Belfast Counts 7 Killed Over Weekend, Fanning Fear Of New Warfare

BELFAST (AP) — Seven men were killed in Belfast during a violence-ridden weekend that threatened the flimsy cease-fire in Northern Ireland and fanned fears of "eye for an eye" warfare between Protestant and Roman Catholic gunmen.

All seven men were shot in the head, and some were bound and hooded, the trademarks of the Irish Republican Army's execution squads.

But at least two of the victims were Catholics. Although there was some speculation that had been killed by IRA punishment squads, authorities believed they were the victims of Protestant extremists.

Three of the victims were Protestants, and the fourth was a 19-year-old Jehovah's Witness from England who had been working in a camp for poor children since coming to Northern Ireland a week ago. His body was found on a garbage dump, and authorities believed he may have been killed by mistake.

Leaders of the militant Protestant Ulster Defense Association threatened reprisals against the IRA after Augustus "Gusty" Spence, a Protestant hero, was apparently kidnapped.

Four men stopped the car taking Spence back to jail after a two-day parole to attend his daughter's wedding. He was sentenced to life imprisonment in 1966 for killing a Catholic.

Meanwhile the UDA dismantled most of the 100 barricades it threw up around Protestant areas last week in protest against the British army's refusal to tear down the IRA's barricades around various Catholic areas. The army made no move to remove the Protestant barricades either.

Young Vietnamese Man Slain During Skyjacking

By RICHARD BLYSTONE
Associated Press Writer

SAIGON (AP) — A young Vietnamese man who tried to hijack a Pan American jumbo jet with 153 persons aboard to Hanoi in revenge for U.S. bombing of North Vietnam was overpowered by the pilot and shot to death by an armed passenger Sunday.

The hijacker was tentatively identified today as a speaker at antiwar rallies at the University of Washington in Seattle, where he had studied fishery science on a U.S. government scholarship and graduated with honors last month.

The young man, carrying a South Vietnamese passport in the name Nguyen Thai Binh, met violent death after the pilot tricked him and landed at Saigon, the flight's scheduled destination, in defiance of his demand to fly to North Vietnam.

The 135 other passengers were safely evacuated by sliding down emergency chutes, used to empty the plane quickly in case of explosion.

To back up his threats, the hijacker carried a long knife and a package which he said contained a bomb. Vietnamese police sources said two homemade grenades were in the package and there was no indication whether they could have exploded. But the airline described them as harmless "egg-shaped objects" wrapped in aluminum foil.

The hijacking attempt began after the jumbo jet, flight 841, left Manila on the last leg of its San Francisco-to-Saigon flight. Binh, who had boarded in Honolulu, grabbed a stewardess as a hostage and sent two notes to the control cabin demanding that the plane be diverted to Hanoi.

The hijacker, in the rear passenger compartment, also talked with the pilot, Capt. Gene Vaughn, 53, of Scottsdale, Ariz., over the intercom.

"I am doing this for revenge," Vaughn said he told him. "Your bombers are maiming and killing our people of the Democratic Republic of North Vietnam. You are going to fly me to Hanoi and this airplane will be destroyed when we get there."

Authorities withheld the name of the passenger who shot Binh.

The pilot said the man had checked his .357 Magnum pistol with him when he boarded the plane and that before confronting the hijacker he returned it and asked the man to help.

Arrest Nine Persons In Munition-Smuggling Plot

By HUGH MORGAN
Associated Press Writer

NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP) — A plot U.S. officials say was aimed at overthrowing a foreign country—apparently Communist Cuba—has been revealed in the arrest of nine persons in a $465,000 munitions smuggling scheme.

Allegedly stretching from New York to Louisiana, Texas and Mexico, the plot came to light with the arrests Saturday. In addition, nearly seven tons of plastic explosives were seized in a DC4 transport plane at Shreveport, La., federal agents said.

U.S. Atty. Gerald Gallinhouse said Sunday federal officials "have no reason to believe that the munitions were destined for any country other than Cuba."

The complaint charging two of the men, Murray Kessler of Brooklyn, N.Y., and Adler B. Seal of Baton Rouge, La., alleged they "knew and believed that this material would be used in an attempted overthrow of a foreign nation." The two men were arrested near the New Orleans International Airport.

Gallinhouse refused to say precisely that the overthrow plot involved Cuba.

The nine were charged with conspiring to smuggle the explosives from the United States to Mexico for future shipment to a third country.

Among those arrested were Richmond Harper, a prominent South Texas rancher-banker, and Marion Hegler, a former inspector with the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service. They were taken into custody at Eagle Pass, Tex., where they reside, then released on $25,000 bond each.

The federal complaint alleges dealings by a man known as "Carlos Diaz" to purchase as much as $1.2 million in munitions and weapons, ranging from submachine guns to M16s. No guns, however, were aboard the plane raided by federal agents at Shreveport on Saturday.

The federal complaint alleges Kessler agreed last Wednesday to sell to Diaz 13,500 pounds of C-4 plastic explosives, 7,000 feet of primacord, 2,600 electrical blasting caps and 25 electrical detonators for $430,000.

In addition, it alleges that another $35,000 was to be paid for flying the explosives to an airfield near Vera Cruz, Mexico.

The complaint said that last Friday "Kessler told Carlos (Diaz) that he had no M16 rifles, but he had the C-4 as per their agreement."

A rental aircraft was flown that afternoon from Hammond, La., to Shreveport, the complaint said. "A rental van then went to the South Western Pipe Co. in Shreveport and then picked up 13,500 pounds of a plastic explosive commonly known as C-4," the complaint said.

"The explosive was then transported back to the site where the DC4 aircraft was being kept and per an agreement between Kessler and Diaz, the explosives were loaded onto the aircraft," it said. Federal agents then moved in.

Eye Metropolitan Sewage District

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County Commissioners this morning took the first step toward creation of a metropolitan sewage district to include the towns of Winterville, Ayden and Grifton.

Commissioners, acting on a request by the governing bodies of the three municipalities, approved a resolution requesting the state's Department of Water and Air Resources to hold a joint public hearing on the question of establishing such a district.

County attorney W. W. Speight explained that if the Metropolitan Sewage District is established, residents living within the corporate limits of the three towns will have an opportunity to vote on whether or not to issue bonds with which to construct joint sewage treatment facilities.

Such bonds, the attorney said, would be retired through taxes paid by the residents of the special district.

The sewage district, under the proposal, would be run by a special six-member board. Three of the members would be appointed by the County Commissioners while the governing boards of the municipalities involved would appoint one each.

Both Winterville and Ayden have been told they must improve their sewage treatment systems.

Grifton, which also must make improvements to its waste disposal system, has recently approved a $575,000 bond issue to fund improvements there. A joint facility—connecting the sewage facilities of the three towns—would empty into the Neuse River near Grifton.

Commissioners, who heard reports from various county departments and agencies, were told by representatives of Richard Glisson of near Greenville of tentative plans to build a private enterprise zoo in the county.

Glisson's representatives told the board that the zoo, if established, would be located about four miles from Greenville on N.C. 903.

Pitt Memorial Hospital administrator Jack Richardson told commissioners that Wellington B. Gray, Dean of the School of Art at East Carolina University has agreed to furnish original art work for use in all the rooms in the new hospital.

Richardson said Gray indicated the art work would be done by students in the School of Art at no cost to the county.

Seek Reversal Of Credentials Ruling On Calif.

By GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — California supporters of Sen. George McGovern are seeking to win back in the courts the 151 California delegates they lost in the Democratic Credentials Committee.

A suit was filed with the U.S. District Court in Washington asking a restraining order to prevent the revised California delegation from being seated at the Democratic convention, which opens July 10 at Miami Beach. A hearing was scheduled this morning before Dist. Court Judge George L. Hart Jr.

The suit alleges that the Credentials Committee acted unconstitutionally when it overruled California's winner-take-all primary, won by McGovern. The committee apportioned 151 of the state's 271 votes among presidential contenders Hubert H. Humphrey, George C. Wallace and others.

McGovern, still the easy front-runner with 1,276.9 committed votes with 1,509 needed for nomination, indicated Sunday he would be willing to compromise on the challenges to the California delegation, which he lost, and to the Illinois delegation, which his forces won.

"If I thought it would serve the interests of a stronger party and heal some of these wounds and not do any violence to the rules of the party, I would support a compromise," he said on ABC's "Issues and Answers" program.

In an effort to beef up his strength in advance of Miami Beach, McGovern said he will seek a meeting with AFL-CIO President George Meany this week. Meany is officially uncommitted in the race for the nomination, although he is considered a supporter of Sen. Edmund S. Muskie.

Army Is Mum On Miami Hueys

By J. T. WOLKERSTORFER
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — While their helicopters baked in the 90-degree sun on a ramp at nearby Opa-Locka airport Sunday, the young pilots sipped cold beers and lounged around their motel pool.

The 58 crewmen and their 11 UH1 Hueys were flown in from Ft. Benning, Ga., over the weekend—apparently as part of the Army's preparation for the possible deployment of troops to Miami Beach during the Democratic National Convention next week.

Neither the Pentagon nor the Army admit that the helicopters—all marked "U. S. Army"—and crews are here. However, military sources said privately the choppers had been flown in from Ft. Benning, Ga.

When the choppers first arrived, Army crewmen working on them were decked out in bellbottoms and golf shirts. Sunday, some of the pilots were playing golf, others lounging by their motel pool.

They said they knew nothing about the Army, Fort Benning, helicopters or Opa-Locka airport. But Army aviators' sunglasses were much in evidence at the motel pool—along with olive-drab Vietnam-issue watches.

Motel registrations for the crewmen gave their occupation as "U. S. Army" and their hometown as Columbus, Ga.—where Ft. Benning is located.

A military policeman guarding the helicopters said he didn't know where they were from—but he was wearing a "Follow Me" shoulder patch from the U. S. Army Infantry School at Ft. Benning.

The Army declined comment on the mission of the Hueys, the main utility-transport helicopter used in Vietnam. Two are medical evacuation helicopters marked with red crosses. The other nine are "slicks," or troop transport helicopters. The "slicks" could be used to airlift troops into trouble areas, or they could be used as "command and control" aircraft to watch over demonstrations and coordinate the activities of police and troops.

Traffic Victim

BETHEL — Johnny Lee Jones, 21, of Route 1, Bethel was struck and killed by a hit and run driver about a mile west of here on U.S. 64 during the night.

Pitt County Coroner and Medical Examiner E.W. Harvey said Jones died of multiple head and body injuries received in the collision.

Highway Patrolman W.E. Brinson said Jones' body was found in the center of the highway by a passing truck driver about 2:15 a.m. today.

Jones, according to Trooper Brinson, had apparently been struck by a West-bound vehicle.

Investigation into the death is continuing.

AYDEN—Timothy Christian Church was the scene of the wedding of Miss Trudy Elaine Halstead and Gordon Ray Sumerlin Sunday at 3:30 p.m. Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Halstead, Sr. of Rt. 2, Ayden, and Mr. and Mrs. George H. Sumerlin of Greenville.

The Rev. William Earl Roberts officiated at the double ring ceremony. Randy Buck, organist of Greenville presented a program of nuptial music. Jimmy Page of Greenville sang "We've Only Just Begun," "Whither Thou Goest," and "The Wedding Prayer."

The vows were spoken before a chancel background of jode and springer standards of greenery. From each side, fifteen branch candelabrum with cathedral candles were used, flanked with nine branch tree candelabrum holding floral arrangements. The couple knelt for the blessing and benediction on a white prie-dieu.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an Edyth Vincent creation of orgazine fabric featuring bishop sleeves, a round scalloped trim neckline with matching cuffs. Panels of chantilly lace formed an apron front.

Her mantilla, bordered with matching lace, was attached to a headpiece of layered organza bows and flowed into a chapel length train. She carried a colonial bouquet of miniature carnations and baby's breath centered with a lavender orchid.

Mrs. Wayne Dixon, sister of the bride, and Mrs. Robert Halstead Jr., sister-in-law of the bride, were matrons of honor. Their gowns were empire styled of light orchid chiffon fabric featuring dark purple Venice lace bodices and matching cuffs. They wore orchid picture hats with purple streamers and carried hand bouquets of white, pink, lavender and purple asters tied with white satin ribbons.

Bridesmaids were Miss Polly

Fornes, Mrs. Randy Dixon, Mrs. Randy Stokes, all of Greenville, and Miss Vickie Coward of Grimesland. The bridesmaids' gowns were identical to that of the honor attendants. They wore orchid picture hats with white streamers and carried bouquets identical to the honor attendants.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were Wade Sumerlin of Greenville, brother of the bridegroom, Robert Halstead Jr. of Ayden, brother of the bride, Wayne Dixon, brother-in-law of the bride, Randy Dixon, cousin of the bridegroom, and Buddy Eakes, all of Greenville, brother-in-law of the bridegroom.

Miss Karen Carraway, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J.R. Carraway was flower girl. She was dressed in a purple chiffon gown with a white Venice lace bodice. She carried an arm basket of asters and baby's breath. Michael Eakes, son of Mr. and Mrs. Buddy Eakes, was ring bearer.

Mrs. Halstead, mother of the bride, selected a pink double knit dress with long sleeves and lace bodice. She wore matching accessories and a white cymbidium orchid corsage.

Mrs. Sumerlin, mother of the bridegroom, chose a yellow double knit short sleeve dress with matching accessories and wore a white cymbidium orchid corsage.

Mrs. Effie Sumerlin, grandmother of the bridegroom, Mrs. Jesse C. Smith and Mrs. Maggie Halstead, grandmothers of the bride, were both remembered with white carnation corsages.

Mrs. Ronald Evan of Greenville directed the wedding.

The bride is a graduate of D. H. Conley High School.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Rose High School and is employed by Gardner-Wynne-Manning.

For a wedding trip to unannounced points, Mrs. Sumerlin changed into a white double knit dress with purple trim and a orchid corsage lifted from the bouquet.

Following a wedding trip, the couple will reside at Rt. 2, Ayden.

Mother's Trick Wasn't New Idea

By Abigail Van Buren

(© 1972 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: Something in your column caused me to recall something I hadn't thought of in years. Perhaps it's worth sharing:

Many years ago, when potato chips were first on the market, they weren't available in our small town, so my mother would order them from the big city near us for special occasions. She had ordered some for her bridge luncheon, but they did not arrive on time, so as a joke mother sliced raw potatoes, and put a few on each plate.

When the plates came back to the kitchen, there wasn't a potato slice to be seen! But for weeks afterwards we kept finding them in flowerpots, vases and under the sofa cushions.

JEAN P. IN MONTANA

DEAR JEAN: There's nothing new under the sun. People are still doing it.

DEAR ABBY: I am a married woman, age 49, but physically I am like a girl of 20. My doctor tells me that I have absolutely nothing to worry about insofar as getting pregnant is concerned. He says the oldest woman he has known to get pregnant was 47, and that was very unusual.

Abby, I'm afraid to let my guard down because my family is grown and the last thing I want at this time of my life is another baby.

What do you or your readers know about this? The medical books tell me nothing. My doctor thinks I am foolish for worrying.

WORRIED SPITLESS

DEAR WORRIED: Altho the chances of becoming pregnant at age 47 are greatly reduced, it is by no means impossible. My doctor tells me that he has heard of a woman bearing a child at age 52, so keep your guard up, lady.

DEAR ABBY: I am going with a wonderful guy, and we are talking about getting married, but a problem has come up.

He says that before we get married he would like to go out with some other girls just to see what it's like. He says it's not that he doesn't love me, but he would just like to have a little variety before he settles down.

I suppose I should be glad that my guy is so honest with me about this, but I am by nature a jealous person, and I don't want to even think about my guy being with another girl. What do you think?

UNCERTAIN

DEAR UNCERTAIN: A man sufficiently mature for marriage would neither announce his intentions to go out with other girls, nor ask for his fiancée's permission. His idea could be good, but discussing it with you is adolescent.

CONFIDENTIAL to Square-Shooter in Kenosha, Wis.: I agree, it's noble to go by "the old rule." Never hit a man when he's down. [He may get up again.]

DEAR ABBY: A woman wrote in to say that wives seem willing to forgive husbands who stray, but a man will never forgive his wife for the same thing. It's not so:

My sister's husband came to town on a business trip and he stayed with us for a few days. He [I'll call him "G"] said to my wife, "I'll call her 'E'" one morning, "I'll help you with the breakfast dishes."

I went to the piano and was drumming out a tune with two fingers when I suddenly remembered I had to tell my wife something. I promptly headed for the kitchen, forgetting that I was wearing my bedroom slippers.

When I reached the door, I saw "G" with his arms around "E," and altho both her hands were in the sink, she was giving him a passionate kiss!

I dodged back and made another entrance, this time whistling loudly to give them ample warning.

I never let on to either "G" or "E" that I had seen that kiss.

Perhaps I'm too forgiving, but why should I think it strange that another man finds my wife kissable?

"E" passed away a year ago, after a beautiful marriage that lasted sixty years. I can truthfully say that I have never loved her more than I do at this moment. The type is growing dim. Goodbye.

NEVER JEALOUS

DEAR NEVER: You're quite a gentleman in my book.

Miss Green Entertained

Miss Mary S. Green, bride-elect of July, was entertained at a miscellaneous shower Thursday night by the ladies of the Simpson community.

The shower was held in the educational department of the Phillippi Missionary Baptist Church with Mrs. Vera Gattlin, Mrs. Annie Hardy, Mrs. Helen Johnson and Mrs. Mahalia House as hostesses.

A color scheme of green and yellow was used in decorations. Miss Green was presented a corsage by the hostesses. Her twin sister, Miss Janie L. Green, was also remembered with a corsage.

Mrs. Brenda Hawkins and

Mrs. Lillie Parker assisted in serving.

CORN-SYRUP CAKE — An old-fashioned dessert from the cookbook, "Plantation Recipes" by Lessie Bowers.

Let Them Eat Soul-Food Cake

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Despite all the interest in soul food, the number of cookbooks written by blacks is limited. In our vast collection of cookbooks we have less than a dozen such volumes. Most of these were published in the last five years.

One, however, that dates back to 1959 should be recognized by anyone who is making a soul-food collection. It is "Plantation Recipes" by the late Lessie Bowers, published by Robert Speller and Sons. Mrs. Bowers was a black woman whose grandmother, a notable cook, was born into slavery on a South Carolina plantation.

Lessie Bowers, a college graduate, ran a successful restaurant in a suburb of New York City and her customers clamored for her recipes. We've chosen one of her cakes to pass on to you because it is a substantial old-fashioned type that still pleases. Here is our adaptation of it:

LESSIE BOWERS'
CORN SYRUP CAKE

2 cups unsifted cake flour
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup (1/4-pound stick) butter or margarine
1/4 cup sugar
1/2 teaspoon vanilla
3/4 cup light corn syrup
2 large eggs, separated
4 teaspoons lemon juice or vinegar plus milk to make 1-3rd cup liquid
Grease and lightly flour 2 round (8 by 1 1/2 inch) layer cake pans.

On wax paper thoroughly stir together the flour, baking soda and salt.

Cream butter, sugar and vanilla. Beat in corn syrup then egg yolks, 1 at a time. Stir in flour mixture alternately with lemon-juice mixture just until smooth each time. Beat egg whites until they hold stiff peaks; fold into batter. Turn into prepared pans.

Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in center comes out clean—25 to 30 minutes. Turn out on cake racks; cool. Fill and cover top and sides with chocolate frosting.

WHISTON, England (WNS)—Bert O'Donohue got the shock of his life when the window cleaner appeared at his bathroom window just as he was soaping himself in the nude. Fire Is Used To Manage Forests

By J. HUNTER HOLLOWAY
Associated Press Writer
DENVER, Colo. (AP) — No matter what Smokey the Bear may tell you, forest fires aren't all bad.

For example, foresters intentionally burn about 60,000 acres of the Francis Marion National Forest near Columbia, S.C., each year. And the forest's long leaf pine are healthy and prospering because of it, they say.

This is what is known as "prescribed burning" and foresters use it as a tool of forest management.

Fire, like water and soil, they say, is a natural part of the forest environment and must be taken into consideration in managing woodlands.

The foresters point out that this burning is under carefully controlled conditions, with moist soil, cool temperatures and light winds. It burns out the underbrush, but does not affect the trees themselves.

The theme of burning to maintain the forest in its natural state was one of several discussed at a meeting here recently, where 151 forest fire authorities from the United States, Canada, Mexico and a scattering of other countries exchanged ideas.

If the principle of "prescribed burning" had been applied to the pine country north of Los Angeles, many believe, the disastrous fires of recent years there could have been prevented.

Foresters in the southeast have long used fire this way, said Merlin Dixon, a Forest Service specialist on the Alabama Forestry Commission. Only recently has it been tried elsewhere, and even now it is not used without intensive study of the type of tree and terrain involved.

Without fire, William H. Hendrickson, environmental coordinator for Everglades National Forest in Florida, said the Douglas fir forests west of the Cascade Range probably would turn into cedar and hemlock forests and the pine forests of the southeast would yield to broadleaf trees.

Dal Hall of the Canadian Forestry Association stressed that fire can be used only in certain regions. For example, it can't be used in hardwood forests, mixed forests or in thin-barked pines, spruce and fir.

But where fire can be used, it not only clears out the underbrush for a new growth of shoots and forage for wildlife, but also helps the regeneration of some species of trees.

The heat of a ground fire, briefly warming the seed cones of long leaf pine to 140 degrees, causes the cones to open several days later and drop seeds. The same is true of Jack pine, lodgepole pine of the Rockies, knob cone pine of the west and sand pine of the southeast, the foresters said.

Without fire, several foresters said the condition of a forest deteriorates, as an accumulation of residue—needles, twigs and fallen bark—builds up on the forest floor. This residue is what makes forest fires possible, they said.

Railroad Shows Town A Profit

By ROBERTA ULRICH
PRINEVILLE, Ore. (UPI)—The city of Prineville, population 4,380, is a prosperous looking little town set in the central Oregon plains.

It has wide, paved, well-maintained streets, a public swimming pool, a well-manicured public park, a balanced budget and virtually no city property tax.

The reason for this pleasant situation is the "City of Prineville Railway," a 19-mile highly profitable freight line which has turned in $2 million to the city treasury since 1945.

Manager Merlin F. Nikolaus said last year the railroad had income of $687,000 and profits of $255,000. "This year it will be much more," he said. "We'll gross $750,000, maybe $800,000."

Profits Since 1945
From 1920, the first year the line reported to the Interstate Commerce Commission, through 1939, the little railroad took a net loss of $250,000—but since 1945 it has shown a profit every year.

The money the railroad turns over to the city—$135,000 last year—actually would make it possible to balance the Prineville budget without imposing a property tax—the chief source of income for local governmental units in Oregon. City fathers decided to continue a small levy next year, however, after numbers of city residents told officials they believed property owners should provide some support for local government.

Prineville got into the railroad business as a matter of civic pride and survival in the World War I era.

When the Oregon Trunk Railroad was built to serve central Oregon it bypassed Prineville. The city, determined not to be left off the railroad map, raised the money and built its main line 19 miles west to Redmond, where it joins the Burlington Northern and Union Pacific.

"It was built for passengers and livestock," Nikolaus said, "but we don't handle livestock anymore." The only passengers it handles ride an old Union Pacific chair car hitched to a regular freight train for an excursion. The rides—given about once a week—are free.

Lumber Hauler
Today, 94 per cent of the line's business is hauling lumber and wood chips from the five mills around Prineville to one of the two big railroads at Redmond.

Two trains a day five days a week make the eight hour round trip with an average of 20 cars per train. Some potatoes also are carried out of here.

Coming back, the cars carry tires, livestock feed, fertilizers and petroleum products.

In addition to the 19 miles of main line track, the line has seven miles of spur track. Its rolling stock includes three diesel locomotives, two cabooses and four gondola cars. Boxcars come from the major railroads.

The railroad has 24 employees—one five-man train crew, one four-man train crew, three men in the diesel shop, six track maintenance men and six persons in the office. The payroll runs $270,000 a year.

Nikolaus has been with the line only two years but many of the employees are lifelong workers for the railroad. Engineer Lawrence Randall has been with the line nearly 30 years.

Nikolaus is responsible to a five-member board composed of Prineville's mayor as president of the line and four commissioners appointed by the mayor. The board sets policy but leaves Nikolaus pretty much alone to run the railroad.

As Nikolaus points out, the railroad's financial health depends on the state of the lumber business. Right now that business is good and Prineville owes much of its existence to the mills and the railroad that caused some of them to locate here.

"Without this railroad," Nikolaus said, "Prineville wouldn't be anything."

Charge 3 Men With Break-In

Three Rt. 4, Greenville men were charged Saturday night with breaking, entering, and larceny of the Radio Shack in Greenville on June 21.

Arrested and placed in the Pitt County Jail under $2,000 each were Gregory Bryant, 16; William Shiver, 19; and Amos Jordan, 19.

Part of the $738 worth of merchandise taken was recovered, according to a Sheriff Department spokesman. The Greenville Police Department also participated in the arrest. Investigation is continuing.

Preliminary hearings for the three men is set for July 19 in Greenville District Court.

Civil War Skirmish Ass'n Is Tradition

SAN FERNANDO, Calif. (UPI)—The scene in the foothills above this Los Angeles suburb looked like a page out of history on a recent sunny Sunday morning.

Small groups of men stood at attention, wearing uniforms more than 100 years out of date and holding antique, muzzle-loading muskets as a bugler sounded colors.

Three flags—the United States, the Stars and Bars of the Confederacy and the eagle and serpent tricolor of Mexico—were paraded and posted.

The scene was the 7th annual Drum Barracks meeting of the Civil War Skirmish Association where some 40 men gathered for a day of competitive shooting.

The CWSA is an unique organization among those which are classified as paramilitary for, though its members wear uniforms and carry guns, they are not extremists plotting the overthrow of the government.

All Types
They are lawyers and teachers, insurance salesmen, journalists, printers, forest rangers, scientists and truck drivers who share a common interest in history and weaponry.

The organization is a non-profit one whose objective is to preserve the history and spirit of the Civil War, to encourage the preservation of Civil War material and to fire their authentic weapons and display their equipment for the education and entertainment of spectators.

Formed in 1966 by 10 men, members of the 6th Pennsylvania Volunteer Cavalry and the now defunct 1st California Volunteer Cavalry, the CWSA presently consists of six active units and one honorary company.

The active units are the 6th

Pennsylvania; the 16th Regiment Virginia Cavalry; Marine Detachment, U.S.S. Hartford; the 5th Regiment New Hampshire Volunteer Infantry; 53 1st Texas Infantry, and the 4th Iowa Volunteer Infantry. The one honorary company is the Octavo Lanceros Voluntarios, a unit commemorating the Mexican forces of Benito Juarez who struggled against the French-imposed Emperor Maximilian at about the same time the Civil War was ravaging the United States.

Each unit wears uniforms that are as accurate a copy of the originals as possible, based on regimental photographs or historical documents.

Only one other troop
In addition, reproduced regimental flags and guidons are used to add color, pageantry and authenticity to each skirmish.

The CWSA is the only organized, competitive military shooting troop in California and one of only two in the country, the other being the 2,000-strong North-South Skirmish Association. There are two similar groups in Southern California, the state-sponsored "A" Battery of California Artillery which is headquartered at historic Ft. Tejon.

THE REMODELING REVIVAL

Today, as never before, American families are practicing the fascinating arithmetic of remodeling—subtracting from their houses that which is inconvenient, ungainly or distressing, and adding that which is efficient, handsome or delightful. It appears that billions of dollars will be spent this year on home improvements. For what will this staggering amount be spent? Essentially for a better way of living.

Death Penalty's Practical End

Though questions are being raised concerning the full import of the Supreme Court decision ruling capital punishment unconstitutional, there can be no doubt that capital punishment is now officially, as it has unofficially been for some time, a thing of the past.

The split decision of the high court, the circumstances surrounding the cases before the court, have led many including President Nixon to question just how far-reaching the historic decision is. Legal minds may find loopholes in the decision which may allow new legislation at both state and federal levels to call for capital punishment under specific circumstances, but even this appears at the moment only an outside possibility.

So far as North Carolina is concerned, capital punishment ended more than a decade ago when the last execution was carried out in Central prison in Raleigh in October 1961. There are at present 10 individuals being held under the death sentence in North Carolina's prison system, all of them expected now to be returned to court for new sentences.

Although there are many individuals being held in state prisons throughout the nation under capital sentences, capital punishment has not been carried out in the United States in the last five years.

By its decision, the court has made official law of the land what unofficially has been followed in practice throughout the nation for at least five years, and in many states for a considerably longer time.

Where do the states and lower courts go from here? There must be provisions for protecting society from those whose crimes are of the most serious nature. It requires that the courts reevaluate carefully what is proper punishment short of the death penalty. It requires that state legislatures, in providing for punishment for violations of their laws, to make similar reevaluations.

While the Supreme Court decision has caused both confusion and consternation in some quarters, it has at least cleared the air on the question of capital punishment which has been of increasing concern to an increasing number of Americans in recent years.

Bathe Twice Weekly

By ROBERT E. FORD
Associated Press Writer
DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — A young man about the neighborhood returned from school the other day and announced to his amazed parents that the teacher had ordered all his seventh-grade class to use deodorant daily.

Noise pollution is ruining our hearing. Instant food is ruining our taste. Now they are going to deprive us of the smell of human beings.

No wonder there is a movement called sensitivity training. Remember, these specific 12-year-olds attend an air-conditioned school, shower after gym classes, probably shower each morning, and change daily into crisp, clean clothing.

There was a considerable difference not so many years ago. We single out the Seymour, Tex., Grade School and Seymour High School of that time only because they were closest to our heart.

This was in the days before automatic water heaters, even before bathtubs in most homes. Schools had a subject called "Health." It stressed that everyone should take a bath twice a week.

This was easier demanded than done. Each pupil got a star if he swore he did bathe twice weekly. The school at one point reached a crisis. The star quarterback, runner, punter and linebacker was on the verge of flunking "Health." So the teacher allowed him to take two baths in one day to pass the course and retain athletic eligibility.

If you believe the star should have showered after each practice, you just don't understand. There were no school showers.

Taking a bath was a real chore. You put a couple of large kettles on the stove, dragged in a washtub, and tried to adjust the heat of the water in the tub until it was bearable.

It took real effort to pass "Health."

Frankly, the school's corridors were a little gamey. But you knew those around you were human beings, truly, not robots.

One reason you could notice people then when you couldn't see them was that everyone wore long underwear during the cool season, since central heating was unknown.

One teacher, noting that a young fellow didn't even have a fraction of a star on his "Health" card, wrote a letter to the youngster's mother demanding that he bathe.

Came back a reply: "Melvin can't bathe. He's already sewed into his long underwear for the winter."

Now, it's deodorants for schoolboys. The world is coming apart.

Centuries-Old House Is Home

By BRYAN HAISLIP
HILLSBOROUGH, N.C. — They once drank ale in the living room of the house where Timothy and Susan Kimrey live.

"Or whatever it was they drank in those days," said Tim, a child of the 20th century at home in a 200-year-old setting.

In the summer of 1776 the front rooms of the white clapboard house fronting on King Street was a tavern. Travelers along the road Jack Snipers. They quickly arrived at a lease arrangement, and moved in.

The Snipes, now living in Atlanta, Ga., had restored the house which had been in the family more than half a century. Eventually, they may move back and live in it.

Bible Thief Hanged

"We feel somewhat like vagrants," said Kemrey. Two centuries of habitation have left echoes of previous tenants and legends such as the one that a Bible thief was hanged from a dining room archway.

But houses are for living. That it was remodeled in the 1840's by John Berry, the architect of local fame, and that Peter Browne Ruffin was once its owner means less to the Kimreys than the congenial space it provides for their own life style.

Drafts and terrific winter heating bills are disadvantages. The beauty of craftsmanship in woodwork and proportions, fireplaces in each room, and an enormous backyard for gardening are compensations.

"I've changed an awful lot living here," said Kimrey. "It's been one discovery after another. I don't know how much the house had to do with it."

from Hillsborough to Salisbury stopped for refreshment, news and lodging.

Maybe they raised a toast when the word from Philadelphia trickled back to North Carolina that the Declaration of Independence had been signed.

This July 4th, the Kimreys will watch the news on television and spend a quiet day with Erin, their 4-year-old daughter, at the tasks of gardening and visiting with neighbors.

Tim Kimrey may reflect on the audacity of those early patriots who put their name to the document evoking the basic rights of life, liberty, and pursuit of happiness. Their number included his ancestor, William Hooper, one of the three North Carolina signers.

In The Steps of The Past

It's problematical, but Hooper may well have had occasion to visit the house where his descendant now lives.

Born in Massachusetts, Hooper came to North Carolina and settle at Wilmington. After the Revolutionary War, he moved up-country to Hillsborough where he practiced law and served in the House of Commons before personal ill fortune overtook him. He died here in 1790.

The Kimreys came to Hillsborough more by accident than design. They wanted more room than the apartment in Durham, where he is a consultant with the Low Income Housing Development Corp. Susan saw the newspaper ad for an old house to rent, marked for the attention of "antique lovers."

"Which we aren't," she chuckled. Furnishings prove it. White molded plastic chairs, a clear plexiglass cube table, contemporary art of the walls give the interior the look of today.

They liked the house and the owners, Mr. and Mrs.

Back to Basics

The theme of discovery has been a working out of the desire of simpler things, in touch with growth both in the garden and in relationships with people.

Tim Kimrey grew up in Raleigh. He attended Davidson College (where he met Susan on a blind date), and Union Theological Seminary in New York. An ordained Presbyterian minister, he considered his work a ministry although he does not foreclose the possibility of the parish ministry at some future time.

His mother, Anne Elizabeth Hooper Kimrey, is the daughter of a West Virginia Presbyterian minister. A cousin's genealogical research traced the family to William Hooper, the Tar Heel signer.

Kimrey is intrigued, but not impressed. "I'm not much for making a fetish of ancestry or anything else," he said.

Just past 30, he feels an urgency to stay on the cutting edge of the present rather than dwell on the past.

He has acquired an empathy for those who preceded him in the house on King Street. Those 18th century ale-drinkers, he speculated, were sturdy men who worked with pride in craftsmanship and confidence in the future.

Their innovation brought a vital form of government out of the overthrow of the established order. That is worth pondering, he suggested, by their descendants celebrating July 4th in 1792.

It's All Uphill In The South

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
COLUMBIA, S.C. — A vivid example of Sen. George McGovern's difficult task in playing both old and new politics at the same time was the decision of his local leaders to stage his Atlanta speech on the steps of the capitol, the traditional site of civil rights protests.

Totally unconsulted in that decision was McGovern's Washington headquarters which left the details of McGovern's first Southern invasion up to his local cadres.

More to the point, the decision to give McGovern's anti-establishment Presidential campaign the highest symbolic value as a protest movement by placing him in Capitol Hill Square was made without any effort to consult Gov. Jimmy Carter.

When one of the very few pro-McGovern aides on Carter's personal staff discovered that the Atlanta rally Tuesday evening would be staged at the capitol, he went into orbit. It would be provocative in the extreme, he scolded the Senator's local leaders, for the people of Georgia to get their first local look at the all-but-certain Democratic Presidential nominee facing several thousand long-haired youth and blacks in Capitol Hill Square.

The televised rally, he warned, would heighten doubts about McGovern among middle-aged, blue-collar whites and dirt farmers, already skeptical about his defense, foreign policy, welfare and tax programs — and particularly about the political support behind him.

The meeting should be moved to a shopping center, he advised, where at least some middle-aged housewives and workers would show up.

It was too late to change. The rally took place as scheduled and, as the Governor's aide predicted, McGovern's audience on Georgia's TV screens was a sea of exuberantly enthusiastic white and black youths.

The irony of that symbolic setting is heightened by the fact that, throughout his first serious political foray south of the Mason-Dixon line, McGovern himself moved conspicuously to shed some of the new political dogma that has made him suspect to many pros of the old politics and to labor leaders.

For example, in frequent telephone talks with Washington about the disputes over credentials and platform, McGovern strongly encouraged all moves to compromise with Chicago's Mayor Richard Daley on the Illinois delegate fight and to give Gov. George Wallace of Alabama a toe in the platform door.

He also categorically repudiated any part in the effort by some of his anti-establishment backers to dump the Democratic party chairman Lawrence F. O'Brien.

Moreover, refusing to trim his sails on school busing or defense cuts, he stood in the broiling sun at Little Rock and attacked "hidebound politicians who will get the surprise of their lives" next fall, but then was whisked to Gov. Dale Bumpers' mansion for some old-fashioned political horse-trading.

Upshot: he may accept pro-Southern changes in the voting rights act to remove its anti-Southern stigma.

McGovern himself seems unconcerned about the tension between strict adherence to the purity of his anti-establishment politics and the compromises he is now willing to make for the Daleys and the old politics. Some of his top aides, however, have strong and contradictory views.

Thus, when not a single member of the Texas

What Are They Doing?

WASHINGTON—What are well-known people in Washington going to do this summer? A recent check around town revealed the following:

Sen. George McGovern is going to Miami Beach in July for his vacation with either 1,478 or 1,509 of his dearest friends, depending on whom you talk to.

McGovern's staff said the senator plans to relax, watch television, read books on economics and take in some night life at the Miami convention Center.

When asked why McGovern had chosen Miami Beach for his vacation, a spokesman said, "Peter, Paul and Mary are playing at the Fontainebleau."

A check with Sen. Hubert Humphrey's office revealed that the senator was going to

"The senator has been very busy with the primaries, and he hasn't had much chance to put in long time. So he'll probably go back to Minnesota and just sit there in a rocking chair and look out at the sunset and put."

"Will he put about anything in particular?"

To the editor:

During the past two weeks, American readers and listeners have been getting double helpings of human tragedy with breakfast and dinner as rapid media communication has unfolded the story of South Dakota, the Florida Beach and catastrophic flooding last week in twelve heavily populated states.

Some of us lucky enough to be outside the sweep of nature's capriciousness are numbered rather than motivated by the pleas for help and offers of assistance that have been the daily fare, one other earnest cry for help from Red Cross is in danger of being submerged in the millions of words printed and broadcast.

The Red Cross message is this: shorn of all flummery and hocus pocus, the financial well has run dry. It ran dry with the opening hours of South Dakota agony, and we're now facing an expenditure of many dollars in the affected twelve states. The disaster budget is exhausted — has been exhausted for weeks — even though we're hanging on grimly through the generosity of Americans who are making contributions to our disaster relief fund campaign.

As Red Cross Volunteer Chairman, I wish I knew where nature will lead us during the months to come. I'm certain of this: help for flood victims in all portions of the country will cost huge sums which we don't have.

I'm convinced about something else too — the generosity of news media in helping us get unvarnished word out if they know the need is real. Believe me, my friends, as I examine our disaster financial picture — it's not only real — it's desperate.

"Except for these few trips," an aide said, "Mr. Kissinger hopes to keep his summer clear so he can go to the beach with a friend."

CRACKPOT

The crackpot is a pathetic figure. Usually he has laid hold of a good idea but the idea is twisted in his mind and he is twisted in his personality. A hundred years ago there were a lot of people who believed that the slaves should be freed. Some of these people were crackpots. They had a good idea. Their moral reasoning was sound, but their convictions got twisted up in their twisted minds and the result was fanaticism.

There was a lawyer in Springfield, Illinois, however, who along with millions of his fellow countrymen believed that slavery should be abolished. But he had a well-balanced mind and thought along a straight line. His name was Abraham Lincoln.

All through his presidency the crackpots kept after him, urging abolition before the country was ready for it. After Lincoln's death these people set themselves to punishing the southerners and thus wrote a tragic and disgraceful page of American history.

So we come back to where we started. The crackpot has a twisted mind and behind it is a twisted personality. His ideas finally have to be implemented by level-headed people who have a profound respect for truth and who try honestly to fulfill its requirements.

The crackpot is often a good man with a good idea but with a twisted mind also. He hurts the causes he tried to serve.

Harsh Legacy By Disowned Ruler

JOHN PLATTER
NAIROBI (UPI)—Kwame N. Nkrumah, in life a man disowned by the nation he once ruled, has in his death created a bizarre tussle in West Africa between his native Ghana and Guinea, his home in exile.

Nkrumah, president of Ghana for nine years until his political demise in 1966, died of cancer on April 28 in Bucharest, Romania.

Today, two months later, the body of the ruler who led Ghana to independence from Britain in 1957—making it the first West African state to achieve that status in the postwar era—lies in Conakry, Guinea's capital, threatening to embitter relations between the two West African states to a point beyond repair.

Guinean President Ahmed Sekou Toure, an ideological disciple of Nkrumah's and his host in exile, is keeping the body in an attempt to gain some political leverage.

State Funeral Held

He has given Nkrumah—officially a joint president of Guinea—a state funeral. But under pressure from Ghana's latest military ruler, Col. Ignatius Acheampong, and after pleas by Nigeria's Gen. Yakubu Gowon, Toure promised to return the body to Ghana's capital, Accra, for a state funeral May 15.

Toure agreed to return the body only under certain conditions.

Acheampong has yet to fulfill them and Nkrumah's body remains in limbo.

African writers in a rash of articles analyzing Nkrumah's impact have cited his gift to rouse people, either for or against him, as a mark of greatness.

Before he died at the age of 62, Nkrumah said he wished to be buried in Ghana at his home town of Nkroful, 200 miles south of Accra where his aged mother still awaits her son's body.

The complex ritual surrounding death there demands the sins of the departed are forgiven and even those Ghanaians who despised Nkrumah were ready to forget and join his vocal followers in clamoring for the return of the body.

Old songs lauding the "Founder of the Ghanaian nation" (as coins once were inscribed), shirts printed with his profile and other little tributes blossomed everywhere in Ghana.

Debts Forgotten

Many of Nkrumah's 8 million countrymen seemed to forget that he spent a nest-egg of about $300 million the country inherited at independence, and how he left Ghana with an external debt of $247 million at the time a military take-over ended his presidency.

Some Ghanaians say it will take decades of "pauperism" to right the debt.

The emphasis, however, was on his positive achievements.

He earned Ghana power and prestige far beyond Africa's shores by leading the nation to independence.

Ghana has the highest literacy rate in independent Africa—55 per cent. It has free medical services. It has the Volta Dam, a durable power resource for a developing economy for decades.

Even more important, say Ghanaians, "Nkrumah restored the black man's faith in himself."

For the soldier who rules Ghana today, Nkrumah's spirit is a haunting one. In an exclusive interview with UPI shortly before Nkrumah's death, Col. Acheampong said, "Nkrumah's day is over. There is no nationwide demand for his return."

But the display of mourning exhibited by Ghanaians has shown that the Nkrumah aura is still potent.

Despite Federal Aid, Lockheed Is Still In Trouble

(Editors's Note: A year ago the nation faced the possibility that, its biggest defense contractor could go into bankruptcy. Then Lockheed Aircraft Corp. received federal help. The following report by Donald M. Rothberg of The AP Special Assignment Team looks at Lockheed today.)

By DONALD ROTHBERG
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A healthy flow of Pentagon business, a huge federal loan guarantee and a helping hand from Britain so far have failed to lift Lockheed Aircraft Corp. above financial storm clouds that threatened it with bankruptcy.

The nation's No. 1 defense contractor, heavily in debt, has pegged its future to its big commercial jet, the Tristar L1011. But the airline business is in a slump and orders for the $18 million plane are below expectations.

A year ago, Lockheed was reeling from $484 million in losses on four government projects and from the bankruptcy of Rolls Royce Ltd., British builder of the engines for the Tristar.

Lockheed owed a consortium of 24 banks $400 million. Its net worth, according to a Pentagon study, was $240 million. The banks wouldn't lend any more money.

Lockheed Chairman Daniel J. Houghton appealed for government help, declaring that without it the Tristar program would be scuttled.

"If that happens, I know of absolutely no way to keep Lockheed out of bankruptcy," he said.

The Nixon administration backed Houghton's appeal and after a long and bitter fight, Congress voted to pledge government credit for up to $250 million in new bank loans.

So Lockheed kept alive. The British government provided the money to enable Rolls Royce to stay in business and offered airlines separate financing for 90 per cent of the cost of the engines with which Rolls still is having problems.

Where is Lockheed today? It used $100 million of the loan guarantee to obtain extra financing and now owes the banks a total of $500 million.

It delivered the first three-engine Tristars this spring to Eastern and Trans World Airlines. But since obtaining the loan backing during the airline slump, it has sold only two more of the 272-passenger planes.

The Tristar's main competition is the McDonnell-Douglas DC10, an American-built three engine jumbo, and a twin-engine European Airbus. Available earlier, the DC10 so far has outsold the Tristar 170 to 104.

Lockheed says it will start making money once it sells between 255-265 Tristars. A classified Pentagon study puts the figure at 370, an estimate Lockheed steadfastly denies. Plane-buying decisions vitally important to the Tristar's future are due, probably this fall, from British European Airways and Japan's All Nippon Airways.

But Lockheed has not lost any interest in the defense business.

Guard Hurt By Attack

MORGANTON, N.C. (AP) — A guard in a prison complex housing youthful offenders was in critical condition late Sunday after being attacked by several inmates.

A spokesman for North Carolina Baptist Hospital at Winston-Salem said Jack Ledford, 25, of Morganton, had emergency surgery earlier Sunday.

Dr. James C. White Jr., superintendent of the Western Correctional Center at Morganton, said Ledford had been beaten on the head with a metal mop bucket handle.

The superintendent said he did not know what caused the incident. He said about 25 inmates were watching a late show on TV early Sunday at the time.

White said most of those present went to Ledford's aid.

The superintendent said an investigation is not complete but that the youths believed to have been involved had been placed in tighter security.

The 16-story complex houses about 130 youths sent in from other institutions.

Stockholders Approve Merger

RALEIGH (AP) — Norfolk Southern Railroad stockholders have approved the merger of the line into the Southern Railway system.

The merger was approved by a vote of 469,335 shares to 4,011 at the annual stockholders meeting of the company's offices in Raleigh Friday.

Application for approval of the merger is already pending with the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Terms of the merger call for Norfolk Southern shareholders to receive seven-tenths of a share of a new $3 Three Year Cumulative Convertible Serial Preference Stock, Series A of the Southern Railway Co., for each share of Norfolk Southern stock.

Democratic establishment — now in utter disarray — showed up during his overnight stay in San Antonio, one top McGovern aide smiled knowingly. "We never would have got this far if we'd had the pros," he said, "and we don't need them now."

That purist view is sharply challenged by other McGovern aides. Now that the nomination seems assured, they know that a broadening of the McGovern base assured, they know that a broadening of the McGovern base is essential, and the sooner the better.

McGovern is moving steadily toward the latter view, but whether it will make any difference in the South is highly problematical. He ridiculed President Nixon's Southern strategy at every stop on his five-state tour and appealed for a return to Southern progressive populism, but the politicians down here don't think the South is ready for that kind of talk.

As one Georgia Democrat told us: "It's not McGovern as much as Nixon. The Republican party has co-opted all our traditional issues and we are starting from scratch."

The company is competing of $3,248 million for 81 air- for contracts on several defense planes."

When the CSA contract was rewritten, Lockheed was forced to take a $200 million loss and finish the work on a no-additional-loss, no-profit basis. But not all the CSA work is done under that no-profit contract.

Pentagon figures obtained by The Associated Press show that from 1969 through 1972, $109.3 million was spent for CSA modifications, spares and component improvement. Lockheed was prime contractor for nearly all that work. The projection for 1973-1977 is for expenditure of $278.8 million.

Pentagon officials say that these costs are part of the continuing maintenance of any weapons system and that only time will tell if they will be higher or lower than usual with the CSA. So far, says the Air Force, the plane has performed well with lower than normal maintenance.

A check of Defense Department computer printouts listing nearly 3,000 transactions with Lockheed during the last two fiscal years disclosed the following:

—Despite administration predictions before congressional committees that Lockheed would have to expect a drop in its defense business in the mid-1970s, the trend for the past two fiscal years appears to be in the opposite direction.

—During the first nine months of the fiscal year ending June 30, Lockheed received $1,418 million in business from the Pentagon. That is less than $100 million below the total for all of the previous year and the last three months are often the busiest for awarding military contracts.

—Less than half the dollar value of Lockheed contracts was awarded on the basis of price competition, a situation congressional testimony has shown is common in defense contracting.

—A large chunk of the Lockheed contracts listed as price competitive was for the CSA where the final cost ended up far higher than the bid that won the job.

Automakers' Recalls Heard In Increasing Numbers

By DAVID W. CHUTE
DETROIT (UPI)—One dictionary defines recall as "to summon back." That's what American automakers have been doing in increasing numbers since the National Highway Safety Act went into effect in September of 1966.

Since that time, a total of 23,667,999 U.S. cars have been recalled—almost one of every two built in the period.

In 1971, more than one million 1971 model cars were recalled to find and repair suspected defects—one of every eight 1971 cars produced. So far this year, the industry has recalled more than 650,000 of its 1972 models—two-thirds of them by Ford Motor Co.

In addition, General Motors recalled 6.7 million Chevrolet cars built between 1965 and 1969—the largest single recall campaign in history—to put restraints on engine mounts to prevent the engine from shifting if a mount broke.

Despite the best efforts of the best automotive brains, the record does not seem to improve. The figures, however, can be misleading since, in many cases, large numbers are recalled because a few may have a defective part.

The specific cars can't be pinpointed; a whole week's production may have to be recalled to find just a few cars.

Why Defects?

Chrysler has had 82 recall campaigns since 1966. But a spokesman says that in some campaigns, only 10 per cent of the cars recalled were suspected of having a defect, and only 1 per cent actually had the defect.

Why, in an industry that is 75 years old and has developed the most sophisticated techniques and machinery for building good cars, do such defects keep recurring?

There's a little bit of everything in an over-all answer—engineering, design, quality control, human error on the assembly line, defective parts from a supplier, and just plain goof-ups. And, since 1966, the industry has been required by law to publicize each of its recall campaigns, adding to the impression that they just don't build them the way they used to.

An example of engineering error is Ford's wholly redesigned and restyled Mercury Montego and Ford Torino for 1972. The entire production run of 404,000 cars was recalled in May because a design error led to excessive bearing wear and the possibility the rear wheels would fall off.

Chrysler recently recalled 42,000 of its 1971 and 1972 Crickets, its British minicar import, to replace the rack bar on its rack and pinion steering assembly. American desire for air conditioning and other attachments placed a heavier strain on the steering mechanism than was experienced on the Avenger, the Cricket counterpart in England.

Another design error caused Ford to recall nearly 232,000 Pintos because excess fumes were being retained in the air cleaner while the car was not moving, causing some fires when the car was started.

Varied Recall Reasons
Some problems were caused by human error on the assembly line. American Motors had to recall a small number of Gremlins and Hornets because a workman installed the wrong bolt on the disc brake caliper.

Some recalls were for trivial things. Ford recalled 700 air conditioned cars because they had decals indicating recommended tire pressure and other information not corresponding to the tires on the cars.

An example of just plain goof-up was Ford's recall of about 3,600 cars because the triangular vertical shaft of the bumper jack would not fit into the base plate. Chrysler had a similar recall—both caused by suppliers not matching the correct base plates with the vertical columns.

American automakers aren't alone in problems with defects. The three major imports—Volkswagen, Toyota and Datsun—have each had their share.

In the past two years, about 22 per cent of the 550,000 Toyotas sold in this country have been involved in recall campaigns while Datsun has recalled just over 300,000 cars in two years. In both cases, many of the cars were still in transit from Japan or had not been sold.

VW's latest recall—4,700 type four, four-door sedan station wagons in April—points up the trivial nature of some campaigns. The cars bore the incorrect date on the government certification system.

Foreign Recalls Differ
The foreign makers are not presented with the same problems on their cars sold outside the United States because European standards vary country by country and are nonexistent in many nations outside the United States.

Most European countries have no counterpart to the U.S. Department of Transportation and have no regulations regarding defects found in cars.

The auto companies accept responsibility for the errors in assembly of their cars and are required to fix the defect free of charge to the customer. Getting the customer to bring the car in to have the defect repaired is another thing altogether. Recalls are lengthy procedures as evidenced by two recall campaigns from February, 1969.

GM recalled 2.5 million cars in that month to replace a carburetor part and about 20 per cent—or 500,000—still have not been brought in. Of 2.4 million Chevrolets recalled at the same time to seal the underbody from exhaust leaks, 32 per cent still must be fixed.

Many of these cars may not even exist anymore or may have changed ownership several times.

Workmen's Errors

GM announced its engine mount recall campaign for 6.7 million Chevrolets last Dec. 4. The first letters notifying customers to bring their cars in to have cable restraints installed did not go into the mail until Feb. 21 and by the end of May, just over one million had been brought in to dealers for the work.

Today's automobile is a highly complex and sophisticated vehicle. It contains more than 15,000 parts, all of which are assembled by people.

Cars come off assembly lines that produce 60 to 75 cars an hour. The Vega assembly line at GM's Lordstown, Ohio, plant turns out 102 cars an hour—a speed some of its workers claim is too fast to do a good job.

It could be a coincidence, but the smallest of the Big Four automakers has the best record on defect-free cars. American Motors has recalled 52,060 cars during the past two and one-half years out of a total production of 511,698. That's an average of close to one recall for every 10 cars built, against the industry average of one in eight over the past year.

Death Penalty Controversy In Philippines Growing Warmer

By EDAURDO RESPOSO
MANILA (UPI)—The execution in the electric chair of three condemned rapists has made capital punishment a controversial issue in the Philippines.

Advocates for the retention of the death penalty maintain that a man's sense of justice demands avenging a wrong, the ancient law of an eye-for-eye. Opponents attack the concept of man imposing death on another by decree, saying retribution properly belongs only to God.

Justice Secretary Vicente Abad Santos summed up the case for the death penalty when he said after the execution May 17 of the rapists of movie star Maggie de la Riva:

"The ordinary citizen cannot be expected to respect the niceties of culture and morality. The only language that will be communicative and effective with him would be that which speaks of the most basic facts of life and death."

"Our times have grown increasingly violent. Among the masses, there is widespread cynicism about the efficacy and even the integrity of our regime of justice. Those of our citizens who resort to mass actions have increasingly demonstrated a propensity towards taking the law into their own hands. The death penalty serves as an escape valve philosophy of deterrence for the people's mounting ire over wrongdoing."

Calls Penalty Cruel
Guillermo Guevara, a trial judge, went beyond sociological aspects when he said capital punishment is society's instrument to preserve its own existence.

"Stripped of emotional considerations...the execution of (a criminal) is simply a necessary social cauterization. The death penalty is imposed in order that society may survive by lopping off from its body an unfit and degenerate member," he said.

Senator Salvador Laurel, in a pending bill that seeks to outlaw capital punishment, spoke for the abolitionists:

"Capital punishment is primarily vindictive. It originated from the cruel and inhuman principle of lex talionis ... which has no place in a Christian and civilized society like ours. It is patterned after the old classical theory of criminology which established a direct proportion between crime and punishment, believing that man can thereby be deterred from committing more crimes."

Laurel, who also is a prominent practicing lawyer, said that this "school of thought has been proved wrong, as shown by the prevalence of criminality today, not only in our country but in almost every part of the world."

Death no Deterrent
He said a study made by the Philippine Senate committee on justice, which he heads, found that capital crimes had not increased in countries which had abolished the death penalty.

Victor de la Serna, chairman of the Constitutional Convention's civil and political rights committee which is seeking to put the death penalty issue to a debate on the convention floor, said:

"It is to be doubted if criminals would at all be awed by the threat of the death penalty...In the perpetration of crimes, criminals have been known to have defied greater and more immediate dangers than the prolonged, technically-laden procedure of sending them to the chair."

It was because of the hue and cry raised by abolitionists that President Ferdinand E. Marcos issued a general reprieve of all death convicts on Feb. 10, 1970, pending a study by Congress of the pros and cons of the issue.

In a move that indicated its general stance, Congress shelved the matter and instead passed more laws providing the imposition of the death penalty on several other crimes including plane hijacking and narcotics-making and trafficking.

President Marcos lifted the moratorium on executions early this year.

Pollster Says Nixon Favored

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP)—President Nixon continues to be favored by voters over his possible Democratic rivals, according to a recent Gallup Poll.

The results of the survey released Sunday indicate Nixon would gain 53 per cent of the popular vote if his opponent in the presidential election were South Dakota Sen. George McGovern. The survey showed McGovern receiving 37 per cent of the ballots with 10 per cent of the voters undecided.

Against Minnesota Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, the poll showed the President with 55 per cent of the vote, compared with 33 per cent for Humphrey and 12 per cent undecided.

According to the spokesman, the statistics were based on interviews June 16-19 with 1,159 registered voters in 300 communities.

Arrest Two In Marijuana Raid

WINTERVILLE — Two men were arrested near here early Friday morning and charged with possession of marijuana following a raid on their home.

More than a pound of marijuana was confiscated.

Bond for Hodgins was set at $2,500 while bond for McMullin was placed at $5,000. A hearing in the case has been set for July 19.

'Final Battle' Solving Viet Issues Seen Unlikely

By RICHARD PYLE
Associated Press Writer
SAIGON (AP) — With growing confidence, South Vietnam's battered armed forces are striking back in hopes of reversing the flow of Hanoi's massive invasion. And while some success seems ultimately assured, the outcome is likely to fall short of what President Nguyen Van Thieu called "the final battle."

Some military and political observers believe the three months of fighting since the North's offensive started, although the bloodiest of the war in some respects, have proved nothing except—once again—that a military solution is impossible in Indochina, and the only way to a cease-fire and a settlement is through negotiation.

Gaining favor now among allied officials appears to be a view that the North Vietnamese, having tried their utmost but failed to achieve any of their major objectives, will pull back to refit for yet another try.

Some think this next attempt might come as early as next year, but many U.S. officers are so optimistic as to believe the Communist command has finished itself militarily for up to four years.

Nevertheless, the South Vietnamese also are facing severe problems. The enemy push has again reshaped the borders of the country in the Saigon region, with the Communist command effectively controlling large areas of South Vietnam that it will probably take years for the Saigon forces to recover by staying on the offensive, not a familiar role for ARVN troops.

Many areas of the countryside, including 1,164 hamlets out of 15,000 and more than 595,000 people, about 3.0 percent of the population, are under enemy control, with many more potentially lost, with a million persons counted as refugees.

"It will take years to restore that situation even if the offensive should end tomorrow," said one U.S. official.

The success of the North Vietnamese drive, to whatever degree it extends in the final analysis, also is likely to have an eroding effect on the confidence of the people, which the Saigon government has tried hard to cultivate.

One thing working in the South Vietnamese government's favor in this respect, say officials, has been the failure of the Viet Cong to fulfill their role in the Hanoi plan.

RED SPRINGS — East Carolina University and Appalachian State University battled for 11 innings before the Pirates finally overwhelmed the Mountaineers, 7-0.

The Bucs broke open the deadlock by pushing over all seven runs in the top of the 11th to claim their 11th win against four defeats and held on to at least a share of first place.

Bill Godwin was credited with the victory, evening his record at 2-2 for the year. He scattered 11 hits over the 11 innings, while striking out five and walking none.

Appalachian's Steve Anspaugh also went the distance and except for the last inning also did a fine job. He gave up 13 hits, six of them in the final frame, while striking out six and walking one—and that was intentionally.

The Pirates continued to come up with the double play, getting two in the contest. Appalachian managed to pull off one and that came when Lanny Brockmeir made a fantastic running catch of what looked like a sure hit and then threw out Larry Walters trying to get back to first base.

Appalachian got off the first threat in the game, putting their second batter on third base. Fred Whitt was the one to reach there, banging out a triple. But Godwin fanned the next man and an infield out ended the inning.

Not until the fourth did the Mountaineers threaten again. With one down, Brockmeir reached on a two-base error and Mike Ramsey singled him to third with two out, but the Pirates again stopped the threat.

In the fifth, Butch Dziadul led off with a double, but he was cut down going to third on a fielder's choice as Jeff Creason hit back to the mound. Dermont Clark later moved Creason into scoring position with a single, but the threat died there.

Again in the sixth, Appalachian threatened. That came on a one-out double by Bob Gentry. He moved up on an out, but that was it. In the eighth, ASU got off another chance. Clark singled and was sacrificed up. That proved to be the last time a Mountaineer got beyond first.

East Carolina, meanwhile, got its first threat in the second when Ronnie Leggett doubled with two away, but got no further. In the third, Jimmy Paige singled and moved up on Ralph Lamm's hit, but they could advance no more. Again in the fourth, the Bucs got a chance as Troy Eason and John Narron led off the inning with singles, but couldn't come around.

In the fifth, Lamm and Walters got two-out singles, but that was the last time a Pirate got past first until the fateful 11th.

Lamm led off the 11th with a single and he advanced when the ball was overthrown on the attempt to get him. Walters followed with a single and with one down, Narron was intentionally walked. Leggett singled to drive in Lamm with the first run, and Russ Smith got a hit to score Walters. Godwin helped his own cause, reaching on an error to score both Narron and Leggett. Mike Bradshaw singled over Smith and Lamm closed out the scoring, doubling in Godwin and Bradshaw.

Lamm led the Buc hitting with four hits in six trips. Walters and Leggett each picked up two hits.

East Carolina returns home Tuesday playing host to the University of North Carolina-Wilmington at Harrington Field at 7:30 p.m.

Merchants Appreciation Night, postponed last week, will be held during the game.

Oriole-Tiger Showdown Draws Crowds

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer
The reports of baseball's demise seem grossly exaggerated.

Battered by a series of polls and battered first by a pre-season player strike and then by a rain-soaked month of June, the national pastime has somehow survived. Now it is July—baseball weather, at last—and Baltimore and Detroit are proving that if you give the fans something exciting to see, they'll come out to see it. The Orioles and Tigers, battling for first place in the American League's East Division, climax a four-game showdown series in Detroit tonight. The first three meetings have attracted 119,500 fans to ancient Tiger Stadium—an average of a shade under 40,000 per game. A crowd of 37,635 showed up Sunday and saw Baltimore trim the Tigers' lead down to one game with a 7-2 victory. If the Orioles can win tonight in the nationally televised fourth game of the nose-to-nose confrontation, it will leave the two clubs in a flatfooted tie at the top of the division. A Detroit victory would restore the two-game Tiger lead.

Elsewhere in the American League Sunday, New York swept a doubleheader from Cleveland 6-1 and 5-2, Boston took a pair from Milwaukee 15-4 and 3-2 in 11 innings, Minnesota split a twin bill with Chicago, winning 6-4 before losing 2-1. Texas and Kansas City divided two games, the Rangers winning the first 7-5 and the Royals taking the second 8-3, and Oakland trimmed California 3-1.

In the National League, Pittsburgh defeated Chicago 7-4, Montreal tripped New York 4-3, St. Louis whipped Philadelphia 7-3, Houston nipped Atlanta 5-4, Cincinnati routed San Diego 12-2 and San Francisco swamped Los Angeles 9-3.

Sunday's version of the Oriole-Tiger showdown was somewhat less dramatic than Detroit's 2-0 victory Saturday, which ended with a leaping catch by Jim Northrup that turned what looked like a game-tying home run into a game-ending double-play instead.

Boog Powell crashed a three-run homer in the first inning and Don Buford added a two-run shot in the fifth to key the Baltimore victory.

The Yankees ran their winning streak to five games and extended Cleveland's losing streak to eight with their doubleheader sweep against the Indians.

Fritz Peterson scattered nine hits to capture the opener with Bobby Murcer leading the attack. Murcer doubled and scored in the first inning and later drove in three runs with a single and sacrifice fly.

In the nightcap, Ron Blomberg hit a towering home run and contributed one of four consecutive sixth inning singles that put New York in front for keeps.

The Red Sox unloaded for 18 hits against Milwaukee in the first game of their doubleheader with Rico Petrocelli and Reggie Smith driving in five runs apiece.

Ben Oglivie, who had three hits in the first game romp, contributed three more in the nightcap as Boston completed the sweep.

Richie Scheinblum, the American League's leading hitter, had six hits in nine at bats for Kansas City in the doubleheader split with Texas. Cookie Rojas also had six hits for the Royals.

Texas took the opener with RBI-singles by Ted Kubiak and Frank Howard snapping a 5-5 tie in the 10th inning. Hal King's seventh inning homer tied it for the Rangers, who blew an early 4-0 lead.

Scheinblum took care of the nightcap against his former teammates, collecting a homer, double and single and scoring three times.

Minnesota clipped Chicago in the first game of their doubleheader with Bobby Darwin and Eric Soderholm driving in two runs apiece. Jim Kaat, 10-2, got credit for the victory with late relief help from Wayne Granger and Dave LaRoche.

In the second game, Pat Kelly drove in one run and scored the other as the White Sox rebounded for the split.

Vida Blue won his second game of the season, limiting California to seven hits to beat the Angels. Joe Rudi had a double and triple and scored two runs for Oakland.

Goolagong Has Eyes On The Chris Evert Threat

By RONALD THOMSON
Associated Press Writer
WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Evonne Goolagong, the world's top-ranked women's tennis player, was toying with an experiment today as she faced the challenge of such American stars as Chris Evert and Billie Jean King in the Wimbledon Championships.

The 20-year-old defending champion from Australia wasn't saying what she had in mind, but she let it be known that the target was Miss Evert.

the teen-age prodigy who has electrified this famed old tournament.

Both Evonne and Chris have to win one more match before they can meet in a semifinal that would pack the fabled All-England Club.

"She'll be tough, all right. But she's someone new to me, and that means I'll be able to try out my experiment. No, I won't say what it is," Miss Goolagong said.

Miss Goolagong's game has been erratic in her progress to today's quarter-finals. She dropped the first set and was in danger of losing to Russia's Olga Morozova in the fourth round.

Evonne's opponent in the quarter-finals is Francoise Durr of France, who has lost only six games in three matches.

Miss Evert, the 17-year-old bombshell from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., stuck to her practice of declining to speculate on what might happen when she plays Miss Goolagong.

In the quarter-finals, fourth-seeded Miss Evert meets unseeded Patti Hogan of La Jolla, Calif. Chris and Patti paced the U.S. Wightman Cup team to victory over Britain here last month, winning all their matches.

Three other American girls have made the quarter-finals—Mrs. King of Long Beach, Calif., Nancy Gunter of San Angelo, Tex., and Rosemary Casals of San Francisco.

Billie Jean, three-time Wimbledon champion and seeded No. 2 this year, plays Britain's Virginia Wade, seeded seventh and Mrs. Gunter and Miss Casals are paired against each other.

Two American men are in the quarter-finals—top-seeded Stan Smith of Pasadena, Calif., and Jim Connors, the 19-year-old rising star from Belleville, Ill.

Chess Title Play Delayed

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (AP) — The International Chess Federation postponed the start of the Bobby Fischer-Boris Spassky world championship series until Tuesday after Fischer failed to arrive in Iceland over the weekend. The American champion was believed still in New York.

Fischer's 24-game match with the Russian world's champion was to have begun Sunday, and the president of the world federation, Dr. Max Euwe, announced if the American challenger failed to show up by noon Tuesday he would risk forfeiting his chance at the title.

Fischer's representatives in Iceland requested the postponement on the grounds that he was unable to play because of fatigue. But it was generally assumed that the request was part of Fischer's campaign to get more money out of the Icelanders.

Fischer and Spassky have agreed to split a $125,000 purse, with the winner taking five-eighths, and are also to each get 30 per cent of the sale of film and television rights. But Fischer is seeking an additional 30 per cent of the gate receipts, and his representatives have been negotiating this point with sponsors of the match, the Icelandic Chess Federation.

RALEIGH (AP) — Bobby Mitchell, a North Carolina touring pro who plays out of Kernersville, has entered the Carolinas Open golf championship July 11-13 at Raleigh's MacGregor Downs Country Club.

Mitchell is ranked as the seventh leading money winner of the PGA tour with nearly $90,000 to his credit this year.

A field of 224 professionals and amateurs is entered in the tournament. Hamp Aud of Columbia, S. C., winner of last year's tournament in Charlotte, will be on hand to defend his title.

A new black muscadine grape called Noble has been developed at North Carolina State University and is being released to nurserymen for plant increase.

Plants of the new Noble variety should be generally available for planting by 1973.

Noble is described as a high yielding, good quality muscadine grape suited for commercial production and home plantings in North Carolina.

Noble is self-fruitful, winter-hardy, productive, vigorous and retains its fruit well. The black fruit makes "good to excellent" red table wine and excellent unfermented juice and jelly. The fruit of Noble is also good to eat as fresh grapes. It ripens in early mid-season.

Noble out-yielded the Hunt, Albemarle and Tarheel varieties in five-year comparisons at three different sites in the state. At the Sandhills Research Station, Jackson Springs, Noble produced an average of 9.6 tons per acre in a five-year test.

The new variety is believed to hold considerable promise for cracking the door to an opportunity that is untouched by the muscadine industry — the manufacture of red table wine.

Currently, white or bronze muscadine grapes are sold at a premium for making the scuppernon type wine. However, about 75 percent of the table wines sold are red or rose.

Wine made from Noble fruit was rated better than that of all existing black varieties during the past three years. It had good color, aroma and flavor.

Research also is pushing the day forward when the farmers of the Piedmont and Mountain sections of North Carolina may have a new forage crop.

The crop is crownvetch, a native of Eastern Europe. Crownvetch was brought to the United States more than 100 years ago as an ornamental plant. It is now being tested as a possible forage crop by U. S. Department of Agriculture scientists working at North Carolina State University.

Results so far indicate a future for crownvetch if several problems can be overcome. For example, crownvetch grows well in mid-summer when most other forages are in short supply. It is resistant to most insects and diseases, and a recent study shows that crownvetch can be as nutritious as alfalfa. In the particular lot of hay tested, dairy heifers gained faster on crownvetch than on sericea lespedeza or alfalfa.

Dr. J. C. Burns who participated in the feeding study said daily gain of heifers on crownvetch was twice that of heifers on sericea lespedeza and exceeded the daily gain for heifers on alfalfa.

Burns attributed the higher gain to the fact that the heifers on crownvetch ate 16 pounds of hay each day, while the heifers on alfalfa ate 13 pounds and those on sericea ate only 12 pounds.

Animals consumed more crownvetch because the particular hay fed was more nutritious and more digestible than either the lespedeza or alfalfa hays. No problems were encountered in getting the heifers to eat the new forage, as has been reported with some livestock.

Despite its advantages, Dr. Burns said it was too early to encourage farmers to plant crownvetch. Several problems of an agronomic nature have been uncovered which may take several years or more of research.

Stands of crownvetch are hard to establish, and they seem to die out after about three years. Burns and his co-workers are testing grazing patterns and fescue-crownvetch combinations that might overcome these problems.

Time Extended For Leaf-Quota Leasing

Flue-cured tobacco growers may now lease and transfer flue-cured tobacco quota through November 30, according to Stacy J. Evans, Pitt County Executive Director for the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

Evans said that the recently enacted legislation will give farmers more time for making arrangements for either transferring quota to or from their farms. The previous deadline for leasing had been established as April 1.

According to Evans, the basic provisions of the leasing program remain unchanged. All transfers must be within the county and any receiving farm must have an effective flue-cured tobacco allotment for the current year. Leasing both to and from a farm is not permitted during the same year.

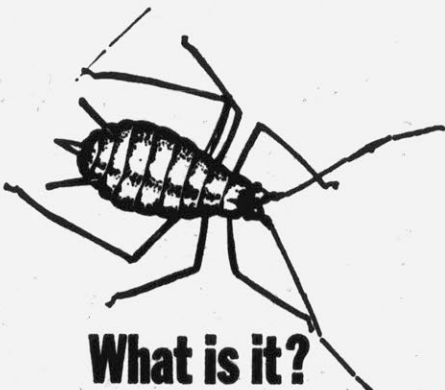

Evans said that the new provision simply extends the leasing date through most of the marketing season. Under the new law both the receiving and transferring farm must have 50 percent of the effective allotment planted in order to lease or transfer acreage. Farms with less than 2,000 pounds of basic quota may transfer to any farm without regard to the planted acreage on either farm.

The new lease and transfer provisions are effective for the 1972 crop of flue-cured tobacco.

Evans said any farmer interested in the new leasing provisions should contact his local ASCS office for all the details.

MEASURED BY BELLS
TOKYO (UPI)—In medieval Japan, time was measured by ringing temple bells six times at even intervals between dawn and sunset. Since day-light is longer in summer than in winter, the six time units varied in length around the year.

What is it?

Who cares! It happens to be an aphid. But no matter. Almost any insect that's bugging your lawn or garden can be wiped out by Spectracide® insecticide. That's because Spectracide contains Diazinon®.

'Attends 2-Day Workshop Meet

Mrs. Charles I. McClelland attended a Leadership Training Workshop at Meredith College in Raleigh Tuesday and Wednesday.

Sponsored by the N.C. Council of Women's Organizations, the workshop dealt with four main areas—human relations, led by Mrs. Max Garner of Greensboro, immediate past president of the N.C. Family Life Council; parliamentary procedure, led by Dr. James E. Donnelly of Elon College; public speaking led by Mrs. Sara E. Clayton; and "Living All Your Days" by Dr. and Mrs. Edward Hughes Pruden, counselors at Meredith.

Dr. John E. Weems, president of Meredith, presented certificates to the participants and they were treated to dinner and a play at a local dinner theater.

The community committees will locate the junkers and be responsible for securing the necessary releases for their removal. The Pitt County Clean-Up Committee will coordinate the pick up of cars with the cooperating crusher.

If you have cars you want removed, or if you know others who do, please call the Pitt County Extension Office 758-1196.

Rural Development: Rural Development is a subject that is getting a great deal of attention. Much of the reason for this interest stems from the realization by state and national leaders that one segment of American society cannot progress very far if another is allowed to lag behind.

CLOSED TUESDAY

The Meadowbrook Day Care Center will be closed Tuesday, July 4, according to its director, Mrs. F.P. Jackson.

The Daily Reflector, Greenville, N.C.—Monday, July 3, 1972—11

The United States Department of Agriculture has been assigned much of the responsibility for coordinating efforts in rural development. A rural development panel has been formed in each county with USDA agencies and the Agricultural Extension Service as the core group. In Pitt County, other agencies making up the Rural Development Panel are: County Schools, Pitt Technical Institute, Mental Health Clinic, Department of Community Health Services, Pitt-Greene Electric Membership Corporation, Employment Security Commission, N.C. Forest Service, Social Services, Pitt County Development Commission, and the Pitt County Planning Board. The Rural Development Panel can be a reference point for communities and individuals seeking assistance on a wide range of needs. Through the coordinated approach, each agency can do a more effective job of serving the people of Pitt County.

The cannon standing today in New Market Battlefield Park are silent. But in 1864 the thunder of war rolled out over this historic site in the beautiful Shenandoah Valley of Virginia, where a handsome new monument now stands to commemorate the young heroes of the Battle of New Market. It was one of the Civil War's most moving episodes: 250 cadets of the Virginia Military Institute—the school's entire student body—laid down their books and marched out to fight on these green fields. In the 100-acre park stands the Hall of Valor. This is more than just a memorial: it's a museum whose exhibits include motion pictures, models and intriguing relics, constituting a complete chronological survey of the Civil War. The site is listed in the National Register of Historic Places, and it's operated by the Virginia Military Institute of today as a nonprofit educational facility open to the public.

About-Face In Reading Skills

Billy did a miraculous right-about-face in his reading ability. For he devoured 30 of those superb "Classics, Illustrated" before the next term began. Their colorful comic book format caught his interest, and tempted him to read the "balloons."

By GEORGE W. CRANE, Ph.D., M.D.
Case U-525: Billy R., aged 10, worries his parents.
"Dr. Crane," his mother began, "Billy is very poor at reading."
"Maybe he comes by it naturally, for I barely finished high school and his daddy quit at the age of 16.

"But Billy now has a wonderful teacher who suggested we follow your 'flash card' method to help Billy improve."

"What else do you think would also speed up his reading before the next term starts?"

Make Reading Fun
Good readers go on to college or educate themselves, as Abraham Lincoln did!

Motivate your kiddies to read by use of "Classics, Illustrated." Mrs. Crane and I reared our children on those splendid color comic book formats of the great literature of all time.

There are now 170 titles, which cover such splendid novels as "Tom Sawyer," "Ivanhoe," "Robinson Crusoe," "Moby Dick," "Tale of Two Cities" and 165 other gems of literature.

These "Classics, Illustrated" look like ordinary comic books, but each one covers an entire famous novel.

Their price is so modest that every family could easily order a dozen, for they are shipped, prepaid, for only 25 cents per book.

Every grammar school should also order the entire 170 books for its library.

When kiddies then need special drill on reading, let them get it via these exciting tales.

For the pictures show dramatic suspense that tempts the child to read the brief "balloons" that accompany each scene.

Recently, I telephoned Mrs. Gladys Briggs (Classics, Illustrated, 1554 S. Sepulveda Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif., 90025) to ship me the entire set of 170 books.

For I now use them with our grandchildren.

Our 5 Crane children became excellent readers largely by use of these same books some 25 years ago.

They often wrote their high school book reviews thereon.

For a "Classics, Illustrated" version will abridge a rather stodgy, long novel such as "Robinson Crusoe" into a thriller-diller 30-minute version, with ample colorful pictures to whet one's interest.

Actually, you adults, even if you are college graduates, can't lay these books aside till you finish them!

In fact, Mrs. Crane would place them in the magazine rack in the bathroom, where they were read and reread.

Indirectly, they produced the reading skill and familiarity with the world's great novels, that led all 5 of our children to finish college.

And thus caused our 3 living boys to earn their 4 doctoral degrees, namely, Ph. D., M.D., D.D.S. and J.D.

If you grandparents also want to offer the ideal type of gift to your grandchildren, order a few of the "Classics, Illustrated."

Indeed, in my addresses before state medical and dental conventions, I have also urged those doctors to offer such books as birthday and Christmas gifts to child patients!

For in so doing, those doctors make better readers out of the children in their community and thus insure such kiddies against school dropouts!

Also, send for my booklet "How to Raise Your Child's School Marks," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 cents.

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.) Copyright 1972.

Medical Research May Find Needed Answers

By DR. WALLACE WOOLFE, Dean, ECU School of Medicine
The traditional functions of a medical school include teaching, research, and service. Within the limited resources of the East Carolina University School of Medicine, we are attempting to meet our responsibility in each of these areas.

Research has always been one of the most important of the duties of the medical school faculty. It is through research that the answers to problems currently plaguing the American people will be found. Intelligent basic research has been responsible for the most dramatic improvement in medical science. It is certainly true that tomorrow's medicine is today's research.

In this regard, Dr. A. Mason Smith, Assistant Professor of Microbiology, has been awarded a $40,000 research contract with the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development of the National Institutes of Health.

Under this contract Dr. Smith is to study the phenomenon of aging of the immunological system. The immunological system represents one of the major defenses of the organism against such disorders as bacterial infection, viral infection, and various neo-plastic diseases.
Specifically, the study will involve the decline in the competency of the cellular components of the immune system. It will also include a study of the mechanisms by which the immune system develop competency against various disease processes. The numerous physical and physiologic variables that modify the rate of development of the immune system will also be studied.

It is possible that this study will reveal new methods of therapeutic intervention to govern the rate of activity of this system to allow it protection against various disease processes.
Receipt of such an award is recognition of the talent and expertise of the faculty of the School of Medicine. These awards also allow the intellectual development of the faculty, and they offer the student an insight into the research of today which will be the medicine he brings to his patients in future years.

Four Juveniles Are Arrested

Four juveniles have been arrested in connection with a June 20 breaking, entering and larceny at Sadie Sauter School.

Four local boys whose ages ranged from 13 to 15 were charged with entering the school through a window they broke and taking an audiotronic tape player, a tape recorder, a projector, and several small items, Chief Glenn Cannon said. He noted everything reported as stolen was recovered.

BRIDGE QUIZ ANSWERS

Q. 1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠10 6 3 ♥A 6 ♣K J 9 3 ♦A Q 10 2

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♥ Pass
1 NT Pass 2 ♣ Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Three clubs. Although partner's two club call is not forcing you should take further action inasmuch as your values should fit North's hand admirably. A five club contract may hinge on his having a few key cards.

Q. 2 — Neither vulnerable, 25 South you hold:

♠10 6 4 3 ♥8 5 2 ♦K 2 ♣7 4 3

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West
2 ♠ Pass 2 NT Pass
3 ♣ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—Six spades. We cannot conceive of any sort of demerit in giving that partner might hold which would not be a laydown for slam. Your spades and diamonds should solidify his suits so that, if he holds the other controls, he may be in position to go all the way.

Q. 3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠A 10 8 ♥5 4 ♦9 5 4 ♣A K J 8 2

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West
1 ♥ Pass 2 ♣ Pass
3 ♥ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—Inasmuch as you have a solid opening bid facing a partner who has opened and jumped, you must think in terms of slam and, as a tempo-measuring measure, you should bid three spades, which partner in the subsequent bidding will recognize as the ace. It is presumed, of course, that hearts are the agreed trumps.

Q. 4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠K 3 ♥9 8 7 ♦A 10 9 6 5 ♣Q 9 2

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West
Pass 1 NT Pass Pass
Dble. Pass ?

What action do you take?

A.—You have splendid defense against a no trump contract and should pass. We have not lost sight of partner's previous pass but, in view of the fact that he was willing to double a no trump bid, he must be just under an opening bid himself. It is plain to be seen that dummy will be trickless, and this places quite a job on East's shoulders.

Q. 5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠K J 2 ♥K 9 ♦A 9 7 6 5 3 ♣10 2

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 2 ♣ Pass
2 ♦ Pass 3 ♦ Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—We recommend taking a chance on a three no trump bid. Partner has shown better than an average hand by his two forward responses, and there is a good chance that you will be able to run the diamond suit. A lead up to one of your kings should prove helpful, and there appears a reasonable prospect of collecting nine tricks.

Q. 6—East-West vulnerable, and as South you hold:

♠10 6 5 2 ♥8 5 3 ♦6 ♣9 8 2

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East
Pass 1 ♠ Dble. Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—The consideration to a pass, for you have no reason to believe that you can defeat the one spade contract. Make an old fashioned response of two clubs, showing your best suit (outside of the one that has been bid).

Q. 7—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠A 7 5 ♥K 8 6 ♦Q J 9 5 2 ♣K 4

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♥ Pass
1 ♦ Pass 1 ♠ Pass

What is your rebid?

A.—One on trump. With this minimum it is better not to give an immediate raise even though you have adequate trump support.

Q. 8—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠A K J 9 6 2 ♥9 ♦J ♣Q 10 9 5 2

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 2 ♥ Pass
2 ♠ Pass 3 ♥ Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—In our vernacular you have run out of bids. Do not permit the singleton heart to convert you into a nuremberg. You should proceed under the assumption that partner was tuned in when you bid spades three times. If he has chosen to override you, it must be with a suit that is at least as good as yours — and probably better.

Death Claims Mormon Leader

By DAVID BRISCOE
Associated Press Writer
SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The man called prophet, seer and revelator by members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormon), President Joseph Fielding Smith Jr., has died.

Smith was stricken by a heart attack Sunday night at the home of a daughter, Mrs. Bruce R. McConkie. He would have been 96 July 19.

Smith had addressed the last general conference of the 3-million-member church in April and had not been ill.

Funeral arrangements were pending.

Smith's likely successor is Harold B. Lee, 73, who has been first counselor to the president and president of church's Council of the Twelve.

The president of The Twelve—the man who has been a member of the body the longest—traditionally becomes church president.

The formal selection of a successor is expected after the funeral. His name will be announced by The Twelve.

Smith's death came three days after the 142-year-old church announced a reorganization to handle its growing numbers. Statistics show it has grown 94 per cent throughout the world in the last 12 years.

The 10th president was a member of The Twelve, which Mormons believe is the modern inheritor of Jesus Christ's Twelve Apostles, for 60 years before he was selected president in January 1970 upon the death of David O. McKay.

He was considered a direct link to God by Mormons, who believe their church was started by Jesus Christ, removed from the earth for some 1,800 years and restored in the United States. The church refuses to be classified as Protestant. Smith was known as an uncompromising defender of Mormonism. He opposed any watering down of the religion, which has ignored ecumenism with any other faith. Mormons are forbidden to use cigarettes, alcoholic drink, coffee and tea.

Historically they have given at least 10 per cent of their income to the church.

A painful issue to many liberal Mormons has been the church's ban against Negroes holding its priesthood, which all males of every other race are expected to attain. Little is said about the issue in Mormon meetings, except general statements on civil rights for all people.

Once asked about the ban, Smith told an interviewer:

"Young man, Joseph Smith did not decide that the Negro should not have the priesthood. Brigham Young did not decide it. David O. McKay did not decide it. I did not decide it. God decided it."

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Do some visiting around to places and with people who can help you greatly. Put more vitality into your daily living. Hobbies are fine in p.m. in the company of good friends, relatives.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Although you want to make repairs, etc., be sure you study your savings account well first. One who has much data will now give it to you. This can soon add to present assets.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY — he or she will be one of those delightful young people who is ever alert to goings-on around him or her, and will quickly adopt any suggestions or ideas which the parents give. Since there is brilliance in this chart, will follow through with duties most intelligently. There is also the ability to finish whatever has been commenced. Property management, real estate, building are all fine here. Much success is possible.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

Elderly Make Up Most Of Miami Beach People

By KEN GEFFERT

Associated Press Writer

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) —

Out of the sand rise 400 glittering giants of glass and concrete that soak up $600 million a year from sun-loving tourists who holiday in Miami Beach.

"Motel Row" is a towering strip of neon and good times that has made this resort island famous.

But close by the nightclubs and "extravaganza revues" on Collins Avenue are the bingo parlors and shuffleboard courts of South Beach where the old folks gather.

The elderly comprise most of Miami Beach's 87,000 population. The average age is 65.

Miami Beach Convention Hall, scene of the Democratic and Republican national conventions, is the hub of the city at Washington Avenue and 17th Street. Oceanfront hotels lie to the east, swank homes to the west and poverty-level walkups to the south.

On South Beach, the elderly are jammed into faded stucco hotels and apartments where rent is $75 to $150 a month. Drugstores and sundry shops are filled with low-cost trinkets to match the pocketbooks of their customers. There are dozens of cafeterias and low-budget diners.

By contrast, the affluent own winter homes on the secluded islands that dot Biscayne Bay between Miami Beach and Miami or live in massive, beachfront condominiums that honeycomb the skyline, rivaling the motels.

They shop in the exclusive Bal Harbour area where price tags for clothing can come in four and five figures.

But while the old and the affluent form the basis of the permanent populace, it's the tourists that make Miami Beach thrive.

Tourism accounts for 85 cents of every dollar in the Miami Beach economy. In 1970, vacationing tourists spent nearly $600 million.

From South Beach through Motel Row, there are 400 hotels with a total of more than 40,000 rooms. During the winter season, rates at the name hotels like Fontainebleau, Doral and Americana start at $50 a night for a double room and go to $150 for a suite.

The innkeepers seem to have no trouble filling the house during the season, but at the same time there's no boom in hotel construction. The newest one, the Playboy Plaza, was completed eight years ago.

Beavers Thrive In Pennsylvania

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Pennsylvania's beaver colonies seem to be thriving despite the state's heavy industrialization, stream pollution and the superhighway building program. Trappers harvested 3,381 of the valuable fur animals which at one time were almost extinct in Pennsylvania.

Motorcycle Gang Shootout Kills Two

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — "It sounded like machine gun fire," a member of a Florida motorcycle group, the Pagans, said of the shooting incident near Durham Friday which left two Pagans dead.

Rush Paula Roebuck, 26, of Miami said four of the Pagans were in a van truck and two others were on motorcycles, going to Pennsylvania on I-85. She said one of the motorcyclists told the occupants of the van that "the Storm Troopers are coming. They've got guns."

Durham County Sheriff Marvin L. Davis said the Storm Troopers were a motorcycle club from Durham.

Miss Roebuck said the Pagans "tried to pull off at an exit ramp, but they blocked us in two pickup trucks. Then the shooting started and it didn't stop."

About 30 bullet holes were found in the van late Friday after the shooting.

In addition to the two dead—identified as Lance A. Burger, 32, and Donald T. Scroggs, both of Miami—four other persons were wounded, two of them by standers.

Four Storm Troopers were charged with murder. They are William G. Lamm, 31, David K. Winstead, Alton H. Mason, 21, and William Douglas Johnson, 29, all of Durham. Johnson was one of the wounded and was treated at a hospital before being jailed.

No bond was allowed the four.

Miss Roebuck, who was slightly wounded, was charged with damaging a car of a passerby who stopped and was released on $100 bond. Another Pagan, Salvatore Infantolino, was jailed under $5,000 bond, charged with assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill. Officers said he attacked the passing motorist.

Sheriff Davis said he understood the shooting resulted from a dispute over a stolen motorcycle. He said 2 rifles, a shotgun and pistols were found at the scene but he didn't know which group had which ones.

Animal List Still Grows

CHICAGO (UPI)—Scientists now know of more than 1.2 million animal species and the list keeps growing.

New species are being named at the rate of more than 10,000 per year, according to Encyclopaedia Britannica, but there still is a huge backlog among the unnamed. For example, only about half of the world's insects have been classified.

The first zoological classification, in 1758, listed 4,236 species, including 1,222 vertebrates. Since then the vertebrate total has increased more than 37 fold, with about 40,000 species now recognized.

However, the vertebrates are losing ground, accounting for 29 percent of all species in 1758 and about 4 percent now. The proportion is expected to decrease further because there are an estimated one million species of invertebrates, mainly insects, that have not yet been named.

Marriage Slows A Graduation

MUNICH (UPI)—Married students take longer to graduate from university than single ones.

So says an analysis by the Bavarian State Statistics Bureau, which determined single students graduated after an average of 5.3 years. But married students without children required an average 5.6 years and married students with children needed 5.7 years before final exams.

Firearm Deaths Among Lowest

NEW YORK (UPI) — Firearm accidents are the lowest cause of fatal mishaps, according to Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., which listed accidental firearm deaths at 2.1 per 100,000 population, compared with 47.2 for traffic accidents, 9.5 in falls, 5.1 drowning and 4.4 fires.
