

Tough Measures Being Talked

By NICHOLAS DANILOFF

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States has formally warned the Soviet Union, Communist China and other parties to the international conference on Vietnam that the Indochina cease-fire agreements are being massively violated by North Vietnam, the State Department said Saturday.

A department spokesman said that the United States had dispatched a lengthy and firmly worded diplomatic note to the 12 parties to the conference, which was convened in Paris in February to guarantee the Jan. 27 Vietnam peace settlement.

The U.S. note, the spokesman said, specifically replied to a North Vietnamese note of mid-April which alleged that the United States was engaged in unrestrained violations. The North Vietnamese had charged that the United States sent illegal arms to South Vietnam, failed to dismantle military bases, failed to remove mines from North Vietnamese harbors and was bombing heavily in Cambodia and Laos.

The State Department said the U.S. note denied the North Vietnamese charges in detail and countered by listing blatant violations by the North Vietnamese in Laos and Cambodia.

Administration officials said that any U.S. violations were permissible in view of those by North Vietnam and were undertaken deliberately to induce Hanoi to resume its respect for the Vietnam accords.

U.S. strategy at this point was described as including a variety of elements still "at the bottom of the scale" of options open to the administration.

Among these elements, one that became known this week was the resumption of U.S. reconnaissance flights over Hanoi and Haiphong in violation of the Vietnam agreement, and its implied threat that American bombing raids might follow.

The United States also is transmitting a refutation of Hanoi's allegations to the 12 parties to the Paris international conference on Vietnam, including the Soviet Union and China, and is detailing what it regards as "massive" North Vietnamese violations.

The United States has communicated its request for compliance directly to Hanoi, and has made similar diplomatic approaches to the Soviet Union, China, Poland and Hungary, without any immediate effect.

U.S. officials said increasingly tough measures might be contemplated if there is no response from Hanoi. Such steps could include a new attempt by White House adviser Henry A. Kissinger to reopen negotiations with the North Vietnamese or even a resumption of bombing against the north.

No spokesman at the State or Defense Departments was willing this week to acknowledge publicly that the United States was itself violating the agreement, although actions made public this week were clear-cut breaches. The United States suspended minesweeping operations at North Vietnamese harbors, indirectly acknowledged resumption of intelligence flights over the North, and suspended indefinitely its commitment to arrange postwar economic aid to Hanoi.

State Department legal specialists cited the 1969 convention on the law of treaties as justification for U.S. breaches of the Paris agreement.

Crop Hearing Set

WASHINGTON, D.C.—First District Congressman, Walter B. Jones, member of the House Agriculture committee, announced Saturday that a hearing will be held in the Lenoir County Courthouse in Kinston, at 2 p.m. Monday to discuss changes in the Federal Crop Insurance Program as it relates to the tobacco harvest.

The proposed changes would permit the expansion of the existing coverage to include tobacco left in the field following adverse weather conditions which could not be harvested by mechanical methods. The existing policy requires the farmer to harvest as much of his crop as possible by hand. However, in absence of adequate labor this is not feasible and, in most cases, impossible.

Congressman Jones has invited D. W. McElrath of the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation, USDA, along with members of McElrath's technical staff. Congressman Jones will personally conduct these hearings.

Congressman Jones also extends an invitation to those tobacco farmers who could be affected by this change to be present at this hearing.

Rebels Continue Cambodian Fight

By BERT OKULEY

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Rebel forces advanced on Phnom Penh from two sides Saturday, driving back defending Cambodian troops despite intense bombing by U.S. warplanes within five miles of the capital.

The rebels also tightened their stranglehold on the provincial capital of Takeo, 55 miles south of Phnom Penh, where government commanders radioed an urgent need for reinforcements and airdrops of ammunition in order to continue defending the city.

Field reports said a force of about 500 Communist rebel troops was advancing rapidly about 12 miles west of Phnom Penh along an old railroad line. From the south, another rebel force captured the town of Siem Reap and was moving forward 16 miles from the capital while another group cut Highway 30 at Setbo, nine miles south of Phnom Penh, and was moving on the road.

Government troops fell back on both the southern and western fronts to regroup, the reports said, while American warplanes attacked the rebel positions for five consecutive hours.

Some of the U.S. B52 heavy bombers and tactical fighter-bombers struck on the outskirts of the market town of Takhmau, five miles south of Phnom Penh. These raids caused shock waves to reverberate across Phnom Penh.

Military sources said the situation at the encircled provincial capital of Takeo was becoming "more and more critical." They said the government commanders there were sending urgent radio messages for more troops and fresh supplies of ammunition to hold back the rebel push.

There was no immediate move to reinforce Takeo, but several battalions of Cambodian troops were moved south toward Setbo to try to disperse the rebel force on Highway 30. Reinforcements also were sent to Prek Tapao, 11 miles south of Phnom Penh, but reports said they made no immediate contact with rebel forces on that section of the southern front.

Other rebel forces were reported advancing and causing "critical" situations in areas of Kompong Chhnang province northwest of Phnom Penh, and in Kompong Thom province to the north.

No Alternative But To Fight

The Egyptian government Saturday called for the "full and complete" mobilization of the nation's human and material resources, saying Egypt had no alternative but to fight Israel. It said the United States, by its support of Israel, was largely responsible for the continued state of war in the Middle East.

The call came in Cairo as: —Diplomatic sources said chiefs of staff of the member nations of the Arab League were meeting in the Egyptian capital in another attempt to coordinate military strategy. Egyptian War Minister Gen. Ahmed Ismail told the other Arab military leaders that their conference was "neither a show nor an act of propaganda... What we need is plenty of serious and objective action."

—The Paris newspaper Le Monde, quoting reliable sources in Oran, Algeria, said the first contingent of Moroccan troops promised by King Hassan II to bolster Arab forces in the battle against Israel sailed for Syria aboard two Soviet warships several days ago.

—The Israeli military command said troops frustrated an Arab guerrilla attack in the Galilee resort town of Safad by the capture of three members of Al Fatah, three of whose leaders were killed by Israeli commandos in the April 10 strike into Beirut.

—The U.N. Security Council, by a vote of 11-0, condemned the Israeli raid 11 days ago and "all other acts of violence" in the Middle East without making any mention of Arab guerrilla activities. The United States, Soviet Union, China and Guinea abstained on the Anglo-French resolution which had been watered down because of the threat of an American veto of any "one-sided" indictment of Israel.

—More than 100 Americans living in Lebanon braved heavy rain showers in the second day of a march to demonstrate support for the right of Palestinian refugees to return to homes in what is now Israel.

The Egyptian mobilization call came in a program drawn up by the cabinet in line with President-Premier Anwar Sadat's declaration last month that the era of "total confrontation" with Israel had started.

The program was outlined to the Egyptian parliament by Vice Premier Mohammed Abdel Kader Hatem. His statement was broadcast live by all radio and television networks.

Sadat assumed personal command of a new 36-man cabinet March 27. A few days later, he took over as military governor general of the Arab nation.

The cabinet's program described the current period as a "phase of destiny, a phase of life or death."

"We have no alternative but to carry weapons to defend our rights and our responsibilities toward our homeland and the Arab nation," Hatem said.

"The government's program for the battle calls for the full and complete mobilization of all the material and human resources."

Hatem said the Egyptian armed forces have been rebuilt themselves and are "training hard to absorb every available modern weapon—they are preparing the theater of their operations in accordance with the latest scientific methods."

Hatem said Egyptian troops were also coordinating strategy with "all the fronts that will fight the battle of destiny (against Israel), including the Palestinian resistance."

However, Hatem said, Egypt will maintain intensive diplomatic efforts to liberate Israeli-occupied Arab lands and safeguard the rights of the Palestinians.

Israel Is Condemned

By BRUCE W. MUNN

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The Security Council Saturday condemned Israel's April 10 raid on Lebanon and all other acts of violence without mentioning Arab guerrilla activities that preceded the Israeli action.

The Council voted 11-0 for a British-French resolution that had been drastically watered down in extensive consultations by U.S. Ambassador John A. Scali with the sponsors.

The United States, the Soviet Union, China and Guinea abstained.

The resolution condemned "the repeated military attacks conducted by Israel against Lebanon" and called upon the Israelis to "desist forthwith from all military attacks on Lebanon."

But no mention was made of Palestinian guerrilla activities in a condemnation of "all acts of violence which endanger or take innocent human lives." The closest approach was in a passage of the measure "deploping all recent acts of violence resulting in the loss of life of innocent individuals and the endangering of international civil aviation."

Scali said this referred to the murder of a U.S. and a Belgian diplomat at Khartoum, Sudan.

and Palestinian attacks on an El-Al aircraft and the Israeli Embassy at Nicosia, Cyprus, on April 9.

Following the vote, which climaxed eight days' consideration by the 15-nation council, Israel Ambassador Yosef Teakoh said the resolution emphasized "the absence of meaningful U.N. action against international terrorism."

Child Dies In Fire Despite Rescue Effort

PACTOLUS—A four-year old child died in a house fire near here early Saturday morning despite efforts by parents and neighbors to save him.

Derrick Wilson of Route 3,

Washington, was killed when a fire of yet undetermined origin engulfed the wood-frame dwelling in which he and his brothers and sisters were staying.

According to Pactolus firemen, four children were in the house when the blaze erupted. The two older children, aged 15 and 10, ran out of the house and yelled for help.

Derrick and his two-year old sister were left in the house, but their father, Willie Wilson, managed to get to the daughter before the intense heat drove him from the house. Other efforts to save the child were futile, according to investigators.

Pitt County Fire Marshal Bobby Joyner reported the time of the fire as 8:59 a.m. The entire house was engulfed in flame before the firemen could respond to the call.

ONLY REMAINS—This chimney serves as the only remains of the Ethel Little home east of Pactolus. The wood-frame dwelling was destroyed by fire early Saturday morning. One child was burned to death in the fire. (Reflector Staff Photo)

Local Gas Situation Not Good

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

At least one local independent oil company is facing a gasoline cut off from its supplier and several other distributors report that although the situation is not critical here now, things could get a bit worse.

L. N. Branch of Branch's Oil Co., said Friday that he had exhausted all of his gasoline allocations with Texas City Refining Co. and "what we have now, that's it."

Branch pointed out that with Texas City's decision to cancel some 370 fuel contracts in North Carolina and South Carolina, his supply will be depleted unless he lines up another company to buy from.

"Things look bad right now," Branch commented, noting that he has about 45,000 gallons on hand now for four locations in Greenville and two in Kinston. "I've been trying to line up another supplier for several months now but so far I haven't had any luck."

The owner said that he has purchased fuel from Texas City for about a year and a half. He added that he has been on an allocation supply basis with the company for several months.

A spokesman at another independent, Pitt FCX Service, said that "as far as we know right now, we'll be able to get enough gas to meet our needs."

Assistant manager Johnnie W. Brown pointed out that although FCX buys a large portion of its products from Texas City, "I understand that FCX will not be cut off." Brown said that the service could be put on an allotment system "but it looks now like we will be able to get enough products."

Walter L. Williams, supervisor from Etna Oil Co., a major independent, reported that "so far we've been able to supply our needs." He said that the company is on the quota system now and no cutbacks in supplies have been necessary.

Etna, Williams said, buys from two suppliers and they have not indicated any intentions to pull out of the state. The situation could become critical later on in the summer, he cautioned, but "at the present time we hope to continue as in the past. Of course, how critical it becomes later on will dictate what we will do."

The company has some 63 stations in the state, 16 of which are in the northeastern sector of North Carolina.

While the independents face the possibility of supplier shortages, other local jobbers have similar problems although none report any immediate difficulty in meeting customer demands.

Leon Moore of Leon L. Moore Oil Co., ARCO distributors, said that "We haven't been hurt so far but I don't think the gasoline situation is going to get any better any time soon. We have only about seven major refineries in the nation and they can't take care of the whole load." He added that he feels consumers are using ten to 15 per cent more fuel now and the needs are outweighing the supplies.

Moore said that he is getting enough fuel from ARCO right now to supply his customers but it is hard to predict the summer situation. He predicted that fuel oil will be in short supply next winter due to the heavier demands placed on refining companies this season.

Walker L. Allen Jr., vice president of W. L. Allen Oil Co., distributors of Gulf products, said that "we don't anticipate having any problems supplying our dealers and customers. From what we have been told, we feel we are in good shape."

Allen continued, "I can't say what will happen in July or August but right now we are in good shape." He said that the company is not receiving fuels on an allocation basis now.

Frank Jackson, office manager at Bell-Roberson Oil Co., said that the company has encountered no problems, supply-wise, so far, "but we don't know how it will be later."

Jackson said that the firm, which distributes Phillips 66 products, has been able to continue meeting customer needs so far.

According to Ralph Sullivan at Moore-King-Sullivan Inc., the firm so far has managed to keep customers supplied but it is not in a position now to take on any new business. The firm distributes Union 76 products.

"We have an allocation based on what we used last year but there is no guarantee that we will get it. Of course, I hope we are able to get 100 per cent but from what I see now, I would say about 70 per cent might be possible," he added.

Sullivan, noting that we will "just have to wait and see how the situation will affect us," said that the demand on the supplier has increased substantially. He noted that the consumer finds it hard to comprehend a shortage but "when you run out, that's it for the time being."

Raymond P. Grady, manager of Allied Petroleum Corp., Texaco dealers, noted that the company is waiting for a new contract from Texaco "to see what the allocations will be." He said that, right now, the company is able to meet demands and "I think we'll be all right. I don't anticipate not being able to meet our demands at any time."

He explained the gasoline allocations or quotas will probably be based on last year's usage.

EXXON products distributor, Carawan Oil Co. reported that the company has also been able to keep up with supply needs, with no cutoff on customer service. Thomas Scoopmire said that EXXON advised the company not to take on any new business in view of the gas situation.

A convenience store chain spokesman said that "at the present time we are having no problems at all buying gasoline but you never know what the situation will be next week."

The manager said that his supplier has been able to furnish the store the regular quota of gasoline but since he has no contract "when the supplier's situation gets critical, it's really a bad situation for us."

Nearly all dealers indicated that they feel the gas situation will get worse before it improves and several echoed the recent speculation that fuel prices at local stations will top 50 cents a gallon this summer.

Gas Geyser

WILLIAMSBURG, Mich. (UPI) — Geyser-like eruptions spouting a potentially explosive mixture of gas and mud spread Saturday to the outskirts of this northern village. Oil-drilling crews were trying to ease the situation.

The Grand Traverse County sheriff's department reported "new blow-hole eruptions" south of the village and moved out two more families "because of high gas readings."

The threat of a possible flood emerged with the formation of a new crater at the base of a dam which keeps a 15-acre backwater pond from flooding into Williamsburg Creek.

"The geologists fear if the blow-hole in the base of the dam should enlarge, it could weaken...the dam, causing it to collapse," a sheriff's department spokesman said. "This could cause flooding...The water would go right down into the creek."

The quicksand-like mixture of mud and water also has cracked the foundations of some homes and buildings, including the town hall.

Mud runoff created by the gaseous gushers transformed the Williamsburg and Elk Lakes, both considered superior for trout fishing, into mud canals filled with dead fish.

The gasholes first began forming last Wednesday. By the following day, they had forced about 100 Williamsburg-area residents to leave their homes and caused the shutdown of a 15-mile portion of the freeway between the resort towns of Traverse City and Kalkaska.

Mass Round-up In Portsmouth

PORTSMOUTH, Va. (AP) — State police assisted by officers from Portsmouth and Chesapeake fanned out through the Tidewater area early Saturday rounding up 78 persons accused by a grand jury of selling drugs.

Tobacco Lease

RALEIGH (AP) — A study committee gave its support Friday to proposals that would allow farmers to lease and transfer tobacco allotments and quotas to any farm within the same state.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture marketing study committee will report its conclusions to Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz by July 1.

Under existing regulations, tobacco growers now cannot transfer leased allotments or quotas across county lines. Supporters of the new proposal say it would allow farmers to plant more tobacco so they could gain wider benefits from mechanization.

The committee, which ended a two-day meeting Friday, also recommended that marketing cards for flue-cured growers be withheld until seven calendar days before auction markets open in the growers' home area.

A state police spokesman said police were scoring the cities of Portsmouth, Chesapeake and Norfolk in search of 63 adults and 15 juveniles named in indictments charging them with various drug violations.

State Police Lt. J. M. Booher, the officer in charge of the 5th Division special investigations unit, said the indictments were aimed at "drug pushers" and that the majority of charges dealt with sales of illegal drugs.

The indictments were handed out Friday by a Portsmouth Hustings Court grand jury.

Booher said those named in the indictments were being arrested in residences and in various public places throughout the Tidewater area. He said a total of 111 charges were filed against the adults and 25 charges were brought against the juveniles.

Booher said the indictments were brought about as a result of nine months of undercover work by state trooper R. E. Boyce Jr., who posed as a drug dealer.

1,300 Miles For 'Fund'

Two ambitious Navy men have left the water long enough to make like G.I.'s indulging in a bit of cross country running.

Kerry V. Heinrich, 24, and Tommy W. Herrick, 22, are both Navy Frogmen who have accepted a challenge to run from Norfolk, Virginia, to Miami, Florida. The two will be carrying the Heart Fund Torch on the 1,300 mile run.

Heinrich, a Quartermaster Second Class and Herrick, Boatswain's Mate Third Class, are scheduled to arrive in Greenville at noon on Tuesday.

The two young runners, in carrying the torch for promoting the Heart Fund, are also showing that the Navy believes in the virtues of good physical fitness.

The torch was passed to the Navy men in ceremonies held April 14 at the Virginia state capitol by 40 Emory and Henry College fraternity men who had marathoned 297 miles from Emory, Virginia.

A joint project of the U.S. Navy and the American Heart Association, the run is aimed at promoting sea service and also emphasizing the merit of daily exercises as a factor in preventing heart attacks.

The two will be met by Navy recruiters at seven points in North Carolina—Rocky Mount, Wilson, Greenville, Jacksonville, New Bern, Holly Ridge and Wilmington.

They expect to make the run within 90 days. The sailors have indicated, however, they are remaining flexible in event they receive a request to stay over to help celebrate a special event. Plans call for runs of about 20 miles a day, in order to give them time to speak in behalf of the Navy and the Heart Fund.

Hearing Is Slated Here

RALEIGH—A public hearing at which the Department of Transportation will offer a tentative program for future highway planning will be held Wednesday, April 25, in the Pitt County Courthouse.

The hearing is one of six to be held in various parts of the state and follows a series of public meetings held earlier this month at which citizens were asked for their ideas on the subject. At those meetings, Transportation officials listened; at the hearing they will present plans.

C. O. White, department planning engineer, said that the Federal Highway Administration has told the state it must come up with an acceptable plan for developing its highway system by June 15, and that the plan must be operational by November 1.

"We have gone about the state asking the public's opinion," White said.

If Wallace Had Not Been Shot The 1972 Demo Convention May Have Been Different

By HOYT HARWELL
Associated Press Writer
JASPER, Ala. (AP)—Gov. George C. Wallace said Friday that the Democratic Convention last year would have been different if he had not been wounded while campaigning for the presidential nomination.

"Had I not met with the fate I met May 15," Wallace said, "I assure you the convention would have turned out differently. I'm not saying I would have got the nomination but I could have campaigned two more months and made some things happen."

Wallace rode in an 11-block parade through Jasper, waving to the crowd through the open windows of a car, and then spoke to several hundred people at Walker Junior College's first Governor's Day program.

He told the crowd that Alabmians now are in the mainstream of national politics because of his presidential campaigns and added: "I'd do it over again if I had to do it."

He said again that issues he first raised have been adopted by politicians throughout the country, including law and order, school busing, tax reform, and welfare changes.

"People" in California and Michigan and New York are making speeches that sound like they were written right here in Walker County," the governor said from his wheelchair.

He said he feels it is the responsibility of a governor to speak up for the people on matters at the national level that affect Alabamians.

"The federal courts have taken away much of a governor's power but I have used the tremendous prestige of the office to speak all over the nation."

Wallace said there was a time when candidates for national office used Alabama as a whipping boy but added: "Today, they visit us—the President, vice president and others all up and down the line. Alabama is respected throughout the country."

Wallace, paralyzed from the waist down and confined to a wheelchair, said his campaign slogan was "Stand up for America" and commented, "I can't do much standing up anymore but I want you to know that while you're standing up for America I'll be sitting for America."

He said that his current program for Alabama includes a balanced budget, a better road program, better compensation for workers and the unemployed and increased medical education accout.

"We're going to double the number of those taking medicine in Alabama and have more doctors in the state in future years," the governor said.

He complained that no new federal highway money has been available since 1971 but said that he hopes that by the end of June Alabama will have federal matching funds for highways.

State Sen. Bob Wilson of Walker County, chairman of the Senate Taxation and Finance Committee, said in introducing Wallace that the state will have the best financial program in the next two years that Alabama has ever had.

Wilson called Wallace "the greatest patriot in the United States today and said 'his tenure is only beginning as far as his political career is concerned.'"

Unrest In Philippines Has Shattered Families

By ARNOLD ZEITLIN
Associated Press Writer
JOLO, Philippines (AP) — The prospect of civil war among Moslems of this embattled southern Philippine island already has shattered families, but none more dramatically than that of the mayor of Jolo, Barlie Abubakar.

While Abubakar, 50, struggles to prevent war from erupting around this capital of the Sulu archipelago, his son, Nizam, 26, is a leader of the youthful insurgents who say they are fighting for Moslem secession.

"My son is there in the hills, and he is fighting," the father said. "I have requested him to leave. As a father, I can not kill my son."

"I wrote him that his mother was ill. He did not come. I finally took his mother to the place where he is in the mountains. But he said he would not be the first one to surrender. I had to pry his mother's fingers, one by one, from around his arm when we left, she was holding him so tightly."

"Then he went up the mountain, and I went down the mountain."

The Abubakars' problem is a capsule illustration of the strains among families and between generations in the struggle in the heavily Moslem areas of Sulu and Mindanao provinces.

While the army, backed by some Moslem civilian officials and many Christian residents of the area, has threatened to wipe out the rebels, Abubakar has been a leading advocate of peaceful talks for a nonviolent solution.

"I am suspected, I know," said the four-term mayor of this ancient town. "I expose myself to suspicion because I go out to these insurgents. My going out is not to protect my son. It is to protect the 100,000 people in this Jolo municipality."

"The only solution is to have a dialogue with the insurgents. The way to the solution is not to use guns but to use persuasion."

As a result, when the army told the mayor to enlist 50 men in a Sulu self-defense unit to fight the insurgents, he recruited no one.

"I gathered all my people, and they were against the idea," he said. "They did not want Moslems to fight Moslems. 'What do these people do against us?' they asked. 'They only fight the government.' To these people, the activists are heroes."

The mayor's political career is a further difficulty. He is a member of the Liberal party, the rival to the Nacionalistas of President Ferdinand E. Marcos, who has declared martial law.

"I am against Marcos," said the mayor, whose family traces itself to the original Arab settlers who were believed to have brought Islam to this part of Southeast Asia. "But I also believe that, if he carries out what he says he will do under martial law, it will be good for the country. I am willing to give him time to carry out his program. I am not a supporter of secession."

Not a high school graduate himself, Abubakar sent his son to the University of the Philippines. Nizam is his eldest child. The mayor also has a daughter who is a nurse and a second son, 6.

In the university in Manila, Nizam came in contact with a Jolo townsman, Nur Miswari, believed to be heading the secessionist movement from an outpost in Sabah, the Malaysian state with close historical, religious and trade links to the Sulu islands.

Nizam first went to Sabah on what was supposedly a trip to the Middle East seeking help for Philippine Moslems who were targets of Christian bandits called Ilagas. He later was the only Moslem among 27 young Filipinos who visited Peking as part of a cultural exchange, his father said.

Abubakar said Nizam later turned up again in Sabah and wrote home that he was being given military training there. The Filipinos have accused Sabah's chief minister, Tun Mustapha, who was born in the Sulu islands, of backing Moslem secession.

Nizam then turned up in Jolo, his home island, as part of a group the armed forces estimate includes 1,200 armed activists and at least 3,000 unarmed sympathizers.

U.S. Promises Action If Agreements Not Honored

By MIKE WATERS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Sharp prods plus a promise of positive U.S. response are the Nixon administration's latest efforts for obtaining Hanoi's compliance with the Paris cease-fire agreement.

In related developments, two Air Force pilots were reported missing on a mission over Cambodia and Pentagon sources say the United States has resumed sending pilotless, radio-controlled reconnaissance drones over North Vietnam.

State Department spokesman Charles W. Bray said Hanoi "would find a prompt and quite positive response on our part" if it showed good faith by complying with Article 20 of the agreement. Article 20 calls for the withdrawal of all foreign forces from Cambodia and Laos and a respect for their neutrality.

Bray's statement was a board hint that the United States would reconsider its suspension of mine clearing operations in Haiphong; its suspension of economic aid talks in Paris, and its bombing and reconnaissance operations, if Hanoi would halt its military operations in accord with the Paris agreement.

"We will judge the response from Hanoi by their actions on the ground," Bray said Friday.

Eight Cars Derailed

SPARTANBURG, S. C. (AP)—A tank car containing methyl alcohol caught fire Saturday when eight cars of a Seaboard Coast Line freight train derailed at Moore in a sparsely settled section of Spartanburg County.

North Vietnam provides the logistics support to the insurgents in Cambodia, Bray said, and it is within its power to "take at least a first step to dampen down their offensive capability."

Pointing out that it is not possible for North Vietnam to decide what parts of the agreement it wishes to observe, Bray said that it has been the "steadfast purpose of the United States to carry out the obligations it assumed in signing the Paris agreement."

Meanwhile, the U.S. Pacific Command Friday announced the two fliers were listed as missing in Southeast Asia after their F4 Phantom was reported overdue Wednesday from a mission over Cambodia.

Search operations for the two crewmen were unsuccessful, the command said. It refused to say whether the plane has been shot down.

U.S. aircraft, including B52s, continued operations over Cambodia for the 45th straight day Friday. The operations are being conducted at the request of the Cambodian government, the command said.

At the Pentagon, sources said the pilotless drone aircraft are being used rather than manned reconnaissance planes because of the risk their crews might be killed or captured.

The sources also reported the United States had sent the high-flying SR71 reconnaissance plane over North Vietnam. The SR71, which carries a two-man crew, can train its cameras from 80,000 feet aloft, above the reach of antiaircraft guns and missiles.

But Defense Department spokesman Jerry W. Friedheim refused any comment when asked about North Vietnam's charges that U.S. reconnaissance planes had violated its air space twice on Thursday.

Although such flights are not specifically barred by the agreement, Friedheim acknowledged at a briefing that such flights technically would be barred under the terms of the pact.

Mitchell Approved

By WESLEY G. PIPPERT
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former Attorney General John N. Mitchell, according to a story Saturday in a Washington newspaper, personally approved the Watergate bugging plans and the payment of legal fees for the seven men found guilty in the case.

Mitchell, long one of President Nixon's closest advisers and formerly his campaign manager, told reporters after testifying Friday for three hours before the federal grand jury that he turned down such bugging plans each time they were proposed and never handled any money on the defendants' behalf.

The Washington Star-News quoted "highly reliable sources close to the investigation" as saying Mitchell eventually approved the plans.

The Washington Post, quoting an unidentified Mitchell associate, said Mitchell also testified he believes Jeb Stuart Magruder, deputy campaign director and now assistant commerce secretary, went over his head to get approval of White House officials for the bugging.

There were these other developments in the increasingly complex case of alleged political espionage and sabotage during the 1972 presidential campaign, in which many of Nixon's highest political aides now have been implicated:

—Former Commerce Secretary Maurice H. Stans, Nixon's chief fund-raiser, was alleged by convicted Watergate conspirator James W. McCord Jr. to have known about and approved McCord's actions as security chief for the Committee to Re-elect the President.

—White House Counsel John W. Dean III was reported by the New York Times to have supervised the payment of $175,000 in cash from Republican campaign funds to the Watergate defendants.

—Dean made a Memorial Day weekend trip to Miami and was reimbursed by Nixon's re-election campaign organization on June 12, one week before the bugging of the Democratic national headquarters in the Watergate complex. A spokesman for the Committee told UPI that Dean made the trip to gather intelligence in preparation for the GOP national convention in August.

—The grand jury which indicted the Watergate Seven continued to gather evidence and interview top-level witnesses, not only about the bugging itself but also for possible cover-up and obstruction of justice in connection with it. One source close to the case said there may be indictments of lawyers as well as of the officials.

—White House Chief of Staff H. R. Haldeman and Nixon's chief domestic adviser, John D. Ehrlichman, hired prominent Washington lawyer John J. Wilson to represent them and Wilson spent parts of the past three days at the White House.

Ehrlichman has not been linked publicly with the case, but Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr., R-Conn., a member of the Senate's Watergate investigating committee, has said that as chief of staff Haldeman should be held responsible for all actions of his personnel. Wilson said that neither man has been subpoenaed by the grand jury.

Mitchell allegedly was present at a secret February meeting with Magruder, Dean and convicted Watergate conspirator G. Gordon Liddy, then finance counsel to the re-election committee, at which Watergate bugging plans were discussed.

That Endorsement By Helms

The East Carolina University Medical School received an important endorsement from Sen. Jesse Helms last week.

The Republican senator wrote to party officials and presented facts and figures which support the case for the medical school.

"I want to discuss what I have viewed for years as a critical human need—the need for a four-year medical school at East Carolina University."

Sen. Helms support for the ECU Medical School was most welcome and it represented no sudden change of direction for him, since he supported school as a television editorialist for many years.

We are pleased to see that Sen. Helms has maintained his convictions as he moved from editorial writer to one of the two U.S. Senators from the Tar Heel state.

Also last week Lt. Gov. Jim Hunt told reporters in Raleigh that he felt there was a good chance the four-year medical school at ECU will be approved in the next General Assembly even if the board of governors does not recommend it.

The force for the school "does not come from ECU but from the people of the state who see the pressing need for more doctors."

The lieutenant governor said he favored setting aside $25 million from the proposed budget for the expanded medical school. Lt. Gov. Hunt is a Democrat and he too, spoke his convictions on the medical school issue.

We believe the ECU School of Medicine now enjoys strong support from both major parties of the state and we also feel that it has tremendous grass roots support, not only in the East but throughout our state.

Surely those who oppose the ECU medical school expansion within the board of governors can now see the opportunity they have to share in the development of the school. It must be clear that the ECU school can serve a great need not only in the East, but for the entire state.

The board of governors can accept its responsibility and make the school's development a model of cooperation and coordination between institutions, both public and private.

The ECU School of Medicine has already developed to the point where it would be foolhardy to attempt to head it off. Some of the highest officials in government have recognized the wisdom of continuing the development, and certainly the public has shown its understanding of the situation.

We can have more fighting and possibly more delay, or the board of governors can do what is right and logical and see that the ECU school develops to its full four-year potential.

Books Are Key To A New Life

By BILL WILLIAMS
Asheboro Courier-Tribune

ASHEBORO—Generally, fractions don't add up to much, but for Larry Ray Miller they equaled a whole new life.

The ability to add "one-half plus one-half" was the starting block in a race for self-respect that changed him in two years from junior high school dropout to an intellectual equally at ease with college professors and plant workers.

Books were the hurdle in Larry Miller's race to a new life.

Not so long ago the biggest enjoyment in his life was "getting off work and rushing home to open an R.C. Cola, flop on the bed and watch 'Wild, Wild West' on television."

Now when Miller, who dropped out of school after only seven years of formal education, isn't studying for college level exams at Randolph Technical Institute, he spends his time reading classical literature or going to see a Shakespearean play.

Change of Personality

Bill Baldwin, Miller's instructor and guiding force at Randolph Tech, says his prize pupil has gone through "a complete personality transfer" since returning to school in August, 1971, at age 27.

After dropping out of the eighth grade in 1957 and taking a job as a short order cook and waiter, Miller joined the Navy in December, 1959. After his discharge, he took a job as a delivery boy for a local auto parts store. He advanced into sales, then to a job handling the store's filing system.

"When I started filing, I quickly realized that fractions and other mathematical work was involved that I just couldn't do," Miller recalled.

"I was just too proud to let the other people I worked with know I couldn't do the fractions, so I quit the job."

Then he went to work for a hosiery mill. Again he met a roadblock. "In front of 54 women the boss asked me if I could do fractions. When I told him no, he told me that anyone with any sense at all could do that work," Miller said. His head hung in embarrassment, Miller walked off the job.

Training Opened Door

The turning point came in his present job with the City of Sheboro Waste Treatment Department. A 16-week training course was required.

"I realized my life was going nowhere jumping around like I was, so I decided to take the 16-week course and enroll at Randolph Technical Institute to improve my math," he said.

He soon decided to go ahead and complete high school equivalency work. It took a year to pass the test, and in that time Miller started to read.

"Larry put in hundreds of hours of extra reading. I believe he read everything on our shelves and hungered for more," said Baldwin, his instructor.

Confidence grew as Miller expanded the reach of his mind. "The instructors began to give me responsibility, and other students started coming to me for advice," he said. "You can bet that really built me up."

Family Followed Example

His wife and sister, both having only junior high school educations, followed his example and enrolled at Randolph Tech to earn high school diplomas.

Although the boys at the plant made fun of Miller for always having his nose in a book, his work improved and so did his salary.

"I decided I would no longer be the type you see in the unemployment line every day who takes any job he is offered instead of working at something he likes," Miller said.

He voted for the first time in his life. He said he registered to vote as a direct result of his study of the U.S. Constitution. Not only did Miller register, he got into an argument with the registrar over a requirement that he register as a member of a specific political party.

Miller said the college courses he is now taking may eventually lead him into a career in social work, but he is happy with the way things are now.

"I don't really care if I never amount to a lot socially, or make $100,000," he said. "I'm just happy to be proud of myself and I want to keep the view of life that I have now."

Schultz Won't Stand In Way

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON—The revealing show of political impotence put on by the House Democratic leadership in its feeble efforts to impose tougher price controls on the administration has now given Mr. Nixon a splendid free hand, except for one towering obstacle: Secretary of the Treasury George P. Shultz.

Had the House done on Monday what its Democratic leaders boasted it would, and voted to freeze prices, Mr. Nixon would have been under embarrassing restraint. If he then had listened to the overwhelming cry of politicians, economists, housewives and workers and signed a stiff Democratic party-controlled bill—or ordered a freeze on his own—he would have seemed to be surrendering to his political enemies.

Now, however, fresh from Monday's glorious tactical victory in the House, which gave him exactly the one-year extension of controls authority he always wanted, he is a free agent.

Not only can he command total political credit by moving from the hapless Shultz-imposed Phase III to a serious program of price controls. He can also be certain of near-total congressional approval by Democrats and Republicans alike—if he can make George Shultz, a doctrinaire free-market, bend to reality.

Not all signs are negative. The White House has let it privately be known that last weekend was the President's "economic weekend," during which he started coming to grips with runaway inflation.

Moreover, there are signs that Mr. Nixon is beginning to listen to some of the outside experts—and such powerful but unheeded inside experts as Dr. Arthur Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board—for the first time since Shultz sold him on the disaster of Phase III.

It's about time. Albert Sindlinger, the nation's top expert on the habits, spending and confidence of the American consumer, now computes from his spongelielike national polling that at least one million Americans have bought new 1973 model automobiles in advance of a buying pattern which would normally have delayed the purchase until 1974 models.

Sindlinger, whose data is avidly devoured by the White House (if not by Shultz), also is finding that television sets, another big consumer item, are being brought at an annual rate of 13 millions—one-third higher than normal.

The reason is the same in both cases: the psychology of fear that inflation has become uncontrollable and that "forward buying" means a better bargain today over next year.

The hidden danger in this Sindlinger finding is that a mere one-third of the nation's consumers are responsible for it. Many of them are union members under contracts with built-in cost-of-living escalator clauses. That guarantees a continuing inflation spiral.

Until very recently, Shultz and his laissez-faire policies have managed to dominate the inflation debate in the President's Oval Office to the point that some esteemed economists actually think Mr. Nixon has been getting sugar-coated statistics.

Now, however, for the first time since the presidential campaign, Shultz is being attacked by AFL-CIO president George Meany. A steady stream of private criticism against Shultz is reaching the President from such congressional gradees as Rep. Wilbur Mills, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee. And from the ivied towers of the outside world—but not all—private economists are describing the quiet, unassuming Shultz as stubborn, dogmatic and beyond the reach of the political pragmatism essential to his office.

His rigidity, in fact, goes beyond economics to the vicious battle over the energy crisis now dividing the administration.

Strength For Today

RESPONSE TO OTHERS' ERRORS

When William E. Gladstone was Chancellor of the Exchequer of Great Britain, he requested certain statistics form a treasury official which he wanted to include in a speech to be delivered to Parliament. The official made a serious error in the statistics he delivered to Gladstone. After Gladstone had delivered the speech the opposition party discovered the error and publically corrected Gladstone in a manner which was very humiliating to him.

Gladstone then called the official to his office and said to him: "I know how much you must be disturbed over what has happened, and I have sent for you to put you at your ease. For a long time you have handled very complicated accounts, and this is your first mistake. I want to congratulate you on your record and express my keen appreciation."

It took a big man to react to this matter in this fashion. Equally important, a response of this kind will dispell the fear and defensiveness which the person under scrutiny will feel, and instead engender loyalty and admiration.

Sunday Morning Notes

Last Sunday quite a few people were visiting the site of the new bridge across the Tar on Greenville Boulevard. They could drive part of the way to the bridge site, but two giant machines blocked the way, so the sightseers had to leave their cars and walk the rest of the way.

One of the machines was a digging device which had its arm extended and its end resting on the ground.

As I said, cars were parking at the blockade and occupants continued on foot. That is all but one car. A little sports model came up and the driver continued on through the barricade, right under the extended arm of the digging machine.

Other Editors Say Man Must Eat

(Washington Daily News)

When we examine carefully what happens when a food boycott covers the country, we realize full well that such a move does hurt in many respects.

And yet in some ways it even might help some people. The very fact that mankind must eat or starve makes it certain that so long as there is food available, then mankind is going to eat.

If there is a boycott against meat, then it surely will mean that less meat is put on the market, less meat is sold at the super market, and thus less meat is eaten. At the same time it might well mean that more cheese, more spaghetti, more chicken, and more fish are sold than before. While meat producers are hurt, some others are helped.

And when a meat boycott is staged, the real hurt goes right down to the bottom of the totem pole. The meat producer is hurt the most. In between some others are hurt too as they are laid off their jobs. But it is still the meat producer who is hurt the most.

Since people are still going to eat, boycotting the meat counters decreases sales there but increases sales in some other departments.

Because of human nature, we doubt that there is any real accomplishment realized over the long haul. Fewer steaks are purchased, and the cattlemen are hurt. But then the chicken farmer and the fishermen might be helped.

We do not dispute the fact that prices are high on what the housewife buys. But singling out one item to boycott hardly can do the effective job of brining down prices on all foods.

Then even during a period of boycott some people are still going to eat steak regardless of price.

We believe that with the present high prices housewives are being more selective in their buying habits. But by no means do we see any real cut-back in the eating story. People are still eating regularly, and we suspect that people will go right on doing so. We can do without a lot of things, but the one thing which naturally comes first is food.

A small price reduction might come with any given boycott, but we suspect that the change is more temporary than permanent.

Mankind still must eat, and so long as food is available, he is going to eat—regardless of price.

Foster Parents Needed

By JOSEPH A. ST. AMANT
LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Wanted: foster parents with tough minds and tender hearts.

It's easy to become attached to a cuddly baby or a roly-poly toddler, but who wants a teen-aged boy whose hair may be long and clothes disheveled?

The Optimist Home for Boys in the Highland Park section of Los Angeles is a kind of halfway house for teen-agers who have been cut loose from their families for one reason or another, but are not old enough (18) to be on their own.

These youngsters need help and guidance in a family atmosphere, and it's hard to find, according to Mrs. Letha Sellers, social welfare worker at the Optimist Home.

"People aren't exactly knocking down our doors with offers of homes for these boys," she said.

Require Rehabilitation

The boys spend a minimum of six months at the home. They require rehabilitation but not detention. Some of them have been in trouble with the law. Others have been set adrift and made court wards because of family disruptions.

Mrs. Sellers describes the kind of foster parent needed—"one who is tenderhearted but tough minded. They can't pity the boy or they lose judgment. They must be firm and set limits of behavior so the boy can develop."

Tolerance is another quality foster parents should have.

"They may face long hair, grubby jeans and perhaps bad language," Mrs. Sellers explained. "But those things are not that big a deal in a boy's total development."

When a boy leaves the home and goes with foster parents, he may experience a period of tranquility, then a crisis and conflict but ideally the problems are solved, according to Mrs. Sellers.

Must be Dedicated

Foster parents do get some small compensation from the county—$170 a month that helps defray expenses, but they must be dedicated persons and candidates are screened thoroughly.

"They apply to become foster parents because they want to make some contribution rather than do nothing and bemoan conditions among teenagers," Mrs. Sellers said.

Howard Nariman, director of the home, says, "The boys need supervision. They no longer need an institutional setting. What they need is parental relationship."

About half the funds for support of the home come from the county and the remainder from the Optimist Club, a service group. The home has been in existence for 50 years and is known as "the friend of the boy," according to Nariman.

Added Pressure For Controls

By BILL NEIKIRK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — An inflation rate that, if continued, would take 6 cents out of each consumer dollar by year's end is creating new pressure for tighter wage-price controls.

President Nixon is resisting any such move, but the resistance appears to be weakening as reports of sharp price increases continue to undermine his largely voluntary Phase 3 control program.

The latest Gross National Product report, announced Thursday, shows inflation during the first three months of 1972 up by 6 per cent on a year-to-year basis.

The immediate effect of the inflation spiral, already felt by most shoppers, officially is recorded with the Labor Department release of the March consumer price index.

It reflects the 2.2 per cent hike in March wholesale prices, highest in 20 years.

Although the President is considering ways to tighten his Phase 3 program, his economic advisers are not convinced that any tightening will be effective.

They feel this way because the economy is reaching boomlike proportions with heavy demand for a number of products, an economic condition that tends to push prices up.

The administration's economic officials feel that a return to mandatory wage-price controls such as existed prior to Jan. 11, or even a freeze, would blow up in the face of the fast economic expansion.

Treasury Secretary George P. Shultz, who is closest to Nixon on economic matters, is opposed to tougher controls and wants to return to a free economy as soon as possible. But Shultz is reported to feel that the recent sharp increase in prices has made it necessary to tighten up for psychological reasons, at least for a while.

The administration is expected to move soon, according to officials close to the situation. One report circulating is that Nixon will act at the time he signs the bill extending his authority to control wages and prices for another year.

That authority expires April 30. Congress has all but completed action on the measure, but is in an Easter recess and will not return until April 30.

The administration won its fight on Capitol Hill against proposals to freeze all prices at their March 16 levels and direct the President to order price rollbacks.

The GNP report released

Thursday showed that inflation in the first three months of the year rose at an annual rate of 6 per cent, the biggest quarterly bulge in prices since the 1970 recession, and more than double the inflation rate the administration would like to see by the end of the year.

Both Congress and the business community are clamoring for tougher government action against the inflation problem. The administration says that the federal budget and the monetary policies of the Federal Reserve Board now must play the key roles in halting the inflationary spiral.

The President is committed against another economic tactic that could slow down the economy and the rate of inflation—raising taxes.

Sheepskins And Jobs

The seesaw pattern of job opportunities for new college graduates is on the upswing again.

The National Consumer Finance Association reports that nearly 93 per cent of the 1.1 million graduates of 1970 and 1971 are employed. Some 60 per cent went to work straight from the campus and more than half of the remaining 40 per cent found jobs within four weeks after graduation.

This is a marked change from the recent down years when new sheepskins weren't worth much in the labor market. It is a change that reflects the quickening economic climate.

The kind of work these young people found is also consistent with the kind of economy we are developing. The service industries employed 59 per cent of the graduates, while manufacturers took only 10 per cent.

But the days of recruiters swarming across campuses seem to be on the wane. How did most of these graduates find work? Forty-one per cent used a revolutionary method once well known in this country—they went out and asked somebody to hire them—Tulsa (Okla.) Tribune

Timber Crops For Future

The building industry is being confronted again with the serious problem of rising costs, this time of lumber products needed for new homes.

Someone has come up with figures on the use of cut lumber in this country, predicting that for each man, woman and child in the United States we will need approximately one 16-inch-thick, 100 foot tree during 1973.

The estimate is figured on the basis of each tree yielding one ton of wood and wood products, and on the fact that our consumption in 1972 was 203 million tons.

More than 30 per cent of each ton will go into pulp and paper products. The rest will be used for home construction, furniture and thousands of other products that utilize wood.

According to the American Forest Institute, by the year 2000 each American will be using a tree and a half every year, or 50 per cent more—and there will be a lot more Americans.

Fortunately, wood is a renewable resource and one that can be expanded, as attested to by the thousands of acres of carefully tended and supervised tree farms in Mississippi.

Not too many years ago acre after acre of fine, virgin timber was stripped from the land with no effort made toward replacement.

Nowdays, one has only to look at the many acres of reproducing forestrylands in all sections of the state to see the wisdom of keeping our timber and lumber supply in constant production.—Jackson (Miss.) Clarion-Ledger and Daily News

Postmen Grounded

Next time a child asks you, "What does it mean - hoist on his own petard?" you don't need to give him a lesson in old French military mishaps. You can relate the following true-life incident:

There was a brief item in the news the other day to the effect that postmen in a southern Illinois town - West Frankfort, to be exact - were hoofing it on their deliveries even though they have official mail vehicles.

Reason: The cars didn't have license plates. Why was that? The plates, new 1973 ones required by Feb. 15, had been lost in the mails.—Waco (Tex.) News-Tribune

Public Forum

To the editor:

One thing that is badly needed in Greenville is bicycle paths. In 1972, bicycles outsold cars almost 3:2, and every year several thousand cyclists are killed by careless drivers and/or careless cycling.

Bicycle paths or routes have been set up in most major cities, and the movement is towards establishing a city-to-city bikeway linkage across the nation. Almost all college students own bikes, as well as do many Greenville residents. To date, there are 1541 registered bicycles for the year 1973 in Greenville and last year (1972), there were over 2500. For the year 1972-73, ECU students registered over 2,100 bikes, and the Traffic Office estimates that there are over 1,000 unregistered cycles.

A petition is being circulated around Greenville by our group, The Cyclists For Safety. This petition is to be presented to the city council, advocating the establishment of bikeways. However, many citizens have refused to sign, giving such senseless reasons as "We don't need them" or "They'll cost too much." When will these people wake up and open their eyes to the fact that a value cannot be placed on a human life? Will it be now, when something can be done about it, or will it be in a week, or a month, or a year, or five years, when a friend or loved one is killed or maimed for life or critically injured in an accident?

A Conservative View Spring—An Abiding Mystery, Eternal Answer

By JAMES KILPATRICK

SCRABBLE, Va.—It was a long, gray winter here in the Blue Ridge Mountains, a winter in which nothing much ever happened. For the first time in memory, we saw not a single flake of snow. The days slipped by as silently as smoke from kitchen hearths. Spring, we thought, would never come.

Now spring tiptoes in. This is not like other years. We have known Aprils when spring bursts upon our hills in one prodigious leap, and all the stage is filled at once, whole choruses of tulips, arabesques of golden flowers, a warm wind blowing and the oaks unfurled. This year's spring is shy. It pauses like a grandchild at the door, peeping in, ducking out of sight, giggling in the hallway. "Heather!" I want to cry, "I know you're there. Come in!"

In some ways, to be sure, spring tentative is better than spring impetuous. We have a little longer to contemplate the mystery, not of birth, but of rebirth; there is time to search for monumental truths in tiny things.

The dogwood bud is a pale green chalice, inlaid with russet markings. Within that perfect cup, a score of clustered seeds are nestled. Where were these seeds a month ago? The maples do not come forth in green. They are flowering red, soft as slippers, in tassels like a jester's scepter; come October, we will see that red again. The flowering almond is pink, absurdly pink, little-girl pink, as pink as peppermint and cream. Two weeks ago this frothy branch was brown as a pretzel stick.

It may be—I venture the thought uncertainly—it may be that spring holds greater meaning in the hills than in the city. Granted, April in Paris is something to sing about, and April in Washington is pure delight, but trip-hammers intrude, and traffic rushes by, and the ear is tuned to city sounds. The fastest thing in sight this morning, here in Rappahannock County, is a groundhog lumbering across O'Bannon's Hill; and when I open the office window, there is only the murmur of birds.

They, too, are very much a part of spring. Last week we heard quail calling the fencerow. Bluebirds are nesting by the barn. A robin streaks by the window, trailing a pennant of straw. Our feeding stations are as busy as the piazzas of Florence: Cowbirds, hooded as old friars; cardinals in red; peasant sparrows, woodpeckers crimson-capped, a bluejay that swaggers like a bosun's mate, bossing the finches around. I walk to the mailbox, and a pair of startled larks soar in missile arcs against a cloud-blown sky.

We have been planting the vegetable garden, and at last—at long last—the raw red clay of Rappahannock County yields to leaf mold and compost. This year the spading fork turns up a friable rich brown earth. The digging goes slowly: It is more fun to watch an indignant earthworm, suddenly evicted, struggling back to his tunnel kingdom.

Thus slowly, a little more each day, the buds open and the leaves unfold. For months our mountains have been as silent and as somber as the old widows of Greece, their gnarled faces wrapped in black weeds. Now they come to life again, the swaying willows all in bridesmaid green. The earth wiggles its toes, yawns, reaches for a tulip, finds a dandelion instead—and laughs.

Last Sunday, Palm Sunday, a visiting minister in our village church preached on the great themes of Easter week. He read the Passion according to Mark, and spoke for a few minutes of crucifixion and death. The sermon set thoughts in motion.

Skeptics who approach the Christian faith have no problems with Christ dead; we know death as we know winter. The problem lies in the theme of resurrection. This is the mystery that abides, the miracle our intellects resist. I am myself not made for preaching sermons, but this I am learning in these hills: An eternal answer to the abiding mystery may lie concealed within the dogwood blossom. All that may be asked, in the end, is that men who understand winter seek also to comprehend spring.

'THEY SAW THAT THE STONE WAS ROLLED AWAY'

Slowing The Runaway Economy Will Hurt, But Less Than A Real Bust

By GEORGE BRYANT, JR.

The number one question now is whether the Nixon Administration can invoke any combination of economic restraints which will prevent the boom from turning into some sort of bust before another 12-months roll by.

Many economists and business analysts, with the rather conspicuous exception of some Presidential advisers, agree that the expansion which got going 18-months ago is hitting too fast a clip. Most signs now indicate run-a-way inflation, not just in food prices, but across the board.

Walk through just about any mart and it's hard to find prices that haven't been marked up once, twice, or even more often, in the past few months. Still, the buyers, businesses and individuals, are "hanging in there", spending plentiful cash and credit.

In trying to look ahead, there is one thing to keep in mind: Once an economy overheats from inflationary forces, there is no painless way to cool it off. Hardship becomes a certainty. The question is the scope and severity.

If the economy is left to go its own free way, then the threat is "of another trip on the boom-bust roller coaster," as Business Week sees it. This means that prices will go on up until buyers are driven out of the market places, exhausted. This brings a fall-off in demand for goods and services; which, in turn, means rising unemployment. It's happened several times in the last 20-years.

New price ceilings, by themselves, won't do any more than postpone the day of reckoning. They might help sustain demand. There is still a slight cushion left in production capacity, in theory. But we are already bumping ceilings in key areas—all-important energy is an example. The boom is over-running itself. Business Week notes:

"The long-run sustainable growth path of the U.S. economy is about 4 per cent a year. But the current expansion—now almost 18-months old—is still hitting a rate of 8 percent. Manufacturers' order files are bulging up, a scramble for inventories is starting, and capital spending is mushrooming. "Unless there is a slowdown, healthy growth could turn into an inflationary blowoff in the last quarter of 1973. And that would set the stage for a recession in 1974."

There are other steps, beyond direct rent, price and wage controls, which Washington can take. And unless it does, and soon, it may well be too late to head off a truly severe recession—one which will properly bear the Nixon label.

The screws can be turned down another notch on Federal spending. Any cut undertaken should be of sufficient magnitude to put spending on the "restrictive" side as an economic influence. Congress will complain, but it probably will decide to go along.

But the most important weapon Washington can use at this stage is a more restrictive monetary policy—tighter credit. This, of course, would rive interest rates up and make loans harder to come by. It is a way to shrink the ever-rising demand for goods and services.

Fiscal and monetary tightening will create some hardships. Some government construction would have to be shelved, for example, and this would have a job impact. Credit tightening also will have an impact on jobs.

But if these moves are tied in with direct controls on rent, wages and prices, then it might be possible to cool the economy without the hardship experienced in the 1969-71 period. As you will recall, wages and prices zoomed right on up while the economy was slowing and the unemployment figure was rising to 6 percent.

Just about anything that is done will create some hardship. But these may well be far less painful than going through the boom-bust wringer.

Alone And Frightened Of Life In New World

By JOHN KILGO

Dolly Nasser is a strikingly attractive young woman, a half-a-world away from what used to be home, who says: "I live here but I have no country...I'm so tensed up that I think only of tomorrow."

Dolly is 23 years old and dead broke. She is separated by oceans and thousands of miles from her parents and seven brothers and sisters. She is enrolled in a nursing course at Central Piedmont Community College in Charlotte.

"I only go to school and to my room," she says. "I know nothing else."

Dolly and her family lived in Uganda, until President Idi Amin kicked all Asians out last November. More than 50,000 had to leave, with only $140 in their pocket.

"Things had gotten so bad in Uganda," Dolly says. "We lived just across the street from the church but my father would not let us go. Army men stood guard at the church door and robbed people as they went in. They would come with their guns and storm into private homes and rob the people of their money. The could do this because they always carried guns."

Press reports indicated the dictator has executed hundreds of people in Uganda, while making citizens watch in horror.

The United States took 1,000 of the Uganda refugees. Dolly Nasser is the only single girl who came to this country without any family. As far as she knows, she is the only refugee to be sent to North Carolina.

She is alone and she is frightened of this new world.

Dolly's parents are in Bombay. One brother is in Canada. Three sisters and two brothers are in London.

Miss Nasser lives in the Charlotte Memorial Hospital Nursing home where her rent is paid for the rest of the month. She has less than $70 in her possession and "eats like a bird" to stretch every dollar.

She has no money for school books, or uniforms and part of the tuition is unpaid. She thinks only of today.

Dolly arrived in New York in early November and was sent to Wilson, N.C. where a small church was to help her—the Christian Church in North Carolina.

She was a nurse in Uganda, so she went to Chatham Hospital in Siler City and became a nurse's aid. The pay was peanuts and her potential was not being fulfilled. Officials at Chatham Hospital brought Dolly to Central Piedmont two weeks ago and she is now enrolled in the nursing program, which will take 21 months to complete.

She is proud, as well as lonely. She wants no charity. She does not want to ask help, even in a strange land where the faces and culture are new to her and almost beyond her understanding.

"My family was close-knit," Dolly says, in broken English. "We were very close. But in our culture, we miss our community even more than our family."

When Idi Amin told the Asians to get out of Uganda, they were to take none of their possessions.

"They told us to get out on two feet and nothing else," Dolly says.

She is now a permanent resident of the United States, but will not be eligible for citizenship in this country for two years. She can't get a visa to leave the country or visit her family.

Mrs. Jessie Kiser is the director of nursing at Central Piedmont. She watches Dolly struggle and it eats at her.

Many Voters Believe Watergate Case Revealing Corruption

PRINCETON, N.J., — President Nixon's announcement Tuesday that "major developments" had come to light in the Watergate case occurred at a time when the issue has come of such widespread concern that it could seriously affect GOP fortunes in next year's congressional races.

Specifically, the latest nationwide Gallup survey (completed prior to the President's announcement) revealed that:

1—Watergate, a "non-issue" in last fall's presidential campaign, has now become familiar to an extraordinary number of Americans.

2—Nearly one-third of all persons in the survey felt that the Watergate affair reveals corruption in the Nixon administration.

3—Four in 10 expressed the belief that President Nixon knew about the Watergate situation in advance.

4—A significant percentage in the survey called for a "clearing of the air" by the President regarding the events surrounding the Watergate affair.

The first survey question sought to determine present level of awareness. A total of 83 per cent said they had heard or read about Water—up 31 percentage points from a survey conducted last October during the presidential campaign. This is a surprisingly high awareness figure, even considering the attention given Watergate by the media.

People in the survey were next asked to indicate their reactions to Watergate. The answers reveal a certain amount of confusion regarding the details of the affair, not surprising perhaps in view of the tangle of charges and countercharges that have surrounded the investigation.

Reactions Run Gamut From Apathy To Outrage

Reactions run the gamut from apathy to outrage. Here are comments from persons who do not regard Watergate as a serious matter:

"Somebody got caught with his hand in the pot. Frankly I think the whole thing's a joke" ... "I'm sick of hearing about it" ... "It's just a bunch of junk about breaking into an office" ... "There are more important things in the world to be straightened out" ... "It's been blown out of proportion—the newspapers don't need to advertise it so much" ... "The disclosures surprised me but didn't shock—I guess it's a matter of whose goose is being cooked" ... "It's just a publicity stunt."

'The Whole Thing Is Dirty and Distasteful'

Many others in the survey, however, regarded Watergate in a more serious light:

"The whole thing is dirty and distasteful" ... "They're a bunch of crooks—they should be thrown in jail" ... "It's the most outrageous action a party can take" ... "Exposure of this nature is bad for the morale of the nation" ... "The country will be a lot better off when the whole story is revealed" ... "I don't care about the bugging—I care about the tangled web of campaign financing. I am disturbed by the highhanded, unresponsive attitude of the executive branch of government."

Some Are Cynical — 'It Goes On All The Time'

Still others in the survey reveal a cynicism about politics:

"The same thing goes on all the time" ... "It's a commonplace activity these days" ... "It's election shenanigans—just a lot of politicians at each other's throats again."

4 In 10 Say Nixon Knew In Advance

More people at the time of the survey believed President Nixon knew in advance about the Watergate situation than felt that he did not — 41 per cent to 32 per cent. Another 27 per cent either did not express an opinion or had not heard or read about Watergate.

Of political significance is the fact that not only did Democrats by a wide margin think Nixon knew about the affair in advance, but independents leaned to this view as well. Even among Republicans, one in five thought Nixon had prior knowledge.

Following are the question and findings, based on the total sample:

DO YOU THINK PRESIDENT NIXON KNEW ABOUT THE WATERGATE SITUATION IN ADVANCE, OR NOT?

DID NIXON KNOW ABOUT WATERGATE IN ADVANCE

	Yes	No	No Opinion Not Heard
NATIONAL	41	32	27
Republicans	21	50	29
Democrats	51	24	25
Independents	42	32	26

Third Say Watergate Reveals Corruption

Approximately a third of persons in the survey said the Watergate affair is a serious matter because it reveals corruption in the Nixon administration, while a majority 53 per cent described the affair as "just politics—the kind of thing both parties engage in."

Most inclined to think that Watergate reveals corruption are Democrats and persons in the survey who felt that Nixon knew in advance about Watergate.

Democrats were divided on this issue. A majority of independents said "just politics" but of political significance is the fact that one-third took the opposite point of view. In addition, 13 per cent of Republicans said they felt Watergate is a serious matter because it reveals corruption in the administration.

Following are the question and results:

Which of these two statements comes closer to your point of view about Watergate?—It's a very serious matter because it reveals corruption in the Nixon administration; or, it's just politics—the kind of thing that both parties engage in.

	Reveals Corruption Politics	Just Not Heard	No Opinion
NATIONAL	31	53	16
Republicans	13	67	20
Democrats	42	42	16
Independents	31	56	13

UN Official Can See Progress In Human Rights

By GEORGE BRIA
Associated Press Writer
UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.
(AP) — One of the creators of the V for Victory sign in World War II is still fighting oppression — but in a much slower war.

It's not all frustration, however, for Marc Schreiber, 57, head of the U.N. Division of Human Rights. Despite such criticisms as Russian writer Alexander Solzhenitsyn's that the United Nations is an "immoral institution in an immoral world," Schreiber sees considerable progress in U.N. achievements in the field of human rights.

"Before the United Nations charter, there were no international commitments by states on a world-wide basis to respect and promote human rights," Schreiber said. "Whatever was done within this framework was done from scratch."

Schreiber, a Belgian, escaped with his wife to England when the Nazis invaded the Lowlands and France in 1940. He got a job broadcasting to occupied Belgium with the British Broadcasting Corporation.

He says his Belgian BBC group dreamed up the V sign.

"We wanted something to oppose the Nazi swastika, something that could be drawn on walls quickly and easily by a few people in many places, something which would represent the ideals for which the Allies were fighting," Schreiber recalls.

"We decided on the V because we were broadcasting to Belgium in both French and Flemish and it was good in both languages — 'Victoire' — French and 'Vrijheid' — In freedom — in Flemish."

The three dots and a dash — the morse code for V — and the coinciding opening bar of Beethoven's Fifth Symphony were refinements contributed by others later, Schreiber says.

On the staff of the United Nations from its earliest days, Schreiber has been director of the Division of Human Rights since 1966. Into his office pour thousands of complaints alleging human rights violations in all parts of the world.

Schreiber's 40-man team sees that the complaints are sent to various U.N. organs dealing with human rights. Copies are also sent to the country concerned, including the name of the complainant if he or she wants it divulged. The division services such meetings as the 29th session of the Commission on Human Rights in Geneva.

In the slow bureaucratic process, persistent complaints could result in public exposure and, if the country concerned was willing, investigation of the facts and a search for solutions in harmony with U.N. principles. But the United Nations has no enforcement power and could hope for improvement only through the pressure of publicity.

In this situation, Solzhenitsyn, in his 1970 Nobel Prize lecture unveiled last year, assailed the United Nations as a "united governments organization where all governments stand equal ... As a result of an obedient vote, it has declined to undertake the investigation of private appeals — the groans, screams and beseechings of humble, individual, plain

perience with life in prison camps, are banned in his homeland.

"One would want to be able to do more," Schreiber agrees. But given the structure of the United Nations, he sees the main objective as a civilizing effort over a long range of time. The goal would be achieved through such means as the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the numerous international agreements adopted by the United Nations since the Declaration was approved by the General Assembly in Paris in 1948.

The Declaration consists of 30 articles covering civil, political, economic, social and cultural rights.

The 25th anniversary of the adoption of the Declaration will be observed next Dec. 10 and a decade "for action to combat racism and racial discrimination" will be launched at the same time.

Schreiber, father of a grown son and daughter, pins much hope on the young to achieve growing commitment to human rights.

"There is a desire to know each other among young people and to find common areas of activity directed to the humanitarian progress of mankind," he says.

"She's more relaxed now than she was when she first came," Mrs. Kiser says, "but you can see that she has so many problems to overcome. She has no money. She is meeting friends but it's so different from what it was in Uganda. She has exceptional skills and works very hard in class. She will make a good nurse."

Says Dolly: "People ask me where I'm from and it's hard to explain. Girl without a country? Yes. That is I." The Wilson church is helping Dolly financially but is a small church and the money is not sufficient to live. She now belongs to Charlotte and so far the city hasn't really responded.

"As much as I want to," Dolly says, "I don't know where to go."

A few days ago, after a bad experience, Dolly went to Mrs. Kiser and said: "I think I pack up and go home."

"Home?" Mrs. Kiser asked. Dolly sat in the library at CPCC the other day. She wants Charlotte to be home. She is trying. She is far away from family and friends and community.

"I get tensed up," Dolly explains. "I worry. But I must not think about future days, only this day." And in a footnote she said: "But I not give up. I keep trying."

Gardening Questions

Q. What controls fusiform rust on pines? (J. C., Maple Hill)

A. There is no practical chemical control for the homeowner. If the fruiting structure of fusiform rust is on a limb, as much as 15 inches from the trunk, you can simply cut off the limb. If the fruiting structure is on the main trunk, it is best to cut the tree and start over. Don't worry about the yellow powder (spores) which come out of the fruiting structure in the spring infecting other pines. These spores infect nearby oaks, and the oaks, in turn, infect pines later in the summer. (Fred Whitfield, extension forester)

Q. What are the best growing conditions for rhododendron? (Mrs. G. C., Asheville)

A. Excellent drainage, high humidity, good soil moisture and cool soil temperatures, which can be aided by mulch. They can be grown in full sun or light shade. (Tom Cannon, extension horticulturist)

Q. How can I get rid of slugs around my house? (E. O., Lumberton)

A. One good control material is Zectran 25 percent wettable powder used at the rate of five tablespoons per gallon of water. (A gallon of this mixture will cover 175 square feet of ground surface.) Repeat treatment if necessary. There are also baits which may be used. These baits usually contain metaldehyde plus some other pesticide such as carbaryl (Servin). (H. E. Scott, extension entomologist)

Q. Most of the flower buds on my rabbiteye blueberry bushes appear to be dead. The bushes have been vigorous and productive in past years. What made the buds die? (K. B., Wallace)

A. Low temperatures in February were responsible for killing many rabbiteye flower buds this past winter. In some locations, branches as well as buds were killed. Rabbiteye type blueberries can not stand temperatures below 10 degrees Fahrenheit for any length of time without some injury. The Tifblue variety came through the winter with less damage than other varieties, and should be considered for future planting. Remember to plant at least two varieties to insure adequate cross pollination. (Charles M. Mainland, extension horticulturist)

Few Accidents Laid To Cars

ODENSE, Denmark (UPI) — Danes have been told to stop blaming their cars for traffic accidents.

The police department in Denmark's third largest city checked all accidents in the 1969-72 period and reported that less than 1 per cent were caused by tire failures, faulty brakes or other mechanical defects. Drivers were blamed for 99 per cent of the mishaps.

Opera Star To Display His Knowledge In Math

World famous opera star Jerome Hines plans to spend a week at East Carolina University from April 29 to May 5. Instead of providing songs with his remarkable voice, however the Metropolitan Opera star will be projecting theories for solving complicated math problems.

"Hines is a brilliant mathematician," says Dr. Tullio Pignani, chairman of the ECU Department of Mathematics.

"Last year when he came to Greenville to perform at an ECU concert, he lectured to an advanced calculus class and demonstrated some very interesting discoveries. This is why he's coming back, not to sing, but to teach," Pignani said.

As an undergraduate math and chemistry student at UCLA, Hines considered a career in science but later dropped the idea and became a professional entertainer. He has been very successful, having made several acclaimed tours in Europe and the Soviet Union. But his singing success has not spoiled his love for math and he says he develops new formula and theories while waiting backstage in his dressing room between his operatic performances.

Hines is scheduled to present lecture-seminars in math research, Monday through Friday from 3:00 to 4:30 p.m.

He will give popular interest lectures Monday evening in the ECU School of Nursing auditorium and again on Tuesday and Thursday evenings in the School of Music auditorium. The time for these lectures is 8 p.m. and the public is invited.

Cincinnati Opera's Casting Completed

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Cincinnati Summer Opera has completed casting for the 1973 season.

"Tales of Hoffmann," which opens the season on June 30, will be sung by Norman Treigle, John Alexander, Louise Russell, Joann Grillo and Linda Cook. Tito Capobianco will direct. The scenery is from the New York City Opera.

Title roles in "Hansel and Gretel" will be sung by Susanne Marsee and Eileen Shelle. The new production is a gift of the Corbett Foundation.

Martina Arroyo and James King of the Metropolitan Opera will sing in "Aida," which is another new production given by the Corbett Foundation. Carol Smith and Louis Quilico also will be in the cast.

Matteo Manuguerra, Kenneth Riegel, Roberta Peters and Batyah Godfrey will sing in "Rigoletto." "La Rondine," with scenery from the Philadelphia Lyric Opera, will present Carol Nebbett and Gianfranco Pastine.

Beverly Sills stars in the title role of "Daughter of the Regiment," with tenor Stanley Kolk. Scenery is from the Houston Grand Opera.

There also will be a concert by Renata Tebaldi and Franco Corelli.

New Children's TV Show 'Bicultural'

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — English and Spanish children in this country will get to know each other better if a new educational television program achieves its goals, according to the sponsors of the project.

Beginning this fall, a bilingual-bicultural Spanish-English television program for children from preschool through the primary grades will be telecast daily on a national basis. The 130-program series, as yet untitled, will be funded by the United States Office of Education.

The program's target audience includes millions of young American children. The purpose is not simply to teach English to Spanish-oriented children.

"We want English-speaking children to learn or become familiar with the Spanish language, culture, customs and heritage, too. Through this method Spanish-oriented and Anglo children can learn about, appreciate and understand other cultures and each other," said Dr. Rene Gardenas, executive director of Bilingual Children's Television Inc., which is producing.

"The most exciting thing about this is that the students have been so caught up in it," Stephen Koch said about the forthcoming production of Oklahoma at Rose High School.

For three days, May 10, 11, and 12, the famed Rogers-Hammerstein musical of 30 years ago will be presented with a cast of more than 70 boys and girls in singing, dancing and speaking roles.

"We're going to use the amphitheater type of staging," Koch said. "The gym at Rose lends itself to this. The play will take place in the center of the stage. With the arrangement of bleachers there, everybody will have a fine view of the stage." Koch said that students, mostly on their own time, had built the 50 foot backdrop and the 12 foot high tormentors blocking off the stage. "They've also built the complete set, including a 12 foot farm house and a big barn."

Asked what prompted him to come up with the idea of a production as elaborate as Oklahoma, Koch said the "success of the Christmas presentation, which 900 people attended, made me feel the students and the public would be happy about the idea of a major school production."

"To the best of my knowledge, this is the first time ever at Rose that a production has ever incorporated all phases of preparation: designing, building, acting, music, everything."

Mark Ramsey will direct Oklahoma. "I don't think I need to tell you about Mark," Stephan said. "He's very well known around Greenville for his work with the ECU Summer Theater."

"We have a wonderful choreographer," Koch said. "Christina Williams has had lots of experience in dance. She's a former teacher at Davidson College."

Koch said he has been overwhelmed by the response of students turning out for casting. "Even for boys to take the dancing roles there was no problem," he said. "I think this indicates students are vitally interested in undertaking projects that require working together and giving their time for something they can feel enthusiastic about."

Koch, a voice major, received the master's degree in Music from East Carolina University in 1972. This is his first year in Greenville City Schools. He teaches music at both Rose and Aycock Junior High.

"We're hoping the public is going to enjoy seeing Oklahoma as much as the students have enjoyed working to get it into shape," Koch said.

Tickets for the production will be on sale at $1.00 for students and $1.50 for adults.

Music Students Will Perform On WUNK-TV

NORTH CAROLINA: THE ARTS will present a special program on Sunday, April 29, at 3:30 p.m. Featured will be advance students in music in a three-part performance including string and wind instruments.

Reflections On The Praphan Srisouta Prints Acquisition

In their thoughtful gesture of honoring men and women of eastern North Carolina who have served in recent years in Southeast Asia, Mr. and Mrs. Marvin K. Blount, Sr. have enriched and expanded the permanent collection of art in the Greenville Art Center.

Their gift of commemoration, six large black and white prints by Praphan Srisouta, brings to the center's collection its first contemporary Oriental art. (Oriental works already in the permanent collection include several fine objects given by the late A. E. Winkler and a pair of Chinese scrolls given by Miss Venetia Cox of Greenville, who lived long years in China as a missionary).

Now in his early thirties and living in the United States, Srisouta is completing work on his Masters of Fine Arts degree at Cranbrook Academy of Art in Bloomfield Hills, Michigan. The artist is studying on a Rockefeller grant.

The six prints chosen for Greenville are all from the years 1968-1969 when Srisouta had returned to his native Thailand after studying at the Academy of Arts at Berlin for two years on a scholarship from the German Government.

The stark contrast of black and white emphasizes the strength that emanates from his prints; at the same time, it underscores the poetry that is a lyrical element in his work, whether prints or paintings. Symbols of nature—energy giving sun and stars of a tropical night, play an important role in his work of this period. And even more dominant are his figures of children. Young, innocent, as free as the sunshine that sustains them, the children, which the artist says are drawn in "Water Baby" outlines, are captivating, as young children are any place, anytime. These are children universal who climb, jump, swing, romp, crouch and play, not yet aware of the struggle that is life.

The noted art critic Humphrey Jones, writing in the July-August 1971 issue of Arts in Asia, says of the children in Srisouta's work "... they are ... his heroes of himself or mankind in general."

One of a family of nine children from the town of Lamphun in northern Thailand, Srisouta in a sense became an artist through accident. As a youth, he had aspirations to enter the Thai military academy. When he arrived in Bangkok too late for the entry examination, he instead went to an art school, and then attended the Bangkok University of Fine Arts, where he graduated in 1963.

Srisouta's has not been the classic pattern of a young artist waiting long years before gaining recognition.

Perhaps his early decision to break away from typical touristic art that preoccupied many of his contemporaries was a fortunate development. As early as the year of his graduation, he exhibited in Singapore and Kuala Lumpur.

In 1964 Srisouta's work was exhibited at Vienna, Austria and Sydney, Australia. While a student in Germany, he had a show in Hamburg, Germany, followed by work being accepted in the International Exhibition at Sao Paulo, Brazil in 1967.

Other major exhibitions have included ones at Tokyo's 1968 International Exhibitions of Graphis Art in 1968 and again in 1970; and Capri in 1969. In 1970 Srisouta was one of two Thai artists invited to exhibit at the International Biennial of Prints in Tokyo. In the same year he had a one-man exhibition in Hong Kong.

But early success has not lulled the young artist into a sense of complacency. He says he is seeking new ways to express what he feels as an artist—to reflect the joys of his childhood spent among a large family in a beautiful verdant river town of flowers and temples; to portray man's need to triumph against all the problems common to the world—war, disease, the vanity of destruction.

In his quest, Srisouta has recently turned to poetry, writing in English. With the help of friends, he is shaping these up and working on prints to illustrate his poems. As with anyone working in a second (or in his case a third language) Srisouta has technical problems to overcome, but these are minor consideration.

One poem, a short one, reveals a longing that anyone far away from home has at one or another time felt. Very simply, he titles it "Empty Mail Box."

My mail box is empty. I've seen the postman coming.

But he did not drop anything there.

He has gone. My eyes struggle still beyond the mail box

Trying to engrave a little Hope

As I wait slowly for tomorrow.

It is appropriate that works by this young artist, who expresses a universal concern for mankind in his art and poetry, have been chosen as a tangible tribute to our own young people who have experienced the loneliness, as well as a new dimension in friendship among people in the distant lands of Southeast Asia.

Wind Ensemble Concert To Feature Foley

At 3:15 p.m. next Sunday, the East Carolina University Wind Ensemble will present a concert at Wright Auditorium.

On the program, works by five composers ranging in time from Joseph Haydn to Rosslee Finney will be played.

The opening work will be Darius Milhaud's Suite Française in five parts—"Normandie," "Bretagne," "Ile de France," "Alsace-Lorraine," "Provence." This is the first extended work composed for winds by this noted French composer. It was composed in 1945.

Serenade in E-Flat Major, Opus 7 by Richard Strauss is one of the composer's very early works. It was written in 1881, when Strauss was 16, and is scored for pairs of flutes, oboes, clarinets, bassoons, four horns, and contrabassoon or tuba.

Richard Foley will perform the oboe solo passages in the

"Allegro Spiritoso" movement of Joseph Haydn's Concerto For Oboe in C Major. Dr. Foley is a faculty member of the ECU School of Music.

A major contemporary work, Rosslee Finney's Summer In Valley City, is in six parts—"Fanfare," "Interlude," "Parade," "Games," "Fireworks," and "Night."

The final selection for the program is Serge Prokofiev's March, Opus 99.

The public, including children, is invited to attend this concert at Wright. There is no admission charge.

Artists Encouraged To Enter Flea Market

Local craftsmen and artists, young and old, are reminded that the time is drawing near to get their creations in readiness for the big spring Flea Market to be held at the Greenville Art Center on Saturday, May 5.

ECU '72 Graduate Donna Stephenson

Second In National Competition

Miss Donna Stephenson, fall quarter graduate of the ECU School of Music, has recently received recognition at the National Convention of the Music Teachers National Association which met in Philadelphia early this month.

A winner was named in each performance category with Miss Stephenson receiving the next to the highest award in voice. Having won first place in Southeastern Division earlier this year, she was competing with winners from the other regions of the U.S.

Miss Stephenson is spending the remainder of this school year at the N.C. School of the Arts where she has been performing with the Winston-Salem Chorus and Orchestra.

In February she was soloist in a performance of Aaron Copland's composition for chorus and mezzo-soprano, In the Beginning. On April 12, 1973 she sang the lead role in the opera, He Who Gets Slapped, by Robert Ward.

Also during this month she will be singing the mezzo-soprano solos in Bach's Easter Cantata with the Birmingham Symphony. She will return to ECU later this spring to be soloist with the Woman's Glee Club.

Miss Stephenson will continue her musical education at the Berkshire Music Festival during the summer when she plans to study with Phyllis Curtin. At ECU she was a student of Gladys White.

This year, opting for a different approach from the conventional sidewalk show event for spring, East Carolina Art Society board members have decided to give the Flea Market type of show a try.

One hoped for result is that a large number of university art students, faculty members, and community artists will be on hand with their work for sale.

Because of an expected fairly large number of entrants, each craftsman or artist participating is being asked to bring a sturdy folder and supporting easel or other display device for displaying work. Tables will be provided insofar as possible, but display space may be at a premium.

To encourage participation, commission on work sold at the Flea Market is being kept to 20 per cent—a lower rate than generally exists currently at many sales points. Each entrant will be provided stickers to place on works sold and sales slips to fill in for cashiers.

It is felt that small paintings, watercolors, drawings, prints, and smaller pieces of sculpture will have particular appeal to potential purchasers. Ceramics are also expected to be a good item for craftsmen to enter. Photographs, carved decoys, whittled objects and craft items of all nature are being sought for this first Greenville Art Center Flea Market.

Full information can be had by contacting the Art Center, telephone 758-1946.

Writers Meet On Tuesday

Belly dancing is recognized as an exercise admirably suited to toning body muscles and is used extensively throughout the nation in programs to help people find better health through a variety of exercises.

The Preventive Heart Disease Clinic is conducted each Wednesday night at the Health Department building and includes square dancing and other dances that contribute to bodily health and agility.

Book News

For Michael, one of the nicest places to be is on Mother's lap, rocking back and forth. It is especially cozy when Michael snuggles under his favorite reindeer blanket with Boat, Dolly, and Puppy. But then, Baby, Michael's little sister, cries to rock on Mother's lap too. And Michael is sure that with Baby there won't be enough room for him. That's when Michael learns that Mother's lap is a very special sort of place—it makes room for everyone. Ann H. Scott achieves a remarkable book by telling simply and beautifully this universal childhood experience in ON MOTHER'S LAP.

Maybe she shouldn't have bothered to bring her red umbrella. It was such a nice day. But you can never tell, she thought, and she was right, because by and by it began to rain. Before she knew it, there was quite a crowd under the red umbrella: a little dog, two kittens, a woolly lamb, three little pigs, and a big wet bear. And other animals, besides. As each new arrival crept under the red umbrella, it grew a little bigger. It was always big enough to keep everyone safe from the rain. In fact, it was always just the right size. And Robert Bright's MY RED UMBRELLA is just the right size too, perfect for the hands and lap of a brand-new reader. The simple vocabulary will be easy for him, and the excitement of reading by himself at last will be enhanced by the merry, delicate drawings that trace this gay procession through the rain.

Table tennis, "the" national sport in many countries, is mushrooming in popularity in the United States. BETTER TABLE TENNIS for Boys and Girls by George Sullivan—explains—in text, photographs, and diagrams—how to become proficient in playing this hard-hitting game. Fundamental information is presented clearly and concisely—scoring, legal and illegal serves, types of rackets, how to recognize a quality ball, specifications for net and table, how to adapt a basement or playroom for table tennis play. Gripping the racket, serving the ball, basic forehand and backhand shots and footwork relating to each, the importance of spin and how to cope with it—all are examined in detail. Elementary and advanced shots are explained, plus the tactics and strategy of both singles and doubles play. Official rules are listed, and a glossary included. Information is based on interviews with table tennis champions and instructors, and material supplied by the United States Table Tennis Association, the game's ruling body.

ANOTHER P.B. PRODUCTION

Major Rose High Production Shapes Up Students Enjoy Preparing 'Oklahoma'

"The most exciting thing about this is that the students have been so caught up in it," Stephen Koch said about the forthcoming production of Oklahoma at Rose High School.

For three days, May 10, 11, and 12, the famed Rogers-Hammerstein musical of 30 years ago will be presented with a cast of more than 70 boys and girls in singing, dancing and speaking roles.

"We're going to use the amphitheater type of staging," Koch said. "The gym at Rose lends itself to this. The play will take place in the center of the stage. With the arrangement of bleachers there, everybody will have a fine view of the stage."

Koch said that students, mostly on their own time, had built the 50 foot backdrop and the 12 foot high tormentors blocking off the stage. "They've also built the complete set, including a 12 foot farm house and a big barn."

Asked what prompted him to come up with the idea of a production as elaborate as Oklahoma, Koch said the "success of the Christmas presentation, which 900 people attended, made me feel the students and the public would be happy about the idea of a major school production."

"To the best of my knowledge, this is the first time ever at Rose that a production has ever incorporated all phases of preparation: designing, building, acting, music, everything."

Mark Ramsey will direct Oklahoma. "I don't think I need to tell you about Mark," Stephan said. "He's very well known around Greenville for his work with the ECU Summer Theater."

"We have a wonderful choreographer," Koch said. "Christina Williams has had lots of experience in dance. She's a former teacher at Davidson College."

Koch said he has been overwhelmed by the response of students turning out for casting. "Even for boys to take the dancing roles there was no problem," he said. "I think this indicates students are vitally interested in undertaking projects that require working together and giving their time for something they can feel enthusiastic about."

Koch, a voice major, received the master's degree in Music from East Carolina University in 1972. This is his first year in Greenville City Schools. He teaches music at both Rose and Aycock Junior High.

"We're hoping the public is going to enjoy seeing Oklahoma as much as the students have enjoyed working to get it into shape," Koch said.

Tickets for the production will be on sale at $1.00 for students and $1.50 for adults.

Opera Star To Display His Knowledge In Math

World famous opera star Jerome Hines plans to spend a week at East Carolina University from April 29 to May 5. Instead of providing songs with his remarkable voice, however, the Metropolitan Opera star will be projecting theories for solving complicated math problems.

"Hines is a brilliant mathematician," says Dr. Tullio Pignani, chairman of the ECU Department of Mathematics.

"Last year when he came to Greenville to perform at an ECU concert, he lectured to an advanced calculus class and demonstrated some very interesting discoveries. This is why he's coming back, not to sing, but to teach," Pignani said.

As an undergraduate math and chemistry student at UCLA, Hines considered a career in science but later dropped the idea and became a professional entertainer. He has been very successful, having made several acclaimed tours in Europe and the Soviet Union. But his singing success has not spoiled his love for math and he says he develops new formula and theories while waiting backstage in his dressing room between his operatic performances.

Hines is scheduled to present lecture-seminars in math research, Monday through Friday from 3:00 to 4:30 p.m.

He will give popular interest lectures Monday evening in the ECU School of Nursing auditorium and again on Tuesday and Thursday evenings in the School of Music auditorium. The time for these lectures is 8 p.m. and the public is invited.

Cincinnati Opera's Casting Completed

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Cincinnati Summer Opera has completed casting for the 1973 season.

"Tales of Hoffmann," which opens the season on June 30, will be sung by Norman Treigle, John Alexander, Louise Russell, Joann Grillo and Linda Cook. Tito Capobianco will direct. The scenery is from the New York City Opera.

Title roles in "Hansel and Gretel" will be sung by Susanne Marsee and Eileen Shelle. The new production is a gift of the Corbett Foundation.

Martina Arroyo and James King of the Metropolitan Opera will sing in "Aida," which is another new production given by the Corbett Foundation. Carol Smith and Louis Quilico also will be in the cast.

Matteo Manuguerra, Kenneth Riegel, Roberta Peters and Batyah Godfrey will sing in "Rigoletto." "La Rondine," with scenery from the Philadelphia Lyric Opera, will present Carol Neblett and Gianfranco Pastine.

Beverly Sills stars in the title role of "Daughter of the Regiment," with tenor Stanley Kolk. Scenery is from the Houston Grand Opera.

There also will be a concert by Renata Tebaldi and Franco Corelli.

New Children's TV Show 'Bicultural'

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — English and Spanish children in this country will get to know each other better if a new educational television program achieves its goals, according to the sponsors of the project.

Beginning this fall, a bilingual-bicultural Spanish-English television program for children from preschool through the primary grades will be telecast daily on a national basis. The 130-program series, as yet untitled, will be funded by the United States Office of Education.

The program's target audience includes millions of young American children. The purpose is not simply to teach English to Spanish-oriented children.

"We want English-speaking children to learn or become familiar with the Spanish language, culture, customs and heritage, too. Through this method Spanish-oriented and Anglo children can learn about, appreciate and understand other cultures and each other," said Dr. Rene Gardenas, executive director of Bilingual Children's Television Inc., which is producing.

The Blount Gift To The Center

Reflections On The Praphan Srisouta Prints Acquisition

In their thoughtful gesture of honoring men and women of eastern North Carolina who have served in recent years in Southeast Asia, Mr. and Mrs. Marvin K. Blount, Sr. have enriched and expanded the permanent collection of art in the Greenville Art Center.

Their gift of commemoration, six large black and white prints by Praphan Srisouta, brings to the center's collection its first contemporary Oriental art. (Oriental works already in the permanent collection include several fine objects given by the late A. E. Winkler and a pair of Chinese scrolls given by Miss Venetia Cox of Greenville, who lived long years in China as a missionary).

Now in his early thirties and living in the United States, Srisouta is completing work on his Masters of Fine Arts degree at Cranbrook Academy of Art in Bloomfield Hills, Michigan. The artist is studying on a Rockefeller grant.

The six prints chosen for Greenville are all from the years 1968-1969 when Srisouta had returned to his native Thailand after studying at the Academy of Arts at Berlin for two years on a scholarship from the German Government.

The stark contrast of black and white emphasizes the strength that emanates from his prints; at the same time, it underscores the poetry that is a lyrical element in his work, whether prints or paintings. Symbols of nature—energy giving sun and stars of a tropical night, play an important role in his work of this period. And even more dominant are his figures of children. Young, innocent, as free as the sunshine that sustains them, the children, which the artist says are drawn in "Water Baby" outlines, are captivating, as young children are any place, anytime. These are children universal who climb, jump, swing, romp, crouch and play, not yet aware of the struggle that is life.

The noted art critic Humphrey Jones, writing in the July-August 1971 issue of Arts in Asia, says of the children in Srisouta's work ... "they are ... his heroes of himself or mankind in general."

One of a family of nine children from the town of Lamphun in northern Thailand, Srisouta in a sense became an artist through accident. As a youth, he had aspirations to enter the Thai military academy. When he arrived in Bangkok too late for the entry examination, he instead went to an art school, and then attended the Bangkok University of Fine Arts, where he graduated in 1963.

Srisouta's has not been the classic pattern of a young artist waiting long years before gaining recognition.

Perhaps his early decision to break away from typical touristic art that preoccupied many of his contemporaries was a fortunate development. As early as the year of his graduation, he exhibited in Singapore and Kuala Lumpur.

In 1964 Srisouta's work was exhibited at Vienna, Austria and Sydney, Australia. While a student in Germany, he had a show in Hamburg, Germany, followed by work being accepted in the International Exhibition at Sao Paulo, Brazil in 1967.

Other major exhibitions have included ones at Tokyo's 1968 International Exhibitions of Graphis Art in 1968 and again in 1970; and Capri in 1969. In 1970 Srisouta was one of two Thai artists invited to exhibit at the International Biennial of Prints in Tokyo. In the same year he had a one-man exhibition in Hong Kong.

But early success has not lulled the young artist into a sense of complacency. He says he is seeking new ways to express what he feels as an artist—to reflect the joys of his childhood spent among a large family in a beautiful verdant river town of flowers and temples; to portray man's need to triumph against all the problems common to the world—war, disease, the vanity of destruction.

In his quest, Srisouta has recently turned to poetry, writing in English. With the help of friends, he is shaping these up and working on prints to illustrate his poems. As with anyone working in a second (or in his case a third language) Srisouta has technical problems to overcome, but these are minor consideration.

One poem, a short one, reveals a longing that anyone far away from home has at one or another time felt. Very simply, he titles it "Empty Mail Box."

My mail box is empty.
I've seen the postman coming.
But he did not drop anything there.
He has gone.
My eyes struggle still beyond the mail box
Trying to engrave a little Hope
As I wait slowly for tomorrow.

It is appropriate that works by this young artist, who expresses a universal concern for mankind in his art and poetry, have been chosen as a tangible tribute to our own young people who have experienced the loneliness, as well as a new dimension in friendship among people in the distant lands of Southeast Asia.

Wind Ensemble Concert To Feature Foley

At 3:15 p.m. next Sunday, the East Carolina University Wind Ensemble will present a concert at Wright Auditorium.

On the program, works by five composers ranging in time from Joseph Haydn to Rosslee Finney will be played.

The opening work will be Darius Milhaud's Suite Francaise in five parts—"Normandie," "Bretagne," "Ile de France," "Alsace-Lorraine," "Provence." This is the first extended work composed for winds by this noted French composer. It was composed in 1945.

Serenade in E-Flat Major, Opus 7 by Richard Strauss is one of the composer's very early works. It was written in 1881, when Strauss was 16, and is scored for pairs of flutes, oboes, clarinets, bassoons, four horns, and contrabassoon or tuba. Richard Foley will perform the oboe solo passages in the

"Allegro Spiritoso" movement of Joseph Haydn's Concerto For Oboe in C Major. Dr. Foley is a faculty member of the ECU School of Music.

A major contemporary work, Rosslee Finney's Summer In Valley City, is in six parts—"Fanfare," "Interlude," "Parade," "Games," "Fireworks," and "Night."

The final selection for the program is Serge Prokofiev's March, Opus 99.

The public, including children, is invited to attend this concert at Wright. There is no admission charge.

For Michael, one of the nicest places to be is on Mother's lap, rocking back and forth. It is especially cozy when Michael snuggles under his favorite reindeer blanket with Boat, Dolly, and Puppy. But then, Baby, Michael's little sister, cries to rock on Mother's lap too. And Michael is sure that with Baby there won't be enough room for him. That's when Michael learns that Mother's lap is a very special sort of place—it makes room for everyone. Ann H. Scott achieves a remarkable book by telling simply and beautifully this universal childhood experience in ON MOTHER'S LAP.

Maybe she shouldn't have bothered to bring her red umbrella. It was such a nice day. But you can never tell, she thought, and she was right, because by and by it began to rain. Before she knew it, there was quite a crowd under the red umbrella: a little dog, two kittens, a wolly lamb, three little pigs, and a big wet bear. And other animals, besides. As each new arrival crept under the red umbrella, it grew a little bigger. It was always big enough to keep everyone safe from the rain. In fact, it was always just the right size. And Robert Bright's MY RED UMBRELLA is just the right size too, perfect for the hands and lap of a brand-new reader. The simple vocabulary will be easy for him, and the excitement of reading by himself at last will be enhanced by the merry, delicate drawings that trace this gay procession through the rain.

Table tennis, "the" national sport in many countries, is mushrooming in popularity in the United States. BETTER TABLE TENNIS for Boys and Girls by George Sullivan—explains—in text, photographs, and diagrams—how to become proficient in playing this hard-hitting game. Fundamental information is presented clearly and concisely—scoring, legal and illegal serves, types of rackets, how to recognize a quality ball, specifications for net and table, how to adapt a basement or playroom for table tennis play. Gripping the racket, serving the ball, basic forehand and backhand shots and footwork relating to each, the importance of spin and how to cope with it—all are examined in detail. Elementary and advanced shots are explained, plus the tactics and strategy of both singles and doubles play. Official rules are listed, and a glossary included. Information is based on interviews with table tennis champions and instructors, and material supplied by the United States Table Tennis Association, the game's ruling body.

IN REMEMBRANCE OF ... the many men and women of eastern North Carolina who have served in Southeast Asia, the sextet of Praphan Srisouta's black and white prints shown above have been added to the collection of the Greenville Art Center. Artists Encouraged To Enter Flea Market

Local craftsmen and artists, young and old, are reminded that the time is drawing near to get their creations in readiness for the big spring Flea Market to be held at the Greenville Art Center on Saturday, May 5.

ECU '72 Graduate Donna Stephenson Second In National Competition

Miss Donna Stephenson, fall quarter graduate of the ECU School of Music, has recently received recognition at the National Convention of the Music Teachers National Association which met in Philadelphia early this month.

A winner was named in each performance category with Miss Stephenson receiving the next to the highest award in voice. Having won first place in Southeastern Division earlier this year, she was competing with winners from the other regions of the U.S.

Miss Stephenson is spending the remainder of this school year at the N.C. School of the Arts where she has been performing with the Winston-Salem Chorus and Orchestra.

In February she was soloist in a performance of Aaron Copland's composition for chorus and mezzo-soprano, In the Beginning. On April 12, 1973 she sang the lead role in the opera, He Who Gets Slapped, by Robert Ward.

Also during this month she will be singing the mezzo-soprano solos in Bach's Easter Cantata with the Birmingham Symphony. She will return to ECU later this spring to be soloist with the Woman's Glee Club.

Miss Stephenson will continue her musical education at the Berkshire Music Festival during the summer when she plans to study with Phyllis Curtin. At ECU she was a student of Gladys White.

This year, opting for a different approach from the conventional sidewalk show event for spring, East Carolina Art Society board members have decided to give the Flea Market type of show a try.

One hoped for result is that a large number of university art students, faculty members, and community artists will be on hand with their work for sale.

Because of an expected fairly large number of entrants, each craftsman or artist participating is being asked to bring a sturdy folder and supporting easel or other display device for displaying work. Tables will be provided insofar as possible, but display space may be at a premium.

To encourage participation, commission on work sold at the Flea Market is being kept to 20 per cent—a lower rate than generally exists currently at many sales points. Each entrant will be provided stickers to place on works sold and sales slips to fill in for cashiers.

It is felt that small paintings, watercolors, drawings, prints, and smaller pieces of sculpture will have particular appeal to potential purchasers. Ceramics are also expected to be a good item for craftsmen to enter. Photographs, carved decoys, whittled objects and craft items of all nature are being sought for this first Greenville Art Center Flea Market. Full information can be had by contacting the Art Center, telephone 758-1946.

Risk Health In 'Snacking'

BONN (UPI) — The busy executive who grabs a bite at his desk is going to be sick more frequently than the man who insists on taking a more leisurely noon meal at a restaurant.

So say physicians who surveyed 31,476 men and women on behalf of the Baden-Wuerttemberg Ministry of Labor and Welfare.

Men and women who bring sandwiches to work and eat them hurriedly at their desk or workbench, or who lunch quickly at their office canteen, are the most frequent applicants for sick leave, the physicians said in their study.

Those who leave their place of employment to eat in restaurants or at home are healthier, they said.

The study also showed that the frequency of sickness increases with the length of time an employee travels to and from work each day.

Caught 100 Bass In 90 Minutes

NEW YORK (UPI) — How many fish can anyone catch in how little time? Try topping this:

Virgil Ward, former world and national fresh-water fishing champion, and Dave Jadwin, current national fresh-water fishing champion, caught and tossed back 100 bass in just 90 minutes of fishing on Mexico's Lake Obregon.

Ward and Jadwin, who star in the forthcoming CBS one-hour special, "You Should Have Seen The One That Got Away" (April 28, 4 p.m., EST), said this is the most fish they've ever caught in that time span in decades.

Mother's 'darn it!' over fractured fingernail brings child's solution-minded counsel.

By DR. HAIM GINOTT

Note to readers: The encounters depicted in my column are designed to serve as a practical guide to improved communication. They are not to be taken literally. They should be adapted to individual situations and individual ways of speaking.

CHILDREN ABSORB from us attitudes and values that can change their lives and ours for the better. Example:

While zipping up her daughter's dress, Mother broke her fingernail. In an annoyed voice she said, "Darn it! Look what I've done." Mona, 6, said, "Remember Mom, we don't blame ourselves." "You are right," Mother said, "we look for solutions, which means I have to file down my nail." And that is what she did, in a light mood.

MOTHER AND FATHER were squabbling about a minor mishap, each shifting the blame on the other. Bryan, 13, intervened: "Excuse me. Your discussion is not solving the problem. You've got to look for a solution, not for a culprit."

Both Mother and Father were impressed. They heard their own words come back to them from their son. Father said, "Thank you, Bryan, for calling our attention to this important principle of communication."

Father related: "In the past, I would have told my son to mind his own business. I might have also added a few choice expressions to put him in his place. Now I am keenly aware of my power to hurt or support my son's dignity and self-esteem."

CHILDREN LEARN from us how to comment critically or sympathetically, depending on our style of conversation. The following was told by a mother of a 12-year-old boy:

"We do not usually drink at home without company. Later, however, the cold weather and crackling fires brought on a flow of alcoholic beverages.

As Father was preparing a drink, Larry said, "I notice you have been drinking more lately." Then he added, "I used your ways, Mom. I didn't criticize or tell you what to do. I merely stated the problem."

CHILDREN LEARN to give us choices, when they have been given choices! Example:

After June, 12, had been reprimanded by her father, she was asked to rejoin the family at the dinner table. She said, "I'd like to give you a choice. I can stay away and cool off, or return to the table and blow off more steam!"

EVEN VERY YOUNG children reflect our style and content of communication. Example:

Mother said to Kerry, age 4, "Your hair needs combing." Kerry walked over to Mother, turned around for her hair to be combed and said, "You have a choice: Pigtales or pony tail."

CHILDREN ECHO effective communication and apply it even under provocation, as in this example related by one mother:

"A quarrel broke out between my 8-year-old daughter and her girl friend, Liz. Liz began the standard argument, 'You're a dope, you're stupid, you don't know how to play.' Then, I heard my daughter (who had been exposed to my new language), say, 'Liz, I'm getting angry at you. I'm getting very angry, I'm furious!' I was pleased to hear my daughter express anger without insult. That's how we do it in our home."

CHILDREN OFTEN SEE themselves through their parents' eyes, as seen in this instance:

Until recently, Greg, 9, could not deal with criticism. Any rebuke would evoke his tears and tantrums. Later, he has improved. One day he drew a detailed design of a sports car. His friend, Richard, that's your opinion. In my opinion it is a good design." This was the end of the incident.

Mother related, "My son used an approach I had adopted in my conversations with him."

Craftsmen Injure Eyes KC Building Boom Approaching 'Peak'

NEW YORK (UPI) — One thousand eye injuries occur daily across the United States. The home craftsman figures significantly in the total, according to the Society for Visual Care.

"The most tragic aspect of workshop eye accidents, is that they can be prevented," says Dr. Spencer Sherman, a consulting ophthalmologist to the society. "Just the few seconds required to put on protective lenses could reduce eye injuries. Probably 90 per cent of equipment-related accidents are needless and preventable."

Sherman urges, too, that the home craftsman avoid eyestrain. "Often tired eyes make sight blurry," he says. "For instance, someone soldering wires for a stereo setup may use the wrong contact because the area looks hazy or blurry."

He recommends, when doing critical work, looking off into the distance at intervals to relax the eye muscles. Be sure you work in good lighting.

THE BIGGEST HUNTSVILLE, Ala. (UPI) — The Alabama Space and Rocket Center here is the world's largest space exhibit. The Apollo Saturn V moon rocket is the only one of its kind on public display in the world.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — This city's $3.4 billion building boom—said to be the largest in the nation—will hit a peak in the next 90 days, with about $265 million worth of projects opening for business for the first time, according to Mayor Charles B. Wheeler, Jr.

Kansas City's $43 million Royals stadium, the country's newest and most modern baseball stadium, opened April 10 to capacity crowds despite near-freezing weather. The major league All-Star game will be played in the stadium, and scored on its 12-story, $3 million scoreboard, July 24.

Wheeler said the 730-bed Crown Center Hotel, the first part of a $200 million "city-within-a-city" development by Hallmark Inc., will open its doors May 8 with a gala jazz weekend featuring Duke Ellington, Count Basie and other former Kansas City stars. The Crown Center Hotel features a 60-foot waterfall in a natural setting in its lobby.

Worlds of Fun, a $20.5 million Disneylike theme park owned by Lamar Hunt, will lower the gangplank to the SS Henrietta in late May. The ship, used in the film, "Around the world in 80 Days," now serves as the entrance to the 500-acre fun center just outside of Kansas City. Ground was broken April 14 on a new civic arena for the Kansas City-Omaha Kings of the National Basketball Association, the city's entry in the National Hockey League, and to house the American Royal, one of the nation's largest livestock expositions, Wheeler said.

College Credits In Pacific Cruise

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — College students will be able to earn up to six semester units of credit on a 59-day Pacific cruise this summer.

Students will hear visiting university lecturers in the ports of Tokyo, Hong Kong and Sydney and may earn credit in art, economics, political science, history, anthropology, sociology, geography, business and social sciences.

Perry's Six-Hitter Brings Third Victory

By KEN RAPPOPORT
Associated Press Sports Writer

The restless wind took some of the breeze out of Bill Hands' pitches, but there was enough velocity left to blow baseballs past the Texas Rangers.

"I don't like pitching in the wind," said Hands after battling 36-mile-an-hour gusts to pitch the Minnesota Twins to a 5-1 victory Friday.

Apparently the Rangers didn't like hitting in the wind, either. They only managed four hits off Minnesota's right-hander.

In other American League games, the Baltimore Orioles nipped the Detroit Tigers 6-5 in 10 innings; the Cleveland Indians defeated the Boston Red Sox 3-2; the Chicago White Sox routed the Kansas City Royals 16-2; the Milwaukee Brewers blanked the New York Yankees 2-0 and the Oakland A's trimmed the California Angels 4-3.

In the National League, the Cincinnati Reds beat the Atlanta Braves 4-2; the Houston Astros stopped the San Diego Padres 6-2 and the San Francisco Giants topped the Los Angeles Dodgers 7-3.

Hands, 2-1, struck out eight Rangers and walked one.

The loser for Texas was Hands' near-namesake, Rich Hand.

Mark Belanger's two-out double in the 10th inning scored Don Baylor from second to give Baltimore its victory over Detroit.

Lerrin LaGrow, who relieved Mickey Lolich with two out in the third inning, allowed only two hits but hit Baylor with a pitch to open the 10th.

After Larry Brown sacrificed and Paul Blaz was purposely passed, John Hiller replaced LaGrow and got Rich Coggins to fly out before Belanger delivered his game-winner.

Gaylord Perry pitched a six-hitter and Charlie Spikes drove in two runs with a homer and single to lead Cleveland past Boston. Spikes gave the Indians' star pitcher a 1-0 lead in the first inning with a single, then keyed a two-run flurry in the sixth with his home run.

Perry recorded his third victory in four decisions while Boston's Marty Pattin lost his second game in three decisions.

Bill Melton hit his fourth homer in four games, singled and doubled and drove in five runs as Chicago bombed Kansas City. Stan Bahnsen, a victim in the Royals' 12-5 victory last Sunday in Chicago, scattered nine hits and evened his record at 1-1.

Dave May's two-run homer in the sixth inning, Milwaukee's second and last hit off Mel Stottlemyre, and Jim Slaton's five-hit pitching carried the Brewers past New York.

Slaton extended his consecutive scoreless inning streak to 17.

Billy Conigliaro doubled home the winning run with one out in the ninth inning as Oakland defeated California.

Pete Rose hit a two-run triple, singled and scored another run and threw a runner out at the plate to lead Cincinnati past Atlanta; Ken Forsch scattered nine hits and Jim Crawford provided last-out relief to pace Houston past San Diego and San Francisco beat of Cincinnati's first 15 games, Los Angeles behind Juan Mari-chal's five-hitter. It was the 37th time in his career that the Giant right-hander had whipped the Dodgers.

WILLIAMSTON—Rose High School and Robersonville's Golden Eagles vaulted into the finals of the Gaylord Perry High School Baseball Tournament here Friday night with victories.

The consolation game and championship finals were held Saturday night. (See story on page B-1.)

The Rampants, who had already claimed a tight victory over Williamston earlier this year, had their troubles with the strong 2-A team, falling behind before finally gaining the winning run.

Williamston got off the first threat, in the second inning. Pitcher Mike Weaver singled to deep short and moved up when Berwyn Barnhill walked. Both the two died there without advancing.

Then, in the third, the Tigers pushed over their first run. With one down, Mike Bundy singled to short. He stole second, and moved to third on Dwight Ange's single. Joe Roberson then laid down a suicide squeeze bunt, successfully sacrificing in Bundy for a 1-0 lead.

They threatened again in the fourth, as Barnhill reached on a fielder's choice and Hubert Smith was hit by a pitch.

Rose finally broke the ice in the fourth, tying it up John Barwick got a one-out single to center and moved up on a wild pitch. Stanley Cobb then singled to right, driving him in for the 1-1 deadlock.

The Rampants pushed ahead in the fifth, scoring again. Greg Chapman reached on a fielder's choice, and with two away, pitcher Lee Cherry helped himself with a smashing double to right center, easily scoring Chapman for a 2-1 lead.

The Williamston nine came right back, however, pushing over the tying run in the top of the sixth. With one down, Barnhill walked and Phil Selby came on to run for him. He was sacrificed up, and Smith cracked out a single to center, scoring Selby.

Rose came up in the seventh and proceeded to push over the winning run. Jerry Griffin led off with a walk and Dickie Johnson

Break, Press Will Be Used

By DAN BERGER
Associated Press Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The United States national basketball team plans to fast break and use a pressing defense when it begins a series of six games against the Russians April 29.

Coach of the team Bob Cousy said Friday those two concepts will be on his mind this Sunday when the team begins working out at the Forum. He said the Russians are predictable and he said the U.S. squad would have to try to force the visitors out of their regular style of play.

"I don't know if this is the way to attack the Russians, though," said the head coach of the Kansas City-Omaha Kings of the National Basketball Association. "They are very mechanical, very well disciplined, and they also will run to a degree."

Last year's U.S. Olympic team, which lost in the finals to the Russians by a 51-50 score in the famous "second chance" game, used the more disciplined, patterned offense designed by veteran coach Henry Iba.

Tom Henderson, Hawaii's 6-3 guard who was on the team that lost the gold medal to the Soviets, is one of four back from that 1972 national squad. He, too, feels the Russians can be beaten with different tactics

Others who have been invited to play are 6-10 Ron Behagen of Minnesota, 6-9 Jim Brewer of Minnesota, 6-1 Ernie DiGregorio of Providence, 6-9 Bobby Jones of North Carolina, 6-3 George Karl of North Carolina, 6-4 Greg Lee of UCLA, 6-5 Pat McFarland of St. Joseph's, 6-1 Jim Oxley of Army and 6-7 Fred Saunders of Southwest Louisiana.

Doug Collins, Illinois State's 6-6 guard, cannot play, Cousy revealed, because of a severe sprained ankle.

They're slow but they're well disciplined and physical," said Henderson of the Russians. "They don't make many mistakes. They're unexciting—just like robots. You've got to control the tempo when you play them."

UCLA's Bill Walton, player of the year in college basketball the past two seasons, has said he's looking forward to playing in at least the first two games in the series, the opener here and then in San Diego, near his La Mesa home, on April 30.

But it was revealed Friday that a serious rash has developed on his left ankle, which is also suffering from a sprain, and he may not play.

The victim was Vida Blue who gave up five hits and all four California runs in the six innings he pitched.

The victory went to Bill Singer, who struck out 10 and allowed eight hits before leaving in the ninth inning. Oakland scored their final run in that inning on two walks and Sal Bando's single. The A's left 15 runners on base.

The loss was the eighth in 12 American League baseball games for the World Champion A's this season.

moved in as a courtesy runner. Ron Hunt laid down a bunt that was relayed to second, but was too late to get Johnson, leaving both safe. A pickoff attempt at runners advanced. Chapman was then intentionally walked to set up a force.

The first out nearly came when Fred Lemmond missed a suicide squeeze bunt, but Johnson was able to avoid the final tag in a rundown and sneak back into third as the other two runners held their bases. Then, with one down, Cherry hit the bunt perfectly, scoring Johnson with the game ending run.

Cherry and Barwick each finished with two hits for Rose, while no one had more than one for Williamston.

In the opening game, the defending State Class A champs, Robersonville, had little trouble in gaining their 3-0 win over the defending 3-A champs, Greene Central.

Doyle Farmer tossed a two-hitter at the Rams, and only three men reached base all evening, and only one got as far as second base. Farmer walked none and struck out six.

Greene Central's only baserunners came in the second, third and sixth innings. Jeff Letchworth singled in the second, while Stevie Williamson reached on an error in the third and then doubled in the sixth.

Robersonville, meanwhile, was keeping the Ram defense hopping. They pushed over two runs in the first inning. Ricky Brown reached on a fielder's choice and Doug Warren walked. Matt Wilson then smashed a triple to center, scoring both runners for a 2-0 lead.

The Eagles threatened again in the second as Mike Matthews singled and Jeff Warren walked, but to no avail.

In the third, however, they pushed over another run. Wilson singled to short and stole second. He took third on a wild pitch, but stayed there while Larry Johnson walked and was then cut down on Loyall Corey's grounder to first. Kim Knox lifted a fly ball to center that was dropped, and Wilson scored easily. Corey, also attempting to come all the way from first, was nailed at the plate.

While getting men on base in the fourth and fifth, Robersonville had only one other man to reach second, in the sixth. That came when Knox again was safe on an error, moving on to second on the play. He waited out the inning there, however, without further damage to the Rams.

State Out To Improve Fishing

RALEIGH Fishing for striped bass, or rockfish as they are more commonly called, is good in North Carolina, and it's going to get a whole lot better.

A two-part program is underway by the North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission to improve the striped population in Tarheel waters.

The program's second phase—which involves greatly increased stocking of two-to-three inch fingerling stripers—is currently getting underway.

"The first part of our program was largely research, and involved stocking both fry (five-day-old fish less than half an inch long) and the longer fingerling fish," said Don Baker, chief of the Commission's Division of Inland Fisheries. "We wanted to see which type of stocking was most successful."

Baker and his men found no significant improvements of fish populations from the stocking of fry, but in those places where fingerlings were stocked, a measurable improvement was found.

"The study confirms what we've suspected for a long time," Baker. "That is, that the stocking of fingerlings is the best way to improve a population of stripers."

The result is that this year all of the major rivers that drain into the Atlantic in North Carolina, and some of the large inland reservoirs, will receive massive stockings of stripers fingerlings as the fingerlings become available. Hatchery pond space for rearing fry to fingerling size is limited.

"The limited pond space and excess fry are the problems connected with our new program, but by borrowing a page from the South Carolina Wildlife Resources Department, we have been able to find a solution," said Baker.

Baker said that the North Carolina Wildlife Commission would give our excess fry to the Federal Hatcheries and to the Wildlife agencies of other states in exchange for a 25 percent return of the fingerlings these agencies rear.

"It's the closest I've ever heard of getting something for nothing," said Baker. "For instance, we would give another agency say, a million half-inch-long fry which we don't have pond space for rearing. Let's say the agency which gets the fry raises about 40 percent of them to two-inch fingerlings. That would mean we'd get 100,000 of these fingerlings for North Carolina public waters. Best of all, we know that by stocking fingerlings, we can expect a good return and much improved fishing."

Baker explained that Commission hatcheries can currently accommodate only about 500,000 fry because of commitments to other species of fish, and that for the past four years, the excess fry—some 44 million half-inch stripers—have been stocked. The results, as proved by studies, have negligible.

"Had we been exchanging fry for fingerlings during this period, it is conceivable that we might have had from 10 to 15 million two-inch fingerlings to stock, and it is probably that anglers could be harvesting stripers from waters where there are still none to catch," said Baker. "But we had to find out whether fingerlings or fry worked better. Now that we know, we're reshaping our program to provide more fingerlings."

All of the Wildlife Commission's stripers eggs were brought from fishermen at the striped bass hatchery in Weldon on the Roanoke River, which will open April 16 and close about May 27, 1973. This year, the Commission will increase the amount paid for eggs by $5 to $25 per million eggs if the eggs are ripe. Eggs will also be bought from green roe which have been injected with hormone until ripened, but because of the increased cost of handling hormone-ripened eggs, and also because fewer eggs hatch, the amount paid for green eggs will depend on the number of eggs that actually hatch.

As in the past, no adult rockfish can be returned to the fisherman after it has been injected with hormone (unless it is to be mounted)," said Baker. "We'll pay for all eggs taken from ripe roe unless the roe is partially green, dead, or the buck (male) fish is dead, in which case we'll only pay for the number of eggs that hatch. Live bucks (males) must be brought to the hatchery along with roe fish (females), either ripe or green. The males can be picked up by the fishermen after their roe has been spawned.

"If this new program works—and all our work and study indicate that it will—then fishermen in North Carolina can look forward to better fishing for striped bass in more and more of our waters," said Baker.

ANOTHER BIG ONE— Bill Powell caught this big one, an 11-pound, 9-ounce largemouth bass, at a local pond while fishing recently. It was the second large bass he had caught during the past few weeks. He was using plastic worms for bait. (Reflector Photo)

Knicks Take Series Lead

By DAVE O'HARA
Associated Press Sports Writer
BOSTON (AP) — The New York Knicks led the trump hand in the National Basketball Association's Eastern championship playoff today while the Boston Celtics worried about the condition of super star John Havlicek.

The Knicks gained the home court advantage and went up 2-1 in the best-of-seven series with a 98-91 victory Friday night before 15,320 at the Garden.

The Boston captain suffered a right shoulder injury when caught in a pick by New York's Dave DeBusschere and Bill Bradley in the third period, and was ineffective the rest of the way.

"It was a good play," Havlicek said. "I've been through a million picks like that." But said he and DeBusschere hit shoulders. "I just couldn't shoot after that. I missed some decent shots and even two or three foul shots. It's sore on top. If I had to predict right now, I'd have to say I couldn't play in New York Sunday."

Dr. Thomas Silva, the Celtics' team physician, scheduled X rays for today, but said examination showed no sign of a separation.

After swapping lopsided victories in the first two games, the two teams were ragged in the third encounter. New York moved in front 29-27 after one period and then capitalized on poor shooting by the Celtics for a 58-46 halftime lead.

The Knicks led by as much as 15 points in the third period before the Celtics rallied. Boston pulled to within 81-79 at the outset of the final quarter, but the Knicks moved out of danger with 10 consecutive points, including six by Bradley.

The Carolina Cougars trailed the Kentucky Colonels for most of the second half, but got back on top when it counted.

The Cougars, led by Billy Cunningham's 30 points, came from behind in the final three minutes to gain a 3-2 edge in their best-of-seven ABA playoff series.

In the other ABA series Saturday, the Utah Stars faced elimination when they met the Pacers in the sixth game of their best-of-seven playoff series in Indianapolis.

Kentucky pulled ahead by as many as eight points in the second half before Carolina finally gained the lead, 103-102, on a basket by Steve Jones, who had 21 points for the evening.

With 30 seconds left in the game, Kentucky was down by a point, 108-107, but Ron Thomas failed to get the ball in on a Kentucky inbound pass and was called for a five-second violation, turning the ball over to Carolina, which settled the issue with four straight free throws.

Wildlife Afield: Tying Fly On Stream Bank Is Just Myth

By JIM DEAN

If I've heard it once, I've heard it a hundred times. Some fellow will be talking about trout fishing, and he'll wind up something like this:

"...so I could see this trout rising, and he wouldn't take a thing until I finally whipped out my fly-tying kit and tied up a fly to match the hatching insects right there on the stream bank."

That's the stuff dreams are made of, and there was a time when I thought tying a trout fly on a mossy bank would be one life's more rewarding ventures.

I dreamed about the way it would be. I could see the dappled sunlight through the hemlocks and hear the quick current through the riffles before it slowed into a smooth run sliding over brown pebbles like a sheet of plate glass. Suddenly, a trout appears, drifting backwards, then turning and curling upward to inspect something tiny on the surface. Then the glass shatter, leaving rings to spread and flow downstream while I puff my pipe and calmly and expertly duplicate the natural fly using my trusty field fly-tying kit.

Well, I hate to always be pricking somebody's balloon, but this fantasy is just another hush in a long list of life's deflations.

In the first place, nobody carries a useful fly-tying kit small enough to be "whipped" out anywhere. The smallest useful fly-tying kit I ever saw took two men and a boy to carry it. Even then, it contained only a few basics—enough to tie merely the more popular patterns. Most fly-tying kits are about the size of a Dempster-Dumpster, except that Dempster-Dumpsters never get as full as a fly-tying kit.

But even if it were possible to carry a useful fly-tying kit while fishing—in a vest already stuffed with 40 pounds of fly boxes, salami sandwiches, pliers, line dressing, fly dressing, snakebite kits (86 proof), pipes and tobacco, rain suits, leader packs, thermometer, line clippers, extra reels and a three-year-old half-plug of Old Blue, not to mention any number of their necessities—it would still be impossible to use a fly-tying kit on the banks of a stream.

The problems are that as soon as you open your fly-tying kit, a puff of wind will blow $75 worth of rooster remnants away before you can bat an eye (if you're the type that bats eyes). Furthermore, if the wind happens to be calm, it's a lead-pipe cinch you won't be. Imagine trying to tie a really neat fly while some be-speckled old trout is feeding nearby so violently that he's sloshing water on the banks. I, for one, couldn't tie my shoelaces under such conditions, and neither could any other fisherman.

Let's say, however, that you have managed somehow to overcome these obstacles and you are happily tying your fly and enjoying the magnificent solitude.

You can be deep in the wilderness, 20 miles from a paved road, and I'll wager 50-1 that before you've wound the first hackle, somebody will be looking over your shoulder asking question like a court reporter on his first assignment. It never fails.

And yet, I rarely pick up a magazine on trout fishing that I don't see a photograph of some philosophical-looking old codger sitting beside a babbling brook trying a trout fly. It's a fraud and you should recognize it as such.

As for me, I always tie my flies in the dark of night in the dead of winter, locked safely in my room where I can ignore my kids shouting and the tramp of heavy boots racing through the house and the blinking lights from that red truck somebody has parked in the driveway. It's the only way you're ever going to get any flies tied.

Cougars Claim Third Victory

GREENSBORO, N. C. (AP)—The Carolina Cougars had to fight back from as many as eight points down in the second half Friday night but they turned the game around in the closing minutes for a 112-107 victory over Kentucky to take a one game lead in the American Basketball Association's East Division playoff.

The Cougars, regular season leaders in the East, now lead 3-2 in the best-of-seven series which shifted Saturday to Louisville.

Carolina, after trailing much of the way, pulled in front with three minutes remaining on a Steve Jones field goal which put the Cougars ahead 103-102.

The Cougars stayed in front the rest of the way, capturing the last four points on free throws as Kentucky fouled in attempts to gain possession of the ball.

"We have no excuses, no alibis," said Kentucky Coach Joe Mullaney after the game. "We had our chance. We'll just have to come back Saturday night."

Cougar Coach Larry Brown observed: "We've won so many this year in the same manner, a comeback . . . coming from way down and fighting back, but this was the biggest comeback of all."

Jones, who wound up with 21 points for the evening behind Billy Cunningham's 30, noted that he was coming off a scoring slump.

The Oct. 22-28 tourney here, involving about 32 players, was approved a few days ago by the International Lawn Tennis Federation and will precede grand prix tournaments in Paris and Stockholm.

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Jerry Chandler, assistant basketball coach at Castlemont High School in Oakland the past three years, was named Friday as an assistant on Coach Lute Olson's staff at Long Beach State.

Olson, hired from Long Beach City College to succeed Jerry Tarkanian, will have Chandler and Dwight Jones as assistants. Chandler played at City College of San Francisco and at Nevada-Southern, now the University of Nevada-Las Vegas, which hired Tarkanian away from Long Beach.

Marine Thefts Reported On The Rise

By JACK WOLLISTON
NEW YORK (UPI)—Keep a close watch on your boat and boating equipment this season. Thefts in the marine field are on the rise.

That report comes from Michael J. Murphy, president of the National Automobile Theft Bureau, who calls it "a real problem, not a myth."

"The theft frequency of boats, boat power units and boat trailers being reported to police authorities has increased manifold in the past few years with each new reporting period reaching a new high," Murphy says.

At present, Murphy says, 5,000 boats are recorded as stolen in the National Crime

Information Center, but this figure probably represents only 50 per cent of the actual losses.

"A high percentage of these losses occur in rural areas where police services are limited," he says. "In many areas police records and communication contacts to central, state and national crime computerized record centers leave much to be desired."

Carried Out Program

The NATB president says that during 1972 his organization carried out a limited pilot program to survey and analyze the overall growing problem of marine thefts. The survey was made to help pinpoint areas where the insurance industry, which supports the nonprofit NATB is most vulnerable to such losses.

The prime target area was Texas where the boat population is estimated at more than 750,000 craft, and the yearlong study showed the following chief reasons for the increase in boat and boat part thefts:

—Woefully inadequate identification numbers on pleasure boats and power units.

—Lax requirements within state laws which allow boats, power units and trailers to transfer on a bill of sale or invoices only.

—The fact that the nature of the property (mobility, desirability) makes it a prime target for theft.

—An absence of laws or policies that charge law enforcement agencies with specific responsibility for record keeping and investigation.

ID Numbers Inadequate

Murphy says manufacturers' identification numbers on pleasure boats and equipment are inadequate in comparison with the automotive industry.

"These deficiencies apply equally to the configuration of serial numbers; to the locations of such numbers, and to the nature of the stamped, embossed or etched plate, and to the quality of the metal and how it is attached to the boat or motor," Murphy says.

Factors that attract a thief to a luxury auto are, by and large, duplicates of those that motivate the boat thief, Murphy says.

"The very nature of this personal property, its mobility, its high value, its great desirability and its poor identification makes it a prime target to the thieves," he says.

"The problem is further compounded by the absence of laws or policies that charge law enforcement agencies with specific responsibility for record keeping and investigation in connection with reported thefts, the resale of units or components or the conducting of investigations of organized rings of thieves."

Requirements Lax

He says state laws generally allow boats, power units and trailers to transfer on a bill of sale or invoice—with very lax requirements for recording transfers of ownership in state records.

"Many states do not require a certificate of title for a boat, nor does the state maintain cross indices or boat serial numbers, boat registration, or identification numbers to owner's name," Murphy says.

And boat records on file with the state usually do not contain a cross reference to the serial number and description of its power unit.

"Trailer serial numbers are largely unregulated, unrecorded and not cross indexed to trailer license number and owner's name," he says. "Most states do not require a certificate of title on boat trailers."

"All these factors conspire to make it easy for the boat thief."

BASS Official Speaks Against Proposed Fees

WASHINGTON, D.C.—Ray Scott, president of Bass Anglers Sportsman Society (B.A.S.S.), a national sport-fishing and conservation group, testified before the U.S. Senate today in opposition to planned recreation use fees on properties under the jurisdiction of the army Corps of Engineers.

Testifying before the Senate Parks and Recreation Subcommittee, Scott said B.A.S.S. is not opposed to the general concept of use fees, but that present law clearly prohibits the Corps from charging such fees.

"We support the use fee concept in areas administered by Federal agencies whose primary responsibility is the provision of outdoor recreation," Scott said. "However, the Corps is a different breed of cat. Its primary responsibilities include navigation, flood control and hydroelectric power generation. Recreation is only incidental to its basic purpose," he said.

"In addition, the Secretary of the Army has testified that the cost of collecting fees usually exceeds the amount collected," he added. Quoting from a 1970 letter to the U.S. House of Representatives from Army Secretary Stanley P. Resor, Scott cited the statement: "Based on our experience, policing all the access points and collecting fees usually costs more than the revenues produced by the fees collected."

Scott pointed out that no new collection methods have been developed since 1970, so it must be assumed that Mr. Resor's statement is still valid.

Adding further support to his contention that Corps use fees are illegal Scott cited a section of Public Law 92-347 which requires that the entire cost of collection of use fees shall not exceed 40 percent of the fees collected. "In effect, the law prohibits the collection of fees unless the collecting agency can demonstrate that at least 60 percent of the fees will then be available for maintenance and expansion of recreation facilities," he said.

"It is obvious to that the Corps cannot meet that requirement, as Secretary Resor has pointed out," Scott said.

The Senate hearings, chaired by Sen. Alan Bible (D-Nev.), were called to consider testimony on a proposed amendment that would prohibit the Corps from charging such fees. The amendment was introduced by Sen. Dewey Bartlett (R-Okla.) and 18 other senators, including Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield (D-Mont.).

Appearing in opposition to the amendment were: James G. Watt, Director of the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation; Major Gen.

J.W. Morris, Director of Civil Works, Army Corps of Engineers; and Rexford A. Resler, Associate Chief, U.S. Forest Service.

Those testifying in favor of the amendment included Bartlett, fellow Oklahoma Sen. Henry Bellmon, Sen. Robert Dole (R-Kan.) and Sen. Marlow Cook (R-Ky.). Scott was the only spokesman present to represent the nation's outdoorsmen.

Sen. Bible indicated he hoped the committee could finish its deliberations by Monday, April 16, and report the amendment out for a vote.

The average Navy Pilot isn't.

No man who has mastered the flying skills it takes to fly and land on a ship at sea can be called an average pilot. And the sense of accomplishment and satisfaction that he enjoys are also above average. Which is only right. For the man who would go places as a Naval Aviator must pass through the most challenging and demanding training program to be found anywhere.

From Aviation Officer Candidate School through Flight Training to the day his golden Navy Wings are awarded, he is tested; driven; pushed and tested again. And for good reason. The Navy has learned that without the will to succeed, no man can be successful.

The benefits aren't average either. A Naval Aviator can earn up to $10,000 upon completion of flight school. The pay after three years is up to $14,500. There is also a program for obtaining a masters degree at no cost. The Navy gives its Aviators the best.

Which brings us to you. Do you have what it takes to fly Navy? Send in this coupon and find out. Or talk with your local Navy recruiter.

Pitt Tech's Cooperative Education Program

AUTO MECHANICS. . . Alexander Smallwood watches as Automotive Supervisor Robert Gouras explains the various parts and their functions.

EXPLAINS WORK. . . Johnnie May of Wachovia Bank explains what is expected of Frances Marie Baines during her working hours at the bank.

A significant shift in the way students are trained for life careers is now taking place in higher education.

"Amid the controversy of 'relevancy' in education today, the Cooperative Education Program at Pitt Technical Institute seeks to provide a partial solution," stated Ed Warren, director of Cooperative Education at PTA. "Educators see this program as a method of learning especially attuned to the 1970s.

According to Warren, the basic idea is that students will be working in the business community while still earning academic credit.

"Gaining work experience directly related to students' curriculum majors and emphasizing that learning is as equally dependent on practical experience as it is on academic achievement are the primary objectives of cooperative education," Warren explained.

Even though this program is optional at Pitt Tech, certain departments have incorporated the Co-op program into the required curriculum.

"Any student may participate who maintains an acceptable grade point average in a regular curriculum," Warren said. "Students who are already employed may use their present job if it meets requirements for receiving credit."

The most widely used Co-op program for Pitt Tech students is the parallel plan which is suitable for employers who can use students on a part-time basis.

The student goes to school for one-half day and works for an employer for the remaining workday hours.

"Two other types of Co-op training can be most effective," Warren emphasized. "A full-time job is shared by two students on an alternating basis. While one student is working on the job, his partner is attending classes"

A second type of Co-op program, according to Warren, is the alternating quarter plan.

"This type attracts employers who must have a work station manned full-time by a competent employee," the director said.

"Although Co-op programs are helping many students pay their way through school, the value of this program for a student is not money but experience. The benefit for companies is not just the work they get from the students, but the opportunity to hand-select and pre-train prospective full time employees."

"Also, employers can use more effectively their professional personnel for specialized assignments when a Co-op trainee shares the work load. A strong advantage for local employers is that co-op students are available year round. Equally important, the employer becomes a contributor to the educational process," Warren explained.

Community support—moral and financial—is increased as the Co-op program enables Pitt Tech to expand its services to the community.

"While working with the students, Pitt Tech faculty members are in an advantageous position to maintain a close relationship with business, industry and the professions," Warren noted.

For those participating employers, there are certain criteria. The job must provide experience in an area commensurate with one of the programs offered by Pitt Tech. Responsibilities of the position should provide meaningful work to the student for at least one full quarter.

If current economic conditions persist," Warren said, "students with Co-op experience will find themselves among the graduates who obtain jobs matching their training." Warren also feels these graduates can anticipate higher starting salaries along with more responsible positions.

"Students are not placed on jobs and then forgotten," Warren continued. "Co-op personnel visit the employers and students on the job at least once each quarter. At the end of each quarter a student is evaluated by his job supervisor and his Pitt Tech advisor."

The student also submits to the Co-op office an indepth study of his learning experiences and personnel observations.

Mrs. Della Dayson works with Warren as a coordinator in the Co-op program. She looks for jobs for students and works in the area of placement.

During spring quarter, there are 48 students enrolled in the Co-op program with 13 different departments represented on work stations.

The program, beginning its third year, is one of nine such programs in the state community college system.

"Pitt Tech is pleased thus far with community acceptance of the relatively new program," Warren stated, "which will give the institution a greater opportunity to expand services to the Pitt County area."

"Further incorporation in department curriculum and broader support from the business community will most certainly make cooperative education more relevant to the students and more beneficial to our entire area."

North Carolina — Leader In Preventive Dentistry Program

"Plaque-free in '73," the slogan goes, but what does it mean?

To the hard-pressed parent, the learning of the teeth flossing and brushing technique it refers to by every family member can mean a considerable reduction in dental bills.

To the dentist, it may mean a drastic change in his practice. He will still have to drill and fill and pull, but also he must become a teacher of preventive dentistry, often electing to change his and his staff members' allotment of time, and possibly having to add staff members.

To the State Board of Health Dental Division, it's the most successful preventive measure the Division has ever used, one it has completely embraced and tried to promote in every facet of its work.

The Dental Division's commitment to the new technique and its efforts to teach it to dentists and to the general public throughout the state earned for it the first annual Preventive Dentistry Award of the American Dental Society. The $1,000 stipend was presented to Dr. E. A. Pearson Jr., head of the Dental Division.

Joint Effort

"The Dental Division doesn't take full credit for the award. It was won by the joint effort of the Preventive Dentistry Committee of the N. C. Dental Society, the State Dental Society itself, the University of North Carolina School of Dentistry, and the Department of Community Colleges, in addition to the Board of Health Dental Division, and many dedicated private dental practitioners," Dr. Pearson said.

How did the preventive effort begin in North Carolina, the first state in the nation to have its Board of Health use the concept?

"We have always been interested in any measure that might prevent dental disease," Dr. Pearson said. "That's what public health is all about—preventing disease and preserving health. For many years though, there did not seem to be much a dentist could do but repair damage already done and encourage his patients to brush after meals, eat properly with as little sugar in the diet as possible, and see him regularly."

"Then late in the 60's we began to hear about the flossing and crevice brushing technique developed by Dr. C. C. Bass."

"Dr. M. W. Aldridge invited the dental division to Greenville to learn the plaque removal technique he and his wife and his office staff had learned at a seminar taught in New York by Dr. Robert Barkley, one of the earliest proponents of the technique."

Clean Feeling Sells It

"I figured," Dr. Aldridge said, "that once these men and women experienced how truly clean their mouths could feel, they would be as sold on the concept as I am and they could get things moving on the state level. We kept them here for several days and gave each of them the same lessons we would give any of our patients."

"First we showed them films which explained why the disorganizing of the bacterial plaque works. Plaque is not food or food residue, we tell our patients, nor is it just bacteria in the mouth. It is a metabolically interconnected, highly organized bacterial system. It harms the teeth and their supporting structures with its concentrated acidic by-products of bacteria. These bacteria and their by-products are held against the teeth and gums by the plaque, which also acts as a barrier against saliva, which would neutralize the acidic by-products, thereby resulting in a condition on the tooth surface that readily produces decay and damage to the gums."

"The only sure way to prevent tooth decay and gum disease is to break up the bacterial colonies at least every 24 hours. Oftener is not necessary. Any longer is too long."

'Prophy' Lasts 24 Hours

Dr. Aldridge told fellow dentists at a seminar held in Fayetteville recently: "When we do a 'prophy' (a once-every-six-months cleaning), we've done for the patient something that will last him 24 hours, no longer. Then, unless he knows how to floss and brush every tooth surface correctly, he goes the remaining half a year with no worthwhile care at all. Give your patients more than that."

After Dr. Pearson and his staff had had Dr. Aldridge teach each of them the flossing and brushing procedure, they went home and practiced it for several weeks. Then they went to Dr. Fred Miller's office in New Bern to be checked out to be sure each was doing it correctly. They were sold, Dr. Pearson said.

In March, 1970, Dr. Barkley spoke at Pinehurst at a meeting of the N. C. Dental Society. The Dental Division met with him there and, as a result the Preventive Dentistry effort on a state level came into being. It was learned later that North Carolina was the first state to tackle the promotion of the concept on a state level.

"We do all we can to teach prevention in the schools and through our community health departments," Dr. Pearson said, "but this is a tough area." County Commissioners have to be persuaded to allow school dentists to spend their time teaching how to floss and brush correctly instead of filling and pulling teeth. Parents usually object, too. It's going to take a lot more public education.

Seminars Held

"One of the best approaches, no doubt, is to reeducate our practicing dentists. We held seminars last year in Goldsboro, Asheville, Chapel Hill, Jamestown in Guilford County, and Charlotte, each for practitioners and their office staff members to learn the concept."

"In these seminars, we emphasized, besides thorough learning of the concept, one important idea—that most patients cannot learn correct flossing and brushing in only one visit. Therefore, a series of appointments have to be set up to do the teaching well enough that the patient can see the benefits and incorporate it into his daily hygiene."

"We believe now that public school teachers may be our best promoters of the concept to our children. We've held a few meetings for teachers in certain areas in the state and hope to expand this program soon.

We've also work some through Extension Homemakers' Programs.

"The monthly publication of the Dental Health Division, Oral Express, has received wide attention. It is published by Emma Carr Bivins and serves the combined forces of the N. C. Preventive Dental Program mentioned earlier as the joint recipients of the Preventive Dentistry Award. I believe about as many copies are now going out of state on request as are being distributed within North Carolina."

The Dental Division still works for fluoridation of community and school water supplies and application of fluoride directly to the teeth, but plaque control is its newest and its best preventive tool, Dr. Pearson says.

Motivation Difficult

"Motivation is our biggest problem," he commented. "How do you inspire the average North Carolinian to do something daily to save his own teeth and gums. We'll be using our award stipend to do more in this area."

"However," he went on, "it's a challenging effort, because here we are, for once, offering something truly effective that doesn't call for any big expenditures, something that will actually save the person money and worry in the long run, as well as protect his teeth."

Dr. Aldridge summed up the philosophy of the concept when he quoted to dentists at the Fayetteville workshop this year: "Give a man a fish and he eats for a day; teach him to fish and he eats for a lifetime."

Appalachian Religions Individualistic

EDITOR'S NOTE — They are splinter groups of the Perfectionist Holiness movement of the last century. The snake handlers, polygamists and Neverdies — Appalachian religions so individualistic that each man is his own "pope."

By WAYNE SLATER
Associated Press Writer
CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — "You may not believe this, but I've been here five times before," said the sixth body of the Rev. Henry Holstine, minister to a band of Appalachian Holiness people known as the "Neverdies." His is one of many unconventional religious sects still active in the region, splinter groups — like snake handlers and polygamists — of the Perfectionist Holiness movement which took the Appalachian states by storm early in the 19th century.

Mountain people — from pious Adventists to arm-slinging Pentecostals — became enchanted by fundamentalism, perfection and magic.

Reincarnation found its way into the theology of some sects, while others praised God by sipping strychnine and walking on hot coals. In each, vision and revelation served as important tools in the search for truth.

The Rev. Henry Holstine and the "Neverdies" believe in immortality not only of the soul but also of the body. The soul returns to earth in a series of reincarnations, they say, until the believer succeeds in living the perfect life. At that point, his body can live forever.

There are probably hundreds of mountain people living in West Virginia and surrounding states who are members of the rather loosely knit "Neverdie" church.

The origin of the belief is not known, but one of its first teachers, a massive 67-year-old ex-coal miner named Ted Oiler, still travels a preaching circuit through West Virginia, Virginia and North Carolina.

The Rev. Holstine agrees that teachings of the sect are unconventional, but adds that if necessary he will be back on earth again to see that it all comes true.

"You see, its the spiritual birth that makes the body stay on," he said. "How long it will take for me to make it, I don't know. But I know it can be done." Appalachian snake handlers, a Christian cult which has received much attention in recent years, have gone underground in many states, but continue to practice their art with the gusto of their predecessors.

During worship services they speak in unknown tongues, drink strychnine from jelly glasses, heal the sick and handle deadly rattlesnakes, water moccasins and copperheads. The practice is outlawed by state law or municipal ordinance in Kentucky, Virginia, Tennessee and North Carolina.

Brother Johnny Dennison's 27th Street Jesus Only church on the outskirts of Huntington, W.Va., is one of a number of active snake-handling groups in West Virginia, a state where it is still legal.

The Saturday night or Sunday afternoon service at Brother Johnny's begins with gospel music, an opportunity to "testify publicly" for Jesus, and some uninhibited hand clapping and ecstatic dancing.

On one occasion, Brother Johnny prepared for the ceremony of the serpents by stepping to the front podium, and shouting a passage from the Gospel of St. Mark into a silver hand microphone.

"Lots of people claims to be Jesus Only," he roared, "but these signs must they follow: They shall cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents, and if they drink any deadly thing it shall not hurt them."

He then reached into a black case and jerked out two fat timber rattlers, tossing one across the room to another member of the congregation.

For about 20 minutes the ceremony continued, with members of the congregation lurching and wailing and passing the snakes with Pentecostal zeal.

Snake-handling was started around the turn of the century by George Went Hensley, a fundamentalist preacher from Grasshopper Valley, Tenn.

Deaths are relatively rare, although at least two persons died last year in the United States of snakebites received during religious services. Hensley, the father of the ritual, died at Lester's Flat, Fla., in 1955 after being bitten by a Diamondback rattler.

Perhaps the most unusual religious sect in rural Appalachia is a loosely knit band of Christian polygamists who praise Jesus and decry the corruptive nature of man-made law on the spirit of marriage. The practice involving only a small number of the region's Holiness Church people, is rooted in the belief that God's law and man's law are immutably separate.

"There was marriage when God made man and woman," said one believer who lives with a Holiness family which includes himself and at least two "wives."

"They were to love one another, but then came man's corruption. Man set up laws that you can't be decent without a license. He set it all up for the almighty dollar."

"It's nothing more than a bondage law to keep you under bondage, but God arrived to set me free."

Unlike the "carnal minded" who take sexual partners outside the church, holy polygamists see themselves involved in a highly spiritual activity.

They view blood tests and marriage licenses as secular infringements by businessmen who "covet the greenback dollar." Blackrobed judges can oversee traffic violations and robbery cases, they say, but only God can make the rules of marriage.

Sociologists explain that believers use both scripture and revelation in fashioning these forms of worship which will transform their fatalistic outlook and allow them to escape the problems of illness, death, economic insecurity and loss of pride.

Snake handlers have added a death-defying element to their worship, polygamists use religion to assuage guilt and the "Neverdies" anxiously await immortality of the body.

In each, said Dr. Nathan Gerard, chairman of the department of sociology at Morris Harvey College, "the stationary poor carry individualism in religion to an extreme."

"Each man is indeed his own 'Pope.' Since they lack the intellectual resources and will for doctrinal elaboration, the main emphasis is on emotional religious experience."

"Nevertheless, they all seem to share the belief that their religion represents a return to the purity of the Christians of the first century, and that the larger, more formalized churches are fallen and corrupt."

Good Friend To Veterans

NEW YORK (UPI) — Bernadette McCann may be the GI's best friend since Bob Hope.

Since 1968 she's found jobs for 1,659 of them at her company, while becoming one of the country's leading advocates for recruiting and hiring the more than 200,000 unemployed Vietnam veterans.

The veterans are equivalent to one-sixth of the staff at Bankers Trust Company, New York. The company has won dozens of awards and has been cited by President Nixon for Miss McCann's veterans hiring program.

Among "my veterans," she says, are more than 150 disabled, whose "low absenteeism, low rate of turnover, and dedication to the job make them very valuable employees." Her goal is to stimulate other companies to hire both able bodied and disabled veterans.

House To Move Found No Bargain; Couple's Experiences Related

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

If you had to move it to another site, would you buy a big house for only $250?

One couple did buy and there-by hangs the tale of two sites. For one thing — they wouldn't do it again.

"All logic tells you that you should be able to move a house a half mile with very little difficulty," observed the man of this house. "Especially when you find it costs only $3,500 to $5,000 to move a house or section. But that sum is only the beginning..."

In fact it all seemed so simple that they bought two houses and two outbuildings from the state of Connecticut where a new road is being built.

The project took a year out of their busy lives and taxed their patience and endurance.

The main house, moved in November, had to be wrapped in plastic and taped to protect it during the winter months when they were unable to work on it.

"And after you hire the first workman, you know what you've bought — materials, the least expensive part of a house. It is the labor that eats up the cost..." he explained. And labor is something they had problems acquiring. Few workmen want to get involved in such a project as slicing a house in four parts, for example.

The couple prefers anonymity — they may want to sell the house some day — but they are willing to share their experiences with other people who may contemplate such a venture.

...The main house had to be sliced in four sections because of its peculiar ridge roof, and then bolted for moving in two sections (cost $10,000).

...At the old site they had to build a road big enough to get the house out ($400) and bring in acres of fill to get the road up to proper level.

...They were required to re-condition the site to look as it had looked before the house was built and a bulldozer ($400) worked for days on the project.

...Two policemen ($75) controlled traffic during the house move.

...Plumbers and electricians ($1,000) were hired to cut pipes and wires and a carpenter sectioned the house. Even though an ordinary skill saw was used to cut the house, most carpenters do not want to tackle the job.

...You have a choice of leaving the roof on the house and paying for encumbrances in the way such as utility lines ... there is a charge for every wire that must be raised (about $2,500). You can remove the roof which may bring these charges to a minimum.

At the new site a foundation ($5,000) included basement, slab windows, door, cement block walls and all the things that normally go into a new house.

...A new septic tank ... a new well ... a new furnace ... new electric lines, were installed. The hot water heating pipes had been cut and when put back together there were leaks everywhere. In addition the house had to be repainted, wallpapered, plastered.

Each time a man worked on the house the plastic protection had to be fastened and unfasted. One workman slipped unwrapping it and was in the hospital for three weeks.

"Fortunately, we were covered by the liability insurance that is necessary when you agree to move the house..."

At least $5,000 must be earmarked for a plumber and carpenter at the new site, the couple advised.

If one could move a little house leaving the roof intact this couple feels the project might entail fewer difficulties, but they aren't going to be the ones to try it. And if you are moving your dream house, it might even be worthwhile. But they had decided on additions to the ranch house — an attic, mud room, a second floor, a new roof and a two-car garage to replace the garage that had been under the house.

The man feels he broke even dollar-wise, but he could never estimate the wear and tear on their lives. The second house provided materials for the ain house, and they now have a barn. One outbuilding wasn't worth moving, but as part of the agreement, it had to be removed from the site.

If anything could be funny at the finish line, that expendable building proided the laughs.

The couple hired youngsters to remove the structure, but a few weeks later the state informed them that the building was still standing. Investigating, they found that another group of neighborhood kids had rebuilt it hoping to use it as a clubhouse or something. So it had to be torn down again and removed from the property.

Any home handyman knows that no matter how many power tools he has in his workshop, there are certain basic hand tools which must always be kept on hand.

One of these is the hacksaw, used principally for cutting metal. Although in many cases it may not be used more than four or five times a year, it is well worth its moderate cost when those occasions arise.

Adeptness in using the ordinary crosscut saw for wood is no guarantee of equal skill in manipulating a hacksaw. For one thing, the hacksaw is held and used horizontally, whereas a crosscut saw is pushed and pulled at a decided angle. Also, a crosscut saw may be used on a piece of wood held in place with one hand and a knee, while a hacksaw should be used only on a piece of metal clamped in a vise or otherwise solidly secured.

Hacksaw blades are placed into metal frames, preferably adjustable to take blades of different sizes. The blades are rated by their pitch, a technical word that refers to the number of teeth per inch. A blade with a pitch of 18 has 18 teeth per inch. For general use, the pitches range from 14 to 32. Those with 14 and 18 teeth per inch work best on the heavier metals, those with larger pitches are recommended for tubing and thin metals.

When a blade is inserted into a frame, the teeth should point away from the handle. In using, place one hand on the handle and one hand at the part of the frame the farthest away from you. Apply light pressure on the forward stroke with light materials, heavier pressure on heavy materials. Remember that the cutting is done only on the forward stroke, so release the pressure entirely as you bring back the saw. Try to get into some kind of rhythm so that you take long, even strokes, bringing all or most of the blade's teeth into contact with the metal.

A hacksaw blade sometimes will break — and there are at least a dozen reasons why it does so. The most common is that the tension on the blade was too tight or too loose. When you place the blade in the frame, tension is created by turning a wingnut. The nut should be turned clockwise until it is fairly tight. Giving it one extra turn to make it even tighter may create too much tension. And there won't be enough tension if the wingnut isn't reasonably tight. If you begin cutting and the blade begins to bend, it means there isn't enough tension. After you have used a hacksaw two or three times, you'll know automatically when the tension is correct.

If you do much cutting of very thin metal, you should buy a jeweler's saw, which is a smaller version of the hacksaw.

Economy Features Ranch Home

By GERRY BISHOP

In these days of high costs, the budget-minded home buyer finds comfortable shelter hard to

El Segundo, a handsome ranch.

At the same time this model offers many attractive features for the modern family.

ECONOMY AND COMFORT — The El Segundo, designed by Associated House Plans, is a comfortable ranch with some economy features. The family room doubles as the dining room and a basement is omitted. Other features are three bedrooms, one and a half baths, a large living room, den, kitchen with an excellent working arrangement, foyer, two-car garage with storage room and a porch.

Here's How To Do It

By ANDY LANG

Q.—I bought a cabinet second-hand and attempted to take off the old varnish finish, since I wanted to refinish it. I put on a good quality varnish remover and, after it softened the finish, scraped and scraped. A lot of old varnish came off, but there's still plenty of it on. I can't see any of the bare wood. It seems to me there must have been a half dozen coats of varnish there originally and apparently I got off only one or two of them. I'd like to know whether repeating the whole operation will help any or would I be wasting my time and money?

A. — Yes, repeat the entire process. But this time don't do any scraping until you have determined that all or most of the varnish will come off. First, after applying the varnish remover generously, wait at least 30 minutes before you touch it. Then scrape a bit in just one area of the wood. If you see that all of the varnish is not going to yield to your efforts, apply another coat of the remover right on top of the first one. Wait another 30 minutes, then scrape. The chances are most or all of the old finish will disappear.

But if it doesn't, you'll just have to repeat the project a third time. If you get off most of the varnish, you may find that the rest of it will give way with a vigorous sanding, using a paper with a heavy grit.

Q.—I have to attach some 2 by 4s to a concrete wall. Can I use concrete nails and is there any special way of hammering them so they won't bend?

A. — Concrete nails can be used on most concrete walls. They are driven into the 2 by 4s and then into the wall. You won't be able to tell their effectiveness by testing them by driving a couple into the wall without the wood, because they will bend quickly. But the fact that most of a nail is in the wood before it hits the concrete usually will prevent it from bending. Sometimes, however, you will strike a spot or even an entire wall which will resist all your efforts. You can rent a tool for driving concrete nails or attach the studs with a special adhesive.

There is a big saving through eliminating the basement. However, provision is made for a cellar if one were desired.

Also, the family room doubles as the dining room, an economy move that would be easy for most buyers to accept.

The floor plan calls for three bedrooms, one and a half baths, a den, family room, modern kitchen, living room foyer, two-car garage and porch.

Frame construction is specified with stone veneer on the facade and 10-inch bevel siding on the sides and rear. The asphalt shingle roof has a 4-12 pitch.

Drywall is used on all interior walls and ceilings and standard-size double-hung and casement windows are specified.

Easy maintenance is another economy feature of the El Segundo. Because of the one-story construction, it would be not problem for the owner to do the painting and other chores.

The main entrance is protected by a porch that extends partly across the front. A small foyer with a closet receives arriving guests.

A large picture window floods the living room with natural light. This room has fine dimensions—approximately 19 feet by 13 feet—and would be ideal for entertaining.

Immediately off the living room is a den which could be used for reading or watching television. It's a fine refuge for study or relaxation.

The family room, located between the living room and kitchen, also has a large picture window overlooking the back yard. The furnace and water heater are tucked away in a closet off the family room. If a basement is desired, stairs could be located in the utility nook.

A U-shaped arrangement of appliances and cabinets makes the kitchen an exceptionally fine workshop. A separate built-in range and over and space for an automatic washer are provided.

The half bath is part of the master bedroom which enjoys a frontal location. The other two bedrooms flank the main bath.

There is a storage room behind the two-car garage.

The exterior dimensions are approximately 30 feet by 63 feet.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal length white silk organza gown designed with a high neckline edged in sculptured re-embroidered peau d'ange lace. Organza with a linear design formed the sheer yoke and long fitted sleeves. The re-embroidered lace overlaid the empire bodice in a V-pattern. Matching lace also trimmed the sleeves which were finished at the wrists with miniature button closures and organza ruffles. Appliques of lace adorned the skirt front. A deep panel of lace edged the hemline and extended around the attached chapel train.

Her elbow length illusion veil was attached to a headpiece of sculptured re-embroidered peau d'ange lace. She carried a cascade bouquet of stephanotis, baby's breath, and phalaenopsis orchids.

BIRMINGHAM, England (WNS) — Margaret Rawlings, 24, had to give herself away at her wedding here because her father refused to do it. The minister agreed, especially after Tom said that he would not object to accompany his daughter down the aisle of the church.

Knitting Needles Part Of Equipment

STUTTGART, West Germany (WNS) — Knitting needles are now part of the equipment at judo champion Hermann Schwarz' gymnasium for businessmen. And knitting queen Helga Netzer is in charge of teaching the course.

Miss Pamela Pratt Is Bride

AYDEN — The marriage of Miss Pamela Ruth Pratt and Timothy Allen Bright was solemnized Saturday afternoon at four o'clock in the Ayden United Methodist Church. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. L. T. Wilson, pastor of the church.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cabell Oswald Pratt of Ayden. Mr. Bright is the son of Dr. and Mrs. E. B. Bright of Grifton.

Traditional wedding music was presented by Mrs. E. Joe Whitaker, organist. Steve Reynolds of Raleigh, soloist, sang "Portrait Of My Love," "Walk Hand In Hand" and "The Wedding Prayer."

The chancel of the church was centered with a fifteen branch candelabra. On each side, baskets of Easter lilies and nine branch tree candelabra were used. Standards of jade foliage were used for the background. White satin bows marked the honor pews.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal length white organza gown designed with a high neckline encircled with re-embroidered lace. Panels of lace edged in ruffled organza extended from the shoulders to the empire waistline. The long full sleeves featured ruffled cuffs banded in matching lace. The modified A-line skirt was accented with borders of re-embroidered lace. Ruffled organza and lace edged the hemline and attached chapel length train.

She wore a re-embroidered lace Juliet cap featuring profile lace flowers with an elbow length illusion veil edged in lace matching the gown. The bride carried a cascade of white miniature carnations and baby's breath centered with a white cattleya orchid.

Mary Stuart Dent Pratt, sister-in-law of the bride, was matron of honor and wore a formal length blue organza gown designed with a tucked bib bodice outlined in cluny lace and centered with miniature blue covered buttons. Matching lace was featured on the shoulders and cuffs of the long full sleeves. A band of cluny lace accentuated the empire bodice. She wore a white ruffled straw hat trimmed in matching blue satin ribbon.

The bridesmaids were Miss Kathon Powell and Miss Kay Bright. Their gowns were identical to that of the honor attendant and they carried nosegays of matching flowers.

Miss Holly Pratt, niece of the bride, was flower girl and wore a formal length gown similar to that of the attendants. She carried a white wicker basket of miniature pink and white carnations. The bridegroom's father served as best man. Ushers were Jim Pratt, Steve Pratt and David Pratt, brothers of the bride, and Tony Bright, brother of the bridegroom.

The bride's mother selected a knit dress of apricot featuring a high neckline, draped with a scarf of the self-fabric, trimmed with apricot Venice lace and jewels. She wore a headpiece of apricot silk flowers with matching accessories.

Mrs. Bright wore a soft, sheer shirtwaist dress of light blue with long sleeves and box pleated skirt with matching accessories. Their corsages were white cattleya orchids.

Grandmothers attending, Mrs. M. S. Hollandsworth, grandmother of the bride, and Mrs. Leon Porter and Mrs. Lilla Bright, grandmothers of the bride groom, wore white cymbidium orchids.

The wedding was directed by Mrs. Harry Stillman.

Following the wedding, the parents of the bride entertained at a reception at the church in honor of the couple.

Milk Formula Preparation Is Important

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A parent who haphazardly prepares a powdered milk formula using inadequate water can end up with a very sick baby, radiologists at Children's Hospital here say.

Because the powder is mixed with insufficient water, it forms a mass called a lactobezoar in the stomach of the infant and causes vomiting and diarrhea.

Stomach obstructions of this type are readily diagnosed by an x-ray air contrast study, which illustrates the size, shape and mottled appearance characteristic of lactobezoar, say Dr. Massoud Majd and Dr. Mjoseph M. LoPresti. In this procedure, air is introduced into the stomach and an x-ray exposure made. The mass is identified on the resulting film by a crescent of air.

Engagement Announced

MISS NELDA MARIE ANDERSON, is the daughter of Mrs. Ellen Anderson of Greenville, who announces her engagement to William Stanely Highsmith, son of Mr. and Mrs. William B. Highsmith of Ayden. The wedding will take place July 15. The bride-elect is the daughter of the late Mr. George Anderson.

Orchid Species Quite Numerous

CHICAGO (UPI) — A big spender wishing to impress a girl could send her a different orchid—every day.

If the money and the romance lasts he can do this for 41 years or perhaps 82 years, for, according to Encyclopaedia Britannica, there are from 15,000 to 30,000 different orchid species.

Orchids, long esteemed for their delicate beauty, are among the largest families of flowering plants and are much more common than is generally realized. They grow throughout the world, excluding the polar regions.

They range widely in size and color, some plants measuring 1/4 inch in height, others 20 feet. They come in all shades and hues, with blue probably the rarest. Contrary to popular belief, there is no truly black orchid.

For many years orchids were thought to possess aphrodisiac properties. They don't.

Trust Your Ears, Not Second-Hand Feedback

© 1973 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 26-year-old wife and mother of a 3-year-old son. Due to financial circumstances, I am a working mother—but because my husband works nights (he's a baker) he stays with the baby all day. I asked my doctor if the baby would be affected if I worked days, and he said as long as he is with one loving parent there would be no harm.

My problem is that I just found out that my best friend's husband has told others that I am an unfit mother because all children need their mothers with them and that I am selfish to be working.

Altho my girl friend didn't say anything, I'm quite hurt that she didn't stick up for me, and frankly don't think our friendship can now last because I'm so angry. What would you suggest?

FIT MOTHER

DEAR FIT: You seem to be getting a lot of second-hand feedback. Why don't you just tell whomever it was who told you what your best friend's husband supposedly told others about you, that there is so much backbiting going on, you never believe a thing unless you hear it with your own ears—which isn't a bad idea.

DEAR ABBY: Your letter about whether it's against the law or not to bury a person with a fifth of bourbon in his casket brings to mind my German grandmother.

She was fond of playing cards and having a "schnapps" with friends, so she left money for her wake and also for brand-new playing cards, sharp pencils, small score pads, and a set-up bar. We buried Grandmother with a deck of cards, pencil and pad, four glasses, and a pint.

When the Day of Reckoning comes she will be ready to start in all over again. Why not prepare for the afterlife now? Wouldn't it be awful if we had to start from scratch as the world once did?

A CARD-PLAYING, BELIEVING FAN

Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L. A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

For Abby's new booklet, "What Teen-Agers Want to Know," send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069.

"Current antifat fads are more likely to slim your wallet than your figure," it said.

Mrs. Hardee Gives Program

The new summer and spring hair cuts were showed at the meeting of the Pitt County Cosmetologist Association held at the Milady Beauty Shoppe Tuesday night.

President Debra Hardee showed slides of the new styles which include the cuff, wedgy, jumper and camisole.

She pointed out that they are blunt cuts and can be adapted to most beauty salon customers.

North Pitt School News

By KITTY NELSON

The school annual, the "Prelude", was distributed to the study body Monday.

A group from Washington County toured the North Pitt facilities last week. They observed the math lab and studied the way that level teaching is working at North Pitt.

The eighth grade students from Bethel, Stokes and Belvoir visited the school. They were shown the building by members of the Student Government Association.

A test was given to 14 students by Pitt Technical Institute. Seven of these students will be selected to attend classes at Pitt Tech during the summer as part of a Research Program. The seven chosen were Wanda Brown, Kathy Taylor, Brenda Farmer, Jessie Murchison, Spencer Barnhill, Jim Glisson and Douglas Taylor.

Other students taking the test were: Ralph Forbes, Jeff Price, Craig McLawhorn, Kitti Nelson, Sylvia Andrews, Ennie Godwin, Peggy Braxton.

North Pitt's Panther baseball team played three games last week. On Tuesday, they played and lost to Farmville Central. The score was 6-3. On Wednesday, the Panthers played Eastern Wayne and won 5-2. Steve Fuchs got the winning score. On Friday night, the Panthers played their first home game. The game, played against North Lenoir, was lost by the Panthers. The score was 7-6.

The North Pitt team lost to Southern Wayne Monday with a score of 4-1.

We would like to thank Bill James for his work on the baseball field. We also thank Cobby Deans and Melvin Boyd and the vocational classes at Conley.

Over 100 junipers were planted last month as the first step in the campus beautification project. The shrubs were planted in front of the school building by the horticulture students.

Contributions from various individuals and organizations paid for the services of Claude Goodman, retired extension agent, who drew up plans for the beautification project. Additional shrubs and trees will be planted as funds become available. Anyone desiring to contribute to the fund, may contact the school.

Parents of next year's freshman class at North Pitt will be invited to visit the school on May 4 for orientation. The United States Marine Band will present a concert on the athletic field at 2 p.m. for the visitors. After the concert, parents will be invited to tour the building and attend a baseball game.

Some Overeat To Hurt Selves

NEW YORK (UPI) — What makes people overeat? Nutritionists say there is no simple, single reason. But one authority, Dr. Morton Glenn says "some dieters feel a psychological need for self-punishment."

In a Food and Fitness booklet put out by Blue Cross he explains his view — "These people are annoyed with themselves and may express their anger by doing something to hurt themselves."

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) A good day to contact higher-up you know, whatever your aims, so you get support for them with speed. Avoid that talkative partner now who curbs your style, or you get little done. Raise your aims and hit the mark.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You get just the right modern ideas now that will catapult you into the higher position you want in life. Make good use of them early. Get in touch with an out-of-town for suggestions on plans you should follow.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You now know better how to deal with those who are vital to your existence. Make better use of your abilities in the future. If your plan is practical, mate will go along with it.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Business contacts can now give you some excellent ideas that can be digested for future use, so listen with both ears. Becoming emotional with one who opposes you is the best way to lose out. Keep aboveboard.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Plan your time more wisely so it's evenly divided between work, play and rest, and you live a fuller life. Cultivate teamwork. Have more concern for, clothing so your appearance is improved.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Get into the outlets today that not only bring in the silver and gold, but give you pleasure in the doing as well. Amusements should be the type you really enjoy, instead of what others pull you into. Be yourself.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You are able to improve home conditions now and should do so early. Then get business matters handled wisely. Evening is fine for entertaining good friends who can be of help to you in the future.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Show you handle all tasks of whatever kind most efficiently and wisely. Try to be of assistance to your regular associates. Evening is ideally suited for charming conversations with good friends.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You find the right way now to increase your income easily and have more of the good things of life. Support that person in business who has been very helpful when you needed help. Think.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Plan early where to bend your efforts so you make the most of them and then follow through with precision and speed. The social side of life can prove very beneficial also. Attend right functions as soon as your work is completed.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Forget all that gadding about and handle financial and other practical matters that are important. Get future better planned. Listen to what good advisers have to suggest, also.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Act in a different way if you want to gain the personal goals that mean so much to you. Get out to that group affair that can be a natural avenue of operation. Something of a scientific nature can be very interesting in p.m.

If YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one of those very serious young individuals who will be pretty much self-centered, but will however return favors received from others, so be sure to give the religious training early that will make him or her more outgoing and generous. Then there will be more easy rapport with others, and this will become a successful chart, especially where organizational work is concerned, whether business or philanthropic.

Says Trees Are Biggest Bargain

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (UPI) — "Trees are probably one of the biggest bargains in our environment," says Dr. William Welch, landscape horticulturist for Texas A&M University's agricultural extension service.

Welch says trees reduce smog and purify the air by acting as dust and pollution filters and by releasing life-giving oxygen into the air. Trees also provide many bird and animal species with food and shelter.

Bobwhite quail form a protective circle at night, with their tails out and heads together.

FOR SEN. ROBERT TAFT, JR., of Ohio

Politicians keep talking about the failure of our prison systems, but why should society have to foot the bill for turning criminals into good citizens when so many, who have committed no crime, need help?—O. J. L., Muncie, Ind.

● At present, we spend an average of $11.95 a day to keep a man locked up while his family often goes on welfare. Under a proposal I am cosponsoring, private corporations would lease prison industries, and prisoners would earn union skilled wages. They would then be required to pay the Government for their room and board, to support their families, to pay taxes and make Social Security payments. In addition, the prisoner would be required to contribute to a fund to compensate the victims of crime.

FOR SEN. EDWARD M. KENNEDY (D-Mass.)

How can the poor taxpayer ever afford the kind of national health insurance you're pushing so hard?—S. V. T., Bangor, Maine

● The point is that the average wage earner now works one month a year just to pay his health-care and health-insurance bills. And there is no limit in sight. Cost is not what appears in the Federal budget. Any American family will tell you that cost is what comes out of their paychecks—or out of their pocketbooks.

FOR CASS ELLIOT

Do you have any regrets about the Mamas and Papas years?—C. B., New Paltz, N.Y.

● I hate having been "Mama" Cass for such a long time. I hate to be called that now. But I was sure about us from the first day we got together in 1966. I said then, "When we win the Grammy, I want it!"

FOR SALLY KELLERMAN, starring in "Lost Horizon"

What kinds of jobs did you have before becoming an actress?—P.R., Watsonville, Calif.

● Well, to give you a bad example, the briefest was my job as an elevator operator. It lasted three days. I kept getting carsick. The job I liked best was as a cocktail waitress. It was the most physical kind of work, and I was always on the move.

FOR HELEN HAYES

Do you find that you are much more forgetful than you used to be at a younger age?—T. Malcolm, Salinas, Calif.

● A funny thing happens. I don't remember things very well that happened two years ago, but I have a marvelous memory for anything that happened 20 years ago.

FOR ROB REINER, star of "All in the Family"

Were you really for McGovern, as implied in "All in the Family"?—George Harris, New Milford, Conn.

● Yes, I was, but my personal beliefs had nothing to do with the way I played the part. I believed then, and still do, that George McGovern had something to offer the American people.

FOR SYBIL LEEK

Does it bother you that witches are almost always portrayed as ugly old women?—M. George, Enfield, Conn.

● The literary concept of a witch is based on the three witches of Shakespeare's "Macbeth," who were portrayed as ugly old women. In Italy, however, art and literature have portrayed witches as sprightly (and spritely) young and beautiful girls. Anyway, isn't "beauty in the eye of the beholder"? I believe the inner spirit is more important than outward appearance.

FOR SEN. ALAN CRANSTON (D-Calif.)

Why should taxpayers all over the country be stuck for the $60 million price tag on your bill to predict earthquakes? Missouri doesn't have earthquakes.—J.P., Columbia, Mo.

● The most severe U.S. earthquake in modern times was centered in New Madrid, Mo., in 1812. Every state in the Union has suffered earthquake damage. Twenty-one states have suffered major damage, and, seismologists say, are likely to suffer major earthquake damage again.

FOR RAYMOND BURR

What made you decide that Chief Ironside, the paraplegic you play, should learn to drive his own car?—Mrs. Laurence Mills, Hobart, Ind.

● I was persuaded by letters from paraplegics who said I should be driving my own police van, since paraplegics hate to be any more dependent than they have to be. But I won't do all my own driving on the show, any more than any police chief would.

FOR EASTER: The Youth Who Made

"He bequeathed us . . . a sense of joy in simple pleasures, such as watching a flight of larks or the ripples of wind through the wheat fields."

Francesco Bernardone was born more than 750 years ago, but he had an "identity problem," just like the long-haired lad next door, or your sister Mabel's boy who won't go into the family business. Francesco threw bolts of his father's precious cloth into the streets, where it was snatched up by the poor. He cursed money, called it names and forbade his followers to touch coins.

Was St. Francis a medieval hippie? Perhaps he was, but any direct parallel with the free-floating, pot-smoking, zonked-out hippie of the 20th century is preposterous. St. Francis needed no needle, no weed, no potions. You could say that he was high all his life on the glory of God.

Francis also had a high purpose in life, unlike the hippies sheltering their bruised egos in modern communes. The good Saint may have worn rags and slept in the open fields. He may have smelled, as one fastidious contemporary put it, "like a pigsty." But he saw himself as the busy servant of God, moving through his life's mission with all deliberate speed.

We sense a tough inner fiber in Francis. When we try to visualize him, we see an eager, anxious face peering from that monk's cowl. We see a dedicated life, humble but filled with joy.

Modern hippies may seem monkish to some, but practically speaking, they are monkish only in terms of poverty and, perhaps, stench. Francis had a divine faith. He wore a hair shirt and labored with his hands. And there had to be a dynamism in a man who walked barefoot to the Vatican with 11 apostles, seeking only a Papal blessing, and entered history as the founder of a great new religious order.

Now there's a new movie out about St. Francis, called "Brother Sun, Sister Moon," made by the Italian director Franco Zeffirelli. In it, we meet a St. Francis who talks to larks, cleanses lepers and lives in a hut of twigs and mud. With his ragged band of apostles, he rebuilds, stone by stone, the ancient ruin of St. Damian's Chapel. It's a killing task and his joy, at times, edges toward lunacy. We revere him but feel a twinge of annoyance as he trudges the narrow medieval streets of Assisi in a wild downpour, begging bread. He will neither cover his head nor step for a moment inside a doorway.

Harriet Van Horne's column appears in newspapers across the country.

ST. FRANCIS (as played by Graham Faulkner in the new film): "Perhaps this is the secret of all sainthood: sacrifice beyond the reach of normal men."

One would assume this touch to be excessive and blame the director, were there not tales of far greater excess in the Saint's biography.

G. K. Chesterton, who wrote a charming biography of St. Francis, said, "He was, above all things, a great giver." A modern psychologist might add that he was also a great masochist. But perhaps this is the secret of all sainthood: sacrifice beyond the reach of normal men.

A troubadour at heart, Francis created a noble lady he could serve with fidelity. She was "my Lady Poverty." He spoke of her tenderly and never betrayed his vows to her. One of Giotto's great frescoes celebrates "the holy nuptials of Francis with Lady Poverty."

Poverty His Bride

By Harriet Van Horne
Especially for FAMILY WEEKLY

A poet whose life may be viewed as a poem, St. Francis created his own mythology. He made himself one with Nature, in a manner we all might envy in this age of concrete and steel. His "Canticle to the Sun" honors all God's works and establishes a sweet intimacy with them, with Brother Sun, Sister Moon, Brother Fire and Sister Water. He devised his own genders and they still seem exactly right.

St. Francis burned himself out before he was 50, and his final years were wracked with pain. When cataracts formed on his eyes, the monks who practiced the healing arts told him his only hope was cauterization—that is, burning the eyeballs with a hot iron, without anesthetic. As the flaming brand came near his eyes, St. Francis cried out, "Brother Fire, God made you beautiful and strong and useful; I pray you be courteous with me."

The operation failed. And this man whose songs—among the first recorded poems in a modern language—praised the glory of earth and sky died in darkness, offering "sweet words of comfort to those who tended him."

Except in the community of saints, there is no one like St. Francis today. But he remains an inspiration and a solace to millions of the devout. And he speaks across seven centuries to all of us.

Zeffirelli's beautiful boy of the movie, Francesco (Graham Faulkner), is perhaps more effete, more simpleminded than one could wish. The St. Francis who walked in his dirty beggar's rags up to the throne of the Pope and reminded him that Jesus didn't hold with so much glitter and grandeur was no foolish peasant. The toughness of the real St. Francis—as opposed to the pretty piety of the cinema saint—is easily understood in our time. Ideals must have iron in them, visions are nothing without action.

But it is not for his fiery spirit that we remember and love St. Francis. He bequeathed us a noble concept of life, a sense of joy in simple pleasures, such as watching a flight of larks or the ripples of wind through the wheat fields.

We do Francis less than justice if we catalog him as a simple mendicant with a touch of divine fire, an inspired preacher who charmed the birds off the trees. He was an ascetic and a mystic. He was a shrewd judge of men and a great proselytizer. At the time of his death in 1226, there were already three orders of Franciscans, and Francis' life was considered—in the classic phrase—an Imitation of Christ.

In his relationships with women, Francis was ever chaste, ever chivalrous. When addressing a woman, he lowered his eyes to the ground. His courtesy was matchless. "He was the sort of man," says one biographer, "who would have apologized to the cat."

Meek and mild though he was, Francis apparently understood the lust of the flesh. One legend describes him wrestling with the Devil by making "figures in the snow," shouting, "There is my wife, and these are my children!" A wife of snow apparently filled his needs. It is said that he never broke his vow of chastity and remained forever faithful to God and "my Lady Poverty."

As we reconstruct St. Francis from the scraps of legend bequeathed to us—plus our own instinctive knowledge of human nature—we see a gentle but zealous monk, blessed with gifts for drama and poetry that won him instant devotion wherever he preached.

At one village where he stopped, the entire population ceased work and begged to be taken into the Army of God. It was this great outpouring of love that inspired the "Third Order" of St. Francis. That is a vast lay confraternity, the Brothers and Sisters of Penance. Without leaving their homes or rejecting their customary life-styles, the Third Order could attend the sick and the poor as Franciscans.

St. Francis, Chesterton tells us, succeeded because he was "as simple and direct as a thunderbolt." He loved ordinary men and ordinary things. He counted on the hospitality of humanity and regarded every house as the house of a friend.

Zeffirelli's film is memorable for its projection of this peculiarly Franciscan joy. It is a series of glorious images, of beauty so rich, so pure that one feels almost humble in its presence. In remembering the film, it is wise to retain the imagery, the moments of Renaissance come to life, and forget the music and a good part of the dialogue as well.

In remembering St. Francis of Assisi, one would rather not think of his profound suffering, of the firebrand searing his eyes, of the bare feet slogging through the snow. How much better to retain in the mind the beautiful Franciscan prayer, an invocation Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt kept near her bedside:

"Lord, make me a channel of Thy peace, that where there is hatred, I may bring love; that where there is wrong, I may bring the spirit of forgiveness; that where there is error, I may bring truth; that where there is doubt, I may bring faith; that where there is despair, I may bring hope; that where there are shadows, I may bring light; that where there is sadness, I may bring joy."

What Science Says Now About That Fascinating Subject—Your Dreams

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. You dream the most interesting dreams shortly after you fall asleep.
2. The introvert's dreams differ from the extrovert's.
3. You can't dream with your eyes open.
4. Nightmares have a physical effect on us.
5. Most of men's dreams are about women — the luscious blonde met briefly at a party, or the miniskirted brunette in the office across the hall.

ANSWERS

1. False. Studies show that the first dreams of the night tend to be so dull, boring and commonplace that if you weren't a captive audience you'd feel like walking out on them and doing something more exciting, like watching haircuts or Uncle Harry's home movies. But, as one leading investigator has noted, "As the night progresses, dreams become more vivid and emotional." The best dreams—or at least the most exciting—unfold in the wee hours of the morning.
2. True. In a study conducted by a team of university researchers, the dreams of men and women students were carefully catalogued and evaluated over a several week period. All subjects were then given personality tests. A definite relationship was found between dream content and personality type. Introverts differed from extroverts in that they had a greater tendency to experience "dreams having relaxed or pleasurable interpersonal relations with other human beings as their major themes." It would appear from this that introverts become more extroverted in their dreams, going to parties, enjoying the social spotlight, having glamor-

3. False. In a University of Chicago study, subjects slept with their eyes taped open, while investigators monitored their dreams by recording eye movements and by awakening them at intervals to obtain reports of their dream experiences. Roughly half of the subjects had no difficulty falling asleep. The rest "took a long time to go to sleep and/or slept fitfully." Only one could not fall asleep at all. While the subjects were dreaming with their eyes open, the investigators performed an interesting experiment. Various objects and pictures were paraded in front of their eyes to see if it would affect their dreams. Findings: There was essentially no correspondence between the objects placed in front of the dreamer's eyes and his dreams.

4. True. Studies show that nightmares—which differ from the garden-variety unpleasant dream in that they are characterized by extreme panic, frightened screams and agonizing dread—have a very definite effect on bodily functions, with a sudden speeding up of the respiratory rate and the heart pounding with a marked increase in beats per minute. It's doubtful that there is any human experience more frightening than a full-blown nightmare.

5. False. A study of 7,000 dreams has shown that men's dreams differ from women's in one particular respect: Men tend to dream mostly about men. But women's dreams were found to be equally divided between the sexes. This finding suggests that women spend more time dreaming about glamorous males than men spend dreaming about gorgeous charmers.

One measure of a good haircut is: How many styles can you get out of it? Here's one possibility—a smooth rounded collar that frames the face.

For after-five, same hair is upswept, turned under in a pouf behind the ears. (Our cover shows a parted, curlier version caught up with two barrettes.)

Family Weekly / Beauty & You

In this section, Women's Editor Rosalyn Abrevaya charts a preseason course for shaping up your looks. "For most of us women," she says, "winter hides a multitude of sins. Here's what the people who get paid to know about such things say we should do now, before the parties start and the pools open."

Summer Shape-Up!

For Your Hair, Your Skin, Your Whole Body!

Your Hair & You

The condition of hair and how it's cut is more important than the hairstyle," says Nicholas, expert hair stylist-consultant. "And hair is definitely going shorter," he adds.

A lot of hair has been cluttering his salon floor these days, as women decide to shear long locks to chin length. The popularity of the chin-length cut lies in its versatility, because it looks pretty when curled or straight—as long as the haircut is expert. (The photos shown here and on cover illustrate how to get three styles from one haircut.)

Nicholas, who has been styling and coloring hair in leading salons for over 15 years, also sees new interest in hair-coloring effects: frosting, streaking, tipping. The no-care, no-monthly-touch-up quality of frosting, for example, makes it perfect for summer. Since hair grows at an average of a half an inch a month, slightly faster in warm months, the woman who has color effects rather than a full-color change can maintain the streaking or let it grow out naturally, with no line of demarcation showing. (A word to brunettes: Frosting very dark hair produces a striped rather than a blended effect. Consider going to a light chestnut-brown before adding highlighting.)

What to do to get your hair into a healthy condition after the winter drabs? Here are a few pointers:

1. Shampoo as often as your hair seems to need it—even if it's every other day. Even dry hair can dull quickly, because it is porous and tends to collect dust and dirt easily. Just choose the right shampoo for your hair type and be sure to rinse well with warm water, finish with cool water.

2. After-shampoo rinses and conditioners can help give your hair a silky-smooth finish. If hair lacks body or is slightly dry, try one of the conditioners you comb through the hair before setting. For very dry or damaged hair, there are deep-penetrating conditioners that are left on for 20 minutes after shampooing.

3. Avoid sunburned hair and hair-color change by keeping your head loosely covered in summer. (A tight covering will cause perspiration build-up, which will cause discoloring more than the sun.)

Beauty Note: Perfect for summer hairstyles are two aids from Clairol: Easy Comb Easy Set is the first clear creme rinse and setting lotion in one that can be applied directly to towel-dried hair. And, if you want to try hair-color effects at home, there is a complete, easy-to-follow kit you can buy called Frost & Tip.

No matter how beautiful your tan is, how great you look in a swimsuit and how rested Loving Care. It's not just a haircolor. It's a belief.

How to get that fresh-scrubbed look for summer?

1. Use cleansers that deep-clean, help revitalize winter-dry skin. A lanolin- or Castile-base soap is good for a dry condition. A soap with a slightly abrasive action should do well on oily skin.

2. Switch to moisturizers that are lighter textured than cold-weather ones. When the weather gets milder, oil glands become more active, diminishing the need for extra-rich skin creams.

In cosmetics, the prescription for achieving the most natural look during the sun-filled months is lighter, transparent makeup: clear, pastel eyeshadow, cheek gel and colored lip gloss. The moral: If you begin taking care of your skin through good cleansing and moisturizing, the need for heavy pancake-like makeup to hide skin disappears.

Beauty Notes: Fresh Outdoors cheek gel by Clairol promises a transparent blushing finish. It can be worn over makeup, your moisturizer or bare skin, comes in a rich, ripe color collection.

A new hypoallergenic skin cleanser, pHisoDerm, with a gentle, deep-cleansing action, contains rich emollients to moisturize skin, replacing natural oils that normal washing can take away. Recommended for daily skin care, it has a pH value (which measures the acidity or alkalinity of the skin) of approximately 5.5, the same as normal, healthy skin does. Skin-care products that have the same pH factor as normal skin help to reinforce the skin's natural protective acid mantle.

MARY TYLER MOORE

"While Others Eat—I Dance"

"My beauty secret? That's easy—dancing! It's good for the body, perspiring is good for the skin, and it makes you feel terrific! When I'm not filming my show, I meet with a group of friends for an hour three times a week to keep in shape. When I'm working, the fellows set up a portable barre and while others are snacking or lunching, I train. My teacher comes on the set and sometimes cast members join me for a ballet session."

BARBARA EDEN

"Knowing About Good Health Is Not Enough"

"I just finished a string of nightclub appearances in Chicago and San Francisco. Doing a nightclub show is one of the hardest kinds of work. The stress and strain are unbelievable. I tend to get overly tired and lose weight. I get so tense I don't dare talk to my husband [Michael Ansara] on the phone before a show because I'm afraid I'll start crying. But when I lost my expected baby a little over a year ago, I learned the hard way that you can't take beauty and energy for granted. And that's my secret. Just knowing that there is nothing more important than good health is not enough. You have to do something about it. You have to invest time and effort on yourself. You have to diet properly, eat correctly, rest enough. I also take prescribed vitamins and get eight to ten hours sleep a night."

SUSAN DEY

"Think Twice Before You Envy Me My Skin"

"A lot of girls may envy me my complexion, but believe me, it causes lots of problems! My skin is very sensitive. It cracks and peels easily, depending upon the weather. And working under hot lights doesn't help. I know that if I don't make a special effort, my skin will lose its moisture. My secret is to use lots and lots of thick creams. Keep my skin constantly lubricated. Forget the soap-and-water scrubbing. And stay clear of makeup. What makeup I have to wear before the cameras must be completely without perfume, and thoroughly removed."

NATALIE WOOD

"Each Morning, Slip into an Active Mind"

"Stay alert! Keep the mind working! It shows through in how you look, and everything you do. I've always tried to keep interested and stimulated by learning new things. For instance, while I don't do formal exercises, I did take up ballet. After a class I look and feel better. I've studied French. I have a license to be an interior decorator and have done it professionally. My mother taught me to be a good Russian cook, and I've since gone to gourmet cooking school. And before my baby was born, I made the entire layette by hand. For me, keeping my mind and body busy is a beauty treatment."

KAREN VALENTINE

"I Get My Sparkle from the Sandman"

"I've had lots of people ask me what my beauty secret is. They'll say, 'How do you keep your sparkle—your vivacity?' And I have to laugh because my 'secret' is to get plenty of sleep. Not just stretching out to relax—although that helps, too—but good sound sleep. And there's nothing corny about it. It works! I believe a well-rested gal feels good and looks better. With the active schedule I have, I owe it to the people I live and work with to be at my best."

DOROTHY LAMOUR

"You'll Never Guess My Beautiful-Hands Exercise"

"A lot of women overlook a part of themselves that can add beauty or detract from it faster than anything else: their hands. Maybe because I've played so many native girls and done so many hulas, where the emphasis is on the hands, I've found that they really are a thing of beauty. And you have to work to keep them that way as you get older. I'm not a great one for rubber gloves and all kinds of hand creams. In fact, I wear gloves only for gardening. The best thing for one's hands, I've found, is typing! The exercise keeps up good circulation, keeps the muscles in tone, and makes the fingers and wrists supple."

CLORIS LEACHMAN

"Wear Maturity Like a Crown"

"Beauty doesn't happen on the surface. It begins inside. Inner peace is the key. If you don't have that, all the gunk and creams you spread on your face won't help. Learn how to keep your sense of obligation to your family (I have five children) or your work from wearing you out. Be moderate. That's a hard word to accept when you're young, but if you stick to it, you'll stay young a lot longer. Don't fight getting older. Too many women panic and attempt all sorts of artificial and unnatural operations to put off age. Wear maturity like a crown. It can be a joyful experience. Don't allow life to separate you from yourself. Stay curious. Children have this quality, and it's a shame adults lose that sense of wonder, because it keeps color in your cheeks and fire in your eyes."

Your Body & You

How to Exercise into Swimsuit Shape

Summer's on its way again, and right now is the time to start planning how you are going to get your figure into your bathing suit. Why now? Because you are not going to be able to tone up winter's flabby muscles in a few short days. It's going to take several weeks of gradual, consistent exercise.

FAMILY WEEKLY asked Shelda Bond, Women's Exercise Coordinator for Holiday Universal Health Spas, to tell us how to start shaping up.

First, begin by taking inventory of yourself. Stand in front of a full-length mirror. Take notes of the areas that leave too much to be desired. Take and record all your measurements before you start exercising. Then remeasure periodically.

Don't plunge into a violent program of exercise. You'll end up with aching muscles, which will really discourage you. Regular systematic exercise is what counts, and if you suspect any physical problems, consult your physician before exercising.

Now for the exercises: The ones Shelda Bond recommends here are ones she does at home to keep in shape. Do them slowly and carefully (in time to music is a good idea). Do each exercise smoothly and rhythmically. Concentrate on what you are doing, and don't strain yourself. When you reach the point where you feel any excessive strain—stop.

In a short time, our resident expert promises, you will begin to feel better. You'll have more energy. Then, gradually, you'll begin to see a change in your figure. And by summer, others will notice the difference.

1. WAIST: This exercise is great for removing excess inches from the waistline and upper hips — prime trouble areas that are more on view in summer.

Stand with feet about 12 inches apart. Extend arms to the sides. Twist the upper body all the way around to the right and then to the left. Begin with 10 repetitions and work up to 25.

2. BUST: Another "must" exercise for a trim swimsuit figure is this bust exercise that prevents that sagging look, tones and lifts the chest muscles.

Lie back on the floor or the bed. Instead of weights, hold two small unopened food cans of identical weight in each hand (start with a 10½-oz. soup can) with your arms extended straight up. Move your arms to each side — still keeping them straight and taut. Bring arms back up and at that point cross them over. Start with 10 repetitions and work up to 20. Once you have the 20 repetitions easily, increase the weights in each hand (graduate to a 16-oz., then 28-oz. can) and begin at the lowest number of repetitions and work up to the maximum.

Exercise Lesson

3. ARMS: Here's an exercise particularly good for trimming flabby flesh from the upper arm. Holding a dumbbell or full soup can (10½ ozs.) in one hand, extend one arm straight up with elbow close to head. Bend arm, dropping down toward the back of shoulders. Do 10 repetitions of this exercise and work up to 15. When the 15 repetitions become easy for you, increase the weights and begin at the lowest number of repetitions and work up to the maximum.

4. MIDSECTION: The following exercise is a modified sit-up, wonderful for tightening stomach and abdominal muscles.

Lie on your back with your knees bent. Place your feet under something stationary, such as a sofa or a heavy chair. Place your arms out straight and roll your body up so you can touch your toes with your fingertips. Begin doing 8 repetitions of this sit-up and gradually work up to 25.

5. LEGS: Other problem areas during swimsuit-exposure time are flabby thighs and sagging calves. The following squatting and toe-rising exercises will improve tone and increase firmness in the leg muscles.

(1) Squats: Place your feet approximately 16 to 18 inches apart, with your heels on a thick book (or books) for elevation. With your hands on your hips, bend down until thighs are parallel to the floor. To keep your balance, focus your eyes on a spot above eye level. This will also keep your back straight. Begin with 8 repetitions and gradually work up to 25. You will find that your front- and inner-thigh muscles begin to firm up quickly.

(2) Toe Rises: To tone up sagging calf muscles, place the balls of your feet on the edge of a step or thick book. Rise slowly on the toes and then press the heels down as far as you can. The position of the toes on the book determines which muscles in the calf will be exercised:

- (1) When the toes are parallel, the back muscles of the calf are tightened.
- (2) When the toes are pointed out, the inside calf muscles are firmed up.
- (3) And when the toes are pointed toward the inside, the outside muscles of the calf are affected.

YOUR NERVES CAN CURE THEMSELVES

once you learn how to de-sensitize them, this doctor's ingenious new way...

If You Suffer From A Single One Of These Torturous Symptoms Of Nerves, Tension Or Chronic Anxiety, THEN THE FACTS BELOW MAY BE THE MOST IMPORTANT YOU HAVE EVER READ IN YOUR LIFE!

Because they reveal, for the first time, how your nerves have tricked you into the following mental symptoms:

constant nervousness and over-irritation... indecision... depression... loss of confidence in yourself and others... feelings of unreality... overwhelming obsession with one or two horrible thoughts...

a hopeless feeling that your entire personality is coming apart... that your identity is dissolving... or that you may be helplessly drifting into a nervous breakdown!

And—equally as bad—how your nerves have tricked you into the following physical symptoms: chronic fatigue, that starts in the morning, and grows worse as the day goes on... "missed" heartbeats—"racing" heart—palpitations—or sudden sharp pains under the heart... sweating hands—or "pins and needles" in either your hands or your legs...

"churning" stomach... nausea... choking feeling in the throat... inability to take a deep breath... tight band of pain around the head... "ready to jump out of your skin"... strange tricks of vision... weak spells... insomnia, that goes on night after night after night...

hand shaking... panic spasms... knots in your chest... dizziness... difficulty in swallowing... vomiting... and all the other physical tortures that turn your life into one continuous hell!

And Every One Of These Nervous Symptoms Can Be Controlled... And Then Diminished... And Then Eliminated—OFTEN BY AS LITTLE AS THIS ONE SINGLE INSIGHT INTO THEIR HIDDEN CAUSE!

And that insight is this:

If you suffer from any of the nervous symptoms listed above, then you must understand at once that your nerves are not ill... they have not deteriorated... they have not lost their true physical health in any way! What has happened to them instead is that they have simply become OVER-SENSITIZED... "rubbed raw" by too much outside irritation... and are now ready to discharge the emotional and physical symptoms of panic at even the slightest thing that goes wrong!

Thus, the depression... indecision... loss of confidence and all the other emotional symptoms you feel are all caused by OVER-SENSITIZED nerves! And the churning stomach... palpitating heart... never-ending headaches and all the other physical nervous-symptoms you feel are—again—all caused by OVER-SENSITIZED nerves!

And therefore the way to treat ALL these symptoms is NOT with drugs... NOT with shock... NOT with medical formulations or hospitalizations at all! The way to treat these nerves is to change the poisonous-thoughts that are rubbing them raw!

And this is done (as proven by this internationally-famed physician on thousands of patients) in four simple steps! The first of which stops nervous symptoms (both physical and emotional) from multiplying from that moment on! The second of which serves to tranquilize and quiet down those over-sensitized nerves far more powerfully (and permanently) than any drug a pharmacist could ever give you!

The third of which lets you stop fighting those symptoms (which only intensifies them in an ever-increasing spiral of sheer torment), and—instead—leave them alone in an ingenious way that lets them start healing themselves!

And the fourth of which—the great reward—brings you slowly-but-surely back to the person you used to be! With a new, enduring feeling of control and confidence that nothing can destroy! So much so that this doctor actually comes right out and states bluntly: "The advice given here will definitely cure you, if you only follow it!"

In Fact, Case History After Case History Proves That Cure May Be So Dramatically Quick That Your Friends And Family Will Beg You To Tell Them Your Secret!

Once again, it doesn't matter what physical or emotional symptoms you are now suffering from... how "deeply entrenched" they are... how long you have been plagued by them... how "old" or "weak" or "out-of-control" you may feel today! Here is specific, step-by-step advice that will (again to quote directly from the doctor) "banish every unwelcome sensation and regain peace of mind and body!"

For example:

The two-minute self-treatment (you perform one ingenious little action with your chest) that ends sudden panic seizures on the spot—including all their side effects such as dizziness, pins and needles, involuntary stiffening of the joints, inability to breathe, and all the rest.

That "lump in the throat that won't go away"—how to banish it in minutes... and enjoy eating any food you wish to once again!

Physical weakness—perhaps the most dreaded of all symptoms—and (surprisingly) perhaps the fastest of all to banish!

How to deal with the twin monsters of fatigue and guilt! And leave behind emotional exhaustion... morning depression... thoughts that once raced around and around in your mind without cessation! (And leave them all behind—for good!)

Why so many patients who tried these simple techniques actually came out of their nervous sicknesses as far finer and stronger people than they ever were before!

How to recover from chronic tension caused by an insoluble problem! The only sane way to overcome it! How to avoid unnecessary suffering, for both yourself and others! And, perhaps, actually turn your worst defeat into crowning success!

The surest and most permanent way to cure obsessions!

How to tap the forces of Nature, every morning, that are just waiting to cure you!

How to bring happiness back into your everyday life! Not by waiting for some great event or reward... but simply by developing the eyes to see joy in the little things all around you!

How to beat insomnia! Again, specific, proven step-by-step instructions! Ten different aids that may have you waking up tomorrow morning as fresh as a baby, with eight full hours of blissful sleep replenishing every cell in your body!

And—the final goal: How to develop the kind of nervous control that automatically turns panic off the instant it starts! That frees you forever from "nerve-crutches" such as drugs or alcohol! That lets you pick up your life again from the point where over-sensitized nerves forced you to abandon it, with absolute confidence that you now have the poise and self-possession to accomplish the goals you have always wanted!

Alec Guinness: "What's Worth Doing, Is Worth Doing Badly"

Pictorial Parade

"Now, I am my own master," says Sir Alec.

"I was 11 when a teacher told me I would be wise not to think of a career in the theater. 'You wouldn't be any good at acting,' she said."

By Sir Alec Guinness
Especially for FAMILY WEEKLY

A few years ago, I came across a saying of G. K. Chesterton that has revolutionized my life. I only wish I had found it 15 years before I did. It might have liberated me sooner.

"If a thing is worth doing," Chesterton said, "it's worth doing badly."

As it applies to my own life, I read this advice to mean: "Not everything you do as an actor will win you an Academy Award—but that is no reason not to do it."

Before I found these words of Chesterton, my career had gone through three successive stages or acts. In the first act, I was just getting started, and I was grateful for any part in the theater. I had begun play-acting when I was about seven. I was 11 when a teacher told me I would be wise not to think of a career in the theater. "You wouldn't be any good at acting," she said. Another teacher, that marvelous actress, Martita Hunt, actually returned the tuition I had paid her for acting lessons. Said Miss Hunt: "You have absolutely no talent. Don't waste your time." Later, when we were both cast in "Great Expectations," Miss Hunt had the grace not to look surprised.

The second act in my career was getting big parts—and the recognition only films can give. Perhaps you remember "Kind Hearts and Coronets." In "Kind Hearts," I played eight assorted members—male and female—of an upper-class British family who are successively murdered by a young relative aspiring to their inheritance. I was terrified that the Duchess would open her mouth and the Admiral's voice would come out. I was, when I did "Kind Hearts and Coronets," rather proud of my achievement. But this was before I came to the third act of my career.

In act three, I now asked myself if "Kind Hearts" hadn't been a waste of time. It was pretty thin stuff, wasn't it? Pretty cardboard. But now we come to the fourth stage of my career. Now, thanks to Chesterton, I have again, more intelligently, I hope, reviewed the past: "Kind Hearts" was not a great film. But it did give pleasure to me and to millions and, more important, for what it was, it was done well, wasn't it?

I don't think I've ever been a perfectionist. There's a lot of stuff one can just chuck over one's shoulder and think: "It's not going to be marvelous, but it's worth doing," and so let it ride. One must take care, however, because this can make for slackness and laziness. Still, almost anything is better than that frightful prissy "Worth doing well" business, which is so Puritanical. What's worth doing is worth doing, period.

As an almost penniless youth, I did not understand this. As a young actor, I simply wanted to please. I got into the theater by the very simple and obvious process of going to the box office of a London theater and asking for a job. "Breaking into the theater" is perhaps the exact term I ought to use to describe my first experience.

At the time, I was working as an advertising agency copywriter and wanting to be in the theater. I got a scholarship to a dramatic school in London. I stayed only seven months because I had to earn a living. Footsore and weary, I rather lightheartedly went to the box office instead of the stage door.

The stage manager, who happened to arrive at the same moment, saw me, saw how lean and threadbare I looked, and asked me if I were a good actor. "Yes, of course, I am," I told him, never having done a professional job in my life before. I was given four parts to read and I understudied the four leading male parts. That was my rather inauspicious beginning as an actor.

Today, in my fourth stage as an actor, I feel that the words of Chesterton have helped to give me a deeper sympathy and understanding of men. At least they have helped me to understand myself. They have also helped me become (I think) a better actor, if only by making it easy for me to reject the idea of imitating my own success.

The bane of an actor's existence, you see, is typecasting. After "River Kwai," I was offered five very lucrative roles as a psychotic officer. I doubt I was foolish to turn down these roles. They were not even worth doing badly.

It is a great mistake to get frightened and seek security by saying, "Fine, I'll have a big contract for five pictures." It can harm you in the end. Basically, I like being my own master and, somehow, I feel now perhaps I am.

Announcing a superb gift for Mother's Day

Actual Diameter: 8"

"Generations of Love"

A FIRST EDITION COLLECTOR'S PLATE

LIMITED TO ONLY 1000 IN PURE SILVER and ONLY 25 IN SOLID GOLD

When it comes to selecting a Mother's Day gift appropriate enough to convey all the love and respect the occasion deserves, the ideal combination is precious metal and exquisite original art by the noted sculptor, Alfred Brunettn.

This combination is best represented by The First Annual Hamilton Mint Mother's Day plate, available now but for a limited time and then only in extremely limited quantity.

Limit One Plate Per Collector

Collectors please note that only 1000 plates will be minted in the .999 Fine Silver version and only 25 will be struck in Solid 18kt. Gold, despite the anticipated demand. This is the smallest quantity of a collector plate ever minted due to time limitations and the painstaking attention to detail that will be maintained. Only one plate will be sold to each collector.

Plates are struck in high bas-relief with a brilliant proof finish and arrives encased for presentation: the silver version in a satin-lined gift case, the gold in a magnificent hand-carved solid walnut chest. Both will be accompanied by a certificate that officially registers your status with The Hamilton Mint as a First Edition owner.

To further maintain the integrity of this edition, your personal serial number will be inscribed on the plate along with The Hamilton Mint hallmark and certification of precious metal content. (Low serial numbers, particularly on First Editions, are usually considered more valuable and traditionally are the most sought after.)

ORDERS MUST BE POSTMARKED BY MAY 6, 1973. Regretfully, no requests can, or will, be accepted after that time. Of course, orders received early are guaranteed delivery in time for presentation on Mother's Day, May 13th. In the event that editions are fully subscribed, remittances will be returned.

ORDERS ACCEPTED ONLY IF POSTMARKED BY MAY 6, 1973

HAYLEY MILLS AND NEW BABY
With father, Roy Boulting

If you still think of bouncy Hayley Mills as a guileless teenager, maybe the announcement of Baby Crispian John David's arrival will help you to think of her as the 26-year-old wife of 59-year-old film producer Roy Boulting. Hayley and Roy were married in the south of France almost two years ago, and now they and Baby Crispian (he was born in January) live in England.

Garbage to keep us comfortable: European cities—with their very tough air-pollution controls—have long used heating and cooling systems that burn solid waste, and one such system has just gone into use in Montreal, Canada. Next year, Nashville, Tenn., will have a plant that will consume 720 tons of solid waste a day to heat and cool a loop of 27 downtown buildings. It's this country's first such system.

Sally Kellerman explains why she didn't have a boyfriend until she was 18: "I was afraid of men — I think because I was so scared of my father. He died last year, and it was only within the last few years that we became friends. He had a terrific temper. He never hit me but he would scream at me, and the fear of him transferred to every man I met until I was 18. In fact, it took me until my mid-20's, after my father and I became friends, before I was secure enough not to be afraid of men." Sally, who starred as Hot Lips in the "M*A*S*H" movie, is appearing in "Lost Horizon."

PETE MARAVICH
They went berserk

Pete Maravich talking: "I remember one high school game. The crowd was with me. I wanted to do more and more with the ball. So I threw a behind-the-back bounce pass on the move through a guy's legs! Oh, man, I remember I was coming down on a three-on-one break and my man was overplaying me to the left and giving me the open teammate on the right. But that was too easy a pass. We were going to get two anyway, so it didn't make any difference. As my man was sliding and I was dribbling I noticed his legs moving in and out, in and out. Still on the move, I saw the right moment and threw the ball when his legs were out—behind my back, now, not a straight pass—and I put it right through him to a teammate on the left. He converted for the basket. The crowd — I want to tell you — went berserk. I couldn't believe it. My man looked as though somebody stepped on his head. I think right then, show time was born in Pete Maravich." From "Basketball," by Allen Camelli (Bantam, 75¢).

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY By Richard Armour

AND SO TOO BAD

I dearly love to read in bed
And while I read to munch on bread
With cheese or liverwurst or ham
Or peanut butter mixed with jam.

Yes, while I read, I sandwich in
Some sandwiches, and wipe my chin
If mayonnaise perchance should drip Beyond my guarding lower lip.

Caught by a story, ere I stop
A bit of this or that I drop
And know by feel, or light of dawn,
Which side my bed is buttered on.

The economic systems of Russia and the United States do have their little similarities. Under Communism, everything belongs to the state. Under capitalism, everything belongs to your wife.

Being city dwellers, none of our children had ever seen a whole, live chicken. Recently the family got together for a chicken dinner. Several adults were happily complying with the youngsters' requests of "I want a leg," or "I want a wing," when our youngest boy, occupying the family high chair, chimed in with, "I want a mouth!"
