State Assembly Begins Considering Legislation

Browning Named To Highway Body

Greenville attorney Robert Browning has been named by Governor James Holshouser to membership on the State Highway Commission. The new commission member was campaign chairman in Pitt County for the Holshouser gubernatorial campaign.

From 1957 to 1962 Browning served on active duty in Naval Aviation for five years, making trips with his transport squadron to Cuba, Vietnam and North Africa. Currently he is a member of the Naval Reserve, with rank of Lt. Commander. He and his wife, the former Mary Ann Williams of Virginia Beach, Virginia, have two children, Michael who is 6, and Scott, 2.

Browning is a vice chairman of the Board of Deacons of Emanuel Baptist Church, a member of the Greenville Parking Authority, and is a member of the Rotary Club. This will be the first time the new commissioner has held public office.

RALEIGH (AP) — With opening day formalities out of the way, North Carolina's General Assembly was ready today to begin consideration of legislation.

Bills to reorganize the state Highway Commission and to take from the governor the power to allocate highway surplus funds were among a host of legislative proposals introduced at Senate and House convened Wednesday and got organized in record time.

The lawmakers quickly enacted a resolution inviting Gov. Jim Holshouser to address a joint session next Wednesday. At that time, the governor is expected to outline his legislative program.

At Wednesday's opening, Rep. Jim Ramsey, D-Person, was unanimously chosen House speaker; Sen. Gordon Allen, D-Person, was elected president pro tem of the Senate; and Rep. William T. Watkins, D-Granville, was named House speaker pro tem.

Ramsey and Lt. Gov. Jim Hunt, who presides over the Senate, announced their House and Senate committee assignments. It was the first time in memory that committee assignments were announced on opening day.

The Senate received a batch of resolutions by Democrats who sought to beat the governor to the punch in laying down a legislative program.

These included a resolution by Sen. Kenneth C. Royall, D-Durham, endorsing annual legislative sessions; a measure to set a code of ethics for public officials by Sen. Bobby L. Barker, D-Wake; a resolution by Sen. John Henley, D-Cumberland, calling for a study of the advisability of creating standing legislative committees and one calling for a study of the controversial legislative retirement system.

Sen. J. J. Harrington, D-Bertie, and others offered a resolution seeking a study of Highway Commission reorganization; Sen. James Garrison, D-Stanly, and others offered a resolution urging higher pay for law enforcement officers; Sen. Cy Bahakel, D-Mecklenburg, sent up a resolution urging deterrents for crime; and Sen. McNeill Smith, D-Guilford, submitted bills providing for statewide public kindergartens and for a change in the allocation of surplus highway funds. Allen offered a resolution calling for auto insurance reform.

Several House members joined Rep. Willis Whichard, D-Durham, in sponsoring a resolution to give North Carolina's approval to the equal-rights-for-women amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

Rep. David W. Bumgardner, D-Gaston, introduced two measures in the House. One would call for reorganization of the Highway Commission and the other would take from the governor the right to allocate surplus highway funds.

A change in the allocation of surplus highway funds was proposed after allocations by former Gov. Bob Scott to his home county of Alamance drew criticism. Bumgardner said his measure would use surplus highway funds for paving of secondary roads.

"My purpose is to re-establish faith in the operations of the state Highway Commission which so many people feel has been lost," Bumgardner told newsmen.

Bumgardner's other bill would replace the present 23-member state Highway Commission with a 14-member commission. In addition, there would be a deputy commissioner in each county.

Pleads Guilty In Watergate Case

By DON McLEOD
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Watergate defendant E. Howard Hunt Jr. pleaded guilty for a second time today, and this time the court accepted his plea, removing him from the trial of seven men charged with burglarizing Democratic party headquarters.

But before the plea was accepted, Hunt said under questioning from the bench that the prosecution's opening statement outlining a broad operation of political espionage said to have been ordered by top members of President Nixon's re-election campaign was essentially correct.

Hunt is a former White House consultant. U.S. District Court Judge John J. Sirica immediately placed Hunt under $100,000 security bond and he was taken into custody by U.S. marshals while his attorneys tried to raise bond.

Earlier, Hunt had pleaded guilty to three of the six counts against him in the government's indictment, in an understanding with the prosecution that three other counts would be dropped.

However, Sirica refused to accept the first guilty plea, saying the interest of justice demanded that all six counts be pressed.

Find No True Bill

The Pitt County Grand Jury returned a "not a true bill" this morning after hearing testimony on a bill of indictment charging Greenville police officer Charles A. Williamson with manslaughter in connection with a Dec. 6 shooting.

The decision by the Grand Jury ends action against Williamson, who shot and killed Connie James, 23, of 515 Ford Street during an arrest attempt on W. Fifth Street Dec. 6.

The 18-member Grand Jury heard testimony from 11 witnesses Wednesday between 11 a.m. and 4:45 p.m. before adjourning until this morning. Two of the witnesses were recalled today for further questioning.

District Solicitor Eli Bloom, in announcing that he had decided to send the matter to the Grand Jury for action, said then that his decision was made after reviewing a report from the SBI on their investigation of the case.

Paris Parleys Said Now At Decisive Stage

PARIS (AP) — North Vietnam warned today that it will never be intimidated by American bombing or other acts of force and will not accept American efforts to "impose unreasonable terms" in the peace talks.

As Henry A. Kissinger and Le Duc Tho met for the fourth straight day in their secret negotiations, Nguyen Minh Vy told the weekly meeting of the semipublic, four-party peace talks.

"The negotiations have now come to a decisive stage, it is either good progress toward signing an agreement, or continuation of the war. Obviously, this depends on the American side."

With American goodwill, peace could be rapidly restored, Vy continued. But if the United States "clings to the policy of force in an attempt to impose unreasonable terms ... the Vietnam question cannot be settled and the war will be prolonged."

Meanwhile, Kissinger and Tho were joined for the first time in their current round of negotiations by the technical experts who have been working on details of various items that might be included in a cease-fire agreement.

The joint meeting of the top negotiators and the experts indicated that the negotiations between Kissinger and Tho were going beyond arguments over basic principles. But both sides maintained their news blackout, and there was no evidence of progress toward removing the main obstacles to agreement.

In Saigon, the government radio commented that: "No progress should be expected from the peace talks at this time as every available indicator suggests that Hanoi is preparing for the worst."

Communist sources said Hanoi is still ready to sign the agreement drafted in October by President Nixon's top foreign policy adviser and the North Vietnamese Politburo member, but rejects major changes they say the United States is demanding.

Other informants also said North Vietnam has shown no inclination to make concessions despite the massive bombing of Hanoi and Haiphong last month.

The main obstacles to agreement are known to include North Vietnam's refusal to accept the government of President Nguyen Van Thieu as the only legitimate government of South Vietnam or to recognize the 17th parallel as an international border separating North and South Vietnam as two independent states.

Ice And Snow Continue Make Driving Hazardous

By BLANCHE HARDEE
Reflector Staff Writer

Although some of the ice and snow has melted in the area, driving is still hazardous and should be limited.

A spokesman for the North Carolina State Highway Commission said this morning the primary roads were icy in spots and that secondary roads were still covered with ice and snow. Driving was hazardous and chains were required for the rural highways.

The highway commission crews are still working round the clock, a schedule they have maintained since early Monday morning, to clear the roads. The crews are still putting sand and salt on intersections and bridges.

According to the Greenville Utilities Commission weather station, the high temperature for the 24-hour period ending today at 8 a.m. was 35 degrees, while the low recorded during that same period was 20 degrees. The temperature today at 8 a.m. was 27 degrees and by 10 a.m. had risen to 34 degrees.

The high temperature for Tuesday was 32 degrees while the low was 17 degrees. The high temperature on Monday was 26 and the low for that day was 15 degrees.

The Tar River level this morning was reported at 4.0 feet. The N.C. Highway Patrol reported the primary roads were in fair condition but icy in spots. The secondary roads have had very little work done to them and are hazardous.

The highway patrol feels driving should be limited, but that people should attempt to get to work.

Mayo Allen, director of the Public Works Department, said the garbage pickup from the curb had worked fine today and that he appreciated the cooperation of local citizens.

Allen said the sanitation department would pick up the garbage from the curb next to the street again on Friday.

ECU Med School Report Slated To Go Before Board Friday

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Board of Governors of the University of North Carolina is expected to review a report by a subcommittee named "sometime ago to study the needs of medical education in the state at a meeting in Chapel Hill Friday.

The question of what the subcommittee recommendation contains, or what the Board of Governors will do about the recommendations, is pure speculation at this time, however, according to a source close to the study group.

A article published in state newspaper this week, said the UNC Board of Governors "is expected to vote ... against immediate expansion. ... of the ECU program, and said the five member study committee "will recommend to the full board ... that the Greenville campus not be expanded immediately. ..."

The source, who noted that any report on what the Board of Governors will do on Friday is "purely speculation," acknowledged board plans to "consider the recommendation" by it's subcommittee, at that time.

"Any pre-conclusion or assumption at this point would purely be taken out of context," the source noted.

The source continued, "I don't interpret anything the committee has done as against ECU. The program for meeting the needs — to procure more doctors — may be a little different approach and differ from previously published suggestions, but I don't read anything in the report as being against ECU."

A Greensboro newspaper said the subcommittee's report "does not shut out ECU expansion in the future" and noted the recommendation by the study group would "afford ECU a better chance for a four-year program in the future" than other possible courses of action considered by the subcommittee.

The subcommittee report to the UNC Board of Governors is said to include a review of the history and development of medical training in North Carolina and statements stressing the importance of para-medical training programs.

Photographic Award To Film Is Understandable

It's easy to understand why the Grand Award of the Photographic Society of America went to Wilderness Journey at the 40th Annual Film Festival in 1972.

Now showing at the Plaza Cinema (only through Saturday), Wilderness Journey is a document of remarkable beauty, filmed with a sensitive eye, capturing the smallest fleeting detail as well as the spectacular grandeur of The Alaskan landscape. Chuck Keen, a former lumberjack, is responsible for the fine photography and the script.

Not the least of the major attractions of Wilderness Journey is the fact that the message of nature's beauty is not relentlessly driven home. The camera states the message, and the viewer is left free to form his own responses. It is good to escape the ecological sermons which all too often mar films of this genre.

A prologue narrative preceding the main action sketches in ancient legends of Alaskan Indians, in particular the Tlingit Indians. The plot centers on a two day canoe journey taken by a 12 year old Tlingit Indian boy Joniko.

Joniko's journey is rich in symbolism though actually motivated by the practical necessity of reaching his father, seal hunting with two other men, in order to get help for an injured white man.

The drama of the lone wilderness voyage of a boy in a frail canoe in conveyed with an integrity that is exceptional in film making.

Moments of tension, encounters with potential dangers are muted, almost casual as individual episodes. It is the totality of the events that builds to the gradual and natural revelation of the epic undertaking accomplished by the boy.

Joniko pouts about losing the first challenge to master the secrets of riding the ocean waves. He discovers the joy of watching a whale perform splendid scrobatic feats; and senses the subtle menace emanating from a colony of sea lions (his grandfather warned Joniko to avoid the sea lions. . . "jealous of men, the first of talking animals to come from beneath the sea).

On the final of two nights, Joniko, bone-weary falls asleep in the canoe, surrendering to the fight against fragments of ice in the bay. In this quietly touching scene the exhausted boy becomes a man in having conquered the elements of nature; and yet remains a child in fearful dreams he has of Kush-Ta-Ka, the evil spirit.

Wilderness Journey is also the story of the modern changes in life styles of Alaskan Indians. The old grandfather lives alone in his cabin in the winter. "The winter is stern, strong," he muses. "The strength of winter is the strength of all who dwell here."

In the brief summer months they come to live with him, laying up supplies of smoked salmon, seal skins, berries and firewood.

The grandfather, a proud patriarch who refuses to speak English, adores Joniko, seeing in him a hopeful perpetuator of ancient traditions. He has affection too for the younger boy and girl, but cannot conceal his annoyance over their incessant curiosity that disrupts the solitude he is accustomed to.

The many splendid achievements realized in Wilderness Journey are regrettably marred by several instances of professional sloppiness. The most glaring defect is the wooden, clumsy delivery of lines by everyone in the cast, in varying degrees, except the grandfather, who gives a splendid performance.

Tony Tuchker Williams, a Tlingit Indian boy playing Joniko is a handsome, rugged boy who is thoroughly convincing in the role when not required to speak. There is merit in using unknown actors in a film such as this one. At the same time, someone should have the responsibility to adequately coach the actors.

The fine background music is, in most instances, in harmony with the moods of the film. There is a truly lovely passage of rustic flute music as Joniko crosses an open stretch of water at twilight that is stroke of genius. But there is also one jarring intrusion, a full orchestra and vocalist belt out the song Alaska as Joniko heads out on his journey.

This may seem to be undue carping about relatively minor imperfections. However Wilderness Journey comes so near being a memorable film experience that I find it all the more a pity that these minor factors kept the movie from achieving its full potential.

As it is Wilderness Journey is a visually magnificent film that deserves to be seen by young and old for the many riches it offers. It is a refreshing story of the joys of being a boy and the dignity of age, told with honesty, simplicity and compassion.

Tree-Planting Ceremony Will Launch Program

PLYMOUTH — The Weyerhaeuser Company will conduct a special tree planting ceremony at its seedling nursery near Washington on Friday to commemorate the start of a 100 million tree reforestation program to be undertaken by the company in 1973.

First District Congressman Walter B. Jones and other dignitaries will participate in the ceremony and luncheon. Jack Wolff, vice president-land and timber for the company, will deliver a major address pertaining to reforestation in the United States.

The reforestation program undertaken by Weyerhaeuser is the largest planting effort ever attempted by a private organization.

The company owns in excess of 600,000 acres of land in North Carolina and plans to plant 20 million of those 100 million trees in the state during 1973.

Set Evangelism Study Session

Plans have been completed for the Lay Witness Institute to be conducted Friday evening, Saturday, and Sunday afternoon at St. James United Methodist Church, with the Rev. Archie Parrish, of Coral Ridge Presbyterian Church, Fort Lauderdale, Florida, teaching this interdenominational course on "Evangelism Explosion."

Since the latter part of October, several committees headed by the Rev. Howard M. McLamb, Greenville District Superintendent of the North Carolina United Methodist Church Conference, and John D. Grier, Greenville business man and Presbyterian layman, have been meeting and formulating plans for this evangelism study. More than 175 persons from a wide area of Eastern North Carolina have registered.

Although set up to provide a study in ways of effective

Christian witness for Greenville area churches, the project does fit into the format of Key 73, a continent-wide program participated in by more than 150 denominational bodies.

The Greenville area project begins Friday at 6:30 p.m. with a supper (dutch treat), followed by a two-hour study of "Evangelism Explosion."

The Saturday sessions begin at 9:30 a.m. and continue until 5:30 p.m., with one hour intermission for lunch.

On Sunday afternoon, instruction begins at 2:00 p.m. and continues until 5:30 p.m. A large number of auditors has indicated an interest in this program in which several denominations have been represented.

Set Orientation Program Sunday

A March of Dimes orientation and information program, slanted basically to young people is scheduled for Sunday at 7:30 p.m. in Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church.

Mrs. A. J. Brock, in charge of arrangements for the program, has said that young people of church groups, schools and civic organizations throughout Greenville and Pitt County are being invited to attend.

At this meeting, emphasis will be placed on the part that young people can play in providing assistance to the forthcoming March of Dimes campaign.

Interested adults, Mrs. Brock said, are also welcome to attend.

FCIC Director Vann Retires

Julian Mann, director of the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation five-state Raleigh Contract Service Center, retired on Jan. 6.

Mann began his crop insurance career in 1945 as North Carolina state director when the Corporation set up state offices throughout the United States, and assumed his present position when the 14 centers replaced state officers in 1971.

Mann prepared for college at Lake Landing High School near Lake Mattamuskeet, in Hyde County, and graduated from Augusta Military Academy at Fort Defiance, Va. He received his bachelor's degree in commerce from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and a master's degree from N.C. State University at Raleigh.

Just Advising, Not Drumming Up Business

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1973 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: A woman who was married for 46 years wrote a long story about how hard her husband was to live with. She asked you whether she should choose divorce or suicide, and she signed herself "Suffered Enough."

You told her divorce was preferable. Are you married to a divorce lawyer, Abby?

NOSY

DEAR NOSY: No. Are you married to an undertaker?

DEAR ABBY: I have been married for nearly a year to a nice guy who has lots to offer, but I want out. Buddy and I were married because we thought I was pregnant. It turned out I wasn't.

At first I was happy. Then I started to miss going out with other guys and having fun. Before I got married I had lots of boy friends and now I miss all that.

Buddy hasn't mistreated me, and I really do like him, but I don't love him, and I can't see staying married to someone I don't love for the rest of my life.

I talked to my pastor and he told me to "grow up," which was no help at all. What I really want is a divorce, but on what grounds? And how should I break the news to Buddy? I hate to just walk out.

WANTS OUT

DEAR WANTS: If Buddy doesn't know what's on your mind, level with him — and right now! No "nice guy with lots to offer" would want to stay married to a girl who doesn't love him and wants out. This is a matter for both of you to decide. He may be as glad to get rid of you as you are to get rid of him.

DEAR ABBY: Because you appear to be an intelligent woman who has managed to combine a successful marriage and family with a career, I am hoping you can offer me some encouragement.

I am a 24-year-old, reasonably intelligent woman. My husband is a young professional man who is presently establishing himself in business. We have a beautiful baby, 6 months old.

I have two years of college credits and want to return to get my degree. When the baby is a year old I plan to take a light course to begin with, and will be away from home only three mornings a week. My husband is 100 per cent for it, but my parents think I am crazy.

My mother tells me if I go back to college it will be the ruin of my marriage. My father feels a woman should be allowed to go to college only in order to find a rich husband, after which she should stay home and have a baby every year.

I don't feel that I am in any way jeopardizing my marriage. In fact, I think I'm "protecting" it. After all, how many husbands who are getting ahead in the world want to come home to wives who can't talk about anything except toilet training and the price of ground chuck?

I know I'm doing the right thing. All I need is some encouragement from you.

BACK TO COLLEGE

DEAR BACK: You have it. Your parents may mean well, but they're off the beam.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "JUST ASKING" IN CLEVELAND: Yes, I carry on my person two cards. One indicating that immediately upon my death, my eyes shall go to someone who can use them, the other, my kidneys. No matter what else I leave behind, these, I think, will be the most precious.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L. A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Olivia de Havilland Starts A New Life

By REBECCA MOREHOUSE

NEW YORK (WNS) — In what might be called mid-passage, Olivia de Havilland looks to a future packed with excitement and surprise. She has not consulted a soothsayer, yet she is as positive of change as a positive woman can be.

"I have this feeling I'm going to have an exciting life in future," she said at the Hotel Plaza's Oak Room. "It will be entirely different from the previous life. I overwhelmingly, overpoweringly, feel this. Isn't that a strange conviction? I began to have it about a year and a half ago."

"I think people have unlimited ability for self-development. You just keep that in mind and anyone's future is full of promise. To that you have to add hope and effort."

"On the first day of January, after I get Christmas and my income tax out of the way, I will begin to write my autobiography. Because I believe my future will be so different, I want to record my reminiscences now."

Spirited Woman

She is a spirited, handsome woman, dignified but not cold, serious but with a smile hovering around her lips, and given to gusts of laughter. Two things make an immediate impact: Her exquisite complexion and her weight. She's put on more than a few pounds but denied that she is plump.

"I got gently rounded," she said. "I think it started when I visited a couple who are the happiest married couple I ever saw. She was fat. Perhaps, psychologically, that had an effect on me."

She was here on route to her home in Paris, having completed 12 lecture

Hostesses for the meeting were Mrs. Savage, Mrs. Dink James and Mrs. Clara Shackell.

Welcome Wagon Club To Meet

The meeting of the Welcome Wagon Club of Greenville scheduled for yesterday was postponed until next week.

The group will meet Wednesday, Jan. 17, at the Greenville Golf and Country Club beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Bridge, for interested members, will start at 9:30 a.m. at the country club also on Wednesday.

Wedding Invitation

Mrs. Johnnie Lee requests the honor of your presence at the marriage of her daughter, Carolyn Sue, to James Parisi, on Friday, Jan. 12, at 8:00 p.m. at Parkers Chapel Free Will Baptist Church. No invitations were sent.

engagements around the country, her second talk tour.

"My lectures are reminiscences of Hollywood's golden era, the contrast between that life and living in Paris so long. I talked to groups called Town Halls, they're a phenomenon. They're composed of women, churchwomen or clubwomen, who sponsor speakers and give the profit to the community. In North Dakota, they gave the profit to the Sioux Indians.

"Lectures generally start at 10:30 a.m. I get up at 7:30, have my hair done — you have to have your hair dressed, that's important — and get there early to check the lights and microphone. If you think of the audience, you pay attention to these details."

"After the lecture there's a luncheon at a country club, and these clubs can be very beautiful. The woman write questions which are presented to me. Some are very embarrassing, but the suspense is how will the speaker reply."

"They want to know if I've had a face lift. It's one of the most complimentary questions, and the answer is no. I'm asked, 'Do you intend to marry Edward Heath (Britain's prime minister)?' My answer is, 'I do not intend to marry him and he does not intend to marry me.' We were an item one hot weekend in August, 1971.

Tells Age

"They ask my age and I'm fearless, I tell them." She is 56. "At one luncheon I was asked how much I weigh. I said, 'There is an Episcopal priest here so I absolutely have to tell the truth, but it's dreadful, it's awful.' I took a vote whether I should tell and the ladies all said no."

Two Academy Awards, for "To Each His Own" and "The Heiress," and her portrayal of mousey, self-sacrificing Melanie in "Gone With the Wind," placed her in the Hollywood pantheon. But she has not made a film since

Mrs. Little Is Guest Speaker

Mrs. Laura Little was guest speaker at the meeting of the N.C. Alpha Nu Chapter of Delta Delta Kappa, international sorority for women teachers, last week.

Her topic was "Career Education." She was introduced by Mrs. Anne Worthington and a general discussion followed the program.

The president, Miss Alya Taylor, called the meeting to order. The devotion was given by Mrs. Evelyn Finch on "What Is Happiness?" and her final analysis was "Happiness Is Being."

During the business meeting, various reports were presented to the membership.

The dinner meeting was held at the Holiday Inn.

"The Screaming Woman," an ABC Movie of the Week shown last January.

"I want to act but there's such a scarcity of material," she said. "Compared to 20 years ago, the number of films from Hollywood is very diminished. I spent almost 20 years in Hollywood and the old days were exciting. But it's no longer the capital of the film industry."

Paris has been her home since her marriage in 1955 to Pierre Galante, an editor of Paris Match. They were legally separated 10 years ago. But for most of that time, for the sake of the children, they continued to live in the same house, in separate quarters. Recently, they divorced.

She has a 22-year-old son, Benjamin Briggs Goodrich, by her first husband, author Marcus Goodrich, whom she divorced in 1952. She and Galante have a 16-year-old daughter, Gisele.

"Benjamin was born in the U.S., so of course he's an American citizen. Gisele was born in France, but she's an American citizen, too. I had the right to register her at the embassy, and I took her wrapped in a blanket, and she threw up. Yes, she's pretty but I don't think that makes life easier. Sometimes plain girls lead more adventurous lives."

She is irked when Americans speak to her of French hostility to Americans.

Annual Session Is Likelihood

One of the major issues in this year's Legislature will be annual sessions.

It is a good bet that the Democratic controlled Legislature dealing with a Republican governor, will turn to annual sessions beginning next year so

Certification Goes Political

By BRYAN HAISLIP

RALEIGH — Teacher certification debate in North Carolina is following a path from philosophy to politics.

What began as a division of opinion on the basic educational question of how to decide qualification to teach now promises to become a public issue likely to involve legislation before it is resolved.

It also has overtones of a clash between two personalities at the top in public education: Dr. A. Craig Phillips, elective state superintendent of public instruction and chief spokesman among professional educators; and Dr. Dallas Herring, appointive chairman of the state board of education and the leading lay voice in public school affairs.

The two men, on opposite sides in the controversy, both serve on a committee focusing on teacher certification policy. The committee, which will report findings and its recommendation to the state board next month, is scheduled to hold its first hearing in Raleigh on Friday (Jan. 12).

The committee will listen to sentiment, from educators and citizens, on what has become the major educational debate of recent years. It revolves around the process by which the state gives access to the classroom for those seeking to enter the teaching profession.

NTE Is Spotlights

The bone of contention is the use of the National Teacher Examination (NTE) as a measure of academic preparation for prospective teachers.

By an 8-to-3 vote last December, the state board adopted a new policy which eliminated a cut-off scored on the exam as essential to certification, the equivalent of licensing. It substituted a three-phase evaluation of academic achievement, professional performance, and personal-social characteristics. The process kept the exam, but required no minimum score.

Chairman Herring, casting one of the three negative votes, charged the new policy would pull out scholarship as the proper cornerstone for education. A teacher who has not mastered a body of knowledge can no more teach, he argued, "than you can get back from where you haven't been."

Dr. Phillips described the procedure as an attempt to devise an evaluation instrument which will lift the quality of what takes place in the classroom. He said it represented the culmination of long study by responsible lay and professional people to find the best means of judging all-round teaching qualifications.

Many Join Debate

Educators, politicians and the press joined the debate in the aftermath of the board's December action. Advocates and opponents engaged in heated discussion of the plan, its merits and shortcomings.

When it met in January, the state board of education had word urging that a minimum NTE score be restored from outgoing Gov. Bob Scott and incoming Lt. Gov. Jim Hunt (who will serve ex-official on the board).

Pat Taylor, at his final board session as lieutenant governor, advised against permitting the issue to become a political football to the detriment of the cause of public education. To avoid that, he also suggested that a minimum NTE score be retained.

Taylor allied with State Treasurer Edwin Gill in asking that the policy be reconsidered. It was his motion, adopted unanimously, which created the committee to sound out public opinion and report back to the board in February. Dr. Phillips was specifically included as a member.

Committee Includes Dissenters

In appointing the other five members on the committee, Dr. Herring included the three who voted against the certification policy at the December meeting—himself, Barton Hayes of Lenoir, and H.L. Trigg of Greensboro. The other two members are Mrs. Forrest Lockett Jr. of Aberdeen and William R. Lybrook of Winston-Salem. Hayes is chairman.

Unless there are changes of opinion, it appears likely the committee will propose that the board open the subject for further action.

When it created the committee, the state board did not rescind or modify its approval for the new certification policy which does not become effective until next July.

Thus, the key point in February will be whether what the committee has to report will be persuasive enough to change votes on the issue.

If it does not, there have been rumblings that legislation may be introduced to keep the NTE as an effective part of the certification process.

Whatever the outcome, it seems clear that the teacher certification issue has ignited interest in the educational operation of the schools to a degree missing in recent years. On that score, both sides agree that good can come from the debate.

they can keep an eye on things.

That will mean that, instead of a biennial budget, the Legislature would begin adopting annual budgets, and this should mean that budget estimates could be more carefully made. This would eliminate the embarrassing situation which came about this year in which a huge surplus has developed.

In North Carolina, by law, the budget must balance, so the law makers have traditionally underestimated revenues knowing that the surplus could be carried over to the next biennium. Since they were looking two years ahead, it is difficult to determine what the economic situation will be and thus the tendency is to underestimate.

The annual session, then, should mean a much better method of budgeting and estimating revenues.

The legislators, however, will have to guard against inordinately long sessions, if our basic system of non-professional legislators is to be maintained. Certainly annual sessions should be limited to no more than four months. In this way it is possible that men and women who earn their livings in other fields of endeavors will be able to continue to go to the General Assembly and represent their areas. We believe this non-professional system best serves the people.

We feel that annual sessions of the General Assembly can be good for our state. The legislators will be able to look more closely at public needs and maintain more careful budget control.

On One Occasion We Had 16-Inch Snowfall

A number of people have asked what the local record snowfall for Greenville was.

The record for modern times came on March 3, 1927. The weather observer, B. T. Clark, reported in The Daily Reflector that day that the snowfall totaled 16 inches. Forbes and Morton and Centre Brick Warehouses collapsed under the heavy snow burden.

This week's snow might not have been as deep but it got colder. The overnight low on March 23, 1927 was 25 degrees. The low here Tuesday night was 17 degrees, as recorded by Greenville Utilities.

No Cake Walk For Holshouser

By JOHN KILGO

RALEIGH — Gov. Jim Holshouser is in office, fully satisfied in his own mind the people of North Carolina want some drastic changes in the way state government is run.

Holshouser leaves no doubt whatsoever that he plans to give them those changes.

But his term will not be a cake walk, and the first hint of that came during his inauguration last week.

One democrat who attended told me: "Jim got a little tough and he must remember there's nothing he can do without the democrats in the Legislature."

Holshouser did, indeed, get a "little tough."

He pointed his finger at the Highway Dept. across the street and in a steel-firm voice, said: "The changes are going to start right over there."

"Highway commissioners," Holshouser said, "are going to see city councils, county commissions and chambers of commerce, and not cronies."

The crowd cheered. Some democrats prominent in the audience had to grit their teeth.

It's a lot easier for democratic leaders to say nice things about Holshouser now than it will be later.

We have had columns in recent weeks quoting such staunch democrats as Sen. Ralph Scott, House Speaker James Ramsey, and Sen. Phil

Godwin as saying they think Holshouser will do a good job and will be an easy man to work with.

What happens, however, when Holshouser starts making his moves, and receives the corresponding publicity?

That could be a different story.

The democratic Legislature is almost certain to fight with Holshouser for the headlines. They are not going to leave him free to take credit for the good things that might emerge from this session of the General Assembly.

That's politics and those who can't see it coming are blind to the business of what transpires in Raleigh.

Make no mistake about one thing. The republican party, although it has made significant gains in North Carolina, is on trial now that their man is the state's chief executive.

Democrats are bound to feel that if Holshouser makes too good a showing, it would greatly increase the chances of electing another republican governor in 1976. Holshouser will not be helped along.

The democrats in the Legislature, however, will be walking a tightrope. If they automatically shoot down Holshouser's programs that have merit in the eyes of the voters, they will turn public sympathy toward the man

Strength For Today

THIS NEW WORLD

The unity of the world is one of the things that gives it charm. When Washington was serving his second term as President in Philadelphia he occasionally undertook trips to his beloved Mount Vernon. This was practically the same distance as from Philadelphia to the city of Washington. The best time the Father of our Country ever made on this trip was six days. Fifty years ago there was a game entitled "Around the World in Eighty Days." Where could we go today in eighty days? Certainly to the moon and back again. It may not be long until we land on some other planet and find out whether or not it is inhabited, or if it is inhabited what are the beings like who make up the population?

The planet Earth is an insignificant body, part of an insignificant solar system which means almost nothing as regards extent when we think of our galaxy as a whole. Yet how we have been thrilled as the astronauts have made their spectacular discoveries. Can we go on from this to greater discoveries?

If there are beings on other planets, what are they like? What could we teach them (if anything)? What could they teach us?

A tourist was relating recently how he had left Paris by plane and had arrived in New York at an inconceivable time that left him literally blinking. Watches had to be reset and loss of sleep made up over the next few days.

The world gets smaller every day, and so do our poor powers to understand it.

The Wonder Bread Case

WASHINGTON — Judge Raymond J. Lynch handed down a 76-page decision the other day in what is known around town as the Great Wonder Bread Case. It merits your attention.

The decision tells us something about advertising. It tells us more about the marketing of bread than one really wants to know. And it speaks volumes about the power of the government, acting in this case through the Federal Trade Commission, to impose upon a company the heavy costs of a proceeding at best frivolous and at worst asinine.

This all began in March of 1970 when associates of Ralph Nader complained to the FTC that the makers of Wonder Bread were engaged in false advertising. After a year's investigation, the commission staff launched a formal prosecution.

It took six weeks last summer to try the case before an administrative law judge. The government summoned a score of witnesses; administrative law judge. The government summoned a score of witnesses; the defense produced perhaps a dozen. The record ran to 2,800 pages. The proceeding cost the taxpayers a pretty penny, and it cost the baking company a fortune: Covington & Burling cannot be paid in peanut-butter sandwiches. And on Dec. 27, Judge Lynch found for the defense on every point. The ads were not false and not misleading; they exploited neither children nor parents.

You may remember the TV commercials. These were keyed to the theme that Wonder Bread "helps build strong bodies twelve ways." Children were asked how big they wanted to be (one great response was, "ten times bigger than my sister"). The commercial then touted the protein, minerals, carbohydrates and vitamins with which the bread was fortified. The whole emphasis was on nutrition.

Between 1964 and 1970, the company spent some $57 million on this campaign. A remarkable conclusion emerged from the evidence in the case: All the whoop-de-doo about nutrition had no discernible impact. I was astonished. The advertising campaign was plainly not a failure: It sold bread. But careful studies disclosed that nutritional claims figured no more than anything else in sales.

One of the most publicized charges was that the baking company was exploiting children: Seeing boys and girls in the TV commercials grow big in a matter of seconds, they would suppose they could eat Wonder Bread and grow big the same way. They would therefore harangue their mothers to buy Wonder Bread, and the mothers would feel guilty

Other Editors Say Not By Laws Alone

(Kinston Free Press)

We note with interest that State Senator McNeill Smith at Greensboro has come up with a package of four legislative proposals to really bear down on the drunken driver in this State. His proposals are well worth noting at the beginning of the 1973 General Assembly this week, but only in the light of the urgent need for greater enforcement of the laws already on the books that make drunken driving illegal in this State.

Senator Smith would offer these proposals for legislative action:

1. Require an automatic six-months license suspension for any driver who refuses to take any breath test, whether or not the driver is charged with or convicted of any other driving offense.
2. Make operating a motor vehicle with a blood alcohol content of .10 per cent or more an offense separate and distinct from the charge of driving under the influence of alcohol or drugs.
3. Authorize police to administer road-side breath tests to any driver the officer has reason to believe has alcohol in his body.
4. Impound vehicles operated by anyone whose license has been suspended or revoked.

These proposals would indeed make it tougher for the drunk driver to operate a motor vehicle in North Carolina — provided they are enacted and strictly enforced. The problem in the past has been that second, third and even fourth drunken driving charges are treated too lightly by some judges. They accept lesser pleas and twist the law and their own authority to the point of making it possible for some to get by with almost anything, including manslaughter, in their efforts to retain permission to drive.

We commend Senator Smith for his efforts to strengthen the legal machinery against drunken driving. We hope he succeeds in getting more effective legislation on the books. But we hope the judges of this State will get the message even ahead of such drastic legislative action that they can do a great deal more to protect the people from the drinking driver than they are now doing. And they should do it, whether there are any new restraints placed on the statute books or not.

Inflation Is Far From Licked

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Here is a dissection of the latest wholesale food price report, which showed increases in December of 5.2 per cent, a rate which, if maintained for a year, would amount to 64.2 per cent.

While such a rate must be viewed as an aberration and unlikely to continue, it is still a distressing sign that the battle of the budget is in serious and growing trouble.

First, the causes:

—Continued inflation at every level throughout the economy. Just as your costs are rising, so are they rising for the farmer and distributor.

—Big demands for raw food products, both from American consumers and foreign nations, such as the Soviet Union. As they earn more, American consumers are whetting their appetites for more expensive menus.

—Bad weather, especially in the form of early freezes and heavy rains. However, there has probably been less disruption of shipments because of heavy snows than in some other years.

—Some instances of "catchup" pricing by farmers and distributors who feel they have been cheated of their share of prosperity in recent years.

—Absence of controls on raw foods.

Second, the meaning: Inflation is still far from being licked. So far, in fact, that academicians, government officials and businessmen are going to take a hard look at their inflation theses.

While much progress has been made in slowing price advances, there remains a feeling that inflation is inevitable. While this level was once pegged at 2 per cent or so, it might have to be revised higher.

Why inevitable? Mainly because of rising expectation and demands. Expectations for continually better standards of living, expressed in higher wages and more conveniences, plus spending demands for a vast range of social services.

One result of this is the repetition of big budget deficits which impart an inflationary bias to the economy by causing excessive amounts of money to be circulated.

Third, the impact, divided into inevitable, likely and probable categories:

Inevitable

—Higher supermarket prices. Almost no way of avoiding this result because some of the big chains are operating at a percentage of only 5 cents or less on each dollar of sales. Some, such as A&P, are in the red.

—More friction in labor-management relations. This is a big year for contract negotiations. George Meany, AFL-CIO president, has already indicated that food prices will be a big issue. Food and beverages account for 20 per cent of consumer

Members of the state highway patrol today began making arrests of motorists without state automobile license tags. Licenses are being distributed through the local office of the Carolina Motor Club. City auto tags are also being distributed by the same source and the same method of procedure will be used as employed in the sale of state tags.

expenditures, so any increase will make an immediate budget dent.

Likely

—A continuation and maybe broadening of controls beyond April 30, when they were due to expire. Congressional pressure will probably be exerted in order to restrain rises in raw food prices, which are not now controlled.

—Reinforcement of the argument that it may be wise to give up the fight on inflation in favor of learning to live with it, mainly by basing payments on buying power rather than face or denominational value of money.

Probable

—Resumption of consumer resistance and further troubles for retailers, some of whom may have to delay plans for a return to the games-stamps premiums atmosphere that was discontinued several years ago.

Opposition Shapes Up Against Tar Heel Tax Cuts

THE NITTY GRITTY DIRT BAND... will be making an appearance in Greenville when they appear at Minges Coliseum Saturday at 8:00 p.m. This is the group's second appearance here within two years.

Nitty Gritty Dirt Band Plays Concert Saturday

For the second time within two years, the popular Nitty Gritty Dirt Band will be in concert at East Carolina University.

The quintet of young men making music typical of the 70s in America, are products of California culture, the state credited as being "the original home of acid-rock, hard-rock and freak-rock."

On Saturday at 8:00 p.m. the Nitty Gritty will be at Minges Coliseum, under the sponsorship of East Carolina Union as part of the Popular Series of Entertainment.

One mark of the five musicians is their sense of humor, especially as relates to their outrageous costumes, ranging from silk top hat to fringe, to early Canadian Mounty.

In music too, they show a wide variety in repertoire — songs as far back as the traditional Foggy Mountain Breakdown, through jugband music to the latest in contemporary rock. Versatile, the five also indulge in switching instruments, giving each a chance to show their own style with a particular instrument.

The group's climax is a parody of rock music of the 50s is considered one of their best acts. For this, band members change into typical costumes of the 50s, slick their hair with an "overkill" amount of Brilliantine. It is then, for the first and only time, the musicians turn the amps on to "loud" and "echo." The writhing and anguished groans of that era are also incorporated into this phase of the program.

Now in their mid-twenties, the Nitty Gritty Dirt Band currently consists of John McEuen, whose main instrument is the five-string banjo. He has frequently played sessions with Flatt and Scruggs, Poco and Bill Monroe. Besides the banjo, he plays fiddle, accordion and acoustic guitar. Jeff Hanna, specialist in playing the washboard, is also handy with the guitar and drums, on which he takes turns.

Les Thompson, is the member providing many of the vocals. He doubles in guitar, bass and mandolin. The fourth member, Jimmie Fadden, began his musical career on the autoharp at 16, then switched to the harmonica. Since joining the Nitty Gritty, he has added the jug, washtub bass, tuba and trombone to the list of instruments he plays.

The fifth member, Jim Ibbotson, before becoming a Nitty Gritty, had experience with groups such as Aristatones, The Warf Rats and Evergreen Blue Shoes. He serves on drums, bass, guitar, accordion and piano.

Tickets for the public are now available at the Record Bar or the Central Ticket Office. Price per ticket is $3.00.

The theory proved worthless. L. Scott Ward, a professor at the Harvard Business School, testified that his research indicated that only a small proportion of very young children have a "literal belief" in what they see on a TV screen. By the age of five to seven, substantial numbers of children are skeptical. Around age eight, children generally exhibit "a clear, consistent and widespread reaction" to television commercials cannot be taken as literally true.

Other evidence indicated that pressures from children influence less than one per cent of bread sales. The lamentable truth, so far as the bakers of non-premium bread are concerned, is that buyers have little product loyalty. They tend to buy the nearest loaf on the grocer's shelf. Advertising helps, of course, in brand identification, but specific claims appear to matter little. It must be a disconcerting experience for the adman, having labored for months on a nutrition campaign, to learn that customers are buying his bread because it's fresh or because, you know, it tastes good.

In a concluding paragraph, Judge Lynch found that the government's case had been based upon false assumptions bolstered by mere opinion. Such a case, he said, cannot be successfully sustained: "Opinion based upon opinion is like stepping on the springboard of imagination and springing into the realm of conjecture."

The FTC prosecutors, undaunted by this setback, will appeal Judge Lynch's decision to the full commission. It may be years before the Great Wonder Bread Case is ended. Meanwhile, there is this to be said for this stupid and costly prosecution: It helps build a strong bureaucracy, at least twelve ways.

What we are saying is the democrats will have to be judicious, not to make Holshouser look too good, and not to nit-pick any program he sends them.

The democratic Legislature will also have to take care of one of their own, and I am talking about Lt. Gov. Jim Hunt.

Hunt is in a precarious position, but if he plays his cards right he could emerge a hero with a bright future. Without question, Hunt will be called on to gain his immanence as the leader of the Senate. Holshouser isn't likely to help him.

So the Legislature, in the coming months, will be called on to follow the leadership of Hunt and help make the Lieutenant Governor a highly visible figure.

All of this shapes up to be a great chess match. Leadership and change will be expected, but if one side makes an arrogant, raw grab for power, they could be left holding the explosives.

Haughty young girls who say they don't want to marry unless they can marry a millionaire. Girls like that within 10 years usually end up wed to a divorced barfly they met in a saloon, and who is chronically broke from paying alimony to his first wife.

People who can afford expensive vacations down South this time of year while I'm still paying for the rainy week I spent last summer at the resort on Mosquito Lake, Maine.

From these and other afflictions of mind and spirit, deliver us, Amen.

Mental Health Chief 'Fired'

RALEIGH (AP) — The Holshouser administration has requested and obtained the resignation of veteran state mental health commissioner Dr. Eugene A. Hargrove.

Hargrove released the text of his letter of resignation Wednesday, saying it was tendered at the request of the new Secretary of Human Resources, David Flaherty.

Flaherty confirmed that he had called Hargrove in and asked him to resign Wednesday afternoon. Wednesday was Flaherty's first day on the job after being sworn in by Gov. Jim Holshouser.

Flaherty said he and Holshouser has arrived at the decision to replace Hargrove jointly, and said they had no person in mind to assume the job.

He said a committee of "people from the mental health community" would be appointed to find a successor.

Flaherty declined to be specific about the reasons for Hargrove's ouster, but Holshouser, during his campaign, had sharply criticized the mental health program, especially the conditions in state mental hospitals, and had promised improvements and changes.

Hargrove, 54, was appointed commissioner by then-Gov. Luther Hodges in 1958. In his letter to Flaherty, he said he "left with a sense of achievement. Since 1958, the programs of the Department of Mental Health acquired national prominence and are now among the best in the country."

Hargrove agreed to stay on the job until March 15 and to assist his successor in the transition, Flaherty said.

Sen. Gordon Allen, D-Person, newly elected president pro tem of the Senate, indicated Wednesday the state's unmet needs should be considered before giving any thought to a tax reduction.

Allen said in a prepared talk to the Senate, "Will we take the road of a tax reduction, or will we have the vision to fill some of these unmet needs" with an unprecedented $200 million plus surplus?

Allen said the General Assembly faces "challenges that are unique in our history." He noted the lawmakers will be working the first Republican governor in this century, Jim Holshouser.

He told the Senate some of the unmet state needs include: "providing properly for the care and treatment of our mentally ill"; expansion of state efforts to protect the environment from pollution; purchase of land for the expansion of state parks, and expansion of the public kindergarten system.

Other unmet needs he cited were: providing 10 months' employment for school teachers; the delivery of better medical care; aid to private colleges; meeting the needs of technical and community colleges; removing the drinking

Meanwhile, there was considerable sentiment for the General Assembly to adopt a one-year budget and go to annual sessions.

Both Lt. Gov. Jim Hunt and House Speaker Jim Ramsey are strongly in favor of the legislature meeting each year. They consider it a more realistic approach to adopting a budget and shortening the session.

Veteran Sen. J. J. Harrington, D-Bertie, said in an interview that "moving to annual sessions will be the most progressive step we've taken in years. By adopting a one-year budget we ought to get out of here in 90 days."

Ramsey says he thinks the legislature can leave town May 1 if it goes to annual sessions.

Harrington recalled that the 1971 legislative session lasted nearly seven months. He said, "Not many people can come up here and stay six and seven months. I don't foresee any problems that will hold us here for a long session. We've got a big surplus and there should be no difficulty adopting a one-year budget."

Sen. Julian Allsbrook, D-Halifax, was one of those frowning on annual sessions. He said, "I look upon it with a great deal of fear. It will lead us to professional legislators. They are the only ones who can afford to come here annually."

Reps. Henry Frye, D-Guilford; J. F. Mohn, D-Onslow, and Liston B. Ramsey, D-Madison were among those endorsing annual sessions.

"I think we will accomplish more in four months this year than we did in seven months in 1971," said Mohn.

Hunt, presiding officer of the Senate, told the senators they should move with dispatch in their work, but give consideration to all matters in looking to a shortened session this year.

Arrest Escapee For Murders

ALBEMARLE, N.C. (AP)—A 23-year-old Stanly County prison unit escapee has been arrested in New York and charged with two counts of murders.

Stanly County authorities quoted New York police as saying they arrested Douglas Eugene "Snap" Watkins on Wednesday and charged him with the murder of a woman and her boyfriend. The couple was found dead Sunday in the Bronx, police said.

Watkins escaped the Stanly County prison in September. Sheriff Ralph McSwain said Watkins had been serving 18 to 20 years for a murder in Norwood in 1970.

Willoughby Loses Post

RALEIGH (AP) — The administrator of the State Highway Department, George S. Willoughby Jr., has been fired by the Holshouser administration.

Willoughby confirmed Wednesday that he had been asked to resign, effective Friday, by the new Secretary of the Department of Transportation, Bruce Lentz.

He said he would not return to work today, thus ending a 14-year career with the Highway Department.

Gov. Jim Holshouser promised sweeping changes in the Highway Department both in his campaign and in his inaugural address. Willoughby was the first official to be fired below the level of the Highway Commission and the cabinet post held by Lentz.

Holshouser has scheduled a press conference this afternoon at which he is supposed to have "an important announcement" about the Highway Department.

Suit Filed To Bar Annexation

CHARLOTTE (AP)—Mecklenburg County residents filed suit in Superior Court Wednesday to halt Charlotte's planned annexation of 32 square miles.

The court action, involving three suits, contends that the property owners will wind up with their taxes doubled after annexation on June 30, while the city will not be able to provide the promised services of police and fire protection, street maintenance, water and sewers.

Charlotte proposes to annex areas north, east and south of the city with about 43,000 residents.

An official report estimates that the annexation would cost $4.1 million in operating expenses, and that another $9 million would be needed to expand water and sewer services.

Twister Takes Disastrous Toll

SAN JUSTO, Argentina (AP)

— Rescue teams continued their search today for more victims of the tornado that cut like a giant scythe through this placid farm city.

Forty-six bodies had been found and at least 300 persons were injured. But the death toll was expected to rise.

The twister struck Wednesday afternoon and raged for 15 to 20 minutes, leaving in its wake a path of destruction 200 yards wide across the city of 50,000.

Communications and electricity were cut off and a heavy rain followed the tornado. Rescue teams had to bring in emergency generators and flood lamps.

Police headquarters became a temporary morgue. A dozen bodies of men, women and children were placed on the floor under blankets.

Cars were bowled over like tennpins as the tornado roared in at 120 miles an hour. One auto was swept down a main avenue and flung through the wall of a downtown hotel.

An estimated 30 per cent of the buildings, mainly one and two-story homes and shops, were damaged or destroyed.

San Justo, a grain belt city 300 miles north of Buenos Aires, was isolated from the rest of the country for nearly two hours.

In one of the first reports that gottout a ham radio operator said the storm "struck very hard and fast."

"Many people ran into the street just as the wind hit, trying to find some place secure," he said.

Once word was received and the scope of the tragedy was known, radio and television stations in Santa Fe, the provincial capital 60 miles away, began broadcasting appeals for blood donors, aid teams, doctors and nurses.

The San Justo Hospital was among the buildings hit hard. Ambulances, buses and cars transferred the more seriously injured to Santa Fe.

Telephone repairmen managed to establish three emergency lines, but electricity was still off today because of the danger from broken high power lines.

Gov. Sanchez Almeida declared the city an emergency zone and the destroyed area was placed under military control.

Soldiers from the Santa Fe garrison pitched tents for the homeless. Pharmacies were directed to give free tetanus shots to all injured.

pick up, the sanitation department will be able to resume its normal operation," Allen said. "The back yards are still icy and it is hazardous for the men to try to pick up garbage from inside the yards."

"We are asking all citizens to again place their garbage in plastic bags or garbage containers and put them on the curb next to the street," Allen said. "We can pick up garbage from the curb without any problems."

The trucks operated from 8:30 a.m. until 5 p.m.

Allen said most of the local street are passable and in pretty good condition.

Allen hopes to have his department back on a normal working schedule after Friday.

A normal schedule is being held at East Carolina University and day classes are being conducted as usual at Pitt Technical Institute. A decision about holding night classes at Pitt Tech will be made later today.

The Pitt County Schools were closed today and will be closed again on Friday. The Greenville City Schools were closed today and a decision on whether or not to reopen the schools on Friday will be made later this afternoon.

Local citizens should listen to the radio and watch television to learn whether or not the schools will be open.

Clearing Weather

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A clearing weather pattern developed over most of North Carolina today as a low pressure system which posed a threat of snow moved off the coast.

The National Weather Service said the state has escaped the possibility of more snow at least until Saturday morning, when another low system in the Gulf of Mexico may move up the Atlantic seaboard.

Rain continued along the Outer Banks today, but skies were clearing for the most part over the rest of the state.

Small craft advisories remained in effect along the coast, but all other advisories and watches were cancelled except for travel advisories posted for snow-covered secondary roads in the mountain areas.

The mountains had up to eight inches of snow Sunday and Monday as snow and ice covered the entire state for the first time in 13 years. Five to six inches of snow and sleet fell in the central portion, and the coast and Outer Banks islands had two inches.

Widespread cloudiness persisted Wednesday. Some precipitation spread northward along the coast after sunset, but the main body of precipitation remained depressed over the Gulf of Mexico and across Florida.

A small low pressure center developed just east of Florida

Wednesday and moved east-northeastward to cause some precipitation over the southeastern and coastal areas of North Carolina. As this center moved away from the coast this morning, another low center continued over the Gulf, posing a possible threat of light snow later in the week for North Carolina.

Temperatures have continued to be winterlike. The mercury dipped into the teens and 20s during the night except over the coast, where it ranged near or slightly below freezing.

A new surge of cold air pressing southward across the Great Lakes is expected to reinforce the cold air over North Carolina tonight and Friday, keeping temperatures wintry for another day or two.

Some moderation is likely by the early part of next week.

Seek Honeybee

As State Insect

RALEIGH (AP) — The honey bee would be designated the official state insect of North Carolina under legislation introduced Wednesday.

Sen. Bette Anne Wilkie, R-Henderson, only woman member of the state Senate, sponsored the measure which is backed by Tar Heel beekeepers and apple growers.

She told the Senate it is only fitting that the lawmakers "resolve to be working bees" and that this be a "honey of a session."

Two Remaining Without A Loss

The City Basketball League shrank by one team last night, as Proctor's and the Skillet remained as the league's only unbeaten teams.

Pizza Hut, which forfeited its second game, was forced to drop out of the league under operating rules. All other teams in the league were thus awarded two victories, accounting for their scheduled games with Pizza Hut.

In the other results, Skillet downed Piggly Wiggly, 87-66, while Coca-Cola beat the Happy Store, 67-53, and Proctor's topped the Buccaneer Club, 85-54. Book Exchange received the forfeit win from Pizza Hut. League officials said that teams which are scheduled in the future to meet Pizza Hut will no longer need to appear to get their win.

Proctor's just about sewed up their victory in the first half, jumping off to a 42-18 lead in the first half. The slowed only somewhat, dumping in 43 points in the second half, while giving up 36.

Bruck Tucker led Proctor's with 20, while Tom Cooper had 19, Gary Hess had 16 and Gene Rackley had 14. For the Buccaneer Club, Kyle Toothman had 18 and Bruce Mayo had 10.

The Skillet eased out into the lead in the first half of its game, 40-34, then stormed through the second half with a 47-32 margin over previously unbeaten Piggly Wiggly.

Charlie Harris led Skillet with 32 points, while Moses Joyner had 20 and Charlie Jenkins had 16. Leon Johnson had 18 to pace Piggly Wiggly, while Robert Johnson added 14, Charles Norfleet had 12 and Red Joyner and Bobby Short each had 10.

In the final game, Coca-Cola outhit the Happy Store, 29-23, in the first half of play. They came back with a 38-30 advantage in the second half over the Happy Store to wrap up the victory.

Chris Domenick led Coke with 19 points, while Jim Modlin had 14 and Jack Warner had 13. For the Happy Store, Glenn Batten had 16 and Greg Crouse had 13.

Four Hampton teams have entered. They are from Kecoughtan, Hampton, Pembroke, and Bethels high schools. There also are teams from two Williamsburg schools — James Blair and Walsingham Academy.

Other Virginia teams are Woodson High of Fairfax, and Fork Union Military Academy of Front Royal.

In addition to Calvert Hall, Maryland schools planning to compete are Douglas High of Baltimore and McDonogh High of McDonogh.

Brandywine High of Wilmington, Delaware, is coming. So are Freedom High of Bethlehem, Pa., and Rose High of Greenville, N.C.

The Optimist Club of Norfolk, Va., sponsors the swimming meet.

Lackey Sparks Nets By Cougs

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — The Nets' Bob Lackey went into Wednesday night's game against league-leading Carolina with a 2.6 scoring average, a 32.9 shooting percentage and quite a few splinters from sitting on the New York bench.

But with starting guards John Roche sidelined with the flu and Bill Melchionni out after reinjuring the lower ligaments of his left ankle, Nets Coach Lou Carnesecca was desperate for backcourtmen.

He had Brian Taylor, the rookie who passed up his senior year at Princeton to sign a lucrative "hardship" contract with the Nets. And he had Lackey, a 6-foot-5 rookie from Marquette who played forward in college.

The first thing Carnesecca did was put out an emergency call to Brian Mahoney, the rookie from Manhattan who played briefly for the Nets before being cut last month. Mahoney was at his job as a schoolteacher when he got the word from Carnesecca, but by game-time he was a Net again.

The second thing Carnesecca did was make a starter out of Lackey.

The youngster responded with his best game by far as a pro, scoring 21 points—his first effort in double figures—and leading the Nets to a 105-93 victory over Carolina. That ended the Cougars' 11-game winning streak, longest in the American Basketball Association this year.

"I'm always ready to play," said a tired but happy Lackey after the game. "I was just waiting to get my chance. Tonight when I went in I told myself I have to play an even game, not try to do it all by myself. I took some good shots tonight."

He made them, too. Lackey sank six of 10 field goal attempts and added nine of 11 from the free throw line for his team-high 21 points. Taylor, center Billy Paulitz and forward George Carter backed him up with 18 points apiece, offsetting a 36-point outburst by Carolina's Billy Cunningham.

In the only other ABA games, Dallas defeated San Diego 124-111 and Denver edged Indiana 106-105 in a doubleheader at Denver.

In the National Basketball Association, Boston whipped Houston 128-128-107, Kansas City-Omaha nipped Chicago 102-100, Los Angeles beat Philadelphia 120-96, Phoenix edged Detroit 123-121 and Baltimore topped Seattle 98-86.

In the first game of the doubleheader, Rich Jones and Bob Netolicky were the key men for the Chaps. Jones scored 24 points, pulled down 11 rebounds and handed out seven assists, while Netolicky tallied 23 points and garnered 16 rebounds.

In the second game, Dave Robisch scored 29 points and Ralph Simpson hit for 28 to lead the Rockets. Robisch collected 21 of his points in the second half.

Archibald Pops Chicago By Two

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Nate "Tiny" Archibald got some help from the grand old man of the National Basketball Association, 39-year-old Johnny Green, and the combination proved too much for the Chicago Bulls Wednesday night.

Archibald, the NBA leader in scoring and assists, scored 37 points for Kansas City-Omaha—including two twisting layups in the final two minutes—as the Kings nipped the Chicago Bulls 102-100.

But it took a key defensive play by Green to preserve the victory.

With the Kings leading 102-98, Garfield Heard of Chicago hit a jumper from the corner with 29 seconds to go. The Kings couldn't score and, following a time-out, Chicago put the ball in play with five seconds to go.

But Green foiled the Bulls' try for a game-tying basket by knocking the ball away from Bulls guard Norm Van Lier just before the final buzzer.

Bob Love was high scorer for Chicago with 36 points, but he got just two of those in the final period.

In other NBA games, Boston beat Houston 128-107, Los Angeles defeated Philadelphia 120-96, Phoenix edged Detroit 123-121 and Baltimore downed Seattle 98-86.

In the American Basketball Association, New York beat Carolina 105-93, Dallas defeated San Diego 124-111 and Denver edged Indiana 106-105.

Boston raced out to a 37-18 first quarter lead, then coasted home as Coach Tom Heinsohn gave his reserves considerable playing time. Center Dave Cowens hit all nine of his field goal attempts in the first half and finished with 20 points, while John Havlicek led the club with 22.

The Lakers snapped a three-game losing streak behind Gail Goodrich's 26 points. They outscored the 76ers 76-40 in the two middle periods to break the game open.

Charlie Scott scored 37 points, including 20 in the first period, and Phoenix withstood a 37-point fourth quarter by Detroit for their victory.

NCAA Begins Convention After Punishing Four For Violations

By JERRY LISKA
Associated Press Sports Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — The National Collegiate Athletic Association launched today one of the most important annual conventions in its 67 year history after punishing four members for infractions of the NCAA code.

The group's governing council Wednesday placed Centenary College of Shreveport, La. on indefinite probation and Western Kentucky and New Mexico State on two-year probation—all three for basketball program violations—and meted a one-year probation to Howard University while automatically vacating the Washington, D.C. school's 1971 NCAA soccer championship.

The sanctions barred the basketball teams of Western Kentucky, New Mexico State and Centenary from all post-season tournament play and NCAA-governed TV appearances for their probation duration.

Howard is banned one year from competing in the National Collegiate Soccer Championship.

Centenary was charged with allowing some players financial aid, even though the players are not expected to attain the 1.6 academic grade average NCAA rules require. Highly recruited basketball star Bob Parish falls into this category, the council noted.

The council sidestepped expected punishment of Southwestern Louisiana, charged with numerous infractions in recruiting its basketball team currently ranked number 13 in the AP's national poll.

The southern school obtained a federal court order restraining any NCAA probe until next Monday and the council, by then adjourned, may forestall action until its next regular meeting in April.

The New Mexico State case included charges that John Williamson, currently among the nation's basketball scoring leaders, and teammate Roland Grant, during 1970-71 received "improper compensation and financial benefits."

Western Kentucky's infractions, mainly noted in 1970-71, were cited as "provided or promised improper inducements" to as many as six basketball prospects at various times; tryouts and out-of-season drills in basketball; unauthorized transportation of prospects and improper pre-enrollment testing of one prospect in 1969.

Still No AreaGames

All high school sports activity was postponed last night, and tonight's action is again in doubt.

Among the activities delayed by the poor traveling conditions were three wrestling matches, Rose at Farmville Central, North Pitt at Southern Wayne, and Edenton at Conley.

The Rose-Farmville Central match has been tentatively reset for Friday afternoon at 3:30 p.m. No new dates were set at this time for the other two matches.

In basketball, Rose High School's game with Washington was rescheduled for next Wednesday, January 17. North Pitt's meeting with Southern Wayne was reset for Tuesday, while Greene Central at Farmville Central, and North Lenoir at Ayden-Grifton were again tentatively reset for tonight. Conley at Eastern Wayne also was postponed but no new date has been set as yet.

Wynn Date Changed

RALEIGH — The date of the Raleigh Hot Stove League meeting for the presentation of the Hill Wynn Award has been changed.

The award, to be made to Cleveland Indian pitcher Gaylord Perry, a former co-winner in 1970, will be presented on January 31 instead of the originally announced February 14.

The award is annually given to the North Carolinian who contributes the most to baseball during the year. Perry, traded to the Indians from the San Francisco Giants, won over 20 games for the Cleveland team and won the 1972 Cy Young Award for the American League. He and his brother, Jim of the Minnesota Twins, shared the award in 1970 when they became the first brother due to each win 20 games in a single season.

The date of the banquet was changed because Perry had a prior commitment and would not have been able to make the original date.

The banquet will be held at the Hilton Inn's Ambassador Room at 6 p.m. in Raleigh, just a short distance from the N.C. State campus, where the nationally ranked Wolfpack will be meeting Maryland later in the evening.

Kilmer: Dolphin Defense Is Tough

By RON ROACH . . . .
Associated Press Sports Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) —
Quarterback Bill Kilmer of the Washington Redskins is familiar with Miami's "No-Name" defense—all 11 of them—for Sunday's Super Bowl VII National Football League showdown.

"They have a defense and they all have names, and I know every one, and their numbers, too," says Kilmer, who is joined by his ace wide receiver, Charley Taylor, in respecting the Dolphins' zone pass coverage.

"I don't think you'll see many bombs in this game, from the Redskins anyway," says Taylor. "There are times when they have broken down but Miami just doesn't make mistakes, and that's the key. The only time you're going to get a long pass is when somebody makes a mistake and they don't make mistakes."

Kilmer, who has talented receivers in Taylor, Roy Jefferson, Jerry Smith plus running backs Larry Brown and Charley Harraway, says Miami tries to force passes up the middle.

"They try to make you throw into areas where they can react," he says. "They try to funnel everything up the middle, and they just make you work for everything you can get."

The Dolphins have an extra wrinkle in their defense when the Redskins are in passing situations—the "53" defense. Bob Matheson, a mobile 235-pounder, replaces a down lineman, and another linebacker replaces a back giving Miami five linebackers, three down linemen and three backs.

"They have a man—Matheson—who can be a defensive end or a linebacker," says Kilmer. "Sometimes he drops off into pass protection. It's difficult to attack this defense because you're not sure what they're going to do."

The Redskins faced a version of the "53" defense against Buffalo during the regular season and lost, 24-17, when intercepted Kilmer passes proved the difference.

Their key to passing against Miami will be establishing a running game to freeze the quick Dolphin linebackers, says Kilmer.

"Nick Buoniconti, Doug Swift and Mike Kolen are so quick that you can try and fake a run and they can get back into pass coverage. Sometimes you think you have them and they come up with the big play or big interception."

"You really try to throw behind the linebackers and in front of the defensive backs, so you're going to have to use a little bit of play action and try to hold those linebackers some way with the running game."

Buoniconti, leader of the Dolphin defense which he dubbed the "No Name" unit, and safety Dick Anderson discount criticism of Kilmer's passing—occasional wobbly throws and relatively few bombs.

"Anybody who can hit 14 of 18 passes against Dallas in a championship game can't be bad," says Buoniconti of the Redskins' 26-3 victory over the Cowboys.

"Sure it's a bum rap," says Anderson. "They say he doesn't throw long perhaps because he doesn't do it very much, but when he lays it up there, all his receivers have an average per catch that is fairly long."

The Miami defense, which intercepted 26 passes and had 33 sacks of quarterbacks during the season, will be without cornerback Tim Foley, sidelined with a shoulder injury. His replacement is Lloyd Mumphord.

Kilmer says he'll work on any defensive back if he can get Taylor or Jefferson man-for-man on him, but he won't necessarily pick on Mumphord.

Coach Don Shula of Miami disagrees.

"I'm sure they're going to try Mumphord and I'm sure Lloyd Foley sees that way, too," says Shula.

"I don't know what their plans are and I don't really care," says Mumphord. "They can send what they want against me. I'll be there. That's it. I know what I can do."

Says Kilmer: "We don't plan to pick on any one man because basically you're going to face zone defenses and they give you areas. You're going to have to attack those areas and get your receivers in those areas."

Washington, like Miami, runs a lot more than it passes. Kilmer still managed to complete 120 of 225 passes for a 53.3 percentage and 19 touchdowns during the regular season.

TOPS ALL PACERS
COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — In three seasons, 4-year-old pacer Albatross earned a record $1,201,470 by winning 59 of his 71 starts. The son of Meadow Skipper-Voodoo Hanover paced a record mile in 1:54 4-5 during 1972 and retired with 36 races in two minutes or faster for the mile.

The pacer was developed by Harry Harvey and earlier last season, was syndicated by Amicable Stable for two and one half million dollars. For the second straight year Albatross was voted "harness horse of the year."

Miami Passing Attack Could Be A Problem

By JACK STEVENSON . . .
Associated Press Sports Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) —
Washington's Redskins fear the Miami passing attack because nobody sees it enough to know what it is.

Bob Griese can throw and Earl Morrall can throw but neither throws very much. What they'll do in the Super Bowl Sunday remains to be discovered.

"They're very similar to our ball club offensively," says Coach George Allen of Washington. "We live by the run and they live by the run. We pass sparingly and they pass sparingly."

"They have two good outside receivers who can block—Warfield and Twiley. The only difference might be that with Griese in the lineup now, they have the threat of the scramble pass. But any time he scrambles, he scrambles at his own risk."

When Griese suffered a broken ankle early in the season, the 38-year-old Morrall was pressed into service. He led the American Football Conference in passing with 83 completions in 150 attempts for 1,360 yards and 11 touchdowns.

He was also voted the division's top quarterback by The Associated Press.

So when Coach Don Shula goes for Griese in this Super Bowl game, you can see the estimation in which the taciturn blond from Purdue is held.

"Defensively, we don't have to cover for anyone," says

Washington linebacker Jack Pardee, the man who calls the defensive signals. "If we're going to blitz or cover man-to-man or whatever we need to do, we don't need to worry about covering for any of our own players. We have balance enough to do that."

Allen says the Redskins are using more of the zone than have any of his teams in the past, as an assistant with Chicago or head coach with the Los Angeles Rams.

"We do it to mix coverages and to take away the home run chance," says Allen who also does it primarily to stop rushing plays such as Miami can launch with Larry Csonka, Mercury Morris or Jim Kiick.

But if Miami should have an obvious passing situation, such as third down and 12 yards to go, the Redskins will have their nickel defense in operation—five defensive backs.

While Morrall led the AFC in passing, keep in mind the leadership is based on percentages and for him it was a fine 55.3.

Yet while Morrall threw 150 passes, Daryle Lamonica of Oakland was throwing 281 times and Jim Plunkett of New England on 355 occasions.

Griese came back to play the second half against Pittsburgh and rally Miami to the AFC title with a 21-17 victory. Yet he threw only five times and completed three, for a total gain of 70 yards.

However, for the 1971 season, he was the all-star quarterback and how the injury affects him remains to be seen.

Says Griese, "I don't know what we'll need to do to win. If we need 50 passes, we'll throw 50 passes."

Washington worries most about receiver Paul Warfield in the passing department. Cornerback Mike Bass will have Warfield as his primary responsibility which is rather like holding a lit bomb for a couple of hours.

The linebackers go with defensive captain Jack Pardee on the left side, Harold McLinton in the middle and Chris Hamburger, an all-pro, on the right.

State Still Unbeaten As Duke Falls, 94-87

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
North Carolina State is holding up its end of the deal for Sunday's nationally televised basketball showdown with second-ranked Maryland.

The Wolfpack, ranked No. 3 nationally, struggled by Duke, 94-87, Wednesday night to keep its record spotless at 10-0. Maryland, also 10-0 after beating Virginia earlier this week, is idle until Sunday.

Only Lehigh University can prevent N.C. State from going into the game with an 11-0 record. The Wolfpack and Lehigh meet Friday night at Raleigh.

The Atlantic Coast Conference's other national power, No. 7 North Carolina, rolled past Clemson, 92-58, in Wednesday night's only other game between conference rivals. The game was the first conference showing for the Tar Heels. Wake Forest edged Niagara, 85-79, in a non-conference game at Winston-Salem.

In picking up its 10th win of the season, N.C. State held off a 31 points performance from Duke's Chris Redding. The Wolfpack never trailed, but Redding and teammate guard Gary Melchionni kept the score respectable. Melchionni dropped in 21 points.

State's scoring was led by big man Tommy Burleson and mini-guard Monte Towe. The 7-foot-4 Burleson and 5-foot-7 Towe each had 21 points against the Blue Devils.

The black-eyed Towe seemed uninhibited by a wrist splint and a nose guard, both of which protected fractures suffered in last weekend's Virginia game.

David Thompson, the Wolfpack's leading scorer, had 18 points in the game, but spent most of the second half on the bench after drawing his fourth personal foul.

The loss dropped Duke to 5-7 for the year.

The Tar Heels, still without the services of sophomore Don Washington who suffered a broken left ankle bone in the fourth game after averaging 21 points, had little trouble with Clemson. With nine minutes left in the game, North Carolina held a 41-point margin over the Tigers, 78-37.

Washington is to visit the doctor today, who may give the okay for him to resume workouts. It could still be 10 days, however, before Washington gets the go-ahead to play in a game.

Balanced scoring, with five men in double figures, and a 54.7 per cent shooting average from the field, were just part of the story for North Carolina. The Tar Heels' pressure defense sealed the Clemson attack so effectively that the Tigers' high point man, Jeff Reisinger, had only 12 points. Terrell Suit, with 11, was the only other Clemson player in double figures.

Clemson's ace sophomore Van Gregg was held to three points.

George Karl led North Carolina with 23 points and Bobby Jones, who got 11 points, led all rebounders with 11. The victory was the 13th for North Carolina against a single loss. Clemson is now 0-2 in the league and 5-6 overall.

Wake Forest guards Tony

Byers and Eddie Payne combined for 40 points in the win over Niagara. The victory was the fifth straight for the Demon Deacons, who had to fight off a second half Niagara rally.

Byers and Payne had a 38-point combined scoring average going into the contest and each finished with 20 points.

Al Williams finished with 19 points to lead Niagara scoring as the Purple Eagles dropped to 6-5 in suffering their third straight loss.

The victory lifted Wake Forest to 8-4 for the season.

In addition to Lehigh at N.C. State on Friday, the only other game remaining this week pits Clemson at Duke at 1:30 p.m. Saturday for a regionally televised ACC matchup.

GUCO In 2nd Win

Greenville Utilities won its second straight game last night, 75-53, in the Industrial Basketball League, beating Union Carbide.

The win left GUCo with a 2-1 record, while Union Carbide is now 0-2.

Greenville Utilities ran away with the lead in the first half, powering out to a 45-21 lead. They came back to drop two points off their lead in the second half, as Union Carbide outthit them, 32-20.

Henry Crumble and Donald Chase led GUCo with 23 points each, while Zeno Smith had 17 and James Ward had 10. For Union Carbide, Lewis Boyd had 23.

Former California Angel manager Del Rice calls Boston Red Sox rookie catcher Carlton Fisk "a solid hitter with a fine throwing arm." Rice caught 17 years in the major leagues.

Black Jack Takes Win

Black Jack edged past St. James in an overtime, 66-63; last night to remain unbeaten in the Church Basketball League.

The loss was the first for St. James now 2-1, while Black Jack upped its record to 3-0. Oakmont, 2-0, is the only other unbeaten in the league.

Black Jack led most of the first half, pushing out into a 32-23 lead by the horn. But St. James put on a rally and closed the gap and finally outthit Black Jack 36-27, and knot the score at 59-59 and force the overtime.

In the extra period, however, Danny Edwards hit a basket and three free throws to lead Black Jack to a 7-4 edge in scoring and that gave them the victory.

Edwards finished the game with 27 points, while Ephrighm Smith had 16 for Black Jack. Mike Board had 22 and Guy Howell had 17 for St. James.

Eure Expects 200 Lobbyists Will Be Registered

By GRACE KUTKUS
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Legislators are not the only people who come to Raleigh for the General Assembly.

North Carolina Secretary of State Thad Eure expects approximately 200 lobbyists to register with his office before the 1973 session of the General Assembly ends.

State law requires each lobbyist to register with the secretary of state and present a letter from his employer stating the company or agency he represents and the type of legislation he is interested in.

After the legislature adjourns, the lobbyist must file financial statement, outlining all expenses incurred while trying to influence legislation.

Only five of the anticipated 200 lobbyists have registered so far, according to Eure.

"They trickle in all the time," said Eure. "Maybe some will show up the last week of the session because the subject they're interested in is just being introduced."

Many lobbyists are concerned with one topic and work only part-time, appearing when pertinent bills are introduced. According to former State Senator Ashley Futrell, most part-time lobbyists are ineffective. Futrell, who served in three sessions of the General Assembly, said:

"Only a few lobbyists are effective. The majority of them — the ones who come up for only one bill — are ineffective. But those who work full-time are effective or they wouldn't be there. No one would hire them."

Another former three-term senator, John J. Burney of Wilmington, agreed with Futrell. "Some lobbyists are good, and some are not worth a damn," said Burney. "The good ones will tell you the truth even if it hurts their cause, and I could count them on one hand if I had to."

Burney continued, "when a good lobbyist tells you something, you can take his word. Others you have to check up on."

Futrell agreed that effective lobbyists are the ones "who play it straight and honest."

The people who plan to lobby at the General Assembly might take a few pointers from Burney, who listed the characteristics of a bad lobbyist:

"He doesn't want to make an appointment and always wants to talk at an inopportune time. He has done no research and is uninformed. And he buys you a fifty-cent meal and thinks that will do it." Burney continued: "Some lobbyists are sneaky too. They get home people to call about a bill, but if you ask you can find out who asked them to call."

One of the five lobbyists who has registered with Eure is Harold D. Plummer. Plummer is chairman of the board of the Arthur Murray company, known for its dance studios, and he indicated an interest in "all consumer legislation."

Plummer sees nothing strange in a dance company lobbying for consumer bills. He said, "In another state, legislation was passed which lumped dance studios with health salons, and we were not aware of its effect on us until it was too late." Plummer continued: "We're primarily interested in legislation which might affect us, but as a national corporation which might diversify into other consumer enterprises located in North Carolina, we are interested in all consumer laws."

Plummer, who lives in Raleigh, said Arthur Murray Inc. is considering going into the clothing business, and might have its national headquarters in the state. He decided lobbying might help the company interests, and "couldn't hurt."

Free Press Agreements Successful

WENATCHEE, Wash. (AP) — A large majority of editors, lawyers and judges who participated in a survey on the fair trial, free press situation in their states report that voluntary agreements between the news media and the legal profession have been successful.

Hu Blonk, managing editor of the Wenatchee Daily World, reported today on the survey conducted by the Freedom of Information Committee of the Associated Press Managing Editors Association. Blonk is vice chairman of the committee.

Blonk said that a large majority of those replying in the 23 states which have voluntary agreements felt that the codes have resulted in improved news coverage of trial and arrests while protecting freedom of the press and fair trial.

The study disclosed that editors in 20 of the code states feel there has been no appreciable loss of the people's right to know. In one state it was felt that some freedom had been lost, and in two states there was no clear-cut agreement.

The bench-bar press agreements came about as the result of an American Bar Association effort several years ago to safeguard fair trial. The ABA issued a document called the Reardon Report, which many newsmen opposed because they felt it encroached on freedom of the press.

In a countermove, a number of influential editors argued that voluntary state bench-bar press agreements would be more workable in assuring both fair trial and free press. Subsequently the ABA relaxed its efforts to restrict news coverage while editors brought about an increasing number of codes of restraint.

Blonk said that more than 200 APME questionnaires were sent to selected editors in every state and to members of the legal profession chosen at random in the 23 states which have voluntary codes.

Blonk said that editors in only one of the 27 noncode states — Alabama — reported a concerted effort to bring about a cooperative code. And editors in only four of the remaining noncode states felt there was much of a chance for a voluntary agreement being drawn.

There were 41 press replies from the 23 code state and 46 from noncode states. Replies were received from the legal profession in 19 of the 23 code states.

The 23 states that have adopted the cooperative approach include Kentucky, Missouri, North Carolina, Texas, and Virginia.

Public's Rating Of Labor Unions At Lowest Point

By GEORGE GALLUP
Copyright 1973, Field Enterprises, Inc. All rights reserved. Reproduction in whole or part strictly prohibited, except with the written consent of the copyright holders.

PRINCETON, N.J., Jan. 10 — Labor unions have declined in public esteem to the lowest point in nearly four decades.

While a majority of Americans continue to express approval of labor unions, the current approval figure is down 10 points since 1965 — from 70 per cent to 60 per cent today — and represents the lowest figure since 1936 when these measurements were initiated.

The decline in approval undoubtedly stems in part from frustration over strikes, particularly those that directly affect the public welfare. Surveys conducted during the last few years have shown a large majority of the public consistently in favor of a proposal which calls for a court-appointed committee to rule on the points of contention between union and employer if after 21 days an agreement cannot be reached.

Views of Youth Have Changed Most
Another factor in the declining appeal of labor unions may be found in the fact that some youth — particularly those on college campuses — currently hold a negative "hard hat" image of labor union members and are critical of unions as representing "the establishment."

In the 1965 survey, approval of labor unions was much higher among adults under 30 than among older persons. In the latest survey, however, little difference is found on the basis of age groups.

A nationwide survey of persons 16 to 29, conducted in 1971, showed neither organized labor nor big business commanding very much respect, with labor regarded the less favorably of the two. The same survey found 49 per cent in favor of the government's placing stricter controls on business, with 41 per cent opposed.

In the case of labor unions, a higher percentage — 57 per cent — said they favored stricter controls, 34 per cent disagreed. To determine attitudes toward labor unions, the following question was asked in the latest survey as in previous surveys over the last four decades:

In general, do you approve or disapprove of labor unions?

Following are the latest national results:

Approve 59 %
Disapprove 26
No Opinion 15

The initial survey to determine public attitudes toward unions, in 1936, found 72 per cent indicating approval. The high point in approval (76 per cent) was recorded in 1957 — just before the start of the Senate labor rackets hearing. The low point, prior to today's figure, was recorded in 1941, a year marked by strikes and stoppages in key defense industries. Sixty-one per cent approved in that survey.

The following table shows the average approval figure by decades, based upon a total of 20 national surveys conducted over a 37-year period:

AVERAGE APPROVAL
PERCENTAGE
—By Decades—
1930s 71 %
1940s 63
1950s 71
1960s 68
1970s 60

63
71
68
60
48 % Predict
Year of Strikes
As reported earlier, nearly half of persons interviewed recently (48 per cent) expect 1973 to be a year of strikes, compared to 38 per cent who think this year will be relatively free of strikes. Members of labor union households are more likely to predict strikes for this year (a majority of 56 per cent do so) than are members of non-union households (45 per cent).

Serious strikes are possible this year because contracts covering approximately 4.7 million workers expire or are to be reopened for wage negotiations. Included are workers in the automobile, trucking, rubber, electrical, chemical and construction industries.

District I is composed of Beaufort, Bertie, Camden, Chowan, Currituck, Dare, Edgecombe, Gates, Halifax, Hertford, Hyde, Martin, Nash, Northampton, Pasquotank, Perquimans, Pitt, Tyrrell and Washington counties.

Six finalists will be chosen from District I to appear in Chapel Hill March 2-5 for interviews with the Central Morehead Selection Committee.

Each of the state's 10 Morehead Awards district committees will select six finalists to be interviewed in Chapel Hill along with 52 nominees from 26 private preparatory schools.

The Morehead Foundation's Board of Trustees makes the final selection of winners. Hugh G. Chatham of Elkin is chairman. Members are Alan T. Dickson of Charlotte; Frank Borden Hanes of Winston-Salem; Richard T. Chatham Jr. of Elkin; and Dr. Robert Cluett of York University in Toronto, Canada.

Morehead Awards provide all-expense paid undergraduate education at the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill. With the increase in tuition and other education expenses, the Morehead Foundation Trustees have increased the value of the award to $2,250 per year, making the four-year award for N.C. residents $9,000.

The Awards were established in 1951 by the late John Motley Morehead, a UNC graduate and native North Carolinian.

Opening lead: Ten of ♣ Today's hand, taken from a recent tournament, caused considerable discussion among several East-West partnerships when a premature double left them on the short end of the score.

West, as dealer, had just enough to eke out an opening bid of one spade. North overcalled with two hearts and East doubled. He expected to take book in his own hand and anything his partner could contribute would be pure profit. In the event that West was unable to leave the double in, East reasoned that he had some tolerance for spades.

South promptly rescued his partner by bidding three diamonds. With hearts obviously stacked behind North, he reasoned that his seven card suit would probably provide a safer haven. West was caught in the rhythm and, losing sight of the fact that his holding barely qualified as an opening bid, he doubled three diamonds which became the final contract.

West opened the ten of clubs, and declarer took advantage of the favorable lead by winning the trick with the queen in his hand and then cashing the king and ace so that he might discard one of his losing spades. A diamond was led to the ace and South continued with the jack. When diamonds divided three-two, declarer conceded two trump tricks and two spades and claimed his doubled contract.

As it turned out, West could have defeated his opponent by underleading the ace of spades at the opening gun. After the defense cashed three spades, West can sit back and wait to score his two high diamonds. If West opens the ace of spades, East must unblock his king so that West can cash the queen and then give his partner a ruff on the third round.

Lacking the benefit of an advanced peek at all hands, West is not open to criticism for failing to uncover the killing defense. His judgment in doubling three diamonds is questionable, however. He might have reasoned that when South ran from two hearts, the latter was obviously short in that suit and that East's heart tricks, therefore, might not be cashable at a diamond contract. The prospects for a substantial killing were not bright and the prudent course would have been to pass and hope for a small profit.

The Worry Clinic Tuition Would Stop Luxuries

Congressman Goodling believes in more "Horse Sense" regarding tax-supported free public schools. Our Founding Fathers advocated "More business in government; less government in business!" Let's apply that axiom to our schools, too!

By GEORGE W. CRANE, Ph.D., M.D.

CASE V-592: Jim Q., aged 38, is a high school principal. "Dr. Crane," he began, "I remember your saying that a famous California newspaper publisher once criticized you concerning free public schools. 'You had reported that many astute educators and economists feel the zoning taxes for luxurious public school buildings and frilly courses, are going to cause a taxpayers' revolt. 'So you suggested that some education prophets urge us to stop all free education after the 6th grade.

"Starting with the 7th (Junior High), tuition should then be required.

"But your California publisher said ALL education should be financed by tuition!

"Well, our Pennsylvania Congressman George A. Goodling agrees that education has become too 'luxurious.'

"Note what he recently stated in a printed address."

Subsidize Shoemakers
Here are a few pertinent remarks by Congressman Goodling:

"When I attended college, we helped subsidize the shoemaker rather than the tire manufacturers." This means STUDENTS WALKED instead of having their private cars!

"If parents," continued Congressman Goodling, "can afford to let their child have a car in college, there isn't one argument that comes to mind to prevent them from paying higher tuition fees.

"Now you who have children in college are asking your neighbors, who do not, to help subsidize your child's education."

"I have visited some fraternities and have been told all now have their bars.

"...I question whether a fifth of liquor can be bought for the price of a Coke or RC.

"You parents are subsidizing this luxury."

Politicians try to wangle our votes by saying they are for "reform."

What most voters are tax "reduction."

SAIGON (AP) — The U.S. Command announced today that three Americans were killed in action last week, eight were wounded and two died of nonhostile causes. It was the lowest weekly toll since the start of the aerial blitz against Hanoi and Haiphong.

The Command's weekly casualty summary listed no missing or captured. It said that the total for the war in that category had decreased by one last week to 1,805. A spokesman said one missing man had been declared dead or some other adjustment had been made, but he did not know which.

Not included in today's report were eight Americans missing this week, in the loss of a fighter-bomber over North Vietnam Wednesday and of a helicopter just below the demilitarized zone on Monday.

A total of 109 Americans were reported killed, missing or captured in the two weeks of Dec. 17-30.

The South Vietnamese command reported 385 government troops killed in action last week, the highest toll in six weeks. Another 1,449 South Vietnamese troops were reported wounded and 86 were missing in action.

The Saigon command also reported 923 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong killed last week, the lowest enemy toll reported in nearly a year. Much of the enemy attacks were by rocket or mortar fire, reducing the risks for the Communists to a minimum.

The allied commands now have reported these total casualties for the war:

American — 45,931 killed in action, 10,296 deaths from non-hostile causes, 303,605 wounded, 1,805 missing or captured.

South Vietnamese — 162,426 killed in action, 434,364 wounded.

Life Terms For Bomb Slaying

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) —

Two men have been sentenced to life imprisonment in the booby-trap slaying of a housewife by a dynamite bomb authorities said was intended for her husband.

Police said the two had accused the husband of paying attention to another woman, an accusation he denied.

The defendants, Milton Chavis Jr., 24, of John's Station in Scotland County, and Leroy Maynor, 26, of Rt. 1, Maxton, pleaded guilty Wednesday to accessory before the fact of murder.

Mrs. Jerry Lockler, 26, of Pembroke, was killed when dynamite rigged to the ignition exploded as she started her husband's pickup truck last September to take her children to school. The children were not yet in the truck and were not hurt.

"It's still the same old story, a fight for love and glory."

B52 Commander Balks At Bombings Classified

By GEORGE ESPER
Associated Press Writer
SAIGON (AP) — The B52 commander who balked at bombing North Vietnam after his 175th mission said today he refused because "the goals do not justify the mass destruction and killing."

"It was not specifically the bombing of the North," said Capt. Michael J. Heck, 30, of Chula Vista, Calif., in an interview. "There is enough suffering just in South Vietnam to warrant a discontinuation of the war. But the massive bombing of the North might have been the last straw and I think the step that specifically pushed me over the brink."

"After the cease-fire for Christmas, the massive bombardments resumed and I decided I had to take the step. I reached the decision Dec. 26 and I went to see my wing commander and informed him of my decision. He advised me to seek legal assistance."

Heck, a 1964 alumnus of President Nixon's Quaker alma mater, Whittier College, could get two years in a military prison if a court-martial convicts him of failure to obey a general order.

"I can live with that easier than I can with taking part in the war," he said.

The much-decorated flier said he began thinking about non-participation in the war as far back as last September, when he returned for his third B52 tour in Vietnam. He flew his last mission on Christmas Eve, against the Hanoi-Haiphong area.

"I came to the decision," he said, "that any war creates an evil far greater than anything it is trying to prevent, whatever the reasons, even for the self-determination of South Vietnam. The goals do not justify the mass destruction and killing. It's torn our own country apart."

Heck said he has applied for noncombat status as a conscientious objector. Meanwhile, he is assigned to administrative duties at his base in southern Thailand while undergoing investigation to determine whether he will be brought to trial.

Heck was asked about the controversy over whether civilian areas were hit in the Hanoi and Haiphong regions.

"Anytime you bomb on the massive scale we did up there," he replied, "there's bound to be bombs off target, no question about it. I don't think we intentionally targeted civilian targets, but they inevitably become unintentional targets that are going to be hit."

Heck said he was disturbed by some pilots — "only a few" — who want to bomb civilians in North Vietnam.

"One man made the statement that he wanted to hit civilian targets in the North because it made him feel good to hurt them," Heck said. "That's the quote. But this is not typical. Most people here don't like what they are doing, but they follow orders."

A spokesman for the Strategic Air Command in Omaha, Neb., said Heck is "the first and only" B52 crew member to face a charge of "alleged failure to obey an order to fly a combat mission in Southeast Asia."

Asked if other pilots had called him "chicken" or shunned him, Heck said:

"It's very surprising how sympathetic most people are. A lot don't agree with me. A lot do, but for various reasons they can't do what I did. I don't have any family (outside of his parents) and I'm not making the Air Force a career. I have a lot less to lose. A lot of people don't agree with the bombing, but they honestly feel it is their duty, and they are following orders even though they may disagree. Even I did it for some time."

Heck said the heavy loss of B52s — 16 acknowledged by the U.S. Command with more than 100 airmen killed, captured or missing — "made a lot of people think whether it was worthwhile." Prior to the start of the blitz against Hanoi and Haiphong Dec. 18, only one B52 had been shot down in seven and one-half years.

Flying over the less well defended areas prior to the shift in targets last month, there was not much feeling about what they were doing, Heck went on.

"No matter how you felt then, pro-or antiwar, there was a numbness about it. You'd go through the motions of a mission. There was no emotional involvement, no feeling on the part of anyone when the bombs were released. It was like training missions.

"You walk by the trailers now and you see them putting the personal effects into a box. Almost everyone had somebody they knew missing. Nobody wants to go up there. There may be a very few who do, but I don't know them."

"I can't really say it caused a morale problem but it made people think more. It brought a sense of emotion into the mission."

Asked if he had become afraid of flying, Heck replied, "Not really." He said that if he had, he could have applied to be grounded under "fear of flying" provisions and thus avoided facing a court-martial.

Heck said he has written his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Heck of Chula Vista, and his brother, Tim, a high school teacher in Maxwell, Calif., about the step he had taken. He said he had not heard from his parents but his brother had written fully supporting him.

Heck studied drama at Whittier, had planned to teach theater and had begun work on a master's degree at Whittier when he joined the Air Force in 1966 to escape the draft. He has another year to serve.

His decorations include the Distinguished Flying Cross, the Air Medal with 10 Oak Leaf clusters and two Presidential Unit Citations.

Gems Taken From Shrine

NEW YORK (AP) — Thieves who were apparently hiding in the church have stolen two diamond-encrusted gold crowns and other jewels valued at $350,000 from an altar mural in a Roman Catholic shrine in Brooklyn.

The same crown were stolen in 1962 but were mysteriously returned eight days later. Police said then that reputed Mafia leader Carlo Gambino, who attends the church, let it be known he wanted them back.

The crowns were on the heads of figures of the Virgin Mary and the child Jesus in a large mural behind the main altar. A diamond earring, a diamond necklace and a diamond bracelet were also taken.

A spokesman said the crowns were fashioned from the melted gold of wedding rings of World War II widows. The gems were contributed by members of the St. Rosalia's parish, of which the shrine is a part.

Wednesday's theft was discovered by the sexton at 6:30 p.m., an hour-and-a-half after the church, the Roman Catholic Votive Shrine of Regina Pacis in the Borough Park section, was closed.

The crowns were on the heads of figures of the Virgin Mary and the child Jesus in a large mural behind the main altar. A diamond earring, a diamond necklace and a diamond bracelet were also taken.

A spokesman said the crowns were fashioned from the melted gold of wedding rings of World War II widows. The gems were contributed by members of the St. Rosalia's parish, of which the shrine is a part.

Offer Reward In School Shooting

STATESVILLE, N.C. (AP)—A private citizens group has offered a $500 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person responsible for a shooting Friday night at South Iredell High School.

A spokesman for the Iredell County Sheriff's Department had reported Wednesday that the reward was being offered by the county and the school board. However, he said later Wednesday the reward was being offered by a "group of interested citizens for better education in Iredell County."

Varying Degrees Of Absenteeism Due Weather

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The inclement weather and hazardous driving conditions have had varying effects on employee absenteeism at area industries, according to plant spokesmen.

G. H. Leslie, plant manager at Burroughs Wellcome, reported Wednesday that employee attendance there had been affected some but he noted that "we are impressed with the loyalty and conscientious efforts of our employees to get to work."

Leslie estimated that Monday's attendance was approximately 75 per cent with some employees reporting late and 75-80 per cent on Tuesday. Wednesday's work force numbered about 85-90 per cent, he added, noting that the work schedule is getting back to normal with the clearing weather.

The manager, citing the loyalty of BW employees, said that one man from Snow Hill in Greene County left home at 6 a.m. in order to get to work on time. "We thank our employees for their loyal approach to their jobs," Leslie said.

He added that the plant brought two pieces of snow moving equipment from Tuckahoe, N. Y. when the company move was made to North Carolina and it was a great help in clearing roads and passage ways at the plant.

Empire Brushes personnel manager, Walter Faulkner said that "the snow really hit us," pointing out the second and third shifts on Monday were cancelled. He said that the employee situation improved somewhat on Tuesday and the plant remained open all day. The plant closed down at 10 a.m. Monday. Faulkner said that the exact number of absentees was not definite at that time but he said attendance appeared to be much better Wednesday.

According to Ron Hunter at Fieldcrest Mills, the plant ran all three shifts during the period, although Fieldcrest did have some absenteeism. Most of the absentees occurred on Monday night and the situation was getting back to normal Wednesday, he said.

According to Bud Priestley at Vermont American, the employee attendance there was good, although the second and third shifts on Monday were called off in order to let workers get home safely.

He noted that "We have actually had very few absentees and except for one man we are back to normal today (Wednesday)."

John Broyles, personnel supervisor at the Kinston Du Pont plant commented, "We have had very little employee absenteeism. We've had occasional instances of employees reporting late for work but there has been no effect on operations."

Broyles said he feels "our people made a real good effort to get to work." He added that probably one-third of the work force lives in Pitt County and evidently roads linking Lenoir and Pitt are being cleared effectively.

Charles Pope at Union Carbide said, "We have had mighty good attendance throughout the period. I think we have had a real good effort from our employees."

He added that a few people were out on Monday night but the absentees did not necessitate shutting down any major operations.

The personnel manager at Collins & Aikman in Farmville, Tommy Bullock, said that the plant closed down Monday at 3 p.m. and opened back up Tuesday at 3. Attendance has been "pretty good overall," he said, noting that things were close to being back to normal there.

Fred Baumann, manager of J. C. Penney Co. here, said that the store has had "ample personnel" on hand during the period and added that "we have had no problems personnel-wise."

Baumann said that Penney's closed at 5 p.m. on Monday and Tuesday. "I'm very proud of the performance of our employees," he said.

Wilbur Tooley, personnel manager at King's Department Store, said that he has "barely had enough" employees to operate. Monday's work force was less than 50 per cent, he said, noting that employees that live in the county have had difficulty in getting to work.

Tooley said that some 40 per cent of the employees were absent on Tuesday and close to that number Wednesday. The night shift had been hit harder than the day force, he noted. The store closed at 5 p.m., on Monday and Tuesday.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, JANUARY 12, 1973

CARROLL RIGHTER'S HOROSCOPE

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Only by showing the social side of your nature and the ability to smile and encourage others do you prevent a difficult situation. Do what you can to relieve others of their burdens. Show your best control in any crisis. You have charm that needs to be expressed.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You are tempted to go through with a plan too quickly in the morning since you feel your funds are inadequate, but slow down and think wisely instead. Then you will know what to do. Be wise.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Plan the future quietly and intelligently in the morning. Help those who have been in difficulty lately. Show that you are a true humanitarian. Do some bookkeeping at home tonight.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Don't rely on your friends for advice or help today, since they are busy. By evening you can handle own problems wisely. Not a good day for social pleasure. Await a better day for such.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Use tact where influential persons are concerned or in any of your dealings with others. Try not to be demanding with others. Avoid one who does not respect you as you deserve.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You have fine ideas and want to make radical changes right away, but this would be disastrous. Plan how to add to present outlets wisely instead. Become more efficient in present routines.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Do the work that is important today but forget new duties that could tax your energies right now. Mate is not in a good mood, so use tact and all is fine. The wrong word could bring trouble.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) It is wise to check on what opponents are doing in the morning so that you don't get caught in a trap. Later take steps which will enable you to win out. Handle civic obligations.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Use both diplomacy and precision in handling today's work and dealing with others. Make some improvement to wardrobe. Evening is fine for taking health treatments for increased energy.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Handle routine work efficiently and then you have plenty of time for the recreation you enjoy. You have creative ideas that require research to make them operative. Discuss them with an expert.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) If you are not tactful at home a real problem could develop. Handle an outside problem cleverly. Later take kin out to a nice restaurant for dinner and have an enjoyable evening.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Take care of your regular routines early before you give attention to a problem at home. Use tact and it is soon solved. Communications are best put off until a better day. Relax tonight.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Morning should be spent ridding yourself of financial worries and then you can do much to please associates more. Evening is fine for coming to a better understanding with kin and friends.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY he or she will be one of those charming young people who likes to jump into things hastily and could be hurt in the process. Teach to think first and act wisely, and then the chart will become a successful one after this lesson has been learned. Your progeny has an uncanny way of going to right bigwigs to get backing and advice when most needed. Give good religious training.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!
