Coast Virtually Paralyzed

Near-Blizzard Conditions Hit Area

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The one-two punch of high winds and heavy snow created blizzard-like conditions Saturday as a furious winter storm gnawed at most of eastern North Carolina and left coastal areas virtually paralyzed.

"It's the worst I've ever seen," said a policeman in Wilmington, which had seven inches of snow and 45 miles per hour winds. The city, on the southeastern coastline, has no snow removal equipment.

"We don't even have tire chains for our police cars," the officer said. "Believe me, it's rough. It's pretty bad."

Atlantic Beach, further up the coast, was one of several spots in the state which had at least 10 inches.

Traffic accidents and stranded cars kept officers busy in most cities where it snowed. The Weather Service said snow blanketed the state from east of the mountains to the coast, except in the northern Piedmont area.

One traveler reported it took him an hour to drive 12 miles between Pembroke and Lumberton.

No deaths were immediately attributed to the storm.

By afternoon, skies had begun to clear from the west but snow was still falling along in much of the east and accumulations of up to four more inches were forecast.

The storm, centered off the North Carolina coast Saturday afternoon, caused gale warnings along to be posted from South Carolina to Delaware. As the storm moves northheastward, very cold artic air was forecast to move into the Tar Heel state.

Heavy snow warnings remained in effect Saturday afternoon for the coastal plains and the north and central coast sections of North Carolina. Travelers advisories were in effect the southern part of the state and a state trooper said driving conditions were "treacherous."

At 9 a.m. Saturday, winds were running 40 to 50 m.p.h. at Atlantic Beach. At South River, the tide was three to four feet above normal and some motorists were stranded with water over the docks and roads. At the same time there was five inches of snow on the ground.

Off the coast of Wilmington, the Coast Guard light tower at Frying Pan reported winds gusting to 75 to 80 m.p.h. with seas running 20 to 25 feet. At 9:30 a.m. the winds had abated to 60 to 65 m.p.h. gusts.

At mid-morning, some access routes from the coastal islands and in the lowland areas along the coast were becoming inundated as storm tides continued. All persons along the coast, especially along the southern portions of Pamlico Sound and along the Neuse River, were warned to be alert to the rising waters and prepared to move to higher ground.

Temperatures across the state were mostly in 20s and 30s Saturday, but the high winds in many areas made it feel much colder. The Weather Service's "chill factor" indicated sub-zero temperatures in some areas.

A band of heavy snow was brining accumulations from one to two inches per hour from near Norfolk, Va., and Elizabeth City to near Goldsboro and Fayetteville.

At 1 p.m. Saturday, snow depths included: Goldsboro 9 inches; Zebulon 7, New Bern 6, Raleigh-Durham 5, Rocky Mount 4, Cherry Point 7, Wilmington 7. An inch of snow which fell in Charlotte had melted by early afternoon.

Henry Kissinger Arrives In Hanoi

By United Press International

Henry A. Kissinger arrived in Hanoi Saturday, carrying President Nixon's hopes that his four days of talks with the leaders of North Vietnam will "usher in a new era of peace for all the people of Indochina."

Kissinger arrived at 10:30 a.m. Hanoi time (10:30 p.m. EST Friday), according to a joint communique issued at the Western White House in San Clemente, Calif., and Hanoi.

Kissinger, President Nixon's national security adviser, was greeted at the airport by Le Duc Tho, a member of the North Vietnamese Politburo, who represented Hanoi in the often bitter and drawn out negotiations with Kissinger on the Vietnam cease-fire accord signed in Paris Jan. 27.

The North Vietnamese Vice Minister for Foreign Affairs, Nguyen Choth Ach, also was present, the communique said.

The trip represented the first time U.S. officials have been to the North Vietnamese capital in nearly 20 years.

Kissinger said before leaving Vientiane, Laos, that the main purpose of the visit was to normalize relations between the United States and the North Vietnamese. It will also include discussion of American aid to both sides in the Indochina conflict.

Kissinger will stay in Hanoi until Feb. 13, making it possible for him to witness the results of his arduous negotiations—the release of 115 American prisoners of war. It was not known whether he would be personally present for the release.

Traveling with Kissinger were William H. Sullivan, the Assistant Secretary of State for Southeast Asian Affairs, Herbert G. Klein, the director of communications at the White House, and four members of the National Security Council staff.

Kissinger is on a tour of countries in Asia, having already talked with the leaders of Thailand and Laos. After his trip to Hanoi, he will rest up in Hong Kong and then proceed to Peking for discussions with the leadership of China.

In Vientiane, Kissinger said of his trip to Hanoi, "I go there with confidence and goodwill and in a spirit of conciliation."

"The President hopes that this visit can inaugurate an entirely new relationship between the United States and North Vietnam and usher in a new era of peace for all the people of Indochina," he said.

Kissinger said that stability in Indochina "requires that the agreement to end the war in Vietnam be strictly implemented. The United States will meticulously observe its provisions. It expects all the other parties to do the same.

"It requires also that peace be brought not only to North and South Vietnam, but all other countries of Indochina as well," he said.

Area Covered By More Snow

By TOM FOREMAN, JR.

Residents of Greenville and surrounding areas awoke yesterday morning to find an exact copy of what they found on the ground almost one month to the day ago.

Another snow storm deposited over five inches of snow on the area by mid-afternoon Saturday.

A spokesman for the Greenville Utilities Commission commented that before 8 a.m. Saturday morning, a total of 1.7 inches of snow had fallen, with drifts of six to seven inches. Winds from the north-northeast accompanied the snow, with a velocity of 15 m.p.h., with gusts up to 25.

By 3 p.m., total snowfall had reached 5.6 inches with drifts up to three and one-half feet. The temperature stood at 24 degrees with a wind-chill factor down to nine degrees below zero.

The high temperature for the 24 hours ending at 8 a.m. Saturday, reached only 35 degrees, while the low dipped to 24. The Tar River was up to 14.5 feet from its previous height of 13.5, and still rising.

A Highway Maintenance spokesman indicated that all snow plows had been dispatched and were working to clear roads.

Greenville Police Chief E. Glenn Cannon warned motorists, "Unless it is absolutely necessary, I ask all citizens to stay off the streets. Some streets are treacherous and almost impassable."

Pitt County School Supt. Arthur Alford made no definite plans on school openings for Monday. "I won't do so until late Sunday afternoon or as late as Morning morning." Greenville City Schools Supt. Dr. C.C. Cleetwood also made no definite plans for school schedule. "Any decision now (Saturday) would be premature." Cleetwood added that he would wait before he made a decision.

Ferd L. Davis Gives Up Post

RALEIGH (AP) — Maj. Gen. Ferd L. Davis, North Carolina's adjutant general for the last three years, said Saturday he is giving up the post to re-enter private law practice.

Davis, who has completed 31 years of military service on active duty and with the National Guard, is a member of a Zebulon law firm that plans to expand its practice.

The effective date of his resignation was left to the discretion of Gov. Jim Holshouser.

Davis said his resignation was not requested by Holshouser but was being submitted so he could devote full time to the law practice.

"I think that I'm entitled now to follow my own personal pursuits," Davis said.

Davis began his military career as a private in 1942 and was a colonel when he was appointed adjutant general in January 1970.

Venture To Attract Industry Does That, Pays Dividends

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

An unselfish venture that has focused on bringing quality industrial growth to Greenville has done just that and has even returned a modest dividend to stockholders.

Stockholders in Greenville Industries Inc. never expected to get rich on corporation profits and they never will, but the success of their mission is clearly evident.

When Bruce Sugg Jr., Dave Whichard and W. W. Speight met to take a look at the city's industrial future in 1959, Greenville Industries Inc. existed in little more than name, having been virtually inactive since 1942.

S. Eugene West, Mayor, was asked to head the revamped corporation as president and the businessmen spearheaded a drive to sell $75,000 worth of stock in the future of Greenville. Roughly 500 persons purchased stock.

"We knew we needed industry but we knew industry needed land," Speight, the corporation's attorney, recalled. He explained that property known as the Dail Farm site became available soon after in 1959 and Greenville Industries put down $200,000 on 270 acres of Dail land north of the city.

The first industry to purchase land from the corporation, Empire Brushes, did so in 1962 and following the company's location here, Vermont American bought land on the Dail site and built its plant.

Fileldcrest Mills also relocated on the site and the Sheltered Workshop secured land in 1965 for a training facility. In addition, Tom McGuane Industries and Becton-Dickinson acquired land from Greenville Industries for plants here.

The crop allotments on the Dail Farm were leased to help pay interest on the unpaid balance, West noted, but after sevral industries were located here "we realized that in order to salvage the allotments we would have to buy another farm and transfer them to that farm."

A farm was bought near Simpson in March of 1965 and the allotments were transferred. The true value of the allotments was realized when they ere sold in May of 1972.

Greenville Industries helped secure acreage for Burroughs Wellcome Co. north of the Dail site and the pharmaceutical plant relocated here from Tuckahoe, N.Y. in 1970.

"In the meantime," the Mayor continued, "realizing that we were going to need more land for future industry, we had bought the Nelson Hopkins farm in February of 1969." The 356 acres is located northeast of the city in the area of the planned 264 Eastern Bypass. National Boat Works has already built a new plant on the Hopkins site.

Acknowledging that there were some rough days in the early going for Greenville Industries "when the board of directors had to personally endorse papers to keep it going," West said that "we expect to locate other industry here in the future."

"I personally want to express my appreciation for the cooperation and hard work of the board of directors and the Pitt County Development Commission, along with the Greenville Chamber of Commerce, Merchants Association, and other interested citizens who have given of their time and efforts to make this a successful venture," he commented.

He also cited retired director of the Development Commission, Dr. Sylvester Green, for his efforts in bringing industry to Greenville during his years with the commission.

The first sale of stock, it was noted, was accepted as a project by the Greenville Jaycees and they were instrumental in the success of the effort.

"For the first time, we now have our heads above water," Speight said, pointing out that a small cash dividend was approved by the board in December. The dividend is the first paid by the corporation since the original investment was made.

Speight said that the annual meeting of the shareholders of Greenville Industries will be held Monday night at City Hall. During the meeting, directors for the ensuing year will be elected and other business will be transacted.

Currently, in addition to West and Speight, other officers are J.B. Kittrell Jr., secretary, and John C. Proctor Jr., treasurer.

Bloodmobile Here Tuesday

"We need blood desperately," Mrs. Ruth Taylor of the Red Cross said Friday. "I had to round up five persons with O-negative blood this morning because it was needed at Pitt Memorial Hospital and they couldn't get it from the Blood Center in Norfolk. It just wasn't available because their supply is so low. Earlier in the week it was B-positive they needed."

The Greenville Optimist Club is sponsoring a visit of the Bloodmobile Tuesday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Greenville Moose Lodge. According to Optimist George Rusk, the amount needed this visit is 290 pints. "The usual quota for a one-day visit would be 160 pints, but Pitt County is 130 pints below its quota already," he said.

We use so much," Mrs. Taylor said. She said 118 pints were used for Pitt County people only at Pitt Memorial last month.

Anyone 18 years or older who has not given blood in the last two months and who weighs more than 110 pounds is eligible to contribute a pint of blood. Exceptions are persons who have ever had ehptitis or malaria or who have been overseas in the past three years or have had surgery or given birth in the past six months, Mrs. Taylor said. She explained that a check is made of hemoglobin and blood pressure and a questionaire of past health is filled out on each prospective donor before blood may be given

"This is the first Bloodmobile visit to Pitt County this year," Rusk said. "The Optimists are going to be doing all we can to make it the one in which we catch up with our needs, but it's going to take the generosity of a lot of people."

William Dees Sees Board Of Governors Concept Working

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

GOLDSBORO — William Dees sat behind his desk, glanced at a number of family pictures lining a book case along one wall in his office and talked about higher education in North Carolina.

Dees, a 52-year-old Goldsboro attorney, is chairman of the Board of Governors which sets the policy and makes the plans for East Carolina University and the other 15 state-supported institutions of higher education now under the University of North Carolina system.

"As I see it," Dees said, the primary function of the Board of Governors is "long range planning, and to see to the proper execution of the plan."

Presently the board which came into being last July, is engaged in surveying and analyzing the degree offerings at the various schools "to know where duplication exists" and to know where new degree programs are needed and desirable.

"We have a lot of information available, but there is other information we need and we are in the process of gathering this now...and will be coordinating the information. A 5,10, 20 year plan...this is the thing we are aiming for."

A University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill graduate (undergraduate degree in 1941 and law degree in 1948), former member of the Board of Higher Education (for two years beginning in 1963—serving the second year as chairman (and a member of the UNC Board of Trustees from 1969, Dees praised the other members of the Board of Governors for their attitude and service.

"I have not sensed the feeling that the members have placed their interest in one institution above another institution...this attitude is totally non-existent. Their attitude has been one now of working on a program of higher education in North Carolina and wanting to develop the best system..."

And Dees emphasized, board members have devoted a great deal of time and work to tasks assigned to them. "I am very pleased with the service..." he said.

Particularly outstanding, Dees noted, has been work completed by the board's code committee under Victor Bryant of Durham, in compiling the university code which includes such policies as the tenure situation for faculty members and sets out student-faculty responsibility; and the work of the medical study committee chaired by Bob Jordan of Mt. Gilead.

"I'm thrilled at the willingness of these people to put the number of hours they have on the Board of Governors."

William Dees

Dees also praised the administrators of the various schools in the system for being "most cooperative" with the university system adminstration. "I expect the chancellors to push their programs and schools...but they are working togethther... the willingness of these people to work together is the thing..."

When the Board of Governors took charge of the universities — after 17 years under the general supervision of the old Board of Higher Education — a moratorium was placed on new degree programs at all of the state institutions of higher education. This freeze was designed to give the new board time to assess the situation and to be able to institute new programs with a view toward preventing needless duplication.

This freeze is scheduled to be lifted in the Fall of 1974 — in part if not entirely, Dees explained.

"We are very hopeful the planning committee will have made enough progress to determine a proposed program, and put it into effect..." by that time. "In some areas, the freeze may be lifted in advance of that time...while some areas may be held beyond that time."

The board chairman noted that in his opinion, schools other than those offering doctorate programs would be allowed to award such advanced degrees in certain fields after the moratorium period.

"Yes," he said. "We will develop doctorate programs at other schools," and, he emphasized, "ECU and Charlotte (the University of North Carolina campus there) will probably be the first to qualify..." to offer such advanced programs.

The UNC-Charlotte campus, according to Dees, has been the "most rapid growing and developing..." school in the state since its entry into the UNC system in 1965. This, Dees explained, is due to the fact that the school is located in a metropolitan area.

What about the future of medical education in the state?

"I've got a daughter at East Carolina University," Dees said. "She's a junior." And speaking strictly as a resident of Eastern North Carolina, Dees said he'd like to see a medical school in the East. "The more we can put in Eastern North Carolina, the better I like it. But as chairman of the Board of Governors, I can't take sides."

"Quite frankly," Dees noted, speaking of a report made by the medical study committee on the need for additional med education in the state, the committtee's report was most favorable to ECU. "In effect, it said that's where the school ought to be."

"I'm very much interested" in the medical school question, Dees emphasized. "We need to train more doctors in North Carolina. We have 2½ per cent of the population and train 1½ per cent of the doctors in the United States," he said.

The question, he continued, "is how is the best way to do it...increasing production with a high quality of competence is what we think any plan should do."

Medical education is extremely expensive Dees said. "We're trying to induce Duke and Wake Forest to take more North Carolina students...through state subsidies...and enlarging the student body at

Service Awards Made By Salvation Army

A number of awards for service to the Salvation Army were presented and several men were installed as new members on the Advisory Board at the annual Salvation Army Report and Civic Dinner held here Friday night.

Awards went to a number of civic groups, individuals, organizations at East Carolina University as well as newspapers and radio and television stations and church groups in the Pitt County area for service to the Salvation Army during the past year. Included among the list of award recipients were the local Lions Club, the Pilot Club, the Optimist Club, the two Kiwanis Clubs, the Arnold Air Society at ECU and the university's Art and Home Economics Departments, the Circle K Club, and Police Wives Club, Rainbow Girls, and others.

Special awards went to SA Advisory Board members Lyman Ormond Sr. and Dr. James Butler. Ormond was honored by being named a Life Member of the local advisory board while Dr. Butler—a patient at Pitt Memorial Hospital and unable to attend the session—was honored with a plaque for 35 years service to the Salvation Army.

Kirby Boyd and Percy Cox were installed as new members of Advisory Board, while Carl Tanner, Andy Martin and Cleve Watley were named new members of the Farmville Service Unit advisory group.

Captain Al Smith, local SA commanding officer said 1972 was "the best year the Salvation Army ever had in Greenville and Pitt County."

According to the captain, the Army in 1972 assisted more than 13,500 individuals, distributing some 61-196 garments, 3,349 pairs of shoes, helping with fuel, furniture, medicine, utilities and rent in 758 instances, filling 184 grocery orders and finding jobs for 21 persons.

The local Salvation Army also assisted 309 transients during the year, including providing lodging for 149 persons and providing meals for 262.

The Salvation Army assisted 879 families—including some 4,012 individuals—with their Christmas activities program. Some 284 food baskets were distributed and 7,500 toys given to those in need at Christmas, while 178 children were entertained at parties during the Christmas season.

Guest speaker at the dinner was Salvation Army colonel Dr. William A. Noble, who for more than 45 years served as a medical missionary in India.

Dr. Noble, who has received medicine's, India's and The Salvation Army's highest honors, termed India "My adopted country."

Outlining the work of a medical missionary in India, Dr. Nobles said medical missionaries are often allowed access to people that a regular missionary would be unable to reach, and cited a number of cases where through treatment of the sick and injured, medical missionaries have witnessed for Christ.

Dr. Noble performed more than 100,000 operations while in India, in addition to supervising a 500-bed Salvation Army hospital and establishing 13 branch hospitals.

Advisory Board chairman Curtis Hendrix presided at the meeting.

AT SALVATION ARMY DINNER . . . speaker, Col. William Noble, M.D., a former Salvation Army medical missionary to India, talks with local SA Advisory Board chairman Curtis Hendrix.

Committee Urges Rail Take-Over

By DONALD PHILLIPS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Commerce Committee staff recommended Saturday that Penn Central and seven other bankrupt railroads in the East be run by a government-controlled authority until they are healthy enough to return to private ownership.

The staff's 768-page report, proposing a form of temporary nationalization of the ailing lines, criticized Congress, the administration, Penn Central's management and a "docket of dismal failure" of the Interstate Commerce Commission (ICC), which it said should be reformed or abolished.

The report was issued after a year's study and two days after Congress ordered a 90-day halt to a brief strike against Penn Central, with instructions for the administration to submit long-range solutions to the plight of rail carriers in the East.

Sen. Vance Hartke, D-Ind., chairman of a Commerce subcommittee on surface transportation, said in a statement there was "little likelihood of Congress dumping hundreds of millions of dollars down the Penn Central drain without protection of the taxpayer interest in some sort of government overview."

Hartke said that protection could be provided by the proposed Northeast Transportation Authority, a government body that would take over the eight lines, modernize their track and communications systems, and charge the railroads a cost-covering fee to use the equipment. A similar user fee is charged trucking companies to travel the federal interstate highway system.

The committee staff proposed that the takeover apply to Penn Central, the Erie-Lackawanna, the Reading, the Central Railroad of New Jersey, the Boston and Maine, the Leigh Valley, the Lehigh and Hudson River, and the 17-mile-long New Hope and Ivyland, a tourist and freight line in Pennsylvania.

The authority would determine which Eastern rail lines were essential and in the public interest to maintan, regardless of their present profitability. Non-essential lines, continued under agreements with state or local governments, could be abandoned, or sold off to public or private buyers "so long as such action is consistent with the public interest."

The authority's takeover would involve issuing bonds or debentures to the trustees of the bankrupt roads, who would then use the debentures to pay off creditors and claimants. The debentures, which might be government-guaranteed, would equal the liquidation value of the railroad.

In exchange for the bonds, the authority would receive railroad stock and put it in escrow until the line was sound enough for the stock to go on public sale.

The authority would have full power to make changes in management policies, customer services and train operations.

The report accused Penn Central's management of being overly concerned with its credit standing, stock prices and dividends, while "service deteriorated badly, with problems such as no billings, multiple billings, misrouting of cars and even lost trains."

Penn Central's stock dealings prior to its bankruptcy "suggest actions which bear investigation by proper authority," it said.

Grand Funk Name Disputed

GREENSBORO (AP) — The three-man rock group called the Grand Funk Railroad claims it owns the name, but GFR Enterprises Ltd. of New York City claims it does, and they are its employes. The Enterprises filed suit in federal court Friday against Winston-Salem and its coliseum, claiming the defendants had infringed on the trademarked name in promoting appearances of the group last fall.

The Enterprises asked $300,000-based on damages of at least $100,000, tripled on the ground the infringement alleged was wilfull since it had notified the city of its trademark claims beforehand.

Oyster Beds To Be Checked

RALEIGH (AP) — State employes will begin a check of the state's oyster beds Monday to see if any damage was done by recent inland flooding.

Thomas L. Linton, administrator of the Division of Commerical and Sports Fisheries, said Friday that exposure to fresh water can kill oysters.

Heavy rainfall caused flooding along several North Carolina rivers earlier in the week.

"What you need to do to get a new medical school...is say it will take 'X' millions of dollars, and start the whole program. Don't do it piece-meal." It's hard, Dees said, to expand a program into a complete medical school in stages. There's no place in the state for more than the 20 students now in now in ECU's one-year program to continue their education, Dees indicated. The ECU students transfer to UNC-Chapel Hill, but Chapel Hill can't accomodate more than that number.

"And there's the problem of accreditation... a real struggle," Dees said. "It's one of the major problems we are facing now."

Dees emphasized, "I would make no prediction as to what the recommendation will be," of a group of five experts selected to study the medical education question.

Dees said the special study group will be composed of "five individuals professionally involved in medical educations...deans of medical schools, and the like."

He noted, "I wrote the medical deans in the state...The AMA (American Medical Association...the American Association of Medical Colleges...to recommend qualified people."and September 1 is the report deadline.

Dees said his appointment of Watts Hill Sr. of Chapel Hill to the committee to select the medical study pannel was "not in any way a move against East Carolina."

The Board of Governors head said "in my opinion Hill is " the best informed layman in North Carolina," as far as medical education is concerned.

Hill, according, to dees, was board chairman of Watts Hospital in Durham for years and was a prime force in the establishment of the medical school at Chapel Hill, and knows a lot of people. His opinion of their qualifications will be valuable to us."

The actions of the Board of Governors affect many persons.

This fall, 87,631 individuals (78,774 full time equivalents — combining students taking less than a full schedule to make full-time students) were enrolled in the 16 schools looked after by the Board of Governors.

If the board's recommendations are followed, the tuition costs "will be mighty close to being uniform" for each of the degree-ranking schools, Dees said.

However, the fees will never be exactly equal because of special student fees at various institutions. He cited a $90 (per quarter) debt retirement fee at Elizabeth City State, coupled with other student fees, as being responsible for the proposed $521 per quarter free there (the high for the state) as compared with a $389 low at Pembroke.

Dees said close-to-uniform-fees, coupled with increased cooperation among faculty members of the various schools, would make it more easy for students to transfer from one school to another within the university system — "with a minimum of red tape." Transfers from school to school, Dees emphasized, "needs to be real simple."

He noted, too, that the board is working with the community college system to develop a program where students will be able to transfer to the university system with no loss of credit to continue their education.

"This is very important," he suggested.

He said that under the Board of Governors, there will be "no limit on any institution planning the development of programs for any purpose with their authority," but he noted, budget support of academic progams will have to be approved by the Board of Governors.

"There will be no limitations for improvement...planning to meet the needs of an area...but the problem arises when money is needed or when a progam constitutes an academic program."

Dees said in order for the board to approve a new program, it must justify the money spent and justify the purpose in light of other needs through out the state.

Georgia, Alabama Stunned By Winter Storm

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A Deep South snowstorm roared northeastward into the Carolinas with blizzard-like force Saturday, leaving Georgia and Alabama under a record-smothering blanket of snow.

Columbia, S.C., recorded 14 inches of snow by mid-afternoon and Meteorologist John Purvis said he would "not be at all surprised" to see the record of 18 inches set in 1914 surpassed by Sunday morning.

Winds of 45 5o 65 miles per hour whipped the snow with paralyzing force in coastal areas of North and South Carolina, and tides ran three to four feet above normal at some points.

The storm left usually balmy central Georgia buried beneath 12 to 16 inches of snow. Portions of Alabama reported as much as 13 inches.

Snow fell as far south as Hudson in central florida, where volunteer fire department dispatcher Hap Wilson reported "children going crazy trying to catch the snowflakes before they reach the ground."

Thousands of motorists were stranded in traffic jams in the 100-mile wide snow belt stretching across middle Georgia from Alabama to South Carolina.

Interstate 75 — a major North-South route to Florida — was barricaded 30 miles south of Atlanta as state troopers and national guardsmen worked furiously in four-wheel drive vehicles to rescue motorists and unsnarl traffic.

Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter viewed the traffic jam from a helicopter and then asked the new media in neighboring states to help delay traffic headed for central Georgia.

He said state troopers would begin turning back traffic if it did not diminish voluntarily.

The Georgia cities of Columbus, Macon and Augusta were virtually paralyzed. Police in Columbus took to garbage trucks to patrol slippery suburban streets.

None of the 80-member staff of nurses at a home for the elderly in Macon made it to work, but the administrator rounded up 50 volunteers from the neighborhood.

The storm system began two days ago in east Texas and created hazardous driving conditions as it advanced westward down the Gulf coast.

New Orleans was shocked by two inches of snow. Several traffic fatalities were blamed on ice-slick roads. A Louisiana woman was struck and killed when she abandoned her stalled car in southeast Louisiana and set out looking for help.

The storm accelerated to paralyzing force as it crossed Georgia and northern Florida to the Atlantic coast Friday night and early Saturday.

Portions of Florida enjoyed the snow, but the state also was threatened by power shortages, rough seas and even tornado conditions.

Georgia also suffered isolated power shortages as freezing rain and ice developed in pockets. The central Georgia town of Marshallville was without power for several hours as emergency crews bogged down in the highway traffic.

As the storm whistled into middle and coastal North Carolina with six to 10 unches of snow, a Charlotte newsman commented, "Nobody knows what to do when it snows."

But somebody does. A Charlotte retailer reported selling out a three-year backlog of sleds Saturday.

Irelands Call In More Police

By COLIN BAKER

BELFAST (UPI) — Hundreds of extra police were called in Saturday in both Irelands to head off expected sectarian violence in Belfast and Dublin following a crackdown on militant Protestants and Catholics.

Northern Ireland Protestants predicted a "severe reaction" to the arrest of their militants and Roman Catholics said they would defy a ban on marches in downtown Belfast.

In Dublin, police and soldiers took up strategic positions around the city to guard against violence at the traditional England-Ireland rugby game. At a border roadblock, Irish Republic police searching the cars of fans enroute to the game found an antitank rocket and a rifle, but the driver escaped.

The find gave substance to fears that the Irish Republican Army (IRA) would try to attack the British team with bombs or bullets. Fifty detectives were assigned as bodyguards to the English players, whose lives were insured for $1,175,000 by the Rugby Union during their stay in Dublin.

The crackdown on extremists in Northern Ireland continued as four more suspected members of the IRA were picked up Saturday, raising the total number of men arrested to seven Protestants and eight Catholics within 24 hours.

POWs Freedom Expected Monday

By BARNEY SEIBERT

SAIGON (UPI) — Names of about 142 American prisoners scheduled for freedom Monday (Sunday Night U.S. time) were handed over to U.S. officials Saturday but a Communist spokesman later raised the possibility that there might be some snags in the actual exchange.

"The list of the American prisoners to be released in South Vietnam and Hanoi Feb. 12 (Monday) has been received by the U.S. delegation," a spokesman for the U.S. delegation to the four-party Joint Military Commission (JMC) said. "This list was immediately dispatched to the Department of Defense."

The spokesman declined to disclose the exact number of names on the list and referred queries for further details to the Pentagon. The Pentagon announced earlier 27 Americans would be released in South Vietnam and another 115, including sick and wounded, would be freed in Hanoi.

A spokesman for the North Vietnamese delegation to the JMC told UPI a few minutes after the U.S. announcement, "We still have no opinion on the prisoner exchange because there has not yet been a unanimous decision." Under terms of the cease-fire agreement, all actions by the JMC must be decided by unanimous agreement of the American, South Vietnamese, North Vietnamese and Viet Cong delegates.

The prisoner release has been under discussion by a subcomittee of the JMC but observers doubted a JMC subcommittee would be able to veto the arrangements worked out in Paris by Le Duc Tho, a member of the ruling Hanoi Politburo, and U.S. Presidential adviser Henry A. Kissinger. Kissinger arrived in Hanoi Saturday.

Ambassador Michel Gauvin, Canadian chairman of the International Commission for Control and Supervision (ICCS), told UPI correspondent Joseph Galloway Saturday that "there could be some last minute snags" in the prisoner exchange.

One snag developed Saturday on coverage of the release of 27 American prisoners of war at Quan Loi, 65 miles north of Saigon. The Viet Cong apparently vetoed plans for coverage by a news pool of 20 Correspondents and photographers.

While delegates argued over the prisoner release details the South Vietnamese reported 176 cease-fire violations in the past 24 hours, 20 more than the previous day. Heavy fighting also continued in Laos, where a cease-fire is expected by next Wednesday, and in Cambodia where the Khmer Rouge (Cambodian Communists) launched the heaviest assaults of that war.

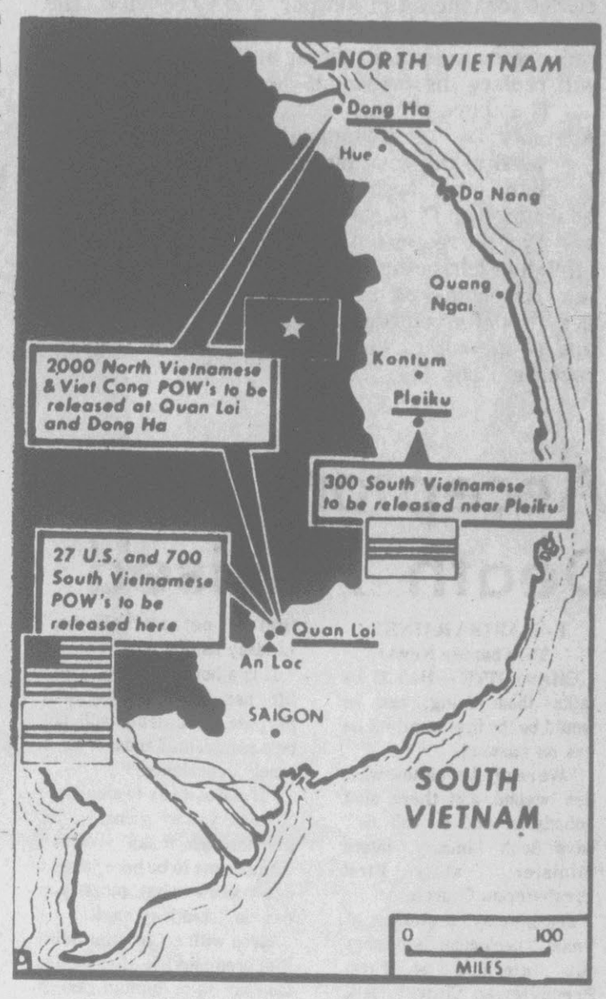
A South Vietnamese command spokesman, in explaining arrangements for the POW exchange, said Saturday afternoon, "The date of the POW exchange is not yet sure because at this moment the POW subcommittee of the JMC is meeting to discuss the time, date and place of the release."

South Vietnamese sources had indicated that plans called for:

—Exchanging 27 Americans, 700 South Vietnamese and 1,000 Communists at Quan Loi;

—Releasing 1,000 Communists at Dong Ha or Ai Tu, former South Vietnamese bases just below the Demilitarized Zone (DMZ).Both bases have been in Communist hands since last April;

—Freeing 320 South Vietnamese prisoners somewhere in Pleiku province in the Central Highlands, about 250 miles northeast of Saigon.



WHERE POWS WILL BE RELEASED — Map locates sites in South Vietnam where prisoners will be released Monday. Twenty-seven Americans and 700 South Vietnamese are to be released at Quan Loi airstrip; 300 South Vietnamese near Pleiku; and 2,000 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong from Dong Ha and Quan Loi. Meanwhile Hanoi is to release 115 U.S. airmen while Henry A. Kissinger is in the North Vietnamese capital conferring with government officials. (AP Wirephoto).

Advisory Council Appointed

Governor Jim Holshouser has announced the appointment of a 17-member State Advisory Council for the North Carolina Drug Authority. Chairman of the council is State Representative J. Ward Purrington of Wake County.

The Advisory Council is required for North Carolina to qualify for federal funds from the President's Special Action Office for Drug Abuse Prevention. The council's purpose is to make suggestions to the N.C. Drug Authority for development of a statewide plan for drug abuse prevention, education, treatment and rehabilitation.

Selected from the Greenville area were Dr. Lionel Kendrick and Frank George Hickman, a former resident and representative of the North Carolina Vocational Rehabilitation Division here. Hickman now resides in Wilmington, and is Regional Supervisor for the Vocational Rehabilitation Division there. He is also serving as a consultant to the local drug problem under the New Hanover Drug Abuse Committee.

Members of the council represent all areas of the state and facets of society involved in drug abuse prevention and control, the governor said.

Dollar Crisis Could Close Money Markets

PARIS (UPI) — European governments may close their money markets Monday in an effort to stem the surging dollar crisis, financial experts said Saturday. Japan already closed its foreign exchange market.

Western central bankers meet in Basel, Switzerland, Sunday and Monday to discuss the international monetary crisis caused by speculators fearing another dollar devaluation who have flooded West Germany with $1.8 billion in American currency.

The Basel meeting follows three-hour emergency talks in Paris Friday night between the finance ministers of Britain, France and West Germany. The results of the Paris meeting were still unclear.

Bankers from major West European nations plus the United States, Canada and Japan meet the second Monday of every month in Basel but banking sources said this meeting would obviously focus on the crisis rather than on routine business.

Not all the central banks will be represented by their governors, however, the sources said. Some governors are likely to remain home to be in closer touch with their governments. West Germany sent Otmar Emminger, vice-president of its central bank. Sir Leslie O'Brien, governor of the Bank of England, planned to fly to Basel later Saturday.

The financial sources said all European Common Market countries may establish a two-tier money market, meaning they would unilaterally devalue the dollar in an aggressive action against the United States.

The other alternative, letting the West German mark float upwards, was not considered likely because this would be a serious political setback for the Willy Brandt government.

German Economics Minister Hans Friedrichs said West Germany would not yield. "International speculators must at least recognize that they cannot simply pick out a currency and destroy it."

The Germans arranged the Paris meeting Friday between Anthony Barber, the British chancellor of the exchequer, Bonn's Finance Minister Helmut Schmidt and French Finance and Economics Minister Valery Giscard d'Estaing.

The closure of the Tokyo foreign exchange market to prevent the inflow of speculative dollars was only the second in history. The market shut down four days in June last year when Britain floated the pound sterling.

Policy moves by Japan depend almost entirely on what action is taken by West Germany, Japanese finance ministry sources said. Finance Minister Kiichi Aichi said the government may reopen the foreign exchange market Monday, depending on developments in Europe.

Lansche Named To Staff

John E. Lansche was recently sworn in as Assistant United States Attorney at ceremonies in the chambers of U.S. District Judge F.T. Dupree, Jr. in Raleigh.

Lansche, a native of Greenville, has practiced law in Raleigh since graduation from Law School at the University of North Carolina in 1969. He attended the public schools of Greenville and received his undergraduate degree from UNC.

Lansche has served as Chairman of the Wake County and 4th U.S. Congressional District Young Republicans Clubs as well as numerous other Republican Party posotions and organizations. He was a member of the Speakers' Bureau of Governor Holshouser's recent campaign.

Lansche was selected by the U.S. Jacyees as one of the Outstanding Young Men of America in 1972. He is member of the Raleigh Jaycees; the American, North Carolina and Wake County Bar Associations.

Attorney Lansche is the son of Mrs. Francis E. Lansche and the late Dr. Lansche of Greenville. He is married to the former Barbara W. Nexsen of Kingstree, S.C. They reside in Raleigh.

In announcing the appointment, U.S. Attorney Thomas P. McNamara stated: "We are exccedingly pleased to have an attorney of John Lanche's outstanding qualifications and proven ability accept a position on our staff.

Canine Problem Discussed

"The dog situation is serious in Greenville," Percy Cox remarked in opening a discussion on the subject at the City Council Thursday night. "We simply have to do something about it."

In considering a direction to take on this problem, one that has on several occasions been a topic of discussion in City Council meetings, Mayor S. Eugene West said "money was appropriated several years ago. We have tried to work with the county, but I don't think it will work out."

Chief of Police Glenn Cannon stated, "It is impossible to get a dog catcher to come out. We have tried any number of times, but can never get in touch with one."

Council woman Mrs. Mildred McGrath expressed a concern over the growing number of reports she has received "About dogs attacking old people and frightening many of our people."

A motion by Councilman William Dansey to have the City Manager draft an "ordinance proposal to include a leash law" was approved by the council.

Suggestions were also made to think in terms of providing funds in the forthcoming budget to finance a shelter, a dog warden and an assistant. One mention of possibly building a shelter in conjunction with the county shelter was not favorably received.

"The county facility is a very poor one," City Engineer Charles A. Holliday remarked.

When the city manager completes the draft ordinance, the City Council will set a date for a public hearing on the issue.

Another non-scheduled item of business handled by the City Council resulted in the changing of the fire zone to eliminate a vacant field between east of 14th Street and south of Broad Street. This action was taken to make it possible for Ernest Holt to place an office mobile unit on the property.

Many Area Projects in Store

There were several items in the proposed biennial state budget which affect our area, in addition to those proposed for the East Carolina University campus.

The State Highway Commission asked for and had recommended $8,000 for land acquisition to purchase around two acres adjoining present property. At Williamston a maintenance headquarters and assembly building was recommended to cost $38,000. In Greenville $155,000 was recommended for a division office building to provide office space for personnel currently housed in rental areas.

Back in Williamston $50,000 was recommended for a combination shop and storage building, and $8,000 for a service station. Some $21,000 was included for fencing in Newport and Greenville. The Motor Vehicles Division included $120,000 for a radio communications center at Williamston, which will replace the present 35-year-old facility.

The above projects were recommended by the Advisory Budget Commission and will likely be approved in the final budget.

Some other area projects did not fair so well, however. The Department of Social Rehabilitation and Control requested an addition to the youthful offenders correctional facility in Pitt County. The department asked $1,292,000 to build a 96 man dormitory for youthful offenders now being bused to and from Williamston for training. This was not recommended.

The Walter B. Jones Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center at Greenville asked $512,000 for an activities building; $120,000 for an addition to a therapy building and $53,000 for an addition to the dining hall for a total of $685,000 in capital improvements. None were approved.

Many projects are requested and not funded in the recommended budget because there is simply not enough money to go around. It is regrettable, however, that the project at the correctional facility and those at the Walter B. Jones Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center were not among those recommended for funding. Both of these facilities are filling great needs of the state and the imporvements they requested are badly needed to carry out their assigned programs.

Acceptance Of Death Advised

By MARTHA RAINEY
(The Charotte News)

CHARLOTTE — He's 25, he talks about dying, and he would be the first to admit he has no answers.

"We really don't know what lies beyond, and there ain't nobody around to tell us," says Scott Lindsay, intern minister at First Presbyterian Church.

Yet Lindsay, a student at Union Theological Seminary now interning at First Presbyterian Church, will talk about death to anyone who will listen.

His enthusiasm grows out of 11 weeks he spent this past summer dealing with death daily as chaplain at Duke University Hospital in Durham.

In Lindsay's flock were the healthy young men dying of leukemia, the mothers with cancer. Yet he said he "really never felt so alive" as when he was dealing with death daily.

How To Die

He's now sharing that experience with 20 people at First Presbyterian Church in a course on death and dying.

Lindsay was asked how one comes to grips with death.

"Quit denying it," Lindsay said. "American society denies death. Talk about it, realize it's there and that all the money, power and prestige in the world won't buy our way out of it."

Discuss death in the family, Lindsay said, whether it's in terms of the family pet or a grandparent, talk about it by sharing feelings.

"I can't guarantee what answers to the questions will be," Lindsay said of his course, "but I believe people will be more comfortable with the questions.

"We won't get anywhere by tiptoeing about the business of living," Lindsay said, pointing to people who daily flirt with death like the matador and race car driver.

They are, he said, "incredibly alive."

Maintain Realistic Hope

How do you help someone close to you face death? "You help them maintain a hope that is not unrealistic," Lindsay said.

It is a hope, he said, "that life has had meaning and purpose, that death will not be a painful and, most of all, a lonely experience.

"If you can say to someone, 'I know you're going to die but through it all you can count on me to be here,' then I don't know what more you can do." Lindsay said.

Even with a Christian faith that promises life after death, Lindsay said, human beings are going to get mad in the face of their own death or the death of someone close.

You shouldn't feel guilty about your reaction, whether it be anger, crying or profanity, he said. "It's healthy and understandable."

Working Out Acceptance

The emotions are part of working through to acceptance of death, Lindsay said, as says Elizabeth Kubler-Ross, author of "On Death and Dying," the text for his course.

"What shape death will take, I don't know," Lindsay said. "I really can't describe it, but I know death is not final.

"It's dying we fear, not death," he said. "We're afraid we're going to be weak, that others around us will be weak."

Death itself, once it has occurred, is known, Lindsay said, but until that point death remains unknown. It is approaching the unknown that people fear, he said.

Old Dixiecrat Power Fading

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The rude awakening of Dixiecrat Congressmen that they are in their twilight of power and had better organize themselves or perish came last month when they sought a mere vestige of their former dominion over the critically important House Rules Committee — and came away empty-handed.

The Southerners were appalled to learn that the Deep South seat on the Rules Committee (formerly held by chairman William Colmer of Mississippi, who retired) was to be filled by a liberal: Rep. Gillis Long of Louisiana. A senior Southern Congressman was therefore delegated to see Speaker Carl Albert of Oklahoma.

Albert replied by suggesting an equally liberal alternative: Rep. Richardson Preyer of North Carolina. The Southern emissary responded that his friends really wanted a reliable Dixie conservative young enough to become chairman someday — perhaps 40-year-old Walter Flowers of Alabama or 33-year-old Dawson Mathis of Georgia. Albert's reply: No, I want a man who will move my legislation. Gillis Long was named.

That rebuff informed Southerners that their 20-year control of the Rules Committee, habitually blocking liberal legislation sought by Democratic leaders, was truly at an end. More than that, it showed how low ancestral Southern influence with the party's House leadership has sunk.

Since then, one of the canniest Dixiecrats, Rep. Joe Waggoner of Louisiana, has been working backstage to form a still unnamed conservative counterpart of the 14-year-old, left-of-center Democratic Study Group (DSG). Supporting Waggoner are some surviving Southern grandees: Phil Landrum of Georgia, F. Edward Hebert of Louisiana, Robert Sikes of Florida.

This is no reincarnation of the all-but-forgotten Bollweevils Club, a loosely-knit Southern circle presided over by Judge Howard Smith of Virginia, autocratic chairman of the Rules Committee until his defeat in 1966. The new group will have staff, office space and a structured existence—all of it still resisted by some Southern graybeards but now essential in the twilight of their power.

The evidence of that twilight is a simple fact: the House Democratic leadership now lacks a Southerner in its top three posts for the first time this century. More shocking to some Dixiecrats, than their exclusion from Rules Committee control was the assignment to the Armed Services Committee, a Southern redoubt, of Rep. Ronald V. Dellums of California, a black activist of the new school. Dellum's influential sponsor: Speaker Albert.

Indeed, Albert and his new majority leader, Rep. Thomas P. (Tip) O'Neill of Massachusetts, have embraces the liberals, who now dominate the House Democratic Caucus. Albert's most influential adviser is Rep. Richard Bolling of Missouri, a battle-wise liberal veteran.

"We've got our backs to the wall," says one Southern conservative, adding that tighter organization and shrewder strategy are their hopes for survival. From a hard core 50 conservative Southerners, the new group is aiming at moderate Democrats on specific votes.

That will require avoidance of self-defeating projects—such as some Southerners wanting to seek a caucus vote preventing Rep. Charles Diggs of Michigan, a black, from climbing the seniority ladder to chairman of the District of Columbia Committee. Waggoner succeeded in smothering a move that, besides being doomed, would have branded its supporters as racists.

The similarity between Waggoner's group in 1973 and the infant DSG in 1959, using strategy and organization to compensate for lack of influence among the party leadership, is only superficial. The DSG's emergence was a sign of liberal strength: the new conservative group is a reaction to declining power.

In fact, the Dixiecrat Congressman may be a gradually vanishing American. With Negro suffrage, he has a dim future in the South's big cities. Elsewhere, Republicans are picking up conservative congressional seats when the incumbent retires (in 1972 alone, two in Mississippi and one each in Virginia, Louisiana and South Carolina).

An obvious remedy is to finally cross that aisle and become Republicans, and many joining Waggoner's group would have crossed Nov. 7 if their switch would have produced a House Republican majority (thereby not costing them their Democratic committee chairmanships). But this equation seems more remote than ever; Republicans will probably lose, not gain, seats in 1974. For now, the Dixiecrats can only band together to confront but not really thwart the new liberal hegemony in Congress.

Strength For Today

A CHRISTIAN NATION?

We are supposed to be living today in a Christian country. Yet fifty million adults in the United States has no church connections whatsoever, and twenty million children are without any religious instruction. Conditions are better in Canada than in the United States, but they are not enough to produce complacency.

We might almost say that the United States and Canada are Christian nations — minus fifty per cent. When we deduct from the nominal Christians the dead wood in all the churches and the people who call themselves Christians without having any right to do so then we have reduced the sincere, genuine group of Christians down to a pretty small handful.

The Bible is very definite as to how the spiritual life of a nations is to be improved. In both the Old and New Testaments the emphasis is upon the home. The law of God is to be taught to children, to be talked about in the ordinary walk and conversation which make up life. God's Word is to be written upon the doorposts of the house and upon the gates.

We try to place the responsibility for the religious education of boys and girls solely on the church and Sunday School. This responsibility must be placed primarily upon the home. When the adults get religion, the children will get it too.

Soviet Spy In The Sky

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Russia achieved nearly year-round coverage of the United States with its spy satellites in 1972, Pentagon sources report.

The Russians were able to get 354 days of photographic coverage by overlapping flights of their 29 reconnaissance satellites. This was 28 days longer than the year before.

Meanwhile, defense sources said there is evidence the Russians are trying to get improved picture detail.

Intelligence officials said the first Soviet spy satellite of 1973, launched in January from Tyuratam in central Russia, went into a lowered orbit for better camera resolution. This path carried the satellite to within 92 miles of the earth's surface, 22 miles closer than past reconnaissance vehicles.

Both the United States and the Soviet Union rely heavily on satellite systems which aim cameras, eavesdropping devices and other sensitive intelligence-gathering equipment from orbits passing over strategically important territory.

Neither country discusses spy satellites publicly, perhaps to avoid a clash over the sticky issue of sovereignty of space over its territory.

The closest Russia and the United States have come to any open mention of spy satellites was a joint statement last May when they signed the first-phase nuclear-arms-control pact. They agreed that each "shall use national technical means of verification at its disposal" to guard against cheating.

And both Russia and the United States promised, in effect, not to try to knock down each other's satellites carrying out this mission.

This country's spy satellites have enabled it to monitor Soviet missile tests, which are not announced by the Russian government.

Sunday Morning Notes

George Coffman was in New York recently on a buying trip. His visit concluded, he boarded a plane at Laguardia Airport.

Soon the plane was filled and the hatch closed. . .but the aircraft didn't move.

A stewardess appeared. "Ladies and gentlemen," she announced. "This is embarassing, but the airline forgot to assign a pilot." Seems all the crew was on hand except the forgotton pilot.

There was another wait until the pilot showed up. "Ladies and gentlemen," he said. "I apologize for the delay. Of course, you know it wasn't my fault. I was only assigned 20 minutes ago."

The plane had a belated take-off at 3:30.

"You can have 50 minutes to use anyway you want," Ira informed Jerry.

The journalism professor nominated Susan Price, a member of the class who works parttime with The Daily Reflector, to introduce Jerry.

"Well," said Jerry, "we'll allow ten minutes for you to introduce Susan and 15 minutes for Susan to introduce me. . ."

Other Editors Say Slap At Taxpayers

(Washington Daily News)

If today in North Carolina all 170 members of the General assembly could be polled personally about the wisdom of retaining the legislative retirement system, we dare say that the overwhelming majority would say that it should be repealed.

Then why is it not repealed? The 1969 legislative session put it on the books, and regardless of how anyone tries to justify it, something wrong andd unwise just cannot be justified.

Member after member will say "if I have opportunity, I shall vote to repeal that law." The trouble is that it is well nigh impossible to bring it to a vote on the floors of the two houses. The repeal idea is either killed in committee or changed to an extent that makes the effort worthless and meaningless.

No member of the legislature has been forced to run for office. It is both an honor and a responsibility to be there. When a person is elected, he or she should not look at that challenge in terms of "what the office can do for me" but rather in terms of "what I can do for my people." And putting one's self on a retirement basis is not helping the people who elected a legislator.

Many former legislators today are drawing retirement checks, but when they ran for public office and when they were elected, the idea of a retirement check hardly entered their minds.

A North Carolina legislator in the true sense is only a part time employe of the state anyway. And for legislators with the power in their hand s to go about the job of "feathering their own nests" through adoption of a legislative retirement system goes against the public service grain in our opinion.

Realistically, all the talk in the world merely fans the fires instead of getting repeal accomplished. There is a time for talking and there is a time for doing, and the latter time now during this session of the legislature.

Maybe we have misjudged public opinion on this matter. But as we view the proposition, the legislature just cannot slap down taxpayers and make them like it.

The legislative retirement act should be repealed. We see no middle corse involved. It should be repealed now.

Majority Favor Stern Policy

PRINCETON, N.J., Feb. 10 — A large majority of persons interviewed in a recent nationwide Gallup survey support the proposal of New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller that all sellers of hard drugs be given life imprisonment without the possibility of a parole.

Rockefeller's proposal wins majority support among both blacks and whites and in all levels of society.

The heavy support given Rockefeller's proposal — from 67 per cent of adults interviewed — undoubtedly reflects in considerable measure the growing and widespread fear of crime in communities of all sizes across the nation and corresponding desire for immediate solutions.

CRIME NAMED TOP PROBLEM BY BIG CITY RESIDENTS

A recent Gallup finding shows that crime tops the list of concerns of residents of the nation's large cities. A quarter of a century ago, crime was named the top problem by only one person in 25 among big city residents.

The increased use of drugs is one of two reasons named most frequently by the public for the growth in crime in the U.S. in recent years.

Another Gallup survey found two out of every three adults saying that the use of marijuana and drugs constitute a "serious problem" in the public schools of their community.

PUBLIC ALSO BLAMES ROOT CAUSES FOR CRIME

While the public's current mood toward dealing with drug users and pushers is "hard line," arising out of what appears to be a very real fear for personal safety, many people in earlier surveys have put much of the blame for crime on the ills of society. Some, for example, cite poor living conditions as a breeding ground for crime.

Another survey found six in 10 Americans placing the blame for crime and lawlessness on man's social environment rather than on the individual.

'BACKBONE OF COUNTRY IS BEING RUINED'

These verbatim comments reveal the range of reactions to Rockefeller's proposal:

"The backbone of the country is being ruined by drugs. We must take drastic steps to stop drug use. I favor life imprisonment for drug pushers — even the death penalty." These were the views of a middle-aged luncheonette owner.

A 36-year-old employee of a travel agency remarked: "The seller of drugs is not human — he is completely indifferent to society — therefore he should be removed from society."

A 25-year-old housewife said: "Harsh punishment without a rehabilitation program is not a sound approach to the problem of crime."

Frequently expressed was the view that "everyone should have a second chance."

Observations From Editorial Columns

Congressional Secrecy

The Supreme Court last week pointed to a flaw in the Freedom of Information Act to explain why so much secrecy in government exists. Rejecting a petition by 33 Congressmen to force declassification of government data, the Court found that the Act provides no means for questioning an Executive decision to stamp documents "secret." The Congressmen were relying upon the Act to blow the lid off an underground nuclear blast in Alaska.

Writing for a 5-3 majority, Justice Byron R. White took a swipe at Congress for its failure to arm the public with a stronger weapon against secrecy. "Congress has conspicuously failed to attack the (secrecy) problem," he said.

Congress' "conspicuous failure" is surpassed only by its record of seclusion during its 92nd edition. Last year, 98 per cent of the Senate committee sessions devoted to organizing and voting on legislation were held behind closed doors. Among House committees, the percentage was 79. The Senate Finance Committee talked privately 77 per cent of the time. The House Ways and Means Committee shut the doors during 63 per cent of its sessions. The public was excluded during 38 per cent of all committee session of the 92nd Congress.

When the FOI Act was passed in 1966, Congress described it as a device that would strip away government secrecy. It hasn't worked that way. But then, hardly anywhere is open government less apparent than on Capitol Hill.—Norfolk (Va.) Virginian-Pilot

London Guest

Having weathered the "Asian flu" in the 1950s and the "Hong Kong flu" in the 1960s, our nemesis in the 1970s apparently will be the "London flu." Our apologies to Londoners. Doctors say the new virus now laying thousands of Americans low is really a variation of the old Asiatic flu that happened to be unmasked and identified last year in London.

It's no comfort to know where a flu virus comes from. What we need is something better than aspirin tablets to fire back at it. Scientists have been following the mutations of the influenza virus ever since the great flu epidemic of 1918 and still haven't cracked its secret. When they take a prisoner all they get is name, rank and serial number—and no more.—San Diego (Calif.) Union

Rockefeller asked for "drastic measures" to deal with the drug problem, calling for mandatory life imprisonment for all sellers of hard drugs. He would "close all avenues for escaping the full force of this sentencing."

Rockefeller's proposal for mandatory life sentences for hard-drug dealers has drawn both criticism and praise from public officials. Critics have claimed there would be no room in either the courts or the prisons for the great numbers of drug pushers who would have to be tried if the system went into effect.

Critics also feel that a distinction should be made between members of organized crime who control the supply of illegal drugs and the "street pusher" who is often an addict himself.

Additionally, some feel that "soft" drugs such as marijuana should not be characterized with hard drugs, such as heroin.

Still others think Rockefeller should have made a sharp distinction between the youthful offender who may not be fully aware of the consequences of what he is doing and the criminal pusher who makes the selling of drugs a business.

The following question was asked in the survey:

"The governor of a state has proposed that all sellers of hard drugs such as heroin be given life imprisonment without the possibility of a parole. Do you approve or disapprove of this proposal?"

PUBLIC FAVORS $1000 REWARD TO INFORMERS

Another of Rockefeller's "State of the State" proposals dealing with drugs that receives widespread support is his proposal to give $1,000 to persons whos confidential information to the police results in the arrest and conviction of a seller of hard drugs.

Seven in 10 of all persons interviewed in the current survey favor this proposal, with majority support being found in all levels of society.

Following is the question and national findings:

"It has been proposed that a reward of $1,000 be given to any person whose confidential information to the police results in the arrest and conviction of a seller of hard drugs. Would you favor or oppose such a reward being given in this state?"

A Conservative View

Sen. Buckley's Reflections On 'Wonderland'

By J. J. KILPATRICK

James Lane Buckley came to the United States Senate two years ago. Until that very day, hour, and moment, he had held no political office of any sort; he had never even campaigned before, save to help brother Bill in his quixotic bid to become mayor of New York. Yet he had achieved the unthinkable: Running on the Conservative party ticket, he had won the seat held in other years by such luminaries as Robert Kennedy.

Now Buckley has written a small reflective essay, published in the current issue of National Review, commenting upon the institution of the Senate. He likes it. But after two years, he still views the Senate. He likes it. But after two years, he still views the Senate with the grave perplexity of Alice playing croquet with the Queen.

Buckley's piece is certain to become a classic in its field. He is awed by the Senate, but it is the awe of a child at a zoo. He approaches his elders as innocently as Little Miss Marker invading a crap game. What, he wonders, is this marvelous device? Why, James, that is called a unanimous consent agreement.

In the thickets of the committee system, the junior senator from New York came to appreciate the staggering volume of business that courses through the Congress. He learned, as other newcomers have learned before him, the pervasive influence wielded by committee staffs. He discovered that the focus of a bill can dissolve like the smile of the Cheshire Cat. He found that bills did not always mean what they seemed to mean.

In Alice's Looking-Glass World, as the Queen explained, "It takes all the running you can do, to keep in the same place." So, too, with the Senate. Buckley remains amazed at the phenomenon of the legislative flash-flood. One day the floor is quiet. The next day some bills comes along that may involve "new programs that will have an enormous impact on American society, on the States, or on the economy — programs that in time may grow into multibillion-dollar commitments."

"Yet many of these bills," says Buckley, "will be enacted with little real examination by most of the senators who will have to vote yea or nay on them, and with less than adequate comprehension of what the bills involves." All too often a senator's vote is based on an inadequate summary description, plus whispered conversations with colleagues who may be equally in the dark. The bell rings for a rollcall, and votes must be cast.

Buckley is among the most modest men in public life. Respectfully, as becomes a church solist addressing 99 prima donnas, he pleads for adequate staff and adequate office space. "At the root of most of the problems of the Senate is the enormous expansion of federal activities in recent years." The senator who tries conscientiously to keep up with his job soon discovers that a week of only seven days is too short. He needs help that the present system does not provide.

He advances a novel suggestion, to place much of the legislative business as possible on a two-year cycle: Let committees work on bills in the odd-numbered years, affording ample time for hearings and for public education; and let the two houses vote upon the reported bills in the even-numbered years. Such a deliberate pace might permit Congress to adjourn early enough for members to return to their States "to listen and to observe."

For all the frustrations — Buckley finds his days are splintered every morning before he has time to look at them whole — the Senate offers even the newcomer a chance to mold public policy. To be sure, "it is not an institution to which the impatient should gravitate." But the senator who masters his job can feed his ideas "into the nation's informational bloodstream." The Senate, he concludes, is all in all "a good place to be." And those who know this quiet and thoughtful senator from New York may agree that it is good to have him there.

Congressmen Cite Few Complaints Over Social Security's Bigger Bite

By JOE HALL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Social Security taxes are taking their biggest bite ever out of paychecks, but congressmen say they've heard relatively few protests.

They add, however, that some complaints persist about the way the whole Social Security system operates.

Liberals dislike the formula used for apportioning the tax; some conservatives say that the system is underfunded, benefits are subject to the whims of Congress and taxpayers best could invest their contributions in private retirement plans.

This year's maximum Social Security tax—$631.80 from each worker and his employer—is about $164 more than the top payment last year.

This big increase is largely the result of two major Social Security bills passed by Congress in 1972.

Congressional specialists say that unprecedented benefit increases contained in those measures appear to have dampened any protest of the higher taxes.

Most Americans apparently are willing to pay more for the benefits they expect to receive or witness relatives and friends receiving now, the specialists say.

The 1972 bills increased all cash benefits 20 per cent, instituted for the first time a system of cost-of-living increases for future payments, made it possible for old persons to earn more after retirement without loss of benefits, boosted monthly checks for many widows, gave Medicare protection to disabled persons and liberalized the system in other ways.

But spurred by the tax boost, some long-term critics have revived their attacks.

Liberals claim that the higher levies are more than ever unfair to the poor and are proposing once again a complete overhaul of the tax system.

Sen. Walter F. Mondale, D-Minn., said Social Security levies "are grossly unfair because the average wage-earner pays a much larger portion of his income than those who earn large salaries."

So some liberal legislators urge that the payroll tax be abandoned and the entire burden of Social Security taxes be shifted to individual income tax levies.

But if this proves impractical, the liberals say that there at least should be a system of exemptions for the low-income worker.

On the conservative side, Milton Friedman, University of Chicago economist, said recently that under Social Security "the individual is in no sense building protection for himself and his family."

Any assurance that a worker has "derives solely from the willingness of future taxpayers to impose taxes on themselves to finance benefits being promised to present taxpayers by, ourselves," Friedman said.

Conservatives say that the government system does not at all resemble private insurance which must have reserves to cover all liabilities, that it is seriously underfunded, that Congress could take away or lower the benefits at any time and that a young worker could do better if he invested his Social Security taxes in an annuity with a private insurance company.

To conservative objections, the system's backers reply:

The system does not pretend to operate as private insurance does. Rather, it is an essentially pay-as-you-go social insurance plan. Taxes of current workers pay for the checks to those who have retired or become disabled or widowed.

Under such a plan, no large trust fund is needed although the system does have a fund containing about one year's benefits in cases of emergencies. It totaled $52.5 billion at the end of 1972.

Congress in theory could end the system but, with the number of beneficiaries now at 28 million and growning, this is not politically feasible.

All persons now receiving benefits are getting far more than their contributions would entitle them to on an actuarial basis. There can be no guarantee, but this likely will continue in the future as Congress continues to vote improvements and perhaps injects some general revenues into the system.

The automatic cost-of-living adjustment provision voted last year makes it even more certain that the benefits will continue to grow to levels beyond what the young worker is promised when he first enters the system.

A Friend Advises Scott Has Politics In Blood

By JOHN KILGO

RALEIGH — Former Gov. Bob Scott seems to be having a very good time in his new position with the Agribusiness Council.

Scott has been bouncing around for the past week, going to a ribbon-cutting here, a groundbreaking there. He says he's happy to be out from beneath the glare of pressure of politics, at least for now.

But one close friend, who says Scott is enjoying his new work, warns: "I wouldn't count Bob out of politics. He grew up in a political atmosphere and will return to politics on some level one day. It's in his blood, just like Haw River's in his blood."

Hoover Adams, the Dunn newspaperman and political sage of Eastern North Carolina, has been living high off the hog.

It might be the dead of winter, but Hoover just got back from a vacation in Paris.

I keep getting the word, by the way, that Adams' good friend, Attorney General Robert Morgan, is determined to make the U.S. Senate race in 1974. It's too early to tell, but Morgan certainly isn't discouraging such speculation.

A man, weary from climbing steps and opening doors, stopped me in the Legislative building last week and pleaded for directions to Lt. Gov. Jim Hunt's office.

"I've tried to establish some landmarks," the man said, "but all the plants, all the doors and all the restrooms look alike to me. The politicians should have allocated some money in this place for road signs."

The stranger wasn't exaggerating. If you visit the building for the first time, don't go without a guide.

Mecklenburg Sen. Herman Moore and the Charlotte City Council are at odds again. Sen. Moore wants a bill that would require the vote of residents before the city of Charlotte could annex adjoining areas.

Moore says his proposed legislation is democracy in action. Charlotte's council says it's an invitation to disaster for big cities.

Women's Lib seems to be making headway. In Mecklenburg Divorce Court, a man is asking the court for a divorce, and is requesting that his wife give him the house, all its furnishings and pay his attorney's fee.

"You're going to see more of this in the future," says District Judge Ken Griffin.

There Are Hazards In Economy's Momentum For Record Year

By GOERGE BRYANT, JR.

In reports to Congress, the Nixon Administration has projected 1973 as a year of continued economic growth, highlighted by rising job opportunities and a further easing of inflation. That, plus peace, would add up to "good times", indeed.

There seems little doubt, at this stage , that the year will hang up a lot of new records in terms of goods and services produced, income and profits earned and people at work. The very momentum of the economy seems to assure that.

The big questionmark is the future of inflation. The situation is such that a new spiral could easily be triggered. Avoiding it, which means avoiding general economic trouble late this year or next, will require a superb tight rope act.

The Nixon strategy for keeping down pressure on inflation is considered reasonably good by many economists. But there is nothing foolproof about it. There are a number of ways the President can be "dumped".

Budget restraint has become a key anti-inflation measure. Nixon hasn't proposed to cut spending, on balance. Far from it. Federal spending is moving up rapidly. What Nixon has called for, or ordered, is a slow down in the rate of increase. A "tool" is to cut back on some projects and cut out others.

Here is where the tangle with Congress has developed. As time passes, Congress may prefer to go along with the budget restraint, rather than up taxes. The fight shows signs of centering on where the restraint is to be applied.

But if Congress does, in one way or another, force the total spending up faster than Nixon has proposed, it will mean extra pressure on the side of inflation, unless any increase is offset by bigger taxes.

The program of economic controls is another area where Nixon is being challenged. If unions are able to break through ceilings on wages and write their own ticket, then prices simply can't be controlled. Any wage increase which exceeds productivity gains push costs up and price rises follow. If Congress rewrites the control law, as is now threatened, then wages and price ceilings may lose what effectiveness they have.

Monetary policy, credit control is another key feature of the total anti-inflation effort. But indications have been that it is not planned to make such drastic use of it as was the case in 1969-1970. This choked business growth and added to unemployment.

The past week brought a demonstration of the changed attitude in the credit area. When several banks raised their basic interest rates from 6 percent to 6¼ percent, the Federal Reserve Board applied pressure for roll backs.

But it should be kept in mind that if spending restraints, or wage price controls are weakened, then tough credit controls will have to be resorted to as a way of regulating demand. It is a pretty "crude" weapon, as 1969-70 demonstrated.

Another part of the picture is the role of consumer and business spending — spending by the so-called "private sector". Right now, it is rising and rapidly, creating extra demand for goods and services ar a time when shortages are showing in some areas.

Part of this rise is understandable. For a long time, a low spending rate by indiviual consumers and by business (for plant and equipment) was attributed largely to a lack of confidence in the future — "resession mood.".

To the extent this spending rise now reflects confidence, it is good and probably will not become excessive. But if it starts feeding on the fear that prices will surge upward again, making now the time to buy, it will become dangerous. Any such "inflation psychology" would be hard to deal with.

Only time will tell the future rate of inflation. Right now, the stock market seems to be betting on a resumption of the spiral. Controls, especially a tightening, frighten Wall Street.

But the picture is not all bleak, by any means. Nixon has demonstrated a willingness to face the tough ones. His record is reassuring. He could win on this one, too.

Jaycee-Real Will Focus On REAL House Activities

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

A special all night Second Annual Jaycee-Real will once more focus attention on Greenville's REAL House, a Crisis Intervention Center.

Speaking about plans for the 11 hour long radio program beginning at 7:00 p.m. Saturday and continuing until 6:00 a.m. Sunday morning, Jaycee Ray Landon gave the details. Landon, with Tom Britt, is co-chairman of the radio show, to be known by the short title Gold Revue.

"We will have a number of local people making host appearances on the show from time to time during the night," Landon commented. "These will include Revs. Daniel Earnhardt and Dana Hunt, Father Hugh C. Mulholland and Joe Frankford.

"There will also be," Landon continued, "representatives from the American Red Cross, the county's Social Services Department, Alccoholics Anonymous, the Salvation Army, and possibly a lawyer."

Tying these personal appearances together will be a featured program of music fron the 1950s and 1960s. "There'll be lots of old goodies that should be fun for everyone," Landon said.

Personnel of REAL house will also be taking part in the night long radio program, as will students who help man REAL headquarters located at 300 Cotanche Street near downtown Greenville.

Dudley Culp, an ECU graduate from Greensboro and Doug McGuinn of Forest City are the coordinators of REAL House.

These two, along with a number of volunteer assistants, mostly university students, man the center seven days weekly on a 24 hour basis.

"Our real purpose," Culp said, "is serving as a means of putting people in contact with qualified people who can give them the assistance they need."

Culp emphasized that "this role of REAL, and the fact that he, McGuinn and the volunteer students are the link between a person needing help and the persons who can fulfill that need.

"We are really fortunate," he declared. "We don't have much money to work with, but more importantly, we have a wealth in reserve, the people of Greenville."

Doctors, ministers, lawyers, agency personnel and others in a position to provide meaningful service to people, young or old, were mentioned as the "wealth in reserve" Culp spoke about.

"We have good relations with the police in Greenville," Culp remarked. "Frequently the police will send over a needy transient who has no place to spend a night or no money for a hot meal. We can usually take care of him."

Culp said the Social Services Department, the American Red Cross, and the Salvation Army also referred needy transients to them for assistance. "Sometimes entire families are sent to us for assistance," Culp said. "However, we never try to put a family up overnight. We don't have facilities for that."

The coordinator said local citizens are beginning to understand more fully the broad purposes of REAL house. "Many have believed we were directed more to young people. Young people and their problems are an important part of our work, but we also serve as a clearinghouse for people of all ages, of both sexes, for most any type of problem.

"So often," he continued, "just the fact we're here, that people have a willing listener, can be a big help. Of course, I think it's true that since we're young, other young people with problems will talk to us maybe a little more readily."

Statistics, admittedly often dry indications of human drama, offer a revealing insight into the kinds of problems that are a part of life in a community.

From records maintained by REAL house in 1972, numbers of individual counselling, including calls and visits shows:

—Abortion related, 173; alcohol related, 21; crank calls, 102; draft counselling, 151; drug counselling, 102; housing information, 264; legal aid 95; medical related 37; prenancy and birth control 134; psychological referral 25; suicide prevention 26; and veneral disease 28.

Also there were large numbers of calls and visits for more general categories—general counselling 378; personal problems 388; and social 240.

"Many of these in the general, personal and social categories, Culp said, "were simpler problems, things such as a person feeling depressed and wanting someone to talk to about it.

There are more dramatic moments too. Culp referred to a September 1972 incident in whic he feels REAL was instrumental in helping save the life of an attempted suicide victim. A young person who had taken an overdose of barbituates had passed out. Discovered by a friend, the friend called REAL, who in turn summoned a doctor and rescue squad and got the person to the hospital in time.

"Calls from people contemplating suicide are up considerably," Culp said. "We've had 10 or 12 such calls in recent months."

Although the main task of REAL is that of an initial contact and clearinghouse agency, Culp said that the work is much too important, to vital a service to leave to good intentions.

"We have a continuing once a week training program for our volunteers," he said. "This we consider our life blood.

"Doctors, ministers and other knowledgeable people give their time to talk to our volunteers about techniques of handling crises, human counseling, first aid and a host of other things our people need to know about.

"We have a person from REAL House in Raleigh, helping us on a voluntary basis in our training program," Culp pointed out.

"Graduate students from ECU in clinical psychology have been a big help in our training programs. Local narcotic agents give us demonstrations on identification of drugs, their effects and treatment."

Culp mentioned that REAL has received a $1,000 grant from the State to apply on the drug education problem. "We are licensed by the N.C. Drug Authority for the work we do in this field," Culp remarked. "We are hoping eventually to apply for a federal grant to expand our program in this effort."

Established in Greenville in 1970, initially as a vehicle to serve students, REAL now have become a community wide Crisis Intervention Center.

The work carried out by REAL has received favorable comments from university and community leaders.

"The question should not be 'can we afford it', but rather 'Can we do without providing such services? This program is a must.'" These words were expressed by J.F. Bauman, manager of the local J.C. Penny Department Store, about the Crisis Intevention Center service of the REAL House in Greenville.

Chairman Is Named

Harry Billica, president of the East Carolina Council, Boy Scouts of America, announced the appointment of William A. Heymann as council Explorer chairman.

Heymann, chief pharmacist at the Burroughs Wellcome plant here, has been active in scouting since 1930. He served as institutional representative in a Philadelphia unit in 1948, as Cub pack committeeman in 1951, and Cub Master in a Pennsylvania pack in 1951-52.

Valentine's Day Is Everybody's Day

POST CARD VALENTINES . . . printed in Germany and America. were popular around the turn of the century in

By JANE KELLER

Roses are Red
Violets are Blue
Sugar is Sweet
And so are You.

So goes the most popular Valentine verse in America.

A British Valentine, dated about 1830, contained a similar verse:

The Rose is red,
The grass is green
God bless you,
The King and Queen.

When you give or receive a Valentine card on Feb. 14, you will be continuing a custom which has been a part of Anglo-Saxon culture for at least 500 years.

History

The oldest Valentine known to be in existence is located in the British Museum and bears the date, 1477. Since that time, Valentine greetings have come in all shapes, sizes, colors, forms and materials.

Britain and America have always been the center of the celebrations of St. Valentine's Day, although the custom has increased in popularity throughout the world since the increase of travel and the occasions of the World Wars, when the demand for Valentine cards by American and British soldiers spread the interest.

Valentines seemed to have hit a peak in popularity from about 1840 to about 1900. Then the popularity began to wane, only to pick up again after World War II.

In America, during the latter half of the 18th century, the puzzle purse was very popular. The Endless Knot of Love was also a popular decoration on notes declaring adoration. Clever designs executed by nimble fingers girls in the shops of New England resulted in a wide variety of lacy perfumed valentines still copied today.

In England in the 1860s, very elaborate Valentines were in vogue.

A wooden box with a glass front could reveal an elaborate Victorian valentine composed of hundreds of different colored scraps, cambric flowers, trinkets and ribbons against a background of silk and emobssed paper, mounted on paper strings. Gilded wire and tinsel, artificial flowers and stuffed humming birds or pheasants' feathers with velvet, shells, pressed ferns and leaves were all desirable decorations for emphasizing Valentine greetings during the period.

Comic and vulgar valentines also have an important place in the history of the Valentine. They have always been printed in great abundance, but were usually on very cheap paper and have not survived.

In the mid-1800s in both Britain and America, valentines were sometimes cruel and rude in their humor and were many times sent anonymously out of spite to even old scores.

In the days when the receiver paid the postage rather than the sender, the British post office records many complaints by fathers of less popular young ladies who wished their money back from the postage they paid in order to receive for their daughter some rude or obscene message sent under the guise of a valentine.

In America, another popular form of valentine was the beautifully decorated sheet of regular writing paper on which the sender carefully penned a chosen verse written with the aid of a Valentine Writer, a small book containing valentine messages for all. The book was widely available in both countries during the 1800s.

There were several little books of this type available for the timid and shy male who didn't know what to say or for those who hadn't the ability to compose their own verse. The little books catered to every taste from heavily sentimental down to the lewd.

Trends

Many kinds of valentines are available locally for Feb. 14.

There are cards for uncles, aunts, nephew, grandfather, grandmother, brother, sister, mother-in-law, from the two of us, from all of us, and seemingly for and from any member of one's family.

Valentine cards for the romantically attached or sentimentally inclined are to be found in all price ranges. Some are reminiscent of the valentine of the 1800s with paper lace, satin hearts and silver paper.

Boxes of Valentines, popular among school children, are available at any number of places.

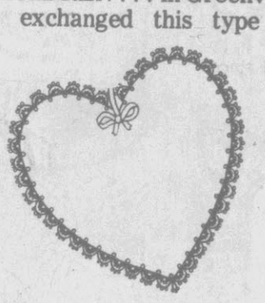
According to a spokesman for a local card shop, however, young adults are turning to something a little different in valentines. They prefer the simple card which bears either a photograph or psychedelic drawing on the front and a simple message inside.

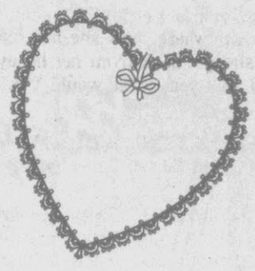
Also popular are the crazy or funny valentines. Rude and cruel valentines are almost non-existent in Greenville for this season.

The sending of valentines is one of the heaviest greeting seasons of the year for the card makers. There appears to be a greeting for everyone.

Young or old, friend or not, Valentine's Day is everybody's day.

SCHOOL CHILDREN . . . in Greenville may have exchanged this type of Valentine card about 50 years ago.





POPULAR WITH YOUNG ADULTS . . . is the Valentine with photographic cover and simple message inside.

Children's Hospital: It's A Curse To Be Ill

By DLLA DENMEN

SAIGON (WNS) — Sick babies sleep three to a cot in Saigon's Children's Hospital. Their mother, brothers, and sisters camp out in the crowded wards waiting for the youngsters to recover. And when vats of food come round at midday the matron doles out measures of rice to lines of hungry relatives as though it were a refugee camp.

It is hard to tell who is in authority at Nhi Dong hospital. A small ragged boy mounts the main steps taking a package of transfusion blood to his sister. In one ward a mother examines a jar of oxygen suspended over her child in highly professional manner. Another mother gives advice while breast-feeding her baby on the floor.

For the six wards on the medical floor there is only one squalid lavatory. There aren't enough sheets to go round and some babies lie on newspapers. Families and hangers-on refuse to move from the passages so cleaning is impossible, the floors are permanently dirty, and the steps throughout the hospital are smeared with blood. The smell of babies is everywhere.

The only childrens' hospital in Vietnam, Nhi Dong was built in a blaze of good intentions by the Vietnamese Government fifteen year ago. It had an excellent site in Saigon's Chinatown, Cholon. It had technical and medical assistance from the World Health Organization. It was to be a Western-style experiement.

"Now it is suffering from lack of staff, equipment, and money," says the hospital's director, Dr. Phan Dinh Tuan. "It is impossible to keep order and discipline and it has deteriorated to the state of most other South Vietnamese hospitals."

Squatters

When it opened, the World Health Organization, knowing that Vietnamese families stormed hospitals en masse, ruled that Nhi Dong would receive only patients, no relatives.

"But most of the children were critically ill," says Dr. Tuan. "Their families squatted out on the pavement in front of the main gate weeping and crying that their children were very sick, maybe they would die, they could not die without their parents beside them. After two days W.H.O. had to let them in."

Now, despite notices dictating "only one parent to one child," whole families descend on the hospital, sleeping on the floors, buying their food from street stalls, and draping their laundry out of the windows. Poor families who have come from the provinces are fed by the hospital's canteen. Sometimes as many as six children arrive with a sick brother or sister because there is no-one to look after them at home. They play in the wards because their mothers don't approve of the day-care center set up especially for them.

"Men are allowed to sleep only on the ground floor of the hospital and go upstairs at visiting hours," claims Dr. Tuan. "But soldiers frequently arrive back from the battlefield in the middle of the night saying it is the only opportunity they have of seeing their children. They have guns, there is no alternative, the guardian has to let them in."

The death rate at Nhi Dong is a horrifying 5-10 per cent. This is because taking a baby to hospital is often a last resort for a Vietnamese mother. Many put their faith in Chinese herbalists and traditional Oriental medicines, largely herb extracts, and only when the child is dangerously ill do they forego their mistrust of Western medical treatment and come to Nhi Dong. The hospital refuses no-one; dozens come in two late and die.

Layers Of Clothing

There are barely 300 beds for an average of 500 patients. In the out-patients department another 500 turn up every day. There, jammed on to hard wooden benches, are the sick children, their parents, baskets of food, and bottles of milk. All the babies are wrapped in several layers of clothes and thick woolen hats because the Vietnamese believe the wind brings disease. Patients have to sit hours to see a doctor and the doors of the consulting-rooms are blocked with people fighting for a place in the queue.

"Most Vietnamese are proud of prescriptions and love buying drugs," says a senior nurse, Miss Hue, "but they seldom follow the instructions or quantities and they have to come back again."

The children come from all over Vietnam and stay on average one week. Even if they are not completely cured, they have to be discharged to make way for other patients. The hospital runs a follow-up clinic in the out-patients department where children can return for further treatment.

Fifteen doctors work shifts in the main block because they don't earn enough to live on and have to hold outside jobs as well. But Nhi Dong has ten younger physicians working under two American doctors on a post-graduate training programme. They train in the "private" wards where patients pay 160 piastres (30 cents) a day and there is only one baby per bed, but conditions are hardly better than in the rest of the hospital.

Dr. Joanne Whitaker from Winter Haven, Florida, a Professor of Pediatrics at the University of Texas, Dallas, came to start up this course eighteen months ago. She was joined by Dr. Jo An Cornet from Chicago Heights, Illinois, a year later. Their students receive a pediatrics certificate after three years' time their first pupils will teach the next batch.

The two women, who work through the American Medical Association, say that their students have had a very poor basic training and frequently had no text books.

Moonlighters

"But the biggest setback," says Dr. Whitaker, "is that they earn so little, we have to finish at 4 p.m. so they can attend their private practices. We discovered one student sleeping all day and found he was doing three night jobs, one day job, plus his training with us. It was the only way to support his family. We managed to get him a scholarship of 10,000 piastres (25 dollars) a month and now he has only two outside jobs.

"Considering some didn't speak a word of English when I arrived, the students are very keen," she says. "Some have a short period in the States but I think it is better for them to learn through their own resources and illnesses rather than the fancy diseases and equipment in American hospitals.

"Orphans frequently die of leukemia and septicemia because there has been no-one to look after them. And we have several psychological cases — for instance three children whose fathers were killed in the war who had ulcers under the age of eight."

When the American troops were fighting in Vietnam they would often send wounded children down to Nhi Dong. Frequently they arrived without identification and once treated the hospital never knew what to do with them. They had to be deposited in orphanages until they were found by their parents.

The staff still talk about the Communist offensive in Tet 1968 when the hospital was the scene of fierce fighting. The Vietcong, based in a nearby pagoda, were pressing an attack on a military headquarters bordering the hospital. In order to head them off, South Vietnamese troops occupied Nhi Dong for a week, and much of the building was damaged by mortar and rifle fire.

Malnutrition

The most prevalent illnesses at Nhi Dong are dysentery caused by contaminated water supply, malnutrition, and infectious diseases such as tuberculosis, diphtheria, meningitis, and measles.

"Malnutrition is common among all poor Vietnamese families but it is largely due to ignorance," sayd Dr. Tuan. "A mother who has a child with dysentery never gives it milk because it vomits, she only gives it rice soup and sugar. With this lack of protein the child will never recover."

Vietnamese mothers usually breast-feed but if they are not healthy their milk-supply will not be sufficient. Powdered milk is comparatively expensive at 300-400 piastres (1 dollar) a tin, but American, French, and Japanese condensed milk is available at 80 piastres a can.

"The trouble is that a mother gets used to one brand and is prejudiced against the rest," says Dr. Tuan. "If she can't find her regular brand in the market she will never consider buying another."

Another of the hospital's problems is that there is no place for mothers to prepare milk or food. The hospital laboratory has frequent cuts in water and electricity. And due to lack of supplies, such items as disposable syringes have to be re-boiled and used again and again.

Much equipment was donated by a British medical team who worked at Nhi Dong for five years, but many machines are out of order and there is no specialist in Vietnam who can repair them.

Reader Should Have Followed Earlier Advice

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1973 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Lots of folks write to tell you that you were wrong, but I am writing to tell you that you were right. Also to say that I am sorry I didn't take the advice you gave me back in 1960 when I asked you what to do about a husband who used to beat me up so bad he'd put me in the hospital.

You said: "Get rid of him, Honey, before he maims you for life."

Well, I didn't get rid of him. I took him back and gave him another chance. And I hate to tell you how many more beatings and chances there were after that.

Finally, on the night of June 17th, 1972, we had another bad fight. My brother happened to come by at the time, and he tried to help me, but my husband shot and killed my brother on the spot. He also put a bullet thru my right rib cage, shot a part of my right arm off, fractured my skull, gave me a concussion and broke my ear drum. The cops came in and killed him while he was trying to escape.

Even tho I was in the intensive care unit for weeks, I am still alive, but like you told me back in 1960, someday that man would maim me for life. And he did.

SHOULD HAVE LISTENED IN PHILLIPS, ME.

DEAR ABBY: That dentist who said that with proper dental hygiene and periodic checkups one could keep his own teeth forever was wrong.

I inherited soft, rotten teeth, and no amount of dental care or treatment could save them. I spent a fortune and suffered for years trying to save mine, but I lost them all at age 33.

Now, at age 57 I am delighted with my falsies. I can eat corn on the cob, caramel apples—anything you can eat, and I wouldn't have my own teeth back for a million dollars.

Oh, another fringe benefit: I can take out my teeth and entertain my grandchildren by dancing a wild flamenco, using my dentures as castanets. I'll bet YOU can't do that, Abby!

GRANNY FANNY IN L. A.

DEAR GRANNY: You're right, I can't. But I can do a wild kazatsky with my originals.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter in law recently had her first baby. It was a 9-lb. "premature" child, arriving six months after the wedding—but that's another story.

Anyway, she has asked me for a list of my friends and relatives to whom she should send birth announcements. Abby, I really don't feel like giving her a list because she did not acknowledge many of her wedding gifts from my friends and relatives, and I kept getting calls [and letters] asking me if she had received a gift. [And this was four and five months after the wedding.]

I realize that she may not have been feeling well, but she's a 22-year-old college graduate who did not have to go to a job anywhere, and she has had a fulltime maid since the day she got back from her honeymoon.

So, I ask you, what would YOU do?

MOTHER IN LAW

DEAR MOTHER: I'd tell her I don't feel like giving her a list. And I'd tell her why.

DEAR ABBY: I, along with my husband, was a guest at a bachelor's apartment. I had to use the bathroom, so I excused myself and when I found it I was amazed to discover there was no door! What would you have done in a case like that?

B. L. M.

DEAR B. L. M.: Whatever! And as quickly as possible!

Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L. A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Indian Artifacts Move Into Spotlight

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

It was no surprise that a cigar store Indian had taken up residence at the annual winter antiques show in New York for the benefit of the East Side House Settlement (cq).

The wooden Indians often come in out of the cold for such events. But it was unusual for the fashionable show to display so many Indian artifacts in between its $20,000 highboys and $30,000 paintings, even though such objects have moved into other shows in recent years.

Small 19th century objects — masks, boots, baskets, a beaded headband (Chippewa) caught the eye at one booth. At another there was a large collection of small Indian baskets, and one display offered a small beaded box with dancing figures (Hopi) with the suggestion the price $68 was a steal. Most objects exhibited have attained the 100-years "true" antiques designation.

James Abbe of Oyster Bay, N.Y., had included a piece de resistance in his display of Indian artifacts — an assortment of objects associated with Custer, that were collected by Gen. Charles Francis Roe, who was a lieutenant on the scene at Little Big Horn right after the famous battle. In fact the canteen exhibited is thought to have been Custer's own, right down to the wide yellow ribbon handle for which he was known.

Abbe sees the Indian trend as part of "a revival of interest in the Indian" begun by young people at a time when Americans are beginning to realize "the Indian may not have been well treated."

"We are in the mood to see the Indian less as a warning savage, and more as one who had a wonderful understanding of himself and his environment. In addition to the recent movies — Little Big Horn and Wounded Knee — which helped blow up the idea, and singers like Buffy Saint-Marie, who sing Indian songs, young people admire the Indian as a people with ideals similar to their own. They worshipped together, took good care of food supplies and the environment, and only killed animals when needed, and they had the kind of mystical quality that has intrigued young people. In addition they were artistic..."

Abbe exhibited some beautiful great horn spoons with bone bowls and totem style handles depicting shark, fox and birds. A child's robe of deerskin painted with little teepees, horses, and figures is in a frame, and there were a headdress, knife carrier, tomtom, beaded Indian saddle and pipe bags in the collection.

An Indian basketry hat was painted with varied motifs which included eyes. A huge Indian basket was woven with figures and "rain motif" which Abbe deduced to mean the basket had been woven by a brave during a long period of drought when the Apaches were migrating.

"Women were not allowed to use figures in their designs. They usually used flower designs," he explained.

Custer's centennial will occur when we are celebrating America's bicentennial, so Abbe looks for increased interest in Indian artifacts as the time grows near. There are prehistoric objects to be found, but what will turn up at antiques shows will be artifacts from the 19th century, explained Abbe, who long has been associated with folk art.

In fact this show would warm the heart of any folk art collector with its whirligigs, animals, dolls that fall into that classification, and weather vanes — a Miss Liberty of 1890 was described by Gerald Kornblau (cq) "as the ultimate weather vane to come on the market."

Wood decoys included mallards and plovers and more than the usual number.

But the show was not without the beautiful furniture to interest the right people. One cherry highboy (1750) priced at $19,000, had a unique feature — small drawers in its bonnet. The dealer, Bernard Plumb of Richland, Mich., was also exhibiting a handsome cherry desk with whalebone inlay.

Prices have escalated and good news for glass collectors might be the tag on one seven-inch glass vase — $275.

As he has done for years, Chinese art collector Ralph Chait was bemoaning the shortage of Chinese treasures, but he was not without his usual quota of prizes. In addition to two vases — turquoise and oxblood — from the H'ang Hsi period in the $18,000 bracket, his proudest exhibit, he said, was the Chinese export famille verte tureen with serpent finial ($20,000) "because there are only four or five left in the world."

Couple Weds In Ceremony

CHAPEL HILL — Miss Anne Caroline Heasley and Barry Michael Billica exchanged wedding vows Friday at 7:00 p.m. in the University Presbyterian Church here.

The Rev. Thomas K. Farmer officiated at the ceremony.

Parents of the bride are Mrs. McCalla Heasley of Orlando, Fla., and Mr. Robert P. Heasley of Pompano Beach, Fla. The bridegroom's parents are Dr. and Mrs. Harry R. Billica of Greenville.

The bride is a 1970 graduate of Virginia Intermont and a December graduate of Southern Methodist University. The bridegroom is a 1969 graduate of J. H. Rose High School and is a senior at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Committee Reports Given At Chapter Meet

Reports were given by various committee chairmen at the meeting of the N. C. Alpha Nu Chapter of Alpha Delta Kappa held last week at the Holiday Inn.

Mrs. Lurleen Wheeless gave a detailed report on fund-raising projects conducted by members. The Altruistic chairman read a letter from a company to which eyeglass frames had been sent. These frames were used to make glasses for the underprivileged.

Mrs. Larue Brunson, altruistic chairman, suggested several other methods of rendering altruistic service.

Miss Alya R. Taylor, president, commented on the forthcoming Fifth District meeting set for Feb. 10 at Fleming's Restaurant, Morehead City. She also discussed the District Council meeting of Alpha Delta Kappa.

It was announced that the names of Alpha Nu pledges should be turned in at the next meeting, new handbooks will be distributed in the near future and a leadership conference was discussed.

Plans will be formulated at the March meeting for the trip to Williamsburg.

Miss Taylor welcomed the group and Mrs. Edith Barnhill gave the devotional on "Friends and Friendship."

radiology department where the operator has to x-ray 100 patients a day with one overworked machine.

"We have three British machines and one American," he says. "but the three British are broken down and there is no British engineer to mend them. Similarly we have two printing machines for developing but the mechanism which stamps the patient's name on the x-ray doesn't work and the name has to be written by hand. Sometimes it rubs off and the doctors unknowingly use the wrong x-rays. In the dark room there is no automatic processor; two blind men develop 200 x-rays by hand every day."

DOCTOR SHOWS HOW TO Bathe Away Aches and Pains
IN YOUR OWN BATHTUB

By Richard Estrin

NEW YORK, N. Y. — New York Physician has discovered a way to turn an ordinary tub of hot water into a relaxing, soothing, satisfying Mineral Bath. Imagine what this means to those who suffer the disturbing aches and pains that are so often associated with over-exertion fatigue.

Many who have tried this new discovery give glowing reports of how they now "soak away" much of the pains of sore muscles and stiffness right in their own bathtubs — just as though they were bathing at one of the world's famous Mineral Springs. In fact, millions of people who have been traveling to distant Health Spas for pain relief — on the advice of their physicians — may soon be saved this bother and expense.

Thanks to this new triumph in medical chemistry, they may find that they can enjoy the often comforting benefits of true mineral bathing in the snug convenience of their own homes.

Here's how it all came about

A curious doctor was puzzled by the fact that Medical Science has never been able to tell why certain Natural Springs so often gave blessed relief from aches and pains. He decided to analyze the water of these Springs and find out what Nature put in them to make them different. He discovered that they were rich in certain carbonates, sulphates, iodides and chlorides of Lithium, Potassium, Magnesium, Iron and other medicinal minerals. Could it be, he asked himself, that the secret lies in these minerals?

In order to find the answer, he had a chemist compound them into a water-soluble concentrate which patients suffering from minor aches and pains could use in their baths.

I was one of the many who tried it. For months I had been annoyed by distressing muscular aches and pains in my elbow. Even though skeptical, I was eager to test this doctor's new formula. I would have tried anything that offered any hope at all of easing my discomfort.

A MINERAL BATH THAT MAKES YOU FEEL GOOD ALL OVER

"It is called BATHERAPY," he told me. "You simply add a handful or two of green crystals to a tub of moderately hot water, then let yourself soak in it for about 20 minutes. Mind you, this won't cure aches or pains — but it may give you welcome temporary relief from pain."

I'll always remember that first BATHERAPY bath! I had hardly let myself sink into the tub when something wonderful began to happen. A deep, penetrating warmth seemed to course through my body. It was as though the liquid mineral heat were actually massaging my frayed and tortured nerves. In a few minutes an indescribable feeling of relaxation crept over me. I felt as though my whole body were being caressed by the soaking sunshine of Spring. It was an experience I'll never forget — and one that I often repeat!

To share my good fortune, I sent a package of BATHERAPY to a friend. He wrote me:

"Now, when my aches and pains become disturbing, I simply get in my tub and let a BATHERAPY bath soak them away! It's like taking a Mineral Bath at one of those European Spas you read about, but I bet even they can't match the blessed relief my own tub now gives me."

Available to Hospitals and the Public

As this is being written, BATHERAPY is being made available to hospitals everywhere — and to the public through this announcement. Already thousands are enjoying its benefits. Yet BATHERAPY does not help everyone. Unfortunately, there are some people who are constitutionally unable to respond even to Nature's own Mineral Baths.

If you, however, are among the millions who suffer from minor aches and pains — or from the tensions and fatigues of modern living — ask your doctor about BATHERAPY. If he thinks it might help you, by all means try it. The chances are you'll find its soothing, cushioning, pain-softening action will give you surprising relief from minor discomforts and a feeling of well-being that may last for quite a time.

Nothing Else Like It!

Even if you are fortunately free of any bodily discomforts, you'll find a bath with BATHERAPY is a delightful and rewarding experience... A wonderful sensation of physical freedom envelopes you. Tensions unwind. Nerves are soothed. And you relax so blissfully, you sleep as though you hadn't a care in the world.

DO THIS TONIGHT

Drop a handful or more of BATHERAPY into your tub of hot water. Then, for the next twenty minutes, enjoy the wonderful warm waves of relief as BATHERAPY'S liquid mineral heat quiets and soothes the peripheral nerves of your tired aching body . . . Miss Peggy Leggett And Miss Vickie Leggett Become Brides Friday

In a double wedding ceremony Friday at 7:30 p.m., Miss Peggy Reide Leggett became the bride of Robert Louis Gaynor and Miss Vickie Elaine Leggett was married to Grady Glenn Manning.

The brides are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Leggett of Greenville. Parents of the bridegrooms are Mr. and Mrs. Louis Gaynor of Falkland and Mr. and Mrs. M.D. Manning of Bethel.

The Rev. Dave Nobles performed the double ring ceremonies in the Belvoir Free Will Baptist Church.

A program of wedding music was presented by Miss Teresa Thomas. Mrs. James Earl Pollard sang "We've Only Just Begun," "Because," "More" and the "Wedding Prayer" as the benediction.

The church was decorated with traditional green and white. Vows were spoken before the altar which was enhanced with a fifteen branched arch of candles. Fifteen branch spiral candelabra on each side and nine branch tree candelabra were used. Arrangements of white gladioli, carnations and pom pon chrysanthemums completed the scene.

Two three branched candelabra were used during the ceremony with the brides and bridegrooms lighting the two outside candles as they entered the chancel. After the bridal couples had spoken their vows, they snuffed out the two outside candles after lighting the center one together. Hurricane aisle tapers marked the honor pews.

Given in marriage by her father, Miss Peggy Leggett wore a formal length white organza gown designed with a high neckline encircled with crocheted lace. Matching bands of lace extended down the long sheer sleeves and trimmed the cuffs. Panels of lace also extended from the neckline and shoulders down the gown front to the hemline which featured rows of lace and ruffles. She wore a matching lace edged illusion mantilla.

Miss Vickie Leggett, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor length gown of white satapeau trimmed with Venise lace and satin. The bodice featured a high neck with roll collar, long tapered sleeves with ruffled cuffs and illusion yoke. The waistline was encircled with satin and centered at the front with a double bow and long streamers. A chapel train attached at the waist accented the skirt. Her tiered veil of bridal illusion fell from a Camelot headpiece trimmed with satin lace.

The brides wore cluster pins which belong to their late grandmother. They carried identical formal bouquets of white roses centered with white orchids.

Miss Joan Leggett of Greenville, sister of the brides, was maid of honor. Mrs. Dennie Harris of Greenville was matron of honor for Miss Peggy Leggett and Mrs. Barbara Reggle of Greenville, sister of Glen Manning, was Miss Vickie Leggett's honor attendant.

They wore formal length gowns of petal rose organza designed with a high neckline encircled with white Venise lace flowers. The empire bodices featured a mock weskit of white chantilly lace over petal rose organza edged in white Venise lace flowers. The long sleeves were banded in white lace and white satin cording laced the dirndl bodices.

They carried colonial bouquets of pom pon chrysanthemums with beauty red and petal pink streamers. They wore satin ribbons with long streamers in their hair.

Bridesmaids were Linda Leggett of Greenville, sister-in-law of the brides, Beverly Vandiford and Linda Gaynor of Greenville and Falkland, sisters of Bobby Gaynor, Cathy Leggett, cousin of the brides, Jean Morris and Sue Lewis, all of Greenville. They wore beauty red gowns identical to those of the honor attendents.

Miss Lisa Leggett of Greenville, cousin of the brides, was junior bridesmaid and was dressed identical to the honor attendants.

Flowers girls were Stacy Dail of Tarboro and Tracy Vandiford of Greenville. Their gowns were designed like those of the honor attendants and they carried baskets of mixed flowers.

Harold Hobgood of Pinetops, cousin of the brides, served as ring bearer. He carried a heart shaped pillow covered with white lace and satin streamers.

Bobby Gaynor's best man was his uncle, Tim Pridgen, of Pinetops and Steve Manning of Bethel was Glenn Manning's best man. Ushers were Buddy Leggett, brother of the brides, Robert Leggett, uncle of the brides, Ronnie Leggett, cousin of the brides, all of Grennville, Jeff Crisp of Pinetops, cousin of the brides, William Harris of Greenville, Harper Manning of Fountain, and Bill Carson of Bethel.

The mother of the brides wore a formal length blue chiffon gown designed with a high neckline featuring ruffled blue val lace. The long sheer sleeves were banded at the cuff with matching val lace. Panels of lace accentuated the redincote skirt. She wore blue matching accessories and an orchid corsage.

Mrs. Manning chose a polyester street length dress designed with a white bodice with a navy A-lined skirt and red belt. She wore matching accessories and an orchid corsage.

Mr. and Mrs. Gaynor are both graduates of Belvoir-Falkland High School. She is a graduate of Mitchell's Hair Styling Academy and is employed by Burroughs Wellcome. The bridegroom served three years in the U.S. Army and is a graduate of Pitt Technical Institute. He is employed by Burlington Industries, Rocky Mount.

Mrs. Manning is a student at North Pitt High School. Mr. Manning is employed by Walter Avery Construction Co.

After wedding trips to unannounced points, the couples will live near Greenville. For traveling, the brides changed into identical dresses and wore orchid corsages lifted from their bouquets.

After-Rehearsal Party

And after-rehearsal party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Manning.

The refreshment table was covered with a white lace cloth. A Valentine arrangement of mixed flowers was used as the centerpiece flanked by candles.

The mother of the brides and mothers of the bridegrooms assisted in serving.

The brides wore identical white lace dresses with matching coats and carnation corsages.

The bridal couple remembered their attendants with gifts during the after-rehearsal party.

On The Local Scene

by Rosalie Trotman

The ballroom of the Greenville Golf and Country Club will be transformed into a southern garden for this year's Charity Ball.

"Through A Garden Gate" is the theme for the ball, which is sponsored yearly by the Service League of Greenville.

Mrs. Louis E. Clark (Harriet), of 303 Granville Dr., is serving as the overall chairman this year. A native of Hillsborough, she is a graduate of East Carolina University with a major in primary education.

Shortly after college graduation, the Clarks were married, having met while both were students at ECU. The couple has a son, Louis Jr., 15, and two daughters, Joy 13, and Sandra 11.

Harriet is a past president of the South Greenville School PTA and is a member of the Chicora Book Club, St. James United Methodist Church and the Women's Society of Christian Service.

She is also a member of the Junior German Club and Marketeers. The Clarks recently purchased a summer cottage on the Pungo River, and Harriet says, "We enjoy it so much and I found out that I am a river rat at heart."

The Clarks, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. John Stoughton also of Greenville, will be returning home in a day or two from Madrid, Spain. The trip for Harriet was a surprise Christmas present from her husband.

"I left the country without a care, even though the Charity Ball was less than three weeks away, due to the consideration, cooperation and helpfulness of the Service League members," said Harriet.

A fun trip for four days to Florida and Disney World is being sponsored by the Withla Council, Degree of Pocahontas.

Traveling by bus, the tour group will include a visit to Silver Springs, spending two days at Disney World and nights in Orlando and the last night will be spent in Savannah, Ga.

The dates for the event are Fev. 24-28. Persons interested in making the trip should contact Mrs. Maycie Colbreth, 756-2366, or 752-7166.

Withla Council has sponsored such trips for the past 10 years to such places as Canada, Texas. World's Fair in New York, New Orleans, Nashville, Tenn., and to the New England States.

Ecology Is Book Theme

A book of photographs of children that focuses on them as "human ecology" — the conservation of human beings — is based upon the photographic collection of Save the Children Federation of Norwalk, Conn. In its 40th year, the nonprofit agency in the field of child sponsorship emphasizes that the book is not on war, famine or despair but stresses the common humanity and common needs of the world's children through 128 pages of pictures. If children fail, the world becomes an "endangered species," is the message.

Royalties from the book complied by Winston G. Potter and Kent Garland Burtt will be paid to the federation and through them will go to self-help, scholarship and community programs throughout the world.

Says Auto Most Expensive, Gives Least In Return

By PATRICIA MC CORMACK
UPI Family News Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Question: What is the most expensive thing and gives the least return for the money?

Answer: The automobile.

If you disagree, the man to argue with is Dr. Arnold Mysior, director of Georgetown University's Psychological Center in Washington, D.C.

In an interview Mysior described the auto as an isolation chamber that leads to the development of fragmented individuals—almost like curdled milk. That is, in addition to being the "most expensive thing giving the least return."

By no means is that the extent of the auto's sins. The psychologist links the auto to increases in crime—auto thefts and other types, the latter because of the ease with which the machine enables the thief to split from the scene of the crime.

By choice the psychologist drives to work each day—11 miles from home. He drives during off hours so as not to be stuck in traffic jams.

"I have arrived at a position in life where that is one of my liberties (riding to work at the off hours)," he said. "If not that, then I would insist on moving within walking distance."

Mysior knows his campaign against the automobile is an unpopular one —"considering about 300,000 work directly in the industry and another million indirectly." Curtailing it would mean a lot of people would be out of work.

An Isolation Box

"The auto is a real isolation box," Mysior said. "You lock yourself in and you're by yourself—so you don't have to mingle with the public.

"If you didn't have the auto to the extent you have it then you would have public transportation and it would be used enough to pay for itself."

The psychologist also is concerned about what getting behind the wheel does to some people. Shy guys turn into warriors. And that's not good. It's a change triggered by frustration.

"Frustration does have something to do with at least increasing aggressive behavior," he said. "People in traffic situations are usually frustrated and that might have some tendency to increase their aggressiveness.

"Since there is not very much they can do about the aggression, they're stuck. It increases internal stress. There may be somatic symptoms such as high blood pressure and ulcers. At least there's a tendency towards that."

Honking and yelling at other motorists might help relieve some tension. But Mysior says you can't get away from the frustration altogether.

The nice thing about doing these things within the privacy of your car is that you can do it with impugnity. You can call people all kinds of names, and you can do this without having anyone call you a name back. The psychologist said this probably is how some people manage to survive.

Some experienced drivers going over the same route every working day to factory or store or office become what are known as automatic drivers.

The psychologist said they probably are the least put out by the commute. Like a good violinist who fingers automatically, the driver brakes automatically, picks up speed or slows down—all by reflex action. And because he does, there is time to think behind the wheel.

Organize and Relax

Such a driver, according to Mysior, uses driving time in the morning to organize his thoughts and his day. In the evening he uses it to become relaxed.

Radio seems to help take your mind off the frustration, too. If that's the case you can use the commuting time as a music hour. Then, you won't worry about traffic.

Now carpools, psychologically speaking, probably are better than lonesome cars. Mysior said they make for sociability. "I've been in carpools off and on for several years and thought it was rather a good experience. Simply from an ecological point of view it is sinful not to be part of a carpool."

Mysior also talked about people who commute by bus or train. "Good public transportation is good for people," he said. "But public transportation today is inefficient. It gets bogged down in traffic and it's too slow.

"If you'd simply make a conversion and have at least half of the people travel by bus, you'd have more buses, but nothing to compare with the amount of automobile space that you'd save.

"We'll have to make this conversion sometime anyway and it's only shortsightedness that allows it to become more expensive by procrastinating about it."

Mysior did not touch on the auto as a bedroom on wheels and its contribution in that role to the sexual revolution among teen-agers and a resultant stampede of venereal disease.

But he did mention that since many men consider their cars as a mistress it would be hard to convince a lot of males that carpools would be a good thing.

"They wouldn't want to share a mistress and they don't want to share their car cast in that role," he said.

A Museum For Palm Springs

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (UPI) — Ground has been broken in this resort community for a new $4.5 million Desert Museum scheduled to be completed in August, 1974, the Palm Springs Convention and Visitors Bureau reports.

The Museum, which now owns $750,000 in donated art, is financed exclusively by private donations. Among major donors are Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Annenberg, who gave a theater-communications center; Leonard K. Firestone, who contributed an art display gallery, and entertainer Frank Sinatra, who gave a sculpture court.

Find Log Cabin In A 'Cocoon'

GREENSBURG, Ky. (UPI) — A log cabin, dating back to 1796, has been discovered in an ordinary white frame house on the main street of this western Kentucky community.

The historic structure was found in a cocoon of white clapboard when a nearby church bought the property for use as a parking lot. Local civic groups plan to restore the log cabin as a museum.

The Very Real Case Against Physical Punishment

Can Mother learn to control emotions when everything seems to go wrong?

By DR. HAIM GINOTT

Note to readers: The encounters depicted in my column are designed to serve as a practical guide to improved communication. They are not to be taken literally. They should be adapted to individual situations and individual ways of speaking.

A YOUNG MOTHER who had lived through an ordeal, and learned her lesson, related the following: "One Saturday morning, I was rushing to gather the children's clothes, bottles and diapers, preparing to leave for the weekend.

I was making some hot milk for the girls. While the baby was crying in the high chair and throwing his breakfast on the floor, the milk boiled over. June, my 5-year-old, was giving me her tenth excuse why she didn't want to put on her shoes, even though she was sick and the floor was cold. I blew up: Do I have to start screaming before you'll listen to me? (thinking to myself at that moment—this isn't me—this is my mother yelling).

"June stood there holding her ground. I picked her up in a sweep of anger, dragged her to her room, and heaved her onto the floor, yelling, 'and don't come out until your shoes are on!' She landed on her stomach and chin and I immediately saw that she was hurt. I ran in, picked her up, and laid her on her bed.

"Under her chin was a gash so deep I couldn't see the end of it. I don't remember what I said to comfort her. All I remember is how I felt: I had taken a child who was whole and broken her.

"I ran out into the front hall and rang my neighbor's door bell. He is a doctor. When no one answered immediately, I rang another bell. Two neighbors came to the door at the same time. I told them what had happened and they came in to help. The doctor wasn't home but his wife knew what to do. She stopped the bleeding and told me to get hold of myself. She phoned my pediatrician and told him that June had had an accident and described the wound. The doctor asked for me. I told him the truth. He laughed and said, 'It happens in the best homes.'

"He told me to take her to the emergency room at the hospital and assured me that she would be all right. Both my neighbors told me to forget it, 'It was an accident, it happens all the time.' The doctor's wife said she had hurt her sons a few times by throwing them against the wall and the other neighbor, a minister's wife, told me that once she had thrown a shoe at her youngest daughter and cut her forehead open.

" 'Forget it. It was an accident,' They all advised. It took six stitches to sew my daughter up. She was wrapped in a sheet like a mummy, and taped down to the table. She kept crying: She was afraid that I would be angry with her because her tights would be dirty from the tape.

"I never understood how a parent could hurt a child. I learned that it was very easy, and that it's accepted by friends and neighbors as an accident, as something to forget.

"When June got home from the hospital, I held her in my arms and told her that I never meant to hurt her, that I loved her and that we were going to have a rule in our home: People are not for hurting."

RECENTLY, in a hi fi store, I was recognized by the owner—an expert in electronics. "I heard you on TV discussing discipline," he said, "and I don't agree with you at all." He stretched out the palm of his hand and proclaimed proudly, "This is my psychology."

I asked him whether he applied the same "palm" method in fixing a stubborn TV set, a silent amplifier or a screeching mike. "Oh, no." He answered. "For that you need skill and knowledge. These are complex instruments." Suddenly, he got the point of my question and added apologetically, "If I knew about children what I know about electronics, I'd treat them differently."

To Observe Anniversary

The sixth anniversary of the Brightleaf Amateur Radio Club (B A R C) will be observed at its regular monthly meeting 7:45 p.m., Tues., Feb. 13 at the Planters National Bank Bldg. conference room.

The main event of the evening will be a talk presented by Charlie Wells on his recent trip to West Africa, along with color slides, movies taken while there and some recordings made on the trip.

Not only will members be present but their wives and many out of town visitors. Anyone interested in radio or desiring to become an amateur radio operator is cordially invited to attend this meeting.

Present officers of the club are; John D. Andrews, president; James C. Miller, vice-president and F. R. Vadney, secretary-treasurer.

Drugs Called Symptom Of Personal Problems

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Few drug addicts seek treatment because they are tired of addiction, the director of the Clinical Research enter here says. Usually it comes from outside pressures such as divorce or the threat of jail.

Dr. Harold T. Conrad, looking back over the center's past five years, added, "The biggest mistake anybody could make would be to assume that a heroin addict is an otherwise normal person who just happens to use heroin.

"Most of our patients have a long history of severe disturbance in their relationship with other people and society long before they use drugs," he said.

The center was created by the National Institute of Mental Health in 1967 at the site of the former U.S. Public Health Service Hospital here.

For years, the hospital — opened in 1935 — was one of only two federal drug treatment facilities in the country. The other was at Fort Worth, Tex.

Increased use of drugs during the 1960s led to more facilities being built, whereupon the federal government took the position that treatment was primarily a local responsibility.

Today, the patient population at the center is around 275 and while the patients are receiving treatment, it is "only as a benefit or side effect of the research," Conrad said.

"A lot of the problems these people have relate not only to the chemical but to their real life," Conrad said.

"It's not simply a question of separating an individual from his drugs. You have to separate him from the wish to solve all of life's problems and overcome all of life's miseries by getting stoned."

Part of treating an addict, Conrad said, involves "giving him some awareness of the gratification I guess of what you would call the old-fashioned moral virtues — things like hard work and industry and thrift and getting an education ... things that really sound corny to most of our patients."

The center currently supervises 19 in-patient facilities around the country and about 150 aftercare agencies. More than 1,800 people are involved in three-year aftercare programs.

Conrad said about 15 per cent of those people are making a good adjustment while nearly 40 per cent are doing satisfactorily.

There are plans, he said, for follow-up studies on those who complete the program and those who drop out or are dropped because of unacceptable behavior. Such studies are needed, he said, to prove that the program really works.

Conrad said much current research is aimed at creating longer-acting forms of methadone, a synthetic drug used as a narcotic substitute, and narcotic antagonists to counteract the effect of drugs. He said more research is also needed on drugs other than the opiates.

Minister Serves As Policeman Five Days A Week

By JANIEL L. TAYLOR

GALVESTON, Tex. (UPI) — Five days a week, rookie policeman Charles Monty Willis puts on his blue uniform and silver badge, straps his .38 caliber police special to his side and patrols Galveston's high crime district. But never on Sunday.

On the seventh day, Willis dons a different uniform—a conservative business suit—and mounts the pulpit of the First Church of the Nazarene to address his congregation.

Willis, is both an ordained Nazarene minister and a commissioned officer in the Galveston Police Department.

The idea to become a policeman evolved over about three years while Willis rode with patrolmen as the Police chaplain. He entered the Police Academy last May and became an active force member July 1.

"From the first I think I fit right into being a policeman," Willis said. "When I was the chaplain, I rode in the cars and saw every kind of crime there was."

No Special Treatment

When Willis first hit the streets as a patrolman, Police Chief Glenn Stanford said he would be like any other officer, with no special consideration given to his status as a minister.

"I've worked pretty regularly in the high crime district and its been real good," Willis said. "I like to be active and answer calls. I've made a lot of arrests and come close to leading the department in arrests."

Like any policeman, Willis has had to draw his gun on occasion although he has fired it only on the police range. But he wouldn't hesitate to shoot if the situation called for it, he said.

"My number one thought is to take care of my life," Willis said. "I don't think many people like the thought of going to jail, whether it's at the hands of a policeman or minister or whatever. If the time comes when it is necessary to use a weapon, I'll do it.

"I have two children and a good wife and I plan to go home every night. I'm just a human being. I try to treat people as I would like to be treated, but I don't let my feelings as a minister override my desire to take care of myself."

Willis also said he had a responsibility to other policemen who depended on him in tight situations.

Time Crunch

Willis enjoys both jobs but admits he has trouble finding time for both.

"There is definitely a difficulty finding time," he said. "I'm sure I don't get everything done but so far I have been able to do both jobs. I think my congregation and family don't mind and I haven't heard any complaints."

Before Willis joined the force, he told his congregation of his plans.

"They gave me a vote of confidence and were all in favor of it," he said.

Willis, his wife, Emily, 26, and their two children, Charles Jr., 5, and Tawn Annette, 3, live in the church parsonage, a five-room, one story white frame house on a palm tree-lined street behind the church.

Mrs. Willis said she is proud of her husband and doesn't worry about his police work.

"I'm really pretty excited about it," she said. "The potential danger really doesn't bother me. I just figure everybody has his time and if it comes I have to accept it."

High Dedication

Mrs. Willis and her husband, a man of medium height with brown eyes and brown hair, is dedicated and immovable when he believes he is right.

"He is dedicated to everything—his church, his family—to everything," Mrs. Willis said. "He doesn't let anyone sway him if he thinks he is right, concerning the law, morality or whatever."

She said her husband often uses experiences from his beat in his sermons.

"When he talks about sin and what he has seen of alcholics and prostitutes, the congregation listens," she said. "They know he isn't talking about something from a book, he is talking about what he has seen. And because of his religious convictions, he is able to tie it all together."

Willis said many people ask him if there is a conflict between the roles of minister and policeman in society.

"I really don't see any conflict," he said. "When I started as a policeman I was impressed with the amount of education necessary to be on the force. Today's requirements are stiffer and more is expected of policemen today.

"I hope I can keep doing both." I do everything I can to keep myself clean as a minister. I want to be the best minister I can and the very best policeman I can."

THE REV. CHARLES WILLIS is also a member of Galveston's police department. (UPI Telephoto)

Finicky Cat Has Estate

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — Tommie, a fat cat in the truest sense, is living proof that felines, even rich ones, are finicky.

The cat, of unknown lineage and age, is the sole surviving beneficiary of a $200,000 estate left when his mistress, Mrs. Andree P. Montst, died in 1965.

Tommie has an entire house to himself and a fulltime housekeeper to look after him.

But despite his fabulous wealth, neighbors report that Tommy is getting grumpy in his old age. Said Michael Summers, 24, who lives nearby: "I tried to pet it and it bit me. I was just trying to be friendly."

Tommie, rumored to weigh about 28 pounds, though his keeper won't comment, spends most of his days sunning himself on the porch of his residence at 2101 Hastings Drive.

After his death, his share of the estate will be divided between the Catholic Church and the Charlotte Rehabilitation Hospital.

Davidson Gets Past The Citadel

DAVIDSON, N.C. (AP)—Davidson survived 37 turnovers Saturday afternoon and defeated The Citadel, 85-75, in a Southern Conference basketball game.

The Wildcats got double-figure scoring efforts from five men, led by Larry Horowitz and Greg Dunn with 18 points each. Davidson also had a 58-37 rebounding edge over the Bulldogs.

The Citadel went cold from the game's start as Davidson jumped off to an 11-1 lead before the Bulldogs' Steve Fishel hit an 18-foot jump shot for his team's first field goal.

Things got considerably tighter and The Citadel tied it 23-23 before Davidson took a 32-29 halftime lead. The Bulldogs came back in the final period and led briefly, 41-40, with 15:19 to play. Davidson then scored 10 straight points to regain the lead and was never in serious trouble again.

Fishel was the game's top scorer with 30 points.

The victory lifted Davidson's record to 13-8 overall and 7-1 in the Southern Conference. The Citadel is 8-12 overall and 4-5 in the conference. The victory was Davidson's 69th in its last 70 home games.

Germans Take Bobsled Lead

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — The West German team, boosted by a record smashing performance by Olympic champion Wolfgang Zimmerer, streaked into the top two spots Saturday midway through the world two-man bobsled championships.

After two heats Saturday, Zimmerer held solid possession of first place—about a full second ahead of countryman Horst Floth-going into Sunday's final two heats.

The German drivers were followed by a Romanian sled piloted by Ion Panturu.

Zimmerer, the Sapporo Olympic two-man gold medalist, drove his red, Italian built sled with Peter Utzschneider on the brake, to a blazing time of one minute, 6.45 seconds in his first run over the twisting, one-mile, 16-curve course. The clocking shaded the 4-year-old course record set by Navio DeSordo of Italy, 1:06.62.

Zimmerer totaled 2:14.90 for the two heats. Floth, the Olympic silver medal winner, and number two in the recent European Championships behind Zimmerer, sped to the top time of the second heat, 1:08.06.

The later runs were slower because of a steadily falling snow.

Floth ended the day with a 2:15.99 two-heat total. Panturu, who was not among the top finishers in the practices, was close behind Floth at 2:16.05, followed by Austrian Warren Dellekaarth, who finished third in the Europeans, at 2:16.30, and Hans Candrian of Switzerland at 2:16.39.

Rounding out the top 10 after Saturday's heats were Swiss Fritz Luedi, Swede Rolf Hoglund, Oscar Dandrea of Italy, Peter Perner of Austria, and Giorgio Alvera of Italv.

Virginia Slaps Deacs, 104-73

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Freshman Wally Walker and sophomore Gus Gerard destroyed Wake Forest in the first half Saturday and senior Barry Parkhill completed the job after intermission as Virginia's Cavaliers routed the Demon Deacons, 104-73, in an Atlantic Coast Conference basketball game.

Walker, hitting 7 of 10 shots from the floor, had 16 points and Gerard 14 as Virginia ran up a 55-35 halftime lead. Parkhill, who had 10 points in the first half, scored 14 after intermission and fed off for at least a dozen more.

Walker and Gerard finished with 20 points each and senior Jim Hobgood had 15 as Virginia evened its ACC record at 4-4 and handed Wake Forest its sixth defeat in seven league games.

The Cavaliers are 10-6 overall. The Deacons are 9-11.

Eddie Payne, a 6-foot-1 senior, led Wake Forest with 22 points and sophomore Mike Parrish had 15 as the Cavaliers limited Wake's Tony Byers, who came into the game with better than a 24-point average, to four points.

New U.S. Olympic Head Doesn't Ruffle Easily

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — "He's just like a comfortable old shoe," said one close associate.

Added another: "I wish he would take more time in preparing his statements. He just comes out and says what he thinks. Some day his honesty is going to get him in trouble."

There's nothing devious, formal or pontifical about 66-year-old Philip O. Krumm, the grandfatherly, little-known Midwest industrialist who has taken over the job of trying to lead the U.S. Olympic Committee through its greatest crisis.

Bombs are exploding and arrows are flying all around him but the new president of the USOC seems to remain unruffled.

"We can solve our problems," he says quietly.

Few people outside the Olympic Committee itself or the speed skating buffs around West Allis, Wis., ever heard of him until he was suddenly thrust into the most important post in American amateur sports.

"If people thought they were getting a country bumpkin or just another establishment figurehead they're going to be surprised," a high-ranking USOC committeeman said. "This is a man of action."

When he took over the USOC reins here over the weekend, Krumm immediately sprang into action. He began infusing the old, doddering and complacent committee with fresh, new blood by tapping athletes. He set about organizing a watchdog board of prominent businessmen. He started sewing stitches in the breaches with the press and public.

"First of all, we've got to improve our public image," he said.

Krumm is an imposing six-footer with graying hair, a prominent nose and piercing blue eyes. He talks in low, modulated tones, rarely getting excited or ruffled.

Unlike his predecessor, Clifford Buck of Denver, who dealt in formal statements and legal terminology, Krumm tackles issues with off-the-cuff responses and everyday language.

For the present, at least, he has shown every intention of not locking himself in an isolation booth but of always being available.

He says he welcomes public criticism, competitors' beefs and scolding from the press, adding: "It keeps us on our toes."

Krumm was embarrassed when he found himself quartered in the Broadmoor Hotel's Penrose Suite, a lavishly furnished set of rooms set aside for presidents, potentates and kings.

"We're not paying for this," he apologized hastily, after settling down for the USOC convention. "The Broadmoor owner, Thayer Tutt, put me here." If it could be rented, the suite probably would cost $300 a night.

When Suzy Chaffee, the skier, arrived on the scene armed with petitions urging a restructured Olympic committee, Krumm didn't hide under the bed or call out the militia. He put her on the team.

The next thing he'll probably do is invite the militant, outspoken Olga Connolly over for a cup of tea.

Krumm has started out his administration as an eager listener, a peacemaker and a doer.

In announcing a special 18-member committee adjunct composed of athletes, the USOC executive said: "...and they're not to be picked by a bunch of old men."

Modernization, efficiency, elimination of freeloaders and open communication are the new president's stated goals.

Krumm is a successful manufacturers' representative in Kenosha, Wis., and a former president of Niles Cabinet Co. and the Nilescraft Cabinet Co. He is engaged in housing development in Colorado.

Educated in Chicago and Austria, he now lives with his second wife, Dorothy, on a 200-acre farm where he raises dogs and horses and is active in hunting and fishing. His first wife, the mother of his three children, died in 1969.

Although active in football, basketball, tennis and golf in his younger years, Krumm's main love is speedskating. He was largely responsible for the construction of the 400-meter refrigerated speedskating rink at West Allis, the only such rink in the United States.

Ange, Jones Continue To Hold Scoring Lead In Area Cage Play

Dwight Ange of Williamston and Sylvia Jones of Oak City continue to dominate the socring in the Pitt-Martin-Green area this weekend.

Ange leads the boys' scoring with a 17.0 average, while Miss Jones is the top girl scorer with a 17.7 mark.

In the boys' scoring race, Robersonville's Ernest Crandall moved past McCoy Williams of Farmville Central for second place, averaging 15.9. Williams is now third at 15.8.

While there were a number of switches throughout the rest of the list (only two held their position), the biggest leap upward came from Jamesville's Horace Hall, who jumped from 14th to eighth with a 13.3. average. The biggest drop was also recorded by a Jamesville player as Larry Modlin tumbled from 15th to 20th, with an 11.0 average.

Two new faces appear this week, both from Oak City, which came on strong to win the Martin County Conference. They are 15th ranked Russell Cotten, 11.7, and 18th place Billy Green, 11.1.

In offense, Jamesville replaced Conley atop the pile with a 67.2 average. Conley fell to second place with a 62.4 mark. The next three teams maintained their positions.

Defensively, Ayden-Grifton remained on top with a 47.9 average, while Greene Central is still second, 48.3,. Williamston fell from a tie for second to fourth, while North Pitt moved up to third.

In winning margin, Ayden-Grifton continued to lead with a 12.5 points per game victory cushion. Greene Central is next at 9.3.

The Chargers, along with Conley and Greene Central are deadlocked for the best record, each with 16-4 marks.

The biggest jump in the girls' scoring was made by Elaine Forrest of Robersonville, who leaped from fifth to second with a 12.9 average. Minnie Hollis of North Pitt dropped a place to third, 12.6, as did Sissy Taylor, Williamston, 11.8.

Offensively, defensively, in winning margin and in record, North Pitt, unbeaten now through 74 games, ranks as the best. They are averaging 51.3 points a game and allowing 27.2, a difference of 24.3 points a game. Their record this year is now 19-0.

In offense, they are followed by Ayden-Grifton, 47.5, and in defense by Williamston, 31.7. Ayden-Grifton also is next in winning margin, 13.9. Both Ayden-Grifton and Williamston have the second best record, 16-3.

The Eastern Carolina Conference Basketball Tournament, scheduled to get underway Monday at Ayden-Grifton High School, remained somewhat of a question mark due to heavy snowfall in the area over the weekend.

Four special playoff games between teams seven through 10 were to have been played Saturday night, but were postponed. This may force the elimination of some of these teams without play.

Under current schedule, all tournament play must be completed by Saturday, and no team may play more than three games a week. The last four teams would have to play four to reach the finals, and under state rules, cannot enter a tournament if they are involved in such circumstances.

Charles Adams, assistant to Simon Terrell, executive secretary of the North Carolina High School Athletic Association, told the Daily Reflector Saturday that as of that time, there were no plans to delay play in the district and state tournaments, scheduled for the weeks of February 19 and 26. All conference tournaments must be completed therefore by this Saturday.

"We'll really have to wait until around Monday to make a decision," Adams said. "But unless there is no other way to avoid it, we'll want to continue the schedule as it is. Conferences will have to figure out some way of their own to get their tournaments over with unless we do make a change."

Adams added that the NCHSAA did not want to move back a week since that would put it in competition with the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball tournament, wrecking any hopes of a decent gate for the high school fields.

William Wiggins, principal of Ayden-Grifton High School, and director of the ECC tournament, said that a meeting would be held sometime Sunday to try and work out arrangements for the tournament. Among those plans will be the setting of the pairings for the tournament, which include a multiplicity of ties.

In the boys' standings, only seventh through 10th places have been decided. A four-way tie exists for first between Ayden-Grifton, D.H. Conley, Greene Central and Eastern Wayne. North Lenoir and Charles B. Aycock are tied for fifth with 8-10 records. These ties will be broken at the meeting.

Under original arrangements, Farmville Central, the seventh place finisher, was to host Southern Wayne, the 10th place team, in one playoff game, while North Pitt, eighth, was to host Southern Nash, ninth, in the other.

The two winners would advance into the eight-team field. Now, however, it is uncertain whether these games will be played. Unless the entire state program is set back prior to Monday evening, a coin toss or an elimination of some type would have to be made to determine these last two spots.

In the girls' pairings, there are also several ties. North Pitt, unbeaten, claimed the top seeding, while Ayden-Grifton and Southern Wayne tied for second. Charles B. Aycock gained the fourth place seeding, with Eastern Wayne fifth and Southern Nash sixth. Conley and North Lenoir tied for seventh, while Farmville Central and Greene Central were ninth and tenth, respectively.

Again here, there were to have been a Saturday night playoff for the bottom two spots in the tournament, and if the playoffs continue as planned, some arrangement would have to decide these two besides a game.

If the tournament gets underway, Monday's games would see North Pitt's girls facing the eighth place team, in the opening game. The first place boys team would meet the eighth place finisher in the second game, while Aycock's girls take on Eastern Wayne in the third contest.

Tuesday, the fourth and fifth place boys teams meet at 6 p.m., followed by the second and seventh girls and the second and seventh boys.

Wednesday, the third and sixth boys and the third and sixth girls meet, followed by the winners in the upper (1-8-4-5) bracket in the boys. The remaining semi-final games would be played Thursday, with the two finals on Friday.

The tournament could be delayed an additional day, and get underway Tuesday without upsetting anything, concluding on Saturday.

But it will all depend on the outcome of Sunday's ECC meeting, and Monday's decisions by the NCHSAA.

Palmer In A Charge

PALM DESERT, Calif. (AP) — Arnold Palmer, seeking an end to the longest victory famine of his storied career, ripped four strokes off par and charged into a tie with Jack Nicklaus for the lead midway through the fourth round of the $160,000 Bob Hope Desert Golf Classic Saturday.

Palmer, who hasn't won since August of 1971, made the turn in 32 at the Bermuda Dunes Country Club and had a 63-hole total of 238, 14 under par for the tournament.

Nicklaus, who led or shared the lead through the first three rounds of this five-day, 90-hole event spread over four desert courses, was out in 33 and also had a 238 total with nine holes to go in the fourth round.

Young Allen Miller, tied with Nicklaus at the end of Friday's third round, was among the last to get away in the mild, cloudy weather. He had a 54-hole total of 205, 11 under par. Veteran Gay Brewer, at 206 after three rounds, also had a late starting time.

Johnny Miller, no relation to Allen, barged into contention with a blazing, five-under-par 31 on the front nine at Tamarisk. That gave him a 63-hole score of 241, 11 under par and just three back of the leaders.

He was tied, at that point, with lanky John Schlee, the surprise winner of the Hawaiian Open last week. Schlee was out in 34 at Indian wells, also for a 241 total.

Billy Casper turned in 35 for 244, with Jim Wiechers and Charles Coody at 245. Coody and Wichers each played the front nine in 33.

Rookie Among Triton Picks

By BLOYS BRITT
AP Auto Racing Writer

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Ron Hutcherson, a rookie on the big speedways, and a pair of veterans who don't know when to quit are favored Sunday in the Royal Triton 300 mile stock car race.

Hutcherson, 29, of Keokuk, Iowa, has the pole position for the start of the $35,000 event for Auto Racing Club of America (ARCA) drivers at Daytona International Speedway.

Hutcherson, ARCA's driving champion last year, qualified a Ford at 181.265 miles per hour, almost three m.p.h. faster than the best of the remaining 39 starters.

His chief competition is expected to come from Charles "Red" Farmer, the other front row sitter in a Ford, and two previous winners of the Royal Triton, Iggy Katona, 52, and Andy Hampton, 44.

Farmer, who qualified at 177.493 m.p.h., is a three-time national sports car champion from Hueytown, Ala., and a veteran of many races over the Daytona high banks.

Katona, of Willis, Mich., won the event three years ago after setting an all-time ARCA lap record of 190.373 m.p.h. for the big tri-oval. He starts sixth in Sunday's race in a Dodge.

Farther back in the lineup is Hampton, winner of the 1969 and 1972 races. The Louisville, Ky., veteran switched to a new Chevrolet and had trouble getting used to it. He qualified poorly at 162.716 m.p.h., but said he'd have the car up to snuff by race time.

Drivers who regularly campaign the ARCA trail in the Midwest usually run half mile or smaller ovals. But starters like Leonard Blanchard of Louisville, in a Mercury, and Robert "Paddle-foot" Wales of Pleasant Grove, Ala., not only have the speed to win but have considerable big track experience.

Katona set the 300-mile race record when he won at 152.488 m.p.h. in 1970. Hampton's speed last year was just over 131 m.p.h.

Bucks Zip By Warriors

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Milwaukee Bucks exploded for 72 points in the first half, 22 by Bob Dandridge, and rolled to a 135-108 National Basketball Association victory over the Golden State Warriors Saturday.

Dandridge finished with 36 points, while Kareem Abdul-Jabbar added 28 and Lucius Allen 25 for the Bucks, who were coming off a 21 point victory over defending champion Los Angeles Friday night.

The Bucks twice opened 11 point leads in the first quarter, then saw Golden State rally behind Rick Barry to close to within 42-38 less than 10 minutes before halftime.

But Milwaukee outscored the Warriors 12-2 the last three minutes of the half for a 72-52 lead.

The Bucks used a devastating fast break to record a .647 shooting percentage in the first half.

Cazzie Russell poured in six points as the Warriors cut their deficit to 76-63 early in the third period. However, Dandridge and Abdul-Jabbar each scored two field goals as the Bucks ran off eight straight points to boost their lead to 21 points.

The Bucks ran off another string moments later, this one of 12 straight points, for a 96-69 lead with 3½ minutes left in the period.

Minnesota, OSU Have No Incident

By GEORGE STRODE
Associated Press Sports Writer

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ron Behagen contributed 33 points Saturday, leading Minnesota to an emotional, nationally-televised Big Ten basketball victory over Ohio State, 80-78.

Behagen, a 6-foot-10 senior from New York City, was one of two Minnesota players suspended for the season after a bloody game-ending brawl last year between the two rivals.

This time, however, the game between the fifth-ranked Gophers and the Buckeyes was played without incident before a sellout crowd of 13,489.

Ohio State's Luke Witte, hospitalized after last year's melee, poured in a season-high 25 points and grabbed 11 rebounds before fouling out with more than four minutes to go.

Corky Taylor of Minnesota, the other player suspended last year, played briefly and scored two points.

Mark Wagar, of Ohio State, also hospitalized after the brawl Jan. 25, 1972, did not play this time.

Minnesota outscored the Buckeyes 14-2 in one stretch of the second half for a 56-48 margin and led the rest of the way.

The Gophers sank six straight foul shots in the last two minutes to put the game out of reach.

Minnesota pushed its record to 15-2. The Gophers are 5-2 in the Big Ten.

Early Edition

Weather conditions in the Greenville area forced an early deadline for this morning's paper.

Because of this, all activities from Saturday night do not appear in the Sunday paper as usual. These include the East Carolina - Appalachian basketball game, the Atlantic Seaboard Interscholastic Swimming and Diving Championships; and the North-South Doubleheader in Charlotte, as well as other stories.

These will be covered in Monday's edition of The Daily Reflector.

Several area competitions were also postponed by the weather. These include the Division II wrestling tournament in Goldsboro, and the first round playoffs of the Eastern Carolina Conference tournament.

Farmville Central Nips North Pitt

By CHIP LAMBETH
Reflector Sports Writer

BETHEL — Phil Lewis connected on a long jump shot with three seconds left to play against North Pitt Friday night to cap a last quarter rally and giveFarmville Central a 44-43 come-from-behind win.

It was a battle of the cats Friday as the Jaguars and the Morth Pitt Panthers went at it tooth and claw. The Panthers had had the upper hand most of the game, however, and at several points in the game led by as much as nine points.

But the tide turned when Melvin Bunch sank a free throw for Farmville Central with 4:17 left in final frame and the Jags added three field goals for the first lead they had in the game.

The North Pitt girls, having sewn up the Eastern Carolina Confernce championship last Tuesday with a rout of D.H. Conley, finished their perfect season with a 65-30 stitching of the Lady Jaguars.

The Pant-HERS took the lead in the opening basket of then game by Phyllis Jenkins. She added another long jumper from outside and Minnie Hollis followed from the corner to make it 6-0. A free throw by Joy James and another bucket by Jenkins made it 9-0 before the Farmville Central girls finally hit. Dewanda Davis broke the ice for the Lady Jags, sinking a jumper from the corner but Wanda Whichard dumped in five quick points to make it 14-2. Cynthia Barrett canned a free shot to round out the period's scoring.

The Big Orange rolled up 15 more points in the second quarter to Farmville Central's eight for a 29-11 halftime lead.

The Pant-HERS tripled the Lady Jaguars' points in the third period, 15-5, for a 44-16 lead and finished the game off with 21 in the last frame for the 65-30 score.

Jenkins had one of her best nights of the season as she poured in 21 points. James had 15 and Whichard added 13.

The Panther boys inched in front for a 4-0 lead half-way through the first period. The Jags tied it up but were never again close until the last quarter. North Pitt started to warm up and moved out to a nine point spread, 23-14 at the half.

In the third quarter, the Jaguars started to hack away at the led but each time they got close, the Panthers would pull away. Then mid-way through the last period, Bunch made the four-point play and things started going wild as the lead changed hands three times before Lewis won it for the Jags.

Ben Johnson put North Pitt on the Boards first with a 20-foot jumper and David Brown followed with a score from the top of the circle. Bunch finally broke the cover on the Farmville Central goal with 3:42 left in the first quarter cutting it to 4-2. Ed Wells tied it up on a swish from the corner, 4-4.

That was the closest the Jaguars came to getting the lead as Phillip Brown put the Panthers back in front on a jumper from the stripe and the quarter ended with that score, 6-4.

Two baskets by David Brown opened things up for the Panthers but Lee Johnson tapped in a rebound to bring the Jags back to with-in four, 10-6. Johnson hit for North Pitt, 12-6. The points were matched by Farmville Central's Johnson on a pair of free shots, 12-8.

North Pitt then reeled off five points: a free shot by David Brown, and a pair of field goals, one each by Billy Perkins and Johnson, for a nine point gap, 17-8.

Both teams added six points in the rest of the half and at intermission the score stood at 23-14.

North Pitt and Farmville Central matched points for the first half of the third period before the Jags narrowed the gap to five, 29-24 on buckets by McCoy Williams and Bunch. Perkins hit for the Panthers but Lewis countered from his corner, 31-26, with 1:27 left in the period.

Again Perkins lifted the Panthers back out by seven, 33-26 but Wells blasted a shot through as the horn sounded to cut the gap back down to five, 33-28.

Perkins, on a hot streak, scored again for North Pitt to open the last period. Williams hit from outside for Farmville Central getting the points back. Johnson and Perkins each scored around a bucket by Williams and with 4:39 to play, North Pitt led, 39-32.

But with 4:17 left, Bunch drew an offensive foul from Perkins and made both of a one-and-one and then added two more points on a layup after a steal pulling the Jags up to with-in three, 39-36. Lewis scored from 15 feet cutting the lead to one and with 2:05 left, Bunch dumped in a short jumper from the left of the lane giving Farmville Central the lead, 40-39.

It went right back to North Pitt, however, as Phillip Brown popped a basket in from outside only to see it matched by a corner shot by Lewis with 1:32 left. David Brown put the lead back into Panther hands scoring on a steal with 1:05 to play, 43-42.

The Farmville Central chances almost went out the window a few seconds later as Bunch threw the ball out of bounds. They got the ball back, however as Phillip Brown was charged with a foul. The free shot was missed but the Jags came down with the rebound. They worked it around to Lewis in the corner and he slipped it through with :03 to play and the Jags had the win.

North Pitt tried a long pass downcourt on the in-bounds play but it was over everybody's head. That gave it to Farmville Central with one second on the clock.

Bunch led the scoring with 18 and Williams added 10 for the Jags. David Brown and Perkins each had 14 for North Pitt.

The game was won at the foul line. Out of seven chances, the Jaguars made four. The Panthers only made one in three trips to the line. That was the difference as the Panthers had sunk one more field goal than did Farmville Central, 21-20.

Conley Edges Southern Wayne

DUDLEY — D.H. Conley moved into at least a two-way tie and maybe a four-way tie for first place in the Eastern Carolina Conference Friday night as the Vikings struggled past the Saints of Southern Wayne.

The Southern Wayne girls bopped the Valkyries, 35-21. There was no J.V. game.

The Lady Saints moved out to a 7-3 advantage in the opening frame and never had any trouble. They added seven more in the second quarter for a 14-7 lead at the half.

The third quarter saw the Lady Saints add 10 as the Valkyries got six. Conley took the last quarter, 8-4, but it did not affect the lead.

Phyllis Thompson and Diane Howell each had 10 for the Lady Saints.

The Vikings had problems with the Southern Wayne boys who hung on the whole way. Conley did get out to as much as a ten-point lead at one stage but the Saints struggled back to make things hot for the Vikings.

Conley forged in front in the opening frame, 12-9 and added three points to their lead in the second quarter for a 26-20 margin at halftime.

Southern Wayne cut it by two in the third quarter as they took the period 14-12. They kept fighting and with 2:00 to play, Southern Wayne had cut the lead to three. Vikings Clennell Streeter sank a pair of free throws to put Conley back out by five and that was the way it stood as the teams traded baskets until the end of the game.

Danny Pearsall led the scoring with 22 and Murray had 14. For the Vikings Rick Mobley had 20, and Buddy Phillips had 15.

The win closes out the regular season for the Vikings.

Ayden-Grifton Drops Aycock

PIKEVILLE — Ayden-Grifton's Chargers finished their season off with a 51-41 victory over Charles B. Aycock High School Friday night to end the year in the four-way tie for first. The Chargerettes won their game, 41-38, to tie for second place.

The Chargers ended up with a 14-4 record, tieing with Eastern Wayne, Greene Central and Conley for the regular season title.

But they had their hands full with the Golden Falcons before breaking it open in the final period. Ayden-Grifton eased out into a 13-10 lead in the first period of play, and then outshot Aycock, 10-8 in the second. That made it 23-18 at halftime.

In the third quarter, however, the two battled neck and neck, both throwing in 14 points. That advanced the score to 37-32. In the last period, the Chargers outhit Aycock, 14-9, to pull out to their final 10-point spread.

Melvin Stewart led Ayden-Grifton with 15 points, while Travis Woods had 11. For Aycock, Thurman Hobbs had 18 and Arthur Stafford had 10.

In the girls' game, Ayden-Grifton got only six in the first period, but that doubled Aycock. The Chargerettes came back with a 16-12 advantage in the third quarter cutting the lead to 32-25. They outhit Ayden-Grifton again, 13-9, but couldn't quite catch up.

Terry Wooten had 13 points to pace Ayden-Grifton and was the game's only double figure scorer.

Greene Central Goes Two Overtimes To Win

WHEAT SWAMP — Greene Central High School held onto at least a fourth of first place in the Eastern Carolina Conference Friday night with a 46-44 double overtime victory over North Lenoir. The North Lenoir lassies won their game, 38-31.

Int the girls' contest, North Lenoir slipped out into a 4-3 lead after the first period. Then, in the second quarter, the Lady Hawks continued to pull away, outscoring the Ewes, 10-4. That gave North Lenoir a 14-7 halftime advantage.

Greene put on a rally in the second quarter, pushing through 13 while holding Lenoir to 10. That cut the lead to 24-20. But Lenoir came up with a 14-11 final period advantage, holding on to the lead for the win.

N. Burney led the North Lenoir scoring with 13, while D. Lee had 11 and Pam Nobles had 10. Jackie McLawhorn had 10 for Greene.

In the boys' game, North Lenoir had its eyes on a upset, powering out to a 16-9 lead in the first quarter. The Rams came back on them in the second frame, 13-7, but still trailed by a point at halftime, 23-22.

In the third period, it remained close, with North Lenoir outpointing the Rams, 9-8 for a 32-20 edge. With about two minutes left in the game, however, the Rams hit to tie it at 40-40, and the Hawks elected to hold the ball for the final shot. But as the game neared the end, the Rams got a steal, but were called for a three-second violation with three seconds left and neither team got off a shot.

In the first of the overtimes, North Lenoir controlled the tap, and went into the freeze again. They kept this up the entire period, finally getting off a shot with 10 seconds left. They missed, got the rebound, and missed again just before the horn as Greene never got its hands on the ball.

But in the second overtime, after the Hawks had again controlled the tap, Ervin Spivey stole the ball for the Rams and scored with 2:24 left. Then, with 1:11 left, Stevie Williamson got another steal and hit two free throws. North Lenoir got a basket to tighten it up again, but with 11 seconds left, Moses Barron hit two more from the line to sew it up for the Rams, 46-42. The Hawks got one more basket as time ran out.

Barron led the Ram scoring with 19, while Spivey had 12. Ray Jones led Lenoir with 11 and Gary Battle had 10.

Robersonville Gains Win Over Jamesville

ROBERSONVILLE — Robersonville closed out its regular season Friday night with a 66-61 victory over Jamesville. After a cold start, the Golden Eagles came on to finish with a record good enough to get them second place in the standings.

The Bullets, in losing their eighth game of the season, take third place. The Robersonville girls, having already taken the championship of the Martin County Conference, dumped the Jamesville ladies, 42-26. The loss throws the Lady Bullets into a tie with Bear Grass but the Jamesville girls will take third in the upcoming tournament by their having beaten Bear Grass twice.

Starting out the night, the Robersonville J.V.'s won the opener, 63-43.

The Lady Eagles took the lead in the first quarter of the girls' game as they inched out by 13-6. Jamesville came back in the second period, 11-5 to pull with-in a point at the half, 18-17.

Robersonville got some breathing room in the third quarter as they scored 10 to 4 for Jamesville. Robersonville added 14 in the last period for the win. Jamesville scored five in the fourth quarter.

Donna Williams had 11 for Jamesville and Elaine Forrest had 21 for Robersonville. Brenda James added 12 for the Lady Eagles.

Jamesville slipped out to a 13-9 lead in the first quarter of the boys' game but the Eagles dumped in 26 points to move into a 35-23 lead at intermission.

Jamesville got hot in the third quarter and poured through 24 points to cut the gap to 49-47. Robersonville managed to hang on and bettered Jamesville by three points in the last quarter, 17-14, for the win.

Horace Hall and Gurkin Martin led the losers with 14 each and Alvin Grimes added 12. Jeffery Spruill led all scorers with 20 and Ernest Crandall dumped in 18 more for the Eagles.

In the girls' game, Williamston eased out into a 10-8 lead in the first period, but the Lady Scots came roaring back to outhit them, 10-4, in the second frame. That left the Tigerettes behind at intermission, 18-14.

Publications Are Helpful

By JACK WOLISTON

NEW YORK (UPI) — One of the least known sources of excellent, inexpensive publications of interest to recreational boaters is the U.S. Government Printing Office.

The titles available include books and pamphlets by the Navy, Coast Guard and other government agencies on boating, navigation, electronics, safety and other related topics.

Many of these publications were prepared at considerable expense by some of the best experts in their fields and their cost, when compared with equivalent, commercially available texts, represents a good bargain.

Prices range from as little as 5 cents for a pamphlet, "Safety Tips, in, on and Around Water," up to as much as $7.25 for the "U.S. Navy Diving Manual," a book which explains general principles of self-contained and surface-supplied diving, first aid, emergency procedures and diving accesories.

There is a "World Port Index" for $1.50 which gives locations and descriptions of maritime ports with references to appropriate sailing directions and charts.

Some other titles include "Navitation Compendium," "Navigation Dictionary," "Shipboard Electronic Equipment," "The Skipper's Course," "American Practical Navigator," "Troubleshooting and Repair of Radio Equipment," "Marine Crewman's Handbook."

The Handbook provides information on small boat and ship handling, piloting, towing, basic construction of small ships, emergency procedures, communications, rules of the road, and a glossary of nautical terms.

Altogether, there are more than 70 of these publications available from the U.S. Government Printing Office.

Anyone can obtain a list of these boating and boating-related publications by writing the USGPO, Public Documents Department, Washington, D.c.

Any citizen may also request to have his name placed on the USGPO's mailing list to receive a free copy of the biweekly bulletin, "Selected U.S. Government Publications," which advises the reader of some of the latest and most popular publications available.

There is also a commercial firm, Technical Information Services, P.O. Box 24A34, Los Angeles 90024, which offers for 50 cents a selected list of government publications relating to boating, along with an order form.

Seen at the National Boat Show: A $4,000 "gadget" called a Thruster which gives a boat the capability of slipping in and out of tight spots, sideways, even against strong winds and currents. The Thruster, a diverter valve, fits into the bilge and pumps seawater by way of a hole in the bottom of the hull through apertues in the hull sides. Over 1,000 gallons per minute of jet-thrusting power can accommodate boats up to 100 feet.

POTHOLE BLASTING — Dynamiting of potholes in shallow marshes is one method used by Ducks Unlimited to increase waterfowl production. About 30 feet in diameter and deep enough to retain water throughout the nesting season, they are located at selected points in the marsh. Such potholes provide additional shoreline and open water area to a project, attracting more pairs of ducks to nest.

Wildlife Afield: Winter Trout Season Comes Roaring Into State

By JIM DEAN

Winter Trout "R" In Season

The windshield wipers were clacking wildly and gusts of wind-blown rain shook the truck as I headed west across the state. Every creek and river was an angry red torrent flecked with dirty foam, many of them already out of their banks into fields and pastures.

Muddy water swirled through the low woods and spilled out over lawns and parking lots. In some places, the hungry currents were already lapping at the edges of shopping centers and homes. It would get worse. And it will happen again and again until people finally realize that construction in flood plains is bad business — not to mention dangerous.

Ironically, I was headed west to test the N.C. Wildlife Resource Commission's new winter trout season on "native" and "trophy" trout streams. Twenty-four stretches of streams in western North Carolina are currently open to mountain trout fishing under special regulations that permit anglers to keep one trout per day. Rainbows or brown trout must be at least 16 inches long, and brook trout must be at least 12 inches long to be legal. On the 23 "native" streams, anglers may use either flies or singlephook artificial lures, while on the four "trophy" streams, only flies are permitted.

The idea is to give hardy anglers a chance to fish even during the winter months without harming populations of wild trout in these streams.

I was not sure what I was going to find when I reached the mountains. In 1940, a massive flood had washed away entire towns in the area I hoped to fish. One obvious reason — well documented by old photos — is that the whole watershed in 1940 has been stripped of its timber in a massive clearcut. There was nothing to hold back the water, and logging camps, mills and cabins along the river disappeared in a mighty flume of water.

But this time, it was different. The mountains are again reforested in this watershed, and when I arrived at the creek, the water level presented no threat. It was high and roily, but already dropping quickly.

By the following morning, it was even possible to fish. The water was still much higher than normal, but it was a long way from being muddy.

At mid-day, fortified with several cups of strong, hot coffee, several of us ventured out into the raw cold. Overhead, snow clouds passed, but occassionally the sun broke through.

Wading carefully, we fished about a half mile of stream. Two of us — including yours truly — caught no fish. The third angler, Fred Bahnson, Jr., of Winston-Salem, had slightly better luck. Having fished the big western rivers for years, he had brought some large, heavily-weighted nymphs — the type you rarely see in this part of the country. He took two nice browns before our need for coffee and a warm fire eclipsed our passion for fishing.

Winter trout fishing is admittedly a "chancy" proposition, but it can often be productive. When the water is high and off-color, large nymphs like those Fred used will often bring action — even when the water is extremely cold. It was 42 degrees when he caught his fish.

On warmer winter days when the water is clear and the flow more normal, even dry flies will take fish. Although I have done very little winter trout fishing, I can report that standard dry fly patterns often produce. There are also occasional hatches of small dark caddis and stoneflies, and patterns that match these should be even better. On most days, however, big weighted nymphs and streamer patterns will take more fish, particularly when streams hhave a full head of water.

Between now and the traditional opening day of the trout season on April 1 (when the 1,600 miles of "general" trout streams open), you can have some fun on warm winter days. And you won't have much competition from other fishermen either.

Nature Trails In Greenville — A Beginning

EVERYTHING YOU'VE WANTED TO KNOW .... about cypress knees is explained to Sandy Crump by Rob Schulze. The cypress knee between them is one of the larger ones in the area.

A TANGLE OF VINES .... are suspended between two trees before climbing far up to the top of a tall tree.

CLEARING THE TRAIL OF OBSTACLES .... is as much a part of the work as labeling trees, plants and vines. Mike O'Connor cuts a small dead tree laying across the path.

For several years recommendations and suggestions have been legion. The Recreation Commission, the City Council, non-government groups and interested citizens have all periodically conducted talk sessions on the need for some type of nature trail or nature park in Greenville.

Now, as the red flowers of maple trees herald the first days of spinrg ahead, something other than talking about the possibility is taking place in Greenville.

In a joint effort, the Greenville City School system and interested faculty and students at East Carolina University have launched a project just behind Wahl-Coates Elementary School adjoining Green Springs Park that may be the answer to what many have expressed a desire for in Greenville.

School's Standpoint

"From our standpoint it will be a combined classroom-nature trail project," Dr. Rexford E. Piner, principal of Wahl-Coates School said. "I find the idea exciting, one with great potential not only for Wahl-Coates, but the children in every school in the city."

Dr. Cleet C. Cleetwood, superintendent of Greenville City Schools, said the project has approval both of the Wahl-Coates Advisory Committee and the ECU Professional Advisory Committee. The latter committee coordinates and approves joint city school-ECU ventures.

Dr. Piner spoke of his amazement about the variety of plant life in the area. "It's fascinating to me," he remarked, "to discover that there's all kinds of growth. Moss, cypress knees, a regular jungle of vines and even many forms of life in the streams in the area."

Community Project

Dr. Mike O'Connor, a young associate professor in Geology at East Carolina University, who is coordinating the project, stresses this needs to be a community project.

"It should be a combination of efforts on the part of a lot of people." O'Connor stated, "This trail may be the first step to a number of nature trails in Greenville. There's several places in town ideal for nature trails."

O'Connor also notes "this nature trail is tied in with a state-wide effort to form an environmental studies curriculum. Within the state," he said, "plans are underway to establish a North Carolina Environmental Information-Education network which will encourage programs of this nature."

Dr. Myron Caspar, an associate professor at ECU in the Chemistry Department, is another ECU faculty actively at work on the project. Emphasizing the do-it-yourself aspects of the trail, Dr. Caspar said, "It's less a matter of spending moeny and more one of getting people to help."

"Our role, " O'Connor said of student and faculty volunteers from ECU, "is primarily one of people with information in identifying and labeling tress, plants, and vines in the area."

Actually, the ECU contingent is giving more than their knowledge of nature to the project. They are proving to be equally proficient in wielding ax and shovel as in providing identification for plants and trees.

Half-Mile Trail

The trail under construction is about one-half mile long. It begins at the southwest corner of the Wahl-Coates property, winds south to Green Mill Run, along the run for a short distance, then through a short span of woods, north-eastward along the edge of the school's playfield, and then goes back into the woods into a typical swampy area.

"At this point," O'Connor stopped to point to a five foot ridge, "it would be good to put a pit here where children could dig." He said the land formation in this area is Yorktown, a shell bed type of the Miocene age, dating back about 20 million years. With a pit to dig in, children could experience the excitement of uncovering shells, sharks teeth and other evidences of bygone eras.

Further along the trail, already marked by tabs of bright gold yellow plastic, Rob Schulze, an ECU student majoring in Parks, Recreation and Conservation, talked about ways to span a small running stream that empties into Green Mill Run.

"All we need here is a simple foot bridge," Rob remarked. "Little streams like this give people a good chance to observe water at high and low levels, and all the changes that take place."

Rob has had practical experience in this type of planning. He worked with the City of Rocky Mount in creating the Children's Museum nature trail.

Miss Sandy Crump, another ECU student volunteer working on the trail project, expressed delight that the trail leads to the Green Mill Run. At the point of juncture, the water rushes by swiftly, the opposite bank of tangle of reeds, vines and trees.

Where the trail follows the curve of the playfield, several old cypresses soar above surrounding rees—tall, straight, majestic.

Scenic Spot

"This is one of the most scenic spots on the trail," O'Connor remarked, leading the way where the trail enters an area of black squishy mud pockmarked by crayfish tunnels

Only a few feet inside the woods, cypress knees grow, their sculptured forms like miniature cathedrals.

Nearby, huge dark green vines, spiral skyward, cling ing to trees.

Minimum Changes

One major point of concern in planning this trail is to keep necessary physical changes at a minimum, to let the natural growth and nature's seasonal changes have the upper hand

"All we want to do," O'Connor said, "is to trim branches, clear dead logs from the path, and span the stream with a foot bridge. Otherwise, we hope things will remain untouched, in its natural stage."

He and Caspar said a number of ECU faculty had long been advocating nature trails in the few remaining natural areas left in Greenville.

They mentioned Dr. Stanley Riggs in geology, Dr. Vince Bellis, biology, Dr. Ralph Steele, recreation, and Dr. Carol Hampton, science education as typical of those actively interested in this and similar nature projects.

"We hope to interest Norman Keller (ECU sculptor instructor) in having his students design something that would fit in with the natural landscape," O'Connor stated.

Local assistance

O'Connor and Caspar related that there was already widespread interest on the part of local merchants to help in the work to be done. "We can use more help from such sources," O'Connor said. Some of the materials needed are sawdust, rough lumber, and creosoted posts.

"Until the work is completed," Caspar added, "we can use volunteer manpower and the loan of trucks."

When the project is finished, it is hoped to have a box at the beginning of the trail. "In this box," Dr. Piner said, "Would be brochures people could use that would describe the high points on the trail and describe plant life to be found along the trail."

From the viewpoint of the city schools, an outgrowth of the nature trail would be a study curriculum designed to cover nature in the area.

Ideas for the curriculum include preparation of color slides, tape cassettes and descriptive pamphlets for the children to study. "I think we can manage the cost of a modest program like this from our school funds," Dr. Piner said. "With the professional help we have available, the only expense would be for materials."

Public Discussion

An opportunity for citizens to hear more about this pioneering nature trail in Greenville, and to express their own ideas on the project will be the next PTA meeting at Wahl-Coates. On Thursday night, the primary subject of the PTA meeting will be the nature trail.

Given the numerous expressions of interest from a wide spectrum of citizens in Greenville in past years, and the positive start on the nature trail behind Wahl-Coates, chances are good that 1973 might be the year that nature trails might become a reality rather than a subject for wishful thinking.

The Earl Scruggs Review Here Friday

On Friday night at 8:00 p.m. in Wright Auditorium, the Earl Scruggs Revue — famed banjo picker Earl and his troupe of fellow musicians — will be on hand for a concert of music that combines cowboys and longhairs.

North Carolina native Scrugg — he was born in Cleveland County in the foothills of the Great Smoky Mountains, has had a long and successful career with the banjo.

From TV's Beverly Hillbillies to the music used throughout the Award Winning Motion Picture Bonnie And Clyde, from Carnegie Hall to the nation's college campuses, from the World Famed Grand Ole Opry to the Newport Folk Festival or the Avalon Ballroom... Earl Scruggs and his five-string banjo have cut across the boundaries of age, culture and persuasion and drawn together the hearts of a people.

Scruggs is the unchallenged virtuoso of the five-string banjo, the one truly American Instrument. Earl did not invent it. Joel Sewwney did, in 1831. But, Earl did create a new style of playing the banjo, using three fingers in a method which added versatility and brilliance to the instrument. His style took the banjo out of the accompaniment only category, and elevated it to a leading melody voice and prime solo instrument.

Earl was born to the sound of the banjo, having had a banjo playing father and older brother. By the time Earl was six, he was adept with both banjo and guitar. He first played before an audience at a fiddler's convention. He walked all the way from his farm home at Flint Hill, North Carolina to the contest with his banjo on his back. He won first place over a field of adults.

Earl first banjo instrumental "Foggy Mountain Breakdown" written in 1948, and first recorded by him in 1950, ironically won a Grammy Award in 1969 after being used throughout Warren Beatty's award winning motion picture, "Bonnie And Clyde". Also in 1969, it became the best seller in the Country Record Charts. The song has now been recorded by more than twenty different artists.

An article in a recent issue of the New York Times called attention to "the most important new trend in country and popular music brought about by the fusion of the two. The article cited three compelling reasons ...(1) Musical-The unbelievable musicianship of many country singers and instrumentalists. ...(2) Material and subject matter... (3) Sociology and humanism...the fusion of popular, folk and country streams is bound to cause new understanding and respect. Something is happening."

Tickets are now available from the Central Ticket Office, telephone 758-6378 or P.O. Box 2731. Admission price is $2.00 per person.

THE EARL SCRUGGS REVUE . . . one of the big hit groups in American music today, will be on hand to give out their own special brand of music on Friday. The concert will take place at 8:00 p.m. in Wright Auditorium.

TV Notes

NEW YORK (UPI) — The mini-series is a coming thing in network television programming. This means that a story will be spread over, say, six one-hour broadcasts, probably in successive weeks. Definitely set as such is an adaptation of Paul Gallico's novel, "The Zoo Gang," scheduled for the 1973-74 season. Stars are Brian Keith, John Mills and Lili Palmer. Noted video playwright Reginald Rose writes the first script and assists in the overall project; theme music by (Beatles) Paul McCartney and wife Linda.

ABC's air date for its version of the classic "The Man Without a Country," starring Cliff Robertson, is 8:30 p.m. April 24.

Lily Tomlin, well known to video viewers through her appearances on "Laugh-In" and other programs, will have her own television special on CBS this spring. Richard Pryor and Richard Crenna appear with the comedienne.

A new syndicated program now available is "Black Omnibus," with noted actor James Earl Jones as host of the weekly one-hour series featuring black entertainers and personalities.

During a current 10-week period, NBC is broadcasting pilot episodes of approximately half of its program development projects for the 1973-74 season. One of them will be a lead-in to a half hour comedy series, "Lady Luck," starring Valerie Perrine, an unknown until her 1972 motion picture debut in a leading role in "Slaughterhouse-Five." She plays a mysterious woman who drops in and out of people's lives, changing their luck for the better.

Whalen, White at Kate Lewis Gallery

Whiskey Bottles, Catkins; And A New Direction

. . .a Jim Whalen construction and above, a Nancy White painting

Jim Whalen's imaginative way of transforming bits and pieces of man's and nature's left-overs has tremendous appeal. This is the art of a man with talent and training. At the same time, it represents a dream fulfilment of every child or adult who has ever hoarded treasured remnants with the thought—"Someday I'll do something special with these bits." Most of us, of course, never do, either excusing our failure on lack of time or, if we're absolutely honest with ourselves, on the lack of that indefineable spark of imagination.

Bits of string, odd screws and nails, faded covers of comic books, empty whiskey bottles, foam rubber strips from packing cartons, handfuls of last year's catkins, a tiny dead snake and a bullet pitted piece of windshield—these are Whalen's raw materials.

This inventory might sound unpromising, the typical contents of a boy's pockets. When Whalen selects and puts these together, however, something mysterious and pleasing takes place. It is as if the sheddings of nature and the discards of man are orphans that the artists visualizes worthy of reincarnation into a new form of beauty.

Even the frames are cast-off pieces of wood. They are the right choice for a home to enclose these fragments.

East Carolina School of Art graduate student Whalen also includes some quietly delightful drawings in this show he shares with Nancy White at the Kate Lewis Gallery in Whichard Building on campus. Some are small studies of decorative lines on white or colored papers; others muted washes, with single cut-outs from comic books or cereal boxes.

—Nancy Croll White, a 1971 BFA graduate from the School of Art, ECU, is exhibiting a dozen newer works and half a dozen older ones seen before in Greenville in an exhibit at The Daily Reflector lounge. She has also exhibited recently in Deleware and Maryland.

The new paintings are much stronger, bolder than the earlier ones. There's visual excitement, a sense of tension where the earlier paintings conveyed more a pleasure derived primarily from loosely formed patterns of color and "search-out" drawings hidden behind the foreground shower of spattered color.

In the dozen new works, background figures are gone. Geometrical patterns and planes of color are basic elements the artist now employs.Some are evocative of patterns of cultivated fields seen from above, or the geological structure of the earth beneath the crust. One or two of the newer group still reflect lingering traces of Mrs. White's former style.

One painting, with areas of white smudged over background colors, is the one I find the most striking in the exhibit. Titled Bird, the composition does hint at a bird in flight. With its faded wines, middle browns and sage greens, highlighted by deep blue rivulets of wash, patterned into strong horizontals and a few vertical planes, it brings to mind the blunt poetry of the more vigorous of contemporary Japanese printmakers.

Mrs. White currently teaches U.S. history, English and art at St. Peters and Paul High School in Maryland. Her home is Denton, Maryland.

The Whalen-White exhibit remains on view at the Kate Lewis Gallery for another two weeks (through February 28). Individually, or as a contrast between two artists with higgly divergent viewpoints, this is a rewarding show.

Book News

From Sheppard Memorial Library

By CYNTHIA TIMM

Beginning at the North Sea and traveling to the Mediterranean, John Hillaby covered over 1300 miles on foot in 67 days. In A WALK THROUGH EUROPE Hillaby tells of his experiences in a fresh and vivid style. As a biologist, writer, and historian, the author is alert to the wildlife, the changing landscape, and the history of the countries through which he passes. His enjoyment of the outdoors is contagious as he describes the forests of Germany, the Alpine passes, or the shores of the Mediterranean. "Reading this book is a personal adventure in the company of a witty, cheerful, entertaining companion."

"Some Pygmy women have their hair on their chests...giraffe can't throw up...one ostrich egg makes enough scrambled eggs for eleven people..." These are some to the entertaining facts presented in the book ELEPHANT HAVE RIGHT OF WAY by Betty and Jock Leslie-Melville. The authors conduct camera safaris in East Africa and also lecture in the U. S. Written with wit and style, ELEPHANT HAVE RIGHT OF WAY is an account of the Leslie-Melvilles' life in Nairobi, their problems and exasperations, and their harrowing adventures. Also included are chapters on native history and customs and detailed descriptions of wildlife. A thoroughly enjoyable and informative book.

"What kind of man lies behind the myths of Richard Burton, the wild, hell-raising Welshman, the prodigious drinker, and the one-time 'Great Lover' of Hollywood?" RICHARD BURTON, VERY CLOSE UP by John Cottrell and Fergus Cashin attempts to answer this question. Tracing Burton's life from the poverty of his childhood in South Wales to his successful film career and his successful film career and his marriage to Elizabeth Taylor, RICHARD BURTON VERY CLOSE UP is the story of a remarkable man with great ambition and a zest for living. A modern "rags to riches" story filled with humor, romance, and human drama.

ALEKSANDR SOLZHENITSYN: A BIOGRAPHY by Hans Bjorkegren is a fascinating and unbiased portrait of the Soviet author and Nobel laureate. The book revelas Solzhenitsyn's refusal to change his moral convictions and his determination in facing the bitter criticism caused by the publication of ONE DAY IN THE LIFE OF IVAN DENISOVICH, a vivid description of life in a Stalinist labor camp, where Solzhenitsyn himself spent almost ten years. "The life of Aleksandr Solzehenitsyn is far more than one man's biography. It is the story of a whole generation in a continuing struggle for freedom."

Guitarist Stephen Bell In Concert Today

Stephen Bell, classical guitarist

A classical guitarist described as "young, handsome, articulate and eminently musical" will present a recital today at the North Carolina Museum of Art at 4:00 p.m.

He is Stephen Bell, one of the youngest pupils ever accepted by Andres Segovia for his masterclass in Santiago de Compostela, Spain, and by Julian Bream for a masterclass in Canada in 1969.

A self-taught folk, blues and jazz guitarist, Bell became interested in the classical guitar as a teenager and began his serious musical studies at the Mannes School of Music and privately with Leonid Bolotine.

Bell has made several concert tours across North America including appearances with the Alaska Symphony, and in Europe.

In addition to two Carnegie Recital Hall appearances he has been guitarist-in-residence at the Lenox, Mass., music festival.

When not working with the guitar, he studies karate, practices yoga, reads science fiction and collects bad jokes.

His program will include works by Falla, Villa-Lobos, Turina, Bach, Rodrigo, Tarega and Granados.

There is no admission charge for Bell's concert.

I Solisti di Zagreb on Wednesday

The world famous ensemble of 14 string players, Yugoslavia's I Solisti di Zagreb, will be in Wright Auditorium on Valentine night, Wednesday. The concert begins at 8:00 p.m.

Founded in 1954 by Radio Zagreb, this unique chamber orchestra gained international recognition with its series of appearances at the Prague, Salzburg and Dubrovnik Festivals of 1956. It is now on its tenth tour of the U.S.

The intervening years have seen I Solisti di Zagreb undertaking busier touring and performing schedules. In addition to the regular radio and television broadcasts, the ensemble tours the world. records for RCA and fulfills concert commitments in its native land.

Following its American tours in the fall of 1970, I Solisti made tours of France, West Germany, Austria, Czechoslavakia, Poland, East Germany and the U.S.S.R. during 1971 plus a series of European festivals.

In May, 1972, following the group's ninth American visit, I Solisti returned to South America for the fourth time for twenty concerts throughout the continenet. The 1972-73 season includes tours of Greece, Iran and Austria, with 20 concerts in France in December and another busy tour of the United States in early 1973.

While Bach, Vivaldi, Mozart and other earlier composers are the staples of chamber groups and receive full attention from the Zagreb soloists, the Solisti do not feel that chamber music is to be confined to compositions of centuries past. On a typical program one is likely to hear works by Bartok as well as Bach. Contemporary Yugoslavian composers, encouraged to write for the more intimate musical idiom, are continually enlarging the vast and extraordinary Solisti repertoire.

It is interesting to note that while each of the players has his own individually acquired artistic reputation, all the violin players spring from the same school, that of Vaclav Huml, whose studies have provided Yugoslavia with generations of violinists. Of further interest is the fact that I Solisti di Zagreb contains two complete string quartets, the Quartet of Radio Zagreb and the Zagreb Quartet.

Admission to the concert is by season ticket, or by single tickets at $3.00 each. Tickets are now on sale at The Central Ticket Office, telephone 758-6278 or by mail, P.O. Box 2731.

Summer Theater Auditions

Local aspirants for a place behind the footlights during the summer of 1973 will have a first chance to get a bid in for one of the roles in the upcoming East Carolina University Summer Season Theater.

Dr. Michael Hardy, general manager of the summer theater, has announced that auditions for Greenville and local area citizens will be held on Saturday beginning at 11:00 a.m. and continuing until 2:00 p.m.

Auditions will be held in McGinnis Auditorium. Plays to be produced this summer are Applause, My Fair Lady, HMS Pinafore, Company, and You're A Good Man Charlie Brown.

Hardy said that an accompanist would be furnished. However, each hopeful is required to bring his own music. Since the scheduled productions will rely heavily on ability to sing and dance, Hardy said anyone auditioning should at the very least be able to carry a tune.

Following the Saturday auditions in Greenville, additional auditions at later dates will be conducted in Florida, Washington, D.C. Chapel Hill and New York City.

If there are persons interested who cannot possibly make the Saturday date, Hardy said, they can contact Edgar Loessin at 758-6390 to discuss the possibility of alternative audition arrangements.

Business Notes

DOUBLE HONOR

Bob's TV & Appliance of Ayden has been honored by CAROLINA RETAILING magazine as Retailer of the Month for January, marking the first time a business has been selected twice for the honor by the publication. Bob's TV first received the award in May of 1971.

The magazine, one of the oldest retailing publications in the nation, pointed out that Bob Nobles, (above left), owner, started the business in 1966 as a part time venture and "built Bob's TV into a merchandising concern that is one of the largest TV and appliance sales and service centers in this area."

Nobles,,noting that employees attend all service clinics to stay up to date on service techniques, added that "about 50 per cent of the business comes from the Greenville area."

Employees are: Donnie Skinner, (above right), manager and bookkeeper; Jimmy Wingate, appliance serviceman; J. B. Henderson, John Riggs and Jim Rhinehart, all TV servicemen; Dianne Hill, secretary and bookkeeper; and James Allen Sutton and Melvin Chapman, delivery and maintenance.

Bob's TV was also honored recently with a Dealer Service Award for 1972 by Whirlpool.

JOINS CAPITAL

J.M. Brown is now associated with Capital Mobile Homes, Memorial Drive here, as a salesman.

Brown, a native of Rt. 1, Ayden, was in the supermarket business there for several years and prior to that time farmed near Ayden. He has been in the selling field since 1967.

The salesman, who served in the Navy during World War II, is married to the former Edna Jordan of Greenville and they have three children.

CHANGES ADOPTED.

Inter-City Relocation Service, Chicago-headquartered real estate referral organization, has adopted a new symbol and a shorter tradename.

Louis Clark of the Louis Clark Agency here, which represents the organization, said that while retaining the same name officially, the tradename now adopted is RELO, replacing ICRS.

RELO, adopted from relocation, describes the oragization's primary function in assisting transferred business executives and others moving from one city to another to sell former residences and find new homes, Clark said.

SERVICE RECOGNIZED

In a recent ceremony at the Blue Bell Inc. Bethel plant, Bill Marshall, Wilson Division manager, and Jim Overton, plant manager, awarded service recognition pins to 21 employees with five or more years of service. Four other employees were not able to attend to receive their awards.

The Bethel plant is part of Blue Bell's Wilson Division and opened in August of 1966.

'Fair Shake' Is Asked

William E. Jones, proprietor of City Cab Company in Greenville, asked City Council members on Thursday night to have the police give cab driver a fair shake.

Jones, speaking briefly following a discussion on a request for increase for taxicab rates, a subject that was tabled at the request of drivers until a later date, mentioned what he termed "a matter of police impatience."

"Many of our customers are elderly ladies," Jones commented. 'He stated, that cabs often pull up in loading zones for a minute or two when parking spaces in front of stores are not available. "A police man will come and immediately say to move along. I feel this out of line. These older people can't get in or out of cabs as quickly as a young person."

Jones explained when this type of thing happened to him, he knew the best thing to do was to go to the chief (Police Chief Glenn Cannon) to get it straightened out.

Ranch Design For Outdoor Life

By GERRY BISHOP

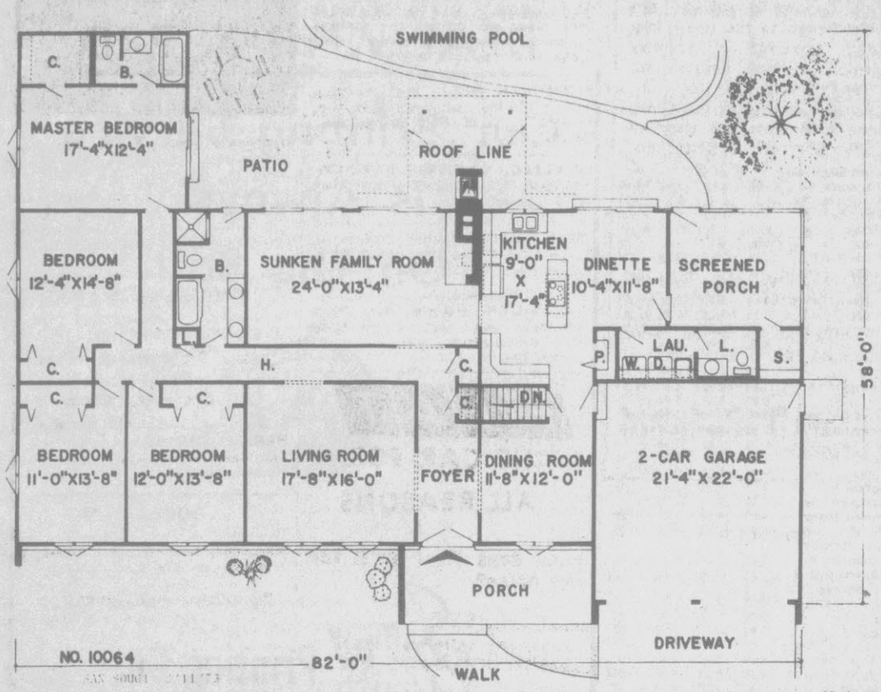
Rustic is the word to describe the San Souci, a spacious one-story home designed by Associated House Plans.

Battened siding and natural stone are skillfully blended with shake shingles on the mansard roof.

This model would be ideal for a wooded lot. It would be a welcome addition to the finest neighborhood.

The mansard roof is practical as well as eye-pleasing. It overhangs the exterior walls, protecting the windows and finish on the vertical siding.

There are four bedrooms, two and a half baths, a sunken family room with corner fireplace, living room, foyer, modern kitchen with dinette and adjoining screened porch, dining room, two-car garage and basement with wood-burning fireplace.



HAVEN FOR LARGE FAMILY — The San Souci, designed by Associated House Plans, would be ideal for a large family. It has four bedrooms, two-and-a-half baths, a sunken family room with fireplace, formal living room, dining room, modern kitchen with dinette and adjoining screened porch, foyer, double garage and full basement with fireplace.

The family room's dimensions — approximately 24 feet by 13 feet — make it especially suitable for a large family. The fireplace would be a bonus during cold weather.

For formal entertaining, the living room would be ideal. It enjoys the quiet and isolation of a frontal location and is off the main stream of traffic. The dimensions — approximately 18 feet by 16 feet — are spacious and there's lots of wall space, permitting several arrangement of furniture.

The mansard roof is higher above the living room and family room, permitting 12-feet ceiling. This adds an air of spaciousness and luxury. The drawings spell out the details, eliminating all guesswork by the builder.

The most discriminating housewife would be pleased with the kitchen. It includes a seven-foot-long island which houses a built-in cooking top. There are adequate cabinets and built-in appliances. The sink overlooks the patio and swimming pool through casement-type windows.

The adjoining dinette would be the scene of most meals. In warm weather the screened porch could be pressed into service. And nearby is the dining room for more formal occasions.

The double garage is just a step away from the kitchen, a convenience for unloading the car after shopping.

The traffic pattern begins at the foyer which connects with a long center hall.

At the far end is the sleeping area which is highlighted by the master suite. It has a private bath, a walk-in closet and sliding glass doors leading to the patio.

The other three bedrooms are clustered around the main bath which has a double vanity. Each bedroom has a large closet with folding doors.

The basement provides space for future expansion. A paneled game room could be built in the fireplace area.

The exterior dimensions are 82 feet by 58 feet and each level contains 2,585 square feet. There's an additional 493 square feet in the garage.

Apartments Open Door To New Vacation Style

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

An apartment in every port may be the new aim of some vacation resort hoppers. Even families. And the idea might not be too farfetched. Vacationing in apartments has become very popular, especially with package deals that include airline fares to far-off places. And who is to say you can't pretend the fully furnished apartment is your own.

People may tire of going to the same little vacation cottage or motel in the mountains or seaside resort, the same two or more weeks each year. New places can be educational for small fry and provide a complete change of scenery and recreation for the rest of the family. Out-of-season rates can even make a vacation more inexpensive. In addition an apartment may offer Americans something they cherish away from home — a warm, cozy atmosphere.

In any event, for whatever reasons, the new vacation style is expanding, observed Marc T. Inman, who developed a computer operation to speed rental confirmations on some 20 resorts in the United States, Europe, Canada and the Caribbean. The circuit will include Mexico, Hawaii, South America and North Africa by the end of the year.

Instead of a tiny room or suite in a hotel with children bundled together on cots, and the expense of restaurant dining, the apartment-hotel arrangement provides even a crib if it is needed, and a fully equipped kitchen with a refrigerator — a boon to snack-happy American families. As in a hotel there is daily maid service and a laundry service, but the pampering stops there — no room service or bellboys.

"It has been difficult to fill many service jobs in the growing vacation market," observed Inman. "Wages of maids have skyrocketed — in Hawaii at $3.50 an hour — but maids are still essential..."

In a way "all the services money" is being poured into maid service, he explained, although there are concierges on 24-hour duty. As for room service, the traveler will get ice for drinks more quickly by making it himself — as guests have always complained.

One has long been able to rent apartments abroad, but it has usually been too expensive for short stays and locating them was time consuming, remarked Inman, president of Condomart, an organization that works with airlines, travel agents and travelers. He was the first, he says, to systematize and standardardize the vacation setup.

After the traveler gets his airline tickets and determines information — the size of his party, the resort favored and the type of apartment preferred — he makes a toll-free call for his reservation.

Here's How To Do It

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — I intend to make some closets soon for clothing and storage. I plan on using either sliding doors or folding doors, but I seem to remember reading somewhere that sliding doors have some disadvantages. Can you tell me what they are?

A. — Both sliding and folding doors have one big advantage: they do not protrude into a room when opened as do regular hinged doors. With the most commonly used type of sliding door, you can open only one side at a time and thus cannot either see or reach some of the object inside the closet without closing that side and opening the other. In some more expensive original installations, this disadvantage is eliminated by a construction procedure which permits the doors to open into the walls on either side of the closet.

Q. — We have white ceiling tiles in our finished attic. The children have managed somehow to poke a few holes in some of the tiles. What can I use to plug up these holes so they won't be too conspicuous?

A. — Use either a spackling compound or a water putty, both of which come in powdered form and must be mixed with water. Place the material in each hole and smooth it with a putty knife. If you have an old piece of the same tile on hand (there usually are some left over after an installation), put a hole in it and then repair it. This not only will give an idea of how close a match you can obtain, but will enable you to get the hang of the repair method, since most of us do better the second time we attempt something.

The Garden Clinic

(N.C. State University Answers Timely Gardening Questions)

Q. I am planning my garden and want to grow my own tomato plants. How soon should I seed my tomatoes to get early fruit? (R. R., Raleigh)

A. Tomatoes should be seeded from six to ten weeks before transplanting to the garden. Try to keep the plants growing rapidly with a minimum of hardening. Also, remember that large plants will be slowed more by transplanting and will fruit later than smaller plants. (D. C. Sanders, extension horticulturist)

Q. Is it too early to prune a peach tree? (M. L., Siler City)

A. The later you can wait — up to bloom — the better for pruning peach trees. Prune the oldest trees first and the youngest last. (Mel Kolbe, extension horticulturist)

Q. What causes the stems of broccoli to be hollow? (P. McC., Laurinburg)

A. Boron deficiency is the most common cause of hollow stem in broccoli. However, you will find some varieties are more susceptible to hollow stem than others. Rapid growth caused by excessive fertilization also seems to be associated with the problem. I would suggest that you have your soil tested by sending a sample to the State Soil Testing Laboratory, Raleigh. Indicate on the information sheet that you are having a problem with hollow stem. (George Hughes, extension horticulturist)

Q. How does North Carolina rank in pecan production? (Mrs. G. C., Red Springs)

A. Usually at the bottom of the 11 states that produce pecans commercially. North Carolina is the northernmost pecan state, and production here fluctuates widely. Some years we produce a few hundred thousand pounds and some years we produce three or four million pounds.

Joining Commune On The Road

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A well-off Texas family is selling its land and property, turning over the proceeds to a traveling commune of "Jesus people" and joining the evangelistic group on the road.

"God put it in our hearts to do it," says Basil Hairgrove, 43, a long-time San Antonio schoolteacher who is undertaking the venture with his wife and three teen-age children.

"When God comes into your heart, it changes your whole attitude and you're willing to do what He wants you to do. We're going to work for Him for the remaining days of our lives."

With that aim, he and his wife, Barbara, 42, also a schoolteacher, are giving up about everything they own, including jobs, donating their resources to the warfaring band and, with their children, becoming part of it.

"It might seem like a hard decision, but it wasn't really," Mrs. Hairgrove said in a telephone interview with her and her husband. "We're very happy about it. When you follow the Spirit, you give up things you normally would keep.

"This stuff here on earth is very temporary anyway. Nothing is more important than helping people find Christ."

The family has sold its house on San Antonio's Twinleaf Drive for $45,000, put three other land parcels up for sale at a total of $38,500, and when the deals are settled, will pass on the net returns and a 15-passenger van to the Jesus group.

The traveling Jesus group, which recently held a six-week tent evangelism drive in San Antonio, first attracted the Hairgroves' daughter, Phyllis, 17.

"She experienced salvation and then we all started going down there," recalled Mrs. Hairgrove, an elementary teacher for 10 years. "I was the one who dragged my feet, but the Lord finally got me to give in."

Another daughter, Carol, 18, relates that when her sister, Phyllis, came home so happy, "all of us kind of resented it because we were sad. Then we went and were saved. At first, my father didn't like it at the tent because the kids there were different. But all that love finally broke through..."

The nondenominational group of about 150, mostly young, is led by evangelist Bill Lowry. It is incorporated as "Christ is the Answer, Inc." of Weldon, Ill., for tax purposes in receiving funds. It has moved on to Phoenix, Ariz.

The Hairgroves expect to join it in mid-February, living in a camper trailer they own. A son, Phillip, 16, also is going along. The youngsters will continue schooling by correspondence.

From property sales, after debts are cleared, the Hairgroves estimate they will give about $30,000 to the group. Even if the group eventually breaks up, "it still will be worth everything we've put into it," Hairgrove said.

The family had belonged to a Baptist church, but "we were backsliding Christians," Hairgrove said. "Now we've felt a strong urgency to follow God's will. It's the only way to be truly happy."

SALES WITH A TWO-WAY FUTURE

The sales representative for National Chemsearch has the best of two worlds. If you are the kind of person who really loves to sell, and chooses to remain in a local territory, your future is economically unlimited. You will remain in your original territory. Your accounts are protected for you, and your earnings can increase substantially each year.

If, on the other hand, your goal is to reach the management level through sales, this can also be achieved.

National Chemsearch has grown from $8 Million to $80 Million in the last 10 years, and this rate of stable growth should continue for a long time to come. Because of this growth, we have an increasing need for promotable sales representatives whose future development can parallel that of the company.

If you have selling talent, with the drive, and desire to use it to your best advantage, we will provide. . .

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 11, 1973

CARROLL RIGHTER'S horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: An excellent day to use the finest and loftiest qualities of your mind to study and better understand the principles under which you wish to live in the future. Make a special point to see and enjoy close companions, relatives and neighbors as well as arrange better transportation.

ARIES (Mar 21 to Apr. 19) Come together with as many persons you can so you can improve your relationships and become a more understanding person. New friends can be very helpful in the future. Avoid one who is tricky.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Your mind is on financial affairs even while attending social functions. With the help of mate you can formulate some new plans and work out a better system of budgeting. Consult with friends.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Join a group meeting that will give you the data and the pleasure that you are seeking. First improve your charm via right treatments. Dress in good taste and make a fine impression on others.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Take time to study where you are headed and if you are taking the right steps toward your finest goals. Then talk the matter over with a wise person and get the advice you need.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Make notes of ideas you get that can help you to be more successful in the future, otherwise you might forget them later on. Take time to attend the social and gain prestige. Go to bed early tonight.

VIRGO (Aug 22 to Sept. 22) Listen to what is expected of you by a bigwig and try to please so that you get the benefits you want. Engage in philanthropic work and gain added prestige while helping others. Take it easy tonight.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Take time to be with clever and wise persons who can help you to elevate your consciousness. You can gain by listening to the experiences of others. Take health treatments and get a good rest.

SCORPIO (Oct 23 to Nov. 21) If you can tap your subconscious mind now you can come up with wonderful ideas for use in the future to your benefit. Show more affection for loved one and you will have more harmony in the future. Show that you are understanding.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) It would be wise to arrange a meeting with associates and talk over future plans so all goes better in the days ahead. Engage in civic affair in afternoon. Show kindness to mate tonight.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Good day to do favors for those who have been very kind to you in the past. Take the exercise or whatever else that will give you better health. Avoid one who could get you into trouble.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You can go out to the amusements that you really enjoy and have a delightful time today, provided you contact congenials first and set up appointments. Deepen your affection for loved one.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) A few changes at home as to furniture, can bring more comfort and harmony into it, so get busy at such. Entertaining at home later in the day is fine. Stay within your budget and all is well.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be one of those delightful young people whose brilliant mind roams the universe with many fine ideas. Your progeny should be taught to jot them down for future use when most needed. Give the best education you can afford and direct it toward lecturing, writing, science, and the like. There could be a fine religionist here.

NEW PROGRAM

NEW YORK (UPI) — A new certification program at Grand Valley State College in Michigan will prepare Emergency Medical Technicians to serve in emergency vehicles and will help meet a growing need for qualified emergency ambulance personnel.

Construction Soon On New Ramada Inn

Colony Inns Inc., Atlanta-based motor inn management firm, announced that construction is expected to begin soon on a 120-room Ramada Inn on the 264 Bypass here.

John R. Connelly, president, said that the inn would be the ninth open or under way for the chain and the company's first to be located in a commercial district.

Developer of the inn is Thirteenth Colony Corp. of Savannah, Ga. The new inn, it was announced, will have a restaurant, a lounge, a pool and banquet facilities for 175 people.

Connelly, who reported that the inn is expected to open in th fall, said that construction time on the facility would be much less than for similar projects because of the use of pre-stressed concrete wall panels.

The panels are manufactured in the Pelham, Ala. plant of Jamestown Corp., another subsidiary of Thirteenth Colony. They are trucked to the construction site and erected by crane, he said.

Organized in 1971, Thirteenth Colony already has motor inns open or being developed in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida and Alabama. The company reported that it expects to develop 25 to 30 inns over the next two years.

The cow moose seldom wanders far from home but bulls commonly do.

Ask Them Yourself

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR ASTRONAUT JAMES B. IRWIN

You are going to retire from the space program and spend your time "spreading the good news of Jesus Christ." Did you have some experience while on the moon that caused you to make this decision?—Lee S. Ward, Bradley Beach, N.J.

● I felt God's presence on the moon closer than I have ever felt it here on earth. I came back from the Apollo 15 flight to find it had changed my life. It was a real spiritual awakening. I feel myself to be one who loves all men and women, and God has given me a strong desire and compulsion to share my faith with them. The message I have, of course, is the old, old story of Jesus Christ.

FOR MAE WEST

Of all of the men you have met, who would you say is the most interesting?—L. G. O., Hackensack, N.J.

● I can't say. I've met a lot of men, and a lot of men have interested me. If you really want to know how I feel, I think there are two kinds of men: foreign and domestic.

FOR BARNABY CONRAD, author and bullfighting expert

Do you know of any good bullfighting schools in Mexico? —Manuel P. Galvan, Jr., Brownsville, Texas

● The only good bullfighting school I know of in Mexico is El Cortijo San Jose in Tijuana. For $600 they guarantee that after their six-month course you will either perform in a real Plaza de Toros with real bulls—or they will refund the money to your widow!

FOR JOHNNY WEISSMULLER, former movie "Tarzan"

It's been reported that the famous Tarzan yell was a recording. Is this true?—Dorothy Winter, South Nyack, N.Y.

● Some other actors who played Tarzan might have used a recording. I used my vocal cords.

FOR JACQUELINE BISSET, actress

What annoys you most about people?—M. R. Duke, Anchorage, Alaska

● Drivel. I get terribly impatient with people who have nothing to talk about.

FOR PERRY COMO

How often do you change your material for your nightclub act?—T. O., Hobbs, N.M.

● This past year I made very few changes because of my accident, which made long rehearsals too painful. I just hope the audience didn't feel cheated. In '73, we'll come up with a brand-new show. When I say brand new, I don't mean all new numbers. If I don't sing some of my old hits like "Don't Let the Stars Get in Your Eyes" and "Catch a Falling Star," the audience always seems disappointed.

FOR LAWRENCE SPIVAK, moderator of "Meet the Press"

How would you react if the White House sent suggested questions to "Meet the Press," as it did to another network's show?—A. Davidson, Durham, N.C.

● We simply would refuse to accept them. If the White House officials called and said, "We're going to suggest some questions to you," we'd say, "No, thanks, we don't want any." We'll do our own work.

FOR FAYE DUNAWAY

You seem like the sensitive type to me—but I have a friend who thinks you're probably pretty tough. Who's right?—P. R. D., Encino, Calif.

● Actually, I get hurt very easily. And I have not been able to develop a real defense against this. By the same token, I'm always worried that something I do or say might hurt someone else.

FOR JAMES MacARTHUR of "Hawaii Five-O"

Do you believe in Women's Lib?—W. Lehman, Amarillo, Texas

● I believe in the equality of sexes. If a woman slaps me, I want to be able to slap back. (Although, to be truthful, I can't remember that I ever hit a woman.)

"Be My Valentine... Pass It On"

A Collection of Dubious Valentine Sentiments from Kids

Young people love each other—especially on Valentine's Day.

These expressions of young love were written by children from Maine to California. We are especially grateful to the many parents, teachers and friends who assisted us in preparing this collection of warm, wild, unpredictable, romantic Valentine sentiments that could only belong to kids.

Collected by Bill Adler

(who also collected "Letters from Camp," "Kids' Letters to President Kennedy," "Love Letters to the Beatles," etc.)

Dear Victor,
I will always be your valentine forever until I meet somebody better.
Love,
Jennifer

Dear Martin,
I love you more than any other boy I have met today.
Love and kisses,
Melissa

Dear Laura,
Please read the card I sent you last Valentine's Day. I can't afford a new one this year.
Love,
Ernie

Dear Loren,
Please don't tell the other boys I sent you this Valentine's card. They think I hate girls like they do.
Love,
William

Dear Billy,
If you will be my Valentine, I will share my homework with you.
Love,
Paula

Dear Natalie,
You should be my valentine because we are perfect together. We both hate to take a bath.
Eric

Dear Robert,
I think I am in love with you but I will have to ask my mother before I can be sure.
Love,
Celeste

Dear Brenda,
Your Valentine's Day card was the prettiest card I got.
Love,
Stuart
P.S. It was also the only one.

Dear Stephanie,
I hope you like the flowers I gave you for Valentine's Day. I picked them from your garden.
Homer

Dear Patricia,
I can't be your boyfriend because I'm allergic to girls.
Randy

Dear Arnold,
I love you. I want to share everything with you even your allowance.
Kisses from,
Sara

Dear Mark,
Happy Valentine's Day. Please pass this card on to Harold, Peter, Norman and Stanley.
Love and kisses,
Barbara

Dear Sandy,
I couldn't put a stamp on the envelope because I didn't have any money left after I bought this card.
Bruce

Dear Lawrence,
I bought you a box of candy for Valentine's Day but I ate the candy so I am sending you just the box.
Love,
Beatrice

Dear Wally,
Thank you for the Valentine's Day card. It was the nicest, prettiest cheap card I have ever received.
Mona

Dear Joseph,
You are the dumbest, ugliest boy I ever met but I love you because nobody is perfect.
Love from,
Angela

Dear Lewis,
I can't kiss you tomorrow. I just got braces.
Love,
Joan
P.S. Don't worry. I will only wear the braces for three years.

Dear Jane,
I promise not to look at another girl for the whole week.
Love,
Jack
P.S. I am sick in the house with the measles.

Dear Martin,
You are invited to my surprise Valentine's Day party. The surprise is that I have invited all my other boyfriends.
Love and kisses,
Sherry

Dear Bernard,
I don't know if I love you or Emerson or Howard or Edward or Michael or Andrew.
As soon as I see what everyone

Something for menthol smokers to think about.

There are menthol cigarettes and there are menthol cigarettes. And if you're a menthol smoker you certainly know by now which one you really enjoy smoking.

So what makes us think we'll ever get a crack at switching you?

Well, we're going to try.

Because if you're like a lot of cigarette smokers these days, you're probably concerned about the 'tar' and nicotine stories you've been hearing.

Frankly, if a cigarette is going to bring you flavor, it's also going to bring you smoke. And where there's smoke, there has to be 'tar.' In fact, in most cigarettes, the more flavor, the more 'tar.' Except for Vantage.

You must know that Vantage cigarettes have a special filter which reduces 'tar' and nicotine without destroying flavor.

What you may not know is that Vantage is also available in menthol.

Not surprisingly, what separates Vantage Menthol from ordinary menthols is that Vantage Menthol gives you all the flavor you want, with a lot less of the 'tar' and the nicotine that you probably don't want.

Now Vantage Menthol is not the lowest 'tar' and nicotine menthol you'll find. It's simply the lowest one you'll enjoy smoking.

Since you're the best judge of what you like about menthol cigarettes, don't just take our word for it.

Try a pack of Vantage Menthol and then you'll know for sure.

Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.

Filter and Menthol: 12 mg. "tar", 0.9 mg. nicotine—av. per cigarette, FTC Report Aug. 72.

DAVE COWENS:

He Can Out-Jump Any Man in Basketball

Dave Cowens of the Boston Celtics has violated the unwritten rule that a professional basketball center has to be at least 6-10. Dave is only 6-8—a veritable peewee. But his jumping skills and his fiery aggressiveness enable him to grab rebounds away from players who can eat apples off his head. . . . Oddly enough, Cowens didn't consider the idea of going out for basketball until his senior year of high school in his native Newport, Ky. His performance that year brought a scholarship offer from Florida State. Boston chief scout Mal Graham, who saw him play there, recommended that the Celtics make him their No. 1 draft choice. Ex-Celtic star Bill Russell went to have a look. "Forget his height and keep him at center," Russell recommended. "Nobody in the world is going to intimidate this kid.". . . Cowens won "Rookie of the Year" honors for the 1970-71 season. He led Boston to a first-place finish in the East last year and is riding high again this season with a 20-point-per-game shooting average and an outstanding defensive record. One of his most spectacular performances came in last year's All-Star game, when he contained the two "man monsters" of sport—Wilt Chamberlain and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar.—By Barry Abramson

The Doctor Lets You In

There's No Need to Get the Measles Anymore

Measles is more than just a common disease for people to joke about. There are two kinds of "measles": regular, or "red" measles, and German measles. Red measles in children usually lasts longer, causes more fever and distress, and is more common. German measles, which often causes little or no problem in the child, can be spread to women of childbearing age who never got the disease in childhood. The virus can cross the placenta into the developing fetus, causing severe damage to the innocent infant. Fortunately, there are now preventive vaccines against both types of measles. All children can be vaccinated against both types, and all women of childbearing age who are not certain of having had German measles should check with their doctors and local public-health clinics about the advisability of getting the vaccine.—By John J. Secondi, M.D.

Go Ahead—Eat Those Pancakes!

You've had an adequate breakfast but you're still feeling hungry. Likely you're longing for some stick-to-the-ribs food you feel you shouldn't have because it contains too many calories. Jobmanship

Who in Your Office Can You Trust?

Once you understand your co-workers' personalities, you're better able to decide who can be trusted. According to psychiatrist Ainslie Meares, when you realize that one co-worker is very insecure and another is always concerned with doing things "just-so," you have found two people who can be trusted. The insecure person is too terrified of the possible result of dishonesty to take any risks. And the just-so, obsessive person cannot live with the anxiety that he would feel if he were dishonest. Overly suspicious people are unreliable because their own mental confusion gives them a mistaken idea of what is happening around them. You should also avoid the psychopath. You can recognize him, says Dr. Meares, by his record of dishonesty, lack of anxiety and cold absence of concern for others. This person has a defective conscience; nor will he learn from experience.—By S. R. Redford

HENRY MANCINI:

You Do Get Your Dollar Out of Those School Music Programs

"When education budgets are tight, the first thing often cut out is the school music program. That's a very poor policy if we hope to develop a new generation of musically trained and otherwise alert students." The speaker is Henry Mancini, one of America's most successful popular composers and conductors. "The decision is not the fault of the schools, but of the public. If you put it to a vote as a bond issue, people are likely to vote the music program down, and the kids who are affected are too young to do anything about it. But cutting opportunities for a musical education in school is shortsighted. When the arts start to go, the quality of the country starts to go. Building appreciation for music and art contributes toward insights into other studies."—Interviewed by William Wolf

No time out for you

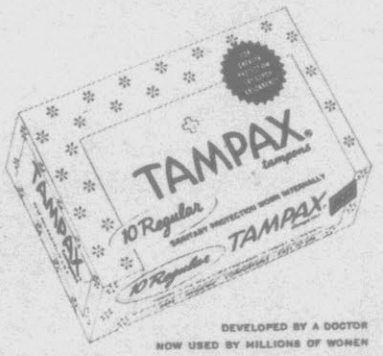
Time—if you work in the hectic atmosphere of, say, a recording studio, there's just never enough of it. Days jam-packed with schedules, skipped lunch hours, overtime. And certainly no time out for those "problem" days.

You need Tampax tampons. They're worn internally, so you don't have to fuss with pads or pins or belts. And no pads means no chafing or irritation, either. Tampax tampons are small enough to fit your purse, pocket or desk drawer, and they're easy and convenient to use.

NO BELTS NO PINS NO PADS NO ODOR

Busy girls in busy jobs rely on Tampax tampon protection. Because there's no need to sacrifice any time off from your job.

The internal protection more women trust



DEVELOPED BY A DOCTOR
NOW USED BY MILLIONS OF WOMEN

MADE ONLY BY TAMPAX INCORPORATED, PALMER, MASS.

Millions of women find it easier to face cancer of the cervix than face a Pap test in a doctor's office.

13,000 women in this country will die of cancer of the cervix this year. Yet many medical authorities believe that cervical cancer is 100% curable if detected in time.

Why this needless waste of life? Because millions of women (maybe even you) don't go for an annual Pap test. Despite the fact that the Pap test is the only recognized method of detecting cancer of the cervix in its initial stages, when it's practically 100% curable.

Many women are afraid of the pain and discomfort of a Pap test, which is actually minimal. Others won't submit to an intimate female examination. And, frankly, many women feel they cannot afford the cost of a Pap test and doctor's examination, which can run as high as $30.

It is to protect these unprotected women from cancer of the cervix that PAP CHEK was developed. PAP CHEK is a safe, easy-to-use, medically-approved Pap test you purchase by mail and use at home. It is as easy to use as a tampon.

Its purchase price of $9 includes everything you need to collect your own vaginal specimen. You then mail it back to us. We rush it to the laboratory* where it is analyzed under the direct supervision of a licensed pathologist. Within days you are mailed the conclusive results of our doctor.

There are no additional charges whatever.

Detected in its earliest stages cervical cancer is practically 100% curable. But only 4 to 5 women in 10 with advanced undetected cervical cancer will survive for 5 years.

If you are presently seeing a doctor regularly, continue to do so. He can detect other disorders by a physical examination. But if you are one of the millions of women who don't go—or won't go—to a physician regularly, PAP CHEK is a simple, effective, inexpensive way for you to live free from fear of this dread killer of women.

Pap Chek. A reliable, easy-to-use new Pap test you give yourself in the privacy of your own home. This procedure approved by the Department of Health, Education & Welfare, and by leading gynecologists and pathologists.

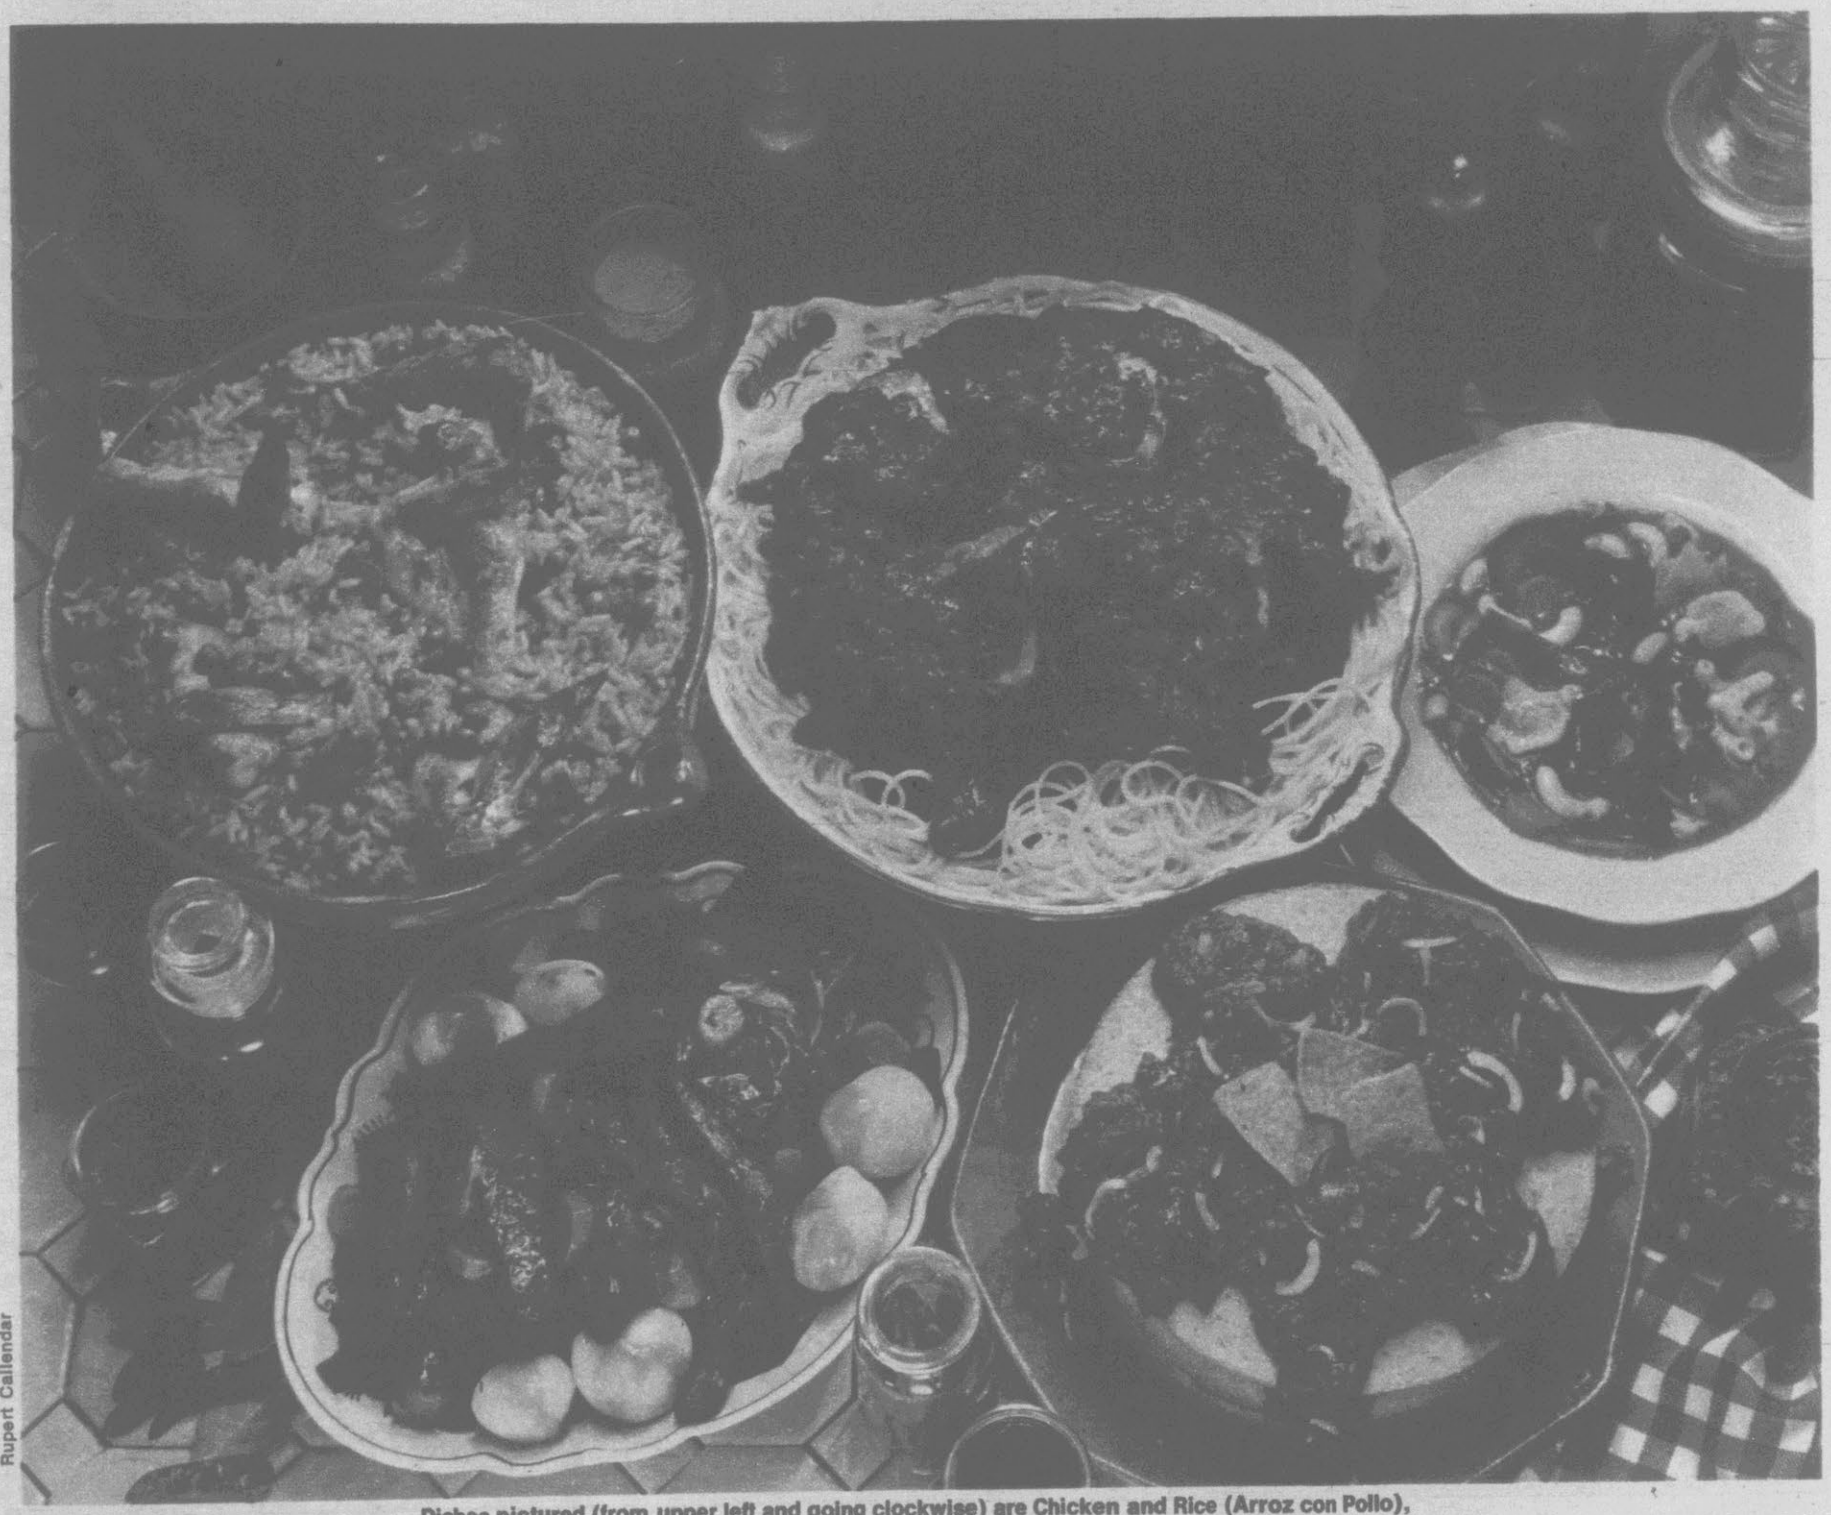
Low-Budget Dishes From Around the World

By Marilyn Hansen
Food Editor

From mysterious China to romantic Italy— a treasure trove of flavorful, low-cost dinners



Rupert Callendar

Dishes pictured (from upper left and going clockwise) are Chicken and Rice (Arroz con Pollo), Spaghetti and Beef Shank (Beef Osso Buco), Minestrone, Mexicali Chili Corncake and Beef-Liver Rhineland.

For generations, cooks around the world have artfully created delicious, satisfying meals from whatever was available in the way of "complete protein" foods–meat, poultry, fish, cheese or eggs. By combining these with the "incomplete proteins" in grain foods (which are better utilized when eaten with "complete proteins"), they provided an excellent nutritional diet. Whether the dishes also taste good depends on one's knowledge of spices and herbs. Today we have a whole world of them to choose from. Learn what they are and how to blend them, and you can provide a wide variety of low-cost meals.

"We eat steaks - and budget, too."

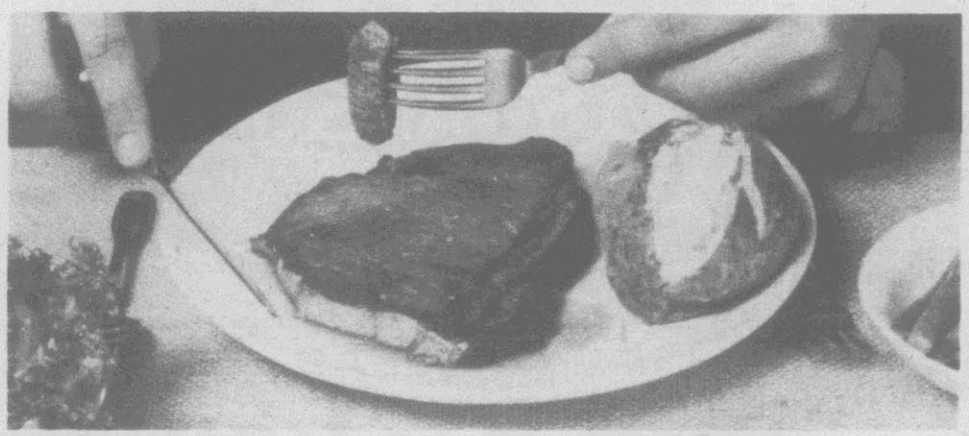
"Steak? Love it! But it was a battle between the mortgage payment and the butcher. I just couldn't afford steak until I tried Adolph's Meat Tenderizer—and the less expensive steaks.

"At first I was reluctant to try Adolph's because I thought if it tenderizes meat, what does it do to my stomach?

"But then I found that Adolph's is actually made from the papaya melon. So it's a pure food product—as natural as orange juice.

"I began by tenderizing top round steak. Adolph's made it tender enough to broil. Top round cost me less than $1.50 a pound, and it's all good eating meat—very little fat and no bone. I got a lot more for my money.

"Best of all was the taste. Tender, juicy and delicious. We're eating more steaks now—and it's costing a lot less."



Lean cuts are better for you

Cuts of beef like round, flank and sirloin tip come from the parts of the animal that get the exercise. That's why they're lean. And why they're tough. And less expensive. But, pound for pound, the lean, less expensive cuts have more protein, less fat and calories. That's why they're better for you.

Tough-to-tender in a jiffy

With Adolph's Instant Meat Tenderizer, it takes only a few minutes to turn tough into tender. Just moisten the meat with water, sprinkle Adolph's evenly on both sides of the meat, then pierce deeply with a fork at about 1/2 inch intervals...and you're ready to broil.

Gourmet treat—marinated steak

For a flavor change-of-pace, marinate steaks with Adolph's Meat Marinade. It works in just fifteen minutes to give you steaks with deep-down flavor and juicy tenderness. You'll find Adolph's Meat Marinade at the meat counter.

A Celebrity Cooks

"I don't like pretentious houses . . . but my kitchens are comfortable and warm."

Jim Nabors: Try My Mother's Split Pea Soup, Alabama-Style

By Jim Nabors,
As told to Helen Dorsey

Jim stirs the soup in the newly decorated kitchen of his Beverly Hills home.

Somebody once asked me, if I had to pick the kind of food I'd like to eat the rest of my life, what would I choose? I had to say just the kind of food I was raised with. I grew up in Sylacauga, Ala., and most Southern food is very plain with not too many spices. I like highly spiced dishes—German, Italian and Mexican—but not for everyday eating.

My mother, who lives with me, is an excellent cook. She makes white corn bread in iron pans. I just love her country fried chicken and meat loaf. Her soups are outstanding. Her vegetable soup is so thick, it's like a stew, because it's so full of meat, corn, potatoes and carrots. I often prepare many of her recipes myself. One of my favorites is her split pea soup flavored with ham bone.

I just had my kitchens – my mother has one and I have one – done over with new built-in cupboards and new electric appliances. I don't like pretentious houses, so I don't have expensive antiques or fine paintings. But my kitchens are comfortable and warm.

MOTHER'S SPLIT PEA SOUP

- 1 lb. pkg. green split peas
- Water
- 1 large ham bone
- 3 medium potatoes, peeled, cut in pieces
- 3 carrots, peeled, cut in pieces
- 1 large onion, peeled, quartered
- 1 bay leaf
- Salt
- Pepper

1. Soak peas overnight in water to cover; drain.
2. Place peas in Dutch oven with ham bone, potatoes, carrots, onion, bay leaf, 4 qts. water, and salt and pepper to taste.
3. Cook over low heat approximately 4 hours, stirring occasionally.
4. Remove ham bone and bay leaf. Place soup in blender, blend until smooth. Taste to correct seasonings. Reheat and serve piping hot.

- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- Pinch salt

1. Cream butter until light and fluffy. Gradually add sugar, beating well after each addition. Blend in flavorings.
2. Beat egg yolks until thick and lemon-colored. Stir into creamed mixture.
3. Sift together flour, baking powder and salt. Add flour to creamed mixture ⅓ at a time, stirring well after each addition.
4. Beat egg whites until stiff but not dry. Fold into batter until just blended (when patches of egg white disappear).
5. Pour into buttered, lightly floured 10-inch ring tube pan. Bake in preheated 350°F. oven for 30 minutes. Reduce oven temperature to 300° F. Continue baking 30 minutes longer, or until cake is done. Cool for 10 minutes. Remove from pan; cool on wire cake rack.

AUSTRIAN KRAUT-AND-WURST SKILLET

- ½ cup onion flakes
- ½ cup cold water
- ¼ cup margarine or vegetable oil

- 1 lb. bockwurst,* split lengthwise
- 3 cans (1-lb. size) sauerkraut, well-drained
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon sugar
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- 1 teaspoon caraway seed
- 1 can (12 ozs.) malt liquor or beer or 1¾ cups apple juice
- 1 can (10½ ozs.) beef broth, undiluted
- 1 apple, peeled, cored and sliced
- Fresh unpeeled apple slices

1. Rehydrate onion flakes in water for 10 minutes.

2. In large skillet with lid heat margarine until melted. Brown knockwurst and bockwurst in skillet, turning to brown evenly. Remove wursts and set aside.

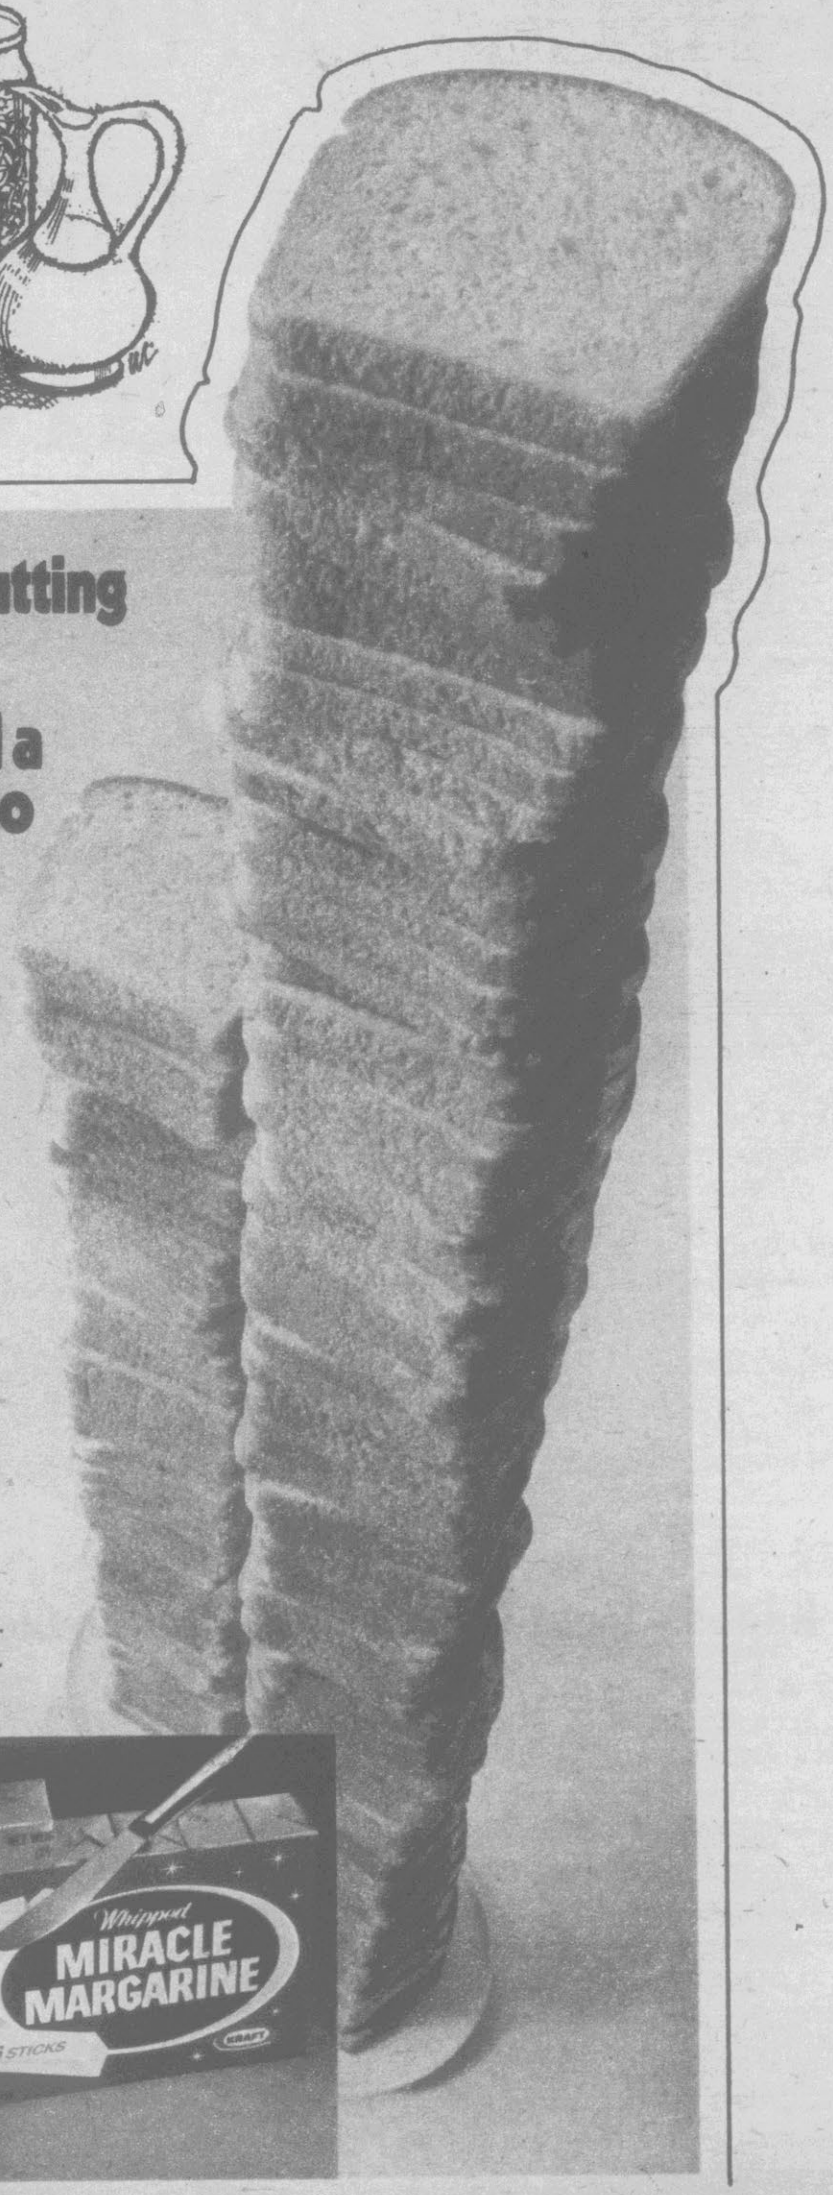
3. Sauté rehydrated onion in skillet for 3 minutes, stirring frequently. Stir in drained sauerkraut, salt, sugar, pepper, caraway seed, malt liquor, beef broth and peeled apple slices. Bring to boiling. Reduce heat and simmer 10-15 minutes, or until most of liquid in skillet evaporates.

4. Alternate knockwurst and bockwurst around edge of skillet; simmer covered about 5 minutes, until wursts are steaming.

5. Serve in skillet or transfer to serving platter; garnish with apple slices. A bowl of boiled potatoes is an excellent go-with.

Excuse us for butting into the recipes.

But we needed a little extra room to make the point that a pound of Miracle spreads 36 more slices than unwhipped margarine.



Whipping gives Miracle Brand Margarine six sticks instead of four. So a pound produces 36 extra pats.

Whipping means smoother, easier spreading, too. And whipping sacrifices none of that good, fresh Kraft margarine flavor.

With all these advantages, you'd think all margarines would be whipped, wouldn't you?

They aren't.

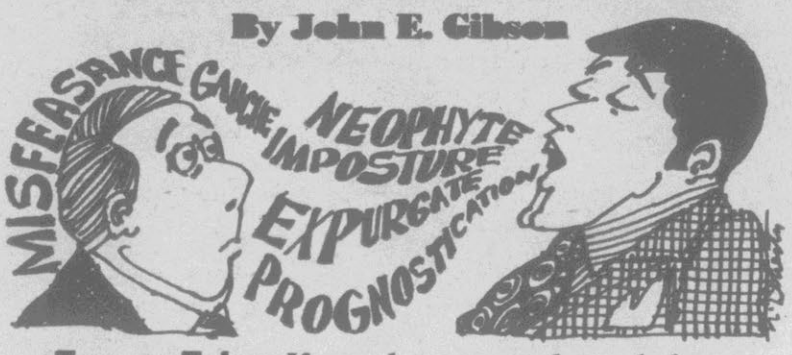
People Quiz

Is Having a Large Vocabulary Really Important?

By John E. Gibson



True or False: If you have a good vocabulary, but are a bad speller, this indicates a rebellious attitude toward authority. (See number 3)

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. A good vocabulary always is an indication of a high IQ.
2. It doesn't do much good for a man of few words to have a large vocabulary.
3. If you have a good vocabulary, but are a bad speller, this indicates a rebellious attitude toward authority.
4. Left-handed people tend to have superior vocabularies.
5. A person who has more to say than he has words to say it with will naturally acquire a more extensive vocabulary as he goes along.

ANSWERS

1. False. While studies have shown that there is a definite tendency for the size of a person's vocabulary to reflect his mental ability, there are many instances in which this is not true. It is perfectly possible to be long on words and short on brains. And the mere memorizing of additional words will not necessarily step up your mental abilities.
2. False. What psychologists term a "passive vocabulary"—where a person understands and fully comprehends the meanings of many words he never uses—can be invaluable in that it enables him to understand virtually anything he reads or hears, regardless of the words the writer or speaker uses. The silent or "passive" vocabulary is a hallmark of the good listener, and of the executive who says little while he carefully evaluates the suggestions and ideas his subordinates offer him.
3. True—according to the findings of a team of psychological researchers. Their study showed that bad spellers (college students were used as subjects) tended to harbor a marked dislike for authoritarian people. Disregard for the rules of spelling apparently provides a safe and convenient means of flaunting the dictates of authority.
4. True—according to psychological researchers at Britain's University of Hull. In the studies, right- and left-handed subjects were given standard vocabulary tests. Results: Left-handers of both sexes tended to have definitely superior vocabularies. They averaged significantly higher scores on the tests than either the right-handers or the mixed-handers. The investigators point out that it is not possible to generalize that all left-handers have an edge in the vocabulary department, for there were exceptions—but the tests indicated a very definite tendency in that direction.
5. True. A person whose thoughts, feelings and ideas require a larger vocabulary to provide adequate expression will gradually gravitate toward that end. And there are excellent books and courses of study that can help him achieve his objective. One simple and effective way to enlarge your vocabulary: When you read or hear a word that is new to you, look it up in the dictionary and jot down the definition. Then, just before you go to sleep, repeat the word and its meaning over two or three times. Psychological tests have demonstrated that anything is much more indelibly engraved if we expose ourselves to it just before going to sleep.

How Mr. Liptai and Mr. Rowe QUIT SMOKING FOR GOOD

A lot of people write telling how they quit smoking with the aid of Bantron®. A common feature of many of these letters tells how Bantron succeeded when nothing else could.

Mr. Peter Liptai of Baldwin Park, California writes: "I have lost count long ago of how many times I have tried to quit and failed. Now with the help of Bantron I have finally kicked the habit and joined the unhooked generation."

This is from Mr. John M. Rowe of Reeds Ferry, New Hampshire: "I have tried many times in 20 years to stop smoking. When I tried Bantron it was with little faith. But it worked, and this is forever, I am sure."

What is the special thing about Bantron that enabled it to do the job for Mr. Liptai and Mr. Rowe when nothing else could?

The answer is that Bantron is the only major smoking deterrent containing buffered Lobeline Sulfate*.

Lobeline Sulfate (even without buffering) is an effective smoking deterrent, proven in clinical tests. It works not by making smoking unpleasant, but by acting as a substitute for nicotine in the system. It helps to reduce the craving and withdrawal symptoms. But taken in sufficient quantities to be an effective substitute for nicotine, Lobeline by itself often upsets the stomach.

However, some years ago, researchers in a great American University discovered that buffering Lobeline Sulfate with two special antacids virtually eliminated any likelihood of stomach upset. This discovery was a great breakthrough. It was immediately patented, and is now available in Bantron. Because of this discovery, Bantron contains four times as much Lobeline in a single dose as any major smoking deterrent sold in drug stores.

Before Bantron was put on the market it was thoroughly researched. It was tested on hundreds of people who wanted to quit smoking. In these clinical tests, 83%, more than 4 out of 5, quit easily and pleasantly, with the help of Bantron, in only 5 to 7 days.

That's a pretty good batting average isn't it! Why not try Bantron yourself. Join Mr. Liptai and Mr. Rowe and quit smoking for good.

*Lobelia Alkaloids Sulfate

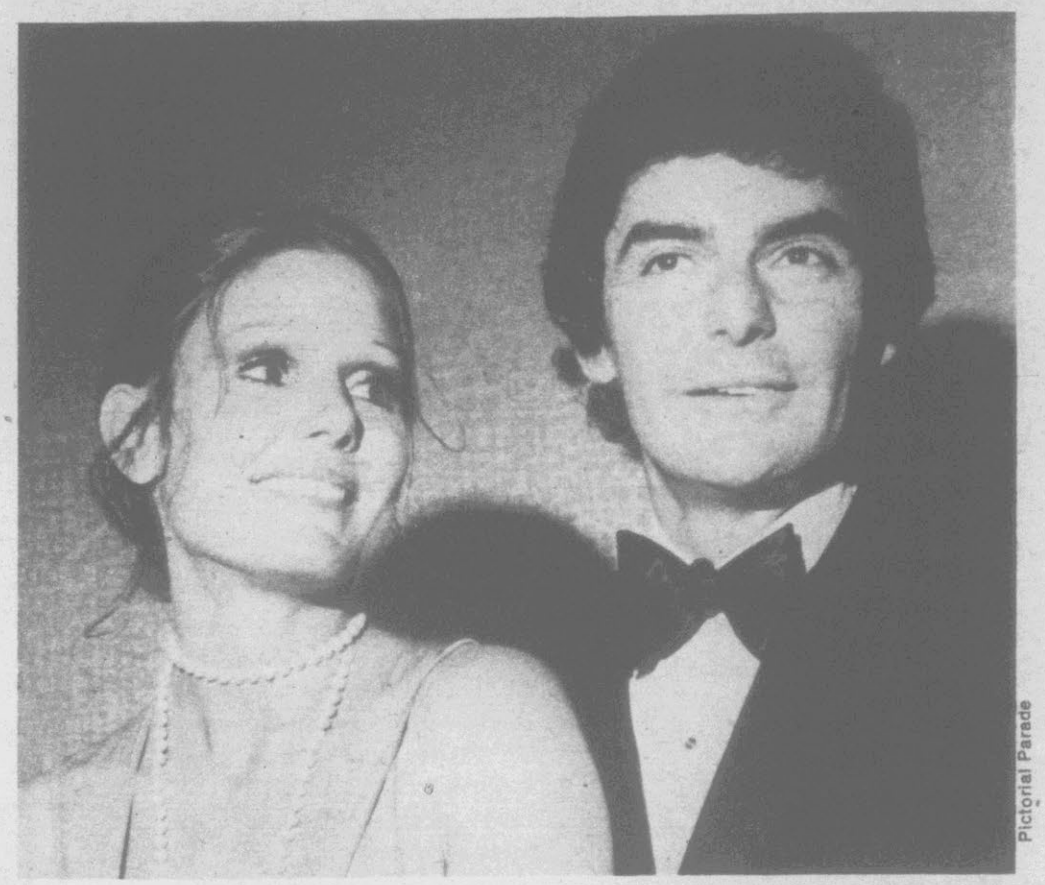
Dick Benjamin and "She Was So Incredibly Beautiful— I Hated Her!"



Pictorial Parade

It's taken more than ten years, but finally Dick and Paula feel they have it "together." They're even thinking of children.

By Peer J. Oppenheimer

"Even when we did our TV show, 'He and She,' together, we both became overly sensitive without realizing it. We'd work all week getting the show ready, film it on Friday, and on Saturday we were so depressed and miserable we couldn't even get out of bed."

FAMILY WEEKLY: Paula, when you first got married, you were a big star and Dick had just started out in his career. Did this cause any problems?

Paula: It was very difficult during the early days of our marriage, and it would have been impossible if I had continued to do better than he did. Today he is working more than I am. It's better this way.

F.W.: Have you ever thought of giving up your career and just being a housewife?

Paula: About seven years ago I thought I might have to. That's when I was taken to a mental hospital because I was so sick. I simply had to rest, get away from it, get a hold on myself. I couldn't face reality. But I learned that there is such a thing as reality, that a person can have a husband, a career, whatever she wants to have.

F.W.: How did the breakdown come about?

Paula: Because Dick and I were working apart, and I missed him so much. I didn't know how to cope with that deep feeling of loneliness. That was in 1965 when I was doing "What's New, Pussycat?" in Europe, and Dick was on tour with "Barefoot in the Park." We were separated for months, and I simply fell apart.

F.W.: Dick, what did you think of Paula when you first met her at Northwestern University?

Dick: I hated her! She was so incredibly beautiful when I first saw her – she still is incredibly beautiful – I thought I didn't have a chance with her. So I guess I made up this Freudian protection, and made myself believe I didn't like her. I told myself she'd turn me down if I asked her out, and who needed that! I was doing fine without her. But when we did some plays together I found out how wrong I was. Now I am very sad when we're not together.

F.W.: Do you consider yourself a moody person?

Dick: Not so much anymore. But before I was recognized as an actor, I was very moody, depressed, disagreeable. There was a three-year period that was horrible. Only now do I realize what Paula put up with. She'd come home bubbling with all the exciting things that were happening to her—the stars

Paula Prentiss Look Back:

she was working with, the places she'd been—and find me sitting in the apartment, morose, gloomy, depressed. She had to bottle up half of what happened because she couldn't share those things with me, because I couldn't take it. So she held it in. Even when we did our TV show, "He and She," together, we both became overly sensitive without realizing it. We'd work all week getting the show ready, film it on Friday, and on Saturday we were so depressed and miserable we couldn't even get out of bed. By Sunday we'd begin feeling like ourselves again, and on Monday we were back at work. Finally it dawned on us what was the matter, and we'd recognize the signals: the oncoming headache, fatigue—and we could handle the situation better.

F.W.: To what do you credit your successful marriage?

Dick: I think the secret is that we live separate but not separated. By that I mean we are very different in many ways, and we live our own lives accordingly. But we stay together. When we're apart for even a short while because of our work, it's awful. If Paula is not around, I feel very, very lonely. Of course, our feelings hit highs and lows, like a roller coaster. But we understand that. When we feel a depression coming on we immediately clue one another.

F.W.: You have no children. Would you like some someday?

Dick: I think we are about ready for a child now. At first we didn't want any because we felt they'd tie us down. I guess they will to some extent. But we have friends who just had a baby and they said you suddenly have feelings you never had before.

F.W.: Paula, do you ever lose your temper?

Paula: Often. And then I yell. This way Dick knows exactly where he stands.

F.W.: And what does he do?

Paula: He yells back.

F.W.: Did you ever hit one another?

Paula: Certainly.

F.W.: And who won?

Paula: It was a draw.

F.W.: Dick, what do you do to keep in shape?

Dick: I do aerobics. Tony Perkins got me started on that. And I run five minutes in place every day. Tony is fantastic. He can do 20 without getting tired. He also gets me involved in word and parlor games, although I hate them. But he's the kind of guy who doesn't ask if you want to play. He just says, "I know a great game, and you do so and so," and before you realize it, he's got you doing it!

F.W.: Dick, you're Jewish, and Paula, you're Catholic. Is there ever any conflict?

Dick: No, it was never an issue. We both grew away from it, so that by the time we were married, it was no problem.

Paula: I think the Catholic and the Jewish religions are very much alike. They are rich, colorful and beautiful. I like being a Catholic, and I love Jewish people. The other day I went into a fish market and watched this man slice sturgeon. I liked it so much I told Dick I wanted to become Jewish. He didn't think that was enough reason. . . .

NEW DISCOVERY! A Groundcover That Thrives Where Other Plants Despair!

Dramatic growth results on an eroding hill: picture taken 2 years after a cluster of only 3 crowns was started!

Strong-Growing Wide-Spreading
Penngift CORONILLA (VARIA)

TRANSFORMS PROBLEM AREAS INTO A SPRING-TO-FALL CARPET OF BLOOMS

• CONTROLS EROSION • NEEDS NO MAINTENANCE • DEFIES DROUGHT
• CONDITIONS SOIL AS IT GROWS • BEAUTIFIES STEEPEST SLOPES

Once established, Coronilla, a recently discovered groundcover that spreads vigorously in poorest soil—beautifies banks, slopes, foundations, borders, edgings and driveways with a dense foot-deep blanket of solid blooms. Controls erosion even on steep gullies—turns almost vertical slopes into living walls of flowers. Defies drought, needs no maintenance. As a nitrogen-fixing legume, it conditions and improves any soil it grows in. Nothing else like it! Here is the outstanding groundcover discovery that turns hard-to-plant problem areas into sweeping vistas of floral beauty . . . and once the roots take hold and plants are established, provides faster coverage, better and more colorful results with less care or cost than any other groundcover we've ever seen or heard of!

This plant marvel shoots out dense mats of bright, green foliage which lies low to the ground and covers itself with brilliant pink flower masses from spring to fall. Talk of "picture beauty"! Equally important is its dense, fibrous, deep root system which grips sandy or rocky soil, even washed-out gullies so tenaciously that it binds and holds together poor subsoils or eroding cliffs under severe conditions where other plants can barely survive . . . much less form a thick, solid stand!

Ideal For New Homes & Hard-to-Mow Areas!
Rarely needs any soil preparation! Set 3 ft. apart for strong growth and dense coverage. Neat, low growing. Chokes weeds. Ideal for steep banks! Winter-hardy. Thrives from Texas to Canada!

People and You:

How to Convince Others When You Just Know You're Right...

The trouble with being absolutely, definitely sure that you have the answer is that it's so hard to make other people listen. Whether discussing politics, religion or family problems, it's all the same. People who already agree with your ideas cheer you on. Convincing others, though, is often impossible. Perhaps if you sounded less positive—less dogmatic—you might do better. Research supported by the National Science Foundation indicates that as soon as you state strong, definite opinions on a subject, people who disagree close their minds and may develop a dislike for you. The same research indicates that if you can state your ideas in a more open-minded way, you keep other people's attitudes more favorable and more flexible toward you. For example, in an open-minded way of stating your opinion you might begin by admitting that there are two sides to the subject. "But I'm in favor of this point of view because. . . ." With this approach, you have a chance for a genuine discussion that might have some effect on the other person's opinions.

How to Handle Your Dog During Mating Season

The coming of spring should alert dog owners that their female dogs will probably come into "season." The indications are: swelling of the vulva, restlessness, loss of appetite, frequent urination. After a slight discharge or bleeding lasting four to seven days, your female dog will be receptive to males. The season lasts about three weeks. Not prepared for a litter of pups? Be sure Trixie is securely confined at all times. Whenever a female dog in heat steps outside or urinates, she leaves a scent male dogs pursue. It can be picked up by a male (on his paws); as he travels, so does her scent—explaining why so many unfamiliar male dogs congregate at your doorstep during the mating period. Before walking a small female dog, carry her some distance from home; a larger dog can be taken out by car. Both methods break the trail and discourage local Romeos.—By Felicia Ames

What Do Many Doctors Use When They Suffer Pain Of Hemorrhoidal Tissues?

This Exclusive Formula Gives Prompt, Temporary Relief In Many Cases from such Pain. Also Helps Shrink Swelling of Hemorrhoidal Tissues Due to Infection.

News about a most effective medication comes from a recent survey of doctors. Asked what they, themselves, use to relieve such painful symptoms, many of the doctors reporting, named one particular medication they either use themselves or in their office practice.

This medication gives prompt relief for hours in many cases from pain and itching of hemorrhoidal tissues. And it actually helps shrink swelling of such tissues caused by infection. Tests by doctors showed this to be true.

The medication used was Preparation H®—the same exclusive formula you can buy at any drug counter without a prescription. Just see if doctor tested Preparation H doesn't help you. There's no other formula like it. Ointment or suppositories.

Shown: 1½ Times Actual Size

PRESIDENTIAL INAUGURAL MEDAL

IN SOLID FINE SILVER AND 24KT GOLD ON SILVER

ORDERS ACCEPTED ONLY IF POSTMARKED BY FEBRUARY 17th, 1973

For almost 200 years, the inauguration of a President of the United States has signified the very meaning of democracy.

In commemoration of this historic event, The Hamilton Mint has commissioned Alfred Brunettin to create a proof medal of President and Mrs. Nixon. This is done only in precious metal—.999 Fine Silver (the purest silver available) or 24KT Gold on Silver. Thus it has a very definite intrinsic value when compared to similiar collector medals.

A RARE OPPORTUNITY TO OWN A VALUABLE INAUGURAL MEDAL

Now you can acquire a true heirloom that you, your children and your grandchildren will treasure for generations to come.

This should be a unique collector's investment opportunity. The total number of medals minted will be limited to the exact number of orders postmarked by February 17, 1973.

Each medal will be individually minted to order in your choice of either Solid Fine Silver or Solid 24KT Gold on Silver. Each portrait will be sculptured in high bas-relief on a mirror finish proof background. To maintain the integrity of your medal, each will bear The Hamilton Mint hallmark and the dies will be destroyed after the edition is complete.

A ONE-TIME OPPORTUNITY—OFFER ENDS FEB. 17, 1973

Because of the obvious demand for these medals, we must strictly limit the purchase to one per collector, and all orders must be postmarked by February 17th. Orders received after that date will be returned.

DANNY MOTHERS LULU
He's lamb's best friend

It's hardly unusual to hear that the black sheep of the family has gone to the dogs, but when a three-week-old black lamb goes to a yellow Labrador retriever for milk and mothering, that's news. It happened on a farm in England, where Danny the Labrador accompanied his master to work one day, and met Lulu the lamb. Now the two are the fondest of friends, and there's no separating them. Danny's learned how to hold Lulu's milk bottle at just the right angle, and how to take her for walks on a leash.

Poker ethics: At the poker table, honesty may not be a vice but deviousness and subterfuge definitely are virtues, according to Louis Zurcher, a psychologist who recently examined the dynamics of a poker club. He found that a player always sees himself as a master—rather than a victim—of his fate. Poker skills give the player a rare chance to regulate life instead of falling prey to it. Bluffing is deeply satisfying, because it allows players to openly indulge in behavior that is considered devious and undesirable in the outside world. Possible conclusion: It's well to allow menfolk a night out for poker.

You*—uncouth to children? Even though you "please" and "thank you" children and everyone else to death, you may be just that. Because, says Elizabeth Post, good manners are based on thoughtfulness to others. And this includes children. She advises, "Don't talk about your child in front of him. 'I wish I could keep Debbie out of the cookie jar. She's getting so fat it's repulsive.' . . . No grown person in his right mind would make this sort of remark about another adult in the subject's hearing, and yet I've heard mothers do it time and again in front of their children. Do they forget that youngsters have ears too, and feelings that can be hurt? . . . Your youngster cannot possibly believe you have much respect or admiration for him if he overhears remarks that are insulting. . . ." From "Please, Say Please," by Elizabeth Post (Little, Brown, $7.95).

MISS HELEN HAYES
"Oh, how I wish . . . !"

QUOTE: Does a great actress like Helen Hayes have regrets? Indeed she does: "I hate to think of those long tours all over the country, where the only contact I had with my family was by phone. The phone has become such a depressing instrument to me. That's why I don't like to speak on it to anyone anymore. Oh, how I wish I had worked less and spent more time with my beloved daughter Mary, who died when she was 19, and my wonderful husband Charlie! The basis of grief is guilt, and that's the one guilt I carry with me. But if some good can come out of this grief—if I can convince just one person not to make the mistake I made—then I will have gained something out of it." UNQUOTE.

DATES: Monday is Lincoln's Birthday. Valentine's Day is Wednesday.

ANNIVERSARIES: Clifford Irving's book about Howard Hughes was exposed as a hoax one year ago Sunday. President Nixon began his visit to China one year ago Saturday.

BIRTHDAYS (all Aquarians): Sunday—Eva Gabor 47; Burt Reynolds 37. Monday—Joe Garagiola 47; Omar Bradley 80; Lorne Greene 58; Bill Russell 39. Tuesday—Bess Truman 88; Kim Novak 40; Tennessee Ernie Ford 54. Wednesday—Jack Benny 79; Hugh Downs 52; Florence Henderson 39. Friday—Katharine Cornell 74; Edgar Bergen 70. Saturday—Marian Anderson 71.

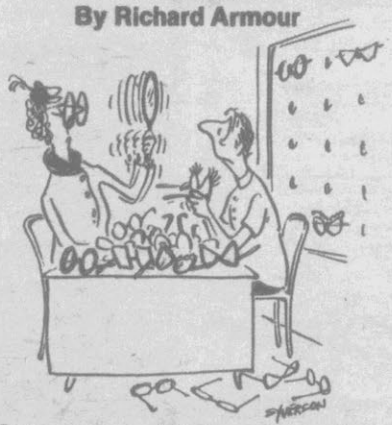
ARMOUR'S ARMOURY
By Richard Armour



Optometrists say that many people are more concerned about the style of their glasses than the accuracy of the prescription.—News item

GLASS OF FASHION

Glasses used to be glasses,
An aid to a person's sight.
The thing that was most important
Was getting correction just right.

But now it's the fashion that matters—
Conservative, swinging or cute.
Selecting the style is an effort,
Like buying a dress or a suit.

You try on first one then another.
"Try this one for size," says the doc.
"That does something for you," he murmurs,
"It's the last one I have in stock."

You go through some dozens of samples;
You study designs in a book. . . .
How you see is, you see, quite important;
More important, though, how do you look?

THE EXPERIMENTAL MEMBERSHIP suggested here will prove, by your own actual experience, how effectually membership in the Book-of-the-Month Club can keep you from missing, through oversight, books you fully intend to read.

As long as you remain a member, you will receive the Book-of-the-Month Club News, a literary magazine published by the Club every three to four weeks. The News announces the coming Selection and describes scores of other important books, most of which are available at substantial discounts—up to 40% on more expensive volumes. All of these books are identical to the publishers' editions in format, size and quality. If you wish to purchase the Selection, do nothing and it will be shipped to you automatically. However, there is no obligation to purchase any particular volume. If you do not want the Selection—or you'd like one of the Alternates, or no book at all—simply indicate your decision on the reply form always enclosed with the News and mail it so we receive it by the date specified.

The News announcing each Selection is mailed in time to allow members at least 10 days to return the form if they do not want the Selection. If, because of late delivery of the News, you should ever receive a Selection without having had the 10-day consideration period, that Selection may be returned at Club expense.

If you continue after this experimental membership, you will earn, for every Club Selection or Alternate you buy, a Book-Dividend Credit. Each Credit, upon payment of a nominal sum, often only $1.00 or $1.50—somewhat more for unusually expensive volumes or sets—will entitle you to a Book-Dividend® which you may choose from over a hundred fine library volumes available over the year. This unique library-building system enables members to save 70% or more of what they would otherwise have to pay.

KRAAG DECIDES ON HOW TO DEAL WITH THE THREAT TO THE DOPE-SMUGGLING SCHEME POSED BY TERRY.

JUKERS, IF YOU'VE TAKEN ALL THE PACKETS OF CONTRABAND OUT OF LEE'S PLANE, YOU CAN GIVE ME A HAND HERE.

KRAAG, MON AMI! NOT ONLY THE GUNS, BUT LIVE AMMO! OURS SHOULD BE A MOST INTERESTING AEROBATIC SHOW.

I EXPECT IT TO MAKE THE DEEPEST IMPRESSION OF HIS LIFE ON LEE.

A SMALL LOSS! IT WAS AN INSULT THAT I, JUKERS, A SUPERIOR PILOT, SHOULD BE MERELY THE SPARE MAN ANYWAY.

WHILE...

KRAAG MUST BE SURE HIS OFFER OF A PIECE OF THE ACTION MADE A CONVERT OF ME... NOT A GUARD IN SIGHT FOR A CHANGE... HUH?

Z

SNAPPER - GENERAL BRASSARD! HOW DID YOU KNOW WHERE TO FIND ME?

HOLY TOLEDO SUSPECTED SOMETHING WAS UP WHEN YOU FAILED TO CHECK BACK WITH HIM.

HIS REGULAR PILOTS REPORTED THAT THE MERCENARIES WERE PRACTISING TEAM AEROBATICS. HE COULDN'T FIGURE WHAT...

SMUGGLING OPERATION, SIR. THERE'S CONTRABAND STASHED IN THE PLANES.

2/11

HIGH GRADE DOPE, I THINK... I IMAGINE THE PLAN IS TO DROP OFF CONSIGNMENTS TO LOCAL CONTACTS WHEREEVER THE TEAM DOES ITS STUFF.

CUTE! THEY COULD FLOOD THE COUNTRY... BE BACK WITH THE CUSTOMS PEOPLE SHORTLY... YOU'D BETTER FADE WHILE YOU CAN, TERENCE.

BUT...

YOU ALL KNOW WHAT'S TO BE DONE. JUKERS, FIND LEE. TELL HIM I'VE SCHEDULED A FINAL TEAM TUNE-UP FOR 0500 HOURS!

Our Story: THE STORM PASSES; BUT THEIR WAY BACK TO THE SEA IS BLOCKED BY A HUGE MERCHANT SHIP THAT HAS RUN AGROUND AT THE RIVER MOUTH. AS ARN AND BOLTARSON WATCH, THE CREW IS REMOVING THE CARGO TO LIGHTEN THE VESSEL.

BOLTARSON IS A SKILLED CAPTAIN, BUT HE IS YOUNG AND GREATLY DESIRES TO PROVE HIMSELF AS A BRAVE AND FIERCE VIKING. HE ADVISES A SURPRISE NIGHT ATTACK.
"TOO LATE FOR THAT," ANNOUNCES ARN, "FOR THEY KNOW WE ARE HERE. I HAVE JUST SCOUTED THEIR POSITION AND THEY ARE EVEN NOW BUILDING AN EARTHWORK."

"BOLTARSON IS OUR LEADER AND IF HE COMMANDS ATTACK I AM WITH HIM TO THE END, BUT THEY OUTNUMBER US AND EVEN IF WE OVERRUN THEIR BREASTWORK. THE SHIP IS LIKE A FORTRESS TO BE STORMED. WE MUST BUILD DEFENSES, FOR WE TOO ARE TRAPPED."

THE WARRIORS GRUMBLE. THEY WANT THE FIERCE EXCITEMENT OF BATTLE, BUT THEIR ARDOR COOLS WHEN A HUNTING PARTY REPORTS: "WE SAW SOME PICTS. THEY ARE GATHERING IN THE HILLS— A WAR PARTY—FOR THEY ARE ARMED!"

THERE IS PLENTY OF TIMBER AT HAND AND A STRONG PALISADE IS QUICKLY RAISED.
