Today's Paris Talks Are Thought 'Turning Point'

By MICHAEL GOLDSMITH
Associated Press Writer
PARIS (AP) — Henry A. Kissinger and Hanoi's Le Duc Tho met for the 13th time in three weeks today at what may be a turning point in their secret negotiations on a Vietnam peace settlement.

President Nixon's security adviser and the North Vietnamese Politburo member met in an American rented villa in suburban Neuilly where they held several secret meetings last week. Their talks were recessed Sunday while experts of both sides met to discuss details of a possible cease fire agreement.

Except for a nine-day break, Kissinger and Tho have met almost daily since Nov. 20, when they began their current session to revise and finalize the agreement they drafted here in October.

During Sunday's recess, Kissinger's top aide, Gen. Alexander M. Haig Jr., was in Washington conferring with Nixon.

Haig left Paris Saturday and met for several hours with the President Sunday. There had been reports the general would return to Paris immediately and soon thereafter go on to Saigon to give President Nguyen Van Thieu a personal report on the Paris meetings. But White House press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said: "We don't have any plan set on that."

The meeting of technical experts Sunday resulted in speculation that the two sides had gotten to the point of checking the fine print of a draft peace agreement. But both sides continued their news blackout.

One indication that the talks might be at a turning point was the arrival from Moscow of another member of the North Vietnamese Politburo, Le Thanh Nghi. His visit had not been announced in advance, but presumably he came to confer with Tho about the negotiations.

Meanwhile, Hanoi Radio said that, because a cease-fire agreement had not been signed, the North Vietnamese people realize they cannot achieve their goals "without continuing the fight."

In Saigon, the South Vietnamese government said it has evidence North Vietnam intends to take over the South after a cease-fire agreement is signed. The official radio said the government had "acquired a secret Communist document" revealing a three-phase takeover plan.

Foreign Minister Tran Van Lam, in a talk with newsmen, renewed Saigon's long-standing demand that Hanoi agree formally to withdraw its troops from the South. He conceded that Washington and Hanoi might sign a cease-fire agreement without Saigon's concurrence, but he said: "It's hard to believe there will be a separate agreement — it's hard to believe. We would like to be with our allies all the time, for the good as for the bad."

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — American explorers Eugene A. Cernan and Harrison H. Schmitt pulled away from the Apollo 17 command ship in a lander named Challenger today and prepared for touchdown in a lunar box canyon and man's last planned moon exploration for decades.

Wearing their white space suits, Cernan and Schmitt sealed themselves in the small cab of the spider-legged Challenger, leaving their crewmate, Ronald E. Evans, alone in the larger command ship, America. Evans threw switches to undock the moon landing craft and Challenger sprang free.

Cernan and Schmitt began final preparations for a dive to a lunar touchdown at 2:55 p.m. EST and Evans started the three days of solo moon orbiting aboard America.

The astronauts awoke to music, piped to them from Mission Control, at 7:45 a.m. EST after spending the night orbiting 15 miles above the moon's barren surface.

Cernan and Schmitt donned space suits and started transferring equipment and supplies into Challenger.

Evans will remain in lunar orbit aboard the command ship. He will probe the moon from above with an array of science instruments and special cameras.

Ahead for Cernan and Schmitt are three days of exploration among the craters hills and canyons of a steep-sided valley called Taurus-Littrow.

As the 11th and 12th lunar explorers, they will walk and drive more than 20 miles over the valley floor searching among rock and soil for secrets needed to complete the moon history already partially recorded through five earlier American landings.

America and Challenger, still locked nose-to-nose, swept behind the moon and out of touch with Mission Control at 2:36 p.m. EST Sunday. Eleven minutes later, they fired America's powerful service propulsion rocket engine to slow the speeding craft and settle it into lunar orbit.

As in past moon flights, Mission Control waited through the silence for word of a successful firing, this time for 22 minutes.

Then the spacecraft shot from behind the moon; and, from a quarter million miles away, Cernan's voice crackled into the control center:

"Thumbs up, America has arrived on station for the challenge ahead."

With their lunar goal at least near, the three spacemen let flow the joy and excitement of their view.

"We're breathing so hard, the windows are fogging up on the inside," said Evans, the first Vietnam veteran assigned a space mission.

Schmitt, the first American scientist in space, began a chattering catalogue of descriptions of what he saw passing below his window.

With a fluency nurtured by more than a decade of study at Harvard and other universities, the geologist told of craters and mounds and shattered mountains, calling each of them by name.

He stopped suddenly at one point and called out: "Hey, I just saw a flash on the lunar surface."

"It was right out there north of Grimaldi," he said, naming a crater which is on the left edge of the full moon as viewed from the earth. "It was just a pinprick of light."

Flashes of light have been seen on the moon before, but never by astronauts in orbit. The lights, called transient events, are thought to come from the heat of impacting meteorites or possibly from the belch of a still-living volcano.

Schmitt asked scientists in Mission Control to check for any signals from seismographs left on the moon by earlier Apollos.

But the instruments were busy recording signals from the planned crash to the moon of the third stage of Apollo 17's Saturn 5 rockets. Officials said the impact, which caused the moon to vibrate for two hours, 40 minutes, would have masked any signals from a small meteorite hit.

It was one of the few disappointments to that point in this mission — the last and most ambitious of the Apollo series.

'About 20' Rose Youths Suspended

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

About 20 Rose High School students have been suspended from school and sent home, Rose High principal Robert Allgood confirmed this morning.

"The dismissals relates primarily to the cafeteria disturbance that took place on Friday," Allgood said, "as well as one or two other incidents."

The principal said investigation was continuing and "that there will very likely be more suspensions. It may be necessary to dismiss some for the remainder of the school year and we'll do this if we consider it essential to maintain good order in the school."

Sixteen police officers are on duty in the hallways of Rose High this morning. "They are here at our request to maintain order and security," Allgood commented. "As things settle down, we'll slowly reduce the number until we reach the point where we feel we do not have need for them."

"Parents are again on hand this morning," Allgood added, "and I'm asking them to continue to come. Their presence is a big help."

A large number of students, "more than double the normal number," Allgood said, "are absent today. 'Normally we have 120-135 absent on any one day. Today the figure is almost 300.'"

Effective this morning, Allgood issued a memorandum to all teachers. The memorandum tightens down on the freedom of students to be in the hallways or to congregate around doors in classrooms. Also, they are not permitted to gather in the lobby or smoking area.

"We must and will take every possible measure to insure order and security in our school," Allgood remarked. "Students and parents must understand we are all part of our plan, and we'll do whatever else is needed to maintain order."

Allgood said that as a result of investigations, all those suspended to date are boys. "There may be some girls suspended as we continue to investigate," he noted, "but that we don't know yet."

The principal said that it has been revealed that practically every student involved in the Friday incidents were ones out of their proper classrooms during the fourth period on Friday. "That is why we are emphasizing students being at the right place at the proper time," he added.

Police records show that one student, Allen Earl Wilson, 18, was arrested at his home Saturday morning based on a warrant signed by J. W. Barnes, on charges of assault and battery. Bond has been set at $100. The arrest is in connection with the Friday incident at Rose High.

Irregularities

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The heart of Harry S. Truman continues to show irregularities in rhythm, doctors reported today, but the former president told them "I feel all right" and spent a restful night.

The 88-year-old Truman remained in serious condition this morning, hospital officials said.

A morning medical report from Research Hospital and Medical Center said Truman was asked Sunday night about 11 p.m. EST how he felt and he responded: "I feel all right." This came after his heart had developed irregularities.

Truman also was asked if he hurt anywhere, and replied "no," the hospital reported.

The next bulletin on his condition was scheduled for 10 p.m. EST.

Sunday began on an optimistic note as the former president was taken off the critical list after four days of being near death, but late Sunday doctors reported "more frequent abnormalities" in the rhythm of Truman's heart.

Funds Allocated Pitt For 7 Road Projects

RALEIGH — Pitt County has been allocated more than $261,500 for seven secondary road construction projects.

Approval of the projects was voted at the regular December meeting of the North Carolina State Highway Commission held in Raleigh.

The projects and the money allotted for each were:

—Secondary roads 1762 (1.10 miles) and 1764 (.8 miles), includes grading, draining and stabilizing from EOP North to U.S. 264 on SR 1762 and on 1764 from the Norfolk-Southern Railroad north to SR 1762, $38,000;

—SR 1700, resurfacing 2.7 miles from SR 1711 to SR 1723; resurfacing SR 1723 (1.4 miles) from SR 1700 to N.C. 102, $74,000;

—SR 1740, 1.3 miles of grading, draining and stabilizing from SR 1725 to SR 1700, $30,000;

—SR 1941, 1.5 miles of grading, draining and stabilizing from SR 1800 to SR 1725, $35,000;

—SR 1759 (.8 miles) and SR 1760 (2.5 miles), adding base and pavement, $72,000;

—SR 1001, 3.3 miles of widening and resurfacing (funds were increased to complete construction), $7,000;

—SR 1574 (.15 miles) widening, stabilizing and paving from N.C. 903 South, $5,500.

Aerospace Industry's Future Is Clouded

By LYLE W. PRICE
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Faced with the last planned moon mission and prospects of peace, some American space industry leaders are thinking of a more down-to-earth future.

There is talk of getting into rapid transit, health-care systems, designing computerized law-enforcement systems, communications and shipbuilding.

Most aerospace officials, however, resist the idea that the industry is in serious trouble. As industrialist David Packard notes, "It is rather ironic to be talking about an industry in deep trouble with an Apollo on the way to the moon today."

However, in California, the nation's leading aerospace state, more than 180,000 jobs have been eliminated since the industry's high of 616,000 jobs five years ago.

At a week-end conference here, called to examine the need for the aerospace industry to retol, most participants agreed in speeches and interviews that it will have to retol to some extent.

"We have, in effect, put to pasture an industry responsible for some of the most significant achievements in our history," Sen. John V. Tunney, D-Calif., told 200 aerospace officials and economists at the conference called by the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics and the National Association of Business Economists.

"In a time of growing public antagonism toward the war in Vietnam and the spiraling arms race, the government did too little, too late, to ward off the inevitable decline in an industry which since World War II has become a major component of our national economy."

Rocket scientist Wernher Von Braun, credited with helping develop Germany's World War II V2 rocket and America's Saturn rocket that boosted spacecraft to the moon, foresees the United States as resuming manned moon flights in 10 years.

"Space," he said, "is here to stay."

Packard, a former top Defense Department aide and now chairman of Hewlett-Packard Co. of Palo Alto, Calif., said that, despite the industry's obvious "severe problem," he is "not at all sure that this problem can be solved, or even alleviated for the industry, by trying to move into new-product and new-market areas."

Packard said his suggestion is for aerospace "to call a spade a spade and admit that the first priority of the aerospace industry is to get its house in order and not go charging into new fields."

He said he thought President Nixon will keep supporting spending for necessary defense levels. "At least in terms of current dollars, there will probably be no major decreases."

Martin County Man Is Charged In Gun Assault

WILLIAMSTON — A 24-year old Martin County man, Robert Nathaniel George, is in Martin County jail charged with assault with a deadly weapon with the intent to kill and with inflicting serious injury.

According to Martin County Sheriff Raymond Rawls, George went to the trailer home of his estranged wife, Loretta Young George, at Williams' Trailer Park on U. S. 17 about three miles south of Williamston.

The sheriff said that at the time, the trailer was occupied by

Mrs. George, her sister and brother-in-law, Carrie and Melvin Biggs, and a family friend, Richard Earl Euwell, a young man in his early twenties.

Based on statements made by Mrs. George and Mr. and Mrs. Biggs, George kicked the door of the trailer open and fired at Euwell. This shot grazed Euwell's shoulder, Sheriff Rawls said, and Euwell then ran from the trailer. Outside, George allegedly shot again, this time hitting Euwell, peppering his back from the vicinity of his waist to the back of his head. Euwell is hospitalized with gunshot wounds and is reportedly in serious condition.

The incident took place shortly after 6:00 p.m. Sunday. Sheriff Rawl reported that at 6:22 p.m., George turned himself in to the sheriff's office in Williamston where he was charged and placed in jail under a $1,000 bond.

A hearing has been set for December 18 in the district court.

Community Committeemen, Alternates Named

Truman's Daughter Is Showing Same Streaks

By F. RICHARD CICCONE
Associated Press Writer
KANSAS CITY (AP) — Throughout the week of her father's fight against death, Margaret Truman Daniel has displayed the same streak of spunk and optimism that characterized Harry S. Truman's years as America's 33rd president.

Since she arrived at her father's bedside shortly after midnight Thursday, the only child of Harry and Bess Truman has adopted the role of spokesman-for-good-cheer during the former president's battle against the infirmities of old age.

Wearing a broad smile almost constantly — and physically resembling her father more each year — Mrs. Daniel has held five news conferences brimming with "great faith ... that he will come out of this all right."

"She has been exceedingly cooperative and friendly," said one of the reporters staked out at Research Hospital and Medical Center since the 88-year-old Truman was admitted Tuesday with lung congestion.

Mrs. Daniel, 48, rushed from Washington late Wednesday after "they sent for me ... very suddenly." She apparently packed in a hurry because she once joked with newsmen, "You have got to be tired of seeing these same two dresses."

She keyed her confident tone at her first news conference after visiting her father: "He's in serious condition, but he has been before. He's a strong man and he's gotten over worse things."

Mrs. Daniel, the wife of New York Times executive Clifton Daniel, often joked with reporters and never shied from a question until the answer required specific medical information.

Awards Go To Falk, Minelli

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Actor Peter Falk and actress Liza Minnelli have been named "stars of the year" by the Hollywood Women's Press Club and received the club's "Golden Apples."

Falk received the award for "continuing to demonstrate the highest standards of thespian's art." Miss Minnelli was given the Golden Apple for being an "electrifying ... talented and newsworthy person." The awards were announced Sunday.

No sour apples — for the least cooperative actor or actress — were given this year.

Missouri has more various types of wild flowers than any other state.

Only once did fears for her father's condition push to the forefront. That was on Friday when a hospital spokesman attributed to Dr. Wallace Graham, Truman's personal physician, a condition report of "extremely precarious."

Mrs. Daniel held a pair of news conferences. She first called the report an "exaggeration," adding: "I have come to allay your fears."

Later, with not a hair of her brown, swept-back roll out of place, she reappeared and termed the hospital report "a bad choice of words."

Her confidence appeared shaken, however, and she said, "I don't think anyone can be absolutely positive what's going to happen and when."

By Saturday, the poise which Mrs. Daniel acquired during her training as a concert soprano and television personality returned.

She again was smiling and said, "He feels much better since being fed." Referring to her own chores, she said the cook at the Truman residence in nearby Independence was off for the weekend.

"So guess who's doing the cooking?" she laughed.

Elm City Man Dies In Blaze

ELM CITY, N.C. (AP)—A fire of undetermined origin Saturday night took the life of Amos Arthur Bunn, 48, an employee of the town of Elm City.

An Elm City police spokesman said Bunn was alone in his house when it caught fire.

The blaze, which was reported around 10 p.m., gutted the house.

The 1973 community committeemen and alternates have been elected, according to Stacy J. Evans, manager of the Pitt ASCS office.

Committeemen are listed in the following order: chairman, vice-chairman, regular member, first alternate and second alternate.

Durante To Stay In Hospital Care

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Entertainer Jimmy Durante probably will remain in a hospital here for at least another week, physicians say.

Durante, 79, is making satisfactory recovery from a severe concussion he suffered when he fell in the bathroom of his home last Monday and apparently struck the right side of his head on a wash basin.

Couple Weds Sunday Afternoon

BELL ARTHUR — In a candlelight ceremony Sunday at 5:00 p.m., Miss Linda Gayle Vandiford became the bride of Edward Lewis Jackson in the Bell Arthur Methodist Church.

The double ring ceremony was conducted by the Rev. Ralph Hill. A program of wedding music was presented by Mrs. Barbara Hinson of Bell Arthur, pianist, and Miss Elaine Ver-nelson of Pactolus, soloist, who sang "One Hand, One Heart," "O Perfect Love," and the "Wedding Prayer."

The church was decorated with a background of wedding palms. A fifteen branch arch candelabra centered the altar with a nine branch tree can-delabra placed on either side. Vases of white mums and gladioli completed the setting.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. J.B. Vandiford of Rt. 1, Greenville, and Mrs. Eloise Jackson of R. 2, Greenville, and the late Mr. Kenneth Jackson.

Given in marriage by her cousin, Dawson Smith, the bride wore an empire nylon gown designed with a high neckline with Venice lace bodice and bishop sleeves with lace edged cuffs.

She wore an illusion mantilla edged with matching lace flowing chapel length. The bride carried a cascade bouquet of white pom poms and pixie car-nations tied with streamers of satin and tulle.

Miss Brenda Vandiford of Rt. 1, Greenville, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a formal dress with a high neckline with a morter lace bodice, long sleeves and olive green chiffon skirt. She wore a matching olive green headpiece with a veil and carried a colonial nosegay of mixed miniature flowers in shades of yellow and gold.

Bridesmaids were Miss Kathy Vandiford of Rt. 1, Greenville, sister of the bride, and Miss Vicky Moye of Rt. 1 Ayden. They wore identical dresses as the honor attendant with matching accessories.

Miss Rhonda Hill of Bell Arthur was flower girl. She wore a full length gown designed with a high neckline and long puff sleeves. The beige linen bodice was trimmed with rows and lace and an olive green velvet ribbon. The skirt was of gold chiffon and in her hair, she wore an olive green velvet bow. She carried an arm basket filled with flowers similar to the at-tendants.

The mother of the bride was attired in a mint green polyester coat dress ensemble. The neckline of the dress was trimmed with matching lace. She wore matching accessories and a corsage of white car-nations.

The bridegroom's mother selected an American beauty rose crepe dress with a V-neckline and long sleeves ac-cented with Venice lace. She wore matching accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

Kenneth Wayne Jackson of Rt. 2, Greenville, brother of the bridegroom was best man and ushers were Tony Baker of Rt. 1, Greenville, Robert Mozingo and Carson Thomas, both of Greenville.

Stuart Jackson of Rt. 2, Greenville, was ring bearer.

Candles were lighted by

MRS. EDWARD LEWIS JACKSON

Timothy Jackson, brother of the bridegroom, of Rt. 2, Greenville, and Phillip Sutton, cousin of the bride, of Greenville.

The wedding was directed by Mrs. Connie Sutton of Green-ville.

After a wedding trip to unannounced points, the couple will reside in Bell Arthur.

The bride is a senior at Farm-ville Central High School and plans to attend Pitt Technical Institute. The bridegroom is a graduate of J.H. Rose High School and is presently em-ployed at Shinn Electrical Contractor, Greenville.

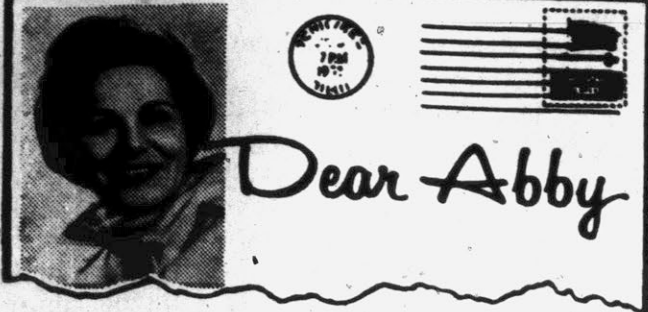

An after-rehearsal party was held in the community building at Bell Arthur.

A Christmas theme was used in decorations.

Hostesses were Mrs. William Earl Stocks, Mrs. Roberta Churchill, Mrs. Charles Jackson and Mrs. D.R. Sullivan, aunts of the bridegroom.

Young Celebrity Boosts Ego Of Woman

By Abigail Van Buren

(© 1972 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: Recently there has been a lot of public-ty about a romance between two celebrities—the woman being quite a bit older than the man. What a switch! Hooray for the man who publicly stated that he prefers "mature" women.

For years, women have watched older men go for young girls, and now along comes a handsome, talented young man who isn't ashamed to let the world know that he prefers a "mature" woman. What a boost that has been to the morale of the middle-aged woman.

Thank "you-know-who" for me, will you, Abby?

A MATURE WOMAN

DEAR MATURE: Mature men always have preferred mature women. But maturity doesn't automatically come with age alone. I say, "hooray for both of them!"

DEAR ABBY: I can no longer remain silent. Mothers who read their children's diaries deserve what they get.

As a child, I kept a diary, and I'm sure my mother would have turned white had she read it. Perhaps my mother was unusual, but I know she never touched my diary, because I always left it a certain way so I could tell if it had been opened, and it never had.

Abby, I was a very romantic child, and my fantasies were positively wild! I recorded "experiences" in my diary that took place only in my imagination. For example: "I must be careful not to call Mr. Smith 'Pete' in front of my parents because they are very friendly with him and his wife. I wonder what my folks would say if they knew that I sneak out every night to meet him secretly?" [I was all of 14 years old, and poor Mr. Smith never gave me more than a fatherly pat on the head, but I had a mad crush on him.]

I also wrote, [at 15], "I think I am pregnant. The doctor says he isn't sure, but I think he's wrong. If I am, I'll have to run away because I wouldn't know who the father is. . . . I've had so many lovers!"

Now that I am married and have children of my own, I'd never dare to read their diaries, I haven't the courage! Thanks for letting me say this. GOOD MEMORY

DEAR GOOD: And thanks for a good letter.

Banquet Honors Retiring Probation Officer Friday

Division One of the N.C. State Probation Commission honored Miss Ada Jones Friday night at the Ramada Inn, New Bern, at a banquet held pending her retirement on Dec. 31.

Miss Jones has been a probation officer for women for almost 28 years, having started with the Probation Department on May 15, 1945, and working out of Greenville.

Harry Douglass, Division supervisor, presented Miss Jones with an orchid on her arrival. Douglass was master of ceremonies for the banquet and presented State Probation Director W. H. Gibson, who commented on Miss Jones' work in the field of probation.

'Supervisor Douglass presented Miss Jones with a matched set of golf woods as a gift from her co-worker in Division One. Miss Jones expressed her appreciation for the gift and to all who had been of assistance to her during her years of service.

About 86 guests attended the affair including Director and Mrs. W. H. Gibson, Assistant Director and Mrs. Bert Sellars of Raleigh, Division Supervisors and their wives, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Douglass of New Bern, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Everette of Kinston, and Mr. and Mrs. Harold E. Bowers of Elizabeth City.

The dinner was followed by dancing in the ballroom.

Our Lawmen Passed Hard Test

A word of thanks and praise for the policemen, deputies and other law enforcers confronting the lawless mobs in Greenville Wednesday night is certainly due.

Gentlemen, you really proved yourselves. A lot of good men lost a night's sleep and risked their lives trying to do a job that stretched their capabilities to the limit. They were outnumbered, and their lines were stretched dangerously thin trying to cover so many eventualities that might be

A Commitment Is On The Line

By BRYAN HAISLIP
RALEIGH — North Carolina's commitment to the unfortunate victims of mental illness will be on the line in the 1973 General Assembly.

How seriously Tar Heels take their responsibility to provide adequate care and treatment will be answered by the legislators they elected, said Joe K. Byrd of Morganton.

"If John Q. Citizen conveys to his own representative and senator his interest in the cause of mental health, it will have a tremendous impact," said Byrd.

He knows the importance of citizen communication, because he's been there. He is a former state senator, now chairman of the state board of mental health, and a long-time champion for the mentally ill.

At stake in the upcoming session will be the request for $125 million additional funding to bring care in the state's mental institutions up to an adequate level.

The alternative to legislative action, Byrd warned, may well be a suit in the federal courts. It has happened in other states, and North Carolina "need be no exception."

Time To Meet Needs
"As long as the state has a surplus of $200 million, and the lack of adequate care has been demonstrated and documented, it would seem to me the legislature would be well advised to try and meet the needs," Byrd said.

The glare of publicity fell on the state's mental health system last spring when investigations revealed serious shortcomings. Mental health also rated high as a campaign issue, with both candidates for governor giving priority to improvements.

Talk has died down, but the issue is far from sleeping, said Byrd. "I feel there is a real groundswell of public concern, and a determination to secure better service," he said.

"As a whole, I find legislators are right much concerned that something be done," he added.

Three dozen or so lawmakers met at Butner recently to hear Byrd and mental health department officials explain the needs of the system. Sen. Eddie Knox of Mecklenburg and Charles H. Larkins Jr. of Kinston, former state senator and chairman of a mental health study group, took the initiative in arranging the session. It yielded encouraging evidence of legislative support, Byrd reported.

Holshouser Program Awaited

An "X" quantity for the moment is the approach James E. Holshouser Jr., the Republican governor-elect, will take in the field of mental health. What is unknown is not whether he supports the cause, but the exact shape of the program he will recommend.

"I personally think Gov. Holshouser will be very concerned with mental health," Byrd commented. "He has some personal knowledge of conditions and needs, and more than a passing interest in improvement."

Byrd said he has written to Holshouser, asking an opportunity to discuss mental health problems and proposals. "We want to dovetail our program with his recommendations," he explained.

What the Advisory Budget Commission will recommend for mental health in the budget it places before the legislature is still a guarded secret. The additional $125 million requested by the board and mental health department was trimmed drastically by the department of human resources before it was forwarded to the budget commission.

Past custom would indicate further revision may be made by the budget body, Byrd acknowledged.

Decision Up To Lawmakers
In any event, the intention is to go directly to the legislature with the effort to secure adequate funding, he confirmed.

The $125 million is a priority in order to provide care at a level recognized as adequate by standards applied by the court in other states, Byrd noted. Less than that, he cautioned, could leave North Carolina vulnerable to a similar suit. Improvements are being made in the system, Byrd said. For example, recruitment has boosted the medical staff at Cherry Hospital near Goldsboro to near its full complement. A lack of doctors was cited in the aftermath of an SBI probe at the hospital last year.

Earlier this year, the Advisory Budget Commission made an emergency allocation of some $824,000 to Broughton Hospital at Morganton for staff and equipment.

"We have a good mental health department. Those of us in the department and on the board know there are deficiencies. Many of them we can correct. Others raised. They showed restraint that is beyond the ordinary citizen's capability. Not one of the lawmen shot his gun, though the compulsion at times must have been near-overwhelming.

One can very well imagine that lonely feeling a policeman must feel when facing dozens of violent people...many carrying bricks, knives, clubs, and perhaps somewhere a gun. The taunts, mindless obscenities and threats coupled with the ritual of menacing gestures are all a part of the too-familiar war against law and order. But not one man allowed his feelings of outrage or uncertainty to prevail over his course of duty.

The lawmen's steadfastness kept the mob largely cordoned into a specific area. The plight of the families living in that sector of Greenville was most lamentable. They had to spend late Wednesday afternoon and night in a state of apprehension of the roving terrorists. Thursday night was another of tension for them, though it was relatively quiet; it just wasn't safe to be out on their own city's streets. It was part of the price the mobs exacted.

Civil War At The Pentagon?

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Two backstage tipoffs this week by Elliot Richardson, throwing the defense community into a frenzy, revealed his intent to be Secretary of Defense in fact as well as name — independent of high White House aides and powerful Capitol Hill hawks.

Tipoff No. 1: Richardson let it be known at the Pentagon that he not only intends bringing key aide Jonathan Moore from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) to Defense but is seriously considering him for the sensitive post of assistant secretary for international security affairs (ISA), now held by super-hawkish Warren Nutter. Moore, a former Foreign Service officer, is a well-known liberal Republican with markedly dovish views on Vietnam and defense policy.

Tipoff No. 2: In a meeting at the White House, Richardson suggested William G. Miller, aide to retiring liberal Republican Sen. John Sherman Cooper of Kentucky, as a Pentagon staffer. Another ex-Foreign Service officer, Miller has been the mastermind behind Cooper's Senate activities against President Nixon's global policies.

Richardson was thereby casting out a double gauntlet. By hinting his intention to name his own assistant secretary, he challenges the White House quest for iron control over government departments. By identifying two committed doves as advisers, he challenges Congressional hard-liners who resist a softer defense policy.

Thus, there looms a classical Washington power struggle but with much more than personal authority at stake. To strong proponents of national security worried about what direction defense policy might take with Richardson at the Pentagon, nothing less than the nation's survival is at stake.

The hard-liners had such concerns when Richardson's appointment was announced Nov. 28. But, as we forecast, they were mollified by the appointment of conservative Texas oil executive William Clements as deputy secretary, an appointment made by President Nixon without consulting Richardson. Not only was Mr. Nixon following plans to totally control the government by naming his own men to the subcommittee, he was also declaring against major deviations from outgoing Secretary Melvin R. Laird's strong defense line.

Once Clements was officially announced, worried hard-liners were given this reassurance: while Richardson presented a more liberal facade, Clements would be making policy. As a member of the Pentagon's blue-ribbon citizens' committee, Clements has been a hard-liner. What he does not know about defense, he can learn from his political patron, conservative Republican Sen. John Tower of Texas. The new look at Pentagon policy would be the face of Richardson but the mind of Tower.

Indeed, this reassurance went on, Richardson would not be bringing his personal staff from HEW. In particular, Jonathan Moore was so involved in HEW programs he would not move.

Strong defense advocates breathed easier—but not for long. They were disturbed this week to find Moore at a Pentagon desk as Richardson might ask the President to name Moore to ISA.

The worst was yet to come. If Capitol Hill hawks distrust Moore from afar, they detest Miller at close distance. Having battled Miller in behalf of Nixon national security programs since 1969, horrified Senate Republicans believe his possible appointment confirms their worst suspicions about Richardson.

Complicating this ideological struggle is the determination by White House major domo H. R. (Bob) Haldeman and his bloodlessly efficient personnel chief, Frederick Malek, to run Cabinet-level departments from the President's Oval Office. Whereas Cabinet members picked their own assistant secretaries in 1969, the selections have moved to the White House. Thus, Malek likely will resist Moore at ISA.

But even if Moore does not become an assistant secretary, he seems sure to be at Richardson's side. And even if the far more controversial Miller is sandbagged en route to the Pentagon, a similar-minded aide might be selected. Whatever happens to them, (Continued on page 5)

USE YOUR NOSE
The writers of salacious books are offensive not only because of the obscenity in which they deal but particularly because of their effrontery. They solemnly declare—and many critics join in the chorus—that these books constitute true art. To raise a finger of warning against anything these smut artists care to write is termed censorship. They claim to write what they call "adult literature." Of course they write nothing of the sort. They have an adolescent interest in obscenity and a sufficiently facile pen that they can get away with almost anything and call it art.

Anyone who gets to the place where he considers himself beyond public regulation of any sort needs to be slapped down, and slapped down hard. The individual has to be restrained at times in the interest of society at large. Most of the men and women turning out salacious literature and mediocre writers. Their books make the best-seller list because perverse human nature—because of its perversity—frequently likes to read that sort of stuff.

"Sour grapes," I hear someone yell. "Could you write any kind of novel yourself?" To which I reply the words of a famous dramatic critic, "No, and I couldn't lay an egg either; but I can tell a bad one when I smell it."

On Searching Luggage

WASHINGTON — Most of the airlines are now searching carry-on luggage in order to thwart hijackings. This is a very commendable practice, but it leads to some embarrassing situations.

In the past you never had to give much thought to what you packed in your hand suitcase. But now that strangers can plow through your personal effects, you have to change your whole style of traveling.

Some people don't care what an airline employee or federal marshal thinks when he zips open your luggage. But I'm not one of them. I get nervous as soon as my flight is announced.

For one thing, I get terribly embarrassed about anyone seeing dirty laundry in my bag. I'll stay over at a hotel an extra day and have my laundry done just so I won't be humiliated at the check-in gate.

While this takes up a lot of extra time, several federal marshals have complimented me on the whiteness of my shirts and the neatness of my underwear.

I spent a lot of time thinking about what books to carry in my bags in the past. Before the new anti-hijacking rules went into effect, I would always buy a Mickey Spillane paperback with a sexy cover at the airport. And I was never without a copy of Playboy.

But now I have to think about what books and magazines the marshals would approve of.

I live in deathly fear that some federal marshal is going to find a copy of "Candy" in my personal effects and yell out, "Hey, Harry, we got a poyvert on this flight!"

So now I limit all the reading matter in my baggage to the Speech of George Romney and old copies of the Reader's Digest.

I am even nervous about my toilet articles, particularly if a woman is inspecting my baggage. I never know if I'm using the right deodorant or carrying the right after-shave lotion.

Recently I offered a lady marshal who looked like Arlene Francis an antacid tablet and she scornfully produced one of her own which was half as large but contained twice the number of ingredients.

It's amazing how innocent people feel guilty when someone goes through their luggage. This is particularly true of women who have to open up their handbags. It takes my wife two hours to get her handbag just right when she's going on an airplane trip. Then afterward she's never sure if it contained the right things.

If I have any objection to being searched at the airport, it is the impersonal way it's being done.

Usually the marshals search your bag and then wave you through. I think it would add much more zest and fun to it if they would each carry a piece of chalk and grade you on the outside of your bag on your packing. Those who got "A" would be given the first choice of seats. Those who received an "F" would have to repack and take the next plane.

It really galls me when I spend so much time on my hand luggage to get the same treatment as someone who just threw his dirty clothes into the bag as if he didn't give a damn.

Prices Deter Ending Controls

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — The argument for dropping wage-price controls this coming April has been undermined by the decidedly bad news that wholesale prices rose strongly in November after showing signs of settling down.

It isn't likely to be the only bad news either, because there is an inclination in expanding industrial economies for wages and prices to seek ever higher levels. It is unthinkable that they should fall.

It is so in Canada and Britain and Germany and Italy and France and Japan and every other nation dedicated to using to the limit its resources, physical and human, so as to keep the greatest number working at the highest wages.

Compared to some European nations, the United States has done a superb job of tackling the price issue. The rate of inflation has been reduced to about 3.5 per cent, while in Europe it is rising above 6 per cent.

But there are developing patterns in the United States suggesting that while it was courageous to rope the bull with wage and price controls, it will be another thing to wrestle the ensnared animal to the ground.

Wholesale price increases generally presage retail price rises sometimes by only a matter of weeks, as with food, a major factor in the big six tenths of one per cent rise in November.

Adding ammunition to the argument for a retention of controls is the fact that spending pressures remain strong throughout the economy—in

Can't Read Music

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — Bill Anderson is tall and handsome, looks like a rising young life insurance salesman, and shakes hands with a grip so firm you figure he must spend his spare time cracking walnuts between his fingers.

But at 35, having overcome the handicap of a college education, Bill is one of the nation's top ten country music stars and author of more than 500 songs.

Contrary to tradition, he wasn't born in a hollow in the hills with a guitar in his hands. Search through his neatly cut hair and you'll find nary a hayseed in it. Bill is no more of a yokel than any other businessman who grosses more than $1 million a year.

Anderson and his six-man group, "The Po' Boys," will travel some 100,000 miles in a specially designed bus this year and give nearly 200 concerts. They also have a weekly television program, "The Bill Anderson Show," which is syndicated to more than 120 stations.

Bill, South Carolina-born, worked as a disc jockey and a sports stringer for the Atlanta Constitution while getting a degree in journalism at the University of Georgia.

Journalism's loss became country music's gain when Bill began beating around the country in an ancient car, earning $50 a night with his friend, Roger Miller, when they worked. Now his group gets up to $5,500 a concert.

His future life began to form for Bill when he was 13 and a neighbor down the street showed him how to plunk out a few basic chords on an old guitar. Bill took it from there.

"I can't read music, but I can write it," he said. "I feel music very deeply. I don't know whether that means I have an ear for it or not."

"I never had any formal music education. I did take a course in music appreciation in college, but I flunked it. They didn't appreciate my music, and I didn't appreciate theirs."

But at 19 Anderson wrote a song called "City Lights" which still brings in money. Among his other hits have been "Where Have All Our Heroes Gone," "Still," "Five Little Fingers," and, most recently, "Don't She Look Good," a present favorite.

Bill said that a really smash song can earn from $30,000 to $100,000 or more during its lifetime.

"Next year I'm going to give fewer concerts because they cut down on my song writing time," he said. "I usually start with an idea or phrase and get the melody later. They say that the lyric is 90 per cent of a country music song because it tells the story."

Fresh North Viet Troops Reported 'Infiltrating'

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, DECEMBER 12, 1972

CARROLL RIGHTER'S HOROSCOPE

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: After a confusing start you have a good chance to set your overall aims to a truly workable expression. Get in touch with those who are aware of your interests and ask them for the information you need. Be sure to show appreciation.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You are easily able to get together with a bigwig for the advice and backing you need. Know your facts and figures well before launching new project. Do more constructive thinking.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) A person whose experience has been different from yours can give fine advice and help improve your personal aims. Get busy making progress with your congenial business associates. Pull together.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Find the best system for taking care of your career problems that have been giving you much trouble for some time. Giving special attention to mate can work wonders now. Show more kindness.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Give your associate information he needs at this time and you can both benefit nicely. Do whatever will gain you the favor of a higher-up in public life. Give praise to associates.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You can get to work now and improve your financial status. Give a co-worker a break. It will be appreciated. Take the proper exercise and treatments to improve your health. Avoid any arguments.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Provided you stick to the inexpensive, you can have a delightful time during spare hours now, but apply yourself seriously to business during work hours. You can find your rightful niche in life.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Do whatever will make your home more charming and comfortable so that kin will be pleased. See to it that all appliances work perfectly. Household items should be immaculate.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Join with some good friend and take a little trip either for pleasure or business that's important to you at this time. Take health treatments in the evening. Use care in travel.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Use the practical approach with those who live with you and get far better results. Try to understand the problems of others instead of becoming temperamental. Be observant.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) If you talk matters over with associates, you find that regular routines can be improved quickly after exchanging ideas. Making business appointments now is wise. Don't argue.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Instead of worrying so much about not having all the funds you need, get busy doing something constructive about the situation. Don't let anything keep you from progressing. Be alert.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Know what your personal aims are and how to attain them in the easiest and fastest way. Enjoying the company of good friends is wise. They can open many a door of opportunity to you.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be one of those young people who will take a negative outlook on life if you don't teach the importance of being positive. Direct the education along analytical lines and preferably in the field of government where abilities can be used for constructive purposes. A splendid worker here.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

SAIGON (AP) — Fresh North Vietnamese troops today were reported infiltrating toward Saigon from the Parrot's Beak region of Cambodia. They ran into a battalion of South Vietnamese militia and touched off one of the sharpest ground battles in weeks.

Initial field reports said 87 North Vietnamese were killed in the fighting nine miles south of the provincial capital of Tay Ninh.

Thirteen U.S. B52 strikes were flown in an arc-shaped area stretching 23 miles northeast and 48 miles northwest of Saigon, the U.S. Command reported. The strikes apparently were in response to the enemy thrust.

More strikes were flown in Binh Duong Province, south and east of Tay Ninh. They were the heaviest in that province since Oct. 6.

About 20 of the big bombers struck again at a North Vietnamese staging area just above the demilitarized zone, dropping some 600 tons of bombs within a five-mile radius.

B52 strikes near the district town of Ba Tom, on South Vietnam's central coastal plain, wiped out a Communist barracks; and 91 enemy bodies were found, the South Vietnamese reported. South Vietnamese infantrymen located 40 weapons among the debris of 15 barracks buildings and 2½ tons of rice left by those who fled.

In the southernmost Mekong Delta province, An Xuyen, militiamen fought off a heavy enemy attack on an outpost Sunday and killed 25 Communists, but 14 of the militiamen were killed and 11 were wounded in the battle, the Saigon command reported.

A total of 70 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong attacks were reported across South Vietnam from 6 a.m. Sunday to 6 a.m. Monday, the command announced. All but 17 were by shelling.

The U.S. Command reported that Typhoon Teresa ripped through the Lang Army Air Base on the central coast Sunday, damaging three helicopters and a Skyraider fighter bomber and bringing military operations in the area to a halt.

Power lines were torn down and roofs ripped from hangars and other buildings, but no casualties were reported.

The storm also devastated several refugee camps, leaving several thousand refugees without shelter, Vietnamese officials reported.

In Laos, the CIA-backed army of Meo Gen. Vang Pao lost three forward defense positions just north of his headquarters at Long Cheng, 80 miles northeast of Vientiane.

A U.S. military source said it had not been determined how far Vang Pao's soldiers would be pushed by the Communist attack, which began Friday morning with a heavy artillery and mortar barrage followed by a ground assault.

Casualty figures have not been released, but they are known to be high. A number of soldiers were missing from a unit that was overrun.

Area Farm Meet Is Set At Washington

An area meeting has been scheduled for Washington, N.C. on Thursday, December 14, to give local people an opportunity to discuss agricultural matters with several administrators from North Carolina State University.

Ed Yancey, Pitt County extension chairman, said the Washington meeting has been planned for the people of Hertford, Bertie, Martin, Pitt and Beaufort counties.

Fourteen such meetings are planned across the state in an effort to improve communications between local citizens and the School of Agriculture and Life Sciences at NCSU, Yancey explained.

"The NCSU officials will report on what the University is doing in the way of agricultural teaching, research and extension. Local people will have an opportunity to discuss their problems and needs," Yancey added.

Farmers, agri-businessmen and other people with an interest in agriculture are invited. Starting times is 7:30 p.m., and the place is the Agricultural Building in Washington.

J. Worth Gentry, president of the N.C. Agricultural Foundation, plans to attend the meeting. NCSU will be represented by Dr. James E. Legates, dean of the School of Agriculture and Life Sciences at NCSU, and several members of his staff.

Soybean utilization in 1972-73 is expected to be up moderately from a year ago. Demand continues strong despite high prices, and usage could reach 1.3 billion bushels. Carry-over on September 1, 1973, will likely be near the past year's low level.

Domestic crushing probably will not differ greatly from last season's 722 million bushels. While the demand for protein is strong, world supplies of fats and oils appear burdensomely large and the weakened oil market will dampen the demand for soybean crushings. Increased supplies of protein from cottonseed will satisfy some of the normal growth in the soybean meal market.

Foreign demand for U.S. soybeans will continue strong in 1972-73 with less competition from Peruvian fishmeal and foreign oilseeds. Exports of U.S. soybeans are expected to reach a record high, possibly as much as one-fifth above the 416 million bushels shipped last season.

Farm prices of soybeans will be higher in 1972-73. Harvest price in North Carolina will likely average around $3.20 and strengthen seasonally as supplies decline, reaching a possible level of $3.50-$3.60 per bushel by early summer. The upper range of price will be established by any upward movement in oil and meal prices. Meal is already selling quite high in view of available supplies and the odds are not good for a meal price increase.

Indications point to greater soybean acreage planted in 1973. Higher farm prices, coupled with changes in the 1973 Feed Grain Program will encourage farmers to plant more soybeans in 1973. An 8-10 percent increase in North Carolina acreage appears likely at this time. During the past two years, there has been an 11 percent and an 8 percent increase, respectively, in acreage harvested for beans in North Carolina.

Ear-Pop Is Given Name

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI) — The next time your ears won't "pop" after an airplane ride take comfort in the fact that you've got an official but temporary disease known as aerotitis.

Medical studies have uncovered the cause but the cure is still the same old thing kids and grownups alike do after a fast elevator ride. Sufferers can relieve the ear pressure by swallowing or by closing the mouth, pinching the nose tightly and blowing, advises Dr. C. Richard Wolf.

Aerotitis is caused when the eustachian tube is blocked, so that air pressure in the middle ear can't adjust to outside air pressure. Airline stewardesses are most afflicted by aerotitis, said Wolf.

Decongestants and antibiotics can be helpful in treating the ear that won't "pop" but for most sufferers a closed mouth and reversed air pressure does the trick.

Mrs. Marcos Says She Did Not Panic

MANILA (AP) — Imelda Marcos says she saved herself from serious injury at the hands of a knife-wielding assailant Thursday because she did not panic, the Daily Express reported today.

The 43-year-old wife of President Ferdinand E. Marcos was released from the Makati Medical Center Sunday night and returned to the Presidential Palace to convalesce.

The Express said she was in high spirits and already was able to move three badly cut fingers on her right hand.

"I was really lucky," Mrs. Marcos said. "I did not panic when I saw the man lunging at me." The attack took place at a public ceremony.

In fact, she said, he seemed to hesitate just before he rushed at her. She said she remembered the man reaching out to pin down her right arm as he pulled out the bolo knife from his left sleeve and aimed it at her chest. Mrs. Marcos said she managed to free her arm in time to make a cross-arm parry so that she caught the blade near her left wrist. It went on toward the left side of her chest and slashed her gown but did not even scratch her skin there.

"I never lost consciousness," Mrs. Marcos said. "I know I kicked and kicked even when I was already down."

Mrs. Marcos was cut four times on both hands and arms. Three middle fingers of her right hand were almost severed by the hacking.

Hog killings, like farm numbers and the mule population, keep decreasing in North Carolina, but Tarheels still practice this winter ritual probably more than any other farm folks in the country.

According to Woody Upchurch, agricultural information specialist at North Carolina State University, the number of hogs slaughtered on the farm dipped to 130,000 in 1970, less than half the number of 1962. But the value of the meat killed for home use remains fairly steady at around $11 million.

The ham remains the most valued portion of the pig, just as it remains an important source of pride for the farmer who has developed the skill required to properly cure and care for a genuine "country ham."

But not all hams are cured properly. In fact, the loss attributed to improperly cured hams is estimated in the thousands of dollars.

The losses come primarily from three sources: spoilage, off-flavors and insect damage, according to food scientists at North Carolina State University.

Getting a uniform cure is important in avoiding spoilage and off-flavor. The NDSU meat experts recommend applying the curing mix — whether straight salt or salt with sugar and salt-peter — as soon as the ham is cut following chilling. They use about one and a quarter ounces of mix per pound of ham or eight pounds for each 100 pounds.

The curing mix should be rubbed on the ham at three different times. The first time is when the meat is cut and ready, the second time is on the third day, and the third time on the 10th day. Contrary to some popular beliefs, a lot of rubbing isn't required — just enough to cover the surface.

Some curing mix should be packed into the shank end at each application.

Ideal temperatures for shelf-curing hams are from 36 to 40 degrees. When temperatures go above 50 degrees for any length of time, there is some chance of spoilage.

Don't let the hams cure too long. One of the main objections to country hams is that many of them are too salty. Avoid this by curing on the following schedule: two days per pound for a 15-pound ham; one and three-fourths days per pound for a 20-pound ham; one and a half days per pound for a 25-pound ham. An extra day should be added to this schedule for each day the temperature averages below freezing during curing.

Bagging hams in clean, cloth bags with crumpled newspaper stuffed around the ham is a good way to store the meat for aging. The paper should not be packed tightly. Tie the bag closed and hang it with a string attached to the ham rather than to the bag.

Aging is required to give the ham good flavor. About six months is a good aging period.

Indignant Over A 'Small Room'

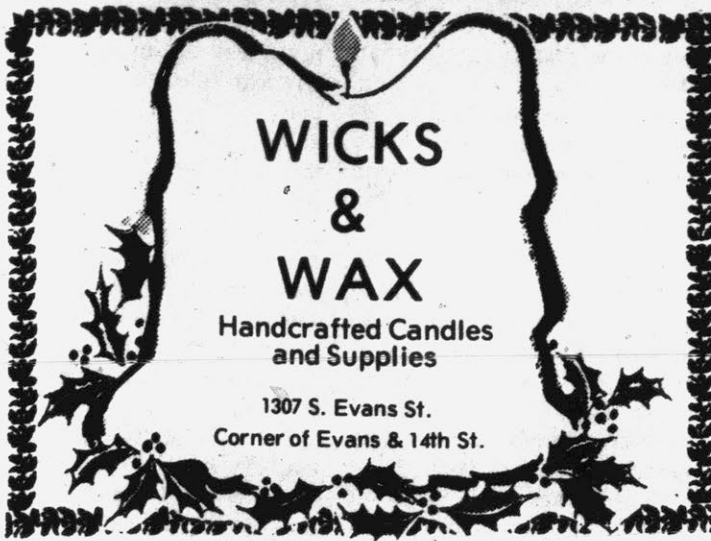

TOKYO (UPI)—When Takashi Masuda, one of the founders of Mitsui & Co., went abroad for the first time in the 1800s he and a friend were ushered into a small cubicle in a hotel in Marseille, France.

"Japan may be a very small country," Masuda said angrily. "But that does not mean we have to have such a small room."

It was his first experience with an elevator.

Sixty-eight per cent of motor vehicle accidents occur in rural areas, says the California Committee on Regional Medical Programs.

The Blue Cross and Blue Shield Service Center.

1½ million reasons why.

We had a lot of good reasons for building the new Blue Cross and Blue Shield Service Center. Some of them administrative. Some of them functional. Solid, cost-saving reasons. But the biggest reason of all was service. Improved service for you, our subscribers. All 1½ million of you. And the thousands of new members who are joining Blue Cross and Blue Shield every month.

Along with our constant growth and change have come expanded subscriber responsibilities, new direction, a continuing commitment to service, and the need for a centralized location. The need for the Blue Cross and Blue Shield Service Center.

So we're building it. The steel is up now and workmen are putting the glass panels on the framework. It should be finished in the spring of 1973. Our life will be a lot simpler then. Administrative efficiency will be increased. Service to you, our subscribers, will be improved. Instead of operating out of 11 different locations in the Durham-Chapel Hill area, as we are now, we'll have our Blue Cross and Blue Shield operations all together under one roof for the first time.

We're building the Blue Cross and Blue Shield Service Center for the future. Yours.

Serving you is our only business.

Wetlands Worth Preserving In Pitt Are Studied

"Are there any wetlands in Pitt County worth preserving either in their present state or in some form of multi-purpose use?

"If so, where are they located?
"What values do these areas have as wetlands that justify leaving them in this land use?"

These three basic questions are one to which Dr. Arthur J. Hawley, assistant professor of geography at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, is seeking answers.

He said this study, supported by a grant from the Water Resources Research Institute of the University, is being done at this time in order to identify important wetland areas in North Carolina before they are threatened with alteration or drainage.

"I feel that more intelligent decisions can be made in a non-crisis atmosphere devoid of political influences," he said. "I also feel that local citizens in this county are thoroughly familiar with their wetland areas. You are in a better position to identify the important wetlands and outline their values than anyone else in the state.

Therefore, I am requesting your help in identifying and helping to protect these wetlands which deserve this special attention."
He explained what a wetland is: "Wetlands are vegetated land areas with surplus water on or at the surface during at least part of the year. This includes swamps, bogs, marshes, and all other more specific categories. However, these wetland areas should not be confused with "wet" cropland areas. These are specifically excluded from this study. Somewhat arbitrarily I am omitting open, standing water areas such as lakes, sounds, and bays from this definition. Their inclusion unnecessarily complicates an already complex situation."
Dr. Hawley is sending maps like the one pictured here to any interested person. If the person feels there is no wetland area in Pitt County worth preserving, he should sign his name and return it. If he feels there are wetlands worth preserving, he should outline the location of each on the map. It would also be helpful for him to indicate levels of importance. Any areas not indicated on the map as wetlands which the person knows about should be added.

Dr. Hawley emphasized that, to ensure the preservation or conservation of important wetland areas in this county, he needs specific statements about the values these areas possess. "Broad and vague generalizations will not be sufficient. The more detailed and abundant the evidence for a wetland's importance, the greater the chances of preservation and, wherever possible, quantitative evidence of significance should be included. The specific qualifies which make a wetland important and worth protecting are left to your greater knowledge of the local situation."
"Statements phrased as if they were to be presented to the state legislature will carry the most weight. Eventually, that may be where they will be heard," he said.

Count 12 Deaths In N.C. Traffic

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
The North Carolina Highway Patrol says at least 12 persons died in Tar Heel traffic accidents during the weekend, including three who died near Asheville when two cars collided.
The deaths pushed the toll for the year to 1,839, compared to 1,709 during the same period last year. The Buncombe County wreck killed John Hugh Brown, 66, of Rt. 2, Arden; his wife Louise, 62; and William Braxton Leddy, 66, of Miami, Fla. Four persons were injured in the accident.

Three victims were pedestrians. Henry William Elledge, 21, of Rt. 1, North Wilkesboro, was killed on N.C. 18 seven miles north of Wilkesboro when he walked into the path of an oncoming car. Nasbie Junior Tyler, 13, of Rt. 7, Lumberton, died when hit by a vehicle eight miles north of Lumberton. And Bryan Mayo, 9, of Rt. 1, Hu-

Soviet Says Border Fight

MOSCOW (AP) — A band of armed Chinese entered Soviet Kazakhstan from Sinkiang Province last month to attack Soviet shepherds, killed five Russian soldiers and an unknown number of shepherds and escaped across the border with a large number of sheep, a secret government report says.
The report, according to Western diplomatic sources, said that one Chinese was captured and that Peking rejected a Kremlin protest. The Chinese government said the marauders were bandits and no concern of the Chinese government.
It was the first report of bloodshed on the Chinese-Soviet frontier since tank and artillery battles in 1969. The Soviet and Chinese governments have charged in the past that border raids have been officially instigated. The two nations have been arguing for more than 10 years over 580,000 square miles of territory in Siberia and the Soviet Far East. Talks were begun after the 1969 battles but so far have achieved little success.

COLOR 'EM DIFFERENT
MANILA (UPI) — Owners of motor vehicles were ordered to repaint their vehicles if their colors were the same as the official colors of the various branches of the Philippine armed forces.

when his speeding car struck a tree beside a rural road four miles east of Henderson. Jack Hayes, 47, of Rt. 2, Wilkesboro, died when his car hit an embankment near U.S. 421 three miles west of Wilkesboro. And Willie R. Quick, 25, of Rt. 1, Ellerbe, died when the speeding car in which he was riding went off a rural Richmond County road and hit a tree.

Twenty-three-year-old William Edward Frady of Albemarle was killed when his car skidded into the path of another vehicle one mile south of Albemarle.
The patrol blamed high speed for the death of Willie R. Quick, 25, of Rt. 1, Ellerbe. He was killed three miles north of Ellerbe in Richmond County when the car in which he was riding ran off the road and struck a tree.

Open Forum Set Tuesday

An open Forum will be held on Tuesday, Dec. 12, at 8 p.m. in the Biology Room 103 at ECU on the topic: "Humanization of the Campus or, Can the University Have a Heart?"

Sponsored by the Campus Ministers Association, the Forum will be moderated by John N. Miller, Presbyterian Chaplain. Panelists and reactors for the Forum will be Professors Bodo Nischen, and Norman Rosenfeld, with students Jackie Hawkins, Uril Greene, and Kathy Holloman, and Ron Scronce, a University Counselor. Announcing the Forum, Mr. Miller said the Christian emphasis at Christmastime on the incarnation of God in Jesus suggested the Forum topic. "Jesus taught and showed what genuine humanity involves. We are asking the question as to how the University scene serves to make the people here more truly human, or less so? We believe many persons—students, faculty and others—are concerned about what ECU does to people, what mark it leaves on their lives during the years they spend here."

Invitation to enjoy the Forum discussion is extended to the public, and refreshments will be served during the informal period afterward.

Blame Explosion On Natural Gas

CLINTON, Mo. (AP) — Investigators blame accumulation of natural gas for an explosion and fire that killed eight persons and destroyed a half-block section of the Clinton town square.

Five of the victims were would-be rescuers attempting to free a mother and daughter trapped in one of the four buildings reduced to rubble by the initial blast Saturday night.

Seven other persons were injured and four remained hospitalized Sunday. There was no immediate estimate of the damage, but it was expected to total at least $250,000.

He Ate Mice To Stay Alive

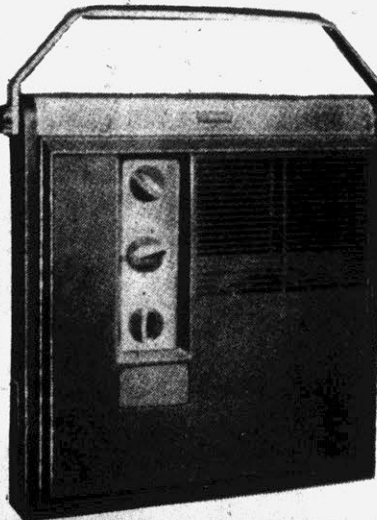

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (AP) — A 48-year-old trapper says he had to eat mice to stay alive and walked eight days and nights in the remote bush country of northern Ontario before being found.

Two snowmobilers found Andy Mavracic of Gravenhurst about 40 miles north of Sault Ste. Marie Sunday.

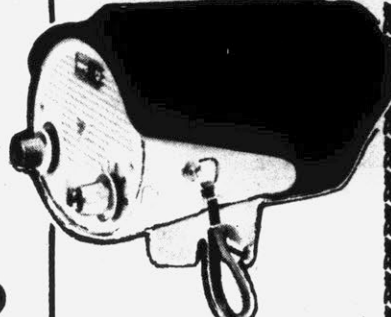

Mavracic, who lost 30 pounds in the ordeal, was treated at a Sault Ste. Marie hospital, where his condition was described as good. He returned home today.

Woody's Ramblin's

By WOODY PEELE

East Carolina University's Pirates went through some scary moments Saturday night before finally pulling out a 15-point victory over Appalachian State University.

It looked like nearly everything the Pirates put up just refused to drop into the basket. At one point during the first half, when Appalachian was running up an 11-point lead, the Pirates were shooting only about 25 per cent. They weren't just missing the long ones, but the easy layups too.

They warmed up however and went on to post at 60 per cent clip in the second half.

The Bucs didn't have as many turnovers against Appalachian, 20, as they did against Davidson, 37, but they will still need to cut this if they are to finish at the top or near the top in the Southern.

Jerome Owens, usually a starter for the Pirates, was on the bench, in street clothes on Saturday night. He's believed to be suffering from a pulled gron muscle. It's uncertain how long he'll be out of action.

He's the second Pirate to be sidelined after only three official games. Tom Marsh injured a knee in the Baltimore opener, and hasn't been dressed out since then.

Tuesday's game with Duke in Durham is the start of a long road trip for the Pirates, who visit Mines Coliseum only twice during the next 50 days.

After the Duke game, they go to St. Francis, Pa., then close out the December conference slate against the Citadel on Saturday.

After Christmas, they'll be in Monroe, La., for the Northeast Louisiana Tournament, which also includes Mississippi State and North Texas.

They're then on the road against Richmond, Furman, William and Mary and VMI in the conference during January, while also visiting Jacksonville.

The only two home dates are VMI on the sixth of January, and George Washington on the 17th.

The 31st finally ends the long drought with a string of four home games.

Again, it's no excellent schedule for the Bucs. As we recall, ULCA (and most of the other teams that have national reputations for winning) play close to 75 per cent of their games at home.

Three Repeaters In Invitational Honors

MONROE, La. (AP)—Many of the big names failed to show or perform in the sixth annual Northeast Invitational, but there were three repeat winners.

Alabama sprinter Thomas Whatley won the university division 60-yard dash in :06.1, while Tennessee long-jumper Thomas Geter won the long jump in 24-6, his winning distance of last year. And former Harding College miler Tim Geary took the spotlight in the college mile in 4:24.6.

There were no records set Saturday, but one of the night's top performances was turned in during the university mile with Kansas star James Ewell's 4:07.4.

Willie McGee, who shares the world record in the 100-yard dash, failed to show for the meet.

And Bronze Medal winner Jan Johnson of Alabama didn't pole vault because of a broken pole—it was to have been the first time that Johnson had vaulted in competition with the green pole he was not allowed to use in the Olympics.

World hurdle record-holder Rod Milburn of Opelousas, La.,

had planned to compete in the meet, but cancelled earlier in the week when Southern University officials decided not to allow the track team to participate in any meets while classes were suspended.

World pole vault record holder Bob Seagren was also scheduled to appear originally, but the National Amateur Athletic Union refused to allow him to compete in the meet since he had announced plans to turn professional.

Appalachian Gets 'Chance' Tonight

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Sooner or later, William and Mary's young Indians are going to start throwing their weight around in the Southern Conference basketball race and Coach Press Maravich of Appalachian State hopes they don't begin tonight with his Mountaineers.

The Indians, who've lost their first five starts, invade Appalachian, which has won just once in five games, in the only action involving conference teams. The Mountaineers are 1-1 in conference play, the Indians 0-2.

Both will be coming off Saturday night league defeats, the Indians going down before The Citadel's Bulldogs 82-74 and the Mountaineers taking an 84-69 licking at the hands of East Carolina's defending conference champion Pirates.

Virginia Military's Keydets trounced Richmond's winless Spiders 71-60 in still another league encounter Saturday night that left four teams tied for the conference lead at 1-0—The Citadel, VMI, Davidson's Wildcats and Furman's Paladins.

The Wildcats suffered their first defeat in four starts when they bowed at Princeton 82-78.

Furman had the night off and now is the only team unbeaten over-all with three victories.

Playing a deliberate offense, The Citadel built a 13-point lead at intermission over William and Mary, then ran with the Indians and managed to hold them off.

The Indians, led by freshman Mike Arizin and sophomore Tom Pfingst, cut their deficit to five points late in the game but couldn't get any closer as Chuck Cordell, Mike Morris and Oscar Scott scored crucial points for the Bulldogs.

Cordell finished with 26 points, Steve Fishel with 17 and Scott with 15 for the Bulldogs. The Indians were led by Arizin with 20 and Pfingst with 13.

Appalachian held a 34-32 half-time lead at East Carolina, but the Pirates hit 60.5 per cent of their shots from the floor after intermission as they gradually pulled away after gaining the lead for good at 45-44.

Earl Quash had 22 points and Roger Atkinson 17 for the Pirates, while Al Faber pulled down 13 rebounds and Nicky White 11. Stan Davis of the Mountaineers had a game-high 25 points.

VMI's big trouble last year was poor shooting from the floor, but the speedy Keydets gunned away at a 57 per cent clip in beating Richmond, which shot a respectable 44.9 per cent.

It took the Keydets only two minutes midway the first half to turn a 15-10 deficit into an 18-15 lead. VMI built the margin to 15 points at one stage, but the Spiders twice cut it to four points in the second half before a late Keydet spurt put it out of reach.

Reserve Gordie Rawlyk had 21 points and David Lester 13 for VMI, while Ray Amann had 18 points and Jeff Snider 15 for Richmond.

"We just started standing around," said Richmond Coach Lewis Mills. "They outthrustled us and outfought us. And we only played in spurts. We got them in trouble a couple of times in the second half, but they came right back."

VMI Coach Bill Blair said "I thought we had a chance to open it up several times shortly before the first half ended. Then we would slow up. A couple of times I thought, 'This is it.' But it wasn't."

Davidson trailed Princeton 46-32 at intermission, sliced the deficit to 67-63 with four minutes left, then let Princeton build back a 14-point advantage the Wildcats couldn't overcome. John Falconi had a game-high 22 points for Davidson, starting a three-game road trip.

Tar Heels Ruined Florida '72 Record

By F.T. MACFELY
Associated Press Writer
JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — "We put a lot of pride in Florida football this season," Coach Doug Dickey said after bowl-bound North Carolina ruined a chance for his Gators to finish the 1972 grid campaign with a winning record.

The Gators wrapped up the season Saturday with a 5-5-1 mark after North Carolina roared back twice to grab a 28-24 victory at Jacksonville. The Tar Heels finished with a 10-1 record and will meet Texas Tech Dec. 30 in the Sun Bowl.

"Now we must develop more skills to be a championship team," Dickey added.

Florida Tailback Nat Moore, who ended the game on crutches along the sideline, set a school season rushing record of 845 yards before he was put out of action early in the third quarter with an ankle injury. He surpassed the 842 yards gained by Chuck Hunsinger in 1948.

"Nat strained a ligament," Dickey said. "We will have to determine if it will need surgery."

Fullback Vince Kendrick, running for 131 yards with Moore out, is also in line for an ankle operation.

"My ankle didn't feel real good, but our line was blocking well and North Carolina was keying on Nat when he was in there," Kendrick said.

Kendrick claimed he was in bounds on an end zone pass from Quarterback David Bowden that would have scored the winning touchdown with 13 seconds to play. But officials ruled him out on the fourth down play.

"If this game had been on national television, they would be talking about it for a year," said North Carolina Coach Bill Dooley.

North Carolina made two touchdown drives in the first half. Florida drove twice to a field goal and a touchdown. Florida took the lead 17-14 in the third quarter when Bowden passed 26 yards to 5-foot-9 Lee McGriff.

The fireworks really came in the final nine minutes. Fullback Sammy Johnson put North Carolina in front 20-17 on his second 5-yard scoring burst. Bowden whipped a 56-yard screen pass to Kendrick and a 19-yard toss to Willie Jackson in the end zone and Florida was on top 24-20.

North Carolina lost another drive through a fumble, but Phil Lamm returned a punt 27 yards to start the winning touchdown march. Johnson capped it with a 6-yard run with 1:41 to play.

Florida got to the Tar Heel 9, where the Bowden-Kendrick pass in the end zone was ruled out of bounds.

Pittsburg Had Heaviest Bats

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The Pittsburgh Pirates, in winning baseball's National League East Division last season, led the league in hits, total bases, doubles and triples, and had four of the circuit's top 15 hitters — more than any other team.

Official batting records released over the weekend showed the Pirates, who lost to Western Division winner Cincinnati three games to two in the playoffs, had a team batting average of .274, compared with runnerup St. Louis' .260, and collected 1,505 hits to the Cards' 1,383.

Houston's 2,070 total bases were second to the Pirates' 2,180, but the Astros led in runs batted in with 660 to Pittsburgh's 654.

Pittsburgh players in the top 15 were Al Oliver, whose .312 average ranked him sixth; Richie Hebner .300; Manny Sanguillen, .298, and Willie Stargell, .293. Stargell was third in runs batted in with 112 and fifth in home runs with 33.

Outfielder Billy Williams' .333 average brought the Chicago Cubs their first individual league batting championship since Phil Cavaretta hit .355 in 1945. Williams also led in total bases with 348 and was third in home runs with 37.

Johnny Bench of Cincinnati was the home run leader with 40, two more than San Diego's Nate Colbert, and also was tops in RBI with 125 to Williams' 122.

Atlanta outfielders Ralph Garr and Dusty Baker were behind Williams in batting with 325 and 321. It was the second consecutive year in which Garr was runner-up.

Pete Rose of Cincinnati had the most hits, 198, and his .307 was the eighth best batting average. The switch-hitting outfielder has averaged above .300 for eight straight seasons, a string matched among active players only by Roberto Clemente of Pittsburgh whose string went eight seasons through 1967. Ty Cobb's record of eight seasons with 50 or more stolen bases was matched by Lou Brock of St. Louis, who stole 63 bases, leading the league for the sixth time in the last seven seasons.

Academic Team Chosen

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — For the third straight year, linebacker Bryan Wall of North Carolina State and defensive back Ben Anderson of Clemson were named to the Atlantic Coast Conference All-Academic football team.

Virginia and N.C. State each placed five players on the team chosen by conference sports writers from among players with better than a "B" average for the 1971-72 school year.

Offensive guard Tom Kennedy of Virginia and defensive back Bobby Johnson of Clemson were named to the team for the second consecutive year.

The offensive squad members include: ends Karl Andreas, Clemson, Dave Sullivan, Virginia; guards—Kennedy, Steve Shawley, Virginia; center—Jus-tus Everett, N.C. State; quarterback—George Allen Jr., Virginia; running backs—Chuck Belic, Virginia, Stan Fritts, N.C. State, and Jerry Erhard, Maryland.

On defense: tackles—George Bell, N.C. State, Bob Parrish, Duke-linebackers—Wall, Ed Hoffman, N.C. State; backs—Anderson, Ben Fordham, Duke, Bobby Johnson, Clemson, and Phil Lamm, North Carolina.

TENNIS

NEW YORK—Top-seed Charles Pasarell of Puerto Rico outplayed a tiring Pancho Gonzales of Los Angeles 4-6, 6-2, 6-2, and won the men's singles title at the $75,000 Clean Air Tournament.

The Pack Is Back After Crunching Vikings 23-7

By BRUCE LOWITT
Associated Press Sports Writer

The Pack is back—mainly back in the playoffs. San Francisco is back in first place. Pittsburgh is back, a game ahead of Cleveland. And Miami ... well, the Dolphins are where they've been all National Football League season.

"We deserve the championship," Green Bay Coach Dan Devine said after his Packers had gotten just that—the championship of the National Conference Central Division, their first title since 1967 when they were in the Vince Lombardi era.

They literally brutalized Minnesota in the second half Sunday, holding the Vikings to a mere five offensive plays and turning a 7-0 deficit into a 23-7 crunching spearheaded by running backs John Brockington and MacArthur Lane and rookie defensive back Willie Buchanan.

Brockington became the league's first player to rush for 1,000 yards in each of his first two seasons as he churned up 113 yards against the Vikings. And Lane added 99 yards, setting up the first of three Chester Marcol field goals with a 37-yard dash and scoring later from three yards out.

Buchanan took charge in the third period, first intercepting a Fran Tarkenton pass and running it back 25 yards to set up Lane's score, then throttling a Minnesota drive by picking off another pass at the Green Bay 18 on the last play of the period.

In Sunday's other action, San Francisco silenced Atlanta 20-0. Pittsburgh slipped past Houston 9-3. Miami downed the New York Giants 23-13. St. Louis upset Los Angeles 24-14. Detroit tied Buffalo 21-21. Kansas City beat Baltimore 24-10. Denver shellacked San Diego 38-13. New England defeated New Orleans 17-10 and Chicago topped Philadelphia 21-12. On Saturday, Cleveland edged Cincinnati 27-24 and Dallas turned back Washington 34-24. Tonight, the New York Jets face the Raiders in Oakland.

The 49ers made a pair of Bruce Gossett field goals stand up for three periods, then broke things open against Atlanta with a pair of Ken Willard touchdown plunges as they moved half a game ahead of the Falcons.

"We already knew what we had to do," San Francisco Coach Dick Nolan said as his team faced playoff elimination. Then, looking ahead to a final game against Minnesota, one which the 49ers must win to assure themselves of the NFC West title, he added: "We've been in this position the last two years."

Roy Gerela kicked the Steelers into the NFL playoffs for the first time in their history with field goals of 24, 39 and 13 yards against the Oilers, the only real offense Pittsburgh had because of the loss, due to a dislocated finger, of quarterback Terry Bradshaw.

"I'm always prepared—that's my job," rookie Joe Gilliam said after he took over for Bradshaw and guided Pittsburgh within Gerela's range twice in the second period. Joe Greene took care of the defensive chores, sacking Dan Pastorini four times for 32 yards in losses.

The Dolphins became only the fifth club in NFL history to win 13 games in a season—and moved within one victory of the first perfect season since the 1942 Chicago Bears did it in an 11-game schedule.

Mercury Morris ran for 98 yards against the Giants, 12 of them on a scoring sweep, and Paul Warfield caught four passes for 132 yards, including a 34-yard touchdown toss from Earl Morrall, to offset a pair of Ron Johnson touchdown runs. Garo Yepremian also booted three field goals as Miami took advantage of six New York turnovers.

The Rams, falling a game back of the 49ers, scored on two Roman Gabriel touchdown passes—but Cardinals' quarterback Jim Hart outshone him with a couple of big plays. One

San Diego coughed up the ball three times in the third period and the Broncos turned them into a field goal and two Charley Johnson-to-Haven Moses touchdown passes for their rout. Jim Plunkett found Reggie Rucker on scoring passes of 31 and 25 yards to enable the Patriots to beat the Saints and end their nine-game losing spin. And Chicago quarterback Bobby Douglass ran for two touchdowns to pace the Bears past the Eagles.

If the Jets lose tonight, it'll assure the Browns of at least the AFC "wild card" playoff berth—although Cleveland is still in the running for the Central Division title.

Attitude And Depth To Help Conley Prospect

By CHIP LAMBETH
(Reflector Sports Writer)

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley lost four starters off last year's basketball team but attitude and depth may make the memory of those four disappear as the season progresses.

The Vikings have this year what Coach Shelly Marsh calls "Tremendous attitude" and players that can respond well to crucial situations. "I don't have to worry about depth," says Marsh. "We can get a good game out of the players on the bench and so far everybody has played."

The reserved corps is headed up by Gary Mobley, Lawrence Harper, Orlander Lewis, Milton Tucker and Willie Hawkins. "I've had to change around a lot," Marsh commented. "Kervin Hawkins lost his starting spot but is fighting to get it back."

The first games saw the Vikings go with the same starting line-up. Since then, however, the group of starters has changed with almost every contest.

The only starter off last year's team that is back is 6-5 Larry Daniels. At this point, Coach Marsh feels that he has shown the most improvement of anyone. "When we need points we go inside to Daniels. He is concentrating on the boards a lot this year, too." The coach has a lot of confidence in his outside shooting, also. In Mike Sutton and Clennel Streeter, Marsh has a pair of "tough" guards.

"Mike is good against a man-to-man. He hasn't shown his potential yet." Sutton can score outside as well as inside against the big men under the boards. Marsh feels that Streeter may be one of the quickest if not the quickest player in the conference. Against Farmville Central, Streeter stole the ball several times and turned them into scores that helped the Vikings dump their cross-county foe. This is his first year on the varsity team.

Offensively, the Vikings run a 1-2-2 with two low posts and two wings. Along with Daniels under the boards will be Kervin Hawkins at 6-2. Marsh feels that the team is not as skillful at this point as last year's team but the attitude and hustle makes up for it. One problem that worries Marsh, though, is the offensive rebounding. Defensively, the Vikes are rebounding fairly well but on offensive rebounding, they are committing too many fouls. Against Ayden-Grifton, this played an important part in the Conley loss as three Viking starters got into foul trouble and killed the press.

Defensively the Vikings are "Doing a good job." "We are keeping them out of the middle real well," Marsh pointed out. "We still make a lot of mistakes but they're learning. Farmville Central went inside more on us than anybody else." To combat outside shooting Farmville Central's McCoy Williams had 26 first half points against the Vikings as he scored consistently from 20 feet out. Marsh may put in a man-to-man type of defense.

Turning to the conference race, Marsh feels that the Chargers of Ayden-Grifton will be the team to beat this year. "They're going to be tough. They have five starters and five good players on the bench and they will be hard to beat."

Eastern Wayne may be the best shooting team in the loop, says Marsh and Greene Central. "...will serve notice." North Pitt has impressed Marsh as Being the most improved team this season and he feels they will make a run for the top five.

Conley, too, will be right in the thick of things in the race for the top this year.

John Bench To Surgery

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Reds catcher John Bench shoved aside a load of "get well cards" and prepared to undergo surgery today for removal of a spot on one lung.

Outcome of the operation was to be the topic of a news conference at Christ Hospital at 9:30 a.m.

The Reds said Sunday that a statement would be read, and Dr. George Ballou, team physician, would be on hand to answer questions.

Dr. Luis Gonzalez, Bench's personal doctor, was scheduled to perform surgery for removal of the lesion detected during routine examination of players in September.

The National League's most valuable player in 1970 and 1972, Bench disclosed results of the examination last Tuesday. He underwent further testing last week.

Chavis Again Free On Bond Of $50,000

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Black activist Ben Chavis is free on $50,000 bond while an appeal is pending on his conviction of arson-conspiracy charges growing out of racial violence in Wilmington, N.C., last year.
Chavis, 24, field organizer for the United Church Commission for Racial Justice and pastor of the Church of the Black Messiah in Wilmington, was released from North Carolina's Central Prison Saturday.

The Executive Council of the United Church of Christ in New York City posted the cash bond with the Pender County Clerk of Court.
Everett Parker, director of communications for the United Church of Christ, said attorneys would sue for reduction of Chavis' bail.

Chavis was sentenced Oct 18 at Burgaw to 18 to 25 years on arson charge and four to five years on a charge of conspiracy to assault emergency personnel.
Nine others tried at the same time received sentences ranging from seven to 26 years. They are still in prison.

BRIDGE QUIZ ANSWERS

Q. 1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A ♠J ♠K ♠Q ♠10 ♠9 ♠8 ♠7 ♠6 ♠5 ♠4 ♠3 ♠2 ♠A
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♦ Pass
1 ♥ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—Two no trump. Taking into consideration the promoted value of your holding in partner's suits, this hand is the equivalent of a sound opening bid and should produce a good play for game. Choosing between a jump to three clubs or a jump to two no trump, our preference is for the latter as the shorter route to game.

Q. 2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠10 ♠7 ♠9 ♠A ♠8 ♠3 ♠K ♠J ♠10 ♠5
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♥ Pass 1 NT Pass
3 ♣ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—Three diamonds. This hand increased considerably in value when partner made a jump shift in clubs and an immediate raise to five clubs does not quite compensate for the negative sound of your original response. A temporizing call in diamonds followed by a club jump may place partner in a position to bid a slam.

Q. 3—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K ♠6 ♠9 ♠5 ♠A ♠8 ♠3 ♠K ♠J ♠10 ♠7
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
Pass Pass 1 ♦ Pass
1 NT Pass Pass Dble.
What do you bid now?
A.—Redouble. This will inform your partner that you had a maximum no trump (10 points), and will establish a cooperative situation for doubling the opponents if partner's opening was sound and they begin to rescue themselves.

Q. 4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K ♠9 ♠3 ♠A ♠K ♠J ♠8 ♠4 ♠3
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♦ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
2 ♣ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—Five clubs. It is tempting to go directly to six, but there is a slight danger that you may be off two aces. The leap to five may induce partner to go to slam if his suits are headed by two high honors.

Q. 5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J ♠7 ♠K ♠9 ♠A ♠Q ♠10 ♠6 ♠4 ♠3
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
Pass Pass 1 ♠ Pass
3 ♦ Pass 3 NT Pass
What do you bid now?
A.—Five diamonds. With this holding you have no desire to play three no trump and four spades may prove too difficult to manage. Your trump suit is practically self-sufficient and there may prove to be an advantage in protecting the king of hearts from the opening lead.

Q. 6—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A ♠7 ♠K ♠Q ♠6 ♠K ♠A ♠Q ♠10 ♠2
The bidding has proceeded:
East South West North
1 ♦ Dble. Pass 1 ♠ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—Two spades. In order to raise to the level of three after doubling, your hand should be worth at least 10 points.

Q. 7—North-South vulnerable, with 60 part score, as South you hold:
♠A ♠K ♠6 ♠A ♠K ♠9 ♠5 ♠J ♠7 ♠K
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♥ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
3 ♣ Pass 4 ♣ Pass
What do you bid now?
A.—Five spades. The bid announces to partner that all is solid except for diamonds, and he should proceed to six if he has secondary control of that suit.

Q. 8—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠9 ♠8 ♠K ♠Q ♠10 ♠5 ♠4 ♠K ♠8 ♠7 ♠6
The bidding has proceeded:
East South West North
Pass Pass Pass 1 ♠ Pass
1 ♥ Pass Pass Dble.
Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—The king of hearts and the fifth club are impressive cards and a raise to three no trump is recommended, for partner has contracted for eight tricks knowing that you have little or nothing.

Use Familiar Names For Moon Places

By HARRY F. Rosenthal
Associated Press Writer
SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Exploring the moon, the Apollo 17 astronauts will make copious use of the names of greatness, fiction and whimsy that have stirred minds on earth.

Camelot, Bronte, Candide and Cochise, Lee, Lincoln, Mitchell and Jones. Sherlock, Gatsby, Lara and Nemo. They're all places the astronauts will visit during their three days on the moon.

"They are the people in the literary arts who have impressed me as having explored the human mind and the spirit at given times," said Harrison H. Schmitt, the geologist-astronaut who tacked on most of the names.

"They are just names that occurred to me," he went on, "people that I'm most familiar with in the reading that I do. They are people who are past greats in literature. There are some references, not to names, but to characters or places in the books of present writers that I personally feel close to."

The names — for craters, flats and mountains — will stick only so long as the astronauts are on the moon and serve to identify sites for the space scientists on the ground.

But they'll make a good parlor game for literary whizzes who happen to catch a moon-to-earth broadcast. Here is a little guide to some of the 62 names.

Agassiz: Louis Agassiz studied the geological and biological samples and data returned by Army explorers of the American West.

Agricola: Latin name of Greg

Bauer, 18th century author of treatises on mining and metal-lurgy.

Bronte: Charlotte Bronte,

19th century English novelist.

Candide: Protagonist of a satirical book with the same name by French author Voltaire.

Cochise: Apache chief. "I think he personifies many of the great things that exist within the Indian peoples," said

Schmitt, a New Mexican.

Holden: Holden Caulfield,

protagonist of "Catcher in the Rye" by J. D. Salinger.

Horatio: Horatio Hornblower,

a character in the historical fiction of C. S. Forester.

John Locke: English philosopher and scientist.

Henry: Prince Henry the Naavigator, 15th century supporter of early Portuguese explorations.

Lara: Heroine of Boris Pasternak's novel, Dr. Zhivago.

Nemo: Character in the novels of Jules Verne.

Rogers: Humorist Will Rogers and fictional space hero

Buck Rogers.

Shorty: A character in Richard Brautigan's novel "Trout Fishing in America."

Tasaday: For a tribe recently discovered in the Philippines;

living in a dense rain forest,

they reputedly are unaware of the moon's existence.

Rocks Can't Talk, Could Tell Plenty

By C. G. McDANIEL
AP Science Writer
SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Rocks can't talk, of course; but, oh, what they still can tell.

Maybe, just maybe, when Apollo 17 astronauts Eugene A. Cernan and Harrison H. Schmitt step onto the moon tonight, they will find one that will hold the key to the history of the universe.

From dusty gray, white and black rocks gathered on five previous Apollo missions, science has learned much about the earth and the moon.

But these samples also have raised many questions, and mysteries still remain.

And now, the last Apollo gives 20th century man one more chance to find the rocks that will solve the basic puzzle of evolution.

So far, 594 pounds of lunar rock have been returned to earth by lunar missions.

In a $54 million endeavor, 800 scientists from the United States and 17 foreign countries have studied samples of those rocks to learn how the moon and earth are alike and how they're different.

Another 200 pounds will be collected by Cernan and Schmitt, a professional geologist, during their three seven-hour walks in the Taurus-Littrow area of the moon.

It could be that one of the rocks they bring back will reveal what remains to be known about the moon.

If the area in which the Apollo 17 lunar module lands is of volcanic origin, then rocks there will have been heaved up as lava from deep inside the moon.

These would indicate something about the character of the moon's interior. And, from this, scientists perhaps could learn missing links in the history of the moon.

Important questions which remain to be answered include:

—Where did the moon come from and how was it formed?

—Is there water in the moon; was there ever any?

—Does the moon have a molten core such as that of the earth?

—Are there still active volcanoes there?

From previous moon explorations, it has been estimated that the moon is about 4.6 billion years old — about the same age as the earth.

Yet no rock has been found which dates to this time.

"It will be only through chance that we will ever find one," a scientist remarked at a conference on moon research earlier this year.

That rock — a survivor from an unbelievably ancient time of beginnings — could be discovered in the valley of Taurus-Littrow and returned to earth by Apollo 17.

Hair Hearing On Wednesday

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP)—A hearing is scheduled Wednesday for a suit brought by two Charlotte Guardsmen against the Air National Guard after they were told by their commanding officer they must cut their shoulder-length hair rather than hiding it under a wig.

The two, William Hough, 22, and Joseph Furr, 21, wore wigs to drill Saturday by order of U.S. District Judge James McMillan, who issued a restraining order forbidding the Guard from taking disciplinary action.

Hough and Furr had been wearing wigs to drill, but Air Force regulations forbid wigs except to hide disfigurement or baldness.

In his order, Judge McMillan said "no impairment of national security or military efficiency appears likely" if the men wear wigs in the meantime.

Next Husband Already Chosen

ROEROS, Norway (AP) — Actress Jane Fonda says she plans to marry antiwar demonstrator Tom Hayden following her divorce from movie director Roger Vadim.

Miss Fonda, 35, and Hayden, 32, will marry in the United States next year, a spokesman for Miss Fonda said.

Hayden was one of five persons found guilty of crossing state lines to incite riot at the 1968 Democratic convention. The convictions were reversed on appeal last month.

Still Sifting Wreckage Of Jetliner

CHICAGO (AP) — Investigators continue to sift through the charred pieces of a United Airlines Boeing 737 jet which crashed in a residential neighborhood here Friday, trying to find the cause of the disaster.

The job of identifying the bodies of the 45 victims ended Sunday. In some cases, relatives did not recognize victims, and the coroner's office was forced to rely on dental charts and fingerprints.

Twelve of the 18 victims who survived the crash remained hospitalized, including one in an intensive care unit. She is Margaret McCausland, a stewardess.

The dead include two women who were killed in their home when the plane plowed into rows of brick bungalows while approaching Midway Airport on the Southwest Side.

Meanwhile, a team of 15 aeronautical engineers from the National Transportation Safety Board combed the wreckage. Officials said they hope to have all the chunks moved to a Midway hangar sometime today.

Edward T. Slattery, NTSB's director of public affairs, said investigators do not intend to reconstruct the aircraft at this time. "This is done in cases of structural failure," he said, adding that did not appear to have been the cause of the crash.

Firemen digging through the rubble Saturday found a purse containing $10,585 in cash. The purse belonged to Mrs. Howard E. Hunt of Potomac, Md., a passenger killed in the accident.

Mrs. Hunt's husband, E. Howard Hunt, is a former U. S. ambassador to Uruguay and a consultant to the Nixon administration.

Largers Octopus Might Get You

CHICAGO (UPI) — In an underwater fight with an octopus you probably would win — depending on the octopus.

There are 36 varieties of these widely distributed mollusks, according to Encyclopaedia Britannica, and some have an arm spread of only 1 1/2 inches. The larger specimens, however, could be troublesome. One, found in Alaskan waters, had an arm spread of 32 feet.

Earl Warren On PBS Program

NEW YORK (AP) — There's a show on the Public Broadcasting System tonight that only can be described as a very good hour with a very distinguished man — former Chief Justice Earl Warren.

It's the first time the 81-year-old jurist ever has been interviewed at length on any television network. The program was taped last May at WGBH-TV in Boston, Mass.

The interviewer is Warren's close friend for 16 years, Dr. Abram Sachar, an historian and chancellor of Brandeis University. He persuaded Warren to do the program when the latter was in Boston to receive an award from the university.

The two-hour interview, edited to one hour for television, was conducted with one understanding: Warren wouldn't comment on the current rulings, direction or activity of the Supreme Court he headed for 16 judicially-turbulent years.

The former Chief Justice, who retired from the court in 1969, appeared pale and slightly fatigued on the program. His voice had the raspiness of age. But his thoughts were clear and direct.

He said some surprising things. One was that he found it easier to take criticism while in politics than while on the court.

A politician, he said, "has the right to get on his own rostrum and tell his story and defend himself ... and he releases the tension that he has by so doing."

"But when you're on the Supreme Court, you can't do that. You can't explain everything you did, you can't temper the thing in any way. You just have to accept it without any answer of any kind."

Warren also discussed the chilling conditions under which he reluctantly agreed to head the presidential commission formed to investigate the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

He took on the job a few days after the assassination, but it took a face-to-face plea by President Lyndon B. Johnson to persuade him.

The Warren hour starts at 8 p.m. EST. You should watch it. It's a fine look at the man whose court was criticized as too activist and who summarized his position this way shortly before he retired:

"We go with the cases that come to us ... We either hear them and decide them or we let them go and sweep them under the rug ... for future generations."

Rock-Throwing Here Last Night

One rock-throwing incident Sunday night was all that marred an otherwise quiet weekend of vandalism and attempted fire bombings last week.

Violence erupted Wednesday after a police officer shot a Negro during an arrest attempt. Funeral services for Connie James, 23, who was shot as he scuffled with policeman C.A. Williamson, were held yesterday afternoon.

Another funeral was also held Sunday afternoon — that of Greenville Fire Department Lieutenant Amos W. Harrell.

A veteran of 20 years with the department, Harrell became the first man to die as a result of an incident that occurred while on duty with the fire department.

Harrell, equipped with a fire extinguisher, was assigned to a police car Thursday night to answer fire calls, when he suffered a cerebral hemorrhage and died a few hours later in Pitt Memorial Hospital.

Two other men, both of them injured by blacks who attacked their vehicles Wednesday night, Dr. Joe Boyette of Greenville and Harry Schultz of Winston-Salem, remained in the hospital yesterday in good condition.

Schultz, who was also shot by his attackers, was released from the hospital.

In all at least 13 persons were injured Wednesday night and 48 vehicles damaged (with estimates totaling more than $9,000).

The mob violence of Wednesday gave way to three fire-bombing attempts Thursday night and two similar incidents Friday. Saturday and Sunday were again quiet with the exception of one missile-throwing incident reported last night.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Floyd Dewitt Keeter, 48 of Rocky Mount, reported his vehicle was struck by a brick about 8:15 p.m. as he drove along West Fifth Street.

Investigation into James' death is being conducted by the State Bureau of Investigation, while local law enforcement agencies and the SBI are investigating the fire incidents and Wednesday night acts of violence.

Kissing Custom 2,000 Years Old

NEW YORK (UPI) — Kissing under the mistletoe at Christmas is a custom that goes back over 2,000 years, according to Flora Mears of Hallmark Cards, an authority on seasonal traditions.

"The Druids in Britain considered the mistletoe a sacred plant," says Miss Mears. "Anyone standing under it was given divine protection." But because criminals often used it to avoid arrest, the custom was abolished in Queen Elizabeth I's reign. The tradition of forfeiting a kiss while standing under the mistletoe bough has been eagerly preserved over the years.

Rabbits love green plants, even eating poison ivy.

Pactolus PTA Meets Tuesday

PACTOLUS — The PTA meeting of the Pactolus Elementary School will be held Tuesday night beginning at 7:30.

A program of Christmas music will be presented by members of the third and fourth grades and Special Education II.

A business meeting will immediately follow the program.

Lang Is Honored At Air Academy

John A. Lang Jr., who formerly served as vice president for external affairs at East Carolina University, recently retired from the Air Force Reserve at the Air Force Academy in Colorado and was presented the Distinguished Service Medal, the third highest military award.

A major general in the Reserve, Lang had served as assistant to the superintendent of the Academy since 1965.

The citation accompanying the medal pointed out, "the forceful leadership and the outstanding and dedicated efforts of Gen. Lang were significantly displayed in the motivation, professionalism and dedication of young men destined to become leaders of the United States Air Force."

Currently serving as secretary of Military and Veterans Affairs in North Carolina, Lang earlier retired as administrative assistant to the Secretary of the Air Force.

Lang joined the office of the Secretary of the Air Force in 1961 as the deputy for Reserve and ROTC Affairs. He became the administrative assistant to the Secretary in 1964 and from 1965-66 was given as additional duty of acting special assistant for Manpower, Personnel and Reserve Forces.

Born in Carthage, he earned a bachelor's degree in 1930 and a master's degree in 1931 from the University of North Carolina. He also attended Mercer University in Macon, Ga. and was a member of Phi Beta Kappa.

Phyllis Diller, Husband Split

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Comedienne Phyllis Diller says she and her second husband, Warden Donovan, have separated.

"After my face lift, he began to look too old to me," she quipped Sunday.

Miss Diller, 55, and Donovan were married in 1965. He has two children by a previous marriage, and she has five by her first marriage.
