

House Keeps Death Penalty For N.C.

By GRACE KUTKUS
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina House of Representatives voted 72-14 Wednesday to defeat a bill to abolish the death penalty.

The vote came after 2 1/2 hours of subdued debate on the measure sponsored by Rep. Herbert L. Hyde, D-Buncombe, which would have abolished capital punishment but required a person convicted of first degree murder, first degree burglary, rape or arson to serve 25 years of a mandatory life sentence before becoming eligible for parole.

The House is now free to consider several bills calling for the death sentence for certain crimes.

A recent N.C. Supreme Court decision held that the death penalty is mandatory for the four capital crimes. The court removed the discretionary power of juries, which could recommend a life sentence after such convictions.

The North Carolina court was responding to a U.S. Supreme Court ruling that capital punishment was cruel and unusual punishment because of its discretionary application.

Opponents of the bill argued that capital punishment is a crime deterrent.

"All you have to do to do away with capital punishment is not to murder, rape or burn down houses," contended Rep. Daniel T. Lilley, D-Lenoir. "It's totally unfair to our law-abiding citizens to subject them to these kinds of crimes."

Rep. David D. Jordan, R-Mecklenburg, said, "If the death penalty is a deterrent, it is only to logical think people. And people who commit murder are not logical thinking."

Rep. Vernon G. James, D-Pasquotank, claimed the bill would pose "more problems in administering the penal system," because "if a person committed a crime while in prison you couldn't do anything to him."

Supporters and opponents of the bill sympathized with victims of violent crimes, but disagreed on the effectiveness of the death penalty in preventing crime.

"To talk about increased crime is to miss the point," said Rep. Henry E. Frye, D-Guilford. "I would rather see people sentenced to life imprisonment than execute one innocent person. You can execute all the people you want to but it won't bring back the victims."

Hyde, the bill's sponsor, said "If we continue to kill our fellowmen, whether you call it legalized or not, crime will continue to increase. Violence begets violence."

Several legislators cited statistics showing that those who have been executed are often "poor, black and friendless," as Rep. Seneed High, D-Cumberland, argued.

"This type of punishment is set for certain people, and withheld from others. And emotionalism is what determines whether capital punishment will be used," High said.

Rep. Robert Beard, R-Catawba, a Lutheran minister, said there was "absolutely no Biblical foundation" to support arguments in favor of the death penalty.

"I believe I've heard that sermon before," said Rep. Bob Jones, D-Rutherford, "in 1969 and 1971."

The General Assembly also defeated measures to abolish capital punishment in the 1969 and 1971 sessions.

Annual Sessions Vote Postponed

RALEIGH (AP) — The Senate postponed action Wednesday on a resolution providing for annual legislative sessions and a one-year budget.

Sen. Hamilton Horton, R-Forsyth, questioned the legality of the resolution without first changing the rules to permit an annual budget.

Horton said the state budget act "says it is illegal" to adopt a yearly budget without changing the rules or the act. He is expected to offer an amendment to the resolution specifying the rules change.

Sen. Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, the measure's sponsor, said he regarded the resolution as a change in rules but did not object to an amendment.

In other action in the General Assembly, Sen. W. W. Staton, D-Lee, introduced a package of bills designed to improve the state's workmen's compensation laws.

The legislation would increase maximum weekly benefits to employees injured on the job from $56 to $65 and the overall maximum from $20,000 to $23,250, Staton said.

Another bill in the package would require employers with a minimum of three employees to be covered under the act. The current minimum is employers with five or more employees.

The Senate tentatively approved a bill to exempt drivers with no traffic violations from having to take written tests every four years to renew their licenses.

The measure, sponsored by Sen. Robert Vance Somers, R-Rowan, passed its second reading 29-18 after long debate. It will be considered for final approval today.

Rep. Gerald Arnold, D-Hartnett, introduced a bill in the House to establish a Special Prosecution Division within the attorney general's office to help local solicitors with complex or lengthy cases.

Arnold cited a "highly successful" pilot program begun by Atty. Gen. Robert Morgan to provide assistance to prosecutors who request such services.

Identify Victims

JACKSONVILLE, N. C. (AP)—Four men were killed and a fifth escaped without serious injury Wednesday when a helicopter caught fire and exploded on the flight line at the New River Marine Air Facility.

A Marine Public Affairs Office spokesman said the helicopter, a CH 53 Sea Stallion, was preparing to leave on a routine aircraft ferry mission when the mishap occurred about 8:15 a.m.

Two of those killed were the pilot, Maj. Richard R. McCormick, 32, of Convent, N. J., and the copilot, Maj. Frank J. Quadri, 36, of Mamaronck, N. Y.

The other two victims were identified today as Sgt. Harold W. Way, 22, of England, Ariz., and Sgt. James Benny Gwen Jr., 23, of Columbus, Ohio.

The survivor was identified as Sgt. Frank L. Scott Jr., 25. His hometown was not listed.

Red China Frees 2 U.S. Pilots; Join 108 Others

By JOHN BREWER
Associated Press Writer
CLARK AIR BASE, Philippines (AP) — Two U.S. military pilots, the last Americans held prisoner in Communist China, arrived at Clark Air Base today and joined 108 other POWs awaiting flights home.

They appeared in good shape. Air Force Maj. Philip E. Smith, 38, of Roodhouse, Ill., and Lt. Cmdr. Robert J. Flynn, 35, of Colorado Springs, Colo., were flown from Hong Kong where they crossed the British-Chinese border several hours earlier.

Both were shot down while flying in the Vietnam War—Smith on Sept. 20, 1965, when he strayed over China's Hainan Island, and Flynn on Aug. 21, 1967, when a North Vietnamese MIG attacked him near the Chinese border.

North Vietnam released 107 American fliers and one civilian on Wednesday, and the Viet Cong are to turn over 27 military men and five civilians Friday in Hanoi.

That will leave 146 American POWs still in Communist hands, including seven servicemen and two civilians in Laos. All are to be freed by March 28, the deadline set by the Vietnam cease-fire agreement.

Flynn and Smith entered Hong Kong over the covered bridge spanning the Shum Chun border river after Red Cross representative Eugene Guy met them on the Chinese side and signed a receipt for them. Both were smiling broadly, and Flynn was smoking a cigar Guy gave him.

A helicopter took the pilots to a Royal Air Force field where a U.S. hospital plane was waiting for them. Waiting there also was Smith's brother, J.H. Smith, a Hong Kong import-export executive.

The two brothers had not seen each other in nearly eight years. When the flier saw his brother, he laughed joyously and reached out his arms to him, then started to cry as his brother enveloped him in a bear hug.

Flynn told U.S. officials that several days before they left Peking, the Chinese took them on a shopping expedition and they bought a variety of gifts for friends and relatives.

Explosions Rip Buddhist Crowd In Viet Pagoda

By GEORGE ESPER
Associated Press Writer

SAIGON (AP) — A series of explosions ripped through a crowd of Buddhists at a religious service before dawn today in the Mekong Delta, killing or wounding more than 100 persons. It was the worst terrorist attack reported in the 47-day-old cease-fire.

The South Vietnamese military command said 17 persons were killed and 88 were wounded, but the deputy police chief of the province said there were 20 dead and 82 wounded.

Most of the victims were Cambodians native to the region, according to Lt. Col. Le Trung Hien, the chief spokesman for the Saigon command.

Both Hien and the deputy police chief blamed the attack on Communist terrorists.

Hien said several grenades were thrown into the Soai Kiem Pagoda in Tra Cu, a district town in Vinh Binh province 80 miles south of Saigon. But the deputy police chief said the attack may have been made with rockets fired from outside the town.

No arrests were made. Hien said he had no information on the likely motive for the attack but added, without explanation, that the police and the militia had anticipated trouble. Police forces have been present around Buddhist pagodas in Vinh Binh since a series of clashes there in 1971 between Cambodian monks and government authorities over the rights of the Cambodian minority.

Vinh Binh is in an area of the delta that once was part of Cambodia and a large part of the population is of Cambodian descent. There has always been enmity or tension between the Cambodians and the Vietnamese.

Saigon authorities said a field team of the International Commission of Control and Supervision flew to Tra Cu to investigate. The South Vietnamese delegation to the Joint Military Commission also lodged a protest with that peacekeeping organization.

Sign-Up System For City Tennis Court Goes Into Effect April 1

A sign up reserve system for use of tennis courts at Elm Street Park will go into effect April 1. This decision was taken by commission members of the Greenville Recreation Commission at the March meeting Wednesday night.

By placing the courts on a sign up in advance reservation system, it is felt this will give a more equitable distribution of time on courts to a larger number of people.

A number of complaints have been registered recently by persons unable to get use of the court at any time.

Full details of the sign up reserve system will be worked out and announced by the Recreation Department within the next few days.

In other action taken by the commission, three people, Ray Scharf, Dr. Edgar Hooks and Dr. Ray Martinez were named as a Swimming Pool Committee to work with the Recreation Area and Facilities Committee to work with the Recreation Area and Facilities Committee on the matter of swimming pool planning.

Commission member, discussing the $150,000 allocated by the City Council from revenue sharing funds for the construction of a swimming pool, said it was not likely the pool could be constructed and ready for operation before the summer of 1974.

Waiver of fees were granted by commission members on two requests. One was a request for waiver of payment of lights by the American Legion baseball team; the other was a waiver of fees for use of Elm Street gym on May 5 for a REAP benefit program. REAP is seeking to raise $600 as matching funds to purchase an activity bus.

The April meeting of the Recreation Commission will be held in conjunction with an area meeting at Washington in April.

Chaos Near In British Crisis

By LEONARD KIRSCHEN
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Britain faced the threat of industrial chaos as railroad engineers, civil servants and hospital workers continued wildcat strikes and go-slow tactics today.

Prime Minister Edward Heath called a Cabinet meeting to discuss the worsening situation.

The British Railways Board announced that 2,000 trains had to be canceled in the southern region alone.

The rift between the government and the Trades Union Congress over the government's pay freeze was widening. The congress was reported ready to back the protesting unions with financial support and perhaps call a one-day national strike.

The government seemed determined to stand fast and apparently was getting public support for its anti-inflation program.

The union-backed opposition Labor party had lost ground to Heath's Conservatives in the last month, according to a poll undertaken on behalf of the Daily Telegraph newspaper.

As thousands tried to get to work in London this morning, railway engineers were giving all sorts of reasons not to man their trains. In one instance they walked out because their engines had no speedometers, although for years suburban commuter trains never had them. Others just left their trains standing to attend meetings.

Gas supplies were shut off from 3,250 factories, 1,685 schools and 4.2 million homes throughout the country. About 20,000 waterworks employees threatened to join the gas workers if their pay claims aren't considered.

More than 1,000 customs and excise officers were on strike at airport and ports.

Hundreds of hospitals throughout Britain were empty. Their wards for lack of auxiliary staff. Nurses coped with the seriously ill, manned kitchens, swept floors and kept the hospitals running on bare essentials.

Mayor West May Call Special Meeting On Election Savings Effort

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Mayor S. Eugene West said yesterday that he may call a special meeting of the City Council to discuss the advisability of having the Pitt County Board of Elections run the city's elections in the future.

The council, by its inaction on the question at its meeting last week, decided to continue its own full-time registration for city elections.

West, questioned by newsmen yesterday about possible savings to the city in allowing the county elections board to register city voters and run municipal elections, said the city might save as much as $8,000 to $10,000 a year by joining forces with the county.

According to West, the city would be required to hire a full-time registrar, purchase voter-registration books and establish a registration office if the city is to handle its own registration and run its own elections.

If the county elections board conducts the city's voting, West explained, "residents of the city would go to the County Board of Elections to register...both for city and county elections at the same time." (County registration would permit voters to participate in county, state, national, bond and other special elections.)

Actually, West noted, the city can choose one of four methods.

The city can maintain its own full-time registration and conduct its own elections, or can contract with the county for a duplicate set of registration records for the city and the city conduct its own elections.

Or, the city can copy all registration records from the county books and conduct its own elections.

The most feasible way, however, the Mayor said, would be to allow the county board to do the registration and have the county board to run the elections.

In addition to the monetary savings, according to West, there are advantages to having county control.

"City voters would vote at the same place for all elections. They wouldn't be going to one place to vote in county and state elections then going to another place to cast ballots in city voting. And, the county election machinery is already established.

"I realize it might be a little inconvenient now, but by the middle of the year, the county board should be more available," West said, commenting on the fact that the County Board of Elections office is now located on the third floor of the Court House.

Plans are now being prepared by architects to renovate the present ABC offices at the intersection of Second and Cotanche Street to house the Board of Elections on the ground floor. Cost of the renovation, which will also provide office space for the county fire marshal and the Pitt County Development Commission is expected to be about $18,000.

"If the city so desires," West explained, "it can request the county board to place registrars at the various voting precincts several weeks before a city election so new voters can register in their own voting area."

The mayor noted, "My first idea was to conduct our elections ourselves, but after finding out that there would be an additional cost to the tax payers, and seeing that the same purpose could be taken care by the county, I feel it is the responsibility of the city government to save tax dollars."

Even if the city does elect to register its own voters and conduct its own elections, according to West, it must check its registration books with county records to insure any Greenville resident registered with the county—even if not registered with the city—is eligible to vote in municipal elections.

According to State elections board officials, some 30 to 40 municipalities who initially chose to conduct their own elections when confronted by the new state elections law have since requested changes which would allow their elections to be conducted by their county boards.

If the county conducts the elections for the city, Greenville would pay the actual cost of the election and a pro-rated share of the cost for the county registrar.

Old Flame Burns Real Mermaid Bubbles About Her Job Black And Blue

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1973 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Ten years ago, when I was a single man, I was doing some work in the home of a very attractive woman. [Painting and decorating.] She was very friendly and always went around in a thin robe and nothing underneath. Over coffee one morning she told me how unhappy she was [sexually] with her husband. It turned out we had an affair which lasted about two months in the afternoons when her husband was working and her kids were in school. It was no big love affair, it was just fun for both of us and I never saw her again.

I made the big mistake of bragging about it to a few of her neighbors, and one of them must have told her husband after all these years because he tracked me down and called up my wife and told her everything. Now my wife is giving me a hard time, even tho we weren't married [but were going together] when all this took place.

Maybe it's a coincidence, but last week two strange men jumped me and gave me a terrible beating.

Abby, I can't understand why this man would want to make my life so miserable for something that happened ten years ago. Can you? CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: Either he just found out about it—or just found YOU. There are some valuable lessons to be learned here. Men who work around women should keep their minds on their work. And those who don't should keep their mouths shut.

DEAR ABBY: When I give a dinner party I do as much as possible in advance because I have no help and I like to spend the cocktail hour with my guests.

What gets me is the well-meaning guest who surprises me with something for my dinner to "help out." It is invariably something which requires a lot of fooling with, like a mold for which I have to hunt up a suitable serving platter, and then unmold it, or a loaf of unsliced French bread from which I am supposed to make garlic bread.

I hate to sound like an ingrate, but please, Abby, tell these people who are thoughtlessly thoughtful that if they want to bring something to please bring it ready to serve. BOLLOXED IN BOTHELL

DEAR BOLLOXED: Will do. And that includes sweet corn, husks and all, freshly picked from "our" garden. Or worse yet, home grown spinach.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter was seriously ill with tuberculosis when she was 17 years old. She made a complete recovery and thank God, she is a healthy girl now. Her boy friend stood by her and loves her all the more, but his mother is trying to break them up. She insists that once a person has tuberculosis they are never cured.

These two young people are very much in love and plan to marry one day, but the boy's mother is giving them a hard time.

My daughter's doctor told me that she was cured. How can I get this message across to that boy's mother? GRATEFUL MOM

DEAR MOM: I suppose you could have the doctor put it in writing. If the boy's mother wants to break up the romance she will have to come up with another excuse. The one she is using isn't valid.

DEAR ABBY: What does a normal, healthy 34-year-old male with a wife and family say to his parents when they send him a PURSE as a gift, with the excuse that it is a very useful man's item in a country they just visited? Sign me NOT A GAY LIBBER

DEAR NOT: If he is indeed a "normal, healthy 34-year-old male" etc. he says, "Thanks!"

Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L. A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

NEW YORK (AP) — For a mermaid, catching cold is unavoidable.

Swimming around in cold water, than surfacing to catch the rays of the sun, her body temperature undergoes abrupt changes. Coralee "Nibsie" Towne, who works six days each week as a mermaid, said that body temperature drops one degree for every 15 minutes spent underwater.

"We visit a specialist a lot," grinned the shapely blonde, who had traded in her glittery mermaid tail for an ordinary pants suit during a New York visit. Nibsie was recruiting new underwater mermaids for Weeki Wachee, a tourist attraction on Florida's West Coast.

"Six mermaids appear in each of our shows and each girl does three shows each day. We perform underwater in ballet at a depth of 16 to 30 feet ordinarily. We dive 117 feet down in our deepest dive.

"The spring at Weeki Wachee is 135 feet deep, but it's too cold for us to go all the way to the bottom. You feel especially glamorous in the mermaid's gold or silver tail, but the other costumes are interesting, too. They're weighted so they behave properly in the current, but if you take off a hat or crown, it's likely to float off down the river," she added.

Born in Billings, Mont., the 24-year-old swimmer was a Navy brat who moved many times as her father was transferred. Now her family has settled in Richmond, Va.

"I started swimming when I was 6, both speed and synchronized swimming. One Easter vacation the family visited Weeki Wachee and I talked about it for days and days.

"But I went on to Roanoke College and majored in Spanish, then one summer worked at Weeki Wachee. And after graduation, I returned," she said.

She has worked for two and a half years at the underwater attraction, first as a trainee, then a swimmer and finally a mermaid.

"I practiced with the men's swimming team in college and one year I was amateur athlete of the year in Virginia. I feel graceful and at ease under water. Some people never do," Nibsie added.

Mermaids come in all shapes and sizes, she said, but all are physically fit and all have long hair — they let it grow from the moment they join the underwater ballet.

"Hair looks windblown under water, streaming behind you as you swim.

It doesn't look stingy and wet. But we have to condition it twice as much because it is wet so often."

The mermaids train as any dancer would out of the water. Because swimming is so strenuous, the girls are exhausted at the end of a typical day, Nibsie said.

"Girls come from all over the country, and there's even one swimmer from Japan. We're all friendly and spend much of our free time together, playing bridge, knitting, doing crossword puzzles. We don't often talk with tourists and we don't have much social life," she added.

The girls experiment with underwater makeup that won't disappear during the 45-minute show and they've learned to eat underwater, as well as drink soda pop from a bottle.

"You blow out and swallow; it sounds complicated but it works. But eating apples and watermelon gets pretty soggy," Nibsie said.

"One girl lost an earring and saw a fish eat it, then blow it back out and then swallow it again. She never did get the earring back. Sometimes alligators swim upriver, but I've never seen one.

"We can talk to the audience through the glass with a microphone, but it sounds almost as though we're gargling," she added.

Being a mermaid doesn't last forever, Nibsie said, but she isn't sure what she will do when her swimming career comes to an end.

"I love the idea of show business where you can be a ham. I like arty-type things. But I wouldn't want to spend my winters in Florida forever," she said.

She Is A High Speed Painter

INNSBRUCK, Austria (WNS) — Farmer Adolf Walthauer, 48, was angry when he found artist Sophia Larocca painting in his field. He walked up to her, bared his stomach and said, "Draw me nude!" Miss Larocca painted a nude on his stomach before the poor man could cover himself. Walthauer wanted damages, but his lawyer convinced him that he had no case.

Takes Clock To Moves . . . Alarming!

BARCELONA, Spain (WNS) — Carmen Pueg, 57, goes to the movies every day and takes an alarm clock that rings at 7 p.m. "The clock is my husband's idea," she confessed. "I get so interested in the picture that I sit through it several times. Mr. Pueg wants his supper promptly at 9 p.m., and the alarm brings me back to that reality."

LONDON, England (WNS) — Jean Wiggins, 38, meant to submit the painting done by her 21-month-old daughter Abigail to a children's competition. Somehow the canvas was sent by mistake to the neighboring art

"Abigail does remarkable painting," agreed Mrs. Wiggins, "but I do wish that she would stop splashing paint all over our furniture."

Swimming Pool Within Reach

At long last it appears that Greenville will be able to do something about providing a municipal swimming pool.

The City Council last week approved an expenditure of $150,000 from federal revenue sharing funds to be used for construction of a public pool. In doing so the council was following the first priority of the Recreation Commission, which requested the construction of a pool bathhouse and supporting facilities. Thus it appears that a long needed local facility is about to become a reality.

There has not been a public pool here since the old pool on Fifth Street was closed in the 1950s, covered over with dirt and made into a parking lot.

There was a bond issue election in 1954 for pool construction but the issue failed to carry. Since then there have been various plans to finance a pool but nothing has worked out until the revenue sharing funds came along.

In the intervening years, of course, many private pools have been constructed in Greenville and these facilities are available to many young people. There is, however, still a large group of our youth who have no where to swim in the summer except unsafe rivers, creeks and swimming holes.

The Daily Reflector has long supported the concept of a public pool. It appears now that funds will be available and we hope that the facility will be carefully planned and put into use as soon as possible.

Bills Aimed At Drug Pushers

By BRYAN HAISLIP
RALEIGH — Putting the heat on the pusher is the aim of a variety of bills now making their way through the General Assembly.

Half a dozen or so lawmakers have come forward with proposed legislation to fix stiff penalties, up to life imprisonment, for those who deal in hard drugs as a means of coping with the drug abuse problem.

BRYAN HAISLIP

The stern measures reflect a feeling on the part of the general public and some law enforcement personnel that it is time to get tough in efforts to stamp out the drug traffic.

While heavier punishment for offenses involving hard drugs, such as heroin, is a common theme in the pending bills, there also is a trend to modify penalties for use and possession of marijuana and give courts more leeway in dealing with offenders, particularly first-timers.

What eventually will come out of the legislative mill is initially up to a special subcommittee of the judiciary committees in the House and Senate. After its study, the subcommittee will report back to the judiciary committees.

One package originated with the North Carolina Solicitors Association, whose members prosecute drug cases in the state's courts. Sen. Lamar Gudger and Rep. Herschel Harkins, both of Buncombe, introduced the bills.

Avoiding Overkill

Implicit in the measures, according to the analysis of the Institute of Government, "is the idea that overkill may achieve no more than underkill; that is, penalties that are too high, especially on first offenders, may actually be detrimental to enforcement of the drug laws.

"If the penalty is too stiff, it could result in fewer guilty pleas and less plea bargaining; it could produce harder fought, more protracted trials and appeals; and it could create more desperate, and thus potentially more dangerous, offenders."

Sen. Luther Britt of Robeson has introduced a measure drafted by the North Carolina Judicial Council to increase penalties for manufacture and distribution of heroin, cocaine and amphetamines.

"There's a feeling among council members that the 1971 narcotics act rewrite was too lenient on the pusher," Sen. Britt explained. "If we don't make the laws strict here, the narcotics manufacturers might come to North Carolina."

'71 Drug Law Rewrite

The last legislature adopted the N.C. Controlled Substances Act., effective Jan. 1, 1972, as a part of strategy in the drug war. It grouped controlled drugs in six schedules, depending upon characteristics such as potential for abuse and current medical use. For example, hard drugs with no acceptable medical use such as heroin and LSD are in schedule I; other hard drugs with limited medical use, such as cocaine and methamphetamine, are in schedule II. Marijuana is set off in a separate schedule.

The act fixed a maximum prison term for violations of five years for a first offense; five to ten years for a second offense; and 15 years to life for succeeding violations.

Mandatory minimum prison sentences is the aim of a bill introduced by Rep. Dwight Quinn of Cabarrus and signed by 57 other House members. A first offender would get no less than three years; a second, not less than five years; and subsequent offenses, not less than 15 years.

Life For Pushers

Bill sponsored by Rep. Ed McKnight of Forsyth and Rep. Julian Fenner of Nash would hit hardest at pushers of the hardest drugs. Each would establish a life sentence for sale of heroin and LSD. Fenner further proposed that parole be specifically barred if the offender is over 19 years of age.

Parole restrictions for drug offenders also is a feature of a bill introduced by Rep. J. F. Mohn of Onslow. Sen. Mike Mullins of Mecklenburg is another sponsor of tougher penalties for drug distribution.

One aspect of the legislation prepared by the solicitors' association would eliminate the statutory presumption of intent to distribute related to the quantity of certain drugs found in a person's possession. Recent U. S. Supreme Court decisions have cast doubt on the provision's constitutionality.

Instead, simple possession of a group of drugs, including marijuana, would be a misdemeanor or felony, depending upon the quantity. The practical result would be to lighten penalties for simple possession of limited quantities of the drugs.

Another part of the legislation would allow a judge to give a first offender a mixed active and suspended sentence. At

Is Candidate Worth $188,000 Each Year?

The Associated Press reports it costs the tax payers $188,000 annually to keep a congressman in Washington, and even more for senators.

That includes the $42,500 salary, salaries for staff and expenses.

It would be futile to speculate as to whether all of the representatives and senators now in Washington are worth that much to the nation. The cost is not going to come down.

In the future, however, when voters go to the polls to choose a representative or senator, he could ask himself: Is the man I am voting for worth that much?

Democrat Eyes On Holshouser

By JOHN KILGO

RALEIGH — You can rest assured that Democrats in the Tar Heel legislature are watching Gov. Jim Holshouser closely to see who and how many people he's going to fire in the ranks of state government.

The situation has been below the surface for weeks, and was quietly discussed long before Gov. Holshouser and GOP Chairman Frank Rouse had their flap about Rouse's now-famous memo on patronage.

The Democrats are wondering how many state workers Holshouser will release once the legislature gets out of town.

One highly-respected State Senator told me: "We don't know if we should take action to lock these people in their jobs. How would the people act to that? Or maybe we should do nothing and hope Holshouser hangs himself."

Gov. Holshouser has fired several policy-makers since he took office. That came as no surprise and shouldn't have. It's politics. "I think everyone realizes the Governor has the right to put his own people in policy-making positions," Lt. Gov. Jim Hunt said. "As long as he sticks to this, I don't think there will be any great concern."

House Speaker Jim Ramsey concedes the subject has been discussed at length by Democrats in the legislature.

"Up to this point," Ramsey told me, "I don't think the firings have been any more than most of us expected. But there are rumors that it might get bad, much worse than it is now."

If indications become clear that the situation might get bad, should the Democrats do anything to stop it?

It's a psychological battle that transpires at the present time.

Gov. Holshouser won election by pledging to give voters a change in Raleigh. All one needs to do to see the voters wanted new faces is look at the election returns.

But just how far does the madate go?

Most Democrats fully expected Holshouser to fill the policy-making positions with people of his own choosing. To have done otherwise would have been stupid, a point conceded by most Democrats.

But the Democrats are worried about people in less important state positions. They hear that these people might get the ax.

Rouse's memo to GOP chairmen across the state, indicating that patronage would be coming to those good Republicans who have patience, stirred the Democrats even more.

It made the rumors they had been hearing take on tones of being real. The Democrats want to be careful to make the most of this situation. Never before has a General Assembly been so conscious of what the voters might think of their actions.

If the Democrats make the voters angry, they know full well that the next General Assembly might be heavily populated with Republicans.

But if the rumored firings do come, what should they do about it? That's the question that is being debated among Democrats in this Legislature and answers don't come easily.

Strength For Today

ONWARD CHRISTIAN SOLDIERS

The pastor of a large city church once criticized his flock from the pulpit for the lackadaisical way they were singing "Onward Christian Soldiers." He told them he wanted them to repeat the hymn and sing it as if they meant it. The people were surprised, but did as he asked, and after that the quality and volume of congregational singing increased.

Too often the Christian soldiers behave in the same apathetic fashion as the congregation which was singing the hymn. The church becomes ease-loving and comfortable in a comfortable age. There are still fortresses to be taken, enemies to be subdued, principalities and powers to be overcome. The world is still crying out for men who will brave the opposition of worldly interests. But the good fight of faith will only be won by those who have true enthusiasm for the task at hand. Like the congregation which began to take its hymn singing seriously, we should rededicate ourselves to our mission as Christians.

Forum For Demagogues

WASHINGTON — The week-long session of the United Nations Security Council, which opened today (March 15) in Panama City, is unfortunate in almost every respect.

It is unfortunate because it will provide an emotive forum for Latin American demagogues to flay the "neocolonialist" policies of the United States.

It is unfortunate because it will lessen the dwindling respect in which the United Nations is held in this country, both because the $92,000 boondoggle is hardly in keeping for an organization which last year had a deficit of $65 million and because it amounts to an admission that the Security Council might as well be in Panama City as in New York since it's incapable of accomplishing anything anyway.

On only three occasions has the Security Council met away from its New York headquarters. In 1948 and 1951, it met in Paris, as did the General Assembly, because its Manhattan building had not yet been completed. Last year, the Security Council met in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, to discuss African affairs. It accomplished next to nothing.

It was hardly coincidental that Aquilino E. Boyd, Panama's representative on the Security Council, proposed the meeting for the month during which he will be chairman of the Security Council, thus ensuring the impartiality of both the agenda and the debate. His motion was enthusiastically supported by such friends of America as the Soviet Union, China, France, Guinea, Peru, Kenya, Sudan, Yugoslavia and Indonesia. These model democracies overrode the objections of the United States, Britain and Australia.

The U. S. will get a drubbing on subjects of the activities of multinational corporations and the 200-mile fisheries claim being pushed by several Latin American nations. But the principal issue — you can rely on Boyd for that — will be Panama's bid to establish her sovereignty and jurisdiction over the Panama Canal and the 10-mile-wide Zone.

There are few fair-minded people who would argue that the 1903 treaty (amended and reaffirmed in 1936 and 1955) between Panama and the United States, governing the status of the canal, is not overdue for revision. The 1903 convention was ratified barely two weeks after Panama's secession from Colombia, which the U. S. backed when Colombia proved obdurate on negotiations for a canal through its northernmost province, and is as unequal as those imposed by the czars on China during the last century.

Basically, the 70-year-old convention provides that the U. S. can exercise all rights and powers in the Canal Zone that it would possess if it were sovereign, and can exercise these rights in perpetuity. The Canal Zone bisects Panama, the annual rental paid is small ($1.9 million) and Panamanians object to the presence in the Zone of the 13,000 military personnel attached to the Army's

To The Editor:

Greenville, Pitt County, and Eastern North Carolina are most fortunate to have so many superior dedicated and community service minded medical men and women serving the Greenville area.

Among them most especially are we thankful for is Dr. Steven M. White, who in only a few short years of residency here has performed approximately a dozen corneal transplants. This corneal transplant (eye) means the person receiving will have a good chance of some vision rather than remaining in total darkness. No corneal transplants had been performed in Greenville prior to Dr. White's coming. Along with his associate Dr. William Monroe, who is also performing corneal transplants and other special eye surgery, they hold weekly clinics for surrounding counties.

Thanks to these equally qualified men for their many contributions to this area and to Dr. Charles Pace who works so closely with eye care, preventive maintenance, and pre school eye screening clinics.

Croquet Seeing Revival

By VIVIAN BROWN

AP Newsfeatures Writer
Even if you don't play cricket, there might be a sticky wicket in your future, come spring. Croquet, the lawn game popular in the '20s, is making a comeback. Best of all, you can play it in your own backyard or the community park.

"It is a great game for women and an ideal sport for mixed couples," observed Jack Osborn, president and co-founder of the New York Croquet Club that includes about 60 women members.

As a matter of fact women frequently beat the men, he remarked. His wife, Irene, and Josie Finness of Bermuda, recently won the B-flight action at The Breakers Tournament in Palm Beach. A well-known top-flight player himself, Osborn's reaction was "Irene saved the Osborn name."

Tournaments are expanding as the game continues to grow in popularity, and there are croquet clubs in California, Nantucket, New Jersey, Florida, New York, Iowa and other midwest states, he remarked.

But many tournaments do not get off the ground because everybody seems to play by different rules. The New York club is trying to solve the problem by distributing a booklet of rules to clubs and other interested persons.

"For a half-century each course owner has been making up his own rules," Osborn observed. "Most people play American-style or some version of it, but some, like a Santa Barbara club, play English style. We are now trying to standardize rules to provide a focal point."

Their updated game is somewhere between Anglicized American or Anglicized English, depending on your point of view. In being a mix of both the new game is offensive, employing skills like golf with a real challenge of mixing strategy, rather than merely going through hoop after hoop (wickets) as the American game has done since its heyday in the '20s.

Osborn compares the English game to a chess game and the old American game to checkers in strategy and he is hoping rules will come even closer so they can play head-on with the English.

Consumer's Impact Is Growing

By JOHN CUNNIFF

AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) —

Despite a feeling of helplessness as food prices rise almost without effective resistance from government, the American consumer has become a powerful force in the marketplace.

How much of that power is actual versus potential is debatable and depends largely on the effectiveness of the myriad consumer groups that have evolved during the past decade of restlessness.

But even without organization, the total of spending and saving by the consumer can dictate the fortunes of industry and even frustrate the cleverest plans of government. This year, the consumer will spend about $780 billion, a jump of about $60 billion over 1972, making automakers and furniture dealers and builders happy. He will account for three-quarters of the gross national product.

For the third straight year, housing starts are expected to top two million units. And for the third year in a row, auto sales are expected to set a record, probably somewhere near 11 million units.

But it is the ability to save as well as to spend that gives the consumer his great power, and government and industry are now getting ready to see that power exerted. Chase Manhattan Bank forecasts a rise in the savings rate from just under 6.5 per cent of after-tax income at the close of 1972 to 8 per cent or even more during the first half of this year.

Such a level would be less than the 8.6 per cent rate reached in mid-1971 but otherwise would top by far any percentage reached in the past 20 years. What are the explanations?

Inflation, for one thing. Consumer resistance has always grown in reaction to price increases. This may not be so in regard to food, an expenditure on which Americans prefer not to skimp, but it is true elsewhere in the market. But offsetting any reduction in savings to pay for food is the fact that incomes will be getting an injection from higher Social Security benefits and income tax refunds that might total $10 billion.

Windfalls of this sort, says Chase, usually end up as savings, at least temporarily. Thus it expects that about $5 billion of income tax refunds will be stashed away rather than used.

Whether industry can pry loose the consumer's hold on those savings is going to be one of the economic dramas of the second half of 1973. Sales and service men will be tested, as will quality and price.

Southern Command.

There is, of course, another side to the story. In addition to the annual rental for the Canal Zone, U. S. purchases and payment of wages to Panamanians are worth $167 million annually, 75 per cent of Panama's total foreign exchange earnings and the basis for about 35 per cent of its gross national product. In addition, Panama's 1.5 million people have been among the highest per-capita recipients of U. S. development assistance in the Western Hemisphere, sustaining a rate of growth which is among the highest in Latin America. The presence of the U. S. forces not only protects the canal but guarantees Panama's security against external aggression.

Negotiations to reach a mutually acceptable revision of the canal agreement have been going on for nine years between Panama and the United States. In 1967, negotiators reached agreement on three draft treaties. But Panama's present strongman, Gen. Omar Torrijos, staged a coup the following year and the treaties were never ratified by Panama or submitted to the U. S. Senate.

Torrijos' stated demands include the departure of Southern Command (whose school he attended), immediate Panamanian jurisdiction over the Zone, the expiration of American police functions within five years, a politically neutral canal and a treaty to run only until 1994.

These are extreme demands, difficult to reconcile with the security requirements of the United States. Yet the 44-year-old Torrijos is neither an enemy of the United States nor the least popular or effective ruler Panama has had.

An agreement reached with him probably could be made to stick. But the rhetoric of the coming week will contribute absolutely nothing to the search for an equitable solution.

Like A Daisy In The Slag Heap

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Tonight, between the hours of nine and 11 p.m. EST, there will be 12 commercials on the CBS Television network, not counting those run in by local stations.

They'll appear in five commercial interruptions sprinkled throughout the two-hour period. Amid them, like a daisy in a slag heap, will be the TV version of a Broadway musical called "Applause."

It's a great show and it won't be a waste of time for you to watch it, even with the commercials. It contains most of the original cast, has fine direction and a brisk pace.

The Broadway version, with Lauren Bacall and Penny Fuller as the female leads, opened in March 1970 to critical cheers.

The two stars are back in the TV adaptation of "Applause," which originally was based on a 1950 movie called "All About Eve."

The story line, if you never saw the musical, is roughly this: Margo Channing (Miss Bacall) is an aging but still-glamorous Hollywood leading lady, returning in triumph to the stage.

Opening night brings cheers and Eve Harrington (Miss Fuller), who although posing as Little Mary Sunshine is in reality the Wicked Witch of Wisconsin — Madison, Wis., to be precise.

She comes on like a stagestruck waif whose true love was killed in Vietnam. Margo's performance, Eve says, gave her new hope, new life. She worms her way into Margo's heart and eventually becomes her trusted secretary. Now the bad news.

Deep down she has a burning desire to become a star and will stop at nothing to get there, even if it means sleeping with a producer, lying and generally putting on airs.

Margo finally gets a whiff of those airs and, after a few snorts at a Christmas party, snarls: "Isn't SHE a treasure? I think I'll bury her."

It's a sprightly tale of tawdry theater, full of good songs, dance numbers and the emotional stuff of which Broadway

Texas Counted 54,909 Dropouts

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — There were 54,909 dropouts from Texas schools in 1972, the Texas Education Agency reports. The figure represents 3.2 of the total public school enrollment. In 1968-69, the agency said 5.3 per cent of the students quit.

Officials said most students left school for economic reasons. Other causes for dropping out were cited as marriage, pregnancy, underachievement or overage.

is made — hope, fear, jealousy, disillusionment, true and false love and fooling around.

I particularly enjoyed the moment when Eve fills in for Margo one night, knocks the audience dead in the time-honored theater tradition and is told by an influential Broadway columnist:

"Stardust time ... call me at the office later. I want to get some quotes for the column."

Godfrey Daniel! So that's how they do it here.

The supporting cast in "Applause" is excellent, particularly Larry Hagman, who wasn't in the Broadway version and is best known to TV fans for his work in the "I Dream of Jeannie" series.

It all makes for a fine two hours of viewing. Even with commercials.

The croquet goal looks simple. A wooden ball is hit by the head of a wooden mallet and should travel through six metal, arch-shaped wickets on a 105-foot by 84-foot regulation course, returning through the same wickets. All along the way there are intrigues and obstacles. Unlike the English game, a player may employ a foot-shot — putting his foot on the ball and hitting it with a mallet in order to bump the ball of the opponent. And the Americanized version uses blue, red, black, yellow balls in rotation.

If one has less space, a course may be scaled down in proportion to accommodate the area that can be used. And if it is bumpy ground, it may be used because "it is as fair to your opponent as it is to you."

Some couples view the peaceful game outdoors as a nice change from arguing over a hot bridge table. Fifteen years ago Osborn, an industrial designer, became intrigued when he played with a child's croquet set while visiting friends. It led the group to form a tongue-in-cheek club in Westhampton, N.Y., which has since become a more serious organization. Later, Osborn became co-founder of the New York club, whose roster includes many well-known people. The group plays at a permit-only area in Central Park.

The game requires more strength for Americans than for the English, who have mature lawns, Osborn explains. Because of the rougher terrain women often get bisques (handicaps) when they play men and it accounts for the straddlestance most people must take. In England where less muscle is needed to play, they stand side-saddle.

The recent tournament at The Breakers was such a success that it has led the resort to peg March as sports month, awarding two-week vacations one in the American game with its one-eighth-inch ball clearance on each side of the metal wicket than the English game which provides only one-sixteenth clearance. But the English don't call 'em wickets, anyway, they're hoops. In England it's only in cricket one uses a wicket.

Weather Pattern Changed By 'Stray' Jet Streams

By FRANK CAREY
AP Science Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Two huge rivers of air flowed capriciously astray this winter. The result, according to government weathermen, was snow in the South, frequent mild temperatures in the North and other unseasonal weather in the nation.

Traditionally, U.S. weathermen blame sieges of unusual weather on the antics of the polar jet stream that courses high above the more northerly areas of the planet. It long has been rated a major factor in determining weather at earth's surface and it played its erratic part this winter.

But a second jet stream, pressing a rare course northward from tropical Central America, was also a major factor in the nation's weather, the weathermen say.

Both jet streams are rivers of rapidly moving air, hundreds of miles wide and 20,000 feet deep, that whirl westward around the hemisphere at an altitude of four to seven miles. Among other things, they control the pattern and direction of the hemisphere's storm tracks, intermittent areas of low pressure that tend to produce rainy or snowy weather.

"We haven't talked much in the past about the subtropical jet because it usually doesn't affect U.S. weather very much," said Dr. Murray Mitchell of the National Oceanographic and Atmospheric Administration's Environmental Data Service.

"Ordinarily, its northerly limit is somewhere over Central America, but this winter it moved upward to the latitude of the Gulf of Mexico—and it was also much more intense than usual," he said in an interview.

But, he said, the polar jet stream was also off course—"instead of moving over the midlatitudes as it ordinarily does in winter, its central core moved across the country close to the U.S.-Canadian border most of the winter."

"Thus," he said, "the United States was, in effect, cushioned between these two jets and protected in a way by them for most of the winter. It was sort of like a sandwich."

What about those 16 inches of snow that paralyzed parts of Georgia and South Carolina on Feb. 11—the worst snowfall in those parts in 50 years?

What about the sizable snowstorm that bedeviled much of North Carolina and Tennessee early in January?

"The subtropical jet," said Mitchell, "had storm tracks traveling along with it as it coursed to the east and a couple of these intensified as they moved over those states."

"These storm tracks spinning counterclockwise sucked cold air down from Canada behind them so that storms which normally would have been rainstorms became snowstorms."

"Meanwhile, in front of these same storm tracks, warm air was sucked up from the South—flooding the mid-Atlantic states with warm air and keeping the precipitation there in the form of rain instead of snow."

What about the West and the Southwest? Mitchell said the off-course polar jet, displaced far northward in spots, resulted in much less rain and snow than usual in Washington state and Oregon.

The errant subtropical jet, coupled with unusual storminess over the Pacific ocean, brought a high amount of rain and other areas as far away as southern California, Arizona and west Texas.

LEARNING HIS TRADE — David Houck, right, said by his union to be the only shipwright apprentice in California, gets a lesson in repairing a cabin on a ship from Ed Doney, left, and Dick Linville. Houck works beside older craftsmen, repairing and restoring the collection of old wooden vessels moored in California's Maritime Historic Park near Fisherman's Wharf in San Francisco.

Shipwright Apprentice Learns A Dying Craft

By BOB YEAGER
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The creaks and groans of ancient wooden sailing ships are everyday shop talk to David Houck.

Houck, 29, is said by his union to be the only shipwright apprentice in the nation's most populous state — an aspirant in a dying craft whose practitioners once designed, built and mended proud wooden ships around the globe. "There's so much to learn," Houck said of his unique job in California's Maritime Historic Park near Fisherman's Wharf. "What I have to do is watch and try to get it all in my head."

He works beside older craftsmen repairing and restoring the collection of old wooden vessels in the park, a popular tourist attraction. Apprentice programs are equally rare in other parts of the country, said Jim Tinkcom, training director of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, the shipwrights' national union.

"The moral of the story is don't buy a big wooden sailing ship unless your handskills are pretty good," he said.

Nominally, shipwrights still exist in the San Francisco area. Harry Dring, maintenance supervisor at the park, said about 70 belong to the shipwrights' union, Local 1149, the oldest union in the state.

The majority find their work in modern shipyards on steel-hulled commercial vessels.

"But if you told them you wanted to build and repair a large wooden sailing ship, they wouldn't know where to begin," Dring said.

Most wood-trained shipwrights today are in their 60s and 70s and "were raised — no matter how the liberals and intellectuals pooch-pooch it — according to the work ethic in a hard, exacting craft," he said.

That craft must include an intimate knowledge of the network of planks and fittings that make up the hull of a wooden vessel.

"A shipwright has to be far more competent than an up-town carpenter nailing 2 by 4s together," Dring said. "An old ship is a mass of curving wood. Not only is it complex; it can't leak."

Threatened with total extinction of the shipwrights' skills — and desirous of maintaining the six nautical heirlooms at the maritime park — the state began a search for a young apprentice.

Houck started the three-year training program "not knowing a poop deck from a forecabin." He is under the tutelage of foreman Joe Beviacqua and three other shipwrights at the park.

Beviacqua is 68. The youngest of his journeymen is 51.

The dark-haired mustachioed Houck confesses that the age gap can be frustrating.

"They get a little impatient when I don't learn in a year what they have learned in 40 years," he said.

Houck's unique training experience draws on centuries of historical precedent.

Early efforts to improve shipbuilding were led by King James I, who in 1605 chartered a Shipwrights Guild with jurisdiction over all shipyards in England.

The Guild soon offered improvements of its own. Master Shipwright Phineas Pett introduced the use of scale models and mathematically developed plans, making possible the construction of identical vessels.

Wooden ships gave way to metal hulled counterparts at the turn of the century and the traditional skills that went into their design and construction began to fade.

Commendation Is From Connecticut

FARMVILLE — J.R. McClendon, district manager for the Connecticut Light and Power Company of Norwalk, Conn., has commended H.B. Sugg School for the talented young men it has produced who are now employed by the Connecticut Company.

In a letter received this week by Principal Frederick Graham, McClendon made the following observations:

"Willie Langley, a 1960 graduate of H.B. Sugg School is presently one of our most accomplished linesmen and of the finer people in our organization. He has been a leader in encouraging others in his race to seek employment in this area, and to exert themselves to achieve the maximum of their capabilities."

Among the former students from your area who are presently employed with us, are Charlie Weaver Jr. and Johnny

R. Newton, both 1965 graduates, Johnny L. Ford, a 1964 graduate, Willie E. Barrett, a 1963 graduate, and Ashley Langley and Curtis Langley.

"Langley is himself a credit to his community and to his people. It has been a privilege to work with him and I look forward to many more years of the same."

F.H. Mebane was principal at H.B. Sugg during the high school career of the men who received high praise from McClendon.

John McCormack Is 80 And Still Looks Ahead

By PAUL CORCORAN
BOSTON (UPI) — At age 80, former House Speaker John W. McCormack stands straight as a steel girder. He is lean and tall. Thick white hair caps a keen mind.

He speaks slowly in a firm baritone with just a trace of an Irish-Yankee twang. Ashes drop from one of his dozen-a-day cigars.

McCormack retired at the end of the 91st Congress after 42 years as a Democratic U.S. representative from Massachusetts. For 14 months of those years, he was a heartbeat away from the presidency.

His memories go back to the New Deal and Fair Deal—which he helped mold—but now he speaks of change, almost like a young activist.

He regards himself, not immodestly, as a man with vision, ready and willing to accept change.

"Changes can master people, but time demands change," he said. "I can look 20 to 25 years into the future and I know changes are going to take place."

It is important, he said, to anticipate change through mastery of science and technology.

McCormack, who served in a leadership position under five presidents, was especially close to four of them: Franklin D. Roosevelt, Harry S. Truman, John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson.

When President Kennedy was assassinated Nov. 22, 1963, McCormack—as House Speaker—automatically became next in line for the presidency after Johnson.

McCormack, describing himself as "an American eagle instead of a hawk," believes Johnson made the right decisions on the Vietnam War. "History will record he was right ...," McCormack said. On the relationship between Congress and the executive branch of government, McCormack believes Congress can exert power if it feels a president has exceeded his authority.

He made it clear he was not picking a fight with President Nixon with whom he is on cordial terms. But, speaking in general terms, he sees Congress taking "definite action" if the administration surpasses the historical and traditional bounds of executive power.

McCormack, a widower, lives modestly in an apartment in Boston's Jamaica Plain section. In retirement, he still makes public appearances. Cronies— young and old—occasionally call on him for advice. He maintains an office in a post office building named after him.

Ayden OKs Electric Rate Hike

AYDEN — The Ayden Board of Commissioners Monday night approved a temporary 10 percent electrical rate increase to begin with the April electrical bills.

The increase was approved in order to offset recent wholesale increases to the town of Ayden by Virginia Electric and Power Company (VEPCO).

According to Town Manager Don Russell, if VEPCO is granted a retail rate increase by the North Carolina Utilities Commission, then the town would probably re-evaluate the rates at that time. Russell expects the present rate increase to continue at least until July.

Glenn Gaylor, appointed to a committee last month to study the Lutz and Schramm industrial lagoon problem, told the board that the company had agreed to pay for the electricity used to operate the lagoons but that a lease or purchase of the property could not be negotiated until the pilot study now being conducted was completed and found to be feasible.

The study is expected to be completed in October, and if found to be feasible, the local company will discuss a lease or purchase arrangement.

Board members signed a contract with the North Carolina League of Municipalities which will give the league the right to assist the Ayden Fire Department in writing specifications for a new fire truck. The specifications will be made after a survey of the town needs is made. They will also assist in advertising and accepting bids for the purchase of a new fire truck for the town.

The cost of the service to the town will be $250 plus travel expenses.

An interim municipal election board was also appointed. Members include: Steve Nobles, Gratz Norcott, and Fred York. The election board will meet to elect a chairman. They will also be responsible for appointing a full-time registrar for the town.

Travis Dixon was named to the Planning Board to fill the unexpired term of Charles Chappell who has moved away.

The board approved a recommendation from the Planning and Zoning Board that the J.F. Dixon property located northeast of Ayden be rezoned from RA-10 to RA-8.

The final plats for Deerfield Subdivision, including 20 lots in the first phase, and North Hill Estates Subdivision, consisting of 23 lots, were approved.

The recent election results of the Ayden Fire Department were accepted. The new officers are: Charlie Tripp, chief; Burt Tripp, assistant chief; and Jim Trader, secretary-treasurer. Board members agreed to file an application with the Farmers Home Administration in the amount of $784,750, for the South Pitt County Sewer District.

An ordinance was passed amending the town's subdivision regulations in which the town will participate in 33 percent of the curb and gutter in subdivisions where the subdivider installs such improvements.

The board also discussed the possibility of requiring the installation of curb and gutter in all subdivisions where the final plats have not been approved.

The board set April 9 as the date for a public hearing to discuss the annexation of property located north of country road 1222 into the town limits. The request came from Mr. and Mrs. Chester Stox, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Harrington, and Mr. and Mrs. Lewandowski.

Want To Keep Clock Running

An On-The-Spot Carpet Test

NEW YORK (UPI) — Here's an easy on-the-spot way to tell if the foam rubber backed carpet you plan to buy is made of quality high density latex foam rubber.

First, rub the foam rubber with your fingers. If it flakes or shreds, you know the foam rubber is not up to industry standards. The surface should remain smooth and even, after the "rub" test.

Next, bend the carpet back, with the foam rubber backing towards you. No cracks should appear in the backing surface.

Finally, consider the weightiness of the carpet. Quality foam rubber should have a substantial "feel." Remembering these three simple tests can insure that you are purchasing a quality backing that will be long-lasting and trouble-free.

Nixon's Executive Powers Go Into Reshaping U.S.

EDITORS—In his effort to set America on a new course of self-reliance and lessening dependence on government, President Nixon is making perhaps unprecedented use of the office he holds.

In this, the second in a two-part series on the President's goals and means, Associated Press Writer Gaylord Shaw discusses this use of executive powers.

Department under Secretary of State William P. Rogers. Rogers, as a statutory Cabinet officer, testifies frequently before House and Senate committees. Kissinger never has, although the White House says he frequently meets informally with members of Congress.

Some of Nixon's moves can be traced to his distrust of the Bureau. A month after his landslide re-election, the President told newsmen at Camp David that "it has been my conviction for years that elected officials in this country too often become prisoners of... the bureaucracy which they are supposed to run."

It was at the mountaintop retreat in the Maryland mountains during November and December that Nixon charted a series of steps to tighten White House control of the Bureau. He shifted trusted White House aides to key management posts at Interior, Transportation and other departments and ordered his Office of Management and Budget to squeeze more efficiency out of the federal workforce.

He ordered that administration lobbying efforts on Capitol Hill be coordinated from the White House, and approved moves to bring public-relations operations throughout government more under the wing of the executive office.

Nixon's wielding of executive power should not have come as a surprise to Congress. He telegraphed his plans even before his election in 1968, saying in a campaign speech that "the days of a passive presidency belong to a simpler past. Let me be very clear about this: The next president must take an activist view of his office."

An activist president he has been, scholars agree.

"The President steps into power vacuums," Prof. Alexander Bickel of Yale Law School recently told a group of congressmen. "If no one is there, he steps in."

Most scholars give Nixon the edge in his struggle with Congress. But the Democrats on Capitol Hill aren't giving up without a fight.

It is time, said Sen. Harold Hughes, D-Iowa, for members of Congress "to dig their heels in and be damned if they are going to be shoved any further" by the executive branch.

"For my own," Hughes said, "I've been pushed about as far as I intend to be pushed."

Fresh Daily ROLLS Diener's Bakery 815 Dickinson Ave.

By GAYLORD SHAW
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon is making perhaps unprecedented use of executive power as he seeks in his second term to reshape America's government.

In doing so, he has enraged Congress and engaged it in a power struggle and constitutional confrontation of historic scope.

The issues range from whether the president has to spend the dollars Congress votes to whether White House aides can refuse a summons to appear before congressional committees.

At stake, in the view of many historians and presidential scholars, is the traditional executive-legislative balance of power.

Members of Congress contend that Nixon has ignored the Constitution and tipped the balance in his favor. Sen. Sam J. Ervin, D-N.C., for one, contends the Republican chief executive has built up "the most dangerous concentration of executive power in our history."

Nonsense, respond Nixon aides. They contend the President is using "a limited number of government tools" in behalf of the public interest.

But Nixon's top domestic adviser, John Ehrlichman, acknowledged recently that the President exercises "one-man rule." This is because he has to "step into the vacuum" left by congressional inaction, Ehrlichman said.

Examples abound of Nixon's use of executive powers, including:

—Establishment of a so-called "super cabinet" by designating three Cabinet members as presidential counselors and giving them broad authority over the areas of natural resources, human resources and community development.

—A widespread series of freezes directed at programs he seeks to curb or eliminate in his second term. He acted without consulting Congress, and protests quickly came from Capitol Hill.

—The withholding of federal funds voted by Congress in an effort to keep spending to about $250 billion this year.

—The downgrading of the Cabinet's traditional role as a deliberative body.

"The real, productive work" in shaping government policy is done in smaller groups, such as the National Security Council or the Domestic Council, Ehrlichman said, and "I don't think anybody would try to tell you differently."

The fact that Nixon uses the doctrine of executive privilege to keep these policymakers from testifying before congressional committees rangles many on Capitol Hill.

The making of foreign policy, for example, has been centralized in the White House under presidential adviser Henry Kissinger, rather than the State

Glass Shelter For Picnickers

NEW YORK (UPI) — Picnickers in Denver next summer will be sheltered by a pavilion built of recycled glass bottles and rubble from demolished buildings, says the Glass Container Manufacturers Institute (GCM).

These materials have been combined by the Colorado School of Mines Research Institute with small amounts of clay to make super-strong construction panels. The panels are being manufactured in a pilot plant at Golden, Colo., and the pavilion will be built in a Denver park to demonstrate their use. The shelter will be donated to the City of Denver.

COPENHAGEN (UPI) — There is a private car for every fourth citizen in Denmark, according to the Statistical Office, which reports the number of private cars jumped to 1.33 million in 1971. At the same time, fewer Danes used public transportation such as buses and trams.

Grade A large whites: 62.49.
Medium whites: 58.74.

NEW YORK (AP)—Stock market prices drifted lower today as investors continued showing concern over the monetary situation and inflationary pressures at home.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials at 11:30 a.m. was down .75 to 978.10, while declines outnumbered advances on the New York Stock Exchange by a fair margin.

Big Board prices included General Host, up 2% to 17%. The stock had a delayed opening for the dissemination of news that Triumph American, Inc., intended offer to buy 1,075,000 shares of General Host common at $18.50 a share.

Metals companies were off after news that President Nixon planned to sell metals from government stockpiles to help drive down prices. Reynolds Metals was off 3/8 to 12 1/2. Kennecott was off 1/8 to 27 1/4. Anaconda fell 7/8 to 22 3/4, and Phelps Dodge was down 1 1/4 to 44 1/4.

Student Editor Wants 'Shield'

WASHINGTON (AP)—G. Evans Witt, editor of the Daily Tar Heel at the University of North Carolina, has asked Congress to make sure any newsman's shield law also covers student and underground papers.

"Both the irregular and student press have been crucial to the information flow in this country," he told a Senate subcommittee Wednesday. The subcommittee chairman is Sen. Sam. J. Ervin Jr., D.N.C., the chief Senate force behind the drive to enact a shield law this year.

"Many of the atrocities of the Vietnam war were first revealed by" collegiate and underground press services," Witt said. He added, "Underground newspapers in some areas have been instrumental in revealing injustices, corruption and stupidity where the local regular press was afraid to move."

Helms Objects To Dam Costs

RALEIGH (AP)—The controversial Falls of the Neuse dam project has an influential new opponent—U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C.

Helms revealed his opposition in a letter to the Raleigh City Council last week, details of which became available Wednesday.

He said he objected to the project's cost—$49 million—and what he termed "undue taking of land" from residents in the proposed reservoir and recreation area.

Helms became the first major elected official to oppose the project, which Raleigh officials say is necessary to provide water for their growing city.

UCLA Begins Quest For Seventh Straight

By KEN RAPPOPORT
Associated Press Sports Writer
The UCLA Bruins, a team with the strongest finishing kick the last six years, jump into the playoff pool tonight to begin defense of their NCAA basketball title.

Not only do the awesome Bruins have tradition going for them—but also the home court advantage.

"I hope that Arizona State, the University of San Francisco and Long Beach are very aware of it," says UCLA Coach John Wooden. "I want all their players to read it and think about the fact that we're playing in Pauley Pavilion."

The top-ranked Bruins have not only been unbeatable at home, though—they've also been perfect on the road. Their record 71 straight victories is the talk of college basketball. So is the fact that they've won the NCAA title six straight times.

"Arizona State has a chance but I won't bet on 'em," said Long Beach State Coach Jerry Tarkanian about UCLA's opponent in the West Regional semifinal test.

Before UCLA hosts Arizona State, Long Beach will meet San Francisco in the opener. Arizona State advanced to the regional semis with a victory last week over Oklahoma City while Long Beach moved up with a success over Weber State. Like UCLA, San Francisco drew an opening-round bye.

Six other regional playoff games will be held tonight across the country in the Midwest, Midwest and East.

Marquette meets Indiana and Austin Peay tackles Kentucky in the Midwest Regionals at Nashville, Tenn. In the Midwest at Houston, it's South Carolina against Memphis State and Southwestern Louisiana vs. Kansas State. Syracuse takes on Maryland and Penn clashes with Providence in the East Regionals at Charlotte, N.C.

Tonight's winners play in the regional finals Saturday night and the winners of those tests move into St. Louis for the championship round March 24 and March 26.

It will all be academic, however, if UCLA continues to play its style of mistake-proof basketball.

"We're happy to get back in a situation where every team's crusade won't be just to beat us, but to stay alive in the tournament," said Wooden. "It's a sudden-death thing where you're in or you're out."

Coach Ned Wulk of Arizona State's Western Athletic Conference kings is respectful of the UCLA winning streak, but not especially awed.

"Sooner or later they're going to lose," says Wulk about meeting Bill Walton and Co. which breezed to the Pacific-8

Conference championship this year.

Sam Houston State, which finished the regular season as the No. 1 team in the small college rankings, was knocked out of the National Association for Intercollegiate Athletics Association championship tourney in Kansas City on Wednesday night. The previously unbeaten Bearkats fell 67-60 to New Orleans Xavier, which was helped by a late flurry of baskets from sophomore Bruce Seals.

The NCAA's College Division championships got under way at Evansville, Ind., Thursday and defending champion Roanoke fell by the wayside, losing to Kentucky Wesleyan 87-63.

Celtics, 76ers Draw Close To NBA Records

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
The Boston Celtics won their 60th game of the National Basketball Association season Wednesday night and the Philadelphia 76ers lost their 67th.

The Celtics can tie the NBA record for victories set by the Los Angeles Lakers last season with 69 by winning their remaining games. All the 76ers have to do to set an NBA record for most losses in one season is to lose one game out of their remaining nine.

The Celtics beat the Baltimore Bullets 111-107 and the 76ers fell to the Phoenix Suns 120-114.

In the only other NBA game, Los Angeles beat Detroit 121-122.

In the American Basketball Association Wednesday, San Diego clipped the New York Nets 108-98, Indiana beat Utah 113-106 and Virginia dumped Dallas 125-114.

John Havlicek's four points in the final 15 seconds was the margin of victory for the Celtics. Havlicek made a fall away jump shot with two defenders hounding him with 15 seconds remaining to break a 107-107 tie.

Jo-Jo White tied Havlicek for scoring honors with 27 including some clutch baskets in the fourth period.

The 76ers overcame a 19-point deficit late in the third quarter and tied their game with the Suns at 96 all. The lead changed hands seven times from that point on.

Charlie Scott, who finished the night with 32 points, put the Suns in the lead for good with just over a minute to play. Neal Walk chipped in 29 points for Phoenix.

Clutch shooting and passing by Jerry West and Jim McMillan in the fourth period carried Los Angeles over the Detroit Pistons.

All five Laker starters scored at least 18 points, led by Gail Goodrich with 27 and McMillan with 24. Wilt Chamberlain followed with 22, Bill Bridges hit 20 and West had 18 points and 17 assists.

Dave Bing led the Pistons with 23 points, while Bob Lanier added 22.

The San Diego Conquistadors remained in the thick of the battle for a playoff spot in the ABA's West Division with a 10 point win over the Nets.

Simmie Hill led the way for San Diego with 28 points and Chuck Williams added 25. George Carter paced the Nets with 22 points while Billy Paultz had 18 points and 16 rebounds.

The Indiana Pacers scored their eighth straight ABA victory at the expense of the Utah Stars.

George McGinnis didn't let an injured foot bother him as he entered the game in the second quarter and scored 23 points in the game. The Pacers had fallen behind by as many as 13 points but McGinnis scored 12 third period points to bring the Pacers back into the game. The Pacer's clinched the victory with four free throws by Gus Johnson in the final 34 seconds.

Julius Erving's 10 points in the final quarter, giving him 44 for the game, lead the Virginia Squires over the Dallas Chaparrals.

Presbyter. In Finals

Presbyterian and Immanuel will meet tonight for the Church Basketball League Tournament Championship. Presbyterian won its way into the finals last night with a 58-55 victory over Oakmont.

Immanuel is in the drivers seat in the finals, having to win only once to wrap up the title, while Presbyterian, already with one loss on its record, must win tonight, forcing another game tomorrow night, and win that one too.

Presbyterian and Oakmont battled all the way. Baptists fell behind at halftime, however, 26-25. They tried to catch up in the second half, but Presbyterian out hit them, 32-30, to hold on and take the victory.

Frank Freular led Presbyterian with 25 points, while Lawton Nesbit added 10. Robert Carraway paced Oakmont with 18, while Don Parrott had 11.

Cougars Seek Contract Change

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP)—The Carolina Cougars of the American Basketball Association have asked a state court to permit changes in the pension credit portion of their contract with star forward Joe Caldwell.

The Cougars told Guilford Superior Court Wednesday the original contract signed in 1970 contained an inadvertent mistake and that Caldwell has refused to allow any change.

The dispute revolves around whether Caldwell should receive pension credit at the rate of $60 a month, or whether it should be at the rate of $600 a month as stated in the contract.

The contract, offered in evidence, says Caldwell receives $220,000 a year for five years, or a total of $1.1 million for the period.

The Munchak Corp. and the RDG Corp., a joint enterprise doing business as the Cougars, told the court they were advised in a letter from Caldwell's attorney in June, 1972, that the player was claiming the pension credit at the rate of $600 a month.

The owners told the court that in the original negotiations with Caldwell, who was with Atlanta in the rival National Basketball Association until joining Carolina in late 1970, it was agreed he "would be entitled to receive at age 55 pension benefits in the sum of $60 per month for each year of service as a professional basketball player." The owners said it was expected that Caldwell would play for 10 years, giving him a pension credit totaling $600 a month at age 55.

The portion of the contract discussing the subject says Caldwell is due "the sum of six hundred dollars ($600) per month for each year of service as a professional player, which sum shall be paid at age 55."

The owners contend that the $600 figure in the contract was "caused through the mistake and inadvertence of the draftsman" of the document, and asked the court to order the sum deleted and the $60 figure be inserted to make the document conform with the oral agreement.

Improved Phillies May Still Finish In Cellar

By RALPH BERNSTEIN
Associated Press Sports Writer
CLEARWATER, Fla. (AP) — The Philadelphia Phillies should win more games, be more competitive and yet still might wind up last in the National League Eastern Division.

The Phillies won only 59 games last season, finished 37 1/2 games behind division winner Pittsburgh, 11 in back of fifth place Montreal. As a result, the club cleaned house—new president, personnel director, manager and players.

Owner Bob Carpenter turned control of the team over to his 32-year-old son, Ruly, a Yale graduate who has had several positions in the organization as he trained for the big job. Paul Owens succeeded John Quinn as personnel director, and Los Angeles Dodgers' Coach Danny Ozark became the new manager.

Ruly, Owens and Ozark went to work. When the team reported to spring training, only 18 of the 40-man roster were with the organization a year ago. Ozark promised a sound, fundamental team that won't be beaten by its own mistakes.

Pitching was the Phillies' big problem in 1972. The Phillies last season had 27-game winner Steve Carlton, the National League Cy Young award winner, and that was it. So Owens gave up young third baseman Don Money, a disappointment at the plate, to acquire 14-game winner Jim Lonborg and Ken Brett from Milwaukee.

Lonborg will be the No. 2 starter behind Carlton, while Brett, a young lefthander with great promise, and Wayne Twitchell, a righthander who came along at the end of the 1972 campaign, probably will complete the starting corps. The other six positions on the staff are open to such as Barry Lersch, Rick Clark, Dave Downs, Don Leshnock, Dick Selma, Mac Scarce, and Billy Wilson, Mike Martin, Earl Stephenson, Jim Nash and some young prospects.

The infield is unsettled at first and third base. Veteran Deron Johnson, sidelined by a leg nerve injury last season, appears to be healthy again and should handle first. If Johnson, a power hitter, can't make it, Tommy Hutton or Willie Montanez get a shot at the job. Denny Doyle, experimenting at becoming a switchhitter, and utilityman Terry Harmon, will share second, with Golden Glover Larry Bowa at shortstop. Young Mike Schmidt, a rookie, is being given every chance at third, with the veterans Jose Pagan and Cesar Tovar waiting in the wings.

Greg Luzinski, who hit 18 home runs and knocked in 68 runs while hitting .281 in his rookie year of 1972, has left field locked up. Mike Anderson, a flop as a rookie last year, and Del Unser, a good fielder but a light hitter, acquired from Cleveland, are battling for center. Montanez is the right fielder if he doesn't play first base. Tovar acquired from Minnesota, could be the center fielder if he doesn't play third.

The Phillies are gambling behind the plate with rookie Bob Boone and veteran Mike Ryan, a good receiver with a .192 lifetime batting average. Boone has had but two minor league seasons as a catcher, but Ozark scouted him in winter league action and is confident he can handle the No. 1 job. Boone hit .275 in 16 games last September for the Phillies.

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Aron Stewart of Richmond today was named Southern Conference basketball player of the year, and probably the least surprised man was Spider Coach Lewis Mills.

"To me, there was no competition," said Mills of the 6-foot-5 junior college transfer who led the conference in both scoring and rebounding after sitting out the Spiders' first five games until he became eligible. "He did the job for us," said Mills. "He did more for us than any one player could have done for any team in the league."

At the same time, Mills said there was no way he could have predicted before the season began that "Aron would have that kind of year" even though he had labeled Stewart possibly the best player ever to enroll at Richmond.

"I certainly didn't know he'd score 30 points a game," said Mills.

Stewart did a little better than that, averaging 30.2 points per game on 574 points in the 19 games in which he played. The Spiders wound up with an 8-16 record, but they were 0-5 when Stewart became eligible to play for the first time.

In addition, the Jersey City, N.J., star averaged 11.6 rebounds per game and was third in the conference in shooting accuracy, hitting 230 of 435 shots for 52.9 per cent.

Stewart, the top vote-getter on the All-Southern Conference team, four times during the season was named conference player of the week.

The Richmond star received all but three votes for player of the year in balloting by the Southern Conference Sports Writers Association. One vote each was cast for Furman's two All-Southern sophomore stars, Fessor "Moose" Leonard and Clyde Mayes, and All-Southern senior Steve Fishel of The Citadel.

Joe Williams, who guided Furman's Paladins to a 20-9 over-all season and the league championship, was a narrow winner as coach of the year over Terry Holland of Davidson, who had won the honor the last three seasons in a row.

The dapper Williams, who came to Furman three years ago after taking Jacksonville to the National Collegiate Athletic Association tournament finals, finished two votes ahead of Holland, whose team finished 9-1 to Furman's 11-12 during the regular season in the league but lost to the Paladins 99-81 in the league tournament finals.

Votes also were cast for George Hill of The Citadel and Ed Ashnault of William and Mary.

Guilford Gains Next Round In NAAIA Field

By ROBERT MOORE
Associated Press Sports Writer
KANSAS CITY (AP) — Xavier of Louisiana, unranked and unregarded, has proven one of the most potent giant killers in the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics basketball tournament in recent years.

The Gold Rush, led by Bruce Seals, rose up Wednesday night and struck down top-seeded and previously unbeaten Sam Houston State, the nation's No. 1-ranked small college club, 67-60.

Tonight, Xavier, 21-5, has the opportunity to turn giant killer again when the Gold Rush collides with the No. 8 seed, Maryland Eastern Shore, 24-2, in the quarter-finals.

Sam Houston's defeat left only three seeded teams in the six-day action. The others, in addition to Eastern Shore, are No. 2 Augustana, Ill., and No. 4 Wisconsin Green Bay.

The other quarter-finals pairings: Slippery Rock, Pa., 22-5, vs. Wisconsin Green Bay, 28-3.

Guilford, N.C., 26-5, vs. Westmont, Calif., 25-5.

Augustana, 27-1, vs. Oklahoma Baptist, 19-11.

Second-seeded Augusta, with Sam Houston's elimination and its ability to win the close ones, moved into the favorite's role to win this 38th annual NAAIA dribble derby although the Vikings and the other remaining clubs still must reckon with Xavier.

The Vikings advanced by nudging Defiance of Ohio, 64-61. Green Bay downed South Carolina State 72-55, and Eastern Shore disposed of Ferris, Mich., State 95-90.

Wednesday's other games saw Slippery Rock bomb Quinnipiac, Conn., 104-75; Guilford whip Valdosta, Ga., State 98-81; Westmont clobber Missouri Southern 86-70, and Oklahoma Baptist surprise Winona, Minn., State 82-72.

Patton's Army Stormed Through JV Opposition

"Patton's Army" has successfully completed a three-month series of offensive excursions throughout the South and in the process it captured the respect of its foes and the optimistic enthusiasm of a multitude of hopeful East Carolina University basketball fans.

Not General George Patton's Army of course, but Coach Dave Patton's Army, the ECU junior varsity basketball team.

The Baby Pirates impressed their followers by overcoming some unusual problems and rolling up an impressive seven game winning streak down the stretch to boost their record for the season to an admirable 11-4.

The picture wasn't that rosy all season however. Faced with an acute shortage of manpower, the ECU Jayvees usually took to the court with only one or two players on the bench in reserve. Obviously, injuries and personal fouls presented a unique problem. Consequently, they finished several of their games with only four players on the court.

"Patton's Army" had a particularly disheartening time early in the season, losing three of their first seven games by a combined margin of only 10 points.

Their first loss came at the hands of the North Carolina junior varsity in the season's opener. Leading by what seemed to be a comfortable 18-point margin with only eight minutes remaining, the ECU Jayvees went into a long cold spell and finally came out on the short end of a 64-63 score.

Patton's troopers hosted Mount Olive a week later and after losing one player to an injury and one to personal fouls, played the final five minutes with only four players but still managed to preserve a skimpy lead for a nerve-wracking 74-72 win.

After wins over Louisburg and Chowan, the Baby Pirates carried a contingent of six players to Duke where they fought back from a nine-point deficit to take the lead and build up a six-point margin with only three minutes remaining. One player had already been lost to fouls and at three three-minute mark, a second player was lost, also to personal fouls. Not unexpectedly, the Blue Imps were able to come back against ECU's four remaining players for a 66-61 victory.

Then after a lopsided 100-60 win over Frederick Military Academy, the Pirate Jayvees were upset 63-59 in the Mount Olive Pickle Classic by the same Louisburg team which they had defeated handily earlier in the season. In that game, the Baby Pirates were without two of their regulars who were away on a trip with the Pirate varsity.

In the season's final weeks, however, Patton's forces were able to pull their outnumbered ranks together will enough to finish out the season with a remarkable seven game winning streak. Among the victims was a strong Davidson team which went down by a score of 104-90 despite the fact the ECU was again forced to play the final four minutes with only four players. Surprisingly, in this instance, the four remaining Baby Pirates were able to increase a 10-point margin to the final 14-point margin.

Other victims included the College of the Albemarle, which went down 101-70, N.C. State's Wolflets, who fell by a 94-69 score, and Old Dominion, beaten in overtime 83-79, despite the absence of Patton, who was unable to be at the game because

Aaron Says It: Wants Record

By BERT ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Sports Writer
Old-time baseball fans who were steadfast in their belief that Babe Ruth's hallowed record of 714 home runs would never be broken, now must face reality—Hank Aaron will do it...barring injury.

The 39-year-old Atlanta Braves' slugger, needing only 41 homers to tie Ruth's long-standing record and 42 to break it, made it emphatically clear Wednesday that he was taking dead aim on the Babe's total—and if he reaches it this season, he will quit.

"If I should get extra lucky and hit 42 homers this season, I'm planning on quitting," he said. "But my real plan, which is more realistic, is to hit at least 42 in two seasons."

Aaron, with a career total of 673 homers, including 34 last season, said his goal this year is 35 homers. That would leave him six short of Ruth's record, and make the buildup overwhelming for the 1974 campaign.

Aaron didn't hit any homers Wednesday as the winless Braves lost their fifth exhibition game, 4-3 to the Chicago White Sox. Tony Muser led the White Sox with three runs batted in, including two with a double during a three-run first inning.

Meanwhile, rookie outfielder Al Bumby had three hits, including a run-scoring double and a game-winning single, helping the Baltimore Orioles edge the Minnesota Twins 4-3. Bumby also drew a walk, stole a base and threw out a Minnesota runner at the plate.

Veteran Jim Lytle, fighting for a berth on the Kansas City roster, improved his chances by driving in two runs and scoring another in the Royals' 3-2 victory over Philadelphia, the Phillies' first loss in six games.

The Boston Red Sox rallied for a 7-6 victory over the Montreal Expos on Ben Ogilvie's run-scoring double in the eighth inning. Cecil Cooper, who scored the winning run, had reached base on a two-run single and earlier hit a solo homer.

The Los Angeles Dodgers parlayed two-run homers by Van Joshua and Bill Russell and six Pittsburgh errors for a 10-2 rout over the Pirates. Joshua's was a 450-foot blast over the center field fence while Pittsburgh's Manny Sanguillen smashed a 400-foot homer over the left field fence.

The New York Yankees scored twice in the sixth inning on singles by Roy White, Graig Nettles and Felipe Alou, a walk to Ron Blomberg and a hit batsman, and went on to defeat the St. Louis Cardinals 3-1.

Joe Hague drove in three runs and rookie Ken Griffey knocked in two, leading the Cincinnati Reds to a 7-3 victory over the Houston Astros.

Jerry Grote had two hits, drove in one run and scored another, sparking the New York Mets to a 6-4 triumph over the Detroit Tigers.

Ivan Murrell and Dave Roberts each rapped a single and a double while Dan Spillner, Bob Graczyk and Bill Laxton combined for a six-hitter as the San Diego Padres trimmed Arizona State University 4-1.

And four games were rained out—the Chicago Cubs against California, San Francisco-Milwaukee, Cleveland-Oakland, and California's "B" team against Oakland's "B" squad.

Belmont Park racetrack has stable accommodations for 2-100 horses and living quarters for 800 backstretch employees.

Maryland Putting ACC Yarbrough Out To Snap String Hopes On Line Tonight

By KEN ALYTA
Associated Press Sports Writer
CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — NCAA Eastern Regional basketball championship play begins tonight at the Charlotte Coliseum with Maryland hoping to continue the Atlantic Coast Conference dominance.

Coach Lefty Driesell's Terrapins, qualifying for the tournament for the first time in 15 years, and Providence, rated the class of the East, are favored to gain spots in Saturday's title game.

Providence, No. 4 nationally on a 25-2 record, meets Penn. 18th at 21-5, in the first game at 7:10 p.m. Maryland, No. 8 and 22-6, takes on Syracuse, 23-4 and 14th in the nation, at about 9:10.

Atlantic Coast Conference teams have won the regional title eight times in 11 years. The ACC berth normally goes to the winner of the conference championship tournament.

However, unbeaten North Carolina State, 27-0, is on one-year-probation for violation of recruiting regulations and Maryland, 74-72 loser to State in the ACC finals last Saturday, got the NCAA bid as conference runnerup.

Tonight's winners meet at 2:10 p.m. Saturday after a 12:05 consolation game between the losers.

The champion will advance to the national semifinals, March 24 at St. Louis against the Midwest Regional winner.

The NCAA has juggled pairing this year. Instead of the Eastern and Midwestern regional champs meeting in one semifinal and the West and Midwest in the other, as has been the custom, the East winner will meet the Midwest winner at St. Louis.

The Midwest Regional opens tonight at Houston, with Kansas State meeting Southwest Louisiana and Memphis State playing South Carolina, a former ACC member.

In 25 NCAA tournaments, ACC teams have won 45 games and lost 28.

Streaking Providence, last beaten by defending champion UCLA, has won 15 straight, and Syracuse carries a 10-game streak into the tournament.

Providence is the regional favorite, primarily because Coach Dave Gavitt's Friars have backcourt whiz Ernie DeGregorio and Marvin Barnes, the nation's No. 2 rebounder.

Maryland, with most of the team back that won the National Invitation Tournament at New York last March for Driesell, has size and depth and a flashy freshman, John Lucas, who scored 61 points in three tournament games last week.

Chuck Daly's Penn team, with the lowest point yield average in the country, 55 a game, is in the tournament for the fourth year in a row. The Quakers survived a scrambling Ivy League race to qualify.

ROCKINGHAM, N.C. (AP) — It has been more than two years since Cale Yarbrough won an auto race, but he started work with high hopes today at the track where he had his last success.

Yarbrough, 33, was among half a dozen drivers rated as pole position contenders in first-round qualifying for Sunday's Carolina 500 Grand National stock car event at North Carolina Motor Speedway.

The others were Buddy Baker and Richard Petty in Dodges, Bobby Allison and Gordon Johncock in Chevrolets, and David Pearson in a Mercury.

All except Johncock turned practice laps around the banked one-mile oval Wednesday at speeds over 132 miles per hour. Pearson, Yarbrough and Baker eclipsed the 134 m.p.h. mark.

Johncock, who also is scheduled to compete in a 150-mile Indianapolis-type race at Phoenix, Ariz., Saturday, was expected in Rockingham today to qualify his car. His owner, Hoss Ellington, and both Yarbrough and Allison helped shake the car down in Wednesday's practice session and all ran sat speeds that would make the car a contender.

The top 15 positions in the 40-car starting field were at stake, with most drivers pointing in the 32-year-old Baker as the man to beat for the inside front row spot.

Baker won the pole position for the Daytona 500 last month and led 187 of the 200 laps in the race before being sidelined with engine trouble.

Yarbrough, a Republican county commissioner in his hometown of Timmonsville, S.C., took over Junior Johnson's Chevrolet at the start of the season after spending two unsuccessful years with the United States Auto Club where he drove the Indianapolis cars.

Allison drove Johnson's car to 10 triumphs and $284,467 last year, then decided to strike out on his own this year. Yarbrough, with career winnings of $465,162 and a season high of $136,786 in 1968, made his short-lived departure from stock cars after capturing the American 500 at Rockingham in 1970.

"This is the place to get back into harness," the broad-shouldered Yarbrough said Wednesday. "There has been no lack of speed with the car, but we have been having minor problems which we hope to eliminate."

Petty, Allison and Pearson also are former winners at the scenic little speedway in North Carolina's peach rowing section, with Petty having scored five times and Allison twice.

Two From Louisiana Are Named To Little All-American Team

By KEN RAPPOPORT
Associated Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Green, Louisiana Tech's rebound-hungry center, and James Lister, the heart of top-ranked Sam Houston State, were among those named today to The Associated Press' 1973 Little All-American basketball team.

Joining the frontcourt bruisers was another talented giant from Louisiana, New Orleans Xavier's Bruce Seals, and two guards—Mike Boyland of Assumption, Mass. and Fred Smiley of Northwood, Mich.

Only Boylan was a previous All-American, making The AP's third team last year.

Green, a 6-foot-10, 196-pounder from McComb, Miss., was an obvious choice for All-American after breaking records by the basketful at the Ruston, La., school.

He started 102 straight games from his freshman year and cracked career marks for scoring average (22.9) and rebounds-per-game (15.4). Green was voted player of the year in the Southland Conference, eclipsing such major college notables at Dwight Lamar and Roy Ebron of Southwestern Louisiana.

This year, Green reached a high-water mark in scoring with a 30.9 average, good for second in the country among small college players. He had a rebound average of 15.7, also leading the Southland Conference in that department.

The senior's menacing presence in the lineup helped Louisiana Tech finish with an 18-8 record and the No. 8 ranking in The AP poll. "He was the whole team," said a school spokesman.

Lister, another senior in the 6-10 range with a little more beef on his frame (207 pounds), was the spark behind Sam Houston State's 25-0 regular season record and No. 1 ranking in the final AP small college poll. His averages of 20 points and 16 rebounds a game didn't tell the whole story. Along with his gaudy offensive talents, he was one of the country's best shot-blockers.

Seals connected for 25.9 points a game and was mostly responsible for putting Xavier into the NAIA's post-season tournament. He's considered by some to be nearly in the class of Green, perhaps the country's No. 1 pro prospect from the college division ranks.

Boylan, tall for a guard at 6-5, averaged 22 points a game and has been termed "the best player Assumption has ever had" by his coach, Joe O'Brien. Smiley, a 5-11, ball-handling wizard and one of the best shooters in the country, finished with a 31.6 scoring average for fourth place.

The AP's second team consists of Lenard Robinson of Tennessee State; Joel Copeland of Old Dominion; Morgan State's Marvin Webster; William "June" Harris of North Carolina A&T and Hershel Lewis of Winona, Minn., State.

Labor Act Suit Brought Against Firm

Sen. White Sponsored Easing Farm Tax Load

Pitt Senator Vernon White last week introduced a bill in the North Carolina Senate signed by a number of other legislators, that would tend to ease the tax burden on farm property located in urban or other areas where rapid development is occurring.

Currently, all property, under state law, has to be listed for tax purposes at its true value in money. In many cases, the value of land used for farming or woods land is increased by commercial or residential developments near-by. And in some instances, according to White, owners of such property are forced to cease farming operations and sell the property because of the increased tax burden.

White's bill would treat such property as a special classification and tend to "alleviate pressures which force the conversion of such real estate to more intensive uses and which are attributable in part to the assessment of such real estate at values incompatible with its use and preservation for agricultural, horticultural, forest or open space purposes."

Under the bill, the special classification of land would be "taxes according to its current use... regardless of its location with the boundaries of the local taxing unit," rather than on its true market value.

The bill also provides that property which qualifies under the bill be appraised or valued for both agricultural use and its true value in money for other uses.

Property so classified, the bill provides shall be subject to additional taxes, (deferred taxes) if the use of the property changes.

Under the plan, should such farm land be developed or sold for development during a year, owners of the parcel or tract would be required to pay an amount equal to the taxes for the current and two tax years immediately preceding—based on the normal valuation of the property. Owners would also pay interest on two prior years taxes, not to exceed seven percent per annum.

The amount of tax, plus the interest, would constitute a lien upon the property, also.

Tar Heel Home Supply Inc., doing business as Tar Heel Roofing and Siding Contractors and Tar Heel Roofing and Siding, Inc., and the firms' officers, W. Lee Miles and Phillip K. Flowers, have been named as defendants in a Fair Labor Standards Act suit filed in U. S. District Court in Raleigh by Secretary of Labor Peter J. Brennan.

The complaint charges the defendants are in violation of the minimum wage, overtime pay and record-keeping provisions of the labor standards act.

According to Labor Department officials, the action is the result of investigations made by U. S. Labor Department's Wage and Hour Division.

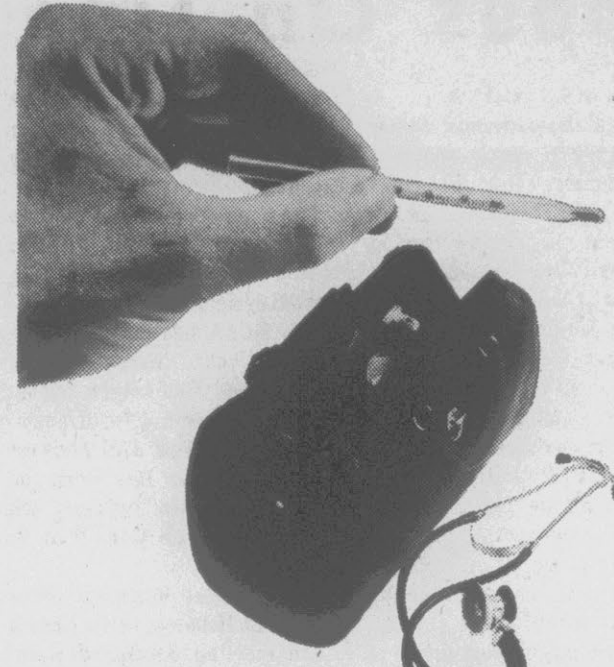

The suit seeks a judgment enjoining the alleged violations, including the restraint of withholding payment of minimum wages and overtime compensation with interest found by the court to be due employees of the firm.

In November, federal officials charged Miles and Flowers, as president and vice-president of Tar Heel Home Supply Co., with four counts each of failing to deposit employee withholding taxes as required by law.

That complaint alleges Miles and Flowers did not deposit more than $4,000 collected on October 13, 20 and 27 and on November 3, 1972, in a trust fund as required by law.

In addition to that criminal action, a Federal Tax Lien for $12,836.74 was filed with the Clerk of Court in Pitt County November 16, 1972 against the Tar Heel Home Supply Co.

The tax lien indicated that the firm has failed to pay more than $12,000 in withholding tax — including social security and federal income tax — for the period ending March 31, 1972.

Study Teacher Policies At LWV Unit Meeting

Teacher training, certification, and tenure in North Carolina were topics discussed at Tuesday's and Wednesday's unit meetings of the Greenville-Pitt County League of Women Voters.

Hostesses for the meetings were Mrs. Robert Tacker and Mrs. Oral Parks.

Principal topics discussed under training and certification were two new recently adopted state policies.

Adopted in September, the competency based teacher training policy is the third in a series of steps undertaken to place the responsibility on the colleges for determining the training necessary to produce an effective teacher.

The policy regarding certification, adopted in December, no longer requires a minimum score on the National Teacher Examination. Furthermore, candidates for certification will now be evaluated on two areas in addition to their academic performance: professional performance, and personal and social characteristics. Each of the three areas will be considered of equal importance in evaluation.

Mrs. Cain pointed out that the certification policy, effective July 1, 1973, is still being discussed across the state and presented some of the alternatives being proposed.

On the subject of teacher tenure, Mrs. Rand noted that tenure was envisioned as a method of protecting the good teacher. Complaints sometimes heard against a tenure system is that it may promote stagnation and protect poor teachers.

Among other things, the tenure act which became effective last July eliminates political and personal factors regarding teacher dismissal by providing a procedure of due process. This procedure includes a list of acts for which a teacher may be dismissed and requires that written reasons be given to a teacher being dismissed. The law also affords a teacher faced with dismissal the opportunity to present his case to a professional review board, then to the local board of education, and finally to the district superior court.

The program also included a discussion of Senator Vernon White's recently introduced bill (N. C. Senate Bill 376) to place a statutory limitation on class size.

Announces Prison Union

RALEIGH (AP) — An ex-convict from California called a news conference at Central Prison's south wall Wednesday to announce formation of a Prisoners' Union in North Carolina.

Connor Nixon, who said he served time for a marijuana violation, said the union was being formed at the request of inmates from Central Prison.

He said the union, part of a San Francisco-based organization, would work to get minimum wages paid for prison work, civil rights restored to prisoners, an end to indeterminate sentencing, and "meaningful" educational and vocation training.

Nixon said the union had 540 adherents in Central Prison, but that figure was later disputed by Warden Stanley Backledge, who said only 100 prisoners had received union cards and only ten were active.

Moving Into Controversy

RALEIGH (AP) — The General Assembly moved closer to stepping into North Carolina's teacher certification controversy Wednesday when a Senate committee overwhelmingly approved legislation restoring objective testing standards to the certification process.

With a voice vote, the Education Committee approved a bill sponsored by Sen. John Henley, D-Cumberland, which would require prospective certified teachers to score 950 or better on the National Teacher Examination.

That was the standard in use until last December, when the State Board of Education voted to scrap the NTE in favor of a battery of subjective and academic qualifications.

The Board's action touched off a controversy that has seen it vote to reconsider its decision, and then put off a final determination until further study could be done.

State schools superintendent Craig Phillips had asked the committee last week to let the Board work the problem out.

Arrest Two For Drug Violations

Greenville police last night arrested two persons here on drug law violation charges.

Samuel Neil Sykes, 23 of 111 Colonial Ave. and Gayla Susanne Comer, 19, of Cotton Dorm were taken into custody by officers about 11:30 p.m. following a raid on Sykes' Colonial Avenue home, according to Chief Glenn Cannon.

Sykes, according to officers, was charged with possessing LSD and possessing marijuana while Miss Comer was charged with marijuana possession.

Bond for both of those charged was set at $5,000 each.

Mini-Celebrity Shelby Lyman A Believer In Chess

By KAY BARTLETT
AP Business Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Bobby Fischer, believer in America, and Boris Spassky, folk hero of the Soviet Union, turned chess into big business.

Shelby Lyman, believer in chess and in Shelby Lyman, capitalized on that business. Lyman was the top instructor at New York's prestigious Marshall Club and unknown except in the international chess set until he hosted, on public television, the captivating play-by-play simulation of the big match in Iceland and became an instant mini-celebrity.

Lyman now turns down offers to teach for $100 an hour. He is writing three books, consulting on two more. He's writing a syndicated chess column for newspapers. Lectures bring him $800 to $1,500 apiece. He is developing the first teach-yourself chess unit. He is negotiating a documentary with a major Hollywood studio. He's considering offers to endorse products. More television programs are on the way. And he has opened his own chess institute.

Only the last is nonprofit. "I've just become the focus of many different kinds of chess activities. After Fischer, I stand at the apex of the new chess culture," Lyman explains with the same brand of candor that got Bobby Fischer into trouble.

"I'm not making that much money," he says. "I've had all kinds of people come to me with this project or that project and tell me, 'Look, you can make $100,000 off of this.'"

"I'm going after the long run, I'm not going after the fast buck," said the expert, well schooled in the art of going for the king.

To help him, he has engaged a lawyer, an accountant, a literary agent, a manager "and one more but I can't remember what he does at the moment." Lyman smiles and adds, "I never even had a lawyer before."

Sporting longer hair and a few more pounds than he had during his days on television, Lyman, boyish-looking at 36 says his life hasn't changed.

"I moved from a $140 apartment in Brooklyn to a $190 sublet down here (Greenwich Village), bought a new suit and an overcoat which I needed. But that's not too dramatic, I guess," he says.

The celebrity status both pleases and dismays him.

"The people I meet on the street now are warmer than the people I knew all my life," he says with the enthusiasm he puts into everything. "For awhile there, it was a little much. But now I really like it when people come up and say they liked the television show."

On the other hand, he is put off by the groupie cult that developed around him, the people who screamed when he came out for appearances and waved their homemade Shelby Lyman signs around.

"That's a little bit unhealthy, but then I like it as a sign that I'm in a good position," says the Brooklyn-born, Boston raised son of a doctor.

"There's another irony," volunteers Lyman, a graduate of Boston Latin School and Harvard. "Women are now more available than ever before in my life. And I'm too busy to take advantage of it."

Lyman's only marriage ended in annulment.

His favorite haunt is, of course, the Shelby Lyman Chess Institute in the Village. The instructors are all masters, one of whom is ranked fourth in the country. Lyman, once ranked 18th, tries not to teach but admits he can't resist once he starts watching a game.

"It's a great spectator sport," says the man who once described certain situations as "libidinous," who looks upon the 64 squares as a battlefield with trees and valleys, guns and horses.

Lyman doesn't think all of the world's problems would be solved in everyone played chess. Just most.

"Other competition is generally staged in a fearful situation, in a classroom, in physical activity where the punishment is strong and you very rarely have complete control.

"In chess, it's a finite situation but every game is different. No one has ever been in that situation before in the history of the world. You become an actor, a maker of history. It's very much of a model for life. It's a feeling of mastery. It's ego-building."

Openings For 'Qualified'

Dr. Brad Craig, director of the Agricultural Institute at North Carolina State University, has announced that the institute program still has several openings for qualified students.

The institute is a two-year program designed to train men and women for agriculturally-related jobs that require techniques beyond high school level, but who do not feel the need for four years of college.

Institute programs are organized and conducted as part of the overall resident instruction program in the School of Agriculture and Life Sciences. The same faculty members who provide instruction and supervision for four-year students provide the instructions and supervision for the institute program.

Any prospective student who would like to have more information about the institute program may contact the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Office.

New Jobs Earn Cash For City

COPENHAGEN (UPI) — The City Fathers were on a spot last April when 100 trolley drivers became jobless because of the demise of that form of transportation in the Danish capital.

Then somebody took a look at Stockholm, London and other cities and hired 80 of the ex-trolley drivers to form a special parking corps. The gray-uniformed corps has pulled in more than 80 million kroner ($1.13 million) in fines levied against owners of illegally parked cars.

go fly a kite...

Safely

March winds signal the start of the kite flying season. Sure it's lots of fun, but kite flying is not as safe as it looks. A kite string can be a deadly conductor of electric current if it touches a power line. If a kite should catch on a power line, let go at once. Don't pull!

- And, you should always use dry, cotton string — never use wire or metallic string. Don't use metal in the construction of your kite, since metal conducts electricity and can be dangerous.
- You should also pick a spot away from busy roads and highways.
- For safety's sake, fly kites only in the wide open spaces, safely away from power lines and highways.

Bradford's Merry Widow, Is She Saint Or Sinner?

By EDWARD McHALE

BRADFORD, Pa. (UPI) — "My husband was a poor millionaire and I am a poor millionairess. The people who envy me and who are jealous of me in this town are unsuccessful women—women whose bodies will never be seen by anyone except their undertakers; women who are a failure in life, failure as a woman, failure as a wife, failure as a mother. They are the ones who hate me because I am a success in everything I do."

Tullah Hanley, 48 years old with the lithe body of a woman in her 20s, is a national art celebrity but an outcast here in her late husband's hometown of 15,000 people near the Pennsylvania-New York border.

Wearing a distracting hot pants outfit and an ostrich feather wig, Tullah talked emotionally about attempts to close the Hanley Creative Youth Club—a young people's hangout that is stocked with a fortune in art treasures. The downtown center was dedicated by Tullah to the memory of her late husband, to her sister, Amy, and to "the vibrantly alive me."

Flamboyant Behavior

Attempts to close the Center are the most recent in a series of expressions of community disapproval of Tullah's imposing presence and her flamboyant behavior.

The Hungarian-born widow of oil, gas and brick tycoon Ed Hanley—whom she met while belly dancing professionally in Buffalo, N.Y.—is a square peg fitted rascally in a round hole.

Many residents want to close the two-story brick center, or at least move it to a more discreet location, because of Tullah's spontaneous dance exhibitions and because it attracts the community's young outcasts. A defiant Tullah threatens to move into the building to assure that the center remains open.

"Her behavior is disgusting," said a waitress who, like many other citizens, asked to remain anonymous in her assessment of Tullah's preoccupation with sex, dancing and the center which is her own blatant rejection of provincial community attitudes.

June Trial

Tullah, whose critics say she must be at least 60, is scheduled to stand trial in June on charges of operating a disorderly house and of tending to corrupt the morals of a minor. She intends to demand a separate jury trial on each charge, promising that the subsequent publicity will cause "a sensation throughout the world."

"If I would close this center for a single day, it would be an admission of some kind of guilt," she said. "I cannot do that. It's my honor that's at stake. I am a flamboyant and sexy and sex symbol type of person and I enjoy that."

"I didn't fail in this club. Bradford—the city itself, the citizens—failed because they failed their youth when they never offered their help. I advertised for help, but no one came."

Valuable Paintings

The Hanley Creative Youth Club occupies a two-story building that once housed the Joseph Marks Furniture Store on the west end of the city's quiet Main Street. Tullah bought the store for $37,500, spent another $50,000 remodeling it, stocked it with $350,000 in art treasures—a Picasso here, a Forain there—and threw open its doors in June, 1972, to what to wagspeople considered to be "drug addicts, drunks and dropouts."

The building itself is unimposing, but Tullah has pasted notes criticizing her more prominent enemies on its display window. Valuable paintings adorn every available wall inside. A radio blares constantly as young patrons lounge in old chairs, play ping pong and darts, lift weights or box. Or they can watch Tullah dance and exercise on an elevated, lighted stage.

Some merchants began complaining before the center even opened. When it did, they grew even more indignant.

"She has never done anything to me personally, but it was the loitering and the language that was not fit to be heard," said Mrs. Arlene Cawley, whose dress shop adjoins the HCYC. "I knew customers were falling off, but it took me a while to realize why."

Some citizen accusations are vicious—Tullah dancing naked with semi-nude young men or Tullah giving her young admirers bad advice on their most intimate problems.

"That's a lot of crap," said Bill Sapko, who supervises the Center.

"There's nothing to it but a lot of gossip."

"That's all there is in this town," said another young patron. "People don't like our long hair. If we weren't in here, we'd be out ripping off (stealing) something. We can talk with Tullah. She understands us. She speaks our language."

Robert Zimmerman, chief of the city's 24-man police force, refused comment on the charges pending against Tullah. The complaint was brought by a Pennsylvania State Police undercover agent whom Tullah knowingly permitted to watch some of her dance exhibitions.

New Skyline For Jerusalem

By KENNETH L. LUCOFF
JERUSALEM (UPI) — The skyline of this Holy City has changed more drastically in the past five years of Israeli rule than in any similar period of its 4,000-year past—and not without controversy or political implications.

Marble and glass high-rise hotels for 20th Century pilgrims to the Holy and are replacing church spires and mosque minarets on the horizon.

A dozen new commercial projects, begun since Israel captured the old walled city from Jordan in the 1967 Middle East war, threaten to blot out the belfries and red-tiled roofs that characterize the low-lying hilltop city.

"The 20th Century arrived in Jerusalem only after 1967," said Yehuda Haezrachi, a leader of the public fight against building near the ancient city walls. "And if we're not very careful, the builders could obliterate the religious character of the old city."

Skyscraper Hotels

Haezrachi's group, the Jerusalem Committee of the Council for a Beautiful Israel, fears that the half-mile square walled compound will be dwarfed by skyscraper hotels.

"Could you picture a 20-story modern monster of a hotel outside the walls just opposite the 2,000-year-old citadel of King David?" he asked.

So far, the committee has successfully opposed government-approved plans for five high-rise hotels to be built on different sides of the walled city-within-a-city.

City planners said they have given approval for more than 25 tower hotels and apartments to make room for thousands of persons, especially Jewish immigrants, who want to live in the Israeli capital.

"We are growing more rapidly now than in the entire history of the city," said Mike Turner, the head of the Municipal Planning Unit. The population of 300,000 is burgeoning.

Apartment Houses

Turner said 50 per cent more buildings are under construction today than existed in all of the Israeli-held half of the city up to the 1967 war. Many of them are block apartment houses on the barren, once-picturesque Judean Hills around the city.

"I'm not opposed to high-rise buildings," the British-born Turner said, "so long as it is done in taste and scale."

Before his unit was created by the city government in 1970, in the midst of a "save the skyline" hubbub, construction had begun on several now-completed buildings, including one that has eliminated the headquarters of the rabbinate from the horizon.

Political Considerations

Alleged political and security considerations are the reasons behind much of the building, virtually all of it in areas of the city captured in the 1967 war.

"We've got to have a Jewish presence in all parts of the city just to prove our intention never to return East (Arab) Jerusalem," one city official said.

Of the 24,000 housing units under construction since 1967, all but 2,000 are on land across the former "green line" border separating the Israeli and Jordanian halves of the city.

"It's our way of guaranteeing a Jewish presence in all of Jerusalem forever," a govern-

Virus Or Toxin Injures Embryo

Jerry wonders just how a virus or tobacco toxins can deform a baby while it is still in its mother's womb. Notice how the chick embryo can also be damaged by a needle prick of acid while the egg is still being incubated. Wives, beware!

By GEORGE W. CRANE
Ph.D., M.D.

CASE W-552: Jerry D., aged 24, presents a serious sex problem.

"Dr. Crane," he began, "I got married 2 years ago to a very attractive girl.

"Her only fault is the fact she is a chain smoker and couldn't give up the habit, even after she got pregnant.

"Three months ago she bore our first baby, but it was deformed.

"For it had one arm missing. There was no history of such defects in either of our immediate ancestry.

"The doctor said it might be due to her smoking during pregnancy.

"For he says tobacco toxins can seriously affect a baby in the womb, much as German measles does.

"If so, how can that occur?"

Toxic Deformities

When I was a Research Scientist with the National Research Council and Carnegie Institution for 5 years, I did a lot of work with the deaf.

And when I went over the records of the students at Gallaudet College for the Deaf at Washington D. C., I found Scarlet Fever listed as a common cause for their loss of hearing.

Many such children may have had normal hearing till they were in grade school; then suddenly became deaf after a severe attack of Scarlet Fever. Polio is well known for its damage via toxins (poisons) produced by that virus.

German measles is also regarded as a threat to unborn infants if their mothers contract this "3-day measles" during the first few months of their pregnancy.

The adult mother may not show any ill effects of the virus but her baby may be born deaf or otherwise deformed.

In our medical laboratories, we can experiment with incubated chicken egg.

By gently making a small hole in the shell, we may then touch the developing chick embryo with a tiny speck of acid or pick at it with a sharp needle point.

Then we can cover the hole in the shell with tape and wait for the chicks to develop and hatch. Alas, where we touched the embryo with the acid or needle, the embryonic limb bud or eye may be so injured that the hatched chick is blind or lacking a wing or leg.

Remember, if tobacco poisons can cause hardening of the arteries or cancer or a coronary thrombosis in a husky, athletic lumberjack, imagine how much more sensitive is the human embryo when it is no bigger in its mother's womb than you little finger!

That's why German measles also damages the unborn infant during its first 3-months in the womb, though the mother may show no ill effects herself.

So you pregnant mothers should abhor any foreign toxin (chemical) such as tobacco, as well as alcohol, and many new drugs whose effects are still uncertain.

Thalidomide was thus indicted as a tranquilizer drug that accused of deforming 4,000 babies in America in one year.

But there were 72,000 other babies born deformed in America that same year, so they were probably damaged in the womb by toxins, possibly tobacco, alcohol or from a virus or other ingested chemical.

Send for my booklet "How to Stop the Tobacco and Liquor Habits," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 cents.

Telephone Cited As Teaching Aid

The telephone as a teaching instrument is discussed in an article in a current journal by Instructor Anita Brehm of the East Carolina University School of Education.

Her article, "A Teaching Aid from Ma Bell," appears in the March issue of Instructor Magazine. It concerns the uses of the teletrainer in language development of kindergarten pupils.

Mrs. Brehm teaches in the Department of Elementary Education and is director of the ECU kindergarten program.

Not A Pub In Sight For St. Patrick's Bash

By MICHAEL O. WESTER
SHAMROCK, Tex. (UPI) — Right here in Shamrock they'll be throwing just about as big a St. Patrick's Day party as will be found outside Ireland itself.

And not pub or a pint (legal, that is) in town.

Shamrock, as noted by Jim Hensley, general chairman of the St. Pat's celebration, is dry and has been since Prohibition days. And it doesn't seem to matter.

"We usually have about 20,000 attend the festivities—but with good weather on a weekend (March 17 falls on Saturday) we may have a lot more this year."

Shamrock, a 2,644-resident dot on the red-and-sandy portion of the eastern Panhandle, will turn Irish next weekend as people from across the nation arrive to join in the Irish party—second in size only to New York City's on this side of the Shannon. A pre-St. Patrick's Day banquet, featuring Cajun Country humorist Justin Wilson from Louisiana, will begin the festivities Friday night. But the real celebrating won't start until Saturday.

The theme for this year's two-day festival will be "Irish Pow Wow," honoring the American Indian. "Combining an Irishman and an Indian is very unusual, but we think it will be fun," Hensley said. "Last year we honored the cowboy and that worked pretty well."

This year marks the 27th Irish celebration for the small Texas town dating back to 1938 when the late Glenn Truax, then bandmaster of Shamrock High School, talked the town play for that year had to be cancelled.

So, once again the town's citizens will all turn out wearing the green and rolling their "R's" and shooting the blarney to capitalize on the town's name.

Shamrock's Irishness — and name—go back to the late 1890s, in town legend. It is said the town, once named Exum, had an Irish postmaster named George Nickle and it was he, Texas town dating back to 1938

GUARANTEED SATISFACTION

That's right, Johnson's guarantees you satisfaction with every purchase. Selling you furniture is only the beginning at Johnson's. We try hard to make sure you continue to be happy with your purchase. . . long after the sale transaction has been completed. So, when you're in the buying mood for home furnishings, look beyond the item or items you intend to buy. Take a long look at the store behind the merchandise offered. Ask yourself about the store's reputation, record of service and business history. Johnson tries hard to please.
