

Nixon Imposes Price Ceiling On Meats

By GAYLORD SHAW
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon has imposed a ceiling on supermarket and whole-sale meat prices, effective now, while he seeks a permanent cure to soaring food costs.

Spurred by housewife unhappiness and meat-counter boycotts, the President told the nation Thursday night he was switching economic signals and in effect freezing beef, pork and lamb prices at about their current levels.

Disclosure of the meat-price ceiling was tucked into a televised address hailing the end of U.S. involvement in Vietnam, sternly warning Hanoi to quit violating the peace agreement, and calling for public support in his budget battle with Congress.

Members of Congress generally supported Nixon's economic move. But some Democrats raised a cry of "too little, too late" and said they would continue to push for a freeze on all prices. And leaders of a nationwide consumers' boycott said they intend to carry out their plans despite the presidential action.

"This is not enough. We boycott," said June Donovan of Los Angeles, one of the planners of the week-long boycott of meat and poultry scheduled to begin on Sunday.

Among Congressional reaction to the Nixon order:

"A long step in the right direction," said Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania.

"A formula for shortages," said Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis.

"Fundamentally a mistake," said House Agriculture Committee Chairman W. R. Poage, D-Tex. "I just don't think it will bring about a reduction in anything except the supply of meat."

In his 20-minute address, Nixon made only fleeting reference to housewife unhappiness, but sources reported it was a maajor factor in causing him to discard his insistence that food-prices curbs wouldn't work.

"What we need is action that will stop the rise in meat prices now," he said after recounting recent steps to increase supplies and bring prices down later this year.

"That is why I have today ordered the Cost of Living Council to impose a ceiling on prices of beef, pork and lamb," the President said, adding:

"The ceiling will remain in effect as long as is necessary to do the job. Meat prices must not go higher. With the help of the housewife and farmer, they can and should go down."

Here, according to administration officials, are the major points of the meat-price ceiling and related Nixon actions:

—Effective at 9 p.m. EST Thursday, meat retailers, wholesalers and processors cannot charge more than a figure computed on the basis of sales for the past 30 days. In most cases, the price ceiling will be at or slightly below current levels. The ceiling does not apply to poultry or seafood.

—By April 9, ceiling-price information must be posted at all meat counters. Internal Revenue Service agents will police the ceiling, just as they did the 1971 across-the-board price freeze.

—A special clause allows sellers of imported meat to pass along, dollar-for-dollar, any cost increases they incur. But this provisions does not apply to domestically produced meat.

—The administration, meanwhile, is asking Congress to promptly give Nixon authority to suspend tariffs on products in short supply. This could affect, for example, imports of meat and other materials such as lumber.

Nixon's ceiling order does not apply at the farm level—prices of "cattle on the hoof and pigs with a squeal" won't be affected, Treasury Secretary George Shultz said.

Shultz said continued exemption of raw farm prices from controls is necessary to encourage increases in meat and crop production.

Denton's Account Torture Story Told

By Captain Jeremiah A. Denton, Jr., USN
As Told to Kathryn Johnson
Associated Press Writer
After Robby Risner left the Zoo in October 1966, I became the senior officer at that camp during the phase of captivity in North Vietnam in which the enemy aims were most ambitious. It was also the time when their torture was most widespread.

When I was shot down in an A6A Intruder jet at Thanh Hoa, 70 miles south of Hanoi. But 1966 was the year we prisoners initially organized our resistance against their torture and their demands.

In February 1966, when they wanted me to give them a biography, I was tortured seven days and six nights in a pitch black room. They beat me very regularly and brutally while I was in large traveling irons with my hands tightly cuffed behind me. It was very cold and I had no blanket, no bedding, no socks, only sandals and pajamas. When I moved it hurt more. I was like an animal. Not even a healthy animal, like a crippled roach. I was pretty much of a vegetable.

After four days, I stopped eating because it required about 45 minutes for me to find my bucket and get into position to use it. I had to search for it by snaking around the floor and feeling with my head.

They can do some interesting things with those cuffs. But that blackness and disorientation—mentally, I was at about five per cent at the end of the torture.

One time they found my swollen black hands in worse shape than they wanted for that phase of torture. They decided to loosen the cuffs to let some blood circulate. But the cuffs were on so tight that they had trouble getting them off.

The only way they could do it was to take them apart. And that took three hours.

They kept me there three more weeks so I could recover enough to write my biography. The biography I wrote was harmless and in some parts obviously ludicrous.

For example, I told them truthfully that one hotel in a city where I had lived burned down but then I added that three others had burned down. That part wasn't true.

When they released me from that torture room, a place we called the Auditorium at the Zoo, I was moved to a cell from which I could secretly communicate with the other prisoners. And I took over the camp after I made sure that I was the senior officer there.

We called it the Zoo because the prisoners had little peepholes through which people could look at us and we felt like animals.

We had various methods of communication, including tapping on the walls in Morse code, and I put out a message saying, "Robby Risner has left camp so I'm now in charge."

When I learned that some men were writing biographies and military information (unclassified) due to mere intimidation from threats, I put the policy out that they were not to succumb to threats, but must stand up and say no.

I tried to put out involved orders saying that you should die before giving the enemy classified information, but could write something like a request for toilet paper.

There were some irreconcilable questions about what could and couldn't be written, so I had to settle on a simple

"No Write" policy. I also recommended that in resisting biographies, we should take torture to lose mentality, then make some harmless statement. That's what I had done.

At this time, the most common way we communicated was by tapping from wall to wall and then whispering at naptime under the doors. We could get messages around the whole camp in a single day—to buildings we had named the Poolroom, the Stable, the Pigsty, the Office, the Barn and the Garage. The Garage was often cut off but men from other buildings occasionally went there, bringing policy and news with them.

We would also whistle in Morse code.

Figuratively speaking, we now began to lie on the railroad tracks hoping that the sheer bulk of our bodies would slow down the train.

We forced them to be brutal to us. And this policy was successful in that the consequent exposure of their brutality ultimately caused U.S. public and official pressure to bear so heavily on our captors that treatment was eventually improved and meanwhile our honor was preserved. I think this is the real story of the Battle of Hanoi.

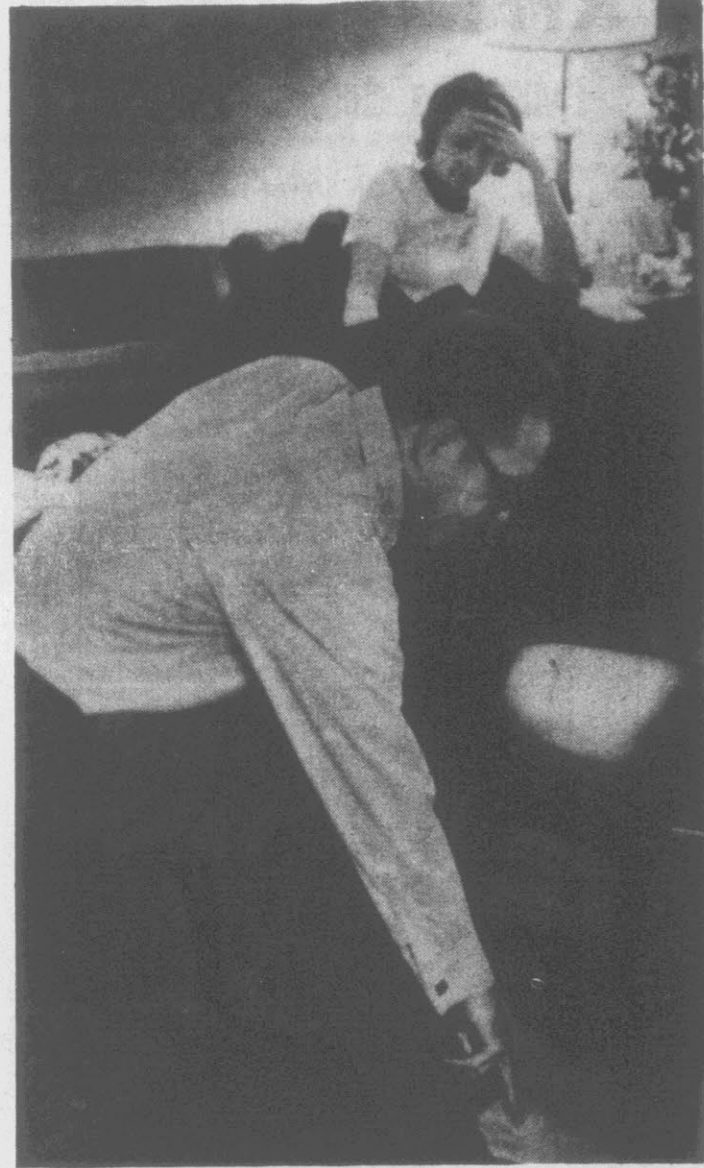

Eventually, they traced the source of the orders being put out to the men. And that was when it really hit the fan for me.

They knew I was inciting others to resist and giving orders, so they started in on me again.

I'm proud to say that most men needed no inciting. As an example, one special act of heroism during this phase involved Bob Purcell, who had a hole in his room into the attic of the Poolroom. A man was being starved in one of the Poolroom's cells so Bob climbed into the attic and by cutting small holes in the ceiling, would deliver food from Bob's and my room to the victim. Bob did this at great personal risk.

Highlights Of Statements From Others

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Here are highlights of comments by recently returned prisoners of war on their treatment by the North Vietnamese and the Viet Cong:

—Air Force Capt. Larry Chesley, of Burley, Idaho, captured on April 16, 1966: "One of the worst parts was the mental anguish of not knowing if you were going to be the next man called outside to be tortured and hearing the man outside say, 'Help me, Help me' and knowing there was nothing you could do except pray for him."

—Navy Capt. James A. Mulligan Jr. of Virginia Beach, Va., captured on March 20, 1966: "I was kept like an animal in a cage. You've been to the zoo. Animals there can look through the bars. I didn't have any bars to look through. I didn't see the moon for years — maybe four or five. It's a very pretty sight."

—Air Force Col. Robinson Risner of Oklahoma City, Okla., captured on Sept. 16, 1965: "I made more than one (antiwar propaganda) tape. I wrote what they told me to write after a torture session.... I myself have screamed all night."

—Cmdr. Richard A. Stratton of Palo Alto, Calif., captured in January 1967 and shown at a Hanoi news conference confessing alleged war crimes: "It is my intention to request that the State Department formally accuse certain members of the government of North Vietnam and the Communist military of war crimes. At the hands of the North Vietnamese I have been tortured, I have been beaten, I have been placed in solitary confinement for a total of 18 months.... I have been put on public display — all of this contrary to international law."

—Army Maj. Floyd J. Thompson of New Milford, N.J., captured in South Vietnam on March 26, 1964 and the longest held POW, discussing what kept him going: "God, country and the love of a good woman." On antiwar activists: "I think these people did more to prolong the war than anything else that happened."

Reject Veto

RALEIGH (AP) — A House committee today rejected legislation calling for an amendment to the state constitution to give the governor of North Carolina veto power.

Former Gov. Luther Hodges had appeared before the House Constitutional Amendments Committee a week ago and urged support for veto power and an amendment to allow the governor and lieutenant governor to succeed themselves.

The committee adjourned today after a quick session before voting on the succession bill. Both measures were introduced by Rep. Tom Gilmore, D-Guilford, and would require a vote of the people.

Rep. Bob Jones, D-Rutherford, offered the motion to give the veto power bill an unfavorable report.

Bill Leaves Murder As Only Capital Crime

By GRACE KUTKUS
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP)—Murder would be imposed on persons convicted of first degree burglary, rape or arson, with no parole possible for 20 years.

The bill, which passed 79-29, was a compromise effort supported by both foes and proponents of capital punishment.

The bill would require the death penalty for first degree murder and murder committed during a first degree burglary, rape, arson or kidnaping.

Mandatory life sentences would be imposed on persons convicted of first degree burglary, rape or arson, with no parole possible for 20 years.

The bill now goes to the Senate.

Rep. Herbert Hyde, D-Buncombe, said although he opposed capital punishment, he would vote for the bill.

"I don't like this bill, but I have wrestled with my conscience and must support it because it appears it's the best thing I can get," he said.

A bill to abolish the death penalty, which Hyde introduced, was defeated earlier in the session.

Another opponent of capital punishment, Rep. Ed Holmes, D-Chatham, spoke in favor of the bill, terming it "a bill we can all live with."

Rep. Lloyd Hise Jr., R-Mitchell, commented that while opponents of capital punishment are "supporting it even though it's too strong, I support it even though it's not strong enough."

Some foes of the death sentence voted against the bill, however. Rep. H.M. Michaux Jr., D-Durham, said he was "opposed to any form of capital punishment because it is racism at its genocidal best."

Michaux said "90 per cent of the men executed for rape in the United States have been black...and no white has been sentenced to death for killing a black in North Carolina," although blacks have been sentenced for killing whites.

An amendment sponsored by Hise to add murder committed during a kidnaping to the list of capital crimes was approved.

A second amendment, offered by Rep. Art Thomas, D-Cabarrus, would have retained the death sentence for rape and given judges and juries the discretion to recommend life imprisonment.

Haldeman Said To Know Wiretap Plans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Convicted Watergate conspirator James W. McCord Jr. has told Senate investigators that presidential aide H. R. Haldeman was fully aware of the plans to wiretap Democratic national headquarters, the Baltimore Sun quotes sources as saying.

The Sun said in today's editions that Haldeman, President Nixon's chief of staff, was described not as taking an active part in planning the Watergate bugging but only of knowing about the plan.

The story was attributed to congressional sources said to be familiar with McCord's testimony before a special Senate committee investigating the break-in and wiretapping of Democratic headquarters in the Watergate building last June.

The Sun said McCord told investigators that White House officials promised executive clemency for any of the seven Watergate defendants who pleaded guilty, as well as aid for their families. He would not name the officials.

Presidential Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler has repeatedly denied that any present White House official had advance knowledge of or participated in the Watergate operation.

McCord goes before a federal judge today for sentencing for his in the burglary-wiretapping.

Meanwhile, Republican Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr. of Connecticut told reporters Thursday that the Watergate incident was just a small part of the Republican espionage and sabotage against Democrats in the 1972 presidential campaign.

He said he thinks the operation was directed by someone in the White House. And he added that that official still is in the White House although he has "absolute confidence" that Nixon knew nothing about the Watergate tactics.

Weicker confirmed news reports that McCord testified he had been told by G. Gordon Liddy that former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell approved the Watergate plans. Liddy, a former White House aide, was convicted with McCord of conspiracy, burglary and wiretapping; five other defendants pleaded guilty.

But Weicker, a member of the special Senate committee, said "no corroborative evidence of any kind" has been offered to support what McCord testified he had been told by Liddy.

Mitchell has denied any role in the Watergate incident.

Report Favors Abolishing Of ECU Medical School

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

A report prepared by officials of the North Carolina Medical Society, the deans of the state's three medical schools, and leading health officials recommends that the one-year medical school at East Carolina University be abolished and that no new four-year medical education program be established in the state.

The report—scheduled for presentation to the medical society's House of Delegates for action at its annual meeting in May—appears in the current issue of the N. C. Medical Society Journal. If adopted at the May session, it would become medical society policy.

Based on the findings of the 20-member committee, the report suggested that the one-year program at ECU be abolished and be replaced with an area health education center providing residency training and clinical programs for medical degree candidates.

The informal group also recommended in their report that the most "economical and efficient way" to educate additional medical students is "within the existing four-year schools," saying a "major commitment of state funds to establish another medical school... be made only if and when evidence clearly indicates its need."

The report recommends increased financial support for North Carolina students enrolled in the state's two private medical schools — at Duke University and Bowman Gray school of medicine at Wake Forest University — and increased student enrollment at the University of North Carolina School of Medicine at Chapel Hill.

The medical society study had its birth in November 1971 when a request for a study to determine the most economical way to meet the needs of the state was made by the Lincoln County Medical Society.

Commenting on the published report, Dr. Edwin Monroe, vice-chancellor for Health Affairs at ECU said, "This report was presented to a committee of the Board of Governors (of the University of North Carolina) studying the ECU request to add the second year" to its one-year program.

(East Carolina had hoped to expand the one-year to a two-year program by September 1974 and to eventually expand to a four-year school — but the UNC Board of Governors decided to have private consultants study the need for a four-year school in the state and where it should be located.)

"The reaction of the committee of the Board of Governors (to the medical society study) was one of incredulous amazement... primarily for one reason," Dr. Monroe noted.

The reason, he said, was the committee's "total inability to understand how the heads of the three medical schools (UNC, Duke and Wake Forest) and the state Medical Society were not able to recognize that there has been, is now, and will be a severe shortage of doctors in North Carolina."

"I personally think one reason the Board of Governors report contained so much documentation of the shortage of doctors in North Carolina," Monroe said, "was that they felt the people of the state should not be led astray by this kind of irresponsible planning on the part of the leadership of the three existing medical schools."

In its report to the UNC Board of Governors, the board's study committee backed the continuation of the present one-year program at ECU, pending the outcome of the consultant's study which is expected to be completed by September.

Dr. John Gamble — a legislator-surgeon from Lincoln county who caused the Lincoln County Medical Society to request the state society study two years ago — said last week at a legislative appropriations subcommittee hearing that North Carolina should fund the admission of 100 additional prospective doctor students at UNC and at ECU during the next two years.

The practicing surgeon and Democratic member of the state House of Representatives said $2.5 million would "reasonably finance the added enrollment at UNC and ECU" and said Chapel Hill can handle the program and ECU is ready to implement it.

"The statement that by increasing the number in the schools the standards of medical education and physicians will be lowered is hogwash," Dr. Gamble said.

DELAY SENTENCING
WASHINGTON (AP)

Sentencing of James W. McCord Jr., the source of new allegations that top White House aides knew of plans for the Watergate affair, was postponed today until June 15.

Award To Barwick

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Holshouser today presented Paul A. Barwick of LaGrange an award as North Carolina's outstanding handicapped citizen.

Barwick was honored at the 22nd annual awards luncheon of the Governor's Committee on Employment of the Handicapped. Barwick, who is a public information officer with the eastern regional alcoholism program of the state Department of Mental Health, is the first state employe to be selected for the award.

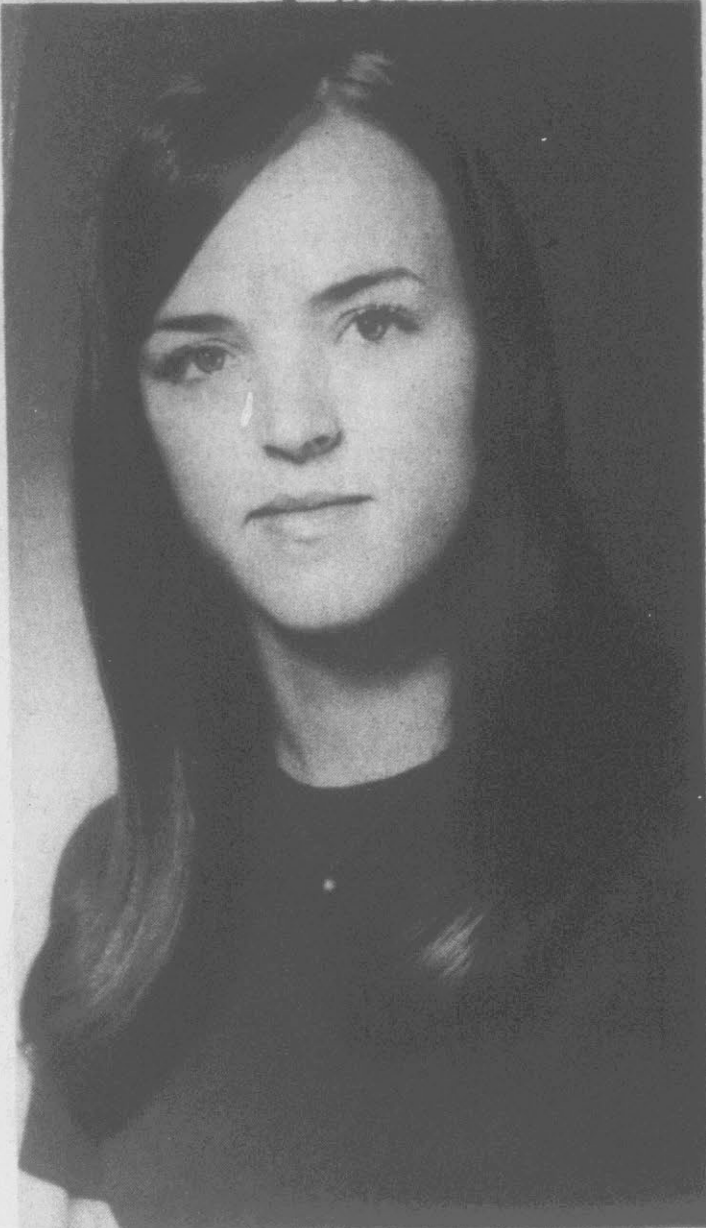

He was cited for his continuing campaign to eliminate problems facing handicapped persons.

Barwick, former editor and owner of the LaGrange Weekly Gazette and three other area newspapers, became paralyzed from the waist down after a fall when he was nine years old.

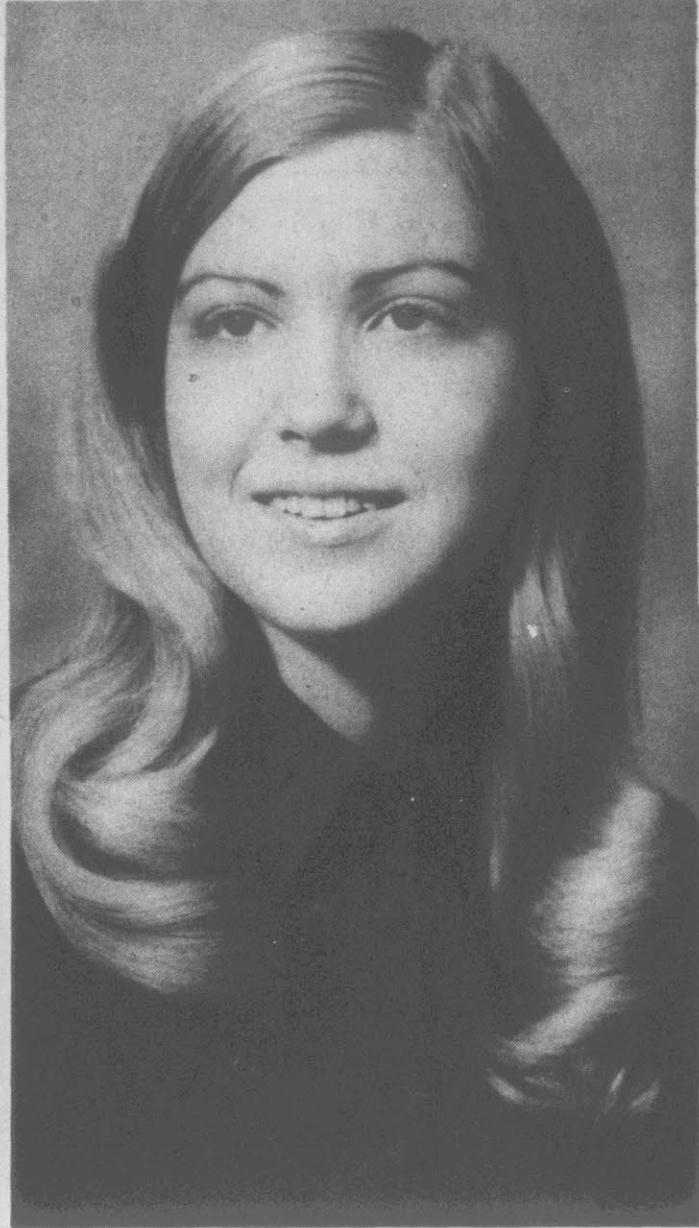

Although Barwick and his wife, the former Anne Surrat, have no children of their own, they have served as foster parents for 11 children.

Put Yourself In Her Place

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1973 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: A group of couples have been attending a Saturday night dance together for a number of years. We are all good friends. Recently one couple divorced and the lady continued to attend these dances as a "single."

For a while the group accepted her to help her over her adjustment period. The gentlemen in the crowd continued to dance with her as they always had, but this created a problem, for one of the wives was always left to sit out the dance while her husband danced with "Single."

Abby, don't you think "Single" should realize that she is creating a problem and should drop out of the group until she obtains a partner? How can we end the dilemma, but still be friends?

DEAR SITTING: Put yourself in "single's" place and be a little more charitable. The life of a single is lonely and difficult and those Saturday night dances are probably her only opportunity to socialize.

Ask your husbands if they can't come up with a single man who could be her partner on those Saturday nights. Singles need all the help they can get.

DEAR ABBY: I have a wonderful hairdresser with whom I have a standing appointment once a week. I am a busy woman and like to get in and out of the beauty parlor as quickly as possible. My problem is that my hairdresser is a chatty person, and he talks with his hands! He just about drives me crazy, wasting all that time gesturing. How can I tell him to WORK WITH HIS HANDS, NOT TALK? No names, please. I need him more than he needs me.

DEAR IN: It's time you did a little talking. With the VOICE, lady.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing out of concern for young teen-aged girls who find themselves burdened with unwanted pregnancies.

Please, please encourage mothers to provide birth control measures for their teen-aged daughters. Fear of pregnancy does not always prevent girls as young as 13 or 14 from having sexual experiences. Many girls do not stop to consider the risks when they are confronted by strong sexual desire.

At 17 I found myself hitchhiking to a hospital to have, fortunately a safe, legal abortion, about which I felt I could not tell my own parents. Since then I have been taking birth control measures and seeing a doctor regularly for venereal disease checks. No, I am not promiscuous—both V. D. and unwanted pregnancy can happen to the nicest people.

Now, at 19, I see similar heartbreaking, terrifying experiences happening around me. Please, remind girls that there are free clinics. And if they are lucky enough to have understanding parents, they should ask them for help. If this is printed, and I hope it is, sign me . . .

SADDER BUT WISER

DEAR SADDER: I'll print your letter, altho I will probably be accused of condoning pre-marital sex, which I am not! However, once that decision has already been made, the price some girls pay is so tragically out of proportion to the "crime." I believe an ounce of prevention is better than eight pounds of unwanted baby or a venereal disease.

Convention Delegates Named By Pilot Club

Delegates to the pilot International Convention, District VI from the local club were named Monday night.

Attending will be Mrs. Sue Howell, Mrs. Sue Smith and Mrs. Lenore Morton. The convention will be held at Wrightsville Beach April 13-14.

Mrs. Ruby Fields, local Pilot president, has been asked to serve as floor teller. The Greenville Club will be responsible for the table decorations for a meal during the convention.

It was announced that Mrs. Juanita McCarthy has been appointed district chairman of the Educational and International Relations for 1973-74.

Members of the Finance Committee were in charge of the dinner which was served in the recreation room of the new First Federal Savings and Loan Association. Mrs. McCarthy, vice chairman of the committee, coordinated the meal.

A discussion on the prices of foods some hints for saving followed the meal.

Letters of appreciation were read from the following:

Ole Traasdah, consular secretary of the Royal Norwegian Consulate General, for cancelled stamps. The club sent the stamps to help in the tuberculosis work in Norway; from Sadie Salter School thanking the club for being used in the work at school; and from "Operation Sunshine" for the check to help in their work.

It was announced that the Board of Directors voted to send a donation to REAL and give the club's support to the bill pertaining to drunken drivers.

Paul Barwick Paralyzed, Not 'Handicapped'

Fresh Daily ROLLS Diener's Bakery 815 Dickinson Ave.

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer
"The only handicap that should ever limit a person is the impairment of his mind," Paul Barwick said.
He speaks with authority. Barwick has been paralyzed from the waist down since he fell off parallel bars at school at age nine and broke his back.

Today a luncheon is being held in his honor and Gov. Holshouser is presenting him the North Carolina Handicapped Citizen of the Year award.
Barwick is public relations specialist for the Eastern Region Alcoholism Program of the N. C. Department of Mental Health. He and his wife, Ann, cover the 32 Eastern Counties researching and writing articles for the Jones Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center here, the Alcoholic Rehabilitation Unit at Cherry Hospital in Goldsboro, and the 11 Mental Health Clinics in this area. They live in LaGrange.

The award given Barwick is the first ever received by a state government employee. The annual N. C. Handicapped Citizen award was begun in 1952. Barwick gives credit to his parents, the Rev. and Mrs. Paul H. Barwick, for what he has become. The Mount Olive native said, "After I was injured and it became apparent my paralysis would probably be permanent, my parents never acted for a moment as if they thought there was anything wrong with me. I was expected to go to school and do well. My father let me have the car for dating."

"He did have some reservations about my decision to attend Mars Hill College. 'Son, the campus is so hilly,' he said, 'and it's so far away. Why don't you go to Campbell nearby?'"
"I told him my mind was made up to attend Mars Hill because of its fine English Department, which appealed to me because of my interest in writing. He never said another word. I went to Mars Hill on a Vocational Rehabilitation scholarship and borrowed money. I graduated with an Associate Arts degree in 1950 and entered the University of North Carolina School of Journalism the same year."

Wife Was His Nurse
Throughout Barwick's life, he has had to have 22 operations. While he was a student at Carolina, it was necessary for him to have plastic surgery on his hip. During his hospital stay at Duke Medical Center, he met the future Mrs. Barwick, then a student nurse at Duke.
"Ann broke some rules against fraternizing with a patient," he said, "but she assures me nearly getting kicked out of school was worth it."
"We've been married 19 years and we love each other very much."
"My wife ought to be getting this award. It would have been as impossible as my making the sun rise for me to have done it without her. Ann goes with me everywhere I go. I drive myself, because I like to and I have a hand-controlled car. But Ann must get me out of the car and into my wheelchair. She has to dress me in the morning and undress me at night. I know I must be the only man in the world who brags about his wife's pushing him around all the time."
The Barwicks have a foster home for the Baptist Children's Home Society. The four children they have now are brothers and sisters. Timmy, Dennis, and Keith Bergemann have lived with them for five years, and their sister, Tina joined them three years ago. Tina is 14, Timmy is 13, Dennis is 12, and today is Keith's ninth birthday.
Barwick took his present job last October, soon after he sold the PAB Publishing Company. For nearly 20 years, he had been editor and publisher of

Support Med School As Doctors' Day Observed

The Woman's Auxiliary to the Pitt County Medical Society has chosen Doctors' Day, today, as an opportunity to express its support for and confidence in the new Medical School at East Carolina University, according to Mrs. Jack Welch, chairman of the observance.

Doctors' Day, a project of the Woman's Auxiliary to the Southern Medical Association, is an annual observance to honor those unselfish physicians who minister to health and welfare. It has been so proclaimed by Gov. Holshouser this year. In Greenville, the primary method of marking this day for the past several years has been the giving by doctors' wives of some gift to serve a public need, Mrs. Welch said.

"This year the Auxiliary dedicates its Doctors' Day to North Carolina's pressing need to provide more educational facilities for the medical profession," Mrs. Welch said. "To offer the School at ECU its firm support and to reassure and encourage the one-year students currently enrolled in the program, the Auxiliary presented a copy of the textbook, Physical Diagnosis, to Dr. Wallace Wooles, Dean of the School of Medicine, as a permanent addition to the Medical School Library. For the students, the auxiliary placed in the School a bouquet of red carnations, adopted in 1949 as the symbol of Doctors' Day. Accepting the flowers and book with Dr. Wooles was Miss Marjorie Barnwell of Kinston, the only female medical student in ECU's first class currently nearing the end of its one-year program."

"Next year the students will go into their second year of training at other institutions in the state. The students feel that they will be equally qualified and in some respects better prepared to take their places among the second year students of the much larger university medical schools," Miss Barnwell said.

and we love each other very much."
"My wife ought to be getting this award. It would have been as impossible as my making the sun rise for me to have done it without her. Ann goes with me everywhere I go. I drive myself, because I like to and I have a hand-controlled car. But Ann must get me out of the car and into my wheelchair. She has to dress me in the morning and undress me at night. I know I must be the only man in the world who brags about his wife's pushing him around all the time."
The Barwicks have a foster home for the Baptist Children's Home Society. The four children they have now are brothers and sisters. Timmy, Dennis, and Keith Bergemann have lived with them for five years, and their sister, Tina joined them three years ago. # War Is Simply Too Expensive

The United States' longest, most frustrating and — with the exception of the War Between the States — most divisive war is over.

Virtually all of the American troops in South Vietnam have been withdrawn and the final U. S. prisoners of war held by the Communist have been returned to U. S. soil.

However one views the results of the years of fighting, it has to be a joyous day that our involvement has finally ended.

There are still dangers of further involvement in Southeast Asia. We are still bombing in Cambodia, a country which is threatened with takeover by the Communist. And no one really knows what Nixon would do if the North Vietnamese launched a full scale offensive against the south in the near future.

The odds seem to be at present, though, that we can truly consider this agonizing war at an end and hopefully turn over attention to other things.

These other things should be peace and tranquility and a better life for our people. Peace is needed after so many years of fighting and debating the war in Southeast Asia. It is, in fact, an absolute necessity if we are to get the dangers of inflation under control and provide a better life for our poor and elderly.

The plain fact is that fighting wars has become just too expensive even for the economy of the United States. The limited fighting in Southeast Asia strained our economy more than we like to admit. Fighting a war of the magnitude of World War II would, without doubt, break this nation if we tried to maintain the present pay rates for military personnel and carried on a development program for equipment on a corresponding scale. There are those who can tell you of earning $21 a day once a month as privates in the first drafts before World War II.

So with the huge cost of maintaining the military, an expansion of the armed forces comparable with that of World War II just does not again seem possible.

Perhaps we will see in future years that the greatest lesson to come out of Vietnam is that war has become too expensive for any modern nation to carry on. If we have learned this lesson, perhaps all the suffering, expense and divisiveness will have been worth it.

Expertise Lost Due Turnover

By BRYAN HAISLIP

RALEIGH — High turnover in legislative membership flushes experience down the drain, and slows the process of representative government.

"The presence of a corps of experienced legislators is essential for stability and continuity in the system," said Clyde Ball, legislative services officer.

Like any other job, lawmaking expertise come with practice Ball noted. Given the aptitude and ability, any Representative or Senator should be able to function more effectively for his constituents with every term served, he said.

An acceleration in turnover is a phenomenon observed in recent years by Ball and others who follow closely developments in the working of state legislatures. Factors that have brought it on include redistricting in response to one-man, one-vote judicial decisions, and the increasing demands of legislative office.

Finding ways to encourage tenure, through staff assistance and a realistic pay structure, is a challenge that faces North Carolina and states across the country, Ball said.

Rapid Turnover Recorded

Fully one-third of the current General Assembly are freshmen who never served before. Over the past decade, the make-up of the legislature has undergone virtually a complete turnover. Ninety per cent of the members of the 1963 session are no longer on the scene, removed by death, the call of other pursuits, or the voters.

A first session is like on-the-job training with a lot to learn about where to go and who to see to get things done, said Rep. Willis P. (Bill) Whichard of Durham. The lessons can be put to good use in the second term, which he is now serving.

"What a legislator learns is really an investment for the people back home. It's lost to them if he doesn't come back," said Whichard.

Candidates who aspire to a single term, for what it means in prestige and advantage to business or profession, contribute to a high turnover rate and dodge an obligation to voters who elect them, he suggested. "I told everybody when I ran that if I won, I'd be available to serve a minimum of three terms," he said.

Voters Make Changes

Infusion of new blood and fresh ideas is the obvious advantage of a pace of change in legislative ranks.

How fast it occurs can be trusted to the electorate, which gets a chance to pass judgment at the ballot box every two years.

BRYAN HAISLIP

The 60s decade made representation more volatile and responsive to population rather than geographic lines. Rural areas lost seats to urban centers as redistricting broke up "pocket boroughs" from which entrenched incumbents could look forward to safe return time after time.

A political consequence was to dethrone the "Old Guard," composed of a cadre of veterans and open the way for a larger role by newcomers. As their numbers swelled, the old rule that freshmen should be seen and not heard had to be rescinded.

Freshman status need not inhibit performance, said Rep. Thomas O. Gilmore Sr. of Guilford. He plunged in to introduce bills of major importance, and champion his ideas for legislation.

Tools For The Job

The tools and structure to deal with complex problems are needs by all legislators, freshmen and those with seniority, Gilmore insisted. "Capable legislators would be encouraged to serve longer if they felt they had access to the means to accomplish their objectives," he said.

The loss of experience when legislators drop out amounts to "a terrible waste for the state," said Rep. Norwood Bryan of Cumberland.

Rapport with people and familiarity with procedures accumulate with service, said Bryan, in his fourth term.

A maverick on the annual session concept, Bryan said he sees that as a hindrance rather than a help in promoting legislative continuity. "Many just won't be able to come up here every year," he said.

Economics is a basic factor in the lack of membership stability, Ball said. "I am concerned about those members in the 25-to-45 age bracket who drop out because those are their productive years. I am concerned about teachers, small self-

Counterattack Order Relayed

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Confronting new exposures in the poisonous Watergate scandal, the White House — using former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell as a secret intermediary — has ordered the Committee to Reelect the President (CRP) to open up a new counterattack.

At least six new legal and public affairs aids, possibly more, are being hired to give CRP — usually called Creep — added muscle to take over the main chore of what could be a decisive political battle between the administration and its legion of critics, including growing numbers of high-level Republican politicians, on the political espionage issue.

Thus, nothing has changed in the Nixon strategy in handling the Watergate scandal. Creep, financed by funds contributed to reelect Mr. Nixon, should have lost its reason for being last November. Mitchell quit as Creep's director immediately after the bugging and break-in at Democratic headquarters in the Watergate last June 17 and has had no formal political position since. But Creep and Mitchell are used by the White House to keep its hardened reaction to the scandal rigid and unbending.

The threat of convicted Watergate buggers James W. McCord, Jr., to implicate higher-ups in the scandal has generated appeals from some highly-placed Republicans that the White House make a clean breast of the whole sordid business, no matter who is involved. To the contrary, Creep's orders from the White House, relayed by Mitchell, are just the opposite: counterattack. "That doesn't mean Creep will counterattack the Senate's investigating committee" (headed by Democratic Sen. Sam Ervin, Jr., of North Carolina), an authoritative source told us. "It means Creep has been ordered to counterattack with its own facts."

This was precisely the weak line laid down by the White House at the Republican national convention last August, when the Democrats were unsuccessfully trying to convert Watergate and political espionage from an outrageous escapade into a shocking issue of the presidential campaign.

At one closed-door Miami Beach meeting, leading Nixon fundraisers and Republican politicians outside the administration begged Clark MacGregor, who succeeded Mitchell as Creep director, to "tell all" about Watergate.

Their rationale: Watergate could continue to drip "drops of acid" on the campaign, setting the stage for serious damage to the President's credibility in his second term.

Among those urging the "tell all" policy were big-time fund-raisers Max Fisher of Detroit and Thomas Pappas of Boston. They and others wanted to bring out all the facts, and let the White House take the political heat.

MacGregor, presiding over that meeting, agreed with everything said. But the White House insisted it was not involved. Without involvement, presidential lieutenants asserted, there could be no clean breast.

The fact that this same White House imposed silence of eight months ago is being dropped like a cloak over any possible involvement of White House aides in the new McCord-triggered crisis is clear from the order to Creep to recruit new legal and publicity aides for the impending battle.

Creep was supposed to have gone out of business April 1 — almost six months after the election it was set up to win. But presidential aides want the White House to publicly shoulder no part of the defense against the Ervin committee.

Nor does the White House want the Republican National Committee to play a defense role. Given the growing mood of anger against presidential aides — particularly chief of staff H. R. (Bob) Haldeman — by elected Republican politicians, the White House

Strength For Today

TROUBLE ACTING AS A BLESSING

In the New Testament the faithful are admonished not to regard adversity as a calamity. Jesus said, "Blessed are they which are persecuted. Blessed are ye when men shall revile you. . . In the world ye shall have tribulation, but be of good cheer. I have overcome the world."

How can this position be maintained? It can be maintained only because we believe that God bends everything to his loving purpose, that in Jesus Christ, who suffered and rose from the dead, we have the answer to life's most grievous situation. For those who belong to God and seek to know his will through Jesus Christ, adversity is changed into blessing, bitterness into knowledge, despair into hope, sorrow into peace.

To have God is to have everything. Everyone at one time or another passes through crises which try his spirit. And very few of us will avoid the taste of adversity. Armed with the Spirit of God a man can turn adversity into blessing.

WASHINGTON—Did you know that the price of meat has a direct bearing on the Watergate bugging scandal? I didn't until I saw Helmut Dragonfield at the supermarket the other day.

We were standing in the checkout line and Helmut said to me, "This Watergate case smells to high heaven. It really boils me that men in high office can lie through their teeth about matters that affect the very fabric of American democracy."

"Helmut," I reminded him, "you didn't seem very excited about the Watergate last November during the elections."

"That," said my friend, "was because you could still get a decent steak for $1.50."

Other Editors Say Toughness Pays

(Jacksonville Daily News)

The lesson of the past six months, driven home again and again, is that firmness and toughness pay off in dealing with Hanoi.

The North Vietnamese decision to talk realistically last october the revision of the draft pact after Hanoi had said it could not be revised, the solution of the prisoner of war hangup are examples.

But this is not a three-shot problem. If the record tells us anything it is that the North Vietnamese will test us again and again, probing weak points and learning just how far they can go in attaining their objectives.

In part, this is a difference of philosophy. To Americans, a signed agreement is the end of the matter. Things have been dragged. Asian Communist documents — whether Chinese Maoist or North Vietnamese — stress that agreements are merely techniques or stratagems for achieving their "just" objectives.

The agreement, then, is the beginning of a new struggle, not the finish of one.

A careful reading of the North Vietnamese reasons for holding up the freeing of POWs makes clear that their objectives were not primarily those advertised in the headlines.

What Hanoi was attempting was straightforward and simple. It wanted the United States to close its eyes to the inflow of men and material into Laos and South Vietnam, to the building of illegal airfields complete with antiaircraft missiles, to the repeated offensive drives of the North Vietnamese troops.

Secondly, and even more importantly, it wanted to force the United States to compel Saigon to accede to Hanoi's will in matters which require unanimity.

That is, Hanoi wants to be free to do what the Communists did in Laos and North Korea after agreements were reached—use the truce as a safe period of buildup for future attacks.

One most effective Communist technique is to make thousands of truce violation accusations, the more the better. The second step is to delay any inspections of their own violations until the evidence on the pot cannot be evaluated. The third step is to use whatever leverage they have—in this case the prisoners—to force public opinion in the United States to pressure the Nixon administration to bend to their will.

Inspections in Vietnam have been a farce. The inspectors have been stymied at every turn. The volume of Communist accusations has been so great their major violations of the pact have gone unchecked. Because of our humanitarian concern for the POWs our attention was distracted from the North Vietnamese aggressions.

Interest In Commodity Market

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

Editor's Note: This is the third and concluding column on commodity futures trading.

NEW YORK (AP) — If you are one of an estimated 500,000 people who trade or speculate in commodity futures, or one of the 2.5 million more who are forecast to join the market by 1980, you are or should be aware of the basic rules:

A good trader needs risk capital he can afford to lose, a plan of operation, and the discipline to follow the plan without emotion or vacillation.

If he has the capital, the plan, the qualities of temperament and the proper information from government reports, newspapers, brokers and observation, he might with luck and still another skill turn himself into a winner.

The other skill is the ability to translate all these elements into an informed estimate of what prices for such things as pork bellies and silver and wool and cotton will be anywhere from a month to a year in advance.

The rewards could be enormous. A well-known broker notes in an advertisement that an $800 commitment made last October in cotton for March delivery could have resulted in a profit — or loss — of $6,000 by mid-February.

This would have been impossible, of course, without the capital. All other considerations are academic in the absence of money, but an absence of money is the precise condition in which a trader finds himself by violating the other rules.

Commodities are very volatile markets. Since only 5 or 10 or 15 per cent of the total purchase price must be placed on the table, you have tremendous leverage. You can earn 1,000 per cent — or lose it, if you aren't careful.

It is very easy to lose in futures. In fact, most speculators lose far more often than they win, but they limit their losses by never bucking the trend. In contrast, when they have a winner they soar with the trend.

This is not a simple accomplishment, and potential traders often find they aren't equal to the psychological demands made. After three straight losses they may find themselves without the con-

Addis Ababa's Baths

By ANDEREW TORCHIA

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — One of the most expensive tickets in Addis Ababa buys you a bath. Romance is extra.

A short bugle blast from Emperor Haile Selassie's palace is a string of 144 red brick cubicles with plastic domes — the new Filwoha baths. Empress Taitu stopped to soak her feet at these hillside springs nearly 100 years ago and thus laid the foundations of Addis Ababa.

Ethiopians flock to the baths. Tourists grimy from eastern Africa's wild game parks shouldn't miss them. But a visitor looking for more exotic bathing pleasures than just getting clean may be disappointed.

The new Filwoha baths answer the need Finnish sauna and the Coed York steam-and-sex parlor mostly by ignoring the question.

The architecture can't compare with the classical pillars of the great English spa at Bath but the formula at Filwoha is the same — volcanic heat plus mineral water equals health. A sign proclaims the waters effective against stains, acne and wrinkles. Or as an attendant told one wrinkled, stained client, "If you believe in something, you'll be cured."

Five Ethiopian dollars about $2.50 buys a bar of English soap and three large towels. A guard in a military-style uniform checks your ticket, which looks more like a supermarket receipt than a ticket to adventure.

You get the brief attention of a bored female in a blue smock, who points you toward a two-room suite and goes back to reading the newspaper. A stony-faced, barefoot male attendant turns on the water and vanishes. Not a word has been spoken, and since it is noon and with it Ethiopians bathe at night, you are the only customer in the place.

You've paid your way into what looks like an oversized, six-sided American bathroom, including a fashionable low-profile toilet. The water filling the green-tile tub comes in two temperatures — hot and unbearable. An adjoining room contains a plastic reclining chair, table and a sexy paperback — in unreadable Amharic-language script.

This is first class at Filwoha, costing more than a movie and nearly as much as bacon and eggs at a luxury hotel. For 1.50 Ethiopian dollars — about 75

A Review Good Entertainment In Raucously Lyrical Play

The Hostage, current production of ECU's Drama and Speech Department playing at McGinnis Auditorium tonight and tomorrow, is an Irishman's uproarious and unsparing assessment of the Irish character. Like Sean O'Casey earlier in Juno and the Paycock, author Brendan Behan here presents the Irish as a dreaming, drinking, fighting and fooling people who can show endless compassion for others and still carry a grudge against them forever.

"Do you call it a musical?" members of the audience were asking on opening night Wednesday. Better to say just a raucously lyrical play about people who sing their feelings as naturally as they speak them. Or maybe it is the roistering, hard-living and early-dying Behan's evocation of one of his own boozey dreams where speech turns into music with sudden alcoholic logic. Either way it comes out an effective, entertaining evening in the theater, and ECU's production makes the most of its unique stage magic.

Behan takes as his subject the undying I.R.A. guerrilla struggle against the British. He shows the I.R.A. "Cause" as a tragic fantasy in the minds of men beaten by life. It makes a glorious theme for old men's talk over a bottle of stout—but in the meantime 18-year-olds who only asked a chance to live are going to their deaths.

The setting is a scruffy, disreputable Irish pub and rooming house (its claustrophobic aura well captured by designer Stephen Lavino). The owner is an aged Anglo-Irishman called "Monsewer" who lives in an Irish mist of dreams. Actor George Merrell's performance displays him as both charming and dizzy-brained. Stephen G. Roberts and Janice Vertucci make Pat and Meg, operators of the pub, wonderfully vigorous, both at brawling and loving.

An I.R.A. boy is to be hanged in Belfast jail the next morning. The plan of the local guerrillas is to take a British soldier hostage to force a last-minute reprieve. Monsewer's low den is the appointed hideout where an officer and a volunteer deliver the hostage. Martin Thompson and Mark Schwartz present the pair as a nicely contrasted study in military zeal.

The British soldier they've captured is young Leslie, an orphan who has never harmed a living soul. Now he is to be sacrificed lamb to the endless quarrel of Irish and British. Mick Godwin, who incidentally has the best accent of the entire cast, makes him a vivid figure of hope, confusion and finally bitter rage.

Waiting to hear if the reprieve will be granted, Leslie's main comfort is the little "skivvy" maid, Teresa, like him a gentle orphan. Played with delicacy and grace by Jennifer Applewhite, Teresa is a prime example of the paradox of Irish character. She has the same fierce Irish pride that runs through the others—like the symbolic Irish green that costume designer Carol Beule shows in so many of the characters' garb.

The other denizens of the place add their share of song and dance and banter during the long night hours. There is Old Ropen (Susan Lambeth), a delightfully sprightly crone who arises from behind the sofa whenever anyone needs a bit of piano accompaniment. There are also Mr. Muleady (Chris Jones), an upright soul except for a slight tendency to embezzle church funds, and his lady friend Miss Gilchrist (Judy Townsend) who calls herself with tipsy ambiguity "a sociable worker". Jones and Townsend make them endearing both as they pray together and stay together.

Adding to the sozzled merriment are the prostitute Colette (Vickie Batchelor) and her latest "trick," a sailor (Tony Sloan), who portray a really fervent pursuit of carnal joy.

Completing the crew are two homosexual lads, calling themselves Princess Grace (Rick Price) and Rio Rita (Gary Franklin Wood), who soon became audience favorites on opening night. Together with Mr. Muleady, they did a tango a trois to the refrain of "We're here because we're queer because we're here" that brought down the house. Director John Cannon and local coach Helen Steer are to be commended for the manic gaiety of the nightlong goings-on.

Unfortunately the fun ends abruptly with the arrival of the police, who have somehow got wind of Leslie's presence. The lights go out. Guns blaze in the darkness. When they are through, Leslie lies dead—accidentally, mysteriously, uselessly, pathetically dead. The Irish stand round him amazed that he should spoil their grand fun this way. Shamefacedly they turn away from the sight of the latest victim of man's lust for military thrills.

Or is he a victim? Is he perhaps, instead, the triumphant spirit of men's refusal to bow down to others' stupid cruelty? Before the audience's eyes Leslie rises to his feet and sings the old World War I song that was a defiance of death: "The bells of hell go ting-a-ling-a, for you but not for me." The play ends as he walks offstage whistling jauntily.

Maybe it's a dream, but it's a beautiful one as Behan wrote it. It's worth being there to see when the curtain goes up at 8:15 tonight and Saturday.

Tax Office To Be Open

Hilton E. Boyd, supervisor of the Greenville Internal Revenue Service office, said his office will be open Saturday on March 31, April 7, and April 14, from 8 a.m. until 12 noon, to provide taxpayer assistance to taxpayers filing 1972 income tax returns.

These extra assistance hours are being provided to accommodate those taxpayers who have been unable to visit an IRS office during the normal five day work week. Boyd stated that over 4,000 taxpayers have been assisted by personnel of his office since January 1.

Taxpayers needing assistance should bring their Forms W-2, along with other pertinent receipts and records necessary to complete the returns. Information should be organized and concise.

The Greenville office is located at 211 Evans Street.

Unlocked Safe Is Battered Open

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — A St. Paul firm reported to police that its safe, which had a large sign on it saying "safe not locked," was battered open and ruined by a burglar who took a small amount of money.

The unlocked safe also had the lock's combination plainly printed on the door. A spokesman for the firm said the safe was mainly used to protect records from possible fire.

of facts after I have entered the market? Will I have the strength to remain in the market, although at a loss, when I am certain my calculations are correct?

"At another time," he continues, "will you have the courage to quickly liquidate your losing position to minimize the loss and yet know that in either case you are being dictated not by fear but by cold factual interpretation?"

Conversely, "Do you have the temperament to allow your profits to pyramid when you are right, irrespective of their impressive sums, and yet, in some other situation, have the prudence to take your profit . . . ? Do you learn from mistakes or do you repeat them? Are you one who can, following a heavy loss, approach the next morning's market refreshed in mind and spirit?" Did you answer all questions affirmatively? You did? Sir, you are either unaware of your limitations or destined to make a grand fortune in speculation. Before you plunge, think about it.

Why are they hiding Donald Segretti? . . . John Mitchell knows more than he's telling. . . Maurice Stans, when are you going to tell us the truth? . . . L. I was terribly embarrassed when it came my turn to pay for my basket of food, and I apologized to the cashier for Helmut's behavior.

His proposal is a pay level of $10,000 a year — high enough to compensate for the time served, yet low enough to require the pursuit of an occupation. Without an adjustment on such a scale, he said, legislative service may limit itself to one-term occupants or the wealthy.

fears a transfer of the defender's role from Creep to the National Committee. In that case, backstage White House control might be lost.

Backstage control is total as of today, a fact that has led to intense hatred within middle-level staff ranks of Creep — particularly its finance section — for Haldeman. These middle-level operatives are convinced that finance chairman Maurice Stans has been made a Watergate scapegoat, slavishly obeying White House orders of disbursement of campaign funds without being told what the money was really being used for. According to these operatives, the White House wanted just such a scapegoat.

Now that McCord has promised to finger higher-ups, it was hoped both at middle levels of Creep and within political ranks of the Republican party that the masquerade would be ended. But that is not to be. With Creep now hiring lawyers and p.r. men, the White House has decided to brazen it out — a decision that Mr. Nixon may come to deeply regret.

Tennis Court Rules Adopted

Boyd Lee, Director of Greenville's Recreation Department, has announced regulations that will govern reservations of tennis courts at Elm Street tennis courts.

The reservation system, directed as a policy matter by the Greenville Recreation Commission at its April meeting, is designed to give all tennis players an equal opportunity to use the courts.

This system goes into effect on Sunday. Lee has asked that persons with any questions on the reservation system contact the Recreation Department.

The complete list of regulations for the reservation system are:

1. The Elm Street tennis courts can be reserved for one and a half hours by any citizen of Greenville by phoning 758-4635 between the hours of 8:30 and 5:00 Monday through Friday. No reservations can be made for the day of the call. Courts can be reserved for four days ahead. The reservation list will be posted each morning by 9:00 a.m. The courts are reserved in one and a half hour time slots, beginning at 9:00 a.m.

2. Either singles or doubles can be played on the reserved court. In making a reservation all names and addresses must be given.

3. No consecutive reservations will be allowed by members of the singles or doubles match. If a court or courts are not reserved, then it is available for free play until the next reserved time.

4. The courts are not available for reservations when Recreation Department has scheduled tennis lessons or matches.

5. If a reserved court is not taken within 10 minutes of the reserved time, the court is available for use by anyone until the next reservation.

6. The Recreation Department will supervise the court reservation system. If you need assistance please contact the Elm Street Gym office or supervisor.

hire the handicapped and working for the removal of architectural barriers, which keep the handicapped out of many buildings.

"I travel from 20 to 30 thousand miles a year, around North Carolina and the Southeastern United States," he said. "Yet, there are very few places I go that I can even get into a bathroom. Not long ago I went into Ballentine's Cafeteria here and realized I couldn't get out. My wheelchair just wouldn't go through the exit. I called up Red Ballentine and said, 'Hey, what are you trying to do to me, keep me prisoner?' Red already has changed all of his cafeteria exits."

Another thing he's promoting is something he's just found out about himself. A handicapped person can get an N. C. license plate with the prefix, HD—Handicapped Driver — for his car, which will entitle him to park in any legally designated parking place for any length of time. "Only 268 have been bought this year," he said, "and with all the handicapped people there are, it's bound to be that most people don't know about this service. It ought to be publicized," Barwick said.

Denton . . .

Purcell of Louisville, Ky., was shot down nine days after Denton.)

When I consistently refused to write, they moved me back to the Hilton on April 20 with the express purpose of humiliating me by forcing me to write a confession.

The torture began with no food and no drink for three days and three nights while sitting on top of one stool which had been placed atop another, with my hands tightly cuffed behind me. Then they put my arms in stocks in such a way that I could neither stand nor kneel for several hours.

That night they let me get some sleep and gave me a little water and some cookies. But they said I'd be tortured in the morning. I told my dear friend Jim Stockdale (Navy Capt. James B. Stockdale), who was a few cells away, that I intended to die rather than make a confession and gave him a message for my wife Jane.

The message contained some personal things, including urging her to remarry and assuring her I loved even the man who married her.

The next day they applied the standard "rope trick" with the addition of rolling a nine-foot iron bar up and down my shins with two men standing on it. They did this until I was unconscious.

Just before losing consciousness, I weakened and gave the signal that I would write something but they continued the torture, apparently concerned that I might not write a "credible" confession unless they took me to the limit.

When I came to it was dark and they said I must agree not only to write a confession but to go to a press conference or they would start all over again. My will was gone. I agreed but was unable to write for a few days. I wrote and taped what I hoped was not a credible confession.

Like many others, I would have died in front of a firing squad rather than write a confession, but they gave me no such choice.

Nixon Voices Pride In Vietnam Achievements

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

Speaking to the nation on the very day the United States ended its direct military role in Vietnam, President Nixon pointed with pride to the fulfillment of his major objectives. But he said there is growing evidence Hanoi is not living up to the cease-fire agreement.

The President said the goal he had set for himself upon entering the White House in 1969—winning "an honorable peace"—had been met.

"For the first time in 12 years, no American military forces are stationed in Vietnam," he said.

And, "All of our American POWs are now on their way home."

But while he was accentuating the positive on the day the troops came home, he also recited the negative: Washington has amassed growing evidence that North Vietnam is not living up to the Jan. 27 Paris cease-fire agreement.

Once again, Nixon leveled a warning at the Communists.

He said the United States would insist that Hanoi comply with the Paris terms and that the leaders of North Vietnam should have no doubt there will be consequences if they do not comply.

However, Nixon did not specify what these consequences could be. And the Communists have heard the same kind of warning before, with no apparent sign that the infiltration has slowed down.

Before Nixon went on the air, the last U.S. combat troops had pulled out of Vietnam after more than a decade of fighting which cost nearly 46,000 American lives; the last of almost 600 U.S. prisoners had been freed by North Vietnam.

He congratulated "the overwhelming majority of Americans" for eschewing "peace at any price" and for standing firm "for doing what was right."

Looking ahead, Nixon cautioned against cuts in the defense budget, saying that a unilateral reduction of U.S. forces in Europe would destroy any chance for successful negotiations with the Soviet Union later this year on further nuclear-arms limitations and a mutual reduction in troops.

"There is one unbreakable rule of international diplomacy," the President said. "You can't get something in a negotiation unless you have something to give. If we cut our defense before negotiations begin, any incentive for other nations to cut theirs will be completely removed.

"If the United States reduces its defenses and others do not, it increases the danger of war," he added.

Clearly, the President was trying to rally the public to support him in a fight with congressional budget cutters and those who would try to economize by bringing major military contingents in Europe home right away.

There was no mention in the President's speech of the continued U.S. bombing raids over Cambodia.

Challenge Use Of Race In Desegregation

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP)—

Forty-eight parents and pupils, including some blacks, have challenged the use of race in desegregation of Charlotte and Mecklenburg County schools as a violation of their constitutional rights.

They filed suit in U. S. District Court Thursday to halt assignment on the basis of race.

Each parent contended his children were excluded from schools closer to home, and assigned to distant schools, because of race and in violation of the Constitution.

However, civil rights lawyer Julius Chambers, who represented black parents in lawsuits which resulted in desegregation of the combined Charlotte and Mecklenburg County school system three years ago, said the U.S. Supreme Court has ruled it is proper to use race in making school assignments.

... to see the Truth

"Heather here in Scotland is so common it grows everywhere. Why do you wish to study it?" I asked a botanist.

He then suggested taking a single flower from the cluster and looking at it through his microscope.

I was amazed at the delicate shading and breathtaking design of an individual bloom. I almost wished he hadn't shown it to me. I trample on thousands of them every day.

The beauty and blessings of life are enhanced by observing God's creation through the lens of Truth.

Consider the Church as a spiritual microscope. It helps you see the worth of single souls. It encourages you to call no man common or trample his capacities under the foot of indifference. It helps you discover and appreciate all the wonders of God's marvelous creation.

Majority Would Like Thaw In Cuban Relations

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N. C., March 28—In the aftermath of the administration's successful efforts last year to improve relations with Communist China and Russia, a large majority of Americans today would like to see President Nixon send his foreign policy adviser, Henry Kissinger, to Cuba to try to improve our relations with that country.

If Kissinger were to go to Cuba for this purpose, he would have a strong bargaining point for renewing relations in light of a survey which shows that millions of Americans would like to visit Cuba. Tourism would likely give the flagging Cuban economy a much-needed boost.

The latest survey shows that 31 per cent of U. S. citizens would like to visit Cuba if travel restrictions with that country were lifted. This percentage can be projected to approximately 42 million individuals.

The proportion who would like to visit Cuba is highest among key tourist groups—the young and upper-income people.

Favor Thaw in Relations Although Many Anti-Castro

Seven in ten Americans (71 per cent) favor Kissinger going to Havana to help improve relations with this island country. Support for a thaw of U. S.-Cuba relations with this island country. Support for a thaw of U. S.

Seven in ten Americans (71 per cent) favor Kissinger going to Havana to help relations with this island country. Support for a thaw of U. S.-Cuba relations exists even though the public is not favorably disposed toward Cuba's chief of state, Premier Fidel Castro.

Shortly after the survey was taken (in mid-February), the first serious, friendly diplomatic dialogue between the U. S. and Cuba occurred when the two nations signed a mutual anti-hijacking pact.

Change In Public's Views On Relations?

The current widespread interest among the American people in improving relations—and the interest on the part of many in visiting Cuba—would seem to indicate a change in the public's thinking regarding foreign policy alternatives in dealing with Cuba. Only 10 years ago, as many as 20 per cent of the public favored an armed invasion of the island as a means of overthrowing Castro.

Public Opinion Since Break-Off in Relations

The U. S. and Cuba broke off diplomatic relations in 1961. And in February 1962, President Kennedy ordered an embargo of all American goods going to Cuba, an action that earlier had been approved by a majority (63 per cent) of the public.

Premier Castro has not been highly regarded by Americans during the last decade and a half. Only seven months after Castro's rebel army forced dictator Fulgencio Batista into exile in Portugal in January 1959, more than twice as many Americans held unfavorable as held favorable opinions of Castro.

American disenchantment with Castro grew and a survey the following year showed 8 in 10 Americans with unfavorable views of the Cuban leader. The survey was conducted at a time of the nationalization of Cuba's industry, of which $1 billion worth was U. S.-owned.

Just last fall, in October, nearly 9 out of 10 Americans gave Castro an unfavorable rating.

This was the question asked in the current survey: "As you know, President Nixon sent Henry Kissinger to China and to Russia to try to improve our relations with those countries. Would you favor or oppose President Nixon sending Henry Kissinger to Cuba to try to improve our relations with that country?"

Heavy support for sending Kissinger to Cuba is found in all major groups, but is greatest among the college-educated, persons in business and the professions and among Republicans. Those persons interviewed who express an interest in visiting Cuba are far more likely to favor improving relations than are those who indicate no interest in going to that country.

Following are the national results and by key groups: SEND KISSINGER TO CUBA?

	Favor	Oppose	No Opinion
NATIONAL	71%	19%	10%
College background	75	18	7

Judge Dragoons New Jury Panel

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP)—Sheriff's deputies dragooned 100 prospective jurors off the streets of Chattanooga late Thursday after members of the original jury panel in an extortion case expressed fear for their safety and were dismissed.

Criminal Court Judge Tillman Grant took the unusual action after jury selection had begun in the case of three blacks accused of attempting to extort money from a supermarket by picketing the business.

Three women on the original jury panel told the judge that blacks in the courtroom were asking prospective jurors for their names and addresses. The women said they were frightened.

Grant angrily ordered the courtroom cleared and declared. "The court is not going to be threatened by black panthers or anyone."

He dismissed the original jurors and ordered sheriff's deputies to go into the streets to pick up 100 citizens to form a new jury panel. He acted under a seldom-used law giving judges the authority to dragoon jurors from the streets in an emergency.

Several hours later, an all-male, all-white jury comprised entirely of those taken off the streets was seated and then sequestered for the night.

The defendants, Ralph Moore, 32; Madonna Storey, 19; and Gerald Edwards, 20, are accused of demanding donations from the supermarket management to pay for a free breakfast program for underprivileged black youngsters, a sickle cell anemia fund and other programs.

When the supermarket manager refused to accede to their demands, police say, they set up a picket line at the store.

CBS Plans No Complaints New Shows By Vegetarian

The fifth new offering will be "Hawkins," a 90 minute series starring Jimmy Stewart.

STUDY AIRCRAFT NOISE

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI)—A new study of the control of noise created by aircraft by the California Aviation Safety Council will focus on noise levels near airports, particularly the effect of noise on people who live nearby.

By GUY COATES Associated Press Writer NEW ORLEANS (AP)—

"I'm glad meat's high," says Lynne Morvant, a former stockbroker turned health food restaurant owner. "It's a vegetarian's market now."

She suggests a soyburger instead—for health's sake and for price.

Her French Quarter restaurant, "Jerusalem Gardens," offers a 50 cent special meatless meal.

"Meat's dangerous, anyway," she said. "Meat is not easy to digest, has uric acid and is shot full of harmful hormones and antibiotics."

There are plenty of healthy, high-protein meat substitutes for the beleaguered housewife who wants to join a nationwide meat boycott, Miss Morvant said. With the substitutes, the old food budget would get a new look, she added.

"Money could be tucked away at home instead of some grocery store cash register," she said.

Soyburgers for example. "Just get some soy flour at a health food store, mix it with water, onions and any seasoning you like, make patties and fry them," she explained.

What about an avid hamburger eater? Would he like soyburgers?

"Well, they would taste different, but good. And after a couple of them, they'd taste better," she said.

"We make meals here exciting and good. Vegetarians enjoy meals so much as any fat gourmet, and are much better off—both in the pocketbook and healthwise."

As for the pocketbook, soybean flour goes for 50 cents a pound. "And, I don't have to tell you what a pound of hamburger costs," she added.

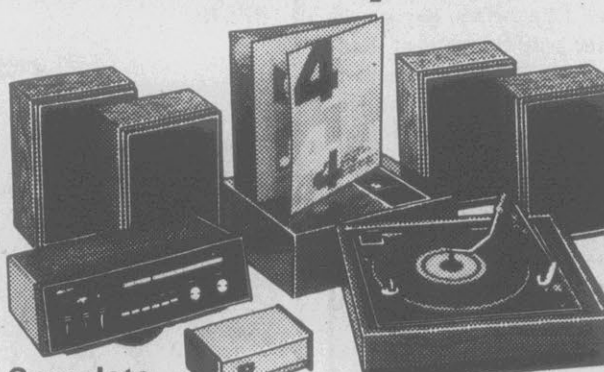

How about health? "That's the whole thing," said the 31-year-old businesswoman. "I mean, I was really sick a couple of years ago, gulping tons of coffee, booze, eating hamburgers all the time, and getting sicker. I feel great now."

Judge Orenic scheduled a preliminary hearing April 25. Bolingbrook is a southwestern suburb of Chicago. Oak Park is a western suburb.

Silver Polish Is Being Recalled

WASHINGTON (AP)—The government has recalled bottles of a silver polish that a federal agency says contains a substance so poisonous that if ingested, first aid is "virtually precluded."

The Food and Drug Administration recall announced Thursday, is for 2,000 bottles of polish containing cyanide salts, which the agency declared a hazardous substance last spring.

The manufacturer, H. B. Laboratories, Inc., Madison, Conn., estimated that 500 bottles containing 2.57 per cent soluble cyanide salts remain in trade channels.

The bottles of AG 25 pure Silver Plate-Polishing Solution were distributed between Jan. 1, 1972, and Feb. 9, 1973, to retail stores in New England; Buffalo, N.Y.; Baltimore; and Coconut Grove, Fla., the FDA said.

Rap Brown Six IRA Leaders Found Guilty Face Weapons Trial

NEW YORK (AP)—One-time black militant leader H. Rap Brown and three codefendants have been convicted of holding up a West Side Manhattan bar and assaulting a policeman.

A State Supreme Court jury, returning the verdict Thursday, said it was "hopelessly deadlocked" on other charges that the robbers attempted to murder police in an ensuing shootout.

Judge Arnold G. Fraiman then dismissed the panel of 11 men and one woman — including three blacks — which had deliberated over the case for 19 hours since midday Tuesday.

Brown's attorney, William M. Kunstler, immediately denounced the verdict as "a miscarriage of justice" and said it would be appealed. The prosecutor, Asst. Dist. Atty. Jack T. Litman, called it "a fair and very honest verdict."

Chicago Gets Western Nod, But Wild Scramble Seen In The East

By KEN RAPPOPORT
Associated Press Sports Writer

It's been so long since the Chicago White Sox won a pennant that they'd probably settle for a half-pennant this year. That's probably what they'll get, too.

Sluggish Richie ("Call me Dick") Allen is happy, pitcher Wilbur Wood is hearty and the Oakland A's are not as strong as you might think.

That adds up to a West title for the White Sox in the American League, their first championships of any kind since 1959.

"This is the strongest offensive team in White Sox history," says Manager Chuck Tanner. Only those who saw the 1919 edition with Shoeless Joe Jackson might dispute the statement, but the White Sox do have power to burn for the 1973 baseball season.

Allen, the AL's MVP last year with 37 home runs, 113 runs batted and a .308 batting average, signed a three-year contract in the fancy $675,000 neighborhood this year and showed his gratitude by reporting to spring training camp on time. You knew he was really grateful, because he hadn't done that since his rookie season with the Philadelphia Phillies.

Joining the free-swinging first baseman in the lineup this year will be Bill Melton, who's coming back from injury, and Ken Henderson obtained in a trade with the San Francisco Giants. To obtain the slugging Henderson, the White Sox gave up pitcher Tom Bradley in a deal some think may have been lopsided in the Giants' favor. But Tanner doesn't think so. He's planning to get more work out of two 20-game winners, Wilbur Wood and Stan Bahnsen.

The A's are the defending World Champions, but may have dealt themselves out of another West championship with a puzzling, off-season trade that sent leading home run hitter Mike Epstein to Texas for relief pitcher Horacio Pina. Epstein had a personality clash with Manager Dick Williams last year, but the trade made the A's look ridiculous in some quarters.

Although obtained catcher Ray Fosse from Cleveland in a later deal, the A's still lack the proper long-ball clout to be a pennant-winner. Reggie Jackson, now the only palpable home run threat in the lineup, will be troubled by the absence of Epstein. With no big bouncer hitting behind the lefthanded slugger, the opposition can more easily pitch around him.

The A's still have some of the best pitching in the American League with the likes of Jim "Catfish" Hunter, Vida Blue, John "Blue Moon" Odum and Ken Holtzman and a brilliant relief corps headed by Rollie Fingers. That's what will make the West interesting to the end.

While the West shapes up as a likely two-team fight, the East is every man for himself. No one in particular has an apparent lock on the crown and it could be an instant replay of last year when four teams went down to the bitter end before Detroit pulled it out.

The Baltimore Orioles might be given a slight edge because of their potential, with the New York Yankees, Boston Red Sox and Tigers involved in the mad scramble.

The Orioles' perennial pennant-winners fell apart last season with every regular having sub-par seasons. It shouldn't happen again this season and besides the Orioles have secured a power hitter to drive in runs for their tough pitching staff-catcher Earl Williams.

Southern Nash Nips Jaguars

FARMVILLE—Southern Nash High School gained a 4-1 victory over Farmville Central's Jaguars here yesterday.

The Firebirds pushed over two runs in the first then added two more in the third for their total before finally allowing a Farmville Central run in the fourth inning.

Terry Perkinson hurled the Southern Nash win, striking out 10, walking one and scattering three hits.

The Firebirds pushed over two runs in the first to gain all they needed. Kirk Bass led off with a single and then stole second. Steve Hicks moved him around with a single, but he was thrown out trying to stretch it. Glenn Wood then singled, and moved to second on a stolen base. An error on the play sent him on to third, and Perkinson singled him in from there.

In the third, two more Southern Nash runs came across. Bass opened it again with a hit, and Robert Bissett moved him up, reaching on a fielder's choice. Claudiu Elmore then tripled to drive in both runners and give the Firebirds a 4-0 lead.

The lone Farmville run came in the fourth. Bobby Wooten reached on a fielder's choice, and Barry Johnson brought him home with a triple. Southern cut the rally off there, however, and also stopped a rally short in the fifth.

Bass' two hits led the Southern batting, while Johnson's triple was the big blow for the Jaguars.

Farmville Central plays host to North Lenoir today.

Lee Elder Grabs First Round Lead At GGO, Says No Pressure

By BOB GREEN
Associated Press Golf Writer
GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — "This week", Lee Elder promised with a big smile, "It'll be a little different from last week".

Elder, now down to this one last chance to win his way into the Masters, had just fashioned a sparkling seven-under-par 64 but admitted it could have been better for the first round lead Thursday in the $210,000 Greater Greensboro, Open golf tournament.

And the personable guy from Washington, D.C., seeking to become the first black player to compete in the famed tournament at Augusta, Ga., next week found himself in a familiar position.

He's opened with a 65 for first round lead in the New Orleans Open last week. He clung to a share of the top spot in the second round, then faded in the last 36 holes as his chances for a Masters' berth appeared to have vanished.

He needs to win to make it and few thought he could sustain the pressure to challenge two weeks in a row.

It was obvious the pressure didn't bother him as he reeled off seven birdies and no bogeys. In fact he even complained, "I got a little too relaxed" after hitting a bad tee shot that cost him a chance at a birdie on the final hole.

Elder, 38, held only a one-stroke lead over veterans Doug Sanders, Mason Rudolph and Rod Funseth, tied at 65 in the exceptionally low scoring of the first round.

Sam Snead, a 60-year-old marvel who won the first of his eight Greensboro Open titles back in 1938, was one of six tied at 66, five under par on the 7,021-yard Sedgefield County Club course. Also at that figure were Ed Sneed (no relation to Sam), Bobby Nichols, Bert Yancey, Butch Baird and New Zealander John Lister.

"I'd just like to slip up on these guys blind side just one more time" said Snead, who scored the last of his record 83 official tour victories in this tournament in 1965.

Billy Casper was in a large group at 67, Arnold Palmer had a 69 and Lee Trevino, winner of two of his last three starts, was well back in the pack at 71.

Jack Nicklaus and Australian Bruce Crampton, each a two-time winner this season, are skipping this last tournament before the prestige-laden Masters.

Elder missed four times on birdie attempts of eight feet or less and failed on two others of about 12-15 feet. Asked if he could have shot 59, he smiled broadly.

"Maybe, maybe so. But anytime you've shot 64 you've got to be satisfied with it."

It was room for improvement.

"I might change drivers tomorrow, in fact I'm almost certain I will" he said.

Pirates Hosting VMI On Saturday

East Carolina's red hot Pirates will be out to extend a six game winning streak Saturday when they host VMI in a doubleheader at Harrington Field. The first game will get under way at 1:30 p.m.

The Pirates carry a 7-1 overall record into the game along with a 2-0 mark in Southern Conference play. VMI is now 1-1 on the season and Saturday's doubleheader will be the Keydets conference opener.

In five of the last six wins the Pirates have held their opponents scoreless and had a string of 49 consecutive scoreless innings broken when Dartmouth scored in the seventh inning of the final game of a two-game series.

Still, the Pirates pitching staff owns a composite earned run average of 1.41. Junior lefthander Russ Smith is tops among the pitching staff. The Greenville native has yet to allow a run in 12 innings.

Junior righthander Tommy Toms has pitched 28 and 1-3 innings and allowed only two earned runs for an ERA of 0.64.

He has a record of 3-0 and has struck out 25 while walking only two.

Both Dave LaRussa and Bill Godwin also have low earned run averages with LaRussa compiling an ERA of 1.29 in 14 innings while Godwin has a mark of 1.54 in 11 and 2-3 innings.

Defense has also been a key to the Pirates' success this spring. The infield has made only five errors on the year and the team as a whole has made only six errors in 302 chances. The fielding average for the season now stands at .980.

Against VMI, Coach Jim Mallory will probably go with righthander Godwin in the first game and come back with lefthander LaRussa in the second game. Smith and Glenn Forbes will be used in relief for both games.

Toms, who is considered the ace of pitching staff will pitch Monday against the defending Southern Conference Champion Richmond Spiders. The Pirates host the Spiders on Monday at Harrington Field. Game time for that game is 3 p.m.

Ticket Orders For Tournament

People in Greenville wishing to order NCAA Tournament tickets from Greensboro can deposit their mail orders any time after 6:30 p.m. Saturday and still receive a Sunday, April 1 postmark according to the post office here.

The Postal Service told The Daily Reflector that the final mailing on Saturday is at 6:30 p.m. and all mail received at that time is postmarked then. No further mail is then post-marked until Sunday morning.

The first shipment of mail out on Sunday is at 5:30 p.m., going to Rocky Mount for processing to all other points. The first mail from there to Greensboro is at around 7 p.m. Sunday.

Mail with special delivery instructions will go no faster to Greensboro, the Postal Service said, but once in Greensboro, will receive priority treatment. "It'll be handled right away, where the regular mail will probably take several more hours," the Postal Service said.

Rules for ticket requests, which will fill some 8,000 seats by mail order only, are: 1) postmarked no earlier than April 1; 2) season books only, at $20 each; 3) no more than four books per order; 4) each order must be accompanied by $1.50 for handling and return registered mail of the tickets; 5) only certified checks, money orders or personal checks accepted, and should be made to NCAA Finals.

Orders should be sent to NCAA Finals, Greensboro Coliseum, 1921 W. Lee St., Greensboro, N. C. Mailing of tickets will begin June 1.

Babe Ruth Registers

Buc Golfers In Three-Way Win

WILMINGTON—East Carolina University's golf team continued to roll along, downing the University of North Carolina-Wilmington and East Stroudsburg yesterday.

The Pirates' top five golfers fired a score of 361 combined strokes to beat Wilmington by 18 strokes. The Seahawks finished second with 379, while East Stroudsburg had 416.

Harry Helmer led all scorers, pacing the Pirates with a three-under par 69.

Other East Carolina scores were Ed Pinnix, 71; Bebo Batts, 73; Jim Ward, 73; and Jim Brown, 75. Carl Bell had a 76, but his score was not counted in the match.

Wilmington was led by Billy Petterson with a 70, while Jerry Clapp had 74, Austin Overby had 77, Charlie Roberts, 79, and Dave Smith, 79.

East Stroudsburg scores included Keith Wilson, 75; Bruce Exley, 80; Rich Jumper, 86; Charlie Bowen, 87; and Sam Wheestone, 88.

The Bucs now have an 8-0 record. Their next outing will be next weekend in the Furman Golf Tournament in Greenville, S. C.

Chicago . . .

The Yankees probably are the most improved team in the east, with the acquisition of outfielder Felipe Alou and third baseman Graig Nettles. With Bobby Murcer coming off his finest slugging year, New York has its most powerful offensive unit since the Mantle-Maris days.

The Red Sox, who took the Tigers down to the final series of the year before wilting in 1972, have a veteran team that might be stronger with the acquisition of Orlando Cepeda. The righthanded slugger will be the designated pinch-hitter in cozy Fenway Park.

With their hitting, good defense and a pitching staff headed by Marty Pattin, the Red Sox figure to finish ahead of the Tigers. Detroit's pitching is suspect, despite the presence of 22-game winner Mickey Lolich. The Tigers, also, appear to have too many players who have seen their better days.

The Cleveland Indians and Milwaukee Brewers figure to hold up the East. Gaylord Perry, a 24-game winner, is one of the few bright spots in the Cleveland picture. But there's some suspicion that the righthander can repeat another year like that at the age of 35.

The Indians gave up too much in trades to be called a contender and might have a tough time, even, keeping ahead of Milwaukee. The Brewers, also, were guilty of trading away too much for too little. They obtained infielder Don Money from the Philadelphia Phillies but at a price that puzzled some savvy baseball folks. Jim Lonborg, the Brewers' top man, was traded away with three other major league pitchers.

In the West, Chicago and Oakland appear to be all alone unless neither plays up to potential. In that case, the California Angels could make it hot in that division.

The Angels, lacking a long-ball offense last year, brought some power to town with the addition of Frank Robinson. Also coming to the Angels in the deal with the Los Angeles Dodgers was pitcher Bill Singer. He'll join a sparkling staff headed by Nolan Ryan, Clyde Wright and Rudy May.

The Kansas City Royals, Minnesota Twins and Texas Rangers will probably finish in that order to complete the West standings this season.

The Royals have some solid hitting with John Mayberry, Amos Otis, Lou Piniella and Cookie Rojas, but their pitching staff is weak; the Twins' pitching isn't bad with Bert Blyleven the ace, but the rest of the team has too many holes to consider them seriously and the Rangers will finish last with possibly the worst team in baseball.

Clemente Memorial

BRADENTON, Fla. (AP) — The Pittsburgh Pirates will pay tribute to the late Roberto Clemente this season by wearing a black-bordered shoulder patch emblazoned with the star outfielder's uniform number "21," the ball club announced today.

Pirate President Daniel M. Galbreath said the three-inch memorial emblem will be worn on the left sleeve of both home and road uniforms throughout the 1973 season.

"We have already announced that Roberto's uniform number will be retired on opening day," Galbreath said. "But by wearing on the sleeve the number 21 encircled in black, each player will, in effect, be perpetuating the number and memory of Roberto."

Galbreath said the emblem will replace a black ribbon being worn by players in spring training.

Clemente, just elected to the baseball Hall of Fame after it waived the traditional waiting period, was killed Dec. 31 on a mercy flight aiding disaster victims in the Nicaraguan earthquake last Christmas.

BEATING THE BASS

AMSTERDAM, Mo. (AP) — The early spring bass loves plastic worms. One of the popular bass fishing lures on the market is the slinky worm rig. It comes in numerous colors and scents. Worm rigs should be fished in a slow troll, often along the bottom in shallow water, according to research by Bass Buster Lures. The rod should be flicked often to create the action suggesting that the plastic worm is alive.

Cougars Open Playoff Bid Against New York

GREENSBORO, N. C. (AP)—The Carolina Cougars, American Basketball Association East Division leaders for the entire season, meet the New York Nets in the first game of their playoff series tonight.

Larry Brown, rounding out his first year as the Cougar coach, had this pregame observation: "We're ready. This is what we've been waiting for." Brown added, "It's important that we play well at the start to show them we are still as good as we were all year."

The Cougars, who had a 57-27 record over the regular campaign, could count eight victories in 11 games with the fourth-place Nets, who finished the regular season with a 30-54 mark. One thing the Cougars are not forgetting is what New York accomplished in last year's playoffs. Kentucky, East Division leader last year, was eliminated by the surprising Nets.

The Cougars plan not to let it happen to them.

"It's in the back of our minds, what happened to Kentucky," Cougar guard Mack Calvin observed. "We can't and won't look ahead. That's what Kentucky did."

Kentucky, second in the eastern race this season, begins its series tonight against Virginia.

Tonight's first game of the best-of-seven series is the key to the whole thing, Calvin continued.

"We want to come out and really beat them," he said. "I mean really beat them. I think if we can do this, it will destroy any thought New York has of repeating what it did last year."

The Cougars have the ABA's most valuable player, former Philadelphia 76er Billy Cunningham, who has averaged 24 points a game, scoring 2,028 points and pulling down 1,012 rebounds.

New York has a former Cougar, George Carter, who's leading the team scoring with a 19-point average. The Nets also have the league's third best rebounder, Bill Paultz, who's av-

'Spitter' Perry Doesn't Like The Orange Ball

By KEN RAPPOPORT
Associated Press Sports Writer

Take it from a man who knows—Gaylord Perry—the new orange baseballs are slippery and hard to grip.

The Cleveland pitcher, who has been accused at times of throwing a spit ball, was on the mound Thursday as the gaudy, experimental balls had their coming-out party.

They must have been hard to control, for sure, because 16 runs were scored in a hitter's day that produced an 11-5 exhibition game victory for the Indians over Oakland.

"The pitchers were not able to grip it correctly," said Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, echoing complaints voiced by Perry and Oakland's Jim Hunter.

Kuhn, at the game to watch the use of the fancy balls recommended by A's owner Charles O. Finley, observed Cleveland's George Hendrick hit three of them out of the park.

The baseball czar decided at once that they weren't practical as is.

Finley, who incidentally wasn't on hand to watch the debut of his brainchild, originally felt that a solid orange ball would be better for the batters to see than a white one.

In Thursday's other games, the Cincinnati Reds stopped the Chicago White Sox 5-2; the Kansas City Royals trimmed the Montreal Expos 4-2; the Baltimore Orioles nipped the New York Yankees 3-2; the Atlanta Braves blanked the Pittsburgh Pirates 3-0; the Chicago Cubs tripped the San Francisco Giants 9-8 in 12 innings; the New York Mets beat the St. Louis Cardinals 2-1 and the Boston Red Sox turned back the Detroit Tigers 3-2.

HIGHEST GOLF COURSE

NEW YORK (UPI) — The highest golf course in the world is at Gulmarg in Kashmir, India, where the 18-hole layout is at 8,700 feet above sea level. Players have the added pleasure of Kashmir's beautiful vale as a backdrop.

Rain canceled four games—Philadelphia-Houston, Texas-Minnesota and contests involving split Milwaukee squads with Los Angeles and California.

Johnny Bench, apparently recovered from lung surgery over the winter, drove in two runs to pace Cincinnati's victory over Chicago. The Reds' most valuable catcher singled across the runs off loser Terry Forster in the fifth inning.

Wayne Simpson, a trade acquisition this past winter from Cincinnati, allowed only five hits in pitching Kansas City over Montreal in a game halted after seven innings because of darkness. Amos Otis struck a home run for the winners.

The Orioles won their game on Don Baylor's leadoff homer in the eighth off Steve Kline. The Yanks had tied the game in the seventh on Felipe Alou's two-run homer.

Gary Gentry pitched seven innings of scoreless ball as Atlanta defeated Pittsburgh. The Braves scored their winning runs in the first inning on three walks off Luke Walker, a fielder's choice and Dave Johnson's single.

Cleo James' two-out single drove home Glenn Beckert with the winning run to give the Cubs their 12-inning triumph over San Francisco. The game took almost 3½ hours to play.

Jon Matlack limited St. Louis to two hits in seven innings and the Mets scored the decisive run on a throwing error to beat the Cardinals.

Designated hitter Orlando Cepeda drove in two runs, one with an eighth-inning double, as Boston rallied for its victory over Detroit.

Wolfpack Rolls Past Pirates

The Pirates are now 0-5 on the season.

The first and second doubles matches were rained out, cutting the match short.

East Carolina plays host to The Citadel today and Pembroke on Saturday, seeking their first win of the year.

In One Week, 345 Persons Shot To Death In U.S.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
In one week this month, 345 men, women and children in the United States were shot to death. Some were the victims of armed robbers, some were policemen killed in the line of duty, some were shot during family quarrels.

Other gun deaths were more bizarre: a bartender machine-gunned as he sat in his car at a Boston intersection, a teen-age couple executed as they knelt by a sleeping bag in the Arizona desert.

The 345 deaths, counted in an Associated Press survey the week of March 4-11, represented a 67 per cent increase over those counted in the last similar survey four years ago.

In North Carolina there were 14 gun deaths during the week including six homicides, seven accidental shootings and one suicide.

In each of three previous AP surveys, gunshot deaths totaled about 200: There were 199 in June 16-23, 1968; 192 in July 7-14, 1968, and 206 in June 15-22, 1969.

The dates for the AP surveys were chosen at random. The first two were taken in the wake of the assassination of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy. The third came a year later after passage of a federal gun control law.

In the latest survey, 236 deaths were classified as homicides, 89 as suicides and 20 as accidents. While the total number of gunshot deaths rose 40 per cent since the 1969 survey, homicides climbed 44.5 per cent, suicides 33.7 per cent and accidental deaths 20 per cent.

The weapons included the small, cheap handguns called "Saturday night specials" and often used in holdups, a father's revolver in the hands of a curious infant, the family shotgun grabbed during a quarrel. In most states, there are no attempts to compile comprehensive, statewide records of gun deaths until weeks or months after they occur. And, in many cases, the type of weapon is not always listed immediately.

But in the 345 gun deaths counted March 4-11, at least 128 — or 37.1 per cent — of the weapons used were handguns. Handguns were responsible for at least 41.4 per cent of the homicides, 25.8 per cent of the suicides, and 20.5 per cent of the accidental deaths.

Ten persons were killed during holdups, and five robbery suspects were killed by police. In Washington, D.C., a bank robbery suspect pointed a gun at a police officer and pulled the trigger five times; each time the gun misfired. Before the man could pull the trigger again, the officer fired, killing one of two armed men who had fled from the scene of the robbery.

The 1968 federal gun control law banned interstate mail order sales of rifles, shotguns and all types of ammunition. It also banned most over-the-counter sales to out-of-state residents.

The 1968 law also banned imports of cheap, small caliber pistols, but a number of U.S. firms sell "Saturday night specials" assembled locally from parts shipped in from overseas.

Attempts to get tighter controls have failed in Congress. Last year, the Senate passed a bill to prohibit the sale of easily concealed handguns, ranging from the cheap "Saturday night specials" to expensive, snub-nosed handguns. But the House took no action on the bill, and its chief sponsor, Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., says he sees no point in reintroducing it this year unless there are signs the House will pass it.

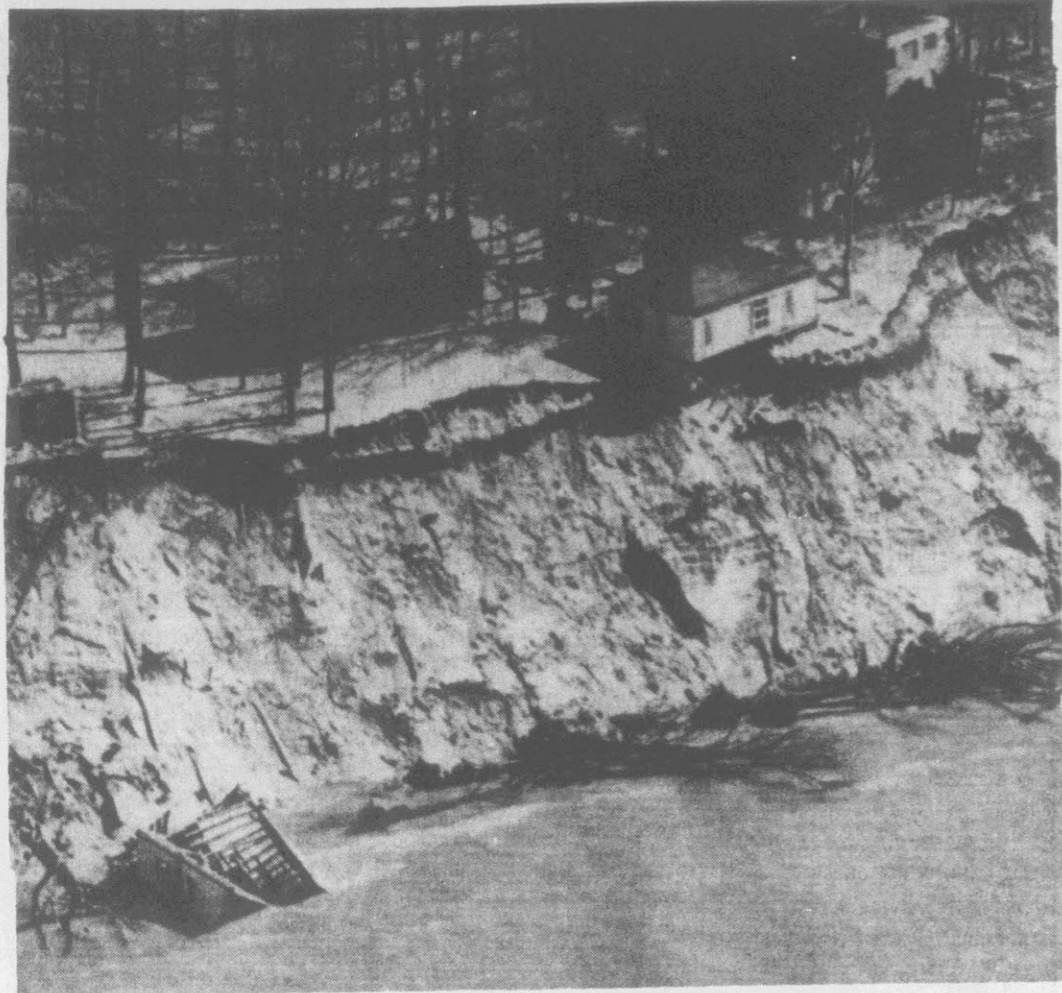

One bill reintroduced this year would require registration of all firearms and licensing of owners. The bill, proposed by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-

Mass., failed 78-11 last year. No hearings have been scheduled in either of the houses on any of the proposals.

In the latest AP gun death survey, California reported the most deaths — 42 — during the week. Next came Texas with 33, Michigan 28, New York 25, Illinois 22, Ohio 19, Virginia 17, Louisiana 15, North Carolina 14, Georgia 12.

Of California's 42 deaths, 20 were homicides and 22 were suicides. Michigan reported the most homicides — 22, followed by New York with 21, California 20, Texas 18, Illinois 16, Ohio 13, Georgia 13, Virginia 12, Pennsylvania 10, Florida 9.

Louisiana 9. Seven states reported no gun deaths during the period: Colorado, Kentucky, Minnesota, Nevada, New Hampshire, Vermont and Wyoming.

Mail Running Against Soft Drink Tax Repeal

By REESE HART
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — The chairman of the House Finance Committee says he has received about 300 letters from citizens throughout North Carolina and the margin is 20-1 against repeal of the state's one-cent soft drink tax.

Rep. Liston Ramsey, D-Madison, said in an interview a bill to repeal the tax will be before the committee for a possible vote next Thursday. "I hope we can vote on it then," he said.

The measure, sponsored by Rep. Sneed High, D-Cumberland, would remove the tax enacted by the 1969 General Assembly. It would cost the state some $43 million in revenue during the next two fiscal years.

Asked how he felt the vote will go on the repeal measure, Ramsey replied: "It looks extremely close. It may depend on the way the 17 Republican members of the committee mission also proposed other tax changes.

The commission based its recommendation on the fact that the state has a substantial money surplus.

Seek A Mile Of Pennies

The Pitt County Human Services Organization for the Easter Seal Society will attempt to collect a "mile of pennies" Saturday.

According to Mrs. Margaret French, chairman of mental health curriculum at Pitt Technical Institute, it takes 84,480 pennies, laid side by side to measure one mile.

Pennies and other donations will be collected Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at both Pitt Plaza Shopping Center and downtown Greenville.

Pitt Tech students, enrolled in the mental health curriculum and who comprise the membership of the Human Services Organization, will be soliciting the funds and measuring the progress of the "mile of pennies."

If the goal is reached, more than $800 will be given for helping crippled children through the Easter Seal Society.

Trio To Get Scholarships

Three East Carolina University students in Biology have been chosen to receive scholarships provided jointly by the faculty of the department and the ECU office of Scholarships and Financial Aid.

Two undergraduate students selected are David Michael Renn of Washington, N. C., and Russell Norman Holmes of Medford Lakes, N. J.; the graduate student is Thomas Allen Dean of Pemberton, N. J.

The two undergraduates and one graduate student were selected for the annual awards as a result of their research and academic accomplishments.

Renn is a senior biochemistry major who has been involved in study of oxygen consumption by parasitic worms under conditions of stress and will report his work to the North Carolina Academy of Science this May in Charlotte. Holmes is a junior biology major who has been active in research study of freshwater and marine algae. Dean has recently completed masters thesis research on the epifauna of the Pamlico Estuary.

Equal Rights Question Confusing All Involved

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer
Will women be drafted? Can a husband demand alimony? What will happen to separate rest rooms? Questions like these are confusing opponents and supporters of the equal rights amendment (ERA).

The amendment is short and simple: "Equality of rights under the amendment shall not be denied or abridged by the United States, or any state, on account of sex."

"The Congress shall have the power to enforce, by appropriate legislation, the provisions of this article. This amendment shall take effect two years after the date of ratification."

The very simplicity of the language has caused some of the confusion. It is so broad that most observers feel specific issues will have to be decided in the courts.

"No one is sure exactly what it would do," said state Rep. Arthur Wilkowski, a Democrat from Ohio, where the amendment is pending.

"If it passes, all we can do is wait for the court decisions on the constitutionality of present laws."

The amendment must be approved by 38 states within seven years of its 1972 passage by Congress to become law. It has been approved by 29 states. It has been rejected by nine states — including Nebraska, which reversed an earlier ratification vote.

The reversal itself is open to argument. No one seems sure whether it's legal.

Nebraska state Sen. John de Camp told the legislature had been in touch with the U. S. Senate Judiciary Committee and had been told the legality issue won't be considered until 37 other states have ratified the ERA.

Key issues in the arguments over what the amendment means are military service, co-called "protective labor laws," the family and the rights of privacy.

Former Selective Service Director Curtis Tarr said there was "no question" that women could be drafted if the amendment were ratified.

The draft also featured in debate in Tennessee, where five Republican senators have introduced a resolution to rescind last year's ratification vote.

"Those fears that mothers will be conscripted into military service if the equal rights amendment is ratified are totally and completely unfounded," said Mrs. Osta Underwood, past president of the Business and Professional Women's Club. She said that only "qualified" women could serve in the armed forces.

The Arkansas Senate amended the amendment to exclude women from military service. The bill still is pending; but even if it's passed, it won't count toward ratification because of the change.

A spokesman for the AFL-CIO, one of the leaders in the fight against the ERA, said the amendment "would nullify a good deal of protective legislation for women workers."

Supporters of the amendment argue, however, that many of these laws were invalidated anyway by recent civil rights legislation.

State Rep. Michael P. Stinziano, a Democrat who is co-sponsoring the move for ratification in Ohio, said arguments against the amendment have been "based on misconceptions and emotion." He said 142 areas of Ohio law would have to be changed if the amendment passes. "They will need to change these protections," he said, "either to extend them to men or do away with them entirely."

Several of the most emotional arguments stem from the amendment's effect on the most emotional arguments stem from the amendment's effect on the family and the right to privacy.

Phyllis Schafley of Alton, Ill., a leader in the fight against the ERA, said the amendment would make wives equally responsible for half the family support. "No more radical piece of legislation could have been devised to force women outside of the home," she said.

Not so, argued U. S. Reps. Martha Griffiths of Michigan and Margaret Heckler of Massachusetts. "Women are being duped," Rep. Griffiths said, claiming that the ERA would not effect personal relations but would be directed only at the government and discriminatory laws.

Mrs. Underwood agreed: "The equal rights amendment will govern laws and governmental units. It will not change social customs."

A spokesman for Common Cause, the legislative lobby that is leading the fight for adoption of the amendment, said that the interpretation of the law would have to be left to the courts.

The 'Worry Clinic' Failures Mark Our Schooling

Jerome will make millions of teachers howl! But his comment about the "educational and hospital complex" is prodding many taxpayers into a threatened revolt. So ponder his idea of having teachers bid to operate various rooms in our school buildings!

By GEORGE W. CRANE
Ph.D., M.D.

CASE W-565: Jerome D., aged 37, is an advertising executive. "Dr. Crane," he began, "last fall our schools didn't open for several weeks because of a teachers' strike.

"Yet I have youngsters in grammar as well as high school and the caliber of teaching is so inferior, I am ready to vote for a return to private schools.

"But our Teachers' Colleges keep stressing the need for 4 years of college and now they even demand a Masters' Degree for high school.

"Yet the number of degrees behind the teacher's name is no guarantee as to the output of the students under her care!

"Some of our most educated teachers are the poorest in motivating youngsters to read or add and subtract.

"And I am not joking! "I tested my daughter's Girl Scout Troop and found only 3 who could add a simple column of 4-place numbers!

"Why, the average waitress nowadays can't even add correctly the price of a cheeseburger, pie and coffee on the luncheon tab she gives you.

"So why not wash out the heavy burden on taxpayers for our public schools, as well as public colleges.

"In my state, for example, a budget of $669,000,000 was demanded for our 6 state colleges, just to tide them over the next two years.

"But taxpayers have already financed their huge buildings, laboratories, libraries, etc.

"And 50 private colleges in my state don't soak us taxpayers a red cent, but rely on tuition! "Our Founding Fathers didn't expect Uncle Sam to compete with private enterprise.

"So why should my state's 6 tax financed colleges compete with the other 50 private universities and colleges? "Isn't that unfair, as per our Founding Fathers' intent? "And every village has several churches, whose religious education quarters could be used 5 week days for teaching the basic courses, such as math, reading, history and English.

"And we have enough housewives who are superb educators (many being former topnotch teachers) to operate grammar schools in the now unused church facilities.

"Let the parents pay a reasonable tuition.

"And even at the high school level, let's use our already massive multi-million dollar educational 'palaces' but let the teachers enter into competitive bidding for the right to teach 9th grade English or sophomore math, etc.

"Then the teachers would depend on tuition, so they'd take a greater personal interest in their pupils' advancement.

Otherwise, they'd not be able to recruit another roomful the next term, so their income would drop!

"This would force the teachers to operate like business men or lawyers and doctors, whose income is based on 'output' rather than mere college degrees and 'tenure.'

"At present, I am not so worried about the 'military-industrial' complex that President Eisenhower mentioned, as the School and Hospital' complex that threatens to bankrupt Uncle Sam.

"Or Founding Fathers didn't attend free public schools! "Their mothers or clergymen and private tutors gave us Washington, Jefferson and those signers of the Declaration of Independence.

"Dr. Crane, didn't Benjamin Franklin and Lincoln show what ambitious kids could do without any B. A. or M.A. faculty? So challenge your readers to debate the total elimination of free public schools." (Always write to Dr. Crane in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

Opening lead: King of ♠

An apparently unnecessary finesse was an essential ingredient of South's plan of campaign in today's hand, where he was the declarer at a contract of four hearts doubled.

West opened the king of spades and the ace was played from dummy. Based on East's double of the final bid as well as West's announced two-suiter, South reasoned that most if not all of the outstanding trumps were banked in his right hand opponent's possession, so that the queen was not subject to capture by the normal method of a simple finesse. It would be necessary to shorten his trumps to the same number held by East. In order to reduce his own heart holding without delay, declarer played a small spade at trick two and ruffed with the three of hearts.

A diamond was led next and East was allowed to win the trick with the eight. He returned the deuce of hearts to prevent South from trumping a diamond in dummy. Declarer—deciding to play East for both the queen and ten of hearts—put in the seven and West showed out, discarding a diamond. The five of clubs was led and, when West followed with the three, the nine was put in from dummy.

The abnormal finesse was made necessary by the shortage of entries to the North hand. A spade was ruffed with the eight of hearts. The king of clubs was overtaken by the ace as both opponents followed suit and South trumped another spade with the nine of hearts, East letting go of the deuce of diamonds.

Declarer had seven tricks in one spade, four hearts and two clubs. He exited with a diamond, putting East in with the ace. The latter had nothing left but hearts and, on the forced trump return, he gave the declarer a free finesse of the jack. The ace and king of hearts scored South's ninth and 10th tricks.

West could have frustrated declarer's coup by putting up the queen of clubs when the five was led. This deprives South of one entry to dummy and he cannot subsequently reduce his trump holding to the required number. Besides losing three diamonds, in the end he will be obliged to surrender a trick to the queen of hearts.

CARROLL RICHTER'S HOROSCOPE

from the Carroll Richter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A fairly unimportant day and p.m. as far as anything of major importance is concerned. Time is best utilized to get rid of all chores and behind-the-scenes personal duties so you do not have to use oncoming important days to complete such things. Be understanding.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Get rid of those small accumulated tasks early, then secure data you need. Plan to help those who are truly in trouble. Don't be fooled by moochers, though. Think logically.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Plan social activities now and try to please good friends more; do whatever is helpful to them. Those aims you have can be reached more quickly thereby. Stop stewing over some situation; do something wise about it.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Study those civic affairs that can prove to be most helpful to you in the days ahead. Look into your credit and government responsibilities and get them handled well, or plan how to do so. Relax tonight.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Look into the information you already have so you know how to expand more quickly in the future. Make those new contacts who have the knowledge you need. Spend more time with mate in p.m.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Follow your hunches today, since they are apt to be more accurate and will lead you properly, help you to communicate better with others. Cooperate with an associate and don't be disappointing to him or her. Avoid moochers.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You have to be conscientious in handling problems today, especially where money is concerned. Mate can be most helpful. Show tact in straightening out some situation with one who is important to you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Show more thoughtfulness for others and more mutual happiness results. Handle those personal matters well without further procrastination. Show you are an efficient, kind person.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Get into the ordinary things you like to do which are easy for you and be happy. Improve the state of your present health. More attention to mate brings excellent results now. Show you are indeed devoted.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Although home duties seem boring, they are important just the same, so get them done quickly and well. Make sure that utilities are in fine running order. Don't take any chances with anything today or tonight.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Keep busy at shopping, running errands, handling correspondence, chores that are difficult during busy work week. Then contact friends and relatives you have not seen in some time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Plan a better budget and get your financial affairs on a more practical basis. Study how to improve your property. Fun with friends in p.m. Think.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Ideal day and p.m. to improve your health and charm so you can be at your best when out socially later in the day and p.m. Budget your money wisely and do not spend too much. Avoid one who argues.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY he or she will be a born humanitarian and should be given a chance to help playmates early in life with their problems so as to bring this quality to the fore early. Give good spiritual training and teach ethics early so your child does not get side-tracked and involved in using this fine quality of compassion to help entirely selfish people. Send to the right schools and the world will be much better for the birth of this youngster. Build up bodily energy through diet.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

Value Added Tax In Italy Is Confusing

By ERNEST SAKLER

ROME (UPI) — Italy's value added tax, postponed three times for fear it would send prices spiraling skywards, has finally gone into effect. The result—no inflation catastrophe, but a king-size snafu.

Three months after the value added tax—known in English as VAT and in Italian as IVA—came into force Jan. 1, no one inside or outside the government seems quite to know how it works. Government departments are churning out circular after circular of explanations. Businessmen are crowding tax offices to find out what they should do, and the man in the street does not know if he is being cheated.

The way VAT was handled, government critics say, stands out as a textbook example of mismanagement even in such a regularly mismanaged country as Italy.

Kind of Sales Tax

Basically, the VAT is a simpler kind of sales tax replacing a Fascist era turnover tax and a jungle of inter-city customs dues dating from the days when Italy was a collection of independent city states.

The tax, ranging from one per cent on bread to 16 per cent for such luxuries as cars, fur coats or perfumes, applies at every stage of manufacturing or trade. It eliminates much duplication by allowing businessmen to deduct taxes they paid on purchases from taxes they pay on sales of the same goods.

It also makes tax evasion harder by requiring businessmen and professional men to keep accounts and make them available to tax officials.

One unpleasant side effect of VAT, as Italy's Common Market partners found when they introduced it, is that at first prices tend to go up. Italy reacted to this danger in a very Italian way—postponing action time and again.

All Common Market countries originally agreed to introduce VAT by the end of 1969. Belgium later won a one-year extension and Italy, the market's perennial laggard, a two-year one, until the end of 1971.

Second Extension

Italy then obtained a second extension, until the end of last June, and a third one until January.

The postponements hurt the consumer instead of helping him. Retail prices went up in anticipation each time and failed to go down when the extensions were announced.

Bureaucratic snags and a series of amendments by popularity-seeking parliament members delayed passage of VAT legislation until a few days before the January deadline, giving taxpayers and tax workers alike little time to familiarize themselves with its operation.

Weeks after the reform went into effect, the Finance Ministry still had not answered a 28-point Defense Ministry questionnaire asking if and how VAT should apply to transactions ranging from land expropriation for military purposes to the manufacturing of weapons under license from foreign firms. Most such operations were held up in the meantime.

The National Constructors' Association complained that state agencies were not paying contractors because they received no state allocations for VAT payments. It said a number of small companies risked bankruptcy as a result.

It was Jan. 17 before a government circular advised banks that banking interests were exempt from VAT, and Feb. 13 before the government decided the tax did apply to court-ordered auctions of goods owned by business enterprises. It meditated three more days before announcing that legal notices were tax-free, and another four days before saying the same was true of plane and ship registrations.
