

Galifianakis Relieved By Grind's End

GALIFIANAKIS in Greenville during final whirlwind tour.

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

More than a score of supporters attended a breakfast for Senatorial candidate Nick Galifianakis here this morning as the Democrat began his last swing through North Carolina before tomorrow's election.

"It's hard to believe that this campaign for the U.S. Senate is almost over," Galifianakis said.

"It was just about one year ago — on November 22, 1971, to be exact..." Galifianakis said, that he came to Greenville to officially announce his candidacy.

"We have come a long way uphill since then. Thankfully, the top of the mountain is now in sight and where once we climbed almost alone, now we have hundreds of thousands of North Carolinians pulling with us."

According to Galifianakis, the tour a year ago to announce his candidacy and "this one today were both motivated by my desire to build my campaign around personal contact with people throughout this state and not to rely heavily on paid advertising to sell my name like a bar of soap."

The candidate emphasized, "I think I have benefitted immeasurably from this decision. Not only do I know the state well, but also this kind of personal campaigning has enabled me to meet countless thousands of our citizens in all 100 counties and to have become familiar with their needs and concerns," and to discuss with them on a first-hand basis their concerns.

"Because I have built my campaign around people and not dollars," Galifianakis commented, "I intend to represent the people and not the special interest dollars in the United States Senate. I think that's what a majority of North Carolinians want too, and that is why I feel confident of a decisive victory tomorrow."

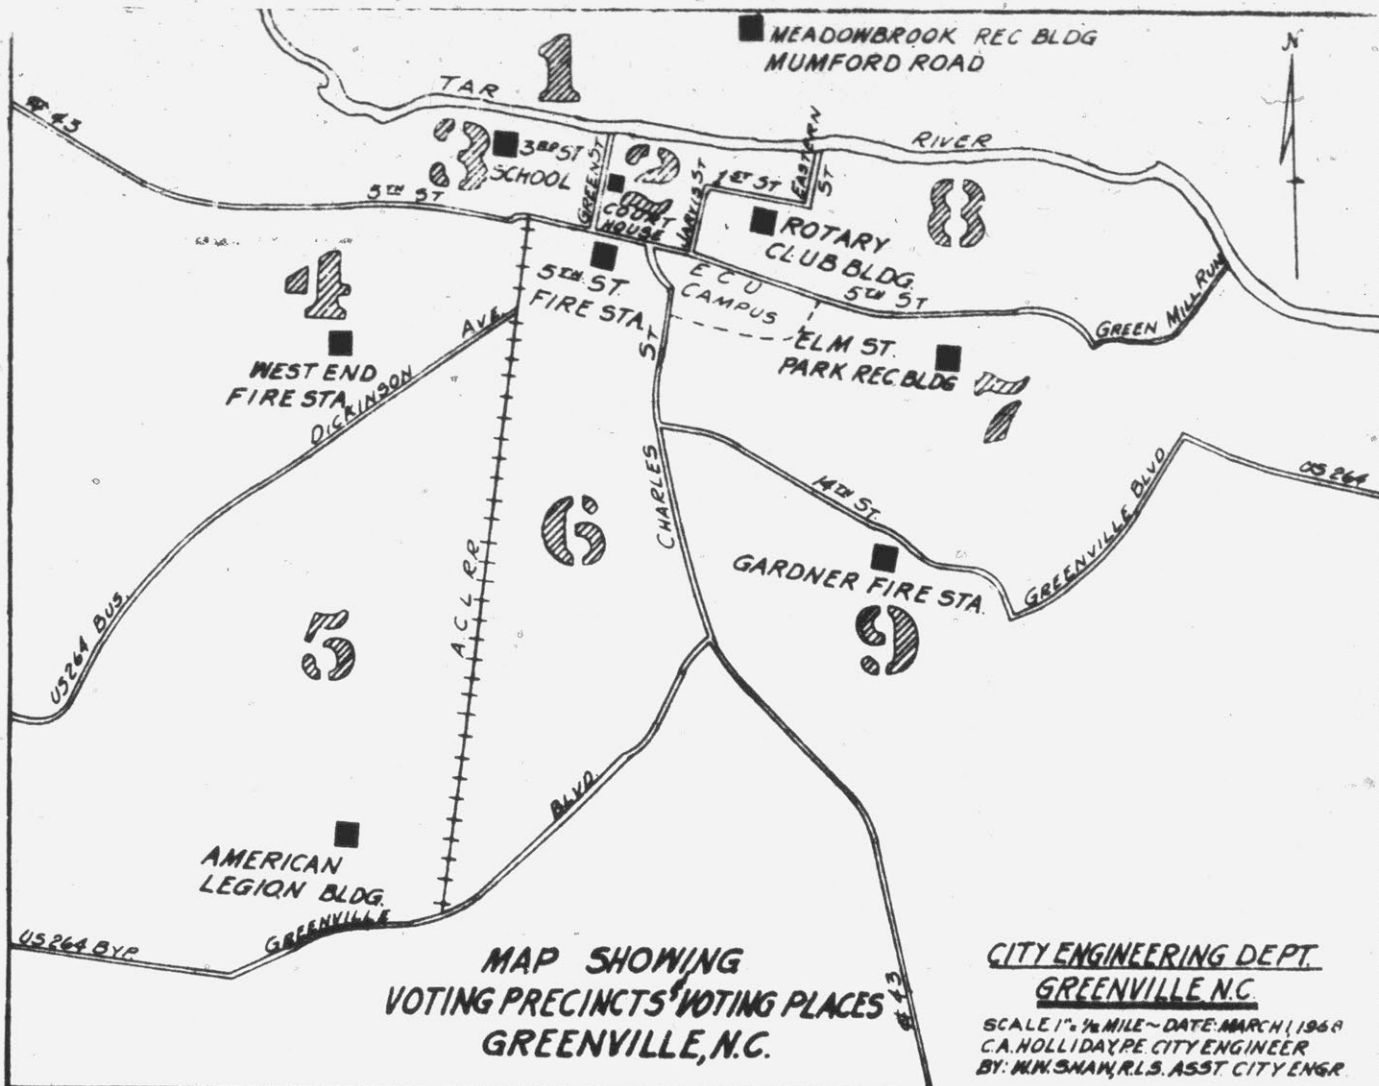

The Senatorial hopeful added, "The people of Eastern North Carolina and the farmers of this state will have a friend in me in the U.S. Senate."

Galifianakis, with 12 years state and federal legislative experience, said he intends to open a Senatorial office in the East if elected.

Gallup Poll . . .

The latest and final figure is based upon those registered voters who are most likely to vote, using a series of questions designed to identify those respondents with the highest likelihood of voting.

Here is the trend among registered voters prior to final survey, with intervening dates:

	Trend Since Start of Primaries
	Nixon	McG.	Other, Undec.
Oct. 13-18	59	36	5
Sept. 29-Oct. 9	60	34	6
Sept. 22-25	61	33	6
Aug. 26-27	64	30	6
Aug. 5-12	57	31	12
July 14-17	56	37	7
June 16-19	53	37	10
May 26-29	53	34	13
April 28-May 1	49	39	12

Race Has Been Closer In Terms of Issues

During the campaign, Gallup Poll issue barometers have pointed to a closer election than that indicated by the candidate preference questions.

While Nixon held a wide 59 to 36 per cent lead in a mid-October survey, the same survey showed the GOP leading the Democratic Party by the smaller ratio of 55 to 45 per cent as the party perceived as better able to deal with the problem up-permost in the mind of the individual voter.

Further evidence is seen in the fact that the GOP held a 54 to 46 per cent margin in the same survey on the hardy perennials of "peace and prosperity" which have been key issues in virtually every presidential campaign of this century.

The upturn in the economy during recent months has contributed to McGovern's problems.

Third Party Candidates

By inheriting the lion's share of the Wallace vote, President Nixon has an advantage in the presidential race which he did not have in the 1968 contest when he ran against Gov. George Wallace and Sen. Hubert Humphrey.

The vote for minor parties this year is only about one per cent, with John G. Schmitz, head of the American Party, replacing the recuperating Wallace, receiving the largest percentage of this vote.

Democratic Defection At Record High

Democratic defection during this year's campaign has been at a record high, with the proportion of Democrats favoring Nixon ranging between 30 and 40 per cent. One of McGovern's chief liabilities with voters has been his "credibility." A nationwide Gallup survey conducted during the campaign, for example, found voters by the ratio of 5-to-2 saying Nixon is more "sincere" and "believable" than McGovern.

Popular Vote Not Electoral Vote

It is important to bear in mind that the current survey findings refer to the popular vote, not the electoral vote. To report the electoral vote, it would be necessary to conduct individual and full-scale surveys in each of the 50 states of the union.

Election Survey Methods

The interviewing areas used in the survey constitute a probability sample of election precincts. Selection of households and respondents within households is not left to the discretion of interviewers but is controlled by a procedure designed to provide an objective, systematic choice of respondents.

Some error is inherent in all sample surveys. No measuring instrument dealing with human behavior is perfect. Although the problems that arise in every election seem to be similar to those that have been faced in other elections, each contest involves variables and problems of measurement unique to it. And it is suggested, therefore, that a margin of error of 3 to 4 percentage points be taken into account in interpreting Gallup Poll findings.

Problem of Turnout

One of the continuing problems in election polling is that of turnout. If every adult in the nation voted, one of the serious sources of polling error would be eliminated. Actually less than two-thirds of those of voting age take the trouble to vote in a presidential election. To identify those voters who are most likely to go to the polls, the Gallup Poll makes use of a battery of screening questions. These questions are designed to measure such factors as interest in the election, whether or not a person is registered to vote, and most importantly the likelihood of his voting.

Undecided Voter

Another problem faced by polltakers in election surveys is the undecided voter.

Final figures are always reported by the Gallup Poll after having allocated the undecided vote on an objective basis.

If this step is not taken, the reader has no clear way of judging how close a particular poll has come in estimating the vote.

To obtain a realistic expression of voter preferences, the Gallup Poll makes use of a "secret ballot" technique which permits voters to mark their own preferences on a paper ballot.

Interpreting Poll Findings

To interpret poll findings properly, readers need to take account of the accuracy of the polling organization throughout its history.

The average deviation, that is, the average amount by which final Gallup Poll figures have differed from the elections beginning with 1936 has been 2.5 percentage points. The average deviation for 11 national elections since 1948 has been 1.6 percentage points. The largest deviation was registered in 1936 when the poll correctly pointed to Roosevelt's victory but missed the mark by 6.8 percentage points. The smallest deviation came in the presidential race four years ago. The deviation was less than 1 percentage point, actually 0.5.

Western Europe Inflation Soars

By ALINE MOSBY

PARIS (UPI) — Secretary Francoise Tacket came home to Paris from vacation to find bread, mineral water and just about everything else to eat had gone up in price. Rome housewives complained of 2 per cent food hikes in July. London apartment prices shot to Paris levels.

Inflation, that disease of prosperous industrialized countries, is racing unchecked across western Europe.

The situation has reached such crisis proportions that European finance ministers representing the enlarged European Common Market meet Oct. 31 to map an inflation battle. With vacations ended, labor unrest over booming prices is threatening to boil over into strikes, particularly in France and Italy.

Paris still reigns as the most expensive city in the west with Stockholm, Bonn and Oslo not far behind.

Dizzy Price Spiral

At the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) headquarters in Paris, inflation experts say the United States' annual inflation growth now is 3 per cent. This is a snail's pace compared to the dizzy spiral in other OECD member countries.

The OECD lists Portugal as suffering the greatest rate of inflation increase—11.1 per cent for the year between July 1, 1971, and July 31, 1972.

Runners-up in the price boom are Spain at 8.3 per cent, Finland 7.6 per cent, Norway 7.3 per cent, The Netherlands 7.2 per cent, Sweden 6.9 per cent, Austria, Switzerland, Belgium and Italy all 5.9 per cent, France 5.7 per cent, Germany 5.4 per cent, Britain 5.3 per cent, Japan 4.8 per cent and Canada 4.6 per cent.

When it comes to the cost of living—the actual prices—Paris still is the west's most expensive city, according to surveys. France at the start of the inflation race had higher prices than other countries. Although Portugal has the highest inflation rate, its prices used to be so low that Lisbon still is the cheapest European capital.

One Common Market organization made a cost of living scale for its diplomats using Brussels as a common denominator of 100. Stockholm was listed as the most expensive city at 116, Paris next at 109, Oslo 108, Bonn 107, The Hague 101, Copenhagen 100. The countries enjoying the lowest prices for diplomats were London 93, Rome 93 and Lisbon

33 Per Cent Sales Tax

For the millions of ordinary citizens who pay sales taxes, Paris is the most expensive, with a tax on goods and services ranging from 17 to 33 per cent. Sweden has none. (Norway's sales tax is 20 per cent, Denmark's 15 per cent, The Netherlands' 14 per cent and Germany's 11 per cent.)

The inflation spiral in France made headlines all summer. The July boost of 0.8 per cent, the highest in 2½ years in France, was topped in Europe only by Spain at 1.3 per cent. French television announced France had set "a non-Olympic record."

The French Finance Ministry promptly froze prices of public services such as the subway until next spring. But the press howled "too late" because the government recently raised the prices of electricity, tobacco and medical services.

The Price of Shirts

The French do not need statistics to be convinced their prices are high. The price of a subway ticket has more than doubled in Paris in five years.

A middle-class person looking for a two-room apartment in a decent area of Paris has to figure on at least the equivalent of $275 a month in rent. A U.S. made men's shirt that costs $8 in New York sells for the equivalent of $25 in Paris.

With prices soaring around Europe, one fast-disappearing figure is that of the American tourist or expatriate living in luxury on his dollars in what used to be a cheaper Europe.

In addition to suffering along with Europeans from inflation, Americans living abroad on dollar incomes have found their money worth less because of the 1971 dollar devaluation. In Europe the dollar drop has been worst in France. An American in France who changes his dollars into francs today receives 20 per cent less than he did before the Nixon administration devalued the dollar.

Information On 24-Hour Basis

NEW YORK (UPI)—Argentine airlines reports that a permanent information office, open 24 hours a day and staffed by national tourist board multi-lingual personnel, is now helping travelers at Ezeiza International Airport in Buenos Aires. Personnel answer questions ranging from shopping and entertainment to sightseeing and money exchange.

School Money Review

By BARRY SCHWEID

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today agreed to review a New York law that provided $28 million a year in state funds for parochial schools until it was declared unconstitutional.

The justices acted on appeals from the ruling by a three-judge panel in New York City last April. The case will be heard early next year and a final decision announced by the end of June 1973.

Appeals had been filed by Arthur Levitt, the state comptroller; Ewald B. Nyquist, the commissioner of education; Earl Brydges, majority leader of the state Senate; and three Roman Catholic and two Jewish parochial schools.

The 1970 Mandated Service Act allocated direct payments to parochial and other private schools to reimburse them for administering examinations, maintaining attendance records and making other reports required of the schools by the state.

In a 2-1 decision, the district court in New York held the assistance violated the First Amendment's separation of church and state.

The appeal by Levitt and Nyquist emphasized that the nonpublic schools are required to keep records and administer tests in order to comply with New York State's compulsory attendance laws.

Therefore, the state officials said, the schools should be reimbursed for their expenses. They added that "the precise question" has never been ruled upon by the high court.

Weary Indians Prepare For Seizure Showdown

By PEGGY SIMPSON

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hundreds of tense, tired Indian demonstrators prepared today for what they expected to be a battle with police to defend their illegal occupancy of the federal building they seized last Thursday.

The government indicated it, too, anticipated a confrontation to end the unprecedented four-day takeover of a government bureau.

The government said it would ask a court for permission to forcibly evict the Indians soon after 8 a.m., the deadline federal negotiators gave the Indians Sunday night for evacuating the Bureau of Indian Affairs building.

"We have now declared war on the United States of America—seek your stations," said Vernon Bellencourt, director of the American Indian Movement which has dominated the demonstration.

Another leader of the Trail of Broken Treaties caravan, Russell Means, predicted any fight between police and the well-armed Indians might resemble the massacre at Wounded Knee.

The Indians took over the building last Thursday as they came to the capital to protest their treatment at the hands of government.

In contrast to last Friday night and early Saturday, however, when the Indians prepared to confront police with an emotional fervor that verged on jubilation, the mood early today was sober and brooding.

While there was unanimity in voting to stay and fight rather than accept the government's last offer of housing at a nearby auditorium—this time with portable showers being added to the bargain—the Indians were hushed and stoic while Bellencourt explained the situation.

"They shouted 'no' to the offer but there was no weapon-waving or chanting, only a rush to start putting in place the barricades removed early last Saturday.

Estimates of the number of Indians in the building ranged from 400 to 2,000.

There had been an obvious stiffening of the Indians' position throughout the weekend as the demonstrators began to fear the government negotiators were interested in talking with them only about leaving the building, not about the other concerns such as dismissal of top BIA and Interior Department officials and restructuring of Indian programs.

"I believe that this building is the only card we have," Means said at one point Sunday.

Means said the Indians wouldn't leave until "each point in our demands has reached specific agreement."

"If it had not been election week," Means said, "I believe the cops would already have ripped us off." He said he has committed himself to fight to the death.

Singer's Career Is Built On Love

By EVE SHARBUTT
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Some people came up to singer-comedienne Julie DeJohn on a street recently and said, "Hey, aren't you...?"

Julie, ever the witty 300-pound showwoman, replied, "How could you miss me?"

But she was delighted, and later told her publicist, "I think things are finally beginning to happen for me."

The woman people recognize on the street began her entertainment career as half of the singing DeJohn Sisters. When sister Dux decided to get married, Julie went solo, "even though I'm built double." She is a frequent guest on television talk shows and credits Mike Douglas, with whom she has appeared many times, for much of her success.

"I know where I'm going. I weigh things and decide what's important, and I have to put the blinkers on once in a while," she said in a rare serious moment.

Julie says people—even relatives—ask why she doesn't give up show business, stay home and take care of her family—husband Dave Patterson and sons David, 8, and Pat, 7.

"If my career interfered with my family, I'd give it up, much as I enjoy it. When Dave and I married we had a talk. He is a teacher and talented in other areas, and we decided if we did the things he was trained to do, he could make maybe $300 a week, and I could work in an office and make about $125. So we decided we'd keep on with the show business thing. Dave handles all the arrangements, all the publicity."

"When we travel we take the boys along. We get their homework from their teachers and set up a regular schoolroom in the hotel. We put the American flag atop the television set and have opening exercises. Dave teaches the classes and handles physical education. I'm the librarian and music teacher," Julie said.

"The boys love it. We're tourists everywhere we go. We see the sights and discuss what we saw. And last year, both boys were at the head of their class. I was so proud."

When she's not on the road performing in clubs and for television, Julie DeJohn is Mrs. Patterson with a five-bedroom home she loves in a Philadelphia suburb.

"I always wanted a house," she said. "I do all the housework and the cooking. Now we're redecorating, doing the library and all that, and I've been helping Dave wallpaper, covering myself in paste."

"When I know company's coming, I cook ahead and freeze things. Then I can spend time with them while they're here. All of this represents stability to me."

"We all help each other. The kids keep their toys straight and they love doing that. They know my work, singing and traveling—that's what I love."

Using her size as a basis for comic routines has been good business for Julie, who says every woman has a weight problem or thinks she does.

"I hate fat lady clothes, and I hate those slim models who always wear them, so I design my own. I draw what I want and my dressmaker whips it right up," she said.

Julie is a fan of rich fabrics, prints and bright colors. She has new dresses of tiger and leopard print, and favors pastel colors, even in winter. She likes knits that don't wrinkle for traveling.

"I don't wear 'basic black'. My husband hates it on me. He loves me in things that brighten my face. I love vests, long or short, because they hide things... I've lots to hide! I like sleeves. Fat arms are ugly. When you do your own clothes, you never see them duplicated on anyone else."

Julie says the dressmaker is the only one who can tell when she loses 50 or 60 pounds. "Even my husband doesn't notice," she lamented, and went on to explain she had developed bad eating habits as a child.

"They can send a man to the moon, so why can't they make a head of lettuce that tastes like lasagna?" queried Julie.

"There is discrimination against fat people," she added. "Fat Americans are people too."

She has joined a campaign for larger seats on commercial airlines and for longer seatbelts, "so you don't always have to ask for an extension."

The lady with the ready laugh and winning smile says she will never lose her enthusiasm.

"There's a tremendous satisfaction in my work. We have a great investment in each other and a good life," she said. "And there's a good future ahead."

It's Appalling To Ask 'Who's Calling?'

By Abigail Van Buren
(© 1972 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: I am an executive. I employ a vast number of people, and receive a staggering number of telephone calls daily, but I would never allow my secretary to ask, "May I tell him who is calling?"

When I make a phone call personally and receive such treatment, I feel insulted.

Enclosed is a poem I clipped some years ago from the Wall Street Journal. It reflects my sentiments perfectly:

When calling Mr. Jones
I find it most appalling
To have his secretary ask,
"May I tell him who is calling?"
One of these days
When I find it all too taxing,
I'll come right back to her and say,
"May I ask you, WHO IS ASKING?"

OFFENDED IN HOUSTON

DEAR OFFENDED:
A man with such ability
And obvious humility
Deserves some loud hosannas
[If he doesn't go bananas.]

EDGAR ALLAN PO-PO

DEAR ABBY: What's all this nonsense about being hurt or mad because your husband doesn't call you by your first name? I am married to a man who hasn't called me by my first name for the last 19 years and 361 days!

So what? I rarely call him by his first name. I usually say, "Hey" or "Say there, Sugar Pie," to get his attention. Neither one of us is sadistic, as you suggested, and I strongly resent your inference that we may be.

When I tell my husband the phone is for him, why must I say, "Harry, it's for you?"

When my husband asks me what I want from the store, I know he's speaking to me, and I know my name is Mary, so why must he use it?

Desiring to hear your name spoken unnecessarily seems to me a case of extreme vanity and childishness.

MARY

DEAR MARY: YOU may not object if your husband never calls you by your name. And frankly, I wouldn't object either. However, the woman who wrote to me objected very much, and even after having begged her husband to please speak her name occasionally, he refused to do it. And I think that's downright mean!

DEAR ABBY: A couple we know and like very much recently parted and are getting divorced.

Another couple, friends of both of them, gave a housewarming for the husband to welcome him to his new bachelor apartment—gifts, drinks, food, etc.

It has always been our opinion that divorce is heart-break for at least one of the parties, and only a perverted sense of values justifies anything like this. Or are we just a couple of old squares?

PUZZLED

DEAR PUZZLED: Generally speaking, I see nothing wrong with warming the house of either party, but you suggest in this case, the husband is now a happy bachelor, but the wife is heartbroken. If that's true, then you are inaccurately describing the couple who threw the party for the husband as "friends of both."

Showing One Vote Does Count

A clipping showed up at our office recently. It was not attributed, but it did contain some pertinent thoughts.

"One vote does count!" it read.

"One vote made Oliver Cromwell Lord Protector of the Commonwealth.

"One vote decided that Americans speak English rather than German.

"One vote kept Aaron Burr, later charged with treason, from becoming President.

"One vote made Texas part of the U.S.

"One vote saved President Andrew Johnson from impeachment.

"One vote changed France from a monarchy to a republic.

"One vote admitted California, Idaho, Washington, and Oregon to the Union.

"One vote made Adolph Hitler head of the Nazi party.

"One vote saved selective service system only 12 weeks before Pearl Harbor.

Yes, one vote does count," the item continued. "And if you consider ten, a hundred, or a thousand votes, it screams a demand; for in our democracy, the people get the kind of government they deserve."

We are sorry we do not know who to attribute those thoughts to, but we wanted to use them today because they are so timely.

A Billion Dollar Travel Year?

By BRYAN HAISLIP
RALEIGH — North Carolina's first billion dollar travel year is just around the corner.

Next year could be the one to reach the golden goal, said Chuck Barbour, travel and promotion director for the state department of natural and economic resources.

Preliminary reports indicate a 1972 total in Tar Heel income from travel and tourists in the neighborhood of $900 million, Barbour noted. That would be a $50 million gain over last year.

Opening of the Carowinds theme park south of Charlotte next spring is one of the reasons to look for a further upward surge in 1973, Barbour said.

Pay-off from continuing efforts to attract visitors from afar and cooperative overseas promotion by southern states will assist in exploiting the travel potential, he added.

"We're just scratching the surface. The four-day work week and longer vacations give people the leisure time. They're eager for somewhere to go. We've got to make them want to come to North Carolina," he said.

Mission To Europe
A bid for European tourist trade will be made this month on a mission sponsored by the Southern Travel Directors Council and the U.S. Travel Service.

Representing North Carolina among the 11 states involved in the mission will be Barbour, Lt. Gov. Pat Taylor, and Charles Heatherly, publications editor in the travel and promotion division. They leave Nov. 18 on a 14-day swing through England, Denmark, Sweden, France and West Germany.

Along the way, the Tar Heels will meet travel industry people, distribute posters and brochures on North Carolina and its attractions, and hand out complimentary samples of Tar Heel peanuts.

The South is the number one destination for visitors from abroad, Barbour observed. The mission's objective, he said, is to entice more of them to include North Carolina on the itinerary.

The state already has plowed foreign ground in efforts to boost the tourist crop. A $26,000 advertising program, financed with a matching federal grant, cultivated the Canadian market. The division also participated in two travel shows in Canada, displaying variety vacationland wares.

The Canadians Are Coming
"On the Outer Banks, they told us they could see a difference this summer," Barbour reported. "They had more requests for travel information from Canada, and more Canadian tourists stopping."

A survey next summer will try to measure the impact of the effort, he added.

The greeting visitors receive as they arrive can influence them to stay awhile, Barbour said. Welcome centers boost travel business by putting into the hands of arrivals information on where to go and how to get there.

The fourth center, located at King's Mountain on interstate highway 85 near the South Carolina line, is scheduled for opening later this month. Bid for letting for a fifth, on I-77 near the South Carolina, also is due this month.

Centers already in operation are near Henderson on the I-85 entrance from Virginia; Roanoke Rapids on I-95 from Virginia; and on I-40 in the mountains near the Tennessee line. In all, eight centers are projected.

Two-Year Tenure Ending
Barbour, a former newspaperman and Democratic party official, is near the end of his tenure as the state's travel salesman. He expects to vacate the post at the close of the present administration. Gov. Bob Scott named Barbour to the job about two years ago. Over that period, Barbour said, the travel industry has gained some $100 million and established itself as second behind textiles in the state's economy.

It's a sign of the times, he observed, that travel is now first, second or third in every state. People are mobile and looking for ways to use leisure time, he said.

Plans for a state zoological park near Asheville, variety in commercial attractions throughout the state, development of year-round seasons in the mountains and coastal resorts are all elements in a bright future for Tar Heel travel, he said.

A sophisticated, in-depth travel study is needed to point the path to further growth, he said. The present annual survey does not give the detail which could be useful for planning, Barbour explained. "We need to know more about where our visitors come from, what brings them here, and the kind of attractions or services that could keep them longer," he added.

A Time For Action By Every Qualified Voter

Tomorrow is election day in our nation. All of us who are qualified to vote have the opportunity to go to the polls and choose our leaders on a national, state and local level. It is easy enough to say that one's vote does not count, or that there is no one worth voting for. But we must remember that from those names on the ballots, men are going to be chosen who will determine how our tax dollars are going to be spent; they will decide our very destinies and those of our children and their children.

It is a fact that every vote does count, and every qualified voter should make certain to visit the polls on Tuesday to cast ballots for the candidates of one's choice.

Turned Off By Amnesty Stand

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK
LOS ANGELES — Canvassers for Sen. George McGovern, disappointed by support for President Nixon they found in Mexican-American East Los Angeles, were stunned to learn the frequent reason: opposition to McGovern's amnesty for Vietnam draft-dodgers.

In talking to surprised McGovern canvassers, these Chicanos showed considerable more indignation over the supposedly white middle-class amnesty issue than injustices inflicted on migrant farm workers. With their sons having fought and died in Vietnam while college students enjoyed deferments, these Mexican-American parents are outraged over McGovern's amnesty call. In such East Los Angeles households, the canvassers note, the photograph of the family's Vietnam veteran in uniform is given an honored place.

Anti-amnesty sentiment is not the only middle-class virtue found among Chicanos here, certainly not unanimous in joining McGovern's constituency for change. Hopes that a solid Chicano vote would pin down the nation's most populous state have become sheer illusion. Mr. Nixon now figures to carry 30 to 40 per cent of the state's Mexican-Americans.

But this illusion is only part of a larger one—that California somehow is different from other heavily populated states and constitutes McGovern country. In truth, many reliable polls show California is one of Mr. Nixon's best big states, with a lead at this writing around one million votes. And the California illusion, persisted in by high-ranking McGovernites until the bitter end, itself reflects the overall campaign's separation from reality.

For months, McGovern has been assured of his invincibility here by supporters such as state Assemblymen Willie Brown and John Burton, his flashy, super-liberal state campaign leaders from San Francisco. In a Sept. 5 meeting at the Los Angeles Hilton Hotel, Brown and Burton informed McGovern that no matter how badly he was faring in old politics Eastern states, he was in wonderful shape in new politics California.

This was partly based on McGovern's superb precinct organization of last spring's California primary being rebuilt. It was not. Nor did expected McGovern money to finance voter registration ever arrive. When no funds came from Washington Chicano leader Cesar Chavez's enthusiasm and work for McGovern flagged noticeably.

But the real source of McGovern confidence here was the feeling that California is more avant-garde liberal than Eastern industrial states. Blacks, Chicanos, college students, concerned liberal suburbanites and pot-smoking hippies would compose a hard core of McGovern supporters absent in Pennsylvania or Ohio. Aerospace unemployment and long experience with Richard M. Nixon would add still more votes.

In fact, California is a good barometer of the nation. The Life Of The Undecided

WASHINGTON — It was Election Day and Stieglitz, who was undecided on how he was going to vote, woke up at 7 o'clock. His wife asked him what he wanted for breakfast.

"I don't know," Stieglitz said.

"Do you want eggs or do you want cereal?"

"I like eggs," Stieglitz said, "but I also enjoy cereal."

"Well, what about pancakes?"

"I hadn't thought of pancakes," Stieglitz said. "That really does make the choice hard."

"Would you please make up your mind?" Stieglitz' wife asked.

"Let's see. Eggs, cereal or pancakes? You forgot waffles."

"Do you want waffles?"

"I don't think so,"

Stieglitz' wife brought him a cup of coffee and a hard roll.

After breakfast they got into his car to go to the voting polls at the local public school.

"How are you going to get there?" Stieglitz' wife asked.

"If I go down Foxhall Road I'll run into a lot of traffic. But if I go down MacArthur Boulevard I'll hit a lot of lights."

Other Editors Say A Nixon Peace

(Jacksonville Daily News)

It would be the final bitterness in the long and bitter experience of the Vietnam war if the coming at last of peace, uncertain and imperfect as it is likely to be, was not the beginning of a much-needed period of healing but was instead the cause of continued division among Americans.

It would be the height of irony if the ending at long last of the killing and the dying did not redound to the credit of the man responsible for this achievement but instead served to increase the peculiar and deep-seated distrust some people seem to have of him.

The claim that the President could have secured a peace agreement, with the same terms, a year ago or four years ago is probably to be expected in the furor of the last days of a political campaign.

That does not excuse it, however. It is the lowest blow delivered by either side in a pretty low campaign. It is the source of sour grapes.

We have only to recall just where we were four years ago to begin to appreciate the magnitude of what has been accomplished.

More than half a million American soldiers were on the soil of Vietnam. More than 30,000 had died and scores of new names were added to the casualty lists every week. Yet nothing seemed to have been accomplished. The enemy was as strong and determined as ever, our ally as weak and as far from self-sufficiency as ever. There seemed absolutely no solution.

When Richard Nixon entered office, he had four alternatives in Vietnam:

He could continue things as they were; he could launch all-out war against North Vietnam; he could withdraw America from the war as quickly as possible and leave the South Vietnamese to luck and the mercy of the Communists; or he could begin a gradual withdrawal coinciding with a gradual turning over of its own defense to South Vietnam.

In choosing and persevering in his course of action, President Nixon received mixed support from Americans. The so-called Silent Majority remained largely silent. A confused Congress debated meaningless end-the-war resolutions and tried to unwrite history, while the streets and campuses were given over to war pretexts.

The President accepted the grave political risks involved in the Cambodian and Laotian incursions, in the continuing casualties suffered by Americans as well as by the Vietnamese civilians whose fate increasingly weighed on the conscience of America, and in deciding this year upon the massive bombing of North Vietnam and the mining of its harbors in answer to the enemy's last great offensive.

This was hardly the behavior of a man guided by nothing but political expediency.

The President's accurate appraisal of the enemy and the enemy's allies, his clear-sighted perception of the goal, his stubbornness — some may someday even say courage — paid off.

"Do you want me to drive?" Stieglitz' wife asked.

"That's an interesting question," Stieglitz said. "I don't mind driving, yet if you drove I wouldn't have to decide which way I wanted to go to the public school. Yet I don't see why you should drive since it's my car. But then again, you've driven my car before. Of course you haven't driven it when we were going to vote."

"Oh, for heaven's sake!" Stieglitz' wife screamed. "Will you do something?"

Stieglitz started the car.

As they arrived at the public school they discovered many other voters had arrived already and Stieglitz had a difficult time finding a place to park.

"What about over there?" his wife suggested, pointing out a space next to the playground.

"It looks like a good spot," Stieglitz agreed. "But maybe after I park there somebody will park behind me and I'll have difficulty pulling out."

"Well, park over there behind the red car."

"I could park over there, but then I might be sorry I didn't park by the playground."

"What are you going to do?"

"I think I'll drive around the block a few times. Then someone will take one of History lesson: The White House now is a complex communications center, but it had only one telephone for years after the first one was installed on Dec. 1, 1878, during the administration of Rutherford B. Strength For Today

COST OF LOYALTY
One of the great New Testament scholars of modern times, in speaking about Christians who lived during the first century or two after our Lord's ascension, says that they were the most enthusiastic group that ever appeared in human history, that they were irrepressibly happy, and always in trouble.

Why were they always in trouble? For the simple reason that no matter what century we live in or in what sphere we move there is always a penalty attached to being loyal. If we are unshakably loyal to certain friends, there are others who want out friendship and who will be jealous and provoked at us because of this loyalty. If we are loyal to our religious faith, there will be many who will lose no opportunity to sneer at us and call us fanatics. The early Christians were loyal to their emperor but they refused to acknowledge him a god because they had a higher loyalty—their loyalty to the heavenly King, Jesus. So thousands of them were cruelly put to death and hundreds of thousands felt the sting of suffering because of their loyalty.

All of us need to realize that it costs something to be loyal. The people who try to slip through life being loyal to nothing but their own selfish desires are miserable creatures. In fact, they are lost souls.

Loyalty means the willingness at times to stand up and be counted. It brings great joy. It brings discomfort and sometimes suffering, but it is worth what it costs.

Tempers Flare Over Coin Sales

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — The manner in which the government is promoting a planned sale of three million silver dollars from the defunct Carson City, Nev., mint soon may lead to a showdown with coin dealers and, perhaps, investment bankers.

Nobody's reaching for the guns as they used to in the 1880s when the dollars were minted. But tempers are flaring and some critics think the marshal, so to speak, should step in.

That would be William Casey, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, which is empowered to regulate investments and their promotion. The offender, the critics claim, is the General Services Administration.

The GSA, say both coin and stock dealers is using huckster tactics that, if used by a private promoter, would cause the SEC to issue a cease and desist order.

That they're saying could never be put into a prospectus," said Milton Fisher, an investment banker.

In seeking to sell the uncirculated coins for a minimum of $30 each, the GSA has issued a flier bearing the heading, "The Great Silver Sale," beneath which is a statement from President Nixon about these "most valued reminders."

In smaller type are such statements as: "Excellent for investments or gifts. They are sound investments."

Said Joel Coen, a coin dealer, "I ran a coin ad in the newspaper and used the word 'investment' and the SEC jumped all over me. They told me to cease and desist, and I did, of course."

Now, he said, "Lo and behold comes the government itself using the word." He and many other dealers are irritated, he said. "The government is not an investment adviser."

Some underwriters who decline to become involved by name scorn what they feel is an abundance of romance versus facts. "How would you like to have stock sold this way?" said Fisher running his finger over certain phrases:

—Collector's item. "Who said so?" he questioned.

—Mined from the Comstock Lode. "Prove it."

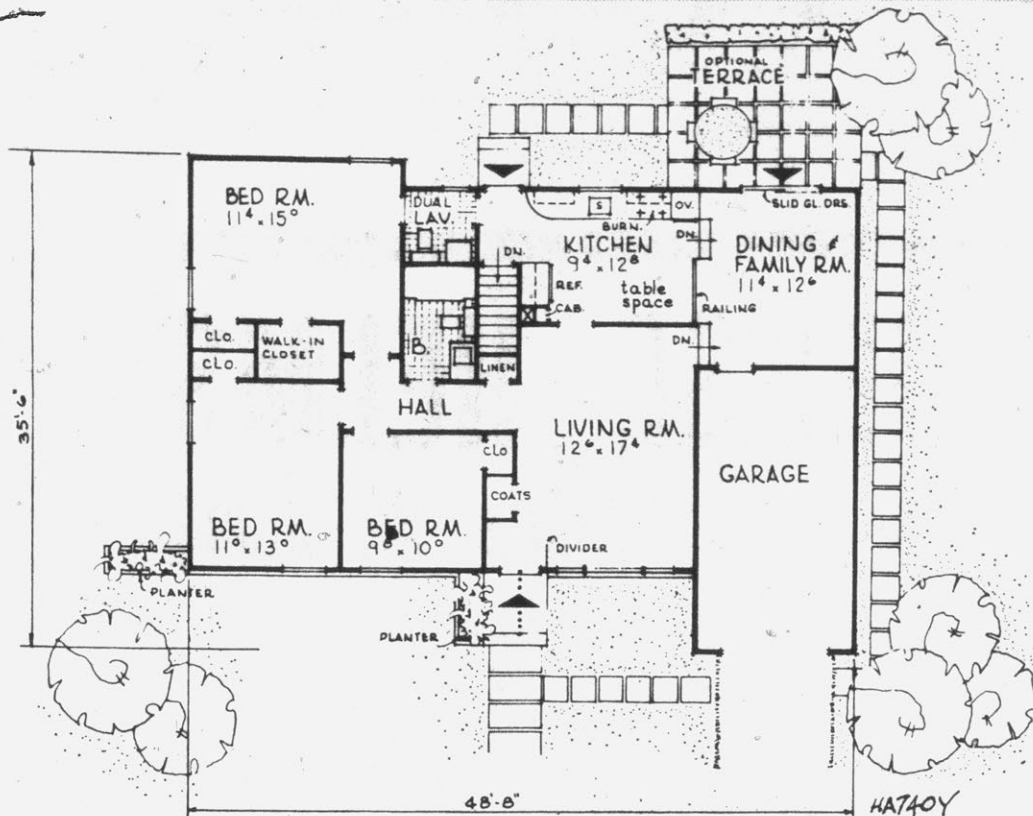

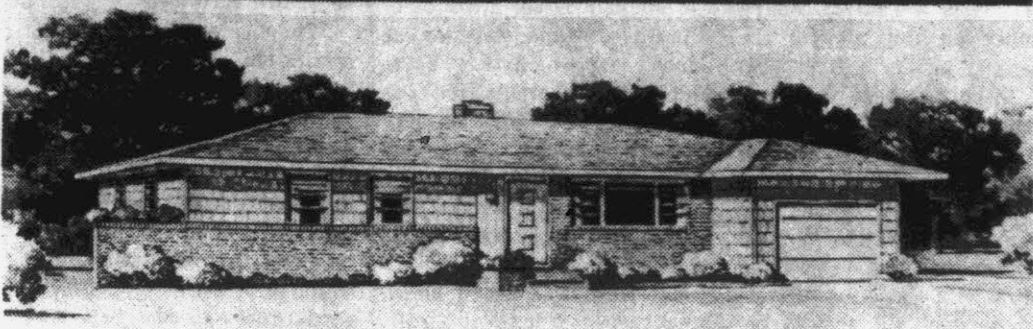

—Excellent for investments or gifts. "They pay no interest or dividends. And you'd have to pay for insurance on them."

—The value of these coins is high and demand is great. "Who said the value is high? Who said demand is great?"

—Unique opportunity to own a rare collector's item. "How rare; they're trying to sell three million of them."

The government, he said, should be ruled by the same standards as anyone else trying to sell to the public.

HOMES FOR AMERICANS

THE THREE-BEDROOM HOUSE is the most popular, all over the country. Wide overhang and extension of brick wall give this design, HATA40Y, the low, long lines of a ranch exterior. The bedrooms were designed for maximum privacy and quiet. Two have cross-ventilation. The hub of daytime activity is planned to be the dining and family room, which also has doors to the rear terrace and to the garage. There also is a lavatory near another rear door. This will be a handy place for the gardener or worker in the basement to clean up without tracking dirt through the house. There are 1,201 square feet. Architect is Herman H. York, 90-04 161st St., Jamaica, N.Y. 11432. Interested persons may write to him about cost of the plan.

Mass Poison Threat Rumored

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Authorities refuse to confirm or deny a report by the Sacramento Union that someone has threatened to kill innocent people in Sacramento County if President Nixon is re-elected Tuesday.

from a note which described Nixon as "the killer" responsible for "the thousands of innocent people killed in Vietnam."

The Union said the note was enclosed in nine packets of food containing deadly doses of cyanide which were mailed to area residents. The story said the writer claimed to have mailed 75 such packets and threatened to place 194 more on the shelves of area food markets if Nixon wins.

Meanwhile, authorities urged local residents to shop carefully. Searches were made of 13 area supermarkets but turned up nothing.

Miller said the poisoned food was all of the type packed in foil envelopes — such as lemonade powder, soup, salad dressing, dip and seasoning mixes. They had been carefully slit with a razor blade, then resealed with transparent tape.

Each was accompanied by a hand-printed note saying the food was poisoned and that 75 such packets had been mailed to persons selected at random from the telephone directory, Miller said.

William Miller, a spokesman for the Sacramento County Sheriff's Department, refused to confirm or deny the story but acknowledged that the poisoning of the food packets "is related to the Vietnam situation and the killing in Vietnam."

Miller said five of the packets were reported to authorities by residents on Friday, three more on Saturday and a ninth on Sunday.

Officers acknowledged that the packets had notes enclosed but they refused to divulge

Minority Candidates In National Office Races

By BOB GREENE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Blacks and Mexican-Americans are on ballots for national office in many states this year in what one minority leader has called a consciousness for self-determination.

Three blacks and two Mexican-Americans are running for the Senate, 49 blacks and 11 Spanish-surnamed candidates for the House. One black is running for governor of Illinois, and one Mexican-American is in the Texas gubernatorial race.

"There's a consciousness this year ... that addresses itself to self-determination in the broadest sense," said Domingo Nick Reyes, executive director of the Mexican-American Anti-Defamation Committee.

Of the three blacks running for the Senate, only one—incumbent Republican Edward W. Brooke of Massachusetts—is expected to win.

The Congressional Black Caucus, composed of the black members of the House, is likely to gain additional strength as all 13 incumbents and two others—Yvonne Brathwaite Burke in Los Angeles and Barbara Jordan in Houston—are favored.

In Tennessee, J.O. Patterson Jr., Democratic state Senate whip and a Memphis city councilman, is seeking to unseat Republican Rep. Dan Kuykendall. Patterson defeated four whites in the primary.

Given a better-than-even chance of winning Georgia's 5th Congressional District seat is Andrew Young, executive vice president of The Southern Christian Leadership Conference. A former aide to the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., Young faces Republican state Rep. Rodney Cook in a district that includes most of Atlanta and several affluent and predominantly white suburbs north of the city.

Another black, Keith Jones, 26, is campaigning for the Georgia seat as a write-in candidate under the banner of the Socialist Workers party.

Two blacks running for the Senate are not given a chance of winning.

However, John L. LeFlore, National Democratic Party of Alabama (NDPA) candidate from Mobile, could decide the hotly contested race between incumbent Democratic Sen. John Sparkman and his Republican opponent, Winton M. Blount, former postmaster general.

Thomas Dennis, 54-year-old state chairman of the Michigan Communist party, is seeking the Senate seat held by Republican Robert Griffin.

In Illinois, Ishmael Flory is the Communist party candidate for governor.

La Raza Unida party, a predominantly Mexican-American organization, is fielding slates in several states.

Secundino Salazar, 42, is running for the Senate against Republican Sen. Gordon Allott in Colorado. In Texas, the La Raza Unida candidate for governor is Ramsey Muniz, 30, a Waco lawyer and former football star at Baylor University.

NEW YORK (AP) — Chairman James Needham of the New York Stock Exchange leaves for Moscow today for talks with officials of the Soviet Bank of Foreign Trade.

Needham said on Sunday the discussions will center on "how the securities industry might play a major role in the development of trade and commerce between the U.S. and the Soviet Union."

Needham will stop off in London en route to Moscow to attend the dedication of new facilities for the London Stock Exchange.

key to victory here as elsewhere is the white working-man — particularly in the "switcher" precincts of the San Fernando valley and southeast Los Angeles County.

But these areas were ignored by McGovern's campaign through August and September. Assemblymen Brown and Burton sang McGovern's praises, not in the vital "switcher" precincts, but liberals, youths, and minority group members already committed to him. Such misdirected emphasis enhanced the illusion of McGovern strength here.

Old pros, however, knew all along just how badly McGovern trailed. One such realist is state Democratic chairman Charles Manatt, a 36-year-old politician of the old school. On Sept. 28, Manatt took over the non-functioning McGovern campaign here and immediately extended its operations into the blue-collar "switcher" precincts, beginning canvassing and visits from established Democrats such as 68-year-old Rep. Chet Holifield, newly involved in the McGovern campaign by Manatt.

Whereas Manatt sees some blue-collar workers swinging back to McGovern (which still has not shown up in any polls), he knows Mr. Nixon still leads comfortably here. So, he asked national McGovern headquarters to send Sen. Hubert Humphrey on another swing through California. No, he was told, Hubert is too busy, in the tough states back East; California, after all, is McGovern country.

The McGovernites believe it. They also believe bad breaks (especially the Eagleton affair) have lost McGovern the election. But California, they add, will on Nov. 7 bring the splendid victory that originally was possible nationwide. Illusion dies hard in ideological politics.

IRA Target Of New Law

DUBLIN (AP) — The Irish government plans a new law this month to crack down on leaders of the outlawed Irish Republican Army, justice minister Desmond O'Malley says.

His statement was quickly followed by the arrest Sunday of Maire Drumm, a leading figure in Sinn Fein, the political front for the IRA's Provisional Wing.

O'Malley told a radio interviewer that Sean MacStiofain, the IRA's chief of staff, had not been arrested because no conviction could be obtained against him under present law.

He said he had been working four to five months on the planned new law, but had run into drafting difficulties.

Mrs. Drumm, 52, was arrested under a law against inciting people to procure arms.

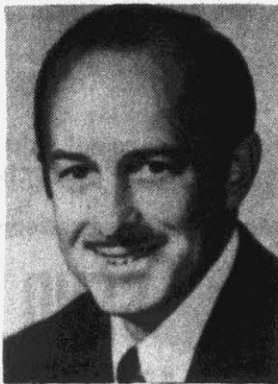

The charge arose from a speech she made in the republic on St. Patrick's day—this year.

Belfast was a relatively quiet Sunday night, but troops claimed they hit a gunman who fired on an observation post in the Ardoyne district, an IRA stronghold.

A civilian was wounded by gunmen in the Falls Road area. Police said they did not know whether he was a victim of the IRA or of the various Protestant armed groups.

FARM LEADERS SUPPORT NICK—Senators B. Everett Jordan, Herman Talmadge, Chairman of the Senate Agricultural and Forestry Committee and North Carolina Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham are actively supporting Nick Galifianakis for the U. S. Senate.

Jesse Helms has opposed farm programs for 12 years. But in the past 12 days, he has tried to make farmers think otherwise.

Marcus Braswell, a distinguished farm leader who served as chairman of the ASCS, said it well: "Nick Galifianakis has been a friend of the farmer all his life: Jesse Helms has been a friend of the farmer since yesterday."

Other farm leaders from both North Carolina and the nation agree that Nick Galifianakis is the only candidate in the race for the U. S. Senate who will support the North Carolina farmer.

Senator B. Everett Jordan, Agriculture Commissioner James Graham and Senator Herman Talmadge, Chairman of the Senate Agriculture and Forestry Committee, are just a few of the farm leaders who are actively supporting Nick Galifianakis.

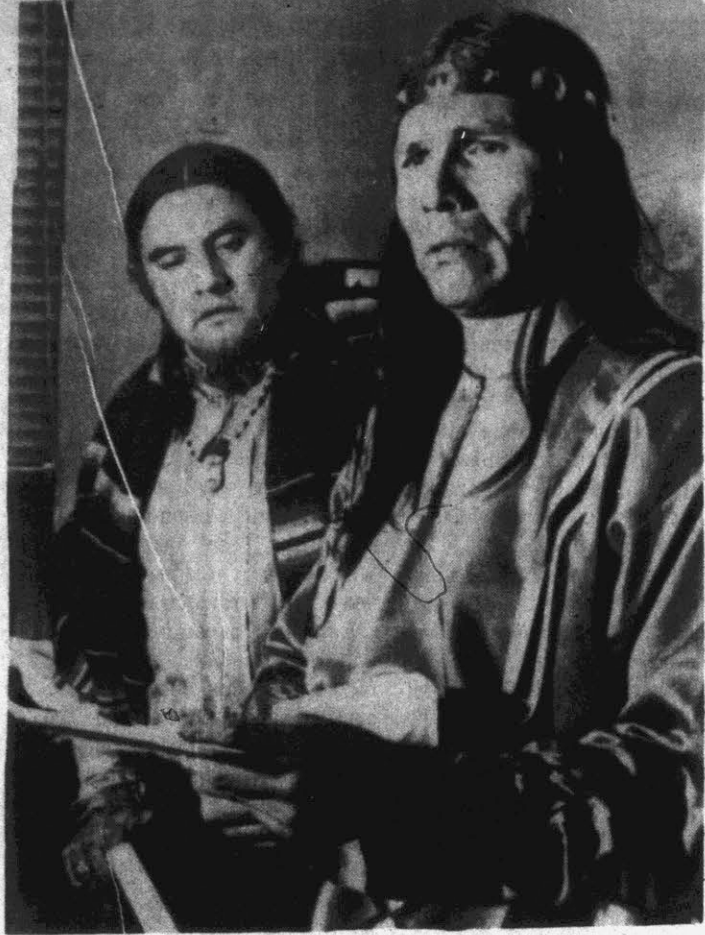

They know that Nick Galifianakis was born and reared in one of North Carolina's major tobacco centers. They want you to know that Nick Galifianakis has worked for the farmer in Congress while his opponent has consistently opposed price supports for our farmers and has even blasted REA as a socialistic program.

Jesse Helms says you know where he stands. If you've listened to him for the past 12 years, you know he stands against the family farmer in North Carolina.

And he can't change that in the last few days of a political campaign.

Let's send Nick to the Senate.

Germans Talk Harmony Steps

By HUBERT J. ERB
Associated Press Writer
BERLIN (AP) — East and West German negotiators met in East Berlin today to begin the final phase of talks on a treaty to bring about normal relations between their two governments.

Egon Bahr, the West German state secretary, told the cabinet Sunday this session could be his final meeting with Michael Kohl, the East German state secretary, before they finalize a treaty.

The treaty of diplomatic recognition would pave the way for both states to apply for U.N. membership in addition to mutual diplomatic recognition.

Chancellor Willy Brandt would like to announce an agreement with East Germany before the West German general election Nov. 19, figuring it would give his Social Democratic party a needed boost.

East German recognition of West Berlin and of West Germany's claim to represent it were the major problems to be settled. East Germany has maintained Berlin is an independent city-state and rejected Bonn's claims on it.

Unofficial sources said Bahr and Kohl apparently were going to skirt the issue by not mentioning it directly in the treaty. Informed sources said Germany's World War II conquerors—the United States, Britain, France and the Soviet Union—agreed Sunday that their occupation rights and responsibilities in the divided city would continue despite political developments between the two German regimes.

A communique issued at the end of their two weeks of talks said only: "The ambassadors successfully concluded their exchange of views and have agreed to report to their governments on the result of their discussions."

The Western powers feared that East Germany after admission to the United Nations might assert jurisdiction over Berlin. They felt a declaration from the Soviet Union of the Big Four's joint rights in the city would head that off.

Tired McGovern On Final Rounds

By LEE BYRD
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Sen. George S. McGovern, his eyes leaden with fatigue, set out on one last span of the nation today before laying his two-year quest to "Bring America Home" in the hands of the electorate.

Braving brisk morning chill, McGovern went for a short, traffic-stopping stroll down Fifth Avenue, one arm raised in a wave of goodbye and the other extended to hundreds of well-wishers. "Thank you," he repeated time and again. "God bless you."

Then he boarded the Dakota Queen II to pay his farewells in Philadelphia, Wichita, Kan., and Long Beach, Calif., en route to a day of waiting in his native South Dakota.

It was nearly three decades ago, when the first Dakota Queen was ripped by enemy fire over Europe, that young pilot McGovern told his crew: "Resume your stations; we're going to bring this plane home."

And, on the eve of a more awesome moment of truth, George Stanley McGovern appears gripped by the hope—perhaps even the conviction—that he can do it again.

"We're going to win," he told an interviewer before embarking on his coast-to-coast finale. "It is a kind of coming together on the part of the American public, a realization that there has been too much deception both here at home and now even in the issue of war and peace itself."

"The American people," he said, "were reluctant to think that their president was playing politics with the issue of war. Now, suddenly ... that is beginning to dawn on people."

In stops Sunday at St. Louis, Mo., Ill., and New York, McGovern drew some of the loudest cheers of his campaign as he accused President Nixon of playing "fast and loose" on the Vietnam issue. In a nationwide television address from New York, McGovern characterized as "the big lie" the administration's claim that a peace settlement is near.

"Peace is not at hand," said McGovern. "It is not even in sight."

McGovern was joined in the broadcast—and later at a rally in the Bronx—by Preston Thomas, Lafayette, Calif., whose son, Timothy, was one of 22 Americans killed in Vietnam Nov. 1, just one day after, according to Hanoi, the United States was supposed to sign a cease-fire agreement. "Timothy wrote several letters to me," said Thomas. "He talked of his girl he left behind ... his future. He felt the war was about over, and of course when we were told that it was to be over on the 31st we were very happy and Tim said 'I'll be home by Christmas.' Tim won't be home and not on Christmas ... My boy was killed needlessly. "We are killing Vietnamese, North and South, needlessly," said Thomas. "I happen to be a Republican," he added, "but not as of the first day of November."

Sec. Rogers Predicting Peace Accord Is Ahead

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State William P. Rogers predicts that secret peace talks with the North Vietnamese will resume in the near future, but that a final agreement on a Vietnam cease-fire probably is "several weeks" away.

The North Vietnamese chief negotiator, Xuan Thuy, said, meanwhile, that the Communists would agree to another "final" meeting if conditions are right. "The question is seriousness" on the part of the United States, he added.

While indications mounted that negotiations would soon be resumed, Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird acknowledged that the United States is speeding up deliveries of military equipment to South Vietnam. Laird said this would "enhance negotiations."

Rogers said Sunday that the United States has been in contact with the North Vietnamese through diplomatic channels, "and I have every reason to think that the negotiations in the private channels will resume in the near future."

He was interviewed on NBC's "Meet the Press."

Rogers repeated past statements of the administration that the basic agreement has been reached. However, he said "one more series of meetings" is needed to resolve "some ambiguities" and mentioned three.

He said they include a definition of the role of a joint council to administer the cease-fire and supervise elections; the timetable for positioning of an international force to supervise the cease-fire, and the question of North Vietnamese troops remaining in the South.

Asked when final agreement is likely, Rogers said: "I think it would be several weeks. Whether it runs into more than that I am not sure." He added he has "no doubt, though, about the outcome."

The secretary of State also said he thinks it is unfair to consider South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu as the lone "villain" blocking the tentative agreement reached between the United States and the North Vietnamese in Paris Oct. 8.

Thuy said in an interview in Sunday's New York Times that if, in another meeting, "the U.S. agrees and then proposes more changes, it would be very difficult to settle things."

He claimed again that President Nixon had proposed signing a cease-fire agreement on Oct. 31 and then backed down. He also contended that, had the United States made the same concessions four years ago that it has made in recent negotiations, "Peace could have come in 1969 ... We would have accepted conditions like the present ones."

Defense Secretary Laird said in an interview that military reinforcements for South Vietnam prior to a cease-fire "assures the South Vietnamese they will have the capability to provide their own in-country security."

Eastern School PTA Meet Set

The Eastern Elementary School PTA meeting at 7:30 p.m. Thursday will be centered on the Physical Education Program of the sixth grade.

Dr. Ernie Swarz and Dr. Edgar Hooks, both of East Carolina University, will be speakers to describe the PE program being conducted at Eastern Elementary under ESAP (Emergency School Assistance Program) funding.

At the present time, the program is restricted to the sixth grade pupils in the city schools, but it is hoped to be expanded to include other grades in the future.

The speakers will touch on the basic purposes of the program, which include promoting better racial relations; preparing sixth graders for junior high; and benefits of the physical education program itself.

The meeting will be held in the multi-purpose room of the school.

Saw Kidnaping, Did Not Help

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP)—Police say several bystanders apparently saw a woman whose body was found Saturday being abducted and didn't try to help her.

A High Point police detective, Capt. George Leverett, said witnesses told police that a man forced Bonnie Lynn Gallimore, 19, into the back seat of her car at a shopping center and drove off.

The woman's body was found later in a field in an industrial area. The findings of an autopsy have not yet been released.

Ingram Raps Auto Rate Plan

RALEIGH (AP) — State Rep. John Ingram of Asheboro, a Democratic candidate for commissioner of insurance, criticized Wednesday a proposed auto liability rate classification system based on age and marital status of drivers.

JESSE HELMS

You Know Where He Stands:

- Against forced busing
- For a balanced budget and an end to inflation
- For a sound Social Security system including Medicaid and Medicare
- Against "Cut and Run" in Vietnam and for return of all POW's
- For price supports of vital N.C. agricultural programs

JESSE HELMS STANDS FOR ALL THE PEOPLE OF NORTH CAROLINA

Prior to this years political campaign, many prominent North Carolinians had these nice things to say about Jesse Helms—

* The Honorable Dan K. Moore, Associate Justice, North Carolina Supreme Court — May 6, 1971

Jesse, not only through this service with WRAL but also in his private life, touches many people, and his influence for good is far reaching. His devotion to our country and its form of government is a quality which especially needs emphasizing in this day and age. We are all indebted to Jesse for his efforts in this direction.

* The Honorable I. Beverly Lake, Associate Justice, North Carolina Supreme Court — May 7, 1971

Hearing him, one, who knows him only on the televised screen, recognizes an American of the type who made our country strong and worthy of our love. We, who are fortunate enough to know him personally, know too of his many acts of kindness to disabled children and his abiding interest in helping others less fortunate than he. His friendship honors all who have it and his example encourages and inspires.

* The Honorable Joseph Branch, Associate Justice, North Carolina Supreme Court — June 30, 1966

Jesse Helms has lived in a time in which our country has been going through revolutionary changes. His voice has sounded clearly and fearlessly for the principles that made our country great. He has displayed a strong and sterling character and unsurpassed courage in all public matters. It has appeared many times that his voice was a lonely voice in a wilderness of irresponsible "liberalism". I believe that history will record his high principled editorials and his courageous enunciation of principles as a highlight of our generation.

* These are not political endorsements but they do tell you something about the character of Jesse Helms.

An Election Night Quiz For Curious

By United Press International
You know, of course, that Tuesday Nov. 7 is Election Day and that on that day about 85 million Americans are expected to vote.

You know, too, don't you, that the country will be voting for a president and vice president, 33 senators, 435 members of the House of Representatives, and 18 state governors.

But if you're having a pre-election party, or even if you're not, you probably can have a lot of fun stumping friends and relatives with an election quiz. Let's go:

1. Where was President Nixon, seeking re-election as a Republican, born, and how old will he be on Inauguration Day, Jan. 20? (Yorba Linda, Calif., 60)

2. Where was Sen. George S. McGovern, seeking election as a Democrat, born, and how old will he be on Inauguration Day? (Avon, S.D., 50)

3. How many Electoral Votes are there and how many must the winning presidential candidate have? (538 and 270 or more)

4. How many vice presidents have, like Nixon, become president? (12)

5. Nixon is a Quaker. Have there been any other presidents of that faith? (Yes, Herbert Hoover)

6. McGovern is a Methodist. Is he the first? (No, there have been three Methodist presidents: U.S. Grant, Rutherford B. Hayes and William McKinley)

7. How many Californians, before Nixon, have become president? (None). Any previous presidents from South Dakota, McGovern's home state? (No)

8. In the last 50 years, which presidential election drew the largest percentage of eligible voters to the polls? Which the smallest? (Largest 64 per cent in 1964; smallest 51.3 per cent in 1948)

9. Who was the oldest U.S. president entering office? Who the youngest? (Oldest, William Henry Harrison, 68; youngest, Theodore Roosevelt, 42)

10. How many Americans are of voting age this year? (139,563,000). Are they all eligible to vote? (No, since the figure includes ineligible inmates of prisons and mental institutions, persons unable to meet residency requirements, etc.)

11. How many newly-enfranchised young voters—18, 19 and 20 year olds—are eligible to vote in this election? (The Census Bureau estimates 11,462,000)

12. How many first-time voters are eligible this time, all told? (25,675,000 by Census Bureau estimate. It includes the under-20s and those aged 20 through 24 who were not old enough to vote in the last presidential election)

13. How many of today's eligible voters are women? (52.5 per cent of the electorate, by Census Bureau estimate)

14. How many eligible voters are black? (14,000,000, or 10 per cent of the total)

15. What is the median age of the potential U.S. voter? (According to the Census Bureau, 43)

Jamaican 'Ganja' Considered High Smuggling Risk

By DAVID L. LANGFORD
MONTEGO BAY, Jamaica (UPI)—The moon was up and giving shape to the voluptuous Blue Mountains to the east, where the ganja grows.

Judge Edmonton Green and his wife, as is their custom on Wednesday nights, had joined the party aboard the luxury liner Starward moored in the harbor.

A tall and gregarious Jamaican in his 40s, Judge Green likes to tell the American tourists about his emerging nation and drink martinis and dance to the fast rock music.

The conversation inevitably turns to ganja.

The judge frowns and holds up a filter tip cigarette.

"We know what these do to us, but I'd like to see more evidence that ganja is harmful," Green says in the rich baritone of the barristers of England, where he was schooled in law.

Ganja is the Hindu word, preferred by Jamaicans, for marijuana. U.S. Customs officials in Miami say Jamaica ranks along with Colombia and Panama as one of the major sources of marijuana being smuggled into the United States.

Exported Ganja
And Judge Green doesn't mind speculating that marijuana could become a valuable export crop, ranking along with sugar, banana and coffee, should it ever become legal.

"Let's face it," he said. "Our unemployment rate is about 18 per cent, while yours is 5. We need the money."

The per capita income in Jamaica is about $500.

Today ganja is to Jamaica what moonshine whiskey is to the rural South. When U.S. authorities cracked down on marijuana traffic at the Mexican border three years ago, it had the same effect in Jamaica and some other Latin American countries that prohibition had on rum running.

"Jamaica can certainly be considered a high-risk area," said one U.S. customs official, who did not want to be named. "Geographically, Jamaica has the right climate and terrain for growing marijuana. For a person who wants to go into that business, it's a good place to do it because of the climate and inaccessible mountainous areas."

But U.S. officials don't blame Jamaican authorities for laxness of enforcement.

"They seem to deal quite harshly with people found with marijuana and we have had excellent cooperation from them," the customs official said.

The Ganja Smugglers
Nevertheless, federal agents this year have intercepted some of the largest hauls of marijuana ever smuggled into this country. It was Jamaican ganja being smuggled into Florida. The accounts read like James Bond novels.

In the early morning darkness of May 22 the shrimp trawler Syme was slipping through the intracoastal waterway off Crescent Beach in St. Johns County. When customs agents closed in for a raid, two men jumped overboard. One drowned, the other got away.

On board the trawler agents found 3,919 pounds of marijuana, the largest single seizure on the East Coast. Eight men were arrested.

Agents said the ganja would be worth about $3.9 million on the street. By comparison, Jamaica exports less than $1 million worth of its famous Blue Mountain coffee each year.

Six nights later agents were waiting in hiding at a small airport south of Bunnell for a light plane that had been tracked from Jamaica. The plane didn't land. It overflowed the airport and proceeded to a second landing strip.

By the time agents reached the second airport, the plane had dumped out 315 pounds of marijuana in plastic garbage bags and vanished. A young Jacksonville attorney was arrested when he arrived at the airport and allegedly picked up the pot. Jackson Jobe, 32, is awaiting trial on charges of smuggling and possession of marijuana.

Mexican Operation
Richard L. Trindle, senior customs agent in Jacksonville, said that since Operation Intercept in the fall of 1969 virtually dried up Mexico as a marijuana source his office has been busier.

"Since smugglers still had the demand, they had to go to other sources, one of them being Jamaica," one agent said. "It was during this time and afterwards that we noticed an increase in the seizure of marijuana from Jamaica and other Caribbean areas."

Trindle also stressed that Jamaica was not the only source of marijuana in Latin America, and probably not the major source. One agent said the youth of the drug culture seemed to prefer Colombian pot to Jamaican.

But the pot smugglers continue to pour out of Jamaica and American authorities go to great pains to catch them.

In September customs agents trailed two men and 400 pounds of marijuana, worth an estimated $280,000, from Homestead, Fla., to St. Petersburg.

It was about 8:30 on a Saturday night when an airplane landed at Homestead General Airport, a small field south of Miami, and unloaded the pot in large bags.

"We are relatively sure it came from Jamaica," said Sam Johnson, agent in charge of the Tampa customs office.

About 45 minutes after the plane took off two men drove up in a car towing a trailer, loaded the bags, and headed for St. Petersburg. Agents who had been watching the operation decided to follow them, before springing the trap, in hopes of catching others.

"We'll follow them for 1,000 miles if we have to," Johnson said.

The Agents Act
When the suspects reached a

St. Petersburg residence, eight agents moved in for the arrests. One man ran out the back door and escaped. Arrested was Keith Stephen Kolacy, 29, of St. Petersburg Beach, an unemployed carpenter.

On the whole, it appears that Jamaican authorities, unlike those in some other countries, seem to be making a serious effort with their limited police force to stop ganja farming. Even Canadian soldiers undergoing jungle warfare training in Jamaica help spot ganja farms and smugglers' planes in the vast rain forests and mountains.

But the very climate and terrain in which ganja thrives also offers it a hiding place.

Farm Scene

By STEVE C. RIDDICK

From a price and profit standpoint, this year is turning out to be one of the best, if not the best hog year on record. Corn prices have been relatively low and returns have been quite favorable. This relationship strongly points to increased farrowings next year. The usual response to good profits has been an expansion in sow farrowings over a period of four to eight quarters until supply levels become burdensome and prices drop to unprofitable levels.

The price of feed is likely to stay high in light of the expected grain sales and since soybeans are likely to be a part of the deal. A little pressure is expected to be taken off of sow expansion since mid-West grain farmers will have less enticement to put their money into hogs due to higher returns from grain sales.

Thus, the decisions made now concerning farrowing levels for 1973 will determine whether good profits continue into the latter months of 1973 and into 1974.

Before any expansion in the sow herd is made, it would be much better to improve present production and efficiency of production levels with the present number of sows being maintained. It is felt that if this trend is practiced that any increase in farrowing will be moderate enough to keep returns in the black.

Farm Tips

By Dr. J. W. Pou
Agricultural Specialist
Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., N.A.

Home gardeners would be well advised to plan now for those strawberries they hope to enjoy next spring. November is the beginning of the planting season.

"Gardeners who plant now should be able to pick enough for home use next spring," comments North Carolina State University extension fruit specialist Joe Brooks. "Of course, the first, big crop won't come until a year later after the plants have matured," he added.

Brooks suggests four "musts" for satisfactory results from strawberries. These important guides are: plant clean, disease-free, certified plants; plant in clean, disease-free soil; plan to control weeds and other pests; and plan the strawberry patch so that it can be irrigated.

"Starting out with disease and nematode free soil is important," Brooks said. "Since the strawberry plants will be in that soil for several years. If the soil isn't clean, the plants have very little chance."

County agricultural extension agents can provide information on materials and procedures for killing soil diseases, insects and weeds. Most of these operations should be done before planting.

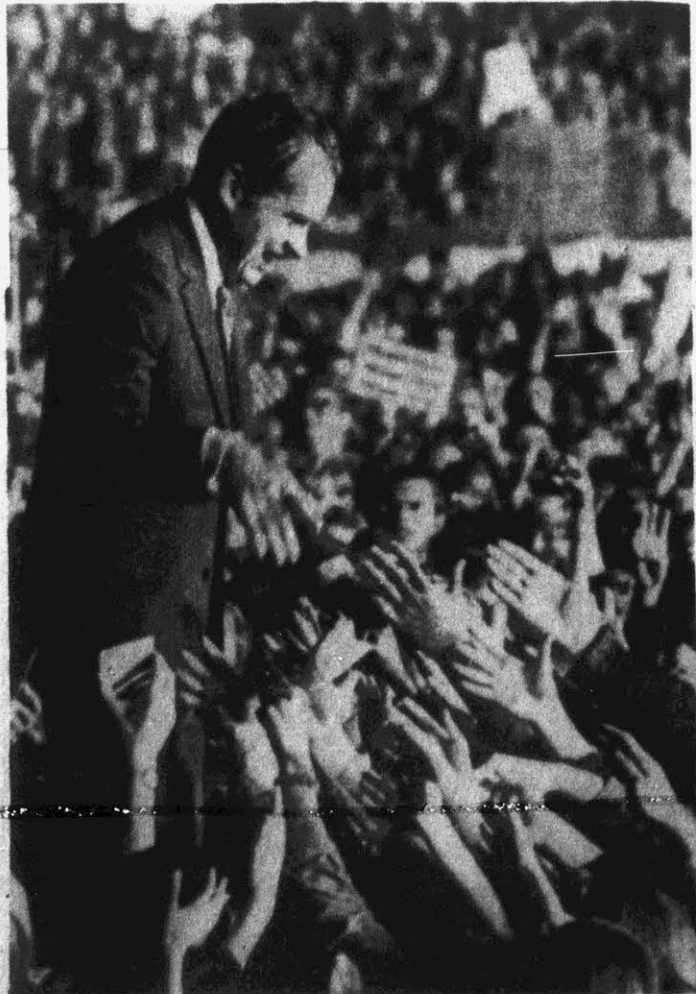

For weed and grass control, Brooks suggests diphenamid, Dacthal or Tenoran. These are post-planting treatments and should be applied according to the label directions. And here are some other suggestions that will help make that strawberry planting productive.

Add lime, phosphate, potash or a complete fertilizer as indicated by a soil test report. Lime should be added early, if possible, even as much as a year in advance of planting. Fertilizer should be applied at least ten days to two weeks prior to planting. Top dress with nitrogen thirty days after planting.

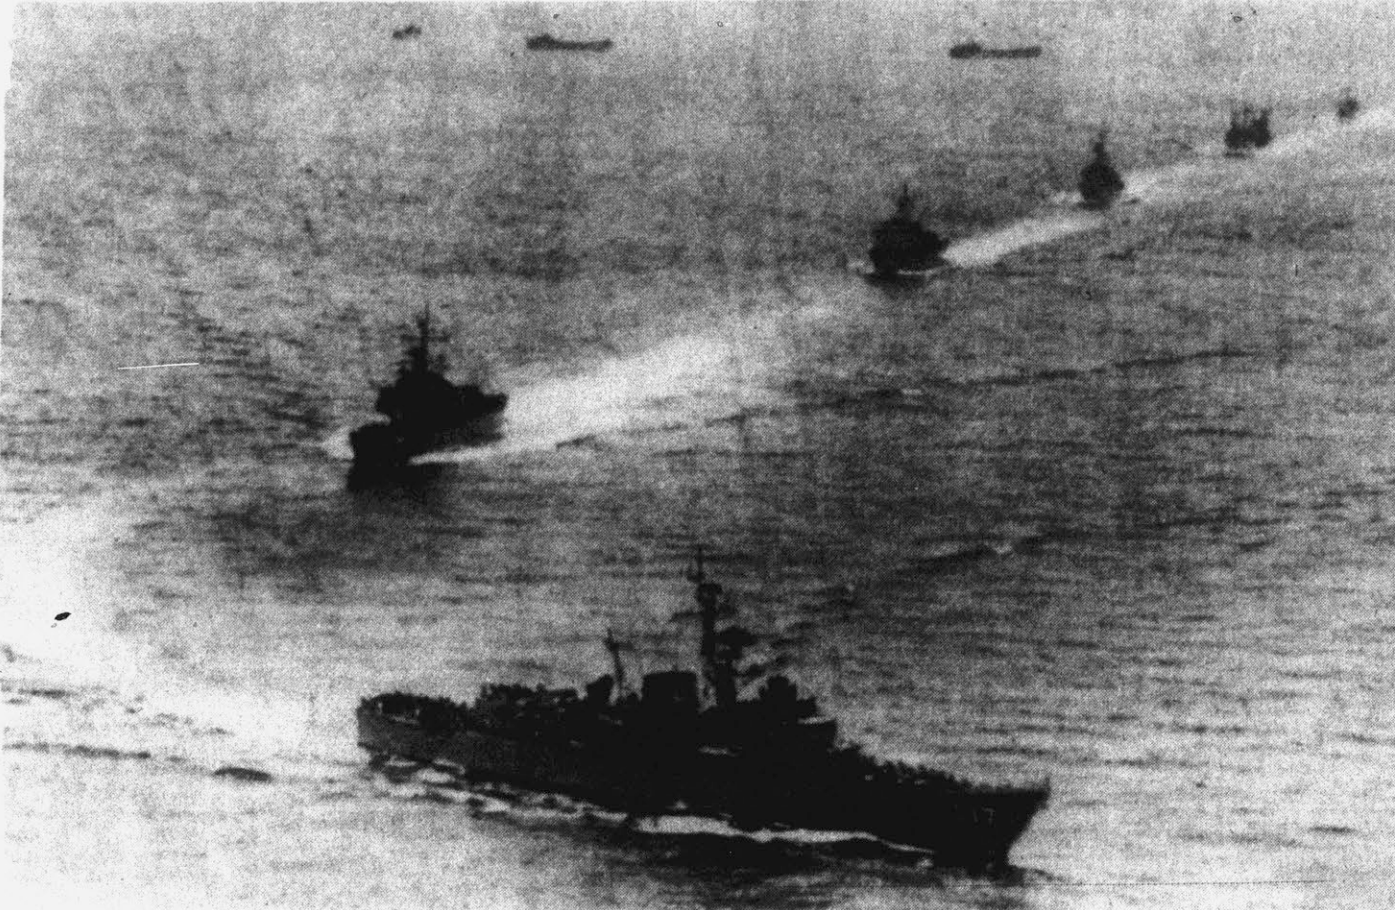

Set the plants two feet apart in rows four feet apart. If you want to pick strawberries the first year, you can place the plants slightly closer in the row. Plant deep enough so all roots are covered but shallow enough so the crown is above the soil line. The soil should be firm around the plant roots.

Cover the new plants with straw so they will not be heaved out of the ground by freezing and thawing soil. Straw or mulch should also be placed in the middles to conserve moisture and shade out weeds.

Strawberries are shallow rooted. Drought seriously reduces the size and yield of berries and the number of new runner plants. Plan to irrigate. If used properly, irrigation can also protect your plants from frost.

Jesse Helms is opposed to Social Security and Medicare. And when he says he isn't he simply is not telling the truth.

On television, radio and in newspaper editorials, Jesse Helms has always expressed rigid opposition to social security and medicare.

Copies of the Helms editorials are on file for everyone to see — even though Jesse wishes they weren't.

In these editorials, Jesse has called social security benefits nothing more than "doles and handouts." As a replacement for social security, he has proposed that people buy insurance for themselves.

Jesse has opposed medicare even more strongly, calling this vital program "socialized medicine" and stating firmly that "medicare isn't needed."

Congressman Nick Galifianakis has been a consistent supporter of social security and medicare. He has worked hard to win increases in social security benefits and his strong support of medicare is a matter of record.

Despite Jesse Helms' strong opposition to both social security and medicare, he is now trying to mislead the people into believing that he is not opposed to these important programs.

Jesse Helms says that you know where he stand. If you've listened to him over the years, you know he stands against social security and medicare.

And if he says he doesn't, he's simply not telling the truth.

Japanese Police Snare Plane Hijacker After Tokyo Landing

By PHIL BROWN
Associated Press Writer
TOKYO (AP) — A masked, middle-aged man carrying a 38-caliber revolver, hijacked a Japanese domestic airliner with 127 other persons aboard today in a bid for a plane to Cuba and $2 million ransom, but police in hiding captured him on the ground eight hours later and no one was hurt.
Police said the man first identified himself as a Chinese-American from San Francisco but then told them he really was a Japanese, Tatsuji Nakagawa, who had been living in Los Angeles.

Police said his revolver had six bullets and he had 50 more rounds inside his suitcase. He also claimed to have planted seven 30-pound bombs in the baggage compartment. Two packages, each containing 33 pounds of gunpowder, were found.
Authorities gave this account of the hijacking:

The Japan Air Lines Boeing 727 took off from Tokyo for Fukuoka in western Japan about 7:30 a.m. The hijacker hid in the toilet at takeoff and remained there for 40 minutes until the plane was 28,000 feet over Nagoya. At that point he burst into the cockpit, put a pistol to the pilot's head and ordered him to fly to Cuba. But the 727 had too short a range for the 13,000-mile flight and the pilot headed back toward Tokyo.

After circling the Tokyo airport for about two hours, the plane landed at 10:45 a.m. For the next five hours the hijacker negotiated with JAL officials, repeatedly refusing to surrender.
Meanwhile, the airline readied a long-range DC8 jet for the flight to Cuba via Vancouver and Mexico and told the hijacker the $2 million had been put aboard.
The man released 121 passengers and the three stewardesses, but kept the pilot and two other crew members aboard at gunpoint.

The hijacker finally forced the three crew members to accompany him to the DC8. As they boarded, a group of police hidden inside the plane jumped the hijacker and other police rushed up the steps to help.

The hijacker was taken to the airport police station.

One of the three crewmen he held hostage was an American, Robert Faulkner, 49, of Manistique, Mich., the flight engineer. All the passengers were Japanese except one, a West German businessman.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market moved ahead again today in active trading linked to favorable developments on the Vietnam and economic fronts, as well as pre-election optimism.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was ahead 1.58 to 985.70 at 11:30 a.m. The blue-chip indicator had climbed nearly 4 1/2 points in the first hour of trading, then fell back. Trading was so heavy that the NYSE tape twice fell behind. Advancing issues outnumbered declining ones by about 2-to-1.

The 11 a.m. New York Stock Exchange index gained .12 to 62.64. The price-change index on the American Stock Exchange was up .07 to 26.21.

Borden, Inc., led the most-active issues on the Big Board and was up 1/8 to 27 1/8. Ablock of 150,000 shares changed hands at 27, a steady exchange. Other active issues included General Telephone & Telegraph, ahead 1/4 to 30 3/4, and Bethlehem Steel, up 3/8 to 27 1/8.

Federal National mortgage Association climbed 1/8 to 23, and brokers said it indicated a strong demand for housing. Polaroid Corp. opened down 7 1/4 at 115 after a delay because of an order imbalance.

Edwin Gill Opines N.C. To Need No Tax Boost

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina Treasurer Edwin Gill says he believes the next legislature "will be able to balance a progressive budget for the biennium 1973-75 without any new or increased taxes."

Gill said not only are revenues coming in "substantially in excess of predictions," but "it appears that our credit balance may break all records and approach and perhaps exceed $200 million."

He also noted in a statement released Sunday that the state will be getting $45 million in federal revenue sharing funds.

Gill said on the eve of the election he was "proud to report that the financial condition of our state continues to be excellent, and that the outlook for the next biennium is most encouraging."

Gill is running for re-election against Republican Theodore C. Conrad of Charlotte.

"In view of the rapid growth and expansion of our economy, it is my considered opinion, that revenues under our present tax structure will reach an all time high in the next biennium," he said.

But he added a word of caution, saying it is a time for Tar Heels to "assert the virtues of moderation, reason and restraint."

Both major gubernatorial candidates, Republican Jim Holshouser and Democrat Hargrove Bowles, have pledged no new or increased taxes, and Holshouser has called for the repeal of certain taxes.

JENSINA STEINBECK
Republican Candidate

Pitt County Commissioner

Greenville Township

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina's first serious inter-party struggle for the U.S. Senate in more than 70 years and a costly, hard-fought campaign for the governor's office go to North Carolina voters Tuesday in what may be the biggest election ever held in the state.

President Nixon added prestige to the closing days of the long campaign Saturday at a rally in Greensboro, Nixon said GOP gubernatorial candidate Jim Holshouser and the Republican Senatorial candidate, Jesse Helms, constituted "a great team."

Holshouser and Democratic opponent Hargrove "Skipper" Bowles, whose $1.3 million campaign made him the biggest spender in North Carolina political history, planned flying trips across the state today for a series of news conferences.

Ardis Pettyjohn, the American party's candidate for governor, planned to participate in a television interview in New Bern.

News conferences in several cities also were scheduled today for Helms, a Raleigh broadcast executive, and his Democratic opponent, Rep. Nick Galifianakis of Durham. Their races, plus the presidential campaign, and inter-party contests for several Council of State posts, are expected to pull out voters in historic numbers. Legislative races and five proposed constitutional amendments also appear on the ballots.

Contested races will be decided in 10 of North Carolina's 11 congressional districts. Rep. David N. Henderson, a Democrat, had no general election opposition.

Alex Brock, state elections director, predicted a turnout of 1.7 million votes—about 170,000 more than for the 1968 general election.

Brock said North Carolina has 1.7 million Democrats and 541,916 Republicans registered for the election.

President Nixon, predicting he would again carry North Carolina, urged thousands of persons attending the Greensboro rally Saturday to vote for Holshouser and Helms.

He described both as long-time friends, emphasizing a 21-year relationship with Helms dating back to Nixon's membership in the U.S. Senate. Helms at that time was an administrative assistant for the late Sen. Willis Smith.

Nixon said Holshouser, who was one of the first Southern Republican party chairmen to endorse Nixon in 1968, was "one of those very well organized, dedicated men who has all the attributes that would make him a fine chief executive of this state."

Nixon said he had watched Helms over the years and was aware of "his intelligence, his dedication, his compassion. North Carolina needs Jesse Helms in the United States Senate. I need him and will deeply appreciate your support of him."

A group of three to four dozen hecklers frequently booed the President as he spoke of the candidates and his own administration. At one point Nixon acknowledged the hecklers by inviting television cameramen to turn their instruments on the sign-waving young people so viewers could "see the kind of people who are supporting our opponent."

A spokesman said the group was organized by the Greensboro Peace Center and was not affiliated with Sen. George McGovern, the Democratic presidential candidate.

No Charges In Sunday Wreck

No charges were reported following investigation of a 3:20 p.m. mishap here Sunday on Ashe Street, 500 feet North of the First Street intersection that caused an estimated $1,100 property damage.

Woody's Ramblin's

By WOODY PEELE

For the past two weeks, the East Carolina University Pirates have put on an offensive show. Against the Furman Paladins, the Bucs rolled up nearly 500 yards in total offense, and against the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga this past Saturday, they finished with 471, almost as much. At the same time, the Pirate defense seems to be going strong again. Furman got only 166 yards, while Chattanooga was allowed only 150.

Coach Sonny Randle was proud of both performances, and is hoping that the Bucs might be headed towards a second peak of the season. And it will need to come this week end.

Against Chattanooga, quarterback Carl Summerell had one of his better afternoons throwing the ball. He hit 11 of 20 attempts for 154 yards and one touchdown. He's only one away from tying the modern season record for touchdowns thrown in a season by a Pirate.

Flanker Tim Dameron, the target of six of the completions, has tied the single season and career records for pass receptions, and there were times Saturday when it looked like the Bucs were trying to find him for the record-breaking score. Unfortunately, the closest they came was when Dameron had to come out of the end zone to make a catch at the one.

Carlester Crumpler continues to grind out the yardage, picking up over 100 yards again. He ranks among the top rushers in the country and has for most of the season. Les Strayhorn also proved that he is still an able ball carrier, ripping off 113 yards in just 13 carries. Strayhorn doesn't carry as much as he used to, mainly because of his tremendous blocking ability, but opponents must be constantly aware of his running ability.

And Danny Kepley, who won Defensive Player of the Week honors in the Southern Conference last week, might just be up again this week. He constantly harrassed the Chattanooga backs as he was credited with 18 tackles during the afternoon.

But all this is history. Saturday afternoon, the Bucs, with a 7-1 record, go up against the William & Mary Indians, who boast a 5-4 record, and it's likely that the Pirates will be the underdogs in the game.

Gabriel Blows Horn On Atlanta

By BRUCE LOWITT
Associated Press Sports Writer
"From last Sunday night until I reported to practice on Tuesday was a whole week of soul-searching and thinking for me," Los Angeles quarterback Roman Gabriel said. "Then, after the reasoning sessions with myself, I came to the conclusion I had to use my head."

Gabriel, who had experienced one of his worst days as a National Football League quarterback a week ago by throwing four intercepted passes in a 45-17 loss to Oakland, used his head along with his sore arm Sunday against Atlanta in their National Conference West showdown.

It paid off handsomely. Gabriel threw only 11 passes and completed eight of them for 93 yards. And he used his head by sticking to a relentless ground game spearheaded by Willie Elison and Jim Bertelsen, who combined for 215 yards and a touchdown apiece to carry the Rams to a 20-7 victory that widened their divisional lead over the Falcons to 1½ games.

There were two American Conference showdowns, too.

In the Central Division, Pittsburgh broke out of a first-place deadlock with Cincinnati by clobbering the Bengals 40-17 and, in the West, Kansas City vaulted over Oakland and into a one-game lead by taming the Raiders 27-14.

In Sunday's other games, undefeated Miami made it eight in a row this year with a 30-16 whipping of Buffalo, Washington belted the New York Jets 35-17, Dallas held off San Diego 34-28, the New York Giants defeated Denver 29-17, Green Bay beat San Francisco 34-24, Minnesota mauled New Orleans 37-6, Detroit shut out Chicago 14-0, Cleveland humbled Houston 20-0 and Philadelphia and St. Louis struggled to a 6-6 tie.

On Monday night's nationally televised game, the Baltimore Colts play the Patriots in New England.

Steelers Rookie Franco Harris led a 230-yard Pittsburgh ground assault with 101 yards of his own, including a two-yard touchdown spurt, while Terry Bradshaw completed half of his 20 passes for 190 yards.

Len Dawson also threw for three touchdowns for Kansas City while the Chiefs limited Oakland's running game to 73 yards, prompting Chiefs Coach Hank Stram to call it "the best game of the year. Dawson played a great game. We were fired up. This was a most significant win."

Coach Don Shula of the Dolphins insisted he's not considering the possibility of an unbeaten season. "I'm thinking only about New England," he said of Miami's next foe.

Against the Bills this time, Mercury Morris scampered for 106 yards and a pair of touchdowns; Earl Morrall hit Marv Fleming with a seven-yard scoring pass and Garo Yepremian booted three field goals.

Another three-touchdown quarterback was Washington's Billy Kilmer who connected on scoring passes of 45 yards to Roy Jefferson, 70 yards to Charley Taylor and 89 yards to Larry Brown as the Redskins retained their one-game lead over Dallas in the NFC East.

But the defense played an equally prominent role, chasing the Jets' Joe Namath all over the field, sacking him three times and intercepting three of his passes. "The problem," Namath sighed, "was the guys on the other side of the line. They've got a great reputation—and they deserve it."

The Cowboys boomed out to a 31-0 lead against the Chargers, then had to withstand a furious second-half rally in which John Hadl fired four touchdown passes. "They did a pretty good job of playing catch-up," Dallas Coach Tom Landry understated.

The Giants, staying within a game of the Cowboys, staged long-distance scoring marches of 92, 80 and 65 yards and line-backer Jim Files raced 37 yards for a touchdown with an interception to break the Broncos.

John Brockington rumbled 133 yards and scored three touchdowns to counter Gene Washington's two scoring passes thrown by Steve Spurrier—but it was Ken Ellis' 28-yard interception return for a touchdown in the closing minute that insured the Packers of their victory over the 49ers.

The Saints' Archie Manning passed for 155 yards and ran for 73 more but, as he put it: "We moved the ball a lot but couldn't get it into the end zone." But the Vikings got it there, twice on Fran Tarkenton touchdown passes.

The Lions limited Chicago's total offense to 146 yards while Steve Owens and Greg Landry each scored from one yard out to beat the Bears and remain tied with Green Bay for the NFC Central lead.

The Browns got a pair of Don Cockroft field goals in the first three quarters, then got two scoring runs from Leroy Kelly in the last quarter to subdue the Oilers.

And the Cardinals' Jim Bakken and Eagles' Tom Dempsey each booted a pair of field goals, then missed potential game-winners in the closing minutes of their deadlock.

Indians Heavily Favored Today

DAVIDSON, N.C. (AP) — The William and Mary cross-country team is heavily favored to take its seventh straight Southern Conference championship in today's meet at Davidson College.

Ron Martin, last year's individual winner, is injured and unable to compete but the No. 2 and 3 finishers then, Bill Louv and Tim Cook, will be running again for the Indians.

Stage Set For 2 Climactic Southern Conf. Games

By MARSHALL JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

The stage has been set for two climactic games that will determine the winner or winners of the Southern Conference football title, but Richmond's defending champion Spiders—if they're to get even part of the action—first must dispose of Davidson's Wildcats.

"We never have anything but trouble with Davidson," said Richmond Coach Frank Jones after his Spiders, 3-1, remained in the running with a 21-7 victory Saturday night over The Citadel's Bulldogs.

For Richmond to get even a share of the crown, however, William and Mary's Indians, 4-0—who routed Davidson 56-9 in a Saturday afternoon game—must knock off East Carolina's front-running Pirates, 5-0, this week at home while Richmond is playing host to Davidson.

Richmond then must beat William and Mary next week, in which event there would be a three-way tie at 5-1 among the Spiders, Indians and Pirates, who whacked Tennessee-Chattanooga 33-7 in a nonleague game as Carlester Crumpler ran for 130 yards and two touchdowns.

The conference race took a back seat—Saturday, however, to Virginia Military's Keydets, who snapped the nation's longest major college losing streak at 18 with a 31-7 league victory over Furman's Paladins on the running of Mac Bowman and passing of Tom Schultze.

To top it off, said VMI Coach Bob Thalman, whose 39th birthday was Sunday, "we played an excellent defensive game." After scoring the first time it had the ball, Furman never got past its 49 until it recovered a fumble on the game's last series in VMI territory.

"I thought we got a little complacent after we scored first," said Furman Coach Bob King, "and they just came back and blew us out."

Bowman ran for 165 yards and three touchdowns on 37 carries and his first score, on a 28-yard run on fourth down and four, was the key play as far as Thalman was concerned.

"That first touchdown really helped us get untracked," said the jubilant VMI coach. "This was the first game we played consistently. The move last week of defensive back Gene Williams to fullback has really opened up our running game."

Schultze hit 10 of 17 passes for 164 yards and one touchdown and set up Bowman's third score with a 42-yard aerial to Ken Terry.

In what Coach Jim Root called "our best game of the season," William and Mary's Indians scored their highest number of points in 25 years and set a school record with 572 yards in total offense.

Sub tailback Terry Regan ran 15 times for 145 yards and two touchdowns, quarterback Bill Deery ran for 84 yards and passed for 62 and flanker David Knight caught seven passes for 94 yards and a TD.

Davidson's Scotty Shipp, the conference leader in total offense and passing, hit 16 of 35 aeriels for 172 yards, but the Indians picked off five Wildcat passes for a school season record of 23.

"We definitely did a terrific job," said Root. "I thought Davidson would score more, but our defense was just great." Root said a 58-yard run by Regan in the fourth period when the Indians led by 21-3 "really busted the game apart."

Davidson Coach Dave Fagg said "this will happen when you play a team as good as William and Mary. When you do not move the ball and score some offensively, they will kill you with their good offense."

Even though All-Southern quarterback Harry Lynch broke a rib on The Citadel's first offensive play, the Bulldogs capitalized on a fumble recovery for a 7-0 lead before Richmond rallied behind the passing of Harry Knight and the running of Billy Meyers and Barty Smith.

Knight threw scoring strikes of 29 yards to Bobby Allen and 24 to Mike Mahoney, and Allen ran four yards for the other score. Meyers had 164 yards on 28 carries, Smith 87 yards on 17 tries.

Jones said "we just played a good football game, both offensively and defensively. We got great performances out of Meyers and Smith, and our defensive backs did the job when they had to."

The Spiders made some mistakes, Jones added, "but I think we recovered well and this has to be classified as a big victory."

When Lynch was hurt, said Coach Red Parker of The Citadel, "it took our offense away from us. It was like going into a fistfight with both hands tied behind your back. Second unit quarterback John Rosa had not played much this season and was rusty."

Crumpler stalked East Carolina to a 13-0 halftime lead with a pair of short scoring runs, and Les Strayhorn added 113 yards and a touchdown as the Pirates rolled up 309 yards on the ground.

East Carolina also picked up 162 aerial yards with Carl Summerell passing for all but eight of the yards and throwing a 10-yard scoring pass to Vic Wilfore.

Quarterback Steve Loflin threw scoring passes of six yards to Rich Agle and 19 yards to Clinton Bradshaw and also ran for 71 yards as Appalachian State's Mountaineers made it three in a row with a 17-3 victory over Florence State in Saturday's other nonleague game.

Three ACC Teams See 'Streaks', Setting Records

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Winning streaks of more than a couple games have become rare for Atlantic Coast Conference football teams in recent years, but three of this year's squads are doing much better than that and are setting records, besides.

North Carolina, unbeaten in its last three games, won its 13th straight ACC game Saturday, 26-10 over Clemson, and no other league team has beaten family foes that many times in a row.

Duke, winner of its last four, surprised Georgia Tech, 20-14. But the most sparkling performance was turned in by the North Carolina State Wolfpack in a 35-14 romp over Virginia. Three school records were topped by the offensive-minded team Lou Holtz has molded in his first year at Raleigh.

In the day's other games, powerful Penn State rolled over Maryland, 46-16; and South Carolina pasted Wake Forest, 35-3.

This weekend N.C. State finds out whether its offense can keep up the pace against the potent Nittany Lions at University Park. Holtz must wonder, too.

A sportswriter who asked him after the Virginia game if he anticipated getting a bowl bid got this reply: "Yes, we're going to one—next Saturday at Penn State."

Peach Bowl scouts were watching his squad roll up 507 yards in total offense as Stan Fritts set two records and Pat Kenney another. Fritts scored twice and ran an extra point to get 92 points for the season, breaking the former record of 83 points set in 1957 by the late Dick Christy.

Fritts' two TDs gave him 15 this year, breaking Christy's mark of 13 set in 1957.

Kenney caught six passes for 114 yards, giving him a season total of 652 yards. The former N.C. State mark for receiving was 571 yards set by Gary Rowe in 1966.

The Duke Blue Devils didn't break records but they did a good job of breaking up Georgia Tech's offense. They intercepted three passes, two of them coming late in the game with Tech threatening to pull even. Ronnie Hoots grabbed the last minute toss at midfield to assure the triumph.

It all gave Blue Devil Coach Mike McGee a good feeling. "We on the staff have never been happier with a group of young men as we are today for our football team."

Next week Duke plays Wake Forest, one of the five teams which beat them last year. Duke has already whipped three of them—Georgia Tech, Clemson and Navy—and has the last one—North Carolina—in sight.

Currently, Duke is in second place in league standings behind the Tar Heels and can gain a tie with them if it beats the Deacons and North Carolina loses to Virginia this week.

But the Tar Heels, now 4-0 in the ACC and 6-1 overall, is saving the 13 straight ACC games it has won. Exploitation is the way Bill Dooley operates, and the result has been just as successful this fall as it was a year ago when his team won the conference title.

Against the Tigers North Carolina rushed for 392 yards, 223 of them in the first two periods. But Clemson pulled to within six points in the third quarter and that worried Dooley. "We had a good game, both offensively and defensively, except for two things," he said.

"First, fumbles hurt us. And secondly, and even more important, we missed scoring opportunities," he said. The Tar Heels gave up the ball three times and couldn't punch over the goal lines all the times it had opportunities early in the game.

After racking up 10 points in the final period to Clemson's none, Dooley said, "Our players refused to fold. That is the mark of a good team."

Wake Forest is deep in the throes of one of its worst seasons ever with only one, opening game win in eight outings.

Against the independent Gamecocks they got only a field goal by Chuck Ramsey while giving up three touchdowns to Jay Lynn Hodgins and two others.

Wake Forest hasn't scored a touchdown in a month. Deacon coach Tom Harper observed afterward, "South Carolina did a fine job running the ball. They hurt us inside and outside and I didn't think they would have that success inside."

Maryland continued its up-and-down ways against Penn State and saw its season efforts fall to 4-4-1. Penn State exploded for two TD's in the third period to pull out of a tie and roll to victory. The bright spot for the Terps was Bob Avelino's two-touchdown performance at quarterback.

Clemson is next week's foe for Maryland.

Permatex 300 Is Mike Hill Carves Out Pearson's Race Victory In Texas Open

BRISTOL, Tenn. (AP)—One of the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing's top Grand National drivers has given a demonstration he's equally at home in the late model sportsman class.

David Pearson of Spartanburg, S. C., leading all but 10 of the 300 laps at Bristol International Speedway, won the Permatex 300 Sunday a lap in front of Bill Dennis of Richmond, Va., and Chet Williams of Morristown, Tenn. All three were driving Chevelles.

He was more fortunate than a couple of his compatriots from the Grand National field, Bobby Allison of Hueytown, Ala., and Cale Yarborough of Timmonsville, S. C.

Allison, top NASCAR money winner this year and Grand National point leader, was 31st when carburetor trouble forced him out after only 27 laps. Yarborough was 17th after wrecking on the 144th lap.

The caution flag was out for a total of 75 laps with Pearson covering the distance in 2 hours, 9 minutes, 37 seconds for an average speed of 73.203 miles per hour.

Pearson narrowly missed being involved in a 12-car wreck on the second lap. No one was hurt, and all the cars stayed in the race.

Starting from the outside pole, Pearson took the lead on the first lap from pole winner Paul Lewis of Johnson City, Tenn., and relinquished it only between laps 154 and 163 to John Rosati of Agawam, Mass., who was 14th after blowing a tire on the 249th lap.

Lewis, who had set a qualifying record Saturday of 106.472 m.p.h., wrecked on the 144th lap.

Benny Kerley of Hiddenite, N. C., finished fourth and Joe Thurmond of Rocky Mount, Va., was fifth in the National Championship event.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — "I just thank God I didn't have to make any of those little ol' three- and four-foot putts to save par," Mike Hill said.

He didn't. At least until the last hole and it didn't matter then as the 33-year-old Hill methodically carved out a front-running 69 in the final round Sunday, turned back the challenge of Lee Trevino and won the revived Texas Open Golf Tournament.

"Well," shrugged Trevino, "I tried. He put me down with a string of three straight birdies on the back side that just about did it."

Hill, who led from the second round on, didn't falter in the growing pressure of Trevino's charge, posted a 273 total on the 7,011-yard, par-72 Woodlake golf club course and secured his second tour triumph in a five-year career.

He also picked up a check of $25,000. It nailed down his exemption for next year's tournaments—he said early in the week the quest of that exemption was the only reason he had come to this event—and achieved his biggest money-winning season with almost $67,000.

Trevino, winner of four titles, including the British Open, matched the day's best round with a 67 and took second at 275. He closed out his season with a total of $214,805, second only to Jack Nicklaus who did not play.

Phil Rodgers was alone in third in this event that was being revived after a two-year absence from the schedule. Rodgers had a 67 for 277.

The group at 278 included Bobby Nichols, Chi Chi Rodriguez, Canadian Ben Kern, Charles Coody and Brad Anderson.

Game Funds Up For Vote

DENVER (AP) — Colorado residents will vote Tuesday to decide whether they will allocate any more money to Denver's 1976 Winter Olympic Games.

Curiously, a negative vote at the polls will continue the flow of money to the games and a positive vote will shut it off, a situation that is confusing to many residents, and a situation that might eventually cause the games to be taken elsewhere.

A survey by the Denver Post, published Sunday, indicates the further state funding of the games is in jeopardy.

The research firm, Research Services, Inc., predicts that 57 per cent of Colorado voters will approve a constitutional amendment barring the use of state tax money for the games.

The Olympics is a topic that at one time or another has been an environmental, political and economic issue, with the most recent emphasis on economics.

The state, opponents say, has higher priorities for its money, such as education, mental health, welfare, and environmental protection.

Supporters say the games will be an economic boost for the state, creating jobs, increasing tourism and leaving behind such benefits as low cost housing and better recreation facilities.

But the main issue, now, appears to be money.

Skilled Wood Carver Is Seeking New Challenge

By TIM KLASS
Associated Press Writer
LILLIWAUP, Wash. (AP) — Marcus Westby is a restless craftsman, a skilled wood-carver anxious for a bigger challenge.

Since 1954 he has made a living selling his handiwork—miniature totem poles, ritual Indian masks and intricate wall plaques. His efforts range from an 18-foot tiki of the Polynesian war god to an 18-inch replica of a killer whale that once marked a Tlingit grave in Alaska to 3-inch handpainted figurines of Northwest Indians in native garb.

His best work, he said, is a 2-inch deep, mid-19th century carving of an American clipper ship, The Golden West.

It took 45 days to carve and paint the 5 by 2½ foot plaque for the dining room of the flag-ship of American Mail Line Ltd., Westby said. The detail work includes lifeboats, sailors and 94 feet of piano wire for the rigging.

With black cap perched on a shock of light blonde hair, gesturing with his ever-present cigar, Westby evinces an unabashed pride in his ability to recreate the rough-hewn symbols and artifacts of cultures he has never known.

But he displays an even greater eagerness and impatience to go on to something far more complex than anything he's tried before.

"I'm getting tired of carving after 18 years," he said. "It's getting to the point where it's hard for me to carve. The fun is lost. It's no hobby. It's no relaxation."

"I want to build me a stagecoach, and not one of those mud wagons you see around here and east of the mountains. When I build one, it'll be the most beautiful one ever built, I guarantee you that."

It may also prove to be one of the most expensive. Westby

By DANIEL DROSDOFF
RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI)—Guanabara Bay, once a yachtman's paradise, now is so full of sludge that propellers break on the speeding hydroplanes that skim the water from Rio de Janeiro to Niteroi.

In Sao Paulo last summer 150 children died of dehydration, believed caused in large part by contaminated drinking water. Sao Paulo State distributed chlorine directly to poor families for a makeshift, self-service sanitatin plan against polluted drinking water.

Bathers on the white sands of Copacabana or Ipanema beaches sun themselves beside large sewage drainage canals that empty into the beach and leave large patches of dark, blackish water. From time to time the beach is coated by oil spewed from passing ships.

Tons of fish die annually from pollution in Rodrigues de Freitas lagoon in Rio de Janeiro. Only 12 years ago Brazil's new capital of Brasilia was inaugurated beside an artificial lake. It is now so polluted it is unfit for swimming, and its fish are dying.

In the Sao Paulo neighborhood of Em Perus some 40 persons a day are treated by a clinic for lung illnesses resulting from dust coughed up by a cement factory.

The Costs of Modernization

The sludge, the dirty air, the contaminated water, the wrecked beaches, the dead fish, and the oil slicks are part of the price Brazil is paying for its rapid industrialization.

It is a price Brazil is willing to pay.

There is no federal antipollution law in Brazil. Those regulations that exist are limited mostly to the industrial states of Guanabara (greater Rio de Janeiro) and Sao Paulo.

Brazil has adopted the position that if pollution is necessary to modernize, it will pollute.

Interior Minister Jose Costa Cavalcanti has repeatedly made horses so he can learn to drive it, Westby is selling his house and gallery and three acres of land overlooking the Hood Canal at the mouth of the Hamma Hamma River, taking his wife and 14-year-old daughter to find a home in Wyoming.

His least worry seems to be how he will earn a living.

"All I really need is wide open spaces... and a source of water," Westby said. "I can get by pretty cheap. I've had 20 different types of jobs."

He says the finished stagecoach may become a paying tourist attraction for city folk whose affluence, he feels, has isolated them from their cultural heritage.

Westby, 47, says he still recalls "the signs of the West going out" as a child in Helena, Mont. The family moved to Tacoma, Wash., when he was 7 years old, and he went with his parents when they moved to the Indian seacoast village of La Push, Wash. in 1949.

There, five years later, he began carving small totems.

"I was single, had a lot of time on my hands and needed money," he said. "They (local Indians) did some, but they did their own style. I was more interested in the Alaska Indians."

He made his first trip to the 49th state in 1961, moved to the other side of the Olympic Peninsula four years later and built a gallery beside the wood frame house.

Today, he said, his regular carvings include 80 different replicas of Kwakiutl and Nootke masks and Tlingit totems.

figures he'll need $15,000 to build an authentic replica of the Abbott Downey coach, designed in 1865 by Concord Stage in New Hampshire—"the Cadillac of the line."

But building the stagecoach is only the first part of Westby's dream.

"It was interest in horses that really got me started," he said, "working with animals, which have a heart, and working with the beauty of wood."

To get the money to build the stage and buy the land and FRANKFORT, Ky. (UPI) —The state Department of Health says both the birth and death rates in Kentucky decreased in 1971. Research director Bill Mackey reported the birth rate declined from 18.7 per 1,000 to 17.7, while the death rate dropped from 10.3 per 1,000 to 9.8.

this position public, and Brazilian delegates to the world conference on the environment held in Stockholm last June made the same point.

According to Cavalcanti, it is the rich, developed countries which pollute the most, and it is they who should pay the major price for pollution control. Poor countries cannot afford it.

"It is precisely economic growth that has allowed developed countries to make great advances in the eradication of mass poverty, ignorance, disease, and as such give a high priority to environmental considerations," Cavalcanti said recently.

"A country that has not yet reached minimum satisfactory levels of these essentials is not in the position to divert considerable resources in favor of environmental protection."

pollute."

The national attitude is reflected on a local level.

When complaints that fish were dying in Brasilia's artificial lake were brought to the attention of the city's superintendent of water and sewage, Lucio Gomide Lourdes, his reply was, "There does not exist an aquatic body beside human activity that is not polluted."

The health secretary of Sao Paulo State—the most industrialized area in Brazil—lamented recently, "We do not have local pollution standards."

Yet the rise in human and industrial filth is producing a steady chorus of complaints that may force authorities to change their ways.

A Health Ministry report recently described the air pollution in the city of Sao Paulo as far above the "acceptable level of air pollution limits."

In Greater Rio de Janeiro, the pollution control division of the Sanitary Department regularly fines factories and bus companies for failing to meet

Admiral Heads Her Household

LONDON (UPI) —Queen Elizabeth is getting an admiral as her new household manager.

"Stricter Tanker Laws

Stricter regulations on tankers and petroleum storage tanks in Guanabara Bay have limited the oil slicks, and the state government has promised to eradicate eventually the favelas (shantytowns) that ring some parts of the bay and use it as a backyard sewage canal.

The president of the Committee to Combat Pollution in Guanabara Bay, Capt. Luis Oscar Moss Goulart, warned recently that Brazilian pollution control was "very deficient."

Yet at the same time even he opposed applying the same standards to Brazil as the more advanced countries. He said these were "too sophisticated for Brazilian interests. What is important is that we find national solutions for our pollution."

Analyst Says Handwriting Reveals 'Whole Person'

TO MRS. BARBARA HALSEY, a person's signature is more than a nametag. A handwriting analyst, Mrs. Halsey says handwriting reveals likes, dislikes, fears, hangups and hidden talents. (UPI Telephoto)

By JIMMY F. KEMP
DALLAS (UPI)—To the uninitiated, a person's signature amounts to little more than a nametag, but Mrs. Barbara Halsey, a handwriting analyst, says it reveals the whole person—likes, dislikes, fears, hangups and hidden talents.

Mrs. Halsey, mother of seven children and a master certified graphonanalyst who graduated from the International Graphoanalysis Society of Chicago has been analyzing handwriting for seven years.

While she admits handwriting analysis is not a cure-all, she maintains it can be used to good advantage in areas ranging from marriage counseling to crime prevention and detection.

"Some look on the profession as pseudo-science or occult-science," Mrs. Halsey said in an interview. "There is a lack of understanding by the public which isn't fully acquainted with this tool.

"As more and more people and businesses become acquainted with it, it will become more and more popular."

For Students

She said as an example that graphoanalysis can be used as a counseling-add for students.

"It can detect such things as fear of criticism or lack of stimulation in the youngster," she said. "A preschool scribble can be analyzed to detect the qualities which the child is developing.

"It would be useful for teachers who could use it to tell which students need to be brought out, which ones really like to learn and those who are just daydreaming their time away."

Mrs. Halsey said graphoanalysis also can be useful to young couples contemplating marriage by showing if they have any real conflicting traits and prepare them for getting used to their mate's habits.

How a person writes also can be an important factor in criminal investigation, she said, explaining:

"It can be used in solving crimes because a person cannot disguise himself in handwriting. It would show if a person is capable of committing the crime he is suspected of."

Others uses for graphoanalysis include personnel management and finance.

"Credit managers have found it a useful tool because it reflects personal characteristics such as honesty or deceit, pride or sloth, willpower or wastefulness," she said.

Mrs. Halsey also said that disturbed persons can be helped because they can be detected through their handwriting and referred to the proper authorities.

A 'Sacred Trust'

In fact, she said, practically ever human trait from jealousy and fear to confidence and enthusiasm is revealed in a person's handwriting.

The giveaway is the way individual handwriting strokes are made, the spacing of letters and words and the slant of the script.

Mrs. Halsey said graphoanalysis recognizes the responsibility they carry when assessing a person's character.

"When I realize how deep into the psyche we can get, it's frightening," she said. "It's a sacred trust."

Defector Lives A Dangerous Life

By RICHARD BLYSTONE
Associated Press Writer

SAIGON (AP) — Lt. Pham Huu Do defected from the North Vietnamese army seven months ago, never dreaming that the Communists might gain acceptance in South Vietnam before he would.

Now, no longer an "enemy" of the Saigon government but not yet certified loyal, he waits at an "open arms" center while a political struggle shapes up between his new and old comrades.

After a political indoctrination course he will join some 200,000 other "Hoi Chanh" or "ralliers to justice" who have been integrated into South Vietnamese society.

He may not be safe. It is said, on uncertain authority, that the Viet Cong would rather kill one Hoi Chanh than two Americans. Some anti-Communist Vietnamese say they believe a ceasefire would provide opportunities for vengeance.

"I am not afraid," says Do. "I know the Communists' ways very well. I can take care of myself."

Do, 26, taught in high school before he was called into Hanoi's army in 1968. Interviewed in the presence of a South Vietnamese psychological warfare official, he said disillusion, not hardship, prompted him to defect after about a year in South Vietnam.

One April night, Do walked to the barbed-wire perimeter of a militia outpost and waved his white handkerchief.

Slaughter Jackasses

By WILLY VOIGT JR.
RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — Economic development and growing exports have teamed up with poverty and ignorance to threaten Brazil's jackasses with extinction.

In Brazil's impoverished and arid northeast region—a place where horses and mules don't survive for long—generations of purros have patiently trotted over countless miles of hard-baked earth, carrying water and firewood and, in good times, some meager produce to market.

Recently, however, a slaughterhouse in the state of Bahia started buying jackasses throughout the northeast at the astonishingly low rate of $2-$3.50 apiece. Killing them at the rate of 200 a day, it exports meat to the United States and Japan, for use in dog food.

The venture was so successful, the firm hopes to slaughter 200,000 animals next year. Other slaughterhouses in the northeast also have begun to enter the burro meat export field.

Brazilian ecologists became alarmed. Brazil's jackass population is estimated at several million—900,000 in Bahia alone. But ignorant northeastern peasants, constantly in need of money, tend to sell their spare female jackasses first, scientists explain. Females are less regarded as workers, because, in the peasants' eyes, they "waste" two months every time they get pregnant.

Seventy-five per cent of the jackasses slaughtered for meat are females, reports indicate.

A new law forbids the wholesale exporting of wildlife for commercial purposes, but the law has not yet found its way to classifying the patient burros as wildlife.

Marching Song For The Libbers

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — It may be the first marching song for women's lib — a tune called "I Am Woman" which sounds a catchy call to revolution and has been selling about 25,000 records per day.

"I've been getting lots of mail about the song from housewives," says composer-singer Helen Reddy. "They say that if they feel depressed they put the record on and it bucks them up."

The lyrics written by Ms. Reddy declare:

"I am strong
I am invincible
I am woman."

The Australian-born performer, who shuns makeup and favors a simple pixie haircut, employs a male housekeeper, and when he's not there she and her husband-manager Jeff Wald share household chores.

"The last person up in the morning makes the bed," she says. "It's only fair. He sleeps in it too."

"I Am Woman," which includes the resolve that "...no one's ever gonna keep me down again," has been snapped up as the theme song for a women's lib movie, "Stand Up and Be Counted," and Ms. Reddy is using it as the title piece in her next album.

"The song started out as a personal statement," says the 30-year-old singer, recalling her struggle to make it as an entertainer.

The daughter of Australian entertainers Stella Lamond and Max Reddy, Helen had grown up in show business and started singing professionally at 15. When she won a talent contest in 1966 with a prize of a trip to the United States, Ms. Reddy, then divorced, set out with her small daughter Traci to find success. It was a long search.

"I had come to America at precisely the wrong time," she recalls. "Everything was male groups and loud noise. There was just no market for lone girl singers."

She met and married Wald, a talent agent, soon after her arrival. But even with his help her best bookings were one-night stands at state fairs.

Then, five years after her emigration, Ms. Reddy made a record that changed her life. Her rendition of "I Don't Know How to Love Him" from the musical "Jesus Christ Superstar" became a hit. She followed that with "Crazy Love" and was on her way.

FROM MIGHTY OAKS
NEW YORK (UPI) — Acorns were among decorations for the first Christmas trees. In the country, acorns were plentiful, small, lightweight and cost absolutely nothing. Gathering them became a happy holiday event.

Now Garbage Is Resource

NEW YORK (UPI) — The technical revolution is catching up with the garbageman.

Garbage traditionally has been carted off to be burned, buried or just dumped. The garbageman and his truck ruled the day. But now more sophisticated ways of collecting and disposing of garbage are on the horizon. Garbage even has been renamed solid waste.

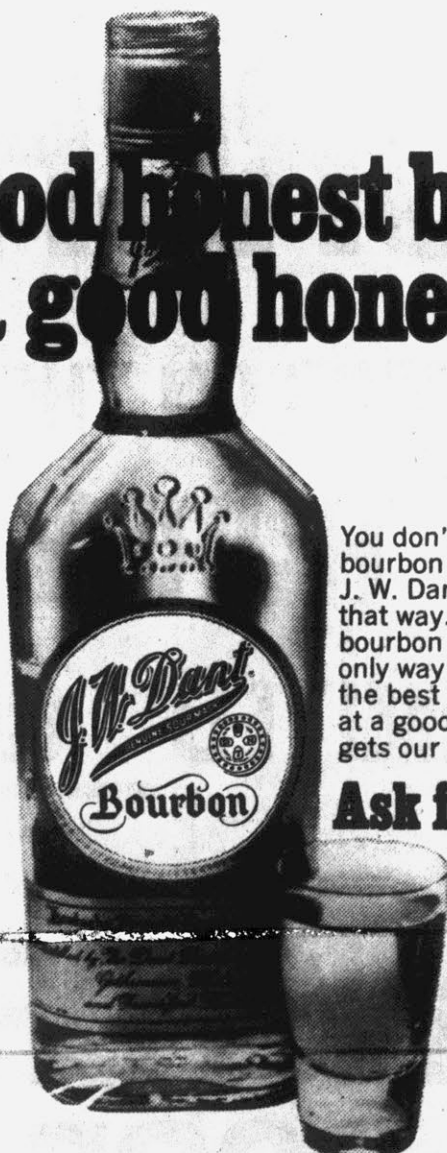

Garbage today can be collected via pneumatic tubes — big brothers to those sometimes used in department stores to make change. And, reports the Glass Container Manufacturers Institute, which is researching the means of recycling the glass component of refuse, technology's full bag of tricks is being employed to convert the garbage from waste to wealth.

Several U.S. cities are now planning resource recovery systems that will use magnetism, electronics, optical sorters, air currents, gravity and various chemical means of separating the salvageable components of solid waste for recycling.

Markets, too, are being developed for the recycled products. The glass container industry can use huge tonnages of waste glass to make new bottles.

Tale Of Tinsel Out Of Ukraine

NEW YORK (UPI) —From the Ukraine comes the marvelous tale of Christmas tinsel. Once upon a long-ago Christmas, a poor widow had a tree but could afford no ornaments. When she awoke on Christmas morning she found a spider had spun its web over the entire tree. The moonlight of Christmas Eve had turned it to silver. The widow and her children were delighted.

Early Ornament In Gingerbread

NEW YORK (UPI) —The spicy little gingerbread man was one of the earliest ornaments used on Christmas trees. At first German and Austrian bakers gave them to children as a holiday treat. Realizing what attractive ornaments they would make, mothers soon baked quantities large enough to decorate entire Christmas trees.

A four-inch tube of pure platinum would weigh 50 pounds.

The Worry Clinic Youngster Can Vote By Proxy

Marcia, though only 16, voted 17 times in the primary! And vowed to cast 20 ballots in the November campaign. Yet not one of her votes was challenged! So you teen-agers don't need to wait till you are 18 to sway elections!

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 7, 1972

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A fine day and evening to listen to the voice of your intuitions. Your hunches are likely to be accurate now. You are able to gain the goodwill of those in powerful positions and also can travel or arrange some expansion that can be excellent for you. Discuss details.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Some opportunity you may have been awaiting for some time can arrive in today's mail. Discuss with a new associate how best to blend your past experiences. Come to a real meeting of minds.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) That intuitive lead you get early in the day can be most helpful in dealing with others, with successful results. Handle personal, business and civic matters well. Avoid one who is unfriendly to you.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You and an associate can see eye to eye today; have discussions early for fine results. A good day for handling civic matters also. Show you are most adept at such affairs.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You can permit co-workers to get the drift of what it is you are doing, since this can lead to much success with present enterprises. Buy new clothing which will make you look more charming. Simplicity is the keynote now.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Delving into whatever is of a cultural or artistic nature can bring fine results today and tonight. Know what mate desires and try to please. This will pave the way for a happier future together.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You have to work tactfully at home for the benefits you want. Stating aims to kin brings fine response, since they are attuned to your needs now. Try to reason with one who is argumentative.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) If you use more direct methods and stop working so many angles, you get better results with others today. Come to a fine understanding as to the role each plays in projects at hand. Show you are efficient.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Think big if you want to become big. Talk over your affairs with a higher-up who has the right solutions to your problems. State aims to kin and they will give you the cooperation you need. Evening is fine for romance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Plan to see those persons who really understand you and can be most helpful just at this time. Group affairs are particularly fine and bring the contacts and good ideas you need. Avoid one who is a troublemaker.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You are able to get data you need now from specialists, and can plan the future better, so do this. Help a good friend who is in trouble. The evening can be a delight, romantically speaking.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Your mind is sharp and clear now and you can investigate subjects now that are helpful to your career. If you are to take a trip soon, do some reading about this place you have never seen before. Plan to take right clothing with you.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Show you can keep promises you have made of any kind and gain the goodwill of others. The recreational is very appealing to you, and you can have a delightful time. Mate is in a most receptive mood in p.m.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one of those charming young people whose mind is concerned with just about everything under the sun, and there will be a particular fondness for foreign tongues, learning about varying philosophies, music, etc. It would be wise to give an opportunity for travel early. Anything that has true breadth of scope is best for your most talented child. There is a fine conversationalist in this chart. Sports are excellent to strengthen the body.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

am 18." Actually, you young folks of Marcia's age can still vote in local, state and national elections. How? By proxy!

For if you will just use your family car to pick up oldsters who otherwise would never get to the polls, then you are directly responsible for their ballots!

Indeed, alert girls like Marcia can easily vote 10 to 20 times if they haul that many other registered voters to the polls.

This is one of the very best and most economical ways to win the election of good candidates who are statesmen instead of mere selfish politicians.

Sometimes just one extra vote per precinct can tip the scales in an entire statewide election for Governor or U.S. Senator.

In a recent classical case, Indiana's contest for the U.S. Senate seat of Sen. Hartke was threatened by Congressman Roubush.

Sen. Hartke won by less than 4,500 ballots.

It was so close, that a re-count was ordered.

Indiana has 92 counties, so a difference of only 50 votes per county would have won that statewide election!

Thus, if teen-agers like Marcia could have organized even 10 high schoolers in every county, and if each of those 10 could have taken 5 extra voters apiece to the polls, those young people could have elected a new U.S. Senator.

So don't feel unduly unhappy just because you yourself are not yet 18 years of age.

Instead, prod your parents and grandparents to get to the polls.

Remind them that at Valley Forge and in other wars since then, our right to vote has been won by the blood of courageous patriots.

It is thus a much greater honor for our valiant dead to cast your ballot to preserve their Republic, than to march in Memorial Day parades and wave the flag.

Each of you teen-agers can also volunteer to help your precinct captains and thus add at least 10 to 20 additional votes to the precinct's tally.

Many housewives, too, fail to vote because they have babies at home and no baby sitters.

So escort such mothers to the polling places and then baby-sit even in the auto, in order to boost the total turnout of voters.

Remember, in dictatorial nations like Russia, citizens have no free choice of two candidates per office.

So be grateful we still can choose our leaders in the privacy of a voting booth.

Remember, too, that this is a Republic and not a democracy means mobocracy!

For in a democracy, the rule of the majority prevails.

Alas, the minorities then can be pillaged, looted or killed at will!

But in our Republic, minorities still have equal rights with the majority, as per our written Constitution!

So send for my booklet "How to Save Our Republic," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 cents.

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

What do you bid now?

A.—While partner's double is clearly intended for penalties, there is grave doubt as to the propriety of leaving it in. Inasmuch as the opponents have agreed on hearts, it is not to be expected that a stinging penalty will be inflicted upon the non-vulnerable. There seems to be a better chance to score points by reaching for game, and our suggested call is four clubs.

What do you bid now?

A.—Our preference is for a pass. Your hand should surely produce five to six tricks in defense and, if partner has a good enough hand to yield a game, you should be able to defeat the adversaries 800 points. If your partner's double is light, you may have no game and yet a profit by way of a penalty is assured.

At Regional Frat Meet

Members of Phi Mu Alpha Fraternity at East Carolina University, Zeta Psi Chapter, attended the Atlantic States Regional Phi Mu Alpha Convention held in Atlanta, Georgia on October 30th and 31st.

The Atlantic States Region covers three provinces consisting of 27 chapters in a five state area.

Dr. Charles Stevens, assistant-dean of music at East Carolina and governor of province 20, presided over the last days' activities.

Three percussion pieces were performed by the Zeta Psi chapter featuring Peyton Becton, vice-president, John Floyd, Grey Barrier, and Chuck Mercavich.

Also in attendance were Dave Faber, president, Jim Tyndall, Tom Richards, Don Carnohan, Jim Powers, Wayne Powell, Hunter Gordon, Garner Keel, Bobby Sullivan, and Robert Hause, faculty advisor.

Sullivan was elected as first alternate to national convention to be held in Interlocken, Michigan this summer. The East Carolina Zeta Psi Chapter was honored by receiving six citations at the convention.

Five Pedestrian Deaths In State

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Five pedestrians, including two youngsters, were among 16 persons killed in North Carolina traffic accidents over the weekend.

The deaths brought the toll for the year to 1,647, 128 more than by this time last year.

Gregory Miles, 6, of Rt. 3, Dudley, died after being struck by a car on a rural road five miles south of Goldsboro. And Mark Anthony Stafford, 5, of Shelby, died after being hit by a car on N.C. 180 three miles north of Shelby.

Three U.S. Helicopters Downed $1 Billion Deal Is Near Signing

By GEORGE ESPER
Associated Press Writer
SAIGON (AP) — Communist forces shot down three U.S. helicopters within 14 miles of Da Nang Sunday, killing two Americans and wounding three, the U.S. Command announced today.

An Army AH1 Cobra gunship was hit by small arms fire and crashed in flames 14 miles south of Da Nang, killing one crewman and wounding the second.

An OH6 light observation helicopter was shot down as it attempted to recover the casualties, and one of its crew was wounded. A second OH6 then went in and picked up the dead and wounded, and a relief pilot flew out the damaged OH6. The Cobra gunship was destroyed.

About eight hours later, another OH6 was shot down by small arms fire six miles to the north. The U.S. Command said one crewman was killed and the second was wounded and the helicopter was destroyed.

The losses raised to 8,488 the total number of U.S. aircraft reported lost to all causes in the war. This includes 4,851 helicopters.

U.S. B52 bombers swept to within 56 miles of the 20th parallel today in their deepest raids against North Vietnam since the resumption of full-scale bombing last April. The raids 34 miles north of Vinh were part of a concerted effort to blunt a Communist buildup of troops and supplies in all four countries of Indochina in anticipation of a cease-fire, U.S. military sources said.

Nhan Dan, the official North Vietnamese newspaper, said the intensification of B52 bombing and Washington's own speedup in deliveries of U.S. war materials to Saigon "threaten to break" the draft peace agreement negotiated by Henry A. Kissinger in Paris.

The partial bombing halt above the 20th parallel remained in effect, keeping American attack planes away from the Hanoi-Haiphong industrial complex. Vinh is 90 miles south of the 20th parallel.

The North Vietnamese Foreign Ministry in an official statement carried by the Vietnam News Agency, denounced the United States for conducting air and naval attacks on provinces in the southern panhandle below the 20th parallel.

The Hanoi news agency claimed that in Ha Tinh province, the second province above the DMZ, U.S. B52 and tactical bombers dropped some 200 assorted bombs on "civilian targets, including the Thach Ngoc state farm and many agricultural cooperatives, causing heavy losses in lives and property."

The U.S. command maintained its policy of not commenting on Hanoi broadcasts.

In South Vietnam, North

Vietnamese and Viet Cong forces kept up shelling and terror attacks across the country, firing mortars and rockets into towns and blowing up bridges.

Middle-American Is In 'Undecided'

By CARL P. LEUBSDORF
AP Political Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — For months, Richard J. Johnson, a lifetime Democrat who was the subject of a study into the voting habits of a typical "middle American," had said he was leaning this year to Republican Richard Nixon.

Now, just a day before the election, he says he has moved into the undecided camp. The reason: the Nixon administration's pre-election bid for peace in Vietnam.

"I really don't know how I'm going to vote," Johnson said in a television interview. "I'll make that decision in the voting booth at about 7:30 a.m. Tuesday morning."

Johnson, a $15,000-a-year credit manager with a subsidiary of the National Steel Corp. who lives in Rolling Meadows, Ill., was chosen last January by the National Public Affairs Center for Television (NPACT) for the study. In September, he spent four days with Sen. George McGovern's campaign.

Until the Nixon administration disclosed its Vietnam peace drive 10 days ago, Johnson said, "I was going to vote for President Nixon." Then, he began to lean toward McGovern, feeling that "if it could have been done now, it could have been done two years ago."

"As of right now, I really don't know what to tell you," he added.

Johnson, who has four children and whose wife works parttime, said, "I think there are lots of people like me. There are more people than a lot of people realize who are really undecided."

Is Near Signing

HOUSTON (AP) — A billion dollar deal to swap liquefied natural gas from the Soviet Union for U.S. goods and services is within 60 days of signing, according to three Houston firms.

Texas Eastern Transmission Corp., Brown & Root, Inc., and Tenneco, Inc., said they expected to conclude work on the 25-year agreement to import two billion cubic feet of natural gas a day from Siberian gas fields to the East Coast of the United States.

They also are talking with the Soviet Union and Japanese interests of another deal — this one to import liquefied natural gas from Eastern Siberia to the U.S. West Coast and Japan, spokesmen said.

The three Houston firms said they will spend $2.5 billion in terms of 1972 dollar value to build pipelines, compressor stations and liquefaction plants in the Soviet Union as part of the East Coast deal.

They would invest $1.8 billion in 20 tankers to carry the natural gas from the Soviet Union to this country.

Financing for the gigantic deal is being worked out by First National City Bank of New York and the Bank of America, the three firms said.

The Texas group refused to say just how much the entire scheme would cost. There has been speculation that the whole program would run from $30 billion to $45 billion.

The Soviet Union would pay for the facilities built in that country with natural gas, the announcement said. After all costs are paid, about $10 billion more in natural gas would be imported, they said, but no cash would be paid to the Soviet Union.

NET INCOME
Texas Gulf Inc. reported that net income for the first nine months of 1972 was $20,835,000 or 69 cents per share, compared with $19,035,000, or 63 cents per share, for the first nine months of 1971.

Gross sales, less outside zinc and lead smelting and refining charges for the first nine months of 1972 was $198,932,000, compared with $163,034,000 for the same period last year.

Net income for the third quarter of 1972 was $8,751,000, or 29 cents per share, compared with earnings of $6,030,000, or 20 cents a share, for the third quarter of 1971.

INCOME STATEMENT
Norfolk Southern Railway Co. announced that operating revenues for the nine months ended Sept. 30 were $11,399,464, compared with $10,720,484 last year.

Operating expenses amounted to $9,556,131 this year, compared with $8,466,691 in 1971 while net revenues from railway operations totaled $1,843,334, an increase over $2,253,793.

NEW HIGHS
Heilig-Meyers Co., a 59-year-old retail furniture chain which made its first public stock offering in September, reported new highs in sales and earnings for the quarter and for the first half of the fiscal year ending March 1973.

Sales for the six months ended Sept. 30 increased from 9.2 million to 12.7 million while earnings per share are up from 37 cents to 49 cents, a 32 per cent rise.

All Heilig-Meyers stores are presently located in North Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia.

SALES ADVANCED
Winn-Dixie sales advanced $16,298,286 during the four weeks ended Oct. 14, compared with the same period a year ago. Volume at the company's 891 supermarkets throughout the South was $150,166,335 against $133,868,049, an increase of 12.17 per cent.

Winn-Dixie reported that a gain also was shown for the 16 weeks ended Oct. 14, when sales totaled $587,596,910 compared with $525,451,896, a rise of $62,145,014 or 11.83 per cent.

QUARTERLY REPORT
Lee B. Thomas Jr., president of Vermont American Corp., reported that net sales for the nine months ended Sept. 30 totaled $32,231,000, compared with $26,861,000 for the same period last year.

Earnings before taxes were $2,814,000, he said, an increase over $2,666,000 last year. Net earnings for the quarter amounted to $1,407,000, Thomas reported, compared with $1,279,000 in 1971.

Thomas noted that the board declared in October a dividend of 15 cents per share on Class A and B shares, payable Nov. 30 to stockholders of record Nov. 15.

"I ENDORSE JESSE HELMS FOR U.S. SENATOR; HE DESERVES YOUR CONFIDENCE ALSO"—PRESIDENT NIXON

WHY DOES NORTH CAROLINA NEED AND WHY DOES PRESIDENT NIXON NEED JESSE HELMS IN THE U.S. SENATE? HERE ARE SOME OF THE REASONS:

During President Nixon's first term a determined group of very liberal senators, among them Senator George McGovern, controlled the U.S. Senate. This extremely partisan group opposed and obstructed many of the President's programs vital to North Carolina and Pitt County. These programs and policies include:

- President Nixon's Supreme Court Appointments
- President Nixon's Efforts to End Court Directed Busing of School Children
- President Nixon's Support of the Neighborhood School Concept
- President Nixon's Efforts to End the Viet Nam War. Senate Opposition Encouraged North Viet Nam to Delay Coming to Terms
- President Nixon's Attempts to Limit Federal Expenditures to $250 Billion Defeated in the Senate. His Vetoes of Unreasonable Spending Were Overriden by the Senate.
- President Nixon's Inflation Control Program Resisted in the Senate.
- President Nixon's Federal-State Revenue Sharing Program Fought by Senate Liberals.
- President Nixon's Efforts to Maintain a Strong Defense Establishment Opposed in the Senate.
- Presidential Appointments Such as Sec. of Agricultural Butz Opposed in the Senate.

● JESSE HELMS SUPPORTED ALL THESE POLICIES OF PRESIDENT NIXON

- The Great Majority of North Carolinians Support President Nixon rather than His Senate Opponents on These Issues.

● WOULD YOU AGREE WITH US THAT

- North Carolina and the Nation Do Not Need Another Opponent to These Programs in the U.S. Senate (Congressman Galifianakis Has a Liberal, High Spending Record in the Congress). ☐
- A Senator with the President's Confidence Will Be Closer to the President When North Carolina's Interests Are at stake. ☐
- The Basic Vote for Cong. Galifianakis on Election Day Will Come from McGovern Voters. ☐
- It Makes Good Sense for Nixon Voters to Vote for Jesse Helms, Whom You Can Trust to Support the President on Policies Vital to N. C., and Whom President Nixon Came Down to Personally Endorse. One Would Cancel Out His or Her Presidential Vote if One at the Same Time Risked Voting to Increase President Nixon's Senate Opposition. ☐
