WASHINGTON (AP) — Government scientists say they have developed a new kind of vaccine which might head off a major, worldwide influenza epidemic and may eventually control the widespread disease.

The National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases Wednesday announced that development of the vaccine "holds future promise for the eventual control" of influenza.

Scientists who developed the preparation, administered as a nasal spray rather than by injection, said it might head off the flu epidemic forecast for the late 1970s.

In tests on prisoner-volunteers, the still-experimental vaccine gave complete protection to men exposed to the virulent Hong Kong-type germ, the institute said.

The scientists said the techniques employed in producing the new vaccine probably could be used to make other vaccines capable of combating new strains of flu germs that might appear in the future.

The institute said the new vaccine must still undergo extensive trials and be licensed for manufacture before it can be made available to the public.

The second day average for the Greenville tobacco market was recorded at $86.75 Wednesday, representing the top average among the seven markets operating early on the Eastern Belt.

good, he said.

Noting that for the second day in Farmville no tobacco went to Stabilization, Williams pointed out that last year's second day receipts amounted to 6.06 per cent of the gross sales.

Eastern markets will have no sales on Friday but will operate on Monday. The seven markets will continue to operate on a limited schedule with a combined total of 11 sets of buyers until the full 17-market belt opens Aug. 22.

The following tabulation, compiled by the Market News Service in Wilson, shows the second day poundage, sales and averages of the seven markets.

MARKET	POUNDS	DOLLARS	AVERAGE
Farmville	248,762	$213,754	$85.93
Goldsboro	221,835	190,506	85.88
Greenville	497,396	431,499	86.75
Kinston	486,816	421,018	86.48
Rocky Mount	493,500	424,036	85.92
Smithfield	245,662	213,012	86.71
Wilson	544,580	471,569	86.59
TOTALS	2,738,551	$2,365,394	$86.37

Poundage was down slightly as sales continued on a limited basis but the local market average reflected a gain of 83 cents per hundred pounds over the opening day figure of $85.92.

The market here sold 497,396 pounds Wednesday for $431,499, compared with Tuesday's totals of 513,710 pounds for $441,369.

Wilson topped the seven markets, poundage wise, with sales of 544,580 pounds and was the only market to go over 500,000 pounds.

All markets recorded increases over first-day averages with Goldsboro registering the smallest gain of eight cents per hundred pounds.

Belt-wide, the market sold 2,738,551 pounds Wednesday for $2,365,394, compiling an overall average of $86.37. Tuesday's average was $85.85.

An item of significance, according to the Federal-state Market News Service in Wilson, involved the Stabilization receipts on the belt where, for the first time yesterday, no tobacco at all went to stabilization. Receipts for opening day were only one-tenth of one per cent or 2,714 pounds.

The sales supervisor for the Farmville Tobacco Board of Trade, Louis Williams reported today that prices continued steady for the second day of sales with approximately 95 per cent of sales bringing $85-$87 per hundred pounds.

The Farmville market averaged $85.93 Wednesday, Williams said, on sales of 248,762 pounds for $213,754. Sales for the first two days have totaled 498,320 pounds for $427,386, an average of $85.77.

The supervisor reported that good grades of lugs and some grades of cutters brought the top price of $87. Non-descript leaf accounted for only a small percentage of gross sales with some grades of carry-over tobacco from last year looking stronger than on opening day. A slight increase in overall quality accounted for a small gain and bidding by all firms continued strong. Demand was unusually

Soviet May Buy Quarter Of '72 U.S. Wheat Crop

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says the Soviet Union may buy between 250 million and 400 million bushels of U.S. wheat, as much as one-fourth of this year's crop.

Officials say a number of private companies are involved in transactions, including one whose Soviet sales operations are headed by a former U.S. assistant secretary of agriculture.

Wheat market prices in the Midwest have risen sharply in recent days, reflecting rumors that a massive sale to Moscow is imminent. In Kansas City the price has climbed from $1.57 per bushel to $1.84.

If the big sale materializes, a 400-million-bushel transaction—and some sources say it could be even more—would be equal to nearly half the present U.S. wheat surplus and a fourth of the 1972 crop, estimated at less than 1.6 billion bushels.

Asst. Agriculture Secretary Carroll G. Brunthaver said Wednesday in an interview that there has been tremendous demand for wheat in the market, presumably by private companies seeking grain for the Soviets.

"We keep hearing eight to 10 million tons," about 296 million to 375 million bushels, Brunthaver said. "That's entirely possible. Whether it's more than that, I don't know."

One of the export firms involved is Continental Grain Co., New York, which recently hired former Asst. Secretary Clarence D. Palmby, Brunthaver's predecessor, to head up its export-sales operations for the Soviet market.

Palmby was closely involved in U.S.-Soviet negotiations earlier this year. He resigned shortly before President Nixon announced on July 8 that the Soviet Union had agreed to buy at least $750 million worth of U.S. grain over the next three years.

Continental and another firm, Cargill, Inc., Minneapolis, sold nearly 3 million tons of livestock feed grain to the Soviet Union last year, the first U.S. grain sale to that country in nearly a decade.

When the White House announced the new pact last month, most of the initial orders were thought to be for corn and other feed, although wheat was included in the options.

Since then, however, the Soviets have shown interest in substantial wheat purchases, a fact that has helped boost market prices here.

Senate's Handgun Sale Ban Sent To Uncertain Fate After 68-25 Vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — A ban on the sale of easily concealable handguns has been passed by the Senate and sent to an uncertain fate in the House.

The Senate passed the measure, 68 to 25, late Wednesday after three days of debate and overwhelming rejection of stronger gun controls.

Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., the bill's chief sponsor, said it would "take out of the marketplace the weapons used most frequently by criminals."

The Senate bill is aimed primarily at cheap, snub-nosed, light-weight handguns of the kind commonly called "Saturday night specials," but it also would bar the sale of other higher-quality weapons that are easily concealed.

Bayh said the bill would have prevented the legal sale of the guns used to assassinate Sen. Robert F. Kennedy in 1968 and to shoot Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace three months ago.

But it would do nothing about the millions of handguns now privately owned.

Fulford looks on, for a scholarship fund to be established at Pitt Technical Institute. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Burroughs-Wellcome today announced the gift of $3,000 to Pitt Technical Institute, to be known as the Burroughs-Wellcome Company Loan Fund.

According to G. Henry Leslie, plant manager, the purpose of the fund is to grant needy students loans not to exceed the cost of tuition and books. The loan is short term, interest free, and will be secured by notes.

"This will insure that needy students will not be turned away from PTI because they lacked the funds to enroll," Leslie added.

Dr. W.E. Fulford, president of Pitt Tech stated that the scarcity of public funds makes it impossible for all needed services to be paid from tax sources.

Military Aid Bill May Be Defeated By Rider

By JIM ADAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A rider ordering U.S. forces out of the Indochina war this year headed for a House vote today with some leaders saying it could carry a military foreign-aid bill to defeat.

Leaders on both sides of the war issue predicted the mandate to pull U.S. forces out of Indochina in return for release of American prisoners and a limited cease-fire would be narrowly rejected.

Some, including Speaker Carl Albert and Republican Leader Gerald R. Ford, said a $2.1-billion military foreign-aid bill could be voted down if the warpullout mandate stays in it. Albert said he feared the bill could be rejected regardless.

But House Foreign Affairs Committee Chairman Thomas E. Morgan, D-Pa., said:

"They'd better take this one if they want any foreign-aid bill. This is the swan song as far as I am concerned."

The Senate already has rejected President Nixon's foreign military-aid requests. Morgan indicated that if the House did the same, foreign aid would not be dead but would be continued on an interim basis.

The war-pullout directive originally carried a deadline of Oct. 1 before House antiwar forces changed it to Dec. 31 to carry it past the November elections and give Nixon a longer period to withdraw the troops.

The directive would order all U.S. military forces in or over Indochina withdrawn so long as American prisoners were returned, GIs missing in enemy territory were accounted for and a cease-fire was established. The only exception would be for protection of withdrawing forces.

The mandate would carry the force of law but not cut off money for the war as would have a measure approved by the Senate.

Metric Switch Plans Approved

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Commerce Committee has approved a bill to establish a National Metric Conversion Board to plan for a change by the United States to the metric system.

The intent of the legislation, approved Wednesday, is to make the metric system the dominant system of weights and measures within 10 years.

The United States is the only major country not yet committed to the metric system.

ROBBERY ARREST

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A native of Chowan County, Robert Lee Biggs, was arrested Wednesday at Edenton on charges of robbing a New York bank, the FBI said.

Speeder Stopped; Had Body In His Car

HENDERSON, N.C. (AP) — A man stopped for speeding Wednesday was found to have a dead woman in his car, police said. They quoted him as saying she was his wife, had become ill while they were visiting in Georgia, and he was hurrying home to New York City "to handle it up there."

The man was booked as George Thompson, 63, and charged with speeding 100 miles per hour in a 65 m.p.h. zone, and with illegally transporting a dead body. North Carolina law requires that a permit must be obtained from the health department in which a person dies before the body can be transported to another county.

A deputy sheriff of Vance County, H. B. Askew, who stopped the car on Interstate 85, said the body was wrapped in a quilt. It was sent to North Carolina Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill for an autopsy.

Chief Deputy S. R. Mims quoted Thompson as saying his real name is Willie Spencer and that he took the name of Thompson as an alias in 1944 when he moved from Georgia to New York and applied for a chauffeur's license to operate a taxi. There was no immediate explanation of why he allegedly adopted an alias.

Mims also quoted him as saying the woman was Mrs. Edie Spencer, 46, his wife.

Thompson said he now is the superintendent of an apartment building in New York City.

Also in the car was a 9-year old girl identified as a godchild of Thompson and a woman who had made the trip with them for New York to visit her relatives in Mississippi. They took a bus on to New York. Thompson was held pending the autopsy report.

Mims quoted Thompson as saying: "His wife became ill while they were visiting in Georgia, but 'she didn't want to see a doctor, just to go home.' They left Atlanta Tuesday morning, went to Mississippi

Bids will be considered for gasoline requirements for all the city's departments and for a new car for the Public Works Department. Other new business items include the certification of appointment to membership on the Mid-East Commission; sidewalk projects; a request for release from taxi franchise; an application for a taxi franchise; and a status report on paving.

Wife Finds Out Her Husband Is Engaged

By Abigail Van Buren

(© 1972 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: I've been married to a Navy man for three years. We have a darling baby. I thought we had a good marriage until last week when I flew home to see my parents in West Virginia. I sat next to a pretty blonde girl on the plane and we started talking. She told me her fiancé was on "The _____", and she named the ship. That was the ship my husband was on. Then she showed me his picture and I nearly fainted.

Her "fiancee" was MY husband! I couldn't contain my amazement, so I told her. Then it was her turn to nearly faint. The poor kid started to shake and cry and I had to calm her down. We spent the rest of the flight comparing notes. Abby, my husband was such a clever liar. He had this girl friend for over a year and I never suspected a thing.

The girl said she would never see my husband again and I believe her. I'm not sure how to handle this. I still love him, and there's the baby to consider. What should I do? I don't think I could ever trust him again.

HURT IN SEATTLE

DEAR HURT: Tell him you know about the "fiancee" and ask him if he's ready to settle down and be a proper husband and father. One swallow doesn't make a summer, and one escapade doesn't ruin a marriage forever. Give him another chance, and don't mention it again.

DEAR ABBY: I have heard that it is considered bad manners to tip the owner of the shop even if she has done your hair, so I never do. But how about when you aren't sure if the hairdresser is a manager or if she is in on the profits? I once asked, "Do you accept tips," and the girl turned red and sputtered around and I didn't know what to do.

Another time, when I tried to tip a hairdresser [a man] and he raised his eyebrows and arrogantly said, "Puh-lease, I own this shop!" I never know what to do. Help?

IN DOUBT

DEAR IN: When in doubt, offer a tip. For every "puh-lease," you'll get 100 "thank yous."

DEAR ABBY: We are three couples who enjoy going out for dinner together. When we go to a restaurant, we always divide the check up into thirds and it has always worked out fine.

Lately, however, this one couple seems to go overboard, fancy desserts, and more expensive dinners than the rest of us. We like this couple a lot and don't want to lose their friendship over this; but we don't like the extra expense.

Any suggestions?

X Y AND Z

DEAR X Y AND Z: When you order, ask for separate checks. Your friendship will last longer if you eliminate the cause of resentment.

Problems? Trust Abby. For a personal reply, write to ABBY, BOX 69700, L. A., CALIF. 90009 and enclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

not," Mrs. Bayer concluded. "Many of these things come under nutrition education. You have to teach a child that a hamburger and a malt is not the way he's going to make the football team." Proper care should be given to all upholstery fabrics.

School Nutritionists Say Child's Learning Ability Affected By Being Hungry

By PETER M. KELLY

DENVER (UPI)—A growing number of school nutritionists say the reason Johnny can't read is because he's hungry.

The theory is that meals dished out in a school cafeteria have a direct bearing on the grades on a child's report card.

Mrs. Patricia Bayer, editor of the School Foodservice Journal here, concurs. She said in an interview that past studies have shown well-fed children earn better grades than those who come hungry to the classroom.

"Compared with ghetto kids coming hungry to school, the well-fed child's attention span is greater. His learning curve jumps way up."

Many problems with the present school lunch program set-up were outlined in a recent journal article by Dr. Bruno Bettelheim that appeared originally in Family Health magazine. Bettelheim is a top authority in the field of child care.

Bettelheim's critique boiled down the troubles to poorly tasting food, too little time in which to eat it and lack of nutritional balance.

Popular Report Mrs. Bayer said response to the article from school system food directors throughout the country overwhelmingly backed Bettelheim.

"We had one director from Louisiana order a thousand reprints of the article," said Mrs. Bayer. "We've had magazines order. We hope to get the message across."

She added that the message on the need for proper nutrition will take a long time to filter down to everyone involved—including parents and school board members.

She said diet problems often begin with parents who send children to school without a basic breakfast. The problem is compounded at lunchtime when pupils reject unappetizing foods in favor of better-tasting ones with little nutritional balance.

Mrs. Bayer said the problem also finds its way to school boards, which look at lunch programs as possible areas of economy instead of as an integral part of education.

Long Process She expects correction of the problem to be a long process. "The impetus probably will come from the federal level. The President's Council on Advisory Nutrition has recommended nutrition education in the schools and the Department of Agriculture has shown a marked interest that these recommendations be carried out," she said.

She said that nutrition is not being taught currently to would-be teachers, although indications are some states will include the course in future curricula.

"We thought Dr. Bettelheim's article was an excellent critique," Mrs. Bayer said. "He said in essence that there was not enough time to eat, that the cafeteria is noisy and food is shoved in front of kids. I don't think you'll find any administrator who feels that's the way to go."

Lunch Period She also said that food service administrators believe a 20-minute lunch period is not long enough "to allow food to become an integral part of a child's education."

School systems currently are testing a program that provides breakfasts for children before their classes begin.

It's not just ghetto children who come to school hungry, she noted.

A study by Dr. David Call of the Cornell University nutrition department showed lack of a proper breakfast is widespread among middle-class pupils as well as poor ones.

"Changing or making the school lunch program better comes down to the question 'does the child like the food or Fresh nectarines taste delicious eaten out of hand. But they also are great to serve sliced and slightly sugared with accompanying cookies.

For the cookies you might like to offer Sesame Shortbread. When we made this shortbread at our house all our tasters were enthusiastic about it. But one note: Sesame Shortbread cookies are sweeter than traditional shortbread. This way they taste particularly good with the nectarines.

SESAME SHORTBREAD

WITH NECTARINES

1 cup sifted flour
¼ cup sifted cornstarch
¾ cup sifted confectioners' sugar

¼ teaspoon salt

¼ teaspoon ginger

½ cup butter

3 tablespoons sesame seeds

6 fresh nectarines

¼ cup granulated sugar

Whipped cream, if desired

Into a medium mixing bowl sift together the flour, cornstarch, confectioners' sugar, salt and ginger. With your fingers work in butter until mixture holds together.

On a large cookie sheet, with a stockinet-covered rolling pin, roll out dough to a rectangle about 10½ by 7½ inches. Sprinkle with sesame seeds. Cut into 6 squares, each 3½ by 3½ inches. Cut each square in half and with a wide metal spatula separate slightly.

gree oven until a light golden brown—20 to 25 minutes.

With a wide metal spatula remove to wire rack to cool. Store in a tightly covered tin box.

When ready to serve, cut nectarines in half and remove pits; slice and mix with granulated sugar. Top individual portions of nectarines with whipped cream, if used, and accompany with the Sesame Shortbread. Makes 6 servings.

Woman Who Crossed Atlantic Alone Says Strongest Emotions Endured Were Fear, Boredom

By PEACE MOFFAT
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — On June 12, 1971, Nicolette Milnes Walker climbed into her 30-foot sloop and set sail—alone—from the southwest tip of Wales. On July 26, 45 days and 3,500 miles later, she brought her boat to port in Newport, R.I., and became the first woman to sail nonstop across the Atlantic Ocean.

What kind of woman would want to do a thing like that—endure the known physical and the unknown emotional hazards of facing the Atlantic alone on a small boat? And why?
"I really do think the reason I took this trip is that I was larned bored with my job, and I had to have a good reason to hand in my resignation," says Miss Walker, a petite 28-year-old woman, whose blue eyes are flecked with gold. Here to promote the book she wrote about her trip, "When I Put Out to Sea," she went on:

"I had been working in the city, had a lot of evenings at home, and started thinking about this trip. Before I knew it, I was making lists of what was needed and I had the thing organized."

Miss Walker's serious sailing experience had begun the previous year on a trip to the Azores with two friends. Later, at a boat show in London, she began thinking of what kind of sailboat she would need, and within several days had made a definite decision to go.

The fourth daughter of a surgeon, Miss Walker says she always had a need for attention and admits, "this might have been a hang-over."

In addition, Miss Walker says she thinks there is "something in the English character that likes to do things alone—there's not that much scope for adventure on the island."

"Before I left on this trip," she goes on, "my parents gave me no cause to worry about their worrying about me. I was amazed. Then, when I landed in America they had flown over to meet me. It was a brave thing for them to do—how long would they have stayed waiting?"

Miss Walker says her greatest fear during the trip was of a natural disaster, such as falling overboard, or getting run down by a large ship. And she says the two strongest emotions she endured were fear—"an underlying fear all the time"—and boredom. "The last was the one thing I hadn't anticipated," she says. "For the first time in my life I got bored with reading books. The radio just kept going over the same old news, but at least I was picking up the radio from all over. I was in no country."

She says she slept when it was dark, was awake when it was light, and to help pass the time "nibbled all day," and worked on the boat. She spent much of her time on deck naked. "The water was often warmer than the air," she explains, "and you could dry off straight away. But I always had on a safety harness to keep from falling overboard. It would have made a funny Playboy photograph."

The noise from the sea and the boat were surprising, Miss Walker says. "There's always a slapping, and with bad weather, the whole boat shakes, and the water goes 'boom!'"

Time and space were sometimes distorted, this blonde sailor also reports. "I was always aware of what time it was for navigational purposes," she says, "but I had no sense of time happening—of time passing."

"I also felt I was in a small environment. The world of the Atlantic is quite a small world. There's about a six-mile horizon—with just the sea—blue, green and always a swell. I would look back and not be able to believe I had gone past 2,000 miles of ocean."

There were several severe storms during her trip, but not many times when Miss Walker says she thought she wasn't going to make it. "Those were only on occasions when I was in bad weather, and felt the boat might not last," she recalls.

After her voyage, Miss Walker, who was recently married, says she has a "lot more confidence and self-awareness. The trip was a bit like going through analysis," she says.

But asked if she would try her lone passage again, she replies, "No. But it is tempting. I wouldn't have the same motivation, though," she says. "I could always tell myself I had already done it once. And it would be bad to repeat this kind of public adventure. "Besides—there are so many other things to do."

Trend-setting are new jacket sweaters and evening sweaters teamed with dresses to match.

Engagement Announced

MISS JOERN LOU CONNELLY... is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest J. Connelly of Greenville, who announce her engagement to Robert Russell South III, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Russell South Jr. of Little Plymouth, Va. The wedding will take place Sept. 2.

Man Rejects Girl's Company

BARI, Italy (WNS) — Sabino Mancini, 18, paid no attention to the advances of a 14-year-old girl at the garage where he worked. So she hired three men to kidnap him and put him into her

Sigh Of Relief Among Farmers

The big Eastern Belt has seen its early opening bring a first day average of $85.85, and the tobacco farmer, faced with highest costs ever, must be breathing a sigh of relief.

Despite all the problems and cost of growing and harvesting tobacco, the opening day prices had to be pleasing to those who invested their time and money in this year's crop.

The successful opening day in Greenville, Farmville and other Eastern Belt markets which began sales Tuesday, underscored the wisdom of the early opening. The market opened with better than expected prices. Farmers who had their tobacco ready to sell at this time were able to do so without the added expense of hauling it to far off markets.

State Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham feels the early opening will mean a drop of 50 percent in volume of North Carolina tobacco hauled to Georgia for sale.

However, he warned, "It is already apparent that the 11 sets of buyers assigned to the Eastern Belt early openings are not sufficient to take care of local growers who have tobacco ready to sell."

It is already apparent that the early sales plan for the Eastern Belt is a great success. Farmers have their tobacco ready for sale by early August and there was no reason why local markets should not be able to accommodate them.

The system will need some refining, but we have no doubt that it is here to stay.

Raleigh Faces To Be Missing

By BRYAN HAISLIP
RALEIGH — Spassky and Fischer battle at chess in Iceland, while politicians in Raleigh spend the dog days absorbed in another game.

"Who's gonna go?" is the name, and any number can play. The object is to speculate on who among the capital's familiar faces will be missing after the change in administrations.

You score no points for citing Gov. Bob Scott. It's fact, and not guesswork, that he won't be around after January. His four-year term completed, the governor will go home to Haw River and private pursuits.

Who will follow Scott out of public employment is the theme of buzzing speculation.

The deciding factor, of course, will be the winner in the general election race for governor between Democrat Hargrove (Skipper) Bowles and Republican Jim Holshouser.

The clean sweep will be hardly less broad whoever wins, though it may go considerably deeper if the GOP succeeds in capturing control of state government after 70 years' rule by the Democrats.

Both Promise Change
Holshouser has made it clear that if he's elected he will bring Republicans into state offices, using the governorship to shake up bureaucracy and to give a new thrust to the party.

The party balance of power won't be changed if Bowles is elected, but a fresh team will accompany him into office. The present administration has been an oblique target during his campaigning, and few Scott appointees to major positions can be expected to survive.

The starting point for either Bowles or Holshouser may well be highways and mental health. Both are areas where the two candidates have promised to make changes.

Chairman Lauch Faircloth and a majority of the present highway commission will be likely to depart. That turnover would be considered normal, since each governor has made his own political imprint in the sensitive area of roads. The question not yet answered is how far the upheaval might reach into the career level of highway officialdom.

Mental Health Issue
Controversy and debate over the quality of care for patients in mental institutions makes uneasy the position of Dr. Eugene Hargrove as mental health commissioner. The mental health issue ranks high in the campaign. Bowles has not said outright that he would replace Dr. Hargrove, but he has left it as a distinct possibility.

Reorganization of the executive branch, now in progress, gives a good handle for the next chief executive to seize in shaping the machinery to his design. It groups agencies into cabinet-level departments headed by elective state officials or secretaries named by the governor.

Who fills eight of the 17 top jobs is up to the voters, not the governor. They comprise the Council of State—attorney general, agriculture commissioner, treasurer, auditor, superintendent of public instruction, labor commissioner, and insurance commissioner.

Nine other are appointive. Scott picked the first crew. Whether they continue at their posts depends upon his successor. Presumably, as in the federal pattern, the appointive officials of cabinet rank would offer their resignations to the incoming governor.

Those with ties, political and personal, most directly to Scott are the prime prospects for replacement. Some of them, of course, plan to return to private life as a matter of choice.

Some Who May Go
Dr. William L. Turner, director of administration, probably will return to N.C. State University where he was administrative dean before his selection by Gov. Scott.

Charles Bradshaw took the job of natural and economic resources secretary for the present administration only. Two others close to Scott and unlikely to see service in the next administration are Fred Mills, secretary of transportation and highway safety, and G. Irvin Aldridge, commerce secretary.

Speculation of change touches three more of the top posts—Dr. Lenox Baker, human resources secretary; Sam Ragan, secretary of art, culture and history; and Gen. John A. Lang Jr., secretary of military and veterans' affairs.

Revenue Commissioner G. Andrew Jones Jr. and Secretary George W. Randall of Social Rehabilitation and Control have a career background in state government. That may not be enough to make their positions secure in the transition.

If custom is followed, the incoming governor will delay major shifts of responsibility until after the legislative session. That allows him to concentrate on getting his program through the General Assembly.

Appointment plums also can be dangled to inspire cooperation among lawmakers who'd like to see themselves or friends in top jobs.

An Able Man For The Demo Party's Ticket

Sargent Shriver has never run for a political office but there is no doubt that he is an able man to join the Democratic ticket as vice presidential candidate.

He has already handled himself well in interviews and in his acceptance speech following action by the Democratic National Committee.

He candidly recognized that he was not first choice for the job and, indeed was well down the list.

Shriver joins the ticket after an unprecedented series of difficulties with the vice presidential candidate position, but we do not expect to see many mistakes made by him.

Two Governors Favor Mansion

By JOHN KILGO
RALEIGH — Two of the more recent occupants of North Carolina's Governor's Mansion feel the building should be renovated and retained as living quarters for the state's chief executive.

"The building looks a little like ginger bread from the outside," former Gov. Dan K. Moore told me, "but on the inside, it's beautiful."

Former Gov. Terry Sanford (1960-64) told me: "By and large we found the Mansion to be a delightful place. It was a charming place to bring visitors, especially those from out-of-state who haven't been there. I don't want to disagree with Gov. (Bob) Scott on anything particularly, but I think the Mansion should be repaired and retained."

Sandord said the building does present some family living problems but he added: "We kept our family home in Fayetteville and Gov. Scott has his in Haw River. They served as retreats, so to speak. I think the Mansion has historic value worth preserving."

Gov. Scott has said the chief executive needs a more modern place to live. Said former Gov. Moore: "We found the Mansion a very satisfactory place to live."

Gov. Moore feels the Mansion should be preserved and he thinks it could be renovated without too much trouble or expense.

"It's near the scene of government," Moore said of the mansion, "and it's convenient. People who should know tell me the mansion is a beautiful example of architecture of that period. I've said for years that if additional living space were needed, you could add a wing behind the present mansion." Moore admits that Gov. Scott has problems living in the mansion that Mr. and Mrs. Moore did not have.

"We had no children living with us during our administration," Moore said. "The Scotts have four or five children living at the mansion and that certainly makes a difference."

Moore says the mansion is used by the public so much that it affords little privacy for a Governor who has children living there.

"Literally thousands of school children tour the mansion every year," Moore said. "You can understand that leaves very little privacy for children who live there."

The two major contenders for Governor this year, Democrat Skipper Bowles and Republican Jim Holshouser, say they could make do in the present mansion and would prefer to live there.

Gov. Scott also seems to be mellowing his stand on the matter.

Scott said over the weekend that the mansion could be renovated, a new wing could be built for living quarters, or a new residence could be built.

But Scott said he would not be opposed to a new residence for the Governor somewhere in Raleigh.

"I don't know which is best," Gov. Scott said, "but I plead that something be done so the future governor can enjoy modern living."

Gov. Scott said maybe a new residence for the Governor could have a swimming pool "and the things modern people enjoy."

People who want to see the Governor's Mansion remain as home for the Governor argue that the building has great historical significance, is located near the heart of state government, and could be renovated at a cost less than it would take to build a new mansion.

It would appear that the prevailing opinion by most people is to keep the Mansion where it is and repair it to make it a comfortable place to live.

Strength For Today

WHO IS TO BLAME?

Recently I read a book in which the writer took the position that every man is his own devil. We are self-entitled, he claims. We create our own hell and live in it.

Regardless of whether one would go that far or not, certainly it is true that most of the evil and unhappiness of our lives is of our own making. Let us try to blame it on heredity or environment. Let us put the blame where it belongs, namely, on ourselves, in the realm of our selfishness and willfulness. We bedevil ourselves and then complain about how hard the world is on us. We try to grab everything we can lay our hands on and when we get a sharp rap across the knuckles we set up a wail and say there is no justice in the world.

We can avoid most of the evils of life if we will. Most temptations never come very near to us and we can start running if they do. The truth is that most of us don't want to start running. We live within the little orbit of our own selfish desires.

Robert Louis Stevenson once wrote, "Into every part and corner of our life, to lose oneself is to be the gainer; to forget oneself is to be happy." We spend most of our lives trying to find happiness, and few people find it.

Amplifications Needed

Let me come back, if I may, to the matter of George McGovern and Greece. I dealt with the story in a column 10 days ago. Certain amendments and amplifications need to be made.

Standing squarely in the center of this affair is the handsome, enigmatic figure of one of Washington's most polished and effective lobbyists, Elias P. Demetrapoulos. Among the Greeks in exile who hunger for the ouster of the present military regime, actress Melina Mercouri makes the biggest splash, and Professor Andreas Papandreu, up in Canada, rings the most violent alarms. But the exile who gets the most accomplished is, as McGovern addressed him on July 17, "Dear Elias."

He is a very remarkable fellow. In my recent column, I described him as (1) a minor journalist in Athens, who (2) turned up at a journalists' meeting in Communist Poland when he fled Greece in 1967; and I said he was (3) remembered in Athens as the author of a newspaper story in 1965, based upon a forged letter that gave currency to vicious anti-American propaganda.

As to (1): The "minor" was unfair, and I apologize for it. The conservative weekly, Human Events, has described Demetrapoulos as "the foremost political editor in Greece," and Herman Kahn, of the Hudson Institute, has identified him as "the distinguished political editor in exile."

As to (2): He did indeed turn up at a journalists' meeting in Warsaw when he escaped from Greece, but the meeting was the sixth in a series sponsored by the United Nations. He had been officially invited to attend.

As to (3): In August of 1965, when Demetrapoulos was working in Athens for the newspaper "Ethos," its publisher received a photocopy of a letter purporting to have been written by Col. Oliver K. Marshall, then Army attache at the American Embassy. The letter appeared to acknowledge CIA responsibility for an explosion at Gorgopotamos the preceding November that killed 13 persons.

Demetrapoulos says that when he was called in on the story, he suspected a forgery. His suspicions were confirmed by the embassy, which denounced the document as "clearly a fabrication." Other newspapers in Athens were understood to have received the purported letter also.

In an effort to beat the competition, Ethos on August 15 backed into the story through a lead paragraph quoting the embassy as denying the validity of the forged letter, which Ethos then splashed all over (Continued on page 5)

Other Editors Say The Worker's Burden

(Wall Street Journal)

Organized labor has insisted that the burden of wage-price controls falls on the working man, and in fact George Meany and other AFL-CIO types stormed off the Pay Board on these grounds. Now that controls have been in effect a while we are starting to get some reliable statistics, which tell quite another story.

The Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis reports, for example, that between the third quarter of 1971 and the first quarter of 1972, compensation per man hour increased at a rate of 6.4 per cent, scarcely different from the 6.7 per cent, in the preceding year. Even more significantly, labor costs per unit of output increased at a rate of 3.6 per cent in the post-control period, exactly the same as in the pre-controls year.

That is to say, under controls labor costs have continued to increase 3.6 per cent faster than productivity has, or 3.6 per cent faster than the rate generally considered non-inflationary. In the same period price increases have moderated somewhat. So one effect is that the real income of the workingman is increasing for the first time in a long while. Another effect is that the higher wage costs and reduced rate of price increases come out of someone else's hide, which is something businessmen might have thought of sooner, like last August when they were so enthusiastic about controls.

One can debate whether controls have been responsible for the recent moderation in price increases; we doubt it because that moderation merely continued a trend that started 16 months before controls did. But one thing seems beyond debate, if not necessarily beyond bluff and bluster: With labor costs representing the same inflationary push after controls as before, the working man's burden has not been intolerable but undetectable.

Some Sell, Don't Mind A Loss

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Last year, said the executive, our company was involved in the sale of 1,800 homes with a total market value of more than $50 million. We lost $6,000 on those transactions.

This year, he said, we expect to do even better. We hope to sell 2,000 homes and, if we achieve the same efficiency, we'll probably end up with a loss or gain of the same proportions.

In essence, this is the perplexing report given by Weston Edwards, president of TI Home Transfer Service Corp.

"We think our record of superior service and minimum costs compares favorably with anyone in this business," he said proudly, leaving the listener wondering if somehow losses on each sale can be made up in volume.

The explanation: TI is one of about 14 national companies in the young, growing industry of transferring corporate employees from one area to another. Home Equity is largest. TI, three years old, is second biggest.

Transfer service companies usually contract with a company to handle the sale of an employee's home in order to make the transfer more efficient and less of a shock. They may obtain another house for him. They may help finance it.

Being experts, it is assumed by many people that they make a killing in the real estate market—that they buy low, sell high and pocket the rest. Nice theory; it doesn't work.

The profit is earned on a fee, not on buying low-selling high.

Weston, who has moved his own family 14 times in 18 years of marriage—a noteworthy feat when you consider that at latest count he has 11 children—estimates that between 300,000 and 500,000 employees will be transferred this year.

In the past, many transfers were handled haphazardly. In recent years, corporate personnel departments have handled the task or at least helped. Professional relocation firms still handle only 20 per cent of the business.

Pricing practices vary, but in the case of TI, which is one of several real estate and financial service subsidiaries of a corporation that grew out of the old Title Insurance & Trust Co.—the entire bill is company-paid. When the worker is notified of the transfer, TI arranges im-

Boyle Views Life

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — The two greatest human sins—they aren't classified as crimes but perhaps should be—are self-pity and complacency.

Self-pity is at least an understandable weakness, particularly if the person in its throes has suffered so many battering blows in his life that he hardly has the desire or courage to go on. Where strength has been sapped, weakness can be forgiven.

But it is difficult always to forgive stupidity, and complacency is stupid. Living is such a dubious exercise in brinkmanship that only a fool lets himself be beguiled by a temporary success into becoming complacent and smug.

There is never a real reason for a man to rest on his oars. Whatever his accomplishments, they are but as raindrops in a parched desert compared with the vast undone that confronts him. So little really done, so much that cries to be done. Complacency? Never. Even a smart flea is sensible enough to realize that the dog he makes his home on may not be the best available; he could get a better view from a bigger dog.

Whenever I feel complacency creeping up on me, I remind myself that after three score years and one of life I have never yet—

President Hoover today observed his fifty-eighth birthday. A birthday cake will be lighted tonight with fifty-eight small candles. In addition, probably the biggest birthday card ever to come his way was brought to the President today on a railroad freight train yesterday. It contains 40,000 signatures of state governors and mayors. Among them is the signature of Mrs. Mollie Carron, of West Branch, Iowa, who was President Hoover's first grade school teacher.

The movement to can food crops to help take care of the relief campaign this year is meeting with pronounced success this year and indications are that the entire quota of five thousand cans will be provided before the summer is over.

Long-Range Penal Reform Program Being Prepared

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina's secretary of social rehabilitation and control plans to recommend to the 1973 General Assembly a long-range program aimed at greatly reducing the number of state penal institutions and inmates.

George Randall said in an interview Wednesday he hopes to close many prison units in the next few years by increasing rehabilitation, parole and probation.

He also envisions closing as many as six of the state's juvenile training schools under his proposal, which calls for establishing youth centers staffed with counselors.

North Carolina has 73 prison units and about 10,000 inmates.

Randall, who was director of North Carolina prisons several years ago, was named recently to head a reorganized department which includes the Department of Correction.

He said he has no idea how many years it will take to greatly reduce the number of prison units, "but the program is going to start soon, if I have my way about it."

Randall proposes to release many short-term prisoners sooner, thereby reducing the number of prison units.

"My proposal is that we hold the prisoner who needs correction; hold the prisoner who

Egg Losses Are Hurting

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Dozens of egg producers in the Carolinas have been driven out of business because there is a surplus of laying hens in the nation, and egg prices are depressed.

Allen Ashcraft, general manager of the FCX, Farmers Cooperative Exchange, egg-processing plant in Charlotte, says small farmers are losing three to five cents a dozen at present prices.

Some poultrymen say they can stay in business only because bankers can't foreclose on mortgages since they couldn't hope to get their money back.

Grade-A large eggs are selling 42 to 45 cents a dozen at some Charlotte supermarkets. The farmer gets about 25 cents a dozen.

It costs the FCX about 15 cents a dozen to pick up the eggs, grade them, put them in cartons, and deliver them to the supermarkets.

poses a threat to the community or to himself," Randall explained. "Give these people the best treatment program possible."

He added, "We have one of the best prison programs in the nation, but with all these fine programs, they are available to only about one-third of the prisoners because of lack of funds, facilities and staff."

"Prisoners who are not getting the benefit of the program," Randall said, "are going out of prison worse than when they came in."

Randall said he was proposing that "we greatly increase our parole and probation capability so that we can supervise these people who are released under certain conditions. If the prisoners stumble, if they resort to crime then the court will revoke their probation and the parole board will revoke their parole and bring them back into prison for treatment."

He emphasized that no prison employees would be discharged in the reduction of units.

"When we start closing the prison units," Randall said,

"the employees there will be given career opportunities in the community correctional programs."

Kilpatrick . . .

Demetrapoulos says the decision thus to publicize the letter, while denying its authenticity, was not his own, but his publisher's. In any event, the story created a sensation, and was seized upon the next day by the Communist paper "Avgi" for anti-American exploitation.

Following his escape, Demetrapoulos settled in Washington. He became a consultant for Brimbert & Co., members of the New York Stock Exchange. He continued to work as a journalist, but mostly he set out to win friends and to influence people on Capitol Hill. He cultivated such diverse Senators as Byrd of Virginia and Javits of New York. A personable bachelor, he became an extra man for dinner. Strom Thurmond gave him a warmly inscribed photograph. In the annals of high-level lobbying, he holds a respected place.

His labors against the junta were rewarded a year ago, when the House approved an amendment urging a halt to American aid to Greece. But his greatest successes came last month in Miami, when he first persuaded key Democrats to include an anti-junta plank in the Democratic platform, and then received the "Dear Elias" letter from McGovern. It was in this letter that McGovern gratuitously spelled out what he would do about Greece "in January of next year."

What is puzzling in all this is the apparent willingness of so many key political figures to swallow, hook, bait and sinker, the line Demetrapoulos is feeding them. He himself is staunchly anti-Communist, but overthrow of the present regime would invite the instability and political chaos the Communists most desire. McGovern hasn't thought this thing through — and McGovern, alas, is not alone.

Flood Devastation Remains Long After Disaster

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

The floodwaters of Tropical Storm Agnes are long gone, but the signs of devastation remain in the thousands of people still homeless, the hundreds of roads still impassable and the acres of cropland still barren.

An Associated Press survey of the area flooded by Agnes from June 16 to June 23 showed massive clean-up efforts have provided at least the basic necessities of life for the more than 500,000 persons in the East who suffered from the storm.

The hardest work still lies ahead, however.

The Department of Housing and Urban Development has ordered 9,250 mobile homes at a cost of about $50 million for the Wilkes Barre, Pa., region, for example. But only three of 29 newly designated trailer areas are complete.

The Small Business Administration approved 714 loans totaling about $2.2 million for damaged homes and businesses in West Virginia. But it expects the final figure to reach $5 million for 1,600 loans.

The Office of Emergency Preparedness said Wednesday that Agnes caused 118 deaths and more than $3 billion in property damage. It said 5,000 square miles of land were inundated by 28.1 trillion gallons of water that fell and flooded communities along 4,500 miles of major rivers and 9,000 miles of streams and tributaries.

OEP Director George Lincoln said that more than $2.2 billion in federal and private relief will be available to help rebuild. He said the expenditures represented "by far the largest federal outlay ever to assist states, counties and cities to spring back into first-class shape."

But the statistics don't tell the whole story.

They don't tell about the hard crab industry in Maryland where crabs are catching more shellfish than ever, but can't sell them because of health department reports that raw sewage was washed into Chesapeake Bay by the storm.

They don't tell about the Lemmerman Farm Market in Wyckoff, N.J., which, for the first time in 33 years of operation, ran out of corn by 11 a.m. on Sunday morning — a big sales day — because floods had ruined the crops.

And they don't tell about the Branchi family of Kingston, Pa. Water filled the first floor of their house, warping every door and window and wiping out all the furnishings.

In most areas, the most critical problems are finding housing for the homeless and repairing damaged streets and other city facilities.

In Virginia, where 12 persons died and one is missing, Agnes caused damage totalling $167,491,300 in 59 of the state's 96 counties. "As far as we can determine, it was the state's worst flooding in terms of destruction, cost and water level — just about everything," said James Bradley of the Office of Civil Defense.

Ninety-six houses were destroyed; 1,346 suffered major damage; and 4,638 suffered minor damage. The total bill: almost $29 million.

Six hundred miles of interstate, primary and secondary roads and 130 bridges were destroyed or damaged. The total bill: $13 million.

In New York State, where 24 counties were flooded, private property losses are estimated at more than $400 million, public property losses at $221 million and agricultural losses at $84 million.

The Small Business Administration said that 19,122 homes and 1,723 businesses were destroyed or damaged in the seven hardest-hit counties.

Maryland officials won't even put a price tag on the damage yet. But the federal government alone is committed to spending $83 million for cleaning up the debris, repairing roads and bridges, fixing utilities, rebuilding damaged schools and making low-interest loans to homeowners.

In Ellicott City, Md., some entrepreneurs are giving tours of flood areas at 50 cents a head with profits going to storm victims. The tour includes hollow stores on West Main Street, condemned businesses and a walk through one building with holes in the floor.

Officials in Pennsylvania put the total flood damage at $2.5 billion. That includes 68,000 homes and nearly 3,000 small businesses destroyed or damaged. Crop damage, soil erosion and loss of livestock, farm buildings and machinery is figured at $270 million.

The clean-up efforts haven't been without problems, the latest of which occurred Wednesday with a three-sided shouting match in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., involving HUD Secretary George Romney, Gov. Milton J. Schapp and a crowd of flood victims.

The Democratic governor renewed his request for the federal government to pay off the old mortgages of families suffering heavy losses from Agnes.

Romney called Schapp's plan "unrealistic and demagogic" and said the governor was injecting political issues into the problem of flood recovery.

Min Matheson, head of the local Flood Victims Action Council, then pushed a picture of a devastated area in Romney's face and shouted: "You don't give a damn whether we live or die!"

'Fleet Of Foot' Mule Is Needed

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Anyone having an Alabama-born mule that is "young, energetic and fleet of foot," and willing to loan it to the State of Alabama should contact Doug Benton in the Bureau of Publicity and Information.

Benton is searching for a mule with those qualifications to represent Alabama and Gov. George C. Wallace in the annual "Mule Day" race Sept. 23 at Benson, N.C.

The winning mule and the winning groomer will each receive a trophy.

Benson said, "I don't guess we've ever entered this before, but we're going to this time if we can find a mule."

The Alabama Trucking Association has promised to get the mule to North Carolina and back, he said.

Army Super-Helicopter Effort Is Laid To Rest

By ROBERT A. DOBKIN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — After six years and $400 million, the Army has killed its trouble-plagued Cheyenne helicopter program to search anew for a cheaper, less-fancy gunship.

The Army Wednesday notified Congress and Lockheed Aircraft, builder of the Cheyenne, of its decision and announced that it will seek new bids from industry for "the smaller, less-costly aircraft."

The action followed by eight months the death of the Army's new dream tank, the MBT70, which military planners also conceded was too fancy and too costly. In that case, Congress killed the program.

"The basic point is we got too expensive and too sophisticated a machine," an Army spokesman said of the Cheyenne. "We can do it for less with a smaller machine."

Cheyenne was packed with electronic gadgetry, antitank missiles and machine guns, for knocking out enemy troops, tanks and guns at close range.

The Army wanted to buy 375 Cheyennes at a cost estimated between $3.5 million to $5.2 million each, more than the price of the F4 Phantom jet.

But Cheyenne ran into mechanical problems along with congressional fire from critics who questioned its value.

They Cheyenne also has been the center of a bitter and still-unsettled dispute between the Army and Air Force over each service's role in the job of protecting American ground troops.

With the Air Force pushing its version of a new close-air-support plane, some legislators are concerned they are being asked to back too many overlapping military projects.

For the current fiscal year, the Army had asked $37 million to continue research and development on the helicopter.

The Senate turned it down but the House went along. A conference committee was in the process of resolving the difference when the Army announced its decision to cancel.

To fill the Cheyenne's role, the Army said, it will ask Congress to approve $40 million to begin "as soon as possible" a new quest for "the most effective advanced attack helicopter practical at the least cost in the 1970s."

Veterinary Lab Opened

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Bob Scott, noting that 29 North Carolina counties have no practicing veterinarians, says practical efforts are needed to create a school of veterinary in the state.

He made the statement Wednesday in a prepared talk at the dedication of the new Rollins Animal Disease Diagnostic Laboratory in Raleigh.

Scott, who owns a dairy farm in Alamance County, said the now-defunct State Board of Higher Education allocated $800,000 for creation of a department of veterinary science at North Carolina State University.

He expressed hope that "this project will be carried forward to a successful conclusion."

The laboratory, first of its kind in North Carolina, was named for the late Dr. Hal J. Rollins, who served several years as state veterinarian for the Department of Agriculture.

The lab will serve as a back-up facility for veterinarians in diagnosing animal disease.

"Because North Carolina is rapidly developing her livestock industry in virtually all phases," Scott said, "it is imperative that we maintain healthy animals. This is the way to do it."

One Injured In Traffic Mishaps

One person was reported injured in a series of traffic collisions here yesterday that resulted in an estimated $1,950 property damage.

Officers reported a passenger in a car driven by Otis Thompson, 55 of Kinston was hurt when the car collided with a vehicle driven by Sandra Taylor Lamond, 23 of Shady Knoll Trailer Park about 3:40 p.m. on Memorial Drive 500 feet West of the Trade Street intersection.

Officers, who estimated damage to the Lamond car at $100 and damage to the Thompson auto at $250 charged Mrs. Lamond with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety.

Alfred Math Womble, 61 of Route 2, Plymouth was charged with driving under the influence, no operators license and failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of an 8:50 p.m. collision at the intersection of First and Greene Streets.

Officers said the Womble auto collided with a car operated by Alton Ray Hillard, 22, of Route 1, Winterville.

Damage was set at $300 to the Hillard car and $500 to the Womble vehicle.

A 3:05 p.m. mishap on N.C. 11 500 feet North of the Gum Road intersection involved cars driven by James Ricky Joyner, 19, of 412 Arbor St. and William Gilford Tripp, 32, of Route 4, Greenville.

Police charged Tripp with failing to reduce his speed enough to avoid an accident and estimated damage at $200 to the Joyner vehicle and $500 to the Tripp auto.

Ramsey Clark On Radio Hanoi

HONG KONG (AP) — Former U.S. Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark was on Hanoi Radio again, calling for a halt to the bombing of North Vietnam.

A recorded interview with Clark, who is currently touring North Vietnam, was broadcast today.

"One thing is very clear and that is that when military aircraft bomb a country where there is no military engagement going on, where there is no actual battle being engaged, they will inevitably and necessarily kill innocent people, kill civilians, and destroy schools, hospitals as we have seen this morning," he said after visiting a bombed village.

Eleanor Ready To Debate Pat

WASHINGTON (AP) — Eleanor McGovern, a former scholastic debater, says she is willing to debate First Lady Pat Nixon.

Mrs. Nixon had been asked if she would be willing to debate Mrs. McGovern, wife of the Democratic presidential nominee, and laughingly told reports, "I heard she didn't want to debate."

Mrs. McGovern, asked on Wednesday about Mrs. Nixon's remark, said, "Yes, I think I would debate with Mrs. Nixon. I certainly wouldn't back away from it."

Wallace May See More Surgery

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Gov. George C. Wallace is continuing to improve from injuries suffered in a May 15 assassination attempt, but doctors say he may have to undergo another operation.

However, doctors said Wednesday they would wait before deciding on whether to perform an abscess drainage operation again.

"X rays today showed a cavity connected with a previous drain site that will require more time for healing," said Dr. George A. Hallenbeck, who performed the earlier surgery.

"It is uncertain whether additional surgical drainage will be necessary."

Wallace, paralyzed from the waist down due to bullet wounds, appeared briefly before newsmen earlier Wednesday and said, "I feel good."

Two Horror Films Set

Two horror films, "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" and "Dracula" are scheduled for showing in the public libraries. Showing time set for the films are 4:00 p.m. Friday at East Branch Library; 3:30 p.m. Tuesday at Carver Library; and 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in the Children's Room at Sheppard Library.

Both movies are part of the History of the Motion Picture Series. In deciding to show these two, a spokesman for the library staff notes that although the two movies "do not contain the bloody murder scenes that are characteristic of the horror pictures seen on television and on the current movie screens," there are "however, scenes of impending doom, victims being stalked, and even of Dr. Jekyll's transformation into the character of Mr. Hyde."

The spokesman adds "this may be enough to frighten some children. Therefore, parents are urged to use discretion in sending their children to see these two movies."

Wallace are members of the perch family.

Ass't Professor Is Found Dead

Don Howard DeMyer, a 34-year-old political science assistant professor at East Carolina University since 1969 was found dead here yesterday afternoon in his 114 1/2 West Ninth St. apartment.

According to Pitt County Coroner and Medical Examiner E.W. Harvey, an autopsy is being conducted to determine the cause of death.

Harvey and Greenville Police Department investigators said DeMyer was found dead in a chair in his second-floor apartment by his downstairs neighbors who were investigating an unusual odor coming from the dwelling.

DeMyer, the coroner said, was last seen August 1. He estimated that the teacher had been dead about a week when found shortly after 2 p.m.

A native of Indiana, DeMyer studied at Indiana University, the University of Hawaii and the University of Washington and was a radio announcer in Seattle, Washington, before coming to ECU. He also served in the U.S. Army from 1967 to 1969 and was affiliated with the Armed Forces Radio and TV Service.

DeMyer's relatives live in St. Maarten, Netherlands Antilles (West Indies).

Groups File Appeal In Chicod Creek Lawsuit

The National Resource Defense Council yesterday filed an appeal motion with the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals asking that a $75,000 bond required by U.S. Eastern District Court Judge John Larkins of plaintiff ecology groups involved in the Chicod Creek Watershed case be reduced.

Judge Larkins last week dismissed an injunction which has halted work on the project since May 16 when he issued a temporary order at the request of five environmentalist groups.

The five groups involved in the case include the NRDC, the National Wildlife Federation, the N.C. Wildlife Federation, the Pamlico Tar Conservation Coalition and 'Friends of the Earth.

The environmental groups claim the Soil Conservation Service—one of the defendants

Fowler To W. Virginia

AYDEN — Ayden Economic Council director Joe R. Fowler Jr. has resigned his post here in order to accept a position in West Virginia.

Fowler tendered his resignation this week, saying it would be effective Aug. 15, but adding that his last working day would be this past Monday, Aug. 7, since he has a week's vacation accrued.

He will become executive director of the Raleigh County Community Action Association in West Virginia. His new position will involve work with Chamber of Commerce, economic development, senior citizens, a youth program, and environmental improvement. It is funded by federal, state county, and municipal agencies, Fowler said.

David Smith, president of the Ayden Economic Council, commented, "We accept Joe Fowler's resignation with many deep regrets. We feel that he has done an outstanding job for the Town of Ayden. He was especially instrumental in the recent reorganization of the Ayden Chamber of Commerce and the acquisition of U.S. Industries. His loss will definitely be felt in our town."

in the case—has not complied with the National Environmental Policy Act in planning the project in Pitt and Beaufort Counties. They also claim that the watershed project will adversely affect the environment and have attacked the SCS claim that the project benefits will exceed the costs.

The Chicod case is the first test case in federal court dealing with the Soil Conservation Service's involvement in stream channelization.

The SCS is an agency of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Judge Larkins' order of last week dissolving the injunction came after the environmental groups failed to post the $75,000. They earlier had requested the bond be reduced to $100—the amount ordered by the federal court in the Trans Alaska Pipeline suit.

The judge said the $75,000 bond was needed to insure against any losses resulting from a delay of the project.

The appeal is expected to be heard early next week.

Farmers living in the Chicod Creek area say the channelization is needed to reduce flooding and make their cropland more suitable for cultivation.

Poll Gives Nod To Richmond Club

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A poll of Southern Conference football coaches indicates Richmond is their favorite to win the league title again this year.

The coaches were surveyed as they concluded a three-day gathering at Asheville Wednesday. They rated the Spiders on top, followed by The Citadel, William and Mary, Appalachian, East Carolina, Furman, VMI and Davidson.

Richmond Coach Frank Jones said for his team to repeat as champion the throwing arm of sophomore quarterback Harry Knight will be the reason. "I've always said that you can't win without a good quarterback," Jones said.

"In that line of thinking, I feel that William and Mary and The Citadel will battle for the top spot. They have two fine quarterbacks in Harry Luch (Citadel) and John Gargano," he added.

But the other coaches apparently believe Richmond's all-around strength will be enough for them.

Here are a how the other coaches see their prospects:

The Citadel's Red Parker: "The ball's going to have to fall our way and the luck to be with us if we're going to come near the 8-3 record. We have a great quarterback in Harry Luch. Right now with Jon Hall, our leading rusher, a doubtful starter, we could be in for a long season."

William and Mary's Jim Root: "It's hard to say much about my team, having seen them only in spring drills. But if that is any indication, we could have a great year."

Appalachian's Jim Brakefield: "We'll be a green team. Basically, I think we'll be sound at every position."

East Carolina's Sonny Randle: "We have a lot of question marks. Losing 23 seniors about sums them up. Then there's the schedule."

Furman's Bob King: "We're searching for a quarterback... we'll have a different look. If we don't (find one), I don't like to think about it."

VMI's Bob Thalmann: "We're young and inexperienced. But our program is beginning to take giant strides and this year could be the biggest step in a long time."

Davidson's Dave Fagg: "Defense will be the key again. We'll throw the ball more. We're small, but we have good speed."

Hard Act To Follow

New York Yankees' Celerino Sanchez goes after a ground shot to third, top left, by Detroit Tiger Ed Brinkman, bobbles the ball, and gets his glove on it, lower right, during the first game of a doubleheader Wednesday at Yankee Stadium in New York. Sanchez' throw to first was in time to make the final Detroit out in the fourth inning, but the Tigers won the game, 6-0. (AP Wirephoto)

Recruiting In Texas Has Made Big Change

By MIKE COCHRAN, Associated Press Writer, LUBBOCK, Tex. (AP) — When Jim Carlen arrived on the Texas Tech campus two years ago, he brought a new sense of excitement and expectation to Southwest Conference football circles.

He was poised, forthright and evangelistic. Indeed, some felt too much so.

But in his first year the Red Raiders romped to an 8-3 season and into the Sun Bowl. The Associated Press named him Southwest Conference Coach of the Year.

Last season was less glamorous and not without its sorry moments, particularly when Carlen criticized the booster club after one of his players was booted.

But more importantly, Carlen's recruiting program, while in its infancy here, has brought change. The accent is on personal contact.

"I think we've made people get out more," Carlen said in an interview in his office overlooking the artificial turf of Tech's Jones Stadium.

"I think all the young coaches are spending more time on the road now. I don't think you can win a kid through an alumnus, but it helps having 'em. You've got to be selective."

"So I think recruiting in Texas has changed since I've been here. There's nine (SWC) coaches and I'm the fifth oldest, and I've been here two years."

"They're out every day and every night and their coaches are out. We just see a lot more coaches on the road than we saw two years ago."

Texas is unique, Carlen says, in the sense that it has more good high school football players than any other state, but it also has more colleges competing for their talents.

"We try to stay as close to home as possible because I think we can do a better job here than spread all over the country," he said.

With 11 full-time coaches and four part-timers as recruiters, say he's good enough and one will say he's not good enough, and then I get in it and decide myself."

Under SWC rules, a prospect is permitted only one official visit to the campus. Coaches normally like to make it a memorable one.

"We bring them out here, and we like to house them in our own dormitory," Carlen said. "I don't get 'em rent cars. I never have entertained"

Tech representatives blanket the state in and out of football season.

On a typical recruiting weekend, Carlen releases his forces on Thursday after practice. If the Red Raiders are playing in Lubbock, the recruiters swing across the state, usually by car, most returning by game time Saturday afternoon or night. Daytime hours are spent in motel rooms studying films or talking with coaches and checking the grades of attractive players. Nights are reserved for games.

Carlen remains behind, sometimes watching two schoolboy contests a night and viewing game films.

If Tech is on the road the game plan is altered.

"Say we play Rice in Houston," Carlen explained. "We cover the whole Houston area with our staff. They'll go down Thursday. There's a lot of schools in Houston. You get 15 people in there and you can see 30 games in person right there."

Upon their return, there is the analysis session, whereby players are rated by number.

"A 'one' is being definitely good enough and we think he can play," Carlen said. "A 'two' we think is good enough for a scholarship. A 'three' is very questionable. We didn't take any 'threes' this year."

Carlen insists that two coaches approve every prospect.

"Occasionally one coach will

Dolphin Goal Is Still Victory In Super Bowl

By HUBERT MIZELL, Associated Press Sports Writer, MIAMI (AP) — Miami's Dolphins have developed into a youthful, even fuzzy-chinned, pro football powerhouse... artistically and financially.

The Dolphins sold less than 25,000 season tickets in 1969 when the American Football League expansion team floundered with a 3-10-1 record.

In 1972, Miami is coming off sparkling seasons of 10-4 and 10-3-1 under Coach Don Shula, capped by a trip last January to Super Bowl VI. And Floridians are clamoring to get into the Orange Bowl.

Season ticket sales nudged toward 68,000 this week and the 75,000-seat Orange Bowl is being increased to 80,000.

"We're pleased with what happened the past two seasons," said Shula, who has a 29-8-1 Miami record including the 24-3 beating the Dolphins absorbed against Dallas in Super Bowl VI.

"But," he added, "you're never satisfied until you win it all. That's our aim, to win the Super Bowl."

Miami jumps into the fire instantly, tackling a Kansas City team that was eliminated by the Dolphins 27-24 from the 1971 playoffs in the longest National Football League game ever played. Two weeks later, they will play the Minnesota Vikings. Both games are on the road.

Paul Warfield and Marlin Briscoe, obtained from Buffalo in a trade, give Shula a potent set of wide receivers to act as targets for quarterback Bob Griese, voted the best in the NFL last season.

The running game will continue to be bruising with Larry Csonka and Jim Kiick, but Shula hopes to mold a "three-back offense," shuffling fleet Mercury Morris into the lineup.

The No. 1 objective of training camp is to strengthen the Dolphins' defense against the rush, especially since the Cowboys ran for big chunks of yardage in the Super Bowl.

Rookie Mike Kadish, the No. 1 draft choice from Notre Dame, got a late start due to participation with the College All-Stars, but Shula has high hopes for the 265-pounder.

Tackle Manny Fernandez and end Bill Standfill are Miami's best pass rushers and the front four's quarterback sack total increased from 19 to 34 last fall. The other positions on the line are open, with a half-dozen aspirants fighting for them.

"One area that continues to please me is our secondary," said Shula. "They have been together our new players," and the maturity is evident."

The deep four are free safety Jake Scott, strong safety Dick Anderson and corners Tim Foley and Curtis Johnson.

"Great defensive teams are usually built over a period of years," Shula said. "Look at the Cowboys. They've become a family that has hardly changed in six or eight years. It's more important on defense than offense to have worked as a unit for a long time."

Shula admits there is more of a "professional air" at the Dolphins training camp.

"It's a sense of knowing what you're supposed to accomplish and doing it... without being told," he said.

Morris, who complained openly about not playing in the Super Bowl defeat, was the first to say, "This is a happy football team, a team that will settle for nothing short of winning the Super Bowl."

Wrangle Over Chicago's Sale

CHICAGO (AP) — The National Basketball Association's board of governors meets in Chicago today for a likely wrangle over the proposed sale of the Chicago Bulls to an eight-man group headed by Arthur Wirtz, owner of Chicago Stadium and the Chicago Black Hawks of the National Hockey League.

Beclouing the NBA's agenda is the question of anti-trust laws.

Sam Schulman of the Seattle SuperSonics has been quoted as saying the proposed sale to Wirtz "entails a violation of anti-trust laws and that's the position I'll take."

The NBA already is facing an anti-trust suit filed in Chicago Thursday in behalf of Irving H. Levin and Harold A. Lipton, both of Beverly Hills, Calif. They contend NBA owners turned down their planned purchase of the Boston Celtics in an "attempt to limit membership in the NBA to persons who might assist Emprise Corp., to obtain concession privileges" in stadiums where NBA teams play.

Emprise has been under nationwide investigation concerning alleged links to organized crime.

The Celtics subsequently were sold to Robert Schmetz of Lakewood, N.J.

Ervin To Try Athletic Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Sam J. Ervin, D-N.C., citing the "courageous sacrifice" of professional athletes like Curt Flood, says he will introduce legislation to exempt athletes from what he called a form of slavery that curbs their bargaining power.

"In this land of the free and the home of the brave, we have a group of citizens who cannot sell their talents in the free enterprise system," he said Wednesday in a rare appearance before a House Judiciary Subcommittee studying business-sports relations.

Ervin said his bill would permit an athlete upon expiration of his contract to enter into a contract with any other person.

Ervin, long an advocate of constitutional rights, said athletes are held in bondage by club owners through such devices as the reserve clause, option clause, league rules and court decisions exempting baseball from antitrust laws.

Curt Flood was an outfielder with the St. Louis Cardinals who quit baseball rather than allow himself to be traded. Flood's arguments, based on the fact he was not a piece of chattel, was recently dismissed by the Supreme Court which said, in effect, Congress should decide the matter.

Ervin said: "I hope you will all join with me in trying to pass this legislation to help vindicate the courageous sacrifice of Curt Flood so that those athletes that come after can say truthfully and proudly that 'I am not a piece of property.'"

Another witness, Ed Garvey, director of the National Football League Players Association, told the panel that the NFL was considering granting franchises in Canada during the next expansion.

Garvey said this practice would cut the players' war going on between the NFL and the Canadian Football League. Many U.S. players have jumped to Canada because of contractual limitations with NFL teams.

Bears Take On Oilers Tonight

HOUSTON (AP) — The pass-minded Houston Oilers and the ground-happy Chicago Bears meet tonight in a National Football League exhibition game in the Astrodome.

Houston, in a 24-26 loss to the champion Dallas Cowboys last week, used only 17 running plays while Chicago passed only 12 times in a 10-24 defeat by the Kansas City Chiefs.

The Oilers have six defensive starters out with injuries and only Tuesday lost one of their top offensive linemen, tackle Elbert Drungo, when he was sidelined for the season after knee surgery.

Oiler coach Bill Peterson said he plans to start second year quarterback Lynn Dickey with Dan Pastorini, another second year man, to work the second half. Pastorini worked the first half and Dickey the second against Dallas and they completed 19 of 31 passes for 253 yards and three touchdowns.

Bobby Douglass and Kent Nix are expected to split playing time at quarterback for the Bears. Dick Butkus, Chicago's great linebacker, was used only on kicking situations against the Chiefs but is expected to log more playing time against the Oilers.

The five-day NFL weekend exhibition schedule will continue Friday night with Denver at Washington. There will be eight games Saturday, including an afternoon game at Seattle, Wash. between the New York Jets and Pittsburgh.

At night, it will be Buffalo at New Orleans, Detroit at Cincinnati, St. Louis at Kansas City, Green Bay at Miami, San Diego at Minnesota, Dallas at Los Angeles, and New England at Philadelphia.

Sunday afternoon, Cleveland will play at San Francisco, and Monday night, Baltimore will be at Oakland.

Atlanta and the New York Giants are not scheduled.

In NFL developments Wednesday, wide receiver Lance Alworth of Dallas suffered a pulled hamstring muscle in practice. At the same time, the Cowboys placed three players, including cornerback Mark Washington and No. 1 draft choice, running back Bill Thomas, on injured waivers.

The Jets placed tight end Richard Caster on injured waivers and said he would be sidelined four to six weeks. He has a severely sprained left knee.

And offensive tackle Norm Evans, one of Miami's four remaining original team members, signed his 1972 contract with the Dolphins.

Wood Turns In Win To Gain 19th AL Victory

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON

Associated Press Sports Writer
The California Angels tried to knock on Wood Wednesday night—Wilbur Wood, that is—but Wood turned the tables and delivered a sharp rap of his own.

The portly knuckleballer of the Chicago White Sox outdueled California's flamethrower Nolan Ryan 1-0, singled home the only run of the game and threw the race in the American League West into a turmoil.

The White Sox, six games out as recently as a week ago, climbed within one game of the one-time runaway Oakland A's, who lost to Kansas City 5-2.

Elsewhere, Detroit's lead in the AL East was shaved to one-half game over Baltimore when the Tigers split a doubleheader with New York 6-0, 1-2 while the Orioles battered Milwaukee 10-0. The Yankees trail by three games and Boston is four back after beating Cleveland 5-2. Minnesota, six out in the West, lost to Texas 3-2.

Chicago, without a hit against Ryan until the sixth inning, broke through with two out in the seventh. Ed Herrmann singled and Ryan pitched him to second. The Angels then decided to walk Luis Alvarado to get to Wood but the left-hander, who bats from the right side at a meager .157 clip, lined an opposite-field single inside the right field line.

"I'd say I got around on him real good," Wood laughed. "But I wouldn't trade my knuckler for his fast ball."

The Sox move into Oakland tonight for a four-game weekend series with the A's, who have dropped four in a row and six of their last seven games. "We're facing them head-to-head," said Manager Dick Williams, "and we'll find out what we're made of. We may stir up some excitement. This was my first losing road trip since I became manager of the A's. We haven't played consistently well since the All-Star Game."

Kansas City tagged Oakland's Vida Blue, 4-7, for their first three runs and Cookie Rojas hit a two-run homer off Darold Knowles in the seventh. Rojas also ignited a two-run rally in the sixth with a double.

Texas scored three unearned runs to nip Minnesota behind the five-hit pitching of rookie Don Stanhouse. Vic Harris, another rookie, stole home for one run and Rich Billings drove in the decisive tally in the eighth inning with a sacrifice fly.

Meanwhile, Milwaukee Manager Del Crandall cast his vote for Baltimore in the AL East after the Orioles downed the Brewers for the third time in a row with Dave McNally pitching a four-hitter and hitting home run, to boot.

"I don't see how you can stop this club," he said. "I think they've got all the ingredients—speed, defense, youth, talent, pitching and enough power. At least that's how they've looked in this series."

McNally triggered a seven-run onslaught against Bill Parsons and Earl Stephenson with a sixth-inning single as the Orioles ran their winning streak to four games.

The Orioles took their cue Wednesday from McNally.

"We were all watching you," Boog Powell ribbed the left-hander. "Hell, when you hit a home run and pitch a shutout you don't have to worry about anyone else."

The Tigers and Yankees battled, you might say, to a Mexican standoff. Detroit third baseman Aurelio Rodriguez from Cananea, Mexico, collected two doubles and a single and drove in three runs in the opener and New York third sacker Celerino Sanchez from Mexico City delivered a decisive two-out, two-run single in the seventh inning of the nightcap.

Woodie Fryman, acquired last week from the Philadelphia Phillies, tossed a six-hitter in his first AL start to win the opening game.

Unbeaten Rob Gardner held the Tigers to an unearned tally and two singles through eight innings of the nightcap before giving way to relief ace Sparky Lule, who picked up his 25th save.

Luis Aparicio's two-run single in the fifth inning following a wild pitch by Cleveland's Gaylord Perry broke a 2-2 tie and prevented the Indians' ace from winning his 19th in his second try at it. Rico Petrocelli homered for the Red Sox' final run in the eighth.

It was a costly victory for the Red Sox, who lost second baseman Doug Griffin for about three weeks when he was hit by a Perry pitch and suffered a hairline fracture of his left hand.

NAMATH IS A QUESTION

NEW YORK (AP) — Quarterback Joe Namath says he wants to play football with the New York Jets this fall but he doesn't know how many games he can play. Namath played only three league games last season after an injury in a Tampa, Fla., exhibition game. He says he will know more about his 1972 league activity following late July and August workouts at Hempstead, N.Y.

Carlton Reels Off 13th Straight Win For Phils

By BRUCE LOWITT

Associated Press Sports Writer
"I hit him like I used to hit Koufax," Willie Stargell said of Philadelphia's Steve Carlton, "... which is like drinking coffee with a fork! You ever try that?"

Sandy Koufax, of course, is in Baseball's Hall of Fame now. And if a one-season performance had any bearing on such an honor, Carlton would be a shoo-in for the shrine.

"He was overpowering!" "Amazing!" "A hell of a pitcher!"

The superlatives just wouldn't stop flowing Wednesday night in Pittsburgh after Carlton, a 6-foot-5 veteran left-hander, reeled off his 13th straight victory with a three-hitter to raise his record to 18-6—best in the National League—and struck out 12 batters to boost his major league-leading total to 232 en route to leading the Phillies to a 2-0 triumph over the Pirates.

Elsewhere in the National League, Atlanta blanked Houston 6-0, San Diego beat San Francisco 5-2, Montreal defeated the Chicago Cubs 8-2, Cincinnati turned back Los Angeles 6-3 and the New York Mets trimmed St. Louis 8-3.

In the American League, Detroit split a doubleheader with New York, winning 6-0 before the Yankees took the nightcap 2-1, Boston beat Cleveland 5-2, Texas trimmed Minnesota 3-2, Baltimore bombed Milwaukee 10-0, Kansas City whipped Oakland 5-2 and Chicago nipped California 1-0.

To add insult to injury, Carlton also kicked in with his first home run of the season and fourth in his major league career—but that was just incidental.

"I just can't believe anyone can pitch better than he has," Phils' Manager Paul Owens exulted after Carlton extended to 54 his string of innings without allowing an earned run. "And he's a competitor. You give him a run or two early and he really gets tough."

The Phils gave him that run in the second inning against Steve Blass as Willie Montanez singled and raced all the way home when right fielder Gene Clines misplayed Greg Luzinski's single.

Carlton put the final nail in the Pirates' coffin the next inning with his homer over the right field wall off Blass. "He threw me one of those big changes he's got," Carlton said, "and I managed to regain my balance and hit it."

Felix Millan drove in two runs for the Braves with a single and a sacrifice fly but it was Hank Aaron and George Stone who starred against the sagging Astros.

Aaron belted his 23rd homer of the season, a two-run shot in the first inning that gave him 662 for his career. And Stone made the runs stand up with a six-hitter.

Juan Marichal, who has won just four games this season and none in nearly a month, dropped his 14th when the Padres jumped on him for three runs in the first inning, two of them on Clarence Gaston's single.

Garry Jesteadt and Jerry Morales added solo homers later on. Willie McCovey and Ken Henderson homered for the Giants.

Mike Jorgensen and Ron Fairly drove in two runs apiece for the Expos, who broke open their tight game against the Cubs with a five-run ninth inning.

Montreal reliever Mike Marshall, picking up his 10th victory, wrecked Chicago's bid to blow the game apart, coming on in the seventh inning with the bases loaded, nobody out and the score tied.

He struck out Don Kessinger, got Jose Cardenal to ground into a force out at the plate, then wheeled and picked a stunned Carmen Fanzone off second base. "We failed to take advantage," Cubs Manager Whitey Lockman philosophized.

The Reds, widening their West Division lead to 7½ games over Houston and 11 over Los Angeles, got three runs batted in from Pete Rose and three perfect bunts by pitcher Tom Hall that set up run-scoring rallies. Frank Robinson homered for the Dodgers, bringing to 29 his major league record for the most parks in which he's hit home runs.

The Mets, edging within 8½ games of Pittsburgh in the East, got three runs batted in apiece from Ken Boswell and Ed Kranepool while Jim McAndrew scattered six hits in the victory over the Cardinals.

L. Mint Is Winner

The Little Mint of Elm Street Park downed Bucks of the Police Club in the championship game of the Summer Basketball League last night, 73-66.

Bucks eased out into the lead in the first half of the game, pushing in 43 points while holding the Little Mint to just 40. But in the second half, the Little Mint came back, outshooting Bucks, 33-23, and that was more than enough to push ahead and take the win.

Terry Davis led the Little Mint with 22 points, while John Turner had 18 and Dave Franklin had 16.

For Bucks, Lonnie Payton had 26 points, while Charlie Harris had 24. Tyson added 13 points.

U.S. Savings Bonds help keep today's plans from becoming tomorrow's broken dreams.

We all have plans. We plan for a vacation, plan to buy a boat, or a house; or send our children through college.

And, in order to keep those plans from becoming broken dreams, we need money.

That's where the Payroll Savings Plan comes in handy. When you join where you work, an amount you specify is set aside from your paycheck and used to buy U.S. Savings Bonds.

It's an easy way to save money and collect some interest at the same time.

Keep today's plans alive. Buy U.S. Savings Bonds through the Payroll Savings Plan. You won't end up with a bunch of broken dreams tomorrow.

Now U.S. Bonds pay 8 1/2% interest when held to maturity of 5 years, 10 months (4% the first year). Bonds are replaced if lost, stolen, or destroyed. When needed they can be cashed at your bank. Interest is not subject to state or local income taxes, and federal tax may be deferred until redemption.

Take stock in America.
Now Bonds mature in less than six years.

N.C. Coastal Beaches Losing Their War On Litter

By REESE HART
Associated Press Writer
North Carolina's coastal beaches apparently are fighting a losing battle against the mounting problem of empty beer cans, paper cups and other litter.

In some beach areas the cans and cups nearly outnumber the sea shells. Atlantic Beach police Capt. L. S. Overman complained that "people even take our beach garbage cans. We painted the cans orange, but still they take them."

A cleanup campaign at Long Beach early in April produced 21 truckloads of cans and other litter, but "within a week you couldn't tell it," said Town Manager Jack Hayward.

"It's a hard job trying to keep the beach clean," said Jack Webb, Carolina Beach town manager. "Most people seem to think somebody's going to clean up behind them, so they just toss their litter on the beach."

The problem is about the same up and down the coast.

"It's not limited to beaches," said George E. Pickett, director of the North Carolina office of Water and Air Resources. "The litter problem exists in all recreational areas. Some people are simply irresponsible and disregard litter ordinances."

He added, "We have received quite a few letters complaining bitterly about the litter on beaches. I've talked with local beach officials and they say it's a difficult, costly thing to police the beaches and enforce the ordinances against littering." Pickett said that while his office is not directly concerned with the litter problem, "the recreational value of clean beaches to the state and the pollution problems fall within our realm."

Hugh H. Perry Jr., Wrightsville Beach town manager, said the solution may be an ordinance prohibiting any eating or drinking on beaches.

"It's going to have to come to that," Perry told The Associated Press. "Atlantic City has such an ordinance and it is rigidly enforced."

Atlantic Beach also sends out a sanitation crew once a week to collect cans, cups and other litter and generally spruce up the area.

Aycock Brown, manager and news director of the Dare County Tourist Bureau at Manteo, said the problem is not as bad on the Outer Banks, where the beach stretches for many miles. Hayward said, "Most people don't give a hoot about keeping the beach clean. We operate a beach patrol with a jeep, but he's only one man and can't keep an eye on everyone over an eight and one-half mile stretch. We've given warnings to several persons about littering." "But," he added, "it doesn't seem to do much good. When the officer is out of sight the littering resumes. It's like the change of the tide. A lot of our beach residents clean up in front of their cottages, but within a day or two the litter is there again."

Shifting Of Emphasis In TV News Not Successful For All

By BERNARD GAVZER
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Throughout TV land, the evening local news show often comes forth like an electronic age Chautauqua. About the only things missing are a banjo introduction and a Hopi band doing a ceremonial rain dance. In perhaps 100 cities, local television stations have attempted to zap up news presentation in the highly successful manner achieved by New York's ABC Channel 7 "Eyewitness News."

The format calls for a variety of "communicators" in a relaxed and somewhat informal setting. They do not give the news so much as "discuss" it. The premise is that the viewer feels as though he is included in a conversation among well-informed, agreeable, exciting personalities.

At Channel 7, it works wonderfully well.

Elsewhere, the imitators sometimes fall into bad taste, stupidity and plain dumb demonstrations of their amateurism as actors and-or newsmen. At one station out West, for example, a report of a sordid murder was followed almost immediately by some childish by-play in which the on-camera "communicator" could not suppress laughter.

Back at ABC's Channel 7, on the 18th floor of the executive building along Manhattan's Avenue of the Americas, sits the 37-year-old TV inventor of the new format: Albert T. Primo. Sometimes, hearing of what is going on at other stations, he may ask what he hath wrought. If he doesn't, others do.

What hath you wrought, he was asked.

"The second generation of television news journalism," he said. "We are serious and conscientious as newsmen. The difference with traditional TV journalism is that we are more informal and our reporting is made more understandable in the human terms of our viewers."

As to the news content and the approach to news, Primo said the key difference came in shifting emphasis from what happened to what does it mean to me?

It all began Nov. 17, 1968, with the Eyewitness label and Roger Grimsby, whose sort of tough guy, hardline, no-nonsense news reporter image projected a bit of the traditional, conventional newsmen, and Bill Beutel, whose youthfulness and good looks had patent appeal for the pre-Geritol set, as coanchors.

Primo also began to switch an old practice in the news business: instead of training reporters to become experts in various specialized fields, Primo trained the experts as newsmen.

And so, Frank Gifford, the flashy pro football star, and Jim Bouton, a more than literate baseball player, took on sports reporting chores. Kevin Sanders came on as the sort of house intellectual — an at-large critic on all matters cultural. Melba Tolliver, an attractive young black woman, was discovered in the ABC steno pool and was sent to school to learn journalism and return as a reporter. Gerardo Rivera, a Puerto Rican who was a store-front lawyer, is the show's people expert.

Asked whether this blend might not be the same as the cynical political play in which a party figures it needs one Catholic, one Jew, one Protestant, one black, one farmer, one this and one that, Primo said such factors played a role but that the thing was to find people who complemented one another and who worked well together.

One criticism of the format of such news shows is that there is a good bit of horseplay and inside gags which intrude on the delivery of news and tarnishes its quality. Primo said there was a danger that this could happen but that it was the job and duty of the news director or producer to keep the show disciplined.

What Primo hath wrought has had its rewards.

ABC-TV local news on Channel 7 moved from being non-competitive (as far as the ratings) to by-passing both CBS and NBC.

For Primo, it has brought him the 18th floor office and a new title: vice president news.

Would License Driver On Basis Of His Ability

WASHINGTON (AP) — Highway safety requirements demand licensing of drivers according to the level of their ability, Franklin M. Kreml, president of the Automobile Manufacturers Association, told a Transpo '72 conference recently.

In addressing the International Vehicle and Highway Safety Conference, Kreml advocated the issuing of licenses for limited purposes such as "Daylight Driving Only," "Automatic Transmission Vehicles Only" or "Non-Freeway Driving." Another recommendation was that of offering classes of licenses such as "elementary," "intermediate" and "Master."

"It is no longer adequate to issue a single license for operation of all private cars under all conditions," said Kreml. "For safer highway travel we must improve the skill of drivers even as we produce safer vehicles and better roads," he said.

Stress Training Of Missioners

COCHABAMBA, Bolivia (UPI)—Roman Catholic Maryknoll missionaries spend six months in language training in Bolivia followed by nine months of living with a family, during which they are encouraged to take university courses, as a means of overcoming communication difficulties.

The Rev. Arthur C. Kiernan, director of the order's language school, said about 50 per cent of North American missionaries leave their mission assignments in a two year period because of inability to speak a foreign language properly.

SALUTE to the EAGLES

by DEAN WAITE

World War I ace Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker with his famous Spad, a German Fokker D-VII at rear. He downed at least 26 enemy planes and balloons.

The history of aviation isn't yet a long one. But it has moved fast. In relatively few decades the courage and imagination of pioneer flyers—human "eagles"—have winged flying from lonely beginnings to exalted achievements. The first successful flight in a heavier-than-air machine was made by Orville Wright near Kitty Hawk, N. C., in 1903. He flew 120 feet in 12 seconds; the whole flight could have been made on the wing span of a modern 747 jet. Sixty-six years later, astronaut Neal Armstrong set foot on the moon. (Another note for the history books: this year the United States Air Force celebrates its 25th birthday as a separate service, although there have been military flyers since before World War II.)

Many daring exploits carried out by countless aviators in war and in peace have long ago vanished like vapor trails in time. But the spirit of these airmen and airwomen will always remain as an inspiration and a challenge to aviation progress. This page salutes a few of flying's greatest American figures.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Although your work may be frustrating today, don't let it get you down. Persevere and you still can gain your objective. What you need is the proper rest. Avoid one who gossips.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You would like to handle a financial affair today, but it would be better to concentrate on the personal instead. Try to have better rapport with the one you love.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Get away from family worries and go to the amusements you enjoy, then return to them with renewed vigor. You are able to cultivate the right people and make headway in social life.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) A good day to have dental or other professional work done, so make an appointment early and stop worrying. Attend the social this evening and dress in excellent style.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Contact logical thinking persons you know and get the advice you want. Be sure the advice you receive is not misleading. Show more devotion to mate tonight for mutual harmony.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) It is wise to get a health checkup before you delve into civic work you have to do. Plan your activities for the future much more wisely. Don't scatter your energies haphazardly.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Make plans that will help you operate on a more modern theme and thereby derive greater benefits. Await a better time to take care of personal anxieties. You're too emotional right now.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Concentrate on gaining personal aims now and find the right friends who can help you. Sidestep advisers who are cold and calculating right now. Don't rely too much on your intuition.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Not a good day to confer with higher-up who is in a most irritable mood, but fine for discussing matters with an associate. Your intuitive faculties are working well. Rely on them.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Overwork would gain nothing now except frustration. Making new contacts of worth is your best bet. Put a little more punch in your regular activities and gain far better results.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) An associate can be very amusing now, so sidestep obligations that are not too important and have fun. There are facets to your capabilities that have not yet been tapped.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) There could be some changes in your personal and business life today, but it is for the best. You can easily be more sure of yourself now than you have for some time. Relax tonight.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one of those young people who early in life shows a definite fastidiousness that increases with maturity. As parents, you should teach to keep an eye on the goal and not to be too engrossed in details. Then this becomes a very successful life. Art, fashion, music are fine here.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

Electronic Tapes From WW II

By JOSEPH ST. AMANT
LOS ANGELES (UPI)—The scientific curiosity and enthusiasm of a young U.S. Signal Corps officer in Germany led to development of magnetic tape which most people take for granted today in everything from tape recorders to devices that track missiles in outer space.

Before World War II, recording was done on discs or on wire and neither method was adaptable to editing, cutting and splicing.

John T. Mullin, a young fellow with an interest in sound and an electrical engineering degree from the University of Santa Clara, discovered the Germans had made some remarkable improvements in recording.

"The great contribution the Germans made just before or during World War II was to develop a ribbon of flat paper for use instead of wire. The paper was coated with finely ground iron particles to make it magnetic. Later they developed a plastic tape. Vacuum tubes then came into use to amplify the sound. The Germans also developed a very good drive mechanism to move the tape—a method of propelling it.

"Then they learned to mix the sound with very high frequency tone—that we call bias. This very high frequency reduced the noise of recordings. I believe they mixed it accidentally at first."

Early Research
Mullin, now in his early 50s and a research scientist for the 3M Minicom Division at Camarillo, Calif., first got an inkling of the German advances while working in a laboratory in London. He was attached to the Royal Air Force at the time, doing research on what they called "radio location" and what we know now as radar.

"I was all alone in the lab and I had my radio turned on to a German station and it was playing beautiful music — schmaltzy Viennese waltzes. The quality was so good I thought it was a live broadcast. It was continuous music so there was no possibility of it being on a disc."

After D-Day in Europe, Mullin returned to duty with the U.S. Signal Corps and was assigned the task of ferreting out German scientific equipment.

He was stationed in Paris but drove frequently into Germany and one day heard the Frankfurt Radio broadcasting music such as he'd heard in the London lab.

"I went to the station and found American GIs running it and using German equipment — a tape recorder.

"I nearly died. I had never heard anything like this on phonograph records. I nearly flipped. The music was just beautiful."

By studying German manuals and the equipment, Mullin found out how it worked and sent the data home to U.S. Signal Corps headquarters.

Mailsacks Full
He managed to come into possession of two German tape recorders and sent them to his home in San Francisco as war souvenirs.

"I'm sure they would have been destroyed otherwise," he said.

He had to take the tape recorders apart and package them so the various parts would fit into a mail sack. The recorders were somewhat bigger than a breadbox and he filled quite a few mail sacks, he said.

When he got to San Francisco,

Mullin said he assembled the tape recorders and demonstrated them for a group of radio engineers. He had been foresighted enough to scrounge 50 reels of magnetic tape while in Germany so he had plenty to work with.

Through a contact with a Hollywood agent, Frank Healey, Mullin put on a demonstration for Bing Crosby, then doing a half hour radio show on the ABC network.

Crosby, in his casual fashion, liked to record the show loosely without thinking too much about the time limitations. Done on a disc, it was hard to edit down because he always ran over.

Mullin showed the singer and his sound man how to tape it with his German machines and then re-record on a disc after editing and without appreciable loss of quality.

The tape machine was not trusted for use on the air as yet. At any rate, Crosby was elated with the idea and Mullin taped 26 of the Old Groaner's showing beginning in August, 1947.

Later the Ampex Corp., was formed at San Carlos, Calif., and began manufacturing the first U.S. made machines which used magnetic tape made by what was then known as the Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing Co.

Ampex gave Mullin the first two machines it made in return for his scientific advice and he taped the final 10 Crosby shows — a total of 36 — to finish the season. His German tape was getting pretty thin by that time, he said.

Mullin also taped for later broadcast a 15-minute gossip show each Sunday by movie columnist Louella Parsons.

Mullin finally got out the radio show end of the business and began research and development on a small scale for Big Crosby Enterprises in a little studio on Sunset Boulevard.

To 3M
They began making on special order instrumentation recorders such as came to be used to track missiles and later spacecraft.

The electronic part of Bing Crosby Enterprises was acquired by 3M in 1956 and Mullin went with it.

He helped develop professional recording machines which are used in the music business.

The Worry Clinic Avoid Dangers In The Kitchen

Laura's shocking case should wake up all housewives! It's my guess that most of you women violate the same culinary rule that kills hundreds of mothers, as well as toddlers, every year! Paste this case on your refrigerator door!

By GEORGE W. CRANE
Ph.D., M.D.

Case U-558: Laura B., aged 29 should wake up all wives.

"Dr. Crane," her grieving husband began, "we have a boy and a girl, aged 7 and 5. And Laura was a perfect wife as well as mother. "But last week tragedy struck. "She leaned over the electric stove in our kitchen to turn on the blower that pulls cooking odors outdoors. "But her dress caught fire on one of the front burners! "The fabric must have been highly inflammable, for she was instantly engulfed in flames. "I was outside working on our lawn when I heard her screaming. "She panicked and ran through the house crying for help.

"Well, she was so badly burned that she passed away shortly after an ambulance got her to the hospital. "Now I am left to grieve and try to serve as both father and mother to our two kiddies. "Dr. Crane, I feel so blue, I don't know what to do! "Can you snap me out of my dejection and give me some advice?"

Dangerous Kitchens
Repeatedly I have warned you wives NOT to employ the front burners on your kitchen cook stove unless both back burners are in use!

But many of you still ignore this standard rule that all Home Ec teachers should drill indelibly into the minds of their students.

For those front burners not only lead to severe burns of adult women, as Laura's case indicates.

But hundreds of toddlers are scalded to death every year by reaching up to seize the handle of a stew pan or skillet that you have placed on one of those front burners!

Mrs. Crane is as guilty as many of you other housewives. For she often ignores the back burners and fries eggs or heats the teakettle on a front burner.

Yet I have employed concommate psychology for 40 years in trying to teach her otherwise!

A year ago she ignited her dress by also leaning over a lighted front burner to turn on the ventilating fan.

Luckily, she choked out the flames with her bare hands, blistering them in the process.

But she still habitually tempts fate every day by use of those two front burners though both back burners are unoccupied.

Remember, too, that when cooking meat or other foods that give off tiny grease droplets or strong odors, the ventilating fan sucks up the fumes much faster from the back burners!

And chefs who inhale cooking odors (especially grease droplets) have been found to have a much higher incidence of lung cancers!

Laura's grieving husband should now register with our Scientific Marriage Foundation as soon as possible.

For it could introduce him to a charming, beautiful and cultured nurse, airplane hostess, teacher or other suitable girl who would make a thrilling wife and devoted mother to his two kiddies.

Alas, most people hesitate to suggest remarriage early, but then find that such widowers may have been caught on the rebound by some designing female who is grossly unsuitable!

So send for the SMF Marriage Questionnaire," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 cents, and help get such kiddies the right kind of step-mother! (Always write to Dr. Crane in care of this newspaper, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.) Copyright 1972.

When South opened the bidding with one heart, West chose to make a takeout double, even though he did not have support for clubs.

He was reluctant to overcall on his four card spade suit and the double would present his partner with an opportunity to respond in spades if he held four. There was an element of risk involved and with less favorable vulnerability conditions, we might be inclined to risk the overcall as the safer course of action.

North redoubled, holding the equivalent of an opening bid himself. East passed the decision back to his partner now that he was relieved of the obligation to respond.

West retreated to one spade and North freely bid two clubs. When South rebid two hearts, North offered a delayed raise. South had the option to pass at this point, but he elected to carry on to game, holding slightly more than a bare minimum.

West opened the king of spades and when he observed a doubleton in dummy, he promptly switched to the nine of hearts to prevent declarer from ruffing a spade.

South realized that it would be futile to play a second spade, for surely the opposition would then remove North's last trump. The fate of the contract appeared to hinge on a successful club finesse and inasmuch as West had made a takeout double originally, it was reasonable to presume that he was more likely than his partner to hold the queen of clubs.

The king of hearts was played at trick two and three more rounds of trumps were drawn to clear the opposition of that suit. A small club was led next, West played the six and the jack was put in from dummy.

When East showed up with the queen, a spade return enabled West to cash two more tricks in that suit and thereby set declarer by one.

South's contract did not actually hinge on a successful club finesse, but rather, on a three-two division in that suit—which is the normal expectation. Relying on this, he can cinch his contract after playing dummy's king of hearts by merely leading a small club away from the dummy.

East will presumably put up the queen, but since there is still a trump left in the dummy, the defenders can cash only one more spade trick. If East shifts to a diamond when he is in, South plays the ace, draws the remaining trumps and then crosses over to the king of clubs to run that suit. He can discard one spade and the queen of diamonds on the long clubs and give up a spade at the end.

In all, declarer takes five hearts, one diamond, and four clubs.

Ponder Subpoena For Jane Fonda

By CARL C. CRAFT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Internal Security Committee called a closed session today to discuss a member's request that actress Jane Fonda be subpoenaed to testify about her antiwar activities.

Rep. Fletcher Thompson of Georgia, third-ranking GOP member of the nine-man panel, asked the committee to subpoena Miss Fonda for questioning concerning "the entire realm of (her) activities while in the enemy capital of Hanoi and in communist North Vietnam."

Rep. Richard H. Ichord, D-Mo., chairman of the basically conservative committee, told a reporter Wednesday that Miss Fonda "obviously was being used by the North Vietnamese."

Thompson also said he was asking the attorney general to bring charges of treason against the actress if the reports are true.

In Paris on July 25, after her Hanoi trip, Miss Fonda said she had made daily broadcasts over Hanoi radio, but "I did not say what I am accused of saying."

panel's investigative activities, said he would oppose any attempt to force Miss Fonda to submit to questioning if it meant that Thompson, who is running this year for the Senate, would use the sessions as a publicity device.

On July 18, Thompson said in a House speech that according to radio reports Miss Fonda was "calling upon the American service personnel to disobey the orders of the U.S. government and, indeed, to desert and to turn themselves in to the North Vietnamese."

Thompson added: "Mr. Speaker, declared war, undeclared war, police action, whatever it may be—if the report is true, this is treason, and it is time that this government took some action against people such as Jane Fonda who have given aid and comfort to our enemy ..."

Thompson also said he was asking the attorney general to bring charges of treason against the actress if the reports are true.

Ichord said also the question of giving Miss Fonda an official forum for expressing her views may influence the decision.

Rep. Robert F. Drinan, D-Mass., a committee member who has repeatedly fought the
