SAIGON (AP) — South Vietnam was reported today to have taken the position that North Vietnam will have to negotiate with it directly in Paris before any break-through can be made in concluding a peace agreement.

South Vietnamese sources, watching developments in Paris, also said that both sides will have to make some concessions.

The newspaper Tin Song, controlled by the Presidential Palace, said the dispatch to Paris of Hoang Duc Nha, President Nguyen Van Thieu's closest adviser, indicates that there will be significant developments in Paris in the coming days.

Sources said Nha will head a team of South Vietnamese negotiators dealing with Henry A. Kissinger when the secret talks between President Nixon's security adviser and Hanoi's Le Duc Tho resume Dec. 4. Nha also would be available to join the secret talks directly, should North Vietnam agree, the sources added.

Tin Song said it is widely known that the position of South Vietnam is that North Vietnam must withdraw its troops from the South, the demilitarized zone must be re-established at the 17th Parallel demarcation line and the position and responsibility of the so-called National Council of Reconciliation and Concord must be clearly defined.

Another Nazi Spotted?

COULD FIND 'ANGEL OF DEATH' — Tuvia Friedman, director of the Haifa Documentation Center on Nazi War Crimes, gestures as he declares that he knows the general whereabouts of Dr. Josef Mengele, and could capture the notorious Auschwitz "Angel of Death" if he had financial backing. Friedman, who figured in the capture of 250 Nazi war criminals including Adolf Eichmann, says that Mengele is living in Paraguay under protection of rich German Nazis and corrupt officials. ## Tax Relief Is Also Supported By Holshouser

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Gov.-Elect Jim Holshouser said Sunday booming state tax collections make it obvious that the General Assembly next year will be in a position to give some relief to Tar Heel taxpayers.

"It's only a question of how much," Holshouser told newsmen in a question and answer period that came after he spoke to GOP legislators attending an orientation session at the Quail Roost Conference Center.

While discussing the possibility of tax relief, Holshouser stated that state revenues for the present biennium are estimated to be up by 18 per cent but it appears the increase will be in the 25 to 30 per cent range.

Holshouser also repeated his backing of annual legislative sessions. He told the newsmen he feels there will be enough support for annual sessions for the 1973 General Assembly to put them into effect.

A reporter asked the governor-elect about the increased cost of annual sessions. Holshouser replied that increased effectiveness of the legislature would offset the increase costs.

Holshouser told the newsmen he still favors passage of a code of ethics for legislators. He said the House had twice approved such a code only to have it killed in the Senate. With some new faces in the 1973 Senate, things may be different, he said.

Culture Week Is Readied

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina's annual Culture Week gets under way in Raleigh Tuesday and will run through Saturday.

Conger, curator of the White House; the Sir Walter Raleigh Award, the Mayflower Award and the Christopher Crittenden Memorial Award will be presented following meetings of the North Carolina Literary and Historical Association Friday; and the Saturday program will include business session, workshops and lectures for the Society of Mayflower Descendants, the Historical Book Club, the North Carolina Poetry Society, and the North Carolina Society of County and Local Historians.

Romney To Quit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary George Romney announced today he will leave the Department of Housing and Urban Development as soon as his successor is confirmed by Congress.

Romney said he plans to create a coalition of concerned citizens which will define what he called life-and-death issues.

Romney released, at a news conference, his letter of resignation to President Nixon and the White House response in accepting it.

In a "Dear George" letter, Nixon said Romney's resignation is a "source of special regret to me, even though we have discussed your desire to leave the Cabinet for several months."

Nixon said that Romney had "contributed enormously not only of your time and energies, but also of that profound concern for the public good that has been the mark of your life and your career."

At the news conference, Romney gave scant detail of his future, saying that he would hold more meetings with the press as HUD secretary.

Bormann In Argentina?

NEW YORK (AP) — Martin Bormann, Adolf Hitler's deputy, lives on a vast ranch in northern Argentina where he was traced by that South American country's central intelligence agency, the Daily Express of London reported today.

The copyrighted story, by spy expert Ladislav Farago in collaboration with former Express foreign editor Stewart Steven, was distributed by the Chicago Tribune-New York Daily News syndicate in the United States.

Pictures of a heavy-set, balding man were published with the story in the Daily News. The newspaper said that Argentine intelligence agent Jose Velasco identified the man as Bormann, although he was traveling with a passport made out to Ricardo Bauer.

The pictures were taken when Velasco questioned the man at Checkpoint Mendoza near the Chilean border last Oct. 5, the newspaper said. It quoted Velasco as saying that he was sorry he had not arrested the man on his own initiative.

Farago and Steven said in their story that, in the last few weeks, Bormann had been traced to the Rancho Grande, a huge estate owned by Arndt von Bohlen-Halbach of the West German Krupp family, in the Province of Salta.

"We have at this moment incontrovertible evidence that Bormann himself is there," they quoted Velasco as saying. But they reported that Velasco had ruled out any attempt to capture the wanted war criminal at the ranch because he would "easily escape long before we could reach his present hideout."

The authors said Argentine Secret Service documents showed Bormann had lived in various South American countries under a number of names since 1948. Through investment of smuggled Nazi wealth, they said, he had become "an important factor in the economic life of South America."

In Vienna today, Simon Wiesenthal, the head of the Jewish documentation center, said he was "very, very skeptical" the man described in the Daily Express article would turn out to be Bormann.

Two Men Shot

Larry Donald Taft, 26, of 1700 South Evans St. was jailed here Saturday after two men were shot at 508 West 15th Street about 5:10 p.m.

According to Chief Glenn Cannon, Taft was charged with assault with a deadly weapon and placed under a $1,000 bond after Walter R. Taft, 59 and Billie Wooten, 17, were wounded following the shooting incident.

Both Taft and Wooten were treated for their injuries — Taft a wound in his right thigh and Wooten a wound in his right ankle — and released.

Chief Cannon said the wounds were apparently inflicted by a .22 caliber pistol.

FBI Checking Vote In Fourth

RALEIGH (AP) — A probe of alleged voting irregularities in the 4th Congressional District is being made by the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Charges of voting irregularities came from Republican Jack Hawke of Raleigh after he was narrowly defeated by Democrat Ike Andrews of Siler City.

The FBI's agent in charge at Charlotte, Ralph J. Rampton, refused to comment on the case Saturday except to confirm that the probe was under way.

Michigan Firm Will Set Up Plant Here

Tom McGuane Industries, a manufacturer of automotive components based in Lincoln Park, Michigan, announced today the creation of a new southern division to be located here.

The announcement was made in Lincoln Park by Tom McGuane, president of the company, who added that the new division will be known as F & E - South and will be the first venture for the company outside the state of Michigan.

According to Jim Horne, Executive Director of the Pitt County Development Commission, initial production will consist of automobile and truck gas tank caps in the former Training Building which the company has purchased from Greenville Industries along with a 24-acre tract on the Dail Farm industrial site. F & E is the symbol which appears on the filler caps. Production is scheduled to begin in early 1973 following renovations to the 11,000 sq. ft. building and installation of machinery and equipment.

The Greenville operation will be the company's fifth manufacturing plant, and its first outside the Detroit-Flint areas of Michigan. In addition to gas tank caps, Tom McGuane Industries also manufactures vacuum actuated motors, carburetor and distributor controls and other automobile anti-pollution devices.

In making the announcement, McGuane stated the attitude of the people whom he and his associates had met on their inspection trips to eastern North Carolina had as much to do with influencing their opinion to locate here as did the physical location.

Horne expressed appreciation to several groups and individuals for their active cooperation and assistance in securing this fine company. They included Charles P. Gaskins, Chairman of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners; Mayor S. Eugene West, who is also president of Greenville Industries; W. W. Speight, Pitt County attorney and attorney for Greenville Industries; Bruce Sugg, a director of Greenville Industries; Dr. W. E. Fulford, Jr., president of Pitt Technical Institute; Jim Hannan of the North Carolina Employment Security Commission in Greenville; George Shoe, president of the Greenville Chamber of Commerce and Merchants Association and R. W. Howard and Dr. J. W. Pou of Wachovia Bank and Trust Company. Also instrumental in providing assistance were Boyce Barwick of Winterville Machine Works, Henry Flake of Florence-Mayo Company, David Speir of Bethel Manufacturing Company and Albert Calloway of the North Carolina Division of Commerce and Industry.

In addition to McGuane, other officials of the company include Don Milne, Executive Vice President and Ben Tefend, Treasurer.

GOP Selects Leadership At Two-Day Meet

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's Republican legislators Sunday chose Sen. Hamilton C. Horton Jr., R-Forsyth, as the chairman of their joint caucus.

In an election that came at the end of a two-day orientation session at the Quail Roost Conference Center, the Republicans also chose Sen. Charles Taylor, R-Transylvania, as Senate minority leader and Rep. Hunter Warlick, R-Catawba, as House minority leader.

Both Warlick and Taylor indicated to newsmen later that the Republican legislative delegation will collectively support the program of incoming GOP Gov. Jim Holshouser.

Others elected were Sen. Phil Kirk, R-Rowan, secretary of the joint caucus; Rep. Ed M. McKnight, R-Forsyth, House whip, Sen. George Rountree, R-New Hanover, Senate whip, and Rep. Fran Tomlin, R-Cabarrus, secretary to the House delegation.

During the two-day meeting, the GOP legislators had heard from a number of state officials on such topics as the budget, higher education, highways and the environment.

Holshouser urged the legislators in a brief talk to join him in the challenge of bringing a change to state government which he said the voters had mandated in the Nov. 7 election.

"I think the challenge before us is that months from now people still feel that they made the right decision," said Holshouser, the first republican elected to the governor's office in this century.

Holshouser took no part in choosing the legislative leaders, saying that "whomever you choose, I'm sure I will be able to get along with."

Charlotte Bank Is Robbed Today

CHARLOTTE (AP)—The Albenarle Road branch of the First Citizens Bank and Trust Co. was robbed today. Details were not immediately available.

It was the 25th bank robbery in the Charlotte area this year and the 66th in North Carolina.

In seconding Warlick's election, Rep. Gilbert Boger, R-Davie, said Warlick had pledged not to take a leading part on either side of such issues as liquor-by-the-drink, abortion and capital punishment.

Warlick later confirmed this saying, "These particular types of things are not partisan issues."

Outbreak In Brig

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The Navy said today that it is questioning 33 sailors about two disturbances Sunday at its Camp Allen Correctional Center.

A Navy spokesman said the first incident began shortly after noon Sunday as a fight between one black and one white inmate, and about six other prisoners reportedly became involved.

When Marine sentries attempted to quell the fight, the spokesman said, a total of 12 black prisoners rebelled and took over a dormitory section. This disturbance was quieted and the rebelling prisoners were locked in individual cells, the Navy said.

The situation seemed under control, the Navy said, until several confined inmates set fire to the mattresses in their cells. The prisoners were taken to another dormitory section but took it over at about 6 p.m., the spokesman said.

Navy officials said they had the situation under control there by 8 p.m., with black and white prisoners then lodged in separate sections.

The Navy said a total of 32 blacks, about 75 per cent of the inmates, and one white sailor were locked in separate cells. It said an investigation began today with questioning of these men.

Mayors Told Up To Them

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN Associated Press Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A liberal Democratic mayor from the South and a moderate Republican from the Midwest today told a national conference of urban officials that the passage of federal revenue sharing has put the initiative for solving urban problems back in city hall.

The annual meeting of the National League of Cities, representing 15,000 cities and towns, opened with keynote speeches by league President Sam Massell, mayor of Atlanta, and Mayor Richard G. Lugar of Indianapolis.

Massell said that federal revenue sharing, the first federal aid to cities without strict controls on its use, marked the "beginning of a new era for municipal government in the United States."

"Revenue sharing," Massell said, "gives real meaning to the rhetoric of decentralization, and it also shifts responsibility for decision-making from the federal government to local officials...."

"Jurisdictions are finding a need to exchange powers; financial resources must be shared," Massell said. "Elected officials must work in partnership at, and across, all levels, and then we shall fully cope with every crisis."

If the emphasis on government reorganization rather than increased federal spending was somewhat surprising from Massell, it was expected from Lugar, who has consolidated city-county government in Indianapolis, a concept the Nixon administration has strongly advocated as a necessity for solving urban problems.

Citing federal revenue sharing and the President's proposals for reorganizing Cabinet departments that deal with urban affairs and consolidating urban aid programs, Lugar said, "Current boundary lines of most cities are unrealistic geographically, politically and economically. Urban systems based on these boundary lines will not succeed regardless of how much money is injected from any source and how much political favor is bestowed from any source."

In a third keynote speech, Councilman Tom Bradley of Los Angeles took a view which is more familiar at mayors' conferences.

"Revenue sharing is a good beginning, a concept integral to any sound urban policy," Bradley said.

"But it is no substitute for other strong and continuous federal support and commitment to American cities."

Mystery Sub Escapes Fjord

OSLO (AP) — The Defense Command says the mystery object trapped in the Sognefjord for the last two weeks — presumably a foreign submarine — is believed to have left Norwegian territorial waters and the search for it will be reduced gradually.

A communique said visual and technical observations gathered since the search began indicated a foreign submarine was in the fjord but its nationality was not established.

Boards Of Adjustment To Meet On Thursday

A total of eight items are to be considered by the City-County Board of Adjustments and the Greenville Board of Adjustments at their meetings Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in City Hall.

On the joint agenda, two items are scheduled. One is a public hearing on a request for special use permit and a request for variance by David T. Greer. The request concerns the construction of a rest home on the north side of State Road 1529, northeast of the intersection of State Road 1529 and N. C. Highway 30. The property is zoned RA-20. The second joint agenda item is on adoption of rules of procedure.

Six items are on the Greenville Board of Adjustments schedule. Under old business the first request is for a special use permit by Gilbert's Automotive Clinic to use a portion of the structure at 1604 Dickinson Avenue as an auto repair shop. The property is zoned downtown commercial fringe. The second old business item is a request for variance by Earl Simmons to alter a structure at 2301 May Street. The property is zoned downtown commercial fringe.

Under new business, three public hearings are scheduled.

The first deals with a request for special use permit by Mrs. Myrtle Carter to construct an accessory building at 1308 South Cotanche Street in an area zoned downtown commercial fringe. The second is a request for variance by Mrs. Mamie Perkins to construct a duplex apartment at 914 Douglas Avenue on property zoned R-6 residential. The final of the three public hearings is a request for variance by J. J. Perkins to construct a duplex apartment at 916 Douglas Avenue in an area zoned R-6.

The final agenda item is to set a date for the December meeting.

Planning-Zoning Meetings Set Wednesday

Three items for the Joint City-County Planning and Zoning Commission meeting and four items for the Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission meeting are on schedule for the November meeting of the two boards on Wednesday at 8:00 p.m.

On the joint agenda, the items to be considered are all requests for rezoning. The first is a request on the J.T. Williams property 800 feet east of the intersection of East Tenth Street and U.S.

264 east bypass, on the south side of East Tenth Street, for rezoning from RA-20 to highway commercial. The second, a request by O.E.

Whichard, is for property on the east side of North Greene Street adjacent to the Carolina Leaf Tobacco company property. The request is for multiple zoning, involving several different zoning requests. The final request is by the Barnhill Contracting Company for property located at the southeast intersection of U.S. 264 bypass (Greenville Boulevard northeast) and State Road 1534, from RA-20 to highway commercial.

On the Greenville Commission agenda, items to be taken up include a final plat on Oakgrove Estates, Section II; a preliminary plat for Min-Kin Courts, located on East Fourteenth Street across from Easthaven Subdivision. The property is zoned for R-9 usage; a presentation of tentative plan for the Southside Urban Renewal Area, Project Number N.C. R-134; and a decision on the date of the December meeting which this year is due on December 27.

Couple Exchanges Vows On Sunday Afternoon

Parkers Chapel Free Will Baptist Church was the scene of the wedding ceremony of Miss Brenda Faye Harris and Frazier McLean Edwards II Sunday afternoon at three o'clock.

The Rev. Harley Brown, pastor of Parkers Chapel, and the Rev. Lester Earl Sutton of Georgetown, S.C., performed the double ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Earl Harris of T. 6, Greenville, and Mr. and Mrs. Frazier McLean Edwards of Raleigh.

A program of wedding music was presented by Phillip Cooper, music director at Parkers Chapel, organist, and Phillip Cooper and Mrs. Lorenza Stox, soloists. Cooper sang "The Twelfth of Never" and "Love Is Surrender" and Mrs. Stox sang "Each For The Others" and "Just A Closer Walk With Thee." Randy Johnston of Greenville was guitarist for the ceremony.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a white velvet formal length gown designed by her aunt, Mrs. John Tugwell of Farmville. The empire waistline gown was complemented by a ruffled V-neckline and fitted ruffled sleeves.

Her mantilla, designed by Priscilla of New York, was trimmed in Venise lace and flowed chapel length. The bride carried a white orchid accented with white ribbon and baby's breath, mounted on a lace covered bible.

Miss Diane Richardson of High Point, niece of the bride, was honor attendant. She wore a floral polyester crepe formal length gown fashioned with an empire waistline complemented by a royal blue velvet bolero and matching velvet hat. She carried an open New Testament tucked in royal blue velvet accented by velvet streamers and white pom poms. The bouquets were made by the bride's mother.

Bridesmaids were Karen Cowart and Debra Tetterton, both of Greenville, and Jean Richardson of High Point, sister of the bride. Junior bridesmaids were Carol Richardson of High Point, niece of the bride, Shelia Wainright of Greenville, niece of the bride, and Donna Edwards of Ayden, daughter of the bridegroom.

The attendants wore floral polyester crepe formal length empire gowns matching that of the honor attendant. Their gowns were complemented with olive green boleros and matching velvet hats. Their open New Testaments were tucked in olive green velvet and were designed identical to that of the maid of honor.

Flower girl was Michelle Sutton of Georgetown, S.C. niece of the bride. She wore a floral gown with an empire waistline and a matching velvet skirt and carried a traditional basket with pom poms.

Stephen Earl Stox of Goldsboro, nephew of the bride, was ring bearer.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Broughton High School, Raleigh, and attended High Point College. He is employed by Civil Service and Army Reservist.

For traveling, the bride changed into a three-piece ensemble in shade of lavender and wore matching accessories.

Reception
Immediately following the ceremony, a reception was given by the bride's parents in the church fellowship hall.

Assisting at the reception were Mrs. Paul Harris, Mrs. James Buck, Mrs. Russell Wichard, Mrs. D.R. House and Mrs. J.T. Roebuck.

Decorations in shades of green and blue were used to carry out the theme of the wedding.

On Saturday night, a rehearsal dinner was given by the parents of the bridegroom honoring the wedding party and their families. The buffet-style dinner was held in the fellowship hall of the church.

Mrs. Hilda Buck and Mrs. Melba Jones were hostesses. Assisting in serving were Cheryl Buck, Janet Jones, Shirley Jones, Kenneth Tetterton, and Danny Gonzales.

Following dinner, entertainment was presented by friends of the bridal couple, who assisted in serving.

To clean fragile Christmas tree ornaments, place them in the sink on a rubber drain mat. Add warm water and a handful of baking soda. Let them soak, then dry with a soft towel. The bi-carb will clean without leaving a dulling finish.

Doctors Regain Popularity As Medical Men Change Images

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures

Doctors of tomorrow may be rated by their bedside manner, not the number of pills they dispense.

Medical schools are trying "to revive the family doctor," observed Dr. Richard I. Feinbloom, director of the Family Medicine Program at Harvard Medical School and Medical Director of the Family Health Program at the Children's Hospital Medical Center in Boston. His own program at Harvard is working in that direction, he explains.

Feinbloom was discussing a new book, "Pregnancy, Birth and the Newborn Baby," in which he and other doctors had contributed their expertise for the children's medical center as part of its continuing education program. The book also offers advice on how to choose a doctor for your baby.

New doctors may also relate to personal problems and know more about nutrition, which has been bypassed more or less in medical schools, he says.

Today's medical students "want everything out in the open" and he finds teaching them "keeps you on your toes." He is often quite tired at the end of the day "coping with all the new awareness." But he is highly in favor of it.

"Medical opinion is swinging toward a minimization of medication and anaesthesia in pregnancy and childbirth which is beginning to be treated as the natural thing it is. As doctors apply what has been learned about stresses in pregnancy to tensions of daily living, more people will look for causes of problems and not cover them up with drugs," he says.

There are legitimate uses for drugs—for example, tranquilizers for mental patients—but the average person is inundated with advertisements suggesting instant cures for every ill, he says.

Drugs may mask the ills of society as well as the personal problems of patients. Forced retirement, boredom and family rejection of the elderly are human stresses that require responsible solutions rather than the administration of drugs, he comments.

Physicians must take the lead in educating the public to resist the prescription pad, he feels, adding that steps in that direction already have been taken by several medical societies in declaring moratoriums on amphetamines.

The issue is not that you don't take medication or anaesthesia, he emphasizes, but that it should be used more selectively. Medication and anaesthesia may be required in pregnancy because something might go wrong, facts discussed in the hospital's book in chapters on diseases and conditions that complicate pregnancy.

Though those chapters might have a startling impact on the average mother-to-be, they are justified because it is better "to know the truth than to listen to old wives' tales," he says. In writing the complete guide for parents and parents-to-be, the doctors felt it was important to cover anything people might worry about, "and we didn't think that everybody would read everything in the book," Feinbloom observes.

The book offers advice on drugs in pregnancy, with the observation that "too many pregnant women take drugs for minor aches and pains."

Feinbloom has been a physician 12 years and his career has broadened to include teaching, writing, researching and administrative work. Other contributors to "Pregnancy, Birth and the Newborn Baby" include experts in obstetrics, pediatrics, psychiatry, psychology and social work. In one chapter anthropologist Margaret Meade discusses childbirth in a changing world.

LONDON (WNS) — Widow May Hynds has refused to pay the $10 bill for the repair of her gas stove. "I supplied all of the parts during the three visits of the repairman," she protested. The parts included one paper clip, one needle and a safety pin. Worse, the stove has broken again, and Widow Hynds has been told that she must wait a month for another visit. The Southeastern Gas Boards has offered this compromise: "We shall bill her for only one visit."

velvet dresses and headpieces. The flower girl's dress was shocking pink and she carried pink carnations.

The mother of the bride wore a full-length dress of maroon velvet with silver white accessories and a corsage of white mums. lesson of my life."

At present, 102 garden and townhouse apartments have been built for low income housing, with 110 more units under way in the $4.5 million project. But it's just the beginning.

A private housing project, a church center for youth, and the construction of playing fields along the river are in the offing for Mary Scranton.

"We're very lucky, Bill and I," she insists. "Few people can have things cleared away for them so they can begin from scratch. Those four years in Harrisburg were a stage of growth in which we learned talents we can put to use here."

Yet Mary Scranton isn't entirely content. "I truly hope I haven't found my place. It would be the beginning of saying that I've done it all. And, actually, I'm just starting."

Mary Scranton Builds Homes For Others

Five years ago Mary Scranton came back home to help rebuild and redevelop this region that was still struggling to shake nearly a half century of economic depression. Today, she is still deeply involved in a project for the redevelopment of 10 acres of slum housing.

It began after her husband, William, completed his term as governor of Pennsylvania, and after his dream of becoming president of the United States was shattered in 1964 by losing the Republican nomination to Barry Goldwater.

When he vacated the executive mansion at Harrisburg and brought his family back to their country homestead, Scranton vowed never to seek elective office again.

"When it was over, I realized that I had the golden opportunity of having everything cleared away for me, of being released from all honorary titles and associations," Mrs. Scranton, now 54, says. "I had time to find just one thing to do and to give myself to it and become an expert."

It was during that period of post state capitol "decompression" that Scranton Neighbors, Inc., came into Mary Scranton's life, and took her into the four-year project for the redevelopment of slum housing in the heart of this third largest city in Pennsylvania.

The plan to rebuild that part of Adams Avenue had lain dormant for nearly 20 years. Originally, leaders of the Jewish Community Center, the Catholic Diocese and two Protestant churches approached the Scrantons for help. But Mrs. Scranton sought to fend for herself, sank $1,000 into the nonprofit project to create a corporation, and became vice president in the process.

From there, she and her associates generated the dream of "Vallery," an assemblage of ideas and specific plans for creating a better way of life for the people of the city.

"Ah, the dreams," she says. "A lot really haven't gotten any place at all, and I've learned more about what won't work than what will."

"The sideliights have been most important for me. I know now about people, that they need a one to one relationship, that they need to be treated as human beings."

Abby, Your Inspiration Is Aid To Volunteers

By Abigail Van Buren

(© 1972 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd. Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: I just heard you speak to a packed ballroom in St. Petersburg, Fla., for Goodwill and I want to thank you for saying, "I've been doing volunteer work all my life!"

Oh, Abby, how I pray that because YOU do it, others will be inspired to do it, too.

If everyone, young, old, rich, poor, educated or not, would give one day a month (or even an hour), it would make such a happy difference in their lives as givers and would also enrich the programs of civic, religious and "helping" organizations tremendously.

Florida is well known for its retirement advantages—yet all over St. Petersburg men and women are sitting alone in self-pity because they are just plain bored. [As they say, "waiting to die." That's pathetic, considering how much easier they could make life for someone who is "waiting to live."]

And since when is "age" an excuse for not giving time or talent? Many star volunteers are in their 60s and 70s.

Today, so many of our young people are talking "LOVE." Well, kids, how about putting the "bod" where the mouth is? Nursing homes, hospitals, mental institutions, rehabilitation centers, etc., could use volunteers.

Abby, you mentioned that Goodwill needs volunteers to write letters for the handicapped, take them shopping, to doctors, or therapy, and even to an occasional movie or for a drive. Volunteers can answer the telephone, type, file, address envelopes, or teach simple English pronunciation to those with speech defects. The list is overwhelming.

I could go on and on. I only wanted to thank you from the bottom of my heart for encouraging people to do for others.

INSPIRED

DEAR INSPIRED: Your letter is far more inspirational than what I said in St. Petersburg. Thank you for writing.

DEAR ABBY: I'm having problems with my husband. I am 23 and he is 26, and we've been married for five years and have three children. He knows I don't like it when he makes a fuss over other girls, but he does it just to make me jealous.

Another problem is that he forces himself on me and if I struggle he ties me to the bed with ropes. If he wasn't my husband this would be classified as rape. Abby, things just can't go on like this. When he's nice, he's sweet as sugar, but when he's mean he frightens me half to death.

He also has a seizure disorder which he is being treated for. We are on welfare because of his sickness, but he cashes his welfare check and gives all the money to me, so I can't complain about that. Can you help me?

LOTS OF PROBLEMS

DEAR LOTS: If you haven't discussed your husband's sadistic behavior with his doctor, you should. The Welfare Information Service can put you in touch with a Family Service Agency. They offer family counseling, and the fee is nominal. If you can't persuade your husband to go with you—go alone, but DO go.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is not knowing how to introduce my boy friend. He is a doctor.

Do I say, "Mrs. Brown, I would like you to meet Dr. Smith"? Or do I just omit the "doctor" and introduce him as "Mister"?

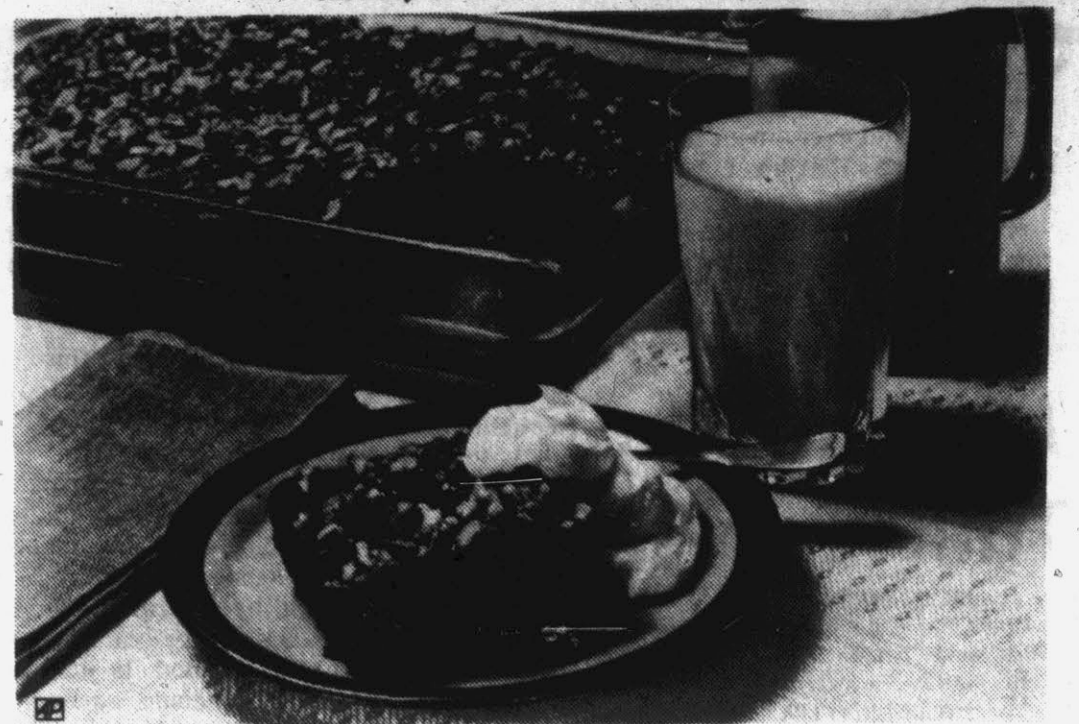

I always feel so foolish introducing him as "Doctor." It sounds like I'm bragging.

UNSURE

DEAR UNSURE: He has earned the title, and should be introduced as "Dr."—not "Mister." But if you are self-conscious about it, simply introduce him as "John Smith." They'll soon find out he's a doctor.

Problems? Trust Abby. For a personal reply, write to ABBY, BOX 69700, L. A., CALIF. 90000 and enclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

MARCHWOOD CLOSE, England (WNS) — Lynda Hudspeth, 19, hired a furniture van to get her groom to the church on time for their wedding. "My fiance, Tony Fitzpatrick, was in the hospital with a broken leg," explained the bride. "Doctors said that he could not be moved from his bed, so I hired the van to move Tony, bed and all to the church. Then his best man and some other fellows trundled the bed down the aisle. It was a wedding never to forget."

Challenging Year For The GOP

There is an excitement in the state Republican Party this year that has not been seen for many a year.

Thus the choosing of GOP leaders for the upcoming Legislative session is creating far more interest than it has in previous years.

Moving From Talk To Action

By BRYAN HAISLIP
CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — What would happen if concern for the environment were translated from talk to action?

The North Carolina Jaycees aim to find out with a three-year project which could change the landscape of the state and provide a working model for the nation.

BRYAN HAISLIP

"Lots of people are talking," said Fred Morrison, state Jaycee president. "In government, industry, education and the general public I find there is a willingness to tackle problems of the environment."

"We want to get hands busy in the 240 communities where there are Jaycees chapters, with specific programs of action to deal with local needs."

The kick-off is a four-day Conference on the Environment here, Nov. 30—Dec. 3, sponsored by the Jaycees and the University of North Carolina School of Public Health.

It will be a searching survey of what is wrong with the environment, factors which are downgrading its quality, and proposed alternatives to set things right. A slate of experts from North Carolina and Washington will speak on a wide range of environmental topics. Workshops and special interest sessions will permit further exploration.

Dr. Jesse L. Steinfeld, U.S. Surgeon General, will address the Saturday evening banquet session.

Top-Level Support
Two former Jaycees, the present and the incoming governors, have endorsed the conference and urged public participation.

Gov. Bob Scott promised the cooperation of state government agencies in the field of pollution abatement and environmental quality.

Gov.-elect James E. Holshouser Jr., expected to attend at least one of the sessions, praised Jaycee leadership and pledged his support.

The Tar Heel Jaycees, a civic organization of some 12,000 membership from coast to mountains, indicated its commitment to the goal of a healthy environment at a rally last year.

President Morrison said the conference is the logical next stage, as the educational catalyst for the action program which is to follow.

Financial support for the effort, he pointed out, has been secured from industry, private foundations, state and federal government.

Model For Other States
North Carolina will be the first state to undertake a program on such a broad scale, with joint sponsorship of a national civic organization and a university school of public health, but it may not be the only one.

High national Jaycees representatives will observe the conference, Morrison reported, with the view to recommending that Jaycees in the other 49 states use it as a model.

The conference brings together familiar resources in a novel fashion, said Al Fanusizin, state director of the Chapel Hill-Carrboro Jaycees and chairman for the conference steering committee.

The bold reach for the program is "the intelligent management of our most precious resource—our environment," he explained. "The conference is a grammar school for Jaycees, industry, government and educator. If the effort is to succeed, then the focus must be: to share information with each other—generously; to develop a set of common denominators that will permit the citizenry of the North State to work together; and to use these denominators to plan for coordinated action."

Conference co-directors are Dr. Frederic Pfander and Joel Vickers, both on the UNC School of Public Health faculty.

Getting It Together
"No single group knows exactly what is wrong with our environment," said Dr. Pfander. "And no single group seems to know exactly what to do about it. There is tremendous interest in environmental clean-up, but no coordination between efforts; just scattered groups that exist in communities that are part of no statewide program."

"We expect this campaign across North Carolina to bring it all together and make things happen."

In the aftermath of the conference, Jaycee chapters are expected to take the initiative in determining local environmental needs. Through negotiations and community action, Dr. Pfander said, each can be given technical assistance for its particular problems.

The kinds of community targets, he observed, may be long-range land use planning, improved water quality, junkyard clearance, highway and waterway cleanups, noise control and improved waste treatment facilities.

"There has been much emotionalism and arm-waving in connection with environmental clean-up and planning, but little factual information. This will be the role of University environmentalists—to provide factual, technical information—after a community decision has been made on what needs to be done," he said.

The GOP increased its Legislative strength by 40 percent in the recent elections. The 1973 General Assembly will see 15 senators and 35 house members from the Republican party. This, of course, is far short of a majority and the Democrats, as they have for decades, will still be in firm control of the Legislature.

What makes this year so exciting for Republicans is that the top man in state government will be the newly elected Republican governor, Jim Holshouser.

A caucus was held in Durham this past weekend to choose the minority leaders in the House and Senate. Before the caucus was held Gov.-elect Holshouser sent word to the delegation that he would be neutral in the leadership race.

He said he had informed the entire delegation that he trusted its judgement to choose minority leaders he could work with.

The Republicans in the General Assembly next year will have the most important role that they have had in many years. It will be their job to win votes for programs which the governor proposes.

This, of course, means they will have to form alliances with various Democratic blocs in order to get the programs which the Republican governor wants approved. It obviously will be a year when Republicans will be a real force in the General Assembly.

Death Penalty Support Sees Apparent Growth

It seems that public support for the death penalty is actually increasing in our country.

The Gallup Poll shows that this month 57 percent of the public supports the death penalty, with 32 percent opposed and 11 with no opinion.

As recently as 1966 there were only 42 percent favoring the death penalty, 47 percent opposed and 11 percent with no opinion.

Without doubt, the public's hard line on this issue stems from recent bizarre and senseless crimes.

Resentment In Ranks Of GOP

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON

Resentment is now coming to a slow boil among congressional Republicans over what they regard as President Nixon's insulting indifference to the party's congressional wing during the long, secret sessions at Camp David to draft his drastic reorganization plans.

The rising hostility, in truth, stems partly from the President's spectacularly successful reelection campaign during which many Republican candidates felt ignored by the self-centered—and highly effective—non-campaign conducted from the Oval Office.

Such hostility, which we reported in detail last week, may well be sprinkled with sour grapes. But the presidential aloofness and remoteness from the congressional wing of his party, now so evident in the recesses of Camp David, has no such ingredient.

If this process is allowed to continue, one predictable though shocking possibility is that Mr. Nixon's wholesale reorganization of his executive branch of government will encounter a wall of Republican resistance on Capitol Hill. Just such a forecast is now being made privately by a powerful Cabinet member.

With the new Congress firmly in the grip of the Democrats, anything short of total Republican support for Mr. Nixon's still-unfinished reorganization plans could prove fatal. Yet, the President has still not confided even the broad outline of his reorganization to a single congressional leader of his own party.

In private conversations with White House aides, this tendency to take his own party for granted as a sort of royal prerogative has angered some of Mr. Nixon's leaders in Congress. One leader has warned the White House that Republican members of Congress would be "far more independent" than the old in dealing with lame-duck President Richard Nixon.

Likewise, Rep. John Anderson of Illinois, chairman of the House Republican Conference, told NBC's Bill Monroe on the "Today" show last Friday that a "far greater degree of consultation" between the White House and Congress is now essential. Congress, he said, is "particularly sensitive" these days about its declining prestige, as the executive branch grows stronger.

Yet, despite these veiled warnings of trouble ahead, Mr. Nixon has not received a single Republican leader for serious 1973 strategy talks, either at the White House or the presidential retreat at Camp David. Except for a happy birthday call to Sen. Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania, the Republican Senate leader, there is reason to believe the President has not even spoken to his legislative lieutenants.

Moreover, Republican congressional leaders have been scanning the President's appointment schedule with meticulous care these last two weeks; they have yet to find a single visitation to Camp David by William Timmons, chief

Number One Hangup

WASHINGTON — The subject of sex in marriage is no longer taboo, and more and more institutes have been set up to help married couples find sexual happiness together.

Dr. Henrico Belladonna, who runs the Clinic of Martial Bliss in Spring Valley, told me, "One of the big discoveries we psychologists have made is that not all sexual problems in today's marriages can be attributed to fear. Our studies indicate that fear now ranks only second as a reason for sexual hang-ups."

"What is No. 1?" I asked. "I'll show you," he said. "I have a couple coming in now. Why don't you go over and sit in that chair and observe what happens."

A man and wife entered nervously and the doctor asked them to be seated.

Dr. Belladonna waited for them to say something. Finally the husband spoke up. "Doctor, we've come to your institute as a last resort. Our sex life seems to be on the rocks and we don't know what to do about it."

Dr. Belladonna said, "I would like to ask you a few questions. How often do you have relations each week?" "Never," the wife said. "Never?" Dr. Belladonna asked.

ART BUCHWALD

"It isn't that we don't want to," the husband said. "It's just that we don't seem to have the time any more."

"I see," said Dr. Belladonna. "Well, let's look into that. What's wrong with Monday night?"

"Oh," said the husband. "We can't do it on Mondays. That's the ABC Football Game of the Week. It's never over until midnight."

"You prefer watching football to making love?" Dr. Belladonna asked.

"That's a stupid question," the husband said angrily. "Doesn't everybody?"

"Not everybody," Dr. Belladonna said. "Don't you find it strange that you prefer Howard Cosell to your own wife?"

"Are you trying to say I have homosexual tendencies?" the husband yelled.

"I didn't say that at all," Dr. Belladonna replied. "But it is true you'd rather watch 22 men knock each other down for three hours than make love to your wife."

Second Chance Notes

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — Everyone says at one time or another, "If I just had it all to do over again, I'd . . ."

Everyone thinks he knows what he'd do if he had a second go-round with life. But since we don't know too many people who have had that experience, we don't know for sure what they'd do.

Personally, I feel I'd do again some of the things I'd done before, avoid repeating others, and do some things I hadn't got around to doing the first time.

For example, I doubt that I'd ever —
Commit bigamy, murder or parsimony.
Learn to take snuff or chew tobacco.
Sit on a flagpole or participate in a six-day bike race.
Go to more than one war.
Become a president of the United States.
Drink a martini through a straw.

HAL BOYLE

Smoke cigarettes.
Covet my neighbor's wife.
Fill a plate more than once at any single meal.
Return in the form of a woman.

Go into politics.
Study more than one dead language.

Get a Ph.D. degree.
Sell or buy stock in oil wells or gold mines.

Believe everything I read about Santa Claus or had been told by Uncle Sam.

Hold a grudge against a friend.

Spend a single night in jail or two nights in a row in Hollywood.

Waste much money on hair-growing tonics.

Find strange blondes at cocktail parties exciting.
Deliberately break another man's rice bowl.

Those are the things I wouldn't do if I had it all to do over again. What are the things, old or new, that I would want to do? Well, I'd at least try to—Learn to drive a motor car, fly a plane, sail a boat.

From the age of six months on, see my dentist twice a year.

Travel through at least 101 countries.

Feel at ease in one modern language besides English.

Be well known in my neighborhood for having at least one recognized virtue.

Spend more time gawking than talking, thinking than drinking.

Stay awake all one moonlit night in the Taj Mahal.

Either marry one red-haired girl or have romantic affairs with three or four.

Do something sometime that somehow would cause someone somewhere to name a small library after me.

Learn to play well a musical instrument—any one except the harp.

Call in a fire alarm in time to save a life.

Meet more interesting odd-balls and fewer dull snobs and over-stuffed shirts.

Find some way to exercise my muscles more and my vanity less.

Strength For Today

DON'T GET DISCOURAGED
Creative living is possible for every one of us. We may not be able to write books or plays, to paint great pictures or to make speeches that call forth the praise of our contemporaries. But creative living is a possibility for us all.

A cliché that arose some years ago ran something like this: "Every day in every way I'm getting better and better." There is a lot of slush and false hopes in a statement like that but there is truth in it if we make it work. The alternative is that every day we are slipping a bit lower. Financiers tell us that nineteen out of twenty people are living on principal in addition to whatever income they may have. The end of such a policy will be that some day they will have neither principal nor income. The only person that can correct such a situation is ourself.

Many people think that they fail in their professional life or in their business life. Most of us fail in our personal lives. At the end of the year we blink our eyes and say that things have been on the down and down for twelve months instead of on the up and up.

The thing we have to avoid, however, is discouragement. We are never licked until we admit we are. If we know our lives are below par we can take off our coats and roll up our sleeves and get busy. Creative living (improvement) is always possible.

Return Of The Trading Stamps

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Like a deposed political party that senses a change in the climate of opinion, the trading stamp industry is planning a triumphal return to the market place, scene of a costly retreat two years ago.

The return, the renaissance, the second generation — all terms widely used by stamp people — is expected to be accompanied by innovations in product distribution that, if successful, will be revolutionary.

"We have millions of stamp customers waiting for the return," said Curtis Carlson, head of Gold Bond stamps. "Many have books partially filled and are looking for additional outlets to continue their savings."

Irving Axelrod, head of Big

Bonus stamps and chairman of the Trading Stamp Institute, insists that "most so-called discount stores will be giving stamps in the future." Asked why, another stamp man said, "People like them."

But there is more to it than that. When stores began dropping stamps, causing the industry to shrink from annual volume of $1 billion to around $750 million, they almost invariably went in for discounting.

This, said William Preis, head of Triple S stamps, is what they should have been doing anyway, simply because that is the nature of a supermarket, which generally accepts no credit cards, requires self-service, makes no deliveries and so on.

Many stores, however, are finding price cutting disastrous.

Some are in serious financial trouble. In many instances, stores are selling below cost, and so feel that attracting customers that way is to court disaster.

Thus, the trading stamp people feel, he mood is ripe for their reappearance, not only in the conventional manner, in which stamps are passed out by the retailer, but in cooperation with manufacturers too.

Under the latter system, expected to be common by next spring, the manufacturer of supermarket items imprints on the package a certain number of points that can be redeemed for the purchaser's favorite trading stamp.

As before, the stamps will be convertible into cash, but at a very low return. Most profitably, the customer would trade them in for items at the redemption center, which operates on the principle of big volume, low overhead.

But now the stamp companies aren't satisfied with simply distributing goods in exchange for stamps. Understanding as well as anyone that the secret of a successful discount operation is high volume, they are seeking more business.

Since they have warehouses already stocked with items for redemption, why not sell some of the same items for cash? Some companies, such as Preis', already are doing so, through catalogues, and the response has been strong.

"This is the biggest thing to hit retailing in 20 years," said Preis, who also is senior vice president of the Grand Union Co., a supermarket chain. "Expenses are cut to the bone; nobody can undersell us."

Scott Lists 4-Year Accomplishments

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Bob Scott listed accomplishments of his administration in a 70-page report issued Saturday.

Indictments May Result

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — A federal probe into the $250-million Nevada empire of industrialist Howard Hughes might result in grand-jury indictments in Las Vegas early next year, the Oakland Tribune has reported.

The intensive investigation by a federal team, including 20 Internal Revenue Service agents, probably will continue into next year, the Tribune said in a story in its Saturday and Sunday editions.

The newspaper said the investigation was launched in Las Vegas last spring to track down the millions of dollars Hughes invested in his Nevada holdings after coming to the state in 1966.

The investigation specifically aims to determine if Hughes' various enterprises committed any federal violations, such as income-tax evasion, the Tribune said.

While officials declined to comment, the newspaper said it has learned the investigators are nearing the point where they will seek indictments.

Among the "superlatives" of the Scott regime, the governor listed state planning, government reorganization, restructuring higher education, environmental protection, aid to local governments, support of public schools and community colleges and prison reforms.

A three-page section of the report under the heading "Disappointments Along the Way" listed items where "the governor's aim sometimes went wide of the mark."

"The measure of an administration," the report said, "centers on what the state has done in an area to help a man and his family or an individual get ahead."

The report highlighted Scott's action in setting up 17 multi-county planning regions and setting up the Council on State Goals and Policy.

"His emphasis on planning," the report stated, "stemmed from a basic desire to see the total efforts of government directed more effectively toward the achievement of a good life for all the people of North Carolina."

Scott said the reorganization of state government which had grown to more than 200 agencies "was not a question of 'if' but a question of 'How.'"

The report said the reorganization of state government into 17 departments "will allow future governors the opportunity to look beyond the short haul and concentrate on the capacity of state government to meet the ever-expanding and changing needs of its citizens."

The governor stated that the restructuring of 16 higher education institutions under a single board will allow state officials to consider a "financial

To Meet On 'Consensus'

To wind up Land Use Planning Month, the Greenville-Pitt County League of Women Voters will meet this week to reach consensus on Land Use Planning.

Following several committee meetings and a general meeting earlier this month, members will discuss whether or not the League should support a state land use policy.

Under discussion will be possible items making up a land use policy such as land resources inventory; protection of flood plains, slopes, historical sites and an overall development plan; possible implementation of land use policy; and when, where and how citizen opinion could be introduced.

Unit meetings will be held Tuesday, at 8:00 p.m. at the home of Mrs. George Alvan, 506 Westchester Drive, and on Wednesday, at 10:00 a.m. at the home of Mrs. Mason Smith, 1602 Longwood Drive.

Buchwald

"You're twisting things around," the husband said. "I can make love to my wife any time, but how often can I see a good football game?"

"All right, let's forget about Mondays," Dr. Belladonna said. "What about Tuesday night?"

"There's basketball to watch on Tuesday night. You want me to give up basketball, too?"

"I don't want you to give up anything. What about Wednesday nights?"

"He has hockey on Wednesday nights," the wife said.

"And Thursdays? Do you have anything to watch on Thursday nights?" Dr. Belladonna asked.

"No," said the husband. "But I'm pretty tired from staying up late on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights. A guy has to rest sometime."

"Fridays?" Dr. Belladonna asked.

"Friday is another basketball night," the husband said. "And Saturday night I like to get to bed early so I can watch the TV football games on Sunday afternoon."

"Well," said Dr. Belladonna, "that seems to take care of the week."

"Can you help us, Doctor?" the wife asked.

"It means alot to us," the husband said. "We're willing to do anything to find happiness together."

Dr. Belladonna asked, "What are you doing for the rest of the afternoon?"

The husband looked at his TV Guide. "This afternoon's no good. I have a golf game to watch at four."

Group To Meet Tuesday Night

A meeting of the Black Young Society Group will be held at 8:00 p.m. Tuesday at Mt. Shiloh Church in Winterville.

William Earl Edwards, one of the persons taking part in the meeting, said others participating will include city alderman Calvin C. Henderson and Bennie Williams.

plan that reflects the application of composite educational and professional judgment to the total responsibility of the state in higher education."

The report stated that of approximately $97 million raised by new general fund taxes, $59.8 million, or 61.6 per cent, was earmarked for programs in public education.

The report also pointed to Scott's efforts in getting approximately $30 million for medical facilities at Chapel Hill and East Carolina University, in increasing state funds for agriculture by almost 50 per cent, and establishing a task force to deal with total school desegregation.

The report said this was an area where "North Carolina had turned the corner."

In the section on dis-appointments, the report expressed regret that while North Carolina's per capita income has increased faster than the national per capita income, it has not yet reached the national average.

Graham In India Had A Message

NEW DELHI (AP) — Billy Graham met Prime Minister Indira Gandhi for 30 minutes today and the Indian leader said afterward she hoped there would be an improvement in Indian-American relations.

The prime minister, in a brief chat with newsmen, indicated that Graham had given her an indirect message from President Nixon.

"There was no direct message, but he is a close friend of the President," Mrs. Gandhi said.

Asked if her meeting with the evangelist would lead to an improvement in relations with the United States, she said: "I hope everything will have an effect for the good."

Graham described his meeting with Mrs. Gandhi as "very friendly and warm."

"I assured her I was not Dr. Kissinger," he jokingly said, referring to an Indian newspaper cartoon that portrayed him as "God's Dr. Kissinger."

"Mrs. Gandhi is even more charming and beautiful than her picture led me to believe and it has been a great pleasure to spend time with her," he added.

Graham declined to say whether he had carried any special message from Nixon to Mrs. Gandhi.

He said earlier that he had twice discussed with Nixon the visit to India.

In a news conference here Saturday, Graham also had expressed hope his visit would lead to improved relations between India and the United States, which have been strained for the past two years.

Graham's meeting with Mrs. Gandhi came at the end of a nine-day visit to India that was highlighted by a crusade for Christ last week in remote Nagaland.

The evangelist was due to leave early Tuesday for Tehran, Iran, where he was to call on the shah during a one-day visit en route to Switzerland.

Counted 638 Holiday Dead

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The nation's death toll for the four-day Thanksgiving holiday was 638.

Rain, snow, fog and high winds in various parts of the country made driving hazardous Sunday. Up to 3 inches of snow across the Great Lakes region snarled traffic, and gale force winds blew from Massachusetts to Maine.

For purposes of counting traffic fatalities, The Associated Press considered the holiday period to have extended from 6 p.m. Wednesday to midnight Sunday in each time zone.

The 1972 count was slightly higher than the 1971 toll of 607 deaths but less than the 764 in 1968.

The National Safety Council, which does not keep a weekend tally, had estimated that from 580 to 680 persons would die in traffic accidents over the holidays.

Barbour Says Resigning Soon

RALEIGH (AP) — The head of North Carolina's Travel and Promotion Division, Charles (Chuck) Barbour, says he will resign soon and will open an advertising agency at Durham.

Barbour, former executive director of the Democratic Party, said his firm will be called CB Marketing Inc., and will handle tourist and general advertising.

Barbour is one of a number of Democratic officer holders who have announced plans to step down following the election of Gov.-Elect Jim Holshouser.

White House lobbyist, or any of his staff—vivid evidence that Mr. Nixon is ignoring his legislative leaders on the take-off of his reorganization schemes. They know, however, they will be expected to save him from a crash landing.

The hazard of a crash landing is real. Congressional committee and subcommittee chairmen ferociously guard their watchdog powers over the executive branch departments and agencies under their control.

Yet, as we write this, the President has made not the slightest effort to keep such congressional powers as Rep. Chet Holifield of California, Democratic chairman of the critically-important House Government Operations Committee, and Rep. Frank Horton of New York, the committee's senior Republican, informed of the secret Camp David deliberations.

Triumphant from his record-breaking reelection majority, Mr. Nixon has gravely deepened his second-term problems with his own men on Capitol Hill just as he did inside the Administration with his public demand for instant resignations. That demand is deeply embarrassing to some aides who had intended to return to private life but now want to delay; they fear a quick exit would unjustly taint them with guilt from the Watergate and attendant scandals.

It is too late to correct that mistake, but Mr. Nixon's looming battle over reorganization might still be blunted if he summoned his leaders to Camp David for a personal review of his reorganization schemes. Anything less is an invitation for disaster in the new Congress.

Cremation Has Gov't Backing
 SINGAPORE (UPI) — The government is encouraging cremation as a long-term solution to the problem of land shortage in Singapore. The Environment Ministry said new facilities for cremation will be developed.

"To conserve land, particularly in the urban areas, cemeteries in and around the city will be closed," it said. The government will, however, extend existing public cemeteries and develop new ones in rural areas.

Air Conditioner Clears Windows
 CALDWELL, N.J. (UPI) — Auto air conditioning in the winter may sound about as unnecessary as carrying coals to Newcastle, but it can be of real service to the driver.

"The quickest way to clear up fogged windshields in your automobile is to turn on the air conditioning system," advises Thomas J. Nagle, who heads Scovill's General Hose and Coupling operation here.

He adds that a shot of dehumidified cool air will clear every window in the car within 30 seconds at any time of year — if you have the courage to turn on your air conditioner when it is below freezing outside.

Near-Champions Of 'Sphairistike'
 LONDON (UPI) — Lew Hoad and Rod Laver and Billie Jean King came within a whisker of being champions of sphairistike. The first public exhibition in 1875 of what we now call tennis was presented as a demonstration of "sphairistike" tennis, as contrasted to the ancient game of royal, or real, tennis, which is played in an enclosed court.

The name came from Maj. Walter Clopton Wingfield, who invented the game and wrote about it in a book published in 1873 called "Sphairistike or Lawn Tennis."

Film, Story Will Take N.Z. Fare Ready Out Of SEATO

WELLINGTON, New Zealand (AP) — Prime Minister-elect Norman Eric Kirk, a non-nonsense 252-pounder, says he will take New Zealand out of the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization.

"There will be a lot of changes," Kirk, 49, said in an interview after his landslide election victory Saturday, which gave his Labor party a 55-31 majority in the House of Representatives with one result still to be decided.

"SEATO is not an effective body — if it ever was," Kirk said. "It is atrophied. The Nixon Doctrine has declared a much lower United States involvement, and countries like Indonesia, Singapore and Malaysia want to be part of an organization to link up countries.

"We need an organization which brings countries together rather than separates them as SEATO does."

New Zealand will be the second member of the eight-nation alliance to quit, Pakistan having pulled out on Nov. 8. Australia also might leave the group if the Labor party wins the general election there next Saturday.

Since France has not been active in SEATO for several years, that would leave only four active members — the United States, Thailand, the Philippines and Britain.

Kirk said his foreign policy also would include new initiatives to recognize Communist China and stop French nuclear tests in the South Pacific.

He told a news conference that a navy frigate manned by volunteers and carrying himself or another cabinet minister would enter the test area if the French resume their tests next year.

Details of the film and story-telling fare for children in the city's libraries have been furnished by Mrs. Kay Taylor, librarian of East Branch Library and film coordinator, and Miss Helen Parker, Children's Librarian.

"The Olympic Elk" is geared for pre-schoolers and elementary school age children.

For the story telling series, the sessions between now and Christmas will be oriented to the Christmas season.

This week, the story telling sessions, all scheduled for the Children's Room at Sheppard Library, will be on Tuesday at 2:00 p.m. (this is a substitute for the originally planned Thursday time) and again on Wednesday at 11:00 a.m. and at 2:00 p.m.

All children in Greenville are invited to attend any of the film or story telling events.

Violators of the anti-jaywalking ordinance may be fined from 70 cents to $7 or jailed from 1 to 10 days.

The bodies of Edward Simpson, 47, and Maceo Barnhardt, 42, were found in separate rooms at Simpson's residence after police said they received a call from Simpson's brother. Officers said each man had been struck in the head with an ax.

An ax was found in the house, they said.

Details of the film and story-telling fare for children in the city's libraries have been furnished by Mrs. Kay Taylor, librarian of East Branch Library and film coordinator, and Miss Helen Parker, Children's Librarian.

The film for this week, "The Olympic Elk" is the first in a series of animal films to be shown in the coming weeks on an every other week basis.

The Walt Disney film will be shown at 3:30 p.m. Tuesday at Carver Memorial Library; at 4:00 p.m. Thursday at Sheppard Memorial Library; and at 4:00 p.m. Friday at East Branch Library.

"The Olympic Elk" is geared for pre-schoolers and elementary school age children.

For the story telling series, the sessions between now and Christmas will be oriented to the Christmas season.

This week, the story telling sessions, all scheduled for the Children's Room at Sheppard Library, will be on Tuesday at 2:00 p.m. (this is a substitute for the originally planned Thursday time) and again on Wednesday at 11:00 a.m. and at 2:00 p.m.

All children in Greenville are invited to attend any of the film or story telling events.

Rounded Up
 MANILA (AP) — Manila police started a crackdown on jaywalkers today and rounded up about 3,000 persons, mostly students who were fingerprinted and lectured on traffic discipline.

The campaign is part of President Ferdinand E. Marcos' 2-month-old "New Society" based on national discipline. The country is under martial law.

Violators of the anti-jaywalking ordinance may be fined from 70 cents to $7 or jailed from 1 to 10 days.

Gives Self Up In Ax-Slayings
 STATESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Clyde Nelson Dixon, 42, charged in the deaths of two men whose ax-bludgeoned bodies were discovered late Saturday, walked into police headquarters and gave himself up Sunday night.

Police said the former Statesville resident was jailed on two murder warrants.

The bodies of Edward Simpson, 47, and Maceo Barnhardt, 42, were found in separate rooms at Simpson's residence after police said they received a call from Simpson's brother. Officers said each man had been struck in the head with an ax.

An ax was found in the house, they said.

Girding For Fight On Dam, Reservoir Revival Series Begins Tonight

Opponents of the project from Wake and Granville counties sought the support of northern Durham residents in a meeting at Redwood last Friday night, asking them to join in their efforts to "fight the dam in every honorable way."

Those opposing the project are citing three objections: They say the water in the reservoir will be hopelessly polluted which is supported by studies made by several governmental agencies.

The North Carolina Conservation Council and the North Carolina Wildlife Federation have objected on the ground that the lake would destroy a valuable habitat for small animals, various flowers and trees.

Other opponents simply are landowners who don't want either a lake in their neighborhood or a completely submerged neighborhood.

Some economists say the Corps of Engineers have badly overestimated Raleigh's water supply needs in their cost to benefit study. They say two other lakes—New Hope and a Carolina Power and Light Co. cooling lake—will amply take care of the area's recreation needs.

And many farmers whose land is being condemned for the lake are bitter about the price they are being offered.

Opponents of the dam presented a petition with 1,000 signatures to the Raleigh City Council earlier this week.

Woody's Ramblin's

By WOODY PEELE

Saturday afternoon, just before the start of the North Carolina-East Carolina football game, Greensboro Daily News Sports Editor Smith Barrier and I shared a chat over a hot dog, watching the rain come down.

One of the things Barrier mentioned was a series of articles he wrote several years back, not long after East Carolina joined the Southern Conference.

In the series, he quoted then president, now Chancellor Leo W. Jenkins, on the future of athletics at East Carolina.

"You know," Barrier said. "Just this week, I happened to read over these articles. And a great deal of what Jenkins said has come to pass. It's really amazing the way he predicted it."

Those predictions included national recognition for ECU athletics, conference championships, and meetings with Atlantic Coast Conference schools.

This year, Coach Sonny Randle and his staff have done a tremendous job in rebuilding the Pirate football fortunes. He's excited a lot of people over an even better future. There are only eight seniors on this year's team, and not all of them are starters. So most of the Bucs who won the Southern Conference championship will be back.

But the losers to State and Carolina definitely show that these two teams are not on a level with East Carolina. Several years ago, it would have been worse, but the program is moving along. It still has a long way to go.

As Randle points out, Carolina, State and the other successful ACC teams have in the neighborhood of 120 scholarships. East Carolina, while growing every year, still has a ways to go to rise to this level.

Money won't cure all of the Pirate problems, but it'll go a long ways. The Pirates right now are probably in the best financial condition they've ever been in. But they are still behind the ACC.

And the ACC is where they eventually want to go. That will take money, recruiting, and more winning records. East Carolina must come to dominate the Southern to win approval of the ACC.

Right now, according to Barrier, the ACC doesn't want another member. Slicing up television money, playoff money and bowl bonuses seven ways means more to each school than the old eight way cut.

There is one thing, however, that will get ACC approval for the Pirates—victories over ACC teams.

Barrier noted that a loss by Carolina to ECU would bring much pressure on Coach Bill Dooley. ECU is still regarded as that "down-east upstart." They'll continue to be regarded as such by the ACC teams until the victories become more frequent. Than, as a member of the ACC, the victories won't have the same stigma they do now.

But it's going to take a lot more support than the Pirates are now getting—in all sports. East Carolina is proud of its teams. It is pleased with its support.

Everyone wants a winner, however—and that means beating ACC teams. And that means support—both in money and in presence at ball games.

Tuesday night, the basketball Bucs open their season—after winning the Southern title last year. It would be a good time to show some of that support.

Only Two Lettermen On Squad Meteye Sees No Rose Bright Spots

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
(One of a series)

With only two lettermen back from last year's team, Rose High School coach O.A. Meteye is not very optimistic about the chances of the Rampants this year.

In fact, pessimistic might be an overstatement.

The two returning lettermen are Leroy Daniels and Dennis Taylor, "and they really don't have that much experience," the coach said.

"It's not a question of rebuilding," he added, "it's reconstruction from the ground up."

"We're way behind in getting ready," Meteye said. "And right now there are no bright spots. "We're lacking somewhat in the basic skills and fundamentals." Of the 14 men he's carrying on the roster, seven are seniors, but nearly all are inexperienced on the varsity level. "We are going to try and go with those who have some experience, but some of them don't look too good," Meteye added.

Ronnie Staton, a newcomer to the team, is one of the brighter spots. "For not coming up through jr's, he's doing pretty good," the coach said. Height is a problem, however; he's only 5-9.

In fact, height is a problem on the whole team. Phil Ragazzo, the center, is the tallest man on the team at 6-4, and the only man close to him is Herb Bynum at 6-2. "This is definitely going to be a problem in rebounding," Meteye said. "We've been trying to work on their blocking out to have a chance at the rebound. But when they get on the floor they forget it. They have too much playground basketball in them." Speed and quickness is also a problem. It's lacking to a large extent. "They're in fair shape, but the speed just isn't there," the coach said.

"I hate to cry, but that's about all I know how to do right now," he added.

The reason for Meteye's gloominess is that fact the Greenville isn't a basketball-minded town. "There just isn't any programs for basketball among the youths like there is in baseball. Here, they're taught about baseball almost from the time they can walk, but they don't get any good training in basketball until junior high or high school and by then it's too late. They've already acquired bad habits that they can't get out of."

Meteye said that it's not that the players aren't smart, for the most part they are. But they've just got their fundamentals all wrong by the time they really start playing and although they'll perform in drills, they forget during the excitement of a game. "Oh, we're improving, no doubt about that," he said. "But we've got a long way to go. We may have to concentrate on getting ready for the tournament instead of getting ready for the opening of the season."

"You have to love and desire basketball to really be outstanding at it," Meteye added. "You have to be willing to practice year around. Like golf, basketball is a sport that required a lot of skill and without constant practice you can't be good at it. I don't know whether there's just no interest or what, but other things seem to command our kids attention when they should be putting in some time practicing all year."

The Rampants open the season Tuesday night, traveling to Farmville Central.

Calley To Make Personal Plea

By KATHRYN JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer
FT. BENNING, Ga. (AP) — Lt. William L. Calley Jr., convicted of mass murders at My Lai, will personally make an appeal to a three-officer panel today for clemency in his 20 year sentence.

"They will interview him, ask him questions," said Calley's civilian lawyer, George W. Latimer, in a telephone conversation from Salt Lake City. "He can state anything he wants. I've advised him to be prepared to make the best showing he can. Surely he will make a plea," Latimer added. The unusual proceeding will take place at the 29-year old Calley's red brick apartment on the post, where he has been under house arrest since April 1, 1971. The rusty-haired former platoon leader received a life sentence for the murder of 22 Vietnamese civilians, but that term later was reduced to 20 years.

Of 25 men once accused and six who stood trial, only Calley was convicted of any criminal responsibility for the deaths in a combat sweep through My Lai. The clemency and parole officers flew here Sunday from Ft. Leavenworth, Kan., site of the Army's disciplinary barracks. They are Lt. Col. Harvey C. Johnson, Capt. James E. Brawner and Capt. Ray V. Smith.

Not even Calley's lawyers, who requested the speed-up of the clemency process, are allowed to attend the private hearing.

Their visit comes only a week before his attorneys ask in court to have his conviction thrown out. The U.S. Court of Military Review will convene at Falls Church, Va. Dec. 4 in a separate proceeding to hear a brief contending that Calley's court-martial contained at least 32 errors.

Latimer said in the clemency petition filed by Calley's lawyers, that the board was asked "to take a look at requirements for parole." Calley is required to serve one-third of his 20-year sentence before he can be considered for parole. The lawyer said Calley has been described by authorities at Ft. Benning as a "model prisoner" and the clemency plea claims he has suffered enough punishment not only for his "own guilt but that of the nation and the Army as well." Last Monday, an Army psychiatrist and social worker, also from Ft. Leavenworth, interviewed Calley at his home. They were to report their findings to the parole board. This, however, is a normal practice in clemency appeals.

Appearance before a disposition board is routine for prisoners in Ft. Leavenworth barracks and normally takes place in cases like Calley's eight months after confinement.

Their recommendations, in turn, are reviewed by the commandant of the military prison, forwarded with his recommendations to the provost marshal general of the Army, then to the chairman of the Army and Air Force Clemency and Parole Board and finally to the Secretary of the Army.

In Calley's case, the disposition board will send its recommendations to the commander at Ft. Benning, to go directly to the provost marshal general.

It is not the first time that Army routine has been changed in the controversial Calley case. After the six-man court-martial convicted Calley and sentenced him to life, President Nixon the next day personally ordered his house arrest and he was released from the stockade. Nixon also said he would review the final disposition after the Army's long legal procedures are over.

In the petition of the Court of Military Review, Calley's lawyers claimed errors in his four and a half-month trial, ranging from command influence to suppression of evidence and violation of constitutional rights.

The Army replied with a 247-page brief and oral arguments will be heard at the Falls Church hearing.

The court will determine whether the findings and sentence are legally correct and whether the sentence is appropriate. Should the conviction be affirmed, Calley may petition the U.S. Court of Military Appeals, for a review.

There also is a further review by the secretary of the Army—and finally, the possibility of presidential action.

Efforts Cut Tax Losses

NEW YORK (AP)—Federal officials believe teamwork between their agencies and state officials has cut tax losses on mail-order cigarettes from North Carolina into other states by 99 per cent.

U.S. Atty. Whitney North Seymour Jr. and E.M. Hamm, inspector in charge of the New York Post Office, said that the estimated tax loss as of Nov. 1, was less than $2,000 a day. In comparison they said it was $300,000 per day a year and half ago.

The states which were hardest-hit were New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Texas, Connecticut and Florida. Each has a heavy tax on cigarettes.

Seymour and Hamm say the problem has been that residents of those states get cigarettes by mail from low-tax North Carolina and few volunteer to pay a tax on them to their states.

One weapon now employed against mail-order dealers is a Post Office policy of denying use of the mails to firms which don't tell purchasers of their obligation to pay state tobacco taxes. On Nov. 8 a company at Fayetteville, N.C., became the first victim of such an order.

Court injunctions against other businesses have made some quit selling cigarettes by mail.

Sharpshooter Finished Kidnaped Girl's Ordeal

By LYLE W. PRICE
Associated Press Writer
CORONA, Calif. (AP) — The cornered gunman crooked his arm tightly about the neck of the kidnaped girl and kept shouting he would pull the trigger of the gun at her temple if officers didn't let him escape.

The drama lasted for an hour Sunday in a Southern California citrus grove. Then the young man leaned slightly away from the frightened girl beside him on the front seat of the car.

From 15 feet away, an officer with a 30-30 rifle fired, and Richard Lee Driskill, a high-school dropout with a growing crime record at 22, slumped dead of a single shot in the head.

It was the end of a seven-hour ordeal that left 16-year-old Debra Brazil shaken but unharmed, police said. It began when the girl and her mother were kidnaped by the gunman, whose car had broken down near their home in Hughson, 300 miles north of here.

Police said Driskill entered the Brazil home after his car became disabled nearby Saturday night. Authorities said he took the girl at knifepoint to a nearby field and attempted to molest her sexually. When Mrs. Brazil came home, he forced both of them into the Brazil car and fled.

Officers said the mother, Angela Brazil, escaped at Bakerville. She dodged a bullet from Driskill's gun and alerted police.

About 50 officers from several police and sheriff's departments began tracking the gunman's car over freeways at speeds of up to 100 miles an hour. A sheriff's helicopter flew overhead.

The fleeing car turned off a freeway at Corona, 35 miles southeast of Los Angeles, and was hemmed in by police vehicles beside a citrus grove.

A Los Angeles County sheriff's officer crept up behind the car and slashed both rear tires, officials said. They said the man screamed "one hundred times" from inside the tightly locked car for officers to go away or he would shoot the girl.

He was slain by officer Richard Godfrey, who had been stationed nearby to take advantage of any opportunity to shoot after the man ignored repeated police pleas to give himself up.

Officials at Hughson said Driskill, a lumber yard employe, had a criminal record that included armed robbery, threatening an officer's life and trying to commit suicide in jail.

The Worn Clinic That Poundage Spells Danger

Norma's case shows why 25 percent of marriages now end in divorce! And Norma thinks her husband is 100 percent to blame, yet the guilt is mostly hers! So lop off that ugly upholstery from around your waistline. And stress more "cheesecake" in the boudoir!

By GEORGE W. CRANE
Ph.D., M.D.
CASE V-555: Norma D., aged 29, feels crushed.

"Dr. Crane," she moaned, "my husband had an affair last week with a young girl from his office."

"But he insists he still loves me more than anybody else in the world."

"And he excuses himself, by saying I am so fat he can't grow aroused by me any longer."

"So he claims he was just experimenting to see if this slender 19-year-old could make him function in the bedroom."

"Dr. Crane, what should I do? Should I file for divorce, though we have 2 darling children who love their daddy?"

NO DIVORCE
Obviously, this is not a case for the divorce courts!

And Norma's husband is correct in saying he loves her. For "love" and "sex" are not synonymous in the minds of men.

They can indulge in sex purely for sport or even revenge or to bolster their own frightened ego, due to reduction in their wife's boudoir cheesecake. Norma is 5'4" tall and weighed 120 on her wedding day.

Now she tips the scales at 158. And is so tired at bedtime from her many household duties, shopping trips and looking after their 2 kiddies, that she is diffident in their boudoir.

Later, her husband admitted to me that he had been growing platonically for the past year.

And he had tried to revive their romantic life in the bedroom, but Norma was always too weary.

Instead of being vivacious, enthusiastic and coquettish, she would even snore during marital relations!

Wives, beware of this dire threat to your own marriage! For when a dutiful husband finds his wife so inert and sluggish, he begins to wane in his erotic verve.

That's doubly true if his former slender bride is now a fat, unperfumed mate who concentrates on dining room roast beef but ignores boudoir cheesecake.

Most of the divorces in America develop for the same reasons that are demonstrated in Norma's case.

And they are due to a wife's failure to realize:

(1) That men have about 4 times the erotic hunger of women;

(2) A fat wife, even when enthusiastic in the boudoir, is far less stimulating to the normal male than a slender siren!

And if she is usually sleepy and inert, she rebuffs her mate to the point where he soon grows negatively "conditioned" to romance her;

(3) Scared husbands then may become "testing minded" and seek an affair with a slender paramour to see if they can still function erotically.

Wives, lop off that ugly blubber from around your equator!

It makes you "too tired" in the boudoir and also much less stimulating to a romantically inclined husband.

So send for my booklet "How to Lose 10 Pounds in 10 Days," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 cents.

Get down to within 10 pounds of your weight during your honeymoon!

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

Jacqueline Says 'Untouched' By Photo Story

NEW YORK (AP) — Jacqueline Onassis says she thinks it strange that in efforts to get pictures of her photographers would don skin-diving gear and lurk off Skopios, the Greek island owned by her husband Aristotle.

Mrs. Onassis made the comment to Newsweek magazine in connection with pictures reportedly taken of her in the nude and published by the Italian magazine Playmen.

But Mrs. Onassis said she doesn't treat the incident as reality.

"It doesn't touch my real life, which is with my children and my husband," Newsweek

A Price Tag On 'Equality'

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — In what some consider a sign of the negative aspects of equal rights for women, the Bank of America has announced it will stop paying taxi fares for women employees working at night.

The Bank of America said male workers complained that the practice of paying taxi fares for women who must start or complete a work shift at night is illegal sex discrimination because it isn't extended to men.

A lawsuit raising the same argument has been filed against Pacific Telephone Co. However, the company said it will continue paying the fares for its women workers until the suit is decided.

The night-cab-fare program was adopted by many business firms as a safety feature.

The state Industrial Welfare Commission does not specify such a program but does require "suitable transportation" for women working evening hours.

The Equal Employment Opportunities Commission here says cab-fare programs for women not only are discriminatory, but withdrawal of such programs rather than extension to male workers would also be discriminatory. Neither alternative has been tested by a court, spokesmen for the commission said.

They are found in all areas of the world depending upon their environmental requirements. Some are found inside the body of many animals. For example, some of the worm parasites in hogs are nematodes. Plant parasitic nematodes are generally considered most important.

There are two types of plant parasitic nematodes, endoparasitic and ectoparasitic.

Farm Scene

by Henry C. Riddick

Until fairly recently, nematodes were almost unknown to most of us. However, in recent years more extensive study has been made on the history and habits of this important living organism. All nematodes are not harmful.

Nematodes are interesting and remarkable creatures that escape the average eye and mind because of their hidden existence beneath the hide of man and beast and the sheltering cloak of mother earth.

Normally we associate them with their destruction of plant life such as tobacco. The damage caused to man, beast and plants by nematodes has amounted to billions of dollars over the years.

The endoparasites feed inside the plant tissue such as the root knot nematode that affects tobacco. The ectoparasitic nematodes never enter their host plant. They feed on the plant by inserting their stylet into the roots or plant tissue as they feed.

The severity of the nematode infestation is often correlated with the severity of plant disease caused by bacteria or fungus such as Granville wilt and black shank diseases in tobacco. The nematodes provide a wound in the plant tissue on the roots, that enables the disease organism to enter the plant tissue more easily.

There are several different methods of nematode control: Soil fumigation — this is the method that is most commonly used. There are several chemicals that are recommended as nematicides. Different crops and different species of nematodes are specific in their requirements for adequate control. Crop Rotation — since some parasitic nematodes have a distinct host preference, the use of less desirable crops in a rotation will help reduce the nematode population. Cultural methods — Time of planting and time of harvest, coupled with rotation and production practices help to avoid periods of high nematode activity. Resistant plants — certain varieties of crops have resistance to certain species of nematodes.

Farmers who are interested in determining the nematode population from a field or fields on their farms, can get a nematode assay made by sending a soil sample to the Nematode Research Laboratory. This service is also available to home owners to determine the nematodes population on lawns and gardens.

For more information on the nematode assay service, contact the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Office.

ANYONE FOR PHEASANT?
NEW YORK (UPI) — Ptarmigan and pheasant displace turkey at traditional Thanksgiving dinners in at least two of the 50 United States, says Charles Miller, an executive of a food and refreshment service firm. Ptarmigan is popular in Alaska, apparently because it's more widely available there than are turkeys. And some Maryland families prefer pheasant, said Miller, a vice president of Servomation Corp.

GOREN ON BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN
© 1972 By The Chicago Tribune
BRIDGE QUIZ ANSWERS

Q. 1—Both vulnerable, as South, the deal, you hold:

♠AQKQ9 ♦AQ10873 ♣AJ
What is your opening bid?
A.—Two no trump. This is one of those in-between hands that is too strong to risk a one bid being passed out and not quite strong enough to merit a demand opening. Since it is relatively balanced and possesses all the other qualifications, a two no trump opening is our choice.

Q. 2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠K6 ♥102 ♦A85 ♣AJ7432
The bidding has proceeded: North East South West 1 ♣ Pass 2 ♣ Pass 3 ♣ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—Four diamonds, with the intention of raising spades on the next round. This hand is on the verge of a slam and should be safe for 11 tricks. The recommended sequence of bids will reveal all the high cards in your hand and leave it up to partner to bid a slam if he has heart control.

Q. 3—With East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠6 ♥Q1098 ♦AKJ10 ♣Q942
The bidding has proceeded: South West North East 1 ♦ Dble. Rdbl. 2 ♣ Pass 3 ♣ Pass Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—Double. You and your partner have more than your share of the high cards, a fact which is borne out by North's redouble. At this point it may be contended that, if the contract is to be doubled, North should do it. However, he may have reasoned that since the enemy appeared to be on their way it would have been premature to double. It is now clear that East was up to mischief for, when partner raised, he didn't go on.

Q. 4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠AJ84 ♥KQ8 ♦108653 ♣2
The bidding has proceeded: North East South West 2 ♥ Pass 3 ♥ Pass 4 ♣ Pass 4 ♣ Pass ?
A.—Seven hearts. You have hitherto undisclosed factors, quoted the widow of President John F. Kennedy as saying, "That's the world that's real to me."

Onassis had this explanation for Newsweek about the pictures, if they are actually of his wife:

"I have to take off my pants to put on my bathing suit sometimes. She does, too."

Kissinger, Tho, CanBanter, Too

NEW YORK (AP) — Vietnam peace negotiators Henry A. Kissinger and Le Duc Tho of North Vietnam engaged in some light-hearted banter about teaching.

Time magazine says the exchange came last week when Kissinger, a former professor at Harvard, met Tho at the start of their now-recessed peace talks.

"My dear Henry, when our talks are completed, can you arrange a position for me as a visiting professor of Marxism at Harvard?" Time quoted Tho as saying.

According to Time, Kissinger's response was: "With pleasure. But of course, I must be permitted to teach a course in political science in Hanoi."

N.C. Ski Resorts Are Rapidly Reaching Maturity

SKI BOOM HOUSING — Slopeside houses such as these, located at the Sugar Mountain resort in North

BANNER ELK, N.C. (AP) — The South's two largest ski resorts are growing rapidly to maturity in the mountains of northwestern North Carolina. That may be bad news for the region's growing legion of weekend skiers.

Both Beech and Sugar Mountains have placed new restrictions on weekend skiing by the public at large for the coming winter season.

At Beech, only those who own Carolina Caribbean Corp. property or who are staying at a rented chalet, condominium, or lodge room at the resort may ski on weekends. At Sugar, the same situation is developing, although a limited number of lift tickets still will be available to the day-trip skier.

Lodging at either mountain will run from $25 per person per day and up. The accommodations are generally privately owned condominiums, rented through each resort's property management service. Both areas say they will have open skiing on weekdays.

The reason the resorts—located within a few miles of each other in a mountain Bowl—strive to attain the goal of skiing for members only (which they say is five to 10 years away) is simply that, "It's hard to make a profit from just running a ski slope."

If the ski operation merely pays for itself, it's rated a good performer on the fiscal balance sheet. The real gold in them hills is them hills—divided into quarter-to-half acre plots and sold for an average of $10,000 per lot.

Beech and Sugar differ in style, appearance, ownership and approach. But they both have a common goal—selling real estate. Ski slopes, golf courses, and tennis courts are there to attract buyers.

Sugar Mountain's president, one-time Alabama dentist Dr. Tom Brigham, receives visitors over hamburgers in his resort's lodge. He wears an open necked sweater and jots down figures on a place-mat to answer questions about his resort's growth.

At Beech's simulated Alpine village, the company officers wear company blazers and they proffer copies of a 20-page, four-color company report; Beech is publicly owned.

Sugar has been in operation for three years, and Brigham says the operation will turn a profit for the first time this year. He won't say how much, since the company is in the process of changing accountants.

Brigham, unlike Carolina Carribbean, is in the home and condominium construction business as well as land sales. He says the "pace of development is slower and we concentrate more on multi-family condominium units."

Those units sell for prices ranging from $25,000 to $60,000, and there are three of them for every single-family house in Sugar's blueprint. Brigham says the average suburban homeowner looks for less and more contact with his neighbors when he purchases a vacation home.

Brigham and his partners have sunk $10 million into their property, with $5 million coming from "major North Carolina banks," at a rate "not significantly above prime."

Brigham says his building schedule is geared to the receptivity of the market. This year, apparently, that's very receptive. He said about 50 condominiums were put on the market in September, and all but eight were sold within six weeks.

"I don't want to say what our future plans are," he said. "Other people have done that and got into trouble for it."

"Other people," in this case, are Brigham's neighbors at Beech Mountain, where he was once a company officer. In its palmer days of 1967-68, Carolina Caribbean announced plans for 4,000 homes and a monorail in its resort.

The stock went public in 1968 at 18 per share and soon soared to $62 before splitting four for one. The company bought thousands of acres in the Charlotte area for "suburban resort" communities and started on a condominium venture called "The Reef at St. Croix in the Virgin Islands."

But as money tightened in 1970, Carolina Caribbean found itself in difficult straits. People were not buying lots and cash was in short supply.

Although Beech Mountain continued to carry its weight, The Reef was a disaster. It accounted for $2.2 million of the company's pre-tax loss of $3.4 million for fiscal 1971. The company's stock plummeted as well.

Replacements have been made in the company's management since that time, and the word from the gingerbread corporate headquarters atop the mountain now is that Carolina Caribbean has turned around.

Pre-tax earnings for fiscal 1972 were $2.52 million, a dramatic swing from the year before. Earnings per share, reflected the turnaround. After a 1971 loss of $.78, they were at $.36 in the latest accounting.

One of the new men given the credit for cheery figures is executive vice president E. J. "Ted" Maureau, the man in charge of sales and marketing.

Maureau has opened branch offices in Florida, Washington, D.C., New Orleans, Cincinnati, Detroit, Chicago and Virginia Beach, Va., since coming to Carolina Caribbean in 1971. Some of them are wholly owned and others are contracted to brokers.

"The company was concentrating almost entirely in the Carolinas when I got here. We're now looking to a market that extends through a seven hour driving time radius," Maureau said.

Maureau also revamped the salesmen's training program and started placing the company's ads in major national magazines.

It cost an additional $1.5 million in sales expenses during the past fiscal year, but Maureau points to a $5 million jump in land sales for justification.

Now, he plans to change the marketing concept of the Reef, which was the company's only loser in fiscal 1972. He is about to register the property for sales in the New York metropolitan area, where he feels, the only market for tropical condominiums costing $40,000 and up lies.

The Reef was on the block this summer, but a sale that had been tentatively announced fell through. Maureau says there are no present plans to sell the project.

Carolina Caribbean is still carrying more than half of the 100-odd condominiums at The Reef. Their price has been cut almost in half; they now start at $40,000 for a one-bedroom unit. Maureau maintains that The Reef will start to make money this year.

If it does, it will join the Beech Mountain project and a camper colony called Land Harbors in Linville as moneymakers for Carolina Caribbean.

To show its health, the company recently announced its first major new project in three years, on the Carolina coast. It will include a Beech Mountain-style ocean resort and a Land Harbors camper colony.

Carolina Caribbean has cut back in other areas. The property in the Charlotte area has been sold. The Beech Mountain monorail has been quietly forgotten.

The company says it also has improved its debt picture. In August, it announced two loans designed to refinance the short-term, high interest notes it secured during the cash squeeze of 1970. Maureau says the new loans are "much more attractive" money.

The stock has leveled off at slightly less than $4 per share. Maureau says land sales will rise at another 20 per cent when the figures for fiscal 1973 are in, and one analyst, in the Carolina Financial Times, has predicted that per share earnings could rise to more than $7.00.

But if real estate sales continue to do well at both resorts, what will happen to the skier (or golfer, hiker, and tennis player) who doesn't want to own, or rent, property?

Sugar's Brigham answered the question by gesturing toward the mountain peaks that surround his development. "The market is almost unlimited. And there are a lot more mountains out there. I'm sure that there'll be more ski areas if the demand is there."

Teeming Masses Of Red China Today Seem Docile, Dormant

By JOHN RODERICK
Associated Press Writer
PEKING (AP) — China is people, staggering millions of them, spilling into the streets, thronging the eating houses, packing the stadiums, crawling over the curiously shaped stones of an old garden.

A quarter-century ago, in their profusion and poverty, they seemed like millstones around the neck of Chiang Kai-shek. His Nationalist government, just emerging from a crippling war, still engaged in a fitful civil conflict with the Communists, could only regard the Chinese millions as too many mouths to feed, obstacles to economic recovery.

Western experts and writers predicted that the very weight of China's 500 million people in 1947 would prevent the country from ever becoming a first-rate power. Some thought the only cure for overpopulation was war, pestilence, natural disaster.

A visitor to China in those days saw no workable solution to the recurring problem of too little food and too many people. Hunger was endemic, starvation recurrent, illness commonplace. The spectacle of thousands of Chinese stretching out bony hands for a bowl of rice during times of famine burned itself into the memories of many foreigners.

So did that of Chinese jostling each other for seats on the already packed trains, lining up for blocks to cash in currency hourly losing its value, or fighting each other for the privilege of unloading Shanghai riverfront freighters at a few cents a day.

A Chinese crowd of the 1940s often was a quarrelsome, deafening, frightening experience, its individual components sacrificing human dignity in a mass struggle to survive at all cost. Today there are more people in China—some 750 million of them. Crowds, as before, are everywhere. But somehow they are different.

Walk through a Peking department store, stroll in a Canton public park or visit the Yu Yuan stone gardens in Shanghai and you will run into teeming crowds as in the past. But they are better dressed. Their blue jackets and trousers are faded and occasionally patched, but clean and neat. Like the Chinese of the 1940s they press in on you, inquisitive and curious. But a touch on the shoulder, a nod from a guide, opens a path through the human wall. There are no shouts, no commands, no policemen to clear the way.

The differences in the Chinese crowds of today and yesterday are explained by a different interpretation of the uses of China's vast population. The planners of pre-1949 regarded so many people as a liability and a misfortune. Mao Tse-tung saw them as an asset. He believed that their combined muscle-power could make up for the lack of machines.

He had formed the peasants into a strong army in the 1930s, and in the 1940s he encouraged them with the carrot of private land ownership to produce an upsurge in agriculture.

In the 1950s, mistakenly some say, he threw them into a frenzied industrial speed-up called "the Great Leap Forward." The rural communes he created then have survived in modified form.

In the 1960s, he stirred China's masses into a great movement, the cultural revolution.

Mao exerts a strong hold on the Chinese imagination, but he has not succeeded in molding and forming the masses through personal magnetism alone. The secret is organization.

The foundation stones are the street and neighborhood committees which tidy up their surroundings, report on suspicious characters, keep an eye on crime and indoctrinate the people. Delegates from these committees, unobtrusively placed, control the crowds and make a path through them for "foreign guests."

Whether the Chinese masses will be called on later to march to the tune of still another purge or make another Herculean physical effort seems to depend largely on Mao. He alone is the master of Chinese mass psychology.

Now 78, he has given the masses a chance to simmer down after the boiling struggles of the cultural revolution. He has turned over the active direction of affairs to Premier Chou En-lai.

Seen today, China's millions seem docile, disciplined, dormant. They surge quietly through the courtyards of Peking's Forbidden City, queue up for buses in Shanghai, stare in awe at the treasures of China's past in the museum of Canton's Ching Hai tower.

But they contain and explosive potential which could alter history.

Reported Filling Ambassador Post

JERUSALEM (AP) — Government sources say Simcha Dinitz, Prime Minister Gold Meir's closest political aide, has been selected to be Israel's next ambassador to the United States.

Israel's current top diplomat in Washington is Yitzhak Rabin, who ends a four-year term in the U.S. capital in January.

Dinitz, a 43-year-old native-born Israeli, is director-general of Mrs. Meir's office and has been a key aide to the prime minister in her affairs of state and foreign travel.
