ECU Grads Advised Play Role In Problem-Solving

Dr. Frank G. Dickey, Executive Director, National Commission on Accrediting, keynote speaker at East Carolina University graduation exercises Sunday afternoon, said ECU "is outstanding and unique, in making it possible for the graduates of this institution to assume new and different kinds of leadership in the business of solving our world's problems."

The 1973 class, numbering 1,931 candidates for baccalaureate degrees and 450 for graduate degrees for a total of 2,381 graduates, is the largest graduating class in the history of the school.

At one point in his speech, Dr. Dickey outlined his opinion on the mission of ECU. "It is my firm belief that this university believes that all associated with it must be responsible participants in our society, for there is really no such thing in these days and times as an 'innocent bystander.'"

Chancellor Dr. Leo Jenkins, in remarks made during his speech of welcome, spoke about the responsibility of a university meeting the requirements due the general public. "I believe that there is strong evidence that the university's response to legitimate demands has met these requirements," he said.

The chancellor also touched on the broad programs of the university; the continuing education division, campus studies abroad in Italy, Japan and Mexico; and the various seminars and conferences sponsored in the past year by ECU. These programs, he said, "spur genuine understanding of international cooperation and point up the importance of international affairs."

Dr. Jenkins' reference to the controversial ECU Medical School were brief. Mentioning the "progress made this year by our 20 young men and women enrolled in the ECU School of Medicine," Jenkins added "It is my fervent hope that these 20 young people, all from North Carolina, will complete their studies and stay in this great state of ours to serve the medical needs of our people."

At the sixty-fourth graduation exercise for the school, Attorney General Robert Morgan, chairman of the Board of Trustees and Dr. William Friday, president of the consolidated University of North Carolina, were among distinguished guests in attendance.

Music for the graduation was furnished by the East Carolina University Symphonic Wind Ensemble with Herbert L. Carter, conducting; and the University Choir and Wind Ensemble under the direction Charles Moore.

Kenneth Ray Hammond, president of the senior class, gave the invocation. Dr. Robert Holt, Vice Chancellor and Dean, presented the candidates for degrees, and Dr. Jenkins conferred the degrees on the 2,381 graduates.

Tornadoes, Flooding And High Winds In Carolinas Kill Four

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

At least four persons were killed and five others reported missing today in the wake of flash flooding which followed a night of tornadoes, high winds and hail as a series of devastating spring thunderstorms marched across North Carolina and South Carolina.

Tornadoes were reported in both states again today.

All of the deaths and reported missing were in mountainous western North Carolina where serious flooding was occurring.

Authorities in Ashe County said two bodies were recovered in a house which was washed away by flooding along the South Fork of the New River at the Beaver Creek community. Another body was recovered near the Crumpler section of Ashe County, authorities reported.

Ashe County Rescue Squad members believed a third person, still missing, was in the house which floated away near Beaver Creek.

The names of the victims were not immediately available.

The Highway Patrol at Asheville said four residents were missing from a house trailer that was cracked open by high water in a rural section of Buncombe County.

The patrol said one body was recovered, but there was no identification pending notification of next of kin.

Missing from the mobile home were: Wayne Woody, 23, his two children, Christopher, 2½, and Shannon, nine months, and a family friend, Jason Roberts, 26.

Some 200 people had been evacuated from homes in rural sections of the county and numerous roads and about 30 bridges had been damaged and closed, authorities said.

Severe thunderstorms continued to spawn tornadoes early today. Twisters were reported this morning in the Greenville-Spartanburg area of South Carolina and north of Charlotte in Mecklenburg County.

Mecklenburg County Police said a twister touched down in the southwest area of the county, uprooting trees, damaging mobile homes and snapping power lines. No injuries were reported.

Numerous reports of funnel clouds were made early this morning by the Greenville, S.C., police, the public and several radio stations in the Greenville-Spartanburg area.

There were no reports of damage, like that which occurred in the same area Sunday night.

Extensive property damage was reported Sunday night from the numerous twisters which ripped across northwestern South Carolina and parts of North Carolina. Weather Service offices at Columbia, Charlotte and Raleigh reported twisters touched down at least a dozen places in the two states.

Blood Tests First Skylab Experiment

By HOWARD BENEDICT

AP Aerospace Writer
SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Man had his blood drawn in space today for the first time as physician-astronaut Dr. Joseph P. Kerwin took samples from all three Skylab crewman, starting a series of medical, earth resources and astronomy experiments that may bring many benefits to mankind.

"Be advised Joe just drew all three of us and that it went very smoothly," Commander Charles Conrad Jr. told Mission Control after the spacemen awakened in their orbital lab an hour later than planned.

When the control center received no response on its first wake-up call, officials decided to let Conrad, Kerwin and Paul J. Weitz sleep as long as they wanted.

Later today, they planned a 10-minute news conference, televised to the Space Center, answering questions from reporters here on the two hectic days in which they salvaged the huge laboratory by erecting a makeshift sun shade to cool it down.

The drawing of blood samples, to be done four times during the four-week mission, is one element of an extensive medical program intended to determine how man is affected by long-term exposure to the space environment.

Kerwin has a dispensary aboard to carry out his duties as a high-flying physician.

The astronauts also ate in the space station today for the first time. This became known when Conrad reported "the commander just shaved and breakfast is cooking."

He referred to a special tray in which foods are heated.

Until now, the fourth day of the mission, the astronauts have dined in their Apollo ferry ship because of high heat in the laboratory.

But temperatures dropped another five degrees overnight and were around 90 degrees.

Explosion

ROCKY MOUNT, N.C. (AP)—A gas storage tank on the eastern edge of Rocky Mount exploded this morning.

Preliminary reports said the tank, owned by Daughtridge Oil Co., had exploded at about 11 a.m.

There were no immediate reports of injuries or deaths.

Tornado Toll Is Soaring

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Tornadoes, heavy rains and strong winds marred Memorial Day weekend observances from Oklahoma to Florida, claiming at least 39 lives and causing millions of dollars in property damage.

Deaths were reported in nine states as the storms hopped-scotched across the Midwest and South.

Authorities said hundreds of persons were injured and thousands of homes were either damaged or destroyed.

Eleven persons were killed by twisters in Alabama; six died in two accidents in Missouri; five died in a tornado that struck Keefeton, Okla.; three were killed in tornadoes in Jonesboro, Ark.; three drowned in Kansas when a tornado struck their fishing boat; five were reported drowned in Tennessee; four drowned in flash floods in North Carolina; a Florida man was killed in a twister and one person drowned in Laurel, Miss.

Sen. Scott Says Political Leadership For Expanded ECU Med School

"We should go ahead and get a two-year medical school started at East Carolina University, looking forward to a four-year school," Sen. Ralph H. Scott, D-Alamance, has told an out-of-state team of medical experts studying North Carolina's medical needs.

Scott, uncle of former Gov. Robert Scott and a key legislator has backed expansion of the ECU medical training program in a letter to the members of the committee named by the Board of Governors of the University of North Carolina system.

His stand could be a great influence in the General Assembly. He is chairman of the legislative appropriations committee which could have the ultimate say-so over the funding of any new medical school. He was also a prime force in creation of the UNC Board of Governors which has recommended against expansion of the ECU program until the out-of-state consultants study is completed.

According to Scott's letter, "if they (ECU) do not have qualified professors, then the American Medical Association should see that they get them."

Medical school expansion at ECU, Scott wrote, "should be done." Eventually, he continued, political leaders will expand the school. "That should not be," he emphasized, "because it should come from leaders in the health leadership field."

Scott's letter, sent to Dr. J.I. Levine at the University of Virginia, executive secretary for the study team, said "I know it is risky to mention politics to educators, especially in the field of medicine, even though I know of no one that messes in politics more so than doctors. I sometimes wonder just how much common sense they have."

Expressing concern that without an expanded program at ECU the doctor shortage in some areas might not be solved, Scott told the study group, "I am thinking about a family living in the swamps of eastern Carolina or up in the mountain coves who will never see one of the graduates of Duke or Wake Forest or UNC. They are too highly trained, or think they are, to locate in these areas.

"I hope you people will take the leadership in seeing that it is done right. There is more at stake than the medical school."

Scott and six other state lawmakers had been invited to meet with the medical study team June 8 to discuss medical school growth and its involvement with the General Assembly.

Rejecting the invitation in his letter, Scott told the out-of-state experts if they do not propose expansion of the ECU program, the politicians in the state will do it for them.

"The people believe they do need an additional medical school and that it should be at Greenville," Scott noted, "The people are not even listening to anything that the (medical) folks are saying which, as they see it, this committee is just sent here to make it look regular and that (the committee) knows the answer before they get here."

In addition to endorsing the expansion of the medical school at ECU, Scott urged that the existing school at Chapel Hill be made a "top-notch" training facility for physicians.

The team study is scheduled to be completed by the fall.

The 1965 General Assembly voted to create a doctor training program at ECU and expansion of the program has been a political issue since that time, even though a one-year program with 20 first-year medical students did not get underway until last fall.

An ECU request for expansion of the program was rejected by the UNC Board of Governors pending recommendations by the medical study team.

Scott's endorsements of an expanded program at East Carolina came as the state medical society took a stand against creating a new four-year state supported medical school.

The medical society's policy against expansion calls for the phasing out of the present one-year program at ECU, replacing it with area health education centers to provide clinical programs and residency training for medical students at an expanded Chapel Hill school.

Wedding Should Be What Bride Chooses

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1973 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Our 22-year-old college graduate daughter is being married soon, and I wonder how far to let her go with the wedding arrangements.

She wants to get married in a public park. [How can you ask people to stand in a park? What if it rains?]

She doesn't plan on having ushers or bridesmaids. She says since there will be no aisle to walk down it would be pointless. She wants a justice of the peace instead of a minister. My husband's people are Catholic, and mine are Episcopalians. Our daughter was brought up Episcopalian, but she doesn't believe in anything. The young man she's marrying is not committed to any religion either. Wouldn't relatives who believe in something criticize us for having a wedding without a minister?

We agreed to foot the bill for this wedding and don't want to appear ridiculous, which we probably will if we go along with what she wants. Or shouldn't we worry about what people will think?

OLD SCHOOL MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: It's your daughter's wedding, and she should have the kind of wedding she and her fiancé want. If it rains, those without umbrellas will get wet. If relatives who "believe in something" criticize you for having a justice of the peace, tell them it was your daughter's choice. [At least she'll be legally wed, and lots of parents would settle for that.] Paying for the wedding doesn't give you the right to do it your way. And if you worry about what people will think, you'll waste a lot of energy.

DEAR ABBY: Why would a man check up on his wife to be sure he knows exactly where she is every minute? Do you think he suspects that she's playing around? CURIOUS

DEAR CURIOUS: Not necessarily. Maybe he just wants to know where SHE is while HE's playing around.

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to that lady who said, "A strong wife and mother is the source of a strong husband, children, and country."

I am a 14-year-old girl, and I take that to mean that if a woman stays home and mops the floors and scrubs the toilet bowls she is doing the most for her husband, children, and country.

Sorry, but I don't agree with that at all. Some people will say: "But what will happen to the children if the mother works outside the home?"

Well, let me answer that. My mother works outside the home. She doesn't have to because my father makes a good living. She works because she wants to, and I'm not suffering because of it. She fixes a good breakfast in the morning for us, and a good supper at night. She helps me with my problems, and she still has time to go shopping with me on Saturdays, and we have all day Sunday together.

I would like to get married and raise a family and work outside my home, too. I do not plan on just staying home and mopping floors and scrubbing toilet bowls. Peace!

CONFIDENTIAL TO "JUST CURIOUS IN DENVER": I don't have any ghost writers. Sometimes I wish I did, so I'd have somebody to blame besides myself when I goof.

DEAR ABBY: My ex-husband wants me to marry him again, and I am considering it even though my friends tell me if I do I should have my head examined.

You see, before I married him he had been married six times. I can tell you a few reasons why we didn't make it. He has a violent temper. He has tried to choke me and has ripped my clothes right off my body. You can't reason with him when he's angry. He also drinks a lot. When he's nice, he is sweet as honey. He's a wonderful lover but a lousy husband.

No wife ever lasted more than a year with him, including me. He is 35, and I am 40, but he can't be looking for a "mother" because the girl he married before me was 17.

Can you give me some advice? MIXED UP IN N. D.

DEAR MIXED: You said he was a "lousy husband," so unless you want a lousy husband, forget him.

Apprehension On Transition

By BRYAN HAISLIP
Raleigh, N.C. — Annual sessions — servant for a more democratic legislature or Frankenstein of encroaching government?

The dilemma has two faces for North Carolina legislators, set to make the change after a long history of meeting every other year.

Leaders who engineered the shift say it will put the state in step with the times, promote efficient operation, and make the process more responsive to the people.

Despite the promises, apprehension clouds the transition. Foreboding filled the minds of a number of members as the General Assembly recessed last week, to convene again next January.

"There is a gut fear among legislators of what annual sessions will bring," said Rep. Samuel H. Johnson of Wake, a five-term veteran. What Johnson fears is a regression in budget preparation and more pressure to spend, less thoughtful consideration of legislation, spiraling costs and inevitable professionalization of the legislature.

A further result, he warned, will be stagnation in administrative circles of state government.

Magnify Legislative Power

"We already have a weak governor, without the veto or appointment of Council of State officials, and a strong legislature. Annual sessions will further magnify legislative power," Johnson explained.

"The General Assembly needs to meet, conduct its business, and get away from the capital to let the executive branch function without being under the eye of the legislature."

The legislative-executive relationship figured in the decision to try annual sessions. Often debated futilely in the past, it came about only after the election of a Republican governor while a large Democratic majority remained in the control of the legislature.

Obviously, some Democrats converted to the concept of a session each year have the partisan motive of keeping watch on Gov. Jim Holshouser.

Apprehension accompanies change, acknowledged Lt. Gov. Jim Hunt, one of those who sees constructive potential in annual sessions.

Legislative Discipline Urged

"I have some apprehensions myself. Whether we can exercise self restraint and discipline ourselves to use the interim between sessions to produce better legislation will determine how well the procedure works," he said.

The 1974 experience, he added, will be a testing ground and an opportunity for refinements, with the ultimate option to revert to a biennial schedule if it proves a failure.

At least a one-man effort to reverse course was promised by Sen. Eddie Knox of Mecklenburg. He called the annual session move a "gross mistake" which he will do all he can to correct.

"Basically, I am opposed to it because I see it as a long range perpetuation of big government," he said. Looking ahead, he said it will bring the time of a full-salaried, full-time body cranking out bad legislation aimed to keep themselves in office.

"When they feed at the public trough, they have to do something to keep the slops coming," he commented.

Citizens Shut Out

The citizen who has to earn a living, as he does, will be foreclosed from serving, Sen. Knox said, and the state will lose the balance of representation.

Misgivings about annual sessions came to the foreground in the final days of the recent session, said Sen. Phil Godwin of Gates. "Knowing you are coming back in a few months encourages a tendency to put off issues that should be settled," he observed.

"This session turned into a burying ground for bills at the last," Godwin said. A pattern of annual sessions could multiply delays in the enactment of measures involving controversy, he added.

"I don't want to throw cold water on the idea. I'm willing to give it a try. But after next January, if we see we're not on the right course, I'd be in favor of going back to every other year," he said.

"I have some personal apprehensions about appropriations next time. If we spend at the rate we did this time, we won't be far off from having to raise taxes. We'll have to give that a good, hard look," Godwin said.

Two-year budgets are far superior to an annual format, said Rep. Johnson. They tend to eliminate ripples in the economy as a factor in spending, he argued, and free a lot of executive hours devoted to preparing spending requests and following them through the pipeline.

While his opposition is adamant and his vision certain as to where the road leads, Johnson is convinced the legislature chose a path without a turning in going to annual sessions. "It is not in the nature of a government body ever to program itself to turn back," he said.

an historic first year of medical school on the campus and now head for Chapel Hill to complete their work on MD degrees.

There were some 103 graduates at Pitt Technical Institute last week. Over 400 young people are receiving diplomas at Rose High and approximately 775 are graduating at North Pitt, Farmville Central, Conley and Ayden-Grifton.

Hundreds more will be graduating from high schools, technical institutes, community colleges in adjacent counties. In addition more young people will receive diplomas at private school and many of our areas young people have been receiving degrees at colleges and universities throughout the state and nation.

All these graduates are preparing to take their place in a society which seems to have many problems. They should not look on our nation as one overriden with problems, however. Rather they should face the future with hope. Our nation has always had problems, but we have progressed and prospered because each generation has produced its share of problem solvers.

Among all these graduates from our area there are the problem solvers who will work out some of the solutions that our society needs in the years ahead. The opportunities for service are as great or greater than they have ever been and we have no doubt that the ability and drive is there among the young to see that this nation keeps on improving.

Nixon Raised Two Questions

By ROWLANDE EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — President

Nixon's statement Tuesday, with its remarkable admission that he did after all impose national security limitations on the Watergate investigation, instead of winning sympathy from Capitol Hill supporters of his hard-line foreign policy has now spawned two steel-edged questions from them:

Question No. 1: It has been long standing practice for the President of the United States personally to approve or "sign off" all highly sensitive covert operation of the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA). Why then did Mr. Nixon say that "elements of the early post-Watergate reports led me to suspect, incorrectly, that the CIA had been in some way involved"?

Should he not have automatically known? Question No. 2: Assuming, however, he did not know, Mr. Nixon needed only to telephone CIA headquarters at Langley, Va., on a secure scrambler telephone to find out the truth. Why did he not immediately place that call?

The answers almost surely will lead to one of two interpretations: either the President was deeply, hopelessly involved in the Watergate cover-up, or he was far removed from the daily flow of events in the government to a degree probably unprecedented in U.S. history. The latter interpretation, damning though it is, might at least salvage his presidency for the remainder of the second term.

In either event, however, the President's hope that his Tuesday statement would rally around him the bipartisan national security coalition — especially Democratic Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington — has failed. Jackson, a staunch supporter of Mr. Nixon's foreign policy and his first choice to be Secretary of Defense, was appalled by the President's third Watergate statement.

So were a great many other Senators, deeply disturbed by testimony from CIA officials that the White House tried to involve the CIA in the Watergate cover-up. Unanswered questions posed by Mr. Nixon's statement make doubly sure a close cross-examination of ex-White House aides H.R. (Bob) Haldeman, John Ehrlichman and John Dean when they appear at closed-door Senate Appropriations Committee sessions. Sooner or later, the slow-moving Ervin Committee's probe will get them in open session.

In advance of their testimony, many Senators not previously known as Nixon haters now think the worst of the President. "I'm convinced now that he's up to his neck in the cover-up," one powerful Senator told us. But that harsh view may not take into account the astonishing isolation and

Honi Soit Mal y Pense

WASHINGTON—My friend Moonslinger is a skeptic by nature and the other day as we were having a drink together at the Press Club he said, 'Nixon's credibility has reached a new low. You don't know what to believe any more.'

"I always believe the President of the United States. That's how I was brought up."

"Yeah, but this is different. Every day you read the paper witnesses say Nixon knew more about the Watergate than he did the day before."

"We used to have a saying in France," I told Moonslinger, " 'Honi soit mal y pense' which means 'Evil to him who thinks evil.' "

"Don't you have it any more?" Moonslinger asked. "Not since Pompidou was elected."

"Well, anyway," he persisted, "what worries me is that if we can't believe the President on the Watergate, how can we believe him on Vietnam? For example, how can we be sure that we have 'Peace with Honor'?"

I said angrily. "The President would never lie to us about something like that."

"But suppose, just suppose, there isn't any 'Peace with Honor' there and the South Vietnamese and North Vietnamese are still fighting?"

"Impossible," I said. "After 10 long years we have achieved a peace in Indochina that everyone can live with."

"But let's say, just for argument's sake, that something went wrong. Suppose after Kissinger's meeting in Paris with Le Duc Tho, the President goes on the air and says he has just received new information that we don't have 'Peace with Honor' in Vietnam. Will the American people believe him?"

"Of course they will." "All right, let's go one step further," Moonslinger said. "Suppose he says because of this new information he will be obligated to start bombing North Vietnam again because he doesn't want to be the first impeached President in the history of the United States to lose a war?"

"Then the American people will have to support him, unless, of course, you want Cambodia to fall."

"Nobody wants Cambodia to fall," Moonslinger said. "But because of the Presidents credibility problem, many Americans may not believe him when he says he has to bomb again. This could bring the students and antidemonstrators out into the streets."

"That's where the President likes them," I said. "He wants his enemies out there in the streets where he can see them."

"Okay, then you have demonstrators, riots, arrests and Jane Fonda. The President declares a national emergency and, whammo, everyone forgets about Watergate."

"Moonslinger, are you trying to tell me the President would bomb North Vietnam to take our minds off a domestic scandal in his own Administration?"

"Why not? What has he got to lose?"

"It's too farfetched," I said adamantly.

"Any more farfetched than the White House breaking into Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist's office with equipment loaned to them by CIA?"

"That's different," I said. "The President had no choice."

"All I can tell you is when Nixon goes on the air in a few weeks and says, 'My fellow Americans, the North Vietnamese had better head for their bomb shelters.' "

"Moonslinger," I said, "the trouble with you is that just because of a third-rate burglary at the Watergate you've lost your faith in the leaders of our land."

Panel Calmly Listens

By LEE BYRD
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — He waited his moment, giving the over-capacity crowd and dozens of newsmen time to settle, and then he stood and joined the ranks of those who had risen before in this room to seek that most splendid of miseries.

"My name is Ed Kelley," he said, "and I'm announcing my candidacy for president of the United States."

Now, as it happens, there were three things curious about that.

First, unlike the times when Sen. John F. Kennedy, Eugene McCarthy, Robert F. Kennedy and Fred Harris had broken such news in the Caucus Room, Kelley's announcement ranks as the least-awaited ever.

Second, he made it from a semi-horizontal position, owing to the fact that police were pulling him out the door.

Third, the room was booked at the time by the Senate Watergate committee.

And that panel, or so it seems, is not interested in partisan political endeavors.

After five days of hearings, a dozen witnesses, hundreds of questions and a flurry of related developments on the outside, there have been no bombastic words from either the four Democrats or the three Republicans who are conducting the congressional probe.

Indeed, those who anticipated a televised circus have found instead an atmosphere sometimes more akin to a seminar on archeology—a subject, incidentally, upon which Chief Counsel Samuel Dash is an expert by hobby. And he obviously believes in giving everybody a chance to dig.

No one, in fact, has emerged as a dominant personality on the committee's side of the table, occupied by Chairman Sam J. Ervin Jr. and Sens. Howard Baker, Herman E. Talmadge, Daniel K. Inouye, Joseph M. Montoya, Edward U. Gurney and Lowell P. Weicker.

Each, however, is possessed of his own particular style. Baker, 47, puts his questions in a polished, border-state drawl. His increased exposure, and evident charisma, could make the Tennessee senator a prospect for the 1976 GOP presidential nomination.

Except for Ervin's occasional excursions into Bible-quoting and down-home philosophy, it is Baker who generally triggers what little levity there is.

Strength For Today

SENTIMENTALITY AND TRAGEDY

We often shed ears as we see poverty and suffering depicted in movies or on television. But we do not need fictional drama to remind us of the suffering continuously present in the world as we see it. There is plenty of tragedy right on the street where we live, in the office or in the mill where we work, or even in our bridge club or lodge.

Yet even though we know this, when we come in contact with this real suffering, often we turn our heads the other way or step over it with as much unconcern as we would step over fallen leaves or broke twigs. General William Booth, founder of the Salvation Army, once made a statement which we should all take to heart on these occasions: "One pot of hot gruel, two petticoats, and one wool blanket are worth a lake of tears."

Sentimentality solves no problems. Our Lord said on one occasion, "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them."

New Hampshire Experiments With Living Free

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

ANTRIM, N.H.—Here in New Hampshire, the State motto is "Live Free or Die." If U.S. authorities approve—and that is a very iffy question—several thousand school-age children in New Hampshire will embark next fall on a great experiment in living free. They would be the subjects of the first true test of a "tuition voucher" system.

In one form or another, the system has been proposed since the days of Adam Smith. It was Smith's idea that the education of children is a mixed public and parental responsibility; he advocated public financing and parental choice. More recently such poles-apart philosophers as Milton Friedman of Chicago and Christopher Jencks of Harvard have urged the same basic plan.

The plan makes great good sense. Somewhat over-simplified, it rests upon these propositions: That the state has a proper interest in the education of children; that within reasonable limits, the state should not dictate the kind of education a child receives; and that within a community, all children of school age are entitled to identical shares of public funds available for education.

Suppose, then, that a community has $800,000 to spend on education, and suppose that it has one thousand children of school age. The plan proposes that each child be allocated $800, in the form of a tuition voucher to be used by his parents according to their own free choice. The parents can send the child to any accredited school, public or private, anywhere in the community, the State, or the nation. The goal is not public-school education; the goal is plainly and simply education.

Some years ago, as a part of its massive resistance to school integration, Virginia experimented with a State-financed program along these lines. The Virginia plan did not permit the tuition grants to be used in church-operated schools—it was felt this would violate the State Constitution—but otherwise it provided complete freedom of choice. Contrary to the apprehensions of many public school superintendents; the plan did not wreck the public schools or significantly diminish their funds. Contrary to the hopes of many libertarians, relatively few parents chose to participate. But until the Supreme Court killed the plan, perceiving it as a mere device to preserve segregation, the program offered a choice.

New Hampshire wants to have to go at freedom. For some months, a committee of top educators, assisted by Professor Friedman, has been preparing a model for an effectively unlimited tuition voucher experiment. The group has worked closely with the Office of Economic Opportunity, which has a severely limited experiment now under way in the Alum Rock school district of California. At Alum Rock, parents cannot make the fundamental choice of public or private education; they can choose only among six public elementary schools. New Hampshire would provide a truly free choice.

William Bittenbender, chairman of the New Hampshire Board of Education, is enthusiastically backing the experiment. Dr. Newell Paire, State Commissioner of Education, wants to see a test get started this fall. The State Board voted 5 to 1 last month to give it a try. The Education Committee of the New Hampshire House of Representatives, in an informal poll, found 22 members for and only two against a pilot project. Governor Meldrim Thomson has voiced strong support

As soon as a final decision is reached on the one or two communities that would participate, an application will be made to the U.S. Office of Education for grants of $2.5 million a year for at least two years. If these were then extended for an additional two years, by the spring of 1978 some useful data could be examined.

Unhappily, Frank Carlucci, undersecretary of HEW, and Thomas Glennan, director of the National Institute of Education, are "personally convinced that a totally unregulated voucher system is likely to be a disaster." He has voiced a hundred reasons why it can't be tried in New Hampshire this fall.

The opposition of Carlucci and Glennan could be fatal, but HEW Secretary Caspar Weinberger—and beyond him, the President—have the final say-so. The amount of money, relatively speaking, is small; the benefits of a pilot project are potentially great. Nixon many times has urged that educational experiments be tried when local people are ready and eager to try them. He has just such an opportunity here in New Hampshire.

remoteness of a President who shunned all routine details of government, who communed with only a very few staffers and who did not even read the newspapers. Indeed, if Mr. Nixon was not a conspirator, his Tuesday statement makes sense only in the context of an eerily detached presidency unique in modern American politics.

Although previous Presidents were informed of any CIA operation with potentially embarrassing repercussions, Nixon aides say some such capers were planned without Mr. Nixon's knowledge. Similarly, while other Presidents would have immediately called the CIA, these officials now say Mr. Nixon relied on Ehrlichman and Haldeman to ask Lt. Gen. Vernon Walters, deputy CIA director, a full six days after the Watergate burglary.

But since Walters replied there was no CIA connection, the question now is why Mr. Nixon bothered even to mention in his statement that he was in doubt, when the doubt could only have spanned a couple of days. But that statement was perforce written in a fog bank of confusion, explain his aides.

Unable to remember details, cut off now from Ehrlichman, Haldeman and Dean, and unwilling to contact CIA officials for fear of being accused of contriving a second cover-up, Mr. Nixon confronted unavoidable inconsistencies stemming from ignorance rather than complicity, these aides say.

Furthermore, as in other Watergate matters, the White House wants deposed White House counsel Dean to get the full blame for trying to pin the Watergate burglary on the CIA. But close students of the Nixon White House cannot believe John Dean would act on his own.

So, Senate investigators will be trying to find whether Dean sought to implicate the CIA on the orders of Ehrlichman and Haldeman or of Mr. Nixon himself. Some of the Presidents' old Senate supporters strongly suspect the worst. The White House hopes they will find that Mr. Nixon was merely incompetent.

time. His questions are succinct and, unlike some others, rarely repetitious.

Inouye, of Hawaii, is a stern questioner, often confronting the witness with a frown and looking him straight in the eye. Weicker sometimes eagerly pursues a line of questioning the long past the 10-minute limit, sometimes looks bored.

And boredom, in fact, may creep into these hearings, at least so long as the committee continues a course aimed at credibility rather than drama.

But there are disclosures yet to come, and there should be plenty of excitement ahead without the intrusion of another Ed Kelley.

Third Member Of Heath Govm't Said 'Involved'

LONDON (AP) — Scotland Yard is reported investigating allegations that a third member of Prime Minister Edward Heath's government has been involved with call girls.

The Press Association, Britain's domestic news agency, reported that Heath "now knows the name of a third minister who is alleged to figure in the call girls scandal."

The People, a Sunday newspaper, said it had gotten the name of the third man from Norma Levy, the 26-year-old call girl whose customers included Heath's disgraced air force minister, Lord Lambton. The woman reportedly said the man visited her about three times and paid up to $125 each time.

Mrs. Levy said a fourth member of the government might have been one of her customers also, The People reported, but she would have to see a photograph of the man before she could be sure of the identification.

Mrs. Levy was reported in hiding in Morocco, and police sources said Scotland Yard detectives were going to fly there to interview her.

Following newspaper reports of a sex-and-security scandal in high government circles, Lambton and the government leader of the House of Lords, Lord Jellicoe, resigned last week with the admission that they had "casual affairs" with call girls.

There was widespread newspaper speculation then that other prominent officials were involved, but Heath told the House of Commons on Thursday that there were no grounds for supposing this. Hanging over the whole scandal is the fear that those involved might have been blackmailed for defense secrets. Heath has ordered a special inquiry into this aspect.

Lambton, 50, announced Sunday that he would resign from the House of Commons as soon as possible and indicated he planned to retire from public life. He has represented the constituency of Berwick-on-Tweed for 21 years. When his father, the fifth Earl of Durham, died in 1970, he renounced that title so he could remain in the Commons.

Unusual Session By Legislature

Well, it all ended on Thursday, May 24, 1973 instead of May 11, 1973 as intended. Whatever we did, it took 97 legislative days to do it. I am proud to say that I was present for every session. We will return on January 16, 1974 to have another fling at it. Standing Committees will be studying between sessions those matters that are being held over on which final action was not taken at this session.

The 1973 Session is unusual in many respects. First of all, it is the first session in the 20th century with a Republican Governor and a Democratic General Assembly, and I think it worked reasonably well. The General Assembly followed the recommendations of Governor Holshouser in some cases and in some cases it did not; however, this situation has existed even with Democratic Governors. In the second place, there is an unusually large number of new and inexperienced legislators, probably the largest number in recent years. To some degree this slows the legislative process. The third aspect is the change of the experiment of annual sessions and annual budgets. There are pros and cons; however, it is being tried for the 1973-75 biennium. The 1975-77 Assembly will determine whether or not such annual sessions will continue. Once started, in my opinion it will continue. The fourth item is the $2.9 billion budget for one year and the impact that it should have.

The public schools and community colleges and technical institutes received a generous allocation mainly because people in North Carolina still believe in the public school system. The General Assembly and the public will be looking to see if the results justify the expenditures.

The mental and correctional institutions also came in for a reasonable share of the 1973-74 allocations. All of this in spite of the fact that no state taxes of any kind were raised and no new levies made. As a matter of fact, the tax base structure in North Carolina has not been basically changed since the 1969 Session of the General Assembly.

Finally, this has been a hard working session. For most of the session it has been an 8:00 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. working day. There have been disappointments, such as in auto insurance, but the great thrust of the 1973 General Assembly will be seen as the effects of the $2.9 billion budget unfolds and begins to affect the services to our people.

Confirm 18 Most Motorists Found At Kinston Gasoline They Needed

KINSTON — Bringing to a close their formal Jewish training, the eight members of the Confirmation Class of the Temple Israel Religious School participated in a Confirmation Service at the Temple in Kinston, May 25.

The theme for the evening was the State of Israel's 25th anniversary. The confirmants, Larry Zicherman, Ellen Crane, David Jacobson, David Ostrow, all of Greenville, Miriam Selinger, Joslyn Maerov, Steven Sandbank, all of Kinston, and Cece Hurwitz, of Tarboro, were awarded Certificates of Confirmation by Dr. Manfred Katz, principal of the Religious School. They also received copies of the Bible, presented by Mrs. Newton Seigler, president of the Sisterhood, and personal Prayerbooks, given to the confirmants by Sol Schetcher, President of Temple Israel.

The service involved the confirmants reading quotations from people instrumental in

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS Most Memorial Day weekend motorists were able to find the gas they needed, but many others across the country were confronted with locked service stations or gasoline rationing.

A service station attendant in Oakland, Calif. who was rationing gas was shot and killed Saturday because he refused to sell to a man who had filled his tank on Friday, police said.

Witnesses told police the irate customer threatened the attendant, Henry Craigs, 50, with a shotgun and then pulled the trigger when Craigs apparently reached for a gun in his pocket.

Zionism, the formation and/or maintenance of the State of Israel, as well as original material. Following the service, a reception was held by the parents of the confirmants in their honor at the Temple.

The motorist was booked for investigation of murder.

"People are really mad," said a station owner in Cincinnati, Ohio, where a breakdown at the Standard Oil Refinery in Lima was causing additional problems in the state. The refinery has been closed since April 27 and most of the 2,000 Sohio service stations in Ohio were shut Sunday.

While there was no indication of an immediate nationwide shortage, holiday motorists were putting an additional strain on supplies that are already faltering under increased demands.

"The problem for the average motorist is going to be turning into a station at the right place at the right time," said Gordon Larkin of the California Office of Emergency Services. "And I'm afraid right now, no one can tell him where that 'right' location is going to be."

"Frankly, I think any motorist who lets his tank get below half full...is foolish," Larkin added.

Gas was not scarce everywhere. "We've never had a shortage down here," the operator of a service station at West Yellowstone, Montana, said.

Average weekly refinement production is 45 million barrels of gas a week, according to the Treasury Department. American motorist use about 47 million barrels a week and the figure is expected to reach 49 million barrels during the summer.

To Monitor All Firings

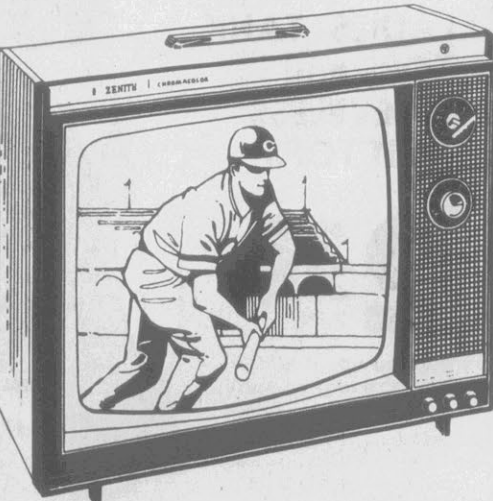

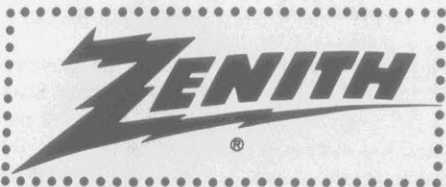

RALEIGH (AP) — A Mecklenburg County Senator says he plans to send a letter to each state highway department employee in his district to ask that any firing, demotion or transfer be reported to him.

Democratic Sen. Hemran Moore said the letters will be sent to deter Republican Gov. Jim Holshouser from "purging" the employees. Cabarrus and Mecklenburg counties are in Moore's district.

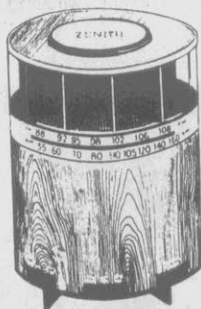

Moore, interviewed by telephone from his home in Charlotte, said he didn't know what changes Holshouser was contemplating, but he wanted to ensure that qualified highway department employees do not suffer simply because they are Democrats.

The veteran senator said Rep. Dwight Quinn, D-Cabarrus, and other legislators, whom he declined to name, would also monitor highway personnel changes.

SPACE PARASOL MAN—Jack Kinsler of the Johnson Space Center at Houston demonstrates how his idea of a space parasol for the Space Station took shape. (AP Wirephoto)

'Inventor' For Space Agency

By RICHARD SALTUS
Associated Press Writer
SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — "Whenever we run into trouble, that's when I really get interested," says the man who used four fishing poles and a piece of fabric to fashion the parasol which saved Skylab 1.

This particular bit of trouble — Skylab's overheating because of a missing solar shield — had another attraction for Jack Kinsler, technical services chief for the Johnson Space Center.

His next-door neighbor, Skylab commander Charles "Pete" Conrad, had been in danger of losing his 28-day mission because of the overheating trouble.

"I was terribly concerned and worried," Kinsler said Sunday.

Fire Razes 4 Buildings

CHICAGO (AP) — An explosion and fire destroyed four buildings in an eight-block industrial area here.

Four persons were injured, none seriously, in the Sunday morning explosion and blaze on the city's southwest side.

Fire officials said the explosion occurred at the Levey ink manufacturing plant, a division of Cities Service Oil Co.

Cause of the explosion was not known.

Fire, fanned by winds of 21 miles an hour, spread from the ink plant to the L. Fish Furniture Co. warehouse and executive offices, the Milani Foods Co. building and a massive A&P Food Stores warehouse.

Tanks of flammable solvent stored in and around the ink plant were threatened by the blaze but did not catch fire.

More than 450 firemen brought the fires under control about six hours after the explosion.

Fire Commissioner Robert J. Quinn said losses would run "well into the millions of dollars."

The explosion was felt as far away as seven miles and broke windows in a three-mile area.

Electric power in the area was shut off for most of Sunday and city health officials were sent in to check the condition of refrigerated foodstuffs in food storage warehouses in the blast area.

day as he stood in the huge shop where he and his staff work.

Kinsler, a tall, gray-haired veteran of 30 years with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration or its predecessors, said he had decided from the outset he would find a way to erect a shield without requiring a space walk by the crew. Half a dozen other methods suggested by others all necessitated a space walk.

"So I went downtown in Houston and bought four telescoping fiberglass fishing rods, would you believe, and arranged them in a little square array," he said.

Kinsler devised a spring arrangement so the rods folded up like umbrella ribs, and the furling parasol could be poked out through a Skylab airlock by the crew inside. Once extended, the poles sprang open and spread out the fabric.

When the astronauts deployed the real thing Saturday night, two of the poles moved a little sluggishly and the material wrinkled in some spots instead of lying smooth and flat.

"I don't feel that was a great failure," Kinsler said. "Even if 10 or 20 per cent of it doesn't deploy exactly right the difference it makes is practically negligible."

Actual manufacture of the parasol was done by several NASA contractors and subcontractors in addition to Kinsler's shop. They completed in a week a job which Kinsler said normally would have taken three to six months.

A NASA official said the cost had not been estimated.

Tree Prevented 1,000-Foot Fall

LINCOLN CITY, Ore. (AP) — A tree has saved a 22-year-old man from a 1,000-foot fall from Cascade Head on the Oregon coast.

William Mosher of Salem, Ore., was climbing the rock outcropping in tennis shoes with three companions on Sunday. He slipped and slid 150 feet before the tree — the only one nearby — snared him.

Mosher was examined and released by North Lincoln Hospital in Lincoln City.

Soviet Pilot Crashes In Germany; Seeks Asylum

BONN, Germany (AP) - A 22-year-old Soviet pilot whose jet crashed Sunday in West Germany has applied for political asylum, West German officials said today.

The Soviet air force lieutenant, whose name was not disclosed, signed an application for political asylum with the Office for Recognition of Foreign Refugees, authorities said.

The office maintains a refugee camp in the Bavarian town of Zirndorf. Officials there confirmed receipt of the application, but said the pilot was not at the camp.

The pilot told interrogators he was defecting to the West after parachuting to safety near the East German border. Additional details were expected to be released later.

Two high-ranking Soviet officers and an official from the Soviet Embassy in Bonn visited the wreck site outside Brunswick to direct recovery of the burned-out fuselage, newsmen at the scene reported. The site was sealed off by West German soldiers.

The pilot's single-engine SU7 jet crashed and burned Sunday in a field near Klein-Schoepstedt, about 25 miles inside West Germany.

The Russian was first taken to a British military installation and then to a West German base for questioning.

In another border incident, a 20-year-old East German soldier crossed the mined border Sunday night and asked for political asylum, customs officials in Brunswick reported.

The last reported defection by a Soviet soldier to West Germany was in September 1969, when a 19-year-old Russian from a unit stationed in East Germany crossed the border near Helmstedt and asked for asylum. He said he was disillusioned with the military and political climate in Russia.

The last known Soviet crash in a western part of Germany occurred not in West Germany but in West Berlin. It was in 1966, when two Soviet pilots were killed in a YAK28 that crashed near Spandau Prison, where Rudolf Hess is held.

The crash Sunday occurred shortly before noon in bright sunshine. Witnesses reported the pilot ejected at an altitude of only about 300 feet, but a British Royal Air Force doctor who examined him pronounced him "fully fit."

An RAF spokesman said the plane apparently had been in West German airspace "only a few seconds" and had not been intercepted.

Witnesses reported it crashed into a field about 500 yards from a highway and burst into flames.

Travelers near the border reported seeing another plane crash during the weekend near the East German city of Magdeburg. West German news reports said it was a MIG fighter and both crewmen were killed.

End Smallpox Vaccinations

RALEIGH (AP) — Smallpox vaccination scars on the arm may soon be a thing of the past for North Carolina children.

The state Board of Health announced Saturday it had acted under a 1973 law passed by the General Assembly to remove smallpox vaccination from the list of immunizations required for children.

The action followed recommendations by the U.S. Public Health Service, the American Academy of Pediatrics, and other medical groups that routine smallpox vaccination for children be discontinued in the United States.

According to Dr. J. N. McCormack, head of the Health Board's Communicable Disease Section, there has been a worldwide decline in the incidence of smallpox and there has not been a case reported in the state since 1948.

Actually, he said, the risk of dying from smallpox in the United States is far less than that of dying from vaccine complications.

The doctor said that persons traveling to countries where smallpox still exists should get themselves vaccinated.

Senator Blames Power-Madness

HEIDELBERG, Germany (AP) — Sen. Edward Brooke says unprecedented power led to the Watergate scandal and that power was precipitated by the American people who "have created almost a god-king in the office of the presidency."

"I think his (President Nixon's) aides had almost unprecedented power ... and have come to think that the President's will, the embodiment of the national will, were one and the same thing," Brooke said Sunday. "Therefore they can do anything to protect and, in this instance, to re-elect the President."

The Massachusetts Republican visited Heidelberg before speaking at the commencement of Boston University's overseas graduate program in nearby Mannheim.

Demos Challenge Claims Nat'l Security Involved

By BROOKS JACKSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Leaders of the Democratic party and of the Senate Armed Services Committee are challenging President Nixon's contention that Watergate investigations threaten to expose sensitive national secrets.

And the nonpartisan Fair Campaign Practices Committee says the campaign tactics of Nixon's re-election committee set a 20-year low in dirty politics.

In San Jose, Costa Rica, meanwhile, an associate of financier Robert L. Vesco said he and Vesco would like to talk with special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox about "a missing link" in the case.

The associate, Canadian businessman Norman P. LeBlanc, would not elaborate on the link in talking with newsmen Sunday. But he said he and Vesco would like to meet Cox somewhere to tell their story.

Cox was not available for comment.

Vesco, former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell and former Commerce Secretary Maurice H. Stans have been indicted in connection with an unreported $200,000 contribution to the 1972 Nixon campaign.

National Guard Recruiters Are Staying Behind

Not everybody in the 514th Military Police Co. or Det. One, 213th Military Police left Greenville on Saturday for summer camp. Recruiters for these units are remaining here for their summer training.

Local recruiters reported that Operation Stayback, a concentrated recruiting effort by recruiters from all over the state, began Saturday and will continue until June 9 for the Greenville Units.

The objective of Operation Stayback, it was noted, is to raise the overall strength of the North Carolina National Guard. It started due, in part, to the success other states have had with the idea.

Persons interested in being a part time military policeman, recruiters announced, should contact Mayo Allen, Mack Tripp, H. C. Edwards or Don Haley at 752-5693 or stop by the Armory at the Pitt-Greenville Airport between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Pembroke Needs $9,000 Fast

PEMBROKE, N.C. (AP)—The Pembroke State University baseball team, which won the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics (NAIA) Area 7 tournament, needs to raise $5,000 by noon Tuesday to make a trip to the NAIA World Series at Phoenix, Ariz.

A spokesman said the NAIA provides approximately $1,000 toward expenses. The team plans to depart Wednesday morning for the eight team tournament which begins Thursday.

Checks or money orders may be made payable to the university and mailed to: Pembroke State University, Athletic Dept., Pembroke, N.C.

N.C. Lutherans Gather Friday

HICKORY, N.C. (AP)—A total of 205 Lutheran church congregations around the state are expected to be represented at the 169th meeting of the North Carolina Synod of the Lutheran Church in America which begins Friday at Lenoir Rhyne College.

More than 500 lay delegates and ministers are expected to attend the meeting, which ends Sunday with the ordination of 11 men as Lutheran ministers.

Other highlights of the three-day meeting include discussion groups Friday night and elections for nearly 50 synod positions.

DENY REPORT

BALTIMORE, Md. (AP)—The Rev. Philip Berrigan has denied a Time magazine report that he and Sister Elizabeth McAlister, a co-defendant in an antiwar conspiracy case, plan to marry this week.

LeBlanc told newsmen that the Central Intelligence Agency is working clandestinely in Costa Rica to "get rid of" Vesco, LeBlanc and other businessmen connected with Vesco. He did not elaborate.

Chairman Robert S. Strauss of the Democratic National Committee said Sunday that Nixon is attempting to justify a partial Watergate coverup on the pretext of national security. But he predicted the public won't buy it.

"There's a big difference, and I think the public will understand the difference, between national security and Nixon security," Strauss said in a television interview.

Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., acting chairman of the Armed Services Committee, said most of what the panel has uncovered so far has nothing to do with national security. The committee is investigating activities of the Central Intelligence Agency and other links between government security agents and the Watergate wiretapping.

"It seems to me that it's very important that we don't consider the effort to bug the office of the chairman of the Democratic National Committee as an effort to promote or defend national security," Symington said.

Symington spoke on CBS' "Face the Nation," Strauss on NBC's "Meet the Press."

Also Sunday the Fair Campaign Practices Committee, a small, nonpartisan group that investigates complaints of dirty electioneering, issued a five-page report entitled "Dirty Politics—1972."

The committee said other investigations have tied the Nixon campaign not only to wiretapping and burglary, but to theft of documents, forgery, personal vilification, violations of campaign finance laws, spying and a coverup of apparent crimes.

"In nearly 20 years of studying the political process, the Fair Campaign Practices Committee has uncovered no campaign tactics comparable in extent or in potential damage to a free, self-governing society," the report said.

Strauss and Symington were questioned independently about some of President's statements last week. He admitted for the first time that he ordered, on grounds of national security, that the FBI be limited in its investigation of the Watergate bugging.

Nixon also said current Watergate investigations threaten to uncover sensitive information, including details of a 1970 administration plan to gather intelligence through burglary. Nixon had approved the plan for five days, but changed his mind after then FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover objected.

Symington, who was the first to tell the public that such a plan existed, said he hoped it would be declassified soon.

David R. Young, a former National Security Council aide and a member of the White House team connected to the burglary at the office of Ellsberg's psychiatrist, has been granted immunity in exchange for testimony, say Time magazine and The New York Times.

The Times said Young gave a federal jury damaging testimony against former top Nixon aides H.R. Haldeman and John D. Ehrlichman.

Defendants In Fair Labor Suit

Overton's Supermarket, Inc. in Greenville and W. Vance Overton have been named as defendants in a Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) suit filed in the U.S. District Court in Raleigh last week by Secretary of Labor Peter J. Brennan.

The federal complaint alleges that the defendants are in violation of the minimum wage, overtime pay and record-keeping provisions of the FLSA.

Legion Splits Pair Of Opening Games

Greenville's American Legion team opened its season Saturday but lost to North Raleigh, 6-4. They came back yesterday to edge past Oxford, 4-3 in their home opener.

The locals spotted Oxford two runs in the second but rallied for three in the fifth to take the lead. After Oxford tied it up in the seventh, Greenville won it in the bottom of the seventh. Oxford pushed over two in the second with the aid of an extra base hit. Guy Currin reached when his third strike was missed by the Greenville catcher. A wild pitch moved him to second. Ed Ferguson doubled to drive him in with the first run and a pair of wild pitches brought Ferguson around. Greenville threatened in the third. Will Wollard singled and Duncan Carlton followed with a hit. Both were sacrificed up by Rodney Perry. Bill Lee walked to load the bases. That was all Greenville could do as the next batter struck out and the bases.

That was all Greenville could do as the next batter struck out and the third out came on a roller back to the mound. Walks to Currin and Ferguson put two on for Oxford in the fourth but they could not cross the plate. Then in the fifth, Greenville forged ahead with three scores. Charlton and Perry drew passes and a hit by Lee scored Charlton. Stanley Cobb put Post 39 in front as he drove in Perry and Lee with a double.

Blackley doubled to lead off the Oxford sixth but the next three batters went down without bring him around. Oxford came up with a run in the seventh to tie the game. Dave Satterwhite reached on an error and was sacrificed to second by Joe Satterwhite. He went to third on Currin's infield hit and scored on a bunt by Randy Newton. Greenville matched it in the bottom of the frame to get the lead back and the win. Perry got on by a two-base error and Lee brought him home with a triple. Oxford almost scored in the eighth as Eugene Hargrove got a one out pass to first and Ferguson moved him around to third on a hit. Jerome Averette singled but Currin was cut down at the plate.

In the last chance for Oxford in the ninth, Craig Currin walked and stole second and went to third on an out but a strike out ended the game. Lee and Donnie Haddock led the Greenville team with two hits each. Craig Currin and Ferguson had two each for Oxford.

Wollard was the winning pitcher, striking out ten, walking seven, and giving up seven hits. In Saturday's game in Raleigh

Greenville scored first with two in the top of the first. Charlton singled and Lee got a hit to put Charlton on third. Cobb singled to drive in Charlton and an error on the relay to home let Lee score. Raleigh, however, came back to take the lead in the bottom of the frame with three tallies. Reaugh walked and Dickerson singled. Rackely beat out a grounder and a walk to Williams forced in Reaugh. A ground out scored Rackley and on error in Jones' ground ball scored Williams. Greenville tied it up in the third as Lee walked and scored on a triple by Cobb. That was as close as Greenville could get, however, as

Raleigh came up with three in the fourth to take the lead for good. Warrick reached on an error and Heinlein walked. Shuck singled to drive in Warrick. Reaugh reached on a fielder's choice that failed to get anyone out. That moved Heinlein to third. An error as Reaugh tried to steal second scored Heinlein and moved

Reaugh to third. Dickerson drove him in with a single. Greenville's last run came across in the seventh. Robert Brinkley reached on a fielder's choice. Lee walked and Cobb loaded the bases with a hit. Perry singled to score Brinkley. Cobb led the hitting with three and Lee and Perry had two each. Dickerson had two for Raleigh. Aaron Is Not Only Chasing Ruth's Record

By KEN RAPPOPORT Associated Press Sports Writer Hank Aaron has been chasing Babe Ruth so long, some people forget that he's also chasing Stan Musial.

While Ruth's home run mark of 714 is prominent in most people's minds, Aaron is also zeroing in on Stan The Man's record of 1,377 extra-base hits.

The Atlanta slugger gained ground on both with a home run Sunday in the Braves' 5-4 loss to the St. Louis Cardinals. The blast gave him 686 career homers and 1,356 extra base hits, incidentally tying him with Ruth for second place.

In the other National League games, the Houston Astros defeated the Pittsburgh Pirates 6-2; the Chicago Cubs blanked the Cincinnati Reds 6-0; the Los Angeles Dodgers turned back the New York Mets 2-1; the San Francisco Giants checked the Montreal Expos 6-3 and the Philadelphia Phillies beat the San Diego Padres in a doubleheader, 4-3 and 6-4.

In the American League, the Texas Rangers defeated the New York Yankees 5-2 and the Kansas City Royals trounced the Boston Red Sox 13-3 in the opener of a doubleheader before losing the nightcap, 7-2. Four AL games were postponed by rain—Oakland at Detroit, Cleveland at Chicago, California at Milwaukee and Baltimore at Minnesota.

Lee May backed the five-hit pitching of Dave Roberts with a home run, double, single and three RBI, leading Houston over Pittsburgh.

Ferguson Jenkins pitched a three-hitter and Don Kessinger knocked in three runs, leading Chicago over Cincinnati in a game played in the rain. Jenkins pitched perfect baseball through four innings, until a 50-minute rain delay. Johnny Bench then broke up Jenkins' no-hit bid with a single leading off the fifth after the teams resumed play.

Ron Bryant scattered eight hits and drove in the first two runs with a single, pacing San Francisco over Montreal. Bryant blanked the Expos on two hits through the first five innings before yielding a run in the sixth. Clyde Mashore drove in the Expos' final two runs with a pinch homer in the ninth.

Joe Ferguson hit his 11th home run and second in as many days, and Don Sutton scattered seven hits and drove in a run with a sacrifice fly, leading Los Angeles over New York. Philadelphia converted three San Diego errors into three runs in the first inning and went on to beat San Diego in the opener of their doubleheader. The Phillies managed only four hits in eight innings off San Diego starter Bill Greif. Del Unser's bases-empty homer in the fifth inning gave Wayne Twitchell a 4-1 lead and was the eventual winning run.

Unser drove in four runs, three with a double in a five-run fourth inning, powering Philadelphia to victory in the second game.

Little Mint, S. Lenoir Pick Up Senior Ruth Wins

Little Mint remained unbeaten after two games and South Lenoir got its second win Saturday in the Senior Babe Ruth League. South Lenoir won 9-2 over the Fire Fighters while Little Mint took the second game, 6-0 from Taff Office.

South Lenoir got all it needed in the first inning. Glenn Wood singled to lead off the game and walks to Braxton Newman and Don Whaley loaded them up. Kenny Baker got a hit to drive in Wood and a single by Beet Lee scored Newman and Whaley for a 3-0 edge.

The Fire Fighters put Fred Lemmond on in the bottom of the frame with a walk. He moved around on a steal and a wild pitch but failed to get any farther.

Three more came over for South Lenoir in the second. Roman Justice singled and Wood walked. Whaley reached on an error that let Justice score and Wood go to third after they had advanced on a ground out. Baker singled in Wood and a hit by Tuffy Baker brought Whaley over. Greenville threatened again in the second as Al Salisbury walked and Mike McCormick got a hit but neither could score. South Lenoir added three more runs in the top of the fifth to put the game out of reach. With two out, Lee singled and Lynn Hill reached on an error that sent Lee to third. After Hill stole second, Justice got a base hit to right scoring Lee. An error on the throw to the plate let Hill score and Justice pulled up at third. He scored on a double by Lynn Grady.

The Fire Fighters kept from being shut out, getting two in the fifth. Lemmond walked and Keith Gould did likewise. Lemmond was picked off going to third on Danny Norris' grounder. The error on the play allowed Gould to come around to score and Norris to go to second. Norris went to third on an out and scored on a passed ball.

Justice, Lee, and Kenny Baker had two hits each for South Lenoir. In the afterpiece, Little Mint jumped out into the lead in the bottom of the first with a trio of scores. Ed Wells slapped a one-out double and Bobby Wooten followed with another double to score him. Barry Johnson then put the cap on the extra-base inning with a home run that also scored Wooten. Little Mint made it 4-0 in the third. Jeff Cobb singled and stole second. An error on the play let him move up to third. Wells cracked out a hit to center to drive in Cobb. The last two runs for Little Mint came over in the sixth. Tony Oakley doubled but was tagged out when Bobby Daniels hit into a fielder's choice. Daniels stole second and Eddie Horne was safe on an error. Another error let both runners come around to score. Little Mint pitcher, Ed Wells limited Taff to two hits and led his team with three.

Padres Sold For Record 12 Million $$$

SAN DIEGO (AP) — "When the fans hear about this, we won't be playing in front of nobody," said Nate Colbert.

The slugging San Diego first baseman's remark reflected the surprise and disappointment of his teammates that Padre owner C. Arnholt Smith had signed a mid-season letter of intent to sell the club for removal to Washington, D.C. in 1974.

"A lot of exciting baseball is still to be played here," said club Vice President Peter Bavasi trying to sound cheerful. "I hope lots of folks will come out to watch."

That hope was plainly optimistic, however, after Smith placed the club in lame-duck status in San Diego by announcing sale of the team May 5 for a record $12 million to a group of Washington, D.C., businessmen headed by Joseph Danzansky.

Smith reportedly accepted a down payment of $100,000 and Marvin Willig, one of Danzansky's partner, reportedly has the canceled check in his possession.

Smith acknowledged the Padres' awkward position when asked why he would sign the letter of intent when four months remain in the 1973 season.

"The opportunity came along now," he replied. "The people in Washington need time to get their deal together."

Padre officials blamed National League club owners for placing the team in an impossible position.

"I blame the National League, which forced us to pay $10 million for an expansion franchise," Bavasi said. "We'd be in good shape if we had paid the American League expansion price of around $6 million.

"We've shown we can break even on attendance of 700,000."

Bavasi said team resources were drained by interest payments on the $10 million loan secured to purchase the team. Annual interest on the loan is around $700,000. He said the team had shown small profit last season, but not enough to pay that figure.

The move left uncertain the fate of Buzzie and Peter Bavasi as well as Manager Don Zimmer, who reportedly has had a sometimes strained relationship with his players.

"If we're going, I hope I go," Zimmer said.

Buzzie Bavasi, the club president who served a long tenure with the Los Angeles Dodgers before joining the San Diego team, said he has not decided if he will accompany the team to Washington.

"I just don't know yet," he

Baker Wins Second World 600 Stock Race

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — "Baby, I may never lead another race again until after 200 laps are gone," said Buddy Baker, who saved his heavy-footed action for the end Sunday to capture his second straight World 600 stock car race.

"I learned something today," said the 32-year-old Dodge driver. "I think I had a fresher car at the end."

Baker, in his 14th year on the circuit, thus ended at four the superspeedway victory streak of David Pearson in the Wood Brothers Mercury.

Baker, who took command in the final 200 miles of the 600-mile event, temporarily lost his lead to Pearson during a pit stop under the caution flag 21 laps from the finish.

The hometown driver, becoming the World 600's first three-time winner, outmaneuvered Pearson in the corners after taking on four new tires and recaptured the lead with 16 laps to go.

"I've always been one to think the only way for me to win was to be out front and running as hard as the car would go," Baker added.

Rangers Break Losing Binge

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON Associated Press Sports Writer Manager Whitey Herzog of the Texas Rangers hasn't been having much luck choosing his relief pitchers lately, so it stood to reason that umpire John Rice couldn't do any worse.

As things turned out, Rice made the right move—for the Rangers—when he wig-wagged to the bullpen in the seventh inning Sunday. The result was 2 1-3 innings of one-hit relief by Bill Gogolewski that preserved Sonny Siebert's 5-2 victory over the New York Yankees and enabled the Rangers to break an eight-game losing streak.

In the only other American League action on a generally rainy Sunday, Kansas City and Boston split a doubleheader, the Royals romping 13-3 in the opener and the Red Sox rebounding in the nightcap 7-2. The Oakland-Detroit, Cleveland-Chicago, Baltimore-Minnesota and California-Milwaukee games were rained out.

In the National League, San Francisco downed Montreal 6-3, Houston trimmed Pittsburgh 6-2, Los Angeles edged New York 2-1, Chicago whipped Cincinnati 6-0, St. Louis nipped Atlanta 5-4 and Philadelphia took two from San Diego 4-3 and 6-4.

John Mayberry singled twice, doubled twice and knocked in five runs, and Ed Kirkpatrick and Gail Hopkins homered, leading Kansas City over Boston in their first game. The Royals put the game away with a five-run burst against Luis Tiant in the third.

Boston's John Curtis checked the Royals on seven hits in the nightcap and Carl Yastrzemski hit a two-run single when the Red Sox scored three times in the third inning. Orlando Cepeda capped the inning with a run-scoring single and Boston added three runs in the fifth on RBI hits by Rico Petrocelli, Luis Aparicio and John Kennedy.

Homer Came At Wrong Time

By PAUL LeBAR Associated Press Sports Writer ST. LOUIS (AP) — Hammerin' Hank Aaron rapped his 688th homer Sunday for the Atlanta Braves, but the wallop came at the wrong time.

The 39-year-old slugger, who also singled in a run, was stopped when it counted and the Braves wound up 5-4 losers to the St. Louis Cardinals.

Aaron, who totaled three runs batted in, tied Babe Ruth for second on baseball's all-time list of extra base hits with 1,356 via the homer, a two-run sock.

He reached the Cards' Reggie Cleveland, 4-4, for a score-tying single in the fourth but was unable to solve reliever Diego

Segui's fork ball in the eighth.

Segui entered after Rich Folkers spelled Cleveland and yielded a one-out single to Chuck Goggin and walked Darrell Evans.

Aaron maliciously fouled off a slider and took the count to 22 before popping up harmlessly foul to first baseman Tim McCarver.

Segui also induced Mike Lum to pop up to end the inning, then worked past singles by John Oates and Marty Perez in the ninth.

The Cardinals' victory, their fifth in a row, was achieved through 13 hits abetted by three Braves errors leading to as many unearned runs.

Aaron's homer lifted Atlanta to a 2-0 lead at the outset, but the Cards scored two unearned runs and took a 3-2 lead in the second.

Mike Lum's double scoring Aaron shot the Braves on top by 4-3 in the fourth, but Lum's error on a double play try let St. Louis rally in the fifth.

"They had 12 hits in the first five innings, but five of them were after we fouled up," commented Braves Manager Eddie Mathews.

"It's not the fault of our pitcher they're getting five outs and we're dropping the ball," he added.

Mathews brightened, however, in considering the Aaron blast, a 240-foot line drive banging off a colonnade above the left field wall.

"We didn't even take batting practice," the manager marveled. "He didn't do anything but walk off the bench and hit the home run."

The Aaron shot, his 13th of the season, left him 26 behind Ruth's career total of 714. In extra base hits, he and Ruth trail only Stan Musial's total of 1,377.

Nicklaus Only Wanted To Win

By BOB GREEN Associated Press Golf Writer ATLANTA (AP) — "My only objective," Jack Nicklaus said, "was to win the golf tournament."

He did, making the $150,000 Atlanta Golf Classic his fourth title of the year and regaining his customary spot atop the money winning list.

Nicklaus, who won the Tournament of Champions five weeks ago in his last previous start, virtually won this one on his first three rounds of 67, 66 and 66. In Sunday's final effort over the 6,883-yard Atlanta Country Club course, he could do no better than a one-over-par 73 for a 272 total, a very respectable 16-under-par.

Tom Weiskopf was the only one in the field able to keep close to Nicklaus during the first three rounds. And it was Weiskopf who put the pressure on over the finishing holes.

Weiskopf finished with a 69 for 274, a score good enough to win any previous Atlanta Classic.

His son Peter begged time to consider his decision.

Congress has threatened attacks on baseball's antitrust exemption unless the big leagues return to the nation's capital.

Sale of the club will not become final until the Washington group fulfills Smith's terms of $12 million and until the shift is approved by the National League.

Smith, the principal owner of the team, sold the franchise May 5 in San Diego to a group headed by Joseph Dan Zansky, Smith confirmed. A down payment of $100,000 has reportedly been accepted by Smith and Marvin Willig, one of Dan Zansky's partners, has the canceled check in his possession.

Smith acknowledged the Padres' sale when asked why he would sign the letter of intent when four months remain in the 1973 season and the team must continue on a lame-duck basis. "Because the opportunity came along now," he replied, adding "the people in Washington need time to get their deal together."

Padres' President E. J. "Buzzie" Bavasi blamed the National League club owners for the Padres' losing season.

"I blame the National League, which forced us to pay $10 million for an expansion franchise," Bavasi said. "We'd be in good shape if we had paid the American League expansion price around $6 million."

"We have shown we can break even on attendance of 700,000."

The Padres had small profit last season but Smith said he has been drained by interest payments on the $10 million loan he secured to purchase the franchise. He had expected to pay off the loan from baseball profits. Annual interest on the $10 million is around $700,000, the owner said.

Paid attendance for 26 home dates in San Diego Stadium this year is 249,284, compared with 263,242 in the same period last year.

Smith said there is nothing in the agreement with the Dan Zansky group which gives San Diego interests an opportunity to purchase the franchise and keep it in this city. However, this remains a remote possibility, Smith said.

"I'd be the happiest man in San Diego if the team were to remain here," said Smith.

"But it seems unlikely. How can someone else make it work if we couldn't. The mathematics just aren't there." Sale of the club will not become final until the Washington people fulfill Smith's terms of $12 million and until the shift is approved by the National League.

Unrealistic Cost Estimates In Defense Contracts

By JEAN HELLER
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — If American industry can get American men to the moon and back with relatively few mishaps along the way, why can't American industry perform that reliably for the Defense Department?

In both the space and defense programs, industry has been dealing with new technologies put to new uses. And the space program probably was the more difficult of the two. Yet it experienced minimal cost overruns and equipment failures.

"One reason our cost overruns always look so bad by comparison is that we always make our first program cost estimates unrealistically low," said David Packard, former deputy secretary of defense. "The space people have always been more realistic with the Congress about what a program was going to cost. "The story I've heard is that someone made an estimate of what the Apollo program was going to cost and then to be safe they asked Congress for twice that much. You don't get overruns that way."

There is another major difference: the way the hardware is produced for the space program.

"Our hardware is built by the ones and twos," George Vecchietti, director of procurement for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, said in an interview. "So almost everything we get is, in effect, hand made. We don't have a production line that has to turn out 25 destroyers or 1,000 aircraft.

"If the Defense Department had the time and money to have every piece of equipment they bought put together by hand; they might not have any more failures than we've had. But they can't afford that luxury."

Given the limitations on military procurement, what, if any, alternatives are there to the system which has created so many problems?

Interviews with defense officials, critics and contractors have produced these ideas:

—Fly before you buy. This is the Melvin Laird-David Packard concept of having one or more companies build prototype equipment that can be tried, tested and improved upon before huge sums of money are committed to full-scale production.

—Give contractors incentives to keep costs down in the planning and development stages of a project, but allow them to recoup their costs. After development, when it is reasonable for a contractor to determine what production is going to give, give him a fixed-price contract with the understanding that he will have to absorb all losses himself, even if it means bankruptcy.

—Speed up the procurement process so there is not such a time lag between the design stage, the development stage and production. In those gaps, which can range from several months to years, a contractor must lay off the bulk of the project's work force because there isn't enough work to keep them busy or pay their salaries. Later, trying to round them up again is an expensive, time-consuming, highly inefficient way to operate.

—Design to cost. Under this concept, the Defense Department has a contractor build the best piece of hardware possible for a predetermined amount of money. For example, for $100 million the Army could buy 100 simple helicopters or 50 complex helicopters, whichever it preferred, as long as the cost didn't exceed $100 million.

A number of contractors feel that, given the shrinking volume of defense and space work available, their industry is due for a shakeout. They feel some of their own numbers must go out of business, either by merger or bankruptcy, but that those remaining will be able to give the Defense Department more for each dollar spent.

Industry people say they feel strongest about getting a change in contracting procedures.

"Under total package, fixed-price contracts, you would have seen a couple of bankrupt companies if they had been forced to adhere to their contract," said Robert Anderson, president of Rockwell International. "There's no way you can make a firm price commitment on something you're not going to be building for another five years."

"If you have cost and incentive contracts in the early research and development stages, a contractor has a good foundation for making production price judgments. That's the time for the fixed-price contract. And if a contractor can't judge right at that point, after he's built a few prototypes, he's got no business being in the business."

Among all the suggestions, fly before you buy is the only one formulated into Defense Department policy. The implication of FBYB is that two or more companies will get research and development contracts to produce prototypes of a new piece of equipment, and that after tests of all the prototypes, the company with the best one will get the production contract.

To date, FBYB has been used only once, in a fly-off between Fairchild Industries and the Northrop Corp., both of which built prototypes of the AX, the Air Force plane designed to provide close air support of ground troops. Fairchild won the production contract.

On at least two other airplanes, the B1 bomber being built by Rockwell International and the F15 Eagle jet fighter being built by McDonnell Douglas, there were no multi-company flyoffs. Defense Department officials say the FBYB policy was used, but critics say otherwise.

"I'm sure fly before you buy would be a good policy if they'd ever try it," said Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis. "But the Defense Department makes commitments to certain contractors in advance and when they do that, the policy is a charade."

"The policy statement implies that the service involved can fully test and evaluate finished airplanes before committing itself to buying a whole production lot. That implies the service will have prototypes for more than one company in the test.

"If you lock yourself in with only one company getting a research and development contract, you're indulging in make believe to say if you don't like their prototype you won't go into production."

You'll have invested too much not to go into production."

The F15 is a case in point. In February, the Air Force went ahead with its first order of 30 F15s despite the fact that the aircraft's engines have failed to pass several ground tests.

Asked why congressional appropriations committees don't force the Defense Department to use FBYB on pain of having its appropriations cut back Proxmire said, "We've tried, but we can't get members of Congress to vote to do it."

Packard disputes Proxmire's contention that the Defense Department isn't enforcing the policy and the senator's contention that more than one company must be involved in the prototyping.

"You can't prototype an aircraft carrier," he said. "They're so expensive you couldn't afford to have more than one company involved. The B1 bomber is the same way. A bomber is too big and expensive for that kind of treatment."

One thing all sides agree on is that some major changes are going to have to be made in defense procurement procedures, or the Pentagon will be forever doomed to buying things in the manner described by Gordon Rule, a top civilian procurement specialist for the Navy and a critic of procurement policies:

"We never seem to have time to do things right the first time. But we always seem to have time to do them over."

Vesco And Friend Say 'Missing Link' In Hand

By WILLIAM F. NICHOLSON
Associated Press Writer
SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — A Canadian associate of fugitive financier Robert L. Vesco claims they have a "missing link" in the Watergate investigation.

Norman P. LeBlanc, speaking at a news conference Sunday, invited special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox or his assistants to meet "somewhere, someplace" with him and Vesco.

LeBlanc did not reveal anything about their information on the Watergate case but said they would gladly tell their story to Cox and show him documents.

LeBlanc said he would not go to the United States to meet with Cox or his deputies unless promised immunity from prosecution. Vesco said the same thing last week.

Vesco is under indictment along with former Atty. Gen. John Mitchell and former Commerce Secretary Maurice Stans in connection with an unreported $200,000 donation to President Nixon's 1972 re-election campaign. Mitchell and Stans both have pleaded innocent, but Vesco did not appear in New York to answer the charges.

Vesco and LeBlanc, both of whom have been living in Costa Rica, are among 41 persons named in a Securities and Exchange Commission suit charging them with bilking $224 million from Investors Overseas Services, the Swiss-based mutual funds empire built up by Bernard Cornfeld.

LeBlanc charged that the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency was harassing him, Vesco and others associated with them who live in Costa Rica. He hinted that this was an attempt to cover up more serious incidents surrounding Watergate and SEC matters.

LeBlanc claimed harassment was directed by Peter Johnson, the political officer of the U. S. Embassy in San Jose.

"Peter Johnson ... is a CIA man whose sole job is to harass and get rid of Vesco, LeBlanc and several others of us," LeBlanc asserted. "Johnson is the head of the CIA in Costa Rica. I found out about this yesterday from my own sources in the United States."

LeBlanc said he had received threatening telephone calls and had been photographed and followed in the street.

The 'Worry Clinic'

Quiz Built Up Bible Interest

Phoebe is the type of alert teacher who can zoom enrollment. And she doubled the size of her Sunday School class within 3 months, just by using the "objective quiz formats" outlined below. Send for that Bible booklet and you can do likewise!

By GEORGE W. CRANE
Ph.D., M.D.
CASE X-518: Phoebe J., aged 18, teaches a Sunday School class.

"Dr. Crane," she began, "my students are 7th and 8th graders and a live wire group."

"But most of them know very little about the Bible!"

"In fact, we are now memorizing the books of the Old Testament and of the New Testament."

"So what can I do to stimulate more eager reading of the Bible?"

Teaching Strategy
A superb teacher must be a dramatist and thus "package" new ideas in an interesting manner.

This may involve offering them clever little memory devices.

"How many books comprise the Bible?" you may inquire.

Even if they can't remember, show them how they can easily derive the correct answer.

Remind them that there are two large divisions to the Bible, namely, the "Old Testament" and the "New Testament."

Let your pupils count the number of letters in the words "Old" and "Testament."

The result is 3 and 9, so put them together and make 39, which is the number of books in the "Old Testament."

Then, to find the number of books in the "New Testament," merely multiply 3 times the 9 and you'll get 27, making a total of 66.

This is called the "derivative" vs. the "rote" method of recalling important facts.

And use the 4-answer type of typewritten test, so the students will be prompted to guess, even if they don't know the answers, as:

The Bible "hippie," noted for his long hair, was: ABRAHAM - DAVID - ABSALOM - DANIEL
The prophet who was mocked for being baldheaded, was: SAMUEL - ELISHA - JONAH - JEREMIAH

The wife who scared her husband into a heart attack, was: ABIGAIL - SARAH - ESTHER - RACHEL
The Bible queen who started the Women's Lib Movement, was JEZEBEL - MICHAL - HERODIAS - VASHTY

The only leper to say "Thank you," of the 10 that Jesus healed, was a: GREEK - HEBREW - SAMARITAN - EGYPTIAN
Since people enjoy participating, delegate a couple of your pupils each week to develop 10 of these 4-answer quiz questions.

Then let them use carbon paper and typewrite enough copies to cover the membership of your class.

Since competition adds zest (and fills athletic stadiums), you can divide your class into 2 equal groups and then see which team scores the highest total points right after a month's weekly tests.

Let the losing team then entertain the winner at a wienie bake, swim party or picnic.

Contests thus help increase attendance and these 4-answer types of test encourage even the strangers to participate.

For even if they come from non-religious homes, they will be tempted to guess, hoping to get a few answers right, just by chance.

For further examples of the many types of quiz formats, send for my booklet "How to Stimulate Bible Reading," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 cents.

Always write to Dr. Crane in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.

Giant Statue Of Moby Dick For New Bedford

NEW BEDFORD, Mass. (AP)—A giant statue of Moby Dick, rising from a pool of turbulent water, will be the striking symbol in a new downtown shopping mall that will reflect New Bedford's whaling tradition.

The 50-foot-long sculpture, made of foam concrete, will be the feature of White Whale Court, one of four court areas in the enclosed $15 million Melville Mall.

Other courts in the two-level shopping complex will feature a harpoon sculpture, a whale-spout fountain and a lighthouse with a circular stairway.

Wood planks, overlapped in the manner of a whaleboat's lapstrake hull, will be used on interior paneling to enhance the maritime atmosphere.

Construction of the two theaters and 90 stores in the urban-renewal project is scheduled to begin this fall. Completion is expected in the fall of 1975.

BRIDGE QUIZ ANSWERS

Q. 1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

AK5 ♠ 753 ♦ Q954 ♣ K753

The bidding has proceeded:

West North East South

1 ♦ Dbble. Pass ?

What do you bid?

A.—There is a fair prospect for going places with this hand, and a response is recommended which is apt to keep partner interested, namely one no trump.

Q. 2—You are South, vulnerable, have 60 part score, and hold:

AKJ95 ♠ 7 ♦ AQ1083 ♣ A109

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East

1 ♠ Pass 1 ♥ Pass

What do you bid now?

A. Partner has made an urgent plea for slam. Two a bid of three hearts would have been over score and thus a slam try, partner has made it more emphatic by bidding four, conveying the suggestion that his heart suit is self-sustaining. You should cooperate by bidding five clubs, denoting possession of the ace, and permit partner to fix the final contract.

Q. 3 — East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:

AK86 ♠ KJ76 ♦ 53 ♣ KJ63

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South

1 ♦ 1 ♥ ?

What action do you take?

A.—Pass. You haven't enough for a penalty double, and your hand is not good enough for a free bid of one no trump, which denotes a good hand.

Q. 4—Partner has opened with one club and you hold:

AK852 ♠ 8653 ♦ Q75 ♣ A4

What is your response?

A.—One diamond. We try to avoid responses in major suits with such unbidable holdings, particularly when an alternate response is available. The diamond bid affords partner the opportunity to bid one heart or one spade.

Q. 5 — Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

AKJ974 ♦ QJ863 ♣ KQ9

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West

1 ♠ Pass 1 ♥ 1 ♠

2 ♥ 2 ♠ 3 ♠ Pass

4 ♥ Pass ?

What action do you take?

A.—Five clubs. You have not yet done full justice to the holding in view of the fact that your partner opened the bidding and made a free rebid at the level of two. When you now show club support, after having previously announced first round control in spades, partner may be in position to bid a slam.

Q. 6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

AKQ984 ♠ 93 ♦ KJ4 ♣ AJ8

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East

1 ♠ Pass 2 ♥ Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Two spades. This hand is not quite strong enough for a rebid of two no trump. Such a rebid should be based on a high-card holding of at least 15 points.

Q. 7—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

AK6 ♠ KQ1094 ♦ AQ63 ♣ AK6

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East

1 ♥ 1 ♠ 2 ♠ 2 ♠

What do you bid now?

A.—Three diamonds. True enough, bigger things are in sight and on the surface this might appear to be an underbid, but there should be no hurry. Since you are making a free rebid in the face of partner's free response, there is not the remotest danger that the bidding will drop. More specific information may be forthcoming at a lower level as a result of your mild sounding rebid.

Q. 8—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

AK109 ♠ KQ842 ♦ Q84 ♣ AJ5

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West

1 ♠ Pass 2 ♥ Pass

2 ♠ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—To persist further with no trump on such a doubtful diamond stopper would not be discreet. There is a great likelihood that partner has a hand containing six spades and only four clubs. The suggested call, therefore, is a return to three spades.

so that you can put a new plan to work properly. Make arrangements for a trip you want to take in the summer. Don't forget small items when adding up the cost.

Greek Church Plans Build Big Complex

By PAUL ANAST ATHENS (AP) — The orthodox church of Greece whose reputed wealth and privileges have earned it the title of the "Mini-Vatican," has set as its primary goal the construction of ultramodern headquarters almost in the heart of the Greek capital, to house its hierarchy and growing administration. The controversial complex, which has drawn the ire of conservationists, is to be established at Moni Petraki, a religious retreat at the green foot of Mount Lycabettus over-

HOMES FOR AMERICANS

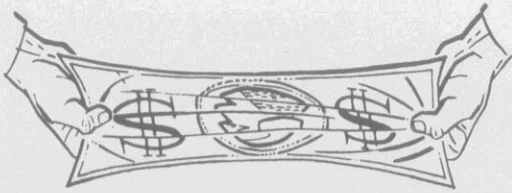

NEW APPROACH TO LIVING — Exterior drama exudes from any view point, in Plan HA775M, and promotes the desire to uncover what lies beyond. The wide, two-story high window set in stone, the pierced solid stone, 23-foot-wide front entrance wall and intricate roof lines all add to the intrigue. The entrance is into an open courtyard and not into the house proper. A visitor in the court will see that a balcony rings the entire yard at the upper level but that privacy is provided by the rooms being set back. The view from here is even more dramatic than from the street. Inside, living, sleeping and service areas are reached by their own halls and separate routes as well as second floor rooms. Architect is Rudolph A. Matern, 89 E. Jericho Turnpike, Mineola, N.Y. 11501. Anyone interested in knowing the cost of the blueprint can write to him. There are 1,591 square feet on the first floor and 687 square feet on the second floor.

Nineteen East Carolina University students have been initiated into the campus chapter of Alpha Kappa Delta honor society in sociology. All are pursuing major or minor degree programs in sociology or anthropology and all have superior academic

Membership in the society is open to students who achieve an overall "B" average in course work and have demonstrated a strong theoretical and research interest in sociology, with honor grades in all sociology courses. The initiates included Valerie Edwards Beaman, of Snow Hill Route 2, and Cecil Lee Willis of 202 N. Elm St., Greenville.

looking Athens. The designers hope to attain a blend of the traditional and the contemporary. The traditional will be expressed in the somber-looking arches of the new ecclesiastical center, in the preservation of the original Byzantine chapel of Aghion Taxiarchon, and in its numerous icons — but in little else. The $4-million, six-story mammoth construction will house 500 permanent administrative officials, a vast conference hall accommodating 1,000 and provided with computerized equipment, air-conditioning and projectors, a great number of rooms for the recreation and study use of staff and guests, and a garage for 200 cars. This complex-to-be has already drawn the protest of four Greek societies for the protection of the environment, and international press comment on the threatened disfigurement of such an archeologically valuable building as the 11th-century Byzantine chapel of Aghion Taxiarchon. Grow Shrimp At Tucson Airport

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — To get the most shrimp for the money, marine biologists are hard at work at high-and-dry Tucson International Airport. The University of Arizona has at the airport an environmental research laboratory where scientists are trying to determine the proper water conditions to maximize the growth of captured shrimp. Carl N. Hodges, director of the university's Environmental Research Laboratory, said scientists hope to find ways to control the marine environment and food supply to grow the most shrimp as fast as possible for food purposes. "One goal of scientists is to raise female shrimp to the stage at which they'll be able to reproduce. As yet, no one has been able to do this to shrimp in captivity."

church in Greece, mostly inherited through the centuries, amounts to 500,000 acres, 50 per cent of which is urban. The rest includes rich agricultural and mineral land, forests and coastal land. As to the total value of the church's holdings, several church officials privately admit that it reaches $500 million. The exploitation of this fortune is the church's recent concern and a corporation has already been set up to this end. The church is reported to be ready to set up a church bank as well. Plans are under way for the exploitation of the church's fertile lands, participation in business, public works, and the establishment of tourist, mineral, forestry and construction companies.

Boy Scout Had A Book Project

FLUSHING, N.Y. (AP) — A 13-year-old Boy Scout, Henri Zajic, has put together a 3,712-book library in a year for the benefit of patients at St. Albans Naval Hospital. Henri, who loves books, decided such a project would be a good one to help him make Eagle Scout. With the blessing of the hospital's commanding officer, he started soliciting books from friends and neighbors, thinking he might get 500. But word spread quickly and Henri had to make numerous collection trips with his shopping cart. Before turning the books over to the hospital, he reconditions them. Books keep trickling in and he has a hundred more to go now.

SENTIMENTAL SEX NEW YORK (UPI) — Are girls more sentimental than boys? Yes, says a youth market authority. A. J. Hackl, president of Herff Jones Co., bases his conclusion on a poll of college students showing that 69.3 per cent of the females owned a high school class ring, compared with 60.8 per cent of the males.

Fast Commuter Trips On Water

By EWART ROUSE Associated Press Writer KEYPORT, N.J. (AP) — A nation that moves on wheels is about to take to the water in what one transportation planner describes as "the first significant breakthrough" toward solution of the growing traffic problem. The splash-off begins in October with a highspeed water commuter service provided by Hydro-Ski of New Jersey, Inc., linking central New Jersey with New York City.

Initially, one craft will transport an estimated 1,500 commuters daily from a pier here, across the Raritan and Manhattan Bays, to Wall Street in downtown Manhattan. Within two years, the company plans to have 12 craft making direct runs to New York from various points along the Jersey Coast — from Atlantic City in the south to Bergen County in the north — and expanding eventually to the Connecticut coast. "The waterways of the metropolitan area should be the Venice of the United States," says Theodore Davi, Hydro-Ski's president. "With our roads congested, what's more natural than taking to the water we have around us — the Hudson and East Rivers, the Manhattan and Raritan Bays? Our boats will make the concept of the Venice very real."

The Keyport-New York-Keyport round trip by boat will cost $7, compared with $4 by bus and $5.25 by train. But the company plans to make the trip in 35 minutes each way, compared with one hour by bus or train. "The fundamental advantage of our service will be time," Davi explains. "We intend to save the commuter 40 to 50 hours of travelling time each month. With commuters, time has got to be worth money."

Joseph Murry, New York City's Director of Aviation, Planning and Development, speculates the proposed service may eventually draw between 25 to 33 per cent of an estimated 45,000 bus and rail commuters from Central Jersey alone, and a total of 250,000 commuters along the "Riverline" of the tri-state area within 10 years. Each craft will measure 57 by 21 feet, with a 28-inch draft. Propulsion will be provided by four Ford marine gas turbine engines with water jet pumps providing a cruising speed of nearly 50 miles an hour.

Farm Tips

By Dr. J. W. Pou
Agricultural Specialist
Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., N.A.

Sunshine and water may be enough for most vegetables, but those vine crops being planted in Tarheel gardens this spring won't do a thing without something extra — a visit by the honeybee.

The only way you're going to get a good set of well-shaped cucumbers, muskmelons, watermelons, pumpkins, squash or gourds in your garden is to have a lot of bee activity.

North Carolina State University extension horticultural specialists explain that vine crops produce male and female flowers at different locations on the same plant. Unlike some other crops, the vine crops are pollinated almost entirely by insects rather than by wind-blown pollen.

With man's encroachment into wooded areas where wild bees make their home, bee numbers have dropped. Some commercial crop farmers compensate for this by bringing in colonies of bees. But most of the thousands of small gardens Tarheel homeowners produce each year are entirely dependent on the wild bees for pollination.

In some cases, wild bees will do an adequate job. But if you aren't getting good production from your vine crops and if you are getting a lot of abnormally shaped fruit, chances are good that poor pollination is a factor. This could mean the local wild bee population could use some help.

It is estimated that one bee per 100 flowers is needed for adequate pollination. In commercial acreage, the experts recommend one to three colonies of bees per acre.

If it is determined there are enough bees present to do the job, then the most important management job the gardener has is to see that the bees are protected. Careful use of insecticides is an important factor.

The critical time for protection against these chemicals is after blooming starts and bees are present in the fields. Spray or granular formulations are less likely to drift than dusts.

It is best to make applications in late afternoon or early evening when bees have left the field or garden.

If farmers follow through on their planting intentions, North Carolina will have its largest soybean crop in history in the ground by mid-summer.

Much of the million plus acres will be planted in unplowed soil.

Twenty-Two Recognized

Twenty-two student women were among the award recipients at East Carolina University's Women's Awareness Week rally last Thursday.

Also cited for achievement were women faculty and staff members and the following women's student groups:

Angel Flight, Women's Residence Council, Panhellenic, Gamma Sigma Sigma, Alpha Kappa Alpha, Women's Basketball Team, Women's Tennis Team, Women's Debate Team, Women's Gymnastics Team, University Marshals, Women Swimmers, Majorettes, Cheerleaders, Sigma Alpha Iota and women in the campus Aor Force ROTC.

Individual student award recipients included 14 North Carolina residents and residents of Maryland, New York, Virginia and Wisconsin.

They were selected on the basis of leadership qualities in campus activities and organizations.

The recipients included Snadra Kay Flye, intermediate education major, daughter of W.P. Flye, 201 Hardee Circle, Greenville.

Warplanes Rake Red Positions

By EDITH LEDERER
Associated Press Writer
PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — U. S. warplanes pounded positions of Cambodian insurgents along the Mekong River southeast of Phnom Penh today as another convoy sailed up the waterway from South Vietnam.

There were six oil tankers, two cargo ships and two ammunition barges in the convoy. It was expected in the Cambodian capital late today.

It is the eighth convoy to run the hazardous river passage in two months. The last one, which arrived on May 17, came under rocket attack, and one freighter was sunk and a tanker badly damaged by fire.

Cambodian intelligence reports say 8,000 enemy soldiers are concentrating around the government's river naval base at Neak Luong, 32 miles southeast of Phnom Penh. It is believed they will try to capture the base, which would further imperil the river convoys that bring the capital much of its fuel, ammunition and other supplies.

Represented At Memphis

Dr. Ronald L. Thiele, Dean of the School of Allied Health and Social Professions, East Carolina University, was the Regional Coordinator for a Workshop held in Memphis, Tenn. May 16-18.

The Workshop was titled "Allied Health Education Systems: Planning for the Future" and was sponsored by the American Association of State Colleges and Universities under a National Institute of Health contract. East Carolina University is a member of the Association and Dr. Leo Jenkins is the Chairman of the Allied Health Committee.

The Workshop was attended by 65 representatives of higher education, health planning and health delivery in the eight states of Health Education and Welfare Region IV. William C. Byrd, Associate Dean of the School of Allied Health and Social Professions and Peter Greenspan, a graduate student in Rehabilitation Counseling attended as participants.

Fescue and bluegrass are most susceptible.

Another of the fungus diseases, brown patch, is favored by hot, wet weather. It appears as irregular brown patches. At first, the grass appears water-soaked. Soon, it turns dark and leaves wilt, then turns brown.

There are a number of leaf diseases to contend with as well as problems such as nematodes, slime mold and algae. But, for the most part, brown patch, the seedling blights and damping-off will be the most troublesome disease problems for green lawn enthusiasts.

Meanwhile, a road convoy of 135 trucks and 100 trailers loaded with rice and fish arrived in Phnom Penh Sunday from Kompong Som, the country's seaport on the south coast. The road from the coast was cut for two days last week, but government forces reopened it Wednesday and another large truck convoys made the 147-mile run on Thursday.

Across the border, the South Vietnamese military command reported a rocket grenade attack on a ferry boat in the Mekong Delta on Sunday and said 11 persons were killed and 34 were wounded. The attack took place in An Xuyen province 180 miles southwest of Saigon.

The attack on the ferry was one of 94 Communist violations of the cease-fire claimed by the South Vietnamese command.

Canada's chief truce observer in South Vietnam, Michel Gauvin, said in an interview that the fighting has increased in some areas of Vietnam since the cease-fire was proclaimed four months ago. He cited the Mekong Delta, in particular, and commented: "What you have is a civil war here, with all the dramatic and unfortunate facets of civil war."

Gauvin said cease-fire violations have been committed by both sides. But he implied that the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese were more to blame, saying: "I believe you find yourself with a party which is on the defensive and a party which is more or less on the offensive."

Hungary and Poland today agreed to discuss Canadian and Indonesian reports of North Vietnamese troop infiltration into South Vietnam. The action averted a Canadian walkout from the International Commission of Control and Supervision.

The commission had been virtually paralyzed for five days by the dispute. Hungary and Poland had refused to consider reports by the Canadians and Indonesians on the interrogation of North Vietnamese prisoners because the Communist members took no part in the interrogation. They argued that the commission could function only on the principle of unanimity.

Beach Landscaping Help In New Book

A new book to assist beach cottage owners and other land users in vegetating and landscaping seacoast areas has just been published by the USDA-Soil Conservation Service, it was announced today by Jesse L. Hicks of Raleigh, who heads the federal conservation agency in North Carolina.

"Seacoast Plants of the Carolinas" was written by Karl E. Graetz of Raleigh, SCS plant materials specialist for North and South Carolina, and in its 226 pages a profusion of plants well suited to the coastal environment are described. It tells land users how to obtain the best results in their planting for dune stabilization and landscaping.

The book, which has 168 actual photographs of beach vegetation ranging from grasses to shrubs and trees, is described by the author as a "scientific book prepared for the layman." Simple language is used to describe the plant materials and techniques for planting and nurturing them—but scientific names are also included.

Although aimed primarily at the Carolinas, orders for the book have already been received from New Jersey to Florida.

The book was published through the cooperation of the Sea Grant Program, School of Public Health, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Beach property owners interested in the data may use copies available through local field and district offices of the Soil Conservation Service, through university and public libraries, or from offices of the sponsoring organizations.

Farm Scene

By LEROY JAMES

Good care is the first step against lawn diseases. Lawn grasses, like most other plants, are often severely damaged by diseases. Now is the season of the year when these problems will begin to be most noticeable.

A beautiful green lawn can become blighted and unsightly almost over night when hit by some of the common diseases. In some cases, it may be ruined. Let's identify some of the most common problems as seedling blights and damping-off diseases.

Late spring and early summer seedlings are most susceptible. Seedlings are stunted, turn yellow and often die, leaving irregularly shaped dead patches in the lawn. Surviving plants are weakened and stands are depleted.

Control Suggestions include the use of high quality seed treated with an approved fungicide.

Don't over-water, especially on heavy soils. Seed at the proper time. Fall seeding for fescue, bluegrass and rye grass; spring seeding for bermudagrass, centipede and carpet grass.

Another common lawn grass problem is brown patch. This probably is the most dominant and most destructive disease of established lawns in the State.

This no-tillage method of growing some crops — most notably corn and soybeans — has received widespread acceptance in North Carolina, where turning every inch of cropland with a turning plow once was regarded as essential.

There are a number of advantages in no-tillage. North Carolina State University crops specialists point out that the practice "offers producers an opportunity to reduce erosion, conserve water, reduce labor and cut production costs."

The practice has become more popular during recent years because of the availability of special planting equipment and the development of improved herbicides to control grass and weeds.

"Where weeds are controlled and good stands obtained, no-tillage soybean yields are comparable with those produced under conventional tillage," the N. C. State University experts say.

No-tillage soybeans are being used primarily for double-cropping behind small grains — wheat, oats, barley and rye. Often, the beans are planted in the grain stubble the same day or the day after the grain is harvested.

Start with Lasso. Give yourself a chance of everything coming up soybeans.

Start with Lasso, and most of those pesky annual grasses and broadleaf weeds that usually come up with your beans, won't. And we mean a broad spectrum, too.

There are very few important annual grasses or broadleaf weeds in North Carolina that Lasso — alone or tank-mixed with another recommended herbicide — won't get. Early . . . before the weeds emerge.

Lasso is the preemergence herbicide by Monsanto that doesn't need incorporation and won't carry over to harm following crops. One trip through the fields at planting — and you've got a better chance of everything coming up soybeans.

Lasso by itself controls:

Grasses:	Broadleaves
Barnyardgrass	Pigweed
Brachiaria	Carpetweed
Crabgrass	Florida Pusley
Fall Panicum	Purslane
The Foxtails
Goosegrass
Witchgrass

Lasso works effectively in minimum or heavy moisture and in a wide variety of soil types, from heavy buckshot to light sandy.

If you've got real, tough broadleaves to contend with in soybeans, tank mix Lasso with Lorox*. Together they get a much broader spectrum than either herbicide would get by itself. In addition to those listed above . . . Lasso plus Lorox controls:

Grasses:	Broadleaves:
Red Rice	Common Ragweed
	Teaweed
	Velvetleaf
	Lambsquarters
	Smartweed

And if you're dealing with light sandy soil, get "cracking" with Lasso plus Premerge. Dinoseb. In addition to those weeds listed above, Lasso plus Premerge will control:

Broadleaves:
Annual Morningglory
Black Nightshade
Cocklebur
Jimsonweed
Mustard

Lasso. The preemergence herbicide by Monsanto. The mixable one. Sure control for grasses and weeds. No carryover. Start with Lasso. So everything comes up soybeans.
