Says Mitchell Made Campaign Decisions

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Nixon campaign treasurer Hugh Sloan Jr. testified today that Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell was making decisions about campaign spending almost a year before he left the Justice Department.

This conflicts with a sworn statement Mitchell made last year.

Sloan, appearing at the Senate's televised Watergate hearings, also was prepared to testify that top presidential aides gave him the brushoff when he tried to warn them of financial links between the campaign and the Watergate burglary.

And he said Nixon's finance chairman, Maurice Stans, once told him "I don't know, and you don't want to know" the purpose of cash payments to G. Gordon Liddy, later convicted in the wiretapping. Liddy spent the money to finance the bugging operation, reportedly with Mitchell's express approval.

Sloan said he was told by President Nixon's personal lawyer, Herbert W. Kalmbach, that Mitchell would take over decisions on campaign spending in the summer of 1971. Prior to that, Kalmbach had made these decisions.

Sloan said another re-election official, Harry Flemming, regularly sent budget memoranda to Mitchell at the Justice Department for his approval. Sloan said he followed Flemming's practice when he took over spending responsibilities later.

Sloan's testimony backed up what had been said earlier by another campaign official, Robert C. Odle, who testified last month that Mitchell regularly cleared "decision memoranda" as early as May 1971.

Mitchell didn't resign from the Justice Department until March 1, 1972. On March 15 he testified at Senate hearings concnering the International Telephone and Telegraph Co. that he had no campaign responsibilities before March 1.

"I have no party responsibilities now," Mitchell swore.

"No re-election campaign responsibilities?" asked Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

"Not as yet," Mitchell replied.

Sloan said today that Jeb Stuart Magruder conferred regularly with Mitchell at the Justice Department about budget and other matters. Sloan said he checked Magruder's requests for funds back with Mitchell, but that eventually Mitchell tired of being "double-teamed" and instructed Magruder and Sloan to work out an approval process between themselves. Magruder then took over spending decisions in Mitchell's name, he said.

Sloan said he questioned that authority when Magruder approved a payment of $83,000 in cash to Liddy. Sloan said he asked his own boss, Stans, whether Magruder had authority to approve such a large cash payment, which he considered "totally out of line with anything we had done before."

Stans said Magruder had the authority, but told Sloan he would take the matter up directly with Mitchell, Sloan said. After Stans talked with Mitchell, he said, "I don't know, and you don't want to know" the purpose of the Liddy money, Sloan testified.

Sloan said he believed at the time Stans was piqued at losing control of spending to Mitchell. Stans was finance chairman, and Mitchell then headed the political part of the campaign.

Much Water Lost When Pipe Broke

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

An estimated 2,000,000 gallons of water were lost early last night when a major water main broke near the river just east of the water plant.

Greenville Utilities director Charles Horne said that the 16 inch water main broke around 6:30 p.m. and discharged water into a nearby ravine for some two hours before the problem could be isolated.

Horne said the breakage, which occurred 50 to 100 feet from the river, allowed the water to escape unchecked until workmen could find the affected area through a sectionalization of the main valves. The escaping water "just completely emptied our elevated storage tanks and stirred up water all over town," he reported.

The director said that, to his knowledge, no one was without water during the period although there was obviously some loss of pressure in some areas of the city.

He emphasized that although residents noticed a rusty appearance to the water, "at no time did we lose our water quality." Horne said that the water being pumped continued to be chlorinated and treated and was completely safe for consumption in spite of the color.

Noting that the loss of water put the newly increased pumping capacity of the plant to an early test, Horne said that in order to restore the system to normal water capacity and bring the elevated tanks back up to normal, it was necessary to pump nearly 400,000 gallons of water per hour throughout the night. The system was back up to normal by around 7 a.m. today, he said.

Horne added, "We also called Burroughs Wellcome, Fieldcrest Mills and Union Carbide and asked their assistance in cutting back and limiting their water use. They were very cooperative."

The broken main was isolated and closed off last night and workmen began fixing the affected section this morning.

Horne explained that the major loss of water, roughly 1.5 million gallons, probably occurred during the first hour when the elevated tanks were drained.

The official predicted that it will take a full day for the water to clear up in some parts of the city but he added that the water situation should be back up to normal by the end of the day.

The water line is a major transmission main that serves as an interconnector for the water tanks.

Battles Step Up In Delta

SAIGON (AP) — A rash of shelling and infantry attacks was reported along the central coast today, and both the government and Viet Cong blamed each other for bloody fighting in the Mekong Delta.

Government sources said field commanders have been alerted for possible Communist land-grabbing attacks before any appeal is issued from Paris for strict implementation of the cease-fire.

Henry A. Kissinger and Hanoi's le Duc Tho resumed talks in the French capital, and informants said they expect at the conclusion of the talks that the United States, North and South Vietnam, and the Viet Cong will issue a joint appeal calling for close observance of the truce.

They added that according to captured documents, the Communists intend to launch large-scale attacks in the central coastal provinces of Quang Ngai and Binh Dinh, perhaps to mark the fourth anniversary of the founding of the Viet Cong's Provisional Revolutionary Government.

Bloody fighting raged for the third day Tuesday in the Mekong Delta, but the official South Vietnamese account of at least one of the engagements differed considerably from other reports reaching Saigon.

White House Post For Laird

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird was reported today to have been named chairman of the domestic council in the White House.

Congressional sources said Laird, a former House member from Wisconsin, will succeed John D. Ehrlichman, who resigned last month as a presidential adviser.

County Bd. Of Education

SchoolCalendar,Teacher Assignments Decided

By STUART SAVAGE

The Pitt County Board of Education yesterday approved the school calendar and teacher assignments for the coming year, saw a new member of the board take the oath of office, and approved a plan to implement the state kindergarten program in the county.

After having the meeting opened by hearing the "Harmony Grits Barber Shop Quartet" from Farmville Central High School sing several songs, the school board approved a school calendar for the 1973-74 year.

Under the sechdule approved yesterday, the first day for teachers for the coming school term would be August 20, while August 27 would be an orientation day for students, with classes beginning on August 28. The last day of school for students would be June 5, 1974 with June 12 being the last day for teachers.

Holidays included in the schedule include September 3 for Labor Day, November 22 and 23 for Thanksgiving, December 21 through January 7 for Christmas, and April 12 and 15 for Easter. Teacher workdays—when teachers would report to school without the students—include August 31, October 11 and 23, November 28, January 22,23 and 24 and April 24.

The board approved teacher assignments for the 1973-1974 year for teachers in the county to insure no more than 26 students per teacher in grades one, two and three, no more than 33 students per teacher in the upper elementary grades and no more than 35 students per class or 150 students per day for teachers in junior high and high schools.

The board of education also approved plans for implementation of the state kindergarten program, except using double session rather single daily sessions. By using two sessions each day, superintendent Arthur S. Alford told the board, all kindergarten children in the county will be able to be served in from two to three years rather than in the five years required under the state single-session plan.

For the first year, teacher assignments would include: Grifton (where single sessions would be maintained; three, Belvoir Primary, one; Bethel primary, one and Ayden primary, two.

Programs would be instituted at other schools during the following years as teachers are allotted by the state.

Dr. J.O. Carson of Grifton was administered the oath of office during yesterday's meeting by Clerk of Superior Court H.L. Lewis. Dr. Carson, a Bethel native who has been a family physician in Grifton for the past 18 years, replaces Sam Nelson, whose resignation from the board was effective with yesterday's session.

Nelson, who spent about 20 years as a member of the Grifton Advisory Council, became a member of the County Board of Education in 1966.

In other business at yesterday's session, the board:

Bullet Stopped By Police Badge

CHARLOTTE (AP)-His copper badge,worn over his left breast pocket, may have saved the life of Charlotte Patrolman J. C. Stanton, who was wounded in an early morning shooting Tuesday during which his naked assailant was slain by another patrolman.

A police spokesman said today that Stanton, 26, was in fair condition at a hospital and had spent a restful night. He was shot three times with his own police pistol, twice in the abdomen and once in the right wrist.

A fourth shot bullet lodged in his badge, inches from his heart.

Patrolman L. D. Walker, 27, Stanton's squad car riding partner, was treated at a hospital for multiple injuries he received during a fight with Howard Lee Russell, 26, who was fatally shot by Walker.

Police said the two patrolmen were dispatched to Russell's grandmother's house to investigate an assault complaint at about 5 a.m. Tuesday. Police gave this account of what happened:

When the patrolmen arrived at the Russell house a naked man later identified as Russell rushed at them, knocking down Stanton. Walker struck Russell with his nightstick and in the struggle that followed Russell grabbed Stanton's pistol and shot him four times.

Russell then charged Walker with a nightstick and the patrolman shot him. When Russell tried to jump into the squad car and obtain a shotgun Walker fired again and Russell collapsed dead on the front seat of the vehicle.

Stanton, an MP while in the Army, had two years service in Vietnam. He joined the Charlotte police force in January of last year.

Farmville Bd. To Investigate Improvements Cost

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

FARMVILLE — Farmville Commissioners last night agreed to investigate the cost of extensive improvement to streets and sidewalks within a two-block radius in downtown Farmville in conjunction with a Central Business District Revitalization Project just begun by local citizens.

A committee composed of local businessmen reported on a several months' study on ways to increase attractiveness and convenience to shoppers in the central business district.

The group has retained the services of the ECU Regional Development Institute to make a study of the CBD, pointing out improvements the town could make in conjunction with the State Highway Commission to improve traffic flow, round off corners, place utility lines underground and generally improve the surfaces of the sidewalks and streets, plus their general appearance. Possible areas for offstreet parking have been pointed out, and a Parking Authority has been proposed. Merchants and landowners would be encouraged to improve their buildings and provide a connected awning, though no public money would be used for such projects.

A scheduled public hearing on the rezoning of property on 264-A east of Farmville, which has been proposed as a shopping center by Monk & Associates of Wilson was not held, at the request of Monk and Associates.

The Commissioners heard a request by Rex and Margaret B. Hodges that Sheppard Street mapped but never constructed on property adjacent to their home on Highway 258 north recently purchased by them be closed. A public hearing on the matter was set for the July meeting.

Several streets in the Pine Grove Public Housing Subdivision—Anderson Avenue, Godwin Drive, Nick's Nook, Pitt Street, and Taylor's Turn—were accepted by the Town.

Tiling of the following ditches was approved: 270 feet from Action Place to Horton Street; 135 feet from Horton Street to the I. S. Bennett Park; 400 feet across the United Methodist Church property from Wilson to Church Streets; 540 feet from Acton Place to Main Street; and 390 feet from Perry Street to Acton Place.

A proposal to have aerial views and maps of Farmville mounted behind drapes in the Farmville Courtroom where the Commissioners' meetings are held was approved. The costs will be approximately $500.

A five-year agreement with Jim Craft for the use of his private air strip near Farmville was approved, at a cost of $300 per year.

Couple Exchanges Vows In Ceremony On Saturday

STOKES — Miss Seable Olivia Whichard became the bride of Richard Hicks Musgrave of Richmond, Va., Saturday at 4:00 p.m. in the Sweet Gum Grove Free Will Baptist Church near here. The Rev. William Gaylord of Pantego officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carrol Alton Whichard of Rt. 2, Robersonville. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. James Robert Musgrave of Goldsboro.

Mrs. Wiley Rogerson, organist, presented a program of wedding music. Robert Turnage, vocalist, sang "Whither Thou Goest," "The Twelfth of Never" and for the benediction, "Wedding Prayer."

Arrangements of white mums, baby's breath and palms with cathedral candelabra holding burning tapers formed the setting for the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal length white Hungarian lace gown designed with a high neckline and a sheer yoke with sheer lace bishop sleeves. A white velvet ribbon encircled the empire waistline. A ruffled lace flounce edged the hemline.

She wore a chapel length mantilla edged in Hungarian lace to match her gown. Her bouquet consisted of baby's breath, white and lavender roses with a touch of pink centered with a purple orchid.

Miss Johnette Whichard, maid of honor and sister of the bride, wore a formal length lavender gown of chiffon. Encircling the empire waistline was a deep purple velvet ribbon. Her gown had long sleeves of chiffon and a high neckline encircled with purple ribbons. She wore a lavender frilled edged hat and carried a nosegay of deep purple daisies.

Bridesmaids were Mrs. Toley Lewis of Elizabeth City, Mrs. Jack Musgrave and Mrs. Jerry Musgrave of Goldsboro. Their gowns were like the maid of honor's and they carried yellow daisies.

Honorary attendants were Mrs. Gerald Clayton of Durham, Mrs. John Liepert of Florence, S. C., Miss Jeanne Tice of Moyock and Mrs. Jeffrey Grass of Lanham, Md. Their dresses were of formal length in pastel colors. Each attendant carried a long-stemmed purple carnation.

MRS. RICHARD HICKS MUSGRAVE

Gregg Parker of Claremont served as best man. Ushers were John Liepert of Traington, N. J., Marcus Whichard, brother of the bride, and Jerry Musgrave of Goldsboro, a brother of the bridegroom.

Mrs. Whichard chose for her daughter's wedding, a pale blue dress with matching lace trim. She was presented a corsage of white roses. The bridegroom's mother wore a cream yellow dress with pale green and was presented a corsage of yellow roses.

After a reception held at the church, the couple left for a wedding trip to unannounced points.

They will reside in Richmond, Va.

The bride is a graduate of Peace College and East Carolina University. The bridegroom attended Wayne Technical Institute and has served four years with the U. S. Air Force. He is employed with the Richmond Fredericksburg and Potomac Railroad, Richmond, Va.

Mr. and Mrs. James Robert Musgrave entertained the bridal couple Friday evening at a cake cutting following the wedding rehearsal.

Members of the wedding party, relatives and friends attended.

A color scheme of lavender, yellow and pink was used in decorations.

Women Participate In More Sports

By GAIL LIBERMAN

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Just nine years ago, Indiana University here had only two women's sports teams competing against other Indiana teams.

Now there are eight competing against teams from Kentucky, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin and West virginia.

At Ohio State University, participation in women's intercollegiate sports has grown so dramatically that a medical program for women participating in varsity sports has been instituted.

"In addition to physical evaluation, prevention and care of injuries, the group works with coaches to design training and conditioning programs which will be useful in competition and injury prevention," says Dr. W. Richard Garner, coordinator of the program.

"You get to the point where people can no longer receive satisfaction from physical education classes or even intramural sports," says Miss Phyllis Bailey, director of OSU's intercollegiate program for women, of the increased interest in her program.

"They want someone to help them become even better. The intercollegiate schedule gives them an opportunity to develop their highest potential."

Miss Bailey's philosophy began reaching the national level in the 1960s as a result of a set of guidelines issued by a Study Conference on Competition.

It followed with the establishment of the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (AIAW) two years ago. The AIAW sponsors seven national championships and issues guidelines to its paying membership of 335 colleges.

There are other factors besides the AIAW which have changed the status of women's intercollegiate sports, though.

A spokesman for Michigan State University says there is more emphasis on administering women's programs. Last year, for example, a woman was appointed MSU's women's athletic director — a first in the Big Ten.

Pamela L. Strathairn, chairman of Stanford's women's physical education department, lists "more news media attention to the lady pros in tennis and golf" as another reason for increased interest in women's sports.

While men's athletic programs have athletic scholarships and recruitment programs, women's do not mainly because the AIAW prohibits it.

"We believe quality programs and experiences should flourish in an environment free from pressure of recruiting and performer exploitation that so often accompany the general availability of athletic scholarships," says an AIAW statement on the subject.

Many universities charge admission to men's events and not women's. "Charging admission for women's sports would require additional outlay for administrative services, money which we feel is better spent in providing for the program directly," Miss Strathairn says.

"We would be on shaky ground if we based our financial security on gate receipts," Miss Bailey added.

Though interest in women's intercollegiate sports is increasing, it has a long way to go before catching up to the popularity men's sports has attained.

"The women's programs are less exposed to the public," explains Miss Bailey. "And the women's athletic programs haven't been in existence nearly as long as men's.

"As women's sports program mature and publicity increases," she predicts, "so will student interest."

Designer Shows Halter Dresses

By ANN HENCKEN
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Polish up your mysterious flirt routine, if you're going to wear Chester Weinberg's clothes this fall.

Models instinctively raised one shoulder or an eyebrow as they padded self-confidently down the aisles earlier this week in halter sweaters, with rhinestone clips and brown satin slip dresses.

These little numbers insist on some rendition, however halting, of a flirt. Remember flirting? It was when you didn't tell everything about yourself on the first date. It made for suspense.

If there must be nostalgia, Weinberg has pared it down to simple and luxurious proportions. Clip-on pins, button earrings and envelope purses lend their oldie-but-goodie influence, too.

Halter dresses abound in slick ivory leather with fur-trimmed jacket. They're also offered in low key green and peach.

Weinberg has spared everyone a great array of ruffles, sticking instead to simple lines. He banks on unusual fabric combinations and bold strokes of color to carry the drama. It works.

A long matt jersey dress, in camel, is paired with a cotton topper rain coat. Fur jackets sport sweater-ribbed trimming.

Part of the luxurious look of his day clothes comes from the abundant fabric in his tent dresses and full-backed coats. Even jackets have deep pleats in back.

He throws in a little Gatsby with low-waisted dresses and nips at the heels of the bulky sweater movement in a series of applause-winning beige styles.

Camel was a big color, followed by red and green. Black was good for one-shoulder evening dresses, set with small but powerful rhinestone pins.

Women Lose Battle Of Pub

HARROW, England (WNS)— Eight women protestors have lost the battle to force the 400-year-old King's Head pub here to drop its ban on women in the taproom. Sally Hale, 22, pleaded that the "Gents Only" notice on the door "is symptomatic of the role forced on women as sex objects." The judge who ruled against Sally and her friends is also a woman, Margery Cole. Thanking Mrs. Cole, the spokesmen for the men said, "This may be the last male sanctuary in the world."

Tell Grandson Privately Of Your Offer

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1973 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Our fine, handsome grandson is graduating from college soon, after which he is marrying a nice girl he met at college. [I'll call her Mary.] Mary is one of 12 children so there wasn't much money for extras in her family. To get to the point, Mary is desperately in need of dental work. It would improve her appearance 100 percent.

I can well afford to pay for any dental work Mary needs done, but I don't know how to make the offer to our grandson without offending him. It is a wonder to us how this girl could have let her teeth get into such bad shape. And a greater wonder that our grandson wouldn't have noticed it. [Or perhaps he has, but didn't know what to do about it.]

How can we let our grandson know we will foot the bill if Mary will see a dentist? GRANDPA

DEAR GRANDPA: Tell him [privately] what you've told me. [P. S. And since when is dental care an "extra"? It's vital to general good health.]

DEAR ABBY: I am 20 and I'm dating this guy who is 28. I like him as a date, but I don't like the battles I have with him to get him to keep his hands to himself.

Ten minutes after I'm in his car he's all over me. He is really just like a high school sophomore—only stronger. The day after I've been out with him I ache all over from fighting him off. I'm not kidding. I've even left some scratches on his hands and face in addition to ripping his shirt and breaking his wristwatch.

I am not against a little affection, but this guy acts like a sex maniac. I am no big turnon, I'm a plain-looking girl and I don't invite his advances, so I can't understand it.

How can I cool him down without losing him completely? ARIES

DEAR ARIES: If you continue to date this guy you must be hard up. Quit while you're ahead and tell the octopus to get lost.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 16-year-old girl with a big problem. My favorite cousin is getting married in two months and my parents won't let me go to the wedding unless I take off 10 pounds! That is an awful lot to lose in two months, but my mother said she talked to the doctor and he said I could do it if I tried. Abby, I would have to live on practically nothing to lose all that weight in two months. I'm afraid I would get so weak I couldn't do as well in school, etc.

I have enough money in the bank to fly to the wedding which is across the country, but my parents say I can't go at all unless I lose 10 pounds, and if I do, they will buy my ticket.

Why are people so prejudiced against overweight people? It's as if we weren't even human.

Are my parents being unfair to me, Abby? I just have to go to that wedding. I pray a lot and it makes me feel better but it doesn't get me there. Please help me.

HEARTBROKEN

DEAR HEARTBROKEN: Five pounds a month is not too much to lose, and if the doctor says you can do it, you should try. Quit looking for excuses why you CAN'T, and start on a diet right now and you'll make it. Good luck.

Used To Maximum Advantage

East Carolina University received $4.8 million for capital improvements in the 1973-74 fiscal year budget, as recommended by the Board of Governors and approved by the state Legislature.

Included in the budget is $2,135,000 for an addition to the School of Art building, to construct 63,000 square feet.

There is $720,000 in the budget for renovation of Joyner library, $1,850,000 for expansion of the heating plant on 14th Street, $38,000 to provide new fire hydrants, water lines, street and area lighting and electrical improvements, $55,000 for roads, parking areas, and sidewalks, and $40,000 for storm drainage.

With construction costs what they are today $4.8 million will not go a long way in providing magnificant buildings; however the funds have been allocated wisely to get maximum use of facilities on the ECU campus.

The $2,135,000 for an addition to the School of Art building actually funds the second phase of a building now under construction. In 1971 the Legislature appropriated $2.01 million for the first phase and this part is now under construction on the site of the old Austin building. The over $4 million art building will be one of the finest such facilities in the nation.

An addition to Joyner library was also funded by the 1971 Legislature at $3.1 million, and this is under construction. This year's $720,000 will make the old part of the library compatible with the new section to provide a library worthy of a major university.

A part of the heating plant was constructed off 14th Street a few years back; however the old plant on the main campus still must be used from time-to-time. The $1,850,000 provided this year will give adequate capacity at the 14th Street plant and the central campus plant can be phased out.

Of course, the new home for the School of Art will free classroom space in other buildings on the campus for use in various programs.

The most glaring fault in the capital improvements budget recommended by the Board of Governors, in our opinion, was the failure to include funds for renovation of Wahl-Coates School. The elementary school was recently moved to a new building and the old building on the main campus is already being used by the Department of Speech and Drama. The $1.4 million requested was badly needed to make this facility functional for university use. For a relatively small investment the state would have a facility which would cost much more to build from ground up. Hopefully an effort will be made to obtain funds for this renovation next year.

All-in-all, however, we think the ECU captial improvement funds allocated in the budget will be used to maximum advantage to provide the best facilities possible for the programs underway.

Near-Epidemic In Heroin Toll

By BRYAN HAISLIP

RALEIGH — Heroin deaths have risen from a rarity to an epidemic in North Carolina over the past five years.

BRYAN HAISLIP

Parallel with the ascendency of the general drug problem and its hazards to the living addict, heroin abuse has moved forward as a cause of death.

Three cases in 1969 were the first identified heroin deaths in North Carolina. The number soared to 25 in 1970. There were 17 heroin-related deaths in 1971, and 20 in 1972.

The steep upward trend is "indicative of a true epidemic," said a report released recently by the office of Dr. Page Hudson, the state's chief medical examiner.

"Heroin addiction, as a part of the general problem of narcotic addiction, has become a significant social and medical issue in this state as well as the nation," the report declared.

Collaborators in the study were Dr. Wilton M. Reavis Jr., a 1973 graduate of the University of North Carolina School of Medicine; Dr. John T. Daly, associate chief medical examiner; and Dr. Hudson.

Measure of Problem

"Enumeration of deaths in a given period is one measure of the frequency and incidence of a given disease process in a community. To reduce or control any problem, it is necessary to be able to identify and document it and to study its characteristics," they pointed out.

It is hoped this study will help emphasize the existence of the problem in North Carolina and will result in an increased awareness of the potential hazard to the living heroin addict of the fatal complications of heroin abuse."

The geographic pattern of incidence linked heroin deaths to urban centers and areas of military installations. The majority of the victims were blacks, males, and under 25 years of age.

Fifty-six of the 65 fatalities recorded in the four-year period occurred in eight of the state's 100 counties—Mckelenburg, Cumberland, Forsyth, Durham, Gulford, Onslow, Cabarrus, and Buncombe. Nine other counties each reported a single heroin-related death during the period.

Blacks number 54 among the deaths, and 63 of the total number were men.

Unexplained Differences

"There are no easy explanations for the sex and racial differences but this does seem related to the phenomenon in other communities of heroin addiction being the most rampant in ghetto areas before spreading to so-called "middle class" areas," the study observed.

Only six of the 65 heroin victims were 30 or older. Almost three-fourths of the total were under 25. The average age was 23.

No known heroin deaths of persons unde 16 have occurred in North Carolina, according to the study, although it said pre-teen and early teen addiction and deaths are reported from New York with "frightening" frequency.

"Heroin addiction and deaths therefrom have been a rare but recognized entity for many decades in this country. However, many parts of the nation particularly large urban areas—become aware of a great increase in frequency in the last half of the 1960's," the report said.

'Overdosage' Misleading

Increasing evidence indicates that most heroin deaths are not due to "overdosage," the report said.

"'Heroin overdosage' is probably a misleading and ill-advised term in the typical heroin death," according to the study. "The use of this term leads the drug abuser to believe that he is safe as long as he is careful about his dosage. We know that this 'care' is not sufficient.'"

Four of the 65 Tar Hell deaths resulted from causes other than the apparent direct effect of heroin. Three addicts were homicide victims in separate events. The fourth was the driver of a single-car crash and died of head injuries. Background information suggested the four were drug abusers, and autopsies indicated they were on heroin at the time.

Heroin fatalities followed no seasonal pattern, the study said. Two small "epidemics" were observed. One occureed in January, 1970, when seven persons died within 12 days; another, in June, 1972, when seven heroin deaths fell in an eight-day period.

The report raised the possibility such sporadic outbreaks may be realated to the arrival of a supply of heroin of quality or concentration different from what was previously available in the community.

Ehrlichman A Political 'Spy'

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — John D. Ehrlichman, one of the most powerful men in America until his resignation from the White House staff April 30, began his political career in 1960 as a political espionage agent for Richard M. Nixon spying on Gov. Nelson Rockefeller of New York and the Democratic national convention.

As an unknown 35-year-old zoning lawyer from Seattle, Ehrlichman was officially listed as a Nixon advance man in 1960 working under his close friend and former UCLA classmate, chief advance man J.R. (Bob) Haldeman. In fact, he was an undercover agent stalking Rockefeller's abortive campaign for the Republican presidential nomination. Later he was assigned as a secret observer to the 1960 Democratic convention in Los Angeles that nominated John F. Kennedy.

Thus, whether or not the courts finally tie him directly to the Watergate scandal, Ehrilichman's meager political background was in the little-known clandestine side of campaigning. Indeed, as recently as August 1968, when Ehrilichman turned up at the Republican national convention as a high Nixon aide, fellow staffers thought of him mostly as a "security" man.

Ehrlichman made no secret of his political beginnings in a May 1970 interview with William W. Prochnow, then Washington correspondent for the Seattle Times (now an aide to Democratic Sen. Warren Magnuson of Washington). Because of his anonymity, Ehrlichman said, he was assigned to "operative work" stalking Rockefeller.

For example, Ehrlichman told of driving a Rockefeller car in the Governor's campaign procession in North Dakota — apparently his June 3-4, 1960, swing through Fargo and several other towns. "The Rockefeller people thought I was from North Dakota, and the North Dakota people thought I was from Rockefeller," Ehrilichman told Prochnow. He enjoyed repeating the same story to friends in Seattle.

Ehrlichman described his undercover duties at the Los Angeles Democratic convention as two fold: '(1) to examine attitudes of the Southern delegates; (2) to prepare a dossier on the Kennedy campaign apparatus.

Senate Diplomacy

Behind the long Senate Foreign Relations Committee dely in confirming four top-ranking diplomats is a strange consensus by the strongly liberal-oriented committee to force President Nixon to send "new faces" to carry out U.S. policy in the Far East.

Chairman J.W. Fulbright of Arkansas is leading this pressure move against the administration, but he has allies in both parties who presently comprise a clear majority of the committee.

Thus, the nominations — sent to the committee bet-

Watergate Day June 17

WASHINGTON — In just a few days, on June 17, the United States will celebrate the first anniversary of the breaking in of the Watergate. A group of patriotic citizens under the leadership of a friend of mine, Julian Stein, are urging President Nixon to declare it a national holiday.

He told me, "The one thing England has that we don't is Guy Fawkes Day. For more than 365 years the British have indulged in all sorts of shenanigans in memory of the man who tried to blow up Parliament in the Gumpowder Plot of 1605. Among other things, they burn Guy Fawkes in effigy, make huge bonfires and set off firecrackers. In further commemoration of the Plot, a formal and ritualistic search of the vaults beneath the houses of Parliament is made each year at the opening of their sessions.

"We think that June 17 should be duly celebrated in this country as 'Watergate Day.'"

"It sounds great," I said. "What would people do to observe it?"

"On 'Watergate Day' Americans would memorizlize this historic event by taping other people's doors, tapping telephones, spying on their neighbors, using aliases, wearing red wigs and making inoperative statements."

"You mean people could lie to each other?" I asked.

"Of course. Parents would not have to tell the truth to their children, bosses would not have to level with their employees, and husbands would be permitted to make up stories to tell their wives."

"June 17 would be like April Fool's Day," I said.

"It would be much wilder. Anyone breaking into a doctor's office would be granted immumity. People could raise money for phony causes, and only cash would be accepted as legal tender."

"Would you have parades?" I asked Mr. Stein.

"You bet we would. We would have plumbers' parades all over the country, honoring the plumbers in the White House who were supposed to turn off all the leaks.

"In Washington the President would review CIA and FBI bands as they marched down Pennsylvania Avenue leading the loyal members of the Committee for the ReElection of the President.

"In the afternoon the President would lay a wreath at the Watergate complex just under the window of the former headquarters of the Democratic Natonal Committee.'

"That would be nice," I said.

"In the evning there would be a fireworks display in every town to remind us all of the fireworks the Watergate has caused in this country."

"I get chills just thinking about it," I admitted.

"If the President declares June 17 a national holiday, you could have 'Watergate Day' sales in the department stores with giant savings on burglary tools, shredding machines and lie detectors.

Other Editors Say Refreshing Attitude

(The Raleigh Times)

The realistic attitude of Secretary of State Thad Eure on appointment of people to state jobs is refreshing. Democrat Secretary Eure, who has held his elective job for 37 years, boasts that he has never appointed a Republican to a job and never will, and says he'll not be criticizing Republican Gov. Jim Hoslhouser for replacing Democratic job holders with Republicans.

Eure, who is a strong party man, puts it this way: "The man who does the appointing, if he's not going to build up his party the he can, he's a mighty sorry party man. You're not going to hear me criticizing Holshouser for naming Republicans."

Of course, Eure would be a lot happier if the Governor was Democrat appointing Democrats to office. But, since the Governor is a Republican, Eure's attitude is the best one to take, and is the one which would be of most value in helping the Democratic Party regain control of the Executive Mansion in 1976.

The Democratic legislature, which so recently ended its 1973 labors here, got a number of suggestions to take Holshouser's appointive power away from him in a number of important areas. Fortunately, commonsense prevailed in most of those instances, and the strip-Houlshouser moves failed.

American government is built on a two-party system, which in turn is built on the spoils system under which the spoils belong to the victor. In North Carolina right now, the Republicans are the victors and they should have the spoils.

Democratic attempts to snatch those spoils—which have always have been granted to Democratic governors—form a Republican governor would backfire on the Democrats in 1976.

Boyle Views Life

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Memory is a great healing agent.

It is the balm that reconciles us to today's pains and the premised emptiness and loneliness of tomorrow.

By reminding us of good times we had in the past and the bad times we survived, memory can also by those examples give us hope that our future may still hold great times, too.

HAL BOYLE

Your own store of memories is large enough to fill many an idle hour if you can look back and remember when —

Most of the things you bought cost you only about what the tax on them is now.

Many boys went hungry Saturdays because if they didn't sneak out of the house before breakfast their mothers would tell them they'd have to spend most of the day beating dust out of rugs hung up on a wire in the backyard.

You didn't have to worry about getting air-conditioners or television sets repaired, but somehow something always seemed to go wrong with the coal furnace or the hot water heater.

Doctors didn't charge much, and they were usually the last to get paid. The first thing a family paid every week was its grocery bill.

A young fellow who could strum a pretty fair mandolin usually didn't have much trouble getting dates.

Many a strict mother wouldn't let her daughter go out with a boy who drove a car that had a rumble seat.

While life had problems we don't face now, no man had to spend half the day in an office washroom because of a stuck zipper.

A juvenile delinquent was a kid who sat in the front row of the balcony at the movies, and threw beans at the audience below as soon as the lights were turned off.

A lot of folks thought you were throwing away your money if you sent your daughter away to college. The male theory was that a girl didn't need to go to college to learn how to raise children, and too much education served only to unbalance the female mind more than nature had done it already.

Strength For Today

BEAUTY ALL ABOUT US

It is surprising how indifferent many of us are to the beauty which surrounds us all. A British farmer once confessed to a tourist that since childhood he had been driving past a magnificent cathedral but had never once taken the trouble to look inside. One wonders if Swiss peasants, working stolidly in their meadows, really appreciate the fact that they are in the shadow of the florius Alps. Many tourist in Paris linger in the sidewalk cafes and cross the Louvre off their sight-seeing list.

But in one form or another beauty is around nearly all of us, yet our perception of it is so dead that we are conscious of nothing but our daily routines. The green hillside, the blue sky, the city profile, or the steel mill working at night—these with the love of time—tried friends go a long way toward turning any sad hour into bightness and joy.

To the editor:

Once again the swimming pool costing $150,000 is at the top of the list whereas a few minibuses for the disadvantaged appear to have missed the list completely.

With almost every apartment complex and club having a pool, and individual homes building or getting private pools and the Olympic-sized pool at the University we would be led to believe that a public pool would be for the disadvantaged. How are these citizens to reach a pool and make use of it? Moyewood, Meadowbrook and many trailer parks are hardly within walking distance of a pool site which only brings out the need for a ransportation system.

A pool is a seasonal thing at best and an expensive item to boot. With the expansion of Greenville we are sadly in need of a few mini-buses leading to the hospital; medical center, welfare department, Elm Street recreation buildings, shopping centers and Greenwood Park if we are to serve a majority of disadvantaged persons.

Another look should be given to this picture before we let the money go on a strictly recreational and limited project. Once again let first things come first. Send your letters to City Hall.

Foreign Investors Want Stocks

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — While the stock market scene seems to bore Americans almost as much as those summer television reruns, foreign investors are acting as if they've had a preview of things to come.

They are buying, that is, at a time when a large segment of the American public is ignoring the market. And when any investor buys he either thinks or hopes that prices will rise.

The purchases are somewhat anomalous in that foreigners in other ways are proclaiming their distrust of the American economy, or perhaps of American political leadership, and are selling dollars feverishly. But they are buying stocks.

In the first quarter of the year the net total of foreign purchases — sales deducted from purchases — probably exceeded $1 billion.

This figure was more than double the net total of purchases at the like time a year earlier, when the market was rising rather than falling, as it is now.

While the domestic boredom with stocks is blamed on various factors — such as capital gains taxes, low dividend rates, Wall Street disorganization and customer distrust, to name a few — the foreign interest is attributed to value.

Whether these values are real or imagined is an outcome that nobody can forecast, but when you look at some of the facts on which foreign decisions are made you have to agree that they seem sound.

For instance, as Chase Manhattan Bank notes in its biweekly "International Finance," since 1970 the dollar has depreciated by an average of 17 per cent against currencies of Germany, Switzerland, France, the Netherlands, Belgium, Italy, Sweden, Canada, Britain and Japan.

That means an added price reduction on American stocks, some of which already are discounted to their lowest prices in years when matched against their ascending earnings. The principal foreign investors, says Chase, have been institutions, "investment trusts and some banks in Japan, and, in the case of Europe, chiefly banks buying for managed accounts."

The American markets provide these institutions with large supplies of stock.

What are they buying? Despite the wide choices available, Chase quotes an international brokerage house specialist as saying they've been concentrating in high-quality growth stocks such as Eastman Kodak, Polaroid, Xerox and IBM.

While Chase explains that these are among the American companies with global interests and internationally recognized products, they are also among the preferred choices of many American institutions also.

Will the trend continue? Chase believes it will. It states that a number of positive factors encourages this view, including a lower U.S. inflation rate than in many countries and rising corporate profits.

Boys Club Summer Activities Announced; Volunteers Needed

A diversified program of summer activities has been scheduled for the lads who are members of the Greenville-Pitt County Boys' Club.

Closed this week for repairs, the Boys' Club on Skinner Street will be the scene of full educational, physical and group activities begining June 11 and continuing until the beginning of the 1973-74 school year, when activities will revert to an after-school hour schedule.

In announcing the program, Executive Director Graham Gutting has also issued an appeal for volunteer help from the community.

"We need anyone with a talent who wishes to share it with the boys," Gutting said. "For our summer programs we especially need people to work with groups of seven to twelve year old boys in the Adventure Club involving outdoor trips. We also need people to help with boys 13-16 in an Outdoorsman Club for hiking, fishing, canoeing, and camping. In both these clubs,"we plan to work with five boys in a group."

Other fields in which volunteer workers are needed are arts and crafts, reading, woodworking, tennis, volleyball, weightlifting, boxing, swiminning, and the games room.

"Even if a person can volunteer only one hour per week, this will be a big help to us and the volunteer will be building a relationship that I'm sure he'll find most rewarding," Gutting said.

Klein Departs White House

By FRANCES LEWINE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Herbert G. Klein, who once said he wanted to make truth "the hallmark of the Nixon administration," has resigned his post as White House director of communications to become a broadcasting executive.

It had been known for some time that the 55-year-old Klein, former editor of the San Diego Union, wanted to get back into the news business after his one political venture.

Klein will officially leave the White House on July 1, although he has promised to remain available to President Nixon as a consultant. Klein will return to his home state of California as vice president for corporate relations for Metromedia, Inc.

He scheduled a news conference today to talk about his departure as Nixon's coordinator of information.

After his 1968 victory, when Nixon named Klein, who had once been his press secretary, to the newly created post of director of communications, Klein said he hoped to put an end to any credibility gap. He said he was charged by the President to tell every department that "more facts should be made available."

Until he leaves, Klein will consult with Nixon and Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler about restructuring the White House communications division. It is doubtful that a replacement will be sought for Klein, who held what he admitted was a unique post. Klein said he thought Ziegler would assume additional responsibilities.

Weather Due To Jet Stream

By FRANK CAREY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — That sometimes-capricious river of high-speed air above the Northern Hemisphere, the jet stream, has been a major culprit in the record rash of tornadoes and other unusual weather across the nation in recent months.

Government meteorologists said Tuesday the jet stream has been unusually strong for several months:

—Causing more than 700 tornadoes since Jan. 1, mostly in Southern states.

—Dumping heavy rains from the Appalachians to the Midwest jnd down into the South.

—Causing drought conditions in the Pacific Northwest.

The weathermen say the jet stream appears to be weakening now, possibly lessening tornado activity in Southern states.

They also said their June outlook shows a shift in the heavy-rain picture from the Midwest and South to the Middle Atlantic, South Atlantic and Gulf Coast. It also appears, they said, that the weakening jet stream will cause rain in the Pacific Northwest during June.

Like its sister, the "polar jet," flowing above northerly areas of the earth, the sub-tropical jet stream is hundreds of miles wide and 20,000 feet high. It whirls eastward around the globe at an altitude of four to seven miles.

In recent months, the jet stream got involved with a trough of low pressure prevailing from the Great Lakes to the Mississippi Valley.

This interplay aided the development of storm systems moving out of the Southwest through the Great Lakes, triggering the heavy rains.

In mid-March and late May, the jet collided with a tongue of very warm, moist air streaming northward from the Gulf region. This touched off most of the tornadoes.

ween March 19 and May 8 — may be held up for several weeks during closed-door bargaining with Secretary of State William P. Rogers. These continued vacancies, high officials believe, could damage U.S. Far Eastern policy.

The delayed appointments are: G. McMurtrie Godley, assistant secretary for Far Eastern affairs; Graham Martin, ambassador to South Vietnam; William Sullivan, ambassador to the Philippines, and Charles. S. Whitehouse, ambassador to Laos. All manned key diplomatic posts in the Far East over the last decade.

With the Vietnam was officially ended, Senators engaged in the big stall claim "new faces" should be sent to the Far East to carry out a "new policy." But it is hardly conceivable that the administration would back down on its nominees, each of whom is highly respected in the Senate. Despite Mr. Nixon's present weakness, the most the pressure move can conceivably accomplish is to change the pattern of future ambassadorial assignments.

Squeezing Dean

The intense White House hostility toward fired presidential counsel John W. Dean III deepened last week with new restrictions on the use of his old documents.

Until now, Dean had been permitted to suplicate documents from his files, stored in the basement of the Executive Office Building next door to the White House. The procedure: a secretary, under the watchful eye of an FBI agent, would remove documents selected by Dean and duplicate them for Dean's use.

But last Wednesday the White House instructed Dean that henceforth he could personally examine but not copy or remove his old files.

Dean is seeking immunity from prosecution in return for testimony that allegedly would implicate not only his White House superiors but the President himself. The White House is in no mood to help refresh his recollections.

"Of course," added Mr. Stein, "the churches would remain open for people who wanted to pray for their country."

"I don't see anything wrong with it," I said. "There's only one question. In England on Guy Fawkes Day, they burn Guy Fawkes in effigy. Who would Americans burn in effigy on 'Watergate Day?' "

"We may have to wait until June 17, 1974, before we figure that one out."

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, JUNE 7, 1973

CARROLL RIGHTER'S HOROSCOPE

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A very difficult day and evening to try to get others to do what you want them to do, also difficult to keep your discontent under control, unless you consciously study problems to realize they give you opportunities to show how well you can handle them.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You have to get at all that work ahead of you in a quiet and controlled fashion, otherwise you make a real mess of it. Plan some time for health improvement. You can accomplish far more in the future.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Although you may be worried about something, show others you are a cheerful person and get good results. Do something nice for the one you love and have more happiness. Get rid of possible tensions.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Matters at home can be quite troublesome, so be sure you use tact and iron out any wrinkles. Get abode looking better by some effort on your part. Try to understand the viewpoints of others.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Get that shopping done even though it could be a little difficult; be sure to count your change. Use a quiet tone of voice with associates, or you get into arguments. Think along more practical lines.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Use care in handling property or money affairs today, tonight. Save more money for the future when you may need it badly. Extravagance for fun is both wrong and unwise. Think.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Get rid of that depressive feeling so you do not criticize others unmercifully and get yourself in real dutch with them. A good friend can be in a teasing mood, but do not let this bother you. Be happy.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Get busy handling all those small tasks that have accumualted and they are soon behind you, if you don't grumble about them. Free time for the future. Don't start an argument over some thoughtless word from a friend.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Don't get into an argument with a pal or there could be a serious severance of connections. Don't voice or force that personal aim which is really not what you want. Think it over more carefully.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) If you take the liberty of calling down some bigwig, you could regret it later on very much. Show you are of a more practical nature, instead. Follow every rule that applies to you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Get busy studying data you need rather than go on some foolish tangent that could cause you trouble. Think before you speak or act and you get along much better. Avoid one who does not really respect you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You had better sleep over those promises you have made before you actually get into the work on them. Mate could be irritated, so do nothing to make matters worse. Keep silent and all is fine.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Partners are discouraged or upset in some way, so do nothing that can further disturb them, but be helpful instead. Nothing can be done about that civic matter now, so study it further. Tomorrow is a better day for such.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . . he or she will be one of those young people who likes to solve problems, help others, so give a chance early to handle own affairs and help with family ones as well, since there is much ingenuity here. Give the best education so this youngster can handle all the fine details of projects that are difficult for others. Then your offspring will become very successful, otherwise he or she will be frustrated, instead.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

Bald Eagle In Miami Backyard

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — An American bald eagle who has developed a liking for city life arrives in the backyard of a Miami home every evening in time to watch the rush-hour traffic go by.

Bald eagles are an endangered species and nearby Everglades National Park has only 110 of them.

"You can almost set your clock by him" when he returns to roost at 5 p.m. every day, says one eagle-watcher.

The eagle settled in the top of a tall pine in Harry Cumbaa's yard last fall and has made it his home ever since.

Tourist Travel To Haiti Rises

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (UPI) — Aided by increased international flights and a more relaxed atmosphere, the Caribbean island of Haiti in 1972 for the first time exceeded the 100,000 mark in arriving tourists.

Dr. Andre Theard, director general of the National Office of Tourism, said the 1972 total of 107,815 arriving air and sea visitors at Port-au-Prince was an increase of more than 23 per cent over the 87,438 visitors in 1971.

"Coffee, tea or tranquilizers?"

Ex-Minuteman Still Concerned

ROBERT DePUGH is a man with a cause—anti-communism—and three years in federal prison have done little to temper his spirit. (UPI Telephoto)

By MARGARET P. RICHARDS

NORBORNE, Mo. (UPI) — Robert Bolivar DePugh is a man with a cause—anti-communism—that three years in a federal prison have done little to temper.

"I think there is more danger from communism now than there used to be," the former head of the right-wing Minutemen organization told an interviewer.

DePugh, who was released from prison April 30 on parole which restricts his travels to western Missouri, said President Nixon's trips to Moscow and Peking only confirm the Communist plan for takeover of the United States.

"(Nikita) Khrushchev once said, 'We must lull the western world to sleep.' We are being lulled to sleep," DePugh said.

Despite his fears, DePugh is uncertain whether he will attempt to revive the Minutemen, an organization that received much publicity in the 1960s as the conservative version of the Black Panther Party, but whose membership was generally conceded to be small.

The organization has been without leadership since DePugh and his second in command, Walter Patrick Peyson, were apprehended July 12, 1968, near Truth or Consequences, N.M., where authorities seized an arsenal of weapons at a house allegedly used by the Minutemen.

The two had gone underground after nine Minutemen were indicted in Seattle in April, 1968, on charges of conspiring to rob three banks. DePugh never was brought to trial on the charge but was sentenced to four years in 1970 for bond jumping and nine concurrent 10-year terms for federal gun law violations.

DePugh, 50, appeared relaxed, happy and friendly as he sat behind his desk in an inner room of the warehouse-like structure that serves as plant and office for Biolab, Inc., his veterinary pharmaceutical concern.

Fellow townspeople described DePugh as "a kind of loner," but said they were glad to have him back in town. They said he probably would take no substantial part in community affairs because "he never did before." Residents questioned believed no one but DePugh was ever a Minuteman in Norborne.

DePugh worries about the fact that he talks freely with reporters regarding potentially sensitive matters in relation to his status as a parolee. But he talks anyway because "I put principles ahead of the material values of life."

He revealed no plans for contact with Minutemen except for a mailing list he intends to use for the sale of a book he has written on prison reform.

The Watergate affair, however, does give him some ideas. He thinks it has opened the way for third-party politics once again in the United States.

"Sixty days ago I would have said the possibility of a third party that could challenge the Democrats or Republicans was zero. But now, millions of people must be turned off by both major parties."

DePugh sees poetic justice for some of those involved in Watergate.

"John Mitchell (former attorney general) boasted four years ago that he would destroy the Minutemen, so there's a kind of poetic justice in his present predicament."

His book on prison reform is an outgrowth of DePugh's years in the Atlanta penitentiary. He said prison reform "isn't my field," but that it would be helpful for someone "who has been on the inside" to record his views and experiences. "No one who hasn't been in prison can possibly know what it is like. Wardens, chaplains, social workers may think they do, but they don't."

Rolle Is Common Bahaman Name

NASSAU-PARADISE ISLAND, Bahamas (UPI) — Vacationers around Nassau and Paradise Island discover that the most common local surname in the Bahamas is Rolle. During the days of slavery in the islands, one of the biggest owners was John, Lord Rolle. When emancipation came, his former slaves kept the family name.

ECU Math Program Abandoned

After four years, East Carolina University's mathematics program for advanced eastern North Carolina high school students has been discontinued.

The 20 students enrolled this year, representing high schools in Beaufort, Lenoir, Craven, Pitt and Edgecombe Counties, commented regretfully as the final year of the program drew to its close.

"The only bad thing about this course is that there won't be another one like it next year," said one student. "This is the first math class that I have ever felt free in."

Others attributed their enjoyment of the program to the varied subject material, the interesting presentations by the instructors and the opportunity to work with computers.

Because of a lack of funds, ECU's Department of Mathematics is forced to halt the program. A cutback in federal grants which supported the program in the past made this necessary, although campus officials feel the program has been one of the most significiant of ECU's efforts to help prospective college students.

Instructors Nannie Manning, Dr. Milam Johnson and Robert J. Hursey directed the students through various aspects of mathematics, including the development and operation of the real number system, finite mathematics, mathematical systems on infinite sets and computer oriented topics.

Certificates of achievement were awarded each of the 20 students enrolled this year at the commencement exercises of their respective high schools.

One of the participants praised Prof. Manning's effective teaching. "Her methods were mainly geared towards stimulating us to discover things for ourselves rather than relying on others to tell them to us," he said.

" 'Come on,' she would often say, 'If someone else though of it, so can you.' "

Names and high schools of this year's 20 participants follow:

PITT COUNTY, D. H. Conley High School—George Robert Franke; Rose High School—Michael Terrence Reilly, Gregory Lyle Alexander, Charles Venable Barlow, Jonathan V. Caspar, William Franics Pritchard Jr., Kathleen Carey Waugh and David Stewart Walton.

The Lack Of Curiosity Is Watergate Hallmark

By LEE BYRD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The stain of Watergate has left many a man in various shades of embarrassment, shock or outrage, but few, it seems, got curious.

Time and again, witnesses have acknowledged their access to information of innermost intrigue—only to claim they didn't sneak a peek or ask any questions.

And that lack of curiosity is getting curiouser and curiouser.

The hotseat of the nationally televised Senate hearings was to be occupied today, for example, by Hugh W. Sloan, former treasurer of President Nixon's re-election campaign. Sloan has admitted paying $199,000 to convicted conspirator G. Gordon Liddy without ever asking what the money was for.

Then there is the case of Sally Harmony, the secretary who worked for Liddy at the campaign headquarters. According to her testimony Tuesday, she kept her nose not only out of her boss' business, but somewhat out of her own as well.

It didn't bother her, she said, that Liddy had told her some of the work was clandestine, because "clandestine does not mean illegal ... and I can keep a secret."

Yet, by her account, she didn't bother to absorb many secrets for the keeping—even though she personally typed transcriptions of phone taps and other intelligence memoranda which went out under code-named headings.

And answers like hers, while emanating from different voices, are becoming an echo. There was Robert Odle, the campaign office manager who says he took the purported "Gemstone" espionage file home for a weekend—but never opened it. There was Gerald Alch, the attorney who relayed a message to client James McCord to expect a phone call "from a friend," but never inquired as to who would make the call.

Then, too, there is L. Patrick Gray III, the former acting director of the FBI, who has told investigators that he kept for months a file the White House wished destroyed—again without taking a look.

The list of uncurious seems to grow each day. An irony, really, considering that the entire scandal would never have happened if it weren't for somebody's willingness to pry.

Will Step Up Protest Rate

EDENTON, N. C. (AP) — Golden Frinks, state field director of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, has promised stepped up equal rights protests in this northeastern coastal city of 5,000 where more than 145 blacks have been arrested in the last three weeks.

He did so after a meeting of about 150 of his supporters Tuesday night. Ralph David Abernathy of Atlanta, national director of the SCLC, has visited Edenton twice during the protests, and Frinks said he would do so again this week.

Disturbances have grown out of the announcement of the school board that Ralph Satterfield, a black director of the band at Holmes High School, who has 18 years experience with school bands in the area, would not be rehired next school year. School Supt. Edwin West said Satterfield was unable to discipline pupils.

A week ago, Abernathy and Frinks met with city officials to ask Satterfield's reinstatement, plus the hiring of more blacks in school administrative posts, in the police and fire departments, and in Edenton and Chowan County government.

Most of those arrested have been young people. Forty-five were arrested Tuesday after what Franks called a shop-in.

He said that after a walk out by 300 blacks at the school that morning a smaller group went downtown and staged the shop-in. He said several girls were beaten while officers were breaking it up and putting youngsters on a bus. State Highway Patrol Sgt. R. E. Evans said he was present and that none of the 10 troopers used physical force against the blacks.

Like A Bomb

WASHINGTON (AP) — Carrying a can of extra gasoline in the car trunk may help beat the gas shortage, but it could also be fatal, says a federal fire expert.

Richard E. Bland, chairman of the President's Commission on Fire Prevention, said such a practice "would be almost like having a bomb in your trunk waiting for something to ignite it."

Bland said he understood some gasoline companies have recommended carrying the extra gasoline as a means of beating the fuel shortage.

"We categorically oppose this," he said, explaining that fumes from such a container could spread through the car and be ignited by a cigarette. He also said the can could be punctured in an accident "and people could be trapped in an inferno."

Bible School Program Set

Meadowbrook Presbyterian Church will hold Bible School starting Monday and continuing through Friday, June 15.

Classes will be held from 9 a.m. until 11:30 at the church, which is located at the intersection of Church and Allen Streets.

The theme for the week will be "We Look to Jesus." Commencement has been scheduled for Friday at 7 p.m. to be followed by a wiener roast on the church grounds.

Committees and teachers include: refreshments, Mrs. W.G. Sullivan; Mrs. Charles Dudley; Mrs. Preston Fields; Mrs. Tom Buck; Mrs. Mary Lou Heath; and Mrs. Marguerite Heath; weiner roast, Charles Dudley and Lynwood Owens;

Publicity, Mr. and Mrs. Lynwood Owens; kindergarten, Mrs. Owens; primary, Mrs. George Creech and Mrs. A. T. Moore; youth, fourth through seventh grades, Mrs. Bobby Harris; music, Miss Mary Roebuck; assistants, Miss Lynette Owens; Miss Susan Braxton; Miss Theresa Jolly; and Miss Theresa Heath.

The director, Mrs. Charles R. Ross, invited all interested boys and girls to attend.

Martin Bd. Takes Action

WILLIAMSTON — Martin County Commissioners had a short monthly meeting Monday, with few items up for discussion.

Action taken by commissioner at the June meeting centered on roads and equipment. Approval was given for paving of two dirt roads, State Road 1509 from Red Oak Fork to the Edgecombe County line, and Hardison Drive, a short road leading from the elementary school in Jamesville to U.S. 64.

A request to place Ride Road on state maintenance was heard and is being considered. The road joins State Road 1545.

North Carolina Equipment Company was successful bidder in the amount of $34,990 for a front-end loader. Rebids are being let on other equipment—containers and a truck and a body of a front-end "Mother" type truck.

Tours His Own Moscow Exhibit

MOSCOW (AP) — Artist Marc Chagall toured a rare showing of his works here, placed a small bouquet of flowers behind one picture and wept before another.

It was Chagall's first visit to his native Russia in more than 50 years and the show in his honor broke with government policy against deviations from Soviet realism in art.

Chagall, 85, paused before one painting, "The Wedding," and touched it lightly with his hand. Asked if he remembered the painting well, tears came to his eyes and he replied, "more than you can imagine."

Asked if he was happy to be back, Chagall said, "It can be seen in my eyes."

Day Camp Is Again Slated

Each summer the Greenville Recreation Department conducts a Day Camp for exceptional children. The Day Camp this year begins June 11 and ends on June 29. Hours are 10:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m. Monday through Friday in the Elm Street Gymnasium.

Some of the activities in the day camp are swimming, arts and crafts, picnicing, putt-putt golf, bowling, horseback riding, special tours, and physical activities.

Six counselors in the Day Camp are trained to work with exceptional children. There is no charge for the Day Camp, but each child is expected to furnish their own lunch.

Transportation in past years has posed a problem for some parents. Anyone with this problem is asked to let the Recreation Center know about this so that an attempt can be made to work out transportation assistance.

Interested parents can register a child by phoning 752-2355 or by signing up at the Recreation Gymnasium on Elm Street before June 8.

Phillips Called In Traffic Case

LONDON (AP) — Lt. Mark Phillips, engaged to Princess Anne, is being invited to appear at court. But not the royal one.

He will be summoned to go before a court of law for an alleged traffic offense, police said Tuesday.

They said the 24-year-old lieutenant will be prosecuted before a Salisbury County court on a later date. They said the alleged offense involved a traffic accident on April 7, a week before Phillips was secretly engaged to the 22-year-old daughter of Queen Elizabeth II.

Slavery was banned in Brazil in 1888.

Oil Consumers Fearful Of World Competition

By RICHARD C. LONGWORTH

BRUSSELS (UPI) — If and when a real crunch comes in the energy crisis, Europe and America—and perhaps Japan—may end up battling for the same oil.

On this premise, the transatlantic partners are sounding each other out on cooperation to meet that crisis—or head it off. But the sounding is so wary that many analysts fear the potential cooperation could break down in bitter competition for scarce oil supplies.

"There is an urgent need for governments of consuming countries to adopt coherent, balanced and coordinated energy policies," says Sir Eric Drake, chairman of British Petroleum. Water J. Levy, a New York oil consultant, urges the West and Japan to form an "active, firm coordinated" bloc as a "counter-vailing power" to the potent cartel of Arab oil-producing nations.

For the first time, there are signs that governments on both sides of the Atlantic Ocean are listening to such alarms. But few dramatic moves are in sight.

President Nixon's recent energy message to Congress concentrated on the domestic oil market. Internationally, it did no more than repeat earlier U.S. suggestions for cooperation on research and a vague "mechanism" to help in times of shortage.

Few Bold Ideas

"The mountain brought forth a mouse," Jean LeClercq, energy experts for the European Common Market, said of Nixon's message. But LeClercq, in an interview, made it clear that Europe has few bold ideas of its own.

Energy ministers of the nine Common Market nations are drawing up Europe's first tentative proposals for transatlantic cooperation. Henri Simonet, the market's energy commissioner, is scheduled to go to Washington May 29 to test U.S. reaction to these proposals.

What Levy and other analysts fear is that demand for oil by America, Europe and Japan will double over the next decade. Most of this oil must come from the Arab nations of the Middle East, which have shown unprecedented unity over the past three years in negotiating sharp price increases.

According to these analysts, the Arabs could create a shortage by refusing to increase production. In such a situation, oil would go to the Western nation that bid the highest price. That price could be in money—or in aid to the Arabs against Israel.

Either way, low bidders would face a threat to the fuel that keeps their economies going. The resulting competitive scramble could kill the Western alliance, in the analysts' view.

Oil Politics

Simonet has warned of "outbidding and even blackmail" and, in a recent speech, noted the oilfield proverb that "oil is 90 per cent politics."

The Common Market flatly opposes a users' bloc or cartel, LeClercq said, because "if we formed one, it would only force the Middle Eastern countries to be more unified. Besides, any cartel we formed would be under American control."

What does the Common Market want then? A paper prepared by the market's executive commission has suggested:

—A committee where Europe, America and Japan could discuss energy policy.

—Cooperation on research and development—for instance, research on nuclear breeder reactors, which could begin to shoulder part of the energy load by the end of the century, or on getting gas from coal.

—Compulsory stockpiling by all Western nations of oil supplies, so enough oil would be on hand if the Arabs ever go through with one of their frequent threats to impose a boycott.

Cooperation Problem

The stockpiling issue illustrates the cooperation problem. The Common Market insists that its members keep at least 65 days' supplies of oil on hand. Several nations are moving toward a 90-day reserve. A 1971 study showed that, with some rationing, Europe probably could withstand a six-month boycott.

"But stockpiling must be reciprocal," LeClercq said. "The United States has no stockpiling obligations now. We really don't know how much oil they have on hand. We've asked (American) government officials about this, but got no response."

The Exxon Corporation said recently that Europe is not "nearly so well situated as North America or the Soviet Union" to meet an oil crisis.

LeClercq denied this. He said Europeans use barely half as much energy as Americans—only one-third as much per capita—and "we are convinced we can find the energy supplies we need."

Europe, like America, must prepare for rising oil prices. Those prices already are gusher-high here. A gallon of premium gasoline, for instance, costs $1.25 in a Belgian service station.

Links with Arabs

What worries Europe most about a consumers' bloc would be the damage to Europe's "energy personality," as LeClercq put it. This means the traditional oil link between certain European and Arab lands—France and Algeria, for instance. LeClercq said one way to preserve these relationships is to strike trade deals with Arab nations "and open our markets to them."

This plan to swap trade for oil strikes American experts as a competitive move to stake a claim on part of the world's oil. LeClercq admits it is slightly "neo-colonialist."

"But I'm afraid that is what we're going to have," he said. "We don't like this. We prefer a free oil market. We want oil to be just another commodity. But things are not like that. Oil is too political.

Amusement-Theme Parks Do Not Appeal To All

By KAY BARTLETT
AP Business Writer

City fathers, their eyes aglow with dollar signs, generally jump with glee. But one Maryland county said thanks, but no thanks: We plain don't want a giant amusement park here. The dollars can go elsewhere.

The amusement park boom, accelerating since 1971, brings a boost to the economy in most places, along with higher taxes, exaggerated land values and massive traffic jams. Employment benefits go mostly to high school and college students hired as tour guides and ticket sellers.

The general attitude of city government has been that if the locals don't like it, they can up and move to a spot where nobody wants to raise Six Flags over anything in particular and where Mickey Mouse would not wish to live.

Parks have found happy homes near such cities as Nashville, Cincinnati, Atlanta, Los Angeles, Houston, St. Louis, Dallas and Kissimmee, the nearest town to Mickey's new home in Florida.

But Howard County, Maryland, between Washington, D.C., and Baltimore, gave a firm thumbs down to the Marriott Corp., a large hotel chain that plans to sink $120 million into the amusement-theme park industry. Opponents said that even if the park was the cleanest, the nicest, the best-maintained ever, the honky-tonk parasites that follow the parks would settle in, too. Therefore, they said, they could do without either and turned down the rezoning request. It's the quality of life, not the almighty dollar, that matters, argued a citizenry affluent enough to afford that kind of argument.

Marriott, which announced its intentions of moving into the industry over a year ago, now has three theme parks under way, one in Santa Clara, Calif., one between Chicago and Milwaukee and one, once again, outside of Washington. This time it's Prince William County, Va.

All three won rezoning requests, the firm reports.

As approved, the three parks will open in 1975, or 1976 at the latest. Two of the plots — the ones in the Chicago and Washington areas — will each sprawl over 550 acres and the one in the San francisco region will encompass about 500 acres.

The biggest economic boom for the new amusement parks came as the magic name of Disney moved to Florida. The nearest town, Kissimmee, doubled its population — all the way up to 14,000 — and its size. An acre once suitable only for citrus trees sold for $300. Now that it has been demonstrated that gas stations, restaurants and motels grow well and profitably in that soil, it's worth $30,000 an acre.

The Disney parks are the only two that the industry labels as "destination" parks, the goal of major family trips. The other parks, now called "theme" parks to distinguish them from the old Coney Island parks where a mass of rides and hot dog stands were tossed together haphazardly, draw 80 per cent of their customers from a 50-mile radius, a spokesman for the Marriott Corp. explained.

Disneyworld, a $400-million investment that opened Oct. 1, 1971, created 10,000 new jobs in mid-Florida, an exception to the general employment picture the parks cause. Usually, there are a few hundred permanent jobs and the rest, about 1,000 to 1,500, are filled by high school and college students.

The opening of Disney World in Florida also put the local Salvation Army $19,000 into debt as dreamers with visions of a Fantasia lined with gold poured into the area without a job offer in sight. And it put anything but magic into the lives of people like Mike Smith.

A retired gas station operator, Smith picked a nice quiet spot to live some 13 years ago, the town of Kissimmee.

Then Disney moved in next door.

"It turned into a goldfish bowl, the tourists' own main street," Smith griped. "It used to be a real nice place to live. Now stacks of buses start whizzing by at 6:30 a.m. You can't get out of your driveway — there are hundreds and hundreds of cars. We don't even go out to eat anymore. It's not worth trying."

So Smith moved.

"Taxes went to hell," he added, noting that 10 years ago he paid $109 in property taxes for his small tract of retirement land. Current taxes: $600.

The granddaddy of the park boom was the one and only Disneyland, a park that put the southern California city of Anaheim on the map and drastically changed the rural setting into which it moved back in 1955. When Disney bought it in the early '50's, the land cost $5,000 an acre. That same acre will cost $100,000 now.

The Anaheim Chamber of Commerce volunteers that Disney speeded the city's growth by 20 years. In 1955, Anaheim had a population of 30,000 and covered about 4½ square miles. Today, the population is up over 184,000 and the city covers 36 square miles, soon to be up to 50 square miles. Pre-Disney, there were three motels and 87 rooms. Now there are 144 motels and hotels and 7,000 rooms. In 1955, there were 34 restaurants. Now, take your pick from 312.

Six Flags over Mid-America, outside St. Louis, opened in 1971 and its first year was a good one as three million tourists went through the gate. But most of them probably did not set out on long trips specifically to see Six Flags. It was just a stop along the way in a vacation, or perhaps a day's excursion. Therefore, the number of new businesses are not there. Only two, both restaurants, opened after the park did.

There was some land speculation, according to Leon Kircher, nearby Eureka's planning and zoning board president.

"A lot of land is changing hands and plans are being made, but there's no development," he said.

On the other hand, a 73-acre amusement park that straddles the North Carolina-South Carolina state line has sent land values skyrocketing.

The project is called Carowinds and opened March 31. Eventually, it will represent a $250-million investment.

The York County, S.C., tax assessor, Ike L. Oates, said an acre cost between $350 and $400 before Carowinds came to call. Now that acre goes for $3,000 to $4,000.

Nashville's new amusement area, Opryland, opened last May and its promoters claim that it caused people to look at Nashville in a way other than the "hillbilly capital of the world." So far, though, there has been no real evidence of the economic impact, although Holiday Inns said it would put a giant facility five minutes away, and campgrounds have been popping up nearby.

Land values jumped drastically, largely because the land was rezoned from agricultural to commercial. The old assessment was $200 an acre. At commercial rates, it's $2,000 an acre.

The only negative reaction came from area history buffs and merchants near the Grand Ole Opry House in downtown Nashville. The merchants say their profits will be hurt significantly if it is torn down and a new one built at Opryland.

Besides not always helping the area, not all of the attractions can help themselves. Busch Gardens, an $11-million, 40-acre park which opened in 1971 in Houston, was a disaster. It announced recently it was shutting down most of its operations due to high costs and low attendance. The owner, Anheuser-Busch Inc., has similar, but successful, operations in Los Angeles and Tampa, Fla. The brewery people lost $4 million on the project in a recent fiscal quarter.

A Houston neighbor, Astroworld, is faring much better. The $24-million, 54-acre park across a freeway from the Astrodome opened in 1968.

In Lebanon, Ohio, outside of Cincinnati, King's Island opened a year ago April and the two million visitors it had anticipated came. Motels and hotels also felt the impact of the park and a real estate operator said the park had spurred activity in food and lodging industries, as well as in residential property in the area.

Six Flags over Texas came to Arlington, Tex., in 1961. The population of Arlington, 16 miles from Dallas and Fort Worth, has since doubled.

"We'd love to take credit for every bit of it, but we can't," said a Six Flags spokesman. In the intervening years the area saw a build-up of an industrial center, the development of a giant airport, the Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport, and more and more amusement industries.

Another park whose economic impact seems negligible is Magic Mountain, north of Los Angeles. The park opened in May of 1971 and its first year was a financial failure. No new businesses jumped on that bandwagon.

Six Flags Over Georgia opened near Atlanta in 1967 and since then the population of the two nearby communities, Austell and Mableton, has grown by about 2,000. Land that was worth $6,000 to $10,000 when the park was built is up to $15,000 to $30,000 an acre, but local realtors say this is just general growth.

Sea Snake Said Most Poisonous

By IAN McCAUSLAND

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Hydrophis belcheri leaves for dead such killer snakes as the krait of Asia, the mambas of Africa, the unique tree viper found only on Brazil's Queimade Grande island, and the Australian taipan.

Hydrophis Belcheri, otherwise a type of sea snake, is believed by scientists to be the world's most venomous snake — about 100 times more venomous than any other known sea or land snake.

This startling conclusion about the mild-mannered belcheri was reached during a six-week cruise of the research ship Alpha Helix this year in the Timor Sea northwest of Australia.

The cruise was organized by the U.S. National Science Foundation through the Scripps Institution of Oceanography in California. It involved 11 scientists interested in sea snakes.

Dr. Harold Cogger, curator of reptiles at Sydney's Australian Museum, who returned from the expedition with 100 hydrophis belcheris, said: "We were surprised. Though we knew sea snakes were venomous, we had not realized just how venomous."

Measurement of the snake's venom forced a change in the standard method of determining the MLD (minimum lethal dose).

Dr. Nabuo Tamiya, of Japan's Tohuko University, adopted the usual practice of diluting the venom to a non-lethal dose and injecting it into laboratory mice. The procedure then is to work up to a more powerful dose which kills the mice.

Tamiya's first dilution felled the mice and he had to continue working down through weaker and weaker doses until he was able to get a measurement.

Cogger said hydrophis belcheri — named after British sea captain Sir Edward Belcher who headed a survey of the area in 1846 — can grow up to five feet in length.

At its thickest it is two inches wide, at its narrowest — its head — under a half an inch.

Cogger said the small head appeared to have evolved to allow the hydrophis belcheki to enter the burrows of small eels on which it feeds. The reduction in head size might account for the added toxicity of the venom, said Cogger.

The scientist said that it appeared rare for the snake to use the venom for defensive purposes against its natural enemies, birds and sharks.

Though Cogger brought back 100 of the deadly snakes, some of which he keeps in a plastic bucket in his office, it is unlikely they will live long. "We are having trouble getting the correct food for them."

Picking up a snake, Cogger said they strike only when frightened or angry ... though there is no way of telling their mood.

The expedition was headed by Dr. Bill Dunson, an associate professor of biology at Pennsylvania State University.

Reception Held For 2 Retirees

A reception was held Friday afternoon at Third Street School for long-time school employees, Mrs. Lou Alice Daniels and Willie C. Staton.

The reception was given by the school faculty and PTA to recognize Mrs. Daniels' and Staton's years of service as both are retiring. Mrs. Daniels was the school cafeteria's head cook, having worked there for 16 years and Staton had been the school's custodian for 12 years.

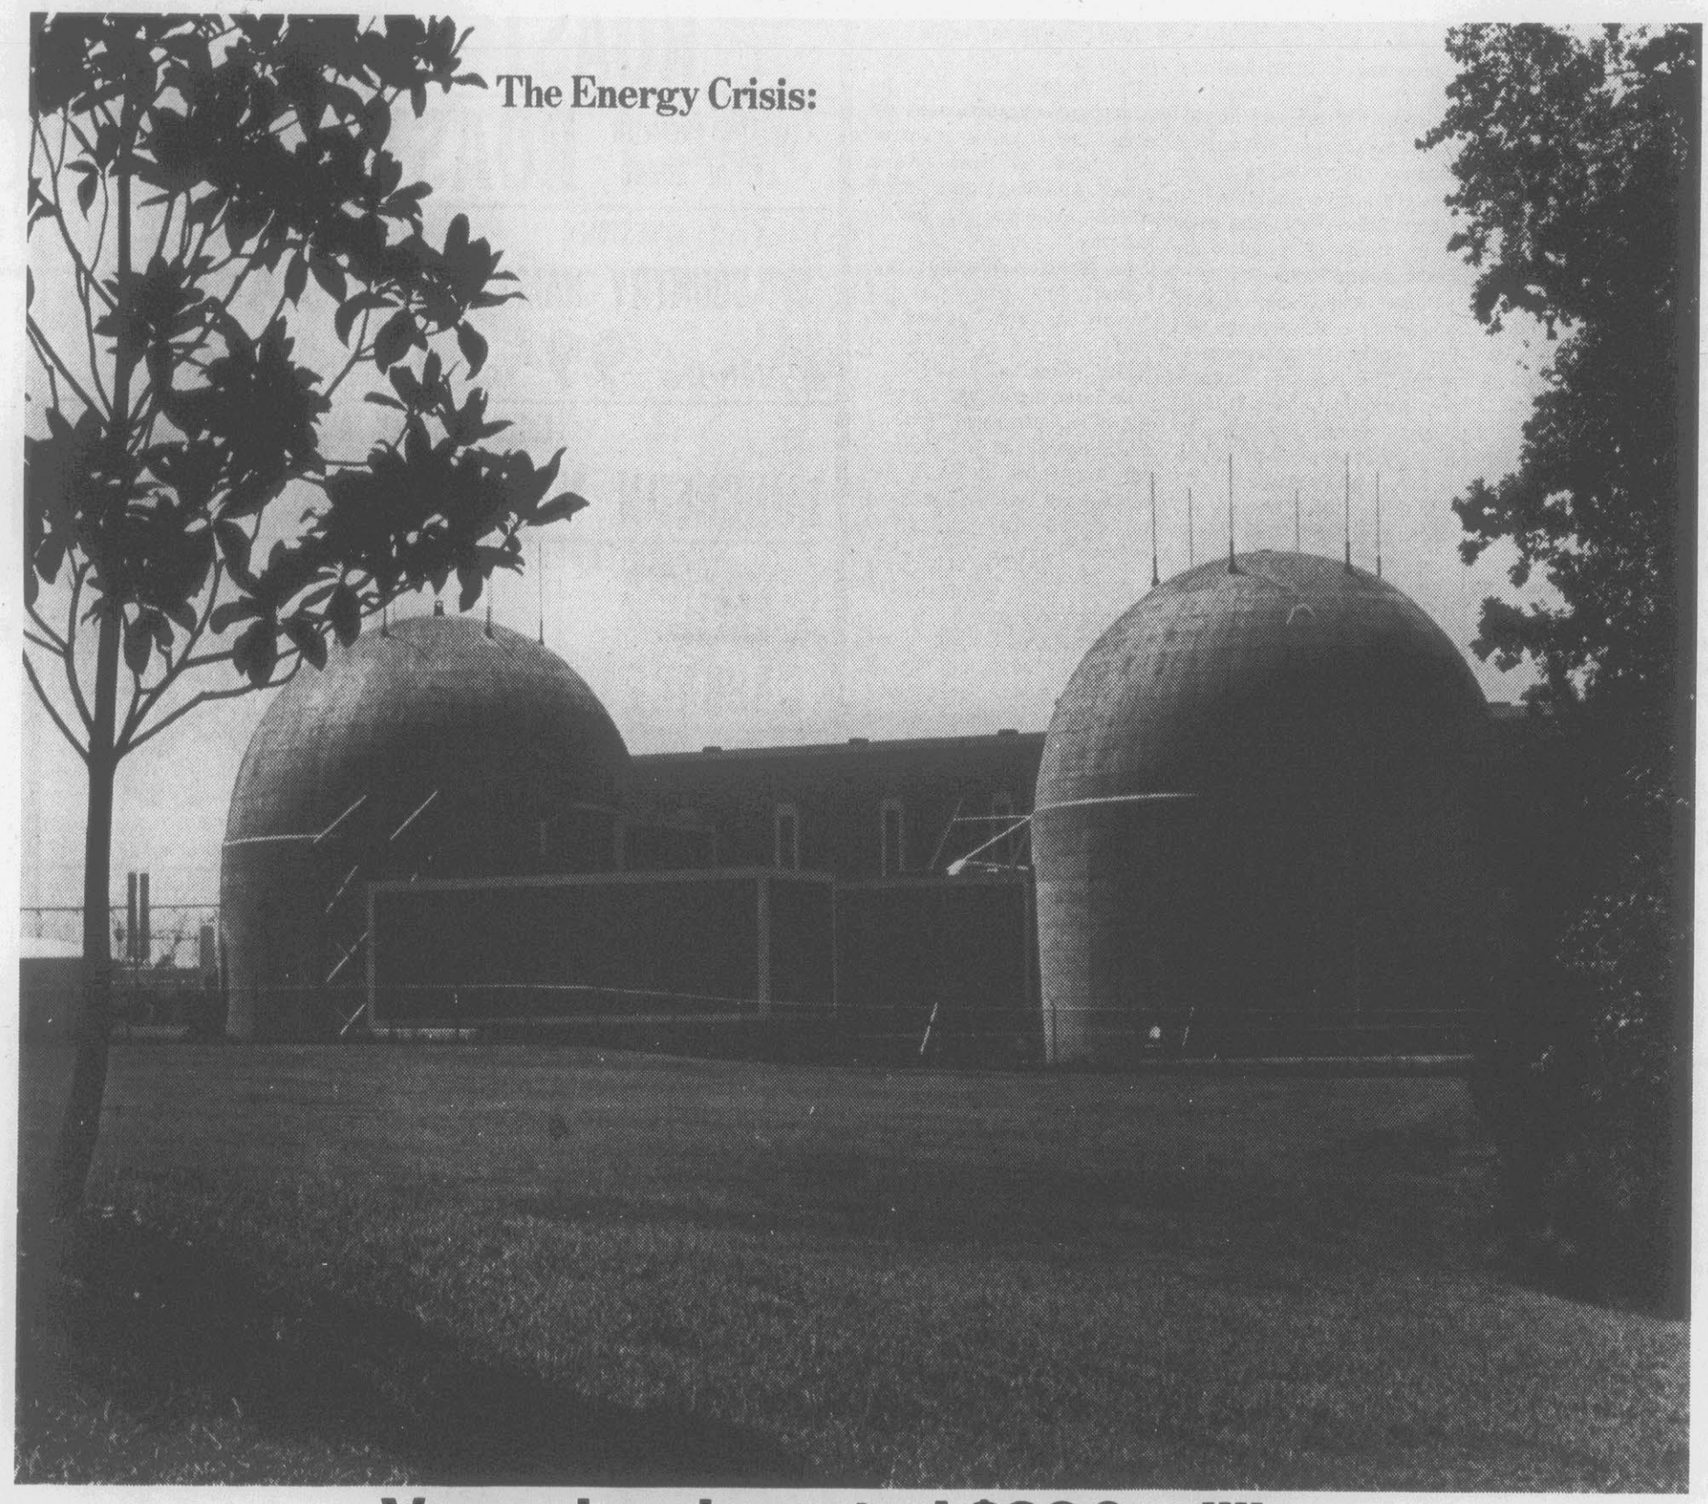

About 75 guests attended the reception. Principal Robert E. Stewart read letters of appreciation for services and gifts were presented by representatives of the staff and the PTA.

Will Be Junior At Davidson

Jane S. Whitehurst, of Greenville, a student at Sweet Briar College, will attend Davidson College as a junior during the 1973-74 academic year.

Sweet Briar and Davidson participate in an eight-college exchange program which allows students to spend a term or year at one of the other colleges.

Jane is a graduate of Junius H. Rose High School and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Lee Whitehurst of 214 Pineview Drive here.

Vepco has invested $396 million in energy insurance for you.

If you've been reading about the nation's "energy crisis" lately, you've probably also been asking yourself if the shutdowns and the blackouts already making news in other parts of the country can happen here.

We've invested $396 million to try to prevent it!

Because that $396 million is how much Vepco has spent—so far—to install an entirely new source of electrical power. A source that won't be dependent on the coal and oil supplies that lie at the heart of the energy crisis. A source that is the lowest-cost method of producing power that is available to us today.

This new source of power is the safe, clean, economical nuclear energy at Vepco's Surry Nuclear Power Station. Our first two units there are already in operation; and by 1976 about half of all the electricity we supply will be produced there and at other nuclear stations already under construction. That's a record the utility industry as a whole isn't expected to equal before 1990.

Of course, this investment in nuclear energy is just one of the ways we're planning to meet constantly growing demands for electricity—while maintaining a reserve of about 15%-18%. We actively support industry research to develop additional sources of energy, too. Between 1973 and the end of 1977 we'll be spending almost $1.8 billion to construct a sensibly balanced system of nuclear, fossil, and water-powered generation.

The result of all our past and present and future construction is insurance for you. Insurance that your supply of electricity won't be so dependent on increasingly expensive and hard-to-get fossil fuels. Insurance that you won't be caught in the middle of an energy crisis.

Which doesn't mean that you shouldn't be an electricity "waste-watcher." You should. But so that you'll get what you pay for; not because you might run out.

Somebody Is Fighting Government Paper Blizzard

By WILLIAM E. CLAYTON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Picture 28 buildings as high as the Washington Monument (555 feet, 5 ⅛ inches), mentally fill them with paper and you get an idea of the paperwork the federal government must deal with at any given moment.

Harold Koenig and his staff at the National Archives' Office of Records Management want to see the amount of paper handled each year diminish. Failing that, he's fighting a desperate and often unsuccessful battle to hold the line.

For instance, one agency may decide it can get by with 20 forms instead of 30, but then another agency will decide to keep its records for seven years instead of five. If Koenig convinces one office to cut down on its carbon copies, another will decide it needs more.

Tote up these conflicts, and you get about 29,731,980 cubic feet of records in the federal government. That was the last time someone checked — on June 30, 1972.

About 3,000 sheets of paper equals one cubic foot, so the federal total is about 90 billion sheets of forms, letters, checks, reports, notices, duns, applications, announcements, secrets, references and computer printouts.

Growth Rate Slows

"The amount is not growing at the same rate it had been," Koenig said, citing the increasing use of computer memory storage and the fact that "agencies today have a more realistic view about what to keep and what not to keep—better housekeeping."

Koenig's office, which is under the General Services Administration, cannot force any federal bureaucrat to throw away a file or use one less carbon copy. But the records management people got President Nixon on their side and he had the Office of Management and Budget enter the consolidation effort.

"We can only affect things up to a point," Koenig said. "We perform over the years more or less as a catalyst, to get interest stirred up in the agencies. We are saying, 'Look, this is costing you a helluva lot of money.' We want people to consider paperwork as a major management issue."

About a year ago, he said, a goal was set to reduce the cost of government reporting requirements in the individual agencies by $200 million and cut the public's effort in reporting to the government by 5 million man-hours.

Examples of that range down to "the guy who raises walnuts and has to report on his walnut crop to the federal government," Koenig said.

$279 Million Saved

The result went over the goal, he said, saving $279 million in government spending and about 7.5 million man-hours by people such as the guy who raises walnuts.

Koenig points to some other victories, small and large.

"One of our biggest success stories was the Selective Service," he said. His office did a flow chart of all the paperwork involved with the draft and found that computer storage and electronic processing could cut work and unneeded papers.

One typing operation did what it took six to do previously, he said. The system made it possible to destroy 15 million case files—each one a manila folder with papers inside.

Then there was the Census Bureau, which changed its paper shuffling and emptied 2,410 cabinets.

"Sad Situation"

But there are setbacks. Congress passes new laws whose effect is to increase paperwork —new requirements, new forms. Longer forms.

Once a business forms organization warned of a paper supply shortage. Koenig said the Government Printing Office responded by telling agencies to order stocks of paper early, rather than telling them to use less.

"That is a sad situation," Koenig said.

And the computer, while it saved paper in some ways, used more in others—much paperwork goes into feeding a computer. When the printout emerges, the rest often can be thrown away. That reduces the storage problem, Koenig said, "but it does not do the trees much good."

Sometimes it's lonely, battling the paper blizzard in Washington, Koenig said.

Glamor Lacking

"Until recently, most people felt records management—paperwork management—was a subject area that lacked glamor. It was not anything they were particularly excited about, until Congress began to make some noises."

Congressmen began to order a close look at red tape that could be reduced. Sen. Thomas J. McIntyre, D-N.H., sponsored a bill that would require an assessment of the paperwork involved in any legislation coming before Congress.

McIntyre also said paperwork may be engulfing some otherwise promising small businesses.

"The paperwork red tape burden, which I euphemistically refer to as federal form pollution, is one of the most significant factors affecting competitive viability of small business," McIntyre said.

Music to Harold Koenig's ears.

36 Statues Line Avenue

By MARK McHARRY

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Probably one of the least known tourist attractions of this capital city is right downtown: the 36 bronze statues lining both sides of the broad avenue Paseo de la Reforma.

The sculptures stand every 200 feet amid Reforma's bustle, ignored by tourist and Mexican alike, gazing tranquilly across the rushing traffic to their compatriots at the other side of the street.

They were meant to honor the heroes of Mexico's war of reform and French intervention. This is appropriate enough as Paseo de la Reforma means literally "reform walk." If they appear to be similar, it is because all the statues had to be life-size, and seen sculptors did them all, one turning out 20. Half are military figures and not one is a woman.

Statues here lead a different life than their brethren in the United States. The figures, two from each state, are not gently buffed clean each day like their U.S. Capitol counterparts, but stand unprotected against Mexico City's pollution. But the lack of pigeons here helps make up for the smog.

Francisco Sosa, a Yucatan poet, proposed in 1887 that each state send two statues of famous sons. The same year ruler Porfirio Diaz's government, bent on "Europeanizing" the city, endorsed Sosa's concept and even offered to pay for the pedestals.

The original plan called for the monuments to be either marble or bronze, but the state of the Mexican economy dictated the latter. The economy of the states appeared to be a bit weak also. A row of empty pedestals to the north of the figures testifies to the fact that only 18 of the 30 states sent statues.

Alternating with the statues are an equal number of urns, probably intended to be complementary. Some time ago, moralists got all worked up over the figure of nude Diana smack in the middle of a major traffic circle and she had to don a bronze bikini bottom for a while. But the urns, each featuring a pair of lovely uncovered maidens, were left alone. They and the statues stand forlornly, unbothered and unnoticed, as the life of Mexico City passes them by.

State Provides Color-In Book

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — A free coloring book for teeny tourists is being offered by the Pennsylvania Bureau of Travel Development, Department of Commerce, South Office Building, Room S-107, in this city. It's called "Color-In Pennsylvania for little People."

There is with it a regionalized tourist map of the state for bigger people.

Small fry also get a package of nontoxic crayons free when the family car stops at any of the state's nine tourist information centers, located on principal highways.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock market prices opened broadly higher today in relatively light volume then became mixed.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials at 11:30 a.m. was up 0.60 at 901.41. The Dow had been up more than 4 points at 10:30 a.m. The Dow industrials closed Tuesday up 14.90 at 900.81 five days of steep slides in which it fell almost 45 points.

Advancing Big Board stocks had a 2-to-1 lead over decliners, but decliners were narrowing the gap.

The dollar strengthened on foreign markets today while the price of gold dropped. In Paris, Herbert Stein, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, told reporters the administration was considering strengthening its anti-inflation program.

Meanwhile, Girard Trust bank announced it was raising its prime rate, the rate it charges its largest most credit worthy customers for short—term loans, to 7½ per cent from 7¼ per cent. what effect this might have on the stock market was not immediately clear, and analysts had mixed opinions on the subject.

The Dow closed Tuesday more than 14 points up, advancing issues held only slight leads over declines on both the Big Board and the American Stock Exchange.

Monogram Industries was the volume leader on the Big Board, down 5/8 at 5 3/8, in large block trade.

Caterpillar, which had received an unfavorable report in a major financial publication, was down 1 1/8 at 55½. There was a delay in the opening of Polaroid because of an order imbalance and in Zapata pending an announcement.

Bowmar Instruments was the Amex volume leader up 1 at 23 3/8 after its president, to counter Monday's heavy selling in the stock—announced 1973 earnings would be up sharply. The president said the Monday selling was baseless.

Two Wrecks On Tuesday

An estimated $1,900 property damage resulted from two collisions investigated here yesterday by Greenville police.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted when cars driven by Mary Monk Jones of 1613 Lincoln Dr. and Robert Joseph McFerrin Jr., of Goldsboro collided about 1:05 p.m. on Greenville Boulevard three-tenths of a mile East of the Evans Street intersection.

Damage was estimated by officers at $1,500 to the Jones car and $400 to the McFerrin vehicle.

McFerrin was charged with failing to reduce his speed enough to avoid an accident.

Anne Oakes Dunn of 130 Longmeadow Road was charged with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a 4:10 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Greene Street and Mumford Road.

Police reported the Dunn car collided with a vehicle operated by Odie Ray Lewis of Route 2, Greenville causing an estimated $250 damage to the Dunn car and $150 damage to the Lewis auto.

No injuries were reported in either mishap.

FUEL CONCERN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Spurred by reported duel shortages, the Senate voted 85-10 to require President Nixon to develop a mandatory national fuel-allocation formula.

School Board . .

—Approved three weeks vacation (1¼ days per month; for all 12-month professional personnel with the Board of Education.

—Named Ruby Grimes as a member of the Winterville Advisory Council replacing S.J. Lacey who has resigned.

—Granted approval for Mrs. Helen Barnhill, cafeteria manager at Bethel Primary, to continue working for the 1973-1974 school year even though she will be 65 years old.

—Named Carl Heath as Supervisor of Maintenance for the school system.

—Gave approval to paying a $25 reward to an individual who gave information leading to the identification of persons who damaged a restroom at the Ayden-Grifton school.

—And authorized a public auction be held as least once annually for the disposal of surplus property, such as books, furniture, vehicles and other equipment.

Board members awarded the scholastic insurance program for the 1973-1974 year to Nationwide Insurance Co., which held the program for the past year. Nationwide received board approval after a price of $3.25 per student was proposed—representing a reduction of 25-cents per student over the fee charged this year.

Also approved at the meeting were two lease agreements between the school board and U.S. Industries.

The board again approved leasing the old Grimesland school to USI for $250 per month and offered to lease the Falkaind school for $200 per month. Both school facilities, if leased, will be used to house industrial operations of USI.

Four teachers were presented certificates of merit for their service to the county school system at yesterday's board session.

The retiring teachers who were presented certificates yesterday included: Mrs. Edna Earl Baker (central office) with 36 years service; Mrs. Mary Albritton (Ayden Elementary) with 31 years service; Mrs. Mary Fields (Ayden Grammar) with 41 years service and Mrs. LaRue Brunson, (Chicod) 23 years service.

The board also adopted a resolution honoring Jimmy Nelson, a graduating senior at North Pitt High School for his receiving a Morehead Scholarship. Nelson, the resolution said, is the first Pitt student from North of the Tar River to receive Morehead scholarship.

"The Board of Education does commend Jimmy and does encourage all students throughout the county to seek excellence in their academic studies," the resolution noted.

A list of some 64 teachers was declared "excess" by the board yesterday.

According to Alford, the teachers declared excess—for whom there are no positions available for the 1973-1974 school term—will be given priority when vacancies become available during the next 12 months.

Motorist Hit 3 Parked Cars

More than $2,300 property damaged resulted from an incident in the Stratford Arms Apartments parking lot early this morning.

Damage was set at $150 to the Anderson car, $1,000 to the McDuffie vehicle, $600 to the Crisp car, $400 to the Stanton auto and $200 to the fence.

Miss Stanton was charged with driving under the influence.

Farmville Bd. . .

Whether for the Town to aid the Farmville Schools athletic program with a contribution was discussed, but no action was taken.

A request by the Recreation Department that Park Avenue, the one block between the municipal swimming pool and the J. Y. Monk Park playground area, be blocked off during the summer was denied.

The Farmville Rescue Squad's request that their men be allowed to have special town license plates designating them as Rescue Squad members was granted.

The Commissioners agreed to pay one-third of the cost the acceptable part of E.C. Powell's proposed paving of Martha's Loop, a street within the Claremont subdivision developed by Powell.

A proposed contract with the State Department of Natural and Economic Resources for the use of a planner was turned down.

Van Lewis was appointed to the Mid-East Criminal and Justic Planning Division of the Mid-East Economic Development Commission, replacing Joe Joyner, whose term has expired.

Twenty-five miles-per-hour speed limit signs on East Wilson Street will be replaced with 20-miles-per-hour ones in the business district and 35 miles per hour ones in residential areas on the street, the Commissioners said. The action was taken at the request of the Farmville Police Chief Carl Tanner, who said his Department has had several cases thrown out of court because of the discrepancy between the 25 mph sign and local ordinances.

The Town Attorney Jack Lewis was asked to tie into one description all the areas from which there have been petitions for the town to annex. Several areas on Highway 264 south of Farmville are being considered.

Alex Allen said he has bought the railroad right of way property on Walnut Street and will consider selling it to the town for parking space.

Doctors Say Baby With Four Legs, Arms, Nearly Normal

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Baby Joe was born with four arms and four legs, a condition so rare that just 23 cases have been documented since 1680.

But today, at 10 months of age, Joe, with his fluffy blond hair and bright brown eyes, is nearly normal, doctors say.

The baby, dubbed with the name Joe to give him anonymity, was a little more than 21 hours old when doctors at Miami's Jackson Memorial Hospital started operating to normalize the tiny patient.

Meanwhile, Joe's parents waited at a hospital several miles away.

The two, alias Joan and Mike, were just 21. But they had planned for the baby since marrying two years before.

Joan's grandmother had twins who did not live. Mike's uncle and aunt produced three sets of twins.

The young couple did not know that this family trait might cause what happened to Joe, who was born with a condition called dipygus, a quirk of twinning doctors say rarely happens.

The only test to detect dipygus is X-raying the mother, which carries risks and is used only when possible birth difficulties make it unavoidable.

After his birth, Joe was taken by sheriff's department helicopter from the hospital where he was born to Jackson. A trio of doctors was already standing by.

Dr. Marc Rowe, chief of the University of Miami School of Medicine's Divison of Pediatric Surgery and one of the few doctors in the world with experience in operating for dipygus, headed the team.

The doctors used X rays and a special dye in the infant's veins to plot their operating procedures.

There were some bad moments.

"At first I thought it happened perhaps because of things I had done that were not right," Joan said. "I don't believe that now, although I don't think it's unusual to feel guilty."

But her husband, an ordained lay minister, said he "felt the Lord had a purpose in it and I let it go in His hands. One of my relatives told me the day after it happened, 'The Lord must really love you to put something like this upon you.' I can see that."

When Joe was about two weeks old, Joan was able to move into Jackson Hospital's "Care by Parent" unit to learn how to take care of her baby.

"When I saw him, he was fine though he still had stitches in him. I gave him a bottle and stayed with him three days," Joan said.

Little Joe, who has been home at the family's small South Florida farm several months now, is scheduled for another operation. Doctors say it may be the last one needed.

Authorized To Award Medal

The district office of the North Carolina Department of Veterans Affairs, 1203 W. Fourteenth Street, Greenville, has been authorized to award the North Carolina World War I Medal to veterans of World War I or to the next of kin if the veteran is deceased.

"All this department needs for proof is a copy of the Word War I veteran's discharge or other proof of service," District Officer W.L. Tucker said.

He went on, "We now have a supply of these medals on hand and we urge each World War I veteran or his or her next of kin to make application in person at this office. The district office in Greenville will award medals in Pitt County only. Veterans from other counties should contact their local county Veterans' Service officer."

Fatally Injured In Plant Mishap

FARMVILLE — Napolian Williams Jr., 24 of Route 1, Farmville was fatally injured early this morning when a load of flake-board fell from a fork-lift truck he was operating at the International Paper Co. plant here.

Pitt County coroner and medical examiner E. W. Harvey said Williams was dead on arrival at Pitt Memorial Hospital from severe head injuries, lacerations, and a fractured arm and leg.

According to the coroner, Williams was operating a fork-lift truck about 3:30 a.m. today when a load of board fell from the extended lift onto him.

The death was ruled accidental.

Bond Sales Still Grow

Sales of Series E and H Savings Bonds in Pitt County during April were $58,111, according to R.W. Howard, county volunteer chairman.

Howard reported that January through April sales totaled some $251,824 or 42.6 per cent of Pitt's overall goal of $591,000.

Sales of Series E Bonds in North Carolina totaled $8,299,211 in April, Howard said. The figure was 20.3 per cent above April of 1972.

With the inclusion of Series H Bonds, total April sales amounted to $8,392,711, the highest total for the month since 1945 and 17.4 per cent above last year, the chairman said.

January-April sales totaled $31,681,187, some 8.4 per cent above the same period last year. The figure represents 26.4 per cent of the state's 1973 dollar goal of $87,100,000.

Nationally, total cash sales of E and H Bonds for the first four months of the year totaled $2,313 million, eight per cent above a year earlier.

Appointed To Liaison Role

Dr. William Cromartie, associate dean for clinical sciences at the University of North Carolina medical school at Chapel Hill has been selected to be liaison administrator between the one-year medical program at East Carolina University and the four-year school at Chapel Hill.

Dr. Edwin Monroe, vice-chancellor for the Division of Health Affairs at ECU met yesterday with Dr. Wallace Wooles, dean of the ECU medical school, Dr. Cromartie, Dr. Christopher Fordham, dean of the UNC medical school and ECU vice-chancellor Dr. Robert Holt to discuss closer cooperation of the two programs as outlined by an accreditation committee report made public a number of weeks ago.

"We had a meeting yesterday," Monroe explaind, with the only business conducted, being informed that Cromartie "has been selected to the lieason administrator between the one year program here and the medical school at Chapel Hill."

According to Dr. Monroe, Cromartie "will be working with Dr. Wooles in the continued cooperation one-year program."

Heels Nip Bucs In Tenth Frame, 5-3

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

A trio of unearned runs enabled North Carolina to stick with the East Carolina Pirates for nine innings and force extra play last night in the opener of the N.C. Summer Collegiate League. In the 10th, Carolina came up with two earned runs and walked away with a 5-3 victory.

As far as Tommy Toms is concerned, it never should have happened. He cruised through the regulation innings, allowing only four hits and giving up no earned runs. His team had scored three runs, all earned, and it should have been over.

But three errors contributed to the Carolina runs, one of them by Toms himself.

The game also was the collegiate debut of ECU star quarterback Carl Summerell, and his actions in the first game left no doubt that when next spring rolls around, he'll have a uniform waiting if he wants it. The big shortstop cracked out a two-run homer and played the field like he'd been there all along.

After both teams had been set down without a threat in the first, Carolina parlayed an error into a run in the second. With one down, Dale Lydecker reached on an error, the first of two on second baseman Bobby Harrison. Brad Storie followed with a walk, as did Don Davis, loading the bases. Mike Merritt, the Carolina pitcher, then slapped the ball into left, scoring Lydecker with the first Tar Heel run.

Toms came back with a strikeout to get the second out, then the next batter grounded back to him, ending the inning without further damage.

Toms then mowed down the next 10 batters in a row, until another error did him wrong in the sixth. It again occurred with one down, as Tom Kennedy reached on the misplay, moving on to second on it. Dickie Witt followed with a single to center, scoring Kennedy.

East Carolina, meanwhile, had not been idle. They put men on base in each of the first three innings, but none got past first. Then in the fourth, they scored their first run to tie it at 1-1.

Troy Eason led off the fourth with a single to right and John Narron walked. Summerell sacrificed both of them up, and Harrison hit a sacrifice fly to bring in Eason with the tieing run.

Carolina went back up with its second unearned run, however, but the Bucs charged ahead with two in the bottom of the sixth.

Jimmy Paige led off the sixth with a single to center and was sacrificed up. Then, with two down, Summerell slashed a towering drive to left for a home run, giving the Pirates a 3-2 edge.

Carolina came back to tie it in the eighth. Bobby Guthrie got a one out single and was wild pitched to second. With two away, Witt hit a grounder back to first, as Toms covered. Although Narron bobbled the ball, he got the throw off in time, but Toms dropped it, and Witt was safe. Guthrie, moving with the crack of the bat came all the way from second to score the tieing run on the play.

Then, in the 10th, the Tar Heels bombed Toms for two more to wrap it up. Early Jones led off the inning with a long triple to center, and scored easily when Chuck Moore doubled in almost the same spot. Moore was sacrificed to third and scored on Kennedy's sacrifice fly.

The Bucs tried to rally, putting two on in the bottom of the frame on a fielder's choice and a walk, but couldn't push them across.

The Pirates take to the road for a three-game swing now, traveling to Wilmington tonight, and Campbell on Friday. They'll play Louisburg Saturday, then return home against Pembroke on Tuesday.

ARCARO MADE A BOO BOO

LOUISVILLE (AP) — Eddie Arcaro has ridden five Kentucky Derby winners. But he apparently erred before the recent Derby when he said: "There isn't a standout horse in the field. This is not a good 3-year-old year."

There were two "standout" horses in the field of 13 on May 5 at churchill Downs — winner Secretariat and runner-up Sham. Both colts broke the two-minute one-mile and a quarter record set by northern Dancer in 1964. Secretariat, ridden by Ron turcotte, ran the distance in one minute, 59 and two-fifths seconds. Sham, ridden by lafitte Pincay, was less than three lengths back.

Legion To Play Tonite

Greenville's American Legion baseball team will open its Area play tonight at 8 p.m. at Harrington Field.

The locals will be playing host to Ahoskie in the game. They were originally scheduled to play Garner, but the game had to be switched due to a later conflict with the East Carolina team.

Davenport At Meet

BATON ROUGE, La—East Carolina University has one lone entrant in the NCAA Track and Field Championships which begin Thursday at Louisiana State University.

Walter Davenport will be carrying the Pirate colors in the triple jump competition, in which he was nationally ranked last year. This year, so far, Davenport, a senior, has cleared 53 feet.

One other member of the Pirate team qualified for the nationals, Maurice Huntly, but he is still recovering from an injury, and it was felt to his best interests not to compete at this time.

Davis Has Four Hits To Lead Dodger Win

By KEN RAPPOPORT
Associated Press Sports Writer

Who's on first? Willie Davis. As a matter of fact, he's on second, third and home, too.

The "old man" of the Los Angeles Dodgers is getting around these days.

"I'm really excited about our chances," said the Dodgers' most exciting player after belting a triple, double and two singles in a 10-1 route of the Chicago Cubs Tuesday.

Davis' 4-for-5 performance, which included three runs scored and one RBI, boosted his batting average to .292. Not bad for a guy going on 34.

The Dodgers' victory kept them within three games of San Francisco in the NL West after the Giants beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 3-2.

In the other National league games, the Montreal Expos nipped the Atlanta Braves 7-6 in 11 innings; the Cincinnati Reds stopped the New York Mets 6-5 in 10; the Philadelphia Phillies turned back the Houston Astros 4-0 and the St. Louis Cardinals trimmed the San Diego Padres 5-3.

American League scores: Baltimore 7, Chicago 4; Boston 9, Kansas City 2; New York 8, Texas 6; Detroit 5, California 2 and Milwaukee 5, Oakland 4. Rain postponed the game between Minnesota and Cleveland.

Ron Fairly belted a two-out home run in the 11th inning, powering Montreal past Atlanta. Fairly's shot over the right field fence, his eighth of the year, made a winner out of Mike Marshall.

Johnny Bench capped a four-run rally in the last of the 10th inning, carrying Cincinnati over New York. The rally wiped out a three-run uprising by the Mets in the top of the inning.

Ed Gooson cracked a run-scoring double in the seventh that powered Ron Bryant and San Francisco over Pittsburgh. Bryant won his ninth game, tops in the National League.

Wayne Twitchell pitched a seven-hitter and Larry Bowa collected three singles and a double and scored three runs, leading Philadelphia over Houston.

Jose Cruz slammed a tie-breaking, two-run triple with two out in the eighth and scored on a wild pitch, lifting St. Louis over San Diego.

Metric System To Change Sports

By NORM CLARKE
Associated Press Writer

CINCINNATI (AP) — Imagine Henry Aaron slamming a home run over the center field fence at the 123.13 meter mark. Or Howard Cosell commenting on a key "third and centimeters" situation in football.

Brace yourself sports fans. The metric system could make the slide rule a necessity for reading sports pages.

The prospects of feet and inches being abolished promise to hit the sports fan where it hurts—in the record book.

Some freshly painted numbers on Riverfront Stadium's outfield wall recently may have officially signalled the start of the metric movement in professional sports.

The Cincinnati Reds, in a move apparently designed to show their feelings for the American League's newly introduced designated hitter, converted outfield distances to metric figures and waited for baseball's first "metric home run" or "hometer."

The baseball fan's reaction to the gimmick could be measured in yawns.

Baseball would be least affected by a change to the metric system, but some diehards may not take to the idea of Babe Ruth's legendary tape measures being changed from 600 feet to 172.8 meters.

And how will Bear Bryant accept referring to football as "a game of centimeters?"

Will Woody Hayes sputter when his offense is changed to "2.8 meters and a cloud of dust?"

What about the Indianapolis 500? Is it soon to be a kilometer classic?

The changes would be minimal for basketball, hockey and golf. The biggest need would be some math refreshers for sports announcers who be called upon to quickly describe the distance of a Jerry West jumper, a Bobby Hull slapshot or a Jack Nicklaus drive.

Swimming and track and field have faced exposure to the system every four years for the Olympics, so there's no problem there.

Baseball is fretting the least.

Chicago Cubs' shortstop Don Kessinger, who won the first metric game with a 117-meter triple against Cincinnati, took the news of his history-making feat calmly.

"It's still a three-base hit," he winked.

Mets Hope To Cure Problems

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The injury-troubled New York Mets have come up with a solution for their health problems. They have drafted an ambidextrous outfielder.

He's Lee Mazzilli of Brooklyn, and he was the 14th player chosen Tuesday in baseball's summer free agent draft.

Joe McDonald, director of minor league operations for the Mets, announced the selection, reporting that Mazzilli, "Bats, right-left. Throws, right-left." If he hurts one hand, a regular Met hazard these days, he can use the other.

Mazzilli, like most of the other high school hot shots drafted Tuesday, will have to decide between professional baseball and college. He has a four-year scholarship offer from Arizona State, which has produced a large share of major leaguers.

The No. 1 choice in the draft went to the Texas Rangers, and they took Houston schoolboy pitcher David Clyde, who, unlike Mazzilli, throws with only one hand—his left.

Clyde, with nine career nohitters to his credit, has averaged two strikeouts per inning for Westchester High School. He has won 17 games without a loss this season and owns a career earned run average of 0.66.

For the first time, the draft was completed in one day. A total of 785 players were selected, including 48 in the secondary phase for players previously drafted but not signed.

San Diego's first round selection, Dave Winfield of the University of Minnesota, was listed as a pitcher, outfielder and first baseman, making him the most versatile player chosen, at least in terms of positions played.

New Manager For Wilson

WILSON, N. C. (AP)—Don Lock, a former major league outfielder, will take over tonight as the new manager of the Wilson Pennants of the Carolina League.

He will succeed Ray Hathaway, whose dismissal was announced Tuesday by the Pennants' owner and general manager, Marshall Fox.

Wilson, with a record of 18-35, is in last place in the six-team Class A league.

Lock has played with the New York Yankees, the Washington Senators, the Philadelphia Phillies and the Boston Red Sox.

He saw previous service in the Carolina League as manager at Winston Salem in 1971. Last year he managed Boston's Pawtucket, Mass., team in the Eastern League.

Hathaway, a former pitcher in the majors and a manuger for 13 years in the minors, is expected to return to his home in Statesville, N. C.

DEAL FOR A DOCTOR

NEW YORK (AP) — General Manager Bob Scheffing of the New York Mets says the best deal he ever made was getting Dr. Peter LaMotte.

In the first five weeks of the season Mets who have been injured or full of aches and pains include 42-year-old Willie Mays, veterans Rusty Staub, Felix Millan and Cleon Jones and youngsters Jon Matlack and Ted Martinez.

Talks On Tournament

MYRTLE BEACH, S. C. (AP) — Southern Conference athletic directors met today to arrange schedules for all sports.

They also conferred with Doug McNeil, assistant director of the Richmond, Va., Coliseum, where next year's basketball tournament will be held.

The new format calls for four night sessions, with doubleheaders the first three nights.

The first round will be made up of two night doubleheaders. Under the old three-day format, the first round was two sessions of afternoon and night twin bills.

The committee seeking a new commissioner was expanded to five members Tuesday with the addition of Ben Carnevale, William and Mary athletic director, and col. John Barrett, Virginia Military faculty chairman. Barrett is immediate past president of the eight-member league.

The committee will meet as often as needed to come up with a replacement fof lloyd jordan, who has been commissioner 14 years and whose contract expires Dec. 31.

Dr. Francis M. Bonner of Furman University, president of the conference, stepped down as chairman of the nominating committee, but remains a member. He elevated Dr. John Bevan, the Davidson College athletic chairman, to head the committee. Clarence Stasawich, East Carolina University athletic director, continues as a member.

Lions Pull Into Tie For First

The Lions gained a share of first place in the North State Little League yesterday with a 9-8 victory over Coca-Cola. The two had been tied for second, a half-game behine R.C. Cola going into the game.

The Lions and R.C. are now 6-3 in the league, while Coke is next with a 5-4 record.

Coke took the lead with a pair of runs in the first inning. Ronnie Chapman walked and Will Sanderson doubled. Both came around to score on a single by Marshall Crumpler.

The Lions came roaring back to push over four in their half of the fourth. Marty Worthington led off with a single and advanced on a wild pitch. Roger Williams doubled, scoring him, and he also moved up on a wild pitch. Allen Collier walked and Shelton Wilson hit by a pitch. Arthur Fletcher reached on an error, scoring Williams. Scott Galloway singled in Collier and Wilson with the last two runs for the 4-2 lead.

Coke came back with two in the second to tie it up. Walter Gurganus walked as did Howard Wilkerson. Chapman doubled, scoring Gurganus, but Wilkerson was thrown out with Chapman moving on to third on the play. He scored on Sanderson's hit with the tieing run.

Coke picked up two more in the third. Mark Jones reached on an error and David Lowe walked. Rusty Lilley reached on an error scoring Jones and Gurganus walked to load them up. Chapman grounded out, scoring Lowe for a 6-4 lead.

The Lions came back with three in the fourth to move ahead again, 7-6. Worthington singled and moved up on an error and both runners moved up on an out. Collier was safe on an error, scoring Gardiner, but Williams was cut down. Collier stole second and scored on an error on Wilson's single.

Coke inched back ahead with two in the sixth. Chapman singled and Sanderson walked. Crumpler reached on an error, scoring Chapman. Jones then singled in Sanderson for an 8-7 lead.

But the Lions came up with two more in the bottom of the sixth to win it. Mike Williams led off the frame with a home run, tieing it up. When, with one out, Collier, walked. Wilson singled and Fletcher reached on a fielder's choice, loading the bases. A walk to Jim Bearden forced in Collier with the game-winning run.

Wilbur Wonderful's 14th Bid Fails Again

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

The question in the American League suddenly is not whether Wilbur Wood will win 30 games or even 40 but rather when will he win No. 14?

Wilbur Wonderful's knuckleball failed him again Tuesday night as the Baltimore Orioles rallied for four runs in the eighth inning to defeat the Chicago White Sox 7-4 and hand Wood his second loss in a row since he notched both his 12th and 13th victories on May 28.

Elsewhere in the American League, the Detroit Tigers downed the California Angels 5-2, the New York Yankees outslugged the Texas Rangers 8-6, the Boston Red Sox trounced the Kansas City Royals 9-2 and the Milwaukee Brewers edged the Oakland A's 5-4. Minnesota and Cleveland were rained out with the Twins leading 4-0 in the third inning, washing out home runs by Harmon Killebrew and Rod Carew.

National League scores: San Francisco 3, Pittsburgh 2; Los Angeles 10, Chicago 1; Cincinnati 6, New York 5 in 10 innings; Montreal 7, Atlanta 6 in 11; Philadelphia 4, Houston 0; St. Louis 5, San Diego 3.

Wood's pitching actually was more impressive than the seven runs he surrendered. He yielded a ground single to Bobby Grich in the first inning and then retired the Orioles in order until Brooks Robinson and Paul Blair hit ground singles with two out in the fifth.

Boog Powell followed with a towering fly right at the right field foul pole for his second home run of the season and first since April 27, wiping out a 2-0 Chicago lead on Dick Allen's 13th homer.

Eddie Brinkman drove in two runs with a homer and double and reliever John Hiller posted his 11th save of the season in the Tigers' victory over the Angels.

Hiller bailed winner Jim Perry out of a bases-loaded, two-out situation in the sixth when he fanned pinch hitter Winston Llenas on three pitches. He then stopped the Angels on one hit the rest of the way as the Tigers maintained their 1½-game lead over New York in the AL East.

Jim Ray Hart smashed a three-run homer, Roy White clubbed a two-run shot and Ron Blomberg drove in three runs with a single and double in the Yankees' victory over the Rangers. The Yanks took advantage of an error by second baseman Dave Nelson to score five unearned runs off Sonny Siebert in the sixth, including a two-run single by Blomberg and Hart's homer.

Carlton Fisk drove in four runs for the second game in a row with a homer and double, powering the Red Sox over the Royals behind Marty Pattin's seven-hit pitching.

Don Money greeted reliever Rollie Fingers with a leadoff home run in the ninth inning, snapping a tie and boosting the surprising Brewers over the A's. Money cracked a 2-0 pitch from Fingers over the left field fence for his fourth home run of the season, stretching the Brewers' winning streak to five games—three over the White Sox and two over the world champion A's.

Little Mint In Easy Win

The Little Mint continued to chug along in the Ladies Softball League last night, but it didn't take any effort on their part. They came away with their eighth victory in nine starts on a forfeit from Dixie Sales.

In the other games, Beltone stayed a game back with a 5-3 win over Piggly Wiggly, while Azalea romped to a 20-3 win over Greenville Nursing.

Beltone took the lead in its game in the second inning, scoring a pair of runs. It stayed that way until the sixth, when they scored three more, and they proved to be the difference. Davenport led led off the inning with a home run. Barnhill then singled and Pfeil also got a hit. They both came around on a double by Gurganus, making it 5-0.

Piggly Wiggly tried to rally in the seventh, coming up with three runs, but they fell short.

Greenville Nursing pushed into the lead in the first inning of their game, scoring all three of their runs. But it wasn't to last as Azalea came back with seven in their half. R. Pollard walked and E. Heidenreich did too. R. Mills doubled and D. Ferguson, G. Harris, and N. Lewis all walked. F. Brewington singled and came around when C. Joynson and K. Phillips both reached on errors for the 7-3 lead.

Azalea then added six the second, with Phillips homering, one in the third on Heidenreich's homer, and six more in the fourth with Gay Garris getting a homer.

Chicod In Win

GRIFTON — Chicod gained a 5-2 victory over First Citizens of Grifton in a Southern Pitt Little League game last night.

Neil Johson tossed a one-hitter at First Citizens. The lone hit was a third inning home run by Johnny Parnell.

Wayne Jones suffered the loss. Louise Dixon had two hits to lead Chicod, one a two-run double. Roy Lassiter also hit a bases-loaded double to drive in two.

Chicod is now 3-0, while First Citizens has a 1-2 mark.

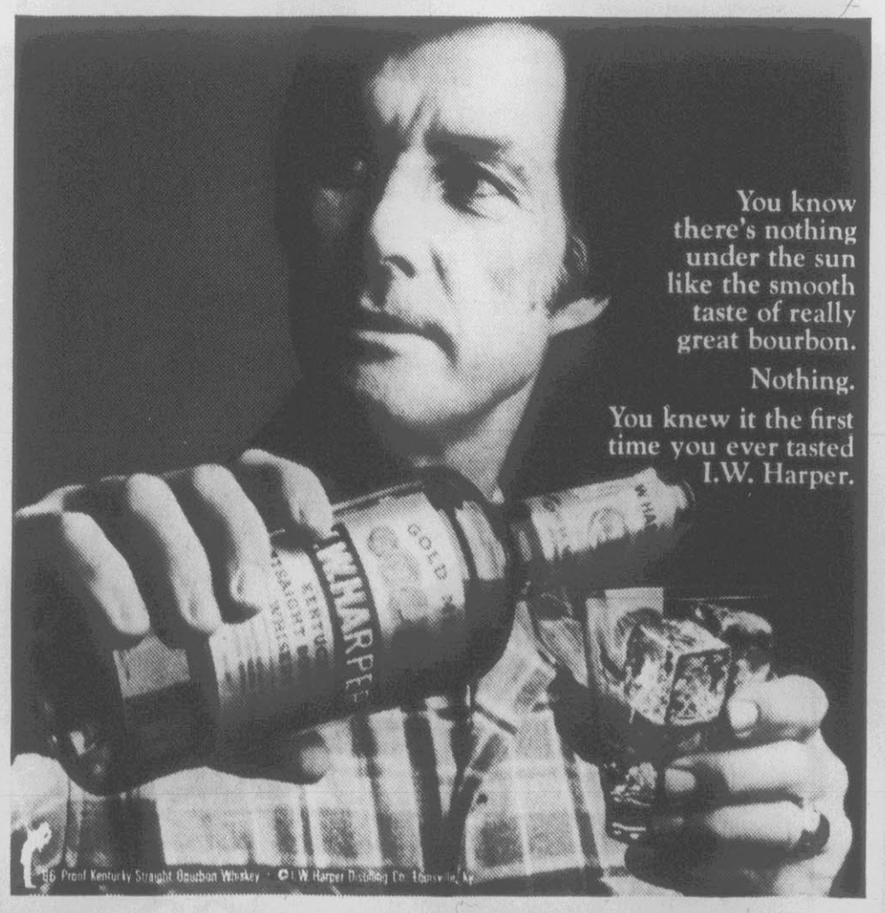

The New York Mets opened the season with four rookies — pitcher Harry Parker, first baseman John Milner and outfielders George Theodore and Rich Chiles.

BOURBON

IS HARPER
I. W. HARPER. From Kentucky Distillery No. 1

"Even without a yield increase, I could justify using Kylar..."

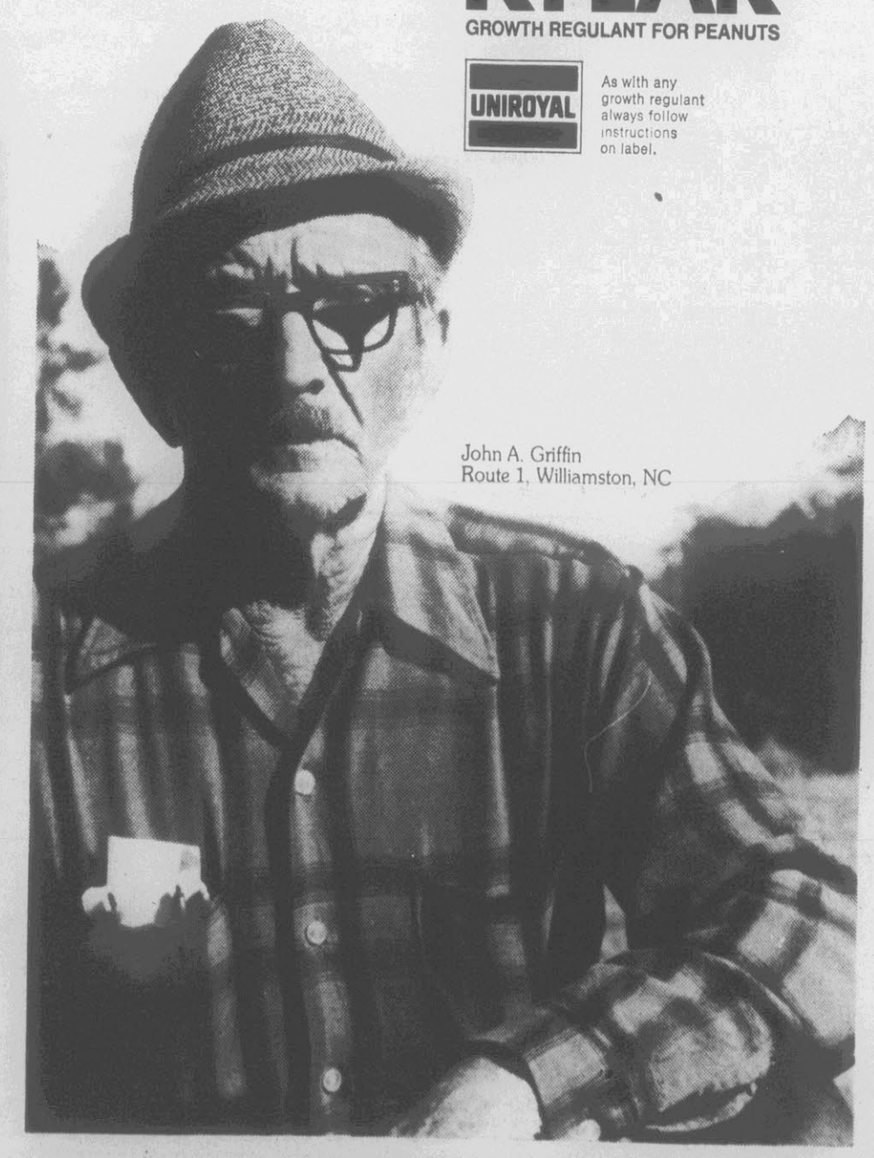

"I first tried Kylar® as part of a 3 acre test in 1969, and have been using it ever since. We use it at the 1 lb. rate, and apply it just about the time the vines meet in the middle of a 36" row. The vines turn greener and grow straighter.

"One of my neighbors and I ran a test where he left 4 rows untreated just to see the difference. As near as we could figure it, he made more pounds per acre from Kylar treated. I've also noticed we don't lose near as many peanuts as we used to during harvest, because the nuts seem to grow much closer to the tap root.

"I'm definitely getting more peanuts per acre, but even without a yield increase, I could justify using Kylar, just in the time and bother I save at harvest."

Kylar is the new and better way to grow peanuts. Helps you produce crops that are healthier, easier to care for, and in most cases, yield higher and grade better. Ask your dealer about Kylar today. Uniroyal Chemical, Division of Uniroyal, Inc. Naugatuck, CT 06770.

Ehrlichmann Says President 'Suspicious' Of Dean

By BROOKS JACKSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon was growing increasingly suspicious of John W. Dean III's role in the Watergate scandal while seeking to prevent Dean from being questioned publicly about it, John D. Ehrlichman has testified.

The former presidential adviser said Dean hid the fact that he himself had participated in discussions of wiretapping plans months before the raid on Democratic headquarters last year.

And he said Dean, then the President's official lawyer, resisted repeated requests by presidential staff chief H.R. Haldeman to produce a written report of his investigation into the affair.

It was this investigation Nixon had cited during the presidential election campaign as clearing all administration employes in the case.

Ehrlichman, now under investigation himself, gave his version of the affair in pretrial testimony May 22, 23 and 24 in lawsuits over the wiretapping. A transcript of his testimony was released Tuesday.

Ehrlichman said that during his own short-lived investigation into the Watergate affair, Jeb S. Magruder, once the second in command at the Nixon re-election campaign, told him former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell reluctantly approved the final plans to wiretap the Watergate.

Ehrlichman quoted Magruder as saying final approval came at a meeting in Key Biscayne, Fla., in late March 1972. Only Mitchell, Magruder and campaign aide Frederick C. LaRue were present.

All agreed to the plan, which also included authorization to wiretap the Washington headquarters of Sen. George McGovern's presidential campaign and the Miami Beach convention offices of top Democratic officials, Ehrlichman said. The Watergate wiretappers had intended to carry out those plans the weekend they were caught in Democratic headquarters in the Watergate.

Ehrlichman also quoted Dean as saying that Mitchell approved the Watergate plans in writing. Mitchell has said he rejected plans to bug Democratic headquarters.

After the Watergate operation, Ehrlichman said, the President had a number of conversations with Dean starting the last week in February.

Finally, around March 22, Nixon sent Dean to his Maryland mountain retreat, Camp David, to write a report. "He was there for six days. He came down the night of the 28th and delivered nothing," Ehrlichman said.

Within 24 hours Nixon relieved Dean of his investigative duties. "The President called me in on the 30th and said, 'My suspicions are crystallized and I want you to get into this," Ehrlichman said.

Q. Did the President indicate to you what his suspicions were?

A. Well, he said that it was evident to him at that point that Dean was in this thing up to his eyebrows .... It was evident from what the President said to me on the 30th that through those conversations he had a growing awareness of Dean's personal involvement in this and that his sending him to Camp David apparently was a device to smoke him out and see what he would set down on paper, and that when he came back and said that he could not write anything down, that did it."

Duke Observes Long Alliance

LISBON (AP) — Prince Philip, who will give a bride away later this year, hailed the Anglo-Portuguese alliance here as a lasting marriage which has worn well for 600 years.

The Duke of Edinburgh, representing his wife, Queen Elizabeth II, in celebrating the 600th anniversary of the alliance, invoked matrimony as his symbol in a dinner speech in the Ajuda Palace. He said the alliance should be celebrated with equal pleasure in another 600 years.

Opines Elements Of Witch Hunt Involved

INDIANAPOLIS (AP)—The longer the Watergate affair drags on, "the more the American public is going to realize that a lot of witch hunt elements are in this," says the president of the National Federation of Republican Women.

"I think this has been protracted in the amount of attention it has had in the press, on television...over and beyond the span of interest of the American people in this thing," Constance D. Armitage of Spartanburg, S.C., said Tuesday.

Mrs. Armitage was to have addressed 1,000 Indiana GOP women at the Convention-Exposition Center here but missed a flight from Atlanta. She later granted interviews at the state GOP headquarters here.

She said, "The American people are going to realize — and a great many of them do right now — that this (Watergate) is being pushed for political reasons. This could indeed be an effort to stop him (President Nixon) in his tracks."

Gov. Otis R. Bowen addressed the women briefly and urged bipartisan support for the President.

"Peace is not a partisan issue," Bowen said. "The responsibilities for world peace which rest with the President of the United States are of the gravest possible nature."

"In discharging these responsibilities, President Nixon must enjoy the fullest and proper support of all Americans — Republican, independent and Democrat alike."

Old Queen Of The Seas Now A Hulk

By MARIS ROSS

HONG KONG (UPI) — The Queen Elizabeth is rotting away. And nobody seems to know what to do with it.

Gone the famed old Cunard liner's regality, gone her glamor. The one-time largest passenger ship in the world and pride of the British merchant fleet is a hulk in Hong Kong harbor where unidentified suspected saboteurs set her afire one Sunday in January last year.

The rusted wreck, keeled over to starboard in 43 feet of water but visible from stem to stern, has become a tourist attraction on harbor sightseeing tours.

"So sad," comes the general comment from Americans and Britons who remember with nostalgia her halcyon days when she was queen of the transatlantic run. "It's a pity to see a ship like that. It's heartbreaking. She was a beautiful ship."

Green and red buoys mark out her graveyard in the harbor's western approaches, a dead ship bypassed each day by the world's freighters, liners and the fishing junks of the South China Sea. Only the tips of her two giant funnels still bear dabs of white paint and a patch of blue marks the remains of the swimming pool on the mangled, tilted deck. A catwalk straddles her almost horizontal port side, painted with numbers where her fuel tanks had to be emptied to avoid pollution.

Just discernible at her bow is the faded name "Seawise University" under which she was to sail for wealthy Chinese ship owner C.Y. Tung. He was having her converted into a floating college when she caught fire. Now he has the problem of what to do with the wreck, which the harbor authorities want removed.

"We don't know whether it will be refloated or scrapped or what," said a spokesman for his company, the Island Navigation Corp. "The experts are still looking into it. They have many proposals. It is not an easy job at all. For example, how to cut it up. The hull is 15 feet into the mud right now. We expect their final meeting soon and they will bring their proposals to the owner and discuss them with the (insurance) underwriters."

The 83,673-ton Elizabeth has followed a downward voyage since her caviar and champagne crossings of the Atlantic and, before that, her service as a troop carrier always evading U-Boats and German bombers after her dramatic unarmed maiden voyage to New York in 1939.

In a grand auction of British landmarks, the Elizabeth and her sister ship, the Queen Mary, both outdated and outmarketed by the jet airlines, were sold to the United States along with London Bridge.

The Queen Mary fared better at Long Beach, Calif., and London Bridge was re-erected at Lake Havasu, Ariz. But the Philadelphia businessmen who bought the Elizabeth for $7.75 million in 1967 declared their company bankrupt in 1970 after the ship flopped as a tourist attraction and hotel moored at Port Everglades, Fla.

Tung bought her in a run-down condition for $3.2 million and intended to resurrect her as a student and passenger ship. She hobbled over to Hong Kong at an inglorious nine knots instead of 28 after boiler trouble cast her adrift in the Caribbean for four days. And then to her tragic, fire-scarred end.

Alaskan Makes Wine From Milk

ROSEMONT, Ill. (UPI) — The Russians did it first, but now an Alaskan priest has made wine from milk. The Dairy Research Digest says a 71-year-old clergyman used whey and nonfat dry milk to make a wine with 11 per cent alcohol. In the Caucasus mountains of the Soviet Union, cow's milk is used to make kefir, a sour, acidic beverage with a low alcoholic content. The nomads of central Asia make a similar beverage, but theirs is prepared from mare's or camel's milk. It's called koumiss.

The Argentine city of Mendoza, famous for its fine quality wine, has about 1,500 wine cellars, according to Argentine Airlines.

Cat And Dog Population Is Exploding

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Senior Editor

America is undergoing a pet population explosion. It already is so seriously over-dogged and over-catted, some experts say, that drastic measures must be taken to achieve canine and feline birth control.

The U.S. Census Bureau does not include household pets in its tabulations, so no one knows with precision how many dogs and cats now reside in U.S. homes—or roam the streets as strays.

The respected Humane Society of the United States, which has launched a nationwide campaign for pet birth control, estimates there now are about 120 million dogs and cats in the United States. It says 10,000 additional kittens and puppies are being born every hour. All that keeps us from being literally overrun, the Society says, is the fact that some 50 million unwanted animals are put to death each year.

The American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, which feels that the Humane Society may be a trifle overwrought about the pet problem, estimates the present dog and cat population at about 50 million—less than half the Humane Society figure. Other published estimates tend to split the difference, coming up with a total of 40 million dogs and 40 million cats.

Since none of the estimates are based on an actual nose-count, you can choose any one you like—or make up your own.

Too Many Animals Killed

Despite wide variation on pet statistics, there seems to be general agreement among groups concerned with animal welfare that too many unwanted animals are being destroyed each year. The Humane Society says it costs about $50 million a year to exterminate dogs and cats which have been adjudged expendable.

Instead of permitting unrestricted procreation—and then killing off the surplus dogs and cats which result from it, the society favors bringing the pet birth rate under control through sterilization operations. It also is investigating the possibility that dogs and cats might be rendered infertile at birth through painless injections of hormones.

A California legislator, Assemblyman Mike Cullen of Long Beach, has carried this idea one step further. He has proposed that California impose a special tax on dog and cat food—but remit the tax if the food is laced with an animal version of the contraceptive pill.

Contraceptive pills already are available to pet owners through veterinarians. They greatly simplify the problems of getting a female dog or cat through her fertile season without an unwanted pregnancy. Some veterinarians also report a fairly brisk business in pet abortions.

So far, there is no evidence that any of these measures is having much effect on the overall growth rate of the U.S. dog and cat population. The Humane Society points out that while one well-cared-for female may be protected against impregnation by contraceptive pills or tight home security, her abstinence counts for little against the profligacy of a stray or loosely-tended dog or cat. A single female dog and her offspring, if permitted to remain fertile, can add more than 4,000 puppies to the nation's dog population in a period of seven years.

Menace Of Round Worms

Economics and ecology also figure in the growing controversy over curbing pet population growth.

The Pet Food Institute reports that sales of commercially prepared dog and cat food have risen from $600 million in 1965 to more than $1.6 billion last year. A pet-owning family spends about four per cent of its total food budget on animal chow.

Huge sums also are spent annually on pet supplies, ranging from a humble feeding bowl to mink-lined jackets, and on boarding kennels, veterinary care and pet cemeteries, where the burial of a dog or cat may sometimes cost as much as a human funeral.

The ecology angle derives from the fact that dogs deposit an estimated 3,500 tons of feces and 9.5 million gallons of urine on America's lawns and sidewalks every day.

The Mormon Church reports it has 17,000 volunteer missionaries serving throughout the world.

Symptom Isn't A Basic Cause

Wilma blames a symptom instead of the basic cause of divorces. For when a wife serves adequate "cheesecake," her mate doesn't want to run away to outside sirens. Nor squander his pay checks at taverns or gambling halls. A man prefers to cuddle a seductive wife instead of a beer stein!

By GEORGE W. CRANE
Ph.D. M.D.

CASE X-527: Wilma G., aged 30, is an irate woman quoted Monday.

"Mr. Crane says sex is the chief cause of divorce," she angrily protested.

"That's NOT true at all!

"For money is the main stumbling block to happy marriage!"

Where Divorce Starts

Ask any experienced Divorce Court Judge or Marriage Counselor and you'll find them almost unamimous in saying:

"Divorce usually starts in the bedroom."

Many euphemistic alibis may be cited, such as "mental cruelty" or "incompatibility" or even unpaid bills."

But those are generally mere symptoms of a more basic maladjustment in the boudoir.

Just visit a Divorce Court and hear the usual charges, such as:

(1) He spends his money on other women.

(2) He squanders his paychecks at the tavern and thus fails to pay our bills.

(3) He runs away at night to gamble at poker.

(4) He is caustic and inflicts mental cruetly upon me.

Then listen to the arguments of the men!

Do they accuse their wives of being poor cooks?

Or of failing to be fairly good mothers to their kiddies?

And do they charge their wives with refusal to entertain guests or business clinets?

No; it is usually not the kitchen or the dining room, nor the nursery or the parlor where wives fail.

Instead, it is the bedroom!

When such feuding couples see us Marriage Counselors, they may get down to the nitty gritty and speak frankly.

For, even in the courtoom, many men hesitate to verbalize the fact that their wife was evasive regarding marital relations or stodgy fat and an unperfumed boudior partner.

Now analze those 4 accusations by the wives.

Every one of them is merely a symptom of maladjustment in the bedroom.

For an alluring wife is not going to find her mate running around with outside sirens and squandering his pay checks thereon.

Nor does he prefer to cuddle a beer stein instead of his wife, if she remains seductive sexually.

Gambling, as well as unduly caustic criticisms are used as a ruse to cover up a husband's growing platonic behavior with his wife.

And such wives have generally produced the boudoir impotence of their husbands by the wife's chronically negative or evasive action in the boudoir.

Outside paramours may make the usual platonic husband function, so it really isn't organic impotence but a "Maggie & Jiggs" domestic problem.

Jiggs (of the comic strip) constantly tries to run away from Maggie to join his cronies at the tavern or at corned beef parties. Why?

Because Maggie, and many other wives, rate a "D" grade in the boudoir, even though they may deserve an "A" in the kitchen, dining room, nursery and parlor!

Wives, get hep!

Men will gladly work hard and hand over their pay checks if you serve them proper cheesecake in the boudoir!

Wives, send for my booklet "How to Prevent Platonic Marriage," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 cents.

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets)

Golden Gate Bridge Record

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The Golden Gate Bridge carried a record 34,435,542 vehicles in the last fiscal year, an average of 94,086 vehicles a day.

Although the bridge, valued at $600 million, is fully paid for, tolls produced revenue of $8,382,867 in the year. Most of the money was plowed back into subsidizing bus and ferry services as alternatives to automobile use.

Given Title To Big Arboretum

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Botanical Garden has been granted title to an 1,800-acre tract of land in Millbrook, N.Y., on which it has been developing the Cary Arboretum.

Dr. Howard S. Irwin said it would allow the garden "to increase dramatically our ecological commitment of mankind near and far."

A "test period" use of the property was authorized in 1971 by the trustees of the trust established by the late Mary Flager Cary.

The porcupine's quill actually is a hair at least three inches in length.

The bidding:

Opening lead: Ten of ♡

By counting out declarer's holding on the basis of his opening bid, West was able to contrive a plan that lured South to his downfall.

North and South reached their small slam contract in no trump by simply totalling their high-card assets, and West opened fire with the ten of hearts. Declarer could count 11 top tricks once the ace of spades was dislodged. There were three prospects for a 12th.

[1] If East has the ace of spades, repeated spade leads from dummy will enable South to score all of his spade honors; [2] If spades divide three-three, declarer's long spade will set up; [3] If all else fails, South can fall back on a finesse for the queen of clubs.

In order to test his prospects in the proper sequence, South won the opening lead in dummy with the queen of hearts in order to play a spade. The queen was put up from the closed hand, and West followed without undue delay with the three of spades. The North hand was reentered by taking the jack of hearts with the king in order to play another spade. South put up the king this time and West once more permitted declarer to win the trick.

Inasmuch as the ace of spades was apparently located in the East hand, declarer crossed to dummy in diamonds and led another spade in order to set up the fulfilling trick. When East showed out, the true situation was, of course, revealed. Unfortunately for poor South it was too late for him to do anything about it. West was due to make two spade tricks no matter what declarer did.

What inspired West to defend in this adroit manner? By merely adding his six high card points to the dummy's 18, he could readily determine that South required every one of the missing 16 points to justify his one no trump opening. This meant, of course, that if two spade tricks were not sufficient to swell declarer's total to the required 12, a successful club finesse was available to him.

In order to steer his opponent away from a play that could not fail, West had, of necessity, to paint a false picture in the spade suit. His success was well earned.

The modern calendar was established by Pope Gregory XIII on Feb. 24, 1582.

Dream Of Future Is 100-Knot Navy

By M. GENE MEARNS

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — During the paddle wheel steamer's heyday it was proposed in New York that the Hudson River be navigated by a steamboat that would make speeds of 100 miles an hour.

Balloons were to be attached to a steamboat, partly lifting the hull out of the water, reducing drag, increasing speed, and revolutionizing water transport for all time.

The plan for an 1850 gingerbread steamer, tall stacks huffing, paddlewheel churning, skimming along the Hudson under a raft of balloons never came to pass. The idea is quaint, if not ludicrous, today.

But the underlying principle—getting hulls out of the water for greater speed—is being pursued now in deadly earnest by the navies of the world.

The authoritative "Jane's Surface Skimmers," fifth edition, says, "Although commercial operators continue to approach air cushion vehicles and hydrofoils with caution, the world's biggest navies seem to be in no doubt that in developed form these are the surface vessels of the future.

"Revolutionary Change"

"Over the past year, plans have been projected for skimmers large and small to be employed in dozens of warship roles from light patrol vessels, antisubmarine warfare destroyers and frigates, to troop transports, minesweepers and carriers.

"The shift from displacement to non-displacement vessels is one of the most revolutionary changes ever known in warship design."

The United States Navy, Jane says, is faced by the need to modernize and improve its surface attack vessels. "But hampered by drastically curtailed defense budgets, it has decided that a fleet of small, high speed ocean going weapons platforms is the solution to its problem."

Adm. Elmo R. Zumwalt Jr., chief of naval operations, is a booster of the Surface Effect Ship (SES) program. He has said air cushion ships represent "a technological breakthrough that offers the potential for revolutionazing naval warfare."

For fiscal year 1974, the Navy has asked for a $72.9 million appropriation to further develop surface effect ships—for test craft, to solve technology problems and foster research and development. House and Senate committees are now holding hearings on the SES budget request.

100-ton SES Craft

Both Aerojet-General on the West Coast and Bell Aerospace division of Textron at New Orleans have built for the Navy 100-ton SES craft that use the captured air bubble principle. Larger versions are being built or are in the design stages already.

The Bell SES100B rides a drag-reducing cushion of air contained by catamaran-style side hulls and flexible bow and stern seals. When cruising, the center part of the hull is clear on the water, near frictionless, and supported by the air cushion.

The air cushion is generated and maintained by eight lift fans. Three gas turbine engines drive two propellers astern of each of the two side hulls to provide the craft's forward motion. Aerojet-General's 100-ton test version is powered by water jets instead of propellers. Their performances will be evaluated by the Navy.

Capt. Gordon H. MacLane (USCG, Ret.), commander of Bell's SES100B, has already pushed the stubby, white test vessel nearly 85 m.p.h., on Lake Pontchartrain at New Orleans, a world's record speed for this type of vessel.

MacLane, also a former airplane test pilot, says, "The sophistication of the vessel is aviation-space oriented. But it's still as good as a fishing schooner out of Gloucester. It still feels like a vessel, like a boat. Aside from all of these shiny new engines and knobs to turn, it gives one a pleasant feeling to be on."

John J. Kelly, vice president and general manager of Bell's New Orleans operations, is a tall, soft-spoken man who also thinks the time for surface effect ships has come.

There must be a 100-knot Navy, Kelly said, to do two things.

"To achieve higher speed on the surface, which the Navy needs for strategic purposes in antisubmarine warfare. And the ability, given that speed, to operate a navy with increased capability, with fewer ships and fewer men.

"People tend to think the major money that Congress and the Defense Department are spending is for sophisticated weapons systems. That is a minor, small fraction of what this country is paying for its defense. The major item is people.

"But with the speed and maneuverability and other capabilities these craft have, you can just do the job with fewer people and less money," Kelly said.

Antisub Destroyers

One of the reasons the navy is interested in SES craft of the 2,000-ton size is to have them assume for the 1980s the role of present antisubmarine warfare destroyers.

It is known that nuclear submarines, running submerged, can make speeds of about 40 m.p.h., perhaps faster. They fire torpedoes that go at least that fast or faster, spelling doom for conventional, slow, displacement vessels.

The Navy believes surface effect ships would run rings around enemy submarines. Armed with appropriate helicopters, weapons systems and electronics, a destroyer-SES could control hundreds of square miles of ocean, they envision.

"There are some people who argue that there are really only two ships of consequence in the modern fleet—the submarine and the aircraft carrier. To defend the carrier from the submarine, the destroyer plays an important role," Kelly said.

"But destroyers are limited in their speed due to the fact that they are displacement hull vehicles and there is very little reason to feel they will go much faster.

"A destroyer-SES would introduce a major change in the role of the destroyer and submarine, and enable the destroyer, traveling on an air-supported hull, to have speeds well in excess of anything a submarine can do.

"Therefore, as a chase craft it can catch a submarine easier and quicker. It can outmaneuver them and in the tactics of antisubmarine warfare, it can perform a very significant role."

Some experts are predicting a host of other SES developments, including amphibious landing craft, patrol vessels, commercial liners and freighters, even aircraft carriers in the 10,000 to 20,000 ton range. Some say SES craft of the future will be nuclear powered and go faster than 180 knots.

But, the rule is that as performance goes up, so does unit cost. A modern but conventional antisubmarine warfare vessel, can be built for about $23 million.

Today nobody knows how much a destroyer-SES might cost. At a July 14, 1972, meeting of the Senate Committee on Armed Services, testimony was elicited to the effect that the first prototype of a 2,000-ton SES would cost $150 million.

Experts say, however, that this includes development costs and that the more SES craft that are built, the lower the unit cost will be.

"Jane's Surface Skimmers" assessment was: "Expenditures on military skimmers will become one of the biggest items in the defense budgets of the seafaring nations within a decade."

Perhaps one of the Navy's reasons for getting into the SES program was best said by John Paul Jones in 1778: "I wish to have no connection with any ship that does not sail fast, for I intend to go in harm's way."

SOFT DRINK DISTRIBUTORSHIP AVAILABLE

How would you like to receive a profitable DISTRIBUTORSHIP APPOINTMENT for a prominent soft drink line. . .without franchise fees?

That's right! We don't sell distributorships. We grant them! If you are accepted, it will be because you have earned that privilege through your business experience, reputation and financial stability.

Our program calls for an initial investment of about $5000 for product inventory and vending equipment. Of course, you'll need some working capital to sustain the operation, especially during the development stage period. However.

. . . If you are working for a solid profit opportunity in a growth market . . .
If you are not allergic to work . . .
If you would like to direct your own business destiny . . .
If you would like to become associated with one of the top 100 soft drinks companies in America . . .

Then drop a line to us at the address below and tell us a little about your background and any other details you feel may be pertinent to the subject, we'll contact you shortly and give you all the details. We suggest your immediate response if you want to take advantage of the summer of '73.

MAZDA ROTARY ENGINE LICENSED BY NSU WANKEL

Mazda introduces the 24/24 warranty.

Mazda's rotary is the engine of the future. It has fewer moving parts, so there's less to go wrong.

That's why Mazda warrants the basic rotary engine block and its internal parts to be free of defects, with normal use and maintenance, for 24 months or 24,000 miles, whichever occurs first or Mazda will fix it for free.

Mazda warrants the rest of the vehicle for 12 months, or 12,000 miles, whichever occurs first.

So come in today and check out our 5 new models for 1973. All equipped with a rotary engine. And a 24/24 rotary-engine warranty.
