Sen. Helms Warns U.S. Farmers To 'Be On Guard' Nothing To Hide: Nixon

U. S. Senator Jesse Helms warned here last night that the farmers of America "had better be on guard, lest they be misled by political forces in the Congress who are more interested in a political confrontation with President Nixon than in maintaining an equitable farm program."

Helms, speaking at a Lincoln Day Dinner gathering at the Moose Lodge, said that farmers are being used as "pawns in a political chess game" by congressmen who "have tried their political wagens to urban bloc voters, big city political machines and labor union bosses."

The senator told those assembled for the first annual session that "there are senators who would vote tomorrow to destroy our North Carolina tobacco program without batting an eye. We must not let this happen."

Helms charged that these politicians and some of the country's major news media are building "an unjustified public resentment towards the farmers by suggesting that farmers are responsible for today's high food costs."

"The real culprits," Helms said, "are politicians who for a generation have promoted excessive government spending and run up an incredible federal debt of $450 billion. They are the ones who have voted year-after-year to send billions of American dollars to foreign countries," he added.

The Tar Heel junior senator, who was elected in November, contended, "They are the ones who have enacted programs here at home which paid able bodied people not work."

Helms said that most North Carolina farmers do not object to fair adjustments in the farm program as long as federal spending is cut across the board. "I'm not going to let the farmer be singled out for reductions and neither President Nixon nor Agricultural Secretary Earl Butz have suggested any such thing."

The senator said that "the loafers paradise, known as the Office of Economic Opportunity, is being dismantled." He described this as "good riddance."

Helms repeated his earlier positions against amnesty and financial aid to Hanoi and express his appreciation to North Carolina Democrats who joined with Republicans in electing him to the Senate.

Bill Dansey, First GOP Congressional District chairman, in his comments to the crowd of approximately 250, said he felt "it is a shame that after the majority of the people of this state voted for a change in electing a GOP governor the Democratic controlled legislature is now attempting to strip him of his power through legislation that he has no veto over."

Dansey added, "The only conclusion that I can draw is the Democrats can not win an election without control of the election machine. It brings to mind as to whether some of the questions raised over the last 72 years of Democratic control could have, in fact, been true."

Special headtable guests last night included three new eastern highway commissioners. Bob Browning of Greenville, Kenneth Roberson of Robersonville, and Bill Houtz from Elizabeth City. State Republican chairman Frank Rouse was also on hand and introduced the guest speaker.

The first three district members of the $500 Club of GOP contributors were recognized during the meeting. They were Dansey, Roberson and Dallas McPherson of Greenville.

By STEVE GERSTEL WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon was quoted Saturday as saying "we have nothing to hide" in the Watergate affair, and his election campaign committee denied exerting pressure on any defendants to plead guilty and remain silent.

Defendant James W. McCord Jr., breaking nine months of silence by the seven men convicted of bugging Democratic headquarters last summer, charged Friday that perjury was committed during the trial in January, that unnamed others were involved in the case, and that the defendants were subjected to "political pressure" to keep silent.

McCord's surprise offer to tell U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica what he knows next week could give a federal grand jury new evidence for further Watergate indictments and seemed certain to prolong the Senate's delay in acting on L. Patrick Gray's nomination as FBI director.

Although the President, spending the weekend in Key Biscayne, Fla., had no comment on McCord's charges, Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott said Nixon asserted White House innocence in the case earlier in the week during a meeting of GOP congressional leaders.

At the end of the meeting Tuesday, Scott said, Nixon called him aside and said: "Hugh, I have nothing to hide. The White House has nothing to hide. I repeat, we have nothing to hide and you are authorized to make that statement in my name."

On Nixon's orders, White House Counsel John W. Dean III conducted an internal investigation last summer, using confidential FBI reports furnished at his request by Gray, the acting FBI director. Nixon said in August that Dean's investigation had cleared all then-current White House staff members of wrongdoing.

Major Hardy Is Welcomed Back By Pitt Countians

By TOM FOREMAN, JR. Reflector Staff Writer

Hundreds of well-wishers were on hand Saturday afternoon to greet returning prisoner-of-war Maj. William H. Hardy as the guest of honor at ceremonies here.

Maj. Hardy returned to Eastern North Carolina almost six years after he had been captured in an ambush and taken prisoner by the Viet Cong.

In addressing the gathering, he showed no favoritism towards communities in Eastern North Carolina. "I am proud to be from Haddock's Crossroads, I am proud to be from Winterville, I am proud to be from Ayden, I am proud to be from Pitt County,

I am proud to be from Greenville, I am proud to be a North Carolinian, and proud to be from the United States", he said.

Maj. Hardy and members of his family arrived at the Pitt Plaza Shopping Center at 2:30, where he was greeted by Dr. A. A. Best, a member of the state Good Neighbor Council. Dr. Best led the crowd in the singing of "For He's A Jolly Good Fellow."

A motorcade then took Maj. Hardy, his family and friends, to the National Guard Armory at the Pitt-Greenville Airport. There he was greeted by E. Glenn Cannon, Greenville chief of police, Col. Earl Bruton, commander of the ROTC unit at East Carolina University, the Angel Flight Drill Team of ECU, and the ROTC Detachment 600 also provided by the drill team.

Music outside was provided by the J. H. Rose High School Band. With his wife Theola at his side, and members of the motorcade walking behind them, Maj. Hardy entered the armory. Inside he was greeted by a standing ovation. Music indoors was provided by the E. B. Aycock Junior High School Band.

G. Henry Leslie, plant manager of Burroughs-Wellcome told the gathering, "Today, a grateful community welcomes the return of a native son who has spent five and a half agonizing years in a Viet Cong prison camp."

"Major Hardy loved his country, and the service in which he served. He saluted the American flag; he did not deface it. When he was called to serve, he stepped forward and pledged his allegiance."

"Today our community has a purpose in proclaiming this day Major William H. Hardy Day. That purpose is manifold in expressing our thanks and good wishes to him."

Leslie also thanked Major Hardy for his years of service and sacrifice in Vietnam.

Expressions of gratitude and of good wishes were made by Mrs. Ann H. White on behalf of the family, by John Taylor, for the Greenville City Council, and by Dr. Frank Fuller, also a city council member.

Miss Shirley Coward rendered a vocal solo entitled "Let There Be Peace."

Mrs. J. W. Maye, a teacher of Major Hardy when he attended W. H. Roberson High School in Winterville, introduced the major and gave the audience a short biography.

Major Hardy, told the crowd nearly 500 that they were all his friends because he loved them all. "I wish to thank all of you for being here today. This is perhaps the one day that I shall remember forever. I am very glad to see all of you here today."

He also pointed out some of the changes which have occurred since his absence from North Carolina. He noted the passing of many relatives including his wife's parents and many cousins.

"There have been vast changes in the styles of our cars, clothing, and particularly the hair of the young people. Some people have changed so much that I did not nearly recognize them."

Maj. Hardy reminisced about the day when the signing of agreement ended the Vietnam War, and "turned the key to the lock which held me in captivity for six and a half years." He made a request to the newsmen earlier not to broadcast any descriptions of the conditions of the North Vietnamese prisons until the release of the remaining prisoners had been

Indian Leader Says He Will Lead Group

By MELVIN LANG Associated Press Writer

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP)—The chief of a North Carolina Indian group promised Saturday to lead his followers back to a Robeson County school where between 40 and 50 Indians were arrested in a confrontation with police.

Howard Brooks, leader of the Indians who are seeking government recognition and benefits as the Tuscarora tribe, reiterated his pledge to get inside the formerly all-Indian Prospect School building near Pembroke.

Brooks made the statement Saturday after he was released on $2,500 bond from the Robeson County Jail at Lumberton where he and the others arrested Friday night were taken. Various charges, including unlawful assembly, disorderly conduct, failure to disperse and drunkenness, were lodged against the arrested Indians.

Brooks was charged with failing to disperse under a lawful order and with inciting to riot "by urging three or more persons, congregate at Prospect School."

Among those reported arrested, in addition to Brooks, was Vernon Bellecourt, national director of the American Indian Movement (AIM).

Robeson County authorities refused Saturday afternoon to disclose exactly how many Indians were arrested, what the exact charges against them were or how many had been released on bonds.

The confrontation Friday night began when the Indians were denied the use of the school for a meeting.

The Indians and police faced off across a rural road five miles north of Pembroke. The lieutenant in charge of a Highway Patrol contingent, Ed Young, said the Indians "kept getting more and more boisterous and using more and more profanity."

"They started throwing bottles across the street at us," Young said. "I talked with the solicitor (district prosecutor) and he advised it was an unlawful assembly."

The Indians were put into a prison bus and troopers' cars, and taken to the jail at Lumberton.

A group of about 50 Indians with Tuscarora leader Brooks earlier kept warm by a bonfire in the yard of the Prospect community's United Methodist Church. The group had dwindled from a crowd of about 150 earlier Friday evening.

Burglary Arrest Is Made

A 27-year-old Houston, Texas man, wanted by the Greenville Police Department and the State Bureau of Investigation in connection with a September burglary here, was arrested Friday night in Lake Park, Fla.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Derral Dean Johnson was taken into custody by officers in Lake Park—near Palm Beach—about 10 p.m.

He was charged on a warrant Greenville Police and the SBI with first degree burglary in connection with a break-in at the residence of W. C. Butler, 2803 Crockett Dr. here September 4. Johnson was also being held on similar charges brought by Florida authorities, officials of the SBI indicated.

Johnson allegedly took a small amount of cash and some credit cards from the Butler home.

Greenville detectives and SBI agents went to Lake Park Saturday to continue their investigation of the case, Cannon explained.

Browning Urges Joining Of Forces To Obtain Raleigh Access

By STUART SAVAGE Reflector Staff Writer

A member of the State Highway Commission said Friday that it may be eight to ten years before residents of Eastern and North-eastern North Carolina have four-lane access to Raleigh unless they join forces and work toward a common goal.

Robert Browning of Greenville, said "my primary objective" as a member of the Highway Commission is to do something about a four-lane highway linking the East with the Capital City and points West. "For some time," Browning said, residents of Eastern and Northeastern North Carolina "have been competing for four-lane access to the central area of the state.

"This competition, in my opinion, has been detrimental to obtaining at least one four-lane road..."

And he indicated most of the competition has been between U. S. 264, which runs through Wilson, Greenville and Washington; and U.S. 64, which links Rocky Mount, Tarboro and Williamston with the Capital.

Much money has been committed to U. S. 64, the commissioner indicated, while three sections of the U. S. 264 project are currently being four landed.

He explained that a short section of N. C. 33 West of Washington (plans call for U.S. 264 to be re-located along N. C. 30 and N. C. 33 North of the Tar River after a new Bridge and bypass around the Eastern edge of Greenville is completed later this year) is being four-laned at present, as is a short section of U. S. 264 at Farnville.

And construction is under-way in Wake County on a four-lane by-pass at Zebulon which should be completed "the latter part of this year," Browning explained.

The major portion of a proposed four-lane U. S. 264 from Raleigh to Greenville, however, is a long way off.

A 10-mile long section of a proposed 18-mile corridor route from Zebulon to I-95 near Wilson is in the right-of-way planning and acquisition stage, Browning explained. This 10-mile long portion runs between Zebulon and Bailey, north of the present artery.

According to Browning, the Highway Commission recently allocated $80,000 to the project in Wake, Nash and Wilson Counties. Some $280,000 has already been spent on the project while the total needed for the preliminary engineering studies is expected to amount to some $400,000.

The project to link U. S. 264 at Bailey with I-95 near Wilson is in the planning stage, according to Browning. This means, he explained, the Highway Commission has "definite plans to do something in this area" but indicated it will probably be "at least four years" before anything can be done to that portion of the highway.

"There is no money set up at all," for work on U. S. 264 from I-95 at Wilson, to Greenville, according to Browning. "This is eight to 10 years away under the present plan," he said.

"These are plans inherited from the outgoing commission," which Gov. Jim Holshouser replaced in January when he took office, Browning commented.

Browning said in light of the scarcity of funds for highway construction, he favors a plan proposed sometime ago by Highway Commission engineers — but rejected by the old commission — which calls for the construction of a new controlled access, interstate type highway running from Raleigh and intersecting with U. S. 17 south of Williamston.

This proposed road, he explained, would run between Wilson and Rocky Mount then pass South of Tarboro, Bethel and Robersonville and intersect with U. S. 17 South of Williamston.

He said feeder routes from Greenville, Washington, Rocky Mount and Wilson could be developed so that the proposed four-lane corridor could serve the major population centers of the East.

He noted the Elizabeth City area and residents of extreme Northeastern North Carolina would have access to the corridor by way of U. S. 17.

"It's my feeling," Browning said, "we can only hope for one four-lane road. We should start to plan now in cooperation with one another and have the road run where the traffic engineers say it should go...according to traffic counts and surveys.

"If we don't join together, we will lose our chance...we will be eight to 10 years obtaining a desirable four-lane access to the Raleigh area."

Differences Delay Release Of Last POWs

By ARTHUR HIGBEE SAIGON (UPI) — Release of the remaining 148 American prisoners of war in Indochina, originally scheduled for this weekend, was delayed Saturday at least until next week by new demands from the Communists that were rejected by the United States.

The Viet Cong told the Joint Military Commission (JMC) the prisoner release would be resumed only if the U. S. agreed to withdraw every one of its uniformed military men in South Vietnam, down to Marine guards at the U. S. Embassy in Saigon.

If the United States agrees, the Communists said, the prisoner release can begin again Monday both in South and North Vietnam.

The North Vietnamese added that prisoners held in Laos, despite United States claims to the contrary, are not covered by the cease-fire agreement signed in Paris in January.

The United States' acting chief delegate to the JMC, Brig. Gen. John W. Wickham, rejected the demand for withdrawal of all U.S. military men in uniform.

The Vietnam cease-fire agreement specifies that both the prisoner exchange and the military withdrawal be completed by next Wednesday.

The United States two days ago also insisted publicly that withdrawal of its troops from South Vietnam, under conditions outlined in the cease-fire, was conditional on the release not only of Americans held by North Vietnam and the Viet Cong but also of those captured by the Communists in neighboring Laos.

There are 107 Americans still held in North Vietnam. The Viet Cong Saturday gave Wickham a list of 32 Americans, five of them civilians, that it holds.

The nine Americans held by the Laotian Communists are not mentioned in the cease-fire agreement. But the United States has maintained that an understanding between Henry A. Kissinger and Le Duc Tho, the U.S. and North Vietnamese officials who negotiated the accord, was that those held in Laos would be released with the other prisoners.

Until the Communists agree to this, the withdrawal of the remaining 6,300 American servicemen in South Vietnam will be held up, the United States announced Thursday.

Pitt Records Its Second Highway Fatality Of Year

WINTERVILLE—A Greenville man became Pitt County's second traffic fatality of the year as a result of a traffic accident on a rural paved road north of here Saturday.

According to Pl. Fred Davis, Mickey L. Pollard, 24, of Greenville, was killed when the car he was occupying ran off the northbound lane of rural paved road 1149, one-tenth of a mile north of Winterville, and struck a utility pole. The car was a total loss. Pl. Davis stated that the driver of the car was undetermined.

The auto traveled 148 feet, struck an advertising sign, then traveled another 72 feet and clipped the utility pole.

Two other persons were injured in the mishap. They were identified as Carl Henry Jackson of Greenville and William Edward Sugg of Farmville. Both were admitted to Pitt Memorial Hospital.

Time of the accident was listed at 1:30 a.m. Investigation is continuing.

Urges Press To Fight

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A Federal Communications Commission member says that if the press believes its freedom has been attacked, it ought "to get off the floor and fight and stop whining so much about it."

Ben Hooks, the first black to sit on the FCC, commented in an interview Friday that First Amendment protection is not strong enough to cover newsmen.

He said: "We finally got to the Supreme Court, and they held there was no law or precedent involving newsmen having the right to keep sources secret. So apparently the First Amendment is not enough, and this is what the whole shield law situation is about."

Professor Is Charged

COLUMBIA (AP)—A bond of $50,000 kept a 29-year-old assistant professor of philosophy at the University of South Carolina in jail Friday on a charge of possession and sale of marijuana.

City Police Lt. John E. Dennis said Asst. Prof. Theodore M. Panish was arrested at a residence near the campus.

The officer said Panish was charged with the sale of 4.75 grams of marijuana, possession of marijuana with intent to distribute, and conspiracy to sell marijuana.

Dennis, who said the case has been under investigation for a year and more arrests are expected, reported that about five pounds of marijuana was seized, along with what he termed "various related paraphernalia."

The professor's special auto license tag that says "COCAINE" also was confiscated.

Poll Favors ECU Med School

RALEIGH — North Carolina House member Joe Hage Jr. from Lexington said Friday a poll taken in Davidson and Davie Counties recently by himself and two other members of the General Assembly indicates residents of the two Piedmont counties favor support for a medical school at East Carolina University.

According to Hage — A Davidson County Republican who has been a member of the House of Representatives since 1967 — questionnaires were printed in four local papers (two dailies and two weeklies) asking for voter reaction on "16 or 17" issues such as liquor by the drink, teacher salary increases, annual legislative sessions, no fault insurance and other matters.

Included among the questions, he explained, was one asking "should North Carolina support a medical school at East Carolina...yes or no."

In excess of 300 questionnaires were returned, he said, "I received the majority of the responses, but the others pretty generally" reflected the same results.

"My responses to the question," Hage explained, included 61 per cent saying "yes", 32 percent indicating "no" and seven did not express themselves.

One of his colleagues he indicated, received 61 per cent "yes" replies and 39 "no", with five indicating no choice.

"The other of my colleagues receive 63 per cent yeses, 24 per cent nos with 13 per cent no choice." These replies, he said, came mainly from Davie County.

He noted that the questionnaire "was run one time as a paid advertisement."

According to the legislator, the replies received represented about 1.5 per cent of the total electorate in the two-county district. "The results I think were rather commendable."

"It is my fourth term here (in Raleigh). It has been past experience to do this...to get some guideline (as to the reaction of the residents of the district regarding the issues) and I think it has some validity in trying to express the general wish and will of the people."

As for his personal feelings about a medical school at ECU, Hage said "I have no strong feelings about it," but he emphasized, I am interested in the total health care needs of North Carolina. He served on a study commission this past summer which addressed itself to the expanding role of nurses.

"Personally I'm very open minded about the need for more doctors, regardless of how it is accomplished."

When asked how other members of the General Assembly might feel toward a bill calling for the establishment of a four-year medical program at ECU if one is introduced, Hage replied, "Chapel Hill and the Board of Governors of UNC have an awful lot of political influence in political endeavors in North Carolina. Draw your own conclusions."

Excited Students Are Planning Japan Study Next Year

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Twelve excited university students are daydreaming and planning well ahead of time about an academic year in Japan that will begin for them when late August comes.

It's all part of East Carolina University's expanding programs to offer qualified students challenging and stimulating new fields to conquer in education through international contacts.

"We're all excited about the tremendous possibilities of this program," Dr. Blanche Watrous remarked at an informal gathering Friday with five of the dozen students who have already signed up.

Dr. Watrous, professor in the Department of Sociology and Anthropology, said, "I'm truly delighted about the enthusiasm the candidates for the year's study abroad are showing. This is a fine group of young people who I know will be excellent representatives for the university." Dr. Watrous will be in Japan with the students.

From early September until the end of May the ECU students, and possibly a few from other colleges or universities, will be studying in the ECU-Kansai Overseas Center in Ogura, Hirakata City, Osaka, Japan. The Kansai Overseas Center is part of Kansai University of Foreign Studies.

Students spending the academic year in Japan will receive 52 quarter hours of credit. Their teachers will be English speaking Japanese qualified to teach college courses in English. In addition, students will receive intensive studies in the Japanese language.

"Students who want to be a part of this academic program need to sign up no later than April 1," Dr. Watrous pointed out. "Primarily, the group will be made up of sophomores, juniors and seniors. However, consideration will be given in exceptional cases to freshmen or to a qualified person not now enrolled in a university but who otherwise meets all the requirements."

"This means," she continued, "that for the eight additional students we can take, (the program is limited to 20 students), we can consider students from other colleges or universities."

In such cases the basic requirement is that a student from another college or university agree to a one year transfer to ECU to cover the academic year.

Of the 12 who have enrolled to date, three are from Greenville; Otho Cozart, Danny De Rochers, and Paula Arthur. The other nine are: Jan Gettler of Westbury, N.Y.; Susan Whalen of Charlotte; Brenda Morrison of Chapel Hill; Cathy Myers, Raleigh; Bob Joyce, Charlotte; Kathy Wacaser, Knox College, Ill.; Dave Holdefer, Baltimore Md., and Pilkyu Kim, a graduate assistant to Dr. Watrous, from Seoul, Korea.

De Rochers, who taught English in Japan for one year, is the only one of the group who speaks Japanese. Dr. Watrous, who has visited Japan, admits to being able to speak to the extent "that I can spend money, get lost and then get found again."

Commenting on what they hope to achieve in the school year abroad, the five students interviewed emphasized their desire to return to ECU with a fuller understanding of people and to be better prepared within their own specialized field of study.

"I hope to be able to study Japanese ceramics, brushwork and woodblock prints in shops, temples, and museums, to get a truer understanding about these arts," Cozart remarked.

"And I'm interested in studying anthropology in another culture, to discover something about their methods of study and the relationship of old and new cultures," Susan Whalen explained.

Korean native Kim says the trip will be a fine opportunity for him to "further my studies in international law, especially since I plan to specialize in Japanese-Korean relationships." Referring to his own reaction to being in American for four years, two of them at ECU, Kim added "there's no better way to understand other people than to be in daily contact with them. I feel all of us will gain new outlooks from this experience."

Brenda Morrison, majoring in textile design, said "even more than my interest in textiles, I'm looking forward to getting to know the people of Japan. And I must confess I'm anxious to learn about Japanese cooking." New York's Jan Gettler said that in her case she is deeply interested in studying the culture of Japan. "I hope by observing and through training I can get a better understanding, not only of the Japanese culture, but our own culture as well. I do plan to make a serious effort to become proficient in the language during my year there."

ECU's academic program in Japan is the latest in the university's diverse, far reaching study programs covering several areas of the world, these programs are headed by Dr. Kermit King, director of ECU's International Studies.

Persons interested in additional details about this program are invited to contact Dr. Watrous at the university, telephone 758-0521.

'Skill Olympic' Is Set

A new kind of olympics is coming to Greenville on Friday. Beginning at 9:30 a.m. on that date, Rose High School students will host the competitors in a "Skill Olympic Brick Laying and Carpentry Contest."

In addition to students from brick laying and carpentry classes from Rose High, other schools furnishing participating craftsmen will be North Pitt, Ayden-Grifton, D. H. Conley, Farmville, J. A. Wilkinson and Washington Schools.

The contest, according to John E. Mallow of the industrial studies at Rose High, will be held for schools comprising Sub-District 1B, and will take place in the industrial classrooms at Rose High.

In addition to contestants and instructors, contractors and businessmen from the area will be on hand to watch the proceedings. There is also a guest from the State Board of Instruction expected to be on hand.

Mallow says that by 1:00 p.m. all participants should have had an opportunity to display their skill.

Bloodmobile Gets 391 Pints

A total of 391 pints of blood were collected during the two-day Red Cross Bloodmobile drive here Thursday and Friday. The total number of other volunteers rejected because of health reasons was 53, Red Cross campaign chairman W.A. Ross said.

On Friday, 194 pints were collected; and Thursday's number was 197. Twenty-nine volunteers were turned away Thursday, and 34 were declined on Friday.

Ross praised the turnout and voiced his thanks to the Greenville Moose who sponsored this drive. The lodge Project Chairman was Ed Campbell, assisted by Mrs. Betty Diehl, Senior Regent of the Women of the Moose, and Leon Smith.

"Our quota for the two days was 320 pints", said Executive Director for the Red Cross Mrs. Ruth Taylor. "We were 233 pints behind in the county contributions for the current year, and the Moose were trying to make up the deficit in one intensive campaign. It was a tremendous effort."

"Pledges were collected two weeks before the bloodmobile visit, and a number of the men contacted local firms to encourage participation of their employees; and Women of the Moose were telephoning lists of potential donors and reminding them of the bloodmobile's visit.

"We also owe a debt of appreciation to the Service League and volunteer nurses, who took part. We simply couldn't have handled the crowds without their help."

Mrs. Taylor said a number of business firms not previously represented in the blood bank drive had donors in the just-concluded drive. "The majority of donors continue to be repeaters", she noted, "but there were a number of first-timers, and I hope they too will get into the habit."

Moose Lodge Governor James Harris observed that "We tried harder, but making up a 233-pint deficit in addition to the regular quotas we have to meet, was just too much. I am very concerned, about the increasing demand on the blood bank and our ability to meet that demand. We depend too much on a relative few; there has to be a better way."

Emergency Medical Bill Rep. Boggs Is Introduced In House

Rep. Boggs Is Speaker At Dinner

RALEIGH (AP) — A bill calling for creation of a comprehensive emergency medical services program in North Carolina was introduced in the House Friday.

Rep. Willis Whichard, D-Durham, also put in a bill to appropriate $1 million to fund the program for the next two fiscal years.

Whichard said the legislation would carry out recommendations of the Legislative Research Commission on emergency medical care. The legislation would consolidate all state functions relating to emergency care in the state Department of Human Resources and would empower the secretary of human resources to:

—Work for the establishment of statewide, regional and local emergency medical services operations.

—Develop a system for classifying hospitals as to the kinds and levels of emergency treatment they normally and regularly provide and make the information available to ambulance operators and others.

—Assist in the development of appropriately located comprehensive emergency treatment centers.

—Seek the development of a statewide emergency medical services communications system which would enable ambulances to communication with treatment facilities.

—Inspect ambulances, issue permits for operation of ambulances and train and license ambulance personnel.

—Promote the development of an air ambulance support system to supplement ground vehicle operations.

The legislation also would create a 17-member Emergency Medical Services Advisory Council to consult with the secretary of human resources in carrying out the program.

Other legislation introduced Friday included bills by Rep. Bob Wynne, D-Wake to exempt non-profit public housing from the indigent and the elderly from property taxes.

RALEIGH (AP) — Newly elected U.S. Rep. Lindy Boggs, D-La., said Saturday she "had a very difficult time making the transition from supporter to candidate."

Mrs. Boggs, widow of Rep. Hale Boggs, spoke at the North Carolina Democratic party's Jefferson-Jackson Day breakfast.

"Most of the people who urged me to run were men," Mrs. Boggs said. "But all of the women I worked with all those years and the young people came to my rescue and took over."

She added, "The women and young people built for me a constituency of my own."

According to Mrs. Boggs, there was some male resistance to her campaign. But this was "countered by a groundswell of women and young people."

Holshouser Asks For New Ideas

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Holshouser called on radio and television news directors Saturday for their ideas on "better ways to keep the lines open between people and the government" in North Carolina.

"We are seeking better ways to communicate with the citizens of North Carolina. So I am asking for your advice," Holshouser said in a prepared talk at a luncheon of the Radio-TV News Directors Association of the Carolinas.

"Some of you have already made suggestions, and we're working on them," he said. "We want more...I want your ideas."

"The best government programs can never reach their full potential unless the people are aware of them and understand them," Holshouser said. "The worst government programs can go on for years unless the watchdogs of the news-gathering profession tell the people about them."

He told the group, "A favorite phrase in the news is 'powerful'—this 'powerful' politicians, or 'powerful' board or 'powerful' legislator. But nothing is more powerful than the power you hold in your hands."

"More than anything else," the governor said, "we rely on the news media to tell the people what government is trying to do."

He said he had held two "People's Day" at the Capitol "with very encouraging results." Citizens were given the opportunity during the two days to see the governor and talk assured. In closing, he saluted all the "brave warriors who had served in Vietnam and thanked the people of eastern North Carolina for their kind welcome. "God bless the President, God bless America, and God bless the American people," he stated.

He told the people that he had received many letters, including one from Sen. Sam Ervin and from many other persons. He had received many gifts, such as a 1973 automobile and a $500 wardrobe.

The ceremonies ended with a response from Edward Carter, a member of the city Board of Education, and the audience singing "Battle Hymn of the Republic."

Maj. Hardy's visit here is his first in more than six years.

Few Pitt Countians knew of his being a prisoner of war until his name appeared on a prisoner list soon after the ceasefire. He had been held by the Viet Cong in South Vietnam since his capture June 30, 1967. His wife, Theola, and his mother, Mrs. Delphia Hardy, of Rt. 1, Winterville, received word that he was captured, but then his name never appeared on any prisoner lists and no mail ever came from him.

He was in the first group of prisoners released by the Viet Cong and arrived at Clarke Air Force Base Feb. 12. His wife, living in Fayetteville, and his mother each received telephone calls from him. They met him at Fort Gordon later in the week.

Friday, March 9, he arrived at his and his wife's home in Fayetteville.

He was captured June 30, 1967 when an enemy ambush surrounding his company on a road leading to Saigon. A Captain at the time, he was promoted to major during his captivity.

Maj. Hardy was commissioned a second lieutenant when he graduated with honors from A&T University in Greensboro in 1954. He was a 1960 honor graduate of Robinson Union School in Winterville.

Example Of Cooperative Effort

The proposed project which would tie the three Pitt County towns of Winterville, Ayden and Grifton into a single waste treatment facility represents the kind of cooperative effort between local governments which makes a great deal of sense.

Known as the South Pitt County Sewer District, the project has received approval of the nature of the project, plus the fact that it represents a cooperative project between three municipalities, should be factors which attract favorable attention of officials up the line as its application for supplemental funds is considered.

The waste treatment facility for the three municipalities is an ambitious undertaking and one which will cost an estimated $5.27 million. Even so, by the three municipalities cooperating in the effort the total outlay probably will represent a savings in both construction and operating cost compared with the cost of each municipality constructed its individual facility. The result should be a savings of local tax funds for each of the three municipalities and also a savings in supplemental federal funds compared with what would be required if there were three facilities rather than one being constructed.

As governments at every level, and particularly local governments, find themselves increasingly hard pressed for funds with which to meet their needs, greater cooperation between governments is necessary. There are many areas in which duplication of costs may be eliminated or substantially reduced by two or more local governments combining their efforts to meet common needs. Each time this is done, citizens usually benefit both from the standpoint of increased service and from the standpoint of more efficient use of tax dollars that are available.

Old Mess Kit Now Treasured

By HENRY KING
(Asheboro Courier-Tribune)
Asheboro, N. C. — When Johnny came marching home from World War I in 1919, he turned in his mess kit along with all his other Army equipment.

To doughboy Lester K. Routh, then 23, it was good riddance. He was happy to be back in America; in his beloved Millboro area of Randolph County.

That was 55 years ago. Today Lester K. Routh is L. K. Routh Sr. He'll be 78 years old come April 9.

The "tin" mess kit that he once tossed aside in disdain has been placed again in his hands, and he fondles it with loving care.

"I never thought I'd ever see it again," he said, running his hands through his thin, white hair.

"It's hard to believe." Found In Attic
The mess kit that he carried to France and through the War to end all Wars found some months ago in the attic of a house in Silverdale, near Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Routh's name is engraved on "the mess kit, and "Millboro, N. C." is, too, along with lots of other scrawlings that tell where the mess kit had been in the war year 1918.

R. H. Hughes of Silverdale found the mess kit in his attic. He didn't know anything about it or how it got there. It may have been a possession of his father who had been a quartermaster during the war. He didn't know.

Search By Telephone
But Hughes began a series of telephone calls to North Carolina to trace Routh through the Millboro Office. The office was closed many years ago but telephone operators finally found Routh at his new postal listing, Franklinville, Route 1.

"When he called from Philadelphia and asked for me, I said, 'You must want my son. He's a businessman.' (Continued on page A-5)

Entire Area Benefits From Plant In Wilson

The announcement Friday by Gov. Holshouser of a $40 million Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. plant in Wilson should mean a great boost for the economy of the entire area.

It is expected the plant will employ 1,000 by the end of 1975 and it could be doubled within five years.

This major industry will mean new jobs for Eastern North Carolinians. It will have its greatest impact in Wilson, but what helps one eastern community helps us all.

Labor Pains In Strauss Office

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — On the eve of his first Democratic National Committee meeting since being elected chairman last December, Robert S. Strauss is in danger of being embarrassed by the very ally that elected him: the AFL-CIO's Committee on Political Education (COPE).

Strauss's clever strategy of quietly moving the Democratic party back to the center while publicly placating the left probably would have produced a serene session of the National Committee here Friday were it not for COPE's hard-headed insistence on its own kind as eight additional labor members of the committee.

Reformer challenges to their election pose the only possible negative vote against Strauss.

At midweek, Strauss was still urging COPE to soften its list of candidates. Even if that failed, the chairman's prestige might be sufficient to carry through the no-compromise labor slate. But the fact remains that tactical differences between Strauss and COPE exposed him to attack from the left this week and could do so again.

That poses a long-range problem. Strauss not only owes his close election as chairman to COPE but wants COPE back in the party after their costly neutrality in 1972. Yet COPE's hostility toward internal labor enemies runs counter to the Strauss technique.

The technique is vividly demonstrated by Strauss's success in warming previously ice relations with Sen. George McGovern. On March 13, McGovern suddenly reversed course and handed Strauss the 1972 campaign mailing list. On March 14, he wrote Strauss commending his chairmanship and denouncing "communications of various kinds" critical of Strauss.

"Such communications," said McGovern, "do not reflect my views about our party or about you personally." (Continued on page A-5)

The "communications" could only refer to an anti-Strauss newsletter dispensed to committee members by liberal activist Alan Baron, heading a new organization intended to organize liberal National Committee members. By ingratiating himself with McGovern and other left Democratic politicians, Strauss has sought to isolate Baron-style professional reformers.

Consequently, he has succeeded in obtaining McGovern's list, quieting important opposition, adding members to party reform commissions and moving the Democratic party back toward the center. He might actually have escaped all difficulty this week were it not for the labor problem.

Out of 25 new-at-large seats on the National Committee, Strauss earmarked eight for organized labor. To fill these, Strauss could get COPE to agree to nothing less than eight AFL-CIO stalwarts—five state AFL-CIO president (Minnesota, Michigan, Louisiana, Ohio, Wisconsin) plus officials from the Steelworkers, Painters and Service Employees unions. Of these, only George Hardy of the Service Employees union openly endorsed McGovern for President.

Strauss and his advisers wanted somebody other than white middle-aged men representing labor. More than that, they needed some prominent McGovern supporters such as Joseph Beirne of the Communications Workers. Beirne, pulling his union's money out of COPE in disgust and financing his own political action operation wants a National Committee seat. So does Floyd (Red) Smith of the Machinists, also a McGovern supporter though less a rebel than Beirne.

But, at this writing, COPE's tough, shrewd director Al Barkan, backed to the hilt by president George Meany, has rejected such trimmings.

To The Editor:

During the past few weeks the news media has consisted mainly of the rise in the price of beef, pork and produce from the view of the consumers. I would like to speak out for the producers.

My husband is a pork producer. At last he is getting a fair price for what he markets. Every year everything he has had to purchase in order to produce pork has risen in price. The rise in price at the market is long overdue.

Mrs. George Wallace, wife of the Governor of Alabama, is encouraging everyone to raise their own vegetables this summer. It is my wish that this destructive suggestion falls on deaf ears. Where would people purchase produce next fall and winter? From farmers they had forced out of business?

The price of cars, trucks, clothing, medicine and other commodities has risen more sharply than the price of beef, pork and produce. Why are the complaints directed only toward the products which for the first time are letting the producers get what they are entitled to receive?

The American housewife is being asked to refrain from buying beef, pork and produce in order to force the prices down. What if the farmers and their families, in this great country of ours, were to refrain from purchasing all the other products that have risen so drastically in price? What then? America would realize that the farmers and their families are the real backbone of this nation. The farmers not only produce the majority of our products, they are also the largest consumers. Instead of complaining, Americans should be happy that at long last the farmers are being treated fairly at their market.

Mrs. Leon R. Hardee
Greenville, N. C.

P.S. When the housewife goes to the checkout counter at the grocery, if the were to separate the food from the other items purchased, she would indeed be surprised to find that such a small percentage of the money she spends is actually for food!!!

Strength For Today

SPIRITUAL DEVOTION AND HUMAN SERVICE

In the last week of his life Jesus was asked, "Which is the greatest commandment in the law?" His reply is well known: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God...thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

Our religion should have a balance between spiritual devotion and human service. One cannot be followed at the expense of the other. Those who claim they love God and do nothing to help their fellows are hypocrites; the man who claims that he loves fellows but in no way relates his humanitarianism to the love of God will likely find that his love will acquire an empty quality. And others might find that it slowly turns into a desire to dominate others and make them do their will.

How many revolutionists have been loving men estranged from God, and how much suffering they have wrought! Religious devotion and human service must always work together, else both will fall. Man's love must have two objects: God in heaven and the neighbor on earth.

Other Editors Say Help For Schools

(The Raleigh Times)

An Appropriations Committee subcommittee has given tentative approval to a measure which would be another step, small but important, toward a better school system.

This step would allocate $26,000,000 to employ 2,079 new teachers to reduce the size of classes. The bill would specify that these additional 2,079 school professionals will go directly into the classroom, not into some other area of professional work. There have been indications that past legislatures, in appropriating additional money for employment of additional professional people for the school system, actually haven't been doing much to reduce the class size. Too many of the professional people hired by those appropriation wound up in other school positions, but not in the classrooms.

The bill now under consideration specifies that the 2,079 to be employed shall be actual classroom teachers who shall work in the classrooms. The bill specifies the size of the classes, not more than 26 children for the first three grades, not more than 33 for grades four through eight, and not more than 35 in high schools.

A recent survey showed that there were a number of classes in North Carolina with more than 40 children, and that some of them went up to as high as 50 children. The bill now under consideration would care for such cases, since the law would require special State Board of Education permission to have a class containing more than the limits set.

The teacher who has too many children in her class can't do a really first-class instructional job. She is forced to spend more time keeping order than in teaching. The purpose of this bill is to change that situation.

The competition for additional appropriation will be keen during this legislature, just as it always is. But, it would be difficult to find a place where $26,000,000 in additional money would be spent worth more to the children of North Carolina.

And your columnist visited the NCNB-24, the thing that gives you cash after banking hours, at NCNB's East End Branch last Sunday.

I put in my BankAmericard and punched out what I thought was my identification number. The machine advised me to try again. I punched the number again and then a third time.

The machine clicked and pretty soon issued a slip of paper which told me I had one something wrong in punching the identification number and that it was keeping my card.

The next day Margie Little called from the branch to tell me I could pick up my card. "Oh yes," I said with a chuckle, "I reckon I punched the wrong number."

Then feeling a little sheepish, I said, "I suppose you're having right many people losing their cards in the machine because they punch the wrong number."

"No," said Margie, with a laugh. "We haven't had too much problem with that."

Inching Up On A Clash

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Political Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon and Congress may do battle on a new front later this year when Senate Democrats push for a sharp cut in the number of U.S. servicemen stationed abroad, with the emphasis on Western Europe.

Majority Leader Mike Mansfield already has taken the first step toward that likely confrontation.

He believes inflation, the budget squeeze, and the woes of the dollar will strengthen the case and the potential Senate vote for troop cuts—a vote the administration would fiercely oppose.

The White House has denounced as irresponsible any move to force unilateral U.S. troop reductions. The talk and the tactics may get tougher.

Two years ago, the issue produced one of the most intensive of lobbying drives by the Republican administration, to block a Mansfield measure that would have halved the U.S. force stationed in Europe.

Mansfield and his allies are braced for another round on the troop question, perhaps during the summer when the Senate begins shaping the defense budget. That would add a new item to an agenda of White House-congressional disputes now centered on domestic spending.

The initial move came when Senate Democrats voted overwhelmingly to seek over the next 18 months a substantial reduction in the 600,000 U.S. troops now stationed overseas. Their resolution mandates Mansfield to confer with House and administration leaders about such cuts.

While the wording is general, the key target—and a familiar one for Mansfield—is a cutback of U.S. troops in Europe, where some 300,000 remain.

They have tried before, and (Continued on page A-5)

Phase 3 Decision Is Just Ahead

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — The answer to whether Phase 3 is to be a transition to a less regulated economy or whether it will be declared a failure and lead to a resumption of more rigid economic controls is just ahead.

Two pocketbook issues support this view:
1. The cost of living is in a power climb when, according to the script written in Washington, it should be gliding softly back to earth. Consumer prices rose in February at an annual rate of 9.6 per cent.

The retail buyer is now paying $12.86 for the same assortment of goods and services that cost $10 in 1967.

It hurts even more to go back 10 years, when the same market basket cost $9.12.

2. This is a big year for major wage negotiations. The Commerce Department "Survey of Current Business" states it clearly: "In 1973, major contracts covering 4.7 million workers will expire or may be reopened for negotiations. This is about two million more than the number of workers involved in negotiations in 1972..."

Until recently there was a widespread belief in government and management circles that the negotiating this year, despite the numbers, would be less difficult than in several previous years.

According to the survey, "Since contracts negotiated in 1970 and 1971 largely took care of the 'catch up' the pressure for this type of wage increase should not be severe in 1973."

That statement was made in February. Quite likely it would not be made so confidently today. AFL-CIO President George Meany calls the latest food price figures "shocking." The antidote for labor shock is higher wages.

Wages, though, are restrained by government edict. While nobody knows just where the line on increases is drawn, it appears to be somewhere between the 5.5 per cent announced and a 10 per cent increase that was permitted to stand.

If the route to big wage increases is closed, that leaves labor with the alternative of arguing for more stability in living costs.

The problem here is that it has been almost conceded by the administration that the cost of living, mainly due to food prices, is going to continue rising in the absence of rigid controls.

The economy is now part free, part controlled—an in-between condition the administration appears to believe is a stage on the way to a free economy.

But with labor feeling it is being assaulted while its hands are tied, time may be running out. The decision to abandon or restate Phase 3 terms—to operate a free or a controlled economy—could be decided by those wage negotiations.

Observations From Editorial Columns

Unwanted Shield

In delaying action on legislation to protect newsmen, pending the outcome of a study by Congress, the South Carolina General Assembly has shown discretion which The News and Courier welcomes.

For some time we have had doubts about the need for laws granting special privilege to reporters, and the wisdom of diluting with legislation the Constitutional guarantee of freedom of the press. Our misgivings have been confirmed lately by the writings of two journalists for whom we have paramount respect: Vermont Royster, contributing editor of The Wall Street Journal, and James J. Kilpatrick, a syndicated writer whose column appears in the Charleston Evening Post.

Both writers gave a full and logical explanation of their reasons for not wanting special laws to shield reporters. Both point out the difficulty of defining exactly whom the law would protect. Reporters are not licensed. The News and Courier hopes nobody suggests that they should be. For if laws can say who shall be licensed, they also can say who shall not be licensed—and there goes freedom of the press.

Mr. Kilpatrick—formerly editor of The Richmond News Leader—sums up the case well: "We will be better off, in the long haul, if we fight each case on its merits, as it comes along. A defective statute, no matter how well intended, is paper protection. For an enduring shield and buckler, we must look to the Constitution itself."

Likewise relying on the First Amendment, Mr. Royster notes that "our free press has survived these 200 years without any law to make newsmen a class apart, and I suspect it will survive without our claiming privileges denied to other men."

Without reflection on contrary opinions by other respected colleagues, The News and Courier concurs with the foregoing views.—Charleston (S.C.) News and Courier

A Little Too Much Sunshine?

Too bad. After flirting for a while with the principle of open committee meetings the U.S. Senate has decided to keep them closed.

In a key vote the senators rejected, 47 to 38, a proposal to make very committee meeting open unless a majority of the committee voted at the beginning of the meeting to bar the public. This put the burden of proof that open meetings are not in the public interest on those would close them rather than on those who would open them. Trust the people, in other words, but not too far.

The Senate has been called the greatest deliberative body in the world. Lord Bryce, the great British interpreter of the American system, worried about the Senate's "collective self-esteem." It would appear that pride of ancient custom won out. Most legislative business is done in committees. The closed door simply means that the citizens cannot know how his chosen representative votes on a given crucial issue.

But there is some progress in the effort of Sen. Lawton Chiles of Florida and other young bucks to move the old stag. The House, to use the Florida term, would let the sunshine in. And so would 38 members of the Senate, or nearly 40 per cent of that body.

Perhaps a better day will come. In the meantime we are appalled by the specious argument, which he put first, of Sen. Robert Byrd of West Virginia, who said that meetings should not be open because "there would be problems of space to accommodate such (Public) attendance." Since when has a senator shied away from a large audience?—Miami (Fla.) Herald

The result: a golden opportunity for anti-Strauss reformers who immediately proposed their own slate of Beirne, Smith, Joe Kennan of the Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Leonard Woodcock of the United Auto Workers and Howard Samuel of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers—McGovern supporters all.

Tactical disagreements between Strauss and COPE are not isolated—as witness the recent election in Las Vegas of a new head of the state Democratic chairmen's organization. The favorite, Robert Vance of Alabama (a bitter foe of Gov. George Wallace), opposed Strauss for chairman and is not beloved within the AFL-CIO hierarchy. Nevertheless, Strauss saw no reason to engage in a divisive fight for a largely powerless office and kept hands off.

Not so COPE. John Perkins, Barkan's deputy, was sent to Las Vegas to lobby, unsuccessfully, against Vance, and state labor leaders similarly intervened. Vance, noting hostility from Strauss's labor allies, is now considerably less inclined to support the chairman, and Strauss's reformer enemies, charging the vaguest sort of guilt-by-association, have new evidence against him.

Oh well, you can't expect newspaper people to carry out a normal people task.

There were a few hitches with NCNB-24 during trial period, however.

One man from Raleigh came through on a weekend and spotted the machine. He inserted his card and did everything properly. Out came an envelope. Sadly, however, it was filled with "funny money" which was placed in the machine for practice purposes.

The man called Les Turner, branch manager, whose name was on the door. Les wasn't home but his wife assured the man that no charges would be made against his account for the "funny money."

And on a work day a man from Charlotte drove up and placed his card in the machine. Les spotted him recognized that he was expecting to get cash from the machine.

"You're going to be surprised," he told the man as the drawer opened.

This story had a happy ending. Les took the man inside and arranged for him to get the cash he needed.

A Conservative View

Reflections Of The Visitor In Modern Greece

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

ATHENS, Greece—The newspaperman who wanders to Athens these days might be excused for imagining, now and then, that he never left home. The chief topics of conversation are student unrest, harassment of the press, and the power of the Prime Minister.

The demonstrations that erupted last month at the Polytechnic Institute caught the administration by surprise. Since the colonels took over the government, following the revolution of April, 1967, a veritable fortune has been poured into higher education in Greece. The colonels, whatever their faults, cannot be accused of stinginess in this field. Within the government's means, they provided generously in new buildings, new professorships, new textbooks, free tuition, and all the rest.

Prime Minister George Papadopoulos, advised of the students' complaint, was as wounded as the outraged Lear: How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is, to have a thankless child! On March 2 he summoned the rectors and professors, and read them a rough-cut riot act. Then he called in the student leaders, and gave them a second chorus.

It was a rip-snorting speech. In the nature of things, the press sized upon a sentence toward the bottom of page 6, where Papadopoulos (in the official English translation) warned that "any power that could emerge to disturb public peace and order will be crushed." Yet the speech contained much that was conciliatory, and much that was intended, in a heavy-handed way, to be patriotic and inspiring.

The students reacted predictably. They continued to press their demand for repeal of the law by which dissenting students may be drafted for military service. They demanded that police be prohibited from coming on campus; they demanded other things, and they continued to boycott their classes.

The government countered with two measures: It drafted 95 of the student ringleaders, and it ordered the Greek-language press to stop covering the demonstrations. Byron Stamatopoulos, the Herb Klein-Ron Ziegler of the government, explains the drafting blandly: College students are entitled to deferment so long as they attend classes; the 95 were not attending classes; therefore they were not entitled to deferment.

Of the twelve dailies affected by the press decree, eleven docilely complied. The twelfth, Vradyni, the third largest paper in Greece with a circulation of 120,000, continued to give the story even-handed coverage. The colonels thereupon sent 20 tax inspectors, armed with a warrant, to raid not only the newspaper offices but also the home of the editor, George Athenassiadas.

I talked with Athenassiadas, and he said it was some siege. The revenue men went through every desk drawer in the plant. They ransacked private correspondence. They ransacked everything in sight. The government's explanation, through Stamatopoulos, is that the newspaper is suspected of tax evasion and concealment of records. Evidence to prove the charge, he says without batting an eye, could have been anywhere.

The news blackout, and the harassment of Athenassiadas, strike me as outrageous and abhorrent, but that is my reaction as a newspaperman. I doubt that the people as a whole are much concerned. The striking students are widely regarded as spoiled brats. "If they don't want to attend classes," said a resentful shopkeeper in Rhodes, "there are plenty of other young people who do." I went around to the Athens News, the small English-language tabloid, and fell into a long conversation with its political editor. He assured me, vehemently, that "not one intellectual, not one writer, not one artist or poet or scientist supports the colonels' regime." It may well be so. But in two weeks of traveling around Greece, I did not encounter a single taxi driver, waiter, shop clerk, or tavern keeper who opposed the regime.

Prime Minister Papadopoulos, as a person, probably is even less loved than President Nixon, as a person, but Papadopoulos seems to be grudgingly respected, even by his enemies, as a tough cookie who knows the uses of power. By every indication I could find, he seems likely to hold that power for quite some time to come.

Brake Handle On Price Spiral Is In Hands Of The Consumer Public

By GEORGE BRYANT, JR.

The consumer has it in his power to put a brake on spiraling prices, led by food. All he needs to do is close his purse to all but simple necessities.

But will he? If history is any clue to the future he won't, at least not at this stage of the game. Voluntary boycotts and buyers strikes aimed at high prices make good headlines. But that is about as far as such things get.

The trouble is the consumer, when well healed, as he is today, quickly tires of such tactics, adjusts to the higher prices and goes back to the store. People simply like to spend when they have the money and are pretty confident about the future. This goes with "good times".

When the consumer quits the market place, it is because he has been driven out. Sharp and sustained price rises overrun his buying power and force him to settle for fewer things. And as this comes about, job uncertainty develops and brings on still more retrenchment.

The situation today bears a striking and, you might say, disturbing resemblance to that of four years ago, when President Nixon was beginning his first term.

The economy was zooming, fueled by the Vietnam war and the Johnson Administration's big-spending Great Society programs. Nixon's top priorities then were to end the war and bringing inflation under control.

A brake was applied to the economy. Credit was tightened. Interest rose. Federal spending was slowed. Unemployment began to rise. The consumer turned cautious. Prices continued to push up, but at a slower pace. Finally a wage-price-rent freeze was resorted to, in August, 1971.

In the meantime, the economy not only had lost its growth, but verged on recession, with nearly 6 per cent unemployment. The freeze enabled the Administration to relax credit restraints, move spending up and thus provide stimulants.

Things turned up, but moved slowly until about mid-1972, when the consumer regained confidence and began buying freely again. This made 1972 something of a record year and, no doubt, the upswing contributed to the Nixon second term landslide.

But now the economy is clearly over-heating again. The Administration still talks about the "recovery movement" and its strength. The handouts never mention a "Nixon boom," the reason, of course, is obvious.

When an economic uptrend reaches the boom stage it's "bad news". Historically, booms have ended up in recession or, to use a word economists would like to forget, bust.

The food price story of the past couple of months has tended to obscure a lot of developments which indicate more trouble ahead.

The mainstream of buying power, personal income, is continuing to rise at a rapid rate and soon will cross the trillion dollar mark. The Commerce Department reported this week that the annual rate and hit $993-billion in February. In 1972, the February rate was $908-billion.

This reflects a tremendous one year rise. And it would have been much greater, except for social security changes. Starting in January, the payroll tax started taking a much bigger bite out of wages and salaries.

Another significant rise reported this week by Washington is in industrial production. As measured by the Federal Reserve Board index, this figure reached 120.8 per cent of the 1967 average in February. This was a gain of .8 per cent from January and up 9.8 per cent from a year ago.

This big rise is good. It indicates response to the tremendous demand for things. But there is questioning as to how long such gains can continue. Many facilities now are operating at or near capacity and more and more raw materials are being reported as in short supply.

Some observers are coming to the conclusion that the time is near, maybe even at hand, when a sharp tax increase-income tax surcharge-is in order.

Such a tax could soak up "excess" buying power, which otherwise will be taken in higher prices, and solve the chronic deficit problem.

I don't know anybody in Philadelphia," Routh said. "But he insisted it was me he wanted to talk to. Then he told me about finding the old mess kit, and checked about all the carvings on it. It was mine, all right."

Routh said at first Hughes didn't want to part with it, then he changed his mind, and said he'd bring it to North Carolina personally as a gift. Hughes drove to Randolph County, looked Routh up, and handed over the long lost mess kit.

Routh's eyes beamed. Mess Kit Memories Back came memories of days eating corn willy out of that metal pan, in camps at Hancock, Ga., and Merritt, N. J.

Political Notes

Democrats Search For Face-Saving Compromise

By JOHN KILGO

RALEIGH — Rep. Gerald Arnold's bill to gerrymander the State's election machinery into continued Democratic control is bringing an editorial volley from newspapers all across the state.

The prevailing opinion seems to be that Arnold's bill is 100 per cent political and would damage the Democratic Party in the eyes of many voters.

Democratic leadership in the Legislature, seeing the way the bill has upset the public, is trying for some kind of face-saving compromise.

The bill is dynamite, some seem to think, and they don't want to get maimed by it. The Republican leadership, meanwhile, will be content to play self-righteous and act hurt. They strongly believe that public sentiment is one their side and the GOP plans to spend enough money to make sure everyone knows what is happening.

Skipper Bowles is warning Democrats around the state that they'd better quit fussing and get organized. Bowles says the Republicans are working like crazy, especially in the West, and will spend plenty of dough on their voter registration drive. Bowles believes the Democrats can stay far ahead, at least in terms of registered voters, if they get to work with drives of their own.

For a while at the NCAA Eastern Regionals in Charlotte last week, it looked like the cops had come to search the joint. But there was no major problem. They were just helping Gov. Jim Holshouser find his seat. Sometimes it looks as if Holshouser has put half his Davidson classmates to work for him. Seated with him at the basketball games was Bill Bondurant, a former Davidson man; and Davidson President Sam Spencer.

The Legislature, which has been praised for working hard (and it really has), must really get going if the politicians hope to get through by mid-May. House Speaker Jim Ramsey and Lt. Gov. Jim Hunt are really going to push the lawmakers for the next few weeks, so the May adjournment date can be kept. One unnamed State Senator said he feels Lt. Gov. Hunt is too pushy with the Senators. Said the honorable: "I'm waiting for Jim to give us report cards."

lost. The White House deployed virtually every lobbyist at its command, even enlisted leaders out of the Democratic past, in its campaign against cutbacks two years ago.

Now, he contends, no single act would do more to check inflation at home and "the enfeeblement of the dollar abroad."

The White House said it would make no sense for the United States to cut its force levels unilaterally amid negotiations with the Soviet Union for mutual troop cuts in Europe.

Mansfield says as long as U.S. forces stay put in Europe, the Russians will be under no pressure to move out.

The question is not only one of troops, it is of military dependents in Europe, too. Mansfield put the total at some 525,000, and said there are billions of dollars to be saved through cutbacks.

There is another, simpler argument advanced in the Senate: Why should the United States maintain such a force in Europe, long after World War II, in defense of allies whose economies are flourishing?

In the months ahead, Mansfield and his supporters are going to be pressing for an answer.

ECU International Studies Program Given Increasing Emphasis

By DR. LEOW JENKINS

An increasing awareness of global problems and international affairs and their effect upon our citizenry is the purpose of a new, wide-ranging program at East Carolina University.

This program of international studies is being coordinated by the office of International Education of which Dr. Kermit King is director, and Gen. John A. Lang, Vice Chancellor for External Affairs. Other organizations and agencies in Greenville and the eastern North Carolina community are assisting. A 13 member citizens steering committee has been named and is actively cooperating in an advisory capacity.

The projects thus far include two symposia held here at East Carolina, one on Africa and one this week (March 28-29) on European studies. Two more, on Asia and Latin America, are to be conducted later in the Spring.

It is hoped that the information developed and exchanged during these programs will serve to stimulate a greater interest in world affairs, internationalism and especially matters which affect us here in eastern North Carolina more than we realize.

Another symposium of importance to our state and region, on tobacco and the history, past, present and possible future of this crop, was held on campus last week (March 21-22).

This was sponsored by the N. C. committee for Continuing Education in the Humanities and the National Endowment for the Humanities, and was presented by the ECU-based Institute for Historical Research in Tobacco and the ECU Division of Continuing Education. The program focused on the history of tobacco and tobacco's impact upon the society and economic development of the tobacco producing region.

Thirty high schools from 25 counties in the region were represented in the 1973 Northeastern-Southeastern district Science Fair on the campus last week-end, and the exhibits, displays and demonstrations were superior.

It is interesting to note that this was the 18 consecutive year for East Carolina to be host to a science fair drawing participants from high school science classes in the area. Plans are to continue this annual project and to make it even better.

This year's first place trophies and awards went to entries from schools in Wake County, Havelock, Fayetteville, Goldsboro and Greenville.

We firmly believe that athletics and athletic competition has its place in the overall educational process and that physical fitness and athletic ability are important for a well-rounded person, to say nothing of character building.

This is why we are especially proud of our athletic and physical education programs as East Carolina University. That our teams are making a good showing in intercollegiate competition is evidence that our program is sound and improving. Our trophy collection has been growing steadily. East Carolina teams won the football, wrestling and swimming championships in the Southern Conference during the past few months. Our basketball team, while in a building year, made a very creditable showing and reached the tournament finals. Our girls basketball team did not get a great deal of publicity but had an undefeated, 18-0 season and went to the national tournament in New York City with high hopes. Our Pirate baseball team is off to an excellent start this Spring. Our girls gymnastic team finished second in a regional meet in which teams from the Carolinas, Tennessee, Kentucky and Virginia were entered.

Spring quarter enrollment, on the basis of preliminary figures, is 9,138 fulltime students, which is a slight increase over the same quarter for a year ago.

Cancer Crusade Plans Mapped

Volunteer chairmen and captains for the up-coming Cancer Crusade met Wednesday evening at the First Federal Savings and Loan Building on the 264 By-Pass to organize their drive and receive their crusade kits.

A short film on the goals and objectives of this Crusade was shown. It was especially stressed that this drive has a two-fold purpose: to distribute life-saving information to the citizens of Pitt County, and to solicit contributions to aid in the vital research and education programs of the American Cancer Society.

Mrs. Mary Higginbotham of Kinston, Director of Area V, was present along with John Lang, the Crusade Chairman. Special guests for the evening was Lewis Godwin of Farmville, who had cancer of the tongue year ago which necessitated radical surgery and continued treatment. He was an inspiration to the cause is a member of the One Million Club of Cured Cancer Patients.

Volunteer crusaders who were unable to be present at this workshop are encouraged to contact Mrs. Jean Messner, 756-0089, executive secretary of the county unit, to obtain the crusade kits and information as soon as possible.

The Kick-Off Dinner for the Cancer Crusade will be held on Sunday, April 1, 1973, at Parkers Barbecue, with Dr. Wallace Woolles, Dean of East Carolina University Medical School as the guest speaker.

Mrs. Phyllis Martin, President of the Pitt County Chapter of the American Cancer Society, has expressed the need for more volunteers, anyone willing to assist in the efforts to help conquer cancer is encouraged to contact these chairmen, or Messner.

She will be able to point out the county needs and refer each volunteer to the proper chairman.

Lang has announced a number of area chairmen.

Mrs. George King, 756-3415, has accepted the chairmanship for Ayden, and Mrs. Bruce Buck, 752-6071, volunteered to head up the crusade in the Black Jack area.

Mrs. William Earl Holloman, 758-3292, of Grimesland, Johnny

Ruel Dilda, 749-5011, of Fountain, Miss Jean Perkins, 752-639 of Stokes, and Mrs. Charles Wilkinson of Falkland have accepted chairmen's positions for their respective areas.

Grifton is chaired by Mr. Don Watson, 524-5129, and Mrs. Ed Bright, 752-5253, will assist him in this effort. Mrs. Barbara Bowen, 746-4774, has assumed the task of chairman of Winterville. William E. Martin will be County Canister Chairman, placing these containers in various county areas.

Mr. Vernon Cayton, 758-201.pwill be chairman for Farmville. Assisting him is Miss Mildred Godwin, 753-3039, for the residential areas and Warner Rackley, 753-4776, covering industries.

Attend Meeting Of Radiologists

Four registered radiologic technologists and five R.T. students from Pitt Memorial Hospital attended a meeting of the Eastern N.C. Society of Radiologic Technologists at Nash General Hospital Wednesday night.

Attending were RTs, Mrs. Judy Rivenbark, Miss Grace Wallace, Miss Jo-Ann Tuten, and Miss Sandra Harrison, and students, Bobby Carson, Rita Harlow, Fonda Hedgpeth, Bobby Johnson, and Yvonne Cooper.

Dr. Phillip Weaver, Nash General radiologist spoke on "The Use of Radiology on the Goodwill Ship U.S.S. Hope." Dr. Weaver is a former chief of staff on the U.S.S. Hope and has served as assistnat medical director for international programs for Project Hope.

Chairmen for other county areas will be announced when final commitments are obtained, Lagn said.

Revival Set For Monday

Early Maple Sugaring Season For New England

By BRENDA W. ROTZOLL
NEW LONDON, N.H. (UPI) — Clouds of steam are drifting up through the New Hampshire woods, signaling the beginning of one of the earliest maple sugaring seasons on record, and maybe one of the best.

"This is the earliest we've ever tapped," said druggist Robert M. Lovely Sr., 63, of New London, as he regulated the fire beneath his $100-each boiling pans in his shed. "The oldtimers used to tap the day after Town Meeting (the first Tuesday in March). Lately we've had warmer weather in February and by waiting, they lose out on part of the run."

"It certainly came early," said Kenneth E. Bascom of Acworth, whose Happiness Lodge Maple Products is the biggest maple syrup outfit in New Hampshire. "We may be the biggest in New England this year," Bascom said, estimating he and his son will have between 19,000 and 20,000 taps running from thousands of trees.

How many taps a tree has depends on its girth. A small tree can only carry one tap, others may carry three or four or even more. Sap starts to run when there are freezing nights and warm days and for some unexplained reason, flows fastest when there is a brisk wind, maple men say.

The three grades, fancy, A and B, are judged by eye. The syrup maker pours his product into a two-ounce clear glass bottle and compares it to the color of three other little bottles in a test kit he buys from G. H. Grimm Co., in Vermont, the world's leading maker of sugaring equipment.

"We expect to make over 4,000 gallons," Bascom said. That's a lot of syrup when you figure $8.75 to $12.00 a gallon.

That was the price last year and Vincent Peterson, head of the New Hampshire Maple Producers Association, said he expected the price to hold steady in 1973.

The price rises when you package the syrups in smaller containers, from two quarts down to half a pint. A quart goes for $3-$4, a half pint from $1.25-2.

"It's $1.50-$2.50 a pound for creams, sugars and so on, mostly $2.00-$2.15," Peterson said. "You can make eight pounds of sugar from a gallon of syrup."

There's a lot of work in sugaring, and much of the profit goes to the relatively small number of men who can work in quantity. But the bulk of maple sugarmen do it for love.

"I've had a couple of heart attacks. I let my wife and son run the drugstore," Lovely said. "But I can sit here all day at the evaporator."

He got into the business (he sells his 75 gallons a year through the drugstore) when his son, Robert Jr., 31, came home from Vietnam and repeated his childhood demand to make maple syrup. The first family batch was made on the outdoor fireplace at the Lovelys' summer cottage on Pleasant Lake.

Now Lovely has several thousand dollars sunk in equipment—mostly for fun, he admits.

"The old guys did it (made maple syrup) because there was nothing else to do this time of year," Bob Jr. said. He does the outside work, drilling and tapping his own few trees and dozens of others that his neighbors let him tap in return for a little syrup.

Bob Lovely goes out with a gathering tank on a pickup truck. Big operators, have tractors hauling sleds through the woods or, faster but less romantic, they tap miles of plastic tubing right into the trees and let the sap roll downhill into the boiling houses.

The purist boils over a wood fire, collects sap in buckets and transports it in huge tanks on a sledge drawn by oxen.

Electrician Peter Crowell of New London keeps a pair of pet oxen, Bob and Wendell, to draw his sledge, and he chops his own wood for boiling.

But he'll never make the purist ranks again. This year he bought a gas-powered drill for tapping and most of his sap runs not into tin-roofed buckets, but into blue plastic tubing that hooks up to the boiling shack.

Mussels Are Good Eating

CHICAGO (UPI) — Whether it's the name or the appearance of these bivalve creatures, Americans have never been keen about mussels. It's a pity.

Mussels, according to Encyclopaedia Britannica, provide riboflavin, vitamin A, iron, copper, calcium, phosphorus and other minerals. Further, they are tasty raw, stewed or steamed. Also, they're plentiful.

But although mussels are common on the coasts of New England and eastern Canada, they are not generally eaten, despite efforts to popularize them. Meanwhile, the English and French consume about 170 million pounds of mussels each year.

It has been estimated that an acre in the best mussel areas will produce 10,000 pounds of flesh annually. An acre of the best cattle land will produce only about 150 pounds of beef. Additionally, mussels are easily harvested—in shallow water they can be gathered with a clam rake.

Coffee sold for $4 per pound in 1863 in Atlanta at the height of the Civil War.

MAPLE SUGAR FARMERS tap trees as New Hampshire's sugar sap season begins. Tapping began this year earlier than in the past due to warmer weather in February. (UPI Telephoto)

Big Dream Shared By Card Collectors

LEXINGTON, Ky. (UPI) — A rare card depicting Honus Wagner, a baseball Hall of Fame member who played shortstop for the Pittsburgh Pirates from 1897-1917, was a nonsmoker.

Thus, when he found his picture on a card inside cigarette packages in 1910, he objected and the cards were withdrawn. So far, only five or six Honus Wagner cards have been found. The last one sold for $1,500 in 1972.

For the Balls, turning up a Honus Wagner card would be like hitting a home run with the bases loaded in the seventh game of a World Series.

Asked what he does with all that buglegum he must buy to get present-day cards, Ball explained most of it goes to neighborhood children. They seem to enjoy the Balls' hobby, too.

M. Stanley Ball and his 17-year-old son, Robert, have about 100,000 baseball cards neatly catalogued. The collection is valued at about $1,500.

Most of the cards come from the inside of bubblegum wrappers, but some of the older ones were included in now defunct brands of cigarettes, such as Meccas and Old Judge.

Ball has some cards dating back to the 1880s. He said he enjoys the hobby because it keeps him and his son together in spare time during the youth's formative years.

Both father and son share one dream as card collectors. They would like to stumble onto the

Scottish Rite Club To Review New Program

The local Scottish Rite Club will meet Tuesday night to discuss a program on the treatment of Aphasie and Dyslexic persons.

The program was adopted last year by the Supreme Council of the Scottish Rite in lieu of the program of awarding three scholarships a year at George Washington University.

With East Carolina University here, which has a department on these subjects, the club felt it was in a good position to promote the program on a statewide basis.

Supper will be served at 7 p.m. at the Masonic Temple.

Hardison Is Named Two-Thirds Pitt Chairman For Association Drive

Miss Janice Hardison, an assistant professor of English at East Carolina University, has been named Pitt County chairman for the 1973 Roanoke Island Historical Association (RIHA) membership campaign.

RIHA is the organization that produces the famed outdoor historical drama, The Lost Colony on Roanoke Island. The waterfront theater where the drama is staged is located in Fort Raleigh National Historic Site and is on the site where Sr. Walter Raleigh's first English settlement in the New World mysteriously disappeared.

In soliciting memberships within Greenville and Pitt County, Miss Hardison will be offering membership in several categories:

—Regular membership, $5 per person; sustaining, $10; sponsoring, $25; and patrons, $50.

For each of the above types of membership, members are entitled to one reserved seat ticket for each $5 value of membership and a copy of the souvenir program.

Three Autos In Collision

Approximately $1,750 worth of damage was done in a three-car collision at the intersection of Washington and Ninth Streets Friday evening police reported.

Walter Lee Stancil of Robertsonville was charged by Greenville Police with failure to yield right of way after his car was struck by a vehicle driven by Daniel Russell Early of 1712 S. Greene St. After being hit by the Early auto, the Stancil vehicle then struck a car being driven by John Lucious Smith of Rt. 6, Greenville, police said.

Mrs. Sue Turcotte, chairman of the 1973 Muscular Dystrophy campaign in Greenville, has announced that "a little more than $1,000 of our $1,500 goal set for the campaign has been collected to date."

The drive, which began early in March, has now been concluded with reports in from all except a few of the volunteer collectors. "I'd like to remind collectors who have not turned in their contributions to do so at the earliest possible date." The turn-in point is North Carolina National Bank.

Assisting Mrs. Turcotte in this campaign, in addition to other named earlier, were Mrs. Ann McMillan and Mrs. Diane Myers, who were in charge of soliciting volunteers for the door-to-door drive.

"Due to the generous volunteer efforts of many Greenville citizens," Mrs. Turcotte stated, "the 1973 muscular dystrophy drive has been a very successful one."

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, MARCH 25, 1973

CARROLL RIGHTER'S HOROSCOPE

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This is a day when the only good coming to you arrives in a dramatic fashion, so concentrate upon doing well in your regular chores. A visitor, a communication or some other surprise for you can also be expected at this time.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) An associate can do you a big favor now that will help you through a tense time in your life, and then big success comes of it. Try not to be forceful with anyone. Keep busy at your hobby.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) If you keep busily occupied you can keep out of trouble today and tonight. A new health treatment could be most helpful to you. Your recreation should be confined to your own home now.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Plan some free time in case you get an invitation unexpectedly, but don't neglect important duties. Express a creative idea in a most ideal way now. Use unusual methods and get fine results.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) A family tie has the right solution to some of your problematical affairs. Stay at home as much as you can, since there could be some difficulties arising in the outside world.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) A kind word or a cheery letter can get you out of the doldrums today and then this becomes a most happy and productive day. Tone down on that explosive temper. Show that you have poise.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You may have a few financial problems but you get saved just in the nick of time. Consult with a wise business expert and get his advice. Follow it to the best of your ability. Be alert.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You are involved in so many practical matters now that it is best to avoid the social altogether. A good friend, however, will give you the advice you need. Avoid a troublesome person.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Visit an adviser who can help you with a situation that is very puzzling to you at this time. Follow your intuition for best results. Do something of a social nature tonight.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Good friends are your best bet today, since you are not thinking as clearly as usual. A personal wish you have is not good for you, so forget it. Avoid getting into an argument.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) A bigwig can be very helpful and give the support you need at this time. Read your newspaper well for news that is of great importance to you. Relax at home tonight.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) A new idea can make this a most happy day for you after you take care of regular routines. You can benefit much from this. A friend will bring you news of great interest to you.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Think of a way to handle affairs with people who owe you money. Avoid an argument with mate who is in a scrappy mood right now. Keep silent and all will be fine. Be understanding.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY he or she will be one of those charming young people who will make careful plans but something always comes up to put a crimp in them. Teach to handle all unexpected eventualities wisely. Making any necessary changes will be easy. Give as fine an education as you can afford. Sports are a must here.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, MARCH 26, 1973

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Only through some new interests being investigated by you are you now able to turn some otherwise questionable influences to your advantage and be able to put your affairs on a more secure foundation. Look into every single factor facing you and make it work efficiently by new, modern methods.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Do whatever will improve your reputation in the world of business, career, social life. Keep on the alert so you can avoid trouble. Show you are cheerful.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Some new idea is yours that helps you make up your mind about something important, so use it quickly. More study on future plans is wise, then you do not run into some snag later. The social is fine in p.m.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Begin the new week wisely by handling some vital responsibility well you have been postponing unwisely. Use your intuitive faculties to get yourself out of difficulties you have gotten yourself into.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) A partner is suspicious of you, so prove yourself and gain the cooperation you want and need. A situation arises that will help relieve pressures that are making you unhappy. Think.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Get busy at duties since they are more important than you think, and are soon behind you. Do whatever will make you a more dynamic person. Work in a most conscientious fashion.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Being charming with others relieves some difficult situation now, whereas a glum expression only makes things worse. Plan time for using some fine talent you possess. Steer clear of one who nags.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) A wise family tie can give you the advice you need to handle that difficult matter intelligently. Follow it and get right results. Show others you are in the mood to cooperate.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Just when you think you are getting ahead at a very slow speed, some word you receive or item in the paper can change all this. Count your money when you shop or handle it for any other purpose. Care is the keynote.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Keep steady or you can lose out where it counts the most. Listen to what bankers and government people have to suggest. Take some time for that attachment you like so much, but don't be maudlin.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Instead of asking others for advice, be sure to use your own judgment and come out the winner. Take the right treatments that bring out your particular charm. Do something nice for one who has done you many favors.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Your intuitive faculties can give you answers to many puzzling situations in your life. If you get into any difficulty, there is a powerful person you know who comes to your aid immediately.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) A good pal makes fine suggestions that can be most helpful to you, so listen with care and appreciation. Avoid the social today since it could mean arguments and other unpleasantness. Do some studying that can be most enlightening.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY he or she will be one of those interesting young people who early in life thinks it is necessary to fight and stir up the very winds in order to get ahead, so teach early to be philosophical, patient and understanding, and then this life becomes a most successful one instead of a truly sad one. There is much ability at organizing here and your youngster would do well in big business, government, community work, etc.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

Notre Dame Ousts Carolina From NIT

By KEN RAPPOPORT
Associated Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP)—Bobby Stevens provided the winning points with two foul shots with 14 seconds left in the game as Virginia Tech upset Alabama 74-73 Saturday and advanced into the final of the National Invitation Tournament against Notre Dame.

Notre Dame earlier gained a berth in Sunday's championship match with a 78-71 shocker over North Carolina.

The Fighting Irish won the opener before a partisan crowd of 15,205 at Madison Square Garden as Dwight Clark triggered an eight-point run at the start of the second half and Notre Dame held off a late North Carolina charge.

Although the Virginia Tech-Alabama game was tied at 39-39 at the half, all the drama was packed into the game's final three minutes.

With the favored Crimson Tide in front 71-66 and only 3:05 remaining, it looked like the more talented team from the Southeastern Conference was in charge.

Then, Charlie Thomas put in a pair of lightning field goals for the underrated Gobblers and Ed Frazier threw in a jumper at the 2:10 mark for a 72-71 Virginia Tech lead, their first since the early moments of the second half.

But Frazier missed a one-on-one foul situation with 58 seconds remaining and Alabama took the ball downcourt. Charles Cleveland, who had 20 points overall for Alabama, missed two shots from in close, and Virginia Tech regained possession.

Stevens then sank his game-winning shots from the foul line, before Ray Odums connected for Alabama's last field goal with seven seconds left. The Crimson Tide had one more shot at the basket, but Cleveland's desperation attempt at the end fell short.

Wendell Hudson scored 18 points and Odums had 16 for Alabama, now 22-7. Virginia Tech, 21-5, was led by Alan Bristow's 29 points.

The Fighting Irish, who weren't supposed to make it past the quarter-finals, outplayed the supposedly stronger Tar Heels in every phase of the game from the start of the second half and refused to fold when the Atlantic Coast Conference team rallied down the stretch.

John Shumate, who hit on 11 of 12 field goal attempts, single-handedly kept Notre Dame in contention with 15 points in the first half which ended with North Carolina ahead 43-41.

The nationally televised game at Madison Square Garden before a highly partisan Notre Dame audience quickly turned the way of the Fighting Irish as Clay hit a pair of long jump shots. Willie Townsend sank a field goal and Clay connected again, giving Notre Dame a 49-43 lead.

Notre Dame was in charge of the game until North Carolina made things interesting in the last three minutes.

With George Karl scoring four of the points, the Tar Heels outscored the Fighting Irish 12-5 at one stage and came within two points at 73-71 with 1:40 left.

Then Notre Dame put it away with five straight foul shots in the last 50 seconds, three by Pete Crotty and two by Gary Brokaw. Shumate scored 24 points, leading Notre Dame, 18-11, while Bobby Jones had 22 for North Carolina, 24-8.

Cougars Ice Tie For Title

CHARLOTTE, N. C. (AP)—The Carolina Cougars defeated the Memphis Tams, 143-129, Saturday afternoon to clinch a tie for first place in the American Basketball Association's East Division.

The Cougars need only one more victory or a Kentucky loss to take the top place outright. They have three games left.

Johnny Neumann topped all scoring with 30 points for the Tams and George Thompson added 28 while the Cougars were led by Billy Cunningham with 25 and Joe Caldwell with 23.

It was the 15th loss in a row for the Tams, whose Will Jones had 24 points and 13 rebounds.

Cunningham pulled down 14 rebounds as Carolina led this department with 54 against 39 by Memphis.

Carolina pulled ahead 37-34 at the end of the first period and held a 71-59 margin at halftime. The Cougars led by seven to 16 points through much of the contest.

UCLA (Who Else?) Gains Finals Again; To Face Memphis State

By HUBERT MIZELL
Associated Press Sports Writer
ST. LOUIS (AP)—UCLA "supersub" Tommy Curtis ignited the slumbering Bruins to a 70-59 victory over Indiana in the NCAA basketball semifinals Saturday, their 74th triumph in a row in an unrelenting march toward a seventh straight national championship.

Underdog Memphis State shook off a 13-point first-half deficit and shelved the crippled Providence Friars 98-85 to earn a shot at the awesome Bruins in Monday night's final.

UCLA, 29-0 this year, fumbled like mere mortals as Big Ten champion Indiana bounced to a 16-11 lead on the blazing shooting of 6-foot-8 Steve Downing, who made 12 points in the opening nine minutes.

Then Coach John Wooden cut loose the energetic Curtis, a 5-11 junior, and the UCLA machine began functioning with the class that has produced a 206-5 record since 1966.

Curtis hit five outside baskets as UCLA, which had trailed 20-17, ripped the Hoosiers for 18 straight points and a 35-20 cushion.

By halftime, the margin had widened to 40-22.

But Indiana refused to quit. Downing's shooting eye refocused and the Bruins began making uncommon errors again in the early stages of the second half.

John Ritter ripped two straight shots from the side as the Indiana rally pulled the Hoosiers to 57-55 with 5:48 to play. The baskets capped an incredible 17-point run by Indiana.

Curtis took the challenge, hitting from the corner and then popping two free throws as UCLA breathed easier with a 61-55 edge with 4:01 remaining.

The Bruins operated without 5-11 superstar Bill Walton during much of the Indiana comeback while the giant redhead was saddled with four fouls.

Actually, the Hoosier fate was sealed at 7:57 into the second half when Downing, the only Indiana power under the backboards, fouled out with 26 points.

Indiana, 21-6, meets Providence, 27-3, in the battle for third place Monday night prior to the UCLA-Memphis State matchup for the National Collegiate Athletic Association crown at 9 p.m., EST.

UCLA has won 35 straight NCAA games and has bagged eight national championships in the last nine years for the greatest dynasty in the history of college sports.

Curtis led the Bruins with 22 points. Walton made only 14, but the Associated Press Player of the Year was a rebounding demon.

Memphis State, 24-5 and champions of the Missouri Valley Conference, caught fire behind the three-man bomb squad of Larry Kenon, Ronnie Robinson and Larry Finch to destroy Eastern independent Providence.

The Tigers had never survived the first round in three previous NCAA tournaments, but they're still singing a season-long theme of "Meet me in St. Louis."

Providence jumped to a 49-36 lead on the shooting and passing wizardry of 6-foot All-American Ernie DiGregorio but a blow was struck among the Friars amid all the heroics.

Marvin Barnes, 6-8 inside star in the Providence attack, suffered a dislocated kneecap with 12:32 remaining in the first half and only returned as a courageous cripple late in the game when Memphis State was rolling.

The skinny, 6-9 Kenon scored 28 to lead the Tigers, who went into the game as four-point underdogs. The 6-8 Robinson made 24 and slick outside performer Finch hit 21.

DiGregorio scored 32 for the Friars but couldn't carry the load with Barnes missing much of the game and then playing on a severely damaged knee.

Providence officials had announced at halftime that Barnes, a junior, would not return, even in time for a possible final game Monday night. The Friars led 49-40 at the time.

DiGregorio scored 17 points in the first half and had seven dazzling assists, many on looping halfcourt passes, and 6-4 Kevin Stacom made 13 points while trying to fill the inside gap caused by Barnes' absence. Finch, a 24-point scorer during the season, was grounded with three fouls with 5:53 left in the opening half and Providence went on an immediate 12-2 tear to take the 13-point cushion.

Finch returned with 2:11 left in the half and the Tigers pulled within nine under his floor generalship.

But the Friars came up for one last try at pulling it out.

Fran Costello, a 6-8 man who plays mostly on the outside, scored six straight points and DiGregorio bagged a pair of baskets as the Friars suddenly took a 69-62 lead.

Kenon and Robinson then began dominating the boards and scoring at will as Memphis State jumped back ahead 74-73 at 7:54.

Ernie D gave the Eastern champions their final edge with a 15-footer that made it 75-74 with 7:30 to go, but Robinson hit a left-handed hook and the Tigers were on top for good.

Rain Delays Golf Tourney

By BOB GREEN
Associated Press Golf Writer
NEW ORLEANS (AP)—The one-day rain delay in the $125,000 Greater New Orleans Open Golf Tournament won't bother front-running Lee Elder in the least.

"If anything, I think it will help me; it's to my advantage," Elder said after a steady, heavy rain—accompanied by occasional lightning—had washed out Saturday's third round in the 72-hole tournament.

A double round of 36 holes was scheduled for Sunday.

"I don't mind playing 36 holes," Elder said. "And after all that wind Friday, I think a little rest will do me good."

Elder, seeking to become the first black player ever to compete in the famed Masters tournament, needs a victory here to become eligible for the event in Augusta, Ga. the week after next.

After an opening 65, seven-under-par on the 7,080-yard Lakewood Country Club course, Elder went to a 74 in blustery, whipping winds Friday, but still retained a share of the top spot with a 139 total.

He was tied with 41-year-old Miller Barber, who closed up with a 69 Friday. Menacing Jack Nicklaus and streaking Lou Graham, second in last week's Jacksonville Open, were just one stroke behind at 140.

None of the leaders had started play when the round was canceled Saturday. It was the first rainout of the year on the pro tour.

Elder will be paired with Nicklaus in the last group off the tee in both of Sunday's 18-hole rounds.

handled it pretty good. I don't think playing with Jack will bother me," Elder said of the prospect of playing head-to-head with the game's most feared competitor.

Elder, a relaxed and easy-going 38-year-old referred to his rookie season of 1968 when he took Nicklaus five extra holes before bowing in a sudden-death playoff for the American Golf Classic title. He finished second twice last fall. He was three strokes behind Bruce Devlin in the USI Classic at Sutton, Mass., and two weeks later, lost in another sudden-death playoff to Lee Trevino at Hartford, Conn.

Only winners become eligible for the Masters. And, not only must Elder fight 82 fellow pros over 36 holes, he also has the elements to worry about. He must win—and win over 72 holes.

Should the day-long rains make the Lakewood course unplayable Sunday—a distinct possibility since it's already water-logged from heavy rains late last week—the tournament would have to be held over until Monday.

It can go as late as Tuesday, but no later.

If 72 holes are not completed, the players are paid off on a partial basis—50 per cent of the scheduled prize money if two rounds are completed, 75 per cent if three rounds are completed—and the tournament goes into the books as an unofficial event.

As an unofficial event, the man or men leading at the end of the last completed round do not receive any of the usual benefits accruing to a tournament winner—including a spot in the Masters.

Defensive Progress Noted By Buc Gridders

East Carolina University's football Pirates concluded their second week of drills Saturday morning with their second scrimmage, and things are beginning to fall into place—on some fronts.

Henry Trevathan, defensive backfield coach, said that his segment of the team, along with the rest of the defense, appeared to be in good shape at this stage of drills, and that the men who are working into starting positions at this point are doing well.

"We only had one replacement to make in the defensive backfield," Trevathan said. "That was the position held by Terry Stoughton." Stoughton had the job, both of covering a receiver deep on a pass pattern, but coming up to stop the rush. "It was a real tough job, and he handled it well," the coach said. "In fact, his play there may have won the William & Mary game for us—stopping their sweep." Stoughton was named defensive player of the week in the Southern Conference after that game.

"Replacing him would be a tough job, we thought, but we've moved Rusty Markland over from the other side, and he's making a good replacement," Trevathan said.

That, however, didn't fill shoes, it just moved them around, leaving Markland's position open. But another switch there was made, bringing Mike Myrick in from the safety position. "He played there until he was hurt in the State game, and then Winston Mayhew took over, and did a pretty good job for us. He's continuing to do a creditable job, and we feel that Mike can play the corner, and we'll still be okay."

Trevathan also finds that the backfield has found a little depth. "Last year, we had just three people back there, even in practice. When he finally did have an injury, we had to scramble. This year, we do have some depth." Clay Burnett has moved from quarterback to safety, while Mike Jones is behind Myrick and George Wilkerson backs up Markland. "This is definitely an improvement for us," the coach said.

The defensive line, meanwhile, has little change to be made. Joe Tkach returns at one of the tackle spots, while Buddy Lowery and Robin Hogue are back at the end slots. "Kenny Moore has moved into Kirk Doll's tackle position, where he got a lot of action last year, so he's pretty experienced. And Cary Godette is battling Lowery for his position."

In the linebacking slots, Danny Kopley and Butch Stewardman return. "Billy Hibbs and Gary Nicklason are fighting for one of the inside positions, and Hibbs can move outside if we need for him to," Trevathan said. Wash Edwards is currently playing the outside slot.

"The defense is pretty much on schedule," he said. "But we're coming off a good year, and we're short of underselling things. We have a tough schedule, much tougher than last year, to play, and we have to work for improvement this year." And the coach feels that the defense still has a way to go.

The team scrimmaged on Saturday morning, and will work this week on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, with another Saturday morning scrimmage next week.

The offense is still held back somewhat by working new personnel in for Carl Summerell and Carlester Crumpler, who are only working dummy plays, while Vic Wilfore, one of the top receivers, is off with military duty.

"We're doing some experimenting too, and this takes time, so the offense isn't quite as far along as we'd like," Trevathan said.

Morrow Was 20th

KNOXVILLE, Tenn.—East Carolina's two representatives in the NCAA Swimming and Diving Championships finished up yesterday, one winding up his varsity career Pirates.

Jack Morrow, competing in the three-meter diving, ended up 20th in the national competition, turning in a fine performance, according to Coach Ray Scharf.

Senior Paul Trevisan, winding up his career, swam a 47.6 time in the 100-freestyle, breaking the East Carolina school record, but that still wasn't good enough to qualify him for the finals.

"The competition here is fantastic," Scharf said. "We performed well; maybe we could have done a little better, but it's still very rugged to get to the finals here."

Pirate Thinclads In Outstanding Victory

"It was the greatest dual meet in East Carolina history," beamed ECU track coach, Bill Carson after his team had dumped Ivy League Champs, Cornell, yesterday, 79-66, handing the Redmen their first loss of the season.

ECU is now 3-0 on the season. Cornell had beaten N. C. State 111-56 and Appalachian, earlier this week. Cornell took nine firsts, one better than the Pirates, but more Pirate runners took seconds and thirds to grab the win.

Charlie Lovelace won the 220 in :22.0 for his best time and LaBaron Caruthers' second place, 50'2¼", toss of the shot was a personal best.

Two Bucs were unable to race. Maurice Huntley came up lame as did Les Strayhorn who was

Bucs Hold Off Dartmouth For 3-2 Win

Robersonville Nips Warrenton

ROBERSONVILLE—Robersonville's Golden Eagles pushed over a run in the bottom of the seventh inning to break a 3-3 tie and take their third win of the young baseball season as they beat Warrenton, 4-3, Friday.

Robersonville had scored first with three in the third but two in the fourth and one in the fifth enabled Warrenton to tie it up. Jimmy Stalls and Doyle Farmer combined efforts on the mound for Robersonville with Farmer getting the win. Eddie King went all the way for Warrenton.

The scoreless game was broken in the third by Robersonville. Loyall Corey walked but was caught at second as Ricky Brown hit into a fielder's choice. Brown went to second on a passed ball and Matt Wilson walked. Doug Warren laced a hit into left scoring Brown and moving Wilson to second. Both advanced on a wild pitch. Wilson and Warren scored on a single by Stalls. Warrenton cut the gap to one in the top of the next inning. Kenny Clayton led off with a single and stole second. He came in on King's single and King moved to second on the throw to home. King stole third and scored on a hit by Lance Dillard.

Carleton Wilson singled for Warrenton in the fifth and after stealing second, scored on Clayton's single. Neither team could score again until the bottom of the seventh when Robersonville won it. Corey led off with a single to center and went to second on a wild pitch. Wilson walked and the winning run was forced in as Warren singled to left.

Warren had three hits to pace the Eagles while Clayton and Joe Shearin had two each for Warrenton.

Bath Humbles Oak City, 15-7

OAK CITY—Bath High School rolled to a 15-7 victory over Oak City here Friday.

The loss was the fourth in a row for the Trojans, who have yet to win this year.

Bath took the lead for good in the first inning, coming up with four runs. Dail Woolard led off with a walk and Charles Budd drew one too. Gene Biggs doubled in both runners, and Phillip Ray also walked. Paul Harker's walk loaded the bases and another to Earl Waters forced in Biggs. A passed ball then scored Ray for a 4-0 lead.

Bath picked up two more in the second, then came up with five in the third to put the game on ice. John Taylor led off the third by reaching on an error. Harker walked, and an error on a pickoff attempt let Taylor score. Woolard singled in Harper, and Jimmy Carson reached on an error. Ronnie Moore and Biggs each were safe on errors, scoring Woolard and Carson. Horace Miller then hit a sacrifice fly to score Moore. That made it 11-0.

Bath went on to add three in the fourth and one in the seventh. Oak City, meanwhile, scored single runs in the third, fourth and fifth innings.

Then, in the seventh, they got a rally going that scored four runs before giving out. Wallace Morris, Robert Williams and Bobby Andrews all walked, loading the bases. Kenneth Bryant reaced on an error, scoring Morris and Williams. Ronald Hooker singled in Andrews, and an error on a pickoff try scored Bryant with the final Trojan run.

Biggs and Davis led the Bath hitting with two each, while no one had more than one for Oak City.

Award To Olga Climax To Russian Gym Tour

NEW YORK (AP) — Olga Korbut, the tiny Russian teenager who grew into the Woman Athlete of the Year at the 1972 Olympic Games, won a trophy and the hearts of the nation's largest city Friday night.

"It's like Saturday matinee at the movies," said an adult spectator in the youthful Madison Square Garden crowd of 19,964, a North American record for a gymnastics performance. Presentation of the Babe Didrickson Zaharias Trophy was the climax of the performance by the Russian women's gymnastics team.

George Zaharias, a man-mountain of Greek sentiment several times Olga's size, presented her with the huge silver trophy. Zaharias bent almost double leaning down to kiss the 89-pound Russian star on the cheek. Olga, 17, clutching a silver miniature of the big trophy, paraded out with the other Russian girls, who carried bouquets of red roses.

At Zaharias' request, the large trophy will remain on display at the Museum of Sports Art in the Garden, where Zaharias wrestled professionally in years gone by.

Zaharias has been presenting the trophy annually since his wife, Babe Didriksen, six-time Associated Press Woman Athlete of the Year, died in 1956.

"Olga, we love you!" he said in a voice gruff with emotion. Miss Korbut was chosen for the award by the votes of sports editors of Associated Press member newspapers and broadcasting stations after winning three gold medals and a silver in the Olympic Games at Munich.

The Garden performance originally was to have been the finale of the Russian team's American tour, but Mayor Richard Daley of Chicago made a telephone call to Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin, who agreed to let the team stay over for an appearance in Chicago next Monday.

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
Dartmouth College broke East Carolina University's scoreless string after 49 innings, and the Bucs had their hands full in hanging on for a 3-2 victory Friday afternoon.

The Pirates had run through five straight shutouts, two each over Duke and Furman, and were working on their second over Dartmouth when they finally picked up a run in the seventh inning. They added another in the ninth, and it took some last minute heroics to keep them knotting the score.

Tommy Toms pitched most of the way, coming out in the ninth as Bill Godwin came on to retire the last two batters. Toms, firing hard, set the Big Green down without a hit until the fifth, and that was the only problem he had until the seventh.

"I really wasn't throwing that well," Toms said afterwards. He gave up three hits and a run in the seventh, hit a batter and allowed a hit in the eighth, and gave up a couple of hits in the ninth before bowing out.

Coach Jim Mallory also admitted that there was some tension on the team about preventing Dartmouth from scoring to extend their streak.

The Bucs had problems on their own in getting runs across, scoring two in the fifth when they put together three hits, and then easing one over in the eighth after an error.

Twice more, however, they missed out on fine defensive plays by Dartmouth, one of which cost the Bucs a three-run homer.

That came in the third inning with two away. Ron Staggs had walked and Troy Eason singled. Larry Walters then cracked the ball to left, and the fielder, Rick Klupchak took off to the fence, reached over as far as he could and snagged the ball, taking the homer away from Walters.

The other misfire came in the seventh. Staggs, alive when the catcher dropped a foul pop, doubled to left, and took third on a wild pitch. Eason flew out to center, and Staggs headed home after the catch. He slid in, but Bob Whelen's throw from center was right on the money, allowing the catcher to just put the tag on Staggs.

East Carolina also had threats in the first and sixth innings with out scoring. Mike Bradshaw opened the game with a walk and moved up on Eason's single, but with two away, the Bucs went down without scoring. In the sixth, Toms singled and runner Lin Spears took second on a wild pitch but died there.

Dartmouth didn't threaten until the final three innings, when they actually did push over two runs. But then, East Carolina had gained the lead, 2-0.

The Bucs' first runs came in the fifth. Toms led off with a drag bunt single, and Spears came on to run for him. He was sacrificed to second by Bradshaw, and scored when Narron singled to right. Narron moved to second on the throw-in, and Staggs walked. Eason hit into a fielder's choice, moving Narron to third, but nailing Staggs. Walters then singled to drive in Narron with the second run.

Dartmouth came up with one in the seventh. With two away, Todd Tyler became the first man walked by Toms this year. Larry Habegger got a single to left, and Todd Keiller singled to right, loading the bases. Tim McDonough then singled up the middle, scoring Tyler with the first Green run. Narron finally got the side out by making a fine running catch in right on Mike Draznik's drive to half the scoring.

After a threat due to a hit batter and a single in the eighth, Dartmouth came up with a run in the ninth. Habegger singled to open the inning and Keiller was safe on an error. McDonough grounded out but advanced both runners. Draznik then singled to center, scoring Habegger, but Godwin came in then to fan the next batter and get the next to a popper.

The Pirates had scored what turned out to be the winning run in the eighth. Walters reached when his grounder to short was overthrown at first, allowing him to move on to second. He moved to third on a ground-out, and scored when Jeff Beaton reached on an infield grounder, giving the Bucs a 3-1 lead at that time.

The Pirates, now 7-1 on the year have eight days off before playing host to Virginia Military Institute in a Southern Conference doubleheader Saturday.

Pirate Ladies Bow In Tourney

QUEENS, N.Y.—The East Carolina women's basketball team was knocked out of the Women's Intercollegiate National Basketball Tournament Friday evening, bowing to Kansas State, 47-46.

The loss was the second in the tournament for ECU lassies, who earlier bowed to Western Washington in the first round, knocking them into the consolation bracket. Had they beaten Kansas State, they would have made the consolation finals and played for fifth place in the tournament.

Kansas State jumped into an early lead, holding an 11-4 edge late in the period, and a 15-5 margin at the horn. Poor shooting and turnovers hurt the East Carolina team during these early moments.

In the second quarter, they continued to pull away, building up as much as a 17-point lead. East Carolina fought back, however, cutting it to 30-19 at half-time.

In the third quarter, they continued their comeback, trimming the lead to 38-35 as the final period began. In that, they continued to inch back, and finally gained a 45-44 lead with about a minute left. But continued turnovers hurt them, as Kansas State got a free throw and a basket during the final 30 seconds to gain the close victory.

The loss ended the year for the girls with a 19-2 record.

Rampants Hold Off Williamston Rally

By CHIP LAMBETH
Reflector Sports Writer

Rose High's Stanley Cobb threw five innings of no-hit ball at the Williamston Tigers Friday but was relieved in the sixth and Williamston rebounded off Cobb's absence to put a scare into the Rampants. Rose hung on for their third straight win in four starts, 4-3.

Rose had sped out to a 3-0 lead in the first inning and added what proved to be the winning run in the fourth. Cobb held the Tigers in check allowing only two runners to each base until the fourth when Williamston finally broke through to the board. That run was aided by an error and three walks. Lee Cherry came on in the sixth and put them down in order but the Tigers rallied for a pair of runs in the seventh to cause the Rampants to get a little worried. A ground out ended the game and gave Cobb the win, his second of the year.

Cobb, in the five frames he pitched, fanned eight, walked five and did not see but two balls leave the infield, one a hit. Cherry struck out two and walked one but gave up the other three Williamston hits.

Tiger Mike Bundy went the distance for Williamston but did not have too good an afternoon as he struck out only one Rampant and scattered eight hits, one a triple by Mike Wallace. He also balked once which led to the fourth Rose score.

After setting the first three Tigers down, the Rampants went to work and put up three runs in the first inning. Al Heath led off by reaching safely when his grounder was bobbled by the shortstop. Robert Brinkley followed that with an infield hit as did John Barwick to load the bases.

Cobb helped himself out with a Texas league single to center that scored Heath with the first run. With the bases still full, Jerry Griffin lofted a sacrifice fly to center bringing in Brinkley and Barwick scored on a single by Ron Hunt.

Rose threatened to score again in the second as Wallace opened the frame with a long blast over the right fielder's head. When the dust had cleared, Wallace was brushing himself off at third base. The next batter grounded out. Brinkley tried to follow up Wallace's hit with another to the same place but the long fly hung up just a little too long and it was caught for the out. Wallace tried to score but was nailed on a fine throw.

The first Tiger reached in the third as Hubert Smith walked and Bundy did also. Neither runner could move.

Williamston did move the men around in the next inning, however. Dwight Ange was safe on an error and walks to Keith Brown and Joe Roberson loaded the bases. Cobb fanned the next two batters but gave out another walk to Berwyn Barnhill, to force in Ange.

Rose matched it in the bottom of the frame. Greg Chapman slapped a one-out single and John Causey followed with another hit. Bundy's walk moved both up and Chapman scored on Wallace's ground out.

Mike Weaver got the only hit off Cobb in the fifth. He was thrown out at second, but Ange reached safely on a fielder's choice. Brown moved up on an error after Ange stole second but both runners died there.

Rose loaded the bases with none out in the sixth but Bundy got out of the jam unscathed. Dickie Johnson singled over the third baseman's head. He moved to second as Hunt reached on an error. Another error allowed T. J. Payne to get on. Johnson was picked off at third and a strike-out and a ground-out ended the frame without a score.

Then the Tigers got a rally going and came up with a pair of runs before the rally was put down. Phil Selby walked and moved to third on Weaver's double to left. Ange grounded out for the second out of the inning but Brown looped a hit into left that scored both Weaver and Selby. Brown was left at first as another grounder was turned into the final out of the game.

Only Weaver had two hits.

Ange had a pair of stolen bases and Brown had one.

Rose gets a long rest until

Conley Downs Eastern Wayne

HOLLYWOOD—D. H. Conley won his third straight game of the season Friday as they edged Eastern Wayne, 4-2.

The Vikings are now 3-0 and are sitting in a top spot in the Eastern Carolina Conference.

The Warriors scored first but Conley doubled it as Eastern Wayne pushed over one in the second. The game was tied 2-2 in the top of the third but the Vikings struck for two in the bottom of the frame to get the win.

Bobby Price opened the Warrior second with a walk and moved to second on a single to right by Roger Sutton. Both moved up on an out and Keith Rhodes was hit by a pitch to load the bases. Alfred Rowe singled to drive in Price.

Conley countered with two in the bottom of the inning. Bobby Bryant walked and Eugene Forrest got a hit back through the box. Vic Corey singled to center to score Bryant. The throw from center in an attempt to get Forrest in third was wide and Forrest came over with the go-ahead run.

Eastern Wayne tied it up 2-2 in the third. Kam Kough blasted a triple to right and was sacrificed in by Price.

The winner came over for Conley in the last of the frame. Willie Streeter singled to left but was thrown out stealing and Clennel Streeter struck out.

With two down, Randy Adams singled and Cleve Averette walked. Both runners stole up and scored as Bryant's grounder to short was errored.

For Eastern Wayne, Rowe and Sutton had two hits each. Adams led the Viking with two.

Kansas City Pair Hurls No-Hit Win; Says It Came Too Early

By BRUCE LOWITT
Associated Press Sports Writer

"I'd rather have this happen on April 23 when it counts," said Kansas City rookie Steve Busby. "I was thinking about the law of averages. Sometimes you follow a guy who's throwing a no-hitter and everything breaks loose," added another rookie, Doug Bird.

Their comments followed their combined no-hitter Friday, a 4-1 exhibition baseball victory over the Detroit Tigers.

It was the first time the Tigers had been held hitless since Joe Horlen of the Chicago White Sox did it in September of 1967.

Bird yielded the lone Detroit run in the seventh as Norm Cash walked and pinch runner Joe Stator came around on a stolen base, passed ball and infield grounder.

The three Cruz brothers—Jose, Hector and Cirilo—started in the outfield and led St. Louis over the New York Mets 9-2. The trio got five of the Cardinals' 12 hits, Cirilo slamming a triple in the five-run seventh that locked up the victory for Bob Gibson.

In other games, the Cincinnati Reds nipped the Los Angeles Dodgers 3-2, the Atlanta Braves topped the Philadelphia Phillies 5-4, the Houston Astros slipped past the Minnesota Twins 4-3, the Cleveland Indians tripped the Chicago Cubs 2-1, the Boston Red Sox downed the Chicago White Sox 7-6 in 10 innings, the Oakland A's beat the Milwaukee Brewers 4-3, the San Francisco Giants belted the California Angels 6-1, the Montreal Expos tamed the Baltimore Orioles 2-1, the Cubs downed the Brewers 4-1 in a 'B' squad contest and the New York Yankees nipped the Texas Rangers 3-2 in 16 innings.

White Sox outfielder Carlos May suffered a pulled hamstring muscle in his right leg as Chicago defeated Boston 7-6 in 10 innings. He is expected to be sidelined 2-3 weeks.

Joe Pepitone drove in three runs with a pair of homers in the Cubs' 'B' victory over the Brewers. Ferguson Jenkins worked seven innings for the Cubs, yielding five singles and one run.

Greene Central Rips S. Wayne

DUDLEY — Greene Central High School rolled to an 11-3 victory over Southern Wayne High School here Friday, claiming their fourth win in five starts.

For the Rams, it was also their second Eastern Carolina Conference win after one loss.

The Rams broke the game wide open in the second inning, pushing over eight runs. Jerry Carraway led off with a single and William Brown was safe on an error. Jeff Letchworth walked and Phil Harrison reached on catcher interference, forcing in Carraway. Dail Pridgen reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Brown, and Donnie Blizzard singled to drive in Letchworth. An error on the relay allowed Harrison to score too. Bobby Supel kept it going with a walk and Stevie Williamson reached on another fielder's choice, scoring Pridgen. Another error on the play let Blizzard come around.

Brown, back up again, singled in both Supel and Williamson for the 8-0 lead.

After Southern Wayne had scored a run in the third and two more in the fourth, the Rams came back with two more in the fifth. Brown singled and moved up on an out. Harrison walked and Pridgen reached on fielder's choice, scoring Brown. Blizzard then singled to drive in Harrison.

In the seventh, the Rams added one more. Joe Heath walked and Woods singled. An out scored Heath with the 11th Greene Central run.

Blizzard and Brown led the hitting with two each, while Greg Carroll had two for Southern.

The Rams entertain North Pitt on Tuesday.

ON THE ATTACK — Vicki Davenport, a freshman at East Carolina, and a member of the ECU Karate Club, launches a kick at an opponent during the Mid-East Championships held in Richmond, Va., last week. A white belt winner, she will be among several who will carry the ECU banner to the Southeast Championships in April.

Karate Club Is Set For Tourney

The East Carolina University Karate Club will travel to Atlanta, Ga., on April 28, to compete in the 1973 South East United States Championships. The club earned the right to compete by winning the state championship in the fall, and the Mid-East championships in Richmond, Va., last weekend. So far this school year, the ECU club, assisted by the Greenville Recreation Karate Club which includes pee-wees and juniors, has won over 100 trophies. Bill McDonald, head instructor for both clubs, praised the work on his assistants Vikki Morrow and Charles June. He also singled out one of his beginning women students, Vicki Davenport, an East Carolina freshman, who has entered two tournaments, winning first place in both of them. He also praised Donna Edwards, a green belt in the recreation club, who has also been a consistent winner.

"We hope to finish the year by winning the Southeast championships, and we have a good chance to set a record in the number of total trophies won in a year," McDonald said.

West Reaches 6,000th Assist

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
The shooting of Jim McMillian and Gail Goodrich and the rebounding of Wilt Chamberlain led the Los Angeles Lakers to a 121-101 National Basketball Association victory over the Buffalo Braves Friday night but Jerry West made his presence felt in another way. West reached the 6,000 plateau in career assists when he passed off for his seventh early in the fourth period. That placed him fifth on the all-time list.

The triumph gave the Lakers a record of 58-21, one game better than Milwaukee's 57-22, in the race for the second best record in the NBA.

McMillian scored 22 points, Goodrich added 21 and Chamberlain hauled down 24 rebounds and scored 19 points as the Lakers broke away from a four-point halftime edge to lead 94-76 after three quarters. The Braves were paced by John Hummer with 20 points.

Elsewhere, Boston whipped Atlanta 124-108, Houston downed Philadelphia 132-112, Baltimore edged Cleveland 106-104, Phoenix nipped Golden State 125-124 and Portland beat Seattle 118-112.

In the American Basketball Association, it was Kentucky 115, New York 91; San Diego 104, Virginia 92; Denver 101, Indiana 92.

Jo Jo White scored 12 of his 21 points in the third period to spark slow-starting Boston over crippled Atlanta. The Celtics ran off the last 10 points in the third quarter and the first four of the final stanza to take an 89-79 lead.

Rudy Tomjanovich paced a balanced Houston attack with 28 points as the Rockets sent Philadelphia to its 12th loss in a row.

Wes Unseld's jumper from the foul line with three seconds left gave Baltimore its triumph over Cleveland and the Bullets clinched the Central Division title.

Baltimore trailed 74-67 with 2:06 left in the third quarter when Coach Gene Shue was hit with two technical fouls and ejected from the game.

UNC, Terps In Lead Tie

GREENSBORO, N. C. (AP)—North Carolina and Maryland, the only schools that have won the Carmichael Cup for overall sports achievement in the Atlantic Coast Conference, are tied for the lead in this school year's competition.

The Tar Heels and the Terps have 44 points in fall and winter sports, while North Carolina State is next with 38 points. Duke has 37, Virginia 25½, Clemson 22 and Wake Forest 8½.

North Carolina, winner the last two years, has won the cup four times in all, while Maryland has won it seven times.

Maryland won three titles decided since last fall — cross country, wrestling and indoor track. North Carolina has captured fencing and football honors. N. C. State topped basketball and swimming and Clemson won in soccer.

Spring sports still to be contested are baseball, outdoor track, golf, tennis and lacrosse.

Wildlife Afield: Muskies Back

By JIM DEAN
Muskies In Your Future?
A muskellunge could be in your future. Muskies, as you probably know, are those big, mean cousins of chain pickerel and northern pike that are more commonly found in the north. They grow to more than 70 pounds, but little ones from 10-30 pounds are more common. Although muskies are native to the Little Tennessee and French Broad River watersheds in North Carolina, very few are ever caught. Biologists for the Division of Inland Fisheries of the North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission are hoping to change that. Already, some 3,000 muskies have been stocked in the French Broad, Hiwassee and Little Tennessee Rivers in an effort to bring this magnificent fish back in North Carolina. "We're trying to provide a good trophy sport fish in the western part of the state," Bill Bonner told me recently. "We don't expect to be able to provide a lot of fish ever because they're hard to catch. But if we can get a good population established, anglers should be able to fish for these real trophies again." Recently, Rex Gary Schmidt and I traveled to the Wildlife Commission's fish hatchery near Marion where a program is underway to find a way for North Carolina to grow its own muskie brook stock. If it's successful — and indications are that it will be — we won't have to depend upon other states for muskies to stock. Although limited stocking has been underway for about three years, the effort is really just getting underway. In May, 1970, 37 muskies ranging from about six to 11 inches long were placed in one of the ponds at the Marion Hatchery. The idea was to let them grow to breeding size, then drain the pond, get them out, and strip them of their eggs. During mid-March, the pond was drained and the muskies were taken out. "We didn't have any idea how many we might find, if any," said Bill Wakefield at the hatchery. "Most of the guesses were for less than a dozen." When Rex and I watched the capture recovery ratio. They ranged in weight

Guge and Jerry Hodge have put in many long hours trying to establish a brood stock for future populations. "I think they should do reasonably well in some of our lakes and rivers, but we won't know for a while," said Bonner. "In the meantime, we're limiting our stocking to a few areas until we find out how they're doing. They're hard to raise, and we don't want to waste any." The strain of muskie being stocked is the same Ohio subspecies that is native to the western rivers in North Carolina. There is no listing for a state record on muskies, but there are rumors of many large fish caught years ago.

One of the most interesting concerns a 43-pound muskie reportedly caught in the Little Tennessee River near Franklin way back in 1918. Water pollution probably caused the decline of the native muskie population in this century, but now that many of these rivers are being cleaned up, the muskies may come back. They will if the Wildlife Commission's program is a success. And someday while you're fishing for smallmouth bass or catfish back up in the mountains on some lake or river, you may hook into a fish that could smash your tackle and leave you wondering if the Lock Ness Monster hasn't been imported from Scotland.

Rotary Outboard Motor Appearing

By JACK WOLISTON
NEW YORK (UPI) — "Reported to be the most powerful outboards ever built!" That's the way Outboard Marine Corp. describes the new rotary combustion (RC) outboard motor sometimes known as the "Wankel," now being produced by its Johnson and Evinrude outlets.

balance each other with no counterweights needed. Combustion power impulses applied to continuously moving rotors are stretches out over many degrees of crankshaft rotation, instead of being confined to a relatively few degrees, as in the standard reciprocating piston engine. This results in an inherently smooth flow of power through the eccentric to the shaft.

OMC signed license agreements with Curtiss-Wright and NSU-Wankel in 1966 to develop, manufacture and sell RC engines, thus becoming the first U.S. engine manufacturer to be a Wankel engine licensee.

When Rex and I watched the capture of these fish, a whopping twenty muskies were recaptured — a remarkable recovery ratio. They ranged in weight up to over eight-and-a-half pounds and over 30 inches long. That's how fast these babies grow. Actually, although the fish are already quite large, it may take another year before they are mature enough to produce ripe eggs. It usually takes about three years for a muskie to reach legal size — which is 26 inches long — and even then, they're still immature. The biologists and men at both Marion and Tablerock hatcheries have put in a lot of work to get the program going. Biologists Ron Klauda and Bill Bonner, along with Bill Wakefield, Leroy Beck, Fletcher Men-women age 18 and over. Prepare now for U. S. Civil Service exams for job openings during the next 12 months.

Government positions pay high starting salaries. They provide greater security than private employment and opportunity for advancement. Many positions require little or no specialized education or experience.

But to get one of these jobs, you frequently must pass a test. The competition is keen.

Lincoln Service has helped many people prepare for these tests every year since 1948. It is one of the largest and oldest privately owned schools of its kind and is not connected with the Government.

For FREE information on Government jobs, including list of positions and salaries, fill out coupon and mail at once TODAY.

MOSQUITOES — The familiar mosquito occurs by the millions in wet areas. Eggs are laid just above the water's surface on vegetation and soil. As new rains increase the water level the eggs are 'picked up' by the water and begin incubation, soon to hatch as larvae. Wave action endangers the eggs, and for this reason most mosquitoes prefer small quiet water bodies for egg-laying. An old tin can or a cattle hoof print filled with water can produce thousands of mosquitoes.

ECU

A little rain, . . . a little sunshine, and Doug Caldwell makes East Carolina University's campus green. Though overshadowed by many campus buildings, the landscape of Caldwell's lush greenery is based upon a unique philosophy.

With 120 tons of fertilizer and three or four tons of grass seed per year, Superintendent of Grounds Milfred Douglas Caldwell tries to keep the approximately 325 acres of this wonderland green. Caldwell, holder of a degree in botany-oriented biology from the University of North Carolina, takes a deep interest in campus plants. The result can be seen each Spring as flowering cherry trees set off the rarity of such trees as the Italian cypress, Japanese persimmon, and a unusual weeping variety of the Dahoon holly. Among the many unique trees on the grounds is a core oak which Caldwell believes to be the only one in North Carolina.

"They said it was impossible for it to grow in this climate," Caldwell said. But it does.

The landscaping on the ECU campus is not generally in any formal arrangement, says James Lowery, director of physical plant, who has the two-fold job of being co-ordinator for major improvement and maintenance of the university's physical features. With the exception of the area around the Croatan soda shop and a few other places such as the campus fountain, trees are allowed all the freedom of an open woodland. When a tree dies, a sapling is planted in its place. Emphasis is placed on variety and not on the placement of the trees on campus.

In view of this "different" campus, William B. Whitehurst, Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds, said that in the four years Caldwell has been at ECU, the appearance of the grounds has greatly improved.

"I have been at this campus off and on for 37 years, and it never looked better than it does right now," Whitehurst said.

Caldwell works a force of 33 men, the largest maintenance group on campus. Nine men work from March to October cutting the grass on campus and two men pick up trash for 40 hours a week every week. (Caldwell said the litter problem is not quite as bad this year, though it remains the greatest problem to his department.) The rest of his crew is employed in related tasks—from greenhouse tending to raking leaves.

Caldwell said that his only trouble with his manpower lies in the fact that he is undermanned in the summer and overmanned in the winter. (His men are often assigned other maintenance jobs in the winter.)

grassless. Caldwell said that he had had more than one anxious moment because of the spots on campus where grass seems to refuse to grow. These "naked spots" are in areas where there is not enough light and where there is considerable student traffic.

"I think if I could build a fence 10 feet high and electrify it and dare my men to walk out there without a bucket of grass and fertilizer, the grass just might grow," he laughed. But he understands why a student, who has to walk a long distance to get to class would take a short cut across the grass.

Caldwell said that right now he is working on transplanting large amounts of living grass to these grassless spots. Once a permanent grass bed is established, there would be a foundation to work on, and could begin building a turf. Though the project is in its early stages and it will require a large amount of work, it shows some sign of promise.

Future landscaping projects include a formal floral design depicting the letters ECU on College Hill Drive. New building development between 8th and 9th Streets will probably follow the "informal" landscape plan of most other campus areas. Efforts are being made to preserve the old trees on the site including some large trees which are actually on building sites. A large field beside the Allied Health Building is to be used "temporarily" for a golf driving range. The fence encircling Ficklen Stadium is to become covered with ivy within a few years.

Caldwell confesses that his personal goal is to cover the campus with flowers which will provide bloom the year round. He is pleased with his crop of summer flowers but would like to increase the varieties to add more color to the university.

"We have some of the prettiest azaleas you'll find anywhere," he said.

Reflecting back upon the changes which have already taken place, Whitehurst remembers the draining of the lake behind Graham Building and how one of the original teachers of the school, Sally Ann Davis, helped establish what is now an arboretum on that location. The arboretum, a place where trees and shrubs are grown for display and study contain many of the rare plants on campus along with towering trees which are over two hundred years old.

"Every campus needs an area which is free from the concrete of sidewalks and buildings," Whitehurst said.

Some expensive dwarf hemlock plants were recently donated to the University, but Caldwell is not quite ready to plant them. He said that he had not thought about where he would plant the dwarf hemlock, but any vacant spot would do. The emphasis is on the plant and not the place, as far as Caldwell is concerned. And so it is on a campus where the plants live apart from symmetry.

Singly and in groups, the students stroll into the lounge of the high-rise residence hall. As the last of 25 young men settles comfortably into an armchair, the professor starts the class.

The unconventional and informal class is part of a Living and Learning Program at North Carolina State University. Started in 1967 in a small residence hall for men, its concepts are exploding into residence life across the campus.

The expanded living and learning program offers students new choices of living styles, integration of academic and cultural experiences, a more real-life approach to university life, and closer contact between student and teacher.

The program began with a close-knit, informal residence and classroom setting designed to assist entering freshmen bridge the gap between home and a large university. Its 280 participants have almost unanimously expressed approval of the program.

Fred Brown, son of William B. Brown, an NCSU alumnus and a native of Chapel Hill, came to NCSU this fall from Towson, Md. He is a freshman in electrical engineering and a resident of the Living and Learning Program in Bowen Hall where Duty Greene is counselor.

"I really like it," he said. "Here, you get to know more people because you live in a smaller group. And," he added, "I like cluster classes because we know the other students in class and we have a lot in common."

Cluster classes may meet in the residence or in a regular classroom, but they are all informal and open first to members of the Living and Learning Program.

Jerry Miller, a pre-dental freshman, says he is much in favor of the living and learning concept. The son of Mr. and Mrs. G. G. Miller of Rt. 1, Lexington, he feels the experience is helping him to adapt better both academically and socially.

The Bowen class is offered by the Division of University Studies to teach students about the impact of technology on the American middle class. Also enrolled is Glenn Woolard, a freshman in recreation and park administration. The son of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Woolard, Rt. 4, Washington. He transferred from another dormitory where "I didn't know the guys next door or across the hall. Here I have someone I can talk to about my courses," he said.

Randy Hopper, a forestry freshman, son of Mr. and Mrs. H.H. Hopper, Rt. 4, Marion, feels the Living and Learning Program is especially valuable for freshmen. "We make friends faster than other freshmen, and we have someone to talk to about our common problems," he states.

In addition to the freshmen living in Bowen, each Living and Learning suite or hall has a student advisor who is responsible for assisting when help is needed.

Ralph Tucker, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Tucker, Rt. 9, Greenville, is a student advisor in Bowen. A junior in agricultural economics, he tutors students in his field and provides support and counseling in other areas as well.

James J. Ross, director of student development and residence life at NCSU, has worked in similar programs at other universities. When he came to NCSU last spring, he brought some new ideas with him.

He said the Living and learning concepts are being expanded with courses related to student interests, taught in other residence halls. Dr. Al Carnesale, head of the Division of University Studies and a member of the SALT disarmament team, is teaching a course on the SALT talks to women in Carroll Hall, a sister dorm to Bowen.

Other courses offered in residence halls include laboratory sections of "Special Topics in Leadership," "Principles of Psychology," and "The Psychology of Death."

Ross speaks of future plans to develop academic living and learning programs, and about new staff training courses to be offered through the School of Education.

"We are trying to develop alternative living styles using the living and learning approach to pave the way for the kinds of living situations a student encounters beyond the University," Ross said.

Next fall he hopes to institute an intensive freshmen living and learning experience on the east campus.

Some 60 students in liberal arts, education and agriculture and life sciences would be paired and housed among students in three halls: Berry, Becton and Bagwell. Now all-male residences, Berry will become coeducational; Bagwell will be an upper-class women's residence; and Becton will remain a male domain.

The present coed residence in Lee Hall, with men and women occupying different floors of the same building, has proved highly successful, Ross points out.

In another male residence cluster, Welch is planned for women and Syme and Gold will remain men's halls.

Added to changes in living styles, resident life programs include coffee hours with speakers from the faculty, University administration and from the fields of law, politics and medicine.

Students are also offered film series which tie in with academic studies; special tutorial sessions by faculty; and drug training in all residence halls. Future courses are planned specifically for women's needs and interests.

Answering needs for more social contracts, more realistic living styles and more course relevance, the Living and Learning program also provides more incentives toward higher academic achievement.

Belly-Dancing, Square-Dancing Body Improvement Exercises

"Cardiovascular disease is the No. 1 killer in Pitt County, and overweight men in their 30's, 40's and 50's—like myself—are the most likely victims," says Dr. Robert May, director of the Pitt County Community Health Department.

Dr. May has expressed his concern in two ways: He's organized a "belly-dancing" class which meets at the Community Health Department each Wednesday at 7 p.m. and he's been a faithful member of the class himself.

The class has participants of every age group—men, women, and children. Most need to reduce the amount of fat on their bodies and all need to improve muscle tone and circulation and use of oxygen, Dr. May says.

Mrs. Sybil Liquori is an example of someone who doesn't really need to reduce. She has maintained her ideal weight for several years, but says before she started attending this class she was flabby. "I lost 60 pounds while I was in college," she said, "and I never did firm up after that. I'm doing it now, though. I can see a lot of improvement since I've been coming here."

Most of the class members are women and this concerns Dr. May. "We have to put paper bibs on some of the women for them to act as male dancing partners," he said. "This is unfortunate, especially when we know there are so many men in the county who need what we're doing so badly. There should be more couples like Mr. and Mrs. L. Z. Elks of Bell Arthur. They're here together nearly every week."

For anyone who's frightened off by the name—there's been no belly-dancing so far. It's square dancing and pole dancing that brings most of the members back week after week.

"I wouldn't miss it for anything," says Mrs. Irene Gurganus. "We just have a good time."

REAL House volunteer, Dudley Culp, does the calling for the square dancing and also the instructing. It's all for fun and exercise, so new members are welcomed and any missteps are part of the fun.

Two class members, usually Culp and someone else, hold bamboo poles and click them twice on the floor, twice together over and over in rhythm for those who will try the Filipino dance.

Perhaps the most skillful member of the class, not counting Culp himself, is Walter Gurganus. Others are more likely to have ankles tapped when they get out of step, but again it's all in fun.

The shaping-up program is based on three tenets: improved eating habits, daily exercise at home, and group dancing weekly.

During the first few minutes of each meeting, the group talks about how each has done on his dieting during the previous week. Like most such sessions, formal or informal, there's a lot of confessing and perhaps a little excused bragging thrown in, and lots of resolving to do better this week."

The weight reduction regimen recommended by the health department is one of substituting healthy low-calorie foods for ones high in calories. A high-protein, low saturated fat, low-carbohydrate diet is the most healthful, Dr. May feels.

Daily exercising at home is recommended. The Canadian Air Force Exercise Plan is used, with each person advancing to higher levels at his own rate.

The dancing serves two purposes—it's strenuous exercise which, done regularly, will increase the body's efficiency at using oxygen, and it's fun. Fun—relaxing and laughing and enjoying oneself is an important factor in improving one's physical condition, as well as increasing mental well-being, Dr. May says.

The idea of a county health department's sponsoring a dance-diet-exercise group is apparently original with Dr. May. The enthusiasm of the regulars attests to its effectiveness. Now the goal is to extend it to more of the Pitt County people who need it, Dr. May says.

Ceramic Tile Is Spanish Flavor Enhances One-Story Easy-To-Clean Kitchen Floor

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

The new decorative look of ceramic tile is making it even more popular as an easy-care surface in the kitchen.

Whereas one might have hesitated before to use a high-style, solid-color ceramic tile all over the kitchen, fearing one's interest in the color would wane, the emphasis in tiles is on timeless go-with-anything patterns and textures. Such backgrounds can be used with strong colors, other patterns and shapes as accents.

In an informal built-in breakfast nook, two popular decorative looks, cane and bamboo, were combined in tiles to provide a handsome appearance. And both these patterns might be used with solid colors. Banquettes and the area below the chairs were done in the cane motif, while the wall area above was done in bamboo tile. The bamboo design also was used for the permanent pedestal floor to a table's tile-surfaced top of a plain color.

The cane or bamboo pattern in gold and white makes it compatible with other colors one might want to use in kitchen appliances or accessories.

Other patterns intended for use over large areas include herringbone, plaids and even a houndstooth check which can provide similar advantages. Some geometrics in circles, arcs, stripes or cubes also achieve timeless decorating, providing the background colors are adaptable.

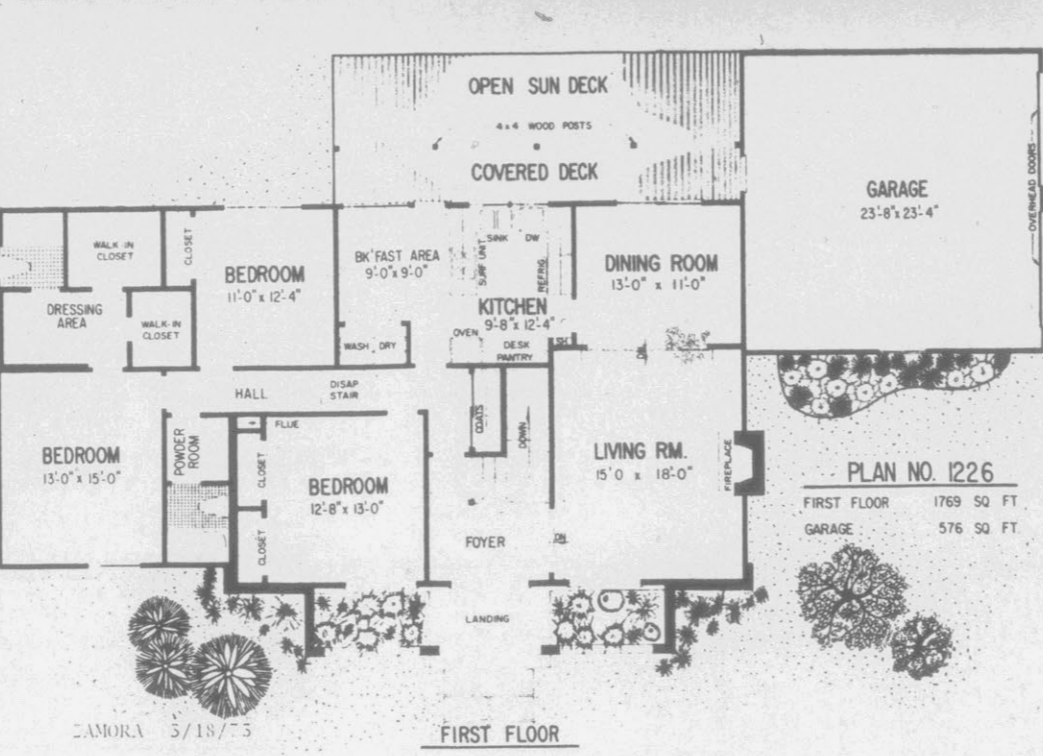

Heavy-duty tiles, the quarry kind, are used more on floors as Americans become world travelers and see such rugged tiles in European homes. Some shapes have been inspired by old Moorish designs, villas in Florence and houses in Normandy. The natural quarry go-with-almost anything color range includes a near white to a bluegrass green, and rich deep terra cottas and brown and those from tan to gold.

New textures, designs and colors available in tiles makes it possible to be versatile in the use of tile styles, using different shapes and patterns of tiles on floors, walls, tables.

A SPANISH FLAVOR — The Zamora, designed by Associated House Plans, is a one-story accented by Spanish lines. This is a spacious ranch that has 3 bedrooms, two baths, a sunken living room with wood-burning fireplace, formal dining room, modern kitchen with breakfast area, large foyer, unfinished basement and double garage.

By GERRY BISHOP

Three tall Roman arches enhance the Spanish flavor of the Zamora, a spacious one-story designed by Associated House Plans.

The arches are cut into a brick wall that supports a covered landing at the main entrance. It is flanked by planters.

A dramatic lighting fixture hangs from the roof over the landing. Exposed beams in the roof add to the Spanish mood.

The arches emphasize the front door and the front windows of a bedroom and the living room.

Another distinguishing touch is the grillwork of wood spindles at windows in each wing flanking the main section.

Brick is used on the facade, and board and batten wood siding is specified for the remaining exterior walls. They could be stained, painted or allowed to weather.

Double front doors lead into a large foyer. It has a coat closet and stairs to the unfinished basement.

The rest of the floor plan including three bedrooms, two baths, a sunken living room, dining room, modern kitchen with breakfast area, a partially covered sun deck and a double garage.

Immediately to the right of the foyer is the living room. It has a fireplace and fine dimensions — 15 by 18. A window provides a view of the front yard.

The living room adjoins the dining room which is formal and connects with the outdoor deck through sliding glass doors. The roof overhang shades part of the deck which is set off by wood posts. The rest of the deck is open to sunshine.

The kitchen is convenient to the dining room and connects with the deck where meals could be taken in good weather. Appliances are arranged in a U. A double sink is located under a window over-looking the backyard. There also is a built-in surface range, refrigerator, dishwasher, trash-masher and garbage disposer.

A built-in oven, desk, pantry, and closet for a washer and dryer complete the arrangement.

The breakfast area is nine feet square. It would be an ideal place for formal dining.

The sleeping quarters comprise an entire wing. The master suite is especially attractive. It has a compartmented bath and dressing room with twin vanities and two walk-in closets. The bedroom dimensions are 15 by 13.

The other two bedrooms — one in the front, another at the back — have good dimensions, too. Each has lots of closet space and they are just a step away from the main bath.

The hall in the bedroom wing has a disappearing stairway to the attic which can be used for storage.

The Zamora contains 1,769 square feet and the garage has 576 square feet.

Whatever kind of finishing or refinishing project you undertake, the sanding portion of it plays an important role in the quality of the result.

Unless the surface is completely smooth before the finishing material is applied, the appearance of the completed job will suffer. Paint will hide some minor irregularities, but even the tiniest scratch will show up — and sometimes be magnified — when varnish, lacquer, shellac or any clear finish is used.

The portable electric finishing sander is the tool most widely used when an especially smooth finish is desired. It is the power equivalent of the hand sander, which often is merely a piece of sandpaper over a block of wood or other object, but it accomplishes the task more quickly and easily. The motorless vibrator sander handles very light-duty jobs; the belt sander is without a peer for heavy-duty work on large, flat surfaces; and the disc sander is excellent for rough sanding and removing material. The finishing sander is the big choice of the do-it-yourselfer because it does such a good job of leveling the surfaces of wood furniture as well as taking care of most household smoothing chores.

There are several varieties of finishing sanders, the most common of which are the orbital, the straight-line and the dual action. With an orbital sander, the pad to which the abrasive paper is attached moves in tiny, almost imperceptible ovals. The straight-line sander's pad moves back and forth. The dual action sander has both of these movements, but not at the same time. You switch from one action to the other by pushing a little lever or making some other simple adjustment.

For nearly all purposes, the orbital action of a finishing sander is nearly ideal. The straight-line movement is sometimes preferred for the final sanding when an exceptionally high quality of smoothness is desired. The difference between the two is usually so minor that it can be detected only by a practiced eye. With my own dual action sander, purchased some years ago, I use the orbital action for the first and second sandings, then switch to the straight-line movement for the final operation.

No matter what kind of sander you use, the selection of the proper abrasive paper is important. Most of us know that the rougher the paper, the more material that can be removed; the finer the paper, the smoother the finish. But what a newcomer to a power sander may not know is that some types of paper — ordinary flint, for example — do not stand up too well when used with high-power machines. Aluminum oxide is a big favorite for power sanders, but there are many other kinds, so if the labeled paper wrapped around the abrasive sheets doesn't specify its uses, ask your dealer for help.

(The techniques of using varnish, shellac, lacquer, bleach, stain and other finishing materials are explained in Andy Lang's helpful booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," available by sending 30 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y. 11743.)

Here's How To Do It

By ANDY LANG

Q. — I bought a package of toggle bolts recently because I had heard how good they were for hanging things on hollow walls. But no matter how much I try, I can't seem to figure out how they work. I get the bolt into the wall all right, but when I unscrew the bolt, the winged part falls behind the wall. Obviously, I am doing something wrong. What is it?

A. — A toggle bolt operates differently from most other types of hollow wall fasteners. You are using it in the same way; that is, placing it into the wall, then removing the bolt so that you can run it through the hook or other fixture. With a toggle bolt, you must not remove the bolt once it is in place. Therefore, you must place the bolt through the fixture first, then put it into the wall. It's a little tricky at first, so here is the exact procedure: Drill a hole into the wall so that the toggle bolt, with the wings folded, will fit snugly into it. Now unscrew the bolt from the winged part. Run the bolt through the fixture that is to be hung on the wall. With the fixture still attached to the bolt, replace the winged section on the bolt by screwing it into place. At this point, the order is the head of the bolt, the fixture and the wings. Now, and now only, push the folded wings and bolt into the hole in the wall. When the wings pass the solid part of the wall, they will open, up and grip the inside of the wall. Using a screwdriver, turn the slotted head of the bolt in a clockwise direction until the fixture is tightly against the wall. It may sound a little complicated, but after you have done it once, you will be able to repeat the operation in the future without giving it a thought.

Q. — The house we bought has wooden shingles on the side of it. The stain on the shingles has begun to peel and blister in spots. We'd like to do the outside of the house over. Will paint take over the stain after we scrape off the peeling and blistering?

A. — First of all, stain does not peel and blister, so it is likely that someone else painted the shingles. Therefore, you can go ahead with the painting after preparing the surface, which includes scraping and perhaps sanding the rough areas. But before going ahead with the job, it might be a good idea to find out what caused the peeling and blistering. It usually comes from water that gets behind the wall and pushes up the coat of paint. It can be from the outside — rain getting behind the wall — or from the inside, such as excessive moisture emanating from inside the house.

(Thirty-five do-it-yourself repairs are detailed in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," which can be obtained by sending $1 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J. 07666.)

Garden Clinic

(N. C. State University Answers Timely Gardening Questions)

Q. Is there any way I can keep my peach and pear blooms from freezing? (Mrs. J. L., Merry Hill)

A. Yes. Keep the grass cut or have clean well packed moist soil under the tree. Do not work the soil the day prior to expected frost or freeze. There are also blocks about the size of a large brick that can be purchased which will burn about four hours. Under normal conditions (no wind) they will increase the temperature 2-3 degrees. Most folks put two per tree. (Melvin H. Kolbe, extension horticulturist)

Q. Chickweed is crowding out my fescue. What will control it? (M. L., Ramseur)

A. Silvex, However, I would suggest a mixture of silvex and 2,4-D, which is usually sold by garden supply stores as chickweed and clover killer. The mixture enables you to get rid of most winter annual broadleaf weeds. A repeat application may be necessary for creeping charlie, wild garlic and other hard-to-get weeds. (W. M. Lewis, extension agronomist)

Q. Why don't more gardeners raise califlower? (B. G., Williamston)

A. The culture of califlower is somewhat exacting in that (1) the leaves must be tied over the "curd" to prevent browning and (2) fertilization often must include small amounts of boron to prevent split stem and another type of browning of the "curd." (W. W. Reid, extension horticulturist)

CAMPBELL, Calif. (UPI) — This small town can teach large cities a lesson in traffic control. Campbell, population 25,000, has a massive traffic problem at a main intersection caused by San Jose commuters. City officials had mini-computer traffic density and lane usage monitors installed at the intersection to control the stop light. A now-happy William G. Wren, the city's director of public work, said: "We've solved our problem, met our budget limitations and improved our control capability."

Wednesday and Thursday for in-service supervisory training. Attending the two-day course, "Principle of Supervision," were 20 supervisory personnel from municipal police departments, sheriff departments, and the jail departments. Counties represented were Pitt, Halifax, Dare, Nash, Wilson, Bertie, and Brunswick.

The purpose of the 15-hour training course was to give supervisory personnel in law enforcement better insights into role as a supervisor and strengthen them in this role.

Teaching the supervision course was Stu Coward of N. C. State University. The Jail and Detention Services of the State Department of Social Services sponsored the course in cooperation with Pitt Tech.

Persons attending from Pitt County municipal police departments were:

Greenville—John A. Briley, Paul Jewett; Fountain—Hubert Cannon; Ayden—Jimmy M. Evons; Grifton—Jimmie Lewis; Winterville—William E. Whitehurst; and Herman Stocks of the Pitt County Sheriff's Department.

From Halifax County, participants were James R. DeBerry, Frankie D. Griffin, and Neal Harold Griffin of the Roanoke Rapids Police Department, and William Joyner of the Scotland Neck Police Department.

Peanut Growers Meet, Hear Specialists Speak

Approximately 90 farmers attended the annual Pitt County Peanut Growers meeting held Thursday night at Parkers Barbecue.

Speakers for the program and their discussions included:

—Dr. Gene Sullivan, extension agronomy specialist in charge of seed at North Carolina State University, talked to the group about the quality of seeds available this year and also the amount of seed to be used per acre;

—Dr. Harold Coble, extension agronomy specialist in charge of weed control at N. C. State University, talked about the effective use of chemicals to control weeds in peanuts;

—Dr. Marvin Beute, professor of plant pathology at N. C. State University, discussed the new disease "black root rot" that is found in peanuts. He pointed out that not only is the disease a threat to peanut production in North Carolina but has also been detected on soybeans and several varieties of tobacco. At this point, according to Beute, research has not found a preventive measure for control of this disease;

—Astor Perry, extension agronomy specialist in charge of peanuts at N. C. State University, discussed determining the proper maturity dates for maximum yields on peanuts; —Joe Suggs, executive secretary of the North Carolina Peanut Growers Association, discussed the latest information on legislation concerning peanut growers in North Carolina.

Predictions In ESP Conference

STAUNTON, Va. (AP) — April 19 isn't a good day for sailing the Atlantic. Psychic David Hoy, personal consultant to Sonny and Cher, says, "On April 19 one of the largest reported icebergs will be sighted in the North Atlantic."

Hoy was speaking at an ESP Conference held at Mary Baldwin College here. He also forecast that President Nixon will visit Cuba within four months and that neither Spiro Agnew nor Ted Kennedy will be nominated for President in 1976.

Chemical Shot May Save The American Elm

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stately American elm may be saved from the lethal and ubiquitous fungal infection called Dutch elm disease by injecting a chemical called benomyl. Known since 1969, the antifungal chemical has proved to be highly active against the disease. Injection of a sufficient amount to offer protection has not been possible on a large scale with large trees. But two groups of scientists have developed a high pressure injection technique that can introduce 20 gallons of the chemical into large trees in 10 to 30 minutes. The injection technique was developed by E. B. Himelick of the Illinois Natural History Survey in Urbana and Winard K. Hoch and associates of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Shadetree and Ornamental Plants Laboratory in Delaware, Ohio.

The Mecklenburg Declaration, drawn up and signed at the present site of Charlotte, N.C., predated the U.S. Declaration of Independence by a year.

Three Concerts Saluted Brahms

NEW YORK (AP) — A Brahms Festival at the New School offered all the Brahms piano trios and piano quartets within 26 hours — which may be a New York first.

Artists were pianist Ruth Laredo, violinist Alexander Schneider, violist Walter Trampler and cellist Leslie Parnas, who performed the three piano trios, the three piano quartets and sonatas for violin, viola and cello.

The music was done in three concerts, 9 p.m. March 10, 2 p.m. March 11 and 8 p.m. March 11.

Earlier in the week, Miss Laredo gave a recital at Alice Tully Hall and Schneider and Parnas concluded a series of the complete Beethoven Piano Trios with Peter Serkin at the Metropolitan Museum.

Advise Stuffed Animal Gifts

CHICAGO (AP) — Giving baby rabbits, chicks and ducks for Easter is frowned upon by the American Veterinary Medical Assn., which urges parents not to give living animals as toys to children.

A baby rabbit, chick or duck is not likely to survive in the home atmosphere, the association says. A young child's enthusiasm often results in broken wings and legs. If the animal dies or is injured, it is a traumatic experience for the child.

Also, many outdoor animals are carriers of diseases such as salmonellosis, a severe gastrointestinal infection.

Absent Husband's 'Law' Appealed

© 1973 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Maybe you can settle an argument between my husband and me. We've been married for three years and it's the second marriage for both of us.

We have no children to tie us down. Hubby informed me that he was going on a four-day skiing weekend with "the boys." He also laid the law down as to what I may and may not do while he is gone.

1. I may NOT, under any circumstances, get on a plane and go anywhere.

2. I must be home every evening to receive his phone calls. [He says I can't call HIM because he's not sure exactly where this lodge is, and it's difficult to reach.]

Why should I sit home for four days twiddling my thumbs while he is off somewhere skiing with "the boys?" It's not as tho we were 16 when we got married. We're both over 35 and he's had plenty of time to have fun with his friends.

This is going to end in a showdown to see just how obedient and well-trained he's got me. How should I handle this!

BETTY

DEAR BETTY: Tell hubby that you aren't making any promises, but if you should decide to go somewhere you'll be happy to call HIM if he lets you know where he can be reached. And if he calls and you aren't home he shouldn't think you dropped dead because there is still plenty of life in you!

DEAR ABBY: My husband and his partner hired a very pretty young girl to work in their office. She was there for only 60 days when they gave her a clock-radio for her birthday. Thirty days later they gave her $100 for Christmas.

Don't you think they went overboard for the length of time she was there?

RALEIGH, N. C.

DEAR RALEIGH: Maybe she put in overtime.

DEAR ABBY: I read the item written by a California physician in which he put down [in diary form] the thoughts of a woman who had taken her elderly father into her home to live with her. The problems she had with him are well-known to all who have shared their home with an elderly parent.

This doctor [a man] wrote a most compelling piece on why a WOMAN should "repay" her senile father's love and care by looking after him in his declining years.

Note, please, that the MAN doesn't have to do anything. He only argues eloquently why his wife, or sister, or mother should do it. The man isn't around the house all day to "diaper" Daddy, decipher his babbling, clean up his messes and endure the ordeal. But he suggests that a properly grateful and respectful WOMAN should. Big deal!

I am not a women's libber. I am a MAN. But I just wanted to point out something you might have missed.

ROBERT L.

DEAR MR. L.: You're right. I missed it. You have a point. And a good one. Thank you for writing.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "WONDERING IN DENVER": If a man will cheat WITH you, he will probably cheat ON you. And after years of practice, he should know all the tricks.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L. A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

For Abby's new booklet, "What Teen-Agers Want to Know," send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069.

Mrs. McIver conducted the business session and a slate of officers was presented. Volunteers were asked for the cleanup duty at the cemetery.

Parents Are The Real Culprits

KIRKBY, England (WNS) —

School officials who investigated school absenteeism here reported that one student in three is absent at least one day each week. But fewer than 10 per cent of the absentees missed because of illness. "Sleepy parents who don't get their children to school are the real culprits," said education officer Peter Neafsey. "Next are working parents who keep the youngsters at home to answer the doorbell when the TV repair man or the plumber comes to call."

Add a little grated cheddar cheese and minced parsley to mashed potatoes for a welcome change.

Herb Gardens Thrive In Sunny Window

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Food Editor
NEW YORK (UPI)—Even if you never use fresh herbs in cooking, their fragrance and beauty are reward enough for growing them indoors.

Basil, rosemary, thyme, chives, lemon balm and oregano are among the herbs that thrive indoors in a sunny window—preferably one that gets seven or eight hours of sun daily. Given enough humidity, they can winter over, although they grow more slowly during the cold months than in the summer.

Unless you use an electric humidifier, keep the herb pots on a layer of pebbles in a tray filled with water to the top of the pebbles.

Both garlic and shallots make good house plants. Like chives, their tops can be used to season any food in which garlic or onion flavor is appropriate. The tops have a milder flavor than the bulbs.

Plant garlic and shallots as you would onions, root end down, about an inch apart and an inch deep in pots about eight inches deep. Keep the soil damp and the pots out of direct sunlight until green shoots appear.

To substitute fresh herbs for dried ones in cooking, double the quantity, because flavor is more concentrated in the dried variety. Always crush or chop fresh herbs first to release the oils that carry their flavor. To keep them from sticking to your chopping knife, chop the herbs with the salt called for in the recipe.

Even herbs that are grown for appearance only should be pruned from time to time to encourage new growth and keep the shape attractive.

Many herbs are perennials which reseed themselves and come up each year. Basil, which is an annual, can have its life extended for two or three years if you pinch off buds as they appear. Eventually, the plant grows scrawny and its fragrance and flavor diminish.

Growing Ginger Root
Fresh ginger root, a basic flavoring in Oriental cooking, makes a lovely house plant, tall with long, slender leaves. Look for a piece of root that shows signs of sprouting. Break or cut it into pieces containing one or two sprouts each. Plant several in a six-inch pot with sprouts pointing downward and the thick root showing about halfway above the soil surface.

Water thoroughly and set out of direct sunlight until green shoots appear. This can take from three weeks to a month. The soil should be watered lightly every day so it remains damp but not soggy. After shoots appear, place pot in a sunny area and water only if the soil feels dry when you stick your finger about one inch beneath the surface. After a year, plant books say, the foliage will die and you can harvest a potful of ginger root.

Fruits and vegetables that can be grown indoors include miniature tomatoes, green peppers, miniature orange, lemon and lime trees and dwarf banana plants. A good new guide to this type of gardening is "Cucumbers In A Flowerpot" by Alice Skelsey, a home gardener and U.S. Department of Agriculture employe. Mrs. Skelsey's guide is part of a do-it-yourself series from Workman Publishing Co. Those on related subjects are "The Bean Book" by Crescent Dragonwagon, "Wine-Making at Home" by Bruce Palmer and "Gardener's Diary" by Joan Lee Faust, gardening editor of the New York Times.

Pesto, an Italian sauce, makes good use of spicy, fragrant basil leaves. Blend together with mortar and pestle 2 cloves of garlic, finely minced, 1 cup of fresh basil leaves, finely chopped, and ¼ cup each of pine nuts, finely chopped, and grated parmesan cheese. Slowly add 6 tablespoons of olive oil as you blend the mixture. Makes about ¾ cup. Use with equal parts of butter or margarine to sauce macaroni products, or use alone to garnish minestrone or other vegetable soups, or spread on top of whole or sliced tomatoes before grilling.

Beauty Queen Favors 'Nippy Hug'

SILEBY, England (WNS) Anne Hunting, the preacher's daughter who has been elected local beauty queen, is now leading the campaign to revive Nippy Hug, the traditional day when any village youth may grab a girl in the street and demand a kiss. "If she refuses, he can give her a pinch instead," said Miss Hunting. "It helps people to get to know each other." Women's Libbers have demanded the right to grab a man and demand a kiss, too. "Surely," commented Anne, "we don't need a special day for that, do we?"

COOKING IS FUN!

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor
If you are an experienced baker and like to fuss with food, you'll be interested in this recipe for Peanut Butter Pinwheels. The dough is easy enough to make but having the chocolate-filled rolls at just the right temperature takes some judgment. Good luck!

PEANUT BUTTER PINWHEELS
2 cups unsifted flour, stir to aerate before measuring ½ teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup butter
½ cup creamy peanut butter
½ cup firmly packed light brown sugar
1-3rd cup granulated sugar
1 egg
1 teaspoon vanilla
Chocolate Filling, see below
On Wax paper sift together the flour, baking powder, baking soda and salt.

In a large mixing bowl cream butter and peanut butter; gradually beat in sugars. Add egg and vanilla and beat until blended. Gradually stir in flour mixture. Form dough into a ball, cover with plastic wrap and chill while preparing filling. Divide chilled dough in half.

Roll out one half of dough between two sheets of wax paper to a 10 by 8 inch rectangle. Slip dough with wax paper onto a cookie sheet and refrigerate to chill. Roll out remaining half of dough the same way. Remove first half of dough from refrigerator and place second half in refrigerator.

Remove top sheet of wax paper from chilled dough. Spread dough with one-half (1-3rd cup) of the Chocolate Filling. Roll up tightly from ten-inch side using wax paper to aid in the rolling. Gently press edge to seal. Wrap roll in plastic wrap and refrigerate. Repeat filling and rolling with second half of dough.

Chill rolls of dough about 1 hour or until they can be sliced. If too cold, chocolate will crumble. If chilled several hours, remove from refrigerator and let soften at room temperature until dough is soft enough to slice well — 15 to 30 minutes. Using a thin sharp knife, cut rolls into ¼-inch slices. Place slices 1 inch apart on lightly greased cookie sheets. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until lightly browned — 6 to 8 minutes. Cool on wire cake racks. Store in tightly covered tin box. Makes about 6½ dozen.

Clinic's Interior Design Assists Eye Patients With Navigation

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer
Interiors that reflect environmental concern have been extended to nonresidential building by interior designers who are thinking of human ecology. For Fran Rorer, 28, of Philadelphia, such a design won a first prize in the prestigious 15th annual S. M. Hexter Awards Program, conceived to commend interior designers for their contributions to the total environment.

Her award was for the design of the waiting area of the Scheie Eye Institute of Philadelphia. The outpatient area serves people with marginal vision.

Judges chose the Rorer design, remarked president Thomas Felber of the decorative fabrics, wallcoverings and floor coverings firm, because "it was so extraordinarily compatible with the architecture and because the interior serves the function so well."

"Even before I received the assignment, I had been affected professionally by watching my diabetic grandmother become blind," observed Miss Rorer. "At each step of the way, I was aware of her concerns because she slowly went from blindness in one eye and partial blindness in the other to total blindness. I had observed how lights and shadows played such a great part in her efforts to navigate a room."

This first hand insight while she was engaged in the job

WHILE YOU WAIT — A Philadelphia eye institute outpatient waiting area has been honored for interior design. The circular seating units unify the overall mass into easily defined elements providing compatible seating and conversational groupings. Earth tones of the carpets coordinate well with brick flooring and red upholstery accents the oak seating units. Plantings soften the architecture and give definition of human scale.

helped her plan the handsome large waiting room with its splendid architectural treatment and series of oak finished circular seating units, an extension of the oak-paneled walls. A blackish red-toned carpet runs from a brick entranceway to the benches where red upholstery also offers dimensional contrast.

"One concept was to use contrasts, light against dark, so people with limited vision would be aware where the rug stops and the seats begin. It becomes harder for almost-blind people to separate one thing from another," she remarked. "Fears of people had to be considered in designing the room. A small child or elderly person might become frightened that medicine would be put in their eyes, so I attempted to reassure them with bright colors in the instrument area—for example, off-red boxes. Plants provide natural elements and the upholstered seating and other warm textures help provide familiar surroundings they might associate with their homes."

She tried to avoid harsh glare, noise and the plastic look that is often generated in such buildings. "Most interior designers are using psychology in design, but ... it is a cop-out for them to say that an approach is used because it is aesthetically pleasing. That comment doesn't convey the real message. They should explain the rationales to make everyone more aware. In her association with architects Vincent G. Kling and Partners, she gets an opportunity to do more than the average interior designer. She is often fortunate to be "right in with the architects on the ground floor," and they have come to understand each other's viewpoint. She has learned about their mechanical problems and they have learned about hers—such as getting carpet made for circular space.

She is currently working on the International Monetary Fund establishment in Washington D.C., but her design theories find their way into her free lance jobs for young people. For example, do they want to dine formally with silverware or do they prefer to eat dinner Japanese-style on the floor.

"I try to disassociate my own life style, discovering what will help them express their own personalities and make them more comfortable. There is so much stress in the environmental buildup all day outside, that the home should be a contrast when one is in it."

After graduating from Moore College of Art in Philadelphia, Miss Rorer went to Brazil to investigate life styles and how they are expressed in arts and architecture. Her prize-winning award, a three-week tour of Europe for two, may prove to be more of the same — investigating new life styles.

Exiled Lady Fleming Says, 'We Go On Fighting'

By EVE SHARBUTT
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Lady Amalia Fleming sat in her publisher's office, sipped her ever present glass of water and spoke about a favorite subject.

"We Greeks have always considered ourselves something special," she said. "We go on fighting; we do not, will never accept that we shall be deprived of our freedom."

The widow of Sir Alexander Fleming, discoverer of penicillin, has written a book, "A Piece of Truth," describing her experience as a prisoner of the military government of Greece. She says it is exactly that: pieces of events she herself saw during the colonel's coup and the years that followed.

Imprisoned in August 1971, Lady Fleming was expelled from Greece by the government 52 days later. She now lives in London. She was born in Constantinople, grew up in Athens and is, she says, Greek above all things.

Drinking glass after glass of water, she chatted but made no comment on the long term effect of prison days. There is much, she said, that we still may not discuss.

"I don't know how my health is," she added. "I see that doctors are usually either hypochondriacs or the opposite and, thank goodness, I am the opposite. I should check into a hospital for several days for a proper checkup, but it is a question of losing my freedom to the hospital and I am terrifically independent."

Lady Fleming received her medical degree from the Medical Faculty of Athens, did post-graduate work in Paris and London, where she met her husband. During World War II, she was active in the Greek resistance for which she was arrested and imprisoned.

"During World War II about a tenth of our population in Greece were victims of the terrible destruction. We viewed the United States as a nation fighting for freedom, for democracy and human rights. Today, America keeps the military regime in power. Today we hate the sight of American ships in the harbor. Those in power remind the people that to oppose them is to oppose America," Lady Fleming said.

"Terror is today. We are under a corrupt and terrible dictatorship which keeps people down through tortures and fear of secret police," she added.

She pushed back her greying hair, sipped water again and said she had not demonstrated, ever, until asked to do so to support Greek students.

"I feel it is important, especially now. I was always apolitical, but I have learned that an individual has no right to be apolitical. Those who are not concerned with things that happen in a nation, their own nation, are to be despised."

Lady Fleming said people find her a credible speaker because she had everything to lose and nothing to gain by opposing the military government. She had been offered a parliament seat or a cabinet post. If she had accepted, she said she would have had everything she wanted, even a medical research foundation.

"Other things had priority," she added. "I wrote night and day to say the things in the book, to explain. I am a unique case of deprived nationality and I say what I feel."

Student demonstrations in Greece came as no surprise to Lady Fleming. She said they had not come sooner because of large numbers of police in plainclothes in the classrooms.

"The student uprisings were inevitable. But they should not be compared with student movements in other parts of the world. Greek students are not making ordinary demands. They are fighting for elementary freedoms and rights and for their education," she said.

Veil Lifted On Crime Of Child Abuse

By JOHN T. WHEELER
AP Newsfeatures Writer

In those final hours of a wintry night, Alice made a decision deep in her 6-month-old mind that nearly cost her life.

She cried.

It wasn't a whisper or a soft sobbing. It was a full blown wail that wound up like an air raid siren. Whether she was hungry, grumpy or wet, no one will ever know. After all the terror and pain that followed, it didn't seem to matter much what Alice was trying to say.

Her mother, already pregnant with her second child, remembered lying in bed and beginning to hate. She hated Alice for her crying and herself for her hate. As the cries from the nursery crossed that line into shrill screams, Alice's mother also crossed a line in her mind.

First she went to the kitchen assuming, she said later, that the baby was hungry. She plopped a bottle into a saucepan filled with water and turned the flame on full. After the water had come to a boil, she tested the formula on her forearm to make sure it wasn't too hot. But she wasn't sure of this, and that didn't really matter either.

Because what Alice's mother did was set the bottle aside on a counter and walk into the nursery with the pan of scalding water. She stood over the crib and poured the water on Alice, the child she had so desperately wanted through three barren years of marriage.

Alice's screams changed, becoming higher, louder, more urgent. Her father roused himself, went into the nursery and found his critically burned child writhing in her crib. Nearby was his wife, pan held limply at her side, eyes blank.

Bed clothing kept enough of the scalding water from reaching Alice's skin that she survived to join a sad army of children attacked and grievously hurt by their parents each year in America.

No definitive national statistics exist for this dark side of American family life, but many experts believe at least 65,000 children are seriously abused each year by adult attacks. About 25 per cent are said to be seriously, sometimes permanently, injured. Perhaps 6,000 are killed.

Dr. Richard Gladstone, a psychiatrist, calls such harsh physical abuse "one of the perversions of the human procreative drive."

Doctors, emergency hospital staff members, social workers and judges catalog a grim variety of abuse methods: beating both with hands and weapons, kicking, torture, strangling, incest, rape, other sexual abuses, suffocation, drowning, shooting, stabbing, scalding, burning, poisoning, dismemberment, starving, imprisonment, freezing and crushing.

Donna, 43-days-old was dead when she got to the hospital. A fall from her crib the mother claimed. An autopsy showed "extensive multiple fractures of the skull, brain hemorrhaging," and other damage. Mother charged with murder.

Robert, 9, was admitted to the emergency ward with second and third degree burns to both hands. An accident his father said at first. Later it was discovered Robert's hands were thrust over gas stove flames as punishment for stealing money.

Some physicians and psychiatrists consider a third or more as serious child abusers to be psychotic, or seriously ill mentally. Many other experts say the overwhelming number are suffering only from neuroses. These are a lesser category of mental problems which nearly all humans experience to some extent. What society would call well adjusted men and women reach a moment of rage too powerful to be bottled up and anger rules the mind for violence-filled minutes.

Mrs. Gertrude Bacon, executive directors of Parents Anonymous in New York City, summed up the view voiced in interviews with many experts in the field:

"We are all potential abusers. There are many forms of abuse — physical, verbal, emotional and sexual. Can any parent honestly say he has never fit into any of these categories. We've all been there. The man serving 10 years, for crippling his child — it could be any of us."

Parents Anonymous chapters help parents who cannot stop abusing their children without help. It operates much like Alcoholics Anonymous and one credo is to go "from one day to the next without striking my child."

Tens, perhaps hundreds of thousands of parents are child abusers without really knowing it. Dr. John Caffey of Pittsburgh reported in the American Journal of Diseases of Children that substantial evidence shows the common practice of giving a child "a good shaking" can have serious and even fatal consequences.

Dr. Edwin Nichols, chief of the federal Center for Studies for Child and Family Mental Health, says any number of factors from unwanted pregnancy, job insecurity and a home break up, to a quick temper and emotional exhaustion can trigger destructive rages in parents, even those who deeply love their children.

It is the rare parent who is not pushed near the line of serious abuse and not a few cross the line once or twice. But it is the habitual abuser that most threatens the lives and well-being of our young.

A National Institute of Mental Health expert says as yet it is not possible to develop a profile of the likely abuser as has been the case for likely aircraft hijackers. Indeed many believe far too little is known of the problem in general, partly because society considers the situation so shameful that it would rather sweep the whole thing under the rug than spend money on research and the like.

"There never seems to be enough case workers, foster parent homes, clinical psychologists, you name it," says a federal expert who is particularly critical of federal efforts in the field.

Dr. Vincent De Francis, head of the Child Abuse Division of the American Humane Association, said, "Child protection services are a national dilemma. We have built up an attitude of serene unconcern for the needs of the vast unserved children caught up in abuse situations. In an interview he said local funding too often is far short of what is needed to provide protection for abused and endangered children, although laws are on the books assuring the young of this protection."

Until 10 years ago, child abuse was almost a national secret crime. Physicians in most states were not even required to report abuse, and even the authorities were often circumspect about stepping into cases of child abuse.

Proportionately few serious cases found their way either to the courts or to social services. All states now have some form of mandatory reporting law for physicians and hospitals, but this is often overlooked, experts say.

New York and a few states have laws requiring authorities to step into cases when abuse is even suspected and permits them to pull children out of bad home situations even if abuse cannot be proven in the criminal sense. However, Dr. De Francis said, much still needs to be done to insure the legal rights of children.

If there is a common denominator among abusers, the experts say they have yet to spot it. But one tragic strand runs through thousands of cases studied over the years. That is the phenomenon of the badly abused child who survives to adulthood, becomes a parent and then repeats the twisted lessons of his own childhood severely abusing his own children.

Because of their own childhood, these adults often approach parenthood with the assumption that their child will give them all the things they were denied in childhood — love, compassion, understanding, support. In a sense, more than one researcher said, there is a complete role reversal with the parent trying to demand from the child just those things he lacked as a child. When their offspring display the normal stream of demands with an incomprehension of the parent's needs, the parent often loses control and the cycle starts once again.

Along with a better understanding of the scope of abuse is a different view of the abuser, once written off as a heartless slob, sadist, or candidate for an asylum.

Dr. Gladstone says child abuse can be seen as a deep ambivalence in the abusing parent. He loves the child too much to give it up, but hates it too much to raise it with compassion.

While it is not uncommon for both parents to abuse their child or children, more often it is only one adult. Why the other covers up for his mate is not fully understood. Some say it is out of fear; some that the mate worries about breaking up the home and particularly having to raise the children alone. But a Washington emergency room physician said, "I believe the mate who doesn't report the other's violence has something in the situation going for them. Something like an alcoholic whose partner stands by not so much out of loyalty but because he enjoys dominating the situation and watching the degradation of his partner."

"Sick? You're damn right it is, especially when children's lives are at stake."

Closer to the heart of the problem is another pattern, that of picking only on one child while the others enjoy mostly normal, even loving, home lives.

The abused child in this situation, experts say, usually represents something other than his real self to the abusing parent. He may remind the parent of a hated brother or father. Or the resemblance may be to a mate who is hated. Abuse develops quite frequently in homes about to break up.

On yet another level, the child may touch off mayhem because he reminds the parent of himself, a situation that folklore holds to be the most desirable trait in children. One woman named her child for a fictional vampire and said she abused her child because the girl was so evil and plotted against the mother's life. At the other end of the spectrum was a mother who saw her daughter as a fully developed great dramatic actress — at age four. When the child failed to perform for others, she was beaten severely for betraying the proud mother. The child was no early-blooming thespian genius. The acting ability, a psychologist later discovered, was what her mother had always wanted for herself.

Many researchers report that once an abused child is removed from the family, often, but not inevitably, none of the other children is picked for abuse. But if, even after years, the abused child is returned, the abuse pattern often quickly resumes. The only sure way to break the cycle is for the abuser to work with counselors to get at the root of the violence.

The cause is sometimes easy to find. Illegitimate and deformed children and children born of an unwanted pregnancy are prime targets for abusive parents.

Also case histories tell of older children being maimed and killed as the mother feels the first labor pains from her latest pregnancy. Sometimes the pregnancy is only imagined.

Many feel a factor in abuse is the parent's inability to accept the fact that he becomes angry, even furious with his child, just in normal family living. After all, what parent really enjoys changing diapers; getting up for 2 a.m. feedings; cleaning up after baby covers self, high chair and adjacent kitchen with porridge or engages in major tests of will at toilet training time.

The guilt that suppresses this anger allows it to build until sometimes a quite small incident triggers the pent up emotions. Then the slapping, beating, slamming, burning and other acts begin.

The highest risk of unintentional death from abuse ranges from three months to three years. Serious abuse doesn't necessarily end at age three, but by this time children often learn how to avoid the worst anger storms by treading warily.

ward with its bandaged and splinted victims of parental violence is only one facet of the child abuse problem.

Between Us Self-Esteem Important To All; Children Need It

By DR. HAIM GINOTT
Note to readers: The encounters depicted in my column are designed to serve as a practical guide to improved communication. They are not to be taken literally. They should be adapted to individual situations and individual ways of speaking.

A MOTHER can defuse her daughter's anger and envy by enhancing the child's self-image. The following conversation illustrates how: Late in the evening, Ruth, 10, knocked on Mother's bedroom door.

Ruth: Can I come in?
Mother: You look as if something's on your mind.
Ruth (sobbing): My friend Margie got a new dog. It's a big and friendly dog, not like our little runt. Everybody's paying attention to her. All the kids went to her house after school. They all wanted to see her dog. I hate Margie.

Mother: It must have been rough for you, to keep this feeling inside you all day.
Ruth: Yes! (sobbing) All the kids like Margie, now! No one likes me.
Mother: Is that how you feel? It seems to me that your worth as a person doesn't depend on a dog. You're valuable because you're you! Dog or no dog, big dog or small dog.

Ruth sat up, no longer crying. She was silent for a while, then she leaned over, kissed Mother good night and went back to her room.
Mother related, "I consciously abstained from moralizing and preaching. I didn't say, 'You have no right to hate Margie just because she has a big dog. What kind of a friend are you? You have things she does not have. You should be ashamed of yourself feeling so jealous.' I focused on enhancing my daughter's view herself, and I succeeded in sending her to bed less upset."

WHEN AN ANGRY CHILD proclaims that no one loves her, what is a parent to do? Argue? Explain? Reason? There is a better alternative:
Lisa, 8, came home from school angry. Soon, she was yelling at her sister and brother. When Mother intervened, Lisa said, "I can't do anything right and no one loves me." "So that's why you are so upset today," Mother said. "You need some extra care and loving. I am glad you told me."
Mother sat near her daughter and put her arm around her. After a while, Mother said, "Honey, whenever you start feeling unloved, come and tell me. And I will give you a strong loving."

Mother related: "I deliberately avoided all discussion. This was no time for meeting urgent needs."

THERE ARE TWO opposite approaches to dealing with anger. One escalates it, the other de-escalates it. Here is an example:
Myra, 10, returned from Sunday school angry with her teacher because he did not allow her to use the library to do research for a report. Father said, "So what's the big deal? You'll get another time. You can't expect a teacher to let you go to the library during class." Myra became furious.
Then Mother said, "I can sense how angry you are at this teacher. If he had let you get the book, it would have saved you a trip to school. You felt he was not being fair to you at all."
"That's right. That's exactly right," said Myra. Her anger seemed to evaporate immediately.
Father's response turned his daughter's anger into rage. His mistake was that he tried to justify the teacher, when his role as father called for understanding his daughter's inner condition. It was Mother's response that eased the situation. She addressed herself to the child's inner reality, reflecting her feelings and describing her predicament. When a child feels understood, anger diminishes. Energy is directed toward finding solutions to daily problems, instead of toward rage and revenge.

A parent's comfort, not censure, will help a child regain self-esteem.

Profs, Students At Mathematics Meet

A number of professors and students from East Carolina University participated in the meeting of the North Eastern Regional meeting of the North Carolina Council of Teachers of Mathematics held in Goldsboro at Wayne Community College and Goldsboro High School last week.
Dr. Kayte Sowell of the ECU

Mathematics Department serves as president of the group. Dr. Katharine W. Hodgin, also of the ECU Mathematics Department, spoke on "Diagnosing Errors—A first Step in Individualizing."
Dr. J. William Byrd, Chairman of the ECU Physics Department spoke on "Teaching Technical Math with Vectors." Two ECU graduate students, Miss Diane Van Nortwick and Mrs. Evelyn Jenkins, also presented talks. Miss Van Nortwick spoke on "Team Teaching and the Open Classroom" and Mrs. Jenkins discussed the effective use of games in a Math Lab. Miss Delaine Sharp, an ECU student who is student representative for the Eastern Region, presided at one of the workshops.

Girls Lead In Spending

NEW YORK (UPI) — Girls outspend boys early in life, and apparently never relinquish the lead. In the Rand Youth Poll's 20 years of charting the fiscal habits of America's young people, girls at least have held the lead over their male counterparts.

"This disparity becomes significant at the early teen level with our studies among 13-through-15 year olds showing girls disbursing $6.10 a week compared with $5.55 among boys," says Lester Rand, president of the firm which specializes in youth market research.

At the 16-through-19 year old level the lead is widened. The young ladies spend $18.90 to $17.85 for the boys. Teen-age girls have been found to be greater impulse buyers than young men. There's something else, Rand noted. The boys spend most of the money on other people, usually their dates. The girls spend mostly on themselves.

Dog Obedience Class Scheduled

The Recreation Department is sponsoring Dog Obedience Lessons beginning Friday, at the Elm Street Gymnasium. Dog Obedience lessons for beginner's will cost $20.00; lessons for intermediates will cost $10.00.

The instructor, Mrs. Helen Willis from Raleigh, will fit collars and leads for each individual dog. These lessons are for ten weeks and will be each Friday at 7:30 p.m.

Pre-registration can be made by phoning the Elm Street Recreation Department — 752-2355. Dogs can also be registered on Friday. All dogs must be at least 4 months old.

VISTA Board Meets Tuesday

A meeting has been called for Tuesday, at 7:30 p.m. at the Moyewood Social Services Center for everyone named to the preliminary VISTA Advisory Board for Pitt County.

According to Mrs. Myonia Gibbs, it is hoped that an executive committee can be set up at this time and also task committees on two problems—economic development and consumer education.

Persons other than those on the committee who are interested are welcome to attend the meeting, Mrs. Gibbs said.

Mrs. Gibbs is associated with the Wesley Foundation, which is spearheading the application for VISTA volunteers to serve in Pitt County.

Doctor Develops Home Treatment that
RINSES AWAY BLACKHEADS HELPS DRY UP ACNE-PIMPLES
In 15 Minutes or Your Money Back!

Queen Helene Mint Julep Masque 15 Minute Treatment Must Show Immediate Improvement or — YOUR MONEY BACK!

A New York Doctor, working with a cosmetic laboratory, has developed a simple home-treatment that rinses away blackheads in a matter of minutes. It was demonstrated recently on five teen-age girls and three boys.

The results were breath-taking. Blackheads really rinsed away. In fact, many could be seen on the cloth used to wash off the Masque. But this wasn't all! Acne-pimples improved after one application, enlarged pores reduced, and rough complexions became cleaner, clearer and smoother looking. These results certainly indicate why teen-agers are now saying "this is one product that really works" ... and why mothers of teen-agers have endorsed its use.

The Masque-Cream Treatment is indeed a remarkable discovery, not only for clear healthy skins, but also for the self-confidence, poise and self-esteem a fine complexion brings to teen-agers!

Anyone Can Use It

If you suffer the agony of teen-age blackheads, acne-pimples and rough unsightly complexions, give yourself this home treatment at our risk. Apply this delightfully Mint-Scented Cream and within 2 or 3 minutes an absorbing agent, called Argilla, dries and turns this cream into a plastic-like mass. You will now feel as though hundreds of "lily fingers" were softly kneading the skin, loosening pore-caked dirt, blackheads and foreign impurities.

As it firms and hardens, its suction-action draws out waste matter from the pores. In 15 minutes you simply rinse the masque away with lukewarm water which dissolves it immediately. When you wipe your face, you can see that blackheads and other pore "filler" actually come off on your towel. And your skin feels clean... really clean... refreshed, smooth like velvet!

Attention! MOTHERS of Teen-Agers

Queen Helene Mint Julep Masque is a MUST for you, too! It will help tighten sagging skin on face and throat, relax tired face muscles and stimulate a fresher, cleaner, more youthful complexion. Try a medicated Mint Julep Masque Treatment YOURSELF. You'll be delighted with the skin-tightening experience and more alive feeling that comes with every treatment.

Queen Helene Mint Masque is only $3.00 for the six ounce jar, enough for over 3 months of daily home treatments. Buy it today! Start using it immediately! Prove it to yourself at our risk, for one full month. If, at any time during the month, you are not completely satisfied, simply return the unused portion and you will get back every penny of your purchase price.

Glenn Miller—The Melody Lingers

By JOAN HANAUER
NEW YORK (UPI) — Glenn Miller died in 1944 but his melodies linger on.

Wherever Buddy De Franco and the Glenn Miller Orchestra play—and they play one-night stands for about 50 weeks a year — you'll hear "Tuxedo Junction," "Chattanooga Choo-choo," "Serenade in Blue," "At Last," "Brown Jug," "String of Pearls," "In the Mood" ...

"The Glenn Miller music is really as strong today in this world as it was in the '40s," bandleader and clarinetist De Franco said in an interview before embarking on a two-and-a-half week English tour.

"It may not be exposed on pop stations and by disc jockeys and so on as much as rock 'n' roll, but we travel around the world to packed houses and oversold theaters."

Miller was one of the giants of the "big band" era when, as a major in the Army Air Force, his plane disappeared on a military flight from England to France on Dec. 15, 1944.

Miller died, but the Glenn Miller Orchestra was reborn in 1956 under the leadership of Ray McKinley, who retired in 1966, passing the baton to De Franco, who has been waving it ever since. After 17 years, why isn't the Buddy De Franco band, he was asked.

"The Buddy De Franco band of the 1950s was an excellent band. It was even a hipper band than this one, if I might say so. But successful? No! Absolutely not!"

"Glenn had the knowledge of how to impinge on everybody's nervous system. He made it pay and he made people love it. In the movie ('The Glenn Miller Story') they kind of made it seem an accident. That's so stupid. He mapped it out. I resent it when the storytellers make it sound as if he fell into this sound. Anything that pays off like the Glenn Miller music did, you work for."

"It sounds easy to achieve when you hear it but it plays hard. A good analogy in legit music would be Brahms—it sounds the simplest but it's the toughest to play."

The basic format of the Glenn Miller sound, as De Franco described it, is "the clarinet playing the melodic line, doubled or coupled with tenor sax playing the same notes. Harmonies are played by three other saxophones, with an abnormal vibrato pulsation."

"Mostly we play the old songs," De Franco, who is 50, said. "That's what people come to hear. We do some new songs, too, but we always try to select those that fit the style of the Glenn Miller Orchestra, with arrangements that fit, too. The kind of thing that if Glenn Miller were alive, that's what he'd have the orchestra do."

'Tony Night' Illustrates Broadway Contribution

UPI Drama Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Broadway theater goes public again tonight (Sunday) when, for two hours, millions who never get near a New York stage will see one of television's prime annual shows, demonstrating anew why and how the perennial "fabulous invalid" remains such a potent entertainment medium.

The occasion is the 27th annual distribution of the Tony Awards for outstanding contributions in a 12-month Broadway period.

The entertainment surrounding the presentations of these awards (ABC, 9 p.m. EST) will have an unusual international flavor.

Producer Alexander Cohen's theme for the show is "The Wide World of Broadway." In addition to plenty of live activity at the Imperial Theater, there will be filmed sequences showing performances of several Broadway shows in various parts of the world.

These include excerpts of a German-language production of "West Side Story" in Vienna, a "Man of La Mancha" sequence in Serbo-Croatian from Zagreb, Yugoslavia, a Paris "Hello, Dolly!" a London "Show Boat" and a "My Fair Lady" number as performed by a high school troupe in Wichita Falls, Iowa.

Rex Harrison, who soon returns to Broadway in Pirandello's "Henry IV," and Celeste Holm will be very much live on the Imperial stage as hosts of the proceedings, bolstered by co-hosts Sandy Duncan and Jerry Orbach.

Numerous stage stars will be in view as presenters of the Tonys in 18 categories.

Jerry Herman, the "Hello, Dolly!" and "Mame" songwriter, has written an original song just for the occasion that will be used to open the program by four star singer-dancer performers, Gwen Verdon, Helen Gallagher, Paula Kelly and Donna McKechnie.

A committee of writers about the theater selected four nominees in each of the 18 divisions on March 12. Some 400 persons with varied links to the stage, who are supposed to have seen most of the Broadway productions from April 3, 1972 to March 11, 1973, chose the winners by secret ballot for the League of New York Theaters, which administers the awards for their founder, the American Theater Wing.

Major interest centers on the best play and best musical categories.

In the former are "Butley"

by England's Simon Gray, or own "That Championship Season" by Jason Miller, "The Changing Room" by Britain's David Storey and "The Sunshine Boys" by another local fellow, Neil Simon.

Bet on "That Championship Season." I'll bear up under a win by Gray or Simon. If Storey's play wins, I leave the country.

Brendan Behan Comedy Is Next

Jokes about Ireland are scarce in this time of political upheavals — especially jokes about the I.R.A. In fact, it would take an Irishman to find anything funny in this civil war, and certainly only an Irishman could write a musical play devoted to the subject.

The playwright is Brendan Behan, and the play is The Hostage which the East Carolina Playhouse is presenting Wednesday thru Saturday in McGinnis Auditorium. The Hostage is set in a disreputable Dublin lodging house, where a young Cockney soldier is being held as hostage in reprisal for an I.R.A. aman who is to be hanged.

The play is a witty and profound comment on Anglo-Irish relations and the Irish themselves, people noted for their rollicking comedy, satirical songs, and ballads.

The Hostage is the fourth production of the current Playhouse season and will be directed by John Cannon of the ECU Drama faculty.

Sets and costumes are designed by Steve Lavino and Carol Beule. Playing in McGinnis Auditorium, performances will begin promptly at 8:15 p.m. each evening. Reserved seat tickets are $2.00 and can be purchased at the McGinnis box office beginning Monday. Phone reservations can be made by calling 758-6390.

From Sheppard Memorial Library

By CYNTHIA TIMM

The following books are written especially for the high school age group and are found in the young adult corner of the library: I wanna be an Indian.

I wanna be red
I wanna be free
Or I wanna be dead

This song keeps running through the mind of Benjamin Turner, an Indian student at Douglas High School. Benjamin has always done well in school, and most people don't think of him as an Indian at all. Then one day Benjamin begins to look more closely at the situation of his people-forgotten on their reservations-and he becomes determined to restore some of their pride. Approaching the principal, he suggests that an Indian Culture Club be formed and that an effort be made to decrease the 90 per cent dropout rate among Indian students. However, he meets with resistance, and most of his problems remain unresolved. NUMBER FOUR by Molly Cone is an account of Benjamin's struggle for the rights of Indian students. Based on actual events, it is a story of insensitivity and racial prejudice.

THE UPSTAIRS ROOM by Johanna Reiss is a moving account of the author's experiences as a Jewish child in Nazi-controlled Holland. Ten-year-old Annie and her twenty-year-old sister Sini, separated from their family, are taken in by a Dutch farmer, who hides the girls in an upstairs room of his farmhouse. In their daily actions both the sisters and the family with whom they live reveal a courage and strength which transcends the horrors of war. A vivid and memorable story.

Sir Francis Drake's voyage on the GOLDEN HIND was filled with dissension as well as excitement and discovery. IN PASSAGE TO DRAKE'S BAY by Jean Montgomery, the story of Drake's travels is told by a young shipboy named Tom. In the course of the voyage, Tom witnesses the capture of Spanish ships and the beheading of one of Drake's officers, who attempts to lead a mutiny. In 1579 the GOLDEN HIND stops along the California coast at a place now called Drake's Bay. There Tom comes in contact with the Miwok Indians, whose actions and customs he regards with contempt. Tom's gradual change in attitude toward the Indians forms the nucleus of the book. An exciting and thought-provoking novel.

The Student Literary Scene

'Insights'—From Rose High

Sixteen staff members have produced another annual spring literary publication at Rose High School.

Poetry constitutes the bulk of this spring's literary magazine (56 poems) while there are only four very short stories.

Some of the line drawings are excellent in this generally well designed magazine.

Anyone interested in seeing what teen-age poets are thinking about today, will find Insights an excellent indication.

Copies are available from Rose High School at 60 cents each, plus an additional 32 cents for mail order copies. Checks should be made payable to Insights, Rose High School, Greenville, 27834.

Hobson Pittman Bequest To NCMA

The North Carolina Museum of Art (NCMA) has received several hundred works of art from the estate of the late Hobson Pittman.

Pittman, one of the nation's leading artists, was born near Epworth, N.C., and grew up in Tarboro. He died last year in Philadelphia.

Included in the bequest to the museum are 21 oil paintings, 71 pastels, more than 50 watercolors, a number of drawings and sketches, and 22 pastels for the Hobson Pittman archives.

The museum collection already includes six oils, a watercolor and several drawings by Pittman.

The Cleveland Museum of Art, the Philadelphia Museum of Art and the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts also are sharing in the Estate.

The archives consist of correspondence, scrapbooks, sketches, watercolors, pastels and works by Pittman's students.

Alice Gordon, a niece of Pittman, is handling the archives as one of the Executors of the Estate.

Moussa Domit, acting director, said an exhibition at the museum and several traveling shows would be assembled from the works in the bequest.

Besides the museums mentioned, Pittman's works are in the Corcoran Gallery, The Greenville Art Center, the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Phillips Collection, The Toledo Museum of Art, The Virginia Museum of Fine Arts and The Whitney Museum of American Art.

Pittman received many awards in exhibitions. In 1968 he was the recipient of a North Carolina Award, the

The NCMA gave him a one-man retrospective show in 1963.

Pittman also had a distinguished career as a

Doodles And A Banjo In Belhaven

A college president artist and a young banjo player will be on hand at EEI's little KORNERS of the world in Belhaven from one to five today to meet visitors in a reception honoring Dr. John Edgar Weems.

Weems, artist and president of Meredith College in Raleigh, is exhibiting limited editions of prints based on his paintings. For this exhibit, note cards as well as small prints of Weems' work have been reproduced on the hand-press at EEI's by Mrs. Effie Raye Calhoun Bateman, proprietor of the gallery and also an alumnae of Meredith. These will supplement the exhibit of Weems' original work.

Weems is noted for floral motifs and for black and white abstract paintings which the artist has called "doodlings." In these, nature is discernible in suggestions of flowers, birds, trees. Most are executed in crisp black designs on white paper.

The artist will autograph copies of the prints during today's reception. Appearing with him will be his wife, who several years ago illustrated a book on birds.

Other exhibitors in the show going on view at EEI's today are Dennis Rust and John Behr. Rust is showing sculptural, nonfunctional ceramics and Behr will have examples of his smoke-toned, Raku pottery on view. In addition, Mrs. Beatrice Behr and Mrs. Faith Birkhead are showing black stoneware and white decorative pieces of ceramics, and Chlore McHorney will be represented by batiks and back-strap-loom weavings.

Steve Lego, a young banjoist, will perform ancient folk songs on his antique banjo, an unusual one in that it has a fifth string to create a bag-pipe effect.

The public is invited to attend this spring opening. There is no admission charge and refreshments will be served. EEI's is located downtown Belhaven.

Paul Topper to Highlight Variations Wednesday

Corelli Original And Follow-Ups In Recital

For his concert at the Recital Hall at 8:15 p.m. Wednesday, violinist Paul Topper is featuring one basic work with later versions by various composers.

"This approach," Dr. Topper commented, "will provide listeners with an understanding of the individual merits of each arrangement of the variations. I think this will prove to be an interesting idea."

The original composition is La Follia Variations, a work by the 17th century Italian Arcangelo Corelli. Miss Ellen Reithmaier, pianist and harpsichordist, will perform with Topper in each of the compositions. Mrs. Linda Fryman, faculty cellist, will also assist in the original version.

After performing Corelli's original version, Topper will then perform three later versions. These are Francesco Germiniani's Follia, Concerto Grosso No. 12 for Two Violins, Viola, Cello and String Orchestra; Ferdinand David's arrangement of Folies d'Espagne for Violin and Piano (after Corelli's La Follia); and Hubert Leonard's La Follia, Variations Serieuses for Violin and Piano (after Corelli's La Follia).

In addition to Miss Reithmaier and Mrs. Fryman, a stringed orchestra composed of string instrument majors of the School of Music will perform the Geminiani Concerto Gross with Topper and Miss Reithmaier. The musicians are Marilyn Secor, Lina Gibson, Deborah Reed, Steve Natrella and Nancy Atkins, violinists; Deborah Burns and Candace Cicerone, violists; Wendy Harmon and Claudia Carmone, Cellists; and Sherry Sievers, double bassist.

The performance is free and the public is invited to attend.

Today—8:15 p.m.—Faculty Recital—James Houlik, saxophone. (See separate article this page).

Monday—7:30 p.m.—Miss Sheila Marlowe, Senior Voice Recital. Miss Marlowe of Greenville, will be accompanied for her entire program by Donna Grose on piano and organ and will be assisted by Richard Foley, oboeist and Jan Kittrell, cellist. For her recital she has listed Three Poems and Vier Lieder, Opus 12 by Webern; two selections from Bach's Cantatas Nr. 187 and 72; Faure's Vocalise Etude; Poeme en Forme de Habanere by Ravel; two songs from Debussy's Proses Lyriques; and two selections from Finzi's Dies Natalis.

Wednesday—1:00 p.m.—Wright Auditorium—Children's Orchestra Concert. No further information available.

Wednesday—8:15 p.m.—Faculty Recital, Dr. Paul Topper, violin. (See separate story this page).

Thursday—7:30 p.m.—Senior Recital, Lynda Christenson, piano. Miss Christenson, from Jacksonville, N.C. has listed five selections for her recital, including two Chopin compositions, the Polonaise in C Sharp Minor, Opus 26, Number 1 and Nocturne in C Sharp Minor. The other pieces she will perform are Mozart's Adagio in B Minor; Hindemith's Sonata No. II; and Debussy's Estampes.

Friday—8:15 p.m.—Senior Recital, Gail Maureen Soskel, piano. Norfolk, Virginia native Miss Soskel will play four selections in her recital. The program includes three Hector Villa-Lobos pieces, Prole Do Bebe; Moreninha; and O Polichinelo; Handel's Suite in D Minor; Schumann's Scenes of Childhood, Opus 15; and Schubert's Sonata in A Minor.

Rocky Mount Spring Festival Set

The first annual Rocky Mount Spring Arts Festival, sponsored by the Arts Council of the Rocky Mount Chamber of Commerce, will begin March 30, 1973 and run through mid-May. Cultural Events included within the festival season will range from special art exhibits provided by Peoples Bank, Planters Bank, and First Union National Bank to dramatic performances, handcraft exhibits, and musical presentations.

Nearly every major culturally oriented organization will be participating in the festival with the expressed purpose of bringing to the citizens of the greater Rocky Mount area a new awareness of the wide range of cultural activities available to them.

Events have been included to introduce the public to activities which are offered annually, weekly, and on other regularly scheduled bases.

MARIONETTE OPERA STAGED AT CONVENT NEW YORK (AP) — The first American performance of Haydn's marionette opera, "Philemon and Baucis," was performed by L'Ensemble du Sacre Coeur at the Convent of the Sacred Heart here.

The opera was composed in celebration of Empress Maria Theresia's visit to Esterhazy, Hungary, in 1773. Haydn composed it specifically for a marionette theater.

The closing week of the festival, for example, will feature the 16th Annual Outdoor Art Show with the winners being displayed throughout the week. Planetarium shows are open to the public every weekend. Theatrical productions are scheduled by the college and the Tank Theatre an average of three times each during the year. All of these organizations will have offerings during the Spring Arts Festival.

Additionally this celebration will include several outstanding events.

37 October, the event which opens the festival on March 30, is an anthology of works by and about North Carolina's noted author, Thomas Wolfe, and is presented by The Carolina Readers Theatre. This reading, scheduled for the Tank Theatre at 8:00 p.m. Friday, is free.

Art Exhibits, arranged with the joint co-operation of the Arts Council, the Rocky Mount Arts and Craft Center and the local banks, are special events in that they will display for the public privately owned collections of paintings by outstanding artists of our time.

To Pick Tomorrow's Hero of Heroes

Ask Them Yourself

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR PETER USTINOV, actor
 Recently you got married for the third time. Have you got a philosophy about marriage and women?
 —R. L., Evansdale, Iowa

clusive relationships. You learn more from one person than you do from people in general. I find that I'm no longer intrigued by women en masse. Occasionally I may look at another woman—as an individual, not just as a female. But I try to choose a moment when Helen is looking at another man. And I try to veil my look. I'm very demure.

● I believe in marriage. I believe in the intimacy of ex-

FOR MICHAEL CAINE, star of "Sleuth"

I hear you're one of those celebrities who complain that the public treats them rudely. True?—N. F., Carlsbad, N.M.

● You're confusing me with someone else. I don't have the kind of face that people do that to. In repose, it looks kind of nasty. All my life I've been told that I always look as though I'm about to burst into a temper—even when I'm just contemplating my laundry list. Friends ask me, "What's the matter?" I have a sort of slow, heavy-lidded way of looking at people, they tell me.

FOR JAMES MacARTHUR

You seem to look a lot thinner on television lately. Did you go on a diet?—N. Bremer, Miami, Fla.

● I went on an Oriental diet called the Yin and Yang. It's a balance between sweet and sour things, and you can't eat any meat. I was 15 pounds overweight and lost eight pounds within the first nine days, and another seven since then. I also gave up drinking beer and played a lot of tennis.

FOR LUCILLE BALL

Do you believe in Women's Liberation?—John Little, Lewiston, Idaho

● Only for those women who feel they should be liberated.

FOR SEN. EDWARD M. KENNEDY (D-Mass.)

I read where only 56 percent of those eligible to vote last fall went to the polls. Was that Nixon's fault or McGovern's? —N. Brawley, Tenafly, N.J.

● Neither. The heart of the problem is in our archaic system of voter registration. If governments collected taxes the way they register voters today, they'd be bankrupt. Of the 62 million citizens who stayed home on Election Day in 1972, the vast majority were not registered.

FOR MUHAMMAD ALI

Instead of refusing to serve in the armed forces, you could have gone in and taken a soft noncombatant job. You didn't and had to spend a fortune getting cleared. Why?—D. L. Lang, Colorado Springs, Colo.

● My religion forbade me from doing anything, no matter how minor, that would contribute to the progress of any organization involved in the war.

FOR LORNA LUFT, singer

How did your mother, Judy Garland, influence you most? —J. Fine, Redondo Beach, Calif.

● By just being herself—she never sat me down to teach me anything. My sister Liza and I just learned from watching her performances, and listening to her records. That's the best education we could have asked for.

FOR TAYLOR CALDWELL, author

In his book about you Jess Stearn tells about the experiments in which you talked about your many past lives. You said before the experiments you didn't believe in reincarnation. Do you now?—R. F. King, Waco, Texas

● If reincarnation exists, it appears to me to be a gigantic curse, not a hope. I prefer not to believe it and I see no actual proof of it. I have no explanation for the material in the Jess Stearn book.

FOR CASS ELLIOT

You were part of the "flower child and peace" era of the '60's. How would you compare those times with now?—B. C., Bronx, N.Y.

● In the '60's, none of us conformed to a single physical or moral picture, and we didn't feel any hostility toward people living differently. We were just ourselves. I miss the spirit of brotherhood that died in 1970. Everyone was talking about brotherhood in 1967, '68 and '69. But it all seemed to stop in 1970.

Mint seeds

This mint variety grows so easily in a special earth pod we'll send you. It can be transplanted later outdoors and spreads quickly. It's been a favorite herb for centuries—with a clean, refreshing taste that enhances everyday dishes as well as gourmet delights.

This mint is from the very same family as the menthol featured in Salem's unique blend... naturally grown menthol, not the kind made in laboratories. Natural Menthol Blend is why Salem always tastes as cool and fresh as Springtime... not harsh or hot. Send for your mint seeds today. They're free... with 2 empty Salem packs.

Show People In Hard Times:

“From God Cometh Their Strength”

By Joey Adams

The lady sitting opposite me at my WEVD microphone was black, beautiful and looked half her 70 years. “Wow, Ethel,” I said. “You look gorgeous.”

“Naturally,” she laughed easily. “God is in the beauty business.”

Only a couple of years before, Ethel Waters, fed up with the “stormy weather,” was ready to give up. She was too fat, too poor, too sick and too tired to fight. As President of the American Guild of Variety Artists, I spoke to her about going into the AGVA home for the aged.

Now as she talked to me, she was alive and gay and vibrant. “What a change!” I exclaimed. “You look so young and happy!”

“Easy,” she explained. “It’s just that I was lazy. God has so many goodies for everybody, and He puts them all in front of you. All you have to do is bend down and pick them up—and that’s just what I did. You see, I’ve never been that far away from God that I can’t reach Him when I need Him.”

Ethel had come a long way on faith. “I was born out of wedlock,” she confided, “I never had a childhood. I never belonged. I often had to steal to eat.”

“What was the greatest single influence in your life?” I asked.

“There has been only one,” she answered. “Prayer.”

In show business, that kind of talk is often called “doing the God bit.” A “bit” in theatrical parlance means a piece of business, and when a performer says he’s “doing the God bit,” it’s his way of saying that he’s found religion.

“Doing the God bit” may sound offensive—like some smart aleck’s way of putting religion on the same level as “the old-soft-shoe routine.” But this isn’t true. I’ve been around show business people for a good many years. And I know that they may use breezy phrases to hide their self-consciousness when talking about serious subjects. But that doesn’t mean Comedian Joey Adams is known nationally as the “Roastmaster General.” His biography shows: If it’s show business, you name it and he’s done it.

“Until I lost my eye in that automobile accident, I never gave God much thought at all. But I got a picture of myself out on that highway that would have scared an atheist into church. It was the most desperate floating-in-space kind of helplessness I ever knew. That’s when I begged God not to let me go blind.”—Sammy Davis, Jr.

In fact, there are very few atheists in dressing rooms. You learn soon enough that you can’t do it out there alone. God is your costar.

Jane Russell reminded me of this when we were playing the RKO Boston Theatre. I was a flop on stage and off. “You were put here on earth to glorify Him,” Jane scolded me. “Stop thinking of yourself and think of God. How can you lose with the Lord on your side?” Then she gave me a copy of the Bible, and she wrote on the flyleaf: “All things work together for good for those who love the Lord.” She signed it “Old Jane.”

Old Jane sure needed some of that faith she had been spreading around when she was in trouble recently. It’s a good thing she kept some of it for herself—even though it was lying dormant for a while. But I’ll let her tell it to you personally:

“I was in a pit because my husband had died and I was not up to uplifting anyone—especially myself. I was practically out of show business and ready to pack it all in when I was offered the lead in ‘Company’ on Broadway. It was a perfect part for me, and ordinarily I would have jumped at it. But I wasn’t in tune with myself or with God. I gave myself all kinds of excuses. ‘Only two and a half weeks to rehearse... the Sondheim music is too difficult... I don’t want to make a fool of myself...’ The jitters really set in.

“Then I found a little book by Norman Vincent Peale. I read it from cover to cover. Suddenly everything changed. It was as if the Lord said, ‘I’ve opened doors all your life. You’ve obeyed before, so why balk now? Others would give their souls for such a chance, and you’re running away. If I open the door, I give you the ability to go through it. Trust me.’

“So I did the show—and was the hit of my life. Now life is great again!”

Jerry Lewis found joy in a mixed marriage because “In our two-faith family, nothing is taken away—if anything, love of God is twice as much.” Jerry says: “On the front door of our home are two symbols: a mezuzah and a cross, and above them are two mottoes, ‘Shalom’ and ‘Love One Another.’ The children still open their gifts as they light the Chanukah candles, but now we keep the candlesticks in front of the portrait of the Blessed

Burt Bacharach and Hal David said it so well: "What the world needs now is love, sweet love." That's doing the God bit. Each of us can say it and do it in his own way. I'm sure God doesn't mind our language.

When Harry Richman, one of the all-time superstars, lost his money and his voice, he never blamed God. He just prayed every day, "If that's how you want it, Father, okay, but I'd rather sing than eat." Harry told me he made a pact with the Lord: "If You get me out of this bed and give me back my voice, I promise I'll be Your greatest salesman — and that's a run-of-the-play contract."

When his voice returned, Harry told me, "I realized I'd been to many doctors, but none worked as perfectly as the Great Healer." For his next engagement Richman had star billing deleted from his contract. "There's only one Headliner," he explained. "The rest of us are only added attractions."

I guess show people do more benefits than anybody and, thus, they're able to store up love, faith and joy for that rainy day. Show people remind me of the little boy who was scrubbed by his mom, dressed in spotless linen and put out in the yard with the warning, "Don't play with anyone. We're going to visit Grandma and I want you to look nice." But another kid called him a sissy and they were soon rolling in the dirt. After the tussle was over, an ice-cream cart passed and the bedraggled moppet ran into the house to get a dime. His mom took one look at him and remarked: "Are you in a position to ask for favors?"

Stars, such as Bob Hope, Martha Raye, Ed Sullivan, Sammy Davis, Jr., are always in a position to ask for favors. And that goes for tons of singers, dancers, musicians and performers of every shape, size and talent who are "doing the God bit."

Not long ago, Ed, Sammy Davis and I had a very busy day playing the benefit circuit. In one afternoon we performed at a Catholic church, a Protestant church and a Jewish synagogue. After a tired, but happy, tour Ed embraced us and said, "We should be proud this day—we just played God across the board."

Bob Hope figures he was put on this earth to glorify the Lord by spreading joy.

Bob, who knows that a dose of joy is a spiritual cure, takes on religion in his own way: "I know that religion is coming back — Dial-A-Prayer just ordered three more numbers." Bob cracks, "I am the first to tell you that my wife is a Catholic, we can't get insurance — too many candles in the house. Do you know our grocery bills are astronomical? — $3,000 a week — fifty dollars for food — the rest for candles." His gags and his heart cover a lot of territory. Our Hope had stored away so much faith that when there was fear he'd lose his eyesight, the prayers came from everyone—Catholic, Jew, Protestant and come-as-you-are.

When Sammy Davis was on the golf course with President Nixon, Spiro Agnew and Frank Sinatra, he was asked what his handicap was. "Are you kidding?" he quipped. "I have one eye, I'm black and I'm a Jew—any questions?"

Sammy can laugh at it now. But he recalled: "Until I lost my eye in that automobile accident, I never gave God much thought at all. But I got a picture of myself out on that highway that would have scared an atheist into church. It was the most desperate floating-in-space kind of helplessness I ever knew. That's when I begged God not to let me go blind.

"In the hospital, Eddie Cantor came to see me. 'Sammy,' he said, 'you've got a tough fight ahead of you, but you've also got great strength. Never forget what an enormous gift God gave you when he gave you your talent.'"

As Sammy tells it: "On the one hand, God gave me talent. Why me instead of some other guy? Why was I given this ticket to a good life? On the other hand, He put me in an accident. I started thinking, why did He put me in this accident? Did I do something wrong? Did I let Him down somewhere along the line?"

"Then a rabbi explained it to me. He said, 'Sammy, we believe a warning such as yours comes not to punish for wrongs, but to shake you up a little and perhaps stimulate some spiritual progress—exactly the kind of thinking you are doing now. You're wondering what you might have done wrong. Turn it slightly. Have you done as much as you might have with what God gave you to work with?'"

Every time I saw Sammy after that, I knew he could honestly answer, "Yes."

At each entrance to the Pentagon in Washington is a large sign for all to read: "Worship daily according to your faith." Whether or not those who read it heed this good advice is, in America, still a matter for them alone to decide. However, I just want to point out that there is no such sign at the entrance to the Kremlin. You will find none in Peking—and there was none at the door to Hitler's chancellery.

It's great to be living in a country where you can worship as you please. Try it—you'll like it. As Ethel Waters said, "It's easy to reach God — He's only a prayer away."

Jobmanship

Having Trouble With a VIP-Type? This May Help

Does the co-worker you're struggling with act as if he thinks he's a VIP? Or a workhorse? Or a know-it-all? Once you realize who he thinks he is, you'll be able to work with him. For example, when you realize that someone sees himself as a know-it-all, you'll understand you're bound to fail if you try telling him, "I think you'll want to know..." Nobody like this can bear to admit there's something about his job he doesn't already know. When instead, you make your necessary suggestion by saying that, because you know he is aware of every detail, this is something he'll want to use — then you'll do better. By saying out loud that you realize he's very aware of everything about his work, you've praised and recognized the characteristics within himself he most values. Of course, your natural reaction to someone playing a role is to "cut him down to size." But while it may be fun to deflate the VIP's dignity, too often it boomerangs. So why make your life complicated, when understanding the other fellow's picture of himself can give you a cooperative co-worker?—By S. R. Redford

MARY TRAVERS: What an 88-Year-Old Taught Me About Life and Love

"Youth is great, but we have to learn from older people and show more respect for them," says Mary Travers, who as the Mary of Peter, Paul, and Mary has been an important force in the youth culture. "We live in a society that believes age makes you obsolete, and as soon as someone can't keep pace with the machinery, he's discarded. But we're missing a great deal that way. . . . Youth has potential, and it may have incredible energy. But age is the art form. We have to realize that people are our greatest national asset. As a person grows older, he may master more of the nuances of what life is really about. After a lifetime of coping, you acquire the subtleties, as a painter does in his art. Most people don't think of the elderly when they think of romance. But I was talking to an 88-year-old man about romance, and he said something marvelous: 'Love is life's greatest compensation.' I never could have expressed it that way. . . . The experience that comes from age has a transmittable value for those who want to learn."—Interviewed by William Wolf

Yesterday's Mightiest Batters Pick Tomorrow's Star: Cedeno!

Who are the best young hitters in professional baseball?

To answer that question, FAMILY WEEKLY conducted an exclusive poll among 11 great former major-league batting stars, four of them already in baseball's Hall of Fame and others certainly headed for the Hall in the future.

FAMILY WEEKLY set certain guidelines for the poll. One was that we ruled out Johnny Bench, young catcher for the Cincinnati Reds, on the basis that he already has established himself as a superstar. The mission of the poll was to unearth candidates for future superstardom.

Our other guideline was to evaluate players with the potential to hit both for high averages and for home runs.

Cesar Cedeno of the Houston Astros emerged as the finest potential all-around hitter in the major leagues. Cedeno is a 22-year-old, 6-2, 190-pound native of the Dominican Republic. He is the center fielder and a right-handed batter.

CESAR CEDENO — BATTING'S "HEIR APPARENT"?

When he was growing up, Cesar Cedeno was supposed to help his mother after school in a store run by his parents in Santo Domingo. Instead, he would run off with his friends to play baseball. "Sometimes we wouldn't even go to school," grins Cesar sheepishly at the recollection. "We'd just start out as if we were going there, then turn back and go to the baseball field.

"I didn't get in trouble with my mother. But my father didn't like baseball. When he caught me, he would whip me. But my mother, she was okay. She bought me a new glove. She knew I wanted to be in baseball."

Cedeno, whose last name is pronounced Say-DAYN-yo, reached the major leagues with Houston in 1970, playing in 90 games and batting .310. As a regular with the Astros in 1971 and 1972, Cesar led the National League in doubles both years, with 40 and 39, respectively. In 1972, his .320 batting average was the fourth best in the league. He also hit 22 home runs. Cedeno also stole 55 bases last season, third best in the senior circuit.

The Great Hitters Speak

Joe DiMaggio, "The Yankee Clipper," had a .325 lifetime batting average, playing from 1936 to 1951 and winning each of baseball's most important batting titles — average, home runs and RBI's—twice each. His most incredible record was hitting safely in 56 consecutive games in 1941. Now 58, he travels the country as a representative for the Hughes Sports

Wide World

Network and does TV commercials. He also owns a restaurant in his native San Francisco.

JOE DIMAGGIO Says:

"Based on personal observation and discussions I've had with several people, Cesar Cedeno may be the finest young ballplayer in the major leagues. He does everything well—run, field and throw, as well as hit.

"About the only way I get to see baseball now is when I'm invited to participate in various old-timers' games around the country. I get invited to a few too many for me to attend, but I get to as many as I can. Some of these old-timers feel that hitting is going downhill. I don't think that's true at all. There are good young hitters around in every era. I think this catcher who's now with Baltimore, Earl Williams, is a real strong hitter. He's difficult to pitch to, and can hit bad pitches out of the park."

Continued

Continued

Richie Ashburn, one of the best singles hitters of all time, spent 15 seasons in the majors and hit safely 2,574 times. He was a .308 lifetime hitter and won two batting titles with the Philadelphia Phillies, in 1955 and 1958. Now 46, he works for the Phillies year round—in ticket sales and promotion and as a color commentator on Phillie broadcasts.

RICHIE ASHBURN Says:

"The Phillies haven't won many games in recent seasons. I should know, because I'm up there in the broadcasting booth for a lot of defeats. But in Greg Luzinski, their big first baseman, who's only 22 years old, the Phillies have a winner.

"Greg is a big young man, 6-1 and 215. He can hit homers—and I know the Phillies are expecting him to hit a lot of them—but he also can hit a single. A lot of kids are always swinging for the fences, but Greg is just a good hitter overall. I think he'll hit higher than the .281 he hit in 1972.

"A lot of young hitters come into the majors not really knowing how to hit down on the ball so that it will go through the infield for singles. They're too preoccupied with aiming for the fences. But Cesar Cedeno, for example, just knows how to hit. He may be the best all-round hitting talent to come into the league in years.

"The San Francisco Giants have three young players I feel are going to be outstanding hitters—Dave Kingman, outfielder Garry Maddox, and shortstop Chris Speier. Bill Buckner of the Los Angeles Dodgers is another good one."

Hank Greenberg, now 62, came off the sandlots of New York to fashion a brilliant 13-year major-league career. He hit .313 lifetime, won the American League home-run and RBI titles four times each for Detroit, reaching highs of 58 homers in 1938 and 183 RBI's in 1937. He is now in the investments and securities business in New York.

HANK GREENBERG Says:

"You asked me to name some fresh young hitters. Well, frankly, there are hardly any good hitters left in baseball, much less great ones. Johnny Bench is probably the only great hitter in the game, a guy who hits a lot of homers and has a good average. There are a couple of others who know what hitting is, but they're ex-

Watch These Four, Too, Say The Superstars

Greg Luzinski, 22, the slugging first baseman of the Philadelphia Phillies, batted .281 and connected for 18 home runs in 1972, his first full season in the major leagues.

Carlton Fisk was unheralded when he joined the Boston Red Sox in 1972. By the end of the season he was acclaimed the league's outstanding rookie. He hit 22 home runs.

Earl Williams should help restore Baltimore's home-run punch. He batted .258 last season and drove 28 balls over the wall. In 1971, he was a revelation, with 33 homers.

Dave Kingman could be the next slugger of the San Francisco Giants. He stands 6-6 and has awesome right-handed batting power. He had 29 home runs in 1972, his first full season in the majors.

Wide World

tremely rare.

"I think Carlton Fisk of Boston looked like a good young catcher last year. He hit close to .300, but hitting .300 in Boston is no great accomplishment with the short fences in Fenway Park.

"The biggest problem with hitting today is that the major leagues don't have a development system for players like football and basketball have in the colleges. The best athletes are being attracted to those other sports.

"It's a sad situation. There are too many selfish owners in baseball. The ones who are doing all right don't care about the ones who are suffering. One thing I've thought baseball should have instituted years ago was a common scouting system, where a scouting agency goes out and reports on players for several teams or for every team. Football and basketball have done this, but baseball still sticks to its old methods. That's what's hurting the game so badly."

Monte Irvin, 54, was one of the most respected and feared batters in the majors from 1949 to 1956. In 1951, he led the National League in RBI's with 121. His lifetime batting average was a solid .293. An assistant public relations director for baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn, Irvin was just elected to the Hall of Fame in February.

MONTE IRVIN Says:

"There are three hitters I rate as up-and-coming greats: Cesar Cedeno of Houston, and Bobby Grich and Earl Williams of Baltimore.

"Cedeno is the heir apparent to Willie Mays and Hank Aaron as the dominant player in the National League. With a little more experience and a little more physical growth, there's no telling what he'll do.

"Grich hasn't yet had that first big batting year in the American League, but he's been hitting the ball well. Last year he hit .278 with the Orioles. Also he should be good for between 12 and 20 homers a season.

"Williams hit 33 and 28 homers the last two seasons with Atlanta, and should be a great addition to the Orioles' offense this year. Carlton Fisk, last year's rookie of the year in the American League with the Boston Red Sox, is another solid-hitting young catcher, who looks to have a fine career ahead of him."

Ralph Kiner, now 50, played only ten years of major-league ball, but in each of his first seven seasons (with the Pittsburgh Pirates) he was the league leader in home runs, an all-time record. Twice he went over the 50 mark in homers—in 1947 with 51 and in 1949 with 54, just two short of the National League record. His rate for home runs per times-at-bat surpassed every player in history except Babe Ruth. Kiner has been a sportscaster for the New York Mets since 1962.

RALPH KINER Says:

"Cesar Cedeno is going to be another Roberto Clemente, and I would bet on it. The reason I say another Clemente rather than another Willie Mays or Hank Aaron is that, like Roberto, Cedeno is playing in a park where it's difficult to hit home runs. Therefore, he may never reach the homer totals of the Aarons and the Mayses. But he should be a great hitter for a long time.

"I think it's more difficult than it used to be for a player to combine a .300 batting average with a lot of home runs. Oddly, in my two biggest home-run seasons, I also had my two highest averages, .313 and .310. But I think that's rare nowadays. I think the Phillies will be happy if Greg Luzinski, their young first baseman, can hit about the same .281 he hit last year as a rookie and step up his homers from the 18 he hit in 1972. He's got a lot of power. So has Dave Kingman of the Giants, but he hasn't had a good average yet.

"I also think John Milner of the Mets has a chance to be a real good power hitter. His problem is an unusual one for a home-run hitter: He's weak on inside pitches. Those are the kind a power hitter usually eats up. But John, a left-handed hitter, has hit most of his homers on outside pitches to the opposite field. Once he learns to handle those inside pitches, his power should result in a lot of homers to right field."

His muscles rippling in his sleeveless uniform top, Ted "Big Klu" Kluszewski, now 48, had home-run totals of 40, 49 and 47 for Cincinnati in 1953-54-55. In 1954, Kluszewski led the majors in both homers and RBI's (141). His career record shows a .298 batting average. He is now a Redleg coach and owns and operates a steak house in Cincinnati.

TED KLUSZEWSKI Says:

"There's no way you can exaggerate how great a player Cesar Cedeno is going to be. I say, without question, he's the top up-and-coming kid around. The worst thing anybody could do for him would be to tamper with his swing. He's fine the way he is. I know he hits the heck out of our pitchers.

"Though he doesn't get the publicity of Cedeno, I think another Houston outfielder, Bob Watson, who hit .312 last year, also is coming on as a real good hitter. There are a lot of other top hitters around too, like Ralph Garr of Atlanta, Earl Williams of Baltimore, and Greg Luzinski of Philadelphia. I have high hopes for our right fielder, Cesar Geronimo, a left-handed batter who hit .275 last year. He's never going to be a long-ball threat, but with his speed he's going to get a lot of leg hits.

"One guy who could be great is Dave Kingman of San Francisco. I'd love to be able to coach a kid like that. He has tremendous natural power, but he loops his swing because he's always going for homers. Mickey Mantle was like that in the beginning, but he got straightened out. I think Kingman will too. He's got enough power to hit homers without over-swinging the way he does."

During his 18 seasons with the New York Yankees, Mickey Mantle was the most prodigious switch-hitter of all time. He hit 536 home runs, many among the longest ever struck. Now 41, he works in marketing and public relations for the Metro Bank of Dallas and writes sports columns for a television magazine in Dallas.

MICKEY MANTLE Says:

"I know Bobby Murcer has been with the New York Yankees since 1965, except for 1967-68 when he was in military service. But he's still only 26 and, I believe, hasn't yet done all he can do as a hitter. Besides, I like him because he comes from Oklahoma, like me.

"I think Bobby should be able to hit for close to a .330 average every year. He could do it easily if he bunted every now and then like I used to. But he doesn't like to bunt, so this costs him a few points. But he can do everything else very well. He likes to hit and run, and as a left-handed hitter playing most of his games in Yankee Stadium, he's become a real home-run threat to right field.

"Bobby's big problem in the beginning came from trying to pull every pitch. Now he goes with the pitch and takes the outside pitch to left field. Bobby lays off the bad balls now and has learned to take more walks."

Edwin "Duke" Snider was one of the most feared left-handed sluggers in the game during his 18 big-league seasons as center fielder for the Brooklyn-Los Angeles Dodgers in the 1950's. He hit a total of 407 home runs, and for five consecutive seasons, 1953-57, hit at least 40 homers, tying a National League record originally set by Ralph Kiner. Snider, 46, makes his home on a farm in Fallbrook, Calif., and has worked successfully in broadcasting and baseball.

DUKE SNIDER Says:

"Cesar Cedeno of Houston is as fine a natural hitter as I've ever seen. He's a picture hitter with a smooth stroke. He also still seems to be growing, so there's no telling yet how big he may be. He may be a big home-run hitter, but if he's not, they shouldn't worry about it. He'll always hit his share of homers, and he'll always hit for the high average. That's a rare combination nowadays.

"Earl Williams, the slugging young catcher traded by Atlanta to Baltimore, looks like a great power threat, but he has to overcome a tendency to get hurt.

"The San Diego Padres have an excellent young prospect who may go places this season. He's a third baseman named Dave Hilton, about 22 years old, who's hit .300 wherever he's played. I think he can do it in the majors, too.

"Another young man who's going to be a very good hitter is Dave Kingman of San Francisco. He's so big and strong that he can't miss being a powerful home-run threat for years. But watching him on television, as I have, it's obvious what Kingman has been doing wrong. He uppercuts the ball too much. If he learns to swing down more on the ball, he'll be real good."

The St. Louis Cardinals' Stan "The Man" Musial may have been the greatest all-round hitter in the history of the National League. He established legions of records between 1941-63, including the mark for most career extra-base hits. Musial won six batting championships, and concluded his career with a .331 lifetime average and 475 home runs. Now 52, he is a vice president of the Cardinals, and owns a restaurant in St. Louis.

Wide World

STAN MUSIAL Says:

"Although he's a right-handed hitter and I was left-handed, I see one strong similarity between Cesar Cedeno and myself at this early stage of his career. Cedeno hasn't learned to pull the ball real well yet, and in my first couple of seasons with the Cardinals, I hit everything to left field. When I learned to pull the ball, I became a home-run hitter, and I think this is what's going to happen to Cedeno.

"I wouldn't advise anyone to tamper with Cedeno's swing, though. Once you have that fluid natural swing that he has, the worst thing you can do is tamper with it. He'll pull the ball with the same stroke he has now. A lot of it has to do with strength. He's really still growing into his manhood. Give him time and he'll be some hitter.

"We have a left-handed-hitting outfielder in St. Louis, name of Jose Cruz, who looks like he's going to be a star with the Cardinals for years. We had him with us quite a bit last year, but he wasn't quite ready. I think he'll be fine from now on. He's a slim fellow, but he shows signs of being able to hit the ball all around, and his great speed will also contribute to his offense."

Continued

Joe "Ducky" Medwick was the personification of great hitting during his 17 years in the majors. His lifetime average was .324 with 2,471 career hits. Few players ever have had a season to compare with Medwick's 1927 season for the St. Louis Cardinals, when he not only won the "triple crown"—home runs, RBI's and batting average (.374)—but he also led the league in hits, runs, doubles and slugging average. Now 61, Medwick sells insurance in St. Louis and helps the Cardinals develop young talent.

JOE MEDWICK Says:

"I think the Cardinals have as many good young up-and-coming hitters as any club in either league. One kid I'm real high on is Ted Simmons, the catcher. He's come a long way and he's still only 23. In his seasons as a regular he's batted over .300, and last year he hit 16 homers and drove in 96 runs. The Cardinals play in a big park so it's hard to hit a lot of homers, but Simmons is outstanding because he hits good pitching to all parts of the field. He's a switch-hitter, too, which is rare for a catcher.

"I think Jose Cruz has a good chance to be the regular center fielder in St. Louis for years and years. He really wants to improve himself.

"Another young man with a great future is Kenny Reitz, a right-handed-hitting third baseman. In his first look at big-league pitching in 1972, he batted .359 in 21 games with the Cardinals. He's only 21 and he's come a long way toward developing a good stroke to all fields."

Harry "The Hat" Walker, 54, compiled a .296 lifetime average during 11 seasons in the majors, and led the National League in batting in 1947 with a .363 average, dividing his service between the Phillies and Cardinals. Walker managed the Cardinals and Pirates before he became manager at Houston (a post he held until late last year), and now is in the real estate business in Leeds, Ala.

HARRY WALKER Says:

"In my last major-league managing job, I had the pleasure of watching Cesar Cedeno come into the league. When I managed at Pittsburgh, I had Roberto Clemente on my team, and he was the best hitter I ever saw. But Cedeno could have an even better record than Roberto.

"Cesar is what I would call a 'hungry' hitter. If he gets three hits, he's angry that he didn't get four. If I had to select somebody who might win several batting championships in the next few seasons, it would have to be him.

"In the beginning Cesar would make a mistake almost every day. If it wasn't a mistake at bat, it was in the field or on the bases. But I didn't say a word to him. I didn't want to risk curbing his initiative, his desire. The great thing about him is that he knows where he's wrong and he works to correct himself.

"Cesar plays as if he has rockets pushing him. And there are always a few around him ready to explode."

EMILE PLANES

By EMILE PLANES (AS TOLD TO PAUL STAG)

Here is how I catch more fish than I ever caught in my life before... More fish than I ever dreamed of — and BIGGER fish than I ever suspected possible. Here is how you can catch bass, pike, perch, bream, trout, salmon, crappie, pickerel, walleyes and many, many other kinds of fresh water game and pan fish plus many salt water fish... the same way I do.

Since I invented my fishing lure, I catch so many fish, such BIG fish, and catch them so FAST, people gather to watch me. I've been followed FOUR TIMES in ONE day by a fish warden to find out if my methods are legal. But my entire secret is my fishing lure that's GUARANTEED to CATCH FISH — or it costs you nothing. Yes, GUARANTEED to catch fish even when other lures or even live bait fails or no cost.

My lure works in lakes, ponds, streams, salt water, saves you time, work, money and disappointment, is ideal for amateurs, experts, trollers, casters, shore fishermen. My lure catches fish differently from anything you've ever seen before in fresh and salt water. Even veteran U. S. fishing guides have been surprised at its astonishing catches. And the French government itself has certified my lure by actual patent as UNIQUE.

An Underwater Discovery

I am a Frenchman, a science teacher, a skin diver and I have fished all my life. For years I have studied fish underwater — WHILE FISHERMEN ABOVE WATER were trying to catch them. What I discovered changed every idea I ever had about fishing and fish lures.

Lures Can Frighten Fish Away

I watched UNDERWATER exactly how fish reacted to every lure, live bait, every fishing maneuver and trick used to catch them. I watched fish approach even the best performing lures, seem ABOUT TO STRIKE — then suddenly TURN AWAY. Something about even the best performing lures was obviously often KEEPING THEM FROM CATCHING fish. As for the average lure, mostly they seemed actually to BORE the fish — as though they looked to the fish as they looked to me UNDERWATER — shiny, painted bits of metal, plastic and wood. I saw live bait after it was cast turn white and die before my eyes — and saw fish often approach, prepare to strike — THEN TURN AWAY.

Minnows Irresistible

Then I saw the same fish approach actual live swimming minnows and without caution or suspicion STRIKE RAVENOUSLY. I saw the same fish that rejected the lures again and again attack without caution LIVE SWIMMING MINNOWS. In fact, these little minnows seemed to DRAW many fish from a distance — even before being seen.

Why Lures Often Fail

My talks with fish scientists and my own studies convinced me it was the swimming motion of minnows, particularly the swishing tail that attracted many fish. I concluded that no lure I had ever used had SUFFICIENTLY duplicated the living minnow and its motion.

How, I asked myself, could a fish lure be created that would attract fish just as the actual living swimming minnows did — and that once attracted would get the same ravenous STRIKE as live minnows — WITHOUT the hesitation, suspicion and FEAR aroused by the lures I saw used?

My Man-Made "Minnow"
After 19 years of study and testing, I have finally created such a man-made "minnow," so like a living, swimming minnow in shape, form, texture and motion that fish ravenously STRIKE — without caution — and I catch more fish, bigger fish — faster than ever before in my life.

Because my man-made "fish" looks, darts, wiggles, even "feels" like a minnow... bass, pickerel, pike, perch, trout and many other kinds of fresh and salt water fish attack voraciously — without suspicion or fear — even when they're not biting for another fisherman on the lake.

Astonishing Catches Reported

I call my lure VIVIF. Once I perfected VIVIF I started selling them to other fishermen. Soon news of astonishing catches came in — first France — then from other countries.

Yes, from all over come reports of amazing catches — of fish biting where other lures failed — of the sureness, the simplicity, the effectiveness of this VIVIF lure. And what does this mean to you?

Simply this. Now YOU can get more out of fishing than ever before. Now YOU can catch more fish, bigger fish than ever in your life. It is GUARANTEED — or you pay not one penny. It means now no longer need you come back with an empty creel from a long day's fishing. It means no longer need you spend hours of work digging worms and catching minnows or other bait. It means you can save the endless expense of continually buying expensive spinners, flies, plugs, bait and lures. It means you can often catch the fish that are not biting on worms, bugs, plugs, spoons, canned bait, flies, cut bait or spinners or no cost. It means you can troll, cast, or shore fish with my lure with equal success. It means you can go out after and come back with large mouth bass, small mouth bass, pike, pickerel, perch, bream, trout, walleyes, salmon, red tuna, striped bass, blue fish, weak fish and do it time and again — or your money will be refunded at any time. VIVIF is catching fish in 25 countries for delighted fishermen. 3,000,000 VIVIF's have been grabbed up. Already reports from U.S. fishermen say VIVIF is the greatest lure they have ever used. I predict VIVIF will be the world's fastest selling fish lure. But test the magic power of VIVIF yourself without risking a penny.

TAKE-IT-EASY PORK CHOPS

1 pkg. (1½ ozs.) oven cooking bag and sauce mix for pork*
2 cups uncooked twisted macaroni or rotelle
2 onions, sliced
1 green pepper, seeded and cut in strips
2½ cups water
½ cup ketchup
¼ cup grated Parmesan or Parmesan-Romano Cheese

- Preheat oven to 350°F. Trim excess fat from pork chops, leaving about ¼ inch fat on edge.
- Form oven-cooking bag by closing one end with one twist tie provided. Place in a 1½-2-inch-deep large open roasting pan, big enough to prevent bag from extending over the sides.
- Place macaroni in bottom of bag. Top with onions and green pepper. Arrange chops on top.
- Blend sauce mix from package with water and ketchup; pour over chops. Sprinkle with cheese. Close bag with twist tie. Punch 4 small holes along top of bag.
- Place pan in center of preheated oven so bag will not touch top or sides of oven while cooking. Roast for 1½ hours.

6. Carefully remove pan from oven so that bag does not touch hot surfaces of oven.

7. Cut large circle from top of bag. Steam escapes, so be careful. Place chops on serving platter. Arrange onions, green pepper and macaroni around chops. Makes 4-6 servings

I was bottom-heavy until I lost 46 pounds.

By Jeanne O'Connor—as told to Ruth L. McCarthy

In the dead of winter, my husband and I bought a swimming pool on sale. Right then, I set my heart on having a great-looking swim suit to go with it. There was only one problem. I needed a slim figure to get into it. And at 165 pounds with a big bottom, I had a long way to go to be the backyard beauty of Scotia, New York.

I'd always been self-conscious about my weight, even as a schoolgirl. Not that I'd ever been gross, but I was usually the largest girl in my class at weigh-in time.

Sweets were my weakness — cookies, cake, soda and ice cream. They were always more important to me than meals, even after I married. And since I hated cooking, but loved baking, you can understand why I kept gaining. Then, too, I got fatter during pregnancies and having three sons in less than five years, my weight just piled up.

I also blame part of my problem on the fact that I'm sort of a rationalizer. I'm always finding excuses for not doing what I really don't want to do. For instance, I used to look at fat people on the street and say to myself: "She's fatter than I am." That made me feel slimmer, so I'd eat and feel content. But later, I'd see myself in a mirror and feel miserable again.

Occasionally, of course, I'd crash diet. I'd give up solid food entirely and live on liquids. Drinking my meals, however, would make me desperate for something to chew on, so I'd buy gum. But chewing gum just made me hungrier than ever. Believe me, it was a vicious circle.

That's why I decided, when we got our pool, that I'd have to try some other way to eat less. I'd read a lot about people who had taken those reducing-plan candies, Ayds®, and since many were much fatter than I was, I thought maybe Ayds could help me. (Notice how I thought everybody else was always fatter than I was?)

Anyway, I bought a box of the chocolate fudge Ayds at the drugstore and I started right away to follow the plan.

I'd never been a breakfast eater, so I just had one Ayds, hot coffee and juice. Mid-morning, I'd have another Ayds, with a cup of tea or water. Otherwise, I'd be grabbing cookies or whatever else was around, as I'd run for the telephone.

At 165 pounds, even holding one of my sons couldn't hide that thigh!

How do you like how I look now? Since I'm down to 119 pounds, believe me, I'll stand alone anytime.

Lunch was light, because I wasn't really hungry. Honest. Ayds, coffee and a sandwich would hold me until 4:00 p.m. That was my weak hour — when I needed something sweet. For dinner, I might have Ayds and tea again, then eat a regular meal with my family: chicken, vegetables and salad. As I said, heavy meals were never my problem. Between-meal snacks is where I got into trouble. I sure looked forward to a couple of Ayds and tea about 9:30 p.m., watching television.

In three months time on the Ayds plan, I'd lost 26 pounds and felt just marvelous. Particularly as the compliments began coming my way. Then I discovered I was pregnant. Even though I knew Ayds contained vitamins and minerals, but no drugs, I thought it best to stop reducing. Especially since I always felt nauseous during my pregnancies.

I must say, however, that losing those 26 pounds made the next nine months the easiest I'd ever had. I even looked good enough to wear a 2-piece maternity swim suit. In fact, I was so delighted with what the Ayds plan had done for me, I was back on it two weeks after I came home from the hospital. And I only had eight pounds to lose over again. As the weight came off once more, I started to look at slim girls instead of fat ones. I'd say to myself: "Is she slimmer than I am?" Then I'd try harder than ever to get another pound off.

I knew, of course, that there was no magic potion in Ayds, but for me there was the sweet satisfaction that I needed to help me eat less. Those Ayds candies actually helped curb my appetite enough so that I was able to get down to 119 pounds on the Ayds plan and into a terrific swim suit.

My next door neighbor just can't get over it. She keeps saying: "You looked so motherly when you moved in!" And another friend, when she saw me slim, blurted out: "You look like you're 18 again!"

Sometimes I even get treated that way. Like a few weeks ago, when my husband Bob and I went to a party. As I walked in, one of the men stared at me so hard, I got all flustered and self-conscious. But it was a great feeling! For Bob, too. After all, he'd had eight years of never having to think twice about what other men thought of me. Now, thanks to the Ayds plan, he can feel proud again. Oh, yes. And I don't have to worry about who sees me, poolside.

The Diet Watch

How Fattening Is That Sandwich?

It's so easy to kid yourself into believing that you're eating fewer calories in a particular sandwich than you really are. Try to estimate honestly how many calories there are in the sandwich, though it's difficult. The delicatessen corned beef sandwich that's chock-full of corned beef may have three or four (or more!) times the calories of the ladylike tearoom corned beef sandwich, with its one thin slice. So get used to measuring with your eye, and be careful to overestimate the quantity rather than underestimate. One delicatessen sandwich with three ounces of corned beef has 185 calories (plus two slices of bread), while the tearoom paper-thin slice may be hardly an ounce, at 60 calories. A ham sandwich may have an ounce of ham at 80 calories, or it can be more robust and have double that number calories. The important thing is to avoid fooling yourself. Fooling oneself is so fattening!—By Harriet La Barre

Pet Corner

Must Dogs Roam To Be Happy?

Many dog owners have the mistaken notion that a dog needs to be allowed to roam. Instead, the pup who runs free is in jeopardy of injury through accidents, poisoning, disease or fighting. Practically all communities in the U.S. have leash laws. When he is not walking on a lead, your pooch should be in your backyard, where he is safe and protected. The yard should be fenced and provided with a doghouse if he sleeps outside. Even if you trust that Bowser is not likely to roam far, remember that the kindest of neighbors will object to an unrestrained romp that soils his lawn or uproots his newly planted gladiolus bulbs.—By Felicia Ames

People and You

Your Doctor and the "Facts of Life"

When you ask your family physician for information or help with sexual matters, you have to remember that doctors are people. Just like other people, some doctors feel uncomfortable about discussing sex.

Dr. Richard Chilgren of the University of Minnesota medical school finds that doctors' self-consciousness when faced with a sexual discussion can prevent them from coming to grips with the patients' real problem. Dr. Chilgren and others have found that even when medical students know the sexual facts involved in a situation, they are often unable to talk openly with their patients. So some medical schools are now setting up seminars to help future doctors deal with their own sexual attitudes. However, when seeking help, remember that most doctors now practicing have had very little training in the treatment of sexual problems. It's up to you to determine whether your own doctor seems comfortable with the subject. If he doesn't, you may wish to seek help elsewhere.—By Shirley Sloan Fader.

A Reader's Remembrance

The Day I Met Sandy Duncan

"Well, I'm Sandy Duncan from Tyler," she told the class during the introductions. Then, looking down at her hands, she said in her sincere but shrill voice, "And I came to Lon Morris to develop a low, sultry voice."

The day I met Sandy Duncan was the day the Lon Morris College oral interpretation class met for the first time, back in 1964, in Jacksonville, Texas. The college is renowned in theater circles for its drama department, and most of us in "oral interp," including Sandy and me, were there for that reason.

In a way, I had known Sandy all my life. Her grandmother and mine were good friends, and they frequently commented on how strange it was that we shared the same name, Sandra Kay. There was also talk in my house about Sandy—that extraordinary girl who just "danced all the time."

To us "drama nuts" at Lon Morris, Sandy was already a celebrity, since she had been a regular cast member of the Dallas Summer Musicals since she was 12.

"Well, I'm Sandy Duncan from Tyler," she told the class during the introductions. Then, looking down at her hands, she said in her sincere but shrill voice, "And I came to Lon Morris to develop a low, sultry voice." The class's laughter went on for some time—but then so did Sandy's struggle to change her chipmunk voice.

With this memory come others: Sandy scolding us drama students for getting blue—trying to inspire us with her own positive thought waves. . . . Sandy being voted "The Most Popular Girl at LMC" (among other honors) . . . A bald-headed but exuberant Sandy talking to a male student who said he cried when he found out that dye had made her hair fall out. ("Well," said Sandy, "it's not the worst thing that could happen to me!")

Constantly she was told, "You've got to lower your voice." Then, miraculously, just as she was beginning to do just that, her shrill voice landed her the big break. CBS spotted her and loved that "too-high" voice.

I'll always remember Sandy's "unsinkableness" against a storm of lashing pessimists who said she couldn't be a famous actress, especially with "that voice."

Also, when Sandy became famous, my faltering faith that nice people can be successful was revived—and so was my belief that people with the right mental outlook can be what they want to be, even making their so-called "faults" into assets. —Sandra Kay Warren Overton, Texas

Amazing Medicated Foam Helps Stop Arthritis Pain —Up to Hours at a Time!

Painful Hands?

Aching Knees?

Shoulders Hurt?

RELIEF AT YOUR FINGERTIPS! In the morning, start your day by quickly relieving arthritis minor pain and stiffness with EXOCAINE. In the evening, help yourself get a more restful night's sleep by rubbing in EXOCAINE before you go to bed. You'll love it!

ARTHRITIS What Is It?

—by Ralph Saunders—

Whether it's called "arthritis" or "rheumatism," it means practically the same thing... "inflammation of joints or surrounding muscles and tendons."

Such inflammation can give you an aching back, stiff neck, sore knees, painful elbows, hands, or fingers; can make it more difficult for you to move around comfortably... can interfere with your work, your sleep, your life.

"What a Joy"

What To Do?

Only a doctor can diagnose your specific arthritis problems, as well as prescribe the proper medications and treatment to control them.

But for extra relief many doctors today recommend an external rub to supplement usual internal medications.

Until recently, most rubs contained merely an analgesic to help reduce the pains and discomforts resulting from tender, inflamed joints. These were all-right as far as they went. But they didn't go far enough!

Great News!

For years, science sought to develop an external rub that would not only help relieve pains caused by inflamed arthritis joints; but would also temporarily desensitize nerve endings that transmit pain.

Finally, such a formula was developed! A deep-penetrating spray-foam combining "METHYL SALICYLATE" (the best-known external pain-reliever), together with "BENZOCAINE" (the safest, quickest-acting anesthetic known to medical science).

Hospital-Proven!

A famous New York hospital clinically-tested this formula... proved it truly effective for 4 out of 5 arthritis sufferers.

► Now, you can get the identical formula (without prescription) at your favorite drug counter. It's called EXOCAINE MEDICATED FOAM. Get it today!

"Incredible... Unbelievable... But True"
—say many grateful thousands!

Never before has any product for arthritis pain-relief become so popular in so short a time! Everywhere EXOCAINE has been introduced, reports are enthusiastic. Here are just a few typical unsolicited letters...

Mrs. K. J., Milwaukee, Wis.— "Every time I use EXOCAINE, my pains seem to practically stop for hours. I shall always be grateful to Exocaine."

Nothing Like It!

Unlike other rubs, EXOCAINE is not a smelly liniment! Not a greasy cream! Not a watery spray! But a greaseless, stainless, clean-smelling foam that works with push-button ease to give you fast, "on-the-spot" relief wherever it hurts.

Of course, no medication works perfectly for everybody. But in 4 out of 5 cases, EXOCAINE has proved its remarkable effectiveness in providing welcome relief and extra comfort for the discomforting stiffness and transitory pains caused by inflamed arthritic joints.

Today, get EXOCAINE at any drug counter. Keep it handy to use whenever you need it!

Now! Easy push-button way gives fast, yet long-lasting relief!

NEW YORK, N.Y.—Today, all over America, thousands of arthritis sufferers report that living with their painful flare-ups is no longer such a distressing experience; thanks to a remarkable medicated foam-rub called EXOCAINE®.

What Relief!

No wonder! For unlike other rubs, EXOCAINE not only relieves minor pains of arthritis and its discomforting stiffness; but at the same time, temporarily desensitizes nerve endings... lessens the sensation of pain. Up to hours at a time!

You'll discover this unique medicated foam starts to work immediately as you rub it in; that afterwards you should be able to move around more comfortably.

No Prescription Needed

So, don't let discomforting stiffness and nagging arthritis pains needlessly make your life miserable! Next time you get an arthritis attack, be sure to take your usual medications.

But, for extra relief and comfort, gently massage in pain-relieving EXOCAINE.

EXOCAINE before I go to bed and usually sleep like a baby."

Mr. E. B., Atlanta, Ga.— "As a salesman, I can't afford to have anything interfere with my work. But many times in the past few years, I've been troubled with arthritis pain in my feet. Now, when my pains come on all of a sudden, I rub in EXOCAINE. It's really been a great help to me."

Miss R. O., Los Angeles, Cal.— "As a person troubled by arthritis, I'm thankful for anything that brings me relief. And EXOCAINE sure does!"

Miss P. D., New York, N.Y.— "Before I started using EXOCAINE, there were many nights I couldn't get to sleep because my arthritis kept on bothering me, even after taking my aspirin. But now, I rub in

QUOTE: Comedy in a hospital? James Whitmore tells us he found it there. "I was being shown around a hospital as background for 'Temperatures Rising.' The surgeon with us gave me a funny look, and said to the nurse who was with us, 'Is Dr. Williams keeping Jones running?' The nurse blushed furiously and mumbled 'I guess so.' Not being a terribly sensitive person, I said, 'What-taya blushing about?' She said, 'The doctor will tell you.' When he and I got into an elevator, he finally told me: Jones was an amply-endowed nurse's aide who had gone into Women's Lib to the point of divesting herself of her bra. So now all the doctors on the floor keep calling her and adding, 'Hurry it up!' And everyone watches Jones running down the hall. That's the kind of human comedy that goes on even in a hospital." UNQUOTE.

How bad off can a business get? The bankrupt Penn Central Railroad, it was

This despite the fact that the railroad has yet to pay any of the 26,000 creditor claims against it (totaling $3.3 billion), is excused from paying property taxes, is not being made to repay its hundreds of millions of dollars in bank debt, and is protected even from bodily-harm lawsuits from injured passengers. A week before my husband's birthday my son, Glen, age three, and I were wrapping his birthday gift. I told Glen it was a secret and we must not tell Daddy. A few days later his Daddy asked him, "Do you know that Friday is my birthday?" Glen looked at me very surprised and said, "He knows, but I didn't tell him!"

A prospective father prided himself on the fact that he was sure he wouldn't become excited when the time came for him to take his wife to the hospital. He made a thorough list of things to do at the first signs of labor, and even went so far as to make several practice runs to the hospital so he wouldn't get lost.

The warning came after 1 a.m., so he picked up his list and read: "1. Call St. John's Hospital." Then he calmly picked up the telephone and started dialing "S-A-I-N-T." —Dan Bennett

“To have and to hold...in sickness and in health...”

THAT'S A PLEDGE you can live up to when you have “Wide-Range” disability income insurance that can provide up to $1,200.00 A MONTH when you can't work because of a covered sickness or accident... in or out of the hospital.

“To hold” is a fine and powerful promise, packed with many meanings—“to guard,” “to keep,” “to support.” A world of promises in one—tough promises to hold to in sickness.

But you can have help. As the breadwinner, you can select the amount you qualify for (from $100.00 to $1,200.00 a month) to help replace your paychecks when you're sick or hurt and can't work. These monthly disability benefits are all yours to spend as you please for any purpose you choose...yours to use for every kind of bill...yours over and above any benefits you receive for hospital and medical bills.

These benefits are not payable for disabilities that start after retirement or age 65 (whichever comes first), nor for losses caused by war or military service; narcotics, unless prescribed by a physician; childbirth, pregnancy or resulting complications; conditions known or previously treated except as described below.

THERE ARE SEVEN REASONS WHY YOU SHOULD CONSIDER THIS MUTUAL OF OMAHA PLAN:

- 1 You may qualify for up to $1,200.00 monthly income benefits to spend as you see fit when you're sick or hurt and can't work!
- 2 These disability benefits are provided both IN and OUT of the hospital!
- 3 Benefits are provided for both accidents and sickness covered by your policy, other than conditions known or previously treated. These may be covered after your policy has been in force 12 months if they have been named in your application and not excluded.
- 4 Mental disorders are covered the same as any other sickness!
- 5 Your policy protects you as a passenger in any kind of aircraft—even a private plane!

6 Benefits are provided for disabilities incurred both on and off the job. They are available in addition to your Workmen's Compensation or Employer's Liability coverage!

7 You have this renewal agreement: Mutual of Omaha guarantees that no matter how much you may receive in benefits, you cannot be singled out for policy termination or for a premium increase. The only time your premium can be changed is when premiums for all policies of the same classification in your state are changed!

How much monthly income do you qualify for? Find out. Send for full facts about this basic protection that helps you keep your promise, and you will also receive information about the fine plans to meet your life insurance needs now available from Mutual of Omaha's affiliate, United of Omaha. These facts are yours without cost or obligation if you write to Mutual of Omaha, Readers' Service, Dept. 123, Omaha, Nebraska 68131. Or even better, mail the postpaid reply card now.

Our Story: BOLTARSON SAILS HIS LONGSHIP INTO THE FJORD AND LANDS AT TRONDHEIM. THEN FROM THE MOUNTAINTOPS SIGNAL FIRES ARE LIT ALL THE WAY TO VIKINGSHOLM, TO TELL KING AGUAR THAT IMPORTANT VISITORS ARE ON THE WAY.

ON THE BEACH BELOW VIKINGSHOLM CASTLE, A CHEERING CROWD GREETS THEM, FOR THE VISIT OF AN IMPORTANT NOBLE CALLS FOR A PUBLIC BANQUET AND GAMES.

KING AGUAR GREETS HIS GRANDSON, PRINCE ARN, AND HIS HEART IS GLAD. WITH A SON LIKE VAL AND A GRANDSON LIKE THIS STALWART LAD, THE KINGDOM WILL BE SAFE FOR MANY YEARS TO COME.

"PRINCE HEIDMAR IS TO BE CROWNED KING OF HOLVIK AND I SHOULD ATTEND THE CORONATION, BUT THE WOUND I RECEIVED IN THE LAST BATTLE FORBIDS IT. WILL YOU GO, ARN, AS MY REPRESENTATIVE?"
"YES, SIRE, GLADLY," ANSWERS ARN.

AS GRANDSON OF THE GREAT KING AGUAR HE RECEIVES EVERY COURTESY. UNLIKE THE VIKINGS THESE INLAND PEOPLE ARE VERY FORMAL AND DO EVERYTHING ACCORDING TO ESTABLISHED CUSTOM.
