Nominee McGovern Vows A People's Victory Campaign

By CARL P. LEUBSDORF
AP Political Writer

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Democratic presidential nominee George McGovern, vowing to lead a people's campaign, urged wildly cheering Democrats today to put behind "our fury and our frustrations" and unite to capture the White House from President Nixon.

And the South Dakota senator appealed for help "from every Democrat and every Republican and independent who wants America to be the great and good land it can be."

It was nearly 3 a.m. when the beaming McGovern, introduced by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and joined by vice presidential nominee Thomas F. Eagleton and defeated presidential rivals, stepped to the rostrum of a tumultuous, jammed Convention Hall to accept his party's nomination.

The victorious nominee had only a few hours to rest up after his triumph — appearances before a unity breakfast for the party's House and Sente Campaign committees and a Democratic fund-raising group were scheduled before he returned to Washington later today.

McGovern also had to decide on a new chairman for the Democratic National Committee, which holds a morning organizational meeting. While he has pressed Chairman Lawrence F. O'Brien to stay on, informed sources said he would ask Jean Westwood, the Utah national committeewoman, to take the job if O'Brien declines.

In the final moments of the convention that his supporters dominated all week, the triumph belonged to the one-time college professor from South Dakota.

Waves of applause rocked the hall as Hubert H. Humphrey, Edmund S. Muskie, Henry M. Jackson, Shirley Chisholm and Terry Sanford lifted high the hands of the 49-year-old nominee and his 42-year-old running mate from Missouri.

Reviewing the way his campaign swept aside the established political leadership, McGovern said he would dedicate his White House campaign to the people, declared that next January he would restore government to their hands and added:

"American politics will never be the same again."

With some labor leaders still determined to sit out the campaign and other delegates grumbling about the ways in which his operatives dominated the convention, McGovern forecast the battle against Richard Nixon would bring the party "together in common cause" this fall.

"He is the unwitting unifier and the fundamental issue of this national campaign," McGovern said, adding that "all of us together are going to help him redeem a pledge he made 10 years ago: that next year you won't have Richard Nixon to kick around any more."

Even delegates who supported the absent Gov. George C. Wallace joined the ovation when McGovern vowed to wage a national campaign and said, "We are not conceding a single state to Richard Nixon."

Earlier in the long evening, the convention ratified McGovern's choice of Eagleton as the No. 2 man on the 1972 Democratic ticket.

But it took a one-hour, 20-minute roll call that saw votes cast for candidates ranging from television commentator Roger Mudd, to TV character Archie Bunker, to the senator's wife, Eleanor.

Even Martha Mitchell, the wife of former GOP campaign manager John N. Mitchell, got a vote.

McGovern chose the handsome, articulate, first-term Missouri senator, a border-state Catholic with strong ties to labor, from a field of a half-dozen senators, governors and mayors. He was the senator's second choice: Kennedy rejected an offer of the vice presidency shortly after McGovern swept to first-ballot nomination Wednesday night.

When the convention's final gavel fell at 3:27 a.m., the Democrats had ended a historic convention.

With reform rules that produced massive increases in the numbers of women, black and young delegates, it ratified a transition in party power from the big-city chieftains and leaders of labor, dominant for 40 years, to the forces of what Kennedy termed "a new wind rising over he land."

Starting an hour late, the convention's final session fell steadily further behind as the delegates ratified an overhaul of the party's national committee in one lengthy roll-call vote, then fell into another over the vice presidency after seven rivals formally were nominated to oppose Eagleton.

Amid the unprecedented splintering of ballots, it took until the next-to-last state, Texas, before the Missouri senator passed the 1,509 total that marked the needed majority.

As votes were checked, the defeated candidates — most prominent among them being Texas state Rep. Frances T. "Sissy" Farenthold, Sen. Mike Gravel of Alaska, and former Massachusetts Gov. Endicott Peabody — trooped to the rostrum and declared support for Eagleton. The roll call was never finished.

Then, after delegates sang "United We Stand, Divided We Fall" while waving their fingers aloft in the V-shaped peace symbol, Convention Vice Chairman Yvonne Braithwaite Burke, a black Californian, brought Eagleton to the platform.

After acknowledging the cheers, he praised the delegates from Wallace's Alabama for their "gracious courtesy" in supporting the presidential nominee's right to choose a running mate, and vowed to carry "a new message of hope to the American people" in the campaign ahead.

Unanimous Annexation Action Voted By Greenville Council

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Annexation of nearly 40 more acres of land into Greenville, approval of a Fire Department Mutual Aid agreement with nearby towns, sale of two lots in the Newtown Redevelopment Area, and a decision to launch further studies into the Green Mill Flood Plain, were among items acted on by members of the City Council in the regular July meeting Thursday night.

Council members unanimously approved annexation of 36.9 acres of land on the eastern borders of Greenville. The newly annexed area consists of property in the Pinebrook Associates development and that of Dallas W. and Douglas E. McPherson. The area, a short distance east of the intersection of U.S. 264 and 264 by-pass, fronts U.S 264 and runs north more than 2000 feet to the banks of the Tar River.

Sale of two parcels of property in the Newtown Redevelopment Area, those known as C-4 and D-5, was approved.

The first, consisting of 40,425 square feet, went to W. W. Brown for his bid of $16,200.

The second parcel, one of 56,601 square feet, was approved for sale at $15,500. Joe Laney, Executive Director of the Redevelopment Commission, said this lot was not as desirably located as the samller lot which brought a higher price. Parcel D-5 was sold to the Garris-Evans Lumber Company.

During discussions on the parcel sold to Garris-Evans, the question of the status of a lawsuit against the city by buyers of the property arose. Laney explained that sale of the land to Garris-Evans was "contingent on conveying the property with a provision that it gives us a quit-claim on the deed to Factory Street land, while we in turn give them a quit claim to Wade Street land." (Laney referred to the land area within the streets and right-of-ways of sections of streets recently closed).

"This was agreed between attorneys for the principals, subject to final approval of the sale by the City Council. This will absolve the suit," Laney added.

Councilwoman Mrs. Mildred McGrath and Councilman William Dansey both expressed an opinion that the arrangement sounded like blackmail.

"I feel their initial action in taking out a suit was a device to keep the door open to negotiations," Dansey remarked, "but it still sounds like blackmail. I do believe, however, they honestly intended it as their way to keep the door open."

After hearing Fire Chief Ray Smith explain the need for an agreement for mutual aid exchange between the Greenville, Ayden, Winterville and Farmville Fire Departments, council members approved signing of the agreement by the mayor and fire chief.

Under this agreement, Greenville's fire chief can request the assistance of other fire untis in the county and in turn can provide assistance to these units. Smith pointed out this would be only in the case of a pressing need.

In the course of the public hearing on rezoning two triangles of land adjacent to Green Mill Run west of Evans Street, an objection was raised by George Hamilton, a homeowner in Lakewood Pines Subdivision.

Philip E. Carroll's request for rezoning of the two strips, containing less than a third of an acre, was approved for a change in zoning from flood plain to shopping center. The triangles of high land were created when Carroll straightened out the channel by cutting a canal at that point.

Hamilton, noting that Carroll had shown "good faith in terms of developing the canal", posed the question of the need for overall cognizance of drainage and flood plain planning for the stream west of Evans Street in light of growing developments.

Following discussions on past studies, proposals and recommendations made by the Corps of Engineers, council member Dr. Frank Fuller asked that the old study "be resurrected, and that members of the council take a long look at needs and developments upstream."

In another public hearing relating to rezoning, the council approved a request by Philip Carroll for rezoning three tracts of land located along North Greene Street extended. The property, east of the N.C. State Highway Commission property, is intersected by Greene Street extended and the railroad. The entire area, comprising a little over 29 acres, was approved for rezoning to Highway Commerical from previous zoning of unoffensive industry for one section and RA-20 for the other sections.

A large area of Meadowbrook was approved by the council as Greenville's first residential-mobile home area (R6-MH). Councilman Percy Cox recommended, and the council agreed, to a change in the east boundary to be along Allen Street instead of along North Pitt Street as originally drawn up.

Some confusion existed in the request for rezoning of the

Allocate Big Eastern Belt Leaf Sales

RALEIGH (AP) — The industrywide Flue-Cured Tobacco Marketing Committee has allocated tobacco sales totaling 331,470,000 pounds to the big Eastern North Carolina Belt this season.

The committee also allocated 109,437,000 pounds to the South Carolina and Border North Carolina Belt and 341,522,000 pounds to the Middle and Old Belts.

The allocations came during a three-hour closed session Thursday and were based on the latest tobacco crop forecast.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture released figures Wednesday which estimated the total flue-cured crop of 1,019,-284,000 pounds, down 5 per cent from 1971.

The USDA forecasst the Eastern Belt crop at 329,700,000 pounds compared with last year's output of 260,440,000.

John Cyrus, coordinator of crops for the North Carolina Department of Agriculture, said the committee will meet again Aug. 10 in Florence, S. C., to take a look at the August crop forecast and consider possible shifts in poundage of the Eastern, Middle and Old Belts.

He said the committee will also meet after 10 weeks of the season—sometime the week of Sept. 25—to consider possible adjustments.

The committee was told that the crop has been late maturing in some areas.

No change was made in the opening sales schedule already approved for assignment of buyers to belts.

Before the committee went into closed session, Rufus B. Lowrimore of Hemingway, a director of the South Carolina Warehouse Association, said the South Carolina markets want to open Aug. 1 and close a week later because the crop is late.

South Carolina and the North Carolina Border Belt markets are scheduled to open July 25 under the plan approved earlier by the committee.

The group took no action on Lowrimore's request. He said the South Carolina Warehouse Association plans to meet Friday.

Alex Allen of Farmville told the group, "it's a very late hour" to alter the schedule of openings.

The Georgia-Florida Belt will open July 25 along with the scheduled opening of South Carolina and the Border Belt.

Some Eastern North Carolina markets will begin sales Aug. 8 with 11 sets of buyers. Two sets each will be assigned to Greenville, Kinston, Rocky Mount and Wilson, and one set each to Farmville, Goldsboro and Smithfield. The rest of the Eastern Belt markets will open Aug. 22.

Budget Adopted

AYDEN — A town budget which includes an unchanged tax rate was approved by the town board, according to town manager Don Russell.

The proposed budget of $935,884 carries with it the same tax rate as last year. It now stands at $1.25 per $100 valuation.

Expenditures in the budget included: General Fund, $365,590; Debt service, $51,159; Electric service, $406,604; water and sewer, $106,531. The budget was adopted as presented with no changes made.

In other board action Monday night, Harry Mumford was re-elected mayor pro-tem and Bob Booth was re-appointed as town attorney. The town board also appointed board members to Ayden Industries, Inc., an organization which helps new industries and prospects for industry search for good locations in the town. Those appointed include: Elliot Dixon, W.E. Manning, Kenneth Branch, Walter Lee Stroud, Mack Edwards, and Bill Nobles.

The town board also brought into consideration the possibility of letting the county handle their elections. This issue was tabled for further discussion at next month's meeting.

New Plant For N.C. Scheduled

RALEIGH (AP) — Harry Dalton, president of Star Paper Tube, Inc., of Rock Hill, S.C., said Thursday the firm plans to erect a new plant on a 32-acre site near Wake Forest it acquired recently.

Dalton said construction of the plant will begin some time in 1973.

Shootout During Store Robbery; Two Wounded

A robbery attempt at a Rt. 4, Greenville store last night resulted in a shootout that left both the store operator and the alleged intruder with gunshot wounds.

Pitt County Sheriff Ralph Tyson said this morning that Clifton Phillips, owner of Phillips Grocery Store and Station at Seven Pines, was shot in the abdomen during the attempted robbery at his business around 9:30 p.m.

Sheriff Tyson reported that after Phillips was injured, he managed to shoot the intruder, who was identified as Lorenzo Terry, 23, of Youngstown, Ohio, in the arm.

The sheriff explained that following the shooting, that was witnessed by Phillips wife, the injured assailant fled with two other men in a car. An alert issued to Eastern North Carolina law officers resulted in the apprehension of Terry at Edgecombe County Hospital in Tarboro around 12:30 a.m. today, he said.

Sheriff Tyson said that Terry, Marvin Earl Williams, 35, of 616 Overland Street, Youngstown, and his brother, Clarence Williams, 33, of 361 Broadway Street, Youngstown, were arrested in Tarboro. Both brothers were charged with accessory after the fact and placed under $5,000 bond each, the sheriff added.

Terry, who was treated at Pitt Memorial Hospital following his transfer from Edgecombe County, was charged with assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill and attempted armed robbery and is being held without privilege of bond.

All three men, Sheriff Tyson said, apparently were migratory workers and worked for Phillips in tobacco.

The attending physician who admitted Phillips last night declined to make a statement concerning the injured man's condition other than to say he received "serious injuries."

A hearing has been scheduled for July 26 in district court here, Sheriff Tyson added.

Air Pirates Being Held On Million Dollar Bonds

By JIM BARLOW
Associated Press Writer

LAKE JACKSON, Tex. (AP) — Two armed men who who commandered a jetliner and took it on a 21-hour journey surrendered quietly to an FBI agent after forcing the plane to land at a tiny private airfield.

Held on $1-million bonds on air piracy charges in Houston were Michael Stanley Green, 34, of Washington, D.C.; and Luseged Tesfa, 22, a native of Ethiopia who was believed staying with Green.

The two walked down the rear ramp stairway of the jetliner at 4 p.m. C.D.T., almost eight hours after it first touched down on the small airstrip owned by Dow Chemical Co. in this town 50 miles south of Houston.

In a second hijacking case, a man identified as Melvin M. Fisher, 49, of Norman, Okla., surrendered Wednesday night to a stewardess after a hijacker armed with a pistol commandeered an American Airlines 727 jet during a flight from Oklahoma City to Dallas. The hijacker had demanded and received $200,000.

Fisher, charged with air piracy, was held in lieu of $100,000 bond.

The first hijacking began Wednesday night when a National Airlines Boeing 727 with 113 passengers aboard was taken over during a flight from Philadelphia to New York. The passengers were allowed to leave when the three-engine jet returned to Philadelpha.

The hijackers had demanded about $600,000 and 20,000 Mexican—worth $1,600—and two parachutes. Authorities said the ransom demands were met in Philadelphia when the hijackers swapped planes, but they would not disclose the exact amount.

Withdrawn From The World: Blind, Mute, A Lifetime Of Silence

BATTLE CREEK, Mich. (AP) — After almost 40 years of blindness — and a lifetime of silence — Louise Selby, 60, and her brother Bill, 53, no longer seem to care very much about the world known only by touch.

They usually sit together in the sunny living room, touching each other for companionship and communication: sometimes quietly holding hands, other times with fingers flying in conversation.

But if one moves away without telling the other, there's visible panic in the searching hands that reach out — in ever widening circles — to regain contact with the other half of their world.

Staff members at the Country House here, a home for retarded but trainable adults, say they know very little about the pair. Records indicate only names, ages, brief diagnoses of their condition and health records since they were placed there by their father six years ago. Both were born deaf mutes, and went blind about 40 years ago, officials said.

In the six year's they've been wards of the state, Louise and Bill have been oblivious to happenings outside their immediate surroundings. Wars, presidents, assassinations, even men on the moon are unknown to them — part of a world in which they seemingly have no interest.

Except for a brief schooling, the pair stayed at home and learned to take care of themselves. Bill became adept at craft work and Louise learned the needle skills of sewing, embroidery and hemstitching.

But today they seldom use those skills.

Although Louise is normally even tempered and dispositioned, she does occasionally show a big sister's pique — folding her hands in her lap and refusing to talk to Bill no matter how hard he tugs at her fingers.

But, as suddenly and inexplicably as it starts, it stops. And, she reaches out and traces her finger across his arm, as if to apologize.

Bill can communicate only through finger talk, and most of the staff and 20 other residents can get simple messages across to him. But, if it's complicated, Louise becomes the interpreter.

Since coming to Country House she's learned to read Braile and communicate through a Braile typewriter — a slow and tedious method — but a skill that opens a little bigger door to the world.

But, the only Braile books she ever asks for are Bible stories, which she reads over and over.

Two Visitors Here From Ceylon

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

The ragged summer clouds, intermittent showers and the steamy summer temperatures of Wednesday, the gentleman noted, are reminiscent of the southwest monsoon season in the tropical island of Ceylon.

Susil Moonesinghe, the youthful chairman and director-general of Ceylon Broadcasting Corporation and Miss Sumitra Senanayake, engineer in charge of Training and Studio Mainteneance, were in Greenville on a whirlwind tour of Voice of America facilities before heading back to Washington and then westward on a round-the-world inspection of major radio sites.

In company with James Alley, Station Manager of VOA complex in Pitt County, the two visiting officials were inspecting Site A near Bear Grass after having made the rounds at Station C, the receiving site of VOA.

"I want you first to know something about Miss Senanayake," Moonesinghe replied when asked about his role as chairman of Ceylon's broadcasting corporation. "We are all very proud of her. She's only in her mid twenties and is working on a doctorate in electronics. She is a very talented person and our first fully qualified woman engineer."

Miss Senanayake, a petitie, attractive young lady dressed "for the comfort of traveling" in a colorful cotton blouse and white slacks, revealed she has been with Ceylon Broadcasting Corporation (CBC) only since 1971.

"Before that, I was in school," she smiled, "first at the Devi Balika Vidyalaya School, then the University of Ceylon." At the university, Miss Senanayake received the Bachelor of Science Degree in Engineering. "After that, I studied ut the University of Southampton in England for the Masters Degree in Electronics." Before returning to work with CBC, the lady engineer noted she had "received practical training in radio and television in the British Broadcasting Corporation."

Her role as engineer in charge of Training and Studio Maintneance involves a full-scale program to train new employees and to upgrade the training of employees already on the job.

"For new technicians," she said, "there is a basic three months course in theory. This is followed by two and a half years of practical on the job training. For people already on the job," she continued, "we offer specialized advanced courses of six weeks."

Moonesinghe observed that CBC, which serves the 12 million people of the tear-drop shaped island as well as areas of nearby southern India, "provides local and international radio services in seven languages.

"We have three major languages," he said, Singhalese, Tamil and English. (Both Moonesinghe and Miss Senanayake speak fluent English with a trace of British accent).

For both, this is their first contact with the U.S. "I'm very much impressed with the amount of woodland you have here," Moonesinghe remarked.

Speaking briefly about their native country, which is about half the size of North Carolina, the two listed tea, rubber and coconut as the major products of Ceylon. "Our tourist industry is burgeoning," Moonesinghe said, "Just now it's one of the best bargains for sightseers, despite the distance. That's becuase of our liberal exchange rate." He explained that in addition to the official rate of exchange of 5.95 rupees per dollar, the government has authorized a 55 percent supplement for tourists, which gives a tourist nine rupees to each dollar exchanged.

Moonesinghe, who claims he is "a political appointee," has a varied background. After primary education at the Royal College of the University of Ceylon, where he received a degree in law, he later branched out into administration as a company director. His daughter, Nayantara, is a political science student at the University of Canberra in Australia. "The name Nayantara is that of our best known woman writer," he said.

The two have already visited in Paris, London, New York and Washington and will make stops at San Francisco and Los Angeles before returning to Ceylon.

"It's been tiring at times," Moonesinghe admitted, "but we have learned a great deal about broadcasting operations in other countries."

Alley, who served four years of his VOA career in Ceylon, said "Ceylon was one of the most pleasant places I've ever lived. I've really enjoyed having Miss Senanayake and Mr. Moonesinghe visit us here. I only wish they had more time so we could show them more of the Greeenville area."

Congressman Says Has No Knowledge Of Kickback Scheme

By JIM ADAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas Congressman James M. Collins has denied any knowledge of an $18,000 kickback scheme for which his former chief aide was convicted Thursday.

The aide, George A. Haag, contended throughout his four-day trial that he carried out the kickback scheme at the direction of Collins, a millionaire Republican from Dallas.

Haag, 33, stood tight-lipped and erect as the jury foreman repeated "guilty, your honor," to 20 counts of mail fraud, two counts of using falsified House payroll forms and one count of obstructing justice. His wife cried softly.

He faces a maximum 15-year prison sentence under terms set by U.S. District Judge Oliver Gasch, but lawyers said they believe he would get less than five. An appeal is planned. No date was set for sentencing.

Haag testified that Collins concocted the kickback and payroll manipulation scheme to pay $13,000 in bonuses to workers in his 1968 campaign and also to build an office slush fund.

But Collins, who was not called to testify, told a news conference following the verdict that he had never promised campaign bonuses to anyone and did not know of the kickbacks until they were exposed by columnist Jack Anderson.

He said one of Haag's first acts when he came to Washington was to raise his own salary from $18,000 to $25,000 by falsifying his House payroll card.

"I think George just liked to live high off the hog," Collins said.

The former administrative aide admitted he knew that two House pay forms were false, that he altered one of them himself and that he knew kickbacks were to be returned from the House pay checks. But he testified he was only acting under Collins's orders.

Without Legal Spouse, There Are No In-Laws

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

[© 1972 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.]

DEAR ABBY: I have news for VILLANOVA C. P. A.: Relationship, either by blood or marriage [or the absence of it] has absolutely nothing to do with dependency for tax purposes.

Any C. P. A. knows that one can claim a deduction for the first stranger that comes down the street if he can prove that he provides more than 50 per cent of that person's support and he occupies his household.

You were right the first time, Abby. If you don't have a legal spouse, you don't have in-laws.

VILLANOVA LAWYER

DEAR VILLA: Thanks, friend. I needed that.

DEAR ABBY: In response to "FORMER READER" and all others who insist that what they do with their bodies is "their own business":

Yes, it's your business, provided no one else ever has to pay financially, emotionally or otherwise for your rashness. So long as your parents are footing your bills, your body is "their business," foul it up, and they must pay to straighten it—and YOU—out.

Even after you sever parental apron strings, if you foul up your body with alcohol or drugs, or some other damned foolishness, and someone else [the public, your spouse or your children] has to pay in money, hardship, or mental anguish, your body is not entirely your own business.

I am fed up with paying taxes to support wives and children of alcoholics and drug addicts, and I'm tired of paying for public-sponsored medical and psychiatric treatment for people who have chosen to wreck their lives. I am fed up with paying high insurance rates because of drivers who are addicted to alcohol or dope, and with supporting enormous police forces to combat crimes resulting from such addiction.

The only person whose body is absolutely his [or her] own to treat foolishly is one who is self-supporting, has no relatives, no friends, no dependents and is completely exiled from civilization.

AN OLD SQUARE IN CINCINNATI

DEAR "SQUARE": I'm in all four of your corners.

DEAR ABBY: I suppose to some my problem may seem funny, but to me it's no joke.

I've been dating this terrific guy for a few weeks now and we get along just great. He takes me to the best places, and he's a perfect gentleman, but the problem is this: He can't kiss. He really turns me on and I'd love to kiss the guy, but he's such an amateur!

I just don't know what to do. He has to be the worst kisser I've ever come across in my entire life. After a date, I dread going home because I know I will have to kiss him. It's getting pretty sickening.

I would normally tell any other fellow with this problem how I felt about it, but he is the nicest guy I've ever dated and I don't want to hurt him. Don't tell me he will improve with time because my stomach isn't that strong. Please hurry your answer. YICH

DEAR YICH: You MUST tell him. From your description of the guy, he's too good to kiss off because his kisses are from hunger when you're hungry for kisses.

DEAR ABBY: About that wife who wanted to nominate her husband for sainthood because he had caught her in the act THREE times with the same man, and he forgave her every time: That guy not only qualifies for SAINTHOOD, he's a candidate for MARTYRDOM! NO SAINT EITHER

RESEARCH CHEMIST Dr. Julianne Prager admits she prefers formulas to recipes and that she is more at home in the laboratory than in the kitchen. There her husband, who is also a chemist and a "marvelous" cook, reigns supreme. That's Dr. Stephen Prager, upper right, offering his wife a sample of one of his masterpieces.

Research Chemist Set Sights High

By JOY STILLEY
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — "One message I'd like to give young girls is not to lower their sights because they're female, not to settle for being a nurse when they want to be a doctor—that's a tragedy," says Julianne Prager, who set her own sights high and achieved her goal.

A research chemist with a PhD in organic chemistry, Dr. Prager supervises a group of nine male scientists at 3M Co. in St. Paul., Minn., who do research on new technologies and systems for the life sciences.

"For a woman to rise administratively is much more difficult than for a man," she admitted on a visit to New York to attend a short course. "But in the last few years it has occurred to men there are quite a few competent women around and it may be time to exploit this talent."

When she became supervisor of the physical-biotic section in the firm's Central Research Lab she had some misgivings about how the men would accept her.

"But it worked out great," says the trim, animated scientist. "I'm senior to them all, which helps. I think we worked out a relationship where my talents complement theirs, rather than compete with them. And I think they respect me."

Proof of this is the fact that she was elected chairman of Technical Forum, the 3,300-member professional fraternity of 3M scientists. She admits she was pretty proud of that honor, since most of her co-workers are men.

"Since there are so few of us, I think it's important for women who are professionals to be completely committed,' she declares. "I have tried to avoid what are considered traditional female weaknesses. I've tried not to get the reputation of wasting time talking or breaking down in tears when things go wrong."

Dr. Prager believes one of the major deterrents to women entering the science field is the way they are brought up. "They play with dolls instead of tinkering with watches and automobiles. Parents often gear them away, thinking it's a big expenditure of time and they'll get married and not reap the benefits.

"Maybe they're afraid it's unfeminine and they won't find a husband, but actually it's a very good hunting ground since girl scientists frequently marry men scientists," laughs Dr. Prager, who did just that. Her husband is professor of physical chemistry at the University of Minnesota. Both got their PhDs at Cornell University and she reports they often hold "shoptalk" discussions that are mutually beneficial.

"I ask him questions and he provides help," she explains. "On the other hand, he's a professor and sometimes more theoretical than practical. I bring the real world to him, saying this is the way they do it in industry."

Dr. Prager thinks there has recently been a change of attitude in ths nation's industries toward ths capabilities of women. She urges girls to have an interest in it, who like to know why things work, to think about a career in science.

"I'm not saying my thing is right for everybody," she says. "If a girl wants to commit herself to being a homemaker and can be happy at that from age 20 to 85 I'm all for it. Maybe there'd be fewer disturbed children."

On the subject of homemaking, Dr. Julie Prager reports that Dr. Stephen Prager is a "marvelous" cook, a talent which she herself has been careful not to cultivate. But, she adds, she and her cleaning woman do all the rest of the housework.

"I wait on him, make a deliberate effort to provide him with a serene atmosphere," she declares. "Role definition contributes to a successful marriage. If you're just roommates quarreling over who's going to do what it's no good, but one of the greatest things about life nowadays is that people are not as intimidated by what's proper for each sex to do.

Raiders Find More Marijuana

Some years back photos showed up regularly in newspapers of fruit jars filled with bootleg liquor which police officers had confiscated.

Officers still come across bootleg, but now days, more often than not it is marijuana which is found on raids.

The illicit drug comes in varying assortments and officers are confiscating pipes and often find the rolled marijuana cigarettes.

The frequency with which marijuana raids are coming along is proof enough that there is a lot of the illegal drug in our area. It is obvious that its use is widespread and pushing it is very profitable; otherwise those who sell it would not take the chance. There are even reports of the weed found growing in secluded areas.

It all adds up to a major problem. Use of marijuana seems to flourish around military installations, beach areas and college communities.

Scientist still argue about the permanent effects of the drug on the human body, but the fact remains that it dulls the mind. Liquor, which is legal, does, too, but his does not alter the fact that our society now has one more agent which can dull Man's senses.

Use of marijuana is not going to go away and it is going to take vigilance on the part of law enforcement agencies and citizens to see that the supplies are choked off as much as possible at the source.

Now Partners In Technology

By BRYAN HAISLIP

RALEIGH — The campus and the corporate community are partners in higher education for a technological society.

The tax-supported university trains manpower and conducts research which benefits private industry. In turn, corporations contribute a margin of support to enhance academic programs.

The 30th anniversary of the partnership is being observed this year at North Carolina State University, a national leader in tapping corporate resources for educational purposes.

Since the creation of the N.C. Textile Foundation in 1942, the number of foundations giving support to NCSU has grown to nine. They have turned over to the institution, in that period of time, nearly $25 million for faculty salary supplements, scholarships, research projects, and other programs.

Allocations from the foundations for the coming fiscal year total $1¼ million, a record figure.

Small But Significant

Compared to the overall NCSU budget of $80 million, the participation by foundations may seem small, agreed Rudolph Pate, director of foundations and development.

"Actually, it is very significant," he added, "because it is used for things for which state funds are not available."

Chancellor John T. Caldwell said the foundation support, supplementing tax monies from the state and federal governments, makes possible "the margin for excellence."

Funds from the nine foundations currently provide 275 scholarships. There are 46 endowed professorships now filled, and half a dozen others for which occupants are being sought. In a number of instances, the foundations have given "seed money" to attract larger grants from national foundations or federal sources.

Practically all universities, public and private, use a similar approach in looking for corporate dollars.

NCSU Ranked 12th

The Council for Financial Aid to Education in New York ranked NCSU 12th in the nation among public institutions in the degree of private support it receives. Only the University of Texas system did better among tax-supported campuses in the South.

A reason for the success, Pate suggested, is the NCSU orientation to technology which gives it close ties with agriculture, business and industry. Corporate executives can see practical as well as altruistic reasons to make a contribution, he explained.

The alliance has advantages beyond money for the institution. It keeps the campus in touch with the real world, and develops friendships useful when the legislature is considering budgets.

Each foundation has a board of directors, drawn from the industry or profession directly concerned. For example, this spring committees representing some 400 business and professional leaders from across the state and nation came to the campus for a series of foundation meetings.

Friends And Lobbyists

The foundations themselves are tax-exempt, and barred from efforts to influence legislation. However, contacts with directors are fruitful when NCSU is lobbying for appropriations. Lawmakers are inclined to listen when a constituent also is an important corporate executive.

"Our friends in the foundations have been very helpful to us," Pate said.

Campus unrest and uncertain economic conditions have had a braking influence on corporate giving to higher education. Nationwide, there was a 9.3 per cent drop last year. At NCSU, the decline was less than half as much, only 4.3 per cent.

This year, Pate said, the expectation is that income will slightly exceed the 1971 total. The goal for the 70s, he added, is to double the total of the decade of the 60s.

The foundations, their presidents, and allocations for the coming year are:

Agricultural Foundation, State Rep. J. Worth Gentry of Stokes, $373,679.

Engineering Foundation, Oliver H. Rowe, Sr., Charlotte, $379,790.

Design Foundation, Nisbet P. Rodgers, Lexington, $22,104.

Dairy Foundation, Robert P. Davenport, Durham, $88,213.

4-H Development Fund, Norfleet L. Sugg, Pinetops, $110,000.

Textile Foundation, Marshall Cooper, Henderson, $148,500.

Pulp and Paper Foundation, Dr. Fred B. Schelhorn, Counce, Tenn, $100,212.

Forestry Foundation, Walton R. Smith, Franklin, $18,000.

The Furniture Foundation, headed by Henry Foscue of High Point, channels money through the Engineering Foundation for support of the Schools of Engineering and Physical and Mathematical Sciences.

Maybe Sportsmanship Not For Chessboard

Eccentricities we can understand.

We can also appreciate the antics of a Cassius Clay (Muhammed Ali), who is a whiz at stirring interest and gate receipts in boxing matches.

Bobby Fischer we do not understand.

At first his behavior was passed off by many as an attention-getting gimmick which could focus public attention on the chess board; maybe the game could become as profitable to the big-leaguers as basketball, football or baseball. (A glowing thought to devotees of the ancient game.)

But the Fischer attitude since the opening move of the world championship series does not reflect favorably, in our eyes, on him nor on the American standard of sportsmanship.

Maybe that is our error. Chess is not a sport. It is a war limited is scope by a board of 64 squares.

The Old Pros Outmaneuvered

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

MIAMI BEACH — So intense was the anger of anti-McGovern Democrats over Lawrence F. O'Brien's parliamentary rulings Sunday that within hours two Democratic governors — long-time O'Brien backers — actually planned to circulate a petition for his removal as Democratic national chairman and permanent convention chairman.

That quixotic attempt at vengeance was bound to fail, just as the impassioned effort to stop Sen. George McGovern was surely doomed. But the O'Brien rulings fit a pattern: McGovernites beating old politicians time and again at their own game, intensifying range and frustration of the party's old guard. As McGovern's nomination became more inevitable, it grew more inacceptable.

What magnified the McGovern tactical victory was partly its timeliness, choking off the stop-McGovern movement just when it envisioned a chance for success. But emotionally compounding the reaction was the feeling that old pro Larry O'Brien, the party's most widely respected leader, had gone over the New Politics enemy.

In fact, on Friday and Saturday, McGovern forces directed a well-orchestrated lobbying campaign at O'Brien and his parliamentarian, Rep. James O'Hara of Michigan — realizing the equivalent of nearly 200 delegates votes was at stake in these rulings.

Top McGovern campaign aides presented lengthy arguments. McGovern himself and a key adviser, Sen. Abraham Ribicoff of Connecticut visited O'Brien Saturday afternoon. President Leonard Woodcock of the United Auto Worders (UAW) pleaded McGovern's case to O'Hara, whose suburban Detroit area is filled with auto workers and whose own campaigns receive UAW largesse.

leaked rumors that if O'Brien ruled unfavorably he would not remain as national chairman and that if he ruled favorably he might be McGovern's vice president. But the far more compelling line to O'Brien was drummed home to him by McGovern operative Frank Mankiewicz that there would be "carnage" at Convention Hall if O'Brien's rulings resulted in McGovern losing the California credentials fight. rulings resulted in McGovern losing the California credentials fight.

When representatives of anti-McGovern Presidential candidates met with O'Hara Saturday, most assumed he would rule 1,509 delegates were necessary to seat McGovern's disputed 151 California delegates. When he ruled the next day that 1,433 were adequate, they were outraged — particularly Dr. Max Kampelman, Sen. Hubert Humphrey's long-time adviser.

Kampelman could not contain his ire in a Sunday afternoon meeting of candidates' aides with O'Hara. Kampelman raged that the rulings were "illegal, abhorrent, hostile, political acts." Thomas Finney, Washington super-lawyer running Sen. Edmund Muskie's campaign here, commented drily that the rulings represent just plain

Strength For Today

WHAT OF THE FUTURE?

When Samuel F.B. Morse, inventor of the telegraph, was a very elderly man a testimonial was held for him in New York City. The transatlantic cable had been laid and it was possible for New York to be connected with distant parts of the world.

When in the midst of this meeting the telegraph instrument installed on the stage began to click and messages rolled in from different parts of the world, people were almost as overwhelmed with wonder as if a divine apparition had suddenly appeared in the sky. In fact, many held that such momentous inventions were supernatural in character and depended upon powers above those of the physical world. What would these same people have said if a radio set could have been turned on that night and they had heard the words, "Come in, Tokyo?" Or what would they have thought of TV programs being transmitted by coaxial cable across the continent? Or, for that matter, what would they have thought of the idea of wireless telegraph and the broadcasting of images over long distance through the air?

What can we expect of tomorrow? We have no idea; but of one thing we can be sure—if the spiritual life of humanity does not keep pace with its scientific and mechanical development, the race is doomed.

Reunion Of '68 Veterans

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. — A group of veterans had a reunion here in Miami this week to celebrate the fourth anniversary of the Chicago Democratic war of 1968.

The veterans, many of whom brought their families, were a little older, a lot balder and many had a paunch. They ate too much, drank too much and told war stories about the great battles they had found in '68.

"Those were the days," one veteran said wistfully as he sipped a bourbon in the Boom Boom Room of the Fountainebleau Hotel. "I'll never forget trying to get back to my room at the Conrad Hilton. I was hit by four cops, maced by a state trooper and run over by a National Guard jeep."

Another veteran sitting next to him said, "Remember, Harry, when we tried to raise the American Flag in Grant Park and a squad of mounted policemen trampled us to the ground with their horses?"

"Do I remember?" Harry said. "You saved my life, Freddy. You threw yourself on a tear gas grenade."

Another veteran said, "Did I ever tell you what happened to me on Michigan Avenue? I was walking along the sidewalk and two motorcycle cops came zooming down on me.

"I jumped out of the way of one, got hit by the second, knocked into the street and then was thrown into a paddy wagon and charged with disturbing the peace."

Harry said, "They don't have Democratic conventions like that any more. The young kids just don't have the courage we did."

A veteran named Charley agreed. "All the kids want to do these days is nominate someone. They want the candidate handed to them on a silver platter. They don't know you have to fight for what you get in politics."

"You can say that again," Freeddy said. "Where would Hubert Humphrey be today if we hadn't fought for Chicago?"

"Or Ed Muskie?" someone else added.

"Chicago was the great one," Harry said. "It'll go down in history with Belleau Woods, and Midway and Iwo Jima. You know, I try to tell my kids wht it was like in Chicago in 1968, but they don't want to hear anything about it."

"Neither do my kids," a veteran said. "To them it's history. But if we hadn't taken Chicago there wouldn't be a Democratic Party today. A party united one for all and all for one.

Another veteran said, "I'd like to go back to Chicago some day with my family and

Other Editors Say Early Sales Helpful

(Durham Herald)

The limited early openings of tobacco markets on the Eastern, Middle and Old belts, final details of which will be worked out by the industry-wide Flue-Cured Tobacco Marketing Committee at its meeting Thursday, will mark a forward and needed step in the interest of farmers.

Under the plan approved by the committee June 30, limited openings on the Eastern Belt will occur two weeks after the opening of the southern belts—Georgia-Florida, South Carolina, and North Carolina Border Belts, all of which will open simultaneously with full buying strength.

Two weeks after the Eastern Belt's limited opening, sales will begin on some Middle and Old Belt markets.

Both the limited early openings on the Eastern, Middle and Old belts and the simultaneous opening at full buyer strength of the Border Belt with the Georgia-Florida and South Carolina belts recognize long-standing problems for North Carolina growers.

Simply, those on the Eastern, Middle and Old belts have had no nearly market for sale of early harvestings, and on the Border Belt lack of buying strength has been a source of continuing complaint.

The result has been a heavy flow of early tobacco to out-of-state markets to the South. Last year the total flow reached nearly 54 million pounds.

This year, under the new arrangements, it can be expected to be considerably less.

Also, it is likely that the limited early openings will reduce the belt-crossings to auction centers within the state.

The new system will be to the advantage not only of growers but also to warehousemen in auction centers where limited early sales are held and to the home economy.

Harvesting has been in progress for about two weeks in the Border Belt area, he reported, and is "pretty general now" in the Eastern Belt area.

Ordinarily, a good deal of that tobacco no doubt would have been marketed in other states. Now, fortunately, North Carolina markets have been placed in a better competitive position to bid for it.

For A Rainy Day

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — One of the problems of a mother is that on rainy days she has to think up something for the children to do to prevent them from going stir crazy.

One of the troubles with being a grownup is that when you feel you are going stir crazy on a rainy day your mother usually isn't around to tell you what to do.

And despite the opinion of self-centered youth to the contrary, it rains just as often when you are older as when you are young. Probably oftener, for some rain manages to fall every day.

So, if it should be raining wherever you are today and your imagination fails you, here are a few things you might consider doing just to pass the time until your weather is better:

Try to remember the names of the Bobbsey Twins, the Rover Boys and the Three Musketeers.

Go through your wallet and throw away the old losing lottery tickets and expired credit cards.

See how long your congressman will listen to you if you ring him on a collect call.

Pretend you live in Philadelphia, and that every day in your life is pretty much like this.

Trim a corn. If you don't have corns, ask a neighbor's wife if you can trim one of hers.

Read a copy of a recent Boy Scout handbook and see how much knots have changed since you used to tie them.

Bait a mousetrap. Now, lie down and see if you can steal

40 Years Ago Today

Cutting sharply into allotments of the various funds that go into the operaion of the county government, the Board of Commissioners yesterday adopted a tentative budget providing for a reduction of 10½ cents in the tax rate for 1932-33. The rate for the new year was set at 83½ cents on the $100 valuation as compared with 94 cents for the previous year.

Playing at the State Theatre Frday is "Thunder Below" starring Tallulah Bankhead. Admission is 10 and 25 cents.

A forest fire which had been raging with undiminished fury on valuable timber lands about three miles south of Greenville is practically controlled today and scores of men engaged in combating the flames are now using their efforts to prevent the fire from breaking out along new fronts.

The New Capitalists Now Saving

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — During the great economic expansion of the 1960s, millions of Americans for the first time bought stocks and mutual funds, and a good many thereby established themselves as capitalists.

Now in the '70s, many of these same people are reluctant to risk their fortunes. Rather than checking the prices of stocks each day they take out their bankbooks and smile at the big savings figures.

The odd turn of events could hardly have been forecast, and a good many economists and others continue to believe that Americans will desert their conservative ways and become more daring again.

So far, however, there is almost nothing to suggest that this will take place. Long lines of depositors are strung out before the tellers' cages while many a broker waits impatiently for the telephone to ring.

Mutual funds have been especially hard hit, with redemptions exceeding sales in most recent months. In the first quarter of the year, the liquidation rate was at an annual rate of close to $3 billion.

Not only have jobs been lost in this once explosive growth industry, but some funds have been forced to switch the noload status, which means they have dropped not only salesmen but sales charges as well.

Ironically, while many consumers apparently have the funds to risk, they desire instead to take the slower but safer route to wealth.

One explanation for the high savings rate—it has remained for many months close to 8 per cent of take-home pay compared with a more traditional 5.5 per cent—is said to be uncertainty or even fear.

The main ingredient of this disposition appears to have been the high level of inflation, which now seems to be abating from a 6 to 7 per cent rate in 1969 and 1970 to a more acceptable 3.5 to 4 per cent.

Curiously, many small investors originally entered the market because they believe stocks were a hedge against inflation. Stocks, they were told, floated on the wave of inflation while savings were swamped and diluted.

However, the constant reminder that the economy was out of balance, and dangerously so, seemingly convinced them that while a savings account would build slowly if at all, it was preferable to the risks of equities.

The shenanigans on Wall Street in recent years probably added to this conviction. Investors were made aware every day of the dangerous financial position and practices of their brokers.

Meanwhile, the Dow Jones Industrial Average remains stuck below 1,000 points, as it has been for six years, partly because the public remains, as they say, on the sidelines, leaving the professionals to play the game among themselves.

Gun Battles In Northern Ireland

READY ON THE FIRING LINE — Two British troopers take cover under an armored vehicle in the Catholic area of Belfast, Northern Ireland, Thursday. Three battalions of the troopers moved into the area after a raging gun battle with guerrillas of the Irish Republican Army. (AP Wirephoto)

By COLIN FROST
Associated Press Writer

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Gun battles raged in the Roman Catholic districts of Belfast early today as the British army abandoned its "low profile" and launched a major offensive against guerrillas of the Irish Republican Army.

Shooting erupted in all of Belfast's major Catholic strongholds after three battalions of troops invaded the IRA "no go" district of Andersonstown to quell gunmen who had poured intensive fire at an army command post for four days.

It was the first time the army had entered one of the districts taken over by the IRA. In the past such areas have been off limits to prevent a confrontation with the guerrillas holding sway there.

Protestant militants have been demanding for months that the army go into the no go areas and clean out the IRA. The invasion of Andersonstown will probably intensify the Protestants' demands that the army now go into the barricaded areas of Londonderry that are the most famous symbols of Catholic defiance, the Bogside and Greggan districts, or "Free Derry," as the IRA calls them.

Army headquarters said about 700 men remained in control of Andersonstown early today but said it did not know how long they would stay there.

Two British troops and three civilians were known killed in the fighting during the night, raising the death toll to at least 15 since Wednesday and to at least 431 in the three years of communal violence in Northern Ireland.

The invasion of Andersonstown was ordered by Britain's administrator for Northern Ireland, William Whitelaw, Army headquarters said. It marked a reversal, at least temporarily, of Whitelaw's policy of reducing military activity in an effort to wean away the grassroots Catholic support of the IRA.

The retaliation began shortly before midnight.

A sandbagged Army fortification on Lenadoon Avenue had been under heavy IRA attack with guns and bombs for five hours. At one stage a rocket was fired at the post but the missile missed and hit a neighboring house.

About 30 soldiers inside held out until some 1,800 men moved up in armored personnel carriers.

A soldier was killed and another wounded as the troops occupied the district, but otherwise the task force met little resistance. The army said the IRA was taken by surprise.

Andersonstown was quiet after the takeover, but violence immediately erupted in the Ardoyne, Falls Road, Ballymurphy, New Lodge and Divis precincts, and in the city center.

The army claimed to have hit 22 gunmen. Their condition was not known because the guerrillas carry away their casualties for burial or treatment.

U.S. Denounced By Jane Fonda

TOKYO (AP) — Actress Jane Fonda has gone on Radio Hanoi and denounced the U.S. bombing of dikes in North Vietnam, the Vietnam News Agency reported today.

The agency said the broadcast was directed to "all the U.S. servicemen involved" in raids against North Vietnam. Earlier, the agency reported that Miss Fonda had visited an area east of Hanoi where dikes had been damaged by U.S. planes.

Miss Fonda was quoted as saying "there are no military targets" in the area.

Teachers Added To Pace

Pace Academy head master Gene Baker said today that two new teachers have been added to the school's staff.

According to Baker, Mrs. Carol Whitaker, a graduate of East Carolina University, who has done post graduate work at the University of California, Santa Barbara, will be teaching first grade.

Mrs. Whitaker, a Goldsboro native, attended Greenville city schools and has taught in the Burlington, Santa Barbara, California, and Greenville School systems.

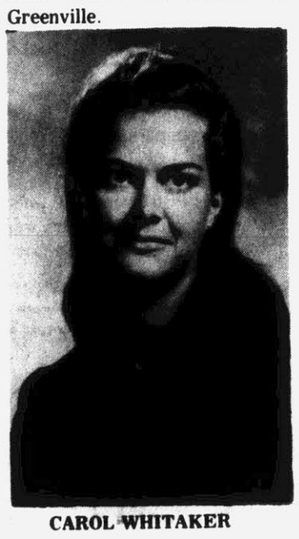

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. K.O. Radford of Greenville, she is married to Bruce Whitaker who is employed by the chemistry department at East Carolina University.

Miss Barbara Fussell, according to Baker, will be teaching eighth grade language arts — including English, spelling and history — in the seventh and eighth grades — at Pace.

Also on ECU graduate, Miss Fussell, Baker said, completed her student teaching at E.B. Aycock Junior High School in the eighth grade under Mrs. Patricia Sheppard, and has begun work toward her masters' degree.

Miss Fussell, for the past five years, has worked with the Greenville Recreation Department during the summer as playground instructor with preschoolers and junior high school girls.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Fussell of Greenville.

"stupidity" rather that Kampelman's enumerated sins.

That night over steaks at the Deauville Hotel, the ABM ("anybody but McGovern") coalition held its fourth Miami Beach meeting. All agreed the situation was desperate and required desperate action. Washington lawyer Stan Bregman, representing Humphrey, seriously proposed O'Brien's ouster. As for O'Hara, Bregman said, "We should call him a rapist" during a confrontation with him later that night.

Simultaneously, Democratic governors at a fund-raising party at the Playboy Plaza Hotel talked of an oust-O'Brien movement, bitterly complaining of betrayal. O'Brien, nominal host for the party, did not show up.

The anger peaked in a late evening meeting between O'Hara and all representatives of candidates at the Fontainebleau Hotel. Charles Snider, Gov. George Wallace's campaign manager, told an impassive O'Hara that "the Governor is extremely upset," adding: "If you think George Wallace travelled 100,000 miles and got shot to have this matter settled by three men in a smoke-filled room, you are crazy." Finally, Snider threatened the dreaded Wallaceite walkout: "We have no reason to waste our time here. We can go elsewhere."

At 10:50 p.m., O'Hara blandly blandly declared: "Thank you very much. I think I will go to bed now."

But it was not over. Snider planned to inform O'Hara that Wallace would plague him this fall in his district, overwhelmingly carried by Wallace in the Michigan primary. Plans were made to pressure the man on the hottest spot of all. "I know O'Brien better than most of you," Sen. Henry M. Jackson's Bill Brawley said at the Deauville meeting, "and I'll tell you this guy will be swayed under pressure."

But conviction was lacking that this would succeed no matter how inexorable the pressure on O'Brien. "This is a pretty late hour to get tough," commented Gerald Wallace, the Governor's blunt brother. As they had all year, McGovern's new politicans had outflanked, outmaneuvered and outfought the old guard, leaving it only with threats and recriminations that may persist into the autumn to George McGovern's and the Democratic party's distress.

"I'd like to visit State Street and show them where we were cut off for three days by Mayor Daley's fire trucks."

"I hear it's all built up and you can hardly see the war damage," Freddy said.

"There was a girl in Chicago I gave a candy bar and a pack of cigarettes to. I wonder whatever happened to her," Harry said.

A group of young people came into the Boom Boom Room handing out McGovern stickers.

"Look at them," a veteran said scornfully. "When we were their age we were attacking the stockyards with stones and sticks, and throwing our bodies across the highway, all for the Democratic Party. And what are they doing? Handing out stickers in the Boom Boom Room. What's happened to the moral fiber of the Democratic Party?"

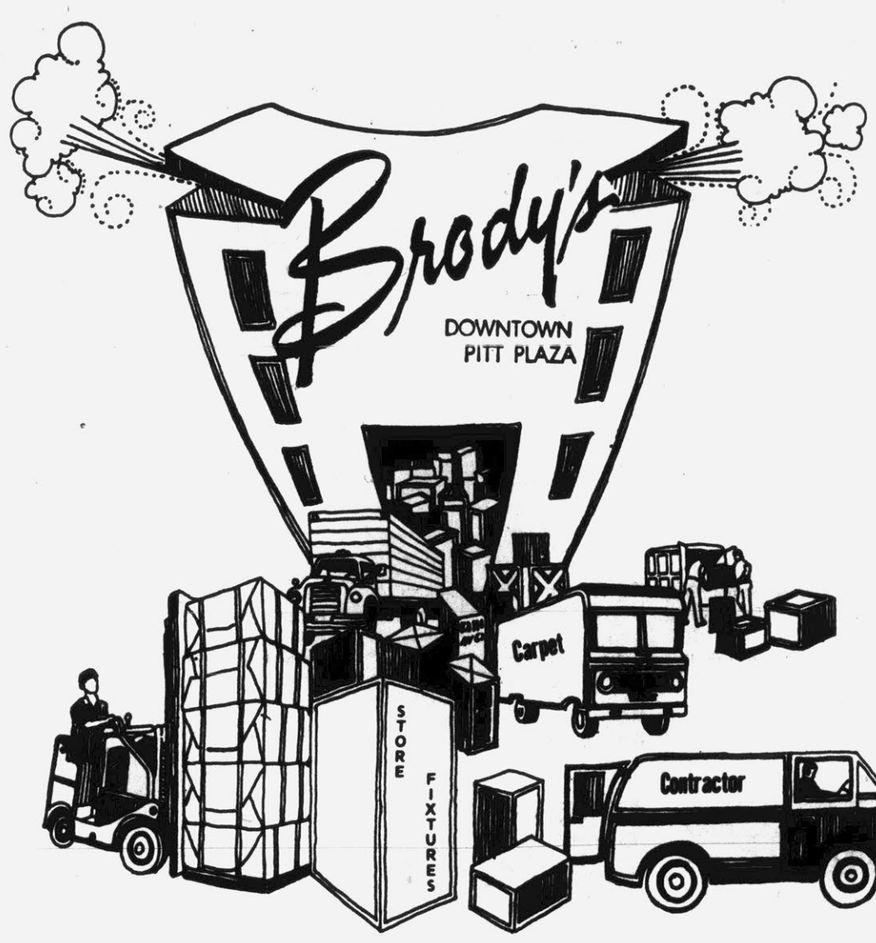

"It's gone," said Freddy, "all gone. That's what happens when you make young kids delegates to a national convention."

Eagleton Rose Fast In Career

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The selection of Thomas F. Eagleton as the Democratic vice presidential candidate climaxed a metecric rise in politics for the 42-year-old junior senator from Missouri.

At 27, Eagleton was elected St. Louis County circuit attorney; at 31, Missouri's attorney general; at 35, lieutenant governor; and at 38 Missourians sent him to the U.S. Senate.

Youthful in appearance, Eagleton sometimes has been called a Kennedy-type Democrat, but he dislikes being labeled either a conservative or a liberal. He says his views depend on the issue involved. Associates regard him as liberal on most matters.

He called in 1968 for an immediate cease-fire in Vietnam, and was an early advocate of stopping the bombing there.

Eagleton also tried to whittle down military spending and succeeded in knocking out the MBT70 tank as a wasteful expense.

He advocated wage and price controls to slow inflation. When President Nixon announced Phase I of his economic controls, Eagleton praised the action but told Missourians he hoped it wasn't "too little, too late."

Eagleton has worked on labor and consumer issues in the Senate. He got the Senate to adopt a clear labeling act. He sponsored an amendment, later adopted, that allowed use of federal funds to ease the financial strain on school districts caused by public housing projects.

As vice chairman of the Senate's air and water pollution subcommittee, he has counted environmental problems as one of his main concerns in recent months.

Eagleton was a principal sponsor of the Clean Air Act of 1970 and was an author of the Water Pollution Act of 1971, which is still pending in a conference committee.

As chairman of the Senate committee on the District of Columbia, he pushed through a consumer protection act and got the Senate to adopt a home rule bill for the district.

As lieutenant governor of Missouri, Eagleton presided over the state Senate with a flair. Quick-witted, he often broke tensions with a quip. He served as cochairman of the Governor's Conference on Education and was head of the Governor's Commission on Crime and Juvenile Delinquency.

At 15, Eagleton was the target of a kidnaping threat while his father was representing the Missouri Senate in an ouster case against a senator accused of soliciting a bribe.

He later became an honor graduate of Amherst College and Harvard Law School and attended Oxford University. He served two years in the Navy before opening law practice in St. Louis.

Eagleton is married to the former Barbara Smith, 36, a childhood playmate. They have two children, Terry, 12, and Christin, 8, who is called Christy.

Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine was Eagleton's first choice for the Democratic presidential nomination, but after Muskie withdrew, the Missourian joined the forces of Sen. George McGovern.

Annual Pageant Begins July 24

The 35th anniversary production of the Hill Cumorah Pageant set for July 24-29 in Palmyra, N.Y., has been announced by Greenville church spokesmen.

Elders Don Jackson and Les Camphuysen are on a two-year mission with the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

With more than 500 in the cast and some 50 technical assistants, the massive production portrays the rise and fall of an ancient American civilazation, culminating the appearance of Christ to his followers in the New World.

The performances start at 9 a.m. with no charge for seating or parking. Hill Cumorah is four miles south of the village of Palmyra, on State Route 21, two miles north of Interchange 43 on the New York State Thruway at Manchester.

No Hysteria Over Busing

RALEIGH (AP) — A North Carolina school official says the state has "moved beyond the hysteria over busing."

That comment came Thursday from Robert C. Strother, assistant state superintendent for public instruction.

"I haven't had a letter from a school child complaining about busing in over a year—and my office is the place where all those letters wind up," he said.

Strother said throughout the state, groups like Rights of White People who were actively fighting busing just a year ago have not been heard from in recent months.

"The term 'busing' throws up a red flag, but I think we're about over that now," he said.

In cities such as Raleigh and Charlotte where busing has been used extensively for desegregation, busing has gained a measure of toleration, if not acceptance.

An exception is the Winston-Salem-Forsyth schools, where the school board has filed a plea with the federal court to release it from a plan which requires long bus trips for some children. The board has asked a return to neighborhood schools for elementary grade children.

Winston-Salem-Forsyth Supt. Marvin Ward said there is "a strong feeling among people that we ought not to have to do this."

Locust Swarms Unexaggerated

CHICAGO (UPI)—Scientists now agree that ancient references to locust swarms "filling the skies" were not exaggerated. Swarms have been observed to cover 100 square miles while in flight, says Encyclopeadia Britannica.

It has been reliably reported that swarms of locusts which invaded Kenya in 1954 covered 500 square miles. Some flights in other areas have been estimated AT 2,000 square miles—a strip 20 miles wide and 100 miles long, says Britannica.

Child Drowns In Bathtub

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — A 15-month-old twin girl drowned in a bathtub Thursday after turning on the water while her mother was away momentarily.

Police Detective Sgt. Paul Draper said the mother, Mrs. James Terry, gave this account:

She had bathed the victim, Teresa, and her twin sister, and had let all the water out of the tub.

She took the other child out and dried her, and left Teresa in the empty tub while she went to the kitchen.

Moments later another child, a 4-year-old, ran to her and told her the water was running in the tub.

She went to the bathroom and found Teresa lying under water.

The father, who was at work in a textile mill, said the twins had learned to turn on the water faucet.

Toothless Britians

LONDON (UPI)—A third of all adults in England and Wales have no teeth of their own left, according to a report from the British Dental Health Foundation.

It said a quarter of today's five-year-olds probably will wear some kind of dentures by the time they are 20.

Miss Moore At Music Festival

CHAPEL HILL — Miss Elizabeth Lorraine Moore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William G. Moore of Greenville, is in Austria this week to participate in the International Youth Music Festival in Graz.

Miss Moore is a member of the Carolina Choir, composed of 80 students of the University of North Carolina, which has been invited to appear as the resident choir of the festival.

As resident choir, the singers will be the featured North American chorus on the Festival Finale program. The group will also present a seminar on the "Art of Choral Singing."

This is the first time a North American chorus has been asked to serve as resident choir.

In the invitation to the Carolina Choir, Dr. Allen W. Flock, North American director of the Graz Festival, said, "this invitation is the highest acknowledgement the Graz Festival can extend to any musical ensemble and reflects strongly the respect and esteem you and this choir have arned for you home state and university." The invitation was issued to Dr. Lara Hoggard, William Rand Kenan professor of music and director of the Carolina Choir.

After spending one week in Austria at the festival, the choir will travel to Yugoslavia where they plan to present a concert and to visit a number of cities in that country.

The remaining portion of the trip will be spent in Vienna, Austria, and the return trip to the United States will be made on July 23.

A total of 71 of the members are participating in the European tour.

A member of the choir for three years, Miss Moore graduated from UNC-CH in May with a B.S., degree in English. She plans to begin graduate work in library science at the university this year.

She is also a geaduate of Rose High School.

Costly Removal For Billboards

LANSING, Mich. (UPI — Because of the cost involved—an estimated $15 million —the job of removing 15,000 illegal billboards dotting Michigan highways will be spread over a five-year period.

The billboards became illegal when the legislature passed a stiff control law to qualify for federal funds. About 75 per cent of the cost of the removal will be for compensation of billboard owners whose signs are torn down.

UPTIGHT

The doctor tells you your blood pressure is up. Slow down, he says. Relax.

Let's face it. If you're "uptight" there ARE things to do about it. Follow your doctor's orders, yes. Take a deep breath, and look at the beauty of the world around you. Help other people with their problems.

But add one extra little prescription. Go to church. Just sit there and let God's peace engulf your anxiety.

Chances are that when you walk out the door something new will have been added to your dimension in living.

Nobody Wanted Confrontation

By TERRY RYAN
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — No one wanted another Chicago. It's almost as simple as that. So everyone gave a little—the protesters, the police, the city, the party and its candidate—and the streets were quiet during the Democratic National Convention.

Convinced that violence would damage their individual causes, these diverse forces worked together this week to produce peaceful protests far different from the turbulence that swept the streets of Chicago when the Democrats convened there four years ago.

The box score tells the story: Chicago: 680 arrested, 1,381 injured.

Miami Beach: 1 arrested, 4 injured.

The memories of Chicago in 1968, of riot sticks and blood and tear gas, were replaced this week by a motorcycle cop leading a protest march to Convention Hall with an antiwar button pinned to his chest. By the "Jesus Freaks" and ice cream vendors wandering through the crowd just after a small section of the fence around the hall was torn down, the destructive highpoint of the week. By the jam in front of Convention Hall when the Yippies and Zippies came from one direction, the Cuban anticommunists from another and the Gay activists from yet another. Demonstration marshals linked arms to keep everyone apart.

There was no violence, hardly a hint of destruction. Disruptions, but not disturbances. Tense moments, but not confrontations. And in the one moment when things might have taken a different turn, George McGovern took a chance.

Against the advice of the Secret Service, McGovern faced and pacified 300 chanting, shoving demonstrators in a hotel lobby just hours before he received the Democratic presidential nomination.

"I think the symbolism is more important than anything that happened," he said afterward. "We didn't want a repetition of Chicago in 1968."

When it was all over and done, police were congratulating protesters, protesters were thanking police, and Mayor Chuck Hall and Police Chief Rocky Pomerance had emerged almost as heroes of the counterculture generation.

City officials had prepared themselves for an influx of tens of thousands of so-called nondelegates, but at most only 3,000 gathered at any one time.

Several months ago, Hall began meeting with leaders of the groups that planned demonstrations during the convention. He also led the fight that opened a city park for camping during the convention.

Pomerance organized the 800-man security force that surrounded Convention Hall, but at the same time instructed his men not to hassle people in the park about smoking marijuana or skinny dipping in the pool.

"The police were just beautiful," said Fred Wanerstrand, a member of the Peoples Coalition for Peace and Justice. "There would have been a blood bath, our blood, if they wanted to do anything."

For the demonstrators, the Democratic convention was just a warm up, a dress rehearsal for the Republican National Convention six weeks from now in Miami Beach. They had a good thing going with the police and the city, and trouble would only spoil it.

"We showed the people of Miami Beach that we could conduct a nonviolent demonstration," said Zippie leader Dana Beal. "They did not believe us before, but I think we proved something to them. We got our message across without hurting anyone or trashing anything."

After the section of Convention Hall fence was torn down on the first night, protest planners organized a group of marshals to keep people in line. When demonstrators marched to the hall the next night, a line of people from the Vietnam Veterans Against the War separated them from the fence.

But perhaps more than anything else, it was the Democratic party that kept things quiet. Many people who were on the streets in Chicago were inside the convention this time

The Democratic party had opened its ranks to an unprecedented number of young people, blacks and women and was seriously considering stands on abortion, drug laws and the Vietnam War not all that different from the proposals backed by the people in the streets.

"There are times in history when revolutionaries must unite with the liberals," said antiwar activist Jerry Rubin. "This is one of those times."

Fischer Forfeits Game; Objects To 3 Cameras

By STEPHENS BORENING
Associated Press Writer

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (AP) — Bobby Fischer filed a protest Thursday night after the referee in the world chess championship ruled that he had forfeited the second game to Soviet titleholder Boris Spassky by not showing up.

Fischer stayed in his hotel room Thursday and refused to play unless three cameras filming the match for movie and television sales were removed from the hall. Since the American challenger lost the first game on Wednesday, referee Lothar Schmid's forfeit ruling gave Spassky a 2-0 lead.

Schmid said the third game of the 24-game match would be held on schedule Sunday, but the future of the match was very much in doubt.

Schmid said it depends on whether Fischer continues his boycott. He added that the World Chess Federation — FIDE — could step in at any time and disqualify him. But Dr. Max Euwe, president of the organization, said Schmid was still in charge of the match and must decide how to handle the American.

A spokesman for promoter Chester Fox, who bought the movie and TV rights for the match from the Icelandic Chess Federation, said the cameras had to stay because "the whole financial structure of the match depends on it." It was the prospect of movie and TV sales that allowed the Icelanders to offer a record $125,000 purse to the two players, and Fischer and Spassky are also to divide a share of the movie-TV money estimated at a minimum of $55,000.

Fox said Fischer admitted he couldn't hear or see the three cameras, but "he said they bothered him because he knew they were there."

Fischer had objected first to the cameras Wednesday night and left the chess board in the sports palace for half an hour before conceding defeat in the first match. Intense negotiations through the rest of the night and all day Thursday failed to coax him from his hotel room.

Spassky had arrived meanwhile at the sports palace and was seated behind the black figures before a crowd of about 1,000.

The white pieces, and with them the first move, were Fischer's as the loser of the first game. At 5 p.m., the scheduled starting, Schmid started the playing clock. When the hour time limit for the first move by Fischer passed, the referee declared a forfeit.

Spassky was given a standing ovation as he left the hall.

Jivo Nei, a Spassky assistant, called Fischer's refusal to appear "a grave insult not only to the Soviet people but to the whole world."

Opening lead: Three of ♠

An inspired shift by East early in the play led to a spectacular upset of South's three no trump contract. Altho the latter held only 17 high cards points, we are inclined to favor his jump rebid of two no trump even tho he is technically two points shy of the requirements. The good six card suit provides adequate compensation and his holding in the major suits suggests the desirability of having his hand led up to. North had more than enough to carry on to three no trump.

West opened the three of spades, North played the four, East put up the nine and declarer won the trick with the queen. A small diamond was led to the queen. A club was returned and South covered East's eight with the jack, which held the trick as West played the deuce.

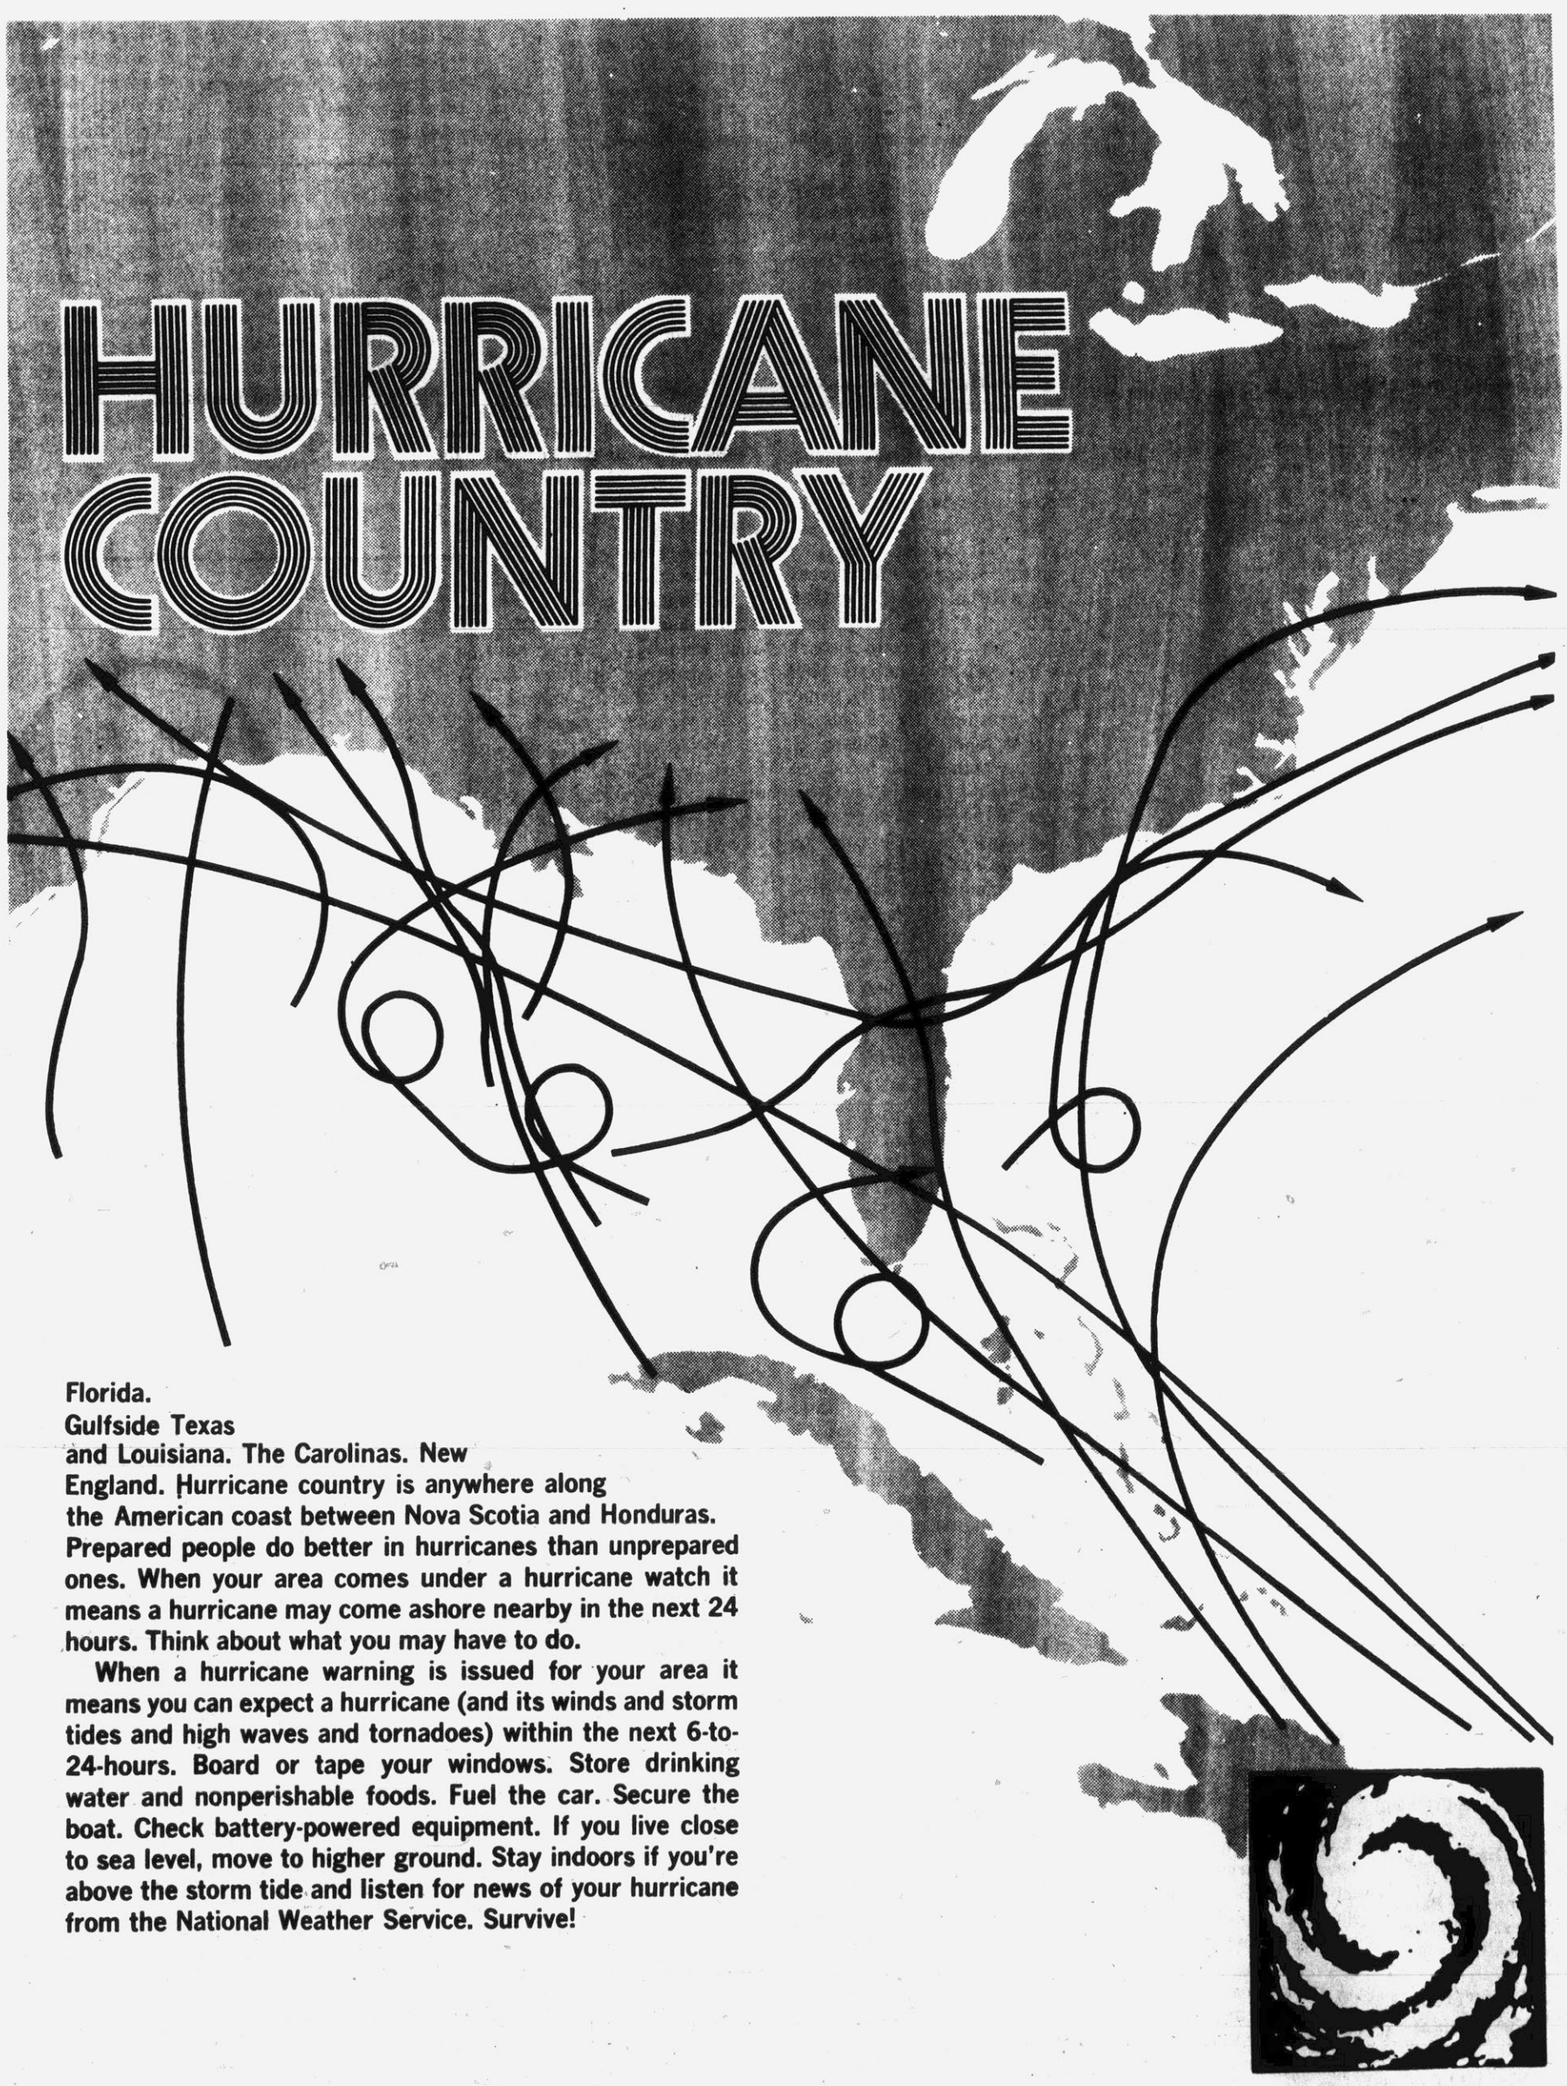

Declarer continued with the king of clubs and East was in with the ace. The latter paused to assess the situation before continuing. It appeared from his opponent's plays that the latter held a long club suit. West had followed suit to clubs with the deuce and then the four which shows an odd number of cards. If he has three, which appears probable, then South is marked with a six card suit and another club lead by declarer will establish three more tricks in the suit for him.

East realized that time was of the essence for the defense if he expected to launch a successful counter-offensive. The spade suit offered no hope because even if West had underled a holding headed by the ace-king, North's jack guaranteed that South had a second stopper in the suit.

The only chance to defeat the contract then was to take heart tricks. East accordingly shifted to the deuce of hearts. South played the king in the hope that his opponent had underled the ace. West, however, produced that card and continued with the jack which was ducked. North won the continuation with the queen and the closed hand was entered with the ace of diamonds to lead the ten of clubs.

East was in with the queen and he cashed the ten of hearts to score the setting trick. In all the defense took three hearts and two clubs. Without East's heart shift at trick five, South has time to develop four clubs which along with three diamonds and two spades will give him nine tricks on the deal.

A 19-year-old East Carolina University co-ed was injured yesterday when her car rolled backward, knocking her to the pavement and pinning her under the right rear wheel of the vehicle.

Officers said Miss Camel's vehicle apparently stalled as the vehicle entered the parking lot. Miss Camel got out, attempted to push the car into a parking space, couldn't hold the car and it rolled backward over her.

City Council . .

Wheless and Moore property in the southwest quadrant of Ninth and Cotanche Streets. In the absence of firm determination of whether the property had been property advertised, council members approved rezoning from office and institutional to downtown commercial. If it develops, after a check into the matter, that the required advertisement has not be made, then this will be taken care of and an additional public hearing held at the August 10 meeting.

Another point of uncertainty developed in discussion concerning an error in advertising for the Greenville Board of Afjustments concerning a convenience marker at 810 East Tenth Street. The error resulted in labeling the area as commercial downtown fringe (CDF) when actually it should have been advertised as office and institutional. It was pointed out the Board of Adjustments approved and acted in good faith based on the belief they were dealing with granting a special use for an office and institutional zoned area.

Mayor S. Eugene West recommended that City Attorney David Reid, on his return from the Democratic Convention in Miami, be put to work on determining legal points involved.

A motion by William Dansey that the building permit be granted passed on the basis of Dansey's and Clarence Gray's aye votes and abstaining by other members of the council.

Two requests for mobile home permits were approved. That of Joe Pecheles for a mobile home to be used as a trailer on Evans Street extended carried a stipulation by Cox that the permit be good only until such time as the permanent building, now under construction, is completed. The request by Marvin Lee Cox for placing a mobile home at 918 Legion Street was granted on the usual one year basis. In addition, a non-scheduled request by Herbert Atkinson to place a mobile home at 1300 Ward Street was approved on a one year basis. Approval was given as an emergency, which precludes a public hearing.

An agreement between the Greenville Utilities Commission and the Seaboard Coast Line Railroad Company for the commission's placement of a sewer line under the railroad's right of way, received council approval.

Other actions taken at Thursday night's meeting included approval of an amendment to the budget ordinance for fiscal year 1971-72; setting a public hearing for the August meeting on proposed amendments to Zoning Ordinance No. 322; approval of a request for a refund for a cemetery lot; refund of a privilege license in the amount of $50 requested by J.C. Penney Company; and approval of taxi franchise No. 21 to Rev. Stephen Jones.

Punishment For Inmates

JACKSON, N.C. (AP) — Twenty-five inmates of the tight security Odom Prison have been placed in segregation as punishment for refusing to work.

Asst. Prison Supt. Donald E. Batton said Thursday the 22 heeded a call by the Rev. Leon White, director of the North Carolina-Virginia Commission for Racial Justice for a work stoppage beginning July 5th.

Batton said the 22 blacks remained in their quarters on the morning of July 5 when work call sounded.

When they persisted in their refusal to work, Batton said they were sentenced to 15 days segregation.

Batton said the 22 would spend the 15 days in their cells where they get a shave and a bath twice a week. They receive the same food as other prison inmates.

The prison official said the 22 had demanded pay for their work under an incentive pay plan authorized by the General Assembly which has never been put into effect.

He said he did not know whether the prisoners would persist in their strike after the 15 days is up.

"After they come out," he said, "I'll give them another opportunity to work. If they don't we'll write another report on them."

Dr. Aldridge To Be Moderator

Dr. M.W. Aldridge of Greenville will serve as moderator of a July 24 session of a three-day meeting of the American Society of Preventive Dentistry in Chicago.

He will attend the meeting to be held from July 23-26, as a representative of the North Carolina Society of Preventive Dentistry, which he serves as president.

Several Appointments Made By City Council

Several appointments to various city boards were made at the Thursday night meeting of the Greenville City Council.

J. Edmund Waldrop Sr. was appointed to the Greenville City School board to fill the unexpired term of Dr. E.B. Aycock. The term ends June 30, 1973. Waldrop was elected from a slate of two candidates offered. The second was Mrs. Liz (Jack) Wilkerson.

The two new members, Patrick J. Dayson and William Whitehurst were appointed for three year terms on the Board of Adjustments. Dayson and Whitehurst replaces James Harris Jr. and Fred Mattox on this board. Mattox had completed two terms, and Harris had asked not to be considered for reappointment. No action was taken on reappointing a third member, Lloyd Mills, up for reelection. This will be taken up at the August meeting.

For the Planning and Zoning Commission, Roger M. Collins, Jr. and Ernest R. (Pete) Carraway were named as new members to replace H.T. Chapin Jr. and Clarence Tugwell, who have both served two terms.

Two Recreation Commission members, Sidney Carraway and Mrs. Louis Gaylord, Jr. were reappointed for three year terms to the commission.

James T. Little Jr. was appointed for a four year term to the Airport Authority to replace R.W. Howard, who has completed two terms.

Two men, Sam Pollard and Joseph B. Keel were reappointed to the Plumbing Examining Board, with City Councilman William Dansey appointed as the City Council's representative to the board.

At the beginning of the slate of nominations, Councilman Clarence Gray asked that action be deferred on appointments until a full council was present. At the time of his request, only Mayor S. Eugene West, Councilman Gray, and Councilmen Percy Cox and Dr. Frank Fuller were present. (Councilman John Taylor is in Miami at the Democratic convention.) Councilman William Dansey and Councilwoman Mrs. Mildred McGrath had not arrived for the meeting.

Action on appointing Dayson and Whitehurst was completed and a vote was being taken on the nomination of Collins when Dansey and Mrs. McGrath arrived.

When nominations and elections for the various appointments had been approved, Dansey asked "to go on record" protesting "what I feel was ulterior motives" for not waiting a few minutes to take action. "I feel that all council members ought to be here on appointments," he stated.

Mrs. McGrath stated "I explained ahead of time to the mayor that I would unavoidably be a few minutes late as I had a previously scheduled talk to a woman's group on planning and zoning."

Mayor West replied: "These things work two ways. Maybe you'll be on time for the next meeting."

Pirates Rally To Nip Wilmington, 3-2

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

The other night, Bill Godwin worked hard, wondering if Appalachian was going to get a hit off him. They finally did, late in the game.

Last night, he worked hard again, but this time, he was wondering whether his Pirates were going to score some runs for him. They finally did, late in the game.

And thanks to an error on a dribbler back to the mound, Godwin kept alive the Pirate record to 14-7 for the season and moved them back into no worse than a tie for first place in the N.C. Summer Collegiate League with the University's Chapel branch.

Godwin, who got rocked for a homer on the second pitch of the game, settled down after the first inning, when Wilmington also got its other run, and scattered four hits the rest of the way. The Seahawks only threatened four more times in the demaining eight innings.

Bruce Cavenaugh, who seems to have a liking for Godwin pitches was the one who connected for the roundtripper. Godwin's second throw hung up there, and Cavenaugh lofted it into the pines in left field, putting Wilmington into a 1-0 lead.

Godwin, apparently somewhat shaken by the blow; walked the next batter Howie Edgerton. Bill Hutchinson followed with a double down the left field line, moving Edgerton into third base. Dave Sandlin then lifted a pop-up to center, with Edgerton scoring after the catch with the second Wilmington run.

And for a long time, it looked like it might be enough.

The 'Hawks tried to add to their total. In the third, with one down, Sandlin and Greg Dalton both singled, but two more quick outs left them stranded.

In the fourth, Cavenaugh walked and stole second. He moved on to third when the ball bounced into center, but with two down, he got no further. The next threat came in the seventh. Robert Becher led off with a slow-roller through the middle, beating it out. He was sacrificed to second and took third on the second out of the inning, but that was it.

The final threat came in the eighth. Sandlin opened with a single and was sacrificed to second, but died there.

East Carolina didn't get a hit off Becher until the fourth inning when Jimmy Paige beat out a drag bunt to third. Ralph Lamm followed with a hit to deep short, but a double play killed the Buc hopes for a rally.

In the fifth, the Pirates got another chance. With two down, Ron Leggett singled and moved up on a wild pitch. Godwin drew a walk, but a fly-out ended that opportunity.

Then, in the eighth inning, the Bucs finally put it all together. Leggett led off with a single and Godwin sacrificed him up. Mike Bradshaw followed with a single to center and Paige cracked out another hit, scoring Leggett and moving Bradshaw to third. Paige got away from a force situation by stealing second, and Lamm hit a sacrifice fly to score Bradshaw and tie it up.

The winning run, however, had to wait until the ninth to come across the plate. With two away, Leggett got a pitch bounced off his elbow. He stole second to be ready for a single, but Godwin's bouncer back to the mound appeared to end the inning. But reliever Barnes Yelverton was over anxious to make the throw and the ball went right by him and by the time it was recovered, Godwin had chugged into first and Leggett was safe on third.

Bradshaw followed that up with a soft single into center, and it was all over as Leggett crossed the plate.

The Pirates turn their attention to their next game tonight, as they play host to Campbell College at 7:30 p.m. at Harrington Field. Saturday, they play Louisburg in Roanoke Rapids.

Black Jack Assures Tie For Championship

Black Jack assured itself of at least a tie for the National Division of the Church Softball League title with a 23-0 victory over St. Gabriel last night. In the other games, Immanuel Baptist split a pair, beating Trinity, 7-4, and then falling to St. James, 9-2.

Black Jack, is now 14-3, with one game left to play. Grace, the only team that can tie them is 14-4, and finished. Black Jack meets third place Oakmont tonight and a Black Jack win would cinch the title. A loss would mean a playoff game between Black Jack and Grace, tentatively set for Saturday night.

In the opening game, Immanuel pushed over three runs in the first inning, while Trinity came back with two in the bottom of the frame. Immanuel scored one in the third to take a 4-2 lead.

Then, in the fourth, Immanuel pushed over three more to clinch the victory. J. Smith singled and W. Dean got a double. S. Carraway singled and hits by C. Camps and L. Cattlett brought Carraway over with the final run, making it 7-2.

Trinity tried to rally in the sixth, but came up with only two runs.

Black Jack pushed over a run in the first inning to account for all they would need. But 10 in the second really slammed the door on St. Gabriel.

P. Smith led off with a triple and B. Elks singled. R. McCarter got a hit and G. Holland doubled. H. Hardee also doubled and S. Peele singled. R. Dixon and J. Mills each doubeld and T. Adams tripled. Smith, back up again singled and scored on Elks' double to finish off the scoring for the inning.

Black Jack then added one in the third, nine in the fourth, and one each in the fifth and sixth.

In the final game of the night, Immanuel pushed over a run in the top of the first, but fell behind on two by St. James in the bottom of the inning. St. James added another in the third, then came up with four in the fourth to lock it up.

E. Mann singled and B. Potter doubled. B. Shaw singled and J. Ritch got a hit. T. Babb also singled, but both he and Ritch went down on the play. J. J. Harris then tripled and scored on D. Cook's hit to close the frame's scoring.

St. James added another in the fifth on Potter's homer, then got two more in the sixth. Immanuel's other run came in the fourth.

Greenville and Williamston played scoreless ball until the fifth inning when Greenville finally broke the ice with two runs.

Over half the towns in the United States are forced to dump their wastewater in our rivers. The reason is sad.

Money. Literally over half our towns haven't got enough money to build complete wastewater treatment plants.

And many towns that have complete plants aren't cleaning the water thoroughly because the towns have outgrown the plants. And they can't afford to expand.

So, because of money, towns are forced into polluting our streams and rivers.

Union Carbide has discovered a new wastewater system that costs less. It's called the Unox System. It's the first substantial change in wastewater treatment in thirty years.

Instead of the conventional aeration system that cleans water by mixing it with the air, Unox forces pure oxygen into a series of closed treatment tanks. This forced oxygen technique cleans wastewater in less time, less space and reduces the total cost up to forty percent.

It means a town can boost its wastewater system by simply adapting the Unox System to the existing system. And towns with limited means can now afford a complete system.

A number of cities and industries throughout the country have already chosen the Unox System. And more installations are being planned.

We've discovered a cheaper way to treat wastewater because our streams and rivers can't afford to wait.

Trevino Pulls Into Lead Share

By RONALD THOMSON
Associated Press Writer

MUIRFIELD, Scotland (AP) — Wise-cracking Lee Trevino, sharing the lead after two rounds in his defense of the British Open Golf Championship, said today, "I'm not too happy, I like to be way out in front."

Trevino, revelling in his role as the self-styled Super-Mex of golf, had a 36-hole total of 141 along with Britain's breezy young Tony Jacklin.

Both Trevino and Jacklin were one under par. Breathing down their necks only one stroke back were such golfing heavyweights as Jack Nicklaus, the standout favorite, veteran Doug Sanders, South Africa's always-hungry Gary Player and Johnny Miller, a promising 25-year-old American pro who set a course record of 66 in the second round.

Also on 142, level par over Muirfield's 6,892-yard links, were three young Englishmen—Peter Tupling, John Garner and Peter Townsend.

After shooting a one-under-par 70 in his second round, Trevino said, "The sunshine caught everyone by surprise. Every guy thought that every other guy was burning up the course. But none of them was prepared for these conditions—they all had been thinking how to play the links in wind and rain."

Lee issued this warning to the rest of the field, cut from 153 starters to the 88 best scorers for the last two rounds:

"No matter what the weather does, the scores won't get much lower because we're all getting closer to that trophy.

"Nerves play a big part in how it all works out."

Trevino announced he was using a 40-year-old ladies' wedge that he picked up in an American golf shop's bargain barrel for something like $4.

"It's ideal for pitching out of these deep bunkers and hard fairways," he said. "But I'd never use it in American conditions."

Nicklaus gunning for the British Open crown to complete the third leg of never-accomplished professional Grand Slam—all four major titles in a single year—said, "I'm not playing as well as I can and I feel a bit frustrated.

"But I have the notion there's some good golf ahead of me."

Sanders, who led up to the 18th in his second round, took a horrendous triple bogey 7 at the home hole but declared cheerfully afterwards, "You've got to take the bitter with the sweet.

"I'm not in bad shape. I just went to sleep out there.

"And in British championships if you snooze you lose."

Colts Have New Set Of Owners

By GORDON BEARD
Associated Press Sports Writer

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Baltimore Colts, a team with pressing problems despite having the best record in the National Football League during the past 14 years, has new ownership.

Carroll Rosenbloom, handpicked to revive the Colts in 1953 after a previous franchise collapse, is gone and has been replaced by Robert J. Irsay.

Completing an unusual swap of franchises Thursday, Rosenbloom became 100 per cent owner of the Los Angeles Rams and Irsay the majority owner of the Colts.

Irsay, president of a heating and air conditioning contract firm in Skokie, Ill., currently holds 51 per cent of the Baltimore stock, but the minority ownership apparently is still in doubt.

At a news conference Thursday, Irsay referred to Willard "Bud"' Keland of Racine, Wis., as his partner, but confirmed that the final deal is in a state of flux.

The two reportedly wanted to be 50-50 owners when $5 million was deposited with the executors of the estate of Dan Reeves to buy the Rams.

But NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle frowned on such a split, requiring a majority stockholder.

Whatever the final breakdown of the stock, Irsay has taken over as operating manager of the Colts, who have an imposing 131-54-5 record in the 14 seasons starting with 1958.

Despite the record, Rosenbloom and the fans have been at odds for several years.

The man selected by the late commissioner Bert Bell to head the Colts' revival, was upset about the failure of the fans to support preseason games and chided the city government for not improving Memorial Stadium.

When Rosenbloom hinted he would like to move the team, and then scheduled training camp and three preseason games in Tampa, Fla., city and state officials moved to study the feasibility of a new stadium.

Irsay was confronted with all the problems at his news conference, and he met them head-on.

He said flatly that the team would stay in Baltimore, that he acquired the Colts without any prior agreement on a new playing site, and that he would like to try again with preseason games at home.

Joe Thomas, a defensive line coach with the Colts in 1954, is the club's new general manager. Thomas was credited with building two expansion teams into contenders as personnel director at Minnesota and Miami.

Thrift Is N.C. Coach

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Roger Thrift, athletic director and coach at New Bern High School, will be head coach of the North Carolina team in the Dec. 2 Shrine Bowl football game at Charlotte.

He will be assisted by Ed Emory of Brevard and Don Hipps of East Mecklenburg in the Shrine charity game for the benefit of the crippled children's hospital at Greenville, S.C.

Thrift, a Carrboro native, was a quarterback at East Carolina. He coached at high school teams at Murfreesboro, Williamston and Sanford and and was an assistant at Davidson College before going to New Bern in 1965. He added basketball coaching duties nine years ago.

The South Carolina staff, announced previously, is headed by James "Buddy" Neely of Marion High School. He will be assisted by Jim Satterfield of Irmo and James M. Wallace of York.

South Carolina leads 16-15 with four ties in the series between senior high school players of the Carolinas.

N.C. Gave Eagleton 42 Votes

By WILLIAM L. CHAZE
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — North Carolina delegates gave 42 of their 64 Democratic National Convention votes to Sen. Thomas Eagleton, Sen. George McGovern's pick for the vice presidential nomination.

The remainder of the votes were scattered among nine persons.

Former North Carolina Gov. Terry Sanford received one, Alabama Gov. George Wallace one, Rep. Wilbur Mills of Arkansas one, gubernatorial nominee Hargrove Bowles one, lieutenant gubernatorial nominee Jim Hunt one, senatorial nominee Nick Galifianakis one.

Lt. Gov. Pat Taylor received two, Endicott Peabody won two and Mrs. Frances Farenthold of Texas got the remaining 12.

Gov. Bob Scott says he must consult with Bowles and Galifianakis before deciding to what extent he will support the national ticket.

"It may be that they will want me to serve like a lightning rod on this and draw what fire there is—remove whatever pressure I can," said Scott in an interview on the floor of the convention.

Scott said the party will have a hard time carrying the state for McGovern and his running mate, Eagleton of Missouri. Scott had said earlier that McGovern was his last choice for the nomination because of positions Scott feels are too liberal for North Carolina.

"I support the whole ticket," said Scott, but added: "Just how much I put into it depends upon what the candidates back home want me to do. I plan to talk it over with them. They may want me to stay out of the picture altogether."

"It is going to be awfully tough for them to carry North Carolina," said Scott. "We are going to have to get in there and work for them."

The governor said that Eagleton on the ticket "neither helps nor hurts McGovern in North Carolina.

"Our folks really don't know the man. They don't know what he stands for. But I respect the nominee's choice."

State party chairman John Church concurred with Scott.

"I wish I could say that I'm sure that McGovern and Eagleton could carry North Carolina," said Church. "But I can't. It will be a hard job. A very hard job."

Church said the party would make a major effort in North Carolina to unify Democrats behind the ticket.

Father Visited By Lt. Calley

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Lt. William L. Calley Jr. has visited his ailing father at the Veterans Administration Hospital here.

Calley, 29, who is being held in his Ft. Benning, Ga., apartment during the appeals process for his conviction of murdering 22 civilians at My Lai, was taken from the airport to the hospital Thursday in an unmarked police car.

Calley, accompanied by two men — one in uniform — was met at the hospital by his sister, Mrs. James E. Keesling, who greeted him with a kiss on the cheek.

A hospital spokesman said William L. Calley Sr. is in a coma. He declined to disclose the ailment.

New Hanoi Missile Has Generated New Concern

By RICHARD PYLE

SAIGON (AP) — Hanoi's introduction of a heat-seeking Soviet antiaircraft missile into the Vietnam war is generating considerable concern among U.S. and South Vietnamese commanders and has brought about some drastic changes in their fliers' tactics.

The weapon is the SA7, or "Strela" — a Soviet missile which the North Vietnamese fire from the shoulder like a bazooka. It is much like the U.S. Redeye missile.

The Strela is equipped with an infrared homing device that is attracted to the heat given off by an aircraft engine and carries a high-explosive warhead. It has proved very effective, especially against the comparatively slow helicopters and propeller planes, officers say.

Some officers consider it the most effective of the several weapons used for the first time by the North Vietnamese in the current offensive — the others include long-range artillery, medium tanks and wire-guided missiles.

Military sources estimate that more than a dozen U.S. aircraft and at least that many South Vietnamese helicopters and planes have been downed by Strela missiles since they appeared on the battlefield in early May.

The only Americans known to have survived being hit by one of the missiles were two Army pilots whose helicopter gunship crash landed in some trees after a missile blew off its tail boom near An Loc.

The Strela has been used most often around An Loc and along Highway 13. It was so effective there that midway through the siege of the provincial capital, U.S. helicopters quit flying in the area, and spotter planes were forced to operate at 10,000 feet, above the estimated 8,000-foot range of the missile.

Among the tactics devised by pilots is low-level flying which often enables a helicopter to fly through a danger zone before the enemy can bring the weapon to bear. Another, used with middling success, is cutting power and allowing the helicopter to "autorotate" toward the ground; the sudden drop causes the missile to zoom past harmlessly.

...in the photograph to the left, James Williams (center holding bag) unloads a bag of cucumbers on the conveyor belt that leads to a machine that sorts and grades the cucumbers.

In the photograph above, North Pitt High student Wayne Pearce transfers weighed cucumbers to a large box which will be loaded on a truck. The weighing stations provide part time jobs for high school and university students.

Cucumbers, A Major Pitt County Cash Crop

The astonishing figure is more than 59 million pounds for Pitt County. That is the poundage in cucumbers harvested from over 5,500 acres of the ground hugging vegetable in the county last year. That figure also spells out something like 100 million plus pickles.

"This year's crops will probably not be quite so good," Associate Agriculture Extension Agent Henry Riddick explained, "because of the cool spring weather. However," he added, "it promises to be a fairly good season despite the slow beginning."

Riddick, who specializes in horticulture crops in Pitt County, explained that "a good cucumber farmer can realize a top gross return of $1200 to 1300 per acre. Last year's crop, which amounted to 1,237,500 bushels, realized a return of $2,350,000 for Pitt farmers."

Cucumber growing for commercial use has a history of about 40 years in Pitt County. It is one of the answers to the need for farmers to diversify, to branch out from concentration on tobacco and peanuts as major cash income crops.

"Most of the cucumbers grown in Pitt County are used for pickles," Riddick said. "And about 65 to 70 percent of all grown are shipped out of state for processing."

Some of the biggest buyers from this area are Lutz-Schramm with a plant in Ayden; Heinz Foods, American-Pack, Aunt Jane (a subsidiary of Borden Foods), and Vlasic.

However, as Paul Cullifer of Bethel points out, "cucumbers did not become a major crop here until the late 50s." Cullifer, an independent buyer and perhaps the largest buyer in the county with an annual purchase volume of around 60,000 to 70,000 bushels, says "Mr. Herman Tucker of Simpson is very likely the real pioneer in cucumber raising in this county. He became active back in the early 30s, I believe about 1933."

Cullifer, who has 200 acres of his own under cultivation, is the designer and builder of the first riding harvester of the type still commonly used. "I have a patent on it," he explained, "but I'm basically not interested in manufacture of machines, the pickle business itself is my love, the thing I'm fond of." The Bethel grower has branched out to the use of mechanical combine harvesters. "With these," he said, "picking is a one time process, you get everything at one time, from pencil size on up."

Most farmers still rely on the riding harvester which can seat six, eight or 16 pickers, depending on the design of the riding harvester. Daryl Williams of near Greenville, for example, who this year planted eight acres, uses the eight picker type frame, pulled by a tractor that has been modified by mounting a five horsepower motor on the front of the tractor.

"This arrangement," buyer Billy Flemeing explained, "permits the tractor to move very slowly, giving pickers time to pick efficiently. Farmers who use this method harvest several times in continuous cycles during the five to six week harvest season which generally runs from the first or second week of June until about the end of the second week in July.

Billy Forbes and Billy Fleming, partners in the buying station at Staton House, say they are perhaps typical of the approximately 35 buyers scattered throughout the county.

"We buy about 50,000 pounds a day, or on the average of 25,000 to 30,000 bushels per season," Forbes commented. "We sell all our purchases to Aunt Jane."

Fleming added that their arrangement in furnishing farmers the converted tractors for harvesting is an arrangement used by many of the local buyers. "We provide a farmer the use of a tractor and harvesting frame on the condition he will grow a minimum of four acres and contract to sell to us."

Even though the cucumber harvest season peak coincides with the tobacco harvest, most farmers find they can work the two together. "And cucumber raising yields good returns," Forbes said, "provided a farmer will use good seed, fertilizer and proper cultivation methods. Most any farmer can gross $800 to $1,000 per acre with the proper care."

Prices paid for cucumbers are pretty much standard in this area. Top grades 1A and 1B, small, select firm cucumbers, ideal for pickling whole, bring eight cents per pound. The second grades, 2A and 2B are somewhat larger but still suitable for certain type pickles and are worth three and one-half cents per pound. Grades 3A and 3B, the largest size usable for food purposes—sliced pickles, relishes, etc., round out the grading system and bring the farmer two cents a pound.

At the buying station, cucumbers are unloaded on a conveyer belt which sorts cucumber out by sizes, depositing them into baskets. Each grade is then weighed, grade and weight tickets filled out and for the farmer the transaction ends with payment for the harvest he has brought in.

For the buyer, a few steps still remain. The weighed cucumbers are transferred from baskets to large square boxes which are loaded—in 250 bushel loads—to be taken to a hydroplant in the area for initial processing before being shipped on to a pickling plant.

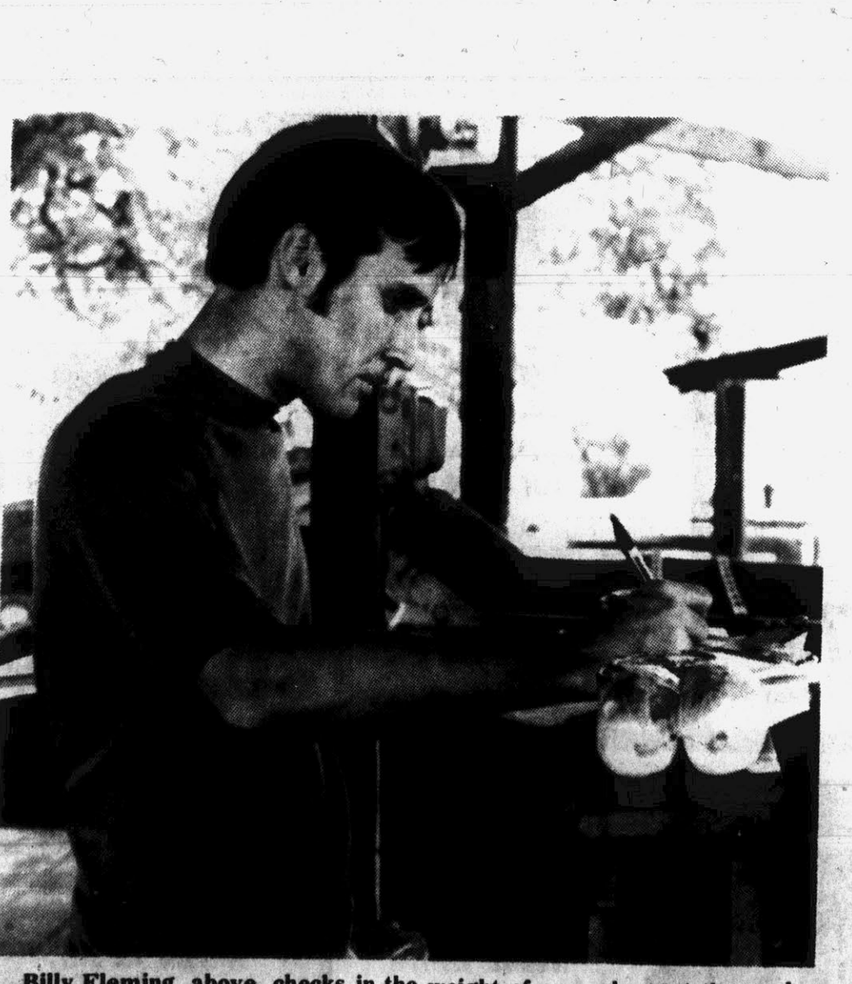

Farmers, buyers and agriculture experts all agree that having a relatively new cash income crop in the county is a real benefit to the economy of the entire area. And as long as Americans remain a pickle-eating public, chances are good Pitt County's cucumber crop will gain in importance each year.

Text and Photographs By Jerry Raynor

Within the past dozen years, cucumbers have become a significant source of income for hundreds of Pitt County farmers. In 1971, Pitt farmers harvested 1,237,500 bushels from 5,500 acres — 5,000 acres planted in the spring and 500 acres in the fall.

The year's harvest realized a gross income of $2,350,000, with some farmers receiving as much as $1200 to $1300 per acre. Most Pitt County cucumbers are processed to meet the tremendous demand for cucumber pickles on American tables.

...Billy Fleming, above, checks in the weight of a purchase at the scales.

In the photograph to the right, eight pickers on a slow moving harvester each concentrate on picking cucumbers from the row beneath their feet.

The Worry Clinic

Tears Provide Natural Outlet

Tom's loss made his friends shed tears of sympathy. Jesus also wept at the grave of Lazarus, probably for the same reason. Yet Christ told His Apostles they sould rejoice because He was going to be with God. Use the booklet below to sustain those who suffer sudden loss of a loved one!

By GEORGE W. CRANE
Ph.D., M.D.

Case U-535: Tom and Nelle Cossey have been main sparkplugs in our Scientific Marriage Foundation ever since it started.

But recently Tom telephoned me long distance to report the sad news that his charming wife had died of a heart attack.

So he asked me to join their pastor and divide the funeral address, with the first 10 minutes alloted to me.

"Nelle would want you to do this," Tom added.

She had gone to the hospital a few days earlier with a heart attack and had been in the intensive care section for a day.

"But she seemed to be improving greatly," her nurse informed me.

"In fact, on Monday afternoon she was quite cheerful and more like herself.

"She ate her dinner, including some sliced peaches for dessert.

"But she said she didn't think the food agreed with her, so she must have felt some distress.

"When I expressed concern about leaving her, she smiled and said: 'Everything will be all right.'

"Then she dropped back upon her pillow, dead!

"I could hardly believe she was gone!

"Dr. Crane, do you suppose her final 5 words were intended to have some ulterior meaning?"

Final Graduation

Maybe Nelle was looking into the future when she said:

"Everything will be all right."

Her final words could have referred to the immediate situation but they might also have been prophetic.

She and Tom had been happily married for almost 60 years, so her departure was quite a blow to Tom.

He shed tears, as did her other relatives and friends.

In fact, when he called us a few minutes after her death, Mrs. Crane answered the phone and then rushed into the living room, crying and hardly able to tell me what was wrong.

She finally pointed to the telephone and said: "It's Tom. Nelle's gone!"

Tears are a natural and very helpful outlet for our grief, since they offer us an emotional catharsis that is medically protective.

So don't feel ashamed, even as adults, to shed your tears in such times of emotional crisis.

Jesus wept at the grave of Lazarus, too, yet He must have known Lazarus would soon be greeting Him in Heaven.

So why did Christ shed tears?

Perhaps at His human reaction to the loss of a good friend.

Partly, too, at His sympathy for the overwhelming grief of Mary and Martha, the devoted sisters of Lazarus.

Yet Jesus had chided His Apostles when He was going up to Jerusalem to His doom.

"If ye loved me," Christ had reproved them, "ye would rejoice, because I said, I go unto the Father..."

For death is our grandest Graduation Ceremony from this classroom in God's Cosmic School System.

Which is why flowers are so vital a part of a funeral and should never be omitted!

We shed tears when our children graduate from high school or college and furnish our daughters a corsage, so we should do the same at death.

Send for my booklet "so Long George IV" (Solace for bereaved), enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 cents and give it to all who have lost a loved one.

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

Set SCUBA ECU Course

A Self-contained Underwater Breathing Apparatus (SCUBA) diving course will begin July 20 at East Carolina University sponsored by the school's Division of Continuing Education.

The 27-hour non-credit course will meet Tuesday and Thursday nights from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m., with the last session being a deep dive test, probably in the Morehead City area arranged between the instructor and students.

Tuition for the course is $40, payable after successful completion of a swimming test required for course participation. The swimming test will be given on the first night of the course.

The course, to include both classroom instruction and practical water work, is designed to train the individual in the basic skills used in the sport of SCUBA diving so he will react favorably in both normal and emergency situations.

Students must furnish their own flippers, mask and snorkel. Those not owning their own tanks, regulator, weight belt and safety vest may rent the equipment and air from the instructor for $25 for the course.

Persons interested in registering or desiring additional information may contact the Division of Continuing Education at ECU.

No Political Plans Yet In Wallace Eye

By REX THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — His proposals rejected by the Democrats, Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace has not closed the door completely on another third-party campaign.

"I don't have any plans now politically except to go back to Alabama," Wallace said Thursday.

Asked if that ruled out another American Independent Party effort, the crippled governor replied: "As I said, I don't have any political plans at this time. That would include that, of course."

But, he added: "I don't say I won't ever have any."

Wallace chatted for more than an hour in his hotel suite with Alabama newsmen covering the Democratic National Convention, where the governor tried unsuccessfully to get the presidential nomination.

The convention also refused to write into the party platform Tuesday night such Wallace proposals as an end to busing to achieve school desegregation and a stronger military posture.

Third-party speculation intensified Wednesday when Wallace campaign manager Charles S. Snider told newsmen the prospects were "growing stronger and stronger every minute."

Wallace flys today to Birmingham for treatment at the Spain Rehabiiitation Center. President Nixon has made available another Air Force hospital plane like the one which flew the stricken governor to Miami.

During Thursday's news conference, Wallace recalled the moment he was shot May 15. "I thought I was going to die," he said. He also remembered his conversation with doctors when he arrived at Holy Cross Hospital in Silver Spring, Md.

"They asked me what I had to eat," Wallace said. "I told them I had hamburger and mashed potatoes. They said that was important because food in the stomach increases the danger of infection.

"If you're going to get shot," he told reporters with a grin, "it's better to do it on an empty stomach."

Depends On Own Record

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Nick Galifianakis, D-N. C., says that despite the nomination of George McGovern as the Democratic presidential choice, he will "continue to offer moderate and effective programs which I feel represent the views of the great majority" of Tar Heels.

Galifianakis, the Democratic nominee for the U. S. Senate, made his comments in a written statement Thursday.

"Sen. McGovern has proven his political ability in capturing the nomination, but here in North Carolina I intend to campaign on the merits of my own record which I believe reflects an independent and responsible approach to the problems which confront North Carolina," he said.

"As a member of the legislative branch of the government, my first responsibility must not be to any one man or group of men, but to the people," he said.

"The voters of this state want this kind of responsive and vigorous leadership, and for this reason I remain confident of victory in November," Galifianakis added.

They are Frank Henry Longino, son of Dr. and Mrs. Frank H. Longino of 1914 Forest Hill Dr., and William Thomas Wells, son of Mr. and Mrs. James S. Wells.

Longino was a junior this year and Wells was a sophomore.
