

Thieu Warned In Strongest Terms Near-Ultimatums For Thieu And Hanoi

SAIGON (AP) — President Nixon has warned President Nguyen Van Thieu he will cut off military and economic aid to South Vietnam if Thieu refuses to sign a peace agreement Washington expects Hanoi to agree to soon, high South Vietnamese officials said today.

North Vietnam tended to confirm reports it also had received a Nixon ultimatum, saying "the White House and the Pentagon have insolently threatened to continue the bombardment of the Democratic Republic of Vietnam...in order to force our people to accept the United States' absurd terms."

"The Vietnamese people...are determined not to yield before any brutal force and are determined not to be intimidated by any insolent threats," said a government statement broadcast by Hanoi radio.

While the White House and State Department declined comment, other U.S. sources said the Saigon ultimatum report was overdrawn although they did not deny Nixon put pressure on both Vietnamese antagonists.

Nixon also told Thieu not to try to circumvent U.S. peace efforts by making proposals of his own, as he did on Dec. 12, the officials reported. They said Nixon considered Thieu's proposal — made while Henry A. Kissinger and Le Duc Tho were negotiating in Paris — untimely.

Nixon's reported ultimatum was contained in a personal letter delivered Tuesday by Gen. Alexander M. Haig Jr., who flew from Washington as Nixon's emissary. Thieu discussed it with his National Security Council and then sent a reply by Haig, but what he said was not revealed.

The South Vietnamese sources also reported that after the breakdown of the Kissinger-Tho negotiations on Dec. 13, Nixon sent North Vietnam an ultimatum giving it 72 hours to agree to his demand that Hanoi recognize South Vietnam as a separate state.

When he received no reply, Nixon ordered heavy military pressure brought to bear. Mining of North Vietnamese ports above the 20th parallel was resumed Dec. 17, and the next night hundreds of U.S. bombers launched the heaviest attack of the war on the Hanoi-Haiphong industrial complex.

Nixon told Thieu that he has plans to force Hanoi to sign a fair and just agreement and predicted it would be concluded in the near future, the South Vietnamese officials reported. They said Nixon urged Thieu to join in signing an agreement because the United States has all the means to achieve a reasonable peace.

Nixon was reported to have told Thieu in the strongest terms that South Vietnam would be cut off from military and economic aid if he refused to accept Nixon's peace terms.

Kissinger told a news conference in Washington last Saturday that a settlement was 99 per cent complete. He refused to disclose the issue blocking the settlement, but South Vietnamese officials said it was North Vietnam's refusal to agree in principle to recognize South Vietnam as a separate state.

Hanoi has always maintained that North and South Vietnam are one nation and that the demilitarized zone between them is only a temporary dividing line, as provided by the 1954 Geneva Agreements.

Foreign Minister Tran Van Lam, refused to comment on Haig's visit but told newsmen there are still "some differences" between Saigon and Washington.

Three More B52s Lost, 12 Crewmen Missing, In Pounding Of N. Vietnam

By GEORGE ESPER
Associated Press Writer
SAIGON (AP) — The U.S. Command today reported the loss of three more B52 heavy bombers — with 12 crewmen missing — as the heaviest raids of the war continued on the Hanoi-Haiphong industrial complex.

Radio Hanoi said the Cuban Embassy was hit today, and most of the houses in the compound were damaged. A statement by the Cuban representative in Hanoi made no mention of any casualties.

The U.S. Command said two B52s were shot down in the Hanoi area this morning and all aboard are missing.

The third Stratofortress was hit Wednesday night. Its six crewmen nursed the crippled plane part way home, then parachuted to safety in northeast Thailand.

The announcement raised total losses acknowledged by the U.S. Command since the heavy attacks began Monday night to six B52s and two fighter-bombers downed and 27 fliers missing.

Heavy civilian casualties also were claimed by North Vietnam.

North Vietnam claimed its forces have shot down 12 B52s and 14 fighter-bombers, including seven B52s and an F111 swing-wing fighter-bomber on Wednesday night.

Hanoi said President Nixon had lost his senses and declared, "The criminal bombings made by the U.S. aggressors have only dimmed the prospects of a peaceful settlement. The Vietnamese people are determined to fight and fight hard till complete victory."

As the U.S. air attack continued, the Viet Cong announced it would observe 24-hour ceasefires in South Vietnam for Christmas and the New Year, beginning at 1 p.m. Saigon time on Dec. 24 and Dec. 31.

The South Vietnamese government was expected to announce similar truce periods, but this was not expected to extend to U.S. air forces operating against North Vietnam.

Radio Hanoi broadcasts reported that the American raids wiped out entire villages, wrecked thousands of homes and demolished many economic, cultural and social establishments. One broadcast said the Eye, Ear and Throat Institute of the Bach Mai Hospital in Hanoi was hit Tuesday and many doctors were killed and wounded.

North Vietnam said that, according to initial figures, U.S. bombs by mid-day Tuesday had killed 215 persons and wounded 326.

Tass, the Soviet news agency, reported the U.S. bombs left parts of two residential areas in the North Vietnamese capital in ruins.

In Washington, Pentagon spokesman Jerry W. Friedheim refused to agree with a reporter's characterization of the attacks as "terror bombings."

"We are striking military targets," Friedheim said. "We do not strike civilian targets."

Pentagon officials reported the raids had caused "very significant damage" to military targets.

Opine Hanoi Is Stalling Peace Negotiations To Bolster Its Position

By LEWIS GULICK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

Nixon administration strategists see Hanoi as stalling on peace negotiations, rather than scuttling them, in an attempt to strengthen its bargaining hand.

The secret Paris parley can get back on the track quickly once the North Vietnamese decide to resume serious talks, officials said. But they did not foresee this happening quickly, and they said no further meeting date has yet been set between Henry A. Kissinger and Hanoi's Le Duc Tho.

Newsweek was given this amplification of Kissinger's account as Gen. Alexander Haig, the Presidential adviser's top deputy, headed home from a quick Southeast Asian trip.

Senior South Vietnamese officials in Saigon said President Nixon has given both North and South Vietnam an ultimatum to sign a peace agreement, threatening Hanoi with continued bombing and Saigon with a cutoff in economic and military aid. Nixon was said to have sent word to South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu through a personal letter carried by Haig.

While the White House and the State Department declined comment, other U.S. sources suggested that the Saigon report was overdrawn although they did not deny Nixon pressure on both Vietnamese antagonists.

The U.S. officials who spoke to reporters, under rules barring quotation by name, focused on what they said was an apparent tactical decision by Hanoi to hold up on a peace agreement when it was almost wrapped up.

They speculated that the North Vietnamese may be waiting to see what troubles over the war develop between Nixon and the incoming Congress. They said Hanoi also may anticipate further difficulties between Washington and Saigon or communist gains on the battlefield.

They gave this account of the secret negotiations in Paris which resumed Nov. 20 and again on Dec. 4 following Kissinger's Oct. 26 announcement that he believed "peace is at hand" on the basis of a draft nine-point plan.

—In the sessions beginning Dec. 4, which ran until the break-up Dec. 13, the North Vietnamese began a stalling pattern of changing their demands and retracting on items they had agreed to previously.

—The American negotiators began to suspect around Dec. 6 that Hanoi had made a deliberate decision to stall, probably during the nine-day recess preceding that round.

In retrospect they recalled that on Dec. 3 the North Vietnamese evacuated school-children from Hanoi, a possible sign that they knew there would not be a peace settlement and expected renewed U.S. bombing.

The U.S. officials said the hang-ups that developed at Paris in the ensuing days did not center on substantive issues.

They noted also that the North Vietnamese had agreed to continue lower-level talks during the recess.

Walked Out

PARIS (AP) — The Communist delegations walked out of the weekly session of the Vietnam peace talks today in protest against the American bombing of North Vietnam.

Hanoi's deputy negotiator Nguyen Minh Vy and the Viet Cong's Dinh Ba Thi read prepared statements at the start of the meeting and then walked out without giving the American and Saigon representatives a chance to reply.

The two Communist speakers vehemently denounced the "terror bombing" of densely populated areas of Hanoi and Haiphong and said they would not be intimidated by the war escalation ordered by President Nixon.

It was the second time in more than four years of fruitless negotiations that the Hanoi and Viet Cong delegations have walked out of a meeting to protest American bombing. Several other meetings were canceled by the Communist side for the same reason.

Legislators from the northeastern part of the state met here Wednesday to hear a brief, yet detailed, explanation of the totally new budget requests for the consolidated senior higher education system.

The meeting, one of a series called by William Friday, president of the consolidated university, was aimed at acquainting members of the General Assembly, both old and new, with the framework of higher education's revamped budgetary process.

Friday, presiding at the session held at East Carolina University, noted that, in compliance with legislation enacted in 1971, the new budget recommendations consist of requests in three categories: funds for the continuing operation of each constituent institution; funds for salary increases for employees exempt from the State Personnel Act; and funds requested without reference to institutions.

Pointing out that all academic activities in the state are now under the control of the Board of Governors, the president said that the role of arbitrator in deciding individual budget allocations for each institution has been removed from the Legislature. He said that under the new consolidated system it is no longer necessary for individual institutions to approach the General Assembly with budget proposals.

Requests of the Board of Governors are much less than the combined budget requests of the higher education institutions for the last biennium 1971-73, he reported, noting that requests presented to the 1971 General Assembly totaled $636.4 million. In comparison, requests to the 1973 Assembly total $571.6 million, a decrease of $64.8 million.

Institutional estimates for current operations other than those covered in the base budget requests were $107 million, Friday continued, while the Board of Governor's request is $84.4 million reflecting a reduction of $22.6 million.

Institutional estimates for capital improvements were $210.2 million, while the Board request is $157.9 million, he said. Estimates for academic salary increases were $29.3

million and the Board request amounts to $10.8 million.

Budget recommendations, showing overall reductions, still provide for progress, Friday emphasized, asserting that the requests do not diminish in any way the essential opportunity for an institution to carry out its current assigned mission and role of service.

The major portion of the funds requested is for the operation and maintenance of the 16 institutions that now comprise The University of North Carolina, he continued. But he pointed out that the Board is also responsible for making recommendations for State funding of aid to private colleges and universities, both for general support and special programs in medical education.

Total request for general fund appropriations for 1973-75 amount to some $571.6 million, he said. Broken down, by law, into three categories, requests call for $310.8 million in base budget requests, $18.4 million in academic salary increases, $242.2 million in change budget requests, or a total of $571.6 million.

Base budget requests, he explained, constituted funds for the continuing operation of each institution in the system. There are 62 base budgets within the university's financial structure. (Continued on page 12)

Provide Money

RALEIGH (AP) — When North Carolina Lt. Gov.-elect Jim Hunt takes office next month he will have $26,569 to provide for an expanded staff and expenses during the six-month period ending June 30.

Gov. Bob Scott and the Council of State dipped into the state's Contingency and Emergency Fund Wednesday and appropriated the amount.

Hunt will be the state's first fulltime lieutenant governor at a salary of $30,000 a year. The 1971 General Assembly provided for his salary and that of a secretary. But he contended an additional staff was needed to carry out his duties properly.

The council approved a $10,000 death benefit allotment to the widow of state trooper Joe G. Wright, who was shot to death in Person County Sept. 27.

A similar allotment was approved for the widow of Marvin James Bell, Elizabethtown police chief who was shot to death Sept. 30.

Airliners Collide On Runway—9 Dead

CHICAGO (AP) — Two airliners carrying 138 persons collided on a fog-shrouded runway at O'Hare International Airport, killing nine persons in Chicago's second air tragedy in two weeks.

The collision late Wednesday involved a North Central Airlines jet with 45 persons aboard and a Delta Airlines Convair 880 with 86 passengers and a crew of seven.

The Cook County morgue said the nine who died were North Central passengers.

One Delta passenger said after the accident that "two seconds could have made the difference in all our lives."

The crash occurred as the North Central DC9 — flight 575 to Madison, Wis., and Duluth and International Falls, Minn. — was taking off. The plane clipped the tail of the Delta craft, which was taxiing to a holding area after a flight from West Palm Beach and Tampa, Fla.

"There was a jolt," said Roy Ritter, 60, of Rockford, Ill., who was aboard the Delta plane. "After we slid down the emergency chute we saw the tail section of our plane 200 feet from the rest of it."

Two passengers aboard the Delta plane were injured, neither seriously. It was Ritter's first time in an airplane.

"If the guy in the other plane had been two seconds earlier we would have been done for," he said.

Thirteen persons aboard the North Central jet were admitted to a hospital and 19 other passengers and a crew of four were unhurt.

Vincent Maloney, chief air traffic controller at O'Hare, said that visibility was a quarter of a mile at the time of the accident. He said many airlines feel such visibility is adequate.

The airport was shut down for 55 minutes after the crash. Earlier in the day, the fog had forced the airport to restrict air traffic to outgoing flights.

Raymond Ojakangas, 40, who was aboard the plane with his son, Gregory, said he grabbed the 13-year-old's hand and crawled out of the plane.

Pitt NAACP President Views 'State Of War'

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

In a press conference this morning, D.D. Garrett, president of the Pitt County Branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP), outlined four points which he said were endorsed by the Executive Board in executive session Monday night.

"I tell you and all to whom these words shall come," Garrett said, reading from a prepared statement, "that the Pitt County Branch of the NAACP considers itself here and now, this December, in the year of our Lord 1972, in a state of war."

every youth and every adult who has accepted membership in the Pitt County Branch has also accepted a place in the ranks of the NAACP army," he said.

Earlier in the statement on mob reaction, Garrett said "I can understand the humaneness in the rock throwing by the teenagers on West Fifth Avenue Wednesday night. They were only seeking revenge which is human."

"But I cannot understand," he continued, "why a police officer would come into a community in the broad open daylight and shoot a man down for a misdemeanor. We demand that Police Chief Cannon resign his job until he learns how to pick officers that are not trigger happy."

When questioned about NAACP membership figures, Garrett said it "is about 1500." He noted that at monthly meetings of the chapter, "roughly 100 members attended."

In another of the four statements, Garrett revealed that "letters of deep concern" had been sent to those "attacked and injured on Wednesday, December 6."

"We strongly oppose, and cannot condone, mob reaction to evident irresponsibility. There has to be a better way of dramatizing the seriousness of a problem that affects the community," Garrett stated in the letters.

Letters were sent to four people, "the ones we could get their addresses," Garrett said. These were to Mrs. Clara Tripp, Dr. Joseph Boyette, Mrs. Louise Moore, all of Greenville, and Harry D. Schultz of Winston-Salem.

BETHEL—The Bethel United Methodist Church here was the scene of the wedding of Miss Virginia Lee Young and Roy Wayne Grimes Sunday at 2:00 p.m.

The double ring ceremony was conducted by Dr. Robert F. McKee. Mrs. W. R. Hunnicutt presided over a program of organ music and Mrs. Thomas R. Andrews sang "I Promise You," "If God Left Only You," and "Wedding Prayer."

The church altar was flanked with pyramidal candelabra with bouquets of white mums and pom poms. At the altar was a prie-dieu where the vows were exchanged and the bride and bridegroom knelt for the wedding prayer and benediction. White carpet was rolled out as the bridal party entered the church. Pews were marked with white satin bows.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cowley Young of Bethel, and the late Mrs. Nancy Wynne Young. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lee Grimes of Jackson, Tenn.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of silk organza over taffeta with a chapel train. Her veil of illusion was attached to a tiara of seed pearls and crystals. She carried a white Bible with a bouquet of white orchids and a touch of purple statice tied with white velvet.

Mrs. James H. Tetterton of Richmond, Va., was matron of honor. She was dressed in a formal length apricot crepe gown designed with a princess neckline and long fitted sleeves. Venise lace in apricot, maize and moss green formed a border that accentuated the fitted empire bodice. She carried a semi-nosegay of shrimp, ivory, fuchsia and purple miniature carnations and baby's breath tied with moss green velvet.

Bridesmaids were Mrs. Robert Cowley Young Jr. of Bethel, sister-in-law of the bride, and Mrs. Willard F. Jackson of Greenville. Their dresses and bouquets were fashioned after that of the honor attendant.

Joseph Franklin Eastwood of Greenville was best man. Ushers were Robert Cowley Young Jr. and John Charles Young, both brothers of the bride, and William Allen Waggoner, all of Bethel.

Mrs. Young wore a light blue coat-dress ensemble and matching accessories. The bride's grandmother, Mrs. Jasper C. Wynne Sr., wore a blue two-piece suit. Both wore white orchid corsages.

After a wedding trip to unannounced points, the couple will reside in Greenville.

Reception

Immediately following the ceremony, the bridal couple was entertained at a reception. Mr. and Mrs. John Linwood Gurganus Jr. received guests.

The refreshment table was covered with a floor length white organdy cloth over satin centered with a bouquet of white carnations, pom poms and pixie carnations arranged in a five branched silver candelabrum.

Mrs. David House III and Mrs. Judy Byrd poured punch and Mrs. Glenn White and Mrs. Eugene Carson served wedding cake.

Mr. and Mrs. James Alton Manning presided at the guest register and good-byes were said by Mr. and Mrs. Don Carson Jr.

Pre-nuptial events honoring the Grimes-Young wedding party included a Sunday morning brunch held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn White. Guests included members of the wedding party and family.

Hosts and hostesses were Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Carson Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Davis, Mr. and Mrs. David Thomas House III and Mrs. J. L. Gurganus Sr.

Following the rehearsal Saturday evening, the couple was honored at a buffet dinner at the Holiday Inn, Greenville.

Hosts and hostesses were: Mr. and Mrs. John Linwood Gurganus Jr.; Mr. and Mrs. Don Carson Jr.; Mr. and Mrs. Harold L. Manning Jr.; Mr. and Mrs. Burton Ray Ayers; Mr. and Mrs. Roy M. James; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Jasper Manning; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Joseph Whitehurst;

DEAR ABBY: I am a 24-year-old woman whose divorce will be final in three months. I recently met a 44-year-old man. He is intelligent and charming. He says he loves me and will marry me the very moment I am free.

There is only one problem. He will wait for me only if I consent to live with him until my divorce is final, and agree to start a family immediately!

To support his argument he says he isn't getting any younger and can't afford to lose any time. Also, if I become pregnant he's sure I won't change my mind.

Abby, this is contrary to everything I believe in and I can't agree to such a deal. But I dearly love this man and don't want to lose him. Can you help me?

DESPERATE IN BROOKLYN

DEAR DESPERATE: You would have to be "desperate" to go for a deal like this. Tell him, "no rice—no dice." And if he really loves you, you won't lose him.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I disagree on something and want you to settle it.

He appreciates fine wine and most of our friends are aware of it, so occasionally when we invite guests for dinner they bring a bottle of wine.

My husband thanks them for it, puts it away, and then he serves a wine of his own choice with our dinner.

We were recently criticized for not serving the wine a guest had brought that evening.

My husband insists that when someone brings wine, it is a gift for US, and we are under no obligation to serve it. I say if a guest brings a bottle of wine, no matter what wine we had intended to serve, we should serve the wine the guest brought. Maybe I'm wrong, but I am not having another dinner party until I find out.

ON THE FENCE

DEAR ON: Get off the fence—on your husband's side. He's right. [P. S. If it is understood in advance that a dinner guest is bringing the wine, then that wine should be served.]

Miss Ada Swain Weds In Double Ring Ceremony

The wedding ceremony of Miss Ada Lorraine Swain and Donald McRae Harriss was solemnized this morning at 11 o'clock in a ceremony performed at the home of the bride's parents.

Elder L. L. Kendrick, of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, officiated at the double ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Norman Prestidge Swain of Greenville, and Mr. and Mrs. Percy Alton Harriss of Halifax.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal length ivory gown designed with a fitted bodice of chantilly lace featuring a scoop neckline and long sleeves. The A-line skirt of sata peau was designed with a deep ruffled flounce overlaid with a scalloped border of chantilly lace at the hemline which extended to an attached chapel train.

The bride carried the bridegroom's white Bible centered with an arrangement of white sweetheart roses and greenery. Her gold wedding band is an heirloom wedding ring belonging to the bridegroom's paternal grandmother.

The bride and bridegroom stood in front of the mantle in the living room which was decorated with a large floral arrangement of white gladioli, mums and snapdragons flanked by seven branch candelabra.

Mrs. Annette Martin of Greenville, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. She wore a formal length gown of apricot organza featuring white schiffli embroidery on the open neckline and long Juliet sleeves. She carried a single long-stemmed white rose.

The father of the bridegroom was best man.

After a trip to the North Carolina coast, the couple will reside at Rt. 1, Enfield.

The bride is presently attending N. C. Wesleyan College, Rocky Mount. The bridegroom attended East Carolina University and is presently a special education teacher for the Halifax County School System.

Immediately following the ceremony, the bridal couple was honored at a reception.

The reception table was covered with a floor length organza and lace cloth and featured a silver five branch candelabra. In the center of the table was a floral arrangement of pink and white roses with Baker's fern and baby's breath. The other end of the table held the champagne punch and the tiered wedding cake.

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Food Editor
NEW YORK (UPI)—Nutrition education and consumerism made more headlines than progress this year but the outlook for 1973 is more promising.

Most of the 1973 pack of the nation's largest fruit and vegetable canner (Del Monte Corp.) will use nutritional labeling. The new labels will list the calorie, fat, protein and carbohydrate content and the percentages of standard recommended daily allowances of 10 basic nutrients in each one cup portion of the company's canned products.

The meat industry plans to launch early in the new year a system of simplified identification and names for retail cuts of fresh or fresh-frozen beef, veal, pork and lamb. In November announcement, the National Live Stock and Meat Board, Chicago, said, the program is expected eventually to standardize names at the retail level in all 50 states.

Three familiar names for ground meat may be abandoned in favor of more specific ones that indicate lean-to-fat ratio. The board said the probable new names will be 85 per cent lean, for ground round steak; 80 per cent lean, for chuck; and 75 per cent lean, for regular ground beef.

Starting January 1, a major cereal manufacturer (the Post Division of General Foods Corp.) will carry open date labeling on all its products. The company said the dates stamped on box tops will not indicate a staleness deadline but assurance of consistent high quality up to those dates.

A microwave oven manufacturer added broiling capacity to its portable line without the use of infra-red or conventional heating elements. Instead of a new oven design, the maker (Litton) introduced special steak grill platters and skillets made of ceramic and microwave-responsive material. The utensils sear food surfaces with results similar to pan broiling.

While utilities companies and other power experts urged consumers to save watts to avoid brown-or-blackouts, more and more small electrical appliances came to market. They included such nonessentials as a pizza warming tray, yogurt makers and a pop-out bacon cooker that resembles a toaster resting on one side.

Continuing complaints about rising food prices apparently didn't cool the Christmas market for luxuries. Catalogs and other advertisements offered such articles as:

Silverplated trills for turkey legs and chop end bones, $10 for a set of two, a silverplated saucepan with cover, $26.50, a 10-piece set of silver-lined copper pans, $430 per set or $20 to $70 individually.

A sterling silver measuring cup, $120, a sterling silver nutmeg grater, $20, a battery-operated solid state computer to tell cooks when to turn a steak and when to serve it, $24.95, an antique brass and iron milk can with ladle and spigot for big-spending milk punch hosts, $350, a battery-operated selfstirring saucepan, $29.95, and a replica of a 19th century mustache spoon, $5.95 in silverplate, $12.50 in gold vermeil. The spoon has a shield to protect a user's mustache from unsightly dribbles.

A wave of orientalia swept into housewares stores and departments and fancy food shops in the wake of President Nixon's historic trip to the People's Republic of China. Woks—those bowl-shaped all-purpose pans used for Far Eastern cooking—became almost as ubiquitous as fondue pots. A Chinese restaurateur here and a former food company executive established a specialty foods company to sell prepackaged hard-to-find Chinese cooking ingredients in department stores and other conventional retail outlets.

The introductory line of Little Mandarins Foods includes fresh ginger root, bean curd sheets, mung beans, star anise, Szechuan pepper, tiger lily buds and tree ears, a mushroom-like fungus.

The health food movement continued to grow. Progressive Grocer, a supermarket trade magazine, said health food stores have more than doubled in the past four years, with 2,600 thriving by mid-1972.

The largest concentrations were in Los Angeles and New York, and industry sales were estimated as high as $2 billion.

At least two large manufacturers of conventional breakfast cereals added granola, a health food favorite, to their regular lines and two large milling companies reintroduced old-fashioned whole grain flours and white flour without chemical preservatives or bleaches.

What We Got, Was Knowledge

The final flight of the Apollo series went to the moon and returned in what appeared to be routine fashion.

There was little of a crisis nature in this last flight, although of course we earth bound humans must realize that the mission was tremendously complicated and it went so smoothly because of the efforts of thousands of people.

Apollo 17 brought back a rich cargo of moon samples which will keep our scientists occupied for many years to come. Among them are the keys which will unlock still more secrets of the Universe, just as samples brought back by other moon flights have done before.

It has been only three years and five months since the United States put the first man on the moon, and that first mission was the culmination of a challenge to the nation by President Kennedy to land on the moon by the end of the 1960s. The goal was accomplished and that first landing was followed by other landings and further explorations of the moon's surface.

Now the final flight of this series has been made. There are other space ventures planned, but the elaborate equipment and teams which sent men to the moon are being dismantled and it would be quite expensive to put such an operation back together again.

From time-to-time there has been criticism of the moon exploration program based on the huge expense of the operation. So the question arises now: was it worth it?

This newspaper has always supported the moon program and as the final flight is concluded we feel that it was indeed worth it. First, of course, the flights satisfied a basic urge of man to explore. Just as he reached out for new frontiers on earth Man has now turned to the heavens. The adventure of the moon flights, however, would not be enough in itself to justify the cost, but the scientific value of the missions is well worth all the efforts. For the first time in history we have samples from a heavenly body which have been untouched by earthly influences. These samples were obtained by men who were carefully trained as geological observers, and this last flight included a highly trained geologist.

What we have obtained for our money is knowledge. We know not where it will lead us but we do know that knowledge gained through history has returned huge benefits to mankind. We think this will be the case in space exploration. The economic benefits are not apparent today, but in future years we will see such benefits emerge.

Inflation Tops All Problems

PRINCETON, N. J., Dec. 20 — Concern over rising costs is not confined to the United States, with inflation ranked as the top domestic problem of the free world in 1972, according to a Gallup Poll of leaders in 75 nations.

Next on the list of most urgent problems named by these world leaders is unemployment, followed by government reform, low educational standards and air and water pollution.

Survey respondents were selected from the "International Who's Who," "The International Yearbook and Statemen's Who's Who" and the "Marquis Who's Who."

Among the 265 world leaders who participated were: statesmen and diplomats, elected and appointed public officials, educators, scientists, corporate executives, economists, bankers, physicians, attorneys, media executives. There were no responses from the Soviet Union or mainland China.

Each leader was asked: "Which of these problems (from a list of 15) do you regard as the five most urgent problems facing your nation?" Leaders were then asked to rank these five problems in order of importance.

Here are the top ten domestic problems ranked according to frequency of mention, based on the collective judgment of all leaders interviewed, including those from the United States:

1. Inflation
2. Unemployment
3. Government reform
4. Low educational standards
5. Air-water pollution

Smokey Says:

Be Prevent Forest Fires!

6. Lack of industrial development
7. Crime-lack of respect for law
8. Overpopulation
9. Low productivity standards
10. Labor-management disputes.

Other problems, listed in order of votes recorded, are: inadequate housing, race tensions, drug addiction, disease-poor health standards and religious tensions.

Economic studies show prices rising in many nations around the world, with the pace in most cases accelerating.

The problem is seen in sharp focus in terms of the countries that are members of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development. Besides the United States, they include Canada, Japan and virtually all the countries of Western Europe.

Throughout most of the 1950s, consumer prices rose by no more than an average of 2.3 per cent per year. But from the beginning of the '60s through 1968, the annual rate of inflation ran at just under 4 per cent, and by 1970 the average rate for these 22 OECD countries had climbed to 5.5 per cent.

Last year the average rate of inflation increased again to about 6.25 per cent. And by mid-1972, it was still running at about this level. Inflationary pressures may have abated a little in the United States and one or two other countries in the last few months, but in the rest of the OECD area there has been no improvement.

IS U. S. CHURCHGOING CONTINUING TO SLIDE?

Since 1940 the Gallup Poll has used its fact-finding facilities for the purpose of measuring average church attendance. This audit is widely regarded as the most authoritative measurement of churchgoing in the U. S. To estimate the average attendance during 1972, surveys of representative samples of the adult population were made in selected weeks during the year to account for seasonal fluctuations.

Last year's audit showed that 40 per cent of adults attended church in a typical week, continuing a 13-year downtrend.

Bowles Won't Second-Guess

By JOHN KILGO
RALEIGH — Skipper Bowles says he no longer listens to those who second-guess the way he ran his campaign for Governor, insisting it would do no one any good to play such a game.

"I don't listen to any of that any more," Bowles told me in an interview. "There's no sense trying to play that game again. He (Jim Holshouser) beat me because he got more votes than I did. I don't see how any good would come out of trying to fix the blame."

Bowles said it took him three or four weeks after the election was over to get his thoughts back together. "Every thought that had entered my mind since I announced as a Democratic candidate for Governor was that we were going to win the primary and then win the general election," Bowles said.

"I never for one second thought about losing. I knew we'd win. I was busy planning state programs that I wanted to see implemented. I was trying to work out staff appointments. Then we lost the election. It took three or four weeks to get hold of myself."

Bowles and his wife took a five-day vacation after the election, but had planned for it to be longer than that. "We both asked each other what we were doing away from Greensboro," Bowles said, "and right then we decided to pack up and head for home."

"We had lost but we had to get over it. We decided to get back home, go back to work and start living again."

Bowles said his family worked as hard as they could to help him win the election. "My wife took the defeat harder than I did," Bowles said, "but she's doing fine and so am I. We're picking up the pieces."

Bowles has buried himself in work since the election, getting involved in things that occupied his attention before he went after the top political post in North Carolina.

Bowles absolutely refuses to deal in second guessing or trying to place blame for his defeat.

"I worked as hard as I knew how to work," Bowles told me. "A 16 or 18-hour day was strictly routine. I had an excellent staff and they worked like the dickens. I couldn't have asked more of them. It's true that I had a lot of new people working for me on the county level, but they really did a job. My family did everything they could to help us win this campaign. You can see that all the blame-fixing in the world isn't going to change the outcome of the election. We worked hard, ran the campaign the way we thought it should have been run, and presented our story to the voters."

Bowles' campaign tactics have been questioned by such notables as Gov. Bob Scott and Sen. Sam Ervin.

"And unfortunately," Bowles said, "one or two of my former staff members engaged in some Monday morning quarterbacking, without checking with me."

While Bowles won't talk about the impact the McGovern candidacy had on his election, one former campaign aide told me: "Our professional people told us the only way we could lose the election, one former campaign aide told me: 'Our professional people told us the only way we could lose the election was if Nixon came in here and got 70 per cent of the vote. Well, he did and we lost.'"

Bowles says he plans to spend the time in the future "to help the Democratic Party make a strong comeback in North Carolina. I want to see this happen and I will work to see it happen."

He says he can't say at this time how much of his time will be devoted to politics in coming months. Four days before the election, Bowles' last poll, taken by Walter DeVries, showed him with 49.5 per cent of the vote, Holshouser running just slightly behind. "As it turned out," Bowles said, "we didn't get any of the

What Good Are Cages?

More than 200,000 human beings will be sleeping tonight, here in the United States, in cages of one kind or another. These are the prisoners in our state and federal penal institutions. A troublesome question will not go away: What does the caging accomplish?

Fifty-eight lawyers, professors, and public officials pondered the perplexing issues of prison reform at a two-day conference last June in Cambridge, Mass. Their conclusions and recommendations, along with the three major papers that were prepared for the conference, have just been published by the Roscoe Pound American Trial Lawyers Foundation. If you want to tackle a tough problem, try this problem of prison reform.

Why the cage? When a person is convicted of serious crime, and probation seems unwise, why do we send this person to prison? One answer — it is an answer the professional conferees scarcely noted — is simply this: punishment. The notion that crime should be punished is more than a notion; it is a premise rooted in the inherited morality of many thousands of years.

The most familiar form of punishment — indeed, the only form of punishment for serious crime — is imprisonment. Once a defendant's guilt is established, we lock him up. If we are pushed for reasons beyond the concept of punishment, we tend to justify imprisonment as a deterrent, or as a device toward rehabilitation. In any event, it is said, so long as a criminal is in prison, he isn't out on the streets engaged in further crime. Ordinarily we seldom give the matter much thought.

One of the speakers at the Cambridge conference was Gerhard O. W. Mueller, professor of law at New York University. He said: "If there were the slightest scientific proof that the placement of human beings in boxes or cages for any length of time, even overnight, had the

Other Editors Say A Good Target

(Raleigh Times)

Jim Hunt, the Lieutenant-Governor-elect, has put out a good target for the 1973 General Assembly: North Carolina "must work to equalize the educational opportunities available to our children. I would like to see us reach the point where a child in the most sparsely populated section of our state can receive the same education that a child who lives in one of our densely populated urban areas receives."

That's a good goal. It isn't a goal which the 1973 General Assembly can reach, but it is one toward which the next legislature can begin to move.

Before doing anything, the Assembly will have to decide whether it will use the $200,000,000 credit balance to cut taxes or to provide the needed state services. Improving the schools would be at the top or near the top of the state services which must be improved.

If the legislature decides to provide the services, it could then get into the business of making educational opportunities more nearly equal in all parts of the state. A first step in that direction would be to make teaching a financially more attractive profession, thus attracting more teachers of higher quality.

The legislature can only do so much in such equalization however. For, a major reason that urban schools are better than many rural schools is the fact that city dwellers support their schools better, levying supplementary taxes on themselves for that purpose. If a rural school system should levy such a tax, it can have more money to attract better school people.

Then, there is the matter of general public support for public schools. In some rural areas, that support never has been really good, this being especially true in some areas with high back populations. School desegregation has resulted in diminished public support in some areas, and that is a factory which will have to be overcome before there can be much school improvement.

The legislature can start doing the job Hunt has in mind. But, the home folks will have to dig, in, too, to do their share.

Actor Enjoys Work

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — The average comedian is about as much fun to be with offstage as a 95-year-old Anglican bishop with an acute case of gout.

Not our man Walter Matthau, the current top banana among film laugh makers. He is as natural as sunshine and cheerful as a mountain spring.

Walter weathered dire poverty in his childhood and six years ago survived a life-threatening heart attack. With a background such as that, Matthau doesn't need anyone to tell him how to enjoy his present success.

"Life to me is funny, real humorous," he said at lunch the other day. He was celebrating the completion of his most recent film, "Pete 'N' Tillie," in which he and Carol Burnett star.

"I don't know why, but life seems to make me laugh most of the time now. I try to have a philosophy for every specific moment, but it changes so rapidly I guess I don't have a general philosophy."

Now 52, although he could easily pass for an athletic 40, Walter reached the peak after a long apprenticeship in both living and acting.

After his father deserted the family when Matthau was only 3, he and his mother and a brother moved through a series of cold-water East Side tenements because they were unable to pay the rent.

At 11, Walter was acting in a Yiddish theater at 50 cents a performance. During the intermissions he sold soft drinks in the lobby.

After earning six battle stars as an aerial radioman and bomber gunner overseas during World War II, he worked his way through acting school working as a floor scrubber and cement hauler.

Slowly he became known as a competent and conscientious craftsman in Broadway plays and as a Hollywood film villain. Then his 1965 appearance in the stage play, "The Odd Couple,"

The Greenville tobacco market closed today after one of the most successful seasons in history. Sales for the season issued today by K. W. Cobb, supervisor of sales, showed the market had sold a total of 39,444,170 pounds of leaf for $4,778,304.45 at an average of $12.11 per one hundred pounds. Greenville now leads the Bright Leaf Belt sales.

SEC Begins To Study Future

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) —

Almost every investor understands that corporations, like every product of creation or manufacture, have a past, present and future, and that each must be considered in making a decision.

The past tells the investor about the company's record, the present discloses if it is being maintained. Both are important items, but it is the unknown, the future, that fascinates, for that is where the money is made.

There has never been a successful broker who kept his eye on only the past and present. The world of investments is meaningful only in the context of the future. Otherwise it is unreal. Nevertheless, the official policy of the Securities and Exchange Commission for nearly 40 years has required corporations to list massive amounts of data on the past and present while refusing to record projections.

That policy may soon change, however. Hearings recently were concluded in Washington to consider abandonment of the old SEC policy and permit companies to record estimates of future earnings.

Policy recommendations often take weeks to formulate, but there is speculation that this will be a speedy decision. The matter is close to Chairman William Casey's heart, and he must soon leave for the State Department.

Revealed in the hearings were lawyers' fears of the legal consequences of projections, the concern of officers about standards to be used, the doubts of accountants as to their role and responsibility.

One of the most consistent products was misunderstood. As Casey said in an interview last week:

"All we are doing is re-evaluating now our policy of prohibiting them. We are not demanding that forecasts be made. We are not going to mandate them. In my opinion, that is not a possibility nor is it desirable."

A far more likely solution will be to give companies the option to project or not to project, assuming that standards can be set so as to prevent flagrant abuses in the form of unrealistic goals.

Why then the furor? A good question and one that relates directly to the small investor and public confidence in the market place, which is now gradually being restored following one debacle after another.

As the chairman testified, "These projections are being put out now and they are being made available on a preferential basis." That is, they are being made unofficially or by informed brokers and offered to a favored few.

"No matter how one may theorize on this," Casey said at the hearings, "We have the reality that earnings estimates are made."

Strength For Today

RELIGION AS AN EXTRA

The Bible constantly speaks of Christian teaching as the bread of life. What is your religion—bread or cake?

Because some people's religion very certainly is cake. It is an embellishment of life, something which enhances reputation, a luxury which could easily be dispensed with if the going got really hard. Cake is very sweet and pleasant to the taste, but even the meager knowledge of dietary matters leads us to see that cake is not to be compared with bread as a staple food. We eat cake because we like it. We eat bread, along with meat and vegetables, as a part of the meal's main course. Let us get out of our minds any notion that God sent his only begotten Son into the world to establish an exclusive society or to set up fashionable clubs in certain cities and communities. The coming of Jesus into the world was the result of the divine determination to give men a chance to live better while here on earth and to attain to an eternal destiny after death. Religion is the bread of life because it builds up life, making it strong, healthy and significant.

Churches are for the most part made up of pleasant, congenial folks, but the church very decidedly is not a club but a fellowship of persons bound together by a common belief and devotion.

Outbreak Of London Flu

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — A new outbreak of influenza believed to be the London flu strain has been reported by the National Center of Disease Control at two southern Massachusetts colleges.

Dr. Robert J. Rubin, CDC

epidemiologist, said today increases in influenza illness at Stone Hill State College and West Bridgewater State College have been noted in the past several weeks.

"We believe it is a variant of the influenza strain that was discovered in India last year and has been noticed at some military bases in the U.S. this fall," Rubin said.

The London flu is an offshoot of the Hong Kong flu which claimed more than 27,000 lives in the United States in 1968-69. Rubin said the symptoms—headache, muscle aches and fever—are basically the same.

Isolated cases of the strain were reported by the CDC last week in Memphis, Tenn., Kansas City, Kan., Baltimore, Anchorage and Seattle.

Rubin said the "best curative of all" for the bug is bed rest, plenty of fluids and time.

Most Receiving Larger Benefits

Social security retirement payments to most aged widows and dependent widowers will be increased in 1973, according to William McClure, social security district manager in Greenville.

Up to now, a widow's retirement benefit could be no more than 82 percent of the amount her husband would have received at age 65.

"But under new social security legislation, a widow who started getting benefits at 65 or later can get the same benefit that her husband would have received at 65," McClure said.

"If she first started getting checks before 65, the benefit will be less than the full amount of her husband's benefit but not less than she was getting before."

"For example, a widow who started getting benefits at age 62 will now get 82 percent of her husband's benefit amount, instead of the 82.5 percent she receives under present law."

The new law will also apply to benefits paid to dependent widowers. In addition, dependent widowers will be able to get reduced benefits at age 60, as widows can now, instead of waiting until they're 62 to start getting checks.

Nationwide, about 4 million widows and dependent widowers are expected to get higher payments under the new law. The increase will first appear in checks delivered in early February.

Boyle Col. . . .

(Continued from page 4) made him a comedy sensation. His next film, "The Fortune Cookie," in which he teamed with Jack Lemmon, confirmed his success. Since then it has been roses, roses, all the way for Matthau.

He still tends to think of himself as a character actor rather than a star, and likes to play in serious as well as funny films or shows.

"My only preference is for good roles," he explained. "They can be about anything, anytime, anyplace."

"I became an actor because I like to act, I'm good at it, and I make a lot of money out of it. What would I be if I weren't an actor? Dead probably. There's an occupation for you, isn't it?"

"I'd like to live to the year 2000 — that would make me 80 — just to see all the numerals change."

"But I have to have a certain amount of excitement, or I create it myself. That's why I don't really expect to hit 70. But I'm never bored, anyway. I think people who are bored are always boring."

Here are Walter's likes: "Horses that come in first — casseroles, because steaks or roasted birds remind me too much of the whole animal — anything covered and smothered with gravy and with no bones in it — spelling tests with people I meet while traveling — girls' bottom a tremendous feeling of security — the sound of Mozart and the voices of my wife and my son Charlie — reading Charles Dickens and Arthur Miller's plays — bakery smells and the smell of freshly cut grass — all kinds of people — and having dinner with Truman Capote when he's in a good mood: he's a great, great gossip with a great mind."

And here are his dislikes: "Raw clams — whiskies and wines — girls who drink beer — all music written since Beethoven composed his last symphony — automobile horns — the feel of crepe — Shakespeare I find dull and Ibsen impossible — people with studied mannerisms who are out of synchronization — and people with bad breath who keep trying to whisper to me."

Mueller's view is perhaps extreme. He would demolish every cellblock in the land as a vestige of cruel and unusual punishment. He would permit imprisonment, under vastly different physical circumstances, only as a last resort, and only after an elaborate judicial proceeding restricted to the sole issue of confinement.

At such a proceeding, Mueller urges, the major question would go to the impact of imprisonment upon the defendant: How would incarceration affect him? Could his patterns of behavior be changed for his own good and for the good of society? If a judge concludes that rehabilitation is possible through imprisonment, the judge should monitor both prison and prisoner thereafter.

Mueller protests the deprivations that ordinarily are imposed on a prisoner. He asks: "Why strip him of his right to read, to have normal sexual relations, to communicate, to work, to earn, to walk, to contribute financially and economically to his family and his nation?"

Mueller would insist that each prisoner perform useful work. He would experiment with many alternatives to full-time imprisonment, emphasizing "the idea of reparation by the wrongdoer through gainful labor."

The conference produced 20 findings and recommendations. These are too lengthy for recapitulation here, but this is the main thrust: Automatic imprisonment plainly is not working. "Indeed, the release of the majority of the prison population, coupled with the provision of community programs and services, would not increase the danger to the public, and ultimately would enhance public safety."

The people must be persuaded to think upon these things. It is stupid to maintain prisons that function chiefly as schools for crime. Such a penal system does not protect a society; it tends to leave a society in greater danger. Somehow, perhaps through the gradual adoption of some of the reforms proposed by the Cambridge conference, we must find a better answer to crime than the cage.

40 per cent of San Francisco residents are native Californians, compared with 43 per cent statewide.

Mueller's view is perhaps extreme. He would demolish every cellblock in the land as a vestige of cruel and unusual punishment. He would permit imprisonment, under vastly different physical circumstances, only as a last resort, and only after an elaborate judicial proceeding restricted to the sole issue of confinement.

At such a proceeding, Mueller urges, the major question would go to the impact of imprisonment upon the defendant: How would incarceration affect him? Could his patterns of behavior be changed for his own good and for the good of society? If a judge concludes that rehabilitation is possible through imprisonment, the judge should monitor both prison and prisoner thereafter.

Mueller protests the deprivations that ordinarily are imposed on a prisoner. He asks: "Why strip him of his right to read, to have normal sexual relations, to communicate, to work, to earn, to walk, to contribute financially and economically to his family and his nation?"

Mueller would insist that each prisoner perform useful work. He would experiment with many alternatives to full-time imprisonment, emphasizing "the idea of reparation by the wrongdoer through gainful labor."

The conference produced 20 findings and recommendations. These are too lengthy for recapitulation here, but this is the main thrust: Automatic imprisonment plainly is not working. "Indeed, the release of the majority of the prison population, coupled with the provision of community programs and services, would not increase the danger to the public, and ultimately would enhance public safety."

The people must be persuaded to think upon these things. It is stupid to maintain prisons that function chiefly as schools for crime. Such a penal system does not protect a society; it tends to leave a society in greater danger. Somehow, perhaps through the gradual adoption of some of the reforms proposed by the Cambridge conference, we must find a better answer to crime than the cage.

Ghost Of Christmas Past Haunts A Former POW

By PETER ARNETT
AP Special Correspondent
The "ghost of Christmas past" hovers over Navy Lt. Mark Gartley's decorated tree, carrying a bowl of thin soup in a wooden barracks room as a carol scratches out of a loudspeaker. That is how Gartley remembers some of the last four Christmases he spent in a Hanoi prison camp.

This year he is home in Florida with his family.

As Air Force Maj. Edward Elias sits down with his wife and child to a Christmas feast there will be a "ghost of Christmas present" at the table, wearing the faces of the disappointed relatives of Americans still in North Vietnamese prison camps, relatives he has met and written to since his own release in September.

"We pray every meal that God be with these sorrowing people," said Elias's wife, Georgia.

The "ghost of Christmas yet-to-be" will be welcomed at the festive family home of Navy Lt. Norris Charles in Tampa, Fla., and he hopes it will be carrying a "war finally over" sign. After his release from a Hanoi prison in September, Charles' wife Olga actively worked for Sen. George McGovern's presidential campaign. His mother Maria is still involved in the antiwar movement, and said in a telephone interview, "The renewed bombing is awful. The war must end. We must get the prisoners back by next Christmas at the latest."

The men they left behind in Hanoi are uppermost in the minds of Gartley, Elias and Charles this Christmas season because they know they were the lucky ones. Their release was a positive signal from Hanoi that at last the ordeal of the prisoners might be ending, an ordeal for some that has lasted since 1965.

The released pilots brought back home messages of hope to the families of many of the 400 Americans then known definitely held in North Vietnamese prisons. Gartley, captured after he bailed out of a crippled jet on Aug. 10, 1968, personally visited the families of 25 of the men he had lived with.

But Gartley and the others stopped contacting relatives late in October when the peace talks seemed certain to bring peace. None of the three pilots are currently permitted to speak to the press because of Department of Defense black-out on interviews, but their relatives spoke freely.

Minnie Lee Gartley, Mark's mother, who flew to Hanoi in September to personally escort him home, said in a telephone interview at her home in Clearwater, Fla., "Mark was so sorry that the talks failed.

"He had made plans to be with some of the men when they came home this Christmas. But now it has fallen through and he is so sad," Mrs. Gartley said. Mark intends to resume his travels to meet with relatives.

Mrs. Gartley intends to resume her antiwar activities. "I am having a press conference at Tampa Thursday morning to help in bringing public opinion to bear on the President," she said. "The families of the captured men aren't speaking out. I will do it for them. I feel free to do so."

With Mrs. Gartley at the press conference will be Maria Charles, who was advised last New Year's Day that her son had been shot down over North Vietnam. "I am so happy that Norris is home," Mrs. Charles said. "But what of the many other families without their loved ones?"

Mrs. Edward Elias said that the men left behind in Hanoi were often on her husband's mind. He is now a test pilot at Moody Air Force Base in Valdosta, Ga. He was imprisoned for four months.

Mrs. Elias said, "When we put up the tree the other day he got so melancholy. I knew he was thinking about them. We have a special Christmas prayer to say for the men still over there."

Asked if she would pose for a Christmas picture with her husband, Mrs. Elias said, "Ed doesn't want to be in the news again. He knows how hard it must be for those whose loved ones are still there, to see us for Christmas dinner. Maria Charles will have a turkey with all the trimmings for her son. Mrs. Gartley has scheduled a rack of lamb for her son. Gartley remembers a special prison Christmas in 1970 when the North Vietnamese served a slice of turkey, some soup, a salad and a half bottle of beer. Last year wasn't as good. "With all the bombing and everything, I wonder what men will be getting in Hanoi this Christmas?" asked Mrs. Gartley.

TV Watchers Machinegunned

BELFAST (AP) — Two masked men burst into a Londonderry pub and opened up with submachine guns on the crowd watching soccer on television. They killed five persons and wounded four, boosting the day's death toll in Northern Ireland to eight.

It was the Province's third bloodiest day this year, and there was speculation that the pub slayings Wednesday night were in reprisal for the day's first killing.

The day began with a flurry of bombing that panicked Christmas shoppers but brought no casualties. Then assassins struck in Belfast, Clonmore and Londonderry.

The first to die was a Protestant member of the volunteer militia, shot in the back by a sniper as he took an off-duty stroll by a Londonderry reservoir.

Next, a Roman Catholic was shot near his Belfast home as he waited for a bus. Then another Catholic was felled by bullets in a lane at Clonmore in County Tyrone.

Finally, the two masked men kicked open the door of the top of the Hill pub in Londonderry as some 40 persons were crammed into the bar. A getaway car, its engine running, waited outside.

Each raider opened fire with a submachine gun and four persons fell dead. Another man died in a hospital. Four more were wounded. Police said the dead included three Catholics and one Protestant, and wounded two Catholics and two Protestants.

Another man was shot and wounded in Belfast during the night; police said his condition was grave.

There was speculation the pub attack was in retaliation for the death of the Protestant militiaman. The bar is frequented mostly by Catholics and is in an area surrounded by Protestants.

Northern Ireland's total of confirmed fatalities in the communal violence rose to 444 for the year and 676 since August 1969. That is 10 more than were reckoned killed in the Irish Civil War of 1922-3.

Meanwhile, William Whitlaw, Britain's administrator for Northern Ireland, told the British Parliament Wednesday he would introduce legislation soon based on a commission's recommendations for changes in the judicial process for persons accused of terrorism.

The commission, headed by former High Court Judge Lord Diplock, called for trial by a single judge instead of juries that might be intimidated, restrictions on bail and new powers of arrest for the army. The recommendations were attacked by Catholic groups in the province as an infringement of civil liberties.

Treats His Employees To Shopping And Lunch

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Instead of the usual Christmas bonus, John Kell Martin III decided to treat his seven women employees to a shopping spree, lunch and an afternoon at the beauty parlor.

"After I heard about the fun everyone had, I felt like going down to the company and putting in my application," Martin's wife Randy, 24, said Wednesday.

Martin, 34, president of a mortgage loan company in Palm Beach, said he wanted to do something special this year to show his women employees how much he appreciated them.

So Tuesday morning Martin and the women started shopping down exclusive Worth Avenue. The only limits he put on the shopping trip was that they had to purchase a "working outfit" and hold the total bill to $75 each. He went along to help pick out the clothes and sign the checks.

"Look at me, Hollywood, I just got off the airplane," said Donna Nagreiter, 28, as she dramatically draped herself in a green ostrich-feathered boa.

"I can't find anything to fit me," complained Donna McDonald, 27, as she popped into outfit after outfit. "If it fits on top, it's too tight on the bottom."

"I've found it!" shouted Joanna Tait, 30, as she emerged from a dressing room modeling a tailored blue-and-white checked pants outfit with a white blazer.

Glancing toward Martin, she noted his nod of approval and firmly told the clerk: "Wrap it up, I'll take it."

At lunchtime Martin, laden with gaily-wrapped packages and leading his charges down the street single file, took them to a French restaurant. Later he dropped them off at a beauty spa for an afternoon of pampering by hairdressers, manicurists, manicurists and mud pack specialists.

Promptly at 5 o'clock he returned to load them in his auto and whisk them off for cocktails.

"Several of our friends were in the cocktail lounge when Kell and the girls, all gussied up in their new outfits and hairdos, made their entrance," said Mrs. Martin. "I am told their appearance created sort of a mini sensation."

Asked why he did such a thing, Martin replied: "I was tired of the usual Christmas bonuses and I thought this would be a lot of fun," he said. "Besides that, I really happen to believe it's nicer to give than to receive, and I don't think I've ever felt more like that than I have today."

More Giving By Baptists

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina Baptists gave their churches $100,477,725 this year, an increase of 10 per cent or $9,645,062 over 1971.

Ted W. Williams, director of the Baptist State Convention's Department of Survey and Statistics, also reported Wednesday that the membership of the churches showed a net gain of 13,423, reaching a record high of 1,050,980.

The churches reported 32,076 baptisms, an increase of 7.9 over 1971 and represents the largest gain since 1961.

Gifts to missions totaled $15,883,281, an increase of more than $16 million. Churches spent $17.3 million on new buildings and property acquisitions during the year.

W. Perry Crouch, the convention's general secretary-treasurer, said the increase in baptisms and support of organizations was "very encouraging because this means that our churches are reaching more and more people in their regular ministries."

The circulation of The Biblical Recorder, official publication of the convention, climbed to 102,797, an increase of almost 6,000.

Trooper Dies Of Crash Injuries

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Highway Patrolman Bob East, who was injured recently when he crashed his patrol car into a bridge north of Raleigh, died today in North Carolina Memorial Hospital.

The veteran trooper had been in critical condition since the wreck, with head and internal injuries and the loss of his left leg.

Patrol Sgt. P. H. Hemphill said East was believed to have been pursuing a speeder when he crashed his patrol car into the bridge at the junction of U.S. 1 and U.S. 401 north of Raleigh Dec. 13.

East, 56, joined the patrol in 1947 and had been stationed at Wake Forest since that time.

He was a native of Pilot Mountain and a World War II Army veteran. He is survived by his widow, a daughter and a son.

Thirty Miles

RALEIGH (AP) — The State Highway Commission reported today that 30 miles of the interstate highway system were opened to traffic in North Carolina during 1972.

The commission said that 592 miles of the 838-mile interstate system in North Carolina are now complete and open to traffic, and 68.8 miles of the remainder are under construction.

Links of the interstate completed during the year included 13.5 miles of I-95 from Lumberton to the South Carolina state line; 5.6 miles of I-40 from US 25 to Azalea; 5.4 miles of I-77 from Woodlawn Avenue to Northwest Freeway at Charlotte; and 5.5 miles of I-26 from East Flat Rock to Saluda.

Time Runs Out On Sick, Aged Senator Mundt

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thirty four years as a member of Congress are drawing to a close for Karl E. Mundt, the Republican senator from South Dakota who gave President Nixon an early boost up the political ladder.

Mundt, 72, was felled by a stroke in November, 1969. He has not been in the Senate chamber since then, although the paralysis he suffered has been partially overcome. Friends report Mundt still has difficulty speaking.

His wife Mary said they haven't yet made up their minds whether to remain in the capital or return to South Dakota, although she indicated they will remain in Washington for the time being.

"He can't go into cold climates," she said.

All of Mundt's papers accumulated during his years in the House and Senate are being sent to the Karl E. Mundt Library at Dakota State College in Madison, S.D. Mundt taught speech there in the 1920's. The library was dedicated by President Nixon in June, 1969.

Mundt was first elected to the House in 1938 and to the Senate 10 years later.

Throughout much of Mundt's convalescence his wife insisted he would return to the Senate, where he was third among Republicans in seniority before the stroke.

Although urged to resign in 1970 by South Dakota Republicans, he refused. GOP Gov. Frank L. Farrar wanted to appoint a successor before Farrar turned his office over to Democrat Richard F. Kneip.

Mundt never said he would not run for re-election this year, but his seat was won by Democratic Rep. James Abourezk in a close race.

Mundt is attended by nurses on duty around the clock. He works out in the Senate gym and undergoes many hours of speech therapy.

Mundt was acting chairman of the House Committee on Un-American Activities during its 1948 hearing on the Alger Hiss case. Richard Nixon, then a congressman from California and a member of HUAC, rode the case to national fame.

Hiss was a former State Department official who was convicted of perjury for swearing under oath that he did not pass secret information to Communist agents.

Nixon and Mundt did most of the congressional sleuthing in the case. Mundt, however, left most of the attention fall to the young, ambitious Nixon.

"It was a very ecumenical act of philanthropy by Mr. Arness, who is not himself Jewish," Dr. Max W. Bay, president of the Jewish youth organization institute, said Wednesday.

A spokesman for Arness said the actor raised crops, cattle and horses on the ranch since 1960.

"He spent a lot of time there and became aware of the impressive work done by the camp," said the actor's attorney, Richard Volpert.

Actor Donates Large Ranch To Youth Institute

SANTA SUSANA, Calif. (AP) — Actor James Arness, star of the "Gunsmoke" television series, has donated a 950-acre ranch north of Los Angeles to the Brandeis Camp Institute.

The ranch, with houses, corals, barns and outbuildings, is next to 2,250 acres of institute land in the Simi Valley. Arness' property was said to be worth $2 million.

"It was a very ecumenical act of philanthropy by Mr. Arness, who is not himself Jewish," Dr. Max W. Bay, president of the Jewish youth organization institute, said Wednesday.

A spokesman for Arness said the actor raised crops, cattle and horses on the ranch since 1960.

"He spent a lot of time there and became aware of the impressive work done by the camp," said the actor's attorney, Richard Volpert.

Mansion Staff Wonders If Clemency In Offing

By ROBERT B. CULLEN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — As his last Christmas in office approaches, North Carolina Gov. Bob Scott is preparing to make payment for the services of seven women and nine men who form his mansion's staff of domestic workers.

Scott's payment will be in the form of executive clemency, because all of the 16 servants are black inmates of the state prison system. Traditionally, the governor cuts their sentences at Christmas time, often by just enough to make them eligible for parole.

Most of those familiar with the mansion staff, from Corrections Commissioner Lee Bounds to first lady Jessie Rae Scott, agree it is an anachronism that has been carried over from the days before the turn of the century when the gingerbread Victorian castle on Raleigh's Peace Street was built.

In the memories of the prison system staff, none of the inmates who have worked at the mansion have been white. This racial standard apparently has been enforced as an informal, unwritten tradition.

K. B. Bailey, as warden of Central Prison, supplied the male workers from 1953-1964. He said the mansion's housekeepers — women charged with day-to-day supervision of the staff — insisted on black workers because "black skin was their interpretation of what a domestic servant should be."

Bailey, in an interview, said that under some housekeepers his orders were even more stringent. "They had to be over six feet tall, because of the high ceilings in the mansion, and their skin had to be black — not yellow or brown, but black," he said.

Once, Bailey said, he tried to place a white inmate at the mansion, but the housekeeper said the rest were colored and it was best to keep it that way."

Elizabeth McCubbin, former director of the women's prison and now a corrections official in Georgia, said in a telephone interview she had suggested integration of the mansion's female staff as late as the mid-1960s.

"I suggested it to either one of the housekeepers or one of the first ladies at the time," she said. "but she said no. It was a casual conversation and I didn't make a very strong issue of it."

Apparently, neither have any members of the prison staff. Bounds, in discussing the mansion staff's racial aspects, said, "You know, as we've been talking about this, I'm beginning to be bothered by the idea that we could have changed the racial part of it in recent years if we had only pressed it. I've always just assumed that we were supposed to operate this way."

Three of the four living tenants of the mansion, Gov. Scott and former Govs. Luther Hodges and Dan Moore, say they were never aware of any racial rules.

Scott, in an interview, said, "I think you're trying to read something into this that's absolutely not true. There are no such recommendations (regarding the racial composition of the mansion staff); there may have been in the past, but certainly not from Mrs. Scott and me. "If there is such a regulation — and I don't think there is — it's wrong," Scott said.

The governor said it was his impression that prison administrators did not want to integrate the mansion staff — to avoid the possibility of racial problems breaking out between prisoners in such a public place. Bounds, Bailey and Mrs. McCubbin all denied this.

But Bounds did say he had not specifically asked Scott for permission to change the racial situation. Instead, Bounds stressed his desire to do away with what he considered a more important over-all problem — prisoners working outside the walls for no wages.

"Anyone who is suited for placement at the mansion is suited for work release," Bounds said, referring to a program in which prisoners taking paying jobs in the community and return to prison at night.

"A prisoner should get that privilege if he or she has earned it. At present, the inmates are placed at the mansion with no compensation, and they all work for the goal of getting this commutation at the end of four years."

Bounds said he approached Scott in 1969 with the idea of making mansion duty a work release program. Scott said no.

"It was because of money," Scott said recently. "The present inmates often work from 6 a.m. to 11 at night, and on weekends. They do get some rest periods, and there are some beds around here where they can take a nap."

"But it would take approximately twice as many people if we employed them for a regular 40-hour work week. The General Assembly would have to appropriate the money to do this and they think it takes too much to run the mansion now."

The mansion budget is now $156,000 per year.

Bounds and the Scotts, though they differ on how the system has remained the way it is, agree that it should be changed.

Mrs. Scott, in an article written several months ago for the Raleigh News and Observer, said, "This is an outmoded system and seems to be confined mainly to the Southern states. In other states, paid employees are used, both black and white."

"If the system is continued, then these men and women should be placed on work release and work in shifts. It is unreasonable to expect them to work from 6 a.m. to the afternoon doing household jobs and then serve an evening meal for 100 or more people, Mrs. Scott said.

"I will confess," she concluded, "that I have taken this for granted too long, simply because 'This is the way it has always been.'"

Voters Okay More Bonds N.C. Governor Has No Retirement Plan

RALEIGH (AP) — The State Department of Public Instruction reported today North Carolina voters appeared more willing this year to approve bond issues for school construction.

The department pointed out that 18 school bond votes were held and only three were defeated, one by a nine-vote margin.

"This is further evidence that we have turned the corner in North Carolina and the voters once again have enough confidence in their schools to invest tax money in needed construction," said Dr. Craig Phillips, state superintendent of public instruction.

Total value of the bond issues approved during the year was $37.6 million. The two largest bond proposals, $20 million in Durham County and $9.7 million in Cabarrus County, were among those defeated.

North Carolina has been discriminating against its governor, state Secretary of Administration reported today.

Turner pointed out in a statement that the governor is the only state employe not now covered by a retirement plan. He noted there is even a pension plan for widows of governors.

Not only is there no retirement plan for the governor, he is required to contribute to the retirement system while he holds office, Turner added.

Turner said the problem is that under the present retirement program, a state employe must have five years service or be in office after age 60 to qualify for retirement.

"This would not be a problem with older governors," Turner said, "but works a particular hardship on younger governors. Governor Scott and Governor-Elect Holsouser, both being young men, will most likely withdraw their personal retirement contributions upon completion of their term as governor because they can never qualify for retirement benefits from their four years as governor."

Named Center's Superintendent

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Dr. Jose M. DeVarona, a staff member at Cherry Hospital for nearly three years, will become superintendent of O'Berry Center for the mentally retarded Jan. 1.

The appointment was made Wednesday by the state Board of Mental Health at its bimonthly meeting.

DeVarona, a native of Cuba, will succeed Dr. Vernon Mangum, who resigned in August to take a staff position at O'Berry Center. Dr. Nick Stratas, deputy commissioner of mental health for the southcentral region, has been serving as acting superintendent.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock market prices were mixed to lower today as both sides in the Vietnam conflict hardened their positions and investors worried over the deadlock.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up .97 to 1005.79. Earlier in the session it had gained more than 3 points.

Declines on the New York Stock Exchange held a 648-to-550 lead over advances, however, and the broad-based NYSE index of 1,400 common stocks was off .01 to 63.40.

Investor concern over the deadlock in Vietnam peace talks remained high, but its effect on the market was wearing off, according to analysts.

The Dow has lost more than 22 points this week, largely as a result of stepped-up U.S. bombing and the end of peace talks.

The final statement, was what Garrett termed reaction to comments by Mayor S. Eugene West at the special call meeting of the City Council last Friday morning.

"The comments of the Mayor has pictured our Black young men and other Black responsible citizens of good will as the hoodlum element in our community," Garrett stated in the statement.

"The Mayor has further put all Negroes and supporters of Blacks in two classes: (1) Hoodlums, (2) Hoodlum supporters or do-gooders."

Garrett said that "About 12 or 14" of the Executive Board were present Monday night to endorse the four statements he read to the press. The Executive Board is composed of 22 members—the president, six vice-presidents and 15 committee chairmen members. He said the quorum for endorsing an action is two-thirds of the executive board members.

Mallory To Lead Baseball Team During Spring As Acting Coach

Jim Mallory, Dean of Men at East Carolina University, was officially named today as acting baseball coach at East Carolina University.

Mallory will replace Earl Smith in the coaching position. Smith held the job from 1962 until his summer. He turned in his resignation from coaching this fall, but will continue on the staff of the physical education department.

For Mallory, it will be a return to an old post, one he held from 1958 until 1962.

"I accepted the job for only this spring," Mallory said. "We are hoping that by the end of the year, the athletic committee and the physical education department will come up with the proper person to lead the program."

While it was not officially confirmed, reports said that George Williams, assistant coach under Smith, turned down the opportunity to become head coach.

"There were three reasons I took the job," Mallory said. "Dr. (Leo) Jenkins (chancellor of the university) and the athletic council asked me to; I love baseball; and we have a fine group of young men who need the leadership they deserve."

Mallory added that he did not at this time plan to serve during the summer league, hoping that a new coach will be named by then. Monte Little, former Ayden High School baseball star will serve as Mallory's graduate assistant during the spring.

He will also continue in his post of dean of men.

"I'll have an office in the field house and I'll help with recruiting as much as possible. And we do intend to keep the program on the high level it has been on," Mallory said.

"I don't know what kind of team we'll have," the coach said. "but I can promise this: we'll be hustling, hungry and competitive. I don't like to lose, and I never have, and I don't intend to start now."

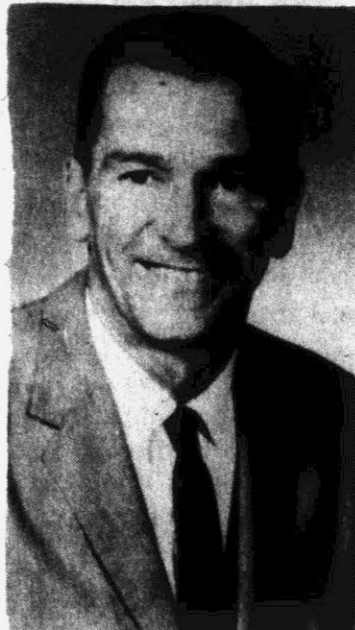

Mallory, along with East Carolina baseball, has a winning tradition. The Pirates under him won the NAIA national championship in 1961. Only once in the past 38 years have the Bucs had a losing season.

Despite being out of the coaching ranks, Mallory has not been far from baseball. He and Smith organized a baseball school in Ohio. He has written two books on baseball, and is a familiar figure behind the plate at many baseball games throughout the area, umpiring.

A native of Lawrenceville, Va., Mallory was educated at Fork Union Military Academy, where he became the only student in the history of the school to win five athletic letters in one season, getting them in track, baseball, football, basketball and tennis.

On one frantic afternoon in 1936, Mallory pitched a no-hit, no-run baseball victory for Fork Union, competed in the long jumping between innings. After the game, he switched from baseball to tennis clothes, and won both his singles and doubles matches.

Following his graduation, he attended the University of North Carolina, where he played

Rose Wrestling Team, With No Experience, Building For Future

By WOODY PEELE

(One of a series)

Rose High School's wrestling program for 1972-73 hasn't gotten off to a flying start, but this isn't worrying Coach Jim Brewington.

"We only have one man back from last year's team, and the rest have never had any experience on the high school level," he said.

The lone letterman back from last year is Gary Walton, who wrestles in the 132-pound class. "I really think we're doing a good job when you consider the complete lack of experience," Brewington added.

The team includes 10 sophomores, along with just two seniors and four juniors. "So I think things definitely look good for the future," the coach said.

Brewington feels that the team as a whole may come through by the end of this season, but he is relying on the future for the most part. "We have some individuals who are doing a real good job for us despite their inexperience," he said. "Several of them have winning records, despite the overall team record. Walton seems to be off to a slow start but we feel that he's be one of our strongest when he really gets going."

Running down the classes, Brewington outlined his hopes in each division.

At 98 pounds, the Rampants have been having a problem of finding someone to hit that weight. Usually they've had to forfeit, but did get Julian Vainwright into it once, and he won, taking a pin. Normally, however, Vainwright worked the 105-pound class. "He's 4-2 so far and is doing a real good job for us," the coach said.

A junior, Alton Hansley, is carrying the 112-pound class, and so far, he's posted a winning record.

At 119 is a newcomer, junior Butch Foust. He has little experience, but Brewington notes that he's coming along well. "He's learned to avoid pins, and should be doing well soon."

Lawrence Hartley, a sophomore, is at 126. "He's lost only two matches, and is doing a terrific job. He hasn't been pinned, and he's in one of the tougher classes around."

Walton occupies the 132-pound division. "He's probably one of

Top Rushers To Pace NFC Offense

NEW YORK (AP) — Four members of the 1,000-yard rushers' club head the National Football Conference team named Wednesday to meet the American Conference in the National Football League's Pro Bowl game at Texas Stadium Jan. 21.

Larry Brown of the Washington Redskins and Green Bay's John Brockington will start in the backfield with Dallas' Calvin Hill and Ron Johnson of the New York Giants in reserve. All went over the 1,000-yard rushing plateau this season.

Calling the signals for the NFC will be two veteran quarterbacks, Washington's Billy Kilmer and Norm Snead of the Giants. Kilmer, 32, led the Redskins to the NFC's Eastern title and was named to the Pro Bowl squad for the first time in his career. Snead, 33, was the top passer in the conference and will be making his third Pro Bowl appearance and first since 1966.

The 40-man squad, chosen in a vote by conference head coaches, has San Francisco's Gene Washington and John Gilliam of Minnesota starting at the two wide receiver spots, with Philadelphia's Harold Jackson and Charley Taylor of Washington named as the backups.

There were 21 new players named to the squad but two old ones were included on the roster. They were tackle Merlin Olsen of Los Angeles, named for the 11th straight year, and Dallas cornerback Mel Renfro, who will be making his ninth Pro Bowl appearance.

The two kicking jobs went to rookies, with placekicker Chester Marcol of Green Bay and punter Dave Chapple of Los Angeles the only first-year men named.

Woody's Ramblin's

By WOODY PEELE

Sometimes there are things which just defy the rationale.

Take for instance what happened on Wednesday. Barty Smith of Richmond was named as this year's recipient of the Jacobs Blocking Trophy in the Southern Conference.

For the life of me, I can't figure out why. Smith's winning of the trophy was based on his blocking, naturally, and supposedly he paved the way for teammate Billy Meyers to break all Richmond season rushing records with a fantastic total of 763 yards, an average of 76.3 yards per game for the Spiders. He also was their leading scorer with 10 touchdowns, mainly through the efforts of Smith.

The runner-up to Smith was William & Mary guard Bob Montgomery while Furman guard Dan Utley and Richmond guard Jim Amshein tied for third.

But where, can anyone tell me, is a fellow named Les Strayhorn?

Why, can anyone tell me, was Les not even included in the runners-up?

There must be a rational explanation somewhere.

Consider this.

Strayhorn was the chief blocker out of the backfield for Carlester Crumpler. There's not a coach or player around that can say he is not a superb blocker. In fact, Coach Sonny Randle was often criticized by the armchair quarterbacks for not running Les more and blocking with him less.

But Randle knew what he was doing. Strayhorn did the job. And Crumpler's statistics cannot do anything but show it. Crumpler set new Southern Conference records in rushing (1,309 yards) and in touchdowns (17). Those two totals are nearly twice what Smith helped Meyers do.

Now you tell me, judges of the Jacobs Blocking Trophy. How could you completely overlook this fine athlete and man?

Maybe you don't feel that he deserved even a mention, but you've made a lot of East Carolina people including this writer, fighting mad over your work.

Maybe now, East Carolina and the Pirates can see just where they stand among the Southern Conference people who really count.

the most knowledgeable wrestlers we have, but he's been waiting on his opponents to make the first move. He needs to be more aggressive."

At 138, Freddie Baker shows some aggression. A sophomore, Brewington said that he has gone up against the best and has done all right. "He's going to be good with experience."

A 145-pound junior, Max Langley, is considered a real workhorse by Brewington. "He hasn't seemed to get together yet, but he really is working at it."

At 155, Brewington is unsure how things will go when the weights shift in January. "Harold Randolph is wrestling here now. He has a lot of potential, but at times is unsure of himself." He's a junior.

Bruce Baker is the 167-pounder. A senior, he lacks a lot of experience. "He's aggressive, but he's been wrestling out of his weight class. He should be a couple of classes lower."

At 185, Brewington has what he calls a "little bull" with no experience, sophomore Ronald Randolph. "He's really got a lot of potential."

Ron Hunt, another sophomore is at 195. "He's finally gotten his first win, and this will help him. He, too, has got a lot of potential."

Rounding out the classes is the heavyweight division where Mike Bryant, a 260-pounder is working. "He hasn't learned yet, but could be good with experience."

Brewington feels that by the time the conference tournament comes around, the Rampants may have two or three ready to challenge for honors. "He includes Vainwright, Walton and Hansley in that group."

"We have a lot of potential on the team that just needs experience to come around," the coach said. "We also have a good crop coming up through the ranks at junior high, and this will help us a lot, too."

So while things don't look bright as far as the dual meet record is concerned, Brewington is looking to the future, and it does look bright.

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP)—The Columbia Touchdown Club announced today the selection of Ralph "Shug" Jordan of Auburn as the Major College Coach of the South for 1972.

Jordan drew 18 out of 35 votes cast by his fellow coaches, succeeding Paul "Bear" Bryant, runner-up this year with five votes after taking the initial poll last year.

Others drawing votes from coaches in 12 Southern states were Sonny Randle of East Carolina, Bill Dooley of North Carolina, Lou Holtz of North Carolina State, and Charlie McClendon of Louisiana State.

Robersonville Girls Look For Leadership

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
(One of a series)

ROBERSONVILLE — With four starters back, new Robersonville girls coach Pat Smith figured that he might be kicking off his career with a good season.

But so far, things haven't quite gone the way that Smith had envisioned. The Eaglettes opened with four straight losses before finally picking up a victory. And right now, they stand 3-5 on the season.

Returning from last year's team are Roberta Everett, Brenda James, Beth Greene and Elaine Forrest, all of whom were starters from time to time last season. "We have about 6 or 7 lettermen altogether, I'm not real sure," Smith said.

Despite those returning, Smith feels that the experience is somewhat weak overall. "Even these four are not fully experienced."

Currently, however, they are four of the starting five, with Cindy Daniels joining them in the fifth position.

Miss Forrest ranks as the overall top player, and she's hitting at a fine 12.1 clip so far. In only four games she has hit less than 10 points.

Height is a problem for the Eaglettes, however. "We're hurting in this," Smith said. "The tallest girl is Beatrice Forrest, Elaine's sister, and she's just 5-6 1/2. Elaine is the tallest starter at 5-6."

Rebounding, therefore, has been a problem. "It's really hurting us," the coach said. "The other teams are getting two or three shots at the basket most of the time, where we're only getting one. You can't play that way long and not get beaten."

Ballhandling also hasn't been a bright spot for the Eaglettes. "We had an 11-point lead against Oak City the other night, and still lost. We had 13 traveling violations, most of them in the second half. We really need a good floor leader because we tend to get rattled easy. I'm not sure whether this is an experience problem or not," Smith said. "We also tend to get into foul trouble, and this hurts our game."

Shooting has only been about average, Smith feels. "We're shooting about 32 per cent, and I guess in girls' basketball, this isn't bad. When we've hit this or a little better, we've won."

Defense has been the key to the wins the Robersonville girls have posted. "This has been real good for us," the coach said.

"Our 1-3-1 zone has done a good job for us. What's really killed us is our height."

Smith feels that now that Oak City has beaten Robersonville, they have to be considered as the favorite in the Martin County race. "I thought before it started that it would be between us two, and now the pressure is on us. They have one outstanding girl, and we have five average ones," he said.

"But I believe we can beat them if we don't make so very many bad mistakes against their press. We've got to improve our overall ballhandling, then we'll be all right."

Rozelle Rejects Nixon Bid For No Blackouts

By TOM SEPPY
Associated Press Sports Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite the urgings of President Nixon, the National Football League playoff games during the next two weekends will not be shown on local television in the cities where they are played.

Pro football Commissioner Pete Rozelle rejected Wednesday the request of the President to lift the television blackout in the playoff cities.

Atty. Gen. Richard G. Kleindienst, who negotiated with the NFL Tuesday and Wednesday on behalf of Nixon, said in a statement: "I have advised Mr. Rozelle that as a result of the league's decision, the Nixon administration would strongly urge the new Congress to re-examine the entire anti-trust exemption statute and seek legislation that is more in keeping with the public interest."

Ronald L. Ziegler, White House press secretary, said President Nixon agrees wholeheartedly with Kleindienst's statement.

Pro football received an anti-trust exemption in 1961 when Congress specifically permitted any joint agreement by organized professional team sports for the sale of television rights which permitted pro football to offer its games to a TV network as a package instead of individual stations.

In 1966, legislation again was passed to permit the merger of the American and National Football Leagues into the current NFL and the television exemption was extended to the combined leagues.

The debate over the blackout has been the subject of congressional scrutiny for the past few years and came to the forefront last fall before the Senate communications subcommittee chaired by Sen. John O. Pastore.

The Rhode Island Democrat told Rozelle that unless something was worked out for lifting the TV ban on regular season games, in addition to the playoffs, he would push ahead with a bill similar to that requested by Nixon.

The Justice Department statement, supported by Nixon, could add new strength to his commitment.

Rozelle said he didn't want to see pro football, as had pro boxing, become what he called a "studio show."

He said in a statement that six of the last 10 conference championship games have not been sold out and that since 1967, when playoff games were begun, only 11 of 17 were played to capacity.

The NFL begins its playoff games Saturday with the Oakland Raiders in Pittsburgh against the Steelers in an AFC game and Dallas at San Francisco against the 49ers in an NFC game.

On Sunday, Green Bay will be in Washington against the Redskins for an NFC game and Cleveland will travel to Miami to meet the Dolphins in an AFC contest.

Bath Humbles Bears, 70-34

BATH — Bath High School rolled to a pair of lopsided victories over Bear Grass High School last night. Bath took the boys' game, 70-34, and won the girls', 55-24.

In the girls' contest, Bath shot away to a 14-2 lead in the first period and were never in trouble after that. They outbit Bear Grass, 17-9 in the second quarter, and held a 31-11 lead at halftime, all they really needed.

In the third period, however, they continued to pull away, outscoring the Lady Bears, 19-10. The lead then was 50-21. They finished it up with a 5-3 advantage in the final period.

Leggett led Bath with 23 points, while Thomas had 16. For Bear Grass, Karen Price had seven.

In the boys' contest, things go no better for the Bears. They fell behind 14-8 in the first period, but came back out to outscore Bath, 14-12 and trail only 26-22 at halftime.

In the third period, however, the Bears were outbit by 10, 14-4, and fell back, 40-30. Then, in the last frame, Bath bombed the nets for 30 points, while allowing only eight to complete the runaway.

Woolard led Bath with 23, while Hawkins had 12. Nathaniel Armstrong led Bear Grass with nine.

Shaw Suffers Broken Arm

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina State's Peach Bowl-bound football team was dealt another blow Wednesday when quarterback Bruce Shaw broke his left arm in a freak accident while practicing.

Wolfpack Coach Lou Holtz expressed hope that Shaw, a righthander, will be able to play in the Dec. 29 game at Atlanta against West Virginia despite his injury.

"The doctors have assured us that Bruce can play without further damaging the arm," said Holtz. "He is an intense young man and wants to play very much."

Shaw was the second All-Atlantic Coast conference member of state's starting backfield to incur injuries. Fullback Stan Fritts suffered a knee injury in the season finale against Clemson and will see limited action if he plays at all against West Virginia.

Holtz described the circumstances of Shaw's injury as freakish in nature.

"It was right at the beginning of our scrimmage, after the offense had driven to the 3-yard line. On a running play, Bruce was handing off when a defensive player fell."

"The defender's helmet struck Bruce in the hand as he fell, and the blow broke the arm."

Stopping Thompson Doesn't Stop 'Pack

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
With no Atlantic Coast Conference teams in action Wednesday night and no teams playing tonight, the other ACC teams may well give thought to the challenge they face in chasing nationally ranked Maryland and North Carolina State. Maryland (4-0) is ranked No. 2 and N. C. State is No. 4, climbing up from sixth the week before and No. 8 in the pre-season poll. The State Wolfpack achieved its seventh straight success two nights ago, humbling Southern Conference power Davidson 103-90 at the Charlotte Coliseum.

The manner in which N. C. State won indicates that it may take more than stopping its sophomore wonder, David Thompson, to beat the Pack. Thompson, who broke fast with a 33.8 scoring average through four games to lead the nation, was "slowed" to 48 points as State defeated state rivals Wake Forest and North Carolina last weekend to win the Big Four Tournament at Greensboro, N.C.

That dropped his average to 30.5 for six games, but Davidson shaved it a bit more by "holding" him to 13 points. Jay Pecorak and Steve Gedaire played tough defense against the State star, holding him to eight shots, five of which connected.

So what happened? Tommy Burleson, the 7-foot-4 Olympian, enjoyed one of his better games—19 points and a dozen rebounds. Not entirely unexpected against the shorter Davidson team.

But the big lift came from other people who picked up the slack for Coach Norman Sloan. Old Dominion remained No. 9 despite knocking off Roanoke as well as Madison, another Virginia team, to raise its record to 4-3, and Kentucky State remained No. 5 even though their previously un-

Wicks Can't Defense Jabbar

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Sidney Wicks can't play center in the National Basketball Association. Who says so? Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of the Milwaukee Bucks.

The question came up after Jabbar scored 44 points and grabbed 21 rebounds in leading the Bucks to a 123-104 victory over the Portland Trail Blazers Wednesday night.

The Blazers moved the 6-foot-8 Wicks from forward to center on defense against the 7-foot-2 Jabbar, who enjoyed one of his best shooting nights by making 21 of 27 shots.

"They've done that once or twice before, but I don't think it does any good," Jabbar commented.

Can Wicks play center in the NBA? "No," replied Jabbar. Why? "Same reason I can't play guard," laughed Jabbar.

Wicks did all right on offense scoring 32 points in a lost cause as the Bucks won their fifth in a row.

Los Angeles beat Baltimore 96-90, Detroit whacked Philadelphia 141-113, New York thumped Houston 124-102 and Kansas City-Omaha tripped Seattle 121-110 in other NBA results. There were no games scheduled in the American Basketball Association.

Big Wilt Chamberlain stuffed in three baskets and Jim McMillian scored eight points as the Lakers snuffed out a Bullet rally to win their 27th game against only five defeats. Curtis Rowe tossed in 35 points, his pro career high, in leading the Pistons over the 76ers. The luckless 76ers suffered the loss of starter John Block, who was hit by a ball during the pregame warmup which tore the ligaments in his right wrist.

Willis Reed and Dave Debusschere each scored 26 points as the Knicks broke open a close game to down the Rockets after leading by only 65-64 in the third period. Nate Archibald's 35 points paced the Kings over the Sonics. It was Seattle's 11th straight defeat on the road, a club record.

The defeat followed a report in the Seattle Times that Tom Nissalke, coach of the Sonics, may be fired before the end of the year.

"It's the first I've heard about it," said Nissalke. "I was promised a complete three-year time period, it states that in my contract, to get to the playoffs. Unfortunately, some of the guys we've counted on to do well, haven't."

ECU Tankers Have Long Rest

East Carolina's varsity swimmers have three weeks before their next meet in which to relish last Saturday's 100-113 blitz of Richmond Spiders. Three weeks of relaxation, however, doesn't necessarily mean three full weeks of relaxation according to ECU swimming coach Ray Scharf.

"I was pleased with our performance against Richmond," said Scharf. "But we can't afford to do too much contemplating because the toughest month of our schedule is right around the corner."

Most of the Pirate swimmers went home for the Christmas holidays Friday but will be back in Greenville December 27 to resume practice sessions at the rate of two a day.

The Bucs will take on Connecticut and Marshall in a double dual meet at Greenville January 6 to kick off the "toughest month."

The real series of tests for the Pirates for the Pirates, however will begin when they travel to Chapel Hill to take on North Carolina, the first of five remaining January opponents.

The Bucs will then visit Florida A&M, South Florida and North Carolina State before returning home to host Virginia January 29.

"Our immediate concern when we resume practice will be Connecticut and Marshall said Scharf. "We certainly can't look past them because they have some pretty solid competitors."

When the subject of UNC or N.C. State comes up, however, the Buc mentor's long range concern becomes pretty evident.

"Their records speak for themselves," Scharf said bluntly. "We've got some pretty good individuals ourselves but we'll have to swim up to our highest potential to even hold our own against them."

Several Pirates swimmers began to hit their stride in the Richmond meet according to Scharf. Larry Green, a former high school All-American, shattered ECU freshman records in winning both the 500 and 1000-yard freestyles.

In addition senior freestyler Paul Trevisan took victories in the 50 and 100-yard events.

Another double winner for the Bucs was junior diver Jack Moorow who captured first place from both the one-meter and three-meter boards. In the process Moorow broke the East Carolina varsity record for required dives from one-meter.

Oak City In Pair Of Wins

OAK CITY — Oak City High School swept a pair of games from Belhaven last night. They won the girls' game, 49-37, then took the boys' by 37-30.

In the opener, Belhaven and Oak City went at it, with the guests outshooting the Trojans, 14-12. It continued just as tight through the second quarter, as both teams put in 10 points. That left Belhaven ahead at the half 24-22.

In the third period, however, Oak City gained the upper hand, outscoring Belhaven, 13-5, and pushing into a 35-29 lead. They again outthit Belhaven, 14-8, in the final period to win going away.

Dianne Duggins led Oak City with 20 points, while Sylvia Jones was right behind with 19. Rhonda Fonville led Belhaven with 15.

Belhaven pushed into the lead in the opening period of the boys' game, and held to it throughout the first half. They led 8-3 after one period, and 18-14 at the half after being outthit 11-10 in the second period.

Oak City took a cue from the girls and took the lead in the third quarter with a 16-8 outburst. That left the Trojans ahead, 30-26 as the final quarter opened. They again outscored Belhaven, 7-4, to wrap it up.

Billy Green led Oak City with 14, while Eddie Collins had 10 for Belhaven.

The two teams swap sites for their next meeting, on January 3.

Buc Wrestlers Enter Tournaments

East Carolina's wrestlers continued their winning ways last Saturday by smashing North Carolina, 48-0, but now must prepare to face some of the nation's toughest wrestling competition in 2 tournaments during the Christmas holidays.

The Pirates, who shut out the Tar Heels for the third consecutive year, will first travel to Rockville, Md., for the Maryland Wrestling Federation Tournament December 22-23.

"We'll be facing our toughest competition to date in the Maryland Federation Tournament," said ECU wrestling coach John Welborn. "Some of the East Coast's top wrestlers will be entered but we're still hoping we can make good showing."

One Pirates will be defending a championship in the meet. Dan Monroe won the 126-pound title a year ago and was voted the tournament's most outstanding wrestler.

After the Maryland Federation tournament the Bucs will take a short Christmas break. They will reassemble at Wilkes-Barre, Pa., December 28 for an even tougher test, the Wilkes Open.

Known in wrestling circles as the "Rose Bowl of Wrestling", the Wilkes Open will be flooded with participants from such national powers as Westchester, Penn State, Lockhaven, Bloomsburg and the New York Athletic Club.

Brandywine Christmas

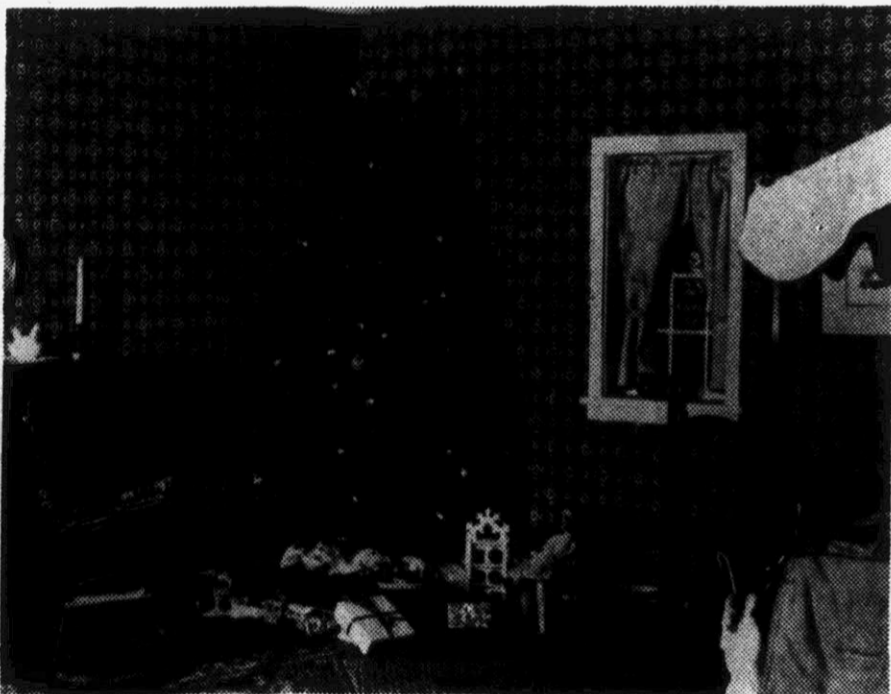

Here's a glimpse of a family's Christmas traditions to share. The family is the celebrated American painting family of Wyeths, associated with the Brandywine Valley area of Pennsylvania and its school of painting. The Brandywine River Museum at Chadds Ford assembled this beguiling collection of Wyeth family toys, paintings and decorations, most of them arranged in tableaux, for a Christmas exhibition. Many of these cherished objects not only belonged to various Wyeth generations but were also made by them. Ann Wyeth McCoy, daughter of N. C. Wyeth, put together the miniature "Room on Christmas Morning," and arranged the sleigh scene with its snow, trees and her childhood toy sleigh. And in another part of the show, beloved characters from "The Wind in the Willows," animal toys, wander through their own picture gallery, admiring the tiny sketches and watercolors, including the animals' own portraits, by their artist friends.

HOROSCOPE
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You are apt to be overemotional today and tonight and to make some definite mistakes if you allow this to affect your mature and deliberate judgment. So take the time to think out objectively and impersonally the answers to whatever is important to you and put your emotions aside till a better time for them.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Problems at home need careful handling, not arguments and recriminations. Use your head and all can be solved satisfactorily. Some outside personal problem should also be solved quickly, wisely.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Shop with care for the items you need and keep purse or wallet zipped. A kind word will calm wrath, so do not lose temper with others. Avoid one who has strange ideas and could get you mixed up.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Important to handle financial and real estate matters most carefully today when you are not feeling quite up to par. Listen to what an expert in finances has to suggest. Follow best suggestions made.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Forget self when dealing with other persons and you get better results with them and do away with self-consciousness that is detrimental to your advancement. Take the health treatments you need early. Tone down on temper.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Use more constructive methods than fussing and fretting about what you can do little about, and then you can do much that is progressive. Sulking at home alone is defeatism. Get out in the world of activity and strut your stuff — make big headway.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You have social plans that should be carried through in most effective way. Know what it is you want to accomplish and act in a positive manner. Forget all that vacillating from one thing to another.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Carrying through with promises made to a bigwig is important now, or you could lose ground where your public image is concerned. Get vital bills paid. Some civic work you have to do must not be neglected, either.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Try not to force others to go along with your own ideas or you could alienate good friends. State your views calmly and permit them to use their own free will. Get that special talent you have to work and advance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Important to handle obligations well instead of going off on some tangent or other today, otherwise you could regret it tomorrow. Meet the expectations of an attachment. Don't disappoint this person.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Show associates that you are most precise in handling your end of affairs, since they are in a questioning mood. You, too, should ask questions if you are in doubt and relieve your mind. Avoid one who has an eye on your assets.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Important to make preparations now for the coming week so you are ahead of the game. Ask questions concerning anything you are not sure of. Plan time for improving your charm and health, also.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Learn to smile more no matter how you feel or what worries you may have, and this helps you win out. Give attention promptly to creative work you have to do. A wise person can give good advice.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be one of those most sensitive young people who will definitely have artistic talents and should have these brought out early in life since the greatest success can come through such self-expression. There is also much ability at whatever is of a business nature, since there is an instinctive knowledge of what the public needs and desires. Send to the college of own choice for best results. Sports are secondary here.

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Christmas is almost here, and you now have an unusually good day and evening to use every spare moment to plan for the holiday season. You can then extract the greatest amount of benefit from such and can give pleasure to others. Fine for shopping.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Don't neglect that last-minute shopping for Christmas, and then start doing the things that will please others so you get into the true Christmas spirit. Evening can be fun. Think of the youngsters first.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Home and family should be first on the agenda today and much can be accomplished there and with those you love. Put everything on a more practical and exact basis. A smooth-running home is the first key to success.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Early morning shopping for the holiday is best, since you can find just the items you want. Get everything well organized, planned so your holiday will be a success. Put productive business ideas to work, too.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Contact bankers and other experts in financial matters and correlate your ideas with theirs for greater success ahead. Your home should be cleaned and furniture polished, so all is immaculate. Count your blessings.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Go after your finest aims now since you are dynamic and charming and can sway others easily with your good ideas. Evening is fine for social affairs, where you can be your Leo self and delight all. Refuse that extra drink, though.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Closet yourself in the privacy of your study and plan the future more wisely, solve problems difficult to do before. A good friend's plea for help should be heeded. Show that you are a true humanitarian.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Ideal day to join with fine friends for fun and see what they can do to assist you in your aims at the same time. Repaying social debts is wise. Reach a better understanding with those you like.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Contacting bigwigs and showing your abilities, stating your aims can bring you just the backing you want and need. Work on credit matters that are important. Reach a harmonious understanding with mate in p.m.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You are highly inspired to gain your aspirations and can do just that if you use a direct and positive method. New allies are most cooperative. Contact them early and work together enthusiastically and cleverly to achieve aims.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Your intuitive faculties are working fabulously now so take the time to follow their promptings and get ahead faster. Stop working at whatever is unimportant. Evening ideal for romance with mate.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Come to a far better understanding with anyone you consider to be an ally, whether in business or personal life. Improve your relationship with those you want to be active in your life in the future. Get out of that depressed mood.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Correspondence, gift wrapping should not be neglected even though you may be under pressure where routine work is concerned. Co-workers are very cooperative provided you do not lose your temper. Avoid one who is scrappy.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be one of those fascinating young people who thinks big and can become big because of the practical qualities in this chart combined with the ability for planning and carrying through with whatever is once started. Academic training is best here for the real success that is possible in this chart. Give good religious training early for best results. Regulated sports are best.

Resubmit A Bonds Vote

CHARLOTTE (AP)—The City Council has decided to resubmit to voters on April 10 a proposed $23 million bond package for street and traffic improvements they rejected last fall.

The bonds will be pushed with the slogan "Keep Beautiful Charlotte Moving." Mayor John Belk said the city would have 100,000 more cars by 1980. At the time each item in the bond package was defeated, voters approved $28 million in bonds for airport, water and sewer improvements. Voters who were asked why they opposed the traffic bonds said they did not believe the city's claim that taxes would not go up with such approval. But, as the city decided on the new referendum next spring, City Manager David Burkhalter said the councilmen could tell citizens again that this is the truth. He

IT TOOK SKILL AND SAVVY AND YEARS OF HARD WORK TO COME UP WITH A HEATING SYSTEM THIS SIMPLE.

Electric Baseboard Heat is simply wonderful. With as few as three items for each room in your home (normally one trim baseboard unit for each outside wall, one thermostat, and some wiring) you get even, dependable, trouble-free comfort all through the house.

But it's what you don't get that makes this system so great. There's no filter to change. No pilot to light. No fuel to reorder. No bulky equipment to take up valuable space.

No furnace. No fuel tank. No moving parts to wear out or break down and need repairs.

And that's not all. There are no drafts or hot spots. Just comfortable, even warmth.

There's no "roar," no "clank," no sound at all, except for the occasional quiet click of the thermostat.

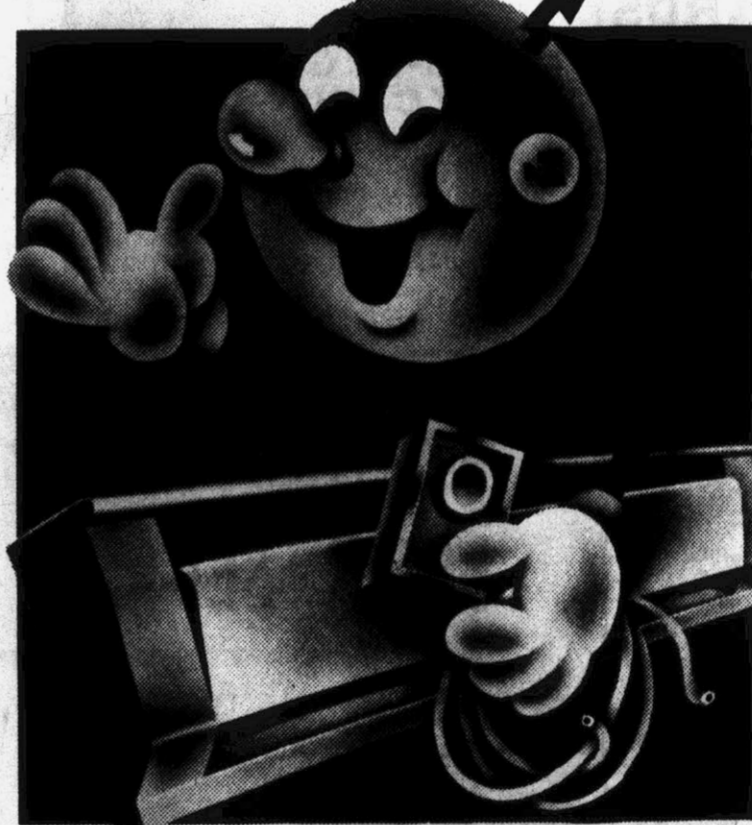

There's no reason for family arguments over temperature, either. Because Electric Baseboard Heat offers the one thing that guarantees everyone's comfort: a thermostat in every room.

So if you're planning to buy or build a new house, check into this great heating system. Or call your local Vepco office and ask to talk to a Vepco representative. He'll be happy to give you all the facts about Electric Baseboard Heat.

By using electricity in the winter when there's plenty to spare, you'll be helping us balance the demand for power year 'round. Which means you'll be helping us hold down your rates.

And by treating your family to Electric Baseboard Heat, you'll be providing them with years and years of perfect comfort. Nothing could be more simple.

IF ELECTRIC BASEBOARD HEAT WERE ANY SIMPLER, IT WOULDN'T BE THERE.

Widespread Death Fear Spurs Study

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — "Death has replaced sex as the most prevalent taboo in our society," says Rev. Leo Klugg, who teaches a course exploring attitudes toward death and the dying.

"Death still cannot be talked about socially, and those most in contact with the dying — the clerical and medical professions — often don't know how to relate to the dying person," said Father Klugg, who is offering the course for the first time at Newman Theological College.

"There is even evidence to suggest medical personnel and the clergy fear death more than segments of the general population," he said. "The dying are isolated — socially, in hospitals and in old peoples' homes — because society prefers to ignore this aspect of life it doesn't understand."

"People have the right to die in dignity and the moral and medical implications of keeping people alive by artificial means need more exploration."

Being "morbid" when death is mentioned, remaining silent and treating the subject as a joke to mask anxieties are some ways people avoid coming to grips with death, he said, adding that he hopes the topic can be brought into the open.

Father Klugg, who has a master's degree in sociology from Fordham University in New York, has acted as a hospital chaplain. He said just talking about death alleviates some people's anxieties on the subject.

He said, however, that three or four students told him they were dropping his course after the first meeting because they felt they were not up to discussing death in an objective manner.

Father Klugg said as a result of this reaction he is trying to detect student anxieties and discuss them within the framework of the course.

Though admitting that death is an area where little research has been conducted, he said the body of knowledge on the subject has grown phenomenally in the last five years.

Several universities in the United States offered courses as did the University of Windsor in Canada. In addition, two sociological journals and several theses and books on the subject are available.

Father Klugg is conducting a survey on attitudes to death by mailing questionnaires to 18,000 subscribers of a Roman Catholic newspaper to provide additional data on the subject.

Guilt and fear of damnation derived from one's religious beliefs play an important part in shaping attitudes to life and death, he explained. He suggested a re-examination of the basis of these attitudes and separation of fact from fantasy in religious beliefs as a means to find enjoyment of life.

Popeye Wrong About Spinach

NEW YORK (UPI) —Popeye may have been a good sailor but he blew it on spinach. The cartoon character whose appetite for canned spinach made the vegetable a symbol of iron strength was off the beam, nutritionally, says the Vitamin Information Bureau (VIB).

Not only are many other common foods richer in iron, but the iron from quite a few of them is more readily absorbed by the body than the iron from spinach.

Frozen baby lima beans, lentils, white beans, chick peas, beef and lamb kidney and liver contain about three times as much iron as spinach, duck meat, lamb and turkey liver, blackstrap molasses and cottonseed flour also are way ahead of spinach in iron content. Even caviar, oysters, hard-boiled eggs, dried apricots, walnuts and pistachios are richer in iron than Popeye's favorite, the bureau added.

Tradition In Austrians' Yuletide

VIENNA (AP) — In contrast to American custom, the Christmas tree in Austria, usually a fir or pine and never artificial, is kept hidden until Christmas Eve, when it is lighted and decorated with cookies, chocolates and angel's hair.

But traditional Yuletide preparations begin on the first of the four Sundays of Advent. An evergreen Advent wreath with red ribbons and four candles is made or bought. The first candle is lighted at dusk and on each successive Sunday another candle is lighted.

The children write long letters to the Christkindl (Christ Child), listing all the toys they want. They keep track of the days with an Advent calendar whose dates are little windows that open onto colorful holiday pictures. The last one, on Dec. 24, shows the Christ Child in his cradle.

Almost every family in Austria has a manger with hand-carved figures of the Blessed Parents and the child Jesus. Often these mangers are hundreds of years old, treasured heirlooms handed down from one generation to the next.

On Christmas Eve the family gathers around the tree to sing "Silent Night, Holy Night." The children recite poems and gifts are exchanged. At last, all sit down for dinner.

At midnight Christmas matins are celebrated in all Austrian churches. In the country, farmers bear torches as they walk to church. Carols are sung in the church towers to guide the faithful on their way.

Pageants and plays are presented everywhere dealing with the flight of the Holy Family to Egypt, the birth of Christ, the pilgrimage of the shepherds and the Three Wise Men.

The Christmas tree is lighted for the last time on Jan. 6, the day of Epiphany.

After the last mass that day, "Star Singers" go from house to house, followed by a "Star Carrier" clad in a long white garment and carrying a shining star mounted on a long pole. He is followed in turn by the Three Wise Men, and the entire procession is accompanied by people singing carols.

Study Space Base Ecology

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI)—Researchers from two nearby technical colleges are studying the ecology of the Kennedy Space Center to make sure that aerospace facilities at the base and the environment are compatible.

"The purpose of the program is to determine the basic ecological definition of the reservation and find ways for the environment to accommodate the installations needed for existing and future programs," said William H. Lee, bioscience staff officer at the spaceport.

Personnel from Florida Technological University and the Florida Institute of Technology started the study by identifying the wild life in the area and examining the base's water table, streams and estuaries.

"These studies will give us information on living things, their life cyclic behavior and essential environmental requirements," Lee said. "This information will be used to mesh engineering design with our operational requirements so we can control, predict and soften any impact on the environment."

Tiltmeters For Quake Studies

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI)—Three "tiltmeters" developed by the aerospace industry have been installed adjacent to the San Andreas fault in a new program aimed at earthquake prediction.

The tiltmeters, obtained from North American Rockwell's Autoentics Division in Anaheim, record earth tilt on both a north-south and east-west axis. Even a very small change can be recorded for study of the amount and direction of earth tilt. The project is sponsored by the California Division of Mines and Geology.

The Worry Clinic Just Maybe It Was Not 'Flu'

Heed Gordon's warning! For he describes a sudden epidemic in warm, dry weather (not the "flu" type of climate) which may not have been "flu" at all. Check on yourselves and neighbors when such unexplained symptoms become epidemic!

killer chemicals, has caused many experts to warn against their seeping into wells or being carried to surface reservoirs from which city folks derive their drinking water. By Gordon's experience may illustrate a quick reaction in the lungs of people who inhale such chemically contaminated dust, especially during the planting season in Spring. Maybe it is time to prod the Food and Drug Administration to investigate Gordon's.

By George W. Crane Ph.D., M.D. CASE V-576: Gordon G., aged 28, is a high school chemistry teacher.

"Several other teachers accompanied me. And when we got back, we all took down with runny noses, violently sore throats, and a dry cough that later became looser, more productive of phlegm.

"Many of the other teachers who didn't go to the convention, also came down with the same symptoms. At first, we thought it was ordinary flu.

"When our condition grew steadily worse after a few days, we decided we must all have Asiatic flu.

"But after two weeks, our throats and lungs still felt dry and as if they had been seared by fire.

"So I am wondering if we weren't victims of chemical burns in our nose, throat and lungs?

"For during this same corn-planting time, farmers were putting weed killer chemicals on their land.

"These are not supposed to be inhaled. But inevitably we inhale some of them, don't we?

"For as soon as these chemicals mix with the dust and the dust then dries in the hot sun, any slight gust of wind will pick up that dust and scatter it widely.

"Since we inhale over 1,000 times every hour, just think how many poisonous dust particles we may bring into our lungs!

"And couldn't this dust theory explain the sudden spread of throat and lung inflammations over most of our continent in a matter of a few days?"

Gordon has outlined the clinical symptoms that often hit a dozen states within 24 hours. And a lot of what has been regarded as "flu," may actually be a reaction to chemical pollutants!

Even pollen may cause a runny nose and smarting eyes in people who are allergic to roses in Spring or golden rod in Autumn.

A slight contact with poison ivy or poison oak may also cause a terrific inflammation of the skin, with burning and then oozing water blisters.

Similar inflammation in the nose, throat and lungs may likewise follow chemical irritation of those delicate mucous membranes, as by inhaled dust that is contaminated with poisonous weed killers.

Mankind often feels elated at concocting new chemicals that SEEM to be wonderfully helpful, but maybe within the next generation, they are then discovered to be injurious, as in the case of DDT.

Our present farm custom of covering the surface of the corn and soy bean fields with weed

Oratorio To Be On Radio

This season's performance of the Christmas portion of Handel's Messiah by the Greenville Community Chorus will be broadcast locally on Christmas Eve. WNCT-FM radio will carry the performance in its entirety, beginning at 8:07 p.m. Sunday. The 60-member chorus, directed by Robert Rausch, performed the oratorio December 12 in the main chapel of Jarvis Memorial Church. Soloists were Cathy Wilson, soprano; Amy Ramsaur and Ruth Lambie, contraltos; Steve Koch, tenor; and Ben Ramsaur and Charles Smith, basses. Organist Eleanor Toll accompanied the performance. The Chorus will present Gabriel Faure's Requiem April 17, 1973 as a special Easter offering to the community. Its Christmas performance of the Messiah has become an annual tradition in Greenville.

If he could hit his partner's strength at the outset, East would be in position to lead back a diamond thru South's holding.

In the hope that East had some strength in hearts West opened the three of that suit. The ten was played from dummy, East covered with the queen and South showed out. The latter was confronted with an immediate discard problem. Inasmuch as he had nine top tricks in spades and clubs, he could not afford to part with any of those cards. He was, therefore, obliged to give up a diamond.

East shifted to the seven of diamonds. South covered with the ten and West was in with the jack. Another heart was led, covered by North's jack and East was in again with the ace. A diamond thru declarer's king enabled West to run four more tricks in that suit and set his helpless opponent down by three before the latter could get going.

Had West opened a spade originally, South would have taken the first nine tricks. With the queen of diamonds lead, he scores one over his contract.

The bidding: South West North East 1 ♣ Pass 1 ♥ Pass 2 ♣ Pass 3 ♥ Pass 3 NT Pass Pass ♡

Opening lead: Three of ♡ An inspired lead by West against South's three no trump contract led to a stunning upset on the deal.

South opened the bidding with one club and North responded with one heart. Had his partner bid anything else, South would have been warranted in forcing the hand to game. With the response coming in his void suit, he bided his time by jumping to three clubs, hoping to get another chance.

When North rebid three hearts, South proceeded to three no trump.

West was tempted to open the queen of diamonds, however, on the basis of South's bids it seemed reasonable to

Former Astronaut Had Job To Do, And Did It

By JAY SHARUTT AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - "Okay, guys, take five and then knock it down," the floor director told the stage crew milling about the Apollo 17 anchorman's set at the ABC studio here.

Frank Borman stood up, removed his tie-clip microphone and said a quick goodbye to Frank Reynolds and Julius Bergman, his on-air colleagues during ABC's coverage of the last Apollo moon flight.

Down in the basement of the building, editors were reediting tape replays of the Apollo 17 splashdown for the evening news.

Borman walked quickly to his dressing room. He looked tired. He had helped ABC cover America's missions to the moon since the Apollo 14 flight and seemed glad it finally was all over.

At about this time four years ago, he was heading for the moon as the commander of Apollo 8. On Christmas Eve, he, James Lovell and William Anders became the first men ever to circle the moon.

In December 1967, he and Lovell, piloting the Gemini 7 spacecraft, established what then was the endurance record for space flight - 14 days.

Would he have liked to be on this nation's last moon flight? "A lot of people have asked me that," he said. "But I was very happy with what the Apollo 8 mission accomplished.

"If I had stayed on in NASA I'm sure that I would have had another Apollo flight, probably an early one. But I really thought nine years in the space program was enough.

"There were a lot of other people with the competence to carry on," he said. "I certainly didn't feel indispensable and I never looked upon my flights as a great personal achievement.

"We were part of a team and it was time to leave."

Borman, now a senior vice president for Eastern Air Lines, took temporary leaves to work for ABC during the Apollo missions.

Did he want to set foot on the moon? "No," he said. "On Gemini 7 we proved that man could live in space for two weeks - the length that Apollo 17 took - and on Apollo 8 we proved that you could go to the moon and back.

"I thought I had done my share. I had no great personal desire to set foot on the moon." Borman, a quiet, gentle man, now confines most of his personal flying to an old Stearman biplane owned by a friend.

What would he do if offered the chance to orbit Mars? "I'm too old," laughed Borman, now an ancient 44. "Really, right now I've found a job that's fascinating in another way. If I were 10 years younger, I'm sure I'd be right in the middle of it."

Mondale Of Minnesota Talked As 1976 Candidate

By DONALD LAMBRO WASHINGTON (UPI)—Walter Mondale, harkening to Harry Truman, has said he wouldn't like the heat and won't go in the kitchen. But that kind of talk hasn't stopped speculation about the Minnesota senator as a hot prospect for the 1976 Democratic presidential nomination. Mondale is technically the senior senator from Minnesota but for the past eight years he has labored practically in the shadow of his "junior" colleague, Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey. Even when Humphrey went back to Minnesota in 1968-70 to teach school before returning to the Senate, the former vice president and presidential contender remained the state's principal national political figure.

But now Humphrey is deferring to "Fritz" Mondale as a Democratic hope of tomorrow. No sooner had Mondale won his third term Nov. 7 with 57 per cent of the vote than Humphrey was boosting him on nationwide television for the 1976 top spot.

"He has a remarkably good record. He's young. He's seasoned politically. He's with the future. He's able to bring together all kinds of elements in the party," Humphrey said election night.

Perfect Time
"I think it's absolutely the perfect time for him. His need now is for greater national exposure. I'm going to work for him."

But Mondale, 44, the son of a small-town Methodist minister and one of the Senate's most outspoken liberals, isn't feeding such speculation. He shrugs it all off as "Washington talk."

Early this year he told one interviewer, "I don't have the stomach for a presidential race. I watched Hubert up close, and I don't like the way something like that tears you apart. I like some privacy."

More recently, however, friends say he has spoken privately of the presidency with an appreciation of its powers for change, capable, he told one audience, of inspiring "a mean and divisive nation or one possessed by a soaring spirit."

Mondale believes in letting the future take care of itself and concentrates instead on carving out a record that will surpass the previous eight years of prolific lawmaking.

The boyish-looking Minnesota was named state attorney general at age 32 by then Gov. Orville Freeman. Acquiring a reputation as a strong consumer protection advocate, he was appointed at 36 to the Senate in December, 1964, to fill Humphrey's unexpired term. He won his first full term in 1968.

Striking Qualities
One of Mondale's most striking qualities is his zeal to obtain information first-hand.

In the early light of morning he has watched Mexicans cross the border and checked by U.S. customs officials to be bused off to southern California farms as cheap migrant labor. He traveled to Alaska to see how Eskimos and Indians lived and survived. He and his wife went on a "welfare diet," eating only what the poor could afford. He marched with California's United Farm Workers to protest the hiring of Mexican labor to break Cesar Chavez' strike.

"I went on that diet and I went to the border to see, to feel, to be there, to experience what is going on rather than read about it," he said.

Concerned primarily with "human needs," Mondale's legislative work has focused on migratory labor, Indian welfare, legal services for the poor, open housing, hunger and malnutrition, and child care.

Dramatic Hearings
As chairman of the Senate Migratory Labor Subcommittee, he held a series of dramatic hearings that brought the problems of migrants to national attention. As head of another subcommittee on children and youth, Mondale was the chief architect of the child development bill passed by Congress and vetoed by President Nixon. His hearings on sudden infant death shed new light on a little-known problem and led to a federal research program.

A staunch advocate of lower military and space spending, his views are not always popularly received by Minnesotans. He led the unsuccessful fight to defeat the space shuttle even though Honeywell, one of the shuttle's major contractors, is a big employer in Minnesota.

The biggest regret of his career, he says, was his support for the Vietnam War until 1968. He began to have doubts about the war early that year but it wasn't until September, after the Democratic National Convention, that he publicly called for an end to the bombing.

"The worst mistake of my entire career was to remain silent so long against the war," he said. "Some people in Minnesota still haven't forgiven me and I can't say that I blame them."

Liberal Bloc
Mondale makes no secret of his desire to become "a more assertive" member of the Senate's liberal bloc.

"I don't believe the people want a stop to the progressive legislation we've put through since 1933," he said.

"I hear there's a new majority and that they can be brought together on negative promises: We won't bother you on school desegregation; We won't ask you to do this or that for the next guy.

"People will get wise to that kind of appeal after a while. They can be scared and frustrated, but if my party keeps saying what it's for, not against, the majority of the American people will listen, as they have in the past."

Aides say Mondale has no interest in involving himself in national Democratic party politics. Nonetheless, he made it clear in a recent television interview he has definite ideas what the party should now do in the wake of George McGovern's "disastrous" defeat.

Among other things, Mondale urged the party to establish an independent "Democratic Policy Committee" representing all segments of the country, particularly working people. The committee would hold hearings on major national issues and develop recommendations "that show where we stand."

Traditional Supporters
Mondale, who maintains good ties with organized labor as well as with McGovern's new politics constituency, believes the future of the party rests with its traditional supporters.

"Because the Democratic Party has only succeeded when the average worker and his family, the average farmer, the average citizen, identified with us, and felt we had their best interests at heart," he said.

Mondale appeared only once with McGovern, who made three visits to the state, but he made a point of urging his election in virtually every campaign speech.

The fact that Mondale did both appear with and speak for McGovern while seeking reelection himself was a rarity in 1972. Many of the most liberal Democrats who had to campaign themselves this year completely avoided McGovern and endorsed him only when pressed.

Next year, Mondale hopes to try for a seat on the influential but conservative-dominated Finance Committee where he could play a larger role on the major social welfare and tax measures the committee controls. He also may begin accepting more out-of-state speaking engagements. That certainly would fan the 1976 speculation.

"I love the job I have," he once told a reporter. "There's a lot of power around here in Congress that's not being exercised for liberal ends."

"Southerners and other conservatives don't let themselves get diverted, and it's time some of us liberals stayed around and tried to master and use the system, too."

More Of Police-Seized Narcotics Said Stolen

NEW YORK (AP)—Narcotics stolen from the Police Department's property office may total almost four times the amount disclosed last week and an around-the-clock inventory was under way today in the case of the vanishing heroin.

Police Commissioner Patrick V. Murphy disclosed Wednesday that the magnitude of thefts from the office where evidence is stored goes "well beyond the scope of my original announcement." But he declined to specify the amount.

Last week he said that 80 pounds of heroin seized in the 1962 "French Connection" case was missing. That amount of the drug would have an estimated street value of $16 million and would supply about 7,000 addicts for 100 days, narcotics officials said.

Police Department and government sources were quoted today as saying that another 88 pounds of heroin and 131 pounds of cocaine plus cash and jewelry are also gone.

"This is, without doubt, the worst instance of police corruption I have uncovered," said Murphy, whose campaign to root out police corruption has generated much controversy here.

He ordered a complete inventory at six police department locations where narcotics contraband is stored. Department records show that more than 1,300 pounds of heroin was seized between 1961 and September 1972.

Policemen and detectives are required to sign for items of evidence they remove from the property clerk's office, but Murphy said last week it was not possible to analyze heroin every time it was removed and returned.

The department is required to keep possession of all contraband seized until criminal prosecutions are completed, at which time the illegal drugs theoretically are destroyed.

In the "French Connection" instance, Murphy said, the heroin was removed and a powdery material substituted. It has been dubbed the "French Connection" case because the successful 1962 investigation inspired the book and later the movie by that name.

Mothers Sue Their Judge Lost Arms Could Have

CHARLOTTE (AP)—Three welfare mothers have filed a civil suit against state District Court Judge William H. Abernathy, for forcing them to spend a weekend in jail and then giving them fines and suspended sentences on charges of welfare fraud.

The suit in U.S. District Court asks that Abernathy's actions of last month be declared unconstitutional.

The plaintiffs-- Mrs. Sally Donaldson of Davidson and Mrs. Doris Jean Moore and Mrs. Lugenia Sampson, both of Charlotte--were among 11 Mecklenburg County welfare mothers sentenced for not reporting to welfare officials that they were employed. Had they done so, their payments would have been reduced.

The three alleged that Abernathy acted "arbitrarily, willfully, maliciously, in bad faith" and in violation of their constitutional rights when he sentenced them without defense attorneys, and lectured them on morality. He required them to report any out-of-wedlock pregnancies to the welfare department.

The judge told them they were not entitled to a court-appointed attorney if they wished to plead guilty to the misdemeanor charges. They signed papers waiving their right to counsel.

JCs Will Honor Prison Official

RALEIGH (AP)—The North Carolina Jaycees plan to establish an award honoring George W. Randall, veteran prison official who died recently.

State Jaycee President Fred Morrison said Wednesday the award will be presented each year to the outstanding officer in North Carolina's corrections system.

Morrison made the announcement at a ceremony in which he presented a Jaycee charter to a group of inmates at the North Carolina Correctional Center. North Carolina has 35 Jaycee prison chapters, more than any other state.
