Rogers Cites U.S. Commitment Officials Arrive In Paris For Indochina Peace Talk

By GERARD LOUGHRAN
PARIS (UPI) — Secretary of State William P. Rogers said Saturday the United States is committed to building peace in Indochina.

Rogers flew in from Washington to attend a 13-party conference, starting Monday, aimed at guaranteeing the Vietnam cease-fire.

"We look to the conference to endorse the (cease-fire) agreement of Jan. 27 and to contribute to collective action to the ending of war and adherence of peace throughout Indochina," he said. "My government is committed to the success of this conference."

Rogers joined foreign ministers and other officials from all nations involved in the Vietnam war, the cease-fire and the duty of policing it.

They all arrived at the Bretigny military air base south of Paris because of a strike of air traffic controllers at Paris' main international airports or Orly and Bourget.

Earlier, North Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Duy Trihn said he hoped the international conference on Vietnam would secure an end to truce violations. He said he believed that the meeting would be interesting, short and successful.

Rogers told newsmen in a prepared statement:

"The international conference of foreign ministers presents an opportunity — unparalleled certainly in recent history — for constructive and concerted international action.

"The agreements to end the war in Vietnam ... have been welcomed enthusiastically throughout the world. They give substance to the universal hope that an era of reconciliation has truly begun. Today we return to Paris to continue the work of building a viable structure for peace."

"We believe that with mutual good will and understanding the hopeful beginnings of peace in Indochina can be nurtured and directed to an enduring reality."

Monday's conference will be historic because for the first time ever the Foreign Ministers of the world's three superpowers — China, the Soviet Union and the United States — will meet together in the same room.

Trinh arrived at Bretigny military airfield as the head of the Hanoi delegation to the talks which are aimed at providing international guarantees for the Jan. 27 Vietnam peace pact.

He said: "In executing the agreement ... certain positive results have been obtained, but there have been many violations — some of them very serious."

Foreign ministers from 11 nations and the Viet Cong are scheduled to attend the conference. Included are Canada, China, France, Great Britain, Hungary, Indonesia, North Vietnam, Poland, South Vietnam, the Soviet Union, and the United States.

United Nations Secretary General Kurt Waldheim was also scheduled to participate in the meetings.

Trinh was met at the airport by Mme. Nguyen Thi Binh, the Viet Cong Foreign Minister. He arrived at a military airfield because a strike by traffic controllers at Orly closed down that airport.

The Viet Cong and South Vietnam Friday agreed to start political discussions on South Vietnam's future, probably in Paris, in the week of March 5 to 10.

Reform Goals Are Stressed By Nixon

By CRAIG A. PALMER
CAMP DAVID, Md. (UPI) — President Nixon pledged Saturday to eliminate "paternalism, social exploitation and waste" of Democratic domestic programs of the 1960s, and to work for reforms stressing individual self-help backed by a healthy economy.

In a mid-day nationwide radio address recorded Friday at the White House, the President gave the philosophical basis — but few details — behind the special message on "human resources" he will submit to Congress on Monday. Speaking in broad terms, the President gave priority to four areas of social welfare reforms:

—Shifting the present system of narrow, closely controlled federal grants for education and job training to state and local governments through "special revenue sharing," under which federal money could be spent according to local need.

—Abolishing programs that have done their job, such as federal subsidies for hospital construction, and diverting the savings into such other areas as cancer and heart disease research.

—"To make the economic opportunity dollar go further," abolishing the Office of Economic Opportunity and transferring its antipoverty functions to other agencies.

—Welfare reform, with some congressionally approved formula for assuring the needy a decent annual income while encouraging employment. "A system which penalizes a person for going to work and rewards a person for going on welfare is totally alien to the American tradition of self-reliance and self-respect," he said.

The President particularly criticized the Johnson administration's poverty programs. "Those who make a profession out of poverty got fat; the taxpayer got stuck with the bill, and the disadvantaged themselves got little but broken promises," he said.

Under the budget Nixon has proposed for the fiscal year starting next July 1, about 70 federal social service programs either would be cut out entirely or cut down.

Democratic critics of the President have said his action would mean a cut of about $6 billion in spending for such social services and vowed to oppose his proposals.

Nixon told his audience that Americans "deserve programs that say yes to human needs by saying no to paternalism, social exploitation and waste." To risk inflation and a crippled economy by spending recklessly on social welfare, he said, would punish those who need help the most.

"The free American economy has done more to combat poverty and to raise our standard of living than any government program imaginable," he said. "The stable, healthy growth of our economy must remain the cornerstone of all of our human resources policies in the 1970s."

People's Day Mar. 9

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Holshouser said Saturday he plans to hold his second monthly "People's Day" at the state Capitol Friday, March 9.

The governor will be available for individual interviews by citizens from 10 a.m. until noon and 1 p.m. to 4 p.m.

It will be on a first-come, first-served basis, and no advance appointments will be made. As each person arrives at the Capitol, he or she will be given a number designating their place in line to see Holshouser.

Each meeting with the governor will be private and limited to five minutes.

The governor said he was "extremely pleased" with the success of the first People's Day Feb. 9. He added, "It convinced me that this program will be one of the most important that I will undertake during my administration."

During a five-hour period Feb. 9, Holshouser met with 67 people. Some had to be turned away because of lack of time.

"Many of those I was unable to see left written messages outlining the matters which they wished to discuss with me," Holshouser said. "We have referred the various matters brought to me personally and in written messages for follow-up in the appropriate agencies. We hope to have answers for many of these people soon."

The governor said he was hopeful "that many of the people who were unable to meet with me on the first People's Day can return March 9 and will arrive early in the morning to be assured of a place in the schedule."

Israel Admits Libyan Plane Not 'Hostile'

By United Press International
Israel conceded Saturday the Libyan airliner shot down over Sinai three days ago was lost, and not on a hostile mission as first thought. It said the incident was "a tragedy of mistakes and misunderstandings, and urged that a "hot line" be set up to prevent any recurrence.

A Beirut newspaper said said Libyan planes were cruising the skies over the Mediterranean, looking for Israeli civilian jet airliners to shoot down. In Cairo, a battle council met in an atmosphere of extreme tension as students in the streets shouted for revenge.

The Israeli admission was based on the downed plane's flight recorder. The recorder revealed that the French pilot of the plane thought he was over Egypt instead of Sinai and that the Israeli Phantom jets pursuing him were Egyptian MIGs.

The Israelis shot the plane down, killing 106 of the 113 persons aboard.

But Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Dayan denied any guilt, criticizing the pilot for not landing as instructed by the Israeli pilots and accusing the pilot of "irresponsibility" for not distinguishing between a Phantom and a MIG.

He suggested that a hot line communications system be set up between Cairo and Israel to avoid future mistakes.

Arab politicians rejected Dayan's suggestion, saying that Israel was trying to establish communication with the Arabs "through the back door."

Israel's air force commander Maj. Gen. Mordechai Hod, called the affair a "tragedy of mistakes and misunderstandings," mostly due to the fact the 727 pilot was lost and thought the fighters signaling him to land were Egyptian.

The transcript from the flight recorder showed that it was only seconds before the crash into the desert that the copilot recognized the jets as Israeli, shouting: "It's Israeli fighter, an Israeli fighter!"

Pilot Jacques Bourges replied: "Keep going." It was the last word.

In Cairo Saturday, President Anwar Sadat met with the "Supreme Committee for the Battle," a gathering of his top political and military aides.

Two prominent Egyptian television stars, among the victims of the crash, were buried and students in the funeral cortege shouted "Revenge, revenge, Sadat!"

Death Jump

ROCKY MOUNT, N.C. (AP)—The president of the Rocky Mount Sports Parachute Club fell 3,000 feet to his death Saturday when his parachute malfunctioned during a stunt dive.

Witnesses said Dorsey Braswell, 42, of Rocky Mount was performing a two-man hookup trick with a fellow club member when the accident occurred.

Braswell, a veteran chutist with almost 700 jumps to his credit, had linked with Marvin Farmer after jumping from an altitude of about 6,000 feet. After holding hands while they descended to 3,000 feet, the two separated and pulled their ripcords. Witnesses said only one side of Braswell's main parachute opened, and this his reserve chute tangled in its cords.

The club was jumping over an open field three miles east of Rocky Mount.

ABC Enforcer Is Out Of Job

RALEIGH (AP) — Lee P. Phillips, 63, director of law enforcement for the North Carolina Alcoholic Beverage Control Board since 1959, has been dismissed, effective Feb. 28, it was reported Saturday.

The announcement came in a prepared statement from Dr. L.C. Holshouser, board chairman. He said, "The board is of the opinion that it can improve the operation and performance of the Law Enforcement Division "with a new director."

"A search is now underway for a qualified person to fill this position," Holshouser added. Phillips said Holshouser told him last month that his services were being terminated.

Phillips has worked a total of 33 years in state government. He started with the State Highway Patrol in March, 1935, and transferred to the State Bureau of Investigation in 1943. He worked there as an agent until July 1954, when he left state government. He was with the Apex police department a year and a half and later was superintendent of a plywood and veneer company.

Phillips began work with the ABC Board in July, 1958, as assistant director of the Law Enforcement Division.

Sen. Helms 'Might' Favor Steps Against News Bias

By MARGARET GENTRY
AP Regional Service
WASHINGTON (AP) — The only television station executive in the Senate, Jesse Helms of North Carolina, has indicated that he might support government action against what he called consistent bias in national TV network news programs.

Helms said in an interview he endorsed White House efforts to hold local stations accountable for the balance and taste of all network news and entertainment programs they broadcast.

He said if broadcasters fail to take that step voluntarily, "sooner or later, the government is going to do it."

A Republican, Helms was elected to his first Senate term last November. Until his election, he was executive vice president of Capitol Broadcasting Co. which operates WRAL-TV, in Raleigh, N.C., as well as a radio station and radio network. He wrote and delivered daily TV and radio editorials.

Helms was asked to comment on a proposal by Clay T. Whitehead, director of the White House Office of Telecommunications Policy, that local stations should be held responsible for network programming at the time of applying for license renewal.

"I agree thoroughly with Mr. Whitehead that some way the broadcasters must devise a way, a means of having some influence with the networks as to the content and the objectivity of the newscasts which the local stations carry," he replied.

Helms said:

"These stations pull a switch and there comes 30 minutes of that quote-news-uncite, which in the past has driven me up a wall as a broadcast executive because I saw so many instances of deliberate bias."

He said that during his 12 years as an officer of the North Carolina company, "I must have filed 500 protests with the networks and, of course, it amounted to absolutely nothing."

Raleigh station was affiliated with each of the three major networks, CBS, NBC and ABC. Despite protests, he claimed, the bias continued.

"We saw it particularly in the South during the 60s when the civil rights uproar was at its height."

He called network reporting of the integration efforts "absolutely contrived — this wasn't news, this was a little one-act play," and accused the networks of staging events rather than reporting occurrences as they happened.

Helms said he has taken the same position in talks with broadcasters.

On other topics, Helms declared support for President Nixon's efforts to trim the scope and cost of federal domestic programs.

He said he expects to vote against pending legislation to restore the funds cut from numerous programs, even though that might prove unpopular with his constituents.

SHP To Get Full Study

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Holshouser announced Friday the initiation of a study of the state Highway Patrol.

The study will begin Monday under the direction of the Department of Transportation, and will be conducted by the Northwestern University Traffic Institute, said Holshouser.

He said the study will cost approximately $40,000, to be paid by the U.S. Department of Transportation. He said the major objectives of the study will be:

—to analyze the patrol's entire operation.

—to find out what can and should be improved.

—to determine how improvements can be made, now and in the future.

Holshouser noted that the patrol "has enjoyed a reputation for excellence in traffic police work," but said "there has never been a systematic study of the patrol's mission and the ways in which it seeks to achieve its mission."

Park Acquires Oregon Station

ITHACA, N.Y. — Park Broadcasting, Inc., of Ithaca, N.Y., on Wednesday, Feb. 21, acquired ownership of KWJJ, a 59,000-watt AM radio station in Portland, Ore., it is announced by Roy H. Park, president.

The transaction Wednesday afternoon in Portland completed an agreement in June, 1972, in which the Park firm agreed to buy the station for $2,500,000 in cash from the KWJJ Broadcasting Co. of Portland.

Accident Cut Power For Parts Of Area

Areas of Ayden, Winterville, East Carolina University, and the Hollywood substation were without current Saturday for about an hour and 45 minutes as a result of the collision of a car with a utility pole.

The collision occurred in front of Carolina Dairy Saturday afternoon. A 34,000 volt transmission line fell and shorted against a 12,000 volt line when the pole broke. It caused a shortage at the Southside substation on the 264 bypass.

Malcolm Green, assistant director of the Utilities Commission, said the major damage was to the circuit breaker and to a lightning arrester. Damages were about $5,000 to the substation equipment.

The Greenville Fire Department was called to the station when a fire was set to the grass in the substation area.

John Alfred Turnage, 53, of 106 Lindenwood Road, driver of the automobile causing the accident was not charged. Damages were estimated at $900 to his car.

Charge Man In Local Break-In

A Pactolus man was charged early Saturday with breaking and entering at College View Cleaners.

Officers say that Thomas Lee (Robert) Baker, 22, of Rt. 5, Pactolus was held in the Pitt County Jail under $500 bond pending court action Saturday.

Politics Not Their Field

RALEIGH (AP) — Several hundred state probation and parole workers were told Friday to either get out of politics or get out of state government.

Secretary David Jones of the State Department of Social Rehabilitation and Control told an unprecedented gathering of probation and parole employees from across the state that apparently in the past "sometimes you've spent more time on politics than on production."

"Your job is with the people, not hanging around the court-houses," Jones said. "I'm dedicated to making a 360-degree turn in what has been the past operations of this department. Your jobs are at stake."

Jones said he had called together the approximately 400 state employees to clarify his intentions about operation of paroles and probation during the next four years.

He indicated he was moved partly by the arrest last week of two probation officers on charges of transporting illegal liquor in a state-owned car. Jones said that incident had "brought shame" on the department.

"If there are any more violations of rules and your are caught, then I hope you've got another job in line," Jones said.

Asserts Egypt Will Not Give Up Its Territory

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — A top advisor to Egyptian President Anwar Sadat said Saturday that Egypt would not give up any territory to obtain a solution in the Middle East.

Mohammed Hafez Ismail told newsmen that Egypt's basic request was "the complete withdrawal of Israeli forces) from all Egyptian territory and the full sovereignty of Egypt and the full control of Egypt over its territory."

He said Egypt would never depart "from this basic principle."

Ismail called on Secretary General Kurt Waldheim following a visit to Washington where he talked with President Nixon and Secretary of State William P. Rogers. He said his talks in Washington had been "very important cordial, warm and very objective."

Statements By The Free

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Here is a selection of comments made by freed American prisoners of war at news conferences held Friday at military hospitals in various parts of the country.

THEIR TREATMENT

"When everyone comes back we can tell it like it is... It will be a shock. Conditions in the United States are so good, I just think the American people are going to be very surprised or shocked by some of the things that took place."

"We didn't have a great deal to do. We would eat breakfast in the morning, then sit around for a long time, eat lunch, sit around some more and then eat dinner... We kept our spirits up."

"I believe that it's an expression of the fact that human nature when placed under duress can find and use sources of strength necessary not only to survive, but to do it creditably. That's really what happened, and you can all see it."

"We are offended that anyone would think we were used in any sort of organized system of programmed orchestration. At no time — including the present — have I ever been given words to say."

Naval Hospital. "... Due to the fact that down through the years the Vietnam war has been a long war and at times unpopular, the American people are showering on us and people like us the admiration they probably, many of them, looking back, feel they should have showered on all these people who did not come back or who came back wounded."

THE ANTIWAR MOVEMENT

"I think they shamed our nation in the eyes of the enemy by dealing with them on their grounds. I am a little bit disgruntled with the small minority who see fit to loudly oppose the majority ruling once the majority decides."

"I feel very strongly that it's about time the American people started pulling together... It's about time we started raising the flag instead of burning it."

"I don't know a single man who fought the war who would have accepted amnesty, and I certainly don't know why anyone who refused to fight should be given amnesty."

"I don't think they should let them back. They are not true Americans. If they can't go and fight, they have no business coming back to their country."

Vote Tuesday On Combining Of Wilmington And County Govm't

WILMINGTON, N. C. (UPI)— Voters in the city of Wilmington and in New Hanover County go to the polls Tuesday to decide whether to combine the two governments.

The proposal has the support of the City Council and the Greater Wilmington Chamber of Commerce, but most of the county commissioners, Democrats and Republicans alike, are opposed to it.

So heated has the debate become that not even backers of the plan, which sprang from a Chamber of Commerce study four years ago, are predicting victory.

"On the prospects, I anticipate a very tight and close election," said businessman William G. Broadfoot Jr., a member of the chamber's original study committee and head of a group known as Citizens for Consolidation.

Opponents of the measure are optimistic consolation will be defeated. Broadfoot and other supporters of consolidation maintain that the measure is the next fiscal step for governments that already share the cost of 80 per cent of their services.

"We just want to pull the zipper the rest of the way," said Broadfoot. "There has been no dispute whatsoever on the services now consolidated." The new charter would exclude three beach communities, Carolina, Kure and Wrightsville, but if the proposal passes, residents of the towns will later get a chance to decide whether they want to join.

Opponents of the charter contend that it would create a larger, more expensive government, less responsive to the public. Mrs. Vivian Wright, a county commissioner and member of a group called the Truth About Consolidation, said the action would not actually be a consolidation because the beach communities are left off the original ballot.

"It would just reduce the governments in the county from four to five," she said. She added, "I've never seen government get any bigger without getting more expensive and less responsive to the people."

Should the initiative succeed, it would create the first consolidated government in urban North Carolina. Voters in Charlotte and Mecklenburg County rejected a similar proposal in 1971.

"Charlotte's charter was extremely complicated," said Broadfoot. "They tried to change everything in the county."

The Wilmington charter would simply combine the five-member city council and the five-member county commission into a single 10-member governing board, elected for a two-year term.

The charter would also allow the city of Wilmington's water and sewage plant to take over treatment outside its limits. The county has more than 14,000 septic tanks, and a U. S. Department of Agriculture official reported recently that about 70 per cent of the county's soil is unsafe for septic tanks.

But outright hustling of orders for the wines being served is forbidden. And "No student organization, college fraternity or sorority shall sponsor a wine-tasting," under the four pages of wine tasting rules distributed Friday by the state Alcoholic Beverage Control Department.

Traditionally, California is known for its winery tours that end with a stop at the wine tasting room. There, mom and dad savor some of the wines — dad trying to appear as knowledgeable a connoisseur as possible — while the children pass the time in a nearby playground or scramble around the picnic tables.

With the increasing popularity of wine-tasting parties came problems. "It's becoming very popular," said Kermit Greene, chief of business practices for the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (ABC). "People were using it not just to promote knowledge of wine or to help charity, but — for instance — to open a new ski shop and getting someone to donate wine for it," he said.

Basically, the rules allow charities and other nonprofit groups to hold wine tastings if they buy a one-day license for $5.50, if there is no admission charge and if other conditions are met.

Seek Limit Class Sizes

RALEIGH (AP) — Eighty-two of the 120 House members signed their names to a bill Friday that would limit the size of classes in North Carolina's public schools.

The bill, introduced by Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, says that classes in the first three grades can't have more than 25 pupils, classes in the next three grades can't have more than 30 pupils and that teachers in junior and senior high schools cannot be assigned more than 150 pupils.

Miller estimated his bill would cost $25 million during the next two fiscal years and asserted it would "help every child in every classroom in North Carolina." He said teachers had told him that reduction of class size is "one of the most pressing school needs."

In other action, the House passed and sent to the Senate a bill to ban political posters or other political advertising from highway rights-of-way.

approved and enacted a bill that would provide that district committees of the political party involved shall fill future general assembly vacancies in multi-count districts.

Other new legislation included bills by Rep. Lawrence Davis, D-Forsyth, to increase the state Board of Paroles from three to five members and to require that decisions of the parole board must be unanimous in cases where a prisoner's sentence has been commuted by the governor or the board had written objections from the judge or solicitor.

Such a change, Davis said, "would assure the prisoners of fairness and assure the public of better protection." Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir, introduced a bill backed by the North Carolina Bankers Association to tax banks the same way other North Carolina business corporations are taxed.

Another Lilley bill would give every retired person in North Carolina a $3,000 exemption on their state income taxes. Lilley pointed out that under present law the retirement income of state workers is entirely exempt from taxes, retired federal employees receive an exemption of $3,000 and retired military personnel have a $1,250 exemption.

Other new legislation Friday included bills: —By Rep. Ernest Messer, D-Haywood, to make it a misdemeanor for a person to vote in a precinct from which he has moved more than 30 days after he moved.

—By Rep. Graham Tart, D-Sampson to limit laundry services performed by Department of Corrections laundries to work for agencies which are supported by state funds.

—By Rep. Claude DeBruhl, D-Buncombe, to provide scholarships at state supported universities for children of prisoners of war or servicemen missing in action.

Gunners Pound Convoy

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (UPI) — Khmer Rouge gunners Saturday pounded a Mekong River convoy bearing vital food, petroleum and ammunition to the Cambodian capital. No damage was reported immediately.

The Cambodian high command said the convoy, en route from the Vietnamese port city of Tan Chau, was hit less than five miles inside the Cambodian border and was forced to halt briefly before continuing on to Phnom Penh.

In Honolulu, the U.S. Pacific command reported that U.S. bombers Saturday attacked Communist positions in Cambodia "at the request of the Cambodian government."

Claims Critics Are 'Burning'

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI) — U.S. Sen. Hugh Scott, R-Pa., Saturday said presidential critics are angry because returning POWs are asking God to bless the United States and not damn it.

"What's burning the critics up is they didn't say God damn America," the Senate minority leader told the Pennsylvania GOP state committee convention. Scott said the returning prisoners of war have "made patriotism popular in America again," and discounted critics who say the method of bringing home POWs is a well-orchestrated public relations gimmick.

"Anybody who thinks these POWs were computerized is taking a cheap shot at brave men," he said. "When they said 'God bless America,' it came from the heart," Scott said. He said POWs are talking "freely and under no interdiction whatsoever."

In a broadcast from Washington to his Pennsylvania constituents, Scott predicted the President would win his fight with Congress over impoundment of funds appropriated for domestic programs.

"The Congress is going to lose on this ... they know they're going to lose," Scott said, adding that he would support the President's position on impoundment and his decision to veto some bills to hold down federal spending.

"Congress seeks to pass more money than the President says is needed in program after program," Scott complained. "Then, when they add it up, it is so much more than the income taken in from taxes will warrant. That's the problem."

Explosion Cripples Air Base In Hawaii

By DAN CARMICHAEL HICKAM AFB, Hawaii (UPI) — An explosion followed by "two fireballs and flames" knocked out a big power complex Saturday, crippling this air base that is headquarters for the Pacific Air Force.

Four persons were seriously injured by the blast in a warehouse the size of a city block which houses the base electric transformer plant. An Air Force spokesman said that two airmen and two civilians in the building at the time were "seriously" burned.

Spokesmen would not discuss the cause of the explosion in the building beside the flight line, but ruled out sabotage. An eyewitness who was working nearby said he heard a "loud noise" and ran toward the scene.

He said he saw "two fireballs and flames" shooting up inside the building. "There were two men rolling around on the grass," said the Air Force sergeant who declined to give his name. "They were in terrible pain and were screaming. One man's clothes were on fire."

Ambulances and fire trucks were on the scene within minutes of the blast. Firemen in asbestos suits probed through the charred building whose windows were blown out showering glass outside. Pieces of burned clothing lay on the concrete where men burned in the explosion had rolled on the concrete.

Hickam adjoins Honolulu International Airport, but the blast did not affect operations there.

The 2,500-acre base is headquarters for the Pacific Air Force and accommodates about 8,000 persons, most of them military personnel.

The explosion cut electricity throughout the base, but emergency generators quickly supplied emergency services.

Council Sounds Tax Repeal Call

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Consumers Council called Saturday for repeal of the state's sales tax on food and non-prescription drugs.

In its legislative program the council also called for "adoption of a more progressive individual income tax by increasing the top rate from 7 to 10 per cent" and adoption by the state of the federal income tax base and income tax form to establish uniformity.

Other tax changes proposed by the council included reevaluation of property tax exemptions and classifications and "elimination of existing tax loopholes."

It said the group "opposes any attempts by private interest groups to weaken the tax base." The council said that Dr. Ralph Greene, the society's president and Mrs. Lillian Woo, the vice president, would serve as non-paid lobbyists for the council's program.

In insurance, the council said it "endorses the concept of no-fault automobile insurance." It added that North Carolina "needs to enact strong environmental protection laws to penalize and prevent corporations from wantonly despoiling the air, water and land in this state."

In the area of interest payments it called for "elimination of the existing unfair practice in revolving charge account and credit card finance charges."

High Aims Are Owed To Public

Much has been heard about the open door policy of the Holshouser administration and David T. Flaherty, secretary of the N.C. Department of Human Resources emphasized it in a talk here Tuesday.

The administration is committed to an open policy, he said. "We will have no more closed meetings in any area we are responsible for."

He cited plans for a WATS line so the public can call in questions to Raleigh and meetings around the state so problems can be discussed.

"When people come to us with questions we want to respond," he declared. "We want to be responsive and we will be responsive."

In his own department Flaherty continued, personnel are working at seeing that all letters are answered within 24 hours, even if it is only an acknowledgement that the letter has been received.

These are high aims for the administration; and yet they are no more than the public should expect from government at any level.

If government is going to meet the needs of the people, then its officials must know what the people are thinking. Officials ensconced behind desks in Raleigh know little of what is bothering the people the length and breadth of the state. They and their assistants must get out to find out what is needed to make government more responsive.

The administration has set high aims in the area of an open door and open meetings policy; however they are aims that should be met by all government at all times. We do not need ivory tower administrators; nor do we need decisions made behind closed doors which affect all of the tax payers.

Somehow, Peace Must Come To Middle East

The horrors of war never cease to repel us and certainly the shooting down of an unarmed civilian passenger plane by Israel is most repulsive.

It can be argued that the threat existed the plane was aimed at Israeli military installations, or that the act was no more repulsive than the massacre of Jewish athletes in Munich. Still there is no excuse powerful enough to justify the killing of more than 90 innocent people as happened in this tragic crash.

The Vietnam war has been ended through negotiation and somehow the problems of the Middle East must be settled through negotiation. Otherwise, sooner or later the mistake will be made there which will plunge the world into a holocaust.

Hanoi Shaping New Challenge

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK WASHINGTON — Having so disrupted the proposed inspection process that fighting has continued unabated during nearly four weeks since the "ceasefire" in Vietnam, Hanoi now can be counted on to renege on its agreed troop withdrawal from Laos.

This adds up to a coherent Communist strategy: maximum military pressure in South Vietnam, as the U.S. totally disengages. By stalling inspection through the four-power Joint Military Commission (JMC), the Communists have permitted heavy operations by North Vietnamese troops throughout South Vietnam. But to survive in the south, these troops need their logistical base in Laos, where 60,000 North Vietnamese regulars are stationed and showing no sign of leaving.

Thus, with the war supposedly ended, yet another Indo-chinese challenge is posed for President Nixon. Experts here believe only heavy U.S. pressure can force Hanoi to keep its promise and withdraw its men from Laos. But Hanoi is counting on Mr. Nixon's iron resolve finally to submit to overwhelming American sentiment to get out of Indochina and stay out.

The attempted land grab in South Vietnam by Communist forces after the ceasefire was widely predicted. In addition, South Vietnamese government troops, unwilling to accept Communist advances just before the ceasefire by suicide missions, went on a "peacetime" offensive to get more land.

Despite this mutual complicity, however, continued fighting at a high level was a systematic goal of Communist officials at JMC meetings in Saigon.

The pattern was set at the first closed-door meeting. Gen. Gilbert Woodward, U.S. representative on the JMC, and his South Vietnamese counterpart opened by placing on the table their identity cards and credentials. The Vietcong and North Vietnamese representatives refused to follow suit, stubbornly resisting the formality of presenting their credentials or giving their names.

That impasse continued for days. When it was broken, the Vietcong representative—Lt. Gen. Tran Van Tra, actually a North Vietnamese officer and member of Hanoi's Communist central committee—instigated more delay. He demanded the U.S. abandon its bases in South Vietnam, though Woodward insisted all bases had been turned over to the Saigon government. Tra next plunged into the quagmire of mutual prisoner exchanges, though this was clearly out of the JMC's jurisdiction.

The result: no inspection teams were sent into the interior while fighting equalled—sometimes surpassed—the peaks of the last six months. During one night last week, Communist gunners fired 1,400 mixed mortar and artillery rounds into South Vietnamese airborne troops at Quang Tri. "It's the noisiest ceasefire in

FINAL EXAM
Psychologists are constantly calling our attention to the increase of alcoholism in our population.

There are various causes for this disease. One is that many a person seeks out alcohol for solace when he encounters an overwhelming crisis in life. He experiences disappointment or sorrow, and because he knows that a few ounces out of a bottle will make him forget these things temporarily so he reaches for the bottle. Of course he comes back to sorrows that are deepening and problems more overwhelming than when he last confronted them. But many a person is not able to resist the temporary relief which comes from anesthetizing apportion of his brain and thereby enabling him for the time being to forget or to evade

That this is a tragically unwise way to approach any problem goes without saying. We need always to remember that life is a school and that the Master in charge of that school puts problems before us with the expectation that we will work them out and grow in so doing. To toss the problem into the wastepaper basket is only to pile up trouble for ourselves on that day when the final examination will be held.

And for every one of us there is a final examination in prospect. The Bible calls it Judgment Day. It occurs many times (spelled with small letters, and finally spelled in caps).

Sunday Morning Notes

A car from Kinston was seen on Memorial Drive the other day. The owner worked for Dupont. That must be true because the personalized license plate on the vehicle read: "DACRON."

Tommy Forrest, Daily Reflector photographer has a personalized plate which reads, "NIKON." Nikon, of course, is a 35 mm camera which is widely used now by press photographers. Tommy plans to send a photo of the plate off to the company.

And among other plates seen around are three which read ECU-'73, ECU-'74 and ECU-'75.

Daily Reflector Circulation Manager Bonnie Ray Hardee thought there was a religious thief around his neighborhood.

He missed a number of gospel tapes from his car. Strangely the culprit had taken only one country and western tape and left the others.

The mystery was solved when Bonnie's two little girls, Bonita and Tracie, admitted they had "borrowed" the tapes to play with. They were found in good condition on the front porch.

Chamber-Merchants Association Manager Harold Creech asked for comments on cards he put at each plate when Dave Flaherty secretary of the Department of Human Resources spoke last week.

"You can suggest anything you want—except getting rid of the Chamber manager," Creech quipped. One wise guy was seen erasing his suggestion from the card.

Flaherty was an executive with Broyhill Industries before joining Gov. Holshouser's team in state government.

ALVIN TAYLOR

In talking about his agency, Flaherty explained that it was what he used to call bureaucracy. "I can't say it now because I'm part of it," he chuckled.

And a lady has reportedly threatened to cancel her subscription to The Daily Reflector if we don't stop using dirty words.

Well things like snow, cold, ice, sub freezing... We sure do want to quit using them pretty soon.

To the editor:

Human Relationship is most important among everyone. We must learn to understand how people feel and their reason for feeling the way they do.

Our business law class at D. H. Conley High School under the supervision of Mrs. Mary Thompson has been studying the You in Human Relationships.

People make the business world operate. In order to maintain a job we must learn to be dependable. An employer wants an employee he can rely on for accurate work. One big mistake could terminate a business.

Many people find it hard to find a job. Maybe one reason is the attitude they have.

They may want to change the environment around them, instead of trying to adjust to it. If this situation arises, try to change yourself. A pleasant attitude can go a long way to helping a business. People enjoy doing business with friendly people.

Set your goals in life and strive for them. Try to find a job that meets your capabilities. Have an optimistic look on your problems. In other words, accentuate the positive, eliminate the negative. An employer once had to start down the same path in life. The best way to start is with the attitude to never give up but keep on trying.

Insists His Age Is 117

By KEN GEMPFFERT

Associated Press Writer TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — John Dunlap, who says he is 117, can't remember the name of the "nice feller" who lives inside but he still enjoys his job as gardener at the mansion of Florida Gov. Reubin Askew.

"Man needs to work to be honest because if he doesn't work he's stealing from the Lord," says the man who recalls his mother telling him he was born on Feb. 4, 1856.

Dunlap, a lay minister who started preaching at Missionary Baptist Church in Camilla, Ga., when he was 14, joined the U.S. Labor Department's Green Thumb program last October and was assigned to work at the governor's mansion.

"He was recommended to us by the employment service office in Tallahassee. They said he'd been coming down there looking for a job for several years," said Ben Hart, field supervisor of the federal program which provides jobs for rural poor people 55 years or older.

After passing a physical examination, Dunlap started raking leaves and puttering around the governor's greenhouse while the U.S. Labor Department called him "the oldest green thumb."

But a check with the 1880 census showed Dunlap listed as 4 years old at the time, making him only 97. The Labor Department has since backed off on its claim, but Dunlap still believes he's 117.

"I can't go against my mother," the diminutive, wisened old man with wisps of white hair says. "But it's a new time now so you should go by what the government says, I suppose."

The tobacco-chewing preacher has earned the respect of coworkers by trying to do his share even though failing sight and hearing slows him down.

"The only problem we've had with him is that he tries to keep up with the younger men — these 70-year-olds. We have to tell him to sit down and rest," said Hart.

The government pays the elderly workers $1.60 an hour for a 40-hour week of work on beautification or conservation projects. Six green thumbs work at the mansion.

Dunlap, who farmed in Georgia and north Florida between preaching sessions, now lives with his fourth wife, Fannie, 73, and a pet rooster. He's outlived his first three wives and four of his 13 children. His youngest child is 42.

They Serve The Small Investor

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — If you are one of the estranged small investors who fled the market in the past few years because of poor service from your broker, or no service at all, there is still a place for you to buy and sell — at the teller's window of many commercial banks.

The banks don't publicize the service, and some bankers don't even know about it, but many investors regularly buy and sell that way.

A sampling of banks around the country indicates that most of those dealing in stocks do so as a convenience. Some say they'd just as soon not to do it, but they intend to continue.

One reason is that many commercial banks are committed to full-service or one-stop banking in which customers are told their financial needs can be handled under one roof.

Another is that, in some areas, the nearest broker may be a considerable distance away, at least for a personal visit. While the bankers don't offer research and advice, the personal relationship appears to be an attraction.

In addition to the regular broker's commission, most banks charge a fee ranging from $2 to $20, regardless of the size of the transaction.

Many bankers recoil in shock at the notion that they might be competing with brokers, who also might be big customers of the bank. They emphasize that, like any other trader, they must channel their orders through brokerage houses.

Still, with security regulations subject to change, especially regarding institutional membership on exchanges, it isn't inconceivable that banks some day could develop an active broker's commission, most banks charge a fee ranging from $2 to $20, regardless of the size of the transaction.

Many brokers are far more willing to accept small orders now than they were two or three years ago when they were emerging not only from a financial crisis but from a near disaster with record-keeping.

The New York Stock Exchange, for example, offers a list of brokers who accept and even seek odd lots, which are purchases and sales of stocks involving less than 100 shares.

Observations From Editorial Columns

Productivity—It's Gaining

When Chairman C. Jackson Grayson of the Price Commission spoke to the Future Memphis, Inc., meeting in Memphis last week, he urged increased productivity as the best way to halt inflation. "If we don't get productivity up in this nation," he said, "then we are going to have trouble fighting inflation."

He's right, of course. Increased productivity is what makes the things we produce less costly for both consumers here at home and abroad. Thus if productivity rises sufficiently, everyone can buy the things he needs without demanding much higher wages and the nation gains by improving its balance of payments abroad.

Fortunately, we have good news in this department. The Labor Department last week issued its regular report on productivity and costs and it includes an annual review. It says "For the second successive year, private sector productivity increases at faster pace than the long-term growth rate of three per cent over the last two decades." The output per man-hour in the nation last year showed "the best gain since 1966."

One of the most encouraging things about this gain in productivity recently has been the fact that unit labor costs have been increasing at a much slower rate than they had been in the past. Last year, the increase in unit labor costs was only 1.9 per cent, compared with 3.4 per cent in 1971 and 4.9 per cent annually in the period 1965-70.

It is worth noting that these gains came about during the period when wage-price controls were in effect. The Nixon administration program thus has made a substantial contribution to progress in this area. Whether that progress is sustained will depend almost entirely on how well those guidelines are held now that we are in Phase 3.—Memphis (Tenn.) Commercial Appeal

What Are We Drinking?

Americans who travel abroad have always been quite superior about being from a country with high sanitation standards and water which is safe to drink. That was the case in the past.

But now there are more and more areas in the United States where water is dangerously contaminated. The Environmental Protection Agency reports that one out of every two people in this country is drinking water of uncertain quality or water which does not measure up to public health standards.

This hardly fits in with all the hornblowing about this being the most medically and scientifically advanced nation.—Anniston (Ala.) Star

Bueaucratic Buff

Mike Royko of the Chicago Daily News is a man after our own hearts. He is a bureaucratic buff. He loves to watch bureaucrats in action—they communicate by memo, they live by the book and when they go home at night, their desks are clean.

Mr. Royko, like so many of us, would make poor bureaucrats. We are sloppy and we dislike detailed paper work. "I hate writing memos," observes Mr. Royko, "because it is just as easy to yell something across the office."

The trouble is, you can't yell in triplicate. And worse still for the self-respecting bureaucrat, you can't put a yell in a file.—Nashville (Tenn.) Banner

Which Came First?

There's a reliable answer to the riddle, "Which came first, the chicken or the egg?" Or at least an answer from a generally reliable source.

Inasmuch as birds evolved from reptile stock that was laying eggs millions of years before the first bird flew, National Geographic Society says, the egg came first.

Next question.—Birmingham (Ala.) News

Like the Americans, the Italians find the size of their national budget hard to comprehend. Because Italy's unit of currency, the lira, is worth so little, the budget adds up to 19.5 quadrillion lira. That's 195 followed by 14 zeros.

Italian monetary authorities are thinking of making the budget easier to work with by resurrecting an old unit of currency worth 1,000 lira and called a "scudo." Then the budget would be only 19.5 trillion "scudos."—San Diego (Calif.) Union.

history," one U. S. official commented.

Though international inspection teams have finally gone into the field, their effectiveness is questioned. Delays in investigating Communist violations are expected from Polish and Hungarian inspectors. Even so, the teams are expected to inhibit frontal assaults in regimental strength, which may explain this week's slight reduction in combat.

Whatever the inspection teams accomplish, however, Hanoi is planning a continued military presence in South Vietnam. Nobody familiar with the country believes the Communists could win an internationally supervised referendum today. Instead, they are banking on military muscle to win them heavy representation in a national assembly with risk of elections.

That muscle depends on the logistical base in Laos, and experts here believe the North Vietnamese—despite their promises in Paris and Vientiane—have no intention of withdrawing troops from Laos. Nor, these experts feel, do they expect any more pressure to withdraw than when they violated with impunity the 1961 Geneva agreement on Laos.

In 1961, a token withdrawal of some 40 soldiers satisfied the Kennedy administration. In 1972, it will take a larger token—maybe 4,000 troops—to satisfy the Nixon administration. Anything more than a token will require intense pressure from Washington.

Through four years, Mr. Nixon repeatedly surprised Hanoi with his tenacity of purpose—invading Cambodia and Laos, mining Haiphong harbor, bombing Hanoi last December. But now that U. S. POWs are free and Americans want to forget Indochina, can he respond to Hanoi's latest challenge? The Communists are betting he cannot.

A Conservative View Retrospective Judgments On The '1,000 Days'

By J.J. KILPATRICK

One of the most perceptive writers in Washington, British correspondent Henry Fairlie, has written one of the most perceptive political books of our time. The late Niccolo Machiavelli, dead 450 years, could not have done a better job than Fairlie has done with "The Kennedy Promise."

Machiavelli's purpose in his masterpiece, "The Prince," was to advise a young Medici on the arts of statecraft. Fairlie's purpose in this brilliant work is to analyze a young President's aborted administration. His retrospective judgments on the "thousand days" are the best judgments yet rendered, but his observations on the American presidency look beyond the Kennedy years.

Fairlie has subtitled his book, "The Politics of Expectation." His thesis is that the Kennedy administration, dining on a diet of daily crises, lived on the rich sauce of things it meant to do. In their public lives, no less than in their private lives, the brothers Kennedy and their team had to have action. That was the watchword: Action!

Yet, looking back, Fairlie asks what it all meant. The incessant demand for action ruled out the alternative of inaction, of simply, in a given situation, doing nothing. The Kennedys never knew how to do nothing. The spirit of the New Frontier, in Fairlie's telling line, was a spirit of "physical bravado joined to intellectual bravura." The thousand days became a concerto composed entirely of cadenzas.

"Whenever there was something which he wished to do, he went before the television cameras and could rely on obtaining the desired popular reaction; the expectation was aroused, and the expectation was supported; but on the following morning the things had still to be done."

Fairlie continues with a Machiavellian insight: "There is in fact very little that the people can do to assist a President while he is in office; brought together at a general election, they are dispersed between elections; brought together in the evening by a television address, they are dispersed the next day. Popular leadership can bring only small returns; and it should be used sparingly."

A part of Kennedy's difficulties rested in the intellectual activism of the men who were closest to him. With few exceptions, they were new to power. They had studied power, and analyzed power, and talked about power, but they never had exercised power. And when at last they got their hands on this beautiful instrument, they wanted to play it loudly and with flare.

Thus, in the ill-fated Alliance for Progress, the team acted on the assumption that it was "one minute to midnight" in Latin America. Says Fairlie: "But it was at one minute to midnight that the administration believed that the hands of the clock always stood, all over the globe, and they were driven by the fear that, if they did not act before the clock struck, they would all seem to be pumpkins. They aspired to greatness, not just occasionally, but all the time."

Greatness, of course, is a fine thing to aspire to, but true greatness is seldom capable of achievement. The Kennedy crew somehow expected of their politics, "not the modest arrangements which are their proper concern, but a superhuman achievement, an inhuman fulfillment."

The atmosphere of dizzy expectation, in Fairlie's view, was bound to produce the Bay of Pigs fiasco. It could not have been otherwise. The Kennedy players, supremely confident of their skill in putting intelligence to work, saw only the promise of glory. "The sails of the administration were indeed filled by each breath of the intelligence which it gathered, impelling it forward to yet another operation. What it lacked was an anchor."

Fairlie's judgments may seem harsh. Ten years after the Kennedy administration, he remarks, "it is hard to find a trace of any method of government which he established which has survived." Kennedy wished to do so much—but wishes are not enough: "He in fact achieved very little." It is a pity the verdict has to be rendered, but pity 'tis, 'tis true.

BIRD CAUGHT IN A BADMINTON GAME!

Nixon's Columbia Visit Is Another Example Of His Long-Range Effort

By GEORGE BRYANT, Jr.

It's rather unusual for any President to address a state legislature. And when a Republican President goes before the General Assembly of our sister state, South Carolina, it's a real man-bites-dog sort of story.

But, when you think about it, President Nixon's visit to Columbia is entirely in keeping with his style of statemanship and politics. It is another example of that old tenacity of purpose which has paid off for Nixon in the past, much to the dismay of his carping critics.

The South Carolina General Assembly was the first to adopt a resolution hailing the Vietnam accord, which Nixon opponents long had pronounced impossible off attainment, except at the cost of ruining our own nation.

The South Carolina resolution offered the President a handy platform for what was his first full-fledged address since the peace accord was signed. It gave him an opportunity to say some things about the U. S. leadership position in the world.

But the Columbia visit probably was more than merely a trip to a handy platform—one easy to explain. There was at least a flavor of politics in the performance. This can be taken as an indication that "Southern Strategy," scoffed at a few years back, will be very much alive in Nixon's second term.

It shouldn't be overlooked that Nixon's goals go beyond world peace, through better ties with Europe and closer relations with Russia and China, and stable prosperity here at home. A third goal is to change the direction of domestic politics.

This change goes much beyond the simple issue of which political party, Republican or Democrat, controls the White House. It goes to basic changes in policy. It calls for a brake on the let-Washington-do-everything welfare state and a rise on the responsibility of the individual and his local government institutions.

This is where the South figures in the political planning. Since World War II it has been the area of great economic gains and still wears a "conservative" label. In terms of geography, economics and politics, this South goes beyond the Confederate States.

Columnist Kevin Phillips recently referred to the areas as the "Sun Belt", stretching, in a downward curving line, from Virginia in the East across Southern California to the West. Roughly, it is what was dubbed the "defense crescent" nearly a decade ago. It has had heavy growth in military establishments and in defense industry.

But the economic growth of the area is much more general than that. The truly big expansion has come in light industry and, to a much greater degree, in the service field. The population expansion has had a big lift from retired people, who, by the way, are good for a local economy. The so-called senior citizens command a lot of assets, which makes them good customers.

The population gains have been greatest among the White middle-class, which means gains have been greatest among the White middle-class, which means gains in skills. And the growth is new—suburban. There is no great problem of decaying big cities, which is such a problem in the "old economic centers."

The drift from traditional politics in this area got going; you might say, about 25 years ago. At the presidential level, there has been a parade of states into the Republican column. And changes have been made in Congress and at the state houses.

As things stand today, what Phillips has described as the "Sun Belt" controls more than half the electoral votes needed to elect a President. It figured big in Nixon's landslide. It holds a vital balance of power for the future.

Nixon, no doubt, had all this in mind when he went to Columbia this week. As noted, he has a way of making tenacity pay.

Public Forum

To the editor:

I am writing in regard to WNCN-TV, Channel 9's decision not to carry the CBS Thursday night movie, "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?"

According to Ed Fields, program director, "We felt the editing job CBS did on the film left in what would be brutally offensive language to the majority of our viewers." I realize Mr. Fields has the right to decide what programs are shown on the station, but I would like to know who gave him the right to decide what the viewing public should or should not be exposed to. If CBS chooses to broadcast this, or any other movie they see fit to, the matter of censorship should be left up to the individual. It's a simple matter of turning the channel selector if the viewer doesn't like what he or his family is watching. With any editing at all, this movie shouldn't be any more offensive than some of the soap operas, or "All in the Family," and some other programs that have been on.

Jack Stickley Praised By Elections Chairman

By JOHN KILGO

Remember the furor Bob Scott created when he named Jack Stickley, a Republican from Charlotte, to the State Elections Board?

Scott made the appointment without conferring with the Republican Executive Committee. GOP chairman Frank Rouse took Scott to task for the appointment.

Republicans everywhere were mad. I asked Elections Board Secretary Alex Brock how Stickley was doing in his job on the State Board.

"The man is incredible," Brock said. "He understands everything. Put it in front of him once and he takes it from there. He gets along well with everyone. Jack Stickley is a man of high integrity. He's just made an outstanding board member."

I'm told Republicans feel the same way about Stickley, now that the appointment is history. They still don't appreciate Scott making the appointment without conferring with them, however. Stickley, you recall, is the man who was clobbered by Jim Gardner in the 1968 gubernatorial primary.

North Carolina Republicans are in the final planning stages of a voter registration drive which they hope will close the gap with Democratic voters.

The GOP hopes the drive will go public about April 1, and they're raising the money to do it up right.

There will be media advertising, billboards, and bumper stickers, as well as hundreds of volunteers knocking on doors.

When it's over, the Republicans hope to have close to 50 per cent of the registered voters in the state. They've got a long way to go to reach that kind of goal.

As of October, the Democrats had 1.7 million

Tar Heels registered, the Republicans counted 541,916, the American Party 7,164, and Independents or non-party had 79,129.

Todd Reece, who has been working in Republican State Headquarters for the past year, will leave next week to return to the State Department of Agriculture.

Today In History

Political Notes

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS Today is Sunday, Feb. 25, the 56th day of 1973. There are 309 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On this date in 1913, the 16th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution went into effect. Congress was given the authority to levy income taxes.

On this date: In 1570, Pope Pius V excommunicated England's Queen Elizabeth I.

In 1779, British forces surrendered to Americans under Gen. George Rogers Clark at Vincennes, Ind.

In 1783, Denmark recognized America's independence.

In 1793, George Washington met at his homes with heads of U.S. government departments. It was the first recorded Cabinet meeting.

In 1836, the Colt revolver — the first practical gun of its kind — was patented.

In 1919, Oregon became the first state to tax gasoline.

Ten years ago: There was a warm welcome in Brussels for the Congo's premier, Cyrille Adoula. He was the first head of the country to visit Belgium since the former colony gained independence.

Five years ago: Gen. Maxwell Taylor ended a special mission to South Vietnam. He returned to Washington to recommend a buildup in U.S. troop strength.

One year ago: President Nixon ended his historic visit to Peking.

Today's birthdays: Democratic Sen. John L. McClellan of Arkansas is 77. Former Beatle George Harrison is 30. British writer Anthony Burgess is 56.

Thought for today: Ignorance never settles a question — Benjamin Disraeli, British prime minister, 1804-1881.

Uncover No Increase In Alienation, Polarization Since 1971

By GEORGE CALLUP

PRINCETON, N. J., Feb. 24 — With the war in South Vietnam officially over, will political polarization and feelings of alienation from society, intensified by the war in the 1960s, begin to subside?

Recent nationwide Gallup surveys shed light on this question:

1. The percentage of U. S. citizens who say they would like to leave the U. S. and settle in another country — a good indicator of hardcore alienation — is about the same (11 per cent) as it was two years ago, in early 1971. The percentage recorded in that survey was 12 per cent.

While little change has been recorded between the current survey and the 1971 survey, the figure doubled between late 1969 and 1971.

The percentage of Americans who would like to leave the U. S. is nonetheless disturbingly high among certain groups in the population. For example, no less than three in ten young adults between the ages of 18 and 29 with college training express a desire to leave their homeland.

2. Political polarization among the general public to "far left" and "far right" — accelerated, many social observers feel, by the Vietnam war — appears to have abated over the last two years.

The percentage of persons who place themselves at the extreme ends of the political spectrum are nearly the same today as two years ago.

In the latest survey, 12 per cent of all persons interviewed describe themselves as "very conservative," compared to 11 per cent in the 1971 survey. At the other end of the scale, 5 per cent currently describe themselves as "very liberal," compared to 7 per cent in

3. The college campuses of America, once the centers of loud dissent over the Vietnam war, are relatively calm in these post-war days. And, where once "student dissent" figured prominently in Gallup audits of the public's concerns, this category now does not appear.

Following are the questions asked and the key findings: "If you were free to do so, would you like to go and settle in another country?"

	Per Cent Saying Yes	Under 30 years	19	Latest 1971
National	11	30 to 49 years	12	Very conservative 12 11

Yachting On Brink Of Greatest Prosperity Wave

MORE THAN 46 MILLION estimated 250,000 craft coming off AMERICANS will go down to the sea in pleasure boats in 1973. This medium-priced 24-foot cruiser is one of the production lines this year. (UPI Telephoto)

By JACK WOLISTON
NEW YORK (UPI) — More than 46 million Americans will go down to the sea in pleasure boats in 1973, creating probably the greatest wave of prosperity in yachting since improved production methods opened the sport to the common man after World War II.

These boating buffs, according to industry estimates, will pour about $4 billion into the economy in purchases ranging from nuts and bolts up to 50-foot yachts complete with wall-to-wall carpeting and color-coordinated bathtubs.

The total will bring to 9.5 million the total of recreational boats in existence on all waters of the United States, an million in a decade.

In contrast, the number of marinas, boat yards and yacht clubs with waterfront facilities has increased at a snail's pace — from about 5,000 10 years ago to an estimated 5,900 in 1972.

These are lucrative businesses but they are difficult to establish because of the scarcity and high table waterfront property and similar costs for installation of facilities.

But this has been no deterrent to the boat builders, the thousands of companies that produce boating accessories.

Record Sales

As Howard F. Larson, president of the Boating Industry Association, reported recently in a "State of the Industry" speech to BIA members: "The year 1972 saw our member companies reach records in production and sales and, in most cases, profits. There have been impressive gains by our companies, and ... our business forecasts, spirit and enthusiasm in this industry are running at one of the highest peaks in our history."

One of the big barometers of the boating industry at the start of each year is the amount of orders placed he public at the National Boat Show held each January in New York City.

At the 10-day exhibit this year, orders hit the record high of $57.8 million set in 1969.

At present, in use, powering 5.4 million outboard boats and some of the 2.4 million utility boats such as rowboats, canoes, dinghies and prams.

This year is also expected to see another upsurge in sales of boat trailers—about 50,000 of them were sold in 1972 to bring the total now in use to 3.8 million. Trailers age of in-the-water "parking" space and permit adventurous boat owners to roam far from home to new and unusual waterways.

Accidents

At the present time, one of the biggest concerns of pleasure boating is the number of on-the-water accidents which in 1971—the latest year for which full figures are available—resulted in 1,582 deaths and 19 million in property damage, "historic highs," according to the Marine Safety Council.

The Coast Guard called it the worst year in U.S. pleasure boating history, exceeding the record year of 1970 when deaths totaled 1,418 and property damage was $8.19 million.

To offset this tragic aspect of the sport, such concerned groups as the U.S. Power Squadrons, the U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary and the Red Cross are making intensive efforts to get neophyte boatmen to take the educational courses in basic boating which they offer free of charge in most boating areas of the United States.

Nevertheless, despite accidents, rising costs and a few other factors, the boating fraternity is increasing by leaps and bounds, and ble dinghy anyone can join the estimated 46 million who will use the nation's waterways in 1973.

And if that $39 craft isn't satisfactory, the on what can be spent for a "yacht." But as J.P. Morgan put it, if you ask, "How much?" you can't afford it.

Opel No. 1 Car For German Drivers

By HANS SCHAEFER
BONN (UPI) — The Volkswagen is no longer king of the road in its native Germany. Rising affluence and a taste for bigger, fancier cars finally overtook Volkswagen on its home soil in 1972—as it has been doing abroad for several years—and knocked it into second place among best selling new cars.

The new sales champ has American money behind it. It is the Opel, a product of General Motors' West German subsidiary, Adam Opel A.G.

Figures just published by the Federal Motor Vehicle Registration Office shows Opels outsold Volkswagen last year in Germany by 456,189 to 414,696.

Thus comes a break in one of the longest running trends of postwar Germany.

Volkswagen, led by its compact "Beetle" model, had been No. 1 in the hearts of German car buyers in every postwar year until now. It came to be a symbol of German economic magic.

The new figures show German car buyers are getting more cosmopolitan, with more imported French, Italian and Japanese models sold. Other favorites were Chrysler-Simca, Peugeot and Citroen.

Volkswagen chief Rudolph

Leiding said the company sold 1.8 million cars worldwide in the first 10 months of 1972, down 100,000 from the corresponding period of 1971.

Rudolph Greulich, a Volkswagen board member, blamed the slump on the firm's failure to develop and market new models instead of making improvements in the familiar old "Beetle" chassis.

The best-selling foreign car in Germany for 1972 again was France's Renault with 147,372 models sold. Other favorites were Chrysler-Simca, Peugeot and Citroen.

'Through Garden Gate' Is Charity Ball Theme

By ROSALIE TROTMAN
Reflector Woman's Editor
After two snowfalls delivered by old man winter, a hint of spring slipped into Greenville Friday night.

"Through A Garden Gate" was the theme for this year's gala Charity Ball, which was sponsored by the Service League.

Staged at the Greenville Golf and Country Club, the entire club building was transformed into a southern garden.

The foyer of the club was decorated with greenery and a flowing fountain. Here, ball guests and patrons were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Louis E. Clark and Dr. and Mrs. Charles Stevens. Mrs. Clark served as overall ball chairman while Mrs. Stevens is president of the Service League.

Guests entered the ballroom through a wrought iron gate. Masses of red geraniums, yellow and white chrysanthemums, red, white and pink azaleas were blooming in profusion.

The bandstand took on the form of a lattice gazebo which featured hanging baskets overflowing with red begonias. Potted red geraniums were placed at the base of the gazebo. Music for the evening drifted from the gazebo as provided by the Bert Massengale Orchestra.

Tulips in sunset shades, yellow shasta daisies, fern and white pom pons in black wrought iron candelabra holding candles adorned the dining tables. The serpentine buffet tables were centered with a large bird cage filled with flowers.

Live mynah birds and a parrot in cages were hanging from ivy entwined trellises along one wall of the ballroom. Mini garden spots, also in the ballroom, attracted ceramic frogs, rabbits and squirrels.

Dressed in pastel gowns as southern belles, usherettes for the evening were Peggy Watson, Beth Brown, Ann Haigwood and Mary Charles Stevens.

The evening's entrees were boeuf au juis, scampi chez mario, petits pais a la trapa natana, le gratin savoyard, marti salade, gateau and cafe.

Mrs. Clark was assisted by the following chairmen: Mrs. Hubert H. Bryant, finance; Mrs. R. R. Gammon, secretary; Mrs. Frank Longino, invitations; Mrs. G.

Astrologer Notes Psychic Field Can Be Misused

By CATHY STEELE
Associated Press Writer
Everything that can be used for anything can also be misused for anything. This comment from Charlotte astrologer and author Mrs. Alice Steadman, capsules sentiments expressed by several North Carolinians involved in the study and practice of various psychic sciences.

with psychic powers must be sure only good forces are allowed to direct. Organized religion is not tolerant of the arts of occult. Religious spokesmen, including evangelist Billy Graham, have linked the occult with the devil and implied that practitioners of the psychic arts are in league with Satan. Nevertheless, in Bible belt North Carolina, interest in psychic studies is widespread. The term occult itself, which sparks vivid and contradictory images in the public mind, actually means "hidden." And much of the philosophy basic to the spiritual and psychic arts is directly from the Bible. "I'd like to debate with Billy Graham," Pat Gabriel said, quoting the Bible at length. She cited the Book of Revelations and asked pointedly, "Was John in league with the devil?" Kannapolis native Ms. Gabriel said she has been interested in psychic phenomena since she was 14 years old. She studied the subject intensely for eight years to develop what she decided were innate psychic powers and is now a "spiritual adviser." She said everyone has latent psychic ability and anyone willing to work hard at it can develop that ability.

Universal Life Church—"a church of the new thinkers" in California—and she is also practicing Presbyterian. There is a deep religious basis in Alice Steadman's philosophy as well. "With God nothing is impossible," she said, but we don't believe it when it happens," she said. Mrs. Steadman was talking about patients cured through faith. She is the author of "Who's The Matter With Me?", a book that postulates sickness as a manifestation of mental or spiritual conflict. Illness, she maintains, is brought on by reactions to other people and problems. According to Mrs. Steadman's theory understanding the emotional responses that are responsible for specific ailments is the key to preventive medicine.

Although her book doesn't mention astrology, Mrs. Steadman said that astrology was, in fact, the basis for the theory. It is planetary positions, she explained, that set up the pattern of connections between emotional responses and physical ailments. Mrs. Steadman astonished a young man in a hardware store one day when he complained about having a cold. She asked him if he was worried about a car. As she expected, he replied with surprise that, why yes, he was. It was simple, Mrs. Steadman explained—cars are one of the things definitely related to colds. Judging from the person's age and sex it was the most likely choice of the cold-related worries.

Mrs. Steadman has been studying astrology for 30 years and apparently is expert in calculating astrological charts. She emphasizes however, that astrologers cannot and should not make prognostications. "Planets," she said, "are influences, not dictators." Astrology can indicate potentials, but the key is what the subject does with the potentials in his chart. Astrology is but one of the disciplines being investigated by Charlotte's New Age Foundation, a group of nearly 300 persons interested in experimenting with psychic phenomena. This group meets en masse once a month to hear a speaker on some area of the psychic arts. President of New Age, real-estate man Jim Bolton, said the study of psychic sciences is attracting wide interest in North Carolina.

In Charlotte there are sub-groups of New Age, each dedicated to the study of a different phenomenon. The areas of interest include psychometry, spiritual healing, astrology, handwriting analysis and palmistry, cartomancy, numerology and the study of moles. Bolton, a Lutheran Bible studies teacher, has researched psychic phenomena for 25 years and is an amateur palm reader. He didn't take the art of palmistry lightly, but spent years studying. He first became a qualified fingerprint expert, then studied poroscopy and hand writing analysis. He also studied the anatomy of the hand. Only then did he delve into the study of palmistry itself. Despite his concentrated study of the human hand, Bolton said palms, like cards, crystal balls, or divining rods really serve only as a point of concentration for the psychic. A psychic, he said, must detach himself from his conscious mind and establish a point of concentration to communicate with the person he is reading.

Bolton agreed with Pat Gabriel that psychic ability can be developed from the normal logic and intuition of an average person. He compared success in the psychic arts, however, to success in other arts. "If you took piano lessons, you could lean to play many many tunes, but never a symphony—unless there was a special talent there."

Plan Environmental Conference Mar. 8

Members of the agricultural and industrial community, educational and governmental leaders, and other interested citizens from the Northern Coastal Plains section of North Carolina are expected to attend a regional planning conference to be held in Washington, N.C. on March 8 and 9. The conference in Washington's Brentwood Lodge, one of six regional meetings planned for this spring, is the first step in the establishment of a statewide network of broad communication and coordination among the many environmental groups and programs now existing in the State. Anyone wishing to attend the conference should contact Bill Moffitt, P.S. Jones Junior High School, Washington, N.C. 27889.

for registration procedures and additional information. The conference in Washington is jointly sponsored by the North Carolina Department of Administration's Environmental Education & Outdoor Beautification Program, and the North Carolina Environmental Education Program, a coordinated effort of 10 state universities. Counties involved are Pitt, Martin, Greene, Onslow, Duplin, Carteret, Jones, Lenoir, Wayne, Craven, Pamlico, Beaufort, Bertie, Hertford, Gates, Currituck, Camden, Pasquotank, Perquimans, Tyrrell, Chowan, Hyde, Dare, and Washington.

Four Named To Nurse-Call

Four registered nurses have been announced as duty call nurses for the Pitt County Private Duty Registered Nurse Call Program. The four, their names, telephone numbers and effective duty dates for contact purposes are: —Ann Barlow, 758-2360, February 26 - March 4; —Saba Quinerly, 758-1669, March 5-11; —Grace Turner, 756-0375, March 12-18; —Beulah Haddock, 746-3838, March 19-25.

Lunch Menu

Lunchroom menus for the coming week at A.G. Cox and W.H. Robinson schools have been announced as follows: Monday — braised beef with gravy, buttered rice, steamed cabbage, glazed carrots, rolls, sugar cookie, milk; Tuesday — lasagna, tossed salad, orange, hot rolls, gingerbread, milk; Wednesday — hot dog on bun with chili, french fries, cole slaw, mixed fruit, milk; Thursday — barbecued chicken, candied yams, green beans, cheese biscuit, purple plums, milk; Friday — vegetable-beef soup, crackers, peanut butter sandwich, cherry cobbler, milk.

Health Careers Name Omitted

The name of Mrs. Minnie Edwards, a health aide at the Pitt County Community Health Department, was inadvertently left out of a list of representatives of various phases of health careers in a Daily Reflector article last Friday. The article concerned a program on health careers given to seventh and eighth graders at Belvoir Grammar School, in which Mrs. Edwards was a participant.

Wildlife Sounds Recorded By Hobbyist In Odd Competition

By GREGORY JENSEN
LONDON (UPI) — Ray Goodwin knows all about the sound of sex and the single cuckoo.

Furthermore, he can demonstrate that a snail munches a lettuce leaf with a ferocious, drawn-out crunch. He knows what burrowing dung beetles sound like and has captured a whinchat's song.

That's not all he's captured. Goodwin is this year's winner of the fifth annual Wildlife Sound Recording Contest, one of Britain's odder competitions. He won last year, too.

He is one of a small army of Britons who spend their leisure hours tramping through woods and fields, earphones clamped to their heads, pointing sensitive microphones at elusive wildlife sounds.

Goodwin's winning tape was winnowed from about 200 entries, according to a spokesman for 3M United Kingdom Ltd. which sponsors the contest. The five judges spent nine hours listening to them all.

They were so fascinated by a tape of a poisonous female adder that they gave D. W. Amey a prize for the "most original entry" — and for his "considerable courage."

Amey stumbled over a sunning adder on a narrow path near his home in southeast England. He dangled a microphone four inches from the snake's head and set his portable recorder spinning while the adder reared like a cobra and struck at the mike, hissing rhythmically.

Like Heavy Breathing
"It sounded like the heavy breathing of an obscene telephone caller," one judge said.

Goodwin won last year's "most original" prize with his recording of a snail crunching a lettuce leaf. He walked off with this year's top prize—$470 worth of recording equipment, naturally—with what the judges called an "entertaining recording of two male cuckoos indulging in an off-key singing duel over a female bird."

Goodwin also won the two prizes in the contest's "birds" category with the cuckoo mating calls and the song of the whinchat, a small migratory bird. Prizes will be awarded in London in April.

Goodwin is a cowherder from the west of England who has been recording wildlife sounds as a hobby for four years. He carries his recording equipment to work: the cows gather around to watch with interest, but he says they're used to the sight by now.

"Luckily I have a good boss, who doesn't mind me carrying my equipment to work with me," Goodwin said. "After all, it doesn't get in the way of my job."

Farmers are prominent among the contest's entrants. But this year's winners included a doctor and a policeman, and last year 70-year-old Arthur Acland won a prize for a recording of a barking hedgehog.

Moscow Can Use Tips On Tourism

By GORDON F. JOSELOFF
MOSCOW (UPI) — A young Australian couple and their child sit in a Moscow restaurant waiting to order breakfast.

The waitresses are busy talking among themselves. Finally the man stands up and claps his hands.

With great reluctance, one of the waitresses comes to the table. She offers a menu and, with absolute indifference, says there is no mineral water, no pastry, and no kefir, a beverage of fermented cow's milk favored by Russians.

Eggs will take too long, she says.

In the end she offers a pressed chicken and cognac.

The story comes not from the tourist but, surprisingly, from a guide-interpreter of the Soviet state travel organization, Intourist.

It was one of numerous examples of bad service for tourists cited by Viktoria Vershkova-Sdobnova, a 10-year veteran of Intourist, in a recent Literaturnaya Gazeta (Literary Gazette) article.

"Accompanying tourists around the country, I must confess that not infrequently I experience a bitter sense of exasperation," she said.

Commenting on Soviet expectations of increasing the number of tourists from 2.5 million in 1972 to 4.5 million annually by 1975, she said: "Without service, the development of tourism is not possible."

Miss Vershkova-Sdobnova's comments reflect criticisms often voiced by tourists themselves.

The critics maintain that the Soviet Union, which has begun to promote tourism only in recent years, lags far behind most Western nations in development of facilities for tourists.

They also complain that bad service in restaurants and hotels is a built-in feature of the Communist system, since managers of state-run enterprises lack the incentives of those in private enterprise to insist on efficiency and courtesy from their employees.

Miss Vershkova-Sdobnova said that while there had been great improvements in restaurants, hotels, and transport services, more had to be done.

She told the story of an American surgeon who came to Moscow to attend a complicated heart operation and wanted to invite his Russian colleague to dinner at a restaurant.

"He goes to the hotel service department to book a table. The hotel people call the restaurant. The restaurant says he does not have to leave his name, just say when he arrives that he had called for a reservation."

"He goes to the restaurant with his friend only to find that no one knows anything about him or his phone call and all the tables are filled."

Then there was the visitor who reserved a car to take him

Salute Poet At Columbia Univ.

NEW YORK (UPI) — "We find it hard to bear, the slow, the certain death of things..."

Those opening lines from a poem by Mark Van Doren were read at a memorial service for him at Columbia University in New York. They were read by John Hollander, a former Van Doren student and now a poet himself and a professor at Hunter College. Prof. Van Doren was a member of the English faculty at Columbia from 1920 until his appointment as professor emeritus in 1959. He died late in 1972.

NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

Reform Schools Slowly Changing For The Better

By WILLIAM L. CHAZE
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Only four years ago, inmates of South Carolina's training schools were hogtied and beaten with leather straps for minor misdeeds. Today, some of the same youths go home weekends and attend coeducational classes.

"You wouldn't believe the hell I got here," said a plumpish, 17-year-old soon to be released after five years in the girls' school at Columbia, S.C. "I been yanked out of bed at night and beat so I couldn't walk. But this place has changed. It ain't all that bad now."

Similar changes are occurring—if slowly—in other juvenile correctional systems across the South as the emphasis is shifted from custodial and punitive to rehabilitative.

The current trend is to place only the hard-core delinquent in institutions while the others—truant and so-called ungovernable children—increasingly are being placed in programs that allow them to escape the stigma of being sent away. Florida has 500 in such programs, Georgia 450 and South Carolina and Kentucky similar numbers.

"I don't think we're ready to close all our schools right now," said Charles Ray of Georgia. "But we've built our last one."

Community care programs and the weeding out of noncriminal cases have sharply reduced the number of juveniles in training schools across the South. In North Carolina, the number has been pared by 800, Louisiana has cut its institutional population by half and South Carolina has closed one school and plans to shut another.

Kentucky sliced its population by 35 per cent, closed its big training school outside Lexington and now operates no facility with more than 50 juveniles.

Other changes that are taking place:

—Farming operations, which once occupied nearly all an inmate's waking hours at some schools, gradually are being closed. The John G. Richards School farm in South Carolina is being run mostly with hired hands. The 2,500-acre farm at Mt. Meigs, Ala., has been closed. "It used to be that a good farm hand would spend years here," said an official.

—Confinement time has been shortened from an average stay of two years to eight months.

—Coeducation is being tried out as a deterrent to homosexual activity among inmates. Coed parties are held in South Carolina and Florida has made all its schools coeducational.

—Legislative funding is improving. Georgia spends three times the pre-1969 level to maintain a child; South Carolina has more than doubled its expenditures.

—Most training schools offer fair to good remedial education that features small classes. Inmates entering the school in Columbia, Miss., are dropped back an average of four grades from their public school level. "Nobody ever told me I couldn't really read before I came here," said an inmate in a Georgia school.

Until the late 1960s, many training schools actually were juvenile prisons. Delinquents passed days in barred cells within dark buildings, or worked wearying hours on farms. Retarded children, some as young as 10 years old, were thrown in with true sociopaths.

Schools were largely run by bureaucrats who refrained from pestering the legislature for more money because they feared losing patronage jobs. Corporal punishment was routine and viciously administered.

But disclosure of widespread brutality in some schools and the advent of integration altered the picture. Desegregation has perhaps been the single most important factor in nudging Southern states toward more enlightened handling of juvenile delinquents.

Most legislatures were reluctant to spend money on black training schools, but spending increased rapidly after integration. When the Mt. Meigs, Ala., school was black in 1968 the state spent only $2.75 per day to feed, clothe and educate inmates. The figure doubled after the school was integrated in 1969 by a federal court suit that disclosed shocking conditions.

The most primitive conditions generally existed in black schools and legislatures to date have been unable—or unwilling—to appropriate money quickly enough to erase reminders of past mistreatment of children in these institutions.

Thus, some schools still use prisonlike buildings.

The John G. Richards School in South Carolina has about 30 inmates in Pickens Cottage, whose prosaic name belies its true nature. It is a miniprison—a brick structure with a row of dingy and cramped cells down one side and a barred dormitory bay on the other.

"To tell you the truth, Pickens Cottage makes me want to vomit," said Grady Decell, head of the South Carolina system. "But we had a choice. We could make the place look pretty or we could hire good staff and make meaningful changes in the program. We did the latter."

The state plans to replace Pickens Cottage next year with a new building, providing the money can be found.

The physical condition of other formerly black schools across the South remains as bad. Mt. Meigs' dormitories are rundown and so shoddily built that heating pipes broke through the floor. Dormitories at the Oakley School outside of Jackson, Miss., are slightly better—but as many as 40 youths sleep on narrow cots in a single large room.

Corporal punishment is another hangover from the past. It is still meted out regularly in Alabama and Mississippi as well as Tennessee.

Each of seven inmates questioned at the Oakley School said they were whipped frequently with an 18-inch-long wooden paddle half an inch thick. One blond 15-year-old in a security building, who said he had been paddled after an escape attempt, dropped his shorts to expose livid yellow and blue bruises.

"They took me off and whaled the tar out of me," he said. "But these bruises ain't nothing to what they was."

"There's a bunch of reformers going around trying to do away with everything, even a little paddling," said Supt. J. B. Barnes when he was asked about the incident. "When that happens you're going to have a bunch of hoodlums in the street taking over the country."

Four of six inmates questioned at Mt. Meigs told of receiving 10 blows with the same kind of paddle, but none reported bruises. Supt. Ed Grant said he would abolish such punishment "if we had some sort of isolation facility for uncooperative kinds."

Corporal punishment in Tennessee must be administered by the school's superintendent and cannot exceed five blows with a paddle. South Carolina has abolished paddling, effective in the spring, but juveniles in isolation may be fed cornflakes and water over a two-day period.

South Carolina's schools were among the roughest in the region before legislative hearings four years ago brought about a program of reform. Much has changed, including the practice by which a judge commits children directly to the schools.

South Carolina, as do many other states in the region, now requires judges to commit children to a new diagnostic center that may send the youth on to an institution, recommend his release on probation or enrollment in a community care program.

Before the center opened, 50 per cent of the state's training school inmates were held for noncriminal offenses. That has been cut to 10 per cent. The same thing is reported by Florida, Georgia and North Carolina.

Mississippi and Alabama, however, do not have such a system and one result is that some children who shouldn't go to training schools wind up in them. "A number of the children we receive actually are retarded," said Martha Myers, a young Oakley School counselor. "They don't belong here, but there's nowhere else."

Both Alabama and Mississippi are largely without alternatives to training schools.

Bucs Hold Off The Citadel, Take Third

TWO FOR BIG AL — Al Faber (50) drives into the basket to shoot against the defense of The Citadel's Greg Weber (42) in the picture at left. Oscar Scott (52) tried to tap the shot away, but it fell anyway as Faber watches the action from the floor. East Carolina blew a 22-point lead in the game, but hung on for an 80-72 victory to clinch third place in the Southern Conference standing. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

East Carolina University's Pirates ran off a 20-point lead at the end of the first half — and it was a good thing they did.

Because in the second half, the Pirates fell apart, and The Citadel made a comeback that cut away as many as 16 of those points before free throws saved the day for the Pirates, 80-72.

The victory, the 12th of the year for the Bucs salvaged a .500 season for them and snapped a four-game losing streak. It also raised their Southern Conference mark to 7-7 and gave them third place in the standings.

They will now meet Richmond, a 66-64 loser to William & Mary last night, in the first round of the Southern's tournament, which gets underway in the Richmond Coliseum on Thursday afternoon.

Four games will be played that day, with two on Friday, and the championship finals on Saturday.

For most of the first half, the Pirates, using the run-and-gun tactics that had carried them to most of their victories this season, had little trouble in pulling away from The Citadel, although the margin did resemble a roller-coaster with its ups and downs.

Then, in the second half, the Pirates lost their poise, and hit only seven field goals the entire half. The Citadel used the zone press most of the way, forcing 13 turnovers during the half.

And the seven the Pirates did hit were out of a total of 26 for a miserable 26.9 percentage in the half.

Fortunately, they were able to control the boards in the game 47-34, and that helped to make the difference. But the foul line really did the trick in the half.

The Pirates hit on 17 of 22 shots, including the last 11 points of the game for them. They didn't make a field goal in the last six minutes of play, but missed only three from the line during the same period, while making 11.

The Citadel never got off a good percentage, hitting 35.1 per cent for the game. They took 39 shots in the second half, however, 13 more than did the Bucs, and their better percentage enabled them to perform the comeback.

The Pirate lead shrank to its lowest with 2:36 left in the game when Chuck Cordell hit two with 47 free throws to make it 74-70. Dave Franklin picked up two with 47 seconds left to up the lead to six, but two free throws by Steve Fishel cut it back to four with 40 seconds to go.

Ernie Pope made two for the Bucs to up the lead to six again with 18 seconds left, and Earl Quash added the final two as he was fouled at the horn.

Greg Weber had hit to give the Bulldogs the opening lead in the game, but the Pirates had tied it up on a baseline jumper by Nicky White. Jerome Owens put East Carolina ahead with a jumper from the lane, and then never trailed again. The Citadel did it twice more, however, at 4-4 and 6-6 before Franklin hit from underneath for an 8-6 lead. White followed with a jumper for a four-point edge, and after an exchange of shots, Quash's jumper made it 14-8.

The Citadel hung on, however, cutting it back to three. Weber made a free throw and then hit a jumper to trim it to 16-13. But the Pirates moved off again, getting two charity shots from Al Faber and a tap-in by him. Kenny Edmonds added a jumper and the Bucs held a nine-point edge, 22-13.

The Citadel cut it back to five, but the Bucs pulled away again, this time going out by 12. Edmonds hit and Quash followed that. Franklin then got a three-point play to run it to 29-17 with 6:31 left.

From there, East Carolina slowly pulled away. That led to 35-21, and then 39-23. A three-point play by Roger Atkinson ran it out to 19, 44-25 with 1:28 left. Then, Owens stole the ball and scored, finishing up with a three-point play for a 22 point spread, 49-27, but The Citadel scored with 42 seconds left to cut it to 49-29 at halftime.

In the second half, the Bulldogs began their slow but steady comeback. They trimmed it to 16 before the Pirates scored as Steve Fishel and Oscar Scott hit. The Bucs built it back to 20, 55-35, but again The Citadel came back with Weber hitting two straight. They trimmed it to 14 at 57-54, and then to 12 at 59-47.

Finally, Scott hit two free throws with 9:29 left to cut the lead to 10, 61-51. Glen McDonald added a bucket and two free throws by Mike Morris cut it on down to six, 61-55.

East Carolina getting two free throws from Franklin and a basket too, went back to a 10-point edge, and eventually ran it to 11, 71-60 with 5:54 left, and then still held that edge with 5:14 to go.

But a basket by Bob Ferris and a pair of free throws by Fishel cut it to seven. Fishel hit on a drive to trim it to five, and after a Buc free throw, Cordell made two to trim it to four, 74-70.

The Bucs held on however, and pulled out the win.

Pirates Win Swim, Wrestling Crowns

Tankers Double Closest In Win

LEXINGTON, Va. — East Carolina's swimming Pirates have done it again — for the eighth time. They won six of the last seven events in the Southern Conference tournament to take their eighth straight SC crown.

In all, the Bucs rolled up 14 first places in the meet for a record 725 points. That bettered the old mark of 650 by 75 points. VMI, the host team, was second but far back at 355, and William & Mary was third with 262. The only non-ECU swimmer to win one of yesterday's events was W&M's Joe Ackerman who grabbed a first place in the 200-yard breast stroke. His time was 2:02.5 for a new meet record.

Freshman, Larry Green, set three records with one win. He took the 1500-yard free style in a time of 17:18.8 to set a new pool mark, a new conference mark and a new school record.

Jack Morrow was the first winner of a new event to the tourney. He set an automatic conference record and a varsity record in the 3-meter diving with a 500.35 point total.

Paul Trevison took the 100-yard free style in a time of 1:47.9 for new pool and conference marks, and Wayne Norris' win in the 200-yard butterfly set a conference record with a time of 2:00.72.

Paul Schiffel won the 200-backstroke in 2:04.22 for conference and varsity records.

The East Carolina relay team wound up the meet with a new record in the 400-yard freestyle relay. Their time was 3:15.3.

The Bucs also took another first as Norris was named the meet's outstanding swimmer.

Swimmers Top All-Conference

LEXINGTON, Va. — Fifteen members of the 19-man East Carolina swimming team were named to the All-Southern Conference swimming team it was announced yesterday.

Of the 15, five were freshmen. Larry Greene set a pool record, a conference record, and a school record when he won the 1500-yard freestyle event in the SC tourney held this week. Other freshmen chosen were Clifford Bristow, Tom Falk, Jim Hadley, and Charles Kemp.

Three sophomores were on the slate. They were Ron Hughes, Ricky Prince, and Paul Schiffell. Schiffell set a pair of records in winning the 200-yard backstroke yesterday as he won that event for the Pirates.

Another four members named to the team were Juniors. Jack Morrow was the first winner in the three-meter diving, an event that was included for the first time this year. His total of 500.35 points was both a conference and a varsity record. Greg Hinchman, John Manning, and Bobby Vail also had parts in the East Carolina victory.

Three men on the team will be graduating this year. They are Tim Winslow who took a second in the 3-M diving, Paul Trevison who won the 100-yard free, and Wayne Norris, who finished first in the 200-yard butterfly.

Wake Wins, 58-55
WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Wake Forest's basketball team kept alive its hopes of escaping the Atlantic Coast Conference cellar with a 58-55 victory over Clemson Saturday night.

The Deacons, 25-point losers to Clemson 10 days earlier, led all the way in breaking a seven-game losing streak. Eddie Payne scored 23 points and Tony Byers 20 to pace Wake Forest.

Fezler Holds To Gleason Lead

By BOB GREEN
Associated Press Golf Writer
FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Forrest Fezler refused to fold.

He had every opportunity to do so. The perfect stage-setting was there in Saturday's third round of the $260,000 Jackie Gleason Inverrary-National Airlines Golf Classic.

The youthful Fezler, a non-winning tour sophomore, had watched a two-stroke lead fade and disappear in the face of a charge by Lee Trevino, one of the game's most feared competitors.

And when Trevino made a third consecutive birdie, that one on the seventh hole, Fezler trailed by one stroke. The pressure was building. His collapse seemed imminent.

But the blond 23-year-old Fezler burst of his own—he went four under par on the next five holes—and swept out to a three-stroke lead in this richest 72-hole tournament on the American tour.

"I was getting a little nervous toward the end," admitted Fezler, whose greatest claim to fame is a former California state amateur championship.

"But I thought, 'Well, just don't let it get to you.'"

"I hope to do the same thing tomorrow. I'm trying not to think about what's gone before. It's worked so far. I just hope I can do it one more day."

Said Trevino: "He's played some awfully good golf. But it's going to be a lot tougher tomorrow. He's gonna be under much more pressure. I won't have near as much pressure on me. I've won before—as he will. I like my chances."

Fezler fashioned a four-under-par 68 Saturday for a 54-hole total of 204, 12 under par on the demanding 7,128-yard Inverrary Golf Club course.

Trevino, the flamboyant British Open champion who had his problems in the seven-week Western tour swing, put together a third consecutive 69 and was alone in second place at 207 going into the last round of this chase for a $52,000 first prize.

Gibby Gilbert was alone in third with a 70—209 and was followed by Australian Bruce Devlin and Bob Murphy at 210. Murphy had the day's best round, a 66, and Devlin took a 69.

Sam Snead, the 60-year-old marvel from another golfing era, moved up with a 68 and was tied at 211 with Jerry Heard. Heard also had a 68 on the day with gray, leaden skies and occasional drizzle.

Jack Nicklaus, the pre-tourney favorite, could do no better than a 70 and was eight strokes behind at 212. Arnold Palmer slipped to a 74 and was out of contention at 219.

The mustachioed Fezler matched par figures on the front side while Trevino—starting two strokes off the pace—charged into a share of the lead with birdies on the eighth and ninth holes.

Trevino moved in front alone when he lashed a short iron to within seven feet and made the birdie putt on the 10th hole.

The gritty Fezler was equal to the challenge, however. He reached the par-five 11th with a three-wood second shot and two-putted for the birdie that tied it again.

He reeled off a string of three consecutive birds starting on the 13th. A beautiful iron shot left him a five-foot putt there and he came within six inches of making eagle two on the 14th.

He and Trevino matched two-putt birdies on the 15th but when the squat and swarthy Trevino three-putted the 17th, Fezler had a three-stroke lead.

CHIP SHOTS: Cesar Sanudo was disqualified for signing an incorrect scorecard, the second of the tournament to be put out for that reason. Dave Hill was disqualified Friday. The prize for seventh place in this rich event is $8,320. Jack Burke collected a total of $8,000 for winning four consecutive tournaments in 1954, $2,000 a tournament. Deane Beman will make his first start of the season next week in the Florida Citrus Open. He's been out of action since November of last year because of an operation on his wrist.

High School Pairings Set

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Opening-round pairings for the state's five high school basketball championship tournaments were announced Saturday by the North Carolina High School Athletic Association.

The tournaments will be played at five different sites, but all will follow the same format and time schedule with action beginning Wednesday night and continuing through Saturday night.

Each session will include two games, the first beginning at 7 p.m. and the second at 8:30. The winners of Wednesday's opening round games will meet in the first contests Friday night, while Thursday night's victors will square off in the second games of the semifinal round. Friday's losers will be paired in consolation games at 7 p.m. Saturday, with the championship games following at 8:30.

The Class 4-A Tournament will be played at Grimsely High School in Greensboro. The Wednesday pairings have Walter Williams of Burlington meeting Gastonia Ashbrook in the first game, and Reidsville going against Fayetteville Terry Sanford in the nightcap. South Mecklenburg will play Raleigh Sanderson in Thursday's opener, with Kinston and Winston-Salem Reynolds meeting in the second game.

The Class 3-A Tournament at Durham High School pits Ayden-Grifton against Wadesboro Bowman in Wednesday's opener, with Bertie Central meeting Madison-Mayodan in the second game. Thursday's first game will be between Northeast Guilford and Henderson Vance, with Hendersonville meeting Fayetteville 71st in the second contest.

The Class 2-A Tournament at Reynolds High in Winston-Salem will have Burgaw meeting Edneyville at 7 p.m. Wednesday and Wake Forest facing Randleman at 8:30. Thursday's schedule will pit Bandys against Edenton Holmes in the first game and West Stanley against Tabor City in the nightcap.

In the Class A Tournament at Raleigh's Broughton High, Orrum will meet the winner of Saturday night's Benhaven-Broadway game in the Wednesday opener, with the winner of Saturday's Wentworth-Bishop McGuinness game facing Elm City in the second contest.

Thursday's Class A games have Sampson Union facing Rosman in the opener and Belhaven meeting Rosman in the second game.

The state championship tournament for girls, held for the first time last year, will be played at High Point Central High School. North Pitt meets West Stanly in Wednesday's first game, while the second contest will be between South Johnston and East Lincoln. Enka and Benhaven meet at 7 p.m. Thursday, with Jamestown Ragsdale playing Williamston in the 8:30 game.

Burleson and sophomore star David Thompson dominated the boards as State raced to a 47-29 lead the first half. Thompson scored 16 points in the first half and wound up with 25.

Robert Earle Blue led UNC-Charlotte with 26 points and eight rebounds.

The Wolfpack had a shooting percentage of 57.5, hitting on 42 of 73 shots while UNC-Charlotte connected on 20 of 54 for 37 per cent.

Carolina Tops Virginia, 76-68

CHARLOTTEVILLE, Va. (AP)—North Carolina's Tar Heels outscored Virginia 14-5 over the last seven minutes of the first half for an 11-point lead Saturday, beat off a comeback attempt and whipped the Cavaliers 76-68 in an Atlantic Coast Conference basketball game.

Bobby Jones, a 6-foot-9 junior, led the Tar Heels with 20 points and did a superb defensive job on freshman Wally Walker, who had led Virginia to an 84-78 upset in an earlier meeting at North Carolina.

Walker got only three field goal attempts and missed them all in the first half, when the Cavaliers shot only 23.3 per cent from the floor and made only one field goal in the last seven minutes.

The victory tightened North Carolina's grip on second place in the ACC race with a 7-3 record and boosted the Tar Heels to 21-5 overall. Virginia is 4-7 in the ACC and 12-9 against all opposition.

Darrell Elston added 14 points and George Karl had 13 for the Tar Heels, while sophomore Dan Gerard led the Cavaliers with 18. Virginia ace Barry Parkhill scored 14, but fouled out with 3½ minutes left to play.

Matmen Capture Seven Titles

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — East Carolina University's wrestlers won an amazing seven out of 10 titles in rolling to a record Southern Conference wrestling championship last night at William & Mary.

The Bucs piled up 119½ points, breaking the old record of 113. About the only thing the Pirates failed to carry off was the Outstanding Wrestler Trophy, which went to William & Mary's Mark Belknap, who beat Jim McCloe, the Bucs' defending champion in the 134-pound class.

The Pirates, in winning, took nine men to the finals, failing to place a man in the championship match only at the 190-pound level.

But Mike Radford, who wrestled there, took third place in the meet to help the Pirate cause along.

The Bucs gained winners in the 118-pound class, Glenn Baker; at 126, Dan Monroe; at 142, Milt Sherman; at 150, Tom Marriott; at 158, Bruce Hall; at 177, Bill Hill; and the heavyweight, Mark Pohren.

Two of the victors for the Pirates were defending champs, Baker and Monroe. McCloe, who lost, failed to successfully defend his title, as did William & Mary's John Kaila, who fell to Buc Sherman.

One other defending champ came through, William & Mary's Scott Moyer, who won the 167-pound title.

Pohren, by winning the heavyweight crown, beat defending champ Greg Freaney of William & Mary.

East Carolina was followed in the team score by the Indians, with 95. Appalachian was third at 53½, followed by VMI, 33, Furman, 5½, The Citadel 5, and Davidson 4.

Each winning champion automatically earned a berth in the NCAA championships, to be held in Seattle, Washington, starting March 8.

118: Glenn Baker (EC) decisively Phil Schulte (A), 6-5.

126: Dan Monroe (EC) decisively Andy Stewart (VMI), 12-1.

142: Milt Sherman (EC) decisively John Kaila (WM), 16-5.

150: Tom Marriott (EC) decisively Tom O'Brien (WM), 5-4.

158: Bruce Hall (EC) decisively Chris Jacobsen (A), 8-1 in overtime.

167: Scott Moyer (WM) decisively Ron Whitcomb (EC), 10-3.

177: Bill Hill (EC) decisively Dick Whitaker (WM), 7-1.

190: Mike Radford (EC) decisively C.L. Schaffel (VMI), 6-5 for third place.

Heavyweight: Mark Pohren (EC) decisively Greg Freaney (WM), 11-5.

State Runs By UNC-Charlotte

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Towering Tommy Burleson celebrated his 21st birthday by scoring 25 points and getting 16 rebounds as second-ranked North Carolina State swept to a 100-64 victory over North Carolina-Charlotte Saturday night.

A crowd of 10,100 saw the Wolfpack score their 23rd consecutive victory without a defeat to tie the school's record for the longest winning streak.

Edenton Halts Williamston Bid

CONWAY — Edenton High School rallied in the final period to take a 50-43 victory over Williamston Friday night in the finals of the Albemarle Conference Tournament.

The victory also gives Edenton the right to represent the conference, as District I in 2-A basketball, in the state tournament this week.

Edenton pushed out into the lead in the first period of the game, gaining a 10-5 lead. But Williamston rallied in the second quarter, outscoring the Aces, 14-7. That pushed them into a slim 19-17 lead at the half.

In the third quarter, the Tigers continued to dominate the play, running their lead out to 34-27 with a 15-10 advantage.

But in the final period, Edenton came roaring back, scoring 23 points, while holding the Tigers to only nine. Willie Barnes paced the comeback with nine points in the period, while Vernell Williams had six.

Barnes finished with 18 points, while Williams had 16 for the Aces. Williamston was led by Henry Wiggins with 15, while Dwight Ange had 10.

The loss ended the year for Williamston, which enjoyed a 14-7 record.

Allison Helps His Opponent

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Bobby Allison of Hueytown, Ala., no sooner had won the pole position for Sunday's Richmond 500 Grand National stock car race than he took off in his airplane to do one of his challenges a big favor.

Dave Marcis of Asheville, N. C., blew an engine in Friday's qualifying trials for the 27-mile National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing event, so Allison flew him to Asheville to pick up a new engine so he could try to make the 30-car field today.

The last 20 spots for the $34,000 race around the .542-mile Richmond Raceway were at stake in more qualifying trials today.

It was almost an Allison sweep Friday as the first 10 spots were filled, for Donnie Allison just missed winning the outside pole position opposite his brother.

Bobby Allison, driving a 1973 Chevelle, qualified at 90.952 miles per hour, while Donnie— in a 1972 Chevelle—hit a top speed of 89.850 m.p.h. in his trial.

In between them at 90.074 m.p.h., and winning the outside pole, was Benny Parsons of Elberle, N. C., in a 1972 Chevrolet.

Cecil Gordon of Horseshoe, N. C., qualified fourth at 89.652 mph in a 1972 Monte Carlo and Buddy Baker of Charlotte, N. C., was fifth at 89.397 m.p.h. in a 1973 Dodge.

Others who made the field for the approximately $4,000 top prize the first day were Cale Yarborough of Timmonsville, S. C.; Ray Hendrick of Richmond, Va.; Richard Petty of Randleman, N.C.; Bill Dennis of Glen Allen, Va.; and Bobby Isaac of Catawba, N. C.

Petty has won five straight races here, but he said of Saturday's trials: "We just weren't going fast enough. But today isn't that important. We've still got another day to tinker around... for a while. We'll be there Sunday, and that's when it counts."

Cougars Steal Game From Nets

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS — Billy Cunningham says the reason he is leading the American Basketball Association in steals is defense and alertness.

Cunningham and his Carolina Cougars teammates used defense and alertness to steal New York blind on their way to a 107-93 victory over the injury plagued Nets Friday night.

Billy C added four steals to his league-leading total of 175 and added 19 points to the Cougar cause. "We kept the fast break tempo going and our defense led to many layups."

In the only other game in the ABA, the Denver Rockets blasted the Memphis Tams 129-103.

Jumping Joe Caldwell, who added 15 points for the Cougars, feels the Nets have too many offensive guards. "Our guards do their job setting up the plays besides scoring the points."

The Cougars, trailing 23-13 early in the game, outscored the Nets 24-12, and widened their lead to 48-42 at the intermission. The Nets trimmed the margin to four points early in the third period but the Cougars poured it on and blew the game wide open.

Tom Owens added 15 points for Carolina, while George Carter topped the Nets with 20 points.

An exasperated Memphis Coach Bob Bass called a team meeting for Saturday morning to, as he put it, "iron this thing out."

The decision to Denver tied the worst homecourt loss in the history of the Memphis franchise. It was also the fourth straight loss for the Tams, who are seeking a playoff spot in the East Division.

Ralph Simpson scored 37 points for the Rockets and Byron Beck added 25. George Thompson had 25 points for Memphis and Johnny Neumann contributed 21 in a losing cause.

Pirates Build Up Big Lead In Southern Swims

LEXINGTON, Va. — It was business as usual for the East Carolina University swimming team Thursday and Friday as they piled up their first two-thirds of the Southern Conference Swimming and Diving Championships.

The Bucs, after two days of competition had piled up 457 points, while hosting VMI was a surprising second with 221. William & Mary was third with 160 points, while Appalachian had 110, Richmond had 84 and Davidson trailed with 68.

Out of the first 11 events, the Pirates had won in eight of them, losing only three. And many times they set new pool, conference or school records in doing so.

Larry Green got the Pirates going by winning the first event, the 500-yard freestyle in a pool record of 4:58.51. The Bucs swept the first four places in that event.

Wayne Norris won the 200-yard individual medley in 2:03.00, a new conference and pool mark. The Bucs also placed second, fourth and fifth.

In the 50-yard freestyle, Paul Trevisan won in :21.33, a new varsity, conference and pool mark. The Bucs also finished in third, fourth, and fifth.

Jack Morrow captured the one-meter diving with a total of 436.90 points, setting a new pool record. Tim Winslow of the Bucs was second.

In the 400-yard medley relay, which closed out the Thursday competition, the team of Greg Hinchman, David Kohler, Wayne Norris and Paul Trevisan won for East Carolina in 3:44.90, another new pool, varsity and conference mark.

Paul Schiffl started the Bucs off Friday with another victory, taking the 400-yard individual medley in 4:23.0, setting a new varsity, conference and pool record. The Bucs were also second, and third.

Tom Falk kept it going in the 200-yard freestyle, winning in 1:49.12, as the Bucs took second, third, fifth and sixth for a near sweep.

The first non-Pirate to win was Brown of VMI in the 100-yard butterfly, winning in :53.24, a new pool and conference record.

Norris was second in :53.50, setting a new varsity mark for the Bucs, who also claimed fifth in the event.

Bob Cunningham of VMI won the 100-yard backstroke in :58.26, while Ron Hughes of East Carolina was second just three-tenths of a second back. The Bucs were also third and fourth.

Ackerman of William & Mary took the 100-yard breaststroke in 1:03.47, while the best the Bucs could do in this was third, with David Kohler. They also took fifth and sixth.

East Carolina closed out the day with Falk, Bobby Vail, Green and Norris winning the 800-yard freestyle relay in 7:21.01, for new pool, varsity and conference records.

Overall, the Bucs have snapped seven pool records, while breaking five conference and varsity marks.

Competition in the meet was to conclude Saturday afternoon (see story on page 1-B). Summary of first two days competition, giving first six places and ECU finishers in the consolation (8-12th place).

500 freestyle: Larry Green (EC) 4:58.51; Tom Falk (EC) 5:01.35; Paul Schiffl (EC) 5:05.43; Ricky Prince (EC) 5:08.42; Meem (VMI) 5:14.65; Cairney (R) 5:14.71; Bobby Vail (EC) seventh in 5:13.0.

DUDLEY — North Pitt's Big Orange Machine won its second straight District II Championship Friday night as they dumped Roseboro-Salemberg 38-25. The Pant-HERS will go on to the State Tournament to be held in High Point, beginning Wednesday, to defend their state title.

North Pitt bashed West Montgomery in the championship game last year by 58-34 for their first 3-A crown. The final game this year will be played Saturday night.

The win Friday boosted the Pant-HERS' record to an unblemished state of 80 wins without a defeat. They are looking to add a few more to it this week.

The final game of the districts was slow at first. The Big Orange led all the way but had a hard time getting started. They took a four-point edge in the first quarter, 6-2, and added a point to it in the second quarter as they had a 15-10 lead at halftime. It took the first half to get used to the good defense of R-S's tall girl, Katrina Owens. But the Pant-HERS were able to hold her to just a single basket and four free throws. In the third quarter, North Pitt began to pull away as they took the period, 12-16, for a 27-16 advantage. North Pitt also came out on top in the last quarter, 11-9, for the final 13-point margin.

After the game, coach Elred Mauldin commented that "They came out playing deliberate. They passed a lot before taking a shot. We played good defense and kept the ball away from their tall girl."

Joy James led the scoring for North Pitt with 12 and she pulled down 11 rebounds. Wanda Whichard also had 11 rebounds for the Pant-HERS.

Debbie Pollard, playing longer Friday than in any other game since recovering from a knee injury that sidelined her midway through the season, scored seven for the Big Orange.

North Pitt — J. James 12, Hollis 4, Jenkins 7, D. Pollard 7, Whichard 4, L. James 4, B. Pollard, Manning, Brown, Good, Everett, Benjamin. Roseboro-Salemberg — Warren, L. Butler 6, K. Owens 4, K. Butler 10, J. Owens, Tew 3. North Pitt 49 12 11-38 Roseboro-Salemberg 28 6 9-25

Boat Show Has Thief Prevention

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

These days you must do more than batten down the hatches of your vacation home on the water to make it safe. The National Motor Boat Show in New York offered a great many tips on the subject that can also apply to one's home on land. Just in time, too, remarked one Florida boatman who has had electronic equipment stolen. The thieves were gourmets, he says, and that makes him even madder. They filched a pound of Russian caviar and a case of Beaujolais, his favorite wine.

"As a matter of fact thieves are taking anything they can sell," commented James Bliss of Dedham, Mass., whose booth of accessories included small inexpensive (under $3) battery-operated alarms that can be hitched to doors...or even to pocketbooks. In a house it might be used on windows, he advised. One alarm will ring for eight hours.

Boat accessory divisions of boat companies listed burglar alarms in their booklets. "The best way to keep a boat safe, though, is to keep it locked," is the opinion of Ralph Tolleris of Chris-Craft, general manager of the accessories division, but to play it safe they offer a talking alarm ($150). If the boat is broken into the alarm screams "help" and it adds, "I'm being robbed."

"In my opinion there are so many noises these days, people don't pay much attention to noise-sounding alarms. So you really need a loud message." If you don't like what the tape says, you can write your own message. Purchasers of a 70-foot Hateras boat can have a wall safe put into the aft cabin closet, said a spokesman, who observed there had been a lot of interest in it. Their 38-foot boat and many others now come equipped with a stereo as part of the standard boat along with a shiny galley that includes a double-door refrigerator and a two-rotisserie oven, but the stereo is more likely to intrigue a burglar. Expensive kitchen appliances are often pulled out of homes, but only a burly burglar would bother trying to remove heavy appliances up a boat's narrow ladder. But who knows.

New York's police patrol unit had a booth at the show and distributed literature that had this to say: "Americans are investing over $3 billion a year in pleasure boats and related marine equipment and that...during the summer months anchorages are crowded with boats moored almost stem to stern...a tempting opportunity to boat and equipment thieves."

Here are some pointers offered by them:

The American Association baseball season opens April 13 and ends Monday, Sept. 3.

Wildlife Theme Set

Plans are being readied by thousands of local and state groups across the country for participation in the 36th annual National Wildlife Week, set for March 18-24.

The theme of the 1973 Wildlife Week, sponsored each year by the 3 and 1/2 million member National Wildlife Federation and its state affiliates, is "DISCOVER WILDLIFE — It's Too Good To Miss." Focus of the week will be on the simple, yet exciting, joys that can be found by Americans of all ages in the outdoor, natural world.

The North Carolina Wildlife Federation urges all interested individuals, clubs, school groups and others to write for free posters and literature to help them in the observance of this important week. S. Thomas Lucas, 4816 Stonehill Road, Raleigh, North Carolina, 27609, is State Chairman of this year's National Wildlife Week and will supply these materials upon request. Time is short — order yours today.

During this year's Wildlife Week, National Wildlife Federation Executive Vice-President Thomas L. Kimball urges that families "get out and enjoy our wild resources. The experience can open up an entirely new world."

"Too often," Kimball said, "American families see wildlife and the rest of the natural world only through attractive magazine pictures. It's out there to be experienced right now and it really is too good to be missed!"

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS — Oakland Raiders will face the Minnesota Vikings for the first time when the National Football League teams meet in a preseason game at the University of California in Berkeley Aug. 25, the Raiders announced Friday.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Second baseman Lee Lacy signed his 1973 Los Angeles Dodger contract Friday, leaving six Dodgers still unsigned—pitchers Claude Osteen, Don Sutton, Tommy John; infielders Bill Buckner and Steve Garvey, and outfielder Willie Crawford.

Lacy batted .259 last year in his rookie season with the Dodgers.

Bulls Rally To Topple Knicks

By BRUCE LOWITT
Associated Press Sports Writer

The way the Chicago Bulls were talking, it sounded as if they hadn't done a thing right—and for the first half of the game, that's about how things were. But they were talking about the final 21 seconds, when everything they did worked out just fine.

The Bulls appeared out of Friday night's National Basketball Association game against New York by halftime as the Knicks blew away to a 57-33 lead.

In other NBA games, Detroit nipped Baltimore 107-105, Cleveland clobbered Portland 121-102, Houston humbled Philadelphia 138-116, Phoenix beat Buffalo 125-106, Seattle defeated Atlanta 124-120 and Golden State downed Los Angeles 111-106. In the American Basketball Association it was Carolina 107,

New York 93 and Denver 129, Memphis 103.

What the Bulls did in the second half was get hot. In one stretch they outscored New York 26-6. By the start of the fourth quarter the Bulls trailed by only four points. And they went ahead 74-73 midway in the period.

Detroit did a comeback thing of its own against the Bullets. The Pistons trailed by six points midway in the final period and scrambled back to tie it 105-105 with 45 seconds left. Bob Lanier's 10-foot hook shot at the buzzer gave the Pistons the game.

Austin Carr and Len Wilkens, who teamed for 49 Cleveland points, led a third-quarter surge in which the Cavaliers took a 55-48 halftime lead and turned it into a 94-68 bulge over the Trail Blazers.

Immanuel Wins Church Crown

Immanuel Baptist, idle Friday night, got some help from Black Jack Free Will Baptist, which downed Oakmont, 51-44, giving Immanuel the Church Basketball League title.

In the other games, Presbyterian ripped Grace, 96-35, and Piney Grove nipped St. Paul's, 45-43.

Immanuel is now 14-1, while Oakmont is 11-3, in third place.

In the opening game, Piney Grove eased out into a 20-15 lead during the first half. In the second, St. Paul's put on a rally, out-hitting Piney Grove, 28-25, but it wasn't quite enough to pull out the victory.

Wayne Avery led Piney Grove with 17 points, while Ricky Langley had 10. Jack Wall led St. Paul's with 26. Presbyterian had no trouble in rolling to victory in the second game. They worked up a 54-22 lead at halftime, and then outit Grace, 32-13, in the second half.

Larry Graham pushed through 34 points, while Ron Barnes had 27 and Don Southerland had 10 for Presbyterian. D.R. Daniels led Grace with 16.

In the final game, Oakmont ran out to a 25-17 lead in the first half. But Black Jack rallied to outscore them, 34-19, and gain the victory.

Tal Adams led Black Jack with 18 points, while Phillip Smith had 11 and Danny Edwards had 10. Bobby Hall had 20 to pace Oakmont.

Wildlife Afield: Is The Energy Crisis A Conservation Warning

By JIM DEAN

Some of my friends claim that the only "energy crisis" they know anything about is the one that overcomes them when their wives hand them a rake and show them the front yard filled with last fall's leaves.

I know something about that kind of energy crisis, but I also know something about the kind that has concerned millions of people in this country in recent years.

We are — some say — running out of many of our most valuable sources of energy. Gas and oil reserves are rapidly being depleted. Certain types of coal are running out. Electrical energy — in many cases dependent upon these other forms of energy — has been in short supply at times.

Some authorities are claiming that the energy crisis is a myth perpetrated on the American public by large companies in order to gain better profits and tax breaks for their products of gas, oil and coal. It is also claimed that the crisis has been overplayed in order to gain favorable laws allowing new and expanded exploration for new sources of gas, oil and coal.

The energy industry denies this, saying that the crisis is real. We have all seen the television ad that shows a heart-beat pattern while a somber voice tells us that "a country that runs on oil cannot afford to run short."

Some experts are saying that what is needed is a change of life style that requires less energy through more efficient automobiles, less waste of electricity and so forth.

But with all this hue and cry from both sides of the issue, the main point seems to have been lost. The critical question is not necessarily whether we are in the midst of a real or imagined energy crisis at present. The point is that these resources ARE definitely limited, and that sometime in the near future—if not now—we will face an honest energy crisis of tragic proportions.

When this happens, we will be forced to change not only our use of energy, but our life styles as well.

The present crisis — real or imagined — is ample warning that we had better get on a stick and find some unlimited resources for the energy that we will need.

We are going to run out of coal, oil and gas, and that is a dead certainty. When we do, what are we then going to do about it?

Obviously, the answer is not to step up the mining of our remaining stocks of gas, oil and coal, which is what the industry apparently wants a carte blanche ticket to accomplish. If we follow that course, we are merely shortening the time before we face a truly severe and perhaps unresolvable energy crisis. And — as some conservationists have pointed out — we will have left significant parts of the country in virtual ruin from such practices as strip-mining with nothing to show for it.

Nor is the answer merely to change our life styles to use less energy. No matter how tight we pull the belt, we are still dealing with declining resources. Limiting the use of energy may buy us some time, but that is all.

We need — while there may still be a little time — to find a way to harness some unlimited source of energy, such as the sun. Solar energy is a proven resource, but work needs to be done to make it practical. So far, nowhere near enough money and effort have been significant effort to find other unlimited energy sources that may prove practical.

But there is no time to lose. We need to begin now to find suitable alternatives. We are being warned. Are we smart enough to know it?

Dinghy Management Is Given In New Book Available To Boaters

By JACK WOLISTON
NEW YORK (UPI) — For the cruising boatman, is a dinghy an asset or a liability?

And if you are addicted to a dinghy, what do you do with it while under way?

Both questions are controversial among boatmen. Some of the pros and cons of the dinghy question are contained in a folder, "Dinghy Management," authored by boating expert W.S. Kals and offered free of charge by Grumman Boats, Marathon, N.Y.

"If you always return to your dock or to your mooring within tooting distance of the well-ribbed operator of the club launch, you'll have no dinghy problems. Especially if you don't have a dinghy," Kals writes.

"It's different when you cruise. You anchor off in strange places, gunk-hole into uncharted creeks, hang on sandbars, feel the urge to maroon a guest, or simply run out of beer. Then you have dinghy problems. Especially if you don't have a dinghy."

Also on the asset side for the dinghy, Kals continues:

"A dinghy lets you lay out a second anchor when it breezes up; sometimes the only way to get an anchor up again is from the dink. With a line rove under the thwarts and leading to bow and stern of the yacht it makes a painter's scaffold. It's survey ship, tug and ferry boat. It's also lifeboat, rain catcher, laundry tub, bait bucket, fishing creel, and swimming ladder."

Where to Put It
As to where to put the dinghy while under, Kal opts for storage aboard, either by davits at the stern or lashed keel up on deck.

"But where do you lash it?" he asks. "On deck the dinghy is in everyone's way; on the cabin top it cuts the helmsman's vision? On the foredeck it interferes with anchor work and sail handling, and puts the forehatch out of commission; on the upper deck of a cruiser it becomes awkward—and even dangerous—to handle when you cruise short-handed."

The alternative, Kals says, is towing the dinghy, and "in protected waters, in calm seas, you may get away with it many times."

He adds: "Someday you'll regret it. The dinghy, a mere nuisance when stowed, can change into a sea monster when towed. It surfsboards down the face of a wave until you think it's coming through the transom. At the last moment it changes its mind and aims for your head."

Kals advises that a length of rope over the stern of the dinghy as a miniature sea anchor may slow these excursions.

How long should the towing line be?

"Sea conditions, your speed and the personality of your dinghy will answer that question. Experiment!"

In the folder, the contents of which come from a Kals book, "Practical Boating Inland and Offshore—Power and Sail," published by Dougleday & Company, Inc., the author touches on such other subjects as a controlling a dinghy at anchor and handling a dinghy adrift or swamped.

Infected Fish Found In River

RALEIGH — A disease which causes sores on fish has been found on some fishes from several lakes in the Catawba River chain, bringing numerous inquiries to the North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission's Division of Inland Fisheries.

"The infected fish exhibit inflamed tissues, and sportsmen are quite naturally concerned about the effects on the diseased fish, the fish population and any angler who might wish to consume his catch," said Don Baker, Chief of the Division of Inland Fisheries.

An examination of diseased fish has been made and culture samples submitted to Dr. G. T. Bullock at the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Eastern Fish Disease Laboratory at Lettown, West Virginia. Dr. Bullock has identified the disease as Aeromonas liquefaciens. Although little is known about it, it apparently occurs when fish are weakened by such factors as high water temperature, crowding or low dissolved oxygen concentrations.

Information from the N.C. Department of Human Resources shows no record of mortality or illness to humans due to this organism, and there is no evidence to indicate that infected fish are not perfectly edible when properly cooked.

There is no known way that this disease can be eradicated or even controlled in large bodies of water. The bacteria normally are present in all waters, but only infect fish that have been weakened by other factors.

Although some reports indicate "long, stringy growths" on the fish, this is undoubtedly a secondary fungus infection which grows on dead or diseased tissue. It cannot grow on healthy tissue.

Stokes, Cox Split A Pair

STOKES — Stokes-Pactolus Junior High School and A. C. Cox of Winterville split a pair of basketball games Thursday night.

Stokes won the girls game, 26-22 in an overtime. Helen Hardy led Stokes with 10 points, while Jenny Buck paced Cox with eight.

In the boys' game, Cox won it, 22-21. Kenneth Roberson led Stokes with nine points, while J. Streeter had 15 to lead Cox.

Tar Heel Outdoors: New Book Outstanding

by Joel Arrington

Charley Waterman has done it again.

Coming hard on his last book, Modern Fresh and Salt Water Fly Fishing, published last year, is The Fisherman's World (Random House, 250 pp., $15), a companion volume to The Hunter's World, published previously.

What he has done again is write a book of exceptional interest to American fishermen.

While the fly fishing book was a specialized how-to-do-it volume, The Fisherman's World is as much a picture book as an in-depth look at fish and fishermen. Waterman succeeds in illuminating a sport that is for many of us amateurs too many times a dark and murky mystery. He understands fish and the fisherman's environment. Armed with that, he hides out to battle with everything from trout to tarpon, from the snow-fed rivulets of the Rockies to the azure depths of the ocean.

It is a hefty book, full of dazzling photographs, most in color, and rich with information. It must be read slowly because Waterman writes tightly, compressing facts and concepts into paragraphs that must be sipped and savored rather than gulped.

At times, however, the author can be as lyrical as Herman Melville in Moby Dick. About stalking rolling tarpon: "Then there are more rolls, one so close to the boat that the fishermen hear the gentle sigh of the fish taking air and feel the cold stare of a single enormous eye. Below the gleaming black back is a great length and depth of scales, like overlapping plates of scoured silver, disappearing silently to leave only a few small bubbles, the silent trail of a hundred pounds of fish."

The first time through The Fisherman's World, I considered it to be a book for the polished and sophisticated angler, because it is heavy on piscatorial natural history. And maybe it is a bit obtuse for the casual fisherman who cares little for talk of thermoclines, food chains, eutrophication and euryhaline fish.

But in addition to all that, it is a beautiful and often poetic work, the issue of half a century of fishing experience and astute observation from one end of this country to the other.

It can be faulted at all, it is on the lack of information about fishing the mid-Atlantic seaboard. There is precious little on surf fishing, no more on shad and virtually nothing on trout fishing in the Southern Appalachians. For anglers in the coastal states between New York and Georgia, that may be a plus factor, because much has been written elsewhere on our kind of fishing.

Perhaps in his travels, Waterman will visit the Outer Banks with its incredible runs of giant striped bass and bluefish. Perhaps he has intentions to probe every back eddy and black-water river of the Coastal Plain.

If he does, and he writes about it, he will take another step toward being one of the foremost fishing authorities this nation of fishermen has produced.

Tourney Honors Bucs

Golfers from the Greenville Golf and Country Club and Brook Valley Country Club have been invited to participate in the first annual East Carolina University Golf Festival to be held Monday at Greenville Golf and Country Club.

The tournament, to benefit the East Carolina University Golf team, will take the form of a program, with local golfers paired with members of the ECU golf team, some former members and with local area pros.

Prizes will be awarded to amateur golfers, but the pros are foregoing prizes to aid to the amount to be presented to the Pirates.

An entry fee of $20 is charged to each golfer. Interested persons can contact pro Gordon Fulp at the club house at Greenville.

The mountain lion, also known as puma, cougar and catamount, is the most widely distributed large predator, ranging from Alaska to Argentina.

SHARP DECLINE—The stock market declined this week with the Dow Jones industrial average closing Friday at 959.89, well down from the week prior. The Associated Press Average fell by 5.7 over the same period. The decline was attributed to investor worries about inflation at home and the dollar abroad. (AP Wirephoto Chart)

Business Notes

EASTERN PLANS
Thomas W. Hicks, recently named manager for a newly created Equitable Life Assurance Society agency in Rocky Mount, announced that organizational plans for the eastern part of the state include opening three district offices.

Hicks said that in addition to the Rocky Mount agency office, which will be responsible for sales and service east of Raleigh, district offices will operate in Greenville, Edenton and Rocky Mount. Through this plan, he said, more than 20 representatives will serve Equitable in the region, as of March 1.

Barry Sumrell Jr. has been named district manager here while Greenville agents named Don E. Haley and Henry L. Groome. David O. Speir of Bethel and William S. Johnson of Robertsonville were also named to serve the new area.

QUARTERLY DIVIDENDS
The board of directors of United Telecommunications Inc. declared regular first quarter dividends of 25 cents per common share and 37 and a half cents per share on the first series convertible preferred.

In addition, the dividends on the second series convertible preferred was increased to 37 and a half cents from 34 and three eighths cents. This series, it was noted, replaced former Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Co. common stock.

TRAINING PROGRAM
Mrs. Ann Brown, local representative of Southern Life Insurance Co., home offices in Greensboro, completed the company's basic training program consisting of 27 weeks of study which provides a basic knowledge of life and health insurance, and simple selling procedures.

Mrs. Brown, the company reported, received a diploma in recognition of completing the training program.

JOINED STAFF
S. Robert Andron, a 1968 architectural graduate of Pratt Institute in New York, has joined the staff of Smart-Woodall-Isley and Herring Inc. here and will be involved with the design and execution of building projects in the Greenville area.

Andron recently completed his Air Force military tour of duty at Seymour Johnson Air Force Base in Goldsboro. Prior to his service tour, he worked for Emery Roth and Sons in New York City. The 27-year-old architect is originally from Miami Beach, Fla.

His wife, the former Suzi Steene of eastern Connecticut, is also a 1968 graduate of Pratt Institute and is an artist, interior designer, and instructor. The Androns, who will reside at 410 W. Fifth Street, have a four month old son, Lee.

NEW FACILITY
Joe Griffin, president of the Federal Land Bank Association of Washington, announced plans for a new facility to house the offices of the Land Bank.

Griffin said that the building will be located on Highway 17 north of Washington. The association, he added, serves Pitt, Beaufort, Martin, Hyde and Washington counties.

MAINTENANCE SCHOOL
Charles Gaskins, president of Gaskins Supply and Marina of Grimesland and Washington, announced that Paul Kolback, Mitchel Halloman and Steve Berry attended the Chrysler Maintenance School Sunday through Saturday in Jacksonville, Fla.

EDUCATIONAL
First-Citizens Bank and Trust Co. has received approval from the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. to establish a full service bank in Williamston, according to G. R. Smith, senior vice president and regional supervisor for the bank.

The bank will be located in the H. Leman Barnhill Office Building on the Highway 64 Bypass, Smith said, and should be open in late spring or early summer.

Tossed Package Began To Grow

POOLE, England (AP) - Funny things happened when postman Fred Hallum threw a parcel into his van. The parcel hissed and began to grow. Finally the paper covering burst and out popped a self-inflating life jacket - fully inflated. Despite amusement among Devon post office workers, the recipient, Anthony Poole, didn't find it so funny. He's a life-saving instructor.

U. S. CIVIL SERVICE TESTS!

Government positions pay high starting salaries. They provide greater security than private employment and opportunity for advancement. Many positions require little or no specialized education or experience.

Faster, Cheaper

RALEIGH (AP) - State government can deliver the mail faster and cheaper than the U.S. Postal Service, according to results of a three-month experiment announced Friday.

Charles Williams, the state's general services officer, said the programs showed the state could deliver its mail overnight between Raleigh and 13 other cities at 75 per cent what it would cost to mail it.

Williams said two station wagons and an automobile are used in the courier service to transport about 200 pounds of correspondence daily. At current rates this would cost about $200 through the mail, Williams said. State cost is $150.

A western route links Raleigh with Durham, Greensboro, Winston-Salem, Statesville, Salisbury, Lexington and Asheboro. An eastern route joins Raleigh with Fayetteville, Goldsboro, Kinston, New Bern, Greenville and Wilson.

Principal users of the service have been the state Highway Commission, the Department of Motor Vehicles and the Department of Revenue.

Evangelist Will Preach

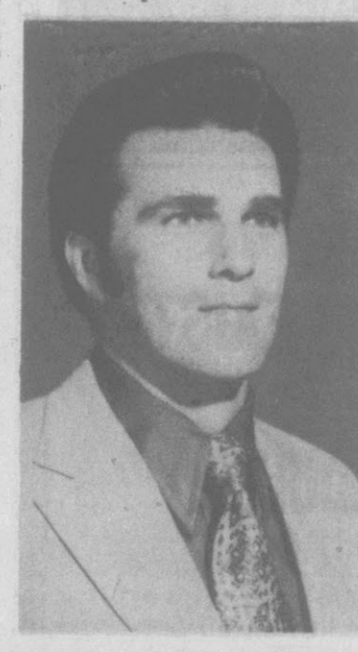

Evangelist Van Dale Hudson will preach at Parker's Chapel Free Will Baptist Church Monday through next Sunday at 7:30 each night.

The Rev. Hudson has been an evangelist since 1966. He conducts of 40 revivals annually throughout the United States.

A native of Amory, Miss., he is a graduate of Free Will Baptist Bible College in Nashville, Tenn., and is the author of several books. He also edits a monthly evangelistic magazine, THE EVANGELIST. He and his wife, Sandra, and their two children, Dale and Devin, live in a travel trailer, so the family can be together during his tours.

Mrs. Hudson presents a ventriloquist performance nightly in the services.

CARROLL RICHTER'S HOROSCOPE

from the Carroll Richter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day of confusion where some persons are upset and speak out of turn, stating opinions that are too critical. They are likely to change suddenly at a later date and become embarrassed about it. Take time to attend services today.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You are anxious to be at new places and make new friends so make plans early for a delightful time. Try to understand others better. Use tact and wisdom when exchanging ideas with others.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Use your good judgment instead of your intuition today, since the latter could be erroneous. Listening to what an expert has to suggest is wise. This could lead to something very fine.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Avoid an associate who has an axe to grind and could cause a big argument now. Don't take any risks where the general public is concerned. Make sure not to lose your temper at home.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Handle the work that is of a philanthropic nature and get good results today. Take health treatments and give much thought to improving wardrobe. Evening is fine for home fun.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You want to have a good time but make sure you don't force yourself on others or you could be disappointed. You have a creative project that needs some of the kinks taken out. Work on that.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Don't make matters worse at home by criticizing others too much. Use tact or keep quiet and all is fine. Get busy and make your home more charming and comfortable. Show devotion to mate.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Using care in motion is important today as well as thinking carefully before speaking. Attend the services that inspire you. Later visit with wise persons who can give you good advice.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Elevate your consciousness to a greater abundance for the future and take steps in the right directions. Get in touch with a business expert and you will know how to handle a problem.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Don't do anything that could make you feel dissatisfied and belligerent or you will regret it later. It might be better to avoid social functions if you are not feeling up to par.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) If you concentrate on lofty ideas, you get rid of a hemmed-in feeling you have. Get those duties attended to instead of fussing about them. Make this a constructive day. Relax tonight.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Don't permit a disturbed friend to get you into any kind of trouble today. Steer clear of social affairs where there is too much controversy. Show others that you have poise. Be wise.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Take no risks where your good name is concerned or you will regret it later on. Follow every rule and law that applies to you. Stay away from a friend who is not in your good humor today.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one of those youngsters who likes to hear the sound of own voice. Teach to speak only when something important has to be said, otherwise conserve energy for work and learning. Add foreign languages to the educational curriculum and direct study along importing and exporting lines. Sports are very much to your progeny's liking. Some religious training early.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, FEBRUARY 26, 1973

from the Carroll Richter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day when a big smile and compliment to others on their best points brings out their willingness to show affection and listen to what you have to say. Big success can result. Fine for planning to travel and make changes for the better.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Communicating with an out-of-towner to secure backing you need for some important project is best in a.m. Then sit down with a new associate and get good advice, profit from his superior knowledge, experience.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Collect overdue bills, pay those you owe, and be on the alert for new systems that will make the future more successful. Showing more affection for mate brings fine results. You have been quite distant of late.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Sit down with mate and have a heart-to-heart talk and plan the future more intelligently. Get that civic work done quickly and well, and you find right results are possible. Avoid one who does not understand you.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Try to comprehend better what is going on around you and cooperate with fellow workers in some plan that is good for you and them. Work with a vengeance early and get much accomplished. Contact some old friend in p.m.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Get in touch early with congenials with whom you want to go out for a good time and make appointments for the p.m. Show close ties ardent devotion for right results. Get that important work done after lunch.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You can make those improvements to home after you have consulted with those who dwell with you and get fine results. A good talk can bring out some fine truths, also. Avoid one who likes to argue too much.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Contact those persons early who will understand your ideas and help you put them in operation successfully. Do that buying or selling that puts you in a better operative position. Avoid social affairs in p.m.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You can start putting in operation the plans you formulated yesterday and show bigwigs you have fine logic. Your intuitive perception is good so make use of it. You can look forward to greater prosperity now.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Once your work is done, be sure to get together with congenials for the social fun that most appeals to you. State your fondest aims and get advice, backing for them. Show particular affection for mate in p.m.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You are able to find the right method for getting rid of difficulties and should do that early in a.m. More study of right books can round out your knowledge now. Show you have a good mind.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You have some personal aim that should be voiced in right circles so you get the backing you need to achieve it. Mix business with pleasure and all works out fine. Be your fine gregarious self.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Get the right support for that civic duty you want to perform in proper way. Strive for more goodwill with the public in general. Don't forget to pay bills and improve credit. Avoid one who is unfriendly to you.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one of those direct and blunt people who quickly follows through with any idea that appeals to him or her. Sports could well be the forte here and should be encouraged during school years. The academic and philosophical are also fine in this chart. An excellent mind and body can lead to big success, plus a great belief in self. The philosophy of mind science will appeal greatly to your youngster. Teach good manners early.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

Would Accept Sewage Water

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI) — A University of California scientist's survey shows that most Californians would accept the use of reclaimed sewage water for recreational and irrigation purposes.

Professor William H. Bruvold conducted his survey in 10 California communities, interviewing about 100 persons in each.

Twelve Bachelors Who Kept Anne's Secret

By GILLIAN FRANKS
LONDON (WNS) — For over a year there has been a persistent rumor in Court circles that Princess Anne has "someone special" — that, at 22, the most eligible girl in the world has finally given her heart to the man she wants to marry.

Now, one of the best-kept Royal secrets seems to be finally out: Lieut. Mark Phillips of the First Queen's Dragoon Guards stayed at Sandringham over the New Year's holidays — one of the most traditional signs that he was being "looked over" as a possible royal husband.

It was the same Lieutenant Phillips who Princess Anne kissed goodbye — in public — as he departed for duty in Germany last month. And he has been a frequent hunting companion of the princess.

No one outside the immediate Royal Family yet knows whether Mark Phillips is really "the one," but family friends are saying the odds are heavily in his favor.

And if so, much of the credit for keeping the latest royal romance from public gaze must go to 12 of Britain's most wealthy and eligible bachelors who, over the past year, have formed a constantly changing escort.

"camouflage squad," says a family friend. "But as most of them had known Charles and Anne since they were children, they were pleased to help."

Familiar Pattern
Certainly it fits into the pattern of royal behavior when a serious romance is in the cards. Billy Wallace served as a "smoke-screen" for Princess Margaret and Lord Snowdon.

The Duke of Kent, by continuing to take out eligible girls, kept secret for months the identity of the girl he already had chosen as his Duchess.

Over the past few months, commentators close to the royal circle had noticed a change in the royal routines surrounding Princess Anne. Traditionally, a personal detective accompanies the royal children on all social outings. But recently, Anne has been seen in her blue Scimitar sports car without her bodyguard, Detective Inspector Coleman. In his place, in the front passenger seat, was a tall, fair-haired young man.

It was none of the eligible young men with whom the Princess's name has been linked in recent months, but Lieut. Mark Phillips.

Secret Number
The man who has done

most to lead the world's press of the scent is Olympic showjumper Richard Meade, a close friend of both the Princess and Mark Phillips.

Ten years her senior, Meade is regarded by Anne almost as an elder brother. He is one of the few men to have been given one of the most secret telephone numbers in London — the direct line to Princess Anne's first-floor Buckingham Palace apartment.

Tall, fair and good-looking, Richard Meade is the son of a former high sheriff. When not show-jumping he works in the London financial district.

All he has ever said in public about his relationship with the princess is: "We are more than casual acquaintances..."

Man About Town
In recent months, one of the most regularly seen "front men" in the Princess's life has been worldly 32-year-old Brian Alexander, son of the late Field Marshal Earl Alexander of Tunis, for whom escorting royalty is no novelty.

He was at one time a familiar sight in clubs and restaurants with the then Princess Margarethe of Denmark.

He like skiing, golf, shooting and auto-racing and is an Old Harrovian and former officer in the Irish Guards.

He regularly appears at Windsor house-parties and has been a guest aboard the royal yacht Britannia. Very much the man about town, he has introduced Anne and her friends to numerous out-of-the-way restaurants patronized by those who know what's what in London.

Another constant escort has been Lord Irwin, a close friend of Prince Charles, whose guest he has been at Windsor.

Lavish Parties
A hunting and shooting enthusiast, he gives lavish weekend parties on his Yorkshire estate, some of which have been attended by Princess Anne, and is renowned for his unruffled manner. He also looks remarkably like Prince Charles.

Until the emergence of Mark Phillips, the front-runner in the royal stakes was undoubtedly Guy Nevill, son of one of the Queen's closest friends. They were seen regularly together at theatres, movies and parties, but recently the girl-boy interest seems to have cooled.

Despite a mutual interest in horses — he is a successful amateur steeplechase jockey — they see less of each other these days. One reason could be that Guy is busy running a trendy Chelsea furnishing shop, in which he is a partner. Another constant escort and a friend since nursery days is David Penn, son of the Comptroller of the Lord Chamberlain's Office, and a former pageboy to the Queen.

Like many of Anne's boyfriends he is an Old Etonian. It was David who took Anne to see the rock musical, "Hair," on the famous occasion on which she joined the dancers on the stage.

Special Trip
Nicholas Soames, son of Britain's former Paris ambassador is another favorite escort, and Anne even made a special trip to Paris to attend his birthday party.

As the friendship with Mark Phillips ripened, so there were inevitably some casualties in the ranks of the royal escorts. Christopher Sharples, a London sugar-broker and frequent dinner companion, left for a two-year, round-the-world yachting trip. "I'm sure the Princess has many other people to keep her amused," he said before he left.

And last summer, Anne lost her regular, and most romantic "date" — 23-year-old long-haired, Sandy Harpur — whom she had kissed in public on a dance-floor, and whom she regarded as the most entertaining of her escorts.

He became engaged to model Peta Seccombe, after saying on several occasions that the publicity which surrounded anyone escorting Princess Anne was too much for an ordinary mortal to bear.

Now it looks as though the "smokescreen" will be needed no longer. Mark Phillips has shot with Prince Charles and Prince Philip on the Sandringham estate and is said to have had long conversations with the Queen over the teacups at Windsor.

Statistically, 1973 could be Princess Anne's year for romance. At 22, her mother was unofficially engaged, her aunt Margaret was deeply in love and Princess Alexandra knew she would marry Angus Ogilvy.

Anne has always said she would never rush into marriage. "I will marry when I am good and ready," she remarked last year. "And to the person I love."

It could be that the dozen faithful escorts will have one final job in 1973. Ushers at a Very Important Wedding.

Couple Exchanges Vows On Saturday Afternoon

In a candlelight ceremony Saturday at 3:00 p.m., Joyce Reagan Manning became the bride of Michael Joseph Poling in the First Presbyterian Church.

The Rev. Richard Rhea Cammon, pastor of the church, conducted the double ring ceremony. The church was decorated with an arrangement of white bridal flowers with candelabra holding lighted tapers.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Kenneth Woodard, organist, and Timothy R. Green sang "The Lord's Prayer."

Parents of the couple are Maj. and Mrs. Earl Reagan of Anderson, S.C., and Mr. and Mrs. M. Howard Poling of Raleigh.

Given in marriage by M. Howard Poling, father of the bridegroom, the bride wore a formal length gown of ivory silk organza fashioned with a high neckline, bishop sleeves with a front and back panel with ruffles and Viennese lace. The gown was enhanced with a flowing detachable train.

She wore an illusion lace full length mantilla attached to a Camelot headpiece with bead work. She carried a bridal bouquet of white roses.

Mrs. Kenneth Lee Fuller of Florence, S.C., sister of the bride, was matron of honor. She was dressed in a formal gown designed with a champagne lace bodice and apricot crepe skirt.

The gown featured a ruffled high neckline. She wore an apricot flower headpiece with streamers and carried a colonial nosegay of pom pon chrysanthemums with satin ribbon.

Bridesmaids were Miss Mary Poling and Mrs. Marcie Shell of Raleigh sisters of the bridegroom, Mrs. Phebe Claud and Mrs. Sandy LeMonica of Greenville.

Their formal gowns had champagne lace bodices with olive green crepe skirts. They wore matching headpieces and carried colonial nosegays of pom pon chrysanthemums with satin ribbon.

Miss Theresa Shell of Raleigh, niece of the bridegroom, was flower girl. Her gown was fashioned similar to that of the honor attendant and she carried a basket of mixed flowers.

Noel Thomas Manning II of Greenville, son of the bride, was ring bearer.

Stephen Poling of Raleigh, brother of the bridegroom, was best man and ushers were Kenneth Lee Fuller of Florence, S.C., brother-in-law of the bride, D. Thomas Shell, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, and John Davenport, both of Raleigh, Jimmy Wilcox and Pete Cajigal both of Greenville.

Mrs. Hubert H. Bryant selected an aqua crepe dress with bead work around the neckline with silver accessories. The bridegroom's mother wore a white wool knit dress with turquoise accessories. Both wore white orchids.

Mrs. Frank Scheiner of Clearwater, Fla., grandmother of the bridegroom, chose a purple knit dress, matching accessories and a white orchid.

The couple will reside in Greenville.

The bride is a graduate of Rose High School and attended the Salvation Army College, Atlanta, Ga., She is presently employed at the First Presbyterian Church, Greenville.

The bridegroom graduated from Broughton High School, Raleigh, and served in the U.S. Navy. He is presently a student at East Carolina University.

Immediately following the ceremony, a reception was held in the church fellowship hall given by the women of the church.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas M. Davis greeted guests and Miss Katie Bryant presided at the guest register.

Mrs. R.K. Knowles and Mrs. R.K. Barnhill poured punch and Mrs. J. William Byrd and Mrs. Jack Weeden served wedding cake.

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Caldwell said good-byes.

An after-rehearsal party was held Friday night in the fellowship hall of the church.

French School Teaches Cooking In Grand Manner

By TOM HOGE
AP Newsfeatures Writer

The tendency of hotel and restaurant managers today to cut down on help and to serve economical "convenience" foods reminds me of a visit I paid not long ago to a well known hotel school in Paris where such methods are frowned upon. Run for aspiring chefs and hotel managers, the school, known as the Lycee Technique Hotelier, still teaches the old-world techniques of elegant service and gourmet cooking.

About 500 youngsters from all over the world, including the United States, are enrolled in courses that run from two to four years. While at the Lycee they learn everything from the proper way to peel a potato to working in two foreign languages.

"Some of the world's finest chefs have graduated from this school," said the headmaster, Serge Perrot, who invited us for a tour of the building and sumptuous luncheon prepared and served by his pupils.

I soon saw what he meant. In one kitchen classroom a group of students was watching intently as a chef instructor showed them how to clean and dress a chicken.

In another class, students were learning how to make pastry, taking rulers from their aprons to measure piecrust dough to the exact thickness desired.

In a third room, a bespectacled instructor was molding a piece of sugar statuary while his students watched transfixed.

At lunch we realized how well the pupils had been trained. It was a delectable meal, from the creamy quiche lorraine to the rum cake.

"We not only teach the art of fine cooking here, we instruct our young people on how to serve in the proper manner," said Perrot, as a student waiter stood by his side.

The young man bent stiffly from the waist as he presented a platter of fish for the headmaster's inspection before serving.

Moments later, a second student waiter advanced and held up a bottle of champagne for our approval. Then he grasped the cork with one hand and slowly rotated the bottle with the other until the stopper slipped off noiselessly.

"He would have gotten a failing grade for the day if he had popped the cork," said Perrot. "That's not the way to open champagne, even if they do it in the movies. For one thing, you are apt to have a spillover and lose some fine wine."

Student waiters must present a good appearance and be as silent as the cork sliding from the champagne bottle. "We put stress on that," said Perrot.

As he spoke there was a loud crash at a nearby table and I saw a red-faced young man looking down at the remains of a plate that had slipped from his tray.

"Ah well," said Perrot "he could have dropped the whole tray."

The food was as good as the service and featured a Filet of Sole Bonne Femme that was memorable. Here is the recipe:

FILET OF SOLE BONNE FEMME

3 tablespoons butter
1 chopped shallot
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
¼ pound chopped mushrooms
8 sole filets
¾ cup dry white wine
Salt and pepper
2 cups Bechamel Sauce
8 patty shells

Spread butter in shallow baking dish. Cover with shallot, parsley and mushrooms. Place fish filets on top and season with salt and pepper. Add wine and cover with piece of buttered wax paper. Place in 350° oven and bake till done. Place a rolled filet in each patty shell and pour over warm sauce. Remove from oven, cool slightly. Reserve filets and well-chilled champagne.

Is Playing Drums Feminine?

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1973 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of a husband who constantly complains that he doesn't get enough loving, but when his wife lets him know she's in the mood, he turns her down to watch a football game.

Should I take it lying down [excuse the pun], or should I go out and find myself another man? ON THE VERGE

DEAR VERGE: Obviously there is nothing to take—lying down or otherwise. Next time he complains, kick him in the end zone!

DEAR ABBY: The other day my wife asked me if I minded if she went to a night club with some girls. [The night club is a respectable place.]

I asked her who "the girls" were, and she told me that one was a single co-worker who was entertaining her sister from out of town, and the other was a married woman who is known in every motel in town as "Mrs. John Smith."

I told my wife I didn't mind her going out, but I did not think it would be good for her reputation to be seen in the company of this "Mrs. John Smith." My wife admitted the woman's reputation was not the best, but she said she was a "lot of fun, good company," etc., and then started quoting the Scriptures. [She's pretty good at that.] So I heard all about how Jesus cavorted with thieves and prostitutes, forgave seven times seven, and about judging not lest ye be judged.

I ended the discussion by saying she could go if she wanted to, but I thought she had a duty to her husband and children to keep her reputation free from scandal. Was I wrong? HER HUSBAND

DEAR HUSBAND: No. But you missed an opportunity to quote a bit of Scripture yourself: "Abstain from all appearance of evil." [New Testament, I Thessalonians, 5:22.]

DEAR ABBY: Please don't think I'm crazy, but I have a problem I haven't been able to conquer for five years.

My husband will not kiss me! He kisses our kids, but not me. We kissed before we were married, but since then he won't kiss me at all.

I am not ugly and I use plenty of mouthwash so I don't have bad breath. I used to be a good kisser, but I am getting out of practice. I have cried, begged, and tried to reason with him but nothing helps. Believe it or not, we have a good marriage and a good sex life, but no kisses.

We are both 25 and I hate to think of the years ahead without a kiss. Can you help me? This is no put-on. I am dead serious. MRS. KISSLESS

DEAR KISSLESS: Ever heard of a fixation? Well, it appears that your husband has developed one about kissing. But don't despair. It can be fixed by a fixer-upper of fixations. So get your kissaphobic mate to a head doctor and head off a kissless future. [Marriages have been kissed off for less.]

DEAR ABBY: I am a girl and I've always wanted to play the drums. My big brother plays the drums and I figured that since he has a set, my folks wouldn't have to buy one for me. [He's away at college.]

Well, I asked my mother and she said no. Afterwards I found out that my mother talked it over with my brother and he said it wasn't very "feminine" for a girl to play the drums. I'm not one of those big Women's Lib girls. I just want to play the drums. What do you think?

LIKES THE DRUMS

DEAR LIKES: I think your brother ought to be ashamed of himself. If he's a musician worth a drumstick, he knows there is nothing unfeminine about playing the drums. He probably just doesn't want his kid sister messing with his drums while he's away.

Money Management And Insurance Should Be Discussed Before Marriage

NEW YORK (UPI) — Before the wedding day, the happy couple must get feet on the ground in two unromantic areas — insurance and money management. (No insult intended. Cupid.)

Failure to plan in the money and security arenas can get the marriage off on the wrong foot, even causing the first serious marital rift.

The nuts and bolts of what you must know and do:

—Discuss types of insurance you should have. Life, medical, furniture, car. (Don't forget your yacht!) Names will need to be changed on all policies now held by the woman. Even auto insurance needs attention. A change in marital status can affect the premium. (A married man is a better risk than a single man his age.) Renter's insurance is a necessity if you want to protect furniture and clothes from loss by water, fire or theft.

—Some insurance companies offer an Engaged Couples Endorsement to existing renter's policies. The coverage can be bought up to 90 days before the wedding. It covers wedding gifts and possessions stored anywhere within the state in which the policy is written. The coverage extends to 90 days after the wedding.

—See the insurance agent about medical insurance. If both of you work, check the policies connected with employment. One of you will want to switch to the family plan. Select the one that offers the best coverage. It's foolish for both to hold family plans.

Joint Account
—Make some kind of plan about money management. Will you have a joint checking account? Will each have a separate account? Or will there be just one account and only one authorized to write checks? Unless each of you vows to fill in check stubs, the joint account can lead to fiscal disaster.

—Rent a safe deposit box at the bank. You'll keep the wedding license there, both of your birth certificates, Army discharge papers, and other vital papers. It also is a good idea to keep in the box such things as the account numbers of credit cards. In the event of loss of same, you can get a recapitulation quickly by checking the safe deposit box.

—On credit cards there will need to be discussions. Will each keep all the cards now held? Will some accounts be closed? There are dozens of questions, each as different as the persons involved. Only by discussing your long range financial plans and the part credit will play in management of finances will you be able to arrive at answers like to serve your best interests. On credit, the big thing, of course, is to avoid getting into a trap—having more payments due each month than you can manage comfortably on your income.

JELLIED PINEAPPLE CUCUMBER SALAD
This version of a favorite salad comes from Kentucky.

1 can (8 1/4 ounces) crushed pineapple in heavy syrup
1 package (3 ounces) lemon gelatin
1/4 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 container (8 ounces) commercial sour cream (1 cup)
1 medium cucumber (peeled and finely diced to make 1 1/4 cups) Thoroughly drain the pineapple, mashing the fruit down — there will be about 2-3rds cup; to the syrup (about 1-3rd cup) add enough water to make 1/2 cup. In a small saucepan heat the pineapple syrup to boiling. In to a medium mixing bowl turn the gelatin; add hot pineapple syrup and stir until dissolved) if gelatin does not entirely dissolve place bowl in a pan of simmering water and stir until it does. Add salt, lemon juice and sour cream and beat until smoothly combined. Stir in drained pineapple and the cucumber. Turn into individual 1/2-cup molds or custard cups. Chill until set. Unmold and garnish with salad greens and a topping of sour cream. Makes 6 servings.

Note: Use a slender cucumber that has small seeds.

Women Urged To Plan Business Carefully By Two 'Supergirls'

By EVE SHARBUTT
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Starting a "super" business isn't really so difficult. All that's required are nerves of steel, absolute faith in oneself and planning, planning, planning.

With 7900, ambition, enthusiasm and some ideas, Claudia Jessup and Genie Chipps got out of the aspiring actress business and into a new service business they called Supergirls Enterprises, Ltd.

The have not been successful beyond their wildest dreams, but at least they have a long list of business clients and a plus balance at their bank.

"When we breezed into business there was no pre-planning," said Claudia. "We had an idea and boom — we had a telephone, some assignments and we fell in love with the business. That isn't the way we'd do it now."

Four years later, after many inquiries from women who would like to start a business of their own, "We thought we'd write a book about some of the things we learned," Genie said. "There's a universality of experience in business, whether it be cosmetics, advertising, interior decorating or restaurants, and we've talked with people involved in all of them. Everybody agreed with us on the fundamentals," Claudia added.

"You can't get scared off. You can learn by doing. Starting a business is not so hard if you have enthusiasm and think it through," Genie said.

Strongest of advice Supergirls has to offer is to get a professional in the beginning to plan a budget, check overhead and make projections for the future. This professional could also check progress at regular intervals — six months, one year, etc.

"You'll be doing yourself a favor to hire him and he will think of all the things that have to be dealt with as you go along — licenses, taxes and all that. And maybe you will only have to pay him occasionally," Genie said.

"The accountant can do projections on how many of your bills will be paid. He can even work out bill forms for things like services — party planning, or menu costs if you plan a restaurant or food service business.

"He can also offer help with overhead. In large cities, overhead can be quite high," Claudia added.

They admit they might not have made a go of their business if they had not run it on a shoestring from Claudia's apartment the first year. Bank service departments and the Small Business Association also have counselors to help with financial planning for new businesses. "Then you need an honest evaluation of your business idea before it's launched. Try out the idea on your friends, getting an informal survey of their evaluation of its possibilities for success. It will give a good feeling of how something is going to go," Claudia added.

Competition, experience in a field and financing should be considered at length.

"Lots of people have terrific ideas, but they can't quite take that first step to get out and make it," Claudia said.

The all-purpose service bureau which is Supergirls was based on experience Genie and Claudia had obtained from part-time jobs they had taken while seeking their big break in the theater. They decided they could shop for hard-to-find items, plan original parties, do research, decorate homes, carry out promotions and find creative talent for specific jobs.

"Private people never could appreciate the time we spent doing their jobs... and they weren't very good about paying their bills," Genie said.

So Supergirls now deals primarily with large businesses. "We are still doing some finding on behalf of agencies but we're more involved in promotions. We are able to come up with our own ideas and use some of our creativity in the feminine market, and that's important to us. We are involved in a new magazine on a very speculative basis but we believe in it. And it's still the great fun of Supergirls that we can work in so many areas, not just one," Claudia said.

Genie added that they have learned a number of business tricks.

"When we're not certain what a company wants to pay for a job, we make a list of all the things we're going to do and include a few very useless items, things we know from past research and so forth. At the end of our presentation, if the client thinks the cost is too high, we tell him we can cut items four, five, six and eight and bring the fee down," she said.

"It's a kind of education you can't get until you're on your own. If you're naive about business, you tend to forget that in its broadest definition, it is a profit-seeking concern. Things get easier, not harder when you're in business for yourselves," Claudia added.

ECU Campus Nursery Program Plans Announced

The preschool program of the East Carolina University School of Home Economics will accept applications from parents of three- and four-year old children for the 1973-74 school year beginning March 1.

Application forms are available at the home economics school's Dept. of Child Development and Family Relations. Completed forms should be returned to Dr. Nash Love, departmental chairman by March 23.

Pre-school program supervisor Juanita Greer said children who are accepted will be enrolled for the entire school year, and that the pre-schooler will meet on weekdays from 9 a.m. until noon whenever ECU is in session.

Fees for the preschool program are $60 per quarter. Parents of enrolled children are required to attend in the home environment. The ECU Preschool Program is a research facility used by ECU child development classes for observation and study of young children in group experiences.

Twenty-two children will be accepted for the 1973-74 program.

You will get the best buys in your lifetime NOW. All furniture is going up 10% each month.

Household Hints

U.S. government figures on food consumption for the past 10 years show a 11 per cent decline in the amount of animal fats eaten by Americans. During the same period, consumption of vegetable fats and oils rose 17 per cent.

Canadian bacon is fully cooked, cured and lightly smoked pork loin, with fat content ranging between 9 to 15 per cent.

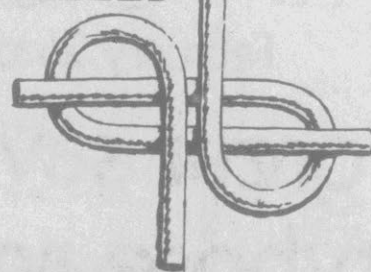

More than 30 per cent of the meat on a chicken is on the legs, or drumsticks plus thighs. The breast with ribs makes up the second meatiest portion, at 28.9 per cent.

Uncooked chicken can be stored safely at average freezer temperature for a year.

Whole frozen chickens that weight three pounds or less defrost in about 12 hours at refrigerator temperature. To thaw at room temperature, allow 2 to 3 hours per pound for whole chicken, or 1 1/2 to 2 hours per pound for smaller parts.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture has developed two experimental citrus drinks made from whole fruit purees of oranges and grapefruit. Only the seeds and tough portions are removed before the fruit is ground and homogenized.

Scoop Jackson On Threshold Of Recognition

By ELMER W. LAMMI
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington stands tall among Democratic presidential candidates in 1976. But time may be running out on him.

At 60, the calm, relaxed but energetic son of Norwegian immigrants finally stands on the threshold of the national recognition that could win him the nomination that he missed in 1972.

But it may be too late. By the time the gavel falls at the 1976 Democratic National Convention, he will be 64—and the convention well may turn to a younger man, perhaps someone such as Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts.

Jackson, still youthful and vigorous, insisted in an interview that he isn't even thinking about 1976 in terms of his own candidacy. But, he concedes "I'm keeping my options open."

"I'm philosophical," he said, sprawling comfortably with one leg draped over the arm of an easy chair in his cluttered office in the Old Senate Office Building.

"Who knows what fate will bring? In just a matter of days we lost two ex-presidents and a war ended. It's a long, long time to 1976, and fate intervenes — sometimes cruelly, sometimes favorably."

Whoever the Democratic candidate is in 1976, it is clear Jackson will have more than a little to say about it. For one thing, he appears to be moving slowly and cautiously into the vacuum in party leadership left by the crushing defeat of Sen. George S. McGovern in November.

It was Jackson who quietly engineered the election of Robert Strauss, an effective fund raiser from Texas, as Democratic national chairman—a job Jackson himself held briefly in 1960-61.

"I will continue to play an active role in the party, just as I did in getting Strauss elected," Jackson said. "I want to see the party expand its gains in the House and Senate in 1974 and to lay the foundation for winning the White House in 1976."

Like McGovern at the 1968 convention and Sen. John F. Kennedy at the 1956 convention, Jackson gained visibility and recognition through his hopeless fight for the nomination at the 1972 convention.

He now gets "stacks of invitations" to speak at Democratic functions. Of these, he said, he accepts only a few because of his increasing involvement in congressional affairs—at least some of which will bring him more and more into the public eye.

One invitation that he did accept came from Mayor Richard Daley of Chicago, once a king-maker in Democratic politics. Jackson agreed to speak at a Cook County Democratic fund-raising dinner in March.

Despite his defeat in 1972, Jackson looks back at the campaign with apparent satisfaction.

"I knew it was almost impossible to win the nomination," he said, "but I felt very strongly that it was a race that had to be made by someone to try to carve out a sector in the middle-of-the-road—which I saw as the only way that the Democrats could win."

At Miami Beach, when Sens. Hubert H. Humphrey and Edmund S. Muskie threw in the towel, Jackson remained in the race even though he knew McGovern had the votes in his pocket. Why?

"I think the delegates wanted a choice, and they had a right to a choice," he said. "It would have been unfair to the country to represent McGovern as the unanimous choice of the Democratic party."

"There's no bitterness and no bad feeling," Jackson said, looking back. "I enjoyed it, and I learned a lot."

What, then, did he learn that might prove useful if he should try it again in 1976?

"First of all, I started out with the obvious disadvantage of not being known—and this is a big, big thing," he said. It was this handicap, he said, that most hampered fund raising and negated the best organizing efforts.

Now, however, his growing power in his 33rd year in Congress, along with his exposure at the 1972 convention, is almost certain to gain him greater national recognition.

Jackson became chairman of the Senate permanent investigations subcommittee this year when Sen. John L. McClellan, D-Ark., stepped down. It is a powerful position and its chairman can investigate almost anything he chooses.

When it was learned late last year that McClellan would turn the investigating panel over to him, there was speculation that Jackson would head the Senate investigation of the Watergate case. But Jackson immediately turned to Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C., the highly respected chairman of the Senate subcommittee on constitutional rights, to head such an investigation.

Since the hearings probably would get into alleged sabotage and spying during the 1972 primary in Florida, Jackson said, his own campaign was certain to be involved. For that reason, he said, he would have to disqualify himself if his committee conducted the investigation.

Jackson, who ranks third in the Senate Armed Services Committee, long has been a respected voice in matters affecting national security. He also has been speaking out more frequently on foreign policy and recently has turned his attention to the growing energy crisis through his chairmanship of the Senate Interior Committee.

In 1972, Jackson's reputation as a "hawk" on Vietnam cost him the support of some who could not fault him on his record in support of social welfare programs and civil rights. This may be forgotten by 1976.

"I think the Democratic Party is coming back together," he said. "The end of the war will benefit the party by helping to remove the one-issue approach."

In his home state, Jackson long has had the reputation of a "winner." He won re-election to the Senate in 1970 with more than 80 per cent of the vote.

He is a product of his state. Born in Everett, Wash., on May 31, 1912, he attended Everett

High School and got a law degree at the University of Washington. His first venture into politics came in 1938, when he ran successfully for prosecuting attorney of Snohomish County. From that day he never lost an election until the Florida presidential primary. He was elected to the House in 1940 and went on to the Senate in 1952.

Adding to his youthful image is his family. Ending the many years when he was among capital's most eligible bachelors, he married Helena Hardin, then an aide on the Interior Committee staff, in 1961. They have two children.

Most of the key primaries do not even file for office until July. By that time the fight for the nomination may be over.

TV Notes

NEW YORK (UPI) — The first of the new "CBS Playhouse 90" productions, a series that seems to have been considerably delayed, will have George Segal in the leading role of "The Lie," an original television drama by Sweden's Ingmar Bergman, best known as a motion picture writer-director. No air date as yet.

"Pueblo," a drama first presented last year at the Arena Stage in Washington, D.C., which, somehow, did not reach its goal, the Broadway theater, will show up March 29 as a two-hour drama special on ABC. The Stanley R. Greenberg play tells the story of the U.S. Navy Vessel Pueblo, captured by the North Koreans in 1968. Hal Holbrook plays the Pueblo's skipper, Commander Lloyd Mark Bucher.

The Elvis Presley song special taped months ago in Hawaii will be telecast on NBC at 8:30 p.m. April 4. It is a one-man, 90-minute concert.

Ernest Gold, much honored for his background music for Hollywood movies, makes his debut in television with the score for Paul Gallico's "The Small Miracle," a Hallmark Hall of Fame drama on NBC April 11.

Brett Halsey, well-known movie and television actor, has joined the cast of the CBS daytime serial, "Love Is a Many Splendored Thing," in the role of Sen. Spencer Garrison, formerly played by Ed Power, who left for other career interests.

Actors Michal Caine and Charlton Heston will share the master of ceremonies chore when NBC telecasts the annual Oscar Awards program of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences March 27.

Greenville's Concert Series Representative

Tom Bradshaw, campaign chairman for the Friends of the College concert series, and Chancellor John T. Caldwell of North Carolina State University have announced the appointment of Mrs. Ouida C. Deber as membership representative for Greenville in the 1973-74 membership drive.

This next season will bring five outstanding programs to the Coliseum at N. C. State University for the exceptionally low membership fee of $7.00.

The season will include Agnes de Mille's American Heritage Dance Theatre; the Orchestre de Paris under the leadership of Sir Georg Solti; the pianist Lili Kraus; a gala evening of operatic arias, duets, trios and quartets with the Anna Moffo, Robert Merrill, Jose Carreras and Beverly Wolff; and Budapest Symphony.

The Friends of the College is believed to be the largest concert series of its kind in the United States.

The membership drive ends March 20.

Dennis Weaver Is Son Of The Soil

By VERNON SCOTT HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Dennis Weaver, star of the "McCloud" series and former sidekick to Jim Arness in "Gunsmoke," is a Missouri farm boy who has never outgrown his love for the soil. "There's something about the earth that everyone should learn to work in and love," he says.

Weaver does just that in the small plot of land which surrounds his home in Calabasas, a distant suburb of Los Angeles where he moved to escape smog and heavy traffic.

His vegetable garden includes tomatoes, watermelon, radishes, onions, lettuce, spinach, squash and strawberries. He tends the garden himself. A gardener trims the lawn and grows flowers.

There are also five varieties of fruit trees on the property. As simple and down-to-earth as is the garden, the interior of Weaver's California mission-style house is elegant.

It is a riot of rich colors, deep carpeting, high-beamed ceilings, rich woods and nubby textured furniture.

Most of the credit for the beauty of their home goes to Geraldine who was married to Dennis in 1945. Both Weavers worked with an architect and a designer in building their dream house.

In addition to growing much of his own provender and working for ecological groups, Weaver thinks Southern Californians should spend more time on bicycles and less in automobiles.

Weavers Ride Bikes
To that end he has made bike riders of his family. On a weekend morning Dennis and sons Rob and Rusty can be found pedaling around the San Fernando valley. An older son, Richard, has become an actor and lives in an apartment not far from the family home.

The NBC series takes only 20 weeks a year of Weaver's time. He is on the set about 12 hours a day, usually arriving home by 8 o'clock.

When he is free of the series Weaver stars in television movies and makes occasional guest appearances on other shows.

Dennis is not socially oriented. He and Geraldine entertain infrequently.

"Gerry is a fantastic cook and one of the most informed nutritionists I know," says Weaver. "She manages a health food store. I guess I shouldn't use the term 'cook,' because about 75 per cent of our food is prepared raw."

Weaver is a vegetarian who does not believe in hunting or fishing.

He enjoys hiking. The family owns a large mountain cabin on the steep shores of Lake Arrowhead, a two-hour drive from their home. Many a weekend—both summer and winter—are spent at the cabin.

When Lake Arrowhead becomes crowded with tourists in the summer, Weaver and his sons drive up into the Sequoia country of the Sierra-Nevada and back-pack several miles to camp under the huge trees.

"It's even more fun in the wintertime," says Dennis, "when you have to spend most of your time just finding enough to eat and staying warm."

Dennis combines the best of show business worlds, the comforts of home and the excitement of the mountains. "I'm lucky," he says.

From Sheppard Memorial Library

By LINDA M. STANCLL

Was Benjamin Franklin a British spy? This startling question is investigated by Cecil B. Currey in CODE NO. 72-BEN FRANKLIN; PATRIOT OR SPY? Author-historian Currey has brought to life an entirely different story of Franklin, the dedicated servant of the U.S. during the turbulent years of the nation's birth. Based on previously unused papers of the British Secret Service, this complete reappraisal of one of America's most illustrious founding fathers explores the amazing story behind the hitherto little known facts of one of America's greatest figures.

In THE IMPLOSION CONSPIRACY Louis Nizer has depicted the greatest spy story of the century — the true account of the Rosenberg espionage case, brilliantly set forth in both its human and its legal aspects. The Rosenbergs were charged with passing along to Soviet Russia the secrets of the device that triggers the atom bomb. The trial that resulted was one of the major courtroom dramas of all time. Nizer has presented a breathtaking story of an incredible theft and its impulsive effects on the balance of power.

Patrick J. McGarvey, a former intelligence agent, shatters the myth that the CIA is a super-human organization capable of conceiving and pulling off every imaginable kind of trick and strategy in C. I. A.; THE MYTH AND THE MADNESS. His fascinating book depicts the CIA plague by the same problems that beset all large organizations: bureaucratic headaches, a deluge of paperwork, and a gap between policy making and reality. McGarvey shows how the various intelligence agencies duplicate each other's efforts, often competing against each other and refusing to share information and he describes the lengths the CIA will go to for information. He deplores the excessive committees and departments that generate an immense accumulation of raw intelligence data far beyond the capacity of the analysts and he protests the political infighting that sacrifices efficiency to save face and insure promotion. He also reveals the human side of intelligence work — the broken marriages, the trauma of exposing children to danger in foreign outposts and the loneliness, tension and overwork that often result in excessive drinking, ulcers and death.

LOST COLONY BOOK

Something new for 1973 about the English birthplace of America is now available.

Just off the press is a 56 page volume with 12 color plates, Adventurers to a New World, by Charles W. Porter, III, historian for the National Park Service.

In his book, Porter writes about the people of The Lost Colony, the vanguard of a great migration who became a part of America's first and most lasting mystery. These were the English settlers who came ashore in 1585 at what is now Fort Raleigh National Historic Site.

From many original sources — diaries, government records, shipping manifests, sketches and watercolors, and writings of sailors and Traders — Porter describes the atmosphere of the Roanoke Colony and details the English colonial aspirations which led to its establishment.

The color plates are by John White, the explorer, artist, surveyor and colonial governor. The plates illustrate Indian life and the wild game they harvested.

Copies of Adventurers to a New World are available from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C. 20402. Price of the book is $1.00.

ECU Graduates Win Competitions

Donna Stephenson, mezzo soprano from Benson, and a fall quarter graduate of the School of Music of East Carolina University was recently named first place winner in a voice competition sponsored by the Southern Division of the Music Teachers National Association (MTNA). Miss Stephenson, having previously won the North Carolina audition, was competing with first place winners from seven other southern states. She will represent the south at the national convention of the MTNA in Philadelphia April 1. This is the second time Miss Stephenson has won this award. She studies with Mrs. Gladys White, a member of the ECU School of Music faculty.

In addition to the MTNA Competition, Miss Stephenson was also named winner of the Metropolitan Opera District Auditions held recently at Greensboro, and Mrs. Jackie Rausch of Greenville, another graduate of ECU last spring quarter, was named first place winner of the scholarship competition sponsored by the N.C. Federation of the scholarship competition sponsored by the N.C. Federation of Music Clubs. Following this she competed in the District Audition at Spartanburg, S.C. when she was again named first place winner. As a result, she will be able to compete for the national Irene S. Muir Biennial Scholarship offered during this year.

Mrs. Rausch also was a winner in the District Metropolitan Opera Audition held on the ECU campus. She studied with Mrs. Gladys White of the ECU music faculty while she was a student. She will compete with other district winners at the Regional Audition in Atlanta, March 11.

St. Andrews Review

Broad Viewpoints Reflected

Much depends on the coverage a reader expects from a collegiate literary publication as to whether or not the current issue of St. Andrews Review fills the bill for him.

The current issue, Fall and Winter, 1972 (Vol. 2 Nr. 1) of the magazine of arts and humanities published by St. Andrews College in Laurinburg, contains essays, short works of fiction, an interview, a number of short poems, book reviews and photographs.

The view point of this issue is slanted to national and international viewpoints rather than state or regional viewpoints taken by many collegiate literary organs.

One of the most interesting articles in this 70 page issue, however, is regional, John J. Duffy, Jr.'s Charleston—The People and the Place. The author, Associate Provost of the University of South Carolina and Charleston native, succeeds admirably in combining facts and a real feel for atmosphere in a succinct study of the town as a sleepy, economic boondock when the 20th century opened. The gradual emerging of progressive forces for reform is related with a parallel unfolding of the town's diverse background of social history. This essay is a fine example of what an essay should be.

At the other end of the spectrum, Helen Luster's evaluation of Allen Ginsburg in The Green Man Is Alive and Thrives rushes along in a breathless tirade of adoration for her subject that would have more credence as a work of fiction than as a critical evaluation of a controversial figure and his achievements. (i.e., "Who or what is this? ... Jove hurling thunderbolts ... Jahveh the volcano god up on his mountain...about to erupt?")

Another essay, William Trotter's Furtwangler's 'Nazi Ninth' — The Phonograph Record As History provides provocative, in-depth thoughts on a single historical radio performance of Beethoven's great work. Lucid, clearly the result of meticulous research, Trotter's work is brought to life by the knowledge and respect the author has for his subject.

Three short stories are pleasant fare, as are short poems by a couple of dozen contributors.

Sam Ragan and Ronald H. Bays jointly interview William Stafford, Consultant in Poetry to the Library of Congress. Stafford offers one intriguing possibility when he says "The next, sustained, influential poet (in America) will come with few sounds of bells and cymbals, I suspect..."

An extreme case of poor proof-reading marks this issue of St. Andrews Review. There are any number of instances of misspelled words and a couple of cases of lines appearing out of order. There's also a dual mystery—Gill Holland's story listed in the table of contents does not appear in this issue—and on one page, there are two small photographs of two men on an otherwise blank page, that so far as I could determine, have nothing whatsoever to do with this issue. Could this be a gimmick to draw reader response?

Copies of St. Andrews Review are available from St. Andrews College, Laurinburg, N. C. 28352. The price is $2.50 paperback, $5.00 in hard cover.

JERRY RAYNOR

East Carolina University School of Art senior Barry Scharf is living proof that there's little credence to the widely held belief that artists, even young ones, are generally able to express themselves well only in terms of what they paint or draw.

Barry is highly articulate in finding words to express ideas, impressions, and thought images that are behind the drawings, paintings and sculptures he creates.

And he is totally dedicated to art as a life form. "For me art is all consuming," he said when asked what prompted him to become an art student. "You might say it's my personal philosophy, my way of seeing things in terms of art, the subtleties of the world, of nature."

Taking into fact he's still a student and thus has not progressed far into so-called changes of periods or styles of work — Barry's work, no matter what the subject or the style he employs, conveys a strong feeling of gentle moods. "That's true," he agreed when this fact was mentioned. "I feel nature expresses itself in a flow of energy. It is a natural phenomenon. Even volcanoes flow and are absorbed back into the earth after the violence of eruption."

In much of his work to date lighter colors predominate. Many of the paintings combine loosely worked areas with precisely drawn lines. "Man is represented in my paintings by geometric form," Barry explained. The superimposition of the geometric forms suggest the way man does not always fit in his environment.

"For example," Barry made said, "man, at least modern man, paves roads before he walks on them."

He mentioned a group of drawings, "an Apollo series, dealing with man reaching out, investigating space.

"I'm not one," Barry added, "who thinks that man is bad. I think he is basically good, but is like a good child who sometimes does the wrong thing."

Recent paintings have included a series based on volcanoes and another series based on water holes. A third recent series is of watercolors, simplified forms, with the word "dream" as a tie-in thread — "Cream Dream," "Atomic Dream," etc.

When Barry graduates in the near future from ECU, he plans first to visit in Florida and New York, then go to California to pursue graduate work. "I hope eventually to teach," he stated, "and would like to teach art at the college level."

Until recently a clean-shaven artist, he now sports a full black beard. "I'm trying it out," he smiled. "I think a beard might make me look more professorish."

A native of Irvington, New Jersey, home is now Miramar, Florida, where his parents live. Barry has been a student for four years. For two years he served in the Air Force, with duty stations in England and northern Italy.

His work has received showings in North Carolina and New Jersey, and he is the recipient of an award for art exhibited in New Jersey.

ART NOTES

Robert Ades To Teach Course At Art Center

Reservations are now being taken for a five day, three hour session course in portraiture and still life, to be held at the Greenville Art Center from March 12 through 16.

The class, to be conducted in two sessions, a morning one from 9:00 a.m. until noon, and an evening one from 7:00 to 10:00 p.m., will be taught by Robert Ades of Washington, D. C.

Classes will be limited to 10 persons per session, with acceptance on a first-come, first-served basis. Total fee is $35.00 per person, which will include modelling fees. Materials must be furnished by the pupil.

Ades, a retired diplomat, is a native of Idaho who majored in art at the University of Oregon and later studied in Los Angeles.

He has taught art at the Phillips Art Gallery in Washington, D. C. and Hood College. During his Foreign Service Career, Ades served in Bolivia, Spain, Mexico and Honduras and had exhibitions of his work in these countries.

Further information on registration can be obtained from Mrs. Edith Walker at the Art Center.

NCNB Traveling Exhibit

The Art Department at Lenoir Community College is featuring a month-long display of the current NCNB Traveling Graphic and Watercolor Exhibitions. The works included in the 1973-74 traveling show are by eminent North Carolina printmakers and watercolorists.

The North Carolina National Bank art program provides for a permanent collection which now totals more than 800 works of art. These pieces are located and displayed in the NCNB offices throughout the state and comprise the most extensive collection of art by North Carolinians in existence.

This touring exhibition of graphics and watercolors features the creative talents of Don Sexauer and Gerald Johnson of Greenville; Norbert Irvine of Wilson; Claude Howell of Wilmington; Jim Flink of Raleigh; Stephen White of Carrboro; Al Fincher of Charlotte; John Stewart of Greensboro; and Don Harris of Durham.

The show will be on display throughout February in the Main Building of Lenoir Community College.

Speight, Sexauer In Show

Two Greenville based artists, both faculty members at the School of Art, East Carolina University, are among 316 artists from all parts of the U.S. invited to exhibit one work in the 148 Annual Exhibition of the National Academy of Design, 1083 Fifth Avenue, New York.

Dr. Francis Speight, a member of the National Academy, and Donald Sexauer, a non-member, were this year invited to exhibit in the prestigious show that opened Saturday and will continue through March 18. Of the 316 artists invited to exhibit, 151 are members and 165 are non-members. Painters, printmakers and sculptors are represented.

The National Academy of Design is the oldest art school in New York City. Portrait painter Samuel Finley Breese Morse (also known as the inventor of the telegraph), was the first president of the academy.

Chamberlain Wins Mention

Charles Chamberlain, faculty member of the East Carolina University School of Art, is winner of an honorable mention in the 10th Annual Piedmont Crafts exhibition currently on view at the Mint Museum of Art in Charlotte.

For the annual event, a total of 521 works were entered by 296 artists from the states of the southeastern region.

Florence H. Pettit of Glendale, Connecticut, who was juror for selections and awards, chose 238 entries from 176 artists for the show.

The 10th Annual Piedmont Crafts Exhibition will be on view in the Dwelle, Round and Garden Galleries of the Mint Museum until April 15.

First NCMA Poster

Beaux Arts Ball 1973

The first in a series of silk-screen posters featuring a work of art in the permanent collection has been announced by the North Carolina Art Society and the North Carolina Museum of Art. Created to commemorate the first statewide Beaux-Arts Ball, the work selected for the 1973 poster is a piece of sculpture entitled Female Flutist attributed to a French artist of the 18th Century.

The idea and design for the poster was conceived by staff members Christie Rucker and Linda Grimesley of the North Carolina Museum of Art and executed by George Bryant of Creative Graphics of Raleigh. The poster is printed in two shades of terra cotta ink on a fine quality cream colored Curtis Tweedweave.

Moussa Domit, Associate Director of the Museum, expressed his delight in the success of the project and stated, "Even though loosely drawn, it captures very effectively the movement and volume of the piece. The poster is certainly worthwhile for collectors." Only three hundred posters have been printed. They will be available at the Ball and sold for a small charge at the Museum Book Store and from regional representatives of the North Carolina Art Society.

The Beaux-Arts Ball, sponsored by the North Carolina Art Society, will be held at the Country Club of North Carolina in Pinehurst on February 24, 1973. The Ball is for the benefit of the North Carolina Museum of Art.

Difficult Child Can Be Handled By Skilled Teacher

By DR. HAIM GINOTT
 Note to readers: The encounters depicted in my column are designed to serve as a practical guide to improved communication. They are not to be taken literally. They should be adapted to individual situations and individual ways of speaking.

AN UNDERSTANDING TEACHER can effectively deal with a child's excessive demands. The following illustrates how the teacher of a group of 5-year olds handled a situation in a playground.

Charles: Nobody can come into the playhouse, it's my property!

Teacher: You wish it were your property; you wish it did not belong to everyone in the class?
 Charles: Yes.

Several other children got into the playhouse and Charles left for the woods.

As children wandered into the woods:
 Charles: These woods are my property. No one can come in without my permission.

Teacher: Charles, would you like your own property?
 Charles: Yes.

Teacher: We have five picnic tables, would you like to choose one for your own property?
 Charles: Yes.

He chose a table, sat alone for about five minutes then walked back to the group.

Charles: Teacher, I don't want any more property!
 Teacher: You are welcome to join us.

Result: No more complaints about private property.

This teacher was helpful because she avoided explanation and "logical" questions. (This property can be used by all children. How would you feel if another child would not let you use the playhouse?) Instead, he used by all children. How would you feel if another child would not let you use the playhouse?) Instead, she addressed herself to the child's feelings. She granted him all his wishes in fantasy and a token in reality. The child himself then chose the company of his teacher and playmates over isolation on his private property.

A TEACHER can help parents see their children in a new light and thus treat them with new respect. Example:

Mother sat in her son's music class in school. Donald refused to participate. Mother watched him sitting quietly while the other children sang, danced and played. Only towards the end of the period did Donald join his peers.

After class, Mother approached the teacher angrily:

Mother: Why did you allow him to sit quietly. Why didn't you make him get up and participate. He can't get away with that. He is disobedient.

Teacher: I have another feeling about Donald. I think of him as a real individualist.

Mother: An individualist?
 Teacher: Yes Donald works better on his own rather than in a group in which everyone does the same thing. He watches, listens, and learns, and participates when he's ready.

Mother: That's true. I know he's very observant. But I never thought of him as an individualist. That's very interesting. Thank you for telling me that.

Teacher was helpful because she did not argue with the Mother's perception. Instead, she acknowledged her feelings and then stated her own view. The teacher's regard for the child's individuality enabled Mother to look at her son with new respect.

continued to do nothing. The teacher said, "Annette, I wonder how you would tackle this assignment." "I don't want to," she declared. "These topic don't appeal to you?" the teacher asked. "No," Annette answered. "Is there a topic that you'd like?" asked the teacher.

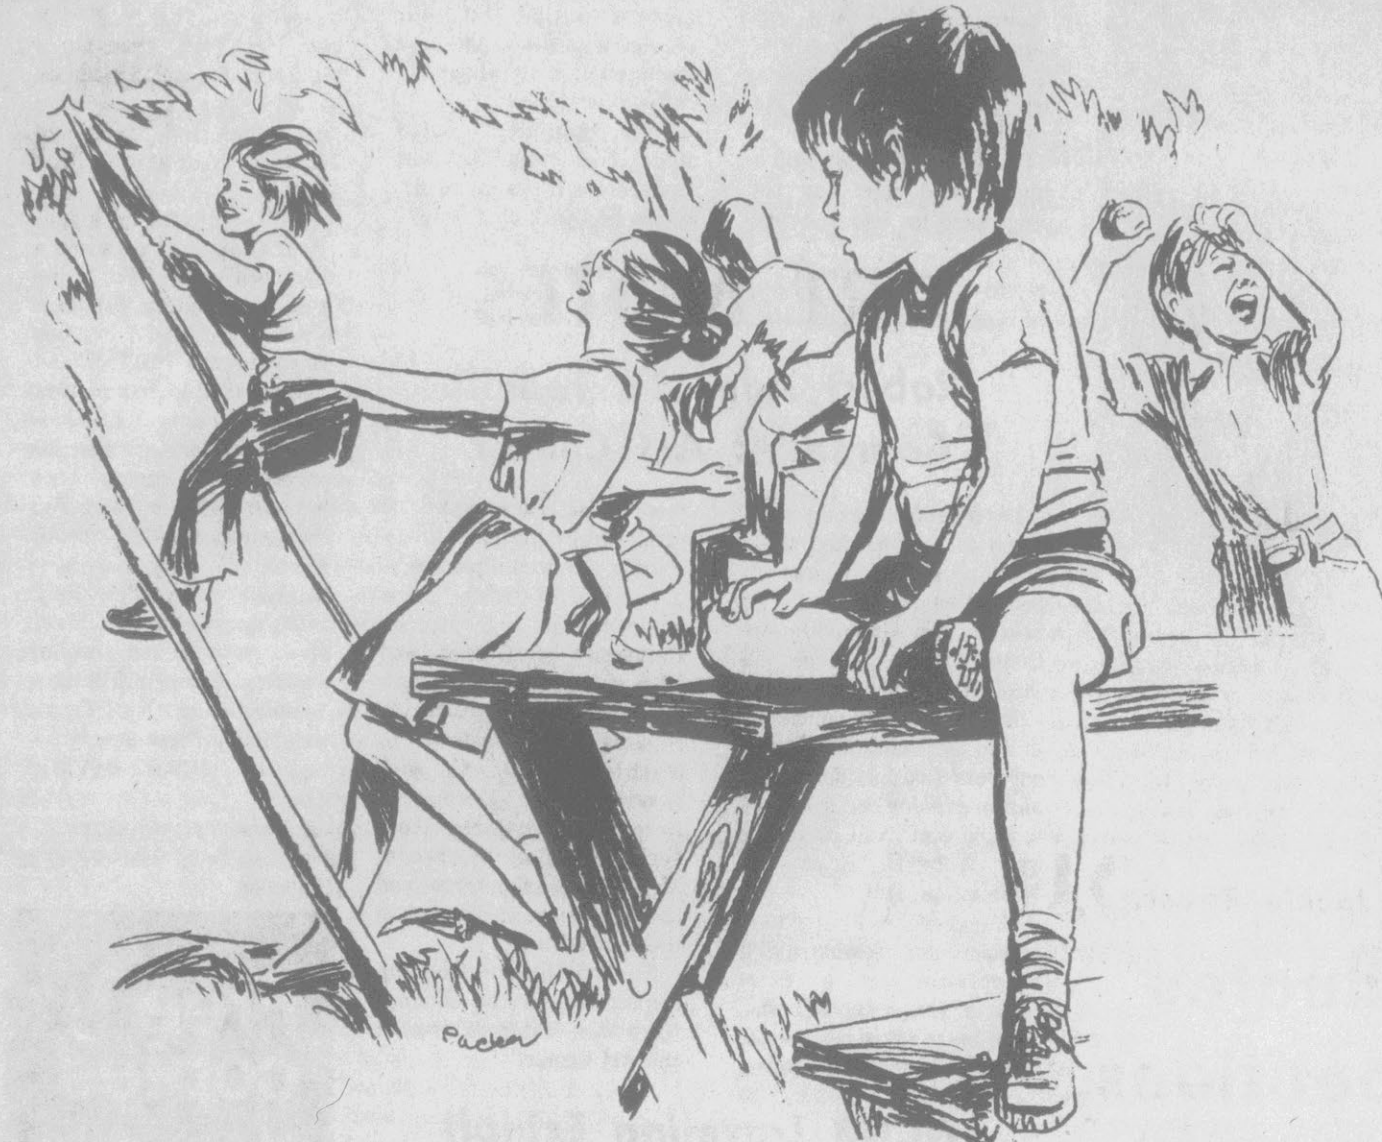

Annette began to fidget and to shrug her shoulders. "I don't know," she said. "Take the next few minutes to think of the topic you'd like to write about," said the teacher, "and bring it to me for consultation I'll expect you in a few minutes."

The teacher went back to her desk and in a few minutes Annette came to her and said, "I'm here for consultation." She had a topic of her own. "I approve of it," said the teacher with appreciation. Annette went to work.

A full-fledged discipline problem was avoided through the teacher's skill. She deliberately remained solution-oriented. She was not provoked into obvious criticism: "What do you mean you don't want to write? Where do you think you are? You are in school and you are supposed to learn to write. Do you want to get punished?"

Etc., etc., etc."
 By responding to Annette with respect and skill, the teacher managed to reach her heart.

Teacher grants all of boy's wishes in fantasy---but only a token (the table) in reality.

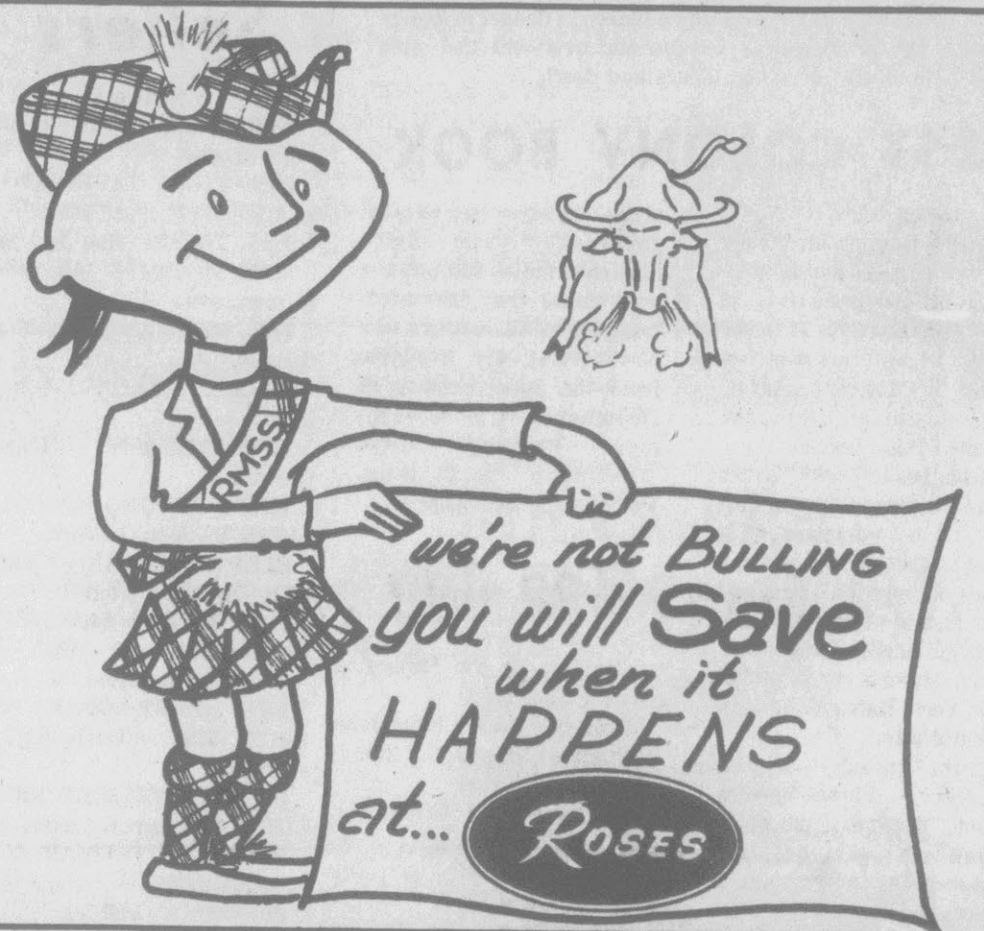

THE FOLLOWING INCIDENT illustrates how a competent teacher can deal with a difficult child:

The substitute teacher wanted the second grade to write "original" stories. After preparation, the teacher presented them with several ideas. Some children needed help to get started, but Annette seemed troubled. She poked other children and refused to do her work. "Do you need any help?" asked the teacher. "No," answered Annette. But she

Kissing Can Aid Life Expectancy

CHICAGO (UPI) — Question in an issue of Today's HEALTH, publication of the American Medical Association went like this: "I recently heard that every time one is kissed it takes three minutes off his life. Could there be anything to this tale?"

Answer: "This is an old wives' tale probably coming from the folk medicine of a puritanical past. With reasonable precautions against contact with a person having a communicable disease, there should be no harm to health from kissing. In fact, kissing as a method of showing affection under appropriate circumstances might even help improve mental health and add, rather than decrease, life expectancy."

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR SANDY DUNCAN

Do you believe in fate?—Nancy Hines, Harrison, N.Y.

● I do, and in predestination. But I also feel that everything that happens happens for the best. Take the loss of my sight in one eye. Without that happening I would never have met Tom, the doctor whom I have just married. My whole attitude toward life has changed. My career is still important, but it isn't everything in my life anymore. Everything seems to be put in a more proper perspective now. Until this happened, life was too easy. Now I've learned to live with the fact that it can have its ups and downs—and I appreciate the ups much more.

FOR SEN. ABRAHAM RIBICOFF (D-Conn.)

My oldest boy is counting on college this fall, but I can hardly believe the brochures. How can the average family afford it?—A. L., Dover, Del.

● Unless something is done soon, the answer will be: "You can't—unless you suddenly become wealthy or are willing to go deep into debt." It will soon cost between $10,000 and $20,000 to earn a bachelor's degree. Not many families can afford such expenses—especially if they have more than one child in college at any one time.

FOR DAVID JANZEN

I read that you had a bad accident playing football in high school. Does this mean you are against high school athletics?—M. S., Hutchinson, Kans.

● First, you read wrong. I broke a cartilage in my left knee-cap while pole vaulting. Calcium formed in my knee, and it is still very painful at times. As for being against athletics in high school—on the contrary, I'm all for it! We don't want to produce a generation of eggheads, do we?

FOR MICHAEL CAINE, star of "Sleuth"

As the ex-king of bachelors, who even went as far as playing "Alfie," are you a good cook?—R. L., Grand Rapids, Mich.

● I cook very few dishes—all very simple—but I do them superlatively. I never try anything new. I do roast beef, which is so simple that you'll say, "Well, anyone can do that," but I'm very good at it. I'm good at barbecuing steaks, as well. Just silly things, you see. But things that could be ruined by someone who didn't know what he was doing.

FOR DORIS DAY

I want a dog, but my parents say no. As a dog lover, could you advise me?—D. L., Sedalia, Mo.

● Your parents may mean that a dog would be too much trouble unless you take responsibility. The best dog would probably be medium-to-large size (small dogs tend to be nervous); a female (more placid than a male); and six or seven months old (past babyhood habits). Study a book on care and training, and get your dog spayed. My guess is your parents could not resist a dog that is no work for them.

FOR CHER BONO

What's the secret? How do you keep your fingernails so long and pretty without cracking or breaking?—Debbie Seay, Fellows, Calif.

● I'm very careful. We're so busy working that I have little time to do any housework or cooking. So I can pamper my nails. I used to have splitting nails when I did dishes. Gloves helped a little, but I usually was in a hurry and didn't put them on.

FOR JAMES MICHENER, author

What writer would you like most to have been?—Mrs. Daphne Morgan, Shedd, Ore.

● I guess I'd have to say the Russian novelist, Fyodor Dostoevsky.

FOR JAMES FRANCISCUS

Since you have acted and produced, are you taking up directing next?—L. Rawlings, Visalia, Calif.

● I think I may be the only actor I know who doesn't want to direct! I am not interested. I've wanted to be an actor since I can remember. I enjoy creating characters. And acting is sufficiently creative for me.

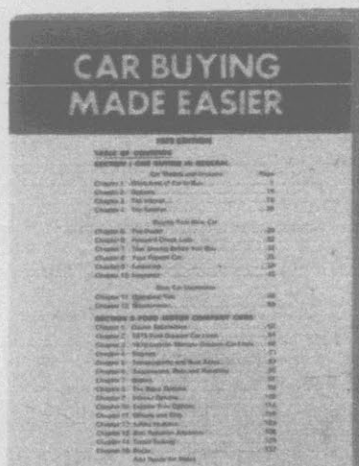

FOR CHARLIE O. FINLEY, owner of the Oakland A's

In a magazine interview last fall you said, "When the A's win the World Series, the first person I'll get rid of is Charlie O. Finley." You won the '72 series. What now?—John Swigart, Sparks, Nev.

● It's true—I said it. But winning was so much fun I've decided I'd like to try to win two in a row. If this should happen, then I will retire as general manager. Here's hoping for early retirement.

Can you spot the Camel Filters smoker?

©1972 R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, Winston-Salem, N.C.

In this picture everybody has a gimmick... almost everybody. Try picking the one who doesn't go along.

1. Not him. He's Lance Boyle. His gimmick: brags about wars he was never in. Yells "bombs away" each time he knocks the ash off his oval French cigarette. 2. Nope. He's Harvey Dibble. Runs "Harve's Health Food Haven," specializing in organically grown dried prunes. Sneaks a hamburger when he can get away with it. Gimmick: smokes wheat germ cigarettes. Thinks it helps business. 3. Eunice Trace, Starlet. Her gimmick: restoring wholesome entertainment to movies. (Her latest film was reviewed: "At last—a movie the entire family can walk out on.") 4. Smokey Stanhope, accountant. His gimmick: a guitar. Thinks it makes him irresistible to the opposite sex. Unfortunately makes the mistake of playing it. 5. Right! He's just himself. And he sees through all the gimmicks. That's why he smokes an honest, no-nonsense cigarette. Camel Filters. Easy and good tasting. Made from fine tobacco. 6. Cracks his knuckles a lot and calls himself "Killer" (real name: Morris Friedfogel). Gimmick: spends weekends trying to get someone to play soccer with him. When he puffs out his chest, his pants fall down.

New Miracles In Surgery: How They Can Affect Your Future

By T. K. Irwin

At a Kansas Air Force base last March, Staff Sgt. Tor Olsen contracted hepatitis, suffered complete liver failure and fell into a week-long coma. After he was flown to a San Antonio medical center, doctors decided there was only one last-ditch recourse left to save the 22-year-old man's life—a drastic procedure called "total body washout."

As surgeons drained virtually all of his diseased blood, a machine pumped into his arteries a salt solution containing albumin and other agents. Then 12 pints of fresh donor blood were pumped into his system. The entire operation took less than an hour. Next day, Sgt. Olsen was singing hymns with his parents. Recovery was dramatic. Doctors told him he could expect to lead a normal and productive life.

This was the world's first triumphant "total washout." Last July, surgeons in Sayre, Pa.—following phoned instructions from the San Antonio doctors—performed a similar operation to save the life of a seven-year-old boy with a critical liver ailment.

In hospitals throughout the nation such new marvels of surgery keep expanding the frontiers of medical science. Already familiar are transplants of hearts, kidneys and other organs. We can now have artificial veins, lungs and heart valves. Available, too, are banks of human spare parts—bones, tissues, blood vessels, even banks of frozen brain fluid.

What does all this mean to you and your family? Says Dr. Madison B. Brown, acting president of the American Hospital Association:

"Modern surgery has brought longer life to thousands of persons whose lifespans would otherwise have been considerably shortened. During the past decade, space-age techniques have led to many major breakthroughs in the nation's surgical suites. At this very moment there are new techniques being tried for the first time that may be startling today, but will be commonplace years from now."

Operating skills have advanced to the point where apparently nothing is considered wholly impossible. While not all of the newer techniques are death-defying, they can give patients a new lease on life. Often they also reduce the hospital stay and cut the patient's costs.

Here are some of the latest outstanding advances in the country's operating rooms:

Suspended animation. In this procedure, much as in the case of Tor Olsen, about four-fifths of the patient's blood is removed; but here it is stored in plastic bags while a chilled nutrient solution is substituted. During this time the patient is lifeless while his heart and breathing stop. Delicate surgery can be done in a clear, bloodless field. After the operation the patient's own blood is reinfused. He recovers faster, without risk of infection from trans-fused blood of a donor.

At Harvard, Dr. Mortimer J. Buckley has used suspended animation for more than 100 patients, including 27 children who needed an open-heart operation to repair congenital heart defects. Without surgery, they would probably not have lived beyond their teens.

Microsurgery. With instruments so tiny that operations are performed under a high-powered microscope, surgeons restore sound to the silent world of the deaf. Agonizing pain from "cluster" headaches and facial neuralgia have been eliminated by cutting a nerve. Serious birth defects in babies are corrected within hours after they are born. In cases of stroke, the miniature instruments have been employed for delicate operations within the skull to increase blood flow to the brain. At the University of Pennsylvania Hospital, women have regained fertility through microsurgery on the fallopian tube.

Miracles of restoration. Driving along a highway on her way to school, Gloria, a pretty 19-year-old college student, lost control of her car and smashed into a tree. At a nearby hospital doctors found that the middle of her face was badly crushed, the nose pushed back into the sinuses, her eye sockets severely disrupted. Transferred to the New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center, she went through a series of intricate operations to rebuild her face.

Gloria's entire facial skeleton was accurately reconstructed through interosseous (between bones) wiring, to immobilize the fracture and enable the ends of the bones to be sutured together. The disrupted floors of both eye sockets were then completely replaced with a smooth layer of silicone, a versatile inert material. Today, Gloria is back at college, with 20-20 vision and signs of her ordeal hardly discernible. Not so long ago she would have been left with a grotesquely deformed face.

Miracles in Surgery

In other cases, the body repairmen have been able to reconstruct noses removed for malignancy and in selected cases have rejoined totally severed fingers and arms to the body. In skull fractures, bone grafts can be used from the patient's own body.

Hip replacement. Elderly people with a crippling hip deformity from arthritis or injury are getting dramatic relief after massive surgery entirely replaces a hip joint with a plastic-cup socket unit. Former Sen. Margaret Chase Smith, among thousands who have benefited, now walks painlessly without a cane. For greater range of motion, doctors employ a Vitallium cup in the hip socket that is cemented into the bone.

Bypass to prevent heart attacks. Particularly for high-risk patients with incapacitating angina pectoris and other "sinking heart" conditions, surgeons can now do a coronary-bypass graft. In this operation, they cut out a piece of vein from a leg and pass it around an obstruction in the arteries in order to nourish the heart. As many as five vein grafts may be used to detour blood vessels around hardened and blocked coronary arteries. As a result, the heart can respond better to exercise and stress. This technique promises bright new futures for many who have suffered heart attacks or the chest pains that suggest one is developing.

In a comparable bypass operation, Houston doctors are grafting six-inch pieces of vein onto the neck arteries of stroke victims to re-route blood away from the old clogged vessels and keep the brain sufficiently nourished.

The "lifeline." The lives of 40 infants, dying despite surgery for stomach and intestinal troubles, were saved by a novel method utilized at Boston's Children's Hospital. With a technique called "the lifeline," a tube is inserted near the baby's heart through an incision in the jugular vein. The tube connects to a pump that delivers liquid food to the heart at a constant rate. This keeps the child alive while his digestive tract heals. Without the lifeline, the babies would die for lack of nourishment.

Unlike conventional surgery (above), a number of operations now call for the use of super-cold scalpels.

Coming Soon: An Atomic-Powered Heart?

One-day operations. Hernia repair, the commonest major operation, can now be done in one day, without having the patient stay overnight in a hospital. A new technique provides added strength to the repair, patients walk away from the operating table and almost immediately resume normal activities. Tendons from above and below the hernia zone are pulled together and sewn tight with unbreakable sutures to form a new strong wall in the lower abdomen. It's all done under local anesthesia. The one-day job saves the patient an average of $600.

With new ultrasonic instruments, eye doctors expect to perform cataract surgery in one day—instead of the old cataract surgery that involved spending a week in the hospital.

Super-cold scalpels. Cold deadens nerves that transmit messages of pain and eliminates bleeding by congealing blood vessels. A hollow probe cooled with liquid nitrogen is used to destroy diseased tissues. Cryosurgery, as such "cold" surgery is called, is resorted to today for some 20 types of operations, including some brain cancers, removal of growths from vocal cords, for diseased prostates and to repair detached retinas of the eye.

A few months ago, New York surgeons reported excellent results with cryosurgery in dealing with giant-cell bone tumors, highly significant because such tumors are markedly resistant to radiotherapy.

For athletes' battered knees. Joe Namath and scores of other hero-athletes who are subjected to body-grinding action often come down with buckling and wobbly knees. With ordinary treatment, knees have wound up more unstable than ever. A novel approach is practiced by Dr. James A. Nicholas, orthopedic surgeon and team physician for the New York Jets and New York Rangers. He labels it "The Five-One Reconstruction for Antero-Medial Instability." The five stages involve a major rebuilding of the knee, including stapling of loose ligament to a bone, and combine inner support with an outer individually tailored brace. Most of the 42 treated athletes, among them Namath, have made strong comebacks on the playing field.

Help for fatso. At the University of Iowa surgeons have devised an operation known as gastropasty for very heavy people who must lose a lot of weight. When a king-size surgical tuck is taken in the stomach, the holding capacity of the stomach is reduced by 90 percent. The patient then needs relatively little food to fill the smaller stomach. The tuck is held with staples that can be taken out if it's ever desirable to undo the operation. One 330-pound woman, who needed two hospital beds, lost over 100 pounds.

Punching an airway to life. Victims gasp for breath and turn blue. Too many people choke to death or suffer brain damage in the time it takes a doctor to cut into the trachea (the air pathway to the lungs) and pass a tube into it to keep the trachea open. Each year some 10,000 highway deaths are due to this problem. Recently, Dr. Louis Abelsson of New York designed a tube featuring a bayonet-shaped instrument that can be punched directly into the trachea in a minute. Since it's unnecessary to make a surgical incision near major blood vessels, the safety factor is important.

Laser beams. Last August a Boston University surgical team reported having effectively used a carbon dioxide laser beam (intensely concentrated light) to remove horny growths, polyps and nodules on the vocal cord. Achieved with "exquisite precision," surgery was bloodless, healing promptly, with no damage to voice quality. A 14-year-old boy, who had undergone 24 previous unsuccessful operations, had a huge tumor taken out by the laser beam and acquired a normal voice for the first time in his life.

New horizons. Cancer of the pharynx and larynx is rising, causing loss of speech. A University of Cincinnati surgeon is developing a method that rebuilds the voice box from the diseased organ itself during the operation. And by the end of this decade we may see an atomic-powered artificial heart to replace one that's severely damaged.

While surgeons hone their skills and create new techniques, we can all do our part in prolonging life. One example cited by the American Hospital Association: Six months is the average period from the first symptoms to the diagnosis of cancer of the larynx. Caught in time, this disease can be cured in nine out of ten cases. Alertness to many other diseases can be just as vital.

So at the first signs of something wrong, see your doctor without delay. Hopefully you may not need any of these new marvels of surgery.

Sports Mini-Profile

BASKETBALL'S VAN ARSDALES: The Uncanny Story of Twin All-Stars

Tom and Dick Van Arsdale form the only twin-brother "act" in professional sports. Tom is captain and guard on the Kansas City-Omaha Kings and Dick is captain and guard on the Phoenix Suns. Both have appeared in three NBA All-Star games, and each averages about 20 points a game. . . . Tom and Dick are so difficult to tell apart that back in Indianapolis they used to switch on their dates without the girls being the wiser. When Tom's team was in Phoenix recently to play the Suns, his roommate met Dick in a hotel lobby and mistook him for Tom. Both Van Arsdales wear the same number (5) on the basketball court. . . .

Dick (at top, left) graduated first in his class at high school and was vice president of the honor society. Tom graduated third and was president. They were separated for the first time when Dick was drafted out of the University of Indiana by the New York Knicks and Tom by the Detroit Pistons. "I didn't feel right playing without Dick, so I quit the Pistons after a few weeks," Tom recalls. "Dick convinced me to go back." Tom was traded to Cincinnati (which became the Kansas City-Omaha Kings) in 1968 and Dick went to Phoenix the same year. . . . Says Tom's coach, Bob Cousy: "Other players have more natural ability, but as competitors who go all out to win, the Van Arsdales have no peer. They play at their best, night after night." Off-season, the brothers—who are 30—are partners in a Phoenix real estate firm.—By Barry Abramson

The Doctor Lets You In

Eunuchs Do Not Get Acne

Did you know that eunuchs do not get acne? The inflammation arises when the sex glands awaken and puberty begins. Acne can damage a youngster's self-esteem—making him or her feel inferior to friends. Thus it can affect the development of your child's personality. Why some youngsters get acne and others don't is still a physiological mystery. But don't deride a youngster's acne or wave it away with a joke. It's no joke to him or her. What a sufferer should do: See a dermatologist at least once. Eat nutritious food and avoid fats. Keep skin scrupulously clean. You can use preparations to cover blemishes if you want to. Gently, but gently, remove blackheads (they can leave scars). Get sun but avoid sunburn. What not to do: Don't pick, squeeze, rub or otherwise irritate the skin! This can spread blemishes and lead to permanent scarring. And try to avoid emotional stress—upsets can make acne worse.—By Dr. Erwin Di Cyan

The Diet Watch

Get to the Real Motive for Your Eating

Whenever you go off your diet, it's well worth it to try to find out why. One woman tracked down her habit of eating chocolate fudge sundaes to the nights her husband had to work overtime, and uncovered the fact that she was gobbling up the sundaes out of sheer resentment at "not having a husband" on those evenings. Once she knew this, she was able to give up the chocolate sundaes. Finding out what impels you to be destructive of your diet (and yourself!)—resentment, smarting from some hurt, feeling aggrieved or neglected—helps you to begin using food less and less as a "pacifier" against the problems you encounter in your daily life. —By Harriet La Barre

Jobmanship

Coping with the Constant Complainer

Sometimes on-the-job complainers don't realize what they're doing. They begin using complaints to prove to others how difficult their daily job is or to explain away their mistakes.

Then it becomes a habit. If you'd like some relief, you can try various approaches. Whenever the complainer begins, remember urgent work you have, apologize for not having time to listen, and tune out. The complainer will soon go looking for a better audience. Complainers want sympathy, not logic. He'll take his troubles elsewhere. Be careful, though, not to overuse the logic approach to the point where the complainer turns against you. When a normally cheerful person becomes a complainer, that's the time to be understanding. Perhaps his worries are legitimate or a reflection of some personal problem.—By S. R. Redford

ED McMAHON: "Let's Charge Companies for the Damage They Do"

"I don't think anything—except drugs—is as serious as the way we've been ruining our world. Throwing even so much as a piece of paper on the street should be a criminal offense. That's overstating it, but people have been behaving like animals, and it has to be stopped. Think what our rivers are like. People throw beer cans from their boats and all kinds of refuse. When we go anywhere, we should clean up and leave no trace. We should live by the rule that after we have left, the only trace should be our footprints. . . . We need more national campaigns to keep our environment clean and do things like providing litter bags. And we need stronger regulations. Every company should be charged for the pollution damage it has done. It would add up to plenty."—Interviewed by William Wolf

People and You

When Parents Are Against a Child's Romance

When John loves Mary and Mary loves John, but one or both sets of parents oppose their relationship, what happens? Lots of things! Because parents are against them, John and Mary are forced to depend heavily on each other. Their romantic feelings often increase as the parents interfere. Parental disapproval causes John and Mary to demand an extraordinary amount of perfection from each other. More than other couples, Mary and John are constantly comparing their loved one with other people. And often they are quick to express hostility or even contempt if they feel the other person doesn't measure up. They often trust each other less and are more critical of each other than are other couples. Psychologists say that if parents' opposition and interference continue, the overall quality of the couple's relationship may be undermined.—By Shirley Sloan Fader

FREE MONEY!

It's a safe bet that you, like the average American, are completely unaware of the incredible bonanza recently granted you by Congress in the form of whopping new Social Security benefits.

Item: When today's average worker of 22 retires, he and his wife, according to Social Security actuaries, will receive an annual pension of $38,000. Moreover, the total amount of Social Security he and his wife can expect to collect will surpass half a million dollars!

Item: The average American doesn't know it, but the single most valuable asset he now possesses is his Social Security. It is equivalent, in maximum brackets, to a guaranteed 5% income on cash in bank, stocks or real estate worth over $100,000. Moreover, every cent of this bounteous income is TAX FREE!

Item: Most Americans still believe, mistakenly, that Social Security is a dole exclusively for the aged. The fact is, however, that 10 million Americans under the age of 60 (and averaging a mere 30) are now collecting Social Security. These non-old age pensioners receive $13 billion annually, and both their number and the amounts of money they collect are bound to increase in years ahead. So generous has Social Security for younger Americans become, in fact, that it amounts to Free Money.

The biggest problem in connection with Social Security—as the government itself is first to admit—is giving the money away. That is, the public's woeful ignorance of the availability of funds has prevented its full distribution. Over one billion dollars, according to experts, remains undistributed in U.S. Treasury vaults simply because no one steps forward to claim it.

To help overcome this shocking public ignorance, and see that you get your share of the Social Security largesse, the editors of Moneysworth, the authoritative new consumer-affairs and personal-finance fortnightly, have prepared—as a public service—a comprehensive, lucid, savvy, astonishing new manual entitled STAKE YOUR CLAIM! How to Work the Social Security Gold Mine. A copy is yours ABSOLUTELY FREE with a subscription to Moneysworth.

STAKE YOUR CLAIM! How to Work the Social Security Gold Mine is more than just an encyclopedic reference work with charts, tables, descriptions of benefits and sample application forms with instructions on how to fill them out. It is a personal adviser in a field of finance where impartial advice is otherwise almost impossible to obtain (the government, of course, is biased and lawyers are almost never willing to accept Social Security cases because, by law, they may not charge more than about $10 per case). STAKE YOUR CLAIM! is, therefore, virtually the only trustworthy, definitive guide available on what may well be your single most valuable financial asset. It is 12,000 words long, handy in format, indexed for fast reference and embellished with a glossary that translates Bureaucratese. In a special section it anticipates, and answers, the most unabashed—even Fagin-like—questions. Among the priceless nuggets of information you will pick up from this guide are answers to such questions as:

- How can you qualify for a pension even though you have never worked a day in your life, or contributed a cent in Social Security taxes, or even nearly reached the age of 65?
- How can you arrange to collect Social Security from both Canada and the United States?
- Why, under Social Security, does it often pay for a couple to "live together" rather than marry?
- Why is it crucial to check the balance of your Social Security account periodically, even though almost no one ever does?
- Does it ever pay to take out two Social Security cards?
- What are some colossal goofs of the Social Security Administration and how have they jeopardized individual accounts?
- How can an ex-wife collect the same benefits as if she had remained married?
- Is it true, as some say, that you should "shop" for a pension at different Social Security offices since different interpretations of the regulations can result in pensions of different amounts?
- Since, as studies have shown, two out of three workers overpay their Social Security taxes, how can you check on your payments and possibly obtain a refund?
- When does it pay not to work in order to maximize your Social Security benefits?

- What is the "hobby" that can qualify you to collect Social Security even though you've never worked a day in your life?
- Has your Social Security become so valuable that you should, as some people have done, tattoo your account number somewhere on your body?
- What forms of deception have people employed in order to maximize their Social Security benefits and collect pensions early? What are the penalties for such deception?
- How can a husband collect a pension based on his wife's earnings?
- What essential documents do most people fail to preserve for presentation when filing a claim?
- What steps, if any, are necessary to protect your pension from attachment by creditors?
- What tragic mistakes are most often made by the self-employed?
- How can a parent collect Social Security on a child's earnings?
- When does Social Security cover mental illness?
- How should you alter your investment, savings and insurance plans in light of Social Security's lavish new benefits?
- If you're a woman nearing pension age, how can you file and collect without revealing your age to your husband?
- What government retirement programs are even better than Social Security?
- What step do most pensioners fail to take in order to completely eliminate the possibility of loss or theft of their monthly checks?
- If you're already on Social Security, what, if anything, can you do to increase the size of your monthly payments?
- How can a wife and ex-wife both collect on the basis of the same man's earnings?
- What should you do if, as often happens, you change jobs during a year and both of your employers withhold maximum Social Security taxes?
- What federal program helps retired persons get jobs to augment Social Security income?
- What can a widow do to retain her benefits if she wishes to remarry?
- By retiring to which foreign countries can you make Social Security go farthest, and under what circumstances can the government cancel your pension if you choose to live abroad?
- What happens to your pension if an employer deducts Social Security taxes but fails to forward them to Washington for credit to your account? What special steps should you take if the firm you work for is financially shaky?
- How do you go about getting one of Social Security's huge "lump sum" payments?

In short, STAKE YOUR CLAIM! How to Work the Social Security Gold Mine is a treasure map to the Social Security mother lode, telling what pitfalls to avoid, what tools to use, how to find your way through the maze of regulations and how to hit pay dirt. Its editor and compiler is Ralph Ginzburg, the 43-year-old publisher of Moneysworth, who himself collects $99.40 in Social Security every month and has been getting Social Security since he was 25. To repeat, a copy of STAKE YOUR CLAIM! How to Work the Social Security Gold Mine is yours ABSOLUTELY FREE with a subscription to Moneysworth.

In case you're not familiar with Moneysworth, let us explain that it is America's most ingenious periodical dealing with personal finance and consumer affairs. It will positively flabbergast you with its inventiveness for making and saving money. In less than three years of publication it has bestowed the Midas touch upon nearly a million ecstatic subscribers and has become the most widely read newsletter IN THE WORLD. Perhaps the best way to describe Moneysworth is to list the kinds of articles it prints:

In sum, Moneysworth is a shrewd, trustworthy financial mentor. It is the quintessence of sophisticated gainmanship.

The staff of Moneysworth is a team of hard-nosed, experienced journalists with a record of genius in the field of consumer affairs and personal finance. Its publisher, as we mentioned, is Ralph Ginzburg, creator of the daring and flamboyant magazines Fact, Eros and Avant-Garde (Mr. Ginzburg was the first publisher to provide Ralph Nader with a medium through which to express himself on the subject of automobile safety). Moneysworth's editor-in-chief is Albert Lee, a former top editor of Better Homes and Gardens and a special writer on consumer affairs for such periodicals as Parents, Better Camping, Modern Maturity, The Christian Science Monitor and Popular Mechanics. The art director of Moneysworth is Herb Lubalin, the world's foremost graphic designer, and its graphics editor is John Tom Cohoe. Radiating from this nucleus of editorial energy are reporters, researchers, product-testers and consultants throughout the United States. Together they create America's first—and only—consumer periodical with charisma.

Moneysworth is available by subscription only. The cost of a year is ONLY $5! This is a MERE FRACTION of the price of familiar, old-fashioned consumer publications—which, compared to Moneysworth, are boring, ponderous, confusing and nearly unusable. "There are moments in every mother's life when her children drive her up the wall. She feels like screaming, hitting, knocking heads together...."

When You Want to Hit Your Child.... Some Hints to Keep in Mind

A toddler dribbles a trail of toys across the living room his mother has just cleaned up... A second grader refuses to eat the hot lunch his mother has prepared for him... A young brother and sister have been squabbling all morning... There are moments in every mother's life when her children drive her up the wall. She feels like screaming, hitting, knocking heads together.

As the founder of the New York chapter of Parents Anonymous, I talk to such mothers—and fathers—every day. Like the alcoholic who calls Alcoholics Anonymous, or the bettor who calls Gamblers Anonymous, parents with problems have now begun to call PA chapters in a number of cities.

Some of the parents who call are seriously troubled people, such as those I often saw during my years as a Family Court judge. Others feel themselves being driven over the edge. Most of the callers, however, are just "normal," everyday mothers and fathers who get terribly angry at their children. They need help in calming down and finding better ways to cope than raising their hands or voices to a little child. Here are some ideas that we at Parents Anonymous have found to really work:

1. "I must be a bad mother," a frantic young woman said to me recently. "Or else I've got a bad baby. It won't stop crying, and I can't stand it." Of course, neither she nor her baby is "bad." Nobody ever told this young woman that it can be unnerving when a baby cries, that it can be nauseating when a toddler throws up all over the rug, that it can be infuriating when a schoolchild won't listen. As a result, she's frightened and ashamed of her own emotions toward her child, and that makes her even angrier at him. The first step in handling anger and impatience toward children is to accept the fact that these are honest, human and universal feelings.

2. The way we handle our anger is an important key to a healthy parent-child relationship. Take the reactions of two mothers to the same situation, a child who's spilled milk and cookies all over the floor. One mother screams at her child, "What a little pig you are!" The other mother, equally annoyed, says, "What an awful mess! Come right here and help me clean it up." Both mothers have expressed their anger openly, but one has learned to do it without damaging her child.

3. With the best intentions in the world, parents sometimes create the situations that are going to make them angry. Last week, for example, a mother called to tell me she had been screaming at her two children because they refused to eat the well-balanced hot lunch she had prepared for them. Instead, they wanted peanut butter and jelly sandwiches. The mother was upset because she had gone to a lot of bother to prepare a healthy lunch. Yet she could have avoided the bother—and the battle. Sometimes a parent needs to put herself in her child's place. How would she feel if she were never given a choice about what to eat? When she was a kid, didn't she prefer peanut butter and jelly to meat loaf and carrots? Wouldn't a child get more value from eating something he liked in a calm and happy atmosphere than from forcing down mouthfuls between tears and angry words?

4. As I have seen time and again at Family Court, and now at Parents Anonymous, a child lives what he learns. When a mother told me over the phone that her two children had been screaming at each other for an hour, I asked her what she had done about it. She answered, "I yelled at them to shut up." She heard her own words and laughed,

Help Is Just a Phone Call Away

Judge Bacon urges parents with problems to call their nearest Parents Anonymous chapter. If you don't find a listing for Parents Anonymous in your local phone book, you can write to Judge Bacon for information at Parents Anonymous, 1841 Broadway, Rm. 1000, New York, N.Y. 10023 a little embarrassed. How, though, was she going to get them to stop screaming and make up with each other? If she went in and apologized for her own behavior—either in words or by friendly actions—would they learn from her in that, too?

5. The important help we offer at Parents Anonymous is someone to talk to. There are mothers and fathers who cannot speak frankly to anyone they know. There are also the luckier parents who do have a friend or relative they can call when they're upset. As they talk about their anger, they find themselves calming down. They may find, too, that they're not so alone. As one mother told me, "I was so desperate one day that I started talking to my neighbor about it. She said, 'You, too?'" The two women have since learned to share their feelings with each other instead of taking them out on their children.

6. When I talk to parents, they often ask, "Do you mean I should never yell at my child and never spank him?" Of course not. If you want to impress your child with the dangers of firecrackers or city traffic, you may well have to raise your voice to let him know you really mean it. There are also times when you may rightly feel that there's nothing else to do but spank. But spank with love!

7. How does a mother know if she's screaming too much or spanking too much? A good test is to ask yourself if what you're doing is working. If you're overdoing it, it probably no longer has any positive effect.

8. Of course, a certain amount of aggravation comes with just being a parent. But if it happens too often, you may want to try to change your child by changing yourself. We know that a child who lives with hostility learns to fight. A child who lives with love and understanding learns to feel good about himself and about the people around him.

The way to change is little by little, day by day. When you say to yourself, "I'll never do that again," you're setting yourself an impossible goal. One slip and you may be too discouraged to try again. Instead, if you're screaming or hitting your child more often than you think you should, try waking up tomorrow and saying, "I won't do it today." The next day, set yourself the same goal. That way, you're aiming at small, achievable victories. You never say never and you never say forever, but in the meantime you're changing the lives of two generations—yours and your child's.

A Great buy for Investment Collectors & Hobbyists

$300

Electroplated
24-Karat Gold
Never Before Available!*

FIRST TIME OFFERED! the first dollar coin minted in years—the dramatic Eisenhower Dollar—now takes on increased value! A limited number have been electroplated* with genuine 24-karat gold and will be released to the public for the first time, adding to its already magnificent beauty and value and transforming it into a most worthwhile keepsake or family heirloom.

ALREADY SCARCE! You know how few Eisenhower dollars are around to begin with—they're almost impossible to come by, yet they were recently minted! (Like the Kennedy half, they've disappeared from circulation fast.) So you can readily see how treasured the brilliantly gold-plated version will shortly become. Birthdays, graduations . . . there are so many occasions when a gift of this significance is so thoughtful and forward-looking, but . . .

OUR OWN SUPPLY IS LIMITED! We have only a limited number of these coins available so we urge you to reserve one or more of these extraordinary coins today. When our gold-plated reserve runs out, it will be difficult to get more.

The Eisenhower Dollar . . .

commemorates America's great General and 34th President and immortalizes the historic announcement "The Eagle has landed" by depicting the American eagle hovering over the lunar surface. First, a stirring tribute to Eisenhower and the U.S. space achievement, second, a prime example of the engraver's art . . . now made even more valuable and striking with 24-karat gold electroplating.

masterpiece

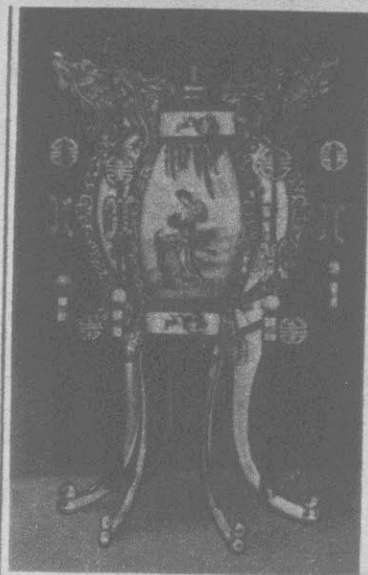

"Little Drummer Boy"

ONLY
$3.98

A musical treasure, a ceramic pleasure, as the appealing elfin-like little drummer seems to tap out "pah-rum-pum-pum-pum" while he slowly revolves for all to listen to... and enjoy! A precision quality music movement plays this favorite Yuletide composition. Finely detailed, hand-painted drummer boy is handcrafted in a "Hummel-like" sculpture. Dressed in a Tyrolean-style hat, cheery red scarf, patched and worn clothing but love lights his face as he offers his only gift—music! Bisque finish, 7" high.

IS IT POSSIBLE?

An Automatic Income for Life of $20,000... $50,000...$100,000 a Year... Without Working... from a Business That Runs Itself!

"I'll show you dozens of plans you can start easily — without investing a cent!" says Ty Hicks.

Dear Friend:

Did you ever stop to think how great it would be to have an automatic income for the rest of your life—an income that goes on whether you work or not? An income of $200...$400...$800...$1,000 a week or more, to do with as you please?

Believe it or not, there are actually scores of businesses that could be bringing you a fortune, without your lifting a finger! Easy, proven, money-making businesses that practically run themselves—to give you extra income without work! All you bring to them is a little ingenuity and the step-by-step methods outlined in this book!

Furthermore, you can get into many of these businesses, in your spare time—and build a fortune fast—starting with no money of your own! That's right! An automatic income, without investing a cent!

For Example—

- I'd like to tell you about a method a former blue-collar worker uses—requiring no equipment other than a pencil and paper, and no special skills. He helps other businesses get started. As part of his fee, he becomes a "silent partner" in each business. Today he has an income of more than $50,000 a year, from some 18 businesses. Yet he doesn't work even a minute a month at any of them!

- In another spectacular fortune-making method, all you do is make up company names, and sell them to companies that need names. Using this method, one fortune builder sold nearly $30,000 worth of corporate names in 6 months. And in the next six months, she sold $237,700 worth of names!
- And I'd like to show you how another fortune builder acquired a business that practically runs itself—a parking lot—without spending a cent of his own, even though he was a bad credit risk. Today, he owns 14 parking lots. His net income from each lot is $15,000 per year, giving him a total net income of $210,000 per year! You'll find the full details in a new book which I have written... an eye-opening, profit-laden book that shows you a dazzling array of powerful, proven, money-making opportunities... 90% of which require little or no cash, and even less effort!

How To Borrow Your Way To A Great Fortune!

Everywhere I go in this world I meet successful, wealthy people. Were you to travel with me, you'd meet these rich people in the best hotels, the finest restaurants, exclusive clubs, and the biggest resorts.

What's more, you'd learn a great secret from these wealth builders.

- Nearly every person who built great wealth for himself in recent years did so with little or no cash and wound up with a lot of money!

If you met these people, as I have, you'd soon be convinced that the best way to build a fortune today is by using OPM—other people's money. It is the most powerful, the greatest key to fast riches, starting with little or no cash, known in the world today!

In this book you'll find scores of tried and proven ways to borrow money quickly, and use it to build a fortune....

Whether you're a man or woman, old, young, married, unmarried... Even if you haven't got a job... or are a member of a minority group... or have no permanent residence... these techniques will work for you! You'll discover...

- How you can get up to $5,000 easily on your signature alone, even if you have been refused before!
- How you can get up to $5,000 for as little as $8 a month!
- How you can get as many as six signature loans, for $5,000 each—in ONE DAY—for a total of $30,000!
- How you can get a large sum of money—thousands of dollars—that does not have to be repaid, is interest-free, tax-free, and can be used for any business purpose, including your salary!
- Over 10,000 ready sources of cash for you (many by mail)!

I'll show you how to use a loan as your springboard to riches! For unlike a car or TV loan, which doesn't pay you anything back, except pleasure, a business loan will often pay you a PROFIT of $50, $100, $200 or more PER WEEK!

Put these wealth-studded tips to work and you can soon be richer than you ever thought possible.

Fantastic Fortune-Making Bargains!

There are unbelievably powerful fortune-making bargains available to you today. Opportunities—open to everyone—that you can take advantage of, with little or no cash, that can stuff your pockets with profit dollars in your pocket, quickly and easily! For example, you'll discover—

- How a $23,500 split-level home was purchased for only $189.22—and sold for thousands of dollars profit!

- How a 27-room mansion on 13 waterfront acres was purchased for only $96,181!
- How a $12,000 farm-style home was purchased for $35!
- How you may "mortgage out"—a technique that gives you ownership of a property with no money down and with a cash payment to you! Incredible as it seems, these opportunities are in your local area right now! You don't need any kind of "kick" to find them. I'll show you exactly how to find such fortune-making bargains right away, in the pages of my book. Just apply a little imagination to fit them into your own situation—and you're on your way to a fortune like these.

Shortcuts That Zoom Your Income!

You can, by using the methods in this book, make yourself a millionaire. Others have done exactly that. I've watched them. People like—

- Cliff R. using the secret just mentioned above, Cliff purchased and sold some 25 properties in a six-month period. His profit on these deals was $68,000!
- Sam T. used another one of the sources revealed in this book to get $400. He invested this money in valuable postage stamps, and sold them to fellow stamp club members. Within 3 years, he was worth $308,000!
- You'll see how Larry M. got the money he needed to buy $14,000 worth of paintings. In 2 years, he was offered almost FIVE TIMES as much for them. But Larry waited another year and sold them for more than SIX TIMES the purchase price: $100,000. This is a neat income—particularly when you remember that Larry didn't invest a dime of his own!

- Ben D., considered such a poor credit risk that six banks had refused him time after time, used a method revealed in this book to get a $30,000 five-year loan in less than 30 minutes! He used this money to buy a restaurant. Today, he has five booming restaurants, and more money than he can spend!

- Joel L. started with a gas station which he took over, using one of the many easy loans I tell you about. Once Joel had the gas station, he began to look around for other easy-money businesses. Soon he had a real estate office, a pet shop, a hardware store, a second gas station, and a laundry! His net income from these businesses was $75,000 the first year!

- Herb F. was a mailman for the Post Office, in a little town in the Midwest. Using the method I tell you about—for obtaining large sums of money for as little as $8 a month—he obtained $40,000 without putting up a cent! He used this money to buy a $600,000 motel. Today he's on an easy street after only a few weeks!

- Clint T. couldn't stand the 9-to-5 routine of his job. He decided he had to make a pile of money as quickly as possible. Using one of the sources revealed in this book, he borrowed $2,000 and invested it in a meat business. In less than 2 months, he made a profit of $12,300—OR OVER $200 PER DAY FOR DOING NOTHING, while he had other people's money invested!

I Want To Tell You All About These—
And Many Other—"Automatic Income" Opportunities Entirely At My Risk! Like This:

There are hundreds of other profitable deals you can set up, using this ready cash! You'll learn about all of them in my book. I'll show you how to get into a business that's

- Simple to run!
- Gives an immediate income!
- Can grow quickly!

... and give you an automatic income for the rest of your life, perhaps! An income that goes on whether you work or not! Prove it yourself, entirely at my risk!

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Ty Hicks has built several fortunes for himself and others, using the methods he gives you in this book. Today he has several automatic incomes going for him. "Automatic" because he spends less than two days a week, supervising these businesses—with ample time for travel, entertainment, hobbies!

During his career, Mr. Hicks has made money in hotels, apartment houses, rental real estate, boating, shipping, publishing, amusements, the stock market, and theaters.

More amazing still, he began his search for wealth with no contacts, no private fortune, his father having died when Mr. Hicks was only 14.

A GRISLY DEATH

With bone-crushing force steel-jaw traps spring shut on millions of wild animals each year in the United States. These animals die a slow, agonizing death of starvation, thirst, freezing, fear, or gangrene. Many times the animal will actually chew or twist off its foot in a desperate attempt to save itself.

These beautiful wild creatures are killed primarily for their fur; few are used as food. Furs are a luxury item catering to our vanity but hardly necessary to our survival. From forty to over sixty small animal skins are often used for a single fur coat. Consider the immense pain, fear and suffering each coat represents. Steel-jaw traps account for 90 percent of the annual U.S. fur take. Only 10 percent are caught in more humane, instant-kill traps.

State laws regulating trapping are rarely enforceable. Steel-jaw traps may be purchased and set by anyone, including children, who often forget or neglect them, leaving any unfortunate animal trapped to die a miserable, painful and prolonged death.

We are a nation who has put man on the moon. Yet we treat our fellow creatures with barbaric and primitive cruelty. It is time to redefine our values. It is time to end this abusive use of our wild animals. YOU CAN HELP.

How to Cope With

True or False: "Women react differently to frustration than men do." (See number 1)

By John E. Gibson

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Women react differently to frustration than men do.
2. People who are physically handicapped feel more frustrated than "normal" persons.
3. The amount of frustration encountered in your work determines how tired you'll be at the end of a day.
4. The most effective way to deal with someone who's frustrating you is confront him immediately with an aggressive counterattack.
5. If at all possible, you should postpone doing critical work or making important decisions when you find yourself in a frustrated state of mind.

6. Your attitude toward frustration and disappointment tells a lot about the kind of person you are.

ANSWERS

1. True. Studies show that women have a far greater tendency to react to frustration by becoming depressed and getting the blues. Men, on the other hand, are apt to react aggressively when they're frustrated. If they have been frustrated by

The Wrong Aquarium Can Hurt Your Fish!

Fish have been kept as pets by man for centuries. Today, more than ten million people in the United States have fish tanks. Before you bring home your fish, choose the proper aquarium and learn how to decorate it. The value and enjoyment of your fish will be greatly enhanced by carefully planned surroundings. Furthermore, fish enjoy living in a tank that looks homey and natural. A few hiding places give fish a feeling of security. Silver Dollars, a hardy variety of aquarium fish, have been known to lie on their sides, gasping and writhing in fright when placed in a bare tank. Decorating an aquarium is an art, but one that anyone with imagination can quickly master. A few rocks, plants and other decorations are all you need. Remember that it is designed before stocking it with fish. After the fish are added, no changes should be needed.

Your Frustrations

an individual, their immediate impulse may be to retaliate—either verbally or physically.

2. False—according to the findings of a study conducted by a team of investigators from two leading universities, which compared the moods, outlook and life satisfaction of a sample of 144 handicapped persons and 151 “normal” persons. Findings: Where life satisfaction was concerned, “no difference between the two groups was evident.” But a higher percentage of “normals” reported themselves subject to moods of extreme depression.

3. True. As the findings of one study have evidenced, fatigue is increased when our work is frustrating, and “lessened to the degree in which the work is satisfying and congenial.” This explains why some people are frequently quite fresh at the end of a day, while others are afflicted with foot-dragging fatigue before the first coffee break. Most fatigue is a matter of emotions. And frustration generates one of the most fatiguing emotions in the book.

4. False. University of Florida studies show that while this can reduce the frustration-induced tensions, it is likely to produce so much counter-aggression on the part of the other person that the upshot of the encounter isn't apt to make either party feel any better. The best way to handle such a situation, the study showed, is to keep your cool, approach your frustrator in a reasonable manner, and talk the matter over with him. The findings showed that “the discussion of frustration appears to be an effective mechanism for handling frustration.”

5. True. A frustrated state of mind—the cause of which you may or may not be able to pinpoint—robs you of mental horsepower, hampers your ability to think and reason. Psychological tests at Ohio University showed that “frustrated subjects make significantly more errors than nonfrustrated subjects.”

6. True. Studies by a team of investigators at Whitworth College indicate that people who tend to react impunitively—taking the responsibility for their own frustrations, failures and disappointments, rather than blaming them on others—are inclined to be cheerful, relaxed and composed, and to possess stable personalities. On the other hand, extrapunitiveness—blaming others for the frustrations encountered in life—was associated with people who are inclined to be insecure, suspicious, tense, excitable and restless.

Then there are the people who react impunitively to frustration. They tend to blame neither themselves nor others, and try to ignore frustrations, shrugging them off as just one of those things that come along now and then. Personality traits associated with this attitude were self-confidence, reticence, and a capacity for introspection—or insight into oneself.

Have you any idea what it means ... to love a King-Size man?

It means kingsize beds . . . aisle seats at the movies . . . running when he's walking . . . trudging all over town trying to find good looking clothes really made for a man his size.

For the clothes he wore never seemed to fit him correctly. I'd almost cry to see my handsome man in skimpy shirts or slacks, or a jacket that looked two sizes too small. Nothing he wore was designed or proportioned right for him.

I thought that by shopping for him myself I could change all that. In our town there are many good men's stores. I shopped in each of them. But any shirt or slacks or jacket I chose, it was always the same answer, “Sorry, Ma'm, we don't have it in that size”!

Then one day a friend showed me the new KING-SIZE Catalog. It was a revelation! I could see these people were BIG MEN specialists. They understood. For here was 144 pages crammed with smart, stylish clothing and shoes . . . sweaters, slacks and jackets . . . all specially designed for TALL and BIG men! Necks to 22" . . . Sleeves to 38" . . . Inseams up to 42" . . . Sizes to XXXL! And the finest brands — McGregor, Arrow, Manhattan, Jantzen, Weldon. 200 shoe styles in sizes from 10 to 16, widths AAA to EEE . . . including Hush Puppies, Bates Floaters and others. Best of all, this beautiful full-color KING-SIZE Catalog doesn't cost a penny. And every item carries the famous KING-SIZE Money-Back Guarantee, “You must be completely satisfied both BEFORE and AFTER wearing, or you get an immediate refund or exchange”. Could anything be fairer?

If your husband (son, brother, boyfriend) has the same kind of King-Size problem, you can solve it the same way I did. Just sit down and write for the FREE KING-SIZE Catalog. When it comes, you and your TALL and BIG man will discover how much FUN buying the right clothes for your KING-SIZE man can be.

Dyan Cannon on Dyan Cannon

"When You're Alone, You Get to Know Yourself"

"I guess what I want is a playmate!
I've always been in school with men—it's never been recess. Now, it's time for recess...."

By Helen Dorsey

Actress Dyan Cannon has been called by "Time" magazine "Hollywood's newest sex star." Following her painful and much-publicized divorce four years ago from Cary Grant, she seems to have emerged a wiser, more confident and relaxed person. We talked in the living room of a friend's Upper East Side apartment, where she'd been staying while making a movie in New York. In person, Dyan is younger, more beautiful, softer looking than she appears in photos and on the screen. With her was Jennifer, her dark-eyed, dark-haired daughter who sat quietly nibbling pumpkin seeds.

FAMILY WEEKLY: Dyan, what do you think have been the greatest changes in your life the last few years?

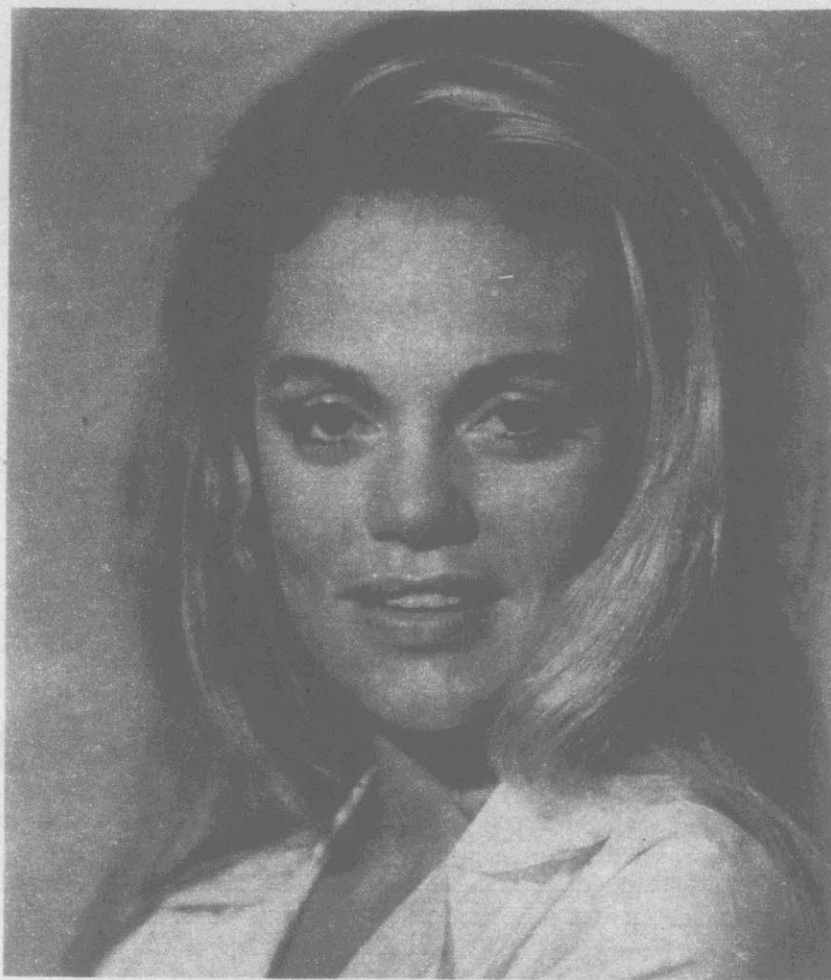

DYAN: I'm now my own guru. I'm no longer affected as much by people around me. I'm caring less about what other people think. That was one of the toughest things for me to learn: not to be a thermostat for people and not to let the outside influence me as much as it was. I lived my whole life trying to please everyone around me, any immediate authority figure, teacher or parent. I've learned that I must be my own self in order to grow. I must decide for myself what is right or wrong for me because nobody can tell me any better about me than me.

FW: Was divorce a difficult experience for you?

DYAN: Divorce is a shattering experience. There are women all over this country who have two or three children and their husbands leave them without any alimony or child support. If they don't know how to work, if they don't have any trade, what do these women do? And what do they do emotionally if they have nowhere else to go? Right after my divorce, my work was everything to me. I'm still very thankful for it because it gave me something to do.

FW: What has it been like living alone?

DYAN: I found out that the only way my creativity was going to come out was to have the confidence to live alone. I finally decided why so many people run from their problems: because they're frightened to death of being alone. Jennifer knows how to be alone and how to be quiet and how to enjoy herself. And she does it very well! We do it together. She'll be in one part of the house and I'll be in another part of the house and every once in a while, we'll connect. When you're alone, you find out a lot of things about yourself.

"When guys get into their forties," says Dyan Cannon, "they get caught up in the business thing—they stop growing and seem to get bogged down." Dyan stars in "The Last of Sheila" for Warner's, "Shamus" for Columbia.

FW: You had some experience in encounter groups at Esalen. What did they teach you about yourself?

DYAN: For the first time, I began to slow down and stop kidding myself. I had convinced myself that it was the material things that were making me happy. I learned then how very fragile I was. Feeling the extent of one's weakness is the extent of one's strength. Before, I had decided I was tough. I had thought I had strength. I found out I had had to develop that strength to fend off the devastating blows.

FW: How do you like California compared with New York?

DYAN: In California, it's quiet and I'm in touch with nature. I don't know how people manage here in New York. This city is geared to speed and activity and frenzy and faster and more money and quick and hurry. All you have to do is go away for a year and come back and get into a taxi. You think you're putting your life in the hands of a maniac.

What is he doing? Where is he going? What is the rush?

FW: How important is your career?

DYAN: It's pretty important now. I don't know what it will be next month or a few months from now. It's not the only thing in my life.

FW: Would you like to do something on Broadway?

DYAN: I can't think of anything that would make me happier. I would even live in New York to work on Broadway. Knowing every night that I could go and make music would be my salvation. I love to sing and dance! I love it, but to get paid for it, too!... I'm even giving serious thoughts to putting together a nightclub act. This is a breeze next to films. On the stage, you start from the beginning and you go to the ending. Film making is the hardest work in the world.

FW: What are your thoughts about marrying again someday?

DYAN: I'm sorting that out right now.

I'm scared to death just thinking about it. I've never really had a real one-to-one relationship with a man.

FW: If you did marry again, what kind of man might he be?

DYAN: It's hard to say what I'm looking for now. I'd like someone who likes to laugh a lot, even if it's over nothing. I'm not really sure what I'm looking for. I guess what I want is a playmate! I've always been in school with men—it's never been recess. Now, it's time for recess: volleyball games, picnics and camping in the woods.

Maybe I'm looking for somebody younger. Too often, when guys get into their forties, they get caught up in the business thing—they stop growing and seem to get bogged down. Younger guys at least still seem able to bend. I don't want to be around men who have arrested themselves on any level, because then I can't expand either. I want to be where I can grow and learn. That's what turns me on more than anything.

FW: Many stars seem to be into the drugs. How do you feel about drugs?

DYAN: I've stopped all drugs in my life—even aspirin. Anything you put in your body has to deaden it, or dull or dope it. I've seen some of those people who experiment with drugs. I've seen what it does to their minds and bodies. I've seen it destroy their lives.

FW: Are you a permissive parent? How do you discipline Jennifer?

DYAN: Up to now, anything she wanted to do, she could do. I mean, feel and touch. I just try to suggest things. Sometimes, Jennifer will try talking back to me, but she can't get a rise out of me. When she sees I ignore her and it doesn't work, she gives up. But sometimes I get really mad and blow. She does, too. Then I tell her, "Go ahead, honey, get it out," and sometimes that makes her even madder. It's healthy to teach kids how to cope with anger. Parents don't let their kids express themselves: let them go nuts and scream and holler. I tell her to do that, and she does it. Suddenly, it's all over, and I've got to think it works, because she is a joy!

FW: How do you feel about yourself?

DYAN: I like the change in myself. I feel much better about me. I find myself changing all the time, not about the basics really, but about attitudes and material things. I'm happy to be where I am right now, feeling more relaxed. I'm getting more open all the time.

I gave up 87 pounds to get a good job.

By Gwen Scott—as told to Ruth L. McCarthy

Here I am, getting ready to put something in my mouth. No wonder I was always having to wear full skirts and blouses that hung out over the fat.

At 235 pounds, I was probably the most experienced job hopper around. Nobody wanted that much fat near machinery or on a payroll. Sometimes I felt like the only folks who loved me then were my family. And, thank goodness, dogs. Especially dachshunds and poodles. Why, if it hadn't been for dogs, I don't know where my next nickel would have come from.

You see, after I got out of high school in Memphis, Tenn., I took off for Texas to stay with an uncle and look for work. But job openings weren't any better there, so I came home again and started helping out in a boarding kennel. At least, the animals didn't care what I weighed. They just knew I understood them. Unfortunately, I couldn't support myself on their love alone.

My next move was to Senatobia, Miss. where I learned that many big companies had weight limits on employing people. Why, I passed test after test for jobs that were open, but they'd always say: "Come back when you've lost some weight." One place even put me on "limbo". That meant they held my name for the next job or so, to see if I would take off some weight. But I didn't, so I never went back. I just went home and ate—cakes, candy and ice cream.

How do you like the change in my waistline? My stomach never gets in my way now that I've lost 87 pounds. I can bend over easily any time.

I knew I shouldn't have. Just like I knew when I was a child and Mamma used to say, "Don't eat so much." The minute I'd hear that word "don't", I'd get worse at stuffing myself.

Funny, now that I think of it, many of the spots where I did find short-time work were connected with food. Like a local grocery store, a barbecue place and a meat market.

At the barbecue spot, I had to work from four to midnight, which I didn't like, but it was a job. At least until I got laid off after the holidays. That's when I ran an ad on the radio, telling folks I could clip poodles. I got answers, too. People brought their dogs to me, so I was able to earn a little pocket money and not have to borrow anything from my Mamma.

Not that I didn't know I had to do something about losing weight. I'd tried before on my own to cut back on what I ate. I did lose some weight, but it was terribly hard. My stomach growled all the time, so I was sure I'd never lose all I needed to. And when you're 235 pounds, you've got a long way to go.

Then an aunt of mine down the road told me she was using those reducing-plan candies, Ayds® and they really helped curb her appetite. So I bought a box of the vanilla caramel kind at the drugstore and I started on the Ayds plan.

I took one or two Ayds with a hot drink—like the directions say—before I ate anything else and those Ayds, without any drugs in them, really helped me cut down on my food. I found they made reducing much easier for me than just trying to use my willpower alone.

One other thing I did was to weigh myself every day. In fact, I was obsessed with getting on the scales. I did it at least three times a day, until I finally wore out the springs. So Mamma got me a new scale at Christmas. And believe me, it was the best gift I ever had, because it helped me to stick to the plan as I watched those scale numbers go down and down.

When I finally lost enough weight on the Ayds plan for it to show, I took a test for a job at one of the big companies in town and I got it! With no questions asked about my weight.

After I got to know some of the girls at work and I told them how fat I'd once been, they could hardly believe it. They kept asking: "How did you get a waist so little?" And I kept saying: "The Ayds plan." It finally made such an impression, a group of them started a reducing pool, betting each other who would lose the most each week. It sure was a switch for me to be the skinny one, watching the fat race.

Of course, my present weight of 148 pounds may not sound all that skinny to you, but don't forget I'm five feet eight. And anybody who's lost 87 pounds has got to feel skinny. Proud, too.

Now, I have a boyfriend, a lot of store-bought clothes, instead of homemade ones, and I've even got some people jealous of me. Me, who grew up fat and never thought I could be thin.

So I'd like to say to any of you folks reading this that if you have a weight problem, don't give up. I didn't. And I didn't have to spend a lot of money at a reducing salon, either. The Ayds plan did it—got me my new name, "Skinny you!"

Because this eminent doctor discovered how to utilize your body's
FMH — the fat mobilizing hormone by experimenting on himself

You can now command your body to Melt Away Fat

AND LOSE AS MUCH AS YOU WANT WHILE YOU ENJOY EATING AS MUCH AS YOU WANT!

The Famous Superdiet — Dr. Atkins' Diet Revolution reveals in full the recently discovered weight loss secret.

You don't need pills — you don't count calories — you don't even need willpower (because you're never hungry)!

Yet you can lose 10-50-100 pounds or more (6 to 8 the first week!) and keep it off for the rest of your life!

It's truly a Diet Revolution!

For over 50 years we've all been brainwashed into thinking that the only way to lose weight was to cut calories. "It's a hoax!" says Dr. Robert C. Atkins. We all know some lucky person who can "eat like a horse" and never gain a pound — what has she or he got that you haven't got?

Now we know!

It's FMH (the Fat Mobilizing Hormone).

This is a substance that signals your body to start "living off its own fat." It was isolated in pure form only a dozen years ago, and it was just a medical curiosity until Dr. Atkins discovered how to make his body — your body — anybody's body — produce FMH on command!

Listen to his story:

"Only 10 years out of medical school I was already a fat man. 40 pounds overweight, with 3 chins! Yet I have no willpower — even the idea of hunger scares me. I knew I could not follow a low-calorie diet for even a single day." He read about FMH, and by using his own body as a laboratory, discovered that he could command it to make this miracle hormone whenever he wished. The FMH switched his body engine over to a different "fuel" — it started to burn fat. He continued to eat all he wanted — he never felt hungry, and at the end of six weeks, he had lost 28 pounds! And the diet revolution was born.

Why the Diet Revolution works.

Dr. Atkins found a simple test that would tell him when his body engine was burning fat. And 65 employees at AT&T agreed to try it. Every single one lost as much weight as he wanted — yet not a single one was hungry! Then the news got out — and thousands, many of whom were 50-100 pounds overweight, flocked to Dr. Atkins' office for treatment.

Is it any wonder celebrities like Roberta Peters, Buddy Hackett and David Susskind have told the world about the miracles this diet works? Is it any wonder his diet has made news in magazines like Vogue, Town & Country, Cosmopolitan, and Woman's Day?

Read these incredible true stories!

From size 18 to size 8! Beatrice G had been taking diet pills since she was a fat 9-year old! Yet when she came to Dr. Atkins, she still weighed 166 pounds and wore size 18! Now she's size 8 and still losing! "The best part is I know I'll never have to go hungry again!" she says.

Loses 85 pounds in 17 weeks. Herb W weighed 367 pounds at the age of 32. He had tried diet pills and

WHICH OF THESE DIETING MISTAKES DO YOU MAKE?

1. Do you have nothing for breakfast but high protein cereal with skim milk? "WRONG," says Dr. Atkins. "Have two fried eggs and all the bacon you want!"
2. Do you try to get by for lunch with nothing but a piece of lean ground beef with a little ketchup on it? "WRONG," says Dr. Atkins. "Have two cheeseburgers instead."
3. Do you skip lunch entirely and nibble a tiny box of raisins? "WRONG," says Dr. Atkins. "Have some chicken kiev dripping with melted butter!"
4. When you eat out, do you go off your diet? "No need to," says Dr. Atkins, and tells you how to enjoy Chinese food, French food, Italian food right from the menu.

started and quit Weightwatchers several times. After four months of Dr. Atkins' diet, he had lost 85 pounds — yet he was never hungry. I'm losing, but I'm not on a diet. I'm eating up a storm," he says happily. "It's fantastic!"

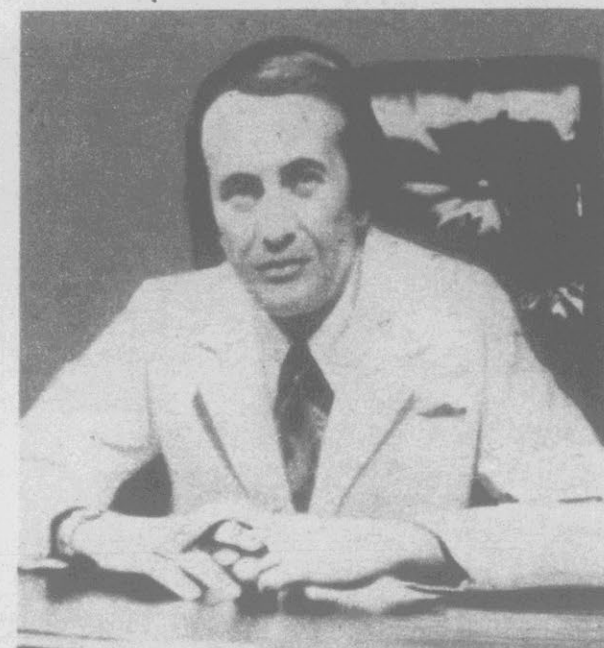

Why Dr. Atkins' diet will work for you.

1. Unlike any other diet — you control your own body chemistry to burn off unwanted fat and keep it off. (You're different from everybody else on earth, so Dr. Atkins' simple test, which you make every day, lets you know it's working, and lets you regulate your weight precisely.)
2. Unlike other methods — there are no pills to take, no calories to count, no strenuous exercises, and not a single hunger pang to suffer through! (You'll probably eat better than you ever have — and feel better too — because you can lose while enjoying such luxuries as berries with whipped cream, bacon, cheeseburgers, butter, fried foods, all kinds of meats, poultry and seafood — even asparagus with real hollandaise sauce!)

The Diet Revolution tells you everything you need to know.

Why diet pills are bad news (p. 88)
How to start your body producing (FMH) — the fat mobilizing hormone that flushes out and burns up your excess weight (p. 16)
How to test yourself and regulate your rate of weight loss (p. 126-130)
How to tell if brand name foods and diet drinks are okay — and which to beware of (p. 163)
Why calorie counting and starvation diets are a hoax (p. 94)
The 4 simple things you do to start (p. 123)
... and 94 pages packed full of luscious meal plans, food lists and recipes — and you can eat every one!
If you read and follow Dr. Atkins' advice, four beautiful things will happen to you.

1. You will feel free of hunger.
2. You'll feel better ... perhaps better than ever before!
3. You will lose weight the first week, and continue to lose until you reach the weight you want to be! Most men lose 7-8 pounds the first week — most women 5-6 pounds.

After completing his medical education at the University of Michigan and Cornell Medical School, Dr. Atkins interned at Strong Memorial Hospital, and served his residency at Columbia University Hospitals, and St. Luke's Hospital. Specializing in cardiology, he knew that obesity is one of the primary reasons for heart trouble.

4. You'll lose inches from your measurements ... right where you want to lose them!

Smart Cooking

This week, Food Editor Marilyn Hansen prepares an easy-to-make tuna soufflé. "So many women are afraid of soufflés," says Marilyn. "But, really, they're easy! Follow these simple directions—paying particular attention to the part about using a clean egg beater—and I guarantee you can't fail."

A "Can't-Fail" Tuna Soufflé

Hot Vegetable Juice

Tuna Soufflé

Sour Cream Sauce

Broccoli with Lemon Wedges

Baked Yams with Whipped Butter

Tossed Greens and Mushroom Salad

Milk-Chocolate Caramel Bars

TUNA SOUFFLE

- ½ cup butter or margarine
- ½ cup finely chopped onion
- ¼ cup all-purpose flour
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon dry mustard
- 1½ cups milk
- ½ cup shredded process American cheese or shredded natural Cheddar cheese
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 1 can (7 oz.) tuna, drained and flaked
- ½ cup wheat germ
- 4 eggs, separated

1. Preheat oven to 350°F. Lightly grease a 2-qt. soufflé dish or casserole.
2. Melt butter in medium saucepan. Sauté onion in butter 5 minutes, until tender.
3. Remove from heat; blend in flour, salt and mustard smoothly. Add milk. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly until mixture thickens and comes to a boil. Add cheese and lemon juice, stirring until cheese melts. Add tuna and wheat germ.
4. Beat egg yolks well. Stir yolks into tuna mixture.
5. With clean beaters, beat egg whites until stiff peaks form. Fold into tuna mixture. Pour into prepared soufflé dish. Bake at 350°F. for 45-50 minutes. Serve at once with Sour Cream Sauce.

Makes 6 servings

SOUR CREAM SAUCE

- 1 can (10½ oz.) cream of celery soup, undiluted

Bob Scott Studio

The surprise ingredient in this beautiful soufflé is the wheat germ. "It provides Vitamin B1 and B2," says Marilyn, "and gives the dish an added toasty zest."

- 2 tablespoons dill-pickle juice
- ½ cup sour cream
- ½ teaspoon dillweed
- 3 drops hot-pepper sauce

1. In small saucepan combine all ingredients. Beat with wire whisk until smooth. Heat just to boiling point, stirring. Makes 1½ cups

TOSSED GREENS AND MUSHROOM SALAD

- ¼ lb. fresh spinach, rinsed and chilled
- ¼ head iceberg lettuce, rinsed and chilled
- ¼ lb. fresh mushrooms, rinsed and sliced or 1 can (3-4 oz.) sliced mushrooms, drained
- 8 cherry tomatoes, halved
- 6 tablespoons plain yogurt
- 2 tablespoons French dressing
- ¼ teaspoon basil leaves, rubbed
- Dash garlic powder

1. Into a salad bowl, tear spinach and lettuce into bite-size pieces. Add mushrooms and tomatoes. Cover, chill.
2. Just before serving, combine remaining ingredients. Pour dressing over salad and toss gently. Makes 6 servings

I'LL LEND YOU THIS PIPE! SMOKE IT FREE FOR 30 DAYS!

So different that it's patented by the UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT patent number 3267941

U.S. Patent 3267941

Please send me another Carey Pipe for my brother. I have about every kind of pipe you can think of. When in the Service, I purchased pipes in France, Germany and Switzerland, but this is the best pipe I have today. There just couldn't be a better tasting, sweeter smoke than you get from the Carey Pipe.

L. S., Edwardsville, Illinois

It's Not A Trap

The "Magic Inch" is not a trap collecting moisture that gurgles with every draw. It is not a trap that must be cleaned after every smoke.

It's Almost Magic

Not my magic but NATURE'S OWN MAGIC. Warm winds pick up moisture by evaporation from the oceans, lakes, rivers, and streams, lift it high into the atmosphere where the cooler upper air squeezes it into drops of water that fall back to earth in its most perfect state of purity. Just as the colder upper air of the atmosphere causes rain, the cool air entering the "Magic Inch" chamber through the special louvers of the patented Carey stem, causes immediate condensation of the moisture in the smoke where it drops to the bottom of the chamber, is absorbed by the natural fiber sleeve of the "Magic Inch," and in turn, is evaporated into the outside air. No accumulation ever remains to form sludge or slugs of bitter tasting goo. The "Magic Inch" also mixes purifying oxygen with the smoke from the tobacco, in perfectly controlled proportions, cooling the smoke, eliminating all tongue bite, and creating MELLOWNESS, MILDNESS, and SWEETNESS that was never before enjoyed in pipe smoking.

When I first started making the Carey "Magic Inch" Pipe as a hobby and gave several of them to my pipe smoking friends, little did I know that their enthusiasm and persistent demands for more pipes for themselves and their friends would make my part-time hobby grow into the most unusual pipe business in the world.

Today, over one hundred and fifty thousand pipe smokers smoke Carey Pipes almost exclusively. They all got started by accepting my most unusual offer to test a Carey Pipe for 30 days, without any risk on their part whatsoever.

They were all granted the same option, an option which is yours also. After 30 days, if you agree that the Carey Pipe is the best smoke of your life, you may keep it; if you don't agree, whack it with a hammer and return the broken pieces to me. The trial has cost you nothing! How many businesses are that sure of their product?

Make Your Own 30 Day Test

It's Not A Filter

The "Magic Inch" is not a filter that gets soggy and loaded with foul smelling goo. A soggy foul smelling filter transmits its stale foul odor into each successive puff of smoke, creating more problems than it solves.

Exquisite New Discovery
"THE VILLAGE BLACKSMITH"

In 1868, when these four matching "Four Seasons" lithographs were first issued by Currier & Ives, your great, great grandmother flipped! Thousands rushed to buy them, hung them proudly on their walls, admired them as the best "contemporary" art of the day! Today, the few originals that have survived a century of use have become prized antiques, greatly valued both for the charm of their art style, and for their authentic depiction of a way of life that has vanished into the mists of time.

If you are lucky enough to find an original Currier & Ives you can expect to pay hundreds of dollars! And you might haunt antique shops and search for years without finding this complete matched set of Spring-Summer-Fall-Winter series. Now we've found these beautiful lithographed reproductions and because we want you as a customer for our other fine art lithograph sets we're practically giving them away . . . only 25c each print. Set of four ONE dollar, and we've included our new rare find "THE VILLAGE BLACKSMITH" free. (It's so astonishingly low, it's less than great, great grandmother paid in 1868, when a dollar was really a dollar!)

In full color, each print 12" x 9", ready to frame. Group them into a conversation piece setting along one wall, or space them in sequence along that hall or entry way. You'll be literally amazed at how much these beautiful and charming prints add to your decor. They're such exact copies they actually have that "antique" look. Only an expert could tell.

HE TRUSTS TIGERS
Zoo man Aspinall

"You can trust tigers like you can trust your wife and child," British zoo owner John Aspinall told the judge during court action in which a model named Marilyn Lamb is suing him because she was mauled by one of his tigers. She says the zoo man told her that the animals were "tame and quite safe." He displays his trust in tigers by playing with them at his zoo, and he confided to the judge that he'd sacrifice his daughter's life if it meant saving an animal species from extinction. All of which may make you wonder if a zoo owner's wife and child can trust him.

The Sexy Women of Europe: "I've learned a lot traveling around Europe, and foremost among the things I've learned is that European women are genuinely sexy! They really put us to shame. For instance, you and I breathe to stay alive. The European woman breathes to keep romance alive. She whispers in his ear, blows in his ear while dancing, and talks with her chin on her hand and her mouth very close to his—and it's great! Men really respond to this kind of treatment, and if you don't try to keep your romance alive in various little ways, then it dies. You both get bored, and that's bad." From "A More Beautiful You in 21 Days," by Eileen Ford, head of the world's largest model agency (Simon and Schuster, $8.95).

"ROOM 222's" DENISE
"Then I knew...."

QUOTE: Denise Nicholas, who costars in TV's "Room 222," vividly recalls when she first became aware of being black: "It happened in grade school, when we were living in Detroit. I was in the second grade. It was a racially mixed school and my best friend was a little white girl. We were real buddies. One day she didn't show up for school. When I asked my mother why, she said, 'Her family probably left because the neighborhood is becoming black.' I was hurt and confused and didn't fully understand what she meant—until a year later, when I was bussed to a different school because ours had been destroyed by fire. A few days after I had arrived I was playing in the school yard when a little girl about my age came over and called me a dirty black nigger. Then I knew what it meant to be black." UNQUOTE

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY

By Richard Armour

ON THE CUFF

I hope that trouser cuffs come back,
For more and more I feel the lack.
At cocktail parties now I stand
With used-up toothpick in my hand.
An olive pit I hold as well,
And fragment of a lobster shell.
Time was, when I could stuff such stuff
With stealth within my trouser cuff,
And sometimes I would drop a dime
And find it in my cuff, in time,
While if they could recycle lint
I could, I think, buy out the mint.
So come back, cuffs, I really need you;
And this I promise: I will feed you.

KRAAG'S SPINNING IN!

UGH! KRAAG MUST'VE PANICKED WHEN THOSE FIGHTERS CAME OUT OF NOWHERE. HE DIDN'T EVEN TRY TO EJECT!

COLONEL LEE TO U.S.A.F. FRIENDLYS. THANKS AND DON'T LET THE REST OF THOSE VENDORAN F-86'S BUG OUT.

AND A SHORT TIME LATER, THE REMNANTS OF THE AEROBATIC TEAM... WHEELS DOWN IN SURRENDER, RETURN TO THE AMERICAN AIRPORT, UNDER ESCORT.

TERENCE, WHY DO YOU HAVE TO TIE UP A SIMPLE MISSION WITH GRANDSTAND FINALES? YOU KNOW MY NERVES ARE GETTING FRAGILE.

THEN, GRIM FACED CUSTOMS AGENTS BEGIN THE JOB OF REMOVING THE LETHAL PACKETS.

HEROIN! THE MAN WHO ENGINEERED THIS WOULD HAVE BEEN AT LEAST A BILLIONAIRE!

W H I M E ... YEAH, WE'VE GOT IT ALL, HOLY. ...UH, HUH... WELL, IF YOU HURRY, YOU'LL BEAT OUR AMBASSADOR WITH A FORMAL PROTEST.

THEN, AT A PALACE IN THE VENDORAN CAPITOL...

WHAT CAN ANYONE DO, YOU FOOL?! I COMMAND HERE! THE MEN IN MY GOVERNMENT ARE MY LACKIES!

THE WARRANT FOR YOUR ARREST IS SIGNED BY YOUR OWN CABINET MINISTERS, SEÑOR!

AHEM!

IT'S NOT SIX O'CLOCK YET! I REFUSE TO FEED YOU EVEN ONE MINUTE BEFORE SIX O'CLOCK!

I KNOW YOU! I'M ON TO YOUR LITTLE GAME!

TODAY YOU WANT TO BE FED AT FIVE O'CLOCK... TOMORROW IT WOULD BE FOUR O'CLOCK... THE NEXT DAY IT WOULD BE THREE O'CLOCK..

PRETTY SOON YOU'D HAVE WORKED YOUR WAY BACK AROUND THE CLOCK, AND YOU'D HAVE PICKED UP AN EXTRA SUPPER!

WELL, YOU CAN JUST FORGET IT!

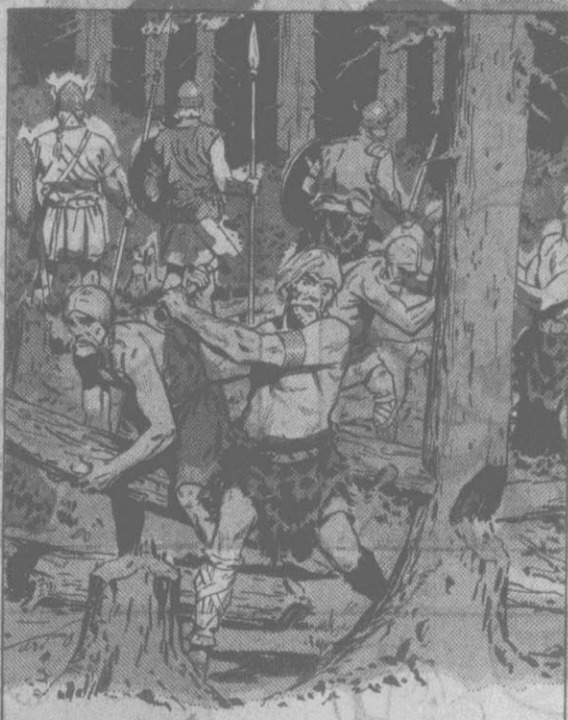

HE'S SMARTER THAN I THOUGHT HE WAS!

Prince Valiant
IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR
BY HAL FOSTER

Our Story: EACH DAY AS THE PICTS INCREASE IN NUMBERS THEY BECOME BOLDER. THEY TRY A NIGHT ATTACK BUT THE VIKINGS ARE ALERT AND DRIVE THEM OFF.

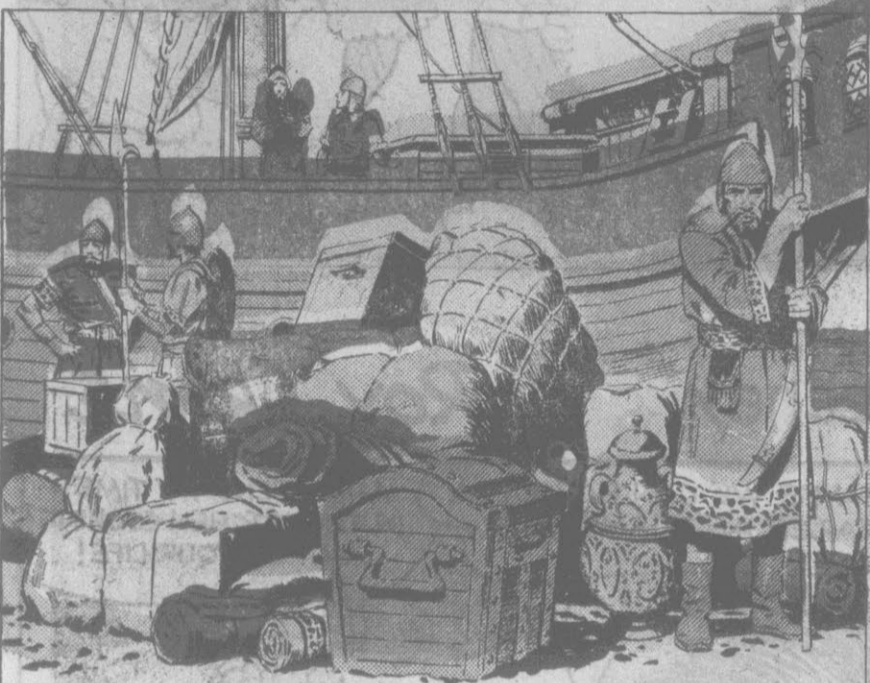

THE CUTTING OF THE TIMBER SLOWS, FOR HALF THE WARRIORS HAVE TO STAND GUARD TO PROTECT THE WORKERS.

AGAIN PRINCE ARN APPEALS TO THE MERCHANT FOR HELP AGAINST THE PICTS, TO NO AVAIL. "I HOLD YOU TO YOUR BARGAIN, NO TIMBER, NO FOOD," HE ANSWERS.

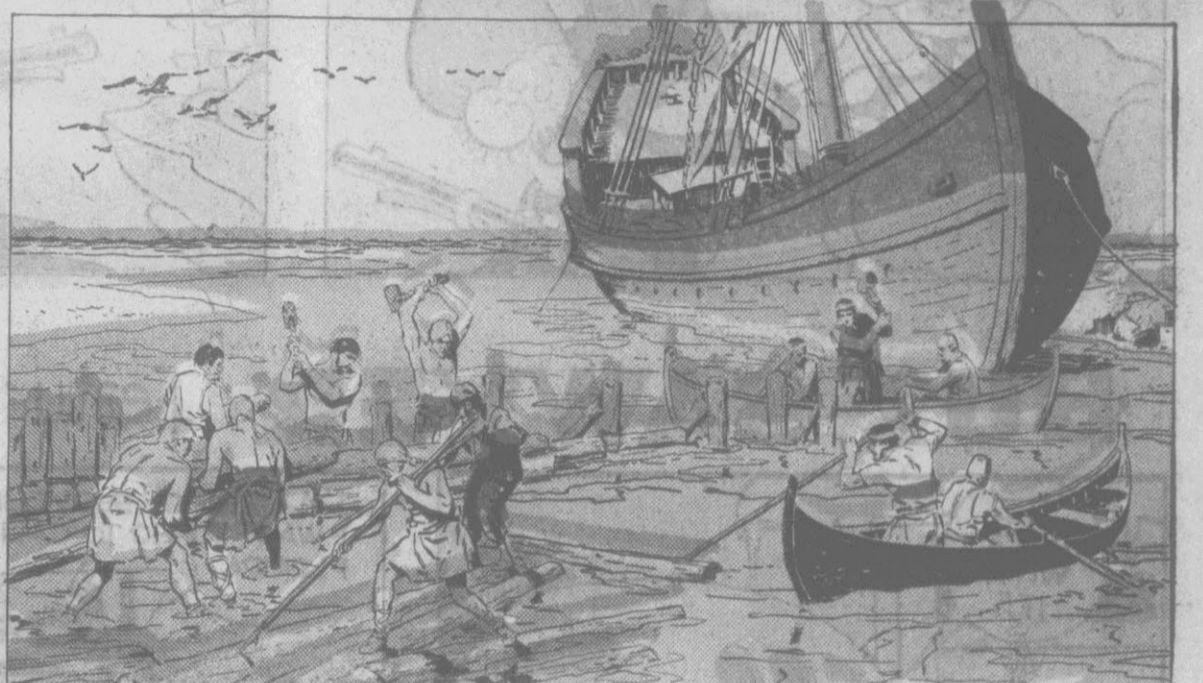

"FOR TWO YEARS HAVE I TRADED IN THESE PERILOUS NORTHERN LANDS, FOR GOLD, FURS, AMBER AND TIN. SHALL I LEAVE THESE TREASURES UNGUARDED TO HELP YOU?" HE SNARLS. "THEN YOU WILL BE TRAPPED BY YOUR OWN GREED," SAYS ARN.

HE LEADS ALSADA TO THE RAIL. "LOOK, YOUR PRECIOUS CARGO HAS BEEN UNLOADED TO LIGHTEN THE SHIP SO SHE CAN REACH THE SEA. WHO, THEN, WILL GUARD YOUR CARGO FROM THE PICTS WHEN YOUR CREW IS DIVIDED BETWEEN SHIP AND SHORE?"

"THERE WILL BE NO MORE BARGAINING. WE WILL UNITE AS ONE FORCE UNDER MY COMMAND." ALSADA LOOKS LONG INTO ARN'S FACE AND FOR THE FIRST TIME PUTS HIS TRUST IN ANOTHER.

NOW THE TASK OF FLOATING THE STRANDED SHIP BEGINS IN EARNEST. A LOG BARRICADE TO DEFLECT THE CURRENT TAKES FORM. TUNISIAN AND VIKING LABORING SIDE BY SIDE.

I'M GOING TO MISS YOU SOMETHING AWFUL, ANNIE!

HEADING HOME FROM MISS SCRIBBLE'S SCHOOL, ANNIE THUMBS A RIDE FROM A MOTORCYCLE...

HE IS HERE!

BUT IS HE ALIVE?

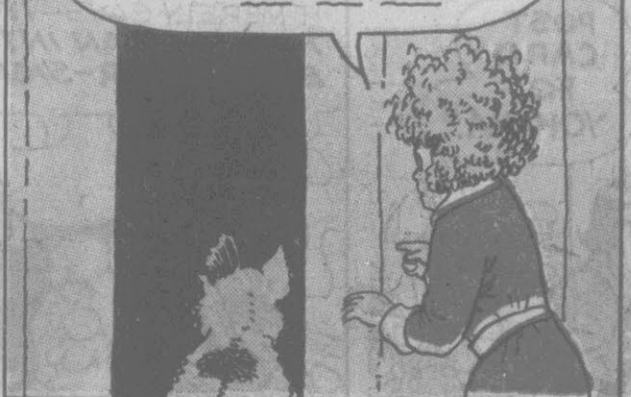

W-WHAT HAPPENED? I FEEL LIKE MY HEAD WAS BORROWED FROM A CHARACTER WITH A PERMANENT HEADACHE!! OOOOH... IT SURE HURTS!

AN' WHAT HAPPENED TO THAT KOOK WHO WAS DRIVIN' THAT RIG? HE'S GONE... AN'... AN' SO IS HIS BIKE!!

WELL, SOMEBODY OPENED THE DOORS... WHICH COULD MEAN WE'RE S'POSED T' GO INSIDE... ONLY WAY T' FIND OUT IS... IS T' HEAD IN... AN' HOPE... FOR THE BEST...

YOO HOO!! ANYBODY HOME?? THERE'S GOTTA BE SOMEBODY HERE, SANDY... 'CAUSE... WHO PULLED OPEN THEM DOORS... AN' WHO GOT RID O' THE MOTORCYCLE... AN' THE GUY DRIVIN' IT?
