

Nixon Balks At Exceeding His Budget

Senate Overrides Clean Water Bill Veto

By MARGARET GENTRY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Calling the price tag "staggering," President Nixon has vetoed a clean-water bill and threatened to do the same for any other legislation exceeding his budget.

The Senate voted 51 to 12 early today to override the veto that was announced at the White House minutes before the midnight deadline, when the bill would have become law without his signature. A House vote expected today will determine whether the veto stands or falls.

Though the bill authorizes $24.6 billion over three years for a massive cleanup of the nation's waterways, it does not actually appropriate the money.

In his veto message, Nixon objected only to the legislation's cost and defined the issue in the thrift-in-government language of his campaign for reelection.

Aimed at totally wiping out water pollution by 1985, the bill authorizes funds for municipal sewage and waste-treatment systems and tightens controls over the discharge of industrial wastes into waterways.

Companies would be required to employ "the best available" controls by mid-1983.

Democratic presidential nominee George McGovern called the veto a "mean-spirited action by a President who has always put special interests before the public interest."

The White House chose to announce the veto moments after the Senate, failing to reach a compromise, threw out the $250-billion spending lid Nixon had requested. The President had sought unrestricted powers to cut federal programs without congressional intervention. He said his aim was to hold spending down to that level during the current fiscal year.

The Senate balked at granting Nixon such unlimited budget-cutting authority.

The President said his veto was consistent with his motive for seeking the spending ceiling, and in the language he has employed in the campaign, he said "a vote to sustain the veto is a vote against a tax increase; a vote to override the veto is a vote to increase the likelihood of higher taxes."

Defeat of the spending-ceiling measure may cause Nixon to veto other bills, said John Ehrlichman, the President's domestic-affairs adviser, and Caspar W. Weinberger, director of the Office of Management and Budget. The two briefed newsmen on the veto and its implications.

Ehrlichman said one likely candidate for a veto is the $30.5-billion appropriation bill for the bulk of the government's social programs. Nixon vetoed it once in August.

Among the clean-water bill's key features:

—At full funding, contingent upon passage of separate legislation, the measure would channel $9.7 billion in fiscal year 1973, $9.95 billion in 1974, and $7.65 billion in 1975 into the pollution fight.

—Municipalities would be eligible for $18 billion in federal funds for waste-treatment plants and sewage systems.

Planes Hunt
Hale Boggs

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — Signals from an aircraft emergency locator beacon have been picked up by aircraft combing heavily timbered, mountainous areas of Southeast Alaska for a missing plane carrying House Democratic Leader Hale Boggs and three others.

The Coast Guard said the pilots of two jet-powered helicopters heard the signals twice some 10 miles west of this Alaska capital city on Tuesday, but there were notes of caution.

"We have experienced false alarms in the past," said a spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration.

Cmdr. Paul Breed of Coast Guard headquarters in Juneau also cautioned against undue optimism.

"There was no indication it came from the missing aircraft," Breed said of the signal. "And it is not uncommon for one to get tripped accidentally."

There was also a report that an amateur radio operator in California had talked with someone in the Boggs plane Monday night, and that he had been told the aircraft had landed on a beach near Juneau.

The Cessna 310 in which Boggs and his companions left Anchorage Monday on a 3½-hour, 560-mile flight to Juneau was equipped with an emergency beacon, which activates on a crash.

With the 58-year-old Louisianan were Rep. Nick Begich, Alaska's only member of the House of Representatives; Russell Brown, 37, an aide to the 40-year-old Begich; and Don E. Jonz, 38, the pilot.

Arrives Direct From Paris Parleys
Kissinger Joins Saigon Policy Review

SAIGON (AP) — Presidential adviser Henry A. Kissinger arrived in Saigon today to join U.S. and South Vietnamese officials in a major review of the military and political situation in Vietnam and his peace negotiations in Paris.

Kissinger came from Paris where he held another secret meeting Tuesday with the North Vietnamese. It was his 20th trip to Paris for secret negotiations.

With Kissinger were William Sullivan, deputy assistant secretary of state for Far Eastern and Pacific affairs, along with several other aides from the National Security Council staff.

Kissinger was met by U.S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker, Gen. Creighton W. Abrams, Army chief of staff who arrived earlier in the day, and Gen. Frederick C. Weyand, commander of U.S. forces in Vietnam.

On the Vietnamese side, he was greeted by his counterpart, Nguyen Phu Duc, special adviser on foreign affairs to President Nguyen Van Thieu, and Ambassador Tran Kim Phuong, who was recalled from Washington for consultations here.

Kissinger declined to make any statement to waiting newsmen. He was driven in a limousine to Bunker's downtown villa.

Abrams arrived for a week-long military assessment that could influence the allied bargaining stance in Paris.

Both Kissinger and Abrams were scheduled to meet with President Nguyen Van Thieu, but officials said they did not know just when.

Abrams conferred after his arrival with Gen. Frederick C.

Weyand, commander of U.S. forces in Vietnam, and Gen. John W. Vogt, the 7th Air Force commander responsible for air strikes against North Vietnam.

Kissinger was scheduled to return to Washington after meeting with Thieu.

The chief stumbling block in the peace negotiations has been Thieu's insistence that he would never accept the Communist demand for a coalition government. There was speculation that Kissinger would try to convince the president to agree to some sort of coalition or dual government with the Viet Cong to break the deadlock.

Thieu meanwhile, has recalled Ambassador Tran Kim Phuong from Washington and Pham Dang Lam from the Paris peace talks and has been conferring with them and other top advisers since Sunday.

Officials in both Saigon and Washington will not disclose the substance of all these talks, saying only that they are in a serious and sensitive stage. But diplomats in Washington who claim knowledge of the Paris peace talks have raised the possibility of a joint U.S.-North Vietnamese announcement before the U.S. presidential election on Nov. 7.

Reports from Washington say the American position centers on working out a cease-fire that would result in the release of U.S. prisoners of war and a political settlement that would not give the appearance of selling out Thieu.

Delay Opening
Newtown Bids

Joe Laney, executive director of the Greenville Housing Authority, said that there will be a two-week delay on bid openings for the Newtown housing project.

Laney said the the Department of Housing and Urban Development recommended that the Authority postpone the bid opening session, originally set for 2 p.m. today, until a new prevailing wage guideline for this area can be issued by the Department of Labor.

He reported that the wage schedules are updated periodically and are furnished to bidding contractors. Today's original bid opening would come under the time schedule of the old wage data, Laney noted, and HUD recommended that the date be postponed until 2 p.m. on Nov. 1 when the new schedule will be in effect.

Contractors bidding on the Newtown project have been notified of the delay, the director said. He added that two of the contractors are local.

Only Opposition Heard
To Alternate Road Plan

By BLANCHE HARDEE
Reflector Staff Writer

No opposition was voiced at a public hearing yesterday held by the North Carolina State Highway Commission on the proposed improvement and extension of secondary road 1203 (Allen Road) from U.S. 13-U.S. 264 bypass to N.C. 43.

However, one family did object to the alternate alignment of the proposed project.

Bill Garrett of the State Highway Commission's preconstruction department, told those attending the hearing the proposed improvement will follow the existing secondary road 1203 from the beginning to secondary road 1200 (Stantonsburg Road). From this point secondary road 1203 will be extended on new location to intersect N.C. 43 just north of the Walter B. Jones Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center.

An alternate location beginning just west of the Norfolk and Southern Railroad and lying north of existing secondary road 1203 from this point to Stantonsburg Road was also discussed.

Garrett said the proposed alignment would probably be the one followed rather than the alternate plan.

Louis Gaylord, Greenville attorney representing Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Thigpen, asked that the alternate plan not be used.

According to Gaylord, if the alternate plan is used the Thigpens would be "wiped out."

If the proposed or recommended alignment is followed, no families will be relocated and only the Thigpens will be displaced if the alternate plan is used.

"My clients are not against progress," Gaylord said. "That is, progress with as little damage and inconvenience to persons as possible."

Gaylord said the alternate plan would wipe out the Thigpen home and business. The family owns about eight acres in the corner of the Stantonsburg Road and present Allen Road.

"They have previously lost land to the State Highway Commission when the Allen Road was constructed. At that time, the Thigpens owned 14 acres of land, now they only have eight," Gaylord said.

In addition to the Thigpen home, a furniture warehouse is located on their property. They also own three lots.

"If the alternate plan is approved, their property will be split in half," Gaylord said. "A home is an intangible . . . the Highway Commission cannot pay for a 'home'."

Garrett said it is required to show all possibilities studied at the public hearing. He said it is very unlikely the highway commission will decide to follow the alternate plan.

Tobacco Prices
Show Decrease

The averaged on the Eastern Tobacco Belt have shown a considerable decrease in the last few selling days as the 1972 auction season comes to an end.

The highest average, $82.80 per hundred pounds, was recorded on the Wilson tobacco market. That market sold 1,258,566 pounds of tobacco for $1,042,190.

The Greenville market averaged $80.70 per hundred pounds after selling 1,306,527 for $1,054,449.

The Kinston tobacco market averaged $79.34 per hundred pounds while the average per hundred pounds on the Rocky Mount market was $78.08.

The volume of sales yesterday on the Farmville market was heavy but is expected to lighten by Thursday.

According to Louis Williams, the quality of tobacco was not as good as on Monday. A larger percent of poor grades accounted for the large volume of sales.

The Farmville market sold 569,247 pounds of leaf for $464,301, yielding an average of $81.70 per hundred pounds.

The Windsor tobacco market will close at the end of sales on Thursday while the Wallace market has announced its closing date as Oct. 24.

A tabulation of sales on the various markets in the Eastern Belt as compiled by the Federal State Market News Service, includes:

'Grasshopper' Tour
Arriving Tomorrow

The McGovern Grassroots Grasshopper tour will arrive here tomorrow morning at 10:30 a.m.

The group will be met at Tripp's Warehouse on N. Green Street by Dr. Leo Jenkins and North Carolina first lady, Mrs. Jessie Rae Scott.

Included in the tour group will be Sen. McGovern's daughter, Terry, 23; Frances "Sissy" Farenthold, a candidate for governor in last spring's Texas primary and a nominee for vice president at the Democratic convention; Ethel Payne, a member of the Democratic National Committee; and Liz Carpenter, former press secretary to Mrs. Ladybird Johnson.

The second stop in Greenville will be at Wright Auditorium at 10:45 a.m., where talks will be heard.

"We're really hoping for a good turnout at Wright," said Doug Alcorn, McGovern's ECU campaign manager.

It is understood that a CBS news team is accompanying the caravan and that footage taken at this the first stop in North Carolina, will be used on the CBS "60 Minutes" program.

From here the caravan will move on to Wilson, Raleigh, Durham, Chapel Hill, Charlotte, Georgia, Alabama, and will end up in New Orleans, La where a candlelight rally will be held.

Operation Of Special Surgical
Unit Described At Board Meet

By CAROL TYLER
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt Memorial Hospital Board of Trustees heard about the hospital's special surgical unit last night.

This is a converted ward used for treatment of neurosurgically injured or diseased persons. Miss Sylvia Waters, who has been a nurse here since the unit was opened at the request of neurosurgeon, Dr. Ira Hardy, said that four is the usual number of patients in this unit, though she has had as many as seven with several infants in cribs. The unit is equipped with all the latest life-saving equipment and is manned at all times by a registered nurse and an assistant. It's a difficult unit on which to work because the death rate is high and patients here are always critically ill and families are usually distraught. About 20 per cent of their time is spent counseling families, she said.

Dr. Earl Trevathan pointed out that there is no place for nurses and families to talk other than the hall and that usually this has to be right in the doorway of the room because the nurse cannot let herself lose sight of the patient. The new hospital will have better facilities, it was pointed out.

The addition of several names to the list of ministers granted special visiting privileges was approved.

Trustee Kenneth Dews

suggested that whether Pitt Memorial is in line for the UNC Medical Education Program should be looked into before the first of the year.

Administrator Jack Richardson advised that plans are being made for students in Beaufort Technical Institute's Clinical Laboratory Assistants' Program to receive their practical training at Pitt Memorial.

Richardson said Robert Barnes has been hired as materials manager for the hospital. He will be in charge of keeping track of supplies.

The architects are completing working drawings of the new hospital and an April, 1973 date for beginning construction is still planned on, Richardson said.

Miss Jean Owens, formerly director of nurses, has been given the title, assistant administrator of nursing services, putting her on the same level with the hospital's two other assistant administrators.

Miss America Knows Where She's Going

By EVF SHARRUTT
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP) When Miss America goes out to lunch, she's invited back to the kitchen to meet the waiters.

Terry Ann Meeuwse, 23, newest in the 51-year lineup of beauties, graciously thanked the kitchen staff of a Madison Square Garden restaurant after a recent luncheon.

She had gone relatively unnoticed by men lunching around her, but the waiters knew a celebrity when they saw one.

Miss Meeuwse has shiny brown hair swinging below her shoulders and big hazel eyes. A native of Depere, Wis., she has been a professional entertainer and once sang with the New Christy Minstrels.

She says winning the pageant will help further her singing career with scholarships and personal appearance fees.

"What I'd like to do now," she said, "is come to New York after the year as Miss America, for a year of independent music and drama study with a private teacher."

"Of course, that year may modify my goals. But I want to see for myself what is involved in serious preparation for a singing career."

Terry feels that singing professionally as an individual may be a different thing from performing with a group or as part of a duo, which she has already done.

"The intense self-drive you'd have to have to be a success: I'm not sure I have it," she said. "I think it's more important to be able to sleep at night."

One of her first activities as Miss America was to condense contents of 16 pieces of luggage she brought to the pageant to two for traveling around the nation.

"I would have finished sooner if I hadn't started taking telephone calls," she said ruefully to her chaperone.

Terry will return to Atlantic City occasionally to renew or exchange one wardrobe item or another.

The new Miss America wears a silver bracelet engraved with the name of an American prisoner of war. She's worn it for about one year.

"I hope in traveling we get to Wyoming and meet his family," she said. "I have pictures of his children, and I've written them through VIVA, the POW wives organization. I've written the U.N. and Hanoi, too, but of course I haven't received any answers."

She Takes Mystique Out Of Cooking

By TOM HOGG
AP Newsfeatures Writer
Anna Muffoletto, a petite, attractive brunette of Sicilian extraction, has been unraveling the mysteries of European and Asian cooking for fellow New Yorkers over the past decade.

"I believe in taking the mystique out of the kitchen and making people understand what they are cooking," said Miss Muffoletto, who formerly taught home economics at Hunter College and now runs her own cooking school, the Cordon Bleu of Gourmet Gallery, on New York's upper east side.

"After all, it is not as complicated as some of these experts try to make it sound," she went on. "In fact I can teach some of the most complicated recipes to a child."

Miss Muffoletto likes to have her students get the feel and flavor of foreign cookery first hand.

"This fall," she said, "I will take my classes on tours of Middle East spice shops, let them browse through Italian noodle and sausage factories and visit Greek bakeries and Japanese grocery stores. We will also poke our noses into the cooking pots of a Greek taverna and an Italian trattoria."

Miss Muffoletto also believes there is a good deal of snobbery about the superiority of foreign wines, fine as they may be.

"I use a lot of domestic wine for both cooking and drinking," she said, "and I have found the wines of America are shaping up very well with their foreign cousins. They may not be on a par with the great imports, but they are good table wines, perfectly suited to every day dining."

Our friend is also a firm believer in the theory that you should use the same wines for cooking that you do for drinking.

"There is no sense in spoiling a good dish by seasoning it with an inferior wine," she said.

Miss Muffoletto decided back in 1960 that it was time she paid a visit to the land of her Sicilian forbears. "My first visit was just 72 years after my grandparents had left for America," she recalled. "I went to the community of Cefalu where they were born and walked along the narrow streets, inhaling the fragrance of the olive and orange trees."

Miss Muffoletto said Sicilian cooking differed considerably from the cuisine of Italy.

"It is influenced by Greek and Arab cuisines," she said. "As well as by those of Italy, France and Spain. And it is not coarse or heavy as some foreigners imagine."

Pork has long been a mainstay on Sicilian dinner tables and it is fixed in many ways. Here is a recipe Miss Muffoletto brought back with her.

PORK CUTLETS IN MARSALA WINE

1 1/2 pounds pork cutlets 1/2 inch thick
Flour
Salt and black pepper
1-3rd cup chopped salt pork
2 cloves garlic, cut in half
1 cup dry Marsala wine
8 slices prosciutto (Italian ham)

Pound cutlets thin with meat mallet. Dredge in flour mixed with salt and pepper. Fry salt pork in skillet with garlic five minutes. Add cutlets and fry five minutes on each side. Discard excess grease. Stir in wine and simmer 10 minutes. Cover each cutlet with 1 slice ham, cover and simmer 5 minutes more. Discard garlic. Arrange meat on platter and pour sauce down center of meat. Serves 4 to 6. Good with a Sicilian white wine, such as Val di Lupo.

Terry hopes there will be no American men fighting in Vietnam next summer, when Miss America has traditionally visited the troops there.

"But if we do have to go, I hope we can go to Thailand too—I'm the adopted mother of a child there. I help support him through a Christian aid program."

Already busy with a hectic schedule of personal appearances, Terry is a VIP as Miss America. She has a new wardrobe from New York designers, but no new hairdo. The Toni company, one of the pageant's sponsors, is evidently pleased with the way she looks now. She won't be hair-sprayed and teased into a different coiffure.

Terry will be very much "herself" during her reign as Miss America, and that pleases her.

The official pageant chaperone isn't sitting across the table at lunch correcting her statements, or reinterpreting her remarks.

"I really admire all the Miss Americas who have gone before, but it's still important to remain myself," Terry added. "I can say whatever I want, and I plan to do so."

The most difficult job Terry has acquired with her title is that of "instant expert."

She said, "It's very strange. One day, you can shout your head off about your own opinions on things and nobody listens. The next day, people demand your views on everything from women's lib to politics."

Women Seek That Ideal Man

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer
Women's Lib is not about to kill off that age-old search for "a big strong man who will take a girl away from it all." The hunt is still on as this letter indicates:

"Many months ago I read about a 26-year-old bachelor and the kind of wife he is seeking. But where do you find such a man? I've been looking ever since and haven't met a single eligible man who is older than 21. I am 22 and I don't want to be a career girl and live alone as my sister is doing. She can't get dates either, except with married men, and she doesn't want that..."

Interest in the 26-year-old bachelor's ideas got underway some time ago when his "startling" ideas about marriage were discussed informally with a group of women and recorded by the press.

It intrigued many girls to visualize themselves as "that girl." "I can wear his glass slipper," as one girl put it. And the Cinderella letters are still coming.

The bachelor had said he and his friends "didn't like the modern (girl) package." He was seeking a girl "happy she is a girl"... interested in a home... able to cook and enjoy it... cheerful and positive... a good sport... a team mate... a money watcher... one who would respect him and make him feel important. In return his wife could do pretty much what she wanted to do.

A 26-year-old Dallas girl applauded the idea, pointing out she would like "to marry a guy who is willing to make a living for me so I can stay home and raise a family." A San Francisco girl confided, "it has been difficult to meet a man who will do the cigar smoking and allow a woman to be feminine and a mother to his children." Another California girl confirmed "... if you've heard there is a shortage of bachelors in California, it is all too true..."

But a 22-year-old Tucson girl was optimistic—"if there is such a man eligible, others might exist, so I'll keep looking." A Gaffney, S.C., student had found many, but she was pessimistic. Most of the bachelors she had met were dedicated to "seeing how far they could go with their dates." Her description of "an all-MAN husband" is one who accepts responsibilities, is neat, understanding, willing to share her interests and ask her to accompany him on business trips and dinner engagements...

Only two girls resented the bachelor's requirement. A 24-year-old Chicago girl insisted "the modern package in men isn't so great, either, so there"... although, she, too, would like to meet "an old-fashioned man..."

But an Oceanside, L.I., woman wanted to know why a 26-year-old bachelor wanted to get married anyway. "Why doesn't he look in pet shops for a companion—dogs and cats can be feminine, enjoy a good home, and will drop everything to join in what he wants to do. They will make him feel important, and will be economical to keep."

"And if Buster wants a good cook," she added, "I would suggest he look in the classified ads under domestic help."

Some letters from men attempted to explain why the male sex continued to be elusive. A Grand Blanc, Mich., man, 27, agreed with the bachelor, but concludes that girls are "playing hard to get." He admits, paradoxically, "if a girl is easy to make a date with, most guys wouldn't think of marrying her..."

A 43-year-old bachelor from Spartanburg, S.C., had his say, also. He provided a little insight into what one man thinks is wrong with today's girl. A lawyer, nonsmoker, nondrinker, 6 ft. 2, with heavy wavy hair, a veteran, conservative dresser, he is interested in sports, drama, writing, magic, American Indian culture, pets, tree planting and reading. He has been told by friends that marriage is the one thing he needs "to be completely rounded," but he can't find the right girl.

"Girls are not dependable. They think nothing of breaking dates...they judge a man by the worth of his car rather than his character." He would gladly share his devotion, sincerity, honesty, money and property, "she would be queen, I would be king"—if he were to find the right girl. But it must work both ways.

Through the years he has found girls between the ages of 18 and 27 "the most difficult to get along with." Too spoiled. One 29-year-old girl accused him of "not understanding her." Another girl terminated their romance by writing him, "you are too kind to say so, but I think our personalities do not blend too well..." He did share that view.

"I am completely for marriage but I think my high ideals have caused frustrations. If there are good girls around desiring to meet good men, I am encouraged..."

And that kind of puts the glass slipper on the other foot.

Booking No Way To Help Hubby Get Ahead

By Abigail Van Buren

(© 1973 by Charles Tyburn-M. Y. House, Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: My husband owns several large factories and he had in mind promoting a bright young man to a responsible executive position.

We invited him and his wife for a weekend at our summer place. The wife arrived with an armload of paper-back books, and during the time she and I were alone, instead of visiting with me, she read continuously, stopping only for meals!

I was amazed, as I am considered good company, and can converse on any number of subjects.

The problem is not that I was antagonized by this young woman's extreme rudeness, but my husband's organization holds many social get-togethers to which the wives are invited, and courtesy is a requirement.

Because wives are now being carefully looked at before promoting their husbands, should I tell my husband he would be making a big mistake to promote that young man?

BOSS' WIFE

DEAR WIFE: If you really want to help your husband, don't put the kibosh on a bright young man who could be an asset to his organization. Instead, tell the wife in a friendly manner that her conduct last weekend is no way to help her husband to get ahead. Perhaps she didn't intend to be rude, but was overwhelmed and frightened by "the boss' wife," and took refuge behind her books.

DEAR ABBY: I've been sleeping with a piece of wedding cake under my pillow every night since June 17 because I heard it would get me a man. Is this true?

ALWAYS A BRIDESMAID

DEAR ALWAYS: I can't guarantee you a man. But you'll get plenty of ants!

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I went to a place that sold yard ornaments — cement bird baths, ducks, deers, etc. A teen-aged boy in charge said his parents owned the place, but they were both gone, and we were welcome to look around. We found a deer we liked and asked the boy how much it was. He looked up the price in a book and told us it was $19.95. We gave him the cash, he gave us a receipt, and we took the deer home.

A few days later we received a postcard informing us that the price of the deer we purchased should have been $22.95 and we should either send them $3 or bring the deer back.

Abby, if their son quoted us the wrong price, it wasn't our fault, was it? Do you think we should send them $3 or return the deer? We think we are . . .

IN THE RIGHT

DEAR IN: I think you are "in the right," too. Furthermore, they're lucky they didn't pay more "dearly" for their son's mistake.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "I COULD WRITE A BOOK IN YAKIMA": You did. And the next time you cry over split milk, please condense it.

Problems? Trust Abby. For a personal reply, write to ABBY, BOX 69700, L. A., CALIF. 90000 and enclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

For Abby's new booklet, "What Teen-Agers Want to Know," send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90000.

One More Barrier Is Removed

It has been a long wait, but finally the Soviet Union's lend lease debt to the United States dating back to World War II — has been settled.

The settlement will call for the Soviet Union to pay off about $500 million over a 30 year period. The original lend lease debt was $11 billion but this has been gradually reduced over the years.

Of course, the actual cash pay off is of no great significance in itself. The U. S. and the Soviets were engaged in fighting a common enemy — Hitler's Germany — during World War II. While the United States was bearing much of the cost, devastating fighting was going on in the Soviet Union and much of the country was destroyed.

What is important is that the settling of lend lease is another step in improving relations between the capitalistic and communistic giants of the world. A maritime accord was signed by the two governments and a general trade pact is expected soon.

An era of trade between the Soviet Union and the United States should be advantageous to both nations. Each has resources and products which the other needs and these agreements open vast new markets for both.

Settlement of lend lease had been a problem of long standing between the two countries. Now it appears to be solved and another barrier to better relations between the countries will be removed.

Footballer Has Another Field

By BRYAN HANSLIP
RALEIGH — His children give John Baker plenty of room when he's watching football on the living room television set.

BRYAN HANSLIP

If they get too close, he may know 'em over when he throws up a forearm for a block or jumps to his feet in vicarious involvement with the game.

Memories of his own playing career come on strong with the images from the TV screen, confessed Baker. He hung up his helmet a couple of seasons ago after 12 years as a defensive end in the pros.

Autumn weather rekindles the excitement and awakens the old urge. "There's no use for me to sit here and tell a lie," said Baker, gazing into the October sunshine outside the window of his office as a member of the state parole board.

"Sure, I miss football this time of year. I miss it very much."

The athlete's discipline keeps his mind from dwelling on the past. His present is filled with the duties of the team effort it takes to give those sidelined by society for infractions of the rules another chance to get in the game of life.

Parole Gives Opportunity
Parole is the opportunity route for the transition from the corrections system to the community, Baker affirmed. It provides the supervision which can ease the hard adjustments, he explained.

Statistics measure its success. Approximately 21 per cent of inmates who go out on parole come back to prison; the figure is 75 to 80 per cent for those who serve their sentences and are released without supervision, he said.

North Carolina now has close to 6,000 men and women on parole, Baker said. The program could be expanded and made more effective, he added, if the staff of parole officers were increased. Funds to do so will be asked at the next legislature.

The present caseload is 50 to 60 parolees for each officer to supervise. "That's too many for anyone to handle. I'd like to see it lowered so that the parole officer can spend more time with each case," he explained.

Football schooled Baker in the team concept. The essential elements, he said, are individual performance and mutual reliance.

Team Approach Applies

The idea applies to society. The corrections system has a job to do in rehabilitation. The community must be willing to accept the person who has paid his debt. In the last analysis, the individual himself must make his way against the odds.

Family background directed Baker to sports and law enforcement. His father played and coached college football, later joined the Raleigh police department.

Baker scrambled in sandlot football, made the team in high school, and starred on the gridiron for North Carolina Central University at Durham. He played in the All-Stars game in Chicago, and was drafted for the pros by Los Angeles. He spent four years with the Rams, then was traded to the Pittsburgh Steelers where he played seven years. He closed out his pro career with Detroit.

Son Follows Footsteps

A third generation may be on the way. At 9, his son, John, has the typical youngster's enthusiasm for football plus the advantage of his Dad's coaching.

The neighborhood kids gather quickly when Baker's in the yard throwing the ball with his son. "We choose sides and play a game," he related. "I'll play a while with one side, then with the other."

How far his son goes with the game is his own decision to make, said Baker. What he tries to instill, he added, is that education must come first.

Sports cultivates values beyond physical skill; it teaches goal-setting, self discipline, and teamwork for achievement. Still, after playing days are over the athlete must be fitted for some useful role in life, he insisted.

He started working in corrections during the off-season while playing pro ball. He traveled to prison camps, setting up recreation programs. Football broke the ice with inmates. After rehearsing games of the past season, Baker could easily move to talking with them about their own future.

Baker, 6-6 and 35 years old, keeps his playing weight of 260 pounds by running five or six miles every day. It's tough, but necessary to stay in shape, he said.

The Bakers make an unusual team in the state's corrections system. He is one of the three members of the parole board; she is superintendent of the women's corrections center.

"Our friends kid us," Baker chuckled. "They say Juanita's job is keeping 'em in, and mine is getting 'em out."

A Reminder The Leaf Sale Season Is Ending

An indication of how quickly tobacco is sold came with the announcement yesterday that Washington would be the first market to close on the Eastern Belt.

It is expected to be followed quickly by a number of other markets whose sales are now dwindling and soon another selling season will be over.

Tobacco moves from the farmers to buying companies rapidly these days. There seems to be little reason to hold tobacco in hopes of higher prices later in the season.

Old Issue Has Been Sidelined

By JOHN KILGO

RALEIGH — For the first time in six years it appears that liquor-by-the-drink won't be a paralyzing issue in the 1973 North Carolina Legislature.

That's the opinion I received from talking with both wets and dries across the state—and from questioning the two major gubernatorial candidates.

First, make no mistake about one thing. Democrat Skipper Bowles and Republican Jim Holshouser, both hoping to be the next Governor of North Carolina, are treating the liquor-by-the-drink issue the way one would treat a cornered wildcat. They're moving to the other side of the house.

Said Holshouser: "Liquor-by-the-drink would be a legislative matter and I would stay completely out of it as Governor."

Said Roy Parker, a spokesman for Bowles: "I know Skipper's not going to push for anything in regard to liquor-by-the-drink. He's going to leave it to the legislature."

Mecklenburg Sen. Herman Moore has been pushing for liquor-by-the-drink legislation for his county for about eight years. He does not see it as a major issue this time and is not at all optimistic about winning legislative approval.

"From the preliminary tally I've made," Moore told me, "the odds seem very slim that mixed drink legislation will pass in 1973. I'm relatively certain it'll come up but I hope it doesn't develop into a major issue, as you define major issues. It's not important in comparison to other major issues that will be facing the legislature next year."

Marse Grant, editor of the Biblical Recorder and a fierce and tenacious opponent of mixed drink legislation, sounded like a very confident man when we talked with him about the matter.

"I would say liquor-by-the-drink has evolved into a minor issue," Grant told me, "because there doesn't appear to be anyone of a strong leadership stature to push for it this time. Hugh Morton doesn't appear to be on the horizon to be the leader for it this time. Holshouser and Bowles won't aggressively seek the legislation. There is no indication that the presiding officer of the Senate or the Speaker of the House would aggressively seek it. And some people who worked for liquor-by-the-drink in 1971 were defeated at the polls in primaries this year."

Grant says liquor-by-the-drink forces are weaker than they've been in several years. He also says the people are tired of the issue and he adds: "I think perhaps the General Assembly is weary of it."

If however, liquor-by-the-drink evolves into a major issue, Grant says the dries are better prepared than ever to defeat it.

"We would work closely with the Christian Action League," he says. "We would be very prepared to work against any such legislation."

The last legislature gave Mecklenburg and Moore counties the right to vote on local option liquor-by-the-drink bills. Moore County defeated the measure, while it passed by an overwhelming margin in Mecklenburg.

However, the State Supreme Court ruled that the local option bill was unconstitutional. Some wets believe a local option bill for every county in the state would be the only procedure that would meet constitutional requirements and they confess this would face tough riding in the General Assembly.

One leader of the wets told me, however: "Mixed drink legislation will be introduced in 1973. It would be to our advantage to play it down, to sort of play possum. But when it is introduced, I hope we'll be able to vote on it quickly and forego all the emotion and rhetoric that have marked the debates of the past."

These figures suggest that the House of Representatives, in resisting the earlier Senate vote to allow states to spend up to $800 million of funds from the $7 billion Highway Trust Fund for improving rail rapid transit, lags behind the general public in recognizing the urgent need for a balanced national transportation system.

To be sure, the public has not yet caught up in practice with what it seems to be preaching to pollsters. Only 4 percent of the population has traveled more than 100 miles on a train in the last year. But there, too, things are changing.

Amtrak reports that thanks to its program of upgrading equipment, tightening schedules, computerizing ticketing and reservation service, adding luxury touches, accepting credit cards and promoting travel tours, the 20-year decline of rail passenger service has been halted. Last May and June, ridership totals increased 13.7 percent over those months in 1971.

We detect a new trend in all of this and we welcome it. Now let the Congress, which is deadlocked over the use of highway trust monies for public rail transit, act in accord with the wider vision of the traveling public.

Strength For Today

NOBODY OF DISTINCTION

Jesus, the man who has changed the whole course of history, was himself uneducated. He began his great movement for transforming the world by gathering about him men of no education or position.

What would most of us have done had we stood in the position in which Jesus stood two thousand years ago? Undoubtedly we would have tried to draw to us the best and most experienced minds of our time. Given the task of changing the face of the earth we would have sought for bigness, education and high position. But Jesus did precisely the opposite. He gathered about himself a group of nobodies.

Would anyone but Jesus have thought of founding his church on a man like Peter? How anomalous is the fact that living in an age of sophistication and culture Jesus did not choose as a helper a single sophisticated or cultured man. The noble leaders of that time probably laughed ironically at the rag-tag Jesus gathered around him and the pretense he made of world conquest. This man, we can hear them say, is really ridiculous. Who does he think he is and what does he think he can accomplish through the riffraff that follows along after him?

Well—read history? Peter, the Big Fisherman, looms large on the pages of history. And so do his associates.

Curbing The Old Nixon

WASHINGTON — It took the President's White House staff all day to locate the Old Nixon. They finally found him at Howard Johnson's across the street from the Watergate, eating a meat loaf sandwich.

"You'd better get back to the White House right away," John Ehrlichman told him, "the boss is really steaming."

When the Old Nixon walked into the President's office, he found the New Nixon in a rage.

"I've just received information that you're behind the Dirty Tricks Department of the Committee for the Re-Election of the President. What do you have to say for yourself?"

"I refuse to comment as I don't want to prejudice the rights of the defendants in the Watergate bugging trial."

"Don't hand me that stuff," the President said. "You've put me in a helluva spot! How could you do it to me?"

"Ah, come on. You're overreacting. We were just having a little fun with the Democrats. No one takes it seriously," the Old Nixon said.

"But we didn't," the New Nixon said. "We're ahead by 28 per cent in the polls. It makes us look cheap and unscrupulous."

The Old Nixon retorted, "Sure, you can say that now. But at the time we started the intelligence operation no one knew what was going to happen. Suppose it had been real close? Our Dirty Tricks Department could have made the difference. You've been President so long you don't even understand politics any more."

"And you've been out of it so long," the New Nixon said. "You don't understand I am more interested in my place in history than I am in some rotten espionage operation against the other political party. I'm being clobbered in the press by all this publicity."

"Will you stop worrying about your place in history? We took a survey, and it showed that the public couldn't care less about the Watergate and the other things that have come out concerning our operation. The attitude is 'Everyone does it during an election year.'"

"That's just swell," the New Nixon said sarcastically. "But do you know how many man-hours the Justice Department, the FBI and the White House have spent on this problem? I've had to promise a complete and open investigation of every facet of the case."

"And you've done a good job on it, Dickey boy," the Old Nixon chortled. "They won't be able to lay a finger on us before Election Day."

"Don't be so smug," the New Nixon said. "You've made a mess of things, and I'm giving you an order to stay out of the offices of the Committee for the Re-Election of the President. I don't want anyone in the White House to have anything to do with my campaign."

"You can't do that to me," the Old Nixon protested. "The Dirty Tricks Department was my baby. It was the only fun I've had in four years. What am I going to do now?"

"You're to stay in your room until Election Day," the New Nixon said firmly.

"Suppose I don't? Suppose I spill everything to The School Can Be Simple

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — Most adults smugly feel that the education they got is better than the one their children are getting.

Since most of them have forgotten three-fourths of what they learned in school, that would be hard to prove.

But if the purpose of education is to prepare the student for life as it is, then all present educational systems should be scrapped and a new start made.

Here are suggested changes for such a program from a man somewhat disillusioned to find that the formal learning he received hardly qualified him to cope with the problems in living he ran up against later:

Except for students intending to specialize in certain fields, all advanced courses in science, mathematics, art, music, rug weaving and square dancing would be dropped.

So would all ancient or modern foreign languages. The only language studied would be the English language or, rather, the American version of it.

This would be divided into two branches: (A), the writing and understanding of useful English, and (B), the writing and understanding of Government English. A special course in how to solve crossword puzzles and acrostics would be presented. The writing of poetry would be allowed but not encouraged, and no prizes given for it.

After mastering his ABC's, the student would have no further dealings with arithmetic except in these general courses: how to figure out grocery store prices, how to make a bank account balance, how to balance an unbalanced family budget, and how to fill out income tax returns—local, state and national.

After a basic course in psychology, each male student would spend eight years studying how to get along with a woman, each female student would spend eight years studying how to get along with a

Forty Years Ago Today

By GWYN COGHILL
October 18, 1932

The tobacco district of Greenville suffered another staggering loss from fire last night when the Banner Warehouse, constructed by the Co-operative Tobacco Association here several years ago, was destroyed by a blaze of undetermined origin along with about a million pounds of tobacco. The loss was estimated at about $175,000. Buildings around the warehouse also received considerable damage. The fire was the third disastrous one suffered by tobacco town the last two years. The warehouse of Smith and Sugg and the McGowan and Cannon Warehouse were consumed by fire several months ago.

It was annual "Ladies Night" with members of the Greenville Rotary Club last night. Wives and sweethearts were treated to one of the most delightful programs in years.

Higher Spending And Savings

By JOHN CUNIFF

AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — In a prolonged burst of financial activity that has bankers wondering what he is up to, the ordinary American householder is borrowing more, spending more and saving more this year than in a long time.

House, car and furniture makers are among the chief beneficiaries of the spending. Banks and savings and loan associations are being aided by both borrowing and saving. And U.S. Savings Bond sales are strong.

Commenting on the unusual combination, First National City Bank predicts that "it is unlikely that all three of these geysers will continue to gush at their recent pace."

But what then? It is harder to predict, says First City, "what people will do with the 'extra' $10-$30 billion per year they are now socking away in savings accounts."

At the same time those savings accounts are bulging, so is the amount of household debt. In the years 1968-1970, nonfederal debt ranged around $90 billion a year. Last year it jumped to $130 billion, and is expected to exceed that in 1972.

Of this $130 billion in debt, about two-thirds belongs to households and one-third to business.

"For the first time since the early 1960s," says First City, "household debt is growing significantly faster than consumer income."

Despite the vigor of current borrowing, the bank believes that a continuation of debt buildup is unlikely.

It gives as the first reason the almost predictable slowing in the need for household assets such as cars, appliances and furniture. This slowing, it feels, will be partially offset by a tendency to acquire stocks, bonds and other financial assets.

The bank says it is "natural" to expect that the savings rate too will moderate along with borrowing and spending.

The flow of funds into savings accounts and U.S. Savings Bonds since late 1970 is termed "extraordinary" by the bank.

As a result, the savings accounts of millions of Americans are more flush than ever, and the question arises as to what they intend to do with those savings.

First City didn't suggest it, but one possibility is that they might decide to pay off some of those debts.

Poll Results Differ, But Closely Studied Anyhow

By CARL P. LEUBSDORF
AP Political Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Last Sunday, top aides of Sen. George McGovern's presidential campaign made available the result of the latest California sampling by their own pollster, Patrick Caddell, showing President Nixon with a three-point lead in the nation's largest state.

A day later, the independent Field Poll came out, showing Nixon with a 14-point lead. McGovern aides, while challenging the results, conceded privately that the Field results were a psychological setback.

In 1972, more than in any previous national election, politicians and reporters are taking polls, scrutinizing the results and making comparisons, though knowing the whole exercise has several fatal flaws.

None of the polls purport to show more than the standing on the day of the sampling. The in-home interviewers decry the telephone pollsters and vice versa. And the McGovern camp, whose polls were relatively accurate in the spring, can't understand the disparity in the fall and the inclination of many to dismiss their results as self-serving.

In California, for example, where Caddell's polling between Oct. 9 and 11 showed Nixon with a 45-42 lead, Field's polling in the first week of October put the President ahead 50 to 36, compared with a 49-41 lead two months earlier.

An independent poll in late September by Dorothy Corey showed Nixon's lead at approximately 43 to 37. And the McGovern camp insisted a recent Republican poll actually showed Nixon a point behind.

The same pattern shows up elsewhere.
In Michigan, where the most recent Detroit News poll gave Nixon a 52-37 lead, Caddell's findings showed a nine-point swing from Nixon to McGovern since last August. Then, Nixon led 57 to 31; now, the tally is 48 to 40.

At the same time, the Yankelovich poll for The New York Times and Time magazine showed the President with a 50-28 lead in a state he lost four years ago.

Similarly, in Illinois, Yankelovich's figures were 60 to 24 for Nixon. Caddell's were 51 to 34 for the President, compared with an earlier tally of 63 to 27.

In New York, Yankelovich's sampling showed Nixon with a lopsided 50-33 lead in another state he had never before carried. Caddell, however, put the gap at only 50 to 39. McGovern aides noted that, in neither case, did Nixon have more than 50 per cent.

In every case, the McGovern polls showed the Democratic candidate behind—but by a smaller degree than the independent polls and within the range that McGovern aides like to call "striking distance."

At the same time, the national polls were showing very little change in the big Nixon lead, a major disappointment to McGovern aides who had talked about moving to within 15 points of the President by early October and to within 5 points later in the month.

The new Gallup Poll showed Nixon's August lead of 64 to 30 had only dropped eight points to 60 to 34. The latest Yankelovich figures were 57 to 27.

The McGovern camp notes, however, that the polls were all taken before McGovern's Oct. 10 Vietnam speech, which set off increased financial contributions that aides hope will pre-empt a pickup in his support.

One of the main consolations for the McGovern camp was that the White House is disinclined to think that the election will be as lopsided as polls currently show.

Many national polls tend to obscure state-by-state differences under which, some of the more optimistic McGovern aides claim, their candidate could somehow piece together an electoral vote majority of the needed 270 with narrow victories in big states while losing the over-all popular vote because of massive defeats in other states.

Sick Barmaid Balked Robber

BALTIMORE (AP) — Barmaid Dorothy Carroll wasn't feeling well when a gunman entered her bar, held a pistol to her head and ordered, "Open the cash register and give me the money."

"I'm sick. Get it your self," she muttered without leaving her stool.

The robber hesitantly glanced about and decided to leave empty-handed.

"I wasn't scared ... I was just sick and wasn't moving for anybody," she explained.

Chilean Curfew Snares Scores

By LUIS MARTINEZ
Associated Press Writer
SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Patrols arrested scores of tardy pedestrians and motorists early today after President Salvador Allende ordered a nightly curfew in Santiago because of a week of strikes, street protests and violence.

Many of those arrested were allowed to go home after identifying themselves or convincing authorities they had not heard of the curfew. It was not immediately known how many others spent the night in neighborhood jails.

The midnight-to-6 a.m. curfew was the first major action taken by the government since it declared a state of emergency in a majority of the provinces last Thursday. Widespread unrest was sparked by a truckers' strike which touched off a crippling wave of walkouts by small businessmen, doctors, lawyers, students and industrial and commercial workers. All oppose the Marxist president's plans to convert Chile to socialism.

President Allende warned Tuesday that the situation was leading the nation "to the brink of civil war. His opponents said his administration is "strangling private activities and liberties." But so far the government has not carried out its threat to take over businesses and shops closed by the strikes.

The government announced today that it had averted strikes by the bus and taxi owners' unions.
Ash trays and glasses were thrown Tuesday night in the Chamber of Deputies as it debated a Communist party motion to censure officers of the chamber, who are all members of the opposition. Nobody was hurt, and the motion was voted down 67-37. The opposition has a majority in both the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate.

Hearing Aid Course Set

Pitt Technical Institute will offer a 45-offer hearing aid consultant course, beginning Thursday at 7 p.m. in room 111.

The course will meet for a three-hour session each week from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. for 15 sessions.

The primary objective of the course is to train interested adults in the techniques of fitting and selling hearing aids, and to assist one in preparing to successfully pass the North Carolina State Hearing Aid Dealers and Fitters Board Examination.

Course content will cover the various types of hearing disorders, properties and dimensions of sound, structure and function of the ear, psychology of deafness, familiarization, use and analysis of hearing tests and testing devices, selection and fitting of various types of hearing aids and ear impressions, client and consultant relations and salesmanship.

There is no charge for the instructional training. The textbook cost is $12.

"Don't threaten me, Tricky," the New Nixon said. "If you do anything to further embarrass me or endanger my re-election, I will turn over to Richard Kleindienst everything I know about your involvement with the Howard Hughes loan. Do I make myself perfectly clear?"

The Old Nixon, looking downcast and defeated, said, "Yes sir, Mr. President."

man.
Since everything in modern life breaks down, every student would spend up to half his time in school learning how to fix things—from toilets to television sets, from zippers to governments.

There would be no essays written on subjects such as "The View from My Window," or "The Most Exciting Thing That Happened to Me During My Vacation." Instead, the students would concentrate on filling out forms of all kinds, and answering the silly questions on them. A prize would be given to the member of each class who managed to crowd the longest explanation into the shortest possible space.

In the last year at college, every student would also be required to take the following subjects—"How to Butter Up Anybody in Order to Get More Bread," "How to Drag Your Feet Successfully in Any Situation," and "How to Write a Job Career Resume before You've Had Any Career to Speak Of."

Just for laughs, a course would be offered on "How to Be a Human Being in a Time When Most People Act More Like Antic Animals."

The graduate of such an educational system might not know very much, but he sure would be equipped for today's living. And isn't that what it's all about?

JANE, CLOSE THE REFRIGERATOR DOOR. QUICK.

You'll be on your way to a slimmer figure in more ways than one.
Because it's not the economical electricity you use that gets your bill out of shape; it's the electricity you waste. That refrigerator door you held open again. Those full loads of hot hot water for a dishwasher that's only half full. The front porch light that's been on since you came home from the movies last night.

Tips to help you reduce wastes like these—and get the most for your electric dollar—are what our new money-saving booklet is all about. It's called "How to Save on Your Electric Bill," it's available free at any Vepco office—and it's full of simple money-saving suggestions for every room in the house.

Today's electricity is more convenient than ever, but we want you to enjoy the economy, too. So we hope you'll make it a point to stop by or call for your copy of "How to Save on Your Electric Bill" soon.

It's the answer to a waste-watcher's prayer.

American Wife Of Vietnamese Has Few Luxuries

By ANN BLACKMAN
Associated Press Writer
GIA DINH, Vietnam (AP) — Judy Linebaugh Han lives in a two-bedroom apartment overlooking a pig slaughterhouse just outside Saigon, half a world away from the dairy farm in Lyons, Mich., where she grew up.

At 25, one of a handful of American women who have married Vietnamese men, Mrs. Han doesn't share the comparative luxury that softens the life of many Americans in this war-ravaged country.

In the four years since she moved to Vietnam, after graduation from Michigan State University, she has heard of only two other such couples.

"They're used to GIs with Vietnamese girls—this is the reverse," she observes.

For a woman who is neither fluent in the language nor accustomed to the culture, living here is far from easy. Her only extravagances are two small refrigerators in the kitchen and a small Japanese washing machine that fits in the bathroom. Her husband drives their Jeep-like Vietnamese car to work, leaving her isolated in this dusty suburb.

"There are many problems," she said, pointing to dirt alleys smelling of garbage that surround the four-story apartment building. "I walk on the street with Han and the kids, and people stare or want to touch the children's white skin. I get tired of it."

"There's no backyard, no place for the children to play. There's no hot water in the building. I get mad when the electricity goes off, especially on hot days like today because the fan won't work."

But for Mrs. Han, these complaints are minor. She has no interest in leaving Vietnam and doesn't plan to go back to the United States.

"I don't think I want to live there again," she said. "It's too big. Life is simple here. My life here is very peaceful. That sounds strange when there's a war going on, but the war doesn't affect us much."

At night in their simply furnished living room they can hear helicopters and also the artillery fire outside the city—often close enough to shake the apartment building—but she pays scant attention.

Khoi, their 2-year-old son, scarcely notices the soldiers who guard street corners near their home—"He's used to them; he sees soldiers all the time."

Mrs. Han said she wants to bring her children up as Americans. Khoi, who was born in Vietnam, is considered a citizen by both countries. When their second child was expected Mrs. Han dipped into her savings to pay for a plane ticket home. Eric was born four months ago in the United States.

"I want to teach my children about truth and freedom in America," she said. "I like freedom. I want them to know it, too. I want them to be imaginative and creative."

A supporter of President Nixon's Vietnam policies, she hopes to see him re-elected. She has registered at the American embassy for an absentee ballot. Nixon's book "Six Crises," is one of the few volumes in the Han bookcase.

Mrs. Han said her children are bigger than most Vietnamese their age. She attributes it partly to the fact they eat more meat than Vietnamese.

Because she doesn't share commissary or post-exchange privileges enjoyed by most American families here, most of the American products she prefers come from the black market. She figures she spends about 7,000 piasters or $16 a week for food.

Her husband often does the grocery shopping. As a Vietnamese, he can more easily bargain for better prices.

The husband, Huynh Han, has two jobs to support his family. He heads the investment department in an industrial development bank and works part-time for a new firm that promotes management training among the Vietnamese. He makes about 100,000 piasters or $230 a month, a good salary by Vietnamese standards.

Judy Han said she might like to send their children to study in America, or possibly New Zealand, where she and her husband met when they were university students.

"I want to bring up my children in such a way as they can be self-confident and independent," she said. "To me that's important."

Non-Renewal Count Down

RALEIGH (AP) — Non-renewals of auto liability policies in North Carolina by insurance companies are running about 30 per cent lower than last year on the basis of figures for the first two quarters of 1972.

Hugh R. Owen, an attorney for the state Insurance Department, said in an interview Tuesday a law enacted by the 1971 legislature making it tougher for insurance companies to renew liability policies apparently is producing results.

Under the 1971 law, arbitrary non-renewal of an auto liability insurance policy is prohibited except for specific reasons. These include use of a vehicle to commit a felony, operating it under the influence of alcohol or drugs, leaving the scene of an accident involving the insured, and nonpayment.

Owen said there were 5,100 non-renewals each quarter last year, compared to an average of 3,600 in 1972.

He added, "After the law has run a full year I think you'll see a substantial drop in non-renewals."

Gospel Lads At Washington Mall

Holshouser Says Legislature Often Rubber Stamp

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Jim Holshouser, who resigned after eight years in the legislature to become the Republican candidate for governor of North Carolina, says it's a myth to think that the legislature as now constituted is a powerful body. While campaigning Tuesday, he said the lawmakers must have access to more original research, to prevent dependence on lobbyists. "The legislature too often acts as a rubber stamp because it doesn't have the information and the research to find out what the facts are," the lawyer from Boone told the annual convention of the North Carolina Association of Broadcasters in Wilmington. He supported as other steps toward legislative modernization annual sessions instead of the present biennial meetings, and electronic voting machines which would speed up voting and make it easier to put every member on record. He also said there is a need for legislative ethics. As a member of the House he supported measures to require legislators to report outside income.

His Democratic opponent, Hargrove "Skipper" Bowles, also addressed the broadcasters. The candidates crossed paths twice at the convention motel, and ribbed each other at brief and pleasant meetings. The second time, Holshouser grabbed Bowles by the arm and said with a smile, "We're going to have a wrestling match. We'll have a debate after all." Bowles has refused to debate Holshouser. Bowles' press aide, Terry Leedom, said later, "We have refused to debate because we feel the debate would become involved in personalities. Why debate when you're ahead? But of course we never requested debate when we were behind Pat Taylor in the polls." Bowles defeated Taylor, the lieutenant governor, for the Democratic nomination.

Bowles, a Greensboro businessman, told a news conference in Wilmington that means must be found to help any qualified candidate, no matter what his income, to get his story told. Bowles has spent more than a million dollars since he announced for governor a year ago.

He told the broadcasters there should be stiffer penalties for persons convicted of drunken driving.

Jesse Helms, Republican candidate for the Senate, found his 11 years as an editorialist for a Raleigh TV paying off in recognition on the street. Time after time in Tarboro Tuesday people responded to his outstretched hand with such words as, "I know you. I saw you on TV," or "You're just like you were on television."

At Rocky Mount, Helms pledged to support all programs beneficial to agriculture. He said in the predominantly agricultural section of eastern North Carolina that efforts had been made to discredit his stand on farm subsidies, but "don't you believe it. I support every such program of benefit to our farmers." The rally drew a standing-room-only crowd in a banquet room which seats more than 400.

The Democratic nominee for the Senate, Rep. Nick Galifianakis, said in High Point that Helms' editorials "have been so negative they are beginning to surface as negative thinking."

"He's been against everything and everybody so long that it includes President Nixon. His large, paid political advertising is negative in its approach."

"You have to stop and think: 'Well, when a man doesn't have his own credentials and his own merit to talk about...how does attacking me qualify him for the highest legislative office in this land?'"

Lecturer To Plan To Increase Appear Here Textile Wages

Dr. Reginald Krause, chairman of biochemistry at the West Virginia University Medical Center, will speak at East Carolina University Oct. 19, on nutrition and heart disease.

Dr. Krause's appearance here is sponsored by the American Medical Association, the North Carolina and Pitt County Medical Societies and the ECU School of Home Economics.

At 2 p.m., Dr. Krause will speak on "The Metabolic Role of Vitamin A," and at 7 p.m., on "Coronary Heart Disease: The Disease of Too Much and Too Little."

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Major Southern textile mills have announced they intend to increase wages. Cone Mills Corp. and J.P. Stevens & Co. announced Tuesday that they have asked the Pay Board for permission to do so. Guidelines under Phase II of the Nixon administration's economic stabilization program limit most increases to 5.5 per cent.

Neither Cone, Stevens, nor Burlington Industries, which announced late Monday that it was seeking Pay Board approval, have announced the amounts of their proposed increases.

Dan River Mills also has announced a pay increase, with the raises being handled separately by each manufacturing division. Most of the divisions have fewer than 5,000 workers, and therefore approval of the Pay Board will not be required. Previous announcement of increases came from Textile Mills and Guilford Mills in the Greensboro, N.C., area. Textile, which has about 4,000 hourly workers, did ask the Pay Board for a review, leading to speculation it may be asking for more than 5.5 per cent.

Spokesmen have said there is a labor shortage in the textile industry. Most textile companies raised wages last December.

Based on average hourly earnings of $2.59 for North Carolina textile workers, an increase of 5.5 per cent would mean a boost of about $5.70 a week.

First Lady In Landmark Rites

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mrs. Richard M. Nixon takes part today in ceremonies which designate the Treasury Building as one of Washington's national historical landmarks.

The ceremonies are scheduled for the south portico of the building, which was completed in 1869.

The only other federally occupied buildings in the capital older than Treasury are the White House and the Capitol.

Senator Has A Baby Son

GREENWOOD, S.C. (AP)—Sixty-nine-year-old Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., and his 25-year-old wife, Nancy, today became the parents of an 8-pound 4-ounce boy.

It was the couple's second child. They have a daughter, Nancy Moore Thurmond, who is a year and a half old.

A spokesman for Thurmond headquarters in Columbia said the birth occurred at 8 a.m. at Self Memorial Hospital in Greenwood.

The infant is 21 inches long. Sen. Thurmond said his wife would name the baby, since he had the honor of naming the first child.

Thurmond's nephew, Dr. Walter Bishop, delivered the baby.

The senator, who rushed from Washington early this morning to be with his wife, is seeking re-election Nov. 7.

He was to hold a news conference at the hospital later.

DR. REGINALD KRAUSE
Both lectures will be given in the Nursing Building Auditorium and are free and open to the public.

Dr. Krause has done extensive research in the areas of pharmacology, general nutrition and clinical pathology. He is a fellow of the American Society for Clinical Pathologists, a member of the American Societies of Clinical Nutrition and Biological Chemists, and the author of numerous published research reports.

First Of Senior Artist Exhibition Series Staged

The first of a series of senior artists exhibitions for 1972-73 is now underway with brief one-week shows being offered by Gray Renegar, Lee Armstrong and Wilma Barnhill, all of the School of Art, East Carolina University.

Renegar, a candidate for the BFA degree in commercial art, has examples of varied type of commercial art and a collection of printed and mounted black and white photographs on view in one part of the hallway gallery on the third floor of Rawl Building.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Barry G. Renegar of Route 3, Yadkinville.

Sharing the third floor gallery with Renegar is Miss Armstrong's show of paintings. In addition to the misty, flow of ribbons paintings of the type she exhibited earlier in a group show at The Daily Reflector lounge, she has in this current show a couple of almost life size full portraits of young women. One, of a young woman sitting on a bed, effectively portrays the solidity of a body seated on a soft mattress.

Miss Armstrong is the daughter of Mrs. H.W. Armstrong of Raleigh and Ben Armstrong of Pretoria, South Africa. She exhibited in the 34th annual N.C. Artists Exhibition in Charlotte. A series of her paintings from that show was purchased by the North Carolina National Bank for its permanent collection.

The final of the senior trio, Miss Barnhill is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe Barnhill of Pactolus. Her works are on view in the gallery at the Baptist Student Center on East Tenth Street. The Pitt County artist again displays her ability to imaginatively combine modern material and techniques with canvas to produce works that are alive in color and form. A couple of her works are based on the theme of the open peach.

Both Miss Armstrong and Miss Barnhill are candidates for the BFA in painting.

The three shows will be on view only through this week.

painting by Lee Armstrong. Renegar and Miss Armstrong share the gallery on the third floor of Rawl Building. Miss Barnhill's show is on view at the Baptist Student Center. All three will be up this week only. (Reflector Staff Photos).

British Troops Battle Catholics, Protestants

BELFAST (AP) — British troops battled both Roman Catholics and Protestant guerrillas Tuesday night, and the soldiers said they killed or wounded 10 of the gunmen. Ten soldiers and two policemen were also wounded.

The bodies of a man and a woman who had been shot were delivered anonymously to the Belfast morgue. They raised the confirmed death toll to 613 in more than three years of communal violence, 400 of them this year.

"We're the meat in the sandwich," said one British soldier of the emergence in force of Protestant gunmen. Heretofore, most of the guerrillas have been Catholics of the Irish Republican Army.

But during the shootig, officials of the province's British administration were meeting with members of the Ulster Defense Association, the Protestant counterpart of the IRA.

The UDA demanded that the killing of two Protestants by troops during rioting Monday night be investigated. The British were reported noncommittal.

The discussions were described as "frosty," but both sides agreed to continue the dialogue. "What seemed like a collision course has been averted," said Roy Bradford, a former minister of the provincial government who helped arrange the talks.

Meanwhile, Protestant gunmen prowled the Shankill Road and Sandy Row areas of Belfast and went into the city's center.

Catholic guerrillas who had been quiet for several days also emerged to challenge the troops.

Protestant mobs hurling gasoline bombs and bricks roamed west Belfast. In the nearby town of Lisburn, where the British Army headquarters is located, a Protestant mob attacked the main post office. It was driven off by troops firing rubber bullets.

Slower Rise In Welfare

WASHINGTON (AP) — National welfare costs reached a record $18.2 billion in the last fiscal year, but the rate of increase slowed for the first time in five years, the government says.

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare said Tuesday that the increase was 17.4 per cent, or $2.7 billion, compared to 28.3 per cent in fiscal 1971. The slowdown was attributed to rising employment and state cutbacks in payments and eligibility standards.

Until the latest report, the total cost to federal, state and local governments for providing relief rose at least 20 per cent each year since 1966, when it was a relatively modest $5.8 billion.

The welfare caseload also hit a historic high of more than 15 million persons in fiscal 1972, but the 5-per-cent increase was less than one-third the 17.2-per-cent increase in 1971, and the lowest since 1966.

The largest category was Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC), which increased by 6.8 per cent to 10.9 million persons.

The only category showing a decline at the end of the year was old age assistance, which dropped 1.6 per cent to slightly more than two million recipients.

Fatally Knifed During Quarrel

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — A 17-year-old youth was stabbed to death, police said, when he and his sister quarreled over whether to listen to the World Series on a family radio.

Detectives said Ronald Stodghill was stabbed in the chest Tuesday with a steak knife. His sister, Sheila, 18, was arrested on a manslaughter charge.

Offer Course To Football Fans

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Utah Technical College is offering a fully accredited course one night a week on how to understand football.

The course, costing $13 and allowing one hour of credit, will deal with types of offensive plays, methods of defensive play and game strategy, says a fact sheet put out by the school. Brigham Young University golf Coach Karl Tucker, also an official with the Big Sky Athletic Conference, will instruct.

Ask any Realtor who gets the better deal? The house hunter who has to become a mortgage hunter once he finds his house? Or the unusual person who looks with a mortgage commitment already in hand?

Better yet, don't ask. Find out for yourself. Find out just how much mortgage you're good for, even before you look for a new home.

Take out an Early Mortgage.

An Early Mortgage is something new around here, something that only First Federal offers to home buyers. It's our commitment to you, on paper, to give you the mortgage for a new home any time you ask for it during a three month period.

You don't have to use all of that mortgage money, you don't even have to use any of it. But for those three months, you'll have the certainty that if you need that mortgage money, it will be there.

And, at the interest rate we both agreed upon when we first issued you your Early Mortgage.

Sound good? It really is. You won't have to worry about getting a mortgage, you won't have to worry about interest rates going up again. And you'll know exactly how much you can spend for a home when it comes time to bargain. (Don't forget to include closing costs in your calculations.)

All you have to do is find the house.

The Early Mortgage. Only from First Federal.

LORETTA LYNN REMEMBERS — Country music's entertainer of the year told Tuesday her ordeal of only a few months ago when she underwent chest surgery. (AP Wirephoto)

Loretta Lynn Says She Almost Didn't Make It

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Loretta Lynn, the first woman honored as country music's best entertainer, feared for her life only four months ago.

Miss Lynn, named country music's Entertainer of the Year Monday night, was hospitalized in Nashville most of June when she underwent surgery for a chest tumor.

"I almost didn't make it, period," she said.

"I thought it was going to be malignant and postponed the operation as long as I could," she said. "Thank God it wasn't, although the doctors told me that while I was on the operating table my heart stopped beating."

"It was a depressing time for me — that June, only four months ago. But now I'm just the happiest, healthiest person around."

In an exclusive AP interview Tuesday, she couldn't help but

Sees Profit In United Nations

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Cuba says having the U.N. headquarters in New York earns for the United States nearly eight times the U.S. contribution to the world organization.

Cuban delegate Hector Rodriguez Cruz told the U.N. finance committee Tuesday the U.N. presence produces $600 million in earnings for the United States while the U.S. contribution to the U.N. budget is $80 million.

He opposed an American proposal to reduce the U.S. contribution from 31½ to 25 per cent of the regular U.N. budget. Based on ability to pay, the U.S. share should be 40 per cent, he argued.

recall memories of an old Buick, roadside parks and cheese and crackers.

She and her husband, Mooney, as she calls him, eased across the country 11 years ago in an old Buick, trying to get her started in the country music field.

They would sleep in the Buick — "which was an antique back then" — in roadside parks and eat nothing but cheese, bologna and crackers.

Her husband had coaxed her into becoming a singer "after he heard me rocking the babies to sleep." She was then 25, with six kids.

A coal miner's daughter from Kentucky, the striking brunette still has the country girl flair.

"I was so crazy after that show that it felt like a storm had just lifted me up," she said, referring to the nationally televised Country Music Association awards Monday.

"Everybody had been saying 'This is your year,' and I was so upset because I thought, 'If I don't get it, I'll just die.'"

Southern Bell Sets Telephone Rate Hike

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina customers of Southern Bell Telephone Co. will pay 45 cents a month more for residential service and $1 a month more for a business telephone under a new rate increase.

The State Utilities Commission issued an order Tuesday granting the company a $5.85 million annual rate hike.

The increase will be reflected in the next monthly bill.

Southern Bell has now received nearly $12 million of the $26 million it originally sought in higher rates. The commission granted the company a $6.1 million increase last June.

Southern Bell filed a petition to amend the $6.1 million rate order after the State Supreme Court issued a decision in a General Telephone Co. case in June.

The decision clarified the law, and the commission's procedures, in determining a utility's capital structure.

The commission refused to allow Southern Bell $2.86 million for higher wage settlements. It said the company had failed to show they would not be offset by productivity gains.

The company was granted $1 million more for toll settlements with independent telephone companies.

In its order, the commission said it would not consider any further amendments or corrections to the $6.1 million rate order of June.

Finished Street Paving Project

WINTERVILLE — Paving on Marshall and Forges Avenues and Lee Street here has been completed.

The project was started two years ago with curb and gutter. The project, including 7,900 square yards of paving, cost approximately $10,000. The project was financed by the Town of Winterville and the property owners.

Authoritarian Policy Weighed

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

Months before President Nguyen Van Thieu cracked down on his political opposition in South Vietnam, top Nixon administration planners received an analysis that recommended the United States stop pressuring the Saigon government "to conform to abstract standards of Western democracy."

"The GVN (government of Vietnam) can afford, under wartime conditions, to pursue authoritarian policies in its dealings with members of the articulate and vociferous urban political elites who, with few exceptions, lack genuine popular support and are unwilling to make sacrifices for the common good," the study said.

The study, prepared by the RAND Corp., was sent to the Pentagon as an unclassified document in March 1971 but never released. A copy was obtained recently by The Associated Press.

Sources familiar with the study said it received attention from top administration officials, including Dr. Henry A. Kissinger, President Nixon's adviser for national security affairs.

A year after the analysis went to the Pentagon, Thieu was faced with a communist military offensive. He ordered the arrests of thousands of alleged subversives, suspended local elections and tightened restrictions on the press.

Called "An Essay on Vietnamization," the study was written by Guy J. Pauker, a senior RAND analyst with years of experience in Vietnam and Indonesia.

In his essay, Pauker argued that Vietnamization offers the best opportunity for early American disengagement from Vietnam. The administration policy seeks to strengthen the South Vietnamese government to a point where it can resist communist pressure without direct U.S. military involvement. Peace negotiations and Vietnamization "cannot be pursued simultaneously, with equal chances of success," Pauker wrote.

He recommended that the Saigon government build support among the rural masses "by demonstrating that, unlike the communists, it is able and willing to offer tangible, immediate benefits to the masses."

In recommending authoritarian policies toward the "urban political elites," Pauker said such policies "might be indispensable in order to carry out, without obstruction by the elites, reforms benefitting the masses."

Pauker argued that the major issue faced by the Thieu government "is not whether it is fully representative of the people of South Vietnam, but whether it can govern in such a fashion as to be more acceptable to the people than the Vietnamese communists

The population of South Vietnam must assess relative benefits and relative deprivations, and reach conclusions based not on standards of American political philosophy but on its own experience and values."

"Will a repressive regime in Saigon significantly increase the opportunities for subversion available to the communists in the future?" asked Pauker.

"Judging from the experience of the nine years of government by Ngo Dinh Diem, the answer appears to be negative," he replied. President Diem was overthrown and assassinated in 1963.

"The Vietnamese game of politics has not been visibly improved by the constitutional system established in response to a variety of domestic and external pressures," Pauker said. He criticized Americans who demand that Thieu "broaden the base" of his cabinet and said they "do not understand the realities of South Vietnamese politics."

Because South Vietnam lacks political leaders willing to sacrifice personal ambition for national salvation, he wrote, "a political settlement based on free elections could result in chaos or in a communist plurality against the badly divided non-communist majority."

Pauker said that the North Vietnamese might adopt a more flexible stance in the Paris peace talks as a means of undermining Vietnamization.

"If circumstances forced the Thieu government to participate in active negotiations for a political solution, then it could no longer justify a firm authoritarian regime, suppressing criticism and eliminating the opposition to further the prosecution of the war," he wrote.

He urged also that the United States increase its economic aid to South Vietnam.

"If the United States had spent much more than $4 billion in economic aid to South Vietnam in the past 18 years, it could have probably spent much less than $100 billion in fighting the war and saved some of the 50,000 American soldiers whose deaths were, of course, a direct function of the length and scale of American military operations," he said.

Aussies Deport Pop Singers

CANBERRA (AP) — The Australian government is deporting British pop singer Joe Cocker and six members of his group following their conviction in Adelaide on drug charges.

Immigration Minister Dr. James Forbes told Parliament today the seven musicians had become liable for deportation under the Migration Act because they had been convicted of offenses punishable by two years in jail.

Cocker and the other six musicians were fined a total of $2,400 in Adelaide on Tuesday for the possession of drugs, including heroin and Indian hemp.

Forbes said the seven had been ordered to leave the country no later than noon Oct. 20. Cocker's group, on tour, had been scheduled to leave Australia Oct. 28.

BUZZ-FUZZ—One of Baltimore police department's three helicopters cruises over the city in a limitless number of daily tasks. (UPI Telephoto)

Police Helicopter May Just 'Freeze' Criminal

By KENNETH FRANCKLING BALTIMORE (UPI) — The suspicious looking man froze like a statue when he heard the unmistakable buzz of a helicopter overhead.

He waited in the middle of a Baltimore street to be arrested—a stolen wallet clutched in his left hand.

The suspect was spotted by a city police department helicopter—one of three that cruises over the city in a limitless number of daily tasks.

"Once a criminal is spotted and he knows it there is a great tendency for him to be transfixed as he sees that helicopter bearing in on him," Sgt. Regis Raffenberg said. "Sometimes they will run around in circles. One man just turned to stone."

Air-Ground Liaison

The sergeant commands the "buzz fuzz," an 11-man unit that includes five military-trained helicopter pilots and an equal number of veteran police officers who work as aerial observers, the most experienced able to maintain a watch on happenings as far as a mile away.

"This is FOXTROT," the observer pipes. Every radio-equipped squad car in the city is on alert for the latest sighting, whether it be suspicious activity in a secluded alley, a chance to prevent an accident at a developing highway tieup, or locating a missing person or object.

Each patrol car has its identification number painted in huge figures on the trunk, allowing the two-man chopper crew to ask assistance from the nearest vehicle.

Powerful Searchlights

The helicopters are equipped with 3.5 million-candlepower spotlights for night patrols and search operations. They've been effective in locating city jail and Maryland penitentiary inmates who occasionally escape. Most only get as far as the lockup roof.

There is a program under way here to enlist merchants, businessmen and even homeowners into crime prevention by painting their addresses and/or company names on rooftops to give the aerial teams an instant means of fixing their location.

Raffenberg says his men have a sixth sense about unusual behavior and it has played a big part in spotting crime in the act—burglaries, sidewalk assaults, car thefts and bank robbers in a hot getaway.

Preparation For Retiring Said Needed

TORONTO (AP) Advance preparation is the key to a happy retirement, say gerontologists who are concerned that too few are ready for a change that can be devastating.

All-important, too, say the experts on aging, are good health and an adequate income.

On the latter point, studies show, nearly two million Canadians over the age of 65 are existing on income generally considered below the poverty level.

On the first point, an increasing number of men and women are retiring with good health, thanks to advances in medicine and to medical and hospital care now available throughout the country.

But the gerontologists say more emphasis should be given in government and industry programs to advance preparation—lack of which, they contend, can lead to ill health and premature senility.

Many government programs prepare civil servants to meet the challenge posed by the arbitrary figure of 65 when most people retire after a lifetime of work. There also are some courses in schools and colleges and some labor unions conduct preparatory programs.

Business firms, surveys show, have no such programs. This should be the responsibility, at least in part, of private enterprise, experts contend.

Maurice Nixon, program director for aging of the Canadian Council of Social Development, says he knows of no company in Canada with its own pre-retirement program.

But it is not all the fault of management, he added. Northern Electric Co. had such a program but abandoned it when workers made it plain they did not want to hear about retirement, even on company time, Nixon said.

The attitude is not unusual, said Sister S. Michael Guinan, senior research officer on aging with the Ontario department of social and family services. She cites studies that show there is often a denial of aging, a reluctance to look at the realities of the future.

Sister Guinan said a factor in this attitude was prospective income. Her department's studies showed that fewer in low-income brackets than those with higher income looked forward to retirement. They presumably were afraid they could not afford dignified retirement, she said.

Gerontologists also say that institutions are not the answer to housing for the aged. They say senior citizens should be assisted to remain as much as possible in the dignity and independence of their own homes.

Set Reunion Of Veterans

MOREHEAD — Navy, Coast Guard, and Marine veterans who trained and served at the Morehead City Naval Base, will have a reunion Oct. 29 at "The Section Base," headquarters for the anti-mine and anti-submarine warfare.

Horace Morris, chairman of the Section Base Committee, said that for some time an area group of World War II veterans has been planning a reunion for men who served at the Section Base during the 1942 to 1944 war years.

Morris noted that those formerly aboard the station who visit the facility after 30 years absence will find many changes. The general area of the "port terminal" is now dominated by the Ports Authority Complex, he added, and the old "Section Base" building, the only one of the original four now standing, is part of the Carteret Technical Institute.

Personnel during the war included all Navy, Coast Guard, and Marines aboard the station or serving on any ship attached to the base or port, he pointed out.

Following conclusion of the 3 p.m. meeting, Morris said, those attending may adjourn to a restaurant, to be designated, for dinner.

Morris said that all interested veterans who wish to attend or need further information should contact him as chairman of the committee at P.O. Box 1942, Morehead City, 28557.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock market prices shot ahead today on news that presidential adviser Henry A. Kissinger was in Saigon discussing peace moves.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials at 11:30 a.m. was up 9.18 at 935.66.

Advances led declines on the New York Stock Exchange by more than 3 to 1.

Brokers pointed out that the market was ripe for rebound, after its sharp losses in recent sessions. The Dow had fallen some 30 points in the four sessions ended Monday. On Tuesday, the blue-chip indicator rose nearly 5 points.

International Business Machines was up 7 1/2 to 377 1/2 after a delayed opening. The stock fell 1 1/2 Monday when the Justice Department said it would try to break up the company into smaller competing firms. But Tuesday IBM said it did not feel the breakup would occur, analysts said any such move would benefit stockholders, and the issue rebounded partially.

American Motors was up 1/2 to 9, and Chrysler was up 1/2 to 30 after Price Commission approval of rises in 1973-model cars.

Opal Rush For Old Ghost Town

SYDNEY, Australia (UPI) — The last time Angledool (pop 10) made the news was in 1950. It rained.

But recently the old ghost town on the New South Wales-Queensland border was inundated with traffic. More than 200 claims were filed in one week on Australia's newest opal field. The rush started when a miner, Alex Dieter, said he had found opal traces near a site where opals were mined 40 years ago.

Three Accidents In Greenville Tuesday

Damages totaling over $1,500 resulted from three traffic accidents investigated Tuesday by Greenville Police.

Heaviest damages occurred in a 3:40 p.m. wreck at the intersection of Cotanche and Second Streets involving cars driven by Willard Greene Pollard of 402 Oak Street, and Charles Robert Wilder of 103 Morrison Street, Williamston. Officers reported that Wilder was charged with failing to yield right of way and estimated damage to his car at $250. Damage to the car driven by Pollard was set at $375. No injuries were reported.

A vehicle operated by Mary Huffmire Huff of Country Club Drive received damages estimated at $400 in a collision with a car driven by Glenda Hudson Whitehurst of 203 N. Oak Street. Damage to the Whitehurst car was set at $125.

Investigating officers, who reported no one injured in the 6:40 p.m. wreck at the E. First Street-N. Ash Street intersection, charged Mary Huff with failing to see a safe move could be made.

John Albert Williams of 105 Crestwood Dr. Farmville and Joseph Daniel Heath of Rt. 5, Box 385 Greenville, were charged with failing to stop for a red light following a wreck in the intersection of Washington and Tenth Streets.

Officers set damages at $175 to of property on the proposed project, said his property would be ruined if a 100-ft. right-of-way is taken.

"There are houses on the property and the road would come almost to the front doors," Harrell said.

Garrett said the project would not be controlled access. The road will be 24-ft. wide with 12-ft. shoulders (four-ft. paved). The existing right-of-way on the present Allen Road is 60 feet while the proposed project would require 100-foot right-of-way.

Estimated cost of the recommended alignment, including construction, right-of-way and railroad signals, is $505,000. The cost of the alternate alignment has been estimated at $620,000.

The project will be financed by state funds.

The traffic volume of the present Allen Road for 1972 is between 1,000 and 1,300 vehicles daily. The estimated flow of traffic for 1992 is 3,000 to 4,000 vehicles daily.

Attending yesterday's hearing were Henry Oglesby, area highway commissioner; W. Arthur Tripp, former area highway commissioner; and C.W. Snell, district engineer.

Explosion Rips Office Building

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — An explosion ripped through the second basement level of a state office building behind the Virginia Capitol early today, wrecking a cafeteria and forcing the building to close.

Officials said no one was injured in the blast at the Madison Building. Power and heat were disrupted and the main telephone switchboard for state agencies was temporarily put out of service.

About 300 persons normally work in the building, which houses the State Health Department and several other state offices.

At midmorning telephone service had been restored through the use of emergency batteries, but only "necessary calls" were being routed to state agencies.

Budget Body Begins Put It Together

RALEIGH (AP) — The Advisory Budget Commission began today the massive job of putting together the recommended budget for North Carolina for the 1973-75 biennium.

Dr. William Turner, secretary of the Department of Administration, said this is the first time the commission has been faced with general fund requests exceeding the current budget levels by more than $1 billion.

"Agencies have requested $916.8 million of increased operating funds and $532.2 million for capital improvements for a total of $1,449,000,000" in increased spending requests, he said.

"A significant aspect of these figures is that they have already been trimmed substantially by the new department heads under state government reorganization and the Board of Governors of the newly structured system of higher education."

"Nor do these figures include salary increases expected to be requested by the employee and teacher associations which have historically been far above the requests submitted by agencies," Turner said.

But he said the economy continues to produce more tax revenues and many of the "pressing needs" of the state can be provided in the new budget.

Homecoming Is Personal

WOONSOCKET, S.D. (AP) — Eleanor McGovern returned to her hometown and the wife of Democratic presidential nominee George McGovern said homecoming is a personal thing.

"Seeing so many people from my family, my childhood, people who launched George on his political career is a very moving experience," Mrs. McGovern told a crowd of 1,500 persons at a reception in the Woonsocket National Guard Armory Tuesday night.

"I am fortunate to say I have a home to come home to, that I have a home where my roots are."

She also reminisced about her high school days, including her first date. On that occasion, she said, she and her twin sister were asked by two freshman boys to a basketball game.

But she said they were so nervous that they invited another girl to go along.

Woonsocket, population 1,000, is about 35 miles north of McGovern's hometown, Mitchell.

Sentencing Due Today For Chavis, Friends

BURGAW, N.C. (AP) — Black Activist Ben Chavis was sentenced today to 34 years in prison following conviction on charges related to racial violence last year in Wilmington.

The jury of six women and six men, including one black woman and one black man, returned verdicts Tuesday night convicting Chavis and eight black youths of arson and conspiracy to assault emergency personnel.

The white defendant, Ann Shepard, was convicted on the only charge against her, conspiracy to commit arson.

The other defendants are Reginald Epps and Wayne Moore, both 18; Jerry Jacobs, Willie Earl Vereen, James McCoy and Joe Wright, all 19; Marvin Patrick, 20; and Tiney Tyndall, 22. All are of Wilmington.

The jury deliberated two hours and 55 minutes before returning the verdicts shortly after 8 p.m. Tuesday in the sixth week of the trial. Chavis, 24, pastor of the Church of the Black Messiah in Wilmington, was pictured by state witnesses as the leader in two nights of firebombing and sniping during an outbreak of racial violence in a black Wilmington neighborhood on Feb. 5-6, 1971.

A grocery and two residences were burned on the second night of the violence, during which firemen were shot at as they sought to battle the flames, and police became sniper targets as they sought to protect the firemen, according to testimony given by officers during the trial.

The defendants were taken into custody as court was recessed for the night. They were

Struck, Killed By SHP Car

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A 35-year-old bricklayer walking on a dark, rural road near his home in suburban Charlotte was struck and killed by a State Highway Patrol car Tuesday night.

A patrol spokesman said that the man, David Lee Stewart of Hickory Grove, had stepped in front of the patrol car, and no charges would be made against trooper H.O. Hussey.

Hussey, a trooper for three years and stationed in the Charlotte area for about a year, was on routine patrol.

taken to Onslow County Jail at Jacksonville, departing in a bus as a large number of black supporters chanted, "We shall overcome," and recited the 23rd Psalm, "The Lord is my shepherd..."

Mrs. Elizabeth Chavis, mother of the defendant, told newsmen after court was recessed, "I'm not surprised at this. Any time a black man raises his head to speak out, to jail he is bound."

Mrs. Chavis is a sixth grade teacher at Oxford Orphanage in Oxford.

Bank In Fallston Held Up Today

FALLSTON, N.C. (AP) — Three armed men held up a Union Trust Co. bank at Fallston at 10:50 a.m. today and escaped with an undisclosed amount of money, the FBI said.

Police at Fallston, near Shelby in Cleveland County, said the three men wore ski masks and escaped in what was described only as a "light colored vehicle."

There were no injuries or shooting, police said.

No other details were immediately available, but an investigation and search for the robbers was underway.

The robbery was North Carolina's 47th bank holdup of the year and the second in two days. A Fayetteville bank was robbed Tuesday.

Rose Hits Road Against Raleigh Enloe

Friday night will come one day earlier this week for the Rose High School Rampants. They are used to playing on Friday, but this week, as they travel to Raleigh to meet the Enloe Eagles, they'll be playing on Thursday night. Game time is 7:30 p.m. in the capital city. Rose goes into the game with a 5-2 record. A victory for the Rampants would insure their first winning season in several years. Enloe is 3-4 overall and stands 2-1 in its division. Rose, however, considers itself fortunate to have won its fifth game last week. They nearly became the first victim of the year for Kinston's Vikings. Rose trailed at halftime, 6-0, but came back to score the first five times it had the ball in the second half, running up a 35-6 lead before Kinston struck for two late scores against the reserves for a final 35-19 score. Kinston broke loose for 50 yards on the very first play from scrimmage against Rose, and Coach Dave Bumgarner feels that this might have shaken up his Rampants. "The idea that they moved the ball like that one us scared us," he said. "Then, they scored and got us away from our running game and got us to passing. We weren't successful at this, although we had Mike Harris wide open twice for what could have been touchdowns. One he just dropped and the other was just a little beyond him." Two interceptions and a lost fumble didn't help the first half effort either, Bumgarner added. "At halftime, we didn't have much to say," the coach said. "We just told them that we knew they were better than an 0-6 team. We were a better club. We just weren't doing our job and we knew that we had to do."

The Rampants also made some minor changes in their blocking patterns, and in the second half, the Rampants were in complete control, as Kinston got only one more first down the rest of the evening. Bumgarner singled out a number of players for their work in the game, naming the whole offensive line as doing a fine job blocking in the second half. He also mentioned Keith Joyner for his backfield blocking which helped to spring several good runs by Al Hunter and Reggie Perkins. The Bomb and the Bullet have now picked up near 1,500 yards between them in seven games. Perkins has 745 yards, while Hunter had rushed for 735.

He also had praise for Lee Cherry, named player of the week for his hard hitting and tackling on defense. Other defenders who claimed honors included the linebackers, Mike Harris, Harding Sugg, George Price and Jackie Savage.

The coach also praised Phil Ragazzo for hitting five of five extra points, and punting well. He has kicked 18 of 21 points during the season, and is averaging 37.6 yards per punt. All but two Rampants came through the game in good shape. John Calhoun has an injured hand, and Ron Moore is suffering from a pulled muscle.

"They both should be ready to go by Thursday," Bumgarner said. The Enloe Eagles present somewhat of a mystery to the Rampants, mainly because of their multiple defenses. "They've used four or five different sets so far,"

Bumgarner said. "But we look for them to use a 5-2 type defense to try and stop Reggie and Al." The Eagles rank as another big and strong team for the Rampants to go against. "They have two good running backs," Bumgarner said, "but one of them is supposed to be coming off an injury." The two are Vasco Wright and Jim Otto.

They run from a power set, according to the coach, and, like Rose, don't throw much. "Their line just tries to blow you out of the way to make room for their backs," he said. "They've done a pretty good job so far, and we look for a tough game."

Defensively, Rose will start Lee Cherry, Henry Bunn, Kenneth Creech and Ron Moore across the front with Harding Sugg, Mike Harris, George Price and Jackie Savage at the linebackers. Lemmond, Al Heath and Dickie Johnson will be in the secondary.

Following this week's game with Enloe, the Rampants have two games remaining, both in the division. They'll return home next week to play host to New Bern's Bears, then travel the following week to meet the Cougars of Goldsboro High School.

The probably offensive starting lineup for the Rampants has Fred Lemmond and Paul Rasberry at ends, Charlie Tyson and Maurice Sheppard at tackles, John Calhoun and David Matheis at guards, Phil Ragazzo at center; Dean Phillips at quarterback; Reggie Perkins at fullback; and Keith Joyner and Al Hunter at halfbacks.

Drivers Set For Dash At American 500 Pole

By Bloys Britt
AP Auto Racing Writer
ROCKINGHAM, N.C. (AP) — The tour regulars of the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing opened practice today for the $106,000 American 500—with at least 34 of them still looking for their first victory.

The entry list is one of the best of the season, and it includes five drivers who together have captured 26 of the year's 29 Winston Cup Grand National events.

Bobby Allison, a nervy speedster from Hueytown, Ala., has won nine in Junior Johnson's Chevrolet and is the year's leading money winner with $237,650. He also won the last tour outing, the rich National 500 at Charlotte, where he beat Buddy Baker's Dodge by an eyelash.

Richard Petty, alternating between a Dodge and a Plymouth, has eight victories but trails Allison in the money standings with $185,745. Petty, however, appears to have his fourth Grand National driving title locked up, with only a horrendous finish in Sunday's event standing in his way.

The season's other triumphs have gone to $132,305 winner David Pearson, whose six wins in the Glen Wood Mercury came after a late start; and James Hylton and Baker, who have one each.

A. J. Foyt, who drove the Wood car to two 500 mile wins in February and March, and West Coast star Ray Elder were the other winners.

Among the 34 non-winners who have made most of the season's starts and who will drive in Sunday's race are Bobby Isaac and Cale Yarborough, who will bring hot new Chevrolets; Benny Parsons and Lee Roy Yarbrough in Mercurs; Dave Marcis in a Dodge and Pete Hamilton in a Plymouth.

The only outsider in the race with a chance to win is Ron Hutchinson of Keokuk, Iowa, the 1972 champion of the Auto Racing Club of America. He will wheel a Ford owned by his brother, ex-NASCAR hotshot Dick Hutchinson.

Qualifying for the 40 starting positions begins Thursday.

Crump Leading Southern Rushers

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP)—Senior quarterback Scotty Shipp of Davidson, who hit 22 of 30 passes in a 51-35 victory last Saturday over Furman, has taken over the Southern Conference lead in both football total offense and passing.

Shipp has accounted for 809 yards and an average of 173.8 yards per game for the Wildcats in total offense to 964 yards and a 160.7 average for All-Southern quarterback Harry Lynch of The Citadel, who led the conference in that department last season.

In addition, Shipp ousted sophomore quarterback Tom Schultze of Virginia Military as the top passer. Shipp has hit on 73 of 113 aerials for 877 yards and 14.6 completions per game to 73 of 144 and 1,099 yards and 12.2 completions per game for Schultze.

Carlester Crumpler of East Carolina remains the top rusher in the conference with 546 yards and an average of 109.2 yards per game. Far back in second place with 516 yards and 86 per game is Todd Bushnell of William and Mary, which has three of the top five runners.

Receivers Walt Walker and Andy Davis of Davidson are waging a hot battle for the lead in that department. Although each has averaged 5.2 receptions for game, Walker has caught 31 to 30 for Davis.

Richmond's Jay Jones continues to lead the conference in punting with a 41.3-yard average on 46 kicks.

The leaders in each category: Total offense, yards and yards per game—Shipp, Davidson, 809, 173.8; Lynch, The Citadel, 964, 160.7; Schultze, VMI, 859, 142.2; Summerell, East Carolina, 699, 139.8; Deery, William & Mary, 742, 123.7.

Rushing offense, yards and yards per game—Crumpler, East Carolina, 546, 109.2; Bushnell, William & Mary, 516, 86.0; Ingrid, Davidson, 392, 78.4; Deery, William & Mary, 445, 74.2; Gerhart, William & Mary, 348, 69.6.

Passing, attempts-completions, yards and completions per game—Shipp, Davidson, 113-73, 877, 14.6; Schultze, VMI, 144-73, 1099, 12.2; Lynch, The Citadel, 112-70, 718, 8.3; Shelton, Furman, 84-44, 448, 7.3; Knight, Richmond, 95-41, 476, 6.8.

Pass receiving, catches, yards and catches per game—Walker, Davidson, 31, 560, 5.2; Davis, Davidson, 30, 280, 5.2; Moore, VMI, 23, 341, 3.8; Knight, William & Mary, 20, 290, 3.3; Mahoney, Richmond, 17, 209, 2.8.

Punting, kicks and average—Jones, Richmond, 46-41.3; Hughes, The Citadel, 40-40.4; Lotfin, Appalachian, 27-39.6; Pomeroy, Davidson, 26-37.8; Brown, William & Mary, 34-37.1.

Number One Defense To Meet Number 9 Offense

Saturday night in Carter Stadium in Raleigh, the old adage about the irresistible force meeting the immovable object may get a stern test.

The latest figures from the National Collegiate Sports Service show the East Carolina still ranks first in the nation in total defense, while N.C. State is ninth in total offense.

So something has got to give. The Pirates, despite getting spanked in yardage and points by The Citadel Saturday, managed to pull out their fifth straight victory, and many pronounced the Wild Dog defense dead.

But the NCAA statistics put the Pirates right back on top in total defense. Their yardage went up, but it wasn't enough for the number two ranked Irish of Notre Dame to catch up. East Carolina is now allowing 166.2 yards per game, as compared to 182.3 for Notre Dame.

On the ground the Pirates fell, however, from first to second. Southern Methodist moved into first place by not playing. They are allowing 43.8 yards per game, while the Bucs are giving up 49.0.

The Bucs did fall out of the pass defense listings, but remained high in scoring defense. They are now third with a 6.2 average. Oklahoma leads with a 1.5 average, while Michigan is second at 4.6.

N.C. State, however, will give the Bucs a stern test for sure. The Wolfpack is ranked ninth in the nation in total offense, picking up 430.3 yards per game. They are seventh in passing offense with 227.2 yards per game, and it is this phase of the game that The Citadel capitalized on.

William & Mary, an upcoming ECU opponent in the Southern Conference, ranks 14th in rushing with a 287.3 average. Individually, Carlester Crumpler has moved up in the rushing statistics, and is drawing near to the top 10. He now ranks 13th among major college rushers with a 109.2 yards per game average.

Bruce Shaw of N.C. State ranks 20th in total offense, piling up 177.3 yards per game. Stan Fritts, his teammate, who's scored seven touchdowns in the last two games, ranks 13th in scoring in the nation with a 9.3 points per game average.

Tom Schultze of VMI who earlier faced the Bucs, is 20th in passing, hitting 12.2 completions per game. Jay Jones of Richmond is 16th in punting with a 41.3 yards per kick average.

And Dwight Mosley of Dayton and Paul Sclaro of Willima & Mary rank one-two in interceptions, each with six in six games.

State's Mike Stultz is seventh in the nation in punt returns, carrying back 13 for an average of 17.3 yards per try.

Wicks Sparks Trail Blazers

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Sidney Wicks threw in six vital points in the past two minutes and gave the Portland Trail Blazers an upset 111-108 victory over the Milwaukee Bucks in the National Basketball Association.

The Bucks, down by 20 points in the third quarter of the game at Portland Tuesday night, rallied to go ahead at 106-105 on the 49-point performance of Kareem Abdul Jabbar.

After Jabbar's two free throws put the Bucks ahead Wicks sank a 20-foot jumper and another one from 25 feet out to climax the Blazers' first victory of the season. Wicks, who finished with 33 points, later converted two free throws to complete the Blazer scoring.

Four points by John Havlicek on a 10-foot jumper and two free throws in the last 90 seconds, gave the unbeaten Boston Celtics a 119-115 victory over Atlanta for their fourth in a row.

The New York Knicks whipped Houston 103-95 and Buffalo humbled Philadelphia 122-144 in the other NBA games scheduled.

Havlicek's jumper broke a 113-113 tie and his two free throws clinched Boston's triumph over the Hawks. He finished with 25 points, but game scoring honors went to his teammate, Dave Cowens, with 29 points. Lou Hudson was high for the Hawks with 27.

The Braves exploded with 42 points in the third period to trip the 76ers. Bob Kauffman was high for Buffalo with 24 points while John Block of the 76ers took game scoring honors with 27.

Jerry Lucas, with 22 points, led the Knicks to their third triumph in four starts by turning back Houston. The Rockets, down by 28 points in the third quarter, rallied to within 97-91 before running out of steam.

Jack Marin and Jimmy Walker each scored 21 points to top the Rockets.

Possibility Of Rain Continues As A's, Reds Set To Try Again

By KEN RAPPOPORT
Associated Press Sports Writer
OAKLAND (AP) — The Oakland A's and Cincinnati Reds were faced with another possibility of rain from the worst weather in the Bay area in 10 years as they prepared to play the third game of the World Series tonight.

The last time it rained as hard in the area was during the 1962 series when the San Francisco Giants and New York Yankees waited three days to play a baseball game.

The A's and Reds hope that lightning doesn't strike twice. "The rain didn't help us—I wanted to play," said Cincinnati manager Sparky Anderson after Tuesday night's scheduled game was postponed by a hail and rain storm.

And a chance of showers was forecast for tonight.

"I was disappointed," said Cincinnati starting pitcher Jack Billingham, who was ready for "the most important game of my life."

Oakland manager Dick Williams, who said his pitching rotation would have to be re-evaluated if another rainout occurred, took the delay philosophically.

"We're still 2-up," said Williams, whose American League champions hold a 2-0 lead in this best-of-seven-game series. Billingham and Oakland's John "Blue Moon" Odom had finished their warmup and were prepared to start Tuesday night when heavy rains struck the coliseum.

Umbrellas sprouted immediately. The crowd of 50,000 signed and the groundskeepers, who had worked hard to whip the beleaguered field into shape, went into action. They blanketed the infield with tarpaulin, but it was useless.

The rain picked up momentum and then hail stones began falling. Meanwhile, the sun shone a few hundred yards away from the ballpark and skies were blue and pink.

Out came baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn to make the final judgment. The bare-headed Kuhn trudged through the outfield sloop with a party of followers and decided it was impossible to play ball.

But he didn't tell the managers. "The first time I knew that the game was postponed was when I heard it over the public address system," said Williams with a grin.

Kuhn, however, did tell the reporters.

"I went out and took a look at the field with the senior umpires," said the commissioner. "It was perfectly apparent that the amount of water on the field made it totally unplayable for baseball. In some places, water was over the shotops and on almost every step, you sink into the turf."

Tuesday night's rainout pushed back the entire Series schedule. After tonight's 8:30 p.m., EDT start, the fourth game is scheduled for Thursday night and the fifth, if necessary, will be played in Oakland starting at 4 p.m., EDT, Friday.

If sixth and seventh games are needed, they'll be played in Cincinnati at 1 p.m., EDT, Saturday and Sunday.

Oklahoma Picked To Solidify Lead In Big Eight; Wolfpack Favored

By HERSCHEL NISSENSEN
Associated Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — "The national championship hasn't been decided yet!"

That was the quick retort from Coach Eddie Crowder this week when someone implied that Colorado's national championship hopes had been terminated by an early-season loss to Oklahoma State.

Crowder gets a chance to prove the skeptics wrong Saturday when his ninth-ranked Buffaloes entertain second-rated Oklahoma in a key Big Eight test. "I think Oklahoma is better offensively than last year, mostly because of the momentum and confidence they've gained," he says, noting that the Sooners set national records in 1971 for rushing and total offense. "A year ago at this time, they were still feeling their way into confidence, so to speak."

Oklahoma's defense isn't bad, either—the Sooners are the only major team that hasn't allowed a touchdown this season. Coach Chuck Fairbanks called last week's 27-0 triumph over Texas in which the Longhorns were held to 73 yards on the ground "the best effort of any defensive team I've been associated with, either playing or coaching."

The pick: Oklahoma. Alabama at Tennessee—Bill Battle has lost four games in three years as Tennessee's coach, all to teams from the State of Alabama, but the Vols have had two weeks to get ready for this one. Three of the losses were to Auburn, the other to ... Alabama.

Arkansas at Texas—"We are meeting back-to-back two truly great football teams," says Darrell Royal of Texas. "It takes a little bit more substance to be ready to go in a tight football game, especially after a loss." One vote for substance ... and Texas.

Washington at Southern California—"We have to hope and pray and maybe even cheat to see that someone beats USC," Stanford's Jack Christiansen said last week. It won't be Washington, with or without Sonny Sixkiller. Southern Cal.

Indiana at Ohio State—As expected, Ohio State and Michigan are tied for the Big Ten lead, but so are Indiana and Purdue. Indiana, 4-1, hasn't had a winning season since 1968 and the best prescription for victory doesn't include road games against ... Ohio State.

Georgia Tech at Auburn—Battered Tigers were whipped physically by Louisiana State. Tech has had two weeks off. So what? Auburn.

Navy at Air Force—First of the service academies' round-robin. Flyboys were brought down to earth in 13-9 squeaker over Boston College, which lost to Navy 27-20. Altitude prevails. Air Force.

Tulane at West Virginia—Both teams coming off three-point setbacks, Tulane's on an illegal fifth down against Miami. Barring a look-ahead to Penn State ... West Virginia.

Florida at Mississippi—Florida better than advertised, Mississippi not as good. Ole Miss in a rut scoring 13 points the last three times. Rebels rebel. Mississippi.

Cornell at Harvard—Hunch says Harvard's looking ahead to Dartmouth. Second hunch says first hunch is wrong. Harvard.

Louisville at Wichita State—Wichita's young Shockers are writing one of college football's great stories with four wins in a row. The end! Louisville.

Virginia at Clemson—In all 13 previous meetings they've had to carry the Cavaliers back to Ol' Virginny. Upset Special of the Week ... Virginia.

South—Maryland over Duke, Florida State over Colorado State, Richmond over Furman, Georgia over Vanderbilt, Western Michigan over Marshall, Houston over Miami, Fla., Mississippi State over Southern Mississippi, North Carolina State over East Carolina, South Carolina over Miami, Ohio, Tampa over Drake, Chattanooga over The Citadel, William & Mary over VMI, North Carolina over Wake Forest, Davidson over Wofford, Virginia Tech over Ohio U.

Charlie O. Is Barnum Of The Baseball World

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent
OAKLAND (AP) — A long-eared mule wandered aimlessly from table to table plucking off the plates of the guests while a five-piece jazz band in straw bowlers jarred the ear drums with the strains of "Sugar in the Morning, Sugar in the Evening."

Charlie O. was back in his own ball park and the place was jumping.

"The trouble with baseball is that it's got its head in the sand," said Charles O. Finley, owner and entrepreneur of the Oakland Athletics. "What the game needs is progressive thinking and new ideas."

"We have to keep up with the times."

Nobody ever accused Charlie O. of being short on ideas. He is so full of them that he keeps the staid old game of baseball in a constant state of the jitters.

He is frequently at odds with Commissioner Bowie Kuhn—such as this week when he wanted to give $5,000 bonuses to three of his A's—Joe Rudi, Mike Heagan and Gene Tenace—and to have the grandmotherly Mrs. Finley throw out the first ball of the third game of the World Series at the Oakland Coliseum against the Cincinnati Reds.

Kuhn quickly vetoed both moves, keeping the first in abeyance. The first ball was to be tossed by California Governor Ronald Reagan, but rain washed out the game.

Finley, a dapper, distinguished-looking man whose appearance belies his controversial role, refuses to let such setbacks deter him. He is always pushing on to new horizons.

"We have made at least $600,000 every year since we moved from Kansas City five years ago," he boasted. "We'll make at least $1,200,000 this season."

Baseball owners traditionally are close-mouthed about such delicate matters as receipts, profits and tax write-offs.

Finley is the new Barnum of Baseball, the game's innovative maverick who has picked up where Larry MacPhail, who started night ball, and Bill Veeck, who brought in midlets for smaller strike zones and introduced such tempting features as "Ladies Day" and fireworks displays, left off.

The mule-christened Charlie O.—is a beautiful animal as mules go, nine years old and weighing 1,400 pounds. He came here from Kansas City with the A's.

There is really no reason for a mule to be the mascot of the Athletics except that the boss says, "I like mules."

Charlie O.—the mule, not the owner—is given free run of the hospitality room at the Oakland ball park, where baseball people and the press gather after the game for refreshments, food and conversation.

The band is always there, too, a swinging ragtime outfit dressed in 1890 attire led by a man called "The Professor." The band knows only four tunes but it never stops playing.

Finley designed the Athletics' bizarre uniforms, which look like the apparel of a neighborhood softball team, insisting on his favorite colors—gold, green and white. The team wears white shoes.

Charlie O. wears a green coat with a big "A" patch on the pocket. He has a silo back on his farm in LaPorte, Ind., painted the same color and also bearing a giant "A."

Once he had a mechanical rabbit pop up behind home plate with a bucket of baseballs for the umpires. This was abandoned when the machinery went on the blink.

He has two pretty female teenagers to shag loose baseballs. Jugs of hot coffee are shuttled to the umpires during the mid-game, field-sweeping break.

He has introduced a carnival atmosphere that overshadows anything ever thought of by Veeck. His "Hot Pants Night" drew 30,000 and almost caused a riot when the judging began.

He's had "Mustache Day," milking contests and "Farmer's Days." Slippery pigs have been turned loose on the infield and prizes given to the players' catching them.

He likes nicknames such as "Blue Moon," "Catfish" and "Steamboat," and when Oakland signed a Detroit high school boy as its No. 1 draft choice this year, Finley notified all the papers.

"His name is 'Sugar Bear' Daniels. That's what he wants to be called."

Finley, who grew up in Alabama as the son of a poor steel worker and who built an insurance business into a multi-million dollar fortune, has a nickname of his own—given by his associates.

They call him "The Emperor." He runs a tight ship. He demands undivided loyalty. The Athletics have the smallest executive staff in baseball. Finley serves as his own business manager and calls all the shots.

When he dines with friends, he tells everybody where he or she must sit. He is dispatcher of his fleet of Cadillacs. His headquarters are in Chicago and he visits Oakland perhaps no more than a dozen times a season.

When in Oakland, he lives in an apartment where one of his neighbors is Huey Newton, the Black Panther Leader. They are not close buddies.

State Out To Snap Buc String

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Tackle Rick Druschel, a bulwark in the North Carolina State line, says, "Publicity is like poison; if you swallow it, it more than likely will kill you. After the season, though, it would be nice to be recognized."

Druschel and the Wolfpack will be recognized before then if they beat undefeated East Carolina of the Southern Conference Saturday night. The Wolfpack, which has won three, lost two and tied one, will have the advantage of the home field.

N.C. State scrimmaged Tuesday against scout teams imitating the defense of the East Carolina Pirates, who have won all their five games. North Carolina has never won in Groves Stadium in Winston-Salem, where the Tar Heels will play the Wake Forest Deacons in an Atlantic Coast Conference game Saturday. The Deacons won there 48-31 in 1968, and 14-13 in 1970.

North Carolina, the defending ACC champion, which has a 4-1 record this year against Wake Forest's 1-4, will be favored to break the jinx.

The last two games between the teams have been thrillers. Wake took that one-point victory two years ago by driving 93 yards in the closing moments and scoring with only 12 seconds left.

The outboard makers will produce 135 hp engines in 1973. They will retail for $1,797.

Nothing Right For Reds As Yet

By YOGI BERRA
OAKLAND (AP) — The Cincinnati Reds have been in Oakland since early Sunday night and they still haven't stolen a base or had a hit in Charlie Finley's Coliseum. They haven't even had batting practice. Nothing is going right for the Reds in this World Series.

The favored National League champions are down two games to none. It's been that way since Sunday night. If they had played the third game Tuesday night the balls the Reds hit to the outfield would have become unplayable lies. There was so much water on the field you could row a boat.

I saw hailstones as big as moth balls. One bounced in my pocket and the darn thing melted. They better turn that refrigerator on up higher upstairs. But if they did that somebody could get hurt.

Everybody wants to know what team gets hurt the most by a rain-hail postponement. In this case it's the Reds who get hurt because they just haven't been hitting the way they did all year. They need hitting practice. But you can't take it on this field.

With the field a soggy mess even this morning, the commissioner may ask the Oakland Athletics—that's the team from the other league, the American—and the Reds to skip batting practice. The more you work out on a field that has taken about 12 straight days of northern California rain and some hail—the sogger it gets. The field I saw this morning looked twice as wet as Shea Stadium ever looked. They use helicopters here to dry the field. They better use flame throwers like we used to use at Shea.

Commissioner Bowie Kuhn did the smart thing postponing the third game until tonight. He says we'll stay in Oakland until the next two games, and three

A Metal 'Bone' Being Developed

NEW YORK (UPI)—A metal bone that may be better than any other in use today is being developed by University of Wisconsin-Madison scientists, it is reported in a newsletter from the university.

Metallurgist Joel Hirschhorn and orthopedic surgeon Dr. Andres McBeath are using a technique known as powder metallurgy to make the porous metal bone replacements that behave almost like real bones. The porosity gives the prosthesis elasticity so that it can bend a little, absorb shock and possibly wear slower than a solid prosthesis.

Old Parrot Finally Gave Up Drinking

By DENNIS BELL.
CARCROSS, Y.T. (AP)

The world-famous Carcross Parrot is probably the oldest, meanest, ugliest, dirtiest bird north of the 60th parallel—but he remains as this Yukon community's one claim to international fame.

The Carcross Parrot seems to have been in the Yukon ever since the Klondike Gold Rush of 1898. He is at least 125 years old and has lived in the Caribou Hotel since 1918.

He has survived a fire that flattened the premises, fall frost and ferocious winter blizzards, and has outlived everyone who ever owned the tiny 22-room hotel, and that's quite a few people.

The Carcross Parrot gets fan mail. People as far away as California have heard about him, and some have even traveled all the way to the Yukon after hearing about him from parents or grandparents.

The time was when the Carcross Parrot had a reputation as one of the most formidable drinkers in the north. Tipsy miners used to stagger out of the adjoining beer parlor and slip him a short beer or a scotch neat.

"The parrot used to be quite a drunk," said Dorothy Hopcott, who has owned the hotel since 1959. "People would come in and give him a few belts. He'd get so drunk he'd fall off his perch and lie on the bottom of his cage with his feet sticking up in the air."

But the parrot got religion. A few owners ago, the hotel was run by a man of piety who toned down the Carcross Parrot's purple prose and cut off his booze ration.

According to the locals, the former owner patiently taught the bird several choruses of Onward Christian Soldiers and eventually eliminated the somewhat racy sea shanties from his repertoire.

There's nothing worse than a reformed drunk, so the saying goes, and the Carcross Parrot is no exception.

Nowadays, anyone who comes out of a nearby little six-table pub gets squawked at. Then he turns sullen. Won't say a word.

"He can't stand drunks," sighed Mrs. Hopcott. "He can smell beer fumes and he gets mad."

Nobody is too sure how the bird got to the Yukon, but the first recorded owner was a Captain Alexander, who operated the Engineer mine near here during the First World War.

The good captain and his lady left the parrot at the hotel to make a trip to Vancouver in the winter of 1918. They went down with the Princess Sophia, a CPR steamship that sank in Lynn Canal off Skagway, Alaska, with the loss of all aboard.

The parrot has lived in the hotel ever since.

Introduced Corn From America

CHICAGO (UPI) — Nobody knows when native Americans began using corn, but there is a precise date and place of its introduction to Europeans.

The modern history of corn, according to Encyclopaedia Britannica, began Nov. 5, 1492, when two Spaniards whom Christopher Columbus had delegated to explore the interior of Cuba returned with a report of a grain which was "well tasted."

Later explorers of the New World found corn being grown by Indians in all parts of America where agriculture was practiced, from Canada to Chile. Eventually scientists established that corn was growing in North America at least 80,000 years ago, long before the arrival of the first man.

Returned After His Own Funeral

KOCHI, Japan (UPI)—Kenji Yamamoto, 29, who wandered around 54 days after being stricken by amnesia, returned home to find his wife and son in mourning.

Yamamoto became unconscious while diving in the sea off Okata on Shikoku Island. He was rescued by a fishing boat, but on regaining consciousness was unable to remember who he was or where he came from. After nearly two months, he regained his memory and returned home to learn a funeral service had been held for him the previous week.

Boots Says His Choice Is Not Country

By ALAN WILSON
Associated Press Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A rusty .38-caliber pistol and a trombone ... and Boots Randolph was on his way to stardom.

The year was 1941. Boots, then 14, was relaxing on the porch of his Kentucky farm "when I heard this weird noise comin' down the road."

The noise turned out to be a trombone played—not too expertly—by one of Boots' friends. But the instrument intrigued him so much that Boots persuaded his friend to swap the trombone for that old pistol.

"My mother didn't like that pistol hangin' around the house anyway," said Boots, now 45. The trombone has long been dispensed with. But it helped launch Boots on a career that has made him one of the world's finest saxophonists.

His country-jazz-pop style has sold about eight million records—6½ million of them albums. He has appeared on a host of big-time television shows and performed in the swankiest of clubs throughout the world.

Through it all, however, he has been tabbed basically as a country musician or a "self-styled hillbilly," both of which he said he's not.

"That's a misconception," said Boots, maintaining his heart lies with jazz and pop.

"I go with the trend of the times," he said. "But basically I like jazz. This is where I started back in the Forties, when jazz was quite the thing of the time."

Back then, he began playing for $50 a week in run-of-the-mill clubs. Today, it's only the finest.

But there's one famous entertainment hall where Boots has never played—the Grand Ole Opry House. "The simple fact is, they don't use any horns there. It's a no-no. It's only been in recent years that electric instruments have been allowed on the Opry stage."

When he's not on stage, Boots spends much of his time riding a tractor and tilling land at his farm just outside Nashville.

"Having a farm has always been kind of a dream for me. I was raised on a farm."

Music has always been in Boots' life. "My whole family played some kind of instrument, usually string instruments," he said.

"It was kind of a music appreciation with the family. As long as you played—it didn't matter if you were good or bad—that was the thing."

Reflecting on his early trombone days, Boots said, "It sounded worse than my friend coming down the road."

Three years later, though, his father unexpectedly brought home a sax. And it wasn't long before the trombone was discarded and the sax became Boots' thing.

He learned to play the instrument entirely by himself and says he's fulfilled most of his goals as a performer.

"Music meant a lot to me," he said, "It still does, not just for the money but knowing that you made somebody happy."

"I don't think there's anything as good as a swinging group when it's swinging."

As for the name "Boots?"

"Maybe I had a big pair of boots when I was a kid and they called me 'Boots.' But I don't really know how I got it. I do know it's better than my real name—Homer."

Besides, what's in a name when you can play a sax like Boots Randolph.

Pooh-Poohs The Grading System

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI)—Grades offer few benefits to either teacher or student. So says Stanford C. Erikson, director of the University of Michigan Center for Research on Learning and Teaching.

He believes the major function of grades is to provide information to prospective employers, graduate schools, and other sources completely removed from the classroom. In a report, he challenged both the validity of grades as accurate indicators of achievement and the school's right to furnish them to outside sources.

The first commercial airport in Oklahoma City was Wiley Post Airport, established in 1928 and named for the famous Oklahoma aviator who died with comedian Will Rogers in a plane crash in Alaska.

Vietnam Shipping Said Diverted Through China

By FRED S. HOFFMAN

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pentagon sources report that Communist freighters and tankers have diverted nearly 250,000 tons of supplies to China since the U.S. Navy closed North

Vietnam's ports with minefields last May.

U.S. officials were unable to say how much of this tonnage actually has found its way into

North Vietnam—the original destination—through pipelines and over roads exposed to heavy U.S. bombing.

They estimate the one-quarter-million tons represents about one-third of the supplies delivered by Russian and other

Communist bloc ships directly to Haiphong and other North Vietnamese harbors in the comparable period last year.

Most of the 45 communist ships that reportedly discharged North Vietnam-bound cargo in Shanghai and several other Chinese ports over the past five months flew Soviet flags, the sources said.

Communist-bloc freighters or tankers have tried to pass through the minefields blocking

Haiphong and other North

Vietnamese harbors since the mines were sown by U.S. Navy planes in early May.

That was when President

Nixon sought to cut off North

Vietnam from outside sources of supply.

Although they are having grain-crop problems, the Russians apparently are continuing to send food to North Vietnam.

Pentagon sources said Soviet wheat flour represents about 20 per cent of the supplies put ashore in China for North Vietnam.

If it all got through to North

Vietnam, this wheat flour would go far toward closing the normal gap between the rice and other foodstuffs which

North Vietnam grows and what the population usually consumes.

How much of the Russian wheat flour is reaching North Vietnam by truck is anybody's guess. North Vietnam's roads and bridges leading toward

China are prime targets for U.S. bombing attacks.

U.S. intelligence estimates that gasoline and other petroleum products constitute about one-third of the cargo unloaded in China for transshipment to North Vietnam.

Nearly half of the tonnage ar-iving in China by sea for transfer to North Vietnam is described by U.S. officials as general cargo, which could include trucks, weapons, machinery and other goods to keep

North Vietnam going. Much of this travels from Europe in East German ships.

Someday, U.S. To Go Metric With Rest Of World

By JOSEPH L. MYLER
UPI Senior Editor
WASHINGTON (UPI)—It begins to look as though the United States will join the rest of the world and "go metric" some day.

For the time being it won't be necessary for people going to the store to think in terms of meters, kilograms and liters instead of yards, pounds and quarts.

But it may not be too soon to get used to the idea. The U.S. Office of Education has just set up a National Metric Education Center to provide course materials and research facilities for teachers.

And the National Bureau of Standards (NBS) has put out a wallet card showing how to convert units of length, area, volume, weight, and temperature from those we have used so long to those now used by all but a steadily shrinking small number of countries.

You can buy the cards for 10 cents each or $6.25 for 100 from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office.

Much of the impetus for these actions was provided by the Senate Aug. 18 when it passed a bill calling for a change in the next 10 years from the English, or imperial, to the metric system of weights and measures based on multiples or fractions of 10.

Gradual Change Planned
The change would be voluntary and gradual but planned. A national metric conversion board would supply the planning.

Said a spokesman for the House Science and Astronautics Committee, "We aren't going into something as sweeping as this without extensive hearings." He suggested that the Senate had acted "precipitously."

This view is not shared by Industrial Research magazine. It noted that about 95 per cent of the earth's population is committed to the metric system. This leaves the United States "virtually isolated in our adherence to the obviously unwieldy, outmoded, and complicated English system."

The folklore of the English system—the one we inherited from the British—is fascinating if not particularly comforting to proponents of precise measurement.

Since Anglo-Saxon times or before, the inch was the length of the thumb knuckle, the yard was measured from the nose of King Edgar to the tip of the middle finger on his outstretched arms, and so on.

These measurements have been refined from time to time ever since. And as long as the British Empire covered most of the world, the imperial system dominated the English speaking peoples and those they ruled.

Created by French
But the metric system, with its greater simplicity and purity, was bound to win out. It was created by the French Academy of Sciences in 1790 and vigorously promulgated in Europe by Napoleon.

Most of the nations of the world were using metric standards before World War II

Residents Sack Their Litter

THREE RIVERS, Calif. (UPI)—It may look like an ordinary burlap sack fastened to a post, but to this unincorporated community it's a "roadside litter station," reports Keep America Beautiful, Inc., the national environmental improvement organization.

Having no funds for litter receptacles but a penchant for cleanliness, residents decided a burlap sack would do just fine.

and at this time, according to Dr. Lawrence M. Kushner, acting NBS director, all industrial countries—except the United States—"have already made their commitments to go metric or have already converted."

Although domestic acceptance of metric measurements on the supermarket level seems likely to be a long time coming, many American industries already have converted on their own volition.

As NBS' Kushner put it: "Where our industry may choose to make a fitting which is two inches in diameter, an industry in a metric country might prefer five centimeters. The two resulting parts would be tantalizing close in size, but completely incompatible."

It has been estimated that converting to metric will cost the United States anywhere from $15 billion to $65 billion (though some calculations put it much lower).

"But," according to Industrial Research, "it is costing us far more to hang on to our English system."

Industrial Research figures that 15 per cent of American industry is now on the metric system. School children are being taught metric in math and science.

NASA Converts

And, Kushner said, "virtually all scientific disciplines and engineering use metric language predominantly." The National Aeronautics and Space Administration went metric in 1971 in its technical and scientific publications.

The metric legislation still before Congress is based on a three-year study by the National Bureau of Standards and other agencies which showed, according to NBS, "that the world and the industries within this country are moving inexorably toward metric usage."

A year ago, however, then Commerce Secretary Maurice H. Stans warned against hasty conversion action which might cause us one day to hear a sports announcer say: "The Washington Redskins have the ball, third down, and 9.144 meters to go."

Then there was the time

years ago when Miss Switzerland visited this capital and astounded everybody by giving her measurements as 92-59-92. It turned out she was talking in centimeters which, converted to local standards, came out to 36-23-36.

As a nonmetricated reporter wrote, this was "still awesome but no longer unbelievable."

Experimental College Degrees

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. (UPI)—Ten students at Skidmore College's "University Without Walls" (UWW) recently received the first degrees awarded by the Union of Experimenting Colleges and Universities (UECU).

Most of the graduates have been working in their field of study for several years but never received the baccalaureate degree.

MEN AND MINES

In this modern mine at Benwood, W. Va., coal is now extracted by machine. But men have to be there to drive the heavy, mechanical continuous miners which bite out the black gold.

If they're not riding on the machines, men may have to crawl along tunnels only three or four feet high.

Machines swirl water on the coal to hold down dust. But men still fall victim to the crippling disease known as black lung.

Workers underground test the air for explosive methane gas at frequent intervals. Powdered limestone is sprayed on surfaces in the working areas to prevent fire. But there are still accidents in coal mines. The miner's job is probably the most dangerous industrial job of all. But it is a vital one: nearly half of all the nation's electricity is produced from coal.

The Worry Clinic

Twin Beds Are Danger Signal

Lorna better forget the idea of twin beds! For that was a Hollywood fad, required by the early movies to avoid public protest. But twin beds help zoom our divorce rate. And are the refuge of a husband trying to hide his impotence!

By GEORGE W. CRANE
Ph.D., M.D.

Case V-521: Lorna S., aged 22, is soon to be married.

"Dr. Crane," she began, "I am uncertain about how to furnish our bedroom.

"For a couple of women advice writers have urged twin beds.

"But you say twin beds are a greater cause of divorce!

"So how do you justify your veto of twin beds?"

Hollywood's Fad

The twin bed fad was developed by the movie producers in Hollywood.

For a generation ago, the movie producers knew they would arouse much opposition if they depicted the hero and heroine in the same double bed.

To appease the public, therefore, Hollywood hit up-on the twin bed strategy.

And through the intervening years, young brides blindly followed that fad.

Even the hotels were forced into the twin bed policy in order to appear modern.

Now the hotels are reporting a reversal of that fad, for they find most of their married couples deliberately ask for a double bed. The usual arguments in favor of twin beds are that husband and wife may not want the same amount of covers.

Or one may roll and toss more than the other.

"So twin beds," report some advice writers, "permit better sleep."

Alas, some habitual old bachelors and spinsters may be so set in their ways that even after their wedding they keep waking up when their mate rolls over or jostles them with an elbow.

Also, some fastidious newlyweds complain that their mate exudes such an unpleasant tobacco or alcohol halitosis that they seek refuge in a twin bed.

Valid though these objections may seem, they are far outweighed by the dangers of divorce that twin beds produce.

Indeed, any wife who has been taught by her husband the full enjoyment of marital union, then wants to cling to him the rest of the night.

It's the jittery, cigarette-smoking females who are usually the ones who seek a twin bed!

For they are sexually frustrated to the point of insomnia.

Beware, for after 10 to 20 years of marriage, the wife in her twin bed may find that her mate no longer comes over to seek her affection.

So she worries and frets about their platonic marriage, especially if he further tries to hide his growing impotence via acoustic remarks and alcoholism.

Wives, beware of the threat to your marriage when your husband ASKS you to get twin beds!

For that's one of the preliminary symptoms of a man whose fear of impotence is making him seek to put more distance between himself and his mate.

Even if your marriage has been platonic for 6 months or more, you wives can usually restore its romantic thrills via your boudoir cheesecake if you still occupy the same double bed!

But it is much more difficult when he is 6 feet away in his twin bed!

So send for my booklet "How to Prevent Platonic Marriage," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 cents.

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, OCTOBER 19, 1972

CARROLL RIGHTER'S horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Another day when it would be wise to keep your temper under control. Be mindful that the person with a smile gains the benefits others give out. Looking for something to complain about would only cause others to be repelled. Listen to the woes of others, but don't state yours.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You must use tact if you are to obtain that extra data you want and need at this time, otherwise you could get into trouble. Do something of a charitable nature. Be a humanitarian.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Doing something thoughtful for good friends is wise now, since they could feel you are not sincere. A proper time to engage in social gatherings that are congenial. Avoid perpetual troublemaker.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) If you don't hold your tongue today you could become embroiled in an unpleasant argument with a higher-up. Study a new and better method for handling your regular job. Be constructive.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Going off for amusement you like is fine, provided you are with congenials. Conditions around you are a bit frustrating, but don't let this bother you. Avoid person who tells lies.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Don't rely on your hunches now, since they are erroneous, but use your finest judgment to get best results. Experts can be very helpful to you now. Show more devotion to loved one.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Talk over business matters with associates and find out what it is they expect of you. Exchanging ideas and debating is fine, but not arguing. Show that you are a very reasonable person.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You want to shirk important responsibilities for fun today, but this could lead to a setback, so keep steady and toe the mark. Use extreme care and you avoid ruining clothing. Be wise.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You could run into some disappointment where fun is concerned in the evening, but it's not worth worrying about. Start working out details connected with a special talent you have.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Don't run out on family and leave them to do all the work that has to be done, but do more than your share and all are happy. Streamline your living. Show that you have wisdom.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Make sure you use extreme care in motion so that you are well protected from dangerous influences. Don't be thoughtless and blunt with others which could start arguments. Use diplomacy.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Although finances seem difficult right now, count your blessings and you find you are better off than you thought. Find the right outlet for your talents and add to income quickly.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Don't find fault with a friendly associate because you are under some strong influence

The bidding:

2 NT Pass 6 NT Pass

Pass Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♠ South appears to be the victim of an unfavorable diamond break in today's hand, and yet, thorough research by declarer could have guided him into the winning line of play.

The six trump contract was reached directly.

South's opening bid of two trump announces at least 22 high card points and since North has 11 himself, the partnership is assured of the minimum number required for a slam endeavor. North accordingly raised directly to six trump.

West opened the jack of hearts, East put up the ace and returned the suit which declarer won with the queen.

South had eleven top tricks—two hearts and three in each of the other suits. Diamonds will produce a twelfth if that suit is divided three-two. South observed that he could readily cope with a four-one division by finessing against West if the latter held four to the jack.

At trick two, the king of diamonds was cashed, followed by the queen. When West showed out, the hand was over, for South could not avoid a diamond loser at the end and his contract was set by one trick.

There was a way for declarer to cope successfully with the adverse division in diamonds and he did not require a "peek" either, in order to achieve his objective. A properly timed campaign would have led to a successful end position. The diamond play can be put off until more information is obtained.

Suppose that South cashes the king of hearts at trick three. East shows out and will presumably discard a club. South runs his spades next. East again shows out on the third round, discarding another club. Ten of West's cards have now become identified—five spades and five hearts. He cannot have many diamonds, therefore.

As a final bit of inventory research, the ace of clubs is cashed and a small club led to the queen. West follows both times, which means that he has at most one diamond and any diamond plays must therefore be made thru East. South is fully equipped to cope with the situation.

The ace of diamonds is played and West contributes the four which completes the count on his hand. He began with five spades, five hearts, one diamond and two clubs. The ten of diamonds is led next, intending to let that card ride if East does not cover.

East presumably covers the ten of diamonds with the jack and declarer wins the trick with the queen as West shows out. A club to the king puts: dummy back in to lead another diamond. South retains the king-eight behind East's nine-seven and which ever card the latter plays, declarer covers as cheaply as possible to bring in the entire suit which gives him his twelfth trick on the deal.

Ayden-Grifton School News

By VERA L. CLAYBROOK
The week of Oct. 16-20 Ayden-Grifton High School is focusing the spotlight on two of the most important centers of the school — the Reading and the Math Laboratories.

The Reading Lab is housed in a regular classroom and is supervised by a Reading Lab teacher, Mrs. Leila Heath, and an English Resource teacher, Mrs. Laura Babington.

Through the media of machines, tapes, records, and programmed reading kits, the Reading Laboratory endeavors to improve reading skills of Level III English students in grades nine, 10, and 12. Grade 11, Level III is not included because it is scheduled at first period when two other Level III classes meet.

Prior to coming to the Reading Lab, the Level III students are given the Slosson Oral Reading Test to determine the students' abilities in vocabulary recognition and the California Achievement Test to determine comprehension skills.

Once the students' scores have been determined, each student is programmed into one machine program and two reading kits.

These programs are on the same level as the student's scores have indicated. The students will progress at their own rate of achievement. Grades are given to them for the work they have done. This grade is averaged in with the student's English grade.

Basically, the Reading Lab is operated in the same manner as it was operated last year.

Math Lab
The Math Laboratory is operated by and under the direction of Mrs. Grace Foster. Ayden-Grifton is participating in a pilot program which provided a Math Laboratory for the school. It is funded by the federal government and is designed to stimulate interest in math and to provide individual instruction for the students. Experiments, games, and activities are planned to help make math more meaningful and more interesting, especially to those students who find the subject difficult.

Unfortunately, the Math Lab is not open to all students at the present because of limited space and funds. Hopefully, as the program grows and shows progress, all students will be able to benefit from it.

Sophomores and juniors are faced with more activity in the form of tests. The Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test and National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test will be given to them in a combined test this year on Tuesday, October 24. The test measures verbal and mathematical abilities important in college work. The PSAT-NMSQT is recommended for use by secondary schools in guiding sophomores and juniors who plan to continue their education and for juniors seeking recognition and financial assistance through scholarship programs administered by NMSC. Cost of the test is $2.50.

School Meeting
Attendance at the meeting of the Parent-Student-Teacher Association held recently in the auditorium, was extremely disappointing.

The organizing of this group was activated by a meeting of parents in May. Since the initiation of the organization, a successful meeting was held September 7.

At this time, Harry Jarvis, chairman of the school's Advisory Council, appointed Mrs. Lester Hughes chairman of a nominating committee to select a slate of officers to be presented at the meeting held Thursday. Thirty-two members of the faculty, eight parents, and one student attended the meeting and elected William Earl McLawhorn of Ayden, president; Mrs. Plummer

Park Buying TV Station

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP)—Park Broadcasting, Inc., of Ithaca, N. Y., has agreed to purchase WBMG-TV in Birmingham for $5.5 million, Roy H. Park, president and sole owner of the firm, announced here Tuesday.

Acquisition of the station, a full time CBS affiliate, will bring to seven the number of television stations in the Park Broadcasting group—the maximum permitted by the Federal Communications Commission. Others in the Park group are Dillahun of Grifton, vice-president; Mrs. Lester Hughes of Grifton, secretary-treasurer; and Mrs. Troy Staton of Ayden, reporter.

After further discussion, the group decided to meet again Thursday, December 7 at 7:30 in the auditorium for further discussion on by-laws and policies for the organization. With the cooperation of Principal William C. Wiggins and the faculty, classroom visitation will follow the meeting.

If parents are interested in the operation of the school and in the communications between school and home, surely they will support this new organization in a better manner in the future. See you next week!

WTVR-TV, Richmond, Va.; WNCN-TV, Greenville, N. C.; WSLV-TV, Roanoke, Va.; WDEF-TV, Chattanooga, Tenn.; WJHL-TV, Johnson City, Tenn.; and WUTR-TV, Utica, N. Y.

Park made the announcement after meeting with employees of WBMG. He said the station's staff would be retained.

"I am delighted that Hugh Smith has agreed to remain with the station as executive vice president and general manager," Park said. "We count heavily on retaining the staff he has led, just as we have kept and relied on the employees who have been responsible for building the other broadcasting properties we have acquired."

Smith is a native of Mississippi and is a former president of both the Mississippi and Alabama broadcasters associations, Park said.

River Waste Hearing Set

RALEIGH (AP) — A hearing is scheduled next Tuesday in Wake Superior Court on the state's request for a temporary restraining order to prohibit a Hertford County plant from discharging nutrient pollutants into the Chowan River.

The attorney general's office filed the complaint Tuesday and asked that the plant operated by Farmers Chemical Association Inc. cease operations until it can provide adequate waste water treatment facilities.

The state Water and Air Quality Control Committee held a hearing at Winton Oct. 5 on problems growing out of excessive algae growth in the Chowan. At that time the committee ordered Farmers Chemical Association to halt waste discharges into the river. The plant is at Tunis.

Atty. Gen. Robert Morgan said the company had discharged wastes into the river in violation of an agreement with the state Board of Water and Air Resources.

The complaint asks that a temporary restraining order be issued pending trial of the case on its merits.
