Another 49 POWs Freed By Communists In Hanoi

By ROBERT LIU
Associated Press Writer
CLARK AIR BASE, Philippines (AP) — The Communists freed 49 more American POWs in Hanoi today, including a charter pilot held longer than any other U.S. civilian prisoner in the war.

Among the men freed were nine Americans captured in Laos. A young Canadian missionary captured in Laos also was handed over. Two big flying hospitals brought the freed men from the North Vietnamese capital to Clark Air Base, the first stop on their trip home.

The 10 prisoners of the Communist Pathet Lao arrived first, in midafternoon. The other 40 Americans, who had been prisoners of North Vietnam, landed three hours later. The men freed today joined

McCord Agrees Answer Questions Under Oath Before Senate Probers

By JOHN CHADWICK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Convicted Watergate conspirator James W. McCord Jr. agreed to answer questions under oath today at a closed-door interview with a special Senate investigation committee.

The interview, arranged by the committee late Tuesday, is preliminary to later public hearings on the bugging of Democratic headquarters in the Watergate complex here and other alleged political espionage and sabotage in last year's presidential campaign.

E. Howard Hunt Jr., another of those awaiting sentencing for the Watergate break-in and bugging, was to return again before a federal grand jury today.

Hunt, one of five who pleaded guilty at the start of the Watergate trial last January, spent

Legislative Backlog In Senate Said Piling Up

RALEIGH (AP) — Although 1,558 bills have been introduced in the North Carolina General Assembly in 55 days, only 159 of have been enacted, many of them resolutions.

Sen. Gordon Allen, D-Person, president pro tem of the Senate, cited these figures Tuesday as he suggested to fellow members that "we get to work if we're going home in May."

Legislative leaders have set May 11 as the target date for winding up the current session.

The Senate agreed on motion of Allen that beginning Friday the Senate principal clerk will prepare a 48-hour calendar to help speed up things.

Under this plan, Senate members will have find two calendars on their desk at the beginning of each session — one for the current day and one for the next day.

Allen said the idea was proposed by Sen. Herman Moore, D-Mecklenburg.

Moore told a newsman he had been trying for six years to get the 48-hour calendar adopted. He noted that recently five bills on the Senate calendar were postponed for various reasons.

Allen explained that by having a 48-hour calendar, senators can see what is coming up the following day and research or study any bills they are interested in without asking that they be delayed.

Allen told a newsman later that the senators are working, "but we're not producing."

He said that not a single major bill has been enacted this session. Several have been defeated or killed.

Unless the legislative tempo is stepped up, Allen noted, a number of issues will be carried over until January, 1974, when the legislature leaves town this year.

"There's not a whole lot wrong with carrying things over if the issues are not urgent and critical," Allen said.

Deficit Growing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. is facing its second consecutive year-end trade deficit, but a Treasury Department official sees signs of improvement ahead.

Paul Volcker, undersecretary for monetary affairs, said Tuesday that the value of exports rose 14 per cent over the past four months, while imports increased 12 per cent. This, Volcker said, points to improvement in the trade picture, despite trade deficits for the months of January and February.

A trade deficit occurs when more foreign goods are sold in the U.S. than are sold by this country to other nations. As a result, more money leaves the country than is paid into the U.S. economy.

The deficit for February plunged to $476 million, compared to January's deficit of $303 million. In February, the U.S. had imports totaling some $5.5 billion and exports of $4.9 billion.

The figures for January were $2.6 billion for imports and $4.9 billion in exports.

Med School Up To Out-Of-State Panel

Members named to a five-member panel of medical educators from different states, selected to decide if North Carolina needs another state-supported four-year medical school—and whether such a school should be located at East Carolina University—were identified yesterday by Goldsboro attorney William Dees, chairman of the University of North Carolina Board of Governors.

The formation of the panel of consultants was recommended by a medical study committee of the Board of Governors after it made no decision on whether a second state supported school of medicine was needed following a study last year. Dees said today that he is "well pleased with the selection," and that the "people that we asked to undertake the study agreed to do it." And, he noted, "I feel it is a well balanced committee and am looking forward to working with them."

Members of the committee include:

—Dr. Kurt W. Deuschle, chairman of the department of community medicine at Mt. Sinai School of Medicine with the City University of New York.

—Dr. Kenneth Crispell, vice-president for health services at the University of Richmond.

—Dr. Ivan L. Bennett Jr., vice-president for health affairs and director of the Medical Center at New York University.

—Dr. Lloyd C. Elam, president of Meharry Medical College in Nashville, Tenn.

—And Dr. Robert S. Stone, vice-president of health sciences and dean of the school of medicine at the University of New Mexico.

According to Dees, "Medical educators at Greenville and at Chapel Hill agree that it's a balanced committee... and we should have the viewpoint, expressed by both sides, by modern medical education people."

Commenting today on the committee selection, Dr. Edwin Monroe, vice-chancellor for Health Affairs at ECU, said the committee members "all represent out of state medical schools—one from a black school (Dr. Elam), two from

Subcommittee Points Out Inconsistencies In Roles

By REESE HART
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — A legislative subcommittee reported today it has found inconsistencies in teaching salaries, average appropriations per student and administrative costs at the 16 state-supported institutions of higher education in North Carolina.

The joint Senate-House Appropriations Committee was told that the subcommittee also found:

—3,187 of the some 13,000 state-owned vehicles are used to travel back and forth to state employee's homes at lunch or at the end of the day.

—A "massive amount of printed materials" is being circulated by various state agencies.

—Inequities in the special tuition rates granted to some 3,112 out-of-state students allowing them to pay reduced rates.

—A "proliferation" of extension and public service programs in higher education.

The appropriations subcommittee, headed by Rep. Horton Rountree, D-Pitt, and Sen. Tom Strickland, D-Wayne, made a five-week study of the state's proposed base budget for the next fiscal year. This budget provides for continuation of existing programs and allows for normal growth.

Rep. Carl Stewart, D-Gaston, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, told the Senate-House committee the subcommittee was "plowing new ground."

Five subcommittees have been meeting for five weeks to study various budget requests. This was the first subcommittee to make its reports. Others will come later this week.

Stewart said plans call for a subcommittee to be appointed later this week which will handle the chore of formulating the state budget. It will consist of 22 members from the House and 16 or 17 from the Senate. This subcommittee will work about a month and then make its final report to the full appropriations committee.

Rountree said his subcommittee found inconsistencies at the 16 state-supported institutions of higher education in: average teaching salaries; average appropriations per student; student health services; plant operation and maintenance; and administrative cost at each institution.

The subcommittee recommended that the appropriations committee or its standing committee make a further study of the inconsistencies. It called for an in-depth study of the budgeting based on student-teacher ratio, saying "this is one reason for the tremendous increase in the cost of higher education."

Expressing concern over the amount of printed material being circulated by state government, the subcommittee recommended an across the board reduction of 25 per cent be implemented except for the Department of Revenue "so that we can send out the tax returns."

The subcommittee said tuition exceptions to out-of-state students cost about $3.4 million per year. This includes athletic scholarships. The subcommittee recommended that it be cut by $500,000 and that the Board of Governors of the University of North Carolina system implement the reduction "in an equitable manner as possible."

The subcommittee also recommended that:

—One of the two state-owned helicopters assigned to the Department of Administration be transferred to the State Bureau of Investigation to be used exclusively for law enforcement.

—Future budgets of the Department of Community Colleges be broken down into detail by type of instruction.

—The appropriations committee examine "the antiquated system of data processing in the Board of Education."

—A study be made of the "proliferation of extension courses" being offered at the 56 community colleges and technical institutions.

Man Held In Florida Faces Many Counts Of Greenville Burglaries

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer
Derral Dean Johnson, 27, of Greenville, and Corpus Christi, Texas is in custody in Florida for a local burglary and multiple charges brought by Florida officials, will be charged with a series of nine other local burglaries, Chief Glenn Cannon said this morning.

He is being held in the county jail in Palm Beach, Fla. without privilege of bond on charges of first degree burglary brought in connection with a September 5 break-in in Greenville at the home of W. C. Butler, 2803 Crockett Dr. and on several house breaking charges brought by Florida police.

The chief emphasized that charges of first degree burglary will be brought against Johnson in connection with nine other house breakings in the Greenville area as a result of investigations by Greenville police, agents of the State Bureau of Investigation and members of the Pitt County Sheriff's Department.

The series of house burglaries for which Johnson will be charged, Cannon explained, began September 1, 1972 and ended February 25, 1973.

Johnson was arrested in Lake Park — near Palm Beach — about 10 p.m. March 23. At that time he was charged on a warrant by Greenville Police and the SBI with burglary in connection with the Butler break-in.

Local detectives and SBI agents went to Florida the following day to continue their investigation, and as a result Cannon explained, he will be charged with nine additional burglary counts here.

At present, Johnson has been charged with four counts of house burglary by Florida authorities and other cases under investigation there.

According to Cannon, cases in which Johnson will be charged locally —including date of offense, resident and address —include: Sept. 1. Mary Iaboni, 2606 South Wright Rd.; Sept. 5. Dick Haut, 2701 Jefferson Dr.; Sept. 15. Elmer Britt, 1203 Franklin Dr.; Sept. 19. Kelly Barnhill, 108 Azalea Dr.; Sept. 25. T. R. Ellis, 1718 Forest Hill Dr. and J. C. Whitehurst Jr., 1712 Forest Hill Drive; November 26. Dr. S. R. Bartlett Jr., 208 North Longmeadow Rd.; Feb. 1. Edward Joseph Seycora, 2002 E. Fourth St.; and Feb. 25. Frankie Lynn Hardee, 101 Berkshire Rd.

Cannon, who praised the work of local officers, the SBI and the Pitt Sheriff's Department, and the cooperation received from other law enforcement agencies on the case, said investigation of the series of cases is continuing.

Found Bound, Gagged, Dead

WARRENTON, N.C. (AP) — An elderly retired farmer, bound and gagged, was found dead in bed late Tuesday at his home where he lived alone, according to Warren County Sheriff Clarence Davis.

The sheriff said the victim, Turner Fields, believed to be in his 80s, was found by a brother who lived nearby.

Davis said Nathaniel Fields related that he had not seen his brother all day and when he went to check, he found his brother in bed with his feet and hands tied, with a gag in his mouth, and with bed clothes piled over him.

The sheriff said Fields apparently died of suffocation some time Monday. Robbery was advanced as a possible motive.

Chocolate Filling Recipe

In Sunday's issue of The Daily Reflector, the ingredients for a chocolate filling were omitted from the recipe for Peanut Butter Pinwheels.

The recipe is as follows:

Chocolate Filling
In a small heavy saucepan over low heat, stirring constantly melt one 6-ounce package (1 cup) semisweet chocolate pieces and 2 tablespoons butter. Cool at room temperature, but do not let chocolate harden. Makes about 2-3 cup.

Never polish or wash the car in the sun. Do those chores when car is in the shade.

Isolation Of The Aged Is Attacked By Young Writer

By JOY STILLEY
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Older people are victims of more discrimination than any other group, believes Sharon Curtin, whose experiences during years of working and living with them have resulted in a book "in praise of old people and in outrage at their loneliness."

"Blacks, Chicanos and women are organized, visible and a little bit threatening, and old people will have to follow their example and organize as a political force," says the author of "Nobody Ever Died of Old Age."

"We have a whole mythology about old people that we all accept: pat them on the head and give them a pacifier," says the 33-year-old registered nurse. She thinks that they should "refuse to be pacified, refuse to take nonsense from their families and social workers and demand a guaranteed income with no social agency interference."

Miss Curtin became increasingly aware of the isolation and shelving of the nation's 20 million persons over 65 as she worked in mental hospitals and nursing homes, lived with them in fleabag hotels, sat with them on park benches, ate with them in greasy spoons and even followed the owner of "the fastest pair of hands in New York" on her shoplifting rounds.

As she relaxed on the bed in her hotel room here in blue jeans and purple sweater, her eyes sparkled indignantly, from behind huge round glasses as she recalled some of the things she had seen.

"I worked in a nursing home — a posh, nice, well-run 198 type place — but the 'clients' weren't given the dignity of names; they were all called honey and dearie; they had no privacy, no control over when or what they ate. They were discouraged from becoming friends with each other. The institution wanted them totally dependent on it."

With an old lady who posed as her mother Miss Curtin made the rounds of retirement villages. "They feel like concentration camps with their high walls and security systems," she says of them. "There's no variety among the people. There are dumb games and dumb things to do to fill the hours. There's nothing for people to love outside themselves."

Raised in a small Wyoming town with grandparents close by and many old people as friends, where growing old was regarded as a natural process, the author was surprised as she moved about the country to learn that the word "old" had come into "such awful disrepute." She was saddened, too, by seeing the struggles of the elderly poor to stay alive.

"Half the old people in this country live below the poverty level, on less than $240 a month," she points out. "It means they can't afford proper medical care; they don't eat right and that means an increase in disabilities."

After talking to people from 50 to 100 she found that the first realization they had that they were old came from someone giving them that label. "Anybody who's been put out of work even at 45 and finds it impossible to get another job knows the prejudices against age," she says.

She thinks old people would do well to start consciousness-raising groups to raise their own pride. "But the poor old people don't have time to do anything but be old and poor, trying to keep a roof over their heads; the middle class people have guilt feelings because they have bought the idea that once you quit being a productive member of society you are a supplicant. And the upper class old are too busy trying to stay young with wrinkle creams and hair dyes, because they have the money to do it."

The first thing old people should do, Miss Curtin declares, is realize that their problems cross class lines and that no matter what their backgrounds, they are more alike than different.

"I hope my book will help change attitudes toward old people," she says. "I like being with them, getting into their lives and trying to understand them."

"But I don't want to become the world's youngest advocate of old age, a closed one-issue person," adds Miss Curtin, who is working on a novel about growing up in America as a woman.

Toy Libraries Are Aimed To Teach Middle Class Parents How To Play With Children

By ROBERT STRAND
SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Make way for toy libraries that teach middle class parents how to play with their children.

You spend an evening learning how to play with a toy yourself. Then you take it home to your youngster. It's like Christmas once a week.

Twenty minutes with a toy can be worth three hours in the classroom, says Glen Nimnicht, associate director of the Far Western Laboratory for Educational Research and Educational Development.

The laboratory is a non-profit organization supported by federal, state and private funds, and Nimnicht is one of three inventors of a set of toys to give children a healthy self image with sharpened abilities to solve problems.

The toy library was designed having in mind the great majority of parents—those too rich for the Head Start program and too poor for the private nursery schools available to the more affluent.

In the past year, about 250 toy libraries have been set up in schools, churches, day care centers and even in a Bank of America branch. The number is growing.

The toys, designed for age 3 to-8, range from the simple, such as film cans containing different objects to be shaken for their sounds, and stacking squares in different colors.

Matching Cards
Or more challenging, such as matrix blocks or card decks in which identical cards are matched "by finding the rule" for matching dissimilar patterns on their backs.

One of the latter decks, says Nimnicht, "really tore up our board of directors." Kids can do them much more easily than adults.

The object of the games is to teach children to notice differences and samenesses, to extend patterns, experience mathematical concepts and develop inductive reasoning.

But the library is as much a course for parents as a set of toys. Parents are given suggestions on how to treat their youngsters positively, and "role play" the parts of children with their toys.

"With these toys you can only ask a child once a day to play," says Nimnicht. "And this is one toy he does not have to put away. He may use it whenever he wishes."

"And if a child changes the rules, you play by his rules."

Nimnicht hopes to develop a new set of educational toys for children "zero to three", but the project depends on obtaining a grant from a foundation.

Reach Your Nonstop Talker By Direct Route

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: If you have ever had this problem in your column, I must have missed it. It is one that several of us share.

We have a dear friend who talks too much. She is bright, attractive, and has many fine qualities, but her endless, detailed monologues are boring and exhausting.

Her husband is intelligent and articulate, but he doesn't get a chance to open his mouth because his wife always has the floor. If someone else is talking, she interrupts and proceeds to dominate the conversation.

She has always been a talker, but lately it's gotten to the point where our husbands don't care to spend an evening listening to her.

If you or any of your readers know how to reach a person with this fault, please tell us. Thank you, and please don't use my name. NAME WITHHELD

DEAR NAME: The only effective way to reach a non-stop talker is via the direct route. One of her best friends should tell her privately, gently, but emphatically that she really should not talk so much, and give others a chance. And since you're the friend who wrote the letter, perhaps you're the one to tell her. It would be an act of kindness.

DEAR ABBY: I went to my minister because I have been having marital problems with my husband. It had to do with lovemaking. [He wasn't doing any.] I'm 28, and he's 29.

The minister said he really didn't know all that much about the subject, but he suggested that I take some lessons in belly dancing so I could entertain my husband and maybe that would perk him up a little.

Do you know of any place in Asheville, N. C., that teaches belly dancing? WILLING TO LEARN

DEAR WILLING: Not offhand, but look up dance studios in your Yellow Pages, and inquire. [P. S. Ask the minister where HE got the idea.]

DEAR ABBY: I am writing to you because all the etiquette books dodge this question. Is it proper to tip the owner of a barbershop or beauty parlor? I understand if you do, some owners are insulted.

I go regularly to a barbershop, where I tip the employe. However, from time to time, the owner of the shop cuts my hair himself. I know him personally, and know that he makes a good living from the shop, so I never tip him.

My wife tells me that she runs up against the same situation in her beauty shop where the owners sometimes do the work.

What is the correct procedure—if there is one? PUZZLED IN PHOENIX

DEAR PUZZLED: Offer. If the owner is insulted, he will let you know it, in which case don't "insult" him again.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "C" IN FORT COLLINS, COLO.: Sometimes the easiest way "around" something is thru it. So quit looking for angles and DO IT!

Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L. A., Calif. 90009. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

White is the newsmaker in jewelry for summer. White jewelry in the Monet collection includes sleek collars, soft chain fill-ins, elegant matinees and hi-los with swishing tassels. Also big: white beads in a variety of sizes, shapes and lengths—faceted, frosted, filigreed and smooth.

Charms for luck, love, fond wishes, shared fun and memories are just a sampling of the multitude of special meanings to be found in any store's varied collection. Charms lead a busy fashion life and make appropriate gifts for any occasion.

Monet charms are designed with clever easy-to-attach snap rings. They can be moved from beloved bracelets to neck chains and ropes with the greatest of ease.

The soft blouson is big news for spring. Button earrings go well with the blouson look. Around the neck a jewelry collar in a lacy pattern adds a nice touch.

For soft sweaters, big for spring, don a delicate tassel pendant paired with a graceful jewelry rope. Tassel drop earrings and a duo of matching floral bracelets complete the look of understated elegance.

The Great Gatsby Look brings tennis off the courts and into the fashion scene. Pointing up the V neckline calls for a provocative pendant in a geometric design.

New Fabric Designs Are Based On Antique Restorations

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer
French headings, jabots, swag valances and turkey work may again become part of the day-to-day decorating vocabulary as more women tour house restorations and museums.

Should the same tie-back tasseled style drapery in the federal dining room be used in the Victorian bedroom? What about poles — are they in or out? What about valances? These questions, puzzling to many talented home decorators, may be answered by observing the decorative window treatments used in museums and restorations.

In planning a collection of fabrics and wallpapers for their most recent restoration project, the Wickham-Valentine House in Richmond, Va., Zelena Brunschwig and Murray Bartlett Douglas had to find designs for reproduction that were authentic to the house and adaptable to today's printing methods and colorways. With the help of a curator and project coordinator, they worked with Regency, Federal, Greek Revival and Victorian styles that were used during occupancy of the house (1812-1890), a range from classic simplicity to gaudy Victorian.

The varied treatment given to old designs in the Brunschwig Design Studios makes them compatible even in contemporary homes. Some of the tiny patterns are enlarged, some motifs were spaced differently to accommodate fabric of wider width.

"For example we used a striped fabric on a valance and the curtains for an 18th century design, but it could be used more simply with a pole and without a valance in either a traditional or contemporary house," remarked Mrs. Douglas.

In fact, she explained, there are many things one can do with trimmings to provide a pretty look in any room, no matter what its furniture style. "You can set off almost any curtain — unbleached muslin, spalinen or whatever — with a little border. In a boy's room it might be tailored and in a girl's room it might be applied to fabric draped on a wall canopy. The border might be applied with snap tabs if the curtain cannot be washed," she advised.

Both ideas were used in this restoration, where they also used a great deal of dimity — the 100 per cent cotton that "harkens back to our forefathers." She likes it for its simplicity and easy drapability — it is great with fancy architectural moldings or used with a valance of another fabric, such as figured moire. But it is expensive. Mills are making it only in small quantities. One might find other simple cottons to use in the same fashion.

In a Victorian bedroom with light green walls and white chair rail trimmed with brown, they used a red and celadon paisley plume design taken from a child's robe. Tasseled low on the softly gathered drapery, it revealed the black lining.

Chintz makes a lovely drapery in any room, Mrs. Douglas reminds homemakers who are stymied for window ideas. Chintzes are available with and without borders that can be used as panels or cut off and mitred at angles on the drapery.

"For purists, window dressing is to control light and secondarily to create a soft mood. But draperies and curtains can serve as architectural controls, widening rooms or providing height to low ceilings, depending on how you place them. Hanging them on poles and avoiding long horizontal valances can make a too-low ceiling appear to be higher," she explained.

Cigar Smoking Withdrawal Period

LEIGE, Belgium (WNS) — Bruno Spaaken, 26, broke his engagement to Olga Ruys, 22, only two weeks before their scheduled wedding. Spaaken explained, "I love Olga with all my heart, but the cigars that she smokes make me physically ill." Now the wedding is on again, but it has been postponed six months until Olga gives up her "stinking weed."

Postman Won't Catch Cold

ROYA, Spain (WNS) — Last winter postman Pedro Ruiz caught cold seven times while delivering mail. Since then, village woman have each knitted him turtle-neck sweaters, mufflers and socks. "I've got enough cloths to open a store," he smiles gratefully. The only problem is that I haven't enough space in my bachelor's room to keep all these gifts."

Sobering Report On Housing

A report by The Associated Press that home prices are accelerating so rapidly it threatens home ownership for middle class Americans is sobering indeed.

We cannot think of anything that more symbolizes the American dream than the ownership of a home to provide shelter for the family. Yet here we find that even middle class Americans may soon be in a position where they will have to pay rent permanently.

In fact, already millions of Americans on below average incomes cannot afford houses, the Associated Press reports. The are virtually no new houses selling for under $12,500 and this will soon be true of under $15,000 houses. The $20,000 and under houses now represent less than 10 percent of sales.

Easy money, high labor costs, dwindling available land, higher lumber prices and demand for bigger and better houses all shared the blame for the spiraling costs of housing.

Whatever the reasons, Levitt and Sons now say potential buyers earn at least $18,000 a year to qualify for a new Levitt house.

And the advice for those who think they might save awhile longer before buying is, forget it. House prices are increasing $3,000 per year.

All this does not paint a very bright picture for the young family starting full of hopes for a prosperous and happy future. At the very center of their dreams is that home of their own; a sanctuary from the cares of the world and the one thing that, once you pay for it, nobody can take it away.

The problem in future years may be not hanging on to it but getting it in the first place.

Discordance In Unity Efforts

By BYAN HAISLIP
RALEIGH — North Carolina Democrats orchestrated a unity symphony for their annual Jefferson-Jackson Day dinner, but discordant notes crept into the music.

Even as the party faithful applauded closed ranks of leadership and cheered themselves with predictions of future election victories, they heard murmurs of underlying division and controversy among the troops.

Two disturbing chords reverberated as counterpoint to the public harmony—the likely political consequence of a partisan confrontation between a Democratic legislature and a Republican governor, and the prospect of a party-splitting primary for U.S. Senate in 1974.

The $50 per plate dinner poured upwards of $54,000 into the treasury and brought together the state's Democrats for their first big affair since losing the governorship and a U.S. Senate seat in last fall's general election.

Gov. Dale Bumpers of Arkansas, featured soloist among a chorus of speakers rousing party spirits, urged that adversity be used as an incentive to self-examination and a new discovery of the traditional Democratic role as the party of the common people.

"History will judge us, not be our defeats, but by our responses to defeat," he said.

Response To Defeat
One reaction to defeat was what most Democrats talked about as they gathered more than a thousand strong in Raleigh for the weekend event. Pending legislation to keep Republicans from gaining control of the election machinery provoked animated conversation and volatile differences of opinion.

Some said the bill, pushed by the Democratic majority in the House, hands the GOP a ready-made issue for the 1974 campaign. They argued that the transparent power play to prevent Gov. Jim Holshouser, as the first Republican governor in the century, from naming the state and county boards of elections will backfire with voters.

Others contended that giving up the driver's seat in the conduct of elections would mean Democratic losses at the polls. Privately, hard-nosed political types said it could cost half a dozen or more legislative races in tight western counties and upwards of 150,000 votes in a statewide contest.

Party leaders indicated they will leave the issue to Democrats in the General Assembly.

BYAN HAISLIP

Hargrove (Skipper) Bowles Jr. titular party head as the loser to Holshouser last fall, said he has a strong personal feeling on the matter but he is keeping it to himself.

Not Taking Sides

On a four-week swing through the state, Bowles said he found the issue has divided the party and generated strong controversy. "For me to take sides would keep me from doing the job I have set for myself, which is to build unity," he explained.

Bad vibrations from the elections bill in the younger party element was reported by Tom Barringer, state president of Young Democratic Clubs. "I don't like it. The timing is wrong," he said.

Barringer said he favored the approach advocated by Lt. Gov. Jim Hunt, ranking elected Democrat, for a non-partisan elections system. "It should not be used as a political tool," he asserted.

Pat Taylor, former lieutenant governor defeated by Bowles in last year's hard-fought primary, said his feelings are mixed. There is some justification for the General Assembly which gave power to a Democratic governor to take it back when the governor no longer is a Democrat, he said. On the other hand, he agreed, the public reaction could have deep political repercussions. "It's a two-edged sword," he remarked.

Party Above Candidates
Taylor urged an end to primary fratricide for the good of the party. "It's time for candidates to place the party above their personal ambitions," he declared.

The theme had a disquieting ring to friends of Atty. Gen. Robert Morgan, contemplating the U.S. Senate seat which comes up next year.

Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr., the lion of the hour due to Watergate and other involvement in national affairs, took the stance of a man with open options in spite of rumors he may choose to retire. A source close to the Senator said he is feeling pressure to run from

Resistance Whetting The Public's Wonder

It is really time for President Nixon to make White House aides available to Senate investigators so they may tell what they know.

If these aides have nothing to hide in the Watergate bugging affair as the President reportedly has said, then their appearing before Senate committee hearings will make no difference.

The public has been tolerant of the whole Watergate matter, but continued resistance by the White House to the investigation of the matter make the most wonder if there is not the possibility of real scandal in the White House.

Signs Indicate Red Offensive

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Quite apart from its widely publicized infiltration of men and arms into the south, the North Vietnamese army has quietly acted in the 60 days since the "ceasefire" began in a way that would logically suggest only one conclusion: a major Communist offensive in South Vietnam, sooner or later.

In fact, Hanoi's politburo probably has no set plans for escaping the present low point in the long Communist struggle for Indochina. Nevertheless, considering the events of the last two months, the tentative conviction of U. S. policymakers that Hanoi will launch no offensive in the foreseeable future must be largely attributed to wishful thinking.

Although Hanoi as usual is pushing to the limit to see what resistance is met, it is the obvious, long-term preparation for offensive action that is so disturbing. With an audacity that has surprised even jaundiced Hanoi-watchers, the Communists have already taken these hard steps:

Step No. 1: Relieved of U. S. air raids, the Communists have made impressive progress on a new network of military roads running into South Vietnam. One of these, west of the DMZ (demilitarized zone), runs into the Ashau valley, establishing a new supply route from North Vietnam to supplement the Ho Chi Minh Trail through Laos. In addition, work battalions are carving two new roads east into South Vietnam over the mountains from Laos.

Step No. 2: Simultaneously, the last two months have brought near-completion of a p.o.l. (petroleum-oil lubricants) pipeline into the battle zone. This would have real value if there is heavy offensive action on the northern front.

Step No. 3: Fearsome 130 millimeter artillery pieces, whose deadly accuracy at 27-mile range beats anything in the U. S. — South Vietnamese arsenal, have been introduced into the heart of South Vietnam since the "ceasefire" began. Useless in guerrilla operations, they can be utilized only in a major offensive. If zeroed in on Saigon, they could wreck morale.

Step No. 4: Some Communist military operations in the last two months seem directed less at gaining territory or punishing South Vietnamese troops than in tactical preparation for a major offensive by eliminating government outposts in the line of possible attack. In addition, the North Vietnamese have disrupted Saigon's logistical system in the north; Communist troops recently grabbed 20 kilometers of Route 1 along the coast, reluctantly giving it back after days of hard fighting.

These steps, comprising but a partial list of the most visible activity, do not guarantee a major offensive. But they go well beyond the limited motives generally ascribed to the Communists by U. S. policymakers in explaining the recent infiltration.

The theory of "limited motives" derives from problems faced by Hanoi when the peace agreement was signed. With its regular troops chewed up from the unsuccessful 1972 offensive and its political cadres dispirited by the peace agreement, Hanoi could solve two problems by heavy infiltration—bringing its military forces back up to par and showing the local political cadres it still cares. Besides, it is holy writ in Hanoi—always to try getting away with as much as possible.

But none of this solves Hanoi's longer-range problem. With Saigon government control over the populated countryside firmer than ever before, the Communists do not have a prayer in free elections and scarcely more hope in renewing

Strength For Today

DÓ CREEDS COME?
Think what bloody battles have been fought over differences of belief. Religious wars have always been the cruellest of all conflicts. Under these conditions men can more easily forsake every human instinct than under any other.

Yet differences of opinion are important. We all have different beliefs and we ought to stick to them. That man has precious little conviction who maintains that one creed is as good as another and that it makes no difference what a man believes. It makes, actually, a very great difference.

But of this we can certainly be sure also, that if every man lived up to the creed he has, this old world of ours would be a much happier place to live in than it is. It is vastly more important that we live up to our creed and stop sputtering over the fact that another man has a creed with which we do not agree.

Gray's New Assignment

WASHINGTON — Rumor has it in Washington that the White House is not very pleased with acting FBI Director L. Patrick Gray's testimony before the Senate Judiciary Committee. There is very serious talk in Washington that the President is about to jettison him. This could cause great embarrassment to the Administration, but trying to keep him as the head of the FBI could even cause more.

How will they dump him? This is one scenario. "Mr. Gray, the President wanted me to tell you how pleased he was with the way you handled yourself during the Senate hearings." "Thank you, Mr. Haldeman. It's been a tough two weeks but I got through it."

"I want you to know the President wasn't the least disturbed when you offered to show the senators on the committee all the raw files on the Watergate bugging investigation."

"I tried to be as forthright as I could, Mr. Haldeman. I felt the Senate had a right to know everything the White House knew about the case."

"Well said, Gray. The director of the FBI must put candor above everything else. You not only told them what they wanted to know, you told them a great deal more, and Mr. Nixon admires that in a man. No President wants someone working for him who keeps secrets from the public."

"That's nice of him to say. I heard there were some people in the White House who were disturbed by my testimony."

"Perish the thought, Gray. We all feel you've done a bang-up job. We'd rather have you admit that we had first crack at all the FBI files than have it come out in Jack Anderson's column in a distorted way. The President was just saying to me the other day, 'I wish all the people in my Administration would be as frank and honest with Congress as L. Patrick Gray.'"

"You mean he wasn't mad because I called John Dean III, the White House counsel, a liar?"

"How could the President be mad about that? If someone in the President's family is lying to the FBI, the President wants to read about it. How else could he run an honest Administration?"

"Well, I think it's good to get all those things out in the open. I wanted to make sure the country would know the FBI would have the same independence under me that it had under J. Edgar Hoover. It would be terrible if they thought I was just another political hack who owed his job to the White House."

"You certainly made that point clear with the Senate committee. Say, you never told us you were a naval officer."

"Yes sir. I served in the Navy for 20 years."

"The President was very pleased to hear that, Gray, we have a job for you that is one of the most important in

To the editor,

This is to say thank-you to the 44 people who came out last Thursday and Friday to give blood. Of that number, 53 had to be turned aside for any one of many reasons that prohibit acceptance by the blood bank.

I will long remember the story of one little lady who was willing, but she was only 15 years old; it was a good illustration of how people do respond to the public need.

My interest in the Red Cross blood bank and its role in Pitt County goes back for quite a number of years; and it is remarkable that so many of the people one sees at any given visit of the bloodmobile here are also seen at other visits. We just don't seem able to reach as many new donors as we should.

Too, I am dismayed by the number who simply cannot give blood. It is a rather frightening commentary on the public health that personal contacts suggest there are as many people unable to give blood as there are as many people unable to give blood as there are those who are able.

As was reported in The Daily Reflector, the Greenville Moose tried to not only meet the 320-point quota for this latest visit, but also tried to make up a 233-pint deficit. We didn't make it, though I believe it was one of our largest efforts, with more men and women involved than in other such campaigns.

The recurring air of "crisis" involved in blood campaigns is something to be avoided, and a way should be devised to eliminate this facet which over the long haul could be psychologically fatal to the whole program.

Thank you, and the many who help to keep the program going.

Interest In Commodity Market

Editors—This is the first of several columns on commodity trading.

NEW YORK (AP) — A seat, or right to trade, on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, where frozen pork bellies are the chief attraction, is now worth more than a seat on the New York Stock Exchange, where General Motors shares are sold.

In the latest seat sale on the Big Board, a broker paid $95,000 for the right to transact his business there. On the Mercantile Exchange the price was $120,000.

This is but one way of illustrating the tremendous interest that has developed in guessing the future price of commodities, which include besides those bacon bellies, such items as corn, coffee, iced broilers and silver.

In all, there are scores of commodities traded, at least 60, on exchanges in various parts of the country, but mainly in Chicago, home of the largest, the Chicago Board of Trade, and the Mercantile Exchange.

Seeking profits that stock market traders don't even dream of, about 500,000 traders are now active in commodities, compared with 50,000 a decade ago.

That is the personal rather than official estimate of Michael Weinberg Jr., Board of Trade chairman, who projects no less than three million active traders by 1980. And big profits are usually, but not always, the attraction.

As an illustration, a speculator put up $1,000 margin on Nov. 16, 1972, for a single contract of soybeans—5,000 bushels—to be delivered this March. By Feb. 16, 1973, he had earned a profit of $11,670. He paid a $30 commission.

This seemingly disproportionate reward is his for correctly calculating such forces as supply, demand and weather. There are other factors too, but it was those three interrelated factors primarily that pushed prices from $3.69 to $6.03 a bushel.

One contract of iced broilers, weighing 28,000 pounds, was bought last November at $28.25 a hundredweight. The margin was $300. The commission was $30. The net profit, based on a

Where Women Reign

By JAMES F. DONOHUE
Associated Press Writer
SITUATE, Mass. (AP) — A man who works at night and is free to roam suburbia during the day learns quickly that it's a woman's world.

Driving into any small suburban town at 11 a.m. on a weekday he realizes with a little tick of terror that he's alone and awash in a sea of mothers driving station wagons.

All the men are away in the city or in town, tending to their chores. There are some things more dangerous than a pre-occupied matron in a station wagon, but they are few.

Even if the suburban night worker stays home in the daylight hours, the telephone is there to remind him of the all-engulfing presence of woman.

It rings. His wife is somewhere in the basement doing laundry or casting spells. He panics, but he has no escape. He answers it.

"Hello," he says.

The worst thing a suburban man can do at 11 a.m. is answer his own telephone. He precipitates a social crisis. He can feel through the receiver the confusion he's caused for the caller, a woman, of course.

"Ah-ooo-er, ah," says the caller. "Is Mrs. Suburbia there?"

"Yes, but she's in the basement in communication with Satan. Maybe I can help you."

"Ah-ooo-er, ah. No. I'd better speak to Mrs. Suburbia."

"I see. All right. Can I tell her who's calling?"

"Ah-ooo-er, ah, this is Mrs. Eek from Central School. I want to talk to her about Cathy, ah-ooo-er, ah, her daughter."

"Maybe I can help," says Suburbia. "I'm Mr. Suburbia."

"Oh?"

"Cathy's father."

"Oh?" There is great surprise, almost pain, in Mrs. Eek's voice.

Suburbia wonders, "Now who did this woman think I was. The milkman? The mailman? Something worse?"

"Oh," says Mrs. Eek again.

"Ah-ooo-er, ah, perhaps I'd better call back. Yes. I'll call back."

She hangs up. Her relief in escape is apparent right through the receiver.

40 Years Ago Today

By GWYN COGHILL
March 28, 1933

A crude attempt to blackmail Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh for $25,000 was thwarted today with the arrest of a fifteen-year-old Hudson, Ohio school boy. The boy readily admitted mailing two letters to the famous flier's wife, but Mrs. Lindbergh never saw them. Postal inspectors snatched the letters when they noticed they carried the address of Mrs. Lindbergh as being Delaware or New York.

The athletic field at Third Street school grounds is attracting attention from many towns and cities of the state at this time and indications are that numbers of fields will be patterned after it. The club house on the field has drawn the most attention.

Feb. 16 price of $39.25, was $3.078.

These are, to be sure, exceptional illustrations. There has been an almost continual "up" market since last fall. Consumer demand is high. Food sales abroad have spurred interest. Bad harvest weather curtailed some crops.

There is another side to the market, and that is down. If a trader isn't thoroughly informed and disciplined as a monk he can lose everything from his tie to his shoelaces by playing the market long when prices are falling.

If he accurately forecasts a price drop, and acts on the forecast by selling short, he can make a sizable profit in a down market. There's money to be made both ways.

New Med School In South Carolina Is Endorsed By Study

COLUMBIA (AP)—Gov. John C. West yesterday gave his endorsement "without reservation" to the special study committee report endorsing establishment of a second medical school in South Carolina.
The special panel said a second school would help alleviate the shortage of doctors in the state but pointed out the need for federal money for such a project and the willingness of the state to assume "large and continuing fiscal responsibility."
West called the report by the nine-member panel—three each of senators, representatives and members of the State Higher Education Commission—"a complete and objective study...that far outweighs any regional or political considerations."

Controversy surrounding the proposed second medical school had polarized legislators in the Columbia and Charleston areas. The Piedmont lawmakers favored establishment of the school in Columbia in conjunction with the University of South Carolina. Their colleagues from the low country said such a school would drain funds from the Medical University of South Carolina and hamper improvement and enlargement plans for the school.

The committee said the state may be eligible for some federal school financing under the Veterans' Administration Financial Assistance Act. The program would provide $25 million to encourage the building of eight new medical schools in the United States, allotting $3.12 million to each.
Such a grant would not lighten the load the state would have to carry, the report said. It estimated immediate funding requirements at $1 million and projected an outlay of $30 million for permanent facilities. The proposed school would have an eventual maximum 120 entering students.

The Hanoi politburo's patience is proverbial, but its leaders are now in their 60s. Will they wait patiently for a crack in President Thieu's regime that now seems so stable? For this reason, some experts have always believed Hanoi was thinking ahead to a massive offensive at the moment it was making all those concessions in Paris. Nothing in the last 60 days has changed this view.
If an offensive were launched late this year or early next, President Nixon would again have to decide whether to unleash U. S. airpower (though its legality would be severely challenged). The Pentagon

'Cabaret' And 'The Godfather' Pace Oscar Awards

By JERRY BUCK
Associated Press Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Mar-

lon Brando has turned down the Academy Award for best actor of 1972, sending an Indian girl to make the refusal because he thinks the film industry does not treat the American Indian properly.

Brando was selected for his portrayal of the gangland boss in "The Godfather," which was named best film of the year by the Motion Picture Academy in ceremonies Tuesday night at the Los Angeles Music Center. Liza Minnelli, the nightclub singer of "Cabaret," was picked as best actress. The musical is set in Germany.

Sacheen Littlefeather said Brando had sent her to "regretfully" refuse the award. The announcement was greeted by boos, then by scattered applause as she said the refusal was because of treatment of American Indians by the film industry and by television in movie reruns and because of recent happenings at Wounded Knee, S.D. Militant Indians have held the historic village for 29 days.

Miss Minnelli, daughter of the late entertainer Judy Garland, gratefully accepted her award after Brando's refusal of his.

"Thank you very much for this award. You have made me very happy," she said. This was the second time in two years that an Oscar for best actor was turned down. George C. Scott said in advance in 1971 he would not accept if he won for his performance in "Patton." He won and the golden statuette is still unclaimed.

Brando won an Academy Award in 1954 for "On the Waterfront," and appeared personally to accept the Oscar. He has been nominated six times for best actor.

Miss Littlefeather, who said she represented the Native Americans Affirmative Image Committee, said backstage that Brando "would have been here in person but thought he could be more helpful at Wounded Knee." She declined to answer any questions about whether Brando had actually left for the besieged Indian village.

"The Poseidon Adventure," was selected as best song of the year.

Luis Bunuel's "The Discreet Charm of the Bourgeoisie" was named best foreign language film.

Backstage, Miss Littlefeather read the complete text of Brando's refusal of the Oscar. She said the refusal was "not meant to demean or embarrass those who believe in the custom" of the Oscar.

"The American Indian was cheated and starved and shot," she said, adding that "history will surely judge us ... because our treatment of the Indian for the past 100 years contradicts ... that we are humane and shows that we do not live up to our promises."

Bob Fosse, "Cabaret" director, won the best director Oscar. It was his third major award in three days. On Sunday night he had won two Tony awards—Broadway's equivalent of the Oscar—as director and choreographer of the musical "Pippin."

The record for Oscars is held by "Ben Hur," which won 11 in 1959.

"The Godfather" won three Oscars—for Brando, best film and for best adapted screenplay. The film had been heavily favored to sweep the awards.

Eileen Heckart was named best supporting actress for her role as the possessive mother of a young blind man in "Butterflies Are Free."

More Hearings On Art Museum

RALEIGH (AP)—The location of the proposed $23 million state Art Museum will be the subject of more legislative committee hearings due to a House vote Tuesday to send a bill on the museum site to the Public Buildings and Grounds committee.

A study committee has recommended the museum be constructed at Camp Polk Youth Center on the western outskirts of Raleigh, but opponents argue the museum should be located in downtown Raleigh near other governmental buildings. Rep. William E. Stevens, R-Caldwell, who moved to re-refer the bill to committee, said "a number of representatives have expressed an unwillingness to decide the matter today."

He said the choice was not just between the downtown site and the suburban site, but "a choice between a multi-purpose culture center at Polk or a great museum — but only a museum — in the governmental complex."

Waterfall For Modern Hotel

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — A new hotel here will have water falling into the lobby from six stories up. The 730-room Crown Center Hotel, which opens in April, is built on a natural limestone bluff, part of which forms the building's 12,000 square-foot lobby. Waterfalls will cascade 60 feet down this sloping rock foundation, which will be planted with full-grown trees and tropical plants.

Racing Time To Save Sight Of Bangladesh Children

By GENE KRAMER
Associated Press Writer
UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — An emergency campaign is under way to save a generation from going blind in the new country of Bangladesh. It means giving every child under 6 a dose of high potency Vitamin A, and it is succeeding, Dr. Wadie Kamel reports.

Dr. Kamel, a public health specialist, estimates that 150,000 Bangladesh youngsters went blind from malnutrition in 1972. Food distribution and health services had been crippled by a destructive cyclone in 1970, followed by the Pakistan-India conflict of December 1971.

UNICEF, the U.N. Children's Fund, sent Dr. Kamel to Bangladesh last November to tackle the problem. He says: "I had never seen such retarded growth and malnutrition in my life."

Dr. Kamel worked for more than a decade in the Middle East for the World Health Organization and other international organizations.

In a crisis, he continued, you try to help those with the most serious problem. Malnutrition of children can be checked, but "once the eye is insulted by Vitamin A deficiency, it is irreversible."

"It is such a sad story," Kamel said. "The body begins to recover from severe malnutrition except for the eyes, which are lost forever."

Even a fair diet would have warded off xerophthalmia, the medical name for Vitamin A deficiency so severe it affects the eyesight. But in 1972 there were no vegetables or fruit for the poor of Bangladesh or their children. Eggs, also a natural source of the vitamin, had to be sold or traded for dire necessities.

One thing going for Bangladesh was a nationwide program in malaria eradication. Medical and DDT spray teams were in contact with every village and family.

Through these teams the Dacca government in cooperation with UNICEF and the World Health Organization ordered distribution of oral doses of Vitamin A to each of the country's 15 million small children twice a year.

UNICEF purchased the Vitamin A at a cost of seven-tenths of one cent for each peanut-sized capsule, or $7,000 a million. They were airlifted to Bangladesh starting in December, as

Dr. Kamel returned to his regular post as director of international health programs at the University of Illinois Medical Center in Chicago. Already, three million children have had their first capsules containing 200,000 international units of Vitamin A. The program is bringing expected results—eyesight is being saved, Dr. Kamel reported. He visited Bangladesh again in February and March.

The malaria teams are instructed to visit each household and personally see that each child swallows one capsule with water. For those too small to swallow, the vitamin is squeezed from the capsule into the baby's throat. UNICEF provided 6,500 pairs of scissors for cutting open the ends of the capsules.

Arms Control Agency A Victim

By KENNETH J. FREED
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The government agency established under President Kennedy to conduct U.S. arms-control policy has fallen from Nixon administration grace, a victim of Pentagon strength and the presidential concentration of power.

The surface results have been low morale in the arms control and Disarmament Agency, fed by uncertainty and a sense of defeat coming in the wake of budget and manpower cuts.

But a more important effect may be the diminishing influence of the agency on current and future arms-control negotiations.

A major factor in establishment of ACAD 12 years ago was a belief that the Soviet Union with a well-established, permanent organization of experts, was out-negotiating the United States.

Since then the agency has been instrumental in negotiating some of the most important agreements of modern diplomacy: the Limited Test-Ban Treaty, the Nuclear Nonproliferation Treaty, the Washington-Moscow Hotline, and the first phase of SALT—the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks.

In addition, the agency has built up a core of research and technology that provides the United States not only with the knowledge to carry on negotiations, but with the ability to monitor underground nuclear tests and to keep track of the flow of arms from nation to nation.

And, while this is a disputed value, ACDA also is advertised by its supporters, particularly those in Congress, as a counterweight to Defense Department advocates of increased weapons development.

This was all done with a yearly budget that seldom exceeded $10 million and a manpower staff of no more than 200 persons.

But, in the last three months, the agency lost its director, its leadership at the SALT negotiations, 30 per cent of its budget, at least a dozen key employees, and nearly all its funds for outside research.

The list of woes continues: Three top officials have been told they will be dismissed; the influential General Advisory Committee has been allowed to go dormant, and the number of ACDA representatives on the SALT delegation has been cut.

The reasons differ, depending on who is talking. The administration has made no official statements, but sources indicate the cutback is part of President Nixon's over-all policy of taking direct control of all foreign affairs.

Since the agency was established by Congress and had near-independent status, some of its goals did not always fall into the administration line.

This is especially true concerning over-all strategy for use of nuclear weapons. ACDA officials generally have supported the concept of limiting nuclear power to the minimum number of weapons necessary to destroy enemy cities in a retaliatory attack.

Nixon and Henry A. Kissinger, White House national-security adviser, favor a more flexible approach that encompasses a wider range of alternatives.

In addition, Nixon is said to be anxious to avoid ranking such congressional critics as Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., who charged the ACDA-dominated American delegation gave too much away at the first-phase SALT talks.

There has been a continuing struggle with Defense ever since the arms-control agency was established, with ACDA attempting to offset the military's constant effort to build more and better weapons systems.

Both ACDA and Pentagon sources acknowledge that the military has won. Agency supporters assert the administration has given in to military pressure. Also, with its unlimited resources, the military was able to buy its way in Congress, these critics maintain.

The Pentagon sources answer that ACDA lost because it was unrealistic and tied to outmoded strategic thinking.

There is some hope in the agency that congressional supporters may reinstate some of its money, but they acknowledge only the President can restore its influence.

And there is no sign that is likely.

Pamelo Coe Is Appointed

The appointment of Pamela Coe to the newly created position of Assistant to the Secretary for Arts and Director of Cultural Affairs for the U.S. Department of the Interior has been announced by Interior Secretary Roger Morton.

Miss Coe will serve as Morton's personal representative in dealing with cultural activities, he said. Among activities to be coordinated through the new Arts and Cultural Affairs office are the National Capital Parks cultural and arts activities, Wolf Trap Farm Park for the Performing Arts, Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, Ford's Theatre, Carter Barron Amphitheater, Sylvan Theatre, the Indian Arts and Crafts program, and the Bureau of Reclamation Arts program.

Miss Coe, whose mother is Mrs. Dell Coe of Robersonville, was educated in New York. Before joining the Interior Department a year and a half ago as special assistant for broadcast, she was director of the Radio and Television Publicity Department at J. Walter Thompson Advertising in New York. She was featured on the WABC (New York) television series, "Young Women on the Move" during 1971. She has worked with WITN in Washington, N.C. also.

Nature For Reserve One Flower

GLOUCESTER, England (UPI) — Britain's smallest nature reserve has been established to protect one flower—ranunculus ophioglossifolius, sometimes known as the yellow-petaled adder's tongue spearwort.

"There is only one other site in the country where this flower grows," said Tom Elliott, secretary for the Gloucester Trust for Nature Conservation. He said efforts were being made to prevent water pollution next to the Badgeworth nature reserve, the 346-square-yard plot set up to protect the flower.

No Problem Due Gasoline Spill

MOORESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The director of Mooresville's public utilities foresees no problem with the town's drinking water as the result of the spilling of 3,500 gallons of gasoline into the source of supply.

A tanker truck wrecked early Tuesday morning, allowing gasoline to run into a creek which empties into Lake Norman, from which the Iredell County town gets its water.

Troy Scoggins, the utilities director, said several makeshift dams were set up along the creek and the gasoline was being sopped up by straw.

"I don't see any problem at all," he said Tuesday night. He said Mooresville was drawing water from a 30-foot depth in Lake Norman, and there was no evidence of gasoline, which is lighter than water and floats on top.

Cookie Queen Due A Mistake

SAGINAW, Mich. (AP) — An ordering mistake has turned Mrs. Paul Smith, a Girl Scout troop leader, into the cookie baroness of Saginaw.

Burry Baking Co. has agreed to take back some 147 cases of Girl Scout cookies delivered to Mrs. Smith in the mixup, but it doesn't look like that's going to be necessary—friends and neighbors are taking them off her hands.

Mrs. Smith wanted to order 165 boxes of the thin mint, cocoa fudge, vanilla and chocolate cream cookies, but wound up ordering 165 cases—or 1,650 boxes—by mistake.

Businessman Is Sentenced

WASHINGTON — Walker Levon Miles, a Greenville businessman was sentenced to one year in prison and fined $1,000 by U. S. Judge John D. Larkins in U. S. Eastern District Court here.

Judge Larkins ordered the prison term suspended and placed Miles on probation for two years after Miles pled guilty on charges he failed to make deposits of withheld social security and income taxes as required by law.

Miles and Phillip K. Flowers, president and vice-president of Tar Heel Home Supply Corporation, Inc. had been charged with a four-count indictment for failure to make deposits of taxes collected on October 13, 20 and 27 and November 3. Miles pled guilty to the fourth count of the indictment. The other cases against Miles and the four charges against Flowers were dismissed. The amount of taxes withheld from employees salaries was in excess of $1,000 per week, according to the Internal Revenue Service.

Special Agents of the IRS testified at an earlier hearing that Miles made three deposits to the tax account with worthless checks of three occasions and failed to make any deposit of taxes withheld on November 1.

Med School . . .

metropolitan and established, rather traditional medical schools, and two people from rather new schools."

But, according to Monroe, "for whatever it may be worth, it is difficult for me to appreciate the logic of five out-of-state medical school deans advising another state whether it needs another school or not."

"They are eminently qualified to advise how to develop a school," Monroe emphasized, "but I don't think they are qualified to determine a state's need for a school."

Dees, who indicated the panel of educators "would be expected to recommend a location . . . if they recommend a new four-year school, said that three areas of the state have requested consideration as sites for a medical training program."

He said the Board of Governor's "committee itself recommends the Greenville medical school be considered . . . as a site for a four-year program. And, he explained, there have "been requests from people in Cumberland County and Mecklenburg County that those areas be included in the study."

Commenting on the possible consideration of Fayetteville or Charlotte as possible sites for a new medical school, Dr. Monroe said "I think it's interesting that the chairman of the Board of Governors mentions specific possible sites for developing a new medical school," in view of the fact that "many people feel the decision was made several years ago by responsible state authority." (Indicating that North Carolina General Assembly chose ECU as the site for a medical school.)

According to Dees, the study panel was selected after "we had recommendations of names of people in the field of medical education from everybody in the state involved in medical education . . . as well as from some outside the state."

"The list," he noted, "included 25 or 30 names." He said the names were divided into groups, "according to their positions in medical education, then we had the vice-chancellor and dean at Greenville and the vice-chancellor and dean at UNC (The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill) to approve the people put in each of the categories as to their qualifications."

Dees said "we were able to get the people from the categories that had been approved by the chancellors. . . . deans at each school."

UNION CONDITION

WASHINGTON (AP) — AFL-CIO President George Meany said today the administration can forget about holding down big wage settlements this year unless food prices are brought down.

Impatience In Canada

OTTAWA (AP) — Canada says it will remain on the International Commission of Control and Supervision in Vietnam until May 31 but will withdraw a month later "unless there has been some substantial improvement or distinct progress has been made toward a political settlement" in Vietnam.

Foreign Secretary Mitchell Sharp told the House of Commons Tuesday Canada continues to support the commission not because of its supervisory duties—which he said it has failed to fulfill—but because of its psychological role.

"We do not have too much use for the psychological role," he told newsmen later, "but there are others who do. Let's give it a chance."

Sharp told Commons he has two doubts about the psychological influence of the commission:

"The first is that I am not convinced that the ICSS does play such a part in the thinking of the Vietnamese. The second is that I do not believe that Canada and Canadians can be expected over any protracted period to play this part."

He said supporters of this role, including some Vietnamese, contend that "although the ICSS may not be necessary for the purposes of carrying out the agreement, its absence would be taken as an indication that the agreement lacked world support and consequently our withdrawal could become a further destabilizing psychological factor in a situation already very unstable."

Commissioner Denies Gag Placed On Masters

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

NEW YORK (AP) — Joseph C. Dey, Jr., commissioner of the pro golf tour, denied today that black golfers had been ordered not to discuss the Masters Tournament.

He insisted there was no gag rule for members of the PGA Tournament Players Division.

"It would be stupid of us to impose such a rule," Dey said from his New York headquarters. "This is a free world and a man may say what he pleases. The only restriction is a code of conduct for all members. They cannot say or do anything that will reflect unfavorably on the game or any of its aspects."

Dey's statement followed published reports from Greensboro, N.C., the current stop on the tour, that such an order had been handed down apparently as the result of the Lee Elder case.

Elder became the center of a controversy last week when 18 Congressmen, headed by Herman Badillo of New York, had sent a wire to Clifford Roberts, tournament director of the Masters, that a special invitation be issued to Elder, a black.

No black player has ever competed in the Masters.

Roberts promptly replied that a black golfer would be accepted as soon as he meets one of the many qualifying standards. To make an exception because a player is black, Roberts said, would be "discrimination in reverse."

Elder, interviewed by The Associated Press at his home in Washington, D.C., after the exchange, charged that Roberts didn't want a black player in the Masters. "He wants to keep it lily white as he's had it since it began," Elder was quoted as saying. Contacted by Dey at New Orleans last week, where he competed, the Negro golfer insisted he was misquoted. "What I said was that since they've changed their rules, it makes it more difficult for a black to get in," Elder added.

After the New Orleans tournament, in which Elder finished sixth, it was reported that a directive had come down from New York headquarters that blacks were not to discuss the Masters any more.

"That is absolutely untrue," Dey said. "Such an order would have to come from me, and I gave no such order."

However, the commissioner acknowledged that players are bound by a rigid code of ethics violations of which in the past has resulted in fines and disciplinary action.

"We are an organization of members," Dey explained. "We are bound by rules. One of the rules deals with conduct. It deals with late starting, worthless checks and things like that."

"But the principal admonition is one that says contestants shall at all times conduct themselves in a manner becoming a professional golfer and which will not reflect unfavorably on the TPD, its members, officers, representatives of tournament sponsors, the public or news media."

By ALEX SACHARE
Associated Press Sports Writer

The Detroit Tigers, a team often labeled "too old to win," reinforced their elderly image Tuesday by acquiring veteran pitcher Jim Perry, while the San Francisco Giants' pennant hopes received a boost by the outstanding performances turned in by veterans Juan Marichal and Willie McCovey in exhibition baseball Tuesday.

Minnesota sent Perry, 36, to the Tigers in exchange for minor league pitcher Dan Fife, who was 14-7 with Montgomery of the Southern League last year.

Perry, the Cy Young Award winner in 1970 when he compiled a 24-12 record, is the winningest active pitcher in the American League with a career mark of 180-139. The 6-foot-4 left-hander, who'll be entering his 15th major league season, was 13-16 with the third-place Twins last year with a 3.34 earned run average. He earns an estimated $68,000 a year.

Meanwhile, Marichal, the National League's winningest active pitcher with a 227-125 career record, took a giant step on the road to recovery from a season of injuries by hurling seven innings of hitless ball as San Francisco stopped the San Diego Padres on one hit 6-0.

And McCovey, the Giants' slugging first baseman who missed much of last season with a broken right forearm, belted a two-run home run and added an RBI single to provide the offensive power.

In other exhibition games, Cleveland beat Oakland 6-0,

Cincinnati edged Los Angeles 5-4, Montreal topped Houston 6-4, St. Louis nipped Pittsburgh 2-1, Boston trimmed the New York Mets 3-2, the Chicago White Sox beat Atlanta 7-3, Kansas City defeated the New York Yankees 4-2, Milwaukee downed California 8-6, Minnesota beat Baltimore 6-3 and Detroit edged Philadelphia 8-7.

After Marichal's seven innings, Don Carrithers and Elias Sosa completed the shutout. Sosa gave up San Diego's only hit, a bloop single by Jerry Morales in the ninth inning.

Dick Tidrow limited Oakland to three hits over six innings and relievers Ray Lamb and Rich Hinton finished the shut-out, Cleveland's sixth consecutive exhibition triumph.

Larry Stahl scored the winning run for Cincinnati in the eighth inning on Dave Concepcion's single. Montreal's Mike Jorgensen and Ron Fairly collected three hits apiece against Houston.

Ted Simmons two-run double with two out in the first inning provided the support for St. Louis starter Jim Bibby, who went eight innings and held Pittsburgh to two hits.

Bob Montgomery homered and John Curtis pitched six solid innings for Boston. Ed Herrmann rapped out three hits and Buddy Bradford hit a three-run homer for the White Sox.

Kansas City's Steve Busby held the Yankees to three hits in six innings in the Royals' victory. Joe Lahoud hit a two-run homer as Milwaukee rallied for four runs in the seventh inning to defeat California.

Doubles by Rod Carew and Danny Thompson marked a five-run, eighth-inning rally for Minnesota.

Chargers Fall To North Lenoir

WHEAT SWAMP—North Lenoir High School edged out winless Ayden-Grifton, 4-3, yesterday in an Eastern Carolina Conference baseball game.

The Chargers took the initial lead in the third inning, pushing over a single run. Ronnie Salmon walked and stole second. He scored when Ricky Thorne doubled.

North Lenoir came up with two runs in the bottom of the fourth inning to push ahead, 2-1. Willis led off the inning with a home run, tying the contest. Dawson and Sutton both drew walks and Woods followed with a single, scoring Dawson with the go-ahead run.

The Chargers came right back in the top of the fifth, however, scoring a pair to push back ahead, 3-2. Eddie McCullen walked and was wild pitched to third. Salmon also walked and stole second. Thorne also drew a walk, loading the bases. Paul Ricciarelli then singled, driving in both McCullen and Salmon.

The hopes of the Chargers were short-lived, however, as the Hawks came back in the bottom of the inning to score two more and regain the lead, this time for good. Measley singled and stole second. An error then moved him to third. Willis walked and stole second, and both runners scored on a hit by Dawson.

Woods led the North Lenoir hitting with two, while no one had more than one for the Chargers, who are now 0-4 overall and 0-3 in the league. North Lenoir has a 3-1 conference record.

The Chargers travel to Greene Central for their next game, Friday.

NEW REEF PAYS OFF

MARCO ISLAND, Fla. (AP)

The new Marco Island artificial fishing reef is paying off with big fish. Jerry Battjes of Hudsonville, Mich., fishing with charter boat captain Ray Page, boated a 24-pound redfish. The 38-inch red was boated two miles off shore in 20 feet of water. Florida west coast redfish usually weigh five pounds or less.

The reef consist of about 24,000 old automobile and truck tires. They were compacted and bundled and dropped there in March, 1972 by the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company. Another such reef has been approved by the Army Corps of Engineers. It will be built five miles off shore by the Deltona Corporation.

Trevino Rejoins Tour After Two-Week Break

By BOB GREEN
Associated Press Golf Writer
GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Lee Trevino faces a new experience in this week's $210,000 Greater Greensboro Open Golf Tournament.

The slimmed-down Trevino, one of pro golf's greatest drawing cards and most proficient practitioners, won his last time out and is coming off a two-week break from the tour.

"I've never done this before," Trevino said. "I'd always taken a break when I was playing bad, not good. But I've noticed this is what Jack Nicklaus does. He'll win, then take a break and come back still playing good."

"I'm just hoping it works for me."

Trevino, a notorious streak player, has won two of his last three starts. He is the season's leading money winner with $98,543 and is the favorite for the $42,000 first prize here.

The tournament, which annually draws some of the largest, most enthusiastic galleries on the tour, opens Thursday on the 7,034-yard, par 71 Sedgewick Country Club course with several of the game's top attractions skipping it to prepare for next week's Masters.

Among them are Nicklaus, Australian Bruce Crampton and England's Tony Jacklin. Nicklaus, a winner last week, and Crampton have each won twice this season.

Gary Player, the South African who disqualified himself after moving into a challenging position through three rounds of last year's tournament, also is missing. He's still recuperating from surgery.

In addition to Trevino, other top attractions include defending champion George Acher, Arnold Palmer and Sam Snead. Palmer had the lead with three holes to play last year, then took a triple bogey six on the 70th hole. The 60-year-old Snead scored the last of his 83 tour triumphs in this tournament in 1965 and has taken this title eight times.

And, there's also Lee Elder, who along with the rest of the black players on the tour, seek a victory here—their last chance this season—to gain an invitation to the Masters.

Other standouts include Billy Casper, Doug Sanders, Chi Chi Rodriguez, Tom Weiskopf, Bert Yancey, Grier Jones, Jerry Heard, Tommy Aaron, Lanny Wadkins, Gay Brewer and Lou Graham, who has finished just one stroke off the winning pace in the last two tour events.

The final two rounds Saturday and Sunday will be telecast nationally by Hughes Sports Network.

The weather often is a factor here—one round was rained out and a double round of 36 holes was played on the final day last year—and could be again this time. The course has been deluged with rain, and at least one wet snow, over the last week. The forecast calls for showers on Thursday's opening round.

Jinx Worrying Cincinnati Reds

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — The Cincinnati Reds aren't as worried about the other teams in the National League's West Division as they are about the jinx that has struck down all of the division's defending champions.

Supremely confident in their ability, the National League champions, who won the West last year by 10½ games over Houston, would become the first team to repeat as West Division titlist if they win again in 1973.

Division play came to baseball in 1969. The Atlanta Braves were the first West Division champions and first to feel the jinx. They tumbled to fifth in 1970 with a 76-86 record.

The Reds ran away with the 1970 title. The following year the jinx struck them. Bobby Tolan twice ruptured an Achilles tendon and was out for the season. Johnny Bench suffered a season-long slump.

The Reds fell to also-rans in 1971, finishing fourth at 79-83. San Francisco captured the 1971 title, but found the jinx too much to handle. Willie McCovey and Juan Marichal were injured and the Giants dropped to fifth, their record a miserable 69-86.

"The key to our repeating is our starting pitching. If the starters do the job, we can repeat," said Reds' captain Pete Rose.

If so, then the jinx has already made its presence felt. Gary Nolan, 24 years old, but a six-year veteran, is out indefinitely with a sore arm. Nolan almost single-handedly kept the Reds in the race through the early days of 1972 before arm trouble hit him. He finished 15-5 with the league's second best earned run average of 1.99.

But he isn't throwing or being counted on by Cincinnati.

With Nolan out, the starting pitching is questionable. The team is counting on left-handers Ross Grimsley and Don Gullett and right-handers Jack Billingham, Roger Nelson and Jim McGlothlin.

Billingham, 12-12 last year, believes he's improved because of a newly-developed changeup. Nelson comes to the Reds from Kansas City where he overcame arm trouble to put together an 11-6 record.

McGlothlin fills Nolan's spot and will try to better a 9-8 record.

The Reds don't doubt their offensive ability. Beginning with Rose and going to Joe Morgan and Tolan, who combined for 100 stolen bases last year. Morgan hit .292, finishing fourth in the Most Valuable Player voting, while Tolan was Comeback Player of the Year with a .283 average.

Johnny Bench, the MVP, home run and runs-batted-in champion, appears fully recovered from winter lung surgery, and is being counted on, along with Tony Perez, to provide the power.

Denis Menke at third, Cesar Geronimo—moving to center with Tolan shifting to right—and either Dave Concepcion or Darrell Chaney are used at shortstop by Sparky Anderson because of their defense.

Greene Central Tops Panthers

SNOW HILL—Greene Central High School rolled to a 8-0 victory yesterday a one-hit pitching performance by its pitching staff.

The win raised the Rams' record to 3-1 against Eastern Carolina Conference competition, while North Pitt fell off to a 1-2 mark.

Larry Stancil went the first six innings of the game, striking out six and walking three, without allowing a hit. Hooker came on to face three men in the final frame, allowing the lone hit.

That hit went to Rich Harrell. Bobby Supel and Jeff Letchworth led the Greene Central hitting with two each.

Greene Central pushed over four runs in the second inning to put the game out of reach. Tim Butts led off with a single and stole second. Jerry Carraway singled and William Brown reached on an error. Letchworth walked, forcing in Butts, and Bill Harrison reached on an error, scoring Carraway. Stancil then hit a sacrifice fly to score Brown, and another by Donnie Blizard, brought in Letchworth.

The Rams added three more runs in the fifth. Supel singled and stole both second and third. Butts walked and also stole second. Brown then singled in both runners, and he scored on a double by Letchworth.

In the sixth, the final Ram run came in. Blizard walked and stole his way to third, scoring on Supel's double.

North Pitt failed to threaten in the game.

Greene Central will host Ayden-Grifton on Friday, while North Pitt travels to Eastern Wayne.

New Mark In 6 Mile

By DAN BERGER
Associated Press Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Steve Prefontaine works hard to structure his entire track season and then, in one afternoon, blows the schedule to bits.

Year after year it's the same story, he says. "I work hard early in the season, run a couple of indoor races and then wait until late in March before I run outdoors."

"So we went to Bakersfield (Calif.) for our annual spring break meet," said the University of Oregon senior, "and I did it again. Don't ask me how."

What he did was set an American record in the six-mile run of 27 minutes 9.4 seconds.

"Really, I had no intention of running for a record," said the 5-foot-9, 150-pounder. "Coach (Bill) Dellinger told me to cruise around in 28 minutes—kind of use it for a workout. I was supposed to follow a pace of 70-second laps for the first mile, 69 seconds for the second mile and 68 seconds for the third mile. That would have put me at 13:48 for three miles."

"Well, I was on pace but I felt so good I picked it up. Bill told me if it got too hot to ease off and with two miles left I started getting blisters on both feet. But I felt fine."

His 27:09.4 was 2.2 seconds better than the previous American mark set by Billy Mills and Gerry Lindgren in 1965. "Pre" had run 27:22.4 for an NCAA record in last year's Bak-ersfield meet.

He said that last Saturday's six-mile was only the third he'd ever run and, "I still feel something in the 26:50s or 26:40s is within my range if I chose to concentrate on it, but that race puts you in bed for a week after you run it so I think I'll concentrate on the mile and two mile this year."

Robersonville Stops Edenton

EDENTON—Robersonville's Golden Eagles won their third game against one defeat here Tuesday, gaining a 2-0 victory over 2-A Edenton Holmes High School.

Doyle Farmer tossed a two-hitter at Edenton, raising his personal record to 3-1 overall. He struck out seven and walked just one in gaining the win.

Robersonville gained the lead and all it was to need with a run in the first inning. Matt Wilson led off with a single, then stole second. He scored when Doug Warren doubled.

It remained 1-0 until the fourth when the Eagles pushed over their insurance run. Mike Matthews reached on an error and Farmer advanced him with a double. Loyall Corey grounded out, but Matthews scored on the play.

Robersonville went on to load the bases with none out in the sixth, but failed to push over a run.

Edenton got only one man as far as second base against Farmer. That came in the sixth when Leonard Small doubled.

Ricky Brown led the Robersonville hitting, going two for four.

The Eagles travel to Warrenton for their next game, Friday.

HIGH SCORING

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Not many spectators at the Green Bay-Detroit NFL clash here in 1945 left their seats early in the second quarter to avoid the halftime concession stand crush. There was too much action. The two teams ripped off a total of 41 points in the second period of the game, finally won by the Packers, 57-21.

A $2,000 Raise Enables Keeping 1971's Standards

By DEE WEDEMEYER
Associated Press Writer
MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (AP) — A recent $2,000 raise has enabled the Marvin Menzels to maintain last year's standard of living.

"That should tell you something right there," said Menzel, about his raise and promotion to a product manager at Honeywell Inc., the electronics and computer firm.

"Very few people have that good fortune and if it takes that drastic an increase to maintain your standard of living then I think the situation is pretty serious." His increase comes to about 13 per cent.

Menzel, his wife Dawn and two children live modestly if not frugally on his new gross income of $17,000. While the Menzels haven't had to make any major cutbacks, except for buying less expensive cuts of meat, neither can remember ever being so conscious of money and prices.

Menzel is planning to replace his 1969 Ford — she has a 1971 Pinto — but not before he does some serious comparison shopping.

"I can't remember when I've been so deliberate about buying a car," said Menzel, 29. "It will probably be a trauma."

Last summer they planted a small vegetable garden for the children to play with. This year they plan to raise vegetables.

Recently they tallied their canceled checks for food from Jan. 1 through March 15 of last year and came up with $299. This year the figure was $380.38.

"But we aren't exactly eating like we were eating last year," said Mrs. Menzel, 25. "You watch more closely. You go from hamburger to the roast. You try to figure out where is the most waste by shrinkage or by bone."

Sirloin steak is now a company-only treat and a weekly menu more than likely will include spaghetti, hash, pork and chile. Sometimes she shops several times in one week because, she said, she can't face spending a large sum of money all at once.

A year ago she shopped at only one grocery store. Now it's two and recently, when she wanted to fill her freezer, she went to three.

For that shopping trip Mrs. Menzel scrutinized four full-page newspaper ads, clipped coupons and made three shopping lists. Before it was all over the excursion took two hours and cost $50.17 for 10 bags of groceries.

Bananas were 10 cents a pound where she bought them; 12 cents elsewhere. The beef steak she bought was 99 cents a pound; $1.59 at another store.

She got turkey for 49 cents a pound instead of 59 cents and 79 cents at two other markets.

The Menzels do not keep a formal budget but their joint checking account, which they balance carefully, serves that purpose.

She writes a check for everything, even 72 cents to the newsboy.

Both cars are paid for. In fact, she paid cash for the Pinto and insisted that the car dealer remove the white sidewall tires and radio in order to bring down the cost. Menzel makes all the car repairs.

Their decisions to buy are made carefully. They almost always pay cash and always buy sale items. When they bought their Mediterranean-style bedroom and living room furniture on sale, they persuaded the store to give them a cut on a color television and stereo console, too.

Avers War 'Necessary'

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Navy Cmdr. Charles Nels Tanner of Covington, Tenn., a recently freed war prisoner, told a Memphis gathering Tuesday he feels "The war in Vietnam was necessary."

"We let the communists know in no uncertain terms that we will back our convictions," Tanner said in an appearance before members of American Legion Post No. 1, which honored him with a plaque and several gifts.

"I am honored and I consider it a privilege to be here with patriotic Americans who stood by America when she needed it most," said Tanner, 40, a prisoner in North Vietnam for 6 1/2 years.

"There is no place on earth like home," said Tanner, "and no country like ours, the greatest land on the face of the earth."

The Legion post plans honors ceremonies later for Navy Cmdr. Raymond A. Vohden, held for eight years, the fourth longest captive, and Navy Lt. Cmdr. Dale W. Doss. Both are from Memphis.

Plan To Patent Plant Varieties

WELLINGTON (AP) — The New Zealand government has prepared legislation to enable horticulturists to patent new plant varieties.

The Plant Varieties Bill has been introduced in the House of Representatives for study by a committee during the southern summer recess.

Their only installment payment is on the 25-year, 7 1/4 per cent mortgage on their $32,000, three-bedroom home on the outskirts of Edina, a prosperous suburb of Minneapolis. Though they could have gotten more house for less money in another suburb, they chose this one in what she calls the "poor man's end of Edina" so the children could go to the area's good schools.

The Menzels have a simple lifestyle, centered around the Lutheran church and their family. They do not drink or smoke.

She has no ambition to have a large house, a swimming pool or membership in the country club, not far from their home. Her most expensive dress cost $40, a purchase she feels guilty about but she rationalizes that she has worn it frequently.

He needs a new suit, a $150 expenditure, and possibly he would like a pool table for their basement recreation room. He will buy the suit. The pool table he can do without.

They do most of the repairs on their home. They remodeled the kitchen for about $1,000, which included the purchase price of a garbage disposal and dishwasher. They had the linoleum floor laid professionally, though they took up the old carpet and did the sanding themselves.

Kristine, 5, attends a morning nursery school which costs $21 a month but so far most of the children's expenses are small. Swimming lessons for Scott, 7, at a municipal pool are only $3 for a course.

However, Mrs. Menzel feels the prices of children's clothes are outrageous. Kristine recently spotted a rain jacket in a store for $23. They didn't buy it.

One thing she refuses to compromise on is shoes. Scott's cost $17; Kristine's, $15.

Garage sales are big business on the street of pastel-colored ranch-style homes and Mrs. Menzel often buys clothes for the children from neighbors. A winter coat for Scott cost $4. She also got an eight-year-old sewing machine for $50 and she makes some of the children's clothes on it.

She tries to convey good spending habits to the children. Even Navy recently exclaimed about the increase in prices when the tooth fairy left him 25 cents for a molar, instead of the usual 15 cents.

"I guess the tooth fairy is doing all right," said Mrs. Menzel.

For entertainment, the Menzels go to a movie about once every two months at $2.75 per ticket. This year they have gone to several hockey games on a friend's season tickets. At Christmas they saw the play, "I Do, I Do," at a dinner theater for $8 each. She goes to a ceramics class on Tuesdays which costs $1.50; and to Bible class on Wednesday which costs nothing. Baby sitters are $1 an hour when a neighbor is not available.

Menzel saves through a stock option plan which allows him to buy up to 12 per cent of his salary in Honeywell stock at a reduction. When the stock goes up in price, he sells it and uses that money for major cash expenditures, such as insurance premiums. Each month he also automatically buys a $25 savings bond for the children's education.

By the end of the year, they may have $1,000 left in savings, not counting the savings bonds.

On last year's vacation they went to visit her parents in Louisville, Ky. This year when Menzel has a business trip to California he plans to take the family to Disneyland.

A deeply religious couple, the Menzels give close to 10 per cent of their income to the church or the various causes that come to their attention. Two weeks ago, a man in church took up a collection for the Indians at Wounded Knee, S.D. Menzel gave $8, every penny in his pocket.

All things considered the Menzels think the cost of living increase may have come along at a time to make them think twice about their spending habits.

"It's probably been a good side effect on the cost of living increase — an increased awareness of how you are spending your money," Menzel said.

"We are fortunate in not having to make any major adjustments, to some one as fortunate as we are it could be a blessing. For someone who is on a not too much lower income level than we are, I see nothing but disadvantages ..."

Opening lead: Five of ♠
In his eagerness to avail himself of a free finesse at the opening gun, South, the declarer at four spades, laid the groundwork for his own downfall.

North and South reached game with an indirect approach. Altho North did not offer an immediate raise when South responded with one spade, after the latter rebid two no trump over two clubs, North showed his three card trump support by bidding three spades to offer a choice of contracts. South carried on to game in the suit.

West opened the five of diamonds and the jack was played from dummy. East covered with the queen and South won the trick with the king. A small heart was led to the nipe and East was in with the jack. He returned the five spades which was taken by North's king.

South played a heart to the ace and then ruffed out the ten with North's ace of spades. Trumps were drawn in two rounds with the queen and jack of spades and South led the nine of clubs, permitting it to ride when West played low.

East was in with the jack of clubs and he returned the ten of diamonds to dummy's ace. South reentered his hand by ruffing a diamond to lead another club. West played low once more and, after some deliberation, the declarer put in the ten from dummy, hoping to force out the ace. East produced the queen of clubs, however, and on the return West scored the ace for the setting trick.

We are not inclined to charge the declarer for failing to guess the layout in clubs. However, he could have simplified his task by preserving North's jack of diamonds. Observe the effect on the subsequent play if South puts in the six of diamonds from dummy at trick one.

East covers with the eight and declarer is in with the king. After he ruffs out his heart and draws trump, the nine of clubs is led and passed to East's jack. The latter has only diamonds and clubs left. If dummy has retained the ace-jack of diamonds, East is unable to return that suit without giving the declarer a trick. If he returns a club however, it eliminates the guess in that suit and South is assured of restricting his losses on the deal to two clubs and one heart.

Quiet Sit-In By Students

GREENSBORO (AP)—Students supporting the Neo-Black Society, which faces loss of funding because of alleged discrimination by race, staged a sit-in Tuesday at the administration building of the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. The 50 students, both blacks and whites, dispersed in orderly manner at the normal 5 p.m. closing time of the offices.

The Student Senate found that the society discriminated, making it subject to loss of student funding.

There was no disruption of classes because of the sit-in. UNC-Greensboro has 7,000 students, including 300 blacks. The society has about 145 members. Supporters of the society met with Chancellor James Ferguson at his home Tuesday morning. He said he would appoint a committee to study the matter. Leon Chestnut, coordinator of the society, said the Student Senate finding involved "opinions, not facts. Only one student presented charges, and there were no witnesses. We re-futed every one of these charges with facts."

Give Up On Survivors

NEW YORK (AP) — The Coast Guard has called off its week-old search for survivors of the sunken Norwegian freighter Norse Variant and for a second ship that may have gone down in the same vicinity. A Coast Guard spokesman said early today that the search had been canceled as of sundown Tuesday because of the "saturation coverage given the area without finding other survivors."

The only known survivor of the Norse Variant is Stein Gabrielsen, 23, an engineman. He was flown to Oslo, Norway, Tuesday night for a reunion with his family.

The Variant, a 541-foot, 12,946-ton bulk carrier, was en route from Norfolk, Va. with a cargo of coal and a crew of 30 when she encountered a fierce storm and sank. Gabrielsen was rescued after drifting on a life raft for three days.

It was disclosed Tuesday that a similar Norwegian freighter, the M.S. Anita, had left Newport News, Va., for Bremen, Germany, a few hours before the Variant and had not been heard from since.

HE SURVIVED — Henry Harrington, 32, points to the Golden Gate Bridge where in November of 1971 he became the 435th person to leap from the span. Unlike most of those who chose to end their lives in the San Francisco Bay, he survived. Harrington, one of six survivors in leaps from the famous span, returned to the bridge Monday, the first visit since his 1971 suicide attempt. (AP Wirephoto)

Thieves Stole Entire House

NEENAH, Wis. (AP) — It didn't do any good to lock the house. Thieves stole the house. Authorities are searching for four men who made off with a 24x32-foot, one-story prefabricated caretaker's house. The unoccupied house was standing next to the Guest House Inn, an old hotel being razed. A night watchman said four men driving a truck pulled up to the house Saturday night, loaded it onto a large flatbed trailer and drove off.

Fulbright Questioning U.S. Role In Cambodia

By JAMES E. WALTERS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Now that U.S. troops are only two days away from leaving South Vietnam, Sen. J.W. Fulbright wants to know how the Nixon administration justifies continued American bombing missions in Cambodia.

"What are American forces doing in Cambodia? Whom are we striking? Whom are we supplying? How many Americans are in Cambodia, in or out of uniform? By what authority is the United States carrying on any military activities in Cambodia?"

Those were some of the questions posed Tuesday by Fulbright, D-Ark., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

It is imperative, said Fulbright, that the administration explain its Cambodian policy, or "I see no course other than a full public hearing with the secretary of state to explore this subject in depth."

Fulbright made his demand in a series of questions placed in the Congressional Record. Just before Fulbright's questions were made public, White House Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler was asked to cite President Nixon's constitutional authority for continuing military operations in Cambodia. Ziegler replied that "Communist forces have not respected the unilateral cease-fire" proclaimed by the Lon Nol government and, as a consequence, the Cambodian regime had asked for air support. Ziegler said North Vietnam is violating the Paris agreement by not withdrawing its troops from Cambodia, which was part of the old French Indochina, along with Vietnam and Laos.

Ziegler said North Vietnam is in violation of Article 20 of the Paris accord governing withdrawal of outside forces.

Pressed further to cite Nixon's constitutional authority, Ziegler said he was "not prepared to address in any more specifics" the Cambodia situation. Asked if there were any limits on American potential involvement, Ziegler said: "We would hope that the Communist forces in Cambodia would adhere to" the Paris agreement and observe the cease-fire. He said the bombing would stop immediately should there be a cease-fire.

The Cambodia government headed by Lon Nol has been under increasingly heavy Communist pressure in recent weeks.

King Speaks At Board Meeting

George King, manager of King Brothers Farm Center in Ayden, was the guest speaker at the Pitt County Farm Bureau board of directors meeting Tuesday night.

King emphasized the importance of an organized marketing system for farmers.

"Too many hogs have been marketed in the past few weeks," King said, "and that is one reason for the drop in prices."

During the business session, Mrs. Wilbur L. Worthington, a member of the committee named to seek a review on the tax valuation of the Farm Bureau property, reported to the board on the matter.

Burney Baker, field representative with the North Carolina Farm Bureau Federation, reported on pending legislation concerning farmers at both the state and national levels.

Dr. R. House gave a summary of the proceedings at the Peanut Growers Association held Tuesday in Ahoskie.

Mrs. Worthington reminded the members that the N. C. Farm Bureau is offering the R. Flake Shaw Memorial Scholarship to high school seniors who are interested in home economics, agriculture, or the study of any related subjects.

Anyone interested in receiving the scholarship, may contact the Pitt County Farm Bureau office immediately.

The 'Worry Clinic' Rooted In The Belief In God

Tom Cossey asked me to deliver the Centennial Address at Gessie, Indiana, last fall. Notice the wage scale back in the 1890s. And teach your children that the churches are the main support of our flag, as well as of our universities; not the reverse!

By having the crowd look at the American flag that was hanging above my head, fastened to the side of the church.

By GEORGE W. CRANE Ph.D., M.D.

CASE W-560: Tom Cossey is a prominent Illinois banker and farmer.

"Dr. Crane," he phoned me, "could you speak at our Centennial at Gessie, Indiana?"

"You folks don't realize the changes even in my lifetime," he began.

"For when streets were laid out for this town, there was no power equipment available.

"We relied on men with picks and shovels, plus a slip scow pulled by horses to level off the ground.

"And the men worked 10 hours per day for a daily wage of 65 cents."

At his Tom nudged me and whispered: "But I got $1.40 per day for I also furnished a team of horses."

Mr. Jones also reminded his audience of the Bryan-McKinley debate in the 1896 presidential election.

"That was when Mr. Bryan was an advocate of silver in a 16 to 1 ratio.

"So we had a big parade through this town, with 16 white horses to represent silver and one gold horse to bring up the rear."

Again Tom nudged me and said, "That gold horse came off our farm for use in the parade."

When I began speaking, I reminded the crowd of the many changes that had occurred during the past century.

"Your town was 4 years old when Gen. Custer was massacred with all his brave men.

And we've experienced 5 major wars, not to mention the invasion of Mexico to pursue Pancho Villa."

Since the meeting was held on the east lawn of a large white frame church, I concluded

"Or do we even ask to hold the flag of our country?"

"No; it is the Bible that is our fundamental desire at the end of our sojourn here on Earth.

"Thus, when Sir Walter Scott lay dying, he called his servant and asked for the book.

"The servant asked him which one of his many world famous novels he wished.

"But Sir Walter promptly and sternly told him: 'There is only ONE book, namely, the Bible! Bring it!'"

And I concluded by telling the crowd that their passport to Heaven is explained in Matthew 10:32, so you readers better look it up!

For millions of otherwise good people are going to be without their passport!

Role For Women In Broadcasting

By JAY SHARBUTT AP Television Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — They've been holding sort of an electronic bazaar here this week. It's called the 51st annual convention of the National Association of Broadcasters and it is an amazing scene.

There are scores of hospitality suites and information booths in the convention's two main hotels—the Shoreham and the Sheraton Park—and program vendors are hawking their wares at a furious pace.

New technical developments are being exposed, with engineering salesmen pitching such items as an "FM exciter 2202A," a "digital antenna monitor" and a "drop-out compensator."

There also are hundreds of broadcast executives wandering about, braving hard-sell campaigns with a wane smile while expressing hopes the next elevator shows up before the convention ends.

Almost unnoticed in all this when the convention began Monday morning was a broadcast workshop session called "Woman Power: Use It or Lose It."

It was run by a group called American Women in Radio & Television (AWRT). Monday's session marked the first time AWRT ever had been part of the regular NAB convention schedule.

The 22-year-old organization claims a national membership of 2,800 women in broadcasting and advertising, according to Rose Blyth Kemp, AWRT's president, and vice president of a small Los Angeles college that specializes in broadcast education.

The three AWRT panelists, one of them Miss Kemp, downplayed the negative, accentuated the positive and essentially said sex discrimination in broadcasting is slowly on the way out. As a result they were accused of "smugness" by a woman in the audience of both men and women.

Except for that moment, there was little rancor or bitterness in the proceedings. And there was a pretty interesting claim made by one panelist and two male station managers in the audience.

They said that while small radio stations offer a wide world of opportunities to women, few young women try to gain experience with them before moving on to big-time broadcasting.

"They head mostly to big metropolitan areas to find jobs, rather than out to the small stations that could give them some experience in every phase of the business," the panelist, Mrs. Virginia Pate Wetter, said in an interview.

Mrs. Wetter is president of WASA-AM and WHDG-FM in Havre de Grace, Md., a small town about 35 miles from Baltimore.

Luncheon To Be Thursday

The Greenville-Pitt County Chapter of Retired School Personnel will have a luncheon meeting Thursday at 12 noon at the Woman's Club Building.

Mrs. Patricia J. Capehart, executive director of Home Health Service for Medicare patients in Pitt and Beaufort Counties, will be the featured speaker. Also included on the program will be W. W. Howell, past president of the state organization and chairman of the local legislative committee, who will discuss legislative programs for retired teachers.

Mrs. Lallah N. Smith, vice president, will preside at the meeting. Dr. James Butler, president, will be unable to attend the meeting because he is confined at home due to a recent illness.

The local chapter was organized in 1970 with Mrs. Myrtle Clark as president. The local chapter now has about 100 members.

Cost of the luncheon is $2.75 per person. Those who plan to

Bonds Sales Hit $65,164

Sales of Series E and H Savings Bonds in Pitt County for February totaled $65,164, according to R. W. Howard, county volunteer chairman.

Howard said that January-February sales amounted to $123,139, or some 20.8 per cent of the county's overall 1973 goal of $591,000.

Sales of E and H bonds in North Carolina during February totaled $10,099,892, the chairman reported. He said that the figures were some 41.2 per cent higher than last February.

January-February sales amounted to $16,162,988, the highest since 1944 and almost $2 million or 9.1 per cent above the same period last year. The figure, Howard said, represents 18.6 per cent of the state's 1973 dollar goal of $87,100,000.

Nationally, February sales were $592 million, 10.3 per cent above 1972.

Grants To 147 Old Buildings

LONDON (UPI) — Britain's Department of the Environment, which hands out money to preserve or repair historic buildings, made 147 such grants in six months, a department spokesman said.

Grants ranged from $76,000 to repair the west front of Knole House, a 366-room Elizabethan mansion southeast of London, to sums of under $1,000 to repair a 19th century windmill and a Victorian seaside pier.

Colonial Edenton Pilgrimage Set

By H. G. JONES, Administrator
Archives and History
Written for Associated Press
RALEIGH (AP) — The biennial "Pilgrimage of Colonial Edenton and Countryside" is scheduled for the weekend of April 13, 14, and 15. The "Pilgrimage" was begun in 1949 as a project of the Edenton Woman's Club and is a showing of unique public buildings and private homes in one of North Carolina's oldest communities.

Located on Albermarle Sound in the northeastern part of the state, Edenton is rich in tangible reminders of North Carolina's colonial history. An unusually large number of well maintained homes and public buildings that date from the days of the American Revolution and before still stand in daily use. Unlike some other better known colonial communities, the buildings in Edenton are well preserved or restored rather than rebuilt.

Edenton was called "ye towne on Queen Anne's Creek" until 1722 when it was incorporated and named in honor of Governor Charles Eden who lived nearby. Even though the town was never designated as the capital, much of the business of state was conducted from there for many years.

The community was home to many individuals prominent in the early history of the state and the nation. Among them were Joseph Hewes, signer of the Declaration of Independence; Hugh Williamson, signer of the Federal Constitution; James Iredell, associate justice of the First United States Supreme Court; and Samuel Johnston, early governor and first United States senator from North Carolina.

Fourteen historic homes and buildings and several gardens will be open to the public with hostesses on hand to conduct tours of individual properties.

Two homes are included that never before have been opened to the public. They are Westington House, which dates from 1850 and was used as a headquarters for Union officers during the Civil War, and the Leigh House which was built in 1758 and is now undergoing restoration.

Special "pilgrimage" events in addition to the open houses will include a Saturday night performance by the Carolina Readers Theatre of "A Wilde Night" (humorous and sardonic views of man's foibles as seen by Oscar Wilde), and a three-day arts and crafts fair.

Additional information concerning the pilgrimage of Colonial Edenton and Countryside can be obtained from the Edenton Woman's Club, Box 61, Edenton, North Carolina.

You have a lot going for you with today's electricity.

And you decide how much.

Because until you flip the switch or push in the plug, the washer doesn't wash, the dryer doesn't dry, the toaster doesn't toast—and the meter doesn't turn. But sometimes that can be hard to remember. Because today's appliances are so convenient that it's easy to forget them once you put them away—which makes it just as easy to forget the electricity you used to put them to work. And at Vepco we think that's only natural. Because all our thousands of trained people and the billions of dollars in equipment and technology are here for just one reason: to make sure you always have the economical electricity you need—whenever you decide to use it. And all you have to do is flip a switch or push in a plug. But if you ever do think about electricity—and especially if you only think about it when the bill comes—we hope you'll remember that you decide how much you're going to use. We're here to see that you get all you require.

NEW YORK (UPI) — More than 54,000 American tourists visited Czechoslovakia in 1972 to help boost the year's tourism to a record estimated total of 12 million foreign travelers, an increase of 300 per cent over the 4 million foreign visitor arrivals recorded in 1971, the Czechoslovak Travel Bureau reports.

Tourist arrivals from the United States represented a 17 per cent increase over 1971, when 46,000 Americans toured the country. Canadians also came in record numbers, establishing an increase of 22 per cent with 8,724 arrivals, compared with 7,100 in 1971.

Is There Life In Space? We'll Be Looking For It

By AL ROSSITER JR.
UPI Science Writer
CAPE KENNEDY (UPI) — Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn have one thing in common—they all will be visited by American space probes to be launched within five years in a stepped up effort to explore the solar system.

Only the three outermost planets will escape the scrutiny of cameras and other reconnaissance instruments aboard robot spacecraft now on the drawing boards or in extra clean assembly buildings. Uranus, Neptune and Pluto will have to wait until NASA has more money.

Jupiter, the almost star-like colossus 480 million miles from the sun, is the first target of the new series of planetary explorers. One little spacecraft is more than halfway there and a twin, Pioneer 11, is scheduled to be launched April 5.

The job of the two pioneers is to pave the way to the fifth planet out from the sun and give man his first closeup look at its brilliantly striped atmosphere and its deadly radiation belts.

A Junction Point
Pioneer 10, launched a year ago, is due to fly within 87,000 miles of Jupiter Dec. 3. Pioneer 11 should reach the planet Dec. 5, 1974. Both will take 10 pictures of Jupiter and examine its atmosphere and environment with a dozen other experiments.

Jupiter stands at the gateway to the outer planets and will serve as a junction point for future spacecraft enroute to Saturn and the planets beyond. Pioneer 10 improved the outlook for such flights when it passed safely through the debris-filled asteroid belt last month between Mars and Jupiter. None had gone that far before.

"I think we're firmly convinced now that the asteroid belt presents little hazard to future spacecraft going out to explore the outer planets," said Dr. William H. Kinard, meteorologist specialist from the Langley Research Center, Hampton, Va.

The key to the rapidly expanding interest in the planets is the question that has intrigued thinking men for centuries—is Earth the only place to harbor life?

The Best Place
Many scientists think there must be some kind of life somewhere else and they say Mars is the best place to start looking. This idea was buoyed recently when photographs taken by the Mariner 9 showed that Mars is a dynamic, evolving planet with what seems to be unmistakable evidence it once had great volumes of water flowing across its surface.

There also has been speculation that life might exist in Jupiter's thick and colorful atmosphere. And Cornell University astronomers reported recently they have found that Titan, the largest of the 10 moons of Saturn, has an atmosphere that might support life.

"Our research has shown that at the very least," Dr. Carl Sagan said, "Titan should be littered with the kind of organic molecule which, in the early history of the Earth, led to the origin of life."

The investigations now planned will concentrate on a direct search for biological substances on Mars. Two large unmanned Viking spacecraft will be launched toward the Red Planet in 1975 and land in the warmest, dampest places available there in July and August of 1976.

Each Viking will scratch, dig and probe the Martian surface, then swallow and analyze soil samples for signs of biological activity. The landers also will carry television cameras, Marsquake detectors and weather observatories.

But before the 7,500-pound Vikings reach Mars, the United States will have completed the two Jupiter missions and will have sent a television scout past Venus and Mercury, the two inner planets between Earth and sun. Then, in 1977, two Mariners will be sent on a picturing voyage to Jupiter and Saturn.

Russia is Active
Russia, too, is active in planetary exploration and the Soviets accomplished the first unmanned landings on both Mars and Venus. The Martian lander, however, failed seconds after touchdown in a raging dust storm in late 1971.

Russian scientists are expected to take advantage of the next Mars launch opportunity next year and send two more spacecraft on Martian landing missions. The United States and Russia agreed in February in Moscow to exchange information on potential Mars landing sites.

The Mariner that will explore Venus and Mercury is set for launch Oct. 10. It will be the first spacecraft to visit two planets.

The plan is to aim Mariner 10 so it passes about 3,300 miles from Venus and then, with an assist from the Venusian gravity, swings out to travel to little Mercury, the planet nearest the sun. The probe is expected to pass within 625 miles of unexplored Mercury and take pictures that should be able to show surface objects as small as a football field.

Mercury is so close to the sun that it is hard to see with Earth telescopes and only general shading characteristics are known. The satellite's pictures are expected to tell man as much about Mercury as the first telescopic observations told man about the moon.

Circle Sun
Venus also has never been photographed from up close although it has been explored by seven American and Russian spacecraft over the past 10 years. The Mariner will take several thousand pictures of Venus' dense blanket of clouds and scientists hop the probe will find some openings in the atmospheric veil so it can see through to the Venusian surface.

Mariner 10 should reach Venus in February, 1974, and pass by Mercury in late March. It will circle the sun after passing Mercury and will return to the little planet in September, 1975.

After the Viking Mars expeditions of 1975 and 1976, the space agency plans to devote more attention to Jupiter and Saturn.

Two 1,600-pound Mariners will be launched in August and September, 1977, to scout Jupiter first and then fly on to Saturn using the cosmic billiard ball technique that will be tried out by the Mariner Venus-Mercury flight. It will take the probe more than 1 1/2 years to reach Jupiter and about two more years to fly to Saturn, the huge ringed planet that is six times out from the sun.

One of the two Mariners' objectives will be to look at the mysterious rings around Saturn. They are generally believed to consist of gas, ice and dust, although two astronomers at the jet propulsion laboratory, Pasadena, Calif., reported earlier this month that radar examination of the planet showed its rings are made of solid chunks of something.

Dr. Richard M. Goldstein said Saturn's rings, girdling the planet from 57,000 to 87,000 miles out, "must be considered an extreme hazard to any spacecraft sent into or near the rings."

Saturn itself is about 72,000 miles in diameter, yet it is believed to be a gaseous body lacking a solid surface and with a density less than water.

NASA's definite planetary exploration plans end with the Mariner Jupiter-Saturn mission, but the agency hopes to begin work next year on another program to explore Venus in 1978 with small Pioneer spacecraft.

Two Pioneers would be

Experiment With Elastic Bumpers

By EDWARD S. LECHTZIN
UPI Auto Writer

DETROIT (UPI) — There are 100 taxicabs in New York equipped with elastic front and rear bumper systems that collapse on impact and then reshape without a scratch.

The fleet of 1973 Chevrolet Impalas was set up by General Motors to field test the system designed to absorb 5 mile per hour impacts—the kind of parking lot fender benders that can run up bills of more than $100.

Federal safety standards for 1973 models called for cars being able to crash into a barrier at 5 m.p.h. without damaging any safety-related parts. That's being extended to rear bumpers in 1974.

What the safety standard doesn't do is make sure the car, along with the safety equipment, can survive uncrumpled that low-speed crash. Tests of 1973 models run by the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety showed it was "entirely possible for a vehicle to meet the federal bumper standard and still suffer costly damage."

Elastic Front End
At two and one-half miles an hour, an American Motors Gremlin sustained $67 worth of damage in a rear end crash. A Chevrolet Vega in the same test suffered $36 damage and a Chevrolet Impala $12. At speeds above 5 m.p.h., damage ran into the hundreds of dollars.

GM's experimental bumper system—actually an entirely elastic front end—on one car has gone through more than 100 impacts in the 5 m.p.h. range without any damage.

The front end system combines in a single panel a bumper ridge, grille, valance, headlamp bezels and fender extensions and is being tested as part of a 1973 Chevrolet Impala. Rear-end construction outwardly resembles the contours of a conventional Impala, but it also combines in a single piece, the filler panel, bumper ridge and valance or the area extending downward from the rear deck lid to the sheet metal beneath the bumper on a conventional car.

What happens when a car equipped with the experimental front end runs into a pole at 5 m.p.h.? It appears to wrap itself around the pole, crushing inward as the cushioning material acts like a dry sponge. Then it bounces back and the front end—which looked like it would need extensive repair work—pops out and there's no evidence of a crash.

Protective Covering
Over the cushioning material is a tough but compliant plastic exterior facing that acts as a protective covering, yielding to impact but resisting gouges, scratches, dings and other types of surface damage.

GM doesn't expect to have the system in production in the near future and is only evaluating now to see if it will ever make it into production.

"Our ultimate aim is to take advantage of weight savings of the soft-face concept and at the same time offer the prospect of reduced repair costs, plus other potential advantages, to the customer," says Dr. Craig Marks, technical assistant to the vice president in charge of the engineering staff.

"However, we don't know at this time whether such gains are possible because we have no service experience," he said.

GM should be getting some of that service experience quickly as 100 cab drivers jockey their specially equipped cars around Manhattan traffic.

GM began delivering the cabs in late January and had the entire fleet on the street by late February. By early March, eight accidents had been reported involving cabs with the special bumper systems.

Marks said it was too early to evaluate the crashes. He added, however, "It's amazing how fast they can bang them up."

Rewards For Drug Pushers

ONTARIO, Calif. (AP) — The phone rings at a secret location somewhere in California. If an anonymous tipster has provided information on drug pushers or caches which later leads to a conviction, he may collect a reward of up to $500.

For the past year, WeTip (We Turn in Pushers) has been turning over its telephoned information to narcotics officers.

Results of the first year's operation include 1,948 tips received, resulting in 125 arrests and 22 convictions, a spokesman said. The organization paid out $1,300 in rewards, but about half the persons who call want no compensation, the spokesman said.

Sponsors say it is helping rid the streets of illegal drug traffic. But critics fear that because informants remain anonymous, WeTip is vulnerable to malicious-minded persons who could cause law enforcement agencies to investigate innocent citizens.

According to WeTip, persons in 44 California cities with information on drug traffic can call a statewide, toll-free number. There a trained operator records the details and forwards them to an appropriate law enforcement agency, which can use the information at its own discretion.

Anonymity is the watchword of the organization founded by William Brownell, a retired Los Angeles County deputy sheriff, who got the idea from a similar program in Tampa, Fla.

The location of the operator is kept secret, the informant and his information are assigned a secret code number, and if the informant is to receive a reward, it is delivered to one of several undisclosed "drop points," a spokesman said.

GENERAL MOTORS' experimental bumper system — actually an entirely elastic front end — is demonstrated here. (UPI Telephoto)

Fabulous Russian Collection Of Western Paintings To Be Shown

By DAVID E. ANDERSON
WASHINGTON (UPI) — The first exhibition of western art paintings owned by the Soviet Union will bring to America 41 paintings—many of them never shown outside of Russia—by such giants of modern paintings as Picasso, Van Gogh, Matisse and Gauguin.

"We just picked the pictures right off the walls," said Dr. Armand Hammer, who negotiated the important loan.

Hammer, an oil executive and art collector, is chairman of the Armand Hammer Foundation.

He told reporters in announcing the exhibit, which will open at Washington's National Gallery March 31, that the loan came after a year of negotiations and after Hammer had loaned the Russians some of his own pictures.

Ronald Berman, chairman of the National Endowment for the Humanities, called the exhibit "a major breakthrough in cultural relations."

The 41 paintings will come from the extensive collection of the Soviet's Hermitage State Museum in Leningrad and the Pushkin Museum in Moscow.

The Soviet Union's collection is known to be among the richest in the world in its representation of the modernist movements of Western art in the period between 1870 and 1920.

Russian collectors Ivan Morozov and Serge Shchukin were early admirers of the impoverished young painters working in Paris at the turn of the century, and brought home to Russia what J. Carter Brown, director of the National Gallery, has called "one of the top three or four collections in the world."

The paintings will be shown at the National Gallery through April 29 and at the Knoedler Gallery in New York, which Hammer heads, from May 3 through May 26.

The paintings, insured for $25 million, will be flown to the United States in three separate planes because, Hammer said, "the Soviets didn't want to risk all at one time."

Included in the exhibit will be seven paintings each by Matisse and Gauguin, six by Picasso, five by Cezanne, three by Van Gogh, two each by Renoir, Rousseau and Derain and single works by Pissarro, Sisley, Braque, Vlaminck and Leger.

A billionaire who now heads Occidental Petroleum Corp., Hammer ran a pencil factory in the Soviet Union during the 1920s.

A Record Low In Forest Fires

FRANKFORT, Ky. (UPI) — Kentucky set a record low last year in one category and hopes the trend continues. The state Division of Forestry reports that 977 forest fires burned 9,424 acres of the state's extensive timberland.

During the preceding eight years, there were 2,300 fires that burned 44,567 acres on an annual average basis. Better fire control and heavier rainfalls during the 1972 spring and fall fire seasons were cited as reasons for the reduction.

Summer Can Be A Season Of Adventure

DETROIT (AP) — Care to try your hand at hot-air ballooning this summer?

How about rafting down the Colorado River, sailing off the Virgin Islands, backpacking through Switzerland, or finding out for sure which of Europe's restaurants really are best?

All the adventure a person could ask for on his summer vacation is available from American colleges and universities offering their facilities and expertise to people who want more from their vacation than a suntan.

College classes will go mountain-climbing, fishing in Alaska, hunting for unreported Civil War battlefields and looking for Viking relics in the British Isles, reports James Treloar, who has written a book about the multiplicity of summer offerings, "Education Vacations" (published by Gale Research Co., Detroit).

People can spend their vacation digging through Indian ruins in Arizona, through dinosaur remains in South Dakota or through the cuisine of Chinese restaurants in the Midwest — all for college credit.

And anyone who can demonstrate that the course he takes improves his competence for a job he already holds, can take its cost as an income tax deduction — lodging, meals, transportation and all, Treloar points out.

It would be a rare person who couldn't find a course that matched his job, says the author, a reporter for the Detroit News, who cites these examples:

Attorneys can study maritime law in Greece.

Teachers can examine children's literature in Japan, audio-visual techniques in Bangkok, comparative systems in Latin America, or even try their hand in a London classroom.

Broadcasters can explore the BBC in London.

Store owners can study retailing in Europe.

A woman who runs a boutique can go behind the scenes of Paris' famed fashion salons.

And if you work in the area of sports or recreation, there is bicycling in Scandinavia, camping at Pike's Peak, and trips to Greece and Rome to study the ancient sports of discus and javelin-throwing.

Colleges and universities are bending over backward to attract families.

The University of California at Santa Cruz will offer a course this summer in "The Ecology of the Redwood Forest."

Families that enroll will stay at the YMCA camps in the Sierra Mountains, where they will have a choice of pitching a tent, parking their camper, renting a cottage — or taking an apartment with maid service.

For all families, there will be free baby-sitting service.

Many courses are open to anyone who's interested — whether he has graduated from high school or not.

Traveling under the auspices of a university provides opportunities the tourist would never have, Treloar points out. One class will visit the Olduvai in Africa, where the earliest known remains of primitive man have been found. The guide will be Mary Leakey, the anthropologist who made the find.

Another class will go to London to informally discuss history and human behavior with the noted British historian Arnold Toynbee.

For the stay-at-homes, there are university-owned summer camps for families interested in art. Parents can study music, painting, sculpture, weaving and glass-blowing, while their children are out making plastic kites.

For the far-flung, a university in California is trying to lead a class into once-forbidden China: while the University of Hawaii is headed in the opposite direction. They're taking a group to the mainland for a tour of summer jazz festivals — and three hours of credit in music.

FREE FOR TOM STANTON, Mo. (AP) — So what's in a name?

If it is Tom Sawyer you are given free admission at Meramec Cavern on U.S. 66 here. The reason is the musical film, "Tom Sawyer," shot scenes at the cave.

When owner Lester B. Dill was asked if his policy of admitting Tom Sawyers without charge is discriminating against women, he said: "No. Any woman with that name is also admitted to the cave free."

Perpetual Motion Is Dreamer

CHICAGO (UPI) — If you're reasonably brilliant and have some spare time, why not try to invent perpetual motion?

The fact that legions of other brilliant minds through the centuries have failed to produce a perpetual motion machine should heighten the challenge. It's merely improbable and unlikely.

The first recorded attempt to construct such a device, according to Encyclopaedia Britannica, apparently was that of Villard de Honnecourt, a 13th century architect. His plan was the forerunner of a large number of different types of overbalancing wheels, which seek to ignore the laws of mechanics.

Another frequent attempt, the waterwheel, runs afoul of the laws of hydrostatics and hydrodynamics. Some involved capillary action, such as an endless belt of sponges designed to stay in motion by becoming saturated with water, then draining, thus becoming heavier and lighter in perpetuity.

The birth of electrochemistry gave perpetual motion fans new concepts. In 1840 a small brass ball was set oscillating at Oxford University's Clarendon Laboratory. It has been oscillating ever since and is the most perpetual of all so-called perpetual motion devices. But in principle it is no different from an electric clock powered by a battery.

The availability of liquid air started a fresh crop of schemes. Liquid air can be used as a boiler fluid to power an engine without a furnace. But more energy is required to make the liquid air than can be derived from it.

It has been suggested that perpetual motion can be attained if a substance were found to nullify the action of gravity or of magnetism by holding a sheet of the substance beneath a weight being lifted and removing it as the weight falls.

Motion from Heated Water?
A 20th century school of perpetual motionists theoretically claim heat from bodies of water at atmospheric temperature can produce a continuous supply of work, assuming the sun reheats the water.

Modern techniques for obtaining power from atomic energy are sometimes cited as examples of perpetual motion, with the idea that they create energy from nothing. However, nuclear energy processes consume fuel.

The first example of the use of nuclear energy to produce motion came in 1903, when R. J. Strutt created a sensation with an apparatus called the radium clock. Some thought Strutt had found perpetual motion but it soon was established that energy was being released from the radium nucleus. With the half-life of the radium approximately 1,620 years, the motion just seemed perpetual.

The sun's heat may be utilized, the tides may be harnessed, or some other source of energy may produce systematic mechanical motion. But, according to Britannica, a machine to produce ordered motion by itself is so improbable that it is most unlikely to be realized.

Further, the U.S. Patent Office won't accept an application for perpetual motion patents — unless accompanied by a working model.

Forest Vandals Cost $500,000

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Vandals caused $500,000 damage to California's 17 national forests during 1972.

Doug R. Leisz, regional U.S. forester, said the most frequent vandalism involved damage to rest rooms and picnic tables, signs torn down or shot up, fireplaces wrecked and spray can painting on rocks.

Islam's Hold In Black Africa Continues To Grow

EDITOR'S NOTE — Centuries ago Arab traders traveled south into the heart of Africa bearing salt, sugar and their religion. Now Islam is spreading across black Africa and becoming a growing force for political change.

By LARRY HEINZERLING
Associated Press Writer
KANO, Nigeria (AP) — On the dusty praying grounds under a scorching African sun, 50,000 kneeling Moslems bow humbly toward Mecca, their heads touching the hot red dirt, in praise of God.
"La ilah illa Allah!" — "There is no God but Allah!"
The reverent words come in waves. They echo off the ancient mud walls of the emir of Kano's nearby palace, as they have for hundreds of years. The imam, or prayer leader, inside the cream-colored Masjedul-Medina mosque completes a recitation from the Koran.

It is 2 p.m. Friday, the traditional hour for communal prayer. Traffic stops, shops close and the noisy streets and market stalls fall silent while homage is paid to God.
Many of those praying in this city in northern Nigeria hold a string of red prayer beads in their hands. Almost all are men. Many have made the holy pilgrimage to Mecca in Saudi Arabia. More significant, all are black Africans.
Significant because Kano, a Moslem stronghold, is a stepping stone between the Arab world and black Africa where Islam is spreading quickly and Moslem militancy is a growing force for political change.
Miniwars and simmering hostility between Moslem northerners and pagan or Christian southerners today plague several African countries along the sub-Saharan belt.

Moslem minorities further south are an increasingly touchy domestic political factor for a number of newly independent black African states.
And black African sympathy for the Arab cause in the Middle East crisis is growing, fueled by propaganda from Arab nations. They stress parallels between the Arab-Israeli confrontation and black Africa's struggle against white-ruled Rhodesia, South Africa and the Portuguese colonies.
Islam, which means "submission to God," was carried from the Arab world south across the burning Sahara by traders centuries ago.
Over the years, as traders fanned out below the Sahara, Islam spread. Today a third of Africa's people embrace the teachings of the prophet Moammed.

Predominantly Moslem countries in black Africa range in a sub-Saharan arc from the Islamic republic of Mauritania on the Atlantic through Senegal, Gambia, Guinea, Mali, Niger, Chad and the Sudan to Somalia on the Indian Ocean.
Large Moslem minorities, 25 per cent or more, exist in Portuguese Guinea, Sierra Leone, Ivory Coast, Nigeria, Cameroon and Ethiopia, where smaller numbers have filtered into Liberia, Upper Volta, Ghana, Togo, Dahomey, Zaire, Uganda, Kenya and Tanzania.
In landlocked Chad, Arab guerrillas in the north and east have been waging a rebellion against the French-backed government in Fort Lamy since 1968.
The Moslem rebels, armed by Libya, resent domination by the more educated Animist and Christian southerners who control the regime of President Francois Tombalbaye. The country is just over half-Moslem.

Chad's neighbor, the Sudan, has experienced reverse problems with a protracted uprising by southern dissidents seeking freedom from rulers from the Moslem north. Although a formal settlement was reached earlier this year, hostility lingers.

A similar north-south division exists in Cameroon, a major religious and racial crossroads. But President Ahmadou Ahidjo, a Moslem northerner, has firmly maintained stability.
In oil-rich Nigeria, however, the massacre of thousands of Catholic Ibos by Moslem Hausas here in Kano and elsewhere in 1966 sparked the bloody 30-month civil war which was finally ended in 1970.
Further west, Islam is already associated with revolutionary Guinea, where fiery Marxist President Sekou Toure runs a "People's Democracy" dedicated to wiping out imperialism, colonialism and neocolonialism on the continent.
In Senegal, 85 per cent Moslem, three major Islamic brotherhoods control the country's major resource, the peanut-growing industry.

Senegal's Catholic poet-president, Leopold Senghor, carefully weighs the needs of the rural Moslem majority on which he depends politically before executing national policy decisions.
Across the continent, in Ethiopia, now about 40 per cent Moslem, Emperor Haile Selassie's feudal regime continues to face stiff opposition from the Eritrean Liberation Front.

The religion appeals to African mores and has none of the racial overtones associated with Christianity from the white world, says a Moslem teacher in Kano, explaining Islam's spread in black Africa.
"The Moslems in Nigeria are from the people," he says. "The Christian missionaries are strangers from abroad. I definitely believe all of Africa will become Moslem."
Not yet. But the deep penetration of Islam in traditionally non-Moslem areas is increasingly apparent every day.
North Carolina's ski resorts are centered around Boone, a small mountain town in the western part of the state.

More Visitors To Nova Scotia

HALIFAX (AP) — More than 1.4 million tourists visited Nova Scotia during the 1972 season, an increase of 8.1 per cent over the volume of traffic in 1971.
U.S. visitors made up the bulk of those who brought non-resident vehicles into Nova Scotia. U.S. traffic increased 8.9 per cent.

Three Small Florida Cities Battle Growth Forces

By FRANK EDGE
BOCA RATON, Fla. (UPI) — Three small cities in Florida have taken on the forces of industry and two big land development corporations in attempts to cure growing pains and preserve the quality of life on the Florida Gold Coast.

The battle has been joined in Boca Raton, Hollywood and Hallandale. The eventual outcome may require a landmark decision from the U.S. Supreme Court and set a pattern for many suburban cities.

The three municipalities are trying two different approaches, but the goal is the same: limit the number of residents to maintain the quality of life.

Boca Raton has adopted a city charter law to limit to 40,000 the total number of dwelling units within the city's limits. Hollywood and Hallandale have passed city ordinances to restrict the population density per acre.

Both approaches confront the courts with further interpretation of the Fifth Amendment to the U.S. constitution which says: "... nor shall private property be taken for public use without just compensation."

None of the three cities plan to condemn any disputed land and pay what the owners think it's worth. The cities couldn't afford the hundreds of millions of dollars such condemnations would cost.

But, at the same time, the city fathers are telling the land owners they cannot develop the full potential they expected of their property.

Mushrooming Growth
The population explosion along Florida's southeast coast is that bad. Hollywood and Hallandale are in Broward County, maybe the fastest growing county in the nation, adding more than 41,000 new residents per year. Boca Raton is next door to the north, in with a $54 million damage suit for their pains in trying to dampen the population explosion.

Present Situation
The present circumstances in the three cities are approximately these:

Boca Raton—Has a population of 33,000-37,000 persons living in 14,000 dwelling units built on 16,000 of the city's 44,000 acres. Councilman Norman Wymbs, father of the "growth cap" amendment, said the total of 40,000 dwelling units would limit Boca Raton's population to about 105,000. Unrestricted, he said, it might go well over 200,000.

Hallandale—Only one mile wide and 2.5 miles deep. The town has only 2,000 vacant acres left. Consultant Sachs said that if only 20 units per acre were permitted on the vacant property, Hallandale would wind up with an average of 55 persons per acre city-wide which is "two and a half times the current density of San Francisco."

Hollywood—Once a small "bedroom community" lying between Hallandale and Miami to the south and Fort Lauderdale to the north now has a population of 102,000 in its roughly six-by-six mile square stretching back from the ocean.

Boca Raton's growth cap law has been taken to federal court on constitutional grounds by the huge Arvida corporation. Arvida, founded by the late Arthur Vining Davis who also founded ALCOA, had its plans for development of University Park sharply restricted by Boca Raton's population throttle.

Arrayed against both Hollywood and Hallandale is the giant GAC corporation which owns three man-made islands in the intercoastal waterway straddling the boundary line of the two cities.

The commissioners stood their ground. Last November, Broward Circuit Judge Otis Farrington ruled that GAC could not claim damages. He has not ruled yet on the constitutional challenge.

While the fight on the first suit still goes on, the Hollywood commissioners voted Jan. 19 this year to amend the 80-60-40 ordinance to set the limit at only 25 units per acre on multi-family plots. This drew another suit by GAC and at least five more suits from smaller land developers.

Versatile Van For Speedways

NEW YORK (UPI) — One of the more interesting vehicles on the sports racing car circuit is a special van that not only serves as a transporter for twin racing cars but as an observation deck, lounge and machine shop.

Developed for use by the Royal Crown racing team, the unit has an enclosed rooftop observation deck on which guests can view the races plus an air-conditioned downstairs lounge with full facilities. The 40-foot long van has its own plant to power an extensive machine shop, with a dozen major pieces of equipment.

Palm Beach County, where growth is mushrooming.

At Boca Raton, Richard Mayo headed a "Citizens for Reasonable Growth" movement which successfully petitioned for a charter referendum and got it passed 7,722 to 5,626 votes last Nov. 7.

"People want to keep Boca Raton a low density city," Mayo said. "That's what caused them to come here initially."

The tightly-boundaried town of Hallandale got bad news at a recent public hearing from planning consultant Walter Sachs of Philadelphia.

"This community is indeed at a crossroads in its development," Sachs said. "If uncontrolled, we would predict a decided and rapid decline in the quality of life of this community."

Hollywood's city commissioners were slapped individually
