

Scott Urges More Power To Governor

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Gov. Bob Scott, in an interview with the Charlotte News, says he thinks future North Carolina governors should have the veto power over legislation, additional appointive powers and the right to re-elected.

In a discussion of wide-ranging topics, the governor said: —The election of Republican Jim Holshouser as governor will add impetus to the move to have annual legislative sessions since the Democratic legislature will want to keep its eye on Holshouser.

—Some of the recent controversies during his administration dealing with the highway department and allocation of highway funds probably helped Holshouser win.

—More money should be provided for the governor's mandatory entertaining at the mansion.

—The governor's wife needs an expense account for her travels to public functions.

—He will not unequivocally rule out the possibility of running for office again, but he is not sure he is cut out for the role of U.S. senator.

Regarding veto power, Scott said it is increasingly important for the governor to have that power in a situation of the governor and the controlling party in the General Assembly not being from the same party.

Holshouser will be dealing with a Democratic General Assembly.

Scott said the only legislation he might have vetoed was the legislative retirement act. He said the move toward annual sessions of the legislature will require even more that the governor have veto power.

Regarding published reports on Highway Department controversy, Scott said the troubles "had an effect" on the defeat of Democrat Hargrove "Skipper" Bowles for governor.

"I don't think it was the one big thing," Scott said, adding that his party's loss of the governor's office was primarily caused by rising strength of the Republican Party in the state and the Nixon sweep.

"If it wasn't this time, it would have been next time," he said.

He said the campaign for governor was unique in that Bowles, trying to assert his independence from the Democratic establishment, "spot-lighted the faults" of the Scott administration.

"It's unusual when the nominee of the party criticizes the party, and no one defends the party," Scott said. "Holshouser never criticized me. He never got on me personally. I've always appreciated that from a human stand point."

Regarding appointive power, Scott said a governor should not be saddled with appointees from previous administrations who have six or eight-year terms on boards and commissions.

He said there were "probably" some persons he appointed that he would have liked to have fired. "Not wholesale by any means," he said, but just a few.

He reflected on how he often would want to fill a secretarial or some other position in government with a person he had promised to find a job, but was unable to get the person hired.

"As the time goes on, it gets more and more difficult" to get cooperation from middle level state employees, he said. This is particularly true, he said, once the campaigns for the new governor get under way.

This difficulty is at the center of the problems he had with the Highway Commission, the governor said.

"The problem in the Highway Department is not at the top level," he said, and is not with the employees at the bottom. He said the trouble with the department is found in "that vast middle echelon" that he was never able to get control of.

"I just found it impossible to really do anything about the Highway Department, and changing the top level doesn't solve the problems," he said.

Scott defended the highway commissioners who were accused of having conflicts of interest and said they had no intention of doing anything wrong.

Help Arrives For U.S. Coast Guard Cutter In Aleutian Islands Storm

By STEVE WEINER
Associated Press Writer

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — A Japanese freighter tied up with the stricken Coast Guard cutter Jarvis in Alaska's Aleutian chain this morning, ending a lonely, nine-hour ordeal for the American vessel floundering without power in "mountainous seas."

Coast Guard spokesmen said the Koyo Maru No. 3, one of five merchant ships dispatched to help the crippled cutter, was the first rescue vessel to arrive at the scene 20 miles south of Akutan Island.

It was not known how the freighter would help the Jarvis, a 378-foot, jet-powered cutter described as the pride of the Coast Guard fleet.

One other Japanese merchantman, two Russian ships and a Greek vessel continued to respond to the Jarvis SOS.

Spokesmen said flooding that inundated the cutter's engine room had been controlled, and Capt. Frederick O. Wooley reported his ship was "in no imminent danger of sinking."

There were no injuries reported among the crew, which officials placed at 170 men.

Spokesmen described the cutter's condition as "serious but stable" as it rode 25-knot winds and 12-foot swells 750 miles southwest of Anchorage in the North Pacific.

The Honolulu-based cutter lost power and ability to pump water late Wednesday when her engine room flooded.

Also answering the cutter's SOS were two Coast Guard cutters, an American fishing boat, three military HC130 search planes and a Navy P3 aircraft.

Pumping equipment was dropped to the vessel by one of the HC130s, and the spokesman said the Jarvis, equipped with an H52 helicopter, was believed to have ferried a few men to Akutan.

The Jarvis first ran into trouble early Wednesday when she went aground in "high seas and wind" in Dutch Harbor at Unalaska Island adjacent to Akutan.

Emergency repairs were completed, and a spokesman said Capt. Frederick O. Wooley decided to leave the Alaska fisheries patrol and return to Honolulu. Wooley is a resident of Mililani Town, Hawaii, and formerly of Manasquan, N.J.

Forty miles later, the ship began to flood and power was lost.

Demo Senate Whip Has Eyes On Boggs' Office

WASHINGTON (AP) — One month after House Democratic Leader Hale Boggs disappeared during an Alaskan campaign flight, the man who succeeded him as assistant leader claims he's got the top job nailed down.

Rep. Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. of Massachusetts, who became whip two years ago when Boggs was elevated to floor leader, says he has more than enough pledges of support to guarantee him Boggs' post.

However, Rep. Sam Gibbons of Florida disputes the claim and says his effort to win Boggs' post is doing all right too. But O'Neill has an advantage because he is already on the House Democratic leadership team.

On Oct. 16, Boggs was aboard a light plane with Rep. Nick Begich and two other persons over the Alaskan coast on a flight from Anchorage to Juneau.

Boggs had taken advantage of a two-day House recess to make several campaign speeches for the freshman Begich, Alaska's only House member. Somewhere between Anchorage and Juneau the small plane disappeared, and a month-long search has found no sign of the craft.

Search planes were sent out again Wednesday, and again reported no luck as they probed through breaks in a heavy cloud cover for signs of the missing plane. Bad weather has hampered much of the search.

Last week Boggs and Begich were re-elected in absentia as members of the new Congress

Hanoi Says No To Changes

By MICHAEL GOLDSMITH
Associated Press Writer
PARIS (AP) — A new round of secret Vietnam peace negotiations was imminent today, but North Vietnam in advance rejected any changes in the draft cease-fire agreement worked out by Henry A. Kissinger and Le Duc Tho of the North Vietnamese Politburo.

Xuan Thuy, the chief of North Vietnam's delegation in Paris, told the weekly session of the semipublic peace talks: "We resolutely reject all the pretexts put forth by the United States and Saigon to demand modification of the substance of the agreement."

He repeated Hanoi's persistent demand that the United States "immediately sign the agreement."

The chief modification demanded by Saigon, a provision calling for the withdrawal of all North Vietnamese troops in South Vietnam, was repeated today by South Vietnam's representative at the session, Nguyen Xuan Phong.

U.S. negotiator William J. Porter said: "Each of us is aware that the restoration of peace in Vietnam is approaching. Each of us is equally well aware of the efforts being made to refine and perfect the accomplishments of the negotiation so that a settlement fair to all will result."

In a brief prepared statement to the meeting, Porter avoided any reference to substantive issues but urged the Communist side to avoid "exaggerated rhetoric and unfounded charges of bad faith."

He declared that "our discussions should be directed toward the goal of peaceful settlement, much nearer than we imagined only a few weeks ago."

Area Leaf Farmers Are Sentenced

WASHINGTON, N.C. — Nineteen tobacco farmers from Pitt and surrounding counties pled guilty in U.S. Eastern District Court here this week to charges of marketing tobacco without proper identification to avoid payment of marketing quota penalties.

All were sentenced by Federal Judge John Larkins to five years in prison, but the sentences were suspended and the men placed on probation from three to five years each.

In addition to the suspended sentences, the men face civil penalties from the U.S. Department of Agriculture for the penalties they would have incurred by over-selling their 1971 tobacco allotments.

U.S. Attorney Thomas McNamara, who said the tobacco cases involved a total of about 75,000 pounds of flue cured leaf, noted the USDA fines could run as high as $5,000 for some of the individuals.

In addition to the cases against the farmers, cases against two other Pitt residents, charged with aiding and abetting in the marketing of the leaf illegally were heard.

Arthur King of Winterville—charged in 19 cases—had 15 of them dismissed, but pled guilty to four violations. Judge Larkins ordered prayer for judgment in those four cases continued until a later term of court.

Charges against Askew Roy

Payton of Grifton, involving five counts of aiding and abetting the farmers in the sales were dismissed.

Cases against two Rober sonville warehousemen—Herbert T. Highsmith and Bobby Frank Sorrell—charged with making false entries on USDA forms and falsely identifying and marketing the tobacco, had their cases continued until a later term of court also.

The farmers involved in the cases, and the length of their suspended sentences include: Clinton Andrew Cannon, 5 years; Donald Earl Cannon, 3 years; Willie Wiggins, 5 years; William Randolph Harris, 5 years; Mack Lynwood Baker, 5 years; Laddie Avery, 3 years (another case against Avery was dismissed); H.A. Reaves (two counts), 3 years; Ralph Bright, 3 years; Walter Morris Hines, 5 years; Elizabeth G. Ball, 3 years; William R. Leggett (who pled Nolo Contendere rather than guilty) 5 years; David Lee Harris, 5 years; Hardy N. Cobb, 5 years; Linwood E. Williams, 3 years; Worthington Miller, 3 years; Fred Lee Barfield, 5 years; Robert Williams, 5 years; Russell G. Fussell, 5 years; and W.H. Pittman, 3 years.

McNamara said investigation is continuing in connection with the illegal sale of tobacco and indicated other charges may be forthcoming in the future.

Senate Demo Caucus Is Scheduled December 1

RALEIGH — A caucus of the Democratic members of the State Senate will be held December 1 at the Legislative Building, Senator Julian R. Allsbrook, D-Halifax, announced today.

In making the announcement, Allsbrook stated the purpose of holding the caucus in December is to assure that certification of all newly elected Senators has been accomplished by the State Board of Elections, which meets November 28, 1972.

The purpose of the caucus is to make nominations for key

Senate posts prior to the opening of the General Assembly on January 10.

Offices for which nominations will be held are President Pro Tempore, Principal Clerk, Reading Clerk, and Sergeant At Arms.

Senator Gordon P. Allen of Roxboro is now serving as President Pro Tempore, having succeeded Senator Frank N. Patterson, Jr. of Albermarle, who died in office. Allen is a candidate for reelection.

Allsbrook stated that it is understood that Roy Rowe of Burgaw is a candidate for the Principal Clerk's seat, and W. Eugene Simmons of Tarboro, former chairman of the State Democratic Party, is a Reading Clerk candidate. Brooks W. Poole of Raleigh is a candidate for Sergeant At Arms, he said. All were elected in the 1971 Senate, and are now holding these posts.

Notices are being sent to the 35 newly elected Democratic Senators expected to attend the caucus.

The caucus will be held in the Senate Chamber at 7:30 p.m. December 1.

Polls Show Public Often Ahead Of Legislative Leaders On Issues

By GEORGE GALLUP
Copyright, 1972.

Field Enterprises, Inc.

PRINCETON, N.J., Nov. 15—The final pre-election survey of the Gallup Poll proved to be the most accurate of the nationwide polls in the 1972 presidential race and, in fact, the most accurate in the history of nationwide polling in the U.S. Virtually complete election returns show that final survey figures were within 0.2 percentage points of the national presidential election result, which betters the poll's record of 0.5 percentage points in the 1968 election.

Kudos for this achievement must be shared with 157 daily newspapers, including the one you are presently reading, which provide the financial support necessary to carry out these continuing surveys on the issues of the day. Many of these newspapers have sponsored the Gallup Poll since its founding in 1935.

Although elections prove a testing ground for polling methods, their value during campaigns consists largely in providing information about how various groups in the population will vote and why. A chief interest, however, of many readers centers on the insights polls reveal about life in America.

Hopes and Fears of American Public

For 37 years, the Gallup Poll has dealt with social and economic problems as well as political. During this period the hopes and fears of the American people have been surveyed, their beliefs and their leisure time activities, their morals and their manners—even their foibles.

Findings from 6,000 surveys are contained in a new three-volume work just published by Random House. A total of 2400 pages are needed to cover the 37 years of Gallup surveys.

Changes in the public's views and their prejudices in many fields are revealed in the nearly four decades covered. In the case of many issues and proposals, proof is provided that the people are often years ahead of their legislative leaders, who, all too often, take their orders from pressure groups.

A case in point is the control of hand guns. As early as 1938, an overwhelming majority of Americans (84 per cent) favored laws to require registration of pistols and revolvers—laws which still are not on the books.

Another of many examples that could be cited has to do with the "item" veto, which would permit a president to veto some items in a bill without vetoing the entire bill. The vote in favor of this proposal which would do much to recue "pork-barrel" schemes of Congressmen, was 2 to 1 in favor in 1947.

As early as 1952 the American public approved basic changes in the electoral system, including a nationwide primary to select candidates, doing away with the electoral college, and changing the whole maner of campaigning.

Ballet Dancer Whirls Into Different Career As Producer

By WAKE TSUNODA
NEW YORK (AP) — What does a ballet dancer do when she retires? Produce a movie. At least, that's what Patricia Casey does. The 31-year-old former New York performer has just emerged as a movie producer on the other side of the Atlantic with a film called "And Now For Something Completely Different." It is a film version of a BBC television comedy show called "Monty Python's Flying Circus."

She has already sold the film to a major U.S. studio at a price which not only paid the investors' money back with interest, but also paid her producer's fee. "Now it's their problem to sell it to the public," she said during a visit to New York.

Miss Casey, a dance graduate of High School of Performing Arts, has danced as soloist with the Metropolitan Opera ballet company, Radio City Music Hall ballet company and Robert Joffrey's original ballet company. She got into the movie business six years ago when she met producer Judd Bernard. He was then making Elvis Presley's "Double Trouble," and offered her a job as the film's choreographer. As it turned out, she didn't get the job (Presley preferring a male choreographer), but she did work on the film in other capacities, directing the title sequence, dancing with Presley on the screen, and helping the film's choreographer.

After that, she stayed in the field, working as assistant or associate producer on other Bernard films. Her commitment to the movies became final when she co-founded with Bernard a production company which has offices in London and Hollywood. "I'd like to have both careers, but it's impossible. Now I dance only for my own pleasure," she said.

The idea of turning the BBC show into a film came to her when she was having dinner at a friend's house in London. "The show was on, and everybody there was breaking up. I don't laugh easily, but I broke up, too. Then we talked about making its film version. The friend, who manages a night club, agreed to put up his money. Later, I got one more investor."

Miss Casey managed to make the film as cheaply as $200,000. She hopes to go into directing eventually. She is now trying to raise money for her next film, which will be a thriller. She said she now receives as many as 28 scripts a week for possible production from hopeful writers.

Miss Casey married Judd Bernard early this year, and lives in London with him and her 9-year-old daughter from her first marriage.

NEW DIRECTIONS — Retired ballet dancer Patricia Casey has produced one movie and hopes to get into directing.

Wife Mops Up Exhausted Husband

By Abigail Van Buren

(© 1972 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: My husband complained that he was too exhausted after work to mow our lawn, so my 13-year-old son and I did it, and believe me, it was no small job. Meanwhile my husband disappeared. About sundown I was shaking the mop from an upstairs bedroom window and I happened to look across the way, and there was "Exhausted" hammering away on my neighbor's roof! My neighbor is a young, pretty widow who I hear hasn't paid (in cash) to get anything done around her house since her husband died last year.

Well, I went right over there and climbed up the ladder he used to get on her roof, and I hit him a good one with the mop. I told him that if he had that much energy to get on home because I had a few jobs for him. The widow saw it all and chuckled. He came home shortly afterward but was so mad he wouldn't speak to me. All thru supper he wouldn't even look at me, and that was the first night we ever went to bed mad.

Now, you be the judge, Abby. Should I be mad at him for refusing to mow the lawn, but going next door to work on that lady's roof? Or should he be mad at me for going after him and making him come home?

RIGHT OR WRONG

DEAR R OR W: It's a draw. But a man is slow to forgive a woman who publicly belittles him. You should have let him take his own sweet time getting home—and THEN hit him with the mop!

DEAR ABBY: When someone carries a cake, pie, salad or something like that to my home, I never return the pan or bowl it came in empty. My mother taught me that. Well, yesterday my sister in law dropped off a collection of my pots, pans, and bowls she'd had at her house for over a year. They weren't empty, either. And do you know what she had in them? A bill for storage!

Was this supposed to be funny? NOT LAUGHING

DEAR NOT: I hope so.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 55-year-old man with an 89-year-old problem. My mother in law lives with us and we haven't had a decent night's sleep in two years. Before then, for 22 years, my wife and her older sister took turns keeping Mom. One sister would keep her until she gave out, then the other one would take her until SHE gave out. There are two brothers who tried to keep Mom, but after the second day they called and screamed, "Come and get her, she is driving us nuts!"

My wife's sister died two years ago, but my wife promised her on her deathbed she'd never put Mom in a home. Mom won't eat unless you feed her, and she has to be bathed and looked after like a child.

I haven't slept with my wife in two years because we've had to keep our bedroom door opened in case Mom calls us or falls out of bed. And with the door open Mom wanders in and out of our room all night long.

I'm afraid my wife is heading for a nervous breakdown. I know Mom belongs in a home and her sons have offered to foot the bill, but my wife doesn't want to go back on her word.

What is your advice? WHIPPED IN TENNESSEE

DEAR WHIPPED: Deathbed promises are usually charged with emotion, so the word from here is to put Mom in a home. And tell your wife she needn't feel guilty. The Lord is all forgiving and compassionate, and He will understand.

DEAR ABBY: Four years ago I had a hysterectomy and from that time on I have been completely dead sexually. I am 45. I was a passionate, well-adjusted woman until

Guidelines For Preparing Holiday Turkey

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Food Editor

NEW YORK (UPI)—Holiday turkey, like the cook who prepares it, benefits from a short rest before dinner.

Roast turkey is easier to carve and juicier if it sets in a warm spot out of the oven for 15 to 30 minutes before serving. Use the longer time for large birds.

If you buy a frozen turkey instead of a fresh one, allow ample defrosting time. It should be at refrigerator temperature, or about 40 degrees Fahrenheit, when it goes into the oven. A warmer bird cooks faster, or a colder one, more slowly.

One turkey farmer's wife, who roasts about 500 big birds a year, estimates that a thawed frozen one takes about 30 minutes longer to cook than a fresh-killed one of the same weight and shape.

A defrosted uncooked turkey can be refrigerated safely for two or three days. But cover it with a damp towel so the skin doesn't dry out and split during roasting.

Defrosting times are only approximate. Food thaws faster in a refrigerator that's opened frequently than it does in one rarely opened. It also thaws faster in a warm room than a cool one. Keep these factors in mind when you use the following simple formula for estimating defrosting times:

Allow about 24 hours for each five pounds of bird thawed in the refrigerator, or 1-2 days for an 8-11 pound one; 2-3 days for 11-14 pound birds; 3-4 days for 14-19 pound ones; and 4-5 for 20-24 pound ones. Plan on about 30 minutes per pound for defrosting turkeys in cold water that is changed every 30-45 minutes; or about 1 hour per pound, for a bird enclosed in a large paper bag and left at room temperature. Close the end of the bag with pins, paper clips or clothes pins.

At meal time, have a service plate prewarmed on an electric warming tray if possible. Keep garnishes on the turkey platter at a minimum so they won't interfere with carving.

Place the turkey so its breast is at the left of a righthanded carver, or the right of a southpaw. If legs are held together by a band of skin, cut it with knife or scissors.

Provide a small folded cloth to protect the carver's other hand from heat and fat while holding the tip of the drumstick to steady it when making the first cut. Slice downward through the skin that separates the thigh from the body of the turkey, and bend the whole leg and thigh toward the platter as you do so. Sever the joint, place the meat, cut side down, on the service plate. Separate the two leg joints to be served individually, if small, or sliced, if large.

Insert carving fork firmly into top joint of wing and press downward as you make a long cut at the bottom of the breast at a right angle to the breast bone. Still holding the wing downward, sever the joint connecting it to the body and remove wing to service platter. Slice the breast in straight, even strokes, beginning about halfway up the breast. When the knife reaches the horizontal cut above the wing joint, the slices will fall free. Continue carving, moving the knife nearer the top of the breast bone with each slice. Serve turkey and stuffing when enough meat has been carved for all guests.

DEAR DEAD: Medical authorities disagree with you. As a rule, women who have had hysterectomies have far more relaxed and enjoyable sex since they need not fear pregnancy.

Your problem lies in your firm [but mistaken] belief that "such surgery is like castrating an animal." It is simply not true! And not until you accept that fact intellectually, will you come "alive" emotionally. Had you discussed this with your doctor, he could have set you straight.

Quota System Poses Problems

The almost uniformly high prices paid for tobacco until late in this selling season might tempt farmers to feel that holding quotas where they are would mean more of the same next year.

That may be true, but tobacco producers should listen to Carl T. Hicks of Walstonburg, president of the Tobacco Growers Information Committee. He said that by next summer, with no quota increases, loan stocks can be expected to be down to 250-285

Changes Ahead In N.C. Courts

By BRYAN HAISLIP
RALEIGH — North Carolina voters in the general election sanctioned far-reaching changes in the state's judiciary.

Their approval of two constitutional amendments fixed mandatory retirement ages for judges, and created a commission on judicial standards with power to censure or remove from office judges it finds unfit.

Their election of a Republican governor opened the way for the party, in practical terms excluded from the selection process in the past, to place some of its members on the bench.

While the balloting assured inevitable change in the manpower of the courts, how soon it will be evident is not immediately apparent.

Still, it's safe conclusion that within the next four years some judges will retire because of the age limit, some complaints will be filed with the judicial standards commission, and some Republicans will be appointed judges.

GOP Judges Seen

Change in judicial personnel may come quicker from the gubernatorial election than from the passage of the constitutional amendments.

James E. Holshouser Jr., the incoming governor, has been critical of the state's method of judicial selection at the Superior Court level.

As GOP state chairman, he initiated an unsuccessful suit in federal court attacking the district nomination and statewide election of Superior Court judges. The plan's operation has produced a force of 41 Superior Court judges who are all Democrats.

As governor, it would be logical to assume that Holshouser will use the power of appointment to correct the partisan disadvantage he complained of in court.

Gubernatorial appointment and popular election, under one-party rule, has kept the State Supreme Court, the Court of Appeals, and the Superior Court bench safely Democratic.

Son Of A Judge

Some Republicans serve as district court judges, where nomination and election is at the local level. One of them is James E. Holshouser Sr. of Boone, father of the governor-elect.

How many places on the bench Holshouser as governor gets to fill will depend on the number of vacancies which occur through death, resignation and retirement, or other cause during his four-year term. His appointees, of course, then must stand for election to stay on the bench.

The exception is a group of eight special judgeships of Superior Court, named by the governor to four-year terms. Present incumbents end their terms in July, 1975.

Some judges opposed vigorously the two constitutional amendments, proposed by the N.C. Courts Commission and placed on the ballot by the 1971 legislature.

Chief Justice William H. Bobbitt of the State Supreme Court was among those who spoke vainly against voter approval of the amendments. Bobbitt, now 72, is one of four members of the high court who must retire at the end of present terms under the mandatory age limit. The others are Associate Justices Carlisle Higgins, I. Beverly Lake, and Dan K. Moore.

Bobbitt and Higgins serve terms ending in 1974. Lake and Moore have until 1978 on their present terms.

Present Terms Assured

The retirement age is fixed at 72 for the appeals court, and at 70 for the trial court (Superior and district). Regardless of age, incumbents may finish the terms they are now serving.

Implementing legislation for the two amendments was enacted at the 1971 session. Thus, they became effective upon ratification at the polls.

That means Gov. Bob Scott may make the two gubernatorial appointments to the judicial standards commission. The membership of seven is rounded out by three judges appointed by the Chief Justice, and two attorneys selected by the state bar.

The changes under the two amendments will operate within hazard to judicial independence or waste of judicial talent, predicted J. Ruffin Bailey, courts commission chairman.

The representation of judges on the standards commission, he observed, should assure vigilance for judicial independence. The Commission cannot censure or remove a judge except by the vote of five members, which means at least one of the three judge members would have to vote for the action, he pointed out.

The goal is to lift the caliber of judicial manpower, Bailey said. "The best system in the world works only as well as the men who work in it," he observed. "Good judges hold good courts. That is what we are striving for."

million pounds. This was said to be an inadequate reserve.

Hicks and Hugh C. Kiger, director of the tobacco division of the Foreign Agricultural Service, warned that inadequate supplies could lead to significant declines in exports and increase in imports of foreign grown tobacco.

"I am alarmed that this season, with its record high price average...many foreign and domestic buyers, have had to turn to other countries for grades not available on U. S. warehouse floors or in U. S. stocks," Hicks stated at the annual meeting of the Tobacco Growers Information Committee.

Noting that 58,000 acres were left unplanted, Hicks urged that sale, lease and transfer of allotments across county lines might be a way of dealing with this problem.

Kiger said that some thought should be given to the consequences of a one-price market with the same price being paid for the lowest and highest grades of tobacco.

It would be nice to think that this year's high prices were due to some unusually huge world demand for U. S. tobacco. More than likely, however, prices were high because the amount of tobacco grown was too low to meet normal demand. The quota system was designed to keep supply from overrunning demand; in other words to keep supply and demand in balance. If we were to use quotas to create an artificially short supply of tobacco then it is obvious that eventually our overseas buyers would turn to other sources.

If the quota system is to work it must be allowed to adjust for undersupply, as well as oversupply.

Strong Feeling On McGovern

By JOHN KILGO
RALEIGH — The Republican Party has flexed its muscle and elected a U.S. Senator and a Governor, thereby prompting some to hail North Carolina as a true two-party state.

"President Nixon's popularity helped," says Frank Rouse, chairman of the Tar Heel Republican Party, "but the people believed in what our candidates were saying."

In looking at what happened at the polls last week, one would have to conclude that President Nixon's coattails were long enough in this state to take others to office with him.

Unfortunately, it was not possible to tell the entire story of the presidential picture in North Carolina before the vote was held. To have done so would have brought cries of unfair reporting.

Everywhere I went in this state, however, I found people who weren't going to be satisfied with voting for President Nixon. They were going to "punish" the Democrats for offering George McGovern as the Party's presidential candidate. The anti-McGovern feeling was stronger than any political reaction I have observed in North Carolina in my lifetime.

This was demonstrated at the polls last Tuesday when Nixon got 70 per cent of the vote in North Carolina.

Would Jim Holshouser and Jesse Helms had won had not this feeling been running at fever pitch?

I think not. It became obvious a month before the election that Skipper Bowles and Nick Galfanakis were going to have to get things together in a hurry if they were to hold off the Republican tide.

This became an impossible task, because the Democrats were not united and some bitter feelings were running rampant.

Galfanakis, for example, had won nomination after a bitter fight with B. Everett Jordan. While it's true that Sen. Sam Ervin made a late effort to help Galfanakis, it's also a fact that many Democrats sat on their hands. Helms had the momentum and when those TV spots hit the air with Nixon saying he needed Helms in Washington, the handwriting became clear on the wall.

As for Bowles, he was squarely between the proverbial rock and the hard place. A study of the mood of North Carolinians indicated that the voters were demanding a change in Raleigh.

Bowles had to push himself as the candidate who could bring this change about, while at the same time trying to keep traditional Democrats happy. It was an impossible task.

Hugh Morton, the chairman of the New Hanover Democratic Party, wrote Bowles in October that many Democrats in his county were upset at the way Bowles' people were giving them the high hat.

Li. Gov. Pat Taylor, the man Bowles defeated in the primary, did little to help Bowles, but then Bowles asked him for virtually nothing.

The Republicans, meanwhile, knew the Democrats faced these problems and they made the most of it. Helms ran ads all over the state trying to tie McGovern around Galfanakis' neck.

Nixon money came into the state to help Helms win the seat. And when the polls showed Helms was on the verge of victory, Charles Jonas Jr. was able to persuade the President to visit the state to embrace Helms and Holshouser.

Jim Gardner's wing of the Republican Party sensed that Holshouser could indeed defeat Bowles. The sniff of a

Strength For Today

ONE OF THE GREAT LESSONS

One of the sternest realities of life is summed up in the word "accountability." Employers set certain standards for employees. If they do not live up to these standards and produce results they are soon looking for a new job. Husbands and wives require certain agreements and pleasantries in their relationships with each other. Divorce most often springs not from one great lapse of morality but from the continual unwillingness of some men and women to get along with each other. We are held accountable in this world—especially in our homes—for what we do and are. If we can't pass the daily requirements—or won't pass them—we are in trouble. Accountability is a demand made upon us by the world at large and be close associates in particular.

We have to live up to something. We have to maintain a certain standard. Live up to that standard and we shall probably go from promotion to promotion. Fail to live up to it and we may find ourselves out on the street. Business, home life, social contacts have their requirements, and the stern realities of life keep us aware of these requirements day in and day out. This frequently makes life hard but it also makes it significant. A loosely-run business soon goes down the drain. A home where nobody is held to any standard in particular usually ends up in separation and divorce.

Accountability is both severe and inevitable. When we learn this we have learned one of the great lessons of life.

Bartenders On Olympus

CHARLOTTE — Permit a moment of shop talk. I am in Charlotte, sitting in, for old times' sake, upon a few sessions of the National Conference of Editorial Writers, and I am minded to say a word about this doughty outfit and the unsung guys and dolls who make it up.

In a nation that numbers more than 1,700 daily newspapers, it is a risky business to generalize about editorial writers and editorial pages. Even so, it is a fair observation that 25 years ago, when the NCEW came into being, the American editorial page was limping along with the spavins and heaves. There were mighty exceptions, of course; there always have been editors, here and there, who could rise above the dustbin grayness of their pages and make their voices heard. Bless them. They have ever been too few.

More typically, the editorial page of those days was a hodgepodge of homemade homilies and syndicated fillers. The editorial writer, at least in the popular imagination, was an old geezer in a riverboat eyeshade; he lived like a hedgehog in a rollop burrow, emerging now and then with pronouncements upon Afghanistan, Iran, and Peru. Little thought was given to luring readers with a page that was bright and attractive and easy to read. The object seemed rather to drive the readers away.

It would be saying too much

Other Editors Say Changing Of Guard

(Rocky Mount Telegram)

The question in Raleigh these days is: Just how far will the housecleaning go in the state government administration? The consensus is that a lot of personnel will remain to work under the new governor, Republican Jim Holshouser.

The consensus also is that the eight cabinet secretaries and most of their deputies who are appointed directly by the governor will be replaced. Others uncertain of their status are those in lesser department positions who have by tenure or otherwise worked their way to the top of their own departmental ladder.

And many will remain simply because they are professionals and know their job. Holshouser has already pointed out that he plans to have his own team ready to take over in January. That's his prerogative. The "new team" will probably first replace the cabinet - level secretaries and then begin to work down as evaluations are made.

Target for the widest sweep seems to be the Highway Commission, which probably would have suffered the same fate had Hargrove Bowles been elected. Two areas in the highway department traditionally have been affected by a gubernatorial change — the commissioners themselves and the public relations department.

Some officials, like Lee Bounds in the corrections department, will probably be retained. He knows his job and is a professional.

Holshouser will not be able to hire and fire in the council of state offices, since their directors are elected. But he can expect to make 5,000 to 6,000 appointments during his administration. Appointive power can be a powerful weapon for a governor if utilized properly.

Until he reveals his plans the question of who will go and who will stay hangs in the air, over the heads of all concerned.

Foreign Trade In Kansas City

By CHET CURRIER

Associated Press Writer
KANSAS CITY (AP) — A group of Kansas City leaders hopes soon to bring a larger share of the traditionally coastal foreign trade business to the midst of inland America.

The key to their plan is an old but comparatively unpublishized concept — a foreign trade zone.

There are critics who contend the idea offers little that can't be accomplished through other means such as bonded warehouses. But its supporters here, some of whom have already staked a good bit of money on the plan, tout it as a potentially powerful tool for stimulating economic growth.

"It's a complicated concept which many people don't understand," says Marshall Miller, secretary and general counsel for Greater Kansas City Foreign Trade Zone Inc., a nonprofit corporation which is seeking government authorization to begin a zone here by Jan. 1.

"In my travels I don't think I've run into more than half a dozen companies that knew anything about it. But the savings for companies can be enormous."

In simplest terms, a foreign trade zone is a U.S. Customs no man's land — an area where items of foreign origin, whether raw materials, parts or finished goods, can be stored, displayed or processed duty-free under customs supervision. The duty is not paid until an item is brought out of the zone for delivery or sale.

Miller says this offers several advantages to the firms involved, including:

— Freeing money previously tied up unproductively in duty paid on merchandise that is not ready for sale. For one company that would take part in the Kansas City zone, Miller notes, that amounts to a daily average of $100,000.

—Providing for ready availability of imported goods for distribution and display.

—Permitting shrinkage, evaporation and waste which occur during processing and storage to take place before payment of the duty.

—Allowing the importer, in the case of goods containing both foreign and U.S.-made parts, to pick the lower of two duties, either on the finished product or on only those parts of it which originated outside the country.

Meanwhile, the zone brings obvious economic benefits to the area in which it is situated, Miller says.

Some 200 foreign trade zones already are operating

Giving Isn't Simple

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — Christmas is memorable because of what you don't get as well as what you don't want. I'd like my Christmas made more memorable this year that way — by what I don't get.

HAL BOYLE

It isn't that I lack the yuletide spirit. I love to get a present I can use — such as a pair of warm gloves, size 10, a conservative shirt with a regular collar, size 16½-33, or a half dozen linen handkerchiefs, large nose size.

But it is a problem for me to get things I can't use — such as a pen stand with a broken imitation marble base, an inflatable two-man plastic submarine, or a copy of the Venus de Milo done in anthracite coal.

For one thing, they are usually too big to throw down the apartment house incinerator. For another thing, you can't give them away easily. If you get a gift that isn't useful to you, the odds are that it won't be useful to anyone else you know.

In the old days you could palm off these gifts on the janitor, and he would feign a look of gratitude. But not today. Most apartment house superintendents, as they are now called, aren't so easily gulled into hauling such debris away. Many refuse to accept a present of any kind from a tenant unless it is wrapped with a $10 bill, and that's a pretty stiff price to pay just to dispose of something someone has foisted on you in the name of seasonal good will. One wonders why so many people go to so much trouble to buy things for other people that no one on earth could possibly find joy, use or gratitude in. Could Christmas be schizophrenic? Are people unconsciously trying to punish rather than reward each other?

So, whoever you are, if you've decided to send me

International Programs Of ECU Being Expanded

East Carolina University has expanded its programs of international study abroad to include not only its Overseas Campus in Bonn, Germany, which currently enrolls some 40 students in European Studies, but now the Asian Studies Center in Japan, and the Latin American Studies program in Mexico. Students will also have a chance to enroll for overseas study in Rome, Italy.

ECU students in Germany may take 36 hours of credit required by their minor program and at the same time enjoy the exciting cultural environment of the Continent.

The contract concluded in August, 1972, between ECU and the Kansai University-Institute of Foreign Studies, Osaka, Japan for establishment of a cooperative international enterprise will extend overseas study opportunity to students at ECU. The contract was approved by the ECU Board of Trustees and the North Carolina State Board of Governors in 1972.

Student travel to Japan is scheduled to begin in September, 1973. The program will afford participants an opportunity to complete three quarters of academic work and the privilege of using free time during the summer months for planned excursions or for touring Japan as an independent traveler.

The program of study will include courses on Japanese language, Japanese Economic History, Oriental Thought and Religion, the History of the Far East, the Diplomatic History of Modern Asia, and Japanese politics and International Relations. The student's participation in an Asian Seminar will terminate his academic year in Japan.

Teaching at the Center will be conducted in English by Japanese professors. One ECU professor for whom an exchange agreement was reached will teach courses in History and direct the Asian Seminar.

The facilities at Kansai University are completely modern and include an up-to-date library of 150,000 volumes among which there is a collection of important books on Japan in the English language.

An interesting feature of the Japan academic experience will be the option to elect a homestay program. The students may take his meals in Japanese homes and live there as a member of the family throughout the year of study. The sojourn in a Japanese home will provide students an opportunity to observe first-hand the everyday life of a Japanese family.

During 1973, the completion of a minor in Latin America studies while in residence in a Spanish speaking country will be available to students who elect to go to the University of the Americas (UA) in Puebla, Mexico. UA is one of three international overseas study centers currently endorsed by the American Association of State Colleges and Universities (AASCU). ECU is a founding member of the Association. The academic environment at UA will be bi-lingual throughout.

Another new program offered ECU students in 1973, is that of the AASCU International Study Center in Rome, Italy. Louisiana Tech University is in supervision over the Rome program which is not a degree program but one designed to enrich the student's academic course.

In addition to its historical sites, Rome is the music capital of Europe, and a major center for contemporary art and the theatre. The curriculum offers courses in a wide spectrum of courses including Archeology, Architecture, History, Politics, Geography and Modern Languages. Students may pursue an individual project in their major field subject to the approval of the home institution.

Four Americans Killed In Action Last Week

SAIGON (AP)—Four Americans were killed in action in Vietnam last week, one died of nonhostile causes, four were wounded and four were missing, the U.S. Command reported today.

Another five American dead and 22 injured were added to the combat casualty rolls after being classified for two weeks as casualties due to nonhostile action. They were killed or injured on Oct. 24 when a plane crashed as it was landing on the carrier Midway, and the Pentagon changed them to combat casualties because the plane was returning from a mission over North Vietnam.

The South Vietnamese command reported the lowest weekly government casualties in five weeks and the smallest claim of enemy killed since before the start of the North Vietnamese offensive March 30.

The Vietnamese command said 481 of its troops were killed, 1,662 were wounded and 59 were missing. It claimed 1,544 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong killed.

The allied commands now have reported these total casualties for the war:

American—45,913 killed in action, 303,522 wounded in action, 10,285 dead from nonhostile causes, 1,703 missing or captured.

South Vietnamese—159,500 killed in action, 423,382 wounded.

Invite Soviet Bloc To Join In New Arms Talk

BRUSSELS (AP) — The North Atlantic allies are inviting the Russians to begin their talks on mutual reduction of forces in Europe on Jan. 31.

Foreign Minister Walter Scheel of West Germany announced in Bonn that the United States and other members of the Western alliance have sent invitations for the talks to the Soviet Union and some of its Warsaw Pact allies.

He said the conference was proposed for Switzerland but did not specify what city. Lausanne, Bern and Geneva have been mentioned.

The Russians had proposed discussion of both reduction of armies at home and of military forces on foreign soil. But the crux of the negotiations will be the extent of the pullback of Soviet and American troops.

The Soviet Union has about 310,000 men in East Germany, Poland, Czechoslovakia and Hungary, according to authoritative Western sources.

The United States has about 300,000 troops in Western Europe.

One of the problems repeatedly stressed by leaders of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization is that Soviet troops would withdraw to nearby Russia, while American troops would be pulled back 3,000 miles.

The Western allies made their first offer to discuss a mutual reduction of forces four years ago as a counter to a Soviet call for a European security conference. The Soviet proposal was seen as a maneuver to get American forces out of Europe.

Last spring, in the aftermath of President Nixon's trip to Moscow, the NATO allies agreed to go ahead with both the European security conference and the negotiations for reduction in forces. They called for separate, parallel talks.

Talks to prepare for the security conference are to open

Nov. 22 in Helsinki. Thirty-two nations, including the United States and Canada, will take part.

The day before the Helsinki meeting, the United States and the Soviet Union resume their Strategic Arms Limitation Talks in Geneva. These negotiations are concerned with reduction in strategic nuclear weapons, while the talks beginning in January will deal with conventional forces and tactical nuclear weapons.

Work vs. Cash Relief Plans

Attitudes toward work and welfare have changed little. In 1938 when America had still not come out of the great depression, the public by a ratio of 9 to 1 favored work relief over cash relief. They approved a Pennsylvania law (1939) by almost the same ratio that would require all able-bodied people on relief to accept any job offered by a local government, no matter what kind of job.

Just a few of the findings from thousands of surveys reveal the wide range of subjects that have been covered:

* In November, 1938, nearly a year before World War II, Hitler said he had no more territorial ambitions in Europe. When the American people were asked if they believed this statement, only 8 per cent said they did.

* Hitler's treatment of the Jews, even before World War II, was disapproved by an overwhelming majority of Americans—94 per cent.

* Early surveys on economic issues reveal the extent to which a higher living standard, plus inflation, have changed the American scene. When asked how much a family of four needed to live decently, the answer, in July 1937, was $30 a week.

* The minimum wage which the public thought should be paid in 1938 was 40 cents an hour in non-farm areas, 30 cents an hour in farm regions.

* As late as 1949, one person in seven could report that at some time during the year, he or his family did not have enough money to get enough to eat.

* There have been great changes in manners and morals. A poll in 1939 showed that a majority of adults thought that it was indecent for women to wear short for street wear.

* As late as 1947 nearly half of all the families of the United States were saying grace or giving thanks to God aloud before meals.

* In the present era of foul language, it is worth noting that in a poll taken in December, 1951, some 40 per cent of those questioned said that objected to their husband saying "damn" or "hell" when among friends. Even more objected to wives using these same words.

* The great migration to California, Florida and the Southwest was foreshadowed by early polls that asked people where they would like to live if they moved from their present state.

* After World War II the public was asked about amnesty for conscientious objectors who had been sent to prison. By a vote of 3-to-1 the public said that they should be freed.

* A poll conducted in 1949, asked people in the largest cities to name their city's worst problem. The survey brought to light that "poor housing, traffic congestion, dirt, high tax rates, corrupt politics, all rated ahead of crime. In fact, crime was cited by only 4 per cent as their city's worst problem—in marked contrast to the importance crime occupies today as a major concern of city dwellers.

Historians of the future may well regard these findings that deal with the quality of lives in the U.S. as an important contribution that only polls can make.

Law Overlooks Requiring Stamp

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Debts and credits concern Franklin County Treasurer Phillip Goldsleger. Joseph Martin's business also was debts and credits before he retired as an accountant.

Their paths crossed here this week — and Goldsleger said the county will be a little poorer for the encounter.

Martin enclosed a self-addressed envelope with his property tax payment so he could get a receipt. Goldsleger advised him a stamp on the self-addressed envelope was needed. Martin checked the Ohio Revised Code and found no stamp was needed — only the self-address envelope.

Goldsleger said he had known about the law "all 24 (years) I've been here." He admitted he had been asking for the stamps, as did his predecessor. The stamps will cost the county $15,000 a year, he said.

Farm Environment Policy Plea

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina Gov. Bob Scott told the annual meeting of the National Grange in Hartford, Conn. today that farmers must be more active in formulating policy to protect the environment.

Scott, in a prepared text released by his office here, said the agricultural community faces the danger that environmentalists unfamiliar with the needs of the farmer will be making laws to restrict what the farmer can do.

The speech was the latest in a series that Scott has been giving in the closing weeks of his administration. In them, he has expounded on his ideas for the future development of North Carolina and the South. Scott's address to the Grange focused on pollution control and land use policy.

He cited both a "clear recognition that both national and state government must take a more active role," and the fact that "The environmentalists, and conservationists will be well-organized, more vocal, and much stronger than before."

Scott called for immediate research by land grant colleges into the twin problems of runoff from chemicals and animal wastes that cause agriculture to contribute "15 per cent of all water pollution."

He warned that unless the small farmer's interests are protected in the legislative process, laws will be passed requiring controls too expensive for the individual farmer, thus accelerating the trend toward corporate farms.

Scott spoke also of the "cancerous" spread of urbanization, which he said eats up one million acres of the nation's best farm land each year. He said that almost half of the best 70 million acres of farmland in the nation is in danger of urbanization.

In view of this, Scott said, North Carolina is going to have to take a more active role in working with local government to develop a consistent and unified direction for land use. He said current coordination between local governments is insufficient to insure a "pleasing and functional landscape."

Scott said there was also a need to create public land agencies which could buy up land and hold it for future use. "This need was brought home to me early in my administration when I was attempting to protect some environmentally critical lands in our coastal area," he said, in an apparent reference to his unsuccessful attempt to purchase Bald Head Island.

Supply Trucks Pounded By U.S. Bomb Strikes

By GEORGE ESPER Associated Press Writer

SAIGON (AP) — The United States kept up its air war on North Vietnam's transportation system today and pilots reported knocking out 68 supply trucks in one of the biggest such actions of the war.

The heaviest fighting in two months was reported along South Vietnam's northern frontier.

U.S. military sources said almost half the trucks were caught by surprise Wednesday off main highways in a make-shift depot camouflaged by jungle canopy near Quang Khe, 65 miles northwest of the demilitarized zone. They said the trucks had been waiting for nightfall to move southward to South Vietnam.

U.S. officials said the trucks were "fully loaded" with ammunition, and pilots' reports said bombs dropped by the raiding planes triggered numerous secondary explosions and fires.

The U.S. Command said Air Force, Navy and Marine fighter-bombers flew more than 270 air strikes below the 20th parallel in North Vietnam Wednesday.

Thirty U.S. B52s swept over North Vietnam and some ranged toward the Laotian border south of the Barthelmy Pass in efforts to slow the movement of war materials through the pass into the Plain of Jars in northern Laos.

North Vietnamese forces operating in Laos drove government mercenaries paid by the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency off the southern edge of the plain and inflicted moderate casualties on them, reports from Vientiane said.

Nearly 30 B52s also hit below the demilitarized zone, both to the north and south of Quang Tri City.

South Vietnamese marines claimed killing 57 North Vietnamese troops in a five-hour fight Wednesday five miles northeast of Quang Tri. The Saigon command said two marines were killed and 35 wounded.

It was the heaviest fighting along the northern frontier since Sept. 16 when the marines recaptured Quang Tri City, which had fallen to the North Vietnamese May 1.

One Death 'Safety Day'

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — "Super Safety Day" in Nebraska emphasized the value of wearing seat belts.

Only one fatal accident was recorded during the much publicized day Wednesday when a car carrying two women skidded off U.S. 81 and into a pond near Columbus in the northeast part of the state.

The State Patrol said one woman made it to safety but the second woman died when she was held under the water by her seat belt.

Despite the one fatality, Gov. John J. Exon termed "Super Safety Day" a success.

He noted that the main goal of the day was to reach Nebraska drivers and "bring their attention to what we're doing to each other on the roads."

The number of nonfatal traffic accidents in Nebraska Wednesday will not be determined until information from local police authorities throughout the state is fed into a computer.

Over the past three years, the average daily November traffic toll has been 129 accidents, 56 injuries and 1.5 deaths.

Convicted, But Claims A Frame

HARTFORD (AP) — A former Hartford man, serving 25 years in prison in North Carolina on a charge of unlawful burning, says Tar Heel officials framed him because he tried to organize blacks in Charlotte.

James Earl Grant Jr., a 34-year-old black civil rights activist, and two other men were tried and convicted in Superior Court in Charlotte last July for setting fire to a stable. Fifteen horses were destroyed in the blaze Sept. 24, 1968.

"It was a frameup from the beginning to the end," Grant said in an interview with The Hartford Courant in Charlotte Sunday.

Grant, who has a doctoral degree in organic chemistry from Pennsylvania State University, said the state's only witnesses against him were two convicts. He said they were set free in exchange for their testimony.

James Ferguson, attorney for the three, said the trial was "one of the biggest deals made by the state government with criminals in our time."

He said the state should have been more concerned about letting the two convicts loose "than jailing my clients."

Convicted with Grant were T. J. Reddy, 27, and Charles Parker, 24, both of Charlotte.

Grant went to Charlotte as a Volunteer In Service To America (VISTA) in 1968 after getting his doctorate.

Friends said Grant "became deeply disturbed about the plight of black people in North Carolina."

David Blevens, VISTA supervisor in Charlotte, said Grant spent "most of his time organizing the black community."

Grant was dismissed from VISTA after telling a news conference Dec. 7, 1968 that the Vietnam war "is a plot by the government to annihilate the black race."

Grant then became a field representative for the Southern Student Organizing Fund.

Grant was convicted in a fire at the Lazy B Stables on the outskirts of Charlotte. The stable was the scene of civil rights demonstrations in 1967.

Attorney Ferguson said he thought his clients would be acquitted.

"The state's witnesses were just so unbelievable I thought we had the case won," he said.

Ferguson said he had four witnesses who testified they believed Grant was in Pennsylvania the day of the fire. Three were not sure of the exact date, but Prof. Wells Keddie of Penn State brought his appointment calendar to court. It showed an appointment with Grant the afternoon of Sept. 24, 1968, the date of the fire. Keddie said Grant kept the appointment.

A LOT OF SHRIMP

PANAMA CITY (AP) — More than four million pounds of shrimp were caught in Panamanian waters during the first five months of 1972, the government has announced.

India and Pakistan have fought three wars in Kashmir in the past 25 years.

A Real Gun Next Pulled

HOUSTON (AP) — A witness says the man pointed what appeared to be a toy pistol at the woman and said, "Bang, bang, bang! You're dead," before he pulled a real gun and killed her.

William Johnson Jr., 24, was charged with murder Wednesday in the death of Carol Ann Venters, 28, who was wounded fatally as she waited for an elevator in the Harris County Criminal Courts Building.

Mrs. Venters was shot during a recess in her trial on a charge of assault to murder in the June 30, 1971, shooting of Johnson, who is confined to a wheelchair because of the injury.

The witness said that after pretending to shoot Mrs. Venters, Johnson drew a revolver from inside his pants and fired two fatal shots.

"I have a nervous condition where she shot me five times," Johnson said after he was disarmed by a deputy sheriff. "I'll be paralyzed for the rest of my life. She didn't have to do that."

State Bird Is Florida Import

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) — The entire present population of Louisiana's state bird, the brown pelican, was imported from Florida, according to a Florida game official.

Director Earle Frye of the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission says the Louisiana population of the bird disappeared a few years ago, but that pelicans imported from Florida succeeded in hatching some chicks last year.

Defend Egg As A Healthy Food

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (UPI) — No "solid scientific evidence" exists to prove that eating eggs can lead to heart disease, according to Dr. L.A. Wilhelm, of Chicago, president of the Poultry and Egg National Board.

Wilhelm, speaking at a nutrition conference at Texas A&M University, said eggs are not the villain they have been made out to be in increasing cholesterol in the blood.

New Shop Is Scheduling Court Upsets Part Of Statute Grand Opening Friday

Grand opening activities at Susan's, Greenville's newest fashion shop, will get underway tomorrow morning at 10 a.m. and continue through Saturday, 6 p.m.

According to Mrs. Wiley Corbett and Mrs. Effie Williams, who announced the opening of the new shop, two full days of activities are planned for the grand opening.

Located on the new Arlington Boulevard, which connects Evans Street and Greenville Boulevard, Susan's will feature informal modeling through the entire opening, the owners reported, as well as narrated fashion previews Friday at 8 p.m. and Saturday at noon.

In addition, they said, consultations with New York fashion house representatives will be available during the opening.

Susan's, it was noted, will offer complete lines of dresses, sportswear and accessories.

The new fashion facility, one of the first to locate on the recently completed Arlington Boulevard, will be managed by a Greenville resident, Mrs. Jean Crawford.

Weekday business hours will be announced shortly, it was noted.

Extortion Try Charged

BUFFALO (AP) — A service-station employee currently on probation for driving a stolen car from North Carolina to West Virginia has been arrested by FBI agents for attempted extortion.

Richard H. Ash, special agent in charge of the Buffalo FBI office, said agents took Terry Bryant, 20, of Buffalo into custody Wednesday at a desolate spot along the Buffalo River on the city's south side as he attempted to pick up a $75,000 payoff.

"He picked up the package, and we were in a position to challenge him immediately," Ash said. "He submitted. We had the drop on him. There was no resistance."

Ash said about a dozen FBI agents were at the scene when the package was delivered.

The FBI said the victim of the extortion plot was Paul H. Knox, vice president of the Pro-Pipe Co. of nearby Blaisdell.

Knox had received phone calls and an extortion letter that had threatened his life and reputation, the FBI said.

Ash said Bryant, who was armed with a pistol, was charged with violation of federal extortion statutes.

Bryant lives at 103 Avondale Place.

Dr. Yarbrough Speaks On Justices' Views

Differences in positions taken by Supreme Court Justices Black and Douglas on civil liberties issues were discussed by an East Carolina University political scientist at the annual meeting of the Southern Political Science Association in Atlanta last week.

Dr. Tinsley Eugene Yarbrough delivered to the gathering the results of his study of the Warren Court and the contrasting views represented by Justices Black and Douglas.

These views reflect differing concepts of the proper role of the judge in America's constitutional system, he said.

Dr. Yarbrough was accompanied to the Atlanta meeting by Dr. William F. Troutman Jr., Dr. Lawrence E. Hough and Dr. H. A. I. Sugg of the ECU Department of Political Science.

AT MEETING

Dr. Richard L. Capwell, Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at East Carolina University, attended a three-day meeting of the Council of Colleges of Arts and Sciences in Washington, D.C. last week.

RALEIGH (AP) — An Orange County youth, convicted of murder-burglary and sentenced to die, will get a new trial because the court erred in permitting the state to offer a written confession in evidence.

The State Supreme Court ordered the new trial Wednesday for John Lee Edwards, accused of entering the home of Mrs. Dora Lloyd, 83, and killing her. Her body was found the morning of Sept. 5, 1971. She had been strangled. Edwards was 18 years old at the time.

"On the record before us," the tribunal said, "we are forced to conclude the evidence before the able trial judge was insufficient to support his finding the defendant's written confession was voluntary."

The court said the confession was obtained after long questioning in the absence of counsel. Edwards was convicted last January before Superior Court Judge Henry McKinnon.

The Supreme Court also ordered a new trial for Willie Foster Jr., convicted in Mecklenburg County last May of first degree burglary and sentenced to life imprisonment. He was accused of entering the home of James Harley Davis in Charlotte the night of Sept. 5, 1971.

The Supreme Court said certain testimony concerning fingerprints "was hearsay and inadmissible."

Foster had sought to have the indictment dismissed because he had been denied a preliminary hearing. This motion was denied by Superior Court Judge W. K. McLean.

The high court said, "A preliminary hearing is not a necessary step in the prosecution of a person accused of crime, and an accused person is not entitled to a preliminary hearing as a matter of substantive right."

In a Pitt County case, the Supreme Court ruled part of the state's disorderly conduct statute unconstitutional.

The ruling came in the appeal of Julius Stewart Summerell, convicted on charges of disorderly conduct, resisting arrest, and assaulting a public officer. He was given six months.

The court said sections of the statute which prescribe "offensively coarse" utterances and acts designed "to alarm and disturb persons present" are unconstitutional.

"Words and conduct which would alarm and disturb one person might not faze another, and conditions hazardous or physically offensive to some might not be so regarded by others," the court said.

Associate Justice Susie Sharp said the three warrants upon which Summerell's arrest was based "indicate duplicate charges." She wrote that he has been "twice convicted and sentenced for the same criminal offense."

The charges grew out of disturbances at Pitt Memorial Hospital. The high court upheld the conviction of resisting an officer, but vacated the conviction of assaulting an officer and ordered the judgment arrested. It could find no error in the disorderly conduct conviction.

Kissinger Expected To Leave For Paris 'Any Time'

NOR'EASTER ENDS A SURPRISE VISIT — Just a few days ago this man was mowing his Brattleboro, Vt., lawn; but this morning he found his car buried under a snowdrift left by a nor'easter storm. The depth of snow measured from one to 10 inches in parts of New England. (AP Wirephoto)

By KENNETH J. FREED
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Presidential adviser Henry A. Kissinger is expected to leave for Paris at any time, perhaps today, for his climactic meeting with chief North Vietnamese negotiator Le Duc Tho.

As of this morning, the White House had said nothing about Kissinger's imminent journey though it had promised to give advance notice of his departure. But officials stuck by their predictions he would start the final round of talks with Tho before the week is out.

While Tho stopped in Moscow Wednesday on his return from Hanoi, Kissinger kept up his telephone consultations with President Nixon at nearby Camp David.

And Kissinger continued his own consultations with National Security Council aides and State Department experts. He met Wednesday for the second straight day with Under Secretary of State U. Alexis Johnson and William Sullivan, deputy assistant secretary of state for Southeast Asia.

As Kissinger kept up his work in anticipation of the round of meetings he has promised will wrap up a settlement, there were other developments indicating some of the details are near completion.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Charles W.

Bray said Wednesday the United States feels it has obtained an "agreement in principle" from four nations to take part in supervising a cease-fire.

He did not list the countries, but Canada, Indonesia, Hungary and Poland are reported to have agreed to participate, pending what Bray called "an opportunity to explore at some greater length ... the details and fine print" that emerges from the Kissinger-Tho talks.

Officials also said the nine-point tentative agreement outlined last month by both Kissinger and Hanoi calls for a cease-fire to become effective 24 hours after an agreement is signed. This virtually requires completion of the supervisory machinery in quick order, they stated.

On the North Vietnamese side, it was learned that Hanoi has been in touch with the four supervisory nations, as well.

Hanoi radio also said North Vietnamese economic teams were circulating among allied nations concerning reconstruction aid after the fighting stops, a development U.S. sources indicated meant the North is preparing for a cease-fire.

Mrs. Trudeau Is Nearly Toppled

OTTAWA (AP) — Margaret Trudeau, wife of Canada's prime minister, was crushed in a throng of school children and nearly knocked down the steps of the Parliament Hill walkway when she took part in a ceremony opening Canada's "Book Week."

The incident occurred Wednesday when Mrs. Trudeau released about 1,000 balloons from under a plastic tarpaulin. Each balloon carried a sticker entitling children under 10 to a free book from the publishing firm which organized the event.

As Mrs. Trudeau released the balloons, the children raced to grab them before they floated out of reach. In the crush, she was nearly pushed backward down a flight of steps. Police rushed through the mob to her rescue.

No Thanksgiving Holiday At Ford

DETROIT (AP) — United Auto Workers union members at Ford plants will not be getting a four-day Thanksgiving weekend.

In turning down a union request to switch the Dec. 17 paid "bonus holiday" to Nov. 24, Ford said Wednesday that a strong demand for Ford products makes it essential to keep the factories producing at peak performance.

The "bonus holiday" was a product of 1970 contract negotiations.

Advisory Group Asks Increase In Flue-Cured Tobacco Quota

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
A 27-member U.S. Agriculture Department tobacco advisory committee has asked an increase in the flue-cured marketing quota for 1973, but has been unable to agree on how much.

Some members, including export representatives, wanted a much larger quota, an increase of as much as 15 per cent from this year's 1.071 billion pounds.

Other members thought a 5 per cent boost would be sufficient, the committee announced in Washington Wednesday.

It also said legislation is needed to allow growers to transfer allotments across county lines within a state. But there was opposition to permitting outright sales of farm acreage allotments.

Growers of flue-cured tobacco, the type most used in cigarettes and in export sales, have been able since 1962 to lease and transfer allotments within a county. The department is required by law to announce the 1973 flue-cured marketing quota and acreage allotments by Dec. 1. Announcement of quotas for 1973 production of burley and other types of tobacco is not required until next Feb. 1.

The flue-cured marketing season for this year ended Wednesday with the closing of the last market on the North Carolina-Virginia Old Belt, at Danville, Va. Volume was small on the final day, and prices were steady to higher than on the previous day. Increases were $1 and $2 dollars a hundred pounds, and were centered on leaf.

In Atlanta, the U.S. Department of Agriculture announced that stocks of all types of leaf tobacco on Oct. 1 were 4.40 billion pounds, down 70 million from a year ago. Flue-cured stocks were up by 27.7 million pounds and stood at 2.34 billion.

Burley stocks were down 97.4 million pounds to 1.25 billion.

Used To Fight Defending Name

WARRENTON, Ore. (AP) — In public school, most of his time was occupied defending his good name — with his fists. "My nose used to take on a new shape every week."

In the Marine Corps, same thing. "There were some good fights ... very lively affairs."

Today, patrons of his seafood restaurant in this Oregon coastal town still find it difficult to stop a giggle when addressing him.

But it doesn't bother him anymore. And through it all he's never considered changing his name.

"Ure A. Pigg is who I am. If I started all over again I would still want to be me — Ure A. Pigg."

Assert Drug Protects Hearts

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (AP) — Three University of Minnesota research physicians say they have found a drug that protects animal hearts against damage from induced heart attacks.

Drs. Lloyd G. Phillips, William G. Kubicek and Wesley D. Anderson said Wednesday the drug betahistine hydrochloride (BHH) has worked well in experiments on dogs, "but we don't know yet how it would work in a man."

In a typical heart attack, a clot blocks a coronary artery, preventing blood from getting through to nourish part of the heart muscle.

The researchers said BHH apparently causes so-called collateral arteries, which usually carry little blood, to open very wide and carry the blood supply to starving heart muscle.

Princess Anne Ticketed Twice

LONDON (AP) — Princess Anne, the 22-year-old daughter of Queen Elizabeth II, has been ticketed twice this month for speeding in her 125-mile-per-hour sports car.

A police spokesman said Wednesday that Anne first broke Britain's 70 m.p.h. speed limit on a superhighway from London that passes near the royal family's Berkshire Castle, then again on another highway to the north.

Police said both violations had been booked and authorities will decide in about six weeks whether to prosecute.

Buckingham Palace confirmed that Anne had been stopped but a spokesman said, "We know nothing about any prosecution."

The last ten years were very smooth.

Mrs. Shearin Named City's Teacher Of The Year

Heath Tries Promote More Irish Talks

By FRED COLEMAN
Associated Press Writer
BELFAST (AP) — Prime Minister Edward Heath flew to Northern Ireland today to try to promote a new round of peace talks.

Heath's two days of meetings with politicians, churchmen, labor and business leaders open the final phase of preparations for a new government structure for the province to replace direct rule from London.

Details of Heath's exact movements were kept secret as a security precaution. Stormont Castle, the site for most of his talks, was sealed off by security forces.

Soldiers with rifles at the ready patrolled the city in jeeps and on foot. They manned barricades at dozens of downtown checkpoints, routinely frisking pedestrians.

Heath was meeting today with labor, industrial and religious leaders, including William Cardinal Conway, the Roman Catholic archbishop of all Ireland. On Friday, he consults with delegations from the province's political parties.

However, the Prime Minister was not expected to meet with guerrilla leaders of the Catholic Irish Republican Army or with William Craig, the Protestant leader who threatens armed action against any sellout to the Catholic minority.

The consultations Heath begins are to be continued by William Whitelaw, Britain's chief administrator of Northern Ireland.

Government sources said a major purpose of Heath's trip is to try to shift the momentum from the violence in the streets toward a political settlement.

The British government issued a Green Paper three weeks ago as a basis for discussions on the province's political future. All parties have now studied it fully, and Heath's talks are designed to begin narrowing differences in preparation for a government proposal of settlement terms.

Heath in March suspended the Protestant-dominated Parliament that had ruled the province for 50 years but promised to try to restore some form of local government within 12 months.

The deadline is now only four months away. Political sources agree that the British will attempt to broaden the representation of the Roman Catholic minority of 500,000. The province has one million Protestants.

But other major questions remain to be decided, including whether security will be controlled locally or by London and what will be the future relationship between Northern Ireland, with its Protestant majority, and the Irish Republic, which is overwhelmingly Catholic.

Mrs. Nannie Fisher Shearin, science and math teacher at Aycock Junior High School, was recently named the Greenville Teacher of the Year.

A teacher who has completed 14 years of teaching has been in her current position for four years, teaching science in the ninth grade and math to eighth grade pupils.

A native of Dortches in Nash County, Mrs. Shearin grew up on a farm with three brothers and a sister. During the World War II years of 1942-46, she attended the University of North Carolina at Greensboro where she received the B.S. degree. Her first teaching position was at Greensboro Senior High teaching health and physical education.

In 1948 Nannie Fisher became the wife of Howard Shearin, and their first home was a trailer on the N.C. State University campus. Mrs. Shearin worked at the Raleigh Recreation Department while her husband attended N.C. State.

Mrs. Shearin holds the M.A. degree from East Carolina University.

Argentina Prepares For Peron And For Trouble

By ROBERT D. OHMAN
Associated Press Writer
BUENOS AIRES (AP) — The Argentine capital looks like it's about to be invaded as H-Hour — when Juan Peron returns from exile — gets closer.

Even military jargon is in use. Peronists have dubbed the former dictator's flight home after 17 years of exile "Operation Return."

Peron, 77, is scheduled to arrive at Ezeiza International Airport Friday in a chartered jet, accompanied by 140 followers who flew to Rome to pick him up.

The ruling military junta launched "Operation Disruption" to seal off the airport after Peronist leaders predicted a million of their followers would be at the field.

The generals also issued orders creating a one-day holiday, barring private plane flights and chartered bus trips, closing schools and restricting roads to military movement. They assured the public that peace would be maintained.

The first shots were fired Wednesday night, and they were blanks.

A policeman fired into the air to disperse 200 university students gathered on their campus for an assembly on "students' role in the return of Peron."

More than 30,000 soldiers were forming a ring around the airport, and all Buenos Aires police and troops from outlying areas took up positions in and around the capital.

Civilian automobile traffic was restricted. The National Transport Board warned private bus operators that they could provide only regular service and would need authorization for any charter runs or special trips. This barred bus lines from bringing Peronists into Buenos Aires from the provinces or taking them to the airport.

The military government limited the airport welcoming committee to 300, with their names to be supplied in advance.

Avers South Is 'New' Now

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP)—Gov. Bob Scott of North Carolina told newspaper editorial writers Wednesday, "There is no question that throughout the South we have lost our economic backwardness."

He made the statement in a welcoming address to the four-day meeting of the National Conference of Editorial Writers. The theme of the meeting is, "The New South—Myth or Reality?" The governor said that within the last four years, the time he has been in office, per capita income in North Carolina has risen 26.3 per cent and nonagricultural employment 14 per cent.

The chairman of the North Carolina Women's Political Caucus, Martha McKay, told a meeting of delegates' wives that women have learned that in politics, "The meek do not inherit the earth, because power is the name of the game."

Mrs. McKay, a management consultant in Chapel Hill, declared, "Instead of the Supreme Court or the Cabinet, we've been riding out our lives on beautification committees. Or, after knocking ourselves out to get some man elected, we've been handed a bottle of Chanel No. 5. We're not willing to accept that role any longer."

Pled Guilty In Welfare Fraud

WASHINGTON, N.C. — Fay Larue Wilcox, a former Pitt County Social Services Department employee, charged last spring with fraudulent use and possession of food coupons pled guilty to the charge in U.S. Eastern District Court in Washington earlier this week.

Federal Judge John Larkins ordered prayer for judgment in the case continued until the next term of federal court here.

The former welfare worker could be sentenced to five years in jail, a $10,000 fine, or both.

Modern Egypt Hangs On To Superstitions

CAIRO (AP) — If you are a virgin do not look into your mirror after sunset, lest you remain a spinster all your life. This is just one of the 274 prevalent superstitions plaguing modern Egypt, where 96 per cent of the rural population firmly believe in them.

These figures were compiled by the mass circulation Cairo newspaper Akhbar El Yom, which said there is a quack of sorts in every one of the country's 4,000 villages, selling talismen or advice to the gullible.

Townspeople are more sophisticated, but only slightly so, with 62 per cent being firm believers in some, if not all, of the 274 Egyptian superstitions, the paper said.

Furthermore, the paper's superstition analyst added, a recent survey revealed that 20 per cent of those frequenting "zars," a kind of frenetic voodoo dance ceremony, were female university graduates.

A zar is conducted by a "codia," an elderly or middle-aged woman who specializes in exorcising evil spirits.

Those attending zar ceremonies, mainly women, dance for hours at a time to the frenzied loud beat of a tom-tom. Small domestic animals and birds are slain by the codia, who sprinkles their blood on the faces, arms and clothes of the dancers.

The dancers keep stomping and whirling until they fall down exhausted, whereupon the codia revives them with roscented water and blows into their ears, thus driving away the evil spirit possessing them.

Many of the superstitions have come down through the ages from as long as 6,000 years ago, when Egypt was ruled by the pharaohs.

But as old superstitions die away, or prove ineffective, new or amended forms take their place.

The most prevalent superstition is that of the evil eye, also common elsewhere, and generally ward off by "touching wood."

But the Egyptians have a multitude of varied talismen and other methods to ward off the influence of the dreaded evil eye.

Farmers protect their water buffalo by hanging a horseshoe discarded from a donkey from the animal's neck. A mother protects her daughter's future marital happiness by holding an open pair of scissors over the bride's head during the marriage ceremony.

The quacks, who according to Akhbar El Yom can be found in every village, thrive on proferring such varied advice as how a man can be made to divorce his second wife.

This apparently is achieved by obtaining the tooth of a dead person, grinding it and spraying the powder on the threshold of the second wife's house.

Labels Will Tell Beverage Value

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) —If you've purchased a fruit beverage recently, do you know if you got your money's worth? Do you know just how much nutrition was packed into it?

A new labeling rule from the Food and Drug Administration should help you answer these questions. Ethel Diedrichsen, extension food and nutrition specialist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, says the new legislation will require labels on diluted orange juice beverages to state the percentage of orange juice in the product.

Home Expense Is Big Hurdle

NEW YORK (UPI) —Your home is the toughest expense, according to money management specialists, who say you shouldn't spend more than 30 per cent of your after-tax income for housing, including heat, utilities and furnishings.

Look into your mortgage interest if you want a way to cut this cost. If you have a loan at 8 1/2 or 9 per cent you may want to consider refinancing at a lower rate.

Some Prefer Shack Town

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Home for thousands of families in this oil-rich country is a tent or a metal shack.

Many new towns of such jerry-built dwellings have sprung up because of a persistent housing shortage made worse by a heavy influx of Egyptian workers.

Even when housing is available, however, many Libyans continue to live in shacks or tents, apparently to save money. Libyans who live in apartments often pay a third of their salary for the rent.

The government, which considers the shack cities a blight on the landscape, has threatened to abolish the housing allowances of civil servants who remain in such dwellings.

Government employees receive a housing allowance equal to one-third of their salary and they find that living in easy-to-erect shacks saves many expenditures.

The healthy sprinkling of cars parked on the sandy streets of the shack cities indicates they are not the homes of the poorest people.

To alleviate the housing shortage, the government has announced a crash program to put up 30,000 apartments over the next three years.

Damaged By Big Ransom

WASHINGTON (AP) — The reported $2 million ransom Southern Airways paid three hijackers last weekend could put the airline in serious financial difficulty, the Civil Aeronautics Board says.

A CAB spokesman Wednesday said loss of the money, which was paid to the three men who took over the airlines' DC9 jetliner Friday near Birmingham, Ala., and landed it in Cuba Sunday, "puts Southern in bad shape."

"For the most recent nine-month period, it converts a small profit into a substantial loss," he said.

The spokesman said Southern "was not making it big" and was partially subsidized by the federal government. He said losing the $2 million makes it "very reasonable that they are in considerable financial difficulty."

It was not known if any portion of the ransom was insured. The United States has asked Cuba to return the money and the hijackers but has not yet received a reply.

Earned Bravos For Conducting

DETROIT (AP) — Werner Klemperer, best known for his role as the bumbling Colonel Klink in the television series "Hogan's Heroes," conducted the Detroit symphony and received cries of "bravo" from the musicians for his efforts.

Klemperer, son of German conductor Otto Klemperer, was invited to wield the baton Wednesday by symphony conductor Sixten Ehrling after the actor showed up at a rehearsal with a score.

Klemperer is appearing as Uncle Max in a Detroit production of "The Sound of Music." One observer said Klemperer was "obviously a very serious student of music." He led the orchestra through part of the first movement of Cesar Franck's Symphony in D Minor.

Hunt Survivors In Ship Collision

ATHENS (AP) — The Greek navy said today that a search for survivors of a troopship that sank after it was rammed by a tanker Wednesday continues but there is little hope of finding any of the 43 sailors still missing alive. Three bodies have been recovered.

The troopship Merlin sank within minutes after it collided with the 100,175-ton Liberian flag tanker World Hero almost within sight of the Greek mainland in the Saronic Gulf. The accident occurred in clear weather and calm seas at mid-afternoon.

Survivors of the Merlin said the tanker, owned by shipping magnate Niarchos Stavros, slammed them from behind and then rammed them amidships.

Boggs' Job . . . Pilot Bails Out As Jet Crashes

convening Jan. 3. If they aren't found alive by then, their seats could be declared vacant.

The two men's wives are being urged by friends to seek the 'seats in special elections that would be called by the governors. Mrs. Begich has responded she would run.

Immediately after the Nov. 7 election, O'Neill and Gibbons announced their candidacy for the Boggs' leadership post.

O'Neill's forces claim their candidate already has about 150 pledges of support. That's well over the 123 votes needed on the basis of 244 Democratic seats.

Gibbons said his campaign "is shaping up pretty well." O'Neill, he said, "hasn't got it nailed down."

Several others have been mentioned as possible candidates but haven't been sufficiently encouraged to get into the race.

Meanwhile in Alaska, Gov. William A. Egan has said he will know within a week whether to call a special election for the seat held by Begich.

While political forces in the state were beginning to gear up, Begich's wife Peggie said she will be a candidate for the Democratic nomination "if and when" a vacancy occurs.

Gold Speeds To 105-89 Win Over Purple

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Using their quickness to open the fast break and to run a pressure defense, the Gold team rolled to a 105-89 victory over the Purple last night as the East Carolina University basketball team went on display for the first time.

The annual pre-season scrimmage was held in Minges Coliseum before a sparse but enthusiastic crowd as the Bucs put on a display of shooting and speed.

The Gold, with Ernie Pope and Al Edwards guiding their floor play and Nicky White sweeping the boards clean broke open a tight game late in the first half to roll up a 10-point lead at intermission.

The Purple pulled back to within four after six minutes of the second half, but during the next three minutes, the Gold outscored them, 13-2 and ran up 72-57 lead, which they later expanded to as much as 25 points.

Ray Peszko led the Gold, scoring with 23 points, but a total of six players broke into double figures. Dave McNeill had 18, White had 17, Pope had 15, Ken Edmonds had 12 and Dave Franklin had 11.

White led the rebounding with 16. For the Purple, Jerome Owens put on a one-man show, leading all scorers with 28 points. He hit on 13 of 23 field goals and two of six free throws for the total.

Backing him up were Roger Atkinson and Tom Marsh, each with 12, while Earl Quash had 11 and Al Faber had 10.

Faber paced the Purple rebounding with 13, while Marsh grabbed off 13.

Both teams show well from the floor, hitting close to 48 per cent of their shots. Free throws, however, fell down, as the Gold hit only 63 per cent, and the Purple, 64 per cent.

Quash put the Purple into an opening lead after nearly a minute, putting in a loose ball, and Owens hit the first of his points to make it 4-0. McNeill and Franklin hit to tie it up, but the Purple moved back out three straight times before finally getting a six point edge on shots by Marsh and Faber at 14-8.

The Gold fought back on baskets by McNeill and White and a free throw by Peszko to pull within one at 14-13. Then, a minute later, McNeill tied it up at 18-18, and Pope hit on a drive to put the Gold ahead, 20-18, with 10:58 remaining. It was retired by the Purple at 20-20 and they took a 22-20 lead on a shot by Atkinson.

But the Gold finally moved into the lead on a steal by Edmonds, and they never lost it after that. From the 28-26 edge, the Gold slowly pulled away, finally reaching a 10-point edge with 2:37 to go, at 45-35. They upped that to 12, 47-35 on two free throws by Edwards, but the Purple cut it back to 51-41 by the end of the half.

In the early minutes of the final half, the Purple got a rally going, trimming the lead back to as little as four points. That came on a shot by Quash off a fast break with 14:50 left, making it 57-53. They cut it back to four one more time, 59-55 with 13:36 left, but after that the Gold took control and turned it into a rout.

Behind the scoring of White and Peszko, who scored all of the points during the breakaway, the Gold zoomed out to a 15-point edge, as Peszko hit a three-point play with 10:45 left to make it 72-57. A few minutes later, they ran off 10 more points in a row, as Peszko hitting three baskets, Edmonds and Edwards each getting one, to make it 85-65. After that, it was just a question of running out the clock.

Coach Tom Quinn, who watched the game from the stands, was somewhat pleased afterwards. "I saw some good things out there," he said. "I found our shooting is further along than I thought it would be. That might possibly be because the defense wasn't as far along as we'd hoped, but the Gold did put some pressure on the Purple to force a lot of turnovers that they converted." The Purple had 26 turnovers and compared with 15 for the Gold.

"Our rebounding will have to improve," Quinn said, "but I think this will be automatic when we have our players together instead of separated." He praised the board effort of White, Faber and Marsh.

"I'm pleased with some of the individual play," he added.

"There had been some question marks, but a few of these are solved now. I don't want to single out anyone yet, but I was impressed by the floor leadership displayed by Pope and Edmonds at the point. The quickness of the players impressed me too, and I'm further assured that we'll have improved depth."

Quinn said that the Gold capitalized on the Purple team's three-minute lapse in the second half and broke the game open. "Up until then, it could have gone either way. Three or four quick releases broke it open."

"I think too, we need a little more conditioning, but the hustle and enthusiasm was just super," Quinn said.

The Bucs, the defending Southern Conference champions, open the regular season on Tuesday, November 28, hosting the University of Baltimore.

New York Nips Cougars By Five

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Boston Celtics continued on their victory rampage in the National Basketball Association and left the Phoenix Suns wrestling with an identity crisis.

"You didn't see the Phoenix Suns out there, you saw five guys in uniforms," said Phoenix Coach Jerry Colangelo Wednesday night after the Celtics beat his Suns 113-94. "The Celtics are playing basketball the way it should be played."

Six Celtics hit double figures as they recorded their 14th triumph in 15 games with a fast-break offense and stiff defense that protected their lead throughout the contest.

"They simply played super defense in the first half," said Boston Coach Tommy Heinsohn. "You've got to keep pressure on them. Everybody made a contribution tonight."

In other NBA games Wednesday night, Kansas City-Omaha defeated Seattle 106-97 and Los Angeles downed Detroit 110-99.

In the American Basketball Association, Memphis whipped San Diego 126-101, New York upended Carolina 112-107 and Dallas outlasted Kentucky 104-99.

Dave Cowens paced the Celtics with 25 points and 19 rebounds while Charlie Scott led all scorers with 33 points for Phoenix. The Suns made a minor threat with a nine-point outburst in the fourth quarter that trimmed the Celtics' lead to 89-79. But Boston surged back with 13 straight points to put it out of reach.

Nate Archibald poured in 47 points as the Kings' triumph marked the first time an NBA club coached by Bob Cousy has been over the .500 mark.

"It's nice to be over .500," said Cousy. "But I'll be happier when we make the playoffs."

Gail Goodrich and Wilt Chamberlain sparked a second-half rally as the Lakers scored their eighth straight victory and their 13th in 14 outings. Goodrich and Chamberlain each had 16 points after Detroit held a 52-51 halftime edge and finished with 24 and 21 points, respectively.

Returning home made the difference for the Nets as they recovered from a six-game losing streak—with all the losses on the road—with a 112-107 victory over the Cougars. George Carter, acquired from Carolina in an off-season trade, scored a personal season high 34 points as the Nets raced to a 63-47 halftime lead and stayed in command the rest of the way.

Lee Davis and George Thompson each posted 32 points as Memphis broke open a tight contest in the second period, outgunning the Conquistadors 33-19 enroute to a 62-42 halftime bulge.

Bob Netolicky and Rich Jones led a 29-point fourth quarter rally for the Chaparrals' win. Netolicky finished with 31 points while Jones had 25. The Colonels held a seven-point lead with 10:43 remaining but the Chaps roared back to take the lead at 99-97 with 1:15 left.

Ward Wins BrookValley

Jim Ward easily outdistanced the field to capture the Brook Valley Country Club Golf Championship this past weekend.

Ward fired a 33 on the front side from the championship tees to give himself a lead, and he was never caught the remaining 27 holes of the tournament.

He finished the first round with a 70, then came back with a 76 to finish the tournament with a 146, easily beating out runner-up Don Conley.

In the first flight, Bo Farley toop top honors, beating out Lee Alcorn. Percy Ashby captured the second flight, while Harry Wilson was the runner-up.

In the third flight, Bill Parks won, followed by Bill Goodwin. Enoch Reid captured the fourth flight, followed by Red Flanagan.

Ward, in winning, made it two straight in recent tournaments. He recently won the City Championship, involving players from both Brook Valley and Greenville Golf and Country Club.

Finley Is Honored By His Indiana Home Town

By MIKE HARRIS
Associated Press Sports Writer

LAPORTE, Ind. (AP) — Charles O. Finley, much maligned and controversial owner of the Oakland Athletics, is a popular man in his hometown of LaPorte, Ind.

The white-haired multimillionaire was honored Wednesday night by this city of 23,000 for his contribution to the city and the game of baseball.

Finley is owner of the world champion A's, the California Golden Seals of the National Hockey League and the Memphis Tams of the American Basketball Association. He also is an insurance executive, running his business from an office in Chicago.

The target of critical press for his handling of players, moving of franchises and firing of managers, Finley was the subject of praise and respect at LaPorte's Civic Auditorium Wednesday night.

A crowd of 2,200 wedged into the building to take part in the festivities organized by local businessmen and friends of Finley.

Finley, his family and several members of the A's entered the hall behind a six-piece Dixieland band. They approached the speakers' table amid the standing, cheering admirers who waved hundreds of green and gold Oakland pennants.

Among those paying tribute in person were A's Manager Dick Williams and four Oakland players—Vida Blue, involved in a fierce and lengthy contract battle with Finley during the past season; World Series hero Gene Tenace, and hitting stars Reggie Jackson and Joe Rudi.

Also on hand was Gov. Edgar D. Whitcomb, who made Williams and each of the four players a "distinguished citizen of Indiana" and Finley a "Sagamore of the Wabash."

President Nixon sent a telegram reading in part, "Not only are congratulations in order for the splendid World Series victory last month but baseball fans across the nation are indebted to you for the innovation and excitement you have given to our national pastime."

Sooners, Penn State In Sugar

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Oklahoma will return to defend its Sugar Bowl title New Years Eve night against Penn State, an Eastern power making its first appearance in the Sugar Bowl classic.

The Associated Press learned of the matchup Wednesday, although it cannot be announced officially until Saturday afternoon because of National Collegiate Athletic Association rules.

Fourth-ranked Oklahoma is 7-1 for the season—the loss was to Colorado—with Kansas, Nebraska and Oklahoma State still ahead.

Sixth-ranked Penn State is 8-1, having won eight straight since a 28-21 loss to Tennessee in the Nittany Lions' season opener. Oklahoma's wishbone ran wild in a 40-22 romp over Auburn in last season's Sugar Bowl while Penn State was whipping Texas 30-6 in the Cotton Bowl.

Confirmation of the Sugar Bowl match, a source close to behind-the-scenes bowl negotiations told The Associated Press, makes it a virtual certainty that Nebraska will play Notre Dame in the Orange Bowl with Alabama meeting Texas in the Cotton Bowl.

Penn State, under Coach Joe Paterno, will be heavily favored in its final two games against Boston College and Pittsburgh.

Shaw, Kenney Going For New TD Record As State Meets Clemson

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
If quarterback Bruce Shaw and flanker Pat Kenney of North Carolina State hook up for one more touchdown pass against Clemson Saturday, both will set new Wolfpack records. It would give Shaw the most TD passes in a season, breaking the record of nine by Jim Rossi in 1969. Kenney would become the best touchdown receiver with 10, breaking the mark set by Harry Martell in the 1965 and 1967 seasons.

The Wolfpack coach, Lou Holtz, told a news luncheon Wednesday that the key to the victory lies in the battle of the two defenses.

N. C. State will have the advantage of the home field.

At Clemson, Coach Hootie Ingram pushed the defense against N. C. State-type plays run by reserves. The offense had heavy contract work.

Ingram said prospects were that the squad would be at full strength.

At North Carolina, Coach Bill Dooley said Saturday's home rival, Duke, is one of the toughest defensive teams in the country. He said there is no weak spot in its defense, and every Blue Devil player has performed well throughout the season.

Kickoff will be at 1:20 p. m., and the game will be televised regionally.

Wake Forest has won its first Atlantic Coast Conference game, 9-7 against Duke last week. Virginia gets its last chance to do so in its season-ending game at Wake Forest Saturday.

Virginia held a night practice Wednesday. Head scout Paul Fraim, who saw Wake Forest's upset of Duke, said the Wake Forest Deacons "run well and defend against the pass excellently. Carl Ramsey makes their kicking game very strong."

"They played good, sound football against Duke. Their young players showed great determination."

Abbey Is Champion

MISENHEIMER, N. C. (AP) — Belmont Abbey College has won the soccer championship of District 26 of the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics (NAIA). It will represent the district in the regional playoffs Nov. 24-25 at Dunn, N. C.

Bruce Bini scored with 14 minutes left in the game Wednesday to lead the Crusaders to a 1-0 victory over Guilford College. Both Belmont Abbey and Guilford won first-round games at Pfeiffer College's field Tuesday.

Belmont Abbey is now 7-0-1 and Guilford fell to 5-2-1.

The winner of the regionals advances to the national NAIA tournament, also in Dunn, Nov. 29.

Colorado Still May Host Games

DENVER (AP) — The chairman of the Colorado Citizens Committee to Retain the Winter Games says he was "greatly encouraged" after talking with International Olympic Committee President Lord Killanin that the 1976 Winter Games might still be held in Colorado.

Harry L. Arkin, Denver attorney, returned to Denver Tuesday night after meeting with Lord Killanin for three hours Monday morning at IOC headquarters in Lausanne, Switzerland.

Killanin told Arkin that only the IOC or the U.S. Olympic Committee had the authority to remove the Games from Colorado, Arkin said Wednesday.

The IOC, however, announced Wednesday that national Olympic committees have been instructed to submit new bids by Jan. 15 for the 1976 Winter Games following formal notification from the Denver Olympic Organizing Committee (DOOC) Wednesday of the withdrawal of Denver as the host city.

But, according to Arkin, Killanin told him, "They (the DOOC) can't give the games up because they weren't given to them in the first place."

Killanin told Arkin that, under Rule 50 of the Olympic Rules and Regulations, the Games were actually awarded to the USOC rather than to the DOOC, Arkin said.

Arkin said Killanin told him that if Denver were unable to salvage the Games by February, an alternate site would be chosen.

Arkin said his committee intends to convince the USOC and the IOC that last Tuesday's overwhelming vote against state funding of the games was "not a mandate against the Olympics as such, just against city and state funding and the credibility of the DOOC."

Second baseman Dick Green of the Oakland A's broke in with the Kansas City A's in 1963.

Florida State Or N.C. State To Get Bid To Peach; Maybe Both

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Florida State will be invited to play in the fifth annual Peach Bowl at Atlanta Stadium Dec. 29 if the Seminoles win their final game of the season Saturday night, the Fort Lauderdale Sun-Sentinel reported today.

George Crumbley, executive director of the Peach Bowl, said in Atlanta Wednesday the game's selection committee had narrowed its choice to Florida

State or North Carolina State as one of the teams.

"We will definitely take one of those teams," Crumbley said, "and perhaps both. With their outstanding offenses, a pairing of the two would make helluva game."

Crumbley emphasized, however, that if both win Saturday and the Peach Bowl selects only one, Florida state will receive the invitation because of a better record.

A victory over South Carolina Saturday would give the Seminoles an 8-3 finish. N.C. State plays Clemson Saturday and a win would leave the Wolfpack at 7-3-1.

The main obstacle between the FSU-N.C. State pairing appears to be the Peach Bowl's desire to get a game that would offer more intersectional flavor.

The primary opposition for FSU or N.C. State, Crumbley explained, would come from a list that includes Iowa State, Texas Tech, Arizona State and West Virginia. It also is possible that Georgia, with a win over Auburn Saturday, could move into contention, the Sun-Sentinel said.

Crumbley pointed out that most of the teams on the opposition list have been linked to another bowl, with the possible exception of West Virginia, winner of the second Peach Bowl in 1969.

"Iowa State is headed for the Liberty Bowl, Texas Tech the Sun Bowl, Arizona State the Fiesta Bowl, and Georgia has also been tied to the Liberty Bowl," Crumbley said.

That only leaves West Virginia and possibly Arizona State, winner over FSU in last year's Fiesta Bowl.

The Sun-Sentinel reported, however, that Peach Bowl officials would prefer N.C. State as an opponent to Florida State instead of West Virginia.

"The game would be a great draw," Crumbley said. "Of course, we have to admit that if we could get a super team due to the process of elimination, we might reconsider."

Officials at Florida State in Tallahassee said they were completely unaware of any Peach Bowl possibilities. One source close to the Seminoles did say "if there's any chance for a bowl, it's the Peach Bowl, and that hinges on a victory over South Carolina."

Head coach Larry Jones said he had not been contacted "late-ly by any bowl." He didn't rule out an invitation, however.

Athletic Director Clay Stapleton added, "We have had very little action. I don't know who has scouted us, but it's not always necessary for scouts to see a team before inviting it."

Crumbley said Peach Bowl scouts would be at Columbia, S.C., Saturday night to watch the Seminoles and the Gamecocks.

Peach Bowl representatives also are expected to view the Clemson-N.C. State game at Raleigh, N.C.

Carolina Paces ACC Statistics

GREENSBORO (AP) — With three games left to play, North Carolina's Atlantic Coast Conference champs are in a good position to challenge for leadership in most of the ACC team statistical departments.

Of the 11 categories in which team statistics are compiled, the Tar Heels, who clinched their second straight ACC title by beating Virginia last week, are first in three and rank among the top three teams in all except two departments.

The major category in which the Tar Heels lead is rushing where they are bidding to capture the title for the third time in the last four years. The other two departments in which they lead are punt and kickoff returns.

The passing game is the one category in which the Tar Heels do not rank among the leaders. They are fourth in pass offense and sixth in pass defense.

Of the other departments, the Tar Heels are second in total offense, scoring, rushing defense and scoring defense. They are third in both total defense and punting.

N. C. State, which had a five-game winning streak broken by Penn State last week, appears to have wrapped up its first total offense and passing titles and second scoring championship. The Wolfpack, which closes its regular season against Clemson Saturday, is averaging 427.5 yards per game in total offense and 31.8 points per contest.

Carson Sparks Quebec Victory

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
The rap on Alain "Boom Boom" Caron has always been that he couldn't skate. But he certainly can score.

Caron, who once had 77 goals in a single season, scored three Wednesday night, leading the Quebec Nordiques to a 7-4 victory over the New York Raiders.

In other WHA games, Los Angeles rapped Houston 6-4 and Alberta defeated Winnipeg 3-1.

Caron's third goal of the night, with two New York players in the penalty box, tied the game at 4-4 in the third period. Then the Nordiques bunched three more goals by Robert Guindon, Andre Gaudette and Jean Guy Gendron to win the game.

Gene Peacosh had two goals for the Raiders, who surrendered four power play goals to Quebec.

Bob Jones clicked for a pair of third period goals to push Los Angeles past Houston.

Jones' first goal midway through the period snapped a 4-4 tie and then he hit an empty net in the final minute to clinch the victory.

Joe Szura also had two goals for the Sharks and Poul Popiel hit a pair for Houston.

A pair of third period goals by Ron Walters broke a tie and moved Alberta past Winnipeg.

Chris Bordeleau scored his 14th goal for Winnipeg with Bobby Hull assisting for his ninth WHA point in five games. Val Fonteyne tied it for Alberta in the middle period and then Walters won it in the final 20 minutes.

The victory moved Alberta into a first place tie with Winnipeg in the WHA's West Division.

Crime Turns To The Classroom

By BARTON REPPERT
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Mrs. Bennye Bowell's third graders were jotting down their homework assignment when the slender young man entered the classroom. He walked slowly toward the teacher. One hand held a plastic bookbag; the other was jammed in his jacket pocket.
Mrs. Boswell looked up, expecting an inquiry. There was none. "Please check in at the principal's office," she told the youth politely. His reply was calm but curt:
"There are a lot of children in your class. Walk behind your desk and sit down. If you move I'll blow your brains out."
Quickly, the man, who was about 20, dumped the books from the plastic bag, replaced them with the teacher's purse and fled.
It was over in moments and the terrified Mrs. Boswell of Public School 161 in Harlem had become one of 15 teachers robbed during a two-week period in New York City schools.

last month. Most of the incidents happened in full view of school children; the takes ranged from $1 cash to $3,000 in jewelry.
The sudden upsurge of robberies against teachers — two were reported in September — has provoked cries of outrage from city officials, teachers and parents alike and demands for intensified security in the schools.
"We were positively terrified," said a 27-year-old woman teacher, recalling how she and a colleague were robbed while they lunched in a classroom at another Manhattan school. "If there were a policeman around the school building all the time we would feel a lot better."
The teachers are plainly angry and calling for strong action. During a meeting at Richmond Hill High School in Queens, where a teacher fought off two teen-age robbers, one teacher drew cheers with a declaration it was time to "knock heads, make arrests, get rid of the garbage."

They have been joined by their union, the United Federation of Teachers.
While high schools and junior highs now have a 400-man security force, the system's 650 primary schools generally have relied on makeshift security arrangements, with teachers, school aides and parent volunteers — nearly all women — assigned to check in visitors, supervise lunchrooms and patrol entrances.
In response, the school system has accelerated steps to hire and train 1,200 unarmed security aides, at a cost of $6 million, for assignment mainly to elementary schools.
School authorities also are seriously considering the use of color-coded photo identification cards to help weed out intruders, as well as the issuing to teachers of pocket-size silent alarm devices initially developed for an experimental electronic security system at a Sacramento, Calif., high school.
The New York City school system has long been plagued by such incidents as corridor shakedowns, gang fights, rapes and knifings. And it is not the only major American city facing the problem. But because of its size — 1.2 million pupils — its problems are perhaps more glaring.

Board of Education files show that the total of "untoward incidents," as school officials prefer to call them, increased from 333 during the 1970 calendar year to 580 in 1971. Through September of this year, there were 642 reported incidents.
Factors contributing to the apparent rise in school crime, school officials say, include widespread drug trafficking, a resurgence of youth gangs, proliferation of weapons — particularly handguns — among students, and lack of enough adequate facilities to handle unmotivated, uncooperative, potentially disruptive pupils.
Also aggravating the situation is a truancy rate of about 60,000 students a day, with many incidents blamed on truants barging into other schools to victimize younger pupils.

Officials in several other large cities indicated serious concern over school security, but said teachers had not been faced with classroom holdups comparable to the series in New York last month.

Opening lead: Three of ♦
East provided South—the declarer at three no trump—with a clear road map on how to play the hand.

West opened the three of diamonds, East put up the jack and South won the trick with the queen. From East's play, it was reasonable for South to assume that his left hand opponent held the ace and ten of the suit. At all costs then, East must be kept out of the lead, for another diamond thru declarer's king might enable the defenders to cash sufficient tricks to set the contract.

At trick two, South overtook the ten of hearts with dummy's jack to lead a small club. East followed suit with the four and declarer put in the queen which held the trick.
The ace of hearts was cached next and the remaining hearts were played as East and South discarded small spades. On a second club lead, East played the jack forcing out declarer's ace, and at the same time revealing that another club play was out of the question since it would surely enable East to get in with the king.

Declarer's sole remaining hope was that West held the king of spades and could be made to lead away from that card in the end position. Since South had not lost any tricks yet, he could afford to let his opponent in to run the diamond suit—provided that he has started with no more than five diamonds.

Declarer exited from his hand with the king of diamonds, and West proceeded to cash out four tricks. With only the king and five of spades left in his hand, however, he was hopelessly endplayed and had to surrender the final two tricks to South.

East's play of the jack of clubs on the second lead of that suit was equivalent to giving declarer a peek at his hand. Since he was known to have the king of clubs by virtue of South's successful finesse of the queen, East had nothing to lose by dropping that card under the ace. This may induce declarer to play West for the jack of clubs in which case it would be safe for South to continue the establishment of the club suit. If he does so, East will have an opportunity to gain the lead to deliver the fatal salvo thru declarer's remaining diamond honor.

W.Va. Trying To Make System 'Work'

By JOHN F. SCOTT

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI)

While political debate on welfare has reached a new peak and discontent with the national welfare effort is widespread, the "poverty" state of West Virginia is trying to make the system work.

The method is to reduce the welfare rolls and increase benefits to those who remain on them. The state, with only 1.7 million population, leads the nation in reducing its welfare lists.

According to high officials at the Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW), West Virginia's welfare program has been a leader in welfare innovation.

"In many respects," says Deputy Undersecretary Dr. Richard Nathan, "West Virginia is at the very forefront nationally in doing the kind of things that many federal agencies are contemplating in terms of how programs should operate under a reformed welfare system along the lines of pending federal legislation."

West Virginia's Method Generally considered a chief advocate of welfare reform himself, Nathan has made two trips to West Virginia—as have officials from 27 other states and several foreign countries, including Thailand—to see how West Virginia is doing it.

Latest HEW figures show West Virginia continuing as the national leader in reducing welfare caseloads. From June, 1971 to June, 1972, West Virginia lowered its welfare rolls 17.9 per cent. At the same time, benefits have been increased and expanded over the past three years.

How does a little state with a narrow-based coal economy manage to be the nation's welfare innovator? "We haven't used any really novel approach," said Welfare Commissioner Edwin F. Flowers, 42, a Phi Beta Kappa law graduate of West Virginia University. "But while our approach is not novel, I'm not sure that it's common."

The reduction basically has come about through a successful realization of the welfare ideal—finding jobs for welfare recipients, according to Flowers. Specifically, he cites these efforts: —Setting up an employment service unit within the welfare department to develop and secure job opportunities. "We did what later became federal law in setting aside part of our staff as the employment service unit," he said.

—Working hand-in-hand with the Department of Employment Security with the WIN (Work Incentive) program to find still other job opportunities and training programs.

—"We made mandatory as of July 1, 1971 that welfare mothers who did not have preschool children in their home were required to accept offered employment, providing there was day-care available," Flowers said. "Six months after we started doing it, it became federal law."

As early as July, 1970, the department designated eight state areas with high employment opportunities for women and established day-care centers.

—The state made a concerted effort to locate fathers who deserted their families and children to welfare rolls and in the past fiscal year collected $116,558 from them for support.

Impressive Statistics

The department's efforts to trim its caseload is reflected clearly in these statistics: In March, 1969, 14,000 families headed by unemployed fathers on welfare. By September, 1968, that figure had dropped to 7,200. In February, 1969 it stood at 5,376 and today it stands at 1,800. Many of those are working in state programs that do not count as full-time employment.

The declining caseload has enabled the state to boost benefits to the point clients now are receiving what Flowers terms "total basic human needs," which means cash grants and food stamps worth $270 a month for a family of four, up from last year's $182.

A $30 school clothing allowance was provided this fall for 44,000 school children in welfare families. An $8 allowance is included for soap, cleaning supplies and personal hygiene items. Recipients in the aged, blind and disabled categories also receive a telephone allowance.

What does Flowers himself think of his department's progress? "We knew the caseload could be reduced," he said, "but I have been pleasantly surprised. The measures of success has exceeded my own personal expectations."

More than 800 species of fish make the Gulf of California one of North America's richest fishing grounds.

Tails Stretched By Early Plows

CHICAGO (UPI)—Technology sometimes ran ahead of invention in the old days, too—and thereby stretched out many horse tails.

The plow, according to Encyclopaedia Britannica, was brought to England by the Romans. But apparently proper harness had not yet been invented, as some of the plows were hitched to a horse's tail. This custom existed in Ireland as late as 1634 when a law was passed to prohibit "plowing by the tayle." Fortunately by then better harness had been invented.

John L. Winstead, fail stop for stop sign, prayer for judgment continued on payment of cost.

WAC Plans Reenlisting During Free-Fall Jump

By JOHN LUMPKIN
Associated Press Writer
SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — The weather and a parachute named "Captain America" willing, pint-sized Nina Garcia hopes to "reup" today for four more years in the Army.

"He's been good to me," said Spec. 4 Garcia of her parachute, which she was to wear for her re-enlisting ceremony during a free-fall jump beginning more than two miles above nearby San Marcos.

Miss Garcia, 20, of Hollywood, Fla., was to be the first woman to re-enlist in such a manner, according to the Army, but she says, "I don't believe that much in women's lib."

"I don't really believe I'm a woman. I'm just a girl," she said. She's 4-foot-10 and weighs 95 pounds.

A ceremony such as hers can only last about a minute, since the participants are falling like rocks until their chutes are pulled and they drift apart. The Army planned to have an abbreviated oath administered by Air Force Capt. Ronald Diggs, who will make the jump with her. Diggs is a member of the same jumping club as Nina.

Why another four-year hitch?

"Ever since I started in skydiving, I wanted to be the best," she said, explaining that she hopes to be a member of the Army's crack skydiving team, the "Golden Knights" at

Ft. Bragg, N.C.

According to Nina, "Golden Knights" whom she has met want a member of the Women's Army Corps in their outfit, but WAC brass is against it. "I'm going to be one," she says.

Her re-enlistment brings with it a $4,000 cash bonus and a choice of one year's assignment, which she said will be Ft. Bragg.

Of her free-fall, she said, "I hope the 'Golden Knights' will latch on to this so they will take a look at me."

After the excitement, she returns to a desk job at Ft. Sam Houston's 5th Army Headquarters here as an intelligence analyst.

"It's terrible. There's not really that much intelligence to analyze," Nina said.

Free-falling, that's different. "I really think everyone should do it just once. It's just like nothing else," praised the girl who tried scuba diving and motorcycleing first.

And her mother, how does she feel about skydiving?

"She wants me to do whatever I want to," said Nina, "but she tells me she's getting gray hairs."

"She's pretty interesting, though. She has a belt in karate."

Arrest 'Hero' In Wreck Death

DETROIT (AP) — Although police say James Niemiec is "in a sense ... a hero," the 18-year-old youth faces manslaughter charges after saving three of his four passengers following an accident in which his car plunged into a canal.

The one passenger who Niemiec was unable to save was his best friend.

Niemiec was to be arraigned today in Detroit Recorder's Court on a manslaughter charge stemming from Tuesday's accident in which 18-year-old James Rusin drowned.

Police said Niemiec did not have time to get back to his friend, trapped in the back seat of the compact car, after pulling the three other passengers from the chilly canal. The three were all 17-year-old girls.

The maximum penalty for manslaughter is 15 years in prison.

Police said the car skidded into the canal which feeds into the Detroit River while Niemiec was driving across a snowy field. He was to pick up another passenger at Detroit's Bell Isle after an evening of touch football.

"Jimmy Rusin, my best friend! Oh God, where is he? Where is he?" was all Niemiec said during the ride to the police station after the accident, according to Gail Mikiciuk, one of the girls he pulled to safety.

Gail said Niemiec, a classmate of those in the car, managed to open his door while the car was sinking in the 20-foot-deep canal.

"If it wasn't for Jimmy I know I wouldn't have made it," she added.

Police said the charge of manslaughter includes "the charge negligent homicide for driving across the field."

But Niemiec was praised for rescuing the three by an officer in the Accident Prevention Bureau who said he was "a hero."

Michelle Forystek was the third girl Niemiec rescued. To get her, after pulling Miss Mikiciuk and Mariann Mylenek out, he dove back into the water.

Two Injured In Accidents

Two persons were reported injured in collisions investigated here yesterday by Greenville police officers.

Thomas Esaias Parris, 61, of Roanoke Rapids was reported injured when the car he was driving collided with a utility pole near the intersection of Dickinson Avenue and Memorial Drive about 2:40 p.m., causing an estimated $200 damage to the car and about $60 damage to the pole.

Turmoil In Shakeup Of USDA

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon's plans to shake up the federal bureaucracy are causing flutters in the usually docile Department of Agriculture.

Not even Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz, who campaigned vigorously to help Nixon on capture more than two-thirds of the farm vote Nov. 7, is certain whether his letter of resignation will be turned down.

The letters were requested of all Cabinet officers plus hundreds of other political appointees in high-grade federal jobs. A decision on which will be accepted is due by mid-December, according to the White House.

Meanwhile, Butz and half a hundred others in USDA could be working on borrowed time as they try to pare spending, organize crop goals, and formulate legislative programs for 1973.

Sylvester Pranger, personnel director of the Department, said Wednesday he knew of 63 USDA officials who had been asked to submit resignations.

Besides Butz, Undersecretary J. Phil Campbell and three assistant secretaries, the group includes the heads of a dozen agencies and high-ranking assistants holding political appointments.

Some top agency people who were considered career employees were exempted. Those include posts in technical units, such as the U.S. Forest Service and the Agricultural Research Service.

Pranger said about 56 other politically-named employees were not asked for letters. Those, he said, mainly are in lower pay grades and not in top policy positions.

A source close to Butz said he knew of no top level official who has decided to quit regardless of whether the White House accepts his resignation.

Butz, who draws a $60,000 a year salary, said last week he would stay if Nixon wants him and if the White House continues to support him.

"There are ways I can make a living besides this," Butz said. "Probably a damn sight better living than I'm making here."

The uncertainties over the top jobs came as Butz and others are trying to develop 1973

1973 LINCOLN CONTINENTAL

1972 LINCOLN CONTINENTAL

1971 LINCOLN CONTINENTAL

1970 LINCOLN CONTINENTAL

The classic look of Continental luxury. Eminently respected regardless of vintage.

Year after year, Continentals have retained their preeminence among American luxury cars. We believe that in 1973 the Continentals will deliver the most outstanding performance on the American road, just as they did in 1972 in riding and handling tests against the other luxury car. We have a fine selection of previously owned Lincoln Continentals, Mark IIs and Mark IIs in stock at this time—previously owned and proudly cared for, thus offering remarkable purchase values. Ownership of a previously owned Continental carries esteem and prestige often denied new cars of lesser stature. A number of our selections are equipped with a full range of luxury and convenience features. Air conditioning, full power and leather-with-vinyl upholstery are common among them. So before you settle for a lesser car—new or previously owned—consider the eminent good sense a Continental makes. THE CONTINENTALS.

At Columbia College: All We've Got Is Education

EDITOR'S NOTE—About 95 per cent of Columbia College's funds come from student fees. It has no endowment. There are no lawns or vine-covered buildings. Its campus is the City of Chicago. Yet its enrollment is seven times what it was nine years ago.

By C.G. McDANIEL
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — "All we've got is education. Literally. We've got nothing else."
Mirron "Mike" Alexandroff sits in his seventh-floor office and talks about the off-again, on-again life of Columbia College, now very much on-again.
In a difficult period for private institutions, Columbia College has defied the trend. Its enrollment has multiplied nearly 10 times in less than 10 years. There were 150 students in 1964. Today there are 1,015.
About 95 per cent of the college's funds comes from student fees. It has no endowment.

There are no sweeping lawns or vine-covered buildings. The center of the campus is four floors in a rundown building. Around this center is the rest of the campus—the city.
There are no dormitories to be vine-covered. The students, if they don't live at home, find their own housing, and they find their own medical care if they're sick.
There are no fraternities or sororities, no formal extra-curricular activities. What the students do in their free time is pretty much what they do in class, because what they do in class interests them.
The college, its casual president said, is "not the kind of prestige place that allows a mother or father to say my son or daughter goes to so and so."
"The emphasis is on education and not on appearance."
"Our current popularity—and it's considerable—is in running an institution that isn't repulsive to students," Alexandroff says.

It is characterized by "lack of pressure, lack of insistence on prescribed curricula," he adds.
And that, in a way, describes Alexandroff too. He's hardly the prescribed college president. No receptionist or secretary stops visitors to his office.
Alexandroff—"Mr. A." to the students—doesn't say so, but he's a large part of why students, and faculty, come to Columbia.
Modestly he relates that in 1963 several persons connected with the college decided "all those things we'd like to do in education were possible" because Columbia was at a low point which made innovative development possible. Alexandroff, a psychologist, became president.
The board of trustees, for the most part, reads like that of traditional private colleges.
If the trustees look somewhat traditional, the faculty look anything but.
No degrees are listed after their names in the college catalog, even though they have the degrees. Only 25 of the 100 or so teachers are full-time.

The college emphasizes the arts and communications. Its faculty includes local newspaper reporters and editors, poets, writers, painters, movie makers, photographers, dancers, and musicians.
The history of the college, and its name, goes back to 1890. It was established at the time the World Columbian Exposition was being planned for Chicago.
Originally it was a teachers college in the public speaking field and had its heyday around 1910. "By 1925 it was on distinctly evil times," says Alexandroff.

Following World War II, there was a large influx of students in the college's broadcast department, which brought a renewal to the college which lasted until the early 1960s.
Two of the college's most noted departments—motion pictures and photography—did not even exist as departments five or six years ago, Alexandroff points out. Now the motion picture department is among the top five in enrollment in the country, and the photography department is "in the top hand-

There is only one required course at the college. It is called "writing workshop" and is the center of the creative program. If the course could be compared with anything, it is probably most akin to the creative writing courses offered in other colleges for advanced students.
But this one is for beginning students, and it involves not only the written but the spoken word.

Films Add Interest To Learning Of Languages

By PAUL W. HARVEY JR.
EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — A new approach to teaching German has won widespread favor here. The conversational German series, "Guten Tag," or "Good Day," attracted some 3,000 students in one term last year.
The plan was developed by Helmut Plant, University of Oregon German professor who is now on leave as resident director of the Oregon Study Center at Stuttgart, Germany.
Christian Stehr, a German studying for his doctorate degree, is carrying on.
Stehr says that many students dislike foreign language studies because they don't learn to speak a language.

They just learn to read and write it.
Plant obtained a series of 26 15-minute films from the Bavarian Broadcasting system. Each film, in German, tells of some activity, like visiting a doctor or a hotel.
A vocabulary sheet of 25 to 30 words is distributed before each film is seen. After the film is shown, the classes are broken down into four-member discussion groups, each one supervised by an upperclass or graduate student.
Stehr said that the 200 students who took the course last year became rather proficient in speaking German, and that 70 per cent of them studied reading and grammar, too.

Some 250 townspeople from Eugene have taken the course.
His teaching method has been adopted by Eugene area high schools, and the university's French department has begun using it.
Says Stehr, "Those who take German in the Guten Tag program learn their grammar naturally like a child does. Interest in languages has been falling, and it can be built up by this teaching method."
Many students listen to the Guten Tag course without credit. There were 2,906 students who listened to the course in the winter term. That is 40 per cent of the students enrolled in all foreign language programs at Oregon.

SANTAS GO TO SCHOOL — An instructor at "Santa School" explains how to handle some of the challenges the students will meet when they encounter the kids in their Yule time job. The school for Santas and helpers is being conducted by Sears Roebuck & Co., for those who will be manning the stores in the Dallas-Fort Worth area. Booted, wigged and capped, the Santas got pointers on makeup, how to laugh like bowls full of jelly and what to tell the kids when they ask for the impossible. (AP Wirephoto)
