consistency of unbeaten egg whites. Beat egg whites until soft peaks form; gradually beat in ¼ cup sugar until stiff peaks form. Fold into gelatin mixture. Fold in apricots (cut in small pieces). Turn into pie shell and chill until set—3 to 4 hours. Makes 6 servings.

On The Local Scene

by Rosalie Trotman

Mrs. J. Elliott Dixon of Ayden participated in the 50th anniversary convention activities of the Woman's Auxiliary to the American Medical Association held Sunday through Thursday at the St. Francis Hotel, San Francisco, Calif.

Mrs. Dixon served as chairman of the North Carolina delegation to the event.

The festivities began Sunday afternoon with a multimedia presentation depicting major events and activities in the development of the auxiliary.

Art Linkletter, TV entertainer and author of "People Are Funny," discussed "Changing Patterns in Drug Abuse" on Monday with more than 2,000 physicians' wives in attendance.

The convention closed with the installation of Mrs. Robert F. Beckly of Lock Haven, Pa., as president of the 90,000-member public service, volunteer organization.

Harrison A. Underwood III, president of the Terpsichorean Club of Raleigh, announced today that the 46th annual N. C. Debutante Ball will be held in Raleigh Setp. 7-9.

The formal presentation of statewide society of 207 young ladies from across the state will highlight the weekend activities.

The Terpsichorean Club was formed in 1927 to sponsor an annual ball for the presentation of state debutantes. This year's ball activities will continue in the tradition of making the Debutante Ball an outstanding social event of the year in the state.

On Thursday evening, Sept. 7, the weekend will begin with a reception honoring the debutantes and their parents. The parents will be honored again on Saturday at a reception given by the Terpsichorean Club and the mothers of the debutantes will be honored at a coffee hour given by the honorary chairman of the ball.

Henry Jerome Young has been selected as chairman of the 1972 ball. Mrs. B. Robert Williamson is chairman of the Girls Committee.

Money Becomes Marriage Penalty

LIVERPOOL, England (WNS) — Bookmaker Patrick Whelan proposed marriage to Tricia O'Connel one week and convinced her that she was attractive enough to enter The Most Wanted Woman beauty contest. But now that Tricia has won the contest, the wedding must be postponed until 1972. "The title carried over $20,000 in prizes but includes a year's ban on marriage," explained the 21-year-old beauty. "Pat wouldn't want me to give up money like that."

Girls Interrupt Phone Music

LONDON (WNS)—Male music lovers who telephone the Dial-a-Disc number 160 to listen to the latest hit tunes have complained that call girls have found a way to cut into the line and offer their services for sale. As a typical protester testifies, "A girl's voice came in above the music and requested my number. I gave it, and after I had hung up, she called back and asked to meet me. She said we could discuss the fee later." Telephone engineers have traced the fault in the lines to a Leyton exchange. As one reported, "The party will soon be over, and so will the party line. Now we'll get more complaints than ever."

Kiss Saves The Safe

BRUSSELS, Belgium (WNS) — Secretaries Lucille Spaak and Olga Bruen were having their sandwiches alone in the office when four masked robbers arrived with guns and ordered them to open the safe. The young ladies imagined the men were fellow workers, burst into laughter and offered them one kiss each if they would take off their masks. The robbers refused and fled empty-handed.

Young-Turner Vows Solemnized In Ceremony Saturday Afternoon

DURHAM—The wedding of Miss Ann Chesley Turner and David Palmer Young was solemnized Saturday at 3:00 p.m. in Duke University Chapel here.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Graham Turner Sr. of Durham and Mr. and Mrs. John Brooke Young of Richmond, Va.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore an ivory peau de soie gown with re-embroidered alencon lace. The bodice was appliqued with seed pears.

Her cathedral veil was bordered with alencon lace. The bride carried a bouquet of white Marguerite daisies, stephanotis and orchids.

Miss Patricia Moore of Farmville, Va., was maid of honor and Mrs. Joseph G. Turner Jr. of Raleigh, sister-in-law of the bride, was matron of honor. They wore mint green gowns with an overlay of French ivory voile. The gowns were designed with empire waistlines with a flounce at the hemlines. They carried yellow and shrimp colored Marguerite daisies with baby's breath.

Bridesmaids were Judith Ann Slaughter of Reedville, Va., Mini Hull of Richmond, Va., cousin of the bridegroom, and Mrs. John C. Rogers Jr. of Atlanta, Ga., sister of the bridegroom. They were dressed identical to the honor attendants'.

Miss Elizabeth Nicoll Turner of Raleigh, the bride's niece, was flower girl. She was dressed in a floor length ivory crepe over satin gown with an empire waistline trimmed with green ribbon. She carried a basket of rose petals.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were Joseph G. Turner Jr. of Raleigh, brother of the bride, John C. Rogers Jr. of Atlanta, Ga., brother-in-law of the bridegroom, Clay Walden of Falls Church, Va., John Syman of Durham, John B. Young Jr., brother of the bridegroom, and Lewis Baylor, both of Richmond, Va.

The couple will reside in Richmond, Va., after a wedding trip to unannounced points.

The bride attended Stratford College, Danville, Va., and will continue her education at Virginia Commonwealth University, Richmond, Va. The bridegroom attended Dykes School in Virginia and Ferrum College, Ferrum, Va., he will continue his education in the fall in Richmond, Va.

REMEMBRANCES

NEW YORK (UPI)—Formal weddings may include a flower girl and a page. Both may be given a remembrance they can use immediately or a more sophisticated gift that can be used in their later years. For the flower girl, consider a locket, bracelet, petite pearl pendant, a birthstone ring or religious jewelry. For the page, consider a pen and pencil set, brush and comb set, religious jewelry, birthstone ring, or personalized cuff links.

a KIMBALL
piano never grows old...
only more beautiful with the years

TAKE YEARS TO PAY

Why should we invest in a new piano until we're sure our child will keep on taking lessons?

The best way to insure your youngster's continuing interest in music is to start him on a new, easy-to-play Kimball that makes practicing more fun—there's nothing more discouraging to the beginner than learning to play on an old, stiff-action piano. Your investment in a new Kimball at the start, is the most important contribution you can make to your child's musical education.

STUFFED FILLETS

Stuff Fish Fillets With Blue Cheese

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

If you want to serve fish fillets to company, one of the best things you can do with them is to stuff them. This way they look and taste festive.

The following recipe has an interesting stuffing—blue cheese goes into it and the cheese contributes zing. When we offered this dish at our house it was highly approved. We think you'll like it, and it's easy to prepare. We got it ready several hours ahead, then baked it just in time for serving.

FISH ROLLUPS WITH BLUE CHEESE STUFFING

½ cup butter
¼ cup minced parsley
1 small or medium tomato, coarsely chopped
½ cup minced celery
¼ cup firmly packed blue chees
3 cups soft bread crumbs
1 egg, well beaten
½ teaspoon salt
6 flounder fillets, 1½ to 1¾ pounds
juice of 1 lemon

In a 10-inch skillet over low heat melt ¼ cup of the butter; and parsley, tomato and celery and cook, stirring often, for about 10 minutes. Remove from heat. Crumble in cheese, then add crumbs, egg and salt; mix well.

Spread mixture on fish fillets and roll up each fillet; fasten each with 1 or 2 toothpicks.

Butter an oblong 1½-quart glass baking dish (10 by 6 by 1¾ inches) or similar utensil. Place stuffed fish rolls in dish.

Melt remaining ¼ cup butter; mix in lemon juice; pour over fish rolls.

Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until fish is opaque through and flakes easily when tested with a fork—about 30 minutes. Good served with the juices spooned over rice.

Makes 6 servings.

Valencia oranges grown in Arizona and California sometimes have green tinge at the stem end. It's caused by a natural and harmless phenomenon called regreening that occurs after the fruit has ripened. Both states have laws that prohibit artificial coloring of the fruit.

Couple Exchanges Vows In Saturday Ceremony

WASHINGTON — Miss Marcia Helen Myers became the bride of Ronald Stuart Vincent on Saturday at 4:00 p.m. in St. Peter's Episcopal Church here.

Tommy Hardison of Washington presented a program of organ music.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Gray Blount Myers II of Washington, the bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of ivory silk organza and alencon lace designed with a scooped neckline, empire bodice and straight sheer sleeves. TheA-line skirt was appliqued with lace and the back was accented with a full cathedral length train appliqued with alencon lace.

MRS. RONALD STUART VINCENT

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Horace L. Vincent of Greenville.

Miss Sally Elizabeth Myers, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and Mrs. John G. B. Myers III, also of Washington, sister-in-law of the bride, was matron of honor.

Bridesmaids were Miss Marilyn Vincent and Miss Phyllis Vincent of Greenville, sisters of the bridegroom, Miss Martha Vaughan of Newport News, Va., Miss Kathy Hyatt of Asheville, and Mrs. Logan D. Whitehurst of Morehead City, were bridesmaids.

The attendants wore dresses of yellow linen with Irish lace on the sleves. The dresses featured A-line skirts, empire bodices and trains adorned with Irish lace. They wore matching yellow garden hats and carried baskets of white daisies and yellow roses.

Miss Laura Nobles of Greenville, niece of the bridegoom, was flower girl. She was dressed in a long white linen dress desinged with an empire waistline and A-line skirt. She carried a small basket filled with white daisies and yellow roses.

John Gray Blount Myers IV of Washington, nephew of the bride, was ring bearer.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were John G. B. Myers III of Washington, brother of the bride, Charles Vincent, brother of the bridegroom, Tommy Jordan, Grant Jarman, Jeff Jenkins, Walter Stasavich, all of Greenville, and Malcolm Beaman of Virginia Beach, Va.

The bride is a graduate of St. Mary's Junior College, Raleigh, and is attending East Carolina University.

The bridegroom is a graduate of East Carolina University and is employed by the Pitt County School System.

After a wedding trip to unannounced points, the couple will reside in Greenville.

Reception

Immediately following the cermony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents.

The banquet dining table was covered with a cloth of cutwork Irish linen with an overskirt of organdy and pale blue taffeta.

Mrs. Kemp Huss poured champagne punch and Miss Clara Braddy served the three tiered wedding cake.

The house was decorated throughout with summer floral arrangements and the hall banister draped with smilax.

Miss Lisabeth Dacey presided at the bride's register.

Ping-Pong Is In This Season

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures

A ping-pong table may be absolutely essential to your success as a hostess this summer. It at least will be easier to make your "hostess wings" if you have one in your game room. To hear some hostesses talk, ping-pong tables will be springing out of the walls all over the house.

Ping-pong clubs are emerging in some towns, but it is better to have your very own—and never in the basement—ping-pong set-up.

But enough of the love match, do you know the penholder grip? That is the question. To evolve your very own ping-pong inner circle, one should have one Chinese guest who can provide pointers on the de rigueur grip. You can earn even more hostess points if your Chinese friend can whip up a sharksfin soup at midnight or pull a hundred-year-old bird's egg out of your paddle cap.

If you haven't acquired a ping-pong table, and can't get one in time, you might just get by with last year's tennis courts. But what do you do for fun on a rainy day? Swimming pools aren't the status symbols they were once, either, now that everybody but everybody has one. Many perennial weekenders have their own swimming pools with floating bar and all the cute water toys, floats and chaises. Even apartment dwellers have community pools and rooftop pools. Why should they accept your room and board for the weekend?

Then, too, weekend guests have become more demanding in their entertainment needs. You must provide witty, knowledgeable types for conversation, and your entertainment fare must be au courant.

Time was when a house guest could be amused by simple pleasures. When new math was new you could invite a math whiz to wow them with talk of basic fives and sevens. And there was a time, not long ago, when the local astrologer and graphologist were considered "in" entertainment.

The gourmet even had his day on the social front, paying for his dinner by discussing the great wines, chocolate-covered bees, high cholesterol foods, and the recipes used by the chef to the French premier.

But this year it will be ping-pong all the way, and one good thing about it may be that the guests are active types rather than languid lounge lizards. For one hostess, inviting a particular guest is like giving herself a prison sentence—she just waits for parole, she says.

A good guest knows whether she is worth her weight in filet mignon. After all if she has been entertaining your friends with stories, rather than vice-versa, she may consider herself a social asset who has earned food and loding for so many days. So—how do you tell her the "time is up?"

Engagement Announced

MISS BETSY FAYE KING . . . is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Waylon P. King of Rt. 8, Raleigh, who announce her engagement to James Roy Smith, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Smith of Falkland. The wedding will take place July 23.

Prepare Sausage Polenta Casserole

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Cooks who are on the lookout for a satisfying main-dish casserole would do well to consider Sausage Polenta.

This flavorful dish may be served for supper with a mixed green salad. Crisp bread sticks would also be a good accompaniment.

Because we used half sweet Italian sausage and half hot Italian sausage in the casserole it had plenty of zip. But if you want a blander offering, use all sweet Italian sausage.

SAUSAGE POLENTA

Water
1 cup enriched yellow cornmeal
1 teaspoon salt

In a medium saucepan bring 3 cups water to a boil.

In a small mixing bowl or pint measure stir together the cornmeal, salt and 1 cup cold water; pour into boiling water, stirring vigorously. Stirring constantly, cook until thickened. Cover and cook over low heat, stirring occasionally, for 10 minutes. Remove from heat; stir in ½ cup of the Parmesan.

Pour into a shallow 2-quart glass baking dish (11¾ by 7½ by 1¾ inches) or similar utensil that has been rinsed with cold water. Cool; cover; refrigerate until firm.

When ready to assemble dish, remove chilled mush from refrigerator. Cut mush into 6 pieces; with a wide spatula remove from baking dish. Rinse cold dish with hot water and dry. Spread a small amount of hot Sausage Sauce over bottom of baking dish. Cover with pieces of mush and the remaining Sausage Sauce. Sprinkle with remaining 1 cup Parmesan.

Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until bubbly hot—30 to 35 minutes. Let stand at room temperature about 5 minutes before serving.

Makes 6 servings.

SAUSAGE SAUCE

1 pound Italian sausage
1 medium onion, chopped
2 cloves garlic, crushed
1 can (6 ounces) tomato paste
1 can (1 pound) tomatoes
1 teaspoon sugar
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon oregano
Dash of pepper

Remove sausage from casing. In a 10-inch skillet over moderate heat cook sausage with onion and garlic, crumbling meat with a fork, until it loses its red color. Drain off excess fat. Add tomato paste, undrained tomatoes, sugar, salt, oregano and pepper. Cover and simmer, stirring occasionally, for 30 minutes.

Happiness Is A New Name

CAMBRIDGE, England (WNS)—A nearby village was known as Hungry Hardwick for its poverty status until 51 citizens put together odd plots of land they owned and sold it in one piece as an 85-acre building site. Widow Ethel Fieldhouse, 60, hit the jackpot when she sold the 15 acres she had used only as grazing land for nine heifers. Her take: $432,000. "This is what happens when citizens learn to get together instead of to squabble," she declared. "We'll all have a bit of comfort in our old age. Hungry Hardwick is now Happiness Hardwick."

Nebraska Plan Offers A College Education For All

By PATRICIA KOZA

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI)—Nebraska educational institutions have teamed up on a project proposing to make college courses available for credit to virtually every citizen in the state.

The project goes under the title of State University of Nebraska (SUN). It plans to bring college courses to the home largely through electronic age communication methods, including videotapes, cassettes, telephone and weekly programs on the statewide Nebraska Educational Television Network (NETV).

C. CECIL ELOE, a program officer in SUN, checks over some of equipment used in the Nebraska educational program. (UPI Telephoto)

"Our thinking is that a student should be able to complete a course without ever having to leave his home," explained Dr. Robert D. Brown, professor of educational psychology at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, and SUN study director.

Relies On Media

Billed as "a multi-media, off-campus approach to college," the SUN project differs from experimental programs in other states and countries in that it will rely substantially on electronics to communicate with the non-resident student.

Other institutions which have been using the off-campus approach include the non-residential Empire State College of the State University of New York and the University Without Walls, a joint venture of 18 eastern schools.

Multi-Media techniques have been used by Pennsylvania State University and the City College of Chicago to produce credit courses for both on-and-off-campus students.

The SUN project, headed by Nebraska vice president G. Robert Ross, has been under study for more than a year. It expects to have its first courses available around the beginning of the 1973 spring semester.

"The eventual plan is for 20 first and second year college courses," Brown said. "Our goal is six courses by January of 1973."

On the basis of response to a recent sampling of about 5,000 Nebraskans, SUN researchers have estimated a potential student pool of 14,000 to 24,000 and a potential high school clientele of 2,000. A high school degree will not be a requirement in the program.

The actual enrollment, however, will probably be much smaller, depending on the courses offered and the individual's personal circumstances at the time of actual enrollment, Brown said.

Man Awaits Biology

"One 79-year-old man told us he took his last course when he was 59, but if we'd put together a biology course he'd take it," he said.

"Others told us they hoped to kind of nibble away at courses while they were still working. The diversity overwhelmed me."

The decisions on what courses to offer were based on the survey. Accounting and psychology headed the list of course preferences, and both are already in the production stages. Other courses given high priority include sociology, some forms of history and science, and art appreciation.

All of the courses will be developed by a team of teachers selected from among Nebraska colleges and universities, an educational psychologist and a media technologist.

The weekly NETV programs will be beamed on Nebraska's unique nine-station network from the brand new $3.4 million Nebraska Telecommunications Center on the NU campus. Brown said they will rarely follow the traditional televised approach in which the teacher's face fills the screen for a half hour.

"Rather than the professor standing there lecturing about schizophrenia, for example, the student will see a film illustrating it," he said.

The cost of producing each of the courses will range from $40,000 to $50,000. The bulk of the money is expected to come from the U.S. Office of Education, which has already provided $75,000 in planning funds.

Individual Progress

"Once the courses are put together, however, the students could go at their own rate," Brown said. "The major starting times would probably coincide with semesters, but we're not going to be locked into that."

The basic materials for the course will be contained in a learning kit —inexpensive playback equipment, study guides, reading lists and other audio-visual materials.

Officials estimate that with the anticipated federal support, the cost range will be about $18 per course credit, with a typical college course averaging three credits.

Although NETV is particularly suited to the SUN project, it won't be doing the job alone, Brown said.

The real adaptability of the courses to individual needs will come through the establishment of regional "resource centers."

The centers will be in public libraries, high schools or colleges. They will be spotted across the state, within access of any potential student.

Centers Have Materials

Brown said each center will be staffed by qualified personnel and will contain the required as well as supplemental course materials, including learning kits, lab supplies, playback equipment, reference books and a complete videotape library of all course lectures.

With all the materials available within easy driving distance, the student would not have to rely entirely on being available for the weekly broadcast, he said, and could progress at his own speed

Criticism, Ridicule, Blame, Threats—All Wrong

By DR. HAIM GINOTT

Note to readers: The encounters depicted in my column are designed to serve as a practical guide to improved communication. They are not to be taken literally. They should be adapted to individual situations and individual wasy of speaking.

WHEN THE TEACHER CAME to give Fredrich, 12, his piano lesson, she found him in the middle of a fight with his younger sister over who would have the lesson first

Mother was yelling: "Why do you want to be first when you know your sister is younger and gets tired earlier?" In a mocking tone she added: "You see, Fred, I love your sister more, so I do things that favor her."

Fred shrieked: "I know it. Of course you do. Miss Goody Goody is so sweet. Anything for her. The little pest gets what she wants 'cause she's the baby. I wish I were dead. I don't want any more lessons. So forget it."

Mother said, " Let's not waste more time. Take your lesson, Nancy." Nancy whispered: "I really don't mind switching with Fed. He is so upset. Maybe he has a private reason for wanting to be first.

When Fred's turn came, the teacher called out: "Your time, Fred." "I'm not taking anymore lessons," came the response from behind a closed door. "It's your time now. I'm waiting," insisted the teacher.

Mother started for Fred's bedroom, but the teacher said, "Let me speak with him. I have a feeling that his music lessons are important to him." "Go ahead," said Mom. "You are wasting your breath. He responds only to threats. I personally think he ought to be punished."

The teacher wrote this note on Fred's music paper:

"Dear Fred,

I am waiting for you to tell me the results of the play you were in. It isn't everyone who can write original music for a school play. Even though we collaborated, the lyrics were your original ideas. I'm waiting for an answer — in person.

Fondly,
Your Teacher"

Little Nancy was the messenger. She tiptoed to the door and slipped the note under it. Two minutes later Fred emerged. His face was tear-stained. He said: "My father asked me to play for him. I played badly. Father lost his temper and told me that my playing stinks and that the lessons are a waste of time and money!"

He asked, tearfully, "You don't really suffer when you hear me. Do you?" The teacher answered: "The piano is not an easy instrument. I enjoy the way you play. You seem upset, now. Perhaps you can express how you feel by playing something for me." "I might break the piano," he answered.

Eager to express his anger, Fred chose a military march and played it fortissimo. Then he proceeded with his lesson.

The episode presents a clear contrast between the mother's unhelpful approach and the teacher's helpful one. The mother criticized, blamed , ridiculed, threatened, bossed and enraged. The teacher sympathized, understood, supported, and allowed for symbolic expression of felt fury. Morther spoke in a language of rejection; the teacher, in a languate of acceptance. On approach led to self-hate and. death wishes; the other, to self expression and self appreciation.

ASKING CHILDREN to put requests or grudges in writing often reduces their complaining. Their thinking becomes more accurate and more responsible.

Stuart, 9, left his bed, and came downstairs to tell his mother he couldn't fall asleep. He then asked: "Can I stop my guitar lessons?" The question came as a surprise since Stuart seemed to like his teacher and enjoy the lessons.

Not knowing what had prompted the question, Mother replied. "A decision of this magnitude requires a good deal of thought. It's past bedtime now. Tomorrow morning, please write down on paper your feelings and opinions on this matter. Give us all the details so Daddy and I can help you make a wise decision." This answer satisfied Stuart and he wen back to bed.

As expected, there was no paper and no more complaints. Before his next lesson, Stuart confided that he had lost his music book and feared his teacher's anger. "I guess I'll have to face the music," he concluded... Mother nodded sympathetically, and Stuart went to confront his teacher.

To defuse siblings' squabbles, a sympathetic, understanding approach helps.

Robbery Risk In England Is Up

BUXTON, England (AP) — Risks of armed robberies on banks are so high these days that clerks are entitled to danger money, says the president of the Bank Employers Union. At a conference in Derbyshire, Don Earl estimated the danger element in the job had trebled in recent years. "It is high time the public realized the increasing risks from raids that all bank men and women have to face," he says.

Inmate Labor Is A Money-Loser

BALTIMORE (AP) — The city jail is losing money "because we have all these thieves working for us," says Warden Hiram L. Schoonfield.

"Fifty or 60 inmates who work for us steal faster than you can imagine," Schoonfield told the City Council, saying the use of inmate labor is false economy.

"The other day I had a shakedown in one section and I found more than 40 pounds of chicken."

DOGS ON A COLD TIN ROOF — You've heard about the cat on the hot tin roof but here are dogs on a cold tin roof at Lancaster, Pa. There Chihuahuas, raised by Abram King, are housed on the roof of a stable and have the whole second floor of a barn to roam. They don't fall or jump from the roof. (AP Wirephoto)

Germs In Those Crockery Cracks

LONDON (AP) — Restaurant diners are advised to act as detectives to ensure the food they eat is hygienic. The Association of Public Health Inspectors suggests they keep an eye out for scruffy staff appearance, dirty linen, cracked crockery and greasy utensils.

"Behind the facade of an attractive decor and a tempting menu, these small signs may indicate food in the establishment is unhygienic," the inspectors reported.

TAILORED TO FIT.

There's something distinctive about the look of something that is tailor made. It is more than material or style. The craftsmanship of the tailor has made something that really FITS.

Our editors tailor-make every day's issue of your newspaper to fit the interests of our readers. The material used may come from world, national and state wire services. Other material may be top local or area news. Sports, womens news, feature articles, comics and columnists are all selected and handcrafted with care to fit the needs and interests of the folks in this area.

The result is a newspaper that FITS. We're not trying to be the Wall Street Journal or the New York Times. Our editors just want to tailor make a newspaper that suits you.

PERFORMERS STAND IN READINESS . . . for their entry cue during rehearsals before the opening performance on June 20.

Professional preparation is the keynote to the high standards that characterize productions of "The Lost Colony."

The photographs on this page, taken during rehearsals on Monday before the 32nd season opened Tuesday night, can only hint at the hundreds of separate and group activities involved in making "The Lost Colony" America's best known outdoor drama.

EMPHASIZE THAT PHRASE. . . . Choir director George Trautwein (right) of New York City tells Carlos Castanon of Miami. This will be the second year Castanon will perform the role of John Borden. Trautwein has been choir director for a total of 10 years.

The Lost Colony

Text and Photographs by Jerry Raynor

HAPPILY LADEN...Tom McDonald of Key West, Florida is a third generation participant in "The Lost Colony." A member of the cast in the role of one of the children, Tom doubles up in helping with properties.

From Greenville to "The Lost Colony" via the Williamston-Plymouth-Columbia route, the highway distance is about 125 miles. In late June and early July it is a journey bracketed in beauty. Roadsides are lined with slender stalks of Queen Anne's Lace, daisies, sturdy clusters of Elderberry and masses of orange-gold day lilies. Past Columbia, water lilies bloom on the surface of roadside canals.

The second major route-through Washington, Bel haven, Swan Quarter and Englehard, is roughly 20 miles longer, a distance of approximately 145 miles into Manteo.

Either route leads to the nation's finest outdoor spectacle of drama, music and historic splendor, Paul Green's "The Lost Colony."

On Tuesday night, June 20, 103 talented actors, singers and dancers joined forces to open the 32nd season of the outdoor drama that author Green terms "a symphonic drama."

The history of "The Lost Colony" is a familiar one to long-time residents of this area. For newcomers to Greenville and the area, it might be well to touch on it again briefly.

Essentially, "The Lost Colony" is the story of initial English attempts to establish a permanent settlement in the New World. Sir Walter Raleigh was the moving force behind the attempted settlements.

The first expedition, an all male one, was wiped out by the Indians. The second attempt, a year later, included men, women and children. Plans to send supplies to the colonists were delayed when Queen Elizabeth ruled that ships could not be spared because of the impending threat to England of the Spanish Armada.

Despite the failure to receive urgently needed supplies, the colonists managed to endure two winters on Roanoke Island. Their life was one of struggles against illness, Indian attacks and an ultimatum from Spanish forces arriving in ships to surrender or face being wiped out. Courageously, the colonists resolved not to surrender, and escaped from their seaside settlement into the woods.

By the time the English Queen finally agreed to permit Raleigh to send supply ship to the colonists, the new voyagers found that the colonists had disappeared, leaving behind only the word "Croatan" carved on a tree.

From these facts, North Carolina playwright Paul Green, a Pulitzer Prize winner for his play "In Abraham's Busom," created the first outdoor drama in America. The drama was commissioned as part of the celebration in 1937 marking the 350th anniversary of the birth of Virginia Dare on August 18, 1587. She was the first known child of English speaking parents born in America.

"The Lost Colony" enjoyed immediate popular appeal that resulted in its performance the following year, 1938. Critic John Gasner has called it "America's only epic drama."

Following the inaugural production in the summer of 1937, "The Lost Colony" has been performed every summer with the exception of three years during World War II when a coastal blackout of America made production impossible.

Thus, what began as one phase of observances of a historic anniversary has now passed into the mainstrean of American drama. "The Lost Colony" has been paid the ultimate compliment of being imitated in a growing number of outdoor dramas based on historic events.

After 35 years, however, "The Lost Colony" remains pre-eminent among America's outdoor dramas.

There are several intriguing human interest stories connected with productions of "The Lost Colony" over the past three decades. A few of the current male dancers, for example, first appeared in "The Lost Colony" as toddlers in children's roles. One lady, first connected with the 1936 production, now has the distinction of having a daughter and two grandchildren in the production, making hers a family with three generations of active participants.

Members of the cast and production crew are drawn from local Roanoke Islanders, Tar Heels from other parts of the state, and from persons calling many different states home.

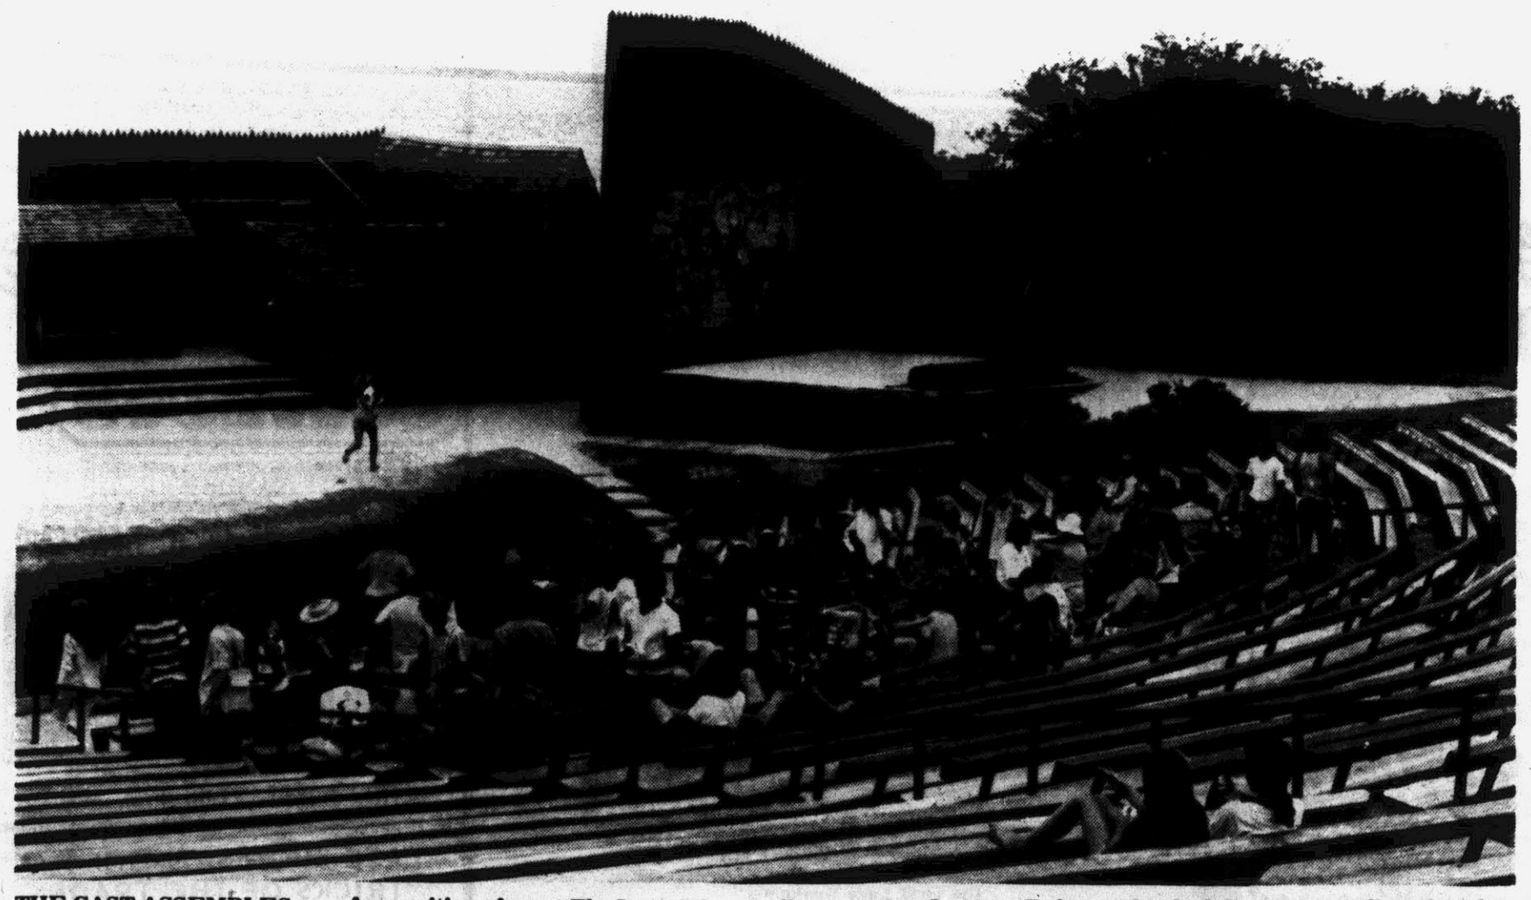

For several years, "The Lost Colony" has had the services of a distinguished director and choreographer, Joe Layton. Layton is a three time Tony Award winner, a two-time Emmy Award winner and a nominee for the Oscar.

From now through August 26, "The Lost Colony" is being presented at the Waterside Theater, Fort Raleigh National Historic Site, nightly except Sundays at 8:30 p.m.

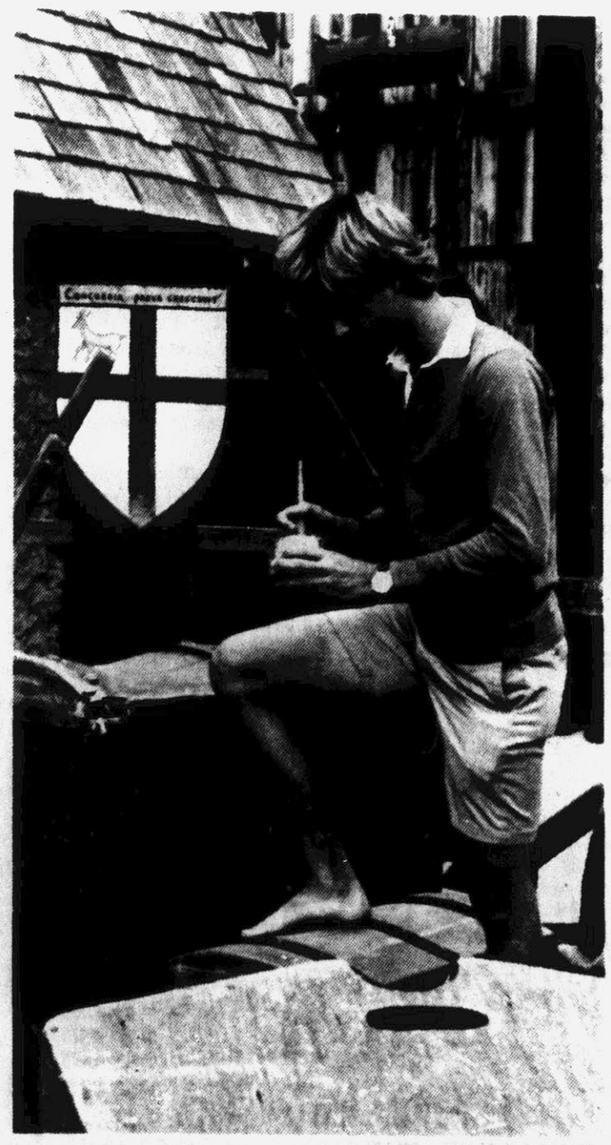

Admission is $3.50 and $2.50 (depending on the section of the theater). For children under 12, admission is half the prices listed. Mail orders and telephone reservations are accepted at: P.O. Box 68, Manteo, N.C., 27954 or telephone 473-2971.

Ideally, taking in a performance of "The Lost Colony" will include going by one of the routes mentioned and returning by another. (The longer route has rewarding stretches of uninhabited greenery not often encountered. An overnight stay is preferable to provide daylight viewing along the way and possible side trips to any number of interesting places.

Whether time permits a leisurely trip or dictates a hasty journey to Manteo and back, "The Lost Colony" is a must for any who have never seen it, and an old familiar pleasure to all who have been once or a dozen or more times before.

THE CAST ASSEMBLES. . . . for a critique from "The Lost Colony" director, Joe Layton. Rehearsal schedules are grueling, but for cast and crew, it's a labor of love.

Eddie Fisher Still Amazes Audience

By RENA PEDERSON

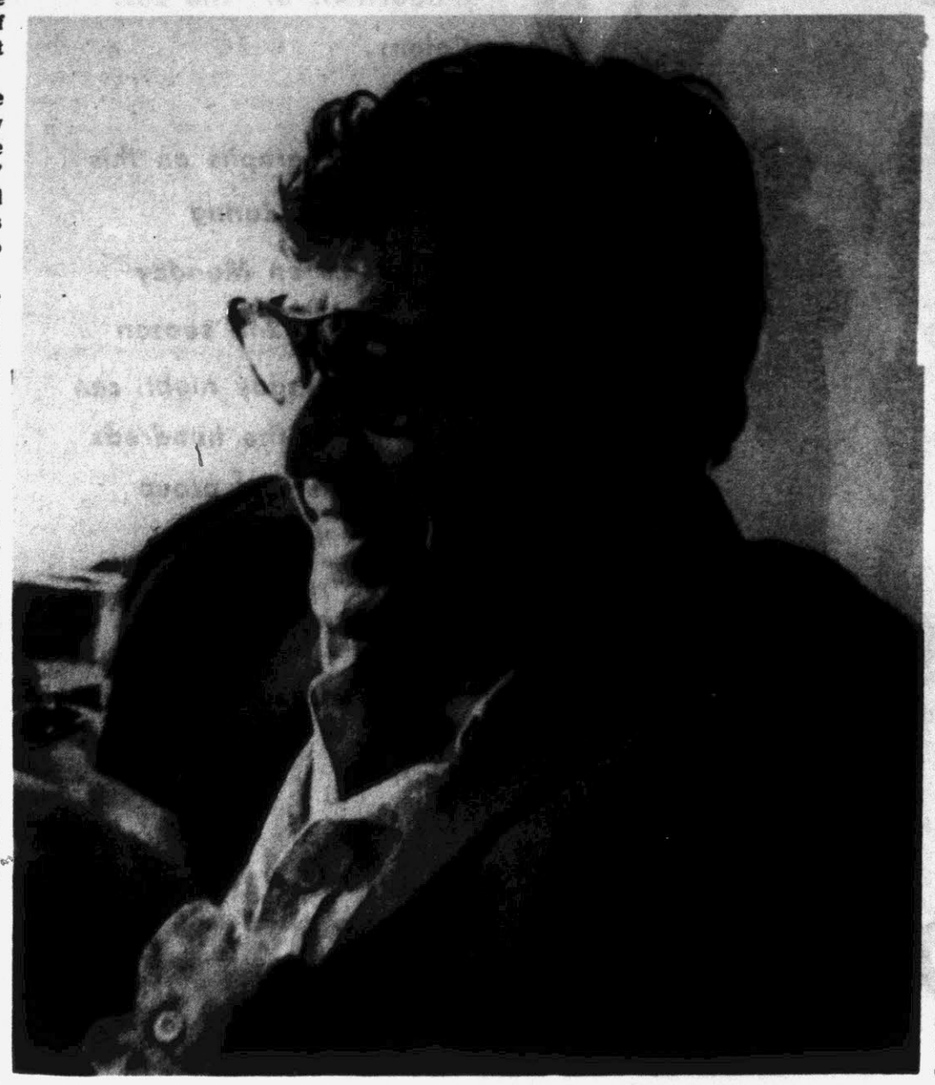

DALLAS (UPI) I Eddie Fisher—of Eddie and Debbie and Liz and Connie—took a sip of diet cola and said if he could do it all over again, he would.

"If I had been married once and divorced, I could say by now I was wisened. But three times? I have to be a fool," he said, smiling to himself and having some more diet cola. As an entertainer, Fisher has to watch his figure.

At 44, the movie magazine Casanova of the '50s and '60s, is still singing on the road. He amazes audiences such as those at the Fairmont Hotel in Dallas with the fact he can still raise a goose bump or two with his singing and can still charm with his stage patter.

He doesn't stick with his hit parade songs such as "Lady of Spain" or "Oh My Papa," but starts with a rousing version of "Let Me Entertain You" and then does just that with songs such as Kris Kristofferson's "For The Good Times."

His real crowd pleaser is a medley of Al Jolson tunes he's always done—"Mammy," "After You're Gone," and "Toot, Toot Tootsie." His audiences are mostly the fans of yesteryear who used to love him on Ed Sullivan and "Coke Time" on television, who envied his marriages, criticized his divorces and pitied his bankruptcy. They rise to their feet to applaud because Eddie Fisher, in his own way, is an American institution.

EDDIE FISHER sips a diet cola and says if he could do it all over again, he would. (UPI Telephoto)

Show Changes Opinions

"It never fails and it always makes me sad, but some guy will come up after my act and say he always thought I was a creep and a gigolo and he didn't like me until he saw my show. Isn't that amazing? It's incredible all the people who can dislike anonymously."

Fisher grimaces at the thought of all the movie magazines that fed on his career and personal life. But he doesn't complain.

"All the movie magazine background was true. I was discovered in a children's hour radio contest at 13. Then I was singing in bands in the Catskills when Eddie Cantor found me. Then I was on my way, you know, Ed Sullivan shows, 'Coke Time.' Then I fell in love.

"But you know," he said, "the whole time I always wanted to be married just once and to have a house and a picket fence and fireplace and pipe and slippers...really."

What he does have as a result of three marriages is four children: Carrie, 16, and Todd, 14, by Debbie Reynolds, and Joely, 4, and Tricia Leigh, 3, by Connie Stevens.

"I don't get to see them much. I'm gone a lot," he said. "It's catch as catch can."

His face is worn, rutted with laugh wrinkles, with a slight sag under the chin. But he looks tan and healthy and dapper.

Now In The Black

He said his bankrupcy declaration several years ago "hurt more than my pride. It hurt everything." Now after a million-dollar settlement with his first wife, he just has to pay child support for his family. He said he is now "financially in the black."

"I don't think show business or I were meant for the institution of insanity—marriage—and it's doubly tough if you marry somebody in show business," he said.

He is currently dating a psychologist in Los Angeles. He said they have "a very good relationship—she's very intelligent and she understands me."

He said he naturally gravitates toward marriage, but "with my record I'd have to be a fool to consider it."

He said he started several times on a book about his life, but quit, adding, "As Toots Shor said, how could I tell the truth?"

NEW YORK (AP) — There is the same breeziness, the same cool eyes and the impression that a keen sense of humor lurks just below a polite surface.

Aside from that there is almost no relationship between Miss Kitty Russell, owner of Dodge City's Long Branch Saloon, and the actress who, considerably to her surprise, has been playing the part for going on 18 years.

"Gunsmoke," in spite of one hair-breadth escape, has been rolling along now since 1954, one of the venerable jewels in the CBS crown since it wound up last season among Nielsen's top five shows. One year the show was suddenly canceled—and immediately uncanceled.

When Amanda Blake, born Beverly Louise Neill, was cast as a little feminine relaxation for Marshal Matt Dillon after a hard day of rounding up bad 'uns, she certainly had no idea she was on the threshold of a stellar career, steady employment and the type of job security few performers ever encounter.

Three of the original cast are still going strong in the series, although there have been some changes in the casting of featured players. A more mature James Arness, of course, still plays the rugged core character, Dillon, with the same sober attitude that suggests that here is a gentle man of peace and order forced by circumstances into having to draw a gun—very, very fast—to protect the good people. Milburn Stone, now graying around the temples, is still the same testy, short-fused sawbones of the first shows. And, of course, Amanda whose tresses are perhaps a little brighter red now than in the days before color TV.

And, over the years, Amanda has organized her life into two very neat compartments. She moves from actress to private citizen with the amount of stress used in changing hats, which is what it amounts to.

"We know in advance the shooting schedule, and my part can take from one day to five days," she said. "I used to have a home in Hollywood; now I stay with friends and devote myself full time to working. Sometimes that includes appearing on a game show—which is easy because there is little preparation needed."

Then she flies home to Phoenix and an extraordinary household consisting of Amanda and her husband, Frank's children by an earlier marriage, five dogs, four cats, two horses, one pony, one rabbit, chickens, a toucan, a 7½-month-old lion named Kemo, a raccoon named Theda, an ocelot and an assortment of spur-of-the-moment animal boarders.

Miss Blake, it should be noted, loves animals.

Her prime interest, however, is the Arizona Animal Welfare League, of which she is a very active director.

TV Notes

NEW YORK (UPI) —The first of the films being produced for next season's "The New CBS Movies" series is "The Family Rico," based on "The Brothers Rico" novel by the noted French detective-mystery novelist, Georges Simenon. Story is about three brothers in an underworld organization.

Coming up will be the fourth season for ABC's "Love, American Style," the weekly series of three to five short funny episodes that gives employment to a lot of actors in Hollywood who might not be working without it.

Giving Jack Gilford the role of the insignificant Vice President Alexander Throttlebottom in the CBS video version of the 1931 musical comedy, "Of Thee I Sing," is good casting, but the character won't seem as funny as it once did because Spiro Agnew has been some other kind of a vice president.

FISHING SOUTHERN SALT WATERS. By Thomas Helm 1972. New York, Dodd, Mead and Company. 393 pps, illustrated, $10.00

Most people like fruits, nuts, and cake, but not everyone likes fruitcake. And most people enjoy coasts and beaches, but not everyone enjoys fishing or reading about fishing. Reading this book is, for the fisherman, like eating fruitcake, for it is a blending of rich tidbits of fishing information held together by a rich batter of sea lore. But even the non-fisherman will find this "cake" enjoyable, for he is likely to relish it bit by bit until he suddenly discovers he has devoured the entire thing while enjoying a "nut" here, a "fruit" there, and bits of "batter" throughout. Just as fruitcake is much more than the sum of its ingredients, Fishing Southern Salt Waters is more than a book about fishing southern salt waters, as an analysis of its contents will attest.

The first seven chapters of this fifteen chapter book offer technical and popular descriptions of more than thirty varieties of game fish, tell where each may be found, describe the type of bait for luring each, and list the statistics surrounding the world's record catches. Accompanying such descriptions are illustrations and photographs of fish, fishermen, and places and things concerned with fishing.

The reader will, for example, learn that dolphins are found in tropical and sub-tropical waters, travel in schools if weighing under ten pounds but travel alone or in groups of two or three if weighing more that 15 pounds, and enjoy flying fish as a staple diet. Fishermen may be pleased to learn that "The world record is 85 pounds, caught by Richard Seymour on a 50-pound test line while fishing out from Spanish Wells in the Bahamas on May 29, 1968. It measured 5 feet, 9 inches in length and had a girth of 37½ inches."

The non-fisherman will probably be more interested in the fact that the dolphin is not just a fishy statistic; it is a thought provoker. The live dolphin is a beautiful fish: "High of head, he is almost an iridescent bluish green...." but, as fishermen know, he becomes even more beautiful as he fights for his freedom: "Once caught and hauled aboard, the fish is frequently violent in his effort to disassociate himself from his unnatural abode. It is only after he begins to die that the fisherman is witness to a strange yet beautiful,and unforgettable, sight. It is as if some unseen revolving kaleidoscopic light were trained on the dolphin's body. Moving waves of color that range from blue to gold to green tremble and quiver, fade to yellow and gradually subside to the gray of tarnished silver." Author Helms cited that this practice of the dolphin provoked Lord Byron to write:

Parting day dies like the dolphin
Whom each pang imbues
With a new colour as it gasps away,
The last still loveiest,
Till—'tis gone, and all is gray.

The last eight chapters, like the others, offer a blending of matter-of-fact facts and personal interpretations which deal with marine life, tools of the trade, records, and places to fish or visit along the more than 30,000 miles of coastal fishing areas from Virginia to Texas. Author Helms has skillfully blended the technical with lyrical and; oddly enough; both the trophy-seeking fisherman and the coastal loving humanist should find Fishing Southern Salt Waters interesting reading.

"The scene is so wierd and lonely and so incomprehensible..." (Frederick Dellenvaugh)...

Gigantic walls of rock,
Sheer as the world's end, seemed to float in air
Over the hollows of space, and change their forms
Like soft blue wood-smoke, with each change of light ..
(Alfred Noyes)

The Grand Canyon, a vision, an experience of awesomeness and rugged grandeur unparalleled in nature snakes its way across the northern part of Arizona. Two hundred seventy-seven miles long, it yawns one mile deep and stretches as far as eighteen miles across. At the bottom roars the mighty Colorado River, the great eroder.

Time-Life Books in its American Wilderness series presents THE GRAND CANYON by Robert Wallace. Handsomely illustrated with photographs and drawings, THE GRAND CANYON endeavors to impart something of the splendor of the Canyon through words and pictures.

Another cookbook? Most emphatically, yes! With the return to an emphasis on natural foods free from chemical preservatives, additives, pesticides, and artificial growing conditions, the need for yet another cookbook has arisen. What ingredients are acceptable and how does the eager cook assemble a nutritional meal using only natural foods? The answers are found in the WHOLE EARTH COOKBOOK by Sharon Cadwallader and Judi Ohr. Recipes for mouth-watering soups, salads, vegetables, sandwiches, nonmeat protein dishes, meat, fish, and fowl dishes, grain dishes, breads, and desserts are all found in the WHOLE EARTH COOKBOOK.

"In Judy the self was cruelly divided. She had three faces for me: the wildly unreasoning, utterly polarized star; the scared, guilt-ridden immature small girl; and the warm, glowing maturing woman who was my wife ... As time passed, I was able to reduce the triple images of Judy by one. The small girl was disappearing as the woman who was my wife gained strength. That was my Judy, the Judy that was real, the Judy I Remeber."

In these words, Mickey Deans summarizes his relationship with one of the most popular singer-actresses the United States has ever known, Judy Garland. WEEP NO MORE, MY LADY by Mickey Deans, Judy's last husband, and Ann Pinchott tells the story of Judy Garland's life from her girlhood under the rigid dominance of her overbearing mother through her years of exploitation in show business to her death in 1969. WEEP NO MORE, MY LADY is a story of Judy's life, her personal conflicts, her problems, with alcohol and drugs, and her need for warmth and understanding.

"Construction for Jane Hall"

"CONSTRUCTION FOR JANE HALL" .... by noted North Carolina native artist Henry Pearson, honors the late Jane Hall of Greenville and Raleigh. Miss Hall was for years Art Editor for the Raleigh News and Observer. (Photo N.C. Museum of Art)

"Construction for Jane Hall" by Henry Pearson of New York has been given to the North Carolina Museum of Art by the artist in memory of Miss Hall.

Miss Hall, a native of Greenville who died in 1971, was art editor of the Raleigh News and Observer for many years. During this time she and Pearson became friends.

"She did a story on me when I was just beginning—sometime in the 50s," he said on a recent visit to the museum. "She dug it out. I don't know how she found out about me."

Pearson went on to express great admiration for her work and the role she played in promoting art in North Carolina.

Pearson himself is one of the state's most distinguished artists. He is a native of Kinston.

In 1970 he received the North Carolina Award, the state's highest award to a citizen for service to the state in various areas. In 1969 the museum held a retrospective exhibition of his work.

His work is found in major museums and collections throughout the nation.

Pearson's career as an artist did not get under way until he was in this 30s, following discharge from the Army. Before entering the Army, he had studied theatre design with Donald Oenslager at the Yale School of Drama.

While in the Army, he was stationed in Okinawa and Japan, surroundings which played a great role in shaping his art.

His art is linear and optical with shifting surfaces that call forth many interpretations as the eye and the mind of the viewer race from one point on the canvas to another.

"Construction for Jane Hall" is a linear work combining a lithograph and a silk screen. The silk screen is superimposed on the lithograph. Both are enclosed in a boxlike frame designed especially for them by the artist.

The work will be put on display along with other new museum acquisitions in July.

Greenville's Albert Evans Accepted For The N.C.S.A.

1972 Rose High graduate Albert Evans will head west to Winston-Salem at the end of the summer to become Greenville's first North Carolina School of the Arts student since Gwen Spear headed for the old Moravian town to study dancing several years ago.

The young artist, who says he hopes eventually, "to have a job designing cars," has recently spent considerable time in drawing a creature named Mr. Snail along with a host of Mr. Snail's friends.

"These," Albert says, "are illustrations for Mr. Claude West's children's story about a snail who set the world on fire.

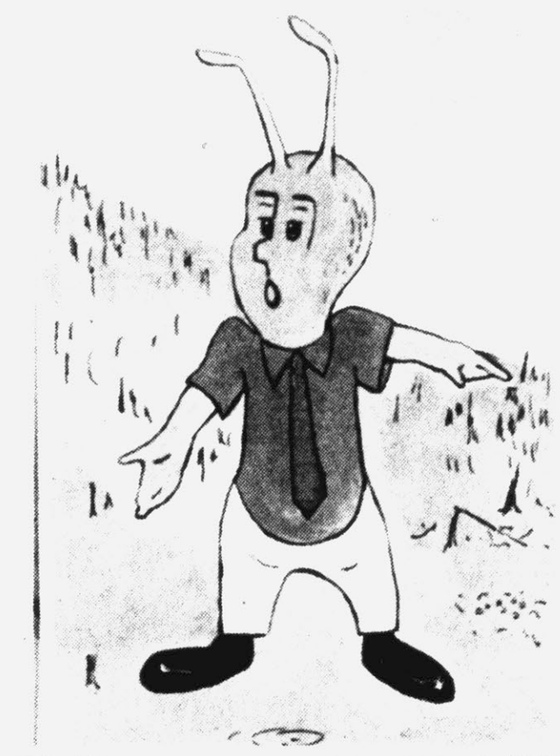

On drawing dragons Albert stated he had drawn a series of them. "What I like about drawing dragons is that you can use your imagination freely," he commented. "You can make them realistic but in any way you want, since there's no special way a dragon has to look. After all, no one I know of has ever seen one."

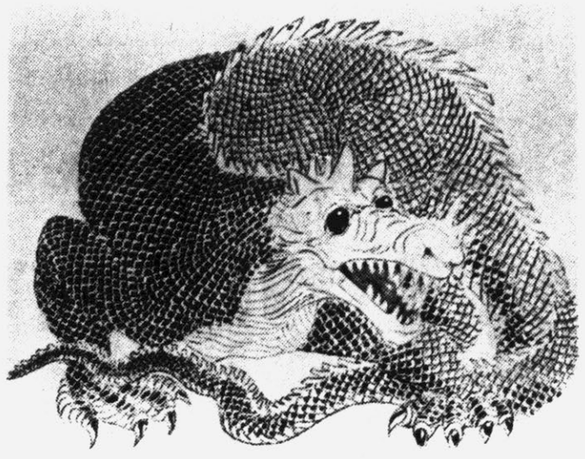

Albert had an opportunity (last winter to take a look at North Carolin's renowned School of the Arts. "I went with our class there to see a performance of Little Foxes," he remarked. "I will major in design and production, which I feel I'll enjoy studying."

His art and drama teachers at Rose urged him to apply for attendance at the School of the Arts, which he did and recently received notice of acceptance for classes beginning at the end of the summer.

Albert, a Greenville native, the son of Mrs. Mae Belk Evans, is a Gold Key winner in art and has exhibited works in the Greenville Sidewalk Art shows. He was an art student at Rose for two years under Mike Goins and for the past year under Mrs. Audrey Whitehurst.

Beaufort Tech Receives Four Voorhees Paintings

The Beaufort County Technical Institute in Washington is the recipient of four North Carolina coastal scenes, all watercolors by eastern North Carolina artist Edwin Voorhees.

The four paintings were commissioned by W. R. Roberson, Jr. President and General Manager of North Carolina Television, Inc. (WITN-TV). Roberon's collection of works of art by North Carolina artists, the WITN collection, is well known in North Carolina.

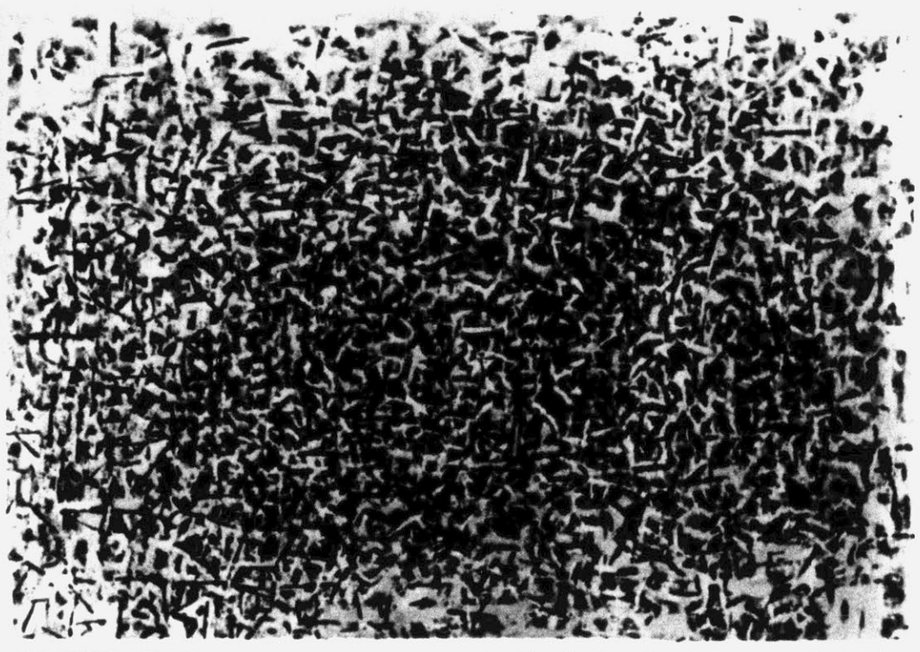

Roberson, presenting the four paintings to James Blanton, president of Beaufort Tech, stated, "We are most appreciative of the many and lasting substantial contributions you and your associates at Beaufort Tech are making toward the welfare and betterment of Beaufort County and the surrounding area."

"We would hope," Roberson added, "that this will be the start of an original collection at the Institute ... this truly would be recognition for area artists and would make their work available for inspection not only by the students and faculty at Beaufort Tech, but by the general public as well."

Students, Not Faculty, Exhibiting At Whichard

In the art page for last Sunday, June 18, it was stated in an article that new works by Edward Reep and Donald Sexauer are currently on exhibit at the Whichard Gallery on campus at East Carolina University.

The current exhibit is not work by the two School of Art faculty members, but is instead recent work completed by art students of the two artist-teachers. Paintings, watercolors, prints and mixed media work are included in the student show.

Americans Now Accepting Males As Ballet Dancers

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The biggest change in America's attitude toward dance that Erik Bruhn has seen in his 26-year ballet career has been the acceptance of the male ballet dancer.

Bruhn, 43, regarded as the best male classical dancer of his time, retired from dancing this year because of a painful ulcer.

He says, "Ten or 15 years ago when you would travel in America, you would find the conception about dancers, especially male dancers, very prejudiced and quite different from today. People would ask what you do and you hesitated to admit being a male dancer. You'd probably be slapped verbally or stared at oddly.

"Since I came from Denmark where male dancing was highly respected, I was shocked at first to realize that it was looked down upon here. In Denmark we had the tradition of August Bournonville who never liked the idea of the male being behind the ballerina and choreographed for the male dancer to be important, out in the center front.

"Then, the Russian and Danish companies visited here. When they saw them, the American public took like crazy to male dancing."

Many Options For Good Living

By GERRY GISHOP

There are a lot of options for good living in the Garwood, a Cape Cod-type home designed by Associated House Plans.

The exterior is deceiving in the respect that there is much more space behind the attractive facade than one realizes.

Among the Garwood's prime assets are an excellent traffic pattern, a first-floor master bedroom, a separate laundry-mudroom and a spacious family room-breakfast area arrangement.

Also appealing is the second-floor study which could be used as an office, sewing room, or a fourth bedroom.

Rounding out the floor plan are two baths, a living room, dining room, kitchen, family room with fireplace, foyer, double garage and an unfinished basement.

Weathered shingles or horizontal siding would enhance the Garwood's colonial exterior.

The traffic pattern starts at the foyer which receives arriving guests. Stairs to the second floor originate there. There's also a coat closet.

To the left is the living room-approximately 16 feet by 14 feet-which is separated from the dining room by colonial turned columns. Hhe adjoining rooms would be ideal for entertaining.

The dining room, which measure approximately 10 feet by 13 feet, adjoins the kitchen.

The kitchen, breakfast area and family room are combined to form an informal living area. The kitchen, of course, has the usual built-ins arranged in an efficient U. It is just a step away from the breakfast area which has a window overlooking the back yard.

The fireplace extends across one wall, adding charm to the family room. Sliding glass doors connect with the back yard or patio.

The two-car garage is separated from the main living area by the laundry-mudroom and a storage room. The laundry has space for a washer, dryer and closet. The storage room contains the water heater and would be ideal for keeping garden tools.

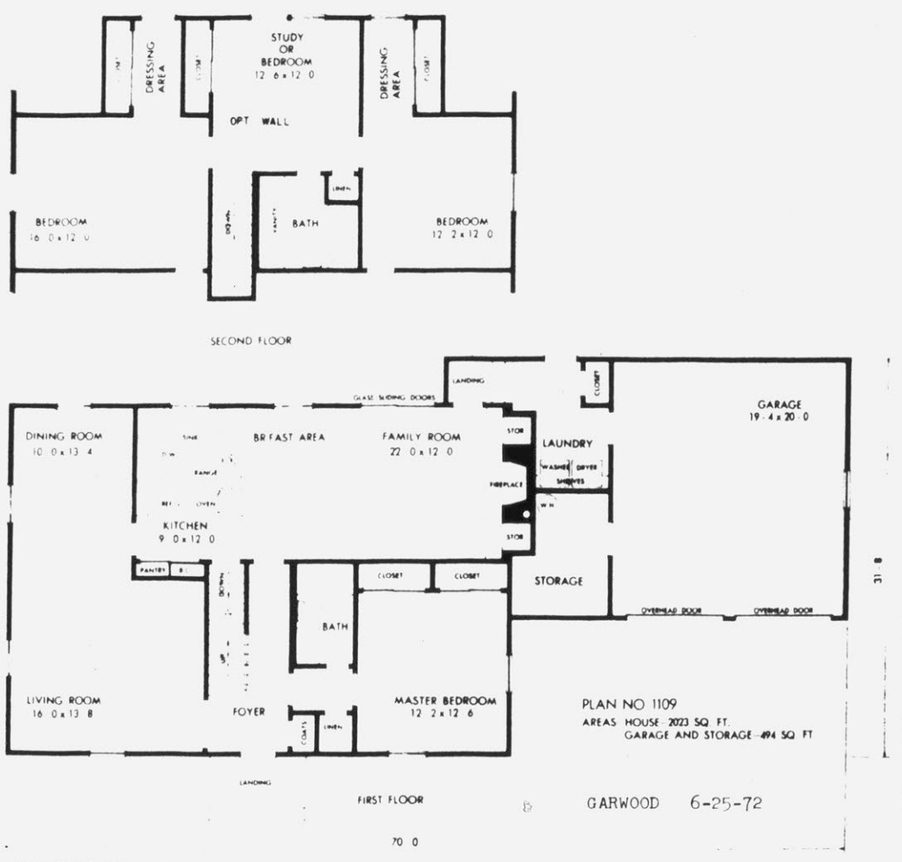

The master bedroom has large twin closets and a private bath that doubled as a powder room for guests.

The upstairs bedrooms have good dimensions and each enjoys a dressing room with lots of closet space. The main bath separates the bedrooms .

The study has a large closet that would be useful if the study were converted to a bedroom. The plans also provide for construction of a fourth wall. Otherwise, the area would be left open.

The exterior dimensions are approximately 32 feet by 70 feet. The two levels contain 2,110 square feet and there are 560 square feet in the basement and 494 square feet in the garage and storage room.

BIGGER THAN IT LOOKS — The Garwood, designed by Associated House Plans, is deceptive to the casual viewer. There's much more space inside than appears. On the first floor there is a living room, dining room, kitchen, breakfast area, family room with fireplace, foyer and master bedroom with bath. Upstairs are two bedrooms, a bath and study which could be used as a fourth bedroom. There is also a double garage, laundry room and unfinished basement.

Here's How To Do It

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

In addition to the questions they ask, readers sometimes send in suggestions about how certain things can be done. In each of the ideas presented here, the reader said he did-it-himself:

For stripped threads in screw or bolt holes, fill the hole with plastic steel that comes in a tube, apply a thin coat of grease to the screw or bolt, then insert the screw or bolt and allow to harden.

Just before starting to paint, put a little blue in the center of an ordinary paper plate and set the paint container on it. The plate will keep the container from overturning, will catch any paint that runs down the side and makes a good place to rest the brush if you are using one. If you are using a roller, use a separate plate for the roller.

Don't throw away that collapsible gate you once used to keep your small son or daughter from falling down the stairs. Instead, paint it and use it outside as a trellis for roses.

If a screw refuses to turn counterclockwise when you are trying to remove it, heat a soldering iron and hold it in the slot for a time. When the screw cools, it will come out easily.

After a wallpapering job, tack a couple of feet of leftover paper on the inside of a closet or storeroom. Then, if a time comes when a patch is needed, cut it from the leftover piece. Because it has aged the same as the regular paper, there won't be as great a difference as if you had cut the patch from rolled-up paper.

If a grouping of objects is to be hung on a wall, lay them all out on the floor in the same relationship as they would be on the wall to judge the effectiveness of the arrangement.

When it is necessary to sand the end of a dowel to a point, place the other end in the chuck of a portable electric drill and tighten it. The dowel then can be shaped by holding it against sandpaper while the drill is operating. The sandpaper must be backed by a wooden or metal block. (This will work only if the dowel is one-quarter inch or less in diameter, assuming you have a quarter-inch drill.)

If you hang a clothesline in the basement for use in drying clothes in rainy weather, the clothesline can be kept from sagging by soaking it in boiling water for a few minutes before putting it up.

Can't unscrew the top of a small fruit jar? Try a nutcracker.

A line of egg-shaped fiberglass "audio" chairs for the home. Luxuriously upholstered in vinyls or artificial furs, with matching ottomans, the chairs come in single and loveseat styles. Each is equipped with two speakers with built-in controls which can be connected to any outside radio or phonograph source, or to a television set. There is a built-in high intensity reading light in each and the next model to come will include built-in telephone. The person or persons occupying the eggs are in a private world of good sound; no bother to the people around —and vice versa. (Audio-Decor, Inc., Miami, Fla.)

A disappearing bed and table system allows a single room to serve as bedroom, living room, and-or family room —ideal for efficiency apartment use. The "fifth wall" system is said to provide 500 to 600 square feet of living space, plus extra storage space, in less than 350 square feet, and reduced building costs at the same time. A sure way to start an argument—or, at the very least, a heated discussion—is to place a house builder and an environmentalist in the same room.

They are natural enemies. Have been for a long time. But the era when the builder could smile condescendingly at the environmentalist, while his workers continued to construct according to plans, is long since past. Today it is the land-conscious individual who has the upper hand, carried along by the support of the general public, finally aware that it is possible for people to spoil the gifts of nature.

Newspapers are continually recounting the battles between developers and community authorities and civic groups over the proper use of land. "You may own the land," the builders are being told, "but you are not going to use it indiscriminately."

Many builders are protesting restrictive zoning codes and regulations, but others are cooperating by using cluster planning and other methods designed to keep much of the land in its natural state yet fulfill the need for more and better housing. A giant effort to get builders and environmentalists to see each other's point of view will be taken June 27 and 28 when they are linked by closed-circuit television in eight cities—New York, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Washington, Chicago, Dallas, Atlanta and Miami.

Two-way audio intercommunication between all cities will make immediate communication between the panelists possible, so that a guy in Chicago, for example, can ask Ralph Nader (one of the panelists) a question and get a quick answer. Some of the other participants include Secretary of HUD George Romney; the administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, William Ruckelhaus; the president of the Sierra Club, Phillip Berry; the chairman of the board of the U.S. Home Corp., Robert Winnerman, and the chairman of Environmental Systems International, Barry Berkus.

A subsidary of General Electric, Tomorrow Entertainment Inc., is directing the conference along with Management Concepts International under the sponsorship of the trade magazine, Professional Builder. The vice president of Tomorrow Entertainment, Woody Benoit, says examples of successful collaboration between builders and environmentalists from around the country will be shown.

Potential Injuries By Broken Glass In Doors Are Preventable, If—

By DOROTHEA M. BROOKS

NEW YORK (UPI) —A youngster bats a homer in a backyard ball game: the shattered window that results is a perennial theme for cartoonists. But it's no laughing matter when the same youngster runs for a high one — headlong into a glass patio door.

More than 250,000 Americans are injured annually in their homes by broken glass in doors of all kinds. Half of them are youngsters under 15.

That statistic alone should be enough to make you take stock NOW of possible hazards from glass in your home.

There are many —sliding glass doors, storm doors, patio doors, structural doors with glass panels, glass enclosures for bathtubs and showers. Running, falling, or even walking absentmindedly through a door glazed with ordinary glass can result in serious injury or death.

Potential tragedy is preventable. Make sure your home contains only safety glass or other unbreakable material in hazardous locations. And make sure, too, even with safety glass, large expanses of clear glass are marked —with etching, or decals, or some other attention-attracting device. Many an unwary person has tried to walk through a beautifully transparent sliding door and even a bump on the head is no fun.

Philip Mash, vice president of Globe-Amerada Glass Co., Elk Grove Village, Ill., a company which pioneered the manufacture of laminated environmental and security glass, says homeowners generally do not realize the shocking dangers that exist from ordinary single-strength door glass.

Changes needed

Such glass will shatter upon impact, sending shards flying to cut, and possibly blind, and leaving aged edges threatening anyone who comes in contact.

For years, Mash said, major glass manufacturers have recognized the need for a change in the safety standards of door glass. In an effort to curtail the mounting number of home accidents from this cause, he said, a model bill was drafted by the Consumer Safety Glazing Committee (CSGC) a cooperative effort of interested government, safety, labor and glass industry leaders.

The model law was designed to be introduced in state legislatures and requires the use of safety glazing — laminated glass, tempered glass, wired glass, rigid plastic —in hazardous locations.

The CSGC has defined hazardous locations as any area where the glazing material is exposed to frequent physical contact by humans, specifically: sliding glass doors, storm doors, framed or unframed glass entrance doors and adjacent fixed glazed panels that might be mistaken for doors, bath enclosures and shower doors.

Currently, Mash said, only 22 states have legislation requiring safety glazing material. The law will be submitted in the remainder of the states this year, he said.

The glass accident problems, Mash said, stimulated the National Safety Council to investigate. Their efforts initiated a study conducted cooperatively by the U.S. Public Health Service and local state and health agencies. It found:

Glass injury victims were reported going from indoors to outdoors in more than 75 per cent of the cases. Had safety glazing materials been used, all the injuries could have been limited or prevented.

Huge medical costs

Information collected, he said, indicates more injuries occur during warm weather months and approximately 50 per cent of the injuries occur in late afternoon or early evening hours.

Medical costs for glass door injury victims come to more than $13 million annually.

While the efforts of industry, safety authorities and legislators are important, Mash said, it is obvious the answer now lies with the individual family in its own home.

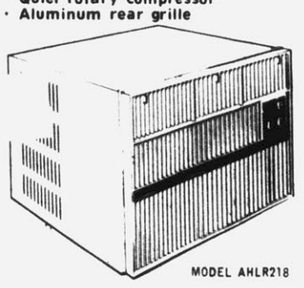

"Tomorrow will be too late to correct the hazard that could ruin a child's life today."

Florida Keys Being 'Developed' Into Disaster Area

By BEN FUNK
Associated Press Writer

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — In the feverish pace of development of the Florida Keys, state officials warn the charming islands unique in the nation are being dredged and bulldozed into an ecological disaster area.

But it is not only the environment that is threatened.

In mushrooming forests of mobile homes—parked on huge expanses of white limestone fill as treeless and barren as the Gobi Desert—the seed of a human tragedy has been sown.

It will sprout when the hurricane comes.

If modern trailers are tied down properly, they will stand winds of 100 to 125 miles an hour. When the velocity hits 150, they fly apart. A hurricane like 1960's Donna, which threw gusts of 180 to 200 mph at the Keys, would splinter the trailers and hurl the pieces into the sea.

There is no question about that, says forecaster Neal Frank of the National Hurricane Center at Miami. A hurricane like Donna could bring the greatest human disaster the islands have ever known.

In the low-lying Keys that string out across open seas from Jewfish Creek to Key West, it is not just the hurricane wind that strikes fear. Far more dangerous are the waves that come with it, slashing across the islands from ocean to gulf.

An advertisement for one of the new mobile home communities boasts that it stands eight feet above sea level. Donna hurled a 13-foot tide across the Keys. In the Labor Day hurricane of 1935, the storm surge reached 15 to 20 feet.

The rapidly growing number of trailer occupants also raises the specter that many could be trapped when the hurricane strikes.

Two-laned U.S. Highway 1, the only road down the 108-mile long chain, is clogged even in day-to-day circumstances. If there were panic and a mass exodus, traffic could bog down totally. Thousands caught on the road, with few substantial buildings to give them shelter, could perish.

It was August, 1960 when Donna howled through the Keys, smashing concrete and steel commercial buildings and homes, ripping trailer homes to bits, hurling oceangoing ships ashore, and isolating most of the islands behind collapsed bridges.

Many residents who fled as Donna came roaring up from the south returned to find piles of debris where their homes had stood. Some left the area, never to return. For two years in the hurricane's wake the islands were in economic distress.

The hardy ones stayed to rebuild and, gradually, the ordeal was forgotten and development was resumed. It was slow at first, then picked up steam, and in the last year has become a rampage.

"Horrible things are being done to the environment of the Keys," said executive director Joel Kuperberg of the state Internal Improvement Fund after an aerial survey in March. Unless action is taken quickly, he said, indiscriminate dredging and filling will destroy the islands' natural resources.

Glenn Ulrich, Monroe County field inspector for the IIF, said dozens of mobile home projects were altering the entire character of the Keys, wiping out all the wild beauty that brought residents and tourists to them in the first place.

Nobody knows how many projects are under construction. It all happened so fast. Without notice, the developers moved in with bulldozers and draglines, many to sites hidden from the highway.

In the past, the Monroe County leadership did not look on the Keys as one of the most attractive regions of America. Rather, it viewed them as a land of the fast buck.

"The ethic of a property owner being able to do whatever he wishes to his property is firmly entrenched in this county," says Ulrich. "If this concept is followed in years to come, the Keys will be transformed into a straight-lined, bulkheaded housing subdivision of the Miami megalopolis."

One-fourth of Florida's commercial fishing catch is landed in the Keys. This fishing resource exists primarily because of the productive grass flats and the red mangroves which supply abundant marine organisms eaten by fish and wading birds. With the destruction of the mangroves, sportsmen say fishing has started to decline.

Thousands of new trailer homes use septic tanks. Because of the thin soil of the Keys, the sewage seeps quickly into the surrounding waters. High density developments hold as many as 12 trailers to an acre.

The state Pollution Control Board has imposed a dredge-and-fill moratorium and banned new septic tank permits until the county comes up with plans for sewage treatment facilities and water quality control.

"I think our intent is to hold back development," says attorney David Levin, chairman of the board. "This may be the answer eventually to our problem."

But Keys builders say the state will have a long court fight before it can stop development. Cliff Miller, chairman of the Upper Keys Association of General Contractors, says the board's right to issue restrictive orders will be challenged and "we expect to win."

Years ago, a prodigal state of Florida sold some 20,000 acres of submerged Keys land to private owners for a pittance. Most of it remains undeveloped and millions can be made if dredging is allowed.

A typical Keys developer is Charles Valois, who is building a housing development called Ocean Reef Shores on Key Largo. His deed from the state extends well out into the water, 325 feet beyond the upland marker. He wants to put a seawall out there and haul in sand for a beach.

Under state law, Valois has that right. But the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers has demanded that construction stop at the high water line. The engineers have sent Valois a cease and desist order.

Valois is adamant. "I have a deed," he said, "and I intend to build."

In a landmark federal case, Joseph Moretti, owner and developer of a project at Hammer Point on Key Largo, has been ordered to restore the area to its natural state.

Moretti had dredged an illegal channel 450 feet into Florida Bay when the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency discovered in December, 1970, that he had no federal sanction. A criminal charge was filed when he resumed work after an order to halt from the Army Engineers.

Last Sept. 2, after Moretti had sold 180 of 261 lots, U.S. District Judge W. O. Mehrtens issued a permanent injunction and ordered restoration of the area. Moretti's cost of moving 400,000 cubic yards of rock, closing finger canals and the boat channel is estimated at $600,000.

The case is being appealed, but officials hope the Moretti decision will serve as a warning to developers not to start work without permits. Both state and federal authorities are working up many more cases against other developers.

SPINNING DOWN — Capt. J. Fred Guffin of Hurlburt Field, Fla., spins to the ground with his main chute only partially opened and his backup chute tangled around his head during a jump at Eglin Air Force Base, Fla. Capt. Guffin's feet went a foot deep in the sand as he landed with only a sprained ankle. Sgt. John Majors snapped this picutre just before Guffin hit the ground during the 2500-foot jump. (AP Wirephoto)

Benefit From Free University

MACOMB, Ill. (AP) — About 600 persons have benefitted from the 43 courses offered by a free university, an experiment in education started in Macomb the first of the year.

The free university offers continuing education to persons of any age and background who may not be able to enroll in an organized school.

It provides an alternate source of learning for students and is not designed as an anti-institutional source.

Courses range from gardening, piano and upholstering to women's studies, auto repair and winemaking.

Indian Art Will Be Exhibited

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — An exhibition presenting the range of the major forms of American Indian art will be presented Oct. 8-Dec. 10 by the Minneapolis Institute of Arts and Walker Art Center.

The showing will be in conjunction with the Indian Art Assn., recently formed specifically to work on this project by representatives of nine local Indian organizations.

Principal support has come from the Dayton Hudson Foundation and the National Endowment for the Arts.

The exhibition will present such object groups as masks, carved figures, painted hides, pottery, basketry, weaving, costumes and musical instruments. Where traditions persist, recent examples of tribal art will be included.

Recession?

WASHINGTON (UPI) —U.S. business earned more money in the first quarter of 1972 than in any previous three-month period in its history, according to Business Week magazine. Profits reached a $51 billion rate, with broadcasting and homebuilding in the lead.

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, JUNE 25, 1972

CARROLL RIGHTER'S horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A Sunday when there are some pretty sinister daytime aspects so you would be wise to live according to the highest principles you can conceive of. Attend services, lectures, or classes of your choice and live their teaching to the fullest. However, the evening becomes extremely good and you can make new forays into whatever interests you.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Seek spiritual inspiration at right source so you can overcome that difficult situation easily and make the future brighter. A newcomer has fine ideas of a lofty nature. Cultivate this person in the evening.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Your hunches are not so accurate during the daytime, but very much so in p.m., when they should be followed. Make better plans for the future. Handle responsibilities well and then be happy with mate.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You have difficulty understanding the one you love during the day, but tonight all is clear as a bell. Study well whatever situations arise. You can handle them cleverly later in the day.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You find it difficult to know just how to express your thanks to those who have done you big favors during a.m., but by p.m. you are sure. Take treatments you need to add to vitality. Then make the evening a gala one.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You can go over those interesting ideas while out having fun socially, then take the steps necessary in p.m. Being economical where recreation is concerned is wise. Use your smile more and gain the support of allies.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) The situation at home can be rather difficult during day, but be patient and by evening all clears up satisfactorily. Talk gently with those who dwell with you. Do some entertaining at home in p.m.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Take no chances in motion of any kind, or you could get into much trouble now, and by p.m. you find you are thinking very cleverly. Get on a higher level of consciousness that will make your future brighter.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Don't try to come to decisions where money and property are concerned today, but wait until later in the week. Talking with experts is fine, though. Get as much information as you feel is necessary.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Fine day for friendliness with others, but make sure you do something to make you feel you are at your physical best. Put those new social ideas in operation in p.m. Show you are a thinker.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Forget that limitation you may have and concentrate on whatever ideas or ideals will make your life more successful and happy. Try to be of assistance to a good pal who comes to you for help. Evening can be real fun.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Although you want to be with good friends it is better for you to get practical affairs handled first, and then full speed ahead in p.m. Some personal goal seems confusing during day, but all clears up nicely in p.m. Think.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Impressing others with the fact that you are an excellent citizen is right and wise now, so follow every rule that applies to you. Get that credit matter handled satisfactorily. Making new friends is easy in p.m.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be one of those young people who early in life has at the tip of the tongue whatever is uppermost in the mind, so be sure to teach discretion and diplomacy while young. Teach also to complete whatever has once been started, or your child could get into trouble and accomplish very little. The trouble-shooting professions are best here, and the later life will be a comfortable one, with much travel and study indicated. Sports are most important.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, JUNE 26, 1972

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Today's Full Moon is an excellent time to act with speed and decision in gaining whatever outside success you wish in dealing with superiors or civic interests. You can also improve conditions at home. Take time to show you are a quick-acting person.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Higher-ups expect much of you today, so be sure not to irritate them by not keeping promises. Test your new ideas against the reactions of others and see if they pass the test.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You have fine ideas that should be put in operation quickly. Be sure to contact the right persons. Show appreciation for favors you have received. Avoid one you distrust.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You have to act quickly where monetary obligations are concerned if you wish to get satisfactory results. A fine day for investments. Look into Social Security matters.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You are able now to know what's your true position with others and how to improve the relationships. Go after your aims with a steadfast conviction of purpose. Be wise.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) If you start on new arrangements now the future could be more successful for you and co-workers. Production increases with more harmony. Take the initiative and become a happier person.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You want to see your good friends today and they want to see you, so get together and make new plans. Enjoying mutual hobbies could lead to something very fine in the future.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Make sure you meet expectations of bigwigs or you could get into trouble instead of gaining benefits you want. Stick to fundamentals in dealing with others for results you want.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Prepare yourself better if you wish to make a new project more successful in the future. Making new friends who have the data you need is wise. Evening is fine for having family fun.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You have to handle finances in a clever way now, so be sure to analyze your position well. Listen carefully to what an expert has to suggest. Carry through with best ideas.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Find out from associates what is expected of you so you can help make your partnership more profitable and satisfying. Talk over an important deal and cut down on expenses.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Showing that you are most efficient at work can bring fine benefits now. Take the time to have exercise that will improve your health. Evening is fine for recreation and fun.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) A day to get together with persons who admire you and vice versa. Engage in the right activities with them. Your creativity is high right now, so make the most of it. Relax tonight.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be one of those dynamic young persons who wants to be on the go all the time. Teach not to procrastinate and this becomes a successful chart, especially in the field of merchandising. Your progeny has an uncanny knack for knowing what the public desires as well as the best way to serve this need. A very fine sales person here.

TO ALL ELECTRIC CUSTOMERS:

The summer electric load on our system is beginning to build up. The energy input to our system this month has increased 40% over last month. Customer meter readings in July will reflect this increased demand and use of electricity. Also, beginning in July our summer rates will apply. This will mean that the cost per kilowatt hour of electricity will be higher than previous months. Summer bills will, therefore, include higher consumption as well as higher cost per unit of electricity.

The amount of electric energy used is entirely up to each individual electric customer. Only the customer can determine the amount of electric energy consumed, by controlling the operation of all electric facilities.

In order for our electric customers to save money on their electric bill, we have secured two booklets which tell just how you can conserve the use of electricity and thereby keep your electric bills down. These booklets are free and available upon request.

We are constantly increasing the capacity of our system in order to deliver your electrical requirements. Our electric energy supplier does not anticipate limiting our energy use. However, we know that all electric energy reserves are minimal and any major breakdown in their generation equipment could adversely affect our supply.

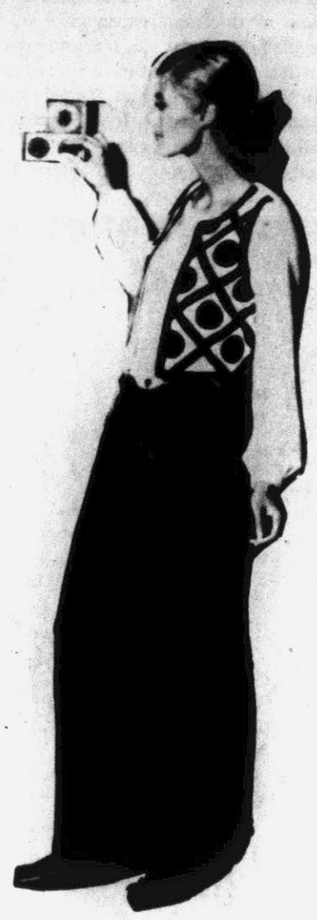

The Commission urges all electric customers to conserve the use of electricity, both to protect natural resources and also to save money on their monthly electric bill.

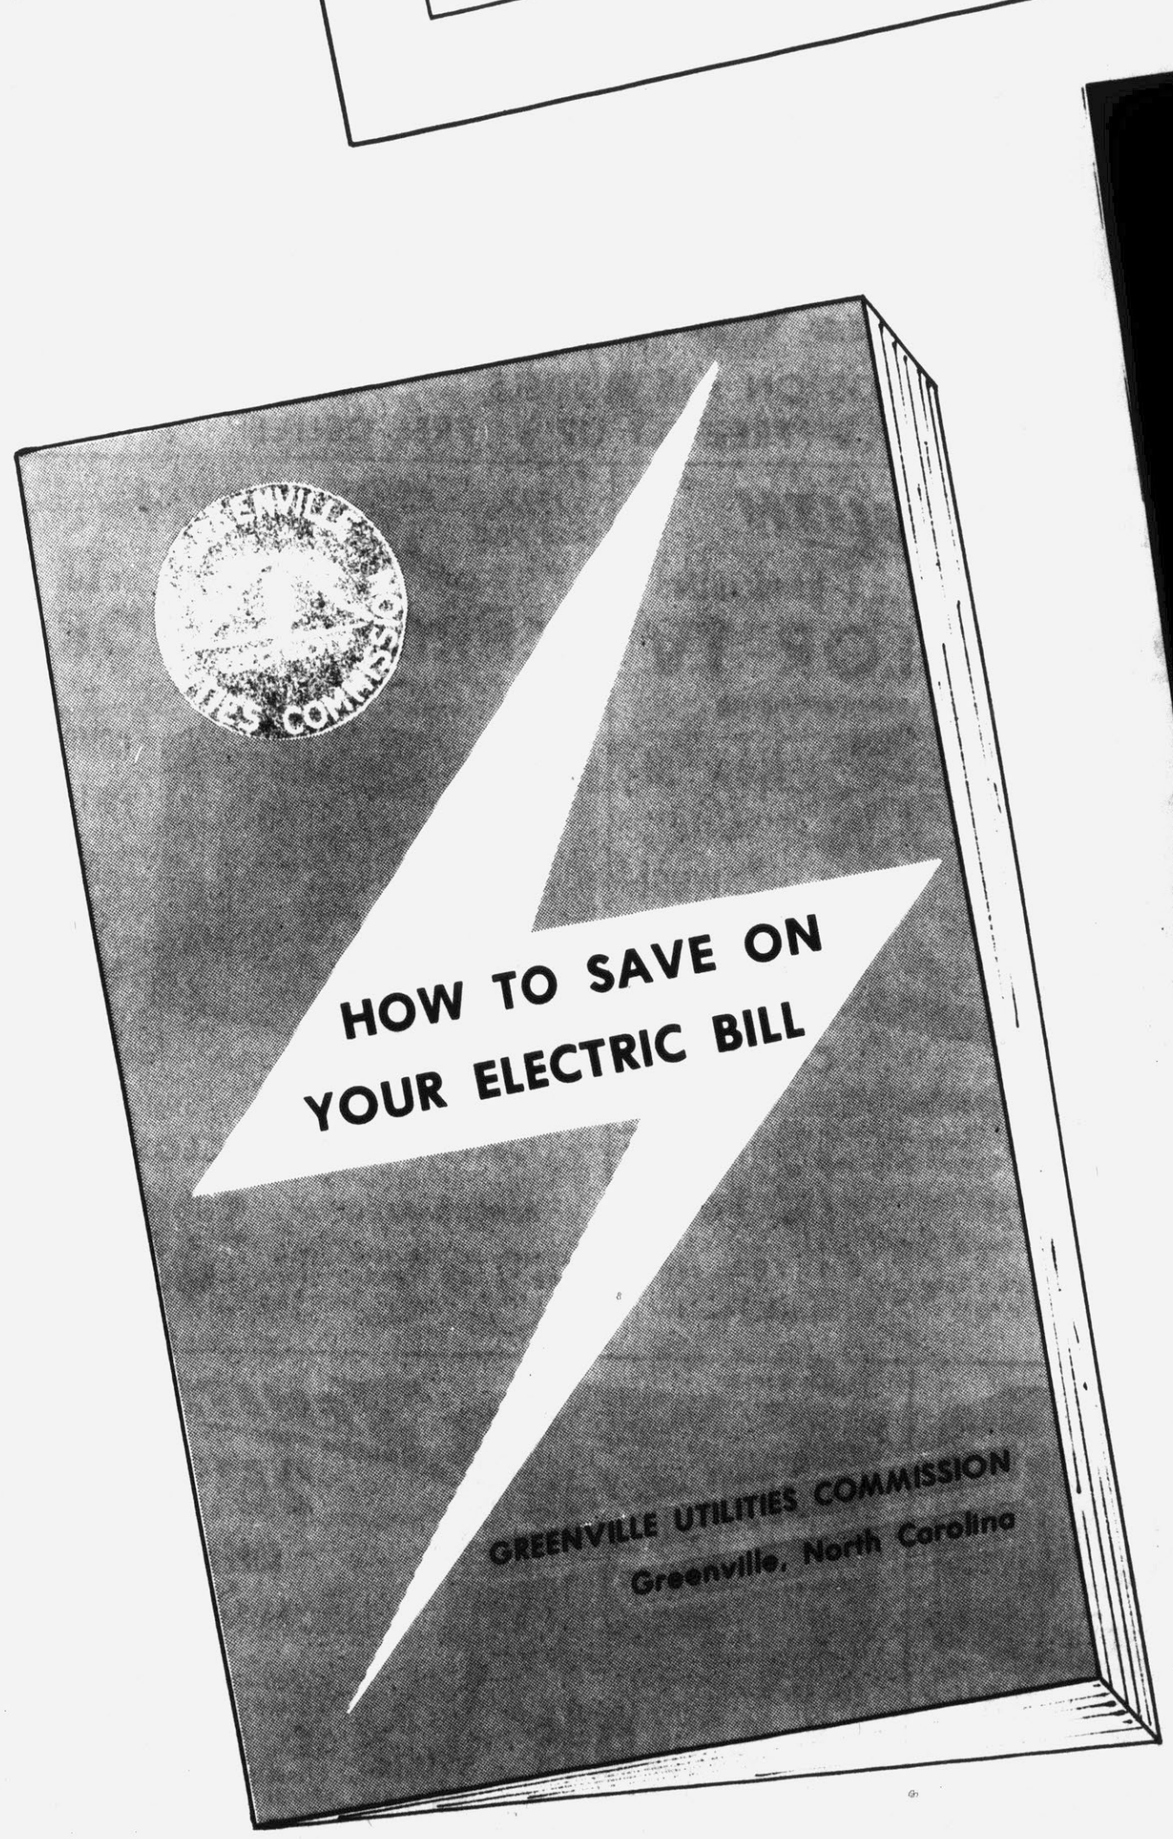

Sincerely,

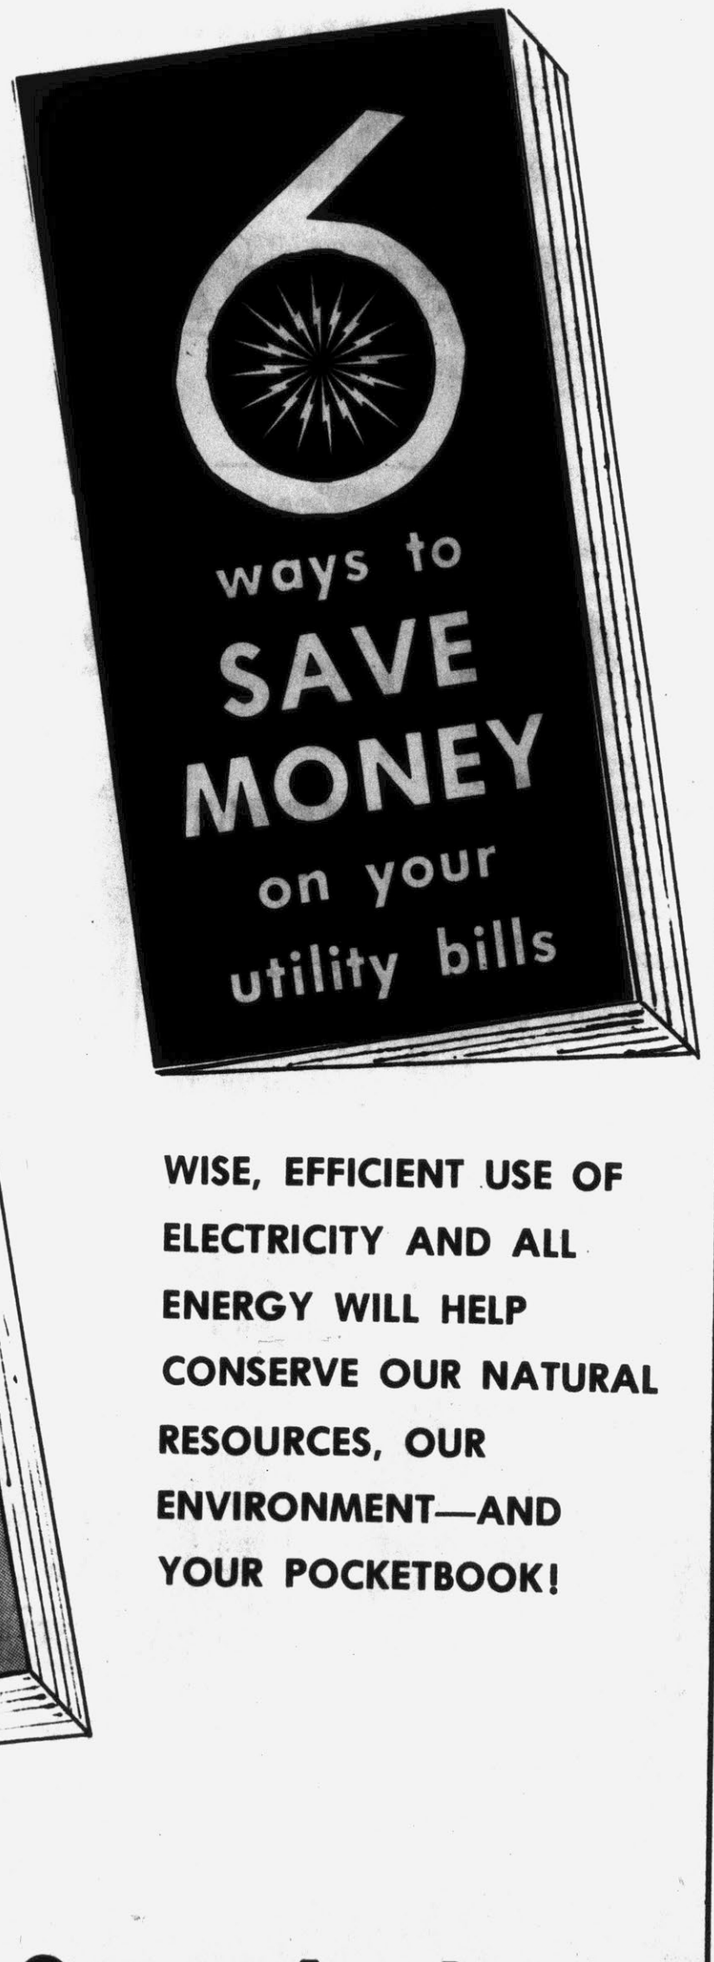

Charles O'H Horne, Jr.
Director of Utilities

Ask Them Yourself

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR MRS. MIKE DOUGLAS

I heard Mike say on his show recently that he asked you to marry him before he ever dated you. Can you explain?—B. K., Altoona, Pa.

● That's not quite right. What he did say was, "Someday, you're going to marry me." I had known Mike two years before we married. My brother Charles had introduced us. He was a scriptwriter for the same radio station where Mike was a staff singer. Mike became a frequent visitor to our house, since he and Charles were close friends. So we did see a lot of each other, but we weren't going out together. Then one day, I went up to the radio station to wait for my date, who also worked there, and Mike came over to me and said, "Someday, you're going to marry me." I was shocked—but more shocked because, shortly after I had met him, I had written in my diary, "Someday, this is the man I'm going to marry."

FOR POLLY BERGEN

I am a blond with very light skin, and I never tan. Is there anything I can do?—P. N., Santa Monica, Calif.

● When I was younger, I had an absolutely flawless skin. After I'd been in California for two summers and still didn't have a tan, I decided to get some color. Well, I burned, peeled, tanned—and completely ruined my skin. Forever. Which is how I came to get into the cosmetic business—and even to develop a product to simulate tan. Excess sun is probably the worst thing for your skin.

FOR ARNOLD PALMER

In most sports, fans and players razz the opposition. Why not in golf?—Rodney Lee, Bartlesville, Okla.

● Golf has always been what is called a "Gentleman's Game," with an informal code of etiquette. One of the cardinal ethics has always been courtesy toward the opponent, no matter what the circumstances. Razzing would be a gross violation of this ethic. Athletes in other sports are used to razzing, so it doesn't bother them.

FOR HOWARD COSELL, sportscaster

At the time of the baseball players' strike there was much criticism of baseball's leadership. What is your opinion of it?—D. L., Waco, Texas

● Organized baseball is totally without leadership. The game is in a state of continuing decline, and one reason for this is that it is being run by people with Neanderthal minds.

FOR RICK NELSON, singer, actor

What was the most embarrassing moment you ever had onstage?—J. Parks, Springfield, Ill.

● When I was 17 and performing at the Steel Pier in New Jersey, about 75,000 people saw a girl grab my guitar onstage and run off! I had to perform unaccompanied for 15 minutes.

FOR PETULA CLARK, singer, actress

As a constantly traveling international entertainer, don't you sometimes get confused as to what country you're in?—L. V., Sacramento, Calif.

● I do indeed! In one of my concert tours of Europe a few years ago, the last stop was Rome. The night before, I had been in France. When I went onstage, I began singing "Downtown" in French! I didn't realize it until halfway into the song. I did the second part in Italian, and the audience seemed to think it was planned.

FOR GAIL FISHER of "Mannix"

Do you think you have achieved your ultimate goal in life by appearing on a regular TV series? — Jean A. Barlow, Princeton, N. J.

● I don't know about it being "an ultimate goal," but I'll go as far as I can with "Mannix" and see what comes next. No one is ever entirely satisfied. But I hope that 30 years from now I will still be working as an actress.

FOR DR. MARIE A. HINRICHS, AMA

You said on this page that incurable diseases such as cancer are favored by medical quacks. Isn't cancer curable?—A. Link, Riverside, Ill.

● I should have qualified my reply. Some types of cancer are now successfully treatable with surgery, radiation, drugs or a combination of these. And we do indeed call these "cured" cases. But quacks still benefit from these diseases because of people's fear.

FOR BOB HOPE

Do politicians ever get angry at you for making fun of them?—Mrs. Pat Cunningham, Powderville, Mont.

● Generally speaking, politicians have excellent senses of humor and very thick skins—all part of being in the public eye. Most of them know my darts hit every party and every major politician. Take Spiro Agnew, one of my chief butts of humor. He laughs the loudest because he knows that my humor may sting but never cuts. Malice is not my forte.

FOR BOB CUMMINGS

You're a millionaire, and one who apparently doesn't mind sharing his secrets. What's your secret of success?—R. G., Casper, Wyo.

● I've always followed my father's precept—"Decide what you want, then act with all your heart as if it's already accomplished." This isn't the same thing as positive thinking or being a go-getter. Those things don't always work. First, you have to overcome self-doubt and all the things you have been taught are beyond your reach. Then sit down and write your own scenario—in your own mind, without sharing it with someone else. After that, half of you must live in "a dream fulfilled." Once your scenario is written, you have to act on your best impulses—but remember that you can't do anything crazy—like walking into a truck because you have the impulse. That's not all there is to it, but that's the essence—and it worked for me.

NORM CASH:

The Fastest Wit in Either League?

Norm Cash, the 37-year-old first baseman for the Detroit Tigers, got off to such a fast start this season that he asked manager Billy Martin, "Think it's possible to win the Comeback Award two years in a row?" Cash, who had been deemed over the hill, won the "Comeback King" award from "The Sporting News" last year, when he smashed 32 home runs and led his team in RBI's. . . . A master of repartee, Cash says of himself, "To get along in this world, you need Cash and confidence. I've got my confidence back, and I've got Cash printed everywhere: on my doorbell, my stationery, even on the bills I get." . . . Cash, a native of Justiceburg, Texas, was drafted by the Chicago Bears as a running back, but elected pro baseball instead. He won the American League batting title in 1961 and went on to play in four All-Star games. He led the Tigers to a World Series title in 1968. . . . Cash never runs out of humorous stories. Before the '68 World Series with the St. Louis Cardinals, a scout reported to the Tiger players that "there is no Superman on the Cardinal team." "I don't want to contradict you," Cash quipped, "but I just saw Bob Gibson [the Cardinals' ace pitcher] changing clothes in a phone booth." Cash, who has taped a series of humorous interviews for TV, lives with his wife, Myrta, and two children, ages eight and nine. —By Barry Abramson

The Doctor Lets You In

Quick Clues to Skin Problems

Got a skin problem? Nine out of 10 times, it will fall into one of these categories: Contact Dermatitis (redness, itching). This ailment shows irritation from cosmetics, detergents, poison ivy, wrong soap, etc. Remedy: Calamine lotion, zinc oxide. Acne (pustular eruption on face). This is caused by an internal condition. It is usually self-treatable by proper face care or a sulfur lotion. Psoriasis (scaly patches anywhere on body). Can be controlled, but not cured; if it doesn't spread, best home remedy is a tar ointment; if it spreads see the doctor. Eczema (blisters, scales). Can be inherited or from an allergy; if condition is dry, use zinc oxide salve; if oozing, apply wet soaks of Burow's solution. Fungi Infection (mold, like ringworm or athlete's foot). Occurs anywhere on body; home powders or applications can stem condition but most likely needs medical attention. But remember this: If the condition doesn't disappear in two weeks, or spreads, see your physician. Also, home treatment may cause damage. One woman treated her poison ivy with a "home remedy" —and developed gangrene! —By George J. Jaffe

The Diet Watch

Don't* Take an Enemy to Lunch!

Watch out with whom you eat when you're dieting, and you'll diet better. "Man is the only animal who will eat with an enemy," explains one psychologist who specializes in obesity "—and it can make you gain weight." Eating with someone you dislike or resent can make you irritable and restless; you're more likely to nibble at the rolls, smother your steak or hamburger in catsup and order a gloppy dessert. Biting into the rolls, explains the psychologist, doubles for biting your enemy—and it's not the food you'd like to smother. The gloppy dessert is to soothe your irritability. If you must eat lunch with someone you dislike, being aware of the hazards is one good way to control your food intake. —By Harriet La Barre

Jobmanship

Tips on Sizing up A Part-Time Worker

Suppose you have to choose between two applicants for the same part-time job. One is unmarried and attends school part-time. The other is married, has children, and does not attend school. Which would probably stay with his job longer? Answer: Psychologists have discovered that traditional ways of judging part-timers (by years of education, sex, marital status, children vs. no children, etc.) were all useless. None of these things has an effect on whether a part-timer quits quickly or stays for years. The researchers found only five guidelines that you can use. The part-timers who stay for long periods rate themselves on personality tests as having: 1) good intelligence, 2) initiative, 3) self-assurance. And 4) they admit they like their current part-time job "better than any other kind of work that I am qualified to do." Age was the fifth guideline: The older the part-time worker, the more likely he will stay. —By S. R. Redford

LILY TOMLIN:

Why Won't the World Let Us Just Be Ourselves?

"We'd all be better off if we could figure out a way to keep some of the child in us. What's wrong with slopping food all over our faces when we eat, like children do? We could really enjoy eating that way. . . . I believe man's natural state is high, but the culture brings us down. There is all this role-playing. A girl can only do this. A boy can only do that. Why? People should be able to be what they want without all of these restrictions. . . . Two lovers go out happily in the daytime, and as soon as they get into the world they face pressures to conform. By the time they get home again at night they have to get rid of all that and try to be themselves again. We really know so little about ourselves and what we could be like if we followed our natural impulses. We have to work toward that." Patti Page:

"A child had been born that week to parents who didn't want him. Did we? Our answer was to make ready to fly to Arkansas and the hospital the next day."

Patti, with Danny and Kathleen. "All the hit records in the world," says Patti, "do not add up to one child."

These Adopted Children Are Truly Mine!

By Patti Page, as told to Alan Ebert

Kathleen is soft, gentle . . . ethereal in her beauty. Danny is dazzling, the kind of child you expect to tap dance through life. They are miracles, and as their mother, I view them with a never-ending sense of wonder. Each has brought me joy . . . a feeling of fulfillment that I never attained as Patti Page, entertainer. Each has brought me more riches than the collective 60 million records my accountants say I've sold. Each is adopted.

As one of 11 children, I always assumed I would have a large family. When I finally became Mrs. Charles O'Curran—and I say finally, as ours was a long engagement—the plan was to add five O'Currans in as many years. That was December 28, 1956. Six years were to pass before our first child arrived.

When I first thought of adoption, which was toward the end of our first year of marriage, Charlie said no. Like any man, he wanted his own. I was hurt, but I understood. In most cases, adoption is a more difficult decision for a man than it is for a woman. A man's ego is involved. Not that I was without ego or without desire to have "my very own." Lord knows that isn't true. But a woman, I believe, wants to be a mother more than a man feels the desire to be a father. Additionally, ours was a good marriage, and I felt a child would enhance it even more. Like most women, I wanted to have a child with the man I loved. If it couldn't be my very own creation, it could at least be my very own adoption.

During the next four years, Charlie and I sought the advice of numerous doctors. There was a barrage of clinical tests. The experience was not pleasant. Nor was it conducive to keeping the romance alive in our marriage. And then one day Charlie relented. Just like that. I have always been very grateful to him for that decision, as it took great sensitivity. I only wish several of the adoption agencies had been as sensitive. At some, we were told we were too old or too young, too dark or too light. Others thought our religion was wrong, our choice of profession a bad environment for a child. It was horrible and humiliating. For a couple interested in adopting, the road was littered with obstacles. I am told it is different today, that adoption agencies have become more realistic and understanding. I hope so.

As we had more and more negative experiences with the agencies, I began "publicizing" the fact that we wanted to adopt. I was hoping the grapevine would put us in touch with someone who could help us. It did. A Las Vegas booking agent told me of a lawyer-friend who had arranged adoptions through a doctor in Arkansas. I called him that evening. He said he would try. Several weeks later, we received the first call. A child had been born that week to parents who didn't want him. Did we? Our answer was to make ready to fly to Arkansas and the hospital the next day. Hours before the plane was scheduled to depart, we learned the parents had changed their minds.

The next baby we were informed of was "for sale." Our lawyer had felt compelled to tell us of him but was, himself, dead set against our getting involved. I was tempted. A baby! Oh Lord, how I wanted him! But reason prevailed. I wasn't buying a baby, I was adopting one. It was a good decision. I have heard many a story of "baby blackmail" since then. Can you imagine having to "pay for" your child month after month? The child would just have to suffer from the resentment.

Perhaps the most upsetting false alarm involved three recently orphaned children, ages two, five and seven. Their parents had died that week in an auto accident. To add to the tragedy, the courts were going to split the family to make adoption easier. I couldn't bear that thought. I offered, happily, to take them all. Would you believe an existing law on the books prohibited us, who lived in one state, from adopting those children, who lived in another? We appealed to the governor. Despite his attempt to intervene on our behalf, the position of the court could not be changed.

And then, at last, it happened. I was at breakfast when the lawyer called. Dimly, I heard him say that a healthy baby girl had been born the previous evening and she was ours for the asking. But I couldn't ask. I was literally struck dumb. Charlie had to call back later to say we indeed did want the child and that we would be in Arkansas the next day to claim her.

Twenty-four hours later, I was looking at the most beautiful child I had ever seen. I was trembling. The doctor, as if reading my mind, asked if I wished to hold her. Oh, no, I couldn't! But he placed her in my arms and immediately she became my little girl. The trembling stopped. I felt Charlie looking at me. He had tears in his eyes. "I know you won't believe this," he said, "but she has my mother's features." And so, for Charlie's mother, she was named Kathleen.

A year passed—perhaps the most special of my life. One afternoon, a friend of ours came to visit with his adopted daughter. Lisa was 10 and adored Kathleen. But we noticed toward the end of the afternoon that her usual good humor was somewhat clouded. Her father inquired if anything was wrong. Lisa replied with the honesty of a child. "If you could adopt me, why didn't you adopt a baby sister? I've been lonely!" At that very moment, the decision to add another O'Curran was made. Our dazzling Danny-boy arrived six months later. I remember waking those wondrous mornings thinking, "Hey, Patti Page, you're the mother of two children!" They were as much my flesh and blood as flesh and blood can be. And that can be a danger. It is then the thought not to tell them flashes through your mind.

I began telling my children of their adoption with a bedtime story that told of a lonely mommy and daddy who had no little girl (and in Danny's case, no little boy). Their loneliness took them on a search—a search that lasted until they found the prettiest little girl, and later, most handsome little boy, imaginable. And guess who that little girl and boy were? I will never forget the first time Kathleen responded to that quesion. In a shy little voice she asked, "Me?" Those are the moments you never forget.

Any fears Charlie and I felt about our children's ability to handle the story of their adoption were dispelled when Kathleen was a little past four. In the middle of a supper party for our friends, Kathleen appeared, complaining she couldn't sleep. It was "Daddy, tell me a story" time. But Daddy suggested she tell everyone a story instead. She did. She told the story of her adoption, ending with... "and I'm that pretty little girl." There wasn't a dry eye at the table.

More recently, on a rainy afternoon, the kids were playing indoors. From the kitchen, I heard Kathleen say to Danny, "Do you want to play house?" Danny, a blond Huck Finn of a boy, most decidedly did not. "Okay then," she said, "let's pretend we're going to the hospital to adopt a baby." To which my little chauvinist said, "Only if we adopt a boy."

Although we take pride in the way we're dealing with adoption, neither Charlie nor I believe we have heard all the questions our children will ask. We have some answers prepared. Others... we shall see. Recently, Danny asked if he came from my stomach. I simply said no. He thought a moment and then went back to "Sesame Street." It reminded me of the time Kathleen returned from her first day of school wanting to know if I was her real mommy. I felt a momentary sense of panic. Finally I told her that indeed I was her real mother. To which Kathleen replied: "That's what I told the teacher when she said she was going to be my daytime mommy."

As they grow older, like most adopted children, Kathleen and Danny will be curious about their "natural" parents. They will also wonder why they weren't wanted by those parents. Charlie and I intend to speak frankly of what we know of the natural parents, with neither glorification nor abuse. We hope to make our kids feel that they were more accepted and wanted by us than they ever could have been rejected by people who were unable for their own reasons to raise or love a child. For it is love that makes the difference. And no matter what mistakes parents may make in raising their children, there is one mistake Charlie and I didn't make. We did not not love our children. And they know that. More important, they feel it.

Can you tell the difference?

You start with the Laredo Filter Blend Kit, either regular or menthol. The whole kit—including the simple, sturdy cigarette-making machine (guaranteed in writing for 2 years)—costs less than $2.* Once you have the machine, refills, complete with enough filters, paper tubes, carry-around packs and vacuum-fresh Laredo tobacco to make five more packs, cost less than $1.* That's less than 20c a pack.*

No factory-made cigarette can cost so little, yet taste so fresh. Vacuum-fresh Laredo. Try it!

Those Old Radio Soap Operas —How They Made Me What I Am Today

A grown woman's fond recollection of "Ma Perkins," "Just Plain Bill" and other childhood friends

Bettmann Archive

"Following 'Helen Trent' was 'The Guiding Light.' I think it was listening to that dramatic voice intoning, 'Dr. Brent . . . call surgery. . . . Surgery calling . . . Dr. Brent' that made me decide to be a nurse."

I hadn't thought of soap operas in years, but I turned the TV on the other day as one was starting. Half watching as I tackled my ironing, my memory jogged, and I went back to that idyllic summer when I was 10.

There was no hint that year would be followed by a generation gap, for that summer Mom and I were welded together spiritually and literally (our living room wasn't big enough for much physical separation) by the magic of the soap opera.

Our day began at five minutes to nine when we both struggled out of bed in time for "Myrt and Marge." I don't remember much about them, as I was usually trying to eat my breakfast while I listened. Since we only owned one radio that was too big to move to another room, I had to time things to the second in order not to miss anything.

All daytime programs were 15 minutes long, with a commercial break at the beginning and end, so it meant we had to be well organized if we were to get anything done at all and still not miss our programs. The trick was to start a task the second the program ended, which gave us about six minutes until the start of the next one. My first real respect for Mom's domestic skill came when I watched her fit things into those short commercial breaks. I learned all kinds of things – like soaking the dishes when "Just Plain Bill" first started, a quick flip with the dishcloth during the next commercial, then they were ready to drain dry during "Joyce Jordan, Girl Intern," and so forth. Mom's the only person I ever knew who could maneuver a wash through the wringer and not miss more than a minute or two of the story.

Looking back, I realize it all started when I became aware I was more interested in an announcer's sexy voice than in what Little Orphan Annie was doing. Nightly I listened for "This is Pierre Andre saying good night." This intimate message never failed to send delicious shivers running up and down my spine, and I was enthralled with the idea of being loved by a handsome Frenchman named Pierre.

From there, it was an easy transition to the endless problems encountered by "Big Sister," "Pepper Young's Family," "Vic and Sade," and "Ma Perkins" and her brood. We never looked at a clock during the day. We could tell time by what was on the radio. I especially liked Aunt Jenny's "Real Life Stories." To be honest, I also enjoyed her cozy kitchen chats with Danny (he was the announcer who could turn every conversation into something about Spry shortening) more than the story itself. I do remember one of her stories, though. It was about a good-looking boy named Jerry who was contemplating suicide after his face was hideously scarred in an explosion. Then he met a blind girl; they fell in love, and in my idealistic young mind I was sure they lived happily ever after. I cried buckets over that one.

Sometime in between "Girl Alone," the adventures of a girl reporter and her boyfriend Scoop, and "Young Dr. Malone," we would throw something together that passed for lunch and then settle down for the afternoon. It began with the indomitable "Helen Trent," who was already a glamorous woman of the world while I was still a child. By the time she went off the air, I had passed her and was proving for myself that romance is possible even after 35. Following Helen there was "The Guiding Light." I think it was listening to that dramatic voice intoning, "Dr. Brent . . . call surgery. . . . Surgery calling . . . Dr. Brent" that made me decide to be a nurse. Our afternoon ended with "Backstage Wife." When that was over we knew it was time to start dinner.

I realize most people would think my time listening to soap operas was completely wasted, but I must say something in their defense. Believe it or not, I got my first appreciation of good music and poetry from this sudsy make-believe world, since I wasn't brought up in a particularly culturally stimulating atmosphere. Even now, I haven't forgotten the program called "This Day Is Ours." Each day the announcer recited a poem which I recall went something like this:

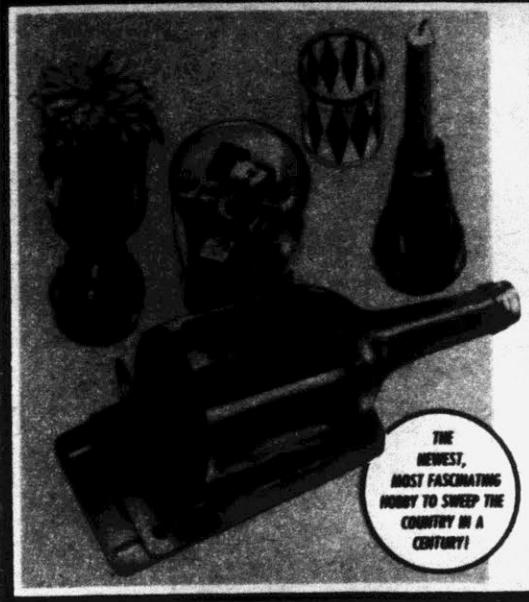

"To have a friend
At each day's end
When tasks are done
And pay is ours,
To love someone
Then will I know
This day is ours."

I remember very little about the program, but how I love that poem!

As for music, I don't recall the name of the song or the words, but 35 years later I still catch myself humming the haunting theme song of "Life Can Be Beautiful," which concerned a girl named Chi-Chi and her beloved Papa. I didn't care much for the story of Mary Marlin, but I never missed the beginning or the ending so I could hear "Claire de Lune" played, and my love for folk singing dates back to "Our Gal Sunday." Every day the announcer would ask, "Can this little girl from a small mining town in the West really find happiness as the wife of a wealthy and titled Englishman?" Then they played "Red River Valley." Just hearing it now brings back that carefree summer when my greatest problem was could I get out of the bathroom in time to hear the next program?

Alas, September came too soon for me. Just a few weeks before the summer ended, a brand-new program had hit the airwaves. It was the story of "Pretty Kitty Kelly," a beautiful Irish colleen emigrating to the United States. It was introduced to the lilting strains of "Kerry Dance," and to me, a plain girl of undiluted German stock, she was everything I longed to be: beautiful, red-headed, with a musical Irish brogue. Anyway, she hadn't even reached Ellis Island when I had to go back to school. For the first week I found if I sprinted the three blocks to and from school with the speed of greased lightning, I could come home for lunch and hear all but the last five minutes of it; however, by the second week my teacher pointed out that since I had been late every day, it might be a better idea to eat lunch in the school cafeteria. I reluctantly abandoned my beloved colleen.

By the next summer I was more interested in outdoor pursuits like walking past Eddie's house with three or four other giggling girls. But somewhere between childhood and puberty that golden summer of the soaps stays a part of me.

"Too often you hear, 'Oh, it's just nerves.' I'd rather lose the function of an arm than be plagued with nerves. By all means, seek help."

A Little Glossary of Advice on Handling Nervous Ailments

DEPRESSION AND ANXIETY

Anxieties are not normally suicidal unless depression also is present. Depression usually is accompanied by varying degrees of anxiety. In depression there is a feeling of the blues, impending disaster, hopelessness, and loss of the will to live. Suicide is a very real possibility and anyone who voices thoughts of suicide needs immediate professional attention.

In anxiety there may be one or more of the following: nervousness; inability to concentrate; smothering spells, or the feeling that it is impossible to get enough air (the fingers may tingle); tension headaches; stiff neck; obesity (many fat people suffer from anxiety); fatigue.

HYSTERIA

This can take many forms. Most common is uncontrollable laughing or crying. Restraint may be necessary. Until the doctor can administer a sedative, get rid of all the bystanders except one or two and provide as quiet an atmosphere as possible. Also of help may be the use of a cool cloth on the forehead, warm milk or cocoa, and a nerve tablet if one is available.

If the patient already has taken one dose of a nerve tablet, then it should be safe enough to repeat it. Occasionally a sleeping tablet is available, and again this should be safe to take, as well as being advisable if your doctor cannot be contacted immediately. Start with half a sleeping tablet in less severe cases and repeat in twenty minutes if needed. If the patient is extremely hysterical, give the entire sleeping tablet.

INSOMNIA

If chronic, insomnia often is a sign of tension. It also can occur for a variety of other reasons, such as napping during the day, illness, pain, etc. Often warm milk or cocoa acts as a sedative. Too warm a bath can be stimulating, but a lukewarm one may help. Reading can be good, too.

There is a difference of opinion as to whether it is better to get up and do something when unable to sleep. I feel that it may be preferable to get up and read for a while rather than toss and turn.

Certainly, no person who has insomnia should drink coffee unless decaffeinated, and it is best to avoid stimulating reading or television prior to bedtime.

NERVES

The causes of nervousness are complex and legion. Most nervousness results from pressure on the individual to conform or to produce and from feelings of inadequacy to handle problems. If this persists over a period of time, then a chronic anxiety state ensues along with symptoms of emotionally induced illness.

An illustration will help. In primitive jungle society, let us assume we come face to face with an armed enemy or a dangerous animal. Immediately, adrenalin is triggered into our circulation. The heart rate speeds up. Sugar is released from its stores into the bloodstream for quick energy. The circulation accelerates. Digestive functions cease, and the blood is sent instead to the muscles of the arms and legs. Respirations become faster, and many other adjustments are made to prepare us for escape or combat. A flight or fight then ensues.

In our more sophisticated life, we are constantly faced with threats that are more subtle but, nevertheless, just as serious potentially as our dangerous jungle enemy. Our body still goes through the defensive reactions. Yet there is no fleeing or fighting in a physical sense. Being thus keyed up for action when none is taking place eventually results in an anxiety state. The organs of our body suffer for it in the form of asthma, ulcers, etc.

For relief, sometimes a little more time off or a vacation may handle the problem and allow us to put things back in perspective. Persistent nervousness can be disabling, indeed, and a doctor should be seen. There is too much tendency to minimize nervousness, and I wouldn't be guilty of compounding the guilt by suggesting home remedies. Too often you hear, "Oh, it's just nerves." I'd rather lose the function of an arm than be plagued with nerves. By all means, seek help.

NEUROSIS VS. PSYCHOSIS

I see many people who are nervous and afraid they are going to "lose their minds." This is not so. Actually, "losing one's mind" means that the individual has lost contact with reality. He becomes disoriented and is detached from the problems of everyday life.

The person who is neurotic is nervous and tense. Miserable as he is, he is in contact with too much reality. This is, of course, an oversimplification of a complex problem, but it should serve to reassure the tense individual that he is not "going crazy."

SUICIDE

Psychiatric evaluation should be done on every person who mentions or threatens suicide! Time and again it has been shown that these are not idle threats. The family always is reluctant to admit that suicide really is possible until it is too late. Any person who threatens suicide must be taken with the utmost seriousness.

Not all depressions are suicidal, but suicides are due to depressions. Insomnia is an early and common sign of depression. So is loss of appetite or the fact that food no longer tastes good. Then there is fatigue, being tired all the time, even waking up tired. There is loss of interest in surroundings.

TREATMENT OF MENTAL ILLNESS

This can be varied and, naturally, must be determined by a physician. A point often forgotten, however, is physical fitness. A good exercise program would help many who suffer from mental problems.

Do You Know These Odd Health Facts?

By John E. Gibson

True or False: It's healthier to accept checks than to accept money. (See number 4.)

The things that keep us from feeling "on top of it" range from minor discomforts to major misfortunes. This quiz clues you in on some interesting tips that may stand you in good stead, health-wise and mood-wise.

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. When something happens that causes a marked change in your daily life pattern and environment, this is a time when you should watch your health.

2. The best way to cure minor itching is to scratch.

3. Anybody who puts on gloves when he goes to bed should have his head examined.

4. It's healthier to accept checks than to accept money.

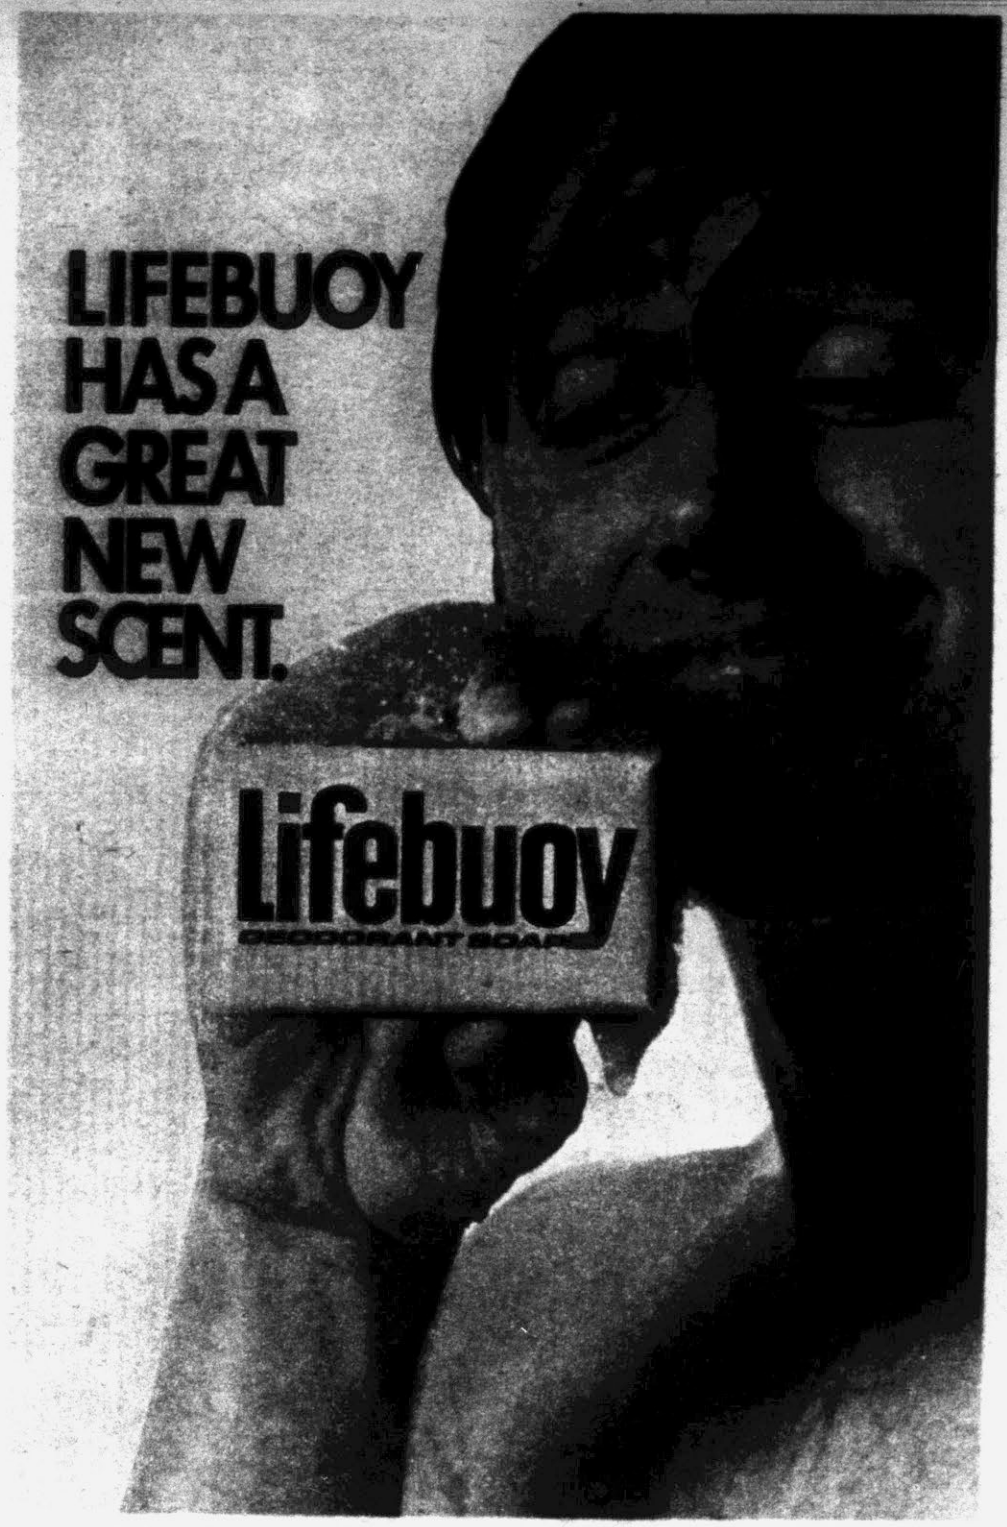

ANSWERS

1. True. Studies at the University of Oregon have shown that marked changes in a person's pattern of living and environment are "significantly associated with illness frequency and subjective anxiety about health." Other investigations bear out this finding. So if a circumstance arises that turns your accustomed pattern of activities topsy-turvy, don't take unnecessary chances with your health during this period.

2. False. Scratching may irritate the area and result in infection. However, a team of leading dermatologists concluded from their studies that "application of heat in the form of very hot water [applied briefly with a washrag or under running water] is often the most effective measure to relieve itching." They also caution that the water should be warmer than is customarily used in a bath or shower, but not hot enough to burn the skin. (If the itching persists, see your doctor.)

3. False. If—like thousands of other people—he suffers from morning stiffness of arthritic hands, he's doing himself a big favor. In recent studies conducted at the Arthritic Center of the Albert Einstein Medical Center, it was found that stretch gloves put on before retiring were remarkably effective in either relieving or completely eliminating the painful morning stiffness of arthritic hands. The investigators also reported that with the majority of the arthritic patients who were the subjects of the study, "distressing night symptoms of throbbing, tingling of the hands was virtually eliminated. Relief was achieved within the first day or two of wearing the gloves."

4. True—if the checks don't bounce, that is. Recent studies by Drs. Berel L. Abrams and Norton G. Waterman of the University of Louisville School of Medicine have dramatically demonstrated that money is the favorite resting place for more than 20 different kinds of germs. In a laboratory experiment to determine whether the term "filthy lucre" was an exaggeration or a masterpiece of understatement, their researches confirmed the latter. For the tests, coins and paper money of various denominations were obtained. Findings: "Thirteen percent of the coins and 42 percent of the paper money were contaminated by potential pathogens [disease-producing bacteria]." Small bills and coins of the lower denominations (pennies and nickles) were the most contaminated. Besides the serious conclusion that you should wash your hands after handling money, the medical-research team offered several somewhat tongue-in-cheek suggestions: 1) If you must carry money, carry only large bills (preferably the $50 or $100 denominations). 2) Don't make change. 3) Get rid of your money rapidly. (The researchers point out that this isn't much of a problem for most of us.)

HERE'S 5¢ TO SMELL IT.

By Rosalyn Abrevaya

One of These Teen Beauties Is a National Hair Styling Champion—Which One?

Of Alabama

Dimpled, dark-haired Marilyn Preston has two boys in tow. Their names are Jerry and Conrad, and they happen to be little boy dummies she uses for her ventriloquism acts at home in Opelika, Ala. She also finds time to be a varsity cheerleader, singer, seamstress, cook and winner of awards, including one for good citizenship and another for home economics. She is also a member of the Student Council and such clubs as the Beta Honorary Society. The daughter of a minister, she chose Billy Graham and Mrs. Richard Nixon as the celebrities she'd most like to meet. She sews most of her own clothes and "loves simple things" in her favorite colors of red, blue or yellow. Marilyn calls her hairstyle "The Dixie Dazzle," and says it's "simple to fix yet feminine." Along with the other three non-winning finalists, she receives a $500 college scholarship.

THE DIXIE DAZZLE

Wash hair, then set on extra-large brush rollers. Hand dry with hair dryer. Brush thoroughly. Part hair on the left side and pull the top front around to the back into a loose ponytail. Flip the ponytail up toward the forehead, pin the hair with a barrette and then let the ponytail fall back down over the barrette.

KYLE GRACE
Of Massachusetts

Kyle Grace has always known she wanted to be a nurse when she grew up. The Dighton, Mass., high school senior will attend the Burbank School of Nursing in Fitchburg, Mass., this fall. Her winning hairstyle, "The Massachusetts Prom Curl," is festive, perhaps a natural result of her love of music and dance. She plays three instruments and belongs to the band, the flute ensemble and the clarinet choir at school. Kyle is also a cheerleader and plays intramural basketball and volleyball!

"School is definitely more important today than ever before," Kyle believes. "And a lot of kids use drugs—but don't admit it. I think too much of myself and my body to get involved in the drug scene," she says emphatically. Hugh Downs and Pearl Bailey are the people she'd most like to meet, "because they are interested in everything and everyone."

MASSACHUSETTS PROM CURL

Wash hair and let it dry straight. Make a part on either side of the head and section off the crown. Using hair spray and setting lotion, curl the back crown of hair on very small rollers. Dry thoroughly. Set the rest of the hair with medium-sized hot rollers. After removing all rollers, put top hair in an elastic band, tie on hair-ribbon bows and shape curls to cascade down back.

JANET HECHT
Of Kansas

Janet Hecht, a senior at Bern High School in Seneca, Kan., is deeply involved in church activities. She serves as organist, secretary, assistant Sunday school teacher – and is active in Youth Fellowship at Friedens United Church of Christ. Janet loves music and drama; she plays piccolo or flute in the school band, sings in musical plays, acts in school dramas. This is the same girl who broke one county running record on her school track team and loves playing basketball and touch football as well. And, to top it all off, she's also president of the school student body. Of the drug problem she says: "I feel strongly that anyone taking drugs has lost contact with God." Janet dubbed her becoming hairstyle "The Kansas Carrousel," because, as she explains it, "it's dainty and feminine—just like a carrousel with all its ribbons and frills."

THE KANSAS CARROUSEL

Wash hair and let it dry naturally. Part hair in the center. Make a ponytail of the top layer of back hair on the crown of the head. Set the hair on medium, heated mist rollers, excluding the ponytail and one tendril at the side of the face. When dry, comb it out and place a ribbon on the top ponytail. Brush hair behind the ear on one side and push tendril in front of ear.

CAROL ANN WILLIAMS
Of Pennsylvania

Carol Ann Williams, of Allentown, Pa., was FAMILY WEEKLY's choice for national Junior Miss Hair Stylist. She's a baton champion, cheerleader, and riding, tennis and swimming enthusiast. But then, on the other hand, she's also a member of the National Honor Society and has been accepted by Duke University as a premed student. Her love of sports and freestyle ballet (something she's been doing since the first grade) inspired her winning hairstyle in the contest sponsored by John H. Breck. "Carol's Cunning Coiffure," as she calls it, is great for all occasions and maintains a neat look without much attention. Carol's favorite celebrities are comedian Bob Hope and ice skater Peggy Fleming. She will receive a $1,000 college scholarship as the hairstyling winner and will have her portrait painted in the traditional Breck-girl style.

CAROL'S CUNNING COIFFURE

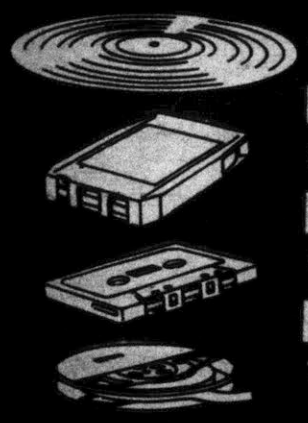

Part hair on the left side. Set it with medium-sized rollers. Leave one strand free on the left side and set it on a small roller. Brush thoroughly and sweep hair to right side, except for strand on small roller. Secure hair with a rubber band and, if you choose, tie on a ribbon. Unwind hair on small roller and let it dangle on other side.

What Causes Dog Bite? Human Error, Probably.

"Just about every dog bite could have been prevented with a little care for the dog and a minimum of understanding of basic dog behavior."

By Felicia Ames

A young friend and her husband have been thinking about getting a dog. They have two small children. The husband had a dog years ago, when he was a boy; his wife hasn't the slightest idea about dogs but believes she likes them. They both feel a dog might be good for the children and the children are all for it. But ever since a well-meaning neighbor cautioned them about the possibility of biting, they've been in a quandary. Maybe you're wondering, as they are, and asking the same kind of questions. Do all dogs bite? Do some bite more than others? Why do dogs bite? Is there anything to do to prevent dogs from biting? Here are some answers.

The fact is that any dog, pushed far enough, will bite. After all, it's his only defense. The vast majority of dogs, though, go all the way through life without ever showing their teeth, except perhaps to the veterinarian at checkup time. Outside of a miniscule percentage of sick dogs, dogs vicious by nature, it is remarkable how few dogs bite. Those normal ones who do, do so because of poor training, no training at all or provocation.

Consider the training record of the average dog who has taken a nip at someone without provocation. Almost without exception he has been the victim of cruel handling; more often than not the owner has used a stick on him. Cowed, sullen, the dog has come to fear all humans. Quite naturally, he is likely to attack any stranger who comes near him.

Some people regard dogs simply as protection against invasion. They have no understanding whatsoever of what dogs are all about; in fact, they are often hostile to dogs and believe that the more vicious they can make the dog, the better weapon he is. Unfortunately, there is no way of getting dogs away from such owners, unless the owners can be caught in the act of cruelty.

Quite the opposite kind of owner is the one who gives no training at all. Left to do as they please, dogs will bite, if such happens to be their pleasure. Had they been caught in the act of snarling, while they were pups, and stopped then and there, they would not have grown up to be snapping dogs.

By far the greatest number of dog bites are the result of provocation, particularly by children. Studies have revealed that 20 percent of them have involved children under six, and 50 percent have involved children under nine. Certainly no dog is going to take the kind of mistreatment some children have been known to hand out. How long can any dog take someone tugging at his tail or ears or trying to ride him as if he were a pony?

Just about every dog bite could have been prevented with a little care for the dog and a minimum understanding of basic dog behavior. Every dog owner should know, for example, that the most basic instinct of any dog is to defend his body. Any dog will bite if he feels endangered. He will bite to protect himself or the things he loves. A mother dog will always defend her young. Dogs will defend the house they live in or the yard they play in.

But suppose you've already acquired that pup you're crazy about. Everything's going beautifully and then one day you discover that he seems to be growling as you go to pick up his food dish. All biters start this way. What to do? Take the dish away quickly, with a very firm, "No!" Replace the dish. If he growls again, repeat the treatment. Repeat it again and again and again. If he still hasn't learned the lesson, lift him by his forelegs and shake him a little. A quick, light cuff under the chin is also effective. Some trainers give a short, sharp slap across the nose. The point to keep in mind is that dogs learn by association. In this case they must come to associate the loss of their dinner with their growling.

If your pup is playful, it's a good thing; you'll have hours of pleasure with him. But, please, don't teach him games like tug-of-war, which, innocent as it seems, can easily turn a frolicky puppy into a nipping adult. Most important, children must be taught not to play roughly with a puppy, and never to tease him. Children who are made to feel proud of their dog will never abuse him.

Hypnosis vs. Pain: The Agony—and the Triumph—Maury Wills' Fans Never Saw

By Kate Holliday

Maury Wills does his special thing as he takes a dive to beat the ball to the bag.

September 23, 1962, was a great day for the Los Angeles Dodgers and shortstop Maury Wills. He stole his 97th base of the season, breaking Ty Cobb's 1915 record. Later, on the day the pennant race ended, October 3, he got three more in one game, bringing his official tally for one year to an astonishing 104, a feat that may never be equalled.

And, as everyone in baseball knew, Wills did it on sheer, unadulterated guts, in agony.

Throwing one's body at a canvas bag feetfirst, at full speed along the ground, is not exactly like leaping onto a feather bed. And doing it day after day, often half a dozen times a game (he got thrown out 13 times), resulted in Maury's developing a right leg so horribly bruised that even his teammates could not bear to look at it. From his hipbone to his ankle, he was not only one throbbing, swollen contusion but, particularly in the thigh, was hemorrhaging internally for weeks at a time.

Why didn't he stop at the record?

"We were in a race," Wills says now. "It was my job to help the team."

The Dodger doctors gave him enzymes by mouth daily in an effort to stop the internal bleeding, aspirin to help him sleep, and his leg was packed in ice after each session on the field. But he and everyone else knew that the only thing that might bring the leg back to normal was to stop doing exactly what he was doing—for months.

Eight weeks after the season mercifully ended, Wills and Sandy Koufax were appearing in Las Vegas with Milton Berle. Berle introduced them socially to a professional hypnotist named Arthur Ellen. Ellen noticed that Maury was still limping badly, and seemed unduly depressed, and they began talking about the possibility that there was some mental block to his full recovery —in other words, that he might be subconsciously worried about his future.

Later, Wills learned that Ellen had worked with other athletes, hypnotizing them in order that they might reveal the fears that limited their ability to perform. It was an intriguing idea: that his problem with his leg might possibly have a mental as well as a physical cause.

Wills says, "I knew before I got the bruises that I can bear pain better than most people, so my problem was probably not only my leg. It was something else. And not until I had voiced my fear could I rid myself of it. Then it was gone."

Wills says now, "I was totally unfamiliar with hypnotism. I knew that it was no substitute for formal medicine. But I sincerely hoped it might help get me well. I put my trust in Mr. Ellen completely. I wanted to be helped by him."

On December 23 and 24, Wills met with dignified, well-groomed, fifty-ish Arthur Ellen, and the hypnotist learned that he was an almost perfect subject. He not only went "under" quickly and easily, but could obey commands, could talk if he were told to, answer questions, perform physical acts demanded of him.

It sounds miraculously simple, but that first session in 1962 uncovered, in a matter of minutes, the "block" that was imprisoning the mind of Maury Wills: Under hypnosis, he told Arthur Ellen that he had overheard some of his teammates saying, sadly, "He's going to lose that leg!" And the idea had been such a horror that he had buried it in his subconscious mind.

Testing for strictly physical impairment, Ellen asked Wills if his legs were cold.

"No, they feel warm now."

"Bend your knees."

He did.

Then, on a previous suggestion from Koufax, "Try a 'duck walk.' "

Maury went down on his haunches, and inched forward on his toes, knees bent. Easily. With no pain. Ellen asked if he knew what he was doing. Yes. Did he realize that being able to perform that difficult exercise meant that there was probably no permanent damage to his leg, that he wasn't going to lose it, that he could play again as well as he ever had? Did he understand? Yes. With that, Ellen brought him back to consciousness, to a relaxed consciousness, the first in many months.

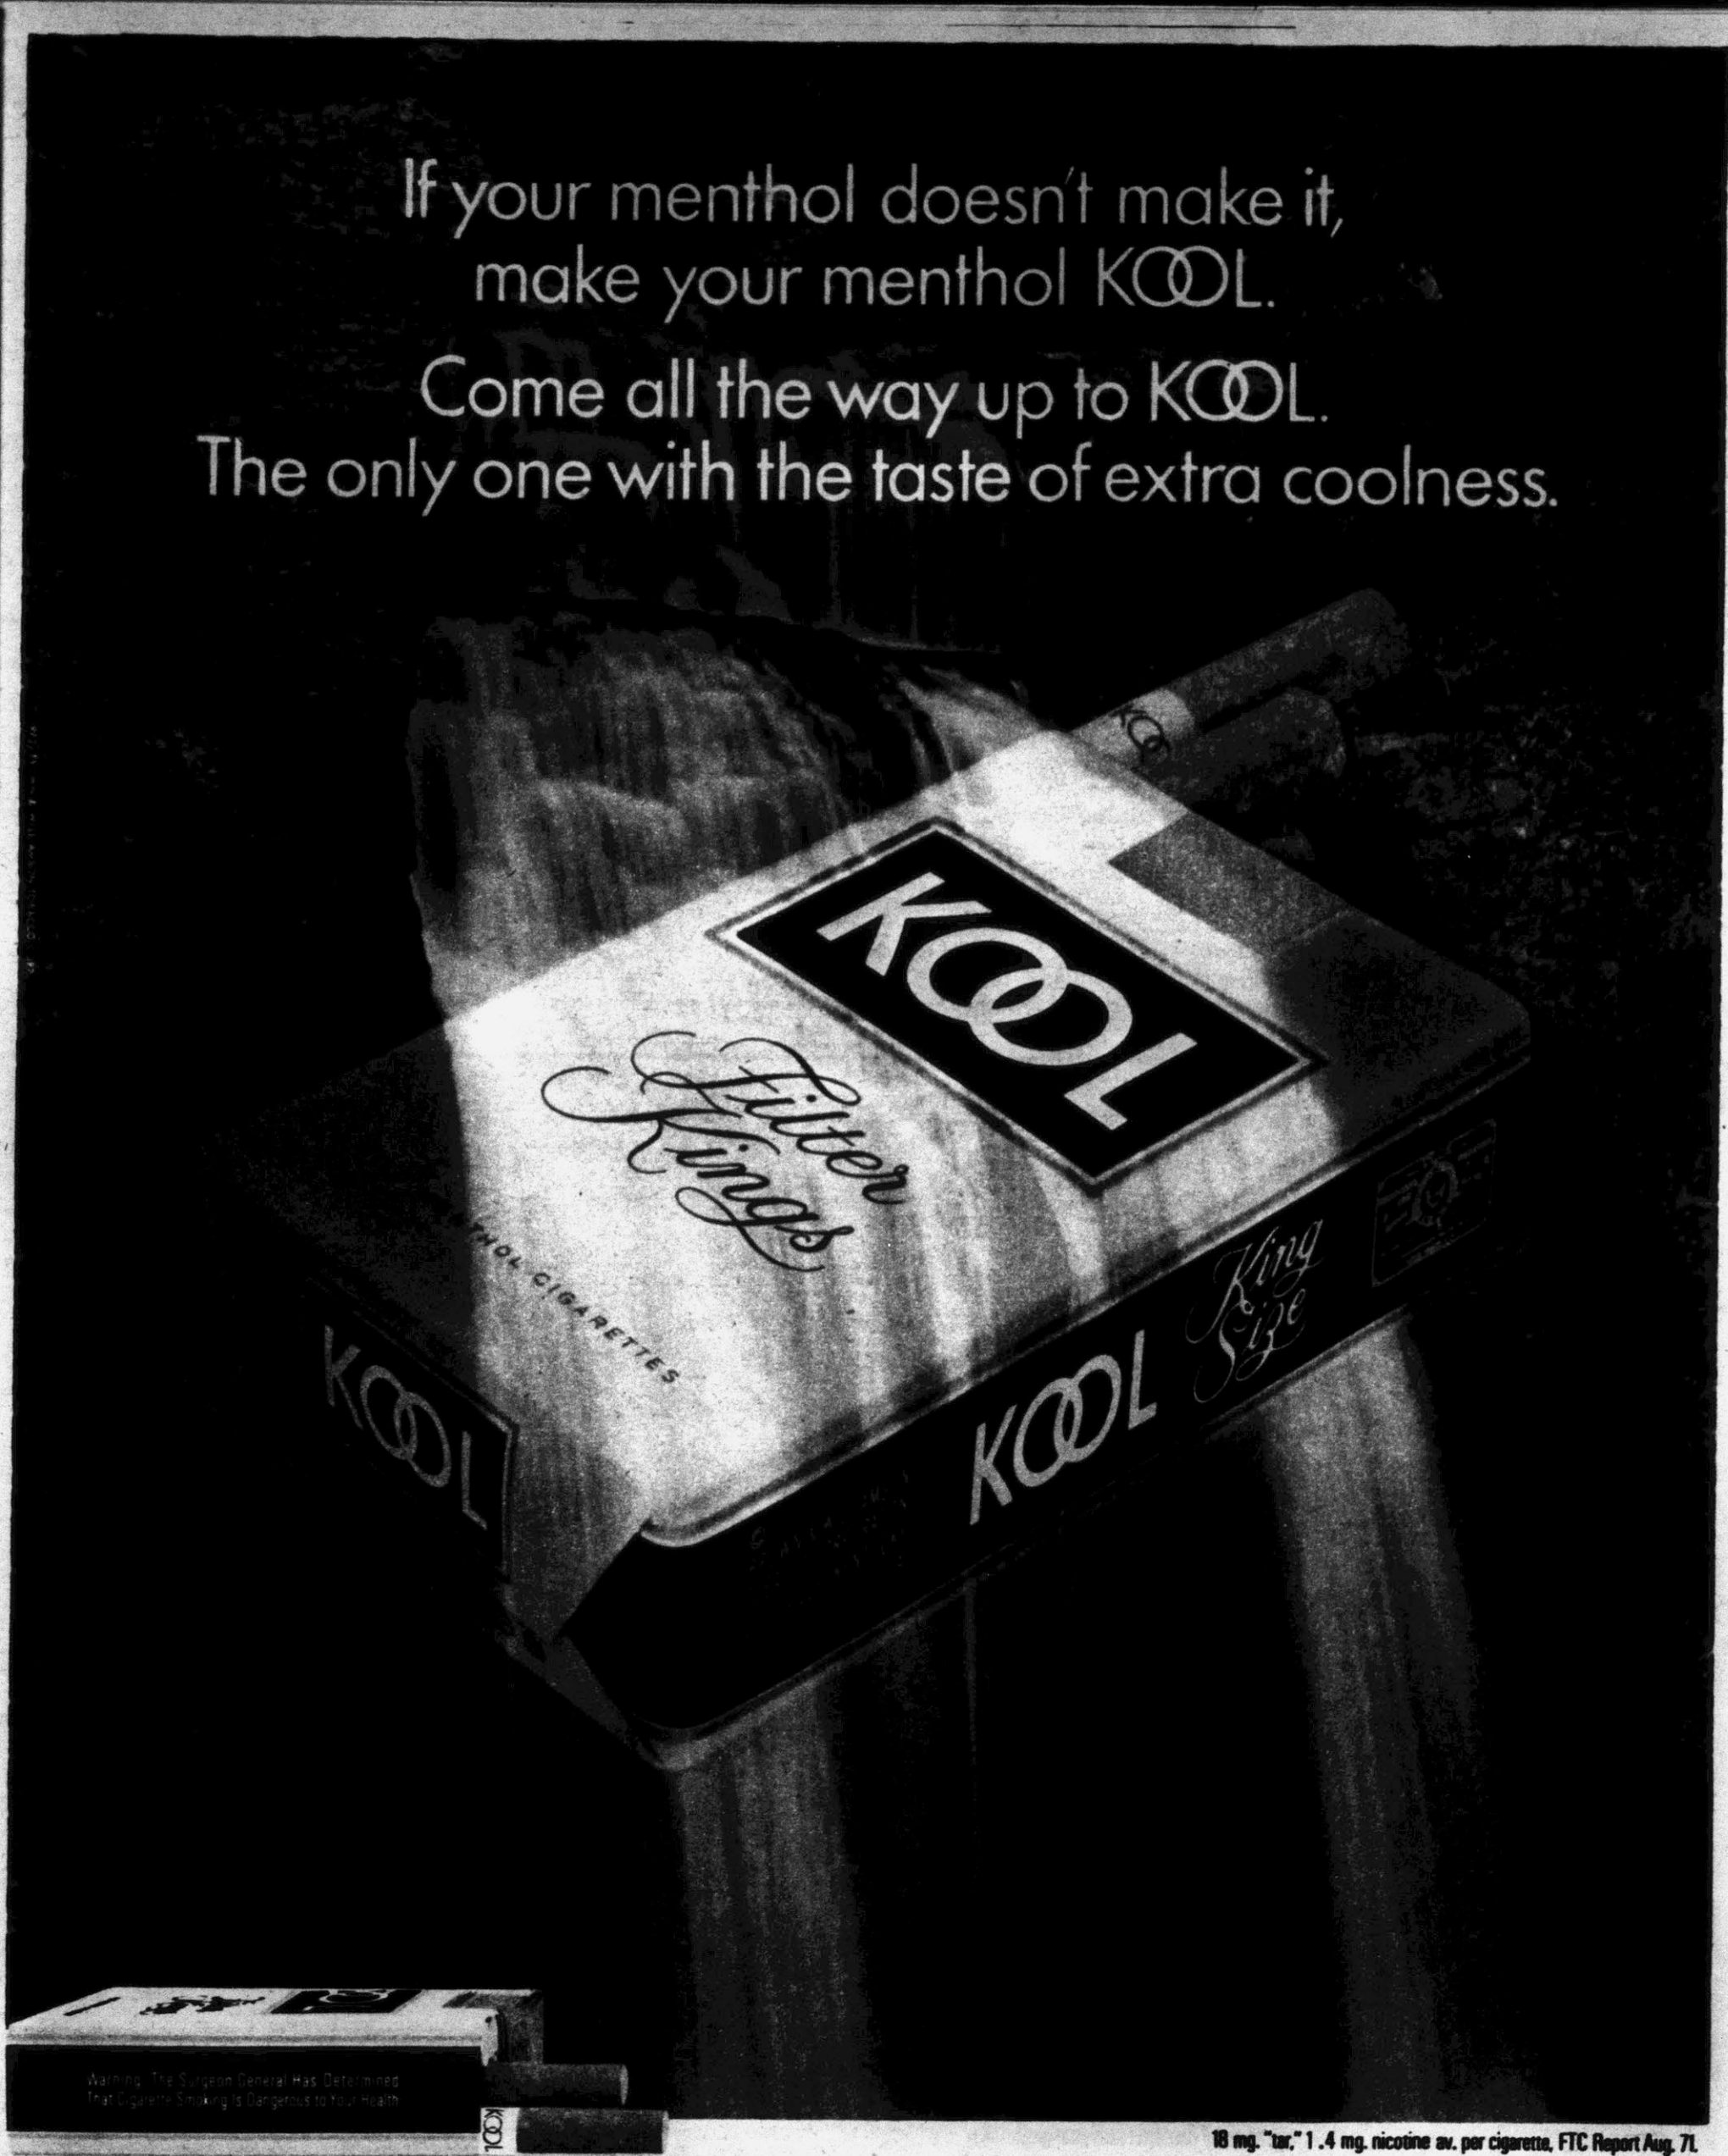

"By ridding me of that subconscious terror, Arthur gave me a new attitude," Wills says. "I knew before I got the bruises that I can bear pain better than most people, so my problem was probably not only my leg. It was something else. And not until I had voiced my fear out loud could I rid myself of it. Then it was gone.

"Baseball is 100 percent mental, as far as I'm concerned," Wills continues.

"And no one is a star, or a superstar, unless he has the right approach. Even Willie Mays or Sandy would have been nothing without the positive, concrete confidence that they could be great, that they could do something better than anyone else in the game.

"I had to develop my personal skills over a long period of time. From the first, I knew I was too small to blast one over the Dodger fence except by a fluke. So I aimed at simply getting hits, getting on base. I knew, too, that I could run fast, so I practiced how to steal. I practiced morning, noon and night. That was my 'thing,' not only to 'psych' the other team but to help win ball games.

"And, without legs, good legs, I was finished. That was the fear Arthur uprooted from my mind. That is how hypnotism helped me stay in baseball."

It is only in recent years, as you probably know, that hypnosis has been recognized as a reputable adjunct to medicine, not merely a café act. In the past, there were no schools that taught one how to be a hypnotist; one learned the art either by trial and error or by watching someone performing it. One also recognized the ability in oneself, usually by accident.

Today, a man such as Arthur Ellen, who was previously relegated to the nightclub arena but who has studied extensively in psychology and kindred fields, is an acknowledged specialist whose talents may be of value in psychiatry, police work, education, and so on. He thus has been a guest lecturer at the UCLA Neuro-Psychiatric Clinic, before numerous PTA's across the country, to delegations of police chiefs, and performed services for the armed forces. His profession was dignified in 1958 by the AMA Council on Mental Health, when it published a bibliography on hypnosis. Today, too, there are several societies across the nation, made up of M.D.'s and Ph.D.'s, who use hypnosis as routinely as any other medical tool.

Working primarily with people who are not mentally ill but who have some sort of impediment to peak performance, Ellen describes his goals, saying, "I try to deal with a client's unspoken, unrealized, underlying problems, to free him from anxiety, to teach him self-assurance. When I reach his subconscious, I am in effect severing his mind from his body, and he can reveal his emotional hangups as simply as a child can."

Ellen's clients do not, as a rule, come to him on a regular basis, as do those of a psychiatrist. For, difficult as it may be for the layman to understand, one or perhaps two short sessions under hypnosis may free the subject completely from whatever is causing him concern at the moment. And he will stay free, a fact so hard to believe that many people ask for a "confirmation" appointment.

Maury was one of these. And, once positive that his head was really straight, he went back into baseball with vigor. In fact, in 1965, counting the World Series games as well as the regular season, Maury got 97 stolen bases, in effect breaking Cobb's old record for the second time around.

I have seen Arthur Ellen hypnotize Maury Wills face-to-face. It was an extraordinary 20 minutes.

It was a quiet, calm session, with no swinging pendulums, no flashing lights, no other gimmicks. It took place in an ordinary, well-furnished, carpeted, modern office. Maury sat in an armless black-leather chair, and in a normal but firm voice Ellen told him to put his hands in his lap, close his eyes and relax. He added that when he counted to six, Wills would be "under," and touched him fleetingly on the forehead. Still using normal tones, Ellen counted. Wills was hypnotized. Of that, I have no doubt.

On command, Maury raised his right arm and for about 10 minutes kept it in what would usually be an extremely uncomfortable position, with no signs of physical strain. When told he could not open his eyes but should try as hard as possible to do so, he could not – but I could feel his effort. When told he could talk, he did so.

Hypnotism may not work for everyone with a mental "quirk." It is not, of course, a substitute for the practice of medicine. But it may be its adjunct. It is not, I repeat, a day-to-day thing with Maury Wills.

But, as he says, "I'm 39 now, and my career was supposed to have been over six years ago. Hypnotism has helped me in the past, and, by having its special therapy available when I need it, it assures me that I can function well now and in the future."

Now, some of the most unusual creatures ever to frolic through the pages of a book are here, to show your child how much fun learning to read can be. Your little one will meet them in BRIGHT AND EARLY BOOKS, the remarkable books created by Dr. Seuss and his friends for 2 to 6 year-olds.

Take a look at the books, and you'll know why children fall in love with them. First, there are the wonderful wacky characters—"reading teachers" so entertaining they'll hold your child's attention from first page to last! Then there are the subjects . . . of vital interest to your little one, now, in the early years when he's intent on discovering everything there is to know about himself and his exciting world.

For example, his own ears and what they hear; tongue-tickling sounds he can make; his hands and what they do; and (with the help of some bike-riding bears) he can even learn to count and find out how numbers work.

The sparkling little words and catchy rhymes in BRIGHT AND EARLY BOOKS encourage a child to try reading. And the marvelous illustrations help, too. Youngsters can't resist them . . . and as they pore over them they begin to put the words and pictures together. Soon, with some help from Mom or Dad, a child may discover he's actually reading on his own!

The four BRIGHT AND EARLY BOOKS shown here are the starter books in the BEGINNING READERS' PROGRAM. At the publisher's catalog price, they cost $10.00. But, as an introduction, you may have all four for only $1.95. They can get your little beginner off to a happy start in reading. And then it's an easy glide right into reading regular BEGINNER BOOKS . . . for they begin where BRIGHT AND EARLY BOOKS leave off!

As a member of the program, your child will receive a BEGINNER BOOK each month, and you will be billed only $1.95 (instead of the retail price of $2.50) plus delivery. (The postman will bring the package addressed to your little one, in his own name!) You may cancel membership at any time.

Enjoy this 10-day treat FREE!

Can these delightful "reading teachers" charm your child into reading? Before you decide, see the books for yourself . . . and let your child enjoy them. You and your little one must be delighted, or you may return the four introductory books within 10 days and owe nothing. To start the books coming your way, just fill out and mail the attached order form, today.

HOMEMADE JAM MADE EASY.

That's right.

To put up a mouth-watering jam, jelly, or preserve you don't have to put up with all the cooking, sealing, and messiness that used to go along with it.

Take Strawberry jam. Now all you need to make it are fresh, ripe strawberries, sugar, lemon juice, and Certo®. (A half bottle will help you make about 5½ cups of jam. Just follow the quick and easy recipe you'll find with many others tucked behind every Certo label.)

And all you do is crush the strawberries, mix everything, and stir for three minutes. You don't even have to cook.

Then put it all in any tight-lidded food container, pint-size or smaller, and let stand till it sets.

Pop it into the refrigerator, and that's that.

And what you don't plan on serving within three weeks, you can freeze.

When it thaws, it'll still have the same fresh-fruit flavor it had the day you made yourself a jam.

Without jamming up your home.

Now making homemade jam is as simple as mixing fruit, sugar, and Certo.

Pepper-and-Sausage Heroes With Salad

PEPPER-AND-SAUSAGE HERO SANDWICH

- 4 tablespoons chopped onion
- 4 tablespoons chopped green pepper
- 1 clove garlic, finely chopped
- 2 tablespoons olive or vegetable oil
- 2 cans (8-oz. size) tomato sauce with cheese
- ¼ cup water
- ½ teaspoon basil
- ¼ teaspoon oregano
- Pepper
- 1 lb. sweet or hot Italian sausages
- 1 cup water
- 4 small Italian loaves or 4 French rolls
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- ½ cup grated process American cheese

1. In medium saucepan, sauté onion, green pepper and garlic in oil 5 minutes, stirring frequently.
2. Add tomato sauce, water, basil, oregano and a few twists of pepper from pepper mill; bring to boiling, reduce heat and simmer uncovered 15 minutes.
3. Meanwhile, pierce sausages with fork in several places, place in skillet with 1 cup water, bring to boiling, reduce heat, cover and simmer 15 minutes.
4. Pour off water from skillet and brown sausages lightly on all sides in same skillet. Cut sausages in half lengthwise and add to sauce.
5. Cut rolls in half, lightly spread with butter and toast under broiler.
6. Arrange 2 or 3 sausage halves on bottom half of each roll; spoon on about ¼ cup sauce. Sprinkle each with 2 tablespoons cheese. Cover with tops of rolls and serve at once.

Makes 4 servings

CALIFORNIA SALAD BOWL

- 1 small head Western iceberg lettuce, cored, rinsed and chilled
- 1 avocado
- 1 cucumber, sliced
- 2 hard-cooked eggs, peeled and sliced
- Napa Valley Dressing (recipe below)

1. Tear lettuce into bite-sized pieces to make 1½ quarts; place in chilled salad bowl.
2. Cut avocado in half, lengthwise. Remove pit and skin and slice fruit.
3. Arrange avocado slices, cucumber and hard-cooked eggs over lettuce.
4. Pour about ⅓ cup Napa Valley Dressing over all, and toss.

Makes 4-6 servings

NAPA VALLEY DRESSING

- ½ cup olive or vegetable oil
- ¼ cup red-wine vinegar
- 2 tablespoons sliced green onion
- 1 tablespoon chopped pimiento
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon savory (optional)
- ¼ teaspoon dillweed
- ¼ teaspoon celery salt
- Dash garlic salt
- Dash cayenne
- Dash paprika

1. In 8-oz.-size jar combine all ingredients. Cover jar tightly and shake well to blend.
2. Shake again just before using.

Makes ¾ cup dressing

The Day I Met Phyllis Diller

"She and Sherwood were sitting serenely on a divan sipping tea. . . . As she busily painted her toenails, their five kids roller-skated noisily down the stairs, into and through the living room."

She came tripping into the Sears Roebuck office in Oakland, Calif., where I worked with her husband, Sherwood. With her hair in curlers, and clad in purple pants, yellow socks, a man's undershirt and a fur jacket, she was an unforgettable sight. This was my first glimpse some 20 years ago of a zany young housewife named Phyllis Diller.

After introducing us, Sherwood, later to become known to millions as "Fang," turned to me and said, "My wife is really talented, you know." At the time, I wondered in what possible direction her talent lay. But I soon learned that it was their ambition to launch Phyllis as a professional comedienne.

The next time I saw Phyllis, she and Sherwood were sitting serenely on a divan sipping tea and discussing ideas for a comedy routine. As she busily painted her toenails, their five kids roller-skated noisily down the stairs, into and through the living room.

Sherwood, I remember, was almost as "memorable" as Phyllis. He was partially deaf, and because of his affliction he had some odd mannerisms. He used to buy all my old suits for $10. I recall he even wore one I had sold him which had a large red ink stain down the front.

Phyllis employed a full-time maid, not so much because she needed one (although she did work at a local radio station) but simply because she hated housework. Seeing the humor in her dislike for housewifely chores, she had decided to try to make other women see the funny side of their frustrations.

She and Sherry—she didn't really call him Fang—finally did work out a comedy routine. An agent saw a film of it, and her act was placed in a San Francisco nightclub. The first few nights, their friends, including me, made up most of the audience. But word soon spread, and others came to see "the kooky housewife from Alameda."

Then Phyllis and Sherwood went on tour. For the next three years, except for Christmas cards, I had no contact with them. When at last Phyllis brought her act back to San Francisco, I visited her backstage.

"Do you ever pray, Mac?" she asked me then. I told her I did. "Do you pray every day?" she wanted to know, adding, "You should, you know." She was on her way up, and I sensed that a feeling of insecurity had briefly touched her. When I next saw her, she had continued her climb. She was very confident, on and off stage. We talked over old times and exchanged news about the kids (by that time I had five, too). Despite her success and her highly publicized facelift, to me she's still that zany housewife in purple pants and undershirt that I met so many years ago.

Anyone who's old enough to smoke is old enough to make up his own mind.

By now, as an adult, you must have read and heard all that's been written and said for and against cigarettes. And come to your own conclusions.

If you don't smoke, we aren't likely to get you to start.

But if you like to smoke and have decided to continue smoking, we'd like to tell you a few facts about a cigarette you might like to continue with.

We refer, of course, to Vantage. Vantage gives you real flavor, like any high 'tar' and nicotine cigarette you ever smoked, without the high 'tar' and nicotine. And since it is the high 'tar' and nicotine that many critics of cigarettes seem most opposed to, even they should have some kind words for Vantage.

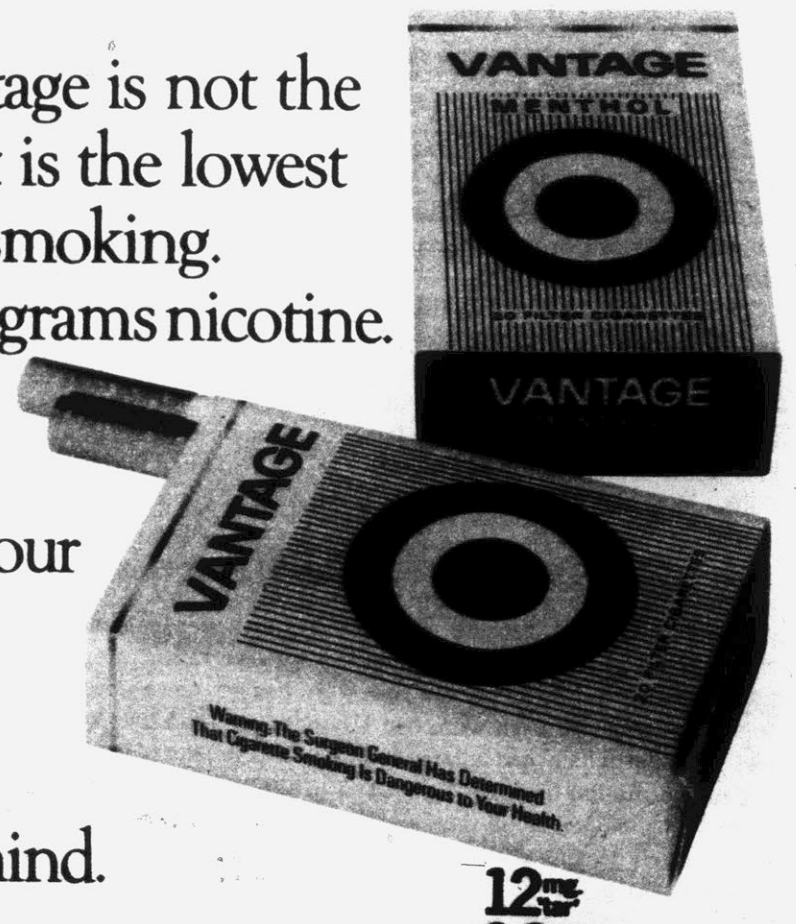

We don't want to mislead you. Vantage is not the lowest 'tar' and nicotine cigarette. But it is the lowest 'tar' and nicotine cigarette you'll enjoy smoking. It has only 12 milligrams 'tar' and 0.8 milligrams nicotine.

With anything lower, you'd have to work so hard getting taste through the filter that you'd end up going back to your old brand.

With Vantage, you won't want to.

Buy a pack and make up your own mind.

Filter and Menthol: 12 mg. "tar", 0.8 mg. nicotine—av. per cigarette, FTC Report Aug. 71 (Menthol by FTC method).

The Fat Man as TV Hero: How "Cannon" Made It

By Peer J. Oppenheimer

William Conrad, star of CBS's TV series "Cannon," is a director's dream. "Just pay me, point me, tell me what to say, and I'll move," he admits matter-of-factly. "Basically I'm a lazy guy. Always have been. My dream of success is to make enough money to do nothing at all for the rest of my life!"

Considering that Conrad's "laziness" enabled him to graduate from Fullerton Junior College at 15, create the original "Gunsmoke" Matt Dillon character on radio when he was in his early 20's and maintain it for 11 years, start his movie career at 26 as one of two heavies who menaced Burt Lancaster in "The Killers," switch to directing, produce and later become executive-producer of some of Hollywood's most successful movies and TV programs—well, seeing as all this was his idea of "laziness," I couldn't help wondering if his definition of the word wasn't a little different from mine.

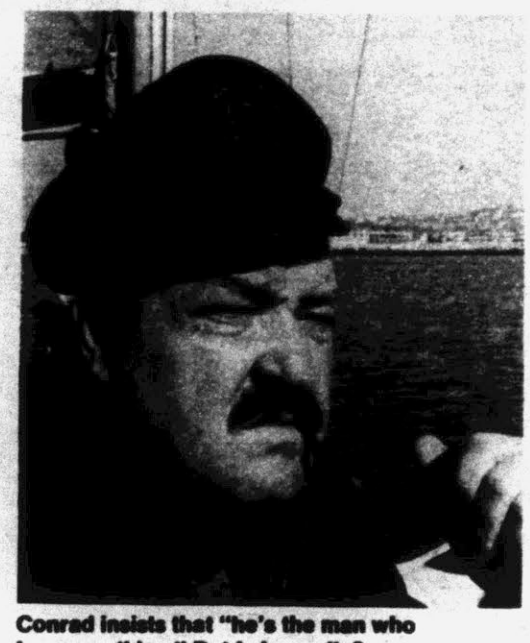

"I started to work out of necessity," Bill told me when I joined him for lunch in his dressing room. (It wasn't really "joining" him in a meal. As I tried to satisfy my customary appetite, Bill – five-feet-nine and over 240 pounds–sipped black coffee. "I've gained 25 pounds since I started this series," he muttered. "I don't know why. Lucky, I guess.")

What puzzled me most was the fact that, while most actors want to be directors and producers, after Bill reached the executive level he quit! Why?

"I despise exercises," says Conrad. "I was never interested in sports. The only exercising I do consistently is drink. And sail."

"After 15 years, 10 of them at Warners, I wanted out! I was at the point of becoming very unhappy with myself. The responsibilities piled up until I'd had it up to here!"

The situation was temporarily resolved when Warner Brothers went through another series of management changes and Bill Conrad found himself out of a job. Bill swears this was a blessing, and that all he yearned for was his 47-foot ketch ("The Moonraker"), the open sea, some booze and a lot of loafing. Perhaps. But he ended up contradicting himself. For not long after he had cleaned out his office, a friend passed a TV script under his nose, which, says Bill, he simply couldn't resist. Suddenly he was right back in front of the cameras! When CBS saw him in a cameo with Glenn Ford, it occurred to them that maybe Bill could be a leading man – a new concept, since Hollywood heroes have looked anything but 51, short, fat and balding!

Conrad insists that "he's the man who has everything." But is he really?

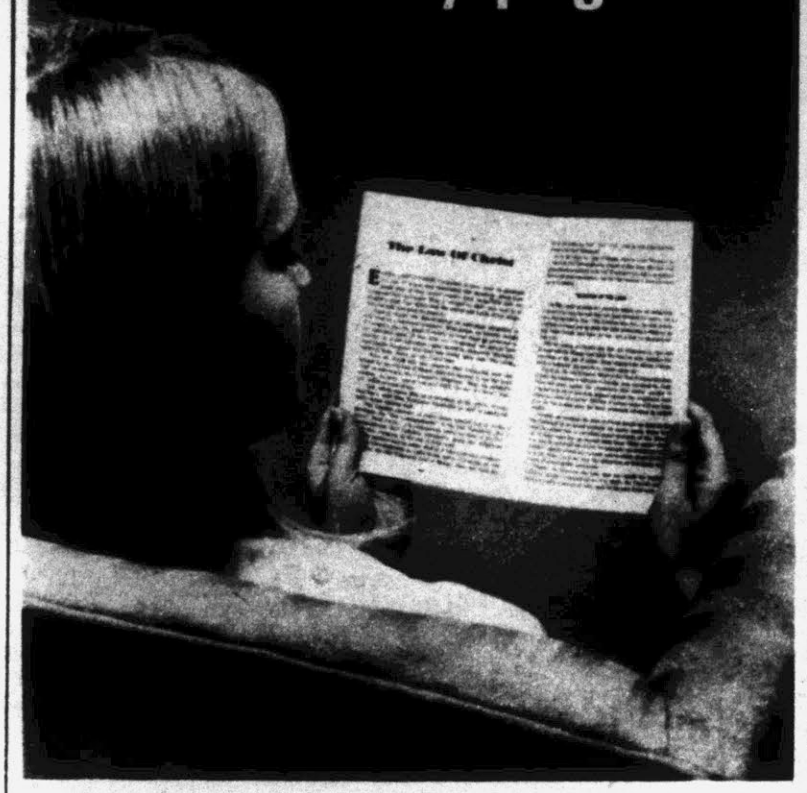

"Cannon" hit the air—and it worked! Fan mail began pouring in. "I guess there really is no such thing as bad fan mail," Bill told me. "Most people write in to say that they feel I am one of them. That I look like an honest human being instead of a phony Hollywood leading man. I guess one of the secrets of the show's success is that everyone identifies with me. They like to see someone shaped the way they are. Like Lincoln said, God must have loved the common man – he made so many of us!"

When Bill says he's done everything he's wanted to do, he isn't just referring to his work. "I no longer even bother with hobbies. I think I've gone through all of them, too – scuba diving, photography, painting, hunting, fishing, skiing, playing the cello. . . ." He still skis a bit, but reluctantly admits, "It is a little hard now that I've gotten so heavy." Exercising per se is out. "I despise exercises. I was never interested in sports. The only exercising I do consistently is drink. And sail."

And so the interview ended as it had begun: with Bill insisting that he's happier now than he's been in years. It wasn't until a few days later that I learned that Bill's wife, former fashion model Susan Randall, was filing suit for divorce. Since their 15-year-old son Chris goes to prep school on Catalina Island off the coast of California, it will leave Bill in his large home in the San Fernando Valley by himself, a big boat to sail about without his family, and work to do that pays well but seems to give him no real pleasure.

And so I wonder. Could it be that Bill Conrad, the man who has done everything, the man who has lived more in 51 years than most people in 100, is lazy only because he doesn't have anything to look forward to—except being lazy?

Whether you're searching for a deeper faith to live by or simply want a better understanding of the beliefs of your Catholic neighbors, you will find absorbing reading in our pamphlet entitled, "This Is The Catholic Church."

It answers simply and clearly such often-asked questions as "Why do Catholics go to Confession?"... "Why do they regard the Mass as the form of worship most pleasing to God?"... and "Why do they feel that the organized Church is essential to God's plan for man's salvation?"

You'll learn, too, the origin and significance of the Seven Sacraments and why Catholics attach such vital importance to them . . . the authority by which the Pope, Bishops and priests guide the Church . . . and how the Apostles' Creed is, in effect, a summary of basic Catholic doctrine.

The Parent-Teacher Collision:

It's "Parents' Night" at school. Once again you find yourself seated uncomfortably on a child-size chair, listening to what's wrong with your son or daughter. It's hard to take. Hard on teacher, too. Here's one expert's advice on how to make those meetings a lot friendlier—and more beneficial for your child.

Sometimes, a teacher will use elaborate "education-ese" to intimidate the parent. She'll talk glibly about "social-living skills," or "aggressive tendencies in the peer group." . . . Parents have a right to ask, "What exactly do you mean by that?"

"Johnny is fresh" . . . "Susie doesn't get along with the other children in class" . . . "Scott is falling behind in math."

How many parents have heard reports like these from their children's teacher? From that first hesitant day of kindergarten to that shining last day of high school graduation, we meet two or three times a year with this other adult in our child's life. We listen carefully at these conferences, often seated uncomfortably on a child-size chair, sometimes disagreeing with this description of the child we know so well, frequently wondering what is the best thing to say for the sake of the child who must live with this teacher from nine to three.

For expert advice on how to get the most out of these meetings, we interviewed Betty Felton of the United Parents Association. A parent herself, Mrs. Felton works with individual parents and with Parent-Teacher Associations, often on just this problem.

Here are some points that, according to Mrs. Felton, every parent should keep in mind:

1. You Can't "Pin the Blame"

"A parent should be able to talk to the child's teacher at any time," says Mrs. Felton. "But the best time is when report cards come out. You can then see his marks in various subjects, his ratings in comprehension, relating to others, and so on. You have something concrete to discuss. But you must be prepared to do this honestly. It doesn't help the child to tell the teacher that you think she's being unfair to your child, or that you think the child is doing poorly in a subject because she hasn't taught it well. It's wrong to try to pin the blame on the teacher, and when teachers try to do the same thing to parents, it's equally wrong."

2. But You Don't Have to Agree 100 Percent, Either

If a teacher reports that the child is always fighting in school, the parent doesn't have to feel she must leap to her child's defense and insist he's really "a good boy." But she doesn't have to nod and accept that report, either. Instead, the parent should ask, "Why do you think he's always doing this?" The busy teacher may have only thought about the behavior that annoys her. Now the parent has her looking for causes. As Mrs. Felton explains, the parent must also share information on what's happening at home that may be a cause.

Sometimes a parent may feel the teacher is picking on things that are unimportant or unfair, but she may feel she has to agree with the teacher so as not to make things worse for her child. Not so, says Mrs. Felton. One mother of a bright child, for example, always felt she was being told about his mischief but never about how bright he was. The teacher complained of how he always managed to get out of doing his work. What this mother should have said is, "You're describing the actions of a con artist. But for a child to be able to 'con' an adult, he must be very bright. Perhaps, together, we can do something to take advantage of his brightness, to capture his attention."

3. The Child You "Don't Know"

Sometimes the teacher will describe a child that you simply don't recognize. You may be told, "Henry does not get along well with the other children." But you have seen Henry getting along perfectly well with other children when he plays at home or in the park. When this happens, according to Mrs. Felton, the parent shouldn't become angry or accusatory, but should say, in a friendly way, "This is not like the child I know at home." She should ask for details. Is his work in order? Does he seem restless? Is someone picking on him or teasing him? Does the teacher see any reasons why the child is behaving so differently in class than at home? How can you and the teacher work together to help the child?

4. Zero in on the Specifics

Whatever the teacher says about the child, the parent should ask for specifics. Sometimes, a teacher will use elaborate "education-ese" to intimidate the parent. She'll talk glibly about "social-living skills," or "aggressive tendencies in the peer group," or "curricular objectives." Parents have a right to ask, "What exactly do you mean by that?"

5. The "Brick-Wall" Teacher

There are teachers who will ignore the differences in children and say flatly, "Your child must learn to do things my way." Running up against this sort of teacher, a parent may have to accept the brick wall and tell her child, "Look, this is the way it is. You've got to learn to get along with all sorts of people. In this class, I understand what your problem is but you have to learn to do as much as you can her way."

But before a parent complains about a teacher, she should ask herself if she's being honest and fair about her child and her own reactions to what's going on in the classroom. After that, if she still feels the teacher is holding back or misjudging the child, she should talk to other parents in the class. If they agree that the same things are happening to their children, too, then Mrs. Felton suggests that the parents try to ar-

Does she sleep till noon on Saturday? No, weekends she's busy piloting executives to Washington, D.C., and other points.

You can help our wounded veterans marking time in Veterans Hospitals by saving canceled foreign postage stamps for them. Dave Schoenfeld, a World War I vet holding citations from the U.S. and France, knows from experience how heavy time can hang for these patients. Retired now, he gathers stamps for them. Hospital directors tell him they have a real need for stamps, as patients use them to decorate lampshades, jewelry boxes and to make pictures, as well as for personal collections. They're "perfect therapy for all kinds of patients," Mr. Schoenfeld says. The hospitals are asking him for more, but his supply is low. Will you help? Send your stamps to Dave Schoenfeld, 522 Shore Rd., Long Beach, N. Y. 11561.

Sybil Leek reads Hubert Humphrey's stars: "Should Mr. Humphrey attain the high office of President, his administration would be filled with grave dangers. He would be a one-term President, and unless he would be willing to adhere to a rigid neo-isolationism policy, he would run the risk of splitting the country still further. . . . But we should not underestimate his inner strength. There are many areas which he has never tapped or used for the benefit of his country which in his role as President he could bring to the fore."

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY

Home Repair
By Richard Armour

We have a balky TV set,
As balky as I've ever met.
Repairmen come and go, but still
Our upset set looks wan and ill.
My wife, however, has of late
Come to the rescue. What a mate!
Now when the TV's out of whack
She gives the thing a bang, a smack,
And presto! Specks we no more view,
The lines are gone, the colors true.
I hit the set, it does no good,
But she knows how and where you should.
Just hard enough, but not too hard....
She ought to have a union card.

We had just gotten a new puppy, and our neighbor's four-year-old boy came to see him. He played with the dog awhile, then asked me how old he was. "He'll be one year old tomorrow," I replied. The boy stared at me in astonishment. "You mean today he's nothing?" he asked.

The owner of a racehorse was very angry when his horse lost. He confronted his jockey in the paddock.

"Why didn't you ride him through that hole when it opened up on the final turn?" he demanded.

"Sir," said the jockey, "did you ever try to go through a hole that was going faster than your horse?" —Dan Bennett

CITY MOTTO

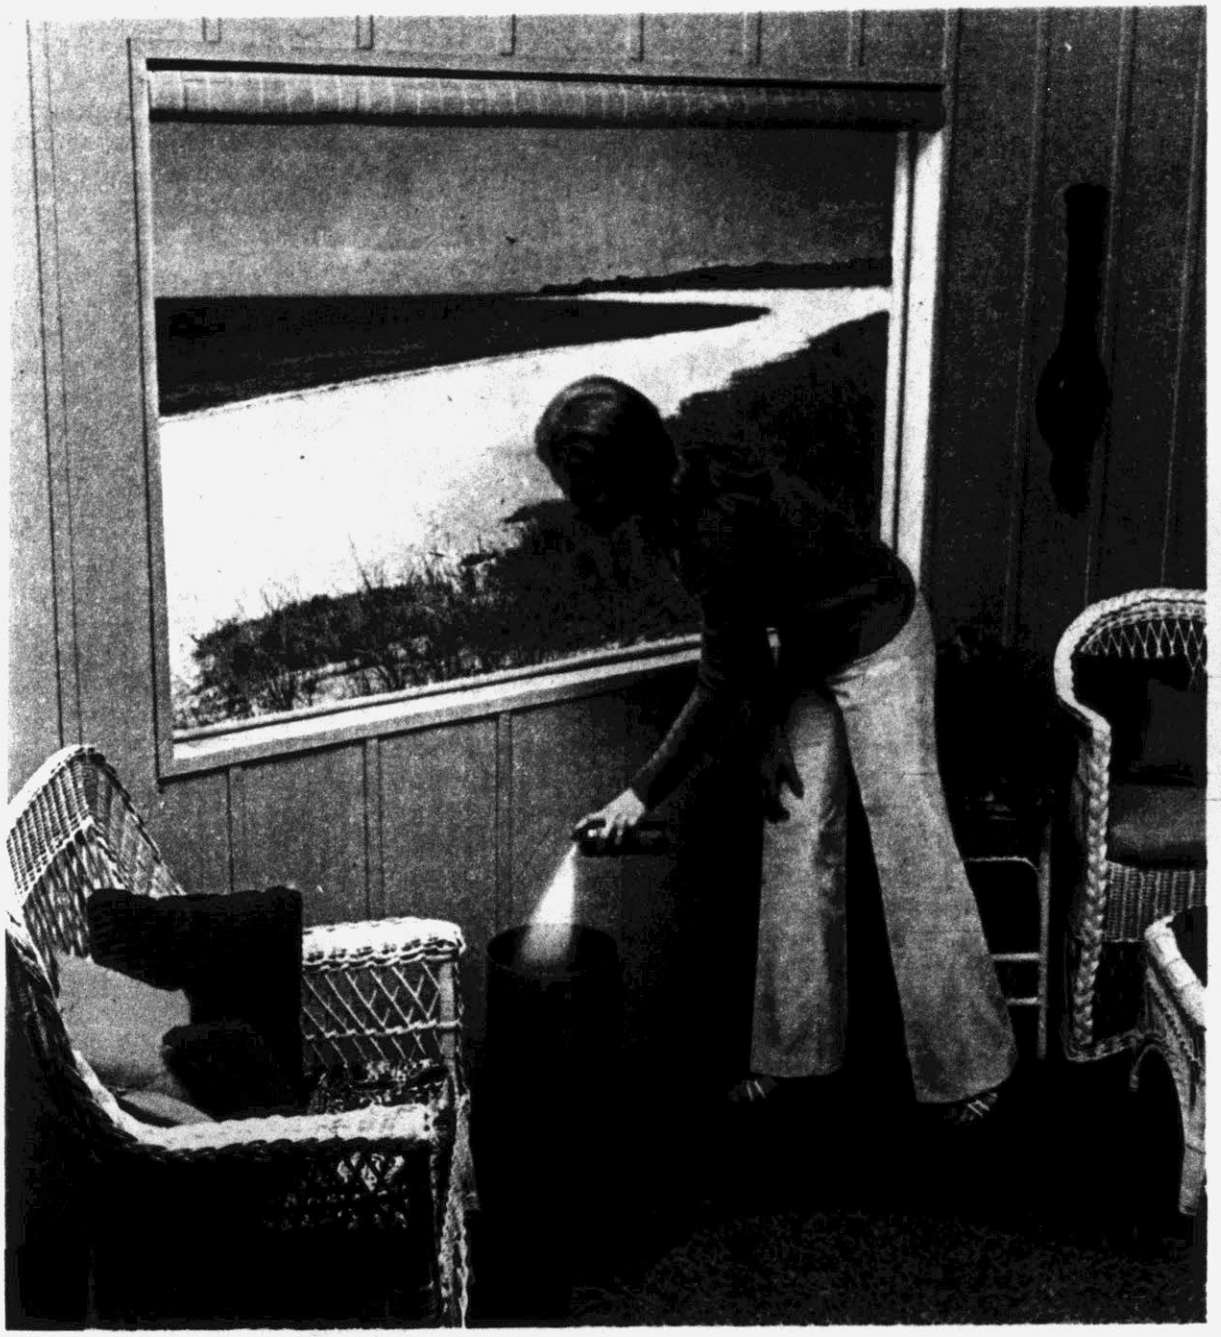

Faster, city workmen, faster!
Tear those streets up! Pipe 'em!
Sewer 'em!
Pay no heed to nagging drivers–
Stop 'em, slow 'em down, detour 'em!
They want streets for driving cars on,
But we know this is a blunder,
Streets are made to put electric
Cables, pipes and sewers under.
So, faster, city workmen, faster!
Finish with your job and then Fill and pave those streets before it's Time to tear them up again.

MUCH CLOSER THAN A COUPLA THOUSAND MILES!"

Donald Duck

HI, DOLL! LIKE TO GO TO THE BIG GAME?

I'D LOVE TO, BUT THE PAPER SAYS IT MAY RAIN.

OKAY, IF YOU'LL MAKE A TRAY OF TIDBITS.

WELL, THERE GOES THE BIG GAME!

OH, DEAR!

IT'S BEEN DOING THAT LATELY.

DRAT! THAT MEANS A SHORT IN YOUR AERIAL.

I'M NOT GOING TO MISS THE GAME. I'LL FIX THAT AERIAL!

THEY DON'T STOP THESE GAMES FOR ANYTHING.

LUCKY THE LIGHTNING FIXED THE SHORT! IT'S A WONDERFUL PICTURE NOW.

IS IT? ALL I CAN SEE ARE THE BALLOONS.
