Democrats Ask Special Session Of High Court

By VERNON A. GUIDRY Jr.
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Opposing Democratic forces today asked Chief Justice Warren E. Burger to convene a rare special session of the Supreme Court in a political-legal tangle. The decision carries with it Sen. George McGovern's renewed hopes for a first-ballot presidential nomination.

The Democratic party hierarchy and forces of Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley both are fighting a U.S. appeals court ruling but for different reasons.

The party hierarchy asked the Supreme Court to suspend the effect of the appeals court ruling, which Wednesday overrode the party Credentials Committee to allow McGovern to recover 151 California convention delegates.

The Daley forces are seeking just the opposite effect, contending that federal courts should intervene in order to seat Daley and 58 other Illinois delegates ousted by the Credentials Committee.

There was no indication when the chief justice might act.

The Court of Appeals restored to McGovern the full 271-vote California reversing the committee's vote to take more than half the number from him and apportion them to other primary candidates, chiefly Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey.

The court suspended the effect of its rulings until 2 p.m. today to give the high court time to act if it wishes. The Supreme Court has held only three special sessions in its history.

"We feel this case is as compelling and more compelling" than those which prompted the other sessions, said Democratic National Committee counsel Joseph A. Califano in Miami Beach. "The courts should not get involved in selecting delegates."

McGovern forces announced Wednesday afternoon that the appeals-court action gave their candidate more than the 1,509 delegate votes needed for nomination.

The Associated Press delegate count, which does not list officially uncommitted delegates who are leaning toward a candidate, showed McGovern with 1,436.65 votes.

But Humphrey was in no mood to concede. He noted that the Supreme Court had not yet spoken, and argued further that the party itself would be the ultimate judge.

Here 4 Hours

An abbreviated special Bloodmobile drive will take place in Greenville tomorrow, according to Douglas Morgan, chairman of the American Red Cross Pitt County Bloodmobile.

From 11:00 a.m. until 3:00 p.m., the bloodmobile will be at the Moose Lodge in the first drive scheduled for the new fiscal year which began on July 1.

"The purpose of this special drive," Morgan explained, "hopefully is to recoup some of the blood used during the holiday season just passed. We felt that scheduling this extra drive at this time would give donors an opportunity to help catch up in the blood supplies now available."

Morgan added that "by having this one day Friday drive, we feel donors will find time to give blood before leaving town for the weekend."

Pollution Grant Program OK'd

RALEIGH (AP) — Secretary Charles W. Bradshaw Jr. of North Carolina's Department of Natural and Economic Resources says the state's matching grant program for water pollution control facilities has received final federal approval.

He said this will make about $16.7 million in additional federal funds available to the state.

Passage of the state's $150 million clean water bond issue in the May 6 primary cleared the way for federal approval.

The federal share of construction costs for municipal waste treatment projects in increased from 33 per cent to 55 per cent because the state is providing matching funds for the projects.

Alaskan Has Filed Notice

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Mike Gravel announced today he would seek the Democratic vice-presidential nomination at the national convention in Miami Beach next week.

The Alaskan told reporters he would give delegates an opportunity to select the vice-presidential nominee in an open contest instead of "rubber-stamping" the presidential nominee's choice.

The 42-year-old freshman senator's formal announcement at a news conference confirmed what he had been informally telling reporters and Democratic party officials around the country, that he was actively seeking the vice-presidential nomination.

Gravel said that as vice president he would "add meaningful dialogue to the chief executive's deliberations rather than pay lip service and embarrassed obedience to unknown policies, as is the case today.

"As VP I would seek to open new vistas of communication and information to the news media and the people," he said.

"I would not abuse and intimidate those who seek honest information, as is the case today.

"As vice president, I would act as an advocate for all the people, and especially minorities before a complex and insensitive bureaucracy."

"As vice president I would hope to be my own man."

Big Moonshine Still In Wilson

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — A still that agents said was capable of producing 1,600 gallons of moonshine whisky per run was found in Wilson County Wednesday, ABC agent Glenn1 Stutts said.

Stutts said the still was to be blown up today.

The agent said 8,000 gallons of fermenting mash was found at the still, indicating it had been in operation for two weeks. He said 240 gallons of moonshine was also found.

FBI Agents Kill Two Sky Pirates

By BOB YEAGER
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — "We wanted to stop the hijacking and stop it we did," said the FBI special agent in charge, describing how authorities stormed a pirated aircraft and killed two hijackers in a gun battle while passengers were still aboard.

Officials said shots fired by one of the hijackers killed a passenger and wounded two others after federal agents charged aboard an interstate Pacific Southwest Airline Boeing 737 taken over by two hijackers for six hours Wednesday.

"Certainly we're not pleased that three passengers were wounded," said Robert Gebhardt, FBI special agent in charge. He made the comment before learning that one of the passengers had died.

"But," he said in response to a reporter's question, "somebody had to make a decision."

Three FBI men who had sneaked up under the fuselage of the plane rushed aboard after the hijackers refused to release 81 passengers, Gebhardt said.

The slain hijackers had demanded two parachutes, $800,000 and passage to Siberia shortly after taking the plane over in the air, officials said.

Gebhardt said the FBI men moved in on the plane only after the hijackers refused to release the passengers until the ransom was handed over.

"I saw two FBI men enter the plane," said Dr. Manuel Alvarez, 58, of Sacramento, Calif., a passenger.

"The first came through with his hands on his head, and the second came up shooting, blasting away with a shotgun."

The hijacker "crumpled to the floor," said Alvarez. The FBI said the gunman had an automatic in each hand but did not open fire.

In the rear of the plane, the other hijacker had another automatic and fired at least three shots, the FBI said.

The second hijacker went down almost immediately from FBI gunfire, Gebhardt said, and like the other was dead on arrival at the hospital.

The hijackers also held the plane's five crew members.

It was the first time the FBI had charged aboard a loaded passenger airliner to put an end to a hijacking.

Wednesday's hijacking occurred at 10:10 a.m., shortly after the plane left the airport in Sacramento on a flight to Los Angeles via San Francisco. It landed at San Francisco International Airport, then took off, circled the city and landed again.

The gunmen killed Wednesday were identified from cards in their pockets as Dimitr Alexieff, 28, of Hayward, Calif., and Michael Azmanoff, 28, of San Francisco.

The passenger dead on arrival at Peninsula Hospital in nearby Burlingame was E. H. Stanley Carter, 66, identified as a retired Canadian National Railway conductor from Longueuil, Que.

The wounded passengers, reported in fair condition at the hospital, were identified as Leo A. Gormley, 46, of Van Nuys, Calif., and Victor Sen Yung, 56, a Universal City, Calif., actor who plays the Chinese cook in the TV series "Bonanza."

After landing and then taking off and circling San Francisco for an hour, the plane sat for five hours at the end of the runway while negotiations by radio continued and the money and materials were collected.

One Item

Only one item will appear on the agenda of the City Council which meets for a Special Call meeting in City Hall at 8:00 p.m. tonight.

City Councilmen will discuss and consider action on the adoption of the tentative budget for fiscal year 1972-73.

The meeting is open to the public

Rescued From A Storm Sewer

A DOG STORY ... A dog trapped in a storm drain caused considerable excitement yesterday as members of the Greenville Fire Department and Public Works Department tried for about 30 minutes to rescue the pup. The drain cover was lifted to allow access to the dog, and the dog not knowing that he was being rescued, fled to a drain at the end of the block. The story ends in the left photo as the helping hand of a youngster, Dave Selby, with a borrowed pair of gloves, helps the dog out of the drain to freedom. (Reflector Photos by Tommy Forrest)

Farmville Woman Dies Of Injuries

FARMVILLE — A Farmville woman died early today in Pitt Memorial Hospital of injuries she received in a two-car collision last night on U.S. 264A east of here.

Pitt County Coroner and Medical Examiner E. W. Harvey said this morning that Mrs. Charles Thomas Britt of 409 Waverly Street died at 12:40 a.m. from a brain contusion as a result of fractured skull and other juries received in the 7:30 p.m. wreck.

According to Highway Patrolman W. E. Brinson, drivers of the cars involved were Mrs. Britt and James Michael Dunn, 18 of Ayden.

Trooper Brinson said that Dunn and Mrs. Chester Worthington of Rt. 1, Greenville, who was a passenger in the Britt vehicle, were injured and admitted to Pitt Memorial for treatment.

The patrolman reported that the west-bound Dunn car apparently rounded a curve, crossed the center line and collided head-on with the east-bound Britt vehicle.

Dunn was charged with careless and reckless driving following the accident and Trooper Brinson said that additional charges may be filed.

Damage was estimated at $2,500 to the Dunn Car and $6,000 to the Britt vehicle.

The death was the 17th recorded in Pitt County this year.

Proposes No Active Prison Terms In Minor Cases

RALEIGH (AP) — The chief administrator of North Carolina's court system is recommending to district and superior court judges that they discard the possibility of active prison sentences in most minor traffic cases and certain other misdemeanors.

Director Bert Montague of the Administrative Office of the Courts said Wednesday he made the suggestion in a letter mailed to judges, solicitors, public defenders and court clerks last week.

The purpose of the recommendation, he said, was to help the state comply with a recent U.S. Supreme Court ruling which requires the state to provide counsel for indigent defendants in all cases where a prison sentence may be imposed.

Montague said the suggestions came out of a special meeting he held at Southern Pines with representatives from all phases of the court system.

He said those at the meeting recommended that each county consider discarding active prison sentences for four categories of offenses:

—Any offense appearing on the traffic offense waiver list, which is the list of offenses for which defendants can waive trial and simply pay a fine.

—Any other offenses under Chapter 20 of the state's general statutes, except for the more serious offenses such as racing, hit and run driving, driving while license is revoked. Those for which sentences might be waived would include failure to yield the right of way or passing a stopped school bus.

—Any offense over which the magistrate exercises jurisdiction, such as passing a bad check.

—First offense of public drunkenness.

Montague said the cases on the list account for about half of the cases appearing in the state courts each year, and he estimated that 99 out of 100 of the cases do not receive active prison sentences now.

He said he was recommending that prison sentences be discarded only in "routine, first offense cases where there are no aggravating circumstances."

He said even if judges choose to implement his recommendations in most cases, funds appropriated by the last legislature for defense of indigents would not be adequate.

Montague said his office has asked the state for $311,000 in emergency funds to help counties pay the cost of complying with the recent ruling.

Capt. Gail Furrow Wants Quang Tri, But Also Longs For Home

By HOLGER JENSEN
Associated Press Writer

ON THE ROAD TO QUANG TRI, Vietnam (AP) — North Vietnamese gunners waited until the last pontoon was in place before shelling the bridge four miles southeast of Quang Tri City.

A T54 tank and 130mm gun sent round after round screaming out of their camouflaged position near the Catholic church at La Vang. Engineers, soldiers and bulldozers fled from the bridge site as the shells landed in a group of refugees huddled on the north bank of the river.

One shell hit a house and it burst into flames. A small boy ran across the pontoon bridge, his face glazed with shock, a bloody stump where his right hand had been. He led a stampede of refugees, many of them wounded.

Shells kept hitting both banks of the river and landed in the water, but all missed the bridge.

A French photographer, Raymond Thomann, was wounded by shell fragments in the hand and leg. A woman ran past him clutching a baby. Both were soaked in blood.

Bringing up the rear was an armless war veteran with a gaping leg wound that exposed the bone.

About half a mile from the bridge, Maj. Le Van Me and his adviser, Capt. Gail Furrow, directed U.S. bombing strikes on the enemy firing sites.

"They've blown the camouflage away ... Now they've damaged the gun," said Furrow, 32, of Urbana, Ohio. He listened again to his radio. "They've knocked out the tank, too."

A few hours later, Furrow and Maj. Me moved out at the head of a task force heading for Quang Tri. Me carried a bottle of champagne to be drunk when the provincial capital was recaptured.

They passed destroyed South Vietnamese tanks, abandoned artillery pieces and bullet-riddled buses reeking of death. Soon lead troops on the western flank began taking mortar and small arms fire. A sharp firefight erupted, and a North Vietnamese prisoner was taken.

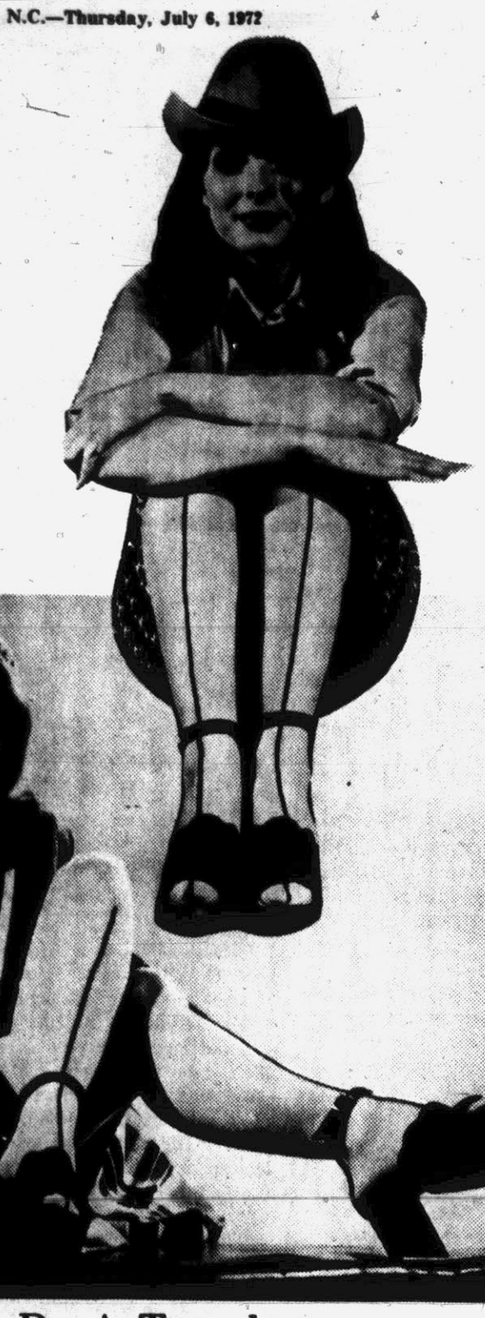
"The POW says there is one company of North Vietnamese dug in bunkers, but he says they have called for two more companies of reinforcements," said Maj. Me.

Throughout the night, 2,000 artillery shells whistled over the task force bivouac, landing only 400 yards ahead of Me's sleeping mat. A North Vietnamese tank and several 105mm howitzers they had captured tried to return the fire but were soon silenced.

Furrow chewed on British bully beef, slapped off the mosquitoes and talked about life in the field.

"We've been spearheading assaults for two months now, Kontum, An Loc, My Chanh, you name it," he said. "On June 23rd and 24th this battalion knocked out 27 tanks and killed 300 enemy. I won two Silver Stars, the Vietnamese Cross of Gallantry and two Purple Hearts in two hours.

"Do I want to go to Quang Tri? Hell, yes. I want to be the first American there. But I also want to go home."



FRONT AND CENTER — A new fashion "turn-about" are these knee-high stockings with seams in contrasting color — in front! The short hosiery from Mary Gray can be worn with pants suits, short skirts, pedal pushers or knickers. According to Grover Furr, Jr., company president, the stockings were the result of a conclusion that "women like change. Since women had been wearing seamless hose for quite a while, they were ripe for seams," he says, "but seams in back? Old hat." So the seams are in front — and even the most dubious woman will have to agree it will be easier to keep seams straight in front.

Minister's First Congregation Was Stalks In A Cotton Patch

By PAT BORDEN
Charlotte Observer Staff Writer

CHARLOTTE (AP) — To this day, Maggie Nickerson couldn't say for sure whether she was waking or sleeping that night, many years ago, when she had the vision that directed her into the ministry.

It is a vivid memory to the black woman who is assistant minister at Little Rock AME Zion Church; she had resisted "the call" several times before, but that one was not to be denied.

"I was lying there in my bed," Mrs. Nickerson remembered, "when I felt a person was there beside me saying, 'You promised. Now your daughter is 6, you and your husband are no longer together. Now will you accept the call?'"

The image went on to say that it wouldn't be a simple matter. "I was told that it would be a hard road, that people wouldn't respond to me easily, but that I must try," she said.

She was 42, accustomed to having to make her own way, even from her early high school days.

She was born 65 years ago in Elizabeth City on her father's plantation, one of 13 children. The middle children died, she recalls, and since the older ones left home, there were only three of them at home during her young years.

It was at this time, during the days of make-believe, with one of her brothers, that she did her first preaching.

"We'd go into the cotton patch," she said, "and tie strings on the cotton stalks. That was our congregation.

"When the wind blew the strings, that was the people shouting."

But as the years led to high school, it became apparent to Mrs. Nickerson that it would not be entirely up to her whether or not she got an education. Play-preaching in the cotton patch was left behind in the face of what she had to do.

"My father was also a school teacher," she said, "but he was more interested in the boys' education than the girls'. He always said he wanted me to get married and for my husband to take care of me."

There was one time, when she was 16, that she came close to fulfilling her father's hopes for her.

She was in love and had a proposal to consider, but she turned it down. "My mother had just died and I had to take care of my baby brother," she said. "I loved that man the rest of my life, but when I turned him down that was the end of anything between us."

It was 10 years after that before she again gave marriage any serious consideration and that wasn't until a friend of hers suggested that it might be a good idea for her to have a husband.

At 36, Mrs. Nickerson had finished two years of college and had gone into business, trying her hand as a special agent for several life insurance companies.

Taking her friend's suggestion, she married. It lasted eight years, leaving her with a daughter and the name of Nickerson.

Came the night of the vision and her life suddenly made an about-face—recalling the sermons preached by a little girl in a cotton patch.

It was a real, live congregation who next heard her as she preached her trial sermon.

"I had written an application to the pastor of my church," she said. "At first, it seemed he had a hang-up about the idea, but eventually it went through."

Until about four years ago, Mrs. Nickerson did her church's bidding in Elizabeth City, starting one church in the heart of town, and later working with one in Manteo.

Her goings and comings her last six years there were highly noticeable, since Rev. Maggie Nickerson made her rounds on a three-wheel bicycle. In fact, the Chamber of Commerce talked her into joining the Christmas parade one year.

Mrs. Nickerson lives in a frame house here that is sparsely furnished, but filled with the books that keep her company and keep her mind in trim.

Merchants Are Making Special Effort To Serve Senior Citizens

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Food Editor

NEW YORK (UPI)—Many elderly persons these days suffer from a shortage of bread —the kind you spend to buy the kind you eat.

Ironically, the money problem has grown more acute at a time when more supermarkets are responding to older shoppers' requests for packaging and quantitites geared to the needs of small families and small appetites.

A recent study by Chain Store Age Magazine showed increasing numbers of merchants are making a special effort to serve senior citizens.

The survey found that many older persons are frequent shoppers. Some visit the same store two to four times daily, not just because they can't carry heavy bags. Those who are lonely enjoy shopping as a social outlet, according to the survey.

Perils of Loneliness

Loneliness also can undermine health by creating poor eating habits, says Dr. W.H. Sebrell, Jr., professor emeritus of nutrition at Columbia University.

In a telephone interview, Dr. Sebrell said there are two kinds of old peoele with food problems: the ones who eat too much and get too fat, and the ones who eat too little and suffer from semi-starvation or various deficiencies.

He said the latter frequently live alone and find it too much trouble to cook for themselves.

"They feel rejected, isolated and depressed. Their teeth often are bad," he said. "They may have ill-fitting dentures or none at all."

Others may have digestive troubles or be so crippled by advanced arthritis that even holding a knife and fork is difficult or impossible.

A limited income or welfare status adds other complications: more expensive protein foods, fresh fruits and vegetables often are beyond their means.

Community and national organizations, including the American Red Cross (ARC), are trying to solve these problems in various ways. The ARC and the Food and Nutrition Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) are working with volunteers in a pilot program to deliver USDA-donated food to senior citizens who can't pick it up in person. The joint program operates in San Bernardino, Calif., Wilmington, Del., Bowling Green, Ky., Fulton, Mo., and McKinney, Tex. The USDA alone works with volunteers in Attleboro, Mass., to provide the same service.

A similar program called Meals on Wheels operates in many other communities to deliver hot and cold meals to elderly shut-ins, often under sponsorship of local organizations.

Help Is Available

Help also is available from two food guide booklets, one published by the USDA and the other, by the American Association of Retired Persons (AARP) and the National Retired Teachers Association (NRTA), which have a combined membership of 3.5 million persons 55 years of age or over.

Their advice on low-cost food shopping includes:

—Watch newspaper ads for best buys. If you have the energy, shop in several stores to get the best prices. Remember that supermarket competition generally leads to lower prices than you get in smaller markets which take phone orders and make deliveries.

—Be wary of money-back offers on food packages. You canend up spending too much on postage and total purchases.

—Cook enough meat at one time for two or three meals. This saves both fuel and your energy. You also can save fuel by baking potatoes and dessert along with a roast or other baked main dish.

—Buy only as much food as you can use easily. A large package of a low-priced product isn't cheap if it spoils or grows stale before you can eat it all.

—Use leftover meat, fish, poultry, seafood and even cooked vegetables in salads, omelets or cream sauces made from canned soups. But don't add so much new food to these dishes that you have leftover leftovers.

(Food Guide for Older Folks, USDA Home and Garden Bulletin No. 17, is available for 10 cents a copy from the Superintendents of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. Your retirement Food Guide is free from AARP-NRTA, 1225 Connecticut Ave. NW, Washington, D.C. 20036. Membership dues in each organization are $2 a year. Dues include a bimonthly newsletter and magazine.)

COOKING IS FUN!

Frosty Grape Souffle Beverage

FROSTY GRAPE SOUFFLE

The sides of the souffle may be studded with chopped pistachio nuts.

1 envelope unflavored gelatin
½ cup Concord grape juice
4 eggs, separated
¼ cup lemon juice
1 cup sugar
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
1 cup heavy cream, whipped

Sprinkle gelatin over grape juice to soften. Combine egg yolks, lemon juice, ½ cup of the sugar and the salt in the top of a double boiler; cook over simmering water, stirring constantly, until thickened to custard consistency. Remove from heat and stir in softened gelatin until dissolved; add lemon rind; cool. Beat egg whites until foamy; gradually beat in remaining ½ cup sugar; continue beating until meringue holds stiff peaks. Beat about ¼ of the meringue mixture into gelatin mixture; fold in remaining meringue; fold in whipped cream. Pour into 1½-quart souffle dish to which a foil collar has been attached. Refrigerate 6 hours or overnight. To serve, remove foil collar and garnish with extra whipped cream. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Problem Is Hard To Get Off Chest

By Abigail Van Buren
[© 1972 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.]

DEAR ABBY: That woman who signed herself "CHEATED" because she had small bosoms doesn't know when she's well off.

I was a size 42 "D" at the age of 13, and it was agony. The boys stared at me and some of them even made indecent remarks.

I had a hard time getting clothes to fit me. I could never wear sweaters or knits. And bathing suits were out of the question! [I always pretended I hated the water.]

To make matters worse, I was barely five feet tall so you can imagine how conspicuous I was. My bra straps used to cut into my shoulders until I could hardly stand it, and I even became stoop-shouldered from all the weight I was carrying up there. I cried myself to sleep many a night.

At age 33 I solved my problem with surgery, and now I feel like a woman instead of a freak. My only regret is that I didn't do it sooner. CHEATED WITH TOO MUCH

DEAR ABBY: Some lady wrote that her problem was the feeling of insecurity and inferiority because she was flat-chested and her husband couldn't keep his eyes off women with big breasts. You suggested she see a doctor about having hers enlarged. You should have told her to send her husband to a doctor to have his head shrunk!

Men who go overboard for big bosoms are just little boys who are still looking for Mamma.

WASHINGTON STAR READER

DEAR ABBY: I thought maybe you would like to hear from one man who doesn't measure a woman's worth by the size of her brassiere. And I am sure there are plenty of other men who share my view.

A man with whom I work told me that his wife had just had one of her breasts removed. He said, "I feel that now I have only half a woman."

I told him with that kind of thinking he was only half a man. ONE MAN'S OPINION

DEAR ABBY: I have had silicone implants to make me "feel" more like a woman. [One can LOOK more like a woman with a padded bra, which I wore for years.]

I am glad you advised that woman who was considering such an operation to talk it over with her husband instead of "surprising" him after the surgery. Some husbands are opposed to it.

I don't know if it's a universal policy, but my plastic surgeon positively refused to give me silicone implants without my husband's written consent.

At first he refused to let me do it, but after he spoke with my doctor and learned more about what was involved, he agreed to let me do it.

It's no picnic. And it's expensive. [Mine cost $1,400.] But it was worth it. 36-24-35

Try Peanut Brittle Ice Cream With Chocolate

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

A marvelous way to treat ice cream was suggested almost 50 years ago by George Washington Carver, who gained national fame because of his scientific research at Tuskegee Institute. Dr. Carver in his 1925 bulletin, "How to Grow the Peanut and 105 Ways of Preparing it for Human Consumption," wrote:

"Make a quart of lemon or vanilla ice cream by the usual rule; when this is half frozen, take out the dasher and add ½ pound of peanut brittle or two or three bars of peanut candy previously put through the meat chopper."

In preparing this great dessert we used vanilla rather than lemon ice cream, the bought kind rather than the homemade. And peanut brittle instead of peanut candy bars went in. We also embellished the peanut brittle ice cream with a bittersweet chocolate sauce. If you try this idea we think you'll enjoy it as much as our tasters did.

1½ cups crushed peanut brittle, about 10 ounces
Bittersweet Chocolate Sauce, see below

Let ice cream stand at room temperature until it softens enough to scoop out easily—10 to 25 minutes, depending on hardness of ice cream and temperature of room.

Scoop out ice cream by large spoonfuls and place in a large mixing bowl. After several scoops, sprinkle some of the peanut brittle over the ice cream. Continue scooping and sprinkling until the ice cream is all in the bowl. Stir just enough to barely mix, then return ice cream to container. Refreeze.

Top servings of the ice cream with Bittersweet Chocolate Sauce. If you are planning to serve all the ice cream at one time and want more chocolate sauce, make up two batches of the recipe, but don't double it.

Makes 16 servings of the ice cream.

Note: To crush peanut brittle, place pieces of the brittle in a plastic bag. Arrange bag so that more than one thickness of bag covers brittle. Lightly pound with a mallet or the side of a meat tenderizer to break up brittle to peanut size.

BITTERSWEET CHOCOLATE SAUCE

½ cup water
3 squares (3 ounces) unsweetened chocolate
¾ cup sugar
¼ cup butter
1 teaspoon vanilla

Into a small saucepan pour the water; add chocolate. Place over low heat to melt chocolate, stirring constantly. Gradually add sugar, stirring to dissolve sugar after each addition. Continue to cook, stirring, for 5 minutes. Remove from heat. Add butter and vanilla and stir until butter is melted. Set pan aside to cool completely; do not stir during cooling.

If sauce is to be served within a couple of hours, leave at room temperature. If made farther ahead, pour into a glass jar, cover tightly and refrigerate, remove from refrugerator an hour or two before serving time and place in a pan of hot water (off heat) to soften. Or remove from refrigerator at serving time and place jar of sauce in a small pan of warm water; stir sauce over low heat until it softens.

Makes about 1½ cups.

Tea Honors Miss Bell

Miss Brenda Elois Bell, bride-elect of Jimmie Charles Harper, was honored Saturday night at a tea at the home of her mother.

Guest were greeted by Mrs. Martha Jean Dawson and Mrs. Naiomi Dunn.

Mrs. Adail Barrett directed guests to the refreshment table which was covered with a lace cloth over blue. The table featured a centerpiece of pink snapdragons and light blue carnations sprinkled with greenery and baby's breath.

The gift tables were decorated with pink and blue streamers with a lace umbrella surrounded by spring flowers.

The bride-elect and her mother mother, Mrs. S. G. Bell, were remembered with corsages of white carnations which complemented their ensembles.

Hostesses were Mrs. Dawson, Mrs. Barrett and Mrs. Dunn.

Regional Cooperation Helpful

An editorial from the Kinston Daily Free Press reprinted elsewhere on this page calls attention to talks by Jim Horne and Howard Dawkins of Greenville calling for area cooperation. Horne, Dawkins and Harold Creech appeared at the Kinston Rotary Club.

The Free Press thought well of the idea and certainly we do, too.

There are many ways that Greenville and Kinston can cooperate to the betterment of the two communities. As was cited, development of Stallings Field in Kinston is a perfect example. The field is less than 30 minutes from Greenville via a four lane highway.

Cooperation in the development of East Carolina University is also suggested and Kinston people have long been strong supporters of the university. The development of the medical school could have great effect on Kinston's medical development and it is likely that health facilities there will be drawn into the ECU medical training program.

It all fits into what we have long been preaching—that is, that all Eastern North Carolina communities must cooperate and plan together if our area is to be any match for the populous and growing Piedmont.

The East is a general term, but its population is often estimated at more than a million people. This is quite a community if all our resources can be drawn together and we are willing to fight for the things that we need to develop a quality life.

For many years easterners watched the slow development of their area with lethargy. Now, however, there is a new thinking in our area and a new awareness that we have to plan as one large community if we are to ever make any progress. Fortunately it comes at a time when the entire state is beginning to realize that what once passed for progress is not necessarily that.

We can build a better, more prosperous life here in the east, one that is free of the pollution, overcrowding, crime and grime which has characterized older cities. But it will take the cooperation advocated by Mr. Horne and Rev. Dawkins and cited by the Kinston Free Press.

Recreation Is Good Business

By BRYAN HAISLIP

RALEIGH, — Recreation is good fun, good sense, and a sound investment.

James S. Stevens, Jr. is a salesman for the concept. As director of the office of recreation resources in the state department of natural and economic resources, he peddles to Tar Heel communities the idea that giving citizens a place to play is a proper function of government.

They're buying it. When he came to North Carolina back in 1948, only 11 cities had full-fledged recreation programs. Now there are 62.

"Every municipality over 7,500 population, with one exception, has a full-time, year-round recreation department," he reported.

"No other state can make that statement. The people of North Carolina have put recreation at the back-doorstep, where 70 per cent of recreation occurs. They've done it by pulling themselves up by their own bootstraps."

Ten-Year Growth

Over the past decade, the money spent by cities for recreation has risen from $7,176,054 in 1962 to $18,672,035 for the current fiscal year.

That not only reaches more people, but provides more per person. Over the same period, the per capita expenditure doubled, from $4.06 to $8.61.

The value of recreation to a community has many facets — athletic, cultural and economic. It promotes physical well-being and mental stability. It allows expression of local heritage and tradition. It boosts the community image for industrial and business development.

Paramount is the opportunities it gives citizens to use their time in wholesome ways, said Stevens.

"The test of whether a civilization will live or die is the way it spends its leisure." That bit of wisdom, printed in a report from his office, sums up the philosophy.

Recreation For Everybody

Recreation is for the whole community, Stevens emphasized. "The bored housewife and the up-tight businessman need recreation just as much as youngsters," he asserted.

"A lot of times we miss the boat by assuming that recreation is something for children and teenagers, and neglecting the adult population."

The Stevens zeal for recreation is in the blood. He didn't just get into the field; he was born to it. His father devoted 43 years to the calling, through the YMCA, industrial and municipal recreation.

A third generation is on the way. James S. Stevens, III, a graduate of N.C. State University, now is at the University of Georgia working for a master's degree in recreation and parks administration.

Stevens hails from Westchester, N.Y. He expected to come to North Carolina a few years earlier than he did. An injury knocked him out of a football scholarship to Duke University, and he went to the University of New Hampshire instead.

Four-Phase Program

Advisory and consultant services to communities, as well as to private and commercial recreation enterprises, is one of four areas to the work of the office of recreation resources.

It also administers the state parks system, and conducts long-range planning to meet future recreation needs.

A new division deals with development of recreation potential at reservoirs within the state. An example is Kerr Reservoir, which last year drew half as many visitors on its own as did all 16 state parks.

In the past, recreation facilities have been largely land-based; the trend of the future will be to water associated with land, Stevens predicted. "We say we will see in the next five years as much development take place at water areas as we have seen on land for the last 50," he explained.

For Tar Heels now and in the future, he continued, open spaces must be kept for breathing room and recreation to ease the mind and relax the body.

A comprehensive outdoor recreation plan, now getting final review, will provide the blueprint for action.

Bent On Winning Even If No People Are Left

The Christian Science Monitor says that North Vietnam continues to plunge on in the war despite heavy losses and colling allies.

The nation is reinforcing for further battles even in the face of the failure of its recent bloody offensive.

One has to wonder if the leaders are not running the war in North Vietnam, bent on winning it all even to the point of wiping out its own population.

The peace terms offered to the North call on its leaders to give up virtually nothing except their ambitions to crush South Vietnam.

The Strategy By Holshouser

By JOHN KILGO

RALEIGH — Jim Holshouser, the weary and ambitious champion of the Republican Party's fight for Governor, says without blinking an eye: "Skipper Bowles is very definitely a part of the political establishment in this state."

With that, Holshouser gave a clear indication of how he plans to campaign against Democrat Bowles in this fall's gubernatorial battle.

Many politicians interpret the mood of the country and this state as being one of, "Turn the Rascals Out." Nationally, you need only look at the many successes of George McGovern and George Wallace. They campaigned against the Establishment (whatever the Establishment is) and they did very well.

The mood spills over into North Carolina. How else could you explain George Wallace and Nick Galifianakis winning separate campaigns before the same voters? Wallace and Galifianakis were both on the outs, so to speak, and the voters aren't happy with people in power.

With that in mind, Holshouser plans to be as tenacious as a bulldog in tying Bowles in with the Establishment of Tar Heel politics.

"Skipper did a very good job in the primary of selling the idea that he was not a member of this Establishment," Holshouser told me in an enterview. "He went to great pains to divorce himself of Gov. Scott and others in power.

"But you can trace Bowles' political activities since 1960, his voting record since he's been in the Legislature, and it's easy to see that he is a member of the political Establishment."

Holshouser is working on politics now but he plans to get his campaign in full swing by August or early September. He believes he has a good chance to win and he's an energetic campaigner. But it takes money to run for Governor these days.

"We're not discouraged by any means," Holshouser says, "but when it comes to raising money, we have a long ways down the road to travel yet. The Bowles campaign will spend a great deal of money in the fall race. There's no way we can match him dollar-for-dollar and we won't even try. But it's improtant that we're at least in the ballpark with him."

Bowles listed expenditures in excess of $800,000 in defeating Pat Taylor for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. Holshouser believes that big spenders in primaries are hurt by the money issue in general elections and he plans to talk a great deal about Bowles and money.

"Skipper was smart in the way he spent his money in the Democratic primary," Holshouser said. "A great deal of what he spent wasn't visible to the average person. If you're on radio and TV and in the newspapers all the time, or if you have your picture on every corner billboard, people can tell that costs a lot of money.

"But Bowles did some other things that were quite costly that weren't really visible. For instance, he sent out letters to registered Democratic voters on several occasions and people might not recognize that that is a very expensive campaign tool."

Holshouser told me that the reappointment of Frank Rouse as chairman of the Republican Party seems to

WHAT A STAMPEDE!

By J.J. KILPATRICK

Great Line Of Cleavage

With its explosion of opinions last week in the capital punishment cases, the Supreme Court laid bare the great line cleavage that divides the old Warren court from the New Nixon court. It is the line that defines the role of judges.

This is the most important aspect of the decision that will be known to historians as Furman v. Georgia. For all practical purposes, the court voted 5-4 to prohibit the imposition of death sentences under existing state and federal laws. The immediate and dramatic consequence is that death sentences must be commuted for some 600 prisoners across the nation. Otherwise, the impact will be small. There is no convincing evidence that the mere existence of the death penalty has served as a deterrent to heinous crimes. So far as law and order is concerned, the sun will come up in the morning as blood-red as it set last night.

The significance of this landmark case lies in its exposition of the fundamental division between those who believe in judicial activism, and those who believe in judicial restraint. The activists on the court, led in this case by Justice Thurgood Marshall, believe it proper to rest decisions upon their own subjective readings of what is "morally unacceptable" or "shocking to the conscience."

The defenders of restraint—Burger, Blackum, Powell and Rehnquist—repudiate that viewpoint altogether.

Marshall's long concurring opinion is a classic statement of the activist position. It is immaterial, in this view, that the framers of the Eighth Amendment never intended that "cruel and unusual punishment" should exclude the death penalty. It is immaterial that an unbroken line of judicial precedents—one of them only a year old—has supported the constitutionality of capital punishment. It is immaterial that four times within the past 11 years, Congress explicitly has sanctioned the death penalty. It is immaterial that 40 states have thought such sentences within their constitutional powers.

What, then, is materisl? It is Marshall's personal assessment that counts. He states it with breathtaking certainty. Capital punishment, he says, is unconstitutional "because it is morally unacceptable to the people of the United States at this time in their history."

Farther along, Marshall says: "Assuming knowledge of all the facts presently available regarding capital punishment, the average citizen would, in my opinion, find it shocking to his conscience and sense of justice. For this reason alone, capital punishment cannot stand."

Still again, he says: "I believe that the great mass of citizens would conclude on the basis of the material already considered that the death penalty is immoral and therefore unconstitutional."

To the four dissenters, these are wholly extraneous considerations. Both Burger and Blackum went to pains to say that if their own personal opinions were decisive, they would vote to abolish capital punishment. But constitutional questions ought not to be resolved upon a judge's opinion of what "the average citizen" or "the great mass of citizens" might regard as shocking or immoral. Such a view converts

Other Editors Say Merit In Suggestion

(Kinston Daily Free Press)

Executive Director Jim Horne of the Pitt County Development Commission, and Rev. Howard Dawkins of Greenville, formerly of Kinston, who is director of the State Alcholic Rehabilitation Center in Greenville made a significant suggestions for area cooperation betweeen Pitt and Lenoir counties last week. They addressed the Kinston Rotary Club here Thursday.

The proposal they supported is that the people of Lenoir and Pitt counties join in promoting Stallings Field in Kinston as a regional airport and in the promotion of East Carolina University as a regional institution to serve the needs of this area.

The suggestion has been made before but its emphasis last week was of particular significance to the people of both counties. In the first place Pitt has a great potential for regional service through its University. This must not be overlooked as the 16 state university units go under a new operating Board of Governors designed to elevate and encourage greater service to all the people.

Furthermore the Kinston-Lenoir County Airport at Stallings Field has been and is serving a regional need that includes commercial air service to the Pitt County area. A fourlane road from Kinston to Greenville makes the less than 30 miles of travel a matter of a few minutes for Pitt countians who wish to use the terminal at Stallings Field for embarkation to any point on the aerial map. The recent developments that will enhance the airport include progress toward an instrument landing system and the eventual addition of a tower to enhance safety of the air traffic at the terminal.

It should be noted that in access to the Kinston Airport persons in the Greenville area can reach the jet facility here far quicker than travelers in most metropolitan centers such as New York, Chicago and Boston can reach their airports from across town.

This suggestion to a civic group should be expanded to other groups and to the rank and file of citizens in both counties. It is an opportunity for lasting service to the people of the region that would have benefits far beyond the boundaries of the two counties.

40 Years Ago Today

By GWYN COGHILL

July 6,1932

The American round-the-world flying team, Bennett Griffin and James Mattern, set their red, white and blue monoplane down in Berlin at 5:45 p.m. (11:40 a.m. EST) today and thereby set two new marks for other aviators to shoot at. They brought their "Century of Progress" across the Atlantic in the amazingly fast time of 18 hours and 41 minutes and became the first Americans to fly trans-Atlantic to reach the capital non-stop.

Yesterday was the second hottest day of the year for Greenville and Pitt County, according to the records of B.T Clark, local government weather observer. The mercury hung around 96 degrees during the mid afternoon and lack of breeze intensified the humidity. Cooling breezes come to the relief of the sweltering city last night and continued today with prospects of rain.

Strength For Today

FORMING HABIT PATTERNS

There was a news item recently about a community in England which in its collective wisdom believed that it had discovered a way to curtail the destructive propensities of children. They moved a truck and an old automobile into a playground and told the children to go ahead and knock the two vehicles to pieces. The theory was that, having done this, the children would find their destructive impulses satisfied. But of course they didn't. When they were through with the trucks they started on the playground equipment and ended by tearing down the playground fence.

How could any sensible person have expected that the issue would have been otherwise? The children were not getting anything out of their systems as they broke up the two ancient vehicles. They were simply establishing habits of violience.

The philosophy of the English town fathers often reappears in modern counseling concerning the rearing of youth. We are told that if boys sow enough wild oats when they are young they will be pretty sure to be decent when they grow up. Let them drink all they want to drink in their youth, say these counsellors, and liquor will lose its fascination. All of which of course is dangerous and wicked nonsense. Such courses of action establish habit patterns, and these patterns will in all probability persist through life.

Brokerage Firms Stepping Out

By LINDA RUBEY
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — With institutional customers such as pension funds and life insurance companies taking an increasingly large role in the stock market, brokerage firms are edging toward financial "department store" offerings for their public customers.

The theory is that by offering public customers, both large and small, financial packages as well as simple stock and bond transactions, brokers can both increase their profits and help avoid excessive dependence on dealings with giant institutional customers.

The New York Stock Exchange, which has predicted that by 1980 institutions alone will buy and sell more stock than was traded on the exchange last year, has warned that concentration on such business could increase the financial vulnerability of a brokerage house.

The "department store" concept would have brokers selling not only stocks and bonds, but total investment planning. The offerings could include personal money management for customers, real estate and tax shelter investments, tax exempt municipal bond investment funds and life insurance.

"There's a great public need for total investment planning and it makes sense to offer it through brokerage firms which already have the expertise in equity," says Stuart S. Greenberg, vice president in charge of investor services at Du Pont Glore Forgan.

"And from an economic standpoint it makes sense for us, because instead of one product we're selling five," he adds. "The year 1969 and 1970 taught us a bitter lesson that when volume dries up commissions go. It's foolish to be dependent on commissions and it's foolish not to have some diversification."

Greenberg has organized DGF Financial Services Inc. which, he says, will offer investors that total approach through a group of trained financial planning representatives.

The New York Stock Exchange recently revised its rules to permit brokerage firms to sell insurance. Many brokerage firms are already offering mutual funds and municipal bond funds. Some firms are dealer-managers for oil drilling programs and real estate programs in which they sell investors limited partnerships in the programs. In addition there are similar cattle programs and agricultural programs. Many of these programs are tax shelter investments, offering customers the incentive of tax writeoffs because of the risky investments involved.

"The idea is to insure that clients have adequate savings, proper insurance and good solid equity base, if he has the extra cash, which could be supplied through in-house money management teams handling his portfolio cor through mutual funds," says Greenberg. "If there's money left over after that then we could make tax sheltered investments available to him."

Experience Isn't Required For Highway Commission

By TOM WELLS
Associated Press Writer

If North Carolina's next governor follows history, he will appoint a group of men whose background includes little in highway planning to help decide how the state should spend millions of dollars on roads.

Both candidates this year, Democrat Hargrove Bowles and Republican Jim Holshouser, are promising to make changes in the commission.

The Associated Press asked both candidates specific questions about their plans for the Highway Commission. Holshouser agreed to an hour-long interview.

Bowles declined to answer the questions.

Each of the candidates was asked how he planned to administer the commission to prevent problems which have drawn strong criticism in past years.

Drawing criticism have been:

—Highway commissioners who abuse their positions by selling construction materials to highway contractors.

—Expensive projects undertaken by one administration and abandoned by the next.

—"Pork barrel politics" by the commissioners, in which they use funds in their own districts, sometimes including improvements of private property.

—And the use of appointments as a system of rewards for those who helped a governor get elected.

These problems have plagued North Carolina ever since Gov. Locke Craig named five to the first Highway Commission in 1913.

Few voters could expect a governor to name someone to the Highway Commission who was his enemy, but few men are ever named to the commission who know anything technical about highway planning.

Gov. Bob Scott expanded the commission from 14 to 23 members. His appointments included an auctioneer, a tobacco warehouseman, a grocer, a retired furniture manufacturer, a service station owner and several well-to-do farmers.

These men have been expected to run a department which is second only to education in spending North Carolina tax dollars.

Holshouser and Bowles both have said they favor reducing the commission to 14 members, the same number on the commission under Gov. Dan Moore.

"You can't pass a law saying there won't be any politics in the Highway Commission," Holshouser said in the interview. Under further questioning he reduced the problem to the political reality that the voters are simply asked to have faith that a candidate will appoint honest, knowledgeable men to the commission.

"It's like the traditional fight between the good guys and the bad guys—you know, the white hats and the black hats," he said. "I'm not saying the Democrats all wear black hats and the Republicans all wear white hats, mind you, but you just try to do the best you can.

An example of the power of a highway commissioner in his own area was demonstrated in the Dan Moore administration when 3rd Division Commissioner Ashley Murphy got the commission to authorize construction of two roads through private property near Wilmington.

The Attorney General's office said that even a driveway on the property, the Cornelia Nixon Davis Nursing Home, was paved with tax money. The nursing home was owned by a close friend of Gov. Moore, retired railroad executive Champion McDowell Davis.

The lack of control over the commissioners was punctuated when the Attorney General's office said there was nothing illegal about building roads on private property. Highway Commission Chairman Joe Hunt wrote a $242 check to repay the state for the cost of the driveway.

A much larger problem in terms of money is that of one administration committing millions of dollars to a project only to have the next administration halt it.

Holshouser said in the interview that the answer is to appoint "career man" to positions in the Highway Department. But he admitted these men would have no assurance of not being fired by a new administration.

Holshouser also said continuity of programs would be assured by giving "top staff positions (in the Highway Department) the chance to develop an overall highway plan. We should let the professionals who know what they're doing come up with long-range plans."

The Boone attorney said, however, that it would still be the commission, serving at the pleasure of the governor, which would "make the decisions."

One assurance of some continuity in long-range planning would be to allow governors to succeed themselves, even if for just a second term Neither candidate has proposed gubernatorial succession in office:

A partial waste of tax money on a long-range project began when Gov. Terry Sanford's commission began widening U.S. 64 to four lanes from Raleigh to Tarboro.

Gov. Moore's administration halted the project. Only a little work has been done on it during the Scott administration as the four-laning has yet to get around Zebulon.

Only Holshouser has addressed himself during the campaign to the possibility of highway commissioners abusing their positions by making business deals with contractors.

Two commissioners, E. J. Whitmire and W. Arthur Tripp, recently resigned following accusations in the Raleigh News & Observer and an investigation by the Attorney General's office that companies owned by them had done business with contractors while they were commissioners.

The chairman of Scott's Highway Commission, Loch Fiarcloth, divested himself of interest in a construction firm shortly after being appoint He put his share of the business in a trust with profits going to nonprofit or charitable institutions while he is in office.

There is no law requiring Highway Department officials to break such connections while in office.

Holshouser has said he would ask that each highway commissioner make a full financial disclosure at the end of each fiscal year.

He has promised that the "letter and the spirit of the law regarding commissioners doing business with the highway department would be enforced to the fullest extent possible."

Holshouser did not go so far as to say he would require such financial statements, however.

Terrorist Trial Begins Monday

TEL AVIV (AP) — The trial of Kozo Okamoto, the Japanese terrorist accused of helping stage the Tel Aviv airport massacre, will begin Monday, the Israeli Military Command said today.

The trial will be held at a military base outside Tel Aviv near the airport where Okamoto and two fellow Japanese killed 26 persons and wounded more than 70 others May 30. The other two Japanese died during the attack.

Okamoto is charged on four counts, three of which could bring the death penalty.

The trial is expected to last less than a week.

Arrest Man For Drug Violation

Charles Andrew Norfleet, 21, of 502 West 12th St. was arrested by Greenville Police on charges of possession of marijuana early Wednesday.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Norfleet was charged with the drug law violation after police searched his home about 12:15 a.m. and found six 2½-gram packages of marijuana.

Bond was set at $2,500 pending hearing of the case in District Courtt.

Cannon noted too, that Norfleet was arrested on charges of receiving stolen property in connection with another case a short while prior to the drug-law violation arrest.

Bond in the receiving case was placed at $300.

"I've met with Frank a couple of times since he went back in as chairman," Holshouser said, "and he seems to be doing quite well. The Republicans in the East don't seem to be mad at me anymore and I think Frank's return to the chairmanship helped heal some ill feelings left over from the primary."

Holshouser continues to feel that President Nixon is strong in North Carolina and maybe he'll offer some GOP candidates a coattail to ride on in November.

As for himself, Holshouser admits to being "tired inside."

He just came back from a week's vacation at a lake cabin, seven days when he didn't see anyone. It reacharged his battery but he still hasn't recovered completely from the rigors of the hard-fought campaign.

the Supreme Court into a legislative body; it permits a majority of five to impose their own naked will upon our fundamental law.

It seems to me that liberals, no less than conservatives, should protest the activist concept. For the past 20 years, to be sure, activism has worked to the liberals' advantage. They have found it agreeable. But if liberals accept, in principle, the power of judges to make sweeping changes in law on their own notions of moral acceptability, liberals will be hard put to abject when the composition of the court changes, and the wind shifts.

Many persons who abhore the death penalty, and agree that capital punishment has been imposed irrationally and ineffectually in the past, will rejoice in what the five activists have done. But those who love the law, and believe in the separation of powers, will emphatically condemn the way in which they did it.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, JULY 7, 1972

CARROLL RIGHTER'S horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You have considerable desire now for expanded activities. This is excellent, so think out early in the day what your creative goals actually are. Then go after them with courage, confidence and conviction. Show your appreciation of talent of others.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Once you think out how to impress others with your creative talents, you can make this a most productive and happy day, p.m. Enjoy recreation with people you admire. Show that you are a generous, outgoing person.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Even if you have to be out on business, be sure you do whatever makes life at home more worthwhile and happy. Entertaining at home in p.m. is fine. Show you are a generous, cultured person. Avoid strife of any sort.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Make sure you use your mind and not your emotions in dealing with a situation that seems rather difficult. Become a more productive person. You can communicate well, day and night.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Plan how to have plenty of money so you can meet all of your needs and more in the near future Good for merchandising. Think along more constructive lines. Plan.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Gain the goodwill of close ties and do whatever will please them. Joining in recreations with congenials is fine. Forget all those worries that don't mean anything. Think out how to be more prosperous in the future.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You can quietly make that plan to gain your fondest desires and get the right results. Once your preparations are made, you can have a happy time with mate in p.m. Get out to the social affairs you both like.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) A devoted friend will now give you the backing you want if you state what your aims are, what your troubles are. Get into the group affairs that will bring right results. Listen to music that is soothing to the nerves.

SCORPIO (Oct 23 to Nov. 21) See what it is that an influential person expects and try to please him Show gratitude for backing given you. Make the right arrangements to take care of some money problem.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov 22 to Dec. 21) You have a chance to extend your vision and philosophy tremendously, so listen to what others say. Plan to travel in style soon. Much good can come of this, so do not delay making the arrangements

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Discuss with mate just how to have more understanding and happiness in the future. Plan ways to make collections and pay bills more readily A good evening for social matters and dressing in style that will impress others.

AQUARIUS (Jan 21 to Feb 19) Find out what it is that a partner expects of you and come to a better undrstanding in the days ahead. You have outside interests that you understand better how to handle now. Take care of them.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You have much work to do and promises to keep, so make sure you do just that Make the future brighter for yourself. Showing real devotion to the one you love can make your romantic life great

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY he or she will be one of those delightful young people who can use both mind and hands most wisely and efficiently and can become a definite success in life, provided you slant the education along lines of inventiveness. Thre is an ability to push through effectively to the end whatever has once been started The field of selling will be excellent here, also, since your youngster actually knows pretty much what is in the minds of others. Religion early

More Foster Homes Badly Needed In Pitt County

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

James Ray (not his real name) is a teenager, but he has the enthusiasms, the intellect, and the body of a child.

He was in Caswell Center for Retarded Children earlier in his life and was recently removed from his parent's home along with his brothers and sisters by a court order. He desperately wants and needs to stay in or very near Greenville, though, because the Eastern North Carolina Sheltered Workshop is his life. Perhaps it's because he knows he's doing something useful for the first time in his life. Perhaps it's that he finds there acceptance of him just as he is.

Anyway, if foster parents who can accept him in the same manner are not found, he cannot continue to attend the workshop.

"James Ray happens to be the only black child we need to place right now," Mrs. Harriet Van Dyke of the Protective Services division of the Pitt County Department of Social Services said, "but there may be more any day. All it takes is one breakup of a marriage or other crisis in a family to bring us several children at once.

"However, as much as we need more black foster homes right now, we are more desperate for white ones. There are seven white children right now that we need to place."

She explained that there are now 22 black foster homes, but only six white ones in the county and that more are needed right away. "It's bad enough that children are not able to stay in their own homes, but it breaks our hearts when we do not have some readily available home in which to place them," she said.

Neither Burden Nor Guest

What does being foster parents involve? "It means being a couple who can accept a child for what he is and treat him as one of their own," Mrs. Van Dyke answered. "This means loving him in spite of their shortcomings — and usually children in need of foster care have many personality problems because their lives so far have been quite unstable. It also means taking them on family trips and otherwise making them feel they are neither a burden nor a guest.

"It's a rare person who can so completely accept a child who may not be theirs for long, or who may stay on for years, only to be taken away later on. But that's the kind we need and we know there are some around, because we already have some as foster parents," Mrs. Van Dyke said. "We desperately need to find more like them."

What are the rules of the program? "We interview anyone who is willing to have foster children in their home and try to decide whether they are the stable, loving individuals we need," she said. "If so, we have the Pitt County fire marshal check the home for safety, the Community Health Department sanitarian do the same for health hazards, and require all members of the family to have a physical examination by their family doctor. When these requirements are met, we can begin placement right away.

"Our aim is to find for each child in need of foster care the kind of home he needs to develop as a person. We try to keep brothers and sisters together. And we try inasmuch as we can to give the foster parents children within the age group they have asked for. Sometimes it's difficult to fill all these bills, especially when our homes are so scarce, but we try."

What of the practical side of foster care? "Foster parents are given $70 per month per child to provide his room and board and incidental needs," Mrs. Van Dyke said. "The state and county pay for any medical needs and clothing and Santa Cluas is helped out during the Christmas season by people of good will in the county. Social Services also provides a nonimal montly allowance for the children — $1.50 for primary-aged children; $2.50 for grammar school-aged ones, and $5 for high school-aged ones."

Anyone who believes they may be interested in providing foster care for a child or children should contact Mrs. Van Dyke at the Pitt County Social Services Department, 758-2167, she said.

Conference Set July 11

LAKE JUNALUSKA — Thirty-eight lay and clerical delegates from the N.C. Conference will be among the voting 550 delegates to the Southeastern Jurisdictional Conference here July 11-16.

They will represent the 212,000 United Methodist in 56 eastern and Piedmont counties.

The delegation, headed by Mrs. Harold Mann of Sanford, includes 19 ministers and 19 lay persons. Dr. Nicholas W. Grant of Raleigh is vice chairman of the group.

Dr. Leo W. Jenkins of Greenville will be one of the lay delegates. Mrs. Troy J. Barrett of Greenville is an alternate for the lay group.

The Methodists will elect bishops at the quadrennial session. The assignment of the bishops to the nine southeastern states will be made at the conclusion of the conference.

The program for the Methodists in the southeast will be unveiled at Lake Junaluska and elections to various national and regional boards will also take place.

Unwanted Cars Towed For Free

VIENNA (AP) — The city of Vienna has a special mailbox for motorists desiring to surrender ownership of their dying automobiles.

The mailbox in the traffic department is used to speed receipt of documents facilitating the removal of abandoned cars from the streets of the Austrian capital. Under a program started in 1970, old cars are towed away free if the driver signs a form relinquishing ownership to the city.

So far, more than 1,200 Viennese have signed their cars up for the free trip to an auto graveyard.

Black Children Being Adopted Into White Families

By FREDERICK M. WINSHIP

NEW YORK (UPI)—About 35 per cent of the black children being adopted annually in the United States are going into white homes—a statistic that would have been inconceivable only 10 years ago.

The adoption of blacks by white couples is only one aspect of an over-all increase in adoptions of American Indians, Mexican-Americans, Orientals, retarded and physically handicapped children by whites. But it is the most dramatic aspect, providing irrefutable evidence of a profound change in stereotyped American views on race.

"A lot of wonderful young American white couples love children and don't care what color they are," commented Ann Hargreaves of Manhattan's Windham Children's Service, which places children for adoption.

"It's an increasing phenomenon and reflects the current shortage of adoptable white infants," says Dr. Trudy Festinger, an associate professor at New York University's School of Social Work and an author in the field. "And it reflects the liberalization of the agencies' practices to meet the need of black children for adoptive homes."

Desire Over All

"If a couple has the capability and desire to adopt a child of another race, then it's perfectly sound in every way," stated Dr. James L. Curtis, a black psychiatrist at Cornell University Medical College and consultant for many child welfare agencies.

Statistics are hard to come by, but a just-completed national survey of public and private agencies by Opportunity, a division of the Boys and Girls Aid Society of Oregon, showed that a total of 7,420 black children were placed in adoptive homes in 1971, of which 2,574 were adopted by white couples. This compared to 2,274 such adoptions in 1970, 1,447 in 1969 and 733 in 1968.

Blacks were adopted by whites in at least 45 states last year, according to Opportunity, which received no breakdown on transracial adoptions from three states—Idaho, New Mexico and South Carolina. Only Alabama and Louisiana reported no blacks placed in white homes, although there were no legal restrictions against it in Alabama. Louisiana had a law against such adoptions but it was ruled unconstitutional a few months ago by a U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

"Great emphasis was placed on the urgency of recruiting black adoptive parents in 1971, but the gain in placing children in black homes was only 5 per cent over 1970," said Charles B. Olds, an Opportunity official in Portland, Ore. "The gain in interracial placement was 9 per cent."

Two Criticisms Voiced

Acceleration of the trend has drawn two main criticisms. Some officials in the adoptive field claim that social workers are not being trained to help white families meet the problem of rearing a black child in a racist society. Some segments of the black community oppose transracial adoption entirely as being damaging to the "identity" of black children.

"A family who adopts a black child is no longer a white family," said Mrs. Laura Gaskin of the Hennepin County, Minn., Welfare Department, who made her first transracial placement in 1947. "We are going to have to organize training programs for both parents and social workers. The trained workers must be black, for only they can help a family realize what it means to be black."

However, the National Association of Black Social Workers (NABSW) took a "vehement" stand against transracial adoption at its convention in Nashville, Tenn., early this year. NABSW President Cenie J. Williams announced plans for a drive to recruit black adoptive parents and asked the 1,000 members of the organization's New York chapter to adopt black children.

At his New York office recently, Williams spoke of ambitious plans for a national educational program for the black community with a paid staff of 50 persons. He said he is seeking funds from foundations and other sources and hoped to be in operation next year.

"There are enough black parents," he said. "We've just got to encourage them to adopt black children. I'm sure we can recruit 10,000 middle class black families and get all black children out of institutions."

NYU's Dr. Festinger said a lot of black couples had been "turned off" by the laborious procedures of adoption agencies—procedures which were devised years ago to prevent "unsuitable" adoptions. But now, she said, the agencies are more relaxed and there has been a sizeable increase in black applicants for children so far this year.

"Let's face it," said Mrs. Jane Edwards, Negro head of New York's prestigious Spence-Chapin Adoption Service. "Transracial adoption was frowned on by social workers 20 years ago—even 10 years ago—because it 'wasn't right' for the child. We thought white people who wanted to do it were 'nuts'. Then it began happening in Canada with obvious success and social workers became more educated about motivations, more enlightened."

Groups Study Problem

The Child Welfare League of America (CWLA) undertook in January the first major study of the effects of adoption of black or part black children by whites. The federal Office of Child Development is funding the three-year survey.

The CWLA will interview a total of 100 families in Los Angeles, Seattle, Boston, Chicago, Detroit-Ann Arbor, Minneapolis-St. Paul, and Montreal twice during the course of the study. All the children involved are at least six and some are adolescents.

"This study is going to help us learn what is happening, what the whole climate is," said Dr. Lucille Grow, project director of CWLA. "I was in touch with adoption agencies in 60 communities before undertaking this study, and it was my impression that there is less transracial adoption going on in 1972 and more black families adopting blacks."

Her view was supported by Walter A. Heath of the Los Angeles County Welfare Department which has arranged 221 black-white transracial adoptions since 1955. He said the number is declining because, "We now have more black families available proportionally." The Lutheran Social Service of Minneapolis, a leader in the field, arranged 106 such adoptions last year compared to 121 in 1970.

"All placements were down last year," a spokesman for the Lutheran agency said. "There are fewer adoptive children and more couples wishing to adopt."

This is the really big story in adoptions, according to Miss Hargreaves of the Windham agency. She said the widespread use of contraceptive pills, the availability of legalized abortions in New York State, and increased acceptance of illegitimate children have reduced the adoption field "to a nearly all-black business."

Less Maternal Stigma

"More and more unwed white mothers are keeping their children now that there is less stigma," she said.

Miss Hargreaves considers black opposition to transracial adoptions "an attempt to stimulate agencies who are taking the easy way (letting whites have black children) instead of recruiting and welcoming Negro applicants." She noted there are many volunteer parent groups in the field recruiting both blacks and whites.

One of the pioneer groups is the Open Door Society, founded in 1957 by parents who had obtained black children through the Children's Service Center (CSC) in Montreal. Open Door has spread across Canada and the United States. Elizabeth Bissett of the CSC said all adoption agencies are "rethinking our situation because there are so few white adoptables."

"So we need a different kind of adoptive couple, with different skills and different preparation than the white families with whom we used to place white infants," she said. "Many couples already have biological children, so they are not seeking the experience of parenthood for parenthood's sake. Rather, they want to do something for children who are special."

"Children of Special Value" is the title of a published study of four transracial adoptions by David Anderson, a New York journalist. When he and his wife found almost no white infants available, they adopted three non-white children whose blood lines include American Indian, black, Puerto Rican and Mexican.

"We had served together in the Peace Corps in Latin America, so the whole question of racial difference was lessened for us," Anderson explained. "But you've got to make a great commitment and make the kids know you're really glad they're racially different, that it enriches the family."

Live Where Accepted

Anderson, who lives in a racially integrated Brooklyn neighborhood, thinks it important for transracial families to live where color differences are accepted. This also was stressed by Eve Smith of the New York Council on Adoptable Children. She and her management consultant husband added a black infant to their family of three biological children and live on Manhattan's racially mixed West Side.

"I know lots of couples who have adopted transracially, ranging from rednecks to intellectuals, and I don't know a case that hasn't worked out," Mrs. Smith said. "Most have good instincts in relation to their kids and will move to integrated neighborhoods for their sake. Once you adopt a black child, your head has to become black.

Dr. Julia Makarushka, assistant professor of sociology at Barnard College and mother of a 5-year-old adopted black daughter, voiced unshakable optimism concerning her decision:

"As a white adoptive parent of a black child, I am positive that white families can rear strong, healthy, confident, beautiful black children."

2 Delegates From County

Two outstanding 4-H'ers from Pitt County will join some 210 other boys and girls at the State 4-H Electric Congress at the Holiday Inn — North, Charlotte, July 10-12.

The delegates are Julie Brown of Bethel and Raymond Allen from Grifton.

Phyllis L. Wooten, assistant home economics extension agent, said the delegates were selected on the basis of achievements in the 4-H electric project.

During the conference the delegates will listen to project reports, view electric demonstrations and exhibits and tour Lake Norman and the Cowans Ford Hydro-electric Generating Plant.

The highlight of the congress is the selection of a state winner and eight territorial winners and eight territorial runners-up in the 4-H electric project.

The 4-H Electric Congress is sponsored by Carolina Power and Light Co., Duke Power Co., Nantahala Power and Light Co., Virginia Electric and Power Co., and the Westinghouse Educational Foundation, in cooperation with the N.C. Agricultural Extension Service.

BIG LAKE, BIG FISH

SANDPOINT, Idaho (UPI) — Lake Pend Oreill, which has a shoreline 500 miles long, is the home of the Kamloop Rainbow, the world's largest trout.

Warn Buyers Of Dangerous Cans

LANSING, Mich. (UPI)—The Consumer Protection Bureau of Michigan warns shoppers to beware of bargain-priced goods in cans which are dented, rusted or swollen because of pinhole leaks which may have destroyed the airtight seal.

A swollen can should never be purchased and should always be discarded because a bulged or swollen can means the seal is improper and the contents of the can are building up pressure from spoilage.

Use Ladybugs In Pest Control

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI)—More than a quarter-million ladybugs, predator insects, have been released in California in an effort to control common pests which infest residential gardens and shrubs.

The aim of the program, the California Farm Bureau reports, is to get the ladybugs to feast on mealybugs. Green lacewings, also known as "aphid lions," are being used to reinforce the ladybugs.

But the battle isn't one-sided. Mealybugs produced a form of honey which ants love. The ants will defend the mealybugs from all attackers to protect their food source.

IF YOU'RE PAYING OFF ONE OF THESE CARS YOU CAN'T AFFORD NOT TO READ THIS.

According to their new car manuals, every model listed above was designed to operate on a 91 octane gasoline.

Furthermore, most of the manuals recommend a low lead or no lead gasoline.

Today, several companies sell a gasoline that meets those requirements.

But of all the major companies, only Gulf has one that costs less than their regular. It's called Gulftane low lead.

At 91 octane, it's just right for most 1972 models as well as many 1971 and older models that we didn't have space enough to list.* And it's got the kind of additive package you'd expect from a major brand such as Gulf.

So check your manual. And try a tankful of Gulftane.

The money you save can go towards next month's car payment.

Gulf.

GULFTANE LOW LEAD.
IT COSTS LESS THAN OUR REGULAR.

GULF OIL COMPANY—U.S.

*Because atmospheric factors and an engine's condition affect its performance, there is no way to guarantee that any single car will give knock-free performance on a particular gasoline. To find out if your car will run on Gulftane, try a tankful and see.

Convention Will See No Solid Bloc Of Dixie Votes

By WILLIAM L. CHAZE
associated Press Writer

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Southern delegations to the Democratic National Convention, most of which have weathered major seating challenges, will go to Miami Beach unprepared to give any candidate a solid bloc of Dixie votes.

Alabama Gov. George Wallace has a delegate plurality in his home state, neighboring Tennessee, and the big Florida and North Carolina delegations. Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota maintains an edge in the Georgia, Louisiana, Virginia and Mississippi delegations.

South Carolina remains uncommitted in the Associated Press delegate poll.

Wallace can count on a minimum of 189 votes in the region's delegations while McGovern has fewer than half that many—84.

On the whole, the Southern delegations will be like those from the rest of the nation—blacker, younger, with more women and fewer of the gubernatorial cronies and other party stalwarts of past years.

Black membership on some delegations, increased under reform guidelines for delegate selection, has jumped as much as five times over the number of blacks sent by some states to the 1968 convention. Blacks account for much of McGovern's support. In Louisiana, for example, 15 of 19 blacks are for him.

Here's the situation in the delegations:

GEORGIA promises to deliver 12 McGovern votes. If the delegation is seated as now constituted, Wallace will have nine, Rep. Shirley Chisholm of New York five, Sen. Hubert Humphre seven and Sen. Henry Jackson one.

The delegation has 53 votes, but the Credentials Committee sustained a black challenge and ordered a major reshuffling to add two black members.

The delegation has 16 blacks, 31 per cent of its membership, compared to a statewide black population of about 30 per cent. The 1968 delegation, successfully challenged by black State Rep. Julian Bond, was 26 per cent black.

Seventeen women and 10 persons under 30 are delegates.

Among the uncommitted delegates will be Gov. Jimmy Carter, who, despite his criticism of McGovern, has been mentioned by the senator as a possible running mate.

VIRGINIA has 34 McGovern supporters among its 53 delegates. Mrs. Chisholm has three, Humphrey two, Muskie one and former North Carolina Gov. Terry Sanford one.

There is a marked absence of old-line politicians on the delegation. Atty. Gen. Andrew P. Miller is the only state official on the delegation—and he's the last alternate.

The delegation has 20 women, a number challenged by the Women's Political Caucus as too few. Fifteen blacks are on the delegation, just under 30 per cent of the total, compared to a 6 per cent share in 1968. Virginia's population is 21 per cent black.

Fifteen of the Virginians are under 30 and the youngest is 17.

NORTH CAROLINA's presidential preference primary bound 37 delegates to Wallace on the first ballot and 27 to Sanford, who finished second in the May 6 election. Delegates, free to vote for others on subsequent ballots, say 15 votes would go for Sanford on a second ballot, two for Wallace. The rest are undecided.

The delegation has five persons under 30, 13 blacks, one Indian and 31 women. Blacks constitute 23 per cent of the delegation, two per cent less than their statewide population proportion, but almost four times their strength on the 1968 Tar Heel delegation.

The Credentials Committee rejected two challenges against the delegation, one claiming there were too few young persons, the other charging that the delegation was light on Wallace supporters.

SOUTH CAROLINA's 32-member delegation was picked by a state convention which instructed delegates to go to Miami Beach uncommitted. The delegation has so far followed those orders. Delegates include Gov. John West, former Gov. Robert McNair and Sen. Ernest Hollings.

Delegates include 11 blacks, about 34 per cent of the total. The state's black population is about 35 per cent and the delegation to the 1968 convention was 13 per cent black.

There are eight women and six delegates under 30, the youngest 19.

The Credentials Committee rejected challenges claiming there weren't enough young delegates and blacks.

LOUISIANA has 44 delegates, including 19 blacks, 15 of them McGovern supporters. The senator's total strength in the delegation is 20 votes. Wallace has three. The remaining delegates, including Gov. Edwin Edwards, another McGovern critic, are uncommitted.

The delegation is 43 per cent black, compared with 18 per cent in 1968 and a statewide black population of 18 per cent. The delegation has 14 women and 10 members under 30.

No major challenges are pending against the delegation. The Credentials Committee rejected one challenge that claimed the delegation was not representative. The challenger sought to replace the delegation with a pro-Wallace slate.

Edwards has been among McGovern's most vocal Southern critics, threatening at one point to boycott the convention if the senator's first ballot nomination seemed assured.

ALABAMA has four delegates committed to Humphrey, one to McGovern, two uncommitted and 30 for Wallace. Blacks constitute 27 per cent of the delegation, compared to a 1968 delegation membership of 1 per cent. Alabama's statewide black population is 30 per cent.

The delegation has six women and four under-30 delegates.

The Credentials Committee voted down a major challenge posed by Dr. John Cashin, a black dentist who broke with the regular party in 1968 and formed the predominantly black National Democratic Party.

Tennessee law binds all 49 delegates to Wallace at least through the first ballot by virtue of his victory in the presidential preference primary, but a court has held the law can't be enforced. Thus 35 delegates will go to Wallace, six for Chisholm and one for McGovern. The other seven are undecided.

Fifteen delegates are black, 30 per cent of the delegation compared to a statewide population of 17 per cent, and a 1968 delegation strength of 11 per cent.

The delegation is among the most diverse in the region, including black civil rights workers, housewives, teachers, students and a sprinkling of old party regulars. Twenty-four women and 16 under-30 delegates are members.

No challenges against the delegation were heard by the Credentials Committee.

Mississippi's loyalist delegation holds at least 17 votes for McGovern, six for Humphrey. Two other delegates are uncommitted. The delegation, which includes a number of white liberals and civil rights activists, was challenged by a group headed by Gov. Bill Waller, who promised to lead estranged Mississippi Democrats back into the party fold. The challenge was rejected.

Waller's group mainly represented the party establishment, whose 1968 delegation was unseated by the loyalists. The loyalists include Fanny Lou Hamer, founder of the old Freedom Democratic party, and black civil rights leader Charles Evers.

The loyalists include 12 blacks, just under 50 per cent of the delegation, compared with a statewide population proportion of 42 per cent. Twelve women are on the delegation.

Florida's 81-member delegation will deliver all but six of its first-ballot votes to Wallace, winner of the state's presidential primary. Humphrey has the rest.

Thirty-four women and 11 blacks are on the delegation, which withstood Credentials Committee scrutiny without being forced to make changes in its composition.

Blacks constitute 14 per cent of the membership, compared to their statewide population of just under 18 per cent. The 1968 delegation was 7 per cent black.

May's Building Activity Is Up

Building permits totaling $66,259,795 were issued during May by 36 North Carolina cities of more than 10,000 population, according to State Labor Commissioner Frank Crane.

Crane said the May building figure was 12.4 per cent higher than the $58,954,452 reported for May of last year.

The commissioner reported that Greenville issued permits totaling some $1,236,000 during the month. Other area cities and their totals are: Goldsboro, $1,446,000; Kinston, $472,352; New Bern, $370,850; Rocky Mount, $1,229,354; Wilson, $451,513; and Jacksonville, $252,875.

Permits totaling $265,984,620 were issued by the 36 cities during the first five months of 1972, Crane said. The figure was two per cent below the $271,419,642 reported for the same period in 1971.

For the first five months, Greenville issued permits totaling $6,982,058, ranking the city behind Goldsboro and Rocky Mount in permit totals.

Goldsboro's first five months figures were $10,390,673; Rocky Mount, $7,371,026; Jacksonville, $868,417; Kinston, $1,712,737; New Bern, $1,518,468; and Wilson, $3,664,923.

Crane said that Charlotte led the 36 cities with May permits totaling $11,749,552. Greensboro ran a close second with $11,386,436 while Raleigh was third with $7,328,270. Durham followed with $6,058,940, and Winston-Salem had $2,766,339. Eleven other cities exceeded $1,000,000.

PHYLLIS IS A PIANIST — Comedienne Phyllis Diller, in San Francisco for a series of appearances as a classical pianist with the symphony orchestra, takes time out from her busy schedule for a television filming in behalf of a charity drive. Phyllis had seven years of classical piano study in her past, but gave it up to go into comedy. "Now I am easing into concert piano and the critics can't review my playing—yet", she says. "I mix comedy with it." (AP Wirephoto)

GATLINBURG, Tenn. (AP) — Visitors to the Great Smoky Mountains National Park through June represent a 21 per cent increase over those for the first six months of 1971.

Auto Sales At All-Time High

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. reports its combined passenger car and commercial vehicle sales for the first six months of the year were an all-time record and its sales chief says he expects 1972 to be the best yet for the auto industry.

GM's combined passenger car and commercial vehicle sales also set June records, and separately they established new marks for the April-June quarter.

Ford Motor Co., Chrysler Corp. and most of the importers said their June sales figures could be expected shortly.

GM passenger car sales of 2,375,482 in this year's first half failed to match the six-month record of 2,453,121 set in 1965, but commercial vehicle (truck, van, bus, etc.) January-June sales rocketed to 561,481, against a previous record of 455,358 set last year.

"We continue to have every expectation that 1972 will see new sales records for General Motors and the industry," said Mack W. Worden, chief of GM's marketing staff.

American Motors Corp., also reporting Wednesday, said its June sales were the best in eight years and for the January-June span were 19 per cent ahead of last year's first half: 153,218 vs. 128,312.

GM sold a combined total of 2,936,963 vehicles in the first half of the current year, compared with a previous record of 2,844,122 set in last year's second half.

The auto giant reported a 6.7 per cent passenger car gain with 450,872 sales in June, compared with 422,409 for the correspondong month a year ago.

GM's commercial vehicle sales were up 32.1 per cent for June: 106,922 against 80,958 in June of last year.

Farmer Recreation Needs Emphasized At Raleigh Hearing

RALEIGH (AP) — A farm-country educator suggested today that Congress consider "putting a basketball court at every crossroads" as a means of meeting the recreational needs in rural areas.

Chancellor Leo Jenkins of East Carolina University, in making the suggestion, said that more effort should be expended to take care of the "farmers' recreational needs."

"Living should be just as important as making a living," Jenkins said.

Jenkins, who also suggested the creation of rural-area orchestras, made his comments in an informal hearing called by Sen. Henry Bellmon, R-Okla.

Bellmon and Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., are holding field hearings for the Senate Agriculture and Forestry Committee, which will begin consideration of a new farm bill later in the year.

The Agriculture Committee invited representatives of several commodity and farm organizations to a breakfast with Bellmon this morning. Chiles was scheduled to join the group later in the day for a tour of farm areas in Wake and Johnston counties.

Highway To Be Named For King

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — The City Commission, which reversed its decision after naming part of a Montgomery street in honor of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., has decided to name an interstate highway in his memory.

The portion of Interstate 85 within the city limits was designated Wednesday as the Martin Luther King Expressway — subject to approval by the state and federal governments.

Earlier, the commission had renamed several blocks of Jackson Street in honor of the slain civil rights leader who first gained fame as the leader of the Montgomery bus boycott in the mid-1950s. But that action was rescinded shortly afterward.

Truman Awaits Further X-Rays

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Former President Harry S. Truman, hospitalized since Sunday with an intestinal problem, faces another round of X-rays.

A spokesman at Research Medical Center reported that X-rays taken Monday were unsatisfactory, "and they will be repeated later in the week when advisable."

The 88-year-old former chief executive told of soreness in his lower back Tuesday, the spokesman said, adding that Dr. Wallace H. Graham, Truman's personal physician, attributed it to the irritation of the colon, a portion of the large intestine.

Truman's condition continued to be labeled satisfactory.

Banks To Report On Condition

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three government agencies issued calls today for the condition of banks as of the close of business Friday, June 30.

The Comptroller of the Currency asked for condition reports on national banks; the Federal Reserve Board for reports on its member banks; and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. for reports on insured state banks which are not members of the reserve system.

N.C. Safety Promoter Is 'Suspended'

RALEIGH (AP) — William Spurgeon Johnson Jr., director of North Carolina's Highway Safety Promotion Division, has been suspended indefinitely after being arrested for driving under the influence of alcohol. Johnson, 47, was arrested early Wednesday and charged with driving under the influence and with carrying a concealed weapon. He was released from Wake County jail under $300 bond.

Trial will be July 21.

Officer L.T. Liggins said in a report filed with the police department that Johnson was driving to the left of the center line when he stopped him at 5:30 a.m.

Johnson was given a breathalyzer test by officer S.N. Clayton. The police report said the result was a .29 blood alcohol reading. A reading of .10 or over is legally defined as showing intoxication.

Liggins said a Hauser-Werke 7.75 mm gun with a three-inch barrel was confiscated from the glove compartment of Johnson's car after it was towed from the arrest scene.

Fred Mills, secretary of the state Department of Transportation and Highway safety, released a statement later Wednesday saying he had instructed Motor Vehicles Commissioner Joe Garrett to suspend Johnson from his post indefinitely.

Johnson has been director of the division for about four years.

34 Spotted Fever Cases

RALEIGH (AP) — Some 34 cases of Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever, including one fatality, have been reported in North Carolina so far this year.

A top health official predicts the state will again lead the nation in the number of cases of the tick-borne disease.

Dr. John MacCormack, head of the communicable disease section of the state Board of Health, said he expects about 100 cases of the disease to be reported this year, close to the record 107 reported last year.

By this time last year, only 27 cases had been reported in the state. The 107 cases reported in the state last year were among 404 cases reported nationwide in 1971. The North Carolina cases included seven fatalities. A total of 138 cases have been reported nationwide so far this year.

"There are a lot of ticks out there, and so far reports show that we're following the same trends as last year," MacCormack said. "It looks like we're going to lead the nation again in reported cases."

The fever is an acute infectious disease that is characterized by fever, headache, muscle pains and a rash, and it can be fatal if not treated in time.

'Fiddler' Poses Bright Promise For A Season

Wednesday night's opening of the ninth season of East Carolina Summer Theater once more brings tidings of a summer of fine entertainment.

Director Edgar R. Loessin, General Manager Michael Hardy, Music Director Barry Shank, scenographer Robert T. Williams, choreographer Richard Lyle and costume disigner Brooks Van Horn form a professional team who can be expected to measure up to past standards in giving area residents consistently outstanding productions. (For this season Lyle replaces Miss Mavis Ray, now engaged in choreography duties at "The Lost Colony").

Recently establishing a new record for continuous performances on Broadway, "Fiddler On The Roof" at ECU is a bag of mixed blessings. One feels the major weakness in the local production is the lack of a larger stage, that the community group scenes and the dances would have gained considerably with more space.

Despite this limitation, the dances are among the finest moments of the play, especially the "Bottle Dance" which has John Paschal, Rick Price, Howard Leonard and James Fraser dancing the stunning quartet.

Ritch Brinkley, a hefty actor-singer in the lead role of Tevye, the dairyman, is a competent performer meeting the multiple demands of the role as singer, dancer, philosopher and the father of five daughters caught up in the dilemma of maintaining the traditional rights of a Jewish father and giving in to the dictates of his good nature. Brinkley's performance on opening night fell somewhat short of being an inspired one.

Summer Theater favorite Sally-Jane Heit as Tevye's wife Goldie, has surprisingly little to work with, but makes each moment on-stage her own in a wonderful way.

The most exciting feminine role in "Fiddler", that of the matchmaker, is portrayed by Camille Hardy. Miss Hardy again scores as an indomitable female on stage — many will remember her dazzling performances last summer.

In secondary roles, Patsy Johnson as daughter Hodel; Shaw Nelson as Motel, the Tailor; Ray Noch, Perchif, the student; John Stevenson as Fyedka; and Stuart Aronson, in the role of Lazar Wolf, the butcher; are outstanding.

The Oriental flavored music of "Fiddler" is the richest reward of this musical which encompasses generous elements of social drama and traditional Jewish folk-lore. The orchestra under Barry Shank provides full-bodied support, and William's Chagell — inspired scenery is tops.

"Fiddler On The Roof" is altogether an evening of enchantment, and the ECU Summer Theater production is one that should not be missed

Hunting N.C. Zoo Director

RALEIGH (AP) — The chairman of the North Carolina Zoological Authority says the group's personnel committee may come up with a recommendation for a zoo director by late August.

Norwood "Red" Pope said Wednesday that 10 applications for the post have already been received and several others are expected.

"North Carolina is assured of having a top-flight director to head its state zoo," Pope said.

"We placed ads in several trade journals outlining the requirements we wanted in a zoo director," he said. "Five of the replies we have received were from top zoo directors in the country."

Pope said, "If we can get a director by Oct. 1 we can really begin making definite plans on the drawing board. If we follow our proposed schedule we'll have a zoo in three years."

He said the ads seeking a zoo director pointed out that only those persons who have been a zoo director or top administrator the past five years should apply.

"The person we get will have to design and help build the zoo," he explained. "Therefore, he's got to have plenty of know-how. The zoo itself will be the largest of its type in land area in the world.

The zoo will be built near Asheboro in Randolph County.

Tar Heel voters approved in the May 6 primary a $2 million bond issue for the zoo.

"It will take $6 million to build and stock the zoo," Pope said. "We will need $4 million from private sources."

He said he doesn't anticipate any difficulty in getting a majority of the various species of animals. He noted that some species are becoming scarce, such a polar bears and cheetahs.

"We expect to get a number of animals from existing zoos," he said.

"We got a letter from an organization the other day that captures and sells anilals. They advised us to order at least a year in advance," Pope said.

Regard Age Rule Unfair

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — Four young delegates to the Democratic National Convention and one Republican delegate are opposing an amendment to the North Carolina Constitution which would raise from 18 to 21 the age for holding state office.

The four Democratic delegates, all college students, are Joe Delk of Asheboro, Lucy Hancock of Oxford, Dave Erdman of Bridgeton and Becky Hannah of Concord. The Republican National Convention delegate is Chris Callahan of Rutherfordton.

The five issued a statement Wednesday calling the proposed amendment "unfair."

Callahan said the proposal would mean "The setting up of second-class citizenship for young people."

He said, "The whole thing is unnecessary and should be defeated.

The proposal will be voted on in the November general election.

Earlier this week, student body presidents of 13 campuses of the new University of North Carolina system issued a statement calling for defeat of the amendment.

HONORS TRUMPETER

NEW YORK (AP) — Mayor John Lindsay presented the Handel Medallion, the city's highest culture and music award, Wednesday to jazz trumpeter Dizzy Gillespie, a native of Cheraw, S.C.

Cautions Motorists On Parking Pattern

Police Chief Glenn Cannon cautioned motorists parking on streets in the vicinity of East Carolina University to be watchful of which side of the street they park on.

Cannon said the parking pattern on streets running off Fifth Street has been changed and warned that motorists not parking in accordance with the current parking regulations are subject to be ticketed and may have their cars towed away.

The Chief said streets on which the parking pattern was changed include all streets running North from Fifth, from Holly to Maple Streets.

He explained that until the parking pattern was changed, vehicles were allowed to park on the West sides of those streets. However, vehicles now may only park on the East side of the streets.

The parking pattern on the streets near the university changes each year alternating from side to side, Cannon said.

Library Film Fare For Children Ready

Three movies, all centered around young boys, their joys and problems, will be the fare for children in the films making up the coming week's offering at the three libraries in town.

Mrs. Kay Taylor, in charge of the film program, has announced that beginning with Friday, "Boy With A Knife," "Lonnie's Day" and "The Magic Balloons" will be shown at each of the town's three libraries.

Showing times are East Branch Library, Friday at 4:00 p.m. Carver Library, Tuesday at 3:30 p.m. and at Sheppard Library in the Children's Room at 7:30 p.m. on Wednesday.

"Boy With A Knife" is the story of a teenager who is a potential juvenile delinquent. He is saved by the formation of a supervised neighborhood club which provides him and members of his gang some place to go.

A typical day in the life of an eight year old Negro boy living in the confinement of an inner-city high rise is the subject of the second movie "Lonnie's Day."

The third of the trio, "The Magic Balloons" concerns a lonely boy who sells balloons at the beach. This is being shown in place of "The Merry-Go-Round Horse" which had been announced earlier.

The films are best suited for children of elementary school age. All children in the city are invited to attend the showing of these movies. There is no admission charge.

Legion Captures Series Opener, 3-0

The Greenville American Legion baseball team took a 1-0 lead in the best-of-three series with Ahoskie in the first round of the Area Playoffs last night, gaining a 3-0 victory.

Mike Weaver scattered six hits to Ahoskie, walking one and striking out seven to hurl the shutout. Only twice during the game did Ahoskie put runners into scoring position, and only once did a man get as far as third.

Greenville, while pounding out 11 hits, got only three runs, but that was more than enough to take the first contest of the series.

Among the 11 hits were five doubles, two by Bill Lee which helped to keep the pressure on Ahoskie throughout the evening.

Ahoskie's first threat off Weaver came in the fifth inning. Keith Renner reached on an infield single and Jerry Askew followed with a hit to left. But a popup and an infield grounded ended the inning without any further advancement.

The best threat Ahoskie could come up with was in the sixth inning. Proctor led off with a single to center, and moved up on an error. With one down, Allen White moved him to third with an infield single, but the next batter hit into a double-play, ending the inning, and Ahoskie never got anything else going.

Greenville threatened in the second inning. Phil Blount led off with a single and moved up on Duncan Charlton's sacrifice. Blount made third on an error, but couldn't get any further.

Then, in the third, Greenville got its first run, and that was all they were to need. Robert Brinkley got a one-out double to left. Robbie Cox then followed with a single to right, driving in Brinkley with the go-ahead run.

The locals got another threat in the fourth when Lee doubled with two away, but could get no advancement.

The two insurance runs came over in the sixth inning. Charlton reached on a two-out infield single and Lee followed with another double. Randy McKinney followed with a double to left-center, scoring both runners for the 3-0 lead. McKinney moved on to third on an error on the play, but a strikeout ended the inning without further damage.

Greenville offered one more threat, in the eighth. Blount doubled to open the inning and moved to third on a wild pitch, but three infield outs couldn't score him.

The two teams now move to Ahoskie for the second game of the series. Should a third game be needed, it will be played in Greenville Friday at 7:30 p.m. at Harrington Field.

The winner of the series gets a bye into the area finals, meeting the winner of the Rocky Mount-Wilson-Tarboro series.

Moose Rally For 11-10 Win

The Moose rallied for seven runs in the sixth to take an 11-10 victory over the Exchange yesterday and set up the pairings for the Tar Heel Little League Playoffs.

The Moose, Exchange and Elks all tied for third with 7-8 records, but the Elks were awarded third seeding for having beaten the other two twice in three meetings. The Elks will meet Integon Friday at 6 p.m. at Guy Smith. The Moose took fourth while the Exchange was given fifth. They will meet at 4 p.m. Friday at Guy Smith.

The Moose-Exchange winner will take on first-place Pepsi-Cola at 2 p.m. Saturday at Guy Smith, while the Elks-Integon winner meets the Graniteers at 4 p.m. Saturday.

The Exchange pushed over a run in the first inning to take a brief lead. John Cleetwood singled and Al Shackleford reached on a fielder's choice. Both moved up on a passed ball and Bobby Boseman singled to score Cleetwood for a 1-0 lead.

The Moose moved ahead in the second with a pair of runs. Steve Lawler and Scott Peele both drew walks, and moved up on a passed ball. Ashley Taylor then singled to drive in both runners for a 2-1 lead.

The Exchange came right back with three in the third to take a 4-2 lead. Pep Cox walked and stole second. Cleetwood reached on an error and stole second. Cliff Fearington singled in Cox, and he and Cleetwood worked the double steal, scoring Cleetwood. Boseman then singled to score Fearington.

The Moose added another in the third. Mickey Finn reached on a fielder's choice and William Brewington singled. Danny Wood grounded out, but scored Finn.

The Exchange picked up another in the fourth. Jay Cox reached on a fielder's choice and took second on a passed ball. Allan Clark walked and Pep Cox did too. Cleetwood hit a sacrifice fly to score Jay Cox making it 5-3.

The Moose got another in the fourth. Peele walked and Jimmy Heath got a walk. Taylor also walked, loading them up. A walk to David Carroll forced Peele over to cut it to 5-4.

The Exchange then came up with three in the fifth and two more in the sixth to push their lead out to 10-4.

But in the bottom of the sixth, the Moose began to push them over. Paul Lemmond walked, as did David Kirk and Mitch Meeks, loading the bases. Taylor grounded out, but scored Lemmond. Carroll walked to reload then, and Finn singled in Kirk. Brewington doubled to drive in Meeks and Carroll and Finn scored on an error. Wood reached on a fielder's choice scoring Brewington with the tieing run. Lawler reached on another fielder's choice that got Wood, and a passed ball moved Lawler to second. Lemmond singled and Kirk walked to reload the sacks, and a walk to Meeks brought over Lawler with the game-winning run.

Boseman led the Exchange hitting with four, while Fearington had three. Brewington had two hits to lead the Moose, who took advantage of 15 walks to fashion their win.

Huey's Downs Four Seasons To Take City Softball Championship

Huey's captured the City Softball League championship last night taking a 7-5 victory over Four Seasons. The win left Huey's with a 15-2 record and a two-game edge in the standings with only one game to play.

In the other games, Burger King beat Hardee's, 4-1 and took a forfeit win over the Jaycees; Harbin's downed Parker's, 12-6, and Greenville Utilities, 33-5, Shirley's also downed GUCo, 16-2.

In the first game at Evans Field, Harbin's pushed into the lead with five runs in the first, while GUCo picked up two in its half of the frame.

In the second inning, Harbin's added four more to put the game out of reach, 9-2. Dave Bumgarner led off with a single and Mitchell Jones tripled. Bill Tripp singled and Kim Harbin got a double. Jack Wall doubled Harbin over with the ninth run.

Harbin's then added 12 in the third, two in the fourth, one in the sixth as Tripp homered, and nine in the seventh with Dave Holton homering. GUCo added two in the fourth and one in the seventh.

Shirley's pushed over all they needed in the first inning of the second game. M. Sawyer singled and J. Medlin and R. Garrett each got hits. E. Vincent doubled and R. Phillips singled. B. Angle doubled and a single by C. Oakley brought him over for the 6-0 lead.

Shirley's went on to add three in the second with Vincent homering, one in the third with Oakley homering, two in the fourth, two in the fifth with R. Briley homering and two in the sixth. GUCo got one each in the fourth and fifth.

In the final game at Evans, Parker's got a run in the first, but Harbin's pushed over three in their half of the first. They added three more in the second before Parker's came up with two on a homer by R. Nichols in the third.

In the bottom of the third, Harbin's added four more to wrap it up. Harbin singled and Wall got a hit. Jim Brewington singled and with two away, Billy Byrd doubled. Bumgarner tripled to finish the scoring.

Harbin's added two more in the sixth for their 12-run total, while Parker's got three more in the fourth.

Burger King got all it needed in the first inning of play, scoring two. Larry Smith singled and Bill Williamson got a hit. Toby Sklar singled in Smith and a passed ball brought Williamson home.

Burger King got one more in the third and another in the sixth. The lone Hardee's run came in the sixth.

In the final game, Huey's took the lead in the third, scoring three runs. Four Seasons came up with a run in the fourth, but three more by Huey's in the fourth put it away.

Jim Hicks led off the fourth with a single and John Bobo singled. A passed ball let Hicks score and Lit Woodard tripled in Bobo. Charles Draffin singled to score Woodard with the sixth Huey run.

They added one more in the sixth, while Four Seasons got four more in the fifth with Charles Vincent homering.

Trinity In Church Win

Black Jack moved into the lead in the National Division of the Church Softball League last night as Trinity edged past Immanuel, 11-10.

The win left Trinity with a 7-7 record, while Immanuel is now 9-4. Black Jack leads with a 9-3 mark.

Immanuel took the lead with two runs in the first, but Trinity came back to score three in their half of the frame. Immanuel then broke loose for eight runs in the second to boost their lead to 10-3.

Trinity came back with one in the third and then scored two in the fourth, including a solo homer by Jim Adams.

In the sixth, they came up with four more to tie it up. Floyd Johnston walked and Donnie Bowen doubled. Steve Cayton doubled to drive in both runners and Smith Worthington doubled him in. Kenneth Manning followed with another double, scoring Worthington with the tieing run.

Then, in the seventh, Adams doubled and came around to end the game as Johnston got a run-scoring hit.

Bucs Are Delayed

BUIES CREEK — The East Carolina University-Campbell College game in the N.C. Summer Collegiate League, set for last night, was postponed because of rain and cold weather.

The game was tentatively rescheduled for tonight.

The Bucs are set to return home Saturday at 7:30 p.m. against Appalachian at Harrington Field. It will be Larry's Shoe Store night, and free tickets for the game are available from that business.

Kiwanis Down Jaycees, 13-5

The Kiwanis rolled to a 13-5 victory over the Jaycees yesterday in the North State Little League to claim fifth seeding in the League Playoffs, scheduled to begin Friday.

Two positions in the playoffs are yet to be determined. The Optimists have won the championship, but second and third are still up for grabs between R. C. Cola and Coca-Cola, which were to meet today. The winner will take over second, while the loser will face the Jaycees in a 6 plm. game Friday at Elm Street. The Kiwanis and Lions meet in the 4 p.m. Friday game, with the winner advancing to meet the Optimists on Saturday.

The Kiwanis and Jaycees actually finished with identical 5-10 records, but the Kiwanis got the upper berth by beating the Jaycees two of three times.

They took the lead in the first inning, pushing over four runs. Ben Miller singled and Danny Hester reached on a fielder's choice. Calvin Williams singled and Greg James walked to force in Miller. Chris Dickson reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Hester and Williams and Steve Smart sacrificed in James for the 4-0 lead.

The Jaycees came right back with three in their half of the first. Joey Mathies walked and John Winstead was hit by a pitch. Two passed balls brought Mathies around and put Winstead on third. Bill Collier walked and then stole second. Lance Wethington reached on an error, scoring both runners.

In the third, the Kiwanis came up with three more for a 7-3 lead. Hester reached on a fielder's choice and stole second. Williams walked and James doubled to score both runners. Dickson grounded out to score James.

The Jaycees got another in the bottom of the third. Collier singled and Danny Boyd reached on an error. Both moved up on a passed ball and Wethington reached on another error, scoring Collier.

The Kiwanis got two more in the fourth. Sturart Motsinger walked and took second on a passed ball and moved to third on an error. Miller walked and Hester reached on error. Williams singled in Motsinger and Dickson walked to score Miller.

The last Jaycee run came over in the fourth. Mathies singled and moved to third on passed balls. Winstead reached on an error, scoring him.

The Kiwanis added four more in the fifth. Smart reached on an error and Motsinger walked. Brad Brown singled in Smart, but Miller's grounder got Mogsinger at third. Hester then

Ryun Attempt Comes Today

By DAN BERGER
Associated Press Sports Writer

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — The Saga of Jim Ryun may reach "The End," or it may provide America with another Cinderella story today.

The world record holder in the 1,500-meter run takes on six other metric milers this evening in a quarter-final heat at the U.S. Men's Olympic Trials.

Ryun recently told friends he would quit track for good if he did not qualify for the U.S. team in the 1,500. He previously ran fourth in the 800 here, failing to make the team despite an excellent time of 1:45.2.

Four men in each heat of the 1,500 this evening will qualify for Friday's semifinals. Ryun is the only contestant in the third heat who has cracked 3:40 this season and is heavily favored to advance.

Also this evening, Rod Milburn is hoping to break the world record in the 110-meter high hurdles.

"That record will go the first time I step on that track," said Milburn. "That's the fastest track in the world and I want to set the record as soon as possible and get it out of the way."

The world mark of 13.2 seconds, set by Willie Davenport, has never officially been broken, although Milburn has run 13.0 seconds for 120 yards—virtually the same distance.

Competitors in the 400-meter event, the first round of which begins this evening, have said the world record is in jeopardy.

"This race will be more competitive than the finals at Munich," said Wayne Collett, "because here four guys will be fighting for three spots on the team."

Collett includes himself with John Smith, Lee Evans and Vince Matthews, the same foursome experts say will be in the finals.

Six heats containing four men each will run this evening. Three men from each heat qualify for Friday's quarter-finals.

"I think it will take 43.7 to win and 44.0 just to make the team," said Jim Bush, who coached Collett and Smith at UCLA. The world record was set at the Mexico City olympics by Evans at 43.8.

Only one other running event is scheduled, the 5,000-meter run heats.

Boston Pitchers Have Fifth Straight Game

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

Lee Stange, who spent four American League seasons pitching for the Boston Red Sox in cozy Fenway Park with the friendliest left field wall in all of baseball, laughed out loud.

Stange, now the Red Sox' pitching coach, was watching newsmen and club officials scurry through record books after Marty Pattin's five-hitter beat Minnesota 2-0 Wednesday night and gave Boston hurlers five straight complete games.

"Forget about looking it up," advised Stange, who has seen his share of pitchers eaten alive by the close-in left field wall they call the Green Monster at Fenway. "It probably never happened before. Not in this ball park anyway."

The Red Sox have forgotten about their bullpen since last Saturday. Since then, they've started five different pitchers and gotten five straight complete game victories which is about as good as a pitching staff can do.

Pattin's victory was the second consecutive shutout in the string, following Lynn McGlothen's three-hitter against the Twins Tuesday. The other route-going efforts in the string belong to Ray Culp, John Curtis and Luis Tiant.

Elsewhere in the American League Wednesday, Baltimore blanked Chicago 1-0, Kansas City trimmed Detroit 8-2, New York downed Oakland 4-1 and California nipped Milwaukee 1-0. Texas at Cleveland was postponed by rain.

In the National League, Los Angeles rapped Montreal 7-3, Pittsburgh dropped Houston 6-4 and Chicago split a doubleheader with Atlanta, winning 4-1 before losing 3-2. San Diego at New York and San Francisco at Philadelphia were both postponed by rain.

With the pitching staff coming through so well, the Red Sox have won six straight games and eight of the last nine. The streak has moved Boston into third place in the American League East, five games back of division-leading Baltimore.

The Sox nicked Jim Perry, 6-8, for a second inning run on Carlton Fisk's double, a wild pitch and Bob Burda's sacrifice fly. They got their other run in the eighth when Tommy Harper was hit by a pitch, stole second and rode home on Carl Yastrzemski's third hit of the game.

Baltimore edged two games in front of Detroit at the top of the AL East as Dave McNally limited Chicago to five hits and Brooks Robinson's second inning homer accounted for the only run of the game.

It was the fifth shutout of the season for McNally, 9-7, who outduelled Wilbur Wood, 12-9.

Kansas City jumped on Mickey Lolich for three first-inning runs and thumped the sagging Tigers, who have now lost five of their last six games to slip behind Baltimore.

The Royals bunched hits by Fred Patek, Amos Otis, Richie Scheinblum and John Mayberry plus an error by Paul Jata to take a quick lead. Then they kayoed Lolich, 13-6, with three more runs in the sixth. The Tiger ace allowed 10 hits and was disgusted with his performance.

"This was probably the poorest game I've pitched all year," he said. "Yeah, it was the worst. I was wild inside the strike zone."

Paul Spilttorff pitched a three-hitter for the KC victory.

The Yankees got a six-hitter from Steve Kline, 7-3, to beat Oakland and Ken Holtzman.

Felipe Alou and Thurman Munson tagged home runs for New York. The Yankees, who've won six of their last seven games, tagged Holtzman for 11 hits as he dropped his sixth game in 17 decisions.

Nolan Ryan hurled his eighth complete game of the season and fourth straight, pitching California past Milwaukee. The fireballing right-hander allowed just four hits and struck out eight.

The Angels scored the games only run in the ninth inning when Winston Llenas, pinch hitting for Ryan, delivered a two-out single that scored pinch runner Syd O'Brien. Ken McMullen had opened the inning with a single and Leo Cardenas sacrificed O'Brien to second, setting up the run.

Atlanta, Chicago In Split Of Two Games

By BRUCE LOWITT
Associated Press Sports Writer

"I didn't give a damn if he ever turned in the lineup," Atlanta pitcher Phil Niekro said of Chicago Manager Leo Durocher. "The Cubs had to come up there sooner or later."

Durocher, still steaming over a rainout Tuesday night that cost his Cubs a shot at a victory over the Braves, took out his wrath against everybody in Atlanta Stadium Wednesday with a bit of psychological warfare.

That "everybody" meant the Braves, the sports writers and the 10,324 fans who, up until the last moment, were kept from seeing the Cubs' lineup.

When Ron Scheuler of Atlanta got a look at it, he liked what he saw—for just seven innings. And when Niekro got his shot at it, he enjoyed the view for the entire nine.

Scheuler had a no-hitter going for 5 2-3 innings and a three-hit shutout for seven. But a four-run outburst in the eighth inning gave the Cubs a 4-1 victory in the opener of their twinight doubleheader.

Niekro spaced his hits more evenly, yielding six of them but holding on for a 3-2 victory over Chicago in the second game.

Elsewhere in the National League, Pittsburgh defeated Houston 6-4 and Los Angeles mauled Montreal 7-3. San Diego's game against the Mets in New York and San Francisco's at Philadelphia were rained out. Cincinnati and St. Louis were not scheduled.

Durocher had protested Tuesday's rainout decision but the National League upheld it. "The powers that be in this league are ..." Durocher bellowed, unloading a choice expletive, "and you can quote me." Then he caught himself. "Oh, hey. You can't use that," he smiled. "Well, just say they're ..." and he shot forth another.

When Scheuler gave up a pair of singles to the Cubs at the start of the eighth inning of Wednesday's first game, Joe Hoerner took over on the mound. He struck out the first batter he faced, then hit the next one and walked pinch-hitter Jim Hickman to force over the tying run.

Ron Santo then grounded to Darrell Evans but the third baseman's throw home was wild and two runs scored. Carman Fanzone's run-scoring single capped the uprising that gave Ferguson Jenkins his 10th victory.

Mike Lum's solo home run in the fifth inning of the second game gave the Braves a 3-0 lead. Niekro yielded an unearned run in the eighth inning and Billy Williams' leadoff homer, his 16th, in the ninth.

Manny Sanguillen's two-run double and Bob Robertson's two-run homer in the fourth inning wiped out Houston'2 4-1 lead and Roberto Clemente added an insurance run in the fifth with a homer. Bob Johnson, replacing Pittsburgh starter Dock Ellis in the second inning, silenced Houston on just two hits the rest of the way.

Willie Davis' three-run double highlighted a four-run second inning against Montreal that enabled the Dodgers to snap a five-game tailspin.

Eichelberger Is Not Kidding

By BOB GREEN
Associated Press Golf Writer

FORT ERIE, Ont. (AP) — "Look out for me this week."

Dave Eichelberger admitted he was only half-kidding when he served the warning prior to teeing off today in the first round of the $150,000 Canadian Open Golf Championship.

Eichelberger bolted out of obscurity with his first tour victory and more than $100,000 in winnings last season, but has had his problems this year.

But, in characteristic fashion, he shuns the esoteric, deeply technical explanations favored by many of his fellow pros when talking of his troubles.

"I'd just been hitting it crooked. That's the trouble," said the 29-year-old Eichelberger, a tee tucked into its usual place behind his ear.

"That's all that's been wrong. I didn't know where it was going to go. I wasn't hitting but maybe 10 greens a round. And that just don't get it done.

"But I'm playing a little better now. A lot better. Why, in the last couple of weeks I've got it to where I'm hitting, oh, 12 or 13 greens almost every round.

"No, really, I'm playing better now. Ready to make my move. Gettin' ready to defend."

That would be in the Milwaukee open, next week. He won the event opposite the British Open last year for his first triumph in five years on the tour and used it as a springboard to a $107,000 season.

Though he played well early in the year, Eichelberger has had his troubles this season with only $30,000 in winnings. He's missed the cut for the final two rounds as often as he's made it in the last couple of months. "But I'm ready now." grinned the chain-smoking Eichelberge, of Waco, Tex.

He was less than an odds-on favorite in this national championship, however. Defending titleholder Lee Trevino and South African Gary Player sharing the role of favorite. Arnold Palmer and Sam Snead were among the gallery favorites.

Some other top contenders in the 72-hole test that ends Sunday are Australian Bruce Crampton, Bob Murphy, Dave Hill and Tommy Aaron. Jack Nicklaus, winner of the U.S. Open and the Masters and gunning for a one-year sweep of all the world's major titles, is among the missing. He's in Scotland preparing for next week's British Open.

Phillies Name All-Star Prexies

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Phillies were knocking around the locker room on Independence Day, waiting to engage the San Francisco Giants, when a reporter walked in and asked them what they thought of President Nixon's all-star baseball team.

The Phillies, like everyone else, had read Nixon's personal album of stars, which was obtained by the Associated Press and published in many Sunday newspapers. The president had prepared the list in response to a newsmen who had asked him to name his favorite baseball players.

Sportswriter Stan Hochman of the Philadelphia Daily News got the idea that if presidents can choose the greatest baseball players, baseball players can name the all-star presidents. So Hochman raised the issue with the Phillies.

Once they were asked—on the Fourth of July—to compile an on-the-spot pantheon of presidential standouts, the Phillies replied with the spirit of the day and the enthusiasm of athletes.

"Who's on the $1,000 bill? asked Dick Selma, a pitcher.

"George Washington," was Jim Nash's choice. "He's the only guy whose picture my wife allows in my billfold."

"Zachary Taylor," snickered second baseman Denny Doyle. "Why? Because nobody else probably thought of him."

"I've been in the game 15 years and nobody's ever asked me that question," mused Deron Johnson, "I've got to go with Nixon. He's getting us out of Vietnam."

Catcher Mike Ryan also chose the current starter. Ryan explained: "I just pick him because he's always being second-guessed, just like a catcher."

"Harry Truman," said Tommy Hutton, utility fielder. "He'd be a scrapper. He'd do anything to win. Besides, anybody who can live as long as he had, has got to be tough."

Bill Robinson and Barry Lersch both chose Abraham Lincoln, Robinson, who is black, associated Lincoln with John F. Kennedy; he said both had helped blacks make strides toward equality. Lersch admired Lincoln "because he had long hair and a beard."

"JFK," said reflective shortstop Larry Bowa. "Because while you hear a lot of people saying bad things about Nixon I've never heard anyone say bad things about JFK. I think he had the respect of all the people."

At this point in the selection, Hutton changed his choice of all-star.

"Taft," said the utilty man. "He could hit the long ball. What was he 300 pounds?"

Goolagong, King Make Net Finals

By NOEL HUGHES
Associated Press Sports Writer

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Stan Smith, U.S. Army Corporal, and Ilie Nastase, Romanian Army lieutenant, went into separate battles today for places in the men's singles final of the Wimbledon Tennis Tournament.

Smith, seeded No. 1 was counting his powerful serve in his semifinal match against Jan Kodes of Czechoslovakia.

Nastase, with his rapier-like volleys and lightning maneuvers, opposed Spain's Manuel Orantes in the other semifinal.

The 26-year-old Smith from Pasadena, Calif., seems to have reached his peak at the right moment.

After struggling early in the tourney on Wimbledon's lush grass, he had a convincing 6-3, 6-1, 6-3 victory over Alex Metreveli of the Soviet Union in the quarter-finals.

Nastase, the No. 2 seed, Kodes and Orantes all are clay court performers. But they played throughout the winter on indoor wood surfaces—which are as fast as Wimbledon's grass and have sharpened their game to such an extent that they are making the strongest European challenge here in years.

On Wednesday, Billie Jean King of Long Beach, Calif., and Evonne Goolagong, the defending champion from Australia, reached the women's final.

"This is my seventh Wimbledon final" said Mrs. King after beating Rosemary Casals of San Francisco, 6-2, 6-4.

"It's a nice feeling because I've been disappointed with my play the last three or four years."

Miss Goolagong had a tough 90-minute semifinal against 17-year-old Chris Evert of Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Little Chris, on her first visit to the Wimbledon center court, took the first set 6-4 and raced to a 3-0 lead in the second.

But the 20-year-old Australian rallied for a 4-6, 6-3, 6-4 victory.

For the first time, Evonne was given tactical advice by Vic Edwards, her coach and legal guardian. He told her to get in at the net and cut short her backhands.

"I usually leave it to Evonne herself to decide how to play a match," Edwards said.

"But this time I was able to help, because I know the weaknesses of players who use a double grip for their backhand. I trained Jan Lehane, who used the same backhand grip as Chris.

"I know the weaknesses that have to be ironed out of their game, and some weaknesses that cannot be cured. I told Evonne how to capitalize on them.

"But Chris is a great player and a thoroughly nice kid. We shall see a lot more of her in the years to come."

Ambassador Will Resign

NEW DELHI (AP) — U.S. Ambassador Kenneth B. Keating announced today that he will resign before the Republican National Convention next month to work for the re-election of President Nixon.

Keating's departure will end a three-year assignment during which Nixon's support of Pakistan in the December war plunged relations between Washington and New Delhi to their lowest point in the 25 years of Indian independence.

The ambassador issued a two-sentence statement acknowledging reports in the United States that he would return to politics. He was a U.S. senator from New York until Robert F. Kennedy defeated him in 1964.

"I expect to return to the United States about Aug. 1 and will resign as ambassador prior to the Republican National Convention," the statement said.

"After that, I expect to campaign actively for the re-election of President Richard Nixon."

The New York State Republican Committee named Keating a nonvoting honorary delegate to the convention on Wednesday.

Apply Lessons In Convention Security

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The people who attend the Democratic National Convention next week will be admitted by people, not machines. The Democrats hope that humans can do what electronic gatekeepers couldn't.

In Chicago four years ago it was go or no-go — according to the capricious whims of a machine that flashed green or red and maybe not at all. A plastic card held by the user aided the machine in its decision. Sometimes it got fooled by an ordinary oil company credit card, but most often by its transistor innards.

The result was people who got in when they shouldn't; people who didn't when they should; and a lot of people who flashed redder than the machines.

This time, the Democrats have gone back to the old-fashioned admission ticket, numbered and color-coded, with secret and invisible markings to thwart would-be counterfeiters.

Next to the heat, the subject most discussed in this bare-back, lace-dress strip of nature-gone-overboard is "security." Security outside (Yippies, Hippies and Zippies) and security inside (delegates, challengers, newsmen and messengers).

On suggestion of the Secret Service, the convention hall will undergo a military-type inspection for possible bombs beginning at midnight Sunday. It will not be reopened until Monday afternoon.

"The system relies on people not knowing what's in it," says Wesley Pomeroy, the man in charge of security inside.

For instance, the party's Security Advisory Committee, which he heads, has been working for a year on ways to make the entry easier for those who should get in; and harder for those who shouldn't.

Only Chairman Lawrence F. O'Brien and others of similar rank have passes for all sessions. Each day, just before the convention opens, the day's tickets will go to the heads of delegations.

The tickets were printed in a secret place, under guard. They are now stored, under guard. The day's color will be chosen just before distribution.

Going past the gatekeepers, people will pass through metal sniffers such as those airports use to detect hijackers. Briefcases will be searched.

Internal security for the huge convention center complex was put on bid and eight firms applied. The winner was McDonnell-Frain, which has had experience with such tightly guarded events as the Super Bowl and the 1968 Republican National Convention.

Inside the hall will be bomb squads and plainclothes police. Seven of the would-be candidates have Secret Service protection. Somewhere in the complex is a command center where representatives of various security segments will coordinate actions should there be trouble inside, outside or both.

Set Instruction Of Cheerleaders

MISS CHEERLEADER U.S.A. — Becky Fuller is chief instructor at the East Coast Cheerleading Camp to be held soon.

FAYETTEVILLE — "Miss Cheerleader U.S.A. heads the staff of the East Coast Cheerleading Camp to be held at Methodist College here July 30-August 5.

Miss Becky Fuller won the title at Cypress Gardens, Fla. from a field of 200 college cheerleaders. A Chapel Hill native, she is a junior cheerleader at UNC-Chapel Hill. She also was named "National College Cheerleader of the Year" in a separate contest also held in Florida.

The camp features week-long instruction in all phases of cheerleading technique, gymnastics, and pom-pon routines. Instruction for beginning as well as experienced cheerleaders will be offered to campers from 13 to 18 years of age. Further information is available upon request.

Other instructors include Rhonda Casey and Kathy Rambo, both of East Carolina University.

Charged In Fire Deaths

HIGH POINT, N. C. (AP) — Murder charges have been filed against Nollie Lee Martin, 23, in a fire which took the lives of a neighbor woman and her two daughters.

The June 28 fire at a two-story apartment building killed Mrs. Josephine Hogan and Karen, 14, and Linda, 10.

Police charged Martin Wednesday with three counts of first-degree murder and one count of arson. He had been charged earlier with breaking and entering and larceny in a robbery at the Hogan apartment the day before the fire.

Detective G. T. Everett said Martin and his wife were injured in the fire, which was confined to a stairway in the building. Six persons residing in other apartments got out safely.

Leverett said Mrs. Martin had been released from medical care but her husband remained under guard at a High Point hospital, where he is recovering from burns.

Will Say Vows On Balloon Ride

ANDERSON, Ind. (AP) — Victor L. Phillips, a 20-year old police reporter for the Anderson Bulletin, asked his fiancee what she thought of saying "I do" while riding in a balloon.

"Why not," replied 18-year old Kathy Hiday.

So come this Saturday Phillips and Miss Hiday will be married while soaring over central Indiana in a seven-story-tall hot air balloon. Phillips said he got the idea when he learned that a balloon will be one of the attractions at the annual Anderson Free Fair.

Chess Masters Meet Sunday Night

By STEPHENS BROENING
Associated Press Writer

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (AP) — Bobby Fischer made a full and penitent apology to Boris Spassky today, and organizers of the world chess championship match said the two would meet for their first game Sunday night.

The organizers said it had been agreed in principle to hold the drawing tonight to determine which player would have the white pieces and with them the first move.

The young American, in a letter delivered by hand this morning to the world chess champion from the Soviet Union, apologized for his "disrespectful behavior."

Fischer, whose delayed arrival doubled the prize money for both him and Spassky but also started an avalanche of confusion, asked the Russian to "accept my sincerest apology."

"I simply became carried away by my petty dispute over money with the Icelandic chess organizers," he wrote.

The written apology from the American challenger was one of the chief conditions posed by the Russians before Spassky would sit down at the chess board with Fischer.

Fischer told Spassky: "I have offended you and your country, the Soviet Union, where chess has a prestigious position."

The temperamental American also apologized to Dr. Max Euwe, president of the International Chess Federation, the Icelanders, "the thousands of fans around the world and especially to the millions of fans and the many friends I have in the United States."

However, Fischer brushed aside a demand from the Soviet Chess Federation that he forfeit the first match because of his tardy arrival. He said this "would place me at a tremendous handicap" and he didn't believe the "world's champion desires such an advantage in order to play me."

"I know you to be a sportsman and a gentleman, and I am looking forward to some exciting chess games with you," Fischer concluded.

Earlier Euwe had met other demands the Russians made on him and suggested that the start of the match be delayed further.

Euwe, president of the International Chess Federation, said he didn't penalize Fischer for his late arrival in Iceland because the American challenger is "living in another world." He said Spassky, the Russian world title holder, was "very upset" and that he would like to give him another week before the first game.

Euwe also admitted he had violated the rules in allowing two previous postponements in the start of the match. He promised strict rule enforcement in the future.

The 24-game series between Fischer and Spassky had been scheduled to start Sunday. Fischer stayed in New York, holding out for more money, and Euwe postponed the start of the match until Tuesday. Fischer arrived that day, but the Russians objected to his conduct and Euwe put the start off until today.

Fischer apologized Wednesday for delaying the start of the match, but the Russians demanded apologies in writing. Then they demanded that Fischer forfeit the first game.

The American's apology, read by a spokesman at a news conference, said: "We are sorry the world championship was delayed. The problems causing the delays were not with world champion Spassky whom I respect as a man and admire as a player."

Later Yefim Geller, the Soviet grandmaster acting as Spassky's second, told another news conference the Russians wanted Euwe to condemn the American's conduct and accept blame himself for violating the federation's rules.

Euwe came forward and condemned Fischer, conceded he himself had broken the rules and added: "I apologize."

Asked if the Russians were satisfied, Geller said they wanted it all in writing. Euwe took a pen from his pocket and said, "I can write it now," and began drafting a letter.

Geller then said the Soviet Chess Federation had told Euwe he should award the first game to Spassky by forfeit, but Euwe said he did not consider the request official.

Then Euwe put forward his idea of another postponement.

Confer On Food Prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration is carrying out a series of meetings on the sticky election-year problem of rising food prices, including the prices Americans are paying for meat.

Treasury Secretary George Shultz met with 16 supermarket executives and top level officials of the government's anti-inflation apparatus on Wednesday.

Following the meeting, Shultz predicted a drop in meat prices, telling a news conference: "We're not talking about years, we're talking about months and perhaps weeks."

Shultz scheduled a meeting today with farmers, producers and farm suppliers.

And Friday, President Nixon plans to talk about rising food prices with three members of his Cost of Living Council—Shultz, consumer affairs advisor Virginia Knauer and chairman of the Council of Economic Advisors Herbert Stein.

Shultz said Wednesday a number of ideas have been explored to bring meat prices down. While rejecting the idea of imposing price controls on producers, he said the Treasury Department may adopt a "better buys" program, which would point up to consumers the relative prices of beef, chicken and fish.

Charge Driver In Mishap Here

Greenville police officers charged Magadeline Stocks Keel Riverside Trailer Court with failing to stop for a stop sign following investigation of a 12:28 p.m. mishap here yesterday at the intersection of Pitt and Dudley Street.

Investigators, who reported Mrs. Keel was injured in the collision, identified the driver of the second car involved as Willie Lincoln Sumerlin, 29, of 108 East Redman Ave. and set damage to the vehicles at $375 to the Keel vehicle and $325 to the Sumerlin car.

Report Provisional Accreditation Given

The Occupational Therapy Program of the School of Allied Health and Social Professions of East Carolina University has been notified that its program has been granted provisional accreditation.

Accreditation is granted by the Council on Medical Education of the American Medical Association.

The Occupational Therapy Program at ECU is the only one in the state and one of 41 in the nation. The program accepted its first students in September, 1971 and expects to have its first graduates in August of 1973.

Richard Wells, director of the program, says that trained occupational therapists are in great demand in all kinds of facilities which provide services for adults and children with physical and mental disabilities or handicaps.

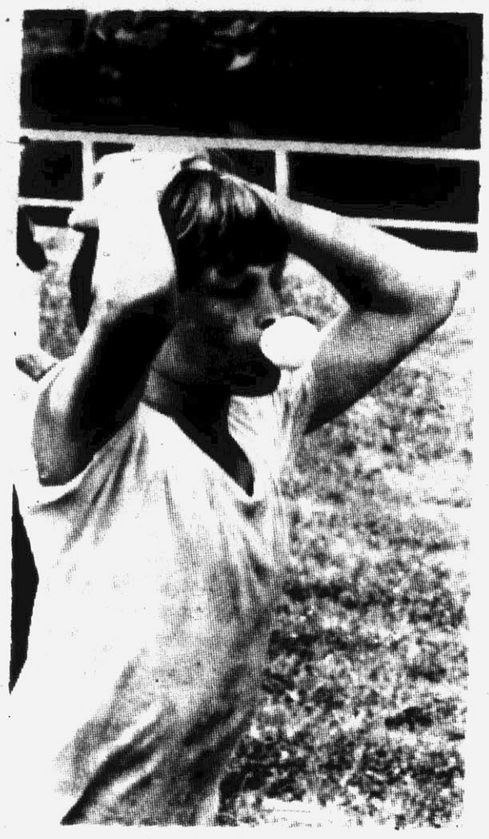
Greenville's Happy Day On The Town Common

. . . as young ladies sit, large crowds begin arriving early in the day, and a fireman gives a young visitor a helping hand.



. . . whether balancing eggs on a spoon or attempting to climb the greased pole, competition was keen and a challenge for the youngsters.

Prior planning, good weather, and thousands of area people delighted with the prospect of congregating on the Town Common to mark the nation's 196th anniversary, made the fourth of July, 1972 a memorable day in Greenville. On this page photographs capture a few of the many forms of activities available in the hours long round of outdoor festivity.

The Worry Clinic

Heed Rules On Watching TV

Diane sits too close to the TV screen, as children often do. It may mean she is nearsighted (myopic). TV makes your kiddies earminded. So teach them to enjoy reading! They don't get to college on TV training! TV causes school dropouts!

By GEORGE W. CRANE
Ph.D., M.D.

Case U-528: Diane, aged 5, is a TV addict.

"But, Dr. Crane," her worried mother began, "Diane wants to sit almost on top of the TV screen.

"In fact, her eyes aren't 2 feet away from the glass.

"Is this bad for her?"

TV Eye Hygiene

Children who are nearsighted, will want to be unduly close to the TV screen.

So heed the sound advice of ophthalmologists and the American Optometric Association. Check the vision of kiddies like Diane.

Here are standard rules for TV viewers of all ages:

(1) Place the TV set on the level of the eyes so you don't keep your head bowed down to view the screen.

Older (bifocal) people especially need TV to be at the height of a table for they can't see TV through their lower bifocal lens!

And the excessive forward tilting of the head causes bad posture and even pain in the neck.

(2) Don't watch TV in a dark room so try to have a soft overall lighting.

But don't turn on bridge lamps or other lights that are in your field of vision, for then your eyes will fatigue much faster.

(3) Adjust the TV brightness and contrast AFTER your room lights are on.

And stay at a distance of at least 5 times the width of your RV screen!

(4) Occasionally, change the focus of your eyes to break the strain on the muscles that have maintained your fixed focus on the TV screen.

At each "commercial," look around the room or glance at your newspaper.

(5) If your eyes feel scratchy or they water, you may be short on sleep (Sandman's symptoms).

Or you may need eye glasses, due to astigmatism, or your present eye glasses may need changing.

Incidentally, a simple physiological tonic for tired eyes, as at bedtime, is to slap hot water on them repeatedly for maybe a dozen times; then do the same with very cold water.

Repeat this alternation of hot versus cold, since it helps stimulate better circulation and thus flushes out the fatigue products from overworked eye muscles.

(6) Don't fret about dangers of eyestrain, for watching TV is no worse than sewing, reading or doing other close work.

If your yees are normal (or properly fitted with eye glasses) and the soft, overall illumination of the room prevents the otherwise severe contrast of a bright TV screen in a black room, then TV viewing is O.K.

But beware of reflections on the TV screen from beams of sunlight or light bulbs in adjacent rooms.

Even you office girls should likewise avoid shiny reflections from your typewriters, for any such bright object in view makes your eye muscles do more work resisting the shiny attraction as they focus on the keyboard!

You typists should thus wear eyeshades to shield your eyes from overhead bulbs or window glard, etc.

(7) Color TV offers sharper contrast than ordinary black and white for older folks whose vision is failing.

The color also adds richness and more natural true-to-life images, so give your old folks a break and get them a color TV.

My mother, aged 94, does not care for black and white but still relishes color TV.

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents when you send for one of his booklets.)

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♡

An inspired shift by East led to the spectacular upset of South's aggressive three no trump contract.

Altho North holds seven winners, he is a shade short of the requirements of a jump rebid. Partner's two-over-one response usually indicates an intention to bid again. South had a bare 10 high card points with a singleton spade and perhaps he should have passed two spades. When he persisted to two no trump, North can hardly be blamed for carrying on to game.

West opened the king of hearts on which his partner followed suit with the deuce. Inasmuch as South appeared to have the queen of hearts as part of his values, a switch appeared to be in order. West decided to attack dummy's weaker side suit—clubs. In order to not give East any allusions that he had any high card strength in clubs, West led back the eight of that suit as trick two instead of the deuce. The seven of clubs was played from dummy and East put up the king.

It is East's return at this point that determines the fate of the contract. If he plays back a club for example, North wins with ace, the closed hand is entered with ace of spades to cash the queen and jack of clubs. The ace of diamonds puts North back in to run five spade tricks. In all declarer takes six spades, one diamond, and three clubs to score an overtrick.

If East leads back a heart West can cash two tricks in that suit to complete the defensive book, but that is the end of the line. If he shifts to a diamond, North plays the ace. The closed hand is entered with ace of spades to cash the queen of hearts and then the ace of clubs puts dummy in to run the spades for nine tricks—six spades and one in each of the other suits.

If declarer has the ace and one spade, there is no way to defeat him. The only chance for the defense is to find South with the blank ace of spades. If this is, in fact, the case, then a diamond switch will cut South's line of communications so that he is unable to cash out all his tricks. East accordingly led back the king of diamonds, and in so doing, scuttled his opponent's boat.

South played the ace of diamonds from dummy. In order to run the spade suit, he was obliged to return to his hand with the ace of that suit and then lead back to the ace of clubs to play five rounds of spades. He now attempted to get back to his hand by leading the ten of diamonds, but East put up the queen and returned the carefully preserved seven of hearts so that West could cash the setting trick in that suit. The defense took three hearts, one diamond, and one club.

He Didn't Kill A Timber Wolf

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Jay Cordray thought he killed a timber wolf but he was unsure, so he sent photographs of the animal to the Illinois State Museum for identification.

John R. Paul, museum curator of zoology, said the creature was "not a wolf in the sense of a timber wolf."

The animal, instead, is probably "pure coyote, possibly with a little dog breeding in its background," Paul said.

Timber wolves have been absent from northern Illinois where the animal was killed for at least 50 and probably closer to 100 or more years, Paul said.
