Little Effect On Prices

Some Meat Boycotters Urging Extension

By United Press International

Housewives dedicated to boycotting meat until prices come down paraded in New York and Chicago streets Saturday at the end of the first marketing week since the presidential price ceiling on beef, pork and lamb.

From the way that prices held at most stores across the country during the week, there were indications that they would have to continue their efforts. Some organizations said they would do so, despite the warnings of economists that they were battling a long-range problem.

About 500 persons, mostly women and including some children, marched from Herald Square in New York City to the wholesale meat packing district around 14th Street under the leadership of Women United for Action and Women Strike for Peace. They demanded not merely a freeze, but a price rollback.

A small number—some observers counted only 30 persons marched north through Chicago's Loop area to a rally against high prices at Civic Center Plaza.

In Washington, Rep. William R. Cotter (D-Conn.), a sponsor of price rollback legislation, announced formation of what he called a "Coalition for the Rollback," a lobbying effort to support a measure to roll back prices to Jan. 10, 1973 levels. Such a measure has passed the House Banking and Currency Committee in its version of the Economic Stabilization Act.

Meat marketers in New York, Pittsburgh, Chicago, Houston, San Francisco and Los Angeles reported sales off during the week, although there was some improvement on Friday, a major shopping day.

Robert Onstead, president of a food market group in Houston, Tex., said "one or two weeks (of boycott) really aren't going to do anything," and the only action to cut beef prices would be a "long haul" cutback on buying.

Willard F. Williams, an agricultural economist at Texas Tech, foresaw that prices either would go "still higher or there will have to be rationing like that of World War II."

"Either way, it will wreck the cattle industry," he said.

A former agriculture department economist in Washington told United Press International that a short-range approach to bringing meat prices down would have little success.

Gustav Burmeister, a former assistant administrator of the foreign agriculture service, said, "While we have more mouths to feed and people have more and more dollars to spend, we are going to have higher prices for everything. There is no stopping the beef spiral under conditions like these."

He said beef production increased only 1.5 per cent last year, and it would show a 4 per cent annual increase to keep up with demand.

Store managers during the week reported sales cut by as much as half in some areas, but one Dallas store manager said, "We weren't hurt much" by the no-buy campaign.

Another in Dallas said, "We're doing just fine. The boycott hasn't hurt. We tore 'em up (with meat price leaders) last week, so I'm down a bit in comparison with that but $1,000 ahead of what I expected and actually sales are normal or maybe a bit better than two weeks ago and previously."

In New York City, where housewives activities against the buying of meat have been energetic, a combination of 30 groups under the Women United for Action marched on meat packing areas of the principal boroughs of the city and in near suburbs.

New York meat markets, as was the case in most of the nation, felt the effects of the boycott, even in New York's Grand Union stores which cut its meat prices 10 per cent Thursday. Laurie Fierstein, an organizer of Saturday's marches, said the Grand Union action was "a token, not really a significant drop" and credited the boycott for it.

In thrifty New England, boycott groups from Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Maine met in Woburn, Mass., Friday and said they would keep buying less meat throughout April and go into another full-scale boycott the first week in May.

Mrs. Robert Leslie Demetri, a co-leader of the organization known as Fight Inflation Together (FIT) said another protest was planned next week and a meeting Thursday on long-range plans.

Nixon Troubleshooter Sent To Cambodia

By EUGENE V. RISHER

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (UPI) — President Nixon dispatched one of his top military-political troubleshooters, Gen. Alexander M. Haig Jr., to Southeast Asia Saturday with orders to report back on the current Communist siege in Cambodia.

Haig's trip, to include talks with Cambodian President Lon Nol, was announced less than a week after Nixon and South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu conferred here and warned of "appropriately vigorous reactions" if the Communists continued to violate the Jan. 28 Vietnam cease-fire agreement.

White House Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said Haig's trip should not be taken to suggest in any way that U.S. ground forces might be sent into Indochina again. "The United States government has no intentions, no plans and no desire to reintroduce U.S. troops into Southeast Asia," he said.

Haig was to embark on the five-day swing through Thailand, Laos, South Vietnam and Cambodia immediately after a meeting at the Western White House with Nixon and his national security adviser, Henry A. Kissinger.

American B52s have been bombing heavily for the past three weeks over Cambodia, where Communist forces cut off all supply routes into the capital of Phnom Penh.

As sporadic ground fighting continued between the Communist and Cambodian forces, military sources in Cambodia said U.S. Air Force cargo planes had begun to airlift ammunition and other war material to the Cambodian troops.

U.S. shipments of ammunition previously were taken into Phnom Penh on barges up the Mekong River, but no supply convoy has been able to reach that city in 18 days —including a 16-ship convoy scheduled to sail Saturday.

The capital's petroleum supply was said to be almost exhausted and food was reported running short.

NCAE Installation Held

ICCS Copters In S. Vietnam 'Lost'

By KENNETH F. ENGLADE

SAIGON (UPI) — Two helicopters carrying members of the Vietnam peace-keeping force and piloted by Americans disappeared Saturday over a Communist occupied area of South Vietnam. At least one of them apparently was shot down.

The helicopters were carrying members of the International Commission for Control and Supervision (ICCS) to Lao Bao, a Communist village on the South Vietnamese-Laotian border. A total of 16 persons was reported to be aboard the aircrafts.

"I am hit! I am going down!" sources said one of the helicopter crewmen radioed in English. It was the last communication with either of the helicopters, but the second craft was believed to have gone to the aid of the stricken ship.

Sources said the helicopters carried representatives from each of the four ICCS nations—Canada, Hungary, Indonesia and Poland—as well as Viet Cong and American crewmembers. The ICCS helicopters are flown under contract with Air America.

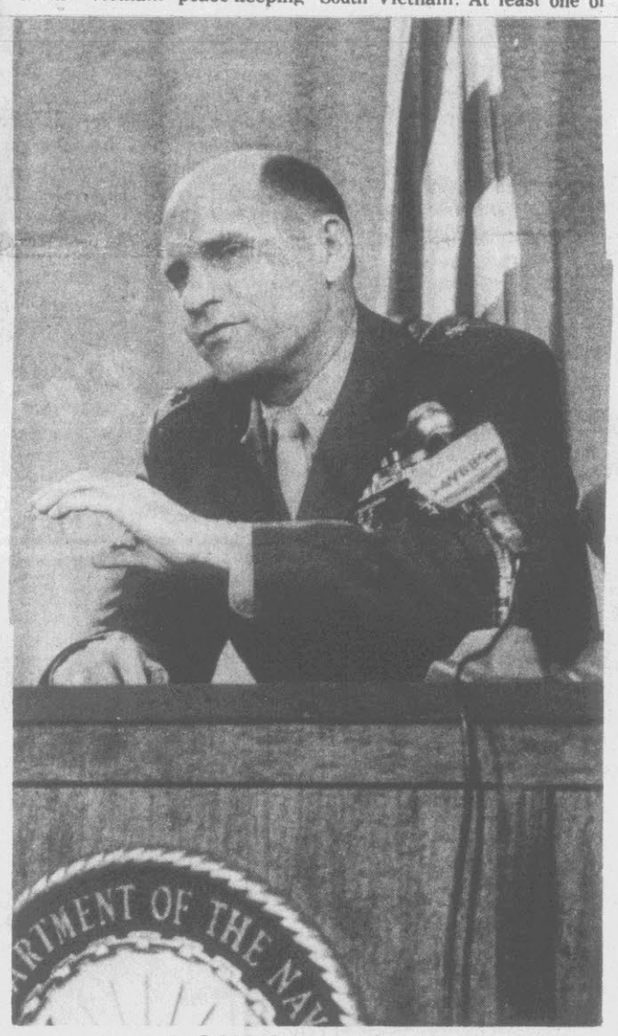
The first downing of an ICCS helicopter was one of a flurry of reports of fighting that marked the biggest upsurge in military activity in South Vietam since the cease-fire became effective Jan. 28.



POW Interview

"I WAS MADE DISHWASHER FOR HALF THE CAMP."—Lt. Col. Jerry Marvel of Newport, N.C., talked with newsmen Friday morning during a news conference held in the Naval Hospital at Camp Lejeune. Marvel told of his duties, and stated that while a P.O.W. he was made the dishwasher for half the camp. Lt. Col. Marvel will return to the Naval Hospital sometime in May for probable surgery. Thousands Evacuating Homes As Mississippi River Continues Rise

By United Press International

New rains, flash floods and tornadoes descended on the storm-beleaguered Southeast Saturday, pushing the swollen Mississippi River and its tributaries still higher and driving thousands of residents from homes in the storied cities of Dixie.

A steady stream of refugees, carrying their most precious possessions, left the area north of historic Vicksburg, Miss., where the Mississippi reached its highest level in 30 years.

The worst flooding around Vicksburg came from the backwaters of the Yazoo and Sunflower Rivers and numerous creeks and bayous which run through the flat Delta farm region. The National Weather Service predicted a crest of 50.1 feet Monday at Vicksburg, site of a major Civil War battle.

Authorities said the riverfront city itself was not threatened, but water was up to the rooftops of homes in the outlying suburbs.

A new storm system from the Gulf of Mexico moved across the lower reaches of the Mississippi Valley Friday night and Saturday, bringing up to four inches of rain, flash floods and tornadoes.

The National Weather Service said excessive rainfall and high tides along the Gulf Coast added to the danger of flooding from already swollen rivers and streams.

Tornadoes and strong winds in Mississippi and Alabama damaged roofs and destroyed house trailers but no injuries were reported. Flooding along the Gulf Coast of Alabama forced about 20 persons to evacuate to high ground on Dauphin Island south of Mobile. The main road to the island was closed.

Officials in Mississippi, where flood damage was estimated at $120 million, warned that another 3,000 families may have to be evacuated. More than 5,000 homes in the state already have been abandoned since the flooding began in mid-March.

Another 1,000 were homeless in Louisiana, mostly northwest of New Orleans, and 500 persons in Tennessee waited to return to their homes.

600,000 Unfiled

GREENSBORO, N.C. (UPI)—With the deadline less than two weeks away, more than 600,000 North Carolina taxpayers still have not filed their 1972 federal income tax returns, acting director Robert Lebaube of the Internal Revenue Service said Saturday.

The deadline is April 16 at midnight.

Through the end of March, 1.1 million of an estimated 1.8 million from North Carolina ware received at the Memphis service center, he said.

Over 750,000 returns have been processed and about 100,000 of these will result in refunds averaging about $253.

Lebaube said late-filing taxpayers due refunds can expect to wait about five weeks for their checks because of the late filing.

Robeson Indian Paraders Arrested In Smithfield

By NOEL YANCEY
Associated Press Writer

SMITHFIELD, N.C. (AP)— Some 130 Robeson County Indians were arrested here Saturday and charged with parading without a permit after a nonviolent confrontation with Smithfield police and Johnston County sheriff's officers.

Police Chief B.P. Jones said his men loaded about 60 adults on one bus and 70 juveniles on another to transport them to the town hall and county courthouse.

The confrontation arose as the Indians, members of a group seeking recognition as Tuscaroras, attempted to march through Smithfield en route from Pembroke to Raleigh.

Among those arrested were Howard Brooks, the Tuscarora chief who organized the trek, and black activist Golden Frinks, who police say attempted to lead the march through Smithfield.

Jones said Magistrate Oscar Martin had offered to allow the Indian adults to sign their own bonds if they would leave town without parading. Brooks said the group's leaders wanted to consult an attorney before considering the offer.

The police chief said the children were being released to their parents or other relatives as rapidly as they came for them. He said petitions would be signed against them Monday in juvenile court.

Jones said he talked with Frinks Friday night and again Saturday morning at nearby Selma, where the group spent the night. He said he told Frinks on both occasions that the marchers would be arrested if they paraded through Smithfield on the streets.

The chief said he offered to permit the group to pass through town walking on the sidewalks, but Frinks refused. "I offered to work with them any way I could as long as they did not violate the law," Jones said.

He said Frinks had led groups to Smithfield on two other occasions and was aware that a town ordinance requires a 24-hour waiting period before a parade permit can be issued.

"I guess he's determined to march in Smithfield," Jones said. "If they do, they'll be arrested again."

The police chief said the marchers were stopped at a skirmish line which had been set up about one-half mile inside the city limits on U.S. 301. He said his forces included about 50 men, including police, sheriff's deputies and auxiliary officers.

Charles Dunn, director of the State Bureau of Investigation, was also present, and a contingent of highway patrolmen was standing by.

Step Toward New Middle-Junior High School

Another step in the planning stages for a new middle-junior high school takes place Wednesday night at 8:00 p.m. in the library of Aycock Junior High School.

At that time, the Educational Specifications Committee for the proposed school will meet for the initial orientation-organization session of the committee.

This is one of the steps outlined in PERT, the plan adopted by the Greenville City School Board that phase by phase will lead to the construciton of the new school, hopefully by autumn 1975.

Persons currently on the committee membership of the Education Specifications Committee are:

—Central office staff members — Charlie Ross, Charles Dickens, Freager Sanders, Mrs. Ann Harrison;

—Students — Larry Graham (Wahl-Coates), Darryl Davis (Rose), Lee Shearin, Freager Sanders and Saline Wheeles (Aycock);

—City-wide PTA Council — Don McGlohon, Mrs. Bernard Haselrig, Willie Pate, Mrs. Barbara Dixon, Jesse Harris, Sam Sewall, Dr. Dennis Roberts, Mrs. Onita Long;

—Citizens-at-large — Dr. Steve Tacker, Rev. William Moore, Boyd Lee, Dr. Maylon McDonald;

—Principals — Paul Rasberry, Robert Alligood, Johnson Spruill, Mrs. Margaret White.

Following the organizational meeting on Wednesday night, two additional meetings have been scheduled for the committee during May. The first is the formal sub-committee report meeting slated for May 2; the second is a review educational specifications document meeting scheduled for May 9.

Dorothy Satterfield, faculty member of the School of Art, East Carolina University, has today been announced one of three prize winners for a $500 purchase award in the North Carolina Craftsman, 1973 exhibition at the North Carolina Museum of Art. Her entry is a woven wall hanging entitled Outer Banks.

The exhibition, which opens today at 2:00 p.m., will feature a lecture at 3:00 p.m. by Anthony N. Landreau, executive director of the Textile Museum of Washington, D. C.

Winner of the $1,000 top award is Winston-Salem craftsman Chris Yarborough, for three necklaces. Mrs. Yarborough's necklaces are made of wool, linen and copper.

The other $500 award winners in addition to Mrs. Satterfield are Mel Someroski of Penland; and Alma Tischer of Raleigh.

Two Greenville artists, ECU faculty member Sara Edmiston and ECU art student C. Douglas Helms, were awarded honorable mention for their entries.

Three judges selected 136 works out of a total of 549 submitted to this exhibition, which will continue on view through May 6 at the North Carolina Museum of Art.

See Loss In New Formula

RALEIGH, N. C. (UPI) — North Carolina schools may lose nearly half of their federal money for educationally disadvantaged children because of a change in the allocation formula, the state Department of Public Instruction said.

The 152 local school systems will receive an estimated $56.7 million in Title I money this year, but because of a drastic reduction in the number of children in low income families, the allocation will drop to $31.7 million in the 1973-74 school year.

Title I money provides compensatory education programs to help disadvantaged children overcome some of their deficiencies, including reading and math.

Currently three bills are before Congress but public instruction officials here say they don't expect these bills to be passed or funded by July 1.

If a new law isn't passed by then, the program may be automatically continued for one year under provisions of the present law. But because of the change in formula, the allocation will be down by $25 million, or 44 per cent.

Two Presented Research Papers

Original research papers by two East Carolina University history students were presented to the annual state convention of Phi Alpha Theta honor society at Winston-Salem last weekend.

Senior Joseph E. Stroud of Fuquay-Varina read his paper, "Japanese Internment Policy: The Constitutional Issue," and "A Study of the 1959 Jenner Proposal," written by junior Joel Grant Hancock, was read by ECU student Steve Ross.

Ayden-Grifton Team Is Land-Judging Winner

The Pitt County Federation of the Future Farmers of America held its annual Land Judging Contest Friday afternoon and the Ayden-Grifton team compiled the highest score to make them winners.

The contest was hosted by the Farmville Central High School and the judging site was the Marvin Horton farm about five miles noth of Farmville.

James B. Newman, a retired soil scientist for the Soil Conservation Service, was commended for devoting his time free of charge to select the land judging site, getting judging holes prepared, and making up the official scorecard.

The individual high scorer for all teams participating was Benjamin Forrest of D.H. Conley.

The Ayden-Grifton team will journey to Farmville April 14 to compete in the State Land Judging Contest. The Pitt Soil and Water Conservation District presented the team with a check for $50 to help defray expenses to and from the state contest.

Trade Wounded Knee Charges

By JAMES R. QUINN

PINE RIDGE, S.D. (UPI) — The federal government and the Indians occupying Wounded Knee charged each other Saturday with violating their "treaty" to end the occupation of the village. The chief government negotiator said he will "stand by the agreement until hell freezes over."

The Indians who have occupied the historic village—site of the "Massacre of Wounded Knee"—for 39 days had been expected to lay down their arms Saturday morning when talks began in Washington between their leader and a presidential aide.

But Russell Means, the militant American Indian Movement (AIM) leader who travelled to Washington, said his meeting with Leonard Garment had been put off for at least 24 hours because the Justice Department "continues to run amok at Wounded Knee."

He said the government is violating the treaty by closing in on the village and threatening "to swoosh down on the occupants."

Assistant Attorney General Kent Frizzell, who signed the Thursday "treaty" for the government, met AIM leaders in Wounded Knee Saturday and then denied Means' charges angrily and categorically.

"We stand by our agreement," Frizzell said. "We call on AIM leaders and Russell Means to stand by their agreement. I for one stand ready to stand by the agreement until hell freezes over."

"We stand ready for a meeting in Washington with Means within 24 hours after he agrees to do what the agreement says," Frizzell said. "The agreement is very clear to the Indians, to the government, and to the public."

The long-distance exchange of angry words—Means called Frizzell "a man gone mad with power"—made it appear that the stalemate between the government and the dwindling band of Indians in Wounded Knee may continue for days or weeks.

Means charged that the U.S. marshals surrounding the village "have violated our just-signed treaty by establishing a 'voice perimeter' around Wounded Knee."

By this, Means said he meant the marshals had closed in to the point that they were in shouting distance of each other and "are jeopardizing not only the negotiations, but jeopardizing Indian lives."

All this Frizzell denied.

Not one federal roadblock has been moved closer to the village and not one shot has been fired by the federal forces, Frizzell said. He said two shots had been fired in the village—by Indians slaughtering a steer for a barbecue.

Charging Means and AIM with welshing on terms of the agreement, Frizzell said "AIM leaders have refused to lay down their arms in conferences both yesterday and today."

Frizzell said he talked Saturday to Carter Camp, an AIM leader in Wounded Knee, and quoted him as saying the Indians did not intend to lay down their arms.

Two days ago, Frizzell said, when he signed the "treaty," he was convinced that both sides were acting in good faith and that both sides understood the agreement "was not to be modified or changed at a later date."

Aside from the angry rhetoric, it was a quiet, uneventful day on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation where Wounded Knee is located. Light snow fell on the rolling hills of the Oglala Sioux country.

Oil Pipeline Bill Readied

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A bipartisan group of 22 House members led by Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., will introduce a bill Monday to permit piping of Alaska's oil reserves to the continental United States via a Canadian route.

The Supreme Court last week refused to review a lower court ruling prohibiting construction of a trans-Alaskan pipeline because of a right-of-way restriction.

The Aspin bill would waive a provision of the Mineral Leasing Act which limits all pipeline rights-of-way to 54 feet-but only for the Canadian route.

Studies of the pipeline indicate it would need a right-of-way of at least 146 feet.

Staging Musical At SA Citadel

The Salvation Army Citadel will be scene tonight of a musical, "Salvation Man" written by Capt. Paul Kellner.

The musical being presented by some 20 local young people is directed by Vern Jewett. The performance is slated for 7:30 p.m. and the public is invited.

Moving Up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Master Sergeant William Robinson, 29, of Robersonville, N.C., a returned prisoner of war, will receive his bars as a second lieutenant in the Air Force Monday at Andrews Air Force Base, Md. He intends to become a flier.

The senior U.S. POW, Air Force Col. John P. Flynn, conferred the commission on him and two other sergeants while they were prisoners.

A United Effort Is The Way

State Highway Commissioner Robert Browning recently made an interesting proposal for obtaining an adequate dual laned highway from this area to Raleigh.

Instead of competing for more than one route west, the communities of Eastern and Northeastern North Carolina should join forces and work for one main new highway, he said.

Browning said obtaining such a route was his prime objective as a member of the Highway Commission. He explained that there has been considerable competition between communities along U.S. 64 and those along U.S. 264 for improvement of the two highways to the west.

Considerable money has been committed to the U.S. 64 program, while only three short sections of U.S. 264 are currently being four laned. U.S. 264, of course, joins U.S. 64 at Zebulon where a four lane bypass is currently being constructed.

Browning's proposal was for a new U.S. 64 limited access highway running to U.S. 17 south of Williamston. He pointed out that this highway was proposed by Highway Commission engineers and rejected by the old commission.

The interstate road would be connected to the cities along the way be feeder routes; thus Greenville, Washington, Rocky Mount, Wilson, Tarboro and other cities would be served by it.

"It is my feeling we can only hope for one four-lane road," Browning said. "We should start to plan now in cooperation with one another and have the road run where the traffic engineers say it should go, according to traffic counts and surveys.

"If we don't joint together, we will lose our chance. . .we will be eight to 10 years obtaining a desirable four-lane access to the Raleigh area."

Commissioner Browning's idea just might work. The tricky part would be placing the new highway on an entirely new right-of-way which would be close enough to all the municipalities involved so that all could claim it.

In Pitt County, for instance, U.S. 64 runs through the middle of Bethel. It obviously would be moved south of Bethel on the new right-of-way. The question would be whether it was far enough south so that Greenville citizens would consider it their route to Raleigh.

If the Highway Commission engineers can come up with a route centrally located between Rocky Mount and Wilson, Greenville and Bethel and Williamston and Washington they might have a salable idea down this way. It could speed up the process of getting an adequate highway to the west and in the long run save some money.

Women's Legal Rights Listed

By CANDY JOHNSON
Greensboro Record

GREENSBORO—Who has the legal right to determine where a married couple will live?

That and scores of other questions dealing primarily with the legal rights of women are answered in a 32-page booklet recently published by the North Carolina Commission on the Education and Employment of Women.

The answer to that first question, according to the booklet, is the husband "as long as he makes this decision in a reasonable manner consistent with the comfort, welfare and safety of his wife."

The state commission, headed by Dr. Margaret Hunt, professor at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, has gathered questions and answers on home and community, spearation of husband and wife, death of spouse, children out-of-wedlock, education, and benefits and taxation as relating primarily to women.

Aim To Inform

"Our aim was in inform women about the general legal principles concerning their rights," Dr. Hunt explained.

This is not to say the principles would apply to every situation.

"We certainly recognize that individual circumstances vary," the political science professor said. "And for individual legal problems, we recommend that persons consult a lawyer."

Nor is it to indicate that the law is an accurate indicator of actual practices.

Unequal Application Cited

"Although what we say in this pamphlet is what is true under the law, many times these general rules are applied in a way that treats women differently and unequally," Dr. Hunt explained.

What the pamphlet offers then is a statement in simple language about what rights women are entitled to.

Some 30,000 copies of the booklet are now available free of charge by writing to this address: North Carolina Information Project, Office of State Libray, Department of Art, Culture and History, Raleigh, N.C. 27611.

The booklet, entitled "North Carolina Women and the Law," was two years in the making. Commission members read existing similar pamphlets and asked numerous people what questions they thought women needed answers to.

After compiling the list of questions, the commission members handed them over to the Institute of Government at the Uniyersity of North Carolina at Chapel Hill where a law student, David James (now a practicing lawyer in Greensboro), researched the statutes, law books, codes, and court decisions to come up with the answers. James was assisted by Mason P. Thomas Jr., assistant director of the Institute.

Having obtained the legal answers, the commission rewrote them in non-technical language which was given approval by the lawyers.

ERA Ammunition

Dr. Hunt said she expects this "general legal rule" on women's rights and the law, as expressed in the booklet, will provide the "battleground" for the next fight on the Equal Rights Amendment. Both foes and friends of ERA will use the legal rule as part of their arguments, Dr. Hunt indicated.

"The reason for this is that the general rule seems to project women.

Unfortunatley, when women have sought legal remedies, actual application (of the legal rule) has not in fact protected them," Dr. Hunt said.

"What in the statute may seem to be a protection is based on the assumption that women, particularly married women, are intellectually and emotionally incompetent to handle their own affairs."

Kissinger Men Face Dead End

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON—The morale of Dr. Henry A. Kissinger's talented NSC staffers, many of whom believe themselves victims of back-room persecution by the White House palace guard and the State Department hierarchy, is dropping to an alarming low point for reasons having nothing to do with Dr. Kissinger.

The sense of persecution is well-founded and its symbol is undeniable: National Security Council (NSC) staffers are not given the perquisites of other White House aides. More important is the determination of the State Department, ever more jealous about NSC encroachment on its hereditary turf, to deny promotions and good assignment for Foreign Service officers attached to Kissinger—a discrimination fought by Kissinger but tacitly backed by H. R. (Bob) Haldeman, the mighty White House chief of staff.

Thus, the NSC is becoming a dead end for career Foreign Service diplomats, a fact drenched with irony. White NSC staffers, who helped President Nixon achieve his glorius triumphs (the SALT agreement, the China policy, Vietnamization, the Berlin agreements, among others) are treated shabbily, domestic White House staffers are grandly rewarded despite the implications of Watergate, the failure of Phase III, the ITT scandal and other political disasters.

The irony is directly traceable to Haldeman. It is no secret that Haldeman resents everything about Kissinger—his continuous and highly favorable publicity, his total access to the President and the exemption of his NSC operations from Haleman's iron control. But while Kissinger is perforce immune form Haldeman's vengeance, his aides are not, even with Kissinger's active intervention.

In a city where appearances tell so much, Kissinger's men are members of a special White House underclass. Unlike domestic aides under Haldeman's control, the NSC staffers are denied regular White House transportation, are denied use of the White House mess, are denied parking privileges, are denied entry into the White House box at the Kennedy Center and are denied invitations to state dinners at the White House.

Kissinger's men can easily bear such minor indignities. What has really damaged their morale is the vivid contrast between what is happening to their careers and those of Mr. Nixon's domestic staffers. In the second Nixon administration, the White House domestic staff has produced three under secretaries, six assistant secretaries, six members of presidential commissions and over 20 deputy assistant secretaries.

Contrast that with the treatment of one of Kissinger's important senior staffers, Viron P. Vaky. For 18 months the State Department refused to give Vaky, a career Foreign Service officer, the ambassadorial appointment he was due. Haldeman refused to lift a finger. Finally, Kissinger persuaded Mr. Nixon himself to order the State Department to give Vaky an embassy. It was Costa Rica—scarcely a plum.

At that, Vaky fared better than another brilliant Foreign Service officer, Soviet expert Helmut Sonnenfeldt, who has been Kissinger's invaluable lieutenant in the SALT negotiations. Sonnenfeldt, ostracized by both the Defense and State Departments, is without a new assignment at this writing—and Haldeman has refused to intervene in his behalf.

Fred Rondon, Kissinger's top staffer for Africa and the UN, is being exiled by the State Department bureaucracy to the political section in Lima, Peru. John D. Negroponte, who overworked himself into a hospital as Kissinger's globe-trotting top deputy for Vietnam, is earmarked for similar obscurity in Quito, Ecuador. Another Vietnam expert, Richard W. Smyser, was barred from any suitable job at all at State after two fruitful years with Kissinger. He is now a fellow at the Woodrow Wilson Center.

Kissinger's expert on North Vietnam, William Stearman, has been denied promotion by the State Department for several years despite Kissinger's intervention, and he is not alone. Of seven Foreign Service officers on Kissinger's staff eligible for promotion this year, none was promoted. Despite efforts to enlist the aid of chief-of-staff Haldeman, he did nothing.

Strength For Today

THE COMMON SHRUB RELOW

When some highly cultivated shrub has been grafted to a more common variety of shrub, the common shrub continues to sent up shoots from below to mingle with and mar the beauty of the grated shrub.

Our spiritual natures are grafted onto our physical natures. But as long as we live, the shoots will come up from the old common shrub, and if we want the beauty and glory of the grafted shrub to be unimpaired, we have to busy ourselves keeping these ugly growths pruned off. Up through humility will come arrogance and self-assertiveness. Up through faith will come doubt. Up through love will spring thoughts springing from hate, envy, and jealousy.

Our lower nature constantly threatens the beauty of our higher nature. With the help of God we have to prune off the shoots of our lower nature lest they choke the growth which stems from the loving purposes of God.

Sunday Morning Notes

Frula, the Yugoslav Dance Troupe, appeared on the ECU Fine Arts Series a few weeks ago.

The performance was spectacular, but Dean of Student Affairs Rudy Alexander says one problem developed.

The university has a well trained staff of technicians which mans spotlights and other equipment for the professional productions.

"They are very well trained and most groups are pleased with the technical quality," Rudy says.

For Frula, however, the road manager was to act as director of the lighting and he was to give instructions to the technicians by intercom as the performance progressed.

This seems simple enough except that the road manager, who spoke some English to the technicians before the performance, lasped into his native tongue once the show was underway. Well sir, the technicians didn't understand the foreign language and the result was spotlights on the left stage when dancers came on from the right, some pretty wild colored lights at times and other miscues.

ALVIN TAYLOR

The performance was excellent however, and the audience hardly noticed the lighting problems.

Rudy got a long memorandum from the chief technician after the performance explaining the problems with the foreign language speaking road manager.

That wasn't the only problem the local technicians had in keeping things going.

Seems the beautiful and little girl dancers had to make quick changes between dances. There wasn't time for trips to dressing rooms, so the pretty young things made their changes right in the wings off the Wright Auditorium stage, in the true show biz tradition.

Needless to say this was disconcerting to the stage hands, who kept bumping into each other and tripping over their tongues.

Somehow, though, it all worked out and the show went on.

Build Pipe Line

(Henderson Dispatch)

While the country faces an oil shortage, which is steadily becoming more serious, one obstacle after another is thrown in front of the proposal to build a pipe line to reach a superabundance on the north slope of Alaska. Instead of moving to tap oil supplies that are plentiful in the far northern continent, this country, at least at present, is content to depend upon oil rich Arab sheikdoms in the Middle East. That source could be cut off at the whim of the rulers of the small states, either by imposition of prohibitive prices or by some political treaty that would prove disastrous to the United States.

If claims of a prospective serious shortage are justified, this country is playing with fire in relying upon the Middle East. War of some dimensions could create an emergency, if not a real disaster. And all because of lethargy in Washington as to the Alaskan pipe line.

The Alaskan source could not be made available on short notice. Two years of more would be needed to build the line across the 49th State to its southern shores, and thence south to ports where the oil could be shipped by huge tankers to various parts of the country. That is on U.S. territory, too, and would be untouchable by political dealings in the Middle East, or the oil rich rulers who call the signals.

Before two major wars, this country buried its head in the sand like the ostrich, so to speak, hoping the danger would go away. When the blow fell, America was wholly unprepared. Today, the nation's mounting demand for petroleum is large dependent upon the Middle East.

A circuit court held against construction of the Alaskan pipe line, and the decision was upheld by the Supreme Court, tossing the hotpotato back upon the doorstep of Congress. There is no gelling how long it will be before Congress, in its slow mving pace, gets around to authorizing development of the north slope oil fields. Private companies are eager to start the project. Few others appear to be. Too many people are complacent in the belief that all's well in the Middle East. But is just may not be.

The pipe line should be given approval and development pushed as rapidly as possible. Delay could prove disastrous.

Airline With A Profit

By JOHN F. SIMS

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — A company suffers a major disaster. The next day the company's employes offer to contribute all their savings to help get the company back on its feet.

The company was Middle East Airlines (MEA). The disaster occurred in December, 1968, when Israeli troops blew up MEA's entire fleet at Beirut airport.

"We didn't take up the employes' offer," general manager Asaad Nasr said recently. "But I think the offer in itself shows the spirt of the MEA staff."

Middle East is one of the few world airlines making a profit. Since its founding in 1927 the airline has had two deficit years: 1958 when Lebanon was undergoing a civil war, and 1968 after the airline lost its fleet.

Figures for 1972 are just in, and show a profit of $8.5 million.

"Some people think losing our fleet did us good," Nasr said. "But it really wasn't like Germany or Japan rising from the ashes.

"For instance our insurance premiums rose by nearly 4 million dollars a year. We had regular services running the next day, but the amounts we had to pay for replacement aircraft on loan were staggering."

Nasr said Middle East Airlines had learned to live with the political situation between Arab countries and Israel.

"But we've learned the lesson," he said. "Now we keep ourselves lean, ready for emergencies. And we have up to date intelligence on availability of replacement aircraft and so on. We wouldn't get caught again."

Others Credit Nasr

Other MEA staff say much of the credit for the airline's success goes to Nasr, a man they call "the film star" because of his close resemblance to actor omar Sharif.

The airline will not take on routes simply for political reasons or to take a subsidy from the government.

The House Finance Committee yesterday voted for a 3 per cent general sales tax to be included in the new North Carolina revenue bill.

The city was recovering today from a hectic night of fire alarms. Four times the bull throated whistle atop the City Hall bellowed its warning of fire and each time two firetrucks with sirens blaring dashed from one section to another in search of fire. Two of the alarms were false.

Effect Of A Boycott Can Vary

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Do boycotts work? We really can't say for certain that they work in the food markets. In fact, the weight of evidence suggests that they grow increasingly ineffective as time passes and emotions fade away.

But in the stock market they work.

Once again brokers are laying off salesmen. Thirty-three per cent of New York Stock Exchange member firms lost money in January, 56 per cent in February. Many companies are worried about their low price-earnings ratios.

The reason? Disinterest on the part of hundreds of thousands of individual investors. Shareowner population is estimated to have declined by 800,000 in the past 12 months. Many other shareowners aren't trading.

The NYSE has expressed worry about the situation and recently suggested it was considering the possibilities of a general increase in commissions to make up for the spreading red ink.

Such a move, it is widely believed, would affectg the symptom but not the cause. And conceivably it could deepen the problem by driving away even more investors.

Several theories, all containing at least some truth, are offered in explanation for the flight of the investor, which was knocked down volume on the American Exchange by 42 per cent in little more than four years.

—Repeated revelations concerning the sloppy business practices of some brokers. Chaotic record-keeping, lost securities, misuse of funds, failures and the like have followed each other in almost ticker-tape fashion.

—Fear of the big institutions, such as insurance companies and mutual and pension funds, which account for much of the trading today and which, despite their arguments to the contrary, can produce sudden price shifts.

—The rising cost of buying shares.

As illustrated in current testimony before the House Ways and Means Committee, many members of the securities industry believe that the eventual solution to the problem lies in tax legislation, specifically in reducing the levy on capital gains.

If this were done, they say, hundreds of millions of dollars worth of properties, mainly securities and real estate, would come onto the market. As it is, they maintain, these properties are withheld because of high taxes.

Most of the pressure for lower taxes originates within the investment community itself, but it appears to be spreading to include corporations which fear impairment of their ability to raise capital.

Observations From Editorial Columns

Japanese Boast

It seems that no automaker in the world can meet anti-polution requirements of the Environmental Protection Agency—except the Japanese. And so, another challenge is facing the American manufacturers.

Two Japanese automakers testified Monday that they could mass produce cars that will meet the 1975 anti-polution requirements. Their testimony marked the first time a major world automaker told the EPA panel that it could meet its standards.

It is another example of the aggressive, technical wizardry of the Japanese. The Japanese firms base their claims on test performances of cars equipped with engines that are currently being mass produced in the United States.

No one at this moment can forsee how the big challenge from the Orient is going to be met. But one at this moment can can forsee how the big challenge from the Orient is goint to be met. Bit

No one at this moment can forsee how the big challenge from the Orient is going to be met. But it is a certainty that Detroit is not happy with the boastful claims of its competitor. There will doubtless be renewed activity at Motor City drawing boards now.—Monroe (La.) News-Star.

Home Not Bad

American military families retiring and staying in Europe are encoutering economic problems they never dreamed of. Some make the inflation crisis at home seem like a picnic.

For instance these families quickly discover that canned foods are five to six times more expensive on the European market, that pasteurized milk often isn't available at any price, that refrigerated foods and the means to refrigerate them, if they exist, are well beyond the means of the average retiree. And U. S. standard housing is available only to the wealthy.

In Madrid, a box of tissues cost $1, cigarettes 60 cents a pack, a bottle of ketchup $1. A maid can be hired for $15 a week but the high cost of almost everything else usually eliminates that luxury.

Half the people attempting overseas retirement doggedly stick it out for about six months, then head for home, where the living is easier even with our high prices. — Wichita Falls (Tex.) Record-News

The Price Solution

We see that Phase 3 has failed. Or anyway, that is rapidly becoming the conventional wisdom now that the consumer price index pole-vaulted after price controls were relaxed. We are already hearing increasingly loud demands for more and better price controls.

Little matter that the biggest jump has been in food prices, where Phase 3 is no different from Phase 2. Food prices accounted for two-thirds of the 0.8 per cent February increase. So, demands are rising to put new controls on unprocessed foods.

Little matter that the reason food prices are going up so fast is that the supply is not large enough to meet the demand, and that holding down prices is not exactly the way to increase supplies.

Why bother with details? If the problem is the law of supply and demand, have Congress repeal it. — Wall Street Journal

Bicyles Built For You

Nations where nationalism is rampant would be enraged at a tiny news item from Britain: "Raleigh Industries of America, a subsidiary of Tube Investments of Birmingham, England, is planning to build a plant in Oklahoma to assemble bicycles from imported parts; when fully operational the plant will employ about 1,000 people."

We aren't offended at all. On the contrary, if creating 1,000 jobs for Americans is economic imperialism, let's have more of it. — Miami (Fla.) Herald

Non-Food Cost Rise Up Front

By GEORGE GALLUP

Copyright 1973, Field Enterprises, Inc. All rights reserved. Republication in whole or part strictly prohibited, except with the written consent of the copyright holders.

PRINCETON, N. J., One point likely to be overlooked in the current furor over food prices is the fact that non-food costs today comprise a larger share of the median amount the public says is needed to make ends meet than was true 25 years ago.

In 1947, food costs represented one-half of the median amount the public said was the minimum needed to make ends meet. At that time a Gallup survey revealed the public felt a family of four required $43 to get along, $21 of which they said was spent for food.

The latest survey shows that food costs represent a far smaller proportion—one-fourth—of total costs. It should be kept in mind, though, that this is due to some extent to the larger number of "needs" than was the case in 1947—i.e., more vacations, two cars, more electrical appliances, etc.

As the Gallup Poll reported March 2, the public's median estimate of what a family of four needs per week to make ends meet is a record high of $149 today. the same survey howed that the median food expediture record is $37 per week.

Both sets of figures reported are for non-farm families.

Nothing So Awful About Those Tax Loopholes

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

Some time between now and next Sunday night, my wife and I will sign a thick sheaf of tax forms, write out walloping checks to the Internal Revenue Service and the Treasurer of Rappahannock County, Va., and we will both say ouch, which is a modest four-letter word. In millions of American households the same spring rites will be observed.

Because I want to say some contrary things on this business of tax reform, a personal disclaimer may be in order. I am not involved in capital gains. We own positively no municipal bonds or oil wells. There isn't a tax shelter in sight. These final tax payments, State and Federal, will represent roughly half of my net income for 1972. Every year, when the computer gets to my return, a scoreboard lights up with a gleeful message: Hello, sucker.

So much for the disclaimer. Walter Mondale, the Senator from Minnesota, popped off the other day on this matter of "loopholes" in the tax law. He had obtained some figures from the IRS, indicating that 276 Americans with incomes of more than $100,000 in 1971 paid no Federal income tax. The Senator called the situation "absolutely outrageous and intolerable," and he demanded that the loopholes be closed. His statement won him a nice four-column headline in the morning Post.

Meanwhile, the CBS "60 Minutes" Show took a look at these same loopholes. Reporter Mike Wallace talked with Texas millionaire H. Ross Perot, who paid $29 million in income taxes last year but who would have paid twice as much if it hadn't been for capital gains. Wallace also talked with a Palm Beach, Fla., millionaire, who paid no taxes last year on $50,000 interest on municipal bonds.

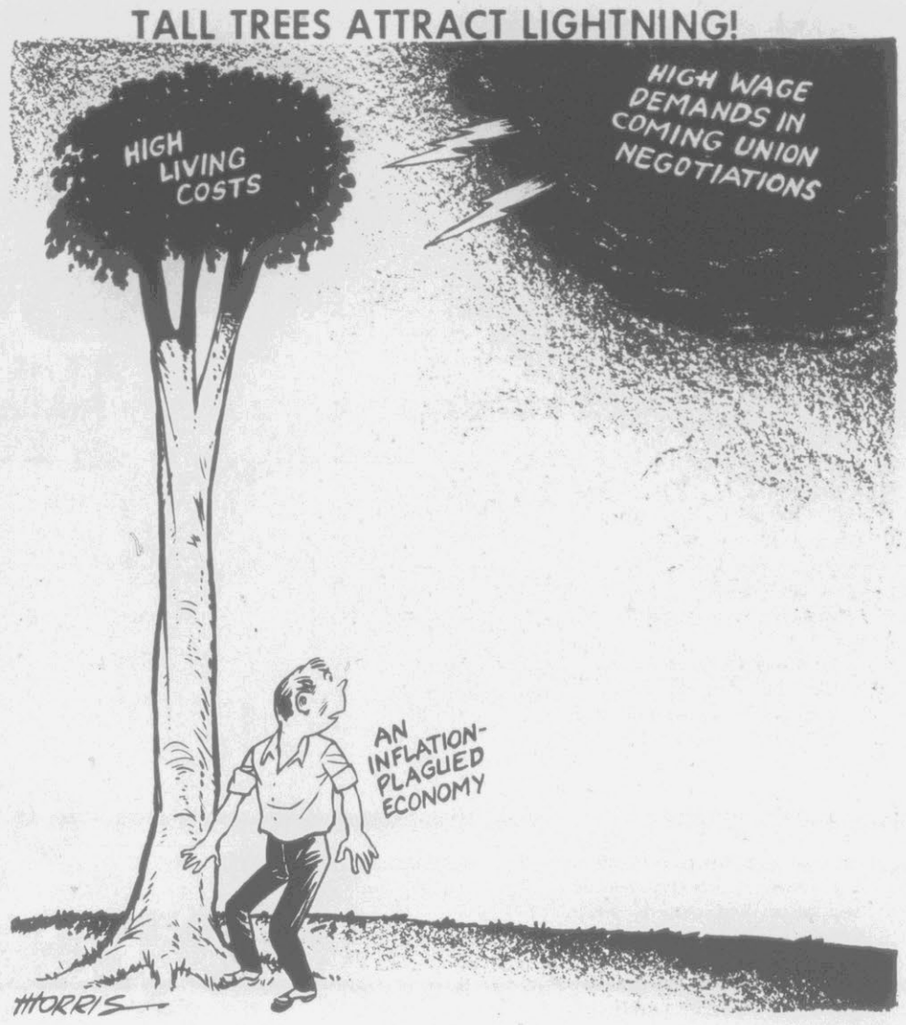
To the typical apostle of tax reform—Philip Stern, for one example—this is all wrong. It is "welfare for the rich." The Treasury is losing $2.5 billion a year, said Stern, in taxes it might be collecting on the bond interest. He proposed that American cities, which now issue tax-exempt bonds at, say, 4 percent, be required hereafter to issue fully taxable bonds. These would cost, say, 8 percent, but Stern would make up the difference with a Federal subsidy. The Palm Beach millionaire would get hooked, the Treasury would benefit, and justice would triumph. Stern made it sound easy.

The trouble is that much of this glib talk of "closing loopholes" has no more substance than an April breeze. Some reforms are indeed needed, chiefly in the direction of simplification for the taxpayer in middle-income brackets, but the public intelligence is insulted by suggestions that there's some easy road to the New Jerusalem of tax reform. There's no such road.

The tax exemption on municipal bonds, so I am told, dates from the very begining of a Federal income tax. The idea was, and is, to benefit the cities (which is to say, the people who live in the cities and pay real estate taxes) by keeping bond interest costs low. The system has worked. Because of the attractiveness of the tax-exempt feature, municipalities have been able to market billions of dollars in bonds. This is how we build city halls and schools.

Now, suppose the critics prevail, and the system is abolished. An amendment to the Tax Code, making such interest taxable, cound not possibly apply to bonds already issued. The Palm Beach millionaire wouldn't get clipped at all. Stern's proposal could apply only to future bonds. What then? The wealthy individual who bought $100,000 in 8 percent municipals would get $8,000, instead of the $4,000 he would have had a 4 percent. If he's then taxed at a 50 percent rate, he still has the $4,000 he would have had to begin with. It sounds like something out of Abbott and Costello, or the Marx Brothers gone to the races.

If the reformers fiddle much more with oil depletion, they will discourage the exploration we sorely need. If they double the taxes of an H. Ross Perot, half as much private capital remains for investment in jobs and machinery. The loopholes, in brief, may not be so awful after all. Closing them, without prayerful thought, could make matters worse.



The Ladies Missed Out On Basic Economics In Their Years At School

By GEORGE BRYANT, JR.

We were afraid we would have our eyeballs jerked out with the tears, so we turned off the big meat boycott show. Couldn't take it.

Our heart went out to one housewife. We knew she was young and sweet, too. She had four young'uns. An on the radio she sounded so helpless as she told her tale of woe to the popular "talk show" man, who was also upset.

Seems that the day before she had gone out in the old car (didn't say what year) and picked up the kids. On the way back, she stopped at the super market to "pick up" steak for dinner, but balked at the $1.89 price. She settled for some ground beef and went her way, clearly unmerry. Then came the hard wrench.

"I sat there at the table and watched my children eat that hamburger," she told the radio audience, "and I got madder and madder. I was so mad I thought about writing President Nixon and letting him know just how I felt."

That was real sad, her having to force hamburgers on her kids, while a bunch of profiteers were raking in the dough and the Nixon Administration was somehow getting a bang out of it.

Then, there was the lady who sounded resolute, even defiant. She came over the radio as something of a discoverer—an inventor. She offered her listeners, mostly sympathetic, no doubt, a meatless dish. She sounded astonished by her own skill.

She had achieved the feat of getting a meal without beef, alright. She told a casserole dish, made of crab meat and cheese. Sounded real good, until you thought about the price of back fin lump.

The farmers have come through with a few friends. But this side of the stroy isn't very interesting. You kind of get bogged down when facts intrude on emotions. So, the protest side seems willing to skip them.

Of course, this might not have been deliberate. It could be that, even in this day of Women's Lib, our modern housewife is something of an economic illiterate. This, of course, is not her fault. Our schools don't do much of a job in teaching about the market place.

We have listened to what the protesting ladies have had to say and we have read their comments in the papers. But we can't recall any housewife comments about how much family income has climbed in recent years.

The ladies seemed to feel they should be able to take their inflated incomes and buy what they want, at non-inflated prices. That may be understanable. But it is unrealistic.

Since 1965, when the present inflation got started, per capita disposable income has climbed more than 62 per cent. Through December, 1972, the rise in food prices had been 33 per cent. That leaves a big gain in buying power.

The housewife, especially in recent years, has come to regard beef as a "convenience" food—handy and quick. This has saved her a lot of worry about what to have for the next meal.

Th result is that there has been a tremendous rise in per capita consumption of beef. For those who can recall, 1940 was a pretty good year. War in Europe was ending our depression. At that time, per capita consumption of beef was about one-third the record 118 pounds annual rate early this year.

When you wipe away the tears, the plain fact is that the demand for beef, and the money to finance it, has outrun the supply. Price has a harsh way of balancing supply and demand.

The real disturbing thing about the meat spectacular is that the same sort of thing is happening in other areas of the economy, but on an even larger scale. Fuel, all kinds, is in short supply, with prices rising. It's the same story in lumber and other building materials. Key industrial commodities, especially those which must be imported, are coming up short of demand.

Unless there is more restraint on deficit spending and on wage demands, key inflation-makers, then the boom will soon run out. There's rising fear of a recession in the making.

Today In History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Sunday, April 8, the 98th day of 1973. There are 267 days left in the year.

By JOHN KILGO

RALEIGH — The never-ending fight over liquor-by-the-drink is once again a pack of dynamite—and the drys are going to pull out all stops to defeat mixed drink legislation in the General Assembly.

It had been thought that Rep. Sam Johnson's bill call for a statewide vote on liquor-by-the-drink would pass without much of a fuss. Coy Privette, head of the Christian Action League, and Marse Grant, editor of the Biblical Recorder, had apparently welcomed a chance to have the question voted on statewide.

But now that Johnson's liquor bill has been amended in committee, Privette tells me: "They've liberalized the bill to the point that it is no longer a statewide referendum but a straw vote to allow local option elections. We've always been against local option. This is the pro-liquor forces way of nibbling you to death."

A House subcommittee amended the Johnson bill to do away with mini-bottles and allow the liquor to be poured from big bottles. It also amended the bill to say a county wanting liquor-by-the-drink, would have to vote on it a second time after the statewide referendum.

Drys contend allowing liquor to be poured out of "big" bottles rather than using mini-bottles increases profits for those holding liquor licenses, and offers more chance for corruption.

"The liquor bill is now totally unacceptable to us," Privette said. "We will call on our friends in the House to defeat it. We think we have the strength to do it. But failing that, I believe the bill would have very tough sledding in the Senate."

Privette says the Senate has taken tough stands on drunk driving bills this session, and he sees that as a barometer indicating "that this is a bad year for pro-liquor measures."

Privette says the drys had serious reservations about Johnson's original bill, calling for a statewide referendum and the use of mini-bottles.

"We were very concerned about the alleged wrongdoings within some parts of the ABC system," Privette said. "Now here comes this amended bill which, if passed, would increase those problems tenfold. We're against the Johnson bill as amended and will fight it. We hope and we think we have enough friends in the Legislature to kill it."

Rep. Johnson, by the way, says he thinks the changes made in committee make his bill a better one.

For a Legislature trying to get out of town by mid-May, the new developments on the liquor front could hardly be described as encouraging.

Atlantic route, for instance, is coldly pragmatic.

"Beirut is a growing center for business in what can be considered the richest area in the world," Nasr said. "Oil is the attraction, but there also will be increased trade, banking, industry."

MEA, if its application to the U.S. Civil Aviation Board (CAB) is accepted, will offer daily flights between Beirut and New York from the beginning of 1974. The planes will make a brief refueling stop.

The airline is seeking to collaborate with another Arab airline, perhaps Kuwait Airways or Saudia, to minimize cost.

"Our assessment shows we will break even in the first year," Nasr said.

Nasr is a statistician by training. He believes in figures: like $8.5 million dollars profit in a year and the $30 million MEA has in reserve.

Growth Statistics Fail To Tell Full Story Of ECU's Influence

By DR. LEO W. JENKINS
Chancellor, East Carolina University

We are asked frequently to update comparative statistics on the growth rate and size of East Carolina University as an indicator of the university's outreach and influence upon the educational and economic growth of the region it serves.

We are happy to furnish these figures—we are proud of them—but always we emphasize that the bare, cold statistics do not tell the full story. The story briefly, in my opinion, is one of good, sound and substantial growth in Eastern North Carolina as a whole.

At the present time, according to our office of institutional research and statistics, we have an enrollment of 10,286 and employment of 1,847 faculty and staff at East Carolina University.

And by the way, the campus security chief reports a registration of approximately 7,000 automobiles on campus in Greenville.

The impact of this concentration of student body, faculty and staff upon the immediate area is obvious.

It is estimated for example that East Carolina University will spend more than 225 million dollars in the Greenville community during the next decade for faculty and staff salaries and for other operating expenses. An additional 145 million dollars will be spent by students which means that East Carolina University will be pumping more than 370 million dollars into the local economy.

For the coming fiscal year, 1973-74, alone the university's requested operating budget is $24.5 million.

When this figure, $24.5 million, is compared with the school's operating budget for 1960-61 which was $4.2 million, a tremendous growth rate is indicated. And there are projections of a 25 per cent increase in university enrollment and employment during the next 10 years.

These are enrollment, employment and dollars and cents figures. They speak for themselves, but again this is not all of the ECU story. What is the real impact upon the community and the region served by East Carolina University?

For one thing Greenville is rapidly becoming a regional medical center encouraged by the emerging ECU School of Medicine and our well established School of Allied Health.

Greenville has witnessed a rather large increase in medical and health-related services and facilities, due not only to the medical and allied health effort of the university but also to such things as the alcoholic rehabilitation center in Greenville, a soon-to-be constructed $12 million hospital and 50 bed vocational rehabilitation center.

Again, this is just part of the overall picture of substantial growth and gain in most all of Eastern North Carolina. Social and cultural advantages are being developed and improved. Industrial and commercial development is spurting upward. Business activity is better. Check local figures on real estate and housing booms, loans by banks and other financial institutions.

It is apparent in almost every category, in almost every county, city and town in this region that Eastern North Carolina, long a sleeping giant, is stirring.

Education, educational opportunity for all our people, stimulates this awakening and is an essential part of enlightened progress. It is the goal of East Carolina University to perform this service.

New Detector May Help Tornado Warning System

By WILLIAM FRANCIS

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Bill Vardeman knows what fear is, and how nature can turn on man with awesome power when the skies turn grey over a west Texas town.

March 10 of this year Vardeman was huddled with his family in one room of his mobile home in Hubbard, Tex., when a rush of wind lifted the trailer into the air and then tore it apart.

"It sounded like a whole big roll of thunder. It just kept coming. My home is all over everywhere," Vardeman said.

But Vardeman was lucky. He and his family survived. Six other persons were killed that winter day in Hubbard when a tornado whipped through the town.

Mrs. Bailey Duncan will never forget the twister and the incredible sight she saw when her neighbor, Randy Sudduth, tried to escape the force of the wind.

"He heard the storm coming and he ran and got into his car and tried to get away. But the storm picked up the car and threw it 25 feet and it was all bent up. And his trailer was destroyed, too."

Sudduth needed hospital care, but lived.

Predict Tornadoes

Allen D. Pearson feels a responsibility for Sudduth and for the people who were killed. In his role as director of the severe storms forecast center of the National Weather Service in Kansas City, it is Pearson's job to predict where tornadoes, hurricanes and severe storms will occur, and then to warn people to take shelter.

The forecasting is not Pearson's toughest job. He says the advent of weather satellites, computers and sophisticated radar have turned meteorology into an exacting and generally precise science.

Getting the word to people in danger that a tornado is approaching is the larger problem, and means of improving communications take up much of Pearson's time and energy.

His highest hopes now for saving lives rest with a small, inexpensive electronic box that measures high levels of energy in the atmosphere. Severe storms produce high energy.

Pearson says the new device may be the answer for small communities such as Hubbard which are unable to afford radar and other expensive equipment.

"Large cities use radar. The trouble is that it is so expensive, costing between $50,000 and $150,000," Pearson said in an interview.

"There is a limit to what big city stations can do for little towns with no radio or television stations. Small towns, civic groups and police stations could all afford to buy the detectors, which cost about $500."

Can't Tell Difference

He said the detector "tends to cry 'wolf' a little bit because it can't tell the difference between a thunderstorm with a lot of electricity and a tornado."

Expansion of communication, such as via radio and television stations, has aided the weather service in its warning role. Weather-aware stations in the tornado belt of the South and Midwest often broadcast the service's tornado watches and warnings almost as they come across a special weather wire. But because a tornado is mercurial—it forms and dies within minutes—and because people do not listen to radio or watch TV at all times, such warnings still often fail to save lives.

The number of deaths resulting from tornadoes has been cut sharply in recent years, in part because of stricter building codes.

"Chances of being hurt in a major tornado are very slight now," Pearson said, "but because of urban sprawl and the proliferation of mobile homes, the impact on cities is greater.

Next National Disaster

"My greatest fear is a tornado whipping through a large mobile home park. I predict the next really big national disaster will come at a large mobile home site."

Twenty-seven persons died in tornadoes in 1972, Pearson said. An estimated 2,500 persons have died in them since weather records have been kept. Another 1,500 persons have been killed in hurricanes.

Hurricanes, though wreaking destruction over wider areas than tornadoes, are in some ways less dangerous. Warning time can often be measured in hours, and scientists in recent years have learned to modify the force of hurricanes with chemicals. The life of a tornado is too short and its birth too sudden for successful modification.

Study Greenville In Rental Housing Research

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Greenville is one of four small North Carolina cities that are to be studied in a major rental housing research project under the auspices of the Center for Urban and Regional Studies at the University of North Carolina and Chapel Hill.

Working with a research grant awarded by the National Science Foundation, Professor Michael A. Stegman and research associate Howard Sumka have been to Greenville several times in recent months to coordinate the Greenville study with City Manager William Carstarphen. They also worked with former City Planner Dillon Watson before his resignation from that post.

Again in Greenville earlier this week, the two briefly discussed some of the things they hope The North Carolina Housing Market Study, the official name of the program, will accomplish, especially in the field of rental housing.

"We're trying to understand how prices and quality levels are established in rental property," Stegman said. "We hope to find to what extent various local policies and programs affect quality and condition of rentals."

Sumka, a full time research associate, said "Greenville, Lexington Kinston and Statesville have been chosen as typical smaller North Carolina cities that should give us a comprehensive viewpoit of the private housing market." Sumka said the research is not being made as a case study of the four cities.

"We'll not publish statistics on any one city," Stegman said, "instead, the information will be funneled into an overall picture."

The basic plan of the research, for which a three year NSF grant has been made available, Stegman commented, "is to pay attention to non-metropolitan areas in the rental housing market. That really is the gist of the study."

In a press release explaining the purpose and goals of the study in detail, it is stated that "The Center for Urban and Regional Studies believes that national housing policy may be becoming unduly biased by the emphasis of research findings from northeastern cities."

To counterbalance this, the center has planned the North Carolina study to "redress the balance and to bring some of the problems and the needs of smaller cities to the attention of those who make national housing policy decisions."

Another point stressed is that of the role of the landlord. "One major premise of the study is that the collection of housing data from members of the investment community—the landlords—is a necessary basis for any meaningful discussion of housing policy at the local state and federal levels of government."

Asked about eventual disposition of data gained from the proposed research program Stegman said "the results will be available to local governments, planners and state agencies interested in this information. The National Science Foundation, of course, is interested in the results of our research."

Sumka said "we'll be going into field work on the program here possibly in late May or early in June."

Boys Club Week Being Observed

The Greenville-Pitt County Boys' Club will be observing National Boys' Club Week beginning today and continuing through Saturday.

This year, the national theme is Good news about good kids, honoring the more than a million boys across America who are members of the Boys' Club who are dedicated to the ideal that "Boys Club members build juvenile decency."

The Boys' Club of America, founded in the early part of this century, is celebrating its 67th anniversary this year. Clubs are currently located in more tha 650 cities, villages and towns in every state of the U.S. The number of Boys' Clubs in America not long ago passed the 1,000 — doing so a full three years ahead of the projected date for this historic milestone.

In Greenville, a couple of hundred regulars at the Boy's Club on Skinner Street will be busy playing games, reading in the club's library, taking part in craft sessions, and taking part in half a dozen other regular activities which are part of the Greenville club's comprehensive program.

This week too, the Jaycess sponsored wrestling match, for which proceeds go to the Boys' Club of Greenville-Pitt County, will take place at Memorial Gymn on Thursday night. A number of the boys who are members of the club will be helping at this event.

Graham Gutting, executive director of the local club, says "this will be an ideal week for people to take time to come by the Boys' Club to see what our program is like. We're happy to have people come visit us."

Boosters Club Meets Tuesday

The Rose High School Band Boosters Club will meet Tuesday at 8:00 p.m. in the bandroom at Rose High School.

At the meeting, a nominating committee will present a slate of officers for the 1973-74 year.

Plans will also be discussed for the band's trip to Elizabethtown on May 18-19 to participate in the Blueberry Festival.

All booster members and other interested persons are encouraged to attend this last quarterly meeting of the current school year.

Honorary Award To Sea Agent At ECU

Sumner K. Midgett, Sea Agent for the East Carolina University Division of Continuing Education commercial fishing project, is the recipient of an award for outstanding service.

He was named Extension Agent of the Year for the Central Atlantic States and was given an honorary associate membership in the National Federation of Fishermen.

The award was announced by William G. Mustard, associate director of the Washington, D.C. office of the Federation at the annual meeting of the Sound and Sea Fishmermen's Association, Inc. at Nags Head.

Midgett has been the ECU Division's Sea Agent for the past year and has been active in the development of new techniques in harvesting fish for commercial fishermen.

He is involved with the fishermen on an individual and group basis, demonstrating new equipment, introducing more efficient harvesting methods, upgrading sanitation and quality control and acting and liaison between the fishermen and state federal agencies.

Plan Vegetarian Dinner Sale

There will be a "take out" vegetarian dinner served at the Greenville Seventh-day Adventist Church Sunday.

The times are 5-7 p.m. at the church, which is located on E. 10th Street.

Duplex Could Serve Double Purpose

By GERRY BISHOP

To paraphrase the marriage broker, two can live for the price of one—two families that is.

This analogy applies to the investor who puts his money into a duplex. He lives on one side and rents the other half. It's an income property that provides shelter as well.

Associated House Plans has designed an ideal two-story deuplex in the Chardon. Each unit enjoys privacy—similar to a one-family home. And the traditional exterior design masks the duplex concept. In fact, the Chardon would easily fit into a neighborhood of one-family dwellings.

Brick veneer construction is used on the first floor. A mansard roof enclosed the second story. Shutters dress up the first-floor windows. Dormer-like windows are cut into the roof. The main entrances are side by side providing the only duplex clue.

Each unit includes a large living room, laundry room, kitchen with dining area and half-bath on the first floor. Upstairs there are three bedrooms and two baths. A full basement provides space for a recreation room and storage. Each side has a single garage side by side to form a wing.

The front door opens into the living room which is spacious—approximately 20 feet by 13 feet. One opening leads to the kitchen, another to the powder room and utility room. Stairs rise to the second floor.

The kitchen is exceptionally large. It has plenty of room for dining and contains a handy arragement of built-in appliances and cabinets. The built-in desk is a plus.

A large rear terrace is connected to the kitchen. This would be convenient for meals in nice weather or relazation on summer evening.

The utility room is near the kitchen and has space for a washer and dryer.

The three dedrooms and two full baths on the second floor are enhanced by an abundance of closets. One bedroom has a private bath and would serve as the master.

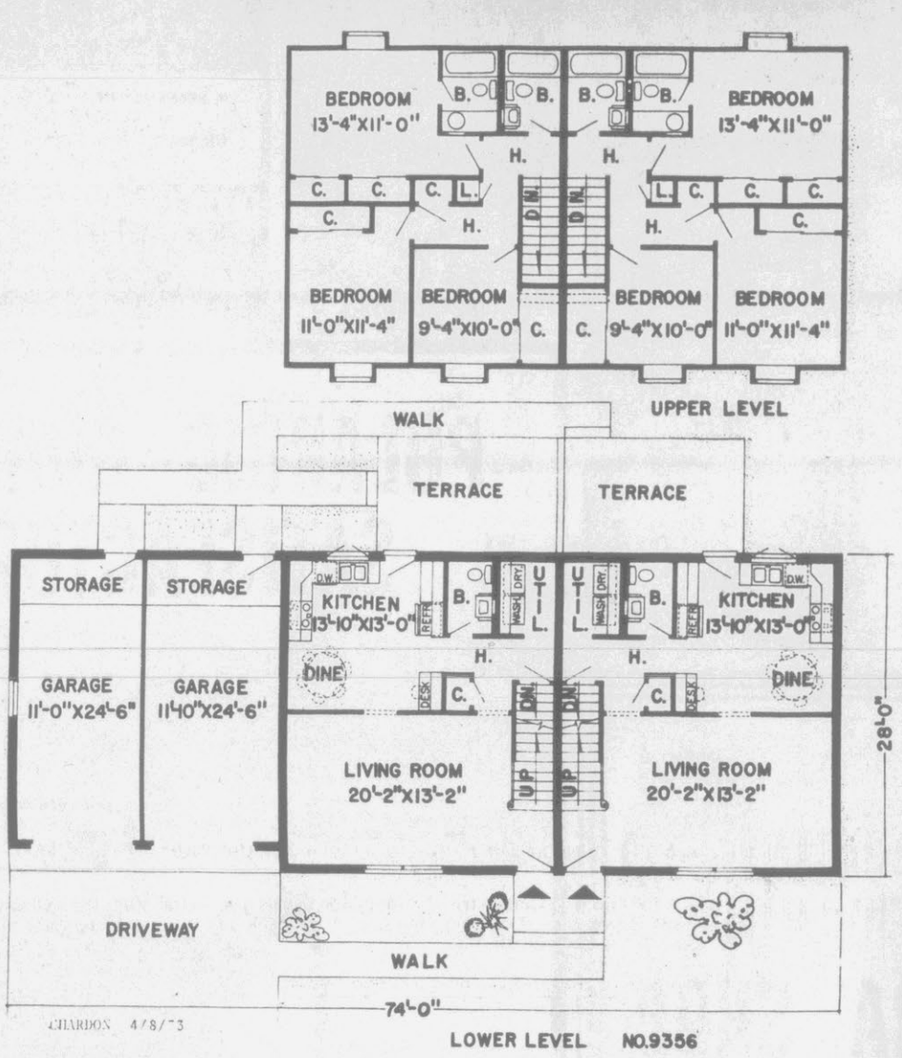
The exterior dimension are 74 feet by 28 feet.



A DOUBLE TAKE — The Chardon, designed by Associated House Plans, would be an ideal investment. Each unit has a large living room, laundry room, kitchen with dining area and a half bath on the first floor. Upstairs there are three bedrooms and two baths. A full basement provides space for a recreation room and storage. Each side has a single garage.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — We bought a house about three months ago. It was a new house in a new development. The walls in the living room have developed a number of cracks. My neighbor, whose house was built at the same time, does not have this problem.

The builder says to wait a couple of months longer, then cover the cracks with patching plaster. He says I must do the work myself. The walls are made of real plaster and are not plasterboard. Can you tell me why the walls cracked and why they didn't crack next door? And why must I wait to fix them?

A. — I cannot give any opinion on whether you or the builder should fix the cracks. Obviously, if you had no written agreement covering such repairs, you'll have to do the job yourself. The reason for waiting is that the cracks may get longer during the next few months. They are not likely to get wider, although this is a slight possibility. This sometimes happens in a new house until it settles solidly in the ground. It is not unusual for it to happen to one house and not to the one next door.

To make sure that the cracks have stopped lengthening, place a light chalk or pencil mark at the end of every crack. If the crack doesn't get longer for the next three or four months, the house probably has stopped settling and you can get ahead with the repairs. Use patching plaster that you can purchase in a hardware store or lumber yard.

While an ordinary mixture calls for enough water to make the plaster somewhat the consistency of dough, a bit more water should be used for narrow cracks. This is so that the watery mixture can be forced into the openings and smoothed with a trowel or wood float. After waiting a few days, cover the patches with a little white paint. Wait another day or two, then go over the repaired areas with paint that matches the walls. You'll just have to do the best you can about getting a good match. I'm sorry to say that in some cases the new paint will stand out and you may have to do the entire wall.

(You can get either of Andy Lang's booklets, "Paint Your House Inside and Out" or "Wood Finishing in the Home" by sending 30 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y. 11743.)

Palm Springs Is 'Conventional'

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (UPI) — The annual number of convention delegates meeting in this desert resort city averages more than 100,000, the Convention and Visitors Bureau reports.

The groups range from the Mens and Boys Apparel Guilds, which has about 8,000 members here one week each October to view Spring styles, to the 40 representatives of the Pickle Packers International, who meet in January.

All of us are constantly looking for additional storage space. And one of the ways we find it, in a rather haphazard fashion, is by utilizing whatever extra space there is in the garage or, sometimes, by strewing enough things about the garage so that the auto has to be left outside.

With virtually no knowledge of carpentry — and even if you are a confirmed non-do-it-yourselfer — you can create plenty of extra storage space and still leave room for your car. Of course, if you have a very large auto in a very small garage and you risk damaging your car door every time you open it and must drive right up against the rear wall so that the back end of the auto won't be sticking out, you'll have a more difficult time. In most cases, though, the space is there and you need only to use it properly.

The walls of the majority of garages in the suburbs are open; that is, the studs on the inside are visible. All that is necessary for the storage of bottles and other articles that aren't too wide is to place shelves between the studs. Attach small strips of wood along the outer edges of the shelves to keep things from sliding off. The shelves can be attached in any way you wish, the simplest being to rest them on small wooden cleats on the inside of the studs.

When even a few extra inches will not interfere with the movement of your car or the opening of doors, the space between the studs can be utilized for cabinets. They need not be fancy. No matter how inept you think you are, you can hammer together box-like cabinets that will fit between studs. Precision-like work is not essential, since attachment to the studs will supplant the solidity that would be necessary if the cabinets were free-standing. One or two of the cabinets can have simple doors on them so that they can be locked to prevent children or anyone else from touching or taking things they shouldn't.

Both the shelf and cabinet ideas can be expanded if space permits. Wider shelves can be used by attaching them to metal brackets screwed into the outer edges of the studs. And larger cabinets can also be attached to the outer edges of the studs rather than to the insides of them.

Should the studs in the garage be covered by gypsum board or some other material, cut through it to attain the between-studs space you need or build the shelves or cabinets outside of the covering and attach them to the studs.

One of the best space-savers, especially for hanging garden tools and other equipment, is a large piece of perforated hardboard, screwed or hammered into the studding. No skill whatever is required. But you must remember that the metal clips which go into the perforations require some space behind the board. If you are attaching the board to open studs, the space already is there. But if the studs are covered with some kind of wallboard, first put up a few horizontal strips of wood, then attach the perforated hardboard to the strips. Then there will be plenty of space behind the hardboard to hang the clips.

Once you have tackled these simple projects, you will discover and be able to handle other space-saving jobs in the garage. You'll find that you can put up high shelves for items that aren't used too often, hang storage boxes from the ceiling and otherwise utilize overhead space that won't interfere with the movement of the auto.

(Patching concrete and plaster, repairing brickwork and fixing squeaky floors are among the 35 subjects in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," available by sending $1 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J. 07666.)

Answers Timely
Gardening Questions

Q. What kind of vegetables will grow in a shady, damp area? (C. S., Raleigh)

A. Essentially all vegetables grow best in a well-drained sunny garden spot. One of the exceptions is water cress which thrives in running water and a sunny location. Cool season crops, such as green onions, radish, lettuce, cabbage, mustard, and kale will grow better in light shade than will warm season crops like tomatoes, peppers, cucumbers and squash. (A. A. Banadyga, extension horticulturist)

Q. How can I kill wild chrysanthemums? (G. T., Hays)

A. Use casoron in shubbery beds. In flower gardens remove all the flowers and fumigate with methyl bromide and then replant. There is no chemical that will control wild chrysanthemums in vegetable gardens without damaging the vegetables. (Walter A. Skroch, extension horticulturist)

Q. Where can I get a climbing strawberry vine? If I planted one now would I get berries this year? (Mrs. J. P., Monroe)

A. Based on the experience of other people, it is doubtful if you would be satisfied with a climbing strawberry vine. They do poorly in North Carolina. Try one of the conventional varieties such as Atlas, Apollo or Albritton. (Joe Brooks, extension horticulturist)

Q. Is it worth the trouble to remove grass clippings from a fexcue or bluegrass lawn? (B. M., Wake Forest)

A. This is a matter of personnel preference. The removal of clippings makes for a neater looking lawn, reduces thatch buildup and may help in checking disease. (W. M. Lewis, extension agronomist)

Paradise That Is Ceylon Sees Its Troubles Grow

By LEON DANIEL

COLOMBO, Ceylon (UPI) — The usually cheerful people of Ceylon have a worried feeling their island nation is a paradise lost.

The quality of life still is better here than in most of Asia, but the new republic which became known officially as Sri Lanka last May is in deep trouble.

Ceylon teeters on the verge of bankruptcy because, at enormous cost, it imports food it can and should produce itself.

Compounding the problem is the fact that in the years since Ceylon became independent of British rule in 1948 the nation has built an expensive welfare apparatus that promises all citizens just about all the free rice and education they can consume.

Come to Expect

The government has found it politically unfeasible to cut back on costly welfare services the people have come to expect as their right.

Prime Minister Sirimavo Bandaranaike

"You know, of course, that we Sinhalese are lazy," a young journalist said with a disarming grin, and visitors find it difficult to provide polite argument to this frank self-appraisal frequently offered by the Sinhalese who constitute 71 per cent of the 12.5 million people of Ceylon.

Sinhalese, from government officials to taxi drivers, cheerfully admit that most of the really hard work on the island is done by the Tamil minority, which came here from southern India and constitutes 21 per cent of the population.

Although desperately in need of foreign exchange, Ceylon each year barters to China about half its rubber-after tea, its most valuable crop—for rice, while Ceylonese rice paddies lie fallow.

Mrs. Bandaranaike, who consults astrologers, pledged publicly in a recent speech that rice imports will be stopped next year, but foreign experts here maintain there is not a chance Ceylon can achieve self-sufficiency in rice production that soon.

In the same speech, the world's first woman prime minister acknowledged that Ceylon faces its "worst-ever economic crisis." And, she noted, Ceylon "is the only rice-eating country in Asia which has to import rice."

As grim as is the current economic situation, Ceylon today is far more stable politically than it was in April, 1971 when youths calling themselves "Che Guevarists" spearheaded an insurrection that stunned the complacency of the island.

Some observers estimate that as many as 2,200 of the youthful rebels were killed. About 15,000 were jailed. The government claims that all but about 2,000 now have been released and "rehabilitated." Several dozen of the leaders are on trial.

Movement Broken

Although there are reports of scattered incidents of insurgency committed by youths still holding out in jungles in the north, government leaders and diplomatic observers here agree that the back of the movement has been broken.

There is serious unrest among the Tamils who work on the tea plantations, but it is generally considered they are not a potent enough force politically to threaten the socialist government of Mrs. Bandaranaike, who wooed the Communist bloc in Ceylon to win election in May, 1970 to her second term as prime minister after five years out of office.

Under the new constituion which last May made Sri Lanka the world's youngest republic, Mrs. Bandaranaike does not have to face another election until 1977.

The opposition is led by former prime minister Dudley Senanayaké, whose United National Party (UNP) appears not to offer a serious threat at this time. Junius Jayewardene, a top UNP leader, told UPI he himself is prepared to challenge Mrs. Bandaranaike in an election but he sees no possibility of a coup.

The UNP, which in Ceylon passes for a "rightist" organization, could be expected to be more pro-American than the present government and to place more reliance on the private sector to boost the economy. Under Mrs. Bandaranaike, Ceylon is closest to China, which not only supplies rice under the barter arrangement but also in 1971 propped up Ceylon's sagging economy with a 12-year, interest-free cash loan of $26 million.

Ceylon owes more than $1 billion and is looking to borrow more to feed itself. Rice stores are dangerously low. There is even some talk about the possibility of food riots.

There is discontent and even despair among the educated unemployed, the young people who know that the soil of Ceylon is so fertile that seeds take root and grow two crops a year with a minimum of attention.

Many of the 700,000 unemployed in Ceylon are young graduates who believe that, properly governed, their island could be as prosperous as Singapore.

Food Imports

Balance From 1505 onward, Ceylon was colonized in turn by the Portuguese, the Dutch and the British. When the British hauled down the Union Jack a quarter of a century ago they left a balance of $1.2 billion in the bank of the new and independent nation. The money was—literally—eaten up on food imports.

Ceylon earns $300 million a year from tea, rubber, coconut and its other exports, but spends almost half of the proceeds for such basic foods as rice, wheat flour, dried milk, meat and fish.

It is difficult to dwell on such things on an island that still looks very much like paradise, where blue waves break on white beaches, where coconut palms sway in the sea breeze. But for Ceylon a day of reckoning is at hand.

Highlands Are More Popular

EDINBURGH (UPI) — British people took 10.5 million trips of one night or more to Scotland in the first three quarters of 1972, the Scottish Tourist Board reports. This was 1.5 million more than in the comparable period of 1971. The board said British visitors spent a total of 69 million nights in Scotland.

Fifteen young dancers of the North Carolina Dance Theater will be in Greenville this week for two special events—a lecture-demonstration for fifth and sixth grade students at 1:00 p.m. on Tuesday; and a dance concert at McGinnis Auditorium on campus at 8:15 p.m. Thursday.

Established a couple of years ago with the aid of a grant from the Rockefeller Foundation, the dance company tours primarily in the southeastern region of the United States with an offering of a wide variety of programs and associated activites—lecture-demonstrations, master classes and seminars.

The young company has also gained distinction in out of area performances in Europe, at Jacob's Pillow in Massachusetts, and nationally in a television production of Agnes de Mille's The Cherry Tree Legend, produced and distributed by National Educational Television.

A member of the Association of American Dance Companies, the N.C. Dance Theater is currently supported by a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts in Washington, D.C.

Resident at the North Carolina School of Arts in Winston-Salem, the N.C. Dance Theater is a company of talented young men and women, many of them drawn from the ranks of the dance program at the School of the Arts.

At the concert Thursday night, a richly varied program including both ballet and modern works will be presented. Although a relatively new company, the North Carolina Dance Theater has established a fine repertoire of dances that has drawn wide popular and critical acclaim from audiences and critics throughout the South.

Tickets are on sale for the Thursday night performance at McGinnis. The price of an individual ticket is $3.00 for adults and $1.50 for children under 12.

Comeback Waged By Senior Citizen Arquette

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Cliff Arquette is making a courageous comeback for a senior citizen who suffered a heart attack and a paralyzing stroke within a two-week period last April.

He is back on "The Hollywood Squares" now in a camouflaged wheel chair which is pushed onto a ramp by stagehands before the show is filmed.

"I could feel the heart attack coming on," Arquette recalled. "I was driving on the freeway and prayed I could find a police car. Sure enough, I saw the cops pulled off to the side of the road and I stopped right in front of them."

The officers jumped from their cruiser in time for Cliff to tell them he was having a heart attack. Within 10 minutes he was in an intensive care unit of a hospital.

A few days later he suffered the stroke which left him without the use of his left leg and arm. Gradually, his strength has returned. At the moment Cliff is learning to walk again. He uses a cane.

To simplify his life the comedian has moved from his large home in the San Fernando valley to a one-room bachelor apartment near NBC in Burbank.

Two full-time nurses attend Arquette's needs. The day nurse cooks his meals and keeps the apartment shipshape. A male nurse spends the nights with the comedian who made Charley Weaver from Mount Idy a classic American homespun philosopher.

The furnished apartment is only four blocks from the studio where Cliff is driven by the male nurse one evening a week. All five shows are taped from about 6:30 to 11:15 p.m.

Cliff has an electrically operated bed which allows him to raise and lower himself for comfort. At the foot of the bed is a color television set which occupies much of his time.

He has rigged a Rube Goldberg contraption with his cane to turn the set off and on without having to get up.

Therapy

When not watching the tube Cliff exercises his paralyzed limbs toward the day when he can throw away the cane. This summer he hopes to use the apartment swimming pool for therapy.

Before his heart attack Arquette weighed 210 pounds. He left the hospital at 120 pounds but now is a fairly robust 147, aiming for 155.

Cliff is amazingly good natured about his plight and optimistic that he will regain full use of his arm and leg.

To break the monotony of spending most of his time in a single room, he bought a color television camera and tape deck. He tapes shows he enjoys on the tube and replays them at leisure.

He's also telling his life story for the camera, hoping one day to see it all in book form.

Divorced for 15 years, Cliff—who is 67 years old—has no plans for remarrying, although he admits romance still appeals to him.

"Let me put it this way," he says. "When I had that heart attack I thought I would see my whole life pass before my eyes. But it didn't happen. My life is 'X' rated."

Thus far Cliff has received 200,000 letters from friends and fans, all encouraging him to get back on "The Hollywood Squares."

"I may have pushed it a little," he concludes, "but getting back to work was the best therapy I've had."

LOCATION SHOTS

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Harold Lloyd's spacious estate will be used for exterior location shots of "The Don Is Dead," doubling as the home of the leader of a powerful crime syndicate.

Charlotte's Dr. Francis Rabicsek

Book Captures Beauty, Drama of Mayan City

COPAN — HOME OF THE MAYAN GODS. By Francis Robicsek. New York. The Museum of the American Indian, Heye Foundation. 1972, 168 pages, illustrated, color and black and white. $27.50.

Some 3000 years ago a civilization had its beginnings in the region known today as Mexico and Central America. Settlements included village, towns, ceremonial centers, and cities with large, resident populations. Subsistence was based on agriculture, and crops such as maize, beans, squash, and chili peppers were raised in gardens with hoes and digging sticks as the major tools.

Public architecture was massive and of stone. There were temples and temple platform mounds, multiroomed "palaces", and other structures with stairways, balustrades, and columns. Sculpture in stone and stucco, and painting decorated these buildings. Sculpture as an art form was found in both stone and ceramics, and ranged from tiny jade or clay figurines to large, free-standing stone monuments.

Only stone tools were used for working the above, for metallurgy was not acquired until approximately A.D. 900, and even then metal was used mainly for ornaments.

Astronomical knowledge was complex, and several calendars, including one based on the solar year of 365 days, were developed. Some cultures had writing systems, and many recorded dates on buildings and monuments.

Some religious elements, including a ritual, rubber ball game played on an especially constructed court, were widespread. There were many geographic and chronological variations of the above features, and the ancient Maya who inhabited what is today the states of Yucatan and Chiapas, Mexico, Guatemala, Belize, and the western part of Honduras developed one such regional culture in Mesoamerica.

Francis Robicsek's book, COPAN — HOME OF THE MAYAN GODS, deals with one particular Maya archaeological site - a lowland ceremonial center in western Honduras. Although Dr. Robicsek is not an archaeologist, he has produced a book which should be of interest to professional archaeologists because of its excellent photographs of the ruins. The book is a good introduction for the general reader interested in Precolumbian Maya culture. Dr. Robicsek has researched many of the general and scientific reports which deal with Copan and the Maya civilization and has briefly summarized our present knowledge of Maya history. However, it is the photographs and his description of the site which give the book its worth.

Copan was occupied by the Maya at least by the beginning of the 5th century A.D., and the earliest recorded date on a monument at the site is A.D. 465. Some time in the 9th century A.D. the center, as did other lowland Maya centers in Guatemala and southern Mexico, decreased in population. It was eventually abandoned in that century. The last dated monument at Copan was erected in A.D. 800. Scholars are still not in agreement as to what were the causes of the "decline" of the lowland Classic Maya centers such as Copan.

The site has never been fully explored by archaelogists. The main area of the ceremonial center, built to the west and north of the Copan River, has several structures, including an acropolis, on top of which are other structures and small courts. The main Plaza and Court areas lie to the north of the acropolis, and the well-known I-shaped ball court is in between these points. All over the site are a number of stelae - large stone monuments carved with human figures and hieroglyphs of the Maya numerical and writing systems.

Some of the largest Maya monuments of this type are found at Copan, some being more than eleven feet in height, and they carry dates which seem to refer to the time of their erection and other events. Dr. Robicsek includes maps, drawings, and photographs of the major structures and monuments, and his verbal descriptions are excellent.

The book begins with a summary of the history of the development of Classic Maya sculpture The site of Copan is then presented in terms of its settlement and its apparent role in Maya history. Later chapters in the book deal with the architectural style of Copan, the sculptured stone monuments, and the major areas and structures of the site such as the Great Plaza, the Central Court, the Hieroglyphic Stairway, and the Ballcourt.

The remains of burials are described as are the varied artifacts of Copan: ceramic vessels, figurines, spindle whorls, and roller-stamps) jade work - ear plugs, beads and carved pendants; carved shell and bone work; and stone tools and other objects of obsidian and flint - blades, mirrors, and "eccentric flints", which are intricately carved, ceremonial pieces of stone usually found in caches under monuments. There is an excellent bibliography of works which deal with the site and with the Maya civilization in general.

Francis Robicsek, of Charlotte, is by profession a chest surgeon. He holds a position as a Research Associate of the Museum of the American Indian, Heye Foundation. He has served as consultant in the development of the open heart surgery program at the University of Teguciagalpa, Honduras, and it was during his stays in Honduras over the past several years that he became interested in Maya archaelogy.

This avocation, coupled with that of photography, has given him the tools with which to capture the beauty of a lowland Maya ceremonial center such as Copan. Dr. Robicsek's research of the literature dealing with the site of Copan has been thorough. The book is valuable for its collection of outstanding photographs of the ruins and the artifacts. Any Mesoamerican archaelogist will find the book a treasure because of these fine illustrations. The general reader interested in the ancient Maya culture will find pleasure in the book.

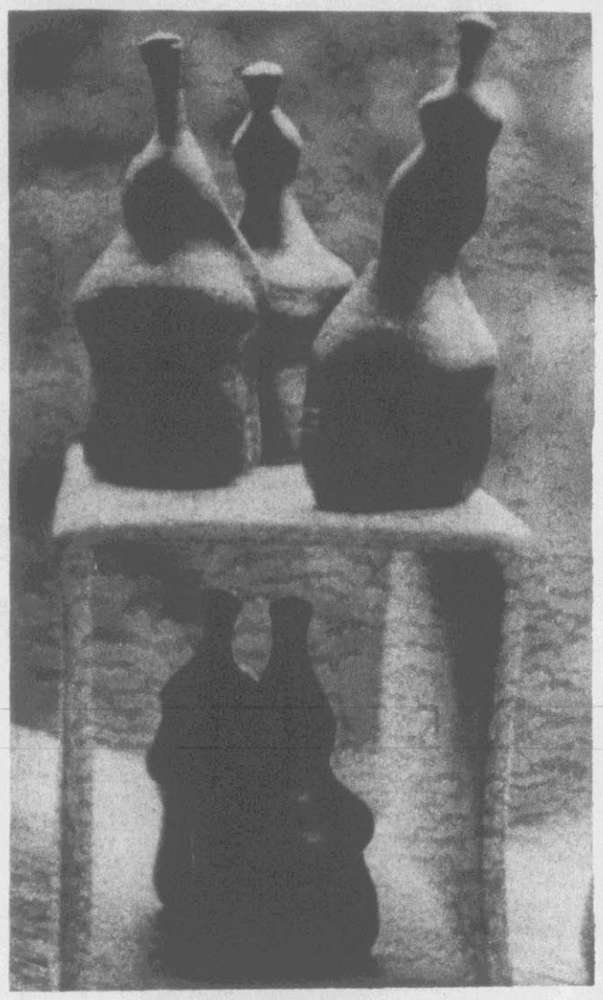
The Eddie Smith Show

Women Clusters, Pots and Drawings



VARIATIONS ON THE THEME OF WOMAN — Shown here are five of Eddie Smith's family of more than 30 provocative female ceramic goddesses. Selected pieces from this group will be in his Mushroom show, opening tomorrow.

Eddie Smith's family of small figurines, curvaceous miniatures that convey a suggestion of Henry Moore's monumental statues as well as the airiness of Persian princesses, are appealing examples of Smith's affinity with clay.

Selected pieces from about 30 of these posturing figures will form part of Smith's show going on view tomorrow at the Mushroom in Georgetown Shopping Center downtown Greenville.

His one man show, which is a graduate thesis show, will also feature examples of recent drawings. Among these are dream like impressions of sky and snow. "To get this soft effect," Smith said, "I ground pencil lead on a stone and rubbed the powdered lead into the paper with a wet cloth."

A native of Winston-Salem, Smith received the BFA degree from East Carolina University, then taught at Greenwich House Pottery in New York before returning here to pursue graduate studies. He majors in ceramics, with a minor in design.

Known best locally for his pots and bowls which have been on view in local and area sidewalk art shows, Smith will be showing a number of these in his thesis show. "Much of my work is functional," Smith noted, "vases, plates and a few bowls. Some, like this closed vase," he indicated a highly glazed white and blue piece with a tiny hole in top, "is designed for form and color."

Currently, a family of young kittens in his living quarters — which doubles as studio and study area, are having a field day romping through clusters of pottery and playing tag with the leaves and vines of the house plants the bachelor artist grows in window sills.

Smith's show will be at the Mushroom for only ten days. For an intriguing look at what can be done with clay, this show should not be missed.

Chamber Singers Spring Concert

The Chamber Singers of East Carolina will give their spring concert on Wednesday, at 8:15 in the Recital Hall of the School of Music.

A setting of the Magnificat text—Luke I. 46-56 "My Soul Magnifies the Lord, and my spirit, rejoices in God my Savior.." by the early baroque composer Claudio Monteverdi will open the program.

It has been prepared by graduate student James Powers who will conduct the performance. The work will be accompanied by an instrumental ensemble consisting of two sackbutts, (early trombones), one tenor trombone and organ. The instrumentalists will be George Broussard, faculty member, Randy Guptill, Bob Conger, and David Winstead.

The middle portion of this program will consist of Five English Folk Songs arranged by the late Ralph Vaughan Williams.

To conclude the program, the Chamber Singers, directed by Dr. Charles W. Moore, will present Brahm's New Love Songs for two pianos, chamber choir and soloists. The piano parts will be played by Donna Grose and Robert Sullivan, accompanist for the Chamber Singers. Soloists will be: Melissa Thrasher, Ken Davis, Mary Lee Wilgers, Garner Keel, and Debbie Johnson.

This program is free and the public is invited to attend.

Did your father's struggle during the great depression leave a lasting impression on you?

After all, it's not easy to forget the warning you've heard so often: "Don't ever get in over your head."

This was good advice. However, the days of the apple cart and soup lines ended a long time ago.

But because of yesterday's attitudes, a lot of people don't always make use of the advantages of today.

Now, there are lots of people who have a card, but many of them also have a built-in resistance to using it for anything except dire emergencies.

And that's really very unfortunate. Because your Master Charge card can be a great help in the never-ending struggle to make ends meet from one payday to the next.

Master Charge was never meant for a spending spree. That's why each card has a built-in credit limit.

You see, we fully agree with what your folks told you long ago.

Rain Washes Out Masters Golf Third Round; Tourney Extended

By BOB GREEN
Associated Press Golf Writer

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — The one-day delay in the 37th Masters won't have a major effect on the players—except possibly the leaders.

"It really doesn't make any difference," said Arnold Palmer, the 43-year-old living legend who won this event for the fourth time in 1964.

"Maybe a little on the leaders," he continued, then smiled. "But since we've got four of 'em, maybe they can get together for a bridge game, eliminate two and let the last two play Russian roulette."

"It gives me an afternoon to practice and then a whole day to get up-tight," Dave Hill said in the locker room at the Augusta National Golf Club course while waiting for the decision to postpone the third round of play.

The decision came at 11:55 a.m., EST after a one hour, 15 minute delay. Heavy rains made the picturesque, 6,980 yard Augusta National course unplayable.

Rushing streams formed in the valleys between the course's rolling hills. Sand traps filled with water. Pools and puddles formed on the double-deck greens.

A gallery of thousands, which showed up despite the steady rain and leaden skies, huddled under brightly colored umbrellas and sought shelter under the great live oaks and Georgia pines that line the course. They turned walk-ways and the sides of hills into muddy, gooey quagmires and sent more than one paying customer slipping and sliding on wet dignity down the slick slopes.

It was the first Masters rainout since the final round of the 1961 classic and forced officials to make a major revision in the schedule. Single rounds of 18 holes each are set for Sunday and Monday—if there are no more delays.

The forecast isn't too good.

It calls for decreasing rain but with a 30 per cent chance of precipitation on Sunday. Flash flood warnings were in effect for most of Georgia.

Should a playoff be necessary, it would be over 18 holes the day following the last regularly scheduled rounds.

The washout threw a major kink into the television schedule. Air times (by CBS-TV) now are scheduled for 3:30-5:30 p.m., EST, Sunday and 4:30-6 p.m., EST, Monday.

Veteran Gay Brewer, Tommy Aaron, lanky Bob Dickson and big J. C. Snead shared the 36 hole lead at 141, three under par. Little Chi Chi Rodriguez, a winner after a rain delay in Greensboro last week, was alone at 142 and the quartet at 143 included England's Peter Oosterhuis, Grier Jones, 1968 Masters champion Bob Goalby and Jumbo Ozaki, the always-smiling former professional baseball player from Japan.

Jack Nicklaus, the defending champion and pre-tournament favorite to win a record fifth Masters title, and the four leaders waited in seclusion away from the course for the decision to cancel the round. They were not available for comment.

Nicklaus blew to a fat 77 in Friday's second round, three-putting five times and once losing five strokes to par in a string of four consecutive holes.

Still, he was only five strokes back of the top four and very much in contention.

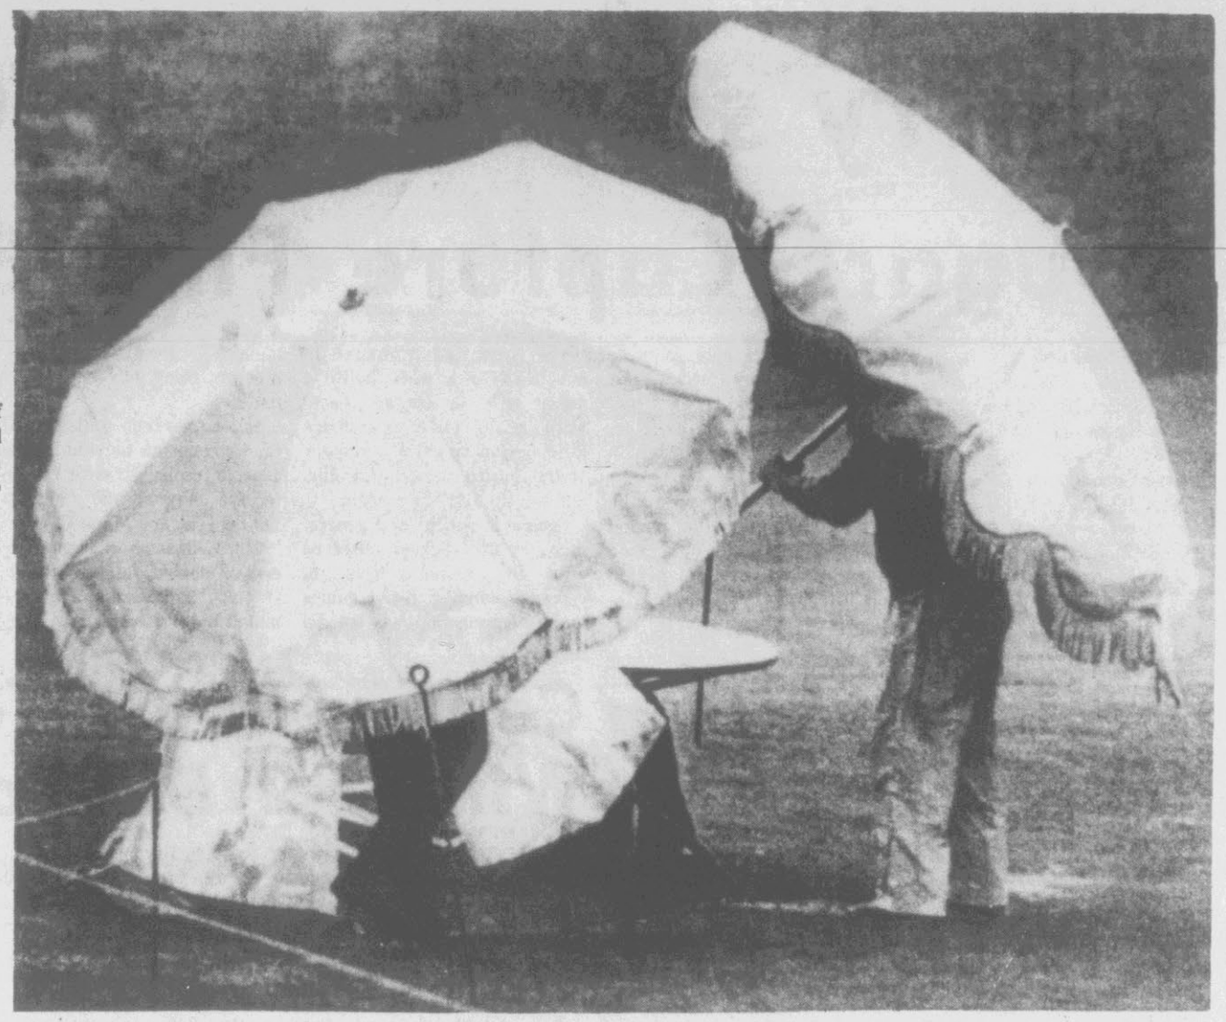
Most of the surviving field of 57 took the delay—the third consecutive Saturday that a rainout had plagued the pro tour—in philosophic fashion.

"It's just inconvenient," said Art Wall, the 1959 Masters titleholder. "You know, it messes up your travel plans."

"It really doesn't matter," said Billy Casper, the 1970 champion and winner of more than 40 tour titles. "But what do you do on a rainy Saturday afternoon in Augusta, Ga?"

And Frank Beard was asked what effect the rain would have on the players. After due consideration, and a thoughtful look out the window at the driving rain Beard intoned:

"My first thought is that it gets them wet."



GREENVILLE'S FAVORITE SPORT—With the weather acting the way it has this spring, staying dry under an umbrella might be the biggest thing in sports in Greenville these days, and a king-sized umbrella might help, too. Actually, these are a couple of spectators at the Masters' golf tournament in Augusta, Ga., who used a pair of lawn umbrellas to keep dry as rain washed out the third round yesterday. (AP Wirephoto)

Gaylord Perry Tosses Victory In First Outing For Indians

CLEVELAND (AP) — Chris Chambliss's two-run homer and Gaylord Perry's four-hit pitching led the Cleveland Indians to a 2-1 baseball victory over the Detroit Tigers before an opening day crowd of 74,420 at Municipal Stadium Saturday.

Chambliss, who hit only six homers in 1972, unloaded in the first inning with Rusty Torres aboard from a walk by Tiger ace Mickey Lolich.

Mickey Stanley's solo homer in the eighth was Detroit's only run off Perry, the American League's Cy Young Award winner in 1972 when he posted a 24-16 record.

Perry yielded only one hit through the first four innings, until Duke Sims led off the fifth with a double. Jim Northrup followed with a walk, but Perry got out of the jam with an unusual double play, which was hotly contested by Tiger Manager Billy Martin.

Stanley nudged a bounder in front of the plate which he thought was foul. However, Cleveland catcher Dave Duncan pounced on the ball and threw to third to force Sims. Buddy Bell's relay to first doubled Stanley, who took only two steps away from the plate.

Yaz Slams Yanks For Bosox, 10-5

BOSTON (AP) — Carl Yastrzemski collected four consecutive hits, including his second homer in two games, in sparking the Boston Red Sox to a 10-5 victory over the New York Yankees Saturday.

Yastrzemski set up a first inning run with a single, belted a 420-foot homer over the New York bullpen in the third, doubled in the fifth, looped a run-scoring single in the sixth and walked in the eighth.

The Red Sox, who had 20 hits in a 15-5 decision over the Yankees in the baseball season opener, made it two in a row with Rico Petrocelli contributing a three-run homer.

Carlton Fisk, the slugging hero in the first game, had two singles and a double, scoring two runs, while rookie Dwight Evans had two singles and a pair of runs batted in. Designated hitter Orlando Cepeda drove in two runs with sacrifice flies and also walked.

Given fine support, right-hander Marty Pattin earned the victory with last-out help from Bob Veale. New York got homers by Gene Michael in the third and Graig Nettles in the ninth.

Yankee starter Steve Kline allowed eight hits and was charged with seven runs in taking the loss.

San Francisco Edges Cincinnati On Bobby Bonds' Double By 7-5

CINCINNATI (AP) — Bobby Bonds knocked in the winning runs with a two-run double in the 11th inning as the San Francisco Giants defeated the Cincinnati Reds 7-5 in a rain-plagued baseball game at Riverfront Stadium Saturday.

Garry Maddox opened the winning rally with a single and moved to second on a sacrifice. Cincinnati reliever Clay Carroll eventually filled the bases and set the stage for Bonds' dramatic hit by issuing an intentional walk to Dave Rader and hitting Alan Gallagher with a pitch.

Bobby Tolan's three-run homer in the eighth inning highlighted a five-run rally as the Reds forged a 5-5 tie in the nationally televised game played in a steady rain. Tolan's blast chased San Francisco starter Jim Willougby, who had retired 19 of the last 20 batters he faced before the Reds' uprising.

Willougby hit one of the Giants' three solo home runs, helping the Giants take a 5-0 lead. After giving up Johnny Bench's first-inning single, Willougby retired 15 straight batters.

Other San Francisco batters who hit homers were Willie McCovey in the third inning and Bonds in the seventh.

Down 5-0 in the eighth, the Reds came back to score five runs on singles by Pete Rose and Joe Morgan before Tolan capped the rally with his three-run shot.

Twins Topple Oakland, 5-3

OAKLAND (AP) — Larry Hisle hit a three-run homer for the Minnesota Twins as pitcher Bill Hands made his American League debut with a 5-3 victory over the Oakland A's Saturday.

Hands, obtained from the Chicago Cubs of the National League, gave up a home run to Gene Tenace in the second inning and a run-scoring single to Ray Fosse in the fifth. He allowed only five hits before being relieved in the ninth inning by Ken Sanders, who gave up a homer to Reggie Jackson.

Orioles Rally, 8-7

BALTIMORE (AP) — Tommy Davis' pinch single drove in Baltimore's winning run in the bottom of the 10th inning Saturday as the Orioles rallied for an 8-7 American League baseball victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

Dave May's second home run of the game had given the Brewers a 7-6 lead in the top half of the inning

May connected leading off the 10th inning for the Brewers after Baltimore had wiped out a 6-1 Brewers lead.

Then, in the bottom of the 10th, Mark Belanger walked with one out. Rick Auerbach's error on an apparent double play ball kept the Orioles alive and singles by Bobby Grich and Davis delivered the tying and winning runs.

The Orioles had tied the game in the bottom of the ninth when Merv Rettenmund doubled and scored on an infield single by Grich.

Milwaukee scored five early runs on homers by Pedro Garcia and May, before Baltimore bounced back to tie it.

Mays Drives In Met Clincher

NEW YORK (AP) — Willie Mays singled home the winning run with two out in the ninth inning as the New York Mets edged the Philadelphia Phillies 3-2 Saturday.

The triumph marked the first time in their 12-year history that the Mets had won the first two games of the National League baseball season.

The Mets' ninth inning rally broke a 2-2 tie that had existed since the sixth inning. Ed Kranepool opened the ninth with a walk and pinch-runner Ted Martinez moved to second on a one-out bouncer by Felix Millan.

Mays then drilled a single to center, chasing home the winning run. Mays earlier had failed in another clutch situation when he hit into a home-to-first double play with the bases loaded and nobody out in the seventh inning.

The Phils had taken a 1-0 lead in the first on Willie Montanez' RBI single and the Mets tied the game on John Milner's homer in the second.The Mets went ahead 2-1 in the third on a double by Rusty Staub and Cleon Jones' single and the Phillies tied the game 2-2 in the sixth on a home run by Bill Robinson.

Santo's Hit Wins For Cubs

CHICAGO (AP) — Ron Santo's two-out 10th inning single scored Don Kessinger with the winning run Saturday as the Chicago Cubs beat Montreal 3-2 in a National League baseball game.

Kessinger had opened the 10th with a walk and moved up on a single by Jose Cardenal. Billy Williams struck out and Cardenal was picked off first for a double play.

Kessinger held at second and scored the decisive run moments later on Santo's hit.

The Cubs took a 2-0 lead in the sixth when Cardenal led off with a double and scored on a single by Williams. After Williams stole second, Glenn Beckert's single brought hime home.

Cub starter Milt Pappas had a one-hit shutout until the seventh when Ron Hunt walked, moved up on an infield out, stole third and scored on Ron Fairly's single.

Pappas, who won his last 11 games in 1972 including a no-hitter, was kayoed in the eighth when the Expos tied it on singles by Bob Bailey and pinch hitters Boots Day and Ron Woods.

Bucs Take Crew Meet

East Carolina's crew team swept a three-race meet from the Tar Heels of the University of North Carolina today amidst the constant rain. The Pirates are now 7-4 overall.

The novice and freshman eight took the first race of the day and a second ECU team was right behind them. The winning time was 9:20.6. The second place time was 9:30.0 while UNC finished third at 10:01.3

The lightweight varsity eight remained undefeated as they beat the UNC shell by 25 seconds. Their winning time was 8:58.3.

The heavyweight varsity eight rounded the day out with a third win. They beat the UNC boat in that race by almost a minute. ECU was way out in front at the finish, 10:52.5 while UNC wound up with a time of 11:49.4.

The Pirates will be at home again next Saturday when they take on the Citadel on the Tar River at 12 p.m.

Pirates Get Win

The victory for the Pirates was their second in five outings.

Playing under miserable weather conditions, the game was wet and sloppy according to Coach John Lovstedt.

Danny Mannix led the East Carolina scoring hitting four goals. Bill Harrington scored twice and had two assists while Andy Stanick had three goals and an assist. Larry Hayes scored twice and Chuck Maxwell got the remaining goal.

East Carolina jumped into the lead with three in the first quarter then added five in the second for an 8-0 lead by halftime. East Carolina picked up two in each of the final periods, while Guilford's final one came in the last quarter.

Track Is Rained Out

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP)—College and university competition in the 11th Carolina State-Record Relays scheduled Saturday at the Rex Enright Athletic Center in Columbia was canceled due to the rain.

However, field events in the high school division were completed, in addition to the one-mile steeplechase and two-mile run.

High school finals are to be held later, possibly sometime next week, but all competition for college athletes was canceled.

It was the first time in the history of the event that it had been called off, and it was done so by a vote of the coaches when wet conditions became too hazardous for the athletes.

Bucs Ready To Wind Up Drills; Unhappy Over Having No Game

East Carolina University's football Pirates are down to their final four days of spring practice, and it all seems a little anticlimactic now.

For years in the past, the spring drills ended in the Purple-Gold game, switched last year to a Varsity-Alumni contest.

But this year, there will be no game—at all.

The game got lost in the shuffle somewhere between football and the athletic director and council. Head football Coach Sonny Randle asked that the game be played in the afternoon instead of the evening, as scheduled. According to Randle, rather than change the time, to allow several members of th football team to take part in an evening track meet, Athletic Director Clarence Stasavich and the school's athletic council, cancelled the Varsity-Alumni game.

That still left the possibilities of a Purple-Gold intersquad game, but Randle said that injuries this spring have reduced the numbers available to too few for this type game. "We could play against another team, but not against ourselves in this type of game," he said.

So the Bucs will wind up their drills on Thursday, working on the first four days of the week starting Monday.

And anyone who shows up in Ficklen Stadium on Saturday, at any time won't see any game.

Meanwhile, practice has continued despite the loss of the game. And it has taken some of the spirit out of things.

Not that the weather didn't help out some today. This was the final big scrimmage for the team, and it came on a day when coaches from throughout the state from high schools attending a clinic, were on hand to watch.

Also watching were scouts from N.C. State, Southern Mississippi and Southern Illinois. These are the first three teams the Bucs face this fall.

"We felt that this would be a real test for our offense and defense," Randle said. "But the weather knocked it out. We still had a good session under the conditions, but not what we had wanted."

Randle looks at the drills to date with mixed emotions. "The attitude and willingness of the players is excellent, but we are making too many offensive mistakes," he said. "Some of this is probably that we have no game to get ready for. Otherwise, we've made a great deal of progress."

Randle feels that the defense is ahead of the offense. "They're doing a heck of a job," he said. "I don't say enough about them. They've really come along, and are right where we want them."

The offense, however, has been hampered by not having quarterback Carl Summerell at the reigns all spring, and the absence of running back Carlester Crumpler and flanker Vic Wilfore. Summerell, however, has worked some, including this Saturday's scrimmage, and Randle notes this picked up the offense.

"We have had a great deal of progress from our backup quarterbacks," he said. "Tom Chipok has come a long way, and so had Bob Bailey, before he suffered a bad ankle sprain. Chipok looks like he'll be more than adequate in stepping in should he be needed."

Kicking has been stressed a lot this past week, although no live kickoff or punt returns have been done. Ricky McLester and Clark Davis have been handling the kicking chores.

McLester, who set ECU and Southern Confernce records last year, may find some challenge from Mike Roper, a walkon who is pushing him right now.

There were six new positions to be filled this year, and Randle is pleased with the way things have gone in doing this. Greg Harbaugh has moved into the center slot, with Kenny Strayhorn looking good at times running the ball. Benny Gibson has been at the tight end spot and working well, with Stan Eure moved to a flanker slot.

Defensively, Kenny Moore has moved into a tackle slot, and Billy Hibbs has moved to an inside linebacking position with Danny Kepley. Wash Edwards has taken over Hibbs outside position. With Mike Myrick and Rusty Markland in the backfield is Winston Mayhew, giving the defense quite a bit of experience, despite some new spots for people.

"We'll wrap it up this week. I hate that we don't have a game, but I guess that's the way it is," Randle said. "Maybe things will be different next year."

Cherry's No-Hitter Gives Rose Victory

Cougars Capture First Series

GREENSBORO, N. C. (AP)—The Carolina Cougars, Eastern Division leaders in the American Basketball Association's regular season race, have earned a berth in the division finals with a decisive victory over the fourth-place New York Nets.

Carolina defeated New York, 136-113, Friday night to take their best of-seven series four games to one. The Cougars will meet the winner of the Kentucky-Virginia series, which Kentucky leads 3-1.

The Cougars outscored the Nets 16-0 late in the first period and went on a 15-0 scoring spree to start the third period and leave New York reeling.

The Nets had managed to pull back to a 69-60 halftime deficit only to stagger backward again under Carolina's third period spurt. By midway of the fourth period, Carolina had run up a 117-85 margin.

Cougar president and general manager Carl Scheer observed after the game, "This, of course — winning in five games and as convincingly as we did tonight — gives us great momentum going into the Eastern finals.

Scheer had high praise for all the Cougars but he said he was especially pleased with the defensive play of Joe Caldwell, Tom Owens and Mack Calvin.

The Cougars had eight players in double figures, led by Owens' 26 points. He also pulled down 15 rebounds in his 24 minutes of play — half the game.

Billy Cunningham had 17 points and Caldwell added 16.

George Carter was high for the Nets with 25 points and three players, John Baum, Bill Melchionni and John Roche, contributed 17 each.

Allison, Petty On Front Row

By BLOYS BRITT
AP Auto Racing Writer

NORTH WILKESBORO, N.C. (AP) — Bobby Allison and Richard Petty, whose duels helped fill tracks last year, will start in the front row of Sunday's Gwyn Staley 400 stock car race at North Wilkesboro Speedway.

"It's great," Petty said Friday after Allison edged him for the pole position for one of the sport's premier short-track events. "He's a great driver and I enjoy racing him—even in close quarters."

Allison, the 1972 top money winner with $284,000, posted a speed of 106.750 miles per hour in a Chevrolet to pace initial qualifying for the $35,000 event.

It was the first time in the new season that Allison had won a pole position. Operating his own car after his successful year with Junior Johnson's team, Allison has had problems working the kinks out of the Chevrolet he built in his own shops at Hueytown, Ala.

Petty, who banked $265,460 en route to an unprecedented fourth Grand National driving title last year, recorded 106.006 in a Dodge to get the other front row berth.

The two drivers, involved in a feud of sorts for the last three years, battered each other mercilessly in the Wilkes 400 at North Wilkesboro last October.

Using their cars as weapons, they banged into each other time and again before Allison was sidelined with two laps to go and Petty limped home for his ninth victory at the little mountain oval.

"I don't think anything like that will happen again," said Bill Gazaway, competition director for the sanctioning National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing. "I believe we have all the feuding behind us."

Eight positions in the 30-car lineup were decided in the first round of trials Friday. The remaining 22 were to be determined today.

Among those expected to qualify today were Cale Yarborough, who succeeded Allison as Johnson's driver. Faced with an engine replacement two hours before he was to make his qualifying run, the best Yarborough could do Friday was 104.783 m.p.h.—too slow to make the first day field.

Friday's other top qualifiers were Donnie Allison, in a Chevrolet; Bobby Isaac, in a Ford; Cecil Gordon and Bennie Parsons, in Chevrolets; and Buddy Baker and Dave Marcis, in Dodges.

Sunday's race starts at 2 p.m. and indications are the speedway will enjoy its first standing-room-only crowd.

Conley Holds To First With 7-2 Diamond Win

FARMVILLE—D. H. Conley's Vikings kept their string alive in the Eastern Carolina Confernce Friday, rolling to a 7-2 victory over Farmville Central.

The victory was the fifth against no defeats in the conference for the league-leading Vikings. Farmville Central is now 4-3 in the league and 4-4 overall.

Conley pushed over two runs in the second inning to take the lead. Clevie Averette singled and Bobby Bryant doubled. Vic Corey grounded out, scoring Averette, and a wild pitch brought in Bryant.

But Conley countered that their next time up, scoring a run in the fifth. Sleepy Carmon tripled and scored when Willie Streeter reached on an error.

Conley got two more in the sixth. Averette walked and Bryant got his second double. Keith Gould singled in Averette and moved Bryant to third. The two worked a double steal, with Bryant scoring easily as the ball was overthrown at second.

Farmville's only other run came in the bottom of the sixth, as Johnson did a rerun of the fourth, banging out his second homer of the day.

Conley picked up two more in the seventh. Clennell Streeter reached on a fielder's choice and Randy Adams singled. Averette walked and Bryant grounded out, but scored Streeter. Corey walked to load them again and Gould was hit by a pitch, bringing in Adams.

Johnson's two homers, and two hits by Bobby Daniels led the Jaguars, while Bryant had two doubles and Carmon had two triples for Conley.

Williamston RipsPerquimans

HERTFORD—Williamston High School rolled to a 12-1 victory over Perquimans High School here Friday. The victory upped the Tiger record to 5-0 in the Albemarle Conference.

Williamston got all it needed in the first inning of play, scoring seven big runs. Mike Bundy singled and stole second. A passed ball moved him on to third and he scored when Joe Roberson reached on an error. Roberson stole second and Keith Brown walked. Mike Weaver reached on an error, loading the bases. Berwyn Barnhill singled to score Roberson and Brown, and Brown, and Vann Andrews sacrificed in Weaver. Hubert Smith singled in Barnhill, and moved up on the relay. A passed ball pushed Smith to third, and Lesslie Hardison walked, and also stole second. Bundy came up again, singling to score both Smith and Hardison.

Perquimans scored its only run in the third inning. E. Winslow walked and eventually scored on P. Fields' sacrifice.

It stayed 7-1 until the final inning when Williamston caught fire again and pushed over five more runs. Tim Jackson doubled and took third on a passed ball. Bundy walked and stole second. Dwight Ange singled Jackson over and then stole second. Roberson walked, as did Brown, forcing in Ange. Weaver grounded out and Roberson was caught too. Barnhill then doubled in Brown, and Andrews singled to score Barnhill with the final run.

Williamston was to face Rocky Mount on Saturday.

Bulldogs Stop Bucs

Atlantic Christian College rolled to an 8-1 victory over the East Carolina Univerity tennis team Friday.

The Pirates won only one match during the afternoon, the number four singles, as ACC swept the doubles and won five of the six singles.

The loss knocked the Pirate record down to 2-8 overall. They are 1-4 against Southern Conference competition. Atlantic Christian is now 4-2.

The Bucs play host to the University of Richmond on Monday.

Summary:

Dan Phillips (AC) defeated Fraysure Fulton, 6-4, 8-6.

Bill Kent (AC) defeated Wray Gillette, 6-1, 6-0.

Aycock Outlasts Greene Central

SNOW HILL—Charles B. Aycock High School nipped Greene Central, 1-0, in an eight-inning game on Friday.

The loss dropped the Ram record to 5-4 overall and 3-4 in the Eastern Carolina Conference. Aycock is now 4-2 overall.

The game was a hurling duel between Terry Durham of Aycock and Dale Pridgen of Greene Central. Durham struck out six and walked as many in his time on the mound, but gave up only two hits. Pridgen, in the loss, gave up four hits, walked four and struck out four.

Aycock got its only threat in regulation in the first when Tom McFatter walked and moved to third on Durham's single.

Greene Central's best chance game in the third after a threat was stopped in the second. Lonnie Carraway walked, and Stevie Williamson reached on a fielder's choice. They advanced on an out, and then a ball got past the catcher, rolling all the way to the screen, but Carraway hesitated, and then it was too late.

The lone run came in the eighth. D. Pittman doubled and scored when Herdon singled. Aycock went on to load the bases, but scored no more.

Kentucky Takes Virginia Series

By JEFFREY MILLS
Associated Press Writer

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Reserve guard Jimmy O'Brien sparked a fourth-quarter surge Saturday to lift the Kentucky Colonels to a 114-103 victory over the Virginia Squires and a 4-1 triumph in their American Basketball Association playoff series.

The win, achieved before an ABA record crowd of 16,887 and a national television audience, sends Kentucky into another best-of-seven series with the Carolina Cougars for the league's Eastern Division crown.

O'Brien, scoreless in the first three quarters, collected seven points in the opening minutes of the final quarter as the Colonels, who had trailed most of the way, outscored Virginia 32-20 in the fourth period.

Dan Issel had 27 points and Walt Simon 24, pacing Kentucky.

Virginia led 32-29 after the first quarter, 62-51 at the half and 83-82 at the end of three quarters.

Issel was the leading scorer in the series with an average of 31.6. However, it was O'Brien's shooting early in the last quarter that put the final game away.

O'Brien hit three quick jump shots and a free throw at the outset of the quarter, giving the Colonels a 95-91 lead—an advantage Kentucky never lost.

Erving hit a field goal and free throw, narrowing the margin to 95-94. But the Colonels then scored six straight points and led by at least five the rest of the way.

Kentucky, which had been outshot 53.7 per cent to 44.4 per cent in the first half, came back to outshoot the Squires 52.6 per cent to 45.6 per cent for the game.

The Colonels, who had an 8-3 edge over Virginia during the regular season, won all but the second game in the series, including both games in Virginia.

TARBORO—Lee Cherry tossed a no-hitter at Tarboro High School Friday for the Rose High Rampants, as Rose rolled to a 6-1 victory behind him.

Tarboro's lone run came after a disputed call wiped out a double play and two errors followed that.

Rose picked up six hits during the afternoon, as Coach Dave Holton used his second unit from the start. Thr regulars did take one turn at bat, but never went into the field.

Cherry, in going all the way, struck out 10 batters, walked two and hit another along the way. He was in trouble only once, and that was when Tarboro scored.

He had a pefect game going for the first three innings, but walked the first batter in the fourth inning to erase the hopes of keeping it going.

The Rampants pushed over a run in the first inning and never trailed. Bobby Dough reached on a fielder's choice that left two men out. He stole second and scored when Gil Whitford singled to left, making it 1-0.

Another threat in the second didn't pay off. Ronnie Rasberry reached on a fielder's choice, and moved up on an error on a pickoff play, but died at second.

After being shutout in the third, Rose proceeded to break it open with five in the fourth. Whiford led off with a walk, and Greg Chapman beat out a bunt between first and third. The ball was overthrown at first, and both runners moved up. Herb Wilkerson then singled to drive in both runners to up the lead to 3-0.

But Rose wasn't finished. Rasberry's fly ball to center was dropped but recovered in time to get Wilkerson at second. T. J. Payne walked and Cherry, bunting, reached when the ball was played to third and overthrown, scoring Rasberry.

Dickie Johnson came on to run for Cherry, and Grif Garner singled, scoring Payne. Jerry Griffin walked, as did Dough, forcing in Johnson, but that was it.

Rose had another chance in the fifth when Rasberry was hit by a pitch and Payne beat out an infield hit. Again in the sixth, Rose got two on when John Barwick reached on a fielder's choice and Harding Sugg singled, but neither chance paid off.

Tarboro's lone score came in the fifth. With one down, Cherry hit Ralph Elks. Jeff Parrish grounded to Whitford at second, who picked up the ball and appeared to tag Elks as he sped by.

The ball was then relayed to first to get Parrish. The umpire, however, blocked out of the tag by Elks' body, ruled no tag, leaving him safe at second. Ricy Batts walked, and Joe Brewer reached on an error, loading the bases. Another error, when Sherman Parks grounded to the infield, let Elks score.

The Vikins had one more chance, in the seventh, and nearly got a hit from it. With two down, David Mears hit to short, but the ball as thrown wide of the bag, allowing Mears to reach. He later stole second, but Cherry struck out the last batter to end the game.

The Rampants, now 5-1, return to Division II play on Tuesday, looking for their second win if two starts. They'll be on the road against Rocky Mount.

Ayden-Grifton Holds Off Warrior Rally

By CHIP LAMBETH
Reflector Sports Writer

LITTLEFIELD—Ayden-Grifton's Chargers made the most of some untimely mistakes to take a 3-0 first inning lead but had to struggle to hold on to it to beat the Warriors of Eastern Wayne, 3-2, Friday.

A-G had jumped out to the three run advantage aided by three Eastern Wayne errors. After that inning, the game settle into a duel between Warrior hurler Roger Sutton and Dennis Cristiano of A-G.

The Warriors hung in and in the fifth they came up with a run to cut the gap to 3-1. The first two men up for Eastern Wayne in the seventh singled and shades of a rally started to show up. They came up with another run but a pop up ended the game.

Cristiano, in getting the win, struck out seven and walked two but gave up six hits. Sutton fanned seven Chargers, walked eight and allowed the Chargers just two hits.

Eastern Wayne threatened in the first inning. With one out, Robby Price walked and moved to second on a passed ball. Kem Kough grounded back to third. Instead of going to first, A-G thirdbaseman Ned Craft elected to try to get Price going to third but Price eluded the tag and both runners were safe. A ground out and a foul fly ended the inning without a score.

The Warriors were not quite ready yet and committed three errors that let the Chargers score all of their runs. Paul Ricciarelli led off with a walk but was thrown out as he tried to steal second. Tony Koonce reached on another walk and went to second when Don Phillip's grounder was errored. Another error let Tom Craft reach base and fill the sacs.

Sutton walked Horace Tripp to force in the first A-G run and Ned Craft hit into a fielder's choice. The Warriors tried to nail Phillips at the plate but the catcher muffed the throw to home and all hands were safe. The fourth walk of the inning, to Cristiano, brought in Tom Craft.

In the second inning, Phillips moved into scoring position when he slammed a double off the centerfield wall. He died at second, however.

The Warriors put two in the third as Al Rowe singled and Price doubled moving him to third. Price, thinking Rowe was on his way home, made the turn at second and was on his way to third when he saw Rowe had held up. Koonce relayed the ball to Tom Craft who faked a tag at Price and then fired the ball home and got Rowe as he slid across the plate. Price went to third but failed to score.

Cristiano singled in the third but was caught in a force at second. Eastern Wayne put two on in the fifth as William Stallings got a hit and Rowe walked but Price popped up ending the frame.

The Warriors finally put one up in the sixth as Kough was safe on an error and Ed Gurley got on by an error when the Chargers blew the force on Kough at second. Sutton walked to load the bases and after a strike-out Ron Chadwick walked forcing in Kough.

Ronnie Salmon opened the bottom half of the inning with a walk and Ricky Thorne got a free ticket also. Ricciarelli grounded into a double play that got Thorne at second. Everyone thought that was the third out and the teams proceeded to change. Something did not seem right and after A-G coach Claude Kennedy had a talk with the umpire, the Chargers came off the field and went back on offense with one out left. Salmon had moved to third on the double play but could not score in the Charger's second chance in the inning.

Eastern Wayne cut the lead in the top of the seventh but could not tie or go ahead. Rowe singled and Price followed with another hit. Kough struck out and Gurley popped up and it looked as if the Chargers would hold. Tommy Long had other ideas and slammed a hit back through the box to score Rowe. A foul fly ended the threat and the game.

Price and Rowe were the only players to have two hits.

Robersonville Rips Bullets

ROBERSONVILLE—The Robersonville Golden Eagles opened defense of their Martin County Conference title with a 20-2 romp over Jamesville's Bullets Friday.

The game was close for only two innings. In the third Robersonville broke open a 1-1 tie with 10 big runs, and after that it was just a question of time.

The win boosted the Eagle record to 7-1 overall and 1-0 in the league. Jamesville is now 1-2 and 0-1, respectively.

Robersonville moved ahead in the top of the second (although played at Robersonville, Jamesville was the host team), with a run. Larry Jackson singled and took second on a wild pitch. A passed ball moved him to third, and Kim Know singled him home.

Jamesville came right back to tie it up in the bottom of the frame. Larry Pierce reached on an error and Jerry Ange walked. Rick Mobley singled and Billy Brown grounded out to bring Pierce in.

But in the third, the Eagles flew away. Jeff Warren led off with a walk and Ricky Brown singled him to third, then stole second. Neno Hayes reached on a fielder's choice that left the bases loaded. Doug Warren singled in Jeff Warren, and Jimmy Stalls walked to bring in Brown. Larry Jackson then doubled to score Hayes and Doug Warren. Know singled, and Loyall Corey doubled in Stalls and Jackson.

Jeff Warren's single scored Knox and an error on the play brought in Corey. Brown singled in Warren, and moved up on another error. He was wild pitched to third, then scored on Doug Warren's hit. That made it 11-1 and put it out of reach.

Robersonville picked up nine more in the fifth, while Jamesville added one in its half of that frame.

Jeff Warren and Brown each had three hits for the Eagles, while Knox, Mike Matthews, Doug Warren and Jackson each got two. Gurkin Martin had two for Jamesville.

Southern Nash Nips Panthers

SPRING HOPE—Southern Nash pushed over three runs in the fourth inning, then added two more in the next two frames, and held off North Pitt to take a 5-4 victory Friday.

The loss was the fourth in Eastern Carolina Conference play against one victory for the Panthers.

Southern pushed over three runs in the fourth to take the lead. Kirk Bass singled and Wood was safe on an error. Bissett walked to load the bases, and Elmore reached on an error, scoring Bass and Wood. Tim Perkinson grounded into a fielder's choice that got Bissett, but an error on the relay let Elmore come in with the third run.

Southern matched that with a run in their half of the frame. Hicks walked and Wood doubled to drive him in.

North Pitt then picked up two in the top of the sixth to cut the lead to 4-3. Dennis Bunn reached on a fielder's choice and Rich Harrell was safe on an error. Price singled in Bunn and Clint Lewis reached on an error, allowing Harrell to score.

But Southern added one more in the sixth, and it proved to be the winning run. Elmore reached on an error and Perkinson drove him in with a single.

A homer by Brown in the seventh brought North Pitt back within one, but they couldn't scratch again.

Brown had three hits to lead North Pitt, while Harrell had two. Southern got only three hits off Harrell, but five errors behind him told the tale.

WILLIAMSTON—Williamston's "B" team recorded another win Friday as they edged the Bertie J.V.'s, 6-1. Williamston banged out eight hits in the game.

After three scoreless innings, Williamston finally broke the game open and pushed over four in the fourth. George Brown reached on an error and moved to second on the play. Danny Todd singled driving in Brown and Todd went to second on the throw in. Tim Widenhouse singled to center scoring Todd and Widenhouse also moved into second. Hits by Roger Manning and Al Griffin scored Widenhouse and Manning.

That proved to be all Williamston needed but they added two more in the fifth. Bertie scored its only run in the sixth.

Bears Given New Sanctuary

RALEIGH — The addition of three bear sanctuaries leads the list of changes proposed by the North Carolina Wildlife Resrouces Commission for the 1973-1974 hunting season.

This proposed change, and others, will be presented at a series of nine public hearings across the state beginning April 9. A list of dates, times and places for the hearings is presented below.

"Most of the changes proposed originated from letters and calls from sportsmen, and we hope that hunters will attend the hearings nearest them for further discussion of program improvements," said a Wildlife Commission spokesman. Comments and opinions from hunters received at the hearings will be carefully reviewed before any changes are actually adopted later. Hunters can write the North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission, 325 N. Salsbury Street, Raleigh, North Carolina, 27611, for a list of proposals prior to the hearings.

The commission is proposing to add three bear sanctuaries to the list of areas where bears may neither be hunted nor killed in order to further strengthen its bear restoration program. These areas are New Lake in Hyde County, Jarrett Bay in Carteret County and Thurmond Chatham in Wilkes County. The Dare County Bear Sanctuary would also be increased in size.

The closing of the season on fox squirrels has also been proposed since the species has been placed on the state's proposed rare and endangered species list.

The Commission is also proposing to establish a statewide special bow hunting season from September 21-October 13 and allow deer of either sex to be taken on Game Lands. The reason is to reinstate antlerless deer hunting opportunity on Game Lands for archers. Archers would also be allowed to take deer of either sex during their entire 20-day early season in localities designated for either-sex deer hunting.

Other proposals in the general statewide hunting regulations, if adopted, would:

—Establish a one-week differential between eastern and mountain turkey seasons with an April 20-May 11 season in and west of Stokes, Wilkes, Alexander, Caldwell, Burke and Cleveland Counties, and an April 13-May 4 season in the rest of the state to match differences in the breeding season.

—List either-sex deer seasons in the printed hunting regulations phamphlet, and air specific proposals for areas where these seasons are to be scheduled at these public hearings.

—Open Iredell and Alexander Counties to a two-week western deer season, and also those parts of Davidson and Rowan Counties west of I-85 and that part of Cleveland County west of Polkville north of SR 1361.

—Reduce the deer season in Rockingham County to two weeks and open this season with the western counties.

—Change the deer season in the section surrounding Ft. Bragg to October 15-November 17. This would apply in Harnett County and in the northern parts of Moore, Cumberland, Hoke and Sampson Counties. The long eastern season is proposed to continue on Ft. Bragg.

—In the Butner area, that portion north of US 158 in Granville County would have the same season as the eastern part of the state. In previous year, the eastern season used to be east of the Tar River.

Eliminate the ban on trapping of raccoons west of I-95 in Johnston County.

—Reduce the otter season to one month, December 1-31.

—Eliminate the ban against shooting raccoons in Avery County.

The Wildlife Commission also proposed several changes in he hunting regulations on western Game Lands, the most significant being a proposal to limit raccoon hunting to Monday and Friday nights and limit firearms to .22 rimfire. It is also proposed that the running or training of dogs be prohibited from March 1 through June 30 on western Game Lands, and no hunting of any sort would be permitted in the Santeetlah Bear Sanctuary. These restrictions, which would be applicable to he Pisgah and Nantahala Game lands, and others in this section of the state, were developed in response to sportsmen's requests. These proposals have the concurrence of the U.S. Forest Service.

Other proposed changes, applicable to all Game Lands, if adopted, would:

—Prohibit possession of all firearms during the closed season except in designated camping, field trial and target shooting areas on the Game Lands and prohibit shooting with bow and arrow from a vehicle.

—On the Butner Game Land the Commission proposes to designate a portion presently in the safety zone as a restricted area open to archery hunting during the special bow hunting season.

—Finally, the U.S. Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife has requested the closing of Lake Mattamuskeet to all hunting, and prior to taking any action, the Wildlife Commission wisher to have the benefit of hunters' opinions.

The public hearings are slated as follows:

April 9, Edenton Courthouse; April 10, New Bern Courthouse; April 11, Rocky Mount City Court Room; April 12, Elizabethtown Courthouse; April 13, Graham Courthouse; April 16, Albermarle Courthouse; April 17, Yadkinville Courthouse; April 18, Morganton Western Piedmont Community College and April 19, Sylva Courthouse.

Trials Set Saturday

The East Carolina Retriever Club will hold its annual Hunters' Stakes near Greenville on Saturday.

Stakes will be held in three categories, gun dog, and A and B puppy classes.

The first is limited to dogs that have never ribboned in any licensed or sanctioned field trial in the Debry or higher stakes. Game will be pigeons and ducks.

The Puppy A class will be open to all puppies under eight months of age, while the B class will be open to those between eight and twelve months. Game for both will be pigeons and ducks with dummies optional.

Registration for all stakes will open on the grounds at 8:30 a.m., Entry fees will be $8 per dog for the Gun Dog stake, and $6 per dog for the Puppy Stakes.

Ribbonw will be awarded for the first four placed in each stake and a Judges' award of merit ribbons will also be awarded at the discretion of the judges.

A roating silver bowl will be presented to the winner of Gun Dog Stakes. It can only be retired by winning it three times.

BASS Group's Plea Is Heard

MONTGOMERY, ALA. — A breakthrough in the battle between the nation's fishermen and the Army Corps of Engineers over use fees planned for Corps reservoirs was announced today by Ray Scott, president of Bass Anglers Sportsman Society (B.A.S.S.).

Scott, whose quick action when the proposal was called to his attention on Feb. 14, led to an overwhelming protest from the nation's fishermen, boaters and campers, said "corrective legislation" has been introduced in the U.S. Senate and House of Representatives, and it appears that "prompt and favorable" consideration will be given the measures by both houses.

Congressman James R. Jones of Oklahoma introduced the House bill on March 20, and the Senate bill was introduced a week later by Senators Dewey Bartlett and Henry Bellmon of Oklahoma, and Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana.

Scott pointed out that the quick, strong action proposed by Congress was "a direct result of the overwhelming nationwide opposition" to the use fee plans of the Corps of Engineers. "The B.A.S.S. message left no doubt about the sentiments of the average American, the man who pays the taxes that builds these Corps facilities," he said.

The House and Senate bills, both similar in wording, are in the form of amendments to Section 210 of the Flood Control Act of 1968, the major guideline under which the Corps of Engineers sets policy. Scott said the amendments in essence "prohibit the Corps from charging any fees for anything."

He said there is every reason to be optimistic about passage of the amendments. "We have been told that 15 other senators endorsed the Bartlett-Bellmon-Mansfield bill prior to its introduction," he said.

"Congressman Jones also has told us his bill is supported by House Speaker Carl Albert," he added. "That gives us the Senate Majority Leader and the Speaker of the House in the forefront of the effort to stop the collection of use fess."

As published in the Federal Register Feb. 1, the use fees would have ranged up $5 daily for a variety of facilities, including boat launching ramps, parking areas, camp sites, picnic tables, rest rooms, boat rentals and swimming beaches.

The Crops, after the storm of public protest broke, began to back down on many of these planned fees, but B.A.S.S. continued its well-organized opposition to the entire concept. Scott said a change in the federal law was necessary "because the Corps interprets the present law as requiring it to collect these fees. If we had dropped our opposition on the basis of the Corps' promises, we still would have left ourselves open to a sudden 'comeback' by the Corps at some later date." He said the law change, if successful, will prevent that.

"Our 105,000 members, as well as everyone else in the country who uses these facilities, owe a tremendous debt of gratitude to these outstanding Congressional leaders from Oklahoma," Scott said.

"Let's show Senators Bartlett, Bellmon and Mansfield and Congressman Jones that we can write letters of commendation as well as condemnation," Scott added. "Every boater, fisherman and camper in this country should send them a thank-you note."

Wildlife Afield: A Quest For Trout And Sanity Falls Short

This was supposed to be the year when I wasn't going to make a fool of myself on opening day of trout season, which was March 31 in case you were in jail or something and missed it.

It is traditional to try to catch a trout of some sort on opening day no matter how many of the elements are amassed against you. The elements are—in no particular order—wind, rain, sleet, snow, fog and high water.

In past years, I and my friends have always galloped with the gang on opening day, and we have usually been inadequately reimbursed for our trouble. Very rarely does a trout actually join in the ritual of opening day. Trout, as any fisherman will tell you, have a lot of sense.

This year was going to be different. We had decided to approach the new season more reasonably.

"If the weather is bad, we'll stay inside," one of my friends said. "Then if the weather turns off nice later in the day, we might try it. By that time, all the rest of the fishermen will be home in bed with the flu, and we'll have the water to ourselves."

Sound thinking, we all agreed. On the morning of March 31, I awoke to the sound of rain pounding on the roof and the drone of passing cars and trucks on the dirt road out in front of the cabin. Crazy fishermen, I thought as I drowsily rolled over and went back to sleep.

Finally, about mid-morning, the smell of fresh perked coffee drove me from my warm sack. The cars and trucks—all filled with wet and frustrated fishermen—still rolled past the cabin.

By looking through the rain-whipped window, I could see soggy fishermen in the nearby stream.

We all laughed an congratulated each other on our good sense. Then, we enjoyed a leisurely breakfast. All orning, we sat around drinking three pots of coffee, changing the lines on our reels, patching our waders and swapping lies. There was much back slapping and mutual joking at the expense of the multitudes who had forsaken their warm cabins and tents to fish in the cold rain.

By mid-afternoon, the rain was hardly more than a persistent drizzle, but the creeks were still too high to afford much fishing.

"Tell you what let's do," somebody remarked. "Let's ride up to that lake where all the fishermen stand jaw to jowl on the banks. That ought to be good for a laugh, and we can even carry some tackle if the weather clears up."

That, my friends, was the beginning of our downfall. We packed into the car and drove to the lake. Sure enough, fishermen were crowded around the edges of the pond. Some had even waded out into the water. It was cold, and a sharp wind was whipping a light rain across the water. Dense fog occasionally obscured all but the nearest anglers. Never have I wtinessed a more wretched-looking collection of folks, and nobody was catching any fish.

Nobody, that is, but one fellow. He had waded out well away from the bank, and while we watched, he actually caught a trout. We stopped laughing, and began to watch.

"What do you think?" one of us finally said.

"We might ought to try it," I said. "What the heck. We're not going to catch any sitting in the car."

We piled out, pulled on our waders, gathered our gear and headed for the lake. In a few minutes, I had waded out on the mucky bottom until I was waist deep in frigid water. One of my socks had come off in my waders, but it didn't really matter because that leg was soon full of water from a small leak anyway.

The rain and fog set in with a vengeance. Water dripped off my cap down the back of my neck. My hands were numb. The wind whipped my casts around my neck. I caught no trout.

Except for an occasional sneeze, there was little conversation in the car on the way back to the cabin.

"We almost m-m-m-made it, didn't w-w-we?" somebody finally said through chattering teeth.

Rotaries Make Impressive Bow

By JACK WOLISTON

NEW YORK (UPI) — Outboard Marine Corporation's new rotary combustion, or Wankel, outboard engine made its first racing start recently in the Nine-Hour Enduro at Parker, Ariz.

The debut was impressive, even though neither of the two OMC entries—one powered by an Evinrude RC and the other by a Johnson RC—was able to finish.

They were among 43 of the 74 entries — outboards, inboards and jets—that fell victim to those old bugaboos of boat racing, mechanical failures and hull troubles.

In fact, OMC's big racing rival, Mercury Outboard, won the Parker, Denis and Duane Berghauer of Elm Grove, Wis., setting a new record of 62 laps and 806 miles during the nine consecutive hours of competition. Their Molinari tunnel hull was powered by a Mercury Twister II. Average lap speed was about 90 miles per hour.

The Johnson RC-powered boat completed one lap at 98.1 mph before it dropped out and the Evinrude entry did eight laps before it went into the pits for good, both because override switches failed to function.

The two boats roared away far in front of the field from the Le Mans-type standing start and at one point on the run up the Colorado River course the Johnson craft was estimated unofficially to be hitting close to 135 mph.

OMC Praises Engines

OMC officials dismissed the mechanical failures as minor and concluded that the new power plants "displayed tremendous acceleration, speed and potential power."

Team driver Jim "Jimbo" McConnell of Wonder Lake, Ill., who piloted the Evinrude craft over the 13-mile laps—6½ miles up river and then back to the starting point—had nothing but praise for the new engine, the first rotary outboard motor manufactured in the United States.

"I thoroughly love the engine," McConnell said. "You can cruise at 100 mph very easily. You can come out of a turn faster than you went into it and, on a straightaway, you don't hang the boat up in the air as you might with a conventional engine."

OMC got some solace in the Parker by the fact that boats powered by its conventional Evinrudes and Johnsons captured 2nd, 3rd, 4th, 6th and 8th places among the first 10 finishers.

Conley, Ayden-Grifton Lead Boys' Cage Team

Ayden-Grifton and D. H. Conley High Schools, who each earned a quarter share of the regular season Eastern Carolina Conference title, share half honors in this year's All-Area Boys Basketball selections.

Each of the two schools placed two players on the 10-man unit. Others come from Williamston, North Pitt, Robersonville, Bear Grass, Greene Central and Farmville Central.

The Chargers, who tied with Conley, Greene Central and Eastern Wayne for the title, went on to win the district title and finished third in the State's 3-A Championship. They were runner-up to Conley in the ECC Tournament, which preceeded the district tourney.

Landing on the team from Ayden-Grifton are Milton Brown, and Melvin Stewart. Brown, a 6-1, 175-pound junior, averaged 12.7 points a game in the scoring race. "He's been All-Conference and All-Tournament for two years now," Coach Bob Murphrey said. "He's a complete player, and one of the best guards around."

Stewart,at 5-9, 160, is a junior, too. He averaged 12.0 per game. "He's one of our real leaders," the coach said. "He is a real good offensive player, and he and Brown make one of the best, if not the best guard combinations in this part of the state."

From Conley comes Larry Daniels and Kervin Hawkins.

Daniels, a 6-5, 176 point junior, is the tallest man on the team. He hit 13.3 points a game. He led our team in rebounding and scoring," Coach Shelly Marsh said. "A fair defensive player, he is a good scorer, and can intimidate on defense, blocking quite a few shots. He's a good shooter and real good foul shooter."

Hawkins, at 6-3, 187, is a senior. Averaging 9.4 per game, he's the lone man on the team not in double figurers. "He's our most unselfish player," Marsh said. "'He's our best passer and the team leader in assists. He's a fair shooter, but he doesn't shoot that much. He's a good rebounder too."

Dwight Ange, a 6-4½, 205-pound senior, is the leading boys' scorer in the area, hitting 16.8 points a game. "He's started all four years, and had led the team in rebounding for three and in scoring for two. He's an outstanding leader, a fine defensive player and real hustler. He's the most coachable kid I've ever had," Frank Neal of Williamston said.

David Brown of North Pitt, stands 5-11, wieghs 150, and will be among those returning next year, since he's a junior. He averaged 13.0 points a game. "He's an outstanding offensive player, and he hits the boards well. He's quick, and I'm going to enjoy having him back," Coach Cobby Deans said.

Another returning player is Ernest Crandall of Robersonville a 5-11½, 175-pound junior, who trailed Ange in scoring with a 15.9 mark. "He's a complete ball player," Coach Noland Respess said. "He handles the ball well, and is a good shooter on the move."

Proving that you don't have to play for a winning team, Vann Rogerson represents Bear Grass. A returnee to the team, he's a 6-1, 165 pound senior, averaging 13.4 points a game. "He's our team leader in scoring, and a fine player," Coach Clayton Mobley said.

Ervin Spivey of Greene Central, 6-0, 155, senior, helped his team to a share of that ECC title averaging 14.0 points a game. "His best quality is his ability to do something with the ball," Coach Jim Fulghum said. "He has the extra wiggle to get through the defense and score. His offensive power was the difference for us."

Rounding out the boys' team is Farmville Central's McCoy Williams. At 6-2, 180, the Jaguar center, is another repeater from last year. He averaged 16 points a game. "He was our leader all year long," Coach D. L. Scott said. "He definitely has the ability to play some college ball."

North Pitt Paces Girls Selections

North Pitt's once-beaten girls and Ayden-Grifton's runner-up girls led the 1973-74 All-Area girls' team. The Big Orange Machine landed three on the team, while Ayden-Grifton had two, totaling half of the team.

Robersonville, Oak City, Conley, Williamston and Jamesville both landed one.

From North Pitt come Minnie Hollis, Phyllis Jenkins and Wanda Whichard.

Hollis, a 6-0 senior, averaged 13.3 points a game, in leading the Pant-HERS to the District II championship, their third straight. "She was our all-around best players," Coach Eldred Mauldin said. "She is a good shooter and is outstanding defensively. Once she had to guard a 6-4 girl and she shut her off."

Whichard, a 5-8 junior, averaged 8.4 per game. "She improved a lot from last year," the coach said. "She worked hard on her shots, and did a good job defensively. She really hustled."

Jenkins, another senior, is 5-6, and averaged 9.5 points a game. "Her main asset was her speed," Mauldin said. "She had quick hands and played a good aggressive defense."

Ayden-Grifton's two representatives are Decia Little, a 5-6 junior averaging 11.7 points a game, and Terry Wooten, a 5-8½ senior, who had a 9.3 mark.

"Decia is a real all-around athlete," Coach Debra Pfeil said. "She was our leading scorer and rebounder, and showed a lot of hustle and desire."

Wooten was described by the coach as "playing her heart out in every game. She was really improved from last year, and played every game as if it were her last."

Oak City's Sylvia Jones, a 5-7 senior, was the leading scorer among the girls, hitting 17.7 points per game. "She is the best one-on-one player I've seen in this area," Coach Phil Griffin said. "She's got a jump shot that she can hit consistantly from as far out as 25 feet. She'll really hard to stop."

Donna Williams represents Jamesville on the team. The 5-6 sophomore is ranked by Coach George Hill as a fine shooter. "She's a real good player in all departments. She's our leading rebounder and a fine ballhandler. She's been All-Conference two years." She averaged 10 points a game.

Williamston's Sissy Taylor, at 5-8, is the lone freshman among the group. She averaged 11 points a game. "She did a real good job for us," Coach Susan Cox said. "She came a long way this year. She did a good job inside, and got more aggressive and became a better defensive player as time went along."

Elaine Forrest of Robersonville was the third leading scorer in the area, hitting at a 12.8 clip. A 5-6½ junior, Coach Pat Smith calls her quickness her greatest asset. "She's a fine athlete, a good driver, and good at the line. She's our best defensive player, and scored well even through she's been playing at center, which isn't best for her."

Rounding out the team is D.H. Conely's Linda Loyd. A 5-7 senior, she averaged nine points a game. "She gave 110 per cent," Coach Jeff Dudly said. "She put the team first and was very unselfish. She never quit, and always encouraged the others, besides being our best shooter and offensive player."

housing loans to persons living in towns with a population of 2,500 or less. Heretofore, the requirements have been that the site be open country and primarily agricultural.

In addition, Griffin noted that loans for rural subdivisions may now be made unless subdivisions are adjacent to a large city or metropolitan area.

INCOME UP

Integon Corp., in its 1972 annual report, announced that the company experienced a 23.7 per cent rise in adjusted income during 1972.

J. E. Collette, president, reported that life and health insurance adjusted income from operations were up 10.7 per cent on an increase in sales of 17.2 per cent.

Property and liability insurance income from operations were up 55 per cent with a sales gain of 20.7 per cent. Adjusted income from operations for the company increased to $8,273,238 or $1.30 a share in 1972, compared with $6,690, 678 or $1.05 a share in 1971.

MANAGER NAMED

JAMES H. MCBRAYER

James H. McBrayer Jr. has been named manager of Virginia Electric and Power Company's Albermarle District at Williamston, effective April 1, according to C. M. Jarvis, Vepco vice president. McBrayer succeeds John R. Haden, who is retiring.

McBrayer, a native of Raleigh, is a graduate of North Carolina State. He joined Vepco in 1952 as an engineering assistant at Richmond, Va. and was named a rural representative later that year. He was transferred to Williamston in 1953.

The new manager was named engineer at Harrisonburg, Va. in 1956 and in 1962 was promoted to director-agricultural development at Richmond. He was promoted to district marketing manager at Roanoke Rapids in 1965, a position he held until his recent appointment.

With a Wachovia

GIC

you know what you're getting into. When it comes to making investments, a lot of people choose Wachovia Guaranteed Investment Certificates.

Because not only do they know what sort of an investment they're getting into, they also know exactly what they'll be getting out of it.

Wachovia's high yield certificates give a guaranteed return of 5½% per annum on $500 or more for 12 months, or 5¾% on $500 or more for 24 months. Interest is compounded daily and paid quarterly or monthly.

So if you're looking for a sure, safe investment to get into, come into any Wachovia office. And ask us about Guaranteed Investment Certificates.

DO YOU REALLY WANT A GOOD INCOME . . . BEGINNING NOW?

Are you your own enemy. . .because you think "too small?" With us, you may make $9,000 to $15,000 first full year.

These are typical earnings for our people in Sales, not exceptions. And dozens of our people move ahead to earnings of:

$20,000 to $35,000 per year.

Our people share our success, which has been phenomenal. In the last ten years alone, we have grown nearly fourfold! Our income now is near the quarter-billion mark annually. We are TOP-RATED in our industry.

CAN YOU QUALIFY? Check:
( ) Age 18 or over
( ) High school or equivalent
( ) Sports minded
( ) Ambitious, looking for a career, not just "work?"

With us, you get started fast, because we combine thorough training at our Center with a PROVEN sales method. Your commissions can build each year and we keep training you for moving ahead. One big advantage at Sales work with us: NO limit on how fast and far you can advance. Remarkable benefits and security too.

Glenn-Jefferson Vows Spoken

Miss Linda Aileen Jefferson of Alexandria, Va., became the bride of Edward Crow Glenn of Burke, Va., Saturday at 6:30 p.m. at St. James United Methodist Church. The Rev. Christian White officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Graham Jefferson of Greenville. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Paul Howell Glenn of Decatur, Ala.

Tom VanVranken, of the U.S. Navy Band, was the organist. Soloists were John Richards McCrae, professor at Converse College, Spartansburg, S.C., and Jeffrey Meyerreicks, a classical guitarist of the U.S. Navy Band.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of ivory Dulcette satin. The basque bodice was designed with a chantilly lace yoke accented by floral motifs embroidered in pearls. Long sleeves tapered to calla points over the hands. The skirt featured an over-skirt appliqued with hand-run French lace caught in the back with a satin rose. Smaller roses cascaded from this point to the length of the chapel train.

Her cathedral length veil was of silk illusion and peau d'ange lace. She carried a cascade bouquet of stephanotis, gardenias, and phalaenopsis orchids.

Miss Linda Johnston of Greenville was the maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Sarah Robinson of Charleston, S.C., Miss Mary Gregorie Burns of Camden, S.C., Miss Cam Gaylord and Miss Terry Flanagan of Greenville, and Miss Margaret Harris, Farmville, both cousins of the bride. Miss Leigh Ann Taylor, cousin of the bride, of Shawsville, Va., was the junior bridesmaid.

They wore formal dresses of candlelight crystal crepe. The empire bodices of Venise lace formed a mock bolero laced with self-bow and streamers was styled with a jewel neck and bishop sleeves ending in lace cuffs. The semi-control skirts stemmed from the lifted waist and flowed into back fullness. They carried cascade bouquets of yellow cymbidium orchids and ivy tied with matching velvet ribbons.

Paul Howell Glenn served as his son's best man. Ushers were Graham Jefferson Sr. and Graham Jefferson Jr. of Greenville, Carlos Geiss of Spartanburg, S.C., William Briscoe and Eugene Glenn of Decatur, Ala., and Paul Howell Genn Jr. of College Park, Fa.

Reception

A reception was held at the bride's home following the ceremony.

The entrance was highlighted by a seven branch candelabra and an arrangement of white snapdragons, iris, and carnations. On the living room mantel were two crescent shaped arrangements of white snapdragons, iris, and daisies.

An Army-Navy cloth covered the dining room table held an epergne arrangement of white roses and on the buffet were candelabras of white roses. In the solarium, on a table laid with satin was the three tiered wedding cake. An Elizabethan garden, arranged with fresh vegetables was on one table.

In the garden were bridal tents decorated in spring flowers and evergreens and hanging chandeliers. A buffet table was also used in the center of the tent.

For a wedding trip to Disney World, the bride wore a Gloria Sachs two-piece silk shirt belted jacket suit of brown and white polka dots, matching accessories and wore a corsage of white cymbidiums.

Following the wedding trip, the couple will reside in Alexandria, Va.

The bridegroom is presently serving in the military with the U.S. Navy Band as a featured soloist, bass-baritone, and is also working on his masters degree at Catholic University, Washington, D.C. The bride is employed at National Geographic Society as coordinator of the Control Center.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Converse College, Spartansburg, S.C., with a B.M. in music performance. He graduated distinction in performance. The bride graduated from Converse College with a B.A. in French after spending her junior year at the Sorbonne in Paris.

The bridesmaid's luncheon was given by Mrs. Louis W. Gaylord Sr. and Mrs. Ruland Davenport at the Gaylord home.

Mr. and Mrs. P.H. Glenn Sr. were host and hostess for the rehearsal dinner Friday at the Candlewick Inn.

An after-rehearsal dance was held at the Greenville Country Club honoring the bridal couple and out-of-town guests.

Hosts and hostesses included Dr. and Mrs. Badger Clark Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Patrick J. Dayson, Mr. and Mrs. Donald B. Freeman, Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Harris, Miss Margaret Harris, Mrs. J.R. Harris,

Mr. and Mrs. H.D. Jefferson, Mr. and Mrs. R.L. Jefferson, Mr. and Mrs. R.D. Jefferson, Dr. and Mrs. Clarence W. Taylor, and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Warren.

Hosts and hostesses included Mr. and Mrs. C. Frank Dail, Mr. and Mrs. C.B. Tugwell, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Quinerly, Mr. and Mrs. S.M. Flanagan, Mrs. B.L. Phillips, Mrs. A.C. Tadlock.

Baskets of daisies decorated the tables and guests were served on the lawn.

MRS. EDWARD CROW GLENN

Miss Judith Ann Garrett Weds Saturday

RICHARDSON, Tex. — Miss Judith Ann Garrett became the bride of William Roscoe Everett Jr. Saturday at 4:00 p.m. in the chapel of the First Baptist Church here.

The ceremony was performed by Dr. James H. Landes.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Roy Curtis Garrett of Dallas, Tex. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Julia Whitehurst Everett of Bethel, N.C., and Mr. William R. Everett of Charleston, S.C.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of imported Swiss Guipure lace appliqued on pure silk organza veiling, a silhouette of silk peau de soie. The moulded empire bodice was fashioned with a high Victorian neckline and brief sleeves enhanced with a small shaped bow entwisted with seed pearls and complemented by short white wrist length kidskin gloves. Tiny self-covered buttons accented the back closing of the gown. The slim A-line skirt of back gathered fullness swept to a wide chapel length train.

Her veil, a mantilla of the imported Swiss Guipure lace mounted over a shaped coif, framed her face and fell in folds extending beyond the length of her train. The bride carried a nosegay of pink and white rosebuds, stehpanotis and baby's breath.

Mrs. Charlotte Finfer, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Nancy Townsend of Dallas, Tex., Miss Vicki Forth of Denton, Tex., and Miss Karen Breland of Galveston, Tex.

The attendants wore identical gowns of multi-pink and yellow flowered and green leaf imprinted silk organza. The moulded sleeveless empire bodice was accented by a double layered white picture collar forming a deep-V in the front enhanced by a self-flower. The slim flowing skirt of back gathered fullness was floor length.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and groomsmen were Frank Mathius, Victor Creech of Washington, D.C., and Paul Beckman of Dallas, Tex.

The couple will reside in Arlington, Va.

The bride is a graduate of Richardson High School and Stephen F. Austin State University, where she was a member of Chi Omega sorority. She was listed in "Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Bethel High School, attended East Carolina University for two years on a basketball scholarship and is presently attending George Mason, extension of the University of Virginia. He is employed by Congressman Walter Jones, Washington, D.C.

A THINKING MAN'S MESSAGE about Diamonds

Buying a diamond soon? Confused about diamond pricing? We wouldn't blame you a bit. A ¼ carat diamond may cost a variety of prices. The size may remain the same, but the quality of every diamond differs slightly from that of every other stone mined. Diamonds are a unique gem that require specialized knowledge on the part of a jeweler. English Staff Salutes Retirees

Honoring Dr. Rachel Harris Kilpatrick and Dr. Frederick Sorensen, the English Department of East Carolina University gave a party and banquet Friday at the Greenville Golf and Country Club. Veteran educators Dr. Kilpatrick and Dr. Sorensen will retire at the end of the school year.

Dr. Erwin Hester, chairman of the department, served as master of ceremonies. Dr. Meredith Posey, former chairman, gave the invocation. Dr. Leo W. Jenkins, chancellor, and Dr. Hester expressed appreciation to the honorees for their contributions to the university.

On behalf of the department, Dean Richard Capwell presented Dr. Kilpatrick a silver tray and Dr. Sorensen a watch. Both gifts were engraved with dates of service.

Dr. Kilpatrick has taught at East Carolina University for 16 years. She is a pioneer in the fields of linguistics, American dialects, and American linguistic geography.

She attended Brown University and Radcliffe College, receiving the second Doctorate in Linguistics awarded by Brown. She was the only woman and the only New Englander on the staff of the "Linguistic Atlas Of New England; she later directed the Linguistic Atlas work in Iowa while teaching at the State University of Iowa.

Dr. Sorensen joined the ECU faculty in 1961. Previously he had taught at Indiana State, Michigan State, and Auburn University. He had served for seven years as chairman of the English Department at Pennsylvania State Teachers College, Edinboro.

He holds a doctorate in Elizabethan literature from Stanford University. A poet and author, he has published articles on communications and Shakespeare in Studies in Philology, College English, and Quarterly Journal of Speech. His poems have appeared in the Montevallo Review, Western Humanities Review, Auburn University Review, and Tar River Poets.

Mrs. Grover Everett and Dr. Frank Motley were in charge of overall arrangements.

State Day Held By Sorority

CHAPEL HILL—Members of Sigma Sigma Sigma sorotity gathered in Chapel Hill recently for the dedication of the Pediatric Intensive Care Unit at N. C. Memorial Hospital.

The dedication was held in conjunction with Sigma Sigma Sigma's first State Day. Helen Marie Snyder, national president of the sorority, eight national officers, alumnae and members of UNC's local chapter, Delta Delta, participated in a membership program and attended a luncheon at the Carolina Inn prior to the dedication ceremonies.

On The Young Side

By MARY CHARLES STEVENS

Rose High students are excited about the election returns and various honors they have received. Seniors look forward with apprehansion to the S.A.T. text Monday.

Class elections were held Wednesday and Thursday in the gym and results were announced Thursday afternoon.

Several students with winning art pieces in the Woman Club's Arts Festival also won blue ribbons and certificates in the District Arts Festival in Farmville recently.

In music, Mary Bryan Matney won for piano and Larry White for the marimba. Larry also won third place and $25 for playing the Marimba in the State Arts Festival sponsored by the Federation of Woman's Club.

Senior Dean Phillips has been rewarded with a four-year football scholarship to Lynchburg Baptist College. Dean spent several days this week in Lynchburg looking at the school.

Annis Paschal has returned after being a pagette in Raleigh. She enjoyed running errands and taking messages to different legislators.

PRUNE ENERGY DIET

THE SUCCESSFUL DIET FOR ACTIVE PEOPLE

LOS ANGELES (Special)—The most important key health food known to man, neglected and overlooked by all but a small percentage who know the Hi-Energy value of prunes in their daily lives. Heavy abundance of Vitamin C and E plus iron. 100% digestible for all ages. This diet plan works wonders for men, women, children without pills, drugs or exercise.

Prunes give quick vital energy which is crucial in any diet. No tired, dragged-out feeling as with other diets.

10 Lbs. in 10 Days

Those who follow the simple plan exactly as directed, report a loss of 10 pounds in 10 days, starting from the day they begin the diet. There is usually no weight loss for the first 4 days, but suddenly on the 5th day you can expect to drop as much as 5 pounds, and continue to lose about a pound a day up until the 10th day. Thereafter, you'll lose a pound and a half every two days until you reach your proper weight.

Eat Almost All You Want

Better yet, you can still eat almost as much as you want of foods like steak, chicken, lobster. And you will continue to lose weight. Full money back guarantee.

The use of prunes as prescribed by the plan, will, through natural action, act to help your body release excess fat and body fluids, allowing you to keep your weight down and figure in firm control.

Plan Available

To get a copy of this highly successful plan and suggested menus; send $2.00 cash, check or M.O. No C.O.D. please. We pay postage.

Bali knows not all women are created equal. That's why they make so many styles and sizes of bras. . .and that's why Brody's carries so many styles and sizes by Bali. Did you know that half the women in America are wearing the wrong bra? YOU MAY BE TOO. For instance: Does your present bra wrinkle? If so, it doesn't fit. But wrinkles don't always mean the bra's too big, it could be too small. Once you know your correct brassiere size try on several styles before you buy. Not every bra in your size is right for you. Correct figure type is most important. Spend a few minutes in our fitting room; discover what a Bali fit can do for you.

Happiness Is . . . Going To The Sewing Festival On Tuesday

By Rena Manning

A complete Spring 1973 home sewing picture will be on view at the "Sewing Festival" to be held at the National Guard Armory here Tuesday, from 1:00 - 9:00 p.m.

"The Sewing Festival" is being sponsored by the North Carolina Agricultural Extension Service and the Northeastern District Extension Homemakers Association.

The ribbon cutting ceremony will be held at 1:00 p.m. featuring Miss Constance Anne Dorn, the reigning Miss North Carolina and first runner-up in the Miss America pageant. Greenville Mayor Eugene West, County Commissioner Chairman Alton B. Gardner and Mrs. C. W. Overman of Edenton, Northeastern District Homemakers Association president, will join Miss Dorn at the ribbon cutting.

"THE WEDDING PARTY"...is the theme of Mrs. E.C. Davenport's exhibit. Mrs. Davenport, right, and Mrs. Evelyn Spangler discuss the demonstration.

The armory will be transformed into a spring wonderland of fashions and fabrics with approximately 35 booths set up for national, state, and local home economist and Extension Homemakers to give continuous demonstrations on all aspects of sewing. One may learn the techniques of making home furnishings (such as draperies, slipcovers, bedspreads, etc.) men's, women's, and children's wear, lingerie, as well as easy methods of putting on pockets, setting in sleeves, and putting in zippers.

"Many seasoned home sewers do beautiful workmanship on their garments, but completely ruin the desired effect by hemming the garment incorrectly. A good hem should never show from the outside of the garment. Hemming especially poses problems for non-sewers, said Mrs. Evelyn Spangler, Pitt Home Extension Agent. For these reasons, Mrs. Helen Hoskins and Mrs. Carolyn Alligood, extension home economics agents in Martin and Beaufort Counties, will demonstrate the proper way to finish hems.

"Or perhaps you want to learn tailoring techniques, how to make a bridal gown, or the finishing details that make the difference in the look and fit of your garment. From the basic seams to the most intricate contourier designs, it will be shown at the "Sewing Festival," continued Mrs. Spangler.

Featured throughout the day will be four fashions shows showing bridal and evening fashions, men's, women's, and children's fashion and maternity wear. Miss North Carolina will model her Atlantic City wardrobe at 1:45 and again at 4:00. Special half-hour classes will also be held featuring zipper applications and creativity with scarves.

The schedule for special showings is: fashion show (local fashions and Miss North Carolina, 1:45; special classes in zipper application, 2:15, creativity with scarves, 3:00; fashion show (Simplicity Teen and Miss North Carolina, 4:00; Special classes on zipper application, 4:30; fashion show (local creative fashions), 6:00; special classes in zipper application, 7:00; fashion show (Simplicity Teen fashions, 7:45; and creativity with scarves, 8:15.

Local homemakers demonstrating sewing techniques at the festival are Mrs. E. C. Davenport of Winterville, Mrs. Nathan Smith of Pactolus, Miss Faye Manning and her mother, Mrs. J. T. Manning, Jr., of Greenville.

Mrs. Davenport is a past president of the Pitt County Extension Homemakers Club and has represented the district at the National Citizenship Conference, Washington, D.C.

She will be exhibiting bridal gowns which she has made and showing the latest techniques in making bridal wear. Mrs. Davenport is well qualified in this field in that she has made bridal attire, evening wear and tailored garments professionally for about 20 years. In addition, she has taught classes in pattern alterations and drapery making at Pitt Technical Institute. She has held workshops in tailoring in Martin, Nash, and Pitt Counties.

Mrs. Smith is the immediate past president of the Pitt County Extension Homemakers Clubs and has represented the county at the United Nations Study Workshop, New York. She represented the district at the National Council of Extension Homemakers, Baltimore, Md., last October. She will be showing the latest techniques in setting in sleeves in order that they will have that tailored look. She will also demonstrate how to measure and remove excess fullness in the sleeve.

Mrs. Smith is presently teaching crafts at Pitt Technical Institute and at Stokes. She is teaching crewel embroidery, furniture refinishing, and chair caning. In the past, she has taught pattern alterations and drapery making at Pitt Tech and has taught picture framing, furniture refinishing, chair caning, and pattern alterations through the Extension Service.

In her demonstration "Beads, Buckles and Belts," Miss Manning will be showing the latest fashions in belts and how to make them. She is a former 4-H Club member and during her membership she received the award for being Pitt County's "Most Outstanding 4-H'er" for two years.

Miss Manning was county Revue winner four years. She was District winner in the "Make It Yourself With Wool" contest and District Blue Ribbon winner in the demonstration "It's the Cutting that Makes the Dress." She is presently enrolled at East Carolina University.

EAST CAROLINA UNIVERSITY. . .student Miss Faye Manning, left, and her mother, Mrs. J.T. Manning Jr., will be participating in "Belts, Buckles and Beads."

Mrs. Manning, has won may awards in the Extension Homemakers Dress Revues and has taight beginning sewing to approximately 150 - 4-H members during the 13 years she was a 4-H advisor for the Red Oak 4-H Club. Mrs. Manning is presently teaching her youngest daughter, Diane, age 11 how to sew.

Other local women who have served on committees to plan the "Sewing Festival" include Mrs. Karl Hardee, president of the Pitt County Council of Extension Homemakers, and Mrs. Bill Goin, Pitt County Extension International Relations chairman.

Miss Addie Gore, Mrs. Sue May,and Mrs. Spangler, Pitt County Home Economics Extension agents, have been actively involved in the planning and preparation for the festival.

Although the "Sewing Festival" is strictly a non-profit educational event, an admission fee of $1.00 for adults and 50 cents for students is being charged to cover the operating expenses. This is a "floating" affair, open to the public.

On Thursday, April 12, the "Sewing Festival" will move to the Elizabeth City National Guard Armory. It will be open there from 1:00 through 9:00 p.m.

"SLEEVES SILHOUETTE"...will be the demonstration to be given by Mrs. Nathan Smith during the Sewing Festival Tuesday.

No Troubles Until They Had A Bathroom

OLLIERS, France (WNS) — Suzanne Thomas, 62, never had trouble in her farmhouse until she earned enough money to install a bathroom. The first time she took a bath, the 232-lb. Frenchwoman got stuck in the 22-inch-wide tub. The emergency squad was called to pull her out, and Mme. Thomas spent a week in bed recovering from the episode. Her husband replaced the tub with a shower, and Mme. Thomas promptly slipped on the soap and broke her leg. "I have ended these terrifying experiences by locking the bathroom forever," she announced. "We shall draw our water from the village pump and bathe in the kitchen in our portable wooden tub, just as we were taught by our ancestors." P. S.: Husband Francois Thomas added that the bathroom will be converted into a TV room.

Members of the Kinston Collectors Club have focused their engergies this week on executing the intricate steps called for in performing an anti-rain dance.

The reason—the rescheduling of their Spring Flea Market, Antique Show and Sale, which was slated to be held last Sunday. The event will be held today beginning at noon and continuing until 6 p.m.

Some 75 to 100 dealers have reserved space for the flea market and they will have on display, a wide range of items including antique furniture and accessories, china and glassware, primitives of all types, coins, and old toys.

Proceeds from the flea market will be donated by the club for various historical projects. The flea market will be held at the Jaycee Fairgrounds near Kinston.

A Greenville student, Debra Ann Stancill, is one of 12 new members initiated into the N. C. Wesleyan College chapter of Chi Beta Phi, an honorary science fraternity on the Rocky Mount campus.

Following the iniation ceremony and installation of officers, old members held a reception for the newly inducted members. The fraternity promotes scientific interest and brings together majors in the various sciences for discussion and programs.

Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Timberlake, of 209 Fairlane Rd.

Wedding Cake Didn't Go To Waste At All

GANGES, France (WNS) — Pastry chef Michel Bouze baked the largest, fanciest cake of his life for the wedding of his son Pierre to Marguerite Lemoine. Just before the ceremony the couple fought and called off their marriage. No problem: the baker's daughter, Marie Anne, announced her immediate engagement to college chum Richard Pollenc. Wedding, marriage feast and wedding all took place on schedule.

Kids Shouldn't Hear Gripes

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband is very hard to get along with. He is also a very poor sport. I was in my ninth month of pregnancy with our first child when I started to get pains. We had planned to go to a football game that day, so my husband got mad and laid down on the couch and told me to wake him up when it was time to go to the hospital.

I kept telling him it was time, but he stalled around just for spite and I had the baby in the parking lot outside the hospital.

Another time we took our five kids to Disneyland. My husband likes to go on all those wild rides but I get dizzy, so he took the kids while I watched. The big one got a nosebleed on the Ferris wheel and bled all over my husband's suit, so he gave the poor kid a licking just like it was his fault.

The reason I'm writing this is because yesterday I scraped the fender on his car and he got mad and broke my Yucca tree.

If I weren't pregnant with number six I'd leave him. Any advice? TRAPPED

DEAR TRAPPED: What's done is done, but you should give some thought to turning off the "baby machine." It's not fair to saddle children with a father like that.

DEAR ABBY: I love to cook, but I recently married a man whose hobby is cooking. Every night he fixes a different kind of dinner. He's gone from Chinese to Hungarian to Italian. I hate to complain, but my husband's cooking is terrible and I can't take much more of it.

How can I tell him to please stay out of the kitchen and let me do the cooking? UPSET STOMACH

DEAR UPSET: Unless you speak Chinese, Hungarian, or Italian, tell him in English.

DEAR ABBY: After 25 years of a happy, suburban marriage in ultra luxurious circumstances, with three children now in graduate schools, my wife and I are undergoing an amicable no-fault divorce because [as she puts it] "we have nothing in common except the children."

She's already found a future husband [a former college friend whom she rediscovered a year ago], has left our home awaiting the time when she can remarry. No alimony involved.

Frankly, Abby, I am bored with the suburban rat race, and want to start a new life elsewhere. The question is where? And with whom?

My children are into yoga, meditation, gurus, helping others, rejecting material things, and status. I am seriously considering adopting their lifestyle.

What do you say about my making such an abrupt change in my early 50s? Is this a passing fancy, or would it be a wise choice for me? And how do I find a partner while doing so? Or is therapy the answer? RE-EVALUATING

DEAR RE: First things first. Don't look for a "partner" while you try to determine which route to pursue in your search for peace of mind—which is what you're after. Get into therapy and once you find your head you will know who you are. Then you can change your lifestyle if that's what you want.

Engagement Announced

MISS LILLIAN KIM JARRELL. . .is the daughter of Mr. James Monroe Jarrell of Raleigh, who announces her engagement to Thomas Jarvis Tripp III, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Jarvis Tripp Jr. of Raleigh. The wedding will take place June 17.

Miss Vivian Lu Dixon Weds Saturday

FARMVILLE—Miss Vivian Lu Dixon and Robert Allen Manekin were united in marriage at the home of her parents Saturday at 6:30 p.m.

Parents of the couple are Mrs. John D. Dixon of Farmville, and the late Mr. Dixon, and Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Manekin of Baltimore, Md., and the late Mrs. Dorothy Manekin.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, John D. Dixon Jr., wore a gown of white linen with hand-embroidered pastel designs on the bodice, sleeves and hemline of the gown. The material was purchased while the bride was in Israel and the mother of the bride made the gown.

Mrs. John D. Dixon Jr. of Sanford, sister-in-law of the bride, and Mrs. W. Rex Hodges Jr. of Columbia, S. C., sister of the bride, were matrons of honor.

They wore formal gowns and carried bouquets of spring flowers, similar to those of the bride.

Best men were Richard P. Manekin of Baltimore, Md., and Charles H. Manekin of New Haven, Conn., brothers of the bridegroom.

After a wedding trip to Jamaica, the couple will reside in Baltimore, Md.

The bride graduated from St. Mary's Junior College and the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. She is now a health and physical education supervisor in Baltimore, Md.

The bridegroom graduated from the University of North Carolina and is in his fianl year of Maryland Law School.

A wedding dinner was held at the Candlewick Inn following the ceremony. After the dinner, the wedding party returned to the home of the bride for a cake cutting.

A wedding breakfast for the wedding party was held at the home of the bride this morning.

Hairstyling Scholarships Are Offered

A limited number of complete scholarships in hairstyling fields will be awarded annually at Mitchell's Hairstyling Academy.

According to B.R. Mitchell, owner of the Academy, the scholarship is a cooperative industry-wide effort to find and train candidates for the growing demand for qualified personnel in the beauty field.

Positions now exist in department stores, on luxury cruise ships, and in many other areas for qualified hairstylists, salon supervisors and cosmetology teachers, he said.

The large corporations participating in the program are owners of beauty salons and are working in cooperation with training institutions nation-wide in an effort to meet the growing demand for professionals in this field, Mitchell added.

The scholarships will pay tuition fees for persons attending classes on a full or part time basis.

Training will be offered in Greenville, N.C. for eight months. Starting salaries after completion of the basic training is commensurate with the student's achievement while in school.

Ambitious persons should earn $6,000 during their first year and may reach $12,000 annually, depending on individual ability.

Any female candidate over the age of 16 may apply. Candidates must have good personal quality and a desire to succeed. There is no educational requirement.

Applicants still in high school may apply now to be accepted upon graduation.

Scholarship winners are not obligated to re-locate or to accept employment with participating corporations.

They are asked only to seriously consider any offer made to them, he said.

Scholarship winners may decide, while still training, which city or area they prefer, and arrangements for a visit and an interview can be made.

Return Audit Isn't So Bad Says Revenue Agent

By FRANK S. SWERTLOW

NEW YORK (UPI) — You've filed your tax return just the way you've done it for years, and you expect that little green check from Uncle Sam.

But instead, you get a letter from the Treasury Department.

You're being audited! And your heart is in your mouth.

Well, relax. Every year more than a million taxpayers get that same grim feeling when they are audited by the Internal Revenue Service.

"The man who is the most upset," said Mrs. Lillian Sohnen, "is the illiterate taxpayer. He received a letter from the U.S. Treasury with an official seal on it and comes in frightened witless.

"'This says I'm going to jail,' he says to me. Well it says no such thing and I try to put him at ease."

Marriage Proposals

Mrs. Sohnen is a revenue agent and for the past 12 years has audited between four and five taxpayers each day at the IRS's Manhattan headquarters. During that time, she has practiced amateur psychology, learned about an assortment of professions and received three marriage proposals.

"Most people think we are horrible monsters with a million tentacles who take money out of their pockets," she said. "So I try to get them to relax. I offer them a cigarette and try to talk about their job. But sometimes this doesn't work. They want to hear the worst.

Mrs. Sohnen, however, wasn't always so sure of herself, especially with one East Coast fisherman.

"I had been in the service for a year and a half and thought I was a cockeyed wonder. All I had to do was look at the taxpayer to tell if he was pulling my leg or filing a bona fide return. Had I looked at this return, I would have saved myself a lot of trouble."

This particular fisherman, Mrs. Sohnen said, owned his own boat and did not file a W2 form because he was self-employed.

Bottom Scraped

"So he scribbled on a note, in fisherman's terms: 'Business expense—$300 to have my bottom scraped.'

"'Shouldn't this be a medical expense,' I asked? And for the next 20 minutes, I talked about his bottom and he talked about the ship's bottom."

Sometimes, Mrs. Sohnen's encounters aren't as embarrassing as they are ironic.

"A really good looking young man came in one day. He looked like a football hero, but something was wrong with this picture of strength—his hands were trembling and an occasional tear would run down the side of his nose.

"I asked him if he were nervous.

"'No,' he said, 'my wife is the nervous one.'"

The football hero, Mrs. Sohnen said, could not prove he paid out $1,200 in medical expenses. All he had was $300 in cancelled checks.

After a little detective work, she computed the man's medical expenses and found out he was going to get a refund and not a penalty.

"Well, that great big football hero just broke down and cried and people started looking at me like an ogre. I had to call a policeman to escort him out of the office."

Mrs. Sohnen said most people are audited because a computer says something is wrong with a deduction.

Strange Deductions

One taxpayer told her that he paid $100 for a cocker spaniel, but the dog fell into his pool and drowned. Could he take the price of the dog off as a casualty loss?

"Death and breakage are not deductible. But I thought the dog might be source of income and asked if he was for show or stud purposes.

"Well, when I said stud purposes, the man looked down his nose at me and said: 'Snoopy was a member of the family. Oh, I realize that if my wife fell into the pool and drowned, I wouldn't have a loss, but I didn't pay $100 for my wife.'"

And the marriage proposals?

"Three drunks asked me to marry them," she said.

Devise Better Way To Detect Flaws

MENLO PARK, Calif. (UPI) — You know that defect in the tire you bought that wasn't visible, or the jar of olives that had a hairline crack you couldn't see on the supermarket shelf?

Well, those kinds of faults may be discovered before the product gets to you in the not distant future.

Stanford Research Institute (SRI) has developed a system that its scientists report has promise for detecting defects potentially dangerous to the consumer in mass-produced goods.

The method involves use of a laser beam to pinpoint trouble spots and display them on a television screen.

Flaws in many products—such as tires and glass food containers—are difficult to spot with an optical inspection system on the high-speed production line.

Conventional laser interferometry systems are also too slow. The object under test has to be stopped completely while the picture is taken. Then the film must be processed, requiring another 10 minutes.

Earle D. Jones, director of SRI's electronic and bioengineering laboratory, said that by adapting the use of television to the laser the operator can make changes in the surfaace of the object under test. At the same time, corresponding changes in the interference pattern can be seen on the television screen.

For example, if the operator changed air pressure in a tire containing a buried air bubble, an obvious bulls-eye would appear in the interference pattern on the video screen, highlighting the presence of the flaw.

MRS. LILLIAN SOHNEN is an Internal Revenue agent, also practices amateur psychology, has learned about an assortment of professions, and received 3 marriage proposals. (UPI Telephoto)

Chimneys Must Fit Topography

NEW YORK (UPI) — Tall smoke stacks must be built to meet air quality standards, according to an environmental authority.

To do this, says Charles N. Anderson, Jr., president of Alcolac, Inc., whose subsidiary provides environmental services, said they must be designed with consideration for the surrounding topography.

"Temperatures and wind flows, in addition to density of emissions and types of fuel, must be factored in when determining the height and characteristics of a stack," Adnerson said.

Momentum To Success Comes In Motivation

'It's not easy'..... 'You made it.'

By DR. HAIM GINOTT

Note to readers: The encounters depicted in my column are designed to serve as a practical guide to improved communication. They are not be taken literally. They should be adapted to individual situations and individual ways of speaking.

EVEN MORE THAN by ordinary priase a child can be motivated by adults' remarks reflecting recognition of the child's difficulty. Example:

Pruitt was playing basketball. He missed the first two baskets. His disappointment showed in the faces he made.

The teacher commented, "It's not easy." Pruitt tried again and finally made the basket. The teacher said, "You made it. You got it in." She intentionally avoided saying, "Good Boy. You're doing great." Pruitt made only three baskets out of fifteen attempts, but he continued playing and trying.

HERE IS ANOTHER example of how a simple statement of recognition immediately produced a desire to improve:

Russell, 9, a poor student, made a drawing of an ear. The teacher looked at it and said. "Your diagram has many details." Russell's face beamed. He said, "I'll draw one with more details.

TO MOTIVATE him, one needs to talk to a child's heart. The following episode illustrates motivation at its best:

Joshua came bursting in the door. "Mom," he said, I got a 98 on a social studies test. The teacher took two points off for spelling.

Mother: Spelling? On a social studies test? What were the words?

Joshua: Parliament, and license.

OFFICIAL LICENSE

Dear Joshua:

I hearby give you LICENSE to misspell PARLIAMENT!!!!!

Official signature

Mother

When Joshua read the note he raced back to the kitchen with a big grin on his face. He gave mother a kiss and said, "Thanks for the note. And I'll never misspell license or parliament agian."

PARENTS OFTEN ASK how to motivate children to use good English: The following dialogue gives us a clue. It took place between Diane, 11, and an adult neighbor.

Diane: What is your opinion of the open classroom?

Neighbor: That's a hard question to answer. I feel two ways about the open classroom.

Diane: You mean you feel ambivalen?

Neighbor: I don't know. I always thought that ambivalent meant that you feel more negative than positive.

Diane: Oh, no. Ambivalent means when you feel two ways about something.

Neighbor: How do you know that word?

A CHILD IS ENCOURAGED to further efforts when his achievements are recognized, but not evaluated or judged:

Thank You

For cleaning the brushes: Sara, Allen

For solving the mystery of drawer locks and helping orgainze the paint and paper: John

For remembering to bring in newspapers: Jimmy, Lucille, Jay

Milk Sausage Is Just For Export

SYDNEY (UPI) — Australian agricultural scientists have developed a sausage made from milk. Expert taste panels have hailed the protein-filled sausage as "the real thing."

But the sausage will not be on sale in Australia. It's designed for export. Researchers also are investigating the possibilities of a milk protein recipe for hamburgers.

D.H. Conley HIGHLIGHTS

By MARY L. BRANCH

Nineteen students and three teachers from D.H. Conley chapter of Future Business Leaders of America attended the Nineteenth Annual leadership Conference which met in Durham, March 29-April 1. Attorney General Robert Morgan was the main speaker at the First general session on Friday night. He was introduced by the State FBLA vice-president, Lorraine De Cuzzi of Conley.

The highlight of the conference was the annual awards banquet on Friday evening at which time the Conley Chapter received first place in chapter installation.

Members receiving recognition were Jesse Amos Branch, third place winner in Mc. FBLA, who was presented a check and a certificate by Jim Cochran of the North Carolina Savings and Loan League, Greensboro; and Miss Lorraine De Cuzzi who was recognized as the alternate for the James L. White Scholarship by Dr. James L. White from East Carolina University.

Members from Conley who attended and the contest entered were as follows: J.A. Branch, Mr. FBLA; Carron Dennis, Miss FBLA; Teresa Baker and Randy Joyner, display; Wanda Dail, public speaking; Linda Lloyd, spelling; Lind Smith, accounting;

One section of the food service class supervised by Mrs. Gail Brinson (student teacher in Home Economics under Mrs. Sarah Perkins) prepared two luncheon menus Friday and served them to the faculty customers. The restaurant simulation was a learning experience about actual restaurant organization in preparation, serving, cleaning up, and most of all, cooperation. Some of the girls participating in the special activity were Brenda Harper, Betty Cooper, Barbara Carmon, Brenda Hardee, Brenda Speight and Marie Green.

Walter Weed, a member of the Missionary Church, has been coming to Conley to talk about the Bible. This was mainly for Mrs. Myrtle Allen's classes, but all interested people could come.

A guest speaker, Ding Painter, talked about air and water pollution with the students of Mrs. Nancy Evans, Mrs. Mamie Dews and Steve Morgan of the science department.

High school registration is almost complete. Plans are being made for eighth grade orientation. This even will take place May 1 in the Conley auiditorium at 9:00 for the incoming freshmen.

The ROTC Drill team from North Carolina State University along with the Farmville Central Band will be here Tuesday at 2:00.

Teacher's Appreciation Day, sponsored by the Future Homemakers of America, was Thursday. A poem, written by Bertha Credle, expresses the theme.

Teacher Appreciation Day

Teachers, what are they good for?
In my opinion, they're important,
They can't please every girl or boy
But they help us in ways other people can't.

Sometimes it's hard; but they keep trying.
So let's show them our appreciation
Because time is steadily flying.
Yes, let's show our apprecation
Before it's too late.
The F.H.A. are doing something
We're having a Teachers' Appreciation Day.

The teachers are important
And they're friends, too.
Sometimes they understand what other people can't
And thats a help to you!

Teachers, we like you
So keep up the good work;
Your work is helping us, too.
So remember these few words:
WE Students Appreciate You!

HONORED

Girl Scout Council Had Spring Meeting Here

The Spring Council meeting of Girl Scout Council of Coastal Carolina was held at the Ayden, Golf and Country Club, Wednesday.

Members from 16 Neighborhoods were greeted by Mrs. W. R. Rand of Wilson, Council President. A flag ceremony was conducted by Junior 155 and 161 of Ayden.

The groups divided into discussion groups to consider some urgent needs and concerns of young people and what Girl Scouting is doing to help meet these needs. The groups also discussed what course whey would like to see the Council take in the future.

Lunch was served following the invocation given by The Rev. Ted Wilson of the Ayden United Methodist Church. Recognitions were given to a number of active Girl Scout leaders for service to the Girl Scouts of Coastal Carolina, totaling more than 250 years. Those honored included Mr. W. O. Kemp, Jr. of Goldsboro, who was awarded a statuette; Mrs. Ted Arnold, Jr., Paradise Point-Berkley Manor; Mrs. Scott Berkeley, Goldsboro; Mrs. Lee Blackwell, Goldsboro; Mrs. Lawrence Bowers, Columbus County; Mrs. Edna Bradshaw, Burgaw; Mrs. T. E. Brown, Wilson; Mrs. James Downing, Cherry Point-Havelock; Mrs. Gaston Foster, Hatteras; Mrs. Kenneth Gillikin, Washington; Mrs. Mary Harris, Kinston; Mrs. B.E. Hill, New Hanover; Mrs. W.M. Reading, Greenville; Mrs. Sheldon Swann, Duplin County; Mrs. James Ward, Plymouth; Mrs. Oscar Webber, Cherry Point-Havelock; Mrs. J. M. Williams, Jr., Manteo; Mrs. Ransom Worsley, Rocky Mount; and Mrs. R. L. Zepp, Roanoke Rapids, who were presented silver trays.

T. E. (Ed) Brown, Jr. of Wilson was honored with a plaque for his service to Girl Scouting through the years. A certificate of appreciation was given to the Roanoke Rapids Herald for their continuous support and excellent coverage of Girl Scouting.

A film entitled "The Difference is You" a tribute to the excellent job done by the volunteers in serving girls through Girl Scouting, was shown.

Jean Westwood Considers Race

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Jean Westwood, former Democratic National Committee chairman, plans to conduct a poll to measure her chances of winning a U.S. Senate seat next year.

Mrs. Westwood, who resigned her committee post under fire after the party was swamped in last fall's presidential election, said either she or freshman U.S. Rep. Wayne Owens would have a chance of winning the Utah seat on the Democratic ticket. The office is currently held by Republican Wallace Bennett, 74, who has not said whether he will seek re-election in 1974.

If Owens, 35, chooses to run for the Senate, Mrs. Westwood said, she might run for the U.S. House of Representatives.

Rest Of World Watches U.S. Crime, Penal Reform

CHICAGO (UPI) — If crime is a problem so is punishment, and the United States is a world leader in both.

Americans long have attracted international attention for the lawbreakers among them and the current U.S. crime rates, according to Encyclopaedia Britannica, are among the highest observed in modern societies.

But U.S. leadership is even more pronounced in the field of penal reform because the prison system as it operates in nearly all parts of the world is largely an American development, Britannica says.

Prison advancement began late in the 18th century, concurrent with a growth of new philosophies of human conduct based largely on a decline of vengeance.

Until well into the 19th century, penalties against the convicted criminal consisted almost entirely of execution, public degradation, corporal punishment, and banishment—plus fines and confiscation of property.

Societies throughout the world applied the "eye-for-an-eye" principle, some quite literally. Many accused persons were disfigured or branded. Confinement itself thus became something of a reform when imprisonment gained acceptance as a method of punishment.

It was during the 16th century that houses of "correction" were established in England and Europe. Although reformation was intended, the unsanitary conditions of these prisons resulted in widespread agitation against them. The cry then was the same as now—the prisons don't so much reform criminals as foster crime.

The reformers' goal of changing the mentality of offenders was prominent in the Pennsylvania prison system, initiated by the Quakers, where each inmate was given a solitary cell with a Bible. New York's Auburn prison, constructed in 1816, features small cells and silent work. The lockstep and striped suit were Auburn innovations.

First Reformatory

A prison which opened at Elmira, N.Y., in 1876 was the first establishment for young offenders to be called a reformatory. But probably the most important correctional developments were probation and parole.

The first use of probation generally is ascribed to the efforts of John Augustus, in Massachusetts, starting in 1841.

A series of statutes enacted by New York State in the latter part of the 19th century marked the earliest significant development of an established parole system. It embodied indefinite sentences and a return to custody for parole violation.

Almost immediately after New York's lead other states began enacting parole laws, and by 1900 such statues were in effect in nearly half of the states. By 1922 the federal government and all but four states had enacted parole laws, and by the second half of the 20th century, parole had become an integral part of the penal system of every state.

The popularity of parole has not been based solely on kindness. It requires approximately 10 times more money to support a man in custody as to supervise him on parole. In addition, the parolee is able to feed his family and to pay taxes.

This cost factor may rise in significance, with the annual price of punishment escalating. There are well over 200,000 prisoners confined in more than 200 state and federal institutions, with an annual increase of the inmate population estimated at 4,500.

The cost of constructing housing for this growing prisoner group approaches $45 million per year.

Of all prisoners, 98 per cent are returned to civilian life after an average stay in most institutions of well under three years. Evidence from police, court and parole files suggests that nearly half the persons discharged from penal institutions return to crime, in most cases within a year after release.

Generally, the longer an offender has been confined in prison and the more times he has been committed, the higher the probability of his continued criminality. Thus, criminologists continue to try to find a better way and prisons now are being subjected to the same critical scrutiny that earlier resulted in the substitution of imprisonment for the "eye-for-an-eye" method of crime control.

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, APRIL 8, 1973

CARROLL RIGHTER'S HOROSCOPE

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A strange day when best results are obtained if you concentrate on studying how to replace overemotionalism with objective reasoning. You may have a tendency to feel sorry for yourself which could bring added trouble.

ARIES (Mar. 32 to Apr. 19) Home ties may think you have not been thoughtful enough of them lately, so forget own affairs and do something nice for them. Remove whatever is causing strife at home. Avoid gossip.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) After attending services, go out with congenials and have a happy time. Travel with utmost care and avoid an accident. You can now handle a civic matter with real wisdom. Be wise.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You are now conscious of how to have more income in the future and can take the initial steps to make it a reality. A practical person can give you some good advice. Show your appreciation.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Get out of that subjective mood you find yourself in so that others will not take advantage of you. Do whatever will improve your appearance and become a more popular person.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) A good day to take care of those small tasks that have accumulated while you were busy. Take time to make plans for the future. A friend comes to you for help. Be as generous as you can.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You feel that good friends are not as kind and thoughtful as usual, but they have their own troubles now. Keep busy at personal matters and forge ahead. Avoid those who oppose you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Avoid taking risks where you good name is concerned and be sure to follow every rule that applies to you. Avoid a higher-up who is in a bad mood and wants to vent his ire on someone.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You have strange ideas which may be misinterpreted and frowned upon by others, so don't express them for the time being. Pick a better time for a trip you have in mind. Count the cost.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Make sure you attend to those duties that are expected of you. Don't trust your intuition today which is apt to be out of gear. The evening is excellent for entertaining. Be poised.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) An associate could be spouting off for some reason, but don't let it bother you. Use objectivity in handling a problem that may come up today. Don't go off on any tangents.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Keep busy at that work ahead of you and forego pleasure for now. You owe a debt of gratitude to one who is of help to you, so be sure to show your appreciation. Relax tonight.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Although you want to have fun, the price is too expensive, so forget it for now. Engage in the detail work of that hobby you like so much. Show others that you are most intelligent.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . he or she will be one of those delightful young people whose nature is quite emotional. Teach to be self-controlled via the right spiritual training. The chart is fine for the field of selling. Dealing with the public can be most successful here. Much happiness can be attained if your youngster is given the proper spiritual training early in life.

CARROLL RIGHTER'S HOROSCOPE

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Much activity getting in supplies, taking steps to improve home or office. Beauty treatments, or other measures to improve personal appearance favored. Be happy.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Do whatever will improve your appearance and show thoughtfulness for others that will bring good results. Get into business matters that are important and handle them well. Stop being so belligerent.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) If you show admiration for your good allies and friends, you make big strides forward now. Do necessary shopping today. Avoid some situation that could get you into trouble later.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You may feel a lack that is not true at all, so analyze your situation well. Go over your budget and eliminate whatever you no longer need. Plan some way to make your life happier in the future.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Do whatever will make those you admire feel more important instead of criticizing them. The social is fine as long as you stick with congenials. Have a more optimistic outlook on life.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Study the secret aims you have and quietly go after them, but with vim and vigor. Take care of those home affairs that require your attention. Show you are conscientious in all you do.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Begin the week properly by getting in touch with good friends and showing you can be helpful to them. Some new friend or associate may be of assistance to you in the future, though now somewhat of a bore.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Get into the outside tasks that can give you the success you want and the respect of those in high position. Take your talents to a bigwig and you can commercialize on them. Do not get into any arguments with others.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Look into new outlets that could become part of your living and make new associates of value. Get into the studies that give you the information you want. Don't permit others to intimidate you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) With the new week you can delve right into the tasks that are important to your welfare early and get them behind you quickly. Talk over with mate those fascinating ideas. Get the right slant for the future.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Don't start any argument with mate or an associate or you can certainly regret it later on. Keep the promises you have made scrupulously and do not lose your temper with anyone. Avoid one who talks too much.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Show enthusiasm at your work as you start the new week and make a fine impression on co-workers who then cooperate. Plan rest periods so you do not get too tired, can do your best. Think.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You have plenty of energy and should use it constructively instead of just running around having a good time. Avoid that jealous individual. Plan time to smooth out that hobby you like so much.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . he or she will be one of those individuals who will want to destroy almost everything around him or her while young, or take things that belong to others, so teach early to have respect for the property of others as well as own belongings. Give as fine an education as your child will take, and fit for a good career in whatever the forte may be. Fine ability at languages here. Sports are also a natural. Handle with wisdom.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

STANFORD, Calif. (UPI) — The percentage of senior women at Stanford University interested in graduate business study nearly doubled from 1971 to 1972, a university report shows.

The percentage of women who intend to study for a graduate business degree increased from 3.6 per cent in 1971 to 6.0 per cent in 1972. Stanford awarded 1,700 undergraduate degrees last June and about the same number in June 1971.

Shirley Jones: How Women's Lib Made My Marriage Better

Ask Them Yourself

FOR PHYLLIS DILLER

How did you ever dream up that crazy hairdo that you wear?—B. D. Carter, Cedar Falls, Iowa

● The fright-wig look was really an accident. I was losing my hair and went to a scalp clinic for treatments. They gave me some medication and a currycomb, and twice a day I had to brush my hair from the roots up. I would lean over and do it over and over again. Well, it was inevitable that one day I wouldn't have enough time to comb it out properly. So I showed up at an appointment with this crazy hairdo that looked like I'd stuck my finger in an electric-light socket. The reaction was so good that I decided to use it on the show. It became my trademark. That was about nine or ten years ago. Unfortunately, the combing and the medication didn't solve my problems. That's why I wear wigs all of the time. If I didn't, I'd look like a little old lady!

FOR CONNIE STEVENS

Have you ever given a party that was a flop?—Mrs. L. R. G., Mechanicsville, Va.

● When I appeared at the Flamingo Hotel in Las Vegas, I threw a party and invited about 250 people. There wasn't room enough in the house itself to accommodate everybody, so the group spilled over into the garden where I had tables and chairs set up. A half hour later, the automatic sprinklers next to my property went on, and all my guests—and their food—got thoroughly soaked.

FOR EARL MORRALL, pro football quarterback

I saw some talk about your criticizing Joe Namath's life-style. Did you?—John Allen, Atlantic City, N.J.

● Although I didn't expect the incident to receive so much publicity, yes I did criticize Namath's life-style. I just don't like the idea of his being looked on as someone to be imitated by children.

FOR ART LINKLETTER

You told in Family Weekly how you've adopted children from all over the world. Why? Is there a shortage of American children up for adoption?—R. J. Davis, Las Vegas, Nev.

● Mrs. Linkletter and I have "adopted" some 16 different foreign children through the "Foster Parents' Plan," the WAIF project and the World Vision group. This is our way of caring for tiny children who need food, medicine, clothes and a roof over their heads. I don't feel that this is bad. Nor does it lessen my concern for needy children in the U.S.

You've starred in a number of horror pictures lately that have PG ratings. Don't you think this stuff is bad for young people?—T. Z. Lewis, Hackensack, N.J.

● On the contrary. I think it is marvelous for young people to experience this kind of excitement. Personally, I much prefer it to realistic violence like "Ma Barker," which I also played in. I don't think the audience—including young people—takes this supernatural stuff seriously.

FOR CHARLES M. SCHULZ, creator of "Peanuts"

Will the characters in "Peanuts" ever get any bigger?—Leslie Wolfe, Bay St. Louis, Miss.

● The only characters in "Peanuts" who may get older are the very tiny ones that sometimes come into the strip. I doubt very much if characters like Charlie Brown will age more than a few months during the next ten years.

FOR BILLY WILLIAMS, Chicago Cubs

● Sandy Koufax. He had an overpowering fast ball and one of the sharpest-breaking curve balls I've ever seen. Lefties don't usually give me a hard time, but he sure did.

FOR CHER BONO, TV star

Do you do something special to keep so slim, or do you just diet?—Roberta Fredericks, Lima, Ohio

● Sonny has to watch what he eats, but I don't. I guess I have a lot of extra energy and easily burn off calories. I've always been rather slim and have had very few health problems. I feel terrific since the birth of our daughter. My metabolism or something changed. I still have bad eating habits, but now with a daughter at least I try to set a good example.

FOR TONY RANDALL, actor

● I buy my clothes off the rack. Doesn't everybody?

1. Nope. He's Alfonso Cliggitt, divorce lawyer. Gimmick: far out dress to intimidate the opposition. Smokes cigarettes made of dried tundra. 2. Harold A. Baer, rare book expert. ("Books Old and Rare from Harry Baer.") Thinks rolling his own makes him look younger. A real dingbat. 3. If she's the Camel Filters smoker, the guy with the beard is Jean Harlow. 4. Gene Harlow. 5. Right! He's just himself. And he sees through all the gimmicks. That's why he smokes an honest, no-nonsense cigarette. Camel Filters. Easy and good tasting. Made from fine tobacco. 6. A. Boswell Farquar. Gimmick: a white (not green) parrot. Hasn't seen a movie in years. They won't let his parrot in. 6a. Parrot. Smokes a meerchaum pipe but has trouble keeping it lit.

Camel Filters. They're not for everybody (but they could be for you).

Shirley Jones: How Women's Lib Has Made My Marriage Better

My date with Shirley Jones was for 3 p.m. at the Beverly Hills Hotel's Polo Lounge. When I showed up five minutes early, Shirley was already waiting. A bit unusual for an actress. But then, Shirley Jones is one of the more unusual people in Hollywood. That's why her separation from actor Jack Cassidy came as such a shock to her friends and fans. Shirley says they are reconciled now—so that's why I phrased my first question in the past tense.

FAMILY WEEKLY: Do you think "Hollywood" was responsible for your split-up?
SHIRLEY: I think our split-up had absolutely nothing to do with show business. It is the time we are living in. Marriage is becoming obsolete. The way we live today, it's hard to maintain a marriage.
FW: In what way?
SHIRLEY: Well, women are liberated, and men aren't too thrilled about it. We've become more individualistic. We try to be, we want to be as individualistic as a man.
FW: Does that mean that if you hadn't gotten married to Jack, you would just want to live with him and have children by him without the benefit of marriage?
SHIRLEY: No. Maybe if I were younger I would feel that way. But not with my background. I can't change that rapidly.
FW: Then what brought about the crisis in your marriage?
SHIRLEY: When I began to assert myself, to make my own decisions. It was a matter of my growing up, maturing in my own way. I was very young when I married, and eventually I had to grow up, become more opinionated. Let's face it – become more mature. It was a gradual thing. I didn't just change overnight.
FW: I've known you ever since you came to Hollywood, and I've never seen you lose your temper. Does this mean you've acquired a temper?
SHIRLEY: I'm not a screamer (unless I'm screamed at), but I am more capable of losing my temper now. And that's why I think my marriage to Jack is better now than it was before.
FW: What do you mean?
SHIRLEY: It used to take me too long to speak up, to let go. My husband loves a good fight. Before, he never had anyone to fight with at home. He does now!
FW: Shirley Jones has always been identified with wholesomeness. What was the reaction of your friends and fans when you were separated?
SHIRLEY: There was no change in my friends. Well, except for men—obviously.
FW: Why?
SHIRLEY: Suddenly I was available. I'd been married for 16 years. It was a new world for me.
FW: Did you like it?
SHIRLEY: Being available was interesting for a while. It was a different way of life, and I enjoyed it. But then going back to the cat-and-mouse game was kind of a bore. Honestly, I didn't realize people still acted like that!
FW: How did your children take the separation?
[Editor's note: Shirley and Jack Cassidy have three sons, Shaun, 14, Patrick, 10 and Ryan 7.]

FW: Meaning?
SHIRLEY: They didn't like my dating. But that's because they're boys, and I am their mother.
FW: What about your fans? How did they react?
SHIRLEY: Most of them said Jack and I should get back together again for the sake of the children—and mostly for David's sake! [Editor's note: David Cassidy is Jack's son by his first marriage.]
FW: How did David take your separation?
SHIRLEY: He was very unhappy about it, but he didn't do anything to interfere, except to vocalize his displeasure.
FW: What did you learn from your separation?
SHIRLEY: I learned that you can't change anybody. That's something I should have known from the very beginning. In other words, if I love Jack—and I do—I simply have to accept him as he is. And once I accepted this I knew that our marriage would be stronger than it was before.
FW: You say that people don't change. But didn't you just tell me that you had changed?
SHIRLEY: Well, that's different. Women's Lib or not, I guess if anyone changes in a marriage, it is easier if it's the woman.
FW: With David being so popular, how do you keep your other children from feeling left out?
SHIRLEY: First of all, by pointing out that what is happening to David is a once-in-a-lifetime thing. And more important, it is David himself who keeps them from becoming jealous.
FW: How?
SHIRLEY: David's miserable most of the time! They see that he has absolutely no privacy. He can't do anything he wants to do. They know he has money, but his life is a machine run by others. He can't go where he wants, do what he wants.
FW: Does this mean he will eventually give up being a performer?
SHIRLEY: I think the sooner the better, as far as he is concerned. He eventually wants to produce records himself. He's already easing into it. That's what he loves most. And he makes those weekend stints because he loves music so much. As for "The Partridge Family" show, he just puts up with it. It's become a chore for him.
FW: Why?
SHIRLEY: Because I think that being in show business isn't good for young people.
FW: Do your boys agree with you?
SHIRLEY: No. The oldest boy wants to be a singer in a rock 'n' roll group. He already performs at school, and he and three other kids have recently played for three Bar Mitzvahs at $400 each. They call themselves "White Lightning." Nowadays they practice at a neighbor's house, but they used to practice at our house. My days were like episodes out of "The Partridge Family." Like one day when I was driving home, I heard this horrible noise. The closer to home I got, the louder it got. And when I drove down my alley, I realized it was coming from my garage! It was horrendous!
FW: Any complaints?
SHIRLEY: Complaints! Not only did the neighbors complain, the police arrived! So I told them they were no longer to practice in the garage.
FW: And they accepted this?
SHIRLEY: Not at first. They wanted to practice in the bedroom, but I put a stop to that. Finally one of the kids talked his parents into soundproofing their garage, and that's taken care of it—at least for the time being.
FW: What is Jack doing now?
SHIRLEY: He just finished a pilot—"McMasters of Sweetwater"—in which he plays a teacher from Boston who comes to teach school in the West. My only fear is that it is too good, and the networks won't take it. But if they do, I think it will be a hit.
FW: And then both you and Jack will have everything you ever wanted?
SHIRLEY: We have enough now.

Part of the natural life

The natural things in life are wonderful. Like the greenness of spring, or the cool clearness of

Menstruation is natural, too, and should never be a time of dismay or discomfort. To make sure of that, trust the sanitary protection of internally worn Tampax tampons. Insertion is easy, and you'll never feel the tampon when it's properly in place. Removal is easy, too, thanks to a withdrawal cord that's chain stitched the entire length of the tampon so it won't pull off.

NO BELTS NO PINS NO PADS NO ODOR

And because they're worn internally, Tampax tampons won't cause irritation. Won't embarrass you because nothing can slip or bulge. And odor can't form.

A fresh, comfortable, natural feeling is what you want during your period. To match the freshness of the season, what you need is Tampax tampons.

Can We Avoid the Strange Curse

Dr. Apgar with the author, James C. G. Conniff, and Mr. Conniff's retarded son, Mark.

Dr. Apgar and Mr. Conniff—They Have Tragedy in Common

Dr. Virginia Apgar is a self-identified victim of birth defects. One is the fairly common genetic defect of astigmatism, inherited from her father. The other is the potentially more serious inborn "error of metabolism": a tendency to diabetes. "I'm waiting to get it," she says. James C. G. Conniff, who holds the American Heart Association's Howard W. Blakeslee Award for medical reporting, also knows genetic problems firsthand. One son died of cystic fibrosis at seven weeks. Another one, victim of Down's Syndrome, is mentally retarded. "But," says Mr. Conniff, "he's a winner anyway."

Interview with Dr. Virginia Apgar

Vice President, March of Dimes

By James C. G. Conniff

A woman watches her first two children die, one at 18 months, the second at 15 months. Diagnosis each time: Werdnig-Hoffmann disease, a rare disorder of the spinal muscles that is almost always fatal and is hereditary. Question: Should she and her husband risk a third heartbreak?

This is the kind of decision couples are facing every day. Should they risk their own mental health by running the chance of losing another baby? Or should they give up the idea of natural parenthood and gear their thinking toward adoption?

Increasingly, couples who find themselves faced with such decisions are availing themselves of a new body of medical knowledge called "genetic counseling." To learn more about this specialty, author James C. G. Conniff talked with Dr. Virginia Apgar, a leading expert on childbirth and infant disease, and Vice President for Medical Affairs of the National Foundation/March of Dimes.

"Every one of us carries from three to eight defective genes. If the person you marry has the same defective gene, then the chances of having a handicapped child are one in four."

Q. Dr. Apgar, just what are birth defects?

A. The truth is—and I am the first to admit it—we know all too little about so-called birth defects. Actually they're genetic defects, since they begin in the gene long before birth. Until recently, these defects only made their presence known when a handicapped child was born. By then it was usually too late to repair the damage.

Q. What role does "genetic counseling" play?

A. Genetic counseling is a result of our growing sophistication in diagnosing genetic defects. It enables us to identify, early on, telltale signs of trouble—and, often, to take remedial action. We offer genetic counseling to families at more than 100 centers nationwide. One of the techniques is amniocentesis.

Q. What on earth is that?

A. This is when the pregnant woman's doctor passes a hollow needle about as thick as the wire of a paper clip through the patient's abdominal wall into the amnion, or fluid-filled sac, in which the fetus floats. The doctor draws out a small quantity of fluid. The geneticist then grows the cells the fluid contains and subjects them to a microscopic process called "karyotyping." Any defects in the genes of the magnified cells—such as breaks in the chromosomes or missing links—alert the trained geneticist to impending trouble for the fetus. British doctors have used amniocentesis # of Birth Defects?

for 50 years to relieve excess fluid and for other reasons, but it is still not common in the U.S. Some experts foresee that within ten years it will be routine for every pregnant woman over 35. (Chances of having a defective child rise with age.)

Q. How many kinds of birth defects are there?

A. Most people think of genetic defects in narrow terms. They don't realize that these defects contribute to an appalling range of sicknesses. Some 1,500 defects are known to arise from biochemical abnormalities alone. Birth defects underlie more than 25 percent of all the health-care problems. A full 90 percent of the patients in a children's urological ward, for instance, are there with kidney and bladder disorders arising from birth defects. Asthma and allergies can also be caused by genetic defects. I had a cousin, for example, who died from a small dose of a drug that is ordinarily quite safe. But in her, because of some obscure genetic flaw, it destroyed the bone marrow.

It has been estimated that five percent of the U.S. population—as many as 15 million people—could beneficially use genetic counseling. Every one of us carries from three to eight defective genes. If the person you marry has the same defective gene, then the chances of having a handicapped child are one in four.

A. First, an engaged couple should consult both family doctors. Their detailed knowledge of family medical histories will guide them in prescribing further measures. If there are indications of impending hereditary difficulties, any doctor will know where to refer the couple for genetic counseling.

Q. How do you see the outlook for the future?

A. I think the outlook's good. In the next ten years I think we are going to see a lot of advances in our procedures. I think we're also going to see progress at the psychological level—helping people make up their own minds when they receive an adverse karyotype report, instead of trying to get the genetic counselor to do it for them. This help can extend to the counselor, too, so that he does not subconsciously influence the couple with his own outlook. He may say, for example, that there's one chance in four they'll have a handicapped child, instead of three chances in four that the child will be normal. There may be a world of difference between the two statements.

On the whole I am heartened. I am reminded of a young woman who had three mongoloid sisters. When this young woman got married, she was naturally frightened about having a child. Even so, she became pregnant and had amniocentesis, which identified the fetus as unmistakably a mongoloid. Following abortion, she had two normal children. In a case like that, this awesome technique for invading the world of the unborn more than justifies itself. So does the young couple's courage in trying again—successfully.

Needed: More Family-Health Information—Beginning With Your Family

One big problem in combating birth defects is the widespread sketchiness of family medical histories, even in the files of conscientious general practitioners. Parents can probably leave their children no inheritance more valuable than a detailed family-health history that includes information from grandparents, aunts, uncles and even cousins. Why not start yours now?

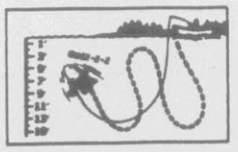
With enough such histories, we could begin to establish base lines for genetic defects, and step up the war against them by pinpointing more accurately their frequency in a given region.

CATCH MORE FISH, BIGGER FISH OR YOUR MONEY BACK!

ACTION LURE swims, dives, flops like a crippled minnow! Buzzes like a dying insect! Drives pan fish, game fish, salt water fish into a frenzy! Gets savage bites that simply can't pull loose from your hook!

Completely under its own power, ACTION LURE swims and dives like a live darting minnow, then returns to the surface to dive again and again, even on a slack line! Dives down deep where the big ones see its free swimming action, hear its buzzing sound, and bite savagely without fear or hesitation.

Swims & dives to 15 feet! No tugging, no pulling! ACTION LURE swims by itself without being pulled, down to 15 feet for up to one hour or more, with a slow, erratic maimed-minnow motion that no fresh or salt water fish can resist. And all the time it sends out its enticing buzzing insect sound to attract fish from yards away! Hauls in trophy-size big-mouthed bass, small-mouthed bass, pike, pickerel, perch, walleye, dogfish, catfish, trout, and every other conceivably type of pan fish game fish, and salt water fish!



Works like magic even when others fail completely! You'll haul in limit catches when others aren't even getting a nibble, in lakes, rivers, streams, oceans, wherever you fish! Just picture your self-propelled ACTION LURE slashing through the water in brilliant reds, white & yellows, only 2" long yet carrying enough fuel to cut through the water for as much as one full hour with a single load! All you do is snap open the fuel chamber, drop in two pellets of fuel. Takes less than 60 seconds; you don't even dirty your hands! Then simply cast or lower ACTION LURE into fresh or salt water and get set for the fishing thrill of your life!

World's first self-propelled lure! ACTION LURE frees you forever from the filthy tasks of digging for worms & crawlers, catching frogs, or paying 50c to $1 for a bucket of minnows that die on you before you can even get them into your boat! It frees you forever from paying $4 or even $5 for those fancy "Dead-as-a-Duck" lures that only work when you tow them! You have nothing to lose! Fish with ACTION LURE for 30 days entirely at our risk! You receive ACTION LURE plus enough fuel to last up to a full year, together with complete instructions. Four "alluring" colors: red, green, purple, yellow. Order all four and save!

ACTION LURE GUARANTEE

ACTION LURE is guaranteed to catch more fish and bigger fish in every kind of water, in every kind of weather. If you are not completely satisfied in every respect, return ACTION LURE within 30 days for complete refund.

Sweet 'n' Sour Chicken With a New Celery Side Dish

This week, Food Editor Marilyn Hansen prepares a chicken dinner complemented by a tasty celery recipe. "Celery," Marilyn reminds us, "is at its peak season now. My Stir-Fry recipe is an adaptation of the Chinese method of cooking. You'll have fun trying it!"

MARILYN'S MENU

Sweet 'n' Sour Baked Chicken
Stir-Fry Fruited Celery—Fluffy White Rice
Soy Sauce—Hot Mustard
Pineapple Chunks and Mandarin Orange Sections
Fortune Cookies—Almond Cookies

STIR-FRY FRUITED CELERY

- 1 stalk (bunch) celery, chilled
- 3 tablespoons vegetable oil
- ⅓ cup minced onion
- 1 cup diced unpeeled red apple
- ½ cup raisins
- 1½ teaspoons salt
- ½ teaspoon ground ginger

1. Trim stem end of celery; cut off leaf portion (save for soups, stews, etc.).
2. Separate celery into ribs, rinse in cold water and dry.
3. Slice celery diagonally about 1-inch thick (you will have about 6 cups); set aside.
4. In a large skillet heat oil until very hot. Add celery and onion; sauté 3 minutes, stirring frequently.
5. Add apple, raisins, salt and ginger; sauté 3 minutes longer, or until celery is just crisp-tender. Makes 4-6 servings

SWEET 'N' SOUR BAKED CHICKEN

- ¼ cup butter or margarine
- ½ cup chopped onion
- ½ cup coarsely chopped green pepper
- ½ cup coarsely chopped carrots
- ¾ cup ketchup
- 1 cup pineapple juice
- 2 tablespoons vinegar
- ¼ cup firmly packed brown sugar
- 2 teaspoons soy sauce
- ½ teaspoon garlic salt
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- Dash ground pepper
- Dash ground ginger
- 1 cup pineapple chunks, drained
- 1 (3 lb.) broiler-fryer chicken, cut up

1. Preheat oven to 400°F. In medim skillet, heat butter until melted, add onion, green pepper and carrots and cook 5 minutes, stirring.
2. Stir in ketchup, pineapple juice, vinegar, sugar, soy sauce, garlic salt, salt, pepper and ginger; cook, stirring constantly, until mixture boils. Add pineapple chunks.
3. Arrange chicken pieces skin side up in 13x9x2-inch baking pan. Pour sweet and sour sauce over all. Bake covered 45 minutes. Uncover and bake about 30 minutes longer, or until chicken tests done.
Makes 4 servings

What Is That Mysterious Stuff, "Catnip"?

If you love gardening and cats, why not grow some catnip? An easy-to-sprout variety is available already prepackaged in cans filled with soil, plant food and the catnip herb. (At gift stores for about $3.) Directions: Open lid, place in sunny spot, water as necessary, and watch it grow. . . . Technically, catnip refers only to the leaves and tops of an herb, Nepeta cataria. It serves as a mild nerve stimulant for cats. Catnip is neither digested nor regurgitated. Unless a great deal is ingested—and this is rare—it cannot do any harm. It is the odor, not the taste, that causes Tabby to roll over in playful antics; he need not eat it to become "intoxicated." . . . Indoor cats, in particular, can often benefit from the stimulation catnip provides for exercise.—By Felicia Ames

In the Fourth Century, fringe Christians had a field day with theories about Christ. The pendulum swung first one way and then the other. He was God, yes, but only the shadow of a man—that was one opinion. He was man, yes, but no more God than any other man—that was another view. Scholars, Church Councils and Popes worked their way through the confusion and gave careful, final expression to the truth about Jesus Christ.

But errors die hard and in the ensuing centuries the balance of the human and divine in Christ has been upset more than once. Good people in their zeal to imitate Christ and live by his principles often get carried away in private theories. The intention is good, but the effect is a distorted portrait of the Lord.

Recent developments suggest that distortion is again abroad in the land. It is time to listen again to the authentic Christian teaching on Christ. He is neither superman nor superstar. He is in a category all his own. Read about Him as traditional Catholic teaching sees Him. Write today for our free pamphlet, "Jesus Christ is True Man." No one will call on you.

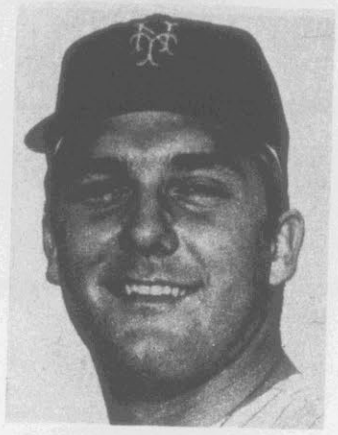
Sports Mini-Profile

"TUG" McGRAW:
"The Brat" Makes It



Frank Edwin "Tug" McGraw of the New York Mets is the highest paid ($75,000 a year) relief pitcher in baseball. At one time, starting pitchers who had become too old to pitch complete games were used as reliefers. But McGraw personifies the new relief specialist. Relief pitchers must be nerveless, self-confident types who won't panic when handling a crisis situation. McGraw is admirably suited to his job. He is a cheerful, off-beat type who loves to perform in front of huge, excitable crowds and never gives way to jitters. As a result, he saved a record 27 games for the Mets last year. . . . A native of Martinez, Calif., McGraw broke into the Florida Rookie League with a no-hit game. He later pitched for Jacksonville in the International League, then played a vital role for the Mets as they won the world championship in 1969. . . . The 28-year-old McGraw is a showman who talks a blue streak. When he first came to the Mets, the bullpen coach called him a "cocky spoiled brat." Now the same coach says, "He's still cocky, but he has every right to be. He's got the record to prove it." McGraw's "office" at Shea Stadium is the bullpen. Here, while waiting to be called to the rescue, he reads the papers, opens fan mail, munches on popcorn and pretzels, and takes an occasional nap! . . . McGraw and his wife Pam lived in a camper for one year but now have a conventional home in California. They also have one child.

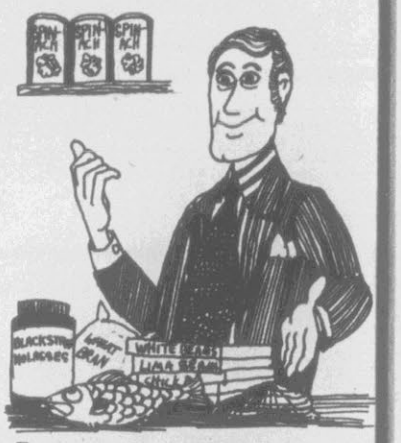
Where Should You Get Your Iron?



For years, Popeye has been exhorting youngsters to eat their spinach. But did you know spinach is not the best source of iron? All of us need iron—an essential and vital mineral for blood building and other body functions. Children especially need iron for growth, and women need iron to replace iron lost in menstruation. The problem with the iron found in some foods (like spinach) is that, for biochemical reasons, it is not always as absorbable as iron found in other foods. Moreover, when certain foods like milk, eggs and some beans are combined with iron, the iron can become even less absorbable. Unabsorbed iron is merely passed through the body as waste, and does no good at all. What foods contain the most useful iron? Frozen lima beans, lentils, white beans and chick-peas are among the best, according to Dr. Elmer L. Severinghaus of the Vitamin Information Bureau. Other good iron foods include: liver, duck, blackstrap molasses, fish flour, wheat bran, oysters, dried apricots, and walnut or pistachio nuts.

Diet Watch

Do You Use Sweets to Recapture Childhood?

If you were "rewarded" with candy as a child for being good, cooperative, obedient, you may find it more difficult to give up such foods when you want to lose weight. Why? Because you may associate the sweet taste with approval. And since as adults we still want to feel loved and approved of, as one psychologist explains it, "an easy way to recapture the childhood association is by popping a piece of candy into our mouths." What's the solution? One diet specialist gives his patients low-calorie candy bars made with artificial sweeteners; another recommends breaking a ten-cent candy bar into eight pieces, wrapping each piece in foil, and having one only when you're under stress.

People and You

Are You Good at Driving A Bargain?

When called upon to bargain, how can you avoid being outfoxed? Psychologists have been experimenting with this problem. Here are some guidelines you can keep in mind. Starting with an extreme money position can be useful if you then carefully make the necessary concessions as bargaining continues. Beginning with an extreme position and then refusing to budge may sometimes work. Often, though, it makes the other person stubborn. He sees you as selfish and unfair. Even when you finally suggest a price that might have appealed to him before, he may now have trouble agreeing to it. "I'm not doing business with you," may be his reaction as he stalks off. Also, if you do force a bargain at your extreme opening price, you usually leave the other person dissatisfied. He'll be in no hurry to trade with you again. However, combining an extreme opening (which often does bring you a better final settlement) with concessions as you bargain leaves the other person content. He feels you've been fair and seen his side.

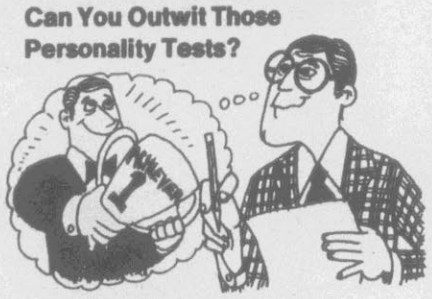
Jobmanship

Can You Outwit Those Personality Tests?



Nowadays when you apply for many kinds of jobs, you take a "personality" test to see if you are "suited" to the position. Though critics complain that some of our greatest men surely would have flunked these conformist tests, many employers rely heavily on them. A recent experiment indicates that you can fool the test if you know what characteristics the tester is seeking. Martin Gross, who made a three-year study of tests and how they're scored, reports in his book, "The Brain Watchers," that to succeed with these tests you must present yourself as near perfect as possible in the traits the job requires. If you're seeking an executive position, you can be sure they're very interested in your desire for "achievement." If you work more for the pay and what it will buy, rather than the sense of pure "achievement," don't admit it. The test may put some tough "achievement" choices to you, such as, "Pick one: A) I like to help my friends when they are in trouble. B) I like to do my very best in whatever I undertake." Choose the "achiever" answer, B.—By S. R. Redford

Celebrity Soapbox

LIV ULLMANN:
Divorce Settlements Are Unfair to Men

"If women are to have the same rights as men, then they should not have all the rights in a divorce." The speaker is Liv Ullmann, starring in "The Emigrants," "The Settlers" and "Cries and Whispers." "I have the impression that when a divorce occurs in America, a man loses almost all his money and everything that he has. This is not the way it is in Scandinavia. A woman is expected to have some responsibility in her own life. When a woman has contributed to a marriage for many years, she should get some financial settlement when there is a divorce. But that is different from the man being expected to give up everything. A woman has the responsibility to work and strengthen her own existence. I think a bitter financial battle is terrible. I believe in continued friendship after a marriage. The best thing that can happen for a woman after a divorce is to turn it into a friendship, not fight about money. You will be happier remaining friends."

If You Can Lick a Stamp—You Can Lick Your Weight Problem!

Now, if you don't lose weight, you can't lose money.

Because Northwestern Pharmaceuticals will not deposit your check or money order for four weeks after your order is mailed. That'll give you plenty of time to receive it, try it—and see for yourself that it really works for you.

If—for any reason—you're not thrilled with the results, all you have to do is return the unused portion within the four weeks. Your uncashed check or money order will be sent to you by return mail!

In the first place, it's a proven product. Northwestern's Weight-Loss Plan has been on the market for over 11 years. Hundreds of thousands have tried it—and less than 2% have asked for their money back! And if you have any questions about its safety or potency, Northwestern urges you to check with your doctor.

It's a different product. Northwestern's Weight-Loss Plan is different—and effective—in all these ways:

First—It's your plan... your age, your height, your weight, and how much you want to lose... these things are all taken into account when you select your Plan! The truth is that if you need to lose 50 pounds, you need a different kind of diet than someone who needs to lose 10. And you get it.

Second—You choose the foods you like best. Most diets fail because they're so limited or tasteless that you start cheating. Then you get discouraged and give up—or go on a real food binge. Northwestern expects you to cheat. Their plan encourages you to treat yourself to satisfying amounts of such foods as pie with cream topping, pastries, ice cream sundaes, cheesecake, waffles with maple syrup, nutty brownies, mashed potatoes and gravy, creamy salad dressings, milkshakes, creamed vegetables, chili con carne, chow mein, beef stroganoff, and fried chicken!

Third—Your diet is automatically "adjusted"... as your weight goes down. You don't follow a 500-calorie diet or a 1000-calorie diet. In fact, you don't count calories at all! But as you reach your weight goals, you "automatically" eat less—and keep on losing weight.

Fourth—You'll lose... without starving! Follow the Plan and you don't ever have to leave the table feeling hungry! You can even eat out or go on a picnic—and no one will guess that you're dieting!"

Fifth—It's inexpensive! You get everything you need to know and everything you need to take for 60 days. Tablets that supplement food and safeguard your health, but play no role in weight loss, are included at no extra cost. And the full price is just $5.50—less than a dime a day!

How much weight you lose and how fast you lose it obviously depends on you, but here are some excerpts from unsolicited, unusual letters. They were mailed to Northwestern with reorders:

Teenager lost 14 pounds
"I am sixteen years old and have been on the diet for two weeks, and have lost fourteen pounds."

'Lost 18 pounds'
"Without the fear of getting off my diet or nervous tension, I have lost 18 pounds. Thanks to you, I look human again."

Lost 13 pounds in 3 weeks
"Your diet plan is wonderful. Have lost 13 pounds in 3 weeks."

'Wonderful list of foods'
"I have enjoyed being on your diet, and the results have been more than I expected on a diet of this nature, that includes such a wonderful list of foods. I was getting desperate, for I found I could not leave food alone. Now I'm back in my size 9 again."

'You don't get hungry!'
"I started 30 days ago. At that time I weighed 197 pounds. Today I weigh 186 pounds. I feel much better and everyone tells me how much better I look.
"P.S.: Your formula gives you so much to eat that you don't get hungry."

Mother lost 37 pounds
"My mother took them for 6 months and is down to 138 pounds. She weighed 175. I would like to order."

'Down to size 12'
"It has done wonders for me. I was a size 18 last year and am down to size 12 now."

'Painless way to diet'
"The first week I lost weight and didn't realize it until I weighed myself and took my measurements. Thank you for a wonderful and painless way to diet."

Lost 30 pounds in 2 months
"I lost 30 pounds and 2 dress sizes with a 2-month supply. It was out of sheer desperation that I answered your ad in the Chicago Sun-Times. Believe me, I will be eternally grateful."

'Easiest way to lose'
"It is the easiest way I ever lost weight. I have lost 37 pounds."

"I am extremely overweight, and found that shots and pills could not help me because of my nervousness. I tried your plan, starting September 25th and to this date, October 13th, I have lost 12 pounds. The best thing is I am much happier and more active, with no 'nerves'."

'No ill-feelings, nervousness'
"It has been approximately 2 years since I last took your product. At that time I took it for three months and lost 40 pounds. Never for one minute did I experience any ill-feelings, nervousness or weakness. Having had another addition to the family, I once again need your assistance."

'Weight stayed down'
"I lost 30 pounds in only 12 weeks of following the plan and after four more months I have not gained any of it back. I had tried every other diet in the past 20 years and this is the first time my weight stayed down after losing."

And Northwestern is so sure their Plan will work for you that they won't cash your check 'til you're sure. You can lose weight—can't lose money. Why not fill out and mail the Agreement right now?

DANGER

These Bridges Are Considered Unsafe

By Rep. John A. Blatnik

Congressman Blatnik (D-Minn.) is Chairman of the House Public Works Committee and a pioneer in the field of highway-safety legislation.

It happened the day after last Christmas on a narrow wooden bridge east of Fort Sumner, N.M. A busload of children from Austin, Texas, was headed for a religious retreat. Suddenly the bus crashed into a cattle truck, which hit a bridge post and jackknifed. Nineteen members of the church group were killed, 15 others injured. Four years before, that creaky old 20-foot-wide "suicide" bridge, less than half the width required by current standards, had been condemned by engineers as dangerous.

Similar tragic accidents could happen in any state. According to a survey by the American Association of State Highway Officials, a shocking total of about 88,900 bridges along state highways, county roads and city streets are "critically deficient." They may be obsolete, badly deteriorated, structurally unsafe, have insufficient load capacity, present other hazards and even be in imminent danger of collapse.

Of all the nation's bridges, seven out of ten were built before 1935, most of these hardly designed to serve today's high-speed heavy traffic. Every year about 150 bridges fail. One recent study in Virginia revealed that the average accident involving a bridge was twice as severe as the average non-bridge accident.

As I see this critical situation, the multitude of unsafe bridges throughout the country represents just one example of the extent of the great unfinished highway-improvement job ahead of us. This program must be continued and pressed forward to take care of our acute modern-day traffic needs.

Here and there, citizens, alarmed by local defective bridges, have sprung into action. The Pennsylvania PTA has launched a project to get rid of bridge hazards along that state's school-bus routes. When the seven-ton-limit Saugatuck River Bridge at Westport, Conn., built in 1884, was being jammed by massive commuter traffic, the school superintendent ordered school buses to stop using it. Elsewhere in the nation, scores of questionable spans have been closed rather than chance a collapse.

Besides structural weaknesses, narrowness and low weight capacity, many unsafe bridges lack pedestrian protection, and approaches often have sharp curves or exposed abutments.

Here is just a partial list of the worst bridges in the country that have priority for repair or replacement:

● In Texas, on the Queen Isabella Causeway connecting Padre Island with Port Isabel, the Bay Bridge concrete girders are severely cracked, with very rapidly progressing deterioration. Since this area is vulnerable to hurricanes, thousands of lives could be endangered if the bridge were closed.

● Near Lambertville, in New Jersey, the Alexauken Creek Bridge on State Route #29 was put up 17 years ago as an emergency temporary replacement for one washed out in a hurricane. Increased traffic could trigger more brittle failures in the salvaged steel used for this "temporary" span.

● In California, the Mattola River Bridge at Capetown is a single-lane suspension structure built in 1920. Failure of the questionable main cable anchors would lead to a cave-in.

● Indiana's Wabash River Bridge on U.S. #136 in Covington, built back in 1915, shows bad structural defects.

● Over the Ohio River, the 60-year-old bridge between Belpre, Ohio, and Parkersburg, W. Va., is crossed each day by some 10,000 cars. With only a two-ton load limit, it has been closed to trucks.

Other high-risk bridges include:

● Arkansas. Near Goodyear, the St. Francis River Floodway Bridge, along U.S. #80.

● Colorado. North of Denver, the D&SL railroad bridge on S.R. #265.

● Connecticut. Near Waterford, the Niantic River Bridge on S.R. #156.

● Louisiana. Bogue Chitto River Bridge on S.R. #21 near Sun.

● Minnesota. Near Bloomington, the Minnesota River Bridge on T.H. #36.

● North Carolina. The N.E. Cape Fear River Bridge, on U.S. #117 near Wilmington.

● Oregon. Sanderson Bridge over Santiam River on S.H. #226.

● Utah. In Salt Lake City, the North Temple Viaduct, U.S. #40 over D&R, GW and UP railroads.

● Wyoming. Belle Fourche River Bridge on S.R. #24 in Crook County.

Those are only a few of the many thousands of potentially dangerous bridges over which unsuspecting motorists travel every day. They are high on the priority list of bridges slated for replacement or major repair, but at this writing, Federal funds are available for only 61 of these potential killers. There is a crying need not only for Federal action but for state and local initiative to make all our road bridges safe.

Let's not wait for another tragedy like the spectacular collapse in 1967 of Silver Bridge between Point Pleasant, W.Va., and Kanauga, Ohio, on U.S. #35. During the height of the evening rush hour, the 40-year-old chain-suspension bridge tore loose from its supports and thundered into the Ohio River. Forty-six men, women and children were plunged to their deaths.

The resultant Federal-Aid Highway Act authorized a program for bridge inspection and training of inspectors, as well as for an inventory of substandard bridges. Three years ago, $250 million in emergency highway funds were earmarked for bridge replacements in 1972 and 1973. But contracts using only a quarter of those funds had been awarded by the end of 1972.

Toward the end of the last session, Congress—"in the vital interest of the Nation"—called for an aggregate $675 million to be devoted specifically to bridge replacement from mid-1973 to mid-1975, mostly out of the Highway Trust Fund.

Unfortunately, this highway bill died in the final hours of the 92nd Congress last year. I have reintroduced it in the 93rd Congress, and I am confident that this time it will be enacted into law, because the American public at last has awakened to the hidden danger that lurks on our bridges and highways.

INTRODUCING STUFFING THAT'S MADE IN A SAUCEPAN BUT TASTES LIKE IT'S MADE IN A BIRD.

Well, now you can serve it any time because new Stove Top® Brand Stuffing Mix takes only fifteen minutes. In a saucepan, not a bird.

And it's unbelievably delicious. Just the right combination of specially baked bread crumbs, celery, onions, parsley, savory seasonings, and real chicken flavor. With its mouthwatering aroma and homemade texture, Stove Top Stuffing tastes like Thanksgiving. Like you chopped, mixed, put it in a bird, and then waited hours. In fact, most women who've tasted Stove Top say it's as good as their own.

Everything comes in the package. Just add butter and water, and in fifteen minutes you've got stuffing you can serve with anything. Chicken. Chops. Fish. Leftovers. The family will love it as a change from potatoes.

How Mr. Liptai and Mr. Rowe QUIT SMOKING FOR GOOD

A lot of people write telling how they quit smoking with the aid of Bantron®. A common feature of many of these letters tells how Bantron succeeded when nothing else could.

Mr. Peter Liptai of Baldwin Park, California writes: "I have lost count long ago of how many times I have tried to quit and failed. Now with the help of Bantron I have finally kicked the habit and joined the unhooked generation."

This is from Mr. John M. Rowe of Reeds Ferry, New Hampshire: "I have tried many times in 20 years to stop smoking. When I tried Bantron it was with little faith. But it worked, and this is forever, I am sure."

What is the special thing about Bantron that enabled it to do the job for Mr. Liptai and Mr. Rowe when nothing else could?

Lobeline Sulfate (even without buffering) is an effective smoking deterrent, proven in clinical tests. It works not by making smoking unpleasant, but by acting as a substitute for nicotine in the system. It helps to reduce the craving and withdrawal symptoms. But taken in sufficient quantities to be an effective substitute for nicotine, Lobeline by itself often upsets the stomach.

However, some years ago, researchers in a great American University discovered that buffering Lobeline Sulfate with two special antacids virtually eliminated any likelihood of stomach upset. This discovery was a great breakthrough. It was immediately patented, and is now available in Bantron. Because of this discovery, Bantron contains four times as much Lobeline in a single dose as any major smoking deterrent sold in drug stores.

Before Bantron was put on the market it was thoroughly researched. It was tested on hundreds of people who wanted to quit smoking. In these clinical tests, 83%, more than 4 out of 5, quit easily and pleasantly, with the help of Bantron, in only 5 to 7 days.

That's a pretty good batting average isn't it! Why not try Bantron yourself. Join Mr. Liptai and Mr. Rowe and quit smoking for good.

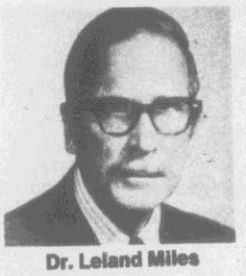
What College Students Learn from Meeting Important People

By Dr. Leland Miles,
President, Alfred University



Dr. Leland Miles

"Rafferty was a verbal bulldozer—a very egocentric man who cut his opponents to pieces in argument. He was guilty of what I call forensic overkill. . . ."

Do Rod Serling, Don Meredith and Ralph Abernathy have anything in common? Well, at least one thing: They were all at one time or another guest speakers at Alfred University, located in Alfred, N.Y.

We speak of Alfred as being "centrally isolated." It's 70 miles from the nearest city, Rochester. We don't see much of the outside world ordinarily, so what we have to do is bring the outside world into Alfred. We do this by inviting well-known personalities to our campus as speakers.

At Alfred, we have a Cultural Program through which we bring the leaders of the nation's great intellectual and cultural movements to us. They speak, answer questions and debate with students and faculty. First, we ask the students and faculty which speakers they would like to hear. Sometimes, the responses are surprising. For instance, the Art Department picked Ralph Nader instead of someone in the arts!

I remember something enlightening in one way or another about every speaker we have had. For instance, Adam Clayton Powell arrived an hour and half late with his bodyguard. When I suggested he meet some of the guests, he said, "Forget it, I won't remember their names anyway." I remember vividly that he was wearing a short-sleeved black shirt and he asked me to feel his muscle. He was very proud of his physical condition. I found him to be very egocentric. In his speech, I think he told the students what he thought they wanted to hear and not what he really wanted to say.

Herbert Marcuse, the philosopher, appears in his writings to advocate violence and the overthrow of the so-called ruling elite of generals and businessmen. He wants them to be replaced with an elite of intellectuals.

All this impresses the reader of his works as representing a man who is perhaps not very pleasant. The amazing thing is that he was one of the most delightful dinner and houseguests that I've ever had. He is very courtly; sort of a German aristocrat. He has all the graces of the aristocracy despite his proletarian views. I would say that I came away feeling a personal fondness for Marcuse.

No matter who the speaker is, I like a man who is the same on stage as he is off. Then you know he is genuine.

Wide World

WHAT DON MEREDITH SAID . . .

Don Meredith, former Dallas Cowboy quarterback, is sportscaster with Howard Cosell on ABC-TV

"There's a thrill connected with being an announcer. It's not quite the same as playing, but it's still exciting. I still get nervous before a game, but the butterflies aren't quite as big as they were when I was a player. Howard and I are good friends and he helps me a lot. You may not remember what he said—but you remember how he said it. I spent four years at Southern Methodist University and eight years with Dallas. And I know what you folks are thinking—with all that practice, I should have been a better quarterback than I was."

. . . AND WHAT I THOUGHT

I was very impressed by Don Meredith. On television, he is characterized as a small-time farm boy next to Howard Cosell. He is not that way at all. He quoted St. Augustine, saying that it was important to love and respect yourself before you can love and respect others. He came across as an intelligent and thoughtful person, and received hearty applause from the students.

WHAT MAXWELL TAYLOR SAID . . .

General Taylor is former Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff; Ambassador to Saigon during the Johnson Administration

"The so-called Pentagon Papers were bad history. They told only a portion of the story of how the U.S. went to war in Indochina. The papers constituted certain documents from the Department of Defense prepared largely by anonymous people. There were no papers from the Department of State or any from the White House. The release of the documents inhibited the effective operation of Government staffs and damaged the Government itself."

...AND WHAT I THOUGHT

I remember being surprised at how much of a gentleman he was. Of course, he is an officer and a gentleman, but he had many characteristics of an 18th-century gentleman in his courtliness, especially with women!

Wide World

WHAT MAX RAFFERTY SAID...

Mr. Rafferty is a conservative; former superintendent of the California Public School System; critic of concepts of education

"The underlying cause of today's campus turmoil is student rebellion against a loss of individual identity and an erosion of self-respect promoted and fostered by the nation's educational establishment. Permissive educators preach a gospel of groupism leading to a decline in individual dignity and competitiveness. Today's students are rebelling against a creeping facelessness inherent in the concept of the large multi-university."

...AND WHAT I THOUGHT

Rafferty was a verbal bulldozer – a very egocentric man who cut his opponents to pieces in argument. He was guilty of what I call forensic overkill; he was harsh with the students. I believe you can make your point without being cruel. However, he was something of a genius at handling hecklers, and apparently he's had quite a few in his life.

Wide World

WHAT RALPH ABERNATHY SAID...

Mr. Abernathy, a civil rights leader, is Director of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference

"The Nixon Administration is a reactionary racist oppressive force. Young people and minorities should seize power and solve the nation's profound, prolonged crisis. The Administration has usurped the powers of Congress in waging an immoral war in Southeast Asia; a war whose main victims are blacks, Chicanos, the poor and the young. There is a power-hungry, arrogant sickness in the minds of the Government decision makers. The people must rise and stop it."

...AND WHAT I THOUGHT

WHAT ROD SERLING SAID...

Mr. Serling is a leading screen and television writer

"Your generation has shown a poignant awareness of the condition of man in beautiful contrast to my own. And yet, you have conversely shown less patriotism, less love of country and less reverence than any other generation. You unhappily have become more familiar with the Tonkin Gulf Resolution than with the Declaration of Independence; more preoccupied with the catch phrase of law and order than with the Bill of Rights. You have viewed the midgets of time—and have rarely been exposed to the giants."

...AND WHAT I THOUGHT

Rod Serling gave a very well-balanced speech, making the statement that for every Mylai there was an Alamo. He is a very earnest and sincere man. He has a great sensitivity to human suffering. This attitude may not always come out in his surrealistic writing, but it does come out when you meet him and in the speech he gave here.

LIVE LONGER AND BETTER

In One Of The Healthiest, Sunniest Climates In All America— Deming, New Mexico!

Your Own Ranchette

(*See Below)

Do you know people who wake up to sunshine 355 days out of each year . . . people who don't know what it is to be oppressed by humid heat in the summer or by the cold clutch of winter damp? Do you know people who can say that in their State the rate of cancer and heart disease is half of what the Nation as a whole faces? Do you know people to whom a suntan is a year 'round commonplace, who work and play in a climate called America's healthiest? We know such people. They live in New Mexico.

THERE ISN'T A PLACE ON EARTH WHERE THE AIR IS PURER, WHERE BODY HEALTH IS MORE LAVISHLY BESTOWED. NO PLACE WHERE THE WORDS AT THE TOP OF THIS PAGE—LIVE LONGER AND BETTER—FIT MORE THAN THEY DO IN NEW MEXICO.

And in all of New Mexico itself it would be difficult to match the climate and beauty of the region surrounding Deming. As spectacular as the northern portion, but without the cold of winter. As dry and pure as over the border to Arizona, but not as hot in the summer. As strangely appealing as the desert yet fertile. And as actively vigorous and prosperous as the city you now live in (maybe more so) yet without the fever, without the tension.

To live anywhere in New Mexico is to live better. The superb climate, naturally air-conditioned in the summer and brilliantly sunny in the winter—the breathtaking beauty of a lavish Nature—the young vigor of a state that is causing an unprecedented business and investment boom—the record which shows that one lives longer, that health improvement is almost miraculous—these are the reasons that tens of thousands of Americans already have come here to live, and hundreds of thousands of others will be following in the immediate years ahead.

Consider then: Here in the center of this miraculous climate and beauty are towns which have grown amazingly in the last few years. Las Cruces, for example: In 1950 it had 12,000 people. By 1960, 37,000 . . . a rise of 300% in 10 years—and still growing. Like Tucson and Phoenix, this area has the same desert allure, where the good fortune of pure air, pure drinking water and a salubrious climate permits lovely towns to flourish. Statistics show the same 85% of possible sunshine, summer and winter, of Phoenix and Tucson; these same figures reveal even purer, drier air.

Beginning 3½ miles from the flavorful city of Deming (population 8,500) are 24,000 acres of former ranches whose farthest boundary is 28 miles from town. Spectacularly set off by the breathtaking Florida Mountains, this land is so typical of the romance of the southwest that it has been photographed for the covers of many magazines including the official publication of the State of New Mexico. What better way to describe its Southwestern flavor than to tell you that when the producers of the movie THE TALL TEXAN sought an authentic locale for their picture, they chose some of the very land we have sub-divided into the DEMING RANCHETTES. THE TALL TEXAN was filmed on our ranch, the same place where you may have a Ranchette of your very own. In this lovely basin every DEMING RANCHETTE fronts graded earth roads already dedicated to Luna County in widths of 50 and 80 feet. Every Ranchette has direct access to avenues leading to three major highways—U.S. Highways 80, 70 and brand new Interstate 10.

DEMING is blessed with water which is called "America's finest drinking water, 99.99% pure." (Shop windows in Deming display this proud claim in its window.) There are homes already built on DEMING RANCHETTES and they all have electricity. When you are ready to build your new home, electricity will be made available to you. Schools, hospitals, churches, shops, movies, golf course, tennis courts—these are located in the charming growing city of Deming. Fertile soil is yours for the planting, and wait until you see the stunning landscape of cotton fields in bloom. Almost everything will grow here when watered—fruits, vegetables, flowers, trees.

The one thing that captivates the fancy of people from every state in the Union is the sincere friendliness of Deming's people. To visit Deming is like going back to the warmth of one's own family. But don't overlook the very practical benefits of living anywhere near Deming.

GOLF—the Rio Mimbres Country Club Golf Course is right in Deming itself. It is a beautiful course with the Florida Mountains towering in the background. You play 12 months a year in this delightful climate and green fees are very reasonable.

HUNTING AND FISHING—What are you after? Deer, antelope, wild turkey? Or maybe bear, mountain lion? Well, you can get deer, quail and big jack-rabbits right in your own backyard, in the Floridas. For really big game, and great fishing, try the Gila National Forest 60 miles directly north. Almost 2,000,000 acres set aside for camping, hunting and fishing. Just 65 miles away is the Caballo Dam-Elephant Butte Reservoir, the second largest man-made lake in the United States where you can rent a boat, fish, swim or go water skiing.

HORSEBACK RIDING—You'll find the Florida Mountains enthralling. Bring along a treasure pouch and join other rockhounds seeking amethyst, agate and opal.

INVESTMENT—More than 18,000 people have bought Ranchettes through the mail and on site.

The new U.S. Interstate 10 is now being built with interchanges right in the heart of Deming. Consider other developments such as the new Retirement Home and the new road being built from Palomas, Mexico (33 miles south of Deming) into the interior of Mexico and you will agree with us that Deming has a tremendous future.

And the price of your Ranchette? Just $349 for a full half-acre and low monthly payments of $6, including interest at the annual percentage rate of 6%. At this moment you may reserve as many half-acre sites as you wish but please bear this in mind: DEMING RANCHETTES is not an enormous development and land such as this goes fast. At these prices, you may want your Ranchette to be larger—one, two—even five acres. An immediate reservation will guarantee that your half-acres will adjoin each other (this is becoming increasingly difficult because of the shortage of available lots). And you take no risk. Your reservation does not obligate you. You have the unqualified right to change your mind within 45 days after we send your Purchaser's Agreement, Property Owner's Kit, Maps and Photographs—15 days to go through the portfolio, check our references, talk it over with the family. If, during that time, you should change your mind your reservation will be cancelled with absolutely no obligation. Then you have an ADDITIONAL 30 DAYS AFTER you have made your first monthly payment to change your mind and request a full refund of every dollar you have paid in. If this makes sense mail the coupon today.

Cash Price	$349
Cash downpayment	6
Unpaid balance of cash price	$343

Unpaid balance is scheduled at 67 monthly payments of $6, and 1 monthly payment of $2.95 for each ½ acre, payments including interest at the annual percentage rate of 6% resulting in a finance charge of $61.95, and a total of payments of $404.95, or a deferred payment price of $410.95. NOTE: If you order 2 half-acres (1 acre), double all of the the above figures except the period of repayment will remain the same. For 3 half-acres (1½ acres), triple the above figures, etc.

What in the World!

NES FAMILY AND BAMBI
Meet our son, the elk

What would you do if you found a baby elk? When it happened to Swedish farmer Ole Nes, he brought it home to his cow, who had just calfed, and she supplied milk for Bambi the elk too. Bambi weighed 30 pounds then, and now seven months later she tips the scales at 220. She follows Ole like a dog, and comes when she's called. A zoo is interested in her, but the family doesn't want to think about her leaving yet. "We'd miss her terribly," says Ole. "She's so friendly. Who'll play with the children when she's gone? If she went it would be very empty here. I'll always wonder how a wild animal could be so gentle, so kind. I'd never have imagined it possible."

Where does stuttering come from? It begins with parent behavior, says Joseph Wepman, director of the University of Chicago Speech and Language Clinic. If mother is tense or anxious, she transmits these attitudes to the child and stuttering may result. Also, when parents have unwarranted expectations of their children, there may be interrupted speech in the offspring. Stuttering often occurs when a child enters school because this presents a major change in life patterns.

Football, the fun game: "A smart defensive tackle depends on several tools to gain his ends. One, his mammoth bulk. Second—his forearm, which is usually taped and padded and represents a truly lethal weapon. With this animated club, the defensive tackle stuns opponents into submission. He pounds it on a guard's helmet until the other's brain rattles like a glockenspiel. He brings it up from the floor under the guard's chin and cures all his postural defects in one mighty blow. When he gets tired of working the forearm, he might butt the guard with his helmet, then pick him up by his shoulder pads and fling him aside like a sack of wheat."—No-bluff stuff from "The Bluffer's Guide to Football," by Joe Singer, introduced by David Frost (Crown, $1).

Graham Kerr

QUOTE: It's Graham Kerr, The Galloping Gourmet, chatting with FAMILY WEEKLY: "I want to remain independent from French cuisine and from people who make a fetish out of French cooking. I am admittedly not part of the food establishment in this country—Craig Claiborne, Julia Child, etc.—but it's out of choice. I've received but declined invitations to meet them; I harbor them no ill will, but we each have to make our own way. . . ." At 15, in hotelier school, the young Graham was already questioning the methods and ingredients in certain recipes. Perhaps because of this, he developed a sort of antipathy against schools in general. "Some people attend school too much. They learn much more than they need to live a satisfying life. Mothers should see to it that children are not overly schooled, but that their minds are free to maneuver and absorb. A mother is missing something very important if she does not work with her child in the preschool years."

GET OFF THE DIME

Who always says, "a dime a dozen."
"A dime a dozen" means, I see,
A thing that's common as can be.
And yet I think he's out of date.
These "dime a dozen" things. They're done.

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

BY HAL FOSTER

Our Story: IN A FEW DAYS HEIDMAR WILL BE CROWNED KING OF HOLVIK AND THEREAFTER BE BOUND BY CUSTOM TO SIGN DOCUMENTS, ATTEND CEREMONIES AND BE BORED.

BUT IF HE DOES NOT WANT THE THRONE, HIS COUSIN, GRIMNER, DOES. NEXT IN LINE, HE LUSTS FOR THE POWER OF KINGSHIP. ONLY HEIDMAR STANDS IN HIS WAY AND HE IS DANGEROUSLY IMPATIENT.

ALSO THERE IS FRIEDA, THE FAIR PRINCESS, WHO IS TO BE MARRIED TO HEIDMAR AFTER THE CORONATION AS A MATTER OF POLICY. SHE NEVER LAUGHS AT JOKES, CONSIDERING HUMOR MERE FLIPPANCY. IN FACT SHE NEVER SMILES AT ALL.

GRIMNER AND FRIEDA HAVE LOVED EACH OTHER SINCE CHILDHOOD, BUT THEY MUST BOW TO ANCIENT CUSTOM..... OR WILL THEY?

"ARN, I MUST HAVE ONE MORE DAY OF FREEDOM BEFORE THE WEIGHT OF THE CROWN CRUSHES ME. LET US RIDE OUT INTO THE HILLS AND CATCH SOME TROUT!"

"FROM NOW ON I MUST WALK THE TRODDEN PATH AND PUT ASIDE MY DREAMS OF SEEING THE FAR PLACES, FOREIGN LANDS AND STRANGE CITIES. I MUST RULE A DOUR PEOPLE WHILE OTHERS FOLLOW AFTER THEIR DESIRE.... OR MUST I?"

IT IS STILL A LONG WAY BACK TO THE PALACE WHEN HEIDMAR'S HORSE GOES LAME. "WELL," HE SAYS, "I WILL AT LEAST LEARN THE HARDSHIPS OF TRAVEL."
