Friendship

PORTSMOUTH, Va. (AP) — The Coast Guard cutter Gresham added another chapter to international friendship when it notified 5th District Headquarters it had again visited with an old friend.

The old friend was the USSR oceanographic vessel Ernst Krenkel. Ship personnel became friends on Christmas Day 1972 after a meeting of crewmen and exchange of gifts.

Friday, the two ships recognized each other in the morning mists some 200 miles off the New Jersey coast where the Gresham is currently on ocean weather station duty.

This time a contingent of four Russian officers came aboard the American vessel and exchanged gifts with the Gresham's crew. The Gresham's message to headquarters ended:

"At 10:45 EST, with her boat retrieved and her people on board, the Ernst Krenkel disappeared in rain and mist. She disappeared visually, but not from the hearts and minds of the crew of the Gresham."

Memorial Service

FT. BRAGG, N.C. (AP—Memorial services will be held Tuesday for the ll members of the Army's Golden Knights parachute team and the three crew members of a military cargo plane which crashed Thursday near Silk Hope in central North Carolina.

The C-47 plane was taking the team from its base at Ft. Bragg to Overland Park near Kansas City, Kan., for an exhibition.

A Ft. Bragg spokesman said the investigation of the accident by a team of officers from the fort is a tedious process that could take weeks.

Reward Offered

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Holshouser has offered a total of $5,000 in rewards for information leading to arrests in two unsolved murder cases.

The two $2,500 rewards will be paid for information on the July 1971 murder of an unidentified male in Wayne County, and the February 1973 murder of Amos Clifton Phillips in Pitt County.

Shorter Policemen

WASHINGTON (AP) — Persons of short stature should have an easier time becoming policemen now.

Unless local police departments eliminate most height requirements, Atty. Gen. Richard G. Kleindienst said Friday, they could lose Law Enforcement Assistance Administration grants.

The decision make it easier for short Americans — especially those of Japanese and Mexican ancestry who had taken the lead in protesting height requirements — to become policemen, Kleindienst said.

Eight Towns Are Struck By Tornadoes In Texas

EDWARD A. FULTON
United Press International

Tornadoes and heavy rain roared through the heart of Texas Saturday, bringing death and injury to more than 140 persons and damaging or destroying hundreds of homes in eight cities and towns.

Four persons were killed and at least 141 were injured. Damage to businesses, homes, farm buildings and vehicles was estimated at $2.5 million in one community alone.

The two worst twisters struck Hubbard, a town of 1,500 in the black farmland near Waco, and 150 miles southwest at Burnet, a town of 3,200 in the Texas hills.

The hardest hit was Hubbard, where all four persons died and at least 100 were injured. The tornado, considered the largest of the 10 sighted Saturday, began southwest of the city and roared through the center of town, not pulling up until it was 15 miles into the farmland beyond. It destroyed 45 homes, 30 other buildings and damaged scores more.

"My home is all over everywhere," said Bill Vardeman, who lived with his wife and children in a mobile home. His wife, Glenda, said the family was huddled in one room of their home listening to it approach.

"It sounded like a whole big roll of thunder," she said. "It just kept coming."

Mrs. Bailey Duncan said her neighbor, Randy Sudduth, tried to escape.

"He heard the storm coming and he ran and got into his car and tried to get away," she said. "But the storm picked up the car and threw it 25 feet and it was all bent up. And his trailer home was destroyed." Sudduth was in good condition at a hospital.

No one was killed in Burnet, but at least 30 persons were treated for injuries. An estimated 300 homes or businesses and a schoolhouse were destroyed. Electricity was knocked out and gas lines broken.

Two persons were injured by a small tornado in Austin, the state capital; seven in a twister north of San Angelo in western Texas, and two at Trading House Creek in central Texas.

In all, 10 tornadoes were sighted. Damaged was reported incommunities ranging from San Angelo to Willow Springs on the Oklahoma border and Paris in East Texas.

Need More Law, Order

By HELEN THOMAS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Lashing out at "soft-headed judges and probation officers," President Nixon proposed Saturday to restore the death penalty for certain federal crimes and to require life imprisonment without parole for twice-convicted drug felons.

"There are those who say that law and order are just code words for repression and bigotry," Nixon said. "That is dangerous nonsense. Law and order are code words for goodness and decency in America."

In a 13-minute, prerecorded radio address at noon, his sixth in a series, the President said he would send Congress next week a proposed revision of the entire federal criminal code, including separate legislation on capital punishment and on heavier penalties for drug abuse.

He reaffirmed his strong opposition to even limited legalization of possession, sale or use of marijuana, although he supported more "reasonable" criminal sanctions.

Nixon said Attorney General Richard G. Kleindienst had drafted legislation "consistent with the Supreme Court's recent decision on the death penalty" which would provide capital punishment in federal cases of murder and for treason and other war-related crimes.

The Supreme Court ruled that the death penalty, as unevenly administered in various states, was "cruel and unusual punishment" and thus unconstitutional. The administration interpreted the decision as containing a loophole permitting reinstatement of capital punishment in certain federal crimes.

The President gave no specifics Saturday, nor did he indicate whether he thought the death penalty in these cases should be mandatory. But elsewhere in his address was a suggestion he had other crimes in mind.

He said Congress must act swiftly to assure that "the hijacker, the kidnaper, the man who throws a fire bomb, the convict who attacks a prison guard, the person who assaults an officer of the law, all will know that they may pay with their own lives for any lives that they take."

The President spent Saturday at Camp David, Md., working on his law enforcement "State of the Union" message to be submitted next week, while Mrs. Nixon took advantage of spring-like weather to stroll through the surrounding Catoctin Mountain woods. They planned to return to the White House Saturday night after an overnight stay.

Nixon said his proposed "modernized" criminal code would provide stronger legal weapons against organized crime and dangerous drugs and would "restrict the present absurd use of the insanity defense" in seeking acquittals.

"When I say 'modernize,' incidentally, I do not mean to be soft on crime," Nixon said. "I mean exactly the opposite."

"The time has come for softheaded judges and probation officers to show as much concern for the rights of innocent victims of crime as they do for the rights of convicted criminals," he said.

As for drug abuse, which he called "Public Enemy No. 1 in America," the President proposed requiring federal judges for the first time to "consider the danger to the community before freeing on bail a suspect for heroin trafficking," a practice he said lacked legal authority.

He would require a minimum five-year prison term for anyone convicted of selling heroin, a minimum 10-year sentence up to life imprisonment for "major traffickers in drugs," and mandatory life sentences without parole for previously convicted drug felons.

The President cited the shooting and robbery of Sen. John C. Stennis, D-Miss., here last January in rejecting what he called the "permissive philosophy" popular in the 1960s that society —not the criminal —was responsible for crimes against society.

More Prisoners To Be Freed

By KENNETH F. ENGLADE

SAIGON (UPI) — The third group of American prisoners of war was tentatively scheduled to be repatriated next Wednesday, sources said Saturday. The United States has demanded a list of their names by Sunday.

The Viet Cong Saturday canceled the release of 250 South Vietnamese soldiers because of government military action, but the sources said release of the Americans would not be affected.

Repatriation of the Americans was linked in the armistice only to the withdrawal of U.S. forces, which was 75 per cent complete.

Capt. Phuong Nam, a Viet Cong press officer, said the Communists canceled the release of 200 South Vietnamese prisoners at Duc Pho, 307 miles northeast of Saigon, and 50 soldiers at Tam Ky, 33 miles farther north, because of South Vietnamese military action in the Duc Pho area.

Asked if the decision would affect the scheduled release of the Americans, Nam said the chief of the Viet Cong delegation to Joint Military Commission, Lt. Gen. Trang Van Tra, "did not make anything clear on that point." He did not elaborate.

Final approval of the American release must be made by the JMC's chief delegates. No mention was made of freedom for 13 American civilians still being held by the Communists, spokesmen for both sides reported.

A Wednesday release would follow the schedule set up in the peace agreement ending the Vietnam War. The North Vietnamese and Viet Cong have freed 288 military prisoners and 11 civilians—all Americans—since the cease-fire went into effect Jan. 28. A total of 286 remain in Communist hands.

A U.S. spokesman confirmed the JMC's subcomission on captured persons agreed to follow the release schedule but did not set a specific date.

"...The Provisional Revolutionary Government (PRG-Viet Cong) said they would abide by the time frame in the agreement," he said.

However, the chief U.S. delegate to the JMC, Maj. Gen. Gilbert Woodward, wrote the Communists, demanding details on the next release by Sunday.

Woodward made his request in a letter to the Viet Cong leader, Tra, and Maj. Gen. Le Quang Hoa, head of North Vietnam's delegation to the JMC.

He said the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese have acknowleged that "the return of U.S. military and civilian prisoners is related only to the withdrawal of U.S. forces and the forces of countries allied with the United States and the Republic of Vietnam."

As of Friday, Woodward said, "75 per cent of these forces have been withdrawn from South Vietnam," leaving a total of 7,356 remaining to go home.

Under the terms of the agreement, American prisoners were to be freed every 15 days during the 60-day period of American troop withdrawal from Vietnam.

The first release of American POWs was executed Feb. 12 and the second official repatriation took place March 4-5. An unscheduled release of 20 Americans was made Feb. 18 to honor the visit to Hanoi of President Nixon's adviser, Henry A. Kissinger.

Cooperation Between City And County Improving

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

There has been talk—at least some of it justifiable—that past relations between the governments of the City of Greenville and Pitt County have not been what they should be...that cooperation between the two largest governmental agencies in the county has been less than it should have been.

County and municipal officials were questioned last week about how the two governments cooperate, and although the situation is not all "peaches and cream", things are improving, they say.

Is the cooperation between governments as well as it should be?

"No," says Greenville mayor S. Eugene West. "But I think we are doing better than at any time I can recall in the past. I believe with reasonable cooperation between the city and county managers, backed by the County Commissioners and the City Council, conditions should improve considerably in the near future."

West's optimism was mirrored by County Manager Reginald Gray and City Manager Bill Carstarphen.

"I feel real good about it, really," said Gray. "There has been a turnabout...personalities mean a lot...and right now I think we are on the threshold of the best cooperation and understanding we have ever had.

"Presentation of data and discussions are being presented on a non-biased, objective basis...on a basis of actual facts and with a more positive attitude. There is sincerity...understanding each other's problems...and both of us have problems," according to Gray.

Cooperation "needs to be improved...I'd like to see it improved," Carstarphen emphasized.

He cited good examples of cooperation between the two governments as "the Sheppard Memorial Library...the city owns the building and provides two-thirds of the local budget. The county provides one-third of the budget. The city provides about $90,000 and the county $45,000 and the facility serves both the city and county," the city manager explained.

"The airport is another example of cooperation. Both contribute to the maintenance and operation," Carstarphen noted.

And according to Alton Gardner, chairman of the Board of County Commissiners, "Right now, I think things are headed real good. It looks like we are in a pretty good cooperating point at the present time."

According to Carstarphen, "There are few county and city governments in the state that have as good a cooperation as they should have. They are two distinct bodies with different spheres of interest," the city manager said.

"I feel the relationship here is pretty normal, and normal means there is room for improvement," he emphasized.

"We have a good working relationship with the county government and intend to return that level of cooperation from our point of view."

And on what seemed to be a note of mutual admiration, Gray said, Carstarphen "is a good administrator and good public relations man...a good honest, straight forward, and industrious," administrator "trying to do his job for the betterment of all citizens.

Gray said the two have "talked of a joint city-county planning department" which the two agree could work to the avantage of both administrations.

"Hopefully, some day down the road, we can join forces and have continuity of planning," Gray expressed, "but this shouldn't be done on a rush basis."

The county's data processing and accounting system may be another area in which cooperation can flourish.

"We have discussed this," according to Gray. "The city system (of accounting; can be improved upon. It's feasible the city could benefit

To Be Freed On Monday

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 20 years after his capture by the Chinese Communists, John Thomas Downey, is to be released Monday from life in prison on spy charges.

Downey, now 42, was a young Yale graduate working for the Central Intelligence Agency when captured.

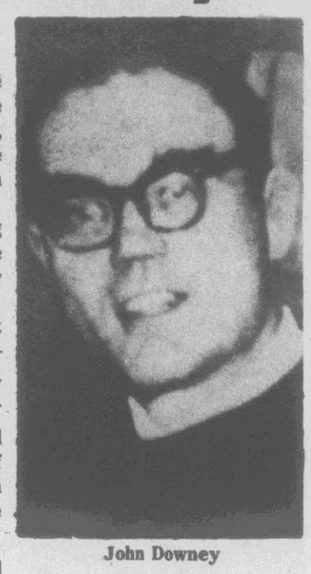

He is to cross the border at Hong Kong and head for home—the beneficiary of a thaw in U.S. relations with the Communists.

President Nixon expressed elation over the release of Downey and two other American prisoners, the last known to be held in China.

Their release was announced Friday at the White House with special emphasis on the humanitarian side. A bachelor, Downey is going to the bedside of an aged mother so critically ill that doctors were unable to give her the good news. But to diplomats, Downey's release illustrates that as a result of Nixon's trip to China in February 1972, Nixon can make a personal appeal directly to Chou En-Lai and expect quick results.

The two other Americans, Air Force Capt. Philip E. Smith of Roodhouse, Ill., and Navy Cmdr. Robert J. Flynn of Houston, Minn., owe their freedom to the Vietnam ceasefire. Smith, now 36, was takn prisoner after his het was shot down in the Gulf of Tonkin in 1965. Flynn, 35, was downed in 1967 after his plane strayed over the Chinese border with Vietnam.

Downey has been a prisoner of the Chinese since November 1952 when a plane carrying him and Richard Fecteau of Lynn, Mass., was shot down over Manchuria during what Peking later described as a spy mission to supply Nationalist agents.

John Downey

Fecteau, who had been sentenced to 20 years, was released before Christmas in 1971 after serving 19 of them.

'Sleuth' Comes To ECU Stage

Games are the subject of Sleuth, the New York thriller-hit that is coming to the stage of the McGinnis Auditorium Monday for two performances; a matinee at 2:00 p.m. and an evening performance at 8:15 p.m. Gamesplayers in the melodrama, however, are not contending for the usual trophies, but for greater stakes—the salvaging of damaged self-respect, revenge and even life itself; which is why Sleuth has been widely praised in London, New York and other cities as one of the most spine-tingling exercises in bafflement, trickery and suspense in stage history.

George Rose and David Haviland are starred in this play that opened on Broadway in Novermber 1970 and is still drawing capacity audiences.

Rose is portraying a rich, highly successful and urbane author of mystery novels, and ardent amateur of all kinds of competitive games, from chess and tennis to exotic ancient games he has collected, like one from ancient Egypt called senat.

He is interested in playing an even trickier life-and-death game with a young man who has just moved into the neighborhood of his sumptuous country house in England. When Haviland, as this incautious young man, accepts his invitiation to a get-acquainted afternoon cocktail, the plot of Sleuth is off and running and it never lets up its tension.

Sleuth is the banteringly funny, satirically macabre work of Anthony Shaffer, an English writer who was intent not only on spinning a goose-pimpling tale but in spoofing the more usual, less inventive mysteries of Agatha Christie, Ellery Queen, George Simenon, Erle Stanley Gardner and other popular devisers of thriller-chillers.

The Tony Award for Broadway's best play was bestowed on Sleuth in 1971, and that same year playwright Shaffer was given the Edgar Award of the Mystery Writers of America for his play's being the best mystery story of the year in any form—novel, film, short story or play.

Tickets are available in advance at the Central Ticket Office or at the window at time of performance. Prices are $3.00 for the matinee performance and $4.00 for the evening performance.

Class Bill Sees Changes

WINTERVILLE—Pitt Sen. Vernon White, commenting Saturday on a bill he introduced in the Senate to limit the size of classes in North Carolina's public schools said Saturday that changes have been made in the proposal, but that it's basic goals remain unchanged.

"As you know," he said, we have proposed that no teacher in the first three grades have more than 25 pupils, that no teacher in the upper elementary grades have more than 30 students, and that no academic high school teacher have more than 150 students per day."

Basic changes in the bill, White explained, allow for excess deviations which cannot be corrected by transfer of teachers and by use of contingency funds, with permission of the State Board of Education; and in emergency cases (such as caused by fire, flooding, etc.)

"We are conscious that the State Department of Public Instruction says it allots one professional person for each 24 students on the 'average, but what we are concerned with is the actual number of students who end up assigned to those individual classrooms in our schools. And that figure has been and is far above that one to 24 average," Whie said.

"We asked the NCAE to survey teachers in the local schools to determine how much overcrowding exists. That survey is not complete, but enough returns are in to convince us that the problem may be worse than we had originally thought."

"The survey, for example, has already turned up 107 classes with 40 or more pupils, 43 classes with 39 pupils, 93 classes with 38 pupils, 148 classes with 37 pupils, and so on down the list. We think these figures speak for themselves. No teacher, no matter how good, can do an outstanding job when she is faced with such a crowd of faces each morning."

White cited several instances in Pitt County and the Greenville City systems where classrooms are overcrowded.

They included: 37 in a language arts class at South Greenville elementary, 37 in a math class at South Greenville and 36 in another math class at South Greenville, 37 in a English class at North Pitt High, 36 in business math at North Pitt, 39 in an 8th grade class at Belvoir, 41 in an 8th grade at Belvoir and 42 in U. S. History at Ayden-Grifton high.

After careful study and many conferences with affected and concerned persons, the original class size bill is being redrawn, "to make it more workable, administered, feasible, and, most important, fiscally sound," White explained.

"We are not asking the legislature to appropriate funds to automatically allot more teachers to supposedly reduce class size.

We are asking that a sum of money be appropriated as contingency funds to the State Board of Education to be used only as emergency funds after other steps have been exhausted to reduce class size. Any unused funds will revert to the General Fund."

"This act will do more to help equalize educational opportunities in North Carolina than any act in recent time," the Senator theorized.

Police Dept. SOP

The Standard Operating Procedure (SOP) of the Greenville Police Department has been updated, to bring the manual into compliance with new requirements that will become effective state-wide in March 15, 1973.

Police Chief Glenn Cannon, in introducing the presentation of the SOP to members of the Greenville City Council Thursday night, said the new manual updates the March, 1972 training procedure instructions.

Regulations and requirements contained in the SOP, Cannon pointed out, "are designed to introduce into the system the most qualified personnel and to provide the basic framework of training.

"Two of the most vital concerns for an efficient criminal justice system are the selective process for new employees and the training process for providing the skill and ability necessary to perform required duties," Cannon said.

Basic requirements for initial consideration and selection of personnel include:

—A minimum age of 21, and a maximum age of 35. Waivers on maximum age are possible, Chief Cannon explained, in certain instances such as accepting a qualified retired military person in his late 30s or early 40s;

—High School graduate or equivalent;

—Satisfactory completion of the Aptitude Test for occupation of police patrolman from the local Employment Security Commission;

—A background investigation and checks on the applicant's record, to include checks at state and federal level; driver record, previous employment, credit record, school records, and if applicable, military records.

Once a candidate meets these qualifications and there is nothing in investigations to disqualify him, he is then taken before the Department's Screening Board. If approved, the next step is an interview by the Chief of Police.

When accepted by the police chief, the candidate is hired and placed under the Department's Training Officer to undergo a 12 months probationary period.

Lt. Paul Jewett, Training Officer for the Greenville Police Department, gave council members a run-down of the total training period given each candidate.

Jewett emphasized the 12 month training period is a probationary period, and that during that time a candidate had to prove he was capable in all the various fields of training. He added, however, a candidate who might be weak in one field and good in others received additional assistance in his weak area.

Basically, the training program is broken down into two areas, an 80 hour indoctrination-orientation period or primary on-the-job training, followed by a 960 hour secondary on-the-job training.

Within the 80 hours time block, instruction is given in the following subjects for the time period (in hours) indicated: Departmental practices, 7; appearance and equipment, 7; departmental equipment, 7; departmental conduct and ethics, 28; city geography, aided cases, attitude-public relations, each seven hours; traffic regulations and types and law-laws of arrest, each five hours.

The longer 960-hour secondary on-the-job training period is undertaken by having a new officer assigned to a Field Training Officer.

During this phase, it is the duty of the Field Training Officer to supervise the new officer's applied knowledge of the training he received in the initial 80 hour training period.

The Field Training Officer makes notes regarding the new officer's professional attitude and his progress in the secondary phase. These observations are passed on to the Training Officer.

Also, during the second phase, two written examinations are administered to the new officer by the Training Officer.

Lt. Jewett commented it is responsibility "to determine when a new officer has received sufficient training to enable him to properly conduct his duties as a law enforcement officer.

"In some instance," he noted, a new officer may require more than the prescribed hours."

The successful completion of the 960 hour phase, however, is not the final round of training for a new officer.

The next step is a requirement for a new officer to successfully complete the Introduction to Police Science. When this is done, the officer is reassigned to the Field Training Officer for evaluation, under supervision of the Training Officer.

It is only after this evaluation period that a new, or recruit officer, is placed on his own.

Additional courses to be completed include: Community Relations, Motor Vehicle Accident Investigation; Riot Control and Civil Disturbance; Criminal Investigation; and Supervision for Law Enforcement.

All new officers, Jewett said, are encouraged to enroll in the two-year Police Science Program at Pitt Technical Institute.

Following Jewett's rundown on the complete training course, Guy C. Langston, Area Coordinator, Law Enforcement Training at Pitt Tech spoke, for a brief time.

Langston noted that instructors in the course at Pitt Tech are highly qualified men from various specialized areas of law enforcement who are knowledgeable in their field.

In concluding the presentation to members of the City Council, Lt. Jewett remarked, "in all our training, we try to open the mind and to clarify the thinking of each new officer. Most of all, we stress the welfare of everyone, and make every effort to train a man to think with compassion."

$89,000 Refund For Texas Oilman

Robert H. Allen

By DICK BARNES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Texas oilman whose $89,000 contribution became involved in the Watergate affair told President Nixon's re-election committee he wanted his money back—he got it.

And a Texas developer who gave the President's 1972 campaign a $305,000 I.O.U. while his land empire was tumbling got the note canceled, the committee announced Friday.

The oilman is Robert H. Allen of Houston, who wrote the committee Jan. 23 saying "that I would have been unwilling to make even a small contribution had I had any idea that activities such as the 'Watergate Affair' were being conducted nor would I have been willing to serve in any fund-raising capacity."

The land developer is Walter T. Duncan of San Antonio, who put himself near the top of 1972's political donor list even as he faced increasing financial, legal and governmental troubles.

Allen, in his letter to chief fund-raiser Maurice Stans, identified himself as the source of four checks totaling $89,000 which came to the Committee for the Re-Election of the President from a Mexico City lawyer.

After passing through the hands of committee counsel G. Gordon Liddy, the checks wound up in the Miami bank account of Bernard L. Barker.

Liddy was convicted and Barker pleaded guilty in connection with the June 17 Watergate break-in at Democratic National headquarters. The incident is under investigation by a Senate committee. Liddy, Barker and five others are awaiting sentencing.

Allen gave a total of $100,000, which the committee refunded in response to his request.

Allen wrote Stans that he was asking for the money back with "considerable regret," but that he had been embarrassed by developments. He said the press made "preposterous and bizarre assumptions concerning the purpose" of his routing the money through Mexico. It was done for privacy, anonymity and convenience, Allen said.

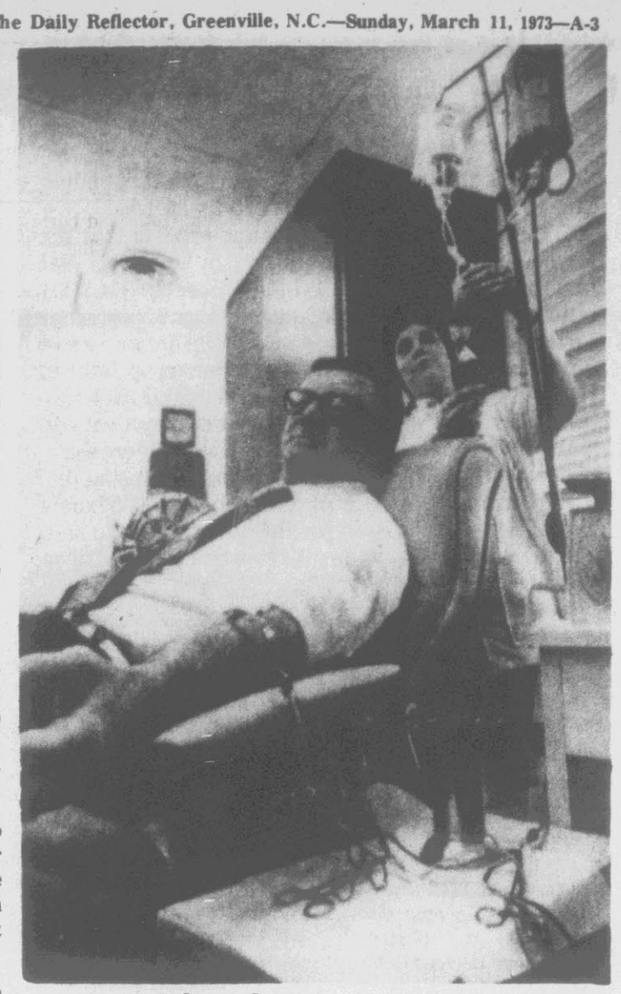

Investigators for the House Banking and Currency Committee who pursued the $89,000 found it "cloaked in mystery," according to their report in September.

Duncan had opened his generous political contributing with two donations totaling $300,000 to the presidential nomination bid of Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey this spring.

He turned his attentions to Nixon in August. But rather than contributing cash, he gave a $305,000 note which the Nixon money people sold to a bank at a small discount.

Duncan wrote the committee in January saying he would be unable to pay off the note. So the committee repaid the bank and canceled the note.

The committee's latest quarterly report filed with the Office of Federal Elections showed it has $4.7 million still on hand from the successful Nixon campaign. It received an additional $246,036 in contributions during January and February, weeks after the election.

Three Drug Arrests

Law enforcement officers arrested three persons on drug law violation charges following two raids here early Thursday morning.

According to Chief Cannon, Greenville police, Pitt ABC officers and East Carolina University police raided an apartment at the London Inn on Memorial Drive about 12:05 a.m. and arrested Herbert H. Harrington, 21, of Greenville and 16-year-old Jackie Barrow Jones of 323 Clairmont Cir. when a small amount of marijuana was found in the dwelling.

Bonds for both, who were charged with possessing marijuana, were set at $500 each.

The cheif said James Martin Hayes, 23, was charged with possession of marijuana and possession of amphetamines following a 1:05 a.m. search of his car at his Jefferson Drive dwelling.

Bond on each charge against Hayes was placed at $500.

To Observe Girl Scout Week In Greenville March 11-18

Local Girl Scouts will join other scouts throughout the United States to celebrate their 61st birthday during the week of March 11-18.

Girl Scouting was founded by Juliette Gordon Low in 1912 to foster the ideals of good citizenship, service to others and a love of nature.

One out of every seven ages seven to 17, in the United States participates in scouting. There are more than 3,110,000 Girl Scouts in the United States and more than 11,000 in Coastal Carolina (comprised of 26 eastern North Carolina counties). The Greenville district, which also includes Grimesland and Winterville, includes some 415 Girl Scouts.

Coastal Carolina Council serves 26 counties including Columbus, New Hanover, Brunswick, Pender, Onslow, Duplin, Jones, Carteret, Pamlico, Craven, Lenoir, Wayne, Wilson, Greene, Pitt, Beaufort, Hyde, Dare, Tyrrell, Washington, Martin, Edgecome, Nash, Halifax, Bertie and Northampton.

The council is composed of neighborhood chairmen from each of the 26 counties, neighborhood delegates, board members, finance, public relations, program service, personnel service, camp, and nominating committee.

The Greenville area has a service team of 10, including a chairman, consultants and co-leaders of the local troops.

More than 198 men and women volunteer yearly to work with the local girls, not counting the many community leaders who present programs at the various troop meetings.

The weeks' activities will begin this afternoon with a tea from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. at the Rotary Building.

Every troop in the Greenville area will participate in the event. Senior troops will be responsible for decorating, while Cadettes will be in charge of preparing the punch and taking care of the receiving line. Cookies will be made by both Brownies and Juniors.

All troops will have displays placed in the Rotary Building.

Each day during the week has been designated as a special activity day, including: Sunday, Girl Scout Sunday; Monday, Girl Scout birthday and homemaking; Tuesday, citizenship day; Wednesday, health and safety; Thursday, international friendship; Friday, arts Saturday, outdoors day and camping Girls Founder's Day.

Each troop in the area has chosen a theme for the week of observance.

Local troops are involved in such activities during the year as service projects, making bird feeders, nature walks, studying about patriotism, planting flowers, ice skating, various crafts, making aprons, embroidered wall hangings, making cookies, needlework and ceramics.

One of the important projects conducted by local troops this year was the formation of a troop for retarded children. Its leaders are Mrs. Geneva Gillahan and Mrs. Ann Jerome. Between 10 and 12 children participate in that troop.

Land Is Named 'Jaycee Park'

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

For a couple of years the good earth, five acres of it next door to the Eastern Elementary School, has been undeveloped. Property of the city, one of the Recreation Department Park areas, the so-called Hardee property is now official designated The Jaycee Park.

After hearing E. William (Bill) Turcotte, Jr., External Director for the Greenville Jaycees, tell about plans envisioned by the Jaycees for this property, the council unanimously approved bestowing the new name on the park site.

"The Jaycees want to develop this area as a long range club project," Turcotte told council members.

"Our main thrust will be to construct things like basketball goals, picnic tables and shelters, barbecue pits and a tot lot," he said.

"We are aware the two main requirements for this land is for construction of tennis courts and a baseball diamond," Turcotte remarked, "but the things we plan to do will be undertaken in total coordination with the Recreation Department so that there will be no need of changes later."

Turcotte received approval of the idea at the February meeting of the Greenville Recreation Commission. Members of the commission enthusiastically endorsed the idea and recommended it to the City Council for consideration at the March meeting.

"The first plan of action we have in mind," Turcotte explained, "is to draw up a plan with the Recreation Department so that we will know what each area will be designated for. Once this is done, the Jaycees will then move on into working on individual projects."

Turcotte emphasized that since this is a long-range project, the Jaycees would be concentrating on undertaking one phase at a time; completing one phase, then moving on to the next.

When questioned by Mayor pro tem Percy Cox about methods of funding Jaycee involvement in the project, Turcotte said this "will be done with funds we raise in our traditional fund-raising projects." He assured Cox it would not result in door-to-door campaign type of fund-raising activities in addition to the group's regular fund-raising activities.

In a brief interview Friday, Turcotte added that one of the prime benefits in activating this area will be that "it will provide an ideal place for the Jaycees and other city groups to conduct public activities. I'm thinking of things such as cook-outs for underpriveledged and handicapped children, junior tennis tournaments, and pitch-hit-throw games. An additional place for activities such as these is badly needed."

Under the program being developed by the Jaycees, the group has no immediate plans to attempt to give assistance to developing the two major features planned for the new Jaycee Park, the ball diamond and tennis courts.

"This doesn't mean," Turcotte said, "that we'll not help if we can, but our main focus are the things we have mentioned athat we feel we can accomplish and that will be of benefit to the community."

McGrath Urges Follow Law

Although she was quietly batted down by her male compatriots, Councilwoman Mrs. Mildred McGrath has made another pitch for observing city ordinances in connection with scheduling public hearings on rezoning requests in Greenville.

At the March meeting of the City Council on Thursday night, when a motion was made to set an April date for public hearings on three rezoning requests, Mrs. McGrath asked that the hearings be set for May instead.

"We have consistenly ignored the city ordinances on public hearings for rezoning," she commented. "The ordinances specify that these are to be held quarterly."

She named February, May, August and October as the months spelled out for conducting public hearings for rezoning requests except for emergency cases.

In the case of emergency hearings, the council has authority to approve hearing a request on a month other than the four designated months.

"I think we should either follow the provisions of the ordinance or change the ordinance to permit the monthly hearings we now hold," she concluded.

Following Mrs. McGrath's observations, councilmen set a public hearing date in April for the three rezoning requests appearing on the agenda.

Concern Over Lost Subsidies

How is the farmer facing the prospect of ending farm subsidies? He is concerned as can be.

The Christian Science Monitor reports that the farmer had his best year in 1972 in 20 years. Net farm income was up $3.1 billion over 1971's $16.1 billion. But the Monitor quoted a midwesterner farmer, "President Nixon's farm policies are a gamble that Russia will have another crop failure, He's put about 40 million acres of idle land back into production and wants to end subsidey payments on wheat, feed grain, and cotton, and other crops.

"Basically the idea of the farmer earning his money from the marketplace is good, but Nixon's plans allow no provision for the government to step in if there is a crop surplus. And so prices could drop faster than they went up this year."

To see why the farmer is not exactly overjoyed with the situation which faces him, one only has to look at figures cited by the Christian Science Monitor. Over the past 20 years farm prices have risen 11 percent, but retail food prices have increased by 26 percent during that 20 year period. Farm costs have gone up 109 percent. Taxes are up by 297 percent and during the period industrial salaries went up 129 percent.

C. Edward Harshbarger who made a study for the Federal Reserve Bank of Kansas City, Mo. warned that the "wheel of fortune in agriculture is a capricious device that is capable of producing sudden changes with little or no warning."

Those of us who have followed agriculture know how right that is. Even a year of unusually good growing weather can produce a bumper crop which suddenly places the nation in a position of great oversupply of a specific agricultural product.

The subsidy program was designed to ease the sudden shifts from oversupply to normal or undersupply from year-to-year. It really has not worked too badly and it has made our farm economy much more stable that it would have been.

Unfortunately, it is unpopular politically to be paying subsidies to farmers when food prices are rising so rapidly. If we reach a situation of wild swings in farm prices it is not going to be good for the economy as a whole and the consumer is going to find himself paying far higher food prices. How to get this message across to the public remains a problem, however.

Many Turn To Canine Guards

By LYLE EDWARDS
(The Gastonia Gazette)

GASTONIA — After three burglaries, a Gastonia businessman decided to hire a guard to watch his property at night. He inquired where he could hire the best guard for the least money.

"Get a watch dog," he was told.

So he got a German Shepherd and put him inside his place of business. The burglars haven't come back.

"It's the cheapest protection I know of," the businessman said. "I paid $75 for the dog and spend about $3 a week to feed him. He doesn't expect any pay and he works long hours."

Many others are doing what this man did. They are putting fences around their property, installing special locks and night lights, and getting dogs for night patrol duty.

Melvin Smith, a partner in Gaston Auto Clinic, said that he keeps two dogs in his place of business at night. The dogs are penned up during daylight hours. At night they are turned loose to roam the back yard and through the automobile shop.

Dogs Guard Well

"Before we got the dogs, we had a lot of break-ins," he said. "It stopped when we got the dogs. I don't think any burglar wants to come in here and tangle with a couple of German Shepherds at night."

A Charlotte company which specializes in providing animal security is delivering 70 German Shepherds each night to business places. The dogs are left overnight for guard duty, and picked up the next morning.

"We train the dogs and lease them to the businesses," said Dusty Foiles, the trainer.

Foiles said that his company is training dogs for protection and selling, leasing or renting them. The Charlotte company is going to expand int Gastonia this spring, Foiles said.

A Growing Business

"Animal security is big business on the West Coast," he said, "and is gaining popularity in this section of the country. We find that dogs are 99½ per cent effective in stopping burglaries. Occasionally one of our dogs are shot. We lost one two years ago and another last week."

Foiles said that he had two watch dogs inside a Charlotte tire store when burglars came in.

"The dogs attacked," he said, "and the burglars show both of them. One dog was killed, the other wounded. But the burglars left in a hurry. They didn't have time to steal any tires."

Nixon, Mills In CollisionCourse

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON—The failure of White House aide Peter Flanigan's secret mission to Kensett, Ark., on Saturday, Feb. 24, to achieve its immediate goal threatens a confrontation between President Nixon and Rep. Wilbur D. Mills with dangerous implications.

Flanigan was dispatched to Kensett, where Mills is recuperating from an ailing back, after Mills three times in a week called for Mr. Nixon to impose an emergency 15 per cent surcharge on imports. In Arkansas, Flanigan expressed doubts about both the wisdom and legality of Mill's proposal. Returning home, he told the White House his mission had succeeded, a judgment presidential aides feel has been affirmed by Mill's silence on the surcharge since then.

What Flanigan and his friends do not know, however, is that Mills in private conversations with advisers is reiterating his demand for a surcharge as one part of a wide-reaching response to the monetary crisis. The other two parts: carefully-selected sale of gold by the U. S. in world markets and a tax forgiveness for foreign investors in the U.S. to encourage dollars to flow here.

Thus, the President and Mills may be on a collision course, with implications both local and global. Relying on Mills as chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee to fight irresponsible tax-cutting and tariff-raising and to push for budgetary control, the White House wants no feud with him. It fears even more an open battle over monetary policy with Mills, whose prestige is immense in Japan and Western Europe.

Mills first broached his surcharge proposal at his Feb. 7 meeting in the White House with Mr. Nixon and his economics czar, Treasury Secretary George Schultz. Schultz objected, but Mills came away thinking he had persuaded Mr. Nixon. Instead, the President followed Schultz's advice and devalued the dollar Feb. 12.

When Mills followed by publicly unveiling his 15 per cent surcharge Feb. 16, the White House first thought he was merely warning U.S. trading partners and had no strategic overview. That follows the administration's private opinion the Mills, unquestioned as congressional master of tax and welfare legislation, is a novice in the game of global economics.

But the White House gradually perceived Mills to be in earnest. They discovered he was consulting with business economist Eliot Janeway, an acerbic critic of Nixonomics, and through Janeway with Dr. Henry Kaufman, economist for Salmon Bros. investment house. Administration officials were amazed at the similarity between Mills's public pronouncements and Janeway's confidential newsletter. Separately, Mills is also consulting Dr. Pierre Rinfret, the economic consultant who was a Nixon campaign spokesman but is increasingly critical of administration policies in reports to his clients.

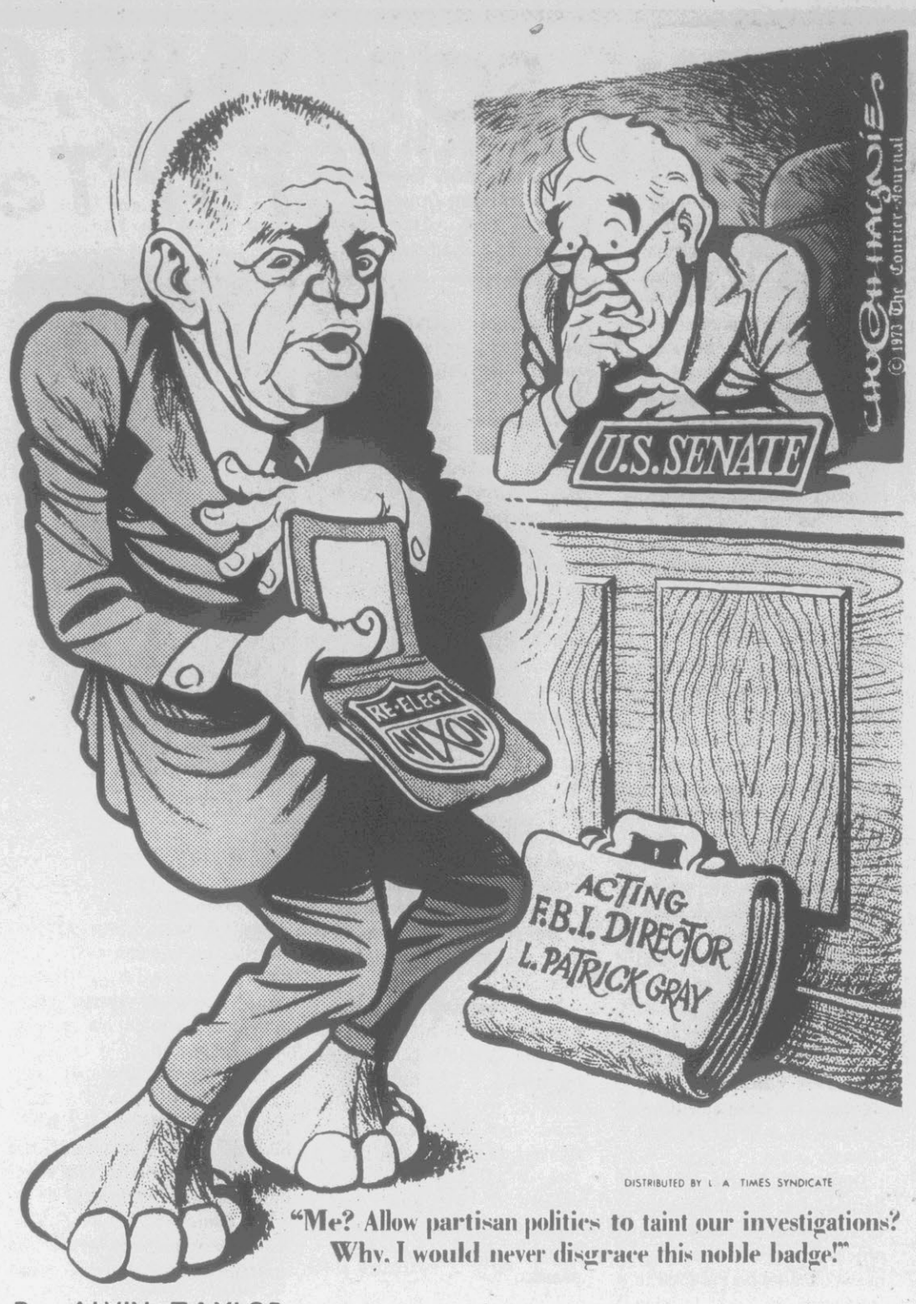

That's why Flanigan was hurriedly sent to Arkansas, where he argued as follows: It is questionable whether the President has authority to impose an import surcharge. In any event, he surely could not impose a selective surcharge on some items but not others. Yet, an across-the-board surcharge would hit such politically sensitive imports as heating oil, already in short supply.

Mills listened, seemed to nod but said nothing. Flanigan returned home thinking his mission was accomplished.

Since then, however, Mills has become convinced the devaluation failed and that the crisis needs emergency action—a view concurred in by much of the business community.

A Simpler Answer

(Chapel Hill Newspaper)

Sitting here on the heels of our brogans, wondering whether it will ever be dry enough to plant the Victory Garden and, if it is, what to plant once the rows are turned, the idle thought occurred: how is it that food prices can jump clean out of normal visibility without anybody making any money out of it.

Agriculture Secretary Butz and our own Congressman L. H. Fountain assure us that, despite record prices for raw farm products, farmers still have 20 per cent less income than those at comparable stations in other fields.

Those who supply the farmer claim they're not making as much net profit as they were before inflation set in.

Food stores, which get the brunt of the blame from consumbers, claim to operating on a narrower profit margin than ever A & P, one of the nation's largest supermarket chains, is going through one of its most critical financial periods, showing a serious loss during its last quarter.

Organized labor apperars to be ready to use the high cost of food as justification for demanding wage increase considerably beyond the Phase III guidelines, thereby giving new inpetus to the whole cycle of inflation.

So, the nagging question: if nobody is making any more money than, say, a year ago, why does food cost so much more than it did a year ago. A satisfactory answer to that question, one that the housewife at the checkout counter can understand, will not make the price of hamburger any easier to take but it might tone the urge to kill down to simple outrage.

Braille Trail Is Popular

By SAM FOGG

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There is a new breed of sightseer exploring the nation's parks, forests and wilderness areas these days—the blind.

In growing numbers, the sightless have been able to savor the sounds and sense the pleasures of outdoor life through use of "Braille Trails" installed in several hundred sites over the past five years.

Basically, the trails consist of hip-high nylon ropes which lead to sign markers in Braille that enable the blind to follow special paths and to read through their fingertips about the world of nature.

There are no precise figures on the number of Braille Trail miles or the number of trails available, because they range from small community projects in city parks to rugged excursions into state and national forests.

A spokesman for the Interior Department's Bureau of Outdoor Recreation, which is encouraging a program to promote the trails, estimates that the blind now have available about 500 miles of exploration in 200 to 225 nature centers.

Some provide walks of only one-third of a mile through quiet park paths within city limits. Others allow the blind to experience the wilderness on more rugged expeditions into state or national preserves.

The first Braille Trail came into being in 1967, according to the Interior Department, at Colorado's White River National Forest. It was suggested by Robert B. Lewis of Aspen, who said at that time:

"It is not beyond the realm of possibility that there may some day be a network of such trails across the country in woodlands, along streams, in the mountains and even the deserts."

The idea caught on so well at the federal, state and local levels that Lewis' prediction of a cross-country network is within achievement. Trails for the blind have proliferated, and elements of a coast-to-coast system now are within a one-day drive of most parts of the country.

James G. Watt, director of the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation who is heading a drive for more Braille Trails, said: "There is hardly a single patch of green which would not be enhanced by marking a Braille Trail."

For instance in May a 142-mile Braille nature trail will be completed at Elephant Rocks State Park near Granitesville, Mo., financed through matching federal-state grants totaling $25,500. The blind will be able to explore the massive prehistoric outcroppings of rock, some of which are 27 feet high and 680 tons.

By nylon rope and Braille markers, they can explore the boulder-strewn area, be told what they are "seeing" and find benches and rest rooms as well. On some trails, transistorized tapes are used instead of the Braille messages for the sightless visitors, describing the bird and plant life around them.

"Kneel down and feel the remains of an old tree. Feel the

No need facing the people of North Carolina is greater than that of expanding the Medical School at East Carolina University. This expansion needs to be brought about immediately for the shortage of doctors steadily grows worse.

More important, at this time is that we discuss that disgusting Board of Governors which is Chapel Hill-dominated and is trying to block this expansion. This board is biased and here's the proof.

(1) Bill Friday, closely connected with Chapel Hill, was chosen as the Board's president.

(2) President Friday's headquarters is located just off the UNC campus in Chapel Hill.

(3) One half of the board's membership was chosen from the UNC trustees board.

(4) Members of the group had to be warned not to come out with any statements that might reflect ill-will towards the east.

(5) Before (three days in fact) the board made its recommendation against expansion in January, a reporter (Ned Cline) found out what these recommendations were and printed them in his newspaper before the public knew about it. What gave this reporter special privilege? Who squealed?

(6) This board is trying to delay expansion by "studying" the issue to death.

This new board needs to be terminated. It has caused enough division already.

BELLS IN THE HUMAN HEART

In a deep valley of a mountain range in Europe are hung some remarkable bells. No rope is attached to them and no human hand ever rings them. They begin to swing and peal forth their resounding tones only when a gale has reached storm proportions. It takes the storm, and the heavy storm, to start these bells ringing.

There are bells hung in the heart of everyone of us which never start to ring until we find ourselves engulfed in trouble. Probably there are people reading these words who have not uttered a prayer in twenty years. But some day the hurricane may sweep down upon them. They will be confirmed atheists indeed if in that hour they do not cry out shrilly and piteously to God.

The bells here described are singular and unusual. Bells which gladden the hearts of those who dwell on the countrysides throughout the world are bells which ring regularly, calling men and women to the glad assembly of worship. The atheist is a rarity. So is the agnostic. And although not so rare, the man who thinks not at all about God is nevertheless in the minority in every population. The great mass of people are, in some degree at least, believers in something. For them the bells ring regularly—amid the ordinary events of life.

Some Don't Like To Compete

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — In Ted Cross' opinion, the trouble with free enterprise as practiced is that too many companies don't like competition. "They say they like it but they don't. They don't like to compete."

He feels that almost habitually they thwart competition in order to make life more comfortable for themselves. "They avoid the introduction of new competitive factors," he said in an interview.

"Social issues are a new competitive force," he continued, among them being opportunities for women and blacks, product safety and a healthy environment. "But companies don't want to be rated on these factors," he said.

Unlike many who hold such views, Theodore Cross, 49 Amherst, Harvard, editor of the Harvard Law Review, corporate lawyer and executive, author of the highly regard "Black Capitalism," presidential adviser on channeling capital to ghettoes, editor of the Bankers Magazine and founder of Business and Society Review Innovation, is in a position to do something.

Appointed a public governor of the American Stock Exchange last October, Cross now suggests it would be a sound move to require all listed companies to make public their records on how well they implement job equality.

At present, companies file statements with the Equal Opportunity Employment Commission, but the records are denied the public. Cross would insist they be made available for publicizing by social action groups.

To do so would be to implement the constitutions of both the New York and American exchanges and bylaws of the National Association of Securities Dealers, all of which require just and equal trade and business practices.

Cross insists social factors are sound bases for rating companies—as sound as quality and safety of product and price. How a company treats minorities and the environment, he believes, might even be a financial consideration.

Discrimination costs, Cross maintains. "It is the first thing that Adam Smith would say was wrong. People should be rewarded according to merit and ability. To be truly functional, free enterprise needs that competition."

Much of modern capitalism's thrust, however, has been toward reducing competition, especially in the introduction of new competition That, at least is Cross' view. It is a building block of his fight from within the establishment.

Speaking of the ideas propounded in Business and Society Review-Innovation, which he owns with his two daughters, he states: "We're not radical, but these guys (businessmen) need to wake up." He admits some articles make unpleasant reading.

"We're not storming the business community," he explains. "We're trying to sell it information on what needs to be done to be responsive. Our basic gamble is that the capitalistic system has the capacity for self-correction without a major upheaval."

The radicals, to his way of thinking, "are the guys who want to suspend the market, who want government to intervene." His view is that the business community, for its own self-protection, should clean its own house.

Observations From Editorial Columns

Loyalty To Whom?

State Representative William P. Kemp, Jr., conducted a unique, an expensive and potentially beneficial survey recently.

He did so at his own expense.

Mr. Kemp mailed to a crosssection of citizens in Wayne County a questionnaire on issues subject to come before the General Assembly.

Two thousand citizens responded.

Their views should be of interest and value to all legislators and especially to those representing Wayne County in either the house or senate.

Some of the findings of the survey may have been surprising to most of us.

Seventy-five per cent of our people in this heavy tobacco producing area were opposed to repeal of the tobacco tax.

The state has a whopping revenue surplus. Mr. Kemp asked if his constituents favored eliminating this through a tax rebate. That's a tempting proposition for tax-weary citizens.

But 75 per cent of Wayne's people responding to the question said, "No."

A total of 96 per cent favored adoption of a code of ethics for members of the General Assembly. This should have come as no surprise in light of developments over the months involving so many of our state government officials.

A great majority also wanted reorganization of the Highway Commission. Again, and for the same reason, this should not have surprised anyone.

Representative Kemp included in his survey: "Do you favor a new medical school at East Carolina University?"

Almost 88 per cent of the Wayne County respondents said, "Yes."

Specifically, 1,495 answered in favor of the school and 205, around 12 per cent, were against it.

Several days after his answers had been tabulated, Representative Kemp, along with other members of the House Higher Education Committee, was asked by the Associated Press:

"Do you think the General Assembly or the University of North Carolina Board of Governors should decide whether East Carolina shall have a four-year medical school?"

According to the Associated Press, Representative Kemp's reply was : "I do think we should have a four-year medical school at East Carolina, but I think the decision should be made by the Board of Governors."

Unfortunately for the people of Eastern North Carolina, the Board of Governors, given the opportunity refused to recommend even a second year of medical school at E.C.U.

It proposed instead that existing medical schools at Carolina and Duke and Bowman Gray immediately be beefed up with more state funds and that the school at E.C.U., once again, be resubmitted for further "professional" study.

The need for a medical school at East Carolina was justified before the General Assembly established the one-year school there two years ago.

The need for a medical school to help attract more doctors to east has been established.

Local governing bodies over a broad area of the east have supported the medical school. Wayne County Commissioners, some of our municipal governing bodies and the Chamber of Commerce have endorsed it.

And, now a survey of the people of Wayne County shows that 88 per cent of them are in favor of the medical school.

But knowledge of public sentiment is one thing. Responsiveness to it is still another.

The Board of Governors is a creature of the Legislature. Legislators are understandably loathe to rebuff it on its first major controversial issue.

But our legislators must search their conscience and ask themselves: Do they owe greater loyalty to the Board of Governors, which they created, or to the people they were elected to represent?—Goldsboro, N.C., News-Argus

Stroupe, who live near Gastonia, have been keeping watch dogs for nearly eight years. They have German Shepherds.

Protection In The Country

"When you live out in the country like we do," said Stroupe, a real estate salesman, "you need some protection against pilferage and criminals. Having dogs is the only way to go, I think."

A friend gave Stroupe his first German Shepherd. Since then, he has raised dogs and always keeps a couple.

Stroupe has a seven-year-old female dog named Jet. She doesn't like strangers. In fact, she can be downright mean if a stranger comes into the yard.

"She has bitten five or six people who drove into the yard and got out of their car without looking," said Mrs. Stroupe.

The Stroupes decided they would put up a sign warning people. They tacked a "Beware of Dog" sign in the front yard adjoining the driveway.

"People generally stay in their car and blow the horn," said Mrs. Stroupe, "and wait for one of us to come outside to meet them."

In spite of the dogs, the Stroupes lost two motorcycles recently while they were gone to church on a Sunday morning.

"Whoever stole those motorcycles," said Stroupe, "apparently knew about the dogs. We found a big stick that had been broken, as if they'd used the stick to fight off the dogs. They took only one helmet. It looked like they were fighting off one dog when the second one heard the noise and came home. That's when they took off in a hurry."

A Conservative View

For Real Kicks, Read Uncle Miltie Friedman

By SMITH HEMPSTONE

CHICAGO — The traveler who gets stranded in Chicago, killing two hours in between planes, is likely to gravitate to the barbershop. There he picks up the February Playboy, and what does he find? Nekkid wimmen? Well, yes. But what else does he find? Milton Friedman, that's what. And Uncle Miltie is better.

Professor Friedman, of couse, is the Chicago economist whose libertarian views of the free enterprise system have won both denunciation and applause. Finding him in Playboy is like finding Sister Bernadette at a singles' dance. What's a nice boy like you doing in a place, etc.? But there was our pint-sized professor being interviewed and making, as usual, gallons of great good sense.

Here is Friedman, for example, on the minimum-wage law. He regards the act as "the most anti-Negro law on the books," and how come? The minimum-wage rate, he found, hits blacks particularly hard.

"How is a person better off," he asks, "if he is unemployed at $1.60 an hour than employed at $1.50? No hours a week at $1.60 comes to nothing. Let's suppose there is a teenager whom you as an employer would be perfectly willing to hire for $1.50 an hour. You must hire him at $1.60. Now, if you hire him at $1.60, you're really engaging in an act of charity. You're paying $1.50 for his services and you're giving him a gift of 10 cents. That's something few employers, naturally, are willing to do or can afford to do...

"As a result, the effect of a minimum wage law is to produce unemployment among people with low skills. And who are people with low skills? In the main, they tend to be teenagers and blacks, and women who have no special skills or have been out of the labor force and are coming back. That is why there are abnormally high unemployment rates among these groups."

The Playboy interviewer, plainly ill at ease in the presence of heresy, sought to reproach the professor as a friend of the oldfashioned sweatshop. Sure enough, Friedman proved to be a friend of the old-fashioned sweatshop.

"My mother came to this country when she was 14 years old. She worked in a sweatshop as a seamstress, and it was only because there was such a sweatshop in which she could get a job that she was able to come the U. S. But she didn't stay in the sweatshop and neither did most of the others. It was a way station for them, and a far better one than anything available to them in the old country. And she never thought it was anything else."

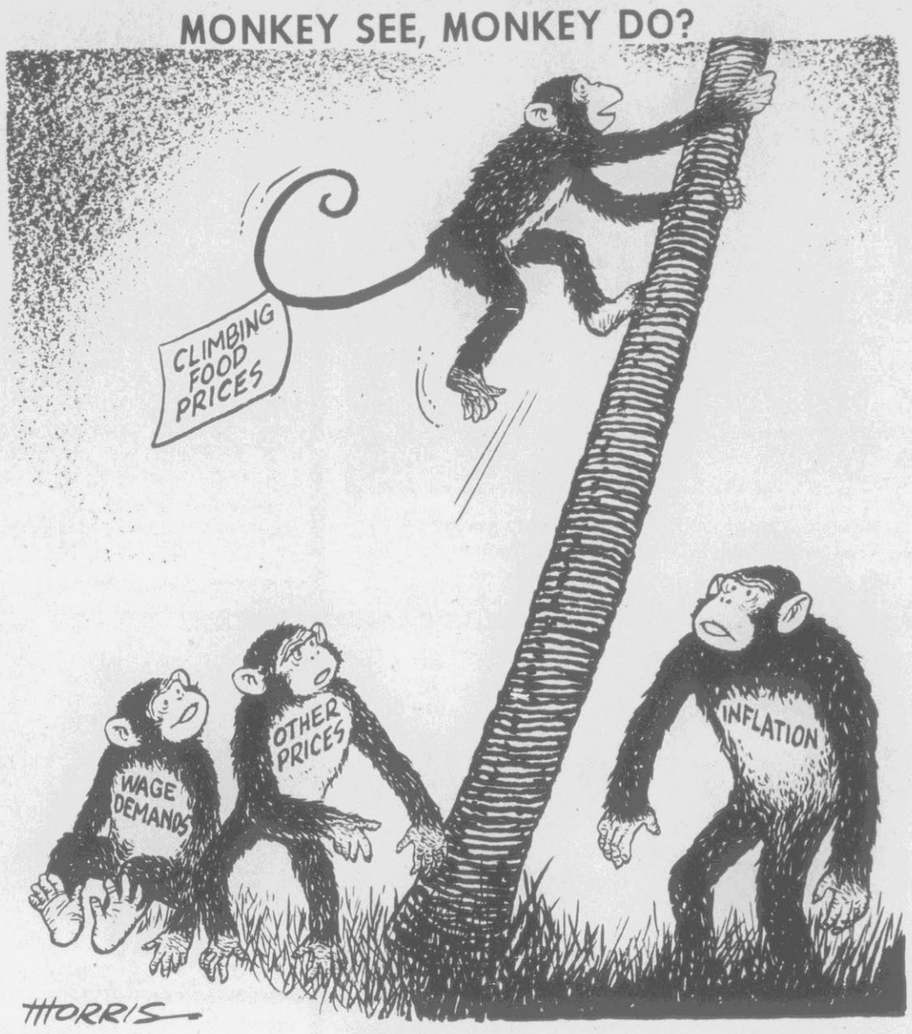

"I must say," said the professor, ramming a sharp needle in the man from Playboy, "that I find it slightly revolting that people sneer at a system that's made it possible for them to sneer at it. If we'd had minimum-wage laws and all the other trappings of the welfare state in the 19th Century, half the readers of Playboy would not exist at all or be citizens of Poland, Hungary or some other country."

In answer to another question, Friedman took aim on higher education: "That's one of the country's greatest scandals." Because the great State universities are heavily subsidized by taxes, the poor youth who can't go to college, and goes to work as a mechanic instead, winds up by paying taxes to support that other man's education. "When I'm being demagogic about this, I say that the system in California is one in which you tax the people of Watts to send children from Beverly Hills to college."

Friedman also took dead aim on Social Security, consumerism, and governmental regulation of commerce. Many of the ecologists, he thinks, are phonies. As for the notion that corporation officials should take action to stop pollution out of a sense of social responsibility: "I wouldn't buy stock in a company that hired that kind of leadership. A corporate executive's responsibility is to make as much money for the stockholders as possible."

All of which goes to suggest that if you're caught in an airport barbershop, and you're just passing time, look at the nekkid wimmen. If you want a real kick, read Uncle Miltie.

MONKEY SEE, MONKEY DO?

U.S. Consumer Playing A Large Role In Cause Of Growing Inflation

By GEORGE BRYANT, JR.

Crying and buying.

That's the picture in the supermarkets, especially in front of the meat counter. And it's about the same in any market place, whether the trade be in autos or appliances, bed springs or bicycles, row boats or yachts.

The customer, consumer if you prefer, is both generous and impartial in placing the blame for high prices. He damns just about everyone and everything involved—producer, processor, distributor, retailer, union wages, freight costs, profit margins and, especially the government. To some degree, he is right on all counts.

But, as is so often the case in blame-placing, the consumer overlooks his own role. He has become accustomed to living higher and higher on the hog. He wants more of everything. He wants it better. And he wants it now. He's got money and he's spending it, even if a bit tearfully.

Meat is simply one of the more recent and more spectacular examples of inflation at work. A glance at a few statistics for the past 10-years tell a lot about what's happening.

Start with population. It has gained an estimated 7 per cent since 1963. The "mix" has changed in significant ways. The huge baby crop which followed World War II has moved into adult ranks, expanding what might be called the demand base.

The population trend is basic to an expanding economy. But the actual increase in population has been much smaller than other economic forces at work. Some real inflation makers have scored heavily.

With the federal government piling one big budget deficit on top of another, the money supply has zoomed. As measured by currency in circulation and demand deposits in banks, the rise has been nearly 50 per cent. It has far outrun population growth.

This means a lot of extra dollars lying around and available for spending. Figures on per capita disposable income, compiled by the Commerce Department show the change in spending power.

Ten years ago, disposable income amounted to some $2,400—that much for every man, woman and child. Last year, the per capita figure was $3,954. That's a tremendous rise, more than 62 per cent.

Inflation, of course, took a bite out of this income rise. But it hasn't taken all of it, by any means. During the period, the Labor Department's consumer price index, popularly known as "cost of living", rose 34 per cent.

Considered together, these few statistics give an idea of how living standards have been pushed up—consumers wanting more and having the money to demand it. The remarkable thing about it may not be how much prices have gone up, but how little.

Back to meat, which to so many people means beef. The affluence of the economy has pushed up the per capita consumption of beef from less than 90 pounds to 118 pounds in the last 10 years. In terms of beef, that's a consumption rise from 16-billion pounds to 23-billion pounds—40 per cent.

The big problem with meat prices is that supplies to meet the rising demand cannot be quickly increased. This means that the direction will be up until what might be called "excess" buying is forced out —consumers no longer willing or able to pay.

What's happened to meat is typical of the change that is taking place in the overall inflation picture. From 1969 to last midyear, the big inflationary force was what's called "cost push"—costs, led by labor, pushing prices up.

The trend now is toward the more classic "demand pull" inflation. Here, demand overtakes supply and rising prices become a rationing device in the market place.

Actual shortages will become more of a plague as the boom runs on into the year. We have felt it in fuels, had a taste of it in meat and it's showing in a growing list of industrial raw materials.

This explains Washington speculation that the Nixon Administration's next move will be toward a tightening, not a relaxation of controls.

the Mills program stems from his expert advice by Shultz and Dr. Herbet Stein, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, that no emergency now exists. Stein bluntly informed newsmen last week that the Mills surcharge is now "irrelevant," obviated by successful dollar devaluation. The next day the dollar sank to its lowest point ever.

Moreover, disagreements between the President and the chairman cannot be mediated by even so senior a presidential aide as Peter Flanigan, to whom Mills did not even mention his gold selling and tax forgiveness plans. Nor can George Shultz settle the difference. Only a personal Nixon-Mills meeting, necessarily initiated by the President, will do.

Anything less risks the poisonous non-communication between Wilbur Mills and President Lyndon B. Johnson five years ago, a condition potentially fatal to Mr. Nixon's overall economic policy.

Senator Mullins Might Know Holshouser's Goal

By JOHN KILGO

RALEIGH — The report earlier that Gov. Jim Holshouser might go back before the General Assembly and ask for the repeal of the soft-drink tax and a hike in the tobacco tax, seems to have at least some credence.

Rookie Sen. Mike Mullins of Mecklenburg, a Republican, introduced a bill weeks ago calling for the repeal of the soft-drink tax.

Mullins' proposal came just after Gov. Holshouser gave his tax message to the Legislature, and most people felt the Governor would be against the repeal of the soft-drink tax.

Some Republican legislators certainly felt that way at the time. The Leadership was quick to jump up and say that Mullins' bill was not sanctioned by the GOP, especially since it might be at loggerheads with Gov. Holshouser's program.

Some Republicans were saying at the time that Mullins had killed himself with the bill, and had lost any chance of having a place of leadership in his party.

Looking back, however, it appears Sen. Mullins might have known something about the Governor's desires that other Rebublicans did not.

Criticisms of Mullins for introducing the bill has come to a screeching halt. Some who jumped him originally are now going to vote his way if the opportunity presents iself.

House Speaker Jim Ramsey asked Gov. Holshouser recently if he was going to ask for repeal of the soft-drink tax. The governor; I am told, responded by saying he wanted to keep all his options open.

All talk of repealing the soft-drink tax is coupled with a desire to raise the tax on tobacco. The East is bitterly opposed to that and will fight it to the end.

Anyhow, don't be surprised if Holshouser does make another appearance before the General Assembly in a month or six weeks to ask for the soft-drink tax to be dropped.

That's the rumor around the capital at this time. And Mike Mullins, the freshman Senator from Mecklenburg, is no longer getting icy stares from his fellow Republicans.

Maybe we're misreading the situation, but something definitely appears to be in the wind.

Moves To Restore The Death Penalty In Number Of States

By WILLIAM L. CHAZE
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — At least one Southern legislature— Georgia—has approved a bill reinstating the death penalty and similar measures are pending in other states.

The legislation has drawn fire in almost every case from black groups, civil libertarians and black legislators.

"I think that most blacks feel that the death penalty is aimed at them more than others," said W. C. Patton of the NAACP in Birmingham. "This is based on the record that most of the people sentenced to the electric chair have been black."

But proponents claim the penalty is needed to deter crime. Georgia Senate Majority Leader Eugene Holley of Augusta says the present lack of capital punishment tempts criminals "to kill the witnesses" of their acts.

The death penalty bills have been introduced because the Supreme Court ruled last summer that capital punishment, as it was being imposed, violated the constitutional ban against cruel and unusual punishment. The court found that it has been unevenly applied in state and federal courts.

Many death row prisoners across the South, including those in Georgia, were then resentenced to life and moved into the general prison population.

The Georgia bill, which has passed both houses and awaits Gov. Jimmy Carter's signature, makes substantial changes in the capital punishment statute. The measure requires the State Supreme Court to review automatically all death sentences and broadens the law to include skyjacking as a capital offense.

Rape would become punishable by death only if the victim suffers serious mental or physical injury.

But in almost every case, the death penalty remains a discretionary matter for the jury to decide. Black State Sen. Leroy Johnson said the lack of a provision making death automatic in capital crimes will almost certainly make the bill unconstitutional in the eyes of the Supreme Court.

The North Carolina Supreme Court, ruling in a murder case in January, struck down jury discretion in capital cases. Juries in that state may now determine only guilt or innocence in capital cases. The death penalty, through the court's ruling, became mandatory for first-degree murder, rape, first-degree burglary and arson.

Despite the ruling, the North Carolina legislature is considering a variety of bills dealing with the death penalty. Bills to abolish it also have been filed but such measures were defeated in two previous sessions.

In Mississippi, the House is considering a Senate-passed bill narrowing murder as grounds for the death sentence and adding air piracy as a capital crime.

Under present law, murder is not charged by degree in Mississippi and conviction of any murder, regardless of circumstances, makes the defendant liable for the gas chamber. Capital punishment is left to the discretion of the jury.

But under the new legislation only first-degree murder would carry the death penalty and conviction would make it mandatory. Backers believe the bill will withstand a court challenge because the mandatory nature of the penalty would tend to rule out uneven application.

In neighboring Louisiana, a special state commission has recommended that the penalty be reinstated and that laws be rewritten to accomplish that. "Our interpretation is that the Supreme Court is not barring the death penalty if it is mandatory," said a spokesman. "That is, the penalty must be imposed on both the rich man and the poor man."

A change in Louisiana's law is unlikely before 1974.

The Tennessee legislature is considering a bill that would make the death penalty mandatory for the slaying of policemen and correctional officers. The slaying of armed robbery victims and pirating a plane from Tennessee would be added as grounds.

Many crimes which formerly carried the death penalty are not included in a bill approved by a special study committee of the South Carolina legislature.

A similar bill has been prefiled with the Alabama legislature by State Rep. Robert T. Crowe of Jasper. The legislature opens May 1.

Couple To Talk 'Coffee House'

Harry Allen, chairman of a temporary steering committee for preliminary action to work on establishing a Christian Coffee House and Drug Rehabilitation Center in Greenville, has announced that the period Thursday through Sunday will be unofficially billed as "A Weekend With The Bondurants."

During that period, a young Pompano, Florida couple, Glenn and Barbara Bondurant, will be in Greenville to appear before various groups to talk about the Ichthus-Turning Point, a live-in rehabilitation center program.

The Bondurants, together with a minister, founded the project, a multifaceted approach incorporating an outreach ministry and a residential drug treatment center in 1969.

During the four day period, the Bondurants will speak at church services, meet with church youth groups and other groups in Greenville. Planned activities include Glenn Bondurant speaking at both the 8:45 a.m. and 11:00 a.m. Sunday services at St. James Methodist Church and speaking at 7:30 p.m. at the First Presbyterian Church.

They will also appear on Carolina Today, talk to school groups and hold a rap-counseling session with university students.

This will be the second time the Bondurants will have been in Greenville. They were here last November to tak to interested groups. It was from these talks that the present steering committee evolved to work on forming a program in Greenville.

Allen states that if plans materialize, it is hoped the project, tentatively referred to as The Turning Point will receive support from community churches and interested business and civic leaders. Preliminary plans are for a coffee house as the first phase of a rehabilitation program aimed at helping youth who have drug or other problems.

Cuba Has Fewer Mills For Sugar

MIAMI, Fla. (UPI) — A total of 132 sugar mills will grind cane during Cuba's 1973 sugar harvest, according to a Havana radio broadcast monitored here.

The total is four less than the 136 mills that took part in the 1972 harvest. However, early Cuban radio reports on the 1973 harvest indicate a more optimistic outlook for this year's sugar production, compared with the poor production last year.

N.C. Moose Wind Up Sessions

The North Carolina Moose Association swung into the final day of its Midyear Conference here today with closing sessions scheduled for the Association and for the N. C. Women of the Moose.

Behind them were two days filled with business and social sessions marked by attendance believed to be above that of the annual state conventions.

Friday evening's enrollment of new members was highlighted by personal welcome by Deputy Supreme Secretary William G. Stanley, the official visitor from Mooseheart.

A native of Goldsboro, Stanley was a graduate of the Child City of Mooseheart, and he pointed to Mosseheart and Moosehaven and the work of community service as the three principles on which the fraternity has based its growth in the past and hopes for the future.

Fourteen new members were enrolled into the Greenville lodge at the ceremony, conducted by individual North Carolina ritual champions. The new members are B.H. Bostic Sr., Leonard E. Britt, James E. Carman, Dannie L. Davenport, Norman Paul Jarvis, Pete Jongama, Rufus A. Mayo, Robert B. Miller, Thomas J. O'Neal, Hubert I. Owens, Phillip M. Privette, Eugene C. Smith, J. Eugene Surles and Bobby Gene Whitakers.

Friday's opening session of the Women of the Moose meeting was largely devoted to reports and plans on the $1 million project to build and furnish a health center at Mooseheart. The gathering was told each chapter would be assessed a dollar per member this year and next toward meeting that goal.

The Greenville chapter will hold a card party in April to finance their contribution.

Saturday's meeting for the WOTM was devoted to ritual training, with guidance by the offical visitor, Marie Holden, Director of Chapter Activites.

Moose Association officers, district officers, lodge officers and chairmen attended panel discussions Saturday morning, conducted by State Director Nandor Kozma.

Saturday's formal conference opening that afternoon was devoted largely to district president reports on progress of individual lodges under their jurisdiction.

It was learned that the fraternity's drive for a million members during the 1972-73 year was near its goal, with but 1,270 new members required to attain the target.

Women of the Moose were told the cornerstone on the Mooseheart health center (their project) would be laid during the forthcoming international convention. Sites and dates for executive sessions throughout the state were announced; the Greenville chapter will be going to Havelock on April 8.

Saturday night's social activities featured a party, banquet and dance for members of the Moose Quota Club. A breakfast for competitors in the ritual competition was planned for this morning, and announcement of competition winners was scheduled for this morning's meeting.

Greenville, Havelock, Henderson, Hickory, High Point, Hillsboro, Jacksonville, Kannapolis, Kinston, Leaksville-Spray, Lenoir, Monroe, Mooresville, Morganton, Mount Airy, New Bern, New Garden, Newport, Oak Island, Richlands, Rocky Mount, Roxboro, Salisbury, Sanford.

Death Penalty

RALEIGH (AP) — A House judiciary subcommittee has agreed to recommend that a bill to abolish the death penalty in North Carolina be sent to the House floor for debate and a vote on the issue.

Rep. Gerald Arnold, D-Harnett, said the House Judiciary 2 subcommittee of which he is a member is divided 3-3 on the issue of capital punishment and wants the General Assembly to make a decision first on whether or not to keep the death before it sends out a bill to revamp north carolina's law on capital punishment.

Arnold said the idea would be for the committee to send out with a "without prejudice" report a measure to abolish the death penalty in the state so as to set the stage for a House debate.

Govm't Course

Twenty-one municipal and county government personnel are currently participating in a "Uniform Accounting System for Local Governments" course at Pitt Technical Institute.

Representing five eastern North Carolina counties, the students include city managers, county accountants, and other local government operating personnel. The accounting course is also being conducted in each of the Local Government Commissions other 18 regions.

The uniform accounting system, called the encumbrance system, is being recommended by the Local Government Commission and the Institute of Government. Most of the municipal and county governments represented in the course have a comparable system and need only to make certain modifications in their systems.

According to Jim Fowlkes, instructor for the course, even though the encumbrance accounting method has been a requirement of the North Carolina law, the Fiscal Control Act sets guidelines and enforcement of this method. By attending this course, the participants will have their 1972 budget in accord with the principles of the North Carolina Fiscal Control Act, which becomes effective on July 1, 1973.

Fowlkes has stated that there were three major purposes for initiating the uniform accounting system: (1) to implement the encumbrance system to comply withe encumbrance system to comply with the law requirements; (2) to place additional emphasis on management and more business thinking, resulting in even better use of tax dollars; and, (3) to provide better and more comparable state-wide reporting.

North Carolina already has good, honest local government and is recognized as having the best bond rating in the country, according to Fowlkes. By taking advantage of opportunities such as this course and by working with the Local Government Commission, municipalities and counties make good government even better.

Participation and involvement in the course is voluntary. Each governmental unit has made its own decision to have its personnel enroll in the course.

Lincoln Day Dinner Set

Dixie Greene, chairman of the Pitt County Republican Executive Committee, announced that a First District Lincoln Day Dinner, honoring Sen. Jesse Helms, will be held at the Greenville Moose Lodge on Saturday, March 24, at 7:30 p.m.

Greene said that Helms will be the guest speaker for the occasion.

Pitt County has been allotted 140 tickets at $25 each for the dinner, the chairman reported. He added that a meeting has already been held to finalize attendance plans.

Greene urged persons who wish to attend the dinner to contact him or Herbert W. Lee for tickets.

He asserted that "considering the very strong support that Sen. Helms enjoys in this area, the Lincoln Day Dinner should be a very great occasion and success." He encouraged "all interested persons who desire to get to know the senator to make plans to attend the dinner."

Friday Wrecks

Two traffic accidents Friday caused an estimated $1,150 in damages, but resulted in no injuries, police reported yesterday. Two persons were charged in the accidents.

The first accident occurred at the intersection of Fourth and Summit Streets at approximately 6 p.m. Police reported that cars being driven by Betsie Williams Kielty of Charlotte and Veda Elaine Harbin of 1507 E. Fourth St. collided at the intersection, causing an estimated $200 damage to the Kielty vehicle and $400 damage to the Harbin auto.

Four hours later, police reported an accident at the intersection of Tenth and Evans Streets.

Police charged Raymond Earl House of Rt.1, Grimesland with failure to see safe movement after the car he was driving collided with an auto driven by Mason Aldene Croom of 1410 N Overlook Dr.

Damage to the House auto was set at $350, while damage to the Croom vehicle was $200.

Future Houses May Just Look Like Today's

By DOROTHEA M. BROOKS

NEW YORK (UPI) — Your dream house: what will it look like when you finally get to buy or build it a few years from now?

It's most unlikely to be a plastic bubble or any other "far out" concept. In fact, it probably will look pretty much like those on the scene today.

But it won't be like most of today's houses. The biggest changes in homes will be in building materials.

"Housing design is always evolutionary, never revolutionary," says Byron C. Radaker, president of Certain-teed Products Corp., a major building products manufacturer.

"New building materials are being developed that are more efficient than traditional materials, that are maintenance free and less costly for the homeowner, that lessen environmental pollution and conserve natural resources. Some new products are being made from recycled materials."

It is changes in building technology that will make the biggest difference in homes in the next few years. "That and changes in consumer demand," he said.

Home buyers have been looking for maximum size for the dollars spent, Radaker says. And builders have been giving them just that.

Increasingly, he feels, homebuyers will be looking not just for floor space, but for the best value for dollars spent. This, he says, means a demand for quality and longevity in the products that go into a home.

The home you build or buy in the future is almost certain to have a maintenance-free exterior. It will be extremely well insulated, probably have thermal pane glass and heating and cooling systems designed to conserve energy.

It may have an aerobic sewage disposal system—rather than the often inefficient, polluting septic system, or inadequate municipal system. The treated wastewater will be discharged into the ground as a clear, harmless effluent. You may even use it for irrigating your flower beds and vegetable garden since it retains its nutrients.

Sound Conditioning

A major consideration will be sound conditioning. People are realizing just how detrimental noise can be.

Your house probably will include some building materils made of recycled materials. Even now the paper that carries ashpalt shingles is recycled waste wood, paper and rags. The asphalt is a residue and the rock granule a waste material.

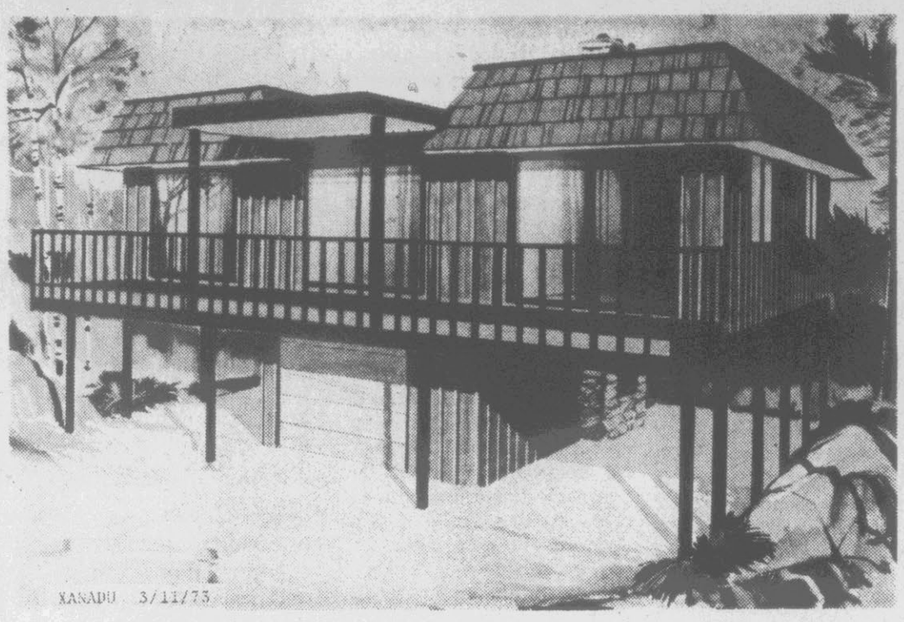

Discussing new products now coming into general use, Radaker cited the many plastics, some of which look more like wood than wood itself, and are being produced at lower cost.

He suggested, for instance, that wooden shutters will become a custom, rather than a stock, item within five years, being replaced in general use by the plastics.

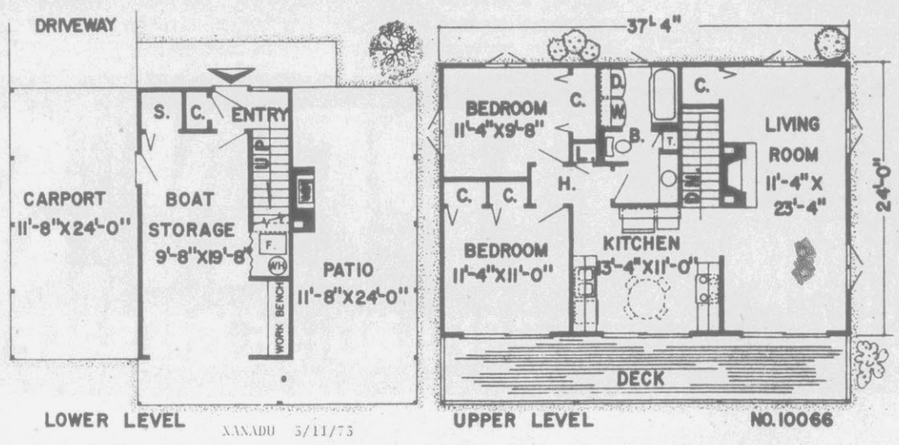

Various types of heavy plastic also will be used for window frames and jambs, as will plastic-wrapped wood, which combines the thermal qualities of wood with the maintenance-free advantages of plastic.

Extruded structural foam is being introduced for molding products and, he said, one of the most exciting new products in home construction in recent years is vinyl siding—a virtually maintenance-free exterior. Although it has been on the market for a few years, its relatively high price has restricted its use as is the case when new products are introduced. It takes demand to bring down prices.

Second Home Designed For The View

A RUSTIC SHELTER — The Xanadu, designed by Associated House Plans, would provide an ideal leisure home in a mountain or lakeside setting. There are two large bedrooms, a large bath, a spacious living room and a kitchen-dining area on the upper level. The boat-storage room, covered patio and utility room comprise the bottom level. There is also a carport and an outside deck across the front.

By GERRY BISHOP

All that's needed to make a leisure home successful is a view.

At least, that's the way it is with the Xanadu designed by Associated House Plans.

This is a two-story with the main living area on top. It should be sited to face a lake or mountain setting to make best use of the outdoor deck along the front.

The architects have devised a rustic exterior. There are cedar shake shingles on a mansard roof and vertical batten board siding which could be stained or allowed to weather.

Another asset is the sheltered patio which can be used in rainy weather. It is covered by part of the second floor and has a barbecue grill.

This model has been designed so it can be lived in year-round, if desirable. The drawings show insulation in all exterior walls, ceilings and floor areas.

If it is to be strictly a warm-weather home, the Xanadu can be built without insulation.

The main living area is located on the upper level to take advantage of the view. There are two large bedrooms, a kitchen-dining area, an extra large living room and a very large bathroom.

The kitchen has a built-in range, double sink, refrigerator, dishwasher and cabinets. There's space for a table in front of the large window-door.

The bathroom is extra large, has a vanity and space is provided for a washer and dryer.

The bedrooms' dimensions are large and each has lots of closet space.

A boat-storage area, storage closet, coat closet and utility closet for the furnace and water heater make up the lower level.

There's also a work bench in the boat-storage area to accommodate the man of the house.

The carport opens to the rear, which would be ideal for a lakeside cottage. However, the entrance could be at the front, if necessary.

For maximum economy, gypsum board is used on walls and ceilings and vinyl tile is specified for the floors. These materials could be changed by the builder, of course. Standard-size wood casement windows are used.

The Xanadu provides more than 2,000 square feet of living area, including 898 square feet on the upper level and 336 square feet on the lower floor. The patio contains 328 square feet, the carport 281 square feet and the deck 224 square feet.

Energy Waste In Poor Insulation

NEW YORK (UPI) —Because of poor insulation, the typical American home is a "conspicuous and uncontrolled consumer of energy," according to C.E. Peck, vice president of Owens-Corning Fiberglass Corporation.

"Important amounts of the nation's dwindling energy resources are literally escaping through the roofs and walls of the average home," said Peck.

The National Bureau of Standards, he noted, reports that proper insulation and construction practices in residential and commercial buildings could reduce the nation's total heating and cooling requirements by 40 to 50 per cent.

Super Glass On The Way

NEW YORK (UPI) — A technology is being developed for making super-strong glass.

Richard L. Cheney, a consultant to the Glass Container Manufacturers Institute, said in a talk accepting the glass industry's Phoenix Award, that glass fibers have been produced with "five times the strength of the best steel."

Technology, he said, is showing the way to chemically and thermally temper such items as glass windows and doors to increase their strength four to 10 times.

"Another process, known as 'ion exchange' is nearing commercial testing in the glass container industry," Cheney said. "It should out-perform other tempering methods."

"We have the promise of glass articles, of many kinds and shapes, including bottles and jars, that will be very much stronger than any we have ever known," he said. "And they will be lighter than ever before because it will be possible to make them of thinner glass.

Here's How To Do It

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — About a year or so ago, you told a reader how to locate studs in a wall. I didn't pay too much attention to it at the time, but now I have a project that requires that I discover where the studs are. Can you help me?

A. — You didn't give enough information for a precise answer. Here are some facts covering various contigencies. Not only should you be able to find that portion which covers your case, but the additional data may be of help to others with slightly different problems. Studs are usually spaced on 16-inch centers; that is, 16 inches from the center of one stud to the next. But there are variations on this. In some cases, for example, the studs are 24 inches apart. However, once you have determined how far apart two studs are, you may be able to find the remainder simply by measuring.

With many walls, knocking on them with the heel of your clenched fist will reveal the presence of the studs. When you rap your fist on the wall, you will get either a hollow or a solid sound. A hollow sound means you are knocking between studs; a solid one tells you a stud is underneath. If a wall is paneled, a close examination may reveal the presence of tiny nail heads in a vertical line, which tells you the stud is there. But if the paneling was applied only with an adhesive, this won't do any good. Sometimes the nails are there but have been covered up, in which case you will be able to locate them with an inexpensive stud finder. A magnetized needle moves when the finder is passed over a nail.

If the wall you are working on is to be covered with a new material or anything else, there won't be any harm in making a few holes in the old surface. Drill a hole where you think a stud might be. If the drill bit goes through quickly, it's between studs. If it hits solid wood, you have located a stud.

When you find a lumber yard whose owners or employes take the time and trouble to assist you in your purchases — via advice as well as selection — hang on to it. Your loyalty will be amply rewarded by the money you save in the proper choice of materials.

A novice lumber buyer is understandably confused by the many kinds of wood as well as the different grades of quality. The trick is to choose the least expensive grade that will do the job well.

Until you have mastered the technique of buying lumber properly, don't hesitate to tell the dealer what the wood will be used for and where it will be used. You'll get a lot more attention if you can do your shopping on a weekday rather than a weekend.

One of the first and perhaps surprising things you find out about lumber is that the sizes are not as stated. A 2 by 4 isn't 2 inches by 4 inches; it's 1½ inches by 3½ inches. A 1 by 6 isn't 1 inch by 6 inches; it's ¾ths of an inch by 5½ inches. Why? Because the 2 by 4 was that size before it was planed and dried. If it's green lumber — that is, unseasoned lumber — it will be considerably closer to the original size.

Before September 1970, the dimensions of softwood lumber (most commonly used for studs, joists, posts, sheathing, shingles and siding) were even more confusing. Then, when you bought a 2 by 4, you couldn't be sure exactly what size it would be, since it depended on how much of the moisture had been removed from it during seasoning, if any. Now, a 2 by 4 that is 1½ inches by 3½ inches has less than 19 per cent moisture and is marked S-Dry.

The matter of moisture content is important, because too much moisture, as in the case of green lumber, means that the wood will shrink later, causing warpage, nail popping and other difficulties.

Softwoods, by the way, come from coniferous or needle-bearing trees such as pines, firs, hemlocks, cedars, redwoods and spruces. Hardwoods, used mostly for fine furniture, floors and interior finishing, come from broadleafed trees, such as maples, oaks, walnuts, poplars and the like. While hardwoods are generally harder than softwoods, there are a few exceptions.

There are so many classifications for lumber that it would be impossible to list them all here and would only serve to complicate the task of the buyer. You'll learn as you go along. As a starter, remember that board lumber — up to 1 inch thick and 2 inches or more in width — is divided into Select and Common categories. Within these classifications are different grades indicating quality. Light framing lumber — 2 inches or more in thickness and from 2 to 4 inches in width — comes in Construction, Standard, Utility and Economy grades.

Since all lumber yards do not carry all grades, following the previously mentioned practice of getting advice from the dealer will enable you to gain a gradual knowledge of the different kinds that are available. In time, you will be able to walk into a lumber yard and ask for exactly what you want and know exactly what you get. (Do-it-yourselfers will get valuable assistance from Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," available by sending $1 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J. 07666.)

The Garden Clinic

N.C. State University Answers Timely Gardening Questions

Q. Is there a fertilizer that has crabgrass killer in it? (Mrs. W.P., Knightdale)

A. Yes. A number of lawn products contain both fertilizer and pre-emergence crabgrass killer. Be sure to apply at the proper rate suggested on the product label. Apply by March 15 in the Coastal Plain and ny April 10 in the Mountains. Use a push type drop spreader or cyclone spreader. The fertilizer will supply only a portion of the total need four your lawn. (W.M. Lewis, extension agronomist)

Q. Can pittosporum be rooted from a cutting? (C.C., Goldsboro)

A. You can root tip cutting of tender pittosporum growth. Take these in the spring or early summer, after new growth reached 4-6 inches long. Place cutting in a mixture of half builders sand and half garden soil. Keep moist. (Henry J. Smith, extension horticulturist)

Q. How often should a small home planting of strawberries be renewed? Mrs. A.P., Winston-Salem)

A. Most commercial growers let their strawberry plants fruit for two years and then start over. You can keep them in production longer if you can control diseases, especially root diseases. When you start over, move to a new location and fumigate. (Joe Brooks, extension horticulturist)

Q. I have a pine tree that is growing spindly and needs trimming to make it bush out more. Is there any special system involved in this type of trimming? (E.G., Snow Hill)

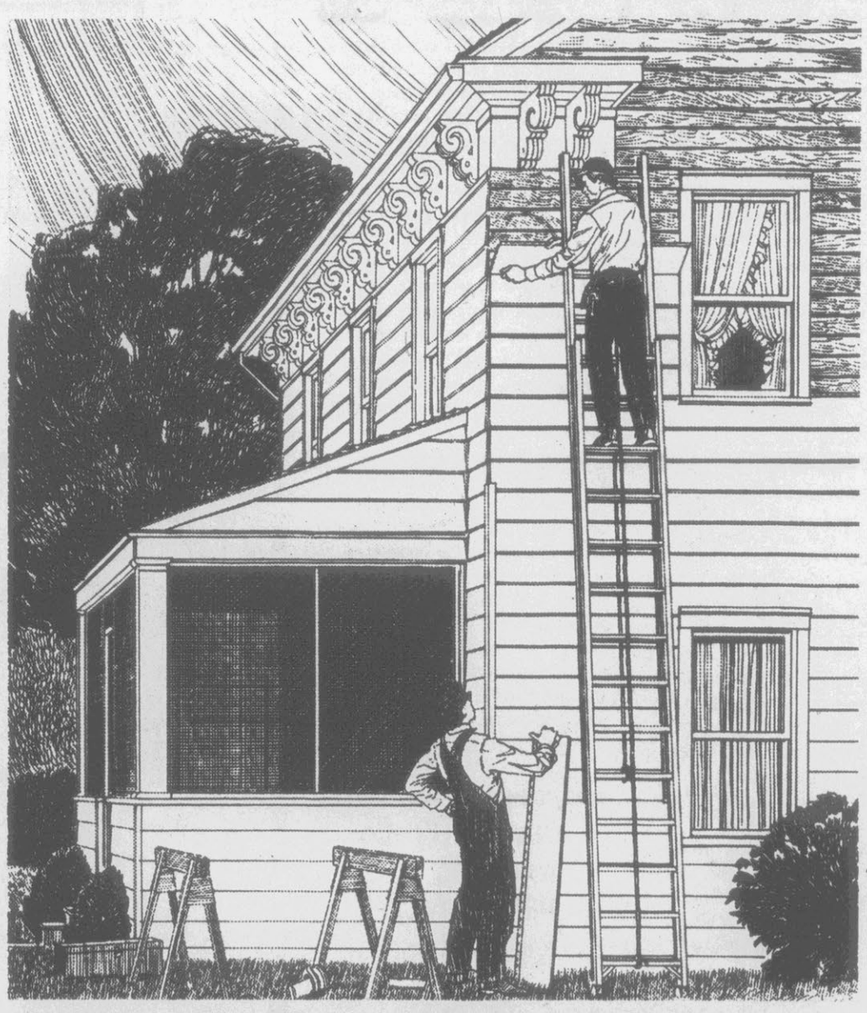

A. The ideal way is to pinch off, or cut, part of the new "candle" growth in the spring. This is the tender shoot which appears at the tip of the branch. This growth extends from the buds at the beginning of the growing season. Yearly pruning of this type helps to maintain a compact growth habit. (Henry J. Smith, extension horticulturist)

Trees Increase Sales Appeal

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (UPI) — Trees increase the value and sales appeal of homes, according to Dr. William Welch, landscape horticulturist for Texas A&M University's agricultural extension service.

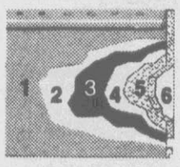

Welch says real estate people tell him beautiful, well-placed trees are a prime selling factor, especially in older homes.

"A tree is a living investment that increases in value continually if properly selected, placed and cared for," Welch says.

MACBETH—One of William Shakespeare's bloodier concoctions, "MacBeth" is an exciting look into the mind of Lady MacBeth. In a hangup on getting her husband on the throne, Lady MacBeth concerts with a group of witches who mumble over psychedelic broths in a cave-pad. Before the action is over, lots of dead bodies are scattered over meadow and castle floor, and Lady MacBeth wrings her bloody hands, crying "out damned spot." By this time, however, all the king's horses and all the psychiatrists of the kingdom couldn't do much for her state of mind. (G) Special prices will be offered to student groups. New Albums Of Ethel Waters

By WILLIAM D. LAFFLER

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ethel Waters came into prominence at a time when it was almost impossible for a black artist to achieve critical recognition in a white-dominated show business.

But Miss Waters was not an ordinary singer or person. She not only had talent but determination and in 1973 she became a star in "As Thousands Cheer," an all-white Broadway musical.

She had previously won acclaim for introducing "Dinah" and "Stormy Weather," two tunes which now are regarded as popular classics.

Miss Waters recorded numerous songs during the early stages of her career but not as many as would be hoped for. Thirty-two of them are now available on an excellent twoLP album "Ethel Waters Greatest Years" (Columbia KG 31571).

Although "Dinah" and "Stormy Weather" as well as another great Waters song, "Taking a Chance on Love," are not included in this collection, the selections include "Sweet Georgia Brown," "True Blue Lou," "Come Up and See Me Sometime" and "Waiting at the End of the Road."

This album is exceptionally noteworthy because of the artists who backed up Miss Waters. For instance, Fletcher Henderson may be heard on piano on "I've Found a New Baby." James P. Johnson is the piano soloist on "Lonesome Swallow." Tommy Dorsey and Benny Goodman support Miss Waters on "You Brought a New Kind of Love to Me."

These recordings were made before the hi-fi and stereo eras so it is not the best sound but the artistry of Ethel Waters and her musical friends overcome the technical drawbacks.

Dinah died at the age of 39 but she left a valuable legacy of songs. Twenty of them may be heard on "Dinah Washington Immortal" (Roulette RE-125).

While Dinah was known primarily as a blues singer, she could distinguish herself on almost any tune. This selection ranges from such fine songs as "That's My Desire" and "My Devotion" to the bouncier "Somebody Else is Taking My Place" and "Red Sails in the Sunset." One of the songs which stresses the gentle nature of Miss Washington's voice is "That Sunday, That Summer."

'Irene' Revisiting Broadway Theater

By JACK GAVER
UPI Drama Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — When a fortyish mother and her 16-year-old daughter make their Broadway stage debuts in the same show, that's no generation gap—that's a gasp!

This unlikely event occurs Tuesday night (13th) at the new Minskoff Theater in the heart of Times Square when a revival of 1919's "Irene" musical has the name of Debbie Reynolds in marquee lights over the title.

Once inside, you can scan the program and find in the small print the name of Carrie Fisher, one of the chorus and a fairly reasonable facsimile of the star of some 30 motion pictures, a television series and her own elaborate variety show in which she has been appearing for a few months annually in Las Vegas night clubs and various theaters for 10 years.

"Professional performing is nothing new for Carrie," Miss Reynolds said in an interview. "She has been appearing in my stage show since she was 13. She has a fine singing voice, and she dances well."

Eddie Fisher's Daughter

Carrie's singing ability should come as no surprise—she is the daughter of Miss Reynolds' ex-husband, singing star Eddie Fisher. While Miss Reynolds sings acceptably enough, she does not regard this as her dominant asset as a performer.

Why did Miss Reynolds wait so long to come to grips with the challenging problems of a Broadway musical (and, boy, were there problems!)?

"Primarily because I had two children growing up," the star explained. "I could make movies and recordings and play in nearby Las Vegas and handle a television series without being away from them.

"Now, they are well on the way to being adults. Also, there was the matter of being offered a show that I felt might be right for me. That happened over a year ago when Harry Rigby brought me his conception of a revival of 'Irene.' I felt that this was it and now was the time."

The second child is a 14-year-old son, Todd Fisher.

"He plays guitar rather well," his mother said, "and he likes to accompany his sister when she sings, but he has no show business ambitions. He likes scientific things, working with his hands."

Tryout Troubles

As for the problems of "Irene," they were not unique for a big musical—the record is full of the tryout tour troubles of many a subsequent hit. But those new seats at the Minskoff gathered a bit of dust awaiting the premier, which originally was scheduled for the Jan. 28 and was postponed a couple of times while the musical was given more road work.

A major player, Billy De Wolfe, departed before the original test began in Toronto Nov. 27, reportedly on the advice of his physician that he was not up to the physical demands of the role. A stage stalwart, George S. Irving, took over.

Some Toronto playgoers expressed much unhappiness because Miss Reynolds had voice trouble for a couple of performances, and director Sir John Gielgud had to read her dialogue and song lines.

On to Philadelphia. Sir John was released by co-producer Rigby with the explanation that the noted English actor and director, who had never had anything to do with a musical before, had television commitments back home. Frankly, the hiring of the prestigious Gielgud was a mistake of the producers.

Rumors of Temperament

In came Gower Champion, an old friend of Miss Reynolds and a proven magician in the staging of musicals. Revisions, more time needed; a Washington, D.C., engagement added to the tour (and get some nice words from "critic" President Nixon).

There have been rumors of star temperament along the way that no one has fleshed out. But it is known that Miss Reynolds is a perfectionist, that she has had much to say in the making of many of her movies and of her television series and has had total control in her personal appearances shows.

Why is a revised "Irene" at hand? The key is the huge success of the recently closed long-run revival of 1925's, "No, No, Nanette," which made a mint. And the key was turned by Mrs. James Montgomery, widow of the librettist of the original "Irene," one of the most successful stage writers for a couple of decades before 1930.

Mrs. Montgomery knew co-producer Rigby and his fascination with old musicals. He inspired the "No, No, Nanette" revival and was ousted, with a settlement, by his female moneybags co-producer because she didn't like the cut of his jib, or something. Mrs. Montgomery got in touch with Rigby.

"It wasn't a matter of making money," Mrs. Montgomery said. "My husband and I never had any money problems. But I felt that, with this current trend toward nostalgia, it would be nice if one of his works could be brought to the attention of a public that never knew it or him."

From Sheppard Memorial Library

By HELEN PARKER

"That was a falsehood, Obadian," said Father, when Obadiah told the family how a great big wolf almost ate him up in Easton's stable. "There are no wolves in Nantucket." And Mother made him write "God help me to be truthful" ten times, and threatened to make him stay home from the sheep-shearing squantum.

But all the Starbucks, including Obdian, did go to the shearing, along with everyone else on Nantucket. THE ADVENTURES OF OBADIAH were full of laughter and fun all day; the bustle of the shearing tent; a picnic of steamed clams, chicken, and strawberry tarts; and trinkets to buy. And then Obadiah had a read adventure, more fanciful than any of the stories he made up, and nobody believed him.

Brinton Turkle has written and illustrated two earlier books about Obadian, a very real little boy, glowing with the crowds and excitement of one of the island's most colorful events, take Obadiah from home and village into the life and landscape of the island itself.

When he gets up in the morning, Javaka Shatu feels that today he is going to have the most fun he ever had. It is his eighth birthday and everyone in the farming community of Yoruba is coming to join in the celebration.

Javaka is the first born in Yoruba, and what a celebration they have for him! Everybody is dancing and singing. There are steel drums and bongos and horns, and the table is loaded down with delicious food and cold drinks.

In BIRTHDAY, John Steptoe turns his brilliant talents to a vibrant expression of the intimacy and warmth of life in a fantasied rural Black community. Young readers—whether they live in a city or in the country—will share the exuberant joy of Javaka's happiest day.

Want to play a game?
You Hide.
I will find you.
Okay?

Okay! But wait! Why is she running this way when I'm going that way? And where did that big floppy dog come from? Is he playing too?

Teaching a younger sister to play hide-and-seek can be very confusing. All the hilarious funn is caught in Crosby Bonsall's THE DAY I HAD TO PLAY WITH MY SISTER. This Early I Can Read Book is one that children will laugh with and love.

L.A. Printmaking Exhibit On View

Another of the traveling shows that have provided local residents with an opportunity to view the work of artists outside the Greenville area is now on view at the Kate Lewis Gallery in Whichard Building on campus at East Carolina University.

The current show, which will be on view for the remainder of March, is a collection of prints by 38 members of one of the nation's early print making groups, the Los Angeles Printmaking Society.

In this west coast traveling package, prints included cover a wide range of printmaking techniques — etching, serigraphy, acquainting, collagraphy, silkscreening, intaglio. Some are in black and white, others in somber colors, and a few have touches of brighter colors.

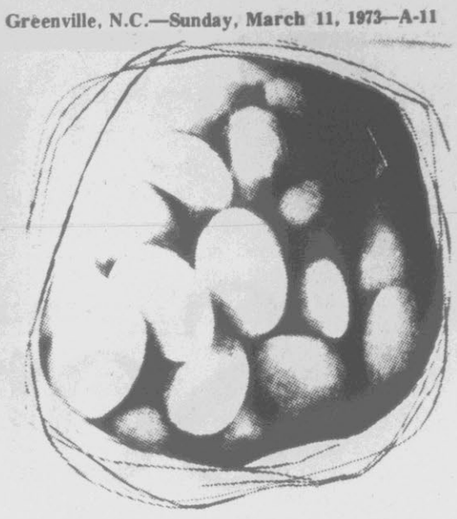

A faculty member of the School of Art at ECU notes that the Los Angeles Printmaking Society is one of the first that was established in the early 60s when printmaking came into its own in America. He also noted that this society is an offshoot of the first and largest of print workshops, the Tamarind

There is considerable variation not only in techniques, but in styles employed by various artists exhibiting in the group of prints now at the Kate Lewis Gallery, ... from abstracted works to traditional figurative work to ones that are decorative.

The show, as most traveling shows do, suffers from the necessary uniformity in size of the prints (or at least the mats). And once again, it seems appropriate to register the same protest — trying to view prints or drawings through reflective covering of plastic leaves something to be desired.

New Mushroom Show

Two student artist from East Carolina University Gallery will have a two-man show opening at the Mushroom Gallery beginning tomorrow.

Douglas (Doug) Helms of Monroe and Carl (Cappy) Peverall of Winston-Salem, are exhibiting recent work for a period of one week only at the gallery in Georgetown Shopping Center.

Helms, a recent veteran of four years service in the Navy, is a senior, and has a double major, in commercial art and ceramics. In this exhibit, he shows pencil drawings and a few pieces of porcelain. The drawings, he states, "are somewhat abstracted. In these I've tried to create a feeling, an atmosphere." Married and the father of one year old son, Helms has exhibited at Studio 3 in Monroe. During his Navy years, he served on a destroyer and was a photographer who also did lay-out work.

Sophomore Peverall majors in ceramics. Of his current work, the bachelor student says "I'm interested at this particular point in clay textures and glazed surfaces. Most of the pieces I'm showing in this show are stoneware." He has confined his selection for the Mushroom exhibit to all clay pieces.

Both young artists currently have ceramic pieces that have been accepted for the 10 Annual Piedmont Craft Exhibition, now on view at the Mint Museum of Art in Charlotte. This highly competitive annual draws a large number of entries from student and professional artists from 11 southeastern states. They have also both exhibited at the Greenville Art Center, and Peverall was represented in the Carolina Designers Craftsman Fair held in Raleigh.

This fine small show should be seen during the brief period it will be on view in the Mushroom Galllery.. Gallery hours are 11:00 a.m. until 7:00 p.m. daily.

Pirates Capture Opener Over Virginia

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

After four delays, the East Carolina University baseball Pirates finally got their 1973 season underway Saturday afternoon, and it proved to be a good opening.

Sparked by fine pitching and some timely hitting, the Bucs rolled to a 5-2 victory over the University of Virginia. Tommy Toms, scratched for two hits in the first inning, pitched four shutout innings before finally giving way to Dave LaRussa and later Glenn Forbes in a planned short outing for all.

Both of the Virginia runs came off LaRussa, one on a homer. East Carolina, meanwhile, banged out three extra base hits, one homer by Ron Leggett and the other two triples by Larry Walters and Jimmy Paige.

Although he gave up two hits in the first inning with one out, Toms pitched his way out of the inning, getting the third batter on a roller to third that held the runner there, and then whiffing the fifth man he faced. In the next three innings, Toms saw only one other runner reach him, when he passed a man to first in the third.

During his stint, the Buc fanned four.

LaRussa, who came on in the fifth, was tagged for the two runs, as he was clipped for long balls by the first two batters. A double and a single brought around the second Cavalier run in the next frame. Forbes, finishing out the final two innings, gave up two hits and struck out one.

At the plate, no one Pirate got more than one hit, but those they did get came at the right times, although, as has been ture in the last few years, they left a lot of men standing, including three in the first inning.

After Toms had gotten out of his jam in the top of the first, his teammates went to work to stake him to a lead. Mike Bradshaw opened the first Buc inning with a walk and Paige followed him aborad the same way. Walters then laced a ball to deep center, over the headof the racing defender, easily scoring Bradshaw from second. Paige, trying to come all the way from first, was thrown out, however, as Walters pulled easily into third. John Narron followed with a single to right, scoring Walters for a 2-0 lead. Narron went down on Ron Staggs infield grounder, and Mike Hogan and Leggett both walked to load them up, but a strikeout ended the frame.

In the second, the Bucs picked up another run. With two away, Paige walked and then stole second. Walters hit what looked like an easy grounder to third, but the ball bounced out of the first baseman's glove on the throw, leaving him safe as Paige sped home, and the Bucs held a 3-0 lead.

Paige tripled with one out in the fourth, but died there as a popup and a strikeout ended that threat.

But the Bucs came right back with two revenge runs. With one down, Hogan singled to center and Leggett responded with a high fly that just carried the fence near the left field foul line, upping the Buc lead to 5-1.

State Nips Maryland For ACC Crown

By KEN ALYTA
Associated Press Sports Writer

GREENSBORO, N. C. (AP)—Sophomore David Thompson delivered two free throws with nine seconds to play, clinching unbeaten North Carolina State's 27th victory, 76-74, over NCAA-bound Maryland in the finals of the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball tournament Saturday night.

Thompson, shackled by three personal fouls in a scoreles first half, ignited a 22-8 Wolfpack outburst over six minutes in the last half, scoring all four of his baskets in that span.

The rally shot Coach Norman Sloan's team ahead 62-52 with 10 minutes to play. Maryland never caught up but the Terps mounted a late charge of their own and the issue was in doubt down to the final buzzer of the fiercely contested game.

It was the final contest of the season for N. C. State, the nation's No. 2 team, and only the second in ACC history to go through a season unbeaten.

State is on one-year probation because of alleged basketball recruiting irregularities and is not elligible for the NCAA tournament.

Tenth-ranked Maryland had clinched the NCAA berth by advancing to the finals

Coach Lefty Driesell's Terrapins, now 22-6, will play Syracuse in the Eastern Regionals semifinals Thursday night at Charlotte, N. C.

Conference basketball coaches voted the outstanding tournament player award to Tommy Burleson, State's 7-4 Olympian. He led the team with 14 points, collected 14 rebounds and blocked several shots in one of his finest efforts of the season.

Maryland, which trounced Syracuse 90-76 in the finals of the Terps' December tournament, was led by Tom McMillen, who scored 24 points, and freshman John Lucas, who tallied 21.

Rebounding star Len Elmore was held out of the game by Driesell, who said the 6-9 junior could have played but Driesell decided to give him additional time to rest his injured right foot before going into the national tournament.

Elmore played his first game in two weeks Friday night and played a vital part in the semi-final victory over Wake Forest.

Driesell started two reserves, rangy sophomore Tom Roy and backcourter Howard White. Roy, who had played only five minutes in the first two tournament games, went 36 against State, scoring 11 points and grabbing 12 rebounds.

Thompson, held to his lowest scoring total of the season, had only 10 points in 30 minutes. But he grabbed nine rebounds, eight in the last half, and provided the spark that inspired his teammates when Maryland menaced their dreams of an unbeaten season.

Scoring heroes were plentiful for State as it won its seventh conference championship.

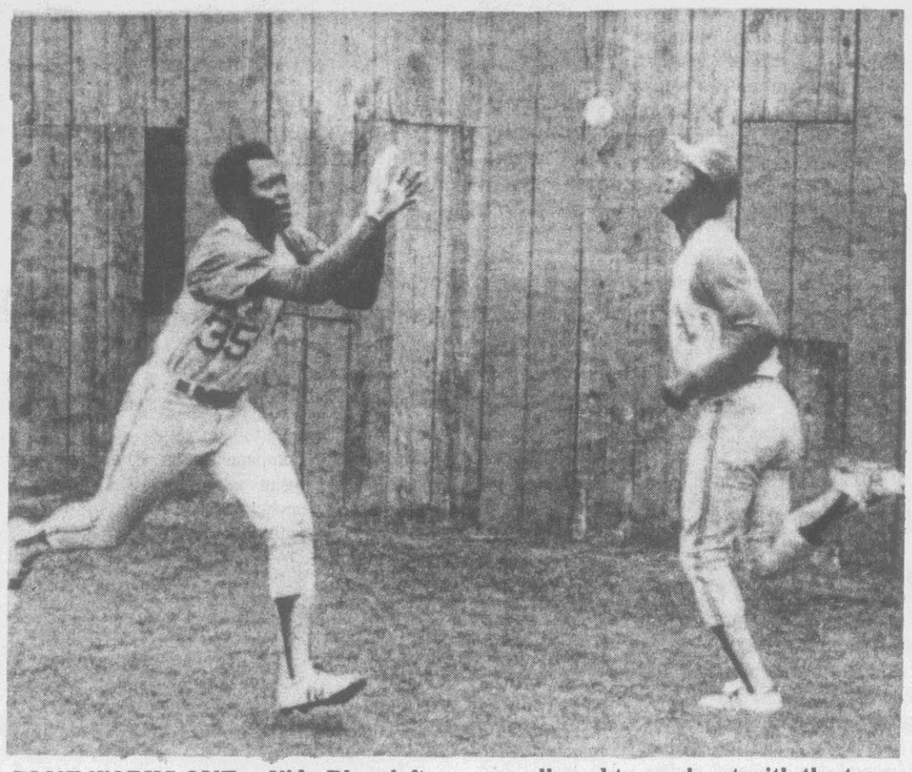

Seniors Joe Cafferky, with 12 points, and Rick Holdt, with 10, played vital roles. The Wolfpack bench also delivered. Steve Nuce pumped in six important baskets and Mark Moeller contributed four.

The score was tied seven times in the early going before State swept to a six-point lead. Maryland made it 32-all at the half on a McMillen basket that just beat the buzzer.

Maryland had taken a 44-40 lead when Thompson went on his rampage at the 16-minute mark of the last half.

Bucs Opening Spring Football Drills Monday

East Carolina University opens spring football drills Monday afternoon, as Coach Sonny Randle begins preparations for his third year as head coach of the Pirates.

Randle and his staff will welcome some 90 football players out for the drills, which will continue through April 14. Among the work to be accomplished during the spring will be the acclimation of three new assistant coaches, Warren Klawiter, Frank Novac and Larry Vander Heyden.

And the Bucs will also have to come up with six new starters to replace those lost by graduation. Only seven lettermen were lost from the team, including center Jimmy Creech, wide receiver Tim Dameron, running back Les Strayhorn, and defensive backs Jim Post, Kirk Doll and Terry Stoughton, along with reserve Terry Cumberworth.

One other Buc will also miss spring drills. Wide reciever Vic Wilfore is presently serving six months active duty in the Army, but will return in time for the season next fall.

"All six spots are critical," Randle said. "But we are certainly looking for someone to step in for Creech." The coach noted that there are several candidates for the job. They include LeBaron Caruthers, switched from a tackle spot, Wilton Bunn, Ned Cheely, David Lowe and John Grinnel.

Another tough job to fill will be that vacated by Les Strayhorn, a running back who led the blocking for Carlester Crumpler to set new Southern Conference records. "The new man won't necessarily block as much as Les did," Randle said. Top candidates include Jimm Howe, Don Schink, Al Boudreau and Ken Strayhorn, Les' brother.

As far as offense and defense are concerned, there won't be much new to learn for the players. "We are going to add a few new wrinkles," Randle said, "but basically we'll use the same thing that we have."

Besides looking for people to fill the vacated spots, the Pirate staff will be also looking for a definite candidate for the number two quarterback slot. Last year, Carl Summerell handled the quarterback spot all year until injured against North Carolina in the final game. Summerell returns to the number one spot, but finding a backup man for him that can step right in will be one of the big jobs.

Both Crumpler and Summerell have recovered from late-season injuries, but Randle emphasized that both would be handled with kind gloves during the drills. "We don't want to get them hurt at all," he said.

The Pirates will work each Monday, Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday, with scrimmages each Saturday, during the next few weeks. Drills will culiminate with the annual Varsity-Alumni game at 7:30 p.m. on April 14 in Ficklen Stadium.

Southwest Louisiana; South Carolina In Wins

By ROBERT MOORE
Associated Press Sports Writer

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Kevin Joyce and Danny Traylor broke open a close game with a late flurry that brought South Carolina a 78-70 first-round NCAA Midwest basketball playoff victory over Texas Tech Saturday.

Dwight Lamar and Roy Ebron displayed hot hands in the opener, firing 14th-ranked Southwestern Louisiana to a 102-89 upset over seventh-ranked Houston in a nationally televised game.

The victories put Southwestern Louisiana into the March 15 second round at Houston against Big Eight champion Kansas State and South Carolina against Missouri Valley Conference king Memphis State.

Neither South Carolina nor Texas Tech led by more than five points in the second half until Traylor's layup put the independent Gamecocks ahead of the Texans, 64-58, with 5½ minutes remaining.

Rick Bullock tried desperately to rally the Red Raiders, champions of the Southwest Conference. He made Tech's next six points but the Gamecocks held a 70-64 advantage with exactly three minutes showing on the clock.

Joyce finally sealed the Red Raiders' doom with four free throws and a field goal, the last boosting South Carolina's margin to 10 points at 74-64 in the final two minutes.

Joyce copped scoring honors with 21 points, and Bullock finished with 19 to lead Tech. Traylor added 16 for the winners.

The Gamecocks now take a 21-6 record to Houston; Tech bows out at 19-7.

Ebron, Lamar and Jerry Bisbano combined to break the game open with an eight-point surge after Houston had crept to within one point with less than 13 minutes remaining.

Ebron's barrage of four straight baskets shortly after intermission had boosted the Cajuns into a 13-point lead. But Southwestern, baffled by a full-court press, saw that advantage wilt to one point before Lamar, Ebron and Bisbano went on their eight-point splurge that gave the Cajuns a 70-61 cushion.

Southwestern Louisiana then surged into an 80-69 lead and Houston was not closer than nine the rest of the way.

Lamar led all scorers with 35 points and Ebron had 23, 19 in the second half. Dunbar paced Houston with 27.

East Carolina Women Nail Regional Title

LEXINGTON, Ky. — The East Carolina University women's basketball team rolled to three victories Friday and Saturday to gain the Region II championship and a berth in the National Women's Basketball Tournament starting March 23 in New York.

East Carolinas' lassies downed the University of South Carolina, 73-65 in the finals of the tournament, after sneaking past defending champion Tennessee Tech, 60-58, in the semi-finals. They beat Madison, Va., in the first round, 64-46, to open the tournament.

In the opening game, East Carolina put through the first six points and rolled up a 22-8 lead by the end of the second period. The slowed down in the second frame but still led at the half, 27-17.

They pulled away again in the third quarter, running their lead out to as much as 26 points.

Sheilah Cotten, who led the scoring in all three games, dumped in 20 points in the opener, including eight for eight at the line. Susan James added 10 points and nine rebounds.

In the semifinals, East Carolina had their worst scare. Tennessee Tech opened up an 18-9 lead at the end of the first period, but the Lady Pirates cut it back to just 32-28 at halftime. They finally took the lead with some two minutes left when Miss Cotten stole the ball and started the Bucs to the eventual win.

She finished the game with 26 points, including 11 of 18 field goals, and also pulled in 13 rebounds. The team hit 53 per cent from the floor in the game.

Then, to top it off, East Carolina led most of the way in downing South Carolina. The held a slim 17-16 lead at the end of the first period, but fell behind at 34-33 at halftime.

In the second half, however, East Carolina pulled back and led by as much as 12 points at 56-44.

Again, Miss Cotten was the leader, hitting 13 of 24 field goal attempts and a total of 31 points. Jean Mobley added 14 points.

The Nationals, the next stop for the team, will be held at Queens College, starting March 23.

Trevino Holds Lead In Doral

By BOB GREEN
Associated Press Golf Writer

MIAMI (AP) — Lee Trevino managed only a 71 but clung to an impressive four-stroke lead as a double-bogey blunted Dave Hill's charge Saturday in the third round of the $150,000 Doral-Eastern Open Golf Tournament.

Trevino, winner of the rich Jackie Gleason tournament just two weeks ago, had a 54-hole total of 205—11 under par on the 7,065-yard Blue Monster course at the Doral Country Club.

The controversial Hill, who crept within one stroke of Trevino before hitting the water on No. 14, took over second place with a 70-209.

One more stroke back at 210 were Tom Weiskopf, Rod Curl and little Buddy Allin, winner of last week's Citrus Open. Weiskopf and Allin matched 70s in the bright, warm sunshine and Curl had 72.

In contention at 211 were Jerry Heard, Homero Blancas and Jerry McGee. Heard had a three-under-par 69, Blancas and McGee 71 each.

Defending champion Jack Nicklaus, who needed a good round to get in position against the front-running Trevino, couldn't get it going. The Golden Bear finished bogey-bogey for a 73 and was a distant 11 strokes off the pace going into the last round of this chase for a $30,000 first prize.

New Home

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — The Yale Corp. has approved the use of the 70,000-seat Yale Bowl for the New York Giants professional football team for the next two seasons, the university announced Saturday.

"The trustees view with favor the leasing of the bowl for this purpose, provided the City of New Haven and the City of West Haven want this to happen," the official statement said.

Penn Wins

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Penn's Ivy League basketball champions blew a nine-point lead but came from behind in the last two minutes on baskets by sophomores John Jablonski and John Beecroft for a 62-61 upset victory over 17th-ranked St. John's, N.Y. Saturday night in an NCAA Eastern Regional first-round game.

Long Beach, Sun Devils Advance

By LARRY KURTZ
Associated Press Sports Writer

LOGAN, Utah (AP) — Arizona State, deadly from the outside and tough under the boards, crushed undisciplined Oklahoma City 103-78 in a first-round NCAA college basketball playoff game Saturday.

Long Beach State watched a 10-point lead vanish, but finally shook off pesky Weber State 88-75 in the first game of a televised doubleheader.

The results put Arizona State against top-ranked UCLA and fourth-ranked Long Beach State against San Francisco in next week's Western regional finals at Los Angeles.

Balanced and patterned, Western Athletic Conference champion Arizona State scored on wide-open shots from all over the floor in a game that was close only during the first half. Oklahoma City, meanwhile, relied primarily on long-distance tries by Ozie Edwards and Marvin Rich.

Edwards and Rich both scored well, but independent Oklahoma City paid heavily for its loose attack. Arizona State grabbed numerous uncontested rebounds and scored well on fast break passes.

Arizona State rode the hot outside shooting of guards Jim Owens and Mike Contreras to a 46-43 halftime lead and pulled away in the second half.

Edwards led all scorers with 31. Contreras had 21 for Arizona State.

While Owens and Contreras fired in 22 long-range points in the first half, 6-11 Ron Kennedy and 6-9 Mark Wasley played aggressive defensive ball under both backboards. Oklahoma City seldom got a chance to convert a missed attempt from outside.

By the time Arizona State built its lead to 15, most of the sparse crowd of 6,706 had left.

Arizona State improved its record to 19-7 while Oklahoma City, which in Edwards and Rich had two of the nation's top scorers, finished at 21-6.

Long Beach State, now 25-2, overcame its own mistakes and the fierce hustle of its smaller opponents to move ahead for good with seven minutes remaining as Weber's discipline broke down and the Big Sky champions began taking bad shots and committing turnovers.

Shooting infrequently, he still managed to score often in the clutch and fed teammates for easy layups as Long Beach scored a playoff victory over Weber for the third time in four years.

Ratleff scored 25 points, many on long shots. Leonard Gray also had 25 for the winners.

Brady Small, a swift and shifty 5-foot-11 guard, scored from all over the floor as Weber State surged midway through the first half. His layup at the buzzer climaxed a spurt that wiped out a 37-27 deficit as Weber scored 16 points to Long Beach's four.

A steal by Small gave Weber a five-point lead early in the second half but Long Beach finally rallied to tie at 63 on a three-point play by Nate Stephens.

Small led Weber with 18 points.

Hill Comes Near Wrestling Medal

SEATTLE, Wash. — East Carolina University's Pirates came within one match of placing a medalist in the NCAA Wrestling Tournament, which ended here Saturday night.

Bill Hill, in the 177-pound class, lost out in the consolations, ending the Bucs final chance for a medal.

Overall, the Bucs carried seven men to the finals this year, the largest group of any college in the nation.

Indiana Takes Big Ten Berth

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP)—The ninth-ranked Hoosiers of Indiana, with help from Northwestern, clinched their first Big Ten Conference basketball championship since 1967 Saturday with a 77-72 victory over Purdue.

Indiana's victory, coupled with Northwestern's 79-74 upset of third-ranked Minnesota, moved the Hoosiers into the second round of the NCAA tourney next Thursday at Nashville, Tenn.

Indiana finished the regular season with an 11-3 conference mark and 19-5 overall record. Minnesota finished at 10-4 and 20-4, respectively. If the Gophers had won, they would have played Indiana Monday night to see who represented the Big Ten in the NCAA tourney.

The Hoosiers last won the Big Ten championship outright in 1958. They shared the title with Michigan State in 1967, then beat the Spartans in a playoff to go to the NCAA.

Indiana has played in five previous NCAA tournaments.

N.C. State, Maryland Win Way Into ACC Tournament's Finale

By KEN ALYTA
Associated Press Sports Writer

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — It was Super-Sunday all over again in Atlantic Coast Conference basketball, only this time it was Saturday night and the league championship was at stake when North Carolina State plays NCAA-bound Maryland.

The two nations powers, the unbeaten State Wolfpack, 26-0 ranked No. 2, and Maryland, 22-5, and 10th in the nation shot it out for the title.

Each broke open a close game with nine straight points to start the second half as State trimmed Virginia, 63-51, and Maryland bumped Wake Forest, 73-65, in Friday night's semifinals.

Maryland clinched the bid in the NCAA Eastern Regionals opening Thursday night at Charlotte, N.C., against the winner of tonight's Furman-Syracuse game at Philadelphia.

N.C. State is ineligible for the postseason play because of one-year NCAA probation for alleged basketball recruiting irregularities.

When the teams first met on Sunday, Jan. 14, it was at high noon on the Maryland court before a national television audience a few hours before football's Super Bowl game.

The basketball game was an all-time ACC classic. N.C. State won, 87-85, on a rebound basket by sophomore David Thompson with three seconds to play. The return meeting at Raleigh went to State, 89-78.

State is after a victory it needs to become only the second team in ACC history to go undefeated. The national championship North Carolina team finished 32-0 in 1957.

Virginia, employing a spread offense to slow the pace against a State team that likes to run, stayed close to the Wolfpack for most of the first half. But a 25-4 surge over the last six minutes of the opening half and the first three minutes of the final half shot State ahead 35-16, and Virginia was on the way to its 12th loss in 25 games.

State Coach Norman Sloan said later, "This is a free-shooting, free-running team and when I slowed it down we lost our whole momentum late in the game."

State's biggest lead was 53-31 with about eight minutes left before the tempo change enabled Virginia to cut the lead to 10 several times.

Both Sloan and Virginia Coach Bill Gibson said the Cavaliers' hard-earned first-round victory over Duke while State was enjoying a bye might have taken something out of Virginia.

Regarding the finals, Sloan said, "It's the only game for us since we end our season. I think we will be ready."

State shot 51 per cent against Virginia's 38 as Thompson and Tommy Burleson scored 14 points apiece and Burleson grabbed 11 rebounds to seven for Thompson. Gus Gerard's 15 points and 12 by Barry Parhill, climaxing his brilliant three-year career, led Virginia.

For Maryland's Lefty Driesell, who has been thirsting for national recognition since he left Davidson of the Southern Conference for the Maryland job three years ago, his team's ticket to the NCAA, regardless of the outcome of tonight's game, was a source of relief.

He told newsmen, "We are going to the NCAA and I don't care how. My goal has always been to win the national championship. The Saturday game is like a consolation to us.

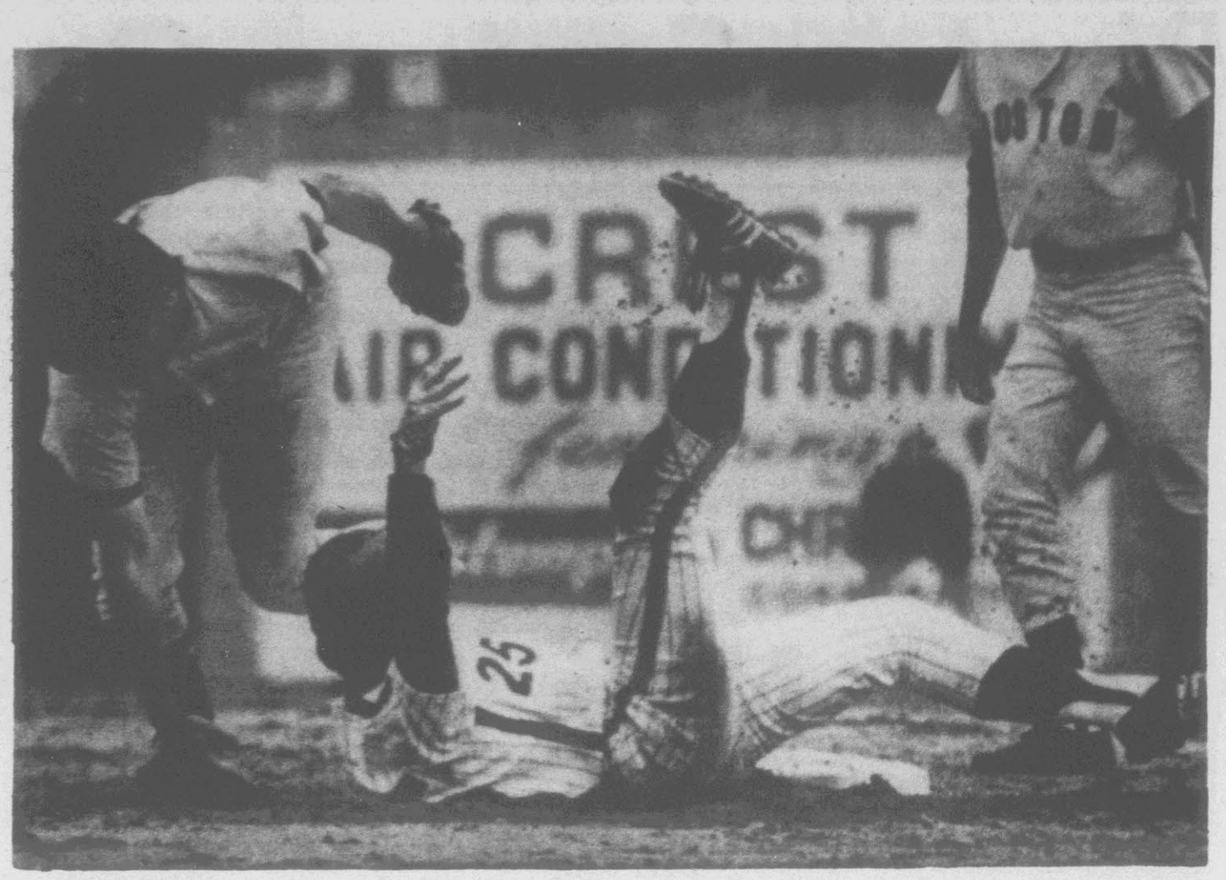

"We did not beat a national power tonight, but they (Wake Forest) did beat one Thursday," he added, referring to Wake Forest's upset of eighth-ranked North Carolina in the first round.

Wake Forest, now 12-15, shot 58 per cent in the first half for a 34-30 lead as Tony Byers hit nine of 11 shots. But Bob Bodell shut off Byers with one basket four shots in the last half and Maryland began to roll.

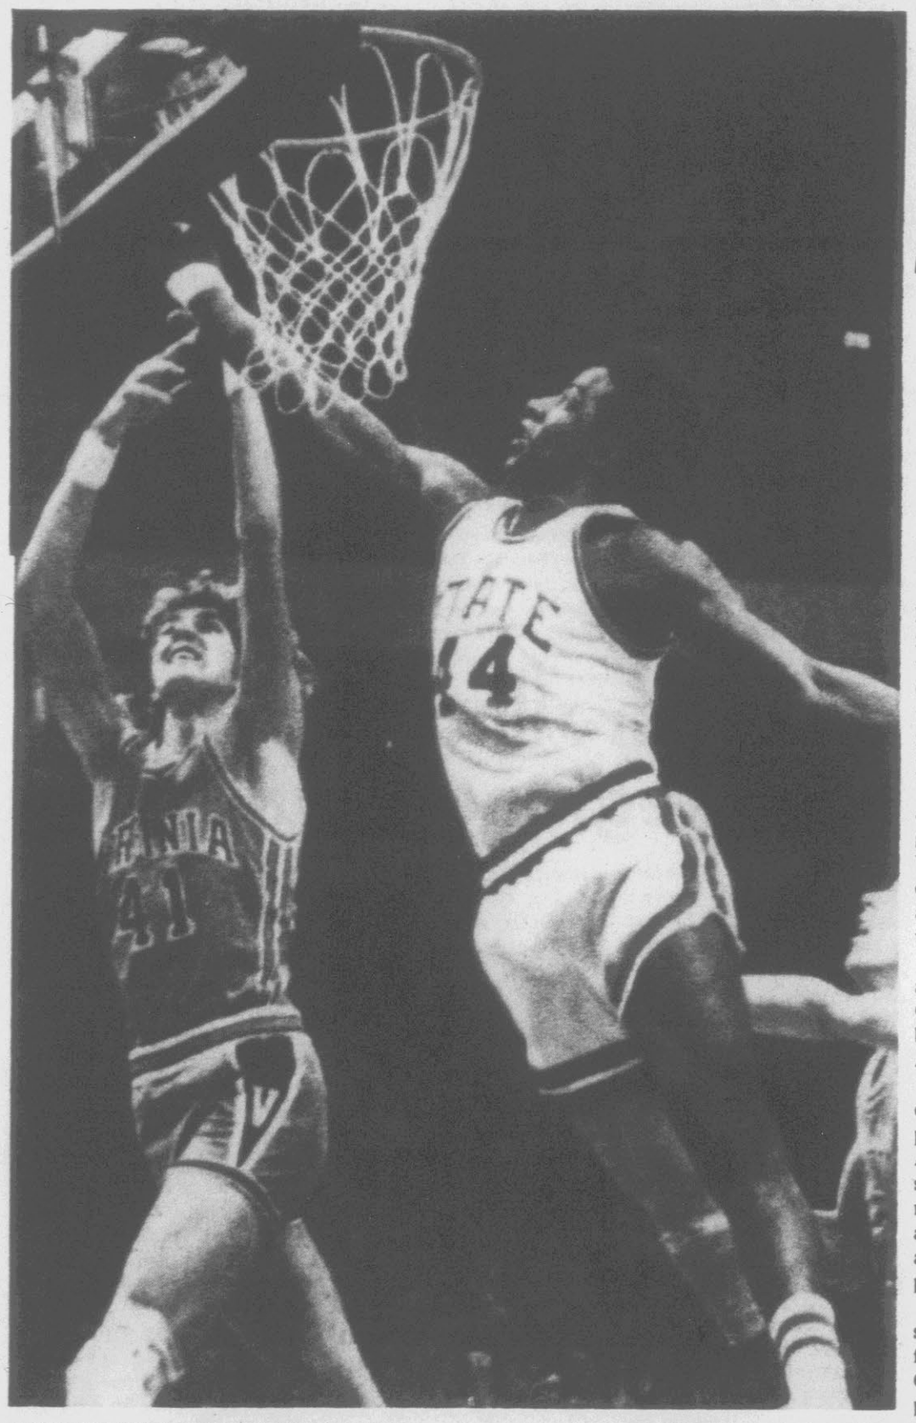

Freshman John Lucas led the way with 20 points and Tom McMillen added 15 along with 10 rebounds. A major contributor was Len Elmore, playing for the first time in two weeks after breaking a bone in his right foot. He scored 12 points and grabbed nine rebounds. Elmore was one of five men who played the last half without substitution for Maryland.

Byers, with 24 points, and Eddie Payne, with 16, played all the way for the second game in a row to lead the Wake Forest scoring.

Bruins In Ice Victory

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Boston Bruins and Buffalo Sabres continued to move in opposite directions Friday night in their bid for National Hockey League playoff berths.

The Bruins edged the Atlanta Flames 3-2 and climbed within two points of the idle second-place New York Rangers in the East Division.

Meanwhile, the Sabres, who have been threatening to surrender fourth place for several weeks, bowed to the Vancouver Canucks 5-2 and put themselves in a precarious position in their race with Detroit for the final playoff spot in the East.

Buffalo still leads Detroit by a point but has played two games more than the Red Wings, who will make them up over the weekend at Montreal and at home against St. Louis while the Sabres are idle.

In the World Hockey Association, New England nipped Cleveland 5-4, Philadelphia blasted Quebec 11-3 and Los Angeles trimmed Houston 5-1.

The Bruins may have dealt a death blow to the West Division playoff hopes of the expansion Atlanta Flames when they snapped a 1-1 tie on second-period goals by Greg Shepherd and Johnny Bucyk. The losers are tied for sixth place, five points out of fourth.

Vancouver's Andre Boudrias scored on a penalty shot in the first period and then put the Canucks ahead for good on a power-play goal with just three seconds left in the second period as they jolted the Sabres' playoff hopes.

First-period power-play goals by John Danby and Larry Pleau started New England to its victory over Cleveland and enabled the Whalers to tie the Crusaders for first place in the WHA's East Division.

Philadelphia, third in the East, boosted its lead over New York and Ottawa to four points as Andre Lacroix scored three goals and added three assists as the Blazers peppered Quebec goalies Serge Aubry and Richard Brodeur with 53 shots.

Alex Johnson Traded By Indians; Colbert Returning To Cleveland

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

Is there a new Lone Ranger in Texas?

Controversial, uncommunicative Alex Johnson, whose once talkative bat has grown silent of late like its master, was acquired by the Texas Rangers Friday in a trade with the Cleveland Indians for little-known pitchers Rich Hinton and Vince Colbert, the latter a former Indian who wasn't even on the Rangers' major league roster.

Johnson was a holdout with the Indians but agreed to terms with Texas owner Bob Short and was to report to camp at Pompano Beach, Fla., today to begin work, the Rangers announced, as the team's designated hitter.

Although he hit .329 and won the American League batting championship in 1970 with the California Angels, Johnson was the target of numerous fines by Manager Lefty Phillips and a suspension in 1971, when his average dropped to .260 in only 65 games. He hit only .239 for the Indians last season and the Rangers said they expect him to shape up or ship out.

Oakland pitcher Vida Blue went through his first workout with the world champion A's although he is in the midst of another holdout.

Blue signed last season for $63,000 and wants at least that much this year. But Finley considers Blue's 1972 salary—and negotiating base—as $50,000 with the extra $13,000 as a bonus for his 1971 heroics.

In other developments,there were nine exhibition games Friday and three of them ended in shutouts.

Wilbur Wood, Terry Forster, Bart Johnson and Steve Stone combined on a five-hitter and convalescing third baseman Bill Melton drove in both runs as the Chicago White Sox downed the Kansas City Royals 2-0.

Elsewhere, Johnson's new team didn't fare so well, either. The New York Yankees trimmed the Rangers 7-4 behind two-run homers by Celerino Sanchez and Frank Tepedino.

Blue's world champion Oakland teammates were beaten by the lowly Milwaukee Brewers 5-3 as Darrell Porter slugged a three-run homer off 21-game winner Catfish Hunter.

Joe Ferguson homered and tripled and Ron Cey whacked a two-run double in the Los Angeles Dodgers' 6-2 triumph over the Baltimore Orioles. Boog Powell's two-run homer in the ninth produced the Baltimore runs.

Pitcher Joe Gilbert's two-run double powered the Montreal Expos past the Minnesota Twins 3-1 while the San Francisco Giants pushed across four unearned runs in the 11th inning and beat the Chicago Cubs 8-4.

Cleveland's 'B' squad edged California 7-6 with a tie-breaking pair of runs in the eighth inning. The Pittsburgh-Detroit game was rained out.

Poor-Shooting Blazers Fall To Milwaukee Five

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Portland Trail Blazer coach Jack McCloskey wondered Friday night whether his team would ever make a shot against Milwaukee. "Kareem really is an intimidator," he said.

Portland shot just 33.6 percent from the field as the Bucks, especially Abdul-Jabbar, consistently forced them out and stomped the Blazers 116-96 in a National Basketball Association game Friday night.

Fast-breaking on offense and hounding Portland on defense, Milwaukee took a 30-22 lead after the first quarter. The Bucks poured it on in the second period and opened up a 20 point lead.

Abdul-Jabbar, playing what Coach Larry Costello called, "his best game blocking shots, scored 25 points. He was complimented by Bobby Dandridges'22 points.

In other NBA action, Chicago blasted Philadelphia 104-84, Baltimore edged Houston 109-104 and Boston beat Los Angeles 119-110.

In the American Basketball Association, Kentucky beat Virginia 119-113, Denver stopped New York 120-105, Utah beat Dallas 114-105 and Indiana edged Carolina 110-105.

Portland, led by Sidney Wicks' 14 points, made only three shots in the third quarter.

The Chicago Bulls rallied behind the shooting of Bob Love in the second half and went on to bury the Philadelphia 76er's.

Tom Van Arsdale, who tallied 23 points, led an early Philadelphia drive that put the 76er's ahead at the end of the initial quarter. The Bulls lead at the intermission 45-41.

Love finished with 26 points and Chet Walker added 17. Leroy Ellis had 16 and Fred Boyd 15 for Philadelphia.

Elvin Hayes hit three crucial baskets in the final four minutes to lead the Baltimore Bullets over the Houston Rockets.

Baltimore broke away from a 96-96 tie with five minutes left to play, with Hayes scoring nine of the Bullets' final 12 points.

Calvin Murphy and Mike Newlin scored 21 points each for the Rockets and Jack Marin added 14. Archie Clark, the games high scorer with 26, was followed by Bullet teamates Mike Riordan with 21 and Hayes with 19.

Cowen completely dominated Wilt Chamberlain as the Celtics led by as much as 17 points in the fourth quarter. The Lakers staged as rally and crept to within six points with a minute and a half to play but the Celtics prevailed.

John Havlicek added 24 points for the Celtics who swept the season series from the Lakers. Jerry West scored 28 points for the Lakers and Gail Goodrich added 25.

Pacers Rip Cougar Press; Then Cougars

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Indiana Pacers handled the Carolina press great, Cougar Coach Larry Brown said—"Mainly because we didn't use it much."

The Pacers handled the Cougars 110-105 in an American Basketball Association game Friday night.

The first two times Carolina used its famous press, the Pacers got a stuff-shot by Mel Daniels and a three-on-one fast break.

Dwight Ange; Sylvia Jones Point Leaders

Dwight Ange and Sylvia Jones, who led most of the season, finished atop the area scoring charts in the seasonal wrapup.

Ange, a senior at Williamston High School, led all the area boys in scoring with a 16.8 point average.

But he was outdone by Miss Jones of Oak City, who ended the year with a 17.7 mark.

Following Ange in the standings were McCoy Williams of Farmville Central with a 16.0 average. He was followed by Ernest Crandall of Robersonville, 15.7; Ervin Spivey of Greene Central, 14.0; and Vann Rogerson of Bear Grass, 13.4, in the top five.

Miss Jones had little competition for the top spot, as Minnie Hollis of North Pitt was the runner-up in the girls' division with a 13.3 average, over four points back. She was followed by Elaine Forrest of Robersonville, 12.8; Decia Little of Ayden-Grifton, 11.7; and Sissy Taylor of Williamston, 11.0.

In defense, Ayden-Grifton, third in the state in 3-A this year, led the area with a 47.7 mark. Greene Central, runner-up in the district finals, was also second to A-G in this, with a 48.7 mark.

Ayden-Grifton also led the area in their winning margin, outscoring their opponents by 10.9 points a game. Greene Central finished second with an 8.9 margin.

The Chargers just beat out Conley for the honors of having the best record. Ayden-Grifton finished with a 23-6 mark for .793 percent. The Vikings were just a percentage point back at .792, with their 19-5 record.

North Pitt's girls, who saw their 80-game winning streak snapped in the first round of the State Tournament, finished first in everything except the individual scoring race. They were first in offense, defense, winning margin and record.

In offense, the Pant-HERS, averaged 51.3 points a game, as compared to 47.2 for the Ayden-Grifton lassies.

Defensively, the Big Orange Machine held off their opponents to 29.5 points a game. Williamston was second this time, with a 32.5 average.

In average winning margin, North Pitt outhit its opponents by 21.8 points a game, easily outdistancing Ayden-Grifton with a 10.6 average. Only four girls' teams in the area managed to outpoint their opponents during the year.

The Pant-HERS finished the year with a 25-1 record, for a .962 percentage. Williamston, also a first round loser in the State Tournament, was second with a 22-4 record, .846.

Heels Get NIT Berth

NEW YORK (AP) —One of the Big Ten basketball teams appears likely to grab the last available opening in the National Invitation Tournament.

The NIT Friday announced the selection of North Carolina and Alabama, swelling its field to 15.

Traditionally, the post-season tourney in New York leaves an invitation open for the Big Ten runnerup. Minnesota and Indiana currently are tied for the Big Tean lead and both play games Saturday.

North Carolina, of the Atlantic Coast Conference and Alabama, of the Southeastern Conference, join Missouri, Notre Dame, Oral Roberts, Virginia Tech, Louisville, American University, Southern California, Massachusetts, New Mexico, Marshall, Fairfield, Manhattan and Rutgers in the 36th annual affair.

North Carolina, ranked No. 8 this season with a 22-7 recordo won the NIT two years ago. The Tar Heels whipped Georgia Tech 84-66 in the final.

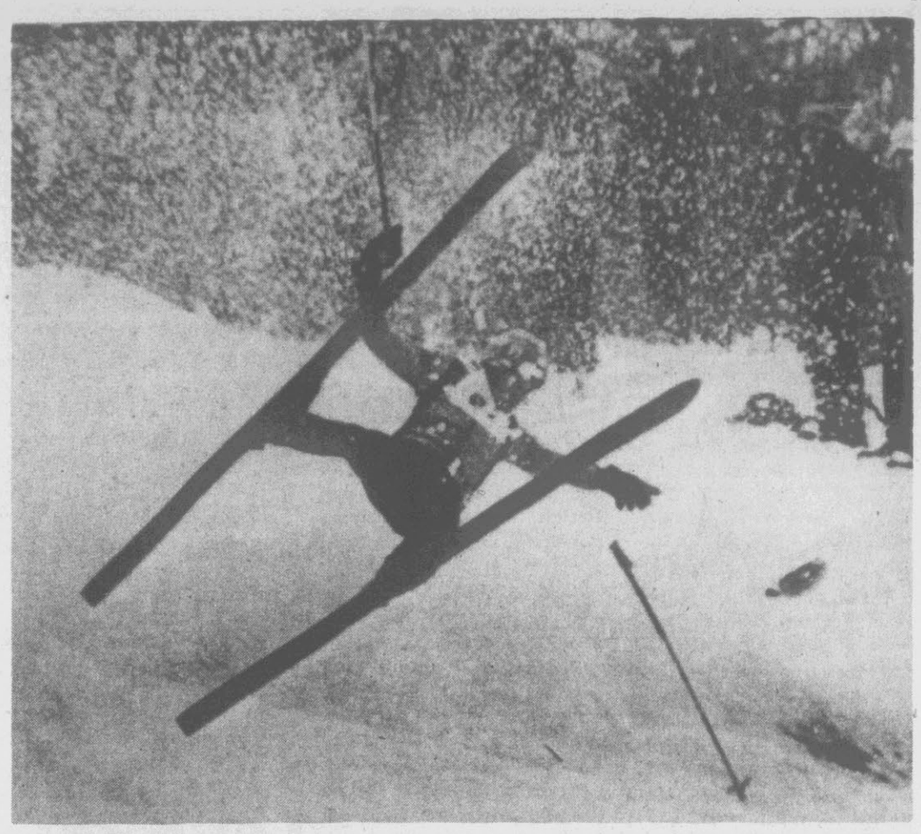

Alabama, 20-6 this year, finished in tie for second with Tennessee in the tight SEC race.

Pairings for the tourney at Madison Square Garden were announced by Peter J. Carlesimo, chairman of the NIT selection committee.

The tourney gets underway next Saturday, March 17, with afternoon and evening doubleheaders. In the opening doubleheader, it's Notre Dame against Southern Cal and American vs. Louisville.

On Saturday night, Massachusetts faces Missouri and Oral Roberts meets North Carolina.

Trio Wants Tournament Out Of Greensboro Site

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The Atlantic Coast Conference, which last night finished the third year of a five-year contract to play its basketball tournament in the 15,000-seat Greensboro Coliseum, will gather information on other sites.

There is some disenchantment with Greensboro among the three members of the league outside North Carolina. They are Maryland, Virginia and Clemson.

Bob James, ACC Commissioner, said operators at arenas in Charlotte, N.C.; Norfolk, Roanoke and Richmond, Va., of a 17,000-seat facility being built at Largo, Md., would be asked about their facilities. "We want to know of any expansion plans for the future, and of any new arenas being planned" in the ACC area, he said.

Jim Kehoe, University of Maryland athletic director, told newsmen that the Greensboro facility gave the four North Carolina members of the seven-school conference an advantage in that it was not strictly neutral. He said supporters of the host state teams could more readily make the trip to Greensboro to root for their teams than could followers of Maryland, Clemson and Virginia.

Kehoe pointed to the fact that for three years the North Carolina Big Four, Duke, North Carolina, N.C. State and Wake Forest, have played a December tournament in Greensboro, and other regular-season games there as well.

North Carolina, beaten by Wake Forest in a first-round upset Thursday, has a 27-5 record over the 12 years it has played in the Greensboro Coliseum.

The tournament, now 20 years old, which decides the ACC title and its NCAA tournament representative. It was held at Reynolds Coliseum on the campus of N.C. State in Raleigh, from its inception in 1954 through 1966. It moved to Greensboro in 1967, then to Charlotte for three years. It returned to Greensboro in 1971 after the coliseum enlarged its capacity from 10,000 to 15,000.

Kehoe insisted that the tournament would not return to the campus of any ACC member, in an effort to preserve the neutral courrt aspect.

Piney Grove, Black Jack Win

Black Jack and Piney Grove advanced in the losers' bracket of the Church Baskeball Tournament Friday night. Black Jack downed Trinity, 51-48, while Piney Grove downed St. Paul's, 71-60. The losing teams were both eliminated.

Piney Grove struggled out to a 27-26 halftime lead in the opening game and poured it on in the second half with 19 field goals and six out of seven free throws for the final 11-point spread.

Piney Grove placed four players in double figures. Ricky Langley led the team with 17, while Buddy Turnage had 16, Wayne Avery scored 13 and Jimmy Mills added 12. Jack Wall scored over half of the St. Paul's points dumping in 34. Jeff Daniel scored 10.

Black Jack moved out to a 27-16 lead at the half, but Trinity rallied and almost took the game as they pulled within three points but could not get any closer. Danny Edwards led the winners with 14 and Tal Adams had 11. Jim Adams paced Trinity with 22.

Station Is Moved

RALEIGH — The check station for North Carolina's two research trout streams—Steels and Upper Creek—has been moved to a new location.

The check station was previously located at Fox Camp on Route 181 between Morgantown and Linville, but because of road construction in the area, it has been moved east on the Mortimer-Piedmont Forest Service Road (connecting Route 181 with Mortimer) to a point at the junction of Ravencliff Road near Upper Creek.

Anglers who fish these two "native" trout streams during the regular season will be required to check in at this station prior to fishing either stream, and check out immediately after fishing. During the winter trout season, such checks are voluntary.

The check station is being maintained because these two streams are currently part of a special trout research project. Also, because of the highway construction, it is expected that Steels Creek will be virtually inaccessible most of the season, although both streams will be checked regularly by Wildlife Protectors.

Pirate Netters Seek Improvement

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina University's tennis team, young and inexperienced in the collegiate ranks, hopes to pull some surprises before the year is over and improve their fifth place finish in the Southern Conference from last year.

This year, too, for the first time in several years, the team has someone coaching it with a tennis background, Wes Hankins, one of the founders of the Greenville Tennis Club. A professor in the geography department, Hankins is one of the top-ranked players in the city.

"Currently we have 10 people out for the team, and all but one are underclassmen," Hankins said. There is just one junior on the team, which completely lacks seniors. "We have three sophomores and six freshmen."

Hankins expects nearly all of the starters this year to be freshmen. "We'll probably have two of the sophomores starting, so you can see how young we'll be."

Hankins is approaching the season with the idea of concentration on the 4-5-6 singles matches and the 2-3 doubles events. "If we can do well in these, and win a lot of them, we can improve our record over last year. Most of our players are of equal ability, so our last man really won't be far behind our top player."

But the big problem will be the lack of experience, and overcoming this on the collegiate level. "We've really been working hard on the doubles, too," he said. "We feel that if we can take the 2-3 matches, we will be on the way."

Hankins doesn't call this a rebuilding year, but more of a building one. "We have never had an outstanding year in tennis since joining the Southern Conference, so we can't really call it rebuilding." And while the results of this may not show up this year, with so many young players, it gives the Pirates a lot to look for in the future.

In the doubles, there is some added experience, however, that most teams cannot count on. "We have four doubles units right now, and of these four, two have played together a lot. Keith Marion and Mel Vest came intact from Carthage High School to us, so they've gotten to know each other's abilities quite well."

And the team of Fraysar Fulton and Wray Gillette, while not in high school together, have played together many times in Wilson in non-scholastic play. "This gives us a big up in this department," Hankins says.

Right now, with the first match still a week away (Saturday at UNC-Wilmington), the coach isn't sure how he'll line up his team because of the equal level of competition. "We want to have our most consistant players at the 4-5-6 levels. however," he said.

Both Chris Davis and Fulton, the two sophomores, have a good shot at the number one position, mainly because of experience. The top freshmen include Marion, Ed Spiegel, Howard Rambeau, Vest, and John Nance. The top six will come from these men.

The four doubles teams include Marion and Vest, Speigel and Davis, Fulton and Gillette, and Rambeau and Nance.

"We were only 2-11 last year, and we hope to see an improvement on this," Hawkins said.

Chargers Delayed

The two teams are set to meet Tuesday at Kinston in what now becomes the opener for the Chargers. No new date has been set for the replay of the first game at this time.

Hearing set For Hunting Proposals

Tar Heel hunters will have a chance to comment on a series of changes proposed for the 1973-74 hunting regulations in April. The North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission has set up nine public hearings across the state where the proposals will be aired.

The proposed changes will be publicized late in March after the Wildlife Commission has decided which ones to present for consideration at the hearings.

"We hope that hunters will look for these proposals in their newspapers, and then plan to attend the hearing nearest them so that we can hear what they think of the suggested changes," said a Commission spokesman. Comments and opinions from hunters received at the hearings will be carefully reviewed before any changes are adopted later.

The hearings are slated as follows:

April 9, Edenton Courthouse; April 10, New Bern City Hall; April 11, Rocky Mount City Court Room; April 12, Elizabethtown Courthouse; April 13, Graham Courthouse; April 16, Albermarle Courthouse; April 17, Yadkinville Courthouse; April 18, Morganton Western Piedmont Community College and April 19, Sylva Courthouse.

All meetings will begin at 7:30 p.m.

"Opening Day" Of Trout Preserved

A lot has been said about the glories of the "Opening Day" of the mountain trout season. In North Carolina, it's an important ritual observed by some 70,000 trout fishermen, and neither rain nor snow nor gloom of night can stay the angler from his appointed rounds.

That's why the North Carolina Wildlife North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission recently voted to change the date of opening day this year from Sunday, April 1, 1973, to Saturday, March 31, 1973.

The change was made after some trout fishermen complained that the Sunday opening left only one day of fishing in the weekend. Many also objected to Sunday opening because of conflicts with church.

One astute old trout fisherman observed, however, that the problem — in some cases — was not that the fisherman was going to miss opening day of the trout season, but that his family would probably have attended church alone.

Such is the power of "Opening Day". At any rate, what had been largely an oversight was quickly corrected by the Wildlife Commission.

Stumpy Point Access Area Open

The state's newest free public boating access area is now open at Stumpy Point in Dare County not far off desolate Rt. 264 in eastern North Carolina.

The new area — built by the N. C. Wildlife Resources Commission — gives access to Stumpy Point Bay and Pamlico Sound. A boat ramp and parking area were recently completed.

New North Carolina Trout Bullentin

A new free bulletin containing trout information has been prepared by the North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission, and it should be a big help to mountain trout anglers this year.

The publication includes an easy-to-read breakdown of the trout regulations in North Carolina, including the regulations and listing for "Native" and "Trophy" streams. Also included is a list of all the public designated mountain trout waters that are stocked, and the "General" or bait-fishing regulations which apply to hem.

To get a free copy, write the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission, Division of Inland Fisheries, 325 N. Salisbury Street, Raleigh, North Carolina 27611.

Fish Collecting Permits Changed

The North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission has adopted a new procedure for issuing scientific collecting permits for fish in North Carolina waters.

Basically, the permit allows scientists, Environmental Impact Statement preparers, and other qualified people to use special methods for collecting fish — methods which normally would be prohibited.

Even so, permits will no longer routinely be granted for use of Rotenone or other fish poisons except under special circumstances, and when specially requested. Wildlife Commission personnel will then supervise the use of these poisons.

Spring Gobblers

When February ended, so did the last of the major hunting seasons in North Carolina for another year.

Hunters need not stack arms, however, since the opening of the spring gobble season is less than two months away. The season on gobblers will open April 21 and close May 12, and the daily bag limit on bearded turkeys is one, with two for the season.

What About Fishing Contests?

The Wildlife Resources Commission receives a dozen or more requests each spring about publicity for various fishing contests over the State. Since biologists and others are taking a second look at the effects of such tournaments, plus the fact that Commission facilities for dispensing publicity on these increasing contests are taxed to the limit, it will be impossible for the Wildlife Commission to give magazine space or issue special news releases on them.

Wildlife Afield: Don't Wait Month For Bass

By JIM DEAN

Many bass fishermen make a big mistake every spring by waiting until mid-April to begin their bass fishing. The month of March is one of the best bass-busting months in the year. In fact, it may well be the best time of the year to tangle with a really big fish.

Throughout this past winter, I have been fishing some medium-sized lakes in the mid-section of the state. During January and February, most of the fish caught were chain pickerel, or jacks, as many people call them. But almost every trip yielded at least one or two bass.

Late in February, the bass finally began to outnumber the pickerel, and some of them were not bad. One, in fact, was a three-and-a-half pounder that took a streamer fly fished on a flyrod. Of course, fly rods are not the best tool for winter bass, but if bass will take streamers, they'll take plugs.

During February and early March, my angling companions and I have not been skunked a single time, and our largest bass tipped the scaled at five pounds. During the remainder of March we'll do even better.

Several years ago, while I was working as outdoor editor for a Piedmont newspaper, I kept a casual record of all the big bass over six pounds that were brought in for pictures.

The results were surprising. Despite the fact that there were very few fishermen on the water, most of the really big fish—eight pounds and up—were caught in March and early April. The catch slacked off in May and June, but was still good. The next best time for lunkers proved to be in late summer—the traditional dog days. Fall was the least successful time to hang a lunker largemouth, a finding that seems to fly in the face of what I've been told.

I think I know why the dog days proved good. Often, the big bass are schooled in deep water, and once they are located, it is possible to make a good catch. As for fall fishing, I suspect it has been over-rated.

Anyway, the point of all this is that for the next month or so, the odds say that you have your best chance of getting a "wall" fish.

It has been my experience that early season bass fishing requires some special technique. Many bass are not—as you might expect—in deep holes. Intead, some run out of the cold water into the warmer shallows, particularly during mid-afternoon on sunny days. I have found big fish in water that would barely cover their backs.

Although later in the season bass are often found along deep banks, in March they seem to like the shallow banks and coves where they "sunbathe" and prowl for passing bait.

Your choice of lure is also important. Plastic worms have never worked well for me early in the season. Instead, I prefer a shallow-running minnow imitation, preferably one of the floating-diving types. My friends and I have also had excellent luck using spinners and vibration lures such as the Hotspot or Sonic. On occasion, winter and early spring bass in shallow waters will even hit a surface lure.

The only problem, if indeed it is one, is the weather and muddy water. I don't like to fish when it is really cold, but there are plenty of days when the temperature hovers in the high 50's and 60's during March, and some days are even hot. Spring rains create muddy water in many lakes and ponds, but unless the water is so muddy that your line lieaves "tracks", you should be able to catch fish. Most good bass fishermen prefer dingy water.

Don't put much stock in that old saying that the bass begin biting when the buds come out on the trees. If you want to wait for the buds, that's fine, but if you prefer bass to buds, don't wait.

Holidays On Wheels Becomes Big Business

By EDWARD S. LECHTZIN
UPI Auto Writer

DETROIT (UPI) — The entrance of General Motors and Ford into the recreation vehicle market underscores why the travel trailer and camper industry is the fastest growing in the nation.

Thhere's money being made in the field and the auto companies want their share of the market. The nation's largest auto companies are moving at the luxury end of the market—GM with a motor home at $15,000 and Ford with a slide-in camper unit around $4,000.

But there are plenty of units available for almost every pocketbook as any visit to a camper and travel trailer show will reveal.

The recreation vehicle market reached new highs in 1972 with sales topping the previous year by 31 per cent. Motor homes showed the greatest growth from 51,500 in 1971 to 96,000 through November, 1972. Slide-in camper unit sales also topped 1971 while there was a 61 per cent increase in pickup covers—the smaller, less sophisticated version of the slide-in camper.

Why the increase? The answer is three-fold.

—Americans have discovered there are more conveniences and luxuries being built into travel trailers, truck campers, motor homes and camping trailers.

—They have learned it is possible to take a long vacation in a recreational vehicle, go most anywhere at a much lower cost than staying in motels and hotels and eating in restaurants.

—They have discovered the family can take weekend excursions and can enjoy outdoor living in the summer, hunting in the fall, skiing and snowmobiling during the winter —all at a cost they can better afford.

"One of the most potent factors in developing the industry is the growing interest of women in camping and traveling now that cooking facilities and sleeping comforts are available," says Dan Dowsett who directed the recent Detroit Camper and Travel Trailer Show where more than 800 vehicles were on display.

"Latest figures place the travel trailer market at more than a half-billion dollars. Truck campers add $226 million, camping trailers another $100 million and motor homes some $150,000."

Here's how the various recreational vehicles—RVs the industry calls them—stack up:

—Travel trailers are the most popular with sizes ranging from 10 to 35 feet long and eight feet in depth. The price range also is wide, depending on size and features. The travel trailer usually is self-contained, with everything needed for eating, sleeping and bathing. Its big advantage is that it can be parked and unhooked at the campsite, leaving the car or truck free for other use.

—Motor homes are the most luxurious and the fastest growing segment of the market. These are self-powered and built directly on a truck or bus chasis. They are easy to drive and often contain such luxuries as air conditioning, stereo sound systems and color television. Most sell in the $10,000 price range, but some cost a great deal more.

—Truck campers are designed to be mounted on half-ton or larger pickup trucks. The slide-in campers can be moved from the truck and parked on jacks when not in use. Sportsmen go for truck campers because they are rugged and can be driven into the back country.

—Tent campers or camping trailers are the low-profile trailers that fold out and up into structures with fabric or plastic sidewalls. They sleep four to eight. Most are fairly basic, providing sleeping accommodations and perhaps a small kitchen. They are easy to tow and easy to set up or take down.

Corporate Farming In Pitt County

A Look At Worthington Farms, Inc.

Historically, farming has involved single ownership whereby profits and losses are absorbed by one bank account and in some cases partnerships with two or more parties participating.

That situation is undergoing some changes in parts of the nation and to a moderate degree in North Carolina although the eastern part of the state currently provides very few exceptions to the traditional farming rules.

Those changes are due, in part, to the often-misunderstood concept of corporate farming as a means of structuring or organizing the farm business.

According to Charles R. Pugh and William P. Pinner, Extension Economists at N. C. State University in their economic information report, "Incorporation of Farm Businesses," the choice of an organizational form, whether it be the individual proprietorship, partnership, or corporation, should be an individual decision based on the circumstances and goals of the farmer.

The individual proprietorship, they report, is the most common and simplest form of organization. "An individual organizes the business, provides the capital or obtains credit, makes the decisions, takes the risks, receives all the income, bears the risk of all the losses and, of course, pays any income taxes due. The business is usually terminated by the death of the owner," the publication explains.

In comparison, the economists contend that, "The corporation is a legal entity that can take, hold and transfer property and carry on business in its own name. The corporation is owned by its shareholders. Corporate life is not legally affected by the death of one of its owners—shares of stock are transferred to heirs or other owners, and the business is empowered to continue."

A corporation may be organized in North Carolina by three or more persons over 21 years old. An attorney is usually retained to draw up and file the Articles of Incorporation with the Secretary of State and to follow other procedures as required by law.

The economists reported in their publication that according to a study made by the United States Department of Agriculture, there were 233 corporate farms in the state in 1968 and some 80 per cent of the incorporated farms were owned by families or individuals. They contended that as of October of 1971, less than one per cent of the nation's farms were incorporated.

Specific figures on the breakdown of the number of corporate farms in eastern North Carolina were not available but the figure would appear to be small today.

In Pitt County, according to current records at the local office of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, only three farming organizations are incorporated; Worthington Farms Inc. at Ballards Cross Roads, and Davenport Farms Inc. and Briley Brothers Inc., both in the Pactolus area.

Commenting on the background and operation of Worthington Farms Inc., Chester Don Worthington, the farm's secretary-treasurer and general manager, explained that the main reason for incorporating was that there were "so many family members involved we needed some overall structure for the operation."

Worthington explained also that incorporating offered a means of transferring ownership and estate planning that would protect the farms from being sub-divided upon the death of a family member.

The corporation was formed in 1957 but the farm land was not put into the organization until 1961 and then only part of the total acreage. The whole land base was placed in the corporation in 1965, he pointed out.

Noting that the farm is run as a business and compares to other corporations in legal structure, Worthington explained that there are eight stockholders in Worthington Farms Inc., and all are family members.

Out of the eight, there are four directly involved in the day-to-day farming operation, including three Worthington brothers, Chester Don, Kinsey and L. F.

The general manager said that his father, Chester Worthington, is president of the corporation and his mother serves as vice president.

"We have an annual stockholders meeting and directors are elected," Worthington continued, "and then the directors meet and elect officers."

He acknowledged that, as a corporation, detailed records are kept but he asserted that they should be maintained by all farming operations as an aid in efficiency regardless of whether they are incorporated or not.

Emphasizing that being incorporated offers a solid way of organizing the business, he said that there are "no real tax advantages, in my opinion." He added that it is unlikely the corporate form of farming would ever be profitable, tax wise, in this area.

Worthington, reporting that there are about 20 families involved in the work of the farms, said that "people are the key to having a successful operation."

Expressing a concern about the general treatment of labor throughout farming, he said that "we want to provide good employment for the people with us and raise the standards of living for all of us."

He said that it is a "matter, also, of employees enjoying their work. To me, it's important that people earn a better living."

The families involved in the operation are employed full time and he noted that approximately 70 part-time employees, mostly local students and a few women, are on the payroll during the tobacco season.

Worthington Farms owns some 3,100 acres of land with 1,200 acres of that crop land. The corporation leases another 500 acres of crop land, the general manager said.

The business owns a 125-acre tobacco base, he noted, and leases another 125 acres of tobacco for a total of 250 acres.

The farm is also engaged in an extensive chicken operation and is equipped to handle up to 50,000 laying hens at a time. Currently, the eggs are sold to a processing firm but Worthington said that the corporation hopes to branch out into processing and make that a part of the operation.

All of the tobacco, he noted, will be planted on the largest farm located near Ballards Cross Roads and the hog and chicken operations and grain storage facilities that are capable of handling some 100,000 bushels of grain are also on that farm.

The corporation's offices are also located there as well as the bulk tobacco facilities that currently number 25. Worthington said that another 15 bulk barns are being added to handle the large movement of tobacco.

Part of the corporation's land acreage is located north of the Tar River but the farm is smaller than the main operation at Ballards Cross Roads.

Worthington, noting that the family is concerned with improving the overall image of farming, contended that farming is now beginning to be recognized as a business.

"We are just catching up in North Carolina and in this area particularly with the rest of the nation in farming," he said.

He did not assert that corporate farming is the route that all farm owners should take.

"My great-grandfather bought the land in 1836 and the family has been farming the land since then. There have become more members of the family involved and the corporation is a means of holding the farm together."

Worthington said that the farming operation that "doesn't have its affairs in order to begin with" will find the change to corporate farming somewhat drastic.

He pointed out that Worthington Farms hopes to have two per cent of all agricultural sales in Pitt County during the year. And he said there are still things they hope to improve on in order to make an efficient business even more efficient.

The Worthingtons remodeled the "old homeplace" and now use it for offices. Included also at the home site is a small building that is used as a gathering point for employees and a section adjoining the offices for eating and recreation.

A large shop area and facilities for housing the array of farming and land improvement equipment are part of the overall network of buildings on the location.

Pitt County extension chairman Ed Yancey said that he feels that we've already been through the roughest period in agriculture. The changes that will come will have some effect on farming, he noted, just as mechanization has added a different dimension. "I don't think there will be any drastic changes."

Yancey, asserting that the county will probably not necessarily see a sharp increase in corporate farming, said that, "I think we will continue to see growth in the size of farming operations."

He explained that Pitt has a large number of small farms and from trends that have developed in recent years the shift in size should mean "bigger farms in terms of volume of business, not necessarily in acreage."

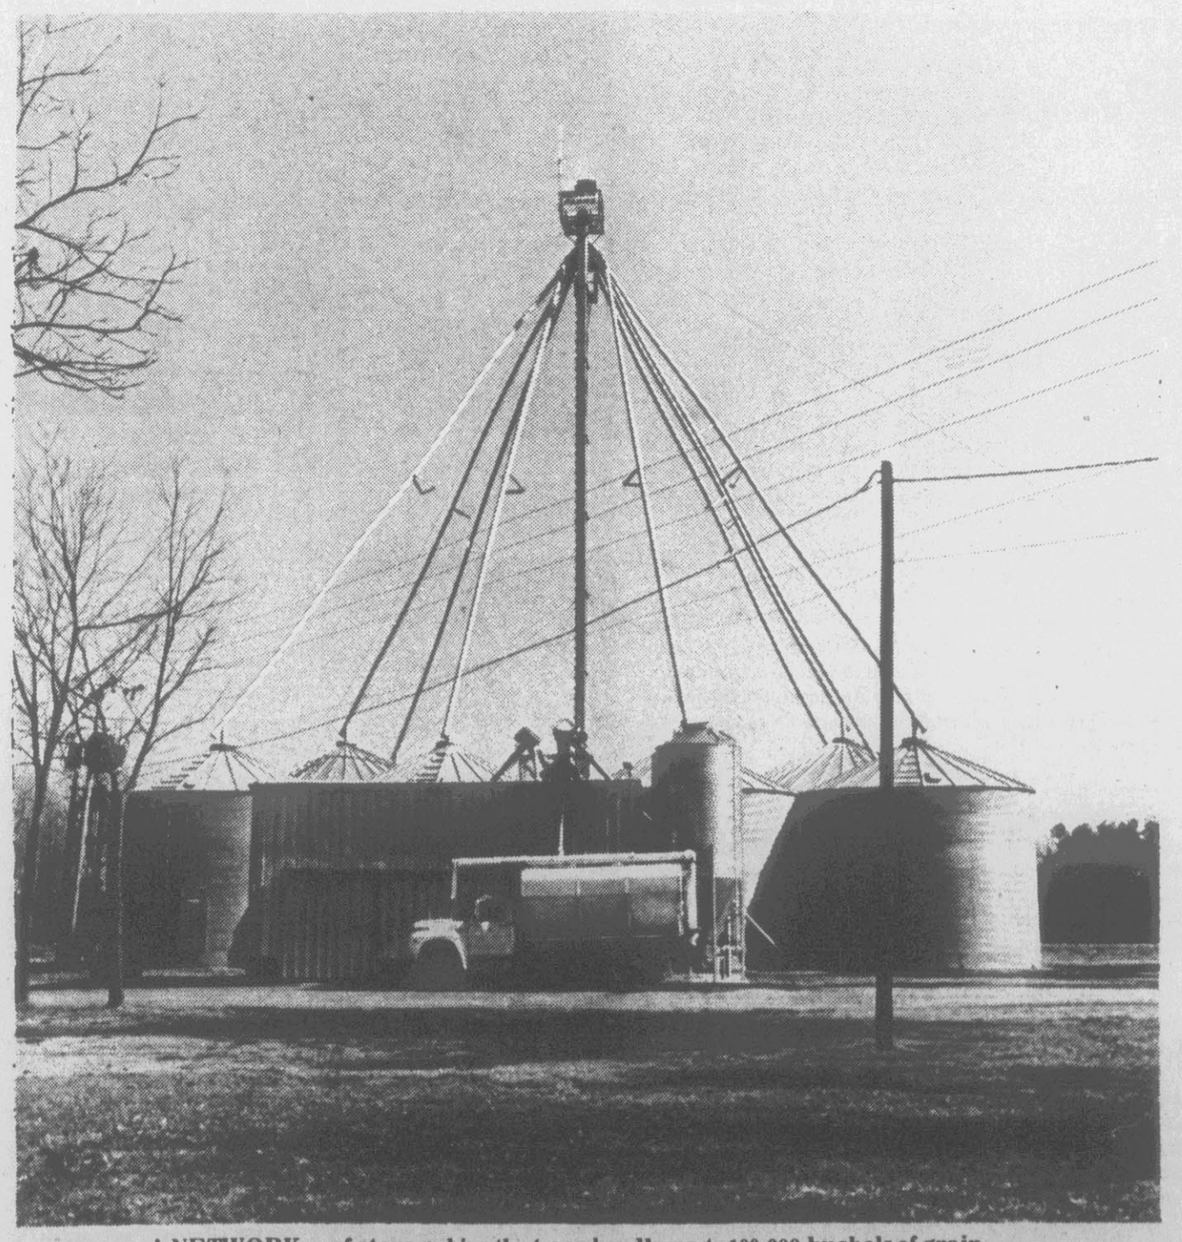

The extension chairman cited figures from a November of 1972 "Tar Heel Economist," published by the Department of Economics at N. C. State University, that compared farming statistics in 1964 and 1969. In 1964 the number of farms in Pitt County totaled 2,829 and that figure fell off to 2,174 in 1969. At the same time, the size of farms in the county increased from an average of 96.4 acres in 1964 to 114.3 in 1969.

The value of land and buildings per farm, according to the publication, also increased as the number of farms dropped. The value per farm in Pitt in 1964 was $48,150 while in 1969 the figure increased to $58,614.

Although the actual number of farms that are incorporated is small, Yancey pointed out that there are other large farming operations in the county and various non-agricultural businesses have farming interests.

He added that "there is a growing trend toward leasing acreage," especially in the area of tobacco. Some of the leasing is done on a long-term basis.

Looking at the overall farming picture in Pitt County, it would be difficult to see a definite trend toward incorporating the farm business. However, as the number of corporate farms increase but yet remain few in number compared with all farming operations, the combined corporate acreage will be significant. Total corporate production in the county may be even more so.

EDGE ACT SUBSIDIARY

North Carolina National Bank announced it has applied for permission to open an Edge Act subsidiary in New York, N. Y., to be called NCNB International Banking Corp.

NCNB president Thomas I. Storrs explained an Edge Act corporation is a company authorized to engage in international banking or other foreign financial activities.

He said the proposed subsidiary would enable the bank to expand further its services to southeastern commerical and banking customers who do business abroad, as well as to foreign compaines and banks which do business in the United States.

RETURN FROM CONFERENCE

Allen Howell, vice president, and Jack R. Ward, fieldman of the Federal Land Bank Association of Washington, have returned from Raleigh where they attended a Management Development Conference, according to J.B. Griffin, association president.

Griffin said that the conference was conducted to keep Land Bank and Production Credit Association personnel up to date on the latest developments and techniques in modern management.

Topics discussed during the conference, which was conducted by the Federal Land Bank and Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Columbis, S.C., included credit investigation and reporting, importance of appraisals, and capitalizing on business development programs.

EMPLOYEE HONORED

Mrs. Wanda P. Smith, a local employee of Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Co., received an emblem in February in recognition of five years of service.

The company reported that the service emblem is designed for men and women, with varying arrangements of rubies, emeralds, and diamonds signifying the length of service.

Researcher Is Finding Why Cold Water Kills

CALGARY (AP) — A giant bathtub and a dozen university students are part of a project that Dr. Keith Cooper hopes will help provide medical clues to why "cold water kills."

The University of Calgary medical professor and scientist, backed by grants from Canada's Defense Research Board and the United States Navy, has been working since last June to solve the mystery.

And he believes he may have some answers.

His research puts people in cold water — 50 degrees and colder — to learn what happens to their breathing, circulation and muscular responsiveness.

The findings will help explain some of the estimated 100,000 cold water drownings in the world each year.

With men and women volunteers from his university's physical education department, the dunkings Dr. Cooper has monitored have produced a few promising theories that may develop into accepted explanations with further testing.

In the bathtub, a thermometer measures the temperature of the water, and a battery of sensing devices measures the subject's response — temperature, heart and breathing rate, volume of air used over a certain period of time, the amount of carbon dioxide in the blood and how the muscles work when they are cold.

Dr. Cooper said a main cause of drowning may lie in the automatic tendency of people immersed in cold water to breathe faster. His bathtub tests indicate that the cooler water is, the faster and deeper people have to breathe, and they have no control over the process.

Increased breathing may lead to loss of consciousness, he said, because it results in decreased blood flow to the brain.

In some way, not yet understood, blood poor in carbon dioxide tends to get shut off from the brain. And fast breathing may lower the blood's carbon dioxide level so drastically that too much blood is directed away from the brain and unconsciousness results.

Death by drowning then may come quickly as the victim's head slips below the water.

Dr. Cooper hopes that test evidence will enable him to:

—Predict the sort of person who will be at greatest risk in cold water.

—Advise people how to minimize the risk of death should they fall into cold water.

—Recommend the most effective first-aid treatment for persons who have come close to cold-water drowning.

Attending Young Farmer Session

Set Courses On Tobacco

Pitt Technical Institute is planning an 80-hour Tobacco Auctioneering Course and an 80-hour Tobacco Ticket Marking Course at begin at 8:30 a.m., Monday and end, Fridy, April 6.

Classes will meet from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., Monday through Friday.

After the first week the two courses will be combined a part of each day for actual practice in conducting a mock tobacco sale. This will give both the auctioneering student and the ticket marking student experience in conducting tobacco sales.

A student can only register for one of the courses. There will be no instructional cost for the course. For those students who have to room and board in Greenville while attending the course, Pitt Technical Institute can assist in locating appropriate places. The student will have to pay for room and board.

Ray Oglesby will be the instructor for the Tobacco Auctioneering Course and Julian Edwards will handle instruction for the Ticket Marking Course.

Persons interested in either of the courses, should contact Ola Porter, director of extension, Pitt Technical Institute, P.O. Drawer 7007 or phone 756,3130, Ext. 25.

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, MARCH 11, 1973

CARROLL RIGHTER'S horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Forecast

GENERAL TENDENCIES: In the early hours of the day most everyone will appear overanxious but after attending the services of your choice a more calm and optimistic point of view will prevail. The evening is good for romance and recreations. Keep relaxed.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr 19) Don't get into arguments at home because neither you nor kin are feeling quite up to par during the day, but at night all is harmonious. One critical word could lead to trouble.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You have to use care in motion during day or you could run into real trouble Also, be careful when making purchases. Don't go off on some tangent because you are not in a good mood.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Get your budget better organized and you need not fear being caught short of money. A feeling of depression should be easily removed. Use practical methods and you soon cheer up.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Try to cheer up those who are depressed and then much benefit can come from this tonight. Take the time to improve your appearance. Use that fine taste you possess.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Meditating on tenets that can give you a feeling of serenity is fine in the morning. Evening can be spent with cheerful friends you like. Be sure to do those errands. Study tonight.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Don't appear disappointed when a friend is unable to do you a favor. Do the work necessary to gain your personal aims. Avoid one who likes to undermine your efforts. Be gracious.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Take no risks whatever with your reputation, especially during the day. Civic matter is best handled in the evening. Make big strides to improve harmony in the home.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You have fine ideas but make sure that you first discuss them with a clever individual before you do anything about them. Steer clear of a fast-talking newcomer. Be wise.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Your intuitive faculties are likely to be faulty today, so don't follow their promptings or you could get into a lot of trouble. Plan the future more intelligently. Read tonight.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Steer clear of an associate who is too emotional during day. By evening you can come to a far better understanding. A situation arises that you don't like, but handle it wisely.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Do whatever will show those who have been good to you that you are most appreciative. You are not in the right mood to work so get busy improving your state of health. Be poised.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) A fine day to have the entertainment you want but be sure you're not extravagant in doing so. Making plans for the spring now is wise. Take your rightful place in society. Be wise.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be one of those young persons who appears to be more serious than the case may be. Be sure to give the right diet, have cheerful persons about, and give the right spiritual training that will bring out the true light in this nature. The field of business is very fine here, where much money can be made early in life. Fine ability at sports.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, MARCH 12, 1973

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You find it difficult to work today without feeling you are being imposed upon, or that others are trying to sell or buy from you with some ulterior design in mind. Take the time to objectively study what is really going on and don't get caught in the web of suspicion and martyrdom. Improvements favored in p.m.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Don't be irritated because a close tie disagrees with your ideas, but listen to the other side of the situation. Straighten out that matter at home wisely. Control your temper at all times.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Your judgment may be a little off base now so use more care in purchases, sales, etc. Go over your bank and other accounts and make sure they are correct. Don't act erratic in any way.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You have to give financial affairs more attention right now, or they are apt to go wrong. Budget with care and plan improvements to your property as well. Take it easy tonight; home is your best bet.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Although you are not in the mood to handle all those chores ahead of you, if you persevere they are soon out of the way. Then do whatever will improve your appearance. Avoid one who has an eye on your assets.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Good day to get rid of dull private affairs during your spare time and make your future happier. Give help generously to one who asks for it. Bring out that magnetic Leo quality.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Get busy at your own personal affairs and forget that troublesome matter with another. Some interesting group is after you to join now. Do join them later, but not yet. Take it easy tonight.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Take care not to force another to get into some civic project that appeals to you but not to him. Show admiration for one with whom you do business. Get the right results that way. Rest in p.m.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You have some commitment to discharge during day so don't get into something else and lose a good friend or fine benefits. Something may be worrisome, but take it in your stride. It's not as bad as you think.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You want to make new arrangements with key people in your life, but this is the wrong day for such. Study further into your plans so they are perfect. Take time later to be with good friends.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Don't get into that confusing situation with associates today or you really sink, but wait until all solidifies. Keep your end of agreements, do as you've promised. Don't argue about anything.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) A good day to get at that dull work that needs to be done. Study better ways of accomplishing your routine work, but don't put changes in operation yet. Test them in the morning.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Don't get into that recreation that usually is okay, but now could bring you nothing but headway to trouble. Keep promises made to others even if there are interruptions. Do some reading in p.m.

Couple Exchanges Vows Saturday

Miss Christine Annette Johnson became the bride of Jesse Carlos Cannon Saturday at three o'clock in the afternoon at St. James United Methodist Church. The Rev. Christian White officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Alpha Johnson of Kinston. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Carr Cannon of Rt. 3, Greenville.

The church was decorated with the traditional green and white. In the center of the background was a massive arrangement of white mums, gladioli, and pom pons flanked by single candleholders and standards of bridal greenery.

At the altar was a prie-dieu where the wedding ceremony took place. On each side were tiered candelabra holding 20 lighted chance candles and bouquets of white mums and pom pons. Pews were marked with white satin bows and greenery.

Mrs. Frances Cain was the organist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white formal gown of bridal mist and pearl trimmed with cluny lace, styled by Eve Musico for Milday Bridals. It was fashioned with a high see-through yoke outline with a ruffle and high wedding band collar, a high rise bodice and long lace sleeves. The lace and ruffle effects were repeated on the A-line skirt, hemline, and flowed into a full chapel length train. Her Julliet cap of matching lace and rosebuds was attached to a three tiered veil of solk illusion.

Mrs. Olin Thomas Lawson of Kinston was Matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Ikie Edward Arnold of Greenville and Miss Jacqueline Ward Cannon of Ayden, cousin of the bridegroom. They wore floor length gowns with white cluny lace sleeves. The skirts were of yellow organza with an empire waistline. They wore matching yellow picture hats.

The attendants carried princess baskets of many colors consisting of baby's breath and purple statice tied with purple and orchid satin bows with long streamers. The bride's mother wore a hybrid purple orchid corsage and the groom's mother wore a white cattleya orchid corsage.

Clifton Cannon served his son as best man. Ushers were Ikie Edward Arnold and David Jadie Spain of Greenville, James Ottis Cannon and Darrell Vernon Worthington, both cousins of the bridegroom, of Ayden.

The couple will reside in Greenville.

The bride is a graduate of East Carolina University and received her B.S. degree in early childhood education. The bridegeoom is a graduate of Appalachian State University and received his B.A. degree in political science. He is currently employed with Johnson Piano and Organ, Co., Kinston.

Reception

The refreshment, bride's and register tables were covered with white satin cloths and garlanded with green improved smilax. The refreshment table was centered with an arrangement of spring flowers flanked by five branched silver candelabra with matching bouquets. The punch bowl was encircled with smilax, while the bride's table featured a decorated wedding cake, decorated cake knife, toast glasses and arrangements of miniature carnations. The bride's book, on the register table, was a silver candelabra and nosegay.

A rehearsal dinner was given Friday night by the parents of the bridegroom in Ayden following the rehearsal. Members of the wedding party, close friends and rlatives were in attendance.

Southern Stoneware Is Becoming Popular

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Informal dinnerware, the rugged heavy table service that may be used indoors and out doors and goest from freezer to oven to table, is making great inroads into America's entertaining style.

In at least one are of Appalachia, the making of the stoneware has become a tourist attraction, and in six years its manufacture has helped put the depressed area on a better financial footing, observed Nancy Patterson, 46, who began her stoneware enterprise in Laurel Bloomery, Tenn., where the Appalachian Trail runs through the main street.

"In addition to the raw materials available in that part of the United States, the natives are ideal for their jobs. The women have done so much quilting and caning with their hands, they can paint perfect circles and dots freehand even in cups," she explained. In fact all handmade work — shaping on wheels, glaze-dipping and so on — requires little training.

On a visit to inspect the area with the stoneware business in mind ten years ago, it had been love at first sight, remarked Nancy, who lived there for two years as she sought government loans and working capital from friends. She opened an office in a log cabin and had 400 applicants for 16 jobs. Today there are 60 workers.

Her stoneware is considered unique in the United States. She developed it after sojourns abroad to countries that contributed to her knowledge. As a guest of the famed porcelain factory of Royal Copenhagen in Denmark, she parlayed a month's invitation into a two-year apprenticeship. When her work permit ran out she accepted an invitation from a Finnish stoneware factory where she worked at design for a year and a half. On a back-home tour, she stopped to study Chinese brush work in Taiwan, where she was invited by the Minister of Economics to help establish a dinnerware business for export to the United States. She launched it in 1957, but in 1961 on a visit home, she decided to stay.

The nonporous high-fired dishwasher-proof stoneware she developed seemed right "for the times." Her gamble paid off. In addition to young people latching on to it, long-time housewives gravitated to it. Last year's sales were up 34 per cent.

Nancy had started making porcelain after attending UCLA and the Los Angeles Art Center Collegeiof Design, and she had studied with well-known ceramisl, Albert King, where she learned about Chinese glazes and high-fired porcelain. Some stoneware pieces are shiny, others are matte finished.

Each piece of stoneware is handled 34 times before it is finished. Of her eight patterns — buyers haven't room to stock more — the most popular is a brown and gold one. This year she designed a line of drinking vessels, including a medieval goblet that holds 14 ounces.

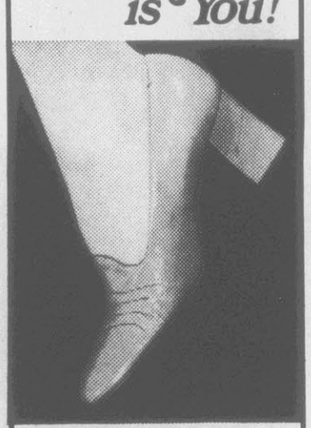

But there is more to making stoneware than earth, fire, air and water, she observes, because shapes aren't really traditional, and unlike low-fired earthwear it shrinks 15 per cent in production.

"Everything must balance and be examined for design flaws. A coffee cup goes through rigorous analysis — how does it look when it is full of coffee, how does it appeal when you pick up the cup (with big or little fingers), does it burn fingers, will the spoon stay on the saucer without falling off, can you pick up the saucer without tipping the cup. Is the shape appealing?

Hand-Operated Telephone Business Will Go Dial

By BRENDA W. ROTZOLL

MERIDEN, N.H. (UPI) — In 1904, Mary Chellis came home with her first baby and found her husband had installed a little present in the dining room.

It was a telephone switchboard, which Mrs. Chellis ran for the next 64 years until a broken hip halted her activities at the age of 85.

The Meriden Telephone Co. still is operated by the Chellis family from their home, although no longer from the dining room. It is the last remaining manually operated telephone exchange in New Hampshire, and one of the last in America.

The 210 subscribers turn a crank to ring the operator, who plugs in the calls and turns a key to ring. An antique hand-ringing crank stays on the board for rare occasions when the power goes out and the emergency system in the basement doesn't cut right in.

Fascinating Machines

A long and friendly phase of telephone history will end Sept. 1 when Frank Chellis, 50, Mary's second son, and his sister and sons, convert the operation to dial. They'll be going out of the hand-operated telephone business, but not out of business—they have turned down several offers to sell out to holding companies and thus far can't imagine giving up the family firm.

The family got into the telephone business in 1899. Farmer Harold Chellis, then 23, was fascinated by "those talking machines" and rigged up a line from his house to the homes of two neighbors.

More and more neighbors wanted to get on the line, and did—all on the same line for several years. In 1904 New England Telephone Co. persuaded Chellis to install a switchboard and take long distance calls. By 1909 the company had issued its first classified directory—feed store ads were printed on the sides of a large piece of cardboard, with 59 subscribers listed.

Three, including a doctor, had private lines. The other 56 shared six lines between them, and nonsubscribers who wanted to send a message from the switchboard paid five cents for the privilege.

The days have long gone when the switchboard passed messages, but it still can set up a line intercept to switch calls from switchboard room to office, two rooms away, and inform callers "he's away for a week."

Home economists say that one cent out of every food dollar goes into the packaging materials used by food processors.

The Stars Won't Tell Gender

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a 28-year-old wife and mother. We have six darling little girls. We kept hoping for a boy, but never had one.

I had my horoscope read last week, and this lady told me if I had another baby it would be a boy! This really got me all excited, and if I could be sure I'd have a boy, I would have another baby. I love my six little daughters dearly, but I wouldn't want another girl.

Do you have any faith in astrology? I am an Aries and my husband is a Libra if that means anything.

WANTS A BOY

DEAR WANTS: I had my horoscope read last year by an expert who did not know who I was. She told me that I had hidden talents and I should try to find some kind of career to fill my idle hours. She also said my husband [who, incidentally has never changed a light bulb] was handy around the house. If you want to gamble go to Las Vegas.

DEAR ABBY: After 23 years of being a virgin I gave myself to a guy I thought I loved. I never had another guy and never wanted one—until now. I've never discussed my sex life with anyone so I really don't know if my case is special or not. My boy friend calls me a nagging pain-in-the neck. You see, he doesn't kiss me before or after. He never was overly affectionate but he used to kiss me more before I gave in to him.

Maybe I'm expecting too much, but I feel so cheap having sex with a guy who doesn't even kiss me. This isn't what I expected lovemaking to be like at all. I am a clean and attractive girl, but it seems like my boy friend wants just one thing, and after he gets it he hardly pays any attention to me. Is there something wrong with me? Or is it him?

FEELING BLUE

DEAR FEELING: First, let's get our definitions straight. "Having sex" and "making love" are two different things. Having sex is grabbing whoever is handy, right now, without tenderness or preliminaries. Making love is caring and sharing and wanting to give pleasure more than getting it. You want someone to make love to you. Your boy friend wants someone to have sex with.

DEAR ABBY: I am 20 years old and I'm going with this great guy who wants to marry me. Well, I'm 250 pounds, and he's always after me to lose weight, but I'm happy the way I am.

It may sound crazy, but I enjoy making people laugh, and being fat helps a lot. I am not self-conscious about the way I look. In fact, I make jokes about it.

Also, when I walk down the street alone at night I feel safer than a girl with a good figure. Will you please tell my boy friend, and other guys whose girls are overweight, that it doesn't bother us as much as they think.

OVERWEIGHT IN CLEVELAND

DEAR OVERWEIGHT: Speak for yourself. I've never known a fat girl who didn't desperately want a good figure. Stop rationalizing, and take your boy friend's advice before you lose a great guy. [P. S. That myth about fat girls being "safer" than girls with good figures is absurd. In fact, they're not as safe. They can't run as fast.]

DEAR ABBY: Do you think I'm being unfair to my husband for refusing to go to bed with him? He hasn't taken a bath since our son's wedding which was three years ago last June.

In the 30 years we've been married I can count the baths he's taken on my fingers. He says I am too "picky."

PICKY IN NEW ORLEANS

DEAR PICKY: Unfair? Hardly. Tell your man, "No bath, no beddy bye with me, brother!" [P. S. And a little soft soap wouldn't hurt.]

Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L. A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Luncheon Given Club Members

The De Nova Book Club met Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Burt Aycock for a buffet luncheon.

Dr. J. E. Clement, local physician, spoke to the group on present abortion laws and techniques. He reviewed the facts and figures showing major changes in society and abortion. A question and answer period followed the program.

A slate of officers for the new year was presented during the business session. Plans were made for future meetings, the new book club calendar was presented and books exchanged.

The next meeting will be a luncheon and program at the home of Mrs. Walker Allen on Tuesday, March 20.

Home Work Causes Husband Trouble

HAMBURG, West Germany (WNS) — Josef Guttmann, who lost his job after a ski accident that will keep him housebound for six months, did not object when his wife Hilda returned to her profession as a nurse. Now he threatens to leave her, however, "because she keeps bringing her work home with her. We've had as many as three male patients in the house at one time."

In today's mobile society, home economists suggest that in choosing furniture for a house an eye to moving ease should guide selection as well as the attractiveness of the item.

Some Brides Of War Make It; Others Cry A Lot

EDITOR'S NOTE — As in all wars, some of America's soldiers have come away from the battlefields with brides. How are they adjusting to a life where everything from language to the weather is so different? Some are making it. Others cry a lot.

By ANN BLACKMAN
Associated Press Writer

SPRING LAKE, N.C. (AP) — When Xen Thi Richie lets her thoughts drift back to Vietnam, she remembers seeing movies of America — "so pretty and beautiful" — nothing about the muddy trailer park near Ft. Bragg where she lives today.

Army Spec. 5 Dennis Richie asked her to marry him, convincing her to leave the resort town of Vung Tau on the South China Sea where she said she worked as a bargirl.

"When in Vietnam, he went my way," Mrs. Richie explained through an interpreter. "In America I follow his."

But she admits, it's not easy.

Xen Thi Richie is one of about 5,000 Vietnamese war brides who have come to America in the past four years. She has tried to adapt quickly, but everything is different: The customs, food, language, manners, weather.

Of the two dozen Vietnamese women interviewed, those who had been exposed to Western culture before have had less trouble adjusting to the changes.

Mrs. Richie, a delicate woman with striking black hair, finds herself in a small country town miles away from the big-city skyscrapers she said she had dreamed about. Her biggest disappointment, she said, is that she is dependent on her husband to drive her everywhere.

"I can't walk from the house to the store or the movies," she said. "My husband must drive me, and much of the time, he is too busy."

So, much of the time she stays home.

Richie, a thin man who has been in the service nine years, said he talks to his wife like a small child because she speaks little English. And still, much is misunderstood.

A few trailers away, Air Force Staff Sgt. Edward G. Miller of Baltimore lives with his camera-shy Vietnamese wife and their 3-month-old son, Edward III. Miller, a hefty man with a tattoo on his arm and a gold cross around his neck, said he speaks "only the dirty words" in Vietnamese.

His wife's mother was killed during the Tet offensive in 1968. The wife, who asked that her name not be used, insists she doesn't like Vietnam — "Vietnamese people No. 10" — she says in the G.I. slang that rates all good things No. 1 and all bad No. 10, but she is desperately homesick for her grandmother and little sister.

One Vietnamese woman who has lived in America for five years said she is most bothered by the fast pace many Americans keep.

"Everything is slow down at home," she said. "You don't rush for everything. You have siesta at lunchtime. Here you rush to laundry, rush to store, rush to pick up kids at school. At home, we don't rush, ever.

"At home I had three maids. Here I have a dishwasher and a vacuum cleaner, but I have to do all the work myself."

Samuel M. James of Durham, N.C., a Baptist missionary who counsels 20 of the 100 Vietnamese-American couples living in the Ft. Bragg area, said communication, money and homesickness are three big problems most of these couples face.

"If they don't speak each other's language on an in-depth level, they can't talk when they're angry, crying or when they hurt," James said in an interview. "In Vietnam they can live very well on the American dollars—servants, stereos, nice clothes.

James, 40, who has worked as a missionary with his family in Vietnam since 1962 — "before the troops came" — speaks Vietnamese fluently. He is in the United States for 18 months to finish a doctoral dissertation on Vietnamese women married to Americans.

He said he estimates that about 50 per cent of the Vietnamese women married to Americans now living in the Ft. Bragg area are ex-bargirls, although most married for love, he said some married for real or imagined luxuries.

James said many of the Vietnamese women he counsels have trouble adapting to American customs. The husbands often ask James to explain what they consider to be the role of the American wife.

Another complained that it embarrassed him when his wife let their 2-year-old son run outside in warm months with no pants on, a universal practice in Vietnam.

In both cases, the women simply had not understood the differences in American custom until James explained it in their language.

James said many of the women complain that when their husbands try to teach them English, they are too demanding. Most said they prefer to learn from a stranger.

James said that distrust is another problem. "The Vietnamese wife often feels inferior to American women and knows her husband comes in contact with them every day. She thinks, 'he can talk with them in a way he can't talk with me.'"

One Army medic, who asked that his name not be used, pumps gas at night to make enough extra money to send $50 a month to his wife's family in Vietnam. She worries about them constantly and demands that. But many a night he comes home from the service station to find his wife in tears, positive that he has been with another woman.

Peter M. Swartz, a Navy lieutenant in Washington who is married to a Vietnamese, agrees with James about the distrust problem.

"Vietnamese in Vietnam think America is filled with men who run away and cheat on their wives," said Swartz, who works in the Pentagon. "In most Vietnamese-American marriages I know, it's really hard for Vietnamese to trust their husbands ... I think it comes from the impermanence in Vietnam now and the reputation Americans have there."

Swartz, who is 29 and has been married a year and a half, said he solves the problem this way: "I go out of the way so that she understands where I am and what I'm doing so she doesn't suspect me of evil or wrong. I have to be more careful and use a lot of tender loving care.

"Many Vietnamese come from a pretty insecure background. It's not much different than being married to anyone with a security problem."

Swartz said he avoided the volumes of paperwork that surround a Vietnamese-American marriage in Vietnam, by bringing his girlfriend, Nguyen Thi Thuy, to the United States to be married. He also avoided the bribes that range from $1,000 to $2,000 often necessary to get the paperwork completed.

Congress created K visa legislation in April, 1970 for fiances of American citizens to come to America 90 days preceding their marriage. Since then, the State Department reports 1,533 Vietnamese finances have come. In addition, 3,691 Vietnamese women have come as spouses on immigrant visas.

Mrs. Donald Brewster, who has worked at the South Vietnamese Embassy in Washington for six years, said she often receives telephone calls from Vietnamese women complaining that their husbands are mistreating them.

"Divorce is foreign to the Vietnamese way of life, and to go home would be to lose face," she said.

Ross and Minh Boyle of Reston, Va., have been married four years. They met in Saigon where she was a pharmacist and Boyle a consultant for the United States Agency for International Development.

Before she became pregnant with her second child, Mrs. Boyle played golf five days a week on the course near their split-level house. She likes baseball, cheers for the Washington Redskins, and her husband says she charms his business associates.

"I'm very happy here," she said, speaking softly. "I like this country very much, but I love Vietnam."

GOOD COMEBACK

ATLANTA (UPI) — Although Atlanta was virtually destroyed by Union troops during the Civil War, the city's official population of 21,789 in 1870 was more than twice that of 1860. By 1870 recovery from war destruction was almost complete.

Child's Mental Health Is Parental Responsibility

By DR. HAIM GINOTT

Note to readers: The encounters depicted in my column are designed to serve as a practical guide to improved communication. They are not to be taken literally. They should be adapted to individual situations and individual ways of speaking.

LABELS CAN BE destructive to even a small person's opinion of himself. This dialogue illustrates how a mother protected her 5-year-old son's self-image.

Jay came home from camp and said, "Mommy, I'm a sissy."

Mother: Is that what you think of yourself?

Mother: Oh.

Jay: I was afraid I might drown.

Jane, 9, and two girl friends were on the way to a Scout cooking class after school. One girl suggested a short cut through the dark basement of a complex building. The girls lost their way and were late for the meeting. When she returned home, Jane told her mother of the incident.

"I didn't think it was safe," she said. "I didn't really want to join them but I was afraid to say no."

Mother replied, "'You learned an important lesson. You can rely on your feelings and judgment."

Mother intentionally avoided negative statements: "So why did you listen to your friends if you thought it was unsafe? Don't you have a brain of your own? That was a stupid thing you did." Instead, Mother sent a brief and clear message supporting her daughter's faith in her own judgment.

MOTHER BROKE a destructive pattern of communication between her young son and herself, in this brief incident.

Bert, 5, had a tendency to blame others when he was in trouble. For example, he asked Mother for ice cream money. She gave him a quarter. He went out to play and lost it. He ran home crying, "Oh, Mommy. I can't find my ice cream money."

"What a pity," Mother replied. "Why did you give me money when you knew I was going out to play?" Bert asked accusingly.

Usually at that point, Mother would lose her benign demeanor, answer him harshly, and the mood of the day would be spoiled. This time, Mother was prepared. Instead of becoming defensive (Why did you ask me for the money when you knew you were going out to play? Why can't you be more careful? Money doesn't grow on trees, you know), Mother said, "You wish I didn't give you money before playtime?" "Yes," Bert answered. "So do I," Mother said. "We have both learned something today."

IN THE FOLLOWING dialogue, Mother's responses to her 6-year-old turned a mishap into a supportive conversation:

Mother: Oh.

Mother; I'll be pleased to receive it whenever it's ready.

Mother provided healing responses. She abstained from criticism, (Why do you always lose things?). Instead, she thanked her daughter for making the picutre, sympathized with her loss, and gave her time to replace it.

D.H. Conley HIGHLIGHTS

By MARY L. BRANCH

Danna Sayce has been nominated from D.H. Conley High School to attend the summer leadership conference in Mars Hill. Congratulations, Donna; we hope you are selected.

Beth Hunsucker, Darlene Thompson, and Donna Sayce will attend a youth legislature assembly at Sir Walter Hotel March 16-18.

Miss Celia Hall from East Carolina University began her internship at Conley on March 7. She is the first student assigned to the guidance department.

Emmett Koonce and Ken Treadway plan to take approximately 60 students to tour Raleigh, March 14. They will visit the state house and the capitol.

Representatives from Pitt Tech, the Employment Commission, and Dupont will be visiting our school Wendesday, along with Mrs. Anna Fishel, to confer with students.

Conley's school testing program will begin March 14. Grades ninth and eleventh will have achievement tests, grade ten, aptitude; and grade twelve will take the Armed Forces test. Good luck to all of us.!

Inez Ellison's ninth grade English class was entertained by Charles Wells, a parent who showed film presentations on a trip he went on in Arica. He also had objects which had brought back.

The IPS All-Stars had an enjoyable trip to NASA Space Center at Hampton, Va. They were officially welcomed by NASA officials. The group viewed a film concerning the research work at NASA and then toured the exhibitions at the center. Some highlights that were observed were Alan Sheppard's space suit, an Apollo capsule, and pictures from the Tiros weather staellite.

They also toured Yorktown, Williamsburg, and Jamestown the following day. The group learned a great deal and profited by the trip. The All-Stars wish to thank everyone who supported their fund-raising projects.

Student of the week in science is William Smith. Most improved student is Geneva Mobley. Mike Clendenen will go to the District Science Fair at E.C.U. on March 16. This project is entitled "Van de Gnaff Generator."

Mrs. Leary's IPS classes have been using photographic plates and Geiger counter to test different substances for radioactivity. The are now studying the uses and dangers of radiation. In addition, all of the students are doing library research on one aspect of radioactivity.

Miss Stacy and Mrs. Leary's physic classes have been studying the properties of various types of waves. As part of their study, they have conducted wave experiments using instruments, such as springs, slinkies, ripple tanks, twintable oscillator, loudspeaker, oscilloscope, filmloops and filmstrips.

Thomas McCaskill from Winterville Insurance Agency talked with Mrs. Mary Thompson's business law class about different insurance policies and what they cover. I found this discussion most interesting.

Mrs. Lehman, from the adoption agency social service and Mrs. Honeycutt from foster care division of social service talked with the family life class Tuesday.

William Ricks from the telephone and telegraph company in Tarboro will confer with some seniors next week.

Mrs. Beulah Mebane's health and management class is learning how to make patients more comfortable in bed. The co-op class is learning how to get the most out of a dollar. The first-year class in home economics is learning to understand babies' needs so they can learn to understand themselves.

Mrs. Mebane, chairman of NCHEA By-Laws Committee, will attend a meeting in Raleigh this Saturday. It is a North Carolina Home Economics Association executive board meeting and is held for the purpose of reporting activities of the constitution and by-laws committee.

Mrs. Brenda Little's sewing class is paneling draperies from the experience they received on their field trip last week. I think they are really good seamstresses.

Lorraid DeCuzzi, FBLA State vice-president; Debra Daniels, Conley FHA president; Rudy Morris and Cathy Gaskins, Task Force Members, accompanied by Mrs. Mary Thompson, attended on Wednesday, March 7. Brooks Whitehurst, Technical Services Superintendent, Texas Gulf Corporation was the main speaker.

Garland Little's mechanics class has just about completed their upstairs classroom and office. They have been working in carburetion disassembling and displaying all carburetor parts. Some students are working with the ignition system dissassembling, and displaying ignition parts. Also, they are continuing their body work and painting. The welding group has completed building two antennas for the electronic glass to be installed on top of the school building for a radio.

A beautiful lawn is the result of a job done properly, but it takes knowledge and work, says Sutton Austin, horticulture class instructor. To have a beautiful lawn you must use the right kind of seed four our area. The seeds recommended for the Coastal plain area are Bermuda, centipede, tall fescue, Zoysia and St. Augustine.

Students are learning that a well-kept lawn makes up three-fourths of the landscape for most settings. The lawn must be established and maintained properly to accentuate the other plants used in the overall landscape plan.

Mr. Austin's horticulture classis fixing a mini-garden. A mini-garden can be grown in a basket, a box, or any container that will hold dirt. It is coming along really great. they've planted tomatoes, beets, garden peas, cabbage, collards, green and red pepper, and plan to plant beans soon.

Baseball season is beginning. Conley Vikings played Washington Friday night. See you next week!

The academic status of librarians in North Carolina's colleges and universities is surveyed in an article by East Carolina University librarian Anne Carson Cargile which appears in the current issue of "North Carolina Libraries."

Mrs. Cargile, curriculum librarian at ECU's Joyner Library, wrote the article on the basis of returned questionnaires sent to 26 of North Carolina's public and private colleges and universities.

Psst! Want To Buy A Wide Western Tie Comrade?

By GORDON F. JOSELOFF

MOSCOW (UPI) — Psst! Want to Buy a tie, comrade? The black marketeer displays his wares. Tie and rubles quickly change hands, and another Soviet citizen adopts the latest fashion craze—wide, Western-style ties in colorful prints.

Soviet men, not usually known for their fashion-consciousness, have gone wild over them.

In an attempt to satisfy demand, the Ministry of Light Industry has stepped up production, but it is still only a drop in the bucket.

A ministry official told the Komsomolskaya Pravda newspaper several women's clothing factories had switched production to wide ties but that it would be five to six months before their output hits the stores.

The newspaper recently called for a crackdown on street peddlers it said were getting 10 to 15 rubles ($12 to $18) for each tie.

Every day, even in the coldest weather, there is a long line outside, mostly men. A policeman is needed to control traffic flow through the door.

Once inside, shoppers usually grab six or eight of the striped, patterned or polk-dotted ties. They are a far cry from the drab, narrow neckware on sale at most other stores. But there is even a shortage of these, too.

Galina M. Naumova, chief of production at the Ministry of Light Industry, explained the production problem this way:

"A year and a half ago we had plenty of ties. They were made by big and small factories. The demand for ties in principle was satisfied. But in the republics production was sharply cut back and now we have a shortage."

Shoppers were indignant about the problem in letters to Komsomolskaya Pravda.

"A tie is a trifling thing, but this trifle is indispensable for a large number of men," wrote I. Sokolov from Moscow. "Where is it? Lines at shops make people waste time and put them in a bad mood. It's high time that the guilty people be made to answer for this situation."

A Kiev resident said: "People should be made responsible for what they are supposed to do. If they can't, they should be discharged."

The newspaper applauded the ministry's efforts but also sounded a skeptical note. What guarantee is there, it asked, that the conversion of factories from women's items to tie production would not cause a shortage of feminine apparel.

Parasite Could Be Spread Over U.S.

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (UPI) — A parasite which causes liver enlargement in afflicted Eskimos and signs visible on their x-ray studies may gradually spread across the United States, three physicians here predict.

It is called alveolar hydatid disease and is caused by the larval stage of a tapeworm. Long known to occur in man in Central Europe, Siberia and the Arctic regions of North America, the parasite was recently found in flesh-eating animals and rodents in five North Central states. In North America, only five cases in human beings have been reported outside Alaska, one of them in St. Louis.

The disease may ultimately be fatal because of liver failure or involvement of other organs but it can be diagnosed by x-ray studies, according to Drs. William M. Thompson and Dan P. Chisholm, radiologists and Dr. Robert Tank, pathologist, all of the Alaska Native Medical Center. They diagnosed 27 cases among the Eskimos and found significant x-ray signs in the livers of all.

Foxes are the most common hosts. Wolves and dogs carry two other forms using caribou, moose, reindeer and cows as intermediate hosts. In urban areas, the physicians say, the possibility exists that a domestic cycle involving house mice and cats might become established with man accidentally becoming the intermediate host. He ingests the infective eggs, which hatch in the duodenum. The resulting embryos penetrate the intestinal wall, enter the circulation and localize in the liver.

You Can Cut Off Family Squabbles If You Know How!

Quiz: How Much Do You Know About Success?

Ask Them Yourself

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR HORACE STONEHAM,
president of the San Francisco Giants

How could you afford to trade a player of Willie Mays' caliber? It seems to me as long as a player is a consistent asset to a team, he should be retained.—Ollie Clayton, Sr., Lovejoy, Ill.

● Willie Mays has had a love affair with New York since he broke in with the Giants in 1951. We wanted him to be able to finish up his career in a city where he could make a much better financial score (off advertisements and promotions) than he could in San Francisco. We would not have considered trading Willie to any other city. Also, because of our decreased attendance, it was getting harder to afford Willie's considerable salary.

FOR LORNA LUFT, singer

How do you feel before you step out to do your nightclub act—scared?—D. Jacobs, San Mateo, Calif.

● No, not scared—I get excited. But usually I'm very quiet before I go on. I just sit in my room waiting. When Ann-Margret and I were both working in Miami recently (she's about my favorite person by the way), I was eating a salad in my room ten minutes before my act, and she thought that was incredible! "I'm falling apart," she said, "and you're eating?"

FOR SHELLEY WINTERS

Do you think a woman should be President of the United States?—Mary Landers, Middletown, N.Y.

● It's an excellent idea, especially since women have a built-in desire to perpetuate the human race. More than men. They are less tempted to go to war, and nationalism wouldn't mean as much to them as it would to men. Yes, I think women can do everything that men can do, except maybe lift heavy loads. And that includes the Presidency.

FOR JEAN STAPLETON of "All in the Family"

In your show's opening theme, "Those Were the Days," are you actually playing the piano or is it done by someone else?—Mrs. Joe Wright, Sinton, Texas

● I really play the piano. The opening you see each week was done at the beginning of the season and put on tape. It is replayed on the air. But for the audience that comes to see the show being taped each week, Carroll and I perform the song live, and I play the piano.

FOR JACK PALANCE

Don't you mind always playing the heavy in films?—B. D., Coshocton, Ohio

● I don't care what I play—as long as they pay me for it. But the truth is—I would like to play Jesus Christ. Not from a religious point of view. I simply want to play him as the man he was. But I am also enough of a realist to know that I am not going to get the great roles. They go to a handful of people, of whom I am not one.

FOR ISAAC ASIMOV, writer

With as many books as you have written, I wonder how you find time to do anything else but write. What is a typical day for you?—Jeff Kanipe, Corpus Christi, Texas

● I'm sorry to say that there is nothing dramatic about my life. I publish as many books as I do because I am not really interested in doing anything but writing. My day consists of writing, reading and an occasional business luncheon. I sometimes watch television in the evening. I don't travel. I don't take vacations. I have no hobbies.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT SPIRO T. AGNEW

What sort of reception did you receive on college campuses during the past year?—Miss Radi Leeds, Reseda, Calif.

● The receptions have been gratifying. Although I met with some heckling by small groups of individuals in several campus appearances during the recent campaign, the majority of students seemed to respect my right to speak. In appearances that I made of a nonpolitical nature, I found the students to be genuinely interested in hearing my views.

FOR FAYE DUNAWAY

What man would you like to meet most?—J. Burns, Dayton, Ohio

● Bobby Fischer. Maybe because I've become a chess nut.

● My mother was born in Italy, my father was born in the United States of Irish descent. They met in New York's Hell's Kitchen. My grandfather was a barber, and most of my relatives were cops. I didn't even graduate from high school. High society? Hardly!

A Psychologist's Advice

You Can Stop Family Fights—If

"You can often prevent a family fight," says a noted authority, "but first you must face some facts about yourself."

WHEN LOGIC WON'T WORK: The husband's anger comes out in a flood of emotion, overpowering the wife's logic. Until his emotions are somehow "used up," her logic simply can't help.

In one way, family arguments are like babies: You have to grow up a little before you find out where they both come from. But though we all do solve the baby puzzle eventually, many of us regularly shout our way through unnecessary family squabbles and battles because we do not really understand where family arguments come from, how they begin and how they develop.

Where there are deep family disagreements, arguments may be inevitable. Much family ill feeling and bickering, however, are pointless. No real differences are involved, only ignorance of how other people's emotions work. These meaningless hassles, which often quickly degenerate into wounding genuine fights, can be avoided.

It could happen like this: As they settle down in the evening to watch TV, a wife says to her husband, "The clothing store called. They have the snowsuit in Michael's size. Could you pick it up tomorrow? You drive right by the store on your way home."

Her husband's response astonishes her. "You think I've got nothing to do but run errands. I work during the day. If you didn't waste so much time on the phone, you'd have time to get the snowsuit yourself."

Hurt by his attack, the wife tries a combination of logic and striking back: "It'll only take you ten minutes. If you worked half as hard as I do, you'd find out what busy is. You'd probably earn a lot more money too!"

Or down the block a husband asks his wife, "Want to invite my brother's family for Thanksgiving dinner this year? We went there the last two years." He is met by a blast of anger and cold refusal. "You're good at thinking up work for me, aren't you? Why don't you fix some of the things around here you never get to?" And off they go, too!

When something you say makes another person in your family angry, you can avoid a battle, states Dr. Jesse S. Nirenberg, a New York-based consulting industrial psychologist, who is a specialist in the skills of effective communicating. Dr. Nirenberg is the author of the best-selling book, "Getting Through to People," and since 1957 he has conducted communication workshops throughout the U.S. and Canada.

Talking Out Your Anger. "You can often prevent a family fight, but first you must face some facts about yourself," Dr. Nirenberg says. Your natural reaction when you're attacked—when you're told you waste too much time on the phone or that you don't fix the things you should—will be anger. Then because angry people want to hurt each other, you'll want to strike back.

Or, if you're really trying to control yourself, you may mix logic with your counterattack, as the wife did ("But it will only take you ten minutes"). You will be wasting your time, Dr. Nirenberg explains. Until you allow the other person to release his anger, he is incapable of concentrating on anything you say. He will not hear or respond to your logic. "The only solution is to allow the other person to talk out his anger. Only when the pressure of his feelings is relieved, will he be able to listen to reason."

A good general rule for avoiding pointless, wounding family battles is to stop when you hear a strong emotional reaction from the other person. Immediately force yourself to forget about the meaning of what is being said and react only to the emotion. At the height of his feeling, the other person probably doesn't mean all he's saying anyway. But until the person releases his emotion, you won't be able to get through to him. That means when the husband accused his wife of too much telephone gossiping, she might have saved the evening by resisting her urges to strike back and to use logic.

As Dr. Nirenberg has developed the example, the wife would use only a short, neutral statement in her reaction to her husband's emotion—just to get him to talk and vent his anger. "I guess you do have a lot of pressure on you," she might say. Then it would be his turn again. As he talks or shouts, his anger will emerge and wear itself out. Often he will grow louder and louder. He seems to be building up. Actually it is the emotion being discharged. Since logic is useless, the other person must keep answering with short neutral statements. Then let it be the angry person's turn again. Don't challenge his reasoning and don't waste your time defending yourself. This only feeds rather than releases the other's anger. As the emotion is finally discharged, reason returns.

Why Were You So Angry? Then is the time you might want to return to your original subject and ask, "If I have them wrap the snowsuit before you come, do you think it would still take too much time?" Or you might want to remark, "You were so angry. It made me wonder if there was something else besides the snowsuit that you were annoyed about?" At this point the husband may blurt out, "Yes, I asked you to take my suits to the cleaner. You forgot. Now you ask me to pick up a snowsuit." Or the wife may retort, "Thanksgiving! Christmas! All the holidays fall on me! You never help with anything. Not even gifts for your family or decorating the house!" It is also very possible that both these reasons might have burst out during the time the angry man and woman were letting out their original emotion.

A Common Mistake. However, it is a common mistake, Dr. Nirenberg warns, to believe that there is a "real" hidden cause for all temper outbursts. It is true that emotion shifts. You can be angry with your boss or even with yourself and let it out on someone else. Or you may be angry about one action and do your shouting about another. But many explosions have no "real" reason. They are simply the result of the ebb and flow of emotions, a building up over many frustrations, and then the final straw. At other times the person himself is not aware of what is causing his powerful reactions. He himself doesn't understand what is the "real" cause of his temper display. Amateur psychological probing by a family member in these instances would be useless and could provoke further irritation.

The "Generalization" Trap. The urge to think well of yourself is a different kind of psychological fact. Everyone should use it to avert family battles. When you're trying to persuade a teenager to straighten his room and you tell him, "Your room's a pigpen. Why are you such a slob?"—you've lost. By generalizing about his personality (calling him a "slob"), you've attacked his instinct for thinking well of himself. Since this is one of the strongest drives any human being has, says Dr. Nirenberg, you've alienated him completely as far as this discussion is concerned.

"You never listen when I tell you about a problem. You're so inconsiderate," complains one spouse to the other. Another total loss. By generalizing about his personality ("you're so inconsiderate"), you've tried to lower his feelings about himself. His powerful drive to think well of himself rears back. You can't be right! He's not an "inconsiderate person." He won't think poorly of himself! The battle is on.

Talk about what the person does rather than what he is. When you say, "Your room is a mess!" or "You didn't listen when I told you about my problem," you are talking about what the person does, about his behavior. You can even discuss a pattern of behavior. "I've tried to tell you about problems at work many times. I don't get any response." As long as you stay with specifics of behavior, you have a chance of getting the action you want from the other person. As soon as you generalize about and assault someone's personality, you have no chance at all.

Helping Someone Change His Mind. Then there's the wife who declares, "We definitely can't afford a boat. I never have any money for things we really need around here."

Arguing at this point that you can afford a boat is useless. Even if she sees you are right, she'll feel foolish being proved wrong and may only become stubborn. Instead, if you're certain of your facts, ask her what important things have been neglected. In order to anwser you, Dr. Nirenberg explains, she is forced to really examine her position. She may realize that there is some truth on your side. Still, she'll fear looking silly if she changes her mind. This is the time to protect her feelings. Reassure her that her ideas do make good sense in many family situations. But your family has finished the car payments and the extra family cash paid for the new wallpaper that she wanted last winter. Now, under these circumstances, doesn't she think you could afford the $300 for the boat?

The point is to make it possible for her to change her mind without losing her good opinion of herself or feeling that she looks flighty or foolish.

Talking in Specifics. In mentioning a specific sum, $300 (instead of saying, "We can afford some money"), the husband used another important rule. He talked in a specific amount. No computer could be programmed to estimate how many family arguments begin because people say, "I'll be ready to leave for Grandma's in a little while" or "Let's have some people over" or "It won't cost too much." When Mother thinks that "a little while" means 12 noon and she hurries to be ready only to find Dad's vanished on a Sunday errand because "a little while" to him means about one o'clock, there are going to be raised voices. "I'll be ready to leave in a little while" should have been met with a question. "What time do you mean?" When you're doing the talking, use specifics. When others speak, avoid misunderstandings that ignite family arguments by finding out exactly what they mean.

By using such communication skills as Dr. Nirenberg suggests and the facts about human emotions that he explains, you can defuse and avoid many typical family confrontations.

Why do you smoke?

Yet you enjoy it.

Which brings us to Vantage.

Vantage is the cigarette for people who don't entertain the idea of giving up cigarettes because they find cigarettes too entertaining.

Vantage is the cigarette for people who have come to realize that most cigarettes that give them the flavor they want also give them a lot of the 'tar' and the nicotine that they may not want.

Vantage is the cigarette for people who've found that most low 'tar' cigarettes don't give them anything at all.

The thing that makes Vantage special is that its filter is based on a new design concept that gives smokers the flavor of a full-flavor cigarette without anywhere near the 'tar' and nicotine.

Now we don't want to suggest that Vantage is the lowest 'tar' and nicotine cigarette you'll find.

It isn't.

And that's why you smoke. Right?

Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.

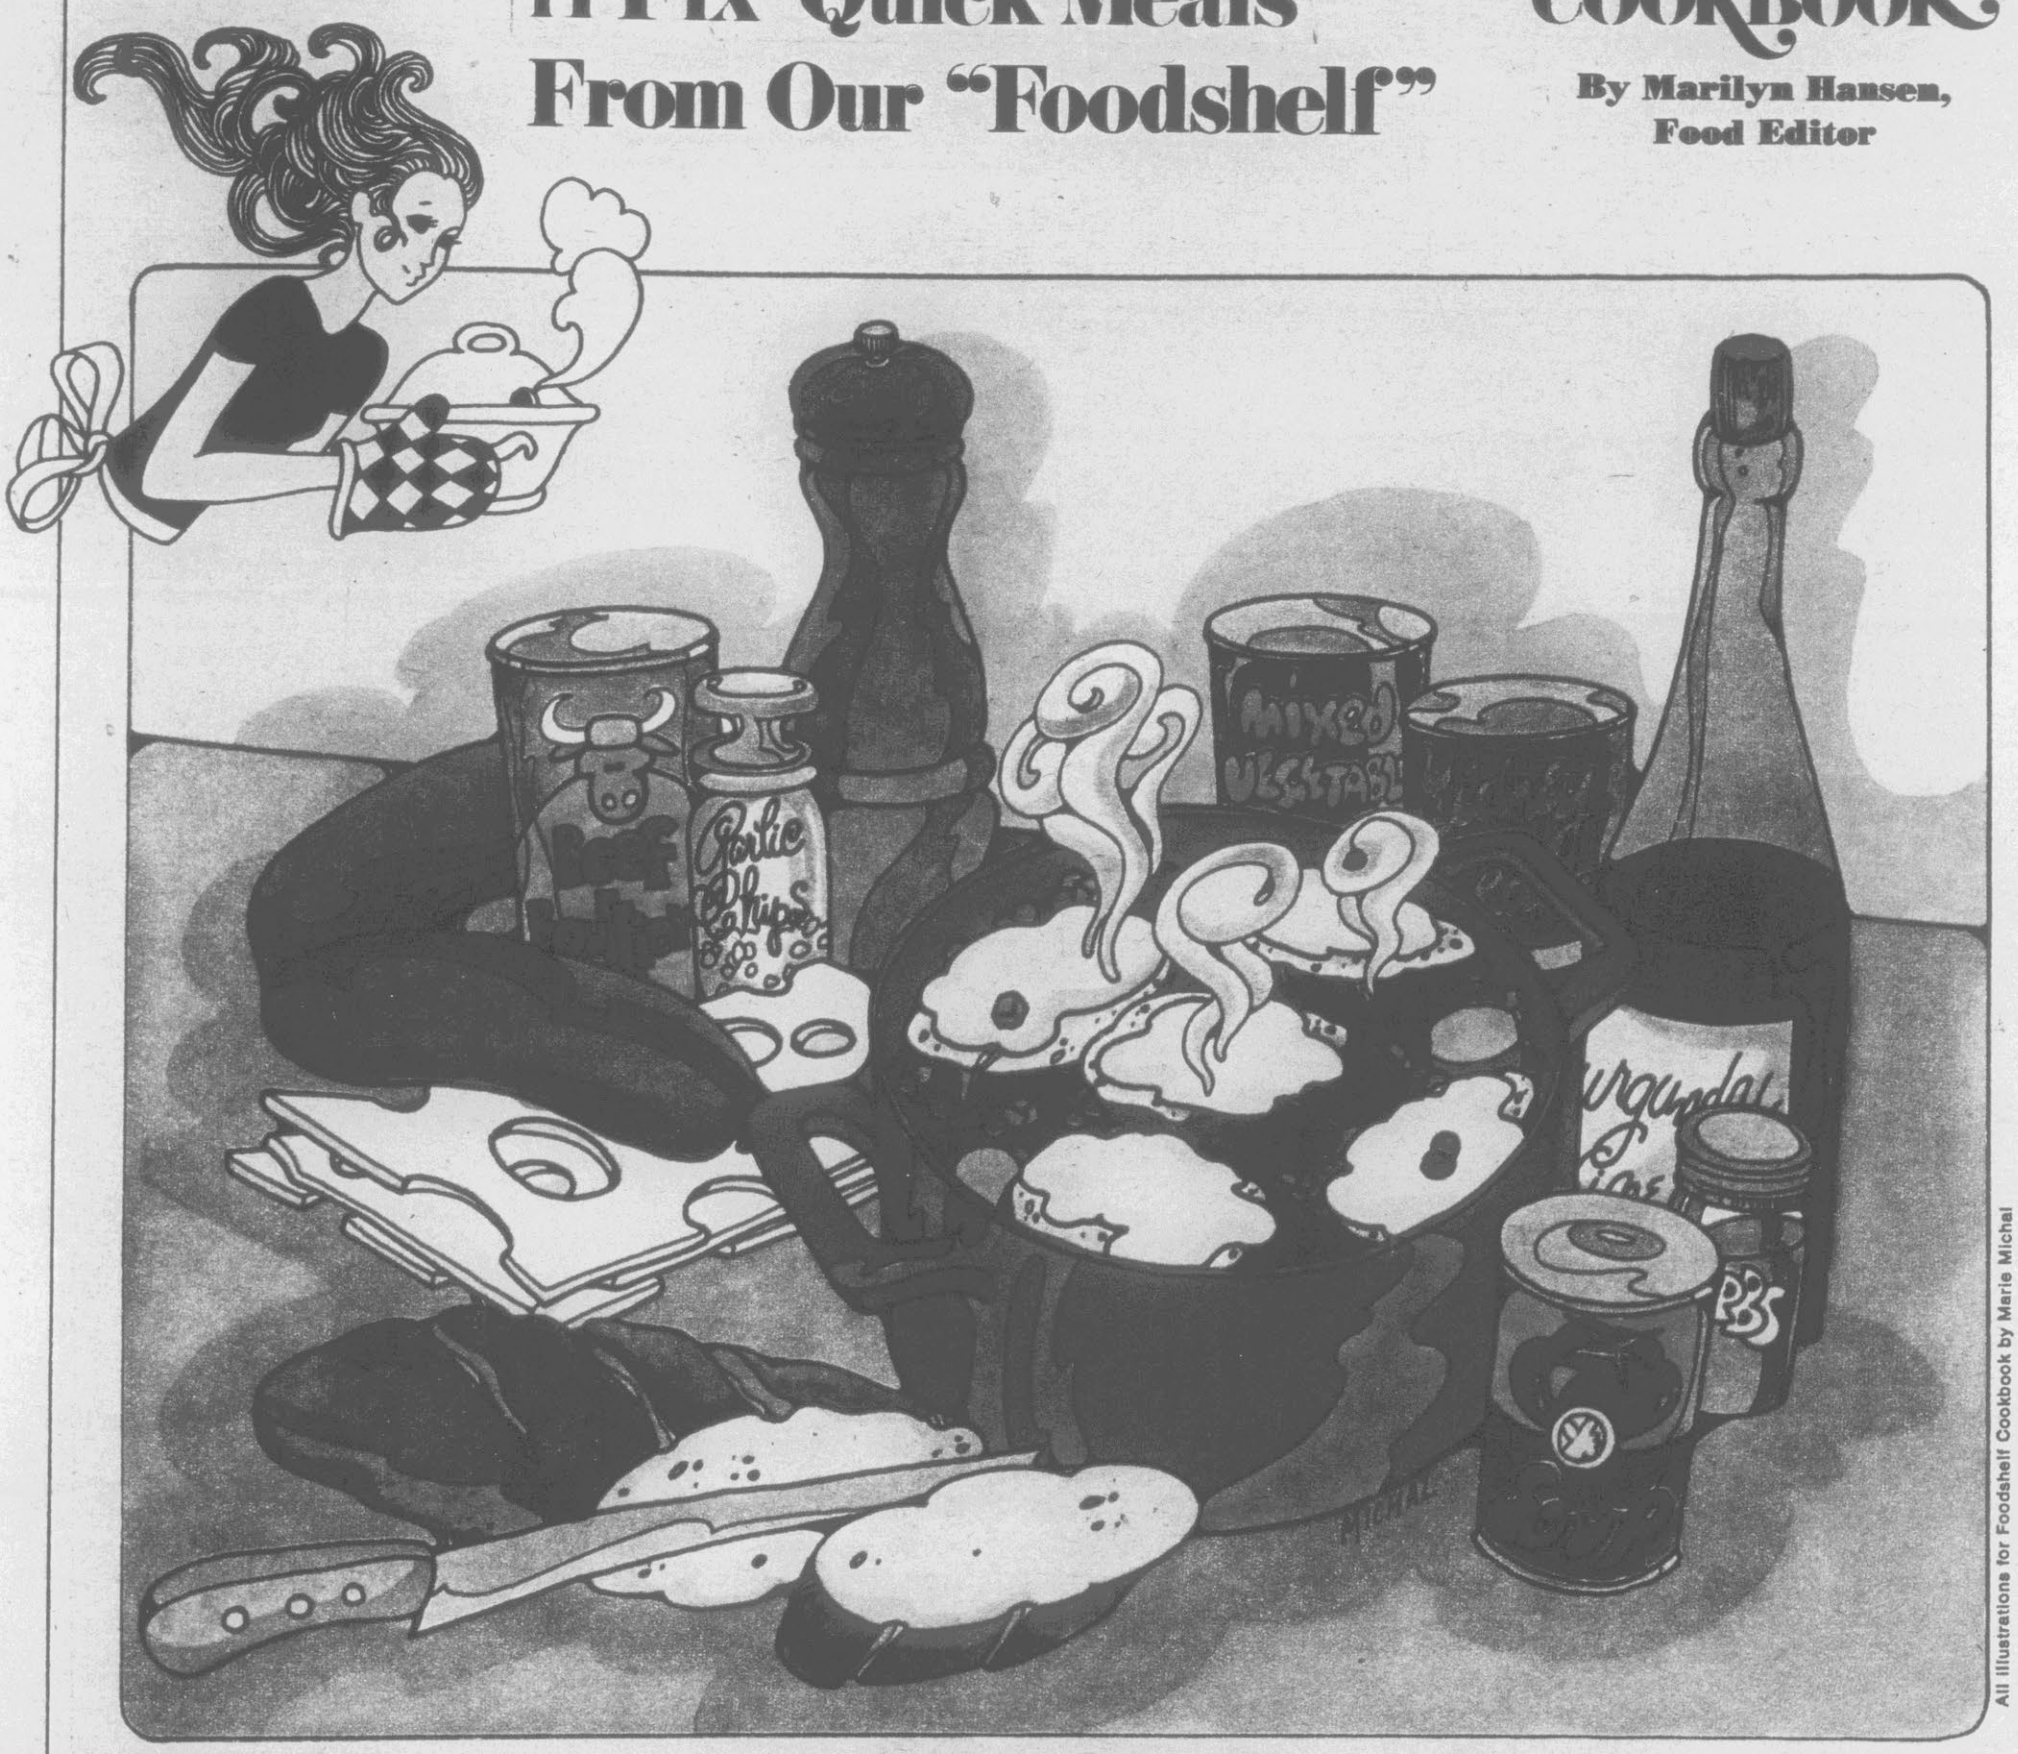

Filter and Menthol: 12 mg. "tar", 0.9 mg. nicotine—av. per cigarette, FTC Report Aug. 72.

By Marilyn Hansen, Food Editor

All illustrations for Foodshelf Cookbook by Marie Michal

This month, in response to the many letters we've received, we are presenting a whole Foodshelf Cookbook. Once again, the ground rules: Foodshelf recipes are designed for quickness and simplicity, using ingredients likely to be found in almost any home pantry. We've also included a Foodshelf Shopping List—a list that will guide your buying for Foodshelf recipes.

A Celebrity Cooks

"If someone is not going to take cooking very seriously, they're not going to be a good cook. But it doesn't have to be sacred and a lot of la-de-da!"

Julia Child: "Try My Fillet of Sole"

As told to Helen Dorsey

Paul Child

"You don't have to spend hours," says TV's Julia, "to achieve something rather lovely."

I love to cook for people, but I don't have a tremendous amount of time. Often I don't even start dinner until the guests arrive. We always eat in the kitchen.

I've learned that you don't have to spend hours to achieve something rather lovely. It depends on how you feel. Some days you decide you want to bake a cake or something, other days you don't. It's just so nice to be able to have friends in on the spur of the moment. You don't have to be fancy. All they want is something good to eat.

I do think you have to be able to use all your senses in cooking. And if someone is not going to take cooking very seriously, they're not going to be a good cook. But it doesn't have to be sacred and a lot of la-de-da!

BROILED FILLET OF SOLE WITH SNAIL BUTTER

SNAIL BUTTER

½ cup butter
2 tablespoons minced shallots or scallions
½ small clove garlic, mashed
2 tablespoons minced fresh parsley
Salt
Freshly ground pepper to taste
Fresh lemon juice to taste (about 1 tablespoon)

1. Using wooden spoon and mixing bowl, cream butter until fluffy.
2. Beat in rest of ingredients. Set aside.

FILLET OF SOLE

Butter
2 lbs. fillet of sole, sliced about ⅓-inch thick
Snail Butter
Fine bread crumbs (preferably French or Italian)
Crisp watercress or parsley to garnish

1. Butter oven-proof baking dish liberally with softened butter.
3. Broil 3 inches from heat, basting often with Snail Butter.
4. Turn quickly, baste, put on crumbs, broil on other side. Watch fish carefully so it does not overcook. It will take only a few minutes to broil. Serve immediately, garnished with watercress.

Makes 4 servings

AFTERTHOUGHTS: To get optimal results, buy fillets in fish store. Ask fishman to cut them as thick and as even as possible (they cook better). Julia's Snail Butter, most often used for baked snails in their shells, is fabulous for broiling or baking whole fish or fillets, for broiled meats or mussels, clams or oysters.

AMAZING NEW ISOMETRIC BEAUTY BAND

LIFTS YEARS OFF YOUR FACE!

These photographs are completely unretouched.

How would you like to give yourself an instant face lift . . . see sagging skin, lines around your mouth, bags under the eyes and telltale crows feet smooth out as if some miracle of youth had suddenly touched your face? Sound too good to be true? Not at all! Because Mark Traynor, the man behind a thousand beautiful faces, has created a real beauty coup — an isometric beauty band you can wear all day . . . or just a few minutes before bedtime . . . that literally lifts your face . . . restores that smooth youthful look and at the same time helps strengthen muscles and tissues so that your face not only looks younger and firmer, but is actually being toned and conditioned toward the natural resilience of youthful beauty.

Wear the look of youth as you build back beauty into your features

The Isometric Beauty Band, developed by one of today's most famous TV Makeup artists, works two ways: as a beauty lift, and as a facial exerciser. When you wear it during the day it firms up facial muscles, takes up the slack in the contours of your face, widens your eyes, and gives your face a zesty, vibrant look. Used just before bedtime, as a facial exerciser, it works to firm and strengthen the facial muscles, diminsh lines and sags, and generally recontours the structure of the face. From the moment you put it on, you'll see instant, almost magical results, and the longer you use it the more lasting beauty it will bring to your face.

A Simple Band of Beauty that Works Isometrically

It's really all so simple! You merely slip it on, fit it to your head size, then wear it as a stylish headband. Or you can wear it under a wig! From the moment you put it on, it begins to work its magic. It strengthens the muscles of your face in the same manner that an isometric exercise strengthens muscles in any part of the body. Wearing the band draws the facial muscles upward. Your regular facial movements such as speaking, closing your eyes, laughing, smiling, even yawning . . . all work the muscles against the resistance of the band and create an automatic massaging exercise. It firms the skin as it strengthens the underlying muscle structure. You can wear it as long as you wish or for short exercise periods. In either case, utterly amazing results will be yours from the moment you put it on.

MARK TRAYNOR . . . THE NAME BEHIND THE FACE

If you've ever envied that glowing look of beauty on the faces of models who grace such magazines as Vogue, Harper's Bazaar, Seventeen, Town and Country and many, many more, then you're already familiar with the work of Mark Traynor, the man behind a thousand and one beautiful faces.

Beauty expert and make-up man to Hollywood Stars, models, TV personalities, Mark himself has appeared many times on the Tonight Show, Merv Griffin, David Frost discussing his beauty secrets and how he has brought almost instant youth and beauty to thousands with his incredible techniques such as his Temporary Face Lift and now his Beauty Band. Now Mark Traynor wants you to enjoy the fruits of his talents, and see for yourself how his miraculous Beauty Band can give you the look of the Stars.

No wonder such beauty bibles as Harper's Bazaar, Vogue and others have seen fit to talk about Mark Traynor and his accomplishments with little less than awe. The results of his devices are absolutely incredible. And now you, too, can take advantage of his knowledge and experience in working with some of the most beautiful women in the world. If your mirror tells you that the shadows of age are clouding your looks, it's time to make this dramatic step back toward youthful beauty . . . order your Mark Traynor Isometic Beauty Band, now, only $9.95.

LIVE LONGER AND BETTER

In One Of The Healthiest, Sunniest Climates In All America— Deming, New Mexico!

Your Own Ranchette

(*See Below)

Do you know people who wake up to sunshine 355 days out of each year . . . people who don't know what it is to be oppressed by humid heat in the summer or by the cold clutch of winter damp? Do you know people who can say that in their State the rate of cancer and heart disease is half of what the Nation as a whole faces? Do you know people to whom a suntan is a year 'round commonplace, who work and play in a climate called America's healthiest? We know such people. They live in New Mexico.

THERE ISN'T A PLACE ON EARTH WHERE THE AIR IS PURER, WHERE BODY HEALTH IS MORE LAVISHLY BESTOWED. NO PLACE WHERE THE WORDS AT THE TOP OF THIS PAGE—LIVE LONGER AND BETTER—FIT MORE THAN THEY DO IN NEW MEXICO.

And in all of New Mexico itself it would be difficult to match the climate and beauty of the region surrounding Deming. As spectacular as the northern portion, but without the cold of winter. As dry and pure as over the border to Arizona, but not as hot in the summer. As strangely appealing as the desert yet fertile. And as actively vigorous and prosperous as the city you now live in (maybe more so) yet without the fever, without the tension.

To live anywhere in New Mexico is to live better. The superb climate, naturally air-conditioned in the summer and brilliantly sunny in the winter—the breathtaking beauty of a lavish Nature—the young vigor of a state that is causing an unprecedented business and investment boom—the record which shows that one lives longer, that health improvement is almost miraculous—these are the reasons that tens of thousands of Americans already have come here to live, and hundreds of thousands of others will be following in the immediate years ahead.

Consider then: Here in the center of this miraculous climate and beauty are towns which have grown amazingly in the last few years. Las Cruces, for example: In 1950 it had 12,000 people. By 1960, 37,000 . . . a rise of 300% in 10 years—and still growing. Like Tucson and Phoenix, this area has the same desert allure, where the good fortune of pure air, pure drinking water and a salubrious climate permits lovely towns to flourish. Statistics show the same 85% of possible sunshine, summer and winter, of Phoenix and Tucson; these same figures reveal even purer, drier air.

Beginning 3½ miles from the flavorful city of Deming (population 8,500) are 24,000 acres of former ranches whose farthest boundary is 28 miles from town. Spectacularly set off by the breathtaking Florida Mountains, this land is so typical of the romance of the southwest that it has been photographed for the covers of many magazines including the official publication of the State of New Mexico. What better way to describe its Southwestern flavor than to tell you that when the producers of the movie THE TALL TEXAN sought an authentic locale for their picture, they chose some of the very land we have sub-divided into the DEMING RANCHETTES. THE TALL TEXAN was filmed on our ranch, the same place where you may have a Ranchette of your very own. In this lovely basin every DEMING RANCHETTE fronts graded earth roads already dedicated to Luna County in widths of 50 and 80 feet. Every Ranchette has direct access to avenues leading to three major highways—U.S. Highways 80, 70 and brand new Interstate 10.

DEMING is blessed with water which is called "America's finest drinking water, 99.99% pure." (Shop windows in Deming display this proud claim in its window.) There are homes already built on DEMING RANCHETTES and they all have electricity. When you are ready to build your new home, electricity will be made available to you. Schools, hospitals, churches, shops, movies, golf course, tennis courts—these are located in the charming growing city of Deming. Fertile soil is yours for the planting, and wait until you see the stunning landscape of cotton fields in bloom. Almost everything will grow here when watered—fruits, vegetables, flowers, trees.

The one thing that captivates the fancy of people from every state in the Union is the sincere friendliness of Deming's people. To visit Deming is like going back to the warmth of one's own family. But don't overlook the very practical benefits of living anywhere near Deming.

GOLF—the Rio Mimbres Country Club Golf Course is right in Deming itself. It is a beautiful course with the Florida Mountains towering in the background. You play 12 months a year in this delightful climate and green fees are very reasonable.

HUNTING AND FISHING—What are you after? Deer, antelope, wild turkey? Or maybe bear, mountain lion? Well, you can get deer, quail and big jack-rabbits right in your own backyard, in the Floridas. For really big game, and great fishing, try the Gila National Forest 60 miles directly north. Almost 2,000,000 acres set aside for camping, hunting and fishing. Just 65 miles away is the Caballo Dam-Elephant Butte Reservoir, the second largest man-made lake in the United States where you can rent a boat, fish, swim or go water skiing.

HORSEBACK RIDING—You'll find the Florida Mountains enthralling. Bring along a treasure pouch and join other rockhounds seeking amethyst, agate and opal.

INVESTMENT—More than 18,000 people have bought Ranchettes through the mail and on site.

The new U.S. Interstate 10 is now being built with interchanges right in the heart of Deming. Consider other developments such as the new Retirement Home and the new road being built from Palomas, Mexico (33 miles south of Deming) into the interior of Mexico and you will agree with us that Deming has a tremendous future.

And the price of your Ranchette? Just $349 for a full half-acre and low monthly payments of $6, including interest at the annual percentage rate of 6%. At this moment you may reserve as many half-acre sites as you wish but please bear this in mind: DEMING RANCHETTES is not an enormous development and land such as this goes fast. At these prices, you may want your Ranchette to be larger—one, two—even five acres. An immediate reservation will guarantee that your half-acres will adjoin each other (this is becoming increasingly difficult because of the shortage of available lots). And you take no risk. Your reservation does not obligate you. You have the unqualified right to change your mind within 45 days after we send your Purchaser's Agreement, Property Owner's Kit, Maps and Photographs—15 days to go through the portfolio, check our references, talk it over with the family. If, during that time, you should change your mind your reservation will be cancelled with absolutely no obligation. Then you have an ADDITIONAL 30 DAYS AFTER you have made your first monthly payment to change your mind and request a full refund of every dollar you have paid in. If this makes sense mail the coupon today.

Cash Price	$349
Cash downpayment	6
Unpaid balance of cash price	$343

Unpaid balance is scheduled at 67 monthly payments of $6, and 1 monthly payment of $2.95 for each ½ acre, payments including interest at the annual percentage rate of 6% resulting in a finance charge of $61.95, and a total of payments of $404.95, or a deferred payment price of $410.95. NOTE: If you order 2 half-acres (1 acre), double all of the the above figures except the period of repayment will remain the same. For 3 half-acres (1½ acres), triple the above figures, etc.

Star Chat

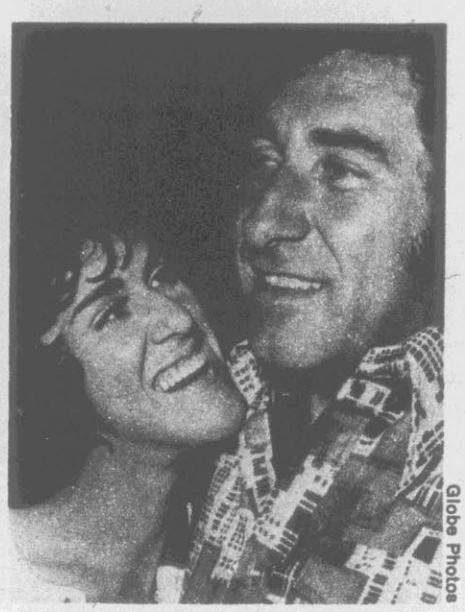

TV's Ruth Buzzi:

"Actually, I'm the Romantic Type!"

By Peer J. Oppenheimer

Ruth Buzzi was a few minutes late for lunch, and with good reason. She had put her cat in the dishwasher just before she left the house!

FAMILY WEEKLY: How did you manage to shut your cat in the dishwasher?
RUTH: I had just finished putting the dishes in the machine, and when I closed the door I wasn't paying any attention. Later, I thought I heard a faint meow. I got kind of worried and followed the sound—to the dishwasher! Thank God she was okay!
FW: Ruth, how do you feel about "Laugh-In" being canceled?
RUTH: I'm sad to see it end, because it is so much a part of me. But I'm happy it lasted as long as it did.
FW: Have you ever played any romantic parts?
RUTH: You mean serious? I played Herb Edelman's wife once in NBC's "Movie of the Week." It wasn't a great love scene, but it was a little more serious than what I usually play. And I had a straight dramatic part on a segment of "Medical Center," but that wasn't romantic.
FW: Are you the romantic type?
RUTH: I think so.
FW: How does it show?
RUTH: With my husband. I'm terribly, terribly Italian. He's Greek and Albanian. What a combination! We always give little presents to one another. Like when I go shopping for myself, I get something for Bill as well. [Ruth is married to her agent, Basil "Bill" Keko.] If he were here with me now, we'd be holding hands, even after seven years of marriage. I'm very demonstrative. At home I always kissed both of my parents before I went out of the house.
FW: Did you always want to be an actress?
RUTH: Well, not always. When I was old enough to know about boys, all I ever wanted was to get married and have a family. I love cleaning house! But my dad didn't like that idea.
FW: Cleaning house?
RUTH: No, boys. When I was in high school back in Rhode Island, and we saw a boy and a girl holding hands, he'd always put them down. He'd say, "Before you get serious about a boy, get an education."
FW: How did your father encourage you?
RUTH: He encouraged me in the sense that he made it so that I didn't want him to be disappointed in me. Every day he would say to me, "Pooti"—he called me that—"what do you want to be when you grow up?"

Globe Photos

Ruth gets "demonstrative" with husband Bill.

"I stood next to Barbara Feldon on the 'Laugh-In' show once. We looked at each other and broke out laughing. It was a beautiful moment between us. But suddenly I knew I couldn't go on standing next to all those beautiful women and look like I did!"

FW: You said before that your father was against boys. How did he keep you from seeing them?
RUTH: He'd do anything to keep me from going on dates. I was only allowed to go to the dances at school, which were well chaperoned.
FW: What did you do for amusement on the other nights?
RUTH: When I was old enough to drive, I was allowed to take my father's truck with "Buzzi's Monuments" painted on the door. But I was a bit worried about that sign, so I dressed up in some clothes from the attic that looked like my mother's and everybody thought it was my mother driving. My girl friend Harriet and I would drive up and down main street, dressed up like that, acting silly.
FW: Did the fact that your father worked on monuments affect your childhood in any way?
RUTH: I grew up hearing a lot of jokes about it, but fortunately my parents had a wonderful sense of humor, and I think I inherited it. Like when the kids asked me, "How's business?" I'd say, "It's on the rocks."
FW: Your father made gravestones?
RUTH: We prefer to call them monuments. That's more dignified. My older brother now owns Buzzi's Memorials, and to save you the question, my younger brother is an engineer who works on secret stuff like submarines for the Government.
FW: When was the first time you ever experienced death in your own family?
RUTH: When my grandfather died when I was three years old. I can't remember the casket or anything like that, but I remember the excitement, the people milling about—and all the the food! We're Italian—and we always have lots of food at a time like that. But I didn't take it too seriously then because I was too young to know what was happening. I think the worst was when Dad passed away just nine years ago. The day I buried Dad was the evening my first TV show was on. He would have been so thrilled.
FW: You seem a lot thinner now than when you started "Laugh-In." How do you manage?
RUTH: I joined Weight Watchers five years ago. I weighed 132 pounds then, wore a size 11 dress, and had 40-inch hips. Yesterday I measured 34½ inches, and wear sizes 5, 6, 7 depending upon the style. And I now weigh 109 pounds. Terrific!
FW: What got you started on it?
RUTH: I stood next to Barbara Feldon on the "Laugh-In" show once. We looked at each other and broke out laughing. It was a beautiful moment between us. But suddenly I knew I couldn't go on standing next to all those beautiful women and look like I did!
FW: How did you meet your husband?
RUTH: He was producing an off-Broadway children's musical, "The Emperior's Clothes," and I went to audition for him. He called me afterward to tell me that I had not gotten the part. This surprised me. A year later I was in an off-Broadway show and he came by and introduced himself. A year after that he was stage manager for a show I was in. That's when we started dating.
FW: What does he do now?
RUTH: He manages me.
FW: Only you?
RUTH: I'm more than enough to handle!

People Quiz

How Much Do You Really Know About Being Successful?

By John E. Gibson

True or False: A successful marriage and a successful career tend to go hand in hand. (See number 3)

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. A person seldom gets fired if he is conscientious and efficient in his work.

2. Being well paid doesn't assure happiness, but it does serve as a bulwark against getting the blues.

3. A successful marriage and a successful career tend to go hand in hand.

4. The smarter a person is, the more likely he is to be satisfied with his job.

5. An introvert, on his way up the ladder of success, should watch out that his career isn't undercut by an ambitious extrovert.

ANSWERS

1. False. There are things a person can get fired for quicker than just being inefficient or spending too much time at the water cooler. A recent vocational study cites findings that show that "nine out of ten persons lose their jobs because they're difficult to get along with—that is, because of their personality qualities."

2. True. When material success fails to bring the anticipated happiness, disillusionment and frustration may result. However, surveys of workers have shown that "the higher the wages, or the higher the family income, the lower proportion of men reporting the blues." So while upping your income bracket is no guarantee of happiness, failure to do so does seem to affect the ego.

3. True—in a majority of cases, according to the findings of a University of Michigan study that measured the advancement of 6,000 American males, aged 45 to 54, ranking their first job, last job and marital status. Findings: "The men who had progressed the furthest were those who had remained married to their first wives, followed closely by those who had remarried. Far behind were the men who were divorced, separated or widowers."

4. True. A nationwide poll has shown a close relationship between job satisfaction and intelligence. It would appear that if a person is smart enough to have a high IQ, he's smart enough to find a job that provides adequate expression for his talents.

5. False. A psychological study of career preferences shows that the two personality types have the greatest preference for completely different occupations. Introverts were found to favor occupations in which they dealt more with things than people (physicists, accountants, engineers, carpenters, farmers, etc.). Extroverts tend to set their sights on callings that involve human contact. Preferred occupational choices ran the gamut from ministers, salesmen and social workers to football coaches, teachers and lawyers. So if an introvert is doing work he really enjoys, he doesn't need to worry too much about an ambitious extrovert trying to undercut him.

The Diet Watch

How Much Weight Should You Lose Per Week?

How much weight should you lose per week to keep healthy? A weight loss of about a pound to a pound and a half a week is ideal. Anything more than that, says Dr. Frederick Stare of Harvard, means you may be losing too fast. On a 1,200-calorie-a-day diet, most women will lose slightly more than a pound a week. On a 1,500-calorie diet, the average man will lose about the same amount. You'll be less impatient and more encouraged if you avoid weighing yourself daily. Your body's weight fluctuations, due to water balance, might confuse or discourage you. Weighing yourself once a week will make you happier. You'll also be less impatient if you remind yourself that this slow-and-steady weight loss will finally deliver more stamina against illnesses, more vitality, good looks and a longer life—which "crash" diets can't always offer you.

2. How do the Mega-Vitamins compare with the Standard Minimum Daily Requirements?

Here are two examples that typify the tremendous potency of your Mega-Vitamins. You will be taking about 800% more Vitamin C than the Standard Daily Minimum. Your Ultra-Iron tablet contains about 1000% more than the daily minimum. You would not want your Mega-Vitamins to be any more powerful.

3 Will I experience that "starved to death" feeling?

No, it is not necessary for you to feel hungry. Your Mega-Vitamins contain Laboratory-Tested Ingredients that will help appease your appetite, counter-act hunger and provide a whole spectrum of vitamins and minerals to help prevent nutritional deficiencies.

POWERFULLY POTENT FORMULA

A newly developed SUPER PROTEIN TABLET, CREATED ESPECIALLY FOR THIS DIET, contains a whopping 570 milligrams of solid natural protein. Each tiny milligram zeros-in on fatty tissues to break down and burn-off many, many times its equivalent weight. A dozen T-bone steaks could not provide as much undiluted, fat-free, natural protein as this one, tiny, super protein tablet.

The quarterback of this super-successful team, "ULTRA-IRON" contains the exact and required dosages of Manganese to activate your enzymes and maintain good glandular functions, Betaine to prevent any accumulation of fat, Zinc...the essential ingredient related to carbohydrate metabolism and Copper, to provide continual body energy: PLUS, 25 micrograms of the highly desirable B-12 complex. This "piece de resistance" tablet makes it all work together by supplementing the diet regimen plan, which, of course, plays the weight-loss role.

TWO YEARS IN THE MAKING — YOUR MEGA-VITAMINS ARE GUARANTEED SAFE, BUT EXTREMELY EFFECTIVE!

Each of the twelve compounded ingredients are guaranteed to be free of any side-effects when taken as directed. Any normal, healthy adult may enjoy the Mega-Vitamins with absolute confidence.

A demanding quality-control program guaranteeing freshness makes it necessary to order Mega-Vitamin Diet Regimen directly from the Vitamin Education Institute. The Mega-Vitamins are not available over-the-counter.

HERE'S WHY IT WORKS FASTER & FASTER!

Your "Mega-Vitamin" team taps nature's ultimate resources. These natural products assimilate into your body faster...working on your body while the more common synthetic, chemically manufactured products would still be lying fallow, waiting for your body to accept the foreign object.

YOU WILL LEARN HOW TO STAY SLIM & TRIM AND STILL EAT THE DELICIOUS, NUTRITIOUS FOODS YOU NOW ENJOY!

To obtain your "MEGA-VITAMIN" Diet Regimen with the 10-day trial supply of "MEGA-VITAMINS," plus FREE "STAY SLIM FOREVER PLAN," send $4.95 (or $9.95 for the 30 day supply) to Vitamin Education Institute at the address below.

You must lose a minimum of 10 pounds in just 10 days. If you're not absolutely delighted with your new shape, return the Diet Regimen and you'll get back every penny. All you can lose are those ugly pounds. Do it now!

A Special Message For Physicians:

The Mega-Vitamin Diet Regimen has been formulated to satisfy the demands of many weight-loss patients without sacrificing nutritional benefits. Sample Mega-Vitamins and Diet Regimen will be sent to you, without charge when requested on your stationery.

JUNE LANG

The best-preserved movie beauty of our time? Former movie star June Lang (back in 1931 rivals Warner Baxter and Fredric March vied for her in "Road to Glory") appears to have held on to youth even into her late 50's. Watch your TV screen closely, you may see her starring in commercials—looking much the same as she did as a teenager with Shirley Temple in "Captain January." She's now a beauty consultant—her own best ad—and it's said that she still wields a remarkably steady putter, dating from the days when she was a favorite with Howard Hughes, who insisted on treating her to professional golf lessons.

Mrs. Everett Dirksen talking about the late senator: "I think he must have been the original 'flower child.' He could make anything grow. He had a loving way with flowers and they reciprocated by blooming big and beautiful for him. In the early years, especially, he liked to do all his own gardening without help, although occasionally he would grudgingly let me help with the planting. I remember one spring day when I was trying to help him and he said, 'Look, you have to talk to these little plants as you put 'em in.' So I said, 'Grow, darn you, grow!' He was quite indignant, and scolded, 'That isn't the way you're supposed to talk to plants—any plants. You're supposed to be gentle with them.' My husband was always gentle with them and he would talk softly and tell them they were little works of nature and God, and now would they please grow? And they always did." From "The Honorable Mr. Marigold," by Louella Dirksen with Norma Lee Browning (Doubleday, $7.95).

QUOTE. Michael Caine tells how he keeps his self-confidence when someone tries to shatter it: "It's not easy to take a cruel comment, but when it happens, I don't bat an eyelid—I handle it with absolute cool. Or so it seems. But inside, it really hurts. What you have to do is tell yourself that if you're successful at whatever you're doing, most people must think you're doing OK. Everyone craves attention, but there are always those sad people who don't get it, and when they see a celebrity, they figure that people are always telling him how great he is, so they'll be different. So they'll insult you in some way—and in that way they grab your attention, at least for the moment. It's a terrible thing to have someone come up and tell you you've done a bad job. But I try just to laugh to myself and think, 'Boy, he must be crazy!' " UNQUOTE.

MATCH POINT

I like mine quite well done.
She's fond of spinach, broccoli,
And such, while I like none.

My wife prefers a four-door car
For ease of in and out.
The two-door sleek and sporty type
Is what I'm mad about.

My wife likes cats and I like dogs.
I'd stay, she'd travel far.
With married couples that I know,
I'd say that this is par.

Our six-year-old hurried into his room to work on some secret project while his friend waited patiently at the door. After a few minutes the friend hollered in to Billy, "I'm giving you just five more minutes to come out here."

Billy came to the door and asked very seriously: "Are you going to count fast or slow?"
