'Mutual Assessment' Monday Night

McGovern Weighing Eagleton Candidacy

By WESLEY G. PIPPERT

ABERDEEN, S.D. (UPI)— Sen. George McGovern said Saturday pressure on him to dump Democratic vice presidential nominee Sen. Thomas Eagleton has been "intense." Later, he said "I do not know how it will all come out."

McGovern, winding up a two-week working vacation in the Black Hills of his native South Dakota; also acknowledged he faces an uphill fight to take the White House away from President Nixon.

His most immediate problem was the mounting pressure to replace Eagleton following the Missouri senator's disclosure that he had been hospitalized three times for treatment of exhaustion and depression between 1960 and 1966.

As he left Sylvan Lake Lodge near Custer, where he had spent two weeks following his nomination, McGovern issued a statement saying he had talked by telephone with Eagleton Saturday morning.

Discusses Problems

"I have advised Senator Eagleton that I have been under intense pressure all week that he withdraw from the ticket," the statement said. "But I have insisted, and still insist, on a proper period of evaluation by both of us of this difficult question."

He said he and Eagleton would meet Monday night "for a mutual assessment" of the situation.

Later, addressing the Democratic state convention here after visiting his home town of Mitchell, McGovern referred to the problems surrounding Eagleton's presence on the ticket.

"I do not know how it will all come out," he said in prepared remarks, "but I do know that it gets darkest just before the stars come out. So I ask for your prayers and your patience with Senator Eagleton and me while we deliberate on the proper course ahead."

Predicts Victory

In his speech, McGovern confidently predicted victory in November. But, he said, "We are going to come from behind, against the odds, the same way we won the primaries, the same way we won in South Dakota, the same road to victory traveled by every people's candidate from Andrew Jackson to Harry Truman."

In his earlier statement, McGovern said during his conversation with Eagleton, "I assured him that I am still backing him as vice presidential nominee of the party." It said, "rumors and reports of any decision having been made on this question are misleading." He did not mention the "1,000 per cent" support previously promised.

The first hint that his firm support for Eagleton was crumbling and that McGovern was keeping open his option of asking Eagleton to resign came Friday night when he sought out newsmen after dining in the public lodge at Sylvan Lake with his wife, Eleanor.

McGovern revealed that he and Eagleton had made a bargain, prior to Eagleton's disclosure of his medical past, that if public pressure made it impossible for Eagleton to stay on the ticket, he would withdraw.

Gov. Wallace Quits 1972 Presidential Sweepstakes

By JAMES M. EVANS

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI)— George Corley Wallace, the Alabama governor whose campaign was blunted by four bullets from a would-be assassin's pistol, withdrew Saturday from the 1972 presidential sweepstakes.

Paralyzed from the waist down since the May 15 shooting at Laurel, Md., Wallace said it was "the best advice" of his doctors "that I not involve myself in any extensive campaign activity in the immediate future."

The governor said he was not a candidate for the American Party presidential nomination "and in view of the above conditions, I could not accept a draft of the nomination.

But the 52-year-old Wallace, who has played a role in every national campaign since 1964, did not rule out a possible future bid for the presidency.

Neither did the statement refer to the fact that the campaign machinery in Montgomery is being geared down, but not eliminated, in hopes that Wallace could benefit in 1976 from a Democratic Party his strategists believe will be severely damaged by the candidacy of George McGovern.

Wallace said he hopes to make a good recovery from his injuries and return to Montgomery as soon as possible.

"The governorship of this state is an important job and I am deeply grateful to the people of Alabama for the opportunity to serve as their governor," he said.

It "has enabled me not only to lead the direction of their state government," Wallace added, "but to speak for them on the national level as well.

"I will continue to serve Alabama and when necessary I will never hesitate to represent our great people and the millions who have identified with our campaign throughout America," the governor said.

A campaign aide in Montgomery said the Wallace headquarters was being moved Saturday to the less spacious quarters it occupied between the time Wallace's third party movement was defeated in 1968 and the launching of his bid for the Democratic nomination this year.

In debt to the tune of $250,-000 with "$50,000 of it in sight," the aide said the staff was being trimmed from more than 100 to 17 members and the number of telephone lines was sharply reduced.

Delay Order For Ellsberg

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Justice William O. Douglas Saturday ordered a 30-day delay in the Pentagon Papers trial of Daniel Ellsberg and Anthony J. Russo while their lawyers ask the Supreme Court to settle a wiretap controversy.

The trial, which had been scheduled to start Monday in Los Angeles, could be delayed indefinitely if the high court agrees to take up the case. The court is in recess until October and, if it decides to take up the question at that time, it would have to schedule a hearing later in the fall.

The Justice Department said Solicitor General Erwin N. Griswold would ask the full court Monday to overturn Douglas' decision—and thereby let the trial begin. The full court would not have to meet in special session to decide the question, but could instead reach a telephone consensus and then rule whether to let Douglas' order stand.

The defense has been seeking details of a government wiretap which the government says inadvertently picked up the voice of someone connected with the defense. The government has said the national security wiretap had no direct bearing on the Pentagon Papers case itself, but lawyers for Ellsberg and Russo demanded to see a transcrpit of it before the trial begins.

Douglas heard arguments on the wiretap issue at Yakima, Wash., near his Goose Prairie vacation retreat.

Study Of N.C. Mental Health Program Urged

WRIGHTSVILLE BEACH, N.C. (AP) — Republican gubernatorial candidate Jim Holshouser Saturday urged Gov. Bob Scott to have a "complete and independent" study made of the state's mental health program.

Holshouser said if Scott doesn't, he plans to have it done early next year if he is elected.

The candidate's comments came in a speech prepared for the North Carolina Mental Health Association's quarterly board meeting in Wrightsville Beach.

He said recent State Bureau of Investigation probes have "made it clear that there are serious problems within the state's mental health system." But he said the SBI probe for criminal violations "could not cover the wide scope obviously needed."

Holshouser said, "The people have a right to know just what's going on in our menal institutions. We're spending about $100 million a year on the program now, and it's going up all the time."

He urged that community mental health programs be "the cutting edge in our battle against mental illness."

More personal attention for patients is "desperately needed" he said, and the treatment of geriatric and alcoholic patients in other facilities will help free doctors for this.

He also called for a reorganization of the Department of Mental Health, job reclassification to permit maximum use of mental health associates graduating from community colleges and an effort to transfer trainable retarded children into community programs.

Holshouser also proposed a stronger "after-care" effort, and noted that more than one-half of all admissions are repeats.

He said public support for mental health programs "will come only when their ns some evidence of accountability."

People's Party Choice

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UPI)— The People's party convention Saturday selected pediatrician Benjamin Spock to be its candidate for president as a faction supporting Democrat George McGovern bolted the convention.

Many McGovern backers wanted to leave the party, but at a caucus the dissidents decided to stay within the party but work for McGovern's election.

Black activist Julius Hobson was chosen by acclamation as the vice presidential candidate.

Spock was nominated on a voice vote without opposition. McGovern's name was not permitted in nomination through a procedural tactic.

The national ticket will run on a platform calling for turning the free-enterprise system into the "collective property of the people," and withdrawal of all American troops from foreign installations.

Planks in the platform also urge legalization of heroin and marijuana, support for the women's and gay liberation movements, free medical care for all Americans and an end to racism.

Peace Strategy Is Said 'Endangered'

By STEWART HENSLEY
UPI Diplomatic Correspondent

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon's peace-making moves in Asia and the Mideast —and the chance for more improvement in U.S.-Soviet relations —would all be seriously harmed if Congress fails to give the administration the military foreign aid money it wants, a high State Department official said Saturday.

Curtis W. Tarr, the former draft director who is now undersecretary of state for security affairs, admitted it was no secret the administration's request is in deep trouble in Congress. The measure has become tangled in efforts to attach end-the-war legislation to it.

Failure of the aid proposal, Tarr said in an interview, would be a serious blow to the momentum which he said Nixon achieved in his Moscow and Peking summit meetings.

The administration asked for $2.151 billion for the business year ending next June 30 for 13 countries on the periphery of the two major Communist powers —China and Russia. Of this amount, $780 million was budgeted for grant assistance to give various countries military equipment, $527 million to provide credit under which the beneficiary nations could purchase military equipment and $844 million for "security support assistance."

The last category covers commodities, cash budgetary aid and virtually anything else the United States believes will increase the economic capacity of the nation's involved to sustain their own defense efforts.

The Senate killed the bill after antiwar senators succeeded in tacking on an amendment which linked approval of the funds to Hanoi's release of war prisoners and a flat Oct. 1 cutoff of all funds for the war in Southeast Asia.

In the House, the Foreign Affairs Committee approved and sent on to the Rules Committee a bill containing virtually all the money the administration wanted but with an amendment which would cut off all funds unless prisoners were released and all U.S. forces withdrawn by Oct. 1.

Tarr said the administration intends to work hard to persuade congressmen to approve the aid bill without amendments which the President cannot accept. He added, however, "one cannot be certain" of the outcome.

Noting that the bill contained $260 million for South Korea, of which virtually all would be outright grants of military equipment, Tarr said U.S. failure to keep South Korea strong might have an adverse affect on the first tentative steps toward reconciliation of South Korea and Communist North Korea.

"We think the United States relationship with China will continue to improve if we can continue to maintain the kind of balance in the Far East that exists now," he said. Tarr also said continued U.S. security assistance for South Vietnam was vital to maintaining a position of strength from which Nixon could negotiate further with China.

"I don't see how the President's program to continue negotiations with North Vietnam in Paris could go on without maintenance of the activities this program would make possible," Tarr said. "It would be a fantastic blow to the economy of South Vietnam if we took the whole program away... It would be difficult, if not impossible, for the economy of South Vietnam to shoulder the increased burden."

Kidnap Victim Found Unhurt

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn (UPI) —A silver-haired 49-year-old socialite, kidnaped from her wooded suburban estate by two husky men Thursday, was found unharmed, chained to a tree Saturday after her husband paid a $1 million ransom.

Mrs. H.C. Piper Jr., wife of the board chairman of a Minneapolis investment firm was found in the Duluth area. She was returned home about mid-afternoon and was reported "tired but otherwise well."

John Morrison, brother-in-law of the Pipers, said the family was "overjoyed and relieved."

The FBI said Mrs. Piper was found in a wooded area near Duluth in northeastern Minnesota about 150 miles from here about noon. An anonymous caller revealed where she was.

The kidnapers left a ransom note when they took Mrs. Piper from the family's two-story colonial home in Orono after tying up two housekeepers.

Friday Piper appealed to the kidnapers to get back in touch with him. He said he would cooperate completely.

Morrison said Piper was contacted about 9:30 p.m. Friday and was given instructions on what to do with the ransom money. He confirmed earlier reports of the $1 million figure.

Piper followed the instructions exactly and paid the ransom Friday night Morrison said.

Monsoon Rains Lash Philippines

MANILA (UPI)—More monsoon rains Friday and Saturday set off landslides in the Philippine northern highland, killing residents in buried homes.

North Viet Defenders Of Citadel Reinforced

By DENNIS NEELD
Associated Press Writer

SOUTH OF QUANG TRI, Vietnam (AP) — North Vietnamese forces have reinforced their garrison in the Quang Tri Citadel and South Vietnamese marines had to fight yard by yard today to approach its 100-year-old walls.

A marine battalion commander estimated enemy strength inside the Citadel at two battalions with another battalion fighting outside the fortress walls. A North Vietnamese battalion at full strength comprises about 300 men.

He reported about 200 North Vietnamese reinforcements entered the Citadel from the west Friday night and immediately sallied out of the fortress to engage the marines.

"We killed 10 of them and took a prisoner in bunker-to-bunker fighting about 200 meters south of the Citadel," said the officer. He added that nine marines were wounded.

Allied bombing has opened several holes in the fortress walls, but the Citadel is surrounded by a 30-foot-wide moat, a tangle of barbed wire and mine fields left by the South Vietnamese before Quang Tri was abandoned May 1.

South Vietnamese paratroopers who attempted earlier in the week to storm the Citadel were cut down by withering fire concentrated through the gaps in the walls. The enemy has used these same gaps to venture out of the fortress and attack South Vietnamese bunker lines.

The marine battalion commander said the North Vietnamese garrison in the Citadel is supported by several batteries of long-range artillery firing from as far away as 17 miles.

"Their artillery is the big trouble," said the colonel. "If it were not for the artillery we probably could be in the Citadel by now.

"I can't say how long it is going to take to capture the Citadel, but first we must clear the area all around it. We will try to cut them off from supplies and reinforcements and we must use our firepower.

"Eventually there will have to be a ground assault."

There have been no U.S. air strikes on the Citadel for several weeks, but the North Vietnamese have been pounded by South Vietnamese bombs, napalm strikes and artillery, and American naval gunfire from 7th Fleet ships off the coast.

Frontline officers report, however, that the North Vietnamese are fighting as hard as ever.

"The fighting is as intense as at any time since Hanoi began its offensive March 30," said one U.S. adviser.

Swim Pools Recommended By 5-4 Vote

By TOM FOREMAN, JR.
Reflector Staff Writer

Greenville's Recreation Commission voted 5-4 Thursday night to recommend construction of swimming pools and other facilities that would benefit all age groups in the Greenville area.

Sidney Carraway, newly appointed chairman of the commission, invoked his tie-breaking vote to swing the vote in favor of the swimming pool issue.

Dr. Herbert Hadley made an amendment to the proposal stating that the commission thanked William Dansey, city councilman, for his efforts, and that the commission be given 90 days to come up with an overall program which would be favorable to the council. This amendment was approved.

In Dansey's report to the commission, he stated that for some time consideration had been given to the feasibility of city pools, and explained how they would be financed.

"The city has been working with the Redevelopment Commission since we made arrangements to use the old Eppes High School property, where a pool would be constructed" Dansey commented. "But now that Congress is in the process of changing the type of funding on Redevelopment projects, there is a possibility we could lose the funds for this pool".

Dansey then offered information concerning tax rates and expense schedule will require a four cent per $100 valuation tax increase.

Upon completion of the program, Dansey stated the tax rate could be dropped to three cents per $100 valuation which would support the operation of the three proposed facilities.

One pool would be located in the Evans Park complex on Hooker Road, and would cost $150,000. Funding would be evenly split between the proposed tax raise and Federal funds.

The second pool, to be located at what is now the Greenville Police Club, would cost about $60,000. The cost again would be split between tax and Federal funds.

The third pool would be located on the Hardee property adjacent to Eastern Elementary School.

Interested persons attending the meeting also reccomended that facilities for all ages be constructed. Mrs. J. B. Spilman, chairman of the Pitt County Chapter of the Governor's Council on Aging, expressed a concern for those aged citizens who have no place to gather. She commented that a special place fo the aged is needed.

Some citizens expressed concern for young people who also have no place to gather.

After hearing these statements commissioners voted on the proposal. The proposal passed by the one vote majority.

In other business taken up by the commission, Director Boyd Lee presented an evaluation of the summer recreation program. He reported that a total of 30,244 persons participated in different forms of activity during the month of June. Attendance for the year so far is 138,167. Nearly ten percent of the attendance was in the form of reservations.

Show Goes On Despite Tragedy

WHEELING, W.Va. (UPI)—"Our life is show business. Without show business, we don't survive. We have to exist," said the patriarch of the ill-fated Flying Wallendas tightrope act.

The tension was almost unbearable as Karl Wallenda led his family onto the high wire for Saturday's matinee performance of the Osiris Shrine Circus just a few hours after another member of the act was electrocuted while performing.

Richard Guzman, 29, of Sarasota, Fla., Wallenda's son-in-law, brushed against an electric wire as he inched his way with a balancing pole for his father-in-law during a Friday night performance.

The shock knocked Guzman onto some utility wires where he lay motionless for a moment, then fell 50 feet to the ground. He later was pronounced dead at Ohio Valley General Hospital.

It was the latest in a series of tragedies that have befallen the Flying Wallendas since two members of the troupe were killed and another suffered crippling injuries in 1962 at the Detroit Coliseum.

The 1962 accident followed the collapse of a seven-man human pyramid, sending the injured performers tumbling 40 feet onto a floor of sawdust. Another Wallenda son-in-law, Richard Faughnan, was among the dead.

In 1963 a sister-in-law, Yetta Wallenda, plunged 45 feet to her death when she fell backwards while preparing to do a headstand atop a swaying pole.

Carefully, Karl led his wife, Carla, and their three children onto the tightrope Saturday where they performed an aerial bicycle act. A special platform was built at the opposite end of the Wheeling Island Stadium so Karl could finish a few feet from his normal destination.

Drunk Story Source

WASHINGTON (UPI) — W. True Davis Jr., a Missouri-born Washington banker and a former ambassador, identified himself Saturday as the source of columnist Jack Anderson's report that Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton had been cited in the 1960s for drunken and reckless driving.

Eagleton has labeled the report "a damnable lie" and has said he was never arrested for any traffic offense more serious than speeding.

Davis said in a CBS interview that he saw what appeared to be authentic copies of citations against the 1972 Democratic vice presidential candidate four years ago and that he told Anderson about them at that time, "without realizing they might be made public without an attempt to verify them."

Davis characterized the information he gave Anderson as "unproven allegations," but he added: "I felt these were legitimate, they looked legitimate."

Anderson, who said Saturday "I made a mistake in judgment" in putting out the story without a more intensive effort at authentication, had written that his source recalled seeing photostats of between six and 11 citations ranging from speeding to reckless and drunken driving, which were given him —unsolicited —by a man who identified himself as a Missouri state trooper. Anderson did not say whether he still stood by his report, but he did declare he considered his source —Davis —totally reliable and the records seen by the source authentic.

Reporters who have searched Missouri official records have found only one citation against Eagleton —a charge of speeding in 1962 for which he was convicted and fined $35.

Anderson had refused to name the source of his initial report Thursday, saying only that he was a former high official from Missouri whose competence was beyond question and who was in office in 1968.

Davis, a Democrat, was U. S. ambassador to Switzerland from 1963-68. He now is president and board chairman of the National Bank of Washington and resides in the capital.

Davis said Anderson has been "a friend of mine for many years."

He said he happened to mention the Eagleton allegations to Anderson in the course of a general political discussion between them during the 1968 Missouri Democratic senatorial primary campaign, a contest that Eagleton won over Davis and incumbent Edward Long.

Refurbished Caboose Is Given To E.C. Chapter

The East Carolina Chapter's Caboose Number 5228 is a former Seaboard Airline Railroad Caboose donated to the Chapter by Seaboard Coast Line Railroad.

The Caboose is an old type wooden side cab built in 1923. It last saw regular service on the old S.A.L. Virginia division.

The East Carolina Chapter, National Railway Historical Society of Farmville has it's equipment site located at the old Colonial Ice and Coal Yard on West Wilson Street in Farmville.

The Chapter equipment roster presently includes Number 67, a General Electric 45 Ton diesel locomotive; Number 270, a 50 Ton Whitcomb diesel locomotive, Number 188, a former Southern Railroad baggage-rail post office car; two ex-Marine Corps flat cars; and Number 5228 S.A.L. Caboose.

The Chapter also has three railway maintenance motor cars, two of them former Carolina Southern Railroad cars of Windsor, N.C. The third was donated by the Norfolk Southern of Raleigh.

The East Carolina Chapter, N.R.H.S. is a non-profit, educational corporation dedicated to preserving old railway equipment and history. President of the chapter is Tom Johnson of Asheboro, N.C. and the vice-president-treasurer is W.R. Newton of Farmville. The chapter's mailing address is 309 North Contenenea Street, Farmville, N.C. 27828.

A future goal of the Chapter is to be ready to operate an excursion train on the old East Carolina Railroad mainline between Farmville and Pinetops, N.C. This should be in about three years after Superior Stone Company, owner of the line, opens up it's rail operations at their quarry in Fountain, and rebuilds the track.

We salute the firemen of our community both regulars and volunteer, who give so completely of their time for all our safety.

President Names ECU Prof To Role In UN Program

Herman G. Moeller of Greenville has been appointed by Pres. Richard Nixon as one of nine representatives to take part in a United Nations program for the prevention of crime and the treatment of offenders.

Moeller is an associate professor and coordinator of the correctional services curriculum in the School of Allied Health and Social Professions at East Carolina University.

Members of the group appointed Friday will serve until December 31, 1975.

According to Moeller members of the group "collectively have the responsibility...to be the principal sources of information concerning the main trends and developments occurring in the U.S. across the field of crime prevention and control.

The appointees are representative of various areas of expertise, including the academic community, administrators and the like who are in touch with developments in the criminal justice system, he said.

"We respond to inquiries made by the Secretary General of the United Nations for various kinds of information as well serve as a group to assist with communication developments on the international scene."

Moeller said the so-called "national correspondents" are appointed in each member country of the UN and their reports are issued through UN publications.

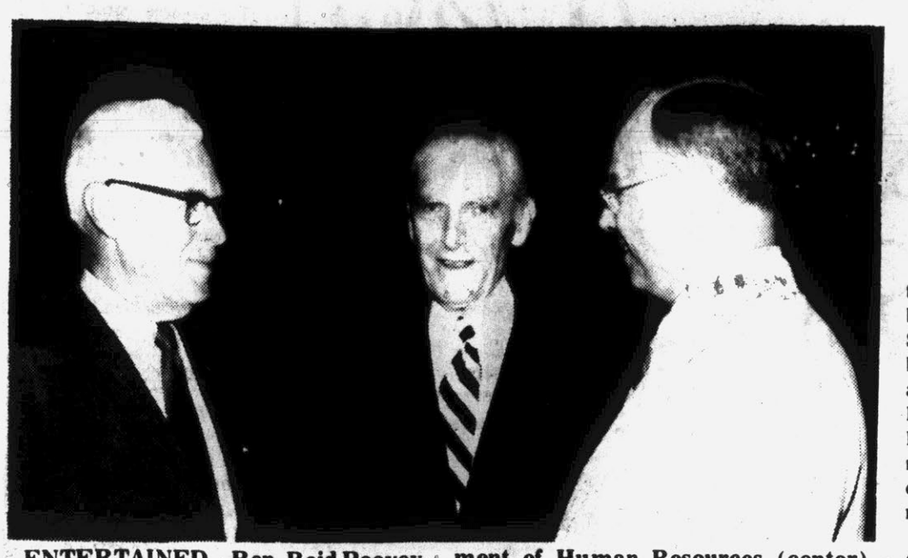

Friday's appointment was the second such appointment for Moeller to the Advisory Committee of Experts on Crime Prevention. He has also served as chief of the U.S. delegation to meetings of the UN consultave groups and as technical secretary to the U.S. delegation to the fourth UN congress on juvenile delinquency and crime which met in Japan in 1970.

In addition to the latest UN appointment, Moeller has been invited to serve as a member of an International Working Party "which will have the task of recommending changes, of any, in standard minimum rules for treatment of offenders at United Nations Headquarters in late September," he explained.

A native of up-state New York, Moeller received his education from Saint Lawrence University, New York, the National Institute of Public Affairs, Washington, D.C. and American University in Washington. He served with the U.S. Bureau of Prisons for 31. At the time of his retirement in 1970, Moeller was Deputy Director of the U.S. Bureau of Prisons.

The corrections expert came to ECU in 1971 to develop a program for a bachelors degree in corrections. He said the first degrees in the new curriculum should be awarded at the end of the next academic year.

Before his retirement Moeller received a distinguished service award for his service to the federal prison system from then Attorney General John Mitchell.

Legislative Candidates, State Officials Hosted

The East Carolina Summer Theatre and East Carolina University officials entertained approximately 175 state legislative candidates, their wives, and a number of high state administrative officials Friday night in Greenville.

The occasion was "Legislative Night" at the ECU Summer Theatre, an annual event for the past nine years. Despite the rainy weather, the attendance total was a record.

Guests from across the state attended a social hour and dinner at the Greenville Golf and Country Club prior to attending a performance of the Summer Theatre's current production, "1776."

"It was delightful," said Thad Eure, veteran N.C. Secretary of State, who attended with his wife, Minta. "I thoroughly enjoyed it," said James A. Graham, N.C. Commissioner of Agriculture, another Council of State member.

Newly appointed state cabinet secretaries attending included Dr. Lenox Baker, Human Resources, Irving Aldridge, Commerce, and John Lang Jr., Veterans and Military Affairs.

Hosts receiving the guests included Dr. Leo W. Jenkins, ECU chancellor, and vice chancellors Robert Holt, C.G. Moore and Edwin Monroe. Edgar R. Loessin, director and producer of the ECU Summer Theatre, welcomed the guests to Greenville and to the production at McGinnis Auditorium.

The lengthy guest list included legislative candidates from such points at some distance as Asheville, Hickory and Hiddenite with a generous sprinkling of Eastern North Carolina lawmakers. These included House Speaker Phil Godwin, and Pitt County's delegation of Sen. Vernon White and Reps. Horton Rountree and Sam Bundy. Others included Rep. Dan Lilley of Kinston and Troy Dodson of Greenville, representing the ECU Board of Trustees, Sen. and Mrs. Russell Kirby of Wilson, also representing the ECU trustees, and in addition to legislators and legislative candidates a number of busines, industrial and financial leaders.

A great majority of those attending expressed strong support for East Carolina University and its goals and aims.

Dr. Jenkins said, "We were very pleased and gratified at the fine turnout for our Legislative Night program. It was our best yet. We have invited everyone to come back and visit us as often as possible, particularly to see what we are doing and to have an enjoyable time in Greenville."

Driver Killed

BETHEL — A Greenville man was killed Saturday morning when the bakery truck he was driving overturned about three and one half miles west of here on Highway 64.

Ptl. Spencer Padgett said Norman Allen James, 20, was dead on arrival at Edgecombe General Hospital. He said it appeared that James, who was driving alone about 8:30 a.m., ran off the road onto the right shoulder and then swerved back to the left, having lost control. He apparently was thrown from an open door and was dragged about 108 feet under the vehicle.

James, a 1971 graduate of Rose High School, was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Earl James of 307 Church Street here.

Helen Traubel Heart Victim

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (UPI) — Former Metropolitan Opera star Helen Traubel, 69, the famed Wagnerian soprano who deserted arias to be a comedienne in the 1950s, died of a heart attack here late Friday night.

The hefty, St. Louis-born opera star, who once said American opera was a "caviar" delight being sold to a "hamburger-eating" audience, made her stage debut in 1939 with the prestigious Metropolitan Opera Company.

The Met's only American-trained "Brunhilde" was the principal Wagnerian soprano until 1953, when she locked horns with Met impresario Rudolph Bing. Sir Rudolph stormed that she injured her "dignity" by also singing at nightclubs.

"Dignity," Miss Traubel told Bing in a huff, "is something a person maintains, whatever her surroundings."

She returned unsigned her long-standing contract with what she called the "ivory tower" opera, and enjoyed marquee billing alongside some of film's funniest clowns — Groucho Marx, Jerry Lewis, Red Skelton and Jimmy Durante.

A maverick among opera's better known divas, the droll but sternfaced Miss Traubel smoked cigaretes, drank Scotch and had a hearty appetite for rock 'n roll.

"I've never enjoyed anything more than playing straightman for Jimmy Durante and George Gobel," Miss Traubel once said.

"Appearing with them is entertainment in its highest form. Anyone in opera who knocks their brand of entertainment should do half as well with the public."

Miss Traubel performed on television specials, films and nightclub stages in recent years. Her latest engagement was in 1964 with Jimmy Durante at a Lake Tahoe, Calif., resort.

She is survived by her husband, William Bass.

Begin Licensing In October

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina will begin issuing licenses in October to child day care centers that provide care for six or more children four hours or more a day.

John Sokol, director of the state "Day Care Licensing Office, said Friday that about 2,000 day care centers in the state have registered with his office, but some 2,000 have not yet registered.

He estimated there are about 200,000 children in day care centers throughout the state.

Offers Pour In

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (UPI)—Offers poured in Saturday from men willing to accommodate Linda Christine Jones with a "paper marriage" that would enable the attractive Englishwoman to become an American citizen.

The Fayetteville Observer, which first reported the 25-year-old woman's desire to marry before her visa expires next month, said she has received 70 telephone calls and 50 letters from men.

Miss Jones, who lived in London before coming to America, has been visiting a friend here the past six months and sees marriage as a way of obtaining citizenship.

But she insists the marriage must be "in name only" —and he must agree to a divorce as quickly as possible.

She could not be reached Saturday to determine if she has chosen her platonic mate.

The Charlotte Observer, which had been in touch with the U.S. Immigration Service in Norfolk, Va., quoted officer-in-charge Charles Perez as saying "I don't think this little game is going to work."

"This has been done before," said Perez, noting that the "I Love Lucy" television show had the idea years ago.

Jittery Belfast Like Armed Camp

Ulster Sees Three-Sided Fight

By COLIN BAKER

BELFAST (UPI) — British troops and police used rubber bullets and CS nausea gas Saturday to break up fighting between about 400 Protestant and Roman Catholic youths in Lurgan, 20 miles southwest of Belfast. Tightened security measures made the jittery capital of Northern Ireland resemble an armed camp.

An army spokesman said a Catholic man was shot in the head and seriously wounded at the height of the clash in Lurgan. He said troops and police remained on the scene to prevent further trouble.

According to reports, gangs of Catholic and Protestant youths—numbering about 200 each—from adjoining housing estates began fighting after a Catholic boy was beaten and the initals "UVF" scratched on his back. The initials stand for the Ulster Volunteer Force, a militant Protestant organization.

The last of the 4,000 British troop reinforcements ordered to the province this week arrived in Belfast during the day aboard the assault ship HMS Intrepid, bringing military manpower in the strife-torn province to a record high.

The buildup was part of new get-tough policy against the outlawed Irish Republican Army (IRA).

A police spokesman said British security forces arrested 133 persons and seized a small arsenal of weapons, including an antitank gun, grenades, explosives and ammunition this week as part of the crackdown.

Northern Ireland Secretary William Whitelaw promised that the 21,000 British troops now in the province will be used soon against Irish Republican Army (IRA) strongholds.

Only minor scattered shootings and bombings were reported Saturday. Bomb explosions damaged a pub in Carrickfergus on the coast north of Belfast, a tavern in the Belfast suburb of Ligoniel and a shop in Londonderry. No casualties were reported.

Since the bombings which killed nine persons and injured 130 in Belfast eight days ago, police and troops have intensified patrols, searches of persons and vehicles entering the sealed-off downtown area and raids for weapons and bomb factories.

Unprecedented security measures are in effect in Belfast. Housewives shop under the eyes and guns of troops. Patrols move constantly through the city and barbed wire closes many streets to vehicular traffic. The army has set up checkpoints at main shopping centers, at which soldiers search men from head to foot and inspect packages, shopping bags and purses carried by women.

The police spokesman said 133 persons were rounded up this week. Of these 52 were charged with various offenses, five are still being questioned and 76 were released, he said.

He said weapon searches uncovered 1,165 pounds of explosives, 22 rifles, 20 pistols, a submachine gun, five shotguns, an antitank gun, 39 grenades and nearly 7,500 rounds of ammunition.

Whitelaw announced on Irish television Friday night that troops will soon move into the Roman Catholic "no-go" areas from which the IRA has carried on its campaign of violence.

"The day is coming very soon when the military will go down every byway and every street in Northern Ireland, regardless of the creed or color of that community. All barricades will come down," he said.

Capricious Challenger Fischer Loses 2 Demands, Wins One

By JIM WARD

REYKJAVIK (UPI) — World champion Boris Spassky refused Saturday to change chessboards to please U.S. challenger Bobby Fischer and the judge of the match refused to apologize to the American for allowing television coverage of one of the games.

However, aides to Fischer said the capricious challenger had been soothed by a written apology from ABC television, which filmed Thursday night's eighth game of the 24-game, $250,000 dollar chess match of the century.

Fischer played table tennis for more than a hour Saturday against Stewert Lassen, an American player who was a member of the U.S. ping pong team that met the Chinese world champions in New York earlier this year

"Bobby was relaxed, almost gay," said Fred Cramer, a vice president of the International Chess Federation and a Fischer aide.

Beginner's Blunder

"Bobby appeared soothed by the written apology (from ABC) but we don't know whether he will consent to the filming of the ninth game Sunday night."

But Spassky, now down two points to Fischer following his loss on a "beginner's blunder" Thursday night, turned down another Fischer demand —that the chessboard by changed back to the original.

In addition, West German judge Lothar Schmid refused to apologize to Fischer for allowing television coverage of the eigth game.

Fischer learned the eighth game had been televised only afterwards from a radio news report while he was dining in his room. Aides said he went into a rage and demanded "apologies all around" because he claimed he had been "double-crossed."

Telecast Canceled

Schmid said he was "astonished" to receive a letter from Fischer demanding a signed apology.

"Naturally, I refused," Schmid said. "It's not my business as long as the cameras do not create a real disturbance. So I returned the letter to Mr. Fischer.

Concerning Fischer's demand that the substitute chessboard be tossed out and the original marble one made by Icelandic artisans returned, Schmid said Spassky refused.

"I personally went to see Mr. Spassky but he refused to have the board changed once again so we stick to the rules stating that equipment cannot be changed during the match unless both players agree," the 44-year-old West German grand master and lawyer said.

Icelandic organizers were running out of patience with the Fischer and the television dispute. Gudmundur Thorarinsson, president of the Icelandic Chess Federation said he would meet personally with Fischer to decide the television issue "once and for all."

The ABC apology expressed the network's regret for any "misunderstanding" which arose from filming the 8th game and said it has cancelled plans to telecast parts of the game on its "Wide World of Sports" program Saturday.

Almost $19 Million Allocated Charities

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The Duke Endowment, complaining about the new federal tax on foundation income, reported Saturday that it had allocated almost $19 million to its charities in 1971.

The Endowment's holdings of $425 million produced an income of $23.5 million, the report said, most of it in dividends from Duke Power Co. stock and U.S. Treasury bonds. The rate of return was 5½ per cent.

The Endowment report said a major portion of the approximately $3.65 which was not disbursed went either to the nearly $1 million in federal taxes or to programs for which money was temporarily withheld.

The treasurer's report did not, however, mention the money allocated for the 15 trustees' "commissions." That amounted to three per cent of the endowment's income, or $47,095.76 for each trustee.

A spokesman for the Endowment, Robert J. Sailstad, said he did not know why the commissions, which amounted to more than $706,000, were not listed in the report. He said the Endowment's report to the Internal Revenue Service did mention them, and added they were required by the will of James Buchanan Duke, whose fortune laid the basis for the Endowment.

The report did list additional annual expenses of $1.28 million dollars, exclusive of the trustees' commissions.

Trustees' chairman Thomas L. Perkins of Rye, N.Y. said the new four per cent levy on net investment income comes "out of the pockets of otherwise tax-exempt organizations in North Carolina and South Carolina. If private philanthropy is proper, then an income tax on it is improper," he stated.

The trustees' commission, like the federal tax, is skimmed off the total of the net investment income.

The major beneficiaries of the allocations in 1971 were Duke University, which received more than $7 million, and dozens of hospitals in the Carolinas, which received grants totaling another $7 million.

Lesser recipients of Endowment funds included Davidson College, Furman University and Johnson C. Smith University; various child care centers and orphanages; and rural United Methodist churches and their retired ministers.

Took The Initiative For Safety

Ayden representatives recently met with representatives of the State Highway Commission to consider ways of eliminating the hazards at the intersection of N.C. 11 and N.C. 102 near the Ayden city limits.

It was reported that there have been 52 collisions at the intersection since the new four-lane N.C. 11 bypass was opened to traffic more than a year ago.

The Ayden group requested that traffic control lights be installed at the intersection. Ayden Mayor R.L. Davis asked for immediate action.

Chief of Police Tommy Burney said the town was assured of action, although traffic engineers said traffic lights might not be the answer to the problem.

The Ayden group is to be commended for taking the initiative in urging that something be done at this dangerous intersection. Certainly the hazard the intersection causes is a matter of major concern to anyone who travels this highway, and that means most of us at one time or another.

We are not expert enough to say whether traffic control lights are the answer to the problem. Cost might be a barrier, but perhaps an overpass interchange at that point on this highway might be worth considering.

At any rate would hope that plans will be made as rapidly as possible so that the appalling accident rate at the N.C. 11—N.C. 102 intersection can be lowered.

All-Weather Airport Operation On Horizon

Additional land has been acquired adjacent to Stallings Air Field which will allow the installation of an instrument landing system.

The improvements will mean that all-weather operation of the airport will be possible.

Officials reported that January, February and March are the worst months of fog for the area and in one month this year there were 82 planes which failed to land because of weather conditions.

Stallings is well used by people in Greenville and Pitt County, so the improvements to be made at the airport will mean better air service for our area.

25,000 Spies On Job

By E. RANDALL FLOYD

BONN (UPI)—By official estimate there are at least 25,000 Communist spies active in West Germany, more than 10,000 of them from the Soviet Union and 13,000 from East Germany. The rest are said to represent almost every other Communist nation.

The figures come from the Federal Office for the Defense of the Constitution (BDN)—West Germany's equivalent of the American Central Intelligence Agency—in its report on activities for 1971.

West German secret service officials say they believe a cardinal goal of Soviet policy, through spy activities, is to "neutralize West Germany—that is, to detach it from the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and thereby help remove U. S. influence from Europe.

Second Ranking Target

According to these officials West Germany is second as an espionage target for the Soviet Union only to the United States.

State security agents say the most effective spies, and hardest to detect, are those from East Germany, many of whom filter into the country via the refugee channel. Because of their similarity in language, appearance and culture with the West Germans, they make ideal spies. "They can move about free as birds, unsuspected," one security man said.

Once here, they set about establishing elaborate spy rings capable of penetrating all levels of West German life—government, military, academic, industry—and officials say there is little they can do to stop them.

Although East Germany maintains the most active spying apparatus in West Germany, legal experts said, Soviet spies also are busy. In recent years the KGB—the Soviet state security committee—has developed an elite corps of "influential agents" among friendly West Germans. Intelligence officials don't know their exact number, but one source put it at "several hundred."

Loves Engines And Fast Boats

By RICHARD BONER
The Salisbury Post

DENTON, N.C. — Jimmy Gaskins is a speed king. He's a champion racer who loves powerful engines and high speeds.

The 40-year-old bachelor does not race on asphalt speedways or dirt tracks, but on the water. He builds and races his own superstock speedboats.

Gaskins won the 1972 world championship for his class of speedboat on June 27 in Dayton, Ohio, and became the first man officially to break 100 miles per hour in a superstock inboard boat. His world record average race course on the Ohio River at New Martinsville, W. Va. That record has since been broken by Steve Jones of Seattle, Wash., who sped to a 102.614 average.

Gaskins came to Denton in 1967 because of the small town's central location to North Carolina's larger cities and because Badin Lake, where he lives in a cabin, is a good place to test his boats.

In his shop, Gaskins builds inboard boats to his customer's specifications. About four times a year he drives his pickup truck to California to buy the sleek, shiney fiberglass hulls.

Building The Best

"I've always wanted to build boats that run good and faster than anybody else," he remarked.

He started when he was 11 years old. The New Bern native's first boat was a 12-foot skiff constructed of cypress wood. "I've owned one ever since then," Gaskins noted.

Gaskins builds and sells about 10 boats a year. It takes at least one month to install the engine, shiny bucket seats, transmission, dials and other gadgetry that go into a speedboat. "Most customers want just a durable stock engine. Some want high performance," Gaskins said.

A custom-built boat can cost from $5,500 up.

The soft-spoken competitor became interested in speedboat racing while working as a design draftsman for the Bell Telephone Laboratories in Burlington. He attended several races in Florida and became convinced he wanted to do more than just watch the action. He wanted to be a part of it.

First Race Event

When Bell sent him to Buffalo, N.Y., in 1961, Gaskins relaxed during leisure hours on a 16-foot boat. He heard about a race on the Niagara River and entered it.

The boat struck a submerged rock, tearing out the prop. The novice racer went back the following year and won the 28-mile event. "That's what got it in my blood," Gaskins said.

Speedboat racing is dangerous business, but it is the danger that contributes to the excitement. Gaskins can tell you about the danger and excitement becuase he has experienced both.

His boat was rounding a curve in a 1967 race in Miami's Marine Stadium when it flipped into the air, tossing its driver into the white water. A photographer snapped the air-borne Gaskins. The picture has been used in magazines and racing advertisements.

Gaskins escaped with a scratch on his left arm. There was a gaping hole in the hull of his boat. "I was driving over my head, faster than I was qualified to handle it," the racer admitted.

Unstrapped For Safety

Gaskins said drivers are not strapped into their boats becuase "if anything happens you want to get thrown away from it."

There have been eight victories, including the Eastern Divisional Championship for superstocks at Decatur, Ill., on the last Memorial Day weekend and the world championship race.

Despite the wins and the world's record, Gaskins is not satisfied. He is currently building a boat which will be powered by two engines. He hopes to break 125 mph. with the new boat. With a 100-gallon fuel tank the boat will also be used in marathon races of more than 150 miles.

Besides the prestige, racing gives Gaskins the opportunity to find weak points in his boats' performance. The knowledge gained can be useful in building better boats for himself and his customers.

Gaskins' primary reason for racing is that he loves it. "I enjoy doing it," he said. "I like to see performance. I like to be able to do something and make it do something for me."

Humphrey Fat Cats Enlisted

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The very private luncheon Wednesday at Manhattan's plush University Club, where very rich Jewish Democrats heard a somewhat apprehensive Henry A. Kissinger make his persuasive pro-Nixon foreign policy pitch, was the final stage of President Nixon's spectacularly successful roundup of Sen. Hubert Humphrey's fat cat political contributors.

Within three weeks, Mr. Nixon's operatives have quietly enlisted nearly every major contributor to Humphrey's 1968 and 1972 Presidential compaigns. These Jewish businessmen, deeply apprehensive about Sen. George McGovern's positions on Israel and economic policy, have been the bedrock of Democratic campaign contributors for years. Their mass defection now to the Republican enemy tells how drastically McGovern's nomination has narrowed the party's financial base.

Kissinger's role as top-level foreign policy briefer is strictly tangential to overt fund-raising. Indeed, fearful of compromising his bipartisan standing as the President's national security adviser, Kissinger angrily intervened to bar any fund-raising at Wednesday's luncheon. As a result, chief Nixon fund-raiser Maurice Stans cancelled out.

Nevertheless, the fact that the Nixon political apparatus would risk the credibility of so valuable as asset as the redoubtable Henry Kissinger to sway Democratic fat cats shows how seriously this business is taken at the White House — less because of the money involved than as an important beachhead in the Jewish community. Moreover, while Mr. Nixon's operatives stages their raid, the McGovern camp was silent and idle.

The key Nixon operatives in belling the Jewish Democrats are four Jewish Republicans: Wall Street financier Gustave Levy, retired Detroit industrialist Max Fisher, and Californians Taft Schreiber (Music Corp. of America) and Ted Cummings (former owner of Food Giant Markets, Inc.).

They have now delivered on a golden platter all the biggest Humphrey money men (though without formal endorsement in every case), and the biggest one of all is Beverly Hills philanthropist John Factor. Formerly Chicago underworld's Jake the Barber, Factor long has been a respectable businessman and loyal contributor to the Democratic party (in 1968 alone, $240,000 in "Loans" and $102,500 in donations).

Other West Coast Humphreyites signed up for Mr. Nixon include National General Corp.'s Gene Klein and Danny Schwartz (a Frank Sinatra partner), each contributing $100,000 to Humphrey's last hurrah campaign this year; Stanley Beyer (Pennsylvania Life Insurance Co.), and Stanley Goldbloom (Equity Funding). In addition, Victor Carter (formerly of Republic Corp.), a West Coast Jewish Democrat who backed Sen. Henry M. Jackson for President, is supporting Mr. Nixon.

The harvest from the East Coast has been equally golden. Accepting an invitation to the Wednesday luncheon but already signed up for the Nixon campaign is Meshulam Riklis of New York, head of the Rapid-American conglomerate, contributor of a cool $300,000 to Humphrey's 1972 campaign and a zealous Zionist.

Two other New Yorkers who fueled Humphrey's 1972 campaign have quietly slipped into the Nixon orbit: Charles Bassine and his son-in-law, Arthur Cohen, both millionaires and officers in the corporate structure controlling E. J. Korvette. In 1968, Cohen "loaned" $100,000 to the hard-pressed Humphrey campaign.

Whether Kissinger's pro-Nixon briefings on foreign policy contributed to this legion of Democratic apostates is doubtful. He did brief a luncheon for Jewish Democratic fat cats at the Bistro Restaurant in Beverly Hills two weeks ago, hosted by fund-raiser Raft Schreiber — similar to many Kissinger foreign policy backgrounders

Sunday Morning Notes

UNC Journalist, published by the Chapel Hill School of Journalism, recently did a story on Waitus Henry Hardin, who at 52 is now working on a journalism degree following a career in the U.S. Army.

Now a Junior, Hardin is apparently doing well. But he had doubts at first that were dispelled at the registration table.

"I didn't feel so ill at ease after the first hour at Carolina," he recalled. "We were filling out those long forms when some of my dougts were erased. I sat down beside a young fellow to complete the blank, and when I had finished he was still puzzling over the first section.

"As I pushed back from the table, he asked me, 'Hey, what does this mean? Name of spouse?' I figured I could make it after that."

Greenville streets have a way of coming to a sudden end as skid marks on E. Third Street last weekend showed.

Third comes to a "T" intersection at Harding at the end of a little hill.

Heavy black skid marks down the hill showed someone realized it almost too late. The skid marks crossed the intersection and then the front wheels of the vehicle jumped the curb and the wheels dug up the grass for another three or four feet.

Quite a stop.

And the occupants of one of

those traveling vans decided to clean house one day recently. They were busy hauling out trash and one person was sweeping out accumulated dirt and dust and cigarette butts.

Only trouble was the vehicle was parked in the middle of Pitt Plaza parking lot.

In another store parking lot a loud report came from under the hood of a parked car. Then steam started billowing from the vehicle.

Two ladies scurried out of the car and a store employee soon came to their aid.

It seems it was one of those stifling days and the ladies had been running the air conditioner while the car was parked. The pressure built up and soon a hose blew off the air conditioner.

The store employee found a screw driver and replace the hose. Then he got a bucket of water and refilled the radiator.

There are some good samaritans left in the world. He insisted he didn't want pay for the work. He just wanted to be helpful.

Other Editors Say

Governor Peterson

(The N.Y. Times)

Environmentalists throughout the nation will regret that Governor Russell W. Peterson of Delaware failed to clinch his party's nomination at last week's Republican state convention. Anything that diminishes the chance of this courageous Governor to succeed himself — he will now have to go through a popular primary as well as an election campaign — is a threat to his great achievement of a coastline guaranteed against further incursions of heavy industry.

The controversial Coastal Zoning Act, which is largely Mr. Peterson's doing, has naturally encountered heavy opposition. He has had to resist pressures for new oil refineries, steel and paper mills, chemical complexes and off-shore coal terminals. But the Governor has firmly taken the stand that those economic objectives could be just as well attained by attracting selected light industry, which he has succeeded in doing.

Inevitably that attitude has made the Governor some enemies, not only in industry but in his own party. Maurice H. Stans, then Secretary of Commerce, went so far as to call his fellow-Republican to Washington to warn him, in effect, that he was interfering with the prosperity, if not the security, of the country. But Mr. Peterson pointed out half a dozen different ways in which the heavy industries in question might achieve their purposes without destroying the state's 28 miles of relatively clean coast.

Unprecedented streams of mail and telephone calls poured into the capital at the time, indicating overwhelming support for Governor Peterson's program. It will be to Delaware's credit if that support is made evident again.

(Editor's Note: Gov. Peterson is a former resident of Greenville).

40 Years Ago Today

By GWYN COGHILL
July 30, 1932

Greenville, the metropolis of all eastern North Carolina, recognized as the greatest tobacco center of the nation, has a population of 11,890 and because of its geographical location, is conceded to be the "Hub of Eastern North Carolina". During the year 1932 R.C. Flanagan served as mayor, and G.A. Clark chief of police. The city government consisted of eight aldermen; H.H. Duncan, C.W. Hearne, J.L. Hassell, A.E. Hobgood, J.H. Boyd, Jr., N.O. Warren, J.M. Taft, and W.H. Norris.

Tobacco is "King" in Pitt County and the Greenville market is the best in the state and one of the largest in the world. The Greenville tobacco market, with its seven large warehouses and nine factories, is amply able to handle 100,000,000 pounds of tobacco each season. The warehouse space this season will cover about twelve acres and will enable the seven warehouses to care for about 1,750,000 pounds of leaf per day.

RELIGION BEGINS WITH FAITH

Problems of the mind respond to logic. Religious problems, however, respond only to faith. That is, we can reason our way through problems which deal only with the physical world and life round about us, but when we come to the unseen spiritual world—the realm in which religion operates—logic does very little good. We have to have another power with which to appropriate the benefits of the unseen world. Our five senses are sufficient to grasp and understand the physical world, but we lay hold on the spiritual world and understand it, to the extent we do, only through faith.

One reason that there is so much religious skepticism in the world is because people use the wrong tool in trying to fashion for themselves a satisfactory religion. We get nowhere in religion with logic alone. We have to start with faith. We have to believe something we cannot see, something for which we cannot find adequate explanation. If we can take this first step we are on our way to understanding religious truth.

But as soon as we realize that the initial approach to religion is to be along the road of faith rather than the road of reason, we can use all the reason we have at our disposal and find it, continuously and increasingly helpful.

But our religion begins with faith.

Displace U.S. As Arms Source

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. defense sources report Venezuela has ordered $60 million worth of arms from France in a deal described as the largest single Latin American purchase of ground weapons since World War II.

The deal underscores France's growing dominance as arms supplier to Latin American nations at a time when Congress has sharply restricted U.S. military aid and arms sales to that region.

Pentagon figures show that Latin American countries bought at least $900 million in arms from countries other than the United States in fiscal 1970 and 1971. An estimated two thirds of this business went to France, the rest principally to Britain and Italy.

In the same two-year period, American arms sales to Latin American republics totaled $130 million.

According to defense sources, the Venezuelans have ordered 142 French AMX30 medium-size tanks for delivery this year and next, plus more than 20 self-propelled 155mm howitzers.

Brazil, Colombia, Argentina and other countries in that region are said to be customers for fast French Mirgage jet fighters, British-built naval frigates, Italian artillery and other modern weapons to replace largely outdated U.S.-supplied arms, much of it of World War II vintage.

In limiting U.S arms aid and sales to Latin America, Congress aimed to discourage countries there from spending on weapons instead of alleviating poverty, illiteracy and other critical social and economic problems.

U.S. defense officials say this has turned Latin American military leaders to other weapons sources, principally France.

One result is that the Latin American armed forces, perhaps motivated by a desire for prestige, are buying equipment which U.S. military experts consider more sophisticated than those nations need.

U.S. arms credit is granted currently at 6 per cent interest, and may be extended for not longer than 10 years.

The French, on the other hand, are said to offer the Latin Americans terms as low as 20-year loans at 2 per cent interest and also to train Latin American pilots for free, as well as providing other low-cost or free services.

It is possible, U.S. officials say, for Latin American countries to buy directly from U.S. contractors.

However, it is reported that U.S. banks will lend money for these purchases only if they are protected by U.S. government guarantees, and the interest rates run up to 8 per cent.

Observations From Editorial Columns

Wait A Minute

Proposals are in the works to add about 52 million acres of the nation's forest lands to the 10 million acres already set aside as single use wilderness areas. In this instance, single use means primarily for recreational purposes. According to a timber industry authority, this is equivalent to about 12 per cent of all commercial forest land in the whole country.

Before setting aside millions of additional timber acres in non-productive preserves, certain steps ought to be considered, including state-by-state land use studies, These could produce reliable estimates of demands for forests products, for highways, power lines and for all sorts of outdoor recreation, as well as for urban and industrial developments.

Such studies should be standardized for the whole country so state-by-state figures can be put together to provide regional and national summaries. Until such studies are complete, all presently proposed federal changes in land use should be held in abeyance.

Timberland, like nearly every other productive activity and resource, has been a victim of what amounts to a blind crusade aimed directly at immobilizing intelligent efforts by governmental and business leaders to balance the needs of people with the requirements of conservation preservation.

The timber industry is quite progressive in the latter respect. Forrest of America are probably in better health, growing more wood fiber, better protected from serious fire loss and contributing more to the well-being of the nation than ever before. Wise management, not emotional crusades, is destined to be the salvation of America's resources. — Rocky Mount (N.C.) Telegram

Bogus Souvenirs Abound

If there is anything more disappointing than not being able to take a planned trip to a new vacation spot, it is going to one and discovering after returning home that sourenirs of native crafts brought back were made in Japan.

Now, some of the chiselers dealing in these works of "art" may make their killings at greater risk. The state of Arizona is prosecuting six trading posts located off the Navajo reservation under a consumer fraud act for representing such items as dolls, rugs and jewelry as being made by the Navajos when in fact they were made in Japan. Tourists everywhere will rejoice. — Monroe (La.) Morning World

Bombproof Wine Cellar

A Newark woman has converted her bomb shelter into a wine cellar, which may be a more revealing sign of our times than the frightening front-page headlines.

The improved chance for peace - the growing confidence that World War III may not be inevitable after all - has developed gradually, producing no sudden impact. But the change has been dramatic.

It may not be as exciting as the protest demonstrations in Miami, but it is probably a good deal more meaningful. - Tulsa (Okla.) World

Just How Many Federal Forms?

The Wall Street Journal was enterprising enough to send a reporter to Harold Keonig, head of the National Archives' office of records and management, in an effort to find out just how many federal forms (for all divisions of the federal government) there really were.

Sorry, Keonig told the reporter, but that information simply wasn't available. But the reporter didn't exactly go away empty-handed. Keonig supplied the additional information that, as a matter of fact, his office had assigned a man full time to find out how many forms there were, and "So far he's up to 700,000 separate types, and still counting...." - Jacksonville (Fla.) Florida Times-Union

The Flying Guns

Just the other day the Treasury Department issued another report on the success of the sky marshals plan, and it revealed that in the previous 16 months nearly 50,000 weapons were confiscated.

Just imagine - 50,000 people in and around airports, with gun, knife, bomb or other lethal instrument in their possession! No wonder the pilots felt impelled to strike for international anti-hijacking laws. - Anniston (Ala.) Star

Predicting

In preparation for the fall presidential campaign, we recently picked up our copy of Louis H. Bean's "How To Predict The 1972 Elections."

Magnifience

A mail order firm in Florida has been advertising a "Medieval 13th Century Clock" similar to clocks that "told Columbus the time." (That's Columbus, the explorer, not Columbus, Ohio.) "Features include," says the advertisement, "magnificent 1-½ foot height." That comes out to be 18 magnificent inches. It leads one to wonder what adjective the fellow who wrote the advertisement would use to describe the height of a grandfather clock eight feet (96 inches) tall. - Charleston (S.C.) News and Courier

Dues and Don'ts

Union members, like all other Americans, have the right to decide where their personal and financial support shall go in the nomination and election of candidates.

This year, with labor bosses more determined than ever to control the outcome of voting at congressional and presidential levels, unionists should be especially on guard against any misuse of their dues. If they don't they may find those dues used, in the words of the late Justice Hugo Black, "to thwart the political, economic, and ideological hopes of those whose money has been forced from them under authority of the law." — Columbia (S.C.) A Conservative View

Revealing An Innocent In A High-Stakes Game

By J.J. KILPATRICK

George McGovern delivered himself of a foolish public letter the other day, spelling out the policies he would put into effect, as president, in the matter of Greece. One does not have to be an expert on Greece (I certainly am not) to find in his statement some disturbing reflections on the candidate's state of mind.

McGovern's letter was addressed to Elias Demetracopoulos, a one-time political writer and minor journalist in Athens, now in exile here in Washington. The fact of the letter itself is curious, for Demetracopoulos is not, one would hope, the vehicle through which a prospective president would convey a major position of foreign policy.

Demetracopoulos never was a major figure in the Greek press. He holds no official position of any sort. He is remembered in Athens as the author of a story in August of 1965, based upon a forged letter, that currency to vicious anti-American propaganda. One Athens paper on Tuesday recalled him as "an obscure and suspicious person."

Following the revolution of 1967, Demetracopoulos fled Greece, turned up in Communist Poland at a journalists' meeting, then established himself in plush surroundings here in Washington as a lobbyist. He cultivated the notion that he was a leader in the exile movement. He captivated such senators as Hartke of Indiana and Gravel of Alaska. He wooed liberal members of the press. Socially attractive, politically persuasive, he has cut quite a swath. Washington has many such persons—men of intrigue and mystery. Prudent men treat them with prudence.

Not McGovern. His letter to Demetracopoulos pulls all the stops. He promises his pen-pal that if elected president, he will cut off all U.S. aid to the "military dictatorship in Greece." He strongly indicates that he would cancel the Nixon decision to make Athens a home port for the Mediterranean fleet. He voluntarily pledges himself to cut U.S. military personnel in Greece "to an absolute minimum," and adds that he would "sharply curtail the number of visits to Greece by high-ranking civilians and military officials."

It is an extraordinary statement. It suggests, among other things, the lamentable inexperience of Senator McGovern in the field of foreign affairs. Gratuitously to insult an ally is an act of bush-league diplomacy, and needlessly to make promises in so sensitive a field is to take positions before they have to be taken.

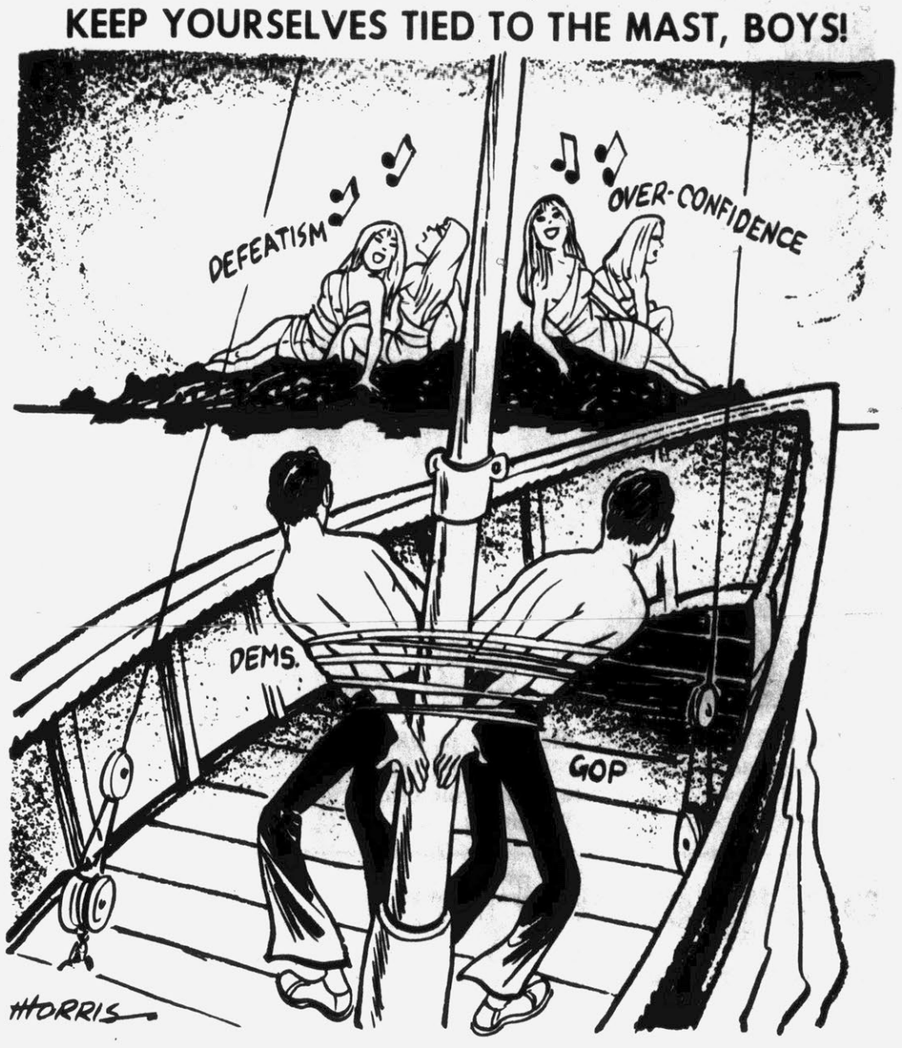

But the letter to Demetracopoulos is more than a tactical blunder. Here McGovern lends respectability to the handful of extreme leftists, identified with former Premier Andreas Papandreou, whose purpose is the violent overthrow of the present regime. These counter-revolutionaries make no bones about their goal.

"There is absolutely no possibility for an evolutionary solution of the Greek problem," Papandreou said in a statement last October. He urged his followers to a course of "dynamic armed struggle and harsh confrontation." In place of the colonels' regime he promised a new order that would by "Socialist and not simply social democratic," which is to say, Socialist in the Communist pattern of East Germany.

The suspicion will not go away that Demetracopoulos and his friends have made a prize sucker out of Geroge McGovern. Their object is power for themselves: They propose quite simply to throw the present rascals out and to put their own rascals in. They do not promise a free society. Papandreou's gauzy promise is for "democracy in the context of a Socialist community surpassing the petrified type and proceeding to new lively forms of participation of the people in all the decisions which concern them." Marvelous, is it not?

It is easy to criticize the colonels' regime: It has done some bad things. But it has accomplished much good also, in terms of internal order and economic growth. If the Papandreou gang should take over, a NATO ally would be lost, and the Greek people would merely become victims of a different despotism. By foolishly aligning himself with this crowd, McGovern reveals the innocence of a ribbon clerk in a high-stakes game. One would prefer, in a presidential nominee, a man who plays his cards close to his chest.

Badge And A Gun Are No Longer Enough To Make Good Policeman

By NANCY DUCKETT

RALEIGH — A bage and a gun are not enough to make a good policeman.

North Carolina is very much aware of this fact. During the fiscal year just ended, the State trained approximately 10,000 law enforcement officers through the technical institute-community college system. This number not only includes policemen but sheriffs, highway patrolmen, prison guards, ABC and wildlife enforcement officers, probation officers and personnel from the License and Thief Division of the Department of Motor Vehicles.

The overall training program ranges from basic courses for the rookie to specialized, advanced courses for the senior officer, according to Robert. M. Stevenson, director, law enforcement training for the Department of Community Colleges.

Titles of the courses give some insight into what the program is all about. Among the number are Arrest, Armed Robbery, Juveniles (aspects of investigation and dealing with juveniles) Sex Crimes, Drugs and Firearms. The latter course delves into firearms safety and proficiency with the revolver, shotgun, rifle and gas gun, and is one of the more popular courses, according to Stevenson.

Among the more specialized work is training for Breathalyzer (chemical test for alcohol) and computer speed device operators.

The basic training program, designed for the newpoliceman, adds up to 160 class hours. Among the areas studies are constitutional law, elements of criminal offenses and motor vehicle laws.

According to Director Stevenson one of the principal goals of law enforcement training is to provide officers with this basic training in a short period of time, and hopefully, one year after they become officers. "Beyond this goal we want to provide additional training in specialized schools, and our ultimate goal is to get all law enforcement officers up to professional status," said Stevenson.

Stevenson foresees an even more accelerated law enforcement training program when the Criminal Justice Training and Standrads Council goes into operation. The council, created by the 1971 session of the General Assembly, will set minimum training requirements and standards for all law enforcement officers, which will mean more officers will be going back to school.

In additon to the variety of courses available for employed law enforcement officers, a two-year, technical program in police science is offered by 13 technical institutes and community colleges. This program, which leads to an associate in applied science degree, is attracting both the seasoned officer and the recent high school graduate who has no training. "About 50 percent have been law enforcement officers and about 50 percent have not. Many of those who go into the two-year program have taken some of the short-term courses and realize the importance of additional training," said Stevenson.

The schools offering the two-year program are Beaufort County, Durham, Forsyth, Guilford, Pitt, Alamance, Tri-County, Holding and Wilson County technical institutes and Central Piedmont, Davidson County, Gaston and Western Piedmont community colleges. A two-year program was approved by the State Board of Education the first of July to be offered by Martin Technical Institute.

Director Stevenson, who was a long-time employe of the FBI before joining the Department of Community Colleges' staff, sees a definite change in the attitude toward law enforcement training across the state. In the beginning the acceptance of the training was not overwhelming. Now, as evidenced by the number of men and women who took courses last year, the training is accepted and valued across the state.

the past three years. "If money was raised as a result of that luncheon, I've been misled," Kissinger told us. Unknown to Kissinger, Schreiber made an overt fund-raising pitch after Kissinger left the restaurant.

Kissinger took no chances at Wednesday's lucneon. Although Jewish Democrats invited were originally told both Kissinger and Stans would be present, Kissinger refused to attend unless Stans dropped out.

Most of the work is finished now, thanks partly to somnolence by the McGovern campaign. The California and New York Democrats who agreed secretly to support the President were never proselytized by McGovern's agents. To this hour, no McGovern operative has asked Humphrey to bell his erstwhile fat cats for McGovern.

Now it is too late. Mr. Nixon has made inroads into the Jewish Democratic establishment unthinkable only weeks ago, perhaps signalling a party realignment in November of major proportions.

Holshouser Has A Hard Worker In Frank Rouse

By JOHN KILGO

RALEIGH — Eric Segal, the author of Love Story, should have been at Kinston last week. He would have lapped it up.

The occasion was a barbecue, sponsored by Frank Rouse on behalf of Republican gubernatorial nominee Jim Holshouser. I was unable to attend because of a last minute conflict.

But I talked with Republicans who went and they were impressed with what happened. Rouse, who did his best to help Jim Gardner defeat Holshouser in the primary, is now working like a pack mule for Holshouser.

The purpose of the Kinston rally was to bring a lot of Gardner supporters together and let them see first-hand that Holshouser didn't have horns and carry a pitchfork.

One eastern Republican told me: "A lot of us Gardner people were going to sit this thing out in the fall. Rouse got us down there and talked to us, introduced Holshouser around, and you'd be surprised what a difference it made. Many of those Gardner people went away from there pledged to help Holshouser in the fall."

That was the plus in Rouse retaining his post as chairman. The Gardner people feel like the Republican Party has treated them as second class citizens. Now they can look at the top and see Rouse sitting up there as chairman, and he's one of the good ole boys.

It is no secret that Rouse has been busy the past three weeks trying to organize Gardner supporters to get out there in the bushes and go to work for Holshouser.

He has told some close associates that he has been more successful than he figured he would.

Rouse told me: "I've talked with some Gardner supporters on Holshouser's behalf and I'm pleased with the response I've received."

A lot of work remains to be done because some sores from the primary are still slow to heal. But Eric Segal would have loved that barbecue supper in Kinston.

The hearts and roses turnabout between Rouse and Holshouser makes us wonder if a similar reconciliation can be made between George McGovern, the Democratic nominee for president, and the octopus-like labor organization.

George Meany has said a firm no to McGovern. Yet, McGovern has begun his soft-sell toward the labor leader by saying Meany is really not a meany. Individual labor groups are beginning to make their own choice.

Politics makes strange bedfellows. Even when they refuse to go to bed in the beginning.

Democratic organization meetings in North Carolina on a national basis are slowly taking form. Our suspicion is the men who mould the tempo are awaiting developments from the Republican convention.

The choice of Spiro Agnew by Richard Nixon as his vice president came with all the fanfare of violin music at the dinner hour. It wasn't unexpected; yet, it was announced so softly it hardly created a stir.

Mr. Nixon never makes a move without the calculation of a chess player. The Republican convention has the earmarks of a Sunday school class coming to order.

But don't bet it won't be without at least one firecracker. The Nixon strategy demands noise when it is least expected. Examples were the trips to Peking and Moscow.

"These peoples' jobs are to infiltrate socially prominent circles and establish contacts," a BDN spokesman said.

He said salaries for these agents are often high—ranging from $400 to $4,000 per month. Part-time spies and those who occasionally pass along tips are paid $10 to $10,000, depending on the value of the tip.

Another task of the "elite agents" is to penetrate and influence trade unions, industrial and cultural institutions. Although methods vary, end results are almost always achieved through bribery, blackmail, extortion and threat.

Normally Dull Economic Statistics Tell Big Story Of A 'Boom'

By GEORGE BRYANT, JR.

If reading and listening to the "big" news these days leaves you with a feeling that the country is going to pot, in more ways than one, you may find some reassurance in normally dull economic statistics.

These cold numbers tell a lot about the way the nation works and plays, eats and sleeps. Right now they are telling of a recovery that is moving at boom-time speed, along a widening front.

Whether the Nixon administration actually planned it this way, with the November election in mind, is a question that politicians and economists, too, will debate. But among forecasters, there is general agreement that the momentum at hand will continue the trend into early 1973, at least.

The most significant statistic of recent days was the second quarter performance of gross national product, compiled by the Commerce Department. GNP, the overall measure of goods and services produced, rose at an annual rate of 8.9 per cent, after adjustment for rising prices. This is the sharpest gain since 1965, when the Vietnam war buildup got rolling.

During the April-June period, the rate of inflation dropped sharply. It hit an annual rate of 2.1 per cent during the three months, compared with a 5.1 per cent rate in the first quarter. For the month of June, consumer prices rose at an annual rate of only 1.2 per cent.

Obviously, this second quarter performance on the GNP and price front is better than economists in and out of government had foreseen. Their earlier projections had displayed caution, since the recovery from the 1970 lows had been much slower than anticipated.

What's happened, of course, may not be repeated in the last half of the year. And, of course, it doesn't take the economy out of the field of election-year political controversy. With Vietnam becoming less and less of a war, politics is certain to focus on the economy.

But from candidate Nixon's standpoint, the trend certainly gives him a tremendous advantage, even though the best interpretation which can be put on this year's economic developments leaves a lot of doubt about the future.

One of the major questionmarks, of course, is the federal budget. Spending is climbing at a rapid rate and unless the taxpayer is going to be called upon to shoulder still higher burdens, a brake must be applied. The reason is that resulting deficits can quickly erase any gains made in the fight on inflation.

Another trouble area is the problem of the dollar in foreign exchange markets. The reason for its weakness boils down to sloppy fiscal and monetary policies here at home. Until foreign nations see a determined effort to overcome the chronic deficit, the dollar will stay in trouble. Inflation invites trade barriers.

But Nixon has a strong case to take to the voters, even if he has failed to return the economy to a so-called full employemnt level. For most voters, the times are not just simply good. They have seldom, if ever, been better, on balance.

Statistics on employment and income tell the story of an economy that is expanding and on a record base.

Today, there are more than 81-million men and women at work, a gain of some 3-million in 12-months. That's a whopping inrease, comparable to the sharpest rises which took place during the peak demand of the Vietnam war. And what's also important, from the standpoint of the whole economy, is that this work force is drawing the highest level of income ever.

This may offer small comfort to the 5.5 per cent unemployed. But in the broad picture, it provides a huge base of demand under the entire economy.

Personal income now is running at an annual rate of well over $900-billion. This has driven per capita income to a new record, even after adjustments for price changes.

Coporate profits are a bright spot. Gains have been sufficient to convince business executives that they should go ahead with plant expansions and improvements in anticipation of a rising demand. This sort of spending makes jobs.

It's the sort of a picture which would favor Nixon, even if the Democrats were not so plagued with party troubles.

Street Gangs Use Violence Fighting Drug Pushers

By EMMETT GEORGE

NEW YORK (UPI)—While suburban middle-class parents worry about their teen-agers using drugs, New York City street gangs claim they are ridding their communities of hard drug traffickers and pushers.

Whether they are producing positive results is a matter of opinion.

In some of the toughest youth gangs, a militant opposition to hard drugs, addicts and pushers has resulted in "assaults, stabbings and shootings," according to police.

There have been at least five cases this year of confrontations between gangs and drug pushers in the Bronx, one of New York's five boroughs, including one incident in May when 75 gang members allegedly shot three pusher-addicts and stabbed three others.

Police who say the gangs only fight the pushers when they "come down" on one of their members, are worried that the violence may add to an already explosive situation in the South Bronx, where the gangs "have better weapons than we do" and where they already add "immeasureably" to the crime rate.

Heavily Armed Gangs

The business of street gangs is crime—"cafeteria type" and unspecialized, usually assaults, minor violence, robbery, purse snatchings, muggings and shakedowns of other teen-agers. But they can and do commit murder during periodic waves of gang warfare.

Teen-agers in New York ghettos generally join gangs for mutual protection—whites say they need protection against blacks and vice versa—and currently many gang members say they need protection "against the pushers."

New York's drug addiction problem is staggering. The U.S. Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs estimates there are 302,000 drug addicts in the city and an unknown number of pushers, many addicts themselves.

In the Bronx and Manhattan, where there are an estimated 9,000 members of 300 gangs—who prefer to call themselves "clubs"—a reporter who visited five gangs found them in nearly unanimous disapproval of hard drugs.

"Nobody uses drugs," said a member of the 755-man Seven Immortals, a powerful and well-organized club whose "turf" in the Bronx, police say, is probably the highest crime area in New York.

The Immortals' headquarters is an old apartment in which 35 teen-agers, mostly Spanish-American, were crowded. They included a number of pretty young girls.

Reporter Ousted

Some of the younger members were eager to elaborate on the subject, but the interview was abruptly concluded when a stocky dark-skinned youth ordered them to stop talking to the reporter and told him to leave.

The same youth, identified by police as Samuel Patterson, was found about a month later shot to death.

About 10 blocks away is the territory of Black Magic, a younger and slightly less established club which has about 500 members organized in 40 divisions.

An 18-year-old youth named Leslie is a Black Magic division vice president—a hip, handsome youth with a full black Afro, dressed in blue jeans, white tennis shoes and decoratively patched, neatly pressed pants.

"We don't dig it," he said. "Young people have seen their older brothers mess up their lives using drugs."

Drug addicts and pushers "only go where they are wanted and they are not wanted here," he said. "We get high but we get high off liquor."

Black Magic's turf is Cypress Park in the Bronx, an area of tennis and basketball courts where the gang contends for control with the nearby Cypress Bachelors.

White Man's Scourge?

"Drugs haven't been here until the white man started making them," said a second Black Magic member. Another, the club's warlord, said the members "want to do something for our neighborhood, to keep them (junkies and pushers) from robbing our mothers."

Friction with police on the drug problem was obvious.

Leslie said Black Magic tried working with the police but "they just told us, 'What you are doing is wrong.' They have a negative attitude."

On the lower southeast side of Manhattan, street gangs are dominated by Latin-Americans. The membership seems younger than that of the clubs in the Bronx.

Satan Sons, which has a membership of more than 1,000, claimed credit for eliminating hard drug trafficking entirely in its predominantly Puerto Rican neighborhood.

"We are cleaning up 138th Street," a 16-year-old Satan Sons member said proudly. "There are guys who don't wear colors and they find out things for us—who the pushers are."

Katos Wunchacus, a small group in Manhattan, is more like a recreation club than a gang and concentrates mainly on athletics. It claims none of its members uses drugs. "If one guy does get hooked maybe we can help him kick," a member said.

Dynamite Brothers, another mainly Hispanic club, also claims its membership is clean of hard drugs.

"We tell them, 'If you are going to be in this club, keep off drugs,'" said Sam, a 16-year-old black member.

Police Skeptical

Police are skeptical about the results.

"What the leadership is saying concerning drugs in all cases is not filtering down to the membership," said Sgt. Craig Collins, who directs police gang intelligence operations in the Bronx. "We have evidence that the gangs themselves are not entirely free of drugs."

"The gangs have not depreciated the drug influx in Manhattan," said Sgt. William McCarthy, who works with the street clubs. "It makes for good public relations for them but it's not serving the purpose."

'BLACK MAGIC' gang members in the Bronx rejected use of "hard core" drugs and the club's warlord says members "want to do something for our neighborhood." (UPI Telephoto)

THE KATOS WUNCHACUS bill themselves as more of a recreation club than a gang. This doesn't mean they don't protect themselves and each other. (UPI Telephoto)

Balanced Farm Approach For Pitt Countian

By ROBERT DUKE
The Herald, Ahoskie
Printed Monday, July 17

AHOSKIE — "Don't call me a 'gentleman farmer', please," urges Wallace T. Gray, a highly successful Hertford County businessman-farmer whose "balanced" approach to livestock raising and agriculture should be carefully noted by those trying to find profit on the farm.

"Farming is in my blood and I work as hard as anyone else on the farms when I'm not busy in the wholesale meat business at North State," declares Gray, a Pitt County native who has been president and manager of North State Provision Company, Inc., since 1957.

350 Acres Total

The businessman cum farmer owns a two farms, totaling 350 acres, three miles south of Ahoskie on the Center Grove Road. And he gets a lot done on that land—polled Hereford breeder stock and cross-bred feeder pig raising in addition to the "old" varieties of tobacco (such as Virginia Gold) and the usual peanut and corn crops.

"If we have a bad year in one sector of my farming operations, the other areas are usually successful enough to return at least a small profit," reports the Pitt County native.

Secretary-treasurer of the North Carolina Polled Hereford Association since the organization was formed in 1967, Gray sells approximately 50 head of polled Hereford breeder stock each year at prices ranging from $300 to $1,000 per head.

Space Saving

"Polled" means that the animal does not have horns, according to the North State president. Polled Herefords can be raised in less space. Also, horns do not have to be removed when you steer polled calves. It takes twice as much room at the feed through for any horned cattle as it does for the polled Hereford.

"And don't forget that it's H-e-r-E-f-o-r-d and not H-e-r-t-f-o-r-d. A lot of us folks around here have a natural tendency to misspell this word in reference to the cattle," grins the business like but genial Gray.

The Polled Hereford Association secretary-treasurer has cattle on one of his adjacent farms and hogs on the other. "We keep the animals apart in order to cut down on the chances of disease," he relates.

Gray's swine operation involves selling pigs to men called "feeders" who make their living fattening the pigs into adult hogs. Each year the Ahoskie businessman sells approximately 250 feeder pigs at prices as high as $25 to $35 per head. (This year the pigs have been selling quite high, almost half the price of the grown hog.)

Cross-Breeding

"We use cross-breeding—a sow of one breed with a registered boar of another breed," says Gray. "It makes a real 'thrifty' (fast-growing) pig."

The modern feeder pig operation features a furrowing parlor, where the pigs are born. They are raised in pastures and lots until time to sell them.

Is all of Gray's operation up-to-date? "It's fair," he replies, "but not exactly what I would like to have in the future."

In addition to his livestock raising, Gray has 12 acres of the "old" varieties of tobacco on his two farms.

"We raise the old varieties of tobacco that are not resistant because we have little disease in our land and we grow these non-resistant strains. We get a better price for this superior quality leaf."

Last season tobacco from Gray's farm brought as high as $1.38 per pound.

"The farmers in our neighborhood think we're dong something special to get higher prices," observes Gray.

"Actually, all we do is use the older varieties and carefully rotate our crops to lessen the chance of disease."

With his eggs—er, efforts —in so many baskets—er, directions—it would appear that only an extremely fickle fate could doom all of Gray's operations at one time. As the old cliche goes, "there's apparently strength in numbers—cattle, pigs, tobacco, peanuts, and corn."

Ship Collection Acquired From Movie Studio Sales

DON V. CLAIR stands beside working model of battleship "Kirishima" in warehouse housing his collection, one of the largest of its type in the U.S. (UPI Telephoto)

By JAMES O. CLIFFORD

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI)—Don V. Clair stood in his warehouse among the Japanese ships that attacked Pearl Harbor and said:

"I could have had the American fleet but there wasn't much left of it."

He wasn't talking about the result of the Dec. 7, 1941 attack, but about the destruction of the American fleet in the movie "Tora! Tora! Tora!"

The Imperial Japanese Navy ships from the movie are part of his vast maritime collection, one of the largest private collections of its type in the country.

The Japanese vessels include a model battleship, a 40-foot carrier, another carrier, two cruisers and two destroyers.

"The battleship cost the movie company $75,000 to build," he said.

The working models are complete to the finest details, down to hatch covers and screens over funnels.

Visited Movie Auctions

Clair, who bought the Japanese ships at a movie company auction, has several other famous vessels used in the movies.

The "Exodus," the little tramp steamer that smuggled Jewish refugees into Palestine in the film of the same name, sits between two of the Japanese ships.

There's also the galleon from "Ben Hur," complete with 100 oars on each side that are pulled back and forth by a motor in the hull.

"We're restoring the galleon now," Clair said. "The boats are in pretty bad shape when we get them."

In another warehouse, Clair has what he considers his favorite. It's the 39-foot pirate ship used in "The Black Swan" that starred Tyrone Power.

Clair also has the "Flounder" from Dr. Doolittle.

"She's really a fun boat 'cause she's built all out of proportion," Clair said.

Submarines are lined up in a neat row, resembling a U-boat pen. These boats all flew the Stars and Stripes in their war effort. One was used in the submarine classic "Run Silent, Run Deep" starring Clark Gable and Burt Lancaster.

Clair's warehouses are crammed with other items of maritime interest, including scores of more traditional models of sailing vessels and warships. Divers gear, pirate pistols and navigational equipment fill the rooms upstairs.

$250,000 Collection

Clair said he has invested $250,000 in his collection and "now it's getting much more than a hobby, too expensive."

He has a ferryboat, the Santa Rosa, docked in Oakland and would like to put his collection aboard her and open it to the public if he obtains city backing.

Clair started gathering nautical artifacts shortly after World War II, in which he served in the Marine Corps.

"I went into the salvage business after the war and saved the name plaques from ships my firm broke up," he said, pointing to rows of ships' name plates hanging on a wall. "I broke up so many LSTs I couldn't count them all."

"I hope some city gets interested in preserving the collection," Clair said. He insists, however, that the collection remain intact.

"Maritime museums have already wanted to buy some of the pieces but I want to keep it all together," he said.

May Be Oldest Dictionary Page

HANOVER, N.H. (AP) — What may be the oldest dictionary page preserved in the United States is a 9th century manuscript fragment that has been presented to the Dartmouth College Library.

The rare item is a vellum leaf from a Glossarum written in northern France before 850 AD. On both sides of the sheet are five columns of manuscript on alphebetical listings under the letter R.

The Glossarum leaf, earliest specimen in Dartmouth's collection, was donated by Mark Lansburgh, Colorado Springs, Colo., art historian and an authority on medieval manuscripts.

Motel Industry Sees Growing Losses To New Kind Of Crime

By MERV BLOCK

In the 1940s the late J. Edgar Hoover described them as "a new home of crime in America, a new home of disease, bribery, corruption, crookedness, rape, white slavery, thievery and murder ... There are few major cases in the FBI involving an extended pursuit in which the roadside crime-nest is not responsible for some form of easy lawlessness."

He was talking about motels.

And today for motel owners and operators, who keep 1.4 million rooms going day and night across the country—more rooms than hotels have—there is a new kind of lawlessness. And it costs.

Today's Mr. and Mrs. Middle America take home mementoes with them from wherever they stop—and some professional thieves use the easy-access motels as a source for everything from television sets to fire extinguishers.

Amid the growing loss in towels, sheets, blankets, lamps, mirrors, the motel owner also finds an occasional room wiped out bed and all.

And all of this is because motels are such big business.

The word "motel" was devised by a Californian who combined the front end of "motor" with the back end of "hotel." In 1925 he built the first one, Milestone Mo-Tel, at San Luis Obispo, halfway between Los Angeles and San Francisco. The total distance is 400 miles, but in those days it was a tiring, two-day drive.

Whatever they call themselves, motels in the United States number about 43,300—and counting. There are fewer than half that number of hotels, about 21,100—and dwindling. While motels almost doubled and motel rooms quintupled in the past quarter century, hotels decreased by a third.

The greatest concentration of motels and hotels sprawls along Miami Beach. Florida has more motels than any other state, with the possible exception of California. Florida is surging ahead because of all the building—some say "overbuilding"—near Disney World, outside Orlando.

There is a new element on the motel horizon—budget motels. There are only some 10,000 budget rooms available, but the number is growing. They cut service and frills to almost nothing.

The biggest chain of budgets is Motel 6, owner of 96 motels in 23 states. Advance payment, cash only, no credit cards or checks allowed. No reservation system. No night clerks. But then rooms run under $10 a day.

Penny-pinching pays: In Las Vegas where few people sleep anyway, Motel 6 has drawn many a full house. Their motel, with 303 rooms, less than a year old, has attained an average occupancy of 94 per cent. In San Diego, their motel registered 100 percent for all 1969 (it's now a shade less), a phenomenal rate, even though more than one town is suspected of having a motel with an occupancy rate of 250 per cent.

The giant of the lodging industry is Holiday Inns: Holiday has 1,343 domestic inns and 84 foreign.

Worldwide, Holiday has about 212,000 rooms open, more than its four closest rivals combined, excluding referral associations such as Best Western. Second largest is ITT Sheraton, with 63,800 rooms (992 in San Diego alone). Next is Ramada Inns, with 52,000 rooms. Fourth is Hilton, with 45,500. Fifth is Howard Johnson, with 45,000.

That's a lot of Gideon Bibles, and a lot of pillows, blankets, and television sets—so many people think, there for the taking.

Nowadays motel owners bolt television sets to tables, or wire them to alarms. Motel 6 brands their sets, as you would cattle, to reduce resale value.

But every new offering brings a new thief. Waterbeds became popular and motels searching for business offered some rooms with waterbeds. Until guests siphoned out the water and packed the empty, folded beds in their suitcases.

Gets Answers To Balloons

WILTON, Conn. (AP) — Still tossing message-filled bottles into the sea? No longer. A group of Girl Scouts recently tried a modern twist. At the end of their International Jubilee Rally, held in June this year in Redding, Conn. the troops launched 127 helium-filled balloons. Each one carried a postcard with an individual girl's name, age and return address.

Since the launching, several post cards have been returned, indicating the balloons went north before turning east out to sea. On June 8, Sarah Kozma received her card from Capt. J. Meyer, where he had rescued it from the middle of Long Island Sound.

Twenty days later, Brownie Scout, Debbie Connell, and Junior Scout, Leslie Hawley, received a postcard from Luxembourg, dated June 18, 1972. The translated message reads: "Dear Leslie and Debbie: Today I was walking on Liberty Avenue — what a surprise when I saw a balloon alight in front of me. I opened the small package and found these postcards. When it came down the balloon was very tired, but do not worry because I gave it fresh air — it is resting — already it seems to look bigger. These postcards were sent a long distance — I congratulate you. Au revoir. Signed Joe Viamonte."

Pipeline Carries Out The Garbage

NEW YORK (AP) — The days of bickering over whose turn it is to take out the garbage may soon be over.

A pneumatic pipeline system developed in Sweden to carry refuse from housing complexes to central waste processing facilities is being used effectively in several countries, reports the Glass Container Manufacturers Institute.

Such systems are being installed in the U.S. at Disney World in Florida and in an apartment development in New Jersey, the institute says. The systems operate on the same principle as the pneumatic tubes sometimes used in banks and department stores.

The institute says that such systems will facilitate the economics of recycling by cutting down on the high cost of collecting garbage by traditional methods.

Drama School Says No Talent

PRAGUE (AP) — Ever since he was 13, Roman Skamene has been acting in films. After his title role in Mark Twain's "The Prince and the Pauper," he was getting so much fan mail the postman refused to carry it and the boy had to go to the post office himssf to pick up his 200-300 letters a day.

Though directors describe him as a "God-given talent" and Roman has tried three times to get into the drama academy he was always turned down as "lacking in talent."

He is booked to shoot two more films but wants to try the fourth time for academy enrollment.

More Summer Camps Available To Young Blind

By DON BEMAN

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI)—Like many normal child activities, summer camp used to be just a dream for blind or visually impaired children. Not any more.

In 1967, Ray Hubbartt decided that despite the apprehension of parents and others, the visually handicapped had just as much right to enjoy a summer outing as any other child.

He opened a one-week camp in Florida, with the financial backing of the Christian Record Braille Foundation, headquartered in Lincoln.

The foundation, after studying the results, named Hubbartt national blind camps director and gave him the go-ahead to expand.

In 1970, three camps were offered. That was increased to six in 1971 and this summer applications were accepted for 11 week-long camps in Arkansas, Oklahoma, Alabama, Massachusetts, Florida, Indiana, Iowa, Nebraska, Washington, Virginia and California.

Last year, youngsters ranging in age from 9 to 18 attended the camps from 26 states. This year, applications were accepted from 40-plus states at an average of 80 per camp and indications were the number of sites will have to be increased again next year.

Funds Lacking

The foundation said its program is not the only effort of its kind. On a single-state basis, camps have been started in Texas and Wisconsin at various times.

"But nobody has the money to keep them going," said R.L. Sheldon, public relations director for the foundation.

The foundation has behind its camp project an international organization which serves the visually impaired in 88 countries with the necessary fund-raising mechanism to provide everything to their clients free of charge, including the camps.

Although affiliated with the Seventh-Day Adventist church, the foundation provides braille and large print books, recorded magazines, taping services for textbooks, equipment and other services on a non-sectarian basis.

To aid those in the United States, the foundation has a network of 90 field representatives who work directly with the visually handicapped and also head area fund drives.

The camps cost $50 per child in direct expenses and while parents may contribute, national fund-raising efforts are conducted each fall for the next year's program.

Even trading stamp drives are included in those efforts. Twenty-five books equals the $50 fee needed.

Reluctant At First

But, Hubbartt said, even with the tradition of the foundation behind each camp, there is still a parental timidity about sending their blind or visually impaired children to one.

"We know almost every child wants to go," he said, "but we also know that almost every parent is apprehensive."

Helping parents allay their fears is the job of the foundation's area representative who, at the same time, take care of arrangements.

Part of the apprehension may even result from the list of camp activities, Hubbartt said.

Reading it gives no indication that participants have any special problems. Camp brochures list water skiing, swimming, boating, horseback riding, archery and nature walks as some of the activities.

However, the brochure-applications differ from others in that each parent must sign an agreement which allows the news media to visit camps with cameras in hand.

Parents are told the reason is that "we want everyone to know that our children and their interests are no different than those of any wholesome, red-blooded child."

Few Differences Noted

At camp, there are a few differences, but not as many as one would think, Hubbartt said.

For example, safety lines are strung around the camp and one counselor may have no more than four charges at any one time. But the sites are not specifically designed for the visually handicapped and, except for the week the foundation uses them, they serve as regular summer camps.

Hubbartt also said no large, specially trained staff is imported to operate the camp for the week of use by blind youngsters. A short training session for existing camp personnel is held just prior to the time the children arrive and daily sessions are held as needed to take care of special problems.

Of course, there are other differences, the director conceded, such as in the handicrafts department.

"Their work may not be the best, but the thrill of doing the same things as their sighted friends enjoy makes up for any technical deficiency," he said.

In one respect, at least, the blind youngsters go one up on their sighted friends in activities. That is a "hands-on (instead of hands-off) zoo."

Each camp has a nature center where the children are allowed to "see" tamed animals with their hands, Included are alligators, raccoons and black bears.

But over-all, "fun is what it's all about," Hubbartt said. And brochures reassure parents: "All campers are a sacred trust to us and we pledge ourselves to help each camper receive the thrill that summer camping offers."

(Editors note: Persons interested in more particulars about the camping program may write National Camps for the Blind, Box 6097, Lincoln, Neb. 68506)..

'Last Of The Mountain Men' Lives In Philosophy Of The Past

By JAMES L. OVERTON

DU BOIS, Wyo. (UPI)—In the Wind River Mountains, scouted by John Charles Fremont and Jim Bridger nearly a century and a half ago, a little of the past still lives in the figure, and the philosophy, of Timber Jack Joe. Last of the mountain men, he calls himself.

He was born Joe Lyno across state in Gillette, Wyo., over 60 years ago but here in this town of 500 where he spends the summers no one calls him anything but Timber Jack Joe. He earned his name cutting diseased timber in the mountains during his youth, and in the off-season he still cuts timber for the Forest Service.

Timber Jack Joe's busy season is when the snows lie heavy on the mountains. Then he travels a 100-mile line on the back of an Apaloosa Indian pony, setting his traps and leading a solitary existence in four widely spaced shacks.

"I've been trapping ever since I could sit on a horse," he recalled in an interview. "I can do anything I want, but I wouldn't do anything else. These mountains are my whole life."

Father Was A Gambler

Joe was first introduced to trapping when he hunted wolves with his gambler father. He would slip down into a wolves' den with a lighted candle. If the candle reflected the light of the wolves' eyes, his father would shoot.

"Sometimes I got kinda scratched up, but I was always proud my dad would let me go along," said Joe, toying with the trophy necklace he wears constantly.

The necklace is a leather thong on which he has an ivory medallion of a grizzly bear, symbol of the mountain man's accomplishments. The medallion is flanked by rows of two-inch-long grizzly claws still with tufts of dark hair.

The rest of Joe's costume is equally colorful. Handsewn buckskin trousers and shirt, tattered from wear in the bush, hang loosely on his barrel-chested, ramrod-straight frame. His faded red long-handle underwear—worn winter and summer—contrast with the butternut tone of the skins.

"I shot 'em, I ate 'em, I wear 'em—and they stink," he said, jovially.

Skunk Habadashery

The only detail that is not in keeping with the traditional garb of the mountain men of the Old West is Joe's hat. It is not made of the usual beaver or coon but of skunk. His longish grey hair, once sun-bleached brown, is kept out of his eyes by a beaded band made by an Indian friend and on his feet are mocassins made of deer and elk skin with an elaborate bead pattern in red and blue.

A full beard seldom trimmed adorns a studious and perceptive face. A vintage .45 caliber double-action Colt revolver loaded with homemade rounds is slung in a worn shoulder holster and a Bowie knife with an elk-bone handle hangs in a buffalo hide scabbard at his side. Coiled around his neck, with the grip readily in reach, rests a leather-plaited bull whip.

During the summer months when he cannot trap, Joe is a familiar figure at rodeos and parades in the area. He participates in such events as Custer's Last Stand in South Dakota, the Crow Indian festival, and Cheyenne's Frontier Days celebration. He recently helped film a documentary on Yellowstone National Park and has even been a guest at the Playboy Club in Denver.

Although the world of Playboy bunnies, jet planes and transistors is far removed from his wilderness home, Joe is not unaware of current events.

"Sure I care what happens in the world today, that's why I work with kids," he said. "If I can put a good thought in their mind, rather than a bad one, then I've done some good."

Hosted Deaf Children

Father of four sons (the youngest graduates from college this year), Joe took 10 deaf children with him last winter on a trap-setting trip. He said proudly that the kids were "really great."

He is equally fond of animals and because he surrounds himself with pets, he is never alone in the lonely winter months. With him constantly are his pony, Papoosie, and Tuffy, his English Shepherd dog. He also keeps in tow two other dogs, a badger raised from birth and a baby skunk.

At one time Timber Jack Joe had a pet eagle, raised from a crippled eaglet, but federal officials told him he would have to free it even though it could not fly or defend itself. Joe kept it by applying for a zoo license.

"I tell the kids if they can be nice to animals, they can be nice to people—that's what's important," he said.

He shows less patience with the older generation — "the people who litter."

"Most people don't even care for themselves anymore," he said. "They're living in their own mess."

Waving his single-gloved hand in the direction of the snow-capped peaks, he summed up how he feels about his life:

"As long as you are something and can believe in yourself, you're all right. There's always a better day and a better meal."

TIMBER JACK JOE plays with one of the animal inhabitants of his seemingly lonely wilderness world. (UPI Telephoto)

Old Cans In Nairobi Are 'Re-Cycled'

By ANDREW TORCHIA

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — The two old men sit on the sidewalk, surrounded by rows of tin cans and bottles, and talk of Africa long ago. One says he can remember when there were no white men.

The other talks of his days in jail, detained by the British as a Mau Mau tribal fighter before Kenya became independent.

Wanjie Kamau and Gichuhi Muchuru left their villages and came to Nairobi some 30 years ago to set themselves up selling secondhand tin cans—pioneers in litter removal and recylcing resources long before conservationists took up the problems.

The used bottle and can business is thriving in Nairobi today, with Kamau and Muchuru acknowledged as deans of the trade. Their headquarters is a crowded stretch of sidewalk outside a gray-columned Hindu temple on River Road, in a throbbing African and Asian commercial district.

Young African mothers in miniskirts and turbans, their babies wrapped tightly on their backs papoose-style in red and yellow cloths, browse through a bookstall. African jazz blasts from a record shop.

In double-breasted jacket and rubber-tire sandals, Muchuru waits for buyers and sellers, alike, to pass his 7-foot-long patch of pavement. He's surrounded by a dozen other sidewalk businesses, including one that displays framed portraits of Jesus by leaning them against the temple wall.

"We pray inside the temple, not outside," a Hindu said with a shrug.

Muchuru buys gallon oil cans at 21 cents and sells them at 28 cents. Bottles sell at one cent to $1.40. Oil drums go up to $4.20. Oil lamps made from tin cans cost 7 cents without a wick.

He nets about $21 a month.

Muchuru and Kamau also sell a line of rural toiletries that are widely used even in Nairobi—green twigs as toothbrushes; soft, gray stones to rub mud from feet, and dried, fibrous bush fruit as washcloths.

New bottles and cans are in short supply, and Kenyans find dozens of uses for the second-hand items. Many clinics expect patients to bring their own medicine bottles. A housewife who visits the pest control department at city hall may take home a quart of insecticide in a cognac bottle.

Tinsmiths turn cans into small charcoal cookers used in many African homes.

In fact, the future in used cans looks so bright that Muchuru took on James Wamai as an assistant a few months ago.

"It's not a bad business," says Wamai, 25, who had trouble finding regular work elsewhere. "You make money— it's yours. And you eat that day."

Shuns Easy Life At 92

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (AP) — Arthur Ingham manages two apartment buildings and does all the maintenance work on them himself.

He gardens, plays golf, bowls, swims and writes poetry.

These would seem to be natural accomplishments for a man in the prime of life. But Ingham is 92.

He didn't start writing poetry until after he was 80. Since then he has written 11 historical poems, all but one of them about women of historical importance. His subjects include all six wives of Henry VIII and Elizabeth I.

"I found the lives of these women more interesting than most men in history," he said.

An exception to the exclusively feminine subject matter was a poem on Alexander the Great.

Ingham said he makes a rough draft in prose, then polishes it up into poetry.

He swims every year at a park above Niagara Falls and enjoys occasional dances at social events.

Ingham and his brother formed the Ingham Construction Co. Ltd. They built many residential buildings in Niagara Falls before he retired 20 years ago. But Ingham kept two apartment buildings and maintains them himself.

Gardening is one of his favorite hobbies.

Lyrical Marriage Propaganda Next

A lyrical piece of propaganda for marriage will be the next presentation of the East Carolina Summer Theatre. On July 31 the New York musical hit "I Do! I Do!", bearing the credentials of a 19-month run on Broadway, will begin an engagement of seven performances through August 5, with John Newton and Janet Hayes as its lustrous stars.

The liltingly tuneful and entertaining musical is not merely propaganda for marriage, of course (is there anybody propagandizing against it?) but it's an assertion that matrimony is a good thing, and that life itself can be o.k. In other words, it's an optimistic musical, and thus a rare contrast to many other current musicals, plays, movies and novels which are touched with cynical pessimism.

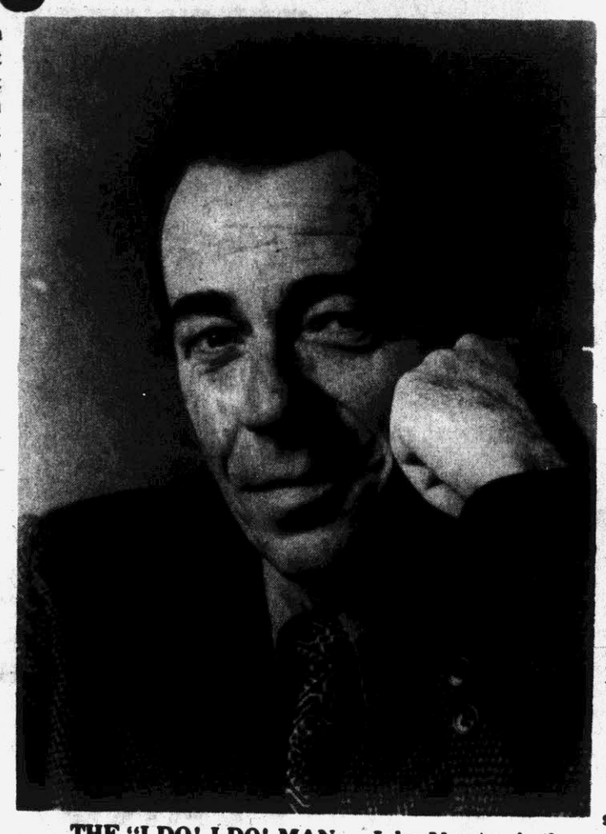

This musical's attitude matches its title in being emphatically affirmative, in saying that while married life can be streaked with troubles and disappointments, on the whole it can be pretty joyful.

Tom Jones and Harvey Schmidt, who came to fame with their first musical "The Fantasticks", created this accentuation of the positive, Jones being responsible for the book and lyrics and Schmidt for the rollicking tunes.

Twenty bouncing songs make up the musical score of "I Do! IDo!" — many of them national favorites after the show's original Broadway and touring successes and its original cast album made the show's bubbling musical paeans to happiness, such as "My Cup Runneth Over," familiar all over the country.

Wade Miller will direct the East Carolina Summer Theatre's production of the musical with scenery to be designed by Robert T. Williams. Another feature of the show will be the wardrobe of quaintly colorful costumes by designer Brooks Van Horn recalling high styles of the period 1890 to 1940, that help to set the progress of the years in the show's chronicle of a long, happy marriage.

Tickets for "I Do! I Do!" are available at the McGinnis Box Office, or by calling 758-6390. The show plays from Monday through Saturday, with a special matinee on Saturday at 2:15.

THE "I DO! I DO! MAN — John Newton is the male lead starring in a happy musical advocating marriage as a highly desirable institution.

TV Notes

NEW YORK (UPI)—Ask Alfred Hitchock if he is going to produce any more suspense dramas for television, and you get this precise and sensible answer: "Why should I? The old ones are still in constant circulation." For 10 years, ending in 1965, Hitch produced 237 half-hour video thrillers and 91 one-hour shows. They're never off the air, always being repeated somewhere.

The female freedom fighters might want to look into this "Bonanza" matter. The veteran, male-dominated western series on NBC is scheduled to open in the fall with an episode that has Michael Landon, as Little Joe Cartwright, getting married, at long last. But the bride dies, which leaves the Ponderosa again an all-male domain. A gesture that might be considered a copout in the female mind, which must have been thinking for years that a woman's influence would make for a better "Bonanza."

The Harlem Globetrotters' comical basketball entertainments will be broadcast exclusively on "ABC's Wide World of Sports" for the next three years. There will be one game each year.

Star Dennis Weaver and his "McCloud" suspense-detective series will be back for a third season as an alternating segment on "NBC Sunday Mystery Movie," which undergoes a slight title change as it moves from Wednesday night to 8:30 p.m. Sundays.

RECORDING IN CANADA

TORONTO (AP) — The Canadian Radio-Television Commission's Canadian content regulation, which stipulates that AM radio stations must devote a minumum of 30 per cent of air time to Canadian talent, has resulted in a rush to produce a better-quality product.

In 1970 there was one 16-track studio in the country. Now there are five 16-track studios and one 24-track studio in Toronto. Montreal has a 32-track studio. Other facilities are springing up from Halifax to Vancouver.

Most recording is done in Montreal, Toronto and Vancouver.

Film's Proceeds To Be Used In Fighting Drugs

"The Cross and the Switchblade" will be shown at the Tice Drive-In Theatre Wednesday, Aug. 2, through Tuesday, Aug. 8.

Sponsored by the Greenville Police Department and the Pitt County Sheriff Department, the film will be shown each night at 8:30 p.m. and 10:30 p.m.

Tickets are $1 each if purchased in advance and $1.25 at the gate.

Twenty-five percent of the proceeds will be given to the two sponsors to be used toward fighting drugs in Pitt County.

Based on the autobiographical novel of the Rev. David Wilkerson, "Cross" is the story of a small-town preacher who leaves his Pennsylvania ministry to go to Harlem and help boys of warring Puerto Rican and black gangs face up to dope probelms and renounce violence as a solution to problems.

Rev. Wilkerson now has youth centers throughout the United States that are combating the drug problem among teenagers.

The part of the Rev. Wilkerson is portrayed by Pat Boone.

One of the main characters in the film is Nicky Cruz (played by Erik Estrada). Cruz conducted a three-day crusade in the Greenville area last October.

Cruz, who felt at an early age that his parents did not love him, developed a feeling of hate and distrust for everyone. He was sent to New York to live with an older brother. Cruz did not like living with his brother and his family so he decided to make his own way, regardless of how he had to do it. He led a street gang in killings and robberies to make a living for himself and his gang.

At the age of 18, he was warlord of the ruthless "Mau-Mau" street gang. One day he and his gang attended a revival meeting being conducted by the Rev. Wilkerson. Crux and his friends, who attended the meeting with the idea to ridicule Wilkerson and his religion, were converted to Christianity. Since that time, Cruz has been conducting crusades throughout the United States hoping to help the young people know Christ.

The Nicky Cruz Outreach Project is headquartered in Raleigh..

SINGER MAKES DONATION

NEW YORK (AP) — Neil Diamond has donated $3,000 to Phoenix House here and the same amount to the Los Angeles Free Clinic.

Phoenix House is a rehabilitation center for drug addicts.

The money came from the sale of souvenir programs during a recent U.S. tour by Diamond. It is meant to aid both establishments with purchase of medical supplies and operating expenses.

Book News

From Sheppard Memorial Library

By KAY TAYLOR

Each of the books in today's column concerns either a person or a subject which has been in the fore-front of the news in recent weeks.

Reports from President Nixon's recent trip to China aroused a flurry of interest in the ancient Chinese medical practice of acupuncture. Acupuncture is the art of healing by means of fine needles placed in the skin at certain well defined points. Dr. Louis Moss, a British physician wrote a book in 1964 entitled ACUPUNCTURE AND YOU which has recently been reprinted. Dr. Miss briefly discusses the history of acupuncture then deals with the theory and practice of the art. Time and again he makes specific reference to the use of acupuncture in relieving the distresses of rheumatic diseases, often sighting cases where he himself used acupuncture in treating patients. Although acupuncture is completely alien to the type medical treatment known in the United States, ACUPUNCTURE AND YOU is an interesting book well worth persuing.

From the tip of the consumee's tongue slides the name Ralph Nader and mighty corporations tremble. Ralph Nader, consumers' advocate, praised by thousands, damned by thousands, a man unafraid to stick his thumb into any and every pie to pull the rotten plums. A controversial man, doing perhaps as much damage as he does good, Nader is, nevertheless, the consumers' chief advocate. A lawyer by profession, he relentlessly investigates, exposes, and fights for legislation to protect the consumer.

In his new book CITIZEN NADER, Charles McCarry portrays Ralph Nader, telling of Nader's background, interests, methods, and work. An intensly readable book, CITIZEN NADER gives some insight into the elusive, eccentric man behind the headlines.

No-fault automobile insurance has become a heated political issue in North Carolina and many other states as regulatory agencies seek to curb the excessively high cost of auto insurance. Proponents explain that basically no-fault insurance by-passes costly, time consuming court battles and eliminates the fraud of exaggerated injuries by having each person, victim and person at fault, make claims to his own insurance company. The relationship between the policyholder and the insurance company is supposed to be identical to that which exists under a homeowner's or life insurance policy.

In theory the reforms sought by no-fault insurance are laudible, but does the consumer really benefit? Authors Paul Gillespie and Miriam Klipper in the book NO-FAULT warn the consumer to beware. Insurance companies may simply try to manipulate the law to their own benefit. The authors examine the present no-fault systems in Massachusetts, New York, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Illinois, and Oregon. They take the stand that no-fault insurance should not be regarded as the only alternative. Other systems are presented and discussed.

At a time when North Carolina's own insurance system has been called into question, NO-FAULT is a book of great significance for all drivers.

NEW SUPER-HIGHWAY

MESTRE, Italy (UPI)—Italy's newest super-highway is the Mestre Vittorio Veneto highway which opened in June. The highway provides easy access to the hill resorts of Treviso province and to the winter and summer resorts of the Dolomite Mountains.

BRIDGE-TUNNEL

CAPE CHARLES, Va. (UPI)—The Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel is not only a convenience for travellers, it is a sight-seeing attraction in its own right, including two bridges, two tunnels, a trestled roadway and four artificial islands.

The expansion of The Mushroom in Georgetown Shopping Center downtown Greenville (just off Cotanche) is the occasion for a memorable summer art exhibit in Greenville.

From 2:00 to 5:00 p.m. today, a reception will be held for a mid-summer exhibition in Greenville by two East Carolina University faculty-artists — Donald Sexauer and Edward Reep, with Sexauer showing prints and Reep a series of black and white India ink drawings. (Sexauer is out of town and cannot be on hand at the reception. Reep has plans to be present for at least part of the reception period).

Admirers of Sexauer will very probably take note that these prints represent a further step in Sexauer's noticeable trend in recent years to emerge from the depth of shadows that has strongly characterized much of his earlier work. In this collection, Sexauer's lyrical power takes on new dimensions as the relationship of light and dark becomes sharper. In the excellent portraits of Rabelais, Erasmus, Montaigne, etc, Sexauer dispels any doubt about literary content having a valid place in today's art. These portraits are a clear affirmative that the literary factor can indeed result in exciting art.

The group of crisp black and white India ink drawings by Reep have an interesting background. In a pre-exhibit interview, Reep explained that this series grew out of experiences during a period of hospitalization earlier this year.

"While I was in the hospital," he said, "I would sleep during the day and draw at night. At first the drawings were totally works of fantasy. These I did while I was being withdrawn from medication."

"My doctors, looking at the drawings, diagnosed me as being in a state of euphoria. Based on that, I've called the series 'Euphoria,' " Reep commented.

In his post-medication withdrawal stage, Reep said "I began drawings based on crysanthenums Dr. Wellington Gray had brought to me. "One reason," he remarked, "was to prove to the doctors that I could make the transition from fantasy to the literal, that I was, after all, sane."

Reep mentioned that one crysanthenum drawing — one that has a front and a rear view of a single flower, "Gives the impression, whenlooking at the rear view drawing, of being behind Phyllis Diller when she's on stage."

In this series, Reep continues to reflect the influence of Oriental, particularly Japanese art, in his work.

Mrs. Donna Tabor could not have made a better choice than the Sexauer-Reep combination for an inaugural exhibit. It's encouraging to see the opening of more exhibition space in Greenville and its a pleasure to have recent work of these two artists on view in mid-summer.

NCSA Receives Kresge Grant For Renovation

A grant of $50,000 has been made to the North Carolina School of the Arts by the Kresge Foundation of Birmingham, Mich.

In announcing the grant, Robert Ward, President of the School, said that "the timing could scarcely have been better." It will be used toward the renovation of the school's auditorium, theatre and recital hall.

The $50,000 is a part of $220,000 needed in private funds beyond the State allocation of $450,000 to complete the project.

Payment of the grant is conditioned upon certification on or before April 15, 1973 that the balance of the funds has been raised and that the project contract price is within available resources.

In applying for a grant from the Kresge Foundation, Samuel Stone, Associate Director of Development for the School of the Arts Foundation, explained that the auditorium, recital hall and theatre, with marked limitations, are the only facilities for rehearsals and performances in the present plant and are used day and night every week for the orchestra, recitals, plays, operas and dance performances.

Renovation of these spaces is necessary in order to produce and demonstrate, on campus, the school's capabilities and its purpose, which is to train exceptionally talented students for professional careers in the arts.

The Kresge Foundation, incorporated in 1924, with Sebastian V. Kresge as donor, has been known over the years for its broad purposes and its grants especially to educational institutions for building and renovation projects.

President Ward said that the grant from Kresge is another indication of the School's growth in national and international scope since it was founded seven years ago by an act of the State legislature. Although always loyally supported by principal local contributors, "We have begun to receive some important assistance from national foundations other than Ford and Rockefeller, which have given substantial assistance from the early days of the School," he said.

Repertory 72-73 Auditions Set

Auditions are coming up for ten men and four women to fill roles in three 1972-73 productions by the Carolina Repertory Company, North Carolina's young repertory company.

Miss Gay H. Baynes, Assistant Producer of Promotions, in making the announcement, says the company will hold auditions on August 4, 5 and 6 at Memorial Hall on campus at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Three productions are planned for the new season — "Skin of Our Teeth," "Twelfth Night" and "The Wonderful O." Performances across North Carolina will begin on September 11 and continue through April 14, 1973.

The young company in its first season toured 39 American cities, towns and villages in performances of their initial offering, "The Wonderful O," which remains on the repertoire for the new season.

In giving details, Miss Baynes notes that persons auditioning can be Equity or non-Equity actors or actresses. Roles to be filled will require singing as well as acting ability.

To audition, actors must be prepared to perform two pieces of their own choosing, neither of which may be longer than two and a half minutes. One piece must be a monologue from any comedy by Shakespeare and the other a monologue from any American drama and in clear contrast to the first piece. In addition, they will be asked to sing one song from a musical, to bring a resume of their experience, and to furnish an eight by ten photograph.

One essential requirement is that those auditioning be available to appear in productions during the period September 11 through April 14.

Persons interested in auditioning should call or write Carolina Repertory Company, P.O. Box 12002, Research Triangle Park, N.C. 27709 (phone 919-967-7038) for an appointment time on August 4, 5, or 6. Auditions can be arranged by appointment only.

Greensboro Exhibit

An exhibit of acrylic paintings on sand are now on exhibit at Guilford Galleries, 363 North Elm Street, Greensboro. These are reproductions by Lloyd H. Caster of original sand paintings by Navajo medicine men. Caster, a devotee of Indian lore and art, coats plywood with gesso, sifts sand over the getto base, and after drying, sketches symbolic elements and figures. He then overlays the sketch with acrylic colors.

In addition to the Caster works, the Guilford Galleries is also showing works of other Greensboro artists — Shelia Williams, Rebecca Fagg, Chip Holton, Richard Hedgecock and Lea Lackey.

Recruiter Uses 'Madison Ave.'

By JAMES WINT

CUYAHOGA FALLS, Ohio (UPI)—America's "new" army is using new methods to recruit volunteers and the champ of the new recruiters may well be Staff Sgt. David D. Hack.

He has his own slogan: "SGT. HACK WANTS YOU," a variation of the famed "UNCLE SAM WANTS YOU" posters first used during World War I. T-shirts with the Hack slogan are being distributed throughout the country. Earlier this year Hack, 32, a native of Louisville, Ky., distributed 40,000 "UNCLE SAM WANTS YOU" posters.

And sloganeering is only the beginning of Hack's gimmicks for attracting young men into uniform.

It all started when the sergeant drew an Army reprimand early this year for not getting a single recruit his first two months on the job here in Cuyahoga Falls. This was quite a blow to a man who for three years had been the top recruiter in the Akron area, and in the month of March, 1970, was named the top recruiter in the country.

He moved into the former recruiting office of the American Nazi Party in this small Akron suburb in December, 1971.

"For the first two months we were open," Hack said, "not one person came in to sign up."

Four Men Or Else

The Army has an objective of four enlistees per month for all its recruiters. Hack failed to meet that objective the first few months in his new location and the Army reprimanded him in writing, citing "incompetence."

Hack put the letter under a piece of clear plastic on his desk and then went to work.

He had some posters printed up and personally handed them out. In another effort to attract youths, he had a super painting job done on his personal car—a 1960 Corvette—including hand-painted scenes of paratroopers in action, stars, and red and blue racing stripes. He had the Uncle Sam poster stenciled in full color on its hood.

In still another move, he ordered a white jeep and had extensive painting and customizing done on it. The jeep was so impressive it served as a pace car for a big race at a local stock car track, and it will be on exhibition at the Ohio State Fair.

"We're trying to let everyone know where we're at," Hack said. "That's what it's all about.

Believes Baloney Abounds

"So many people think what you tell them is a bunch of baloney. They believe their neighbor who was in the Army in 1942 about brutality and dehumanization. It isn't true.

"Whenever we talk to people they believe us," Hack said. "That's a major portion of the ballgame."

Hack, a handsome, blond six-footer, has some convicing proof of his credibility. This month, one of the 25 persons indicted in connection with the May, 1970, disturbances at Kent State University, joined the Army through Hack's efforts.

"Two and one-half years ago," Hack said, "this man was the most anti-military person you'd ever want to talk to. He's still not gung ho 100 per cent, but he has enlisted.

"The reason is a friend of his told him I'd give him the straight facts and I would back up everything I said. He enlisted in the Army guaranteed to go into the medical field and to Europe."

Hack's methods combine the traditional and the new. He visits nearby campuses, as most recruiters do, but also stops at fraternities and sororities.

"I drive around in my Corvette," he said. "I have open discussions in my office every Thursday night and if a guy wants to call me at 2 o'clock in the morning and come over to my house and talk, that's all right too.

Became National Figure

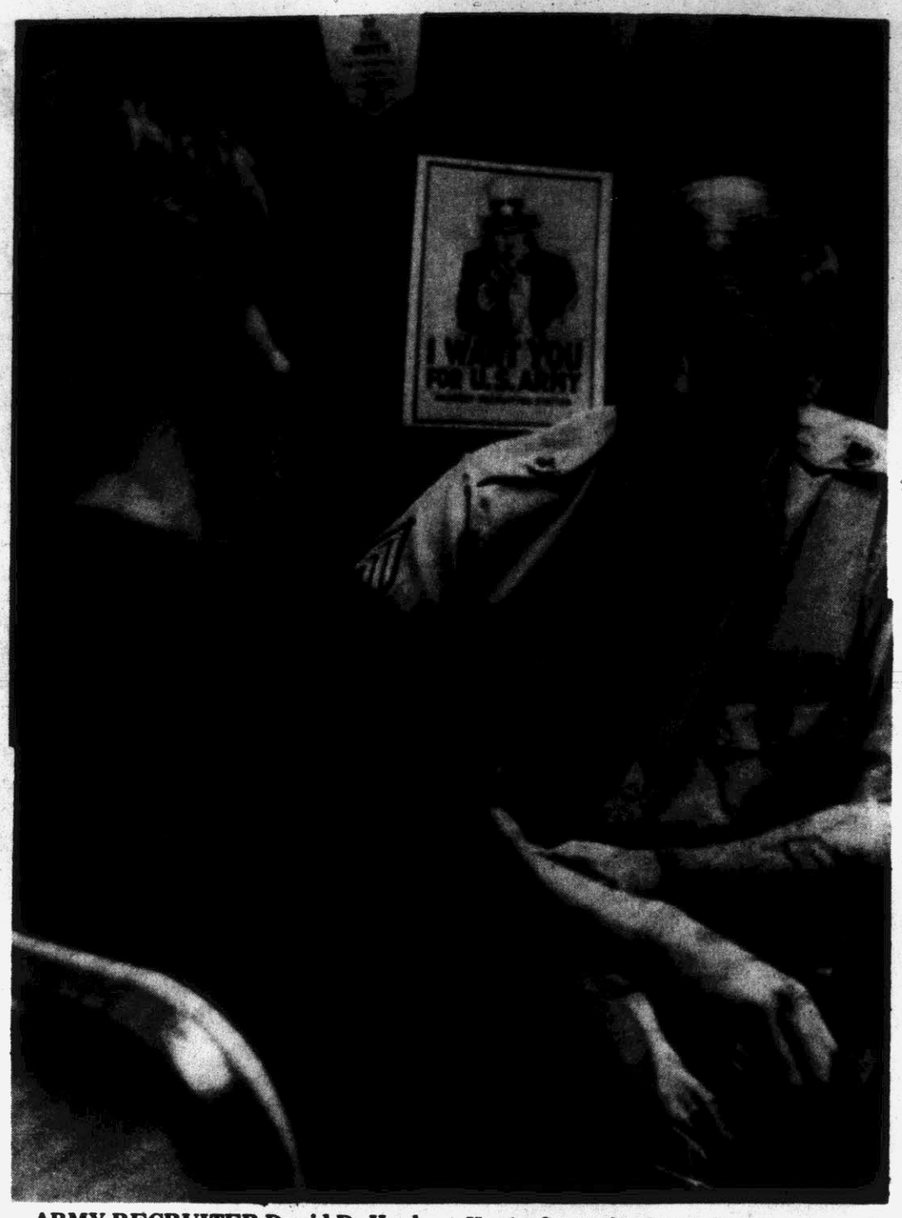

"It's a lot of fun and it's something I've been trying to do ever since I've been in the Army. If we can have people trying to make it a better Army, that's what I want."

Word of mouth, the fancy car and jeep and extra hours on the job have created a recruiting boom here. One person heard about Hack in Texas and came here to sign up.

"They're really concerned about the future," Hack said of his recruits, "but they're tired of baloney.

"I don't think and I don't preach that everyone should join the Army."

The sergeant is gratified that his campaign has borne fruit. In the past month, his recruiting station has signed up more recruits than it did the first six months it was open. And, he already has filled his quota for August and September.

Television News Team Films Watershed Talk

A five man television crew was in Pitt County Thursday to film a news feature on the Chicod Creek Watershed Project.

The feature was made for CBS news commentator Walter Cronkite.

The crew was directed by Brian Healy of New York.

Jed Duvall, CBS reporter from Atlanta, Ga., conducted the interviews with several local people who are involved in the project.

Duvall interviewed Robert Stokes, chairman, Pitt County Drainage District No. 9, and Robert Little, chairman of the Chicod Creek Watershed Steering Committee from 1963 through 1971.

Frank Wooten, drainage district attorney, was also interviewed for the special. Roy Beck, SCS district conservationist, was asked about the conservation treatment of farmland within the Chicod Creek Watershed.

The television camera crew included Pat O'Dell, electrician Brian Shipman and soundman Thomas Cosgrove.

The feature will probably be shown on television within the next month.

Hunger Makes Deer Friendly

By TOM SIEBERT
Associated Press Writer

PAONIA, Colo. (AP) — George Norris doesn't mind the score or more of foul-weather friends who descend on his yard each winter, but he draws the line when they start nosing around the kitchen for cookies.

The friends are wild deer driven from the high country to lower mountain valleys late each autumn by the influx of hunters and the scarcity of food in snow-covered alpine meadows. By late spring they're scampering back to the wilderness.

This past winter Norris, 68, counted 39 bucks, does and fawns at various times in his back yard, where he lays out alfalfa and apples given him by a nearby processing company and hand feeds some of the deer cakes of compressed grains and sugar beet pulp. He spends about $200 each year for the alfalfa and cakes.

The visits from the deer began 10 years ago when most of the workers at a nearby electric power plant moved away because use of the coal-fired facility was cut back.

"We just looked out in the yard one day and one of my boys said there was a deer," said Norris. "I said it couldn't be, but I looked out, and sure enough it was."

Norris figures the deer's sweet tooth lured him to the few apple trees in the yard. Later, when the buck returned with some companions, Norris began putting out a little hay for them.

"That was the one we now call Cutter who came in 1961, when he was about 3 years old, and he's been back every year since. He's the one that takes cakes from your lips."

In all, about 15 of the deer have become friendly enough to be given names, Norris says, and three of them, a small buck named Smoky and two little fawns also have taken to raiding Mrs. Norris' kitchen.

"They'll walk right in if you don't keep the door closed, and start walking around sniffing for cookies and pastry. You've just got to chase them out."

About the only trouble the deer have ever caused was several years ago when one swiped a $600 diamond from a ring worn by a visiting teacher, said Norris.

She put her hand in the animal's mouth to feed him and when he pulled away with the food his lower teeth raked the stone right out of the setting.

But when they return to their summer range in the mountains, the deers' wild instincts take over again.

"I doubt I could get near any of them," said Norris. "I don't bother them up there, and they come to my world on their own terms."

Liquor Taste Is Changing

NEW YORK (AP) — Where are the tastes of yesterday — Pink Lady, Pousse Cafe, Clover Club, Orange Blossom, the Merry Widow and the Bronx? Gone a long time. Now, according to a research study just released by Barton Brands, the traditional drinks, such as a martini or borubon and ginger, may be following.

After researching the drinking habits of 60,000 people a shift away from bourbon and spirit blends to lighter alcoholic beverages was found. Where these liquor types accounted for approximately 70 per cent of liquor sales in 1954, today they have only a 45 per cent share of the total market, the study says.

When the decade of the '60s opened, distillers could comfortably rely on bourbon and spirit blends to command 57 per cent of the hard liquor market. Then came what distillers call the "trend to lightness." With the arrival of the '70s Scotch, vodka and Canadian more than doubled their sales. Purchases of Scotch alone were 165 per cent above that of a decade earlier.

East Carolina Squeezes Past UNC-W 1-0

Podolak Dives For Five

WILMINGTON — East Carolina held on to a slim 1-0 lead for three innings last night to inch past the Seahawks of UNC-W by the same score.

The Bucs put men into scoring position four times during the course of the game but only capitalized on one occasion. The Seahawks got a man to second three times but the runner was left stranded.

Tommy Tomms took the win for ECU. He went all the way striking out six, walking one and giving up four hits.

Dave Sandlin absorbed the loss although he held the Bucs to one lone hit. He fanned four and walked two.

The game was a tight defensive battle all the way. Wilmington put a runner on in the first after setting the Pirates down in order in the top of the frame. Hutchinson singled only to see the next three batters retired.

In the second the Pirates put two on as Larry Walters reached on an error but was nailed as Ron Staggs was safe on a fielder's choice.

A pop-up and a ground out ended the inning.

Both teams went down in order for the next three innings. Then in the sixth, a run finally came cross. Russ Smith opened the inning for the Bucs with the only ECU hit of the game. He moved up on the error that let Walters reach base. Mike Bradshaw sacrificed both up and a ground out by Jimmy Paige scored Smith with the only run of the game.

Wilmington had gotten a double from Dalton in the fifth but failed to bring him around. Seahawk Sandlin moved to second as he singled and moved advanced on a sacrificed but the Pirate defense held and he did not score.

Tomms got on for the Pirates in the eighth with a base on balls and Bradshaw was safe when his grounder was errored. Bradshaw was picked off, however, and the next batter struck out.

Howie Edgerton singled for Wilmington and moved into second on a sacrifice. That was as far as he got.

East Carolina threatened to add a run to their total in the ninth as Lamm walked and went around to third as Walters was safe on an error. Lamm was picked off in a squeeze play and Walters did not advance.

The Pirates are at home tomorrow night as they host the Tar Heels of UNC. The game is an important one in that the winner of the contest will be the host for the second and third rounds of this year's play-offs. The game is also "Pepsi Night" with every fan attending the game receiving a free Pepsi upon entering Harrington Field. Lucky ticket holders will be eligible for prizes. The tickets may be picked up at the Pepsi-Cola bottling plant or any number of Greenville merchants.

The Pirates will also be unveiling their first new uniforms since 1963. The basic color will be light gold with purple and white trim. They will be made of the new knit material.

Game time is 7:30.

Yanks Take First Of Twinbill Over Sox, 8-1

NEW YORK (AP) — Bobby Murcer, Gene Michael and Hal Lanier delivered run-scoring hits as the New York Yankees scored four times in the first inning Saturday and went on to defeat the Boston Red Sox 8-1.

Their eighty victory in the last 11 games lifted the fourth place Yankees to within one-half game of Boston in baseball's American League East and pushed them over the .500 mark for the first time all season.

Boston starter John Curtis, 6-4, began his own downfall in the opening inning by loading the bases on walks with one out. Murcer drove in the first two runs with a bouncing single up the middle that skipped under Curtis' glove and over the glove of shortstop Juan Beniquez.

After Ron Swoboda struck out, Michael singled and Lanier doubled, each driving in a run.

Mike Kekich, 10-9, went the route for only the second time this season. He allowed five hits, including Carlton Fisk's 16th home run in the fifth inning.

The Yanks added a run off Curtis in the fourth on Horace Clarke's double and a single by Thurman Munson. They jumped on Stan Williams for two in the fifth on Felipe Alou's double, an infield hit by Murcer, Michael's groundout and a single by Hal Lanier. Clarke walked in the sixth and came around with the eighth New York run on a stolen base, infield out and wild pitch.

Phils Win Opener, 5-2

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Larry Bowa drove in two runs and scored twice to lead the Philadelphia Phillies to a 5-2 victory over the Pittsubrgh Pirates in the first game of a twi-night doubleheader Saturday.

The Phillies took command with three runs in the fourth inning off loser Steve Blass, 11-5. John Bateman singled with two out and moved up as winning pitcher Woodie Fryman walked. Denny Doyle singled for one run and Bowa singled to score Fryman and Doyle.

Bowa scored the Phillies' first run in the opening inning when he combined with Tommy Hutton on a double steal and continued home when catcher Manny Sanguillen threw widldly to third. Bowa singled to open the thrid, took third base on Hutton's single and scored the tie-breaking run as Greg Luzinski grounded out.

Pittsburgh scored once in the first as Dave Cash forced Gene Clines after a single, stole second and scored on Sanguillen's single. Willie Stargell hit his 22nd home run of the season to make it 5-2 in the sixth.

Fryman, 4-1d, scattered 10 hits before Dick Selma came on with two on and one out in the ninth. He fired a called third strike past Clines and retired cash on a grounder.

Livingston Leads KC To 23-17 Hall Of Fame Win

By GEORGE STRODE
Associated Press Sports Writer

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — Mike Livingston is 10-for-10 on his saves as a Kansas City pro football reliever.

"This is the 10th time he's played a lot in a game and we've won all 10," Chiefs Coach Hank Stram said Saturday after his No. 2 quarterback rallied Kansas City to a 23-17 Pro Football Hall of Fame victory over the New York Giants.

Livingston dashed 39 yards for one touchdown and passed for a second score after replacing regular Len Dawson late in the first half and sparked the Chiefs from a 10-6 halftime deficit.

"He's responded very well every time he has come in for Dawson," said Stram, who led the Chiefs to a 10-3-1 record and a divisional title last year.

"We had a stronger second half because Livingston gave us control of the game," Stram continued. "He threw exceptionally well."

The loss did not upset New York Coach Alex Webster.

"I was pleased with what I saw of my team," he said. "We played everybody and that was the idea."

Soccer-style kicking Jan Stenerud, who missed a field goal that would have given Kansas City a playoff victory over Miami last year in the longest game in pro history, converted all three of his field goal tries.

Stenerud's goals were 37, 43 and 14 yards in the nationally televised game played in cool, overcast weather before 19,302 in Fawcett Stadium.

The game was part of the Hall of Fame enshrinement ceremonies. Earlier in the day Lamar Hunt, Ollie Matson, Gino Marchetti and Clarence "Ace" Parker were inducted into the adjoining shrine.

Livingston picked up the Chiefs after Dawson, a native of nearby Alliance, Ohio, failed to move them in the first 28 minutes...Kansas City's only scoring behind Dawson were two Stenerud field goals for a 6-0 lead.

Livingston gained more yards on his scoring keeper play than he rushed for during the entire 1971 season. His burst shot Kansas City ahead to stay 13-10 late in the third quarter.

Running back Wendell Hayes took a seven-yard pass from Livingston that jumped the Chiefs into a 20-10 lead early in the final period.

Pete Gogolak kicked a field goal of 21 yards, Randy Johnson passed three yards to Charlie Evans and Normal Snead tossed 28 yards to Joe Morrison for the New York scoring.

Johnson and Snead are battling to see who replaces Fran Tarkenton, who quarterbacked New York to a 4-10 season last year. Snead came to the Giants in a trade that sent Tarkenton back to Minnesota.

After Johnson played the first half, the much-traveled Snead took over in the second half and nearly rallied New York to a tie in the closing minutes.

He triggered the Giants explosive 71-yard drive that needed only three plays and slashed the Chiefs' lead to 23-17.

The powerful, rangy Snead hooked up with Morrison, New York's veteran handyman, for a picture pass touchdown play of 28 yards with less than six minutes left.

Less than three minutes later, Freddie Summers recovered a fumble by Kansas City wide receiver Charlie Williams on the New York 40. However, Snead couldn't mount a drive and the Giants were forced to punt.

Hiskey, Zarley Lead Team Golf

By BOB GREEN
Associated Press Golf Writer

LIGONIER, Pa. (AP) — Babe Hiskey and Kermit Zarley, college teammates at Houston a decade ago, combined for a five-under-par 66 and a one-stroke lead Saturday in the third round of the $200,000 PGA national Team Championship.

Hiskey and Zarley had a 54-hole total of 196, 17 under par on the 7,045-yard Laurel Valley Golf Club course.

Scoring in this event is based on the better ball of each two-man team.

Gibby Gilbert and Lanny Wadkins, tied for first when play started on the bright and sunny day, fell one stroke back with a 67—197.

Arnold Palmer and new partner Jack Lewis all but counted themselves out after managing only a 67 for 205, a distant nine strokes off the lead going into the final round.

Palmer teamed with Jack Nicklaus to win the last two titles but he was left without a partner this time when Nicklaus had to withdraw because of a badly infected right index finger.

Palmer tabbed the 25-year-old Lewis, winner of only $1,400 this season, as a last-minute replacement. He admitted Saturday that his chances of repeating as champion on his home course were "almost impossible."

"If we were only five or six strokes back and there was only one team in front of us we might have a chance," Palmer said. "But with 12, 15, 18 teams ahead of us, it's pretty hopeless."

Two teams, South African Gary Player and veteran Bob Rosburg, and Buddy Allin and Al Geiberger, were tied for third at 200, 13 under par. The Allin-Ceierger team had a 67, Player-Rosburg 68.

At 201 were Frank Beard and Deane Beman, Charles Sifford and Bob Stone, and Bob Barbarossa and Ralph Johnson. Barbarossa-Johnston had a 66, Sifford-Stone 67 and Beard-Beman 70.

British Open champ Lee Trevino had teammate Ray Floyd failed to qualify for the final two rounds.

Zarley and Hiskey established a two-stroke lead mid way through the round, but the gangling Zarley, a former Canadian Open champion, had to sink a 12-foot par putt on the final hole for the team to retain sole possession of thelead

Hundley's Homer Lifts Cubs Past Cards By, 3-2

CHICAGO (AP) - Randy Hundley, who said he should have thrown out two of three base stealers, apologized with a seventh-inning home run which provided the Chciago Cubs with a 3-2 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals in a nationally televised National League baseball game Saturday.

"It gets embarrassing," said Hundley, who missed most of the last two seasons because of knee operations. "I don't like to alibi but when I brace to throw, the right knee hurts. Lou Brock got a good jump when he stole in the eighth, but I should have thrown the other two guys out from here to the Loop."

Hundley's fourth homer of the year gave the Cubs a 3-1 cushion, which they needed. Brock opened the eighth with a single and stole second. Ted Sizemore than beat out a hit to deep short and Brock scored as Don Kessinger threw wide past first.

Billy Williams provided the Cubs with their other two runs.

Williams put the Cubs ahead 1-0 in the first inning when he hit his sacrifice fly after Rick Monday singled, stole second and took third on an infield out.

The Cardinals tied it in the top of the fourth when Ted Sizemore singled, stole second, went to third on an infield out and scored on Joe Torre's sacrifice fly.

Chicago regained the lead in the bottom of the fourth as Williams led off with a double, advanced to third on the second of three singles by Joe Pepitone and scored on Ron Santo's sacrifice fly.

Bill Hands, 8-7, and the Cubs got out of a serious jam in the seventh. Ted Simmons singled and went to third on a single by Bernie Carbo. Jose Cruz then grounded to Santo at third, who threw to second for a force play and then Simmons was caught in a rundown between third and home for a double play.

Hundley cracked his fourth homer in the bottom of the seventh.

The Cardinals scored an unearned run in the eighth when Lou Brock singled and stole second. Ted Sizemore than singled to deep short and when Don Kessinger threw wildly past first, Brock scored. Steve Hamilton replaced Hands and got Matty Alou to line into an inning-ending double play.

Jack Aker pitched the last inning for the Cubs to save the game for Hands. St. Louis starter Rick Wise, 10-11, was the loser.

Four-run Fourth Beats Braves, 5-2

ATLANTA (AP) — San Francisco exploded for five runs in the fourth inning and five singles and a two-run throwing error by Atlanta third baseman Darrell Evans as the Giants downed the Braves 5-2 in National League baseball action Saturday night.

Bobby Bonds and Garry Maddox started the fourth with singles off Phil Niekro, 9-9, and Bonds scored when Chris Speier grounded out. Ed Goodson then delivered a run-scoring single and Tito Fuentes beat out an infield hit.

Goodson and Fuentes advanced on a passed ball and scored when Evans fielded Ken Henderson's grounder and threw wide of first, allowing both runners to score. Winning pitcher Frank Reberger, 2-0, ended the outburst with a single, scoring Henderson.

The Braves took a 1-0 lead in the first when Evans hit a sacrifice fly, scoring Ralph Garr, who had singled. Atlanta added another run in the third when Dusty Baker doubled and scored on Garr's single.

May Carries Astros To 7-2 Win From LA

HOUSTON (AP) — Lee May drove in four runs, threw with a homer, to power the Houston Astros past the Los Angeles Dodgers 7-2 in National League Baseball Action Saturday night.

Six of the Astros' runs were unearned, including two in a first-inning rally and four in the seventh when May hit his 21st homer of the year.

Third baseman Bobby Valentine's throwing error opened the door for the Astros's first-inning rally as they struck for a pair of runs on May's single and Bob Watson's triple.

In the seventh, pitcher Pete Mikkelsen's fumble on Roger Metzger's bouncer allowed Tom Griffin to score from second base. After Jimmy Wynn walked, May delivered his homer to cap the rally and give the Astros their eventual winning margin.

The Astros also cored in the third inning on Watson's RBI single to make a winner of Jerry Reuss, 7-8. The Dodgers scored both their runs in the sixth on Frank Robinson's RBI double and Wes Parker's run-scoring single.

Don Sutton, 12-6, was the loser for the Dodgers.

Ft. Bragg Takes District Crown

Fort Bragg American won the District IV Championship yesterday as they shutout Morehead City 2-0. The game had been postponed from Friday after it was washed out with Morehead City at bat with one out.

The break in the game did nothing to help Morehead City although they put a man on third in the last inning.

Winning pitcher Rick Youngblood fanned nine, walked five, and hit two batters. He gave up four hits. Loser Bruce Norman fanned five and gave up just two hits, those accounted for the two runs, however.

Fort Bragg, who had drawn a by in the first round of the play-offs, pushed over what proved to be the only scores of the game. Al Hooks drew a one-out walk and Mike Sayetta brought him home as he ripped out a homer.

Renzie Poe singled and moved to third on a stolen base and an error but could not score.

Morehead City, who beat Seymore Johnson 5-2 Thursday, got two men on and were threatening to tie it up in the bottom of the frame. David Williams was nailed in a fielder's choice and Lockhart was left stranded on the basepaths.

The second inning saw both teams put men on. Daivd Timmons led off the Fort Bragg half with a walk and stole second. Joe Whitley sacrificed him up bot a pop-up ended the frame.

Robert Payne and Guy Yeager were both hit by Fort Bragg pitches and Sam Onorio walked but they could not score either. Morehead City again out runners on in the third as Norman singled and moved to second on a hit by Timmy Cheek. No run came in.

The only other threat came in the bottom of the sixth as Donny Branch reached on a fielder's choice and went to third on a pair of passed balls. The Fort Bragg thirdbaseman made a fine play on the next batter's grounder and threw him out to end the game.

The Fort Bragg team will now go on to the State finals to be held next week.

Players, Coaches Begin Filtering In Today

Players and Coaches for the Jaycees' tenth annual Boy's Home Bowl Game will be arriving in Greenville today to begin preparations for the classic battle between the two twenty-seven man squads in Ficklen Stadium this Saturday night at 8:00.

Fifty-four of the state's top high school stars, four coaches, and bowl game staff will meet today to plan the week's proceedings. Workouts will start tomorrow.

BALL GAME PLANS UNDERWAY — Andy Griffith, television star and restaurateur, is shown receiving a poster publicizing the 10th Annual Boys Home Bowl All Star Game to be held in Greenville at Ficklen Stadium Saturday, August 5. Presenting Griffith with the poster if Greenville Jaycee Marvin Buck, left, state chairman for the ball game, and his assistant, Mike Peters, right.

The South was last year's winner as they ran the North All-Stars to a 21-7 loss. The North, however, holds the series edge at six games to three for the South.

This year's North team will be directed by Ray Boyles of High Point Central High School and Robersonville's Nolan Respess. The South will be steered by Havelock's Frank Ciamillo and Jack Holley of Hallsboro High.

Boyles has already had to replace two players of the North team. Don Griffith, a Rocky Mount linebacker, and a center have been injured and replacements for each have already been found.

When asked what kind of game he expects, Boyles commented, "I would expect a hard nose running game. I also think it will be a low scoring game." The coach stated that the running game will be stressed at first "although it is hard to put together." The North defense will use mainly a 4-4 in running situations and a 5-3 in on passing downs. Boyles wants to "keep things simple; not too many complicated plays."

On offense, the North will run primarily from the pro-I and the power-I formations. This is a formation where the backs, usually two, line up in a straight line behind the quarterback.

Boyles took his High Point Central team to the state finals but lost 10-7. His team finished 9-1 on the regular season. Respess' Golden Eagles were the State's 2-A champs.

His plans for the early part of the week center around getting in a lot of hitting. "We want to pick out the best 22 men as well as begin hard hitting at first."

Boyles will be working with the offensive backfield while Respess will concentrate his work with defensive backfield. Respess noted, "We have to get a lot done in a short time. With the material we have, we may make the ground game the best part of our game."

The South, which won last year will be trying to shorten the North's margin in the classic to six games to four. The '72 edition of the South squad will be led by Havelock's Frank Ciamillo and Jack Holley of Hallsboro.

Ciamillo's team went undefeated last season finishing as the 3-A state champions. They were 13-0 on the year. Ciamillo also feels that the South has a number of outstanding players. "I think the game will be wide open as far as our attack and we will be able to score any time and anywhere."

He plans to employ a 5-2 defense basically with a rover in the defensive backfield. A 6-1 will also be used with a rover. On offense, the South will be in a basic pro set and some times will be running out of a wide slot. The pro set is a formation where the backs are in an I behind the QB and there are two wide receivers on either side of the ball. In the wide set, one wide receiver, the split end, is positioned wide while the flanker is between him and the ball. Both air and ground plays can be run off these formations.

The South has already been hit with injuries just as the North has. Three of the South's personell have already been replaced.

Camillo stated that the first meeting he and Holley have with players would be a "skull session". Toward the middle of the week they will begin heavy hitting for about two days. This schedule is subject to change in respect to weather, progression and injuries.

Asked what type of game he expected, Ciamillo replied, "Both teams will try to put as many points on the boards as possible. It will be an interesting game."

Two area young men have been chosen to play in the Boy's Home game. Jesse Coppage, a running back from Robersonville will be on the North while a center from Ayden-Grifton, Johnny Hoover, will represent the South.

The officials for the game will be at Head Linesman: Mickey McClenny of Goldsboro. This will be his first Boy's Home game. At Field Judge will be Randy Harrison of Rocky Mount, a veteran of 14 years of grid experience and a member of the athletic Officials Association.

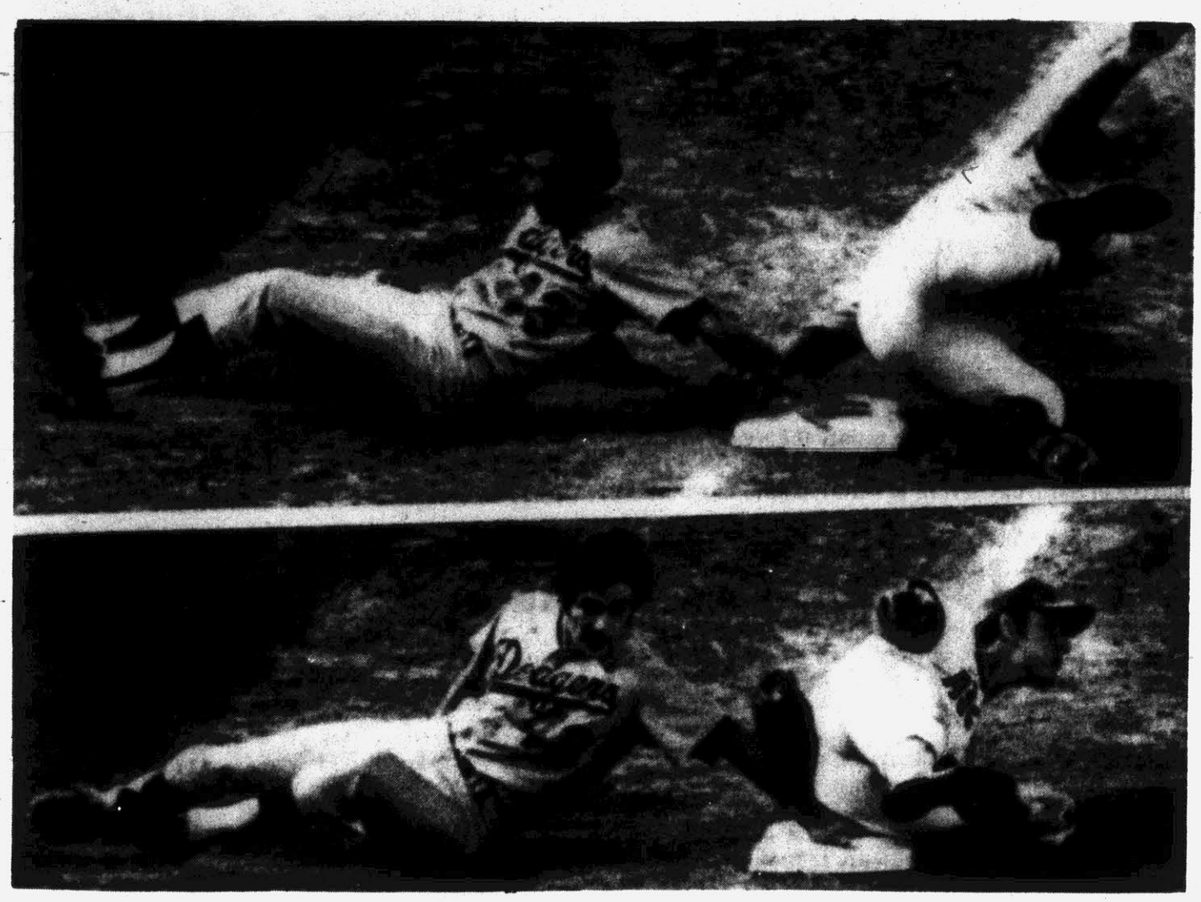

Leonard Morton, of Raleigh, will serve as Umpire. He has 18 years of experience. The Referee will be Bill Sherrill. The Back Judge will be Vernon "Dusty" Rhodes. He has accumulated 25 years of experience in approximately 400 high school and college games.

Thirty young ladies from North Carolina schools have been chosen as Cheerleaders for the Classic. One area girl, Susan Twilley was picked to be on the South squad. She is from Ayden-Grifton H.S. Another young lady, Janet Vaughn from Robersonville, was selected for the North squad.

Those fans who will not be able to attend the game will be able to hear it on a network of the state's radio stations. Greenville's Jim Woods will report the play-by-play along with Kinston's Dave Rock.

Tickets for the game are available from any Greenville Jaycee and a number of Greenville merchants. The prices are $2.00 in advance and $2.50 at the gate.

Marvin Buck, State Chairman of this year's edition was quoted as saying, "The North Carolina Jaycees surpassed previous efforts this year to bring to the public the best North-South game to date. If all goes as planned, the residents of Boys Home will see the largest donation yet as a result of the Boys Home game. We hope every interested sports fan in the state will be on hand to see this year's contest.

Nicklaus Labels Himself As A 'Definite Underdog'

By BOB GREEN
Associated Press Golf Writer

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus, unable to practice and still troubled by a painful infection in his right hand, labels himself "a definite underdog" for his defense of the professional Golfers Association championship this week at Oakland Hills.

He'll be an underdog, that is, if he's able to play at all.

"Right now you know as much about that as I do," Nicklaus said late last week by telephone from Columbus, Ohio where he was undergoing treatment for a severe infection on his right index finger.

"I firmly believe I'll be able to play," Nicklaus said, "but I've still got a pretty sore finger. The problem will be whether I can stand up to me hitting 400 or 500 balls. I don't know whether I'll be able to or not. If I can't, well, that's the way it goes.

"I'll be a definite underdog. I'm not being facetious. I've only played two rounds with my American clubs and the big ball since I've been back from Britain. So you can imagine what kind of shape I'm in."

He hasn't played competitively in the United States since winning the U.S. Open at Pebble Beach, Calif., making the American national championship his second major title of the year.

His hopes for an unprecedented Grand Slam were dashed when he lost by a single stroke to Lee Trevino in the British Open two weeks ago in his next—and last—competitive appearance Nicklaus, winner of four titles and heading the season's money-winning list with more than $186,000, had to withdraw from the National Team championship—he was scheduled to team with Arnold Palmer in defense of their title at Ligonier, Pa.—when the infection popped up.

He was hospitalized briefly early in the week, the finger was lanced and drained and half the nail removed.

the operation and the slow healing process cast considerable doubts on Nicklaus' ability to defend the title he won last year at Palm Beach Gardens, Fla. It's the last of the four major championships of the season.

With Nicklaus a questionable starter and, at best, well below 100 percent, the 72-hole chase over the 7,054 yards of rolling hills outside Detroit which plays to a par 70 because a wide-open scramble among about a dozen likely contenders.

Trevino, although travel-weary and obviously suffering from a letdown after the miracle finish that brought him his second consecutive British Open crown, appeared to be the No. 1 choice.

The Super Mex, second to Nicklaus on the money-winning list with $129,147, took the week off following the tournament in Muirfield, Scotland but played in a half-dozen exhibitions before he and partner Ray Floyd missed the cut in the Team championship last week.

But the squat and swarthy Trevino is a deadly competitor, particularly in the major championships, He and Nicklaus easily rank as the two outstanding players in the game today and the flamboyant, rags-to-riches guy would like nothing better than to win the PGA and match Nicklaus' two major titles for the season.

The 42-year-old Palmer, of course, will be at worst a sentimental favorite as he tries once again to nail down the one major crown that has eluded him in his fabulous career. The odds, however, are against him. The aging charger hasn't won this season and picked off his last major title eight years ago.

Behind Trevino, the second line of challengers is made up of Tom Weiskopf, south African Gary Player and England's Tony Jacklin. Weiskopf, winner of more than $100,000 this season, still has occasional temper trouble but has played well enough in recent weeks to win two or three titles.

Player, of course, is one of the world's ranking performers and is a definite threat every time he starts. Jacklin, a former British and U.S. Open champion, played extremely well in Scotland and is at his best in the major tests.

Some other major contenders in the event that gets underway Thursday include Billy Casper, Australian Bruce Crampton, Bert Yancey, George Archer, Jerry Heard, Dave Hill and Doug Sanders.

Archer and Heard each have won twice this season. Crampton has collected more than $100,000 with over a dozen top 10 finishes. Yancey, Casper and Hill always are threats.

The veteran Sanders could offer a particular challenge. He won once this year, finished fourth in the British Open and is playing better than he has in several years.

The tournament, however, has a habit of going to outsiders. In the last 15 PGA's, Nicklaus is the only man to win twice. Of the other 13 winners, 12 of them were winning their first and only major title.

The final two rounds Saturday and Sunday will be telecast nationally by ABC-TV.

Sullivan Named Game's Most Valuable Player

CHICAGO (AP) — Pat Sullivan, the Heisman Trophy winner from Auburn, was named Saturday most valuable player for the College All-Stars in Friday's 39th renewal of the mid-summer football classic at Soldier Field.

Sullivan, a quarterback drafted by the Atlanta Falcons, was the overwhelming pick of sportswriters and broadcasters who reported the game, won handily by the Super Bowl champion Dallas Cowboys, 20-7.

It was Sullivan's last quarter performance, pitching the Stars on an 80-yard drive that resulted in their only score, that won him MVP honors captured last year by Richie Harris, a defensive lineman from Grambling who played with Philadelphia of the NFL in 1971.

Sullivan was held out of action the first three quarters as Bob Devaney, the Nebraska coach who guided the Stars, chose to go with his own quarterback, Jerry Tagge.

When Sullivan entered the game, he completed five of eight passes and moved the Stars to the 1-yard line where Houston's Bob Newhouse cracked over for the touchdown.

New house, a swift, stocky back from Houston who was drafted by the Cowboys, and Tom Myers, a rugged defensive back from Syracuse picked by New Orleans, followed Sullivan in the MVP balloting.

Tommy Casanova of LSU, a defensive back; John Mendenhall of Grambling, a defensive tackle; Mike Siani of Villanova, a wide receiver, and Nebraska's Tagge also received votes.

The Cowboys upped the professionals' margin in the series to 28-9-2 in capturing the NFL's ninth consecutive victory over the collegians.

The pattern of the game was established early when Dallas throttled the All-Star offense effectively after Tagge's opening play jaunt of 17 yards.

The Stars were unable to sustain any offensive momentum while the Cowboys, led by Roger Staubach, were trying for the quick gainer on passes to the wide receivers.

The All-Star defense was able to hold the Super Bowl champions to a field goal until Craig Morton replaced Staubach in the second quarter and hit Ron Sellers with a touchdown pass.

Morton found speedster Bob Haynes alone in the end zone in the third stanza for another Cowboy six-pointer and Dallas added another three-pointer in the final quarter.

It was a pattern of play becoming increasingly familiar to All-Star spectators as the vaunted professional defenses provide more reaction than the untried collegiates can cope with.

RALEIGH — The North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission is seeking help from small businessmen and hunters.

It's all part of the Commission's new voluntary big game tagging program which will go into effect this fall. Hunters are being urged to cooperate with the Commission to improve game hunting by tagging their big game kill and taking it to one of some 1500 Wildlife Cooperator Agents scattered across the state. The tags are attached to the $1.75 big game license which is required to hunt deer, wild boar, bear or turkey—the four species considered big game in North Carolina.

Also, the Commission is currently making arrangements with numerous small businesses to encourage them to become Wildlife Cooperator Agents. Sporting goods stores, country stores; gas stations, hunting and fishing license agents, and the like are considered the best prospects because many of them are near big game hunting areas, and hunters frequent their places of business.

The idea is to improve big game populations in the state by gaining more information on population levels.

"We hope to learn more about how many are being killed, where populations of big game species are heavy or light, and whether the health of these animals is good or poor," said Frank Barick, chief of the Division of Game.

"Hunters can help us a great deal, but it is purely voluntary. However, if they participate, the tag will not only be a sign of good sportsmanship, but also an indication that they care about the future of big game hunting in the state."

The same will hold true for the Wildlife Cooperator Agents who will provide Big Game Kill Report Forms for hunters who bring in tagged animals to fill out. Wildlife Cooperator Agents will be identifiable by a large yellow and black diamond-shaped sign, and each one will get a certificate in honor of his cooperation.

During and after the season, the Big Game Kill Report Forms will be picked up by Wildlife Protectors and analyzed by the Wildlife Commission's biologists.

The voluntary big game tagging system should not be confused with the compulsory tagging system for antlerless deer killed during the special antlerless deer seasons. Different tags and a differnt tagging procedure will be required for antlerless deer.

Jackson, Rudy Homer To Give A's 7-2 Win

OAKLAND (AP) — Reggie Jackson blasted a pair of homeruns and Joe Rudi added a three-run shot to give the Oakland A's a 7-2 American League victory over the Minnesota Twins Saturday.

After Ted Kubiak's run-scoring double gave Jim Hunter a 1-0 lead, in the first inning.

Jackson padded it with a bases-empty homer, his 19th, in the third.

Jackson then drilled a 400-footer off relief pitcher Jim Strickland in the seventh with no one aboard as the A's rallied for four runs in that frame to pull away from a 3-1 lead. Rudi connected for his 11th homer in that frame.

Hunter pitched a five hitter to pick up his 13th victory of the baseball season against four defeats. He struck out seven and walked one.

The victory kept the A's six games ahead of the Chicago White Sox in the American League West race.

Gilbert-Wadkins Share Team Lead

LIGONIER, Pa. (AP) — Gibby Gilbert and rookie Lanny Wadkins shared the lead. Arnold Palmer and new partner Jack Lewis were still hoping. And Lee Trevino was down the road.

That was the situation today going into the Third Round of the $200,000 Professional Golfers Association National Team Championship.

Gilbert and Wadkins were tied for the top spot with former University of Houston teammates Kermit Zarley and Babe Hiskey. Each team had a 36-hole total of 130, 12 under par in this event in which the scoring is based on the better ball of each team.

Palmer, who teamed with Jack Nicklaus to win the last two team titles on the 7,045-yard Laurel Valley Golf Club course, tabbed the 25-year-old Lewis as his partner when Nicklaus had to withdraw with an infected finger.

They just survived the cut at 138, a distant eight strokes off the pace, but agreed; "We're going to come back and win it."

Trevino, fresh from his British Open triumph, and partner Ray Floyd failed to qualify for the last 36 holes. They had a best ball 70 for 141, the same total that eliminated Billy Casper and Jerry Heard. Both teams were among the pre-tourney favorites.

The Gilbert-Wadkins and Hiskey-Zarley teams held a one stroke lead over Alabama neighbors Hubert Green and Mac McLendon and Frank Beard and Deane Beman, tied at 131. Beard and Beman had a 63 and Green-McLendon 66.

Gary Player and Bob Rosburg, 65, and first-round leaders Tommy Aaron and Charles Coody, 70, were next at 132. At 133 were Buddy Allin and Al Geiberger, Bob Lunn and Dave Stockton, and Jerry McGee and Leonard Thompson.

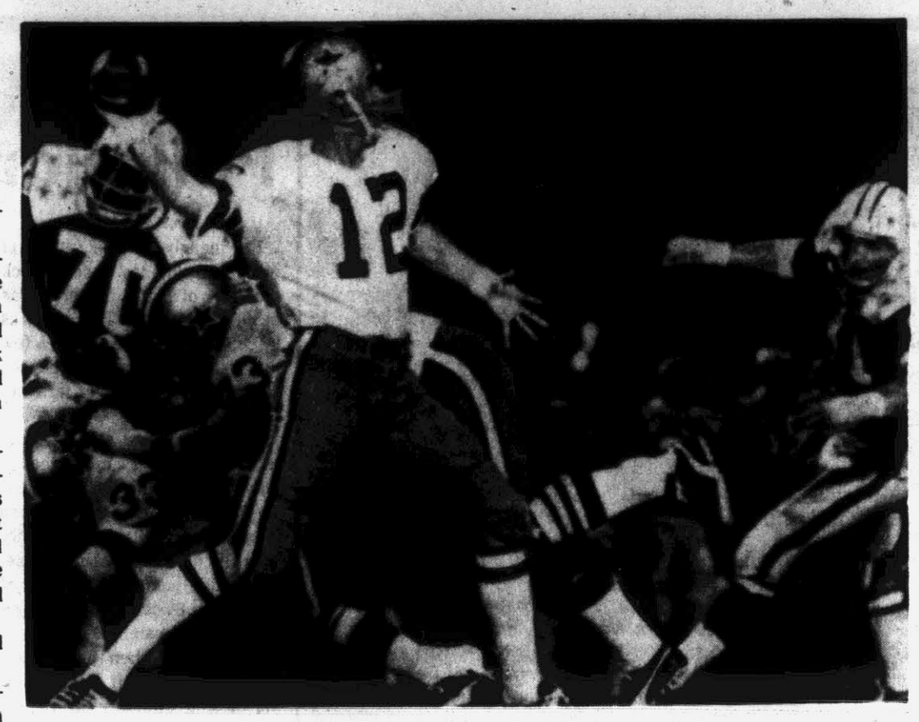

Zarley and Hiskey matched the day's best round with a 63.

Hiskey, a former Sahara invitational champ, scored seven of the team's nine birdies, including an incredible chip-in from about 40 yards over a trap, the ball hitting the flagstick and dropping straight down into the hole.

"About the only thing I did of any value was pray for him," Zarley said.

Gilbert and Wadkins had a 64, including two bogeys.

Palmer and Lewis couldn't get anything going in their indifferent round of 72. Lewis made the only birdie with a 20-foot putt on the 11th hole and each made a bogey after the other was out of the hole.

Morton, Sullivan Share Limelight In Chicago

By DAVE GOLDBERG
Associated Press Sports Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Backup quarterback Craig Morton got in early and had time to do his thing. Backup quarterback Pat Sullivan got in late and his thing was to no avail.

That was the story of the 39th annual College All-Star game Friday night as Morton led the world champion Dallas Cowboys to a 20-7 win over an All-Star team that was better than expected on defense but listless on offense. It was the ninth straight victory for the pros over the collegians.

Morton entered the game when Roger Staubach was shaken up late in the first half and tossed two touchdown passes. Sullivan, the Heisman Trophy winner, entered the game in the final quarter and led the Stars to their only touchdown.

Sullivan's performance—he completed eight of 15 passes for 64 yards—raised a question. Why didn't Nebraska Coach Bob Devaney insert him earlier to replace ex-Nebraska star Jerry Tagge, who couldn't get the Stars moving for three quarters? Devaney said he thought Tagge could move the team. He said he thought the key play was a fumble by Tagge early in the third quarter with the Cowboys holding a 10-0 lead.

Tagge was rolling right when the ball seemed to slip from his hand. He kicked it toward the sidelines, and Dallas' Bob Lilly fell on it at the Star 41. Four plays later, Morton tossed 24 yards to Bob Hayes, clear over the middle, and it was 17-0.

Morton had entered the game with six minutes left in the half after Staubach was sandwiched among three All-Stars as he ran for a first down at the Stars 18-yard-line. He threw one incomplete pass, then hit Ron Sellers, newly acquired from the New England Patriots, in the right corner of the end zone for the score.

The other Cowboy scores came on a 30-yard first-quarter field goal by Mike Clark and a 33-yarder on the first play of the fourth quarter by Austrian soccer-style kicker Toni Fritsch.

When Sullivan entered the game down 20-0, he promptly moved the Stars 80 yards in 16 plays. The key plays were a 30-yard burst by Robert Newhouse of Houston, who becomes a Cowboy today, and a 13-yard fourth-down pass from Sullivan to Villanova's Mike Siani that put the ball on the one-yard line. Newhouse plunged over from there.

The high spot for the All-Stars was the play of the defense, led by LSU's Tommy Casanova, who roamed all over the secondary, batting down passes, harassing receivers, and making tackles.

Other defensive standouts for the All-Stars included backs Tom Darden of Michigan, Tom Myers of Syracuse and Willie Buchanon of San Diego State; linebackers Jeff Siemon of Stanford and Mike Keller of Michigan, and linemen Sherman White of California, Pete Lazetich of Stanford, John Mendenhall of Grambling and Larry Jacobson of Nebraska.

For the Cowboys, the game was something to yawn about.

"They played well," Coach Tom Landry said fo the All-Stars. "But we won the game.

Allen, Perry Stamp Marks On American Baseballs

By BRUCE LOWITT
Associated Press Sports Writer

Gaylord Perry and Dick Allen like to put their own particular trademarks on baseballs.

They were at it again Friday night—with predictable results.

Perry's trademark, if you listen to just about anyone else in the American League, is grease, petroleum jelly or good old-fashioned spit. But Gaylord, grinning as he drawls his less-than-convincing denials, says it's just plain finesse.

With Allen, there's hardly any deception involved. What he puts on a ball is a slight dent, the kind that comes from colliding with a bat in midswing just prior to rocketing over an outfield fence.

Perry, the ace of the Cleveland mound staff, was at it again, Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver insisted, as he hurled his way to his 17th victory of the season, tying Mickey Lolich of Detroit as the winningest pitcher in the majors.

But Perry did more than just toss a six-hitter. He also bunted across the tie-breaking tally, triggering a three-run rally that gave the Indians their 10-inning 4-1 victory over the Orioles.

Allen didn't wait very long to do his thing. He teed off on a Dick Drago pitch in the first inning for a two-run homer, his third in two nights and his 25th of the year, taking over the major league home run lead and starting the Chicago White Sox on their way to a 5-0 victory over Kansas City.

Elsewhere in the American League, Milwaukee defeated Detroit 3-2, Minnesota nipped Oakland 4-3, California edged Texas 3-2 and, in a twinight doubleheader, Boston beat New York 6-5 before the Yankees rebounded to win the nightcap 3-1.

In the National League, Philadelphia shut out the Chicago Cubs 2-0, Pittsburgh beat the New York Mets 3-1, Montreal turned back St. Louis 3-1, San Diego stopped Cincinnati 31, Los Angeles shaded Houston 6-5 and Atlanta nipped San Francisco 4-3 in the first half of a twinbill before rain washed out the second game.

Tommie Reynolds, sent up to pinch-hit for pinch-hitter Brock Davis after Fred Scherman took the mound for the Tigers with the score tied and two Milwaukee runners on base, belted a game-winning hit to left to give Jim Lonborg and the Brewers their victory. Davis had batted for Lonborg before all the switching started.

Harmon Killebrew swatted his 17th homer, a two-run shot in a three-run ninth to lead the Twins past the A's, whose West Division lead over the White Sox was trimmed to six games.

But it was relievers Wayne Granger and Dave LaRoche who saved the victory, setting down three straight Oakland batters with the bases loaded in the bottom of the ninth after the A's had scored twice to cut the Minnesota lead to one run.

Ken McMullen's single, a sacrifice and Leo Cardenas' two-out double in the bottom of the ninth carried the Angels past the Rangers.

Bob Montgomery drove in four runs in the Red Sox' first-game victory, three of them with a ninth-inning homer off Yankee relief ace Sparky Lyle.

Steve Kline scattered seven Boston hits to gain a split for New York in the finale.

Four Inducted Into Hall Of Fame

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — "No person has contributed more to rewriting sports history in our time," New England Patriots President Bill Sullivan Jr. said of Lamar Hunt.

Sullivan praised the founder of the American Football League Friday night at the Pro Football Hall of Fame enshrinees dinner.

Hunt and his fellow 1972 hall of famers, Gino Marchetti, Ollie Matson and Clarence "Ace" Parker, saved their thanks until today for the induction ceremonies before a pre-season game between the Kansas City Chiefs and New York Giants.

Sullivan, who presented Hunt for induction today, saluted the Chiefs' owner for his contributions to the game.

"He suggested names on the uniforms, the name for the Super Bowl and the name for the trophy that goes with it, the Vince Lombardi Trophy," the Patriots president said.

Sullivan, a two-time president of the AFL, recalled Hunt's contributions to the old league.

"He didn't move his team from Dallas to Kansas City because he thought it was a pot of gold at the end of the rainbow," Sullivan said.

"He did it for the good of the league."

The other presenters talked just as glowingly of their enshrinees.

Los Angeles Rams owner Carroll Rosenbloom said of Marchetti, "He was the greatest defensive end ever to put on pads."

Joe Kuharich, who coached Matson in college and pro ranks, said, "The things this man has done are absolutely unbelieveable. He never once criticized a teammate or a coach. He had no peer."

Jack White, the general manager of the San Francisco 49ers, presented Parker, a triple-threat star in the late 1930s with the old Brooklyn Dodgers.

Dick Gallagher, director of the Hall of Fame, presented Fred Gehrke the first Dan Reeves Memorial Award.

Gehrke, now assistant general manager of the Denver Broncos, was the first to brighten helmets while playing with the Rams in 1948. He painted the drab brown headgear a bright blue with reddish rams horns.

Veteran Washington Star sports writer Tony Atchison was presented the Dick McCann Memorial Award for his reporting of pro football by Larry Felser of the Buffalo Evening News, president of the sponsoring Pro Football Writers.

Carlton Overlooks Heat; Sets Win String Record

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

Everyone talks about the weather but nobody does anything about it...except Philadelphia's Steve Carlton, who ignored it and kept his hot streak going and Montreal's Bill Stoneman, who thrived on it and cooled off Bob Gibson.

On a hot afternoon in Philadelphia, Carlton hurled a 2-0 four-hitter against the Chicago Cubs and ran his winning string to a club-record 10 games, erasing the old mark shared by Grover Cleveland Alexander, Robin Roberts and Ken Heintzelman.

Then Stoneman went out in the cool of an early evening in Montreal and tamed the St. Louis Cardinals on five hits 3-1, ending Gibson's streak at 11 straight victories.

In the weather-immune Houston Astrodome, reliever Fred Gladding served his first home run shot in two years, a three-run blast by Los Angeles' Bill Buckner in the seventh to lift the Dodgers over the Astros 6-5.

Elsewhere in the National League, Pittsburgh shaded the New York Mets 3-1, San Diego upset Cincinnati 3-1 and Atlanta edged San Francisco 4-3 in the opener of a twi-nighter. The nightcap was rained out with the Braves leading 1-0 in the second inning.

In the American League, Milwaukee nipped Detroit 3-2, Cleveland turned back Baltimore 4-1 in 10 innings, Boston overtook the New York Yankees 6-5 but dropped the nightcap 3-1, the Chicago White Sox blanked Kansas City 5-0, California nosed out Texas 3-2 and Minnesota slipped past Oakland 4-3.

New York's Tom Seaver had beaten Pittsburgh eight straight, but he yielded a first-inning run on a walk, hit batter and Manny Sanguillen's single and Willie Stargell blasted his 21st home run in the fourth. Stargell then singled home an insurance run off All-Star Game winner Tug McGraw in the eighth and Dock Ellis checked New York on seven hits as the Pirates pulled 6½ games ahead of the Mets in the NL East, their largest lead of the season.

San Diego's Clay Kirby held the hard-hitting Reds, who had averaged .306 over the last 13 games, to five hits, including Pete Rose's shutout-spoiling homer in the seventh. Rookie Dave Roberts accounted for two San Diego runs with a single and his second home run. It was only Cincinnati's third loss in 14 contests but the Reds maintained their seven game bulge over Houston.

San Francisco's Ron Bryant, who had won six in a row, was cruising along with a 2-0 lead over Atlanta and a three-hitter when the Braves exploded in the seventh inning for solo home runs by Earl Williams and Paul Casanova. They added what proved to be the decisive run in the eighth on Ralph Garr's double and Dusty Baker's single.

Baima Named SC Player Of The Year

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — The Citadel's outstanding wide receiver, Brian Baima, today was named the Southern Conference's1971-72 athlete of the year.

Baima, a senior who was graduated in June and now is trying out with the New England Patriots of the National Football League, received 16 votes in athlete-of-the-year balloting among members of the Southern Conference Sportswriters Association.

A close second in the voting was Richmond track star Carl Wood, who was named on 14 ballots. Receiving eight votes each were Richmond football safety man Ray Easterling and Furman's Russ Hunt, who led the conference in basketball scoring last winter.

Baima paced the conference in pass receiving during the 1971 season with 64 receptions—16 more than his nearest rival—good for 1,237 yards, tops in the nation among major colleges. Thirteen of his catches went for touchdowns.

A native of North Hollywood, Calif., Baima transferred to The Citadel after two years at Los Angeles Valley Junior College and thus had only two varsity years with the Bulldogs.

After his outstanding 1971 season he was named Southern Conference football player of the year and was chosen for both the All-Southern and All-South Carolina squads.

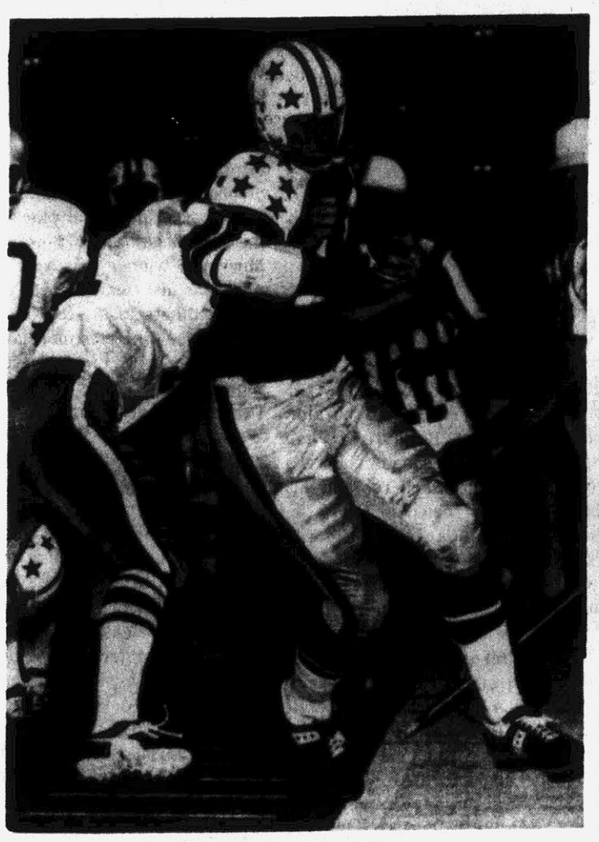

Baima is the first player in any sport from The Citadel to win recognition as the SC's athlete of the year.

"I'd like to play professional football, and I think I can," he said. "The pros are looking for size and speed and I probably don't qualify there, but I think I can catch the ball."

Baima stands 6 feet tall and weighs 185 pounds. Whether he'll stick with the Patriots isn't sure, but he survived the first cut.

Wood, after missing two seasons with a leg injury, returned to track action for Richmond during the past season and seemed his old self.

New Franchise

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Professional basketball, in the form of a franchise and an owner, is back in San Diego. Now all it needs is players, a coach, general manager, staff and a place to play.

The American Basketball Association announced Friday it was relocating one of its two bankrupt franchises in San Diego, giving sole ownership to a 38-year-old dentist, Dr. Leonard Bloom.

ABA Commissioner Bob Carlson, appearing with Bloom at a news conference here, said San Diego will play this winter in the Western Division.

San Diego formerly was the home of the NBA's Rockets, but that franchise was sold to a group in Houston in June 1971.

Bloom said he will be a busy man in the next few weeks trying to staff the team in time for an Aug. 10 expansion draft. The commissioner said each of the established nine teams will be able to protect six players, with San Diego drawing two from each club.

LONG POND, Pa. — The sun does shine in the Quaker State. It's warm. It's bright. It comes up in the morning and sets in the evening. Unbelievable!

A month ago they were ready to make the world's biggest swimming pool out of the Pocono International Raceway. All that was necessary was to plug up the tunnel entrances to this 2.5 mile tri-oval racing plant. Pennsylvania was being washed away. Camden, N.J. was preparing to receive the Lake Erie freighters.

There's a used car dealer in Allentown with three brand new, unused arks for sale.

But the rain did end, and now the sun shineth. And this weekend here in the Pocono Mountains resort area, two 500-mile automobile races will take place on concurrent days at the same racetrack. It's an event unprecedented in auto racing.

Because of the rain, the Schaefer 500-mile for U.S. Auto Club championship (Indianapolis type) race cars scheduled for July 2 was postponed. The new date for the race is this Saturday (July 29.) The following day it's the Pennsylvania 500-mile event for U.S. Auto Club stock cars.

Saturday's 500-miler for the champ cars is the second of three 500-mile races held during the year for this division of USAC. USAC has only one 500-mile race for thier stock cars, and this is it.

Durability will be the key in Saturday's champ car race. The trick to winning is to be running at the end of 500 miles. Most of the cars in the race will be parked by then. Several weeks ago in Michigan in a 200-mile race, there were only 11 of 26 starters around at the finish.

The Indy machines are a plumber's nightmare. With turbo-chargers, numerous oil coolers, and what seems like miles of oil lines and electrical wiring coupled with an engine that usually requires a half dozen mechanics to keep running, it's a real feat for the car just to finish 500 miles of racing.

Bobby Unser has been tabbed by the motorsports writers and broacasters who make up the exclusive Union 76 Racing Panel of Experts as the man to beat this Saturday. Unser is a good bet if — if he can keep the car together for 500 miles. His Olsonite Eagle racer is built and prepared by Dan Gurney, the modern day whiz-kid of championship race car construction.

There's little question the 38-year-old Albuquerque, N.M. leadfoot has the fastest machine around. Unser tore the record book to shreads in grabbing the number on pole position at Indianapolis in May, and he just set a world's race qualifying record two weeks ago in Michigan where he turned a lap at 199.778 mph.

Unser's biggest competition Saturday will come from drivers like Joe Leonard, Gary Bettenhausen, Mario Andretti, Gordon Johncock, Sammy Sessions, and his brother Al Unser. But like Bobby, they'll have to plan to drive to finish the race.

Mark Donohue, the defending Schaefer 500 champion was involved in a bad wreck while testing his Can-Am car and will miss this year's race.

The USAC stock car division is being invaded by Southern drivers from the NASCAR (National Assn. for Stock Car Auto Racing) sanctioning body for this race. Because of an internation rule permitting driver interchange among sanctioning bodies, the likes of Richard Petty, Bobby Allison, Tiny Lund, Dave Marcis, Cecil Gordon, and others have found their way north with hopes of taking hom some Yankee greenbacks.

In fact, Petty and his Plymouth racer have given the nod by the Union 76 Racing Panel of Experts to sock it to the USAC regulars. And he probably will.

The 35-year-old native of Randleman, N.C. is stock car racing's all-time race winner, and he's won over $1 million. But the big factor in favor of the NASCAR drivers is that they run no less than sixteen 500-mile races a year. They're used to the grind, and their cars are set up to run the distance. The Pennsy 500 is the only race over 200 miles that the USAC stock car drivers compete in all year long. And the top drivers like the Unsers, Johncock, McCluskey, and Bettenhausen will be driving in Saturday's 500-miler too.

The rain may have hurt the State of Pennsylvania but it certainly made it possible for race fans to have a wild weekend of racing. Two 500-mile races at one time may be more than they can handle.

BASS Tourney To Be Held On Mississippi Lake

BRANDON, Miss. — Mississippi's Ross Barnett Reservoir, ranked among the top bass hideouts in the country, will play host to the country's top bass fishing talent, August 24-26.

The $15,500 Rebel Invitational BASS Tournament is being sponsored and hosted by the Rankin County Chamber of Commerce and the Ross Barnett Resevoir Association.

The three-day rod-'n-reel duel will offer the largest fishing purse in Mississippi angling history, and will lure some 200 top Bass Anglers from 20 states. The champion pockets $3,000 cash. The runnerup nets $1,200 cash and the top 35 hardware slingers will share in the awards.

This is the fifth stop on the 1972 pro fishing circuit sponsored by the 90,000 member Bass Anglers Sportsman Society (BASS). This is also the fifth time the experts have selected Ross Barnett to test their angling skills. The pollution free, 31,000 plus acres on the Pear River was recently selected among the Top 10 Bass Lakes in the country in a survey among the bass fishing professionals.

The seven-year old reservoir has been picked by the national BASS Tournament Committee to fill a "Wild Card" selection in this year's $100,000 pro fishing tour announced earlier.

"Ross Barnett is noted for its great August fishing," said Ray Scott, president of BASS. "It offers a better than average odds for boating a seven-pound largemouth and the challenge of locating a good school in the dropoffs and holes. The plastic worm fisherman can strut his stuff here."

Besides cash awards, Ross Barnett will be the next-to-last stop in six qualifying tournaments for the 1972 World's BASS Masters Classic. The season's top 24 point scorers compete in the Classic at a "mystery lake" with the winner taking home $10,000 cash. Last year, Bobby Murray, a 26-year-old Hot Springs, Ark. Bassmaster, won the big year-end prize.

The 1972 point scoring chase in shaping up as a re-run of last year's duel between Roland Martin of Tulsa, Okla. and Tom Mann of Eufaula, Ala. Martin, last year's point leader, moved into the lead with 135 points following his recent victory on Watts Bar in the Tennessee National. Mann ranks second with 123 points based on 35 points for a win, 34 for second, 33 for third, and etc.

John Morris of Springfield, Mo., moved into third place in the standings with 72 points. Murray a winner this year in Arkansas is fourth with 68 points. Others in the top ten in order are Bill Westmoreland, Celina, Tenn. 66; John Powell, Montgomery, Ala. 66; Bill Dance, Memphis, Tenn., 65; Glin Wells, Greenbrier, Tenn., 64; Blake Honeycutt, Hickory, N.C., 59; and Pete Nosser, Vicksburg, Miss., 59.

The Bass Anglers Sportsman Society has introduced a new "Don't Kill Your Catch" program where the bass are scored and released back into the lake. The figures have been as successful as 86.1 per cent release figure in previous contests this year.

In a delayed mortality study, in cooperation with the Tennessee Game and Fish Department at Watts Bar, it was revealed that over 50 percent (51.4) of the total catch of 982 fish, survived and were released. The bass were held for three days in a netted enclosed area to document the new catch-and-release program.

"These fish were marked, and catches of the released bass have been reported already to Tennessee Game and Fish officials," said Scott. "This release program is under continuous study, and will be tested again at Ross Barnett. The warm weather will be the biggest challenge to a successful release figure."

This new concept in tournament fishing requires that all approved BASS tournament boars have a mechanical device to aerate and circulate water in the boat's live well. "Adding ice to the live well to keep the water temperature cooler helps in summer weather," said Scott.

The anglers return to the weigh-in station in flights, and the fish are quickly scored and placed in a specially designed, temperature controlled, chemically treated holding tank. The fish are then released. The remaining fish are iced, cleaned and donated to a local charity organization.

Tournament headquarters will be at the Safe Harbor Marina. Ross Barnett will be off limits to tournament contestants August 6-19. Official tournament practice will open on August 20.

Wildlife Afield: Air Pollution Is Not New

By JIM DEAN

For nearly a week much of North Carolina lay under a thick blanket of haze. There was almost no wind. The air was thick and stale. Trees only a few hundred yards away appeared faded, like the crests of faraway mountains.

The heat was stifling, and many people — the lucky ones — hovered near air conditioners. As torrid as the temperature was, the sun often shown only weakly through the haze, reminding some of the kind of light that accompanies an eclipse of the sun.

"I'll be glad when these clouds blow away and it cools off," remarked one acquaintance. "I've never seen it so hazy."

But he was wrong. The sky wasn't cloudy. What he called "haze" was air polution, and it hung over the state so thick recently that many people though it was cloudy.

Air pollution is not new to North Carolinians, but we still aren't accustomed to week-long sieges of the dense kind of air pollution that occurred in the state recently. Therefore, it is not surprising that some people barely recognize it for what it is.

For one reason, much of it comes from out of state, drifting south, but we also have plenty of our own from automobiles and certain types of industry.

The recent air pollution problems in North Carolina were the results of what scientists call a temperature inversion.

W. E. Knight, chief of the Air Quality Division of the Office of Water and Air Resources says that it's "like putting an large umbrella over a chimney." Layers of air become trapped and air polutants cannot escape. Instead, they get thicker and thicker until a change in the weather releases the stagnant air.

During the recent inversion in North Carolina, Knight said that much of the pollution was trapped at an elevation of 1500 feet, and although the inversion lasted several days, the pollution levels were not as high as expected. Knight further indicated that surveys showed th sulphur dioxide (primarily fr coal burning facilities like pow plants) and nitrogen dioxi (from automobiles) did n exceed the limit where th might have had an adver effect on public welfare. And, said that these pollutants did n approach the higher standar which would mean that publ health was also endangered.

Knight did say, however, th surveys showed that dust, f ash and other forms of what called "particulate matter slightly exceeded the standar where public welfare was ad versely affected. These tw instances were in Durham an Forsyth counties, and they ar not the first times "particulat matter" has exceeded thi standard.

Knight said that local ai pollution did not cause th problems this time becaus much of it rose to join the out-o state pollution at 1500 feet leve Of course, luck played some par in this because if the inversio had lasted a few more days pollution levels near the groun would have risen sharply. I areas where automobile traffi is heavy or where ceryain type of industry (such as powe plants or paper mills) exist, th air pollution problem i potentially much more serious and could even affect publi health.

"If the condition had per sisted, we could have required reduction in local pollutio emission," said Knight. "And i it had gotten bad enough, w could have ordered a shutdow of polluting industries. We hav the laws to do that now."

We will see air pollution agai in North Carolina, and we wi undoubtedly see a lot of it Hopefully, the time will soon b past when someone woul mistake it for "clouds."

Tennis, Anyone?

HIT UP AND OUT ON THE SERVE

The serve in tennis is the single most powerful weapon in the game, yet, among beginning tennis players, it is the shot most often hit wrongly.

The beginner will, as a general rule, hit down on the ball thereby putting backspin on the ball. If this shot is hit hard, the ball will not stay in the service court.

The proper stroke for the serve is up and out with the racquet striking near the right, rear center point of the ball.

The ball toss should be to the left side or directly over the player's head. With the toss there, the racquet can then travel up, out and toward the intended target with maximum power.

Hitting the ball in this manner puts topspin on the ball which makes the serve easier to get in and harder to return.

Greenville Men Among Big Fish Catchers Of Week

By HELEN RAY

MOREHEAD CITY — The Eastern Seaboard and our area of Bogue Banks in Carteret County have been living this "oppressive heat wave" with the greatest of humor! The fish have been plentiful and the fishing has been done in the early morning hours and in the evening after the sun has gone down. If any one of you think this "depression" is just one of those things, go out and take a look at the moon! The ocean has been the prettiest ever according to the boatmen and although it is not cold off shore, there is a small breeze, between 8 and 15 mph. Marvin Stanley, Bogue Isle Fishing Pier must have been doing a great business the week-end! His telephone was busy each time this reporter tried to reach him. Since all the other piers reported fine catches, I am sure he also would have had a mighty good report.

Willie Hendrix, reporter for the IRON STEAMER PIER, said there were excellent catches of spanish mackerel, spot, flounder and a few king mackerel. The spanish mackerel and blue fish were caught in the early morning hours and also during the late evening hours. The fishermen have flocked to the pier and on Sunday, some 200 of them lined the rails.

Ken Bradley, SPORTSMAN'S PIER reported a run of sheepshead the kept everyone busy amid great excitement. Spot, hogifsh, bluefish, flounder, spanish mackerel and a few king mackerel have been the varieties brought into the tackle house. Eula Hardison reporting for OCEANANA FISHING PIER said she had never seen as many angel fish as had been caught this past week. Sheepshead, mullet, spot, bluefish and flounder filled the fishermen's ice boxes. The recorded catches that were weighed in were: 15 lb. king mackerel caught by Warren Swanson of Durham; 25 lb. cobia caught by Ralph Trivette of Boonville; John Devane of Morehead caught 4½ lb. spanish mackerel and his wife Betty reeled in a 14½ lb. king mackerel; George Robinson of Morehead landed a 13¾ lb. king mackerel; B. E. Mitchell of Fayetteville landed a 14½ lb. king mackerel, L. H. Churchill of Greenville recorded a catch of a 14 lb. king mackerel and a 4 lb. spanish mackerel; Henry Bottoms, the now famous 12 year old fisherman from Elm City caught one 16 lb. and 1-18 lb. king mackerel; D. W. Branch of Greenville landed a 10 lb. king mackerel; Cephas Hall of Newport, a 5 lb. sheepshead

...the ferry "Beaufort" at dock in Gaylord's Bay on the north shore of Pamlico River. The 140 foot long 40 foot wide modern diesel powered ferry can carry 18 cars per crossing.

The Pamlico River Ferry

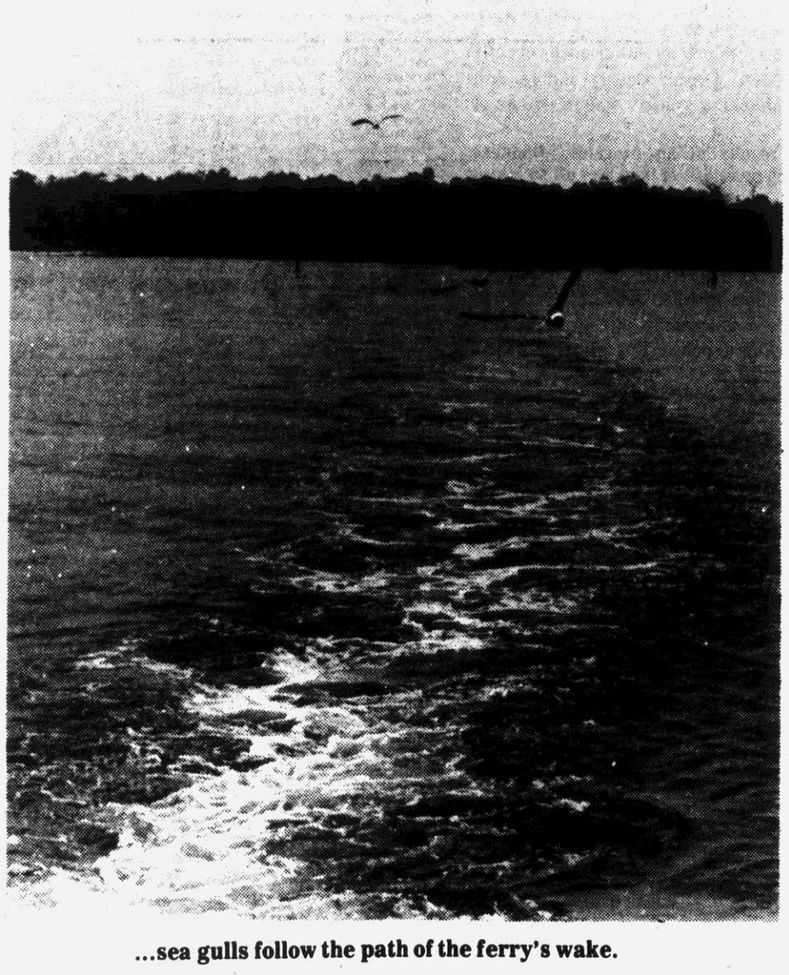

Text and Photographs by Jerry Raynor

...taking pictures is a favorite activity on board the Beaufort.

...sea gulls follow the path of the ferry's wake.

There's something delightful about a ferry boat ride. It is like a miniature sea voyage, an interlude between miles of asphalt — a pause in which a traveler can breathe in salt-scented air, watch sea gulls wheel and circle above the trail of the ferry's wake, talk to a friend or enjoy the parade of river traffic.

The ferry boat Beaufort, transporter of travelers across the Pamlico River at a point 22 miles southeast of Washington, is the nearest to Greenville of any of North Carolina's State Highway Commission operated ferries.

On its daily runs between the north and south shores of the Pamlico the purr of well-tended powerful motors blends with the soft sound of water being cut as the ferry makes its way across the quiet waters of the river.

A.W. Cutler, superivsor of the Pamlico River Ferry, is a Beaufort County native who spent 12 years with the Merchant Marine before taking on supervisory duties. He provided details about the Pamlico River Ferry and its boat, the Beaufort.

"The ferry is a modern one, 140 feet long and 40 feet wide," Cutler said. "It's powered by two 380 diesel Caterpillar motors, and will travel at 10 to 11 knots an hour."

The ferry has ten crossings daily in each direction. At 20 crossings each day, this means the trim black and white ferry plies the four mile distance about 7,300 times yearly — and has chalked up about 43,000 crossings since it first went into service in March 1966.

"There are 24 men in our operation here," Cutler remarked. "We operate continuously except on rare occasions when the threat of a hurricane makes it necessary to take the ferry to a safer place." Cutler estimates than an average of over 40,000 people use the ferry each year.

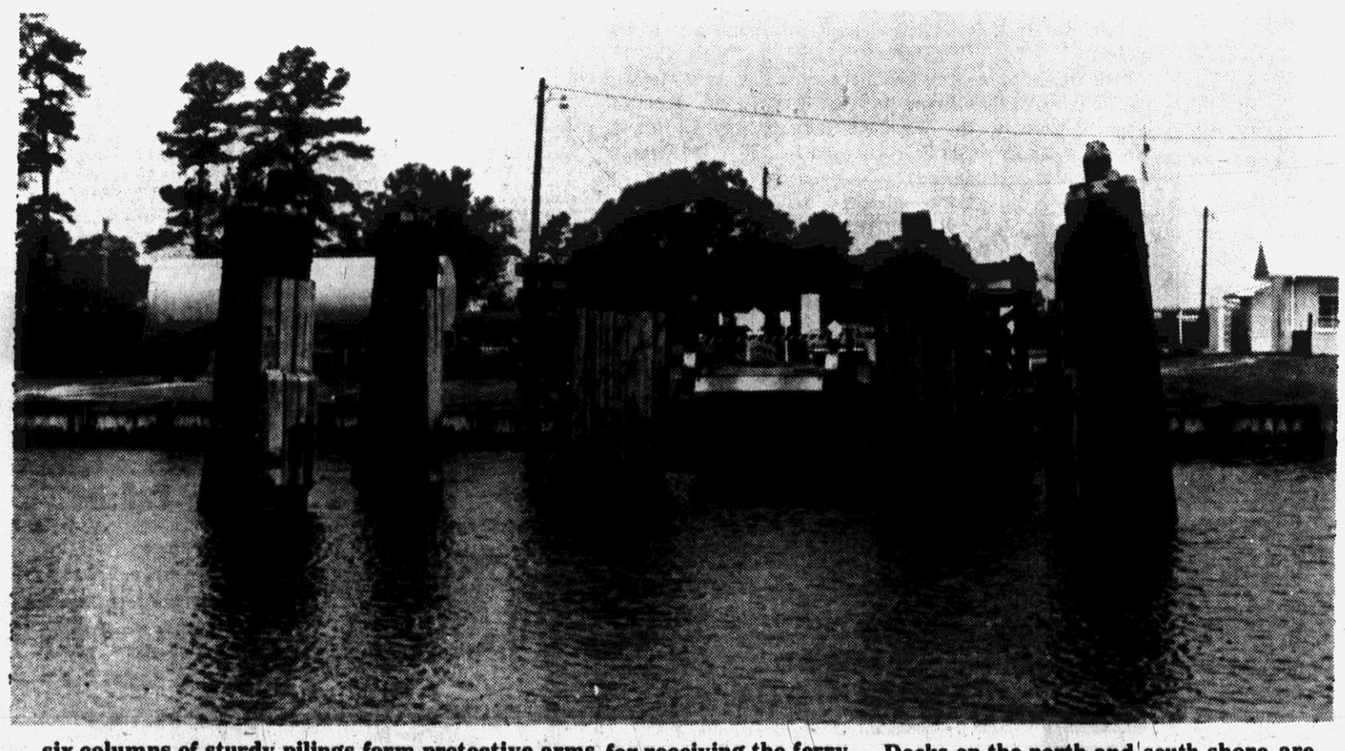

"During most of the year," Cutler pointed out, "the ferry easily takes care of the traffic. There are times during the summer vacation season and on Sundays when we can't take on everyone, but generally we can take care of all the traffic."

The first run from the north shore at Gaylord's Bay near Bayview leaves at 5:30 a.m. This is followed by nine other departures during the day with a final north shore departure at 11:00 p.m.

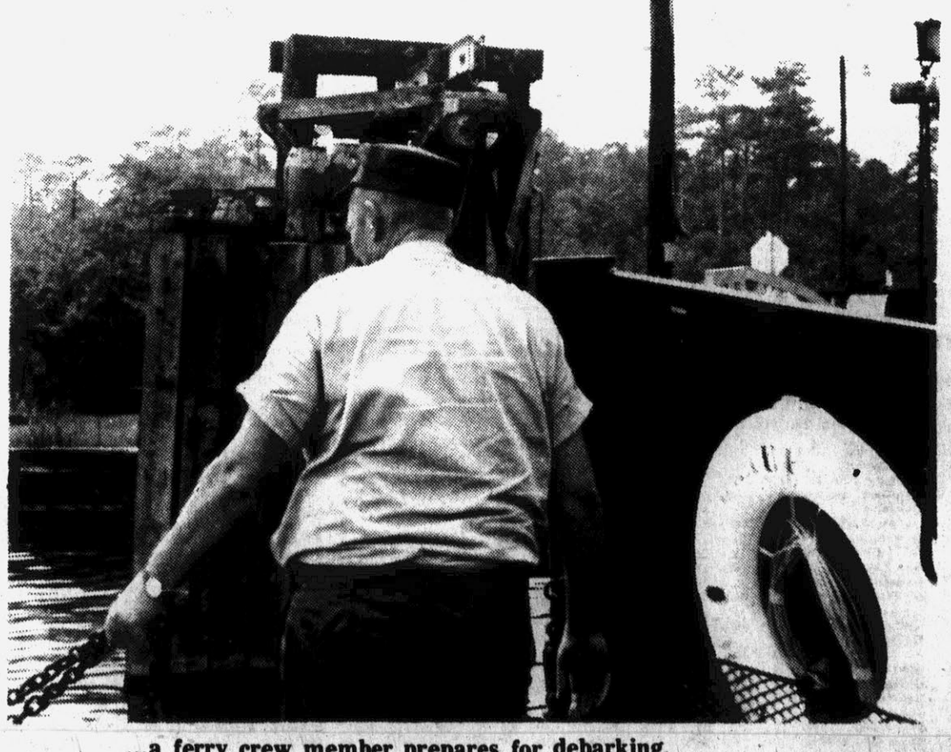

From the ferry dock at Hudles Cut eight miles north of Aurora on the south shore of the Pamlico, the initial departure takes place at 30 minutes past midnight, with a second departure at 6:15 a.m., followed by eight more departures, terminating at 10:00 p.m. Like most ferries in North Carolina, there is no toll charge for passenger or vehicles.

Basically, the Pamlico ferry is designed to save motorists long miles of travel between points north and south of the Pamlico River. A person living in Bath on the north shore wanting to go to Aurora on the south shore, for example, travels 18 miles by using the ferry (including the four miles river distance). Without the ferry, the travel distance would be in excess of 50 miles.

But the Beaufort is also designed for passenger comfort. Two lounges are equipped with rest rooms and water fountains. Except in cold weather, however, most passengers use the crossing time to line the rail of the main deck or sit on benches on the observation deck, happy to be "at sea" for the half hour it takes the ferry to cross the river.

...six columns of sturdy pilings form protective arms for receiving the ferry. Docks on the north and south shore are similar. The one shown above is the north shore dock.

Business Notes

NATIONAL AWARD...Bob Nobles, owner of Bob's T.V. and Appliance of Ayden, is pictured above receiving a national Whirlpool Dealer Service Award from Payton Webster, Charlotte sales manager for the company. The award was presented for outstanding service on Whirlpool appliances during 1971. Only 21 such awards were given throughout the United States, two in the Charlotte District.

Jansen D. Wellendorf has assumed duties as general manager for Rotary Display advertising of eastern North Carolina, located at 715 Albermarle Avenue.

Wellendorf, who came to Greenville from Salt Lake City, Utah where he was engaged in a related busines, reported that Rotary Display is a form of outdoor advertising with the ad board mounted on trailers so that they can be moved from one location to the next. He asserted that the mobile form of advertising "intensifies the coverage, increases the intensity of viewing and lessens the costs of outdoor advertising."

The new general manager, a native of Cleveland, Ohio, is married to the former Fonda Walker of Spring Hill, La. and they have five children.

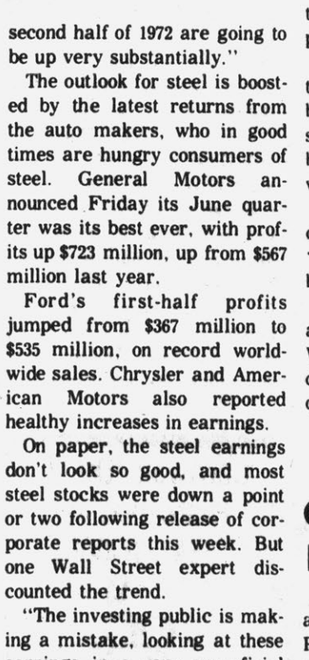

JANSEN WELLENDORF

Wheless & Moore Inc., serving in Greenville since September of 1969, is currently expanding and specializing in commerical and industrial brokerage. The firm soon plans to relocate in its new offices located at the corner of Second and Evans Streets here.

F. BRUCE SAUTER

NEW YORK (AP) — While most industries have been displaying glowing earnings reports in the past two weeks, returns from the steel companies have been coming in grey as a girder.

Appearances may be deceiving, however. Steel's profits are being compared with 1971 first-half figures that were artificially swollen by mass buying in fear of a steel strike.

No strike ever came. But buyers had stocked up so much inventory by August that demand for steel fell to a trickle.

"It took virtually all of 1971 to work off this inventory," one analyst said. "So profits in the second half of 1972 are going to be up very substantially."

The outlook for steel is boosted by the latest returns from the auto makers, who in good times are hungry consumers of steel. General Motors announced Friday its June quarter was its best ever, with profits up $723 million, up from $567 million last year.

Ford's first-half profits jumped from $367 million to $535 million, on record worldwide sales. Chrysler and American Motors also reported healthy increases in earnings.

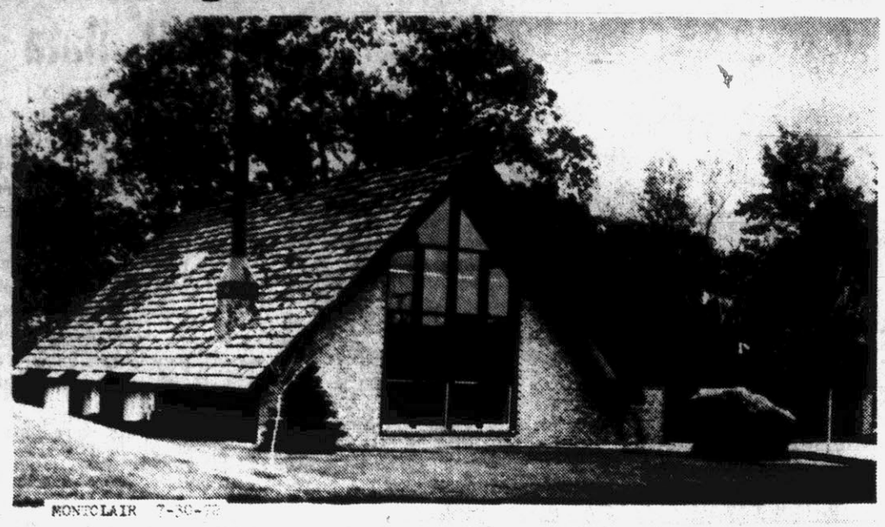

On paper, the steel earnings don't look so good, and most steel stocks were down a point or two following release of corporate reports this week. But one Wall Street expert discounted the trend.

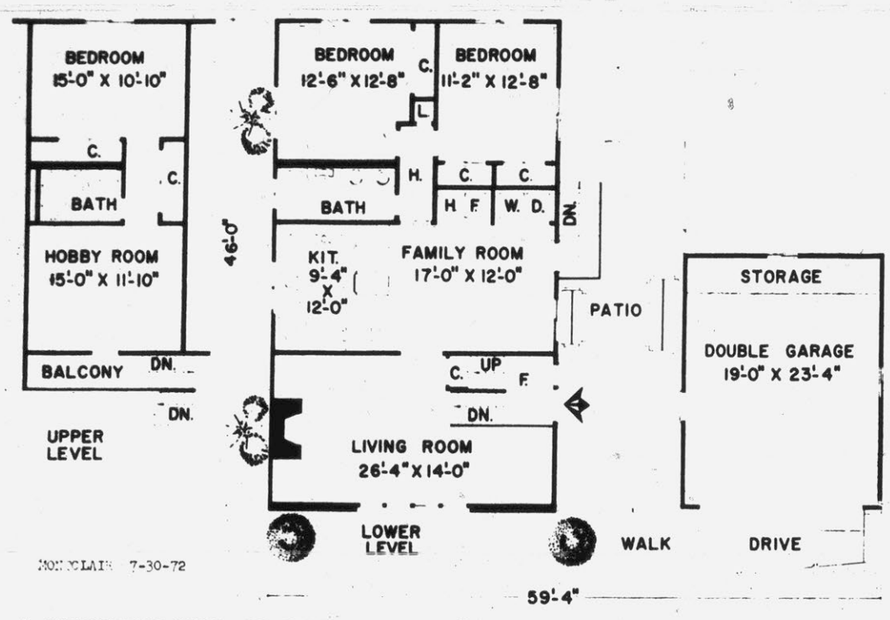

"The investing public is making a mistake, looking at these earnings in a very superficial way," he said. "If investors continue to look at this on a surface basis, the third quarter is going to excite the hell out of them."

Foreign imports—an increasingly annoying thorn in the pocketbook of domestic producers, are expected to drop this year to 17 million tons or less, after peaking at 18.32 million tons last year to capture 16 per cent of the U.S. market.

Chief cause for the change is a series of "voluntary agreements

Story-And-A-Half Makes Haven

A DIFFERENT KIND OF HOME — The Montclair, a story-and-a-half with three bedrooms and two baths, offers something different in residential construction. A modified A-frame, this model has two bedrooms, a bath, a family room-kitchen combination and a large living room with fireplace on the first floor. Upstairs there are a bedroom, bath and hobby room. A split entry is the perfect starting place for the traffic pattern. The detached garage has room for two cars and is connected to the house by a covered patio.

By GERRY BISHOP

For a house that's different, take the A frame.

With modifications, that's what the Associated House Plans did in designing the Montclair, a story-and-a-half with an interesting floor plan.

A red cedar-shake roof adds to the rustic effect of the exterior. Also, the steep roof — a 12-12 pitch — would be ideal for Northern climates where snow is a problem. However, it would be picturesque in any setting.

Frame construction is used with brick veneer on the front facade. Siding on the other facades is 1-by-8 board on board.

Another feature that makes the Montclair different from most homes is the split entry. Upon entering, one steps down a few feet to the large living room or up to the top level.

On the main level there are two bedrooms, a bath, family room-kitchen combination and living room. Upstairs there is a third bedroom, a bath and a hobby room. The plans show a detached double garage but no basement.

The living room is delightful with its cathedral ceiling that follows the pitch of the roof. There's also a log-burning fireplace which enhances the entertainment possibilities. The dimensions are sweeping — approximately 26 feet by 14 feet.

The family room-kitchen area is adjacent to the living room. A breakfast bar separates the two areas. The kitchen is a compact work section measuring approximately 26 feet by 14 feet.

The family room-kitchen area is adjacent to the living room. A breakfast bar separates the two areas. The kitchen is a compact work section measuring approximately nine feet by 12 feet. Appliances and cabinets are arranged efficiently in a triangle and the double sink is under a window.

The two bedrooms on the main level occupy one end of the Montclair. Each has good demensions and ample closet space. And each is just a step away from the bath which has a double vanity.

On the upper level the bedroom is large — 15 feet by approximately 11 feet — and there is a large closet. There's another large closet just outside in the hall across from the bath.

The hobby room, which could be used as a bedroom if necessary, has identical dimensions. It opens onto a balcony that overlooks the living room.

A covered patio connects the house with the double garage, which measures approximately 19 feet by 23 feet and includes a storage area.

The exterior dimensions are approximately 60 feet by 46 feet. There's 1,285 square feet on the lower level, 476 square feet on the upper level and 473 square feet in the garage.

Large Financial Burden Of Expensive House Is Gamble For Newlyweds

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

In planning their new life together newlyweds should be vigilant in keeping debts to a minimum.

The first step may be to buy or rent a home that they can afford. Many are not doing that.

A large number of newly married people are seeking 90 per cent mortgages on expensive houses, commented one bank officer. He fears "the going will be a little rough" for those who are accepted. But they are turning down many young people for mortgages in 80 to 90 per cent bracket, he says.

Couples signing up for 30-year-mortgages on an expensive houses may be taking a status step they cannot afford. And they aren't seriously considering their future, bank men say. While it is true the real estate market is still up, bankers felt it would peak long ago. Things could change at any time.

The reasoning by young people who have assumed the large financial burden of an expensive house has been shaky but has paid off for many, he says. Those who have bought houses in good locations have managed to sell them at substantial profit and move on to another house where the debt can be reduced by the profits. This is a great plan if you manage to make it work, but he considers it risky unless one has guarantees of bigger income in the future.

A 20-year-mortgage is a far better risk. Just about the time the first child is ready to go to college, the mortgage is ready for burning, and the debt can be diverted. This has been especially fortuitous for the family with two or three children in college at the same time.

But a 30-year-mortgage means a young couple might still be paying the morgage when their children are ready to start college.

At 7¼ per cent, a $30,000 mortgage for 30 years means monthly payments of $204.66. The 25-year mortgage payment would be $216.85 and the 20-year mortgage payment would be $237.12.

Why then do young couples take a 30-year mortgage when the difference is only about $10 a week to pay it off 10 years sooner. For $5 a week more they could pay it off five years sooner.

It makes sense when you realize that those few dollars make such a difference to the young house buyer, this banker comments. It is one reason he thinks current buying habits are so risky. In many instances young people are relying on the wife's salary to carry them through the early years.

The answer may be to start off with a smaller house and lower mortgage payments that may be paid off in a short time. If real estate continues to climb, the little house could be sold at a profit and the family could move to something better using the profit for a good down payment. Meanwhile they won't be tortured meeting monthly mortage payments.

Here are some ideas young people might consider:

... Before looking for a house, decide how much money you can afford comfortably each month. Take your time looking for a house or apartment in a good community that falls within the money bracket you have set for yourself.

... A wife's earnings shouldn't really figure in a mortgage payment plan. You may never be able to do without it, if it is a sizable amount. A far better plan is to save this money, using it as a cushion to provide a down payment on a first house in the future. Or a second house. Many far-sighted young people do plan that way, and have found it a good feeling to know they have emergency money available.

.. Don't envy people with status props. There are people with swimming pools they cannot maintain and people with boats who cannot afford to take them out of port. It is far better to have those things you can afford to enjoy and a balanced account book.

Here's How To Do It

Q.—I have to install some wooden posts into the ground. I intend to buy a wood preservative for the bottom parts of the posts. While I planned to coat the posts with a brush, my friend says that it is better to spray on the preservative. Is he right?

A.—Spraying would seem to be a little less practical than brushing in the case of just a few posts. But the best way to get the preservative deeply into the pores of the wood is to soak the posts throughly. This is done simply by pouring the preservative into a container large enough so that the posts can be placed upright in it. Depending on the size of the container, soak one post at a time or all at once.

Q.—Some years ago I had some experience using a spray gun with paint. I now have a few small spraying jobs around the house and plan to purchase one of those aerosol-type spray cans. Is there some special technique for handling it?

A.—If you remember how you handle the spray gun, use the aerosol can the same way. In case your memory is hazy, the spraying should be done about 10 or 12 inches away from the surface being covered. Start slightly to one side of the target, keep spraying as you move your hand and arm across the object and don't release the spray button until you have passed the surface. Always keep the spray can going in a straight line.

A do-it-yourself chore once requiring at least some measure of skill, painting a room in your house can now be accomplished in a fairly professional manner once you have recovered from put-it-off-itis.

Modern paints go on easier, hide better, last longer and are more washable. And the use of a roller in conjunction with a brush enables you to do the job in half the time.

You are most of the way to a good result if you will spend just a little extra time preparing the surface before applying the paint. This means freeing the wall of loose dirt, peeling paint, oil and grease. Loose paint should be scraped away, dirt taken off with a dry mop or a vacuum cleaner attachment, oil and grease removed with an odorless paint thinner or a detergent, and cracks and holes filled with spackling compound or some other type of patching plaster.

Where gloss or semi-gloss enamels have been used in kitchens and bathrooms, any remaining gloss should be dulled with sandpaper or with a special compound you can buy from your paint dealer. This is necessary because paint will not adhere well to slick surfaces.

Also before starting, remove switch plates and outlet covers; then when you paint the exposed areas and replace the plates and covers, you'll have a neat result. It also eliminates the problem of removing bits of paint that cling to the plates and covers when you attempt to paint around them. Should you wish to paint the plates and covers, remember what was said about paint not sticking well to shiny surfaces. A little steel wooling will accomplish the required dulling.

If the ceiling is to be painted along with the walls, do it first. Use a roller with an extension handle and paint across the width of the ceiling rather than the length. This will prevent lap marks even though many of today's paints, especially the latexes, minimize this possibility.

Although you probably will use a roller for the walls, use a paint brush with a small amount of paint on the tips of the bristles only.

Don't Rush Into Air-Conditioning

By DOROTHEA M. BROOKS

NEW YORK (UPI)—Right in the middle of summer, when the weather is its hottest and muggiest, when you think you can't take another sleepless night: that's when converts to home air conditioning are made.

If you are at that stage, don't rush out and buy the first thing you see. Take time first to bone up on the hows and whats of air conditioning: How big an air conditioner do I need? What's the best type for my home? How can I be sure my electric wiring will supply enough current?

A new booklet of valuable tips on room air-conditioning by Emerson gives concise, understandable answers to these and many other questions.

Basic to your decision, says Leo Hahn, vice president and general manager of Emerson's Quiet Kool division, is the size area which is to be cooled, what time of day the cooling is most needed, the type of window in which the unit will be installed, and the voltage and amperage of the circuit which will provide power.

Additionally, you must decide what options are important to your individual situation. For example, Hahn noted, one might elect to purchase a high-efficiency unit that carries a slightly higher price tag but provides long-rang savings on electric bills. Some units have features that move the air more efficiently. And there are numerous design options.

Informative Booklet

The booklet, discussing what to look for in an air conditioner, notes room coolers are sized in terms of BTU (British Thermal Unit—the amount of heat required to raise the temperature of one pound of water one degree Fahrenheit), volts and amperes (amps.) The BTU figure indicates the cooling capacity, voltage describes the circuit rating needed, and ampereage tells you how much current will be required.

Where temperatures do not usally exceed 95 degrees, an air conditioner rated at 6,000 BTU per hour, for example, will cool a room with 100 to 180 square feet of floor space. Where temperatures exceed 95 degrees, but do not go over 100, one rated about 7,500 BTU per hour is required to cool the same area.

Voltage refers to the electrical pressure of the circuit to which the conditioner will be connected. Typically, a house or apartment building will have a circuit of 230 volts that separates into two 115-volt branches. An air conditioner of a stated voltage can be used only in a circuit that supplies that voltage.

Amperage refers to current that the unit will consume. A house may be wired for 60 to 100 amps, divided into branch circuits, usually of 15 amps each. A 7.5 amp. air conditioner may be plugged into a 15-amp. branch circuit if other equipment on the line draws no more than 7.5 amps. Otherwise the conditioner may require a separate branch circuit.

Battle Invasion Of Armadillos

MASARYKTOWN, Fla. (AP) —At 3 a.m. every morning, neighbors shake their heads as John and Dorothy Mullins chase around a vegetable patch in nightclothes firing a .22 caliber rifle.

The Mullins spend the predawn hours picking off armadillos. By day they raise rabbits.

"We get up in the middle of the night and go gunning for those ugly things in my flower bed or vegetable garden," Mrs. Mullins explained.

When the moon is high the nocturnal armadillos search out plump worms or juicy beetles in rich black soil the Mullins fertilize with rabbit droppings from their colony of 700 bunnies.

"We're invaded, tortured by those terrible looking animals," moaned the housewife. In the last two months, she said, her husband has bagged 15 of the long-snouted creatures.

The rabbits they raise is for a barbeque franchise called "Bunny on a Bun, Inc."

However, Mrs. Mullins concedes stock isn't selling as rapidly as the product is multiplying.

The couple moved to this wooded palmetto area in central Florida nearly two years ago from Tampa with the idea of bunny breeding for profit.

One morning Mrs. Mullins found her meticuously planted garden uprooted. That night, they found a 25-pound, 20-inch long armadillo munching away.

As time passed, she said, "we became night prowlers, nocturnal, just like them. We learned to sleep with one ear open."

Neighbors began to look with some suspicion on the couple out shooting dum dum bullets at 3 a.m., she added with a chuckle. Others in the area are bothered by armadillos too, said Mrs. Mullins, but they haven't resorted to a nightly vigil.

Doctors In Union Talk Strike Tool

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Dr. Sanford A. Marcus wants physicians to belong to a union. So do an estimated 15,000 other doctors in several states.

Marcus is president of the Union of American Physicians, a new San Francisco area group which has attracted 1,000 members paying dues of $100 a year.

A mail poll conducted by the magazine Medical Opinion showed on July 9 that half of 752 doctors responding were both willing to join unions and to strike.

Why?

For one thing, the doctors say they aren't making enough money. For another, they are dissatisfied with so-called third party payers—the insurance companies and government health programs now footing two-thirds of the nation's medical bills.

And they are looking for a weapon in case Congress adopts a national health insurance program, which many see as inevitable.

"Our three adversaries are insurance companies, the government, and the American Hospital Association whose administrators aspire to become employers of all physicians by taking over new health care systems," says Marcus, a San Francisco surgeon.

Help Municipal Doctors

or a beginning, some of the dues collected in San Francisco may go for litigation under the National Labor Relations Act to win rights for municipally employed physicians who Marcus says earn less than plumbers. Other money will be stockpiled for the future.

Until recently, the union idea appealed mainly to interns and residents who long received the barest minimum for living. New York's Committee of Residents and Internes, which has 4,000 members, was founded in 1957.

But now the doctors who are unionizing are private practitioners, including both liberal Democrats and conservative Republicans.

As inflation pushed up the doctor's rent and personal staff costs, Medicare fees changed little, Marcus asserts, leaving some physicians' net income reduced. Then, the Federal Price Board restricted the annual increase in medical fees to 2.5 per cent.

"For example, I work the first 38 hours of the week just to cover my out-of-pocket overhead," Marcus said.

Besides trying to hold the fee level steady, private insurance companies and the government have given the physician the task of preparing endless reports.

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, JULY 30, 1972

CARROLL RIGHTER'S horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A wonderful day for you to get new ideas and inspirations from a new source which attracts you but which you know very little about. You are able to expand your horizons far beyond their present boundaries and others can see you are a person of considerable worth.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Forget a rut you are in and go out with congenials for fun and relaxation. Make appointments with pals early in the morning. Show that you are an intellectual.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Important you stay at home and discuss important matters with those who live with you so that mutual affairs work out harmoniously. Do some entertaining and make a fine impression.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You are feeling affectionate and kind now so spread it around where it will be most appreciated. Talk over with good pals how you can become more effective in routine matters.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You now know how to add to your present abundance through new activities, so make your plans with the help of allies. Visit with good friends tonight if you feel hemmed in.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You are able to find the right persons who can give you the information you want. A long-distance telephone call could be very helpful to you. Discuss an important matter with a friend.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Your intuition tells you how to make the most of your past experiences, especially if you get together with people who think in a modern way. Evening is fine for romance with mate.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You are now able to get your views across with an associate if you permit a good friend to intervene who has the ability to persuade. Mutual projects can then work out successfully.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Handle work ahead of you in such a fine fashion that you make a big impression on a bigwig. Take time out to make plans for the future. Spend the evening with clever people.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You can be highly inspired now and gain your aspirations if you attend the services of your choice. Later go out with person you admire and have a good time.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Your home should be the focal point of your activity today so make plans for entertainment in advance. Study new methods that could make the future more prosperous for you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You have many excellent ideas that should be discussed with friends today. Make plans for a trip in the near future. Go to bed early tonight so you can get a good start in the morning.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You can do much to improve the appearance of your home today and get favors you want from kin and others. A clever friend gives the fine ideas you need and want. Show your appreciation.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be one of those young persons whose life is apt to be more fortunate than others. But it is important that you fit your progeny well for living by giving the finest education possible, then success can be possible. Teach to finish whatever has once been started. Give the benefit of sports, and bring out latent musical talent.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

Carroll Righter's Individual Forecast for your sign for August is now ready. For your copy send your birthdate and $1 to Carroll Righter Forecast (name of newspaper), Box 629, Hollywood, Calif. 90028.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, JULY 31, 1972

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A brilliant and unusual day in which everyone should feel on top of the world. You can put in action some interesting and important arrangement good for social and vocational expansion and popularity, which will bring happiness of a personal nature, also.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Discuss certain plans you have with mate and get the assistance and approval you want to make them successful. Good friends are helpful, also. Evening is excellent for that cultural pursuit that means much to you.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You are very capable today and can take care of home and basic matters very well. Prove your intelligence, and put that clever plan to work that will help you reach cherished aims quickly.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Put new zip into new and old routines so all goes like clockwork, and show others you have a fine sense of humor. Help them cheer up. You can truly progress now as you have not been able to before.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You have to think big for big achievements now, so be sure you get out of that picayunish routine. A bigwig you know will give you the ideas, advice you need. Avoid one who bickers, makes you feel nervous.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Plan what must be done with regard to those important social affairs that are coming up, as well as personal alliances. The planets are good, and everything works in your favor. Retire early and get a good rest tonight.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Have lofty ideas and make right preparations for future happiness now. Get in touch with the one you love and the evening can be a happy, gala one. Dress your best.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Ideal day and p.m. to see individuals you admire; discuss business, personal or cultural matters. Get the facts you want. You can have the backing you need for pet projects.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Get busy early with career activities and you can reach the top of your particular ladder soon. Talk over with an influential person how to express your self better. Think.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Plan some time to become acquainted with those people who think big and are big and whose ideals are noble. They can help you become a more important and successful person. Listen carefully to what is being said.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Try to see those individuals who have the power to help you express yourself in public, social and personal avenues. Show romantic tie more devotion. The evening can be particularly delightful.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Get your ideas whittled down to a far more practical size and talk the matters over with those you want allied with you in the future. Much success can come of this. Show you can be an excellent partner.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) A perfect day to make your surroundings far more charming through own efforts and clever ideas. See what you can do to make co-workers more cooperative. Try showing more kindness and consideration to everyone.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be one of those great and reasonable persons who will become irked if others do not act in a similar fashion, so teach early that everyone is not the same and to make exceptions for shortcomings, but do not fail to encourage in own convictions, or your child could become discouraged quickly because of others. A remarkable chart that can reach the top with far less effort than most and have a very happy life, both personal and careerwise.

Carroll Righter's Individual Forecast for your sign for August is now ready. For your copy send your birthdate and $1 to Carroll Righter Forecast (name of newspaper), Box 629, Hollywood, Calif. 90028.

N. C. Debutante Ball Set For September

Young ladies from Farmville, Greenville and Williamston, who will be presented at the 1972 Terpsichorean Ball, were interviewed about their expectations for their debut summer.

Lind Coppage

WILLIAMSTON — A rising sophomore at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Miss Coppage is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William Frank Coppage, of 700 School Dr. here.

Her father will be serving as her chief marshal assisted by C. Swanson Graves III of Washington, who also attends UNC-CH.

In giving her reasons for choosing to attend Carolina, Miss Coppage said, "I decided to go there because I wanted to be a physical therapist and eventually attend Physical Therapy School there. By beginning as a freshman, I will avoid the hassle of transferring as a junior. Also, I was ready to go to a coeducational school after two years of girls school."

Continuing she added, "I have always wanted to work in a hospital, but didn't want to be a doctor or a nurse so I became interested in physical therapy."

During the earlier part of the summer, the debutante attended summer school at Carolina, taking a course in introductory physics which is required for her major.

She worked in the Cerebral Palsy Hospital, Durham, "to get an inside view of what goes on in a physical therapy department. I didn't really have a specific job—I helped the physical therapists with lifting and moving the children around, walking with the children to catch them if they should fall and playing with the children. I also asked a lot of questions.

"It was really a wonderful experience—the children were beautiful and I loved them all and learned a lot," Miss Coppage explained.

Now that school is out, Miss Coppage is at home "enjoying her family and not having to study."

She said that she didn't have any real hobbies but did enjoy trying new recipes and doing needlepoint.

Sarita Hardy

FARMVILLE — Debutante Sarita Hardy is working this summer as youth director at the Farmville United Methodist Church.

She plans all activities for young people in the church in addition to conducting a coffee house which involves the entire community.

The UMYF Coffee House is held at the church every two weeks on Thursday night. The activities there include live entertainment as well as refreshments—it's a "place to go for good fellowship."

Although Miss Hardy has not declared her college major, she is interested in chemistry. "I would like to be an orthodontist because I enjoy working with small children," she said.

A rising senior at St. Mary's Junior College, Raleigh, Miss Hardy added, "I wanted to attend St. Mary's since I was in the seventh grade. I like the campus, location and a small school has always been a favorite of mine. Since I have been there, I have not regretted my decision—I enjoy every minute."

At St. Mary's, Miss Hardy will serve as chief marshal during the coming year and will be editor-in-chief of the annual "Stagecoach." She played basketball on the Sigma Mu team.

After graduation from St. Mary's, she would like to enroll at Wake Forest because she likes the campus, "the students are friendly and my possible chosen field is well established there."

Sketching, arts and crafts and decoupage are listed by Miss Hardy as her favorite hobbies.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Thomas Hardee Jr., of 413 N. Waverly St., her father will be her chief marshal.

For her debut, Miss Hardy will be wearing a white sleeveless gown of silk worsted designed by Bianchi. The mandarin collar has accents of seed pearls and crystal beads which form an intricate scroll design running vertically down the front of the gown and around the bottom. The skirt, which falls from a modifield empire line, has back fulness created by graceful folds of the fabric.

Joy Joyner

FARMVILLE — A career of working with people or teaching in an elementary school are now the plans of Joy Joyner, who attends Converse College, Spartanburg, S.C.

In commenting on attending a small girls' school, Miss Joyner said, "At a small school, I felt that I would be able to get to know the girls much better. Converse is also a four-year college, and I will not have to transfer." Her older sister, Ann, graduated from there.

At Converse, Miss Joyner was a member of the drama club and had a part in a Shakespearan play near the end of the school term. She was selected as one of 10 freshmen girls in the Snow Court in addition to being a member of the newspaper "Conversationalist" and annual staff "Y and Other Y's."

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Eli Joyner Jr., of 108 E. Lang St., Miss Joyner's father will serve as her chief marshal. Dawson Andrews of Farmville, a rising sophomore at North Carolina State University, Raleigh, will be her assistant marshal.

During the earlier part of the summer, Miss Joyner assisted her mother and sister in wedding plans. She will also spend some time traveling and is "looking forward to the debutante parties."

Miss Joyner has visited in Washington, D.C., Atlanta, Ga., and Columbia, S.C. A friend of Miss Joyner's, Beth Williams, of Columbia is making her debut and the two young ladies will be enjoying debutante festivities there.

For her formal presentation, Miss Joyner will be wearing a gown of French illusion over peau de soie designed with a scalloped neckline and hemline.

The gown is beaded with tiny seed pearls and appliqued with lace medallions. The chapel length train extends from the waist in the back of the A-line skirt.

When asked about hobbies, Miss Joyner concluded, "I enjoy needlepoint, and also being involved in drama at college.

Jackie Minges

Greenville debutante Jackie Minges is spending this summer at home and enjoying vacation as compared to last summer when she traveled to Europe with her family.

Last summer, the Minges family flew to London, England, and toured in Denmark and Switzerland. They returned home abroad the S. S. France.

"The entire trip was just great, but my favorite part was the trip back to the United States via ship," said Miss Minges.

The family just recently returned from a week's trip to Freeport in the Bahamas.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Minges II, of 2000 Pinecrest Dr., her father will be serving as Miss Minges' chief marshal for her official bow to North Carolina society at the Debutante Ball scheduled for early September in Raleigh.

Her assistant marshal will be Donald Taylor of Greenville, a student at East Carolina University.

Miss Minges has attended St. Mary's Junior College, Raleigh, for the past three years—two years of high school and one year of college. "After attending high school there, I had made so many friends I decided to stay there for two years of college.

"I am now planning to transfer to East Carolina University and will enter the School of Nursing. After being confronted by several accidents, I decided that I might like to become a nurse. I also enjoy the courses in science which would be required for a nursing degree," said Miss Minges.

Scottish dancing which is popular in North Carolina is practiced by the Gillie Callum Dancers at St. Mary's of which Miss Minges is a member.

The group has performed before various civic groups, on television and in St. Mary's activities.

"My favorite dance is between crossed swords which is a traditional Scottish dance. Long ago, men did this dance before they went into battle," remarked Miss Minges.

Miss Minges also enjoys crochetting, various types of water sports, tennis and playing the piano.

Anne Smith

SNOW HILL — A three-week to Europe highlighted the summer of 1972 for Anne Smith, who returned home in mid-June.

The tour group, which was headed by Miss Smith's parents, traveled to England, Switzerland, Italy and France.

"Traveling abroad is something everybody should do if at all possible. I found that the people are basically very friendly and the countries are very beautiful.

"Something interesting and memorable happened everyday," said Miss Smith.

During the remainder of the summer, Miss Smith plans trips to Wrightsville Beach "to spend lots of time enjoying the sun" and entertaining school friends. Her summer vacation will be somewhat shorter than some college students when she returns to St. Mary's Junior College, Raleigh, on Aug. 24.

A graduate of Greene Central High School, Miss Smith said, "I wanted to attend a small girls school which offered a good curriculum as well as having other outstanding advantages. My sister attended there and also loved it.

"Although I have not yet declared my college major, I plan to transfer either to Wake Forest or Carolina which are both good schools in good locations. I want to attend a coeducational college after my two years at St. Mary's," commented the debutante.

Her parents are Dr. and Mrs. Charles Gordon Smith III, of 106 N. Greene St. Her father will be serving as her chief marshal and Robbie Hill of Hookerton, a rising junior at East Carolina University, will be her assistant.

Miss Smith loves animals which includes family pet dogs, Tippy and Rufus, and enjoys all water sports and various types of music.

Martha Sugg

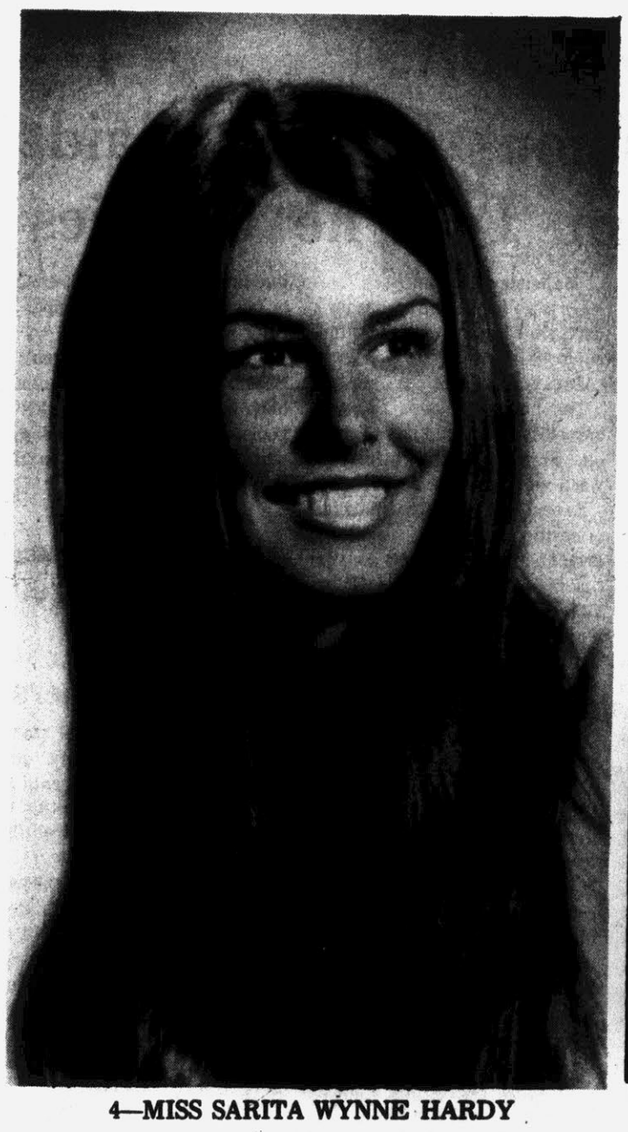

A summer of varied activity has filled much of the time for Debutante Martha Sugg of Greenville.

She attended the first session of summer school at East Carolina University taking a Spanish course. During the latter part of summer vacation, she will be traveling to Disney World and will be a bridesmaid in a wedding in Winston-Salem.

A student at Stratford College, Danville, Va., Miss Sugg said the school was "recommended by a good friend. I visited the campus and liked it immediately. I also didn't want to attend a large university. Stratford has a warm atmosphere and the girls are very friendly, which appealed to me."

Through an English course at school, Miss Sugg has decided upon a major in primary education. The course involves volunteer work in the community through a tutoring program. "I tutored in a second grade

Back-To-School Fashions Include Plaids, Patterns And Return To The Classics

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Women's Editor

NEW YORK (UPI)—Back to school's fashion report card is a blackboard jungle of plaids and patterns, the primary colors, the return to the classics, the layered look. And what else? Jeans!

These themes run through collections for both sexes from nursery school right on through the teens.

Those denims go right on.. and on, and on. Jeans, frayed, faded, patched, decorated with everything from personal art to peace symbols, have become the security blanket of the young generation.

"Most of the fashion forecasters agree that while girls will go more feminine for fall and boys and young men will favor a more masculine look, jeans will remain the single most potent item in the marketplace," says Leda Sanford, Editor, Teens & Boys Outfitter, New York.

Special Symbolism

Miss Sanford says jeans represent youth's rebellion against "manufacturer-dictated styles that had nothing to do with the customer's desires or needs."

The denim wave has swept from pants to jackets, to all weather coats and to new treatments—a brushed look—to the fabric. The young now can buy new beat-up, bleached-out jeans, or get them cross-dyed with black for a darker look.

Denim has a strong influence on other fabrics. Suitings and blazers adapt a frosty look in knits and stretch wool blends. Corduroys simulate denim, as do shirtings in both wovens and single knits.

Out to cut into denim's popularity for fall is the big trend throughout the children's wear market for plaids. "It was just a year when all the big fabric houses went mad for plaid," said Patricia Van Olinda, who writes for Earnshaw's, a publication for buyers. (Plaids hit the adult market with equal power.)

Sometimes the pattern is plaid on plaid, plaid cut on the straight, plaid on the bias. Horse-blanket size plaids dominate in coats, toggle jackets, trousers, jumpers, pleated skirts with sweaters.

Plaids Prevail

Bit parts for plaids show in hats, caps, belts, shirts and robes.

Glens are revived, showing for boys in new colorations of, say, olive and plum, or gray and burgundy. For the girls the colors are both muted or bold. It's a big year for the primary colors bright red, yellow, green, and blue —in all girls' apparel.

In the department of classics, include blazers, baseball jackets, sailor touches. And sweaters. They go to the head of the class again.

Some manufacturers call them simply knit tops, and the range is from skinny rib turtlenecks, to full sleeve treatments, cable stitches, halters, tanks and vests.

Sweaters fit right into the layered manner of dress. Take a shirt, add a sweater, add another shirt like a jacket. Or work a reverse. Take a turtle and add a shirt. Add a cableknit cardigan. The variations are infinite.

Now, some other highlights of fall fashions in girls' wear:

For pre-teens, pants out-doing dresses, with lots of the jeans-type trousers decorated with nail-heads and the like. They're coming with full cuffed legs and high rising waistbands (a break from the hip huggers), says Miss Van Olinda.

Haberdasher Look

Girls go for the haberdasher's look, showing in such as button-down shirts with long pointed collars, copies of men's ties.

The body suit goes on, with assorted styles of skirts to wrap on. Smocks make minitops, worn with pants or leotards.

Seventeen Magazine, in its fall roundup of teen fashions, predicts a big season for the "unexpecteds"—pink for winter, sweater sleeves, high, bright cummerbund waists, soft shawl collars, easy jackets that reverse to quilted looks, and quilted jeans.

In its semi-annual roundup of style trends, the Boys' and Young Men's Apparel Manufacturers Association (BAMA) lists these other highlights:

"Vintage" colors

A large range of "vintage" colors appears. Old rose shows for corduroys, suedes and cashmere sweaters. Wine tones from the brights to the deep burgundies update tweeds and plaids, blazer flannels. Plum is the darkest of the group, showing in everything from top coatings to jacquard knits.

Neutrals are more varied, with camel the great basic still. Browns will continue to be best sellers because they fit into the casual country approach to dressing, go with leather, tweed and twills.

Everyone likes herringbones. They blanket the market from shirting weights to heavy outerwear, says BAMA. Those big bold stripes for trousers "look very dated". For fall, the trend is to "disguised" stripings, like fine line twills with vertical or basic chalk and pin stripes in color with white.

Tuck-in boot pants are going to gain some popularity among older boys, says BAMA. Sales of boots, right up to the kneehighs with laces, already are on the rise.

Loan Manager Speaks To CWI Members

Stearle Pittman, loan manager for Commercial Credit Corp., presented the program at the Tuesday evening meeting of the Greenville CWI held at the Three Steers Restaurant.

Pittman discussed the subject of "Auto Financing." He pointed out the two major methods of financing in the auto industry. The first method used by many consumers is the sales contract method whereby the consumer agrees to allow the dealer to take care fo the financing.

In the second method, known as direct lending, the consumer makes his own financial arrangements with the company of his choice.

Pittman also stressed that in financing a vehicle there are several factors which should be considered. They are as follows: age and cost of vehicle, age of applicant, marital status; if applicant is homeowner or renter; paying habits, occupational group of applicant; and finally if applicant's income is sufficient to warrant the financing.

A special guest and prospective member at the meeting was Geneve Lewis.

Invitations were read to the members from both the Kinston CWI and the Kannapolis CWI to attend their annual summer picnics. Several members made plans to attend the Kinston picnic to be held Wednesday, July 26.

It was announced by president, Pearl Hartsell, that Greenville won second place in both the Pin and Emblem award and the Attendance award, which was presented recently at the state convention in Greensboro.

Decorator Says Young People Seeking 'Real Home' Look With Natural Fibers

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

The Psychedelic look is out in youth decorating, "nothing is deader," says youthful interior designer Jane Victor, who designs interiors for many newlyweds.

These days she must use "a deeper level of analysis" to understand what the young New Yorkers and suburbanites are trying to convey to her. She must determine what they want, what they will contribute to their homes with their own handicrafts, and how she can tie the whole thing together before she can begin decorating.

For young people, Miss Victor says there are two types of decorating—primitively oriented and sophisticated. But they are both geared to a "real home look" with natural fibers and natural woods, she observes.

"The whole bit for the sophisticated look is a revival of the 140s with straight draperies and no frills. It is a purist traditional look, but with a "camp" attitude. A sense of humor is considered essential to the decorating scheme so fabrics may be fun—like 'itsy-bitsy' animal designs. This group is well read and well traveled and they incorporate many of their 'finfs' into the decorating scheme."

Miss Victor says it is not even a surprise if they suggest putting bunk beds in the living room. Young people have no set formula for furnishing any room.

The primitively oriented decor preferred by some young people can take all kinds of rustic twists, the decoration points out one girl for example fell in love with some swamp wood and in cutting it open she discovered it had a reenish iridescence. Now her husband has covered their living room walls with it, "sort of a log cabin look" Miss Victor observes.

The couple also used the swamp wood for bookshelves. The husband cut it and grovved it all by hand to achieve various effects.

That couple's basic look includes using soy sauce barrels and pickle barrels at different heights as tables and seats. Nothing is camouflaged.

Young couples are willing to wait years to furnish a room. They do have the feeling they must decorate immediately to please vistors, and they will not pay the high prices for furniture they see in stores.

"Years ago parents would do the whole decorating thing for a daughter and daughter-in-law, communicating their own ideas to a decorator. It would be mama's interpretation of what the kids would like to live with if they only realized it. But now kids do their own decorating thing, good or bad. And they don't waste their money. They want to enjoy their homes, and they really do not care what anyone else thinks about their homes or how other people decorate."

All Miss Victor's youthful clients want a back to nature scene, and use a great many plants and woodsy effects to provide an outdoor theme in their houses or apartments.

In the nine years she has been decorating Miss Victor has observed trends from one extreme to the other. "But this 'real look" should be with us for a long time," she says.

in a Catholic school and became very interested in what I was doing," said Miss Sugg.

At Stratford, Miss Sugg was a member of the chorus.

She participated in Stratford's study abroad program and spent January of this year in London, England.

Thirty-seven students from Stratford live in the Salisbury Hotel during their stay here. Miss Sugg traveled to Paris, Switzerland, Germany and Holland.

In telling of her experiences, Miss Sugg said, "I learned so much — realizing how much I had taken for granted at home. I met people from all walks of life. America just has so much to offer that I didn't realize until after spending sometime away from home."

In her spare time, Miss Sugg enjoys participating in all types of water sports, singing and playing the piano.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. Bruce Sugg, Jr., of 236 Churchill Dr. Her father will be her chief marshal and Ernest Lawhorne of Columbia, S.C., who attends the University of South Carolina, will be her assistant marshal.

Lu Williams

FARMVILLE — Following in the footsteps of her sister, Lu Williams will make her official bow to North Carolina society in early September.

Miss Williams' sister, Mrs. Nan Williams Gibson, made her debut in 1958. Her uncle, Guilford C. Worsley, of Greenville will be her chief marshal and Jim Williford of Pinetops, a rising senior at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, will be her assisting marshal.

Also a student at UNC-CH, Miss Williams is majoring in pharmacy. "I enjoy chemistry and math and decided to put these courses to good use. My entire family seems to be chemistry-inclined; my father was a doctor, my mother, a lab technician, my sister, a chemistry major, and my brother is a radiologist.

"My sister-in-law, Betsy, of Danville, Pa., is also a pharmacist, and has encouraged me," said Miss Williams.

This summer, Miss Williams is working as a part of her extern study in pharmacy at the City Drug Co., Farmville. "It's interesting to learn about the different drugs and waht they are used for," she added.

"Once in a while I have trouble reading a doctor's handwriting," she continued. Miss Williams is allowed to fill a prescription as long as the druggist, James Wheless, is present. "I have learned to read some of the doctors' codes in filling prescriptions," Miss Williams remarked.

At night, in addition to attending various debutante parties, Miss Williams is responsible for filling out an externship notebook, which is required, and will be graded as part of her schooling.

Daughter of Mrs. R. T. Williams, of 407 Grimmersburg St., and the late Dr. Williams, Miss Williams is a member of Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority at UNC. She has been selected for membership in Gamma Alpha Lambda, honorary sorority, based on high academic achievement.

Statewide FHA Meeting Held On ECU Campus

"Let's Make Tomorrow Together" was the theme of a leadership conference involving 341 chapter officers and advisors of the Future Homemakers of America, which took place at the East Carolina University School of Home Economics July 24-27.

State FHA Advisor Hazel Tripp directed the conference, which was composed of various workshop sessions and discussions on good leadership. FHA's national meeting ended in Los Angeles two weeks ago.

Presiding at sessions throughout the week were the following state officers:

Robin Webb of South Edgecombe High, president; Susan Edwards of Rutherfordton-Spindale High, vice president; Mary McLaurin of Beaver Creek High, secretary;

Marywinn Shill from Shelby Senior High, teasurer; June Crawford from Jordan Matthews High, reporter; Angela Shepard from Rockingham High, parliamentarian; Jan Hinton from West Edgecombe High, historian; and Celia Franks from Jones Senior High, recreation leader.

Conference speakers included state Representative Sam Bundy and Nerham Warwick, Dept. of Public Instruction special consultant for the disadvantaged and handicapped.

Dr. Miriam Moore, dean of the ECU School of Home Economics, said this is the first time state FHA officers have ever met on the ECU campus.

"FHA is commonly misunderstood and underestimated by the general public," she said, "probably because it is generally thought to be merely another high school club."

However, she noted, FHA is one of the largest youth organizations in the nation, with membership open to both girls and boys. Its aim is to prepare its members for improved family life, and one way this goal is manifested is that members begin now, trying to contribute more to their own families' well-being and harmony.

The bikini bodice, really a mini bra, gets away from the beach for summer. It will turn up as trouser and short topping via an elasticized straight-across bandeau that just covers the bosom. By Glentex, it comes in bright solid colors and stripes. The look achieved is sassy.

SUMMER DESSERT — Hot milk sponge cake is laden with strawberries and whipped cream.

It's Time For Strawberry Cake

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

One of the most pleasant desserts you can make is a Strawberry Cream Cake. For this you can use hot milk sponge cake sandwiched with whipped cream and strawberries.

The following recipe for the cake makes two layers—one to put in the freezer and one to use right away.

STRAWBERRY CREAM CAKE

One 8-inch layer hot milk sponge cake, see recipe below
1 pint fresh strawberries
2 tablespoons sugar
1/2 cup heavy cream
1/4 teaspoon vanilla

With a long sharp serrated knife split the cake in half horizontally to make 2 layers. Place one of the layers on a cake plate.

Rinse strawberries with cold water and hull. Cut large berries in quarters, medium or small berries in half. Mix berries with 1 tablespoon of the sugar.

Beat cream until it holds stiff peaks, beating in the remaining 1 tablespoon sugar and the vanilla toward the end of the beating.

Spread half the whipped cream over the cake layer on the cake plate; top with half the berries and all their juice. Add other cake layer, remaining cream and remaining berries. Refrigerate if not served at once.

Makes 6 servings.

HOT MILK SPONGE CAKE

1 1/4 cups sifted cake flour
1 1/4 teaspoons baking powder
1/4 teaspoon salt
2 eggs
1/2 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup sugar
1/2 cup milk
2 tablespoons butter

Line bottoms of two 8-inch round layer cake pans with wax paper.

On another sheet of wax paper sift together the cake flour, baking powder and salt.

In medium bowl of electric mixer beat eggs and vanilla until lemon color and thickened. Gradually beat in the sugar until very thick and ivory color.

Meanwhile in a 1-quart saucepan heat milk with butter until butter melts and bubbles appear around edge of milk. Add to egg mixture and beat just until combined. Add flour mixture and quickly beat in just until smooth. Turn into prepared pans. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in center comes out clean—25 minutes. Cool in pans on wire racks for 10 minutes; turn out of pans and at once peel off wax paper. Cool completely.

Use 1 layer of the cake as directed in Strawberry Cream Cake recipe. Wrap other layer of cake appropriately and freeze to use another time.

Change The Wedding But Keep Courtesy

By Abigail Van Buren

[© 1972 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.]

DEAR ABBY: I realize that many young people have gone in for far out weddings, which is all right with me. But when they depart from the conventional "thank you" note for their wedding gifts, I think they are going too far.

Today I received what was supposed to be a "thank you" note for a wedding gift I sent to a young couple. [The bride was the daughter of dear friends, so I sent a very expensive silver coffee service.]

The acknowledgment was a folded piece of paper. On the front was "THANK YOU" commercially printed in gold letters. When I opened it there was a photographer's picture of the couple on one side, and a short poem on the other with the couple's names printed below. Abby, that was it! The bride did address the envelope by hand, which was the only personal touch.

I was appalled. I wouldn't have the nerve to say anything to the couple or to their parents, but thru you, Abby, I have been able to fume accordingly. Any comment? No name, please.

APPALLED

DEAR APPALLED: Glad you didn't have the nerve to say anything to the parents. After the kids say their "I do's" their parents are not responsible for their actions. I agree, the customs do change, good manners do not. The appropriate expression of gratitude is a personally written note—The exception being when the number runs into the high hundreds or into the thousands.

[P. S. That couple at least sent a card. I was advised that a young couple was sent a check for their wedding gift, and the only acknowledgement ever received was a "thank you" written on the back of the cancelled check!]

DEAR ABBY: I am an 18-year-old girl and I have been taking guitar lessons for some time now. I recently switched to a new teacher who is very attractive. [He's about 20.] He has complimented me on my clothes, my hair, and once he even said he thought I was "cute." He has casually put his arm around me, touched my hand and nudged my foot. From these actions I take it he has an eye for me.

Well, I want him to know that I have an eye for him, too, but in these situations I tend to turn red and clam up.

I am hoping he will ask me out, but I am getting a little tired of waiting. Should I make some sort of move toward him? Or should I let him make the first move?

TIRED OF WAITING

DEAR TIRED: Don't make any sort of "move" toward him, but if something comes along that requires an escort, ask him. If he doesn't jump at the chance, quit waiting. He probably has a girl friend.

DEAR ABBY: I have a neighbor lady who leaves her pet [a dog of questionable pedigree] tied up in her backyard from 7:30 a. m. until 5 p. m.—five days a week, while she works.

The poor dog's leash is about 10 feet long, but it invariably gets tangled up in some bushes and the porch bannister, preventing him from reaching the pan of water she has set out for him.

Also, there is no shelter whatsoever to protect this dog from the sun's rays, which are very punishing these days.

I've heard some pathetic cries for help when this dog is in trouble, and on these occasions I've gone out and freed him from his entanglement. But what will happen when I go on my vacation?

I once told the woman that if she couldn't provide better care for the animal she ought not have one, and she said, "I need him for 'protection' at night, and mind your own business!"

Now what?

LOVES ANIMALS

DEAR LOVES: Report her to your local Humane Society. If the animal is providing her with protection at night, the least she can do is to provide him with a decent and comfortable shelter.

Problems? Trust Abby. For a personal reply, write to ABBY, BOX 69700, L. A., CALIF. 90069 and enclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

Convention Plans Discussed By WOTM Thursday

The final plans for the state convention were discussed at the business meeting of the Women of the Moose Thurdsay night.

The convention will be held in Asheville Aug. 11-13. Several coworkers are planning to attend.

It was decided to make a donation of $452 in the next fiscal year ($1.00 per member) to Mooseheart for the purpose of helping finance a new Health Center for the children there. One-third of the amount will be paid at the state convention and the remaining two-thirds will be paid at the other two state meetings during the year.

Requests were made by several of the chairmen for their projects for the year, which were approved.

Mrs. Ed Moore, sick and cheer chairman, gave a report.

The latest bulletin concerning changes in the procedures from Mooseheart was read. Senior Regent Mrs. A. W. Diehl presided during the meeting.

Refreshments were served following the business session.

To her new classic dress for fall, a staple of the wardrobe, a woman adds pearls, neat pumps, and streamlined bags. Gives her the classic elegant look, according to Mildred Sullivan, fashion coordinator of the New York Couture Business Council.

Sibling Squabbles Call For Special Kind Of Tact

By DR. HAIM GINOTT

Note to readers: The encounters depicted in my column are designed to serve as a practical guide to improve communication. They are not to be taken literally. They should be adapted to individual situations and individual ways of speaking.

RIVALRY AMONG CHILDREN presents a challenging problem for parents. They know they cannot allow a child to bully a brother or sister. But often in their rush to protect the victim, parents do damage to both children. Example:

Mother caught 10-year-old Bruce picking on Steven who is seven. Mother shouted: "Stop it. You big bully! Pick on someone your own size. Leave your little brother alone."

Mother's message was far from helpful. It belittled Steven and gave status to Bruce. To Steven this inferred: "Mother thinks I'm weak and can't take care of myself." Bruce concluded: "Mother thinks I'm a big bully. I have the name, I might as well play the game." Thus, Mother's intervention only strengthened in them the negative traits she tried to eliminate.

To diminish sibling squabbles, a mother need not resort to fighting words. Name-calling only teaches children how to insult. It does not improve con conduct. Mother could have said: "Bruce. I heard you. It is unacceptable. No one is to be insulted in our home. It is against the values of our family."

This may not stop sibling rivalry, but it plants a seed of peace in the children's minds.

WHEN PARENTS demand written explanations of sibling quarrels, children often choose to settle their own disagreements.

When Mother and Father returned from an evening at the theater, they found a note from Monica, 12, pinned to a pillow. It said:

Dear Mom and Dad,

Jeff uses vulgar language to me and in a fresh tone of voice. I can bear it no longer. Since you don't appreciate me telling you orally, I am writing this note. Jeff gave me a hard time and threatens me just because I didn't put the used towels in the laundry after I washed my hair. He treats me like a piece of dirt. He fights with me orally as well as physically. PLEASE do something about this. IT IS NO JOKE!!! EVERY WORD IS THE WHOLE TRUTH. THE ONLY TIME I ATTACK HIM IS WHEN I DEFEND MYSELF!!!!

Monica

In the morning, Mother handed the letter to Jeff and asked him to respond in writing. Jeff wrote: "Monica may not know it, but when she pours powder in her towel, it fills up the bathroom air. I am allergic to it and I start to sneeze. I have asked her to stop doing it. Instead, she makes fun of my sneezing. Please convey to her that it is not a joke. Love, Jeff."

Mother, without comment, handed the letter to Monica. There were no more complaints.

In dealing with sibling squabbles, it is best to be laconic. As this episode indicates, it is possible at times to solve problems without inquiries, accusations, testimonies and judgments. Written confrontations often deescalate conflicts, silently.

CHILDREN OFTEN need our help in learning methods of communicating their grievances. Examples:

Mother was in the kitchen and the girls supposedly were doing homework. Sounds of quarreling were heard. Robin, 8, rushed into the kitchen shouting: "Diane is bothering me! She's playing her music box, and making noise and I can't do my work!"

Mother: I think you ought to tell her your plight.

Robin: What does that mean?

Mother: Your trouble. Tell her the noise is disturbing you.

Robin left in a hurry. Mother heard her say: "Diane, I'm going to tell you my plight! I am very disturbed."

Quiet descended.

Mother was helpful because she did not rush to intervene. She avoided questions and explanations. Instead of trying to resolve the conflict, all by herself, Mother offered her daughter a method f solving problems.

Your admonition should guide, not insult, squabbling siblings.

United Cerebral Palsy Chairman In Pitt Named

Mrs. Jane D. Davis has been named Pttt County chairman of the United Cerebral Palsy of North Carolina campaign. The appointment is announced by Mrs. Frances Jackson, state campaign chairman.

As chairman, Mrs. Davis will be in charge of the "Happiness Is Helping" campaign for this year on the most dreaded of all childhood cripplers. She stressed the importance of the UCP services to Pitt County which help children with cerebral palsy become at least partly self-sufficient.

Cerebral palsy strikes every 53 minutes somewhere in the United States and has affected more the 750,000 persons in the nation, Mrs. Davis said. A former volunteer worker at the Cerebral Palsy Center in Richmond, Va., she explained that the condition is caused by damage to the motor centers of the brain, usually before or at birth, and affects the body's muscular control. It ay be accompanied by such related problems as defective vision, deafness, and mental retardation.

JANE D. DAVIS

The help provided by the UCP affiliate includes diagnostic, treatment, and counseling services, she explained. In addition, more than $10 million has gone into a national research program which supports eminent scientists and medical authorities in their efforts to discover the causes of cerebral palsy and to develop a prevention or cure. In North Carolina a Home Service program is providing nurses especially trained to help cerebral palsy victims with such practical problems as feeding, toilet training, and recreation.

The Pitt County chairman is a native of Richmond, Va., the wife of the Rev. Russell Reid Davis. A teacher at D.H. Conley High School, she has B.A. degrees in psychology and biology from Westhampton College of the University of Richmond and an M.A. degree in counselor education from East Carolina University. She and her husband have three daughters, Catherine Ray, Elizabeth, and Anne. She is a member of Boyd Presbyterian Church, which her husband serves as pastor.

Home Builders Ass'n Is Formed

The Greenville-Washington Home Builders Association was organized Thursday night with Ed Tipton of Greenville elected to head the organization as president.

Organized with the purpose, it was pointed out, of bringing together all areas of the home building industry, the association will be affiliated with the North Carolina and National Associations of Home Builders.

In addition to Tipton as president, the association elected Doug Miller of Greenville and Wilbur Tetterton of Washington vice presidents. Lester Brown of Greenville will serve as secretary-treasurer.

Also elected were Lee Ball of Greenville as program chairman and David Nichols of Greenville as membership chairman.

According to Brown, the national association was represented at the organizational session by Homer Barrett of Fayetteville. State representatives were John Bell of Goldsboro, secretary of the state organization; and Nick De Mai, executive vice president. Charles McLaurin, president of the North Carolina Home Builders, also attended.

Membership in the association, Brown reported, will be open to builder and associate members residing in Pitt and Beaufort Counties. Regular monthly meetings will alternate between Greenville and Washington.

The organization plans its next meeting for Sept. 5. Requests for information concerning the association should be directed to P.O. Box 1039, Greenville.

Three requirements that must be met are that Mrs. Davis provide a petition of approval of 75 percent of the residents living 200 feet from the property. The second requirement was that off-street parking requirements be so that cars can come and go without major traffic congestion. The third request made by the board was that the kindergarten operate between the hours of 9 and 12 daily.

—Denied by the board was a request for variance by the Grace Free Will Baptist Church. According to the board, the setback request by the church was too extreme.

11,000 VIRGINS

ST. THOMAS, V. I. (UPI)—Christopher Columbus liked to name the islands he discovered after saints but a large group in the Caribbean stumped him until he recalled the legend of St. Ursula and the 11,000 virgins.

The Virgin Islands number far less than 11,000, however. There are 1,600, counting every little islet—50 owned by the United States and the rest by Britain.

A Different Way To Barbecue Those Summertime Steaks!

"How My Husband Won Me Anew" A Candid Story By Mrs. Robert Stack

Ask Them Yourself

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR ERNEST BORGNINE

You've been married four times. Do you think you are at fault that the marriages never lasted?—L. P. G., Scottsbluff, Neb.

● I think I'm an easy catch. I honestly feel that I have been taken advantage of. People always think when a marriage breaks up that the man is at fault. Believe me, I tried desperately to keep my marriages together, particularly the last one, because there are two lovely children involved who have been brainwashed to the point where they don't even want to see me any more. I am a family man. All I want is a wife who will listen to my troubles. I want to come home and enjoy my family. To work for their sakes. But maybe that's where I went wrong. I provided my last wife with a beautiful home, a car, swimming pool, servants. Maybe too much. Because suddenly she tells me that I'm an old man and she prefers a young man.

FOR TONY RANDALL

Is it true that you still carry your World War II Army-identification card in your wallet?—R. T., Decatur, Ill.

● I do—because it is a perfect identification. It has my picture on it, my thumbprint, my signature. Besides, I like the way I looked back in 1944.

FOR LEE TREVINO, professional golfer

Which player do the pros rate as the toughest man to compete against?—Charles Wood, Atlantic City, N.J.

● Without question, Jack Nicklaus. When he's in the field, most of us are content if we can just beat him—and that usually means winning the tournament.

FOR ARLENE DAHL

What does it feel like to be a gorgeous, beautiful woman who's always being followed by as many pairs of men's eyes as there are in the room?—D. R., Bellingham, Wash.

● Good grief! I've been asked questions like that a thousand times. All I can say is that no matter how ugly or beautiful a woman is, she can't possibly hear enough times that she looks good, or how good she looks. That's her lifeline, that's what it is. It's what keeps her going in this world.

FOR HUGH O'BRIAN

Why do you think people ask celebrities for autographs? —G. L., Savannah, Ga.

● To most people it's just an excuse to find out how you smell, how tall you really are, if you're wearing your own hair. Most people find it embarrassing to approach a celebrity. But some come up and say, "Hi! I want to shake hands with you; I enjoy what you do." They're secure, they don't need an excuse.

FOR L. PATRICK GRAY III, acting director of the FBI

How do you expect to run the FBI without any law-enforcement experience?—Jean Hoepfner, Randalia, Iowa

● I'm aware of the tremendous responsibility of being head of the FBI; but I feel my career as a lawyer and as Assistant Attorney General has given me sufficient experience and insight into law enforcement. With the help of my associates in the FBI, I'm confident I can meet the challenge.

FOR LANA WOOD, star of "A Place Called Today"

How long a day do actors really have to work?—L. N., Mankato, Minn.

● When I was on television on "Peyton Place," I never saw the sun. I'd get up at 5 a.m., work onstage all day, and go home after dark. It's a strange, funny sort of life! I'd finish shooting at 8:30 p.m., rush home and scrub off my makeup, have a cup of soup, and zoom—into bed at 9 o'clock.

FOR CAROL BURNETT

I read somewhere that you hate singing. Is this true?—Diann Wenzlick, Grand Ledge, Mich.

● Not true. I have said I feel uncomfortable sometimes singing a song as myself. It's more fun to sing with others, or as a character.

FOR ROBERT SHAW

You're married to Mary Ure, one of the world's great actresses, and you have worked with her on the stage and in films. What actresses would you still like to work with? —M. West, Hartford, Conn.

● This is mostly futile, but—the best actress I've ever seen in movies is Garbo. No question. She would have dominated me. And I'd like to work with Natalie Wood. She's underrated, did a fine job in "Splendor in the Grass." And what about Jeanne Moreau? Alas, no chance, no chance!

FOR JOE SCHMIDT, coach of the Detroit Lions

With a running quarterback like Greg Landry, why don't you run the Wishbone T offense that's so popular with college coaches?—J. Churma, Lansing, Mich.

● Several teams, including the Lions, are putting more emphasis on the running abilities of the quarterback. Last season, we installed definite option plays for Greg Landry and they were quite successful. I feel this is the start of a trend in pro ball. However, it's difficult to say whether the Wishbone will be a basic formation in the NFL this season. I prefer to think that it will be an adjunct to our regular formation.

Dry is no way to smoke.

Come all the way up to KOOL.
The only one with the taste of extra coolness.

Don't Let Summer Destroy Your Skin

Look at what summer is doing to your skin! The complexion you've pampered is being ravaged by summer weather and summer fun. You stay out too long in the blazing sun. You swim. You go from sun-baked streets to air-conditioned stores to wind-whipped car rides. You squint to cut down sun glare. You bathe and shower frequently to keep fresh and cool. And all these activities can add up to complexion dryness that accentuates lines and wrinkles.

Your skin becomes parched. Flaky. Decidedly older-looking. No wonder you're troubled about the way you look. But there is no reason to worry. Many youthful-looking women who face the ravages of summer weather have discovered the wonderful secret of Oil of Olay as a beautiful answer to the season's complexion damage. They know that summer skin like yours literally thirsts for Oil of Olay and its soothing ministrations. Oil of Olay quickly penetrates the surface layer of your skin, where the beauty blend can work most effectively. To help soften and smooth sun-and-wind-parched skin. To provide generous amounts of tropical moisturizing oils and natural moisture, needed to replenish the vital fluids that have been stolen by summer. To ease away wrinkle-accenting dryness that makes you look so much older. And to establish a protective barrier to keep your skin's own natural moisture from surrendering to the harsh heat and sudden temperature changes.

Ordinarily, youthful-looking women in countries around the world who care for their skin use Oil of Olay morning and night in a skin-cherishing ritual. But when summer robs extra amounts of youth-giving moisture and oil from your skin, your complexion responds favorably to pampering much more frequently than twice a day.

Lavish on the beauty fluid, available from druggists everywhere in the United States as Oil of Olay moisturizing lotion, as often as your skin signals the need. Whenever summer weather makes your complexion feel dry or tight or rough to the touch, nature is asking for and needs all the help it can get from soothing Oil of Olay.

No matter how often you use the beautifying blend during the day, however, don't neglect applying it generously to your face and throat before bedtime, so that it can do its good work during the quiet hours of sleep. And then, of course, first thing in the morning, to face the day beautifully. Oil of Olay penetrates so quickly that it leaves no greasy film, making it an ideal makeup base. Your cosmetics never streak or change color. And, if you let your face go bare of makeup in the summer, Oil of Olay imparts a lovely dewy glow as it protects and cherishes your complexion, day and night.

Summer Beauty Hints

Whenever you come in from the summer sun and heat, apply generous amounts of Oil of Olay on any areas that have been exposed to the skin-drying elements. The beauty blend quickly begins to work with nature to replenish the moisture stolen by summer weather. Your skin will soon show its gratitude for such soothing attention.

After bathing or swimming, lavish precious Oil of Olay® wherever your skin feels dry, whenever it feels dry. Your whole self will respond to the relaxing and beautifying pampering.

Few fields of endeavor have more influence on our lives than education, medicine and science. Here are reports on three new proposals, or discoveries, in these fields that may seem radical and extreme today, but could prove instrumental in shaping your life in the months and years ahead.

By Charles and Bonnie Remsberg

1. All students should be kicked out of school after they finish high school and be prohibited from resuming any formal education for at least four years.

This system, says the noted educator Mortimer J. Adler, author of the book, "The Common Sense of Politics," would help young people mature more quickly, broaden their learning, focus their career plans, and, if engineered properly, could help the nation solve many of its mounting social problems.

Mortimer J. Adler

Under Adler's proposal, youngsters would start school at age two or three, the years that now, he says, are "ridiculously wasted." From then until they finished high school at 16, all would be taught the same prescribed course of study, concentrating on reading, writing and mathematics. No vocational instruction would be allowed.

At the end of high school, Adler would award all students Bachelor of Arts degrees and "throw them out of school—absolutely—for a minimum of four years." During this time, they would either work in private industry or perform public-service work. "For instance," says Adler, "some might work in the Peace Corps, others in VISTA, still others in a new Environment Corps, or in mental hospitals or as police cadets."

This work would serve a double purpose. First, it would throw needed manpower into the tasks of improving the environment, law enforcement, health, foreign relations and poverty. And equally important, it would expose teenagers firsthand to many of our most complex social problems.

Says Adler: "Schools, no matter how good, cannot by themselves turn out educated and mature men and women. The quickest maturity and the best preparation for genuine learning come from real-life experiences."

At age 20, students would have a choice. Those who felt they had had enough formal schooling could seek jobs, with the security of having a broad liberal education and "real world" experience behind them. Those who wanted to study for a profession or vocation would first undergo examinations to determine whether they were, in fact, talented in their chosen area and whether their desire for more formal education was genuine. After this screening, the students would attend specialized "advanced schools." There, free of charge, each would pursue only studies related to his particular interest.

Because of this concentration, Adler says, students could be trained in even the most complicated professions in a maximum of six years. By age 26, at the most, everyone would be ready to put his formal training to use.

"The student who comes to his advanced education after four years outside the cloistered precincts of a school has important advantages over today's average college student," Adler contends. "He is more likely to have escaped the great mental disorder known as adolescence because his outside experiences will have forced upon him a kind of 'instant manhood.' Also, he's much more likely to know what he wants and how to work to get it. Today, too many campuses are jammed with kids who are just drifting without goals or who are there only because of family pressures. By narrowing advanced schooling down to those able and anxious to handle it, we could make professional training not only more effective, but cheaper as well."

2. People should be psychologically screened to determine if they are cancer-prone.

Do you seem like a well-adjusted, pleasant person to other people but know that inside you're "bottling up" feelings of anxiety, depression and guilt? Do you have a hard time expressing both anger and affection? Are you a stickler for conformity? If so, you are displaying elements of a new re-

Ideas and Revelations To Mark the '70's:

These Three Could Change Our World

1. First Work, Then College

2. The Cancer-Personality Test

3. The "Bank of Geniuses"

search discovery called "the cancer-prone personality," and your chances of contracting some form of malignancy may be significantly higher than those of the average American.

Doctors have speculated for some time that there is a link between human emotions and cancer. Now, reports of two researchers to the American Cancer Society support this hypothesis.

In one study, psychologist Claus Bahnson, senior research scientist at the Eastern Pennsylvania Psychiatric Institute, used psychological tests to compare the personalities of hundreds of cancer victims with those of other people. From these studies, he is able to determine the personality type that appears most likely to contract cancer.

The odds that a person will get cancer seem to be heightened, Bahnson says, if he "operates with high levels of internal conflict or stress" that he tends to mask by repressing his true feelings. The mask may fool others, but inside he's churning with "closed up" emotions, is defensively self-centered and often experiences depression because of difficulties in his intimate personal relationships.

Also, Bahnson claims, the cancer-prone personality is highly committed to upholding social norms, tends to be authoritarian and has "great difficulty dealing with and expressing anger."

On the basis of separate studies, Dr. George F. Solomon, associate professor of clinical psychiatry at Stanford University's medical school, seconds Bahnson's findings and adds some conclusions of his own. "Quite consistently," Solomon reports, cancer patients display evidence of sexual problems and "unresolved tension concerning a parent figure." Also, he says, cancer victims commonly have suffered the loss of an important relationship—say, through the death of a spouse—prior to the development of a malignant tumor.

The exact mechanism by which personality traits and emotional experiences enhance disease susceptibility is not yet understood. But doctors may be able to perfect mass psychological screening techniques to detect persons with greater-than-average cancer risk.

3. Within the next ten years, it may be possible to grow exact carbon copies of any living person. When this technology is available, America should consider establishing a "genius bank," where genetically identical reproductions of society's great men could be grown.

This is the idea of Dr. Robert I. Sinsheimer, a biologist with the California Institute of Technology. The key is a new biological process called "cloning." This technique is based on the scientific fact that each individual cell in any living thing contains all the genetic components necessary to make an identical reproduction of that thing. If a biologist wants to reproduce a series of identical frogs, for example, he can take the nucleus, or "control center," of any cell from a live frog and implant it into an unfertilized frog egg whose own nucleus has been destroyed. The egg will then develop just as if it had been fertilized normally, and because the implanted nucleus contains the chromosomes and genes of the living frog, the new frog that results will be identical to it in every genetic respect. By repeating this cloning process, the scientist can "manufacture" as many of the same frog as he wants.

Cloning has already been used successfully in laboratories to make scores of "twin" frogs, plants and salamanders. "Only technical problems stand in the way of applying the technique to mammals," says Sinsheimer. "When these problems are solved, it will be possible to replicate prize cattle or horses—or humans."

Once the necessary technology is perfected, he believes that a bank where the cells of outstanding men and women can be collected and used for cloning should be established.

This is of vital importance, Sinsheimer argues, because man's triumph over his environment has caused the evolutionary process to grow stagnant. The world is no longer producing the number of great individuals that it should. "I believe there should be six or seven times as many men like Newton, Rembrandt and Mozart as there are," he says.

Such prospects, of course, give rise to the most profound ethical questions. Who is to choose, for example, which "geniuses" are to be duplicated, and in what number? Having copied a person genetically, how can we recreate the environment in which he grew up and which may have influenced the way he turned out? What can be done about a Hitler who might produce exact replicas of himself in mass supply?

Cloning "will not bring instant Utopia," Sinsheimer concedes. "There will be some tragic mistakes. But ultimately I think we can hope to improve and to find new paths truly different from those we have trod in the past."

WHAT NATIONAL MAGAZINES REPORT ABOUT WRAP METHOD:

TIME MAGAZINE: "The most passive reduction plan yet developed . . ."

COSMOPOLITAN: "Spot reducing with non-exercise methods can be expensive, but well worth the fiscal sacrifice."

TRUE STORY: "As a result of the treatment, I'd lost a total of 11¼ inches off my body in 17 days . . . three inches off my upper hips and 2½ inches off my upper thighs.

WOMAN'S WEAR DAILY: "A woman can lose up to 3" on each thigh."

Questions and Answers:

Q. What is the Figure-Wrap Method?

A. Figure-Wrap is a temporary method planned to help you to take inches off in the areas where you need reduction.

Q. How do I use it?

A. It's quite simple. Just as the reducing salons do, you wrap a special foam-laminated material around the areas you want to reduce: thighs, mid-riff, legs, calves, ankles, arms or entire body. For quicker action, you apply a solution first. Then you relax for about 90 minutes . . . read, watch TV, even do your regular house-work. Remove wrap. That's all there is to it.

Q. Is it safe?

A. Perfectly — you use the safest solution in the world, the special wrap envelops you in a warm embrace. After using it, you shower or bathe, wash the wrap (to use it again). You look better. Feel better.

Q. How long do I use it?

A. Depends on how much reduction you seek and how you follow the program. Perhaps three times the first week, then once a week thereafter until you are satisfied with your figure.

Q. How much can I trim down?

A. Depends on the individual, the temporary loss of inches will vary. Some people lose as much as 2 to 3 inches from waist in one session. To sustain inches off we recommend a supplementary diet and a regular use of our wrap program.

People Quiz

Why Men and Women Can Never Act Alike

True or False: A woman likes what she sees in the mirror better than a man does. (See number 1.)

By John E. Gibson

People are the most interesting things in the world, and in many ways the most unfathomable in their complexities and contradictions. In this quiz, we focus on some of the attitudes and characteristics of both sexes.

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. A woman likes what she sees in the mirror better than a man does.

2. Men are more easily distracted by noise than women are.

3. Women drivers don't get an even break.

4. Women are more sensitive to weather changes than men are.

5. A woman is more concerned over "what people think" than a man is.

ANSWERS

1. False. Women look in the mirror more often than men, but don't like what they see as well. Studies at two leading universities (Duke University and the University of Wisconsin) show that men are much more satisfied with the way they look; that women, regardless of age, tend to be much more dissatisfied with their faces as well as their figures. When a man looks into a mirror, he's likely to give what stares back at him a casual but reassuring nod of approval, adjust his tie, perhaps flick a bit of smudge from his nose. Not so with the average woman. Her eyes rove critically over every feature, wincing at each real or fancied imperfection, the expression on her face saying: "If I only had the receipt, I'd like to exchange it for something else. . . ."

2. True. A team of university psychologists tested men and women graduate students on their ability to perform mechanical and mental tasks under noisy conditions (clanging of high-pitched electric bells). Results: The men's performance deteriorated, but with the women it was found that "the noise did not cause any deterioration in performance, and actually had a facilitating effect on mechanical tasks."

3. True—according to driver-reaction studies conducted at Purdue University. In the tests, 123 drivers, selected at random, pulled up behind experimental cars that purposely caused a slight traffic delay. Findings: The sex of the frustrating driver was the big factor in determining the other driver's reaction. "Only 52 percent of all drivers honked at the experimental cars when they were driven by a man, while 71 percent honked at a female-driven car."

4. False. In tests at Kansas State University Institute for Environmental Research, students were exposed to temperatures ranging from 60 to 98 degrees, and humidities ranging from 15 to 85 percent. Men, it was found, were more sensitive to weather changes than women. They felt uncomfortably warm at temperatures the women still found agreeable. And it was found that "humidity plays a significantly more important role in how men feel than in how women feel."

5. True. Psychological studies show that when a woman commits an indiscretion, she is more likely to be concerned over what people will think than the way she herself may actually feel about it. Whereas with a man, it's apt to be the other way around.

Here's a tasty, quick dinner for the kitchen, grill or camper.

BEEFY BEANS

In a 10-inch skillet over medium heat, sauté 1 lb. lean ground chuck until it loses its red color. Break up meat with a spoon as it cooks, drain off excess fat. Stir in 1 clove garlic, chopped, 1 can (16 ozs.) stewed tomatoes, ¼ teaspoon oregano, 2 cans (16-oz. size) beans in tomato sauce and ¼ cup light molasses. Bring mixture to boiling, reduce heat and simmer, uncovered, stirring occasionally for 10 minutes. Serve with grated cheese and hot garlic bread. Makes 4-6 servings. (To grill: Place skillet on grill above gray coals. Follow cooking directions as above.)

This week, Food Editor Marilyn Hansen suggests a new way to make barbecued steak, because: "What can beat grilling a steak outdoors in summer? But a little trick I've learned is to marinate the steak overnight in an herb-wine marinade. It gives your barbecue just that added bouquet, and makes the simplest outdoor meal special."

Herb-and-Wine Barbecued Steak

Fragrant marjoram adds its own distinctive flavor to this Herb-and-Wine Barbecued Steak.

HERB-AND-WINE BARBECUED STEAK

- 3 lb. round or shoulder steak, 2½ inches thick
- 2 cups dry red wine
- ½ cup salad oil
- 2 tablespoons instant minced onion
- 1½ tablespoons marjoram leaves
- 1 tablespoon salt
- ½ teaspoon instant minced garlic
- ¼ teaspoon pepper

1. Wipe meat with damp paper towel. Place meat in heavy-duty plastic bag.
2. Combine remaining ingredients. Pour over meat in bag. Seal securely with twister. Refrigerate about 24 hours, turning meat 2 or 3 times to marinate evenly.
3. When ready to grill, drain marinade from meat. Reserve marinade.
4. Grill steak over hot charcoal 4-5 inches from source of heat for about 20-30 minutes, until of desired doneness, turning and basting with marinade every 8 minutes.
5. To serve, slice thinly on the diagonal. Makes 8 servings

SAUTEED ZUCCHINI AND TOMATOES

- 2½ lbs. zucchini

Fruit-Fresh® introduces the peach that doesn't turn brown.

Let Fruit-Fresh preserve the color and flavor when you preserve the fruit.

The moment you peel most fruit, it's vulnerable. Discoloration begins. Flavors slip away. That's why peeled fruits need the protection of Fruit-Fresh. To lock out browning and lock in flavor.

Peel fruit into solution of 3 tablespoons of Fruit-Fresh to each 2 quarts of water.

Use Fruit-Fresh. When you freeze. When you can. Whenever you want your fruit to keep its just-peeled taste, its just-picked look.

Fruit-Fresh. Because there's a big difference between just preserving fruit and preserving the freshness of fruit.

The color and flavor saver for freezing and canning.

Being married to an actor would have been a lot more difficult if I hadn't been in show business before I married Bob. Fortunately, I understood the emotional highs as well as the lows. The tensions. The impossible hours. The lack of privacy.

I had worked with quite a few actors before I met Bob, and had always told myself that I would never, never marry one. They were too narcissistic. Too self-centered. Too egotistical.

In spite of the fact that he was, and still is, one of the best-looking men I've ever met, Bob is different. You'll never find him looking into the mirror. Usually he brushes his hair but once a day. He's totally unaffected. To Bob, acting is a business, which is why I feel he could have been equally successful in any other chosen field (such as law, in which he was once interested). His outlook shows in the way he goes about his profession.

Bob is a perfectionist. Ever since he starred in "The Untouchables," he's had script approval. Yet if a script isn't exactly right, he doesn't create a scene or threaten to walk off the set. Instead he will discuss it with the writer, sometimes for hours. He is so secure in his work that he goes about it quietly, and often he has things changed without anyone at the front office even being aware of them.

What worried me most when we got married was that Bob might be spoiled and too set in his ways. After all, he had not only been a bachelor for a long time, but was frequently referred to as "Hollywood's most-eligible bachelor." His father died when Bob was barely eight, so he naturally received more attention from his mother than he would have had under ordinary circumstances. Yet he also came from solid, down-to-earth stock. His father was a self-made man who became prominent in advertising. In fact, he was the man who coined the phrase, "The beer that made Milwaukee famous."

When Bob was a year old, his parents were divorced. His mother took Bob to France with her. Bob's older brother Jim stayed home with his father. The next six years of his life, Bob grew up as any other European. His first language was French; his second, Italian. He didn't even speak English until he was seven, and when he came back to the United States and tried to talk to Jim, he needed an interpreter!

"All of a sudden the steering simply locked! One of my best friends, who was sitting next to me, was killed.... What made it harder on Bob was that someone had called him and given him the impression that I was completely wiped out."

Although his mother became both father and mother to him, she allowed Bob to join in more dangerous sports than if his father had been alive; she wanted to be sure he wasn't going to be raised as a sissy. Fortunately, he had gotten a lot of this out of his system before we met—such as big-game hunting in Africa, polo and racing cars and hydroplanes. He used to race motorcycles with Keenan Wynn, until he had a crack-up that broke both ankles!

I think it's partly because of this that Bob now won't allow our son Charles to get a motorcycle. Bob can be quite strict with Charles, who's 14, and Elizabeth, 15. But we've always acted in unison, never worked at cross-purposes. If the children can't get their way with one of us, they never even think of going to the other. Each of us speaks for both of us.

Nowadays, except for skeet shooting and an occasional game of tennis, Bob's only form of exercise is golf. Actually I was the one who talked him into that. I found that between films and television series, Bob would spend too much time in the den reading. I felt he needed some exercise and suggested golf—never realizing just how involved he would get. Now I'm trying to get him back on the tennis courts so I can spend time with him sometimes! But at least he's not one of those fellows who won't come home after a game and sits in the country club drinking with the guys and playing cards. And when he played in the Disney World Celebrity Tournament (out of about 200 entrants, Bob came in second!), I went with him to Florida.

Traveling is one of the advantages of being married to an actor. Instead of taking a two- or three-week vacation once a year, I have the opportunity to spend maybe three or four months in Italy or France or wherever he films. The only disadvantage is that you might as well kiss privacy good-bye!

It's called Organic Masque and . . .

HERE'S PROOF This is a greatly enlarged and absolutely unretouched photograph of a patch of Organic Masque which has just been used on a normal complexion. HERE'S HOW IT WORKS

No squeezing, no picking and therefore no bruises, scars or danger of spreading infection!

You simply apply Organic Masque to your face. Then go about your business. Do whatever you have to do . . . your hair, your nails, your housework, reading . . . in about fifteen minutes or so Organic Masque becomes firm and dry to the touch. Then simply peel it off! It sticks so tightly it actually hurts a bit coming off, but with it comes such an amazing array of matter, you'll hardly believe your eyes!

Look closely and you'll see blackheads, bits of hardened oil, imbedded dirt, old make-up, even facial hairs glued firmly to that mask!

Safely, surely, without squeezing, without popping, you have eased away the dirt, the grime, the filth that has been blocking your pores and making your face susceptible to infection!

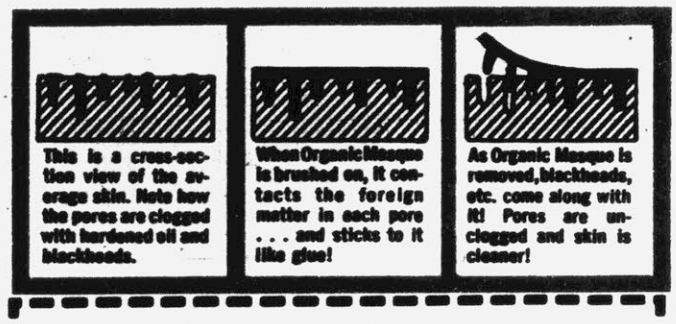

This has to be the most fantastic cosmetic product you ever used in your life because you see it work immediately!

If you are bothered with blackheads, you have to have Organic Masque because it helps to get rid of them the safe, easier way! If you have an oily complexion, you need Organic Masque because it helps to remove hardened oils and other matter which is blocking your pores.

Even if you have a lovely complexion, you need Organic Masque because it cleanses your skin like nothing in this world possibly can, and that's a positive fact backed by a firm, Money-Back Guarantee!

NO RISK OFFER!

Send for Organic Masque now. When it arrives, try it immediately! If Organic Masque doesn't remove blackheads, hardened oils and other pore-clogging, complexion-ruining filth the very first time you use it, don't keep it! Return the unused portion and get your money back immediately and without question! Organic Masque has to be every bit as wonderful as we claim it is, or you pay nothing! Why not send now?

This is a cross-section view of the average skin. Note how the pores are clogged with hardened oil and blackheads.

When Organic Masque is brushed on, it contacts the foreign matter in each pore . . . and sticks to it like glue!

As Organic Masque is removed, blackheads, etc. come along with it! Pores are unclogged and skin is cleaner!

The Robert Stack I Know

Like the time he went on location to Florida and I joined him a week later. I arrived at dinner time, bursting with news about the children and everything that had happened at home. But every time I got started, another fan came over to ask for autographs. I had no choice but to wait until we were back in our room to fill him in on all the latest news.

But this sort of thing is really quite a minor irritation when I think of the 16 wonderful years we've had together. It's unusual for two people to get along so well for such a length of time. I've seen so many show-business wives fall apart—particularly when their husbands are in a series, because they never see them. It becomes a strain on a marriage. Luckily, that's not the case with us.

For years, it was all work. We hardly ever went out. Even on weekends he was so tired. Naturally there were times when I would have liked to go out and have some fun. But we were together, and that's what counted. It was an investment in our future, and it paid off. Moreover, I was the one who talked Bob into doing a TV series. When it first came up, he said, "You know what this is going to mean, don't you?" I did. And throughout all of those years he did "The Untouchables,"

"In spite of the fact that he was, and still is, one of the best-looking men I've ever met, Bob is different. You'll never find him looking into the mirror. Usually he brushes his hair but once a day. He's totally unaffected."

and later "Name of the Game," I joined him at the studio almost every noon or evening. I'd make sure dinner was something special, from the checkered tablecloth to the food we ate.

It takes a time of crisis to find out how much you really care for someone. Our crisis came two years ago when I had a terrible automobile accident in Sacramento while Bob was filming "Name of the Game."

It was a mechanical failure of the rented car I was driving that caused me to crash into a concrete culvert. I was slowing down, when all of a sudden the steering simply locked! One of my best friends, who was sitting next to me, was killed. I survived because I had my safety belt on. But I did have serious internal injuries. What made it harder on Bob was that someone had called him and given him the impression that I was completely wiped out. He chartered a plane and flew to Sacramento, not knowing what to expect until he saw me. When I looked at him, I knew I was going to be all right. He gave me strength.

It took me six months to really get over the shock. I'll never be over the tragedy. It was fantastic the way Bob watched over me. I found Bob to be stronger, more reliable than any person I had ever known. A great guy, and a wonderful husband.

Pet Corner

Cats Need Grooming, Too

Although a cat is one of nature's cleanest animals, spending hours each day running a sandpaper tongue over his fur, he is likely to get hair balls (especially during the shedding season) if he isn't given a little help. A short-haired cat should be brushed every day; a long-haired cat should be combed. Start when he is a kitten, and he will love his daily grooming sessions. Turn him upside down on your lap and comb or brush in short strokes with the fur. Look for evidence of fleas or mites. Then turn him over and do the same for his back. You will be amazed at how much fur comes out. Puss will feel much better and your furniture will benefit, too!

What in the World!

"LAUGH-IN'S" RUTH BUZZI
Gladys Ormphby charm schools?

How painful to be Gladys Ormphby! But, after that, what a pleasure to be Ruth Buzzi again! The frumpy little nymph with the flailing handbag—Gladys Ormphby of "Laugh-In"—has inspiréd her creator. Ruth Buzzi tells us that changing back from Gladys ("that awful-looking creature") to her own good-looking self gives her a lift. "There's something psychological about it," she chirps. "When I walk off the set I actually feel as though I could stop traffic with my good looks!" Ruth's secret desire is to establish a chain of Gladys Ormphby charm schools, "so that average-looking women could get that great feeling of going from one extreme to the other. The school would first make the customer look her very worst, and then make her up as glamorously as possible. A complete transformation is so therapeutic!"

DR. LOUIS LEAKEY
A frightening vision

Mankind may not exist more than 30 or 40 more years, says world-famous anthropologist Dr. Louis Leakey. Man is the most endangered species today, the 69-year-old scientist believes, "endangered by pollution; lack of forethought; misuse of resources; overpopulation; and by allowing the invention of germ warfare, and hydrogen and atom bombs." He emphasizes that we "must not adapt to pollution, but fight it before it kills us." Dr. Leakey, whose fossil discoveries in Africa established that man existed some 2.6 million years ago, says mankind must change direction if man is to survive.

The gambling trap: "One of the most significant and interesting items uncovered [in a study by psychologist Dr. Richard Evans of the University of Houston] is the finding that compulsive gamblers as young children were compulsive liars. There seems to be a very high correlation between these two things. Among a group of young people who lie compulsively, though they have never had any gambling experience, you might make a prediction, that would be borne out, that from this group compulsive gamblers will emerge." From "To Gamble Or Not To Gamble" (World, $9.95) by Walter Wagner.

DINKY THE KITTEN
She went for a spin—and survived.

Mary Welch's three-month-old kitten, Dinky, was none the worse after a 15-minute 780-revolution spin in a tumbler-dryer, but Mrs. Welch is still trying to recover from the shock of finding her pet mixed up with the hot laundry. Dinky came out all right in the wash because she rolled with the Tide instead of trying to keep pace with the machine. Mrs. Welch has pledged to take a roll call of her pets before she starts her machine next washday.

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY

SHADOW AND SUBSTANCE
By Richard Armour

Most women wear eye shadow.
I don't know why they do.
That bluish stuff
Must cost enough.
Takes time applying, too.

A lot more fun I'd think it,
At least with most adults,
To stay up late
And dissipate
And get the same results.

For the parent of a Little Leaguer, a baseball game is simply a nervous breakdown divided into innings.

A Modern Psalm

The polluter is a shepherd I shall not want.
He maketh me to lie down in DDT'd pastures.
He leadeth me beside waters that smell like a still.
He restoreth my gall.
He leadeth me into the paths of gaseousness for his profit's sake.
Yea, as I walk through the valley of the shadow of smog,
I fear his evils for they art with me–
his hot rod and his graft discomfort me.
He prepareth a table before me from which I dare not eat.
He anointest my head with oil spills; my sewers runneth over.
Sure, goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life– but only if I dwell in the house of the conservationists forever.
–Robert Orben

"Whatever became of the girl you were dating?"
"She jilted me."
"Why didn't you tell her about your rich uncle?"
"I did. Now she's my aunt."

My neighbor says his conscience is no still, small voice–but he knew that when he married her. –Val Peters

A moviegoer who'd been standing in line for nearly an hour finally reached the box office. "That'll be three-fifty," said the girl behind the glass.
Glancing up at the sign "Popular Prices," the customer grumbled, "You call three-fifty a popular price?"
"Well, sir," said the girl sweetly, "we like it." –Dorothea Kent

Recently my young daughter was sitting at the table drawing. I asked her what she was doing. She said, "I'm drawing God's picture." I tried to explain to her that no one knew what God looked like. She quickly replied, "Well, Mommy, they will know when I finish drawing Him."

The start of more action than you may be able to take.

Are you ready to take on the Western stories of Zane Grey?

These famous novels are written for tough-minded readers about some of the roughest characters who ever roamed the frontier: broken-nosed, bullet-scarred men who had to ride hard and shoot fast in order to survive.

Not everyone can take this sort of story.

But if you can, we'll be glad to send you—for the token price of $1—three of the greatest books Zane Grey ever wrote.

The Call of the Canyon. What happens to a soft-living Easterner who walks out on the good life to face an outlaw's vengeance alone on Arizona's desolate frontier.

Wildfire. For a stallion who wouldn't be ridden, a girl who wouldn't be kissed, Lin Slone gambled everything. And his life was the smallest chip in the pot.

The Hash Knife Outfit. Three men in the gang and the softest among them lived only to kill. What chance for the hot-tempered cow punchers facing them . . . and beautiful Molly Dunn, the hostage of the butchering outlaws?

These rugged books are hard bound in sunset red, desert tan, and cavalry blue. And they're stamped in real gold. Normally they cost $10.17. But while our introductory offer lasts, you can have all three for only a dollar.

Why are we staking you to three handsome books like these?

We think you'll like the books we send you. And that you'll want to own other books in the Zane Grey Library as they come from the presses.

They will include: Riders of the Purple Sage, The Dude Ranger, Wild Horse Mesa, Arizona Ames, Thunder Mountain, The Vanishing American, Maverick Queen, and many more.

Because we print in quantity and cut out the middleman, we can still offer our subscribers these distinctive, cloth-bound books for only $3.39 each plus shipping.

You get advance descriptions of all future selections. You can reject any book before or after you receive it. And you can cancel your subscription at any time.

Send no money. Just mail coupon to get The Call of the Canyon, Wildfire, and The Hash Knife Outfit by Zane Grey. All three for the introductory price of only $1.
The Zane Grey Library, Roslyn, N.Y. 11576

Please send me The Call of the Canyon, Wildfire, and The Hash Knife Outfit.
If I don't want to keep these introductory volumes, I'll return them within a week and owe nothing. Otherwise, I'll pay just $1 for all three, plus shipping.
Also reserve for me additional beautifully-bound volumes in the Zane Grey Library, which I will be entitled to receive as they come from the presses.
I'll get advance descriptions of all future volumes. I may reject any books before or after I receive them. For those I do keep, I pay just $3.39 each plus shipping. And I may cancel my reservation any time.

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

BY HAL FOSTER

Our Story: WITH PRINCE VALIANT'S HELP KING DASHAD OF ATHELDAG PLANS A HOLIDAY. AT DAWN, AND IN DISGUISE, HE IS TO SLIP AWAY FROM THE PALACE AND JOIN VAL AT THE RIVER.

DAWN COMES BUT NO DASHAD. HOURS PASS AND VAL IS WORRIED, FOR THERE ARE TOO MANY WHO WOULD LIKE TO SLIP A KNIFE INTO THE LITTLE DESPOT.

AT LAST HE ARRIVES. HE HAD BEEN LOST IN HIS OWN CITY! NEVER BEFORE HAD HE WALKED THE STREETS WITHOUT GUARDS.

A LAZY BREEZE CARRIES THEM AWAY FROM THE CITY AND DASHAD RELAXES ON THE SUNNY DECK. SUCH PEACE HE HAS NEVER KNOWN.

BUT OLD HABITS ARE HARD TO BREAK. HE ORDERS THE BOATMEN TO REMOVE HIS BOOTS AND BRING HIM WINE. ALL HE GETS ARE ANGRY LOOKS.

"THESE ARE NEITHER SLAVES OR SERVANTS, BUT INDEPENDENT FREEBORN MEN," WHISPERS VAL. "AND YOU MUST WIN THEIR RESPECT, NOT DEMAND IT. SO STOP ACTING LIKE A KING."

KINGS, HE DISCOVERS, ARE NOT POPULAR AMONG THE LOWER CLASSES, BUT HE IS CONTENT TO BE CALLED 'DASH' AND HAPPILY ASSUMES THE TASK OF CATCHING THEIR SUPPER.

"WE DIDN'T ALL COME OVER HERE ON THE SAME SHIP, BUT WE'RE ALL IN THE SAME BOAT"
– BERNARD BARUCH

THE WORD FROM MR. SMIRCH WAS--- LET THE WHOLE STUPID WORLD KNOW ABOUT HIS LATEST--- (CHUCKLE)--- CHARITY!

WHEN SMIRCH GIVES SOMETHING AWAY--- WATCH OUT!!

B. SMIRCH HAS TURNED OVER A NEW LEAF AND IS SPENDING A FORTUNE TO INSURE THAT THE "FLORA AND FAUNA OF THIS NATURAL WONDERLAND IS PRESERVED"---

---THAT'S WHAT HE SAYS--- BUT I'M WONDERIN' WHAT'S HE'S THINKIN'!!

"DADDY" SAYS THAT JUST BECAUSE A LEOPARD CHANGES TAILORS DON' MEAN HE'S CHANGIN' SPOTS! WHEELER-DEALERS LIKE SMIRCH DON' REFORM--- UNLESS THERE'S A BUCK IN IT FOR 'EM!

STILL--- I GOTTA ADMIT THAT I GOT A NASTY SUSPICIOUS MIND--- AN' THAT EVEN A NATURAL BORN CROOK LIKE SMIRCH COULD REFORM----

BUT THAT DON' MEAN WE GOTTA STOP SUSPECTIN' HIM! RIGHT? YEAH--- I CAN TELL YA ALL AGREE!

SUNUP---

WE'LL MOSEY OVER T' THE BUILDIN' SITE JUST T' TAKE A PEEK, GROUP! AN' WE BETTER MAKE SURE WE SEE THEM WITHOUT THEM SEEIN' US!

STRIKES ME THAT THEY'RE DIGGIN' A FOUNDATION MORE FOR AN UNDERGROUND SETUP THAN FOR AN ON-THE-GROUND BUILDIN'! OOPS! THERE GOES MY NASTY SUSPICIOUS MIND WORKIN' OVERTIME AGAIN!

YOU'RE GOIN' DOWN PRETTY DEEP, AIN'T YA, MR. SMIRCH?

YOU'VE GOT YOUR WITS ABOUT YOU, CHILD---THAT'S FOR SURE! YES, WE'RE DIGGING DEEP BECAUSE WE WANT THESE BUILDINGS TO LAST! THE DEEPER THE FOUNDATIONS, THE LONGER WE CAN SERVE MOTHER NATURE!

HE'S SURE FIGURIN' ON SERVIN' MOTHER NATURE FROM WAY DOWN DEEP--- OR HE'S PLANNIN' ON BUILDIN' UPSIDE DOWN!

THAT KID'S TOO SUSPICIOUS---AND MUCH TOO SMART! JUST TO KEEP HER OFF THE SCENT, START BUILDING AS SOON AS YOU CAN!

A DELIBERATE HIT AND RUN RESULTS IN DEATH IN A MID-WESTERN CITY.

FOUND THIS IN THE GUTTER, LIEUTENANT.

MUST BE THE MARKER PEN THE VICTIM WAS USING TO DEFACE THAT POSTER WHEN THE CAR HIT HIM, LIEUTENANT CALABOZO.

YEAH... SAYS "POPULAR REFORM CLUB" ON IT. THAT'S THE OUTFIT.

THAT NEW STOREFRONT POLITICAL CLUB OVER ON MARKET. MUST HAVE HALF THE HANGERS-ON IN TOWN OUT WITH THESE THINGS, MARKING UP DEEPSIX'S POSTERS.

THE CASHIER OF THE BEDLINGTON SAVINGS BANK IS NO "HANGER-ON," VINCE.

YEAH! DUNNO HOW GUS NEUTAL GOT TIED IN WITH SANGER KELT'S CLUBHOUSE GANG. MAYBE HE HAD SOMETHING AGAINST DEEPSIX.

FUNNY. WHO EVER HEARD OF KELT UNTIL HE DECIDED TO RUN FOR CONGRESS?

HE'S BEEN A POWER AROUND TOWN FOR A WHILE. UP TO NOW, HE'S STAYED IN THE BACKGROUND.

HE SURE CAME OUT WITH A BANG. THIS COULD BE THE DIRTIEST ELECTION WE'VE HAD IN YEARS.

HMMPH! WHEN SOMEBODY DRIVES A CAR UP ONTO A SIDEWALK TO DISCOURAGE A FELLA FROM WRITING ON A POSTER, THAT'S DIRTY.

LIEUTENANT! YOU DON'T THINK SOMEBODY IN THE DEEPSIX ORGANIZATION DID IT — FOR REAL?

MAYBE I'D HAVE A BETTER IDEA, IF OUR EAGLE-EYED WITNESS HERE COULD AT LEAST RECALL WHAT KIND OF CAR IT WAS.

THEY ALL LOOK ALIKE NOWADAYS, BUT I'M SURE IT WAS AN EXPENSIVE JOB.

WHILE IN WASHINGTON, D.C....

TERRY, I AM GOING TO MAKE THE FIGHT OF MY LIFE AGAINST THAT OFFENSE TO COMMON DECENCY.

DOLORES, I'VE NOTED THAT POLITICIANS SELDOM ARE FOND OF EACH OTHER AROUND ELECTION TIME.

THIS IS DIFFERENT, TERENCE. SANGER KELT IS EVIL!
